Many other famous names in recent American military history claim the Infantry School as their alma mater. Mark W. Clark, wartime commander of the Fifth Army and now Far East Command, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, retired Army chief of staff, Gen. Walton Walker, heroic commander of the Eighth Army who was killed in Korea, and Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former Eighth Army commander, were all Infantry School graduates.

One of the most colorful figures to bear American arms in World War II was here in 1940. Gen. George S. Patton, who served Third Army's spectacular advance against the Nazis, commanded the Second Armored division when it was at Fort Benning.

Signal Controls Communication Network on Post

Signal Corps personnel must be good technicians as well as good soldiers. On them depends the steady operation of communications and allied fields that represent the intricate nerve system of the Infantry Center.

More than 180 soldiers and civilians are required to operate activities.

The Wire Division supplies personnel for the post's three telephone exchanges and maintains all overhead and underground cable. Three hundred miles of cable keep ranges and problem areas in contact with the Mainpost.

The underground cable alone would reach from Fort Benning to Chattanooga, Tenn., according to Lt. Col. Chester L. Martin, signal officer of Muskogee, Okla. In the wires in the cables were stretched out the total measure 35,000 miles, or one and one half times the circumference of the earth.

The Communications Center of the Signal Section operates teletype, cryptographic and Western activities. The Western Union office is a non-profit activity, maintained for the convenience of Fort Benning troops.

All photographic assignments are handled by the Signal Corps photographers. The Pictorial Branch also is responsible for the film library, which has 90 16-mm sound projectors and approximately 1200 training films.

Distribution and maintenance of the highly complicated signal equipment is the job of the section's Property Division which is responsible for everything from cameras to typewriters.

Fort Benning also is home to the 584th Signal Construction Company. A training unit, the 584th is used in support of The Infantry School.

PREPARED BY FRANK W. BUN. Four enlisted men have been promoted in Headquarters and Service Company, 73rd Tank Battalion. They are Clarence R. Jordan and James A. Godfrey, who were promoted to corporal; and Richard L. Raymond and Marvin C. Gilmore, who were promoted to private first class.

PXs Operate 50 Branches

50 outlets of the Post Exchange, headed by Lt. Col. Martin J. Stefan, operate retail branch exchanges, children's shops, bowling alleys, service stations and several guest houses.

In addition, concessions operated by civilians are controlled by the post exchange system. These include dry cleaning and laundry establishments and watch, shoe repair and barber shops.

Profits from the PXs provide and support means of recreation and amusement for post personnel.

At the Infantry Center, as at other posts, profits are returned to soldiers in the form of service club facilities, athletic equipment and facilities, day rooms, music programs, hobby shops, libraries and other activities designed for off duty entertainment and relaxation.

BENNING'S BEGINNING... Any resemblance between this and the World's most complete Army post is purely coincidental. These temporary buildings and tents, however, housed the first troops to come to the original Camp Benning at its first location on Macon Road, three miles from the heart of Columbus.

"I Know the Russian Soldier," is one of 17 articles and features, illustrated with photographs, diagrams and maps, that appear in the October issue of this magazine—the only magazine published exclusively for Infantrymen.

Other articles in the magazine include "A Red Convincer," a detailed story on how to make and use an M1 marksmanship training device which in one battalion alone enabled 99 per cent of the men to qualify; and six articles on the combat lessons learned in Korea.

Use of helicopters in behind-the-line raids is told in Captain Blackford E. Sawyer's diagrammed story on "Road From the Sky," in "Supply by Air," the do's and don'ts of air supply, both as an emergency and a planned technique, are outlined.

The latest OACAF change on the employment of tanks and infantry in the attack is explained for the first time in any military publication. This detailed article uses drawings and diagrams to enable instructors to teach the three methods of employment instead of the five previously used.

The Quarterly reflects new thinking in the Infantry today. While the magazine is written principally for the infantryman, it is designed to benefit members of all branches of the service.

Variety Sparks Special Troops

Housekeeper for the home of the Infantry is the Special Troops Command which has the vital function of administering Fort Benning's service units.

Members of the STC might easily be called the men behind the gun. They are the clerks, typists, and drivers without whom the post could not operate.

Activated Feb. 1, 1949 as the Area Service Unit Provisional Group, its main mission was to administer and train the service units and staff specialists that perform much of the administrative work at The Infantry Center.

On April 1, 1953 the organization's name was changed to Special Troops Command. It has continued to carry out the same functions.

Infantry Given Help of Wheels to Keep Rolling

The wheels keep turning in the Infantry largely because of the Automotive Department of the Infantry School.

Levy-Morton Company

Repairs to Electrical Appliances—Complete Stocks of Parts for Converting Vases, Shells, etc. to Electric Lamps.

1028-13th St.

Although many a foot-wearer soldier might argue the point, automobiles, trucks, and jeeps play a big part in the effectiveness of any Infantry operation. To provide the technical information needed by the men who must operate and care for the Infantry's vehicles is the job of the Automotive Department.

Broadly speaking, the department has two main missions: to train, in a 10-week course, the motor officers and motor sergeants who will be charged with the primary responsibility of providing transport for the footsoldiers, and to familiarize officer candidates, advance officer classes and other Infantry School students with important data on the care of internal combustion engine vehicles.

The plans and training group of the department acts as overall supervisor of instruction, preparing teaching programs, arranging for training aids and writing new field manuals. The technical training group committees work under the planners and handle the actual instruction in mechanical subjects, such as basic and advanced engines, electrical maintenance, power units and running gears.

A special subjects committee concentrates on such highly specialized phases as welding. It also designs new visual aids to training.

In accordance with Army policy of emphasizing coordination between tanks and the rifleman, the department gives students 32 hours of familiarization of tank maintenance.

The department educates the driver as well as the mechanic. One of its committees trains students in driver selection, motor pool administration, rates of the road, convoy operation, and control and techniques of motor movements.

During the current fiscal year the total number of allied officers receiving training at Fort Benning will exceed the total of U.S. officers trained in the fiscal year 1932-1933.

Economy Post's New Pass Word

The new pass word at Fort Benning is economy.

On every hand Infantry Center personnel are cautioned to guard against waste. "Get the most for every defense dollar, waste aside the enemy," signs and posters emphasize.

Unit bulletin boards and classroom lectures proclaim the message of economy. Infantry Center publications remind military personnel it is their duty to prevent waste.

This dynamic program, unexpectedly labeled "cost consciousness," got its start here more than two years ago. Its purpose is to insist the active participation of all personnel in reducing costs and eliminating waste.

Results Note
According to officials of the Infantry Center Comptroller's office, the cost consciousness program is an Army wide operation which is constantly bearing results. Two allied programs have been adopted to promote the idea of cost consciousness. The first is a management improvement, the other efficiency awards. The management improvement program is designed primarily to educate supervisors in ways and means of cutting costs in their activities.

Under the awards program military and civilian personnel are urged to promote the idea of cost consciousness. The first is a management improvement, the other efficiency awards. ## Engineer Section Keeps Post Installations Intact

Any city of 30,000 population whose services, plants, utilities, roads, and other installations went unattended for one day would find its business seriously crippled.

The Infantry Center Engineer Section under Col. Richard Baber sees that this doesn't happen at Fort Benning.

The Engineer Section is composed of six divisions and three sections which keep roads, buildings, power plants and water systems in good working order.

The buildings and grounds division with approximately 600 civilian workers is responsible for the repair and maintenance of buildings, structures and roads on the post.

With drivers clicking off thousands of miles each month on post roads, as well as hundreds of classes and demonstrations staged for the Infantry School and visitors, this is a big job in itself.

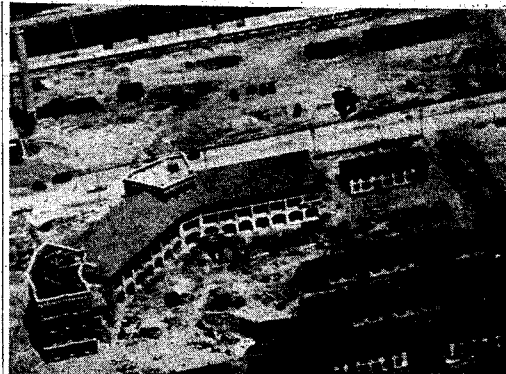

The contract operations division supervises and inspects all work contracts. This includes contracts dealing with construction of new projects and modification and the habitation of existing structures.

Preparation of plans and specifications including government estimates is the task of the engineering division. The 14 Civil Service workers in this division prepare technical invitation for bids and construction work, and maintain a master plan for future post developments.

The responsibility for the operation and maintenance of the water plant and distribution mains, electric sub-station and transmission lines as well as the sewage plant and sanitary sewer system comes under the Utilities division. Care of domestic heating, kitchen equipment and air conditioning equipment also is maintained by this division.

A 114-man Fire Department composed of seven fire companies serves under the direction of the Infantry Center engineer, Chief Gilbert Ward and his staff of firemen from the fire prevention and protection division of the Engineer Section.

About 110 civilian employees are busy in the administration and management division, computing repair and utility budgets. The

Jump Training Is Hard Work

Like every big city, Fort Benning is proud of its skyline. But in the case of this 35-year old post the most distinctive silhouettes are also soaring symbols of a vital contribution to the nation's defense.

They are the four 250-foot jump towers used to train paratroopers. Men for this training come from every walk of life and every point of the compass. But the standards by which they are selected provide the only common basis needed. They must be intelligent, fit and tough-minded.

They must be intelligent to absorb training which is checked off with typical Infantry School efficiency and speed. There can be no class-cutting or cribbing at "Airborne University" where depend on high marks.

They must be fit to stand the grueling physical stress of the course and the later requirements of airborne operations in training and combat.

They must be tough-minded to overcome with considerable pride the normal human reluctance to jump from aircraft into the enemy's backyard.

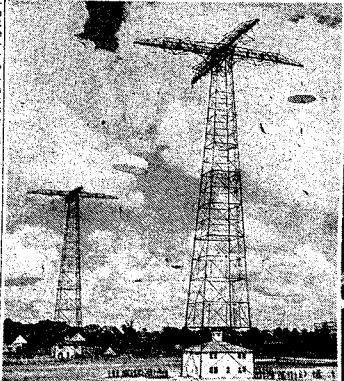

The Infantry School's Airborne Department can do nothing about the student's intelligence except insist that each candidate has it. Although the department stresses physical training, the candidate must be in above average condition before beginning the course.

But the department can and does perform other functions which seem impossible. In three weeks it can turn a candidate who has never been in an airplane into an aggressive - minded paratrooper who not only knows all the tricks of parachuting but also is confident of his ability.

Build Confidence
The air of brisk competence which permeates all Airborne training is the first effort made to build the trainee's confidence. All the instructor and demonstrator (personnel perform with such authority and precision the candidate immediately realizes that these people know their business. There is no hesitation or fumbling. Everything and everybody is on schedule with parade-ground sharpness.

Throughout the course, emphasis is placed on safety. No detail is left to chance, including the checking of personal equipment. Even this becomes routine as the equipment on a trainee's back is checked by the man behind him who finishes both with a reassuring slap on the butt and his indicate "all OK."

Reassuring, too, are the accident courses for airborne training which learn to make all their falls on their feet. In the past 10 years, the injury rate has dropped from 100 percent of 62 per cent due to landing shock and minimize the chances of receiving a bone fracture to improved techniques and equipment.

JUMP TOWERS . . . These 250-foot steel towers are almost synonymous with airborne training here. Trainees attached to a parachute are raised to the top of the towers before being dropped.

During physical conditioning periods students tone up muscles to withstand the shocks and strains they must endure during jumps.

Plane exit training includes leaping from a 34-foot tower. The candidate falls free for 11 feet, then is brought up sharply as his harness is extended to full length, simulating the opening shock of an actual parachute jump. He then slides on a 35-foot cable into a sawdust pile. This phase teaches the novice to attain a good body position during the free-falling motion. The instructor stresses that the candidate receives proper training, he will have the right attitude toward making a jump.

To Spend 3 More
Sic. Clarence Young Jr., first sergeant of Sixth Company, First Student Regiment, has decided to serve another three years in the Regular Army.

Sgt. Young has been in the service for seven years, serving with the 11th Airborne Division in Japan before coming to Fort Benning in 1945. He has been assigned to Headquarters, Airborne Battalion, and Sixth Company.

The sergeant holds a reserve commission.

FIRST FREE FALL . . . If this soldier seems a little nervous he can be executed. He's about to be hoisted to the top of the 250 foot jump tower for his first free fall.

HEAD HIGH . . . This soldier has just completed three weeks of the toughest Army training in the World and has been awarded his parachute badge after completing training.

Disaster Agencies Often Called On

No. Fort Benning wasn't around for the Flood.

The home of the Infantry is only 35 years old this month, but had the post been in existence then, its soldiers would have blood-typed all the animals and would have seen to it that everyone got hot chow and dry socks for 40 days and 40 nights.

The Infantry Center, bulwark of the nation in war, has also established a distinguished record of aid to civilian communities in time of natural disaster.

On April 30, 1953, a tornado ripped through Warner Robbins, Ga. leaving destruction that threatened the safety of the community. On the heels of the big winds came planes from Lawson Air Force Base rushing surgical equipment, supplies and skilled personnel to the scene of the disaster.

Planes Bring Aid
While the planes brought in 144 units of blood plasma, 30 pintals of whole blood, 50 liters of serum and other materials from Fort Benning's U. S. Army Hospital, officer candidates on the post were volunteering as blood donors to replenish the hospital's precious stock.

Post doctors, nurses and enlisted medical aid men worked tirelessly to aid the victims of the storm.

Disaster work at Warner Robbins was a repeat performance for Fort Benning personnel. Less than two weeks earlier more than 200 troops with valuable supplies and equipment had sped to the aid of Columbia when that city was hit by a tornado.

Under the personal direction of Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander, troops arrived a few hours after the storm struck to assist civilian authorities in clearing debris and giving treatment to the injured.

Hospital Supplies Doctors
The post hospital supplied doctors, nurses, liters, blankets, plasma and even electric power to the hospital medical authorities. Infantry policemen directed traffic through strecker areas and organized searches for the injured and missing.

The post engineers cleared the combat engineers' cleared the wreckage, while radio teams helped reestablish communications. To

ART OF RECOVERY . . . This trooper practices the art of recovery after a jump with the use of a wind machine that keeps the parachute inflated.

Range Control in Charge Of Safety in 96 Areas

Fort Benning's Range Control Section makes training safe for the thousands of Infantrymen who take Infantry School courses every year.

On a reservation it would be dangerous to move troops without perfect coordination.

Major jobs of the Range Control Section is to insure that perfect coordination. Many questions must be answered before the section grants approval to the Infantry School for the use of a training area or firing range.

The Range Control Section has its own shop, supplies and motor pool to facilitate its maintenance and construction program, which includes repairing and building targets, target frames, beyond dummies, training devices, range signs and target numbers.

A member of the section must always be on hand when units are firing on a range. He must open the range, see that there are plenty of targets and target frames and that the range is in perfect operating condition.

66 Firing Areas
The 96 firing areas include known distance ranges, transition ranges, landscape ranges, recoilless rifle ranges, assault ranges, mortar ranges, grenade ranges, rocket launcher ranges, anti-tank ranges.

CATERING WITH STRATEGY
A company order posted on the bulletin board of Headquarters and Service Company, Third Battalion, last week announced that henceforth Pvt. Marvin E. Calmore, would be officially known as Pfc. Gilmore.

M-Sgt. Dennis Gets Award On Retiring
M-Sgt. J. J. Dennis of Tampa, Fla., who retires after 20 years of service, has received a certificate of achievement for his outstanding work as chief clerk of the Infantry School's Operations Office.

The certificate of achievement, signed by Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, was presented to M-Sgt. Dennis by Col. Robert G. Chevrolet, Jr., operations officer.

COMPANY A PROMOTIONS
Royce H. Diersey, Harry L. Hankins and Charles C. Mitter have been promoted to corporal, and Bill M. Carver, sergeant in Company A, 774d Tank Battalion.

Food School Aims Menu At Looks, Smell, Taste

Appetizing, wholesome food is vital to the well-being and morale of the soldier. To make sure he gets the best, Fort Benning's Third Army Food Service School teaches military cooks to prepare and serve meals to satisfy and sustain the world's best soldiers.

Major Richard J. Palumbo of Lake Placid, N. Y., commands the Food Service School, which graduates about 2,000 men a year. In each course, instructors emphasize as goal to teach students to prepare simple, wholesome food that looks, smells, and tastes good.

Practical Lessons
"We try to give these students the foundation to become good Army cooks, able to prepare the type food they will be called on to serve daily when they are assigned to a unit after graduation," Major Palumbo says.

The school maintains a subscription to the Infantry School's "Mission of the School is to supply Third Army and its civilian components with the required number of trained food service personnel."

To do it, the school offers courses of six weeks or more in cooking, baking, mess management and mess administration. It conducts classes in food costing for officer candidates and gives a 16-hour refresher course for Infantry center officers. Classes in field messing are offered to Army Reserve units in the Third Army.

Civil Defense Work
During August, Food Service School personnel staged a 24-hour course in disaster emergency planning for 41 representatives of the Civilian Defense Administration from six southeastern states.

The school's teaching program is broken down into two categories - theory and practice.

The theory of cooking is taught during the first two weeks. The students learn food classification, calorie content and how balanced meals are planned.

Upon completion of the second week the class is split into two groups. One group works on small quantities kitchen, learning to prepare 60 different recipes from one or four servings to 200.

All dishes cooked by students are criticized by the instructor at the end of the class period and appearance, aroma, taste and texture are noted.

Other Class Sections

Qualifying Jump . . .

These airborne trainees are making one of five qualifying jumps that will earn them paratrooper wings.

During the last four weeks of instruction, the students cooks are sent to one of the school detachments' two mess halls or to the bachelor officers' mess. There they get supervised experience performing the duties of cooks.

Officers attending the school receive a six-week mess administration course which follows a similar pattern. The purpose of the course is to train company officers to supervise food service.

The night - week mess stewards course emphasizes the bookkeeping and administrative aspects of food service while the 11-week bakery course includes work with mobile bakery units. A platoon of bakers is able to supply 32,000 loaves of bread a day.

Army officials are more than satisfied with the coons being turned out at the school. So are the thousands of soldiers throughout the world who are daily enjoying the culinary output of school graduates. If an army traveling the world with the Food Service School at Fort Benning is giving the United States Army a lot of mileage.

Board Tests Infantry Ideas For New Tactics

The Infantry School's Combat Development Office is conducting testing ground for new Infantry ideas.

Working as the monitor and supervisor of troop tests, the department is charged with the development and evaluation of new doctrine, tactics, techniques and organization of the infantry in the field. It also has the responsibility of initiating requirements for new equipment.

The office, whose chief is Col. James V. Adams of Monterey, Cal., is publishing from end-of-the-line experiments, but keeps in close contact with Army Field Force boards and development agencies, both civilian and military. Its conduct of the class period and appearance, aroma, taste and texture are noted.

Under the direction of Brig. Gen. Carl F. Fritzsche, assistant commander of the school, the department handles cooking assignments, studying field equipment and preparing and studying field expeditions.

Airborne Soldiers Trained For Toughest Combat Roles

A few dozen centuries after legends started the ancient Greeks by flouting through the air with the greatest of ease, a U. S. Army Infantryman was trying a similar stunt above Fort Benning's Red Clay.

Unlike the legendary Greek, however, Pvt. William King was using a silk parachute instead of waxen wings. And also unlike the ill-fated Icarus, King not only went up, but came safely down to become the first U. S. Army enlisted man to make an official jump as a paratrooper. That was August 16, 1942.

The effectiveness of foreign paratroopers in the early days of World War II had alerted the United States to the need for airborne units. Pvt. King was among 45 volunteers selected from Fort Benning's 25th Infantry Regiment early in 1940 for the first test platoon of airborne Infantry.

Following the success of the test platoon, a Provisional Paratrooper Group was activated here May 1, 1941, to coordinate airborne activities. The Provisional Paratrooper Group and the Paratrooper School which replaced it in 1942 set the pace for Airborne training.

Smartness Stressed
Mental alertness, aggressiveness, good discipline, and smart appearance have been stressed units they are now synonymous with paratroopers.

First large-unit training conducted at the Paratrooper School was the qualification of the entire 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment in 1942. After earning their wings here, members of the 506th later spearheaded the Normandy invasion by jumping into the Nazi defense a few hours before the initial D-Day landing.

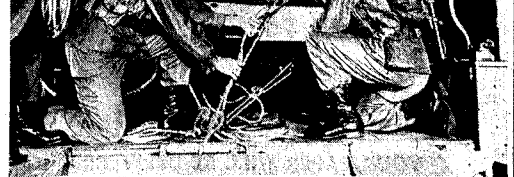

Literally the "flying-wedge" of the U. S. Army, airborne soldiers won glory in World War II, helping Allied armies surmount the Rhine River barrier.

Once on the ground, paratroopers fought the best traditions of the U. S. Infantry. The 101st Airborne Division held off counter-attacking Nazis in the Battle of the Bulge, while its commander made the classic "nuts" reply to Army men demands to surrender.

Against the Japanese paratroopers dropped in the Markham valley in New Guinea and made a spectacular assault against Corregidor to spearhead Gen. MacArthur's return to the Philippines.

In the bloody Korean police action combat jumps were made by the 101st Airborne Regimental Combat Team to aid U. N. armies in the fight against Communist aggression.

Successful airborne exploits in the past have spurred the development of a program for paratroopers at Fort Benning. The yearly output ranges from 2,211 paratroopers in 1941 to the all-time high of 30,715 in 1953. Biggest single month was September, 1952, when approximately 4,700 troopers earned their wings.

Medal Given Capt. M'Dugald

Capt. Lunsford V. McDugald of Bradenton, Fla., has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for services in Korea.

Col. Paul J. Mitchell of Warren, Va., Infantry Center G-4 made the presentation.

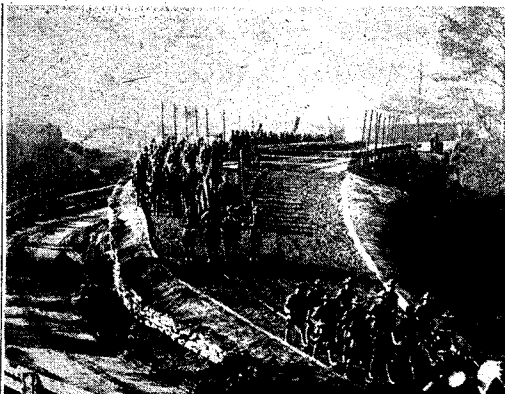

Capt. McDugald was cited for "meritorious achievement in ground action against the enemy" from July 1 to Nov. 15, 1950, while serving as assistant supply officer for the 37th Infantry Division.

Georgia's Byways In 'Sad Shape'

The highways of Georgia and many other states are in a condition so deplorable as to constitute a major problem in the event of a national emergency," according to Danny Boggs, executive vice president of the Georgia Motor Trucking Association.

Boggs was guest speaker at a meeting of the Columbus and Fort Benning chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association last week at the Ralston Hotel in Columbus.

In expressing his concern about the highway situation, Mr. Boggs recommended that NDTA chapters work with local civil defense agencies to help solve communications and traffic problems which might imperil defense operations in an emergency.

CROSSING THE UPATOI . . . Army parades haven't changed much in 35 years, but the bridges over the Upatoi Creek have been remarkably improved since the first structure seen here was built. Today, two modern bridges span the Upatoi at the entrance to the Main Post.

125 Earn Bars, Hear Address By Gen. Sawyer

The Army's chief of finance last Thursday told 125 new second lieutenants that they were embarking upon a new career that offers a new opportunity for success.

Major Gen. Buckford E. Sawyer, speaking to graduates of The Infantry School's officer candidate class No. 67, also stressed the importance of accepting responsibility, and "meeting it with efficiency and accuracy."

He pointed out that in their military careers officers are held responsible for thousands of dollars worth of government property and that one of their most important duties is to keep the records for that property always accurate.

He was introduced by Brig. Gen. Carl F. Fitzsche, assistant commandant of The Infantry School. Honor and distinguished graduates of the class were Second Lt. Harold A. Sproul, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Sproul of Wolfville, Nov. Scotia. The 26-year-old first officer has been assigned to First Officer Candidate Regiment.

Distinguished graduates of the company were Jack L. Hocker, Thomas Steiner, Memphis, Tenn.; Bennie E. Callis, and Samuel S. Benedict, of Kingsport, Tenn.

Army Adopting 508th's Lighter Poncho Roll

The problems of lightening the soldier's combat load was tackled and accomplished two years ago at Fort Benning by the 508th Airborne.

Today, Army units the world over have adopted the 508th's famous "poncho roll" technique which enables the Infantryman to move faster and safer under fire.

The poncho roll technique eliminates the back pack entirely. Some of the soldier's essentials such as socks, a towel and handkerchiefs, are carried inside a poncho which is rolled up to resemble a hot dog and laced to the back of the pistol belt. Non-essentials, such as a messkit, knife and fork, are discarded, and extras like a toothbrush, are slipped inside the encircling tool cover.

Was Colonel's Plan

The load-lightening plan was the baby of Lt. Col. Herbert V. Mansfield, now in Korea, who commanded the Second Battalion of the 508th. Two years ago this month, Col. Mansfield decided to experiment, using his battalion as test troops.

Later, during maneuvers against the 27th Infantry Division at Camp Rucker, Ala., a visual proof of the merits of the combat load was demonstrated.

Marvelling at the speed with which the 508th's "Lightning Second" backed the 47th's 50th Infantry into a wooded gully, one officer remarked: "Why, look how much less of a load these paratroopers are carrying than the division's men!"

The troopers, unhampered by bulky backpacks, wore a suspender harness to hold up their pistol belt and suspended their entrenching tool, canteen and cup and poncho from the belt.

Est. From Cup

"What about a fork, knife and mess-kit?"

"We don't use them," say the troopers. "We eat our food out of a canteen cup or Cestics cans. Anything else in the way of utensils is just extra-baggage and something that rattles."

And if it rains and the poncho has to be worn?

"We can slip most of the items rolled in the poncho into the roomy pockets of our field pants. And we can sleep, using the poncho as a blanket. It's not too comfortable but it works."

DOUGHBOYS OF EARLY DAYS . . . Striking classic pose, Infantrymen of the post's early days display the weapons with which they helped win World War I: the Springfield .30 caliber rifle, bayonet, .45 caliber pistol, 37-mm cannon, hand grenade, trench mortar and heavy machine gun. Of these weapons, the mortar, cannon, and rifle have been replaced and the others modified.

Major is Cited For Korea Duty

Major Donald V. Rattan of Cooper, Texas, has been awarded an Oak Leaf Cluster and V device for valor to the Bronze Star Medal for his action Feb. 14, 1952, while serving with the 32nd Infantry Regiment near Sanggyong, Korea.

His assistance to a line unit under heavy enemy fire, whose company officers and several key non-com-mmissioned officers had been wounded and whose communications lines had been severed, considerably aided the reorganization of the position and the evacuation of the wounded, according to the citation.

Major Rattan, "with utter disregard for his own safety, moving from position to position to encourage the men to resume their duties, personally assisted in laying telephone lines and arranged for the evacuation of the wounded," the citation reads.

GI's Best Friend Infantry Learns To Master Arms

"An Infantryman's best friend," goes an old saying, "is not his mother but his rifle." Teaching Infantry leaders about his best friend—and the other Infantry weapons they will use—is the job of The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

Weapons instruction begins with mechanical training and crew drill and concludes with technique of fire. Under the direction of Col. Thomas Miffin of Pitney Park, Pa., the department also teaches certain subjects allied to the use of weapons, such as night vision, infra-red equipment and the technical phases of mine warfare.

At present, weapons instructors have a part in the instruction of all classes of the Infantry School, with the exception of communications, automotive and airborne classes. Among their duties is the responsibility for two specialists courses, the rifle marksmanship and the marksmanship course, which is designed to train officers and enlisted men in the use of the rifle in the U. S. and the Infantry heavy mortar officer's course which is designed to train gunnery officers or lieutenants on the basis of the mortar companies and battalions. The six instructional committees are organized on the basis of the weapons they teach. The first is the small arms committee which covers the M1 rifle, automatic rifle, carbine, pistol and submachine gun through known distance and marksmanship firing. The technique of rifle fire and rocket training takes over, presenting instruction in transition firing and technique of rifle fire. This committee also teaches the use of hand and rifle grenades, the rocket launcher, portable flame thrower, infrared equipment, night vision and mine warfare.

Three Groups Handle Chores Of TIS Tactics Department

A football team may have plenty of husky men with individual talents, but it needs a quarterback who can make the most of those capabilities. The same thing is true of an Army combat unit. It needs a leader who can take the men, the weapons, the equipment, the supplies and properly use them to achieve its objective: victory. The mixing and using of these components is called tactics.

Developing the ability of U. S. Army Infantry leaders in this combat military field is the job of The Infantry School's Tactical Department, headed by Col. J. M. Lynch. As with most Infantry School subjects, instruction in tactics has a heavy proportion of outdoor work. For it is on the ground where the students can watch demonstrations and can themselves participate. In fact, each student department is broken into three groups, each teaching

Everybody's Friend 'Calc' Made Better Dogs Of Us All

Then there's the one about the dog that led a soldier's life. His name was Calculator. His hometown, ancestry and date of birth all were unknown. But for years he was the Infantry Center's one-and-only canine Corps. . . and everybody's best friend.

Known as "Calc" by generals as well as privates, the pooch was a ubiquitous resident at Fort Benning during its pioneer days. His friendship knew no rank distinction and his curiosity knew no bounds. He wandered from range to mess-hall to parade grounds with equanimity and he was granted unofficial "security clearance," to the innermost sanctums.

The mascot was crippled so his name was suggested by the halting manner of his progress in which he "put down three and carried one."

Calculator passed on in 1952, but members of the garrison erected a monument in his memory in the rear of the Defense Group has two committees. "D" committee is responsible for regimental defense tactics, retrograde operation movements, and defense against guerrilla actions, among other subjects. "A" curriculum includes coordinated anti-tank defense, small unit defense, and counter-attack fire plan.

The Associate Arms Group is divided into committees, each of which instructs students in the proper employment of the Infantry's major branches. These are being taught, there has never been an exception. And often it has been experienced by one of the students.

In spite of this, there are basic tactical principles change but little. Forged in the fires of combat they yield slowly. Such revolutionary implements of war in the past 50 years as the airplane, missile, tanks and poison gas have only slightly modified Infantry tactics.

Jumper Recalls 1st Airborne Units

While Fort Benning celebrates its 50th anniversary with a long row of firsts, a former Benning soldier — 1st Sgt. (ret.) Eddie Bright — will also look back at some "firsts."

The sergeant, an automobile salesman for Strickland Motors in Columbus since retirement last December, was the first member of the Airborne to stay with the jumpers since it was organized in 1941 until he retired in 1 and one-half years later.

When Bright joined the Paratroopers he had 10 years service under his belt and joined the Airborne because as he put it "I saw that the Airborne was the coming thing. It offered opportunities and was a relaxed back to training for his first six months of service."

At first the Paratroopers kept logs and proudly recorded each jump. But after numerous jumps the books were discarded. During his lengthy career Bright made over 200 jumps and became a master jumper in 1946 when that custom was started.

Superstitions Common Among 508th Jumpers

Superstitious fighting men are as common as roosters crowing at dawn. Like the rooster who thinks his crowing makes the sun rise, since it began, has carried a set of paratroopers in the 508th Airborne are convinced their own particular brand of abacardabra opens the door to success.

The lucky piece tradition is carried on even at the highest level. Col. George C. Pasternak, commander of the 20th Infantry, wears an old pair of jumps boots in which he was parachuted through the Pacific jungles in World War II. The most widespread superstition is readily admitted by all of the troopers. "I never try to jump without a parachute," confesses one of the Red Devils. "Somehow I always feel better when I have one."

Corporals Build Striking Displays For Branch Library

Branch Library No. 6 in the First Airborne Division is taking an "spruced up" look these days. Cpls. Paul R. Kelley and James P. Barron of Headquarters Company have built a display to give visitors and book borrowers an idea of what the library has to offer.

The branch was opened in June, 1952 and has since built up a collection of more than 4,000 books. One of the men, Under Secretary, shortly after receiving his wings, "Charlie" got order for the "Tan Equal."

"G. P. Bag" Lee of H Company got his nickname from his refusal to jump without his canteen. He is some General Purpose Bag. He insists on wearing it, even though it must be carried into the plane when he has it on.

Yet Jumper Claims No Change Since First Jump in 1940

The first American paratrooper to parachute outside the Continental United States believed, "jumping hasn't changed basically in 10 years."

Mt. Sgt. George W. "Poison" Ivy of Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, 508th Airborne, believes the only changes in jump technique are the training aids.

When the U. S. Army in 1941, the first of American paratroopers went to the Panama Canal Zone from Fort Benning to make their jump. This was in the early stages of American paratrooper training.

At Fort Benning, where the test ground was dropped, was mostly grass in 1940 and few of the present runways and buildings had been constructed. Back Friday was a lucky day that Aug. 13, 1941. The jump was made on a plane.

When the jump was made, it was made about dozen jumps in warm, clear conditions. Ivy, in December, was the first to be assigned by a commanding officer and presented to the platoon by the 508th Airborne's "Dumpty." "The jump was fine but a few seconds later I thought the world had come to an end. I had landed on a native's straw hut and the whole family looked up in terror as I came plummeting through the roof."

Bugsyous, says Ivy, was the watchword of the early test platoon. "We started the day with an eight-mile run around Lawson Field and followed with dumb-bell exercises, athletic games and procees jumps from grounded air-planes. Then we would run back-wards for a mile before lunch."

"When we were not double-timing or working out, we learned how to pack our own parachutes," says Ivy. "I was somewhat of an expert, had rigged a 125-foot high parachute training tower similar to the 250-foot towers here."

"A few days of being released without parachutes from that tower platform that passed the skyward convinced everyone that 125-foot towers were too low for us to prepare for a landing." "War II. It was a mistake in his belief that 12 years of parachute training had not really changed the basic technique of the parachute men drew straps for the honor and Sgt. Ivy was one of 12 to safely on the ground.

Progress Matched

Physical progress was matched by academic progress. New courses were introduced and new weapons, such as the M1 rifle and M16 submachine gun, were being studied.

For 25 years the school's quality of instruction has been steadily the quiet was disturbed. Adolf Hitler's panzer divisions smashed into the West and President Roosevelt declared a state of national emergency.

Slowly troops began pouring into Fort Benning and by 1941 every branch of the Army was represented. The post was selected as the initial concentration point for the First Division, and with the arrival of this unit thearrison totaled 16,000 men.

To aid in training, the First and Second Battalions of the 46th Infantry (Light Tanks) were formed in Jan. 12, 1940. This brought to 2,500 officers and men.

First OC Class

The first officer candidate class arrived July 1, 1941, beginning one of the post's more important wartime programs.

In the days that followed Pearl Harbor thousands were to train there was to be a story of service and courage, written so often in their own blood.

From 1941 to 1945, the United States sent fighting men across three oceans to win wars in Asia and the Pacific. With nearly 11 million men under arms every conceivable type of technical specialty was utilized in achieving victory, and it was Fort Benning's responsibility to prepare the officers and men of the Infantry for their part of the job.

Despite the modern weapons and methods that often seemed to have been taken from science fiction, it was still the Infantry that carried the fight in the blue chips. The foot soldier, with rifle and bayonet, was called on to deliver the Sunday punch against the enemy.

The wartime mission of the Post was to train Infantry leaders, the men just ahead of the men behind the gun, to insure the successful success of the Infantry School in accomplishing this mission is history.

Over 100,000 Graduates

More than 100,000 graduates of the school during the war in addition to 60,000 soldiers were given airborne training.

Parachute training began in 1940, but it remained in the experimental stage until the spring of 1941. In May of that year the Army had only one parachute battalion, the 588th. Success of German airborne operations against Crete in 1941 spurred the War Department into action. More airborne battalions were activated and on July 10, 1941, the Parachute Sections was organized at Sicily.

Although separated from the Infantry School in 1942 and returned to the Parachute Center, it retained the basic concept that once the paratroop unit had completed its jump its mission was to fight as an Infantry unit.

Accordingly, parachute troops were given much of the same tactical training as Infantry School graduates.

To train and billet the thousands of troops pouring in, hundreds of new structures, temporary and permanent, sprang up around the post. Two new arenas on the reservation, Harmony Church and Sand Hill, were opened.

Biggest Training Job

Biggest training job tackled by the school was the officer candidate program. From July 1941 to December 1946, when the class graduated, 66,111 second lieutenant candidates were trained. This was probably the most vital function performed by the school. By maintaining the nation's supply of major war with a terrific scarcity of junior officers. To meet this need the "Shovel Factory" was opened. In 13 weeks of intensive training, experienced instructors and cadre produced these 96,414 winners. Though it was done with assembly line speed, this mass turning product, turned out a high quality product, as was demonstrated to Axis soldiers on every battlefield of World War II.

During the peak of operations, in December, 1942, there were 72 officer candidate classes in session with a total of nearly 3,000 students. The administrative task involved was stupendous.

By the end of the war more than 14,000 officer candidates, the Infantry School had graduated. In December, 1942, was giving instruction to nearly 3,000 other officers and enlisted men. The school's physical instruction to handle this huge student body, the faculty of the post consisted of 8,488 officers and men.

Throughout the war, changes were made in curricula of all courses as the school sought to benefit from the best of all teaching — experience. Campaign reports were evaluated continuously and none of the principles of Infantry fighting was ever invalidated.

Physical Fitness

Following reports that troops were not tough enough for combat training stressed physical fitness and realism.

With the first rush of the early war months, the OC program decreased. School enrollment dropped to 8,518. As the demand for junior officers lessened, more time and effort was spent on the advanced officer courses, and enrollment in these classes zoomed. The school's training was diversified: first to develop top-flight small unit combat leaders; second to train the best of the best to be military instructors. To implement the latter, part of the school's curriculum was devoted to candidates themselves, and each candidate was made of the coach by field instructors.

Even before war began, the faculty of the post consisted of a shift in command. Until the fall of 1940 The Infantry School Detachment was operated by post headquarters and the school, administering all units on the post and providing school instruction. On Oct. 13, 1940, the school was separated from post headquarters and made an exempt activity under the direct supervision of the Chief of Infantry. A separate headquarters was established Nov. 30, 1940, and a station complement of 1,000 men was activated.

Post Commanders Change

As the fortunes of war changed, so did the post commanders. A list of their names reads like the honor roll of U. S. World War II heroes. Hodges and Bradley were among the general officers who commanded Fort Benning before the war. Outstanding achievements in combat.

The years of peak operation were 1942 and 1943. The mission was expanded from the original conception of an establishment to improve the post's commandship to cover principal points:

1. Teaching the tactics and techniques of Infantry.
2. Furnishing a working familiarity with the tactics and techniques of associated arms.
3. Training selected officers and enlisted men for special technical duties in Infantry divisions.
4. Serving as an agency of the commanding general of Army Ground Forces, now Army Field Forces, in the development and performance of Infantry tactics and technique.

The successful fulfillment of these missions by Fort Benning played a large part in achieving the triumphs won by American arms in 1945 Germany fell, and then Japan.

Celebrates Victory

Fort Benning celebrated U. S. victory by turning to another big job. The millions who had fought the war were due for discharge and the post became one of the big Separation Points of World War II.

Thousands returned to hand in their uniforms and find their way in the brave new world. Other thousands never came back. Official victory won and the Army is shrinking. It was feared that Fort Benning would revert to its post-World War I status.

The Fort Benning faced the same post-war problem that bothered the rest of the United States: ready to be turned into a training center for the Army's wartime leaders could train its activities but on a reduced scale.

The Infantry School's officer candidate program was to be turned out under new second lieutenant, but by the hundreds instead of the thousands. Then, in 1947, it was moved to the Grand General Center at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Replace the officer candidates were the officers of World War II, the rough and ready Red Devils stand as one of America's important equalizers in the struggle for peace.

Eliminate Duplication

To coordinate administration and eliminate duplication, the Army ordered that the Infantry School, The Airborne School, and the post be absorbed by a single headquarters to be known as The Infantry Center. This was carried out in 1946.

Chief Warrant Officer Samuel C. Hjort, Jr., 588th Airborne Engineer Company, is to attend the Mess Administration Course, at Fort Benning. E. Elmer Duff, 19th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment, and Corporal Ronald A. Marteller, Company E, are to attend the Mess Management Course, at Fort Benning. E. School with a chance to apply its instruction to new recruits.

Diplomat Treatment

The school was to be treated as was instructed by Major Gen. Wilber A. Barrows, commander, to be used to outstanding achievements but not to mollify them. The school was to be treated as a school that you would have wanted, "but treat them always as solid recruits, not as heroes."

The cadre obeyed, and the record of the 25th Provisional Training Center at Fort Benning is a credit to the school could view with pride. The Infantry Center had proven it could train recruits as superbly as it can train Infantry leaders.

In 1949, the Third Infantry Division moved in to be brought to full strength. Its mission was to train as a potential combat unit and serve as demonstration troops.

With thousands of new troops on the old dog days, the housing shortage, arose again. A tremendous new project, Battle Park Homes, was developed on the post to help billet the garrison. Although all these years, Fort Benning was still growing.

But the fall of 1949-50 turned out to be just a prelude to another and bloody storm. Aggression struck again, this time in a relatively obscure peninsula of Asia. The enemy's attack was sudden and spoke a strange tongue, but the threat to world peace and American security was the same as it had been in 1941.

TIS Called Again

Once again the school was called upon, and the reservation became a scene of military bustle and preparation. Soon after the North Koreans began their original offensive, the Third Infantry Division was alerted to the area where it was to establish a distinguished record in combat.

The Infantry Center was reconstituted Feb. 18, 1950, and Fort Benning once more began to turn out the best of the best officers, after a rigorous 22-week course. In March 1953 officer candidate training at Fort Benning was discontinued as an advanced instruction were in selected centers.

In the early months of the police action in Korea, Infantry School graduates held a diploma in one hand and the Infantry Center Command in the other. Time was short, and the need was great. School alumni found the lessons they had learned in Georgia were a valuable guide on how to say alive near the 38th Parallel.

They did more than stay alive, of course. Often outnumbered, fighting the best regular units in the nation's history, they helped rally the footslogger to drive back to the 38th Parallel.

508th Ready Able and Willing

Combat ready, willing and able, the units that compose Fort Benning's 508th Airborne Regimental Center are the toughest and most proud of America's fighting outfits, have each contributed to the highest and most distinguished record in military dignitaries.

The 508th is commanded by Colonel George F. Artley, 320th Airborne Battalion, the 588th Airborne Engineer Battalion, and the 19th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment have been molded together into a combat team at Fort Benning where their mission is to maintain combat readiness and to support the Infantry School.

The original 508th Airborne Infantry Regiment jumped into Normandy on D-Day with the 82nd Airborne Division and was instrumental in frustrating German attempts to reinforce beach defenses.

After V-E day the unit was assigned to Frankfurt on the Main, where complete with white scarves and white boot laces it served as honor guard for Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters.

Red Devil Artillerymen 'a Battalion since their bivouac back to the 508th Field Artillery Battalion which fought at St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne and Loureux in World War I. In World War II, as the 320th Field Artillery Battalion, it rounded out the Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Normandy, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe Campaigns.

Now the sledhammer of the combat team, the 508th is rapidly gaining recognition as one of the Army's finest artillery outfits. Its paratroopers and maintaining all vital functions performed by the 19th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment and Fort Benning in November, 1952, it was the first such unit in the Army.

The 508th Airborne Engineer Company served at Fort Mitchell, N. C., during World War II. The "Nifty Eight" activated in August, 1951, as part of the 508th, did remarkable job in December 1946, when it was graduated. 66,111 second lieutenant candidates were trained. ## Infantry Relies on Communications For Success of Military Missions

In combat the life of an infantryman often hangs on many thin strands of wire. The success or failure of most military missions depends on the copper strands that link up Army communications in the field and behind the lines.

The Communications Department of the Infantry School has the key job of training the men who must maintain and repair the radios and other communication equipment required for every infantry unit.

Backbone of the department is the instruction in radio operation

Pint-Size Jumper Weighs Only 12 Pounds Over Minimum

Dropped from the same height, a large stone and a small stone will land at the same time, as was proven by an ancient sage at the leaning tower of Pisa.

But, says pint-size paratrooper William J. Duggan Jr., of Somerville, Mass., that ancient principle does not hold true in parachuting.

Duggan, an airborne corpsman assigned to the Support Company of the 56th Airborne, weighs only 112 pounds, which is just 12 pounds more than enough to open his parachute. As a result, he is always the last jumper to hit the ground.

A shock of 100 pounds is required to release the break-cord on a parachute before it will open. Now Duggan understands why the recruiting station medic checked his weight extra carefully when he volunteered for airborne training.

"It takes a long time to get to the ground," says Duggan, who is a flighty on the 56th boxing team. "But at least I land easier than those big fellows. And when you are small you don't have to dig a very deep foothold, either!"

In 1927, a little known, Lieutenant colonel of Infantry assumed his duties as the Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School. In the ensuing years, as the post grew, the Lieutenant Colonel's star shone brighter. As Fort Benning celebrates its 36th Anniversary of service on October 7th, 1953, it can look with pride on the military and governmental accomplishments of its assistant commandant of 1926, George C. Marshall.

Medical Training Is Big Job

Training men to save lives is a big job, but it is handled well at Fort Benning by the Provisional Medical Group.

Commanded by Col. Mack M. Green of Columbia, Tenn., the group prepares master training schedules and handles administrative and personal matters for the six medical units training at Fort Benning.

These units are the 24th Evacuation Hospital, the 54th Medical Battalion, the 50th and 92nd Medical Clearing Companies and the 551st and 913th Medical Ambulance Companies.

Members of the 24th Evacuation Hospital, commanded by Col. John C. McKissick of Bowling Green, Ky., spend most of their time training in the field. They also perform on-the-job training at Fort Benning's U.S. Army Hospital. There the medics learn technical skills they will need in the field.

In combat, evacuation hospitals are set up behind the lines to provide hospitalization for sick and wounded soldiers and prepare them for further evacuation. Evacuation hospitals are semi-mobile and can pack up and move in a few days.

Medics of the 50th and 92nd Medical Clearing Companies get most of their training in the field where they practice setting up under simulated combat conditions.

Located behind the front lines, the medical clearing companies receive, sort and provides temporary medical and surgical care for patients until evacuation. The 50th is commanded by Capt. Howard T. Cohen of New Rochelle, N.Y., and the 92nd by Lt. Henry P. Doyle, Jr., of Boston, Mass.

Ambulance Companies Vital

Big wheels in the medical aid program are the medical ambulance companies which provide fast service between aid stations and hospitals in combat. Fort Benning's two medical ambulance companies, the 551st, commanded by Capt. Walter F. Maybaum of Weymouth, Mass., and the 913th, commanded by Capt. Omar K. Phillips of Kansas City, Mo., maintain regular ambulance stations, accompany convoys and stand by during Infantry School problems to administer first aid and transport the injured to the post hospital when necessary.

Ambulance drivers must also be medical aid men. Besides their on-the-job training they practice bandaging, applying splints and first aid techniques.

Another medical unit training at Fort Benning is the 54th Medical Battalion, the body of the Provisional Medical Group. It is the administrative organ which, in combat, would coordinate and supply the other medical units.

The 54th is commanded by Col. James H. Francis of San Antonio, Texas, who also is executive officer of Provisional Medical Group.

All six medical units at Fort Benning have participated in major maneuvers.

The 52nd and 50th Medical Clearing Companies, the 913th Medical Ambulance Company and the 24th Evacuation Hospital took part in Operation Southern Pine in August, 1951, and the 92nd played a major role in Operation Showfall in northern New York in 1952.

The two medical clearing companies, the evacuation hospital and the 54th Medical Battalion were in Texas in 1952 in participation in Operation Longhorn during which they treated more than 1,500 sick or injured soldiers.

Brigade Sfc. Wins Aide Competition

Sfc John E. Davis has been announced winner in the First Student Regiment competition for enlisted aide in Gen. A. R. Bell, Third Army commander. All major post units will enter choices for the honored post.

During his 5 1/2 years in the Army, he served 33 months in the Canal Zone and 10 months with the 27th Infantry Regiment in Korea. While in the Canal Zone he earned his private pilot's license.

Sgt. Davis, a printer in civilian life, is intelligence NCO in the S-4 section.

Recently the 551st Medical Ambulance Company received a letter of appreciation from Brig. Gen. J. H. Michaels, commander of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., for its role in the summer training at Camp Buckner, N.Y., of the class of 1955.

The training at Fort Benning is made as realistic as possible with the medic spending a great deal of his time in the field under simulated combat conditions. He must be trained well since the life of another soldier may depend upon his performance.

Small Aircraft Aids TIS In Handling Many Missions

Little planes do a big job where the Army Aviation Section aids the Infantry School in its training program.

Headed by Capt. M. Mahone of Williamsburg, Va., the section works closely with the Infantry School to demonstrate how the Army's proficiency as a fighting organization can be increased with cooperation between ground and air forces.

The section, composed of 1-19 Osages, 1-20 DeltaWalloons and 1-23 Hiller helicopters, is part of the pattern of modern warfare taught at the Infantry Center.

Capt. Mahone's Army Aviation Section spends most of its time in support of Infantry School problems, liaison, reconnaissance, observation, courier and evacuation missions.

Administrative flights to Third Army headquarters and other military installations is the job of the I-20, a six-place "Beaver" which also can carry up to 2,000 pounds of light cargo.

The section's I-23 Hiller helicopter performs administrative flights and demonstrations to show the capabilities of the aircraft.

Rangers Proud Of History Starting Before Revolution

Help wanted: Male. Age 32 or under. Must be in excellent physical condition. Intelligent. Capable to handle snakes, scale cliffs, cross swamps. Long hours, must be willing to work nights.

Apply U. S. Army Ranger Program, Fort Benning, Ga.

No advertisement like this ever appeared because it was never needed. From back before this nation was born, young Americans with qualifications similar to those listed in the "ad" have been volunteering for duty as Rangers.

They are regularly picked for the dirtiest and bloodiest jobs the Army has to do. They undergo training rigors and hazards which challenge even the most resourceful of a hand-picked crew.

And still they love it. They're good and they know it. And they have got a history and tradition to prove it.

tough force of volunteers specializing in amphibious raids.

In the spring of 1842, the War Department established a similar organization in the U. S. Army, aggressive West Pointer, Col. William O. Darby was picked to lead the World War II edition of U. S. Rangers. Their mission was simply to do what regular combat units couldn't do.

Seven hundred of 2,000 volunteers were selected and put thru a seven weeks Commando course in 31 days. British Commandos did the original American landings in Africa in 1942 they spearheaded the original American landings in North Africa and harassed Axis forces throughout the Tunisia campaign. In Sicily and Italy the Rangers distinguished themselves by their daring and night attacks.

D-Day Normandy saw the Rangers handling the hottest sector of Omaha beach. And when MacArthur returned to the Philippines the Rangers slashed far behind Japanese lines to free Americans in Japanese prison camps.

With the beginning of the Korean action the Army changed its concept of the Rangers' job. Instead of concentrating all these elite troops in special units, they are now returned to their original units after Ranger training.

World War II experience showed that the line units suffered when the best men left for Ranger battalions. Under the new concept, it is felt that greater overall efficiency will result from the Ranger - qualified soldiers in the unit.

In 1923 all Ranger functions were transferred to the Infantry School at Fort Benning. Top flight non-commissioned and commissioned officers, all volunteers, are sent to the Infantry Center for Ranger training. When they have completed the course they are returned to their parent organizations where they inject what they have learned into their own unit.

SIMULATED COMBAT CONDITIONS Demolition At North Georgia Camp

No Holiday Seen By Ranger Crew

Florida, variation land for military. It is two weeks of hazardous hell for U. S. Army Ranger candidates.

In Northwest Florida swamp lands east of Pensacola, an area generally ignored by the State Chamber of Commerce and tourists, Rangers are given their orientation in jungle and amphibious training.

In the swamps and jungles in structures from The Infantry Center at Fort Benning concentrate on small-team warfare, usually patrol, tracking reconnaissance and aggressive missions into "enemy" lines.

Special bands of aggressor soldiers graduate Rangers who are the students' enemy oppose the in the Revolutionary War a group of British troops. These men were known as "Knowlton's Rangers".

In the war of 1812 Congress authorized the enlistment of six companies of such troops.

In 1848, while Texas battled for its independence from Mexico it organized a force to volunteers who became folk heroes. These were the legendary Texas Rangers who continued to enforce law and order in the Lone Star State until modern times.

During World War II the British took a leaf from American history and organized the Commandos, a force of 120 tough and ready volunteers during the rest of the problem they must find the animal, slaughter and prepare it for chow. Even "Cratons" were never like this.

An unusual part of the course is the reptile class in which future rangers learn to overcome a variety of snakes. First they witness a demonstration by an instructor in handling poisonous snakes. Then they handle the snakes themselves. After a fortnight in the Sunshine State the Rangers leave, without a sunburn, but with the jungle know-how to beat the toughest snake-in-the-grass, communist or otherwise.

UNSUSPECTING AGGRESSOR... Hit-and-run tactics are part of realistic training in the Ranger course that is carried out at the Ranger Department's mountain camp near Dahlonega, Ga.

Stunts Toughen Rugged Rangers

If it's rope tricks you like, better "string" along with the U. S. Rangers.

In a stunt that would faze the best of the Italian fakirs the Army's rugged covers swoop down a 500 foot rope, suspended 10 feet above a churning stream at the Ranger Mountain Training Camp near Dahlonega, Ga.

Known appropriately as the "Death Slide" this stunt is one of many designed to test the courage and stamina of Rangers during the training phase in the North Georgia mountains.

Goal of the Ranger Training Program is to develop the toughest, fightingest men in the Army. And Georgia's sheer-sided peaks help categorize soldiers into three groups—boys, men and Rangers.

Rappelling, a rope-plus-muscle art of descending steep cliffs, is one of the new techniques Rangers must learn in high terrain areas.

Eight hours of rappelling teaches students to lower themselves down slick cliffs, one of which is 90 feet high.

Ropes are important pieces of equipment in mountains especially of the way routes. At least half a dozen problems staged in the mountainous area must be solved by use of ropes.

The mountain phase is capped with a realistic combat patrol into "enemy" territory across miles of jagged terrain. Objective is a dam to be destroyed by trainees slipping by the target in rubber boats. "Enemy soldiers," posted on fingers of land jutting into the freezing lake water try to stop the attack.

Training Rigid For Rangers

When there's a tough job to do... give it to Fort Benning.

For 35 years the Army has been following this formula, with success. So it was no surprise that in 1923 when the Army shifted from Ranger training at the company level to disposal of its shock troops among regular units, the complete Ranger Training Program was transferred to The Infantry Center.

Volunteers who pass the high physical and mental qualifications required spend the first four weeks of the eight-week course here. Each candidate receives a thorough background in all Infantry techniques.

They get refresher courses in all Infantry weapons, in adjustment of artillery and mortar fire and add to their knowledge of the fine points of map reading and compass work.

Mines ant booby traps and day and night patrols are other subjects covered. Over the course of the course is on leadership. For these are the men who will usually be absent from their units handling the toughest jobs the Army has to do.

Most of the four-week course is devoted to the theory behind the Ranger program and mission. Trainees study tropical and mountain survival techniques in preparation for the most demanding practical exercises in Florida and Northwest Georgia.

RANGERS WON'T EVEN LET RATTLES FAZE THEM IN TRAINING Snake Handling 'Covered' In Florida Jungle Training

MPs Watch Over Benning

Like any city, Fort Benning must have police protection. Providing it is the job of Col. Maurice J. Fitzgerald of Pawling, N. Y., Infantry Center Provost marshal, and his 200 military policemen.

Col. Fitzgerald and his MPs are responsible for the protection of millions of dollars of government property, for directing thousands of vehicles daily and for enforcing the law throughout the vast reservation.

Divided into many sections, The Infantry Center Provost Marshal's Office is a complex organization, but one which works efficiently as a result of careful planning and teamwork.

Probably the best known section is the one charged with traffic control headed by Capt. John A. Smith of Woodhouse, Ill. This section directs the movement of 20,000 cars into and out of Fort Benning daily. It also provides military escorts for ceremonies and funerals and renders aid to accident victims.

Operations Section

A counterpart of the traffic section is the Military Police Platoon of the Operations Section. This unit forms the motor and walking patrols which tour the post and nearest job is the protection of wildlife.

During the wind storm which struck Columbus last April 18, military policemen were the first Army unit to arrive at the scene. Directing traffic and rendering first aid to storm victims, these MPs calmly and efficiently lessened the burden of the disaster and won the praise of civic officials.

Crime does not take a holiday on any military reservation, and Fort Benning is no exception. To counteract this, the Fort Benning provost marshal has his own detective agency, the 8th Criminal Investigation Detachment, commanded by First Lt. J. R. Robertson of San Diego, Calif.

One of the most modern criminal equipment devices, the investigators handle all crimes committed by members of the armed forces.

The newest function which the provost marshal has undertaken is the opening of an information center at the main entrance to the post. The center supplies maps and pamphlets of the post as well as directions and the locations of units to the post's visitors.

Army Chaplains Provide Innumerable Services Here

"Take it to the chaplain" is a phrase almost as old as the Army itself.

Practically every type of complaint, worry or problem—either military or personal—finds its way to the ear of an Army chaplain. There it gets a receptive and understanding audience for the chaplain is always ready to offer such help and assistance that is within his power to give.

The Infantry Center Chaplain's Section at Fort Benning headed by Chaplain (Col.) Lexington O. Sheffield, has 18 chaplains who administer to the religious needs of the approximately 29,000 servicemen at Fort Benning. Seventeen chaplains are operated on the post. Counseling and administering make up only one part of the complex existence of the minister in uniform, who performs a myriad of duties many of which would not ordinarily be performed by the civilian clergy.

The Infantry Center Chaplain's Section works closely with the Columbus-Phenix City Ministerial Association. Fort Benning chaplains entertain members of the civilian clergy at an annual luncheon, usually held during Armed Forces Week, and frequently speak to civilian religious groups. Civilian ministers often hold services on the post. This is part of the program Army chaplains at Fort Benning have inaugurated to develop closer ties between civilian ministers and those in uniform.

Fort Benning chaplains also are active in the Citizens Military Council, Traveler's Aid Society, United Givers and the Armed Forces YMCA. In order to "deepen the religious life of military personnel by a concerted effort for one week," the chaplains sponsor an annual Preaching Mission on the post. For this series of sermons guest speakers are invited to present their religious views. Christmas is an especially busy season for the chaplains of Fort

Promotions in 1933

Thirteen Artillerymen of Battery B, 102th Field Artillery Battalion have received promotions during the past month. The promotions included one sergeant first class, three sergeants and nine corporals.

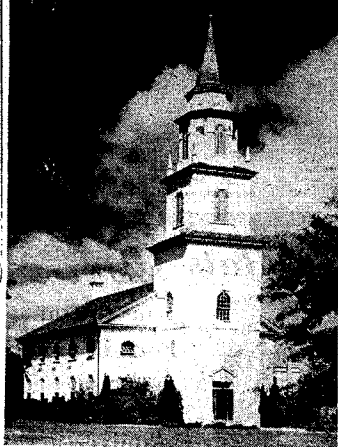

Claude E. Watson was promoted to SFC class as communications chief, while sergeants promotions were given to Eschod D. Hemphill, John D. Crumpton, and Herman Chisolm.

George B. Coor, James I. Jones, Edward H. Mitchell, Frank L. New, Robert Lindsay and Michael A. McDonald were promoted to corporal.

The U. S. Army Chaplain's Corps, project of the military ministers, objectives are so similar to those of the chaplains that they have an great interest in the program.

The U. S. Army Chaplain's Corps recently celebrated its 178th birthday. It was organized a year before the declaration of Independence was ratified.

In every battle that the U. S. has fought, the American soldier has found at least one solid friend standing right behind him when ever he went—the Army chaplain!

THIS CHAPEL... The Infantry Center Chapel stands in the shadow of the Infantry School. Built in 1935 as the Chapel of Three Faiths, today it is used primarily by Protestants.

Episcopal Mission Begins Third Year of Activities

St. Michael's Episcopal Mission, a well-established religious organization at Fort Benning, celebrated its second anniversary two months ago.

Organized last year for the purpose of insuring continuous Episcopal services on the Post, the mission has become a vital part of the ever-increasing religious activity of the post.

Through the efforts of the membership, Episcopal services are assured through the year. The mission centers its activities in the hospital chapel near the junction of Running Avenue and Wackerham.

The organization of the mission assures that members of the Episcopal denomination will always have a church of their communion available in which they can serve. During those periods when an Episcopal chaplain is assigned, the Rev. Colin H. Campbell of Trinity Parish, Columbus, conducts Sunday services.

Mission Status
The mission status provides opportunity for the members of the military service to take an active part in the life and work of national organizations of the denomination. Elected representatives of the mission take part in the official acts of the Diocese of Atlanta, and regular contributions are made to various missionary projects of the Episcopal Church.

