At Benning Field, the veterans saw an Airborne and Paratrooper demonstration. The high point of the show came when four Army sky divers landed in a pre-determined area about a hundred feet from the visitors.

The next stop on their itinerary was the Infantry Museum, where they were able to look over the miniature Independence Day activities will begin with Military competition at 7 a.m. Troops and cash awards will be presented to winners of both the individual and unit categories on York Field prior to the fireworks display.

The carnival's booths and concessions, including the barbecue dinner booth, will open at 11 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

The Judge Says...

Transactions can confuse average new home buyers

(First of a two part series)

What is the single largest purchase the average American will make in his lifetime? It is quite obvious—his home. The purchase of a house often represents the achievement of a life-long ambition.

It is many times also a very complex and confusing transaction for the unknowing and unwary individual who is buying his first home. As a result of the shortage of government housing at many posts today, more and more service men are buying their own homes.

Terms and Definitions

The following are some of the more frequently used terms and their definitions which surround a real estate transaction:

Equity — is the interest which the owner has in his property.

Deed — represents the title or ownership of the property.

Mortgage — a conditional conveyance of property. It represents the security for the loan.

Mortgagor — the buyer who gives the mortgage.

Mortgagee — the holder of the mortgage to whom the debt is owed.

Escrow — a writing which represents the debt, which represents the purchase of the parties to the transaction, namely, the buyer, seller, and representative of the financing institution, at which time the terms of the sale are agreed upon and the papers signed.

You should be familiar with these terms when discussing the purchase of your home with the seller, your lawyer or whoever else you deal with in respect to buying the house.

Consider Factors

When you decide to buy a house, you will want to consider several things to help you determine whether or you should buy a used home or a new one and the price range your budget will be able to afford. These factors include the down payment, monthly mortgage payments, insurance, taxes, assessments, maintenance and repair costs. Bearing these items in mind, you will be better able to arrive at a figure which will not be a burden to you.

Part two continued next week.

NOT OL' GRUNT... MY WALLET'S SAFE IN MY BACK POCKET...

'A fresh incentive'

On July 9, 1976, Gen George Washington directed his officers to issue the following order to the embarked Continental Army:

"The general brigades are to be drawn up this evening on their respective Parades when the Declaration of Congress... is to be read with an audible tone. The General hopes this important event will serve as a fresh incentive to every soldier to act with fidelity and courage, as knowing that now the peace and safety of this Country depends (under God) solely on the success of our arms..."

Five days earlier, 56 representatives from 13 colonies had adopted a blueprint of freedom for which the Continental Army was fighting. The document, now known as the Declaration of Independence, affirmed a belief in the concept that all men are created equal, that a people has the right to be free and to install a government of its own choosing, that each individual has a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

But a declaration, no matter how laudable, is without substance unless it is followed by action. This is what our Founding Fathers did—they forged their idea into the free nation it envisaged.

Today's U. S. Army still protects the rights that this nation proclaimed on July 4, 1776. Americans continue to shoulder arms to preserve freedom from being stifled by aggression, coercion, or threat. Independence Day is a time for expressing pride in America, for repeating the words that General Washington hoped would be a fresh incentive to every soldier. (ANF)

Surgeon Says Little publicized disease causing many to go blind

In recent years, millions of Americans have become more conscious of medical problems and are undertaking more preventive measures regarding their health. However, there is a disease of the eye which has not received sufficient amount of attention. It is called glaucoma and has resulted in more than a million Americans with normal vision becoming blind.

Glaucoma is increased pressure within the eye above normal standards, and with time and intensity by the vision is slowly lost. According to the National Medical Foundation for Eye Care, Glaucoma strikes twenty times as often as tuberculosis. Everyone is familiar with the house screening test and X-Rays for Tuberculosis, but very few people have had their intra-ocular tensions checked, although both tests are relatively simple to perform. When Glaucoma has progressed over a period of years, the patient finally realizes that he may be blind in one eye and sees dimly out of the other. At this stage of the disease, the condition may not be reversible. With early detection, Glaucoma can be arrested and vision saved in 90 to 95 per cent of the cases.

Involves Both Eyes

Glaucoma as a rule involves both eyes, but may be more severe in one than the other. The most common type of Glaucoma is what is termed an open angle Glaucoma. It is relatively asymptomatic especially in the early stages and the eye appears normal. As the disease progresses some patients see colored halos around distant lights and the peripheral vision becomes limited.

The early diagnosis and treatment of Glaucoma is very important in order that vision of a significant eye may be saved. Therefore, it is recommended that all people over 40 years of age have their intra-ocular tensions checked every two years, and if there is a family history of Glaucoma, it should be checked more frequently. With a simple check of the eyes' intra-ocular tension, the slightest veil of blindness may be stopped.

Oral hygiene is essential to maintain dental health

Many factors contribute to the incidence and progress of the two principal diseases of the teeth—dental caries (tooth decay) and periodontal disease (structures surrounding the teeth).

In general, more damage is caused by caries during the earlier years while periodontal disease is more destructive after about 30 or 35 years of age from the standpoint of prevalence, potential harm and actual loss of teeth.

In addition, obvious variations in susceptibility have been noted between different individuals and areas between different teeth in the mouth of the same individual.

Essentially, the basic cause of each disease is unclean state at the particular site where the disease originates. Without this condition of uncleanliness, no disease occurs. A clean tooth does not decay; periodontal disease does not occur about a clean tooth.

All that is necessary to maintain practically absolute freedom from incidence and advancement of dental disease, is the maintenance of a superior degree of oral hygiene.

2 Vietnamese Among Graduates Of Benning Scout Dog Platoons

An indoor graduation ceremony was held recently for the members of the 38th and 39th Inf. Pts. (Scout Dog) in their area on Main Post. Lieutenant Col. Charles E. Pritchard, deputy commander of the 197th Inf. Bde., presented the certificates of completion to the graduates.

Notable among the graduates were 1st Lt. Nguyen Thanh Tuong and SFC Royal Van Tuong, both of the Vietnamese Army. The Vietnamese military men took the Scout Dog course of instruction to become more knowledgeable in scout dog techniques so to improve the effectiveness of the scout dogs being used in the Vietnamese Army.

At present there are only 5 platoons of Scout Dogs in the Vietnamese Army with 7 more platoons projected for next year.

Both of the Vietnamese soldiers have high praise for the rigorous scout dog training and Nguyen, in a short speech emphasized that "The techniques we have learned here, I'm sure will be invaluable in the future."

The honor graduates, PFC Terry D. Antles of the 38th Inf. Pst. and PFC William E. Gantz of the 39th Inf. Pst. were especially praised for their "additional effort and professional interest" and for achieving the highest standards of proficiency.

Before presenting the certificates Pritchard briefly traced the history of the scout dogs, pointing out their great degree of effectiveness. He further went on to emphasize the changing nature of the scout dog program which allows for the all important adaptation of reports coming back from the field in Vietnam. He finished with the reminder to the graduating troopers that "You and your dog are now one of the most effective tools that the combat commander has at his disposal. Your dog's keen senses and your ability can get the job done."

The scout dog program commanded by Maj. John W. McKinney, has been training scout dog platoons for over a year and plans to graduate two more platoons in July.

War 'Souvenirs' Are Source of Tragedy

FORT MONROE, Va.—A young soldier and two small children died at Oak Grove, Ky., Jan. 28, 1967, when a hand grenade one of the youngsters had taken home exploded on the front porch of the soldier's home. This is one of several newspaper accounts about accidents caused by explosives brought back from overseas combat areas as war souvenirs.

Officials at Continental Army Command are concerned over such tragedies and are calling for a campaign throughout USCOMARCOM military establishments to alert all soldiers and their families to the dangers of death-dealing souvenirs. Individuals returning from Vietnam with war trophies firearms or other lethal items, are required to have these items inspected by the Army Ordnance Department. One copy of the completed form is maintained on file by the Provost Marshal, Department of the Army, AR 643-20, Control and Registration of War Trophies and War Trophy Firearms, explaining the criteria for owning such items. In Havana, Fla., a father and his two sons were killed when a small anti-personnel fragmentation bomb they had taken from a bombing range exploded in their home. Army Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) teams are located on most major military installations to assist in disposing of ordnance and preventing incidents such as these. During 1966 these explosive experts, whose job is to destroy duds and recover dangerous munitions, traveled 5-304 miles and recovered 94,061 explosive items.

USMA Cadets End Stay Here

By Bill Klob

Fort Benning was host to 712 senior cadets of the U. S. Military Academy who were here for a 3 1/2 day orientation and tactical training visit.

The cadets began their itinerary with a welcome by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York in the Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall. Then they were divided into three groups for briefing, demonstrations and actual participation in tactical exercises.

They saw and practiced "Quick Kill" training which begins with the firing of a BB gun at a stationary target without using the sights of the rifle to aim. Instead the firer points the weapon toward the target and depends on instinct to fire, similar to the method used by skeet and bird shooters.

The cadets also completed the Leaders Reaction Course where the trainees, in small groups, act as teams to accomplish tasks of a type that might confront infantrymen in the field. The course requires ingenuity, stamina and leadership.

There was an Airborne and Pathfinder briefing on how the airborne trooper is trained and how a pathfinder team operates both in training situations and in combat. After the demonstrations the cadets were given a chance to use the equipment and facilities of airborne training.

During their visit here the cadets had an opportunity to see what they can expect to

'Copter Pilot Praises Army Flight Training

PHU LOI, Vietnam — "Half in the classroom and half in the air. Instruction for both types of aircraft is divided into three phases; primary, advanced contact and tactics (actual flying) and instruments, for approximately 34 weeks. With this training schedule, strict discipline is maintained constantly because the graduate will be not only an aviator but a warrant officer in the United States Army."

The 1st Inf. Div. aviator repeatedly emphasized that a Warrant Officer Flight Training is a unique opportunity to become either a rotary or fixed wing aviator. He added, "Civilian instruction is about $45.00 an hour and many places want more. At least 110 hours of solo flying is required by the FAA (Federal Aviation Agency) for a commercial helicopter pilot's license. Another 100 hours of flight time is spent just learning the instruments. This makes it pretty expensive to get a license in a civilian flight school."

Skills in Demand
The warrant officer program is extremely demanding, combining "spit and polish" with classes on night navigation and aerodynamics. The demand for this skill however, far exceeds the supply, both in and out of the Army. A day of training is spent in the air. Instruction for both types of aircraft is divided into three phases; primary, advanced contact and tactics (actual flying) and instruments, for approximately 34 weeks. With this training schedule, strict discipline is maintained constantly because the graduate will be not only an aviator but a warrant officer in the United States Army.

Volunteers Needed
Enlisted personnel between the ages of 18 and 30, high school graduates or equivalent, with a GT score of 115 or higher, in good physical condition are eligible for training. ## Widows Provided Benefits Through Social Security

Corporal Neil W. Potter was only 21 years old when he died in South Vietnam in December 1965. On the other side of the world in Lonia County, Mich., he left a 25-year-old wife and 2 daughters, Melissa, 1 and Lisa, 3. Potter, who graduated from high school in 1952, had entered the Marine Corps immediately and had never worked anywhere else.

On the basis of Potter's service in the Marine Corps, Mrs. Potter became one of the approximately 28,000 young widows with children now receiving monthly social security survivor's benefits.

She will continue to receive these monthly checks for as long as she lives, until her youngest child reaches the age of 18. She and Melissa and Lisa will be able to college the monthly benefits, giving them financial aid until they reach age 22.

Benefits stop when Mrs. Potter will stop after both of her children have passed the age of 18 and she herself reaches age 60. At age 60 she will decide whether to take her widow's benefits at a reduced rate or whether to wait until she reaches age 62 when she can receive her full widow's benefits.

In the meantime, if Mrs. Potter should decide after the children get older to start working, her children will continue to receive their benefits to supplement the family's income regardless of how much she makes. While her benefits will be reduced if she earns more than $100 a year, her earnings will have no effect on the benefits that the children are receiving.

If she continues working enough to become insured on the basis of her own record of work, she will be eligible when she reaches 65 for either her own or her widow's benefits, whichever is higher.

Payable Monthly Under the social security program survivors' monthly benefits are payable to a widow and children of a man who has worked under social security for as short a time as 1 1/2 years during the 5 years before his death. She and each of the children will receive a benefit equal to 75 per cent of what her husband would have received based on his earnings during the time he was covered by social security. Under present law the maximum benefit a widow and children can receive is $386. Over the years, payments to the family of a worker who dies young may amount to $7,000 or more.

A widow and one child of a young worker with average annual earnings of $4,000 would receive $308 a month. With 2 children the widow would receive $306 a month.

As a program designed to provide protection against loss of income, social security is extremely important to the young widow with children. In most cases a widow with no children will be able to work or continue working to support herself. In addition to the young widows with children, approximately 2.8 million widows and widowers over the age of 60 are receiving at least $200 million each month in social security benefits. A widow 65 or over will receive 82 1/2 per cent of her husband's benefit at age 63. A widow of a man who had average earnings of $4,800 would receive $312.20 monthly.

By PFC Dennis Ray

Working under simulated combat conditions, the men of the 43rd Engr. Bn. completed 34 projects of a three-day Army Training Test (ATT) last week which varied in size from enlarging a ditch to paving a road.

At all times, protective masks were strapped to the men's sides and their weapons were always within easy reach. Defense perimeters were set up and men posted to warn the workers against aggressor attacks which could happen at any time, day or night.

Paved Road
One of the important jobs completed during the ATT was the paving of 630 of a mile of Moye Road in the Sand Hill area. This project included widening and shaping the road, laying down approximately 450 yards of clay for base, and adding a top coating. This consisted of a tack coat of tar, a layer of 3/4 inch rock, another tack coat and the final layer of 3/4 inch rock, said Fred David M. Feil, OIC of the project.

Feil said that in normal circumstances, the project would take a minimum of two weeks, but by working in shifts, day and night, the earth moving platoon, Co. G, and Co. A, completed the job in less than three days.

Block House
Another project completed by the 43rd during ATT was a blockhouse at Griswold Range, near Lawson Air Field.

Seventeen men of the construction platoon, Co. B, volunteered to build the combat block building without relief. The structure is one story combat block with a wooden observation tower on top.

These men were also subjected to simulated aggressor and guerrilla attacks. The project was delayed when two trucks with materials were smashed on the way and declared destroyed by the aggressors.

OC Relates Experiences With Chinese

In the newly-formed 97th Co. of the 9th Sst. Bn. is a 27-year-old South Carolinian, who has served in two branches of the country's Armed Forces. OC Carl W. Parnell of Charleston did his first tour of four and a half years with the U. S. Marines. After a 27-day vacation following his discharge he decided that the military was to be his métier.

Subsequent to an assignment to a Nike missile site near Pittsburgh, he was off to Vietnam in March of 1962—long before the enormous buildup of U. S. forces and material. Parnell's impressions of Vietnam during his first tour are decidedly different from those of his second tour in 1965-66. He comments only that the first trip was dull and, for the most part, uneventful.

When Parnell returned to Vietnam in March, 1965, after two years in the States (which included Special Forces and Airborne training) he was presented with the task of training 600 Mainland Chinese.

From 4 Provinces
Parnell explains that these Chinese (Nungs) were recruited from four of the southern provinces of China, who rather than live in Communist China had fled to what was then French Indo-China and is today North Vietnam.

Until 1954 when the French were ousted, the Nungs had fought for them as mercenaries. After the French departure the Nungs migrated from North to South Vietnam. Parnell's core of 150 seasoned veterans recruited about 450 Nungs and a sprinkling of Cambodians.

During the training period Parnell and eleven other Americans with the help of some fourteen interpreters (who were both Chinese and South Vietnamese) instructed the troops in courses such as hand-to-hand, bayonet and telecommunication - very similar to our Army's BCT. Parnell notes that the Nungs, or CIDGs (Civilian Irregular Defense Group) were far more effectively disciplined in field than garrison situations.

As witness to the very effective field discipline Parnell points to a defensive position the CIDG's once held for two weeks without leaving their entrenchments; the Nungs maintained a perimeter while a detachment of South Vietnamese regulars built a camp from the ground up.

Another duty of the "Multi-purpose Reaction Company" was the follow-up of the first B-30 bombing raid. Parnell and his troops were in the area within 30 minutes after the bombardment halted.

Parnell asserts that it was his work with the Nungs that motivated him into applying for OCS.

Cadets Hit Rifle Ranges, Second Increment Arrives

The pre-ROTC cadets of Co. A, 2nd Bde., 8th Bu. had never fired a weapon before, learned the fundamentals of the "Quick Kill" method of shooting in design of interested instruction to alter the individual's rifle marksmanship.

The cadets, some of whom had never fired a weapon before, learned the fundamentals of the "Quick Kill" method of shooting in design of interested instruction to alter the individual's rifle marksmanship.

The U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry, commanded by Brig. Gen. Charles M. Mount Jr., conducted Sunday's processing.

First Step

Starting point on the processing schedule was the service club adjacent to the field house where information on the summer camp was given to each cadet.

Training unit assignments were also made at that point. Platoon formations numbering 40 men were assembled outside the field house and started through the processing line.

A personnel record on each cadet was completed and screened for accuracy. Next, post locator cards were prepared in order to assure prompt delivery of personal mail.

A local touch was added to the proceedings when each cadet filled out a hometown

Finance records were next. After the records were filled out and checked, a $10 partial payment was given to each cadet for meeting immediate expenses.

Cadets Given Glimpse Of Army Paratrooper

Wide-eyed pre-ROTC cadets of three companies in the 2nd Tng. Bde's., 8th Bu. found out that the Indian chief Geronimo is a repeated namesake each time an Army paratrooper "hits the silk."

The cadets from Co. C, D, and E, took their first glimpse of the airborne soldier in training when the Infantry School's Airborne Dept. opened their doors to the college men Friday.

Sitting in the stands with the cadets were members of the U. S. Military Academy class of 1968 and World War I veterans.

Five of the airborne commitment officers of the Army's standard "daily dress" exercised in a manner that resembled a more well-up for more rigorous check.

"The airborne student musicians, most of the officers looking like a pro, football player," remarked a cadet still feeling the stiffness of his first days of physical training.

The demonstration was built around the five phases of jump training, from learning log pre-jump commands to shoving a parachute during high-recovery ground winds.

During the morning, the cadets were drilled with air rifles to familiarize themselves with firearms. Each man used the "Quick Kill" style, shooting at close targets. As the accuracy increased the targets went from small clay discs to dimes and BB pellets.

Later the training cadre put on a demonstration showing the accuracy and killing power of the M-14. This was accompanied by a period of instruction.

Training then took on a note of realism in the afternoon. Each cadet fired 20 rounds at a stationary target. Distances of the targets were gradually increased during the day.

Bob Carlson, a cadet from Durham, N. H., and a junior at the University of N. H., was impressed with the day's activities. "I didn't believe that the training would get so involved during this short six-week period."

Colonel Robert Marshall, Professor of Military Science at Auburn University, was on hand to observe the training and to meet some of the cadets.

Fort Benning is currently the only Army post teaching the "Quick Kill" method of firing. This style of shooting is used in the thickly covered areas of land that are found in South Vietnam.

SUNDAY WAS A BUSY time for 1,200 future officers when the second pre-ROTC group arrived at the Harmony Church area here for processing beginning their six-week summer camp.

The first group of cadets, numbering more than 800, was processed a week earlier.

Leads Cast for New Musical 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips'

NEW YORK — In one of the major casting announcements of the year, Academy Award winner Rex Harrison has been signed to star in the musical version of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" which MGM will present as a major roadshow attraction. The announcement was made recently by Harrison's president and general manager, Robert H. Harris, who will produce the film under an AFJAC Productions banner.

The multi-million dollar production is scheduled to go before the cameras in February, 1968, on locations in Greece and England. Interior sequences will be filmed in 70mm and color at the MGM Studios in Culver City, Calif.

The original version of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" is one of the most successful motion pictures ever made. Based on the novel by James Hilton, the late Robert Donat, who starred in the film with Greer Garson, won an Oscar in 1939 for his performance in the title role. The new version has become one of the most anticipated films in MGM history.

loved schoolmaster during his 30-year career as head of the boys school. With his wife, he personally becomes involved in the lives of his students and helps solve their problems.

Both Harrison and Miss Remick are equally talented in comedy, musical and drama. Harrison recently completed a starring role in "Doctor Doolittle," for brooding cobs, and is currently appearing in "The Honey Pot." Her musical credits include the starring role in the performance in "My Fair Lady" and Broadway musical "Anyone Can Whistle" and Lola in the well-received television special of "Diana Vreeland."

Among her numerous screen credits are "The Days of Wine and Roses" for which she received an Academy Award nomination as Best Actress; "The Long Hot Summer" and MGM's "The Summer of '42"; "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" will mark Gower Chapman's first musical film since becoming one of the top directors — cinematograph of the musical stage. He has won five Tony Awards for "Lend Me a Tenor," "The Band Wagon" and "Hello, Dolly!" and is currently represented by the smash musical "I Do, I Do."

"Ice Station Zebra" is based on the best-selling novel by Alstair MacLean, supervisor of "The Guns of Navarone."

CAMERA ANGLES

There seems to be some confusion in the ranks of the amateur movie maker these days about what kind of films there are, and the business of Super 8 only adds to the confusion.

The older types of cameras all use what is now referred to as Single 8, of course, no one called it that when it was the only kind you could get, but now there is another variety, it's been dubbed Single 8.

This older film came in two varieties — rolls and magazines. The rolls were usually 25 feet of 16mm film which was run through the camera twice.

After the first run, the photographer had to take the film out, wrap the reels around and shoot again. Later, when the film was processed, the processor developed the whole length at once, then spliced it down the middle.

No one wants to sit through endless footage of Uncle Max and little Jimmy at Niagara Falls, smiling and waving at the camera.

What would bring them around however, would be a five minute film, opening with an establisher shot showing the famous falls, followed perhaps by a few feet of a sign indicating which falls. Later in the film we could see the family arriving in their station wagon and everyone piling out for a cool drink. Then a shot of checking into a motel, with little Jimmy struggling with an overzealous suitcase and Uncle Max giving him a hand. And so forth.

Good timing is not necessarily expensive. A set can be bought for just a few dollars, and a close-up lens and tripod are almost standard equipment these days.

And does not have to be run through twice. Besides that, it is available in a magazine and has a rich area nearly twice the size of its older brother. In addition, the chronic problem of unsharpness, blamed on lack of an adequate film pressure plate in the magazines, appears to have been licked, if the claims of the manufacturers are to be believed.

So... it has gotten much easier for the amateur filmmaker to do a good job than ever before. In addition to the Super 8 format, manufacturers have come up with a host of lenses, automatic exposure control, variable film speeds and electric driving.

And yet, with all this, the neighbors stay away in droves from your home movies. The answer is editing and titling.

League play consists of a single round robin schedule. The team with the best record will play the second ROTC increment champs (5th and 6th Bns.) for the summer camp title.

Mets Sign T. Santiago To Contract

Spec. 4 Tito Santiago, the hard-hitting second baseman for the 197th Infantry signed a contract with the New York Mets professional National League baseball franchise.

The signing of Santiago, who the Mets consider a top prospect, is the work of Julian Morgan, the Mets' chief scout in the Southeastern United States. Morgan has been closely watching the talented infielder since the beginning of the post league season.

Although no exact figures can be released, Santiago has reportedly signed for a considerable bonus. His contract also contains a contingency clause, which states that his bonuses will increase with his tenure on the team.

The Observer
—by Larry Mahoney—

Bayonet Sports Columnist, Larry Mahoney is on TDY at Camp Lejeune for 45 days. His weekly "Observer" was written by Spec 4 Mike McNulty of the Infantry Magazine.

I've always admitted to being a traditionalist, a man unwilling to accept constant change. So when people like Ronald Reagan and George Murphy enter politics I become somewhat perplexed. The idea that acting and politics go hand in hand never enters my mind.

I know very little about Murphy. But Reagan? Reagan, to me, has always been "that man on Death Valley Days." When he wasn't relating some tale about the Golden West he was a football coach or a general father, handling everyday problems with true logic and finesse. Never a politician, I thought. But there he is, type-cast as one of the strong political arms of the Republican Party. And he seems intent on continuing to play that role, too.

So what, you ask, has this to do with sports? Nothing really. Except that it relates to a former great in the arena of athletics, a possible legend in his time: One Jim Brown.

He, of course, is renowned for his great feats on the gridiron during his college days at Syracuse and later as a pro with the Cleveland Browns.

Earlier this week I saw a new Brown on the movie screen, minus the traditional pigskin tucked under his arm, his football uniform cast to the wayside. He is now an actor—one of several stars in "The Dirty Dozen."

Before entering the theater, admit, I really didn't suppose he could pull it off. "Jim Brown is a football player not an actor, I said to no one in particular. And I've held a lingering hope for the past year that he would return to football and the Cleveland Browns. You see, I'm from Cleveland. Jim Brown was our star, the greatest runner in the game. He led our team to championships. I wanted him back.

It's quite natural then that I went to view him and his new career with much skepticism inwardly wishing him to be a flop.

But after sitting through three hours of spine-tingling drama (that's how a movie critic would refer to it, I think) in which he came through as a stunning hero, I'll now admit to being a believer in Jim Brown the actor. Yes, Lord! Yes!

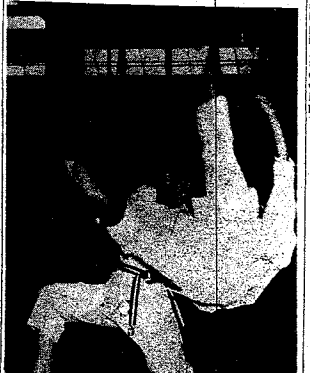

The great Brown attacked his new field with vivid imagination and skill. He has much to learn, mind you, about the theater and acting but he is most definitely on his way up to the top group of stars.

Performance Appraisal System Revised For Better Employee-Supervisor Relations

With its goal to improve communications between the civil service supervisor and the employee in mind, the Army has revised its performance appraisal system.

The wage board (ungraded) employees, the new system will go into effect on July 31: for classification and grading purposes, on July 31.

The Army bases its change on the belief that an employee's understanding of what is expected of him and the supervisor's ability to help the employee improve are the most important factors in achieving high productivity and morale.

Under the Army's new system, the supervisor still determines whether the employee has been "outstanding," "satisfactory," or "unsatisfactory."

Under the old system, however, narrative descriptions of performance are used only for "outstanding" and "unsatisfactory" ratings.

If the employee's performance has been satisfactory, the documentation required by the supervisor that he has discussed the employee's performance rating with the employee.

Ordnance Unit Rated Superior

The 89th Ordnance Detachment (Explosive - Disposal) 15th Gen. Spt. Gp., CPT, attained the highest score of any explosive - disposal detachment in the Third Army area for the current physical year in an Army Training Test given last February, at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

Each man in the detachment commanded by 1st Lt. Max Durko received letters of commendation from Major Army commander Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman and Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander.

The mission of the 89th Ordnance Det. is primarily the recovery and rendering safe of any explosive items. These dangerous charges can range from small arms ammunition to hundreds of pounds of commercial dynamite.

Since many incidents involving explosives take place in the civilian area, there is a close tie between the detachment and public law enforcement agencies.

The date of the rating has been changed to make it coincide with the date of other decisions the supervisor must make about performance. For all classification (graded) employees, the date will be the same date as the anniversary date of the decision made in connection with granting periodic step increases.

Wage board (ungraded) employees will be rated on their appraisal due dates which were established under the former system.

To further carry out its goal of "communication," each post actively request the civilian employees is designating project officers to plan and to give an orientation on the revised system to all civilian supervisors and military supervisors a civilian employees of its activity.

The Training and Development Division of the post's Civilian Personnel Section.

WE fix Sunday dinner seven days a week

Colonel Harland Sanders feeds Kentucky Fried Chicken for about a million folks every day. His chicken goes home with more people more often than any other chicken in the world.

Must be pretty good? It is. Take some home tonight.

Take it from the Colonel...
"It's finger lickin' good!"
"It's in a class by itself!"

Georgia Vets Addressed

ATLANTA—Appearing before three state organizations annual conventions last weekend, Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, issued a progress report on department programs of service to Georgia Veterans.

Wheeler spoke to the convention of AMVETS in Atlanta last Friday, the veterans of World War I in Columbus Saturday, and the DAV convention in Cordelle Sunday.

He said plans are progressing smoothly on a 192 bed nursing home in Augusta. The site near "Talmadge Memorial Hospital, has been cleared and foundation work started. The home, costing $2 million in State and Federal funds, will admit its first patients in August of 1968.

Major Expansion

The Georgia War Veterans Home at Milledgeville is undergoing a major expansion and modernization program. Plans are being formulated for a new 150 bed wing to the home to cost $870,000. Construction is expected to start early next year and take about a year to complete. In efforts to improve the existing home, $450,000 in state funds will be spent this year for new bedroom, kitchen and waiting room, furniture and other items.

The department is also working on plans to reconstruct an occupational therapy and recreation building which will cost $450,000.

Consequently, USAIB recommended the safety modification for all helicopters termed the "Overhead Attachment System" which is designed as an anchor for the lowering device.

Troops of the 5th Bn., 31st Inf. have been instructed in the use of the device and are presently serving as test soldiers for USAIB.

Shortages Are Announced For MOS's by Third Army

HEADQUARTERS, THIRD ARMY, Fort McPherson, Ga. — The critical shortage of personnel in MOS 9B30 (Air Traffic Controller) and 9B26 (Fight Simulator Specialist) has created new and interesting training opportunities for qualified enlisted men and women.

The 15 week course for training in MOS 9B30, Air Traffic Control Operator, prepares personnel to operate landing control radar systems for ground control approaches and the landing of aircraft under instrument conditions.

Trainees Familiarized
Trainees are also familiarized with aircraft characteristics, weather theory, navigational aids and equipment and air route traffic procedures. Training in this MOS is given at the Technical Training Center, Keesler AFB, Biloxi, Miss.

To apply for the Air Traffic Control Operator School, the physical standards for flying prescribed in AR 40-301, must be met, and on completion of the course applicants must have at least 13 months of active duty time remaining.

Personnel trained for MOS 9B26, Flight Simulator Operations, are taught in 12 weeks to operate and maintain flight simulators in order to provide instruction in instrument flight techniques in Army Aviation.

Exchanges Provide Civilian Jobs and Troop Needs

SAIGON Vietnam. — The area in the 75,000 men assigned in that area with essential exchange items for their comfort and daily use. At the helm of the PX operation is a wily Army officer, Maj. Eugene A. Hardy Jr.

The Major supervises 94 military, 17 third country nationals, five U. S. civilians and about 1,000 Vietnamese who staff the Bien Hoa-Long Binh complex of the massive Vietnam Regional Exchange. The Bien Hoa main store is one of the more attractive in Vietnam, having been built expressly for a base exchange in late 1965.

The Long Binh exchange is also one of the biggest in Vietnam. It grosses as much as $76,000 in one payday. Hardy figures that within a year the area exchange's average monthly gross sale of $2.5 million will soar to $4-million.

Nine site exchanges and one main exchange are scheduled to be established there by late 1967, to accommodate the troops that will move in.

The U. S. Army, Vietnam (USARV), presently stationed at Tan Son Nhut, and many of its support units in Saigon will relocate in the Binh soon. Base camps and security areas are now being developed.

Running the exchange outlets in an active war zone, where priority in everything must, of necessity, be given to the military, can pose problems. Hardy cites five facilities: equipment, personnel, transportation and security, both internal and external. "There's never enough of these things," he remarked.

Even though the exchanges are handicapped by problems, he added, he and his counterparts are fighting hard to accomplish their mission to "serve the troops."

TV sets, forklift driving, up-lifted forces, will be included in the program. There's a big job ahead for Maj. Hardy for besides the Vietnamese Army soldiers who present demands of his voluntarily surrender to and his civic projects, Bien Hoa-Long Binh area exchange has the potential of becoming one of the biggest PX setups in Vietnam.

DI AN, Vietnam—Medical personnel from the 1st Inf. Div. and the Philippines joined forces in handling a near record number of cases in the village of Ben Sue recently.

For most of the Vietnamese civilians gathered at the Medical Civic Action Program (MEDCAP) tent, aid was administered to them without much difficulty. However for some, it wasn't so pleasant.

A little girl edged shyly up to a big American, Capt. No. 4 Kimball, and finally managed to explain that her brother had been born blind. She asked if he could be helped. After examining the boy's pale, watery eyes, the 1st Inf. Div. doctor respectfully explained that the blindness was incurable. MEDCAP represents one phase of the revolutionary development program designed to stabilize and unify the rural hamlets of South Vietnam under the legal government. This is currently the primary mission of the Big Red One's 2nd Bn.

The arrival of the MEDCAP team, according to Capt. Melvin Vis, marked the first time that these villagers had ever received modern medical attention.

Capt. Mark Davis, an Army dentist, extracted dozens of abscessed teeth from people who had never had dental care before. His assistant, Spec. 4 Russell T. Ricard commented, "We can help most of these people, but some are just hopeless."

Wounds and infected sores were cleaned and bandaged, bottles of pills and medica-

Model Becomes Screen Actress HOLLYWOOD Twigg is not yet in the movies but most likely will be because the screen has a liking for modeling.

Brooke Bundy, blonde like Twigg, but with more provocative measurements than the skinny British beauty, is one of the more recent fashion poses to make it on the big picture.

Miss Bundy, who began modeling at 14, is now playing a principal role in Warner Bros. "Firecreek," with James Stewart and Henry Jones, and is carving out a career as a Hollywood actress.

The Beard Combat Kit.

It works on both sides.

While it handles whiskers and stubble.

The Norelco Flip-Top Speedshaver 20B is as cordless as you can get. Doesn't even need charging. It works on just four tiny night-light batteries. But it gives a man-size shave. The 20B has Micro-groove heads for Norelco shaves 35% closer and fancies micro-groove blades to assure even of a close, comfortable shave on any terrain. It now comes in a snap-open wallet with a mirror and battery ejector. And if you want to shave with a rechargeable shaver, get the Norelco Rechargeable Flip-Top. It has more features than this shaver on the market. Just flip the mirror as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable. Micro-groove heads and a pop-up trimmer too. The Norelco Flip-Top, the Norelco Rechargeable. Two ways to win the war against whiskers.

 But his brass it was dingy,
 And his dates they were stingy.
 Until he was told about BRASSO.

Moral: Gals take a shine to a Brasso man.

You Can Bet on It...

Compiled by Joseph Henkel

... A computer was fed selected letters of the alphabet by a commercial firm needing names for a few new products. The company's officials were staggered to have it spit out 44,900 four-letter and 500,000 five-letter words from which to choose.

... Most accounts about Hannibal the man, the soldier, and his actions were written after his death — chiefly by Romans. Livy wrote about him 200 years after he died, and Polybius the Greek, a Latin writer, wrote of his Alps crossing 60 years after it happened, an event which, to this day, is still a mystery — the exact route Hannibal took is not really known.

... "Father of the West" was more George Croghan than George Washington. He crossed the Ohio River, reached Lake Erie, and set up a trading system by 1744. Diplomat, explorer, soldier, businessman, trader, agent, and land speculator, his exploits were termed "brilliant." Yet — when he needed a $4,000 loan, he posted 1,000,000 acres of land as collateral... and died a pauper.

... The Old Grey Mare Regiment, the 2d Infantry — redesignated the 1st Regiment in the War of 1812, had many leaders inspired by its motto: "Semper Primum" (Always First). They include Captains Merriwether Lewis and George Rogers Clark; Lt. Montgomery Zebulon Pike, for whom Pike's Peak is named; William H. Harrison, our ninth President; Zachery Taylor, our 12th President; Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy; Sam Houston, President of the Texas Republic; and many more.

... The first Army airplane in 1912 was precisely fitted with cloth cut by William Meyer, a German-born tailor who obliged a young Signal Corps pilot, Lt. — later General — Benjamin D. Foulois. Meyer's sewing machine remained in use for 22 years at old Duncan Field, Texas.

... Olonnis the pirate was the most feared buccaneer of all time — and about the toughest: he captured a crew of 90 men on one excursion and beheaded them all, one by one.

American FIGHTING HEROES

The Story of Major John L. Jerstad, (AIR MISSION)

ON 1 AUGUST 1943, MAJOR JERSTAD SERVED AS PILOT OF THE LEAD AIRCRAFT IN HIS GROUP IN A DARING LOW-LEVEL ATTACK AGAINST ENEMY OIL REFINERIES AND INSTALLATIONS AT PLOEST, ROMANIA.

ALTHOUGH HE HAD COMPLETED MORE THAN HIS SHARE OF MISSIONS AND WAS NO LONGER CONNECTED WITH THIS GROUP SO HIGH WAS HIS CONCEPTION OF DUTY THAT HE VOLUNTEERED TO LEAD THE FORMATION IN THE CORRECT BELIEF THAT HIS PARTICIPATION WOULD CONTRIBUTE MATERIALLY TO SUCCESS IN THIS ATTACK.

MAJOR JERSTAD LED THE FORMATION INTO ATTACK WITH FULL REALIZATION OF THE EXTREME HAZARDS INVOLVED AND DESPITE WITHERING FIRE FROM HEAVY AND LIGHT ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS.

THREE MILES FROM THE TARGET HIS AIRPLANE WAS HIT, BADLY DAMAGED, AND SET ON FIRE.

REMOVING THE FACT THAT HE WAS FLYING OVER A FLEET OF SHIPS FOR A FORCED LANDING, HE REFUSED TO ABANDON HIS COURSE.

THE BOMBS OF HIS AIRCRAFT WERE RELEASED ON THE TARGET...

... BUT THE FIRE IN HIS CUP BECAME SO INTENSE AS TO MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS... IMPOSSIBLE.

... AND HE CRASHED INTO THE TARGET AREA.

BY HIS VOLUNTARY ACCEPTANCE OF A MISSION HE KNEW WAS EXTREMELY HAZARDOUS, AND HIS ASSUMPTION OF AN INTREPID COURSE OF ACTION AT THE RISK OF LIFE OVER AND ABOVE THE CALL OF DUTY, MAJOR JOHN L. JERSTAD SET AN EXAMPLE OF HEROISM WHICH WILL BE AN INSPIRATION TO THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES AND WAS AWARDED THE MEDAL OF HONOR.

If you can trust us with your appendix, you can trust us with your beard.

The same people who make Persona stainless steel razor blades also make surgical blades.
More stainless steel surgical blades than anyone in the United States.
And, oh, are those surgeons fussy.
The teeniest, weeniest imperfection in a blade and you can feel the ground shake from here to Kookamonga Medical School.
We formed the habit of making surgical blades one way, and one way only.
Flawlessly.
And we make our new super stainless razor blades the same way.
If you like the shave we give you, just chalk it up to our experience with your appendix.

Tomorrow 'Open House' Scheduled to Mark The Student Brigade's 25th Year

By Spec. 4, Richard Benson

When formed in 1942, the Infantry School Service Company was comprised of three student training battalions, each with 800 men. These battalions were later organized into a training regiment.

In 1943, during World War II, the Student Training Brigade reached its peak with four student training regiments. There were two Officers Candidate Regiments, an Army Specialized Training Program Regiment, and the First Parachute Training Regiment.

After World War II, in September, 1947, the First Student Regiment became known as The School Brigade, with four student battalions and the Infantry School Detachment.

In October, 1969, the brigade was given its present name and in February of the following year the Infantry School Detachment became the Infantry School Battalion.

Today, the brigade is made up of Headquarters Company, 1st Student Battalion (Ranger), 2nd Student Battalion (Officers), 4th Student Battalion (Airborne), Infantry School Battalion, and the 5th through the 9th Officer Candidate Battalion. (See TSB, Page 2)

The Judge Says...

Transactions can confuse average new home buyers

Second of a two part series continued from last week. Once you have chosen the house you want to buy and discussed the terms of sale with the seller, the next stage in the transaction is the preparation of the contract. It is at this stage that you should consult an attorney prior to signing the real estate contract. You will want him to examine the contract to be certain that the provisions it contains are in your best interest.

The contract will normally state the description of the property, personal property included in the sale, price of the sale, limitations on title, the nature of the title, and any miscellaneous provisions such as risk of loss, closing costs, closing date and possession date.

It will also be necessary prior to buying your house to have the title "searched." Your lawyer can do this for you or your bank if you are financing the house. This procedure involves examining the records of the chain of title to determine whether or not there are any outstanding liens or security interests against the title. To protect yourself, you should obtain a title guaranty insurance policy.

Closing
Sometime after the contract has been signed the closing will be held. This is the most significant stage in the purchase of your home. Your lawyer should be present at the closing to examine the final terms and negotiate any paper and you wish to have included. Depending upon the state the transaction takes place in, you will sign a mortgage, bond, security deed or deed of trust.

If you are "taking over" the payments of the seller, the language will normally state that the buyer takes "subject to and assuming" the debt of the seller.

This language renders the buyer personally liable to pay the note, and in the event he defaults in payment and the property is sold pursuant to a foreclosure, he would remain liable for any deficiency if the proceeds of the sale were not sufficient to pay off the note.

Big investment
Your home represents a big investment — an investment you will want to protect. If you manage your affairs well, you and your family will be able to enjoy the use of your home through the years and eventually own it free and clear of debt.

A 'dead tooth' may result by neglect of dental health

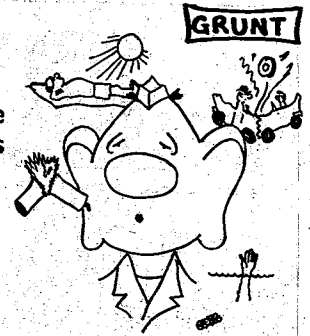

The normal tooth is a living member of the body's team of organs. Within its hollow core are blood vessels and nerve tissues, which provide those elements which characterize a functional organ. Occasionally, as a result of neglect, tooth decay, this important inner portion of the tooth or "pulp" dies. Actually, the so-called dead tooth is a pulpless tooth or a tooth with a nonvital pulp.

This condition may result from other causes as well. A blow to a tooth, for example, will frequently result in the death of the pulp. In some cases, the actual pulp death will occur many years after the causative injury.

Once it has been diagnosed, treatment of this condition is relatively simple and painless with a high probability of success. It consists of the removal of the diseased pulp contents and replacement meet with an appropriate filling material. This procedure is known as endodontic, or root canal treatment. In some cases, (about 20 per cent of those treated) varying degrees of discoloration of the involved teeth is noted. This is dependent upon the quality of professional care and skill exercised. By the use of a simple bleaching process, even these few discolored teeth can be restored to their normal state.

HAVE A HAPPY BUT SAFE 4th OF JULY

Commanding General's Independence Day Message
Tuesday will mark our 191st observance of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the Fourth of July. It is time now for us to rededicate ourselves to the Spirit of '76, the spirit of the men who signed and fought for that great document. With the patriotic theme of the day, The Spirit of '67. We are reminded of the principles set forth in the Declaration and we remember our obligations to live by them.

I offer best wishes for a happy, meaningful and safe holiday.

Show the Spirit of '67

Tuesday will mark the 191st observance of Independence Day, the signing of the Declaration of Independence. In 1776 our forefathers lived, fought and died following the Spirit of '76. Now, that flag flies again as the Spirit of '67.

The American soldier has always fought with courage for the present and hope for the future. And, in Vietnam, the conflict continues to take its toll as the soldier continues to fight in his courageous tradition.

Our nation has great reason to take pride in our fighting men all over the world. One way to show our pride and support would be to display the American Flag, especially on patriotic occasions.
At home and abroad, we rededicate ourselves with the Spirit of '67. You are privileged enough to be Americans; be proud enough to show it.

Surgeon Says Driving ability is reduced by medicine and emotion

Auto accidents don't just happen. They are caused. In overwhelming proportion of them are caused by some human element. Sometimes this human element involves a driver with a physical or emotional condition that makes him a less than ideal driver. You may think you are in good health. You may have an excellent safety record. Yet, under certain circumstances, it can be dangerous for you to be in the driver's seat, says a pamphlet of the American Medical Association.

Doctors agree that the emotional stability of the driver is as important as any single factor in maintaining traffic safety. That's why you owe it to others — and to yourself — not to drive when you have serious problems on your mind. If you are thinking about that argument you had before you left your home or office; if you are in a depressed or angry "don't-care-whatever" mood; if you are very worried about a personal problem, you are better off not driving.

Sleepy Drivers
The sleepy driver causes many accidents. In fact, a sleepy driver is as much of a hazard as a drinking driver. Drowsiness, which can occur in broad daylight as well as at night, when making long trips in the summer vacations soon to come, rest every two hours and drink coffee or cola to stay alert. Next time you feel the least bit drowsy while driving, pull over and rest.

Research proves that many medicines, not just a few, can affect the way in which you handle the wheel. Certain commonly used drugs such as anti-allergies, cold tablets and mild sedatives may dull your reflexes or impair your coordination. Stimulants can make you reckless. Tranquilizing drugs can cloud your judgement and interfere with driving skills. Consult your doctor about the side effects of any drugs you take. Do not drive until you know that the medicine or drugs you take won't affect your driving.

Alcohol and Gasoline
It goes without saying that alcohol and gasoline are a dangerous combination. You don't have to be drunk to be in a dangerous mood. Even a small amount of alcohol can impair judgment and reactions of many.

Driving calls for clear, healthy eyesight, side vision, judgment of distance and the ability to see well at night. Have your eyes tested regularly. If you have glasses for distance vision, do not forget to wear them.

Make it a happy July 4th, follow the rules of safety

Would you like to get your name in the news? Whether you would or not, here is how it could occur. With the Fourth of July holiday coming up, just forget all the safety information you may have seen or heard.

A holiday is for fun and recreation and what could be more fun than a trip to the beach. Now that you are all going to worry about anything, all you have to do is to get in the old trusty vehicle and go. There will be thousands of others who do not have a thought to bother them who will be on the road at the same time.

There will probably be Fort Benning personnel who forget all about the YAC Carnival, the fireworks, the swimming pools, the craft shows, the 23 different products and treats they could fish on post. It is just good to get away, isn't it?

Now [about getting your name in the news. We did not exactly mean the social column about who took a trip. No, what we had in mind was more like this:
Water Safety
If you did not want to be bothered with safety precautions, you would not see or hear statements such as "Undercurrents 'can' make swimming risky in the Gulf. Not even the strong swimmers can survive if caught in the strong undercurrent. If caught in the undertow, swim with it and work upward and outward. You can ride the swell to shore."

You probably blanked out this information given on boating which warned you to wear a life preserver and not to overboard the boat. If you were not interested in safety, you also were probably day dreaming when the orientation was given that included warnings to swim only where there are adequate lifeguards.

Auto Safety
Assuming that you were disinterested all the way through the safety efforts of post personnel prior to the holiday, you would not be reminded that fatigue impairs your driving efficiency. You may have forgotten that you have to leave yourself not only planning what you will do before the other fellow gets you in a pinch. You wouldn't worry about speeding either if you were not interested in safety.

So what we mean about getting your name in the paper is that you can do it if you read and follow the business and go ahead and down. That is, if you manage to reach the beach before you have an accident.

Making a pretty face even prettier was the object of the coffee for the wives of the Airborne Department, recently, at the Main Officers' Club.

Mrs. Leo J. Thomas and Miss Doline Powell, representatives of a Columbus cosmetic studio, gave the wives a demonstration of the proper application of makeup.

The flower arrangement of white gladiolas and gold and purple chrysanthemums was awarded as a flourish to Mrs. George Coggins. Newcomers Mrs. Coggins, of Ipswich, England on May 10, 1966.

Mrs. Harrison Wiggins, wife of Mrs. Calvin Dodd, who is leaving next month for Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Hostesses were Mrs. Harvey Houghton, Mrs. Benjamin Kapp and Mrs. John Jenkins.

Series E Bonds Can Start Extra Retirement Fund

Planning to retire after 20 years? Even if you have a long time to wait then, it's not too early to plan ahead. Investing in Savings Bonds now, you will have two choices when you retire.

You can cash your bonds and turn them into a substantial egg for a down payment on a house or for starting your own business. Or you can use them to produce a regular income to supplement your military or civilian retirement benefits. You start your extra retirement fund by buying E Bonds.

Buy at a rate fitted to the way your earnings come in—whether that's weekly, monthly, or semi-monthly. Decide how much you will need, and just your schedule accordingly. Then, as retirement time approaches, trade your E Bonds for H Bonds which pay interest semi-annually by Treasury check.

You can put all of your E Bond holdings (including the accumulated interest which would have been immediately subject to tax had you cashed in your bonds rather than exchanging them) into your H Bond retirement fund . . . thus deriving maximum earning power from your savings.

Tax on the interest subsequently earned on your H Bonds is, of course, payable from $22,000 in H Bonds, or $668.80 in interest the first year, and $846 a year for the next 9 years, to make up for whatever you wanted to make of it—as indeed it had been all along under this flexible plan.

Tax on the accrued E Bonds interest would then finally be due, but your post-retirement tax rate would make it easier to handle.

life of your H Bonds. Example: Suppose you started now to buy a $100 E bond (for $73) each month and continued that schedule for 17 years (when your first Bond reaches end of first maturity period). At that point you'd have E Bonds with a cash value of $21,928.

When you are ready to retire, trade your E Bonds for H Bonds, adding, if necessary, enough in cash to round it out to $22,000.

