The United States Armed Forces are in the spettight this week as the nation prepares to honor them on "their day," Armed Forces Day, Saturday, May 19. Under the official elegan, Defenders of Freedom, the objective of Armed Forces Day this year will be two-fold:

It will be a "tribute to the Armed Forces as part of the total material and spiritual power of America now being mo-bilized"; it will give all of us opportunity for "a renewal of faith in our country's sacred heritage, the ideals of peace and freedom, to the preservation of which our power is dedicated,

Fort Benning is spending a great deal of time and effort in making May 19 an impressive day. Troops from this post will parade in 13 Alabama and Georgia cities, including two of the largest in the Southeast, Atlanta and Birmingham, And citizens in all these communities will get a chance to see what a crosssection of the Army looks like. We are confident they be disappointed in the men who some day may be called upon to defend the freedom of this nation.

This is the second Armed Forces Day, the separate "Services Days" having been abandoned last year in favor of a single day on which unification would be the theme. This year, cation is not the theme and slogan of Armed Forces Day is a sign of the progress made. In the words of a recent Armed Forces Talk, "Unification was never an end in itself. but rather a means to an end, and that end is expressed it this year's slogan. Defenders of Freedom

Armed Forces Day, however, means more than celebrations and parades. It means that our ultimate boss, the American public, is getting a chance to inspect us, size us up, decide for themselves whether or not we are prepared for the serious tasks assigned us. It is the day on which we show the public that we stand ready to prevent aggression and provide protection. It is the day on which we show our belief in freedom. By our slogan we prove that we are ready as team—the soldier, sailor and airman—to defend the America-

Armed Forces Day points up the fact that we of the Army or the Navy or the Air Force are a part of the total material and spiritual power of the United States. We are a part of the whole American people now mobilizing in a national emer gency because we have faith in our cause, a cause which we e peoples believe to be the only just cause.

Armed Forces Day is also significant to the American nabecause the Armed Forces have many times in the past upheld the freedom which our nation's founders established War and in World Wars I and II, and we are ready to uphold it again if necessary

On this Armed Forces Day, we are fighting in Korea, because as Defenders of Freedom we believe in the United Nations, which is devoted, as we are, to freedom and sworn BY CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) against aggression. The very calibre of our struggle in the Far East, often against almost overwhelming odds, has shown the fierce determination with which the Armed Forces are meeting a threat to freedom and aggression

As we approach Armed Forces Day, we, representing one of the Armed Forces, should rededicate ourselves to Amfundamental belief that man must be free to choose his own civil leaders, and that he must have freedom of religion. freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and freedom of speech. To that end we must be always ready to defend freedom, because its defense involves our own freedom.

Mothers Duty to Teach Wisdom, Courage

Last week we quoted the Parable of the Prodigal Mother and now we quote the Parable that will ever endear the name of mother to us.

The young mother set her foot on the path of life. "Is the way long?" she asked. And her guide said: "Yes. And the way s hard. And you will be plo efore you reach the end of it. But the end will be better than the beginning."

But the young mother was happy. She would not believ that anything could be better than these years. So she play ed with her children, and gathered flowers for them alone way, and the sun shone on them, and life was good. The young mother 'Nothing will be ever lovelier

And the children look ed and saw above the clouds an Everlasting Glory, and it mother said: "This is the best my children God"

And the days went on . . . and the weeks and the months and the years, and the Mother grew old, and she was little and bent. But her children were tall and strong, and walked with courage. And they her up, until they came to a hill, and beyond the hill they could see a shining road and the golden gates flung wide "I have reached the end of my journey. CABL VINSON

The other day I held in my hands the highest award our country can bestow upon one of its fighting men — the Conon earned only by those whose outstanding bravery is above d beyond the call of duty.

I looked from the medal to the man who wore it. A quiet. reticent person of medium height, who has been stationed here since March 10, M-Sgt. Wilburn K. Ross has a face full of character and a steady, piercing eye.

He smiled when I neked him how he won the coveted dedoration

It was during an encounter in World War II. that he won the highest award. He was a squad leader and gunner in Company G. 30th Infantry regiment. Third division. As the tides of battle turned, the Third pushed on from Sicily to Italy, to France. For each of those campaigns he wears a scar from a wound, although he was not wounded at the time he won the medal.

The Seventh Army, of which the Third Sivision was making its historic way across France in the fail of 1944. Company G, was ordered to take a strategic hill, and with 88 men the company moved into position. Every inch was dearly gained. Under the withering enemy fire of the enemy, only 32 remained, and when the ammunition got danger-ously low, all the company could do was fall back. Sat. Ross ously low, all the company could do was fall back. Set. Ross covered the withdrawal of his company, and for 38 long, tense hours of fire and nine enemy counter attacks he singlehandedly held the enemy off before falling back to join his company. He was credited with killing 58 Germans in this encounter.

At Hitler's Stadium in Nuremberg, Germany, on April 12, 1945, at an impressive ceremony he was awarded the dec At this point of his story I had to ask a question - probably a very silly one "Were you afroid?"

He hesitated a minute before he answered. "Well, I really didn't have much time to think about it. I had to be on the alert every minute, but I guess deep down inside of me I was

When the war was over, he came back to the states to be discharged on points. He returned to his home town of Stearnes, Ky., where the townfolks turned out in grand style to welcome him home. Later he became a member of the police force.

Civilian life palled for him, and in 1946 he re-enlisted, this time in the Air Force. A year later he transferred to the infantry and was assigned to the Second Infinary division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Last year he married the former Monica Joanne Belford and had just returned from his honeymoon when his unit shipped to Korea,

On Aug. 19, the first day he was in front line fighting he was wounded in his leg. Then started his long journey back to the states. He was evacuat ed to Japan and stayed there until Sept. 20. On Oct. 2 he reached Madigan General hos-pital in Tacoma, Wash, and on reb. 15 he was released. He reported to Fort Benning

His wife, who is with him here, is working at Benning

I looked at this man and at the medal he were so proudly and couldn't help thinking of a quotation from Homer's Iliad: "Without a sign his sword the brave man draws and asks no

The 'Military Mind' Vanishes In Face of International Crisis

The elusive concept of a "military mind" which gained such prominence during the years immediately following World War II, has lately vanished into the realm of forgotten fic-

Perhaps this has been so merely because all things military become so eminently respectable when international orleic leoms close at hand. Or maybe it is because former military. e acquitted themselves so admirably in nonlitary fields that those who were formerly haunted by the specter of the military mind have decided that it is a rather handy sort of mind to have available, after all.

It is even possible that a completely rational and reason able view has prevailed, to the end that the military mind, like the "economic man," is at long last seen as an abstraction devoid of practical meaning. In any case, the military ten accused of being possessed of a unique and mysteriously dangerous mental apparatus.

Last Saturday was set aside for the second annual observance Armed Forces Day, an institution which apparently has two main purposes: first, to remind the citizen that a portion of the population bears arms in his defense; second, to introduce soldier to the citizen and the citizen to the soldier. No one, certainly, would claim that these are unworthy purposes. But one might ask whether such a day of observance is necessary in this perilous year of 1951.

It seems unlikely that even the most remote cranny of this wide land can harhor a citizen who, in this age of electronic communication and bounteous production of the printed word, has totally escaped the implications of our present predicament and the part assigned to the Armed Forces. Breathes there man with eye so blind, ear so deaf, soul so insensitive? We think not.

After a period of prolonged peace, each of the Armed Forces tends to become a skeletal and highly integrated group of professionals. In such a situation a yearly reintroduction of citizen to soldier and soldier to citizen may be a necessary formality. In times of crisis, however, with the concurrent rapid exof the military services, the tradition of the citizen soldier is reasserted, and the small group of professional menat-arms becomes surrounded by the mass of inductees, Reservists and Guardsmen who form the muscular strength which is laid upon the skeletal structure.

A day of formal introduction of citizen to citizen-soldier ar pears a bit redundant under these circumstances. And as for the relationship between the professional and the citizen-soldler, un introductory ceremony is equally superfluous; they live together, work daily together.

The verbal separation of citizen from soldier is as unrealistic today as the concept of the military mind, and might well be laid to rest in the same musty tomb.

We believe it quite probable that every family in the entire country is represented in the Armed Forces by a son daughter, brother, sister, father, nephew, niece or friend.

Would you demand an introduction to your next-door neigh-

The board is able to plan this menu for it has been thoroughly briefed on just what each section can supply and knows the time of the year that each part of the country can be depended on to supply certain foods.

The master menu is sent to the post 120 days before the time it is to be used. The local menu board then meets to set up its own menus, following as closely as possible the master plan. The local board has the authority to substitute items for those named on the master menu, providing the substituted item has the same caloric value and the meal comes within the set price. About 45 days before the meal is scheduled to be used, requisitions are submitted to appropriate supply depots and markets. Quite frequently item: can be purchased locally.

If the various market centers and denots cannot supply any item, the post is notified, and again local purchase may be used to procure the necessary food.

Regardless of where the food is secured, however, all foodstuff bought by Army representatives must meet a high standard of specification. In the case of local purchase, a representative first checks the food and the sanitary conditions of the company before the deal is closed.

All supplies, especially meat and perishable vegetables and fruits, are closely examined when received here. On ting, with Spot Rivers turnish-numerous occasions, supplies have been rejected as untit ing the music. There will also for use and other arrangements and substitutions made at

When the supplies arrive at Benning, they are stored in the Quartermaster section. This post works on a five-day ration plan with a three-day delivery cycle.

Substitution in the menu becomes one of the most difficult parts of the job of feeding the troops. When the local board meets, all types of troops at Benning must be considered For instance, in the case of soldiers doing excessive amounts of hard physical training, such as airborne and rangers, provisions must be made to see that their caloric intake will insure top physical form. Yet the cost still cannot exceed the amount a soldier is allowed for a day's rations.

Representatives of the army, whose sole job it is to purchase the vast amount of supplies needed, are highly trained and capable personnel. They are charged not only with pro-curing immediate supplies, but checking well in advance to see just what that section of the country can be counted supply food in the coming months. They, in must pass this information on to the higher office, for when the QMG board meets to plan the menu for Benning for July, it must know what can be supplied.

Whether you know it or not, the wheels of supplying a soldier with food start turning seven months before you sit down to that meal. And all during that seven months, they keep turning, day in and day out, from the highest office right down to the local post issuing officer

Also in her collection is an old - fashioned hand mirror made of brass, with a lacquer stand, just high enough for a lady sitting on the floor, as is the custom in Japan, to use.

Mrs. Hollstein is the proud possessor also of a pair of hand-embroidered prints. Their back-ground is of black silk with the bent figure of an old woman and old man as they come from work in the rice paddies, done in the finest of hand embroidery.

It is quite a job to move the around but Mrs. says they have weathered many moves, and she never regrets the time she spent in acquiring them.

CHAMPIONS IN ACTION . . . Troopers of the 325th Airborne Infantry regimental combat team provided one of the biggest upsets in many seasons when they walked off with top honors in the annual Infantry Centertrack and field meet recently at Doughboy Stadium. Competing against nearly 100 entries, 325th track and field men garnered six, firsts and give seconds, out of a possible 15, to score 47 points. This was 19 points more than the runner-up Lawson Air Force base squad which was favored to win the tourney. Action shots taken during the meet show from left to right: Robert Kuchneisen (325th) clearing 11 feet and six inches in the pole vault; Charles Daniels (325th) winning the mile run in four minutes and 50.4 seconds, and Arland Carsten Seçond Student regiment) easing over the six feet mark in the high jump.

Fred Saigh, owner of the Cardinals, Ily a fuse last week that touched off one of the biggest explosions ever to rock the basichall world. Television in the big leagues was the object under intense debate.

It is Saigh's belief that visiting teams should come in fea a take on television the way they do now on the gate receipts. This opinion is really an alternate one. It is thought by the Cardinal chief that TV should be discontinued altogether however, it that should be discontinued altogether however, it that should be discontinued altogether however, it that should be discontinued and the state from most of the baseball greats.

One of the most tortid charges against Saigh has come from Walter O'Malley, head of the Brooklyn Dedgers. First, he rapped the idea that TV should be completely discontinued on the grounds that it is one of the greatest promotional agents for the game that has come along. Cutting into the television profits is out, as far as O'Malley is concerned. He maintains that the thought is "socialistic, pure and simple." He maintains that the thought is "socialistic, pure and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all the clubs, with all the clubs on a share and share all shales?

wideo circuits will be the grand old game's only salvation. Other binsts from all over the country have occurred. The Cleveland Indians are not in favor of taking a cut of the video proceeds, but telecoating games away from home does meet with their approval. Hank Greenberg thinks that the time will come when no major league will telecast its home games. Many odd things happen with the tejecasting of ball games. These things have become pet peeves of the club owners and managors.

A fan wrote in one day to the Indians. He said that he was so sick and tired of Lopez' bunting tactics, he became disgusted and turned off his television set.

Another follower of the game called into the stadium several times. He wanted to be sure that the game would be played as scheduled. The reason—he wanted to try out his new television set.

TELEVISION HERE TO STAY

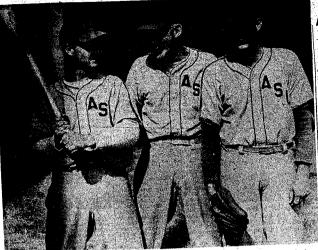

Those are a few things that would make any club owners hot under the collar if his income depended on the number of people who walk through the gates at the stadium. But on the other hand, in our opinion, the TV spectators do not cause too much damage to the gate receipts. Almost any baseful business manager will agree with that. We are inclined to agree with the Dodger prexy. Television is here to stay, it, along with the press and radio, brings te the public its most savored means of education and entertainment. Haseball must not forget that many new spectators will be born to the base-ball world through the video sets and many of these new followers are going to have to get out to the stadium and the first through the fight lasted to the fight of the most of the public its most savored means of education and entertainment. Haseball must have a first of the control of the public its most first through the fight lasted to meet of the public its most savored means of education and entertainment. Follow Me Revue is the second effort by the Infantry Cen 's Soldier Show Section to bring top-flight entertainment Benningites, utilizing only local talent. And if advance notices are any indication, we'd say the Section has even surpassed its first production, Vagabond Varieties, which met with amazing success, not only here but at other Third Army installations as well.

cast are due a great deal of credit for the many long hours they have spent in getting the Revue ready for opening night. For the most part, they are assigned to regular duties with the Infantry Center, and have voluntarily donated their off-duty hours including week-ends, to working with the Soldier Show Section.

Follow Me Revue will be presented four evenings at the Main Theater beginning on June 6. The free show features 50 talented Benningites, many of whom appeared in Vagabond Varieties. The entire production has the mark of the professional, with colorful scenery, eye-catching costumes and a well-planned lighting effect.

We don't believe there has ever been a more ambitious musical production staged by an all-soldier cast. It might no the best nor the most professional, but if hard work, talent and a cooperative spirit are crieteria for entertainment, ev-

A Warning to Post Drivers: Keep Car At Safe Distance

In a recent memorandum from the Infantry Center Safety Office, Safety Director Norman Evans has warned Fort Benning drivers of what he calls "your danger zone: stopping

According to the memorandum:
"The Fort Benning driver, like most drivers everywhere, is overly optimistic in regard to required stopping distances. Contrary to popular opinion, no driver, regardless of fast re-flex action, good brakes, tires or road surfaces, can stop wehicle on the proverbial dime.

"It requires a certain distance to stop a vehicle under and if the driver does not maintain that distance in his driving, an accident is inevitable. The many rear-end collisions are evidence in every case that drivers are not aware of stopping distances. The law is very specific in these cases. In most states the driver crashing into the rear of a lead vehicle is always considered responsible for

There have been men who claimed God spoke to them. but an examination of the message convinces us that what they heard was not the voice of God. Recently I read in was charged with murdering his wife. He claimed, apparent ly in all earnestness, that God told him to kill his wife. Now I doubt not that some men would deliverance, but I have the etrongest doubt that God ever told any man to kill his wife. It was either wishful thinking, or his hearing was very poor. Those who have developed spiritual skills have learned to recognize the voice of God in which is right, and in their inner compulsions in the direction of generous and forgiving attitudes. The warnings of cor science, the restrictions that our moral judgment lays upo us, and many other restraints as well as stimuli, have been discovered to be the pressure of God upon the human soul These are the voices of God speaking to the spirits of men

By May Pigott:

The Literature and Arts group of the Women's club closed a highly successful year with the outstanding feature of its ever-widening program — the art exhibit held at the Scout cabin on May 12 and 13

This exhibit was the first all-post art show sponsored by the women's group and culminated many months of work and planning by the chairman, Mrs. R. J. Darnell, and her committee, Mrs. L. R. Moore and Mrs. Robert P. Crawford.

Based upon the belief that Fort Benning is an up-and-coming community with a com-munity's need for culture, the club planned and worked to make its group more than just and worked to make its group more than just a social group.

Each month's program was set up as one in a series to bring the things of most interest in a different and interest-catching way. At the first meeting in November, Mrs. Darnell, former member of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural organization, gave a talk on her job as a Music Specialist in the Arts and Letters section of that organization.

A definite change of pace began with the December program.

Mrs. Dwight L. Adams, wife of Capt. Adams, was the featured artist, bringing one of the outstanding programs in the dance on Tenth Avenue", a syncopated toe dance, and closed the recital with two comedy songs. At this meeting there was also an exhibition of books from Davison's book department. Next came the theater angle. But how to get the group to one of the famous Broadway shows? Simple. They brought Broadway to Benning. A complete recording of the Pulitze Prize play, "Death of a Salesman", with all members of the original-cast-including Thomas Mitchell-playing-the part of Willie Loman, was presented at the January meeting. Follow ing the presentation, there was an open discussion between the audience and a panel composed of two men and two

was the next featured guest. Young Cramer has had his works exhibited in the Cleveland Museum of Art and numbers Catherine Cornell, John Mason Brown and Francis Poulence among those who have posed for him. Just prior to his departure, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress posed for him. The person who won the door prize at this meeting had her head shaped in plaster of Paris by Cramer.

Again Mrs. Darnell was the feature with the March program. Since she is a native Brazilian, she felt that Brazil should be known for something besides coffee, Samba and nouts. An illustrated talk on Brazil-was the solution, and the program was aimed to acquaint the group with the history, background and culture of our southern neighbor.

All during the months when so much planning had been going All during the months when so much planning had been going into the various types of programs to be presented, other projects were being worked out. First and foremost among them war the art and dance classes. A building was finally secured and the schedule of classes set up. The dance classes were in the capable hands of Mrs. Dwight L. Adams, with both children and adult groups planned. Mrs. James Keith and Erle Jackson took over the art classes. As time went on, the building was taken over to be used for other purposes, and with much hardship the classes were continued: dance classes at the Pole Hunt club and art classes for adults at classes at the Polo Hunt club and art classes for adults at

Seeing the intense interest manifested by personnel of Benning in the art group and feeling that art is a definite part of the cultural life of any community, the idea of an all-post art exhibit grew. Immediately, the committee began to plan, and the response more than justified the work. Two hundred and thirty-seven, entries represented the works of 103 artists Enlisted men, dependents, officers and children were entrants.

As its year ends, the Literature and Arts group feels it has started a phase of its program that will grow as the years go on. Much hard work and planning went into the art show, and the organization is hoping that next year a suitable building may be obtained for the art and dance classes, and that the enthusiasm and interest of personnel will again warrant an all-post art show.

BIG APPLE

BY PVI. GEORGE D. ROBEY JR.

Baseball has been slowing up in recent years, much to the consternation of the experts. This slowing up is a good way to kill the nation's favorite past time

Very few games thus far this season have gone less than two hours. Most are running from two-and-a-half to three hours. Some have lasted as long as three and a half hours. Spectators often miss their meals or lose sleep due to overtime ball games, and as a result are beginning to lose interest.

Undoubtedly, these lagging games have hurt gate receipts.

Undoubtedly, these lagging games have have gate reconsti-Games aren't even interesting on television. And the poor can who plunk down two bucks for a box seat don't appreciate a contest that drags on and en. The price of hotdogs and beer

UMPIRES ARE TO BLAME

Nothing has been done to correct this situation which hinges on several faults of the big leagues. Ford Frick said he realized that games were lagging but he hadn't called any meetings.

Umpires are at fault to a great extent—they have been permitting pitchers extra-long warm-ups, rendering over-anxious decissions and bickering with the players stops and blokering with the players.

When hashalis get dirty, braised or souffed, the ump tosaes the catober a new ball who inspects and rubs it for severalminustes. Then the catober throws it to the pitcher who give the ball another rub down. All this takes time when it is considered that teams use 30 to 36 baseballs per game.

Bickering with the umpire takes much time. The Cubs on the beach harrassed an ump into sending them all to the showers recently. Instead of marching to the showers around the field, the Cubs marched right across the field. Of course, the game had to be stopped while this little demonstration took place before the fans and the television cameras. That didn't look good at all. The way the Cubs dragged themselves across the field, in single file with one of the players having his shirt sloppily unbuttoned, surely showed bad taste to fans who pay

PITCHERS ARE FAILING

Extra warm-up pitches allowed by an umpire at a critical time in the game take a considerable amount of time. For in-stance, a hatter has a three and two count on him and has to step out of the box while the pitcher warms up again. With the kind of pitching that has been seen so far this season, it is evident that pitchers are failing. There are too many walks.

During a recent game of a 13-7 Red Sox win over the Yankees, there were 23 walks and 22 hits. This mono facsimile of a baseball game lasted for three hours and

It seems to us that all this talk about the trials and tribulations that baseball is facing amounts to nothing. Baseball suf-fers the plague of television, haseball commissioners and the loss of good men into the service. They blame their failure on ioss of good men into the service. They mame about annuable these factors and many others to numerous to mention bere-

In our opinion, the grand old mogule of the game are bark-ing up the wrong tree. Before they judge others they ought to take one good look at themselves. The game is suffering because of its own bungling. No wonder the profit has dropped in recent years. It's a good game hut monotonous agging events would quell any fan.

PLAYERS TV CONSCIOUS

Time was when the players were interested in the game instead of being television actors, clowns and temperamental characters. They used to double time to their positions in the field and play fast games. Maybe the boys are just getting old and can't make it anymore, One of the factors that makes professional football interesting is the speed and efficiency with professional football interesting is the speed and efficiency with which the game is played. A man times the seconds between plays, fans see a good game and get home in time for supper. Baseball is out of the realm of sport these days—it's big business. It should operate as big business, cut out this unnecessary fooling around on the diamond, and give the fans a businesslike, interesting game they will enjoy justend of wasting fans' valuable time.

FISHING DERBY PAYS OFF

In looking over the out-of-town papers, we saw an item of in-terest for fishing fans. The COLUMBUS DISPATCH, Columbus, Ohio has begun its annual Fishing Derby. This system pays off to the fishermen. Fish are tagged on their gill covers with small numbered tags. Each tag is worth a sum of money when turned into the paper. Over $5,000 are to be awarded as prizes. Some tags are valued at $100, others at $25 and right on down the line to a couple of bucks.

Fishermen are busy oiling reels, refininshing rods and buying new lines in order to cash in on the big contest.

think it a good idea. We're wondering if something on this order could be started on the post. Maybe three-day passes or fishing tackles could be prizes for the post fishermen.

LOCKE RETURNS TO GOLFERS

Bobby Locke, golding genius from South African Transvaal, is coming back to the American Professional Golders' Association. He was barried a few years ago from all PGA-sponsored tourneys. That's good news to golf fans, not so good to golfers, and one of the wisest moves the PGA has made in

The Professional Golfers' Association has been getting as bad as the baseball trade. It can't seam to control the game either.

Locke intends to enter the Goodall Round Robin at Wykagyl, then next month he plans to compete in the National Open at more than the value of an ine good manufact by an use be-tion's of the world since Columbus discovered America. Eighty million citizens own Defense Bonds, thereby, mak-ing them stockholders in the world's biggest business, the U. S. Government, We believe M's far better, at a time when world peace probably depends upon America's solvener, that this stupendous national debt he these distributed among 80,-000,000 everyday citizens rather than among a few thousand banks and other financial agencies. But those everyday citizens, including, of course, Fort Ben-aing soldiers, can do even more to help distribute the dest. Those who sren't aiready buying Defense Bonds can earoll in the bond-a-month plan; those who purchase bonds regularly can use the money saved under the recently-enacted free National Service Life Insurance legislation to increase their bond allotments; and those who have matured bonds can reinvest them under provisions of a new bill recently algred into law by the President.

digined into law by the President.

This new and convenient reinvestment plan allows holders of U. S. Defense Bonds to retain their bonds for 10 additional years during which time the simple spicrest will accrue at the ratio of two and one half per cest each year for the first seven and one half years, and will then increase for the remaining two and one half years to bring the aggregate interest return to approximately 3.8 per cont, comparing the per cont, compounded semi-annually.

This choic requires no action on the part of the owner, since; any bond which is not turned in for cash at its maturity date will be automatically extended until such time as the owner does present it for payment. When the bond is presented for payment after the original maturity date, it will be redeemable at the owner's option at its full face value, plus the interest which has accured at the new rate.

There is another option, also under the new reinvestment plan, designed for those desirous of receiving current interest income. This plan allows holders of Series E bonds to ex-change them for Series G bonds, which are registered bonds, leaued at face value, and bear interest at the rate of two and one half per cent yearly, payable semi-annually from their issue date until their maturity in 12 years. These may be reissue date until their maturity in 12 years. These may be re-deemed at full face value at the owner's option at any time after six months from the issue date.

urally owners of Defense Boads can still receive full cash payment at maturity in accordance with the original terms of the bonds. However, since bond holders have go slong for 10 years without the money invested in bonds, and along for 10 years without the money invested in bonds, and since they no longer have to pay for National Service Life Ingurance, why not reinvest those bonds already paid for and use the insurance savings to buy more? Do You Remember? DO YOU REMEMBER when the sports world at Fort Benning was all agog with the news that a big league baseball player would be stationed here? How did this come about, and who was this man? Well the answer was on the front page of The Bayonet. Jan. 28, 1943, issue.

Under the headline "Hank Gowdy Reports At Benning Saturday," the following account appeared:

"Hank Gowdy, one of big league baseball's most legenary figures, will arrive at Fort Benning on Saturday to assume new duties with the Infantry School. Now a captain fantry School. Even though the Olympics are on the docket for next year much thought is already being given to the renowned contests.