There is an elected Vestry, an Altar Guild, and a Womens Auxiliary, all of which have continued their work unabated and without interruption, in spite of the many personal changes which confront all Fort Benning activities. The Vestry is elected annually on St. Michael's Day (Sept. 29) for one year, and as vacancies occur, interim appointments are made until the next annual meeting. The altar Guild and the Ladies Auxiliary follow similar practices to assure continuity of their endeavors.

At present Chaplain (Major) Philip W. Roberts is priest in charge. Chaplain Roberts plans call for an active session of church work to include a confirmation class, in instruction for acolytes and lay leaders, and at least two study classes for the winter season. The Vestry consists of a senior warden, Col. W. K. Dudley; a treasurer, Lt. Col. John M. Willis; and two members, Maj. Albert G. Wing and Capt. Harry T. Breaker.

School System Is Flexible, Modern

Fort Benning's school system is modern, progressive and flexible. It has to be. The system has no other educator faces.

One of the biggest problems confronting the teachers is the tremendous turnover in students resulting from continuing reassignment of military personnel. Fortunately, however, Army children seem to adjust rapidly to their new environment. This is evidenced by the fact that by the time they reach the seventh

'Quiet' Marks Anniversary By Post Troops

Thirty-fifth birthday celebrations at Fort Benning yesterday were confined to official hours.

During the evening, however, soldiers gathered at Service Clubs and NCO Messes to empty punch bowls and blow out the candles on cakes at several informal parties.

But business as usual was the main anniversary motif.

Third Army commander Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, asserted:

"The Infantry we are training in the quality of its training and in the leadership and devotion to duty instilled in the young men at this post."

"From the accomplishments of this hour of the Infantry we draw inspiration. We are the inheritors of a glorious tradition, the links between a noble past and a future which we are helping mold," said Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander.

Lawrence Shields, mayor of Columbus, extended "the heartiest of felicitations and well wishes to the command, Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., to the officers and men and to their families on behalf of the citizens of Columbus."

Major Seth A. Floyd of Phenix City wired Gen. Meloy: "You can well be proud of the more than quarter century of progress during which you have won public confidence through consistent service and fair dealings."

The history of Fort Benning will be used as the topic of discussion during the troop information hour program by all units during October.

Nearly $100,000 was donated to the American Red Cross fund campaign over the past three years by military and civilian personnel here. Averaging 95 to 100 per cent participation, ARC officials say that, on a per capita basis, this contribution ranks most favorably with the National average.

Transportation Section Serves Benning Troops

Movement of Infantry Center troops to training areas and to other posts is the important job of the Transportation Section at Fort Benning. To accomplish this mission, the section operates three coordinated activities.

First is the Transportation Office which focuses on the operations center of all transportation on the post. Col. Sidney P. Kretlow of Oklahoma City, Okla., Transportation officer, directs all passenger movements by air, rail or bus on the reservation and to and from Fort Benning, makes travel arrangements for military dependents going overseas and handles all freight for the post.

The Motor Regulation Branch, headed by Major Arthur Canfield of Los Angeles, Calif., handles technical and administrative responsibilities of the section, and the Post Motor Pool, under the command of Major Byron Fisher, maintains and furnishes vehicles used on the post.

One of the section's biggest jobs is transportation of Infantry Center troops. Commanded by Capt. Jay Verka of Lebanon, Pa., South Army Heliport Company, commanded by Major George W. Kilmer of Des Moines, Iowa, and the Transportation Truck Company, commanded by Capt. James V. Johnson of Marietta, Ga.

The section also supervises training aids for other Army installations and has shipped its products overseas.

To aid groups in selecting the training aids they want, the center has a 16-page catalog containing pictures of the aids as well as their cost and shipping weight.

Post 'Borrows' Price Tagging
Price tagging, usually associated with bargain basements, has been borrowed by the post to promote supply economy.

Large items, such as trucks, buses, and automobiles, have their price stenciled on the dashboard or some other prominent part of the vehicle where it can be seen easily.

Smaller objects—cups and silverware used in mess halls—are arranged in small displays with the price listed below each object. Similar displays in supply rooms show the individual soldier's equipment.

Purpose of the price tag program is to promote care in the use of individual and government property. Officials believe the individual will be more careful with the equipment if he knows its cost.

Stressing a positive program of action, the price tagging system emphasizes the fact that military and civilian personnel pay taxes. It points out that care in the use of equipment will make the Army tax dollar go further.

It is impossible to measure the savings of this program, officials say, since much of the actual savings takes place on the individual level. But results show that individuals and groups are more careful with equipment now than it has been put on a dollar and cents basis.

Benning Called Sports Haven

Activities Here Unlimited In All Athletic Phases

Fort Benning is a haven for athletes and sports fans in uniform. Individual performances of post sports figures rate cheers and trophies in any league. To the post soldier athletic activities are practically unlimited. Boxing, basketball, baseball, track, softball, football, volleyball, and tennis are down to checkers and mainly pegs Fort Benning has them all.

Athletes here, as at most Army posts, operate on an intramural basis and all Infantry Center soldiers are encouraged to participate in some sport.

Top sport attractions are baseball, football and boxing. The Infantry Center Baseball League games are played every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at Gowdy Field on the Main Post and at Bullett Field in Sand Hill. Each August the "Shanghaesey" Playoffs are held to decide the post baseball championship and to select an All-Post team which engages in Third Army competition.

In the baseball league, six teams battle for the championship, which was won this year by ISI. Spring track meets are most of the major units holding intramural meets which lead to The Infantry Center Track and Field Meet at Doughboy Stadium and Gowdy Field.

After two days of gathering hits, homers and a slight sun burn, the 56th Airborne was proclaimed the 1934 Track and Field champion by beating out 1932's winner, the Combat Training Command Commanders.

The post was well represented by the boxing team that went to the Third Army tournament this year. Three titles were brought back plus the Third Army team championship. Roy Kiley won the featherweight championship, but was eliminated after one fight in the All-Army show. Jack King checked out the light heavyweight crown and went to the All-Army final where he has TKO'd. But the fight that brought the most fame to Fort Benning was Governor Van Lon, an All-Army 156 pound title winner. He went to the National AAU Championships and the Inter-Service Boxing Matches, where he was runner-up in both tournaments.

During autumn, post personnel flock to Doughboy Stadium and The Infantry Center Football League in action and this year four eleven, representing the main organizations at the post are engaging in a double round robin.

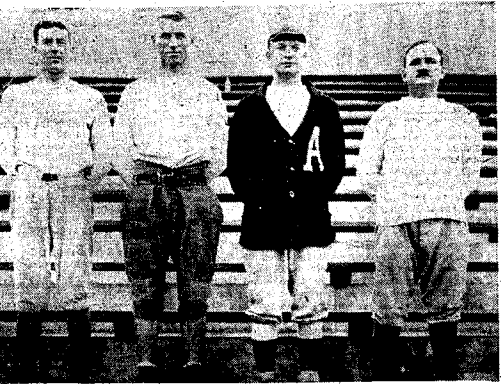

Basketball is another top sport. Last season was eliminated by the Third Army Basketball Tournament which was held at Briant Wells Field House.

For the interested anglers there are over 25 well-stocked ponds and lakes on the military reservation and boats are available.

The Fish and Game Maintenance Association offers membership to military personnel and depends on the assist in planning a hunting and fishing trip on post. Special Service has provided a Fleet Camp at Destin, Fla., for those who like boats.

PT Puts Soldier Into Top Muscle-Hardened Shape

The strength of the Infantry is the primary concern of a committee of instructors at the Infantry school. It is their responsibility to build bigger biceps on U. S. Infantry men and at the same time teach them how to use the bayonet and how to fight an enemy hand and disarm him.

An member of the Staff Department's physical training committee, these instructors must see to it that the individual Infantry man is in top physical condition.

Any future combat leader is striving for a last push-up, is motivated by the knowledge that physical conditioning is one of the most important factors of success in battle. He may also like the healthy feel of toned-up muscles on the advancing glint in his lord's eye. But his chief interest is in being physically fit to win battles and stay alive.

PT Mission
Mission of the physical training committee is to train trainers. Like everywhere else in "The Infantry" School the student, the future teacher, learns by doing.

Actual participation in exercises and drills not only familiarizes the student with the best methods of instruction but puts him in good physical shape at the same time. Basis of the program is the Army Dozen, a series of 12 exercises designed to condition all the moving parts of the body. To the trainee, as he sweats out each repetition, they seem like a diabolical dozen indeed.

But objective of the training is to start slowly and progress gradually to a peak which the student is to maintain during the bulk of the program. Exercises are designed to be executed in a minimum of space and to be adapted to any condition.

To break the monotony and give any missed muscles a going over, the Army Dozen is supplemented with log exercises, coveralls, and other exercises, confidence and obstacle courses and team games such as soccer, softball touch football and volleyball ball.

Interest Revived
Since Korea interest has been revived in bayonet instruction with the emphasis on the spirit of the bayonet, building individual will to close with and destroy the enemy.

Top Gridded

During the early days of Fort Benning, sportsmen among the pioneers banded together for companionship and enjoyment to hunt and fish on the reservation.

They formed a Fish and Game Maintenance Association in those halcyon days of plentiful game and well-stocked waters. This association was necessary for Fort Benning to have an active game management program.

During World War II, however, little thought was given to hunting and fishing. In 1946 the Fish and Game Association was reorganized. Its guiding principal was to inaugurate a continuing program of fish and game propagation and maintenance.

A comprehensive survey of the entire reservation was conducted by a group of experts headed by Phil Goodwin and Ancel Holloway of the Federal Wildlife Service, and a master plan evolved covering a 10-year plan.

This plan was put into operation in the fall of 1948 and has continued to the extent that funds and labor have been available since that time. Briefly the plan contemplates rodent control, rearing of game birds, and the control of other enemies of game, planting feed patches for quail, turkey and dove, wild pig control, stocking and fertilizing, and periodic draining of fishing ponds and reduction of brush on the sports grounds.

Membership in the Fish and Game Association entitles an individual to rent association boats and to participate in organized hunts. Last year the association sponsored dove shoots, turkey shoots and pig shoots and a fish and slush tournament.

Infantrymen Built Field And Stadium

Fort Benning soldiers take special pride in Gowdy Field and Doughboy Stadium. Both these playing fields were built and paid for by the men who use them, the American Infantrymen.

Doughboy Stadium was begun in 1924 as a memorial to Infantrymen killed in World War I. Contributions for its construction were made by every Infantry outfit in the Army at that time.

Top army officers, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur made individual donations. Many contributions came from schools throughout the United States, and Fort Benning troops supplied the labor during off-duty hours.

Funds Received
Gowdy Field was built the same way. Funds came from the overflow of donations received for Doughboy Stadium. Inequality of a well as effort marked the work of the soldier-builders of the recreational area.

An unorthodox yet workable method of construction raised the two Doughboy Stadium towers. Steam was needed as power for the immense shovel which scooped out the hole in which the foundation would rest. None of the usual ways of obtaining power was available, so tracks were laid and a sliding hull for a locomotive to come alongside the project and furnish the power.

Landmarks Dedicated
The two landmarks were dedicated in 1925. In March the New York Giants and Washington Senators, 1924 major league champions, played the dedicatory game at Gowdy Field. Named for Hank Gowdy, first major league baseball player to enlist in the Army during World War I, Gowdy field is one of the finest baseball plants in this part of the country. It can accommodate over 5,000 spectators.

On October 15, 1925, the chief of Infantry dedicated Doughboy Stadium at a game in which Fort Benning's Blue Tide defeated Oglethorpe University. The stadium consists of 40 bays and 320 boxes with a seating capacity of 10,000.

Since Gowdy Field and Doughboy Stadium were built, some of the nation's greatest athletes have played on the fields. Some of the baseball players are Jackie Robinson, Ewell Blackwell, Larry Doby, Clem Labine and Billy Johnson. The Texas Blue Tide defeated Oglethorpe University. The stadium includes Johnny Luick, Johnny Green and Billy Hildebrand.

COMPANY I ITEMS
Promotion of five NCOs in Company I, 30th Inf. Regt., was announced recently. Lawrence Bradford and Charles F. Pickens were promoted to sergeant first class, Leroy Eaton, went up to sergeant and Charles E. Niles and John R. Thornton advanced to corporal.

Upon graduation, Womack started work in the Texas oilfields near Corsicana, Texas. During the summer, he kept himself in top fight condition. His conditioning finally paid off when he won the heavyweight title of Texas in the Texas Athletic Federation.

Operations Office Is Spark Of Hustling Infantry School

To the newly-arrived student of Fort Benning, the Operations Office is a place of activity. There is no idleness here. The present the same cleanliness and orderliness as the same quiet but relentless efficiency.

The student soon discovers that the generator of this World-famed military plant is located in the operations office of the Infantry School. But in Room 129 is generated the complex activity of planning or coordinating the classroom, training, sound and visual aids, student and instructor participation, demonstration troops, instructional material, instructional supplies, training aids and weapons and ammunition to teach 200 classes each year totaling 40,000 students.

And in addition to its responsibility, Operations acts as the Infantry School's academic department. Running any school is complex and difficult. Civilian colleges and universities have an easy time of it, however, compared to the Infantry School. For instance, they do not have to consider such factors as impact areas, indecent weather, widely scattered students, instruction or whether the noise-filing will drown the public address system. These problems only must be considered by Operations. They must be solved. And Operations solves them.

The scope of the Operations Office's mission is best explained by a quote from the briefs to its instructors: "When schedules have been set, properly classrooms, ranges, reserved, ammunition, weapons and other equipment requested by instructor personnel, delivered to them we can say we are doing our job."

This material is furnished the Planning, Terrain and Ammunition Section of Operations which covers every hour of every day. Such a schedule, known as a master board, is required for each type course given. There are now 12 separate courses scheduled for the school year.

From the master boards of all Terrain and Ammunition Section makes the weekly schedule board. This consists of the week's schedule for all classes for any particular calendar week. The information for the weekly board is taken from the appropriate week of the master board.

It is this easy to detect the inevitable conflicts of instruction. When Operations and the Instructional Departments are satisfied with the changes, the weekly board is frozen. This is usually done six to 12 weeks in advance. Early in February the Planning, Terrain and Ammunition Section was working on the weekly schedule for April.

Such pre-planning allows Operations to all parties concerned and to provide services and facilities required for instruction.

The responsibility for the major part of this action rests on the Publications and Facilities Section and the Services Section. The latter is further divided into the Classroom Custodial Branch, Branch and Weapons Pools. Two major requirements are the responsibilities of two officers who are actually for all practical purposes, are a part of Operations but actually belong to other agencies. The (demonstration) troop requirements are handled by the Infantry Center G-3 and the instructor requirements by G-4.

The Troop Requirements Branch has the job of ordering from the Combat Training Command 1st Lt. Marsh and Bernie W. Easter. The proper place at the proper time with the proper equipment and in proper uniform. The Publications and Facilities Section publishes each week a calendar for each class in session. There are 5,000 to 10,000 copies. Each calendar contains the time and place of instruction, textbooks, references, type of instruction, and many other details. This information is gathered through the master and weekly schedule cards. The section also assigns classroom rooms, arranges for communication aids, schedules bleachers and classes and maintains an inventory of instructional material in stores and issues such material as advance sheets, outlines of conferences and special lectures.

Other Activities Operations encompasses several other activities that are not immediately related to briefing the troops. These include preparing of VIP's, budget planning, operation of a supply office for the instruction and maintenance facility of the Infantry School.

Info Doled Out At TI Sessions

In small groups reminiscent of old-time "cracker barrel" meetings, enlisted personnel gather weekly to discuss subjects of interest to them as servicemen as well as citizens. Unit commanders are responsible for the program although most of the discussions are handled by non-commissioned officers.

Part of an Armed Forces-wide program in orient and inform service personnel, the Troop Information Hour deals with a multitude of subjects ranging from "Why We Are in Korea" through "The Responsibility to Vote" and "Rights and Benefits of a Soldier." The material for most subjects is prepared through a booklet, Armed Forces Talks, which also contains a discussion leader's outline. Local units also are included in the series. One month the topic for discussion was "The Community Relationship between Fort Benning and Columbus."

Unit commanders are responsible for the program although most of the discussions are handled by non-commissioned officers.

We Proudly Salute The Personnel at Ft. Benning During its 35th Anniversary

The artillery and the air force soften up the ground to be taken. The tanks batter the enemy's tanks—but its foot slogging infantry that actually occupies the ground and holds it.

Fort Benning is known as The Infantry Center. This year, marks TIC's 35th anniversary. In the years since its founding thousands have trained here and gone on to teach others how to survive when the chips are down.

QM Takes Care of Food, Clothing, Equipment

Feeding, clothing, and furnishing equipment for Fort Benning troops probably keeps the Quartermaster Section busier than any large department store in the country.

Quartermaster Col. William R. Fields of San Antonio, Texas, supervises the overall operation of this huge supply business, assisted by his six division chiefs.

The large stockpiles of equipment which must be stored for future use and the responsibility of Lt. Col. Fred Koenig of Houston, Texas, property officer, his sections procures, stores and issues all quartermaster items.

It takes two officers, 24 enlisted men and 121 civilian employees to perform the multitude of tasks required of this division which also operates clothing and typewriter repair shops.

Under the supervision of Capt. George B. Patton of Montgomery, Ala., the Purchasing and Contracted Division serves as a centralized purchasing agency, buying for all Army units here and inspecting the items bought to see that they meet required specifications.

The Central Meat Cutting Plant, headed by WOJG Allen Meyer of Fresno, Calif., is responsible for processing all meat used here. Every steak, chop and roast is inspected, cut and delivered to mess halls by this division which also renders meat scrapes, produces 50 per cent of all lard used by post units and operates an on-the-job training program for the troops.

Cleaners-Ble Operators Since everyone is expected to look his best at all times, the Quartermaster Laundry and Dry Cleaning Division is a big operation in itself. Employing 184 civilians, this quartermaster division handles all laundry from post units and the Hospital. The Laundry, a self-sustaining agency, also processes laundry and dry cleaning bundles for officers, enlisted men and their dependents.

To the Army housewife the Post commissary is probably one of the most important installations on any post. Major B. A. Holbrook of Shelbyville, Ind., supervises the commissary division, which is made up of two officers, 21 enlisted men and 99 civilians employees.

Salvage Saving Taxpayer $$$

They're turning junk into money here. In fact, the post just brings $400,000 worth of solace to the American taxpayer every year.

The Property Disposal Yard, supervised by the Quartermaster Section, not only saves greenbacks but also helps conserve strategic materials needed for the defense program.

Known as the "salvage yard" it serves as the collection agency for discarded items which are sold, redistributed or donated to other Federal agencies at a profit to the government.

Major items funneled through the salvage yard are iron, non-ferrous metals, mixed paper and cardboard, grease, bones, tin cans, lumber, edible garbage and scrap rubber.

The operation headed by Second Lt. David G. Lee of Jacksonville, Fla., processes these items and classifies them as scrap, surplus property or excess property.

Largest profits come from the sale of non-ferrous metals which netted the government more than $2,000 in 1952. Tin cans alone brought in $2,231. In all the property disposal group produced a profit of $32,789 for the government last year.

SKILLED SURGEONS OPERATE ON PATIENT AT POST HOSPITAL Facilities Termed Among Best in Nation

Base Hospital Rated Among Top Centers in U.S. Army

Nothing is quite so important to the combat infantryman as the medical care which he receives both on the battle field and in the garrison.

Col. Mack Green, of Columbus, Tenn., commander of the U. S. Army Hospital, feels that the soldier today is receiving the best medical care in the world.

Founded in 1918 as a station hospital, the medical center is today rated by the Army Surgeon General's Office as one of the most completely equipped medical facilities in the Armed Forces.

The mission of the hospital is two-fold: first, to prevent disease, second to give immediate treatment for injury and disease.

Preventive medicine. Preventive medicine consists of possible measures to check and limit the spreading of disease. Continuous sanitary inspections are made on and off the post, a close liaison is maintained with the Infantry Center engineer in insect and rodent control measures, water, etc., 20 medical corporals, 312 employees and 256 civilian employees.

In July, 1951, the hospital was elected one of two stations in the country to conduct research in the prevention of malaria.

During the past few months several Korean exchange prisoners have been sent here. Those men received complete physical examinations to determine whether they required medical treatment. Some were treated on the post, others were sent to specialized medical centers.

41 Doctors

At the present time the hospital is staffed with 41 doctors, 68 nurses, 20 medical corporals, 312 employees and 256 civilian employees.

In 1952 more than 570,000 out-patients were treated and 170,270 immunizations given.

Two pharmacists operate in conjunction with the dispensary to provide quick and complete prescription service for out-patients.

In-patients are served by the hospital proper, a 1,000 bed facility, which handles orthopedic, surgical and general medical cases.

During the last year 15,832 patients were admitted to the hospital at an average of 43 per day.

In the last 12 months 2,187 major operations and 2,138 minor operations were performed. Over 20,000 X-rays were taken, and the hospital brace shop made 5,129 orthopedic braces during this period.

41 Doctors

Post Finds There's A Lot In A Name

What's in a name? There are two official titles that can be used in connection with Fort Benning: The Infantry School and The Infantry Center, which includes the school and the other training and staff units.

But in 55 years, hundreds of columns to be found filled to describe the activities and history of Fort Benning. And adjective-heavy writers, inspired by their task, have coined many descriptive synonyms.

The post is the Home of the Infantry. It is also the World's Most Complete Military Post. And some times it's called the Military Crossroads of the World.

The Infantry School itself has been called America's College of Military Knowledge. Occasionally it's the Alma Mater for Millions.

Apparently imaginative editorialists will go on thinking up new names as long as the post exists. It is worth noting, however, that the sobriquets are appropriate, and none of the superlative exaggerates Fort Benning's accomplishments.

In this case, there is a lot in a name.

Training Officers Of Allied Countries Began At Benning Two Decades Ago

"There are peoples all over the world who are firmly on our side with their minds and hearts. They will gladly be on our side with their muscles as well, provided we go to the trouble of getting them started with their training in a new equipment."

This statement by Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former U. S. Eighth Army commander in Korea, could well serve as the philosophy behind most of the Infantry School's most important and far-reaching activities — training officers and a few highly qualified enlisted men from the armies of our Allies.

Began more than two decades ago on a "good neighbor" basis with certain Latin American countries, the Allied Student Training Program last year trained nearly 700 officers of 26 different nations from all parts of the globe.

Normally, there are about 300 Allied students from more than two dozen nations receiving instruction at the Infantry School at all times. Since the length of courses varies from three to 25 weeks, the turnover of Allied personnel is almost continuous. Thus there are students arriving and departing practically every day.

Countries sending students to Fort Benning in 1952 were Brazil, Colombia, Guatemala, Mexico, Canada, Cuba, Haiti, Paraguay, Chile, El Salvador, Honduras and Venezuela from the Western Hemisphere.

From Europe there were Belgium, France, Norway, Denmark, Greece, Portugal, Italy and the Netherlands.

Near and Middle East countries were Iran, Lebanon and Turkey, and the Far East nations were Nationalist China, the Philippines, Indonesia, Korea and Thailand.

Five nations other than those listed above are at present represented at the school. They are Costa Rica, Switzerland, Ethiopia, Libya and Japan.

In most cases the number of Allied personnel in each class is about 10 per cent. However, for the Japanese and Korean students separate classes are operated because of the large numbers of those students. The only Japanese group to date numbered 54, and the Korean classes have about 150 students.

For these two groups, all instructional material is translated. For lectures and other instruction, interpreters are used in the class.

MAJOR GEN. GUY S. MELOY JR. is an avid reader of military history (Geighis Khan and Alexander the Great) and has a keen interest in current events. To keep up with the latter, he reads newspapers and weekly newsmagazines thoroughly. As insurance against this missing a small but important item, local daily papers are carefully checked and marked for him. As physically fit as he looks, General MeLOY stays that way by participating in any sport that is handy. Normally he prefers hunting and golf. Currently, however, he's engaging in an archery contest with the squirrels on his lawn. ("The squirrels are perfectly safe" he says.) In September 1952 he qualified as a parachutist, proof of his physical fitness.

Members of these classes are not required to speak and understand English. Nearly all of them have some knowledge of the language, however, and many attend voluntary night classes to improve their ability. For other Allied officers, knowledge of English is a requirement as they attend classes with American students. All students must have sufficient military background to absorb the training they will receive.

The present emphasis on the training of Allied officers began in 1951 when Congress gathered into one program the several pacts and agreements which the United States had made with its Allies to fight the "cold war."

The Mutual Security Program, as it is called, is executed by the State Department and encompasses many activities other than military assistance.

Of this particular phase of MSP, the report to Congress for the six months ending June 30, 1953, made the following comments: "Foreign military students are being trained by the United States to insure that our Allies will be capable of effectively employing and maintaining the material they receive. A tank or an airplane will contribute little to our defense unless our Allies are trained to use it."

After the first few days of orientation, the Allied student settles down to his schooling. Like all training at the Infantry School, it is rugged and realistic, mixing field and classroom work with the theoretical. This is done by the use of role playing, and the use of actual equipment. The training program is designed to provide the officer with the muscles to back up his mind. No student is allowed to leave the post until he has completed his training program. # Lawson Sprang From Balloonist Observer Base

The guns of World War I had been quiet for less than a year when a small group of U. S. Army paratroopers landed on the edge of the shallow rim of hills west of Fort Benning, Ga. For Post 23, Lawson Air Force Base, destined to take part in America's conquest of the air, was promoted to major and reassigned to an active role in the post's development. Now, two wars and 34 years later, this small air field of 1919 has become one of the most important of the 12th Air Force's troop carrier bases.

Its importance is evidenced by the record drops carried out in the last year and a half. During that period, Lawson aircraft, in cooperation with the Infantry School's Airborne Department, and the 56th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, have dropped more than 125,000 paratroopers.

This activity is in direct contrast to the early years of the base when it was used as an observation post for the Infantry. For 21 years, its activities fell into an "on-again-off-again" pattern as units moved in and out of the field.

The small airfield remained unmanned until 1921 when it was named in honor of World War I air hero, Capt. Walter R. Lawson, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism.

His importance is evidenced by the record drops carried out in the last year and a half. During that period, Lawson aircraft, in cooperation with the Infantry School's Airborne Department, and the 56th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, have dropped more than 125,000 paratroopers.

On any typical day, the general changes from one of these jobs to another many times. As eight in the morning as "mayor" he might confer with his superintendent of road maintenance (the equipment used to discuss the resurfacing of one of the military city highways).

At ten he might inspect field training conducted by the Infantry School. Though he much prefers command duty with troops, General MeLOY's official handling of the most important aspects of his present job marks him as an outstanding example of the modern U. S. Army general — part soldier, diplomat, technician, and statesman.

Following this work, Colonel MeLOY became chief of staff of the Infantry Division and moved with the unit to Europe in September 1944. In his key job, Colonel MeLOY has an important factor in the combat effectiveness of the 10th Army. Achieving its original mission, the division crossed into Germany in May 1945 and captured the city of Berlin. Discharged from the hospital in November 1950, Colonel MeLOY was assigned to General Headquarters, Far East Command in Tokyo as executive assistant to the deputy G-1 (personnel). Shortly after reporting to this assignment, he was exchanged back to Washington. On his way back in January 1951, he was notified of his nomination for brigadier general and was promoted to that rank following confirmation by the Senate in February.

With the departure of Major Gen. Robert N. Young, in January 1953 to become G-1, Department of the Army, General MeLOY became Commanding General of the Infantry Center and Commandant of the Infantry School. He has continued in that assignment until the present, receiving his promotion to major general in March 1953.

Occupying one of the vital jobs for U. S. Infantryman and having military as a hobby, General MeLOY seldom "gets away from it all" and has little desire to do so.

The Chief Himself Maj. Gen. MeLOY-Post's Busiest Infantryman

With three hats for only one head, Major Gen. G. S. MeLOY, Jr., needs the ability of a quick change artist to keep up with his manifold responsibilities.

As Commanding General of the Infantry Center, he is the chief executive for a community of approximately 42,000 persons which embraces such activities as fire prevention, police protection, children's school system and all municipal affairs.

As Commandant of the Infantry School, he is dean of the world's largest school for Infantry which admits up to 50,000 students a year.

As Chief of the Fort Benning garrison he is the military symbol to the troops and units stationed there.

He came to Fort Benning as executive for a community of approximately 42,000 persons which embraces such activities as fire prevention, police protection, children's school system and all municipal affairs.

The fall of 1941 saw Major MeLOY as a student and observer in England, where he attended night schools. Though he didn't know it at the time, this was preparation for one of the critical assignments of his career.

Returning to the United States December 1941, Major MeLOY went to the Tank Destroyer School at Camp Hood Texas as an instructor in tactics and then executive officer. Promoted to lieutenant colonel in April 1942 and to full colonel in December of that year, he was rapidly developing officer was elevated to chief of staff of the 12th Air Force.

For his staff work, Colonel MeLOY earned a reputation which he retains to this day. A few months ago this was demonstrated here by a group of civilian VPs. A lieutenant colonel had been selected as boss at the Tank Destroyer Center indicated General MeLOY and said, "The man who helped put three stars on my shoulders."

Occupying one of the vital jobs for U. S. Infantryman and having military as a hobby, General MeLOY seldom "gets away from it all" and has little desire to do so.

He is an avid reader of military history (Geighis Khan and Alexander the Great) and has a keen interest in current events. To keep up with the latter, he reads newspapers and weekly newsmagazines thoroughly. As insurance against this missing a small but important item, local daily papers are carefully checked and marked for him. As physically fit as he looks, General MeLOY stays that way by participating in any sport that is handy. Normally he prefers hunting and golf. Currently, however, he's engaging in an archery contest with the squirrels on his lawn. ("The squirrels are perfectly safe" he says.) In September 1952 he qualified as a parachutist, proof of his physical fitness.

With three sons, the MeLOY household is definitely on the "home" side. Sam III is a second lieutenant in Infantry, who graduated from the Infantry School in 1950 and is presently studying this year in Belgium. William Norman is fulfilling his national service requirements as a sailor, having enlisted 18 months ago after a semester at Texas A&M. Of this, the general grins and says "they gave that quite a play."

The third son John Norman is now at prep school in Washington, D. C. He, too, is Navy — munched out plans on taking the entrance examinations for the U. S. Naval Academy in 1954.

Li MeLOY shares his father's interest in the military, and "shop talk" reasons throughout the commanding general's residence whenever the time is home. "I hear discussions on the attack, on problems of defense, on Airborne and Ranger training," says Mrs. MeLOY. "All the time."

In these days of hot wars and cold wars, the picture of an Infantry general winning in the evening by discussing military tactics with his lieutenant son should be a definite source of reassurance to all citizens concerned with the nation's survival.

One of the few churches in the world that was built for and dedicated to the country's three major faiths is located here. Built in 1885, the Infantry Center Chapel was dedicated to the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths and named the Three Faiths Building.

Soaring Planes Chang Lif

The war planes soaring over the trench-scared battlefields of World War I made a vivid impression on the mind of a young infantryman and changed the course of his career.

Today, 32 years later, Lt. Col. Jesse Zellner, now executive officer, 46th Air Base Group at Lawson Air Force Base, still believes in the impression formed from his first line observation.

"It was while engaged at the front in 1918 that I first had the opportunity to observe aircraft in combat and to some extent was able to visualize the tremendous future importance of aviation to National Defense," the colonel said.

Discharged as Sgt. Following a year's service with Company B, 113th Machine Gun Battalion, 96th Infantry Division, in which he participated in the Ypres, St. Quentin Canal, La Selve River, and Masenberg offensives, the colonel was discharged as a sergeant and returned to his home in Nashville, Tenn.

His great interest in aviation had not been a sudden one. Even when he was a small boy he had been interested in planes and flying, and his personal observation during his year in France and Belgium had heightened that interest.

It was not until 1920 that he took definite steps to do something about his interest in aviation. In Nashville, Colonel Zellner and a group of World War I aviators met to organize a National Guard squadron.

They worked long, hard hours planning and spent many more nights arranging for the necessary space and equipment to carry out the plans.

Federal Recognition On Jan. 8, 1921, the group was organized and designated the 136th Air Observation Squadron, Tennessee National Guard. The organization received Federal recognition Dec. 19, 1921, thereby becoming the first National Guard Squadron in the United States to receive such recognition.

His association with the 136th was the beginning of Colonel Zellner's Air Force career. He was discharged as a master sergeant in Oct. 1922 to accept a commission in the same organization and was assigned duty as transportation officer and armament officer.

He received his promotion from second lieutenant to captain while a member of the unit later designated the 105th Observation Squadron. In September, 1943, as captain, he went with the unit into Federal Service.

During 1940 and 1941, he flew the at Ovent Field, Columbia, S. C. In Nov. 1941, he transferred to the 55th Observation Group and went with that outfit to Langley AFB, Va., and was assigned duties as anti-submarine patrol along the East Coast.

Following his promotion to Major in May 1942, he transferred to Jacksonville Air Force Base, Fla., where he was assigned as executive officer. During his two years, he served as Base S-4, executive officer, and base commander. He was promoted to Lt. Col. in May 1943.

In Feb. 1945, he was separated from the service and returned to the National Guard. He accepted appointment as Lt. Col. of the Air Force Reserve in 1950.

Requests Dues With the beginning of the Korean conflict, Colonel Zellner requested extended active duty and was recalled in Feb. 1952. Reporting to the Fifth Air Force, he was assigned as executive officer, 452nd Maintenance and Supply Group, 452nd Bombardment Wing (L).

This organization was the first reserve unit to be called for service and shipped to the Far East with the outbreak in Korea. In May 1952 he transferred to the 17th Maintenance and Supply Group, 17th Bombardment Wing, which relieved the 452nd. He served as executive officer and commander of the Group before his return to the states in April 1953.

A Fort Benning soldier will serve as enlisted aide to Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, Third Army commander, from Nov. 1 to 14. He will be chosen for the honor from among candidates representing the six major units on post.

Gen. Bolling inaugurated the enlisted aide program several months ago, selecting a man from a different installation in the Third Army area each time. The program is designed to acquaint enlisted men with the duties and responsibilities of the Third Army commander.

This is the second time Fort Benning has been called on to provide an enlisted aide.

CTC Puts Realism into Post's 'War'

The visitor or student here can witness the nearest thing to actual combat seen anywhere in the world, including the make-believe of the artillery and the devastating fire power of the Infantry are demonstrated "close and kill" action of the Infantry are demonstrated more than 9-0 modern weapons and the explosions of grenades and the rate of fire are demonstrated in any battle. All that is missing from the scene are the dead, the wounded and the confusion of actual combat.

This display, and many others of similar nature, are the work of troops from the Combat Training Command which during the three years since the organization has perfected to a fine art the vital role of a demonstration unit. The unit of CTC is the 30th Inf. Regiment, formerly a part of the Third Infantry Division.

When ordered to Korea in 1950, the Third Division left its 30th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning. It was the first time in its history that the division had gone into a combat zone without the 30th Infantry.

Name Only
The regiment remained here in name only, however, its personnel were used to bring other units of the division to full strength. When the dust of the departing troops had settled, 12 officers and 15 enlisted men were all that remained of the regiment.

What had happened to the 30th also was true of other post units such as the 41st Field Artillery Battalion and the 28th Engineer Combat Battalion, both now a part of CTC.

The first mission of these units, building up to strength, was partially accomplished with recalled Reservists and draftees. The process was slow because of the constant demand for overseas replacements. However, before the close of 1950, the 201st Armored Field Artillery Battalion arrived to join CTC, and at the end of the year the strength of the command consisted of 75 officers, 10 warrant officers and 1,741 enlisted men.

The first big stride in the development of the CTC was made March 19, 1951, with the arrival of the 28th Infantry Battalion. This unit later became the Second Battalion of the 30th Infantry.

Third Battalion
The following June the 201st Armored Field Artillery was ordered to the Seventh Army in Germany, and the 30th Infantry re-

"Seeing is believing" is an old adage which has been proved every day for 35 years at the Infantry School.

Demonstrating to the students what they are to learn is an underlying principle of the school. These demonstrations, ranging from a one-man show of bayonet drill staged by the Combat Training Command, consist of the 30th Infantry Regiment, 27th Aircraft Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Battalion, 78th Engineer (Combat) Battalion, 27th Chemical Smoke Generator Company, 188th Field Artillery Battalion, 406th Combat Engineer Company, 560th Combat Engineer Company, 560th Tank Company, 56th Engineer (Ft. ranges from A (Ancient history) to Z (zoology).

All academic hours taken off-campus are fully accredited although it is impossible to receive a degree from the University without residence study. A few soldiers have utilized leave time to establish the required residency at Athens, Ga., home of the University.

When a past unit requests that the searchlight unit of the 530th Searchlight Platoon, part of the 1st Combat Training Command take over the original purpose of the huge 600 searchlights used by this unit was to enable anti-aircraft batteries to see their target. In the European campaign searchlight units were a big factor in the "Battle of Britain" when the German air force made a desperate attempt to bomb England into submission.

After World War II, the searchlight unit was relegated to the military background, and it was not until 1951 that the unit was put into its own. It was Christmas Day of that year that the 530th Searchlight Platoon was officially activated in the CTC.

The searchlight became a vital part of U. S. fighting forces in Korea. Communist air attacks were rare, and Red aircraft were seldom seen, but night ground-to-air attacks were apt to explode any time after sundown. The unit was put into just such attacks that searchlight units were employed to illuminate the battlefield in Korea.

From handling teletype messages to caring for infants, WACs here constantly earn plaudits for their quick and efficient work at the Infantry Center.

The 100-woman company, commanded by First Lt. Jewel Wales of Yuba City, Calif., has earned high praise from Col. Irene O. Galloway, WAC director. During an inspection of the group records, Col. Galloway told Lt. Wales "your group is one you can be proud to command."

In earning this and other commendations the WACs have filled a variety of positions, including some which call for technical training. The WACs today serve in personnel and administrative positions, as medical and communications specialists, in supply and food service fields, as finance clerks and in ordnance activities. The largest number of WACs, 28, work at the hospital.

All enlisted WACs are housed in a small cluster of buildings near The Infantry School building.

While some of the women are new to the service, the company also has several who were members of the original "Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Several served in combat theaters during World War II, and more than 15 others have served overseas.

The WAC Company, part of Special Troops Command, has won many honors, including a Presidential Unit Citation as well as several awards from its parent unit.

I&E Boards Keep Post GIs Posted

The handwriting on the wall provides lively and interesting reading for Fort Benning soldiers courtesy of Infantry Center information and education specialists.

In this case, the handwriting is on the I & E Boards, which are crammed with a wide variety of news clippings, photographs, leaflets, maps and posters. I & E boards inform the walls of every Fort Benning day room, supplying soldiers with first class information at penny ante prices.

The I & E boards present a key-hole through which the soldiers glimpse the events in the world. It is the duty of the unit information and education non-coms to maintain the boards that are both to date and attractive enough to hold the interest of the reader.

There are three main sections of each board. The latest news must be reported, the latest education topics listed and a third section current military information covered.

One board, recently judged the best at Fort Benning, was constructed of plywood lumber and materials salvaged from the post salvage depot. Total cost of the board came to little more than $2.

The Troop Information and Education Section of the Infantry Center conducts periodic inspection to assist in keeping the boards lively and current.

Post Libraries Cater To Servicemen's Whims

Books, magazines, newspapers and pamphlets — thousands of them covering every subject known — are available to Infantry Center personnel through the Post Library System.

Libraries here have received wide acclaim, have been cited many times for the exemplary method in which they fulfill their general mission of satisfying the literary desires of some 30,000 servicemen and women.

To do this the system has over 50,000 books in six libraries. They also subscribe to 475 magazines annually and receive 65 daily and weekly newspapers from all over the U. S.

They lend an average of 17,000 books to the 22,000 troops, each month.

Miss Barbara Bronson, post librarian, cites the soldier's reading preference at a ratio of approximately two fiction books for each non-fiction volume.

Each library has a music room and extensive classical record collection, as well as language records with which servicemen teach themselves to speak everything from French to Serbo-Croatian.

The branch library in the U. S. Army Hospital features a book projector which enables immobilized patients to enjoy their favorite literature although flat on their backs.

The Main Post Library was for many years located in the same building with Service Club No. 1. In 1944, the building that now houses the library's 28,000 volumes was constructed.

It contains meeting rooms for the Writer's Club and the Great Books Discussion Group. An ample parking area was built to provide an appropriate setting for the library's summer series of weekly reader conferences.

Officials Start Post UG Drive

Civilian United Givers campaign organizers, met last Thursday for a kickoff pep talk by officials of the fund-raising organization.

Steve Knight, campaign chairman, and Mariette Layfield, United Givers executive secretary, urged the more than 30 representatives to push the fund-raising drive among Fort Benning civilians. This will mark the first time that Fort Benning civilians have participated as a body in the United Givers campaign. In the past they have donated to the post's Pledge cards and campaign literature workers at Thursday's meeting, and Charles Davis, vice chairman, asked that daily reports be made of the progress of the drive.

The United Givers campaign will continue through Oct. 30.

Officer Candidate Describes 'Those 22 Weeks'

"Company. . . attention! Dismissed!"
Sprinting and dodging, I joined the other members of the second platoon in the race to the barracks. I dashed to the steps, leaped to the top, flung open the door and triumphantly threw my arms above my head. For the first time in 22 weeks I had won! I had won. For five and one-half months I had been challenged by the standards of the Officer Candidate Regiment, and tomorrow we could see the trophies signifying victory—the gold bars and crossed rifles of a second lieutenant.

Stretching out on my bunk I recollected the events of the past 22 weeks of training. There were the tests, the endless forms, the screening, the board of officers, I felt muscles I never knew existed. The continuous physical training thinned my waist and broadened my shoulders. Each morning I was up before sunrise, counting exercise repetitions and running several miles with my company.
Until my last weeks as a senior candidate I was periodically checked by a higher command and a panel of officers is arranged. At these periods some candidates are examined to determine their potential as combat leaders. Through this medium, the weak are strengthened by repeating classes, and those who do not show the necessary qualifications are dismissed.
Nervous anxiety pervaded the whole training period. Everyone must be constantly alert, prepared to learn, to serve, to be reliable. I have learned to become acutely conscious of my own surroundings. Nothing escapes my notice.

The final phase of OCS is senior candidate status. Other candidates gave me the courtesies due an officer, and I was assigned responsible tasks to perform. Finally, by order of the President of the United States, I will become an officer. Not just by order, but by tons of strenuous, serious and sincere application.
Physically and mentally I feel that I have progressed so that I am unfit powers hidden before I started the course.
I have improved and developed the desire to continue to improve. After nearly six months of preparation I can tomorrow add to my signature the title of one of the toughest and biggest jobs in the world. . . .

Regular classes in the administration and supervision of physical training were provided in my own training. I had to learn the endurance and stamina to run the field problems up and down the shell-cratered slopes of Fort Benning hills.
The rhythmic precision of marching and Army drill have become second nature. I have learned to exaggerate the tone of voice to gain clear, sharp pitch of command. I know how to kill a man with a bayonet or bare hands.
The OCS program gave me a detailed knowledge of familiarization of every weapon from pistol to artillery. The enormous amount of weapon instruction made me appreciate the might of US arms. No enemy can stand against it.
Learning to lead was my duty. I've delved into the secrets of maps and the manner of moving at night by the stars and a compass. I have been learning the art of war as an individual, as a group, as an Army.
Scouting, patrolling, large scale attack and defense, special river and city operations, tank-infantry coordination, 32-hour problems, the demands of tactics erased the limits of day and night.
What I acquired in the classroom I am able to apply in the field. The doctrine of war and the proficiency of garrison will help me to lead in combat and teach others the modern science of battle. Staff operations, logistics, mass and supply are no longer strange.
Everything at OCS is designed to make the candidate alert, dependable, forceful and reliable. The school exacts extreme orderliness, neatness of person and equipment. Inspection followed inspection and gigs were distributed accordingly.
In everything I was closely observed by tactical officers and fellow candidates. These tactical officers are trained to advise, to correct, to encourage and to discount. Several times they evaluate me and sent a report to higher authority.
Evaluation
I also learned to scrutinize and evaluate other candidates according to the prescriptions of the school. Following a scheduled patient, I observed and rated my companions, and turned in "buddy reports" on their efficiency, conduct, soldierliness, leadership.

It's a closed system where everyone rates everyone else in utmost secrecy. The mutual check keeps everyone friendly and highly cooperative. Never have so many gentlemen been gathered in a single place.
At regular intervals, records are checked by a higher command and a panel of officers is arranged. At these periods some candidates are examined to determine their potential as combat leaders. Through this medium, the weak are strengthened by repeating classes, and those who do not show the necessary qualifications are dismissed.

OC Tactical Officers Perform Herculean Jobs Here Major Served With 29th Inf.

(The basic element in officer candidate training is simple, but finding out whether a candidate will make a leader is a complex and difficult task.)
The candidates and has the greatest chance to observe them under all conditions. Herewith is the story of a "T. MEEHAN."
BY LT. JOHN MEEHAN
It was hot and dusty as the candidate marched along the road back to the company area. My platoon was at the head of the column, and I was lost in the thoughts of the last 22 weeks.
Back in February, these men were of a different breed. Look at O'Brien, who was acting platoon leader today. He had come in fresh from college, knowing all and weighing about as much as a baby elephant. Quite a change had taken place. Now he looked like an athlete. Our many talks together had certainly changed his outlook on life and the Army.
Up in the front rank was Watson, a funny sort of kid when I first met him. Always quiet, he kept to himself. He had spent many a long weekend yelling at a blank wall to develop his command voice. Surprised even himself at the results.
Over to the right was Bergin, shippest man in the platoon at the start of the course, a real spit and polish soldier. He had led the platoon for the first six weeks, but had then decided to relax and coast the remainder of the way. It took a lot of work and plenty of psychological intrigue to shape him up again.

Mr. Anthony
Looking over the platoon, I suddenly realized that each of my men had become part of my own life. Problems from finances to seclusion.

By the 14th week panel the medicore man had either improved had failed in their efforts to develop themselves along mental, physical or leadership lines. The panel would have to be held. Each departure gave the tactical officer reason to wonder if he could somehow have helped them more. He works hard with them, and they want to make the grade. I guessed they would never realize how it felt to lose them.
Take Martin. Neat, polite, all ways military, physically perfect. . . . Perfect in all the tools of a soldier except one. He couldn't grasp the course mentally. All the hours we had worked together with him, but he had gained much from the time spent with his field manuals.
Lost Weeks Rough
The 18th and 21st week panels had been rough ones. The day of production was close. Almost all the candidates had been killed to ship cases—men who knew what to do but clutched when the chips were down. It was funny how some of the men had stood out early they began to study field tactics. They could read the maps, they were ready. Physically fit, usually, but under pressure they couldn't convey common sense with their knowledge. Good men, all of them, but not the type to lead troops into battle.
When in doubt on a man, our mission "to train men to lead others in combat" has always been the deciding factor.

Well, it was about over now. The men would graduate in a few days and then our country would find out if it had made a few triple investments. . . . In me, in the schools, in these future officers.
As the men halted in the company area and stood braced at a rigid attention, I felt inside that they were ready. Physically fit, academically proficient and trained together was paying dividends in these last few days at OCS and would be of much greater value to those young men in the years ahead.

When in doubt on a man, our

90-Day Wonders Made OC History

As Gen. George Patton said, "You can't push men, you have to lead them." The most reliable source from which to get these leaders is Fort Benning's Harmony Church.

There, in a cluster of buildings five miles east of the Main Post and in a world all its own, is the U. S. Army's Officer Candidate School which trains men to lead platoons and companies in all branches of the service except the Engineer and Artillery Corps.

In 1938, when the commandant of the Infantry School was responsible for setting up the principles of military training and leadership that the school maintains today. The honor of the candidates themselves, also installed by the general who summed up the ideas behind the rigorous training at the school in these words: "Early in the course the fact must be brought out that these candidates should get on as officers as enlisted men and think about looking over the men; as officers they must plan and think of their own responsibilities. The discipline of a candidate company must be of a very much higher type than that of an enlisted company."

When Company A, Officer Candidate Battalion, became the first of many graduating classes, Gen. George C. Marshall chief of staff, made the commencement address. Classes then were reporting at the beginning of World War II and the corresponding increase in the need for officers, classes were speeded up and the "90-day wonder" became an accepted piece of military terminology. In May, 1942, permanent brick structures on the post and a few wooden barracks under housing troops of the Infantry School.

By this time the school had outgrown its facilities on the Main Post. The Second Student Regiment was formed and officers' dormitories were formed and the Harmony Church area.

Between July 1941, and August 1947, over 100,000 candidates were enrolled in 448 OC classes at Fort Benning. Over 67,000 or some per cent completed the course and were commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Army. It was by far the biggest and fastest commissioning job ever attempted by an Army. That the graduates had what it takes was conspicuously proven on battlefields from Anzio to Okinawa.

After three years of suspension, the Korean crisis forced the Army to call for more trained combat platoon leaders. To fill this urgent need, Infantry OCS was reopened at Fort Benning in January, 1951. It was formed as a battalion in the Second Student Regiment and later was enlarged and designated the Officer Candidate Regiment. Col. Harry M. Grizzard was named as regimental commander and in April 1952, the name of the school was officially changed to the First Officer Candidate Regiment. The course was now 22 weeks long.

Since reactivation, some 11,000 candidates have been enrolled. Approximately 6,500 have successfully completed the course. Once again the able use of the techniques used by the school has been proven in the bitter fighting on the Korean battlefield.

Basically, the training is the same now as it was in 1941. Methods of instruction have been altered to keep pace with the changed conditions. But the techniques of fire and maneuver, perimeter defense and basic tactics remain the same. A candidate's tactical officer is still the most important factor in a candidate's development. These officers guide, counsel and observe. They are the determining factor that spells success or failure for a candidate. In 22 weeks they become thoroughly familiar with the capabilities and potential of each candidate.

Civilian Recalls Post On First Job In 1922

A veteran Civil Service employee, who remembers Fort Benning as little more than an Army camp of tents, will mark his 31st year of service as the post observes its 31st anniversary.

Lawrence Lee Woolbright, of Columbus, chief clerk of The Infantry Center Quartermaster Section, arrived here on his birthday, Oct. 22, 1922. A former Army second lieutenant, Woolbright had served in the Quartermaster Corps during World War I. He was offered a Civil Service job by the Post Quartermaster, who had been his senior officer in the Army.

Upon his arrival, Woolbright recalls, there were only five or six permanent brick structures on the post and a few wooden barracks under housing troops of the Infantry School.

Staff Officers Trained by TIS Department

Instruction Covers All Phases, Duties, Responsibilities of Regt., Bn. Positions

In peace or war, it is the mission of The Infantry School's Staff Department to mold first class unit staff officers who can accurately plan and supervise the activities of a battalion or regiment.

Instruction, ranging from hand-to-hand combat to intelligence matters, covers all phases of organization, duties and responsibilities of the battalion and regimental staffs.

The relation between these staffs and their divisional opposite members also is part of the instruction, along with certain subjects not assigned to other departments of instruction. These include leadership, bayonet and physical training, hand-to-hand combat and map reading.

Basic objective of the management group is to teach the maximum efficient utilization of military government. These 11 personnel functions are taught: (1) strengths, records and reports, (2) replacements, (3) discharge, law and order, (4) prisoners of war, (5) burial and graves registration, (6) morale and personal services, (7) civilian affairs and military government, (8) personnel procedures, (9) interior management, (10) civilian employes and material, (11) miscellaneous.

Management Objective

Instruction in leadership is devoted mostly to practical work, covering both garrison and combat situations. Underlying all of it is the teaching of such staff relationships as command and staff relationship, use of the chain of command, discipline and welfare of troops.

In addition to an actual physical conditioning program, physical training instruction includes use of the bayonet, hand-to-hand fighting and disarming tactics. Backbone of the TIS instruction is the Army manual, a series of 12 exercises designed to condition all staff officers to condition all the moving and some of the non-moving parts of the body.

The intelligence group consists of the map reading and intelligence instruction.

Map Instruction

Instruction in map and aerial photograph reading, in addition to classroom work, includes practical exercises in applying the principles and techniques of map and aerial photograph reading, a night exercise, compass march and a field exercise in which students are taught to associate features on maps with the ground.

The department also prepares instructional material for non-resident students taking Army Extension Courses and for ROTC and Army Reserve instructors, company field manuals, firm strips, and special texts for use as reference material.

It is the responsibility of Col. J. V. Thompson, of Oswego, Ky., director, to see that this mission is carried out.

The department is divided into personnel, intelligence, operations and training and logistics groups.

The personnel group teaches personnel management, leadership and physical training.

They're Made—Not Born Leaders Undergo Rugged Training

Leaders are made—not born. So discipline broader than merely the prompt obedience to orders. In the absence of orders each man is expected to act according to what he believes the orders would be in such a situation.

"Prompt obedience and initiative in the absence of orders is essential to act according to what he believes the orders would be in such a situation."

"Prompt obedience and initiative in the absence of orders is essential to act according to what he believes the orders would be in such a situation."

The job of leadership training is to teach leaders how to handle people so as to get proper response. Numerous and varied methods are employed, including, skits, training aids, films, role playing techniques, group discussions and lectures.

Much of the study is actually based on the actual situations. Experiences of combat in Korea fighting have played a big part in the curriculum. Human research committee are employed as background for the course.

Besides handling the leadership instruction for the various courses, the committee also writes the ROTC leadership course and publishes the Army's Field Manual on leadership.

In addition, the committee teaches information, officer indoctrination, and congressional relations.

Members of the committee are selected on the basis of their own backgrounds. Their work has been so outstanding that Fort Benning has come to be regarded as the pace-maker in leadership instruction.

This is evidenced by the fact that the committee continually receives requests from other military posts and units for help in developing leadership courses.

Leadership trainees are taught:

Benning 'Institution' Tom Fields Is Keystone Of Officers' Mess

The oldest institution at Fort Benning is Tom Fields, the even-tempered Service Club No. 1, the first permanent building.

The 60-year-old retired master sergeant, now headwaiter at the Main Officers' Mess, arrived at the post in 1919 and has been here ever since. Retired generals were young sharkeys when Tom Fields first served them.

"They've all been wonderful to me," says Fields, who remembers Gen. George C. Marshall former chief of staff and secretary of state, as a stickler on food. "His staff had to be hot, and cold stuff wasn't biggest crisis was three and a half minute eggs. Marshall must be breakfast. Eggs or no eggs, however, Fields "got along fine" with the young captain who was director of the Officers' Mess when Fields began working there.

Enlisting in the Army in 1917, Fields has had his ups and downs. Early in his career he ran afoul of the local gentlemen and wound up in the city jail. A young lieutenant graphical memory and an abundance in energy, continues to bust Officers' Mess.

What's In A Name
In between meals Fields found time to marry and raise a family, including a son, Chester, now 17. Fields explains: "The maternity ward nurse was in a hurry to get the baby's name, and all I could think of was my favorite brand of cigarettes." The tobacco company was alerted to this fact and young Chester Fields became the recipient of $10 and five cartons of cigarettes.

A Sgt. Fields' duties at the Officers' Mess sometimes include cooking as well as serving food. He prepared most of the meals for Field Marshal Viscount Bernier and Law Montgomery and his party when the British general visited Fort Benning last spring.

Gen. J. Lawson Collins, retired chief of staff, is remembered as the biggest eater Fields ever had to cope with. A junior officer at Fort Benning in the twenties, Collins devoured huge helpings of steak and hashed brown potatoes.

Major Eisenhower President Dwight Eisenhower, a major and football coach at Fort Benning in the twenties, impressed Fields with three major passions: Southern fried chicken, strawberry shortcake, and golf.

The head - waiter relates that the spent most of his off duty time on the Fort Benning links with his golf buddies. Major Herman Wedemeyer (later lieutenant general) and Major James A. Van Fleet (later general), are an age when most men are thinking about retirement. Tom Fields, who still possesses a photographic memory and an abundance in energy, continues to bust Officers' Mess.

Lawson Operations Reflect Complex, Varied Missions

A troop carrier's role in modern air power is complex and varied. As a result, operations at Lawson Air Force Base, home of the 664th Troop Carrier Group, 464th Air Force, are as diverse as the varied as its objectives.

In daily operations the wing may send aircraft aloft on student parachute training, or to ferry cargo to far-flung parts of the United States to sustain high priority freight while simultaneous combat training its own tactical training missions.

Support functions are the flying, maintain, supply and serve the entire troop carrier wing.

As a troop carrier organization the wing has a multi - purpose mission. It must train for and maintain combat readiness for transport airborne personnel the event of a disaster or emergency. A recent example of this phase of troop carrier's mission was the airlifting of feed to blizzard-trapped herds for western cattlemen several years ago.

These are classified as tactical and support services.

The wing is composed of the 664th Troop Carrier Group, 464th Air Force, 464th Maintenance and Supply Group, and the 464th Medical Group.

The tactical unit is the troop carrier group, composed of three troop carrier squadrons which perform the wing's tactical flying missions.

Not Accidental Result
The daily accomplishment of such diversified missions as a normal situation is not an accidental result of piling personnel and equipment on a pile of real estate and calling it an air base, but it is the result of planning, training and effective coordination and command which weld the various units into a smoothly functioning combat team.

In command of Lawson Air Force Base is Col. Troy W. Crawford, who also commands the 464th Troop Carrier Wing. During World War II, Col. Crawford commanded the 464th Heavy Bombardment Group in England. He was in Japan when the Korean war broke out and as commander of the 374th Troop Carrier Wing. During World War II he was in charge of all transport aircraft airlifting personnel and supplies into Korea until the Korean war broke out. He remained in command of the 374th Troop Carrier Wing until returning to the United States in September, 1948.

Flying training consists of two principal types: training missions by individual aircraft and crew to increase the proficiency of crew members in their specialties and to accomplish any airborne mission to which it might be assigned. The group conducts day night training exercises.

Director Watchdog of Instruction

The Office of the Director of Instruction at the Infantry School has the watchful job of avoiding conflicts in instruction and maintaining high standards of training for the more than 17,000 students learning the ways and wherefores of the U. S. Infantry.

The director of instruction, Col. John M. Hightower of Las Cruces, New Mex., is responsible for the operation of the office which consists of Plans, Evaluation and Allied Liaison Branches. Nine officers, three enlisted men and four civilians help the director perform his duties.

The Plans Branch coordinates the preparation of programs of instruction for the 24 courses offered by The Infantry School's Academic Departments.

Among the courses planned by this branch are the advanced company grade and basic officers and officer candidate. Students in these classes are taught such subjects as leadership, Infantry tactics and techniques and staff procedure, while advanced and non-commissioned officers are instructed in leadership and Infantry courses.

Other courses include airborne and Ranger training for qualified officers and enlisted men and special instruction in the communications, communications and intelligence fields.

The Plans Branch also has the responsibility of coordinating the activities of visitors to the Infantry School, including arranging for guest speakers for graduation exercises and special instructional sessions.

Evaluation officials consider the overall mission of each course and suitability of the subjects presented. It also is their job to determine the need for additional subjects or whether certain subjects should be consolidated with others or the amount of time devoted to them increased.

Not only do the courses receive close scrutiny, but the instructor's class presentation gets a constructive critical review to promote uniformly high instructional standards and to insure an interesting approach.

Brigade 'Home' To All Leaders

The School Brigade is home to the Infantry leader for at least a few weeks during his lifetime. It is the unit to which he is assigned while attending the Infantry School, while all Infantry officers and NCOs must enroll at some time.

The physical structure of the School Brigade extends outward from its Headquarters on the Main Post to far reaches of the reservation.

Its three student regiments administer to all students at The Infantry School and operate companies as far away from the Main Post as Harmony Church, its school detachment administrators to the enlisted men assigned to the staff and faculty of The Infantry School. Housing, feeding and paying the fluctuating student population presents a tremendous problem in administration.

Col. Max H. Gooler, commanding officer of the brigade has the job of coordinating these officers. His command includes the First and Second Student Regiments, Officers Candidate Regiment and Infantry School Detachment.

The First Student Regiment is commanded by Col. Kenneth H. Macomber and includes the Airborne Battalion.

The Second Student Regiment is commanded by Col. W. I. Russell and the First Officer Candidate Regiment is commanded by Col. Harry M. Grizzard.

The Infantry School Detachment is commanded by Col. Donald Washington, its primary mission is to administer and train enlisted personnel who are on duty with academic departments of The Infantry School.

Warbler Now Sings Out In O.C. Course
The First OC Regiment has the "Man With the Golden Voice" in the person of 12th OC Company's Carmine Sparacino. Sparacino does more than sing. He's equally at home in a self-shoot routine or a radio studio.

Sparacino studied at the Sylvia Bersh Studios in his native Philadelphia and began singing with the small but popular Ray Neagle band. The group conducted a show over WCAU in Philadelphia and played night clubs in New York and Pennsylvania. Sparacino rounded out his repertoire with the Lasacella Opera Company in Philadelphia.

The OC had successfully completed an audition for the New York production of the Broadway musical "Two O'Clock Company" when he was inducted into the Army in December 1939.

Military and civilian personnel were purchased, on an average of over $50,000 worth of U. S. Defense and Savings Bonds each month.