Of this total, $668.80 would be accrued interest—but unless the exchange privilege you would pay no taxes on it at the time of trade.

From $22,000 in H Bonds, you'd get Treasury checks for $668.80 in interest the first year, and $846 a year for the next 9 years, to make up for whatever you wanted to make of it—as indeed it had been all along under this flexible plan.

Tax on the accrued E Bonds interest would then finally be due, but your post-retirement tax rate would make it easier to handle.

Reserve Officers to Attend Army Career Course Here

Two weeks of intensified training and instruction being held here Sunday, will highlight this year's activities in the U. S. Army Reserve Officer Career Course.

Held at Fort Benning for the second consecutive year, the course will supply valuable experience to reserve officers throughout the Third Army area.

"Our goal is to provide these officers with the finest instruction possible," emphasized Col. Emory S. Hunt Jr., commander of the Durham, N. C., USAR school.

The career course will supply its own instructors. Staff reserve officers having already completed the four-year Infantry Officers school will conduct more than 80 hours of classroom work.

Later in the two-week program, field training exercises will be held.

During the greater part of the year, the officers study at classes held in reserve armories. The school's headquarters is located in Durham, The Greenville, S. C., USAR school will act as support school.

Guard, Reserve Reminded by VA

With time drawing near for extensive summer training exercises, Georgia National Guardsmen and Reservists are reminded of their eligibility for VA compensation for injuries sustained during such periods, Pete Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said last week.

Active duty training accidents which disable the guardsman or reservist are compensated by the VA in an amount determined by the extent of the disability.

Wheeler added, "Guardsmen and reservists are also eligible for VA medical treatment for injuries sustained during active duty periods."

Field office managers of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist guardsmen or reservists who have claims against the VA, ed out.

Study Course Being Pushed For Noncoms

From Army Times
WASHINGTON — Shooting for high-echelon NCO assignment? The Army is advising those E-8s and E-9s who are to be sure and take the Army's new Command and General Staff College NCO extension course.

The new emphasis is spelled out in a Department of Army letter to all commands. It encourages NCOs to take the course and enroll at an early date.

The recent sergeants major conference urged the Army to put increased stress on NCO career development training at all levels.

The C&GSC course for NCOs consists of 224 credit hours of study and will be conducted by the college at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

"It has been specifically developed to assist senior NCOs in enhancing their professional military knowledge and to improve their career and promotion potential," the DA letter tells the field.

The course is the pinnacle of the NCO career development courses. It is available only to NCOs who have completed their NCO branch school extension course and are serving or have the potential to serve as sergeant major or operations sergeant on the headquarters staff of a general officer.

Officials point out that the NCO course is open to qualified NCOs in the National Guard and Army Reserve as well as the active Army.

The course includes subjects on the principles of organization and management, staff operations and relationships, and the broad aspects of leadership.

The correspondence course is considered temporary substitute for a resident C&GSC NCO school. The Army is deferring action on this request pending completion of the Vietnam fighting, officials said.

'Defense' Tells Congress Extension Rumors Wrong

From Army Times
WASHINGTON — Defense has assured Congress it has no plans to extend military service involuntarily, or to call up the reserves. Daily newspaper reports of extensions and of callups, Defense said, "are totally unfounded in fact."
The Department also assured Congress that Reserve officers will not be kept on active duty after obligated service is finished, and it repeated promises that the tour in Vietnam will remain fixed at 12 months.
These personnel policies were spelled out in a fact sheet submitted to members of Congress, dated June 8. The fact sheet does not quibble. It says forthrightly that the Department of Defense "has no proposals under consideration that would seek to extend terms of service of enlisted persons."
In addition, said Defense, it supports a bill sponsored by chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.) of the House Armed Services Committee which would restrict the President's authority to extend servicemen involuntarily. The bill provides that for anything short of war declaration by Congress, servicemen would not be involuntarily extended while Congress is in session, without action by Congress. Under the bill, Reserve officers may be involuntarily extended, the fact sheet had this to say: "However, said Defense, individual regular officers who are retained on active duty apply for retirement or unqualified resignation "may be involuntarily retained in the service and it is determined that there is an overriding need for the officer's active military service." But the sheet added: "Reserve officers who have expressly agreed to serve in which he has incurred an obligation to serve."
"However, this action may be taken only after the qualifications of the officer concerned have been carefully weighed against the needs of the service and it is determined that there is an overriding need for the officer's active military service."

Promotions Accelerated In Vietnam

WASHINGTON — Enlisted promotions in Vietnam are being accelerated this month for grades E-4, E-5 and E-6. A Pentagon survey team recently reported that promotions of outstanding soldiers in Vietnam were going too slow and the speedup authority was authorized as a temporary solution.
Under the June promotion rules there is no limit on the number of promotions to grades E-4 through E-6 a man may receive while in Vietnam.
Up to five percent of the authorized E-4 strength in USARV, up to three percent of the authorized E-5 strength, and up to two percent of the authorized E-6 strength may be promoted from the grade below without regard to time-in-grade and time-in-service criteria.
The previous promotion policy permitted two percent of the authorized E-5 strength and 1½ percent of the authorized E-6 strength to be promoted monthly to E-5 and E-6 respectively as second-in-country promotions.

NATURAL MUSEUM
CAM RANH BAY is more than an excellent natural park. It's a natural museum. Scuba divers from the U.S. Army's 497th Engr. Com. (Port Construction) uncovered an underwater relic, a Japanese gunboat containing live ammunition which apparently sank during World War II.
Engines and divers raised the boat from its 25-foot-deep watery grave, had the live artillery and mines destroyed, then placed the ship on shore for the benefit of spectators.

Lifeguard's Job Alluring But Assignment Not Easy

Seldom in the U. S. Army does a soldier get the assignment of sitting around a swimming pool all day looking at attractive girls and developing an eye-appealing, 'ark brown' tan. Nevertheless, several Fort Benning soldiers are given just such an assignment each summer.

The lifeguards at the four outdoor Special Services

The hours of the commissary store, main post, are: Monday - Friday, 9:30 a. m. - 6 p. m.; Saturday, 9:30 a. m. - 4 p. m.

swimming pools presently in operation have a job sought after by many. However, the work is not nearly as attractive as one might imagine. These men have little spare time and receive little reward or recognition; not to mention the great responsibility of guarding human life.

Nine Busting Rules
Nearly 50,000 persons use the four outdoor pools at Fort Benning during a single month of the summer season, according to figures prepared by the sports department. For this reason, significant the nine basic pool regulations have been erected by the USAF Special Services Sports Dept., stating the nine basic pool regulations. "When individuals are permitted to duck or splash others," she continued, "a novice swimmer can easily drown after only being ducked once and this type of strenuous activity not only tires out the persons involved, but leads to possible injury in the water."

"I don't think that the majority of the swimmers object to a few rules," said Spec. Diane Piaszek, a water safety instructor with the sports department staff.
"We train our guards to expect cooperation from all visitors to the pools and the guards are given instructions to deny pool privileges to anyone who cannot abide by these few simple regulations," she added. Many of the pool's regulations are easily understood and seldom questioned, but Piaszek examined one or two of those most violated.

"Horseplay" prohibited. "The rule most violated is the one which prohibits 'horseplay' of any kind," Piaszek explained.
"However, enforcement of this rule is strictly the lifeguard's own interpretation of what actually constitutes 'horseplay'."

"When individuals are permitted to duck or splash others," she continued, "a novice swimmer can easily drown after only being ducked once and this type of strenuous activity not only tires out the persons involved, but leads to possible injury in the water."
"Food or drinks scattered about the pool decks draws insects and creates a sanitation problem," she explained, "and if it does blow into the water, it can seriously clog the filtration system."
"If glasses are brought around the pool," she said, "there is always the danger of breakage resulting in accidental cuts to barefoot swimmers. She also added, "If glasses are brought around the pool, it must be completely drained, cleaned and refilled which takes several days depending upon the water pressure available on post."
"We allow patrons to wear prescription eye glasses and sun glasses around the pool, but these glasses are not permitted in the water even though the person may only be washing."

The sports department wants to encourage all eligible personnel to take advantage of the pool facilities offered at Fort Benning this summer.
The four outdoor pools now in operation are: Carey Pool (Main Post), South Harmony Church pool and Kelley Hill pool, all located directly behind their respective area's service club. The fourth, Sand Hill pool, is located behind the USAF Welcome Center. All pools are open from 1 p.m. until 8 p.m. daily, except Mondays or when necessary cleaning or repairs are required.
Remember, water safety is a lifeguard's business but it remains everyone's responsibility.

Rangers Demonstrate Training to ROTC Cadets

Pre-ROTC Cadets have discovered that not all Rangers wear white hats and come from Texas when they were shown a demonstration by Fort Benning's toughest soldiers.

After getting a quick look at the training program, the cadets were given the opportunity to participate.

Hand-to-hand combat was first on the bill. After 15 minutes of tossing each other around, the Rangers settled down to the serious business of capturing an armed aggressor.

After explaining how a patrolling Ranger unit is made up, the cadets were shown how the unit operates under combat conditions.

They scaled cliffs, jumped from walls, crossed catwalks high above Victory Pond and demonstrated the techniques of infiltration into enemy-held areas.

"Small unit leaders are more important now than ever before," said Capt. Arnold H. Gaylor, combat conditions control, Ranger ROTC Cadets are given to emphasize the inter-branch cooperation, and the combat readiness of today's fighting man.

During a tank firepower demonstration by the 68th Armored Bn., the crew of the "Beastie," a M-40 tank, and a new M-50 model flipped up defenses with a precision barrage in another demonstration.

After rolling in under a self-made fire cover, the tanks scored direct hits downrange on tank and armored personnel carrier targets.

The demonstration, part of the standard OCS training curriculum, was presented to the Cadets an idea of cross branch military capabilities and how they can be used most effectively. Other demonstrations will include float bridge construction by the 98th Engineers and a trip through the 17th Infantry Brigade.

ROTC Cadets Attend Atlanta Braves Game

Two hundred and four ROTC Cadets from the 2nd U. S. Army Training Center, in North Harmony Church, boarded six buses early Sunday bound for Atlanta's Grant Park and afternoon of Braves baseball.

Accompanied by five chaperones and Mrs. Dorothy Smeds of the ROTC club, the cadets first saw Grant Park's stadium, Cyclorama, as guests of the park. The painting and sculpture of "Battle of Atlanta" was illuminated and five rooms of cadets' off-duty hours. As part of this program, Mrs. Smeds has arranged for mid-July Atlanta trip for mid-July and two tours to the Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga. home of the late President, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Sunday's noon meal was eaten on the Grant Park lawn next to the Cyclorama building. Each cadet was given a sack lunch by his company mess hall.

The Atlanta Zoo was also visited by many of the cadets.

At 12:30 p.m. the cadets were taken to Atlanta stadium where they saw the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets 4-2 on two home runs by Hank Aaron and three hits by Cleve Boyer.

Ermer Has Good Reason To Appreciate Freedom

One night during the summer of 61, a small band of refugees worked their way along a narrow dirt road to the border of west Germany. As they neared the border, they looked back over their oppressed home land. They then took a few steps and dashed over the border into the free world.

This was Candidate Peter J. Ermer's first encounter with the free world. Ermer, who is now an OC in 90th Co., 9th Bn., TSB, did not soon forget this experience.

Moved to U.S. After spending a year in West Germany Ermer moved to the United States. He set-in Grand Rapids, Mich., where he received his education in the American way of life. Ermer enlisted in the Army in 1964, and was assigned to the military police and, he was stationed in Germany shortly after. In 1965 Ermer was assigned to checkpoint Alfa in West Berlin. From this position, a zero fifty feet from the Berlin wall, Ermer was able to once again take glances at the land he had left a few years before.

He was also able to witness attempts by East Germans to make their own way to freedom but which for the most part were unsuccessful. After his assignment in Berlin, Ermer worked as an investigator of black market activities in Germany. He found this type of work interesting and rewarding.

At this point in his life, Ermer decided to make the Army his career. He applied for OCS and was soon accepted.

Now a naturalized U.S. citizen, Ermer feels that by playing in the Army he can best give service to his adopted country and help fight for the cause of freedom around the world.

The candidates of 90th Co. feel a special affection for the man that appreciates in a very unique way the value of freedom.

No Plans for Scrapping The 12-Month Standard

From Army Times

A number of members of Congress who recently reported that the 12-month tour in Vietnam was the greatest single factor for good morale among U. S. servicemen there.

The fact sheet conceded that some enlistments were extended for four months in the Navy and Marine Corps in 1965 and 1966 under a law which gives this power to the Secretary of the Navy, but not to the Army and Air Force secretaries. The Rivista in the field, are sent on a 12-month tour of duty. We are equipped to supply the replacements necessary Air Force system.

Candidate Will Go Airborne After Recording 274 Falls

Officer Candidate Nick Degloff, 2nd Co., 9th Stu. Bn. (OCS) has made 274 parachute jumps yet he is not airborne qualified.

After enlisting in the Marine Corps in 1957, Degloff decided he would like to become a "sky diver" and made his first jump that same year. Since then he has completed 274 jumps, all were "free-fall" with the exception of the first five, which were static line controlled.

In 1958 he competed in the first national parachute meet at Fort Campbell, Ky. The following year, he competed in the second national parachute meet at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Degloff is also on the team that made the first "double-baton" pass in his home state of Florida.

He has personally trained over 50 student jumpers.

In 1961, he captured first place in overall events at the Florida Invitational Meet.

After being discharged from the Marine Corps in 1963 he went to the University of Florida, where he founded the university's parachute club.

By 1967 he was ready to come back to the service. This time he chose the Army, enlisting with the intention of attending OCS.

Engineers Keep Caissons and Commerce Rolling

When the Viet Cong destroyed the bridge over the Suoi Cai river near Khanh Van, the men of B Co., 1st Engr. Bn. went into action.

The bridge, only eight miles north of the 1st Inf. Div's base camp at Di An, is a vital link in Vietnamese and American transportation; its destruction crippled commerce and communications in the area.

Captain Robert C. Lee, CO of Co. B, employed a reinforced plan in rebuilding the structure and with assistance from the 500th Engr. Co., USARV Engr. Command, the job was completed in three days.

VC BRIDGE... Elements of a fleeing Viet Cong regiment failed to burn their bridges behind them and infantrymen took advantage of the opportunity. Moving swiftly across the open area, this soldier keeps his M-16 ready as he scans the jungle foliage for snipers. (U.S. Army photo)

Before construction could get underway the river and road approaches to the bridge had to be cleared of debris. Installation of a new pier, abutments and culverts was the next step.

The new bridge, 362 feet in length, was assembled section by section on the south approach to the river and was then edged into place by the 46 sign crew with no mechanized assistance. The 40-ton complex employs two spans to provide increased stability.

Security Guard

The completed bridgework now has 24 hour security from elements of the 2nd Bde. This will assure its performance as a vital link in the Khanh Van villagers primary route to Di An, Phu Cong and Phi Loi.

The construction of the bridge was undertaken as a part of operation "Lam Son 67." It is also an important step in the 1st Engr's participation in the Revolutionary Development Program and will serve as a symbol to their motto, "Always First."

The glass was missing from the windows in the east side of the church. The Vietnamese clergyman, speaking through an ARVN interpreter, explained that the building next door had been damaged by a Viet Cong charge, and the force of the blast shattered the church windows. Six hundred pictures for each pane of glass was more than the church's bud-

Airlines Offer High Savings To Soldiers Flying Standby

Military standby air travel to make the best use of can save the soldier approximately 50 per cent of the regular plane fare and enable him to make the best use of his leave time. Now offered by all U. S. scheduled airlines, the program gives the soldier priority over all other reduced-rate, standby passengers. This can be a great time saver and will help considerably in emergency cases. But there are several requirements to be met by the individual, whether officer or enlisted man, before he can travel standby.

Specialists Are Needed For Surgical Assistance

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas (ANF)—One of the fastest growing needs in the Army Medical Service is for operating room specialists. These technicians serve as assistants to nurses, doing tasks such as cleaning and preparing equipment for surgery and helping with operating room procedures. Colonel Roger A. Juel, chief of the Medical Branch, Department of Medical Training Center here, says these specialists are much in demand in both civilian and military hospitals because of a shortage of nurses. The specialists attend a 10-week course in the Medical Field Service School after taking basic combat training and the 10-week medical corpsman specialist course. He must also present DD Form 1580, the key to the full benefits of reduced fare, military status. The airlines survive infancy.

accept this form as proof that the traveler is, in fact, a serviceman. Soldiers should be sure to obtain at least five signed copies of DD Form 1580. These forms are now required to be carried by the individual while he is on leave or pass, whether he intends to fly or not, in case an emergency arises and he is forced to travel by air.

Special Services Departments Supported By Appropriated Funds From Congress

A long established policy of the department of the Army has been to provide, operate and maintain adequate "Special Services" recreational facilities for the men and women of the armed forces and their dependents. Here, as at all military installations within the continental United States, the Special Services program includes a variety of events and activities that the question always asked is, "Where does the money come from to support these facilities?" The answer is that for each department of Special Services, administration, entertainment, recreational areas, sports, craft shops, libraries and service clubs a given amount of money is appropriated per quarter from the United States Congress to meet the operational expenses of that particular Special Services section.

FINANCED BY TAXES
The entire Special Services program of activities from bowling alleys to golf courses — from touch football and theaters to swimming pools and craft shops (everything including Service Clubs and recreation areas such as the Destin, Fla. area operated by Fort Benning Special Services) is financed with the help of tax dollars from the federal government. For example, the post library system is authorized to replace books annually at a rate of $8 times a fixed index figure of 7.3 times the military population of the installation. The system may given purchase new volumes at a rate of $7.36 (the new book price established by the Congress) times a fixed index number of 12.7, and then multiplied times the military population. This works out to an approved volume purchase budget of over $15,000 for the coming fiscal year beginning July 1.

Based on Population
Construction, equipment, materials and supplies, all are provided or obtained on the basis of military population of the particular installation. Subsequent revisions are made after annual review to either raise or lower the amount of appropriated funds depending upon the growth or depletion of the military population level. Occasionally, however, cases arise when repairs, additions or maintenance requirements are an immediate necessity, yet costs for these improvements are beyond the appropriated fund budget for that fiscal year. In such cases, the central post and (non-appropriated) fund additional revenues to carry out the necessary expenditures are legitimate and that proper use is being made of the available fund. ## New Name and Role Set For Intelligence Branch

WASHINGTON (ANP)—The U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Branch will be renamed Military Intelligence on July 1 and will serve in a new combat support role with emphasis on cross-training all of its officers.

Army Chief of Staff Gen.

eral Harold K. Johnson, has approved the changes, based on recommendations by a committee he appointed to study every facet of U.S. Army Intelligence. The committee was headed by Maj. Gen. Frank W. Norris, director of Military Personnel Policy for the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

The branch has been redesignated from combat service support to combat support status, placing Military Intelligence (MI) in the same category as Ordnance, Corps of Engineers and Signal Corps, and Intelligence officers will be trained for a career pattern which crosses all positions of tactical and strategic intelligence. Cross-training will create greater assignment flexibility, schooling, and promotion potential for officers, according to Lt. Col. Edward J. Evans, chief of the Military Intelligence Personnel Directorate, Office of Personnel Operations.

Army Given Responsibility Of Generator Management

Defense-wide management responsibility for engine generators for all military services has been assigned to the Department of the Army. The Secretary of the Army will announce a specific project manager at a later date.

Engine generators are critical combat items required to support Southeast Asia operations and other world-wide defense commitments. There are presently about 300,000 engine generators in the Department of Defense inventory, and projected requirements will increase to an estimated 600,000.

This standard generator family is intended to satisfy the greatest number of military applications with a minimum number of sizes and types. Maximum use of this family of generators sets at a minimum cost, and will minimize logistics support by limiting the number and types of generators entering the supply system.

Historians Wear Airborne Wings

BIEN HOA, Vietnam—Not only are Military History Detachments among the smallest Army units, they are also among the scarcest.

When one of them becomes officially airborne it is a rarity worth mentioning.

Such is the situation of the 24th Military History Det., Abn., part of the 173rd Abn. Bde. The team's mission is to collect data and write the book on going history of the brigade.

According to Capt. James H. Sangster, commander of the three man unit, it was a logical move.

"We must be able to operate with the same capability as the unit to which we are attached," he remarked.

Sangster's two assistants, Spec. 4 Rodrick C. Martinez and Spec. 4 Clarence G. Ashberger, are also pleased with the airborne status. Ashberger and Sangster were already airborne-qualified when Martinez completed jump school. The unit was ready for airborne designation.

Bobby Marsh and Maj. (ret.) Bob Himes teamed together in the annual Father's Day Scotch Foursome Golf Tournament held at the Fort Benning Country Club recently. Marsh and Himes had a net score of 70 to win the 15 - 18 age group and the championship.

The Fathers' Day tournament is held primarily for father and son team entry but because of the Vietnam conflict and other military commitments this year many of the fathers were not here to play, so to provide an opportunity for all sons who wished to enter, other players who had no sons on play were permitted to "adopt" sons for the day and enter with them.

Other winners and runners up were: 10-12 age group winners, SFC G. Kingston and Tommy Anton, runners up, Mike Buckins and Col. Frank Weaver; 13 - 14 age group winners, Tony Harding and CWO F. Three members of Fort Benning's Sport Parachute Club brought home one-fourth of the trophies from the statewide championship sport parachute meet held at McDonough over the weekend.

Top local competitor among the 100 entrants in the sixth annual Peach State Invitational meet was Sgt. Curtis Tracy, who won first place in the advanced accuracy phase of the contest.

The event was held at Greer Field, five miles south-

Only one injury was reported for the meet. This was an ankle fracture suffered by Jim McLeod, 40, of Atlanta on his first competition landing. McLeod is a member of the North Georgia Sport Parachute Club.

'Adventure Training' Set Kingeter First In Bear Match At Texas AFB

WASHINGTON - A "surplus" of soldiers in some 120 combat MOSs being created by the Army so that men can have two years in the U. S. between Vietnam tours.

To match the manpower imbalance, about 50,000 State-side positions have been specially created to serve as a rotation base for men with skills little-used outside the Southeast Asia combat area.

Without the additional men and spaces, soldiers with these relatively scarce skills would face repeated Vietnam tours with little time between in CONUS or other long tour bases.

Pentagon officials unveiled the program this week which they call the "Comus Sustainment Increment (CSI). All the normally authorized slots in long-tour areas, they explain, are taken by the "sustainment base" for Southeast Asia operations.

MOSs Involved

The MOSs involved, officials said, are mostly technical ones in the engineering, aviation and communications fields, although a few combat MOSs are also included.

Explaining the background of the problems leading to the creation of the CSI, officials said the buildup for Vietnam requires the Army to train additional soldiers in certain skills outside the Army's main structure.

To revise the permanent structure of the entire Army and to make room for the specialists would be "time practical and expensive," the Army said.

Depending on the weather and terrain, the unit is either parachuted or airlifted in the areas where it will operate for a week before conducting its home station.

The 101st has arranged to use Fort Carson, Colo., Fort Bliss, Texas; Daniel Boone National Forest, Ky.; Cherokee Park National Forest, Colo., and Natchez Trace Park, Tenn., for "Adventure Training."

"Adventure Training" is designed to develop initiative, determination, a definite attitude with specific tasks selected to stimulate individual mental and physical powers and instill teamwork under abnormal conditions of stress and shock. (ANP)

New MOS Plan Created to Insure Two Year Break in Vietnam Duty

YAC Offers Recreation For Youths

Why is it that the term "juvenile delinquent" is seldom heard in connection with Fort Benning youths? The Youth Activities Club is why.

The YAC is a centralized agency that supports and coordinates wholesome recreation for more than 3000 dependent children at the Infantry Center.

Besides coordinating both Boy Scout and Girl Scout programs, the YAC operates a social club called "Teen Square" and is responsible for six athletic programs that include basketball, baseball, football, swimming, fencing, bowling, archery, boxing, tennis and table tennis.

The club also maintains Junior Rifle association, conducts drivers training and a summer Youth Employment Bureau.

Youngsters sell ice cream, cut lawns and babysit to earn spending money during the summer months.

Since all activities of the club require adult supervision and guidance, YAC is dependent on some 300 volunteers who act as coaches, chaperones, scout leaders and supervisory staff.

The annual YAC budget is some $70 thousand, more than half of this is raised at the annual Fourth of July celebration. A three part event which includes a carnival at

Col. Davis to Take Command Of CTC at Ceremony Monday

In a change of command ceremony Monday on Gordon Field here, leadership of the Centee Troop command will pass from Col. Lon D. Marlowe to Col. Charles W. Davis.

The event, scheduled for 2 p.m., will feature a parade by units of the command with music by The Infantry Center Band.

Participating in the ceremony will be the 1st Bn.'s Companies A, B and C and WAC Co., Hq. Co., CTC; the 98th and 128th MP Companies; and the 43rd Engineer Bn.'s Hq. Co. and Companies A, B, C and D.

Colonel Davis, a Medal of Honor recipient, comes to the post from Vietnam where he was senior adviser to Advisory Team 96, XVIII Corps (Airborne Grp.).

The action for which Col. Davis was given the nation's highest award for gallantry in action occurred Jan. 12 and 13, 1948; on Guadalcanal. Serving as executive officer of an infantry battalion, he volunteered to go to the aid of the leading companies of the battalion, trapped by enemy fire. In further action, he led an assault that broke Japanese resistance and led to successful accomplishment of the mission. He was a captain at that time.

Colonel Marlowe will become chief of The Infantry School's Office of Infantry Doctrine and Materiel.

Cautious Drivers to Be Rewarded

Safety Campaign Set

Fort Benning and Columbus are soon to see a combined traffic safety campaign in which safe drivers will be given citations re-

The idea for the joint effort was generated in an ex-H. York. In his letter, Johnson said "I think it is most appropriate that we unite in this common goal as another example of civilian-military cooperation. I am confident that Columbus would greatly benefit from the expertise of your safety personnel to the mutual benefit of all people of the area."

General York replied that Fort Benning would be "particularly happy to unite with you in an area-wide safety effort in an attempt to reduce the traffic accidents in Columbus and Muscogee County." He offered the services of the Post Provost Marshal's (See SAFETY, Page 2)

197th Bde. Soldier Honored by Freedoms Foundation

By Sgt. Paul Turk, 21st Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., the young, khaki-clad soldier kept coming to attention, exclaiming that he was worthy of the "Defending Freedom" award.

Received Award

Vasquez was presented the award last Saturday in a ceremony in front of 8th Bn., 21st Inf., headquarters by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Charles A. Smith, and his wife.

He explained that a poster advertising the Freedoms Foundation contest caught his eye one day last October "when I had nothing else to do," and he decided to enter "in Vietnam," he said, (See 197TEL Page 2)

Office and Safety Section to assist in planning the project. Planning coordinators for the campaign are Traffic Engineer Wesley Scott and Traffic Division Chief Grover Knox for Columbus, and Col. H. S. Blackledge, provost marshal, and Andy Baldwin, Safety Section, for Fort Benning.

Civic, commercial and industrial units are being invited to join in the campaign to furnish signs, placards, prizes and support within their organizations.

On-Post Phase
The On-Post phase of the program got under way last week with a volunteer donation of ten $25 U. S. Savings Bonds by the National Bank of Fort Benning to the Provost Marshal's office.

Later, Mrs. Lawrence R. Murrell was pulled over to the side by military policeman S. Sgt. Ulysses C. Jones who "wrote her up," not for a traffic violation but for several outstanding safe operations he had noted as she trailed her.

In his narrative report which accompanied the citation, the MP said in part, "On the occasions which I observed, Mrs. Murrell she was always within the speed limits and always cautious of existing traffic hazards. When approaching a traffic hazard, such as children playing around the road, Mrs. Murrell would reduce her speed to a point that if a child had run into the street she could have stopped in time."

plained his desire to be a social worker by saying, "I'd like to help people, to get to know people and their problems. I speak two languages (English and Spanish, learned in his native Santiago, San Juan, Puerto Rico) which will make it easier for me to work in many areas of New York City."

Greatest Power
In his letter to the Freedoms Foundation, Vasquez wrote, "The United States today being the greatest power in the world, has the important task of securing freedom in other countries. It is up to us to see that these unfortunate countries establish a government of their own without interference from any dangerous country."

"By taking the initiative," the United States has made other countries trust in us and to join in the fight for freedom.

"I hope that by the great determination of the United States can people, we'll be able to put a stop to all Communist aggression, therefore bringing peace, prosperity and security to America, as well as other nations in the world."

Many benefits available to families of deceased

This article is addressed to the problems surrounding the death of members of the military service. The concern of legislators has been two-fold: (1) the orderly administration of the affairs of the deceased member insular as these affect the military establishment; and (2) adequate provision for those who were dependent upon the deceased member for their support.

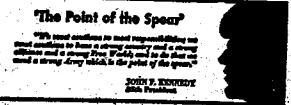

In line with the first concern, the statutes provide under certain circumstances, for the appointment of a summary court to collect the effects of the decedent and perform certain duties of administration. Insofar as the second purpose is concerned, an Army regulation provides for the appointment of a survivor assistance officer to render assistance to the dependents of deceased or missing Army personnel.

Federal Benefits
In addition to the assistance the Army offers in performing duties of administration and in collecting the effects of the decedent, there are several other Federal benefits to which survivors of deceased service members may be entitled. For example, when a member of the Army dies while on active duty, a lump sum gratuity of $500 to $3000 normally is payable to his surviving family.

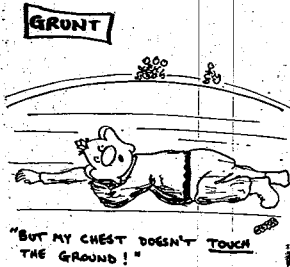

Lastly, there is the Retiree's Survivors Family Protection Plan. This plan is a voluntary self-supporting survivorship annuity program under which a member of the uniformed services can elect to receive a lesser amount of retired pay to insure that, upon his death after retirement, his beneficiaries would continue to receive a portion of his reduced retired pay.

Limitations and Benefits
There are limitations imposed on these benefits to recipients. In the event of his death, amounts owed to him by the Department of the Army, "Accounts" of a deceased member include sums payable as pay and allowances, principal and interest in a decedent's Soldiers Deposits account, retired pay accrued but unpaid at the deceased member's date of death and accrued leave pay, that is, any amount due a decedent from a member.

Continuing Benefits
In contrast to the death of a member, the death of a gratuity and settlement of accounts which are lump sum payments, the serviceman's dependents may also obtain dependency and indemnity compensation, and compensation which is designed to provide financial benefits on a continuing basis. A distinguishing characteristic of this compensation is that payment is contingent upon a determination that the death in question resulted from a service connected cause, or in the case of non-service connected deaths, a pension is payable to survivors of those veterans who served during the war-time period. This form of benefit is administered by the Veterans Administration, thus, there is considerable evidence to suggest that the condition is a result of the action of acids.

Dental Impressions
Strong acids can cause tooth enamel to dissolve
Erosion is a decalcification (dissolving) of the enamel of the teeth. It occurs most frequently at the gum line. The specific causes of erosion are not known. There is considerable evidence to suggest that the condition is a result of the action of acids. Frequent consumption of lemon juice or other highly acid beverages and frequent chewing of limes can result in erosion. Once the acid has etched the tooth surface, toothbrushing easily removes the softened tissue.

There are no specific preventive measures for erosion. Dentists usually recommend limiting the amount of strongly acid foods and beverages consumed, proper toothbrushing and regular dental check-ups. If the erosion is proceeding at a rapid pace, it may be necessary for the dentist to cover the eroded area with a filling or a crown. Abrasion is a wearing away of the teeth primarily as the result of mechanical action. The teeth of habitual pipe smokers are often abraded in the area about the stem of the pipe which is held. Nails, which are frequently held between the teeth by carpenters, also reparable and upholstery, may cause notches in the cutting edges of the teeth. Similarly, harmful results may be produced by holding needles, pins and bobby pins between the teeth. There is some evidence also that improper brushing of the teeth may cause abrasion, usually of the outer surfaces near the gum line. It must be remembered, however, that if only water alone is used for brushing, a restorative is necessary to replace the lost tooth structure. Under normal circumstances the daily balanced diet will replace salt losses, however, when the dietary intake of salt is low, or when excessive sweating occurs, supplementary salt is required. Individuals with high blood pressure, heart disease or kidney disease should check with their physician prior to taking supplementary salt.

An American tradition

"A free society devoted to achieving the natural rights of its citizens can be maintained and tyranny prevented only if the people in general are well educated."
— THOMAS JEFFERSON
Millions of young Americans have completed another school year. Many of them have entered the world of business or industry to apply the knowledge they have absorbed during their school years. The remainder will return to their respective schools in the fall.

Whatever the case may be, these millions have reaped the benefits of a tradition that is a vital part of our priceless heritage — the opportunity for every American to obtain an education.

The United States has one of the most comprehensive public education systems in the world. Our public schools, colleges, and private educational institutions have indeed produced an articulate and knowledgeable population.

This awareness of the value of an educated populace is no accident. For more than 300 years education has been considered essential in America. As early as 1642, civil authority required compulsory education of children. Throughout our history, as our Nation has progressed so has our educational system. It has sought to provide the youth of our nation with the skills and knowledge necessary to succeed in an increasingly competitive and complicated society.

Surgeon Says Heat illnesses can result from water, salt losses

Man can usually maintain his body temperature by processes which adjust the balance between body heat produced by the body and heat lost through the processes of radiation, convection, conduction and evaporation, however, when air temperature is equal or greater than skin temperature, evaporation of sweat is man's only avenue of heat loss.

The losses of salt and water by sweating pose important problems to the individual in respect to his performance. As sweat is formed, relatively more water than salt is lost from the body. After prolonged sweating, therefore, there is a deficiency of both salt and water, but a relatively greater loss of water. Normally one of the first responses to prolonged sweating is thirst; however, after undue exposure to heat, thirst is not a normal indication. The main treatment for this disorder is to remove the individual to a cool environment and remove outer clothing. Two salt tablets per quart of water should be sufficient to replace the salt lost from sweating. Water losses must be fully replaced for one to be efficient in performance. If rapid improvement occurs, it is a danger form of heat illness known as heat cramping. In this condition there is also excessive loss of salt and water with dehydration.

High salt intake with damage of the temperature regulating mechanisms of the body, liability to sweat is usually a characteristic sign. The skin is hot and dry. The individual usually complains of headache, dizziness and weakness. Rapid breathing and unconsciousness eventually occur. These individuals must be immediately evacuated to a hospital. He should be cooled and his extremities massaged while in transit to the hospital. This may be helpful. Heat disorders are only rarely seen among dependents in this area as their salt and water losses through sweating are usually not excessive. The heat cramping or heat stroke is more properly seen among the working or training population are heat cramping, heat exhaustion and heat stroke. Heat cramps occur when water losses are replaced without replacement of salt. Excessive water drinking without replacement of salt is the most common cause. Cramping of the arm and leg muscles is common. Abdominal muscle cramps are not infrequent. The body temperature in this condition is usually normal. These cramps are usually relieved by salt replacement.

Last of Original Cadre ATC's Colonel Ben Ward Leaving Post Next Week

Colonel Ben R. Ward, last of the activating officer cadre, is leaving Fort Benning's Army Training Center. The initial brigade commander, commander of the 1st Bde, for the past 22 months, and the last of four officers assigned the special mission of activating the U. S. Army Training Center, Infantry in September 1965, Col. Ward has been assigned to the Staff College of the Armed Forces at Norfolk, Va. He will relinquish his command July 10.

"I've loved this brigade and this assignment, and I leave it with a very deep respect," Col. Ward said. "I've loved this brigade and this assignment, and I leave it with a very deep respect."

These words, spoken by Col. Ward, signify the devotion to duty and feeling of accomplishment that he has as he prepares to accept his new assignment. For any officer, esprit of corps, high morale, and commanding troops, the next most important assignment is to prepare to be a young man for the competition day.

Ben H. Ward received his commission in 1949 through the ROTC program at the University of Tennessee. His first assignment as second lieutenant was at the training center at Camp Wheeler, Ga. One year later Lt. Ward was assigned to China for advisory duty with the Nationalist Chinese Army in Burma. It was there that he served under Gen. "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell.

Other assignments came fast and varied for the Maj. Ward: 2nd Inf. Div., XXIV Corps, Korea; 10th Mountain Div.; 8th Army Headquarters when the Korean conflict began; and later, Japan as logistical Command and Headquarters Army Forces, Far East, during the Korean War.

Post G-5. As a lieutenant colonel, Ward became post G-3 at Fort Riley, Kan.; saw duty as battalion commander and G-3 with the 8th Infantry Division; was an instructor at the NATO Nuclear Weapons School, Germany, attached to the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; and was assigned to the Department of the Army and Department of Defense Staff, Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Suarez Is Helper To Wives of Candidates

By Jane Daniels

Pretty, young, charming and a Columbus, Ga., girl, Mrs. Antonia Suarez is now a busy Fort Benning wife and mother. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Farris of 324 W. Morehead Avenue in Columbus, she is the busy helpmate for her husband, who is the company commander of the 61st Co., 8th Stu. Bn. (OC).

One of her biggest jobs, and because she has to do it because she wants to, is helping wives of officer candidates of the company to feel at home. She tries to get close to these officer candidate wives. She consoles a wife who is lonely, gives directions to a wife who wants to find a certain place on post or in town, gives advice about an upcoming party, or chats a few minutes about a wife's urgent problem.

"Because my husband most work at the company so much of the time and since the candidates can't be at home, the candidates wives and I can help each other."

Knowing Wives "Actually knowing the wives gives me a feeling of being a part of my husband's conversation about the company and about the candidates."

"Being a part" also means that Mrs. Suarez goes to the social functions of the company and the battalion. She averages two or three social functions a week although the total frequently runs around five or six. She says, "It's not a burden to me. It truly means a lot to me."

With her daughter, Stefanie Renee, born May 28, she's busier than ever.

"Meesie Husband," she met her husband when he was an officer candidate at Fort Benning. "I worked at the car insurance counter on post, he came in to the office one day, and soon we were talking," she recalls. Out of that conversation grew a romance and in September, 1965, they were married.

Lieutenant Suarez is from Bogota, Colombia. His mother now lives in California.

MRS. A. SUAREZ Enjoys Sewing

The 81st Co., 8th Stu. Bn. (OC) held a coffee recently in the company dayroom. The honored guests were Mrs. Hilton D. Payne, Mrs. Nick J. Wilas, Mrs. Henry J. Thomas Jr. and Mrs. Ira D. Horton.

The centerpiece was an Uncle Sam hat and a tin soldier brightly colored red, white and blue.

A talk was given by Mrs. Michael J. Tierney and Mrs. John A. Weldon on customs and courtesies of the Army and the intermediate status informal.

Cadre hostesses were Mrs. Dennis Muehlstadt, Mrs. Gaylord Rober, Mrs. Gary J. Meadows and Mrs. Leonard L. Morgan.

Waiting Period Is Announced For Insurance

The Association of the United States Army has announced that effective with the end of the present Insurance Open Period, members who have passed their seventh month of membership must wait for another Open Period before they can be insured under the AUSA Group Insurance.
In the future new members will be informed of their eligibility shortly before their seventh month of membership; all members not having insurance will be informed of eligibility during the Open Period.
According to AUSA these changes are necessitated by the plan's large loss ratio due to Vietnam casualties. The only other solution would be to institute a war clause, which would remove most of the value of the insurance for military members.

U. S. Development Program Is Hurting Communists

DI AN, Vietnam — A sure sign that Revolutionary Development (RD) is hurting the Viet Cong is the way "Charlie" is currently trying to undermine the program in villages where RD is operating.

In recent weeks Vietnamese and U.S. soldiers have been sent to native villages to abort VC terrorism aimed at RD workers and village chiefs loyal to the South Vietnamese Government (RVN).

Rangers of the 1st Inf. Div's Co. B, 2d Bn, 10th Inf., recently sent a security element to the village of Phan Khanh, 15 miles north of Saigon.

Within a week of the troops arrival, conditions improved and communist activity in the village tapered off.

The chief's intelligence system also improved and he received a tip that a 10-man VC meeting was scheduled nearby.

"The chief told me about the meeting and we immediately made plans to break it up," said Sgt. Charles S. Fitzgerald, a Ranger squad leader.

One of the Vietnamese soldiers working with the unit spotted a VC suspect and he stopped him.

Moments later PFC's Thomas Serna and Ronnie Fitzgerald spotted another suspect riding a motorcycle.

"He gave us a hard time at first," Fitzgerald relates, "but when he saw our weapons he decided to stop and be sociable."

They found a grenade, ammunition and documents on the cyclist, who said his mission was to deliver the documents to a VC commander.

He admitted being part of a work group carrying food and ammo to a VC main force unit, but said he had intended to desert the VC. He said he had been pressed into the work by a "goon squad" that visited his home.

The detainee reported that U. S. artillery fell constantly near the VC base camp where he worked, and one round had landed in the camp causing six casualties.

The group's morale was very low, he stated, and most members wanted to go home, but couldn't. They were all terrified of the artillery and air strikes.

The capture of the suspect and the tip about the VC meeting showed the increased strength of the village chief's intelligence network since the Rangers security force arrived.

The presence of the U.S. and ARVN soldiers showed the villagers and Viet Cong alike that the government is ready and willing to protect the children of Hung.

Map, Capt. Joseph Handa, chief advisor at the 70th Advisory Gp., located a security element at a village near Phuoc Vinh, asked the men of the 1st Inf. Div's 70th Maint. Bn. to try to "come up with something" for the children.

S. Sgt. Roy Austin's men of Co. D, directed by WO Raymond Barriek began construction of a large set of playground swings for the youngsters.

After the swings were built Austin accompanied by Spec 4 Gregory McGrath and PFC Charles Eiland delivered them to the 2d Bn., 8th Army of the Republic of Vietnam (ARVN) Regt. for installation.

As the children crowded around the swings, Barriek was making plans for the future which will include more swings for the tiny hamlet.

Children Have a 'Swinging' Time

PHUOC VINH, Vietnam — Squeals of laughter were heard by the men of the 70th Forward Support Team as local Vietnamese children tested a set of playground swings.

Needing recreational facilities for the children of Hung Map, Capt. Joseph Handa, chief advisor at the 70th Advisory Gp., located a security element at a village near Phuoc Vinh, asked the men of the 1st Inf. Div's 70th Maint. Bn. to try to "come up with something" for the children.

ROTC Cadets Reach Half-Way Point Of Summer Training Here Last Week

With aching muscles and a new fund of military knowledge, the 2,000 ROTC Cadets training here reached the half way mark of their summer training last week.

"So far I've been a completely new experience and sure I'm sure that I will never forget," commented Cadet Jack Bretholz of Brooklyn, N. Y. "Once I got adjusted to it through it has, without a doubt, been very rewarding."

The cadets have completed four weeks of training in the three week period. Map reading and Rifle Marksmanship have accounted for the bulk of it with physical training not far behind.

The training has come hard and very fast for the men," S. Sgt. William Brooks, Drill Sergeant for a platoon in the 8th BA, said. "They learn much faster than the average trainee. It's not only so in their general knowledge of a subject but also in its practical application."

The final three weeks of training for the cadets will be mostly concentrated on operations and basic military tactics. This training will come in the fifth week when the men go on bivouac training.

First Lt. Robert W. Roper B-2, company commander of the 1st company for the job they are doing.

Following the firing of the cartridge - container, there is a five - second delay in expulsion of the smoke canister from the cartridge and the color smoke being evaluated now, the color compositions used in the M18 Smoke Hand Grenade, red, green, violet, etc., can be fouled into the XM555 40 - mm Smoke Cartridge.

Tests Being Staged Here On New Smoke Cartridge

This week the U. S. Army Infantry Board (USAIB) began the evaluation of a newly developed 40-mm smoke marking round. The smoke marker, which can be used to identify targets in an inaccessible area, is being fired from the M79 grenade launcher on Benning's ranges.

Designated the 40-mm Yellow Smoke Marking Cartridge, XM555, the round is being developed by Picatinny Arsenal, of the U. S. Army Munitions Command, to fulfill a requirement for a smoke munition to mark enemy locations, designate landing zones, and other positions marking uses.

The cartridge, weighing approximately 1/2 pound and measuring just over five inches in length, can be fired with either the M79 or XM-148 40mm grenade launcher.

While yellow is the only color smoke being evaluated now, the color compositions used in the M18 Smoke Hand Grenade, red, green, violet, etc., can be fouled into the XM555 40 - mm Smoke Cartridge.

The Free Pistol crown was won by S. Sgt. Herschel Anderson from the second straight time with a three-day score of 1,673 points.

Joining Anderson and Green on the pistol squad are Army Maj. Sgt. William B. Blankenship, Jr., who was third with 1,622 points and Air Force Sgt. Arnold Vitarbo, who finished fourth with 1,560 points.

Army Shotgunners Set For NRA Competition

An important part of the NRA International Shooting Championships being conducted here July 1-12, are the 300 bird trap and skeet matches which are usually overshadowed by the rifle and pistol events.

Nevertheless, the shotgunners are competing in a match that has called together over 120 of the nations top military and civilian trap and skeet shooters who have their sights set for a berth on the United States Shooting Team.

Specialist James Beck, who leads the pack of Army hopefuls on the Trap team, has an enviable record in Trap shooting. He was All-American and a member of the Nebraska All State Team in 1965 and 1966 and in 1963 won the Grand American Class Championship.

Beck finds trap shooting more exciting than skeet because as he puts it, "It's a lot more difficult, especially in international style, trapshoot- ing."

Local Swimmers Place Second

YAC Awards Dog Trophies, New Obedience Classes Set

Even dogs are now learning the "social graces," and are getting their awards for good manners and proper obedience.

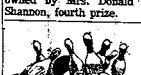

Fort Benning's dogs can be trained in the Fort Benning Obedience Training Classes, which are sponsored by the Youth Activities Club (YAC).

The beginner's novice class, as much as a class for the dog's owner and trainer as for the dog, is an eight-week course to train dogs in obedience. To register his dog in the class, the owner must be a member of YAC.

A new class will begin Tuesday under the instruction of Mrs. Richard M. Stanley. The classes will be taught each Tuesday night from 7-8. Class registration will be held in the YAC office today through Tuesday.

The Observer

—by Larry Mahoney—

In Miami and San Francisco, a continent apart, it is the big local sports story. National-ly, it has also stirred a storm of sorts because it has all the elements of the times: two professional superstars, one a basketball player and the other a singer-actor; salaries like $500 thousand and $90 thousand; charges of nepotism and disloyalty; and the birth struggles of a new professional league.

The two names are Rick Barry, who played at his college ball at the University of Miami then went west to become the National Basketball League's leading scorer, and Pat Boone, who needs no introduction.

The two salaries are what Barry and Bruce Hale will receive for their services to the Oakland Oaks, a member of the new American Basketball Association. Boone had the access for a controlling interest in the Oaks.

Bruce Hale, who coached Barry into stardom at U. N. Hurricane, was lured away from the Florida school on a three-year contract to be head coach at Oakland. The 23-year-old Barry lives just across the bay from Oakland. One of San Francisco's more prominent young men, he poured in 2,775 points (36 per game) for the NBA Warriors last year. Normally, the Warrior brass would have had no cause to worry about their top man switching to a suburban Oakland's entry in a new-born league.

The whole situation was changed, however, by the fact that Bruce Hale is not only Barry's old college coach but also his father-in-law. Now it is certainly understandable for the young man to want to play for his old Miami mentor who also happens to be his wife's Daddy. Add money to this a half million dollars—and it becomes rather irresistible.

Barry shocked San Francisco by signing a three-year contract with the Oaks. The pact-making locale: the living room of the Beverly Hills home of Pat Boone.

The expected reaction came from San Francisco. Bitter charges, apiced with threats of a $10 million suit against the Oaks. There was even an offer by the owner of the Warriors to "adopt Rick," if it would solve anything.

There was another enticement for Barry, beyond the financial and family compulsion. He has ambitions in other areas besides basketball, which is understandable in a decade of role switching that has seen actors elected to high political office in California.

Wavy-haired Rick Barry, already a veteran of radio broadcasting and possessing a face fit for film and TV, has theatrical ambitions. His alliance with Boone will not hurt them.

Several years ago I watched, with mixed feelings, Rick Barry lead the University of Miami Hurricanes over Florida State at Tallahassee. My reaction, because I was a student at FSU, was a mixture of admiration for his ability on the court and sadness at what was happening to the Seminoles, who were never in it.

Now, possibly in the near future, it will be Rick Barry, actor, and my reactions are still mixed. Hollywood will doubtlessly cast him in some movie, as it did Jimmy Brown, late of the Cleveland Browns, in the "Dirty Dozen."

The "Dozen" producers could not refrain from using Brown's full name, in a galloping, grenade-dropping sprint around a villa filled with the Nazi commanders of France. While his squadmates cheered him on, Brown was tackled by a belt of machinegun bullets.