Aside from the many administrative details that are being worked out, coaches are grooming the nation's finest athletes. The boys are setting new records in preparation of the coming Around Philadelphia, some new aspirants are observed by the experts who think these boys are going to show well for the USA. They are Andy Stanfield of Seton Hall in the 100-and 200 meter dashes: Meredith Courding of Cornell in the broad jump;

FLASH FROM AMERICA

Andy Stanfield has proved himself as the fastest human being ever to run thus far in the game when he did the 220 in 20.6 seconds. That's the fastest any one has done it around a full turn. He also excels in both the 100 and 200 meter events. Experts believe that he is a cluch to win the Helsinki event: in these two contests. Recently, Stanfield took the 100 yard dash in :09.7 to win first in the ICAA track and field cham-pionships, but he has consistently run the 100 yard dash in 100.5.

Day on Which Honor Is Paid To Infantry, 'Queen of Battle'

An occasion little noted and seldom remembered, even by those it concerns most, will be observed quietly, as usual, to-day. It is the 176th anniversary of the basic branch of the Armed Forces. It is Infantry Day.

Ever since that day in 1775, when Gen. George Washington became commander in chief of the Continental Army, before this country had gained its independence, the Infantry has been the backbone of our defense. Indeed, in every conflict in which this nation has been engaged, it is the Infantry which has won the decisive campaigns and which has paid more dearly than any other Service. Today, it is that same Infantry sol carrying the ball in Korea, just as he did at Bunker Hill, Atlanta, Chatieu - Thiery, Normandy and New Guinea.

Despite his importance, however, there are those who have, in the past, stoutly maintained that the Infantryman is obsolete. These "military experts" have been proven wrong so many times it seems they would have learned how fal-ladous is their reasoning. Just before the outbreak of the Ko-rean war, for example, these experts had again picked up the battle cry. They could see little justification for the Army's desire to build up a ground force. They pooh-poohed, the planners and strategists who tried to placate their fears that the next war would be fought with machines not man But their objections turned into red faces when the pitiful little soldiers not only fought a valuant delaying action but actually held back a determined and numerically enemy until reinforcements could arrive. This from a branch

The job of the Infantryman has remained the same throughout the years. There have been improvements in equipment, in elothing, in weapons, in combat rations, but his combat Infantryman, often dirty and always tired, still has the responsibility of meeting and defeating the enemy on the bsttlefield. No war has yet been won—nor is one likely ever to be won—until the enemy's armies have been defeated, a task which no one but the Infantry soldier can accomplish.

During World War II, Army service units were overstaffed to the detriment of the Infantry, a fact which wasn't discovered until almost too late. The Battle of the Bulge awoke many people to the fact that a strong Infantry Reserve had be ready at a moment's notice! Fortunately, there were available among service units many men who were physically fit to serve in line companies, and after a few weeks of fantry training these former service troops were committed to This situation would never have occured if the value of the Infantry had been recognized at the start of mobilize

There is nothing at all glamorous about the Infantry. Not most eager recruiting sergeant will make any such claim. But the Infantry is still, as it always has been, the Queen of Battie. The Infantry is, in the final analysis, the or in any war. For it is the Infantry soldier who secure the real estate, kills and captures, the enemy and occupies the conquered territory. Without the Infantry, there would be

So, as we observe the 176th birthday of the Queen of Battle. we can't help but thank God for the man with the gun, that affectoting, footslogging GI Joe, infantryman!

A Cordial Welcome Extended To Future Reserve Officers

Another summer training period for ROTC cadets opens Another summer training period to note caucis open-here next week when college students from the Second, Third and Fourth Armies descend on Fort Benning for their annual encampment. This is the first time that cadets from areas Third Army have used the facilities of Fort Benning, which speaks well for the calibre of training received

Fort Benning is an ideal location for any kind of training, and Fort Benning recreation facilities are about the most complete to be found anywhere. We hope the cadets will make full use of them and that they will find the world's most complete Army post a good introduction to Army life.

We join with all the officers and men here in welcoming the more than 1,200 future officers to Fort Benning. May your Visit among us be both beneficial and pleasant.

There is a pulsating rhythm filling the air these summ the various clubs and the all-soldier show "shack."

Cause of this foot-tapping beat is a combo known as the Rhythm Rockers whose eight members are officially part of the Provisional Group band, which has been organized for

It all started one night when they got to-gether for a jam session. Pfc. Jo Jo Cox listened with growing enthusiasm as the various members played. For some time he had planned to organize such an outfit, but could not definitely decide ust the type of music to feature. After that session, he talked to the various players and hey were all enthusiastic

DIFFERENT STYLE

From the first practice session, they worked with but one idea in mind and that was to present good music in a different style. Now eight months later they have more than succeeded. This combo typifies the best in the up and coming style played by some of the leading bands in the country and spellights

Pic. Cox says their particular style is a progressive innovalon of jazz. And they really work on their arrangements which are done by Cox himself. When it comes to the bongo drums. Cox knows about them first hand, for he studied the technique in Puerto Rico. While a student at Fisk university in Nashville Tenn., he played this unusual drum for a creative dance class. During this time he also had his own combo, and later played the same instrument in a professional capacity. With this present combo, however, he plays tenor sax.

All the members of this group are good musicians and most

For instance, Pfc. Eugene Stuckey, who handles the alto sax, did a copable job with the Carolina State Collegians, and Sgt. Leonard McDonald, who beats the all important bomog drum was a student at the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Trombonist Cpl. Herbert Murray played in his home town orchestra, and the planist, Pfc. Charles Edmong, got his experience in a high school orchestra. Kyolophonist Pfc. Hogan Fisher, Drummer Pfc. Cecil Cooper and Bass Cpl. Sylvester

FEATURE PAGE STARS

The combo has played numerous engagements in and around The combo has played numerous engagements in and around. Columbus and has made a regular circuit of the clubs at Benning. In addition, it has filled engagements at Tuskeegee, Birmingham and Montgomery. Als, Just the other week, the group was starred on the Fort Benning Feature Fage radio

This group of musicians is a versatile lot, able to double on some other instrument. In addition to being drummer,
Pic. Cooper steps forth occassionally to do the vocal honors. Pre. Cooper steps torin occassionary to do the vocal nonors. Cpl. Tony, the bass player, can give forth with as good a blues number as any you have ever heard, and sometimes, Pre. Cox sits down to beat out a mean rhythm on the bongo

Cox says that if it had not been for the interest, consideration and encouragement given the group by the band master, M-Sgt Edward Taylor it could not have progressed so rapidly

The whole group is very enthusiastic, and has great plans The whole group is very enthusiastic, and has great plans for the future. Although one of the leading lazz figures, Buddy Johnson, has highly complimented them, they feel they need more practice and experience as a group and to that end they spend their spare time in perfecting their arrangements and technique.

Smoke Wade and the forces of right arrayed against them on the other side, the stage is set for action. And action is soon in coming.

Smoke Wade smuggles food into Gunnison Valley, and in so doing runs afoul of the syndicate's gunmen. Wade kills one of them and comes near being lynched. He is spirited out of town by the heroine, and the rides into town, finds villain, two of them dodge the villains from one hide-out to another.

It is inevitable, of course, that in the end the villains are vanquished by the forces of right. But the action that goes into this conclusion provides some of the most interesting reading since Zane Grey. ley. Gunnison Valley lies in Author Hogan has had one

Many look promising and rise to great heights in the eyes of fans, Others fall by the waysile as the champions step over them like the rungs in a ladder; a golden ladder to success. Old timers at Fort Benning will remember "Red" Lindsey. He was one of those who entered the sporting clan years ago to rise to the top of that golden ladder to success.

Red Lindsey died on May 13 of this year. His tabulous life was taken by a merciless killer. The champ died of cancer, a disease that even the greatest champions of all cannot detect the state of this illness doesn't recognize fine people nor does it. know the rules of clean living so that it could pass by those who have played the game of life squarely.

Fort Hood, Tex. was proud of Red Lindsey who was as amous in that post's sports as he was at Fort Benning 30 years ago. Lindsey's incredible record in Army sports dates back to the great Fort Benning teams of 1820 and 1921. He played baseball in the summer and tootball in the Winter. Then in 1922, Red Lindsey stepped into the ring at Fort Benning.
as a official for the first time. Guiding boxers, in all weight classes, he remained in that position for 17 years.

GRID STAR FOR BENNING

Back in 1923-24-25, when Fort Benning boasted a schedule of all; Southern conference teams, Red was put, on the first string; football team that was coached by "Maj.\ Dwight D. Elsenhower. His position on the gridiron cashed in for the genial sergeant in 1927, when he was selected to play center in the powerful All-Army tootball team that was coached by "Maj."

Another tine record of championship play was recorded in Red's history. He won numerous games for the Fort Benning baseball team. The diamond climax came in 1932 when he pitched 13 straight wins, several shut-outs, and a number of der last week, it was learned in a report from the National Guard Bureau, Department of the Army, that the 201st Armored Field Artillery battallon, stationed here under the command of Lt. Col. Winston A. Jones, is the "only living descendant" of the original which companies that first formed the Army on June 14, 1775.

The same source also reveals, that the 201st is the only known used today that displays both Union and Condectate streamers in its battle flag for participation in both sides of the Civil War.

The battle flag for participation in both sides of the Civil War.

On Army Day last Thersday, Senator Harley M. Rilgore of West Virginia paid special bribute to the 201st on the floor of the United States Senate,

He said, "This is a proud day (Army Day) for America. This is a day of nusual importance to all West Virginians because our own 20ist Armered Field Artillery battallen — Fairmon's Finest' & is the only living descendant of the original cight

Young Officers Can Profit Heeding This Sound Advice

. Brig. Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., has given one group of young officers some very sound advice. Speaking to the graduating class at Virginia Polytechnic Institute last June 9, he recalled some of his own experiences as a junior officer to give them "a few tricks of the trade."

The following are excerpts from his address:

The following are excerpts from his address; "Learn to use your eyes....... Train yourself to be curious about what is going on about you; why it is going on; is it going on the way it should. Train yourself to be critically observant; to be able to spot the right and wrong way of doing things; to be able to recognize a good performance and a care of your men. To me that is one of the primary jobs of a good officer. His men, the men he commands, are his first consideration. You as their commander and leader proper training, their personal problems and living conditions. their off-duty activities, their 24-hour a day welfare is your No I task. Don't ever be too busy to be concerned about a single individual... You can't fool the troops. They will find you out and realize very fast whether you are sincere.

maneuvers, range firing, splicing wire, sight setting or adjusting spark plugs......The corollary to setting and demanding high standards is to correct mistakes right now. Never let an error get stale.

men why and what......The American soldier you will be commanding is intelligent and has lots of individual initiative unless he knows why and what. If you are in the habit of telling them why, they soon know that you have given your decisions honest thought and are doing the hest you know how for them and for the mission.

"Command your unit whatever it is, whether it be an In-intry platoon, signal section, a gun battery, a maintenance group, an administrative section or an engineering construc-You are responsible for that team and its performance......

Respect your equipment........Some foreign armies could quip themselves with the material we needlessly abandon through careless maintenance permit it to become unserviceable. Men, weapons and supplies are the tools with which you fight. If you take care of them and respect them, they will do a job for you.......

"You yourself must know your stuff. You must know the right way to do things; you must know how to take care of your n; you must know why we are doing things the way we must know what these tools will do; how to use how they are made, and how to take care of them. You have got to know more about everything your outfit is designed to

Post's Traffic Deaths Show Little Tendency to Decrease

A recent Third Army accident report showed that of the 32 off-post truffic fatalities in the Army area this year, 13 were Fort Benning personnel. This gives the Infantry Center the doubtful distinction of claiming a traffic death rate, per 1,000 men, 90 per cent higher than the Third Army rate.

for the high percentage of traffic fatalities are the same as they have always been; traveling too great a distance in too short a period of time and driving at unsafe speeds, in unsafe vehicles and while drinking. n unsafe vehicles and while drinking.

Despite repeated warnings, however, the tenants of safe driving are violated every day. Fortunately, not every soldier who fails to need this advice is involved in an accident, but if he continues to shrug off these warnings, it's unlikely his luck will hold out. His body might some day be stretched out on a cold slab in a morgue, waiting to be identified by a relative or Young George Doty is a mighty grateful and excited fellow these days. He has recently been selected to attend the seventh in July - August.

The 16 - year - old lad, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Horace W. Doty, Jr., is a sophomore at Columbus high school and a member of Fort Benning Troop No. 7, Capt. Robert Ryan,

George was elected to this honor as a result of a contest in which points were awarded for appearance at inspections, attendance at meetings, jobs held leadership and advancement in scouting. According to the scout master. George is one

> The cooperation and fellowship that is the true meaning of scouting was aptly displayed by members of the troop. Somehow the money to finance the trip had to raised, so the $0 members went work with a will and sold scrap paper, The total mounted, and the amount was helped by donations until finally the goal was reached.

The young Life Scott, who is the proud possessor of 29 merit badges, will leave on July 8 for Raleigh, N. C., where a pre-Jamboree meeting will be held. On July 13 he leaves for Algiers and a tour that will take him to Naples, Rome, Florence and Venice. After the two - week Jamboree he will see Paris and Cherbourg.

George has been active in scout work at Benning since 1948 when his family was transferred here. He is the first scout at Fort Benning to win the God and Country award, for 150 hours

In addition to his numerous scouting activities, he is a coronetist in the Columbus high school band, and still finds time to work at his favorite hobbles of photography, stamp collecting

He is very much interested in the high school band and one of his fondest memories is of the trip he made with it to Daytons each, Fla., in 1949. However, he does not expect to be a band member next year for he is planning to go into the ROTC

George is really looking forward to the coming trip for the assistant scout master of his troop and some of his friends, now with the Fourth Infantry division in Germany, are making plans to meet George in Austria.

This tall, quiet boy is throughly sold on scouting and thinks that every young boy should get into scout work as soon as he is old enough. He also says that being a Boy Scout on a military reservation is a little different from being a civilian scout troop. Normally the people in charge are Army personnel and well grounded in discipline that is reflected in the standards they

George has already decided to attend Utah State Agriculture college when he finishes to specialize in scientific farming. To own a good, productive and well regulated farm, using the latest ntific methods, is the dream of his future, and he would like for the farm to be in Idaho.

It is really hard for him to sit calmly and talk about the eoming trip, for it is the most exciting thing that has happened to him in all of his 16 years.

"I had to work hard, and I really had some stiff competition, but even after I was elected I couldn't have gone unless the money was raised. So really I owe my whole trip to the members of the troop, for they are the ones who worked and made i possible."

Ry William E. Barrett Publisher BY M-SGT, ROBERT

GROOVER There is an ancient Chinese belief that God deals indirectwith his creations by actions at the hands of nature and the earth's population. As this is a realistic rather than an idealistic viewpoint, the theory would indicate that nature acts for and against the earth's physical creatures to balance the existence of our universe. This theory would further indicate that man kills man, not the hands of God, but at his own insistence, and as part of the plan to prevent overpopulation of the earth. Nature and man combine in positive or negative manner, to carry out a regu-lating process whereby the earth continues to run smoothly, despite the troubles that beet man continuously,

If the reader of "The Left Hand of God" is inclined to agree with the theory set forth above, then it is highly probable that he will understand and enjoy William E. Barrett's new best-seller. If the reader is idealistic and subscribes to by the dead priest, thus form-the theory that God deals di-ing the novel's basis.

ways, then it is likely that such a reader will find the story behind. "The Left Hand of God" improbable. Here's why: The hero of this piece, Jim Carmody, is an American aviator who remained in China when World War II ended in 1945. He accepted a life with a Chinese war-lord in a re-mote Chinese province for a handsome salary in American money. The American-Educat ed war-lord rules his province with an iron hand— the same fron-hand with which he rules Carmody. One night a priest, wounded and dying, stumbles into the war-lord's hide-out, and dies in Jim Carmody's arms. Carmody reads the priest's writ-ten mission to report to a hos-pital-mission, not too far from the hideout, in an effort to bolster the spirit of the Ameri-can medical people working there. Carmody dons the cloth of the priest (more for safety in transit than for anything else), and goes to the hospital in disguise.

From here on out, the actions of Jim Carmody result in affairs being settled in pret-ty much the same manner as if they had been accomplished

Do You Remember

DO YOU REMEMBER in spring of 1943 when sort of expectancy invaded Benning, when people felt something important was going to happen but could not put their finger on just what it was? On April 15, 1943, Benning had its first wartime visit rom President Franklin, D.

The April 22 issue of The Bayonet carried a long story, part of which is as follows:

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt, on his first wartime tour of Fort Benning last Thursday, in a whirlwind visit saw demonstrations of the Infantry school, paratroopers, armored raiders and all the branches of activity that go to nake this "America's most complete Army post."

"Shrouded with wartime secrecy, the visit of the com-mander-in-chief to this military training center was a known fact to but a few high-ranking officers who made arrangements for the tour.

"However, Thursday noon much speculation was aroused when the presence of steel-helmeted guards took up posi-tions at bridges, the Columbus railroad station and other vital places along the route the President's party was to follow.

"Arriving at Fort Benning late in the afternoon on a special train, the President was greeted at the FFort Benning railroad depot by a guard of honor from the 29th Infantry and the 29th Infantry's band, "Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, who made a special trip to Fort Benning, likewise met the President here and rode with him on his tour.

"Although the President's tour of Fort Benning was hurried, the commander - in-chief viewed all phases of military training here, including demonstrations at the Para-chute School, the Infantry School and the Tenth Armored division.
"As he concluded his visit at the post, the President expres-sed to the several command-ing generals his complete faith in the strength of the American Army.

"A special motor drove the President's party to Warm Springs where, they re-port, they were "treated roy-ally." A guard of honor, under the comund of Lt. Col. Henry McMillian, executive officer of 124th Infantry regiment, es-corted the President and his

Some of these athletes really nut themselves through the paces on the stage. The constant running, jumping and danc-ing really keep the guys and gals in trim. In some parts of the show, the audience never knows when or where some stage. Anything can happen-and it does.

We noticed an error in The Ring magazine. Our local box-ing orbit has extended to national interest. However, it is stated in the current issue that Buck DeCardova and Johnny

The many boxing fans at Benning know that Buck won the fight on a split decision. In the re-match with Wilder a couple of weeks later, Buck floored Wilder six times before feree, Corn Griffin, called a TKO in favor of DeCardova in

Still in the line of boxing, Joe Louis KO'ed Lee Savold. We have been predicting in columns past that the Brown Bomber can make a comeback. After the terrific last week when the Louis showed his old power, we make the same prediction that Joe Louis will again take over the boxing throne.

All along the hard road to a successful comeback/ the Brown Bomber has worked hard with the spirit of a real champion. He possesses probably more ring "know how" than any other man to contend for the most coveted prize of all in the boxing world. Along with that and his fine spirit, Joe Louis has shown that he still has his killer punch. He is

Many soldiers at Fort Benning from the Northern states are acquainted with International Falls, Minn. Southern boys who are interested in fishing and hunting also know of this region as one of the finest places to go for good hunting and fishing. Probably, there is no other place to go that has the reputation that the Rainy lakes district has,

This area has well earned the many words of praise that in a recent years, the fishing has fallen off. Some fishermen have turned to other waters to look for battles with large

Fishermen all over the country will be happy to know that the fishing has made a come back in the Rainy lake district. Old timers who have lived up there for years, report the fishing is better this year than they have ever seen it in their life times. Fish so large that they have to be photographed or taken back home for people to believe, are

Now is the time to go to International Falls. If soldiers are in line for furloughs and are looking for a good place to fish we would call the International Falls district the best place to go. It won't cost a lot of money to make the trip by car and the cost of living in the bush is relatively low. It's a trip that a fisherman won't forget if he is looking for the best fishing he can get in the United States.

There are big catches of Walleyes and Great Northerns and musky. Walleyes are running about 15 pounds and Great Northerns are tipping the scales at 25 pounds. Muskles know no limit, it appears. This fish is one that draws fishermen from all over the nation. One who catches this battling fresh

Hunting prospects don't look promising this year in Canada. The Minister of Lands and Forests announced that the deer season will be shortened this year because of the drop in population. The shortage of game is not serious. Deer have had a bad year and it is hoped that hunting will be better in the future. Habitat is the big problem with game any where and Canada is about the last place that would have Numerous rosters and locator cards must be kept on students Numerous rosters and locator cards must be kept on students during training. Each class is oriented by the company commander, first sergeant, chaplain and battalion commander in addition to being inspected by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Elmer C. Howard.

All initial processing of the class is accomplished within three days, and on Monday morning, the class is ready for its first day of airborne training.

In addition on the training becomes more difficult, many young soldiers change their minds about the business of jumping from a plane in flight.

The result is found in "quit slips". An interesting factor in this connection is that the Airborne department eliminates as "not adaptable for Airborne training" as many men as quit voluntarily.

Of course, any change in a student's status means more work for the company. The individual must be reprocessed and transferred to a holding company, or be returned to his former ganization.

Normally about 80 percent of a class will graduate and be come qualified parachutists. Upon graduation, the class is de-processed, trains are ordered, and the men are shipped back to their respective units.

This same routine continues month after month.

Colonel Howard's immediate staff consists of Maj. Earl F.

The two or three minutes an untrained fire fighter wastes attempting to extinguish a flame might well be the difference between bringing the conflagration under control and losing valuable property and equipment.

Here are a few simple rules with which everyone should be familiar, just in case the building he occupies catches fire:

Notify occupants of the building. This should be done at once to prevent injury to those inside. Notification to the occupants is especially important if there is any danger of an

Secondly, notify the Fire Department. Regardless of how small the fire is, it's imperative that the Fire Department be advised immediately. Even though you think the fire could be put out in 30 seconds, never hesitate to turn in an alarm.

Then, after these two steps have been taken, start fighting the fire. It's possible it can be brought completely uncontrol before the Fire Department arrives. At any rate, you will have done everything possible to prevent furthe damage. From there on, it's up to the Fire Department,

Of course, the ideal situation would be one in which all fires were eliminated. However, if a fire does break out, despite all precautions, play it safe. Notify the Fire Depart-

Armed Services Y Celebrates Its Centennial Year of Service

An organization which has been administering to the moral, spiritual and character growth of the American soldier since the Civil War is this month celebrating its Centennia Year. That volunteer organization, now known as the Armed Services YMCA, can indeed be proud of its record of achievement during the past 100 years. It came into existence who there was no Red Cross or no Special Services units and the Chaplain Corps was in its infancy. As the size of the Armed Services increased so did the scope of the Armed Services YMCA. Today there are YMCA facilities in practically every town and city adjacent to Military installations and in many cities normally used by Armed Forces personnel when on pass

Columbus can boast two fine Services Y's, one on 11th street the other on Fifth avenue. Both are dedicated to making life pleasant and entertaining for the off - duty Fort Benning soldier. Their planned recreation programs, as well as the many other facilities available, are designed to provide the soldier with a "home away from home."

Each week's social calendar shows that Y officials have given careful thought to the type of entertainment most sought after by the enlisted men at Fort Benning. There are dances, purties, musical programs, skating, games, contests, suppers and religious programs. In addition, both Y's have domitory facilities, reading and writing rooms and table games. There is a gift service, which helps Servicemen select gifts for their relatives and friends. Hostesses are always on hand for the dances and at other times when the soldier feels the need of female

Every enlisted man in the Army should be thankful for the many opportunities his Service YMCA offers him for entertainment and guidance. He should be grateful to the men and wom-en who donate their time and efforts to make the YMCA a home away from home. He should show his appreciation by making use of his YMCA

Fred Saigh, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, recently Fred Saign, present of the St. Louis Cardinas, relations of criticism and leveled it on the major leagues, This has been the second fuse that he's touched, off in the baseball world in the last few months. The first was a charge that exploded under television problems in baseball's big leagues.

A mighty barrage was loosed by Saigh this time when he A mighty barrage was loosed by Saigh this time when he attacked the bonus situation in the big leagues. He doesn't believe that young players should get even one penny when they sign up in the majors. Fabulous sums of money are being paid to players entering the leagues in hopes that they will not quit for another club.

Some new players have been receiving as much as $120,000 on their first signing into the big clubs. Other payments are running from $40,000 to $80,000. This system does many things to a new player that are not good for the game or the club. It is surely bad business on the part of the big.

unings wa new piayer mat are not good for the game of the club. It is surely bad business on the part of the big-clubs. They have one consolation. Large sums of cash paid out to baseballers are deducted from taxes.

THE CASH GRABS

THE CASH GRABS
We are inclined to agree with Saigh on this matter. Some of the points he brings out in his argument against such a practice are indeed good. When a man comes into the big time and he is greeted with gold, his incentive is injured. He has almost nothing to work for as far as the game is concerned. Most players coming into the big time, are not looking forward to giving the public good ball games. All they are interested in is the bonus cash.

As far as is known, there is no business that pays an employee for-work or ability before it is proven to that business by the employee. Certainly, that would be a silly move on any Old timers in the game have been kicking for years because On a timers in the gains have been actual for years declared they want more cash. They want a cut on the television in-dustry, more dough from gate receipts, and a bigger take on the World Series. We agree with the Card prexy that it odd that the old timers haven't been able to see that a lot of the gelt that could be theirs is going to beginners.

GAME THREATENED

The funny part, of the whole deal is very few of the bonus-beginners remain with the hand that fed them. Almost all of the recipients are sent out or back the minors. We wonthe recipients are sent out or back the limbols. We what baseball is thinking of when they get so ridiculous, or are they thinking at all. At any rate, the grand old game is about to fade away and fall into the limbos of recorded bistory in the sport's world ledger of faux paux. The big boys are going to have to start using their heads pretty soon.

If it would be necessary to pay baseball players a bonus, it could be done as Fred Saigh suggests. Not a cent upon entrance, and maybe, if a player is good, he might get a bonus not to exceed $50,000 atter he has proven himself worthy of

CHANDLER STEP DOWN

It seems to be all settled now, A. B. "Happy" Chandler will step down in mid-July. After the long battle between the club owners and commissioner's office, Chandler said that he would leave his office, "with no regrets." He wants to stay office until the All-Star Game.

Upon leaving his job, Chandler will be paid $65,000, his salary Upon leaving his job, Chandler will be paid 89,000, his sainty to the termination of the contract he had with the club owners. Stipulations to his resignation were abandoned in the face of opposition. Most important of those was a stipulation that Chandler could not enter baseball for a period of five years. It is believed that Commissioner Chandler is slated to begin working with the Mutual Broadcasting system. It had been decided Chandler is broadler by the chandler in the contract Chandler is the state of the chandler in the chandler noticed Chandler has met with big wheels in the radio and television profession.