School Library Proves Valuable Student Aid

Did you ever wonder how Caesar or Napoleon fought their famous battles or how the Infantry School's "Follow Me" march originated?

The Infantry School Library has books which can supply the answers to those and almost any other military question. Among its 28,000 books and periodicals the library has volumes which cover all famous military campaigns from the days of the Romans and Greeks through combat and reports on the fighting in Korea.

The library, used primarily by Infantry School faculty and students, provides adequate information on almost every military subject.

Chief Librarian Ruth Wesley, of Atlanta, Ga., says that for advanced officer class students the library occasionally has to send away for material. But most of the time it can be found locally.

Other duties of the section include carrying out military reference and research, its concern primarily with the Infantry, but covering allied courses at the Infantry School. To advise and assist these students from other nations is the job of the Allied Liaison Branch.

The director of instruction also arranges special training for Infantry School students staff and faculty and visitors and briefs all incoming classes on the organization of The Infantry School and the program of instruction.

Other duties of the section include coordinating the preparation and review of special training programs providing liaison officers to the Canadian and French Schools of Infantry and maintaining liaison with other service schools and training divisions.

Finance Covers Wide Area To Meet Monthly Payrolls

The last day of the month means payday at Fort Benning, but to The Infantry Center's Finance Section it's just another notch in the never ending job of paying the troops.

The complicated task of paying 20,000 people and settling a host of bills is a big operation.

The Finance Section, under the supervision of Lt. Col. Edwin Harding, Jr., of Alexandria, La., is the largest field disbursing office operating in the U. S. In addition to processing military payrolls each month, the section handles all the post's commercial accounts, including quartermaster supplies, ordnance materials and engineer equipment.

Because of The Infantry School's big transient population, last year the Finance Section carried an extra workload of transferring pay records in and out at the rate of 10,000 a month.

Certain features of The Infantry Center, such as its size and decentralization, require the Finance Section to operate four separate offices. Chief of these is the Main Finance Office, which handles the payment of all commercial accounts as well as the military payroll for most of the units stationed on the Main Post. This is the nerve center of the whole operation.

The enormous amount of paper work necessary to carry out the efficient operation of the section is handled by the administrative division. Between 15,000 and 25,000 pieces of correspondence are processed monthly by the eight people working in this division.

All correspondence related to financial matters must be routed through this office to other divisions of the Finance Section. The commercial accounts division pays an average of one million dollars monthly to commercial firms for items purchased by and services rendered to Fort Benning organizations. Before making payment, the division audits and certifies each account for accuracy and off the job, it is the daily task of this Infantry Center office.

Headed by Norman Evans, of Columbus, the Safety Office conducts continuous job surveys in an effort to eliminate dangerous working conditions and to reduce accidents.

Safety officials study ways of making safer the operation of the longes and the Ranger and Airborne training programs. They also survey the operation of vehicles by personnel and work out safety measures to be taken by personnel employed in warehouses and shops on the post.

At the beginning of the year, safety officials recommended that workers in certain activities be required to wear protective steel cap shoes to reduce the number of serious toe and foot injuries. This recommendation has almost eliminated injury to the feet among permanent records of all receipts and disbursements. Duties in this department are similar to those in counting functions of civilian banks. One of the branch's big jobs is the issuing of approximately 16,000 U. S. Treasury checks each month.

The travel branch computes travel pay for military personnel, civilian employes and military dependents. Factors considered in computing travel pay include distance, mode of travel and number and ages of military dependents. The workload is increased by the large turnover of students at The Infantry School. The travel branch averages between 5,000 and 8,000 payments monthly.

Adding of paid vouchers and adjustment of pay records is handled by the audit and adjustment branch. The branch audits all vouchers, makes changes in allotments and answers allotment queries.

Three branch offices are maintained by the Finance Section. The 15th Finance Disbursing Section handles pay records of student personnel at the Main Post, while offices in the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas take care of records concerning personnel of units in these areas.

Silver Stars have been awarded two officers for heroism in Korea. Brig. Gen. Carl Fitzke, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented the medals to Capt. Herbert J. McChrystal, Jr., of Auburn, Ala., and First Lt. Henry P. LaForce, Jr., of Hopewell, Va.

Capt. McChrystal, who is assigned to the Tactical Department of The Infantry School, won the Silver Star for "distinguishing extraordinary heroism" while commanding Company F, 18th Infantry Regiment in Korea.

Lt. LaForce, who also has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart, received the Silver Star for gallantry in action as a platoon leader in the 32nd Infantry Regiment in Korea.

Perhaps the largest single field office is the Safety Office here, which is the operation of privately-owned cars. A case history must be prepared for every accident, in which there was injury, death or property damage.

To prepare these case histories, Evans often relies upon the testimony of witnesses or the official police reports, but if the accident occurs on the post, safety officials must visit the scene of the accident.

The Safety Office campaigned successfully for the establishment of a driving school for traffic violators. Called the Advanced Drivers Education Program, the school tries to educate the driver in the concepts of good driving habits.

The Airborne Department of The Infantry School graduates an average of over 1,000 qualified paratroopers each month. Since its inception in 1940, the school and department have graduated over 155,000 students from the rough and tumble Airborne course.

Would Like No Business Safety Office Promotes Accident Prevention

Showing its profit in lives instead of dollars, the Safety Office here would like to go out of business for lack of merchandise—accidents. Preventing accidents among Fort Benning personnel, both on and off the job, is the daily task of this Infantry Center office.

MAJ. JOHN EISENHOWER AND FAMILY AT POST
 Children: David, 5; Barbara Ann, 4; Susan, 2

MAJ. R. H. CLAGETT
 . . . Wins Spot in 'Story'

'Story' Opens Tonight At Main Theater

Tonight's night! The Philadelphia Story, with all its humor and pathos, will unfold to what may well prove a thoroughly delightful, if not ecstatic, audience of Fort Benning men, women, and children in the Main Post Theater. Curtain time is 8:30.

For weeks an excellent cast has been studying, rehearsing, and repeating the lines of Philip Barry's effervescent piece of acting, and now all is set. There will be many a tense moment in the wings, to be sure, but from advance information this will all but disappear as the curtain rises and the Fort Benning cast moves upon the boards with the aplomb that marks the play-acting of old Broadway. Tickets! Only 60 cents. The performance will be repeated tomorrow night.

Eisenhower Reaches Post For New Job

Major John Eisenhower, son of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, arrived at Fort Benning last Sunday and has been appointed executive officer of the First Battalion, 8th Infantry Division.

The major is no newcomer here as this will be his fourth visit since he began his Army career. He paid another visit to the area when the then Gen. Eisenhower was stationed at Benning.

The President's son returned recently from 18 months in Korea, where he was attached to the 1st Infantry Division.

Major Eisenhower first served as operations officer of the 1st Battalion, 8th Infantry. Later he became assistant division operations officer when he left Korea.

Sweeping Changes Planned For NCOs

Study Made By Pentagon On New Ranks

WASHINGTON (APPS) — The Army is in the process of making sweeping revisions in its NCO structure. The move, designed to restore NCO leadership and prestige, separates NCOs from specialists all down the line.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, has approved preliminary plans, and revised TO&Es will be sent to field commands by Jan. 1.

The plan calls for separating all present NCOs having command responsibilities from their specialist counterparts, giving the latter entirely new designations. Pay grades will remain the same and the top two grades of specialists gradually will retain NCO privileges.

Here are the new ranks under consideration and how they correspond to their present counterparts:

Pay Grade NCO	Grade Specialist	Grade Specialist
SGT4	SGT	SGT
SGT3	SGT	SGT
SGT2	SGT	SGT
SGT1	SGT	SGT

The basic difference is that the Army is paying the NCO for leadership qualities and the specialist for technical or administrative ability.

The Army previously carried approximately 62 percent of its enlisted strength in the NCO ranks. (Please See SWEEPING, Page 2)

Northerner Notes Local Hospitality

A Fort Benning soldier, 1,200 miles from home, claims he has found a home in the hearts of Columbus and Phenix City citizens.

Pfc. Daniel J. Delis of Providence, R. I., wrote to the editor of his home-town newspaper to express his appreciation of Southern hospitality in general and of the Columbus YMCA-USO in particular.

Published in the Oct. 2 issue of the Providence Evening Bulletin, the letter said in part: "When I was sent to Georgia in January 1951 I didn't know a soul. But it wasn't long before the people of Columbus and Phenix City, through the activities of the Servicemen's YMCA-USO in Columbus, took me and many of my buddies into their homes, their hearts, and their churches.

"I have been treated not as a strange soldier looking for a place to sleep, but as a son home on leave."

Pfc. Gets Ticket: Bicycle Speeding

No one likes to get a ticket for speeding just a block from home, especially if he had just returned from traveling across Western Europe. But Pfc. John Turner, Headquarters Company, Special Troops Company, had that happen to him.

In 1961 Turner spent six months in Europe traveling from one place to another, going just about wherever he pleased. He toured England, parts of Scotland, France, the low countries, and West Germany.

After seeing all this he returned to the States and was heading down the last hill before home when he was stopped.

"I knew the speed limit on that hill was 25 miles-per-hour. But I didn't think it applied to me," he said. "You see, I was on a bicycle!"

Safety Slogans Win Passes in 1st OC

18th OC Company of the First Officer Candidate Regiment has hit the road with a bang by making the unit safety conscious. Weekly contests for safety slogans, cartoons, and photographs, as well as a monthly contest for the best safety display set up by a section, have really made the OCs sit up and take notice. Why? Passes go to the winners.

OC Out West

Bullets Bingo Bruin

Mention whales, bears or Hollywood's Leslie Caron to 12th OC Company's Tony DiAngelo and watch his eye-roping reaction. The young officer candidate is unable to turn and run at the mere mention of the first two. About Miss Caron . . . "Tony just says, 'Gimme.'"

OC DiAngelo was formerly a deep-sea fisherman on the coast of California, three miles out of San Pedro, his "Sea Rogue," was a school of anchovies some 1,000 yards long and 500 yards wide. Tony played on a breakfasting while presented the intrusion. The crew and boat were taken up but luckily made port safely.

Foraking the sea for the High Sierras, DiAngelo was tracking deer near Sonora, Calif., and was on the trail of a big buck. "It was so intent on tracking him that I stepped on a bear. I thought he was a log! The bear growled, I ran, pushing four shots from my 30-40 into the beast. But he kept coming and slapped the rifle from my hands. Then I went blank. Next thing I knew, the bear was dead on my feet. The bullets took effect at just the right time."

Lafayette Caron was never far from DiAngelo's mind. Caron was hired by movie and business nabobs for fishing excursions. Tony went angling with a movie star alright. Only Miss Sierras, DiAngelo was tracking Caron brought her own escort.

Transfer Gives Post One of Top Motor Pools

The transfer of 408 vehicles from the First Transportation Battalion to the Transportation Section has given Fort Benning one of the largest administrative motor pools in the United States, according to Col. Sidney S. Kretlow, transportation officer.

The motor pool now has 1,600 tactical and commercial-type vehicles.

"The consolidation of operations is designed to reduce expenses and increase efficiency," said Col. Kretlow.

Under the new arrangement, the First Transportation Battalion will no longer be responsible for general transportation administrative vehicle operations. Maintenance and operation of this type of unit will be under the control of the transportation officer. The transportation battalions, however, continue to be responsible for all military personnel assigned to the pool.

An enlarged pool, under the supervision of Major Emmett M. Logan, will include four sub-pools.

Red Cross Provides Service To Soldiers in Emergencies

Service to servicemen is the job of the American Red Cross Field Office.

And to perform that service requires much more than the paid professional workers. It means many hours from unpaid volunteers.

A Red Cross volunteer organization, the Gray Ladies, provides recreational and education activities for convalescent patients in the Army Hospital. These women distribute books, cigarettes and magazines and provide entertainment for patients.

The Red Cross recreational hall at the hospital also sponsors movie parties to help make hospitalization more pleasant for the servicemen.

Coffee Hour

Every Friday morning there is a coffee hour for ambulatory patients in the recreational hall.

The Red Cross also encourages and cooperates in water safety campaigns. Last April, 12 instructors were trained by Red Cross representatives. Purpose of the program is to provide life guards for Fort Benning swimming pools and to award Gold Medals of Appreciation to the best swimmer.

Fort Benning's Red Cross Field Office is staffed by 23 professional workers in the immediate family of a serviceman. The Red Cross office relays the information to the individual's commanding officer who in turn informs the serviceman. Emergency leaves are not, however, granted by the Red Cross. We know how much Long Distance calls mean to service men, and we want to give you the best possible service. Here are two ways you can help:

- If you can give the operator the out-of-town number, she won't have to consult "Information" in the city you're calling and your call will go through faster. Ask for a free folder for recording telephone numbers.
- Since you may be hard to locate, it is generally better for you to call the folks back home, instead of their calling you. Charges can be reversed.

8 Years Pass Since Release

Just eight short years ago, there were heartaches and tense moments as the lists of surviving prisoners of War were made public. One name appeared on the Hanawa Compound list that is now familiar to many Americans in the First OC Regiment. Master Sergeant Goff L. Coleman, currently first sergeant of 12th Company, was released from Hanawa on September 16, 1945.

Whenever a plane lands around Coleman finds time to celebrate his release from over three years of captivity in a top Prison Camp. He was in the Philippines at the outbreak of World War II. He fought under General MacArthur and later under General Wallerwright when our forces were pushed back to the island fortress, Corregidor. It was there that Sgt. Coleman was captured. He participated in the "Little Bataan Death March" to Cabatuan Compound No. 1. Later he was transferred to the compound at Hanawa, in Japan. Most vivid among Coleman's memories was the diet of fish and rice. He lost 60 pounds, emerging from the camp a human skeleton of 70 pounds.

Coleman holds the Purple Heart with 4 clusters, the American Defense Medal with one cluster, the Asiatic - Pacific Medal with two stars, the American Theatre Ribbon, the Victory Medal with Philippine Defense Medal with star, the Philippine Liberation Medal with three stars, the Presidential Unit Citation with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Good Conduct Medal with three stars.

Coleman arrived at Ft. Benning in April 1951. He served as the chief of the Training Section until last July, when he was promoted to master sergeant and assigned as first sergeant of 12th Company.

DONALD BURNS (70) RUNS AROUND RIGHT END FOR AN STC GAIN

Cole (68) Ems (36) Try Hard, But Bill Deitz (R) Pulls Him Down

Red Devils Swamp Wave 67-8

The 508th Airborne's hit-and-run offense ignited with a near Sunday to sweep an outcasted STC-15D Green Wave completely out of Doughboy Stadium and win 67-8.

The Airborne crew trotted out a dazzling aerial assault as they sought successfully to live up to their name. Quarterbacks Don Lucas and Bobby Morstad hit on 10 of 17 passes for 221 yards and three touchdowns. The Red Devils sprinted overland for another 256 yards as compared to STC's 119 rushing and 40 passing.

The game was strictly no contest from the opening whistle, and at times bore a striking resemblance to a track meet as players sprinted from one end of the field to the other.

Buttery Green Wave fingers handed the ball to the 508th on fumbles three times in the opening moments, and all three misuses were deep in STC territory. Following the third recovery, Lucas rifled a 14 yard piggyback pitch to Dale Ems and the skies were open. The Red Devils reaped up a 40-0 margin by halftime, changing their first and second units with little difference being noted.

First Score
The Green Wave score, their first of the 1953 season, came in the early moments of the second-half. Big Harold Gasser broke through and blocked a fourth-down punt by 508th, then scooped up the bounding ball and rumbled 30 yards into the end zone. Red Devil Bill Fortner donated a fourth quarter safety to the STC cause when he stepped off the playing field when trying to plant factor in his own end zone.

Probably the greatest factor in the vastly improved Airborne offense was their crisp, deadly downfield blocking. No matter which was the 508th ball toters turned a cord of red jerseys away to convey them past Green Wave tacklers. This was well illustrated by the numerous long runs turned in by the Red Devils, both on straight ground plays and after receiving passes.

Varsity Gasser
Probably the most spectacular long gain belonged to Lafayette Horton, who tucked in a punt on his own sixty yard line and sprinted in the Green Wave end zone roughly 12 seconds and 34 yards later in action. Ems took a handoff and cruised 85 yards down the sidelines. Charlie Stewart grabbed a Morstad aerial shot and went 60 yards. Bill Deitz turned his own right end and hit paydirt from 71 yards out, and Pete Overtone snatched 45 yards after a short toss from John Francisco.

The Rams went on to beat the Carriers 31-0.

Rams Train To Meet CTC Here Sunday

Brigade, Commanders Beat Sewart, Redstone Arsenal

CTC's rapidly improving Commanders will have their backs to the wall Sunday as they seek the combination to stop Brigade-PMG's triplehammer attack. Kickoff is scheduled for 2 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

Week's Top Gridder

Huntsville, Ala., bumped Redstone Arsenal 15-0, while the Rams fell to Nashville, Tenn., to clip Sewart AFB's wings to the tune of 31-4. Fullback Charley Williams led CTC past Redstone, though he did not score personally. His driving runs from the fullback slot paced a strong Commander ground attack, and he lent a valuable hand in the defensive side of good measure. Hank Tomasic engineered CTC's attack, which picked up added steam from the efforts of Bob Moorhead, 1952 Georgia Tech All American safety man, and speedy Melvin Boykin.

SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS

by Bob Konechlik

Last week the Brigade-Medics lost one of their coaches when big Bill Stetter was released from active duty. In last year's campaign Stetter was chosen for the center spot when the All-Post honors were handed out.

Usually, a lineman or center doesn't get much recognition during a ball game except when making a tackle, etc., but the 265-pound Stetter, training center for the Rams was applauded many times by his coaches, fellow players and football fans for his style of ball.

Stetter entered the U. S. Army in Feb. '51 after playing four years of football at Holy Cross and a year as a professional ball with the ill-fated Brooklyn Dodgers.

Before going to the Massachusetts University, Stetter, a Brenkite of New York City, attended Cardinal Hayes High School and it was there he won six letters, in football, baseball and basketball.

While playing football in the New York Catholic School System, Stetter switched from the backfield to the line. The 25-year-old New Yorker says that change was the turning point in his gridiron career, he wasn't getting anywhere as a backfield caverer.

During his Bronx school days, Stetter was named to the All-Metropolitan Baseball Team and the All-New York City Football Team.

After entering Holy Cross in 1946, the six-foot-two-inch center went out for all sports, but football and baseball were his main athletics. During his four years of college life, Bill made such a name for himself that the Detroit Tigers offered him a baseball contract and the New York Football Yards named him in their player draft.

Upon graduation in 1950, he disregarded the baseball offer, considered the pro-football offer, but decided to stay in New York than to travel with the pro-football Yanks. The Brooklyn Dodgers that year played most of their football games in Ebbets Field, so Stetter signed with them.

Looking back upon his college grid activities, Bill revealed that the New England papers put him up for All-American center. They named him to the First All-New England Football Team and had him listed on the third-string All-East grid team in 1949. The Boston Herald, in their annual poll of college football section.

One of the games during his college days that sticks in Stetter's mind is the traditional Holy Cross-Boston College game. Bill heard it rumbled along the bench and in the dressing room that he was up for the Eddie O'Neill award. The trophy is held out annually to the outstanding player of the game.

However, in the second half there was a big pileup on a tackle and Bill was thrown off of the game for playing. Later on, when motion pictures were shown, Stetter saw that it was another player who was piling on and that he was thrown out of the game unjustly.

Right now, it's a good bet that Bill is seeking a job as a coach somewhere in New York City.

GRID GOSSIP... Since football training began last month, one or two post teams have brought up some noteworthy reinforcements. Outstanding among these are BOBBY MOORHEAD of CTC's Commanders and JOE FORTINATO of Brigade Medics. Moorhead attracted nothing less than All-American recognition during the 1953 season with Georgia Tech's unbeaten Yellow Jackets. Big Fortinato fullback to well for Mississippi State's strong Maroons that Coach Murray Warmath of State tagged him as the "best fullback in college ball."

In the same vein, don't be surprised if the name of ANDY KOZAR, ex-Tennessee All-American, comes up in a November line-up for somebody. Kozar is currently taking the BUC training with the Second Student Regiment.

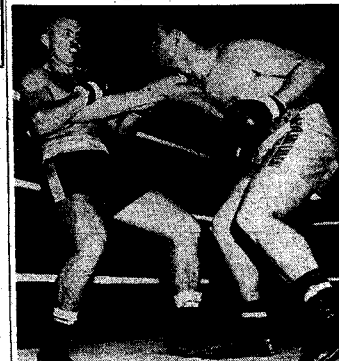

ED CROOK, Brigade-PMG's explosive little halfback, racked up an astronomical score of 445 points in an OCS physical fitness test last winter.

BILL DEFEZ, stellar ball carrier for the 508th Red Devils, is now in his third consecutive season with the Airborne squad. Deitz, number 34 on Sunday afternoon, led the Post Football League last year in yards rushing.

ROBE BLACKWELL was taken to the hospital as a result of a first period leg injury but came back in the last quarter to play a few more minutes. Another injury that was a result of the game Sunday was the broken nose that JOE SESTITE received. Joe will be out of the line-up for a couple of weeks but will be in there as soon as the medics give him the green light.

Leading the football league to the total yards for rushing are BILL DELIA, 508th, 123 yards, DALE EMS, 508th, 113. LAFAYETTE HORTON, 508th, 105 yards, ED CROOK, 85 yards, and MILEY WILBERT, Rams, 75 yards.

Fast & Furious Four Knockouts Highlight Boxing Card; Brigade Leads

The School Brigade's well-balanced boxing squad picked up three more wins out of last Thursday night's 10-bout card at Bristol Wells Field House, and ran their season total to eight. CTC is still in second place with five wins, followed by 508th with three and Special Troops with two.

No less than four of the matches ended in knockouts, and an enthusiastic gathering of near 2,000 chomped it up throughout the evening.

A pair of scrapping bantamweights from Hawaii provided what was probably the most crowd-pleasing fight of the night. Kenneth Takahashi, 117½, CTC, won an extremely close though unanimous decision over David Midei, 118½, who represented Special Troops. Takahashi, the stronger of the two, opened a gash over Midei's left eye in the first round, but Midei came roaring back in the second and third rounds to even matters up with a ripping, two-fisted attack.

He found a willing opponent in Takahashi, and the two stood toe to toe and slugged it out while the screamed encouragement.

At the sound of the bell, the gladiators became fast friends again and when the decision had been awarded they left the ring arm in arm to the accompaniment of approving cheers.

It took the last match on the card to give the brigade a 4-1 record. (Please See FOOTBALL, Page 14)

Wardens Note Game And Fish Violations

On the eve of what promises to be one of the biggest and best hunting seasons in recent years, it is alarming to note the many flagrant violations of fish and game laws and principals of good sportsmanship.

The Fish and Game Maintenance Association, a group which works constantly for the preservation of top-notch hunting facilities on the post, has discovered the killing of racoons and squirrels out of season, use of dynamite caps in ponds and personnel hunting with 22 caliber rifles.

The end these importunate and unsafe practices the association has given explicit instructions to the 35 game wardens and deputy game wardens who patrol the vast resources of Fort Benning that any and all violators or those who are apprehended and reported to their commanders. All personnel are reminded that use of rifles or pistols for other than performance of official duty is prohibited.

It is the responsibility of all concerned to become familiar with the appropriate regulations and they them. Only with full cooperation can Fort Benning continue to have good hunting and fishing grounds.

For information regarding hunting and fishing regulations contact the Fish and Game Office across from Block 12 NOC mess or telephone 3-3125.

More than 600 Fort Benning soldiers are deriving benefits from the largest adult education program in the world, the United States Armed Forces Institute which offers personal.

GI's are composed of one state-side organization and six overseas agencies, offering elementary, high school and college courses, as well as university extension courses and business and technical - vocational training.

Two types of courses are available through USAFI. They are correspondence and self-teaching courses. The institute also provides educational advice, information and testing and reporting services for civilian accreditation purposes.

Courses are available in the six areas of humanities, science, computation, mathematics, social science and technical vocational training. Educational service is more varied than that of any other single educational institution in the United States.

USAFI credit is given through a series of tests, the most common of which is the General Education Development (GED) Examination. Successful applicants are considered by the military as possessing an education equivalent to the level of a high school graduate.

A person who is credited with a high school GED Test may request that his credits be sent to his State Board of Education. These institutions consider the results of the individual's studies and award a diploma or a certificate of equivalency.

Most of the major U. S. colleges and universities accept credits earned in USAFI courses and apply them at credit-hours toward an academic degree.

The United States Armed Forces Institute allows its students to continue their studies under any circumstances. Men have studied USAFI courses in foxholes and in ships sailing in enemy waters.

March Survivor Joins 106th Co.

Sgt. Nelson B. Hale, four-time winner of the Bronze Star, is now with the 106th Company of the Second Student Regiment.

When the Americans threatened to retake the Philippines, he and many others were put on a ship to be sent to the Japanese mainland. Their vessel was torpedoed by an Allied sub and they were picked up by a Japanese crew and sent to another camp.

In November of 1945, he returned to the Philippines and enlisted. He was assigned to the States eight months later.

It was in June 1952 that he was sent to Korea with a Military Police unit and later transferred to the 17th Infantry Regiment of the 4th Division.

MUST HAVE BEEN OUTSORED Fordham's one-night Rams, who won only two games in 1952, were the nation's leaders in yards gained passing.

STILL BEHIND In spite of their recent success, Oklahoma's Sooners have won only 16 out of 47 games from University of Texas, counting their 1953 win.

Capt. Booth Gets Silver Star

Capt. Shepherd A. Booth was presented the Silver Star last week by Major Gen. G. S. Meloy Jr. for gallantry in action in Korea.

When Gen. Meloy was assistant Infantry School commandant in 1951, Capt. Booth served as his aide de camp.

Capt. Booth, a member of the advanced officer class which began in September, was cited for his service in action Oct. 24, 1952, near Kumhwa, Korea, while a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment.

Engaged in a battle with the enemy for a strategic position, Capt. Booth's company became scattered and disorganized. The captain, "with complete disregard for personal safety, grabbed a box of grenades and moved to the front of the company through the withering flames of enemy fire."

Realizing that further advance was impossible, he "reorganized his dispersed company and directed its disengagement, orderly withdrawal, and evacuation of the dead and wounded," according to the citation.

Capt. Booth received the service in 1946, following his graduation from the U. S. Military Academy. He served with the 32nd Infantry Regiment in Korea from May, 1947, to January, 1949, and again from July 21, 1952, to June 28, 1953.

category. Under the new plan 10 percent of the enlisted personnel will be studied.

Designs for specialist rates are being studied. Six have been approved by the Heraldic Branch, OQMG, and QM procurement of details. They are now in the hands of Gen. Ridgway for approval.

When the general passes on the six possibilities, a three-week study will determine which design appears to NCOs and specialists most, and then production of the new stripes will begin.

It is estimated it will take six months from the time of the design's approval to the time the stripes reach the field, but interim arrangements are being worked out.

The special regulation governing the sweeping change is expected to be in G-1 hands by today for staffing.

In the new TO66s the corporal has few command responsibilities, therefore the number of corporals will be low.

Here are some of the practical situations which the new move brings on.

—Corps, who is at NCO in grades E-5 through E-7 will be addressed as Sgt. Jones, or if he is an E-4 as Cpl. Jones. If Jones is a specialist in one of the pay grades of E-4 through E-7, he will be addressed as Specialist Jones.

An average of 1,300 soldiers per month have been returned to the United States from overseas on emergency leave since June 25, 1950.

said there was a possibility that the president might visit them while they are located at Belling. "Or we might meet them in August. You know, that's where Dad plays golf," he explained.

The "greens fever" apparently has been passed on from the President. The major, an avid fan of the sport, and young David already has a set of miniature clubs just like his grandfather's. In fact, it was the grandfather who presented the clubs to him.

"I took up golf about two years ago," Maj. Eisenhower said. "Dad is eight strokes better than I am. I'm still trying to break 90, and I understand he already has done that with some to spare."

He said the President has encouraged him in his golf, "and is never reluctant about giving me points on my game."

Be To Grand Children

President Eisenhower is just plain like to his grandchildren. "None of the children ever could say Grandfather Eisenhower, so they call him Ike," Mrs. Eisenhower said. "The president told them to call him that. I guess they will have to be a little more formal in a year or so."

Maj. Eisenhower first came to Fort Benning for basic training in 1944, the year he was graduated from West Point. He was assigned to the 71st Division at Sand Hill after that. He returned in 1947 for six months while he attended Food Service and then returned. He taught English at West Point shortly after that.

The major returned here for a few weeks in 1948 to attend Air Transport School.

The Eisenhowers live in a post house at 302 Austin Loop, not far from where Gen. Eisenhower lived when he was here in 1950. They were located in the house on the post for security reasons. An around the clock surveillance is kept on the President's grandchildren by Secret Service agents.

Drive Reaches $25,000 Mark

Chest Head Confident Goal Will Be Reached

More than $25,000 has been contributed to Fort Benning's 1954 Community Chest drive, according to Col. H. M. Rund of Chattanooga, Ill., campaign chairman.

This money came exclusively from military personnel. Civilian employees are being canvassed separately through the United Givers drive, with proceeds going directly to Columbus.

Donations from military personnel totaled $25,728 last week. Col. Rund reported 100 per cent participation. They included the following sections:

Adjutant General, Post Exchange, Chaplain, Special Services, G-1, G-2, G-3, G-4, Troop Information and Education, Range, Army Aviation, Quartermaster, Engineer, Chemical, Ordnance, Signal, Controlling, Command, Headquarters, Communication, Public Information, Judge Advocate, Inspector General, Finance and Red Cross.

Col. Rund said he is confident that 100 per cent of the post's military personnel will contribute before the drive closes Nov. 2.

Red Devils Get New Leader

Col. Glenn J. McGowan of Carbondale, Ill., a decorated airborne veteran, has been appointed commander of the 508th Airborne. Recently returned from two years as a military attaché at the U. S. Embassy in Rangoon, Burma, Col. McGowan will succeed Col. George O. Pearson of Sheridan, Wyo., who leaves late this month for duty as chief of staff of the Berlin, Germany, Military District.

This will be Col. McGowan's third tour of duty at Fort Benning. He was with the 50th Army Infantry Regiment in 1940 and with the Airborne Department in 1945. A master parachutist, the new 508th commander volunteered for airborne training in March, 1941.

After receiving his wings, he joined the 501st Parachute Infantry Battalion and later commanded a battalion of the 514th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Camp Toccoa, Ga.

As a member of the 11th Airborne Division during World War II, he earned the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

He commanded a battalion of the (Please See RED DEVILS, Pg. 20)

OUTSTANDING RECORD . . . Miss Dorris Jennings of Columbus receives notification from Col. Richard Ebbs, post engineer, that she was given an outstanding performance rating. Miss Jennings, secretary to Col. Ebbs, has been employed at Fort Benning for 17 years. She is the first Engineer Section employee to be rated outstanding.

Red-Cape Waver Turns Into Dish Rag Slinger

BY JOHN L. LAPRISE

The long drop down the ladder of fame — from the cheers of a crowd watching the leader wring his red cape at a charging bull to that of a waving dish rag amid the growl of a cook — would discourage the stoutest heart.

Not so Pvt. William Joyner, of the 50th Tank Company, Second Training Command, Mexico City. When he was only eight years old the desire to become a foreword so fired his ambition that he practiced waving a bright cloth at passing automobiles and dogging.

Seek Bull

Within a few years Joyner, with a companion, decided that in order to learn to fight bulls you must find a bull. With this thought in mind they journeyed to one of the finest bull farms in all Mexico, the Pastore Hacienda.

The boys had had one desire when they reached the Pastore cienda and that was to fight a bull, regardless of the cost. The cost was almost to become their downfall, however, for the foreman of the farm demanded 50 pesos for the use of a bull. The boys produced only three pesos at their combined capital, but their pleas softened the "coronel's" heart and he consented to their making a few passes at one of his roaring bulls.

Big Moment

That was the big moment in

Joyner's life. He nervously waited his turn at the bull, who had tossed his two companions into the air with ease. The bull made a charge at Joyner and his pal, and somehow Joyner stepped out of the horns of the bull's construction. Twice, thrice he escaped from the huge beast before the foreman called the forty to a goal while a number of the G-3 Division were seen moving along.

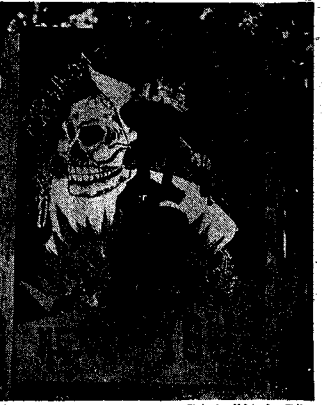

Whether speed violators would get discolored was not stated. But with the "eye" on everybody's vehicle it was the general feeling about the post that nobody wanted to get tangled with the provost marshal, and a noticeable car were in evidence wherever cars were seen moving along.

The future looked rosy indeed for the three youths. They had met

FOR WHOM BELLS TOLL . . . In glaring colors that arrest and warn, this huge sign by Efc. William Esterheld, Hq. Btry, 320th Abn. FA, 508th Airborne, stands as a gruesome reminder to everyone in the regimental area at Sand Hill that 18 auto deaths have been predicted for Fort Benning by its director of safety, Norman Evans, during 1953. Can we protect ourselves against the auto—the deadliest of weapons?

Radar Used to 'Eye' Speeding Over Post

"You fellows listen to this," the master sergeant said, coming into the office with an air of urgency. And everybody listened.

"The Daily Bulletin says they're putting radar on us. Listen, Section 5. Radar electronic speed motor will be in use on this reservation during the period 15 October through 15 November."

Then the sergeant paused.

"That means," he continued, "that they're going to check the speed of moving vehicles at various locations throughout the reservation. It says so right here."

And the sergeant was right. Although the Daily Bulletin did not say so in many words, it appeared that the post Provost Marshal was employing the electronic and other devices to help out in the general war on reckless driving wherever encountered on the post.

Whether speed violators would get discolored was not stated. But with the "eye" on everybody's vehicle it was the general feeling about the post that nobody wanted to get tangled with the provost marshal, and a noticeable car were in evidence wherever cars were seen moving along.

Citations Given Two Officers

Two Fort Benning officers have been cited for meritorious service and outstanding performance of duty.

Lt. Col. Joseph B. Reeves of Hollywood, Calif., was awarded the Legion of Merit, and Lt. Col. Steven L. Abernathy of Fordyce, Ark., a certificate of Achievement.

Brig. Gen. S. S. Moley, Jr., made the presentations.

Col. Reeves, now commander of the 41st Field Artillery Battalion, won the Legion of Merit for service while a member of the G-3 Division.

MARS, The Master Message Marvels

Men from MARS are operating on the Fort Benning reservation, Military Affiliated Radio Station messages around the world. But men from MARS are not strange creatures from another planet. They are the soldiers who operate WATTS, call letters for the Military Affiliated Radio Station operating on the post.

"Thousands of Infantrymen have talked to their wives, families, and friends over WATTS. It's just like talking on the telephone," says Sgt. John Wells of Dalton, Ga., who is in charge of the station. "I've received an average of 300 messages monthly."

One of our biggest customers is Puerto Rico, Sgt. Wells said. "All our old soldiers here from Puerto Rico want to send messages to their families," he said.

Recently a large group of Joint Civilian Orientation Conference visitors used the facility to relay more than 150 messages through out the world.

WATTS has proved valuable in times of disaster. Last April Cpl. Allan Nelson was on duty when an emergency call from WACYC in Phenix City reported that Columbus had been hit by a tornado which had killed doctors, nurses, and ambulances were needed. Telephone lines had been severed, and WATTS was the only means of communication.

Within an hour Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander, had alerted the post and disaster teams were on their way to the stricken area.

"That was only the beginning," said Sgt. Wells. "We were on duty continuously for more than 24 hours, sending messages and answering inquiries about people in the area."

The President's greetings will be broadcast simultaneously on 1440 and 1715 Kcs 47 times, 24 times by International Morse code and 24 by voice transmission.

The Morse code transmissions will begin on the hour, starting at 0001 GCT, voice will be sent on the half hour starting at 0005 GCT.

Any listener who "copies" the President's message will be entitled to receive an acknowledgment card attesting to his participation in the 1953 G.N. Day observance.

Ike to Radio UN Greetings

WASHINGTON (APPS) — The Department of Defense has announced that President Eisenhower will use facilities of the Military Affiliated Radio Station (MARS) in Washington to send a special United Nations Day message to radio amateurs and short wave listeners throughout the world on U.N. Day, Oct. 24.

The President's greetings will be broadcast simultaneously on 1440 and 1715 Kcs 47 times, 24 times by International Morse code and 24 by voice transmission.

The Morse code transmissions will begin on the hour, starting at 0001 GCT, voice will be sent on the half hour starting at 0005 GCT.

Any listener who "copies" the President's message will be entitled to receive an acknowledgment card attesting to his participation in the 1953 G.N. Day observance.

Platoon Is Cited For Columbus Duty

LI, Robert A. Farmer, Company A, 508th Airborne, was recently cited for his platoon's performance during Columbus Appreciation Day ceremonies last month.

The commendation was received from Ehen L. Reid, director of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and also carried a comment from Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy Jr.

"It was just a little better in the 'old days' when the company commander and his mess sergeant bought what and where they wanted on the basis of a monetary allowance given a unit by a 'perrman' basis."

Sgt. Ballard began his army career in 1929 at Camp Travis, Texas. After a short tour in the Philippines he was discharged in 1950. In 1952 he reenlisted at Ft. Benning and remained here until 1953. The sergeant was first stationed with the old 13th Tank Battalion. " Tanks rolled along at 6 miles per hour, then," he was in the post—the commanding general's sedan. Staff officers rode around in horse-drawn carriages with drivers, who sat at a rigid attention.

Aside from the long tour of duty here, the sergeant claims another Ft. Benning record. All five of his children were born on the Post and all are girls.

The Sergeant wears the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Presidential Unit Citation, the Strygman Rife Medal and the Good Conduct Medal. He lives with his family at 391 Trask Drive.

40 Textbooks Training Publications Print Everything For Post Soldier

Housed in only a few offices on the second floor of the Infantry School Building is a department which publishes more books than any major book publisher and some months is responsible for more movies than a top flight movie studio. It is known as the Infantry School's Training Publications Department.

Some 40 Infantry officers supply textbooks for the toughest courses offered by any school. The answers to the problems posed in these textbooks are not found in the back of the book, but on the battlefield.

Not all instructional material prepared by the department is presented in textbook form, however. Department personnel work with Infantry School and Signal Corps instructors to produce the texts that show the soldier what his job is and how he should do it.

Three R's

Although school days are filled with more practical work than textbook theory, the first of the three R's (reading) can not be overlooked. A man learns to fire a rifle by firing the weapon. But a field manual comes in mighty handy to give him background theory on care and cleaning of his weapon.

That's what the Training Publication Department enters the picture. It's the job of the men in the school to produce the literature middlemen, translating the technical knowledge of Infantry School

Lt. Haley Assigned To Publications Dept.

Second Lt. William E. Haley Jr., has been assigned to the Training Publications Department.

Lt. Haley, a member of the department's training literature group, received his commission Aug. 16, 1953 following graduation from Officer Candidate School. He first was assigned to the Weapons Department as a mortar instructor.

Medal Awarded To Lt. Thompson

Lt. Bennie L. Thompson of Dayton, Ohio, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal with V device for valorous service in Korea. Col. Mack M. C. Corp of Columbia, Tenn., Infantry Center surgeon, made the presentation.

Lt. Thompson was cited for heroic action June 13, 1953, near Outpost Dagmar while a member of Company I, 28th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division.

After enemy shelling had wounded two men, Lt. Thompson took charge and, with the aid of three men, evacuated the seriously wounded on stretchers and assisted the others to friendly lines. As they were returning an enemy mortar shell landed among the six men, wounding all of them, according to the citation, which read:

"Although bleeding profusely about the face, Lt. Thompson began to calm his wounded comrades, directing them to friendly lines and assisting in moderating first aid to the most seriously wounded."

Lt. Thompson has been in the U. S. Army Hospital here undergoing treatment for wounds received in Korea.

Airmen Hear Safety Talks

Highway safety and the dangers of mixing speed and alcohol on the highway were the subjects of two lectures given at Lawson Air Force Base this week by Sgt. J. O. Goodwin, safety education specialist for the Georgia State Highway Patrol.

During his visit Goodwin was presented with the Lawson Staff Driver Award by Col. Troy W. Crawford, commander, 46th Troop Carrier Wing.

The state highway patrolman was assigned to speak by Lt. Col. E. S. Burke, supervisor of safety education for the Georgia patrol, and the program was conducted in safety section. A continuous safety program is maintained by the base.

Sgt. Goodwin gave two lectures in order to make it possible for all personnel of the base to attend.

OC on the Briny Sick Safari Sailed Salty, Saffron Sea Sifting Sardine Site

When Pvt. David A. Gossett of H & H Co., First OC Regiment, eats a sardine he is laughing. It's like swallowing an old friend. Pvt. Gossett spent three of his 25 years as a senior marine technician doing research on marine life for the University of California.

Most of Gossett's work was concentrated on the sardine. The purpose of the program was to find the seasonal and yearly fluctuations of the number and size of these little aquatic animals in a given spot in the ocean. The work was carried on off the coast of California.

Sardines, lastly as they were not the only interests of the researchers. They took to sea on all forms of life found on their cruises, not excluding whales and birds. Weather data for use by the

"Every six hours we'd lower a net for specimens. At the same time we would lower 12 specimen bottles to a depth of 3,000 feet to get samples of the water. In this way we were able to keep track of all sea life as well as the kind and amount of food the animals were feeding on."

It wasn't all fun, Pvt. Gossett remembers being rescued by the Coast Guard 120 miles from land. And getting his dinner bounced back into his lap wasn't uncommon. He claims there was nothing "fishy" about the job. In fact, he'd do it all over again.

Air-Powered
Pneumatic Pffishing's Pfine

Put on a faceplate and fins, grab your air-powered spear gun, dive down into 30 feet of ocean water off the Florida Keys, and what happens? You'll probably bump into OC Mike Malone of the 2nd OC Company, First OC Regiment. Malone has been playing tag among the coral caves of the ocean bottom for years, enjoying a dive every other day.

Choice spots are around wrecks of ships. There, he says, hunters have come upon sheephead, bass, and trout are the targets for Mike's arbolite, the spear gun which has deadly accuracy from 20 feet.

Like most fishermen, Mike likes to tell of the "big one that got away." He had hooked a 200-pound grouper. For 15 minutes the fish gave him a fast ride but finally got away.

On a good day a catch may run up to 200 pounds and that's a novel any trouble in selling the delicacies, either.

Says Malone of barracuda and sharks: "They scare the blazes out of you but seldom attack. Most dangers of the sport come from porpoises and moray eels. The porpoises just want to bump heads in a playful way, but who wants to bump heads with half a ton of fish?"

The moray eel, on the other hand, attaches itself to the coral and grabs anything that comes along. "If you've ever been bitten by one," says Malone, "you'll know what I mean when I say that all it seems to be is teeth."

WESTWARD THE SUN, by Geoffrey Cotterell, (Lippincott, 288 pages).
Linda thought she was pretty shrewd and capable of looking after herself, even in wartime London. She was engaged to Syd and had her life all planned. That was before she met Mark Holman, a GI from Colorado, however, and found out how defenseless love could make her.

A gorgeously informal and breezy record of a big-game safari in Africa with his wife Jenny. ## A Thousand Pardons, Men Capt. Fills Breach; Pens 2d SR Story

MURRAY E. HORTON
We searched and searched but nowhere in the anniversary issue of The Bayonet could we find any mention of the Second Student Regiment. Naturally we felt bad, and in order to "compensate" the 35th Anniversary of Fort Benning, it is only fair that we append this bit of fact to an otherwise prize-worthy issue on the history of the post.

"Born" March 1, 1951, by virtue of General Order 21, Headquarters, The Infantry Center, the regiment commenced operations in the vicinity of the overseas area on Victory Drive. The Regiment was composed of OCS Battalion until December 1951 when the attachment was broken.

Starting the Second Student Regiment initially were personnel from the First Student Brigade (now the School Brigade), the unit's parent organization. The regiment, at full strength, boasted 24 student companies, eight in each of three battalions. At present there are only 16 companies in the regiment. Normal strength is approximately 625 enlisted men and 85 officers.

The first regimental commander was Lt. Col. Howard F. Haberman, and other subsequent commanders included Lt. Col. Willis H. Adams, Col. Max Gooler (now Commander of the School Brigade), Lt. Col. Melvin Fletcher, and lately Col. William I. Russell.

The regiment moves from the Officer Candidate Area to its present location in Harmony Church

"WHEREAS, the United Nations provides the peoples of the world with an organization through which international differences in the economic and political fields can be peacefully resolved; and

"WHEREAS, the need for the United Nations is greater than its success depends on the extent to which its members give it support; and

"WHEREAS, the expression of our faith in and support of the United Nations will encourage and bring hope to the peoples of other Nations who are working toward a true peace with freedom and justice for all; and

"WHEREAS, the General Assembly of the United Nations has declared that Oct. 24, the anniversary of the entry into force of the United Nations Charter should be dedicated each year to the dissemination of information concerning the aims and accomplishments of the United Nations;

"NOW, THEREFORE, I, DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, President of the United States of America, do hereby urge the citizens of this Nation to observe Saturday, October 24, 1953, as United Nations Day by sending messages to friends, relatives, and associates in other member countries of the United Nations, by learning more about the United Nations and its members, and by expressing their confidence in the United Nations, their friendship for other peoples, and their faith in the ultimate triumph of peace and justice through the efforts of men of good will.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed."

Funds Mounting In CTC Drive

Contributions to the Community Chest by the Combat Training Command continue to pour into the office of Lt. Col. Richard I. Jones, executive officer of the 20th Infantry Regiment and chairman of the CTC campaign.

The sum of $897 previously announced was raised to $4,064 by gifts from Hq. & Hq. Co., 20th Inf. Regt., of $198.50 and Company M of the same regiment with $104.00. Headquarters and Service Company, 7th Engineer (C) Battalion, donated $83.00 and Company B, of the same battalion, gave $5.00. The 25th Tank Company, contributed $94.00 and $344.00 was received as a combined contribution from units of the 41st Field Artillery Battalion.

Col. Pray Inspects
Post PMO Facilities
Lt. Col. L. H. Pray of the Office of the Army's Provost Marshal General, Washington, D. C., visited Fort Benning last week to inspect provost marshal facilities. He was accompanied by Major William Vann of the Third Army Provost Marshal's Office.

TIS Secretary Jack of All Trades

Combining the jobs of registrar, executive secretary and personnel manager, the secretary of The Infantry School, Lt. Col. Leonard Garrett, is a busy man.

In his capacity as executive secretary, he supervises all the paperwork for the school and is responsible for keeping the assistant commandant informed on activities pertaining to its operation.

As personnel manager, the Infantry School secretary has a real headache, with an annual turnover of roughly 100 per cent of the 2,000-man faculty, he has a tremendous personnel problem. Also in this capacity, he handles the numerous duty trips of school personnel to other posts. These run about 350 yearly.

Although Col. Garrett considers his registrar responsibilities a small part of his operation, they dwarf those of the average educational institution. For example, during a calendar year he handles the admission of nearly 40,000 students, roughly 10 times that of the

Soldiers Learning About U.N. This Week
All Fort Benning troops are taking part in a discussion of the United Nations during this week. The topic, under discussion, "Peace, Freedom, and Security through the United Nations," was chosen in observance of U.N. Day Saturday, Oct. 24.

Prepared by the post's Troop Information and Education Section, the discussion has been published in booklet form and will be used as the basis of the weekly Command Conference.

Boykin, Commander Defense Share Spotlight In Upset

A valiant crew of CTC Commanders came off the ropes in Doughty Stadium Sunday to register the most shocking upset of the season by knocking Brigade-PMG's mighty Rams off their unbeaten pinnacle, 19-12. The loss was the first in league play since 1950 for the Rams.

Mel (Duck) Tomsic was CTC's brightest star. The big, hard-running halfback scored one touchdown personally and set up the other two with some truly brilliant pass catching. He led the Commanders' tremendous second half surge, and was the only CTC back able to gain consistently over-

Deer Season Opens Nov. 20

"An open deer season is declared for the Fort Benning reservation."

"That's the way the directive from the commanding general began and the material which followed established the rules for the Annual Deer Hunt, one of the most thrilling and popular sporting events in American outdoor life.

Here, as in the rest of the nation, the shotgun will be cleaned, the red hunting habit will be taken out of muckhalls and all attention will be directed towards the dark woods where the proud antlered buck waits to pin his antlers cunning and cunningly against the skill and marksmanship of the hunter.

Gen. Meloy, Jr., post commander, has designated the period of Nov. 20 to Dec. 5 as open deer season for the Alabama portion of the military reservation and Dec. 1-15 as the time for the hunt on the Georgia side of the Chattahoochee. As in the past, hunters will team up in pairs and those authorized to stalk the deer will be selected Nov. 10. Shotgun employing .00 buck ammunition are the only weapons permitted and the use of hunting dogs is prohibited.

It is no question with all the rules of the game observed and Military Police and Game wardens will patrol to see that all regulations are enforced.

The Fish and Game Maintenance Association urges all members to make application for the hunt before the deadline which is Nov. 20.

WINNING PITCHER A starting pitcher is credited with a win if he has pitched at least five complete innings and his team not only is in the lead when he is replaced but remains in the lead for the remainder of the game. In the case of games of six or more innings.

Shorthanded Wave Faces Tough Commanders Sunday

CTC's rugged Commanders, who have demonstrated that they are a power to be reckoned with from here on in, will throw their tough defense and new-found aerial assault against a short-handed SVA Green Wave in Sunday's feature offering at Doughty Stadium. Admission is free, and the kickoff is at 2 p.m.

The Commanders, fresh from a stunning 19-12 upset win over Brigade's highly rated Rams, will be favored to hand SVA its third loss in as many starts during a two-mindful let down by CTC or unexpected reinforcements for the Greensies, the Commanders should roll on.

The league picture is somewhat clearer after Sunday's loss by the Rams. A's unbeaten Red Devils are now perched atop the heap, high and dry. CTC and Brigade-Medics are deadlocked for second place with one and one records, while Special Troops occupies the cellar with two losses.

This week, SVA journeys to Camp Rucker, 50th for a Saturday game, while Brigade will take this week-end off to lick the whopping share of credit for the victory must go to the blue-jerseyed Commander line which completely throttled the Rams' heretofore unstoppable split-T attack. So vicious was the CTC defense that the high-scoring Brigade offense could only muster seven first downs and 68 yards net rushing. The option play around end, bread-and-butter play for the Rams fumble. However, the Commanders would not have it. So they gobbled up a Ram fumble, one of five costly Brigade fumbles, and became the first team to score on the Rams this year when Boykin, a swirling, charming runner, slashed over from 17 yards out in the third quarter. The score climaxed a short 27-yard march that consumed five plays. Another bad pass from center spoiled the extra point try.

The Rams struck back as Bob Ellis intercepted a CTC jump pass and lateraled to Crook, who treated the crowd to some darting broomfield running before being overhauled on the CTC 14. Here the Commanders stood firm, and took the ball on downs to thwart the Brigade score. This stand was probably the turning point of the game, as the Rams never got inside the CTC 40 again.

Passes Pay-Off. Meanwhile the Commander passing game, an inept, faltering weapon, for the first time came to life with vengeance. After their goal line stalling, the Rams and Crook fumbled the kick as he tried to pick it off on the dead run. Tomsic faded back and heaved a prodigious aerial that Boykin somehow managed to snare as he somersaulted on the Ram 10.

The tough Brigade defense, anchored by Kugh and Fortunato, held for three downs but on fourth and goal to go, all-American Tomsic threw a touchdown pass into the clear in the Ram end zone, and tucked in Tomsic's pass for the CTC's second counter. The attempted conversion was spied by still another member of the Red Devils' defensive pet.

50th AICTC traveled to Panama City, Fla. over the weekend to track up its fourth victory of the season and maintain its unbeaten record 13-0 over Tyndell AFB. The Red Devils are the only remaining Ft. Benning team that has not tasted defeat this year.

Sneedy boltback Dale Ems got 50th into its first lead in the final period when he snared across the goal line barely in bounds for a touchdown. Punjabi and an erratic passing attack wrecked Tyndell's ball to pull back into a tie during the first half.

Bobby Morstad, who is developing into a smooth Red Devil field player, guided the 50th offense to its second score in the third quarter. He hit end Pete Overton with a pass to put the ball on the line. The Red Devils then pitched out to Bill Steady ball club that will give the team a full afternoon. As long as you can see, are still the powerful and they are looked to be the upset loss they had above down their throats will make them just that much tougher to handle.

SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS

by Bob Kozelnick

There are wheels, it seems, within wheels. Take the case of the Special Troops Green Wave football team. The wave has been a Doughty-Bidston appearance thus far this season, and lost both games by lopsided scores—31-0 to School Brigade and 47-8 to 508th Airborne.

Naturally, these one-sided losses have resulted in a flood of adverse criticism of the Greensies—criticism which, like the games, has also been one-sided. Now for an opinion from one of the Greenie coaches:

"Open Letter to Bob Benning Football Fans: 'I have just finished reading a newspaper account (not the Bonnet's) of our game with the 508th, and I feel that the facts should be investigated before a too-harsh criticism is made of the Green Wave football team.

"I realize that the scores are absurd. However, there are a few important points which should be brought out. First of all, consider experience. This team has several men who have not completed grammar school and have no experience at all. The majority of the boys have played high school ball in some form or other. This still points to a lack of experience. Four boys have played major college ball, but most of their time is spent coaching rather than playing getting into shape themselves.

"Second, let's consider the time element spent in practice. Approximately two and one-half hours a day are available to us for practice. This has been the case all along. The other three teams have more practice. In fact, one team has 24 hours special duty for practicing football. I don't know the case of the other two teams. However, with only two and a half hours a day, this time can only be spent learning plays. If there were no other factors, one could be spent on fundamentals and the other on perfecting plays.

"Third, look at releases from duty. The Infantry School Detachment does not even cut orders on their personnel to play football. Therefore, we are being disadvantaged. We are going to be at practice only 15 minutes. Many times they are on duty and miss practice—very poor way to run a team.

"Fourth, equipment issued isn't fit in many cases for grammar school use. The helmets are especially poor. In fact, one team has been able to obtain better equipment before too many injuries occur.

"Fifth, to secure football. One team in particular has been able to secure football. It is not fair to expect other teams to do the same. There just isn't a team willing to do it. I do not begrudge this team anything, in fact I admire their aggressiveness in making these acquisitions. Efforts to secure talent has been confined here are no vacancies for these officers who are players. Other commands MAKE vacancies for the needed players.

"In summarizing, I recommend that something be done about equalizing talent or investigating conditions. Something definitely is wrong when a team loses consistently by 50 or 60 points.

(Signed) Lt. George C. Freeman

One point in particular of Lt. Freeman's letter stands out. That is his recommendation for equalizing talent. A mad, hell-scare scramble for players is understandable, even unexpected, in collegiate ranks. But for such a condition to exist in military circles seems wrong.

Obviously the only step that can be taken to prevent it is more rigid controls. Collegiate and professional teams operate under a conference which can and does legislate and make laws to govern its members. College teams are also subject to a higher body, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which makes overall policy decisions and arbitrates in case of disputes. Recently, the NCAA suspended Maryland's Sugar Bowl champion football team for unfair recruiting practices. It is this same idea to see that all teams receive the same considerations insofar as is possible. Of course, if Slippery Rock would have no recourse in the NSA or their conference. They contracted to play the game, and it's nobody's fault but their own.

Two '52 Champions Adorn Thursday Night's Boxing Card

ELVIS MATHEWS... Lightweight Champ

GORDON VAN LOO... Light Middle Champ

Featured attractions on Thursday night's star-studded amateur boxing card will be two 1952 post champions, both of whom are making their first appearance on the scene. The fan boys are slated for Brian Wells, Field House, admission is free, and proceedings get under way at 8 p.m.

Gordon Van Loo, Fort Benning's best glove last year, will open his bid for 1953 All-Post honors against highly regarded Norman Salvato in a class 1 light middleweight tussle. The classed Van Loo, representing School Brigade, battled his way to the Third Army championship last year, the only remaining boxer to win a crown.

Special Troops' Elvis Mathews finally found an opponent, and it looks like this may be worthy of Mathews' championship steel. Richard Woodley, wearing CTC's colors, will take on Mathews, whose previously scheduled appearances have both fallen through as his adversaries were medically disqualified.

Elmer Blair, knocked Sol Scott to the floor twice in the first for another TKO win. In the two four-rounders, Jim Henry of Special Troops earned a decision over Kid Carracchio of College Park, Ga., and Bobby Evans of Atlanta topped Jimmy Gossett of Columbus, S. C.

through as his adversaries were medically disqualified. Woodley was in All-EDUCOM featherweight several years ago, and has grown into the light welterweight class since his return. Going into Thursday's melee, School Brigade had been given protection its team boxing lead from second place CTC Brigade. CTC has five, 508th three, and SVA has accrued two. SVA and CTC, there just isn't a team willing to do it.

Marion Naumoff, 508th, 5 am Brown CTC, takes on Alfred Birtolotta, 50th, Leon Hall, CTC, will square off against Bill Gault, 508th, and Wilfred Chitt, 50th, fights Jerry Cash, CTC.

As Al Manuel Medeiros, CTC meets Fred Benton, Brigade. Joe Bowden, 508th, meets John Wagner, Brigade. Mearly Andrews, SVA and Victor Simon of 508th, CTC tangles with Juan Jaramillo. Both boys racked up impressive records in their respective divisions, demonstrating plenty of punching power in both hands.

In the remainder of the matches, Robert Lane, Brigade, meets against William Henry, CTC.

enough room for the spectators in the smaller parks. Yogi says: "It's much easier to run without shoes... at least for me. At home everyone goes barefoot most of the time. Only in school were we forced to wear shoes. It's only natural that I should play sports barefooted. But it gets awfully slippery in the mud on a rainy day."

But it doesn't matter what Lou the "coo" Groat thinks of this!

Yogi Claims Football Faster Without Shoes

The toughest test in Fort Benning camp to Richard S. Yogi, 14th OC, playing first OC Regt. He plays football with bare feet!

As anyone familiar with the Pacific has guessed, the shoes are built into the feet. The football player there is tough. It's just like American football helmets, shoulder pads, blocks and tackles but not shoes. It's so tough in fact, before a team of shoeless punters can apply for membership in a league, all its players must be insured.

The game started in the Islands back in the 1920's and has been gaining in popularity ever since. Administration has been taken over by the Hawaiian Board of Public Parks and Recreation. The outstanding teams play in the Honolulu Stadium. There just isn't a team willing to do it.

For the "Fighting First" to many months of barracks living and details made the week of sun, shine and rain a holiday. Bivouacked an Army-wide range the battalion turned out from their Sand Hill quarters with full field equipment and quickly set up pup tents, field kitchens and mobile shower unit and post exchange at their field site.

Every minute of the first day was crammed with hard labor. Training continued into the evening and included information and debating discussions and a moral ethics talk by battalion chaplain (1st Lt.) Philip G. McConville.

Turf fans are buzzing with excitement over the comeback campaign of Earl Sande, 54, once America's greatest jockey. Sande, who won the Kentucky Derby in 1926, came in first in New York's Jamaica track recently.

His racing career started in New Orleans in 1919. He won national fame in 1920 by riding Giant Fox to triumph in the Kentucky Derby. Frodo and Belmont Stakes. Outside of winning three derbies, the two-time champion has had his horse win 964 winners. All who are these lads know, Guerin may be the best.

Good news for Brooklyn fans: The Dodgers have finally won a World Series. In 1952, they won the Montreal Royals, Brooklyn farm club in the International League, by beating the Kansas City Blues. Yankee farm team in the American Association, four out of five games.

Speaking of the Burns — after they lost the second game of the Series, the Brooklyn Eagle ran the following eight-column treatise: "Yale hasn't lost an opening football game since broken by Virginia in '40. Frank Sedgman and Pancho Gonzales have accepted invitations to play in the world championships Nov. 16-20 at Wembley Stadium in England. . . The universities of Marquette and Ford have signed a four-year contract for a home — and — home series to begin in Milwaukee in '53. Both schools broke off football plans since the last time they met in 1929. . ."

One of the outstanding rookies on the NFL Giants '33 squad is Everett "Sonny" Grandulio, a veteran of Korea. Grandulio, a former Michigan State All-American in '50, will alternate with Kyle Rote in left half. In his senior year at State he totaled 1,023 yards in six tries for a 7.7 average and scored 12 touchdowns.

The Giants have signed Arnold Galiffa, recently released by the Army. Galiffa, former star quarterback of the West Coast football team, was drafted by the Green Bay Packers and later traded to the Giants for end Val Joe Walker from Southern Methodist.