Perhaps we can't spare any similar scenes when Barry makes his film debut. But I can see it now: Sgt. Billy Bates (Rick Barry) is furiously working over a jammed M-16 grenade launcher as withering Viet Cong fire stalks his platoon. "To hell with it," he mutters, then falling back on his good right arm he pots three long shots, boom-boom-boom, into the enemy bunker. As the smoke clears, Sgt. Bates, a tall Kentuckian, remarks to his admiring comrades, "Yep, of Baron Bupp himself offered me a scholarship over to the University at Lexington."

The school's commandant, Col. Emory S. Hunt Jr., introduced the post commander to the students, who are representing more than 15 states throughout the United States and Puerto Rico.

Classes began immediately after the orientation with periods of instruction being held throughout the post.

Young Cliff Gruschow Pedals for a Living

By Pvt. Ken Deats

He pedals for a living. Peddling ice-cream that is, 14-year-old Cliff Gruschow of Columbus, Ga. pedals daily to and from Kelly Hill at Fort Benning where he peddles a sizeable amount of ice-cream and popsicles to soldiers in that area.

Tall, lean and dark-complected, Cliff has a friendly smile and pleasing personality. His enthusiasm shows when the Youth Activities Program (YAC) is mentioned for it is through this organization that Cliff has had the opportunity to earn money this summer selling ice-cream.

Cliff is one of the high men on the sales list with an average daily profit of between $15 and $20. For example, he sold $72 worth of popsicles, cones and ice-cream for a profit of $18 during a recent day's work. Many boys his age would love to earn this much in a whole week.

"You can make as much as you want if you work at this job at YAC. He is busy," says Cliff. "I work five or six days a week myself." When asked how he manages to play basketball and football, he replied, "I squeeze my time around."

Youth Activities Club is a big part of Cliff Gruschow's life. His younger brother, Bobby, is also busy with YAC program. He makes $9 a week. "It keeps your mind off school," what more could you ask of a summer vacation program?

Cliff says he has learned a lot about budgeting money and responsibility through

U. S. Army members are reminded that the Army community service program offers help and information on a wide variety of family problems for Army members and their dependents. The service program was established to provide assistance in time of need and can be especially helpful to families separated from Army personnel stationed overseas.

Army personnel are encouraged to tell their families that all they must do to receive advice or assistance concerning a personal or family problem is to visit the nearest Army installation and ask for the Army community service officer.

Army community service centers, which are located at Army posts throughout the world, normally will provide information on such things as housing, medical and dental care, legal and financial assistance, indebtedness, care of children and civilian employment.

Under New System EM Grades May Check Progress of Promotions

From Army Times

WASHINGTON - Defense has set up a new system for monitoring enlisted promotions. Among other things, it will enable the average enlisted man to tell how he is doing.

He will know whether he is being promoted ahead, along with or behind his colleagues. The new program has a long handle - "Enlisted Career Development and Grade Management Information Program."

Actually it is a reporting procedure which will require the services to give information about their promotion systems to Defense. Standard terms are being used so all the services will speak the same language.

Tell Ahead

Under the program Defense attaches various sensors to the enlisted promotion systems so it can tell ahead of time where trouble spots and promotion lags are likely to occur. The constant monitoring of the promotions will enable better planning for the top six grade enlisted slots and for specialists.

An enlisted personnel data bank will be established so that personnel planners will be able to better manage the enlisted career force.

The program has been at least two years in the making. Although it is getting started at the same time the House Armed Services Committee has started a study of enlisted promotions the two events are not related directly.

Chart

An interesting chart is attached to the Defense instruction which puts the program into effect.

It shows the average service-year span at which men could be expected to make (This time was chosen because it was before the Vietnam buildup.)

It shows men were making (the fifth through ninth year, 19th year; E-6 in the 17th through 22nd year and E-5 in the second through E-4 in the ninth through 14th through 22nd year and E-3 in the sixth year; E-2 in the 13th through 18th through 25th year)

Hospital Unit Arrives Here From Florida

Coral Gables' 324th General Hospital Army Reserve unit, capable of operating a 1,000 bed hospital, has arrived here for two weeks of active duty training.

The bulk of the unit's doctors, dentists and enlisted men will tend a hand in managing Martin Army Hospital.

The 324th is the largest Army reserve unit in Florida and one of the largest hospital outfits in the U. S. Commanded by a Coral Gables physician, Col. Chauncey M. Stone, it boasts 17 doctors.

The 71 officers and 500 enlisted men left the Kendall Armory in Coral Gables Sunday morning. They will return to Miami and the end of their active duty training next weekend.

This marks the 17th straight year the 324th has conducted summer training at Fort Benning.

BULLS EYE... The hole in the middle of the target where the white lines cross, reveals the extreme accuracy of TOW during its first firing on Benning's ranges last week. The heavy anti-tank guided missile is being tested by the U.S. Army Infantry Board. Test Officers describe the accuracy of the new weapon as far superior to anything they have previously fired. Spec. 4 Frank L. Flores, TOW gunner, left, and SFC Robert L. Combs, Test NCO, examine target to determine exact point of strike. (U.S. Army Photo)

Job Training Program Set To Ease Civilian Transition

PORT MONROE, Va. — Military personnel who have nearly completed active duty are improving their civilian job potential in a training program now being developed by U.S. Continental Army Command.

The Secretary of Defense has established Project Transition to carry out President Johnson's desire to create another transition from military service to civilian careers.

USCIBARC has been directed by the Secretary of Defense to conduct the initial test program this summer. Fort Knox, Ky., has been selected for the pilot program.

Initial phases of the new manpower project will help individuals who have from one to six months of service remaining.

The project first will determine the kinds of in-service training this group desires and the types of courses which would lead to favorable civilian employment opportunities.

Then a training and education program will begin, aimed at improving the individual's chance for good employment.

Priority in this voluntary program will be given to selected personnel who entered the service with no civilian job experience and who did not acquire a civilian-related skill while on active duty.

Individuals who have served almost exclusively in combat military specialties and who desire a civilian skill, or upgrading of a skill acquired prior to service also will be given priority.

The manpower training program also includes these categories: — Personnel with little formal schooling will have a chance to improve their educational status.

Dependents Now Eligible For Civilian Health Care

HEADQUARTERS, Third Army, Fort McPherson, Ga. — Many military sponsors are missing out on benefits recently made available for their handicapped dependents.

The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services of Health effective on January 1 of this year and provided a program for the care of dependents, physically handicapped or mentally retarded, of active duty military personnel.

This new law established a special program of civilian health services, training and rehabilitation for handicapped dependents.

Authorized now are: diagnosis; inpatient, outpatient and home treatment; training, rehabilitation, and special education; and institutional residential care in private nonprofit, public, and state institutions and facilities, when appropriate, and from such institutions and facilities can be provided.

Only the spouse and children of active duty members may participate in this program. The sponsor pays a share of the monthly cost of civilian services on a scale computed on his pay grade. The Government pays the rest, with a maximum of $350 a month.

For information about facilities and assistance in transportation to and from such institutions and facilities, contact the Army Community Service Center.

ACS personnel will be able to determine what has been established and advise the sponsor of the procedures necessary. Military sponsors can now receive help in aiding their handicapped dependents through this beneficial program.

"Never forget the part that man plays in this whole business," Col. Leroy B. Wilson, commanding officer of the U. S. Army Development Command Infantry Academy, gave the 149 graduating officer candidates of Class 37 Col. Wilson stressed his point by pointing out to the newly commissioned second lieutenants that the Army measures its strength in ships, the Air Force in planes, but the Army's is still in men—the real source of our knowledge."

Final Tribute Set for General York

General John M. Wright Welcoming Slated Monday For New Post Commander

An honors ceremony will be held here at 8:30 Monday morning on York Field to welcome the commandant, Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. General Wright, who officially assumed command of the post Saturday, succeeds Maj. Gen. Robert H. York.

General Wright has been assigned to Fort Benning on three previous occasions. He attended the Airborne School here in 1947, qualifying as a parachutist and gliderman. In the early '50s he attended the Infantry School Advanced Course after which he became battalion commander of the post's 50th Airborne Regimental Combat Team (RCT).

Recent Tour

More recently, Gen. Wright came to Fort Benning in 1964 as assistant division commander of the 11th Air Assault Div. during its testing phase of air assault concepts. When the division was reorganized as the 1st Cav. Div. (Airmobile) he led the advance party to Vietnam and served there as assistant division commander during the 1st Cav's initial year of counterinsurgency operations.

Just before World War II, in June 1940, Gen. Wright graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and was assigned to the 91st Coast Artillery (Philippine Scouts), with station at Corregidor, Philippine Islands.

In the few months before Pearl Harbor he participated in planning and organizing the beach defenses of Corregidor. During the island's siege he commanded "Battery Wright," a 155-mm rotary gun battery which fired the last round in the defense of Corregidor.

Prisoner of War

Following the fall of the Philippines he was a prisoner of war for three and a half years.

In the Korean War he served with the 7th Inf. Div. The 51-year-old general is a Master Parachutist and an Army Aviator. He has had a variety of command and staff assignments, duty as a military attaché and is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College as well as the National War College.

In addition to a number of foreign and Philippine decorations and citations, Gen. Wright also has been awarded the Distinguished Services Medal, the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Bronze Star.

Fifty sets of bleachers with a seating capacity of 4,000 have been erected to accommodate the crowd of civilian and military well-wishers expected for the ceremony which is open to the public. Additional chairs will be provided for special guests and parking will be available at each end of Infantry Hall, the School and Center headquarters buildings.

Groundbreaking Ceremony Is Held Initiating New Recreation Center

By Spc. 5 Mike McMillan

Fort Benning's first multiple purpose recreation facility is being built at Kelley Hill.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Monday for the $400,000 bowling alley, pool, snack bar-lounge complex, with construction to begin immediately.

Manning the three-handed shovel that turned over the first spadeful of earth were Brig. Gen. Charles M. Mount, Army Training Center; Col. Jack L. Treadwell, commander of the 12th Inf. Bde; and Lt. Col. J. G. Lowndes, deputy director of personnel for the Infantry Center.

When completed, the man-made facility will consist of a house a 12 lane bowling alley and a 5,000-square-foot shop. Construction is expected to take six weeks, with November 1 the likely date for occupancy.

Woodcraft Facilities

According to H. E. Cook, Special Services Crafts director, tentative plans call for a black-and-white photography laboratory. Other small creative crafts such as leather-work, model building and pottery's wheel may be added, if space permits.

Final determination of the equipment to be installed cannot be made until the building is completed and actual measurements can be made for workable arrangement.

Thirty-four teenagers became official Red Cross "volunteers," during a capping ceremony held at MOOM Supper Club recently.

Lieutenant Col. Willie V. Bailey, chief, nursing service, Martin Army Hospital, placed caps on the heads of 34 girls (three boys received pins but were not present). A luncheon, sponsored by the American Red Cross, was hosted by Mr. Donald A. Boyette, field director of the Red Cross here.

The Volunteers, made up of military dependents over 15 years of age, have all completed a special course given by the Red Cross volunteers, and will work throughout Martin Army Hospital and the post Dental Clinic.

Colonel Hal B. Jennings Jr., post surgeon, welcomed the Volunteers as part of the Army Medical Service serving as Army volunteers.

Thanks Volunteers

Colonel Charles F. Konze, post dental surgeon, thanked the volunteers for their participation, their willingness and their abilities, and commented on their aid in the success of the Dental Service.

Several Red Cross volunteers received awards for the past year, presented to them by Miss Ida R. Varn, Wilder.

Travel Fulfills Dreams For Mrs. McConaughy

Mrs. James McConaughy, wife of the post's Staff Judge Advocate, has lived a life that to all but a very few women could only be a magnificent dream.

After living in Eurasia, South America, Central America and Asia and traveling many times to Europe, she says that even as a girl of 14 in Pontiac, Mich., her one great desire was to have a job that would take her all over the world.

"That was before World War I, too," she points out, "when young people just didn't have the great opportunity to travel that they have today."

She started to work on her own as a secretary for the Army's Signal Corps in Panama. After working in Panama for two years, she worked in Washington, D. C., where, with her desire for learning, she persuaded her superiors to let her take a course in radio frequency allocation.

"I must have been a good pupil for in 1942 I was in Japan as a radio frequency allocation technician."

"Her job meant that she determined what frequencies were to be allocated for sending messages out of Tokyo, and in the Middle East.

Finally, they came to Fort Benning, the first Army post that they have actually lived on. She calls this new-found life on an Army post a wonderful experience.

Of course, being here does not slow down her zeal for doing things. She still loves to entertain. Their big day is always St. Patrick's Day. This year on St. Patrick's Day she invited guests and served such dishes as roast beef, smoked salmon, meat balls, stroganoff, dips, herzing salad, cheese rolls and vegetable salads. All these delicacies were prepared by Mrs. McConaughy. The success of a party she says depends on "planning."

Her hobby is cooking. She reads cookbooks like novels, and is always adding to her huge collection of cookbooks, of which the prized book is a 1911 edition of the White House Cookbook.

Curiosity Draws Athlete to Ballet

Specialist 6 Peter Barlett was co-captain of the Student Brigade football team in 1965, but this year, he spends his off duty time working out with Fort Benning's Ballet Company.

That is unusual for a soldier, but not too rare for an athlete. Barlett stands six feet, two inches tall and weighs 195 pounds. He has discovered what many coaches have already learned, that along with swimming, ballet is a superb discipline. To put it in his words, "I'm using muscles I didn't know I had."

Barlett does not limit his off-duty activities to dancing with Le Petit Ballet. Until a year ago, he worked backstage with both the Fort Benning and Columbus Little Theatre groups, doing everything from helping with stage props to working with spotlights. It was during this period that he met Terrell Faulk, director of the ballet company.

"I was a guest just three or four big parties a year. 'Big' parties meant buffet dinners for 120 or 150 people. Quite an undertaking. 'But my chief joy in life,' she explains, 'is entertaining.'"

After Brazil, they went again to Washington, D. C., and then went for two years to Ankara, Turkey. While they lived in Turkey, they frequently traveled in Europe, and in the Middle East.

Finally, they came to Fort Benning, the first Army post that they have actually lived on. She calls this new-found life on an Army post a wonderful experience.

Of course, being here does not slow down her zeal for doing things. She still loves to entertain. Their big day is always St. Patrick's Day. SAFETY CAMPAIGN ... The on-post phase of a Fort Benning-Columbus safety campaign in which safe drivers are rewarded recently got underway as William A. Lyman, president of National Bank of Fort Benning presents Col. H. W. Blackledge, provost marshal, a donation of ten $25 savings bonds. Andy J. Balwin, center, of the Safety Section observes the transaction. The donation will be used to redeem citations presented to unsafe drivers. In left photo, Mrs. Lawrence Murrell is pulled over by MP Sgt. Ulysses C. Jones and cited for outstanding safety measures he noted as he trailed her. The idea for the joint effort was generated in an exchange of letters between Columbus Mayor E. Ed Johnson and Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander.

Destin Offers Summer Fun for Benning Vacationers

By Mick Moriarty
Near the fishing town of Destin, Fla. USAIC Special Services operates a recreation area for the use of every one assigned to Fort Benning. Located on the East Pass, between the Choctawhatchee Bay and the Gulf of Mexico, the Destin Reef Camp is the heart of Florida's "Miracle Strip," midway between Pensacola and Panama City. The camp itself offers ten cabins, completely furnished, with electricity, running water and modern kitchen and bathroom facilities. Trailer and tent spaces, boats, snack bar and laundry facilities, fishing gear, picnic areas, children's play area and athletic equipment are also supplied by Special Services.

Air conditioning or fans, television, stove, refrigerator and all needed cooking utensils are provided in each cabin, which may be rented for as little as $3 per day per family. Each cabin is completely cleaned and ready for occupancy with the exception of linen and towels, when you arrive.

Across the waterfront of the recreation site is a 150-yard beach for the private use of camp visitors. The coastline shelf, which extends along most of the coast in the Gulf of Mexico, enables swimmers and waders to venture forty to fifty yards off shore in waist deep water. However, for the non-swimmer, Special Services has enclosed an area where they will be safe and within sight of persons on shore.

"All water safety rules will be strictly adhered to and the buddy system will be in force at all times," said M. Sgt. Thomas Barnett, the Recreation Area director. Destin has been called the "luckiest fishing village in the world." Billfish, sailfin tuna, dolphin, cobia and mahoe are for the taking in the depths of the Gulf. No license is required for salt water fishing. Pompano, mackerel and flounder are popular among the catch fish-men of the Destin pier. Fresh water streams and lakes are just minutes from the USAIC Recreation Area where a fisherman may try his favorite lure on perch, bass or bream. "Poling in that bottomed boat is a favorite sport among the local residents," said Mrs. Barbara Fryon of the Destin Chamber of Commerce. Sight-seers see the ruins of Fort Pickens and the old Spanish village or a replica of the Canton Trading Post, which stood on Pensacola Bay in the time of the American Revolution. At Ft. Walton, featuring Gold fish, turtles and trained porpoises, is the Museum of Sea and Indian. The visitor will here see the first submarine, the chambered Nautilus, or a killer whale, coral and over a hundred other exhibits.

The Air Force also extends Airbase privileges to the Fort Benning visitors at Destin. The Destin - Fort Walton Post Exchange and Commissary are accessible upon the presentation of a military identification card, as is the theater. Officers and NCO's may take advantage of the base clubs, providing that they show valid proof of membership in the Officer Club or NCO Club at Fort Benning.

Display Shows Two Sides Of U.S. Purpose in Vietnam

By Jane Daniels
Recently, faculty, students, employees and visitors in Infantry Hall have been gazing at each of the pictures on the revolving sides of the display. He sees an Army WAC playing ball with a small group of Vietnamese children, a mother holding a child to receive inoculations, a soldier's face at the center, and the center picture, and soldiers keeping a lonely vigil over a field. The observer thus becomes emotionally involved with the two-sided approach and purpose of Americans in Vietnam: the winning of a shooting battle and the winning of a social and economic battle. He also sees that American soldiers have long been a part of a battle for freedom. The "Spirit of '67" is the same spirit, a struggle for freedom, that Americans had in 1776.

The display is sponsored by The Infantry School's Brigade and Battalion Operations Department (BBOD) and the visual aids section of the school's Operations Office. Maj. James W. Bricker of BBOD planned the project and Clarence Scherbrick is the visual aids section supervisor of the construction. Colonel Ernest C. Dameron, deputy director of BBOD and chairman of the Win in Vietnam Committee, explains why it was built by saying, "We want to keep in front of everyone that our objectives are well founded; that we want everyone to understand that there's no substitute for fulfilling them; and that our objectives are not only of military nature but also and equally important, economic and social."

Brigadier Gen. James S. Timothay, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, approved the plan for the display. He says of the Win in Vietnam campaign and the "Spirit of '67," "The American Armed Forces as principle defender of the free world are today fighting in Vietnam to assist the people of that country in repelling Communist invaders. The Win in Vietnam program at The Infantry School is designed as a tribute to our soldiers fighting in Vietnam and as constant reminder to all equipped company new 1228 hours covering 34,898 passengers and 4236 cargo tons."

New Infantry Museum Officers Are Named

Trustees of the Infantry Museum Association Inc., formed to improve the present state of historical artifacts at Fort Benning and to provide a new home for them on the post, last Friday named Gen. Omar N. Bradley board chairman and James W. Woodruff Jr. president.

During a 10:30 a.m. meeting in Infantry Hall, the recently chartered organization's trustees also approved the nomination of Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, post commander, as first vice president; Lt. Gen. (ret.) Reuben Jenkins; secretary; W. Ford Pearce, treasurer; Capt. William L. Ashel, assistant secretary; and Col. Arthur J. Sutton, assistant treasurer.

FORMER COMMANDANTS . . . George E. Lynch who headed the school in 1958, Maj. Gen. Joseph H. Harper, 1954, Maj. Gen. (ret.) Fred L. Walker, 1944, and Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, who has served as commandant since July, 1965. From left are Maj. Gen. (ret.)

and Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, who takes command of Fort Benning today. The 14 trustees present for the meeting - approximately 50 are listed on the incorporation papers, first gathered in a conference room at the ball for introductory remarks by Gen. York and Woodruff. They later moved to another room nearby for the business meeting.

Worthy of Infantryman - Woodruff said, "It is certain each of you share my expectation that our efforts will result in a tribute that is worthy of the Infantryman we wish to honor."

Noting that the first such museum on post was established in 1952, Gen. York explained, "Though adequate, it remained the repository of the Infantry's historical relics until 1969, when Gen. Paul Freeman, who was then commandant, established our present museum."

"Since 1969 our collections have multiplied and interest in the history of the Infantry has increased," Gen. York said, adding, "This upsurge of public interest and concern provides us with an excellent opportunity to render long overdue honor to the U. S. Infantryman."

"Aware of the unique opportunity afforded by public concern and the recent and continuing heroic achievements of our soldiers in Vietnam, I resolved that prior to the termination of my command of Fort Benning efforts to create a new museum would be inaugurated," the general added. "To this end I approached Mr. J. W. Woodruff Jr., chairman of the military affairs committee of

Former Commandant Talks Of Infantry Museum Plans

One dream has come true and another is soon to materialize, a former Infantry School commandant said here last Friday as he discusses plans to build an adequate structure to house The Infantry Museum to be located at Fort Benning.

Major Gen. (ret.) Fred L. Walker who was commandant here in 1964, called the new academic building "my dream come true."

"I keep thinking back to the time when I first came here as an instructor in 1960," he said. "It wasn't until after World War I that the school really began to take on the character that it bears today. Up to that time, the school had been busy with the task of meeting the manpower requirements of the first World War. By 1920 we were getting organized to teach tactics and weaponry."

"There were only a few buildings on the post, most of which were former dairy structures that came with the purchase of the land," he continued. "I remember that one of the makeshift classrooms was used by Infantry students at night but doubled as an elementary school for military dependents in the daytime."

"I also remember that my wife worked very hard to try to improve that first little general school at Fort Benning," he said.

General Walker recalled his first look at Infantry Hall. "It was here for the dedication in May, 1964. I think it is just wonderful, this dream come true."

The major project before the recently chartered organization is raising funds to construct a permanent Infantry Museum building.

Army to Curtail 'Trophy' Mailing

The Army is joining hands with the Post Office Department and customs officials in an effort to halt the shipment of dangerous explosives from Vietnam.

Recently San Francisco customs officials reported finding countless explosives such as plastic explosives, claymore mines, complete with arming mechanisms, TNT, rifle grenades, flares and rockets with launchers.

Not only has there been a great danger to customs officials, postal workers, and (transport) passengers, but friends and relatives of the sender as well.

In an effort to curb the danger, the Army is ordering investigation, and disciplinary action in appropriate cases.

War Trophies

Many of the explosives have such as "war Trophies," or "dollar gift." Now postal and customs officials are being alerted to exercise their right to inspect packages and a broader program of (transport) parcels is going into effect.

Some of the explosives have been detected in both Hawaii and Alaska, with the bulk having been found in the San Francisco postal and customs facilities.

Authorized war trophies, not to include rifles and shotguns, may be mailed from Vietnam, if they meet requirements in the postal manual.

Accurate Description

Postal regulations require that the customs declaration shows a complete and accurate description of the contents.

The CID investigation will be forwarded overseas, if the subject remaining assigned to an overseas command.

A plea for cooperation is being issued, along with a promise of prosecution if the plea is not heeded.

At Martin Army Hospital

Emergency Room Is Well Equipped Reservists Say

Special To The Bayonet

The emergency room at Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital is the most frequent one than most in civilian hospitals; Army reserve doctors working there say.

The physicians' members of the 324th General Hospital reserve unit based in Coral Gables, Fla., are working in the emergency room as part of a two weeks' summer training. Captains Joseph O. Beauchamp and William H. Taylor like the equipment and space at Martin Army Hospital.

They are just two of four said, come lacerations, accidents and ailing military dependents.

Members of the 324th emergency room are Lt. Stephen M. Kuylen of Miami and Capt. Charles A. Dunn III of Coral Gables. The enlisted men of the emergency room are Sgt. Barry Kaabe of North Miami.

The 324th arrived at Fort Benning for its annual summer training July 2 and is scheduled to return to Miami tomorrow.

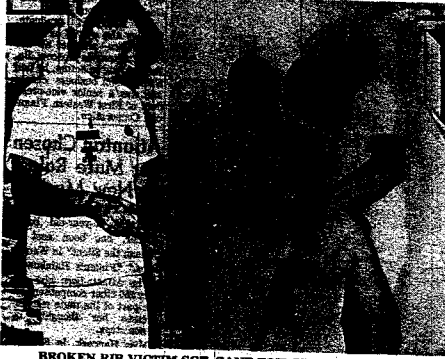

The unit drills at the Kendall Army on the University of Miami campus and is commanded by Col. Chauncey M. Stone, a Coral Gables doctor and assistant professor of clinical medicine at the University.

The emergency room at Martin Army Hospital is equipped with five treatment rooms, a respirator, electrocardiogram, wound stitching room and injury dressing area.

Other enlisted men in the emergency room are Spec. 8 George A. Moore Jr., both of Miami; PVT Anthony J. Lukas, Miramar, Fla., and Pvt. Barry Kaabe of North Miami.

Over 12,000 Cars Inspected

MPs Make Surprise Auto Search

A surprise auto search within the county or state and persons doing so are subject to military discipline.

The operation also brought confiscation of a variety of objects taken into at least temporary custody by military police.

The operation involved some 175 military policemen who scoured off all 18 known vehicular exits to the post for some 2 hours and 45 minutes, which began at 3:45 p.m.

Although purpose of the activity of searching and inspecting cars leaving the post was stressed as a safety check of vehicles, a number of articles including one M-14 rifle and several pistols and other firearms were taken from cars by MPs.

The rifle was released to the man it was issued to, who was found to be legitimately taking it off post to join his unit at another military installation.

The pistols which are registered to their owners, and any object of government-issue military equipment will be returned to owners who produce sales slips or receipts at the provost marshal's office.

It is against military regulations to carry personal weapons in cars on the post, even though they may be illegally owned and carried within the county or state.

Colonel W. H. Blackledge, Fort Benning provost marshal said such unannounced spot checks could happen at any time.

"We are sorry to have inconvenienced anyone," Col. Blackledge said of the activity.

MAP MAKING

The Corps of Engineers is developing 20,000 square mile test range in Arizona and New Mexico for DOD. To be used for evaluating automatic map making equipment. 300-by-300-mile range will include most of Arizona and a strip of western New Mexico.

324th work in two shifts at Martin's emergency room the first from 7 a.m. — 3 p.m. and the second from 3 — 11 p.m.

"We don't have any routine. If something needs to be done, we just do it," said one of them, Spec. 5 John R. Kelly of Miami.

Other enlisted men in the emergency room are Spec. 8 George A. Moore Jr., both of Miami; PVT Anthony J. Lukas, Miramar, Fla., and Pvt. Barry Kaabe of North Miami.

The Observer

Page 7—The Bayonet, Fort Benning, Ga., July 14, 1967

Professional sports, many people are prone to say, reached its "golden age" back in the 1920's. It has been almost half a century since that decade began, but this century has given us its giants still ring loud and clear, and exploits of those of us born in the '40s and '60s. Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey. These great sports heroes did help lay a large part of the foundation for spectator sport in America, but their day, the "Roaring Twenties," seems dwarfed alongside today's professional expansion.

There are, in America today, 91 professional teams operating in a national league of five spectator sports — baseball, football, basketball, soccer and hockey. Of these, 41 are in operation or scheduled to enter competition for the first time this year.

Expansion, of course, is slower in two of the big established three. No new teams in either professional baseball league or in the nine-team American Football League. New Orleans, the third Deep South city to get a pro football team, is the NFL's only new member.

Basketball is expanding elsewhere again. The professional NBA is expanding into new franchises on the Pacific, San Diego and Seattle. And the new 11-team American Basketball Association will open next season, with eight cities in Indiana and Kentucky, more evidence of the spread of the pros.

The National Hockey League, enjoying its highest-ever popularity, has doubled with new squads in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Minnesota, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

In soccer it's all new, with two leagues fielding 21 teams in 16 cities.

Never before have fans of professional sports had so many teams to choose from. It must also be putting a severe squeeze on the sports desks of the nation's newspapers. Tall, Atlanta, a relative newcomer to the ranks of pro sports cities. From only a Class AAA baseball team three years ago, Georgia's capital now has three members of national leagues: the baseball Braves, football Falcons and soccer Chiefs.

And the New Yorkers? No less than nine pro teams, a member in every league, every sport. California, too, has a wealth of professional athletes with three clubs in baseball, four in soccer. In football, five in basketball, two in hockey and four in soccer.

Playing in plush new stadia before a public is more interesting than ever, covered better by a bigger sports page and by the cameras of television, professional athletes are enjoying a heyday unequalled in the past.

Atlanta Driver Places First In Sports Car Slalom Event

Earl Moccia of Atlanta, driving a Porsche 1600, barreled the water off a rain-drenched track for the slalom event Sunday, to win the Chavaga Sports Car Club Slalom. He finished with a time of 58.4 seconds.

The rally, held at a shopping center parking lot near the traffic circle on Victory Drive, saw more than 50 entries from Columbus, Atlanta and Auburn compete for Chavaga trophies and slalom points.

Another Atlanta driver, Ken Kilbourne, who's improved Moccia's Porsche for the event, took second overall with a 1:11.4 and Jay Mangani of the Chavaga club tied for third in a Lotus Elan with a 1:07.7.

Fastest sedan, and tied for overall third, was Fred Hy-maker, also of Chavaga, who put his Mini Cooper S around the course in 2:08.7.

VUNG TAU Vietnam — The hour pitched hum and passing whine of the twin turboprop Mohawks of the Army's 73rd Av. Co. are familiar sounds to the residents of this coastal town. The sounds are with them all through the day and night as the company departs and returns from its round-the-clock photo surveillance missions in the southern half of the Republic.

Utilizing the Mohawk, a high performance aircraft crammed with sophisticated electronic sensors and cameras, the officers and men of the 73rd work on a 24-hour basis to locate and provide intelligence on an enemy that would otherwise be hard to detect. During the day flight teams of camera-equipped Mohawks range over the countryside performing low level visual photo reconnaissance in search of VC activity, areas of infiltration and troop buildup.

At night the surveillance continues as electronic sensor aircraft take to the air. A variety of information is obtained on these missions and each flight has the best-fit of the data previously collected.

The enemy constantly fears that a Hawk may appear overhead and detect them even on the darkest of nights. A routine movement by the patrol craft or rocket firing helicopters are likely to appear at any moment, directed to the point of interest by the 73rd aircraft flying quickly above.

The conditions for movement observation during day-techniques of surveillance in hours are even less favorable for the enemy as two aircraft flight teams roam their mission areas, noting changes in the landscape by low for signs of activity and photographing all suspect areas for later detailed analysis by the unit's imagery interpretation section.

"If personal credit is to be given," Miller said, "it must lie with the commanding officers of the 197th Inf. Bde. who have pushed the need for the facility, and with Col. Lownds, the deputy director of personnel, who figured out a way to build it."

The facility will serve about 5,000 men assigned to the 197th Bde, 59th Evacuation and Martin Army Hospital's Med. Co. who are quartered at Kelley Hill.

Other Special Services facilities already provided for the Kelley Hill area, which was occupied by the 197th Inf. Bde. in 1965, include: Hospital Library, a swimming pool, a gymnasium, and a service club and snack bar.

Also attending the groundbreaking to evidence 197th Inf. Bde. command support for the project were the commanders of several of the brigade's major units—Lt. Col. John J. ## ROTC Cadets Motivated To Stick With Program Motivation appears to have played an important role during the ROTC summer basic camp being held here according to statistics compiled by Army Training Center officials.

Since over half of the cadets taking the six-week course are paying their way through school a summer job is vital.

Any of the college students taking the program may leave if they want. However, few have chosen to do so.

Out of more than 1,800 men who entered four-weeks ago, less than four per cent have decided to withdraw.

With less than two per cent of the students having participated in active or reserve Army duty, the training is a new experience for most of them.

The level of education is not restricted to just the college ranks. Nineteen of the cadets graduated this spring from military high schools and one cadet, is slated to receive his doctorate in August.

Represented at the summer camp are not only all the "hot" areas in the country but also the Caribbean and overseas.

"The objective of the summer ROTC program is to qualify the students for the advanced ROTC course in their colleges," pointed out "lieutenant" in Kirk's War on Crime in Florida. He ran an unsuccessful race for Congress last November.

Governor's Aide

An Army reservist who works as a special aide to Florida Governor Claude Kirk in civilian life finds himself a different kind of aide at Fort Benning.

Specialist 4 Mike Thompson, a member of the 33rd General Hospital reserve unit in Coral Gables, Fla., is spending his two weeks' active duty in the Martin Army Hospital intensive care unit.

Thompson has worked as a "lieutenant" in Kirk's War on Crime in Florida. He ran an unsuccessful race for Congress last November.

"All accustomed to 'shots' of a different nature, some unaccustomed to firing a .45, the doctors are members of the 23rd General Hospital, USAF, based in Coral Gables, Fla. They and other members of the unit are helping to staff the wards and departments at Martin Army Hospital for two weeks.

The unit members left their duties at MAH to report to the firing range for qualification on small arms under the direction of Maj. Roy A. Diehl, who at age 35, is an 'old pro' in his own field.

Diehl this year was awarded the Army's Distinguished Badge after racking up more

AWS Marks Anniversary On 30th Year

This month marks the 30th anniversary of the USAF Air Weather Service, dating from transfer in 1937 of 40 weather stations, manned by 22 officers and 180 enlisted men, from the Army Signal Corps to the Army Air Corps.

In 1967, AWS is an organization of more than 11,000 officers, airmen and civilians, operating a global network of more than 400 weather stations. Its eight wings and 31 squadrons, 10 command and control squadrons provide round-the-clock labored weather support to U. S. Air Force and Army units at all echelons.

Local Squads
At Fort Benning, 10 of the 26th Weather Squadron provide each support to Lawson Army Aviation Command, 10th Avn. Grp., The Airborne School, Infantry Center, Army Training Center and other units located here as well as transient personnel. Its 21 personnel, commanded by 1st Lt. Frederick J. Howe, keep watch on the weather situation around-the-clock. The detachment issues weather warnings and outlooks by compiling data received from weather stations around the world.

Satellite Data
The Air Weather Service of 1967 receives and uses satellite data, secured since 1960 from an unbroken series of successful Tiros and Nimbus weather satellites. These satellites provide today's weathermen with a planet's-eye view of the earth's weather system, made even more readily available by many AWS direct-readout stations throughout the world.

Recognizing the importance of solar events to manned space flights, AWS has since 1961, operating a solar observing and forecasting network.

CAMERA ANGLES

By Lt. Marv Wolf
Strictly speaking, all exposures are time exposures; however, the term in general photography has come to mean exposures longer than one second.
In general, the only sure fire method of time exposure calculation is bracketing. Few meters can give an accurate reading when there is insufficient light for a normal exposure, and the few that can take no account of reciprocity failure.

Reciprocity failure, very briefly, is the inability of film to record exposure in a reciprocal manner during very short or very long exposures. Thus, a film which is exposed at, for example, 1-100 second f8, should record the identical amount of light at 1-200 f5.6, and so forth. But when the film gets into exposures several minutes long, this starts happening in a non-reciprocal manner. Most film manufacturers will supply, on request, a guide sheet to the reciprocity failure of their films, and these are usually good as a starting point.
To return to the business of time exposures, because there are so many variables, even after a certain amount of careful calculation, the only way to be sure about the result is to make several exposures at different times.
Buildings photographed at night by lengthy exposures, often become either over-exposed buildings with properly exposed lights or properly exposed buildings with underexposed lights. The solution is to take two pictures on one piece of film. The first exposure should be made just before sundown, when there is enough light to show the building itself. Then an hour or so later, another exposure for the lights. Of course, care must be taken not to change the position of the camera in any way.
Color films tend to give up their purity of color when unusually long exposures are made. Pictures, for example, tend to be greenish. This is not always desirable, and should be taken into account.
Sometimes open flash can be used once or more to fill

Vet Students Visit Hospital

The Veterinary Division of Martin Army Hospital was visited by a group of senior veterinary students from Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama Monday. The visit was conducted to show the students the role of veterinary medicine in the Army and to familiarize prospective veterinary officers with the functions of the Army Veterinary Officer.
Lieutenant Col. Daniel W. Hubbard, chief, Veterinary Division, welcomed the students to the post and Capt. Lloyd E. Johnson conducted the tour.
Accompanying the students were Dr. John E. Spaulding, public health instructor, Auburn University and Mrs. Spaulding.

Yesterday, Lt. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, the man who Maj. Gen. Robert H. York is replacing as commanding general of the XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Benning, arrived here to pin wings on his son who completed the airborne course this week.

Today, Maj. Gen. K. L. Reeves is scheduled to pay a visit to the post.

The basic features of the exchange as set forth in its origin in 1885 are as prevalent today as it was when started and that is—exchanges provide the military customer and their dependents with items of convenience and necessity and the exchange earnings continue to be shared with the military customer in the many welfare programs that are presently in existence.

Stagnant water attracts the yellow fever mosquito

A specialized team of the 77th Preventive Medicine Unit from Fort Benning, N. C., has completed a three week survey of actual and potential breeding sites of mosquitoes at Fort Benning. The yellow fever mosquito, Aedes aegypti, was again found here, although the percentage was reduced slightly from last year's findings.

Yellow fever is now a relatively rare disease, essentially restricted to tropical areas with low population densities. If the control of Aedes aegypti is relaxed, however, in a very brief period of time this disease can again occur in catastrophic epidemics.

The Aedes aegypti mosquito is indigenous to Africa and so is readily controlled through elimination of unnecessary artificial water containers. In a company letter and special leaflet mailed to all Post housing occupants prior to the survey team's arrival here, quarters residents were asked to periodically inspect outside premises and wooded areas adjacent to their quarters and discard or otherwise eliminate all unnecessary containers.

The cans and old tires must be destroyed. All Aedes aegypti collections outside one were found in either tin cans or old tires. If tires that are presently outdoors are still of value they must be stored indoors.

Plastic wading pools should be emptied weekly and stored indoors when not in use. All outside faucets should be checked for leaks and repaired if found faulty.

If the Aedes aegypti mosquito is to be eliminated from Fort Benning it will take combined efforts of the military and civilian contingents. Fort Benning personnel are urged to do everything possible to keep the population of the Aedes aegypti at a minimal level. To do this — GET RID OF STANDING WATER!

"...THE TYPEWRITER'S NOT THAT HEAVY!"

'The tired American'

The following are excerpts from a column by Alan Melnikoff, editor of the Rock County Herald, Laverne, Minn.

I am a tired American. I am tired of being called the ugly American.

I am tired of having the world's handbatterers use my country as a whipping boy 365 days a year.

I am a tired American—wary of having American embassies and information centers stoned, burned and sacked by mobs operating under orders from dictators who preach peace and breed conflict.

I am a tired American—wary of the beatniks who say they should have the laws of the land they are willing to obey.

I am a tired American—I am fed up with mobs of scabby-faced, long-haired youths and short-haired girls who claim they represent the "new wave" of America and who sneer at the old-fashioned virtues of honesty, integrity and morality on which America grew to greatness.

I am a tired American—who is tired of supporting families who have no known source of income other than government relief checks for three generations.

I am a tired American—who is getting madder by the minute at the fifth predators who have launched Americans in an obesity race who try to take on us the belief that fifth is an integral part of culture—in the arts, the movies, the literature, the stage.

I am a tired American—wary of the bearded bums who tramp the picket lines and the sit-ins—who prefer Chinese communism to capitalism—who see no evil in Castro, who sneer at President Johnson as a threat to peace.

I am a tired American—who has lost all patience with that civil rights group which is showing propaganda movies on college cam-

Letters for freedom

"It's up to every American to fight for the freedom we hold so dear. If we don't, the smells of free air could become dark and damp as in a prison cell."

This was written in a letter by Army private first class Hiram D. Strickland last year which won the George Washington Award from the Freedoms Foundation.

PFC Strickland never received the award. It was presented to his family because he was killed in Vietnam defending the freedom he held so dear.

This freedom for which so many have sacrificed their lives on the battlefields of the world is the basis for the 1967 Freedoms Foundation Awards Program. This year's subject is, "Freedom—My Heritage, My Responsibility."

Every serviceman and woman on active duty is eligible to submit as many entries as he may desire. Each entry may be in the form of a letter, essay or poem of not less than 100 nor more than 500 words in length. Entries must be sent to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa., 19481, prior to Nov. 1, 1967.

Members of the Armed Forces may also compete for the other Freedoms Foundation awards offered. Dependents of service members, who are not eligible for the Letter Awards Program, may compete for awards in other categories.

Additional information on the Freedoms Foundation Awards Program may be obtained by writing to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa., 19481.

The guidance package

Throughout history, when man had something important to say, a few words were all that was necessary to make a point.

The Ten Commandments were expressed in only 200 words; our Oath of Allegiance to the Flag in only 31. The American Code and the Declaration of Independence took only about 1300 words apiece.

Another important document in human dignity is so short that it fits on one side of a wallet card, the Code of Conduct, with only 247 words, is not always understood as it should be, for like many profound precepts it appears too simple.

Those who think of the Code only as a prisoner's guide do not realize that this creed sustains a soldier every minute he is in uniform.

"I will continue to resist by all means available," is the short, key phrase of the Code. This goes far and deep. The goal of holding out until your last bullet is

Studies show dog biscuits help reduce tooth decay

Recent studies, by the National Institute of Dental Research, have indicated that raisins can eat down plaque loaded with sugar and experience very little tooth decay, but humans who eat sugary goods are risking this disease.

The explanation lies in the combination of ingredients in the average dog biscuit. Unlike the cookies, they generally contain some source of added calcium phosphate, meat and crude molasses.

On the basis of these experiments, it is believed possible to formulate certain food combinations which amounts and types of food usually have relatively few decay-causing properties, even dog biscuits consistently produce fewer carious teeth than any other.

Financial fitness

You've been taking part in a "physical fitness" program for some time now and feel pretty good about it. Right? Then how about taking part in another program that will make both you and your savings account feel good. Call it the "financial fitness" program.

Americans are great ones for the use of clichés. When a serviceman meets a buddy and asks "what's doing?" he may get an answer like "don't take any wooden nickels." An empty answer. But if his pal says something like "save your money," he's giving just about the most friendly advice possible.

Benjamin Franklin once wrote in a letter that "nothing is certain but death and taxes." True enough. But there's nothing you can be more certain of than that ten per cent interest you receive in the new Overseas Savings Program which President Johnson put into effect. You don't have to use a slide rule or be a mathematician to know that for every dollar you get ten cents more, for every five, it's fifty cents more, for every ten, it's a dollar more, all part of the "financial fitness" program! While you're working for your country, make your dollar work for you. Look into the new Uniformed Services Savings Program and get into the habit of "saving the bean" every month.

Or, make it easy on yourself. Have your dollars deducted before you see them.

Honor Unit CO's Wife Is Homemaker, Teacher

BY JANE DANIELS

Pretty, young and charming Mrs. James B. Byrnes is one of Fort Benning's ladies who combines being a busy teacher with being an Army wife.

Since her husband, Capt. James B. Byrnes, is the commander of The Infantry Center's Honor Guard, Co. C, 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., she acts as a company commander's wife to her other duties as homemaker, teacher and wife.

The Byrnes' have been at Fort Benning two years. Since they first came here during the fall of 1965, she has taught the night grade at Faith School, the fourth and fifth grades at Edward A. White School and the fifth grade at McBride School. Last summer she also taught kindergarten.

"Teaching is quite demanding," she says, "but also very gratifying. My grandmother taught school for 50 years, my mother teaches and two aunts and my sister teach. I naturally had wanted to teach too, but I had no idea I would get involved and enjoy it as much as I do. Even now I'm wondering what my class will be like next year."

Manages Many Roles Asked about how she manages to assume so many roles at once, she says, "I just have to organize everything at home so that I can enjoy my family."

She does admit, however, to enjoying her summer vacation from school. The Byrnes' are planning a trip this month to their home state of Idaho, where they hope to enjoy some recreation in the state's parks. Mrs. Byrnes has also acquired a chest that she wants to refinish during the summer and is doing household jobs like painting shutters and working in the yard during her "holidays."

Home in Columbus Her home in Columbus, Ohio, green and shades of blue create a restful atmosphere inside her home. Warmth is added by the soft brown of Mediterranean furniture in pecan wood.

Here and there the rooms are accented by articles that her husband sent to her in his "surprise" packages from his stations in Vietnam and Germany. An ornate candlestick and a carved candle from Germany adorn a shelf in her dining room, and from Thailand are reproductions of a painting.

Meet While Freshmen The Byrnes' met while they were both freshmen at the University at Idaho. She was a candidate for the school's frosh queen. Her husband-to-be had been assigned on the "mascoting trail" for the round of social events for the contestants.

Mrs. Byrnes now laughs, "I didn't win the contest, but I did win Jim."

They were married during their junior year at college. One of their most memorable experiences during their time as students was the summer between their junior and senior years. Her husband was required to spend the summer in the mountain forests of Idaho as part of his major in forestry.

After school they became Army and, according to Mrs. Byrnes, have truly enjoyed it.

Mrs. Byrnes adds the extra touches to her house that make it a home and gives professionalism and a real dedication to her job as a teacher.

'Crazy Hats' Is Theme Of ATC Wives Meeting

Mrs. William Kurtines and Mrs. Walter Gettmill were prize winners at the Crazy Hat Luncheon held by wives of officers of the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry in the Main Officers' Club Corridor Room.

Mrs. Kurtines' hat, which featured pale pink tissue flowers, was selected as prettiest. Mrs. Gettmill's hat, fashioned from a huge basket brimming with vegetables, was chosen funniest.

Mrs. Charles M. Mount Jr., wife of the Training Center commanding general, presented the honored guests: Mrs. William P. Debrocke, whose husband is scheduled to assume command of the Training Center's 1st Bde. in September; Mrs. Robert Eaton, wife of the Director of Personnel of the U.S. Army Infantry Center; and Mrs. Samuel C. Event Honors Gen. and Mrs. R. York

In a tribute to Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert H. York, the staff and faculty of the Infantry Center and School gathered recently for a farewell coffee.

Brig. Gen. James S. Tinobly, assistant commander of the school, presented Gen. York with an Infantryman Statue desk set, inscribed with the names of the staff members.

Beneath the statuette was engraved the general's name and the dates of his service here, followed by "In recognition of his great achievement to advance and support the role of the Infantryman throughout the world and for significant contributions to the combat readiness of the U.S. Army." Gen. York expressed his appreciation for the support of the entire staff. "With all silver champagne cooler to the dedicated people represented here today, no commanding general could fail," Col. H. S. Cunningham, and how they are."

Graduating Candidates Told Of 'Life Insurance Program'

Fort Benning's Ranger Training was described Friday as a "Life Insurance Program for today's soldier." This was how Col. Irwin A. Edwards, director of the Ranger Department of the Infantry School described his Committee's offer to 179 graduates of an officer candidate class last Friday.

NEW POST CARDS

Thousands of the famous 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam have found new stationery. . . . Cation boxes are available for post cards, and they write on reverse side. Although conventional writing supplies are available, many prefer the boxing tops to send home as souvenirs.

In fighting a highly mobile, indigenous enemy as in Vietnam, the combat leader is forced to fight an ever-changing type of war that can be won only through successful application of the individual leadership. Col. Edwards told the new lieutenants that Ranger training provided an officer with the tools necessary to accomplish this mission.

The colonel stated in his address to the newly-commissioned lieutenants that the leadership problems of today are much more difficult than those encountered by combat leaders in World War II and in Korea. He indicated that today's leader was faced with immediate decisions of a much larger nature than those of his predecessors.

Honor and distinguished graduate of the 20th Co. (OO) was 2nd Lt. Marvin E. Runyon. Runyon, a former platoon sergeant, master parachutist, and recipient of a Purple Heart for injuries sustained in Vietnam, was also the company's top man in leadership ratings with a total of 98.8 per cent out of a possible 100. The final leadership rating is based on ratings made throughout the training cycle by the company commander, tactical officers, and fellow candidates. Distinguished academic graduate was 2nd Lt. Allen S. Kociak.

United offers you half-fare

-and more than half a chance.

When you're flying stand-by, your best choice is United Air Lines. We have more flights to more U.S. cities than any other airline. That means more seats for you. In fact, 90% get out on the first flight requested. Just show your DD Form 1580 or Military Leave Orders, and you fly at 1/2 of regular Coach fare. And you'll be seated anywhere a seat opens up, perhaps even in First Class. For only 1/2 of regular Coach fare, United will reserve a Coach seat for you. Men and women in United States uniform on active duty status, with DD Form 1580, are eligible. The fare also applies within seven days of discharge. Every flight's an extra care flight on United, the airline that flies more servicemen than any other.

"They did the out best!"

YAC Provides Recreation for Fort Benning Youth

By Pvt. Ken Deas
Youth Activities Club (YAC) was organized in 1954 here at Fort Benning under the name "Dads' Club."

Soon, however, it outgrew this name and selected the one it now bears.
The YAC program expanded rapidly to become the central agency for planning, coordinating and developing wholesome sports and recreational programs for children of active and retired personnel living on or near Fort Benning, and for children of civilians living on post.