Now the question is, who will replace Chandler? At this point of the game, no one knows. Ford Frick says that he does not want the job. George Trautman, our choice for the job, was pretty much ruled out when it was stated that the new commissioner should be a big business man, capable of han-dling radio and television contracts, administrating a big pen-sion system, handling the big business of baseball and executing movements which concern baseball's position under the

Ringwise Pennsylvanian Loses Two Rounds on Illegal Blows

Larry Mujica, Georgia welterweight champion from Fort Benning, lost a 10-round decision to Chuck Taylor, of Coalport, Pa., Monday night in a non-title meeting before some 2,000 spectators at Memorial Stadium.

Taylor, who has been termed a top contender, clearly held the upper hand in all but a few rounds. Only in the seventh did the Quaker State battler run into any serious trouble, and that for only closing the minute.

Taylor's experience was the land following rounds when he provided the property of the content of the coal o

Post Swimming Regulations Designed for Your Benefit

Fort Benning's swimming pools provide the most welcome retreat on the Post during these bot summer days. Six pools are operated for the convenience and comfort of Fort Benning personnel and their dependents. These pools are staffed by trained, competent lifeguards, on duty for the safety of those who enjoy one of America's favorite summer pastimes. one of America's favorite summer pastimes.

A uniform set of rules governs the operation of each pool, all that which we know to be best necessary to the health and safety of those who make use of

A recent memorandum published by the Infantry Center headquarters outlines the regulations governing swimming on the Post. These regulations are intended to aid those who might not be as familiar as they should be with the rules of safety and

Swimming pools are not family picule grounds rough-house play areas or bathtubs. Spreading a lunch in a pool area draws insects, presents an untidy appearance and is annoying to others who like to use swimming pools for swimming, not

"Horse-play" has no place in a swimming area. It not only endangers those participating in such antics, but also those who happen to be in the area.

Common sense should make everyone realize that swimming pools are not bathtubs. Clean, sanitary dressing rooms, with showers and latrines, are provided for the convenience of all personnel at every swimming pool on the Post.

People with skin diseases, sore or inflamed eyes, colds, nasal or ear discharges, or any other communicable disease should not have to be told to keep away from swimming pools. Swimming at such times is dangerous to the health of the individual infected as well as to those free of disease.

By the same token, spitting, spouting water or blowing the nose is equally as unsanitary and repulsive to others. Furtherfectious matter into the sinus and inner ear cavities and may possibly cause serious consequences."

There are maximum swimmer loads for each pool. These limits are not designed to prevent anyone from making full use of swimming fucilities. On the contrary, they are enforced for the safety of Fort Benning personnel.

.It is the duty of every man and woman on the Post to adhere strictly to regulations governing use of swimming pools. Violators will, and should be, excluded from the pools--permanently, if

July 4. Our Greatest Holiday

Celebration of this nation's greatest holiday is over. American citizens, soldier and civilian alike, have returned to their jobs after pausing to observe the birthdate of their country's freedom, the Fourth of July,

On that date, 176 years ago, a young but brave nation was Washington Roundup. all men are endowed with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Since that date, our freedom has been threatened many times, is indeed threatened even now. Twice in this generation we have had to build a huge civilian Army to help the professional soldier defeat those throats to the American way of life. Right now, we are fighting aggression in Korea to insure that our line of defense does not crumble, that our freedoms are not endangered

Foreigners marvel at our ability to unite our people of danger, as was done in 1776 when the nation was divided issues at stake. Actually, however, we have never really been divided at all on the issue of freedom. Our country was founded by people seeking freedom, our independence was gained by people seeking freedom, and we have maintained that independence because we know what it means to be free.

Fort Benning has long been noted as the world's most complete Army post, but few people know that Benning was the birthplace of one of the most unique organizations to be found at any military installation

In the summer of 1925, Mrs. Charles D. Roberts, wife of then Colonel Roberts, got together a group of women, who, like herself, were daughters of Army personnel, for the purpose of setting up a social organization. She had been reared on an Army post and knew how easily one can loose contact with friends.

That, first meeting was the founding of the "Army Daughters." Today members of the Army Daughters are listed in 20 chapters, including those in Germany, Panama, and Japan.

Army Daughters set to work to improve their organization and establish rules to govern it, Members decided to make charity their primary aim. After much consideration, the group decided to "adopt" the obstetrics and children's wards at the post hospital. That did not mean, however, they would not help other charitable organizations, for whenever a fund-raising drive was on, the Army Daughters were among the first contributors.

The hard working little group was faced with the problem The hard working little group was raced with the problem of finding a way to raise funds to carry out its charities. Members felt the best way was to have fun and at the same time raise money. The annual 49'ers party was the re-

Each year, in early spring, they begin their advertising campaign. The parties all follow the same pattern, with the Officers' Mess decorated as an exact replica of the old gold or rush days with lovely dance hall girls, a feed wagon and unusual costumes of the guests. No effort is spared to make this annual affair a success Hardly does one party end before planning begins on another.

In the first year of its existence, Army Daughters held an old-fashioned rummage sate. The Thrift Shop is the direct result of that sale, for they decided that there should be some sort of bargain counter in constant operation.

A sort of permanent rummage sale was opened in a shed in the Quartermaster area. This shop continued under the sponsorship of the Army Daughters until the late forties when

The local chapter of Army Daughters has a monthly luncheon meeting during which members discuss new busines; Always a great favorite is the yearly Dutch treat supper for Army sons and daughters.

Each year this society contributes to the annual Red Cross drive and to Army Emargency Relief, in addition to its steady, jobof doing all it can for the maternity and children's swards at the hospital. Recently members purchased a modern resuscitator, only one of its kind in this section of the country.

Not content with their local charmable help Army Daughters contribute generously to the national fund which provides married or single daughters of

GIs Charmed Into Reading At Library 3

A current scene around the 508th Airborne Infantry regiment is troopers, struggling under the weight of a collection of books.

This presents a strange sight as it seems that the 508th Air-borne Infantry has suddenly taken "book learning" to heart.

Library No. 3 located in the heart of the regimental area can be visited any night or day duroff duty hours and be found full of husky troopers contented-

A closer inspection of the A closer inspection of the troopers, seemingly engrossed in their books reveals that many eyes are focused at the desk in the center of the room, at which sits a charming librarian.

Maybe game little Larry Mujica learned something from his battle with Chuck Taylor, Personally we don't think so.

Taylor was out of the Benning boxer's class but we don't think that he's got the stuff to whip Sugar Ray Robinson or Tony Janiro. He was too ring wise for Mujica. It was evident that Taylor has been in the game for years.

The fight feature displayed some obvious fouls.

Larry Mujica is a young fighter on his way up. He didn't deserve the beating he got at the hands of a boy who is on his way down. We counted numerous lacings, backhanding and elbow punches by Taylor in the infighting. And worst of all, at a time when it was entirely unnecessary, Taylor clubbed Muiica on the rones:

When the going got tough for Larry, and it got plenty tough, he was still in there fighting. It wasn't easy for Larry to hit Taylor, but he wasn't afraid of him. Mujica took, a terrific beating, his face was splattered with gore from blows struck in the opening rounds when Taylor did most

It was too bad that Larry Mujica had to meet Taylor with a bad eye. He had a rough black eye even before he stepped into the ring with the Coalport, Pa, fighter, suffered when he was sparring with Larry Jones a couple of days ago in preparation for the Taylor battle.

Larry didn't look the boxer we have seen in battles pasduring those opening rounds. But he looked a little nervous and clinched for infighting. That was just the place for Taylor's fouls to do their lethal damage.

Later on in the fight, with Mujica bleeding badly being rocked with some tremendous blows, he changed his style. He fought Taylor from long range and followed up his leads with some terrific blows, backing out again before Taylor could clinch.

Larry Mujica never gives up and he is a brave fighter. We don't think Taylor could floor Muiica and we didn't think Larry was ever through. It looked bad at times, but Mujica still had plenty of fight left.

Larry Mujica won the hearts and respect of fight fans from both Fort Benning and Columbus. Fans knew that they were looking at a game little guy and a fine clean boxer when they saw Larry take a beating that few fighters would

Before Bob Feller became the first modern hurler to pitch three no hitters and set a new record in baseful, fans didn't core for Stengel's choice of Lemon over Feller for the All - Star game. Now the fans are making old Casey talk fast — but he can do it;

Feller pitched his third no hitter last Sunday against the Detroit Tigers. Cy Young and one or two others did it before 1900. This new record probably sets Feller up as the majors' most valuable pitcher, not to be left out of an All - Star game. But Casey, a man of good judgment, called the wrong card for or

In looking over Feller's record, Casey probably noted that he has had an off season or two and based his judg-

The good thing about this kind of a situation is when man does hit the top again, it's his turn to chuckle.

But as fickle as the public ia, great champions are never forgotten. Sports fans always remember an outstanding shampion. Ben Hogan who staged a glorious comeback after an almost fatal accident; the great Babe Ruth, with an extraordinary batting record, and Joe Louis are just a a few names that are etched in spectators' minds forever.

Along with those hright days of success comes he time when an athlete slips from the beam of the big spot lights. He goes into the record books, never to be heard of again. There is an exclusive fraternity of those few men who have made it up the tough comeback trail. But traced is littered with traffic attempts of men who have fallen along the road. Some failed at the beginning and others just short of the comeback goal.

The fraternity of comebacks has a membership that can be numbered on the fingers of a hand, Yet, this is a mentit for old timers and the tragedy is worth the attempt. Even though the top seems so far away to the fans, the athlete sees it just beyond his fingertips where in one mighty. Sange he will grasp and hold his last victory.

Those 'Pesky' Traffic Rules Make Driving Safer on Post

Fort Benning traffic regulations were established to insure safe driving conditions. They were not set up to annoy sol-

However, the daily number of flagrant violations makes us wonder if drivers are aware of the regulations, Surely, they wouldn't so consistently break the law if they knew what they

Traffic regulations are nothing more than precautionary m ures, designed to make driving a pleasure rather than a dan-ger. Similar regulations are enforced in every American commity and violators are punished, usually more harshly than at Fort Benning.

There are three classes of violations here, one of which results in revocation of the violator's license, and there is no reason why everyone should not be familiar with all of them.

Only a few are guilty of violating license-revoking regulations, but many are guilty of major and minor breaches.

Common sense should tell every driver it's dangerous to pass a school bus which has stopped to load or unload passpass a school ous which has stopped to total of unload pass-engers. Children, being what they are, too often dash from the bus without looking right or left. At such times, they are placing their lives in the hands of automobile operators in the We don't believe any driver wants the blood of a child on his hands. It could easily be there if he fails to stop.

Driving at speeds above the limit is a sure way to invite a summons from the Provost Marshal's office. Not only is speeding a violation of traffic regulations, it is also dangerdriver, to pedestrians and to other drivers. erators of private vehicles should always allow themselves sufficient time to reach their destination so that they are not tempted to exceed speed limits. We'd have few without speeding.

Driving without a post license is the same as driving without a state license. Regulations require all Fort Benning vehicle operators to obtain a post license before using their the post. That regulation, too, is designed to tect the driver. No one can register his car and get that license until his vehicle has passed the safety examination. This examination bars from the post any vehicle found ur safe, thereby protecting Fort Benning from the hazards of automobiles which should either be junked or repaired.

Minor violations, most frequent, include failure to give propminor violations, most request, include induce to give proper hand signals, backing into an intersection and failure to make a FULL STOP at a stop sign. These violations need no further comment. They speak for themselves. Accidents occur daily because of the failure of drivers to adhere to these

We are confident there's not a single Military Policeman Benning who gets pleasure out of reporting violaat Fort Benning who gets pleasure out of reporting viola-tions. However, it's af part of his job to make delinquency reports on persons who do not obey traffic rules, and he is here to fulfill his responsibility. It's your responsibility to make that part of the Military Policeman's job unnecessary.

Help Spike Those Rumors!

Rumors have always been so much a part of Army life that it would be hard to imagine any Post -- or barracks -- completely free of at least a few. But when rumors reach the point of ridiculousness, it's time to call a halt.

At present there are several demoralizing rumors being spread among soldiers of at least one Third Army installation are so completely illogical that we won't even repeat them here. Furthermore, we find it hard to believe that any thinking dividual could possibly give one of them a second thought. Yet, reports indicate that some soldiers are taking these rumors seriously. Third Army officials have become alarmed lest such seriously. Tripid army officials have become marined test and silly tales adversely affect the military training program.

Everyone should be on the alert for harmful rumors. Report them, ascertain their origin and help to "spike" them. No good purpose was ever served by passing along rumors to someone

We advise every soldier who hears a rumor to ask: Who told you? Likely, it was the man in the next shower, or the man ahead in the "chow line." Is it possible that either is so chummy with the policy makers that he has personal access to their information

On the contrary, rumor-mongers are usually individuals who try to make others believe they know exactly what the Army planning even before the Army itself knows. They tell their stories so often they actually begin to believe them.

At any rate we seriously doubt any Fort Benning soldier has a pipeline to the Pentagon. Have you?

True Happiness Means Keeping God's Laws

BY CHAPLAIN (CAPT)
ROBERT F. MASHBURN
The Declaration of Independence so states that the pursuit of happiness is one of the unalienable rights endowed to man by the Creator. Yet it is a tragedy of our day that so few attain real happiness. David, sweet psalmist of Israel, sets forth in the first Psalm the formula for real and lasting happiness. The suggestions offered are both there are things he must not do as well as things he must

The first of the negative requirements of the happy man is that he must not walk in the counsel of the ungodly". That is, he must not be guided by those who leave God ly, he must not stand "in the of sinners."

frequently in the presence of those who break God's laws. The final negative aspect is that the happy man will not sit "in the seat of the scorn-ful". The steps have been progressively downward and this last is the worst of all. It is the position of the sceptic, the doubter, the person who has no faith in God nor man. The Psalmist is saying that in folnegative and positive. If a lowing such a course there man would be truly happy; is no hope of finding real hap-

The positive requirements for the attainment of happiness appear to be quite simple, and indeed they are. The Psalmist declares that happy man's "delight is in the law of the Lord."

Korea, is a troubled peninsula, and 1st Lt. William R. Ellis, is one of many who hope they will never have to set eyes on the island again.

Lieutenant Ellis, of the S-3 section, 3440th Area Service unit,

Lieutenant Ellis says the fighting in Korea was the most rugged he has experienced in his 12 years' service. As a member of the famed Second Infantry division, he saw war at its worst when the division was surrounded for two days. During that time it suffered one-third casualties.

"It's funny how near you can come to giving up," he re-ects. "There we were trapped. I had no hope of getting out and was just getting ready to destroy my wallet, all' my family pictures and all identification papers. I stopped and looked at them with a question what if I do get out of this alive? My mind seemed to rebel against the idea of doing away with my personal possessions, and I suddenly felt better, I decided to wait until things were worse. But we managed to escape."

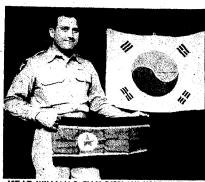

managed to escape."
Lieutenant Ellis has just been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for action against the enemy. He remembers the night,
It was 20 below zero. The enemy had overrun his unit's gun position, but by almost superhuman effort some of the men escaped. A few trucks mounted with guns and ammunition had to be left behind, for they could not be started in the freezing weather. Later, however, Lieutenant Ellis took a picked group back with him, and under enemy fire, rescued the much-needed equipment without losing a man. The real heartbreaker came in a later attack when some of the recovered equipment was a total loss.

In "Men Of Other Planets." Kenneth Heuer has compiled the findings and conclusions of scientists the world over into a book which can be easily understood by the layman.

It is intreesiting to note that of all the planets, Mars is contacted by most scientists the most likely inhabited by a form of life similar to Earth Scien tists have determined that Mars was created before Earth, and has progressed to a higher intellectual and scientific plane than the Earth-man.

Author Heuer accepts the theory that Earth has been under observation by inhabitants of other planets for 2.000 years or more. He likewise supports the contention that the so-called "fly. ing saucers" have been sighted most frequently in areas where uranium is mined, or where tomic power is created.

Whatever the belief of the reader, "Men Of Other Planets," is an absorbing book . . . filled with a multitude of scientific facts, plus a few of the author's own conclusions. If you hope someday to journey to Mars, you should read this book first You might change your mind and take the usual vacation to the seaside instead

PVT. GEORGE D. ROBEY JR.

Col. Perry Swindler, prexy of Fort Benning's rifle and pistol shooters brought us news that he and his men walked off with a load of awards at a recent shoot in Alabama. We congratulate the Benning team. It seems it happens nearly every match and we are proud that it does.

Last Tuesday morning members of the rifle and pistol teams were formally presented medals and merchandise won at the Alabama shoot by Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commanding general of the Infantry center.

A table in the general's office was heaped with the awards. When Colonel Swindler and his winners appeared before the general, the commanding general looked at the prizes and awards, then he looked at the men who stood before him. He jokingly asked, "What happened? Did you rob a hardware store?" Then he shook each men's hand and added

FAIRWAY INCIDENT

Never a duil moment when Babe Zaharias is entered in Recently, in the second round of the Women's Western Open golf championships, the Babe's temper 'slipped.' She bawled out a photographer and conceded a hole to Patty Berg, who eventually won the tourney.

Later, she became 'annoved' with her netticoat when it slipped down in view of the spectators. She called the girls in to form a circle around her.

in to form a circle around her.

The Babe stooped, wriggled out of the undergarment, handed it to another golfer, and continued the game.

FABULOUS HOGAN

Among the few champions who tower above the rest, one stands out most in modern sports. He is Ben Hogan, Golf-ing fans and the public cannot forget a man like, Hogan, His miraculous recovery from injuries suffered in an auto accident and his subsequent comeback is already a legend.

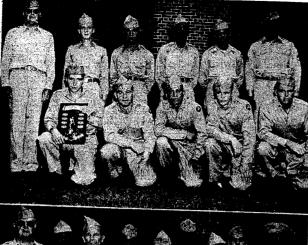

A motion picture is now touring the theaters. It's called "Follow the Sun" and it's all about this great champion.
We recommend it to our readers as a great story on film of a great man who is a credit to sports and the American

Character Guidance Is Vital To Preservation of Morals

The Army's continued emphasis on character guiadance has it evident that no half-way measures will be accepted. At every Post, large or small, Character Guidance Councils work diligently to improve the moral and spiritual values of the individual soldier. But is this enough? Responsibility for maintaining these high standards resis not nesponsionity for maintaining these figa standards rests not only with the Character Guidance Council, but with the unit commander, the ranking NCO's and the individual soldier him-hours to explain new regulations and how they affect the in-dividual soldier. He can instill in them a sense of duty and responsibility to their unit, to the Army and to their country. What of the NCO? Is he helping by setting a good example for the men who serve under him to follow? He might well ask himself that question, for the conduct of his men, whethas a finiser that question, for the conduct of his men, whether it he good or had, is a reflection on his own qualities of leadership. If the men in his platoon or his section have no confidence in his ability and if they do not respect him, he can hardly expect them to be good soldiers. Only a good NCO can guide his men along the proper path to moral and

A man in uniform is no different from his civilian counterpart, except that his life is dedicated to the science of warfare rather than to the science of business. This should not, and must not, change his moral and spiritual values. Despite his occupation; he still has a responsibility to civilized society which undergoes no metamorphosis simply because he exchanges mufti for olive drab.

Since the Army has pledged itself to a consistent and concerted effort to develop sound character in its soldiers, as well as to train them in the science of warfare, it is mandatory as to train them in the science of warfare, it is mandatory that there be renewed emphasis at every level to instill spiritual and moral qualities in all officers and enlisted men. Only in this way will the individual Serviceman be an effective member of the Army and a substantial citizen of his com-

Bouquet From Fort Jackson

The importance of our world famous Infantry School is recognized by the commander of at least one Third Army installation. In a recent article on Fort Jackson's Eighth Cytision Infantry School, The Jackson Journal quoted Maj. Gen. vision intantry school, the Jackson Journal quotes may cert. Harry Collins as having "repeatedly said that instruction at the school be equal to that at Fort Benning."

Of course, we don't believe any school in the nation could ever equal our own Infantry School. It has become symbolic ever equal our own Intantry School. It has become symbolic of America's determination not to be surpassed in the field of Infantry warfare by any other nation. Its fame has spread outside the borders of the U. S., until today students from practically every Allied Army in the world attend courses of astruction here.

Reports from the front lines in Korea, just as they did in Report From Washington World War II, praise the calibre of instruction received at the Infantry School. Most officers and enlisted men in Korea attribute the fact that they are alive today to, the superior training they received here.

Thanks for the compliment, Fort Jackson. We hope your own Infantry School prospers. Meanwhile, we are confident that our Infantry School will continue to be the beacon of learning, so far as Infantry training is concerned.

Allied-Commie Truce Teams Meet in Korea

Allied and Communist truce teams were meeting in Kae-song this week in an effort to hring to an end the 55-weekold Korean war. Negotiators started confering again after Gen. Matthew Ridgway had called a halt to the proceedings following the Red refu-sal to allow 20 UN correspondents to enter the truce city. Chinese and North Korean leaders, after several hours silence, bowed to Ridgway's demands. Although actual peace is not being discussed at this time, UN representatives said the outlook for peace was hopeful. Early this week there was every indication that warring factions would agree soon on an agenda and that peace talks would begin

Meanwhile, battle lines in Korea were quiet this week. Front dispatches revealed, however, that the Reds were continuing to build up their strength north of Kaesong. There was speculation that the Chinese and North Koreans would attack again if the peace talks failed. The Allies only contact with the enemy was through small patrols which roamed for miles north of the defense lines. The Air Force was still active, both day and night, bombing and strafing Red positions.

time and effort in furthering a most interesting hobby — breeding the Weimaraner strain.

Captain Malone, who is assigned to the Automotive department, was at Fort Benning for ROTC camp in the summer of 1899, when he saw the pictures and article on the very rare Weimaraner dog. Being a sportsman at heart, he decided to find out as much as he could about the breed. In hopes of one buying one of the dogs.

Some time later in Washington, he found a man who raised the famous breed. He went out to the kennel and came away a proud owner as well as a member of the Weimaraner Club of America. Lady Mischief and the captain have been the best of friends from the day he became her owner. With seven husky throughbreds, the mother is a sleek, shining gun metal color, The pupples are all silver blue.

The puppies are all silver blue.
Essentially a hunting dog, Lady Mischief is as gentle a house dog as you could find. Although she loves as gentie a house uog as you come find. Amnough she loves Mrs. Malone and the three children and is very patient with them, her deepest attachment is for her master. She is willing them, her deepest attachment is for her master. She is willing and sensitive and tries hard to please.

Captain Malone is interested in seiling some of the puppies, but it will not be an easy matter. They must be sold to people interested in furthering the breed who will care for them as prescribed by the laws of the Welmaraner Club of America.

The history of the Weimaraner dog is shrouded in secrecy. It goes back to 1810, and is known to be a descendent of the Red Schwaissehundle, famous in German records and tradi tions for it's nose, It has not been possible so far to obtain tions for it's nose. 1): In 1929, Howard Knight, an American sportsman, joined the club and imported a dog which became the foundation breeding stock in America. He never sold any of his dogs although he gave a few to his hunting friends.

In 1943 these breeders banded together, and the Weimaraner Club of America held its first meeting in 1942. Since that time membership has grown from the original 20 to 3,000. The club treels that people who own the dogs have a responsibility to keep the breed as pure as the original. The club urges breeders to be conscientious in destroying all litters resulting from cross breedings and to destroy each animal in the litter which shows serious faults, such as markings other than the accented white blaze on the chast markings other than the accepted white blaze on the chest and toes, and bad disposition.

Finally she teamed with Frank Sedgman of Australia to defeat Mervyn Rose and Nancye Rolley of Australia to with from Sender and Sender Sen Rose and Nancye Bolton of Australia to defeat Mervyn Rose and Nancye Bolton of Australia to win the final card in her "grand slam", the mixed doubles championship. Doris duplicated the feat accomplished by Miss Brough last year, Alice Marble and Bobby Riggs in 1939.

Doris won over Shirley Fry 6-1 and 6-0. She was presented the winner's trophy by the Duchess of Kent.

That's a good bit of sporting news to us. A girl with a life time ambition of winning the Wimbledon meets really deserves a hand. She worked hard to make the grade and serves a name. One worken nare to make the grace and fought in the face of serious competition. Women's Army Corps Marks 9 Years Service to Country

In celebrating its ninth anniversary this month, the Women's Army Corps is proving how wrong was its opposition back in 1942, when Congress established the Army's Women's Auxiliary. 1954, when Congress established the Army's women's Auxidary. Some die-hards denounced the proposal on the grounds that women were emotionally unsuitable for military service, that they would make a difficult mobilization job even more diffi-

During the past nine years, however, these women in uni-Juring the past nine years, nowever, these women in un-form have built a proud history as part of the Army team. They have earned a place in the Regular Army and have served in peacetime as in war, with devotion to duty and courextreme hardships.

Composed entirely of volunteers, the Women's Army Corps represents American womanpower trained to do the job of contributing to our security anywhere—in 146 non-combatant jobs -including the trouble spots of the world.

Members of the WAC are integrated into all but combat operations of the Army. They fill the jobs formerly assigned to male soldiers, thereby releasing men for combat duty. Of the 11,000 WACs presently in uniform, 1,500 are serving in support of the United Nations troops in the Far East. Others are on duty in Europe and in the Caribbean.

The job these women are doing has prompted many commanders, both in the U.S. and overseas, to request more of them. This need is solid proof that womanpower in the Army has proved liself, that it is essential to the over-all effec-

U.S. Defense Program May Be Stepped Up

step up its defense program sharply even if there is a Korean truce. President Truman told Congress this week that lussia's attempt to "black mail the free world into submission" may cause some revised thinking in Governmen and defense circles. He urged that there be no let down on military appropriations, aid or economic controls legislation

"when and if the fighting in Korea ceases." He added that what Congress does or does not do in the next few weeks may decide the ultimate fate of this country and its fate or free Allies.

The body of Adm. Forrest ations, who died of a heart atwhile on a mission Franco Spain, arrived in this country this week for burial in Arlington National Cemetery. A successor to Sherman had not been announced early this week. His work toward closer cooperation with Spain will be making every effort to have carried on without change, a Government spokesman said.

Iran was this week reported ready to open new talks with Britain over the oil dispute. Karin Sanjabi, minister of edu cation in Iran, told newsmen his Government has found a formula for a new start on negotiations with Britain broke down a month ago. Georgia's growing telephone lines...

LIFE-LINES OF GEORGIA PROGRESS!

Fast-growing Georgia depends more and more on the telephone. Its economic and social life are geared to it. Last year Georgians made a billion local calls.

Today Georgians can call more than twice as many local telephones as they could ten years ago, and the service is better. Yet the overall price of telephone service has gone up less than one-third as much as prices in nearly $20 million of new facilities to provide the expansion and improvement of telephone service that is so essential to Georgia's progress, and to national defense.-Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph

A busy chase for champlonships is in progress here. Last week golf held top hand. Fort Benning's finest golfers took to the links in the Infantry Center Enlished Golf tournament at the Sand Hill course.