Pvt. Bob Griffin has been named head coach of the Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. football squad. Griffin, a veteran of four years in the football coaching profession, succeeds Lt. Michael Kayserian, who was recently discharged from the service. . . Former Camp Polk, La., end Andy Hillman (APPS-1952 Service All-Star) is currently playing with the NFL Chicago Bears. A basketball officials clinic will be held in Tokyo, Japan, Nov. 24. Conducting the clinic will be John Bunn of Springfield College and Oswald Towens, official NCHA basketball referee. . . tried to launch a scoring march. But CTC swarmed all over him. Then, with the ball on their own 10, they turned up in the clock, the Commanders struck. Boykin whirled around, left and right, and the ball was in the air. The Ram secondary to hawk a CTC received a 15 yard holding penalty. Then, with the ball on their own 10, they turned up in the clock, the Commanders struck. Boykin whirled around, left and right, and the ball was in the air. The Ram secondary to hawk a CTC received a 15 yard holding penalty.

However Boykin came to the fore again, once more on the receiving end of a Tommie air strike, and the ball was broken by Virginia in '40. Frank Sedgman and Pancho Gonzales have accepted invitations to play in the world championships Nov. 16-20 at Wembley Stadium in England. . . The universities of Marquette and Ford have signed a four-year contract for a home — and — home series to begin in Milwaukee in '53. They won't make the mistake of over-confidence again. The Rams look like the team to beat. The Greenies apparently have discarded the single wing phase of their offense in favor of the straight T. In that last outing they called a few plays from spread formation in an attempt to advance via the T, but stuck mostly to a T type of attack. With a week's layoff up with a new ripple or two for the ball, they will be in the T.

In the final analysis, CTC won because they were able to stall the Brigade ground attack. Ram passing, under hot and pressure, lost some of its fine tempo and failed when they most needed it. On the other hand CTC's overboard game, which was unimpressive, was unimpressive. Fumbles at the line and in the backfield, and they simply could not match CTC's furious onslaught in the latter stages.

Sergeant Enjoys Dual Rank Status

One assistant instructor in the Tactical Department, TIS, knows what it's like to be a reserve officer and a sergeant at the same time, and he has two Army serial numbers to prove it.

Robert W. Anderson holds this "dual title" by way of a recently awarded direct commission in the Army Reserve. Sgt. Anderson will hold his present rank until he is called to active duty as an officer.

Sgt. Anderson, who calls Atlanta, Ga., his home, entered the Army in 1942 and has seen action in Europe and Korea. But not all his Army career has been with the Infantry.

The versatile sergeant entered the Army with a vocal career as a baritone soloist, but started in Massachusetts. Prior to his entry into the Army, he appeared in numerous dramatic and musical shows produced by the Cape Cod Playhouse and the New England Light Opera Group. He also held leading roles with the Atlanta Civic Opera.

While in the Army, Sgt. Anderson worked with the Armed Forces Radio Network in Europe and was featured in a network production of "Oklahoma." In 1949 he was awarded a certificate of achievement for service shown while produced at Fort Jackson, S. C.

His most recent dramatic role was his portrayal of Seth Lord in the Fort Benning Little Theater production of "The Philadelphia Story," presented on the post last week.

Sgt. Anderson's Army achievements have been as numerous as the physical qualifications and attain a score of 31 or higher on the Army Forces Qualification Test.

Post RO May Now Reenlist 90-Day Outs

Fort Benning's recruiting office has been authorized to reenlist former Army personnel who have been separated from the service for more than 90 days.

Formerly those individuals who had been out of uniform more than 90 days were required to reenlist in a civilian recruiting office and be processed at a reception center.

Under the new system, however, former soldiers can reenlist for direct assignment to Fort Benning. Anyone interested should contact the Fort Benning Recruiting Office, by letter or in person.

Reenlistees must have in their possession all forms involving their physical qualifications and attain a score of 31 or higher on the Army Forces Qualification Test.

Ukuleles, Leis Invade Post As 14 Hawaiians Land Here

Several states are well represented in the ranks of the 121st Company, Second Infantry Regiment, but one of the largest aggregations in the unit is from Hawaii. There are 14 Hawaiians in the company. Thirteen are recent ROTC graduates of the University of Hawaii, and the 14th is an officer in the Hawaiian National Guard (29th Regimental Combat Team). For most of the fellows this is their second visit to the mainland, but their first into the South. They came over last summer on a troopship to attend summer camp at Ft. Lewis, Wash. . . . All the Hawaiians seem to agree that the United States is a pretty nice place. But when you ask them where they hope to be sent after graduation from the Infantry School, they yell, "To the Pacific—Hawaii, in particular."

Skinner Skins 'Fishing' Snake

SFC James C. Travenski, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, First Special Troops Battalion, Special Troops Command, considers himself a fairly good fisherman. Just about every week-end he can be found sitting on the bank of a stream casting his line. Recently he and a friend, SFC Charles S. Risley, also of Headquarters Company, went fishing. Getting several nice catches, they collected their gear and were ready to leave. Suddenly Risley reached for his fish skinner, and drove it into the ground, impaling a four-foot water moccasin. The snake had crawled to within a foot of where Travenski had been sitting. Looking at the snake, Travenski said, "I'd better learn to fish, standing up."

English Learned By Ambitious Puerto Ricans

"Que hora es?" "Hablo usted inglés?" "¿Oyá?" "¿Qué hora es?" They've got everyone speaking Spanish—those 30 Puerto Ricans who are in the 121st Infantry Regiment. And they've got all the mainland Americans wishing they had paid closer attention in Spanish class. The 30 Latinos are all recent ROTC graduates of the University of Puerto Rico. There were 130 men to get Infantry commissions at the University this year and the 121st Company now has the largest single group of them. On duty and in classes the fellows speak English, with varying degrees of fluency, but in informal conversation among themselves they employ their native tongue. Now they and the whole company using simple phrases and sentences like "que hora es?" "What time is it?" Although Spanish is the native language in the island, English is taught in all the schools from the third grade through college, and our language is not new to the Puerto Rican officers. Antonio Barcelo, of Santurce, who attended prep school here in the States, said a majority of his classmates are having language difficulties "mainly because of the technical army vocabulary with which they are unfamiliar." They are trying to overcome these difficulties, however, he said, by studying and conversing a lot with their North American friends in the company. Most of the new officers are hoping for assignments back home when they complete the basic Infantry officer course. But while here they are trying to smash all language barriers so that they can handle any assignment that comes their way.

Graduates Told To 'Trust Self'
The five requisites for a successful Army officer were listed last Thursday by the director of The Infantry School's Communications Department. Col. Walcott K. Dudley, principal speaker at graduation of the school's associate company officers class No. 32, said these requisites are knowledge, self-discipline, loyalty, application and integrity. "Go forth with confidence in yourself, your nation and God—you cannot fail," Col. Dudley declared. There were 132 graduates of the four-month course.

28 Days as POW Recalled By 123d Company Soldier

Pvt. Carl M. Henningsen, who for the past three months has been assigned to 123d Company, Second Infantry Regiment, has the distinction of having once been a guest—although a somewhat unwilling one—of the North Korean Army. Henningsen, who entered the Army four years ago, was serving with the 82d Anti-Aircraft Artillery. It was September 1950, and his outfit, which had been attached to the 23d Infantry, found itself encircled by Communist troops. They fought until their ammunition was exhausted and then surrendered. The North Koreans marched them north Seoul for 28 days, and hopes of regaining their freedom came as the distance between the captives and their own lines lengthened. Daily, the prisoners were subjected to minor beatings and other indignities, and morale ebbed lower and lower, he said. Occasionally they saw American jets far overhead but it seemed hardly possible that they had been noticed by the pilots.

Bride Tagged 'Wac Of Week'

The most recent member of Fort Benning's WAC Company, Special Troops Command, to make the jump was a bride. She's Cpl. Virginia May Sanchez Currier. A native of Trinidad, Colo. Virginia married Sfc. Theodore Currier at the Post Hospital Chapel. Ted is assigned to the personnel office of the Infantry School Detachment. The new Mrs. Currier has been in the Army since September 1951 and recently reenlisted. Her first enlistment began soon after she graduated from high school. Virginia came to Fort Benning 21 months ago and is assigned to the obstetrical gynecological section of the prenatal clinic. Giny, whose future plans include learning to cook and finding some time to get her husband to "take me dancing more often," feels that she was selected "Wac of the Week" mainly because she can pronounce, without too much trouble, the full name of the clinic where she works.

'No Feeling--You Just Jump' Jumpers Described as Average Men With Normal Fears As Chute Opens

How does it feel to jump is a question that burns the mind of every observer of an Airborne drop. Several troopers from the 508th Airborne from the 508th Airborne have endeavored to put the answer to that question into words, but most agree with the old master jumper who quipped: "Hell, there is no feeling. You just jump!"

Some people used to believe there was no feeling during a jump in fact, they wagered that a jumper lost consciousness when he left the door of the plane. "Gerontion, the cry of the trooper resulted from such a rumor and to show that he was conscious, a sergeant cried out the word as he bailed out. Consciousness is not descriptive of that queer feeling that's the same "whether you have 200 jumps or whether you are a novice jumper making your eighth leap," troops all agree.

Some troopers report although they had lived with danger as civilians, there was nothing that compares to jumping. The story is told of Sgt. Robert Bernard, an armorer during World War II, who rode six crashing planes to the ground rather than jump. He finally joined the 508th in an effort to quell his fear of jumping. Today he says the only thing he fears more than jumping from a plane is being burned to death. Another such daredevil is Pfc. Jack Murphy who has been in the air since he was 15 and who was a flying trapeze artist for seven years before joining the Army and the 508th. Murphy admits that with all his airborne experience he still gets jittery when "tipping through the air."

He might well have spoken for Fort Benning's WAC Company, too, road daredevil who has jumped from cars at speeds in excess of 50 and 60 miles an hour and declares "no jumps compare for sheer thrills with jumping from a plane." The most poignant description recorded, however, was that of James H. Poalston, a youthful Red Devil who just completed his eighth jump. "A lot of people think it's all been frightened at one time or another. I thought so too—until I first jumped. I never had a feeling good because you are so close to the good earth. I stop and think and wish the jumper were me. Well, there we were going back to the barracks instead of to the airfield," he went on.

5th ROK Class Due Oct. 28th

The fifth class of Republic of Korea Army officers to study at the Infantry School is scheduled to arrive Oct. 28 to begin a 20-week course in weapons unit tactics. The 158 students, who range in rank from first lieutenant to colonel, are for the most part combat veterans of the Korean War. Three are officers in the Republic of Korea Marine Corps.

Carnival to Highlight Post Halloween Fun, Festivities

Kids Preparing for Parade To Be Held Saturday Night

Everything's in readiness for the Halloween carnival to be held at Gowdy Field on Saturday evening. Sponsored annually by the Fort Benning Parent-Teacher Association, the carnival is expected to attract upwards of 10,000 parents, children, and—yes—bachelors too.
More than 1,000 children, 10 its forecast, will vie for 10 prizes in a pre-carnival costume parade that will begin across the street from School No. 1 at 6:15 p.m. and move to Gowdy Field via Chapel Field.
Lt. Col. J. R. Francis, carnival project officer, said pre-school and nursery school children, as well as those attending out-post schools, are to meet in Faith School auditorium, Custer Terrace students in School No. 1 auditorium, and all others in their home rooms, Meekin time 5:30 p. m.
Costumes to be judged according to home-room groups, and prizes, to include games and toys, will be presented before the parade begins. There also will be prizes for nursery, elementary school, and children attending out-post schools.
Col. Maurice J. Fitzgerald, project marshal, will be grand marshal of the parade. With the help of four costumed military police motorcycleists, the 22d Army and Special Troops Command Bands, he will lead the children to Gowdy Field where the carnival is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p. m.
The parade will move to Gowdy Field via Chapel Field, where children are to be judged. (Please see CARNIVAL, Page 6)

AVC Reports Few 'C' Stores To Get the Axe

WASHINGTON—An assurance was given from the White House that few, if any, commissary stores are likely to be closed as a result of a legislative "ax" passed by the last session of Congress, it was stated today by the American Veterans Committee.
The AVC had protested strongly to President Eisenhower against closing commissaries on the grounds that commissary privileges were an important "fringe benefit" whose curtailment would seriously reduce the appeal of a soldier in the Armed Forces. Twenty-four members of Congress, including Sen. John Sparkman and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, have also protested the projected commissary closings.
In a letter to Andrew E. Rice, executive director of the American Veterans Committee, Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams declared that "the Department of Defense considers that commissary and post exchange privileges are important factors in retention of the trained personnel in the Armed Forces require."
Adams explained that the 1954 Defense Department Appropriation Act required that no commissary stores on military post could remain open after Dec. 31, 1953, unless the secretary of defense certified that "items normally procured from commissary stores are not otherwise available at a reasonable distance and a reasonable price in satisfactory quality and quantity."
A survey is now in progress to determine the effect of this provision. Adams reassured the veterans group, however, by telling them that "we are advised that perhaps few, if any, commissary stores will be closed."

Gen. Newman Welcomed

Gen. Newman was welcomed by a band of honor guard from the First Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, at the Combat Training Command's 1953-54 Army Ballroom. The parade will move to Gowdy Field via Chapel Field, where children are to be judged. (Please see CARNIVAL, Page 6)

1944 Jumper Tries Again

Gen. Newman was welcomed by a band of honor guard from the First Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, at the Combat Training Command's 1953-54 Army Ballroom. The parade will move to Gowdy Field via Chapel Field, where children are to be judged. (Please see CARNIVAL, Page 6)

3-Day Tour Is Planned By Officials

Plans are being completed for the Army phase of one of the largest Joint Civilian Orientation Conferences ever held. Scheduled for next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, JCOG will attract top prominent business and industrial leaders, who will be joined by Assistant Secretary of the Army Stacks, Assistant Secretary of Defense C. S. Thomas, Assistant Secretary of the Navy R. H. Proctor, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force R. Lewis and Lt. Gen. W. B. Palmer, Army Chief of Staff.

Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens also has tentatively planned to join the party. Almost 600 service school students will follow the post for the demonstrations and briefings on Infantry weapons and tactics. They will include 200 from a 4th Armored Force Staff College, 40 from the Chemical School, 100 from the Engineer School, 50 from the Ordnance School, 54 from the Provost Marshal School, and 100 from the Transportation School. 50 Officials Fifty officials from the Operations Research Office in Washington also are expected to attend. The group of civic and business officials from Montgomery will be present for the final day of the conference, and Lt. Gen. R. R. Bolling, Third Army commander, is expected for a part of the three-day meeting.

This is the 17th conference since the program's inauguration in 1948 by former Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. Their purpose is to allow leading civilian and military officials how the Defense Department is spending the military tax dollars.

The Army phase of the conference always is held at Fort Benning, where the visitors see a series of demonstrations and confer with officials.

The conference begins in Washington, D. C., Oct. 29 and ends Nov. 6. The conferees will visit Army and Air Force installations in addition to Fort Benning.

THIS LITTLE PANDA BEAR... Scooted up the nearest tree when a photographer from the Photo Lab caught him scaring the daylight out of soldiers in the Airborne area. Tread, the little bear 'boohoned' so loud that a pirate and Little Bo-Peep came running up and scared the photographer away. (Other pictures on Pages 4, 6 and 7)

Chutist Back After 9 Years

"I noticed the ground seemed quite hard when the first troopers landed by the way they were prepared for the impact, and I realized that I could easily get hurt if I did a poor landing fall. Then suddenly it was all over and I was standing on the ground, looking at the dirt from my clothes and thanking the Lord for delivering me my hand."
Sgt. Ellington has made 39 jumps, including 12 of two combat jumps. Three of these were made with the 502d. He graduated from Airborne in June 1941, became a prisoner of war Jan. 2, 1945 when captured in the Battle of the Bulge and discharged from the army in 1946.
Sgt. Ellington served four years with the 74th Airborne Division on an enlisted reserve status, until his present assignment as platoon sergeant in the 502d.

Gen. Newman was welcomed by a band of honor guard from the First Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, at the Combat Training Command's 1953-54 Army Ballroom. The parade will move to Gowdy Field via Chapel Field, where children are to be judged. (Please see CARNIVAL, Page 6)

ENLISTED AIDE . . . Sgt. Daniel Donahue, of Alice, Texas, is greeted by Major Gen. G. S. Meloy Jr., as he reported last Monday morning to assume duties for one week as enlisted aide to the Fort Benning commander. Sgt. Donahue, assigned to Army Field Forces Testing Board No. 3 will accompany Gen. Meloy on inspection tours and to official functions as part of his orientation.

The termite queen, which may live 10 years, lays eggs without stopping at the rate of one every 2 1/2 seconds.

Troops Plot Deadly Path of Tantalum

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Ft. McPherson, Ga., troops at Fort Benning, Ga., are getting practical field training with radioactive objects, Lt. Gen. A. H. Bolling, commanding general, Third Army, has announced.

The radioactive material — tiny capsules containing Tantalum 102 — are stored in lead pigs weighing 400 pounds each, and seven capsules are stored in each pig. The capsules are made of copper tubing about half an inch wide and one and a half inches long. Each is so powerful that it must be handled with a wire hook attached to a pole 6 feet long.

For training purposes the capsules are placed in various remote sections of each post, and then, by employing radiation detection instruments, troops establish the location of the radiation sources. They plot these on installation maps, thus marking off simulated areas of radioactive contamination.

Two of the lead pigs have been assigned to Ft. Benning, while Forts Bragg and Jackson and Camp Gordon have each received one.

Conducted by post and unit chemical officers, the training is part of troop indoctrination for defense in Atomic warfare.

Shift Renames 2 Departments . . . Two departments of the Infantry School at Fort Benning have been reorganized and renamed. They are the Training Publications Department, now known as the Publications and Visual Aids Office, and the Army Extension Course Department, renamed the Department of Non-Resident Instruction.

ROTC and civilian component advisers, formerly a part of the Training Publications Department, have been reassigned to the new Department of Non-Resident Instruction. The department will continue to handle all Infantry School courses of instruction for Reserve National Guardsmen and ROTC Cadets.

The new Publications and Visual Aids Office includes the Book Department, Army Field Printing Plant, Training Literature Section, The Infantry School Quarterly Publications Section, and Visual Aids Section. Purpose of the reorganization is to group all publications functions in one office and all phases of non-resident instruction in another.

Col. John W. Childs of Macon, Ga., is director of the new Department of Non-Resident Instruction and Lt. Col. Arlo W. Mitchell of Wichita, Kans., heads the Publications and Visual Aids Office.

78th PROMOTIONS . . . Robert F. Gibbs and Alex Higgins were promoted to corporal in Headquarters and Service Company, 78th Engineers Combat Battalion. Private first class Stripes were given out to Edward W. Dezel, Daniel Mendler, and Bobbie R. Jennings.

Novelist Turns Into Teacher For Personnel in 30th Inf.

A draftee in far-away Italy, a student and novelist in Ohio, scribbles and writes in Rome, a writer and publicity man in Rome, a soldier and language teacher at Fort Benning — that is the varied career of Pfc. Richard Gibson of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Infantry Regiment.

Gibson, who conducts a language class in conversational Italian during his evening hours, was born in Los Angeles, Calif., and attended school in Philadelphia. He entered Kenyon College in Ohio, to major in literature and while there won a John Hay Whitney fellowship in creative literature. To complete the book which had won for him the fellowship, Gibson went to Italy for further study. The fellowship money lasted 10 months and in order to continue with his book Gibson obtained work with the Italian Film Co. His work required the writing of advance publicity for films that were to be shown in America. Films that Gibson worked on were "Ulysses", due for an early release, and "Terminal Station".

Major Reshuffling Blends 7 STC Units

A major reshuffling last week of several administrative functions in Special Troops Command brought the WAC Company, the 49th Army Postal Unit, the 58th Ordnance Tire Repair Detachment, 15th Finance Disbursing Section, and Fort Benning's three bands—the 122nd 31st and the Special Troops Band — under the immediate jurisdiction of the First Transportation Battalion.

The changes will be mainly for training purposes and all the units will continue to function as before.

AIRBORNE INDOCTRINATION . . . Before Airborne potentials begin their rugged three weeks of training they undergo a week's program of processing and getting into shape. A group of these men are pictured in Company A ready to start the toughening-up phase of their training. This includes getting clothing and records in order and two hours of PT each day. Other items on the agenda include short haircuts, clean and pressed uniforms, polished brass and boots, a desire to "become one" (the expression used by student meaning "to get their wings") and review and practice of the "Airborne Arts" of military discipline and courtesy. The company commander, Capt. Carper, and 34 cadre feed, billet, and conduct all work for the trainees. The cooks maintain the company policy of serving hot meals for all men reporting, no matter what time of day. Other greeting measures include a band fanfare and beds already made. But then the next morning at 5:30 the trainees are ready to begin the process which after careful screening will qualify them as full-fledged troopers.

Fear Is Normal Reaction, OCs Learn at Graduation

A retired Army brigadier general urged graduating officer candidates at Fort Benning last Thursday never to be surprised when they experience fear.

"The man who says he has never felt fear in battle is either a liar or a fool," declared retired Brig. Gen. Dennis E. McCunniff of Columbus, in his address to newly commissioned second lieutenants.

"Fear is a natural reaction in battle," he said. "You must subdue it, not be surprised by it."

Gen. McCunniff warned the new officers not to allow the men they lead to know they are afraid. "If you telegraph your reactions to your subordinates it will cause a similar reaction in them," he said.

The retired general also described what he considers a real leader. "A real leader must know where he is going and how to get there; he must know his job and how to get it done. It should be a natural ambition to be a real leader of men. Those serving under you despise the man who is not a leader."

He cautioned the new lieutenants about the situations they will face as officers, adding that the solution to many problems will not be found in any book. "Your progress in the Army will be greatly influenced by the decisions you make on your own back."

Honor and distinguished graduate of officer candidate class No. 21, was Second Lt. Frederick T. Burkhardt, Jr., of Kerrville, Texas.

Lt. Burkhardt was commissioned in the Medical Field Service at the Medical Training School, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Courtship Is One's Life-Long Duty

BY JOHNNIE V. M'HENRY
Chaplain (Capt.) U. S. A.

How seldom we express gratitude. We take so much for granted—especially in our married life. Before the sacred vows are spoken we are profuse in our gratitude for the slightest attention. Then, so often, ingratitude enters.

There is no place in married life for the conceit and thoughtlessness of ingratitude. Husband and wife constantly seek the appreciation of the other. We want to be well thought of and we long for words that come from a grateful heart. A marriage that recognizes the simple truth of love and appreciation is a happier one and is marked by a surer and more lasting love.

Expressions of appreciation have a winning power. They are one of the best ways to win a wife. You should try not to continue in marriage without expressing appreciation. Why should they not continue in marriage when the marriage vows have been so firmly a foundation for better understanding of the Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions resulted. First Lt. Bernard A. Mussman, Jewish; First Lt. Phillip G. McConville, Catholic, and Captain Meek, each gave a half-hour talk outlining the beliefs and practices of their faiths and viewed the differences of other religions in comparison with their own. The chaplains answered questions in order to better enable the troopers to understand the major principles of each faith. Left to right on the stage are Chaplains McConville, Meek, and Mussman.

... Sparked by Chaplain (Capt.) Charles A. Meek, a most unusual class was conducted for troopers of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in the Sand Hill theater last Thursday. A discussion program in which chaplains of different faiths attempted to unite more closely and build more firmly a foundation for better understanding of the Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions resulted. First Lt. Bernard A. Mussman, Jewish; First Lt. Phillip G. McConville, Catholic, and Captain Meek, each gave a half-hour talk outlining the beliefs and practices of their faiths and viewed the differences of other religions in comparison with their own. The chaplains answered questions in order to better enable the troopers to understand the major principles of each faith. Left to right on the stage are Chaplains McConville, Meek, and Mussman.

508th Receives Prize For Work on Range
A letter of appreciation last week from Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, third army commander, gave praise to troops of the 508th Airborne for their work in conducting the range in the recent Third Army Small Arms Championship meet. He commended the ROTC role as being "efficient and enthusiastic."

Post Commander Gen. Guy S. Meloy Jr., added his appreciation, saying, "Your efforts and those of your officers and men on providing troop support for the conduct of range firing to the team members assisted materially in the success of the program."

On Record

Opera Offered Music Lovers

The opera, "Tales of Hoffman," by Offenbach, will be presented on the weekly record concert to be held at the Main Post Library Tuesday evening at 7:30.

"Tales of Hoffman" will feature the Sadler Wells chorus and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham.

In spite of his success in composing dramatic music for the last 25 years of his life, Offenbach knew somehow that he was not fulfilling his destiny; he therefore worked feverishly towards the close of his life on "Tales of Hoffman"—the one serious work which he hoped to be remembered by.

He was not to witness the realization of his dream, for he died exactly one year before the initial production of this international favorite.

Tour Is Completed

Brig. Gen. Selim Sun, Turkish Army G-3, ended a three-day tour of The Infantry School yesterday. Upon arrival from The Army headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga.

His agenda included a visit to the school's Operations Office and tour of the recuitless rifle and heavy mortar training areas. He saw demonstrations of a machine gun platoon in an attack and witnessed pioneer techniques and flame thrower and rocket launcher problems.

WHERE'S THE PANDA BEAR? ... That seems to be the chief question occupying these pre-Halloween 'pranksters' as they model the costumes they intend to wear Saturday night at Fort Benning's annual carnival of thrills and fun at Gowdy Field. At left, above, pretty Little Bo-Peep is looking for him somewhere at her right, while in the center a pirate scans the landscape in another direction. A daytime witch also joins in the search.' Bo-Peep is Bonnie Jean Rodman, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Frazier W. Rodman; the pirate is John S. Foster, son of Lt. and Mrs. Julian Foster; the witch is Janie Kinkor, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert C. Kinkor; and the Panda Bear, shown on Page 1, is little William D. Foster, brother of John S.

FECOM Calls STC Captain

Special Troops Command's "best the best" officer is on his way again. Capt. William M. Stone, Jr., STAC's assistant S-3, has been ordered to report to Camp Stone, California, for transfer to FECOM. Captain Stone was one of those "lucky" enough to join the service personnel that participated in the Army's Arctic indoctrination course at Big Delta, Alaska, beating part of last July and August's heat. Captain Stone has been assigned to Headquarters, Special Troops Command, since August 1952. Before that he attended the advanced officers' course on the post and for a short time served as commanding officer of the 32d Transportation Company. He served in France and Germany during World War II and spent more than a year in the Far East.

Sgt. Standland Cited As Top Food Student

Carnival to Highlight Post Halloween Fun, Festivities

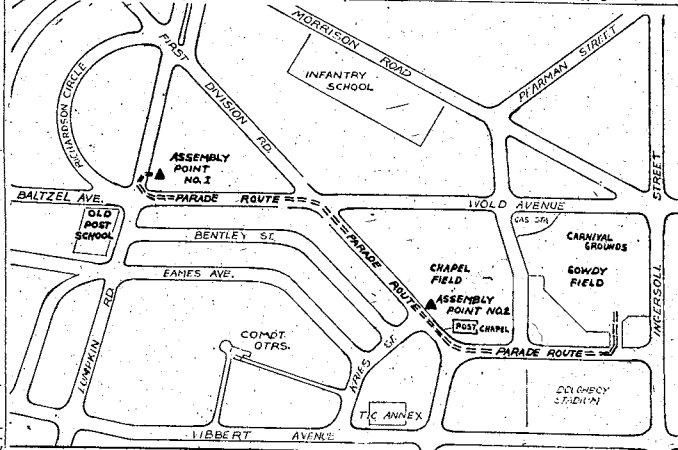

(Continued From Page 1) Children who meet at Faith School will join the marchers. Those meeting at Faith School will be taken to Chapel Field by bus. Thirty-eight booths and several field attractions operated by post units are expected to fill the night with fun. "Transactions" will be handled in play money, which went on sale last week and which will be sold during the carnival also. One of the carnival's big attractions will be a junior jump tower constructed by the 56th Airborne Regimental Combat Team. A new system of operation prom-ised to allow all children to "hit the air" during the evening. Other feature attractions include Idle Hour Park in Xenix City and a jeep-merry-go-round operat-

A GRADUAL JOY, by Alma Roubens, (Houghton Mifflin, 199 pages). Parents will bake and provide their favorite cakes to be sold by the PTA's room-mothers organization. Some of the bigger prizes will include boy's and girl's bicycles, a tricycle, an erector set, a 25 pound turkey and a ham. Boy Scouts and Explorer Scouts will act as guides, assist in the last kiddie department, and aid in the operation of the junior jump tower. The children's play area will be operated by Girl Scouts. Cold drinks, hot drinks, donuts, hot dogs, popcorn and peanuts may be had at refreshment stands.

THE SCRIBNER TREASURY, 22 Classic Tales, (Scribner, 689 pages). Famous old favorites like Stockton's "The Lady and the Tiger," "The Perfect Tribute," by Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, Robert Herrick's "Master of the Inn," and such new favorites as Ring Lardner's "Haircut" and John Galsworthy's "The Apple Tree."

CAVES OF ADVENTURE, by Haroon Tazieff, (Harper, 222 pages). As exciting as mountain climbing, and even more terrifying, is the exploration of tunnels and caves far under the earth's surface. The central event in this book is the discovery of a great cave in the Pyrenees and the strain and suspense and agony spent in mapping it.

HALLOWEEN COSTUME PARADE ROUTE ... All children who are attending the costume judging in the old post school will assemble at Point No. 1 on the corner of Baitzel Ave. and Lumpkin Rd. All children who are attending the costume judging at Faith School will assemble at Point No. 2. The parade will start at Assembly Point 1 and proceed down Baitzel to First Division Road. At this point the parade will turn right and follow First Division Road to the post chapel. As the second of the two bands pass Assembly Point 2 children waiting there will fall in behind the band and join the parade. As the head of the parade reaches the first street past the post chapel the parade will turn left and proceed to Gowdy Field. Upon entering Gowdy Field the parade will turn right and proceed once around the field and then be dismissed.

WANT A HALLOWEEN RIDE? ... This '41st Rocket' is reputed to have the power to ride higher than a witch's broom come Halloween, and all kids who want to try it out are invited by M-Sgt. Thomas Jones to be on hand at Gowdy Field for the fun festival.

AND WHOM HAVE WE HERE? ... None other than the new Red Devil Commander, Capt. Glen J. McGowan, pinning pre-jump wings on Masters Jorge, Herman, and Xavier Warner—sons of Sgt. Arthur J. Warner of the 498th Airborne—then they may qualify 'officially' to jump from the mock tower Saturday evening. Sharp? Yes—er—ee! (Buck up, there, Master J.)

Group Ends Chemical, Atomic Training

A group of Fort Benning officers and enlisted men have completed a series of tests designed to determine their ability to solve chemical and atomic warfare problems.

Administered by a team from the Third Army's Chemical Section, the tests were part of a continuous program to insure top-level training in chemical and atomic warfare.

The tests were given for five days to five groups of officers and enlisted men.

In the enlisted men's phase, groups of 20 soldiers were given equipment with which to solve 14 practical chemical and radiological problems. An observer was assigned to every four men to note and evaluate every move made by each soldier as he attempted to solve the problems.

In the officers' phase, company commanders and their staffs were given oral problems on chemical and radiological warfare. After a limited amount of time for a conference, the officers were required to explain the steps they would take to counteract the effects of chemical and atomic warfare problems.

The inspecting team consisted of Capt. G. W. Connel, Jr., chief of the Chemical Section's Radio Training Division; Lt. E. A. Stovall of the Supply and Maintenance Division and Cpl. R. M. Becknell. The team also will conduct similar tests at other Third Army installations.

Crisis 'Averted' In 1st SR As Japanese Get More Grain

Ever think that an international crisis could take place over a sack of rice? Well, one almost did. But the First Student Regiment kept supplies and grocers.

Napoleon said, "An army travels on its stomach," and any soldier in the First Student Regiment who cannot appreciate the very difficult tasks being performed by the ration-breakdown point is usually acting as an accountant, book-keeper, and grocer.

Japanese officers of the 24th Company complained to Lt. Robert C. Dean, ration-breakdown officer, that the food they had been getting was not enough to satisfy rigorous training. What they wanted was rice. Plenty of it!

Lt. Dean studied the problem and made his decision. From him on 100 lbs. of rice was to be delivered weekly to 30th Company. His order was executed and everyone was satisfied.

This is but one of many problems that confront the men at the ration-breakdown point, the largest on post.

Few people realize the great amount of hard work that goes into feeding the thousands of troops quartered at Fort Benning. The work extends from the mess halls through ration-breakdown, TIC commissary warehouses, Third Army bayers, and clear to the fields and pastures of the nation that yield the finest in fruits, vegetables, and meats.

The First Student Regiment ration-breakdown point is in charge of supplying to the individual companies enough food for the 320,000 meals they serve monthly. And that's quite a job. Moreover,

$1 Million a Month Clerk Pays Out Filthy Lucre

How would you like to "give away" a million dollars a month? Well, add as it seems, Col. Eugene C. Holly has been "doing" that since last May. It's his job and he likes it.

Holly is the chief cashier for the 15th Finance Disbursing Section, Special Troops Command. And he spends his working day giving away money.

Fifteenth Finance is the disbursing agent for the First Student Regiment and the Airborne School. It's staff is responsible for providing the regular monthly pay for the students and cadre of both groups along with the travel payments for arriving and departing students.

Although Holly admits that each payday and the week following are his busiest, he claims he is also kept fairly active giving the government's money away during the rest of the month too.

The corporal says that he gets all of his money, and there is a lot of it, from the Main Post Finance Office. It arrives in advance of each big payment day under heavy Military Police guard and with the utmost security. Even the money itself doesn't know it's coming.

Besides paying individuals "over the counter," Holly provides Class "A" agents from each unit in the First SR and Airborne School with the regular monthly payrolls of the enlisted men in their units. These officers, in turn, pass the "long green" into the hands of the rightful owners.

After watching little besides money pass through his fingers for the past six months, Holly has become firmly convinced that the best policy is to continue to let it pass through his fingers and not worry about a cent more than his rightful pay. But he can't even do that.

Holly doesn't get to pay himself his commanding officer, Capt. Harold Saul, pays the corporals, who are generally attending one of the advanced infantry courses on the Post. High-ranking officers from foreign countries arrive around the post of military personnel that step up to his window, he says.

As for travel pay, he says the highest amount he has ever paid anyone is $18. And he has been paying that amount on a number of occasions recently. It is the mileage rate to Camp Stoneman, Calif.

Corporal Wins Commendation

The superior condition of the post's salute guns merited a letter of commendation for Cpl. Clyde Saunders of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 506th Airborne recently.

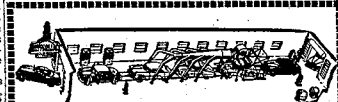

Inspected by ordnance personnel, the salute guns were found to be in first-class condition for the first time in five years of ordnance inspecting, according to Col. Fraser W. Rodman, ordnance officer.

Col. Rodman added, "You are to be commended for the presence, initiative, and effort demonstrated in raising the maintenance level of these guns to this standard, particularly inasmuch as such maintenance was unsatisfactory prior to the time you were given the responsibility."

Saunders is presently assigned as armorer of headquarters company and earned a second superior last week for his arms room during the annual TIC command inspection of the 506th.

Wave Wins In Final Minute

Freeman Scores Two TDs; Larson Boots Field Goal

SUNDAY'S HERO . . . Bob Larson (85) Green Wave back, eludes a CTC tackler and carries the ball down to the Commander 35 yard line where Bobby Moorhead (27) made the tackle. Larson later kicked a game-winning field goal from the 25 yard line with 11 seconds remaining.

Rams, 508th Renew Rivalry In 'Blue Chip' Clash Sunday

One of the hottest rivalries existed in Infantry Center football will flare once this Sunday in Doughty Stadium when 508th ARCT and the Brigade PMG Rams meet head on in a game that could go a long way toward determining the 1953 champion.

Kickoff is at 2 p.m., and an admission of 25 cents per person will go toward defraying costs for a football banquet to be held after the game.

A fair-sized feud developed from last year's contests, both of which were won by the Rams. Heated words were exchanged following the first game, but an alert band director saved the day by playing the Star Spangled Banner. Several players from both sides are still angry that recall 1952 events clearly.

This year's clash can be rated no better than a toss up. The Rams probably would have been

It's a long line that has no turning back. CTC's Green Wave, beaten in every start this season, finally came to the turning point in their performance of defeat, and slipped past CTC in a score which ended them all, 16-13.

Halfback Robert Larson provided the winning margin with only 11 seconds left to play when he scored a high, hurried, wobbling placement that sneaked over the crossbar from 25 yards out with the three points that meant the ball game.

Earlier, fate had frowned on the STC bid for victory when Dave Stewart's conversion attempt, following the second Greenie score, had smacked into the upright, the goal post and bounded back into the end zone.

There were heroes by the droves for the Rams. Larson, of course, and Stewart and Donnie Burns all played vital roles. Ed Cole's punting was superb, and Ram field general, the vital man—handling and play selection, and he is an accomplished passer, but is not too well versed in operating the ground game.

Monday is a fine runner, smart, and has probably lost any overconfidence they may have had. The Red Devils have shown a well-balanced offense and a strong defense. Possibly, they have a shade better passing attack than the Rams, who depend on the overall striking power of the split T to move the ball.

Against the Airborne array, probably be decided by whether or not 508th can stop the Ram option play around end. CTC managed to do so, forcing the Rams to use the line and pass play, which proved insufficient. If the Devils duplicate this, and give Briggs passing another shot test, the outcome is anybody's guess.

On the strength of Bobby Moorhead and Don Lucas at quarterback, the Red Devils will be

Red Devils Win To Maintain Perfect Slate

508th's rowdy Red Devils, pointing for their clash with the Brigade Rams this Sunday, checked up their fifth straight win, which will keep the Camp Rucker's 16th Infantry Regiment Fickertals, 20-7. The game was played under the lights at Camp Rucker's stadium last Saturday night.

The Red Devils got off to an early lead as Don Lucas winged a pass to Pete Stewart for a touchdown, pass and run covering 68 yards. The score came with only five minutes elapsed in the first quarter.

The Fickertals fought back with a scoring aerial of their own line in the second period, and added the extra point to lead 7-6. 508th took the Flick kickoff and drove to the Rucker eleven and 15 yards line where the half-time whistle caught them.

The Flicks kicked off to open second half proceedings, and the Red Devils promptly singled a sustained drive that culminated in Chuck Stewart's sprint around right end to put 508th back into the lead. Bill Stevens converted.

The score remained unaltered until late in the fourth period, when fullback Clayton Mast blasted over for the third and final 508th touchdown with only four minutes to play. Stevens again converted.

The Red Devils picked off a deep pass and returned it to the eight yard line, but once again were "whistle-bitten" and the game ended before they could muster another score.

Brooklyn's Jackie O'Brien To Highlight Next Pro Card

Jackie O'Brien, the fighting Irishman, has earned a second shot at feature billing at Fort Benning's Briant Wells Field House, 8 p.m. Tuesday.

O'Brien surprised and pleased local fight fans with a 10-round unanimous decision over highly regarded New Orleans welterweight Mel Bartholomew in the first professional fight of the season at the Infantry Center, Oct. 23.

The Brooklyn-born sharp shooter will be making a return engagement, by popular demand, at a second fight with O'Brien, which will be held at Fort Benning for the first time at Camp Rucker.

At press time an opponent for O'Brien had not been officially named, but it was reported that several top-flight welters were being considered for the other spot in the 11:20 general admission.

CAN'T CATCH ME . . . Donald Burns (70) cuts away from CTC's Bill Groce (80) while the other player, who was the president and secretary of the club, was also present. The game was held at the Briant Wells Field House, 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Service Club 2 Will Present Football Films

Football fans take note: A real treat is scheduled for Friday at 8 p.m. out at Service Club 2 in Sand Hill. Movies of the Notre Dame-Georgia Tech game played last Saturday will be shown from 8 to 10 p.m.

Every play will be shown, with every huddle and time out omitted. Also featured will be the game of the Minnesota-Michigan game, played last Saturday, and a film of the Notre Dame Oklahoma game, which was played Sept. 25.

The films are being shown here through the courtesy of WPAK-TV and local Columbia merchants. Football movies will be made at Camp Rucker, 8 p.m. Tuesday, 8 p.m. Wednesday, and 8 p.m. Thursday, 8 p.m. Friday.

Referees will be made at Camp Rucker, 8 p.m. Tuesday, 8 p.m. Wednesday, and 8 p.m. Thursday, 8 p.m. Friday. Referees will be made at Camp Rucker, 8 p.m. Tuesday, 8 p.m. Wednesday, and 8 p.m. Thursday, 8 p.m. Friday.

With the big second hand on its first winding sweep the Wave scattered back into formation, following a huddle. Larson took two yards and placed his toe into the ball at the 25. It was gone.

Traveling nearly straight up the end, while 6,000 fans and 22 players watched adroitly, the ball skimmed over the crossbar with not more than six inches to spare, and the Greenies were off to the moon. Moorhead ran the kickoff back

A football, so state the official rules, is an "oblate, leather spheroid" that radiates harmless sounding phrase describes one of the most obsolete, malodorous, and unattractive articles to be found anywhere. Currently, it is hard to imagine a more unappreciated sport than King Football, and this could be why His Majesty has enjoyed so long and prosperous a reign. You never know which way an oblate, leather spheroid is likely to bounce.

The current season still has roughly half to leave to run, but already that perfidious pigskin has taken some weird hops. Alabama's Crimson Tide was one of the first to realize this. Winners by an avalanche in the last Orange Bowl game, this was not the only emboldened sports writer as his pre-season choice for national champion. Dressing of glory, Alabama opened its season against an obscure little school known as Mississippi Southern. In some quarters, Alabama was heralded rather sharply for scheduling such an obvious "breastier."

A crestfallen, soundly whipped Alabama Crimson Tide slunk home from the Southern game, visions of conquest gone with the wind of a 19-26 defeat. The Tide has yet to regain its erstwhile national championship, while Southern was as a springboard to a ranking in the country's top 20 teams.

Mighty Michigan State, perennial rulers of the Midwest, saw their 28 game unbeaten streak snapped by Brian beaten Purdue. The same Saturday, neighboring Michigan was kicked right in the middle of their fifth national ranking by Minnesota, two touchdowns underdog. A much-battered Penn team put the first blemish on Navy's record, 9-4, and Villanova, the same Saturday, was the "power of the East," had to wait till mid-October for their first victory.

To followers of Infantry Center football, though, none of the above was a bit more amazing than the recent trouncing the School Brigade Rams absorbed from what was thought to be an ordinary CTC team. The Rams were led by a pair of Laymen and experts alike had acclaimed the Rams to be invincible, and the judgment seemed to be sound. The Rams had that indefinable quality known as class, and they had it in spades.

Minutes later, following a bad Wave punt, CTC took over on the STC 31 yard line. They moved the ball to the 13, but on third down, Ed Crook was swarmed for an 11 yard setback. Hank Torrance then threw to center, and saw the ball plunk against the upright and bound back harmlessly.

Neither team was satisfied with a tie. CTC took the ensuing kickoff and soon was knocking at the door. Steward stopped this drive by intercepting a pass on his own one-yard line, but he was unable to escape being thrown in the Wave end zone for a disastrous safety, fought back to the six by the other side.

Minutes later, following a bad Wave punt, CTC took over on the STC 31 yard line. They moved the ball to the 13, but on third down, Ed Crook was swarmed for an 11 yard setback. Hank Torrance then threw to center, and saw the ball plunk against the upright and bound back harmlessly.

Exactly one week later it was CTC's turn to feel the pang of an upset. STC's Green Wave captured a heady field goal in the last 11 seconds to send them lumbering from the parade with a respectable 19-13. It was, naturally, STC's first victory of the year.

The oblate, leather spheroid had taken another unorthodox bounce. Being Boxing Briefs. . . At a boxing meeting held recently to plan the schedule for the Columbia Boys Club benefit matches Nov. 9, Benning boxing coaches had exhausted the supply of available talent, and were still one bout short of a complete card. While various plans were being bandied about, a compact, capable youngster walked in, who was immediately recognized as Chico Velaz, currently sixth ranking pro welterweight and now stationed here.

The predicament was explained, and Velaz readily agreed to boxing a five round exhibition with Albert Farvel, when he was told that the match would be for the benefit of the club. Velaz was extremely commendable both in Velaz and Farvel, who each have been scheduled for Madison Square Garden barely a week later. Farvel, by the way, will be making his professional debut in this Garden appearance under the name of Bobby Lopez.

Gordon Van Loo, popular light middleweight champ, has been appearing recently on amateur rings in Mobile. The matches there are staged by local businessmen and the proceeds go toward purchasing playground equipment for underprivileged children. Van Loo has fought and won all six of his matches, five by the knockout route, and is said to be running out of competition.

A confident looking young man came into the Bayonet arena on Saturday afternoon, announced that he was president and secretary of the club, was also present. The game was held at the Briant Wells Field House, 8 p.m. Tuesday.

SRO Crowd Watches Van Loo, Elvis Win Main Fights

A standing room only crowd jammed Briant Wells Field House last Thursday night to witness a running side bout card that easily topped previous boxing nights this season for sheer crowd-pleasing performance. Each match was a hard fought, evenly matched and well paced to decisions as not a genuine knockout was registered.

When the resin dust had settled the evening, School Brigade fans were the least bit disappointed. Margill had slunk to a precarious one point. Briggs was tied up with only a single win, running little to nine, while a fast-closing CTC squad snatched three matches early in the evening.

Climaxing the fine night's fighting were the winning efforts of two 1953 post champions. Elvis Woodley and Gordon Van Loo. Both boys ran into some stiff competition, but Woodley was able to pull out unexpectedly close decision.

Matthews in particular ran into a two-fisted buzzaw, Richard Woodley, who represented the Woodley, All - EUCOM featherweight couple of seasons ago who changed Woodley's reputation with his southpaw counter-punching, but the free-wheeling offensive, and took the three-piled-up ex-cum gratia going away.

Gordon Van Loo, who was in the shape yet, had several anxious moments with long-armed Norman Salviato, who represented the CTC. However Tyndell's game with CTC seems to have produced varying effects. The Commanders played Tyndell on Oct. 3, and brought back a 2-1 victory. Bobby Moorhead scored on a five yard back, and Bruce Hickey, and both times came off second best.

The Red Devils with 1953 ARCT met them recently, and emerged with a reasonably close 18-11 win. However Tyndell's game with CTC seems to have produced varying effects. # Perfect Score By Artym Leads CTC Pistol Match

McSt. John Artym, of Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, provided the highlight of the day at the recent Combat Training Command pistol matches held at Camp Rucker. Firing rapid fire from the fifteen yard range, Artym put every round into the bull's eye for a perfect 100 score.

Representing all units of the CTC, 60 shooters took part in the pistol match held at the fill range to determine the best pistol shots in Infantry and individual firing in team and individual firing. Top honors for individual firing went to Capt. Verlen Lloyd, Second Battalion, 20th Infantry. McSt. Artym, placed second. Capt. Charles J. Shoemaker, Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, placed fourth and the fifth place went to Capt. Shoemaker, Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, CTC.

11th OC Hoopsters Rout 10th Company

The 11th OC basketball team beat 10th OC's hoopsters in a rematch last week, 68-41. Jim Buchanan, forward, was the star. He scored 18 points and made 10 of 15 shots. The team was coached by Capt. Shoemaker, Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, CTC.

Rejuvenated Wave Departs For Cherry Point Contest

Fort Benning's Green Wave, featuring former collegiate stars and soldier razzle-dazzle, will clash with the Cherry Point, N. C., Marines Friday evening in the annual Cooley Memorial football game in West Palm Beach, Fla. The Fort Benning gridiron will be appearing at the invitation of the West Palm Beach Rotary Club which sponsors the event. Proceeds will be used towards completion of Cooley Memorial Stadium, located on the West Palm Beach High School campus.

A BIRD IN HAND . . . But not for long. Lt. David Shanard, Fish and Game Warden, releases a prize turkey that will be the prime target of all association members in the coming Turkey Hunt. The prize for catching the bird is $15.

Representing Fort Benning's Special Troops Command, Infantry School Detachment, Army F 1 e 1 g Force Testing Road No. 3 and Lawson Air Force Base, the Green Wave has consistently improved during post-intramural league play.

Three flashy collections form the basis of a backfield that can operate with equal facility out of the T, the single-wing and the spread formation. Dave Steward, 185-pound former University of South Carolina gridster, handles most of the quarterbacking with the T. Steward switches off with Doc Burns, ex-Maryland State speedster, whom Coach Vernon Lyons describes as "a real smoothie." A good passer, an effective punter and a tricky runner, he also works efficiently from both the halfback and quarterback posts.

Powerful Chet Freeman, ex-Louisiana State star, takes most of the running assignments for the Green Wave. A hard-driving runner and vicious tackler, Freeman is also a beacon on pass defense.

side stockholder of the Fearless Forecasting Agency, and that he had perfected a new slide rule which enabled him to predict results of football games without error. He gave his name as Leon the Peon, and promised to drop around weekly with his prophecies. Leon was even gracious enough to give us a few tips for games of Oct. 31, which we now pass on to you. Leon says:

Baylor over TCU, Auburn over Florida, Georgia over Alabama, Missouri over Indiana, LSU over Ole Miss, Maryland over South Carolina, Notre Dame over Navy, Tennessee over North Carolina, Ohio State over Northwestern, Iowa over Kentucky, Texas over SMU, Army over Tulane, UCLA over California, Georgia Tech over Vanderbilt, Duke over Virginia, Oklahoma over Kansas State, Michigan over Penn, Michigan State over Oregon State, Princeton over Brown, and Leon's Special for the Week: Platteville State over Wartburg.

Leon left before we had a chance to ask him if his infallible spiritist knows that a football is an oblate, leather spheroid.

$15 Turkey Roams Fields As Hunters Eye Opening

A resounding "nobble" erupted from the throat of the captive bird. It was immediately answered by several of his wild brothers deep in the forest. Then, amidst a flapping of wings, the bird was set free and flew into the woods.

Thus the Fish and Game Maintenance Association set the wheels in motion for one of the biggest Turkey Hunts in recent years. The season opens Nov. 20 but right now a large turkey, which was brought from a distant county in Alabama, is roaming the fields, unaware that the prime target of all association members. This prize gobble has a numbered metal band on each leg, the presentation of which at the association office, will make the hunter his richer.

This is no common turkey. He was selected for size and breeding. He's a smart bird—a good challenge for any hunter. The man who bags him will have really earned not only the prize but the admiration he will receive.

The hunt is open to all Fish and Game Maintenance Association members. You'll want to join right away and be ready for the Turkey Hunt. Inquiries concerning membership can be made at the office late in reach. Van Loo had to lunge past Salavato's flailing arms in an effort to get inside and do any damage. The defending Third Army title-holder was able to reach his opponent only by switching from orthodox to left-hander and back again often enough to take the decision.

Probably the most unpopular verdict of the night was rendered in the light water scrap between Freddie's Fred Benton and Manuel Medeiros of CTC. Though Medeiros landed harder blows and more of them, his rather flashy style plus some barely legitimate tactics were not too well received by the audience, who booted the decision roundly.

For STC, it was a case of playing catch-up all day. CTC took the opening kick off, and went 56 yards to score in 9 plays. Moorhead worked free in the end zone to snare a 16 yard fourth down aerial from Tomsic for the marker.

STC came back in the second period to count their second touchdown of the season on Freeman's pass interception and run. Steward added the conversion, and the score stood 7-6 at halftime.

The Commanders took the second half kickoff, and once again scored without giving up the ball. Hank Tomsic contributed a vital 56 yard sprint on a booting and CTC had a pass ruled complete on interference to keep this march alive. Nearing the goal STC's defense stiffened, and was in a fair way of holding when Donato tossed Tomsic a 12-yard loss back to the 14 yard line on another booting. However, on this play the Wave was penalized to their one-yard line for roughing, and on fourth down Bill Atkinson passed to Conrad Deskins for six points. Deskins converted and CTC led 13-7. Most fans wrote off the Green Wave chances here, for the white-jerseyed STC team hadn't generated a touchdown by its own offense all season. The game saw-sawed back and forth until Freeman and Burns hooked up on their 60 yard pass play to break things wide open, and set the stage for an ending that was ripped right out of the old Frank Merriwell stories.

The presentation was made by Col. Mack M. Green of Columbia, Tenn., Infantry Center surplus, at a retreat review of Provisional Medical Group which was conducted entirely by senior non-commissioned officers.

Cpl. Douglas, a member of the 913th Medical Ambulance Company, was cited for "meritorious service" between Sept. 11, 1950, and June 5, 1953, while a member of the 31st Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division, in Korea.

Payday Warning Negligence Blamed For Most Post Thefts

Negligence is the chief cause of most recent cases, according to Col. M. J. Fitzgerald post provost marshal.
 The colonel revealed that there have been numerous cases of thefts this year which could have been prevented by a little more care.
 "A few easy precautions by soldiers will prevent the loss of personal possessions," the colonel said. "A locked footlocker or wall locker is the first step in the safe-keeping of personal property. Record the serial numbers of cameras, electric razors, automobile tires and others should be kept," the colonel advised.

Unit Brings 200 to Lawson
 Assignment of the Third Army Port Operations Squadron to Lawson Air Force Base has been announced by Col. Troy W. Crawford, commander, 464th Troop Carrier Wing.
 The serial port squadron is bringing approximately 200 additional men to Lawson. The organization is transferring here from Altus AFB, Okla.
 The unit is commanded by Capt. H. W. Bobanorn of St. Louis, Mo. Mission of the unit is the loading, unloading and unloading of cargo on troop carrier aircraft. The squadron is specialized in such operations.

Skate Record Set By Professional Turned Soldier
 Well, now we've heard everything. There's a candidate in 11th OC Company, First Officer Candidate Regiment, named Tommy Reay who holds the U.S. long distance roller skating record.
 He skated from Wichita, Kansas to Cleveland, Ohio, a 600 mile roller skating record.
 Reay was going to Cleveland to compete in the amateur skating championships in 1951 when he thought up the stunt. The route was mapped out by the AAA and the record verified by the Roller Skating rink Operators Association. During the trip, an automobile followed Reay at 6 to 8 miles per hour.
 Soon after, Reay turned professional. He has taught figure skating and has played roller hockey. When asked about roller derbies, he said, "They help and roller skating before the public, but they give the wrong impression. Roller skating isn't only a rough and tumble sport. There's a lot of beauty and grace in it."
 The ice skating on the Cardette's mind is another "hate" skating. Reay would like to skate from New York to Hollywood.

Nowadays, when a man gives his seat to a woman on a bus it usually just means he's getting off.

From the annual Canadian shoe and leather fair held recently in Montreal comes the report that women's feet are getting bigger, increasing from an average size 4 1/2 to a present-day average of 7 1/2. Of course, they have bigger shoes to go with that they've entered Public life.

First to Reach Crest

Old Baldy Veteran Is Back in Harness

The first American fighting man to reach the crest of Old Baldy, in Korea, OC Richard F. Carvell of 22nd OC Company, First Officer Candidate Regiment, is back at Fort Benning for the third time.

Carvell entered the service as a career man in June 1948, and was sent to Ft. Knox, Ky., for basic training. He volunteered for Airborne training and was sent to Benning. While stationed with the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, the OC volunteered for Ranger training and returned to Benning.

With the continued action in Korea, Carvell found himself with the First Ranger Company in the Wujin area. Wounded in action, he later joined the 18th Airborne RCT and the First Cavalry Division.

Just prior to the fight for "Old Baldy," Carvell found himself with the Third platoon of Fox Co., 38th Inf. Regt. He was the first man of the United Nations forces to reach the top of the now famous hill.

When rotated and discharged this year, Sfc. Carvell reenlisted for OCS. He has this to say about the course: "The Weapons training is wonderful and, I feel, the most important part of the course. A platoon leader must often teach his men the use of weapons, either because they have not had specialized training or are not proficient in their use. Often this must be done under combat conditions when you have to improvise things like a KD range. I've used known enemy positions for the purpose."

Upon completion of the course, Carvell will be commissioned in the Infantry and hopes to return to the Airborne Co., 38th Inf. Regt. He wears the Combat Infantryman Badge, Bronze Star with V Device, Purple Heart with Cluster, Senior Parachutist Badge and the Glider Badge.

Sekerah Is Top Non-Com Grad

M.Sgt. George M. Sekerah of Cleveland, Ohio, was named honor student at graduation exercises Saturday morning for Fort Benning's second advanced leaders course.

A platoon sergeant in Company C, 506th Airborne, Sgt. Sekerah earned 800 out of a possible 1,000 points in the course for non-commissioned officers.

The third course will begin Nov. 3. Instruction is under the supervision of the 506th.

Col. William J. McConnell of Shreveport, La., Infantry Center G-1, was guest speaker at the graduation. He told the NCOs that knowledge of their job, knowledge of their men, and knowledge of themselves was essential to good leadership.

"A good leader will look ahead for trouble and plan for emergencies," he said.

Army Bares Atrocity Facts

Post to Hail Armistice Day On Wednesday

Armistice day has been declared a post-wide holiday by Major Gen. G. S. Meley, Jr., Infantry Center commander.

All duties except those essential to maintenance of the military situation of each unit will be suspended.

On Nov. 11, in memory of those who gave their lives in service of their country, the U. S. flag will fly at half staff from reveille until 11 a.m.

Climaxing the Armistice Day observance in front of The Infantry School will be the firing of a three-round volley by a battery from the 41st Field Artillery Battalion, after which the flag will be raised to full staff and the National Anthem played.

As an additional mark of respect to the nation's heroic dead, all traffic will stop and all military personnel out-of-doors will stand at attention during the firing of the salute and the playing of the National Anthem.

SUGGESTED SPECIALIST INSIGNIA - Here are the six possible designs which have been forwarded by the Department of the Army for the new enlisted specialist grades. Each is for the E-7 grade which will be known as senior specialist. The designs now are being field tested to determine which appeals most to Army field troops. Grades E-8 through E-9 will be indicated by the same type insignia except there will be fewer bars at the top of the design. The final decision will be made in about six weeks.

Here, Infantryman, Is Why You're In Arms

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Imagine that you are a prisoner of war in Communist hands. Can you expect simply to be confined until the end of the war?

Not you—the Communists plan to use you. They want to force you to work in their factories to dominate the world. Once you're captured, you have no right to be loyal to your country—according to them.

You're going to be lectured and brain washed. Suppose you refuse to accept Communist ideals—you can expect to be sentenced to corrective education. It's different from the education you've had before. You'll undergo hard labor and torture and you may be murdered.

If You Survive—Then, if you survive corrective education, you'll find yourself taking political training again. The Communists will try every possible approach to force you to be "reeducated."

You'll undergo this treatment if you manage to stay alive long enough to reach the prison camps. The well planned enemy scheme is fully expressed by thousands of military statements by Americans and South Koreans who have been Communist prisoners and by North Koreans who were witnesses or captors. The Department of the Army has just released these statements to prove charges of Communist war crimes.

Even as you near the prisoner exchange point the enemy will threaten you to force your cooperation when you return home. You can expect to be indoctrinated with Communist ideas from the time you're captured until you come back—if you come back.

Geneva Convention On—But aren't you protected by the Geneva Convention? Not in Communist hands!

All the humanitarian principles for treatment of prisoners under the Convention have been violated consistently by the Communists, the war crimes statements show.

In Korea prisoners of the Communists died by the thousands from sheer brutality, malnutrition, lack of medical care, dysentery, pneumonia and freezing. During the marches to prison camps many sick and wounded prisoners were taken from the columns by guards in most cases shot when they soon here. Few of them were ever again seen alive.

In other cases the Communist

She's Queen Of 12 OC Co.

Miss Jean Stuchell of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been selected as the sweetheart of 12th OC Company, First Officer Candidates Regiment.

The 20-year-old green-eyed strawberry blond is the spunky sweetheart of Officer Candidate Jack N. Leone. The two plan to be married this month.

Miss Stuchell said, "I'm flattered to say the least," when told of her choice. Leone met Miss Stuchell when they worked in the same store together in Pittsburgh in 1951.

198th FA Way Out Front

CTC Gives Chest $5360.69

One unit of the Combat Training Command went all out in the recent Community Chest Drive by nearly doubling its monetary goal.

The 198th Field Artillery Battalion, with attached units—the 880th Scoutlight platoon and 27th AAA Battery—sawared over its quota by 80 per cent. Money raising ideas conceived and executed by the men spurred the drive to a successful conclusion, Major Walter G. Pitman, executive officer, said.

Cash amounts turned in to CTC Drive Chairman Lt. Col. Richard J. Jones, showed almost $1,000, with the drive quota being $360 for the 198th.

Other units reaching 100 per cent of quota were CTC Headquarters Detachment, Second Battalion, 20th

Infantry, 41st Field Artillery Battalion, 73rd Tank Battalion, 76th Engineer Battalion, and the 3697 Ordnance Company. As a whole CTC fell short of reaching 100 per cent participation by a mere one and one-half per cent.

The grand total contributed by CTC was $3360.69.

Don't Hold It

Mid-Nov. Deadline Set For Overseas Xmas Mail

The period Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, has again been designated for the acceptance of Christmas parcels for members of the Armed Forces serving outside the continental United States with the concurrence of the several departments of the National Military Establishment.