Program Director
The primary goal of the organization is to develop and promote good citizenship, fellowship and sportsmanship in the youth of the Fort Benning community. This task is accomplished by well organized athletics and a Boy Scout program emphasizing the qualities which make useful citizens of young people.

Ben Ranieri, program director for YAC, said "making useful citizens of youth is an all-encompassing task. Our day-to-day job is to provide recreation and entertainment for youth on post. Through the program and its varied activities we guide children into roles as good citizens."

Challenging Work
Those who work as advisors, directors or coaches for YAC's varied work are challenged by their work and immensely rewarded for it, Ranieri said. "They sense the deep responsibility of guiding teens and young children into maturity through the varied and vigorous programs available."

From a little league baseball game to a teen hop, there is always the opportunity to watch the young people grow in personality and

Teens are decorated themselves. Every cent of its cost was provided by the earnings of young people who sold hot dogs at carnivals or ice cream on bicycles.
Teen Square is almost a self-sustaining organization. Ranieri said he looks forward to the day when Teen Square will be able to function without any outside donations. The kids are prouder of something they built themselves and can operate under their own power. It gives them a sense of achievement. This feeling of achievement and accomplishment is what immaturity, he continued. Less serious, but just as important, is the need for young people to enjoy recreation, get off steam, compete with each other and "fellowship" together. They like YAC because it's just plain fun."

Youth Activities Club
Youth Activities Club is more than a once-a-week get-together. It is an organization for all youth from ages 8-18. This includes Boy Scouts, Explorers, Brownies, Cub Scouts, baseball, football, basketball, swimming, fencing, bowling, archery, Junior National Rifle Association, boxing, tennis and golf. Some of the newest activities include a dog obedience course, driver training and typing classes.

Teen Square
For older teens there is Teen Square. Newly decorated, Teen Square is like home to many young people the summer. Inside there is a large, wood-paneled dance hall with a snack bar, and in other rooms there are pool and ping-pong tables. The teenagers can watch television or dance to the music from the juke box which plays continually.

Some young people use summer vacation time to earn money. YAC also handles an employment center for the kids.

Other facilities available are typing classes and driver training, both with qualified instructors.
Another program this year is the dog obedience training school. Teachers instruct not only the dog, but also the handler to perform together as a well-disciplined team. The program will also develop manners and willing obedience in your pet.
Also available for those who wish to develop special skills are typing classes and driver training, both with qualified instructors.

draws teenagers to Teen Square.
It is the purpose of YAC to organize, direct and advise young people in a program of recreational opportunities.

Post baseball is one-sided affair

By BILL WALLIS
Post Special Services

Well, the first half of the 1967 Fort Benning major unit baseball schedule is history, and I just want to say that it has been a pretty one-sided affair until now. The old 197th Inf. Bde. has had little to do except come to the field, warm up and then watch the girls go by out teams can seem to get up and give the 197th a real beating.

I came from a small town in the Midwest and baseball has been important in my life for many years. Believe me, nothing beats going out to the "old ball game" on a quiet summer night, dawdling a few beers and watching some pitcher try to beat a few of the opposing team's hitters while your favorite nine pounds that silly little white ball.

Usually, when good teams compete against each other for the glory of the old brigade, anything can happen, and usually does; but not at Fort Benning.

Now, somebody has got to have a talk with those umpires. The least they could do is call a few against the 197th and make a contest out of it. It is disgusting to come out to the ball park night after night and watch the 197th pound the stuffing out of everybody. Or better yet, maybe the 197th's Manager would get so mad, that he'd swing on some poor soul and really liveen things up a little.

I heard Billy Odum, the sports director of Special Services, talking to a buddy of his the other day about why attendance was so low at the games. "Here we have a beautiful park, refreshments at good prices, live sports free of charge plus a chance to let off steam by cheering on their favorite team, and yet very few soldiers come," Odum said. "Many of these boys have pre contracts."

With movies like "Man For All Seasons" playing right across the street, a rather lopsided contest in progress for the Fort Benning pennant, other activities on and off post and special events, what do you expect, Skip, miracles?

And speaking of off-post entertainment, the live shows that draw the Fort Benning soldier to the cities of Columbus and Phenix City at not so nominal prices, are a major deterrent to baseball attendance. Every evening these night spots and bars separate the Fort Benning soldier from his month's pay for the grand reward of a little fun, a rather large headache, the next morning and the possibility of detention by the local civilian authorities. If a soldier is caught in even a questionable state of drunkenness, he is held for his company which has no choice but to administer proper disciplinary action.

Now don't get me wrong; I am not against alcohol or drinking nor am I on a soap box in front of the 197th. No, but it bothers me to see the young, inexperienced soldier how his month's pay for nothing. Far better, the soldier should enjoy one of the various special services activities available at the craft shops, ball fields, libraries, theaters or other facilities, scattered about the Fort Benning installation.

Yep, the old national pastime is hurting at Fort Benning this year. Seems as though Sgt. Holbert, who supervises the Gowdy Field ground crew, called the MPs and the other night. Three MPs walked into the stadium thinking it was the Main Post craft shop. Holbert had not seen any spectators in the stands since the opening night of the season, and when the MPs came, he thought somebody was coming in to start a riot or something.

The second half of the season got underway last week with a 0-7 tally, is lead-

Scuba Techniques Taught By Post Skin-Diving Club

By PFC John Lewis

On Tuesday evenings at approximately 7 p.m., Capt. Robert C. Murphy collects his skin-diving gear, walks to the edge of Carey Pool, and without stopping to put this gear on, drops into the world of Lloyd Bridges. In reality Murphy is demonstrating a method of donning skin-diving equipment beneath the surface. Murphy, on the staff of the Company Operations Department and member of the Leadership Committee, spends much of his free time as the chief instructor of the Fort Benning Scuba Club.
The Scuba Club is not new to Fort Benning. It originated in 1959 and has continued on a year-round basis. During the winter, classes are held in the Brian Welsh Field House Pool, and in summer they move to Carey Pool, next to Service Club Hall. At the present time the acting club president is Lt. Col. Paul Gotowicki of the Mobility Department in the Infantry School. Gotowicki also serves as the club's advisor and is an active member of the club.
The course consists of five weekly sessions, and classes run concurrently. The level of instruction depends upon a student's past experience. Beginners are taught the techniques of skin-diving and must become skin-diving qualified before they actually begin scuba diving. The classes meet every Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Carey Pool. They are free of charge and are open to all in the Fort Benning community.

Those persons interested in joining or learning more about the Scuba Club should attend a meeting which will be held at Carey Pool on Tuesday, at 6:30 p.m. Persons who wish to learn the secrets of the deep should not despair. # The Observer

Those of you who frequent newstands as often as I do are familiar with the "specials" single-issue magazines marking an event or fad of more than usual interest. Examples would be the rash of colorful publications on the Kennedy Assassination and the doubters of its official explanation, the Iliad, the flying saucers, the "youthquake" and LSD. Then there are the annual specials, and all sports fans, particularly those who follow football, know these pre-season magazines.

At 59 to 75 cents a copy they present hundreds of photographs of last year's action, outstanding players and prominent coaches. The college sports publicity directors provide glowing reports of the local stalwarts and promising unknowns along with the glossy photographs. Up front you find predictions and regional rundowns by a smattering of sports editors, and the magazines wind up with schedules and the previous results and records.

Because of the eagerness of college—and professional—pr. departments to get maximum coverage, editorial expenses for these specials are rock-bottom. One of the best, according to Atlanta Journal columnist Paul Hemphill, get by for under $400. Hemphill ought to know. As sports publicity director down at Florida State several years ago he provided more than a fair amount of words and pictures on the Seminole to dozens of these publications.

These specials serve a good purpose, whetting the appetite for action long before the guns go off. And to enjoy the games ahead, the information within can be essential.

One thing, though. Superlatives and far-out predictions fly fast and furious in these magazines and shouldn't be taken seriously.

I'm looking forward to the year — and 1967 is not it—when the football teams of my favorite conference live up to a pledge they made back in 1964. A major provision of the Civil Rights Act of that year was that colleges and universities must not discriminate racially in academic, social and athletic areas. Every school in the Southeastern Conference pledged to do this, and there were those of us in the South who felt that the entry of a whole new segment of our population into the recruiting pools for our college football would raise to new heights the quality of the game in Dixie.

OC Was High Scorer On College Ball Team

Officer Candidate Morgan Evansville, 7th St. Bn. (OC) was one of Indiana's leading basketball players from 1963 to 1966. Evansville, who was graduated from Depauw University, Greencastle, Ind., in 1965 with a bachelors degree in history, is the highest scorer in the history of that university which goes back to 1857.

Everson's excellent record was based on his average of over 19 points and over 10 rebounds per game for the two seasons period from the fall of 1964 to the Spring of 1966. In his sophomore year, Everson was named "Most Competitive Athlete" at Depauw and kept up this aggressive attitude throughout his basketball career. All-American Team Everson, who stands six feet three inches tall, was further recognized for his basketball prowess in 1963 when he was given honorable mention on the honorary United Press International All-American Team.

During the same year, Everson toured the east with the Depauw team in competition with such famous teams as Army, Colgate, and Dartmouth in Erie, Penna. Gaining Everson's career, Depauw a member of the Intercollegiate Conference, played such teams as national...

Ceremony Held to Reopen Modernized Post Library

As one of his last official acts before leaving Fort Benning for his new assignment, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York cut the ribbon which signified the opening of the main branch post library last week.

The project, costing $105,000, took nearly a year to complete.

The library, which had moved into small quarters, came back to the newly decorated quarters in February, but furnishings were not installed until the past few days.

Library staff members worked almost until midnight last Wednesday to complete final preparations for the big event, which was attended by a number of librarians from other Third Army posts and by the Third Army staff librarian, Miss Annie Laurie Etchison.

Included in the remodeling program were new shelving, new furniture and new fixtures.

The library which was originally planned at a cost of $80,000, has now grown to an investment of over $400,000 and from an original capacity of 18,000 books to its present capacity of 50,000 volumes.

The library offers a music and conference room, and records, which are available for checkout. There is also a children's room with books and records for the younger visitor.

Other features of the library include a reference department with microfilm reading room, and newly-installed typing and study booths.

Joining Miss Harriett Pritchard, the director of the library, were other post librarians, R. D. Boyce, chief librarian for Fort Benning, Lt. Col. Roger Miller, Section Services Officer and Lt. Col. John G. Leonard, Deputy Director of Personnel.

Ribbon Cutting Officially Opens New Teen Square Swimming Pool

The new swimming pool at Fort Benning's Teen Square was officially opened by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, former commanding general of The Infantry Center, at a ribbon-cutting ceremony last week.

Introducing the general was Col. Richard J. O'Neill, president of the Board of Governors, Youth Activities Club.

He acknowledged Gen. York's efforts on behalf of the project and thanked him "for his personal interest, his guidance, and support. He really got the ball rolling fast."

Col. O'Neill also thanked the many people on post who contributed towards the pool, and for the youth who have demonstrated by their conduct and activities that they merit this gift.

At the poolside, Gen. York addressed the guests at the ceremony. He spoke about "a woman whose whole life is wrapped up in taking care of youth at Fort Benning," and named the pool "The Daisy Fraker Pool" in her honor.

Teenagers immediately nicknamed it "The Daisy Dip."

Inside-Teen Square, as refreshments were served, Gen. York was honored at the unveiling of his portrait presented to him by the Youth Activities Club. It illustrates in bits Gen. York's involvement in YAC. Painted by Spec. 4 Ronald D. Hohenbohlen, who is currently working on a project for Sgt. Maj. John P. Whitley at the NCO Academy, the portrait took two weeks to complete.

The General also thanked the teenagers for a gift watch presented to him by Mrs. Fraker.

Weapon's Dept. Director Addresses New Officers

One hundred and thirty-six graduates of the Infantry Officer Candidate School received their bars recently and were addressed by Col. William L. Koob Jr., director of the Weapons Department here.

"You will find that you have joined the biggest, happiest family in the world," said Col. Koob, and added, "You are entering a unique profession when you put on that gold bar because yours is the only profession that deals with the whole man."

Col. Koob explained that each officer would be responsible for every aspect of his men's lives—their spiritual, mental, physical, emotional and financial, to name just a few.

Col. Koob stressed the fact that "leadership in time of peace is an easy thing, but when you are out of ammo and gas, and short of men, leadership becomes difficult."

Qualities needed by a leader are simplicity, flexibility and professional efficiency, said Col. Koob.

Receiving congratulations were Honor and Distinguished Graduate 2nd Lt. Gordon MacPherson, Leadership and Distinguished Graduate 2nd Lt. James W. Allen and Academic and Distinguished Graduate 2nd Lt. Christopher B. Reid.

Commissions were awarded in seven branches including Infantry, Military Police, Adjutant General, Army Intelligence, Chemical, Finance and Civil Affairs. Infantry had the most commissions with 104.

CTC Commander Given Colors of 931st Engineers

By PFC Dennis Ray

Captain David B. Allison, CO, Hq. Co., 931st Engineer Gp., acting as a representative of the commander of the 931st, presented the colors of the unit to Col. Charles W. Davis, commander, CTC, at ceremonies conducted in Col. Davis' office last week.

Allison said that the 931st moved from Fort Campbell, because of expansion of the airborne facilities there, and Fort Benning has space available for them, and could better utilize the capabilities of the group.

There is nothing unusual about the commander of a major unit accepting the colors of a new unit under his command. Nor is much attention paid when a unit moves its authorized equipment.

No Manpower

But what happens when there is no one to carry the company's colors nor operate its equipment.

The unusual thing is that CTC now has a unit which available sources and by DA requests.

He added that the unit will be brought to strength and upon reaching the pre-designated level, will undergo a training program enabling them to carry out their assigned mission.

He also said that when the unit has completed training, they will be assigned a supporting role, within their engineering capacities, by US-AIC.

The 931st will be located in the Sand Hill area.

No completion date has been set for the personnel build up of the unit.

LONGEST COMA

The longest recorded period of human unconsciousness was that of Elaine Esposito (born Dec. 3, 1934) of Clearwater, Fla., who has never stirred since an appendectomy, when aged six, on Aug. 5, 1941.

In Vietnam, the United States is committed to a decent and limited purpose: to defeat aggression and to let the people of Vietnam decide its peace. Those who have died there, to those who have been wounded, to those who are fighting, to those who may fight, that we should help the people of South Vietnam see this through.

CAMERA ANGLES

By Lt. Marvin Wolf

One of the chronic problems we compulsive photographers face is where to keep the heaps and heaps of slides and prints that we somehow manage to accumulate.

Although much of what I shoot is edited out and thrown away, I still find myself with lots of material which I want to hang on to, even though I might not need it just yet.

A couple of solutions to the slide debacle: Make books out of the transparent sleeves of plastic that are available in most camera stores. These are rectangular pages, fitted with 20 pockets, one per two-mount, and three holes spaced to fit a standard three ring binder. They are inexpensive and since one side of each pocket is of frosted plastic, the whole page may be viewed at once just by holding it up to the light.

Another way out is to buy the small metal boxes with slots for slides, but use three slides into each slot.

Metal Boxes

Larger prints can be mounted with or without borders on heavy mount board, then the boards pierced and held together with string or wire threaded through the holes.

Post Officer Comes to Aid Of Traffic Accident Victim

By Spec. 5 David Chaffoo
The life of a teenage Columbus boy was possibly saved by the skill, knowledge, calmness and initiative shown by a Fort Benning officer recently.

Teachers Needed

The Russell County School System is in need of many teachers in various Secondary fields and in Elementary schools. If you are a college graduate and interested in a teaching position beginning September 1967, please contact Russell County Board of Education, Office of the Superintendent, Phenix City, Ala. in person or call the Office of the Superintendent at 298-8791 and ask for Mr. Wm. M. Burt, coordinator of Teacher Personnel.

That officer is 2nd Lt. Robert M. Weller, the weapons platoon leader of Co. D, 1st Bn., 205th Inf. of the 197th Inf. Bde. on Kelley Hill, Earost L. Meadows, 16, was struck by a car on Victory Drive while operating his motorcycle. He was flung through the air 26 feet and sustained several injuries, including a multiple fracture of the arm and internal bleeding.

Weller, a graduate of Infantry OCS here and the Combat Medic's course at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., was near the scene at the time of the accident and responded immediately to the emergency.

Weller attributes much of his knowledge in administering first aid to his Combat Medic training at Fort Sam Houston while still an enlistee. "I don't know if I was solely responsible for saving the boy's life. I know somebody had to help him, but I think I could have done some much without the experience I gained at Fort Sam."

Weller is presently planning a career in Army Aviation and is presently waiting for approval on his application for flight instructor. He and his wife, Carol Lynn, a native of Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, now reside at 41 Wilson Drive in Columbus, La. Weller is presently planning a career in Army Aviation and is presently waiting for approval on his application for flight instructor.

It is recalled that Johann Karl Thome, sexton of Ankerlberg, Germany, dug 23, 311 graves during a 30-year career. In 1826, his understudy dug his grave.

MEDCAP Team Makes Its First Water-borne Mission

DI-AN, Vietnam — 1st Inf. Div., doctors from Hq. and Co. A, 1st Medical Bn., have taken to the water to bring medical aid to the villagers of An Phu. The MEDCAP team, consisting of two doctors and medical assistants, recently made its first water-borne mission to the village of An Phu in the An Son area, about 12 miles north of Saigon.

Two Vietnamese women received training as nurses. The MEDCAP team treated 180 patients there in a single morning and provided 17 people with dental treatment. Perhaps most important of all, the hated and feared VC "tax collectors" have been routed.

The success of the RD program in An Phu was made possible by the 2nd Bn., 7th Regt. of the 5th ARVN Div. The battalion, working with U.S. Advisory Team 70, has virtually eliminated Viet Cong terrorism in the An Son area, according to Capt. E.D. Grause, the team commander for a new dispensary, while er-

'Instant NCO Course' to Begin Here in September

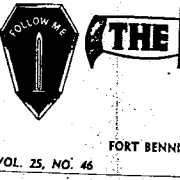

By Spec. 4 Larry Mahoney
A new type of training—the "Instant NCO candidates"—will appear on the Fort Benning scene this September, when the Infantry opens an ambitious 12-week course to produce thousands of fire team and rifle squad leaders prepared for possible Vietnam combat.

Patented after the officer candidate program but with major modifications to the new NCO course is scheduled to welcome its first men September 3. Class No. 1 will contain 200 soldiers, fresh from the Vietnam - oriented advanced Infantry training at posts like Forts Polk, Gordon and Dix. They will be the vanguard of 8,000 who will receive a course of 738 hours in 41 classes here this fiscal year.

Although referred to by various titles ranging from "Instant NCO Course" to "NCO Combat Leaders Course" the official title, at least at Fort Benning, is "NCO Candidate Course."

Branch - oriented, the "Instant NCO" school at the Home of the Infantry will be the largest of three such combat-arms courses for junior enlisted leaders. Fort Benning's school will turn out men with the MOS 11B40 (fire team and rifle squad leader).

Armor will run a similar school at Fort Knox, Ky., for tank gunners and commanders, and the Artillery is also planning this kind of training for its gunners at Fort Sill, Okla.

Commander Is Changed At 3rd Bde.

Col. Samuel C. Smith assumed command of the Army Training Center's Third Brigade from Col. William Hanks in change of command ceremonies in South Harmony Church last week.

Among the spectators at the field surrounded by the flags of the 50 states, were Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander; Lt. Col. Robert L. Reaves, director of individual instruction, Continental Army Command (CONARC), Fort Monroe, Va.; and Brig. Gen. Charles M. Mount Jr., commander of The Training Center.

Expressed appreciation in farewell remarks to the officers and men of the Third Brigade, Col. Hanks expressed his appreciation for making his post possible — turning out soldiers just a little bit better than any other.

Gen. Wright presented his donation to Col. Robert L. Eaton, Infantry Center's director of personnel and post-graduate training, available to deserving members of the Army family, both active and retired or their dependents, in recognition of their service.

ATC General Is Nominated For 2nd Star

Brig. Gen. Charles M. Mount Jr., commander of the U.S. Army Training Center at Fort Benning since August 1966, has been nominated for promotion to major general, a Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said President Lyndon B. Johnson sent Gen. Mount's name to the Senate for confirmation Monday afternoon to two-star rank, "and the general will get his second star when it turns around."

BATIAK Productions will be casting military personnel as extras in the John Wayne movie, "The Green Berets," to fill roles as American soldiers.

Interested persons may contact Al Murphy at Bldg. No. 5 - (Army Community Services Building) - Fort Benning tomorrow, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

NOTIFICATION PROGRAM IS PRAISED

By Pvt. Ken Deats
Letters of appreciation from Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus Vance, secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor and Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff, have been forwarded through channels, praising the outstanding way in which members of the military services are carrying out the notification and assistance programs. Many individuals at Fort Benning have been officers to perform the notification and the survivor assistance program.

Over-all staff responsibility for the program is held by the post adjutant general, Col. Leonard P. Ferna, and implemented and monitored at the Personnel Affairs Division.

When a soldier is killed, missing or captured, explained Col. McClarin, personal contact of dependents in the contact of dependents is made (by an officer usually a captain or higher ranking officer) directly involved in the notification and the survivor assistance program.

Outside the Fort Benning area, but still within the 31st Army Basic Training Center territory covered by Fort Benning's department, contact is made by either a qualified enlisted man or officer.

Soon after initial notification is made, a survivor assistance officer is sent to the dependents to assist in their needs.

Gen. Mount came here from Headquarters, U.S. Army Vietnam, where he served as deputy chief of staff. He had gone to Vietnam as assistant division commander of the 1st Inf. Div.

A native of Atlanta, he

A native of Arkansas, he entered the Army in 1943 at which time he was commissioned at Fort Benning from Officers Candidate School.

War Action

In World War II Col. Smith saw action in the European Theater of Operations during the Normandy invasion with the 8th Inf. Reg. of the 4th Inf. Div. In Korea he served with the 21st Inf. Reg. of the 24th Inf. Div.

Other overseas assignments have taken Col. Smith to Alaska, Japan, Germany, France and Pakistan.

Holder of a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Maryland, Col. Smith has been graduated from the Christian Staff College and the U. S. Army Strategic Intelligence School.

He has been awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Combat Infantryman Badge with Star.

making necessary funeral arrangements and to aid in financial problems exist. He is available for as long as it takes to complete these arrangements.

Since inception of the personal notification system on March 15, 1966, Fort Benning has handled 241 missions. At the same time it has served 352 survivors as assistance missions. Col. McLaurin explained that this seeming discrepancy is caused by the fact that every death, including those of retired persons whose dependents need no notification, is included in the survivor assistance program.

The commanding general reported highly pleased with the manner in which these sensitive programs have been carried out at Fort Benning, and has expressed his personal appreciation to all commanders and individual officers and

He and his wife, the former Mildred Louise Collins of Montgomery, Ala., were married in Columbus, and their first son, Charles III, 27, now a student in Washington, D.C., was born here.

They have two other children, Linda 29, and William, 14.

Gen. Mount served on the staff of the Supreme Commander Allied Expeditionary Force in Europe in World War II.

In the Korean war, he commanded the 2nd Inf. Regimental Combat Team. He graduated from the Army War College in 1964, and was assigned to staff and faculty of the Command and General Staff College where he served until his appointment as chief of staff of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1966.

Awards for Heroism Are Presented To General's Son and Two Noncoms

Capt. Thomas H. Taylor, a West Point graduate and son of retired Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, received the Bronze Star Medal for valor and the First Oak Leaf Cluster recently.

The awards were presented to Taylor by Brig. Gen. James S. Timothy, assistant commander of the Infantry School, for his heroic actions on February 6, 1966 and on March 26, 1966.

On both occasions, Taylor endangered his life to protect his men, directed assaults on the Viet Cong and brought wounded men to safety.

During an encounter, while serving as company commander in Cain Tinh, Vietnam, he flew an unarmed helicopter over the enemy in order to survey their position. Through his efforts the Viet Cong force was routed.

In Tuy Hoa, Vietnam, on a search and destroy mission, Taylor's unit discovered a Viet Cong tunnel complex in the mountainous jungle. He directed his unit to sweep all routes of escape, trapping the enemy.

The tunnel complex was destroyed along with a whole platoon of Viet Cong defenders. Commissioned in June, 1960, he has served in Germany with the 24th Div., 10th Signal Forces and with the 4th Inf. Div., Fort Lewis, Wash.

Acting in a split-second, SGT. MANUS dove into the trench, grabbed the grenade and buried it out. The grenade exploded an instant later and the Bronze Star Medal for bravery to Sgt. Eugene J. Middleton at a ceremony attended by 600 airborne students.

While Manus was serving as Range Safety NCO, he saved the lives of two soldiers when a trainee pulled the pin of a hand grenade, wounded him in the chest and dropped the live hand bomb between himself and another person.

NCO Wives' President Loves Meeting People

By Jane Daniels
'I would have to say that people are my hobby,' Mrs. Roscoe Mansfield, the new president of the Non-commissioned Officers' Wives' Club, says.

MRS. R. MANSFIELD Avid Bridge Player

Following refreshments, a brief business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Jack L. Treadwell.

Honored guests were Mrs. William Shambora and Miss Arlene Pitts.

Newcomers welcomed to the brigade were Mrs. Coedice Sampson, Mrs. Elden Reid, Mrs. Jack Tapp, Mrs. David Pollack, Mrs. John A. Biedron, Mrs. Stephen A. Rominsky Jr., Mrs. John T. Kociba, Mrs. Dennis M. D. Dr. Stuber, Mrs. Dennis M. Dalton, Mrs. Ray G. Hatmaker, Mrs. George A. Buta and Mrs. Robert J. Hood.

THE HOME of Mrs. Jack L. Treadwell was the scene recently of the monthly coffee for the ladies of Headquarters, 197th Inf. Bde. Co-hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Gerald O. Cooney and Mrs. Jack L. Treadwell.

The guest of honor was Mrs. Charles F. Reichardt, whose husband will soon be leaving the brigade. The lady of the house presented Mrs. Reichardt with a silver candelstick.

New members who were welcomed were Mrs. Bill [unclear], Bldg. No. 5, for assistant.

Now, as the president of the NCO Wives' Club, she holds a job in each meeting of people is but a small part of her many duties. There is something for her to do every day but she is no way complains as she says, 'I'm enjoying every minute of it.'

and a closeness with the German people. In Germany, too, she was the secretary of the NCO Wives' Club, and was a member of both the International Conference of American Women's Activities in Berchtesgaden, Germany, and the American Women's Activities, Germany, in Garmisch.

At Opp, Ala., they were the only "Army" in the town during their three years there.

Returned to Florida During her husband's assignment in Vietnam she and their two children, Vickie, now 8, and Rocky, now 10, went back to Lake City, Fla. Trying to keep the time during that long year, she started playing golf and bridge.

She is still an avid bridge player although now golf has somehow gotten left out of her schedule. Last fall, she was also the captain of the cheerleaders for Fort Benning's Tiger Team, a little league football team.

Another of Mrs. Mansfield's hobbies is antiques. She and her husband have refurnished a beautiful library table, a wash stand, and a schoolmaster's desk, and have collected a small salt crock, a small chest, and antique reading glasses.

One day she hopes to put all these lovely things in her own house. Until then she enjoys making each and every place a lovely home for her family.

First Station Their first station was Fort Ord, Calif. Since then they have also been in Fort Benning, Augsburg, Germany, Munich, Germany, and Opp, Ala.

One of her most interesting experiences was in Augsburg, Germany. While the family was waiting there to get quarters at their next station in Munich, the Mansfields lived with a German family, who could not speak English.

Subjects in the AH-56A course included mission, tactical operating procedures, systems, armament, fire control, computer central control, flight characteristics, and the test and production program. Guest speaker at the ceremony was Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department here. He advised the young officers to "be adventurous in spirit" and urged them to take "fear which conquers a man's fear and prepares him for combat."

Referring to the culmination of 22 weeks of intensive training Col. Welch said, "I know that for each of you this is a proud and happy day. If you've made it this far, I know you can go on."

Fifty Students Accepted In New College Program

Fifty students will be accepted by Columbus College in the new developmental education program to be inaugurated in the fall quarter.

College officials said this program is designed for students who have the potential to pass regular college work but whose academic records do not justify their being admitted to programs leading to a bachelor's degree.

Dean John Anderson said that students in the developmental program showing promise of success in regular college work can be moved into a program leading to the baccalaureate degree.

Miss Barbara Schultkus, one of the new faculty members recently employed by the College who is a specialist in counseling, will be responsible for advising students enrolled in the developmental program.

"We are purposely limiting enrollment in this program to ensure a low teacher-pupil ratio and to be certain Miss Schultkus and other faculty will be able to give individual attention to these students," Dean Anderson said. He also stressed that their status on campus will be the same as other students. "They will not be identified as special students," he said.

NINETEEN NEW FACULTY appointments at Columbus College have been announced by Dean John E. Anderson. The Language-Humanities Division, headed by Dr. Jack A. Brown, will gain seven new instructors, and the recently organized Department of Nursing, under Miss Helen T. Millan, will have four new appointments.

Five Generations of Cadets

Benning Colonel Presents Uniforms to Post Museum

Five generations of U.S. Military Academy cadets were represented at a ceremony at the Post Museum at Fort Benning last Friday. An Indian fighter, a veteran of the Spanish American War, and soldiers of World War I, World War II and Vietnam were all among the ranks of a proud heritage as Col. James I. Muir Jr. presented his own cadet dress uniform and those of his great-grandfather, grandfather, father and son to the museum. Col. Muir's great-grandfather, Clarence E. Bennett, of the Class of 1855 fought in the Civil War, served in the Indian Campaigns in the Dakota Territory and helped establish Camp McDowell, Ariz. Class of 1885 veteran of World War I, Henry Muir, of the Class of 1910, commanded the 4th Infantry during World War II. Muir's father, James I. Muir, of the Class of 1916, commanded the 4th Infantry during World War II and was the commander of the XXIII Corps during World War I. Muir Jr. presently is president of the Infantry Board, graduated with the Class of 1959, served with Merrill's Marauders in the China-India-Burma Theater during World War II and is a veteran of Vietnam.

CHINOOKS PASS 100,000 HOUR MARK

U. S. Army CH-47 Chinook helicopters operating in Vietnam passed the 100,000 flight hour mark last week. This major milestone in the Boeing Chinook helicopter program was achieved only 22 months after Chinooks were first deployed to Vietnam. In accumulating 100,000 flight hours, Chinooks flew more than 268,000 sorties. On these, they transported 750,000 troops and passengers and carried more than 681,000 tons of cargo and ammunition. Using its external cargo hook, the Chinook also retrieved helicopter and fixed-wing downed aircraft valued at more than $375,000,000. In addition to aircraft recovery, another major mission of the Chinook is transporting 165mm and 4.2 inch mortar and gun crews. Boeing Chinooks first went into service with the U. S. Army in April, 1963. Flight time for the entire Chinook helicopter fleet exceeds 177,000 hours. To date, more than 378 Chinooks have been delivered to the U. S. Army by Boeing's Vertol Division.

147TH AVN. CO. CHINOOK LIFTS OFF IN VIETNAM Sling-Loaded Howitzer Underneath

Recent Returnee
His son, Capt. James I. Muir III, of the Class of 1964, recently returned from Vietnam and is now an instructor in the Leadership Committee of the Infantry School's Company Operations Department.
Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, in accepting the uniforms for the museum, said, "Anyone would be inspired by this family who have a tradition of service from the Civil War through Vietnam."
The uniforms became part of the Muir family tradition when James I. Muir presented the uniforms to Mrs. James I. Muir Jr., for her son James III. Col. Muir's other son Charles Henry (" Hank") Muir who will be in the ninth grade this fall, says that he's undecided about whether or not he would also like to attend the academy.

Signs Used to Remind Post Drivers of Safety

Drivers entering or leaving post have been provided with catchy, safe-driving reminders of the Safety Office.

The Safety Office maintains several signs around post which display rhymes and jingles designed to catch the driver's attention for a second and make him think.

"We want to keep the idea of safety in front of the driver," said William D. Harrison, Safety Officer, "and the rhymes are easy to remember and make the message stick in the mind."

W. D. HARRISON, SAFETY OFFICER, Signs Great Reminder of Post Habits

There are six signs located at the main entrances — four with two sides. Since March, when they were installed, the messages have been changed about once a week. The messages are mostly about safety but occasionally the signs are used for other purposes such as savings bond drives.

Recently, the signs' messages had forwarded to Gen. Robert T. Foy and welcomed Gen. John M. Wright upon his return to the post.

At times the company has supported as many as 100,000 troops. It has served in direct support of every major combat operation in Vietnam since its arrival here in late November 1965.

"Our detachments exert a positive influence on the morale of all the units we support," asserted Lt. Alan J. Senter, commanding officer of the 483rd.

The 483rd supports elements of the 1st, 2nd and 25th Inf. Divisions; the 19th Light Inf. Bde. and the 11th Armored Cav. Regt.

TO: All Military Personnel of Fort Benning, Georgia

I wish to give my personal endorsement to the forthcoming 1967 Joint Annual Fund Campaign of the Army Relief Society and the Army Relief Society and to ask each of you to contribute the maximum amount of your pay commensurate with the least possible burden of hardship to you or your family.

I consider the Army Emergency Relief an essential instrument to sustain morale. Soldiers are ever subject to various types of emergency situations or conditions. Many of these are results of the requirements of the Service and create hardship or distress beyond the financial resources immediately available to the soldier or his family.

Your voluntary contributions make you active partners of the members of the Army Family during financial emergencies. The fact that Army Emergency Relief made available a total of $256,000 in aid to members of this post during the past year is directly attributable to the personal interest shown by each of you and the support you have given campaigns in the past.

Your continued support, your interest and cooperation will assist me in upholding one of the finest traditions of the U. S. Army.

Hospital Unit Arrives Here For Training

The 3273rd U. S. Army Hospital of Greenville, S. C., an Army Reserve Unit for men and women, is now encamped for two weeks annual active duty training at Martin Army Hospital.

The 3273rd is performing in its assigned mission, that of augmentation for a 300-bed general hospital.

The unit is staffed largely by teachers and businessmen. They train on the job in medical skills and learn the operations of the latest specializations of equipment and techniques. After active duty, the unit trains on weekends at the Greenville General Hospital. They also receive classroom instruction.

Col. Charles E. Yeargin, commander of the 3273rd, pointed out that his unit is training in practically every branch of Martin Army Hospital. "We're providing service to the hospital," he said.

Training Class Remedies Unsafe Driving Practices

Each Monday, the Safety Office begins a new remedial driver training class attempting to drive home the fine points of safe motor vehicle operations.

Taught in co-operation with the Provost Marshal, the course is primarily administered to drivers who have received six or more points from traffic violations here.

Drivers receive two hours of safe-driving instruction each Monday through Thursday, and upon completion of the course, are awarded a certificate by their company commanders.

SFC Gabriel W. Sackerman of the post Safety Office, teaches the class in Bldg. 35 from 7:30 p.m. Sackerman has been instructing an average of 25-28 students per week for over a year.

The course is designed to teach good defensive driving techniques. "We want to make our students good show-off drivers," he said, "not the kind who spin tires and take corners on two wheels. We want the kind who drive in a smooth, safe manner to set a good example."

"In a short time," Sackerman said, "we are trying to make better drivers on Fort Benning and make the road safer for all of us."

Visual aids are used extensively to make the course more interesting. Pamphlets, training aids, memory charts and many films are used to illustrate safe-driving points.

"About 50 per cent of the class is in the form of visual aids," he said.

Sackerman tries to create a relaxed atmosphere in his classes, encouraging individual participation. "I like for my classes to think that they are getting the opinion of the majority, not just mine or the text books," he said.

Andrew J. Baldwin, director of safety, said although the course has been directed toward improving substandard performance, volunteers are encouraged to attend the classes. He feels the class members obtain a greater appreciation of the power of the motor vehicle and a better knowledge of the limitations of the driver.

Although there is no accurate way of recording exactly how the course affects the driver, Baldwin said that graduates of the course are involved in very few accidents. The course is in its eleventh year at Fort Benning.

After a student has been accepted by the college, a record of physical examination must be submitted prior to registration in the Fort Benning classes, scheduled for September 21-22. The college also provides the physical examination form.

Candidates for the Associate Degree Nursing Program and the Developmental Education Program should observe the deadline established for other prospective students. Twichell said, "These are new programs that are being offered for the first time this fall."

Spanish Services An invitation is extended to all Spanish-speaking people of Fort Benning and the Columbus area by the Christian Mission of Fort Benning. Spanish services are held each Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in room 2211, Dietter Road. Services are also held on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Benning Park Baptist Church.

Reverend A. J. Silva, from Atlanta, will conduct the service to the hospital," he said.

New Lieutenants Are Told 'There Can Be No Compromise in Battle'

Newly commissioned second lieutenants of the Army (OC), listened last Friday at Col. Warren B. Phillips, Infantry Center director of Logistics, advised them on their Army careers and especially their tour in Vietnam.

Col. Phillips, outlined some of the basic qualities to be found in a good officer. He said that an officer must be a good person, a good leader, and a good soldier.

"If we have taught you anything in OCS it is self-reliance," he said, referring to the "problem-solving method" so familiar to officer candidates. "Make a quick estimate of the situation — then take action," he said.

Wide Enlists After Husbands Death 'I Know I Have Done Right'

FORT MCLELLAN, Ala. (AP) — "I know I have done the right and best thing for me."

Misty-eyed Pvt. LaVon Cummings expressed her feelings this way as she accepted the Purple Heart awarded posthumously to her husband who was killed in Vietnam.

At the same time she was named Outstanding Trainee deservier just a week after her husband of less than a year, Sgt. James B. Cummings Jr., was killed.

"After his death I realized I couldn't give up being part of the military family."

She met her husband in her hometown, Tacoma, Wash., last year when he was stationed at nearby Fort Lewis. They were married July 2, 1966, and he left for Vietnam 19 days later.

'Surprised' Soldier Cited With Safe Driving Award

By PFC Dennis Ray When Spec. 4 James F. Jones, Co. C, 1st BN, Center Troop Command, was stopped by an MP car recently, he "couldn't think of anything he had done."

He was relieved to find that instead of getting a ticket, he had been nominated for the Safe Driving Award offered by the Provost Marshal's office, in cooperation with the Post Safety Section and the National Bank of Fort Benning.

Jones was selected as the top nominee, and was presented with a twenty-dollar Savings Bond by Col. H. W. Blackledge, Provost Marshal, last week.

MP's Instructed M.Sgt. Willie H. Griffiths, Operations Sergeant, PMO, said that all MPs on post were instructed to select weekly, at their own discretion, drivers they have observed who have displayed safe driving habits.

The names and a brief resume of their safe driving habits, are then turned into the PMO where the nominee's records are screened to see if they are eligible. A ticket for a moving violation on post will automatically disqualify the nominee.

Winner Chosen The winner of the bond is picked by a board made up of representatives from PMO, Post Safety Section and The National Bank of Fort Benning.

When asked how the nominee for the award were selected from the many drivers on post, Griffiths said that "a good driver is not hard to spot because his safe driving habits make him "stand out" especially in heavy traffic.

He added that the MPs "are very much in favor of the safe driving program and have noticed better driving practices since it went into effect."

"I think the program is very effective and will have more effect as the public learns more about the program and its benefits," he said.

He explained that in the on-post phase of this program, a joint effort between Fort Benning and the Columbus area, any military person or dependents or civilian employees are eligible to receive the award.

As for Jones' feelings, "I think receiving this award will serve to remind me to drive better in the future," he said.

Cast Zips Through Hospital Scene in Zipper Casts

HOLLYWOOD — Plaster-Bronson similar damage to casts fitted with full-length zipper inserts, an idea that started on a movie set to save time between shots, may become the basis for a revolutionary new approach to mending fractured limbs.

The movie is MGM's hit adventure drama, "The Dirty Dozen" starring Lee Marvin, Ernest Borgnine, Jim Brown and nine other major actors.

One scene from the film shows Marvin and Charles Bronson hospitalized after the dangerous mission behind enemy lines. Marvin sports a multiple fracture of the arm.

through September 9. The announcement was made re-ferred being sent to an orphanage by the Film Producers Association of Great Britain.

Martin Ransohoff is executive producer of the film, which stars Dirk Bogarde.

The idea, which he claims came to him while zipping his wife into an evening dress, provoked considerable interest among the studio medical staff, who see possibilities for similarly designed casts when used on the real thing.

LONDON—Jack Clayton's film, "Our Mother's House," a Filways presentation for MGM release, has been selected for the official British entry at the Venice Film Festival, to be held from August 1 through September 9.

Special Services Music Director Theodore Gargallo has announced that the monthly entertainment contest will be held tomorrow evening at the Sand Hill Service Club at 7:30 p.m.

Judges for this month's contest will include: Chaplin Lt. Col. Dale D. Burton, post Chaplin's Office, Mrs. Truman Johnson, secretary to the chief of 3rd Army field printing plant and Mrs. Myrtle Lawton, noted organist and wife of director Reginald Lawton who is currently directing rehearsals for the forthcoming USAIC Special Services production of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

The top three contestants will receive $20 each. Although entries are closed for this month's contest, Gargallo extended an invitation to all military personnel to enter next month, through their local service club.

HI, DAD . . . Normally when a general steps up to a man in uniform, the officer is greeted by a sharp snap to attention, receives a salute, and is addressed as "sir." But it was a different story last week when a three-star general met a young Air Force student who had just made the last of five jumps needed to win his wings. In addition to a "Good morning, sir" and the customary salute, it was "Hi, Dad," and a warm handshake. The proud father was Lt. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, soon to be commander of the Third Army, and now the head of the XVIII Airborne Corps. He had flown to Fort Benning to pin the parachutist badge on his son, John Jr., a West Point cadet who was completing jump school during his summer leave.

4 Infantry Platoons Receive Diplomas At Scout Dog Graduation Exercises

Four Infantry platoons marked their completion of scout dog training with graduation exercises at President John F. Kennedy Plaza, Kelley Hill, last Friday.

The 16 graduates were given diplomas by the deputy commander of the 197th Inf. Bde., Lt. Col. Charles E. Pritchard. Selected honor graduates for their superior achievement during the 12-week training program were Pfc. Jimmy G. Rogers, 40th Inf. Plt.; Spec. 4 Daniel P. Harvey Jr., 42nd Inf. Plt.; Spec. 3 Bobby D. Crawford, 43rd Inf. Plt.; and Pfc. David S. Thomas, 45th Inf. Plt.

Pritchard congratulated the group on its completion of the schooling and pointed out the uniqueness of the scout dog program. "This course is not made up out of a field manual," he said, referring to the relative newness of the current scout dog training program, and its flexibility and reliance on reports from the field where former graduates are now applying the techniques learned here.

All Army and Marine Corps scout dog training is conducted here under the administration of the 197th Inf. Bde.'s Scout Dog Training Detachment, aided by the 26th and 32d Inf. Plts. The course of instruction includes basic obedience drills, day and night patroling techniques and waterborne exercises.

The Observer

by Larry Mahoney

The splash seems to have subsided to less than a ripple, and professional soccer in this country now appears in danger of sinking out of sight. One of the year's real sports events was the establishment of two national leagues to bring to Americans the games that probably commands more international loyalty than any other. It may be a case of overkill, too much too soon, because public interest is now apparent despite a masterful show of p.r., a favorable press and prime network time.

Before this year, soccer in America was restricted to a smattering of colleges, mostly in the East, and ethnic teams like the Philadelphia Ukrainian Nationals and the Rochester Italian-Americans. Worldwide, however, the sport reached something of an apex in 1966. A euphoria unknown since the KAP ripped the Luftwaffe seized Briton when the Brazilians first world cup (this one, too, from the Germans). It was a good year for the Brazilians, the Hungarians, the North Koreans and the Portuguese. And the U. S. ? Well, this exhibition match between Santos, Brazil, and Milan, Italy, in Yankee Stadium of all places and you paid to see it.

There you have it. An ambitious group of Britons sold some U. S. financiers on soccer. A 10-team league, the National Professional Soccer League, came on strong, importing hundreds of classy players from Europe and Latin America and storming the sports pages with brass optimism. The NFLS had everything but official sanction from the worldwide soccer governing body. Another soccer association entered approval, and the United States Association entered the picture with 11 teams. Five of them—San Francisco, Chicago, Los Angeles, Toronto and New York—faced ticket competition from rival NFLS teams in the same city.

Now there is talk of merger. Still masterly at p.r., the first hints of it used the euphemism "consolidation." This growth would reduce the present 22 to 18 teams. Even if merger would help the ailing leagues, there is little real chance that the bitter differences between the two leagues can be smoothed. Speaking in an official of the USA: "Our people aren't anxious to merge. Our league has the sanction of the FIFA, the worldwide soccer governing body, so we have the star players. The NFLS is crawling. They know the players they have are inferior. The merger would spread available talent too thin. Why would we want to dilute our product?"

Likewise, the other side is none too friendly either. The NFLS denies any interest, but it was from their quarters that the first murmurings of an alliance came. While all this is going on, gate receipts continue to slip drastically. To break even, a team in New York needs to average 14,000 attendees per game. An optimistic tabulator could get no higher than an average of 3,800 at the NFLS General's games. The USA's Skyliners have been drawing an average 5,000 all season. Together, they have got only little more than half the needed numbers.

So, plainly, there is a good deal of soul-searching in American soccer and much to come. Most of the teams appear to be deeply in the red. Is the whole scheme about to go under? From here, that seems a distinct possibility. And an unfortunate one.

Since this is a military newspaper and because soccer may bore you, here's a softball story of some oddity. It concerns our sister service, Air Force, and a world record of sorts recorded in the red. Is the whole scheme about to go under? From here, that seems a distinct possibility. And an unfortunate one.

608th Ord. Keglers First In 16th Gen. Spt. Bowling

The 608th Ord. Co. Keglers played Walty Rouden Hq. Co. of the 16th Gen. Spt. Gp. Summer Handicap League which ended play last week with a 232. They clinched first place on the next to the last night of the bowling by taking three out of four points from the other Per. Ser. Co. officers.

In the individual honors department, Doc Pointer of the 16th PID, captured the higher league with 172.

Law Dean of the 525th FSC officers bowled the high scratch series of the league on the last night of the bowling when he rolled a 614 series. In the series he chalked up a 287 game, also high for the league.

Because league rules prohibit a bowler from winning more than one individual trophy...

10th Avn. Edges Martin Hospital

In one of the fastest play-off ball games of the year, the 10th Aviation Group edged Martin Army Hospital 3-2 Tuesday night at Gowdy Field. The game took two hours and 31 minutes.

A crowd of more than 200 was on hand to see Jose Jojola gain his third victory against one defeat. In so doing, Jojola struck out seven batters walking two. Two of his strikeouts were in vain for catcher Clifford Gordon dropped two third strikes and threw wild first base.

"Steel second base" seemed to be the slogan of the Medics, for they stole second seven times, twice by second baseman Hiram Rivera.

OCs Organize Softball Team

The 93rd Co., 9th Stu. Bn. (OC) has organized a softball team consisting of an earlier encounter which resulted in a tie. The game was highlighted by a grand slam home run by Lawrence Link of the 96th. The 96th Co. is preparing to undergo the two week training of the Ranger Committee and will resume league play upon completion of training.

Among the members is James Bane who played for the St. Louis Cardinals before entering the service. Other team members have played either semi-professionally or in college.

The team members are: John L. Bridgewater, Roger B. Runk, Rane, Orval J. Golpehne, Brian J. Medford, Walter J. Cross, Jr., Patrick J. Bell, Gilbert L. Wainwright and Warren W. Nikola.

The Talsmen softball team of the 96th Co., 9th Stu. Bn. (OC), defeated the 97th Co. in a recent play-off ball game.

Transportation Corps Anniversary Message

It is an honor and a pleasure to extend greetings and best wishes for continued success on the occasion of the 25th Anniversary of the U. S. Army Transportation Corps.

During the past quarter century, the Transportation Corps has made substantial and valuable contributions to the Army's efficiency and effectiveness, as it met the diverse logistical and transportation demands of the Armed Forces. From our beginnings in World War I to the current efforts in Vietnam and elsewhere throughout the Free World, the members of the Transportation Corps have displayed outstanding professional competence and dedicated purpose in performing their global missions.

You may justly take pride in the Corps' history of ever-increasing responsive transportation support of the Army and its sister services. Today, as in the past, your responsibilities are great, but with the dedication and talent found in the Transportation Corps, I am confident in your ability to meet the ever-changing tasks and challenges of the future.

Six Main Objectives Set by 'NCO Candidate Course'

potential, using instruction in its technique and principles and giving each student practical experience in simulated combat.

Because of the nature of the course and the most positive assurance of Vietnam combat upon its completion, class quotas probably will have to be filled by volunteers as well as by assignees.

Six instructional objectives are listed:

- QUALIFIED NCO candidates to act as fire team and rifle squad leaders.
- WORKING knowledge of the duties and responsibilities of the rifle platoon sergeant.
- DEVELOPED leadership skills.
- Sound physical fitness through a program of some class leaders.
- WORKING knowledge of the strength and endurance of each man and prepare him to assist in running unit physical conditioning.

Also planned is an eight or nine-week period of on-the-job training after the 12 weeks as a squad leader or assistant platoon leader within the Infantry Center.