Officials of the busy Athletic Office were present to help gold officials judge the event. The unsung heroes who work under the genial Capt. William Fannin, Athletic Officer, have a big job to do and they do it well. We congratulate them all for the good work they are doing for athletics at Fort Benning.

Six Medal of Honor Holders Stationed At Benning

The Infantry Center, proud of its Marshalls and Bradleys and Eisenhowers is no less proud today of its six wearers of the Experimences is no less proud today of its six waters of the Congressional Medal of Honor. They, too, are great soldiers to whom a nation looks with love and pride. To soldiers of the Infantry, at this great post which is the Infantry's home the modest blue ribbon, with its sprink the meantry's nome the modest blue ribbon, with his spring-ling of white stars, has deep, deep meaning. The Congression-al Medal of Honor is the highest award in the power of a nation to bestow; President Truman has told more than one distinguished soldier, in awarding the Congressional Medal, that he would be proud if they could exchange places.

Infantrymen, more than any soldiers in any branch of servdee, are familiar with the qualities of manhood which earn a decoration for heroism on the battlefield. Other soldiers, once they have witnessed the combat rigors of the Infantry, have stated with heartfelt conviction that every Infantrymen in bat tte is a hero.

To stand out among Infantry in such a manner as to deserve the Nation's highest tribute is to be a man among men and a hero, indeed.

Assigned to this post which has been the military ho of America's greatest soldiers and commanders there are at then six men who wear the hallowed Conpresent no less than six men who wear the hallowed Con-gressional Medal. Its white stars on their blue field are the reflection of raw, red courage and bright red blood on bat-tlefields dark red with the blood of fighting American men. second most coveted decoration, (among them are Maj. Gen. John H. Church, the post commander, and Capt. Hugo S. Sims, commander of Company M, 325th Airborne Infantry, an ex-Congressman from South Carolina) and countless hun dreds who have been decorated for combat heroism are part of The Infantry Center of the Army.

These six are heroes, worthy of the honor paid them by all of us. But don't forget, you Infantry soldier—you, too, are a hero, serving your country and bringing honor to it and to yourself, when you do your duty as it appears before you. You are deserving of honor and self-satisfaction when you do the best that's in you to be a good soldier wherever you are assigned. You, and the six Congressional Medal of Honor wearers, are part of the proud tradition of The Infantry.

Treasure That Army Car

General of the Army Omar Nelson Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is the highest-ranking officer in America's armed forces-but his car is not as good as yours, if you drive an official car at Fort Benning.

An appeal by the Department of Defense for funds for new car for General Bradley this week disclosed that the eminent chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff—the wearer of five stars—rides through Washington from the Pentagon to the White House and back again, often as not, in a 1942 model sedan. That nine-year-old automotive relic would not bring more than $800 on today's market, it was said.

-take another look at the o.d. vehicle you pilot over Fort Benning's byways. That's a pretty good automobile you have there, soldier! Take care of it!

Military Chiefs Point to Threat of Total War

There seems to be friction between Sen. Tom Connally of place reservists who will be negotiations are being discuss-Texas and William C. Foster, Economic Cooperation administrator, over a proposed $8,500,000,000 foreign aid program. Storm warnings are being set up in the capitol among pros and cons of the proposed bill pending the outcome of Senator Connally's opinion that the United States cannot subsist itself or preserve its own freedoms and take care of the whole world at the same time.

Military chiefs are emphasizing the increasing danger of an all - out war in talks with Congress. They plan to call up 430,000 men within a year and add several billions to a whopping 60 billion dol-lar proposed military budget for this year. The new men, who will come from the National Guard, draft, and reserves, are scheduled to re- lied bombardments while trucwithin the next few months.

Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate to the United Nations, said that the "peace through deeds" United Nations will go to the rescue if Yugoslavia is attacked by Russia. He added, however, that he does not believe such an attack is imminent but stressed a program adopted by United Nations members-"all for one and one for all."

Sports Sidelights

BY PVT. GEORGE D. ROBEY JR.

Little League baseball is underway over most of the na-

This interest in recreation for youngsters by big time base-all and community civic leaders presents a situation on which als column is proud to comment.

In and around Fort Benning and Columbus, there are four little Leagues in operation, each composed of four teams. The National League contains many boys from Fort Benning who live in the area from 13th street to 13th avenue and Buena Vista Road to the river.

Teams in the National league are known as the Giants, Cubs, Dodgers and Cardinals. All games in the National league are scheduled at McKenney Field in Baker Village, on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at 6 p. m. At the end of the season the winning Little League teams go to the district playoffs. Winners then enter the state meets. and then the crowning climax—playoffs at Williamsport, Pa. home of the Little League.

Little League baseball is handled in a very business-like manner. Three days of practice are scheduled prior to the season. Team managers take notes on players they would like to bave on their teams. Each manager selects 16 names, and submits them to the players' agent in a closed meeting of majasgers and the players' agent. Then the names are put up in an auction.

PLAYERS ARE BOUGHT

Rules of the Little League provide that each team manager is allotted 38,000 points to be used in place of money for the purchase of players. Managers who over - bid and use up their total points would be broke and have to take players that were not bid upon in the auction. Each manager "buys" 13—players. Six. of them are on the serve crew while 12 carry uniforms.

Little League equipment is different in some respects from regular baseball equipment. Bats and bails are light erin weight and some of the players' gear is of a smaller size. In Columbus and Fort Beaning, the merchants donated money for this equipment. Their money bought the 48 uniforms per Little League, a full catcher's gear, bats, bails and other incidentals necessary to the game.

There are a few changes in the rules of the youngsters' game. Rules resemble softball regulations even though real baseballs are used. For example, a runner cannot steal a base until the pitched ball passes the batter. If a pitcher burls a complete game, he is not permitted to pitch until he's rested 60 hours.

Changes in the diamond fit the youngsters. The distance between bases is .00 feet and it is .44 feet from the mound to the plate. A full game lasts for six innings instead of the regular nine for other games.

SOLDIERS ARE HELPING

In addition to the fine jobs they do in athletics and heing good soldiers, many Fort Benning personnel are taking time out during off - duty hours to work with the Little League enthusiasts.

M-Sgt. Ray Tousignout is president of the National League Sgt. Joe Smith post baseball star, is vice - president ar Mrs. W. P. Coulter is the secretary - treasurer. Charlie Boo as player's agent.

Team managers are Bill DeLong, well - known in the athletic circles of Fort Benning; Sergeant Smith, J. L. Jackson and Gerald Lunsford.

Umpires volunteer for positions in the league. Sgt. Bill Lee holds down the chief umpire's spot. Working with him are Sgt. Bill Boyce, Sgt. Bill Welton, W. R. Cox and A. T. Mathis.

SKI EXPERT STATIONED HERE

Think it'll snow? Well, hardly. Espically at Fort Benning in the summer time.

Pvt. Robert C. Peterson, 124th company of the Second Student regiment, longs to skim over the crisp snow down steep mountain sides and through the brisk winter air. He was a ski instructor before he was inducted into the Army last April nine, teaching the fine art at the famous Sun Valley, Idaho.

The tall, blonde skier is of Norweigian and Swedish descent and has skimmed at break - neck speeds down such mountains as Mt. Ranier, Mt. Baker, Grouse Mountain, and Vancouver. Peterson learned to ski when he was 15 years old. He began his professional career in 1947 when he and some friends were looking for work. They chanced upon the noted resort at just the right time with the right ability. The job gave Peterson a chance to meet many celebrities of stage, acreen. and radio. screen, and radio.

He has put away his skils for a little while, but it won't e long until he'll again be able to take to the snow and the wide-pen spaces.

Publicity Is Our Greatest Asset

The following editorial, written by Captain Alton C. Parker, originally appeared in The Bayonet of Jan. 12, 1950. It is reprinted in part at this time because of its pointedness, and because we believe the point bears repetition.

The army belongs to the people. It's a member of their team for security. The army's ohief responsibility is to the people. The chief job of the army's public information program is to

Our responsibility is to keep the public informed. When a soldier is enrolled in the Infantry School or assigned to a unit at Fort Benning, his family wants to know what his life is like How's his food? How does he sleep? How long does he work? What's he doing? Is the army taking care of him? Can he go to church services in the field? That family will want know and is entitled to know. That's a part of the public

Public Information also has a responsibility to our troops. We must keep them informed of what's going on in their army. We must interpret policies for them; answer rumors with facts, keen them abreast of our newest weapons and Public Information does not attempt to form public opinion. This is contrary to democratically established policy. However, It is being more and more recognized that for sound govern-ment and military policies to grow out of democratic thinking and action, public opinion must informed. And in thus serving the people to the utmost limits of national security, we serve the army - and vice versa.

"What's all this leading up to? Just this. As the Infantry Cenfer of the Unied States — home of the Infantry School, an internationally known institution—everything we do here is news -news to which the public is entitled.

Here's what we think publicity will do for the Infantry Center and its units: 1 - Build good will.

3-Help gain public support.

3-Add to our reputation.
4-Help interpret The Infantry center in Columbus and Phe-5-Help educate the general public.

6-Build morale in the units themselves.

Like rifles, words are weapons. They can be shot out to overcome negative public opinion about the Infantry Center relations. Public relations is everyone's job. That holds true from the top ranking general down to the youthful recruit.

It's obvious the Infantry Center public information office can't cover adequately all the units on this huge post. Unit commanders should start an aggressive public information campaign aimed at one thing—to publicize their units and the men who make up those units.

We strongly believe that there is no substitute for genuine news or feature articles that will aid newspaper editors and enlighten their readers.

enlighten their readers.
Yes, public information (or public relations, II you want to call it that) is everyone's job. If we are to gain public support for the army, the public must know and understand what we are doing. We must serve that public or we have no public.

Proper Worship Is First Duty of Every Christian

DY CHADLAIN (CAPT) L. M. DURDEN

It is quite possible that we are expending too much en-ergy on trying to induce men be religious and too little me in telling them how. Exhortation is a much easier process than teaching.

I am persuaded that the majority of men believe in God, accept Christ as a spiritual authority, and would like to do 'something about it, but they are in doubt as to just what they ought to do.

It is one thing to go into the market place and tell men to labor. But if they know nothabout horticulture they may do far more damage than good. I suspect that the greatthe Christian ideal lies in the tailure to tell workers what

Undoubtedly the first duty a Christian is to worship Christian it may have been his need to hear sermons, but once having made the decision if missed his vocation as a true disciple of Christ.

"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God," is an obliga-tory command to all Christians. Time has taught us that the best place to worship God is in His house that has been dedjosted to his service. If a man will spend ten minutes in his closet each day in private prayer and then take his preparation to the House of God he will find his vague thoughts about God will take form in a definite performance of Christian duty. Mere thought or emotion do not build up character unless it leads to action. Since worship is a Christian obligation we do not discharge it by thinking about it. It involves an act in which we really offer ourselves, our souls and hodies to God

After all the real test of the devotion of a people to God will be reflected in their lives. One should not treat this habit of worshipping God as a casual thing dependent upon

Christian should be, "I lift up my heart in adoration and of-fer my soul and body in un-tion with His sacrifice for me. I seek His presence and regrace and receive His bless ing on my feeble behalf." My culred to fulfill this condition

Thus worship hecomes a part of my life and not merely something I approve of in a ly a Christian who does not conscientiously worship God does not regard it as a very imperative duty.

The most important thing we God. Therefore we cannot afford to relegate this act to con-venient occasions but rather we must put it first in our duties as Chrisctians. Great bene-fit and immeasurable results can be gained from the worship of God, but to discover this for yourself, you must try

And what of these inkpot and pen people where do they come from and who is responsible for them? Just what goes into the making of a popular comic strip? The best place to find out is from one of the artists who work on Capt. William G. Crooks, 3003rd Station

Complement, reserve training unit, who recently completed two weeks active duty at Fort Benning, has been associated with Leslie Turner for about five years. Turner is responsible for the adventures of Captain Easy and his friends.

Crooks studied at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts for two years specializing in cartoon work. Later he worked on an Orlando paper as cartooniat. He was overseas 15 months during

After his discharge from the army, he became associated with Leslie Turner. The strip was originated by Roy Crane, with Turner as his assistant. When Crane moved to another his assistant.

The business of creating people with definite characteristics and reactions becomes an interesting and time consuming experience, according to Captain Crooks. Working with Turner has illuminating to the young captain for he finds his bost to be a very exacting man with high standards. When the whole story and plot is decided upon, separate series are worked out, then the work on the details begin. Turner insists on everything from the clothes and background to the speech of his characters be correct as far as possible.

Both artists maintain studios in their homes and do mos of their work there. Although Turner is responsible for and writes most of his own story and dialogue, he frequently calls on Crooks for a full plot with details. Captain Crooks thinks they have a fine system worked out to keep the attip from becoming monotonous. If a whole plot is worked out around Captain Easy and his adventures for a series, a tie - in is set up to bring Wash Tubbs and his family for a series, a tie - in is set up to bring Wash Tubbs and his family

CAPTAIN EASY GREETS FANS AT FORT BENNING CATIAIN EAST GREETS FANS AT FORT BERNING for a human interest side of the story for the next episode. After the plot is worked out end each strip outlined, the strip must be completed and in the hands of the editor four weeks before the date of publication. Turner generally roughs out the strip in pencil then turns it over to Crooks to finish it up. Since the boss is a stickler for details, a lot of research and checking goes into each drawing and dialogue is written and rewritten. On numerous occasions the drawings have been destroyed and started again

Although his mind is continually casting around for a dif-ferent angle to bring to the strip, his working days bound by inkpots and brushes and guided by deadlines, Captain Crooks wouldn't change his job for anything. He is definitely "sold" on his work and says he has gotten in the habit of thinking of evenis and helpenings as the characters in the strip would.

Re claims that although he and Turner have been drawing these tangons little people for years they have a way of being always as interesting and exciting as the first time he ever handled the strip.

Selections for All-American lacrosse players are made by a committee from sech school competing in the sport.

Lacrosse is played by two teams with 10 men on each team. The playing field is 110 yards long with goals similar to lice hockey goals located at each end of the field. Each team contains a goalle and three defensive players who remain several yards in front of their goal. Three offensive players are placed near the opponents' goal and three offensive and defensive players are at midfield. Only the midfield players are allowed to cross the midfield stripe.

Each player is equipped with a long stick with a net on one end. The object of the game is to catch a rubber ball and throw it through the opponents' goal. It's a good trick if you can do it. And if a team can, it nets one point.

"The defensive player tries to knock the ball out of the offensive player's net with his stick and that's when the game gets rough," said Lieutenant Meyer who was West

Point's captain and midfield player last spring.

"The only protection a player has is an arm pad", added
Lieutenant Markham, offensive player on the same squad. "At the Academy, everyone learns to play the game." said feutenant Meyer.

Playing lacrosse for some 40 years. West Point was a co-champion this year with Princeton University. Princeton was undefeated until the cadets played them and won, 15-12. Lieutenant Markham was high scorer with five points in the Princeton shindly. It was his heet dame at the noint

You'll Have Adequate Housing Only If You're a Good Tenant

The Congressional Committee investigating housing conditions adjacent to several major military installations has not seen fit to include the Columbus area, which speaks well for the local citizenry. Investigations were made after complaints that Servicemen were being subjected to rent gouging and substandard quarters because they wanted to have their fam ilies with them. Although there will probably never be an ideal housing situation in any community near a large Army post, it would seem obvious that cooperation between Columbus home owners and military personnel at Fort Benning has been exemplary.

Many Columbus families, who would not ordinarily be classed as landlords, have opened their homes to Servicemen and News Briefs their families as a patriotic gesture. They are not interested in getting rich at the expense of the soldier, but rather in helping him and his family lead as normal an existence a possible under the circumstances.

This does not mean that there are not cases in which the soldier and his family are being charged high rents for one room with kitchen privileges, but these are exceptions to the Service families can help insure that these good housing conditions continue simply by being good tenants. Many home owners refuse to rent available rooms or apartments to military personnel in the belief that the property will not be cared for properly. There have been reports that some military famvacated housing in such a deplorable condition that renting it has become a liability rather than an asset.

It is the responsibility of individual families to take care of rental property in the same manner they would th Other families will follow them to Fort Benning long after they have gone on to other assignments.

Don't make it difficult for these others to find a place to live. Every soldier wants his family with him at his new station. He wouldn't be human if he didn't

Daily Bath, Frequent Uniform Change Necessary in Summer

Hot weather always poses a problem in bodily sanitation When the temperature hovers close to the 100-degree mark day in and day out, we are bound to perspire freely, with the result that uniforms lose their shape and poisons secreted from the body dry up and emit offensive odors.

Oftentimes these odors are unnoticed by the offending individual, but not by the people with whom he comes in contact Body odors are especially noticeable in places of assembly, such as theaters and mess halls, where many people are concentrated in small areas.

This unpleasantness can be eliminated quite easily. First of all, a daily bath is mandatory in hot weather. There is plenty of water available for bathing purposes, and soap is one of the most inexpensive necessities that can be bought.

Frequent bathing, however, is not enough. A change in uniform as often as possible is also necessary. It should be remembered that most people can not wear the same uniform longer than three days at a time. It won't do much good to take a bath unless the individual changes both his inner and outer garments several times a week

It's inconceivable that anyone deliberately tries to be offensive, but too many are unconsciously causing others to run in the opposite direction. The individual must take steps to remedy the situation. Not even your best friend will tell you

In looking for a new column topic, the thought occurred that Fort Benning must have some interesting monuments and markers.

However just across the street, to the left if the entrance of the Officera' Mess, we found kent what we were looking for. Set in a flower mind tree picture frame and desily glimpsed them the street is a marble gateway. The gateway and a plaque are mounted on a elevated plot of ground outlined by a brick wall. The plot is set in a little arbor with maize - like flower beds alternating with circular walks. There e four vine covered arched entrances to the enclosure.

We walked up to the gateway and read the inscription on the plaque, "Presented to The Infantry School by the 15tb U. S. Infantry (The "Can Do" Regiment) on its return to the United States March 24, 1938, after over a quarter-century of service in China." I stepped nearer the gateway. It is made entirely of marble and is in the square Chinese style. The upright pillars are carved with lilles and lotus blossoms.

The top is inscribed in Chinese and English: "A rememberance of the golden deeds done by Officers and Men of the United States Forces in China during civil strife, 1924."

There is a poem and signature of 19 individuals also inscribed.

I checked to find out the history of the gateway. The 15th Infantry regiment, Third Infantry division, was sent to Tient Infantry regiment, Third Infantry division, was sent to Teensin, China, as part of the international force that had been maintained there since the Boxer uprisings in the early 1900's. During 1924-1925 the country was torn by civil war. The 15th Infantry patrolled the area around Tientisn to protect people from marauding bands. With the 15th in command the inhabitants were relatively happy and peaceful.

The Chinese villagers sought a token of appreciation to give the regiment, and presented to the regiment at their Tientsin barracks a marble gateway. It was installed on the regimental parade ground and became the center for ceremonial assemblies.

The presentation ceremony took place in April, 1925. The The presentation ceremony took place in April, 1923. The regiment was drawn up in a square. EVERY MAN HIS SWORD By Irving Schwartz DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY, PUBLISHER

By M-Sgt. Robert Groover

Many novels have been writ-ten about the lynching of Negroes in the South. The majority have been only fair, be-cause the relating of race prejudice with a southern locale has grown to be old stuff to most readers of modern fiction most readers of modern riction.
While there are undoubtedly still many persons curious about racial prejudice, it would seem that their appetite could have been sufficiently satisfied by such authors as Erskine Caldwell, Thomas Dixon, James Faulkner and the many others who have used the subject as the chief tonic of their books. But for those readers whose appetites for such reunwhetted, Irving vartz has authored a book fled, "Every Man His main iff, some nondescript characters and a lynching. The only switch in this novel seems to be that a white man is lynched in return for the lynching of a Negro. This provides even more fuel to the racial prejudice fire, and more pages to the book.

The town in this piece would be anywhere in the southern states. Its name is Jemimah, and the population probably does not number more than two thousand. The principals are: the county sheriff, the local theater manager, a soda-jerk and the usual number of unsavory citizens. In quick succession, the author changes his emotional line from brutality to homosexuality. Yet the emotions are intangible, and so finely veiled in prose that it is hard to establish firmly the definite aims and charecter of the principals. Only in the court-room scenes, when the killers are being tried for the lynchings, does the author write in an understandable and plausible style.

"Every Man His Sword" is the first book of Author Sch-wartz. That he has a great amount of talent for telling a yarn is without doubt. That he chose the topic he did in writ-ing his first book is a little dissappointing. To the realisticminded reader, there can be no doubt that racial prejudice does still exist. But the racial prejudice of 1951 and the predjudice of 50 years ago is quite different. Yet, the author placed his novel in 1951, and wrote of a 1900 situation with only slight variations.

This book is recommended reading for the lover of the abstract, and the reader who likes vivid characterizations without realistic basis.

BY PVT. GEORGE D. ROBEY JR.

Climaying a great season of post baseball, the 325th Regimental Combat Team and the First Student regiment pre-sented a thrilling playoff series for Fort Benning's 1951 hampionship.

After taking the first game by a wide margin, First Student fans figured the series was on ice. The tables were turned as the 325th Falcons came back in the second game to tie up the series.

The odds were still with the Students as the third game began last Wednesday night at Gowdy Field. The Falcons exloded in the third to not only tie the game but to snare a four - run lead.

That was when the fans jumped to their feet. Old "Pop" Hill, whose son is now in Korea, is one of the Falcons' most avid fans. He lost most of the use of his legs years ago in a railroad accident. The only way he is able to get around is with the assistance of a cane.
"Pop" was so excited that he jumped up many times without pid of his cane. Then when the game subsided somewhat he realized he was standing alone. It's a great game and a greater fan who can forget such a handicap when the play fans. He didn't miss that man game of the series.

Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commanding general of the Infantry Center, is another of post baseball's most enthusiastic fans. He didn't miss that final game of the series.

When asked what he thought of the game, he replied that he couldn't really enjoy his favorite game that night.

On the first night, the general rooted for the 325th. He lost.

On the second night, his cheers went to the First Student regiment. He lost, So on that final night of play he didn't know who to cheer

"When I can't root for a team, I can't enjoy the game," he joked.

And so baseball fades away for another year leaving a memory of one of the most hectic Benning series playoffs ever to be recorded.

There was a sequal for the 325th's championships. Last Friday morning was trophy collecting time. Lt. Col. Kenneth Grimes special services officer, congratulated the players on their fine work as athletes and soldiers.

Lt. Col. Robert R. Linvill, deputy chief of staff, and Maj.

L. B. Johnson, assistant G-1, also were present.

Capt. William Fannin Chief of post athletics with the Spec-lal Service Office, organized the presentation ceremony. Without the assistance and good will of the genial captain and his men such a successful season would not have been pos-

WORLD'S CHAMPION IS REGULAR GUY

We have noticed that with most champions, the greater we have noticed that with most champions, the greater they are the nicer they are. A couple of weeks ago, we went out to the post Rifle and Pistol club to have a little chat with Huelet L. "Joe" Benner, the world's champion with a pistol.

Col. Perry D. Swindler, chief of the All - Army team with which Benner is practicing, introduced us briefly. Immediately we felt as it we had known this expert for years. Benner's friendly face shines with character and a wonderful per-

It's no wonder that even Benner's competition is pulling for him to win. Benner's tranquil manner and pleasant voice captiv ate all who know him. And Benner just says that he is only sountry boy who got lucky. We don't believe that.

Although he had natural talent, still it took many hours of hard work to become as good as he is.

FIVE SHOTS—ONE BULLET HOLE

We asked Joe to hlast a "close group" so we could get a picture of the target for the Bayonet. He picked up his Army fortyfive and fired five bullets through the same hole. We've got apicture of it to prove it. That was one of those times we got more than we'd bargained for.

Benner makes shooting look that easy. He takes a rather wide stance with his body about 90 degrees to his target then he slowly raises his pistol. And that's all there is to it.

Another thing we like about Benner is the way he enjoys his game. He said that he just shoots for the fun of it, and enjoys shooting more than anything else. Benner fires matches because he likes it. He really doesn't shoot for trophies and awards as the ultimate. The world's champlon enjoys getting out on the range and meeting other shooters chatting with them, firing with them and improving his own

His ambition is to get even better. He wants to compete in the Olympics next year in Oslo, Norway. Benner was second in the 1948 Olympics. The next time he'll shoot for the top spot. As "Joe" says, "If I'm lucky, maybe I can do it. And if I should get lucky again, I want to win the world's title once more. I would be the only man ever to win the honor twice."

We think Joe Benner, a regular guy and a fine champion

Readers of this column are welcome to meet and talk with Joe Benner. He'll be out at the Rifle and Pistol club ranges until the 15th of this month. He's a great guy to know and it'll be good to look back in future years and say, "I met Joe Benner, a champion among champions."

Army Regulars Are Backbone Of U.S. Strength and Power

The rapid turnover of military personnel makes it impera-tive that the Army retain a large group of high calibre Regulars who can serve as a nucleus for training inductees, Re-servists and National Guardsmen as combat soldiers. This will hardly be possible unless a considerable number of non-Regular Army men now eligible for senaration decide to remain in their military organization. Every good Army unit is built around a sturdy, loyal group of men. It is, therefore, of utmost importance in maintaining a well-trained, efficient Army that as much of this "backbone" of our detense as possible be held

There are many advantages in an Army career, not the least of which is above average pay. Everything considered, military pay is more than adequate for comfortable living. ion, there are continuous increases, and at the present time there is a bill pending in the Congress which would au thorize an over-all pay raise throughout the Army.

Military personnel, and their families, receive free medical and dental care, which alone makes this business of a Regular Army career well worth looking into. The cost of sickness has risen proportionately with the cost of living.

Regulars also get a reenlistment bonus for every three-year "hitch". We don't know of any other profession which offers a bonus to its members just to stay on the job.