It is expected that many Christmas parcels will be sent out of the country, and the following instructions have been issued with the view of assuring delivery of the gift parcels on time and in good condition. Military personnel are supplied with food by the armed services, and parcels containing foodstuffs subject to spoilage in transit are not to be sent overseas destination unit for use.

Air parcel post intended for personnel of the armed forces serving overseas or in naval vessels should be mailed not later than Nov. 25. The movement of air parcel post by air from the ports to overseas areas during the overseas Christmas mailing period will be contingent upon the military requirements. When packages are presented for mailing by air parcel post the Post Office Department can guarantee air transportation to the ports of embarkation. Air parcel post, other than official mail, is limited in size to 36 inches in length and girth combined and a pounds in weight.

Parcels mailed through the regular surface mails prior to November 15 will reach their destinations before Christmas. However, no assurance can be given that surface parcels mailed after Nov. 15, or air parcel post mailed after Nov. 25, will be delivered in time for Christmas. Mailing of parcels should not be delayed until December on the assumption that timely delivery will be assured through the use of air service.

Army to Release 1100 Reserves

WASHINGTON (APPS)— Approximately 1,100 Army Reserve officers in various grades will be notified during the first two weeks of November of their release from active duty.

This step is part of the current program to meet reduced strength ceilings. This group is in addition to about 2000 other commissioned Army Reservists who were notified of their projected release earlier this month.

Because of the large number of Reserve officers who have voluntarily requested early release, it is expected that no additional involuntary releases will be necessary unless further strength reductions are imposed on the Army.

In line with Army policy officers being released will receive at least three months prior notice before being separated.

HEATERS SUBVEYED

Two Third Army officials were here this week to survey heating family quarters, troop housing, and the U. S. Army Hospital. They are Emmett J. Gelett and Willard K. Andrews, both of the Third Army Engineer Section.

Reds Won't Collapse, Eddy Warns

It would be a grave mistake for the American public to think there will be a collapse of the Soviet Union in the near future, retired Lt. Gen. M. S. Eddy told a class of graduating officers last week.

The former commander of the U. S. Army in Europe at graduation exercises for The Infantry School's associate advanced class No. 1, spoke from personal experience as he told his audience that:

"I have seen five field forces of the Russian Army. I know they are there, and they train long and hard. As long as the Russian military forces continue to do the bidding of their present political leaders, World War III is a danger."

The retired general, now in business in Columbus, declared that the U. S. policy should be one which makes a Communist success on the battlefield doubtful to Russian leaders.

Advocates Strong Policy
Believing that the Russians are far from wanting world peace, Gen. Eddy advocated a strong military, economic and industrial policy. "Now is no time to reduce our forces in cut taxes," he pointed out to the 155 graduating officers.

There have been rumors of very serious breaks behind the Iron Curtain," he said, "but it would be a great mistake for American people to draw any conclusion from these rumors. It is our duty to be prepared to think of a Russian collapse in the near future."

Drawing from his 37 years of service, the three-star general traced the attitude of Americans toward their Armed Forces today with that of the past.

"In 1918 I joined an Army which was literally piling away on the Mexican border due to the lack of public support," he said. "At that time the Army had only 100,000 men and officers and about 122 million dollars in appropriations. It was inconceivable for the American people to believe the war in Europe concerned us."

Brilliant Leaders
Gen. Eddy said that out of World War I came brilliant leaders whose revamping a school system resulted in such military institutions as The Infantry School. "In 1948, we began to see a change in the attitude of the American people," Gen. Eddy said. "Today there is a great interest and deep concern brought about by the growth of communism."

He said that the Russian threats of force had the opposite results from that which the Soviet leaders desired. "The change of (political) opinion came with the Berlin Airlift and a greater change came with the Korean invasion by the Communists," Gen. Eddy said.

OC 'Muscles' Lazo Is Phenomena In 14th OC Company

Richard (Muscles) Lazo is a well built young man who gets his greatest pleasure out of helping to build up others. The 25-year-old officer candidate, currently training with the 14th OC Co. First OC Regt., is a physical therapist who loves his work and is looked upon by the company as phenomenal.

He spent 18 months in Japan helping to rehabilitate U. N. patients wounded in Korea. He was trained at the New Jersey Medical Center and Columbus Hospital in New York, and the training has paid dividends. Strengthening others physically has helped Rick to develop himself. He placed sixth in the "Mr. New Jersey" physical contest a few years ago and played semi-pro football in Japan against stars like Arnie Cannon, Clint Tommasek. He made half-back on the Army All Star Team. Upon graduation he hopes to be commissioned in the Medical Service Corps.

Postman to Lose Job, Customers
Cpl. Robert Sugerman, mail clerk of 12th OC Company, First Officer Candidate Regiment, will lose both his job and his customers on Nov. 22. That's the day Sugerman will return to civilian life. It's also the day that 12th OC Company's "customers" will graduate and receive their commissions.

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Ft. McPherson. — Eight civilians employed at Third Army Headquarters are living proof in favor of the employment of handicapped people, Hammond B. Smith chief of the Army's Civilian Personnel Division, says.

William B. Hallis, engineering aid in the Signal Section, suffered a severe elbow injury in combat near Hattlem, Germany, during World War II. A carpenter by trade, he returned to his vocation after being honorably discharged from the Army. Given employment here as a carpenter, the hammering and sawing so irked Hallis's elbow that he had to seek other work. Put to work as a file clerk, he did such an outstanding job that it was not long before he had received a promotion to his present position.

Edward J. Callahan, employed by the Adjutant General Section, sustained leg injuries when the Japanese blew up a pill box near him. He wears a brace on his right leg but performs his duties in a very creditable manner.

Another handicapped person employed by the section is Miss Mary Bell, whose right leg was maimed by polio when she was a small child. Notwithstanding this physical impairment, she has completed over 21 years of service as a federal employee.

Colonel Helps Youth Find Hobbies

From what was once thought of as a wasteful project, a Fort Benning officer now spends his various hobbies to aid in making a more constructive pastime for the children of the Infantry Center. Lt. Col. Ralph N. Hale of Boise, Idaho, a member of the Tactical Department, is chairman of the handicraft program of the Dads Club and spends his spare time working on the club's youth projects in such fields as woodwork, leathercraft, model aircraft, photography, metal work and radio construction and repairs. Col. Hale, active in the Dads organization since coming to Fort Benning in July 1950, feels there is a definite need for a child to have a hobby. "That is why I would like to urge anyone qualified and interested in any hobby to contact me," he said. "Instructors are badly needed in the handicraft program of the club. Well qualified himself, Col. Hale has a complete workshop in his basement. His hobbies go back to his childhood days when a grade school he built radio sets financed from profits he received from his newspaper route. Col. Hale's father firmly disapproved of such "wasteful" projects until he listened to the 1938 World Series. He embraced the radio then and purchased one for the home. He chased one for the home that time on, Col. Hale was allowed to continue his hobby, and in 1933 constructed what today has become commonplace—a TV set. Besides his radio shop, Col. Hale has a metal and woodwork shop where he has made most of his furnishings for his home—living fixtures, furniture, and his present TV unit. He believes that children of today have the same interests that he had when a child and that their parents should do everything possible to promote these interests. A native of Memphis, W. Va., Col. Hale entered active service in July 1936. While serving in Oregon, he met and married the former Dorothy Jean Hutchinson of Fayetteville, Idaho. With the outbreak of World War II, he went to Europe and served in Ireland, England, North Africa, Tunisia, and Italy. In 1945 he received orders for the Far East Command. En route his ship hit a mine and he was severely injured. He returned to Germany. V-J Day had come. He returned to the U. S. in 1949 to attend New York University where he received his Masters Degree in administrative engineering. Reentering the service, he was stationed at Fort Hood, Texas, during 1950 and 1951.

August "Pappy" Vitt is a young Walter Reed General Hospital OC old in military experience. The 26-year-old candidate, currently training with the 14th OC Co., First Officer Candidate Regiment, has spent 11 years in the service. Vitt enlisted in the Navy in 1943 when he was 15 years old. Before the end of World War II he had taken part in the major campaigns of the Leyte, Luzon, and Iwo Jima. His home was an LST with the Seventh Amphibious Force. In 1948, "Pappy" left the Navy and decided to try the army for an awful moment, his parachute didn't open. Fortunately the rescue chute did its work well.

ISD Baker Company Stresses Safety With A Vengeance

The motto of ISD's Baker Company is the first thing seen by the men of the organization when entering the company area. It is the starting point for one of the most extensive safety campaigns being staged at Fort Benning.

Spearheaded by its company commander, Capt. Harry P. Breakey, the company is striving to retain the School Brigade Safety Award won last month. Through out the company signs, placards and posters stress the important factors involved in preventing accidents.

Eric Prinstein McKeever, a company clerk, is the man responsible for the slogans and poster. He has come up with such designs as a stop-light with a cloud-shaped placard stressing the important facts of safety.

Baker Company's personnel is made up for the most part, of a two-week Catholic mission at Chapel No. 4 on the Main Post. The first week of the mission is designed for women and the second week for men.

Catholics Conduct Benning Mission

Father James J. Glynn, a former Army chaplain, is conducting a two-week Catholic mission at Chapel No. 4 on the Main Post. The first week of the mission is designed for women and the second week for men.

Father Glynn, who served as a chaplain for approximately five years and was in Europe during World War II, will speak on "Eternal Truths." He will discuss a different topic each night.

For Better Understanding PX Puts Spotlight on NCOs

Fort Benning Exchange's spotlight this month will be on the members of the exchange's NCO committee. Lt. Col. M. E. Steffen, exchange officer, announced yesterday. Beginning immediately, an educational program will be initiated through the use of posters, booklets, and cartoons, which will place added emphasis upon the role of the NCO committee as an integral part of exchange operation.

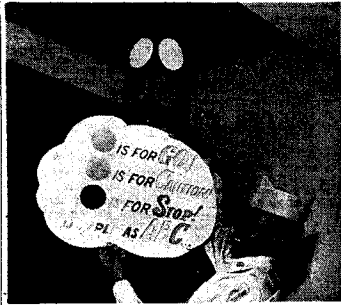

The committee is not a new organization, having functioned as a part of PX operations since 1955. And even in those days the committee kept on its toes. This is borne out by an excerpt from a report dated 30 June 1948, which stated:

"A comparison between our exchange and the exchange at Fort McHenry shows a decided advantage to the men at McHenry. For example, at McHenry one can obtain a cup of coffee, a sandwich with ham and butter, and two eggs, either fried or boiled, for 10 cents. At our exchange a cup of coffee and a sandwich (without butter) are sold for 10 cent."

"That 55-year-old complaint, except for the prices, is not unfamiliar to Col. Steffen. In over 7 years as exchange officer, he has heard his share of both complaints and praise. It is in order to answer these complaints and better profit from the praise that this educational program is being undertaken. The program points up that the NCO committee is a two-way channel of communication, explaining the exchange to the enlisted personnel of this installation while learning more about their preferences and needs."

"Our committee is doing a grand job now," Col. Steffen said. "But we'd like to help them to do an even better job. We realize that we don't know everything about our customers any more than they know all there is to know about the exchange. By this interplay of ideas, we think we can make the exchange an even more successful operation than it now is."

Theme of the drive will be "It's Your Voice" and will emphasize the fact that the members of the NCO committee are a selected group representing the enlisted personnel of this installation, and is an indispensable part of the exchange picture. Booklets have been prepared which outline the exchange Service and the committee's role in it.

Ex-Japan Wrestler Views American Mat Sport

If you need protection in the form of a bodyguard, call Lt. Alexander Vorobyoff of the 24th Company, Second Student Regiment.

He was born in Ekaterinburg in Central Russia. When he was two years old the family moved to Japan. Here he attended school for 17 years and won a degree equal to our A.B. from Waseda University in Tokyo.

While at the University he spent long hours practicing wrestling and judo. He lost many bouts but kept on. Then the break came. He succeeded in winning the Best, Grade A, and later the Olympic Style Wrestling belt of Japan. He was the first Caucasian to force the Japanese to bow to him.

Olympic Style Wrestling was not the exhibition style seen today in the arenas of this country. He was an Olympic style wrestler. When asked what he thought of the present day wrestling, he said that "those people would probably land in the hospital if their holds were authentic."

The only wrestling that is as good today and that is scientific, is college wrestling," he said. "College boys do not go out there for the money but for the record. They are interested only in winning for the school. Their incentive is the esprit de corps of the school which they represent."

He also said that there is much good talent in the professionals, but they have not had the opportunity to use their technique nor their strength. They seem only to be trying to satisfy the public.

LT. VOROBYOFF

He replaces Lt. Albert Miller who is returning to his former organization, the 72nd Tank Battalion. Lt. Miller has been with the school since its beginning last May and will remain for a short while in an advisory capacity.

Two new instructors also have been appointed, Col. Kretlow said. They are Second Lt. Donald Sellers of Arcadia, Fla., and Second Lt. Joseph E. Coughlin of Belgrade, Mont. Mass., who replaces Lt. David A. Yergy and Lt. Laurence E. Faingold.

Church, retired, had been ill for several months. Born in Glen Iron, Pa., Church attended Bucknell Academy and New York University. He was twice wounded while serving in France during World War I. During World War II, Church served with the 46th and 84th Infantry divisions in Africa and Europe. Afterwards he commanded the Infantry replacement center of Ft. McClellan, Ala., and Ft. Jackson, S. SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS Jim Montgomery Bob Kovalchik

The signing of the documents that ended World War II was a general signal to open the dikes for a wave of post war sports hysteria that will likely remain unequalled in American annals.

The chief beneficiary from the free spending frenzy that swept the land was its already acknowledged sovereign, football.

Sports entrepreneurs, ever quick to spot a budding bonanza, met and acted. Seemingly overnight the game mushroomed into a multi-million dollar a year gusher.

Not content with a paltry 75,000 paid attendance each week, the Cotton Bowl faithful came up with a new twist.

Securing tickets to sell-out games became a matter of social prestige and prominence. The person whose connections produced tickets to a big game was looked upon with mingled respect and envy.

The various higher educational centers around the country were soon given to know, however, that the vast sums they collected weekly were not intended to be idle.

In 1952 a good high school player thought himself to be lucky if a college offered him one of the rare "tuition, books, board and room" grants-in-aid.

A coach whose team lost one or two games or dropped from a ranking among the nation's elite circle might as well pack up. A coach whose team won received a Cadillac to go with his dual-toned ulcer.

Leon the Peon bred into the Bayonet office bright and early Monday morning, complete with his predicting slide rule, forecasts for Saturday's games, and an ad for last week's Levy's delicatessen called 16 out of 20 correctly for games played Oct. 11, with one ending in a tie.

Elliot over Michigan, Northwestern over Wisconsin, Duke over Navy, Tennessee over LSU, Alabama over Chattanooga, Dartmouth over Columbia, Tech over Clemson, Kansas over Kansas State, Oklahoma over Missouri, Michigan State over Ohio State, Penn State over Fordham, Notre Dame over Penn. State over Texas A&M, Florida over Georgia.

Texas over Baylor (look out, Leon!) Rice over Arkansas, Mississippi State over Tulane, Auburn over U. of Alabama, Miami over Miami, Syracuse over Cornell, USC over Stanford, and the Special of this Week: National Agricultural over Golladay.

Greenies Lose Florida Game To Mighty Cherry Point, 50-12

Cherry Point's star-studded Mustangs' best performance of the season proved to be powerful foe for the Greenies. The Greenies played hard-fought Marines, one of the nation's best teams, but didn't have the manpower to match the Mustangs' best performance of the season.

Featuring a number of former collegiate and professional stars, Cherry Point unleashed a devastating ground game that forced the Mustangs to succumb.

Cherry Point numbered among its stars such performers as Ed Brandenburg of Mississippi, Nick De Rosa of the Pittsburgh Steelers, J. T. Seahorn of Texas U., and John Gully of Holy Cross.

The Greenies are on the road again this week, traveling to Nashville to meet Stewart AFB in a Saturday matinee. Stewart last week in the season to Brigade-PMG, 27-13.

Commenting on the game, coach Vern Lyons said it was probably the best game he has ever coached.

Hospitals Get New Cameras

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Ft. McPherson, Ga., a new type of camera, designed especially for medical photographic work, is being issued to certain Army hospitals in the Third Army Area and to the Third Army Medical Laboratory, Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, commanding general, has announced.

The camera will enable the Army medical service to get better pictures in surgery, pathology, endoscopy, dentistry, ophthalmology, surface photography, X-ray copying and in dermatology.

They are being issued to hospitals at Forts Benning, Bragg, Jackson, Campbell and Camp Gordon.

Designed so that it can be suspended over a bed or an operating table, the camera is so light and compact that it can be held in the hands of a photographer.

It will make both color and conventional photographs and is designed to be used with applicators which automatically bring a picture into focus.

SFC. D. A. RICHARDS CHECKS PULSE OF PATIENT Ex-Fighter Is No Sissy As 'Male Nurse' in 508th

Recently returned from one of the more unusual types of Army service schools, is Sfc. D. A. Richards, of Medical Company, 508th Airborne Regimental Company, 1st Team. The medical non-com 1st class after spending 46 weeks at the Male Nursing School in the Fitzsimons Army Hospital, at Denver, Colo.

Full of knowledge and new ideas Richards who hails from California, feels that the more a man learns on medical therapy the more he realizes how much there is to learn in that field.

The object of the course is to procure male licensed practical aides, who differ very little from the regular registered nurses, (in category that is) and will supplement the shortage of RNs.

Richards, an ex-boxer who was with the 508th AIR, of the 1st Airborne Division, is remembered by many men for his outstanding work on the European battlefield.

While in school in Fitzsimons, he married a girl he met while attending medical school in Fort Sam Houston, in 1947.

Col. Lynch succeeds Col. Robert G. Sherrard Jr. who has been named acting deputy assistant commander of the school in the absence of Col. Herbert A. Vander Heide, who is hospitalized.

OC Worked Up To Master Sergeant When He Was 18

Out in Farson, Kan., there must be something in the air. That's OC Charles Caldwell's explanation for his get-up and go. Caldwell, taking training with 22nd OC Co., First Officer Candidate Regiment, is one of the youngest "first soldiers" in the Army.

He joined the Army in 1950 after turning down offers of athletic scholarships to several colleges and universities. In 1951 he embarked for Korea, an EC. He was assigned to the First Cavalry Division.

During heavy action some 50 miles north of Seoul, Caldwell jumped from squad leader to platoon leader when his superior had become casualties. The OC made Pfc. in April of 1951. By October he was sergeant. He was promoted up the ladder to master sergeant. He took over as First Sergeant of the company. He was then 18 years old.

Because of his courageous action in Korea, Caldwell has been recommended for the DSC.

Post Traffic Violations

From October 23 to 30 four enlisted men and one officer had their post driving privileges revoked.

Pvt Robert L. Rohlin, 23d Company, First Student Regiment, had his privileges revoked for alleged reckless driving and being under the influence of intoxicants.

M-Sgt. Paul V. Ruhl lost his privileges for driving while under the influence it was charged. He is a member of 1st and 2d Company Special Troops.

Sfc. William R. Welcher, Company B, First Special Troops, also had his driving privilege revoked on a charge of driving while under the influence.

A former member of Second Company, First Student Regiment, Major Gerald V. Woodard, had his driving privilege revoked for allegedly driving under the influence.

Sgt. Vinton L. Davis, Battery B, 1st Field Artillery Regiment, had his driving privilege for allegedly driving under the influence.

OCs Are 'Artists' In This Cleanup

The candidates of 22d OC Co., First OC Regiment, are artists by the grace of experience. The class, scheduled to graduate next Monday, has painted, repaired, or equipped, some 10,000 pieces of equipment in preparation for the next class.

The OCs have scraped all the wax from the floors and have polished and rinsed from sinks to ceiling. The cleanup campaign has not interfered with training hours.

If nobody in the company ever wants to see a buffer or a wax can, again, it's understandable.

CTC Displays Might To JCOC

Armored, artillery, and infantry units of the Combat Training Command played a big part in the three-day Joint Civilian Orientation Conference No. 17 held here earlier this week.

Problem 2660, one of the Infantry School's more elaborate and complete demonstrations, was witnessed by the more than 800 service school students, including 220 from the Armed Forces Staff College, 40 from the Chemical School, 105 from the Engineer School, 61 from the Ordnance School, 100 from the Transportation School and 54 from the Provost Marshall School.

The problem, run only on a few special occasions during the year, demonstrates types of artillery fires, the coordinate use of Armor and Infantry, and shows how the Army's new weapons are being used in approved combat tactics of the Army.

Army Beckons Retired Veteran

When M-Sgt. Joseph T. Mullen, Headquarters and Services Company, 773rd Tank Battalion, Combat Training Command, completed 21 years of active service with the Regular Army, he decided that enough was enough and returned to the peaceful pursuit of civilian occupations.

Three years of the "civilian paradise" Mr. Mullen began to have his doubts about life outside the Army. Three years of time clocks and increased costs of living were all that he could stand.

As a member at the reserves he applied for active duty and soon donned the regiments of the 773rd Tank Battalion.

Bayonet Brings 'Sarges' Together for Reunion

Thanks to The Bayonet, two regular at the beginning of World War II. Both eventually were placed in the same prison camp at Chabutan.

The last time the sergeants were together was in the late Summer of 1944 when they were transferred to separate prison camps on the Japanese Mainland. Both thought they would see each other again someday, however, and they did.

Over a steak dinner to celebrate the reunion the two ex-PW's admitted they had gained a little weight. "Haven't had fishheads and rice for a while now," admitted Sgt. Coleman wryly.

They talked of the black days at the beginning of the war when the white sheet of surrender final-ly went up above the heads of the heroic defenders of Bataan and Corregidor. At the time, Sgt. A. B. White, Sgt. Coleman was in a cell of the 59th.

Radar Used To Flag Cars

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Ft. McPherson, Ga. — Three radar speed-detecting instruments are now being used to check speeding on Third Army installations.

Col. J. K. Donaghy, Third Army provost marshal, said the detectors will be moved about from one installation to another to assist provost marshals to control the speed of vehicles on their installations.

At the present, the detectors are in service at Forts McPherson and Benning, Ga., and Fort Jackson, S. C.

Easy to move, the detectors can be set up in a few moments and operate from a six volt battery. The radar instrument is housed in a box about twice the size of a shoe box, while the speed indicating meter, attached to the radar, is about the size of an ordinary alarm clock.

Gen. Bradley to Tour Infantry School Friday

Gen. Omar Bradley, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and commander of the Infantry School in 1941-42, arrives at Fort Benning Friday to see new Infantry developments.

Gen. Bradley, now chairman of the board of the Buova Research Laboratories, will be accompanied by Mrs. Bradley.

While at Fort Benning, the retired general will visit Army Field Forces Board No. 3 and the Infantry School's Combat Developments Office.

Fort Benning is one of several stops on Gen. Bradley's tour of service research and developments boards.

Active in Fort Benning and Columbus affairs during his visits and assignments here, Gen. Bradley is well known among local residents. From 1929 to 1933, he was on the faculty of the Infantry School, serving as chief of the Weapons Department under assistant commander Gen. George C. Marshall.

He returned in 1944 as a student in the advanced course, leaving shortly after graduation for a tour of duty in Hawaii.

After serving as plans and training officer and instructor at the U. S. Military Academy, Gen. Bradley became assistant secretary of the General Staff in 1939.

$35,263.46 Total Donated To Chest

Slim Margin Robs Benning Of Goal Set

Contributions from Fort Benning to the 1954 Community Chest drive totaled $35,263.46 with 97.5 of the post's military personnel participating. Col. H. M. Rund, campaign chairman, said in a final report this week.

Units reporting 100 per cent participation were Special Troops Command, $4,710.18; School Brigade cadre, $5,882.85; School Brigade students, $7,999.96; 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, $2,222.75; U. S. Army Hospital, $1,609.34; Provisional Medical Group, $499.88; Academic Department, $3,872.82; Third Army Food Service School Cadre, $75.50; students, $26.35; Army Field Forces Board No. 3, $99.68; Headquarters, The Infantry Center, $947.10, and Red Cross, $60.

Combat Training Command, which reported 98.5 per cent participation, gave $5,869.69, and Lawson Air Force Base, with 80 per cent contributing, gave $1,617.72.

Col. Rund pointed out that because post strength was lower than in previous years the emphasis in the drive was on the number of persons participating rather than on total contributions. "The figure of 97.5 per cent is one we can be proud of," he declared.

Civilian employees contributed directly to United Givers through their own campaign.

Military Expert to Speak Tuesday

Hanson Baldwin, one of the nation's busiest and most prolific military journalists, will speak to the Friedlander Foundation in Columbus next Tuesday.

The public has been invited to hear the Pulitzer Prize winner speak at Columbus High School at 8 p.m. Nov. 17. No tickets are required.

Since 1937, Baldwin has been military and naval editor of The New York Times. He has written a great number of books, among the latest was "Great Mistakes of the War," published in 1950. He has also made innumerable contributions to the nation's magazines.

By both background and training, Baldwin is well equipped for the complicated business of interpreting the strategies of war and the tactics of fighting. His father, Oliver Perry Baldwin, was managing editor of the Baltimore Sun. He grew up in a family keenly aware of the news and its journalistic presentation.

In 1924, he graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy following which he Resigned From Navy Following his resignation from the Navy, Baldwin went to work for the Baltimore Sun as a cub reporter. Among his notable assignments were the Western shipwreck and the first arrival of the Graf Zeppelin.

After a year of reporting, he took advantage of opportunities to travel. He shipped aboard a South American bound liner as quarter-master. Later, he made a trip to Labrador as director of a group of college boys who had volunteered for one of Sir Wilfred Grenfell's scientific trips.

Service Club 3 to Rescue

'Twill Be a Great Time in the Old Town That Nite

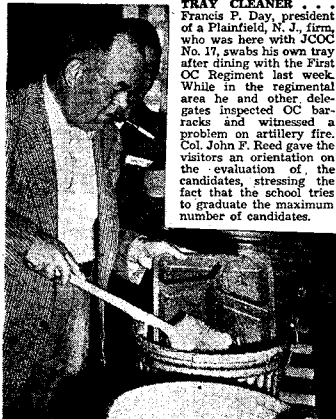

Those young soldiers with a yen for a date but who find themselves low on cash toward the end of the month will be pleased to learn that Service Club No. 3, Harmony Church, is planning to lend a helping hand in the situation. The directors of the club are launching a "Blind Date Contest" to be held at 3:00 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 22.

In cooperation with several Columbus merchants who have volunteered to help, an all-expense-paid evening out has been arranged for three lucky soldiers. They will be given transportation by lot for the entire evening, covered for their dates, a full-course Italian dinner, and complimentary tickets to a Columbus theater. Besides, a photographer will accompany each couple, taking pictures to be published in their hometown newspapers.

To qualify for the contest, you must be an E4 or below and present at the club at 3 p.m. in a Class A uniform. Nine men will be selected by lot for the contest. The nine will be separated in groups of three, seated on one side of the stage. The "Blind Dates" will be on the other, with a curtain dividing the stage. The girls will then make their selection, on the basis of this conversation. The process will be repeated for each successive date.

And then the three lucky couples will ride off in their "own golden coach," complete with driver, for seven hours of fun—all with the best wishes of Mrs. Dana, the Joy Florials, Jean's Snugglers - Star House, and the management of the Georgia Theater.

The U.S. service career of M-Sgt. Long before, while a high school student in Worcester, Mass., he was an ardent reader of news stories about the war raging in Europe. This country was neutral, and all indications pointed to its continued strict neutrality. Leaving home for school one

Four Sergeants Win Bronze Star Medals

Four enlisted men of the Infantry School Detachment have received Bronze Star Medals for service in Korea. They are M-Sgt. Ernest E. Brand, Thomas W. Jackson, John W. Williamson, and Sgt. Theodore C. White. The awards were presented at a detachment parade by Col. Donald Washington, 15th Infantry. Brand, then a member of Company L, 58th Infantry Regiment, was cited for heroic action July 17, 1952, while leading a patrol near Mandangun, Korea, which was ambushed by the enemy. In the midst of heavy enemy fire, Sgt. Brand moved among the troops, calming and deploying them so as to resist the enemy attack in the most effective manner. When the order was given to withdraw, he vitally aided in the complete success of the withdrawal. Jackson was cited for heroic achievement Nov. 8, 1952, when his 75mm recoilless rifle platoon was receiving heavy enemy fire near Sanggung, Korea. A member of Company L, 58th Infantry Regiment, Jackson, exposing himself to enemy fire, moved the recoilless rifle into an advantageous position and destroyed the enemy guns. Williamson was decorated for meritorious service from Aug. 6, 1952, to April 5, 1952, while serving with Company M, 58th Infantry Regiment. Williamson distinguished himself by his determination that his men were prepared for combat and welded into an effective fighting team. White was cited for meritorious service between July 5, 1952, and April 19, 1953, while serving with Company A, 18th Infantry Regiment. He manifested decisive leadership and an adroit organizational ability. Inspired by his mature judgment and soldierly initiative, his comrades followed his lead with such alertly and precision that the result was a highly-integrated fighting team.

6 Cited For Money Saving Ideas

Five civilians and a warrant officer were cited last Monday for suggestions estimated to save the government $3,675 annually. They were James G. Hardy, who received $50; Charles C. Green, $30; William E. Collins, $10; Mrs. Marjorie Whittington, $10; and P. L. Mottet, a letter of commendation signed by Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander. Hardy, an employee of the Ft. Benning, suggested that the disbursing officer periodically furnish unit personnel offices with instructions and samples of military pay orders. This has resulted in an estimated savings of $2,100 yearly. A portable filing cabinet idea by Green, an Engineer Section employee, is expected to save the Army $525 annually. A tool to hold materials together while welding pipe panels on tanks has saved $225 a year. This idea was suggested by Collins of the Ordnance Section. Mottet, a Training Aide Center.

46 Straight 550th Swarming With 'Superiors'

What does "Excellent" on a school troop-rating sheet mean? Don't ask the men of the 550th Tank Company that question. They have been getting "superiors" on their problems for so long they doesn't know what any other rating means.

As of this writing there has been an unbroken string of 46 superior ratings on Problem 2109, Burma Hill Infantry-tank team. This string includes two 100C events when pressure was high. Other less spectacular problems in which the company has participated are 2851, a 36-hour problem, and 2601, Boulton Hill. It has been two and a half months since the last "excellent" rating has been received.

CTC Observes Third Birthday

It is with pleasure that I note the completion of another year of activity in which they have played an outstanding part in the successful operation of the Infantry Center.

"The spirit of cooperation and the operational efficiency of your organization have been of the highest degree and reflect credit upon yourself and The Infantry Center."

Colorful Bandsman Is Made First Sergeant of The 122d

A Fort Benning soldier-musician who has been keeping time for the marching feet of American troops for nearly 23 years has been appointed first sergeant of the post's 122d Army Band.

Sic. Albert Galuppo of Providence, R. I., began his military music career when he enlisted in 1935 and was assigned to the 10th Coast Artillery Band at Fort Jay, New York. The sergeant played with Paul Whiteman and Duke Ellington.

For the next 15 years he got plenty of experience as an Army bandsman, playing the sax and clarinet with many units.

Pvt. Went Fishing

It Proves Heroes Born, Not Just Made That Way

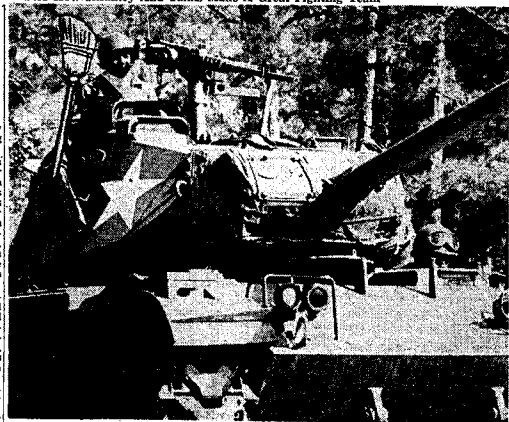

PT. ORD, Calif. (APFS) - Pvt. Jimmy Wilson decided to go fishing at nearby Monterey Bay, but he didn't bother to sign out on his pass.

"I was sitting there fishing," he said, "when somebody hollered, 'a baby fell in!' I thought it was just some kids trying to scare some body. Then everything went quiet and I knew something must have happened."

Wilson dropped his fishing gear and ran to the center of the bay. "The kid couldn't swim very well," said Wilson, "so I decided it was time I jumped in to help get them out."

He pulled the lady onto her back by the hair—and the mother held the baby's head above water. Wilson supported the two for 10 minutes until a rope was dropped to them and they were able to climb up the steep embankment.

For leaving the post without a pass, Pvt. Wilson received an oral reprimand, for being a hero he was recommended for the Soldier's Medal.

Armistice Was 3 Days Late 30th Sgt's. Outfit Got News Nov. 14

Thirty-five years ago yesterday, on Nov. 11, 1918, the peoples of the world stood in villages and cities to cheer the welcome news of an armistice in Europe.

MSgt Robert D. Baker, recruiting sergeant for the Combat Training Command, Bloodmobile, in the mud and slush of the Argonne Forest on that historic day. There were no blaring bandstands nor mid throngs where he stood—only an order from headquarters that all units would cease firing at 1300 hours.

Months before, Baker, with Battery D, 53rd Railroad Artillery, had sailed from Newport News, Va. Crossing the Atlantic took 21 days, and then from Liverpool the major route went to Southampton, crossed the English Channel and found themselves in Nancy, France.

The 53rd, with its huge 16-inch guns mounted on flat cars, was in support of the First Infantry Division at St. Mihiel. Lt. Col. L. M. Carr and Lt. Col. J. M. Carr.

But Nov. 11, 1918, was just another day for the 53rd as it blasted away at German positions. Some time during the morning the order was issued to cease firing at 1300 hours, and when that time arrived the last shell was fired.

It was not until the morning of

Nov. 14th that the unit was notified that an armistice had been signed. There was no celebration at the time. The real thing came when the men took three-day passes to Paris.

RC Bloodmobile Projects Visit

The Red Cross bloodmobile will visit the Post Dec. 9-10 for the first time in more than two years.

Bloodmobiles were last here in September 1951, when the Department of Defense established Blood Donor Centers at U. S. Major Hospitals on most of the major posts in the country. These centers, responsible for collecting blood for the use of the armed forces, were closed last July. Blood banks are still maintained, however.

Beginning in December the bloodmobile will visit the post monthly. Field Director John Kramer said the post's monthly quota will be approximately 500 pints.

CTC REENLISTMENT
The Combat Training Command boosted the highest reenlistment percentage in the Army last month. Fifty-four men signed up.

Airborne Brothers Form 'Teacher-Student' Combo

Two months it had been since John T. Hutson, first sergeant of G Company, Airborne Battalion, 2nd Student Regiment, saw his younger brother, Walter, but since that time Walter enlisted in the army, took Airborne basic training, applied for jump training, and is now in John's outfit.

Sgt. Hutson, a veteran of 30 jumps, received permission to lead his brother on his first jump. On Monday morning they both went down to Building L-11 at Lawson Field and down parachutes.

After the first jump the young or Hutson said he liked the Airborne much better than before. Asked how it felt when the chute

Don't Mutilate Those Checks

WASHINGTON (APPS)—A bent check can cause lots of trouble. Servicemen and dependents who fold, bend or mutilate their monthly allotment checks are literally fouling the works at Federal Reserve Banks and the General Accounting Office in Washington, D. C.

Each incoming check, which is actually an IBM card with information punched into it, may be processed 15 to 18 times in a month through IBM sorters and tabulators.

Bent checks which have been folded may create a jam in the machine thereby causing other checks to be mutilated. So remember, hold 'em but don't fold 'em.

Aggression Can't Be Halted By Naval, Air Power Alone

NEW ORLEANS (APPS)—The United States cannot rely entirely on naval and air power in the fight against Communist aggression, but must remember that ground forces also are essential, according to Gen. J. Lawton Collins, now U. S. Representative to the Military Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Speaking here after receiving an honorary degree from Tulane University, Gen. Collins said: "Certainly one of the clear lessons of the Korean War is the fact

TAG Renews MOS Officer Assignments

WASHINGTON (APPS) — A pre-Korean method of assigning Army officers has been revived by the Career Management Division, TAG.

SH 600 - 50 - is soon to be re-learned, provides that field commanders will be directed or advised to use new officers according to a special MOS number which will be listed in assignment orders.

Two types of designations will guide commanders. One will require assignment of the officer to the MOS job within six months after he reports, to serve at least nine months in that job and preferably one year. This is known as directed MOS assignment.

The other designation, which gives the commander more leeway, provides that sometime during the officer's normal tour at that duty station he will be assigned to the MOS duty for enough time to complete requirements for that specialty. This is a recommended MOS assignment.

TAG feels either of these methods, which will be used sparingly, will help equalize an officer's chance for promotion by giving him a broad background in his particular career field.

potential enemy. If war should come under these conditions, he said, the result would be frightful destruction of both friend and foe.

"We do not have to match Communist forces man for man, tank for tank, plane for plane," he pointed out, "but NATO must have certain minimum forces on the ground, adequately backed up with modern weapons, air and naval forces to insure that Europe is not overrun in the first onslaught of a war.

"Europe could not, and I am sure would not, wish to be 'liberated' by atomic or thermonuclear bombs.

After stating that he wished that he knew a way by which he "could take the rifle off the foot soldier's back," Gen. Collins concluded by saying: "If we see nothing in the foreseeable future that will eliminate the doughboy — either in a 'small war' or a 'large war.'"

Medal of Honor

Kentuckian Won High Award By Bringing Ranger to Safety

First Lt. George M. Gividen Jr. of Buschel, Ky., whose life was saved by a fellow Kentuckian during a Medal-of-Honor-winning action in Korea, is now stationed here as an instructor in leadership and hand-to-hand combat in the Ranger Department.

According to official records, Lt. Gividen was saved by one of Ernest E. West of Wartland Ky., who was awarded the nation's highest decoration for gallantry for this and other actions during an engagement with enemy forces Oct. 12, 1953, in Korea.

Wounded, Lt. Gividen, a platoon leader in the 14th Infantry Regiment, 28th Division, fell in a dangerously exposed position while leading his patrol in an attempt to destroy an enemy outpost. West, a volunteer member of the patrol, ordered the others to fall back, made his way to the officer, and although blinded in the left eye by a grenade fragment, managed to kill three attacking enemy soldiers while dragging Gividen to safety.

This Kind of Jump Will Never Be SOP!

Albion soldiers are getting tougher than ever. Now they're "jumping" without chutes. Pfc. Robert V. Gobbs of the 508th Regimental Combat Team, was supervising a 25-foot moon jump lower constructed for post youngsters when, gleefully tapping a pint sized jumper into the breeze, he lost his balance and made a forced landing below without benefit of chute. With his dignity battered, the sergeant mumbled, "It's a good thing I'm a trooper or I might have been killed."

October was the busiest month for use of selected vehicles, records reveal that they covered 330,856 miles, representing an increase of nearly 40,000 miles over the next closest month, also September.

Despite the increase in activity, which usually brings on a flurry of extra accidents, reports from the TIC safety office show there was a decrease of only five over September, two of these occurring on the football field.

Hospital is 'Home' to Winner Of Best Wac of the Week

This week's "Wac of the Week" was assigned to her job at the Post Hospital because she was asked for.

Pfc. Helen Stout joined the Women's Army Corp in the Summer of 1952. After completing basic training she was sent to the Army's Medical School at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and then to Fort Benning for six more weeks.

Her course completed, Pfc. Stout found herself at Fort Jackson's reception center, ready to receive her first permanent assignment. To her surprise and delight, she discovered that the Fort Benning hospital was so proud of her work as a student that her services were wanted there permanently.

Helen is one of those young ladies whom the volunteer state of Tennessee can well be proud of. Her home is in Shell Creek, just a cannon's throw from Eastern

Moorhead-Boykin Combine Unlocks Red Devil Defense

By BOB KOVALCHEN
The second of the Fort Benning Football League got under way when the CTC Commanders took the Red Devils before a crowd of 5,000 fans - threatened but enthusiastic fans last Friday at Doughboy stadium.

In the opening minutes the Red Devils failed to crack the CTC line, and the Commanders took as Emmett Matthews kicked to the CTC 40 yard line. In seven plays the Commanders' were looking on the airframe portals but their threat was cut short when Mel Boykin fumbled and Lafayette Horton recovered it on the 3 yard line.

With three lines the Devils inched the ball out to the 10 where they were forced to kick. Matthews punt was wobbly and the Commanders went to go on the Devils 37.

On the next play Hank Tomic connected with Ed Bill Groce for a 37 yard touchdown pass. Conrad Deakins' extra point kick was good and the Commanders went out in front 6-0.

The Commanders second score came in the first play of the second quarter climbing a 67 yard line in 12 plays by Bobby Moorhead, who turned in his best game of the season, and Mel Boykin. Boykin swept around right end from the 4 for the TD. Conrad Deakins' extra point kick was good and the Commanders went out again blocked but the Commanders now widened the margin to 12-0.

The Devils only score in the game also was produced in the second quarter when Hank Tomic's attempted pass was intercepted by John Frossen on the Commanders' 44. Bobby Grimley's 35 yard run and Bill Delia's 6 yard gain put the Red and White Devils in the Commanders' corner. Tomic's 72 yards for a touchdown ended right end on a pitchout for 28 yards and six points on the Rams' second play from scrimmage. Ed Hamilton secured the second marker early in the second frame on a one yard slant that culminated a 37 yard march. The blanket pass defense offered by Brigade produced three interceptions on its own during the game. Joe Fortunato, Joe McDonald, and Simon Perkins each stole an enemy aerial and returned them to paydirt on runs varying from 28 to 37 yards.

Ed Crook and Ed Allen alternated at quarterback for the Rams as regular starter Dick Thompson was still feeling the improving CTC Green Wave.

This Wave crew is a far cry from the purchaseless Greenies of early season days. Vern Lyons and his staff have molded a solid scrapping unit that asks no quarter from anyone. Chet Freeman

The Rams, of course, are the scourge of the league. The big, scrappy defense on the sidelines has made the Greenies the most prolific offense and the signiest defense on post. Their attack, powered by the "monster and his playmate" - Joe Fortunato and Ed Crook - is extremely difficult to cope with. Tighen year defensive alignment to stop Fortunato's smashes up the middle, and Comrade Crook is long gone around the flank. Spread out will be Fred Groce, the former and Friend Fortunato tears the heart out of your midriff. Try to stop over the top Saturday, but Comrade Ed Hamilton wind up with the ball 12 times - and only one team to successfully thwart the Ram's defense. This forced the Rams to the air, and their passing failed them in the pinch. It isn't likely to improve again, as Thompson and Bill Allen have developed into capable chumpers.

Brigade possesses considerably hipper-chipper halfback, manuevers away from a trio of Shaw AFB tacklers on a 73-yard touchdown run, but the play was called back and the Rams pounced for clipping. Action occurred in the second quarter.

ROBERT'S ROUTE . . . Bounding Bobby Moorhead, CTC's all-purpose halfback, shakes loose from Lafayette Horton's tackle and utilizes Mel Boykin's blocking to gain six yards in the second period of Sunday's game with 50th. Moorhead, playing his best game of the season, was tackled on the Red Devil 44 yard line by Crayton Mast and Charlie Stewart.

Brigade Heavy Artillery Drops Lightly Armed Shaw Flyers

SHAW AFB, S. C. - The Brigade Rams barely flex their grill-iron muscles in coasting to a 40-2 victory over a badly overmatched team of Shaw Field Flyers here Saturday. The game was played under sunny skies on a beautiful football afternoon.

Ram first stringers, playing it close to the vest, piled up a 20-0 margin by halftime, then turned the job over to reserves who counted three more times. Shaw, whose 18-man squad has been manufactured only two touchdowns this year in losing eight straight games, entered the scoring column on a fourth quarter safety.

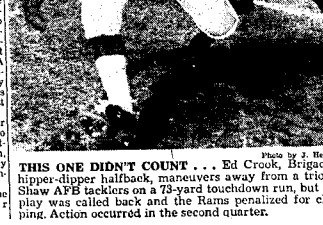

The Flyers had given to the Ram center line only to be stopped short of paydirt by a tough Brigade goal line stand. The Rams' first play resulted in an errant pitchout which the Blackblacks re-covered in their own end zone to hand Shaw their lone point. Allen completed three out of three passes for 60 yards, and Crook gave his usual exhibition of brookfield wizardry. He returned one of a Flyer punts, Tommy Lewis circled right end on a pitchout for 28 yards and six points on the Rams' second play from scrimmage.

Ed Hamilton secured the second marker early in the second frame on a one yard slant that culminated a 37 yard march. The blanket pass defense offered by Brigade produced three interceptions on its own during the game. Joe Fortunato, Joe McDonald, and Simon Perkins each stole an enemy aerial and returned them to paydirt on runs varying from 28 to 37 yards.

Hold Initial Cage Practice

The Special Troops Command basketball team began practice sessions this week at the Briant Wells Field House under the coaching guidance of Gil Shaw. It is expected to be ready for the early drills and several more men, now members of the Green Wave football team, are expected to report for practice within the next two weeks. Coach Shaw is an experienced basketball player with his job wealth of basketball experience and background. He played varsity ball for four seasons at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. A signed to the staff of the Infantry Center building office. He has been at Fort Benning for the past 15 months.

THIS ONE DIDN'T COUNT . . . Ed Crook, Brigade's punter, manuevers away from a trio of Shaw AFB tacklers on a 73-yard touchdown run, but the play was called back and the Rams pounced for clipping. Action occurred in the second quarter.

Ambitious Greenies Tackle Tough Rams

The School Brigade Rams will place their recently won league title on the line Sunday as they meet a renovated Green Wave of the CTC in Lawson field in the weekly TIC football feature. Both teams turned in away-from-home victories last week in preparing for their second clash of the season.

This Wave crew is a far cry from the purchaseless Greenies of early season days. Vern Lyons and his staff have molded a solid scrapping unit that asks no quarter from anyone. Chet Freeman

Novice Firing Stated for Nov.

The Infantry Center Novice Rifle and Pistol Matches will be held at Fort Benning's Coursen and McAndrew Ranges Nov. 17 and 28. Major Carl W. Byrd of Bowie, Texas, executive officer of the matches, said pistol competition will be fired Nov. 17 at Coursen Range, and rifle competition Nov. 28 at McAndrew Range.

Two Fort Benning units have entered a total of 26 teams in both matches. They are Combined Training Command, 60th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, Special Troops Command and the School Brigade.

To qualify as a contestant in the novice matches, a soldier must never have been a member of a winning firing team, never have fired an Army rifle, and never have won individual honors in any weapons competition. The winners will be awarded the winning teams, and medals will be presented winners in the individual competition.

When not actively engaged in the destruction of gridiron opponents, the School Brigade Rams are just another bunch of GIs, and not in the least bloodthirsty.

The CTC hearing Brigade's squad northward had barely cleared the Lawson field when four or five Rams arose, shook their parachutes, and soon had a lively game of dandelions going in the places after recesses. The players were dazed shortly by an enthusiastic group of kibitzers, and the game was going great guns till the pilot protested that they were making it hard to keep the ship level.

The remainder of the team, lacking energy for such violent sport, sought other means of passing the time. A visit, one by one, to the cockpit proved popular. A well-thumbed copy of LOOK magazine made the rounds, and the late Marilyn Monroe pictures received critical attention. Along with an article on Airborne training at Fort Benning. More than a few Rams whiled away the hours sound asleep on a mountain of parachutes and baggage.

Nearing the destination, the plane began its descent through a number of bumpy air pockets. As the Rams hit one and dropped in the most approved roller coaster style, all eyes swung toward Frank Kush in expectation. Frank smiled nonchalantly, but several minutes later was seen hunched over an empty bucket in somewhat less than top physical condition. He was joined soon after by several teammates.

After landing, copies of the Shaw weekly newspaper were distributed. A roar of laughter greeted an article which read ". . . while no advance information has arrived on the Fort Benning team, the title WAFB is the subject of an underdog for the eighth straight time." The wisdom of the writer, however, became evident the next day when the Rams practically dismembered the shorthanded Flyers, 40-2.

With no more ceremony than putting on their midnight black jerseys, a group of fan-loving young men were transformed into the fearsome machine familiar to post fans. They ground out the yardage and touchdowns reluctantly, in spite of the efforts of the title WAFB. The Rams' extra point kick was good and the Commanders' corner. Tomic's 72 yards for a touchdown ended right end on a pitchout for 28 yards and six points on the Rams' second play from scrimmage.

Ed Hamilton secured the second marker early in the second frame on a one yard slant that culminated a 37 yard march. The blanket pass defense offered by Brigade produced three interceptions on its own during the game. Joe Fortunato, Joe McDonald, and Simon Perkins each stole an enemy aerial and returned them to paydirt on runs varying from 28 to 37 yards.

Green Wave Running Offense Smashes Sewart Flyers, 19-13

Fort Benning's Green Wave unleashed a strong running attack that proved too much for the aerial game of the Sewart Air Force Base Carriers, defeating the side men by a 19-13 score at Nashville, Tenn. Saturday afternoon.

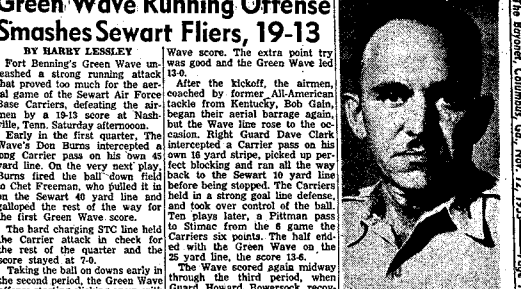

Early in the first quarter, The Wave's Don Burns intercepted an air carrier pass on his own six feet blocking and ran all the way back to the Sewart 10 yard line before being stopped. The Carriers held in a strong goal line defense, and took over control of the ball. Ten plays later, a Pittman pass to Stimac from the 6 game the Carriers six points. The half ended with the Green Wave on the 25 yard line, the score 13-6.

The Wave scored again midway through the third period, when Guard Howard Bowersock recovered a Carrier fumble in the end zone. The Greenie line, showing tremendous power, continued to throw the opposing passers for losses. It was one of these pass attempts that Tackle Clyde Sawyer hampered Pittman, allowing for Bowersock's recovery of the dropped ball.

With a minute and a half left of the last quarter, The Carriers made three out of four pass attempts and moved the ball down to the Green Wave 30 yard line. Then Pittman threw a desperation pass into the end zone, where Jim Shaw, fighting off a host of Wave defenders, made a leaping catch of the pass for the score. Frank Smith converted and the game ended with Green Wave on top 19-13.

Fort Benning's Quartermaster Lafayette would give a bona fide housewife. Modern equipment valued at over two million dollars, this facility can handle 100,000, 20,000 persons weekly, offering 35 day service.

Army's three time All-American Glenn Davis averaged 11.5 yards per carry in 1945, a record that still stands. Fullback Joe Fortunato of Mississippi can handle the ball 100 yards in 770 yards in 1952 to rank 16th nationally.

LEAVING POST. Capt. Elmer W. Knisely, Special Services sports officer, will leave Fort Benning for a Far Eastern assignment early next week. Capt. Knisely was instrumental in arranging our fine away-from-home football schedule. This is year in bringing professional boxing back to TIC, and in staging the recent Boys Club benefit fights. He began guiding athletics here Aug. 1, 1953.

GALOPPIN' GLENN Army's three time All-American Glenn Davis averaged 11.5 yards per carry in 1945, a record that still stands.

NOW WITH RAMS Fullback Joe Fortunato of Mississippi can handle the ball 100 yards in 770 yards in 1952 to rank 16th nationally.

PELL MELL MELL . . . Mel Boykin (with ball) picks up a pitchout from Joe Perry (70) to stop the snap and laterally out wide to Boykin, who was finally stopped on the Red Devil 30-yard line.

The National Boxing Association has issued a "fight or else" ultimatum to Archie Moore, lightweight champion, and Percy Bassett, who holds the interim featherweight title while champion Sandy Saddler is in the Army.

Center Proves Valuable, Aids Easy to Check Out

Demand Great For All Devices

Fort Benning operates the largest and most complete Army training-aids center in the United States, the latest and most important addition to it being a dining room and supply room annex in the old regional hospital area in Harmony Church. Here training aids of every description and size are stored and issued.

But perhaps the best thing about the annex and its work, so far as instructors are concerned, is the facility with which its treasure is made available, together with the ease with which aids may be withdrawn.

In order for an officer or any first-three-grader to withdraw an item from the annex, he needs simply to call there, choose the device, model, or chart that will serve his purpose and sign a hand receipt. It's as easy as that, according to Capt. Lewis I. Stein, officer in charge.

Found here are hundreds of devices useful in every conceivable instruction problem, and thousands of graphic training aids. (C) As covering every phase of the military from general orders to heavy weapons.

Weapons used by the Infantry may be found here in the form of wooden or plastic weapons made and constructed on a much larger scale than the actual size of the weapon so that a thorough study of the working mechanism can be made.

Charts covering most military topics are kept on file much in the same way newspapers are filed in a library. The transparency library contains over 2,000 master transparencies with facilities for Van-Graph equipment.

Since its opening, the annex has increased in popularity to the extent that approximately 5500 people visit it every month. These include students, teachers, training aids class through the building being completed this course) local and national military leaders and the VIPs that visit Fort Benning every month.

Capt. Lewis I. Stein from Teaneck, N. J. has recently been appointed officer in charge of this activity.

First OC Shop Becomes HQ For Painting, Repairs, Et Al

Utility, according to Webster, means "usefulness and public service." To Lt. Warren Osbourn, who heads the utilities and maintenance shop of the "First OC Regiment, and his men, it means that "the impossible sometimes takes a little longer," even if it includes bouncing tree trunks over colonel's office or finding money under bus stations.

The shop once was called P&P in accordance with TOXE, which stands for Police and Prison. But since the regiment had no prisoners, the name was changed a year ago by Lt. Osbourn.

The biggest job the section pulled was clearing the Regimental Area after last May's tornado. Area and roads had been cleared of downed trees and everything was spic and span, except for 30 tree trunks that were still in the ground.

The regimental commander gave the order to get rid of the stumps in any way possible. The P&P men took the order to heart. They used dynamite to blow the stumps loose, and the first one promptly sailed high into the air, ricocheted off the roof above the colonel's office and landed smack in the middle of his parking space, witness recall. In spite of it, not a widow was broken, nor a building damaged during the removal of the stumps.

All the power tools used by the U and M Shop have been obtained within the past year. Cpls. Tolson and Brown have painted 9167 helmet liners in the past few months, and Cpl. Peterson and Pfc. Vernon and Steichen are building paint sheds for every OC Company in the Regiment. Sgt. Cowell is the construction foreman while Cpl. Wilcox cuts the grass with a power mower.

writing about military matters and interpreting them in such a way that American readers might be able to understand them.

Throughout the Second World War and the Korean affair, Baldwin has been known for the accuracy of his reporting. In fact, one of his fellow newspapermen has given him what amounts to the supreme compliment among commentators: "It has a resolute determination to climb out on the yardarm and make pronouncements not warranted by maritime intelligence." This is not to say that Baldwin would not make a prediction. It only emphasizes the fact that his statements are based upon careful study and thorough knowledge. This kind of top reporting won for Baldwin a 1942 Pulitzer Prize.

Marilyn, Virginia And Cronin's Mixer

"Officer Candidate Robert D. Cronin, supplied the concrete mixer."

This bit of intelligence in a news release from the 22d Of-ficer Candidate Company has brought forth considerable speculation in the office of The Bayonet. "Where'd the candi-date procure the mixer up from?"

Marilyn Monroe and Virginia Mayo are invited to leave their handprints.

This part of the release was grand, indeed. The OCS have re-commenced the gazing ditch, around the company mess hall and changed the mess hall trail into a spanking new sidewalk. Laundable projects. The e-prints would be nice.

But what's a candidate doing with a concrete mixer? Any-body who can produce one of these machines, with the slight-est of ease, ought to be able to conjure up a Marilyn or a Virginia easily.

So the question now is, "Can he do it?"

Release Due For Soldiers Before Yule

WASHINGTON (APPS) — Most Army personnel scheduled for release from active duty during the Christmas season will complete transfer or separation from service in time to spend the holidays at home.

Individuals affected by this announcement are those normally scheduled for release between Dec. 19, 1953 and Jan. 4, 1954. With certain exceptions they will be released no later than Dec. 18.

This policy applies only to those in the U.S. or its territories at that time. Men returning from overseas commands for release during this period will be returned to civilian status as soon as possible after their arrival in port.

The three exceptions to this policy are:

- 1—Enlisted men of Reserve components who desire to remain on active duty to complete Reserve obligations.
- 2—Those inducted or enlisted under the Universal Military Training Act who volunteer to continue their active duty to fulfill Reserve obligations.
- 3—Those inducted or enlisted men under certain provisions of the UMF Act who must complete 21 months of active duty.

Manpower, Money Saver

New Accounting Plan Helps Benning Finance Office

A new integrated accounting system, which goes into effect Dec. 1, will produce "important manpower and money savings at regional and national finance offices," according to Lt. Col. Norris Shealy of Montgomery, Ala., acting Infantry Center comptroller.

The change, which is being instituted throughout the stateside Armies, will combine similar administrative offices, eliminating duplication and error in accounting reports, Col. Shealy said.

Lt. Col. Edwin Harding, Jr., of Alexandria, La., post finance officer, will become finance and accounting officer after Dec. 1 and will take over the responsibilities of reporting fiscal and civilian payroll accounting which are now handled by the comptroller.

Under the new plan, Col. Shealy explained, the finance and accounting officer will be able to coordinate reports to Third Army from (Please See BENNING, Page 18)

Ex-POW Tells Horrors of Struggle During 2 1/2 Years Imprisonment

St. Larry W. Morris, the first repatriated Korean prisoner of war to be received by the 500th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, gives a powerful account of his struggle for survival.

The lean Texan, now assigned to B Company was a prisoner of war on the Yellow River for two and a half years.

Morris, a squad leader in the 18th Airborne, made a valiant stand before taken captive. It was the second day after our second jump, March 28th, 1951," he said. "We were attacking like mad. My squad was forward of the platoon body, we attacked a machine gun and drove the enemy off, but before the rest of the platoon could reach us, we were counter-attacked. Seeing the odds were against me, I ordered my squad to fight with a business meeting at myself, a bunch of them jumped on me and hauled me off. I was kinda shocked at first. Being in the hands of the Chinese Infantry, I am no nice feeling at all." (Please See EX-POW, Page 18)

Many Wheels In OC Cycle Only Two In OC Behlow's

An Officer Candidates Training Cycle is different. Ask Col. Herbert Behlow of 17th OC Company, First Officer Candidate Regiment. He knows. There's not much similarity between OCS and the bicycle that Behlow has pedaled around for a good part of his life.

The OC started out with a bang at the age of 13. He cycled from his home in Los Angeles, to San Francisco and back again. A mere 100 miles.

Soon it became more than a boyhood interest. The OC took to racing and became a member of the North Hollywood Wheelmen and participated in many local races. He never placed less than third. Winning such races as the Pasadena Sprints led him to the Olympic trials at Milwaukee, Wis. where, in 1946, he took his first fourth place. He missed the trip to Europe by one man.

NEW OFFICER FOR 46TH Lt. Joseph Wood has just completed the Engineering course at Fort Belvoir, Ill. He has been assigned to the 46th Engineer Company.

Two veterans of the Korean war have recently been assigned to the 30th Regimental Tank Company. They are Col. Clarence M. Poe, Shippensburg, Pa., and Pfc. John E. Houser, of Emporium, Pa.

Infantry School Operations Impress 3 Greek Officers

Three Greek officers in the 24th Company, First Student Regiment, who are taking training here stated last week that they were impressed by the operations of the Infantry School.

Several companies of First Student Regiment have students of various nationalities. In 24th Company they have three Greek officers who are very much impressed with the operations at the Infantry School. These officers are Capt. John Rhodes, Capt. Nick Margaritis and Major Dimitrios Perelidis.

The trio is taking the Associate Infantry Officers Course after Major Perelidis completes this course, he plans to take the Airborne Training, and has already sent applications back to his home country. The other two officers will return to Greece upon completion of the course.

According to Maj. Perelidis the training in the Associate Course is very good. After completion of both courses the major plans to take a trip to the West and to New York. This is his first visit to the U.S. and he doesn't expect to come back soon, so he wants to be able to see as much as possible.

German Bride Travels Far To Celebrate Yule Season

BY MRS. TANA GUTIERREZ

"Next Christmas I'll be in Texas. The last one I caught me in the French West Indies, and the one before in Stuttgart, Germany," says Mrs. Hilde Beaupterth, chairman of the OC Wives Club.

"In Germany it was compulsory to take a foreign language. I chose English so I could read Shakespeare in the original." The choice turned out to be a practical one. She didn't know then, that she would marry an American and live in the United States.