Drill Sergeants will act as the equivalent of the tactical officers of OCS. The training, however, will not be as highly disciplined as that found in Ranger training and development of a spirit of aggressiveness, stamina and self-discipline.

—SOUND PHYSICAL fitness, through a program of some class leaders.

—WORKING knowledge of the strength and endurance of each man and prepare him to assist in running unit physical conditioning.

Just what will the course be? Half again as long as either basic or AIT, it will stress combined arms tactics—407 hours of it. Included in this broad category are such subjects as patrolling, offensive and defensive operations, artillery and engineer operations, internal defenses, and biological operations, and not neglecting the skies—airborne, airmobile, and Air Force operations.

Patrolling, especially crucial to the type of war being fought in Asia, is apparently viewed as the most important skill, with 240 hours of it scheduled.

Various skills

A variety of other knowledge and skills will be taught outside of the combined arms area. Putting a soldierly polish on the graduate will be classes in military leadership, map and airphoto reading, intelligence information, medical subjects, drill and command, tactical communications and equipment and unit material readiness.

In addition there will be 77 hours of weapons training, to utilize the entire arsenal employed by Infantry soldiers.

Where will the "instant NCO candidates" train and live? And how does Fort Benning plan to meet this influx?

Certain facilities and barracks now being used here by the Army Training Center for basic trainees will be

First Candidates Get Jump Wings

Eighty-seven officer candidates of the 5th Bn. (OC), The Student Brigade received airborne jump wings this week after completing the three week airborne course.

The 87 candidates were the remainder of 234 men who volunteered for the course, 88 of whom qualified physically for entrance into the course.

The candidates volunteered for airborne training as an alternative to waiting until their company begins its officer training cycle later this month. Some of the men had been sent by their parent units to OCS as much as five weeks before the cycle was due to begin.

This marks the first time a group of candidates has been allowed to undergo airborne training after having reported to their company. Army policy allows individuals bound for officer candidate school to report to Fort Ben-

Cameras Being Used To Study Explosions

ABERDEEN PROVING Ground, Md. (ANP) — U. S. Army scientists are taking a close look at explosions to find more useful military applications for explosives.

Their eyes for research in the physical characteristics of detonations are high-speed cameras, some capable of stopping the action of an explosion in one-billionth of a second.

Leading this research is Major Milton Suttanoff, research physicist and chief of the Detonation Section of the Terminal Ballistic Laboratory at the U.S. Army.

Twenty foreign officers and two wives are scheduled to begin a three-day tour of Atlanta Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. conducted by the Allied Student Training Division of the Infantry School here.

Among the many events scheduled in the tour for the foreign officers, who are allied students of the Advanced Infantry Officer Course, will be a welcome to Atlanta by Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. and a meeting with Governor Lester Maddox and Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, W. H. Duckworth.

The foreign officers and wives, escorted by 2nd Lt. Richard J. Ruckert and Tommy C. Clark, will tour the Building and the Judicial Building. They will also visit the state crime lab, Police Academy, and attend a double-header baseball game at the Atlanta Stadium between the Atlanta Braves and the Cincinnati Reds. The tour is being conducted as part of the Foreign Military Training Program.

Boys Take on Mountains At Georgia Ranger Camp

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga. — American youth, apparently of their fingers and the toes are not as lacking in strength of body and mind as they are sometimes made out to be.

Twenty eight students from 12 Atlanta high schools left their homes and set out for the Army Ranger Training camp in Dahlonega. What these boys went through for the next 25 days would put many adults on the appointment loggers in doctors' offices and probably a few of them in the hospital.

It started with a 4-day hike through the wilderness in continuous rain, over hills and mountains alike, and ended in a solitary stand against Mother Nature for three days, each youth packing only two candy bars and arms with a hammer.

Survival of the fittest was definitely the banner line for these young men as they hanged from cliff edges, and some times only by the tips of their fingers and the toes appear to be. The whole trip, tagged "Operation Upstream," was sponsored by the Atlanta Board of Education. The training was provided to the boys by the combined efforts of the Third U. S. Army Ranger instructors, and coaches representing three Atlanta schools.

The purpose of "Operation Upstream" was to provide an outdoor environment experience to a group of boys in the age 16-18 bracket designed to develop their self-reliance, individual outdoor skills, teach them survival techniques and the like.

The boys expensed for the day adventures were paid in whole or part by their parents with assistance as required coming from Federal Aid to Education. The only requirement was that they be old in Atlanta.

Explosives Firer Being Developed

The U.S. Army is developing a new demolition firing device capable of detonating explosives at distances of more than 1,000 yards without connecting wires.

Labeled the XM65, the device consisting of one control unit and ten sensors, is currently being tested in Vietnam.

Each sensor can handle up to five blasting caps and can be employed individually or in any number up to ten with the control unit.

Operated as a coded frequency modulated radio system, the control unit weighs 185 per half-ounce and each sensor weighs 3 1/2 very rare aromatic gum pounds. (ANP) from Asia.

Flora Lewis. One of Our H-bombs is Missing. McGraw, 1967.
Overnight the world learned about Palomares, a hamlet in southern Spain which was forgotten under the sunny skies. Then on Monday, Jan. 17, 1966, something dramatic happened in the skies about Palomares and neither the world nor the village would ever forget it.

On that Monday at 10:20 a. m. two U.S. military planes—a B-52 bomber and a KC-135 tanker—collided six miles above the hamlet. They exploded, showering the earth and sea with debris. Miraculously, not a single person was seriously hurt. But some where amidst the wreckage were four H-bombs and Palomares was suddenly a part of the twentieth century.

The author tells in detail of the "routine" activities and its strange consequences. With precise and moving skill she recreates the moment all began and the men and women who it happened; the American fliers and the Spanish fishermen, the highly skilled teams of specialists who converged on Palomares and the U.S. politicians and military leaders and their attempts to deal with the problem.

Smith, Howard K. Washington D.C.: The Story of Our National Capital.
Here, in words and pictures, is a lively record of the Nation's Capital as it grew in 1791 with an unpromising stretch of farmlands. The United States was young and poor but George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and others planned a magnificent capital for a great nation.

This book shows what has happened to their dream. Here are the stirring and unusual events of Washington's history; the intriguing facts about the village that grew to be the leading capital of the Western world. And here, too, are the colorful men and women—scoundrels as well as heroes—who have made Washington what it is today. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs and drawings.

Condon, Don. ed. Osmat: World War I, Dial, c1964.
Here is the story of the "war to end all wars" which has never before been told—through first-hand accounts of men who were a part of it. This is a unique history, a drama that brings to life the horror the courage, the tragedy and ironic humor of World War I.

Here are eye-witness reports of the great battles fought on land, at sea, and in the air, and the men in the trenches and combat correspondents, and bloody events which were witnessed in the battlefields.

Wallach, Erica. Light at Midnight. Doubleday, c1967.
Termining it a typical example of an era, the writer speaks of her unjustified imprisonment as a spy and the male world of prison and labor camps until the Hitlerites finally paid off.

Wildner, Robert. Sea and Stars. Putnam, c1967.
A panoramic portrait of Florida describes its transformation from a worthless beach to a "Cinderella State" and tells of the people who made it possible.

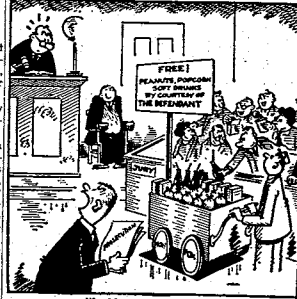

Abraham Yermolinsky, editor: A Treasury of Great Russian Short Stories from Pushkin to Gorky. Macmillan, c1965.
This volume includes the significant writers of the nineteenth century as well as the twentieth century men—the major part of whose work was composed before the Bolshevik Revolution. Beginning with Pushkin, the collection includes narratives from Gogol, Turgenyev, Dostoevsky, and others.

The large portion of the book is devoted to an ample view of the master of the short story, Anton Chekhov. It concludes with some pieces by Maxim Gorky, who dealt in imaginative terms with the Old Russia in which he grew up and was the acknowledged spokesman of the Soviet order. The selection has been made with a view of giving a picture of Russian society.

Telford Taylor. The Breaking Wave: The Second World War in the Summer of 1940. Simon and Schuster, c1967.
This book is the story of the great battle of World War II. The most dramatic engagements were fought in the air and have gone down in history as the Battle of Britain, which the Germans called "Eagle."

The Breaking Wave analyzes the strategic problems Hitler faced after the fall of France and his inability to choose either wisely or decisively. It shows how Germany's fate was sealed.

LOWERING DEVICE... Troops of the 5th Bn, 11st Inf., in conjunction with the U.S. Army Infantry Board have been testing the new overhead attachment system for the Army's lowering device from the "Chinook". The testing which has been underway on Benning's ranges has been utilizing aircraft of the 10th Avn. Grp. The lowering device, designed for lowering limited weights of soldiers and cargo into inaccessible areas by resupply helicopters, has great potential in the jungle combat areas of Vietnam. New Medical Development Can Stop Internal Bleeding

A new medical treatment to stop internal bleeding, of which stops the bleeding. The substance is later absorbed during healing, apparently the cause of death following serious injury, has been successfully employed to save the lives of wounded soldiers in Vietnam.

The new technique, as reported in Medical World News Magazine, was developed by scientists using research animals at Washington, D.C.'s Walter Reed Institute of Research. It consists of an aerosol spray which almost immediately stops bleeding of an internal organ. The spray substance, N-butyl cyanoacrylate, is being used as an emergency measure in Vietnam when surgical measures cannot control hemorrhaging.

It was first tried successfully in the repair of liver lacerations in 70 experimental dogs. After follow-up tests revealed no ill effects in the animals, a small supply was shipped to a team of battlefield surgeons. Used on Soldiers. N-butyl cyanoacrylate has been used so far on four wounded soldiers doctors considered beyond help without the emergency measure. Three of the four survived without serious complications. The fourth had been in shock too long before he arrived at the field hospital. The spray works by forming a crust on the wound.

Army Devising New Transmitter To Find Supplies

A small radio transmitter that can signal the location of supplies air-dropped into dense jungle vegetation is being tested in Vietnam by the U. S. Army.

The transmitter, called AN-GRT-13, is activated by a timer 20 to 60 seconds after an air-dropped bundle leaves the aircraft.

It also marks the landing site with a tone-modulated signal of sufficient strength to be detected through one-half mile of jungle growth. Ground forces can home in on the signal with a special antenna attached to a standard very-high frequency FM radio.

Army Holds Pistol Clinic

Fifty-four members of the Columbus Police Department were guests of the Army Pistol Team, Wednesday afternoon, in the second session of an advanced pistol clinic conducted by Maj. Sgt. Arthur J. Purser.

MAN, WAS HER FACE

NEXT MORNING

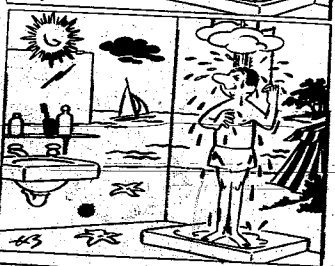

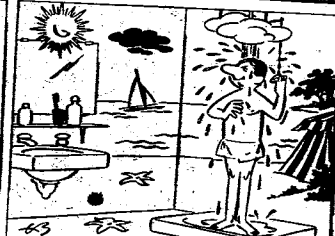

Hank, I've just gotta shave closer—even if it makes my face red and sore.

Here, try RISE...you can shave fast, shave close without irritation.

Take it from me buddy...if you want to get close... GET RISE!

Spot The Seven Goofs

The two pictures differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check how good your eyesight is and then for the solution, turn page upside down.

SOLUTION: (1) The left dip on the mirror is gone. (2) The design on the watch has been changed. (3) The toothbrush has been turned. (4) The fringe on the shirt has been moved toward the left. (5) The mirror is larger. (6) The man's hair has been moved toward the left. (7) The shorts are lighter on men in shower.

Spot Sports

By Rod Reed

Whenever a famous athlete is classified as 4F there are howls of protest, though they rarely come from the fighting men themselves.

"The protests are seldom, if ever, valid," says a doctor who has done his share of pre-induction physicals. "But try to explain to an outraged mother why her 160-pound, chess-playing son is fit for service and a husky quarterback is not.

"The fact is that a fellow with, for instance, a bad knee may be taped and braced so he can get by for an hour or the rigors even of basic training."

Mickey Mantle is a classic example. By now we must all be aware that he never stepped on the field without first being wrapped in a mile of bandages, that mere running has often been terribly painful and that his injury record equals his home run statistics. Yet it's only a few years ago that some thoughtless persons booed Mickey because he was in Yankee Stadium and not in Korea.

Of course, most ballplayers do pass their physicals. Among the big names who have served with distinction are Joe DiMaggio, Bob Feller, Hank Greenberg and Ted Williams, the latter in both World War II and Korea.

In fact, during the big war so many players had gone off to the fighting forces that a conscientious commander was able to make it to the major leagues. As Casey Stengel says, you could look it up.

HOT DOG

Chi Chi Rodriguez, the Puerto Rican golf pro, weighs 116 pounds and that can't be all muscle because a lot of it must be sense of humor. For instance, Czech refers to himself as a "hot dog golfer." What's that?

Chi Chi explains this way: "Two fans are standing beside the fairway watching the approaching players. One says, 'Who's coming up?' The other says, 'It's only Rodriguez, let's go get a hot dog.'"

TRIVIA TEST

What do Nathan Mann, Harry Thomas, Jack Roper, Al McCoy, Red Burman, Gus Dorazio and Tony Musto have in common?

ANSWER: All were heavy victims of Joe Louis, defending his heavyweight crown.

TOUCHDOWN

Well, puh, it's time to start thinking about football. What? In midsummer?

Yep, and not a moment too soon. Training camps are ready to open, exhibition games will soon follow and the pro season will get under way the first week in September. Piggins will be orbiting from then until nearly the end of January.

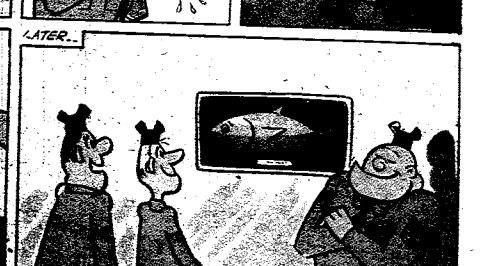

Thus the grid game encroaches on the time of the summer sports—baseball, tennis, golf, swimming—and the winter sports—basketball, hockey, skiing—and presses ever forward to make of itself a year-round activity. Mainly to prove it has beaten out baseball as the national pastime.

Well, no, not mainly. Mainly there's a lot of football and the owners expect to keep a lot more of that money now because there's a lot of money in a lot of football. And that there's no longer no longer bidding between the NFL and the AFL for choice chunks of beef from the College gridirons.

And they're expanding, too, with a new NFL franchise this year, the New-Orleans Saints, and more to come while the market holds up.

Does a girl go with every can of New Improved Rapid Shave?

No, but girls certainly go for the men who use it. They notice how smooth and inviting it leaves a man's face. And no wonder. Rapid Shave has a great new formula which combines a really rich, creamy lather and 17 beard softeners — all working double-time to give those tough G.I. beards the closest, smoothest shaves you've ever seen. Ask for new improved Rapid Shave at your P.X. now in three formulas: Regular, cooling Menthol, and exciting new Lime, the tangy fragrance that makes shaving a tropical breeze.

And try Palmolive After Shave Lotion too... soothes in seconds, refreshes for hours.

American FIGHTING HEROES

The Story of Lieutenant Harold D. Meyerford, USN

ON 30 NOVEMBER 1964, LT. MEYERFORD WAS INSTRUMENTAL IN TURNING DEFEAT INTO VICTORY WHEN, UNDER FIRE, HE RECONNOITERED AHEAD OF FRIENDLY FORCES AND DISCOVERED THAT RIVER CRAFT COULD PROCEED NO FURTHER BECAUSE OF A VIET CONG CHUAN BLOCK.

HE IMMEDIATELY PROCEEDED TO SET UP A SHORE COMMAND POST, TO DIRECT ARTILLERY FIRE, TO CALL FOR MEDICAL EVACUATION HELICOPTERS, AND TO CALL FOR AND DIRECT AIR STRIKES.

ON 19 JANUARY 1965, HE TRANSFERRED FROM A COMMAND BOAT TO A SMALL BOAT, ASSIGNED TO A BOAT COMMAND IN VIET CONG TERRITORY, ADMINISTERED FIRST AID TO THE WOUNDED, AND RETURNED TO THE COMMAND BOAT, ALL OF WHICH TOOK PLACE WHILE HE WAS EXPOSED TO CONSTANT ENEMY FIRE.

ON 28 JANUARY 1965, HE ASSUMED COMMAND OF A VIETNAMESE RIVER FORGE FLOTILLA WHEN THE VIETNAMESE COMMANDER WAS WOUNDED IN AN AMBUSH.

LATER IN THE ACTION, ALTHOUGH WOUNDED HIMSELF AND FACING HEAVY FIRE, HE CONTINUED THE FIGHT FOR ALMOST AN HOUR, UNTIL VICTORY WAS ASSURED.

IN HIS FINAL ACTION, ON MARCH 16, 1965, LT. MEYERFORD LOST HIS LIFE WHILE LEADING A RIVER SORTIE INTO INSURGENT TERRITORY AFTER HE HAD AGAIN POSITIONED HIMSELF IN THE LEADING BOAT IN ORDER TO DIRECT OPERATIONS AND SET AN EXAMPLE FOR THE VIETNAMESE NAVAL PERSONNEL...

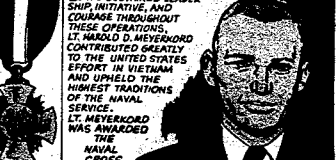

CAUGHT IN A HEAVY AMBUSH IN WHICH HE WAS WOUNDED BY THE FIRST BULLET, HE WAS REPORTED TO HAVE RETURNED THEIR FIRE AT POINT-BLANK RANGE UNTIL HE WAS AGAIN WOUNDED, THIS TIME MORTALLY.

DIRECTLY INVOLVED IN MORE THAN THIRTY COMBAT OPERATIONS AGAINST ENEMY AGGRESSOR FORCES, LT. MEYERFORD AT ALL TIMES SERVED TO INSPIRE ALL WHO OBSERVED HIM BY HIS SUPERB LEADERSHIP AND COOL COURAGE WHILE UNDER ENEMY FIRE.

BY HIS SUSTAINED LEADERSHIP, INITIATIVE, AND COURAGE THROUGHOUT THESE OPERATIONS, LT. HAROLD D. MEYERFORD CONTRIBUTED GREATLY TO THE UNITED STATES EFFORT IN VIETNAM AND UPHOLD THE HIGHEST TRADITIONS OF THE NAVAL SERVICE. LT. MEYERFORD WAS AWARDED THE NAVAL CROSS.

—helps clean away dirt and dandruff, prevent grease build-up

If we'd created it just for you servicemen...we couldn't have done a better job!

Service life can be extra tough on your hair. So you need something extra special to keep it looking great. Non-greasy Groom & Clean is the answer! Other hair-dressings build up a greasy looking film that can trap dirt and dandruff on your hair. But just wet combing with Groom & Clean helps clean away dirt and loose dandruff...prevent greasy build-up. Try it. Get Groom & Clean at your PX...today.

You Can Bet on It...

Compiled by Joseph Hanchak

... A computer was fed selected letters of the alphabet by a commercial firm needing names for a few new products. The company's officials were staggered to have it spit out 44,900 four-letter and 590,000 five-letter words from which to choose.

... Most accounts about Hannibal the man, the soldier, and his actions were written after his death — chiefly by Romans. Livy wrote about him 200 years after he died, and Polybius the Greek, a Latin writer, wrote of his Alps crossing 60 years after it happened, an event which, to this day, is still a mystery — the exact route Hannibal took is not really known.

... Alexander The Great, for all his conquest, power, wealth, and foresight left no heir. His legacy was a bloody 20-year struggle among his principal generals and their heirs.

... In early colonial times, lotteries were legal and helped the economy. In Virginia, 8 churches were built with lottery funds. William and Mary College, Harvard, and Yale and even Fennell Hall were helped by this form of gambling.

... "Father of the West" was more George Craghan than George Washington. He crossed the Ohio River, reached Lake Erie, and set up a trading system by 1744. Diplomat, explorer, soldier, businessman, trader, agent, and land speculator, his exploits were termed "brilliant." Yet — when he needed a $4,000 loan, he posted 1,000,000 acres of land as collateral... and died a pauper.

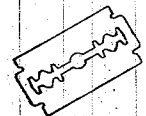

... The first Army airplane in 1912 was precisely fitted with cloth cut by William Meyer, a German-born tailor who obliged a young Signal Corps pilot, Lt. — later General — Benjamin D. Foulois. Meyer's sewing machine remained in use for 22 years at old Duncan Field, Texas.

... Omnis the pirate was the most feared buccaneer of all time — and about the toughest; he captured a crew of 90 men on one excursion and beheaded them all, one by one.

Me too-er
Spoiled "Me too-er" brands reluctantly followed Schick's American leadership in stainless steel, and are still busy trying to equal the Schick molecular Krona Coating.

Schick Science developed the famous thousand foot stop and molecular Krona Coating furnace-bonded to assure you consistent comfort shave after shave. They're lasting friends — the kind you'll always feel comfortable with.

Schick sales increase 13% to $60 MILLION in 1966.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Tell It To Meg

Dear Meg: I got big eyes for this cute WAC and I think she goes for me, too. But last week there was this fiancee and she insisted I should take her. I did, but I don't know how to dance so I pretended I had a sprained ankle. She danced like mad with everybody else while I sat there eating my heart out.

If I were stateside I'd sneak into Arthur Murray's and get some lessons but where can I get some out here?

—TWO LEFT FEET

Dear Two Left Feet: Simple. Confess all to your WAC and get her to give you dancing lessons. Dancers are just like gollers, eager to give instructions to the duffer. Besides, this will give you an excuse to be with her a lot of the time. Too bad the old-fashioned cheek-to-cheek fox-trots are not in vogue!

Dear Meg: Just before I shipped out, I and my old high school sweetie got engaged. Now I had a lot of time to think it over and I realize though I like her okay, I don't want to marry her. How can I let her down easy? I wouldn't want to break her heart.

—J.M.

Dear J.M.: That's a good question. Unfortunately, there's no good answer. Your dilemma isn't novel, but each case is different from the others. How intimate were you? Was the engagement secret or do her friends know? How big is her father?

In some cases it's best to tell the lady at once. In others, you're better off to stall around and wait until she sends you a "Dear John." Discuss this with the chaplain.

Don't worry about her heart. In modern women, that organ is shatterproof.

Dear Meg: I've gone out a few times with this girl that I like very much, except for one thing. She's always chewing gum real loud. Is there somehow I could let her know in a nice way that all that popping bugs me?

—SENSITIVE

Dear Sensitive: No. Love should be deaf as well as blind. Many a beautiful friendship has ended when one started criticizing the other's minor faults. You should overlook the popping or get a new girl who does not choose to gum.

Dear Meg: This chick has a pretty good job and maybe she guessed I was a little short. Anyway, she talked me into going Dutch on a dinner date. Now my buddies tell me no real gentleman ever lets the lady pay half. Is that true?

—NOT CHEAP

Dear Not Cheap: Of course not. That's a very old-fashioned idea. Most of the poor working girls aren't poor at all these days and if you've found one who is a good enough sport to want to share expenses, stick to her like Scotch tape. Your buddies are envious.

Dear Meg: My husband is a golf bug and I thought he'd really be pleased if I gave him a new set of clubs for his birthday. I bought three woods and he was delighted and said that was just what he wanted. He didn't get a chance to try them out 'til the next spring. After one outing, I found he had put them aside in a corner and was using his old clubs again.

Well, it turned out that I gave him a set of ladies' clubs. When I bought them, the salesman thought I was buying them for myself. I wrote this to alert other "golf widows." Don't make the mistake I did.

—MRS. W.P.

Dear Mrs. W.P.: Good advice. A gift certificate, impersonal as it may be, is usually the best present for a sports nut.

10th Group Stages Tests On New Scoring System

For Aerial Gunnery

By Spec. 4 Howard Gaynor (ing runs have been part of a three phase testing program, under the direction of the 10th Avn. Gp., to prove the accuracy and reliability of a new air-to-ground machine gun strafing scoring system.

This system, manufactured by Del Mar Engineering Laboratories of Los Angeles is of a solid state design and comes in four main units.

Four Units

The first of these units, the Signal Conditioning and Transmission Unit (SCTU), receives the shockwaves of rounds passing through a controllable hemispherical transducer, which is a type of microphone, and converts these shockwaves into conditioned data.

In turn this data is sent through the third unit, a discrete broad band telemetry antenna, to the fourth, the Data Reception, Processing and Display Unit (RDPU) (Receiver-Display Unit). This (Receiver-Display Set) consists of a telemetry receiver.

John Wayne To Be Guest At Bond Show

John Wayne, at Fort Benning for the filming of his multi-million dollar production, "The Great Escape," will be a featured star at a U. S. Savings Bond show to be held in the post Doughboy Stadium the last week of August. The exact date is yet to be set but the public will be invited and admission will be free.

In addition to Wayne, entertainment will be provided by the Third Army Soldiers' Chorus, Miss Freda Marshall, local contralto who played Bess in "Porgie and Bess" and the Sing Out Georgia group, directed by Lt. Col. Edward J. Kelly.

The program will be a token of appreciation to the military and civilian personnel for their outstanding Bond Program since May 1966.

Final Increment Graduates From ROTC Program Here

By Spec. 4 Jerry Boone

Nearly one thousand young men from colleges and universities throughout the United States took their first step toward an Army commission last week as they graduated from ROTC Basic Camp at Fort Benning's Army Training Center. This is the second 1,000-man increment to graduate from the six-week program.

The camp, held at Fort Benning for the first time, is designed for the college man who has taken no ROTC training. The program allows him to return to college in the fall and gain a commission after only two years of military science courses.

The cadets were trained at the 2nd Training Brigade commanded by Col. Robert E. Baden and later Col. John S. Lance Jr. Col. Robert B. Marshall of Auburn University acted as chief evaluator. Col. Marshall is the professional of military science at Auburn.

The summer encampment began with an orientation of the program given by Col. Baden and then followed closely along the lines of an accelerated basic training cycle combined with selected officer candidate school courses.

The training program emphasized building leadership in the cadets. Each cadet, at some time in the encampment, took an active role by assuming positions from Jack L. Kilcrease, left, administered the oath to S.Sgt. Frank Rogers as the two looked on from atop the tower.

7500 Trained

Over 7,500 officers have been trained by the Pittsburgh school in the past 15 years, whose primary mission is to provide a program of reassignment training for officers who are being reassigned to other units.

squad leader to company commander.

At the Leadership Reaction Course the cadets were put in the position of leaders with a mission to perform tactical conditions. The problems ranged from an escape from a prisoner of war camp to transporting a 500-pound barrel of ammunition across a flood-swollen river.

Large doses of combat leadership and readiness were on the bill of fare for the college man. They learned the life-saving arts of camouflage, tactical operations and night infiltration.

At the squad tactics course a cadet was selected at random to lead his men through almost two miles of "enemy-infested" terrain and capture a hill locked with Viet Cong forces manned by snipers armed with automatic rifles.

Quick Kill

The cadets were trained not only in the standard M-14 Basic Rifle Marksmanship Training Program, but also in the new "quick kill" instinct firing method. The quick kill method is taught at Fort Benning and is being used in Vietnam.

The real test of the program, and the cadets, was the G-3 Proficiency Test and the Record Rifle Range.

In both cases the cadets proved they could learn as much in a six-week accelerated leadership oriented course, as a basic trainee could learn in the standard Basic Combat Training (BCT) Program. G-3 Test scores and record rifle performance tallied nearly two points higher than the BCT unit, while the college men fired nearly 20 per cent expert rifleman.

"It's a very good program," said Lt. Col. Max Coyne, former chief of training for the Army Training Center, "and it will be interesting to learn how the new two year program men will compare with those who take all four years of military science. They miss two years of college ROTC study, but the leadership 'on-the-job-training' may be worth much more. It will be years before we know how they compare and the only true comparison must be made in 1949, he was assigned to the 3rd Inf. Div here. Upon the outbreak of the Korean War, he was transferred to the 15th Inf. Regt. in Korea.

He returned to the U.S. in 1952 and was assigned to the Signal School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., as an instructor. After three other consecutive stateside assignments, he went to Greece in 1958 as Military Assistance Plan's S. Army Reserve School.

During the first week the officers are instructed in communications, 8 m a 1 1/2 arms, night firing, preventive maintenance, mortars and target analysis. The second week, combat first aid, mine warfare, anti-tank missiles, march planning, combat support units and mobility will be taught.

Given Exams

The students will be given comprehensive examinations during the course. Successful completion of these tests provides a systematic means by which both students and instructors may be evaluated, the school pointed out.

The instructors for the school are primarily from the First U. S. Army Area and teach Career Officer Courses at their home schools.

The student officers at the school are from states throughout the country and they represent varying civilian occupations, such as executives, accountants, engineers and other professions.

The Judge Says . . .

Beware of 'trick' methods used for collecting money

On any given day, your mailman may bring a statement from a creditor indicating the balance of monies owed on a specific account and the date on which return payment is requested. Of course, all debts must be promptly paid to retain a favorable credit rating and maintain your financial responsibility.

However, there are specific instances where a bill is incorrectly prepared or administrative errors in favor of the creditor occur. Usually these errors are easily corrected by contacting the merchant, discussing the problem and resolving the differences.

Unfortunately, a minority of merchants and door-to-door salesmen will not accord you satisfaction and place your account into collection. Again, the majority of collection agencies will endeavor to follow ethical collection procedures as outlined by their associations and if a billing error has occurred they will attempt to remedy it. It is the unethical collection agency with whom this article is concerned.

Tricks

The standard form letter of the collection is being replaced with sophisticated tricks and catch words specifically designed to intimidate the recipient into payment. These coercive tactics include threats of loss of your credit ratings and potential legal action. It must be remembered that your credit rating will not suffer if you legitimately pay all outstanding obligations. Of course, no legal action will result if your payments are current.

Another method to request payment is the use of an official type letter allegedly supported by a well known agency. In one recent case a claim letter was placed in a brown manila envelope with return address in Washington, D.C. The appearance of the envelope was as if the United States Government had issued the correspondence. Inside the envelope was an IBM type punch card corrected by payment within five days or personal explanation in Washington explaining why the sum owing was not paid. It would take 10 minutes of careful reading to realize this document was merely a credit notice.

Official Seals

Other documents come with official seals of various colors, threatening legal phrasology and ingenious types of appeals to your better character traits to initiate prompt payment. The prime lesson to be learned is if you pay your obligations promptly your credit rating will not suffer. If, unfortunately, your name ends up on a "rejection" list and their claim is without any justification, do not be coerced into paying monies not owed by this collection agency tactics.

Among the drastic examples of this ironic game with medical practice and popular nations is epilepsy—a neurological disorder affecting more than two million Americans.

The result? A child with epilepsy (and one in 50 children has some form of convulsive disorder) often finds himself barred from attending public school; the neighborhood children will not play with him because some misguided parent has whispered, "Don't go near him. He has epilepsy." A man, unable to find a job no matter how dependable or capable he is, faces poverty and

Surgeon Says

Epilepsy's best medicine is truth, understanding

At a time when medical science has raced into the Jet Age in the treatment of a great many illnesses, many patients seem to suffer almost as much from the outmoded attitudes of others toward their disorder as they do from the sickness itself.

Among the drastic examples of this ironic game with medical practice and popular nations is epilepsy—a neurological disorder affecting more than two million Americans.

Each of us can do this effortlessly, with a small contribution. Not a contribution of money, but a contribution of self. What is needed is understanding—the truth about epilepsy. According to the Epilepsy Foundation of Washington, D. C., "Understanding is the most important medicine in the treatment of epilepsy." We urge you to join The Epilepsy Foundation in its battle to help your fellow Americans to a better, happier life.

National death rate high for motorcycle accidents

The national death rate for two-wheeled vehicles is 100 per cent greater than the accident rate for automobiles. This high rate is increasing as more persons purchase, rent or borrow two-wheeled vehicles. The instability and lack of protection afforded personnel while riding motorcycles and motor scooters requires the utmost skill, prudence and care on the part of the operator.

Analysis of two-wheeled vehicle accidents indicates that:

- (1) They occur most frequently during warm clear weather, on weekends and during daylight hours.
- (2) Principal causes include lack of skill and excessive speed.
- (3) Accidents are severe and result in an average loss of 27 days per injury.
- (4) Two-wheeled vehicles are often stuck by automobile drivers who do not see the two-wheeled vehicles.
- (5) Twenty per cent of the injuries occur when personnel are riding the two-wheeled vehicle for the first or second time.
- (6) Seventy per cent of the vehicles are either rented or borrowed.

STARTING. Check all controls for proper operation. Then start the engine and allow it to properly warm up before proceeding in traffic. The malfunctioning of a cold engine could result in a serious accident.

BRAKING. Braking a motorcycle takes a great deal of skill and common sense. Since the front brake of the two-wheeler is the most powerful, the rear brake should be applied first and then the front brake should be eased down gently. Brake gently on slippery surfaces.

TURNING. When making a left hand turn, enter the left lane of traffic well in advance of the turn, provide a clear signal to those behind that a turn is intended. This signal will give the vehicle behind time to slow down before following the turn to be made without mishap. The cyclist must maintain a position in the traffic lane which will enable the driver ahead to see the cyclist in the rear view mirror. Caution—the cyclist must be alert at all times for a motorist who may make an unsignaled turn.

SWEEPING A CURVE. Take curves on the highway moderately. Excessive speed creates an increased centrifugal force, forcing the vehicle to the outside of a turn.

U-TURNS. In areas where U-turns are allowed the operator must come to a complete stop, and look completely around to make sure that no vehicle is coming. Take a second look. Then make the turn. This advice will avoid numerous accidents.

Recommended safeguards for cycle safety include eye protection, safety helmet, attire that is easily, leather clothing and heavy protective foot gear.

'The Point of the Spear'

"We most anxiously and most responsibly urge that you read this story with a clear mind and a strong will to do the right thing. It is a story which is the pride of the spear."

JOHN F. KENNEDY
Six President

Oldest reference relates primitive dental practices

The oldest Japanese reference to methods and treatment of dental disease, was written in 892 B. C. by Yasubori Tarbo. It describes in remarkable detail the itinerant nature of dentists who is said to have extracted teeth using only his fingers, without the aid of any instruments.

His method was to seize the head of the patient at the corner of the lower jaw in such a manner that the mouth was forced to remain open. Then, plunging the thumb and first finger of the other hand into the patient's mouth, he extracted as many teeth as he thought necessary. The method of training the operator in this form of extraction, is somewhat interesting and was supposedly carried out as follows: In a plain test, he would make a number of holes were made and into each a plug was forced. The plank was then placed on the ground and the student was told to seize the plugs with the thumb and index finger of the right hand and pull them out without moving the plank. After this exercise had been practiced many times, a harder wood was substituted and the plugs being fixed more tightly each time. When the student succeeded with the final test, he was declared fit to pursue his chosen calling.

Dear Community Service

Dear Community Service: Recently I referred two men with indebtedness problems to the Financial Management Counseling Service. I am wholeheartedly in agreement with the service you offer but one question bothers me. As a commander I have a training schedule that must be adhered to. Both men I referred to are vital to the accomplishment of the company's mission. The question is this: Why does the soldier referred to have to make one to three trips to accomplish his purpose. Isn't there some means of accomplishing the counseling on a one visit basis or on a planned basis.

Answer: I am glad you brought this problem up. The most common cause of repeated trips to our office is failure to bring adequate documents on his first visit. Ideally he should bring all letters of indebtedness, copies of contracts, prepared list of creditors, with amounts owed, a current pay voucher and a detailed list of household ex-

Petticoat Portraits Mrs. Banse-Fay Holds Doctorate in Medicine

By Jane Daniels
Mrs. Ingrid Banse-Fay, wife of Lt. Col. Frederick Banse-Fay, is the mother of six children, 2nd Vice President of the Officers' Wives Club, a busy lady of the Weapons Department Wives' Club, and a doctor of medicine.

She delights in her huge bustling family. Perhaps because she grew up as an only child, she enjoys it even more. "Sometimes there is confusion," she admits, "but it still rolls. Besides," she adds, "you grow with your children; you make adjustments. A sort of an unconscious schedule develops."

Her children, Ralph, 11, Monica, 9, Karen, 5, Eric, 3, and the 19-month-old twins, Christa and Jürgen, each have their own whirl of activities and interests but the whole family enjoys doing things together. The family, too, must include two dogs, three cats, one box turtle, two pet chipmunks and a huge tank of tropical fish. This pet family somehow keeps growing as neighbors move and leave their pets with the Banse-Fays or as one of the dogs rescues another chipmunk from a cat.

Heads Ways and Means As 2nd Vice President for the OCW, Mrs. Banse-Fay automatically heads "the Ways and Means Committee. She thus has the responsibility for planning the OCW's money making projects such as the Christmas ballet and the spring fashion show, as well as the sale of the Favorite Recipes on Parade cookbook.

Only since coming to Fort Benning has she stepped her work in her profession, pathology. She grew up in East Germany, but after passing the German examinations required for the study of medicine, she began her studies at the University of Heidelberg and the Free University of West Berlin. After her classes she worked at the clubs and messes in Heidelberg and Mannheim. One day during a young man were hurrying around opposite sides of a corner, she bumped directly into her future husband.

After Marriage
After they were married, they spent two more years in Germany where she finished her doctorate. Then they came to Fort Hamilton, N.Y., where she worked in her profession in the Lutheran Hospital in Brooklyn and later in the Nassau Community Hospital in Long Island, N.Y.

During the next nine years as her husband was stationed in Fort Hamilton, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., Vietnam, Fort Dix, N.J., and again at Fort Hamilton, the husband and wife managed to commute and the family stayed at their home in Long Island. Fort Benning however, was a little too far for commuting, so the family came here in March, 1966.

Even though Mrs. Banse-Fay has temporarily discontinued her work she reads a lot and keeps up with what is new in pathology. "Medicine," she says, "is something that you must give your whole heart to. It always calls you back."

She says that she does not have time for a hobby although she does play the piano. Whistly she sighs, "Maybe in my old age . . ."

This summer she is looking forward to the visit of her parents from Germany. She goes to see them every year; they come to see her the next. "A wonderful yearly project," she comments.

All in all, she says, "I get tired occasionally but things are never stale here."

When not working at the Army Hospital at O'Fentent within them as a Special Forces Medic, he should be treated. Spec. 5 Jaimie Zapatero works out with Fort Benning's "Le Petit Ballet Company."

Zapatero, 24, was born in Haranguilla, Columbia, South America. He was 14 years old when he and his sister Thesita began studying Flamenco dancing. "Our Flamenco teacher left Columbia and the only dance classes left were ballet. I joined and since then ballet has been my main interest and hobby."

The theme meant a children's fashion show as Miss Dana Williams, Miss Katie Doyle, Miss Patty Murphy, Master Joe Murphy, Master Frank Wills, Misses Kelly Katie and Joanna McCurdy modeled fall fashions for young students.

Mrs. Tom Williams, representative of the Columbus branch that presented the show, narrated. Hostesses were Mrs. Mike Doyle, Mrs. Henry Murphy, Mrs. Neal McChardy and Mrs. Walker Wills. ## 'Instant Firing' Technique Spreads to Other Countries

The Army's "instant firing" technique which was developed for military use here, has now spread to other Allied countries. Instructors are scheduled to visit Canada and England in the coming months.

Since instant firing training began in May, cadre from Fort Benning have visited all but two of the Army basic training centers, and used by both the Canadian Army and the British Army. It is reported likely that another nine instructors will go to Warmminster, Warlock Shire, and Hythe in Kent, for a 30-day period.

The cadre also instructed the Kentucky State Police in Frankfort, Ky. Six members of the instant firing team will go to Quantico, Virginia, to the U. S. Marine Training Center in August for a two-day period of instruction to Marines.

Already the instant firing team has trained 1,000 instructors, who are now engaged in presenting their newly-acquired knowledge to basic trainees across the nation.

Here, 200 basic trainees per day have been receiving the 11 hours of instruction. The cadre from U.S. posts will soon be in Vietnam to instruct soldiers who did not receive classes on the instant firing technique during their basic training.

Ray Ivey Fills Sgt. Maj. Slot At 16th Group

A near 30-year Army veteran has taken over the top enlisted spot in the 16th General Support Group.

Sgt. Maj. Ray W. Ivey took over the position nearly two weeks ago when Sgt. Maj. John W. Brady moved up to The Infantry Center Troop Command headquarters.

"I can help the enlisted man get what he wants with the least trouble," Ivey said, discussing his concern for the nearly 2,500 men of the 16th Gp. This is his fourth assignment here.

He describes the job as "a thousand important details and a real challenge."

"If a man has a legitimate gripe and feels he has to see the commander, I am his best bet for success," Ivey pointed out when talking about his role in the group.

"I can precede him, help him, show him the best way to present his case."

The 46-year-old veteran regularly tours the 16th Gp and concerns himself with the opinions of the enlisted man. His regularity starts at 6:30 a.m.

Ivey points to too much K. P. or too many details as the greatest threat to morale.

New Army Program To Identify Top NCOs

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The U. S. Army Chief of Staff has approved initial plans for a Command Sergeants Major Program to identify and manage the careers of Command Sergeants Major (CSGM).

A CSGM is a sergeant major assigned to the senior enlisted position on the staff of various commanders. The CSGM occupies the one position in each battalion and higher organization which is designated by the position title of sergeant major.

Under the present system, there are approximately 1,500 sergeant majors filling CSGM positions at various command levels, from battalion to Headquarters, Department of the Army. These CSGMs cannot be distinguished from other sergeants major as all wear the same insignia of grade.

After promotion to the grade of sergeant major and appointment as a CSGM, the individual cannot be identified as CSGM by military occupational specialty (MOS), since he holds the same MOS as other CSGMs occupying such positions as operations sergeant major or intelligence sergeant major.

The new plan calls for the establishment of a CSGM section at Department of the Army level to handle assignments, personnel actions, career management, and records maintenance for these sergeants major assigned as CSGMs.

According to the plan, the CSGM section will take over the centralized career management of about the first 200 CSGMs from the highest levels of command (brigade and higher).

All remaining CSGMs will be brought under the centralized control of the section as operations allow.

The need for a visual means of identification for the CSGM is being considered.

New Fire Trucks Replace WW II Vintage Equipment

By Ida Love Evans
There is something about a flaming red fire truck that tugs the hearts of little boys and even many grown ups. Here at the Infantry Center, hundreds of trucks provide the wheels for a variety of tasks, but for color and excitement none can match the gleaming set of new engines at the Main Post Fire Station.

After all, when you see olive drab all day you are prone to appreciate the striking looks of Fire Chief Gilbert A. Ward's latest - four American La France trucks.

At a cost of $18,000 each, the new engines are to the horse-pulled steamers of yesterday what today's sleek jets are to a Sopwith Camel.

The mystique is still there, however: bright brass and chrome flashing with the red, shattering sirens and flashing lights, powerful hoses and other blaze-battling apparatus.

Chief Ward, a Fort Benning fireman since April of 1941, has been relying on a pair of outdated trucks before these new replacements arrived this spring. The old trucks, vintage 1941 and '42, were a brand new when Ward joined the Post Engineer Fire Prevention and Protection Division in the early days of World War II.

Any nostalgia the chief might have for the veteran vehicles is obscured however by his proud descriptions of the new engines' capabilities.

Among the improvements carried similar equipment, and this enables the firemen to act as separate units long-er and to extinguish small fires without an outside supply of water. Electricity plays its part, too, with three 110-volt outlets for the operation of power equipment at the scene of an up- emergency.

What happened to the re- Lawton Field because the crash trucks there are always "in on the line," he added, "and spare trucks are needed when maintenance ties up our ve-

Be Aware of the Dangers in an Armed Environment

Editor's Note: The following article is reprinted from a Command Information sheet prepared by the Army Training Center entitled "Gunfire... by Accident!" It is important to us as soldiers to recognize the fact that we are living in an armed environment!

With firearms as much a part of your daily routine as a reveille, you become so accustomed to them that you begin to become careless and complacent. Though you know how to handle guns safely, when someone mentions "accident," it is automatic for you to think "It can't happen to me." This is a misconception.

It is doubtful that any of the 2,400 Americans who annually die from firearm accidents think that it can happen to them. Unfortunately, it does.

A majority of these accidents occur in the home through such incidents as these:

Bill Barrel
A man cleaning a Spanish-made .45 caliber pistol accidentally discharged it, the bullet passing through a door puncturing the left eye of another man outside the house.

An EM showing his wife how to load a .22 caliber automatic pistol, discovered a round in the chamber which he thought was spent from previous firing of the pistol. He tried to dislodge it by hitting the end of the barrel with his right hand. You know the rest of the story.
It appears obvious that anybody with sense would have handled those guns with care. Have YOU ever cleaned a gun you THOUGHT was empty, or do you ALWAYS check?

When hunting, remember what you're shooting for. Follow sensible safety precautions. Wear bright colors. Load your gun after you reach the hunting area. Keep the safety on. Firing and gain accidents occur because a hunter drops his gun, or slips, or trips his gun while crossing a fence. Even man's best friend, the dog can be the cause of an accident. For example, a man was holding a .22 caliber rifle when his dog jumped on him. The rifle accidentally discharged hitting the man in the right leg.

Can Be Prevented
You can prevent such accidents only by being constantly alert. Never take chances with firearms. Always unload your gun rather than risk an accidental firing. Put the safety on and make sure it stays on until you're ready to fire.

Accidents occur in target practice and training exer-

from his friend, the EM was shot in the abdomen and killed. Since firearms are such a familiar part of your surroundings, you tend to forget their danger. Without thinking you begin "fooling around" with them. Frequently this "play" results in tragedy.

Your own skill and competence with firearms dulls your sense of danger. Proudly you're demonstrating your marksmanship, and in one foolish moment the scene disintegrates into disaster. Forget the deadly belief that safety is for the other guy.

Post OC Veteran Of Korea Action
Next month, at least one in the Chirivay Valley was candidate in the 71st Co. (OC) overrun by North Korean wave assaults, numbering about 2,000 in strength. Craig was part of the 27 man element which stood fast in defense of the position until ordered to withdraw. Allied forces took the heavily fortified camp at the cost of 500 casualties. After the Armistice, Craig remained on the front for another year, cleaning out and fortifying South Korean defenses on the 38th Parallel.

Craig came to the Officer Candidate School from Fort Craig where he served with the Seventh Special Forces Group. He participated in recent 80 - day problem in Puerto Rico in which SF teams operated with the Marines and the Navy.

July 15, 1953 is a date Craig remembers well. That was the day that Outpost Harry

Gen. Zais Offers Advice To Basic Course Grads

How does a 21-year-old second lieutenant "set toward the grizzled non-coms" under his first command? This ticklish relationship was explored last week by Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais in his Marshall Auditorium speech to 122 young officers, graduates of an accelerated basic course and fresh from college ROTC where they had been chosen for Regular Army commissions.

Altitude Effects On Human Body To Be Measured

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U. S. Army will conduct a study of high-altitude effects on the human body using safe, small amounts of radioactive material in 10 volunteer subjects. Radioactively-labelled cortisol and aldosterone will be used to measure endocrine gland function at sea level and high elevations. The sea-level phase of the study will begin at Fort Lewis, Wash. in September, followed by high-altitude tests at Pikes Peak, Colo. The study follows reports that the Indian Army had experienced incapacitating personnel problems resulting from altitude sickness, when a military force attempted to function at elevations above 10,000 feet.

duty training to refine and polish its combat readiness in the event of call to extended service. Duty at Fort Benning will supplement a rigorous week-end program of mission field training conducted through out the year at home base. The battalion's mission is to support a corps or field army by performing engineer tasks and to fight as infantry. One of Florida's oldest and largest Army Reserve units, the 841st will wind up twenty-five years of distinguished service to the nation with its 1967 encampment. More than 600 reservists will participate in its silver anniversary summer exercises. The 841st was officially constituted at Hunter Field, Georgia on Sept. 1, 1942.

"The officer commands the unit but the noncoms run it," Gen. Zais asserted. He warned his audience that "discipline is indivisible to a commander and when the first sergeant starts passing out punishment, then he is the commander and you have abdicated." Turning the social life, the general spoke of "deep and abiding friendships" between officers and "NCO's," but said a line should be drawn at such things as personal loans and after-hours fraternization. "The non-coms want you straight," he said, "not just one of the guys."

Distinguished honor graduate was 2nd Lt. John H. St. George. He is a graduate of Boston College, and all its members of the class completed its combat platoon leader course in five rather than eight weeks, and all its members have reported for Ranger training.

197th Infantry Bde. Gains Judge Advocate Section

The 197th Inf. Bde. has the activation last May of the Judge Advocate Section, an Assigned to be the brigade's legal officer is 1st Lt. Gary R. Hermon, who will be assisted initially by two enlisted men — an administrative clerk, Spec. 4 William C. Carnes, and a chief legal clerk yet to be assigned.

The office will serve mainly to review for the brigade commander all proceedings instituted under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and all special courts martial.