Furthermore, opportunities for advancement in the Army are commensurate with the individual's ability. For a soldier, there no such thing as reaching a stalemate, at least not until he has attained the five-star pinnacle of success. Oftentimes especially during relatively peaceful periods, promotions are "frozen." This situation usually adjusts itself, as it has during the current expansion program, and those with a little pa tience find the extra time in grade actually beneficial

One of the most attractive lures the Army has to offer is its generous retirement policy, which provides a truly hand-some salary after only 20 years of service. The pay is even higher after 30 years. Perhaps in no comparable the retirement pay so high as it is in the Army. To make it even more attractive, retired Army personnel are entitled to many privileges granted active duty personnel

We could go on and on, listing the advantages available and opportunities open to the career soldier, but we would only be repeating what has been said many times before. We don't at the same time, deny the existence of many inconveniences in Army life, but we must all be able to accept the bitter with the sweet. True, the career soldier must be ready a all times to move from one post to another, even from one country to another. But, these transfers are a blessing as well as a curse. We know of no civilian job which provides such spice as does the Army. Nor do we know of any civilian job which allows for so much interesting and educational travel, all at no cost to the soldier!

· If you are to be eligible for separation soon, we'd advise investigate the possibility of a Regular Army career. You have nothing to lose. And certainly, you have a great

Civilian Response Regarding Housing Is Most Encouraging

On Friday of last week the Citizens and Military Council of Columbus, Phenix City, and Fort Benning passed a resolution which has touched off a drive to alleviate the housing shortage. This will be welcome news to the many personnel of Fort Benning who have been unable to find suitable family quarters, and will provide those ordered to Fort Benning with a more hopeful picture than has been offered for some time. The resolution of the Council asks the full support of civic, business, professional and religious leaders in a program deopen homes of Columbus and Phenix City for rental to Service personnel with families. .

The resolution has received favorable comment in the local press, and seems to have touched a chord of civic responsive-

This act of good faith on the part of the leaders of our neighboring communities calls for a similar display of good faith on the part of those personnel of Fort Benning who may become the beneficiaries of the program. There is reason to believe that some property owners have been reluctant to rent to Service personnel because of doubt that their properties would be properly taken care of. This doubt has probably not een completely ill-founded.

Columbus and Phenix City have given evidence of a feeling into the Army in 1950.

Twenty-three-year-old Stoker started his varied and interesting career when he was a youngster. His father, a lover of horses, bought him a pony as a gift when he was in the first grade. A bunch of kids in his home of Overland Park, Kans., formed a club to get together over the week-ends and ride. Each youngster tried his best to be ton rider.

About that time 'Pinky' Barnes, a cowboy actor, came through the town and started a riding and roping school. One of the first to enroll was Stoker because his pony was so balky he couldn't stay in the saddle. Until that time he had never thought much about roping. Now, however, he became interested in the

BY PVT. GEORGE D. ROBEY JR.

Reports coming in from Col. Perry D. Swindler indicate a fine showing for the United States Army pistol team which competed in regional meets at Jacksonville, Fla. last Sunday. The All-Army team that trained here from the first to the 18th of this month journeyed to the Sunny State for one of the biggest matches in the pistol shooters' circles. From the National Processing States in the National Processing States in the States and the States are represented to the in the National Processing States in the National Processing States in the National Processing States and Processing States and Processing Processing States in the National Processing States and Processing States and Processing States and Processing Processing States and Processing Processing States and Processing Processing States and Processing of the biggest matches in the pistol shooters' circles. From that competition, nine shooters were picked to fire in the National matches in San Francisco this September.

It took some mighty fine gun pointing on the part of the All-Army experts to rank second in all the matches of the regional championships.

Even though there were no contestents from Fort Benning to quality for the big team at the 'Frisco meets, we are none the less proud. This column wishes to extend a pat on the back to the boys who did their best and worked like Trojans to help make the United States Army pistol team one of the best in the nation.

There's always another year and many more matches and we feel sure that these fine pistol shooters will make even a better showing in the future.

Nice going boys and keep up the good work.

We are, as always, proud of our own Fort Benning pistol team who journeyed to the Orange State to put in their own bld. They came out with their share of awards and honors, placing first in several events in the aggregates and copping a first in the .38 calibre sharpshooter class.

Following on the heels of the United States Army pistol team, we found the riflemen as enthused over their game as the pistol shooters were. We couldn't help but think of the fine congregation of shooters that Fort Benning personnel have had the opportunity to see in the last month.

FOOTBALL FOR A CHANGE

FOOTBALL FOR A CHANGE

It's hard to visualize a gridiron swept by bracing cold winds and those pretty autumn leaves whipping around when the current temperature hovers in the nineties and the old brow gets soggier and soggier. However, Tom Gunning, on the sports desk reports that football togs have been handed out to units here in contemplation of a season ahead. Hoisting our perspiring bulk over to the clip files we leafed through some dusty reminders of the glory that was shed on the Fort Benning gridiron in 1943 and 44.

The 82nd Airborne division has recently been ordered into the field against the Tri-Gon Aggressor force in Exercise Southern Pine. It seems as though the aggressor force is forging ahead too swiftly for the defending U. S. troops and are obtaining some nice footholds in and around Myrtle Beach, S. C., scene of the seaborne landings.

The 82nd division, part of the added reinforcements needed to drive them back into the sea, will place the total number of men participating in the mock warfare to over 100,000 troops. This was reported in the Fort Bragg PARA-GLIDE.

Will You Be Another Statistic, Or Will You Be Here Tuesday?

You expect to be around? Oh, sure. Maybe you plan to use that day to recuperate after the long Labor Day week end. So you expect to be around. Perhaps you will. But then

Maybe you won't be around. Because at least two persons from Fort Benning will probably be killed in traffic actidents sometime during that long weekend. Says who? Says very good authority - the authority of statistical prediction. Elsewhere in this issue of The Bayonet, your Commanding

General refers to this matter of statistics, and makes some cogent remarks concerning our responsibility for proving that figures can lie. The statistical figures tell us what will probably happen. But it is by no means inevitable that two persons from Benning will be fatally mangled in highway accidents this weekend.

The men who figure up the statistics and give out the predictions are banking on one thing: that as many Americans will behave stupidly on this Labor Day as have behaved in that fashion on previous holidays. This is primarily a statistic on the incidence of stupidity.

There seems to be no other conclusion, for the figures tell us that highway fatalities are seldom due to mechanical failure or to bad roads. The failure is almost always a human failure.

There's the gay fellow who thinks gasoline and alcohol make And the hot-rod cowboy who thinks he can pass anything on the road, and dearly loves to try to make the pass on a curve . . .

And the dolt who places more faith in his horn than in

And the practical - joker who likes to see darkness descend so he can amuse himself by kicking on his bright lights whenever another car approaches . . .

And . . . but why go on? You've seen them all, these charter members of the legion of the criminally stupid.

You've seen them. But you are not one of them. There will not be one of them behind the wheel of your car.

There doesn't have to be. It doesn't have to be your own stupidity that kills you. All you have to do is be on a certain highway at the moment some character full of exhileration and acceleration starts to pass on a curve. And you're heading the other way. That's all. You won't be around come

It is not inevitable that two or more Benningites will die in a holocaust of shattered glass and twisted metal. It is only highly probably. Can you make it less probable? Certainly, Stay off the highways. Leave them to the exhilerators and the accelerators. They're courting suicide anyway.

We plan to spend the week end on the Post. We plan to be

A career as varied and checkered as any soldier of fortune is the story of Maj. Charles A. Sanders of the Small Arms section, Weapons department, the Infantry School,

Major Sanders began his Army career almost 28 years ago, and has come up from the rank of private the hard way. Back in 1925, he was assigned for the first time to Fort Benning, there he tried out for the Infantry Rifle team. Since that time he has had seven other tours of duty here, and, in his estimotion it is one of the hest of all Army norts

Each time he came back, he was amazed at the progress the witnessed both in the growth of the post and in the manner of teaching of weapons. The Weapons department, according to the major, is a dream come frue for those interested in

In 1944 he was assigned to the European command, staying there for one year Kores was his next port of call.

In 1948 he was sent to Okinawa, and in 1950 he was again assigned to Korea as a member of the Korean Military Advisory assigned to Korea as a member of the Korean samely advisory group. He was on this assignment when he was wounded in November, 1950, and sent back to the states.

In looking back over his career, the major counts the two trips to Korea among his most interesting. With the Korean viewment so different from the U. S. it was a little hard at times to sit by and see his suggestions discarded. However, that was the way it had to be.

There were also amusing moments. Especially, does he remember the time when the troops were issued combat boots. Not being used to such heavy shoes, all ended up with badly blistered feet and refused to wear them again.

In his dealings with the South Koreans, he found them to be cooperative, respectful, brave and eager to learn. The out fit to which he was assigned was one of the first to meet the oncoming Chinese Reds when they made their first thrust in Major Sanders was speeding down a road in a jeep flying the United Nations, American and KMAG flags, when an enemy guerilla opened fire with a sub-machine gun. Twelve of the shots found their mark, although not all the wounds were serious. He kept going until he reached a hospital. From there he was evacuated by helicopter.

His life-time hobby has been shooting, and his current assignment is much to his liking. He has made an extensive study of all types of weapons and still finds them interesting.

Infantry School problems assigned to the 408th Engineer (Combat) company, 30th Infantry regiment, Combat Training Command, consist mainly of demolition work, though other types of engineering problems are also encountered.

REHEARSING RESERVISTS . . . Pfc. Emmett Mosely, left, and Sgt. William B. Ward, Jr., of the 310th Army band, aren't envied by line soldiers as they polish their brass prior to a parade in the third cuartel. The Band, a Reserve unit from Jacksonville, Flas, is taking two weeks' summer training here with the Area Service Unit Provisional group.

LIFE-LINES OF GEORGIA PROGRESS!

with the second second

Fast-growing Georgia depends more and more on the telephone. Its economic and social life are geared to it. Last year Georgians made a billion local calls.

Today Georgians can call more than twice as many local telephones as they could ten years ago, and the hervice is better. Yet the overall price of telephone service has gone up less than one-third as much as prices in general.

The demand for more and more telephones continues, and Southern Bell hopes to build during 1951

mearly $20 million of new facilities to provide the ampansion and improvement of telephone service that is so essential to Georgia's progress, and to national defense.—Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

LINCOLN ON KOREA

The following article was written by Wayne C. Williams, Colorado historian, and introduced in the House of Repre-sentatives by the Hon. Wayne N. Aspinwall, of Colorado. President Truman, after reading the article, sent a letter of congratulations to Mr. Williams. It was incorporated in the Con-gressional Record, Friday, Aug. 17, 1951.

"What is the cause for which our soldiers are fighting in Uniform Violators Deserve Stiffest Punishment Possible

. If the number of violations is any indication, a great many Fort Benning soldiers are having difficulty understanding uniform regulations. In fact, uniform violations have become so noticeable lately that unit commanders have been directed to take immediate steps to correct the deficiencies.

As we have nointed out in these columns before, the Army uniform is a mark of distinction. It represents a man's co-try, which all soldiers have pledged to defend. It is a symb of one of America's oldest and most honored professions. Yet the appearance of some soldiers right here at Fort Benning leaves us with the impression that "soldiering" is a disgrace. Certainly, it's disgraceful when men, charged with such a scared responsibility as defense of their nation, are so careless in

The most common discrepancies reported here include such obvious violations of uniform regulations that only a man with less than a first grade education could claim immunity from punishment on the grounds of ignorance.

Every soldier knows — he should if he doesn't — that he can not wear fatigues in Service Clubs. Yet, there have been frequent violations of this regulation. The proper attire for Service Club activities—and these include the snack bars operated in conjunction with the Clubs—may be either uniform, the cotton khaki with tie, or presentable civilian clothing.

A T-shirt has never been an acceptable outer garment in civilian life. The Army is no exception. But at Fort Benning, T-shirts are being worn in place of sport shirts, despite regula tions to the contrary. Furthermore, garrison regulations prohibit the wearing of any type of sport shirt without a roll - down collar, regardless of color, pockets or special design. The only time a T-shirt is authorized for wear is when an individual is time a T-sint is authorized for wear is when an individual is participating in athletics. Enlisted men aren't the only oftenders. Officers, too, are guilty of uniform violations. This is especially prevalent in Of-ficers' Mess branches, where civilian shirts, including both the regular type shirt and sport shirt, are being worn with a coat regular type shirt and sport shirt, are being worn with a coat and tie. Regulations regarding acceptable attire for Post clubs—and these apply equally to officers' clubs — are quite explicit. Anyone failing to familiarize himself with these regulations is shirking his duty, just as much as the man who fails to carry to completion an assigned duty task.

It shouldn't be necessary to warn any solder, commissioned or otherwise, against wearing solled or badly wrinkled khakl uniforms. Horey the prevalence of such violations has uniforms. Unfortunately, the prevalence of such violatio reached the stage where corrective action must be taken in the interest of morale and good discipline. Not only does the man who appears in public in an unkempt uniform present a revolting picture, he also does his profession a disservice. Com-mon sense should tell a man when it's time to change uniforms. He knows, as well as do those with whom he works or spends his off-duty hours, when a change is necessary.

Rolled trousers and shirt sleeves are still uniform violations, no matter how hot it gets. True, cotton khaki shirts are hot, but then what clothes aren't when the temperature rises to the high 90's? At any rate, anyone who rolls his sleeves or trousers is violating uniform regulations.

Shirt loops should not be used to carry ties and caps. They were not put on shirts for that purpose. It goes without saying that unshined shoes and unpolished brass present an un-tidy appearance, regardless of how immaculate a soldier may be in other respects. But both these violations are commo

The number of uniform violations could be materially reduced with a little more checking on individuals by junior officers and non-commissioned officers. This alone, however, will not suffice. It's the responsibility of each soldier to make sure of his own appearance. Until he does, stiff punishment is the only answer

God Solves Our Problems If We Allow Him To

BY CHAP. (CAPT.) CHARLES A MEEK

A parachute jump makes a pretty picture. As the paratroopers make their exit, their parachutes blossom out and they float slowly to earth. If the jump is properly executed they land in a set pattern. It looks easy, but a great deal of planning goes into the execution. Co-ordination between pilot, ground group and jumpmaster is necessary to make it a success. These work together, but the final word to jump rests with the jumpmaster. He is the man who must make the decision.

great deal depends this jumpmaster. A wrong decision and the paratroopers may be injured, the problem executed poorly, and all the previous work will have been in vain. The jumpmaster must have experience, know how and wisdom if he is to do his

ing "jumps" of some sort in life. We are faced with the problem of "hitting" the right field at the right time so that our lives will be of most value. Whether, we are aware of it or not, someone is "jumpmastering" our lives and gulding us along the way. It could be our previous experience, our famiour friends, our religion, our ambitions; whatever it is, someone is the "jumpmaster" in our lives.

The jumpmaster is the important man in paratrooper jumps: the jumpmaster is important in our "jumps". Many land in trees, hit the wrong field, jump early or late hurt themselves and others because they had a poor jumpmaster. They think experience will lead them in for a perfect jump. only to find that experien led them astray. They let their families tell them when to jump, only to discover families can be cruel and selfish. They let their ambitions say when to jump, only to find that cold ambition may leave them at the top, but alone. The one real reliable jump master meeting all the qualifications is God and His inspired religion. He has the know how, the wisdom and the experience to get us on the field in the right pattern at the

May 19 was a proud and thankful day for Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Pittman for they stood in the office of the president of the United States and saw him present the nation's highest award to their twenty-two year old son, Sgt. John A. Pittman.

Proud because it is to only a few that the Congressional Medal of Honor is awarded, and thankful because, after his exploit, he lived to receive the honor.

Sgt. John A. Pittman, Company F. Infantry Sgt. John A. Pittman, Company F. Linantry School detachment, along with five others make up the roster of CMH winners stationed at Fort Benning. However, Sgt. Pittman is the only one of the five to receive the medal for heroism in Korea fighting.

Pittman, a native of Tallelah, Miss,, spent most of his life in that section of the state and attended school there until he was eighteen. The adventuresome part school there until he was eighteen. The adventuresome part of his nature got the best of him and he enlisted.

Life in the army was a far cry from the quiet life he had led in the small Mississippi town with his four brothers and four sisters, but he got the longed-for chance to travel when the Seventh Infantry division was sent on occupation duty to Japhn and Korca. Fourtleen of the twenty-five months over as were spent in Japan and oleven in Korea. In February of 1950 he returned to the states. After enjoying a 45 day furlough he re-enlisted in the Army with assignment to the famous Second Infantry division. He had hardly become oriented in his new outfit when the fateful overseas orders -Korea

July found him once again in Korea, From the time arrived he fought up and down, back and forth across the little country with his division. On Sept. 1, 1950 he was wounded in action and returned to his outfit on Oct. 18. On Nov. 26, the weather was 20 degrees below zero and Company C, 23rd Infantry regiment found itself in the midst of the furious fighting at Kujangdong, about 35 miles from the Mauchurian border.

The enemy thought they had scored a direct hit when a live grenade landed in the midst of his nine-man rifle squadbut they redoned without Sgt. Pittman, for as quick as you can say Mississippi, he threw himself on the grenade.

For seven long months, his tortured body was treated by the most skilled of medical hands and eventually his wounds healed. It was while he was a patient in the hospital at Fort Campbell, Ky., that he was notified to report to Washington to receive the Medal of

Do You Remember

DO YOU REMEMBER when Fort Benning perpetuated the memory of one of the best loved generals in American history? Do you remember when a parade ground at Ben ning was renamed in honor of that distinguished gentleman?

The April 17, 1947, issue of The Bayonet carried the following story of the dedica-tion of Stilwell field:

"At a simple cerem Tuesday morning the Sc Troops parade ground was re-named Stilwell field in honor of the late Gen. Joseph Stilwell, commander of the China - Burma - India theater rom 1942-1944.

"Present for the dedication were Mrs. Stilwell and her two daughters. Miss Allison Stilwell and Mrs. E. F. Easterbrook, and Mai. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, commander of the Infantry Center.

"Maj. Foster B. Watson, of the Adjutant General's department, read the general order establishing a permanent memorial to General Stilwell. It read in part:

A MOST NOBLE streak is almost certain to come to an end sometime soon after young Frank Spaniel goes into action this month with the Combat Training Command eleven in the Fort Benning. Football League. It seems that a half dozen years have elapsed since Spaniel, a 177-pound bone crushing machine, played a losing effort on the gridiron, and while the CTC Companyation. manders figure to be good, there are some other equally deermined pigskin platoons currently in the making on post prac-

A modest fellow, except when it comes to scrambling the vertebrae of opposing linemen, 23-year old Spaniel, a private with Headquarters, 30th Infantry Regiment, gives credit where it is due and notes that it was Notre Dame which was unbeaten from 1946 through the 1949 season when he happened to be a member of the Fighting Irish.

Frank though it was lucky break when he go his chante with the South Benders in '46, but the break turned out instead to be a fracture of the right ankle whick kept him sidelined most of that iracture of the right and whick kept him suchine most of that season and a good part of 1947. He was used solely on defense in 48, in the important safety position, but in his senior year came in for his share of offensive laurels as regular left halfback.

And there were many laurels to be had that season, too, with Notre Dame elected by the experts to be defeated in several contests. One was the memorable afternoon in Yanker Stadium against North Carolina. The Tar Heels would have been leading at the half except for a Spaniel touchdown which made it 6-to-6. Wise Frank Leahy must have spoke some inmade it 6-10-0. When exam Leanj must be spring verblage indeed during intermission for the Irish came back to make it 46-6 finally, with young Mr. Spaniel racking up another of the subsequent TD's.

heen a reader of sports page obtinary notices for any length of time, must really have Dame Fortune or somebody on their bench continue to surmount obstacles as the Irish. In this case, we suspect, "for somebody" would be Frank Leahy, the wizard of the T-formation.

"Cranmebody" would be Frank Leany, the wizard of the "Leahy is two different people on the field and off the field," says Samiel. "He's a perfectionist on the field. Doesn't miss the slightest little thing and that makes it rough on the

"Or somebody" would be Frank Assay.

"Leahy is two different people on the field and off the field," says Sapniel. "He's a perfectionist on the field. Doesn't miss the slightest little thing and that makes it rough on the men. You can't like him on the field, but every last scrub certainly respects him. Off the field, he's a nice guy. You can like him."

Frank has us his current ambition to play pro football after Uncle Sam's option on his services expirés and being from Vanisham, and the says, explaining, "Pitisburgh uses the single wing and that's what Combat Training Command is going to use this fail. Playing at Notre Dame those four years, this is the first time I've really seen how the single wing operates."

In case you're interested in seeing how a former Fighting rish operates with a vengeance— and a football, the floet-footed Spaniel will be at the tailback slot when the Commanders Harold Kopp, hours? Purchase of Defense Bonds Is Investment in Your Future

- It's still a little early to predict the outcome of the current campaign officials' enthusiasm rubs off on individual purchasers, it will be a success. The local campaign, conducted in conjunction with the nation-wide drive, got off to a rousing start here with the opening of the soldier show, OK, USA. Mal. Gen. John H. Church launched the campaign with a appeal to Benningites to purchase bonds through pay reservation and allotment plans.

Local campaign officials hope to sell more bonds than any other Third Army installation between now and Oct. 27, clos-ing date of the drive. That goal can be reached only if everybody at Fort Benning gets behind "America's Defense Bond Drive."

There are many reasons why the purchase of Defense Bonds is wise. Naturally, the most appealing from a personal point of view is added financial security. In only 10 years a bond for which you pay only $18.75 is worth $25. What other investment assures such a high rate of return?

Personal motives of individual security and advancement however, are not the only reasons why Americans should support this hond drive. The purchase of Defense Bonds makes available to the Government additional money with which to build up our defense against aggression. The sale of bonds is the individual American's voluntary method of of bonds is the individual American's voluntary method of lending money to his Government. The purchase of bonds should give each of us a feeling of having contributed materially to our own National security and prosperity. Is there better investment than security?

Furthermore, by investing money in Defense Bonds we are helping to minimize initiationary trends. There is a definite possibility that the Serviceman will get an increase in pay within the next few months to meet the rising cost of living. However, a part of that increase could be invested in Defense Bonds rather than spent on entertainment and luxuries. thereby reducing considerably the amount of money in circulation. The more money we spend, the higher prices will rise. Therefore, saving money is a sure way to prevent inflation from getting completely out of hand.

There is no better way to invest in your own future and in that of America than by the purchase of Defense Bonds. Why not investigate today?

We agree with The Journal that some kind of identifying insignia could be adopted to distinguish the Infantryman from his fellow soldiers. But adding blue stripes and arm bands is hardly the answer.

We are unalterably opposed to the proposal advanced by The Fort Jackson Journal that the Infantry uniform be changed to look like a hotel doorman's. In a recent editorial, The Journal suggested that the Doughboy's uniform be designed to include an "Infantry blue quarter inch stripe down each outside seam of the trousers, plus a two - inch arm band snapped on the right arm, bearing the word Infantry in bold

As if to clinch argument for these changes, The Journal concludes:

Help God By Setting Good Example to Others

In the sixth chapter of Isaiah we read the story of Isa-iah the prophet who received the call to serve the Lord. Isa-iah heard the voice of the Lord saying, "whom shall I send and who will go for us?" Isa-iah answered, "Here am I, Send me."

Israel was passing through what historians have called an "Indian Summer." It was a prosperous time, but thinking conte knew it could not last People had turned away from religion. It was to be Isaiah's task to make the people re-alize that, if they continued their evil ways, they would bring suffering and unhappito themselves. In other words, he was to act as the conscience for the whole nation of Israel.

You can imagine how unopular his message would be people self - satisfied and intent on keeping things the way they are. Still Isaiah, himself the son of an aristocrat, found it possible to an-

By Chaplain (1st. Lt. John L. swer the call of the Lord by saying, "Here am I, Send me." He knew he would be despised for his course of action, but he could not turn a deaf ear to a call from the Lord. He put service to the Lord first.

The outstanding thing about Isaiah's call is its time We, too, are passing through a time in which many people have forgotten God. Our na-tion is prosperous and powerful. Many people see no real need for God, so they have forgotten Him

The call that comes to any of God today may not come in the same manne came to Isaiah, but it is there just the same. God constantly asks, "Whom shall I send, and will go for us?" . Many hear the call, but cannot bring themselves to make the sacri fices that would surely come if they were to answer God's the way Isaiah answered it. It would mean rehuking wrong. Men refuse to listen to a message such as 'this, and when they persist in this refusal there comes a time when they are unable to hear. They have closed their hearts to anything they do not wish to hear. That is what makes the task of the prophet such a hard one. But it is a job that must be filled.

How will you answer the call the Lord? Will you ignore or will you say, "Here am it, or will you say, "Here I, Send me!" If that will your answer, your task will be no easier than the task of Isaiah. Perhaps you will not be called upon to do so much preaching, but to set an example by the life you live. You will be called upon to be a conscience to a people who do not wish to see that they are wrong. You will be called fanatic, crazy and many other names. But if you persist, you will gain the reward that comes only to the man who will gain honestly and faithfully endeavors to serve the Lord.

What will your answer be when you hear the call of the

Hope for Resumpition of Truce Talks Fades

Hope for resumption of the Korea truce talks grew even dimmer this week as Red dimmer this week as Red China blasted the UN as "arrogant, unreasonable and irresponsible," and denounced a suggestion that armistice negotiations be moved from Kae-song. Eighth Army headquarters issued a tentative report that no proof had been found of the latest Communist true violation charge that a UN plane machinegunned Kaesong Monday. The Reds have charged the UN with II violations the neutral Kaesong, but all three have been rejected.

American troops this we pushed steadily forward to-ward the Communist build up area at Pyonggang. Bayonet wielding soldiers now hold sev eral peaks overlooking the Py-onggang plain. Allied air strikes and artillery have inflicted Preliminaries for the Big Three foreign ministers con ference progressed smoothly as Secretary of State Dean Acheson met separately with French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and British Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison The Acheson - Morrison conference concerned the Iranian oil crisis and other problems of the powder-keg Middle East. Secretary Ache-son's talks with Mr. Schuman revolved around U.S. aid to nist rebels in Indo-China. The full-dress three - power talks began yesterday, with Ger-many the main issue.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey New York today will report to President Truman on his re-East. There had been speculation that Dewey's visit to the Orient was to "groom" him Orient was to as successor to Dean Acheson, but that possibility was ruled out this week when Mr. Tru-man indicated he is more dethe Secretary in the No. 1 diplomatic post. The President praised Mr. Acheson for do-ing a "splendid job" at the anese Peace Treaty Confer-Japanese Peace Treaty Confer-ence in San Francisco last week, He said Mr. Acheson had proved he was "smarter than any of the guys who have been attacking him.

Two Russian officers on a spree were seized by West Berlin police this week after West they had created a storm of excitement by idly firing pla tols in an area where most Americans live. They were turned over to Soviet authori-ties, and the escapade ended without serious results.

In addition to the mill, there was a cotton gin and an old-fashioned general store, which proved to be a gathering place.

It was from this mill that the first corn meal was brought into Columbus to the sold.

It was the boast of Mehaffey that the general store could get a customer morthing from a straight pin to a boat. People with that crea relied on the store for all their necessities.