Last year Hilde was working in the accounting department of the U.S. Army PX in Stuttgart when she met Louis Beaupterth. It's always a great temptation to ask a newly arrived European what his or her first impression of America was. We asked Hilde. The first American she met was the immigration officer at the airport. As he asked for her documents he appointed her as interpreter and remarked, "Is that your wedding hat you're wearing? Half trembling with fear at being turned back to the waiting plane she said, 'Oh no, regulations don't say anything about that. Should I have worn it?'" The man smiled, stamped her passport, and said, "No one you have on now."

"I'm sure your wedding hat couldn't be as beautiful as the one you have on now."

All the showing of the New York subway crowd, the frequent expeditions of the Fifth Avenue shop clerks, the hurried rush of automatic dancers, couldn't convince Mrs. Beaupterth that Americans were the best mannered people in the world.

Last Christmas, her husband obliged to see his folks in the St. Martin, one of the French possessions in the Caribbean. Hilde found out that the governorship of the island has been in the Beaupterth family for the last three generations. Louis' father is a senator who travels weekly by air to the meeting of the Assembly at Guadalupe, site of the French West Indies Government.

Louis and his bride will eventually settle in New York, where Louis was born. Hilde is busy with books on American history and government. She is preparing to take examinations on citizenship.

Army Brat Now in Training For Life in Military Field

Ever know an Army brat? The 12th Company of the First OC Regiment has an army brat of long standing. The regimented life of Army OCS is nothing new to OC David Person. Person, the son of a lieutenant colonel, has often been known to say, "Gee, this is just like home."

The OC went to Germany in 1946 as a civilian dependent of his father. He traveled through Italy, France, Germany, and Austria. The saying goes, "like father like son," and Person was no exception. He enlisted while in Europe. He finished basic training and leadership school at Ft. Dix, N. J.

He is a senator who travels weekly by air to the meeting of the Assembly at Guadalupe, site of the French West Indies Government.

VA Checks Status Of Vet Applicants

WASHINGTON (APPS) — The Veterans Administration will ask applicants seeking hospital care for ailments not connected with service to provide information concerning their financial status.

A new five-question form will be filled out by the veterans. It is designed to protect applicants from charges of "chiseling" on the government and to help determine (termite alias) pay for hospital treatment.

Legal provisions require that the VA consider the oath of the applicant, sufficient evidence of inability to defray medical expenses. The new form is to help the veteran get a clearer understanding of his personal financial status.

- The five questions to be asked by the VA are:
- 1—What is the current value of your property both real and personal?
  - 2—What is the current amount of your ready assets, in the form of cash, bank deposits, savings bonds, etc?
  - 3—If you own real property, what is the approximate amount of the unpaid mortgage or other indebtedness owed thereon?
  - 4—What are your average monthly expenditures, including your mortgage payments, and all other personal expenses including expense of your dependents?
  - 5—What was your average monthly income for the last six months from all sources?

Guard Proves Theft Stopper

The First OC Regiment's guard post, initiated some six months ago to cut down on thefts in the area has proved successful. The two outposts act as a check on unauthorized personnel entering the confines of the Regiment after duty hours.

The two outposts, located on Eighth Division Road, are manned by officer candidates during the evenings and weekends, with the exception of one hour on Saturdays when the Regimental guards and Provost Sergeant take over.

All cars are checked for papers. Those without are questioned. License numbers are taken and if the driver is a member of any organization an FBI file on that organization is notified.

We know how much Long Distance calls mean to service men, and we want to give you the best possible service. Here are two ways you can help:

1. If you can give the operator the out-of-town telephone number, she won't have to consult "Information" in the city you're calling and your call will go through faster.
2. Since you may be hard to locate, it is generally better for you to call the folks back home, instead of their calling you. Charges can be reversed.

To help you get faster service, you'll find out-of-town directories for the larger cities at each telephone center.

Brigade Overpowers Greenies

ALL IN VAIN... Was this bit of maneuvering in Sunday's Ram-Green Wave battle. Here Chet Freeman gets set to utilize Dave Steward's tackle to complete a 73-yard trek to the Brigade one-yard line late in the first half. Officials, however, called holding on the play to nullify exactly half of Freeman's fine run.

Six Fourth Quarter TDs Run Up Big Score For Rams

The overwhelmingly superior numbers of the School Brigade completely were down a magnificently battling Special Troops Green Wave Sunday as the Rams hung up their third league victory against a single loss.

The final score was 58-25, but these figures are highly deceiving. The Greenies swapped punch for punch with the mighty Rams until injuries and fatigue opened the flood in the final minutes for a dice of Brigade scoring. At the outset of the fourth quarter, STC trailed only 20-13.

Joe (El Toro) Fortunato was the man most responsible for Brigade's triumph. The ex-Mississippi State ace carried 12 times for 133 yards, including touchdowns runs of 25 and 34 yards included. Fortunato was a grim figure of churning havoc who with well-nigh impossible to stop. His usually elusive little running man, Ed Crook, was kept busy by the Wave defense and had one of 21 net yards for the day.

Revenge Hungry Blackshirts Tackle Commanders Sunday

The School Brigade Express, highballing along toward its third consecutive CTC championship, will meet the only team to derail them Sunday when CTC's hot-and-cold Commanders seek to repeat their earlier win over the Rams.

Kick off will be 2 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium, and for that game an admission of 25c will be charged with receipts going toward the annual football banquet in December.

In the first meeting of the two, Brigade was a lopsided choice over CTC, but fell 19-13 before an irresistible second half offensive led by Mel Boykin and Bobby Edlin.

These two will again shoulder the burden for the Commanders, who are a picture of inconsistency. The blue and white warriors the heights to upset the Rams, then lost the next week to Special Troops, who hadn't won a game till then. CTC came back fighting to dump 50th, playing in a not-to-be-betrayed manner, but lost last week to a Camp Rucker team.

Boykin, CTC is one of the most consistent pass receivers seen this year.

Moorehead injured the team's lead lift both psychologically and materially. Since Bobby joined the Commanders, they have crystallized into a real football machine. In the victory over 50th, Moorehead played for his best game of the season in running, pass grabbing, and defensive work.

Moorehead received an eye injury in the loss to Rucker last week, and it is not known whether the All-American will be in for playing condition by Sunday or not, the Commanders hope. He stopped the Rams' potent attack with 185 yards rushing in their first game, is expected to lose to CTC, and the Brigadiers are a gosh-awfully team when they want to be. Speed, power, passing, blocking, tackling — the list of things the Rams do well reads like a book. They have won the game. They sport five or six top running threats, a bevy of passers, and a backfield of wealth of big, mobile linemen.

The overall picture is a team points to a Brigade victory. But CTC beat 'em once and is entirely capable of repeating.

Wanda Widen Margin

Brigade scored eight between touchdowns passes by Burns and Ed Hamilton. The Greenies strove mightily to keep the game pace, but the Rams had too much and too often. Crook, playing quarterback, led a 69-yard touchdown pass to Jim Hart, and Hamilton intercepted a desperation Wave toss and went to yards for the Rams.

Bragy To Hold Swim Meet

Fort Bragg, N. C. will be the host for the All-Army Swimming and Diving Championship Meet to be held Aug. 26 and 27, 1952.

The swimming meet will be held by Brad Rowland, a young man who has made quite a name for himself in football circles. Play in with McMurry College, a small West Texas school, Rowland for the 1951 Military District All-Army's leading ball carriers while making the Little All-American football right and left. In 1950 he Spotlighting Sports. Bowl game selection committees cast a hasty glance at last week's football results, groaned despairingly in union, and ordered optimism in mass.

Post season hopefuls left the autumn leaves last Saturday. When the sun mercifully set, only Notre Dame and Maryland stood unscathed, neither of whom is open for a Jan. 1 bowl. Notre Dame, report says, considers itself above such pecuniary proceedings, and Maryland is already tabbed for the Orange Bowl as the result of an agreement between the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big Seven — which consists of Oklahoma and six unfortunate Villians.

With these teams off the list, the New Year's Day football people are faced with what is known as slim pickins. Of course, the Orange Bowl and Rose Bowl folks need only to unlock their gates on the first day of 1952, and four teams will be present by courtesy of their respective conferences. However, it behooves the Sugar Bowl to produce two combatants and the Cotton Bowl one.

The Sugar Bowl usually draws on the Southeastern Conference for one or both of its teams, and the SEC is a defeat riddle shambles this year. Auburn, with a loss and a tie, and Alabama, with a loss and three ties, have the best records at this time, but several days are ahead. Auburn must play Alabama, and if the War Eagle is already tabbed for the Tide, they could write their own tickets either to Dallas or New Orleans.

Alabama is a possibility, but in order to wrap up a New Year's spot they must show Auburn and mighty Maryland, either of which is a full day's work. Georgia Tech, beaten twice and tied once, must also be considered along with off-buffed Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Tib, in fact, was the most logical post season candidate until Alabama upset them. Mississippi was well thought of before the Maryland fiasco.

The bowl people shudder at the definite possibility that Maryland will rule Alabama's desirability by walloping the Tide, and that 'Bama will then claim Auburn's hoster the following week. The Tide is directed at Maryland, who seeped up their own bowl appearance and then systematically spotted other post season possibilities.

The Cotton Bowl is somewhat better situated than the Sugar Bowl, since the Southwest Conference champion is automatically the host. At present, Rice, Baylor, Rice, and SMU are in a four-way deadlock with one conference defeat apiece. Odds and the schedule favor Texas to win out while the others indulge in mutual throat-cutting. Regardless of who is the eventual champion, the others will be glad to go on to the next possibility for the Sugar Bowl to look into.

As to who will be the Cotton Bowl's visiting team, it's anybody's guess. The Dallas group was known to be interested in Georgia Tech and Auburn, along with the Sugar Bowl people. Subtle inquiries were also made to see if the Atlantic Coast Conference would let Duke or West Virginia come out and play.

Headed competition is highly probable between the Cotton Bowl and the Sugar Bowl for participants. New Orleans, of course, has more exotic flavor than Dallas, but the Texans pay the largest salary. In fact, the Cotton Bowl teams will reap more financial returns than any of the other New Year's competitors, each school pocketing better than $50,000 for their afternoons' work.

Out in Pasadena, Cal., the Tournament of Roses has expressed confidence that the 40th annual Rose Bowl game will definitely be played. Beyond this, the Californians refuse comment, of course, who can blame them? Leading teams of the Big Ten and Pacific Coast clash annually in this Father of All Bowl Games, but both conferences are in a state of chaos. Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan State are in a Big Ten stalemate, while UCLA, Southern Cal., and Stanford are all started up in the PCC.

Wisconsin and USC are ineligible for the 1952 game, having represented last year. Michigan State is the most likely Midwesterner to play, and who can blame them? ## League Lead Up For Grabs In Amateur Boxing Tonight

Colorful, turbulent post amateur boxing returns to Briant Stadium in CTC boxing. In his only 1951 appearance, he won a handsome and long struggle from Richard Woodley, also a tonight glower.

Heavy fighting on the first card of the season, was a popular decision over 50th's Pat Tamuhur, and is capable of making the class of Matthews humble.

George Walker, CTC, will take on Brigade's Charles Colley in a heavyweight battle that should be a good one. Walker lost a hotly contested split decision to George Horpe in his only start so far, but looking to win. A big boy who weighs in at 225, Walker is surprising in the ring.

50th's Floyd Wright meets flashy Manuel Mederious of CTC in a welterweight that should have the fans pulling their hair. Mederious won his last try against Fred Benton, but was the target of 50th's Joe Bowen.

Light armed Sam Brown, still another CTC representative, will tangle with Brigade's Pete Stalker, who will be making his first start of the year. The rascally home town boy from Columbus, is unbeaten in two fights this season. Troop featherweight, is scheduled to box Al Barotello of 50th, one of Brown's victims, in another promising tussle.

Many crowd favorites will be seen in action as Robert Lane, Brigade, meets Percy Ponce, STC. Harry Stoner, Brigade, tests Bill Costa, 50th; Bernie Moore, CTC. Don Frasier, junior little, 50th; Olive Bud, CTC, takes on 50th's Joe Bowen.

CTC, STC Begin 'Mural Basketball' Benning Teams Face Badly On Alien Soil Over Weekend

Although football season is still far from being closed, intramural basketball is going strong among several units on post.

Special Troops Command has a four-team round robin league with functions on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights. The Finance Disbursing Section is leading the way with a strong Edlin AFB team 55-13. D. First Transportation Bn, and Hq. and Co., First Special Troops Bn.

Combat Training Command's League is still in the process of forming, but it will also be an eight-team league between companies are being played to determine the team to represent the battalion. A single round robin league will be used, and an elimination tournament will be conducted at the conclusion of league play.

Post teams met with rough sledding in their out of town football trips over the past weekend. CTC journeyed to Camp Rucker to drop a 207 decision to the 15th Infantry and 50th AFB team 55-13. D. First Transportation Bn, and Hq. and Co., First Special Troops Bn.

If time remaining and circumstances permit, Kozar will show Infantry Center fans some of the best fullbacking they've ever seen.

Leon the Proen didn't dare show his face around the Bayonet office after suffering his worst day of the season. His fearless Forewarning Agency came up with only 15 winners out of 24 attempts, with one game ending in a tie. This dropped Leon's average to 51 of 66 and .769 for the year. However, we did receive a message by carrier pigeon from Leon with his predictions for this week's game, and a report that he had moved to a residence near the North Pole. The Press said this would eliminate the static electricity which caused his prophesying slide rule to malfunction.

For games of Nov. 21, the FFA predicts: Arkansas over LSU, Baylor over Clemson, Auburn over Georgia Tech, Fordham over Holy Cross, Texas Tech over Houston, Indiana over Purdue, Missouri over Kansas, Tennessee over Kentucky (?), Maryland over Alabama, Michigan State over Marquette, Ohio State over Michigan, Wisconsin over Minnesota, Oklahoma over Nebraska, Illinois over Northwestern, Nitre Dame over Iowa, Rice over TCU, Stanford over California, UCLA over USC in the big one on the coast, and in the Special of the Week, Philander Smith over Miles.

P.M. Warns Civilian Hunters

The Fort Benning provost marshal has cautioned civilians against the danger of hunting on the reservation. Civilians are not authorized to hunt on the reservation, and those apprehended may be summoned to appear before a U. S. Commissioner to answer a charge of trespassing, said Col. Maurice J. Fitzgerald.

Several civilian hunters have been apprehended recently in the range areas of the post, Col. Fitzgerald said. Some were without state game licenses, and some were armed with rifles. Firing a rifle anywhere on the reservation, except on designated rifle ranges, is prohibited. It creates a hazard because of heavy foliage and underbrush, also students in training can be easily seen, he said. A large portion of the reservation is used for range firing. Col. Fitzgerald pointed out, and trespassing in those areas is extremely hazardous to individuals because of the danger of duds and live shells.

French Vet Here For Schooling

Sergeant-Chief Yves Berhet, a 30-year-old French Army regular with 10 years service, has recently arrived here to attend Special Ranger Course No. 3 with the 10th Company, Second Student Regiment.

A veteran of the fighting in Indo-China and Korea, Berhet was awarded the Bronze Star while serving as an interpreter in Korea with elements of the Second Division. He also held the Croix de Guerre.

While stationed in Indo-China he spent two years in command of an armored patrol vehicle and fire men ferreting out guerrillas who infiltrated the Tonkin area. Often, he said, troops would be fired upon as they left cabarets and restaurants; homemade bombs would be thrown by rebel raiders to disrupt performances at movie theaters. Berhet was born in the Clichy sector of Paris, near the Eiffel Tower.

WHO'S WHO? ... Two thirds of this threesome are twins and one third is only a brother, but just which is which is anybody's guess.

Triplet Tricky

Student and cadre of the 105th Company, Second Student Regiment, had reason to believe that they were seeing triple when basic non-commissioned officers course No. 1 started. Three brothers, Owen, Edward and John Downing, all privates first class and alike as new pennies, showed up for the class. They walked alike, talked alike, and their handwriting was alike. Eventually, everyone got used to the idea of having triplets around, until word got out that one of the brothers was a "phony" two years older than the other

Brothers Baffle Battalion

After days of keeping their classmates guessing, the Downings finally revealed the story. The "phony triplet" turned out to be 21-year-old Owen. He joined the Army with Ed and John in order to keep the trio together. The brothers managed not to get separated during basic training and "leaders" course at Fort Jackson, and here their luck still holds out. They're still together.

Britians View Training Here

Two military figures of Britain's Commonwealth of Nations viewed the U. S. Infantry's training program here this week. They were Major Gen. M. M. Molloy, Australian military attaché to the U. S. Gen. West, addressed the Infantry School's advanced officers Class No. 1 Monday. Upon his arrival, conferred with Brig. Gen. Aubrey S. Newman, deputy commanding general, and Brig. Gen. Carl F. Fritzsche, assistant commandant. Tuesday he toured the Main Post and witnessed airborne training and a recoilless rifle demonstration. Brig. Molloy arrived on the post Sunday evening and began his Monday tour with conferences with Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander, and Gen. Fritzsche. He also conferred with Col. John H. Hightower, Infantry School director of instruction, received a briefing on the school's Operations Office and saw an M-1 rifle demonstration. The military attaché viewed the officer candidate program before lunching with the First Officer Candidate Regiment and witnessing airborne training. Brig. Molloy's Tuesday agenda included a briefing on the ranger training program.

Sixty-two American soldiers from Puerto Rico have arrived on post for assignment. The English-speaking Insular troops are actually twins. ## Army Paying For Learning

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Ft. McPherson, Ga. — Opportunities for learning while earning pay are unlimited in the Army today. Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, commander, Third Army, pointed out recently. "The modern Army," he said, "is so highly mechanized that a young man entering the service today can get training in almost any craft he chooses, and by applying himself there is no ceiling on the heights he can reach either as a soldier or as a civilian."

Like Being Fired At?

Old Tankers Play Dummy At Rocket Launcher Range

The regimental tank company of the 30th Infantry Regiment, has one of the few jobs in the army that nobody wants and nobody envisions other than the men of the 30th Tank Company. For the likes of one being shot at, and bit, dozens of times daily several times every week. This feat is accomplished over and over again on post rocket launcher and recoilless rifle ranges inside a heavily armored tank, used for target purposes only. Using old converted World War II tanks, with a little added armor on the right places, these tankers ride the range in front of the firing line as the target, and as yet not a single casualty has been inflicted. Of course, Infantry School classes don't fire actual anti-tank ammunition, but use a much smaller charge. A rocket launcher, or bazooka, fires a projectile minus the charge at the target tank. When a direct hit is achieved by the rocket gunner, the east warhead shatters and only mars the tank's hull. On the recoilless rifle ranges, a sub-caliber round is fired through the tube of the rifle and it has little effect on the tank's tough skin, but yet gives the gunner the practice

Of the 320th Airborne FA Battalion, photographed by M. Sgt. Joe Wolfe, 508, depicts in three dimension the splendor of the Artillery. Made in 1950 by Cpl. Donald Williams, of the organization, the artistic symbol stands loftily on the Artillery Hill.

M. Sgt. G. Sekerak 508th NCO Sets New Course Mark

M. Sgt. George M. Sekerak of Company I, 508th ARCT graduated recently from the Advanced Leaders Course, with a score of 309 out of the possible 1000 points. This was the best score ever obtained by a student of the school. With over eight years of airborne service, Sekerak, accomplished a feat which would be hard for the best of NCO's. He entered the United States in 1939, arriving from Czechoslovakia, and attended high school in Cleveland, O. prior to enlisting. He is still not a citizen of the U.S., but he has proved himself before the eyes of many as being worthy of a citizenship.

STRICTLY FRESH

THE 1953 election results seem to indicate that in many districts the Republicans were lulled to sleep by the "Duckey Brenden."
 This nation's government is surrounded in the system of checks and balances; its citizens are doomed trying to balance their checkbooks.

 Col. Edward L. Rowny, P-TA president, said that the seating capacity of Path Auditorium will be expanded to accommodate all association members. "The attendance at our September meeting exceeded our fondest hopes and resulted in a 'standing room only' situation," he said, "but we have now taken steps to provide a seat for each parent in attendance."
 Col. Rowny also announced that the nursery on the Main Post will be open the evening of Nov. 22 for 1953. The Second Student provide baby-sitter service for post parents.
 Detachment in the three post schools will be on band in their rooms after the business portion of the meeting.
 "This meeting will mark Fort Benning's observance of National Education Week," Col. Rowny said, "and we hope that each parent will take the opportunity to visit his child's room and view the work being done in our school system."

Brigade Over Top For Red Feather

With $13,582.61

In the recent Red Feather Campaign, all units of the School Brigade succeeded in surpassing their goals.

A look at the final results, showed that the First Student Regiment exceeded its quota of $487,000 by $71,824. The Second Student Regiment was $477,000 over its $1,800,000 quota and the Infantry School Detachment exceeded its designated amount of $106,000 by $64,235. When all was tallied, it was found that The School Brigade exceeded its quota of $11,068,000 by $1,976,61 to reach a total of $13,044,611.

650 Enrolled In TIS Classes Under Way

Studies began Monday for 650 students enrolled in four classes at the Infantry School and graduation exercises were held for two classes with a total enrollment of 532.

Open this week were the associate company officers course, 200 students, basic infantry officers course, 200, and officers communications course, 5. The basic non-commissioned officers course, with 200 students, began yesterday.

Post to Get Two Top Shows

Two special entertainment features have been booked for Fort Benning next week.

"The Faron Young Show," a favorite Third Army soldier show, will play the post for three days beginning Nov. 30, and a musical will appear for two performances Dec. 2.

Faron Young, who has traveled with Third Army package shows before, will bring his revue here for the first time. It will feature entertainers from previous Third Army Special Services presentations.

"Broadway Revue" is a package show from New York City featuring entertainers from supper clubs and metropolitan theaters. The show is sponsored by Radio Station WOH and travels to military installations all over the U. S.

The New Yorkers will present their show to patients of the hospital Wednesday afternoon and will perform at the Main Theater at 8:30 that evening.

Wives Are Honored At Medec Review

Personnel of three medical and dental units held a review at French Field yesterday in honor of their wives.

Representing the women were Mrs. Chester C. Cotejewski, wife of Capt. Cetejewski of the Hospital Duty Detachment; Mrs. Wayne W. Chester, wife of Capt. Chester of the Dental Detachment; and Mrs. William H. Mathis, wife of Capt. Mathis of the 5th Medical Detachment.

The three commands presented courages to the women and gifts from Columbus and LaGrange will be on hand to dance with the OCs.

Thursday afternoon will find the candidates playing bingo, and Friday night they will put on their variety show with prizes going to the winners. The affair is being arranged by the OCS and the First OC Regiment's command.

Album Here Sunday For Big Evening

Fort Benning will be greeting one of its oldest "friends" when Gustave Haenschen brings his American Album of Familiar Music here Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at the concert at the Main Post Theater. For 22 years Mr. Haenschen and his "family" have been weekly guests in millions of American homes, and now, at long last, here is the first opportunity for their fans on post to meet them personally. Special Services, TIC, will present the show.

"The Music America Loves Best" is an album of the best note of the Album. A completely rounded program of the kind of music the public loves to sing and dance to from Broadway, Hollywood, radio, TV, and the concert and opera stages, will be presented by Mr. Haenschen, his orchestra, chorus, and soloists. Designed for eye appeal as well as ear appeal the concert will actually be an evening in the Album tradition. To assure the public of this Mr. Haenschen has acquired the services of Director Charles Adams, who has given the program all the smoothness and swift pacing usually reserved for the best Broadway musicals.

Stars Renowned In Music Field

Given stellar billing with the American Album of Familiar Music here Sunday night is Vivian Della Colsen, known from coast to coast as a bright star in all fields of music — concert, opera, radio, and television. Gustave Haenschen and Miss Della Colsen have appeared together many times on the air.

The young tenor Earl Williams, hit of "Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights," and the romantic lead of more than a dozen musicals is re-created along with Michael Roberts, baritone, a recent concert discovery. "I heard dozens of baritones, but Roberts is ahead of all of them," Haenschen said.

The public is invited — adults $1.50 and children 75c.

Events Popping At Victory Lodge

Victory Lodge, the "retreat" resting place of officer candidates, will be the scene of gala festivities over the Thanksgiving Day weekend.

Saturday night and Sunday afternoon will feature The New Yorkers, a five-piece combo, and girls from Columbus and LaGrange will be on hand to dance with the OCs.

Thursday afternoon will find the candidates playing bingo, and Friday night they will put on their variety show with prizes going to the winners. The affair is being arranged by the OCS and the First OC Regiment's command.

Blackout Training When Birds Walk Army Wingmen Fly

When birds walk, pilots in the Army Aviation Section here don't necessarily follow suit. They turn to their instruments and take to the sky.

Instrument flying came to Fort Benning as a result of the opening last July of an instrument pilot course by the Army Aviation School at Fort Sill, Okla.

The course is eight weeks, two weeks longer than previous training Army aviators underwent at civilian contract schools. The specialized training enables pilots to fly without reference to the ground or actual horizon.

However, pilots say it still isn't possible to fly in all kinds of weather. Sometimes it is advisable to walk when the birds walk.

Having attended the Fort Sill school, pilots in The Infantry Center Army Aviation Section, headed by Capt. W. M. Mahone, have set up a training program to keep flyers proficient in instrument flying. Instrument-qualified pilots in the section are Capt. William E. First Lt. C. E. Urrilla, and Capt. O. G. Mullins.

Qualified instrument pilots are required to log each month a minimum of two hours in the link trainer at Lawson Air Force Base and two hours of simulated flying "under the hood."

This is a term used when a flyer covers the wind-shield of his plane with orange boggles. The combination provides a near-complete blackout, with only the instruments lighted. However, when flying thus, a safety pilot must be along, minus the blue goggles.

For renewal of his instrument ticket a flyer is required to log a minimum of 20 hours of actual flying. (Please See AVIATION, Page 11)

Soldiers Gobble Tons of Turkey

Fort Benning troops will consume 10 tons of turkey today, according to Major Berthal A. Holbrook, commissary officer.

The menu also includes shrimp cocktail, assorted relishes, sage dressing and gillet gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, candied yams, buttered string beans, corn O'Brien, Waldorf salad, pork-chopose rolls, pumpkin pie with whipped cream, mince meat pie, fresh fruits, candy, mixed nuts, and coffee.

Post Privilege Cards Combined

A new privilege identification card combining post privileges personnel and their dependents in their units. Personnel without families will not require a card.

Commissary Privilege Cards for dependents of a family, they may be used for the Commissary, and other privileges are available upon presentation of the regular ID card.

Dependents are authorized privileges in accordance with regulations governing the facility card. A dependant must be 16 years old to obtain a post exchange privilege card. (Please See CLERK, Page 11)

Eisenhower, wife of Major Eisenhower of the 30th Infantry Regiment, together with the President's grandchildren, before continuing on to Augusta.

900 Pack P-TA Meet; Halloween Nets $3,000

More than 900 Fort Benning parents attended open houses in the classroom of the post children's school system last Monday night as the Parent-Teachers Association observed National Education Week.

At a business meeting in Faith School auditorium prior to the open house, Lt. Col. J. R. Francis announced that the P-TA Halloween Carnival at the post had netted a profit of slightly more than $3,000.

"The carnival had two goals," he said. "One was to provide wholesome Halloween entertainment for children of all ages. The other was to provide working capital for the P-TA. The fact that the carnival attracted an attendance of 14,000 and netted such a substantial profit would seem to indicate that we reached both goals."

Col. Francis was chairman of the P-TA Halloween carnival committee.

A budget for the remainder of the school year was approved by the membership. Major expenditures will be for teaching aids for the system. Opague projectors, encyclopedias, record players, records and kindergarten materials will be purchased.

Pfc. Joins Kelly Of Korea Fame

A 20-year-old veteran of more than 10 months' action in Korea reported to Fort Benning recently but never expected to meet here a man whom he had known well on a bloody hillside in Korea.

Pfc. Harry J. Mahon, Company D, First Special Troops Battalion, Special Troops Command, was a wounded in Korea shortly before the end of hostilities. Harry was a member of a 30-man platoon defending Outpost 199, in South-central Korea. The enemy attacked the position with mortars, machine guns, and all the rest, virtually wiping out the Americans, leaving 10 defenders, wounded, but still alive. One of the wounded was Pfc. Mahon.

Earlier Outpost 199 and the hill adjoining it had been christened "Kelly Hill" in honor of Capt. Woodrow W. Kelly, now Company D commanding officer of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, First Special Troops Battalion, which Mahon now serves.

AUSTRALIAN VISITS

A Serious 'Joiner' Puts Heart in Civic Jobs

"I'm a great believer in the necessity for pride in civic duty," says Capt. John C. Hughes, instructor in the Tactical Department.

An admitted "joiner" of organizations he believes in serving every organization he joins. "I takes almost all of my off-duty time, but I get a lot of pride out of working in civic affairs."

The versatile tactical instructor—who calls Herrin, Ill., his home—is active in Masonic work at Fort Benning. He is a member of the National Sojourners—composed of officers who are Masons—and in Scottish Rite and 32nd Degree Masonic work. Besides holding membership in other Masonic organizations he is a member of the Lions Club as a life member of the American Legion in Illinois.

Capt. Hughes is also active in church work on the post and teaches a class of boys at the Post Sunday School. Mrs. Hughes joins him in this work and, besides teaching a class of her own, is a member of the church choir.

Because of his wide interest in civic and church affairs, Captain Hughes has addressed numerous civic groups in Georgia.

And he has been just as active in his chosen profession, that of an Infantry unit leader. He received his commission here in 1943 and served with the 11th Airborne Division in the Pacific Theater during World War II. With the outbreak of hostilities in Korea he was assigned to the 24th Division. He is one of the few men in the Army today to have been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross twice. He was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action and has received five Purple Hearts for wounds received in seven major campaigns.

Hughes graduated with the 1930 advanced class at the Infantry School before joining 1st Company of the Tactical Department's attack group.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD ARMY, Ft. Monmouth, Ga. — There has been almost an 85 per cent increase in the number of Third Army personnel attending civilian colleges in the past year, according to Third Army Headquarters.

The Army, constantly trying to improve efficiency by raising the educational level of its men, is encouraging those qualified to enroll in colleges and universities. Uncle Sam pays 75 per cent of the tuition for enlisted men and 50 per cent for officers up to and including first lieutenant.

According to Col. Ralph M. Montross, Third Army Troop Information and Education Officer, 13 of the most popular courses are those in Public Speaking, Mathematics, and Languages.

TURKEY WINNERS GET Free Thanksgiving
The Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance Association held its fifth annual turkey shoot Nov. 22 at the post's skeet range. The gunners' targets were eight by 10-inch squares placed 25 yards from the firing line, and shotguns and ammunition were furnished by the association. The 10 high scorers each received a free turkey, the next 10 were given hams, and the succeeding 10 received chickens.

Timber!

(From 3d Army Press Reports)
 The cultivation and harvesting of pulpwood and sawtimber today is big business.
 Lt. General A. R. Bolling in a recent letter to the Chief of Engineers, Department of the Army, pointed out that raw material consisting of sawtimber and pulpwood harvested during the five-year period ending December 31, 1952 had a value of almost six billion dollars. Without the pulpwood, the paper industry, harvesting can almost be doubled, while by 1960 the cutting rates will be approximately five times what they are today.
 About 702,000 acres of land are timber, according to R. Becton, the Third Army forester, who estimates that during the past three years the annual cut of sawtimber has averaged 28,180,000 board feet, while nearly 40,000 cords of pulpwood were harvested annually during the past two years.
 The five-year total of sawtimber harvested was 142,570,000 board feet. Of this, 185,570,000 board feet went into government use while 27,020,000 board feet were sold on the open market. During this period, 123,348 cords of pulpwood were harvested and sold.
 The total value of sawtimber and pulpwood harvested was $74,333, the forester said. Various government departments in purchasing this lumber and pulpwood are the U. S. Treasury $1,824,285.
 The pulpwood, sold at an average price of $12.25 per cord, poured $436,950 into the United States Treasury.
 Becton said there are nine installations in the Third Army containing timber in commercial quantities. They are Fort Benning, Jackson, Bragg, McClellan, and Fort Bragg. The Alabama Ordnance works at Coosa Pines also contain large tracts.
 Harvesting, he said, is by private contract but under strict government control. Under this method of harvesting only the protection which is being given to the forests, the annual yield will last indefinitely.
 "Forest Management on Military Reservations," a booklet recently released by the Department of the Army, contains many photographs showing how the forests are protected against their worst enemy—fire. It also shows all of the activities that go on in these forests, such as the planning, and harvesting under the controlled method. There are also photos of fire trees scattered about in vast forests of stumps, left by the harvesters so that their seeds will fall to the ground and start another crop of trees.

The Chaplain's Corner
Prayer Clothes Man in Holiness

BY CHAPLAIN (FIRST LT.) BERNARD A. MUSSMAN
 Prayer is a universal phenomenon in the lives of men. The reason why we pray," says William James, "is simply that we cannot help praying." It is an instinct that springs eternally from man's unquenchable faith in a living God, almighty and merciful, who beareth prayer and answereth those who call upon Him in truth.
 What bread is to the body, prayer is to the soul. Prayer is the food of the soul. The spiritual glow of one prayer lasts until the utterance of the next, even as the strength derived from one meal lasts until the next one. The Jewish Mystics compare the action of prayer upon the human spirit to that of the flame upon the coal. "As the flame clothes the black, sooty coal in a garment of fire and releases the heat imprisoned therein, even so prayer clothes a man in a garment of holiness, evokes the light and fire implanted within him by his maker, and illumines his being."
 Prayer is the wireless message between man and God. Prayer has the double charm of bringing God down to man and lifting man upward to God. The man in 1850 who summed up prayer in the following terms:
 "When my prayer was a duty or a spiritual luxury, or an escape into the vague recesses of the infinite, then God did not hear it; for my soul was lost in the suffices of hypocrisy."

 "I have since learned that my soul case for God. Have I great shores, alone, the waters of healing wash away the sands of trouble."
 "I have since learned that God does not hater His purpose because I have sinned. He does not have since learned to rise in prayer and to uplift myself to God's purpose."
 "I have since learned how to challenge each day and emerge the victor when I conquer myself through prayer."

Thanksgiving: Korea Style In 1951

Thanksgiving Day has a deep meaning to most of us, but to the Army chaplain, he served the 46th Port Battalion for 10 months. Back in the Far East, he served in the 1st Cavalry in combat in Korea. He has also seen duty at Fort Bragg and Fort Benning.
 Chaplain Bussey joined the Combat Training Command in February 1951. His office is in Chapel No. 4, 80th Infantry Regiment, Fort Benning, Ga.
 He was born in Columbia, where he attended Sevier High School. He then attended Morris Brown College and graduated from Turner Seminary in 1948.
 This Thanksgiving Day he will hold services at 10 a.m. in Chapel No. 4, a special offering to be collected for Korean orphans will be taken up.

Army Changes 'Dozer to Typer'

The transition from bulldozer operator to operating a typewriter is quite a change for anyone. Pvt. Glenn E. Leure of Company A, 30th Infantry Regiment, has taken it in stride. He has been a refrigeration repairman, bulldozer operator, truck driver, welder, farmer, and now soldier.
 Pvt. Leure is attending clerk typist and finance school on the post. Not long ago he was chauffeuring a bulldozer on the Pennsylvania highway before entering the Army last April.

CHAPLAIN BUSSEY

He chuckled.
 The chaplain's job sometimes extends to other activities, on this day he acted as a special delivery mailman. Before he left on his rounds he loaded his vehicle with some 25 food packages from the boys' line. In addition to his usual leading divine services, he spread cheer among the weary men as well as early St. Nicholas.
 Chaplain Bussey's career in the Army began in 1945 when he served in Hawaii for a year. In 1946 he went to Italy. There he performed the duties of a chaplain and served in the office of the Secretary of the Navy. He was released from active duty as a commander.
 In 1947 he returned to private practice with several legal firms in Washington, D. C., New York, where he specialized in incorporation and financial law. He became a partner in the firm in 1949, but resigned to accept his appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force.

Diplomat, Space, Terror On The Bookshelf

TIME AND TIME AGAIN by James Hilton (Little, 306 pages). Pleasantly reminiscent of "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips," is this chronicle of some 50 years in the life of Stuffy Anderson, unimportant British diplomat, who remembers his own thwarted romance, tries to steer his son Gerald away from the same disappointment, and sees personal and historic events repeat themselves.

CHILDHOOD'S END, by Arthur Charles Clarke (Ballantine, 214 pages). What seemed to be the benevolent rule of these aliens — or would they rebel?

TERROR MACHINE, by Gregory Kilroy (Praeger, 400 pages). The author describes the Soviet system of colonial exploitation in action, relates his close observations of the ramifications, the political operational methods and the maintaining forces of the secret police (which permeate the Soviet machine like an electric circuit) and the psychological factors influencing the actions of its higher officials.

Chanson de Thule Wows Those Northern Lights

THULE, Alaska — (APPS) — The Northern Lights have seen strange sights, but the strangest they ever did see was the show at Thule (which is pronounced too-lee), "Frosty Faces of '53."

This gala musical extravaganza, as gala and as extravagant as you can get in this part of the world, opened the new base theater here, located only a scant 900 miles from the North Pole—which is about as close as you would want to get.

It was a thrilling spectacle for this isolated outpost of the Northeast Air Command. There was an orchestra, first nighters, and a chorus line—the works. However, there were a few difficulties.

The orchestra, which rehearsals started, had no instruments and not many more musicians. The instruments were flown in for the show and the airman of Thule did their best.

As for first-night celebrities, the airman managed to round up Governor and Mrs. E. Moorek Rasmussen and a few guests from the nearby Danish village.

mention a few other things — and the show went on.

The curtain was hardly up when a dainty chanteuse stopped the show; a petite little lady named "Frosty" (pronounced too-foos) tripped along with the opening song "Life Upon the Wildest Stage."

All went well with the "boys' chorus line until the dolls' flowing skirts tangled and the "girls" piled up at stage center, perishing in one big heap.

The number that really wowed the North Atlantic audience was the song from "South Pacific," "There is Nothing Like a Dame."

Nobody at Thule would dispute that statement.

Considering the difficulties, it was a good show. The American theater is expected to survive.

'Dear Margie...'

Puzzled T-Sgt. Rooms World Comes With 'How to Write'

DOVER AFB, Md. (APPS) — "What am I going to write to my wife today, Sarge?"

That question, asked in 1941 in Alaska, started T-Sgt. Marc L'Heureux, USAF, thinking. He decided from his own experience in the Service that there were plenty of men away from home who could use advice on writing tender messages to wives and sweethearts.

So after six years of research — Sgt. L'Heureux's book "How To Write a Love Letter" will appear at bookstores across the country to help people get freshness and variety into their letters.

Sgt. Heureux studied classics at Edmonton College, Canada, before joining the Army Air Force in 1941. He's traveled to Alaska, England, France, Germany, Italy and Puerto Rico. Nowhere did he find a book on letter writing suited to the needs of the Serviceman.

But one word of warning to die-hard bachelors: Sgt. L'Heureux is married. His wife, Jeanette, can turn a phrase or two herself.

After Many Moons, Private Returns to 33d as 1st Lieut.

By this time, First Lt. Lee B. Philmon must think that he and the 33d Transportation Company Special Troops Command, were special for each other. After more than six years of this association, he's probably right!

Lt. Philmon first came here in January 1946. Then a private first class he was assigned to a unit known as the Motor Pool Detachment, No. 1, as a driver. Shortly afterward, the detachment was broken down into letter companies and he was assigned to Company D. But there were more changes to come.

Company D was designated the 333d Quartermaster Trucking Company and still later the 333d Transportation Truck Co. By this time Lt. Philmon had become a corporal and the company changed names again. It was designated the 33d Truck Company. By this time, the long-time resident of the yard and its predecessors became one of the company's platoon sergeants. Later he was a dispatcher and finally company first sergeant. In August 1951 Sgt. Philmon was sent to the Far East, ending up in Korea where he spent 21 months in the Transportation Section of the 32d Battalion. Here he received a field commission to Lt. Philmon reported back to Fort Benning last July and later was assigned to the 12th Transportation Battalion, where he was to serve as commanding officer of the 33d Transportation Company until he had heard of before!

"World War I sent him into the Navy. Afterwards he landed in New York and was engaged by the Brunswick Company to organize their record division. As their principal recordmaker, he was given his radio chance when Brunswick records took to the air. The rest is radio history. The Coca Cola Show, Pet Milk Program, International Harvesters Home Show Boat, Firestone Hour, Chevrolet, etc., have all been conducted by Mr. Henschel. ### Hoopster Magician Delights Onlookers

Bunny Levitt, basketball's outstanding free-throw artist, dazzled court cage fans with his one-man hoop show at Briant Wells Field House last week.

Levitt's exhibition of cage wizardry was sponsored jointly by The Infantry Center Special Services Section and Metcalf's Sporting Goods Store of Columbus. Called "The Dead-Eye Dick of the Basketball Court" by Sport Magazine, Levitt stands just over five feet. He tossed in 450 consecutive free throws without a miss in 1951 in Chicago, an official AAU record.

In another exhibition he shot fouls for seven and one half consecutive hours, missing only two out of 871 shots. For three years he toured the world with the Harlem Globe Trotters, showing his specialty during the halves.

"Bonnie Annie," favorite march of the Scots who played on the bagpipes, is resounding through the 14th OC Company.
Officer Candidate Douglas Horne of Seattle, Wash., is the piper on the instrument whose weirdly fascinating music has been heard at parades almost the world over.
According to Horne, although the Scots and the Irish use generally given credit for the origin of the bagpipe, history's first belonged to the Romans of the 300-400 A. D. era. The Scots, however, were the first to adopt it as a national instrument.
Horne is a descendant of one of Scotland's biggest in ancient times and known for its fighting ability.

STRICTLY FRESH

WHEN a gunman found that the cash register in a Worcester, Mass., variety store contained less than a dollar, he walked out disgruntled. Guess he discovered that crime didn't pay.

When it comes to money, you gotta hand it to women. Might as well; they'll get it anyway.

A Cleveland, Ohio, newspaper headline noted recently that an Army colonel was given a 'debris post' by the President. Wonder if that means the colonel can expect a lot of dirt through his way?

BY CHAPLAIN MAJOR PHILIP W. ROBERTS

The wholesalers put their Christmas wares on sale early in the summer. Retailers placed their orders for all their Christmas goods months ago. Normal plans for large scale observances of the Christmas season have been made and await only the time to put into operation. Church choirs have chosen their music for the Christmas services and have been rehearsing with painstaking care for weeks, in order that the festival services may be as perfect as it is possible for available talent to make them. The commercial and social activities of the observance are well planned for all the public opportunity to join are ready. What about ourselves? How ready are we?

It often seems a shame that we who can be as wise in the ways of the world as the wisest of men, so wise wisdom to our spiritual lives, we plan and prepare for every and every event — except those of a religious nature. Where religion begins we apparently feel that all our habits cease to apply; no longer does practice make perfect, but rather sudden inspiration will do us the best, as though we would expect a totally inexperienced driver to drive more safely than a trained chauffeur of many years' experience. We never expect a man to win a golf match, why should we expect an unpracticed man to climb spiritual heights?

It would seem that we ought to be able to carry over our good worldly habits and our commercial practice for a nature and prepare for the spiritual joys of the Christmas season. Perhaps the lack of spirituality is in us?

Most churches observe a period of special preparation for the Christmas season. It is called Advent and comprises the four Sundays before Christmas. It is a season of preparation to enter the Christmas feast well trained in spirit, ready to receive that which God has to give us.

NO TRICK AT ALL . . . All this picture needed was somebody to think it up, somebody to get under the helmet, and somebody to shutterbug the camera. Sgt. Eddie Armijo, a member of the 500th's crack honor guard, drew the hardest task. He posed long and grueling minutes while sun and camera jockeyed into position to make the picture, and what it reflects, possible. Otherwise, there was no trick to it at all. Old Glory and a sign cooperated.

Gen. Cleland Gives Talks To OCS, Airborne Graduates

Sixty-six new second lieutenant and 417 airborne graduates were given pointers here last week on how to carry out successfully their mission in the Infantry.

Major Gen. Joseph P. Cleland, commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N. C., described the characteristics of the infantry soldier for officer candidates class No. 77 and later to graduates of airborne class No. 18.

Gen. Cleland, a veteran of the Pacific campaign and the Korean conflict, pointed out that a good attitude is the most important characteristic of a military man.

"If I had this power," he said, "to engrain into you one characteristic, that characteristic would be a good attitude."

He added that the military man with the right attitude, who is alert, enthusiastic, and energetic, cannot fail.

"There was a man who lived nearly 2,000 years ago," Gen. Cleland said. "That man was Jesus Christ. He taught simple principles which we should adhere to today."

Honor and distinguished graduate of officer candidate class No. 77 was second Lt. Edward T. Hunt, Jr., of Orchard Park, N. Y. He has been assigned to the student detachment at the Maxwell Flight Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

There were Capt. William J. James, First Lt. Robert W. Black, Second Lt. Norman R. Fry, Grover C. Prickett Jr., Earl E. Smith, Lt. J. Stocker, Westworth L. Stone, Charles V. Yearbrough and CWO Andrew J. Pickett.

Major Lyle R. Simons of Spring Valley, Minn., has been appointed adjutant, and Major Deaneur P. Butler of Newville, Miss., headquarters commandant of First Stunt Regiment.

Major Simons served with the Korean Military Advisory Group before coming here. He has been in the Army since 1942 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry upon completion of OCS in May, 1948.

MAJOR CONNELL

Pupil Recalls Job as Aide To Bradley

Major James M. Connell, a student of First Company, First Student Regiment, taking the advanced infantry officers course, had the privilege to serve as personal aide to Gen. Omar N. Bradley when the latter was Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He accompanied the general on many trips to Paris for SHAPE and NATO meetings. The general, in Major Connell's opinion, is calm, considerate, and thorough and wins everyone's respect.

Major Connell was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1944. Assigned to Fort Benning to attend the basic officers course he afterward joined the 80th Division and went to Europe. When the division left for the states he was assigned to European Theater Headquarters.

In 1950 he went with the newly organized 1st Corp to Korea and returned to the States in 1951. It was then that he was sent to Washington to be interviewed for the job of aide. Accepted, he served with Gen. Bradley until his arrival in Fort Benning last September.

The Latest AFPS Report From Washington

M-Sgt. Kosinski Drives to Keep Key Non-Coms

Top Kick 'Boosts' Re-up Program

When a first sergeant bellows at his men he is hardly considered a lover of the arts.

First sergeant of Headquarters Company, First Battalion, 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, M-Sgt. Michael Kosinski, is quite different. He has undertaken the serious task of attempting to reenlist the NCOs of his company, actually reverting to verse. Mixing realism and patriotism with the advantages of an Army career, Kosinski has launched the first campaign of its kind in the organization.

Moving through the company each day, he stops to talk to potential reenlistees, reminding them that they are about to make a decision and that the closest pictures are greener.

With half of his company about to be discharged this month and next, he wants to hold on to the psychological offerings from higher NCOs he's got. He says that all the money and effort spent in launching his own campaign, and training his specialists will be in vain unless he gets his boys to reenlist.

Safety Record Is No Accident

"Cause conscious" safety men are making Fort Benning a safer place to live.

And it's no accident that the post has an enviable safety record, says Norman Evans, safety director.

"With the cooperation of the major unit commanders, we have been able to wage an effective campaign against accidents that was the post the National Safety Council's Award of Honor last year," Evans said.

The safety council, composed of unit commanders and chiefs of staff sections, meets once a month to develop plans, policies, and procedures to cut down on accidents and to review safety problems.

The Safety Office oversees the program.

"Safety exhibits, posters, slogans, lectures, and special courses are designed to convince post personnel that accidents that take lives, cause injury, and destroy property can and should be prevented.

More than 800 soldiers have attended the advanced driver-education course launched here last May. Conducted by the Transportation Section, it covers rules of the road, driving limitations and techniques, and a study of traffic regulations. The course is designed primarily for delinquent drivers but is open to volunteers.

"We don't like to review accidents," the safety director said. "We like to prevent them." Then he pointed out that Benning regulations have been used by other posts in the U.S. as guides in the development of their own traffic regulations.

ASSY. RED CROSS DIRECTOR William L. May of LaGrange, Ga., has assumed duties as an assistant Red Cross field director at Fort Benning. May has been a Red Cross worker since April. He came here from Camp Polk, La.

Prayers of Three Religions Now in Lawson Mess Halls

All Lawson Air Force Base mess halls have been provided with "Thanksgiving Before Meals" cards bearing copies of the grace of the three major faiths.

Robert Messie, base chaplain, became interested in the idea when he heard of similar cards being placed in restaurants. He was referred to the Layman's National Committee, Inc. in New York for the cards.

Assisting Chaplain Messie in preparing and distributing the cards were A-1C Francis Webb, A-1C Robert Swan, S-Sgt. Carl E. Sliker, and A-1C Rudolph Ahnweiler.

The cards, printed on both sides, read:

with Catholic, Jewish and Protestant graces, are mounted on small stands in the center of each table.

The prayer cards were placed on mess hall tables during the Thanksgiving holidays and similar cards attached to the command-er's holiday greeting on the menu. They will be placed permanently in the mess halls.

OC Saw Pearl Harbor Havoc From Perch in a Tree on Isle

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor 12 years ago found Officer Candidate Thomas I. Fragas, then 11 years-old, perched in a tree watching the disaster.

Playing football about a mile and a half from the harbor, Fragas was sent home but peeked out, climbed the tree, and saw one of the most devastating attacks in history. He vividly remembers the explosions and the occasional disintegration of a ship plane in mid-air. He saw the sinking of the battleship Arizona and the destruction of the harbor docks.

Later he learned that his father, an electrician at the docks, had narrowly escaped death. Because of the stupendous amount of work necessary on harbor installations, the elder Fragas didn't return home till after Christmas.

Fragas remembers that Hawaii

Ralph Bellamy says that a small town is a place where everyone knows what everyone else is doing. They read the paper just to see if they've been caught at it.

Professor Jordag prided himself on his memory. Driving through Arizona, he stopped at a wayside inn for breakfast. "What are you going to have?" asked the Indian waiter.

"Two eggs," replied the professor.

At that moment the Indian was called to the kitchen. When he did not return, the professor left.

Ten years later the professor met the same Indian.

"Here," said the Indian.

"Scrambled," said the prof.

Christmas cheer filled the barracks. But one disgruntled recruit sat on the edge of his bunk. "Santa Claus, nuts!" he said. "Twenty years ago I ask for a soldier suit, and now I get one!"

Pvt.: "The sergeant said there isn't another soldier like me in the whole world."

Peggy: "That's certainly wonderful."

Pvt.: "That's what the sergeant said too."

Someone asked 90-year-old Grandpa why he didn't get married again.

"Well," he said, "I'll tell you. There ain't but one kind of woman who'd have an old codger like me, and I'll be switched if I'm going to settle down and live with a dera fool."

Wife: "Stop trying to flatter me."

Rams-Rucker Ready to Roll

Service Foes Inaugurate Benning Bowl

Fort Benning's own "bowl" game staged by the American Legion will get under way this Saturday in Columbus Memorial Stadium at 2 p.m.

The team from Camp Rucker, made up of all stars from their intramural squads will oppose the School Brigade Rams. Probably the bulk of the Rucker squad will come from the 15th Infantry Red Devils and the 16th Infantry Flickertails.

Since the Rucker team is composed from all the units at the Alabama camp it has no season record but the Rams have won five and lost only one in post play while winning all three of their off-post games. They have beaten the Green Wave, 31-0, and 30-0, the 58th, 38-18, and CTC, 20-12, after losing the first game to the Commanders, 12-13.

In their off-post meets, the Rams rolled over Seawart Air Force Base, 21-0, Shaw Air Force Base, 40-0, and the Redstone Arsenal Rockets who journeyed here to lose 32-13.

A large crowd is expected to attend the first playing of the Benning Bowl as Camp Rucker alone has 30 bus loads of troops camping following the team to Columbus. The game is hoped, by sponsoring Charles S. Harrison, Post 25 and the United Givers, to develop into an annual affair here between the service foes.

The Rams will have a new memento for the game since head coach Bill Lawrence is leaving the post to attend to the Jordan, who played at the University of Alabama is expected to take over the reins.

Jack A. Youngblood, ex-University of Florida player who was an assistant coach at his alma mater Plant High in Tampa for two years before entering the service will coach the Camp Rucker squad. Since entering the Army, he has also coached in Bremhering Staging Area in Germany, 1947; Headquarters and Service Command, Japan, 1950-52; and the 10th Infantry.

He is assisted by a horde of capable men, including Ed McWhorter, a 20-year Tennessee player in college football at Vanderbilt in 1945 and 1946 where he was selected to the second all-star team. He played both guard and tackle. Buckham maintained at Mississippi Southern for four years and Burkett performed for the University of Alabama.

The price scale has been set at $1.50 with service men paying $1.00. Tickets are now on sale through the Sports Office located at Special Services.

SR Cagers Start Season's Intramurals

The First Strider Regiment got underway last Monday night with the first intramural games of the season. This is in conjunction with the regular regimental team. In the intramural league, each battalion has two separate teams. This enables the maximum participation in basketball. Winner of the 1st game was one of the Airborne teams over one of the 3rd battalions teams. At least four games will be played every week.

$15 Turkey Roams No More; Sgt. Jones Brings It In

Sgt. Samuel C. Jones, Company D, First Special Troops, was the lucky hunter who bagged the $15 turkey that was roaming the wilds of Henning since last October. The turkey, which was the prime target for all Fish and Game Association members, was purchased in Alabama and released before the season opened. The prize gobble had a number band on both legs, the presentation of which will be held across from Block 12 NCWO Sgt. Jones not only the $15 but the Mess.

Rams Rack Rockets 32-13 At Doughboy

The Brigade-Medics had an easy afternoon grounding the Redstone Arsenal Rockets 32-13 with the usual terrific Ram attack last Saturday at Doughboy Stadium. This was the first game in which a Benning Squad played host to an off-post team this season.

The Rockets took to the air early after unaccountably gaining yardage through the strong Ram line. Redstone attempted 37 forward passes and completed only 10 totaling 80 yards. The Rams on the other hand completed 3 out of 10 tries to give them a 29 yard lead.

On the ground the Rockets were also stopped odd in their tracks getting only 27 yards rushing whereas the Rams running attack proved too much for Redstone as can be gathered from a 270-yard total.

The first quarter was one of fumbles and penalties producing nothing except that Joe Fortunato, Ram powerhouse, was forced from the game as a result of injuries.

Following the kickoff the Rams took the ball on their own 35 and marched 65 yards in 11 plays for the TD. Crook, Allen, Wilkert, and Thompson participated in making the drive with Thompson netting the credit for the 6 points. Frank Kush's kick was no good and the Rams had a 13-lead when the half ended.

Early in the third period Crook scooped 25 yards from Redstone's 41 down to the 18 yard line. In the next two plays Bill Wilkert plunged over for the rest of the way. Frank Kush's conversion was good and the Rams now had 20 and the Rockets 0.

In the last few minutes of the period the Rams took over on the Rocket 35 when Hamilton intercepted a pass and the fourth Ram TD was on the way. On the second TD was on the 14 to go. The Ram line opened a hole and Hamilton did the rest. Crook's try for the extra point was off to the right and the Rams now moved way out in front 26-6 as the third quarter came to an end.

Rockets TD The Rockets came back in the fourth period to produce their final scoring when Jim Spinnell threw a 25 yard pass to Bob Cousins and kicked the extra point to make the score 26-13.

The final scoring of the game followed immediately after the Rocket scores when Wilkert pounded out the last 13 yards of a 82 yard TD run. Dave Stewart took over from center for the kick but the Rams finished the game with a 22, 13 win.

Red Devils Dent Greenies, 25-21 In Tough Thanksgiving Tussle

UP, UP, AND UP... Ronnie Schomburger, CTC end, snatched the ball out of the long arms of Bill Valko (61) and two other unidentified Red Devils to set the Greenies up for one of their scores last Thursday.

It was the last quarter with minutes remaining, the score was 20-21 in favor of the Red Devils and the Green Wave had the ball on the Devil's 5 yard line. This was the situation confronting the 508th team last Thursday afternoon when the 574th Lawson AFB team almost upset the Airborne apple cart. Only with the help of a 5 yard penalty for backfield in motion and a 9 yard loss was the threat put down.

STC drew first blood in the first quarter when Don Burns passed to Bill Shelton for a 37 yard TD clinixing a 45 yard drive. Bob Larson's kick was good and the Wave was out in front 9-0, but not for long.

Immediately following the kickoff the Devils narrowed the lead down after Dale EMS sliced through the center of the line from his 30 and travelled down to the goal for the first Red Devil score. Ed Cole broke through the Devil line and blocked the attempted extra point. A minute or so before the second period ended Mercedes returned a punt to his own 27. He then flipped a 34 yard pass to Ed Petroveton on the Wave 13. Dietz carried twice down to the 1 yard line, and when Emmett Matthews sneaked over the rest of the way he fumbled but George Campbell fell on the ball for the TD. Dietz's kick was good and the half ended with the score remaining 12-7.

In the third period two touchdowns were produced in the most identical ways. Red Devils scored first as a result of Burns' punt blocked by Ernest Gales who scooped it up and scooted down the side lines for the touchdown to give the 508th 19-7.

When the Devils were forced to kick later in the same period Wave tackle Bill Spinnell ran the ball through the strong Airborne line and blocked Pete Overton's kick

Jesse L. Watts took third place with 15. Taylor and Watts represented the Sixth Airborne Regimental Combat Team.

SPARKS RAMS... Ed Hamilton ran wild to spark the Rams to a 32-13 conquest of the Redstone Rockets last Saturday.

The halfback was practically unstoppable everytime he got his mitts on the pigskin.

The Fort Benning Football League is on its last legs for the season and with that the headaches start for the sports writers and coaches; they're the ones who pick the all-star teams. But here at Benning, the entire responsibility for picking the dream team that was previously, the coaches will fall mainly on the players themselves.

The players and coaches will be given a ballot in order to pick an opposition team, in other words a player can only select one who has played against him and not one of his own team mates.

The ballots will then be collected and counted at Special Services on Dec. 11. The player with the most number of votes for his specific position will automatically be placed on the all-post team.

There are only three players from the 1952 All-Post squad still seeing action on the Doughboy Stadium gridiron. They are back Bill Dietz of the 508th Airborne, who was chosen on the most team two straight seasons, and lineman Bill Truxton who anchors one side of the Brigade-Medic line. The other player that made it last year is now one of the Ram's coaches, Linton Jordan.

This year's team should end up as a powerhouse since there are a number of outstanding college football stars sprinkled throughout the four teams. Some of the noteworthy stars seen here this season are; Bobby Moorhead, Frank Kush, Ed Crook, Mel Boykin, and Andy Meyers.

There are two players who in our estimation (and not Leon the Pean's) should make either the All-CTC team or some other award. They are STC's Post Freeman and Ram Joe Fortunato.

Freeman, an ex-LSU Tiger, was a member of the winning South team in the 1952 North-South game. He has been the spark behind all the Greenie games and it was he who is responsible for the complete change in the once pathetically weak Wave team.

The other sure bet, Joe Fortunato, carried the ball for Mississippi State 113 times for 719 yards in 1952 to rank fifth nationally. He fullbacked so well for the strong Maroons that coach Murray Warmath of State tagged him as the "best fullback carried 40 times for 265 yards to put him at the top in total yards netted for rushing.

These are only a few names which we think deserve some recognition. It will be up to the players to do the rest by placing the best men on the post team. You fans who are interested can also voice your opinion before the star team is chosen. All you have to do is send in your team to The Bayonet, c-7 T&E Center, Fort Benning, Representative letter in a sincere vein will be published in The Bayonet.

TACKLED LOW... Ed Hamilton is brought down by Redstone Arsenal halfback Bob Graham after trashing through the Red Devils' line. Ed Crook (23) supplied downfield blocking which enabled Hamilton to gain 10 yards for the Rams.

BWFH Offers Gym And Pool To Soldiers

The Briant Wells Field House offers to the military personnel at Fort Benning, a gymnasium that compares in design and facilities to many found in the finest colleges in the country.

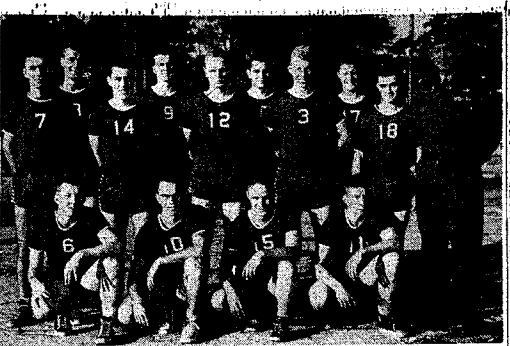

The indoor basketball court meets official specifications as to length and width and has four extra baskets on the sides of the court which can be used for practice when a game is not in progress.

Also on the main floor of the gym are two handball courts, a weight lifting and substitute room, and a wrestling room.

On the other end of the gym is the indoor swimming pool which is 25 yards long and 15 yards wide. The pool is open year around and is kept at a constant prescribed temperature.