According to Hermon, his office will attempt to eliminate at brigade-level any errors in procedure or substance of these proceedings before the paper-work is sent to a higher command. This, he says, will save a great deal of time and labor lost when papers have to be returned from a higher headquarters for corrections.

The legal officer will also be readily available to commanders for consultations which may help prevent errors at the unit level.

The new brigade S-J-A office will not be equipped at present to provide the other services furnished by full-sized Staff Judge Advocate offices. Matters of claims against the Army, military affairs and aid in such matters as debts, bankruptcies and divorce will continue to be handled through the USAIC Staff Judge Advocate Section.

Hermon, 25, is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute and Ohio Northern University. He is a member of the Allen County (Ohio), Ohio State and American Bar Associations and practiced law in Lima, Ohio, before entering service.

Prior to his assignment to the brigade, Hermon spent a three-month with the USAIC Staff Judge Advocate Section preparing himself for his new duties. Most of this time, he says, was spent familiarizing himself with the peculiarities of military legal proceedings. There are, he says, no real differences in the substance of military and civilian law, so this facet presented no problem.

The Staff Judge Advocate section is one of several new services established in the 197th Inf. Bde. which in the last year has grown into the Army's largest infantry brigade. Other services to be provided by the 197th Support Battalion, when it is fully organized include finance, medical, maintenance and transportation sections.

Open House Is Conducted For Families of Trainees

An open house was conducted for families and friends of trainees in Co. B, 10th Bn., 3rd Bde., United States Army Training Center, Infantry, to mark the end of the trainees sixth weeks of basic combat training.

According to 1st Lt. George C. Coburn Co. B commander, the afternoon was arranged to give the trainees a "break" after record fire and bivouac week, and to promote better understanding on the part of the families concerning the mission of the Training Center.

As evidenced by the assembly's enthusiasm, the most effective point in the afternoon was the hands-on combat demonstration. A simulated problem, involving trainees from the 4th Platoon, was conducted using the skills taught in this class, to include disarming the enemy.

Following the demonstrations, the company and guests were dismissed to tour the area and visit the static displays. Both Infantry and

Columbus Captain Wins Silver Star

A Columbus Army captain has been awarded the Silver Star for "personal bravery and aggressive leadership" displayed in Vietnam.

Capt. David H. Price, husband of Katrina Price of Columbus, was awarded the Silver Star for his "exceptionally valorous action," according to a copy of the citation Price received.

The citation states that at the time of the action, Price was commander of an armed Huey helicopter during a combat support mission near An Lao.

"Upon arriving at the scene of heavy fighting," the statement says, "Capt. Price made numerous rocket runs on the heavily fortified enemy positions, all the while receiving intense automatic weapons fire.

Infantry Advances

"His concentrated attacks enabled the infantry elements to advance. When all ammunition was expended, Capt. Price volunteered to attempt to evacuate several seriously wounded infantrymen."

The citation stated that when Price landed his helicopter, an enemy rifle grenade hit the craft and set it afire. Under Price's leadership, the crew was able to gain cover in a ditch with an infantry platoon.

"Still under fire from snipers in trees and enemy positions as little as 20 meters away, Price took command of the situation," the citation continued. "He immediately organized a defense and planned a route for the beleaguered infantry unit to link up with its parent unit some 200 meters away."

When Price learned that a resupply helicopter was to be landed at the location of the infantry company, the statement continues, he obtained a radio and flashlight and "successfully directed the helicopter into the landing zone."

Price, a native of Athens, Ga., has been in the Army 10 years. He also holds the Distinguished Flying Cross, 25 air medals, the Army Commendation Medal, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and the Purple Heart.

Price is the son of the late David K. Price and Mrs. Price of Athens. He has two children, David, 8, and Beth, 7.

Post Bus Driver Takes Everything 'In Stride' From Traffic to Screaming School Children

By Spec. 4 Chuck Melle Specialist 4 Austin Le Vigne is our man behind the wheel — the friendly bus driver who takes everything "in stride" from screaming school children to impatient passengers forever asking questions. Even the Fort Benning traffic, which can become quite tedious, especially during the noon hour, does not bother him.

Le Vigne, who is assigned to Co. B, 1st En., Center Troop Command, is known to his friends as the Ralph Kramden of Fort Benning. Ralph Kramden is the New York City bus driver portrayed by Jackie Gleason in television series, "The Honeymooners."

The Vigne, like the fictitious Ralph, was born and raised in Brooklyn, New York.

His buddies are forever kidding him about his manner of speech and, like the true Brooklynite that he is, he goes on calling a girl a tola-and a girl a goil.

Hurdles With Ease
Le Vigne's physical stature is a far cry from that of Jackie Gleason's TV character. He stands 5 feet 7 inches and weighs approximately 135 pounds.

However, even so, he handles his 38-foot olive drab bus with ease.
"After a year of driving this thing," he says, "I drive it better than a car." Making tight turns, driving on roads designed for smaller vehicles, and keeping a watchful eye out for women drivers, Le Vigne has become an expert in negotiating the Benning traffic.

What's the major difficulty he encounters in a day of driving? "The wives dropping their husbands off in the morning. This bus is a big piece of equipment and it just scares them."

A normal work day for Benning's Kramden lasts about 14 hours. He is first awakened at 5 a.m.; by 5:45 he is standing in formation at the motor pool.

The formation lasts about 15 minutes, and the men are reminded about safety, personal appearance, and informed about the latest military news that concerns them.

After the formation the drivers log their assigned vehicles out, and check the oil, water, and tires.
From 8:30 rolls around the drivers are on their way to their first commitment, and the motor pool.

quickly becomes a large empty parking lot.

Long Day

During the course of the day Le Vigne might have as many as six or seven commitments, which keeps him constantly on the move. If luck is with him, he might end his day at the motor pool gate at about seven.

In a mechanized army, the vehicle driver is a main cog in its operation. Without the man behind the wheel of the bus, truck or jeep, the movement of personnel and supplies, the lifelines of an army, come to a quick halt.

Seeing that the lifelines reach their right destination is the job of Leonard Pate, motor pool officer of the main post Transportation Motor Pool.

The Orbital Solar Observatory (OSO III) carries nine experiments designed to aid in the study of the Sun and its influence on the Earth's atmosphere by collecting data on solar X-rays, gamma rays, ultraviolet radiation and other solar activity.

A second Biosatellite to perform experiments on living organisms in space is scheduled for launch in 1967 by NASA.

New CO Takes Battalion Colors

The unit colors of 2nd Missile Bn., 42nd Arty, changed hands Friday when Lt. Col. William S. Shambora took over from the departing commander, Lt. Col. Herbert H. Martin, who will become 197th Inf. Bde. S-3 Officer.

After a brief awards ceremony for two battalion soldiers, Shambora officially pinned on the green tabs of command. The two honored soldiers were Cpl. Albert J. Bentley, who received the Bronze Star Medal, and Spec. 4 Leslie C. Hammock, who received the Army Commendation Medal.

The new commander of the 42nd brings to his new post a wide range of experience, both as an enlisted man and an officer. Shambora was inducted into the Army shortly after his eighteenth birthday and served as an infantryman until 1946.

In July 1946 he entered the United States Military Academy and was graduated in June 1950.

As forward observer for C Battery of the 81st Arty, during the Korean War, he was wounded three times. After a tour with the Japan Logistical Command as aide-de-camp and administrative assistant and assignment with Headquarters, U. S. Army Forces, Far East, Shambora returned to the States in 1953 to attend the Battery Officers

Here's What to Expect When Your ETS Arrives

By Spec. 4 Larry Mahoney

FORT BENNING, Ga.—You're no longer merely growing "short," or maybe years, or three, or maybe a career. After initial ETS suddenly have more meaning than ever. The day has arrived. You're next, soldier.

The end—getting out of the Army—can be just about as important as were the beginnings at the induction point and in basic. In GI jargon, ETS is one abbreviation with a lot of concrete meaning. "Expiration term of service," for most soldiers, it's just one big day.

At the Infantry Center's Transfer Point, however, ETS is a five-day week proposition. There, CWO Raymond C. Kurtz and a staff of 26 are responsible for the out-processing of over a thousand men a month.

Their work load, reflecting the exodus of the first of the Vietnam build-up's draftees, has increased a full 25 percent since the summer began. Another spurt is expected in coming months.

Crucial Period—The Army, like the man going home, considers this a crucial time. It is a day of reflection, of relief, of re-evaluation.

Few things are so important to the Army's image as the attitudes its men take out with them. For, when the young man, a veteran and returns to his hometown and family he is the most immediate "expert" on the Army around.

At Fort Benning, this concern about the man leaving for civilian life is evidenced in a program of information directed at him in the last few hours.

It is not only with the records and redtape of release from active duty that Officer Kurtz and his transfer point are concerned. More than that, it is telling the men about their remaining military obligations in the reserves, of veterans' benefits, duties and other matters.

Two to six days prior to his ETS, the soldier gets his first look at the Transfer Point, housed on the outskirts of main post in a complex of aging World War II barracks.

Initial Orientation—There, he receives an initial orientation of three and a half hours. A representative of the Veterans Administration discusses the GI Bill and VA services, particularly hospitalization.

Then the Transfer Point people take over, with an explanation of reserve obligations, reemployment rights, conversion of servicemen's insurance, burial rights, settlement of all outstanding travel pay and separation pay.

On ETS morning itself, the men mass in a conference room for an address from a field grade officer. The speaker conveys the Army's gratitude for their services rendered and contributions to the nation's defense, explaining that, as veterans, they will be part of an "elite minority" of their age group.

He asks them not to judge the whole Army on a few individuals—such as the mess sergeant they couldn't get along with on KP, or that fearsome DI back in basic. They are told that the bad memories will fade, the good will grow and, someday, most will have pride in their service.

Final pay is the next-to-last step, with large groups receiving their money at the transfer point itself.

Though, technically, a man's tour of active duty ends at 2400 hours—midnight of the last day, he leaves the transfer point before noon, and most manage to sign out of their units for the last time before 12:30. Just what are the attitudes of men leaving this wartime Army? At Fort Benning, the Information Office compiled a sample from 50 questionnaires filled out last June during the period May 31 to June 10.

The group included 44 re-entrants, 376 with two or more years of service and 120 with less than two. Most of the last group had been in less than three months, largely men receiving medical discharges from basic training.

The results of this survey: —OVER 90 per cent checked "I am proud to have served my country," as opposed to feeling it was "a complete waste of time." —THREE — FOURTHS felt they gave 100 per cent effort during Army service.

OF THOSE with two to five years of service, 46 per cent felt the Army was the best branch of service, with 49 per cent choosing the Air Force.

—TWO — THIRDS of this group felt their assignment at Benning utilized their Army training.

—ONLY 12 per cent were considering reenlisting.

—SOME 92 per cent would recommend to a younger brother or son that he avoid Perna's Adjutant General's military service as long as possible.

—COMPLAINTS about "what I liked least about my Army service at Fort Benning" included unnecessary harassment, poor barracks facilities, poor attitude of Co. leaders, and problems of on-post transportation.

High praise for their out-processing at the Transfer Point was also mentioned on many of the questionnaires. Many noted that it was the most efficient thing they had seen in the Army.

The transfer point operation under Col. Leonard P. Perna's Adjutant General's Section released a high of 1,102 men in July.

Gen. York Promoted As Truman Is Retired

By Al Sprattley

Third Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson put on its best dress uniform Monday and staged a retreat review and reception in which Lt. Gen. Louis V. Truman and Fort Benning's recent commander, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, played stellar roles.

Gen. Truman, 59, ended 35 years of active military service, and two years as Third Army commander, while Gen. York received a third star and promotion to lieutenant general.

Gen. Truman has accepted the directorship of the Georgia Dept. of Industry and Trade and York will return to Fort Bragg, N. C. to command the XVIII Airborne Corps, presently commanded by Lt. Gen. John Throckmorton.

Throckmorton, who has been commander of the troops sent by the President to Detroit, to assist state and local authorities in restoring order in that city, replaced Gen. Truman at Fort McPherson.

The Atlanta military installation was practically bursting as it played host to some 20 general officers from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in who arrived to pay tribute to Truman at the 4 p.m. review. Gen. York's turn in the spotlight came at a reception later when Gen. James K. Woolnough, pinned on the additional star. Woolnough attained his present rank and received a fourth star just a month ago when he assumed command of the Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

Also at the reception, Gen. Truman presented Legion of Merit decorations to the adjutants general of the states which comprise the Third Army Area.

Gen. and Mrs. York left Fort Benning just a little over two weeks ago following a farewell review staged in honor of the General July 14. He had commanded the post here since July 16, 1965.

Before coming to Fort Benning for his last assignment, Gen. York had been stationed at Fort Bragg where, as commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, he led his troops to the Dominican Republic during the national elections there, just as Gen. Throckmorton did with elements of the 82nd and the 101st Airborne this past week in Detroit.

York, 54, a native of Birmingham, Ala., graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1938.

RECEIVER DISPLAY SET RELAYS SCORE TO OPERATOR
By This Method Gunner Can Be Informed of Accuracy Immediately

New Scoring System Devised for Aerial Gunnery

rounds which passed through the scoring hemisphere. These totalized figures are then passed on to the gunner from the "Receiver-Display" set operator via a standard FM radio transceiver.

Old System
Since the old system of scoring hits was simply to fire, land and count the holes in the target; it is readily conceivable that the advantages of the Del Mar system are limited only to the advancement of its users, as the size of the scoring hemisphere which is controlled by the SCTU can be enlarged from the size of the pop-up target used in basic training to a target area the size of an M-60 Tank.

Another feature of the SCTU is a weapons calibration control, when used with suitable transducers, will score everything from the small shockwaves created by a 5.56mm round up to the high amplitude shockwaves of rockets and missiles.

Presently the system has successfully completed the first and second stages of testing. The first stage, which was to prove accuracy, was conducted by constantly firing a set number of rounds at the target, then visually comparing the number of hits counted with the total counts by the "Receiver-Display" set operator.

The second phase of development was the testing of the Del Mar system as a reliable method of aerial gunnery training. These tests consisted of a week-long series of straffing runs which not only proved the system as a reliable training device, but also established the criteria for qualification as either an Expert, Sharpshooter or Marksman.

With the second phase completed, the mission of the 10th Avn. Gp., as assigned by Third Army to date, was successfully accomplished. Maj. David Starkey of Third Army Headquarters, Fort McPherson evaluated the tests and reported that the Del Mar system had proven itself within the requirements set by Fort McPherson, and thus set the planning for the third and final phase into motion.

Final Stage
The final stage of development, which is still on the drawing boards, will be the establishment of a range system. The elements of this system will be: A known distance range of banner targets where the gunners will receive their initial training; and second a transition range of pop-up silhouette targets where the gunners will not only be able to qualify in the degree of proficiency, but also receive valuable training on the engagement of single sniper type targets so often unwantonly encountered in Vietnam.

Band, Dancers Take Time Out To Visit Vietnam Combat Vets

A local group of ten-agers, with a sincere interest in the Vietnam conflict, and anxious to do whatever they can to help America's fighting men, took time out last week from their summer recreation to entertain Vietnam combat veterans who are recovering from battle wounds in Martin Army Hospital, at Fort Benning. The group, a four-man band known as the Ups and Downs, and four dancers were welcomed by Red Cross officials who arranged their appearance.

The smiles on the faces of the patients were ample evidence that the affair was a huge success. One Red Cross recreation official stated that it was the finest show of its type ever presented, while another, nodding in agreement, added that it was the best therapy the men could have.

'Bill of Rights' Protection Given Retiree Forceouts

The Civil Service Commission has issued a "bill of rights" for government employees involuntarily retired for disability. New rules now usually mean the right of a full hearing before the commission accompanied by the employee's own lawyer and given on the authority to cross-examine witnesses. In addition, the employees will have the right to present their own witnesses - including doctors - on their own behalf. Agencies will now inform workers in advance that (1) proposals to retire them on disability and (2) it must tell the reason why. CSC will review each agency's case and, if procedural defects are found, the case will be sent back for correction. The employee will have the right to hearing at the agency level. If the case goes against the worker, he may appeal to the CSC for a full hearing.

The national Federation of Federal Employees has formed a new department to aid members who are retiring from federal service, according to NFFE president Nathaniel T. Wolkowicz.

The sons pool their money and talents to get to Johnson's plantation, but are beset with unfriendly people, headhunting Indians, an embroiling partner and several tourists who Johnson was supposed to guide around the area.

The sons manage to rescue the father from a camp of revolutionaries holding him for ransom at the behest of his partner, who wants to take over the complete operation.

In the end, all the villains are adequately disposed of and father and sons have grown close together.

197th Lengthens League Lead, 5-0

By Spec. 4 David Clifton
Betting its last three opponents, the 197th Infantry Brigade is again taking an underdog role in the Baseball League. The brigade's record now stands at five wins, and no losses, for the second half.

The Student Brigade the 197th killed in the 1st, 3rd, 6th and 8th to trounce TSB 15-6. The 197th's Albert Miller gave up only three hits which the Students managed to turn into their six runs. Russ, the losing free-for-all, with the aviators committing seven errors and three errors. The 197th erred once.

Rio Santiago again distinguished himself at the plate, going three for five with a triple and two singles. Alonzo Williams went two for five. The 10th Aviation - 197th Bde. game, was a ball juggernaut free-for-all, with the aviators committing seven errors while the brigade committed four. Even though the 10th got out the first seven runs, the final tally was in favor of the 197th, 9-4.

No Change Seen In Post Baseball.

Well, Fort Benning's mitted wonders have had a few more opportunities to pound the pea and dodge a few more bean-balls since last we chatted about the great American pastime, but the situation has not changed too much.

The second half of the season is well underway, and the old 197th Infantry Brigade players are still watching the girls to keep busy as they heeze by all competition by such close margins as 9 to 3, or better yet, 15 to 6.

The old predictions seem to be coming true, although for a while, I thought that maybe somebody was going to start something going. The 197th is 5-0 as of Monday evening with CTC bringing up second place with a respectable 3-2 record.

The 10th Aviation Group is now in third place with a 2-2 win-loss record and Martin Army Hospital is fourth by virtue of their recent win over TSB, 6-0. TSB has yet to win a game this second half.

However, the standings do bear out my point that any team in that league has the potential to win ball games when they really try. True, MATH is not setting the world on fire these days, but they look a lot better this second half. It seems like it is always that one bad inning that kills them.

The handwringing being on the wall, however, lets talk about a few things besides just the standings. The park continues to be in excellent shape thanks to M.Sgt. Jesse Hubert and his ground crew. Considering the heavy rains we have been getting lately, I am surprised that there is enough sod left on top of all that Georgia clay to support grass.

Something else, too, I have noticed quite a few more spectators at the games lately. Nearly 300 came out last Monday to watch the 197th beat CTC in a 6-2 ball game. It was payday, and I am hoping that a few of the troops have taken my advice to make a night of it at the ball park. I am sure that a far more likely explanation is that the local TV stations must show reruns again or else they made a buy on a group of 1940 vintage movies.

In any event, the post pennant race is picking up interest. Now it is up to the players and the fans of the various teams to make a race out of it.

I would just like to take this opportunity to make a few forecasts about the remaining 25 games. Martin Army Hospital will win only one more game this season. The 197th Infantry Brigade will clinch the second half crown with an unblemished record. TSB will win a few (if they can find a catcher). CTC won't win because if they did, they might hurt the 197th's manager's feelings and speaking of the 197th's Manager, he will swing on somebody yet this season. probably me.

Why don't you bring your family or your friends out to the old ball park some evening and follow your favorite team in the surroundings of Cowdy Field. Maybe you can cheer your favorite players into proving me wrong on a few of the following predictions.

Special Services Sets Date For '67 Pitch Tournney

The 1967 Fort Benning Slow - Pitch Softball Tournament will be conducted September 11-22, according to Skip Odum, USAIC Special Services sports director.

"This company level, double elimination tournament will play its games at the post softball field on Ingelsor Street across from Brown Hall," Odum said. "Each team will be allowed 15 uniformed players, a manager and one trainer."

For further information, please contact the USAIC Special Services Sports Office located at Bldg. No. 394 across from the Briant Weid Field House or phone 543-5073 or 545-3604. The 1967 Army Slow Pitch Softball Association rules will apply.

A scratch meeting will be held at 10 a.m., August 29 at Bldg. No. 394 in the fourth floor sports room for managers to turn in rosters and for drawing the pairings for the initial round of play.

The 197th Infantry Brigade, The Student Brigade, Center Troop Command and the 10th Aviation Group will be allowed to enter two of its various company teams while the U. S. Army Training Center and Martin Army Hospital may each enter one company team in the competition.

The 197th got its runs in the 3rd and 5th while CTC managed one run in the first, struck out three times at the plate and Patton were responsible for CTC's two hits, both singles, and Santiago, Ciespo and Williams got three singles for the 197th.

45th Co. Fighters Snare Airborne Boxing Trophy

After bad weather conditions forced cancellation of five weeks in a row. But weather was on Airborne's side Friday when fighters from four companies boxed their way through 12 three-round bouts, presenting the trophy to the winning 45th as Lt. Col. Ernest J. Cherney, CO of the 4th St. Bn. The rotating trophy is given to the winning company each week.

By winning, the 45th Co. moved into fifth place in the overall standings which now show the 42nd and 46th Companies in a tie for second place with six and six records. In fourth place is the 47th Co. with a five and seven tally.

In Friday's matches the 42nd Co. finished second by winning three of its six bouts. Talking were the 49th Co. also with a three and three tally and the 6th Co., whose boxers won two of their six bouts.

Competition tonight will see the top four companies square off in an attempt to shuffle the standings. The first of the 12 bouts is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Beane Street boxing arena near the Lawson Field officers' club.

A crowd of approximately 1,600 people, one of the largest gatherings in the history of the event, was on hand for the bouts last week. Included in the group was a 135-man contingent from the Air Force Academy. The cadets today finish their second week of Airborne training.

THE FORUM

BY MIKE MCNUITY
Professional baseball in recent years has taken a considerable amount of abuse because it's too often a slow-moving amusement offering little excitement. An added disturbance causing even the game's most ardent backers to throw a few stones, is that the season is entirely too long, interfering with the more popular sport of football. This on top of the fact that by mid-season any casual observer can usually predict an easy winner in one of the two major leagues and the most likely champion in the other. More often than not he'll be right, too.

The 1967 baseball season, however, may stop the downward trend of America's former national pastime. The events of this season would have been predicted as impossible last year and may not happen again for many years.

It's hard to imagine, but as many as forty-two of the twenty teams that represent the American and National leagues could conceivably be the main subject of an autograph hunt this September, included are such former cell-dwellers as the Chicago Cubs in the National League and the Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators in the American League. Another possibility considered unusual is an intercity World Series featuring the Cubs and the Chicago White Sox.

The Cubs are certainly the most interesting of the National League incumbents. They finished last in 1966 and, the predictors guaranteed us, they were almost a certainty to occupy the same spot in 1967, despite the fact that Leo Durocher shouted to all that his club was not a last place team. At the end of the 1966 season he maintained that his team was an eighth place team, the spot they occupied that year - end, of course, he was correct; as proven by his tenth place finish in 1966.

But 1967 has seen the Cubs start out slow work into a slight lather, and eventually power their way to the top of the league, where they led the top spot, held by the St. Louis Cardinals.

The startling rebirth of the Cubs, of course, can be credited to the great Durocher. He took several unknowns and turned them into stars: Ferguson Jenkins, Adolph Phillips, and Glenn Beckert, to name a few. They joined such pros as Ron Santo, Billy Williams, and Ernie Banks and the Cubs came alive. They should stay that way, too, for the next five or six years.

In the American League, the Boston Red Sox are the "shock" team of 1967. They, too, had been drifting nowhere but down for the last five years and, although a very powerful club, were rated as nothing more than second-division call-

Strategic Communications Command officially assumed command of Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., on July 1. Since Aug. 1, 1962, command of the post was held by Army Test and Evaluation Command's Electronic Proving Ground, an element of the Army Materiel Command.

Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service has announced expansion of Short Form U.S. Government Bill of Lading to include small military shipments of freight forwarded by air, motor and rail carriers. Maj. Gen. John J. Lane, MATS Commanding General, said the new form will simplify much of the paper work on small shipments.

Civilization program within the Army progressed within only 5 per cent of its full potential for Phase One. As of December 31, 1966, 26,884 military positions were turned over to civilian occupancy. This reflected 85 per cent of the Phase One objective. Phase Two, the first three quarters of FY68, has an objective of 13,256 turn-overs.

Military Academy's Plebe Class will number 1068 for the 1967-68 academic year. Class of 1971 is composed of cadets from all 50 states as well as seven foreign countries including Philippines, Thailand, Korea, Puerto Rico and Jamaica.

Army Maj. Gen. Frederic W. Boye Jr., will succeed Air Force Maj. Gen. Walter E. Arnold as Chief of Staff Command of the Central Treaty Organization. He will assume his new duties in September at CENTO headquarters in Ankara, Turkey.

Hobby Turns Profit For Coin Collector

Robert H. Hudacsko of the 91st Co., 9th Student Bn. (OC), is a coin collector who built his hobby into a profitable business venture. He has worked in the rare coin business for several years and in the early 1960's owned his own business dealing with coin collectors throughout the nation.

Hudacsko points out that almost 95 per cent of his coins were found in circulation a few years ago. This includes coins which may be worth more than $100 each as a 1916 dime of which he has found two.

He is especially proud of his collection of half dollars which is complete from 1898 to present. He is now striving to have this collection date back to 1793.

His most valuable coin is a 2 1/2 dollar gold piece which is worth more than $500.

Units of 16th Support Group To Stage Training Exercise

By Spec. 4 Bob Dane

Some 1,000 men from units of the 16th Support Group will participate in their Field Training Exercise (FTX) here this month.

The maneuvers under the direction of Group commander Col. Arthur V. Corley will begin August 20 and run until the 28th.

Each unit will be expected to perform their assigned missions under simulated combat conditions. Along with combat, tactical operations there will be a relocation movement during one phase of the exercise.

Col. Corley expects the exercise to sharpen the group's field operations.

"We will be able to maintain and improve our capabilities of operating in the field," he said, "for whatever missions that may be suddenly placed upon us."

Lieutenants Commended By General

In a ceremony at Infantry Hall, 150 newly-commissioned lieutenants were told they had forged ahead in a program described as "difficult, demanding, and disciplined"—one of the finest courses of its kind in the world.

Brig. Gen. Roland M. Gleszer, director of management, Office of the Commander of the Army in Washington, D. C., told the graduates of the 81st Company (OC) that the skills they now had were "paramount in helping the Army accomplish its worldwide mission" and were "the key to a tough, difficult, and demanding future."

Gen. Gleszer called them professionals and licensed an officer to a surgeon. "You have 43 men's lives in your hands" on the operating table, their future and security depends on your professionalism."

Stating that the Army had undergone many changes, it now had better equipment, weapons and training—Gen. Gleszer emphasized, however, that certain qualities remained the same. These stalwarts were enumerated as honesty, integrity, fidelity, courage, devotion to duty and obedience, without which an Army and its parent society are doomed.

Receiving awards as both Honor and Academic Distinguished Graduate was 2nd Lt. Roger P. Farkenton, U.S. Army, Leadership and Distinguished Graduate was 2nd Lt. Joseph A. Bohmick Jr., U.S. Army.

Housing Contract Awarded

The Army Corps of Engineers awarded a $4.6 million contract, last month signaling the start of a $35 million military family housing program throughout the Army.

This contract, which provides for the construction of 390 units, is the first new construction of this type since the military family housing program was temporarily deferred in December 1965.

The contract was awarded by the Savannah Engineer District to H. Colle Construction Company, Montgomery, Ala. The project will consist of townhomes and duplex units for non-commissioned officers. Work is to begin immediately and will be completed by June 1968.

Other projects in the program throughout the Army, later include:

- 360 units at Fort George G. Meade, Md.; 180 units at Fort Jackson, S. C.; 360 units in Panama Zone (this zone does not include 250 units the Corps of Engineers will construct for the Air Force at Ft. Fanning, Ga.); 50 units at Fort Leavenworth, Kas.; 100 units at Fort Monmouth, N. J.; 200 units at Mon-

'Anatomy of Whirlybird' Among New Titles

Charles Gablehouse. He is the author of "Anatomy of Whirlybird," a book on the helicopter. The author is a helicopter pilot and has written the first complete and authoritative book on the rotating-wing aircraft. In telling the story of man's dream of a helicopter from the ancient times to the present, the author recounts the history of the "Spanish windmill," the autogyro; explains the theory of rotating-wing flight in language easily comprehended by the average person; and explains how various systems work.

Here are true accounts of dramatic helicopter rescues in peacetime and wartime and of helicopters used as "gunships" in the Vietnam war. There is a chapter about helicopter airframes and a section on the revolutionary development in the power vertical and short take-off and landing aircraft. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs and drawings.

Alan Moorhead. The March to Texas: The North American War 1940-1943. Harper, 1967.

In this book the author describes the intrigue and the shifting complex of relationships which dominated the diplomatic side of the war. Robert Murphy's secret mission to win victory approval of the American landings in Africa, the Battle of the Kasheine Pass, in which the raw GIs first suffered the full fury of the Afrika Korps. The author sees war as an enormous visual drama, and conveys the feeling of it vividly and truly. His portrayal of the British soldiers and their gritty courage, of the pathetic Italian soldiers who had hoped to live opulently in their new slice of empire, of the generals - Eisenhower, Montgomery, Rommel and others - reflect his extraordinary ability to evoke through significant detail the sweep of great historical events.

Robert McClintock. The Meaning of Limited War. Houghton, 1967.

This is a study of limited war through the "case system." The wars of Greece, Korea, between the Israelis and the Arabs, the struggle in the Sinai Peninsula and Suez, the American landings in Lebanon, the Chinese attack on India, the French colonial war in Indochina and the Franco-Communist war which succeeded it in Vietnam - all of these are examined with insight and imagination.

In this book the author of ultimate concern to all men and of critical importance to America at the present moment. Barry Sadler S. Sgt. Tim A. Lucky Ose. McMillan, 1967.

"It's a Lucky Ose" is the story of what it's like to fight with Special Forces in Vietnam, what the author's life was like in the years before he wore the Green Beret, and what's happened to him in the months since his return to the States. Barry Sadler has packed a lot of living into his twenty-six years. At times his story takes on a kind of antic keleidoscopic quality as one adventure overlaps another - each the unique experience of a high-spirited, curious-minded, ready-for-anything young man. "Tim The Lucky Ose" is a uniquely American story, one that focuses on the life of an uncommon young man but one that gives a stunning account of training and combat.

Communication Test Employing Satellite Ended. WASHINGTON (AP) - The first experimental tactical communications by satellite has been completed by U. S. Army, U. S. Navy, and U. S. Air Force units via the Fifth Lincoln Experimental Satellite (LES-5).

The satellite was launched by the Air Force using developmental TITAN IIIC booster from Cape Kennedy on July 1. During the tri-service test messages were exchanged among airborne aircraft, submarine, a ship, and fixed and mobile land based terminals.

The experiments with LES-5 are an initial step in the Department of Defense Tactical Satellite Communications Program which is designed to meet the needs of Navy, the seaborne terminals, and the U. S. Air Force, the airborne terminals, and satellites.

DISTILLATION UNIT
A mobile seawater distillation unit is being developed by Army engineers. Plans call for trailer-mounted unit with estimated capacity of 3,000 gallons of drinkable water.

TAKE ONE ON YOUR VACATION

The MGB is what sports cars are all about. Equipped with a 1798 cc competition engine, the "B" will get up a standing quarter of a mile in less than 19 seconds. Big disc brakes bring you down to an easy, fade-free stop. Firm racing suspension and rack and pinion steering lets you corner hard, fast, precisely. But owning a "B" isn't all racing about. There are other pleasures to taste. English leather bucket seats, roll-up windows, finged side vents, lockable trunk, snug removable top, room in the back for extra gear or extra passenger. The MGB—America's best $2637 selling sports car.

Area National Guard Units Rated Superior

Returning last week from two weeks of training that included tank driving, infantry patrol squad and platoon tactics, reconnaissance, maintenance and repair and maintenance of vehicles were 800 officers and enlisted men of the Columbus National Guard units. The men returned with a "superior" rating from Fort Stewart, Ga.

Training for the guardsmen, according to the 57th Engineer Battalion's assistant operations officer, Capt. Ben H. Penton, included riot control. The climax of the training period came when massed brigades, battalions and separate units of the 48th Armored Div. passed in review before the state's National Guard Commander-in-Chief, Gov. Lester G. Maddox. Guardsmen from Columbus are attending a week-long course at the National Guard Commander-in-Chief's school at Fort Benning, Ga. The course is being held during the week of August 14-20.

'Inevitability' of War Seen in Magazine

A look at the "inevitability" of war is presented in the August issue of Army Magazine. "No More Wars" by Hansen Balgord, reviewed during 600 A. D. to 1967 during which there have been 15,482 wars.

In a period of 3,357 years there were 27 years of peace and 3,120 years of war. In the conflict, or thirteen years of war for every year of peace. In the 17th enlightened post-World War II years (1945-1962) there was a statistical average of 2.94 new wars per year, as compared to some 2.61 throughout pre-World War II history.

There have been wars to end all wars and visions of peace and tranquility throughout the world. We should and perhaps sometimes do try to learn from history. From recent wars we can obtain statistics that would make one's head spin.

We have the machines and statistics, the sciences, and the experts of all kinds to give us the answer. "Why do we have wars?" is the common denominator to war, the author states, is man himself. A very pragmatic look at war by the veteran New York Times military writer.

ANOTHER LOOK at guerrilla warfare in August's Army Magazine is provided in "Master Guerrilla of Arabia's Desert" by Lt. Col. Billman Dickinson. If you were to take away the romanticism from Lawrence of Arabia what would you have? Probably the most brilliant and successful modern guerrilla strategist the world has known.

A look at Lawrence's strategy and tactics in the desert and an explanation of why they would not work in Vietnam.

Aid Program Is Effective Weapon Against Viet Cong

DI AN, Vietnam — Many different weapons are used to combat the Communist influence in Southeast Asia. When the Civil Affairs Office of the 1st Inf. Div. 2nd Bde. conducted one of its "Hamlet Festivals," the weapons were rock-and-roll bands, candy balloons, magicians, movies and musical and dental care.

Recently, such an event took place in the village of Binh Chau, about two miles west of Phu Loi. During the preceding night the village was "sealed" by American and Vietnamese troops, assisted by teams from the brigades 35th Inf. Flt. (Scout Dog).

After daybreak, Civil Affairs personnel, headed by Capt. David A. Arzate, artists for entertainment.

Medical Civic Action Program (MEDCAP) team from the 1st and 2nd Bde. treated over 500 Vietnamese men, women and children. The MEDCAP team was directed by Lt. Col. Edward J. Haycke, the battalion commander, and Capt. Kenneth B. Dessler, 2nd Bde. surgeon.

and interpreters questioned the men of the village, assisted by Ho Chanhs (former Viet Cong who "raided" to the government side), a South Vietnamese Army band entertained the women and children with popular songs. SSGT. James Fran handled out candy to the children with the help of several soldiers.

By midday, Capt. Herndon McConnell, a 1st Med. Bn. dentist, had pulled over 30 infected teeth; the youngsters happily played with balloons while they watched animated cartoons in one of the Civil Affairs tents.

Spec. A Maurice McDonald, dispensed nearly 100 shots of penicillin and other antibiotics.

New School In another village, 1st Div. soldiers helped the villagers celebrate the completion of a new school, built by Revolutionary Development (RD) cadre workers recently. The division band played the American and Vietnamese national anthems at a flag-raising ceremony in the village of An Phu, about 10 miles north of Di An on the Saigon River, while 2nd of about 180 of the village's Advisory Team, said, "Charlie" knew we were planning some kind of festivity here today, so last night he blew up our bridge to keep people from coming. It didn't work; the people came anyway."

"They're not scared of the VC here anymore," he emphasized.

Although the village is located directly across the river from a suspected VC Cong stronghold, soldiers and government-trained RD workers have virtually eliminated VC terrorism, while building a new school and dispensary, and strengthening the village defenses.

Occasional acts of harassment are still carried out by the VC. PFC Alford Perez reported treating an ARVN soldier for foot wounds received when he stepped on a steel spike (punj) while the SFC Roy V. Plair of the

Rig Launches, Crosses Its Own 60-Foot Bridge

DI AN, Vietnam — The revolutionary design of the 1st Inf. Div.'s Armored Vehicle Launch Bridge (AVLB) is just the thing for monsoon swollen ravines.

An AVLB is a huge piece of complicated machinery that can thrust its large bridge over a gap up to 60 feet wide. After the launching of its bridge the vehicle is capable of being unhooked, crossing its own bridge and then hooking its hydraulic pick-up to the other side, picking it up and retracting it onto its base.

Used primarily for transporting vehicles across ravines and streams, the bridge has a road width of 13 feet and weighs 20 tons. It can support any vehicle the 1st Inf. Div. has.

era mobility." The AVLB platoon leader added, "A few years ago who would have thought that men could bridge a 60 foot ravine in a matter of minutes, move an entire division across, then pick up the bridge and move on."

Benning Agency Is Tops In CONUS Competition

By Ida Love Evans
 The title "Best in the Army" has been won by the Army Community Service Agency here, according to an announcement from the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army.

A plaque will be presented to the post at a Commanders Staff Conference in Washington in the fall. Other Army units are competing for the award. Army Community Service was officially founded in 1965 and an award was presented last year for the first time. It was won by Fort Dix, N.J.

Earlier this year the Fort Benning ACS was selected as "Best in Third Army" and went on to compete with winners in the other Army areas. Fort Benning was one of two semi-finalists selected for final competition at DA level. Capt. Francis X. Quinn, who has been chief of the ACS facility since last February, recently assumed the duties of coordinator for ACS with the assignment of Lt. Col. Herbert G. See. The ACS has a staff of military personnel, supplemented by an active group of trained volunteer workers. Some among the wives of military personnel stationed at the post. Quinn explained that the purpose of the agency is to help military personnel and their dependents with problems they cannot solve alone. He said the Army has several other possible provisions to meet the needs of families and a number of channels through established channels and that ACS does not plan any existing staff activities over such activities. Quinn prefers to call ACS (See ACS, Page 2)

NCO Academy Scheduled To Open Here Next Month

By Spec. 4 Larry Maboney
 An academy for non-commissioned officers, the enlisted leaders who are often called the "backbone of the Army," will open at The Infantry Center this September. The Third U.S. Army NCO Academy (provisional) will be a first for Fort Benning, and, according to Sgt. Maj. John F. Whitley, who will be the academy's commandant, it may be the Army's "first" too. The only fully-accredited NCO academy staffed and run by non-coms only. Sgt. Maj. Whitley, a veteran of 31 years service who enlisted at 17 with the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, will wear the dual hat of sergeant-major of The Infantry Center, the top non-commissioned officer slot on post, and that of academy commandant. The school will operate at two levels, with PFC's and specialists four taking the basic course, and a senior course for E5's and E6's. The first students to enter will be a basic class on September 5. The first senior class will enter a month later. Eighteen classes are scheduled for fiscal year 1968—500 men in the basic course, 400 in the senior course. Each major command on post has been authorized a quota of men, and the academy is strictly for Fort Benning only. After completing the course, the men will return to their units here. It is anticipated that the academy will be fully recognized by the Continental Army support for The Infantry School. As the symbol of the 31st Infantry, which now serves in three nations and which for many years was considered the Army's "Foreign Legion," the polar bear serves as a reminder of the unit's 1918-1929 campaign in Siberia. In addition to the unveiling, which will mark organization day for the old 31st Infantry Regiment, August 13, 1918, at Camp McKinley in the Philippines, ceremonies will include several awards to battalion members, remarks on the unit's history by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Charles A. Smith, open house in the unit's honor guard and static displays of weapons and equipment provided by the five title companies and the unit's headquarters company. The battalion is the largest Infantry battalion in the Army, with over 1,300 men. About 75 awards, the bulk of them Bronze Stars, Army Commendation Medals and Air Medals, will be made. One man will receive the Soldier's Medal. The first, 500-pound bear mascot, which is used in the main attraction, will be unveiled at 9 a.m., stands up, right on a multi-angular, teardrop-shaped, concrete base. (See BEAR, Page 2)

The public is invited and admission will be free. In case of rain, the program will be changed to August 30, at the same hour and place. Wayne, the screen hero who is in the area to star in and co-direct his movie production, "The Green Berets," will be awarded an Infantry scarf, a crest of the Infantry School, and a savings bond award for his time and past work, including films, for the bond program of the U. ## Meet Planned For Retirees In Local Area

Retired military personnel from the Columbus-Phenix City area have been invited to attend a briefing and series of demonstrations at Fort Benning Wednesday at 1 p.m. The unique program is designed to bring retirees up-to-date on the latest changes in regulations and procedures in which they are particularly interested and, at the same time, provide them with an insight into new equipment and training methods.

According to Lt. Col. John W. McLaurin, Adjutant General Section project officer, over 800 retired officers and 400 enlisted retirees have accepted the invitation to attend. Notices of the program, along with the program, were mailed to those on the Third Army Retired Personnel Register.

However, the program is still open to retirees of any service whether or not they received a notice through the mail, McLaurin said, and is open to those who may (See RETIREES, Page 11) a referral agency, prepared to put the individual with the problem in touch with the person who can help him solve it.

Mrs. H. S. Cunningham is Voluntary Service supervisor with Mrs. James G. McCaughy as assistant supervisor. Mrs. James J. Mulholland is a member of the committee of volunteers which serves in many clerical and administrative capacities at ACS.

Mrs. Warren B. Phillips is chairman of the Casually Assistance Committee, Mrs. Robert F. Bayard, Emergency and Transportation Committee, and Mrs. Gerald Purnell and Mrs. Bobby D. French are chairman and co-chairman of the welcome center, Hospitality House.

"Long accustomed to traveling from post to post themselves," Quinn said, "he manages a family while the husband is overseas and is facing other problems unique to Army life, these volunteers not only have the know-how to help others but have a deep personal understanding and compassion for the people they come in contact with in their work."

Among the volunteers are wives of both officers and enlisted personnel. In fact, Hospitality House is sponsored by the NCO Wives Club.

Give Assistance
Located in Bldg. No. 5, ACS gives assistance to more than 400 people each month. Many of these are wives of men in Vietnam.

Electing to remain in the vicinity of the post while their husbands are away, they are full-time family and friends. Often the services rendered by ACS staff and volunteers is just what those distant relatives and friends would be doing for the lonely Army wife if they were close at hand.

Army wives whose husbands are overseas are urged to register with ACS. In fact, it is advisable to register as soon as they learn that their husbands are slated for overseas service. This lets ACS know where they are and gives the wives an opportunity to learn just what ACS is prepared to do for them in case the need for help should arise.

ACS coordinates with the American Red Cross, Adjutant General Section, Army Health Nurse, Transportation Office and other Army administrative agencies as well as local health and welfare groups.

"No matter what the problem, sickness, sorrow, delayed arrival of household goods, legal or technical difficulties, Army people will find at ACS, warmth of the company, deep personal concern for the privacy of individuals."

"The staff and volunteers are among the highest type of professionals, engaged in making a reality of the time honored policy, 'The Army Takes Care of Its Own.'" base at the Marine Road headquarters site on Kelley Hill.

During World War II, Col. Haley served in the European Theater of Operations from June, 1944 to May, 1945.

Built by Spec. 4 James Grogler of Hq. Co., aided by men from the rifle company of the battalion, the bear took six months to construct at a Sand Hill craft shop and later in the battalion's huge hangar-like motor pool building.

Basic construction involved a metal frame with polyester resin and fiberglass as the coating and finishing materials.

Organization Day ceremonies will be held in the parking lot of battalion headquarters from 8:20 a.m. to 11 a.m. with static displays of weapons and equipment, including field mess gear, in a nearby field.

Company E will display the field mess, which will be operational in order to serve refreshments to guests and participants in the ceremonies. The 283rd Army Band ACS know where they are and gives the wives an opportunity to learn just what ACS is prepared to do for them in case the need for help should arise.

Headquarters company will display communications equipment, a machinegun-equipped reconnaissance vehicle and a 4.2-inch mortar. Company A will provide a display of weapons ranging from a rifle company, including the M-16 rifle, M-79 grenade launcher, M-60 machinegun, 81-millimeter mortar and 90- and 106-millimeter recoilless rifles.

Company B, the battalion honor guard, will be charged with color guard responsibilities and will be the host company for the open house. Battalion headquarters also will be open during the morning.

In addition to the mess operation, Company E will open a radio net on which spectators will be permitted to talk to one another.

Col. Smith and Sgt. Maj. James H. Price, in light of the unveiling and organization day ceremonies, announced initiation of a contest to "name the bear," with $50 in cash and a 3-day pass to the winner. It was rumored that the names "Yogi" and "Smoky" would not be considered in the judging.

Saluting ruled impractical while operating a vehicle

Saluting is a courtesy rendered to every superior officer and warrant officer. Some say it began in late Roman times (1 A.D. to 500 A.D.) when assassins were very common. People who wanted to see public officials had to salute before them with right hands raised to show they did not hold a grudge. This practice gradually became a way of showing respect and sometimes involved removing the hat, as in 1820, this was modified into touching the hat, and since then it has become the crisp hand salute.

Such a time is while operating a moving vehicle. With the number of vehicles increasing daily, an operator must be constantly on the alert for hazards. He must keep both hands on the steering wheel to insure maximum control of his vehicle. This is not to say that courtesy stops a simple nod of the head in return of a salute while operating a moving vehicle. It fulfills the requirements of friendship, recognition and respect.

Da Vinci's drawings show early study of tooth forms

Perhaps the most versatile genius in all recorded history was Leonardo da Vinci who lived from 1452-1519. In the realms of mathematics, engineering and science, his mind was perhaps the keenest the world has ever known. His contributions to art and architecture and other areas precede day scholars.

Da Vinci's manuscripts of biological studies, comprise 80 notebooks and contain over 700 drawings. A clear evidence of profound patience and remarkable ability to graphically visualize what he saw.

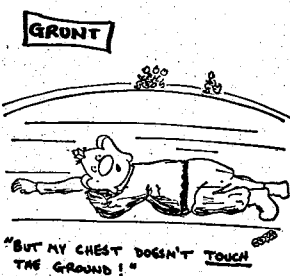

He was the first to recognize tooth form and the relationship of teeth to those in the opposing jaw. He described the sinuses and established the fact that the height of the face is approximately one-eighth the height of the body. He determined and pictured the numbers of teeth and exhaustively studies the nature and number of their roots. This creative giant attacked the prodigious feats in his time kindled, in an awakening Renaissance era, intellectual able ability to graphically visualize what he saw.

Army urges developing life insurance program

The Army encourages its members to develop a sound life insurance program to meet their varying individual needs. In fact, provision is made for counseling lower graders, E-1 through E-3, in insurance buying.

These restrictions are clearly indicated on the face of the policy. Accepting anything free such as pens, pencils, notebooks or other items valued at $1 or less are the only items which military and civilian personnel may accept as gifts from insurance salesmen.

Valuables left unguarded are vulnerable to thieves

Unlike pregnancy which is never anything but total, there are degrees of dishonesty. Individual character in shades of black and grey vary from that of those who will stop at nothing to make a dishonest buck to that of those who do not habitually follow criminal pursuits but just can not resist temptation when confronted with it.

Based on that premise, a national advertising campaign soon will get under way to cut down on auto thefts by cutting down on the main source — temptation. According to the figures, out of 500,000 cars stolen last year, 40 per cent had the keys left in the ignition and 80 per cent were unlocked.

The Judge Says ...

Laws require no payment for unordered packages

Suppose the mailman delivers a package containing a necktie, a book or phonograph records that you did not order. There will be a bill for the merchandise at the same time as at a later date. Do you know your obligations, assuming that you do not want the merchandise? Can you use it and hand it back to the mailman no further explanation is required. You do not have to return it.

A ruling by the Federal Trade Commission holds it is a violation of the Federal Trade Act for a sender of unordered merchandise to claim that "the receiver is in charge of the package."

Vomiting can cause death if person is unconscious

Nausea and vomiting are common enough, and many of us treat this unpleasant physical reaction too lightly. When combined with unconsciousness, something as minor as "throwing up" can result in death.

Surgeon Says Poverty not only purpose for social work program

One of the little-known parts of the Army Medical Service Team is the Military Social Work program. For that matter, any people have any conception of the changes in the profession of social workers in the military or civilian life. Too frequently the image that comes to mind when the subject of social work is raised is that of a "do-gooder" rushing around to bring relief to a destitute family. Not that assisting people to deal with poverty is lost from the field of social work, but it is not all or even a major part of it.

The psychiatrist is a physician who has had specialty training in mental diseases and their treatment. Any condition which involves mental illness, physical problems, drugs or impatient care must be dealt with by the Medical Corps officer.

The psychologist is a professional who has had specialty training in mental diseases and their treatment. Any condition which involves mental illness, physical problems, drugs or impatient care must be dealt with by the Medical Corps officer.

Sara Conley was the special guest of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Daughters of the United States Army at the organization's monthly meeting held recently at the Main Officers' Club.