The years passed in contentment and peace. The Army, attiving to increase training facilities set up a new camp called Camp Benning. The community stood on land needed by the government, so in 1918 a large section of the community was sold to the government, bringing the line almost to the old in this section. He was associated there with his brother - inlaw in the milling business.

Eventually a post office called Milliville, was authorized, but confusion resulted and naturally the name of the little community was changed from Millville to Eelback. That was the beginning of Benning's ghost town.

While Eelback was a flourishing community, the mill was a picture gue structure built completely by slave labor of longleaf pine timber cut from that section.

The last owner of the Eelback mill, Mr. C. R. Mehaftey, was functuaced to the community when his mother married the many who owned it. From then on, his life was bound by the community.

It's a fast-growing Army today — and trained soldiers are being pro-moted faster than ever. When your resultstment day rolls 'cound, think about all the new opportunities there are to get shead in the Army. As more men are joining up, more noncoma are needed. For you trained men, the chances to get shead fast are better in the Army roday than ever before.

And that's not all. If you recalist within 90 days after your disch you get that fat reeditiment bonus. The average soldier carns 330.02 per year in cash and benefits (including food, clothing, housing, etc.). That's more than many civilians make — and most civilians don't get 30 day vacations with pay.

Don't forget that when you stay in the Army you're working toward a substantial retirement income. So think it over — and sign up for another hitch when the time for your reenlistment comes.

One of Kopp's ace backs then got himself knocked in several directions simultaneously by an alert defense. The coach looked at his offensive linemen, and admonished: "This man will win the ball game for you. Let's keep him whole. Hell, I don't even want him to gct his pants dirty!"

Kopp took a momentary breather. Some subs came in. Signals were called, and then the coach was running right.

Kopp took a momentary breather. Some subs came in. Signals were called, and then the coach was running right back in. "Oh, no, don't you destroy something men like Pop Warner worked on 50 years to perfect," he called at a lineman who had erred in a fundamental of the single wing formation.

And so goes a sunny atternoon. Sounds trying, doesn't it?

I believe it was Jack Hackett, the Mismi Hurricanes' great little T-quarterback who told me, when asked which was his roughest game, "the one play every Wednesday afternoon-on the practice field." It looks good to the fans at the stadius each weekend, 60-minute of well timed and cleverly executed bone brutsing, but it is born of many sweaty weekday afternoon-before his time?

Incidentally, despite the above related happenings Koppy Commanders shape up as one of the Fort Benning Football League's better elevens, and (one more pun) even if they are a single wing outlit that work keep them from Plyling up and pumping off some of the bigger outlits in a few weeks. Bigger, Better Package of Service

... yet up in price far less than most things you buy!

A DOZEN EGGS is still a dozen, and a pound is still a pound. But the "package" of telephone service you buy grows larger and larger.

TODAY IN GEORGIA, you can call more than twice as many local telephones as you could ten years ago. And the service is better, Yet with all this extra value, Georgia telephone rates in the overall have gone up less than a third as much as prices in general.

ALWAYS ONE of your biggest bargains, telephone service is today an even better buy than it was ten years ago . . , and a smaller part of your family budget .- Southern Hell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Everybody and his brother and cousins by the dozens own cameras that expose literally hundreds of feet of film every day. Too often camera enthusiast's display their best work before unsuspecting friends. Nothing labors the imagination more, than some would be cameraman pointing out an obscure object in a picture and saying that it would have been a good photo "if it had come out?" Maybe he took a picture of the place where a bullmoose was standing after it ran away leaving nothing but a mass of tangled underbrush to the camera's lens.

Taking good photographs is it we burnt holes in a blanket, one of the easiest and most encoyable hobbies a guy or girl can carry on. There are just a good pictures and if observed, snapshots take on a new meaning to both the photographer. And the photographer. And the photographed, because the photographed, because the photographed will be able to show interesting picture will be a

EVEN THE MIRRORS ARE CONFUSED... Assigned to 12th company, First Student brigade, Sfc. Raymond Lott, left, and his carbon copy brother, Sgt. Ray, have spent a life-time confusing people with their amazing likeness. Red hair, blue eyes, identical in height and weight, both recently returned from Korea as result of wounds received in action. Both served in the Marine Corps in World War II. Both were assigned to the same squad with the Second Infantry division in Korea and have the same military decorations. Raymond has one more: "rocker" than Ray and is married; The latter, however doesn't show.

A Pint of Your Blood May Help Save a Soldier's Life

Have you ever wondered what might happen to you in combat? What your chances to survive would be if an enemy bullet hit you? Or a chunk of metal from his mortar shell?

If you're already a combat soldier, you may know from experience that the odds are decidedly in your favor if you're hit on the battlefront. Or perhaps you've been told — if you're odds are pretty good.

The odds will stay pretty good - just so long as the equipment and the drugs and essential supplies are there for skilled medics to save the lives of American wounded. They won't be so good if there's not enough blood plasma to go

As things shape up right now there won't be enough blood As things snape up right how there work be chosen overy long, without speedy and substantial donations of large quantities of whole blood-to be made into plasma for treatment of battle casualties. Battle losses in Korea are draining it off - but fast.

How would you like to get orders for Korea tomorrow? Or next month? And go over the Pacific knowing that if you become a battle casualty, and bleed, there might not be enough

You wouldn't like it. Not a hit. If it should happen that way, and you should find yourself on a litter in an Army medics' station, and there wasn't enough blood to keep you alive......
you'd die with bitter thoughts about the guys back home

You are in a mighty interesting position right now. You're the guy who may some day bleed to death in an Army hospital — unless blood plasma is there to save you. And you also are the guy who can save that life — or maybe you're the guy "who let you down."

Maybe you don't feel like giving a pint of your blood to be used to save a battle casualty's life. You'll never miss that pint of blood hut maybe you just don't feel like giving it away. Maybe you're aqueamish about having blood drawn

Think again, Infantryman!!! The blood you're asked to volunteer will save a soldier's life some day. Ten to one it will save an Infontryman's life. We know Infantrymen are the men who fight, the men who are wounded, when their country is in battle. You're an Infantryman, Maybe it's your life that blood

You'll never miss it now. . . .you'll surely miss it then, if it's not there.

Army's Unheralded 'Testers' Are Heroes in Their Own Right

A new and unofficial budy of men is hereby introduced: The Black n' Blue Brigade of the Army's Quartermaster Corps. Before a piece of equipment or clothing is passed by the aginable. And most of these tests are conducted by 350 enlisted men whose principal job is to discover the durability and effec-tiveness of the clothing and equipment you're issued.

Let's follow our unidentified and unheralded heroes through of uniform. The courses run something like this:

Climb an incline .. worm across cinders and railroad track ...dive headfirst down a 45-degree slope paved with cobble-stones ...vault a rail fence ...slither over a rock pile ...shin up an inclined log ...creep under barbed wire ... and inch through a concrete pipe less than two feet in diameter.

After 1,700 feet of crawling and creeping, we head for the rain course. Overhead pipes control artificial rain from a to a heavy downpour. A maze of hurdles, walls, ropes and ladders are maneuvered during the "rainstorm" for testing purposes.

The shoe obstacle course is one-sixth of a mile of walking paths, surfaced with smooth concrete, granite fragments, erushed stone, cobblestones, gravel, cinders, slag, lava, rock and quartzite. The men walk this path mile after mile wearing ne standard bout and the test sample for comparison.

the glove course, men stack lumber and pile bricks, swing from an overhead ladder, roll oil drums up and down ramps, and heave shipping cases on roller conveyors flooded

The Black N' Blue Brigade may find the going rough cold—but their lumps and humps provide the troops in the field with added weapons for fighting; the weapons of confedence in their equipment and of efficient comfort against the elements -- AFPS The second of the second of football."

WHAT KIND OF FOOTBALL to expect from six assorted gangs of GI's on an Army post which is geared mainly to the purpose of turning out the world's best war machine? Earl Blaik, who finds his football cupboard at Army so bare these days as to make Mother Hubbard look like a stockholder at Fort Knox, only last season touched off a revolving Peruvian tizzy by announcing: "The pros glay a fine game, but it isn't football."

Or, Red should have added, it isn't football as we know it by the standards set in American colleges, which have the distinction anyway of being the original standard. Well, service football.—Fort Benning's football, that is — isn't the old college game either. But wait; the analogy between service grid and the pros may go a lot further.

Bialk contended that the pros are essentially business organizations. They here proven performers to display pigakin pyrotebnics on a grand scale once a week, and, note the coach of the Biack Enlights, the pros don't even bother to hold serimmages between games. That alone would make it totally foreign to the college sport which produces some of its best action in weekday practice sessions which the public never view.

ONE FOOTBALL FEATURE which intrigues me is that two of the Fort Benning teams will use the single wing formation. It may be slightly passe in big time college football, too, (Ohio State is dropping it this season) but have your hat off and be smilling, pardner, when you say anything irreverant about it. The story of the single wing for the most part remains the story of football, and I know of no spectacle more pleasing to the ave than to see it properly executed. the eye than to see it properly executed.

Coach and former All - American George Bokinsky is using it for the Provisional Medical Group because he knows it inside out from his playing days at Duke from 1938 to 42 when the Blue Devils were big shots of the Southern Conference and frequent bowh habitants on New Year's Day. (Duke, too, abandons the single wing this year in favor of the split. Ta she great Wallace Wade bows out to Bill Murray, Blue Devil alumnar and former Delaware coach).

Harold Kopp, with a decade of college coaching experience to back up his decisions, has installed the single wing for his Combat Training Command eleven, because he thinks it fift his playing material, and because he has a 60-minute player in Frank Spaniel, the kind of kid who used to make the single wing and view years. wing and vice versa.

IT'S AT THIS POINT that it is customary for sport writers (Clickhoma A & M. 1941) and 15 to pull out their crystal balls and tell in what order the teams are supposed to finish. (Why this should be other than it makes good laughing matter for sports page readers at the end of each control of the season, I don't know.) I will say, however, after carefully observing all six teams in article, that the Special Troops eleven white ierseys and pants will serving all six teams in article, that the Special Troops eleven will receive the season, I don't know.) No Man of Lesser Rank Has Right to Disobev His Orders

We are in partial disagreement with the Camp Stewart, Ga, Rocket which claims that the reason non-commissioned officers there fail to command the respect of those beneath them in rank is due in part to the NCOs' own shortcomings. Especially do we take exception to the statement, "You begin to give your respect by the measure of the man."

Such an observation to our way of thinking brands a man as either misinformed or downright disrespectful. Each man in Army uniform is selected for promotion not only on the basis of his ability to perform the job to which he is assigned, but also on the basis on his soldierly qualities.

There are many men in the Army today who possess superior qualifications from an academic standagint Many hold degrees. Many held responsible positions in business or industry before coming into the Army. But be cause they do not possess the qualities inherent in a good It is from this group that we often hear the loudest complaints Some of them feel they can not respect any man who does not measure up to their own set of false standards.

There are other men - we hestitate to call them soldierswho by their own admission have refused to adapt themselves to military life. They attempt to justify their disrespect for non-commissioned officers and their lofty disdain for Army regulations by claiming immunity on the grounds they were inducted against their will. They take delight in passive dis-obedience to orders from their NCO's. Yet these same men, if ordered to a combat zone, would gladly follow the instructions of the men whose authority they flaunted in parrison life.

wholeheartedly agree that any NCO who adopts attitude is headed for trouble. But no soldier of lesses rank has the right to disobey him so long as he wears the stripes. Disrespect and inaubordination can not be condoned, no matter what the circumstances.

If an NCO is not fit to perform his duties as a soldier, he

Everyone Must Help Reduce Cost of Military Operations

It costs a great deal of money to train and equip an Armed Force — so much, in fact, that the civilian taxpayer often is startled at the magnitude of the Defense Department's budget. The necessity for maintaining and strengthening that Armed Force, however, is seldom questioned by the civilian taxpayer, because he has come to rely on the military services udgment in asking the Congress to appropriate only that noney required for this Nation's defense. It, therefore, behooves every man in uniform to be everlastingly aware of the cost element involved in military operations and to reduce the cost of those operations wherever feasible without jeopardizing the effective accomplishment of the Army's mission.

The Defense Department estimates that military expendiof the Federal budget dollar. It can not be denied that this is a burdensome load to put on the shoulders of the American taxpayer. Since the individual Serviceman is himself a taxpayer, he must beer a part of that load. It is his responsi bility to aid in building the most efficient fighting force possi-

It's not inconceivable that the enemies of the United States hope to conquer us through an economic war rather than a nic collapse, brought about by over spending, could cause our Government to abandon its fight to preserve the democratic way of life among freedom loving peoples of the world in favor of our own self-preservation.
Whatever our enemies' intentions, however, we must oppose

Elimination of waste is perhaps the best way an individua soldier can help reduce costs. In the words of Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., "Waste is a crime against our country and may affect our future freedom his tray at meal time with more food than he can eat. Another uses too many patches to clean the bore of his rifle. Still nother requisitions more paper clips than he can use. Each committing a crime. Each is asking that his Government give him more than he needs to complete his task.

No country can long survive if its Government operates inder a policy of national wastefulness. As soldiers we are part of our Government. As soldiers, too, we are responsible for the survival of our Government. Indeed, we are sworn to defend it against its enemies. And surely wastefulness is one of our country's worst enemies.

Elimination of waste, then, is a challenge to each man in uniform. How we meet that challenge may well determine

the Parachute Test platoon, which blazed the way for present-day airborne. This platoon was composed of 40 enlisted men and two officers. all volunteers from Fort Benning's 29th Infan-

In its infancy, airborne training left much to be desired. Although students received as thorough and rugged training as they do today, equipment was scanty. However, from that little group evolved the instructors who took others through the rugged training.

When Ivy entered the Army in 1937, he had no idea that in three years, he would be jumping from a plane with nothing to hold him up but a few ropes and a piece of silk. In fact he claims he would have thought crazy anyone offering such a fantastic suggestion. He still doesn't understand what prompted him to volunteer. But now he wouldn't change his airborne

The paratrooper yell, "Geronimo," started here with the test platoon. In those days, says Ivy, troopers burst from their planes, screaming "Geronimo." People would "stand up on the hills adjacent to Lawson field to watch."

A great deal of equipment and many different methods were led out in those first days of training. Any type of clothing was worn by the troopers, and each time they jumped a new type of 'chute was tested.

just getting out of a B-18 was quite a feat. The door was so low that the top of the pack bumped against it when the man was ready to jump.

Sgt. Ivy was the first man to jump in the Panama Canal zone. His outfit, the 503rd Parachute battalion, was stationed at Howard field on the Pacific side of the canal.

In preparation for the first jump, Sgt. Ivy and his commanding officer went up with master dummies to test equip-ment for the next days's jump. The sergeant asked permission to make the test jump. The next day, he was jump master.

One of the most exciting times, he reminisces, was when RKO studios filmed a movie here entitled "Parachute Bat-talion." The test platoon and the 501st Parachute battalion

As the shooting neared SFC. GEORGE IVY completion, the camera crew got ready to film a mass jump. All eyes turned skyward as the giant plane dropped its human cargo. Suddenly, a quietness settled over the group. They watched helplessly as one man, his 'chute hanging limp, came hurt-ling down. It was the first casualty in the Airborne School. Only one time in the 11 years since he was awarded his wings has Ivy been injured. It happened on his fifth jump.

Summing up the early years, Sgt. Ivy says, "They have been exciting and interesting. We worked as hard as we do today, but the equipment wasn't as good. I wonder what it will be like 10 years from now?"

It's a fast-growing Army today — and trained soldiers are being promoted faster than ever. When your reenlistment day rolls round, think about all the new opportunities there are to get ahead in the Army. As more men are joining up, more noncoms are needed. For you trained men, the chances to get ahead fast are better in the Army today than ever before.

And that's not all. If you recalist within 90 days after your discharge, you get that far recalistment bonus. The average soldier earns $3,082 per year in cash and benefits (including food, clothing, housing, etc.). That's more than many civilians make — and most civilians don't get 30-day vacations with pay.

Don't forget that when you stay in the Army you're working toward a substantial retirement income. So think it over — and sign up for another hitch when the time for your reenlistment comes.

"NOW YOU'RE TALKING!" ... A student in a radio maintenance course at the Communications department has to be "on his toes" as well as "on the beam" to make the grade. Col. Wolcott K. Dudley, left, new department director, asks Student Pfc. William G. Reid questions and gives him a few pointers about the SCR 508 during a visit to radio maintenance class No. 8 recently. This phase of the course deals largely with practical application

PART OF CROWD OF 17,000 FANS WHO OVERFLOWED TO SIDELINES AND RAMPARTS OF DOUGHBOY STADIUM SUNDAY FOR OPENING OF 1951 FOOTBALL SEASON.

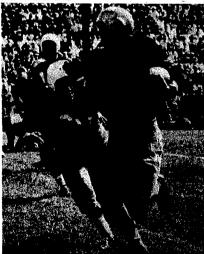

TALKING TO HIMSELF? ... Lawson Air Force base Coach Jim Petit seems to be pointing and talking to an unseen gridiron gremlin just about the same time his Flyers are suffering a reverse on the field. Notice the equally grim visage of Assistant Coach Sam McClurkin, Ileft), Roy Bradford, (73), and James Beam, (79), on extreme right. The heat was enough to get anybody much less a losing coach of the 508th Airborne, breaks down long enough to let out to hoop and holler for his Red Devils during the middle of heir 83-yard march to the winning touchdown in the fourth

SIX POINTS... The photographer says this is Lawson Air-Force base's third period touch-down caught in the act, but it looks more like a hunt for a needle in a haystack. Big Hugh Bell who went over left guard for the TD that tied the game is not identifiable, but others, are the 508th's Sam Zweiger, (36), Tom Breinard, (58), Weaver, (77), and the Flyers' Robert Sutton, (36). Hard hitting action such as this was typical of entire game.

OUT OF DANGER ... After a 15-yard penalty set the 508th Airborne back on their own 10-yard line early in the second period, Halfback Bill Wallace, (28), scampers out of the hole around left end for 15 yards and a first down. The drive carried all the way to the Flyers' five-yard line before being proken up by a furbible. Lou Hamilton, (60), is about to put the tackle on Wallace.

A colorful and record shattering throng of 17,000 watched two good teams place firm bids in the ring for the 1951 Fort wood of the place of the process of t into the stadium to cheer on their forces. A private from the 508th assigned to the press box as a spotter, stood up as the general marched by and said: "Look at him. You can't beat that." And nobody did the last Sunday afteracon. Smith, Crowder, Clark, Thomas, Womack, Ammerman, Traban, Prados, Mueller, Whitchead — you tell me who was the best lineman, then filp a coin and plok the best back among Remond, Phillips, and Wallace who to the shown by accounting far and wallace.

But if it was a great day for the airborne, it wasn't necessarily a dark one for the Air Force. They certainly came close, if they probably was in conditioning and that's not anybody's fault begind in the Flyers, if anything, had less practice time as a unit than did the 508th.

"We played as a team and lost as a team; no excuses," said genial Jim Petit who tried to take the loss in stride. "Another weekend from now and I think we could beat that team, but the 508th is certainly due all the credit for this victory."

One thing is certain. Both teams will improve. Mesereau will look, for more polish to his T; he certainly needs a passer. Bill Gilmer showed us that he is cut after the patient of the pati South, assigned to the press box as a spotter, stood up as the general marched by and said: "Look at him. You can't beat that." And nobody did this last Sunday afternoon, Smith, Crow-

Yes sir, if there was anyone at Doughboy Stadium Sunday have yet to go into action, and have yet to face these same Flyers and Red Devils. It was noticeable in several camps was of a more serious variety.

HOW ABOUT THAT crowd? A quick check into the available records indicates that it was the largest ever to inhabit historic boughbys Madium for a single contest. With the grade stand normally seating 10,000, officials were being stingy is estimating the throng at 17,000. Bet that figure may yet to topped this very season. West until yeu see the fireworks the other four squads suveil this Friday night and Sunday afternoon and then you will believe me.

We Must Resolve Not to Relax Constant Watch Against Fire

It's quite obvious that Fort Benning troops need to be advised more often of the destructiveness of fires. A report issued here on the eve of National Fire Prevention Week shows that between July 1, 1950, and June 30 of this year damage to Government property as a result of fires ar

According to Col. R. K. McDonald, Infantry Center Fire Marshal, a majority of those fires were caused by individual acts of carelessness and could have been prevented. Certainly, those fires did not occur due to negligence on the part of fire inspectors. Fort Benning maintains an active Fire Prevention Bureau, whose duty it is to conduct periodic inspection with an eye toward eliminating any hidden fire hazards not easily recognized by untrained personnel. Yet, the fact remains that the Fire Department was called out 217 times during the period covered by the report.

There is no acceptable excuse for 77 of the 217 fire alarms turned in at Fort Benning during that time. Those fires were started simply because someone failed to snuff out a discarded cigaret or match:

Twenty - six fires which broke out here can be attributed to short circuits and other electrical failures. Even those could have been prevented if the persons responsible for the buildings which those fires occurred had made periodic checks of the electrical circuits and reported to the proper authorities any defects discovered. It's cheaper to make repairs to faulty wiring than to rebuild a burned structure or replace its con-

Dumning hot ashes in combustible materials caused 15 fires and carelessness in handling flammable liquids caused 10 others. With cooler weather ahead, there is every likelihood that there will be more fires as a result of improper disposal of hot ashes. Some people never seem to learn that ashes taken from a burning furnace are just as dangerous as live

Soldiers who use lighter fluid or other flammable liquids to clean their uniforms had better have their personal affairs in order. People have been killed as a result of explosions caused by burning lighter fluid. Don't think it can't happen to

As we approach National Fire Prevention Week observed Proclamation of the President, we must resolve that we will not relax our vigilance against fires, that we will make fire consciousness an every day habit, that Fire Prevention Week will be zealously continued throughout the

Chest Needs Your Support Chaplain's Corner

It's Community Chest time at Fort Benning, and everyone is being asked to contribute a few dollars for the support of nine participating agencies and organizations. Unit and activity representatives are doing a man-sized job in tacting every soldier and civilian on the Post in an effort to raise sufficient funds to insure the continued operation of and other agencies selected by the Community Chest Fund Council.

Regardless of the many hours these representatives spend soliciting funds, however, the Chest drive can not succeed without the full cooperation of everyone at Fort Benning None of the Chest-supported agencies receives money from other sources in amounts sufficient to fulfill their responsibilities. They depend upon voluntary contributions from individual sources for their survival. Only the generosity of each man and woman can insure that they do survive

Everyone benefits from the agencies and organizations participating in the Community Chest. For example, many Fort Benning soldiers or their families have been forced to call upon the Joint Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society for help when their finances hit rock bottom. The Red Cross in many instances, can not legally provide that needed aid. It then that the Joint Army Emergency Relief - Army Relief Society is especially beneficial Chest funds also are alloted to the Children's School System for the purchase of playground equipment and to Boy and Girl Scout organizations which derive little aid from other sources. Without the help of the Community Chest, it's conceivable that the Teen-Age Children's Club, better known as Brat Barracks, would not be financially able to carry out its program of wholesome supervised entertainment. In addition, the Chost provides funds for the annual children's Christmas party.

A portion of the contributions made to Fort Benning's nunity Chest goes to the Columbus Community Chest, which helps support off-Post activities for Servicemen, including the Armed Services YMCAs and the NCCS Club The need for funds this year is great, probably greater than

Christians Should Help 'Feed God's Sheep

BY CHAPLAIN DANIEL P. JENKINS

Life presents us with two very significant facts: God's search for man and man's search for God. The strange and disquieting element, however, is that often God and man do not find each other.

It is not learning in the secular that keeps men in the pathway of wisdom, it is that superior knowledge that makes men know that they are sons of God. This we learn from God's Holy Word, taught by His blessed Spirit.

We have emphasized the secularities of life but not the spiritualites. We have electrified, but that has not lighted hood. We need to submit ourselves to the power of God flowing from the lofty heights of His Throne. We need to allow they come to the end of the Will you say, "I'll go where this power to flow through our

Providing cars, trucks and other type vehcles, and performing maintenance on them esult in a tremendous workload. The Mainenance and Tire Shops keep 1,600 vehicles eady for immediate use, and the new mainenance assembly line is now functioning to

The Motor Pool is divided into three distinct sections; administrative, maintenance and filing. The administration section is charged with $7,000,000 worth of property and equipment, and its equipment records are among the most extensive on the post.

In the filing section a mileage record is kept on each vehicle. Believing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, the maintenance section employs three people to sched-ule maintenance checks before the vehicles require repairs. Records determine the performance and worth of each vehicle.

The testing section issues to military and civilian drivers licenses to operate government vehicles. About 30 people are tested per day, with the pool furnishing equipment and supervision in testing about 70 additional people.

Dispatchers allocate vehicles to various units. Besides keep ing trace of each vehicle, they must supply extra cars for visiting dignitaries.

Of the 1,500 vehicles currently alloted to Fort Benning average of 700 are dispatched from the Main Post Motor Pool. The remainder are divided among the Infantry School, Harmony Church, Ordnance, Signal, the Army bospital, G-4 Maintenance section and Engineers

Value of Army Sports Program Clearly Illustrated by Red Devils

The value of sports to personnel in the Army can be ap- Report From Washington praised in many ways. For example, sports can unite units that have been totally unorganized, can further training by a clear - cut demonstration of teamwork, and in general, can be a terrific morale factor

This case has been clearly demonstrated by the 508th Airborne Infantry Regimental Combat Team, with its unprecedented backing of the Red Devil football team, From the first game when the unit marched into Doughboy Stadium led by its then regimental commander, Brig Gen. Joseph P. Cleland to the Oct. 14 defeat by the 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment to the one - sided 27 to 7 triumph over Area Service Unit, the Troopers have supported their team.

A look through the area immediately prior to a scheduled game reveals a large percentage of the all - volunteer unit preparing to board Army transportation to the game.

It is this feeling of complete backing and co-operation that has prompted many remarks from the Red Devil team. As summed up by Coach Tom Messerau;

"In coaching any service team, it has been my experience that a team plays harder and better ball when they know they are being backed. The spirit of our 508th spectators is something to really see and hear,"

Why You Are Going to Korea

The stepped-up rotation program has resulted in the assignment to Korea of an increasing number of Stateside soldiers. In an effort to explain why it is necessary to send replacements, especially those leaving units in training, the Department of the Army has prepared a pamphlet entitled "Why You Are Going to Koren."

We are reprinting here portions of that pamphlet for the benefit of those men at Fort Benning who may be called upon during the next few months to fill the spot vacated by a war - weary veteran.