The pool hours are from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. except on Mondays and Thursday when those same hours are reserved from women and children. On Saturdays, Sundays, and Holidays, the pool is open from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. The main gym hours are from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Facilities such as basketballs, handballs, gloves, etc. may be checked out at the charge of quarters desk.

Commanders-Wave Meet In Rivals Last Game Sunday

Watch it Commanders, you meet the Green Wave this coming Sunday at Doughboy Stadium. The Greenies who pulled a fast one by kicking a field goal to win 16-13 will be out to do it again.

STC has only won that one game all season, but they have played so well in the last two games, almost upsetting the 508th in the Thanksgiving game, that the Commanders will have their hands full trying to clobber the Wave.

This is the last game of the season for both teams. There is a possibility that the Commanders might have to play an extra game to decide the second place spot. For this to happen CTC will have to beat the Green Wave and then wait for the Rams to down the Red Devils.

And then again there might have to be a playoff game for first place. If the 508th can edge out the Rams, both teams would be tied for the top spot. Who knows what will happen, so come out to Doughboy Stadium and get the first hand information.

Sunday's game will start at the usual 2 p.m. and the admission will be 25 cents. The reason for this extra paying game is because of poor turnout at the last admission charged game when the clouds broke open in time for the game. The proceeds will be used to pay for the trophies and the banquet that will be held at the end of the season where the first and second spots are finally decided.

activities and mission of the guerrillas and, though I was small, I can remember carrying food and supplies to their camps. I acted as messenger and maintained constant communication between the townspeople who were hiding in the jungles or on vacant farm lands, and the small, poorly armed guerrilla bands who continually harassed the invaders.

At the end of the war, Montecillo worked his way to America on a merchant vessel and spent considerable time on a farm in California. He saved some money he had earned to travel to Detroit, Mich.

He was employed by an automobile firm in Michigan, for seven months prior to his enlistment, but his anxiety to assist and repay the Americans for the freedom which they had earned for his people, brought about his enlistment.

BROWNS' ONLY WIN

The only time the St. Louis Browns won the American League pennant was in 1944. However, they lost to the Cardinals that year in the World Series in six games.

Bobby Dewes To Attend 3A Course

Bobby Dewes, Special Troops Command AAR NCO has reported to the Atlanta General Depot, where he will attend the Army's Ordnance School's Tire Repair Course.

During his absence, the sports supervisory pool will be held down by Joseph Jenkins. Dewes is expected to return about the middle of February.

Dewes is well known over the post and the Southeast for his activities in professional and Army baseball. Prior to entering the service, during World War II, he played with many pro teams. He spent several seasons as a catcher at Kansas City and Montreal. During the last baseball season, Dewes was player-manager of the Special Troops Command Raiders in the CTC Intramural League, winning the league batting championship. Following the post-season play, he managed the Fort Benning All-Stars, the composite team that represented the Infantry Center in the Third Army Tournament at Fort Jackson, S.S.

Jenkins will take charge of STC's Intramural basketball league and its winter sports program.

TWIN EDITION . . . The Bayonet gets a twin reading by Oscar and Huey Van Dyke, identical twins of Company A, 30th Infantry. The brothers have caused quite a stir of confusion in the company. Both are married and they have three other brothers and a sister.

Defense Dept. Studying Cuts in Support Troops

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Defense Department is studying a substantial cut in the number of military personnel in support of Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps combat units, which would not impair the fighting efficiency of the combat forces.

This was disclosed by Dr. John A. Hannah, secretary of defense for manpower and personnel, at a recent press conference.

"The Air Force has already made great progress in reducing the number of support troops," Dr. Hannah said. "The AF is confident that by the end of fiscal 1955 it will be able to man 127 units with 270,000 men."

Dr. Hannah also has asked the Army and Navy to consider reducing their support strength by about 10 per cent.

Secretary Hannah asked the Army to get along in fiscal year 54 requisited for four years.

The three-year requisites were: 1. The 30th Infantry Regiment, 2. The 30th Infantry Center, 3. The 30th Infantry School, 4. The 30th Infantry Depot, 5. The 30th Infantry Hospital, 6. # M-Sgt. 'Raised' Fort Benning From 'Pup Tent,' It Says Here Ever wonder what Fort Benning was like 25 years ago? If so, M-Sgt. Ole W. Stallworth, operations sergeant of the First Battalion, Second Student Regiment, is the man to ask.

Sgt. Stallworth can virtually boast of having "raised Fort Benning from a pup tent," having come here 25 years ago as a raw recruit to take basic training.

The area which comprises the main post was mostly cotton and corn fields. The only permanent buildings were the commanding General's quarters, Gowdy Field, Doughboy Stadium, the main filing station, and the First Quartel. The jump towers area was densely wooded and the Lawson Field was known as the Old Bradley Crossing.

Harmory Church had nothing to mar its "virgin wilderness" except an ancient cemetery where Company of the First Transportation Battalion now makes its home, and as for Sand Hill—pride of the 50th—woods, just woods.

The troop units located here in those days were the 24th and 29th Infantry Regiments, the 83d Field Artillery Battalion, a detachment of the 7th Engineers, and a company-size unit of the 96th Motor Transport Battalion.

Sergeant Stallworth stayed at Benning until August of 1940, after serving in Europe during World War II, he returned for a year in 1946. At that time he was assigned to the 21st Field Artillery Battalion at Sand Hill.

Back again in 1952, this time from Korea where he had earned five battle stars, he spent some time with the Second Student Transportation Battalion before being assigned to his present position with the Second Student Regiment.

Originally from Beatrice, Ala., Col. Stallworth now makes his home in Columbus with his wife Louise.

Gen. Theodoros Vassilopoulos, G-3 of the Greek Army, and Brig. Gen. Spyridon Vivas, chief of staff, inspected a two-company honor guard of 56th Airborne Infantry Regiment troops here Saturday morning in welcome tribute which began their four-day visit to the Infantry School.

The generals began their study of Infantry equipment and techniques with conferences Monday with Major Gen. G. S. Mcloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander, and Brig. Gen. Carl F. Fritzsche, assistant commander of the Infantry School.

In addition to the demonstration, the Allied officers visited the Main Post Weapons Pool and Automotive Department and received an orientation on airborne training before departing Tuesday afternoon.

NATURALIZATION CONGRATULATIONS
Lt. Arthur Schneider, OC Gutierrez

Cuban Made U.S. Citizen While Candidate Trainee

Officer Candidate John A. Gutierrez of 14th OC Company has become the first member of the First Regiment to receive American citizenship under Public Law 84-142, enacted by the 83d Congress.

The law provides that any members of the armed forces may apply for naturalization after completing 90 days of honorable service.

A former Cuban, Gutierrez was a producer of radio programs for the Voice of America and a member of the United Nations Radio Division. When he received his induction notice, Gutierrez stopped a member of the Russian delegation and said, "See this paper? It says that as of next week, I'm in the Army. I'm through being a diplomat. Now, go cable Moscow that Gutierrez is joining the Infantry."

2 Deaths Seen For Yuletide

During the Christmas holiday period two Fort Benning soldiers will be killed and 20 seriously injured in accidents, post Safety Director Norman Evans predicted yesterday.

Evans based his prediction on the record of previous holiday periods.

"Sixteen thousand private cars owned by post personnel will be driven about 15 million miles during the Christmas season," said Evans. "And unless these drivers can be convinced that certain driving practices are hazardous and will cause death or injury to themselves or their companions, a continuation of the previous holiday accident experience can be expected."

Major causes of automobile accidents, he pointed out, are driving after 18 hours without sleep, driving after one or more drinks of intoxicating beverages, and driving at speeds of over 50 miles an hour at night or on wet, slippery roads.

An aggressive traffic safety program which will include films, pamphlets, slogan displays and exhibits is being planned to convince drivers that an accident is the sure way to wreck a holiday, Evans said.

A member of the Georgia Public Service Commission will address the National Defense Transportation Association of Columbus and Fort Benning Monday evening.

Walter R. McDonald of Decatur, Ga., a Public Service Commissioner since 1952, will speak on the subject of safety.

Col. Sidney P. Kretlow, honorary president of the local chapter of the NDTA, said, "We are extremely fortunate in obtaining a speaker of Mr. McDonald's caliber. Our association's primary objective is to assist in keeping the transportation facilities of our nation prepared for any future state of emergency. The subject of safety is significant and obvious to all of us in the field of transportation."

What's the 3d Reading? Mutiny, Eternity, Angel Taken Out by Majority

The most popular and authors last month were: The Caline Mutiny, Book; The Dark Angel, Waltari; The Silver Chalice, Costello; The Bridges at Toko-Ri, Michener; Time on My Mind, Agate, Hilton; The Robe, Litton; The Battle of Gris, Beyond This Place, Cronin; and From Previous records.

Papers, Roommel; Annapurna, Herzog; a n d Horn of the Hunter, Rank; Biographies, history, psychology, travel, photography and sports seem to be the favorite nonfiction subjects.

Study Completed On Truce Terms

Fort Benning officers have completed a study of the Korean armistice agreement as the subject for Officers' Club during the month of November.

The Infantry Center Troop Information and Education Section prepared the 14 page booklet, which outlines the major points of U.S. agreement.

The cover of this publication shows a sketch of President Syngman Rhee of the Republic of Korea, General Nam Il of North Korea, and Lt. General William K. Harrison, Jr., chief of the U. N. truce team.

The booklet reviews the key points in each of the five articles of the armistice agreement and the annex concerning the disposition of the prisoners of war.

Jorgenson, as the youngest teller in Chicago's largest banking house, kept account of money from $80,000 to $100,000 a day.

Jorgenson admits that not every 20-year-old can get a job like his. You have to know someone here, he says. In Jorgenson's case it was his father, who had been with the Chicago bank for 30 years. Dad was in charge of bank operations and personnel.

After he finishes his hitch in the service Jorgenson plans to return to Chicago, the First National Bank, and to "taking it in."

Death After A Year

Army to Rule on Soldiers Missing in Korea

THIRD ARMY HEADQUARTERS. — The Department of the Army, Washington, has announced that a presumptive finding of death will now be made in the cases of about 10,000 missing men in Korea for more than a year and for whom there is no information that would indicate they might still be alive.

The contemplated action is in accordance with Section 5 of the Missing Persons Act which reads as follows:

"When the 12-month period from date of commencement of absence is about to expire in any case of a person missing or missing in action and no official report of death or of being a prisoner of war has been received, the head of the department concerned shall cause a full review of the case to be made.

"Following such review and when the 12 months absence shall have expired or following any subsequent review of the case which shall be made whenever warranted by information received, or other circumstances, the head of the department concerned is authorized to direct the continuance of the person's missing status. If the person may reasonably be presumed to be living, or he is authorized to make a find of death.

"When a finding of death is made it shall include the date upon which death shall be presumed to have occurred for the purpose of termination of crediting pay and allowances, settlements of accounts and payments of death gratuities and such date shall be the day following the day of expiration of an absence of twelve months, or in cases in which the missing status shall have been continued as herein before authorized, a day to be determined by the head of the department."

Gratuity payment will be made within a few days after return of the completed forms to the U. S. Army Finance Center at Indianapolis, Indiana. However, due to necessary auditing of the soldier's pay and allowances, several months may elapse before final payment of accrued pay and allowances is made.

Since the Army will take the final action in these matters, there is no need for survivors to request the necessary claims forms or to start correspondence regarding them. Immediately after the presumptive finding of death is made, the Army will notify the Veterans Administration. The VA will provide the proper person or persons in each case with the necessary information and claim forms for any government insurance that may be in force.

In this respect also, survivors need not request claim forms or enter into correspondence regarding the matter. However, for other reasons, survivors may be entitled to the nearest office of the agency concerned.

At the present time there are about 6,300 personnel being carried on Army rolls as "Missing in Action." The remaining cases of this overall total by administrative actions based upon evidence furnished by recently repatriated servicemen, by recovery of remains in battle areas, or information obtained from other sources.

In the meantime, the Army will continue to carry those missing in action for less than 12 months as "missing," but after Feb. 12, they and their beneficiaries will not be entitled to any further accrual of allowances provided by the Missing Persons Act unless that Act's duration is extended by the Congress.

At the time of notification, survivors will receive appropriate instructions concerning their rights and privileges under existing laws.

Sneak Preview of A-Sub Nautilus Unveiled At Tour

GROTON, Conn. (APSS) — The world's first atomic-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus, was unveiled recently for what the Navy described as its "first and last press tour" as construction of the new underwater craft nears completion. The Nautilus is scheduled for launching Jan. 21 and will be sponsored by Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

During the tour, visitors were allowed to examine every section of the submarine except the nuclear reactor compartment and the torpedo tubes. These two sections were covered with canvas and under constant armed guard. The craft is being built by the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp.

Biggest A-Sub

Although precise details of the A-Sub's speed, range, diving depth and fighting characteristics were not divulged because of security reasons, it was revealed that the submarine is somewhat larger than any now in operation by the Navy. It will be manned by between 75 and 80 officers and men.

In appearance the Nautilus is similar to current fleet-type submarines except that its prow has a blunt shape instead of the usual knife-like edge. This increases its depth resistance and gives the vessel a distinct whale-like appearance.

The use of nuclear energy which involves neither combustion nor oxygen to create heat will enable the Nautilus to remain submerged indefinitely. The sub will carry its own supply of oxygen in order to make living conditions more pleasant for the crew.

Because of the extended length of submerged operations, a great deal of "human engineering" has gone into the design of the Nautilus. The living compartments are like those of those in surface-type vessels.

Crew In Training

An interior decorator has been consulted in determining the furnishings and color schemes to be used. In addition to an officers' wardroom, there will be separate lounges for both CPDs and POs.

The crew which will operate the nuclear reactor now is engaged in training at the Atomic Energy Commission's Atomic Reactor Testing Station, Arco, Idaho. They are working with a prototype of the reactor which will be installed in the Nautilus. Directing them is CDR Eugene P. Wilkinson, USN, who has been selected to command the craft.

2d Lieuts. Doing OK As Company Leaders

The Third Battalion of the First Student Regiment has been a unit primarily by second lieutenants as commanders for quite some time and it seems as if they are doing an excellent job.

Recently assigned to 17th Company as commander was Second LT. Harold B. Littlejohn, Littlejohn, who hails from Faelet, S. C. has recently come here from Camp Breckinridge, Ky. Before entering the Army in August 1952, he went to Clemons College, majoring in agriculture and taught in high school for two years.

At present, Lt. Littlejohn resides in the Camellia Apartments in this city; back in the same day, he lives with his wife, Doris, and two children Harold Jr. and Connie.

Supply Sarge Named Soldier of Week

Leon H. Walker, supply sergeant Fourth Company, First Student Regiment, was recently chosen "First Battalion Soldier of the Week."

Mr. Walker has been in the service for four years, two of these being spent in Europe, and has just been promoted to sergeant. Single, he resides with his parents at 2128 East Seventh Street, in Columbus.

Capt. Hale Assigned 1st OC Adjutant

Capt. Lindsey W. Hale has been assigned as adjutant for the First Officer Candidate Regiment, replacing Capt. John D. Mall, Jr., who has been separated from the service.

Capt. Hale has been in the service six years. He wears the Bronze Infantryman Badge, the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart, and the Korean Service Ribbon with five stars.

Realistic Article Draws Praise to Combat Journal

A short story by a Fort Benning officer published in the October, 1953, issue of Combat Forces Journal has gained high praise from readers of the periodical.

Lt. Col. Eben F. Swift of San Antonio, Texas, Infantry Center range officer, authored "Division Objective," a fictionalized but realistic account of an infantry regiment during World War II in Europe.

In it he described how the U. S. First Infantry Division was delayed for 24 hours from occupying a German town by a single enemy sniper.

Letters to the editor, from both civilian and military readers, were enthusiastic about the article.

Fledglings Honor Officers at Feast

The fledglings officers of 113th Company, Second Student Regiment, recently had a party at King's Post Lodge.

Guests of honor at the steak feast were Col. W. J. Russell, regimental commander; Major O. L. Case, commander of the Second Battalion; and Capt. William Brody and First Lt. Glen La Pine, who as company officers, have "bird-dogged" the students through their training.

After dinner, entertainment was provided by the individual platoons, each of which presented a skit, with Second Lt. Greenwood as master of ceremonies.

"I know the sergeant will consider it an honor to know that you inquired about him, sir," the sergeant said.

Gen. Cleland commanded the 588th from its reactivation on May 5, 1951, to the following September and saw service with the 40th Infantry Division in Korea and the First Cavalry Division in Japan. He was greeted at the 588th by Col. Glenn J. McGowan, commander, and Lt. Col. Willis F. Lowery, executive officer.

"It's great to see you all," he said. And the men knew he meant it.

Safety Film Shown

A safety film entitled "Once a Week to Soldiers in Special Troops" was shown last week to soldiers in Special Troops Command.

The film, which tells the story of a soldier who took one too many chances while on leave, point out some of the common causes of accidents — such as smoking in bed, hitchhiking, and driving while intoxicated and at excessive speeds.

Produced by the Army especially for orientation of military personnel going on pass or leave, the film is recognized by national safety authorities as one of the best of its kind, according to Post Safety Director Norman Evans.

why, but if that is what they want, they will get them to come.

There will be a general meeting of the Pine Ridge News on Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. for the purpose of electing a new president and three members of the board of governors.

It may take them a little longer to learn their lesson," he stated.

In the service for 13 years, Lt. Franklin landed in Europe with the 38th division in June 1944 and fought with it until it met the Russians at Magdeburg, Germany. He was sent to Korea as a member of the Korean Military Advisory Group in 1950 and was working with the 6th ROK Division near the 38th Parallel when he and three members of the board of governors started south with them. He helped organize and train the Fifth ROK division and was with it during its first exposure under fire. On January 1, 1951, while thousands of Americans were enjoying a day at one of the bowls, Lt. Edwin J. Franklin was captured by the Chinese a few miles from where he first saw action in Korea. Released on September 7, 1953, he returned to the U.S.—much more appreciative man!

Santa Claus to Visit 2,900 Post Kiddies

The annual Fort Benning Children's Christmas Parties, scheduled for 10 a.m. Dec. 19, are expected to attract approximately 2,900 post youngsters.

LT. CESAR ODRÍA
... Peruvian Officer

The Infantry Center Chaplain's Section, sponsor of the parties, said that eight post units would entertain the children of their personnel at the annual event.

This year's parties will reverse the usual procedure of giving post presents to the children. Each child is being asked to bring a usable toy which will later be presented to needy children through Fort Benning welfare agencies and the Twenty-Second Fund of Columbus, Ga.

The Chaplain's Section emphasizes, however, that bringing a gift is not a requirement for attending the party. Contributions are strictly voluntary, the section pointed out.

Peru Army Sends President's Son To Post Course

Lt. Cesar Odría, son of the president of Peru, assigned to 24th Company, First Student Regiment, is attending the Associate Company Officers Course No. 2.

Before coming to the United States upon an invitation from the Department of the Army, Lt. Odría graduated from the Military Center, the equivalent of West Point, with five years of service to his credit, he plans to make the army his career.

Although there are several other Peruvian officers attending courses throughout the United States, Odría is the only one stationed here.

Santa Claus will pay a personal visit to each party to pass out treats—candy, fruit, noisemakers, balloons, and paper hats. Youngsters also will join in singing familiar Christmas carols and receive movies and cartoons.

The Academic Department and other units will be invited to combine forces to stage a party for approximately 900 children in the post.

Combat Training Command will have 600 children of its members at Fort Benning for OCS and graduated in September 1952. He was assigned to the 4th Division at Fort Ord, Calif. and shortly after was sent overseas to the Pacific area where, as a result of the fighting on the New Georgia Islands, he earned the medal.

The honor was earned on July 28, 1943, during the heavy fighting for the Munday Air Strip, which the Allies desperately needed to continue the attack on other enemy-held islands. It was awarded to him by Maj. Gen. Wing, division commander.

From there Maj. Scott was rotated back to Fort Benning and was assigned as an instructor on the Rifle Fire Committee, where he stayed for two years until 1945. He applied for Regular Army in 1947, after two years of civilian life, was accepted, and assigned to Fort Rucker, Va. In 1948 he came to Benning again for the advanced infantry officers course and, upon completion, was sent to Europe.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Maj. Scott holds the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Army Testing 2 All-Purpose Light Rifles

WASHINGTON (APPS)—The Army has announced it is testing two new rifles—either one or both of replacing the M1, carbine, machinegun, sub-machinegun, and BAR.

Ex-Recruit Opn. Officer In 30th Inf.

Major George Melochick assumed the duties of operations officer, Third Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, relieving Maj. Robert M. Budge.

The major started his career as an enlisted man in the 30th Infantry Regiment in Hawaii and served with that unit from 1936 to 1939. Then he served in Panama with the Fifth Infantry Regiment from 1939 to 1942.

Attending Officer's Candidate School here, he was commissioned in March 1943.

During World War II, Major Melochick saw action in Europe as company commander of Company B, 194th Infantry Regiment, 30th Division, in 1944 and 1945. After the war he served with the Military Mission to Greece, adding another country to his foreign service.

In Korea in 1952-53, Major Melochick was for 18 months with the C-9 Air Division, Joint Operations Center assisting in the coordination of air and ground forces.

To 'Shoot' OCs

Mrs. Edith Bristol, who works for Burgess Photo Studio on Post, recently called up one of the Officer Candidates' Companies to arrange for classbook photographs of the candidates. Using typical photo language, she told the officer on the other end of the wire, "I want to make an appointment to shoot your class."

"My God," was the answer. "I know they're not spectacular but they're not bad enough to shoot."

Conference Sets Training Talk

"The Pattern of Training," Troop Topic No. 194, has been assigned as the Command Conference subject for the week beginning Dec. 14, according to an announcement by the Lt. Col. C. W. Hall, Troop Information and Education officer.

This Department of Army pamphlet points out that a better understanding of the Army training program will help soldiers get more out of the actual training.

The talk stresses three major parts of the current Army training program. They are: How training is geared to combat, how training is directed and coordinated, and what the soldier gains from different types of training.

A talk on highway safety will precede all Command Conferences during the week as a part of the program to stress safety during the holiday period.

Pearl Harbor Day 1941

Twelve years ago the Japanese fleet's infamous attack on Pearl Harbor, and Lt. Col. Gus W. Schlitzkus, newly assigned commanding officer of the 3d Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, was sent on an invitation from the Department of the Army as Commanding Officer of Company K, 30th Infantry Regiment, at the time. The 30th Infantry was stationed at Schofield Barracks at Oahu, Hawaii.

The actual attack began at 7 a.m. Col. Schlitzkus was at home with his wife. Their home was located adjacent to his company area and approximately five hundred yards from Wheeler Field. This air strip was one of the main points of the Jap attack.

Thunderous Explosions

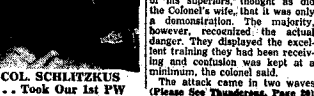

The Colonel and his wife became aware of the attack only when the first thunderous explosion on the nearby air strip shattered their windows. They jumped up and saw the Jap planes peeling into bombing dives with the "rising sun" on their wings.

Thunderous Explosions Shook Field

Leaving his wife, Col. Schlitzkus went to the company and began organizing the defenses. The colonel said that contrary to popular belief, a major portion of the personnel were present and not there or liberty at the time. Too, there was a lot less confusion than he has imagined. Within 10 minutes the defenses had been set up and the soldiers at the barracks and Wheeler Field were returning the enemy fire. Considerable damage was inflicted on the enemy planes and the Japanese bases have since been reported to be burning.

Most of the attack was centered on the naval and air force installations. Some wooden barracks at Schofield were strafed, but the permanent buildings in which Company K was quartered received only light damage from stray bullets.

Part of the men, including some of his superiors, thought as did the Colonel's wife, that it was only a demonstration. The majority, however, recognized the actual nature of the attack. The instruction training they had been receiving and confusion was kept at a minimum by the Colonel's instructions. The attack came in two waves (Please See Thunderous, Page 9)

It may be said now that airborne training is an old man's game as well as a young man's. Taking training in the Airborne Battalion of the First Student Regiment is M-Sgt. Lewis F. Moore, who has more seniority than any other trained man who has gone through training in a long time. Moore has been a military man for 18 years and plans to stay on for 30. He was in the Far East for five years, leaving Japan for Korea just 4 days before the conflict broke out there. He stayed

English Tradition British Outfits Praise 508th Tie Insignia

Recognition and praise from British military circles has followed announcement of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team's "Red Devil" necktie, first to be adopted and used by a U. S. military unit. The official British Army magazine "Soldier" in its December edition published the story of the 508th of-day cravat for its tradition-minded readers, many of whom belong to regimental associations who on or off active service. Each British regiment has long adopted its own necktie. An earlier letter from "Soldier" editors expressed keen interest in the Red Devil tie and asked further information about the American regiment's plan to form a bond of lasting recognition among all Red Devil paratroopers. Immediately following the "Soldier" announcement, letters arrived at the 508th public information office from officers of two British airborne regiments, congratulating the 508th and offering to exchange regimental ties. One letter, on the stationery of "The Parachute Regiment Association," requested an exchange of ties, adding that the association was building a museum of airborne articles and compiling an airborne history. Especially interesting, commented the writer of another letter, was that both the British regimental tie and the 508th Red Devil tie are designed on a background of blue silk with diagonal rows of white stars. Capt. Powell entered OCS in 1945 as a staff sergeant. Upon her graduation she was stationed at the Telecon section of the Pentagon until going to Paris in 1951.

WAC Company Gets New CO

Capt. Alice I. Fowler, of Washington, D.C., has become the new commanding officer of the WAC Company, Special Troops Command. She replaces a First Lt. Jewell, who until her discharge from the service, will act as company executive officer. Then she will return to the University of California to complete work on her Bachelor's degree in political science. Capt. Fowler reports to Fort Benning from Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, in Paris, where she was chief of Tele-Communications. This, she explains, is nothing more than simultaneous two-way radio telephone. The officers could sit in the conference room and confer with officials in Washington or London. The best part of the job was getting to meet all the important people connected with the WAC in 1945. Entering in the WAC in 1945 as a staff sergeant. Upon her graduation she was stationed at the Telecon section of the Pentagon until going to Paris in 1951.

PW 34 Months Wants Action Again

Lt. Col. Paul V. Liles is quietly hoping to get back into combat to settle several scores with the Communists. The Birmingham, Ala., resident is taking a field officers refresher course in the Fifth Company, First Student Regiment, only months after being a captive of the Communists. He was first questioned for six days, during which time he received no food. He was carried to Pusan on the Yalu where he joined prisoners from the First Cavalry. Then, after witnessing Communist torture, Liles was moved to Pyongyang where the POWs were held with political indoctrination months on end. Then he was shuttled back to Pusan, where the Chinese, much to the Americans' amazement, had improved conditions greatly. The POWs were issued warm clothing and a big improvement was made in the food. However, Liles recalls that they were still kept under the indoctrination treatment in the last camp the colonel was in much better health when the prisoner exchange started. He suffered from malaria, dysentery, and other diseases. The colonel, who started his military career as a recruit in the Alabama National Guard in 1935, was stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash., after completing his school.

European Vet Takes Over Reins of 78th Engineers

He has had a career of 12 years of service, 25 months of which was spent in foreign countries. The colonel entered the Army in 1941 and was serving with the 86th Infantry Division Headquarters as they prepared for overseas shipment. He arrived in North Africa in January 1944 and served with this unit as they moved into Italy.

During World War II, he spent an extended tour of duty in the Far East, serving as a medical battalion first sergeant in New Guinea, New Britain, and in the Asiatic-Pacific area. After the war the sergeant was assigned to a civilian occupation.

Rams, 508th Meet Sunday for Title; CTC-STC Clash Re-Set for Saturday

Of King Football will have his final fling of the year this weekend as all four post teams make their last 1953 appearances. Games are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, and both will get under way at 2 p. m. in Doughboy Stadium.

The Infantry Command championship will be on the line in Sunday's clash between the School, Brigade Rams, current league leaders, and the Red Devils of 508th ABCT. Brigade is sporting four wins and Saturday's game between Special Troops and CTC could determine second, third, and fourth place—Troops, the Commanders and should 508th lose Sunday, the Commanders and Red Devils would be tied for second. If, on the other hand, CTC loses to Special Troops, the Commanders and Red Devils would be tied for third.

Rams' Overhead Game Reaps 35-0 Win In Benning Bowl

The School Brigade Rams unleashed the full fury of their volatile offense Saturday to smash a rugged Camp Rucker All-Star eleven 35-0 before an estimated 1,300 fans in the first Benning Bowl game.

A rough, tough Rucker line played the Ram forwards on even terms for most of the game, and forced Brigade to take to the airfield for the majority of their yardage. Rucker's tackle to tackle spread averaged 215 pounds to the Rams' 184, and the All-Stars were very, very hard to convince.

Only big Joe Fortunato was able to gain consistently overland, crunching for 53 yards in 9 carries. The rest of the Ram-ball carriers were kept pretty well in check, amassing only 25 yards among them. However, Brigade's hurling corps was highly effective as Bill Allen, Dick Thompson, and Ed Crook fashioned nine completions among them for 177 yards and three touchdowns.

Kush Scores TD

The game had its share of unusual moments. A guard scored a touchdown as Frank "Twinkletoes" Kush blocked a Rucker punt, scooped up the bounding ball in full stride and scampered 25 yards to the end zone. Rucker coach Lin Jordan, standing five yards outside the sidelines, was on the receiving end of an errant Rucker pass.

The Rams found rough sliding on the muddy field for their first two series of downs, and showed a net loss of one yard on four series like that big All-Star line. However, climax runner Ed Crook got them rolling midway through the first quarter when he squatted 30 yards down the sidelines with a punt.

On the next scrimmage play, fortunate broke loose around left end and rumbled 25 yards to the All-Star five. Three plays carried to the one, from where Fortunato split left tackle to score, kick converted.

Moments later, Rucker's Dean Four attempted to kick from his end zone and had the ball slip through his outstretched fingers. With black-jergered Rams swarming through, Four fell on the ball for a safety and two more Brigade converts.

Lines Tangle

At this stage, the game had resolved itself into a titanic battle of the lines with matters standing fairly even. Rucker was using a virtual nine man line that jammed the Ram ground game, but Brigade's forwards, led by Bob Collins, were smearing Rucker plays before they were well under way. Collins, from his defensive right tackle spot, set up light housekeeping to 508th on Thanksgiving Day, 25-21. The Greenies will likely rely on old faithfuls like Ed Collins, Don Burns, Chet Freeman, and Dave Stewart against CTC. Andy Korner, powerful and speedy fullback, will be asked to lend hand also.

Bare, the best punter on post, will be the best punter on post. (Please See RAMS, Page 10) hinging all over him at the 25. Fortunato burst through the loosened - up Rucker defense for 15 yards, then Thompson threw to Ed Hamilton for the score on a beautifully conceived pass pattern that left Hamilton all alone in the end zone.

Rucker's ground game came to life at this point, and they controlled the ball most of the second quarter. Unable to score, the visitors

CTC Loses Sports Star

The Combat Training Command lost one of its prominent sports participants via discharge a short time ago. Sgt. Arthur "Art" Green, Company M, 30th Regt., a stand-out on the CTC basketball and baseball squads, has returned to civilian life.

Sgt. Green capably held the positions of center and forward for the CTC basketball squad last year. He achieved honors as one of the high scorers for the post and was chosen as one of the outstanding players during the post play-offs of 1953.

In baseball, Green played first base regularly in the 1952 season, but was sidelined for most of the 1953 season because of injuries.

Brigade, 508th Boxers Tied; Ten Matches Slated Tonight

Boxing season shifts into high gear tonight at Briant Wells Field House as pest pugilists tangle in another 10 hour card that should go a long way toward straightening out the somewhat entangled league standings.

The matter of two disputed matches was settled at the regular boxing meeting last week, and 508th Airborne emerged on the long end of both squabbles. These two matches, plus the three which Red Devil boxers picked up in last Thursday's matches, boosted 508th into a first place tie with the School Brigade team.

Official standings now show Brigade and 508th deadlocked at the top with 11 points apiece, and Special Troops stalemated with CTC at nine apiece.

Stu Wins Three

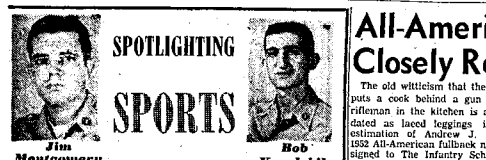

Bill Miller, David Seward, and Dave Dellanegra were the trio of Devils who hung up victories last week. Miller flailed out a decision over tough little Denny Dockery of Brigade in a rousing, free-swinging affair which saw both boys fling the air with leather.

Dellanegra also registered a decision over Joe Fontaine of Brigade in a welterweight scrap. Seward, who by the way is not the football player of the same name, was awarded a TKO over Brigade's George Hostie who was forced to rang as Referee Edwin Pater was tolling the count of seven. Benton was awarded a technical knockout when Brown was unable to answer the bell for the third round.

FALL OF MAN . . . Sam Brown, CTC lightweight, here takes the long journey to the canvas late in the second round of his bout with Brigade's Fred Benton last week. Brown was saved by the bell, which

SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS

"There's something about these bowl games . . . Each November, our fair land is ravaged and riddled by a strange, rare virus. It attacks college football players, coaches, and fans inordinately, and is known as 'post-seasonitis.' This germ is the cause of that dread disease, bowl fever, the only known cure for which is an invitation to spend New Year's Day in certain locales of California, Louisiana, Texas, or Florida and other states of warm climates.

Post seasonitis first reared its head in the town of Pasadena, Calif., on the first day of the year 1902. Here Fielding Yost's "point-a-minute" Michigan team pulverized gallant Stanford, 49-0, in the first Rose Bowl game. The contest itself had to be shortened by some 12 minutes, because it seems that Stanford ran out of players. So many Indians were helped, carried, or dragged off the field that only 10 remained when the fourth quarter began.

Very polite, Michigan's captain offered to call it a day, but the Stanford leader courteously declined. The Wolverines promptly barreled to another touchdown, leaving a wake of Californians prostrate on the sod. The Stanford captain took a quick inventory, glanced at the clock, and remarked that if Michigan didn't mind, the Indians were willing to hit the showers. So ended our first post-season extravaganza.

Bowl fever then remained dormant for the next 14 years, but in 1916 it struck Pasadena again, and has been a permanent resident ever since with one lone exception. In 1943 the Rose Bowl game was moved to Durham, N. C., for "security reasons." What it actually amounted to was that the War Department said they wished all those people wouldn't cram into one football stadium because somebody might drop a bomb or

All-American Kozar Finds Army Closely Resembles Civilian Job

The old witticism that the Army Bowl Jan. 1, when Tennessee's school Brigade, 50 to 20, puts a cork behind a gun and a rifleman in the kitchen is as outdated as loosed legions in the estimation of Andrew J. Kozar, 1952 All-American fullback now assigned to The Infantry School.

Recently named to the school's Staff Department, Kozar, of St. Michaels, Pa., who played football for the University of Tennessee, is an instructor in the Physical Training Committee.

His job is to teach Infantry students hand-to-hand combat techniques, including the basic principles of fighting with the bayonet and knife in addition to methods of disarming a foe.

Football Training

"This all ties in with my football training," the athlete said. "Footwork, stance and being in top physical condition all apply in hand-to-hand combat."

The 23-year-old fullback played in two bowl games and was slated for a third, but missed it because of an injury.

Andy played on the University of Tennessee team against Texas in the 1950 Cotton Bowl and in the Sugar Bowl in 1951 against Maryland.

He spent eight weeks in a cast with broken vertebrae received in last year's game with Florida and was unable to play in the Cotton Bowl.

Peanut Bowl Queen's Harvest To Include Watch, Presents

The National Peanut Council will present a 14 karat gold wrist watch to the Peanut Bowl queen who will reign over the activities of the eighth annual Peanut Bowl football game in Columbus Dec. 18.

The Peanut Bowl queen will be selected next Saturday afternoon at a tea dance at Treen Tavern. Three young ladies from each of the four Columbus and Phenix City high schools will compete for the title of Miss Peanut Bowl.

The queen and her 11 attendants also will receive several gifts from the Columbus Exchange Club sponsor of the annual schoolboy classic, and will attend all the activities being held in connection with the football game.

Montgomery Bell Academy of Nashville, Tenn., will be the Georgia team's out-of-state opponent. The Georgia host team will not be selected until next week, following completion of the high school play-offs.

Still in the running for the invitation to represent Georgia in the high school bowl game are Lanier of Macon and Grady of Atlanta in Class A, and Valdosta and Macon Grange in Class A.

Tickets are now on sale in the Columbus Exchange Club headquarters is the strong.

something. Obligingly, the scene was switched from west coast to east coast.

All in all, 39 Rose Bowl contests have gone into the record books, and some of our most celebrated teams and players have visited there.
In the 1926 game, a big Alabama halfback made his presence known to California as the Crimson Tide downed Washington 20-19. When the game was over, the big fellow decided he liked it out there, so he got a job and hung around. He's still there. His name is Johnny Mack Brown.

Morse Rose Bowl legend was written in 1934, and Stanford was the victim. An upstart Columbia University squad made the trip, and took home a 7-0 victory over a Stanford team that was declared unbeatable. Columbia's touchdown was scored by an unknown lad named Al Barnes on a reverse play that became a household byword. Just ask any Pasadena resident what KF-79 was.

Following their loss to Columbia, the Stanford players took a vow to return to the Rose Bowl game the next year. Led by All-Americans Bobby Grayson, Monk Moscrip, and Keith Topping, they went unbeaten and rated as the nation's finest. Only Minnesota, experts said, could give Stanford a reverse play that, however, couldn't play due to a conference ruling, so the Indians had to settle for Alabama.

As the Crimson Tide came onto the field, California fans began to chant, "We want Minnesota. Bring on Minnesota." This seemed to hurt Alabama's pride, and they decided to take it out on Stanford. The Tide bottled up Grayson, Moscrip, and Co., and turned loose Dixie Howell and Don Hutson to score 12 touchdowns. It finally wound up 29-13, and Alabama fans late in the game chanted: "We want Minnesota. Bring on Minnesota."

In 1929, Duke University was the visiting team. The Blue Devils of that year were unbeaten, untied, and unbelievable though it seems, unrecorded upon. Even more amazing, in light of recent two-platoon football, was the fact that Duke made a habit of only using 11 players per game. Known as "The Iron Men of Duke," each one played 60 minutes, and played 'em at top speed, too.

Duke's opponent in the Rose Bowl was Southern California, and the game was a Trojan match opportunity for a showing. Somehow, somehow, SC managed to dig in and stop Duke short of paydirt though most of the game was played inside the Trojan 20-yard line. The Iron Men managed to play a fourth period field goal, and led 3-0 with less than five minutes to play. Duke's great record seemed safe. Then a completely unheralded sophomore named S. Doyle Nave entered the game for Southern Cal, and began spraying passes with complete abandon and considerable accuracy.

Nave hurled seven straight strikes that carried from the Trojan 35-yard strike, the last one cutting the Duke goal line which hadn't felt the knife all season. Final score USC 7, Duke 3 in one of the all-time Pasadena thrillers.

Meanwhile, inevitably, bowl fever was striking all over the country. Post season affairs known as Sugar, Cotton, and Orange bowls grew until they reached stature comparable to that of the Rose Bowl itself. Actually, in recent years one or all of these "upstart" bowls has offered contests superior to the one played in Pasadena.

For instance, few of the assembled thousands who saw Tennessee whip Tulsa 14-7 in the Sugar Bowl game of 1941 will ever see a more exciting drama. It was fabulous, it was glorious, it was passing against Tennessee power and the collision was tremendous. And who could forget that wide-open scoring battle that took place down in Miami in 1949? That year, a team of infuriated Texas Longhorns, burning at the brand of "third raters" which had been slapped on them, exacted vengeance at the expense of Georgia University, 41-24 as both teams saw heavy defenses to the wind to hang up an all-time bowl scoring record.
There's something about these bowl games...

Lightweight Champion Elvis Mathews Anchors STC Bid for Ring Laurels

Mainstay of this season's Special Troops boxing team is a 125-pounder from Gary, Ind., Cpl. Elvis Mathews, who was last year's All Post lightweight champion and runnerup for the honors in the Third Army tournament.

Mathews began his amateur career before he came into the Army in November 1948. Sent to Fort Knox for basic, he found time to win some eight ring victories during his training. Sent next to Fort Shafter, Hawaii, he began boxing in earnest.

Against stiff competition, he won the Amateur Athletic Union 1952 lightweight championship, the AAU's 1952 Hawaiian Territorial Championship, as well as the All Service championship of 1952.

His favorite prize from the Pacific theater was Mrs. Mathews. Elvis married the former Jusilla Johnson who joined with him here in December 1950. He joined the Special Troops boxing team in January. Contributing five straight victories to the cause he helped the STC team win the TFC championship. He won the TFC championship in the Third Army eliminations before losing out in the final round, but he was not discouraged.

Mathews has won four straight fights and is well on his way to repeating last season's success against the Amateur Athletic Union 1952 lightweight champion, Jose Flores of the 508th ARCT tonight at the Briant Wells Field House, Searsville, Tenn.

Early in the third period, Fortunio Tumbie scored a Rucker class loss from his linehockey spot and returned to the All-Star Star 38. Once again the winner, his line contained the Ram ground attack, but Thompson threaded the needle with a 32 yard scoring pass to Jim Hart which sent Brigade ahead by 21-0.

Following recovery of a Rucker Tumbie to the visitors' 38, quarterback Bill Allen completed a pair of 19-yard passes with the second one good for six points to Bob Steen. Allen received good protection from his mates, and his aerials were things of precision his receivers took without breaking stride.

Joe McDonald, Brigade's line center, turned in some tomcat defending and was playing his best game of the season until forced out with a knee injury.

Four fights featuring Little League boxers were also unrecorded and had their usual crowd pleasing effect. John Shelton, Jerry Adams, Ricky Lopez, Paul Gates, Ken Albritton, Tommy Grawitt, Jerry Lewis, and David Post won the plaudits of the audience with their aggressiveness and surprising skill.

Wac Cagers Open Season Tonight at YAC

Fort Benning's Wac basketball team will open its 1953-54 season tonight at the Youth Activities Center when they take on the Waves from the Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla. Game time is 7:30 p.m. No advance information is available about the Wave quintet, but the Wac team, with several experienced players on the squad, is rated a slight favorite.

The Waves have games tentatively set with several local girls teams from the Columbus area, but are having some trouble setting games with other service squads. Camp Gordon and Fort McPherson, two favorite opponents of past seasons, will not have teams this year. And most of the other service teams are posts that are beyond travel limits for the local girls.

All of the Wacs' home games will be played on the Old Gym Floor of the Post Youth Activities Center, using recognized girls basketball rules.

The 1954 Third Army sports program will offer men and women participation on the intrapost and interunit level to insure the receipt of physical training activities for the purpose of developing and maintaining a high degree of mental and physical well-being military personnel of this command.

Individual installation commanders will be afforded wide latitude in programming sports to best fit the needs and capabilities of their particular units. Interest, inter-service and community sports competition, to further community relations, will be encouraged.

Third Army tournaments to be held in 1954 will include Bowling (men and women) at Fort Campbell, March 8-13; Basketball (men and women) at Camp Stewart, March 22-27; Boxing at Fort Bragg, April 19-23; Volleyball (men and women) at Fort McChesney, May 19-23; Track and Field at Fort Benning, June 11-12.

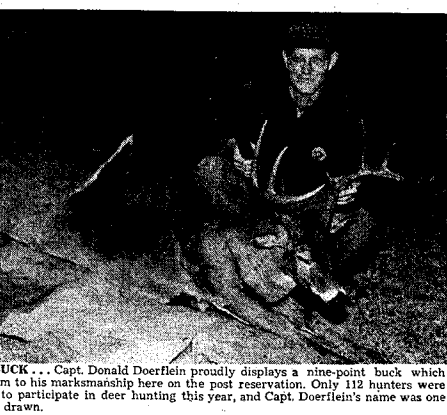

Golf at Fort Campbell, July 12-17; Swimming and Diving at Fort Bragg, Aug. 18-19; Baseball at Fort Jackson, Aug. 30-Sept. 4; and Softball (men and women) at Fort McPherson, Sept. 20-25.

Winners of the Third Army tournaments will be eligible to participate in the various all-army tournaments later in the year. The Third Army will be host to the all-army swimming and diving championships, which will be held at Fort Bragg, Aug. 26-27.

With the recent boom in All-American football selections, it is growing increasingly difficult to put the finger on any group as the final choice. # Young Lawyers From North Carolina Learn Infantry Lessons

BY C. D. CROSBY

Last week on the thousand-inch range four young Tarheel lawyers were suessing off shot-groups on the automatic rifle and doing very well at it. As far as anybody knows, they are the first Judge Advocate General officers to go through with a mud-slogging infantry outfit.

They are First Lieutenants Evelyn L. Baer, of Dunn, N. C.; Willis D. Brown, of Magnolia, N. C.; John G. Goding, of Tryon, N. C.; and Harshel B. Keeper, of Lenore, N. C.

How do lawyers take to the infantry? Lt. Keeper says, "After a hard day in the field I wish I were not here, but if they said I could Center Chemical Section.

Wilkins Cited For Korea Valor

PFC Marvin E. Wilkins of Mobile, Ala., was awarded the Bronze Star Medal here Monday for heroic achievement in Korea.

The presentation was made by Col. Bruno Jatzerski, chief of medical services at the post hospital.

Wilkins was cited for his service on June 2, 1953, near the Punch-bowl, while serving with the 23d Infantry Regiment of the 40th Division.

A member of a wire team, he was stringing new lines and checking old ones to insure the unit the best wire communications possible when confronted by a heavily mined area.

By changing the continuity of the lines he could have avoided the dangerous area, but he realized that this would subject the lines to enemy artillery and mortar fire," according to the citation.

Wilkins called to his helper and instructed him to avoid the mined area, while he proceeded to finish the task. As he entered the marked area and continued with his vital task he accidentally detonated a mine, which wounded him painfully in the foot.

CPL. J. V. GASKINS BACK AT WORK Spent 27 Months As POW

As PW of Reds CTC Cpl. Treasured, Re-Read 90 Letters

The distance from the Han River in Korea is some 120 miles, but the Communist guards marching prisoners over the hills after extending the trip to roughly 500 miles. Cpl. Gaskins spent 27 months and 28 days in Camp No. 1 near Chungnam, after his capture on April 25, 1951.

At that time he was serving with the 55th Field Artillery, 24th Division, as a cannonier in a 105 mm howitzer battery.

On the day he was captured, Cpl. Gaskins had been sent with a vehicle to fetch ammunition and supplies for his unit, held prisoner by the enemy. Unknown to Gaskins the Communists had set up a road block on the route he was traveling.

Suddenly the corporal found himself in the enemy trap, surrounded by soldiers, and was forced to surrender. This was the beginning of the nightmare that lasted until Aug. 20, 1953, when he was repatriated.

Contact with his relatives was maintained, however, through letters which managed to trickle through. In all, Gaskins received about 90, all treasured and re-read many times.

Gaskins, whose home is in Nashville, Ga., is working with the Ordnance Technical Supply in the 3657th Ordnance Co.

Red Devil 'Movie' Praised

A letter of appreciation was received recently from Brig. Gen. Carl E. Fritzsche, assistant commander, commending a handling of men from the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, who worked on a training movie, which was filmed here in October.

The troop participation was described as outstanding in every respect. Gen. Fritzsche particularly conveyed his appreciation to First Lieut. Robert A. Holloman, project officer responsible for the supervision of the detail as well as serving as an officer-actor in the movie.

"Lt. Holloman performed this job in a superior manner, and the success of the detail was in a large way attributable to this superior leadership and initiative. The performance of the entire detail was enthusiastic as well as outstanding.

Gen. Fritzsche also commended the following individuals: Sgt. Samuel R. Mathis, Co. L, a squad leader; Sgt. Alberto G. Ponte, Co. E, featured aggressor actor; Sgt. John Young, NCO in charge of the demolition detail; Sgt. Edwin C. Carberry and Ted Thompson of Co. F and A, squad leaders; and Cpl. Lawrence T. Churchfield, of Co. K, also a squad leader.

Accompanying the letter was an endorsement from Brig. Gen. Aubrey Newman, Deputy TIC Commander, who added his personal commendation for the "excellent performance of duty." Col. Glenn McCowan, 508th Command, also commended the detail.

Marion Riel Wins Wac Honor of Week

This week's Wac of the Week will be disappointed if her company keeps here at Fort Benning during the Christmas holidays. Instead of pinning for money with the family by the Christmas tree, Cpl. Marion Riel will celebrate with her sister Dorothy, also a Wac corporal in the same company.

The Riel sisters hail from Missoula, Mont., and landed at Benning on Thanksgiving Day 1952. Marion is assigned to the Main Post Finance Office while sister Dorothy spends her duty hours in the 15th Finance Disbursing Section.

Hall Brothers Soldier Together In Red Devils

BY M. F. WADE We have heard many stories of brothers at one time or another, the brotherly love of the Corsican one think that "all brothers are valiant."

Another story of such nature has come to light, concerning the Hall brothers—Leonard and Richard of the 57th Airborne Regimental Combat Team. Not twins, not alike in appearance, but very much alike in their tastes—by they in the form of militarism or romantic notions.

The first sergeant, sitting behind his desk, puffing on a cigar, frowning and making like a lion in the jungle, often makes the mistake of separating these brothers on his duty roster, but the duty work sheet is not long posted before a rapping comes on the orderly room door. First Sergeant Guttry does not fight the problem; the error is put straight.

On the ground together, in the boon-decks rain or shine, digging the same gun emplacement, eating out of the same ration can, sharing the same tent and, last but not least, mousing the same 57-mm recoilless rifle. In the air it's the same story. The aircraft moans and vibrates approaching the Drop Zone; but the Hall brothers, giving a grin to each other as they near the door, silently transmitting a message: "Lots of luck kid, I'll see you on the ground."

Born in Sheldon, Iowa, Richard and Leonard Hall came into the Army together and have managed to stay together during the long chain of events that have taken place since their basic training, through jump school, and now with the 508th. Just for the record they both made corporal on the same Special Order.

8 Officers Get 508 Reassignments Eight Officers in the 508th Airborne regimental Combat Team have been reassigned. They are, First Lt. William F. Macatee, to Company E as commanding officer; First Lt. Frederick T. Abt, of Hq. Company, 2d Battalion, as assistant battalion executive officer; First Lt. Mack McGinnis, to Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion as assistant lieutenant; Second Lt. John Todd, to Company M as reconnaissance officer; Second Lt. Charles E. Lewis, Jr. to Company M as platoon leader; Second Lt. B. Ross Wangsness, to Headquarters Company 1st Battalion, as assistant battalion executive officer.

Soldiers to Get Safety Greetings

Fort Benning soldiers will get a special Christmas greeting when they pick up their leave orders.

The greeting will not only wish them a merry Christmas but will also tell them how to make sure their Yuletide holiday is both happy and safe.

Along with the season's greetings will be pointers on safe driving practices to remind the soldier that an accident is the "surest way to wreck a holiday," says Post Safety Director Norman Evans.

Safety officials estimate that Fort Benning soldiers will drive 18 million miles over the Christmas holidays. In order to reduce the danger of accidents, they have launched an intensive traffic safety program.

Evans pointed out that major causes of automobile accidents are driving after one or more drinks of intoxicating beverages, driving without sufficient sleep, and driving at speeds of over 50 miles an hour at night or on wet, slippery roads.

with each lasting about thirty minutes. Following the parties, the company K moved out with the other units in the 35th to set up defenses on the beach. The Colonel remembered that they thought the bombing was a "softening-up" and expected an invasion shortly afterwards.

No landing attempt was made, but the 35th remained in their defenses. They were still there when Col. Schiltz was in 1942. It was here that his company captured what Col. Schiltz believes to be our first enemy prisoner of World War II. A two-man submarine was defended in King Company's area of defense. One of the members of the sub's crew was taken prisoner.
In 1942, Schiltz moved to the South Pacific and there engaged in the Solomon Islands Campaign until September 1943.

Old Santa Surprises Young Eisenhowers

President Eisenhower's grand-children have placed their orders for Santa Claus, but they're still not sure whether they'll be hanging their stockings in the White House or on the mantel of their Fort Benning home.
"Our plans aren't definite yet, but we'll let you know," 34-year-old Dwight D. Eisenhower promised Santa Claus, but they're still not sure whether they'll be hanging their stockings in the White House or on the mantel of their Fort Benning home.
"I'd like a linker toy set, and their father, Major John Eisenhower, commands the First Battalion of the 20th Infantry Regiment.
"What sort of train would you...
(Please See SANTA Page 21)

Ten thousand new airborne soldiers are scheduled for training between January and April in Fort Benning's Airborne Department.

To help meet the great influx of trainees more than 100 officers and men of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team have moved from their Sand Hill home for special duty as cadre and instructors with the Department.

★ ★ ★ All-Star Gridders Announced Today

The Red Devils are being integrated into both the Airborne Battalion administrative sections and the Airborne School training sections and will remain on special duty until April, according to Infantry School officials.
The integration was prompted after Army Field Forces ordered an extra-large number of airborne volunteers through jump school. The volunteers will come from units of the 18th Airborne Corps, 82d Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., the 11th Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., and the various basic training camps. The expected classes of 1,000 men a week will triple the present student roster. The average class for the past year has numbered 350 men.

The 508th instructors are being assigned to all phases of the airborne training committees and are taking a week's refresher course to prepare for the mass training which begins in January. Although the Red Devils have all qualified as jumpers, refresher training will insure continuance of the high standards maintained by the Airborne Department.

Sfc. Phillips
Picked to Act
As Gen's. Aide

Sfc. William F. Phillips, Jr., of First Mich., has been elected to Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, Third Army commander.
The 20-year-old sergeant, a member of Company H, Airborne Battalion, First Student Regiment, is the second Fort Benning soldier to be named as Gen. Bolling's estate aide.

Sgt. Phillips was selected from among six finalists from the Post's major units on the basis of battle record, leadership ability, training, soldierliness, and personality.
"I think it's a good deal," said Phillips after learning of his new two-week assignment. "I know I will get a lot of experience and have an opportunity to see first hand the duties of the officers in an Army headquarters."
Nearly eight years ago the sergeant was drafted into the Army and decided to remain. In 1950 he reenlisted for six years.
He served with the 10th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in Korea as squad leader, assistant platoon sergeant, and platoon sergeant. From February 1951 to Sept. 8, 1952, he fought in the United Nations counter-offensive, the Chinese Spring offensive, and the air- (Please See PHILLIPS, Page 2)

Unification Puzzle Historian Cites German Doubts

An authority on European history declared here last Friday that the Germans are not enthusiastic about a reunification of their country.

Dr. Harold D. Deutsch of the University of Minnesota, speaking to a joint session of three Infantry school officer classes, said he believes the German people find reunification desirable but academic.

"These people feel that such a union would leave the Germans with more important things to attend to first."

The 20th Century European expert pointed out that Germany has three choices: (1) join the East, (2) join the West, or (3) play both ends against the middle.

Sarge's Briefing Gets Results

M-Sgt. Burley F. Whittington, sergeant - major of the 73rd Tank Battalion, is raving the result of his efforts in preparing men going on Combat Training Command guard duty.

"The only real choice," he said, "is to join the West. The Germans are fascinated by a large area concept, such as a suburban area, less with geographic claustrophobia. The East would swallow them up. With the West they would have their large area block without self-destruction."

OC Chrysler Sees Noble Horse Coming Back to the Cavalry

"The cavalry is coming back," predicts Officer Candidate Pembroke Chrysler of the 17th OC Company, Chrysler, a former breeder of championship Clydesdale horses and Angus cattle, has a faith in the cavalry's return that is unusual.

"Since the cavalry was disbanded in 1924," says the OC, "there have been many times and places in which it was felt that such units could have been used to great advantage. Such times occurred both during World War II and in Korea, in rough terrain where vehicles just couldn't move."

"The Chinese Communist armies have used in the past and probably will use in the future, cavalry units successfully. At the outset, they used the Communists for transportation and became popular with the enemy as a means of closer troop control by commanders of small field units."

A point in favor of horse warfare, according to Chrysler, is the possible greater dispersion of troops and easier methods of supply. Horses can stand up under amazing physical punishment when properly cared for.

"The use of cavalry in the United States Army could well be explained and recommended," said the former horse breeder.

YOU'LL "GET HOME" FASTER

BY THE NUMBERS

It's always a treat to "get home" by train or telephone. And usually, the faster the better.

That's why it's helpful to call by number when you make your visit by Long Distance telephones. When you give the operator the out-of-town number, she doesn't have to consult "information" in the city you're calling and you'll "get home" faster.

You'll find out-of-town directories for frequently called cities at each telephone center. These centers are located at the Main Post, Sand Hill and Harmon Church area.

And remember, it's better for you to call the folks back home instead of their calling you, since you may be hard to locate. Charges can be reversed.

Officers Praised For War Games

For service as simulated student officers in a recent "war game" exercise four first lieutenants of the 50th Airborne Regimental Combat Team were commended by Col. James V. Thompson, chief of The Infantry School's Staff Department.

Maj. Robert W. Jamison and Capt. Wilbur A. Sidney, Ivan H. Long and Richard A. Bailey, serving as temporary student officers in a three-and-one-half-week war game to study problems in the life cycle of an infantry regiment. The 133-hour game tested activation, training, overseas movement and staging, combat, occupation duty, and the inactivation of a regiment.

Col. Thompson said the exercise was designed to test the concept, method of presentation, and student organization. "Only by a practice run such as that in which the 50th officers took part could the war game be tested prior to presentation to the Advanced Class," the Staff Department director said.

Ceremonies Mark Field Forces Board Birthday

Thirty-four years ago Dec. 15, 1919, the Army Field Forces Board No. 3 planted its roots in the Fort Benning reservation to work hand in hand with the U. S. Infantry in producing the best-equipped ground troops in the world.

Special ceremonies to mark the anniversary were held Tuesday on the third quartet parade ground.

Board No. 3 Detachment passed in review before an official party which included Major Gen. G. S. Meloy, Jr., Infantry Center commander, Brig. Gen. Carl F. Fritzsche, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and retired Army Brig. Gen. Charles W. Funez of Columbus, who as a colonel was president of the board from November 1950 to January 1951.

Awards Made
During the review Gen. Meloy presented Commendation Ribbons with Metal Pediments to three members of the Board Detachment who were cited for their "meritorious achievement" at Fort Benning and in Korea.

They were Sic. Paul L. Kee of Camden, Tenn.; Sgt. Melvin L. Anderson of Fairfield, Iowa, and M.

Sgt. Andrew J. Gilleenwater of Lee, W. Va. Kee received the ribbon for his attempt to save two other soldiers during a recent test of illuminating devices for the battlefield. Anderson was cited for his service in Korea with Battery A, 15th Field Artillery Battalion, from Feb. 9 to June 30, 1953. Gilleenwater, who was chief ammunition clerk and inspector in the Ordnance Headquarters of I Corps in Korea from July 25, 1952, to Oct. 19, 1953, was decorated for his outstanding leadership and ability while with the corps.

Board's Duties
The Board whose job is to test, evaluate and develop Infantry weapons and equipment, was activated March 31, 1953, at the General Service and Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

In April, 1919, the Lewis Board met in France to consider the lessons gained from World War I so far as they affected the tactics and organization of the Infantry.

This board was a major step toward the establishment of a permanent agency to study the ever-changing problems and needs of the Infantry.

On Dec. 15, 1919, the War Department issued orders creating the Infantry Board, a developments and testing laboratory with permanent station at the newly founded Fort Benning and whose sole function was to consider the improvement of the Infantry. The Board was redesignated Army Ground Forces Board No. 3, Oct. 1, 1945, under the supervision of the commanding general of Army Ground Forces.

On March 18, 1949, the word field was substituted for ground and it took the name now in use.

Last June, the board was placed under the full authority of the office of the Chief of Army Field Forces. The physical program and personnel, both military and civilian, remained unchanged under

Goal Line Stand Halts Greenies In Final Minute

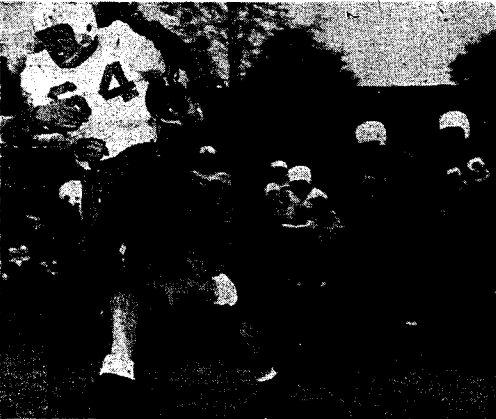

Heartbreak waited at the goal line Saturday for Special Troops, turning back a last-minute Green Wave bid only four yards from the end zone to drop victory and a third place finish into the deserving hands of CTC's Commanders.

The Yardstick

CTC	15 First Downs	9	107 Yards Rushing	182	38 Yards Passing	155	195 Total Yards	337

For the Commanders, it was the end of a crazy, mixed-up season in which they managed to beat both of the league co-champions once and also lose to the cellar occupants once. In compiling a three-and-three mark for the year, Coach Jim Heit's squad beat everybody and lost to everybody one time around.