Miss Conley, the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. James Conley, was presented with the Fort Benning Chapter of DUSA Scholarship in memory of Maj. Gen. Charles D. A 1967 graduate of Baker High School, she was voted her school's Outstanding Girl of the Year, vice president of the National Honor Society, an officer of the Student Council and an active member of many organizations in her school and local community.

The $400 scholarship is made possible through proceeds from DUSA's 1966 49th party in order to raise funds to support post activities primarily concerned with Fort Benning's dependent children.

It was announced by Mrs. Earl S. Gresson, this year's party chairman, that while work has begun on this year's party, more help is needed in order to insure another successful year.

Mrs. Buckley introduced and welcomed guests Miss Donna Dockett, Mrs. C. S. Pressman, Mrs. Arthur E. Parker III and Mrs. R. A. Sandin.

Mrs. Jones Stays Busy As Wives' Club Writer

A radio and television celebrity in her own right, Mrs. Charles R. Jones uses her talents as the publicity chairman for wives' clubs on post and as a local columnist.

Mrs. Jones enjoys working with wives' clubs because she says, "I meet so many nice people." Last year she was the publicity chairman of the Officers Wives' Club, a job which required "being in the know," a lot of "leg work," and reporting to the "Bayonet."

Now, she is the publicity chairman for the wives of the 10th Avn. Gp.

She also writes a column about the wives' clubs for the Columbus "Cross Country Traveler."

During the past year she appeared on a Columbus television show and several times narrated a radio show for Columbus stigres.

TV Nothing New?

Being on television show was nothing new for Mrs. Jones. After she had earned her degree in English and speech at Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio, she worked at the radio and television station in Zanesville, Ohio, her hometown. She was an announcer and made commercials for the radio station and starred in her own television show, the "Marilyn Ross Show."

Her career in television was ended, however, when her husband got orders on the day that she was to have an interview at a Cleveland, Ohio, television station. Luckily for the Army, she has been using her talents for Army wives ever since.

Le Petit Janice Evert Desires A Career in Dancing

By Marilyn Larsen
Thirteen-year-old Janice Evert is one of the youngest "senior company" members in Fort Benning's Le Petit Ballet. "I'm only 13, and I plan to go to college someday, but more than anything else in the world, I want to become a professional dancer."

When asked how a 13-year-old girl has time to study schoolwork, ballet and participate in sports, Janice replied: "The things people love to take time to enjoy, I enjoy many things, so I just set my mind to it and I simply readjust my schedule to make the time for whatever it is I want to do."

In September Janice will resume her academic studies at St. Anne's School and will return to Fort Benning and Le Petit Ballet for instruction and preparation for the upcoming production of "The Nutcracker."

The children are entitled to use of the medical care, theatres, etc. but can not buy at the commissary near where they live. I can not buy for them because I am separated from them physically. How do I get the authority for my mother to purchase for the commissary to feed my children?

Concerned
Dear Comrade,
The answer to your problem would be to contact the ID Section of Adjutant General Personal Affairs to have your mother appointed as temporary commissary agent for the children.

Air Cleared Concerning Discounts on Flight Rates

There is a great deal of confusion and misunderstanding concerning the 25 per cent discount which certain airlines are offering military wives who are flying to Honolulu. According to Capt. Frank Quinn, Army Community Services officer, countless calls to his office seeking additional information or clarification on what they have heard about the program. Quinn pointed out that

Past 'Special Forces' Medic Is OC Here

Allen Brinkman of the 71st Co., (OC), embarked on his career in medicine with the Special Forces medical training program, which is an intensive 44 week course. His aptitude in this field and his outstanding performance in the Special Forces Program caused him to be awarded the Advance Medical Research Laboratory Honor Graduate citation.

Upon completion of the medical training course, Brinkman was assigned to the 8th Special Forces Group (Special Action Forces), Panama, Canal Zone. While serving in Panama, Brinkman participated in a unique civic action project under the auspices of the 8th Special Forces Group.

The 8th "adopted" the village of Santa Isabel, located approximately 30 miles from San Blas Islands in the Caribbean. This small village in the jungles of the Republic of Panama was accessible only by water and helicopter. As a member of a four man civic action team comprised of two medics and two communications men, Brinkman had an opportunity to diagnose and administer treatment to many rare diseases found in the tropics.

Frequently during his stay in Santa Isabel, he saw in excess of 300 patients per day, most of whom arrived at the village by boat after traveling from points as distant as the San Blas Islands.

much of the procedure is up to the husband in Vietnam and to his wife here who wishes to go to Honolulu to see him during his 15 days of R and R.

Asked to explain the entire procedure once again so that wives who would be making the trip in the future would have another opportunity to become familiar with what is required, Quinn listed the requirements: wives must fly from any of three West Coast air terminals, Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Cost of Trip
The fare from the West Coast terminal to Honolulu and return is $165 plus tax, which a discount of 25 per cent of the normal economy fare.

United, Pan American and Northwest Airlines are the three participating airlines. There is an economy fare from Atlanta to the West Coast which is offered by Delta Airlines. The flights are to Los Angeles. The fare applies to travel after noon on Monday to noon on Friday, and after midnight on Friday to noon on Sunday. Cost of this flight is $165.

The total transportation cost from Atlanta for 15 round trip, including $17.00 tax would be $338.47.

For the reduced fare, a wife must have a minimum of two copies of her husband's approved R and R leave from Vietnam, which has a DD Form 1589 printed on the back. The approved form has the wife's name, the 15-day period when the husband will be in Hawaii and approval by the husband's unit.

Travel agencies can make commercial reservations for hotels and motels, and in addition, a number of guest house accommodations are available at the R and R Center at Fort DeRussay. The husband in Vietnam can make the arrangements for the low-cost accommodations at Fort DeRussay.

In summation, a great deal of the planning and actual preparations for the trip is up to the husband in Vietnam to his wife, and must make the reservations for accommodations at Fort DeRussay if these are desired.

The husband also has the option of buying the tickets. The wife can help by writing her husband's name, reservations, and checking further with him to see that he is leave form must be given to the sickleave agent when the ticket is purchased. The wife must keep the original and dependent's identification card in her possession for presentation during travel.

Travel at the reduced R and R rate may not begin prior to the 15-day period indicated on the leave form, and must be completed within 15 days of departure from the West Coast air terminal. Tickets may be purchased from any airline office, including on-post airline ticket offices, or in Vietnam by the husband.

Development of Leadership as a Senior NCO Sees It

FROM ARMY DIGEST
Recently Sergeant Major John G. Stepanek, a 25-year-old sergeant with Maintenance Training Department and Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Virginia, was invited to discuss his views on the Officer Course graduates of the school. His words of advice to the audience were that I am making this statement available to let Sergeant Stepanek's remarks to the Army-wide audience. W. L. I. A. M. O. W. O. L. DRIDZ, Sergeant Major of the Army.

It is a time of regret that I am not young enough to be sitting out there as you are. You have so many years of challenge and you are venturing to look forward to these years as you now behold me. Soon you will meet your platoon sergeants, your first major, your other sergeants, your sergeants and your troops. What do we expect from you as officers, commanders, leaders?

We expect of you unswerving personal integrity and the highest of motivations. We expect you to maintain the highest state of personal appearance.

We expect you to be fair to be consistent — to have dignity, but not aloofness — to have compassion and understanding — to treat a soldier as an individual, with individual problems. And we expect you to have courage — the courage to stand up and be counted — to defend your men when they have followed your orders. And we expect you to be in error — to assume the blame when you are wrong.

We expect you to stick out your chin and say, "This man is worthy of promotion, and I want him promoted." And we expect you to have even greater courage and say, "This man is not qualified and he will be promoted over my dead body!" Gentlemen, I implore you do not promote a man because he is a nice guy, because he has a wife and five kids, because he has money problems, because he has a bad wife.

If he is not capable of performing the duties of his grade, do not do him and us the injustice of advancing him in grade. When he leaves you, or you leave him, he becomes someone else's problem!

Gentlemen, we expect you to have courage in the face of danger. Many of you will soon be in Vietnam where there are no safe rear echelons. During your tour, opportunities will arise for you to display personal courage and leadership. Opportunities could arise from which you could emerge as heroes. A hero is an individual who is faced with an undesirable situation and employs whatever means he deems proper to make the situation tenable or to nullify or neutralize it.

Do not display recklessness and expose yourself and your men to unnecessary risks that will reduce their normal chances of survival. This will only shake their confidence in your judgment.

Now gentlemen, you know what we expect from you? From a few of us, you can expect antagonism, a "prove yourself" attitude.

From a few of us who had the opportunity to be officers, and didn't have the guts and motivation to accept the challenge, you can expect resentment. From a few of us old timers, you can expect tolerance.

But from most of us you can expect loyalty to your position, devotion to our cause, admiration for your business efforts, your courage to raise a canteen cup of beer and say, "Lieutenant, you're OK!" Just like that.

Remember one thing, very few noncommissioned officers were awarded stripes without showing somebody something, sometime, somewhere.

You can expect a love of God, a love of country, and a love of duty to match your own.

love of God, your love of country, and your love of duty. If you sweat with us. We won't mind the heat if you sweat with us. And when our cigarettes are gone, we won't mind quitting smoking after your cigarettes are gone.

Gentlemen, you don't accept us: we weigh here first. We accept you: and when we accept you, we won't be best damn, wear flags, or carry you off the drill field on our shoulders. But, may I beseech your courage to raise a canteen cup of beer and say, "Lieutenant, you're OK!" Just like that.

If your platoon sergeant is mediocre, if he is slow to assume responsibility, if he is slow to act as a company party, we'll raise a canteen cup of beer and say, "Lieutenant, you're OK!" Just like that.

If you are leaders in I wish you happiness, luck and success in the exciting years that you will help us defend the country we have loved. May God bless you all!

Academy

Sgt. Maj. Seltzer said, with more emphasis on field work, and broader studies in leadership and tactics.

Four basic groups of trainees are planned: drill and ceremony, leadership, map reading and general subjects.

Sgt. Maj. Donald V. Wright acted as director of instruction, and operations of the academy will be the responsibility of Sgt. Maj. Rudolph Seltzer. Acting as company commander for the students will be 1st Sgt. Billy R. Schwartz, and 24 instructors, all graduates of The Infantry School's Instructor Training Course, have been selected from within Fort Benning.

Instructors and students will wear distinctive helmet liners, while with a blue stripe on the Infantry Army crest. A special insignia for the academy has been designed — crossed rifles across a silhouette of a charging infantryman, both flanking across an American flag. The crest will be on a blue, white and black flag. The motto "Follow Me" is below.

Quarters and classrooms The academy quarters and classrooms will be housed at Harmony Church. Senior course students will initially live in the barracks, but overnight and weekend privileges will be granted on a merit-deposit and class standing basis.

Basic students will be restricted to the barracks, too, with weekend privileges granted on standings. The plan of instruction for the Infantry NCO Academy will be considerably modified from that of Fort McClellan's, the Infantry Band.

Craft Shop Is Profitable Place to Spend Free Time

Do you have a hobby you pursued before you entered the service, but don't have the facilities or equipment to use now? Or maybe you have car troubles. Have you ever thought of trying your hand at a creative art?

If any of these questions apply to you, you can find the answer here at one of the eight Special Service Crafts Shops.

The shops offer facilities and instruction on anything from auto repairs to jewelry making, oil and water painting to wood craft.

All shops are staffed with civilian craft supervisors to instruct and supervise the work.

There is no charge for the use of the facilities and equipment, the only requirement being that the individual purchase the material used in his project."

Besides enjoying your hobby or making some useful or decorative item, you are eligible to win cash prizes if you enter one of the many Special Service sponsored contests for articles produced at the craft shops," Hugh E. Cook, installation crafts director, explained.

"The next contest has yet to be announced, but it should be in October, to celebrate the Army Arts and Crafts Week," Cook stated.

He added that the Director of Personnel had recently authorized the establishment of monthly contests, with cash awards.

"The winners of the conests have different levels of competition, they are installation level, Army area, DA and in some cases, competition in the All Inter-Service contest."

"Individuals can win various types of awards at all levels of competition," he added.

Men's winning prizes in these contests, will be assembled and exhibited at the major commands on post.

Two new craft shops are being planned and a multiple type building is under construction at Kelly Hill. Plans have also been made to build another new shop near the bowling alley.

This shop will have approximately 24,500 square feet of space, according to Cook.

"This should enable the instructors to increase the number of fine arts and crafts that will be available to patrons," he added, "it will also raise the standards of the program and increase the variety."

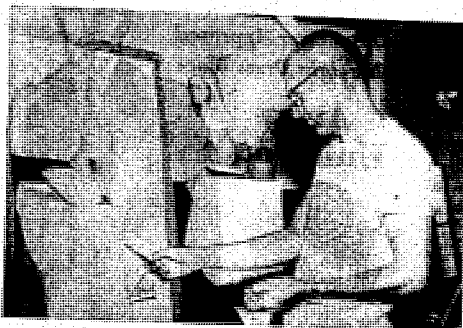

Cook explained the location and specialties of the shops as follows: Main Post; Shop No. 1, Bldg. No. 394, multiple type shop with facilities for woodcraft, pottery, ceramics, leather craft, model building and jewelry making. Shop No. 7, Bldg. No. 334, another multiple type shop, located in the vicinity of the 6th Bn (OC) Shop No. 8, Bldg. No. 2067, auto repair only (including welding).

Sand Hill; Shop No. 2, Bldg. No. 3788, visual arts, including oil and water painting, etching, drawing, creative ceramics and sculpture. Shop No. 4, Bldg. No. 3145, wood craft shop only. This includes finishing woodcrafts, new construction and refinishing. Shop No. 6, Bldg. No. 3808, is another auto repair shop. This shop also has welding and a supervisor to help with the instruction. Shop No. 3 and No. 9 are located in the Harmony Church area.

All military personnel, active and retired, their dependents, over 10 years of age and civilian employees of the post are eligible to use the craft shops. Dependents 10 to 14 must be accompanied by a parent.

Cook emphasized that the shops are open during normal off duty hours but closed on Mondays.

Jungle Training Completed By 649th Supply Company

Can a group of soldiers survive using only the land resources in hostile territory on roots and rain water until they are rescued? For 30 men of the 649th Supply and Services Co., 16th Gen. Spt. Gp., this and many other questions on jungle living have been answered.

During the last few months these men in separate groups have taken a two-week jungle training course, earning an expert rating. "Experience gained from the jungle course is invaluable," remarked 2nd Lt. Frank Hale, Jr., of the 649th. Most of the men had never spent any time in jungle area before. But they had to learn to keep themselves

Your telephone operator. Modern service and equipment have changed her job a bit. But you can still depend on her. For help in emergencies... for information... for smiling service. Telephone communications keep getting better. And so do telephone operators.

...I saw every type of animal from dwarf deer to vampire bats," recalled PFC Charles Austin. The first week of training served as an introduction to jungle living. Meals were prepared using snakes and wild roots as main courses. Communications and day and night navigation techniques were stressed. Rope bridges were erected and the men practiced scaling cliffs. In the second week, the men were placed on their own. Groups were reduced to four men to learn Search and destroy operations by the trainees covered more than 9,000 acres of jungle terrain. A day-long escape operation climaxed the course. The men had nothing more than jungle resources to live on.

Final Test Given Members Of 10th Aviation Gp. School

By Spec. 4 Howard Gaynor
The third graduating class of 10th Avn. Gp.'s School of the Soldier conducted their bivouac last Friday. This field problem was a day long exercise of both reviewing and testing the men in subjects that they had learned during the course, and later that night during a tactical assault the capturing of various strategic objectives. The problem included ten stations with the first lasting thirty minutes each and the tenth, being the assault exercise, lasting approximately four hours.

Station One was a review of the procedures used in calling a d and adjusting indirect fire, and by using an air operated mortar the men were actually able to see how this adjustment of fire is accomplished. Station 2 After this last station a written test was given, and the men began preparing for the last part of the problem—the assault. The men were divided into three groups, and each group was assigned a different mission. There were three objectives: an ammo dump, a missile site and a POL dump. Upon completion of the day, the men of the School of the Soldier returned to the garrison, knowing that they had just completed the last field exercise prior to graduation.

West Point Many Grads Slate Travel Before Training

A number of recently commissioned lieutenants, who graduated in the class of '67 at the United States Military Academy will be traveling to Fort Benning later this summer. Most of the young officers were granted 30-day graduation leaves, which is not chargeable against regular Army leave time. Naturally some of the lieutenants returned to their home towns to spend their leave, while others who married upon successful completion of their work at the Academy, are honeymooning prior to reporting for the course at The Infantry School. Many of the West Pointers have chosen foreign travel as a way to spend their two-month leave.

Some of the officers' orders list permission to visit as many as two dozen foreign countries during the time. Some will probably make it to that many, while others may find a spot or two which catches their fancy, and they may report in with only one or two foreign countries having been visited. Many of the world travelers have listed their intentions of going to the Far East, the Middle East, and the South Pacific, as well as to Europe. For most, it will be the cause once they arrive at Fort Benning, they will be involved in intensive training for several weeks, followed immediately by the grueling Ranger Course.

DOUBLE PROMOTION Post Parachutists Make Jump From Jet Aircraft

By Pvt. Frank Kaufman
Some 312 Army parachutists last week made one of the most dramatic jumps from a C-141 jet, one of the most advanced military transport planes in the Air Force's inventory. It was predicted that the C-141, now used extensively in carrying troops to Vietnam, will increasingly be utilized by Airborne soldiers in future jump missions. Capt. Herbert Erb II, S-4 officer at the 4th Stu. Bn. (Abn.) TSB, who was among those making the jump, says that as the military increases its use of jet aircraft the C-141 will eventually become the standard troop carrier. So for those who jumped from the 4th Bn. and the 6th Bn. and the Airborne Department, it was really a "jump into the future." Erb noted. Basically the difference between a jet jump and a jump from the conventional propeller driven aircraft used in basic Airborne training at Fort Benning is found in jump technique. With the jet the parachutist simply has to "walk" out of the aircraft rather than take the "bump" necessary in a prop plane to avoid being thrown against the craft and to avert the possibility of hitting other jumpers. The C-141 used last week made three lifts from Lawson Field dropping its passengers about ten minutes later on Fryar Drop Zone in nearby Alabama. Accompanying the parachutists on all three lifts was Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department.

Post Theaters Featuring Latest '007' Spy Drama

The real James Bond (Sean Connery) is back as the famous agent '007' in "You Only Live Twice" opening this week at Benning theaters.

In this, the fifth of "super-spy" series released through United Artists, Bond foils a plot to start World War III.

Based on Ian Fleming's novel, the picture is set in Japan and displays many of the country's charms including a bevy of Oriental a Shinto group ceremony.

One of these girls, Mie Bond films, includes a gyroplane and a new automobile. Replacing the famous Aston Martin DB 5 introduced first Mrs. James Bond. The "Goldfinger," is a sleek traditional style and garb of Italy created by the Toyota Motor Company of Japan.

Based on the new Toyota GT200, the Bond wagon is a two-seat, wire-wheeled sports car with a top speed of 143 miles per hour.

For the film, the car has been equipped with a unique communications console, as assembled by the Sony Corp. (circle of Japan), which includes a miniature closed-circuit TV receiver, two-way radio, hi-fi receiver and a voice-activated tape recorder.

A portable video-tape unit is installed in the glove compartment and can record action through a concealed camera mounted in the front of the car.

The gyroplane, which comes disassembled and packed in three suitcases, is an actual aircraft designed by retired RAAF Wing Commander, Kenneth H. Wallace.

Built of steel and fire-resistant glass, the plane includes: forward-firing machine guns, rockets, rear ejection flares, throwers, air-to-air missiles and undercarriage with explosives attached.

Photography, directed by Freddie Young, required more than 28 weeks of production company unit spent over two months filming in Japan on nine major locations.

An additional second-unit called for filming of exteriors in Hong Kong, underwater scenes in the Bahamas, aerial work in Spain and a sequence of Gibraltar, which involved the close cooperation of the British Royal Navy.

Harry Saltzman and Albert R. Broccoli, who recently received acclaim for "Airport," directed the film.

Lewis Gilbert, who recently received acclaim for "Airport," directed the film.

Infantry Unit Makes Telephone Connection With VC

LAI KHE, Vietnam -- The voice sounded concerned as it came over the phone to the interpreter. "What is that friend of yours?" asked the voice in Vietnamese. Boh replied in Vietnamese, "That is a friend of mine" and Boh said contact was broken abruptly. So ended a bizarre episode in which the 2nd Bn., 28th Inf., 1st Div., briefly cut the cable telephonically connected with the Viet Cong. Spec. 4 Kerry Dan Jenkins was on patrol with elements of the "Black Lions" in a zone "vc" during a recent operation when spotted a gray cable pecking through an exposed part of the road, teams to find the suspected cable. Moments later, the wire to a command detonated. His platoon leader, Lt. Dennis D. Collins, called Capt. James A. Daskal, battalion communications officer to the scene.

Daskal connected a power phone cable to see if it was indeed a power cable. No lethal sounds were emitted.

The "Black Lions" traced the cable to its hidden jungle connection, but were unable to get any further response from the Viet Cong, not even a phone call.

Medics Praised For 3-4 Record

By Capt. Jeffrey Hartman

It is about time someone had a word of praise for the Martin Army Hospital baseball team. It has been a long time from May to August, and even though the numbers have not changed, the brand of baseball they have been playing has.

True the Medics may not be burning up the league, but they have surely ceased to be anyone's conga. It's a far cry from 0-11, to winning six while losing seven games in a season. While some erroneous prognosticators were predicting the boys in red to win only one game in the second half, the Medics have been scrambling and hustling to a very respectable 3-4 record.

All things considered, the fact is that the MAH ball club has provided the fans with some of the more interesting baseball of late. Of its three victories, one has been a superb 6-0 shutout by Tom Styzen, winner of five of his last seven outings. Another, a tight 1-0 come-from-behind victory over the 10th Avn. Gp., had some of the finest defensive baseball seen anywhere in the league.

Even in losing they have been playing good ball, dropping a 2-2 squeaker in the 10th Gp. and even though 9-3 does not seem close, Jim Martin was pulling hairs for eight innings as all the 1976 Bde. could muster against a composite of MAH regulars and irregulars (four MAH starters were missing due to field problem commitments) was two unearned runs and 22 dead ball.

Marta Army's come-from-behind 8-3 victory Monday night against the 10th Gp. does well to demonstrate my point. After seeing a three-run lead melt away and become a 5-0 deficit in the sixth inning, the Medics settled down to some of the finest baseball seen at Gowdy Field this year. Styzen came on in relief of Ayers and pitched shutout ball over the last six innings. In the top of the eighth MAH knotted the score on back to back singles by Larry Martin, the team's leading hitter at 233 and Roger Sweet, and Ken Wehlan's base clearing double.

In a jam after giving up a leadoff triple in the bottom of the ninth, Styzen was helped out by some good defensive play. Again in the 10th, strong arms of Jake Hendricks at third and Jimmy Hawkins at short saved the day. Rawlins goes deep behind second to throw the runner out, and Hendricks picking up a slow dribbler and rifling the ball first for the final out of the inning.

In the top of the 12th, luring the MAH bats came alive again for three runs. Chico Rivera lead off with an infield single and proceeded to second as the ball got away from the first baseman. Mason followed with his third hit of the evening, straggling second to put both runners in scoring position. Sweet then stepped booming triple over the head of the right fielder scoring both runners. Sweet batted scored the final run as Hendricks hit into a runner's choice. Styzen then wrapped up the game striking out two in the bottom of the 12th.

The Observer

—by Larry Mahoney—

The "bushes" of baseball are all but gone. A post mortem, on the minor leagues of America, their decline and fall, would be more than a little out of date with 1968 just ahead, but memories do linger. A man does not need too many years to find him to remember baseball as it was played in the hills of the Alabama-Florida League, Class D, which was about as bushy as the game ever got.

The Panama City Flyers were the local team, and the enemy came from a semi-circle of cities up the road—Dothan, Andalusia and Opp in Alabama, Pensacola, Marianna and Fort Walton in Florida. The thing I remember most about the Flyers, a farm club of the Detroit Tigers, is their ancient bus. It had this thing about breaking down every 40 miles from nowhere. More than a few times, a motorist traveling U. S. 231 out of Florida's Panhandle into the Alabama Wiregrass Country would be held up by several dozen thumbs belonging to the Flyers. It was hitch-hike to Opp or, God forbid, f-ell.

Being familiar with the plight and final passing of the Flyers makes me more than a little interested in a new version of the bush league thriving its roots into American sporting soil today. The Pontchartrian appears to be showing strong signs of life these days. One such sign is an article in Harpers Magazine, "Bringing It In The Football Bushes." Now Harpers is an intellectual type magazine, more interested in topics like Martin Luther King, Richard Nixon, Jews and Christians in Suburbia, and the urban problems of London. So, I suspect that Larry L. King's fine humorous touch, rather than an intellectual interest in bush league football, won over the magazine's editors.

Nevertheless, the story is a good one, colorfully exploring one team in particular. The Odessa-Midland Comets of the Texas Professional Football League, King describes the TPFL as a league where "the players pick up more bruises than 'cash," the fans are known as disaster lovers, and the stadium lights are liable to be knocked out by lightning bolts."

The Holy Terror of the TPFL is a team of roughnecks from Burk Burnett, Tex., a town of 7,621 in the badlands near the Oklahoma border. Next to football, the folks around those parts count rodeo as the favorite spectator sport. It is a good question which is rougher for the participants: the cowboy being stomped by a brama bull is getting about the same thing that the Odessa-Midland Comets take from the Burk Burnett boys.

This football is of the guts-and-elbows variety. King captures the canyone particularly well in one description of a play during the Comets' opening encounter with the Sherman-Denison Jets, on a dark and stormy night. The deluge hit five minutes after the game began. The rain poured down so hard that only at the 50-yard-line could the spectators, a crowd of 4,000 inspired by radio promises of a "perfect night for football," see the turf. As a Comet linebacker was making a grinding, head-on tackle, lightning bolts lit the stadium lights. "My God," the linebacker yelled in the dark, "I've gone blind!"

That game ended with the Comets taking a 0-5 loss (a field goal and a safety scored in the dark). This was the start of a campaign that saw Odessa-Midland hammer out a final record of eight losses, one tie, a single victory, and a deficit of $1,572. The lone victory was an important one, coming against an unbeaten Tulsa team. The Comet brass, desperate as the Egyptian Army for one good show-

Co. C Holds League Lead In CTC Softball Action

In the 1st Battalion League, no major change has taken place since the last reporting of the standings. The Co. C, 1st Bn. team still leads the league with a 14-4 lead, followed by both Co. B, 1st Bn., and the 549th Lt. Equip. Maint. Co., 13-6.

There seems to be a real race in this league between the two best and closely contending second place teams, as each of them battle it out with opponents to take the second place in the league.

In case of a tie for second place, there will be a playoff game to decide which team will go to the post softball match with the leading team.

The 60th Ord. Co., a late comer in the league, has risen from last to second place and has edged the 69th teams who have held on to the first place position through the 12 scheduled three-round bouts gets underway at 7:30 p.m. at the Beane Street Arena.

OBSERVER

Continued from Page 22 ing, had signed up a giant professional wrestler for the Tulsa game along with a former Canadian League player to add rock to the defense.

Despite a broken neck, several mangled knees, fears of going blind, and a crowd of 63 at their last game of the season, let it be known that the Comets of Odessa-Midland will be going strong again this year.

The bushes are being beaten for players. New teams are entering the minor professional football leagues at a fast clip. And the love of the game, playing the game, injects a lot of life into what, at a distance, may seem to be a rather unlikely level of the sport.

"These old boys," one former high school and college great who coaches and plays for the Comets, was quoted as saying, "just love football because that they'd play it in hell with their backs broke."

What is badly needed in these minors, as it was with baseball, is some kind of parental organization for the booming big leagues. As in baseball, the parent clubs would farm out promising players not quite up to the game as played in Cleveland, Green Bay and Chicago, paying their salaries in exchange for playing experience.

It's all here in bush league football today. Pay rolls are often missed, finding a field for practice can be impossible, the players eat cheeseburgers instead of steak, and crowds of 400, 266 and even 63 are too common for comfort. Remember, however, that a major league franchise went for as little as $100 in the 1820's and by laying $50,000 on the table in 1940 you could have bought a commanding interest in the best. Today, these franchises, if you find one for sale, run from $7 million up.

Jewish Chaplain Qualifies For Airborne Wings Here

Last week the silver wings of an airborne trooper were pinned on Chaplain (Capt.) Franklin C. Breslau, 41, making him the first Jewish chaplain to become airborne-qualified.

There have been countless chaplains of other faiths who successfully earned their wings, but according to records in the office of the Chief of Chaplains in Washington, D. C., never before has any Jewish chaplain earned the parachute badge.

Chaplain Breslau, assigned to Fort Campbell, Ky., is returning there for duty with the 101st Abn. Div. The chaplain is a graduate of a Jewish academy in his native Chicago, holds a degree in electrical engineering from the Illinois Institute of Technology, and was employed by IBM.

Good Wishes:

On hand at Fort Benning's Lawson Army Air Field to watch the rabbi wear his first jump was post chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope and Col. Lamar Welch, director of the Airborne Department.

Chaplain Breslau was joined on his initial jump by Protestant Chaplain (Capt.) Charles E. Brinkover, assigned to the student brigade, who had been through the same training just a few months before, and Catholic Chaplain (MaJ.) John P. McOutch, the assistant deputy chaplain of the 82nd Abn. Div., who flew down from Fort Bragg, N. C., to make the jump with the chaplains of the other faiths.

On the Alabama soil of Fryar Field, where the students land following the Chief of Chaplains in Washington, D. C., never before has any Jewish chaplain earned the parachute badge.

When the jumper removed his steel helmet following the first jump, he displayed a first-time I left the door open after the four-second count and then I looked up, and saw my canteen fully inflated.

and what a beautiful sight it was. The ride down was simply great, in fact," said the chaplain, "a jump all day if they let me."

All The Way He told the group of instructors and fellow students who gathered around him on the drop zone. "The Big Jumpmaster surely was with me all the way." The remark pleased the first of his five qualifying jumps.

When the jumper removed his steel helmet following the first jump, he displayed a first-time I left the door open after the four-second count and then I looked up, and saw my canteen fully inflated.

with: "In the Orthodox Jewish faith, the cap is used to constantly remind you that there is something above you, it serves to signify the fear of God."

The airborne fraternity welcomed in almost four hundred new members Wednesday afternoon when the class of students completed their final jump, and had their wings pinned on, but no student claimed a greater distinction than did any student feel any prouder of his wings than did the first Jewish chaplain to wear them, Chaplain (Capt.) Franklin C. Breslau.

Observations of a platoon leader in Vietnam - Part I

Four distinct classes of terrain exist in Vietnam: the central highlands, the delta coastal areas, the coastal regions and the jungles. Each area has its peculiar advantages and disadvantages to the Infantry unit.

Central Highlands The central highlands as found around An Khe require extensive use of the formation since undergrowth is thick. Here the terrain is dominated by mountains providing excellent navigational aids.

Mountains break into hills and deep stream beds which contain the densest vegetation in the area. Movement is limited to a crawl. Occasional open areas consist of cultivated land or fields of elephant grass. Numerous mountain passes provide excellent ambush sites.

Control is difficult in thick vegetation. During movement the point team of a unit performs frontal-clearing duties. Flank security of the column poses unmanageable problems because such elements are difficult to control. Also this requires cutting three paths as opposed to one, thus impeding rapid movement. The point team here also. Observation is often limited to several meters and fields of fire are non-existent. These factors do not favor the enemy ambush on other than well defined routes.

Next week - Flat Coastal Areas.

Bond Participation Earns Recognition for ATC Unit

First at Fort Benning—Brig. Gen. Charles M. Mount presented a letter of commendation to the company commander, Capt. Gerald Waring.

Project officer, 2nd Lt. Ray E. Burkhardt, was also commended for his assistance in attaining the goal.

During his address to the unit, Burkhardt said that there is a difference in an outstanding unit and a unit of varying ability.

"There is a difference in an outstanding unit and a unit of varying ability. Your accomplishment of 100 per cent participation reflects your spirit, teamwork and military performance."

GRENADE SAFETY CLIP (LEFT OF HANDLE)
Now Being Tested At Infantry Board

Hand Grenade
New Safety Designed To Reduce Accidents

In an effort to eliminate accidental grenade detonations, the U.S. Army Infantry Board, a test activity of the U.S. Army Test and Evaluation Command, is currently testing and evaluating a secondary safety device for the hand grenade.

The hand grenade safety clip, as it is called, is designed to prevent the grenade from springing loose and arming the weapon inadvertently, should the pin be unintentionally or accidentally removed from the grenade.

It is an additional safety device and will be used in conjunction with the standard grenade pin.

The new device is a spring steel wire clip specially figured to fit most smooth-banded grenades. The clip consists of two integral parts: a loop which fits around the grenade fuse at the neck of the grenade; and a clamp, which fit around and presses against the grenade handle.

Pressure exerted by the safety clip prevents the release pin from making contact with the fuse, whether or not the grenade pin is in place.

Officer in charge of the testing on this new safety device is Lt. Gerald M. Horton, Test Division of the Infantry Board.

Col. Sanders is a 1948 graduate of Infantry Officer Candidate School, and presently assigned to the Disarmament Agency of the Department of the Army in Washington, D.C.

Following the induction Col. Sanders with his wife and two children were given a tour of the hall by Lt. Col. H. B. Hatcher, commander of the 5th Bn, where this hall is located.

"It is with great pride I return to the Infantry, even as an AIS officer, for if I hadn't been invited to begin with, I wouldn't have gotten this far." Col. Sanders remarked after being presented the certificate of admission from Col. Geaney.

F. E. Halliday. The Cult of Shakespeare: A Captivating Account of the Fortunes of Shakespeare from the Time of His Death in 1616 to the Present Day: A Survey of the Rise of Bardolatry and the More Frenzied Excesses of the Libertine that have been taken with his work, and the follies that have been committed in his name.

Few people are fully aware of this history and the power of the spell that the great name has exercised throughout the centuries. The most entertaining, perhaps the most enlightening, of the Victorians, whose flights of scholarly fancy are unrivaled in the history of literature.

The Shakespeare Club did not, of course, end with the Victorians; the battles over the Bard continue to rage unmitigated fury. One designed a cultist as any of his predecessors. Halliday's sound scholarship and trenchant wit have combined to produce a delightful and refreshing appraisal of the longest and most complex of all literary controversies.

Against Aging. St. Martin's, 1960.

He also discusses the point at which man begins to age, and the visible signs of which. This book should be a source of enlightenment for every individual who is interested in the problem of arresting and alleviating the aging process.

Seneca's tragedies are adaptations of Greek models. They differ from Greek in that the choral odes are designed for recitation rather than singing; this suggests that the plays were intended for stage presentation.

Charles Leonard Woolley. The Art of the Middle East: Including Persia, Mesopotamia and Palestine. Crown, 1966.

Sir Leonard has produced a most comprehensive survey of the art and history of the vast area, with its different and constantly changing populations, from the earliest times to 500 AD. The color plates he has selected illustrate his text superbly.

Among the illustrations even the most remote times and least-known regions are represented. There are beautiful examples of the al-Ubad and Sasa pottery; of the astonishing architecture of Ur, and the famous cylinder seals.

197th Support Battalion Taking Shape, CO Named

By Spec. 5 Michael McMullan

Operating from a one-room headquarters, the commander of the 197th Support Battalion began building his new command from the ground up this week.

Lt. Col. James O. Poulnot was named to head the new organization formed to provide additional support services for the 197th Inf. Bde. to help it meet more efficiently its ever-expanding commitments to support The Infantry School.

LT. COL. FOULNOT
New CO

He was the sole member of the battalion's headquarters and headquarters detachment when it was officially activated last week.

The early part of this week was spent collecting office space for a battalion staff. Initially, 2nd Lt. William R. Jamison Jr. will serve as adjutant. Jamison had served as assistant brigade adjutant since his assignment here in June.

Commander Named

2nd Lt. Alfred L. Carson Jr., assigned to the brigade only a week ago, was named commander of the headquarters detachment. He will also function as the battalion S-2.

The S-4 section will be headed by 2nd Lt. Ervin A. Williams Jr. who was transferred from the brigade S-4 section where he was assistant ammunition officer.

About 20 enlisted men were also assigned to the new unit early in the week to make up a working staff for the battalion headquarters.

A second major concern for the new commander this week was planning the move of his temporary one-room office in the basement of brigade headquarters to more spacious accommodations in Building 5000 in the South Harmony Church area where the bulk of the organization will be permanently quartered.

All 4 Companies

Poulnot, who was assigned to the 197th from 10th Avn. Gp, where he served as S-4, expects to have all four companies of the battalion—which will eventually number more than 700 officers and enlisted men—activated by mid-September.

Company A has already become an operating unit. It was activated in May under the command of Capt. Dale J. Bickert to furnish administrative support to the brigade headquarters through adjutant general, finance, chaplain and staff judge advocate sections.

It will remain located at Kelley Hill because of its close ties to the headquarters.

The next company scheduled to be activated is Co. C, a 199-man supply and transport unit, which will come to being Tuesday.

Activated Next Month

On the first of September, Co. D, a maintenance company authorized 190 men, will be officially activated.

The battalion will be complete with the activation Sept. 15 of a medical company, Co. B, which will be authorized 111 men.

At this point, definite assignments of commanders and officers to these companies have not been made. Officers and enlisted men have been requisitioned to fill the authorized positions in the units and will be assigned as they become available.

No large scale transfers of personnel from other units or other posts are planned.

Army Aviator

Poulnot, 38, an Army aviator rated in rotary-wing aircraft, served here as head of a maintenance company with the 11th Aid Assault Division from June 1964 to June 1965 during its testing phase. He went with the division to Vietnam when it became the 1st Cav. Div. (Airmobile) during the summer of 1965. He returned here in July 1966 for duty with 10th Avn. Gp.

The colonel's home is Athens, Ga. He graduated from the University of Georgia in Athens and was commissioned there in 1952. His decorations include the Air Medal with oak leaf cluster, the Army Commendation Medal, Senior Army Aviator Badge and Captain Aviator Service medals for service in Vietnam and Korea.

Poulnot and his wife, Betty, also from Athens, have two children: Pam, 11, and Chris,

AR Governs Post Burials

As a result of changed regulations, veterans and retired personnel will not be buried in post cemeteries unless a member of his or her immediate family has already been interred in the cemetery.

The immediate family of an individual are listed as the wife, husband, widow, widower and minor children of the individual. This regulation, AR 210-190, does not invalidate any property written commitment made prior to publication of the regulation.

Policy of Department of the Army is that new post cemeteries will not be established, and existing post cemeteries will not be expanded beyond present boundaries.

As a result grave sites in post cemeteries are becoming scarce.

A representative of the Quartermaster Services Div., the agency exercising supervision of the cemetery, said that if interments continue at the present rate the post cemetery will be filled by 1970. Only 273 sites remain which have not been used or reserved.

There is nothing in the regulation that precludes veterans and retired persons burial in a national cemetery.

Pittsburgh Reservists Complete Annual Training Tour Here Today

The 2073rd Pittsburgh U. S. Army Reserve School today will complete its eleven annual active duty training tour here of two weeks. The training, as has been stated by officers taking the Infantry Officer Career Course, has been the best that they have received. Col. Gus Nagy, the school's director of instruction, commented that the training was satisfactory and in some instances even better than what he expected. The men have responded well to the training. Periodical exams showed that they have scored higher than any other reserve group, pointed out Col. Nagy.

Emphasis on training was in line with the assignment of the school of providing a progressive system of military education for the officers.

The first week primarily consisted of classroom work covering communications systems, preventive maintenance and mortars and target analysis. The final weeks also will be briefed on airborne training, will tour the leadership reaction course and the officer candidate facilities.

The group will conclude their visit to the post Wednesday morning, departing from the Muscogee County Airport.

Greeks to Arrive For Visit Sunday

The commandant of the Hellenic Army's Infantry School will lead a delegation of 18 Greek officers on a visit to Fort Benning's Infantry School starting Sunday.

While at Fort Benning, the Greek officers, headed by Brig. Gen. John Martinos, also will be briefed on airborne training, will tour the leadership reaction course and the officer candidate facilities.

For 2-Day Visit General Kinnard Returns to Post

The general who left Fort Benning two years ago to lead the Army's first airborne division—The First Cavalry—into combat in Vietnam, returned here this week, almost two years to the day after he departed.

Lt. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the U.S. Army Combat Development Command at Fort Belvoir, Va., arrived at Fort Benning yesterday and will remain until today.

The general will visit the Combat Development Command Infantry Agency, and will be given a briefing. Among other visitors to Fort Benning next week will be four other generals, and a Danish colonel.

Brig. Gen. John T. Peegle, the commanding general of the 412th Engr. Bde. in Vicksburg, Miss., arrived Sunday with his reservists who will be here for two weeks of annual summer training.

Col. Askel Jorgensen, the military attache of the Danish Embassy arrived yesterday for a visit which will end Saturday.

Traffic Tickets Increase Here.

The number of moving traffic citations and driving privilege suspensions on post continues to rise. Citations rose from 394 in the Third Quarter, FY67 to 4126 in the Fourth Quarter. FY67 and suspensions rose from 302 to 372 for the same period.

Since July 1, Fort Benning has had two traffic fatalities, in spite of the recent increase of command emphasis on safe driving.

Commanders and supervisors at all levels must take a personal and continuing interest in the traffic safety program.

31st's Symbol Contest Is Announced To Name Polar Bear

Want to make $50 and get a three-day pass on which to spend those coins? It's simple, just name the new symbol, 500-pound polar bear being erected at Headquarters, 2d Bn., 31st Inf., on Kelley Hill.

Two restrictions apply, though—contestants must be members of the 2d Bn., 31st Inf. and the name "Yogi" and "Smokey" will not be considered.

Battalion members were invited to submit name suggestions this week and next, by Col. Charles Smith, commanding officer and by Sgt. Maj. James H. Price in connection with 31st Inf. Organization Day ceremonies to be held at the Marine Road headquarters site August 12.

The bear, built by Spec. 4 James Gengler and a staff of assistants, was put in place Monday and covered until its unveiling during the Saturday festivities.

Name entries must be accompanied by an explanation of why the name is appropriate. Date of entry will have no influence on selection of the winning suggestion.

Made of fiberglass and polyester resin over a metal frame, the bear will be mounted on an angular, concrete base which underwent finishing touches last week-end. The base is poured concrete over a metal frame and sits in what will be a water-filled moat along Marine Road immediately outside the battalion headquarters building.

Entry blanks for the name contest are available from unit first sergeants, and there is no limit to the number of suggestions unit members, officers and enlisted men alike, may make.

Vets, War Orphans Final Plans Should Be Made Now for Fall School Term

ATLANTA—Georgia veterans and war orphans' final plans for their education should be made now for the fall school term, a Georgia Department of Veterans Service official said.

Field office managers of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist veterans in determining eligibility for education assistance.

Also, each new school term is a deadline to begin or complete an education program for some veterans or war orphans. What is the advantage and how do I go about getting it?

Answer: The advantage is that, when you take your request in to the Department of Veterans Affairs, you are guaranteed to get it. There's a box to check, if you want your refund in bonds.

Question: I have a $50 Series E Savings Bond which I purchased in January, 1945. What is this bond worth today? Is it still earning interest?

Answer: In March, 1967, your bond — for which you paid $37.50 — is valued at $74.56, and it is still earning interest. No E or H Savings Bonds ever sold has ceased to earn interest.

47th OCS Class Graduates Walt and Pershing Kin

GENERAL WALT Address: OCS

By Spec. 4 Larry Mahoney

Stars and bars were the insignia of the day as Fort Benning's Infantry Officer Candidate School graduated its 47th class of 1967 in Marshall Auditorium yesterday.

The stars belonged to Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, until recently the commander of Marine Corps troops in South Vietnam. Gen. Walt, now Marine deputy chief of staff for manpower in Washington D.C., was graduation speaker at ceremonies in which his nephew, 2nd Lt. Ronald S. Walt, received his gold bar.

More stars figured in the ceremony led by 2nd Lt. Richard W. Pershing received his commission nearly 50 years after his grandfather, Gen. John J. Pershing, led American forces in Europe during World War I.

Lieutenants Walt and Pershing were among 143 candidates of the 74th Co., 7th Student Bn., who completed the arduous 22-week course.

Gen. Walt Speaks
The strapping Marine general, a veteran of over 30 years and highly decorated in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, spoke to the new second lieutenants on the conflict in Asia and the responsibility of rank.

Calling Vietnam "the greatest challenge," Gen. Walt said it is "not a generals' war."

"Instead, it's a captain's or lieutenant's war, a corporals' or sergeants' war." "You'll be fighting for a people I have the greatest of respect for," he said. "I have found them honorable, dedicated and patriotic in every way."

Referring to pressures for peace in this country, Gen. Walt said, "I don't think there's a question on whether we can win the war over there. The question is whether it can be won here."

"We have lost over 11,000 American boys," he pointed out. "I think it's far too late to be arguing about whether we should be there."

Gen. Walt, who as a second lieutenant participated in the 1938 defense of the International Settlement in Shanghai, China, addressed several remarks to the graduates on rank and its responsibility at the platoon level.

primarily to the most important item in the Army," he said. "This is the man who fires the rifle, throws the hand grenade and uses the bayonet. He who can become a man overnight at 19, the man who determines if your unit advances."

Gen. Walt called the Infantryman the "cutting edge of our fighting force." "And you are going to be his boss," he added.

"I like to liken a rifle platoon to a football team," Gen. Walt, once an All-American football player, said. "If you put a football team on a field and every man is not drilled to perfection, that team is going to lose. So it is with the rifle platoon."

To qualify with his weapon, the M14 rifle, a trainee must hit a minimum of 20 targets out of a possible 84 (on the record range). To date, 16,642 have qualified as experts with scores of 60 or more. The existing training center individual record is a score of 81.

Top Condition

The graduating trainee today is in top physical condition. Throughout his eight weeks of training, physical combat proficiency is stressed daily.

During the seventh week, the trainee takes a final test which consists of five events: 40-yard low crawl, run-dodge-jump, horizontal ladder, grenade throw and one-mile run. To successfully pass this phase of training, the trainee must score at least 300 points of the 500 maximum.

Currently, 132 basic trainees have achieved the maximum score and have received "100 Certificates" signed by Gen. Mount.

Guaranteed return

How would you like to invest your money in a plan that will guarantee $10 return for every $100 you invest?

No, the investment is not in stocks, oil field gambles or a mining venture. In fact, the investment is reserved strictly for you while you're serving overseas.

The Uniformed Services Savings Deposit Program pays 10 per cent interest, compounded quarterly, on money you deposit during your overseas assignment.

Any member of the Armed Forces serving outside the 50 States, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Guam or American Samoa can save any amount of his unallotted pay and allowances under the program. This includes basic pay, special pay, proficiency pay, incentive pay, Family Separation Allowance, hostile fire pay and reenlistment bonus.

Deposits can be made either in cash or by allotment in $5 increments and will continue to draw interest up to 90 day after you return from overseas.

Although you won't normally be able to withdraw your deposits and interest while you're still overseas, provisions have been made for emergency withdrawals under special circumstances.

Once you return to the United States, all deposits plus interest will be paid to you immediately upon your written request at either your port of debarkation or new duty station or upon separation from active duty.

This is not only a great plan to help your money work for you, but it helps our government as well.

By putting your money in the Uniformed Services Savings Deposit Program instead of spending it while you're overseas, you help strengthen the economic strength by reducing the balance of payments expenditures and the resulting drain on our gold reserves.

Deposits can be made either in cash or by allotment in $5 increments and will continue to draw interest up to 90 day after you return from overseas.

Hygienist's role important in maintaining oral health

The dental hygienist is a highly trained, very important member of the oral health team, whose basic duties augment the efforts of the dentist. She is engaged in the vital task of establishing and maintaining superior degrees of oral hygiene discipline as a means of controlling dental disease.

The extremely high incidence and widespread frequency of dental disease is a matter of public record. Enough is known, presently, of this most prevalent disease of all, to eliminate the greater majority of cases. In its simplest form, the factors involved, in prevention of most oral disease, are proper oral hygiene, thorough brushing and adequate professional care.

The dental hygienist performs the vital function of restoring the mouth to a healthfully clean state. She removes tartar (calculus) from the teeth and otherwise polishes and cleans the exposed portions of the teeth. She will apply fluoride solutions and disseminate oral hygiene information to her patients.

Overall, the value of her services, in terms of disease prevention is immeasurable and a most important factor in the overall maintenance of excellent oral health.

Poverty not only purpose for social work program

Mental Hygiene Division of the Civilian Control Service is divided into three parts: the field terms, which deal primarily with active duty soldiers and their units; the dependent clinic, and the inpatient psychiatric service at Mary Army Hospital.

Patients are seen on referral from other medical facilities on referral from unit commanders and other agencies, and by direct appointments. Treatment is offered to subject to the number of staff available. Most dependents are referred, when necessary, to civilian clinics and agencies for any kind of long term treatment required.