"You are going to Korea to take over a big job from a Chaplain's Corner big man. You are going there to replace a soldier who has earned his way back home.

"You will be replacing a man who has been doing a fine BY CH. CLARENCE M. WALTON us are too shortsighted to see One reason for our impiece of work and who needs a rest. You are needed in Korea to fill an important job in some unit.

"When the rotation program started this past spring, it was planned to send 15,000 men s month back to the States from Korea. The rotation quots has been increased to 30,000 men a month. . . so that more men could be sent home. . men who had seen more than their share of combat duty.

"Normally, Army sources for overseas replacements include all replacement training installations where men receive combination basic and branch training.

"Another source includes soldiers with previous service who are re-enlisting, Enlisted Reserve Corps volunteers and all other trained soldiers who are available for reassignment.

"From these sources, the Army was able to get 15,000 men a month, But when the quota was doubled, the was more than these normal means could supply. So the Army ordered commanders of the six Armies in the U. S. to supply the rest from other units.

"Maybe you are a National Guardsman or Reservist who illed out of your unit as an individual replacement and you're wondering why. It's not that the Army would prefer it this way. Rather, it is a necessity.

"Of course, more than just privates are needed in Korea, Replacements have to be made all the way down the line.

"Replacement training centers give technical training, but much of a man's skill is gained through on - the - job ex-perience. That's why units in the States are called on to supply these experienced men. Sometimes it means breaking up groups of soldiers who have worked as a team. But that

"When you join the Eighth Army, you'll be part of a fighting team that has been called the 'best field army in the world The soldier whose job you will take helped make it that way. He's a big man — but you can fill his shoes."

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." Although written hundreds of years ago, those words have taken on new meaning during the Korean conflict, with man's inhumanity a never ending source of astonishment.

Cpl. Charles Kinard, a 23-year-old Floridian, assigned to the Information and Education section, Infantry School detachment, has had more than his share of inhumanity.

On July 4, 1950, his unit, Company F, 35th Infantry regiment, 25th Infantry division, moved up to help fortify the lines around Pusan. That night he saw action for the first time. From then until July 11, a desperate battle raged, with his company fighting a delaying action. Finally, his group was completely cut off near Chonui, and most of his comrades annihilated. Kinard was severely wounded in the left shoulder, but hoped to outwit the ene-my by playing dead. Tense hours followed in which his position was blasted by tank, machine gun and small arms fire. He knew that to stay alive he would have to change his position. In a desperate effort to sneak through enemy lines, he came

Kinard says that in one respect his experience was beneficial. "I was able to give intelligence valuable information about the enemy, previously unknown, since I was one of the first prisoners taken in the conflict."

Although fishing has been a lifetime hobby with Candidate-of-the-Week Robert N. Lund; ixth Officer Candidate company, Second Student regiment, his first hand - to - hand combat with a sea mammal came one mmer morning back in 1946 on taly's western shore.

Two groups of fishermen had gathered for their favorite sport: octopus fishing. One group held sturdy bamboo poles with clusters of hooks at the bottom, identifying them as Italians who fish for "pulpo," the octopus. The

On Your Training

It's a fast-growing Army roday — and trained soldiers are being promoted faster than ever. When your reenlistment day rolls round, think about all the new opportunities there are to get ahead in the Army. As more upon are joining up, more noncoms are needed. For you trained men, the chances to get shead fast are better in the Army roday than ever before.

And that's not all. If you reenlist within 90 days after your discharge, you get that far reenlistment bonus. The average soldier earns $3,082 per year in cash and benefits (including food, clothing, housing, ect.). That's more than many civilians make — and most civilians don't get

Off the beaten path down an almost forgotten bridle trail northwest of Russ pool stand the remains of one man's shrine to the God who helped him.

A little chanel decayed by time is one of the forgotten emories of the world's most complete Army post. Although many old-timers remember when it was built and where it is located, the records and archives fail to reveal the chapel's

Down the quiet of Lowland trail, set in a picturesque bend in the road, the chapel-remains a memorial to a man who put God above all else. Today, long forgotten, it's a shabby, tumbled down hulk of a building, with only the birds and the wind in the trees for

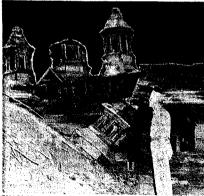

The story of the chapel dates back to the early twenties, when Fort Benning was one of the U. S.' newest camps. The 29th Infantry Regiment was here at that time as was Pyt. Stadnik, whose first name has been lost in the passage of time.

A devout member of the Greek Orthodox faith, Stadnik spent much of his spare time by himself in prayer and communica-

While stationed at Benning, he was stricken with a severe illness from which there seemed no recovery. He asked the Lord to help him in his trouble. His prayers were answered, and he recovered his health. Seeking a way to show his gratitude, he planned a shrine of thanksgiving. But thinking about the project was easier than doing. He had no materials or tools. But with only a few pieces of salvaged wood, a hammer and

He could hardly wait until his day of duty was over to hurry to his chapel. His buddies wondered where he went every day as soon as he got off from work. But when questioned, he was always evasive. Day in and day out he worked, building as near as he could a chapel patterned in the Greek Orthodox and the Holy Ghost, rose from a carved and molded roof. A beautifully carved altar stood inside the chapel. It was a small chapel, just big enough for one person to kneel inside.

What happened to Pvt. Standnik? No one hereabouts knows, but his chapel stood for many years before it withered into

In 1943 a group of soldiers, members of the riding class here, became interested in restoring the shrine.

A group of Italian prisoners who had been working along trail also became interested in the project, and with the help of some of their skilled craftsmen the renovation got un-

As nearly as possible the chapel was rebuilt with a new front section added. In keeping with the idea of the original builder, the new part was made from salvaged materials also.

On a clear, cold Sunday, Dec. 19, 1943, the shrine was rededicated at a colorful ceremony attended by officers, enlisted men and their guests. Present at the dedication was Capt. Charles B. Taylor, commander of the Service detachment of the Academic regiment, who had helped to rebuild the shrine.

The chapel was dedicated to St. Hubert, patron saint of horesmen and to the many members of the military riding classes who had given their lives for their country.

Col. William H. Hobson, commander of Fort Benning, finnked by flags of the United Nations, delivered an address. Chaplain Roderick MacEachern delivered the invocation and benedica-

Time since has again taken its toll. The main tower has fallen and rests against the side of the shrine. The little carved alter is gone, the walls of the front section are missing.

There's something about the word sabotage that arouses the imagination, but to Maj. James Anton Poullson of Norway, an Allied student at the Infantry School, sabotage meant life and

Maj. Poullson, who has been in the service of his country since 1939, was stationed at Elverum, the Norewigan Infantry school, prior to coming here. But that assignment was vast ly different from the tasks he performed during World War II.

In 1942, Poullson and three other men, all members of an independent Norwekian company attached to the British War Office for special duty, were flown to Norway as an advance party to pick a landing place for British gliders and to put up radar beacons. Incoming British troops were to destroy a German plant near the spot selected for the landing. The plant was of enormous value since heavy water used in the manufacture of bombs was made there.

Working with great care, they set up flares to guide the gliders. But in the foggy weather, the planes and gliders failed to see the signal lights and crashed. Most of the 40 men aboard the plane were killed or Following this mishap, the Germans searched the area, forcing the four Norwegians to hide in the mountains, Living forcing the four norwegues to inde in the mountains, Living in the open in freezing weather was bad enough but having to hunt and fish for food in secrecy imposed an even greater hardship. They did not dare approach their countrymen for fear of retaliation by the Germans.

From October until February, the four Norwegians made trips to the plant to observe the Germans. They learned many things about the plant, including how and when the guards changed and how the machinery worked.

All this information was sent back to England, and six more Norwegians were trained to help destroy the plant. When these men joined the original four in Norway, the group knew just where the weak spots were. It was a great surprise to the enemy, and all 10 men got out of the plant before it blew up.

Upon completion of the mission, Poullson started back to England. Fourteen days and nights he traveled on skis, going through Norway to Sweden. It took almost six months to reach England. This trip was made on orders, so if he were apprehended the enemy would know the job had been done by the military and not by the Norwegian people.

In 1944, Maj. Poullson returned again to his native land. On in 1944, Maj. Poulison returned again to his native land. On this mission, he was closely associated with underground for-ces. At this time, the Allies were planning to invade Norway, and the Germans were planning to destroy all equipment and industrial plants to prevent their falling into the hands of the Poullson's group was to attack with the German troops and prevent then from carrying out their program of destruction.

When the job was finished, he remained in Norway.

This is Maj. Poullson's first trip to the United States. He

The story of Maj. Poullson and his comrades has appeared in Readers' Digest and their exploits have been the basis of a

Jeep Is Honest, Sturdy, Young

The accolade which the Museum of Modern Art has bestowed upon the Willys Jeep, . along with the British Bentley and the French Talbot, suits all along that the lines of the jeep were among the most beautiful in all automobiledom They are as honest and sturdy and young as a freckle-faced kid. We never look at a jeep like, exactly or even approxiwithout a feeling of pleasure.

Perhaps our appreciation of the jeep is not as unalloyedly esthetic as it might be. The esthetics of it may be diluted by subjective feelings on the subject. After all, the first jeep, a magical little fellow in the late cartoonist E. C. Segar's 'Thimble Theater" Popeye, crept a good distance into our affections. Any namsake of Eugene the Jeep is a

Some people seem to think that God has one set of moral and spiritual rules for civilian life and a different set for military personnel. They seem to think that being in the Armed Forces of our Nation bestows a special privilege regardin God's laws. They believe that if they should die in Service their entrance into Heaven is assured. God has not made

A career as varied and interesting as any soldier of fortune has been the life of Col. Gines Perez, who has recently been assigned to the staff section of Student brigade.

Col. Perez was born in Cuevas, Almeria, Spain, but when he was 10 years old, he came with his parents to Arizona. It was a little difficult at first to get accustomed to the American way of life, but he soon was playing baseball and eating botdogs with the best of them.

All through his childhood; he was intensity interested in the Army and made up his mind at an early age that he would make the military service his career.

In the years following his graduation from college with a master's degree in metallurgy.

Col. Perez worked as a mining engineer and metallurgist at the one-time notorious inning camp at Tombstone, Ariz. After entering the Army in the early 1830s he was averigned to Army in the early 1830s, be was assigned to the First Cavalry division, which at that time was horse cavalry. During World War II, he fought with the division in the Facific.

Early in the Korean war, Colonel Perez once again went foverseas, this time with the 21st Infantry regiment of the 24th Infantry division. As a battalion and later a regimental commander, he saw some of the bitterest action in the con-

On Sept. 18, 1950, his organization was the subject of a news story by James Bell, which appeared in Time maga-

The incident described in story took place on the road from Kwangju to Angang, where the troops were spread out. South Korean troops were fighting on the right. Suddenly, Col. Perez unit found itself completely surrounded.

After weary hours of fighting, the unit broke out of the enemy ring, only to learn that Company G had been lost. There was no way to rescue the company except for the troops who had broken out to fight their way back. Despite the hardship of such a mission, it was accomplished successfully and branded one of the most incredible feats performed during the war.

Colonel Perez and his outfit made the bandkings of the Hal Boyle, Associated Press writer separated annulum franchis incident which took place last November, The colonel and him two and a half mile-long hatter lion column, entering flaming Chungju late one night heard the rumble of withdrawing North Korean tanks. They see out in pursuit, trailing the enemy by the sound of his clanking tank treads. After about 13 miles, the fleeing Resi column of seven tanks and 50% North Korean infantrymes, turned and tried an Indian ambush. The enemy employed small arms fire, but the 21st defeated them by throwing their own artillery and mortan into action in record time.

"Without bragging," sgid Colonel Perez," we felt that our record that night was better than the books say you can die in a night action." The remarkable thing about the battle was that not a COL. GINES PEREZ single American soldier was killed.

"You can get the heck off now - Spaniel's gone by," said the

"Yeah, but ya never know when he might be back this way," was the retort proper of the still squatting Commander.

DON'T BE SURPRISED if the final outcome of this rip-anorting Fort Benning football season is the naming of an all-star team to oballenge one of the nation's top service teams to an All - Army bowl game at Doughboy Stadium about the middle of December. . And, the way they're playing now, don' be surprised again if that team isn't Fort Jackson's Golder Arrows; who have won six straight including an upset of the perentally powerful Quantico Marines. . Coach Gene Ellenson, former U. of Miami line coach, rates his Jackson squad as "a little better club" than the 1942 Georgia Buildogs with whom he played in the Rose Bowl.

YOU CAN TELL the Benning League has reached the payoff stage with coaches deserting the bench to don pads and get in the game. . .Sam McClurkin, captain of Auburn's 1946 team, Tom Coleman and Jim Petit, of 1947-48 Georgia Tech note and Tom Meseress, of Army, made the shift last week.

Al Noll, on duty as a mortar instructor in the Infantry School was assistant pro to Ross Sobel, noted Miami golf pro. *Loui Williams, of Special Services and former Mississippi State line man, became a proud poppa over the weekend.

FIVE OF the regulars for the spunky Provisional Medica Group eleven are from Mississippi where they played junior college football, . They are Steve Boyette, Paul Cotton, Bot Vaughn and Bob Bestwell. . For that matter, ASU Raide, Coach Claude Howe played center on the same Presbyteria team which featured Horb Lindsey, standout for Special Troop at end, and Howe reports that Lindsey with about pounds added weight is an improved player over his college days . . . Billy Cole and Louis Williams, also of the Raider on to earn a varsity berth at Idaho, while Williams was varsity lineman at Mississippi State.

CTC Observes Anniversary

Combat Training Command this week looked back proudly on its first year of operation as Infantry School demonstration troops, it could well afford to be proud. In only 12 months; CTC has grown from a fev cadremen to a full-blown unit capable of presenting demonstrations for Infantry School students with the precision of soldlera who know they are.doing an excellent lob.

There was no time out for celebration lest Tuesday, how ever, the more than 8,000 officers and enlisted men observ d: their unit's anniversary by showing Infantry School dents the battle - tested techniques of modern warfare. Many of the officers and men, veterans of the Korean conwitnessed as students the same demonstrations they are today presenting for those who will replace them on the hattle-

Combat Training Command started out 12 months ago with a skeleton 30th Infantry Regihind "on paper" when the Third Division sailed for the Far East. On Nov. 6, 1950 the 30th consisted only of a Headquarters Company and Compa ny A. Plans were to make the South the basic unit of Combat at that time only 12 officers.

At the intersection of First Division and Lumpkin roads stands a simple concrete marker with three bronze tablets. Those tablets in a few, well-chosen words tell the history of he land on which Fort Benning, the world's most complete

Before the dawn of the 18th century, a tribe f Indians, known as the Lower Creeks, roamed the fortile lands of the Chattahoochee river valand settled in the town of Kasihta Indian town house was located in the old Benning stable area. Later it was moved to the site on which the quarters of the commandant now stand. This town house was the center of life for the Creek nation, and on the broad lands now Benning training areas, the Indians planted their crops of maize and buried their warriors.

In the 1827 treaty, the Indians renounced all claims to Georgia soil and retired across the boundary line into Alabama. The journey was made with great dignity and in silence. At the head of the column rode the chief with all of the pomp of a soldier on dress parade, followed closely by his family,

Another of the tablets on the marker reads: "At the mouth of Upatoi Creek on this reservation, the Battle of Hitchiti was fought in 1836 between Creek Indians and Georgia militia."

The homesick Indians, who had left their lands following the treaty, dreamed of the happier days. The longing for their old hunting grounds became so acute that in small parties they recrossed the Chattahoochee, Settlers who had followed in the wake of the Indian exodus watched with uneasy hearts as the Indians came again. In this haste, the settlers had encroached on the Indians' property. This incited the Red men, and in 1836, hostilitles broke out at Hitchiti.

It was rumored that 500 Indians had crossed the river and were headed for Columbus. At Hitchiti the milita engaged a straggly party of about 40 Indians in battle. When it ended, both sides counted several dead,

The third tablet reads: "Along the Federal road built in 1811 east and west through this place there passed in 1825 Lafayette, Soldier of France and volunteer in the cause of American liberty."

The famous French general was making a tour through the young country and looking over the land he had helped in its fight for freedom. From Milledgeville, Ga., over the Federal road, the marquis came with his entourage, his final destination being Montgomery, capital of Alabama. Knowing that the Indians were bitter over the treaty, the governor of Alabama appointed Gen. Thomas S. Woodward as escort through the Indians in that area took as much interest in the matter as the escort, however. When the party approached the land now Benning, it balted on the Georgia side of the river. Georgia dignitaries with great ceremony bade the marquis a good trip and turned him over to the Alabama aggregation which was headed by Chilly McIntosh, son of Indian Gen. McIntosh. He was accompanied by 50 Indian braves, their copper skin glisten-

The Indians had prepared a sulky with drag ropes. As the ferryboat reached the Alabama side of the river, two lines of Indians seized the rones and the general was drawn to the top of the bank. As the sulky halted and the general alighted, the assembled crowd gave three loud whoops of welcome.

In 1926, application to place this marker was made by Mrs. H. F. Gaffney, and on Sept. 6, 1929, formal dedication took

"I thought Combet Training Command would be the tenn to take it until they played us last Sunday, but both of us a howed a lot of weaknesses in that game. I think I would pick the 508th to bounce back and win the title," opined the PMG mentor who is fond of the old knock 'em down type of blocking identified with the single wins.

"Make it 508th CTC and Special Troops in that order." he said. "The Red Devils have a good throwing quarterback in Anthony Farene and a setback seems to make the team fight that much harder.

"Frank Spaniel is the best back around, really an All American but the kild who gave me the biggest supplies on CTC's team is Adam Zubaty. On him.

Infantry School Scores Again

The high esteem in which The Infantry School is held by distinguished military and cipointed up sharply by the large number of letters of apprecia tion received from members of the Tenth Joint Civilian Orien-

Not only did these visitors call the School demonstration which they witnessed "splendid and superb," they also praised the enthusiasm a'n d spark of the participants Therein, we believe, lies the secret of the superior performances by both the staff and faculty of The Infantry School. Demonstrations of the calibre of those presented here could likely be seen at other Servschools, but we seriously doubt they could approach the perfection Benning.

Everyone concerned with the demonstrations seems determined to make his part as letter perfect as possible. enthusiasm can in part be attributed to leadership training. But equally as important certainly is the fine spirit of would be unthinkable comradeship which exists between the various teams responsible for these demonstrations. Without the sincere cooperation of all concerned, it's reasonable to assume that every display of Infantry power would not be so remarkably

Infantry School, however, are not new. Since its early days, when Fort Benning was nothing more than a "tent city", this world-famed School has never failed to thrill those fortunate enough to see its den strations. It has never failed to impress those fortunate enough to be enrolled in one of its courses. And it has won the eternal gratitude of those who have passed through its doors to take their place on the battlefield.

It's not an easy task to consistently win the admiration and respect of the generals and admirals, to say nothing of the Nation's leading business and professional men. But for the Infantry School to do less

God's Commandments Help Us Find Happiness

When God made His covenant with the Chosen People, their leader tried to persuade him not to impose the Ten Commandments upon men He argued they would be too difficult to obey. Whereupon, God picked up a mountain and told Moses that either he would accept the Ten Commandments or the mountain would be allowed to fall upon the Chosen People. This story is legendary, but it does illustrate the way many accept the Ten Commandments - either we obey them or a mountain will fall upon us. The Ten Commandments are intended as guides for happy successful living. Men were made for complete and unending happiness. Our hearts were made for God, and our hearts will be restless until we rest with Him

Men in their search for happiness are like soldiers patrolhave no maps, no knowledge which hill there may be a gun more it, we either diminish or emplacement, where the ene-

This week we believe a few words should be written in behalf of the librarians and the great services the libraries are rendering for the personnel of Fort Benning. Since May of 1944, when the Main library moved out of its comparatively small rook in Service club No. 1 to its pres ent site, it has continued to expand to cover all of Fort Benning with a good and wholesome supply of reading matter.

In the early days, library patrons had acess to about a dozen newspapers and 60 periodicals in addition to some 8,000 volumes. Through the years this number has nearly

Science-Fiction of the Week Wine of the Dreamer by John

One of the leading writers of mysteries and science-fiction stories weaves a tale of two planets. The conflict of the story comes in man's struggle to reach the stars and a strange and dying planet and the inhabitants of planet trying to keep man from leaving Earth. These people are known as the Dreamers and are said to control the destiny of man. This struggle progresses to a spine-tingling climax that keeps the reader in suspense until the closing pages.

Called Ladies of the Far East Command, it is made up of dependents of officer personnel who lived in various countries throughout the Far East while their husbands or fathers were on occupation duty there.

Only three years old, the group is steadily growing in membership. Dependents of members of the other armed services are even borrowing the idea and organizing similar grouns.

Among the first of the present members of the FEC group to land in Japan following World War II was Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, who went over to join her bushand. Major Frisby. Maj. and Mrs. Frisby returned to the States in 1947. Upon assignment to Fort Benning, they discovered there were several families here they had known in Japan. It was only natural that old acquaintances should be renewed.

At the same time these ladies were much in demand by other ladies whose husbands were on orders to the Far East. These ladies were interested in learning about the countries to which they were going, so several of the returned ladies hegan giving lectures and displaying the objects of ast they had brought back from the Orient with them.

Mrs. Frisby found several wives were interested in getting together to talk over their "Japanese days", so she arranged a meeting. The first meeting was such a success, that the ladies invited all dependents of those eligible for membership to join their group

The first official meeting was held in April, 1948, with Mrs. Frisby and Mrs. William A. Duncan as hostesses. The Officers' Mess was transformed into a Japanese garden for the event, The hostesses were Japanese kimonos, and the menu was ir Japanese.

Each month since then they have held similar luncheons, with the volunteer hostesses decorating the club and carrying out a motif of the country in which they had been stationed. In time the group included persons who had lived in Korea, China, Guam, Okinawa and the Philippines as well as Japan.

The group already has sponsored a successful art exhibit here, and plans now are being formulated for another. Memhers are working on an idea for an insignia for the group.

Trooper Saves Buddy's Life

The spectacular mid - air rescue of an Airborne soldier by a fellow trooper is a fine tribute to the excellence of the training both men have received. The fact that the resdid not become panicky in the face of what might have meant sure death is in itself remarkable; but the rapidity with which the rescuer reacted to the situation is nothing short of miraculous ick thinking by Pfc. Frank Ellioit saved the life of Pfc. James R. Fernandez and at the same time provided a spine-tingling thrill for some 80 civilians who were witnessing an Airborne demonstration part of the Mayors' Orientation Conference.

The rescue took place during a mass paratroop drop at Lee Field by elements of the Airborne Infantry Regimental Combat Team. Fernandez and Elliott collided in mid-air, collapsing Fernandez chute. When Elliott saw his friend go plummeting by, head first, his automatic reaction was to grab the cano py of the passing chute and old on to it. Fernandez 50 feet above ground before he was able to cepn his reserve chute.

Both Elliott and Fernandez somewhat surprised at the publicity they have received as a result of the incident. Elliott certainly does not consider himself a hero. He simknew that there was chance for him to save a huddy's life, and his training as a trooper had prepared him to meet such a situation with cuer a hero either. Naturally, he's grateful to him for saving his life. But he feels, and rightly so, that Elliottt only did his duty. Neither would want it any other way.

It takes more than a desire to jump out of airplanes to become a paratrooper. Not only is a man required to meet rigid physical specificans, he also must be mentally alert.

Under the best of conditions, jumping is a hazardous occu pation. Otherwise, there would be no justification for hazard pay of $50 monthly for en-listed men and $100 for officers. However, jumping is not necessarily dangerous.

A man who heeds instructions offered him by his jumpmaster and who carefully checks his equipment before rding the aircraft need never fear injury. Although there are sometimes circumstances over which he has no control. such as that which happene week to Fernandez, his training prepares him to danger he might any danger he might That was proved last face, week by Fernandez' efforts to open his reserve chute and Elliott's spontaneous reaction Both are as much a part of Airborne training as knowing how to "hook up" properly.

Perhaps the greatest testimonial any paratrooper could deliver in behalf of his profession came in answer to a newspaper reporter's question. Asked whether they wanted to jump again, Elliott and Fer-nandez replied, almost in uni-

'Why, of course, We'll probmp next week." And they both did.

Red Demands Again Threaten Truce Hopes

Truce talks in Korea were again bogged down. Chinese and North Korean foreign ministers called for sterner measures that amounted to a throw-back to the Red's stand prior to the first truce talks in July. They again insisted unon removal of foreign troops se-fire along the parallel and an immediate stop to the fighting. These points also were included in a proposal made by Russian For-Minister Andrei sky in Paris on Nov. 8 before the United Nations General Assembly.

On the sports scene, Judge Saul Streit handed down stiff sentences to five former col lege basketball stars, and at ame time issued a bitter denouncement of colleges for fostering athletic conditions which he said helped lead the vouths to the penitentiary. Judge Streit brought forth many examples of collegiate sports corruption that had ome to light during his examination of the national legiste scene Amme them was that 100 faculty members at the University of Michigan charged a double - standard was used in crediting athletes and non-athletes for extra-curricular activities. At Bradley, "a spot check shows that eight (athletes) were majoring physical education, and amo the courses for which credit was given were handball, elementary swimming, se dancing, football and first aid."

In Washington, the Defense Department has asked Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway for a more specific 'clarifying' statement on the reported Communist slaughter of some 5,500 American prisoners of war in Korea, General Ridgway has expressed regret over the manner of timing of a report on the atrocities released to the press last week.

Chaplain's Corner

We Ought to Show Our Gratitude to God Daily

BY CHAPLAIN JOHN L. STRUBE, Jr.

In this Thanksgiving season almost everyone's thoughts are turned toward the Lord in thankfulness for the many wonderful gifts He has bestow ed upon us. It would seen that everyone saves all his thankfulness for this particular season, but it is hard to believe there is as much ingratitude in the world the rest of the year as is commonly pointained

I have never interpreted the parable of the Ten Lepers to nean that only one was ful. All ten, surely, were hurried home first to greet their friends and attend to their business, intending to go to Jesus soon afterward an thank Him. But things turned out otherwise; they were kept at home longer than they meant to be, and in the meanwhile Jesus was put to death. One of them, however, had a disposition that made him act at once as his feelings bade him. He sought out the person who had helped him and refreshed his soul with the assurance of his gratitude

In the same way we ought all to make an effort to act on our first thoughts of gratitude and let our unspoken gratitude find expression. Then there will be more sun-shine in the words and more power to work for what is good. We must all take care not to adopt as part of our theory of life others' bitter sayings We must all take care about the ingratitude of the world. A great deal of water is flowing underground which comes up as a spring. In that though we may find comfort. But we must try to be the water that does find its way up. We must become a spring at which men can quench their thirst for grati-

our God for the blessings He has bestowed upon us. Though we should set aside a day each year dedicated wholly to thanking God, it should not end there. A portion of each day of the year should be set aside for such thanksgiving. When we get used to thanking God constantly, it will be easier to show our gratitude to others. In turn it will make it easier for others to show their gratitude to us.