Saturday's game was almost a replay of the first STC-CTC game, which was one of the most dramatic pulse pounders enacted all season long in the hallowed confines of Daughbooy Stadium. Commanders Score CTC got things off to a roaring start in the gloomy, murky weather by carving out six points the second time they got the ball. Bob Moorhead, returning to action after a nearly disastrous injury,

FABULOUS FREEMAN . . . Here's Chet Freeman (64) in action. STC's one-man gang is being pulled down by an unidentified pair of arms after an 11-yard burst over tackle in the first quarter of Saturday's game. Freeman gained 111 yards in 19 carries in the Wave's 13-7 loss to CTC.

Freeman carrying the load - assault - Special Troops made several threats, but it was late in the first half before the Greenies could score. When it finally came, the STC touchdown was accomplished with surprising ease. Harry Lindy tumbled and the Wave pounced on it on CTC's 27. The unstoppable Freeman crashed for four yards, then Burns fed and threw into the end zone. Five yards across the goal line, players ran toward Burns' destination pass in order of appearance they were. Hank Tommie, Ronnie Schomburger, and Bobby Moorhead. With Commanders in front and behind, Schomburger reached over Tommie's shoulder to outdrive Moorhead for the ball and fall earthward with six points in his big skyhooks. Tommie, Moorhead, and the assembled spectators are still puzzled as to exactly how it happened, but plays like this were what earned Ronnie his best rating.

Dogged Devils Clip Rams, 8-7 In Mud Battle

508th Airborne's doggedly determined Red Devils slogged through the downpour Sunday to defeat the favored School Brigade Rams 8-7 and earn a tie for the 1953 post football championship.

The Yardstick

Ram Joe Fortunato, back to punt from his own end zone, led the sudden, greasy pigskin slip through his hands. He fell on the ball but was eight yards behind the goal and it was two points for 508th.

It was a terrible break for Eli, for, he performed magnificently otherwise, leading all runners with 78 yards in 19 attempts. This represents a remarkable effort, for the footing resembled a virtual quagmire. Fortunato was forced from the game with an elbow injury in the final period, and Brigade felt his loss keenly.

Units eligible to enter a team are the First Officer Candidate Regiment, First Student Regiment, Second Student Regiment, Special Troops Company, Provisional Medical Group, Combat Training Command, Infantry School Detachment, Air Infantry Regiment, Lawson Air Force Base and 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team.

Rams First In All-Post Team

BY JIM MONTGOMERY (Bayonet Sports Editor) The School Brigade Rams, finishing the regular season in a dead heat with 508th Airborne, dominated the 1953 All-Post football team by landing five men on the first selection and five on the second string.

This year's mythical eleven was chosen by players and coaches of the four teams comprising the Infantry Center football league. Each player and coach was given a ballot and told to name his own personal all-post team - the 11 whom he personally thought were the best encountered in league play.

Since this all-post selection could include no players from the voter's own team, unanimous choices were impossible. Frank Ellis a ball blocker on offense, was voted for the Rams, and proved to be a fine blocker on defense. Center: Owen Rudd, 508th Red Devils. Only Airborne man to be named to the first team, Rudd was the anchor of a tough Red Devil line. He spent his collegiate days at the University of Kentucky, and it took an All-American, Doug Moseley, to keep him off the starting lineup. The Wildcats' center, known for his effectiveness when Rudd checked into the game, Rudd turned in a great performance in the 1952 Cotton Bowl as Kentucky beat Tulsa Christian minus the services of injured Moseley.

1953 Grid Kings Crowned At Annual Football Banquet

508th's fast closing Red Devils, highly successful one Spectator in the night and good crowd turned out for most of the games. Bad weather cut the attendance figures for the last few contests, but a surprising number of faithful fans braved Sunday's rain and cold to see the finale. The relative quality-and-stance between the four teams insured hard fought games, and the fact that both championship clubs were beaten twice points up the fact that no team was ever sure of victory.

Without further ado, here are the 11 top gridlers for 1953: Left end: Bob Smith, CTC Commanders. Not used extensively as a pass receiver, Smith was his berth on tremendous defensive ability. His big number 88 was a frequent visitor in opposing backfields, and after one or two fruitless tries, enemy signal callers started shy of attempting to catch Smith's end. Rugged on defense, capable on offense, Smith was a genuine surprise here. All stars Sunday. Joe Fortunato, on the ground delivered a crisp kick to clear Crook's ability, and 47 of them played over the payoff stripe. Diving at the Ram back in Emma Matthews, while Body Grimley (33) arrived too late.

SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS

The press box at Doughboy Stadium was literally overflowing with rotabates from the post grid scene during Sunday's Ram-Red Devil battle. Present and interested in the outcome were All-Post players Chet Freeman of Special Troops and CTC's Andy Myers, Ed Cole of the Green Wave, Coach Jim Hetti of CTC, and Bill Cullom of Brigade, who is injured and acted as spotter. This in itself was no small job, for after 30 seconds of play, each member of both teams was carrying around an inch-thick coating of muck and mire.

Myers was first to arrive, wearing a wide-brimmed Tennessee Stetson and strutting along jauntily under a plaid umbrella. He folded the parasol and took a seat, remarking that the press coop was the place for him on a day such as this. Myers noticed Joe McDonald, injured Ram center, standing in civilian clothes on the sideline and asked, "Is that McDonald?" We replied that it was and that Joe had a smashed up knee from the Benning Bowl game.

"What's a bad break for Brigade," was Andy's opinion, "McDonald's a tough boy out there." Myers proved to be a good prophet, for the Rams sorely missed Joe's services as a linebacker. The injured forced Ellis Rainsberger to move over to the pivot spot, and he did a bangup job at the strange position, his absence from right guard didn't do Brigade any good.

Freeman and Cole came in a bit after the kickoff, explaining that they had been occupied with moving house. Freeman, who had been in the press box for the Brigade at the moment, but 508th was pressing hard Myers lost no time in reminding Freeman of their wage points, not to speak of the English words.

"Hey, Freeman," somebody shouted from the far end, "There were about three tackles yesterday that you weren't in on. What were you doing, loafing?" Chet grinned, ruefully rubbed his battered knee and said there were another game left on the Greenie schedule he'd shoot himself.

As this time down on the field Joe Fortunato let a snap from center go astray and the mud had settled 508th had a safety. An unknown volunteer field observer immediately condemned the Ram center for making a wild pass. "Uh uh," corrected Ed Cole. "Joe let the ball go, and he had it here."

Freeman, a keen student of the game, remarked that those two points could have an awful lot to do with the final score. He was never more astute.

During a timeout, someone thought back to a bit of first quarter action. Ed Crook had taken a tussle, cleared with no one between him and paydirt. Then Lafayette Horton, who played nearly the whole frame for 508th, gave chase. Crook was 10 yards ahead of the pack, but long striding Horton overhauled him at the Red Devil line.

Ed Crook was leading 8-7. "Kick that ball, Matthews," entreated Andy Myers. "I'd kick on first down," agreed Ed Cole. Matthews, however, elected to run the ball, and on second down a Red Devil back fumbled it away. A chorus of groans pervaded the press box.

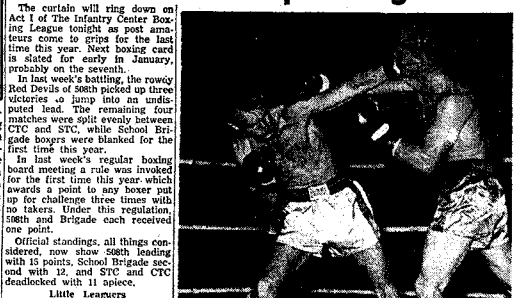

Brigade obviously handed the ball back on a pass interception, and the Red Devils took over on their own 30. "Now kick, Play it safe." Once again, Matthews handed off, and once again the Rams had it. They met with ill fate again, though, and their great Joe Fortunato was forced out of the game with injury. Matthews, too, had departed via the injury route, and Bobby Morstad now held the quarterback reins.

"Morstad'll use his head," figured Freeman and Myers, and as if to bear them out Bobby unraveled in punt formation. "I just don't think Morstad will miff this," said Freeman. And Morstad didn't.

Ed Crook personally felled the current 508th series by outstriking the Devil quarterback. Seconds before the snap he trotted up halfback, and was in the Airborne backfield almost as soon as the ball. He guessed right twice, and 508th had to kick.

The big second half was now on its final upward sweep, and Andy Myers said he thought he'd go down and say a few words to the Rams. Out came that plaid parasol, and off he went, remarking that those English wainuts were sure going to be well received at his house.

508th Boxers Roar Into Lead; Fisticuffs On Tap Tonight

The curtain will ring down on Act I of the Infantry Center Boxing League tonight as post amateurs come to grips for the first time this year. Next boxing card is slated for early in January, probably on the seventh.

In last week's battling, the rowdy Red Devils of 508th picked up three victories to jump into an undisturbed lead. The remaining four matches were split evenly between CTC and STC while School Brigade boxers were blanked for the first time this year.

In last week's regular boxing board meeting a rule was invoked for the first time this year which awards a point to any boxer put up for challenge three times with no takes under this regulation. 508th and Brigade each received one point.

Official standings, all things considered, now show 508th leading with 13 points, School Brigade second with 12, and STC and CTC deadlocked with 11 apiece.

Little Leaguers As a special added attraction to tonight, four members of the 1953 football champions, School-Brigade Rams, will put on a two-hour wrestling card. In the first match, Hawaii's Bill Kanabele will pit his strength against the Rams' Bob Taylor. In the second, School-Brigade's Bill Kanabele will pit his strength against the Rams' Bob Taylor.

Getting back to the fistic wars, several tomorrow bouts are on the docket in the scales and medical ward okay all hands. Featherweight Ed and Regis Blair will meet in what should be a good one to see. Clark represented Fort Leasing Third Army carriers with a better than five yard average, and on defense he was a raging terror. Big Joe backed up the line on the left side, and enemy ball totters were soon discouraged by his smothering tackles. Most of the boys in the "know" agree that Fortunato, more than any other one player, was the one who made the Rams go.

Back: Ed Crook, Brigade Rams. A 16-pound package of feather-finesse, Crook treated fans to some of the most dazzling running in the history of 508th in a many a moon. He shed tacklers right and left on his skittering runs, and proved amazingly durable for such a little guy. On defense he was especially good at diagnosing Morstad, 508th's smooth, clutch play, and surprised opponents of ten found little Ed around their necks when he was supposed to be many yards away.

Last week's matches saw Red Devil gloves take home three victories in the persons of Norman Salt, Marion Naumoff, and Dave Hollanera. Sabatva's decision, as Joe Davis of Brigade, thereby reverting the outcome of a previous meeting between the two. Their light-middweight battles have been two of the most exciting-packed, thrilling bouts of the season, and their personal series stands at one win apiece.

Gangling Charlie Bryant of STC thumped Burne Burke of CTC in the first round. Devil back fumbled it into a decision, Bryant opened a four-salt gap over Burke's left eye in the third. Another Special Troops glover, Percy Pace, gave CTC its first win by outstriking Burke in the first and third, and was very impressive.

It was strictly between the South boys when Hilton (CTC) and Sam (508th) got together in a lightweight tussle. Hilton, a tall, slender boy, eventually took the decision from Sam, a short stocky type. Ring announcer Ed Conner drew a round of laughs when he microphoned cryptically, "the winner-Smith."

The Daily Out-sponsored Little League fighters put on three bouts to open the show, and the crowd loved an usual, Frank Noker and Jeff Rollins hooked up in a freewheeling, no-decision affair which brought the house down.

Off's brother, Walter, mixed it up with Roy Raulder, and Ken Abrino and Tommy Crawford traded punches in the final.

Post Gridders Prove Tough to Army Elevens

The four teams composing our intramural football league proved to be a handful for anyone in our side competition during the season. Bennett's teams compiled a scintillating record by winning 10 out of 13 games against other military installations.

The School Brigade Rams, 1963 co-champions, could show the best play at the season's end. The Rams played four games outside the league and won 'em all including the first Bennett Bowl game. Sewart AFB, Shaw AFB, Redstone Arsenal, and Camp Rucker's All-Stars were the Ram victims.

The other half of the co-championship, 508th's Red Devils, finished their extra-natural campaign with three wins in four tries. The Devils won from Jacksonville N.A.S., Tyndell AFB, and a Camp Rucker team, but lost to tough Elgin AFB while crippled by injuries.

CTC's rock-'em, sock-'em Commanders hung up two wins in three games. Jim Hiett's mess that Tyndell AFB and Redstone Arsenal.

Commanders

It stayed 7-6 until late in the fourth quarter, when a sub fullback named Herb Mallette entered the game and racked up 40 yards on seven carries to spark a 6-yard Commander touchdown run. The Wave kept going when a rousing the kicker pened up fourth down gave the Commanders new life and enabled them to retain possession.

On drive the suggest CTC line was the big factor. Andy Myers, John Vines, Victor Newcomb, and Frank Boring tore the Wave forward wall to pieces for Commander backs to gallop through at a five, six, and eight yards clip. The Blueshirts poured across on a power play with Mallette carrying for four yards out four minutes left.

That Man Ruelle, 187 lb. clock against him, heroic Freeman gath-ered for one final Herculean effort.

Burns returned the kickoff to the end zone and took over. His big 64 yard punt the CTC defense on practically every play as he carried five times and Andy Korne drove into left tackle but Myers, Vines, and Co. stopped him cold. Plugs flew on the play, and Korne drew five yards for illegal motion. This was high tide for the Wave, for on the next play Burns' pass was intercepted to write fins to the Greenie hopes.

Wac Hoopsters Drop Opener

Fort Bennett's Wac basketball team met a strong sextet from the Pensacola Naval Air Station last Thursday night at the Post Youth Activities Gym and lost to the navy girls by a 36-24 score.

The Fort Bennett girls play their second game of the season against service competition Sunday when they meet the women marines from the Paris Island, South Carolina training center. The game is set for Briant Wolfe Field, beginning at 2.

CWO Ferguson Bags Buck

For a man who had never hunted deer before, CWO Edward O. Ferguson, Adjutant of the 198th Field Artillery Battalion, CTC, recently started the post special deer hunt with a bang. He bagged the first buck of the season in the states of Georgia and Alabama with his first shot.

The claim of the first kill by a member of the 198 and CTC was bolstered by the word of the range guards who told Mr. Ferguson he had brought in the season's first four point deer weighing approximately 160 pounds.

From 56 pairs of hunters drawn by lottery held by the Fish and Game Association CWO Ferguson and Lt. Joseph Harper drew the fifty-fifth position. Despite the late start, patience and a good eye brought home the venison for Mr. Ferguson.

When faced with the problem of dressing the deer, Mr. Ferguson and Lt. Harper solicited the aid of Lt. Col. William Tarkes, the battalion commander, who ably dressed the deer and prepared it for the deep freeze at his home. The deer produced about 100 pound of edible venison.

Army Revises Procedure On Advance Travel Allowances

The Department of The Army recently revised SR 35-3100-2 governing the advance payment of travel allowances to all military members. The finance and accounting officer, The Infantry Center, advises that it is important that all military members at this installation be acquainted with the general provisions of these changes in order that they can understand the various entitlements to advance payments whenever they receive orders for permanent change of station or temporary duty. The former procedure required that if a soldier desired an advance travel pay in connection with a permanent change of station, complete settlement would be made on a travel voucher at time of the advance pay and no further action was necessary when reporting to his new station. The new procedure, now in effect here, delays complete settlement of allowances due until after reporting to the new station. However, this does not preclude obtaining of an advance payment to defray traveling costs. Under the new system now in effect, advance travel pay may be requested. This will be established on the basis of

Santa to Visit 508th 'Early'

Christmas festivities will begin a week early for children whose dates are in the 508th Airborne Regimental Command Team. Even Santa Claus plans to leave his North Pole gift shop for the annual affair, scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 19, in the Red Devil NCO Mess. In charge of this year's party is Chaplain (Capt.) Charles A. Meek, 508th chaplain, who has announced a new approach to the spirit of Christmas this year. In addition to viewing movies, receiving the traditional Christmas party "treats" and the arrival of Santa Claus, each child is to be reminded that giving is an essential of the Christmas season by being asked to bring to the party an inexpensive gift which will then be turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution.

When arriving at his new station, soldiers have the choice of either requesting settlement of the advance from the annots due before he submits the settlement voucher or he may retain this advance and it will be deducted from his pay on the subsequent pay day. The finance and accounting officer recommends that complete settlement be authorized by the member at time of submission of the settlement voucher.

Commissioned officers and warrant officers may obtain advance travel pay upon request and presentation of travel orders and respective personnel officers. There is another requirement in the case of enlisted members, and that is their commanding officer must approve their request. Normally, disapproval of requests will only be made if the commanding officer decides that the member is not capable of completing the travel without resorting to emergency issue of transportation requests of requesting assistance en route. This advance travel payment cannot be made more than ten days prior to date of departure from this station.

Temporary Duty
In cases of travel involving temporary duty, there are several types of entitlement which involve advance payment of per diem allowances and on-leave allowances. Whenever a member is in receipt of travel orders involving either permanent change of station or temporary duty, he will be required to indicate his desire on a statement which will be furnished by his personnel officer. Sample copies of the two statements involved will be displayed on the bulletin boards of all units to include companies, batteries and detachments. The finance and accounting officer strongly recommended that all members read these statements carefully whether or not they are in receipt of travel orders in order that they can be fully aware of their benefits and can make up their minds what they would choose in the event that they receive travel orders.

"Have you still got the electric kind?"

Santa thought he had some in stock. David looked pleased and added a request for a fire engine "with a hook and ladder that goes way up!"

Barbara Ann, at 4 1/2 a pretty young lady with domestic ideas, asked for an icebox. "It'll like a new high-chair for my doll too. The doll one is all worn out," she said.

Santa was sympathetic and interested, so Barbara got braver and more ambitious. "Maybe you better bring me a new doll too," she ventured.

Then, because even little girls watch Westerns on television, she asked for a pair of cowboy boots.

The red-garbed gentleman from the North Pole nodded graciously. He took mental notes, and turned to 25-month-old Susan.

The youngest of the President's grandchildren smiled sweetly pointed to her new frock, but said nothing.

"She's still learning to talk," David explained. "We'll take care of her in the letter."

His mission accomplished, St. Nick wished everybody a Merry Christmas and departed.

Finance Firm Turns Into GI Santa

Here's a story that backs up what we've been saying all along—Santa comes to good girls and boys, even grown ones.

Capt. Chester M. Osborne, Jr., of Minneapolis, Minn., a student in associate advanced class No. 3 of the Infantry School, purchased a car Feb. 3, 1950, in Mount Holly, N.J., and financed it through a national finance firm.

Six months later he was busy fighting in Korea. The following November he was captured by the Communists and after a year was reported killed in action. This information was passed on to the finance company by Capt. Osborne's family.

The officer's life had been insured to the extent of the unpaid balance on the car under a group life insurance plan. The insurance company paid the balance in February, 1951, turning the title to the car over to Capt. Osborne's wife.

After three years Capt. Osborne who are 11.

He walked into the office of the finance company and paid what he thought was the balance owed.

The company refunded the insurance firm's money and went a step further: Capt. Osborne received a check for $428.44 from the finance company, half of the sum he paid when he returned from overseas.

For recognizing his obligations, the firm presented the check to the officer as a Christmas gift. The money is to go into the bank for the Osborne's twin daughters.

Buddy Keeps Wallet 3 Years Waiting for Owner to Return

If trust is a basis for friendship, then two Fort Benning officers—both veterans of the war in Korea—should be comrades for life.

In 1950, Pirat L. Edwin Franklin was captured by the North Koreans and spent months as a prisoner of war. He was returned to the U.S. Franklin was assigned to Fort Benning where Spreng assigned to a patrol in more advanced enemy positions. Both were sergeants and members of an American military advisory group assigned to the Republic of Korea.

Before he saw Spreng again, Franklin was captured by the North Koreans and spent months as a prisoner of war. He was returned to the U.S. Franklin was assigned to Fort Benning where Spreng assigned to a patrol in more advanced enemy positions. Both were sergeants and members of an American military advisory group assigned to the Republic of Korea.

The two friends finally met, and, after a usual pleasantries, Spreng started his friend by turning the wallet he had long forgotten. After examining it Franklin reported that everything was just as he had left it.

"Even the money," he said.

An ex Radio-TV and superhit entertainer in New York, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, playing with such notable orchestras as Tony Pastor, Johnny Mitchell and Roy Sanders, the 24-year-old corporal is presently an administrative specialist with the S2 section of the 508th's headquarters.

Johnson is not an ordinary musician. He could easily be called a "genius at the strings." He plays very much on the Les Paul order and, according to some of his fans, will one day be as reputable as a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., he embarked on his musical career early in 1947, playing with local bands. He moved on to TV with the Johnny Mitchell Trio playing the "Wilkins Amateur Hour."

His last engagement in civilian life ran continuously for over one year.

Civilians, Soldiers Get Safety Awards

Checks totaling $163 and letters of commendation were presented to three civilians and two servicemen at Fort Benning for their monetary savings and safety suggestions.

Receiving recognition for improvement suggestions were James B. Wall, $50; Floyd H. Parks, $52; James Freeman, $65; and Warrent Officer Donald H. Olson and Col. Donald E. Roberts, letters of commendation.

The presentations were made by Major Gen. C. S. Meloy, Jr., commander of the Ordnance Section, which was cited for designing and building an elevation safety stop for the 75-mm and 90-mm tank gun. The stop can be readjusted for any desired upward limit and prevents overshooting the range.

A live steam method of cleaning and steaming helmet liners locally instead of shipping them to depot was suggested by Parks of the Quartermaster Section. His idea eliminates packing and shipping, both at Fort Benning and the depot, and is estimated to save the Army $1,000 annually.

Freeman, also of the Quartermaster Section, suggested that the inventory of the incoming of eggs be combined into one operation, which saves 12 man - hours a load, or $1,600 a year.

Olson, of the 502d Army Helicopter Company, was co-author of a method of mooring helicopters during high winds. The idea has proved successful in winds exceeding 35 knots per hour.

Also a member of the 502d Helicopter Co., Donald E. Roberts was co-designer of a safety cover that prevents the cargo compartment microphone switch from being accidentally flipped to the "on" position, which makes the microphone unusable in contact with the other outside radio.

Cub Scouts Raise Funds To Help Needy Families

Fort Benning Cub Scouts this year are providing Christmas baskets for three underprivileged families.

The dens of the post, with the exception of Den 6, conducted a bake sale and a canned goods drive with the proceeds and food to go to a mother and her four children. The $45 brought by the den has been used to purchase food and toys.

Searchlighting the project were Mrs. A. A. Consta of Barenville, Ga., and Mrs. William R. Windham of Dalton, Ga., den mothers. The seven boys in Den 6 made and sold Christmas cards and raffle tickets raising $42.22. They also collected toys and clothing and used the sale proceeds to buy food for two needy families, each with three children.

No. 6 Den mother is Mrs. Frances supplies from Dingelwood Pharmacy and a Johnson baby set from Lane-Rexall Drug Store.

Col. Max Gooler Receives Orders For Washington

Col. Max H. Gooler, commander of the School Brigade, has received orders assigning him to duty with the Army's Career Management Branch in Washington.

Col. Gooler came to Fort Benning in September 1952 as commanding officer of the brigade's Second Student Regiment. In May 1953 he was named to succeed Col. Sevier R. Tupper, who retired as commander.

A 1922 graduate of the University of North Dakota, Gooler was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in January 1923. From 1923 to 1940 he was assigned to various Infantry units in the U.S. and abroad, and in 1941 was sent to Cairo, Egypt, as assistant military attaché.

Shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, Col. Gooler was captured by the Germans at the fall of Tobruk and was interned in prison camps in Africa, Italy, Poland, and Germany before his liberation in 1945.

After a short time as deputy G-2 of the Fourth Army, Col. Gooler was transferred to Alaska as commander of the Fourth Regimental Combat Team. His son, Darrel L., has recently returned to the U.S. from a tour of duty in Korea.

A portrait of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, painted by Pfc. Richard T. Luby of New Hartford, N. Y., and Fort Benning, is on display in the office of the Chief of Staff in Washington.

The portrait, showing Gen. Ridgway in combat dress, was prepared for the cover of the January issue of The Infantry School Quarterly.

Along with the cover picture, the magazine will contain a message from the Army's top soldier. Luby, a staff member of The Infantry School's Publications and Visual Aid Office, painted the portrait from photographs. The assistant secretary of the General Staff expressed appreciation for the portrait in a letter to the editor of The Infantry School Quarterly.

"The artist's original will be kept in the Office of the Chief of Staff," the letter stated. "Thank you very much for sending it."
Luby was a art student at Syracuse University before entering military service in 1952. Following basic training at Indiantown Gap, Pa., he was assigned to The Infantry School's art department.

508th Widens Lead

Whoosh!!!

That, fight fans, was the 508th boxing team rinning off and leading everyone. The Red Devils won three matches for the third straight week last Thursday, and are showing a clean pair of paratrooper boot heels to the rest of the loop as a result.

Official standings as 1953 draws to a close show 508th in front with 15 points with a delightful going on amongst the other three teams. The School Brigade group, shut out for the second consecutive time, tied with CTC at 13 points, and Frank Harley's STC gloves are one point behind at the pace with 12.

Brian Wells' boxing ring will be given a chance to settle its resin dust from the holidays, and no more matches are scheduled until Jan. 8. A team composed of boxers from all four league members will be dispatched to Camp Stewart the second week in January to take on fighters, from the 508th, Stewart pugilists will return the visit late in the month, probably the 25th.

Strong Team Chosen

The boxing "brain trust" in selecting the team to oppose Stewart spared not even a little horse. Such luminaries as Joe Clark, Charles Colley, Gordon Van Loon and Elvis Mathews will make the trip, along with toughies like Richard Woodley, Juan Jaromilla, Joe Davis, Norman Salvatore, Hermon Hinton, and James Boyd.

The Stewartites may not know it yet, but they have quite a large winning streak.

Last week's match was inaugurated by a wrestling match between Brigades Bill Knebel and Ellis Rainsberger of the co-champion Brigade Kams. Each grappler captured a fall, but Rainsberger with the decider with a series of body slams and a smother.

508th's Dave Steward opened the evening's glove work by winning a decision over lumbering Jim Whitebecker of School Brigade. Steward was the aggressor most of the time, and landed several solid smashes. Whitebecker soaked them up, though and kept coming. He managed to grow more confident in the later rounds, but Steward was too far ahead to be caught.

Manuel (Stogoboni) Mederious, a genuine, trademarked Fancy Dan, had too much and too often for CTC's David Carter. Mederious, representing CTC, acts like a ball in the ring, but don't let this fool you. He'll clown and prance around until his opponent's eyes are closed, and then he comes down flatfooted and hits with plenty of power. Carter was not entirely taken in and threw plenty of leather himself, but Mederious was clearly the winner.

with his 220 yard free style event, and set a new mark in the 100 yard free style event. Bob Moore set the 150 yard freestyle time four seconds; Jim Moore, team captain, cut it seconds from the 100 yard free style race; the medley relay team of Nagy, Moore and Norm LaMothe bettered the old 500 yard record by six seconds, and LaMothe set a new TIC record with the backstroke this year in 1:11 flat.

Sam King coached the winning aqua-dovils, guiding them to their third straight championship.

Eight volleyball artists from the Duke-snocking arm of the 508th, the 58th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment, represented the "Ted Dec" during the season. Jim Dunn, 8 to 7 in the season's best and middlest fray. They were coached during the season by Jim Dunn, a U. of Maryland product, and Dick Thomas and Owen Ruzel, U. of Kentucky linemen. Their season's record in the top league was four wins and two losses. Guard Ernie Gates was named team captain. Gates played on the line for M. & M.

Seven new marks were set by 508th mermen in August, as they turned the infantry's water men into a "Navy" by taking 90 of 100 feet. Bob King clipped ten seconds off the 100 yard breaststroke mark

CTC Glovers Add Eight

CTC's boxing squad, gathering itself for a championship effort, picked up added reinforcements tonight with the addition of eight new fighters.

Classed in the heavyweight division are Bill Williams, Robert Forbes, Gene Harrell and Herb Mallette. These men, trainees on the football squad, were added to the boxing roster with the ending of football play.

Two light-heavyweights have been added, Charles Williams and Charles McKeendon. Both were also members of the Commander graders this season.

In the midweight group, U. S. Navy's Sam Watson and J. P. Watts Kelly and Nayson Taylor are the new additions.

Sam's winning margin in both scraps has been something like a midday shadow.

Manuel (Stogoboni) Mederious, a genuine, trademarked Fancy Dan, had too much and too often for CTC's David Carter. Mederious, representing CTC, acts like a ball in the ring, but don't let this fool you. ## SPOTLIGHTING SPORTS

Jim Montgomery

Several thousand years ago, a hunchbacked Greek slave by the name of Aesop did a series of short stories which played up a moral or proverb. Such stories were called fables, and some highly imaginative character hit upon the idea of calling the ones Aesop wrote "Aesop's Fables."

One of the slave's better efforts renounced, pretty logically, that it was awfully hard to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. (Id. note: A sow is a female pig.) The great thinkers of the world, then and now, agree with Aesop in this.

Evidently, however, the powers that be in the boxing world either had not read Aesop's pearls of wisdom or else they figure he was full of boloney, for there are more than a few professional pugs in action today who are nothing but mass-produced sows' ears. Furthermore, it is not dogmatically hard to find a genuine, really and truly silk purse in all of fustiana.

Let's face it. There isn't a bona fide box office attraction anywhere in the business. With the passing of Joe Louis, boxing crowds have been steadily dwindling and things have now reached the point where no one fighter can be counted on to pack 'em in.

Fight moguls still get off because of the parasite television. They are at least partially correct, no doubt, but the fact still remains that there are no battles of the Louis-Dempsey-Turney mold extant.

A grade, short-armed shem-maker's son hitler as the Brockton Blockbuster and charismed Rocky Marciano admittedly has no peer in the heavyweight class, but Marciano is certainly not a great fighter. He has a mumble punch, but a real boxer like, for instance, Billy Conn wouldn't have had much trouble disposing of the Blockbuster. Neither would several other heavyweights of 15 years ago.

With the exit of Louis, a tall rhythmic, Harlem boy named Ray Robinson stepped into the limelight. Experts proclaimed him as "pound for pound the best fighting machine anywhere," and Sugar Ray made the experts look good. When he eventually caught up Robinson, he "banged Bang" Womber, who still on top. He is, incidentally, that rarely among ex-fighters, a financially unworried citizen.

After Robinson bowed out, the drum beaters looked around for someone else to take over as boxing's Golden Boy. The choice was George Gonzalez, better known as Kid Gavilan. The Cuban Hawk was and still is a classy performer, but he is so unpredictable and erratic that fans just won't expect to see him. They never know when Gavilan is liable to lose to somebody like "Bang Bang" Womber, who usually wins about as often as Halley's Comet appears.

In desperation, boxing emperors came up with bright ideas like Chuck Davay and Roland La Starza who flizzed indignantly. Gavilan, on one of his better days, gave Chuck a thorough lesson in fundamentals of fistucliffs, and La Starza ran afoul of Marciano's right.

The fight world was in a similar situation in the early 1930's. At that time, a colorful ringmaster named The Louis Barrow came along to restore its solvency. A reasonable facsimile of Joe is urgently needed right now.

The astute Mr. Aesop also made another profound observation to the effect that usually seeing was believing. Once again he has something there.

With great pomp, circumstance, and expenditure, close to 50 young men have recently been honored with the tag All-American. Most of them deserve it, and we certainly do not question their ability. However, we do look askance at the first All-American team when Billy Walker Camp made known his first All-American team back in 1928. It consisted of three Harvard's, three Yales, and five Princeton's. With only three teams involved - and it was 1892 before any "outsiders" crashed the circle - the venerable Mr. Camp had ample opportunity to see potential All-Americans in action five or six times a season. He saw, and he believed.

Unfortunately, that is not the case today. The prime requisite for an All-American now is a good publicity man. Nearly every college of any size employs a full-time sports publicity director whose job it is to get the school's athletics before the public and keep it there.

Accordingly, such a fellow deluges newspapers, magazines, and radio stations with a flood of information regarding the athletic deeds of Connorside State. He doesn't feel that he has really arrived until he has gotten All-American recognition for at least a platoon of Connorside athletes.

Meanwhile, the poor geezer who has to act as an All-American team is hard at work, with roughly 200 big time football schools in action on Saturday he is either going to need an awfully fast horse or else rely on hearsay. So, when at last he sits down to pick his team, he thinks along these lines: "Let's see, left guard, who plays left guard?"

A good publicity man will have submerged him with praise of Tub O'Larry, Cecil's left guard, and it's natural that O'Larry's name should pop to mind at once. Before long, O'Larry is All-American. More than likely he is a muddle if more than likely there is also another left guard somewhere who is just as good.

Shades of Aesop's Fables!

OC Cagers Bewail Time Lack

It's crying towel time as the First OC Regimental basketball team shapes up for the annual post competition. The team is still in the coaching and waiting.

Most of the troubles of the potentially strong squad being formed under Theodore Stahl is the lack of coordination for practice time. Since the squad is composed mainly of candidates with a sprinkling of cadre, Stahl has not been able to get the complete team together for much needed practice sessions.

The team has the height, speed, and experience to regain the crown lost last year. If necessary, Coach Stahl could put a team averaging 6'4" in height on the court.

17th OC Co's John Nibert, formerly Montgomery College, W. Va. and Francis H. Barker of University of Florida are expected to provide the punch at center with Kurek and OC Shoppe in reserve. At forward will be OC Scoggings of Kentucky and OC Wiles of NY, and Cademen McGrath, Wheeler, Manning, and Kexley. At guard will be OC's Gairin, Bushman, Makiel, Rench and Seiler, and Cademen Buck and Rouldin.

One of the advantages the team will have is the top notch physical shape of the OC's. They

Prospects Bright For CTC, 30th Inf.

The CTC and 30th Infantry basketball teams have moved into full swing with the ending of football. Members of both squads have been selected and day practice by the squads has begun.

Coach John Vines of the 30th squad has high prospects for an excellent season with a host of experienced men. Vines was an outstanding guard for the CTC Commanders during the football season.

The CTC squad is coached by another member of the CTC grid team, Andy Myers, All-Five line man.

30th Infantry

Garfield Williams leads the list of shining candidates at the forward position. Williams, a native of Norfolk, Va., played with the Virginia State College guard. Eugene Meyer, center, or forward, played with the National Cash Register Co. team at his hometown in Dayton, Ohio.

Charles Burrows of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will be at guard. He played with Edward Hunt School at that position.

Joseph Festa will be at the guard or forward position. He played for Vineland High at his home in Vineland, N. J.

Salvatore Travatello and Richard Isenhardt, both guards will also be on hand to strengthen the squad. Travatello played at William Cullen Bryant High in Long Island City, N. Y. Isenhardt played at Leyden High in Franklin Park, Ill.

William Thompson, another New York boy, will be at the center spot. He played with the Benjamin Franklin High team.

By the beginning of TIC competition in January, both teams should be in top shape for participation. As practice progresses, the two teams which practice together at Harmony Church and Bryant Wells Field House are smoothing into well-oiled machines to give someone in Fort Benning a very hard time.

No. 5 Looming Red Devil Athletes Capture Championships In 4 Sports

Four major post championships and the prospect of a fifth this year has the Red Devil Athlete Regimental Combat Team expected to be a new record for Fort Benning, a check of Sports office records reveals.

The Red Devils have already topped post competition in swimming, volleyball, football and track and field last season. They are boxing with the year almost ended.

The 508th baseball team, competing in post play, won second place.

Ted Devil graders achieved championship caliber in their final December contest, beating a favored School Brigade "Hams" crew 8 to 7 in the season's best and middlest fray. They were coached during the season by Jim Dunn, a U. of Maryland product, and Dick Thomas and Owen Ruzel, U. of Kentucky linemen. Their season's record in the top league was four wins and two losses. Guard Ernie Gates was named team captain. Gates played on the line for M. & M.

Seven new marks were set by 508th mermen in August, as they turned the infantry's water men into a "Navy" by taking 90 of 100 feet. Bob King clipped ten seconds off the 100 yard breaststroke mark with his 220 yard free style event, and set a new mark in the 100 yard free style event. Bob Moore set the 150 yard freestyle time four seconds; Jim Moore, team captain, cut it seconds from the 100 yard free style race; the medley relay team of Nagy, Moore and Norm LaMothe bettered the old 500 yard record by six seconds, and LaMothe set a new TIC record with the backstroke this year in 1:11 flat.

Sam King coached the winning aqua-dovils, guiding them to their third straight championship.

Eight volleyball artists from the Duke-snocking arm of the 508th, the 58th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment, represented the "Ted Dec" during the season. Jim Dunn, 8 to 7 in the season's best and middlest fray. They were coached during the season by Jim Dunn, a U. of Maryland product, and Dick Thomas and Owen Ruzel, U. of Kentucky linemen. GRIDDER KILLED - Tragedy struck on the highways early last Friday morning when a car bearing two members of the School Brigade football team overturned near Nashville, Tenn. Killed in the accident was Chuck Hauser, 21, of East St. Louis, Ill., driver of the car. Ellis Rainsberger, also of East St. Louis, was shaken up and received minor injuries. The two were on their way home for the holidays when the accident happened.

Tough Slate Confronts Decimated Blackshirts

The First Student Regiment basketball team has a man-sized job cut out for them this season. Last year the Blackshirts won the league championship, going unbeaten during regular play though they lost in the playoffs. All except one of the men who hung up this record are gone, and Coaches Louis Stein and Bill Dunton have been hard at work to develop, replace the Blackshirts of '53.

First SR Boxers Pace Brigade Bid for Title

Any kid who is called young men who happen to be standing in the First Student Regiment are in luck for the group offers plenty of facilities for boxing. Able coaches and trainers are present and are always willing to look over prospects.

You can find a group of boxers and their trainers working at the Airborne Gym daily. These boxers were unable to take the floor against CTC, who went on to win and represent the post in the Third Army tournament. Sayers will be around for only a short time this year, since he is slated for discharge in January. John Economou, 6-4 for a word as a forward, is the most likely heir to Sayers' position. A former first stringer for Akron University, he is expected to carry the load for the Blackshirts of '53.

Horace Conaso and Glenn Luker, recently of the Horns football team, also will see considerable service, as will Coach Stein himself. Short on experience and depth, First Student Regiment's team has a long way to go if they approach their fine mark of last season's end, he suffered a broken

The former U. S. commander of POW camps in Korea said at Fort Benning Monday that he was making a mistake in applying our European-taught philosophies and policies to Asiatic countries and expecting favorable results.

Major Gen. Haden L. Boatner, now deputy Fourth Army commander, declared that "the United States has derived almost all of its culture and way of living from Europe, and we are trying to apply this knowledge to Asia with the anticipation that our policies will produce the same results they do in Europe."

This policy, he said, in his address to the Military Order of World Wars, "will not work. We know very little about Asia and our greatest barrier has been language. The Asiatics comprise one-third of the population of the world. They are the world's have-nots. That's why the Communists have been able to take over the peasant's revolution in China and used it to gain control of the country."

Gen. Boatner estimated the population of China at 500 million people, but "there is only one vehicle per 150,000 and there are 16 per cent more railroads in Texas than there are in China."

Gen. Boatner, an expert on that country, was the chief of staff of the Chinese Nationalist Army during World War II.

He was placed in command of the POW camps on Kojed Island following the uprising of Red prisoners who seized the camp commander. He smashed the POW resistance and went on to become commander of the prisoner exchange.

Six students graduated last Friday from the eight-week medical technician's course at the Post Hospital.

While at Fort Benning the students received on-the-job training in the hospital's medical and surgical wards, dispensaries, diet kitchens and operating rooms.

Before coming to the post they received six weeks of theory at the Medical Field Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Card Addressed to 'Pat' Finds Way to Right Man

Christmas was in the air and Patrick must be found. He was somewhere out at Sand Springs, or about his daily soldiering, trying a little, maybe, but obviously to the fact that half the post was asking, "Where's Pat?" And he didn't know that telephone wires were working overtime, that scores of top-three graders and civilian clerks were pouring over files, looking searching for this fellow named Pat. Nor did he know that a card and romance waited.
 The search started with the Post Locator received a letter from a young lady up North. In the envelope was a Christmas card addressed to "Patrick, Fort Benning," and a letter of explanation. "Please find this little man for me. I've forgotten his full name, but he's with the Airborne."
 Mrs. Frances Anthony, the wife of Capt. Ralph Anthony of the 715 Mortar Company and who works in the Post Locator office, finished reading the letter and called the Bayonet. "What to do?" she asked. "The Bayonet, thereupon, got busy."
 A call to the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team and another to the Airborne Department, and the search for Patrick was on in earnest.
 Several candidates were found, but they weren't from the North, plus, where the lady said Patrick hailed from.
 Then, after several days, a more likely Patrick turned up. No, he didn't know the girl, but he would sit for a picture to be sent on to her. That would set the matter right.
 Days passed. Upon the sixth day a letter came back. Yes, that little man was Patrick and would Mrs. Anthony and the 508th deliver the Christmas card?
 So Patrick turned out to be Patrick Capelli, of the 508th and the card was delivered to him.

Ex-POW Relates Grim Tale

Korean Reds Found Little Better Than Beasts

Thirty-eight months as a prisoner of the Chinese Reds have convinced Capt. Wade J. Roundtree that the enemy we fought in Korea were little better than beasts. "We Americans tend not to realize fully what America means until we go up against the brand of brutality that we met in Korea," Capt. Roundtree said. He is at the Infantry School for the advanced officers course starting in January, and is taking airborne now. Shipped to the Far East early in 1950, Roundtree was captured near Chochow, Korea, while serving as a platoon leader with the 24th Infantry Division.

For the three months immediately following Roundtree and scores of other POWs were marched, bleeding and underefed, over miles of Korean hills their hands tied behind them often extra men tied to another. Many were wounded and sick, and many fell out the line of march.

And then, on Halloween night, 1950, Roundtree and his men met the "Tiger," a bearded Korean major. This was on the banks of the Yalu River, and the major divided the prisoners into sections of 50 with ranking Americans as section leaders, and soon another "Death March" began its deadly, pain-ridden journey of misery and deadly death.

As the march progressed many of the prisoners, especially the wounded ones, began to straggle back. The "Tiger" kept a card and checked it every time a man fell out. After a while he halted the column and called all the section leaders up on a mound and threatened to kill them for allowing the stragglers. But he changed his mind and told them all to go back to their section.

As they all got back he called one of the section leaders up and asked him the following question: "What would happen in your Army if you disobeyed a command?" The section leader answered that he would be tried by a court and fined if found guilty. The "Tiger" then told him that the Communists reserved the right to kill.

The section leader was then unbound, turned around, marched five paces, and shot through the head.

Alfred H. Sturmann of 19th OC Company has been promoted to master sergeant. Other recent promotions include William Bates to sfc.; and John O. Bailey and Fred E. Howard Jr. to sergeants and Joseph Rine, William Stelchen, Arnold Hopler, William Smith, Carl Mullenax, Glenn Lucas, and Peter D'Andrea to corporals.

First Lt. Carlos E. Urrutia of Mayaguez, can virtually be called a "winged" officer for he has earned four different sets of wings. These include liaison pilot, gliderman, parachute and aviator.

Making use of his varied talents in the air branch, Urrutia is now working in the Army Aviation Section.

The road to his present career began in 1948 when a friend invited him for an airplane ride. This first flight convinced Urrutia he wanted to fly. Then a civil engineer with Puerto Rico's Department of the Interior, he obtained a private pilot's license through weekend lessons, and his urge to fly became so great that he decided to try the service as a pilot.

The Puerto Rico National Guard furnished the opportunity for his first pair of wings, those of an Air Force liaison pilot. An application for a competitive tour of duty followed immediately.

The Infantry School's basic air-avoyce course at Fort Benning saw the jack of all air-trades leave with two more awards, the gliderman and parachute wings.

As an Army aviator, he was sent there he won the Bronze Star Medal, Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and Commendation Ribbon with Medal Pendant.

Urrutia returned to the United States from the Far East in January, 1952, and was assigned to the Army Aviation Section here. He has been rated pilot in command for two years and during this time has logged 1,800 flying hours.

"It's wings and dream," says Urrutia, "is to someday have the opportunity to attend an Allied country's Army Airborne school and qualify for a foreign pair of wings."

Acting Secretary of Defense Kyes has signed a revision of the Department of Defense directive on control of alcoholic beverages, stocks on hand. Kyes also signed a memorandum prohibiting the sale of liquor in package form at messes and clubs within the continental limits of the United States except in remote areas to be determined by the Secretary of Defense.

'Follow Me' Cooking Men Attack Gastronomy; Post Ladies Are Put 'Aside'

Move over ladies, the men at Fort Benning have posted off limits signs in the kitchens. And they mean it, too, if the men's cook book, published by Fort Benning Woman's Club is any indication.

The entire chapter of "Follow Me on a Cook's Tour of Fort Benning" is devoted to the male species, a la Infantryman. Entitled Men on KP the chapter includes recipes for such delicacies as Fried Horse Bread (a must for fish steaks and fish fries), submitted by Lt. Col. J. C. Troutman of Florence, S. C.; Kelly's Slow, the favorite of Lt. B. J. Kelly of Macon, Ga., and Sunday Omelet Special (a concoction of eggs and shrimp), offered by Major G. D. Stewart of Huntington, W. Va.

Among the other kitchen favorites from the men are Aros a la Guayaquilena, which is just another way of saying pickled peaches; Sukiyaki and Hussenspeffer, which show the influence of foreign hours of duty, pickled peaches, and barbecued ribs with sauce.

COLUMBUS SPECIALIST CHECKS 105 HOWITZER Beechlock Assembly Used On All Weapons

Machinist Knows His Weapons

Lemuel E. Johnson probably knows more about the Army's guns than most combat-hardened soldiers who train and teach at The Infantry School. As assistant superintendent of the Ordnance Armament Shop, Johnson has spent the last 12 years surrounded by thousands of weapons, ranging in size from a caliber .45 pistol to an eight-inch howitzer.

After machinist training in high school, Johnson came to the Ordnance Shop in September 1941 and has been there ever since, except for a 14-month interlude in the Army where his National Guard unit was called to active duty in 1950.

508th Names Board For Signal Course

To insure the preservation of Signal equipment and records, the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team has established a board to give a retrograde course to officers of the NCT in Signal maintenance. The move is part of the preparatory work for the command inspection. On the board are First Lt. Fred Wessman, Sgt. William R. Wagoner, Sgt. Lawrence A. Lohrert, Col. David A. Christensen, and Sgt. Wilbur Malone, all of Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

ACHIEVEMENT . . . Sfc. Wilson R. Oliver, 105th Infantry, Ft. Benning, Ga., is presented an Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement and letter of commendation by Col. John M. Lynch, Infantry Center operations officer, for outstanding service as terrain and safety noncommissioned officer in the Operations Office, where he has been assigned since 1949.

Pity The Finance Officer; Cash Those Checks Now

NEW YORK (APFS) — Five little words sure to drive a finance officer into a fit rage. "I've got my pay check." He won't even notice whether you say "sir" or not. And if your finance officer still has a grain of good nature left after your statement, just mention that you've been holding onto your check for five months or so. That one will really get him.

If you have lost your check or had it stolen, you can expect to have your claim checked and double-checked by your local disbursing officer. He'll have to take the time to help you fill out a special form on which you'll have to list all the information you can remember about your check. This form and the disbursing officer's report will be submitted to the Treasury Department. The people in Washington will check the claim. They'll make out a new check and send out a "stop-payment" notice on your old check.

Despite all the safeguards which the government must use to protect itself, your new check should still get you in about two months or it's a list of extra work for everyone concerned.

If you have been holding onto your check—saving it for a rainy day—your finance officer probably knows you by name. He has to submit a treasury report each month. His books have to remain "open" until all checks issued during a particular month have been presented for payment.

Sometimes a finance officer must check back and keep his books open for five or six months, just because one person holds onto his check.

It's a smart idea to cash your checks promptly. Administrative and bookkeeping headaches are cut down, and there's less chance of losing your check or having it stolen.

TV Film to Show Ranger Training

The film shows Ranger students at the North Georgia and Florida training camps operated by The Infantry School as well as the Rangers under jungle and amphibious training at Camp Force Base, Fla., and mountain training at Camp Walshage, near Davenport, Ga.

Missing links in a combat story came to light for a Fort Benning officer last week when he learned that the sergeant who saved his life in Korea had been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Capt. Charles F. McCarty, Jr., of Brooklyn N. Y., a student in The Infantry School's advanced "class," recommended a decoration for bravery for Sgt. Milton L. Peters of Worcester, Mass., soon after being evacuated to a hospital in Japan. Now the sergeant, who is stationed at Camp Gordon, says he would like to see the captain get the same decoration.

When questioned about this statement, McCarty revealed that he had helped put out the burning clothing of Peters shortly after the sergeant saved his life.

Peters' story held great praise for the captain, whose name he did not know.

"If it hadn't been for that officer I wouldn't be alive now. I'd have been killed in two minutes. I never saw him again after that, and I don't even know his name; but I remember his big red, hand-diebar mustache," he said.

It means that in 1952, when McCarty, then a member of Seventh Division's G-2 was visiting the Second Battalion, Infantry Regiment, to procure information.

Later the Reds began firing mortars at the position, and McCarty was wounded in the right arm and right leg. He was evacuated to Japan without seeing the sergeant again.

"After reading the newspaper clipping concerning the award of the DSC to the sergeant sent by a friend, the Fort Benning officer wrote Peters, and is now awaiting an answer."

Later the Reds began firing mortars at the position, and McCarty was wounded in the right arm and right leg. He was evacuated to Japan without seeing the sergeant again.

WASHINGTON (APFS)—In an effort to ease shipping space on Military Sea Transport Service ships, the Armed Forces have released a new joint regulation limiting personal baggage.

The joint regulation says: "Personal baggage to accompany cabin class passengers on board ship will be limited to two pieces of cabin luggage (standard handbags, to include valpak, clothing roll, or seabag) for each person 12 years of age or over, one piece of cabin luggage (standard handbag) for each person under 12 years of age.

In addition, a small toilet or cosmetic case may be carried as cabin luggage by female passengers. Cabin class passengers also may carry personal items such as camera cases, brief cases, and small zipper-type bags. Footlockers are prohibited in staterooms aboard ship.

The personal baggage definition, together with troop baggage limitations, is outlined in SR 55-107-15, OPNAV INST 4621.2, APR 75-45, and MARCOR L-19.

Service Club Director Thriving On Keeping Post Soldiers Happy

Four key words—balance, variety, flexibility and coordination—guide Miss G. Onalee Wood in her job of keeping Fort Benning's five service clubs "a friendly place to go" for the more than 20,000 enlisted men on the post since 1950.

ACTIVITY LIST POINTED OUT Miss Wood, Pvt. Willy J. Lyles

The responsible, energetic, grov-hatched lady who directs The Infantry Center's service clubs is a native of Traverse City, Mich. She has been on the post since 1950.

"Woody," as she is called by her staff, is a graduate of the Kellogg School of Physical Education of Battle Creek College. After school she worked in the Battle Creek Civic Recreation Department until 1942 when she joined Army Special Services.

Her desire to travel prompted Miss Wood to switch to the Red Cross in 1944 and shortly after she found herself in Chabua, India, where she directed the service club program for U. S. troops until 1948.

Recreation Director
With the war's end Miss Wood became director of the women's and girls' recreation department in Fort Wayne, Ind. Wandaust caught up with her again in 1948, and she rejoined Special Services, this time to travel to Japan where she was a club director at the Zama Replacement Center.

At Fort Benning, Miss Wood supervises a staff of 10 who work at the post's five clubs. Each club has a director and a program director whose jobs are to make the clubs a place where soldiers feel at home and "a the same time participate in interesting activities."

"Our idea is to keep as many soldiers happy in as many different ways as is necessary," she explained.
Miss Wood makes informal inspections of all the clubs and advises her staff on programming and budgets.

Personality Is Key
But whenever possible she encourages the different club and program directors to run their clubs according to their own personality. "There is no single magic formula for a good service club," she declared.

One of Miss Wood's biggest jobs is to analyze the recreational needs of the men who use the club according to their average age, educational background, home-towns and the kind of jobs they do in the Army.

"There is no sense in planning an important activity at the club when most of the men will be on duty and unable to participate," she pointed out.
Miss Wood claims she is too busy doing too many different things to figure out what particular aspect of service club work keeps her busiest, even which one she likes the most.

"You have to be a combination interior decorator, bottle washer and cook," she laughed. But in the long run the result is worth the effort, declares Fort Benning's club director.

Ex-Red Fighter Wants to Help Protect World From Commies

With an extensive military background, Officer Candidate Oskar J. Shalkishvili, who hopes to become an airborne infantry officer, says, "OCS is not as tough as I expected it to be."

Having chosen an Army career in the steps of many generations of his family, Shalkishvili, whose father fought in three wars against the Russians and who himself has fought the Soviets once, can foresee the possibility of leading men against them again. He intends to do his part in helping protect the free world from Communism.

Shalkishvili's father fought as an officer in the Czars' army in few weeks.

TIC Sports Program Is Well-Rounded

Just as coming events cast a shadow ahead, those that are past leave one behind. The shadow of 1953 Fort Benning sports is many faceted one indeed.

Included in the athletic program here is practically every phase of sports or recreation that exists. Touch football, tennis, ping-pong, bowling, golf, badminton, horse-shoes, billiards, swimming, handball, rifle shooting, skeet shooting, hunting and fishing were just some of the individual sports made available to TIC personnel.

On team level were football, baseball, basketball, trap, and field, swimming, boxing, and numerous others. Intramural competition made most of these feasible to the rank and file. In addition, post youth athletes flourished in 1953 with Little League teams organized in many sports.

Red Devils Out For 6th Winner In Cage Action

Will coach Jack Angel's ho-o-p squad carry the 50th Airborne RCT their sixth athletic championship within a year?

The 1954 Red Devil aggregation opens post league play Monday night in the second game at Briant Wells fieldhouse. Target for the evening is the Provisional Medical Group.

Post changes in swimming, volleyball, football and track, and leading in the ring. 50th athletic interest is high-pitched, and the basketball team is under severe psychological pressure to pull a rabbit out of the hat. According to Angel, former U. of Oklahoma guard and assistant varsity coach for the Sooners, lack of height and pre-season competition will keep the squad at a slow dribble until at least midseason.

Angel expects to start only two tall men, Larry Ivan and John Dull, neither of whom top the six-two mark, and only one full-time collegiate player, Art Cates, U.S. Military Academy guard.

Ivan, All-Post forward and center for two years, is expected to start at center. The Rabway, N.J., artilleryman was voted his all-state team in high school, winning a scholarship to Long Island U. The bid was forfeited when LIU dropped collegiate ball after a basketball "fix," and Ivan has since been awarded a grant-in-aid post to Auburn.

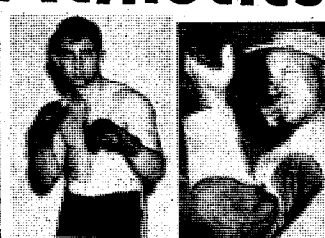

Ivan was an erratic player last year, alternately brilliant and bad. Johnny Dull starred on last year's 1st Student Brigade squad and was one of the highest scorers in the league. The Buffalo, Missouri tall boy will be a key backboard man whose play will be decisive in fighting for first place.

Cates, from St. Clair, Minn., will see a lot of starting action. Jim Corley, a Northwestern Louisiana State product, will also open his first season at Benning. Corley is from Florien, La., where he played varsity high school ball. Other troopers who will influence 50th chances are Don Smith, most improved player on the '53 squad, a fast-breaking forward, and Morris Corbin, a scrappy performer, who is greatly improved over last year.

Angel won't name a sure starting line-up until game time, partly influenced by several football players who are not due back from leave until after the holidays. Angel wants to see them work out. The Red Devils practice at the Harnemy Church fieldhouse, alternating with the 38th Infantry and the 62d regiment.

SETTERS' NEW HUSBY

Pvt. William B. Setters of Company I, 50th Infantry, was wed to Miss Mary Kathryn Eldridge of Tanner, Ken. on Dec. 5. The ceremony took place in Chapel No. 53, Combat Training Command, with Chap. Reuben T. Bussey officiating. Setters is a native of Portsmouth, Ohio.

SPORTS Roundup

Madison Square Garden pro hockey fans have stopped boozing and holding since the N. Y. Rangers farmed out team captain Allan Stanley to their Vancouver, B. C. team in the Western Hockey League. Ivan "The Terrible" Lewis' rugged defense man and top scorer as the team's night midget was recalled as his replacement.

Whenever Stanley, a Ranger since '49, appeared on the ice the fans continually would ride him. At times it became almost impossible to play him at home. The "treatment" began have an effect on Stanley and the rest of the team—so he had to go. His comment: "I'm coming back and make those guys (the fan) eat those boots!"

Holidays Over For Cage Teams Of 30th, CTC

The CTC and 30th Infantry basketball squads returned to full scale practice Dec. 20 after a short Christmas vacation. Both teams are pouring on the coal in practice to ready themselves for next week's games.

The CTC boosters will see their first action Monday night, when they play Lawson Field in the opening game of the post-basketball season.

Coach John Vines will see his 30th squad in action on Jan. 5 and 6 when they meet ISD Tuesday and Wednesday night they will play in the 1954 "Professional Golfer of the Year" prize.

During this time he fought some 60 bouts. . . . Sheppard AFB, Texas, is scheduled to play Oklahoma State and Midwestern in the 1953-54 basketball season.

House of David Team to Bring Zany Antics Here on Jan. 10

The House of David basketball team will meet the Infantry School Detachment on Jan. 10 at Briant Wells Field House at 8 p.m.

The bearded cagers are known throughout the world for their hardwood magic which combines comedy with high class basketball.

Featured are Bobby Roth, reputedly basketball's fastest breaking forward, giant seven-foot Moose Gordon at center, six-foot, five-inch Norman Cox at forward, and six-foot, four-inch Daniel Boone McDaniel and six-foot Ross Laback at the guard positions.

The House of David defeated the 50th Airborne Regimental Combat Team last year.

First Time A Charm For Badminton Champ

So, joined by Pvt. Harry Eastley, also of Headquarters Company, the team of Humanic and Eastley won three straight games in the elimination and the STC championship, returning it to Headquarters Company for the second year in a row. The two men will represent STC in the Infantry Center badminton tournament set for Dec. 14th and 15th.

After winning the Command trophy at the Briant Wells Field House, Humanic put on his clothes and walked across the street to the Main Post Library. It seems that he wanted to find out just what the official rules for playing badminton are.

Humanic had played his first games of badminton just a few minutes before!

RECEIVES HONOR . . . Cpl. Arthur Lane of New York City, is presented a certificate of achievement by Col. John M. Lynch, Infantry School operations officer. Lane was cited for meritorious service as chief of the mortar section in the Main Post Weapons Pool.

Huge Sum Saved By 3d Army Cut

FT. McPHERSON, Ga. — Cleaning and sweeping offices at Third Army installations all three times instead of five times a week will save more than $200,000 a year, Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, commanding general, has announced.

To save money, the custodial services contracts at all major installations, recruiting offices, and the seven military districts, were cut to three times a week. Cleaners do not dust office furniture or clean out ash trays, leaving these tasks to the office personnel. The combined cost of services was an estimated $87,800 per annum, but under the renegotiated contracts the total cost will be about $68,000.

Most of our cars are one-owner cars, with many thousands of happy miles ahead of them. Every one is carefully inspected by skilled mechanics. 2 Bronze Stars Presented At Ceremony

The men, Sgt. Charles L. Glenn, Co. D, First Transportation Battalion and Cpl. Willie A. Salvati, 56th Signal Company received their decorations as a result of gallant service in Korea.

Sgt. Glenn, then a corporal, was a member of support patrol that engaged a large enemy force in action in Korea on Dec. 23, 1952. Glenn exposed himself to enemy fire, allowing the other members of his patrol to retreat to safety.

The 56th Signal Battalion has made a complete shuffle and opened areas previously closed in order to give the 2nd and 3rd Armies the 25th and 18th Company areas. The Airborne companies are being increased in size plus reopening 1 Company.

In the Third Battalion, Capt. Milton, who previously had 24th Company, has moved to battalion executive and Capt. Brewer Lewis has taken over his company. Major Paulsen has been assigned to Regimental Headquarters to Regiments 1 and 2.

Bronze Star Given WO Tonli

Warrant Officer Orlando L. Tonli of Exeter, Pa., was presented the Bronze Star Medal at Fort Benning last Wednesday for service in Korea.

The presentation was made by Col. Sherman Riley of Stroudsburg, Pa., Infantry Center surgeon.

Mr. Tonli, of the 50th Medical Clearing Company, was cited for "meritorious services" from Aug. 27, 1952, to July 27, 1953, while serving with a medical company of the 31st Infantry Regiment. "Due to Warrant Officer Tonli's diligent application of the principles of mass, motor, and supply administration, the medical company operated at peak efficiency during a period of combat operation," according to the citation.