Keeping this rule of daily thanks to God would be made much easier if all of us would begin each day with a much prayer like this one written by George Herbert: Thou that hast given so much to me. e one thing more - a grate-

The Rose Bowl Game by

If you call yourself a football then this is one book that

It's the story of the Rose Bowl, told by Rube Samuelson, one of the foremost sport writers in the country.

Fifteen years research has gone into the story that had its beginning in 1902. This was the year that 8,000 fans saw Michigan heat Stanford 49.0 the first Pasadena classic. In the last chapter he de ibes the 1951 game that close to 100,000 fans witnessed. one of the indicators that shows low the Rose Bowl has con to be regarded as a national institution in the world of Samuelson devotes a chant to each of the New Year's Day games. He gives not only the of the rames but supple these with the human side the big contests, drawing innumerable colorful anecd from the playing field, the bench, the press box and stands.

He recalls the early games Brewn traveling to Pasadena with the idea of an easy game with Washington State went into the game as one of the most confident teams ever to play in the game — only to be beaten by the Washington team, 14-0. — The service teams that played in the Bowl during the war years of 1918-19
- the last ride of the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame 1923—the wrong way run of Reigels in the Georgia Tech-California game of 1920. Fort Benning in 1924 was a far ory from the neat, famous post it is today, according to M-Sgt. Morgan Rogers who took basic training here 27 years ago as a "raw recruit".

Sergeant Rogers; chief clerk of the Records group, Army Extension Course department, was assigned for basic to the 28th Infantry regiment, at that time, quartered in tents. None of the streets here were paved, and few of the buildings that today make Benning a showplace of the Army begun Basic training also was quite different then. It took six months

Basic training also was quite unierent tien. It took to complete, and was sprinkled with large doses of discipline. Drilling was emphasized more than it is today, and Rogers claims that there's not much ground at Benning that hasn't re-not much ground at Benning that nash tre-sounded to the echo of his plodding feet. Rogers' first duy assignment was as a bu-gler. In the days before bugle calls were plac-ed on records, being a bugler was no soft touch. Every formation required a bugle call, and it took a strong pair of lungs to last through a day, says Rogers.

He went right up the promotion ladder, and held many dif-ferent jobs. From bugler he worked his way up to platoon sergeant, mess sergeant, first sergeant and finally sergeant major.

When Rogers held the job, a mess sergeant was a person of supreme importance. There were no master menus in those days, and the mess sergeant had to be a combination dietitian, cook and ration clerk. Some of the food was bought from outside sources by the mess sergeant, and it was up to him to see that he got the best quality for the smallest amount of money,

There were no trucks in those days, either, and supplies had to be transported from the commissary to the mess hall by push-cart. Many times Rogers took his push cart from belo Pine Lodge NCO mess is today, to the commissary, aded it with supplies, then pushed it back to his mess.

Each year, mess sergents scrimped and saved to have enough money on hand tor enough money on hand tor holidays like Thanksgiving and Christmas so they could add a few extra trimmings.

At the beginning of World War II, Rogers went overseas with the 29th as part of the First Infantry division. From 1941 until 1945 he served with that unit in Iceland, England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

When he returned from overseas he was assigned to Fort Bliss, Tex., but on his next reculistment he came back on Nov. 1 this year he re-enlisted for the eighth time. He hasn't much hope of staying at Benning, but says that if he's ordered overseas he's ready to go. "That is my duty

Sergeant Rogers feels that he and Benning have grown up together. He has a deep pride in the fame that has come to Benning, for he feels that he has had a part in making it the art avenue. modern post it is today.

If he does have to go overseas, his one hope is that when he able to come back home to Fort Benning

PFC BARBARA I HARVE

Miss Benning

A pert brunette who loves athletics has been chosen as this week's Miss Benning.

She is Pfc. Barbara J. Harvey, who has been in the Woman's Army Corps for about 18 months and at Fort Benning for eight months. One of her chief reasons for entering the Army, she says, was a desire to meet new and interesting people. She also wanted to further her education and to travel

... and the price is up far less than most things you buy!

> "GOODNESS, how he's grown!" And you could say the same about telephone service during the short time since his babyhood. ACTUALLY, in just eight years the number of local telephones Georgians can call has more than doubled.

So Big in Service ... So Little in Cost

BEST OF ALL, this bigger, better "package" of service has gone up in price only a fraction as much as prices in general . . . and less than our cost of providing the service.

ALWAYS one of your biggest bargains, telephone service is today an even better buy than it was ten years ago, and a smaller part of your family budget,

SPORTS

by Cpl. Charles Johnson

THE NEW holy war against college football is rocking the and a rear pay war against conege too out it to early the foundations of a basically fine and sound sport. That seems to be the majority opinion of Fort Benning Football League coaches who represent a cross section of the nation's colle-

All agreed that the game needs regulating as it never did before. But they think they can put their finger on the real culprit without the current alarmist trend — set off by scandals in OTHER sports - which threatens to alter the very structure of football as we now see it played.

The coaches to whom I talked were Harold Kopp, on The coaches to whom I talked were Harold Kopp, on leave of absence as head mentor at Rhode Island university, Jack Faublon, All-America honorable mention at Oklahoma A & M and a high school coach: Tom Mesercan, former star suard and assistant coach at Army; George Bokinsky, All-American candidate from Duke's 1943 Bose and fearn; Tom Colema 1442 Economic Section 1442 Economic Section 1442 Economic Section 1442 Economic Section 1444 Econo Bohinsky, All-American candidate from Duke's 1943 Bose wil team; Tom Coleman, 1949 Georgia Tech Captain and a high school coach; Frank Teague, former Holy Cross quarterback, and Jim Petit, a standaut halfback for three seasons with Georgia Tech.

These experits, then, blame not the system, but many, many starry-eyed alumni, the vast majority of whom never played football, and a very few coaches and college administrators, who let the game run them, instead of vice versa, for most of the wrongs which have caught the crusading fancy of the game of the wrongs which and a few anteroptions mosts writers.

None of them can see any real cause for alarm about the integrity and future of college football, but if the sport does spring a leak they think it will be the fans with their "win or else" demands who tip the boat.

The wholesale resignation of proven coaches — Blair-Cherry, of Texas, Wes Feeler, of Ohio State, Jeff Cravath, of Southern California, Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota and Marchie Solwaris, of Stanford, to name a few who lost their lobs last season — can be attributed directly to the howl of the mob — the alumni.

lows of the mob — the alumni.

If any college athlete does accept a cash tribe, if any more cheat on exams or have their scholastic marks otherwise tampered with to maintain eligibility, it will be because of the pressure to win, exercised with threat, money and other than the property of the property the pressure to win, exercised with threat, money and other means by the fans upon the players, coaches and college of ficials who are responsible for a "winning team."

In short, the fans are what is wrong with college football, say the majority of Fort Benning's coaches. Their comments, recorded below, indicate that the game does have its problems on the field, but these can be accounted to natural growing pains which suddenly have been spot-lighted by deemphasis. Their opinion of the merits of this latest trend are reflected in their statements.

Only one of the six polled belleved that symmetrical.

Only one of the six polled believed that spring training should be abolished. All expressed reservations of varying degrees about the two-platoon system, but agreed that its chief evil is cost, not execution.

George Bokinsky, who played three seasons of 60-min

George Bokinsky, who played three seasons of 66-min-ute, single wing foothall for Wallace Wade, was the only Benning mentor who thought de-emphasis should be car-ried to the point of eliminating spring drills, "The game in getting out of hand. It's got to be controlled, probably locally or with each individual conference," volun-teered Bokinsky, "I was taking three labs in college and spent very little time in spring practice, Sometimes we used no more than 15 men a game. I don't think any of us were the worse off for it."

But Kopp, veteran of 16 years' coaching, including three seasons as line mentor for Herman Hickman at Yale, took the

"Once fall practice starts there is the pressure of senting ready for the first same, and the pressure deem't let up smill you've played your last same. You don't experience is the fall; you work on tried and proves formalis that will win next Saturday's same. That sort of taking will hart the natural development of feetball."

"Cost is the big factor in spring practice, the two-platoon system and everything else in football," moaned Frank Teague, who blandly admits he has shunned coaching since finishing at Holy Cross in 1838 because he doesn't need the ulcers.

"The price of a big college team today is staggering. That means a coach is forced to turn out a team that will fill the stadium every weekend. De-emphasis like they're talking now will hurt the caliber of the game, which in turn will hurt the gate. Then you will hear a howl from the alumni and ad-

But Tom Mesereau, hard charging West Point guard from 1840 through 42 and a line coach for Earl Blank for two seasons through 1849, undorsed today's specialized game.

"More mels can play teday, men who might not make the team if they had as play 60 minutes and be good at everything," he said. "More bers have a change to attitude college today because of feetball, and to my mind there

Jim Petit, who helped spark Georgia Tech to two straight

"It doesn't take a hundred players to have defensive and "it doesn't take a hundred players to have defensive and offensive teams," he said emphatically. "You can do it with 35 or 40 men at the most, but the big colleges today are handing out from 100 to 150 (coptall ascholarships, That's the svil they've got to cut out, You get 100 kids up to the campus and then find out you can't use 25 of them. That doesn't do those boys any good either.

"Big squad or little, though, a coach is going to have good and bad seasons just the same. That's something they bave to teach the alumni!"

"It's very seldom the faculty or directors of a college wants "it's very seldom the faculty or directors of a college wants to dismiss a coach. It's the almund with the unholy desire to have their alma mater get bigger headlines than anyone else's," observed Bokinsky. "Look at Carl Snavely; one of the finest coaches and men in the game, but I'm not surprised today."

"Insofar as I was able to tell, we always had high academic standards in the cast, and there was no wantom recruiting on the school's part," explained Teague. "But what can you'de when an alumnus wants a promising high school kid to attend his school. He'll give him money. high school lid to attend his school. He'll give him money, a car, anything to land the boy. The coach, under the the same pressure from alumni, is not roller to turn down such a boy who will then enter every game under that

"Want to put an end to this business?" queried Kopp point edly. "Give every coach in America an iron-clad 10-year contract. Then cut out spring training, cut off two-platoons contract: Inen cut out spring training, cut off two-piateons and take away the water boy, too. Then the coach can explain his losing season to everybody without worrying about his job. Capt. Joella Wallace, a nurse stationed at U. S. Army hospital here, has fulfilled most of her childhood ambitions since ioining the Army Nurse Corps 12 years ago.

When she was a very small child, she thought she wanted to be a writer, but in high school, she changed her mind and decided to mix a nursing career with travel. She didn't know at that time how she would manage to do both, but found the solution in the ANC.

Upon graduation from high school in her hometown at Decatur, Ga., she entered St. Joseph's Infirmary in Atlanta, and after three ears became a registered nurse.

She joined the ANC, and was assigned to Fort McPherson, Ga., just outside Atlanta. She was there for a year, then the travel part of her dreams began to come true. She was assigned to Puerto Rico.

She was stationed there for three years, then eturned to the States and an assignment at Mitchel Field, N. Y.

Opportunity knocked at her door again when six Braxilian nurses arrived at Mitchel for further training. None of the nurses sprived at anuncie for jurine; training, wone of murses spoke English, so Captain Wallace, who had learned Spanish while in Puerto Rico, was pressed into service to help train them and act as liaison between the Brazilians and the staff.

After they had been there two months, they were ordered to Italy to join a group of Brazilian Air Force personnel there. Captain Wallace was assigned to go along with them. She found that the South Americans spoke more Portgugese than Spanish, so she spent the 19 - day trip to Italy learning

Captain Wallace claims that her 12 years in the ANC have been the most profitable of her whole life, and she feels that any girl interested in nursing would do well to look into the enportunities offered by the corps.

She is looking forward to her pext eight years, and to the retires. When asked what she plans to do in retirement, she summed up her plans in one word: "Travel."

IF THE OFFENSE of both teams got offensive is the mality event last Friday, night at Doughbor Arena, remember that after all is said and done; football remains is game which is also played after school by little boys on vaccatif tols. Combat Training Command and Lawson Als Force Base lads, were charing so much tun taking more hard inocks; then a first terpeant's character that they didn't want to cease at his end of the regulation four quariers.

However, the ASU Provisional Group Band for everbody home in time for television by playing the National Anthems Strong union, those musicianal incidentally, the TV menu offered boring from Madison Square Garden, Heavyweight Clarence Henry kicked as field goal with Bob Baker, in the sighth round, and that evened up everything between football; and prize fighting for the night.

Still, at one plaint during the game, rival players got to telling each other; just where its get infinite when I was the lock of the CFU bench. Commander Line Goach Bill Harbour rushed-says and heatedly told McChurfint 'You get off at the course of Wheth all heat to your left to the athletic office where you buy tickets for Sunday's game, between we'ung and 50th." (End. of commercial).

Canal World Konn was still feeling the New World Konn was still feeling the total through the order.

Coach Hareld Kopp was still feeling Air Force Blue today wer the near loss of injured Halback Frank Spaniel. Admitting that Frank is a haifback of the first degree (not to mention the second and third degree which degree (not so menuon the second and tourd degree which he sayes to use on opposing linemen). CTC still had an offense after the former Noire Dame brilliant left the ceffenie after the former Notre Dame brillian left the premises.

You couldn't get Kopp to name a price of Price, George Price, that is, who when he graduated last June from South Carolina State must have left football in a forry state (Ot affairs, I meen, pad no aspersion on Jimm's Byings bull. wick.) Like a heroine on heroin, All-S.I.A. Conference Quarterback Price was strictly "out for kicks."

His best rolled out of beyinds on the Lawson, one-foot line in the last quarters. He tried a field goal from the Playard line in the last second before the half, but Lawson had maintained control of the air lanes all eventure and probably will be blamed, foo, for the III wind which deviated the pipskin wedward, ha!

Speaking of air mastery, young Giffnet operated line a stem ludge preading over a bankrupty court for Ill-fortuned live-stock raisers as he repeatedly put the porher in the hands of receivers. Although the 21-year old Birminghow Dimber-leaves something to be desired as a, T model, twarterpach and might be, like his great brother, Harry, even, more refered the made the difference for Lawson Field Friday evening, as they have all senson.

the beginning of the study, this unit was faced with a three weeks Backlog, and it was increasing every day.
There were It people engaged in sorting and filing at a cost of more than $27,000 a year, conpletely revised and sorting equipment was psuchased. Now only pletely revised and sorting equip-ment was purchased. Now only two men are employed and the sorting which formerly required 11 manhours per day only re-quires about a third of a man hour each day. All of the per-sonnel released were placed in other jobs.

Rams Win; 186,084 See Record Year

BY CHARLES JOHNSON

Fort Benning's most successful sports program and football year came to a close last Sunday and undefeated Special Troops Rams, the combination Student Brigade-Infantry School Detachment eleven, were waiting for Monday night when they will be officially named 1951 grid champs.

The otherwise brilliant Rams cliniched the title rather a view by an inspired Lawson Air Force Base, 771, Friday night.

Combat. Trelaing Command beat 508th Airborne Infantry, 12-10, by way of formally closing.

beat Spein Airporne intentry, Ai-10, by way of formally closing out the season Sunday. This one didn't prove a thing except that 9,500 persons were willing to pay admission to see a good football

"I can coach better from the bench," he had told me. "In there quarterbacking I think of each play and have to take care of myself, too. I don't see as much in the game as I do

"I figured that if we were going to blow one this year this was the psychological moment for it to happen. It almost happened. We get inside their ten on the first two plays and then we couldn't score that was all they needed to

So it was Faublon who was on the field to engineer the 88-yard drive which enabled the Rampi to catch up with the Flyers in the third quarter Friday night and preserve their champlonship if not their dignity as they fell heir to a 7-7 tie.

He engineered it, too, carrying three times himself for 11 yards. Then he pitched to Herb Ligadesy for 21 yards and to twen Griffin for 18 more. On the Lawson 18, veryone was expecting more of same when Jim Dunlessy suddenly faded on a direct map and MI Lindsey in the end some. It think, about three people were trying to tackle Faublon while Dunlessy and clear awaiting his received.

The Hann had a lot of talent two and chemic have beaten a couple of them through these graduance has the fice hear giass into which some knave slepped a gob of putty. Special Troops talent want't very well balanced; ties finally which didn't love a game.

"Our defense was our best offense," observed Faubien, who is or leave from a fligh school doaching assignment at Greesbeck, Tex. "Those teams fumbled against us because we were

"Singleton was the difference in that one," admitted Faubion, referring to the Rams' 27.6 win ever Combat Training Command Sept. 28, which, as it turned out, was the most crucial game of the season. "He could quarter-back the T and with our line in front of him he did every-thing just like he wanted. It was a pretty sight,"

Coach Harold Kopp, of the second place Commander, concurred, "Singleton and our own messing around at the start of the season cost us that one," he mused, "They hadn't decided who was eligible to play with us until a week before the season and when the bell rang we just weren't ready." Kopp and Faublon not only agreed on that, but they dotted their caps to sing high praises of this Benning grid season.

"It is unequalignable, the bast service; feethad! I ever new," said Rembies, who coached the fair Division team to second place in the Japan Area competition in 1645 and later played with the thre Division clayon."

"This season has done more than anything I there to identify our unit and make the men in it a proud gang," chimed in Kop. "We slaway and terrific support from the grandstand. The boys talked about it all the time. Those held."

I'm giad that the Firsts could be the Rams in the hast game. It says the Rams one to have the berd way, no fact about it, and so for the Firsts, it proved there weren't any, set sisters in the Bennine league, Caped, him Petit hand't been so happy since he belped set up the touchdown that gave Georgia Tech a win over Georgia in 1947, 7-0.

SEPARATION STEPS . . . Since the Separation Detachment of the 3440th Area Service unit was set up in July, nearly 2,000 men have been pro-cessed and discharged through the section. Of this number, 1,022 were-reservists who served in Korea. When Washington announced that all inactive reservists were to be released by Dec. 20, the unit was already separating an average of 28 men per day. The illustration above shows the steps dischargees go through when being separated from the service. The unit is now processing men from Fort McPherson, Ga., since the separation center there has been deactivated.

THERE WERE no special awards made for the hard slaving guys they call coaches, but as grid laurels were being handed out freely around the post this week, I would like to devote a portion of this pillar to a fine fellow whom I as my Coach of the Year at Benning if such

The nomination goes to Capt, George Bokinsky who mentored Provisional Medical Group. Yes, little P.M.G. which won only one game all season and was clearly eliminated from

In handing out credit for a team's accomplishments there is usually a lot of discussion as to where the efforts of the coach end and the talent of the players takes over. In this instance, I cite Bokinsky wholeheartedly; he had boys who were willing, but that was all. Some had played funior college stuff, a few more high school hall and about

Yet out of this hopelessness, Bokinsky, who as Duke's 1942 Rose Bowl quarterback, needs no further buildup here as a player erected a fighting squad which in locing four more than a two touchdown margin. Imagine champion Speclai Troops having to take advantage of a dead punt on the Medics one and an intercepted pass to win, 14-0. And P.M.G. carried through that beautiful Ram line to inside the 10-yard

Imagine - and it's no imagination if you saw it like the Medics, only to have them come back and score, all before the intermission, and then hold the Flyers scoreless in the second half, 508th punched out a quick TD and then was stunned when the Medics roared back to make it 7-7 P.M.G. had one scoring threat broken up by a pass interception on the Red Devils' 19, before finally submitting, 19-1.

Combat Training Command handed Bokinsky's crew its worst beating, 33-6, but it was no more than a two TD margin (21-6) going into the final stanza then the Medics' physical strength descried their fighting hearts against the highest scoring outfit in the league. CTC Coach Barold the most baffling defense he saw all season,

How did all of this happen? I say this much. Bokinsky, who played in the days when 15 men in action in a single game was exceptional, knows his single wing and he knows his defensive football. He can make a team think it has a chance, too. Players like Fullback Sturgeon Watkins and their experience, but if Bokinsky had been blessed with a fast tallback — say a Spaniel — some of the trophies they passed out last week would have been going in the cent for being a regular official in the Southern Conference he has stuck pretty close to his trade since coming out of Duke in '42. That was his big year. They still say he came off the bench that year to tackle Tennessee's Bob Suffridge Against Oregon State in the Rose Bowl, which the west coasters won 20-16 in the war-time version played at Dur-ham, N.C., Bokinsky almost reversed the score when he intercepted a pass and headed for TD land only to clobbered 10 yards out by a desperate tackler. Bokinský did have one brief fling at service coaching, in 1844 when he skippered the Greensboro, N.C. Air Force team which had Charlie Trippi.

Anyway, that's my Coach of the Year. And bon voyage, captain; it will be Benning's loss when you take off a new overseas assignment.

MAN TAKING the words right out of my mouth: Maj. Gen. rch, at Monday's grid banquet: "I haven't met anyone who isn't sorry that the season is over.". . .Did you know that Bohby Davis, Ga. Tech All-America tackle who officiated lenning games, is a prother-in-law of Lawson Field Coach Jim Petit? (Jim introduced Bob to his wife's sister and—bingo!). .In the hubbub Monday night someone (he means himself) forgot to pay tribute to Jack Fahujon's fine cocoaches, Frank Teague and Tom Coleman. . And my thanks right now to the fine P.I.O. workers — like Finus Gaston Whitey McMullin, Dene Carney, Herb Horst and Bosworth—

ONLY PERSON I know who by request was a guest at every unit's personal grid party was Ermin Edgecombe, the doc who was on hand at every game to take care of injured players. . Gridders Jaok Harriss and Tom Dutey doubled as toastmasters for C.T.C. and 508th banquets respectively

. Toulse Hall, Lois Bremmer and Frances Wheeler special guests at the 506th shindig. . Halfback Howard McParland moves in as CTC's PlO photog replacing discharged Norman Sander who with Lean Cohn compiled Commander tootball

Christmas Spirit Should Be Kept All Year

By Chaplain (Col.) Joel M. Wareing

The Christmas season is with us once again. The people of America are attempting to "get into the Christmas Sprit". Everywhere we go we see and hear those things which are intended to arouse in us this Christmas Spirit. As a result of this emphasis we find our-selves developing once a year an emotional experience which the time from the day after Thenkediging to Christmas day and ebbs away from Christmas to New Years.

Christmas is a development or evolution over a period of oe and has collected around it the traditions and customs of all the peoples and Nations he have participated in its observance through the centuries Christmas is however. more than a National obser wance bistorical event church or religious festival. MAKE-BELIEVE GENERAL . . . Paramount's Larry Teal, right, an actor in the Martin-Lewis comedy "Jumping Jacks", gets his brigadier general's star from a real-general—Maj. Gen. John H. Church, Infantry Center commender. General Church pinned the star on the actor's shoulder while he was here filming the movie, in which he plays the part of a general.

Christmas will be brighter this year for two allied officers at-tending the Infantry School be-cause of the friendliness of an American Army officer and his family.

IF GOOD COACHING means anything Col. Cortlandt Krams' A.S.U. Provisional Group sluggers should have a head-start on other units who will compete against them in The Infantry Center Boxing Tournament Jan. 21. Of course, they have Larry Jones, who has something like a first mortgage on the Third Army middleweight title, but it's Larry's assist-

Majors is a congenial chap who has been knocking about majors is a congenial cnap who has been knowing about in the ring game for a good many semesters. He can't claim any particular boxing distinction for himself, even though the winner of ?! professional heavyweight bouts, but he has certainly touched gloves with some of the brighter

Serving in Britain in the last war, he even got around to boxing an exhibition with the somewhat distinguished Freddie Mills, and Lord love a duck, if Frankie didn't up and kaye the blighter who subsequently won the in' light heavyweight crown.

"It was a pretty easy fight. He must have improved a lot after I met him," modestly says Majors, not seeking credit for what might have been a war time fluke.

Majors bas also swapped punches with Joe Louis and Exzard Charles; not professionally, but as a sparring partner.

Frankle grew up, within two blocks of the Bomber's house in Detroit and both fighters attended the same church. It was in March of 1942, with Louis in training for his battle with Bob Pastor, that Majors first boxed Joe, When Louis told him after the session that he was a good prospect Frankle was on his way professionally. But Frankle can't put in an encouraging word for Louis today.

"I think Joe is through as a title contender," says the A.S.U. mentor, but he doesn't believe in the old axiom that they never come back. "Take a look at Joe Walcott. It's just a case of old age hitting some athletes before

Frankie was boxing with Charles when both were teurs and long before he met the Brown Bomber. They first crossed at Brewster Center in Detroit in 1938 in a fourrounder, Majors didn't go pro until after his early sessions

"Now Ezzard is a fellow I think will come hack," opined Majors, "He's a good boxer, fairly young and very fast even

he will put his service experience to good use in tutoring A.S.U. ringmen. Two weeks after coming into service in 1942 he won the Fort Warren, Wyoming, light heavyweight title, and later annexed post titles at Fort Knox, Ky., and Camp

As a quach, his Fort Warren squad took seven of eight titles in the 1943 All-Army Boxing Tournament in Denyer. His 1946 Camp Lee, Va., team took the post champio ship and won the local district Golden Glovés. His squad won the post team championship at Fort Biley, Kans., in 1948 and his 1949 crew slugged their way to the post title

If you want to argue with Frankie about his opinio Louis, Charles and other pro sluggers, okay, but don't pick any quarrels with the A.S.U. ring team which he will help Jones direct in quest of the Fort Benning crown in January

APPARENTLY FOLLOWING the timeless axiom of which refers to joining them if you can't beat 'em, Claude Howe, coach of A.S.U.'s late football team, has moved to the 30th Infantry Regiment, which is another way of saying Combat Training Command. The Commanders gave Howe's gridders their worst beating of the season, a 53-9 whitewash job, Incidentally, Bob Williams, the best lineman on that A.S.U. team, who subsequently transferred to Special Services, has now moved his gear to Company E of C.T.C. Coach Harold Kopp please note.

BY TIME YOU read this, my friends, I will be recovering from the after effects of much lusty cheering as a spectator at the North-South Shrine Game Christmas Night in Miami Orange Bowl Classic, After that and a few races at Tropical Park, I'll see you back on these pages for what promises to be a rip-snorter of a Benning basketball season. Meantime season's greetings to all of you-may you live as long as you want, and may you never want as long as you live.