There is often some confusion about the responsibility for dealing with social and psychological problems. Military members and their dependents often feel they have a right to medical care, including care of problems such as marital conflict, child behavior problems and long-term psychotherapy for various psychological problems. The Army does not assume such responsibility, either in theory or in fact. Staff required to offer such assistance.

The first priority for MHCS is to the problems of the active duty soldier who significantly affect his ability to perform duty. Some form of treatment, consultation with the soldier's command about changes in his social situation, or recommendation for separation is made when a soldier cannot perform. Assistance is given to dependents to find assistance for social and emotional problems, but this assistance usually involves referral to a civilian source. When the problem cannot be solved in this way it may be necessary for the soldier to be released from service so he can solve his problem in a civilian community which offers the necessary help.

Recent Medicare legislation has provided the financial assistance to make many kinds of treatment possible which were simply beyond the capability of most military families in the past. Notably, this includes outpatient care for psychological problems, a service which formerly was almost prohibitively expensive.

The Judge Says...

'Small print' can deceive the unsuspecting buyer

Practically everyone has heard about the infamous "small print" in contracts. Not only do a majority of persons not bother to read the small print in a contract, but do not read even the large print. It appears that a good proportion of those who bother to read their contracts before signing them do not understand what the contract says. Instead they rely solely on the oral promises and interpretations of the seller or his representatives.

It is only after the contract is signed, when something goes wrong, that the buyer finally awakens from his pleasant dreams that "the nice salesman guaranteed that the car is in A-1 condition" and comes to a lawyer. In most cases, at this stage of the game, it is too late to provide effective relief.

Problem Areas By far, the biggest problem areas in the performance of contracts arise out of those provisions which start in often to decide who has "warranties." Usually Pvt. Jones, being the estate man of the world that he is, asks the friendly salesman for some kind of guarantee before he signs on the dotted line for that "beautiful, clean cream-puff of a 1961 Batmobile."

The friendly salesman readily agrees to a "30 day guarantee." Jones signs the contract and proudly drives his car proudly away. Two days later, his cream-puff fails the on-post safety inspection. To add insult to injury, he discovers that his Batmobile has a cracked engine block.

Jones returns to the friendly salesman and asks him to live up to his "guarantee." "What guarantee?" the friendly salesman says, as he points to the provisions of the contract which clearly state: "All warranties and guarantees, express or implied, other than those expressly stated in this contract are hereby waived."

Jones then goes to see his Soldier's Advocate for help. The friendly salesman gets him out of this mess. Much to his chagrin, Jones is told that, at this stage of the game, little can be done for him.

He is over 21 years of age, of sound mind and body, and is presumed to have understood the provisions of the contract. In the absence of fraud, which is extremely difficult to prove, Jones is told that he is over 21 years of age, of sound mind and body, and is presumed to have understood the provisions of the contract. ### A tribute to Fort Benning

Dear Sir, We made a recent visit to Fort Benning, Ga., and we were impressed with the courtesy extended us there and the sharp appearance and military bearing of the officers and men and feel you should be complimented.

Our eldest son is still there in OCS and we found a young man who left us as a boy. He is proud and devoted to what he is doing and said his instructors are the best he has ever seen.

My second son graduated from Airborne and his instructors have instilled in him a pride he had never attained before and he realized that the times he had been "chewed out" were for his own good and to keep him alive. His wings are solid gold to him.

I feel it only right that these instructors should be commended. In this mixed up world we live in today it is good to know we still have men devoted to their duty and the training of our boys and able to turn out men who are the future of our country.

Petticoat Portraits Mrs. Anderson Has 3 Roles As Wife, Nurse and Officer

By Jane Daniels
If by an Army wife says, "I'm Army," she means that because her husband is in the Army, she absorbs the traditions and activities of the Army as her own, then Mrs. Anderson is "double Army."
Not only is she the wife of Capt. Phil Anderson, a student in the Infantry Officers' Career Course, but she is also a member of the Army Nurse Corps. Mrs. Anderson, or Capt. Billie Anderson as she is better known at Marine Army Hospital, is the head nurse on the hospital's Intensive Care Ward.

The confusion at finding two Capt. Andersons in the same household is some times too much for the one who calls their home. The caller asks, "May I speak to Capt. Anderson," and when a feminine voice answers, "This is she," the unknowing caller merely stutters.
It is a pleasant circumstance for the captains, however, who not only enjoy being captains together but also enjoy doing a lot of other things together... reading, golf and fishing.

Mrs. Anderson decided early that she wanted to be a nurse. "It all started," she says, "when I had to stay in a hospital after an accident when I was 12. I fell in love with student nurses and with nursing."
It was later, while she was in her junior year of training at Waits School of Nursing in Durham, N. C., that she decided to become an Army nurse. After receiving her license as a registered nurse, she became an Army officer.

She left her home at Hurdle Mills, N. C., with the idea of giving the Army two years of service. Her desire was to combine nursing and travel. After two years she knew that the corps was for her.
Her first assignment was in Fort Sam Houston, Tex. Then she was at the West Point Army Hospital, N.Y., before she went to Korea.
She truly enjoyed her 13 months in the 113rd Evacuation Hospital, ASCOM, Korea. Even when cold winter nights forced her to wear a green wool uniform and combat boots, it was a "wonderful, rewarding" experience.
Perhaps she looks at Korea fondly, too, because it was there that she met her future husband. He was stationed in Okinawa, but was frequently temporarily stationed in Korea. Luck did not seem to favor them when she was sent to Fort Benning while he stayed in Korea and Okinawa.

They wrote back and forth for a year, however, and he was later also assigned here. Four days after he arrived here they became engaged and two-and-a-half months later they were married.
As she talks with enthusiasm, determination and with true enjoyment for her work, she makes you decide that being in her ward would be a pleasure.

MRS. ANDERSON Double-Army

Event Acquaints Aviation Wives

Sisters Study Dancing During World Travels

By Marilyn Larsen. Frequent travel has afforded Jane and Susan Stafford an opportunity to study ballet and academics in various countries and states. "We were both born in Troy, Ala.," said Susan Stafford, 18, the youngest of the two sisters, "but since daddy's retirement in 1963, we've been living in Columbus and call it 'home' now." "Daddy," Miss D. Stafford, is a retired Army lieutenant colonel. One of Col. Stafford's assignments took the family to Munich, Germany, where Jane and Susan had the chance to study with the Munich Opera Ballet Company while in Mainz, again due to their father's tour of duty both girls studied with Anna Dozier. Another stop, Pennsylvania, brought Jane and Susan to the Philadelphia Civic Ballet. Now in Columbus, the girls are studying with Terrell Paulk, director of Fort Benning's Le Petit Ballet. Jane, 23, has performed with Le Petit Ballet in the Norfolk International Festival, Swan Lake, The King and I and The Nutcracker. Susan performed with the Columbus Little Theatre production of Carnival, and with Le Petit Ballet's Nutcracker also. Although Jane once thought of becoming a dancer, she is a teacher by profession. A graduate of Middlebury College in Vermont, she taught English, last term at Baker High School in Columbus. Jane has taken education courses at Columbus College and American University. "I've always loved dancing," she said, "I think perhaps I'd like to receive my Master's Degree in Dance, and eventually teach ballet at the college level." Susan, a student at Columbus College, enjoys art and languages. "Jane and I both enjoy languages. In September Jane will be teaching German at the Hardaway School. Although I have no definite plans as yet, I think I'd like to concentrate on German."

The Many Moods of John Wayne: He Plays a Convincing Col. Michael Kirby in Early Morning 'PT' Scene on Eubanks Field Green Berets

'Colonel Kirby' Directs Cameras on Eubanks Field

By Spec. 4 Larry Mahoney
The shirtless Airborne trainees trotted past the jeep which had brought two colonels alongside the Eubanks Field track to observe the aspiring paratroopers get their morning run.

Col. Lamar Welch, chief of the Airborne Department, was a familiar figure in his fatigues, but who was the strapping colonel clad in dress tans and wearing the green beret of the Special Forces?

His name tag read "Kirby" and he cut a convincing figure as a Green Beret. But this was John Wayne of film-dom fame, and more was going on at Eubanks Field than the usual PT and tower training.

As the sweating soldiers doubled-timed by him, this Col. Kirby bellowed, "Who are you?"

Their lines were natural. "Airborne, Sir," the colonel shouted, "Airborne all the way!"

The filming of the first feature-length movie on war as it is in Vietnam was underway at Fort Benning. This was the first week of filming of "The Green Berets," and the picture at Eubanks Field was a combination of Army and Hollywood, with the stark steel of the jump towers rearing above a collection of cameras, lights and sound equipment.

Contrasting Hair Styles
Cameramen and sound and light specialists recorded the brief footage, their long California-style hair contrasting with the shaved scalps of the soldiers.

Along with Col. Welch, the other Fort Benning "extra" in the jeep was its driver, Spec. 4 Wayne Harvey, Co. B, CTC, who had his face touched up a few minutes before by makeup artist Guy Del Russo of Batjac Productions, the company producing the film.

Also in the scene was actor Ed Faulkner, a television regular, who plays a Special Forces captain. Other actors scheduled for the "Green Berets" include David Janssen, cast as a newspaper reporter, Aldo Ray, a sergeant, Jim Hutton, an enlisted man, and Raymond St. Jacques, another non-com. Wayne's son, Pat, will also appear as a Green Beret.

Locals to Appear Before shooting ends on the multi-million dollar production, several hundred Fort Benning soldier and civilian extras should get their faces on film.

The first footage here was shot August 9, with a Special Forces team from Fort Bragg flying down to put on a "Gabriel Show," a demonstration of unconventional warfare capabilities. Some 200 civilian extras from Columbus, the post, and elsewhere, filled the bleachers for the scene, set at the JFK Special Warfare Center.

The entire first week of filming was devoted to Green Beret training, with Fort Benning's ranges, barracks and woodlands stubbing for the North Carolina post.

Included has been footage taken on bayonet and machinegun ranges; and a demonstration by Ranger specialists in hand-to-hand combat.

Sneak Team
The Army's International Sneak Team figured in one scene with Wayne, who begins the film by hand-picking specialists for the Special Forces team he will take to Vietnam as Col. Michael Kirby.

The Vietnam scenes, too, will be filmed here. Batjac is building a Special Forces "A" Camp and a Montagnard village on post, and some of Fort Benning's vast wilderness will simulate the Asian highland jungle where the Green Berets operate.

duction, several hundred Fort Benning soldier and civilian extras should get their faces on film.

The first footage here was shot August 9, with a Special Forces team from Fort Bragg flying down to put on a "Gabriel Show," a demonstration of unconventional warfare capabilities. Some 200 civilian extras from Columbus, the post, and elsewhere, filled the bleachers for the scene, set at the JFK Special Warfare Center.

The entire first week of filming was devoted to Green Beret training, with Fort Benning's ranges, barracks and woodlands stubbing for the North Carolina post.

Included has been footage taken on bayonet and machinegun ranges; and a demonstration by Ranger specialists in hand-to-hand combat.

Transitional Class Trains Airmen In All Phases of Helicopter Piloting

By Spec. Howard Gwynne
The 10th Avn. Co. of the 10th UH-1 recently graduated 68 aviators from its transitional class. The class, comprised of 133 Army aviators and 55 civilians, completed the three week course with a graduation exercise last Friday.

The course consisted of intensive ground school which was conducted concurrently with actual flying. In ground school, with safety always emphasized, students were trained in every facet of the "Huey" helicopter.

First were the mechanical functions of the aircraft. Here the men were introduced to the rotor and track systems, power plant, auxiliary equipment, electrical, fuel and oil systems and flight controls.

Students instructed in the systems of the UH-1, the students were then instructed in the requirements for the flight. In this area the subjects directly related to flying the aircraft were taught. These subjects included transmission safety, tail rotor failure, emergency procedures, altitude and tactical instrument flying and the Decca navigation system.

Throughout this period of ground school, the basic staged maneuvers including autorotations, servo-off landings, and emergency procedures were also taught. This phase of the course was completed with a Vietnam orientation and a summary of the problems most often encountered in jungle operations.

With the first two weeks of training completed and the basic flight maneuvers behind them, the students then moved on to the advanced phases of operating the "Huey".

Advanced Training
The advanced training and set up a perimeter defense. The defense formation was held until the ships lifted off and then the troops moved toward their objective.

The final phase of the problem was held the following day, when the troops were picked up at Concord LZ and returned to Dickman field.

Engineers Given Savings Awards

Two divisions and two sub-shops qualified with 100 percent participation. The other awards were earned by participation of over 90 percent. Nine of these awards were for the second year.

Col. S. D. Wilder, post engineer, made the presentation to the division and sub-shop heads. Mrs. Ann Moore, Engineer Section band chairman, presented a TUSA Savings Award to Col. Wilder for his office of Post Engineer.

Final Plans Being Made For Aug. 29 Bond Show

Logistic support plans and traffic control problems were being worked out this week for the upcoming U.S. Savings Bond show scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 29, at Doughboy Stadium.

The show, which will begin at 7:30 p.m., will feature the appearance by Hollywood star John Wayne, and entertainment by local artists.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commander, has issued an open invitation to the public to attend the show which is billed as "a gesture of appreciation for the post military and civilian support of the U.S. Savings Bond program."

According to Mrs. Marcia Wolfe, Infantry Center Savings Bond office, a raffle will be presented an award during the program, by the U.S. Treasury Dept. for his time and efforts in support of the bond program, to include films which he has made to promote purchase of the bonds.

Entertainment for the program being coordinated by Special Services, will include a half-hour band concert starting at 7 p.m., selections by Miss Froyde Marshall, local mezzo soprano, who appears as "Bess" in the Broadway production of "Porgy and Bess," the Third Army Chorus; the Sing-Out Georgia group; and monologist Mrs. Elaine Hope.

In the vent of inclement weather, the show will be postponed until the following night, same location and time.

ORIGINAL "COLT SHORTY" TOP COMPARED WITH SUXORR - Slight Increase in Barrel Length Made After Vietnam Test (U. S. Army Photo)

Wife's Noble Intentions Put Family Finances in Arrears

S.Sgt. and Mrs. John (the station hospital and finally, a decision, he was to be sent to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington and could expect to stay for a considerable length of time.)

Wouldn't Stay Put

They were paying on a home, paying on a car, still making installment payments on some of their furniture, but managing to pay them all on time and still have a little left over for the bank account.

Then it happened.

The sergeant's persistent cough, which at first he had attributed to too much smoking, became worse. In a few weeks' time there had been numerous examinations and tests at the dispensary, then financial counseling session, during the repayment period. The outcome was a check covering overdue payments, but a good credit rating would only compound the problem, take the reserve even lower.

It is for this reason that AER Fund Campaigns are conducted each year at Army installations. The 1967 campaign is currently under way at Fort Benning. No goal or quota has been set but it is hoped all military members will give at least a dollar at their company orderly room or to their section klyman.

Now, one policy protects mom, dad and children, too!

It takes a special kind of policy to provide protection for your family—and Equitable has it! The Equitable Family Protection plan provides insurance coverage on each present member of your family who qualifies. And future children are automatically covered—starting when they're at least 15 days old—at no extra cost.

'Shorty' Is Back For More Tests

The "colt shorty" has been assembled and broken-down of the hand guard much easier and a newly engineered buffer assembly which will reduce the cyclic rate in automatic fire.

Also a nylon-coated butt-stock and release lever designed to make the weapon's contact with the firer's face and shoulder more comfortable and now shot-peened upper and lower receivers which create a more receptive surface for corrosion resistance material covering and which should improve the corrosion resistance capability.

This increasing of the barrel length by 1 1/2 inches perils attachment of the XM-148, 40-mm, grenade launcher and a more universal use of the submachine gun. XM-117E1 having been given its baptism in Vietnam.

Gen. Wells Addresses Reservists

"No handbook can instill in you the pride, and from no other source but yourselves can you draw the strength," noted Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Wells Jr., in an address to all reservist component members of the 72nd Co. who graduated here Saturday.

Gen. Wells, division commander, 30th Armored Div., Tennessee National Guard, stressed the need for leadership in today's military/world by saying, "To maintain superior power we must maintain superior leadership."

The general told the graduates that it was important to know their superior and their men, and to gain the confidence of both. He also noted that knowledge was of the utmost importance. "You can delegate duties, but you cannot delegate knowledge."

"You have a choice in the military," the general said, "What you do, or don't do—the choice is yours," he concluded.

The reservists were commissioned prior to graduation and the National Guardsmen will be commissioned upon return to their home units.

Army Shooters Top Field in National Pistol Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — The battle for National pistol shooting supremacy ended today as the U.S. Army Pistol Team bombed the Air Force, slaughtered the Marines and scouted the Navy in a match held by backstabbers and low scores. The Army team spent six days demonstrating the skill that has made them the litigal champions.

M.Sgt. William B. Blankenship came from behind to win the day of individual firing. Three points behind Heugatter, one point behind Air Force Maj. Green and even with his team mate Ralph Thompson and Robert Whittace, Blankenship out did the head, slowly and methodically but it was not until the last shot was fired that his victory was sealed. Whittace and Heugatter shot their best giving the Army a clean sweep of the top three pistol awards.

The minor war between Army's Maj. Sallie Carroll and Michigan's Trudi Schermitzauer, developed during the early stages of the match, fizzled out on the last day of shooting as Trudi threw away a fourteen point lead and lost 2537 to 2531. Carroll's win gives her the National Women's Pistol Championship for the third time.

Low Scores
 Gusting, chilling winds and angry skies kept the team scores low but Army Grey won the National Team Championship by a comfortable margin over Army Blue, 3441 to 3438.

Army Grey won the 22 Caliber Championship with 1193 while Army Silver put 10 the Air Force 1155-372 to 1155-34x for second.

The All - National Guard Team post 1139 win in the Center Fire Championships to out score Michigan's State Police, 1137 and Navy's 1134.

The 45 Caliber Team Championship belonged to Army Grey. They outscored the Air Force 1155 to 1154.

In the Individual Championships Army's M. Sgt. Ralph O. Thompson successfully defended his National 22x1x effort was out-ranked by Air Force's S.Sgt. Edwin Teague's 22x1x.

and Whitace were runners-up.

Center Fire Title
 Maj. Franklin Green, USAF, won the Center Fire 70x1x with 884 defeating Blankenship's 883 and Donald Hamilton, U.S. Navy, 881.

The 45 Championship went to Hamilton with 875. Blankenship was runner-up with 873 and M.Sgt. Donald Rupp, USAF, was third with 872.

Continuing their domination of the team events the Army teams won the first two places in the National Trophy Team Match while the Army Reserve team placed third.

S.Sgt. Merriweather Jones, U.S. Army, narrowly missed a win in the National Trophy Individual Match. His 253-1x effort was out-ranked by Air Force's S.Sgt. Edwin Teague's 22x1x.

Take Your Ball And Go Home

By M.Sgt. Jim Macfarlane
 197th Inf. Coach

I've heard it said that the post Negro umpire are on my personal payroll. It's also been said I've got a team of semi-pros and no wonder I never lose a game. There are those in Special Services that will openly avow that my team is running baseball on this post. I have an answer for these allegations but before I give it I want to point out some interesting and indicative statistics.

These are not statistics in the usual sense - a talliation of meaningless columns of figures. These statistics should point out something to the knowledgeable sports fan and to the not so knowledgeable observer of post athletics. They will put an end to any doubts or confusion they might have had about athletics on this post.

The team batting average, based on the starting lineup, begin to tell the story. The 197th leads with a .319 followed by CTC, 291; 10th Avn., .281; 125; and TSB with a .185. (Incidentally, the 197th's starting infield is hitting .91.)

Our pitchers have struck out 217 of the opposition and average of 2.1 strike outs per game while TSB could only muster 150 strike outs on 1818 Avn., and MAIL could only get 120 apiece. Though CTC leads the league in this department with 241, precision and cooperation from the Brigade combined these were chalked up against the 197th.

The 197th, to date, has scored 234 runs on 254 hits while the opposition has only mustered 51 runs on 129 hits in games against us.

In the 24 games to date, the 197th has won seven games on the 16-run rule, indicating its predominance in early inning play, and has shut out 22 of the teams it has faced.

In all this game activity the 197th committed only 48 errors while the opposition committed 77.

If the 197th ball team and myself, were guilty of the things that have been thrown at us, the statistics of the teams performances would not read as they do.

What do these overwhelming statistics show?

What the statistics show and indicate is that the whole baseball season has shown is that there is only one unit on this post that cares about winning. There is only one unit on this post that has worked and built a team, a spirit and a focal point for Brigade esprit-de-corps. There is only one unit that hasn't and from all indications never will lose its sense of rivalry and cooperation.

And when I say cooperation, I mean on every level. I'm not assigned to every unit on this post so I really only know what goes on in one unit. I know that in the unit we get encouragement and cooperation from the Brigade combined these were chalked up against the 197th.

THE FORUM

By Mike McNulty

The name of the game is organization. Some time ago, five brawny gentlemen, football players, announced to the Cleveland Browns that they would sign their 1967 contracts unless all five received raises. Pursued by a demand was added that a clause be inserted into the contracts, all would be traded. The five were traded, to wit, if any one of the five was traded, all would be traded.

Most prominent of the group is LeRoy Kelly, leading rusher for the Browns last season. Cleveland is counting heavily on him this year, but the five, however, are running a tight ship. Two of the five, however, were reserves, likely candidates for the trading block. So, because of this or because the Browns management did not want to start a precedent in the National Football League, the top office did not give in, and the five began a much-publicized hideout. The end result was that two of the players have been traded, while the other three, discontent, have decided to play out their option.

This is not the beginning of a revolt within the Browns organization, nor is it a new era of player versus management in professional football; it is the continuation of discontent that has been growing for the last five years. And the union may not be too far away when a day, similar to the one the teamsters have, will represent the players of professional sports in their contract negotiations with management.

Recently, Look magazine published an article written by Bernie Parrish, one time defensive halfback for the Browns, in which he maintained that an athletes union representing the four major sports — not just football — will be a player mutiny.

He suggests this: "What we need is an American Federation of Professional Athletes, a certified union encompassing the four major sports — football, baseball, basketball and hockey — with a chief counsel to handle the overall legislative and economic problems common to us all, and with each of the individual sports having its own Marvin Miller; that is, an experienced labor negotiator, working full time for his members and responsible to nobody but them."

Some of the reasons for such a union in football, at least, would be the following: Professional football is a growing business, setting records each year, and, except for some of the great stars and giant bonus boys we read about ever so often, many players are underpaid; the contracts of the players contain too many clauses that are pro-management; the present voice of the players, the Players Association, is not large enough or strong enough to handle the players' needs.

Parrish points to the fact that while the owners' profits have climbed 4,300 per cent from 1956 to the present, the players' salaries have risen 73 per cent. "For an average of $9,200 in 1956 to $15,000 last year."

He claims that such clauses like the option clause — "which allows the club to control its players for the length of their playing careers by giving it the right to renew their contracts from season to season" — hinders all players.

Under this clause, if a player is unhappy and wants to leave a particular team he would have to play for a full season at 90 per cent of his previous year's contract in order to turn himself loose from his current organization. The less the player would take would probably be considerable, then you take into account the 10 per cent in pay and the loss of whatever increase a player might receive from his present team or one he might jump to. Also, his next club can release him at any time without severance pay or advance notice.

Parrish states many other grievances. But he does not make many points that back up his want of a players union.

Professional football is no longer a small-time amusement run by ex-athletes who were a little pudgy but nevertheless good guys, always willing to add the players whenever the need arose. This is a big business, getting bigger as each year passes. A union is inevitable — let's hope it turns out to be a good one.

GUESS WHO SAID...

"I ALWAYS GO TO THE 'OFF LIMITS' BARS... CAUSE THAT'S WHERE THE ACTION IS..."

'Take Your Ball and Go Home'

(Continued from Page 23) Initiative and above all, the winning spirit. When boys first learn the game of baseball, on the very first day they ever picked up a bat and ball they invariably learn a very important lesson, too. For the post league cry-hobbes the lesson is particularly applicable. If you can't play in a league with the big boys, take your ball and go home.

'New Look Cards' Army Wins 24 Gold Medals At 5th Annual Pan Am Meet

By PFC Julian Marbat

After winning the pennant three years ago, the St. Louis Cardinals slid to a dismal seventh-place finish in 1965 and ended up in sixth place last year—and were confidently picked to wind up in the second division by the Las Vegas gamblers again this year. No such luck. The "new look Cardinals" have been riding high all season long.

One big reason the Cards are flying high is the rehabilitation of two major league rejecters. Former New York Yankee Roger Maris, who earned a place in baseball's record book with 61 homers in 1961, and Orlando Cepeda, a former San Francisco star who just could not get along with the Giants.

Maris, playing most of the time against right handed pitchers is currently batting in the .290's (a bit better than last year's .233) and is just as good as ever with his glove. Also, he is more content with the Cardinals. He was quoted as saying that "This has been the happiest season of my life," and that he is playing ball forever. Cepeda on the other hand is making his presence known on a big scale.

He is currently in the batting race with Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente and Houston's Rusty Staub maintaining an average close to .350. (He has led the league this year on several occasions.) Not only is he St. Louis' leading hitter, but he also leads the club in home runs with 18 and the National League in hits.

These two rejuvenated stars are also receiving substantial help from the other members of the staff. Tim McCarver is batting a wholesome .322 and Curt Flood has a handsome .305 average. The team as a whole is second in the league in batting with a .264 average trailing only powerful Pittsburgh. Also the pitching staff is doing a creditable job. And the clutch performances of other Cardinals is strictly magnificent. Julian Javier, Ed Brock and Jim Hanahan have proved to be very dependable in tight situations. With over 50 games to be played, the Cards are not a shoo-in but it is a pretty good bet that Busch stadium will once again play host to the World Series.

Winnipeg, Manitoba (ANF)—U.S. Army Athletes won 24 gold medals for the United States in 14 individual and team events during the Fifth Pan American Games which concluded here recently.

S.Sgt. Herschel Anderson won the first gold medal of the international competition and started the U. S. team on its way to 120 gold medals, which equaled the Games record. He was the first of his two gold medals in the individual free-pistol contest.

The U.S. team dominated the Games in competition with teams from 28 nations. The Games attracted nearly 400,000 spectators, the largest crowd in the history of the midwestern Canadian city, the smallest community ever to host the Pan American Games.

In addition to four gold medals for individual performance and 20 first place medals for participation in 10 team victories, Army competitors won four silver and eight bronze medals.

Sgt. William B. Blankenship, Jr., won three gold medals as a member of three first-place shooting teams. He placed second in the individual center-fire pistol competition to win a silver medal and to become the top U. S. Army medal winner.

Other medal winners included Julian Javier, Ed Brock and Jim Hanahan who were named to the U. S. team. Also included were Sergeant Anderson and SFC Aubrey E. Smith, set a Games record for the English Match Rifle event with its first place score of 2,379 points.

Other gold medal winners included: Maj. J. Paul Boehm, kayaking, 10,000-meter pairs and 1,000-meter pairs.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, extended greetings here Monday to the faculty and students of the Davenport, Iowa, U. S. Army Reserve School.

More than 120 reserve officers from throughout the nation will study communications and combat intelligence for Phase II and III of their Infantry Officer Career Course.

Col. Frank A. Park will head a reserve faculty of more than 75 officers which will conduct lectures and practical exercises during the 14-day active training period.

Gen. Wright offered all necessary assistance from Benning's Infantry School while pointing out the importance of the active duty training.

"The professional knowledge you will have gained here will be reflected in improved combat readiness of our reserve forces," he remarked.

A series of comprehensive exams given during the course will provide the faculty with a close evaluation of the students' progress.

Following the post commander's welcome the student officers proceeded immediately to their respective classes.

Army to Advise On VA Benefits

The U. S. Army is planning to insure that personnel being retired or discharged for disabilities will be fully informed of the benefits available to them.

According to Department of the Army Message 826168, arrangements will be made for a personal interview by a VA representative or other qualified person who will explain Veterans' Administration benefits.

This counseling will be held at hospitals or transfer installations.

The message states that individuals will be urged to file applications for compensation before separation or retirement.

Special emphasis will be placed on the right to convert the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) to commercial insurance.

Assistant operations sergeant, G. 3, 101st Abn. Div., was presented to 2nd Lt. Clifton D. Waltaker, Co. E. The Honor Company rotating trophy was accepted by 1st Sgt. Joseph Izab, Co. A. ELDERLY MONTAGNARD TRIBESMAN Tries C-Rations for First Time

Medical Science Frightens Underdeveloped Vietnamese

U. S. medical aid has saved innumerable lives in Vietnam, but in many areas the natives are suspicious of our modern techniques. The following story is an example of these apprehensions. PLEIKU, Vietnam—Quick thinking by engineer resulted in a Montagnard village chief being placed in a Pleiku hospital, a move which probably saved his life. The 3rd and Support Plts., 554th Engr. Co., attached to the 509th Engr. Co., Army Engr. Command Vietnam, were hauling scrap lumber and construction materials to the Montagnard village near their base camp. At the village, the engineers met a former interpreter for the 3rd Bde., 25th Inf. Div., who told them that his father was very ill and had been unable to eat for a week. Staff Sergeants Ruben L. Jennings and James W. Haynicks took a look at the chief and believed that he was almost dead. Report Condition The engineers returned to their camp and reported the chief's condition to one of the platoon leaders, 1st Lt. Michael Petty. He notified the 1st Engr. Bn, surgeon, Capt. Domingo C. Rivera, and the doctor and 1st Lt. Olyver Kingbury, the other platoon leader, returned to the village. Rivera's initial diagnosis was pneumonia with complications. He called for an ambulance to take the chief to a hospital. However, the chief's family, unfamiliar with American medical practice, later took him home to be cared for by the local medicine man. He volunteered to care for the chief and continue to visit him at his home until he can return to the hospital for proper medical treatment. A sacrifice of three cows

Ten Generals Are Among Visitors Here This Week

This week could have been termed "The Week of the Generals" at Fort Benning since no less than 10 general officers visited the post.

A three-star Marine general and the new deputy commander of the Third Army headed the list of visitors.

Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Wall, the former Marine commander in Vietnam, arrived on Wednesday to address an OCS graduation the following day and was welcomed at an honors ceremony on York Field.

Arriving the same day was the new deputy commanding general of the Third Army and commander of Fort McPherson, Maj. Gen. Hamilton A. Twitchell.

It was Gen. Twitchell's first visit to the post since assuming his new duties August 1. He inspected reservists of the 412th Engr. Bde. and attached units, and various construction projects.

Also coming to Fort Benning for orientation tours were 18 Brook officers and six Europeans. The Europeans were greeted by Brig. Gen. John Martin, commandant of the Helene Infantry School, located at Muscogee County Airport Wednesday and will leave tomorrow.

Monday, Brig. Gen. E. Rayford Ellis, deputy commander of the 8th Maneuver Area Command, arrived to inspect the training areas of the 412th Mississippi reserve unit, which is presently undergoing two weeks of annual summer training in the Harmony Church area.

He was followed by Brig. Gen. Robert W. Duke, who arrived on Wednesday to check reserve engineer training.

Another visitor to the 412th was Col. William Barnes, representing Brig. Gen. Thomas Cassidy, Chief of Army Engineers. Col. Barnes is assigned to the Office of District Engineers, Savannah, Ga. Wednesday, a group of five

VA Gives Suggestions For Easier Transition

Collectors Plan Meet

Local military insignia collectors will meet Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Infantry Museum, Ingersoll St.

All collectors are invited to attend and bring any display of patches, distinctive insignia or anything that would be of interest. The meeting is planned as an excellent opportunity for collectors to become acquainted and trade items.

ATLANTA—There are several important steps which, if taken by Georgians recently discharged from military service, can make the transition from military to civilian life easier and prevent future difficulties, says a Veterans Service director.

"Of particular importance are things to do relating to employment, registration with Selective Service, preservation of discharge papers, application for VA benefits and insurance policy conversion," he said.

Wheeler offered the following guidelines for veterans:

AND SAVE $500!

Over 11,000 servicemen have started investing in their future in General Development's Florida.

(Maybe you ought to find out what they already know.)

When you make the service a career, you can retire when you're still young. And that's quite an advantage.

Since you've moved around a good deal, you probably have in mind the things you want when you settle down. Nice neighbors. Where the weather is not too cold and not too hot, but just right all year long. Handy shopping center. Schools. Churches. Social Clubs. Outlets for sports. All this—plus good job opportunities.

You can find this and more in and around Port Malabar, one of General Development Corporation's "NiceNeighbors" communities.

Why many servicemen pick Port Malabar.

Port Malabar is just 19 miles from Patrick Air Force Base with its outstanding facilities for active and retired military families and 32 miles from Cape Kennedy.

Many Port Malabar residents, after retiring from the service, have begun new careers with some of the nation's most respected firms. Among these are Aero Jet, Avco, Bell Telephone Laboratories, Boeing, General Electric, Lockheed, Philco, and Westinghouse. In addition to opportunities offered by the space and related programs, a whole complex of new retail firms is springing up to serve the needs of this rapidly growing area.

And you'll find great living. Golf, swimming, boating, fishing, and so much more—all under Florida's sun-filled skies.

General Development Land Prices have increased 158% in ten years.

In ten years the population of the company's three major communities has grown from zero to well over 20,000. And during these years land prices have also made significant gains. For example: in 1957 a homestead in Port Charlotte sold for $695. Today General Development sells a similar lot for $11,795—an increase of 158%.

In Port Malabar, the same is true. In 1959, Port Malabar homesites sold for $1,295. Today General Development sells comparable homesites for $2,395.

Start your Florida future with a $500 saving!

If you invest in a General Development homesite now—during our Decade of Growth Celebration—you will receive a Certificate of Value worth $500 toward the purchase of any new General Development home. The Certificate is good for ten years after your purchase, and can be transferred if you should decide to sell your land. But you must act now. This special $500 Anniversary offer is good for a limited time only.

Benning OCS One of Three Remaining After Phaseback

Fort Benning's Infantry Officer Candidate School, operating at the highest level since World War II, will be one of only three in the Army after cutback plans abolish five of the schools within the next seven months.

Under an OCS program expanded to meet demands of war in Vietnam, the Army commissioned more than 19,000 officers during fiscal year 1967. This compares with 3,672 commissioned in 1966 and a 10-year annual average of 11,677 for the period ending June 30, 1966.

In a programmed move to streamline and improve manpower utilization on an Army-wide basis, the U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry at Fort Benning is phasing from a planned input of 1320 trainees weekly to 1100 trainees weekly.

The move will return the Training Center to its original posture when it was organized Sept. 15, 1963. It is expected that one of the first results of this reduction will be a change in the Training Center's organization from 61 to 41 training companies. These companies will be organized into 10 five-company battalions under the supervision of two brigade headquarters.

Personnel generated by the phase out of the two battalions and one brigade headquarters will be utilized for the most part to alleviate existing shortages in the Training Center.

Brigadier General Charles M. Mount Jr., commanding the 8th Infantry Center, general of the Training Center, in making the announcement to his command, said that it appeared that the

Mrs. Stewart was flown to Washington D. C. Wednesday with a Department of the Army escort to receive the nation's highest award for valor on behalf of her husband. The presentation was made by Secretary of the Army, Stanley R. Resor, acting for the President of the United States.

The late Sgt. Stewart and his family first came to Fort Benning in November 1962 when he was assigned to the 11th Air Assault (test) Div. with Co. A, 1st Bn., 511th Inf. He was later assigned to the 2nd Bn. of the 8th Cav. when the 1st Cav. Div. was formed, and subsequently to the 12th Cav. when the division was deployed to Vietnam in August, 1965.

Five Wounded The action for which Stewart is cited, and during which he lost his life, occurred when his company, which was manning a defensive perimeter, was attacked by a reinforced North Vietnamese company. One of those in the six-man squad of which Stewart was a member, were wounded, when caught in the direct path of ted to wear it on a temporary basis, only during the period they remain assigned or attached.

The emblem is a blue ribbon set in a gold-colored metal frame. The leaves are green and are worn on the breast pocket centered over the pocket.

In a Drang Action

The President said that the unit is being cited for its actions in Vietnam between Oct. 23 and Nov. 26, 1965.

According to Sgt. Maj. Lawrence E. Kennedy, presently sergeant major of The Infantry School at Fort Benning, the period for which the Division has been cited covered the battles of the Ia Drang Valley and Plei Me. Kennedy was with the division at the time, assigned to the 9th Cavalry, which set off the Ia Drang Valley ambush on Nov. 5, 1965.

Kennedy also recalls that the 33rd Aviation (Delta) Battalion received the Presidential Unit Citation but that the 1st Cavalry is the first division-size unit in Vietnam to be honored.

sing "The Lord's Prayer," at its close. The "Sing-Out Georgia" group, under the direction of Lt. Col. Edward J. Kelly, Jr., will make two appearances for a total of five selections. Further entertainment

Further entertainment on the program will be provided by the Third Army Soldiers Chorus under the direction of Lt. William J. Tuttle. The singing group, which has been complemented by highly following numerous appearances throughout the area, will sing four selections.

Signs will be erected along the routes into the post, pointing the way to Doughboy Stadium and parking will be available in all nearby parking areas.

Doughboy Stadium normally seats approximately 10,000 and this will be augmented Tuesday night with additional bleachers and chairs to be erected on the field.

Widow

the enemy's thrust. Stewart became a lone defender of vital terrain — virtually one man against a hostile platoon. Refusing to take advantage of a lull in the firing which would have permitted him to withdraw, Stewart elected to hold his ground to protect his fallen comrades and prevent an enemy penetration of the company perimeter.

As the full force of the platoon-size main attack struck his lone position, he fought like a man possessed; emptying magazine after magazine at the determined, charging enemy. The enemy drove almost to his position and hurled grenades, but Stewart decimated them by relieving and throwing the grenades back. Exhausting his ammunition, he crawled under intense fire to his wounded team members and collected ammunition that they were unable to use.

OCS

here, with the Artillery OCS at Fort Sill, Okla., and Engineer OCS at Fort Belvoir, Mo.

OCS operations now will be at Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Lee, Va., Fort Eustis, Va., and the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Although the OCS accession rate and facilities will be phased back, the total number of candidates commissioned this fiscal year will vary only slightly from last year.

As a result of his defense, the company position held until the arrival of a reinforcing platoon which counterattacked the enemy, now occupying foxholes to the left of Stewart's position.

After the counterattack, his body was found in a shallow enemy hole where he had been ordered to add his fire to that of the counterattacking platoon. Eight enemy dead were found around his immediate position, with evidence that fifteen others had been dragged away. The wounded whom he gave his life to protect, were recovered and evacuated.

"Indomitable Courage"

The citation called Stewart's "indomitable courage" a tribute to himself and an inspiration to all men of his unit.

Stewart was born on Christmas Day, 1942, in West Columbia, W. Va. His mother, Mrs. Ethel M. Slitt, resides at Route 1, Racine, Ohio. Stewart graduated from the Middletown Ohio High School in 1962.

He enlisted in the Army in April, 1960, took basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., advanced training at Fort Dix.

It's the driver

It isn't the vehicle that begins to whine
When forced to stop for an old stop sign—
It's the driver.
It isn't the vehicle that takes a drink,
Then quickly loses its power to think—
It's the driver.
It isn't the vehicle that fails to heed:
The dangers of reckless, discourteous speed—
It's the driver.
It isn't the vehicle that steps on the gas
And causes an accident, trying to pass—
It's the driver.
A vehicle may be bent and twisted awry,
But it isn't the vehicle that will have to die—
It's the driver.

Safe skin diving requires more skill, better health

Skin diving enthusiasts are gaining thousands of new recruits each summer. Thousands of Americans of all ages and both sexes are spending summer weekends exploring lakes and streams from the vantage of the fishes.

From the medical standpoint, physicians say that diving makes demands on with good health, the potential diver should be better than average swimmer. A moderately skilled swimmer can dive with SCUBA equipment, but in an emergency the swimming skills born of long practice and good physical conditioning may mean the difference between survival and death:

Never dive alone, the AMA advises. Use a buddy system and be certain that your buddy is competent and trustworthy. Learn to use artificial respiration and see that your buddy knows it. Plan your dives, know where you're going, how long and how long you can stay under. Work out a system of underwater communication signals for emergencies. Never dive when you are overly tired, have a cold or just not feeling well.

Use quick release buckles on weight belts or SCUBA harness. You may need to cut loose and surface quickly. Do not indulge in horseplay and take needless risks. Watch out for boats while in the water. The power boat skipper may not know you are there.

Watch your depth. Pressures mount rapidly as you descend. Do not hold your breath while ascending. Air lungs and should be allowed to bubble out as you are coming up.

Policy errors can cause cancellation of insurance

A number of unfortunate situations related to the insurance coverage of Army personnel have recently come to the attention of the Department of Army. For example, one family was deprived of the benefits of a commercial insurance policy solely because the allotment requested by the soldier, who was subsequently killed in Vietnam, was not put into effect until two months after his death.

The insurance company has refused to honor the contract as no payments were received prior to the claim. Contacts with insurance companies further indicate that large numbers of policies must be canceled monthly because of failure to receive allotment payments.

Some of the common deficiencies noted during the processing of applications for insurance are:

Incorrect effective date for the allotment.

Failure on the part of the individual to properly fill out the allotment authorization form and sign it.

Failure of allotment clerks to properly process the allotment form to Finance Center, U.S. Army.

No cash payment to cover payment of premiums through the month in which the allotment becomes effective.

Individual's lack of understanding of the allotment system.

Allotment authorization late in arriving at Finance Center, U.S. Army.

A particularly important point is this: when the insurance coverage is actually in effect,

The Judge Says ...

'Military' does not exempt soldiers from state taxes

The obligation of military members to file state income tax returns is dependent upon the laws of the states. However, some are under the misconception that they are exempt from all state income taxes, solely by reason of their military service.

Military personnel are not exempt from income taxation imposed by their state of legal residence. This obligation is not modified by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940. The applicable state law is controlling as to filing requirements, rates, military exemptions, etc.

Legal Residents Generally, persons who are legal residents of a state on the last day of the taxable year are subject to its income tax laws even though they are not physically present therein during the year. An individual has only one legal residence at any given time.

In some cases legal residence is easily determined. In others, the advice of a Soldiers Advocate or legal assistance officer may be required. Generally, an individual's residence is the place where an individual has made his home and where he intends to remain indefinitely.

True-false questions test knowledge of dental care

- TRUE OR FALSE
- Smoking is injurious to the teeth.
  - One should seek the hardest bristles available when selecting a toothbrush.
  - Bleeding gums are a normal result of vigorous, effective tooth brushing.
  - Normally, calcium may be withdrawn from the teeth during pregnancy.

Answers

- False — Exhaustive studies have implicated smoking as a definite contributory factor in heart disease, cancer and others. However, there is no evidence to indicate any injury to the teeth.
- False — It is generally conceded today that the most effective type of toothbrush is the soft brush, when properly used. Unshould a hard brush be used for routine brushing. Any person who doubts exists in any particular situation, a dentist should be consulted.
- False — Emphatically so! Bleeding, whether from the gums or elsewhere in the body, is an abnormal sign and cause for alarm. If the teeth are brushed

Fashion Show Is Theme Of NCO Wives Meeting

A bunch that the ladies are just as interested in their children's "back to school" fashions as in their own new fall wardrobe seemed to be verified recently at the Noncommissioned Officers' Wives' Club luncheon at the 7-8-9 Club.

Appropriately, the program was a children's fashion show from a local Columbus department store.

Even in fashions for the children, such fashion-wise phrases as "tan and tangerine," "lights and brights," "the low-belted look," and

A documentary film on Vietnam was the main feature for the Geographical Wives at a luncheon recently at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Club.

The film, "The First Team in Vietnam," narrated by a professional television network, was presented by Capt. Henry B. Thorpe Jr., who produced the film in Vietnam. Thorpe, a member of The Infantry School's Ranger Department, also talked to the wives about his experiences in Vietnam.

Sister Joan Thomas, M. S. B. T., director of the Catholic Activities Center, was also welcomed as an honored guest.

Tables were decorated with oriental objects of brass and wood and a replica of that house.

Others welcomed were Mrs. Francis Rodgers of Ellwood, Pa., mother of Mrs. George Downer; Mrs. Albert Repko of Cleveland, Ohio;

The special guests: Col. and Mrs. Earl P. Hopper, Col. and Mrs. Hilton D. Payne, Col. and Mrs. Charles P. Cox, Mrs. and Mrs. Robert H. Stecker and Capt. and Mrs. Wayne L. Davis were introduced to those at the dinner by the student host, Larry Staley.

Mrs. Reeves Enjoys Being 'On the Go'

Mrs. Virginia Reeves, bingo chairman for the Noncommissioned Officers' Wives' Club, is not a go-go girl but she insists that she does "love going."

Always being "on the go" as an Army wife, of course, means a lot of moving, but Mrs. Reeves loves that too. "It's exciting seeing a new place," she says, "and even though I always hate leaving old friends, I enjoy making new friends."

VIRGINIA REEVES Bingo Chairman

She also loves baseball and howling. Here she shows with the NCO Wives' League and is the scorekeeper for her team. She says that she has not done as much howling lately. "I once howled in as many as three leagues a week," she adds. A huge box of trophies testify to her skill as well as to her enjoyment of bowling.

Baseball Fan
As an avid fan of baseball, she attends local baseball games and never fails to miss a baseball game on television.

Being bingo chairman for the wives club means that each weekend she supervises one of the club's major money-making projects. She also takes part in the Sergeants' Major Wives' Club and the Army Training Center NCO Wives' Club.

This fall she hopes to continue working with Brownies. Last year she was the refreshment chairman for Brownie Troop No. 155. Of course, a major factor in her "being on the go," is her family. Her husband, Sgt. Maj. Roy Reeves, is the personnel sergeant major for the Army Training Center. Their three children, Ginger, 16, Foy, 15 and Sammy, 7, all have swimming as their main interest this summer.

Blind Date
Mrs. Reeves, of Enterprise, Ala., and her husband, Elba, Ala., met on a blind date. Three months later, they were married. It had been "love at first sight" for them. Mrs. Reeves laughs, however, that she would not always recommend blind dates to others. Shortly after their marriage, her husband re-entered the Army. Since then they have lived in Fort Jackson, S.C., Camp Atterbury, Ind., Fort Rucker, Ala., Fort Benning, Ga., Fort Riley, Kans., Ansbach, Germany, Erlange, Germany and Fort Sill, Okla. During her husband's two tours in Korea, the family lived in Alabama.

Loves Travel
Her love of travel is deep indeed. Mrs. Reeves

Wives Fete Mrs. Hollis

The officers' wives of The Infantry School's Weapons Department held a coffee recently at the post's Country Club.

With a country store theme and a program of song, the wives honored Mrs. Joel M. Hollis, wife of the newly assigned department director.

Songs telling the story of a young couple in love were sung by the Officers' Wives' Club Chorus under the direction of Mrs. Robert Hertel.

New members who were welcomed were Mrs. John R. Blanks, Mrs. Maylor C. McCarter, Mrs. Thomas J. Wenzel, Mrs. Kenneth E. Jenkins, Mrs. Robert F. Lanin, Mrs. Neal Y. Fickett, Mrs. John Mayerick, Mrs. James L. Duacan, Mrs. Allen B. Hodgson and Mrs. James F. Westenberg.

Guests included Mrs. Richard Young, Miss Donna Barzough, Miss Vicki Foster and Miss Lucell Lena.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Nelson Garcia and Mrs. Robert E. Patnaude.

Ladies of the Headquarters Committee, under the direction of Mrs. Donald F. Barzough, wife of the department's deputy director, were hostesses.

FINAL COFFEE
The Medical Services Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning held their final coffee for this summer recently at the Fort Benning Country Club. The hostess for the membership drive coffee was Mrs. Myron Gledhill.

Special greetings were extended to new arrivals and guest. Good wishes went with those leaving. Special announcements were made for the coming year, and many new members were welcomed to the club.

Maybe the clue for those weight-watchers is to stay as active as Mrs. Reeves does.

Shelley Noble to Teach Pre-Ballet Class Here

By Marilyn Larsen
A two and a half year veteran with Fort Benning's "Le Petit Ballet Company," 19-year-old Shelley Noble, a native of Columbus, will be the new pre-ballet instructor at the post's School of Dances.
Miss Noble, who began her career when she was six, has spent the past five years of her professional dancing career studying and performing with various known troupes, such as the Columbus Guild. Two and a half years ago, she joined Terrell Pjauk, director of Le Petit Ballet, and has been dancing the feature ballet solos in performances at the Norfolk Azalea Festival, Mount Pleasant Fine Arts Festival and the recent Le Petit Ballet.
Her most recent achievement was her solo ballet role this summer with the Lakewood Theatre, in Barroeville, Penn., in which she portrayed "Louise" in the hit musical production Carouse.
Teaching ballet is no new experience for Miss Noble, as she has taught many of the advanced classes at the production of The Nutcracker. In addition, she has danced in many productions for the Officers' Wives' Club, here at Fort Benning.
Last summer Miss Noble studied under Erling Stubb School of Dance. When asked what her main objective will be as a pre-ballet instructor for the School of Dance, Miss Noble replied, "I'd like the parents of my pupils to understand that pre-ballet, which covers the ages four through six, is an introduction to coordination and movement to music. . . not ballet technique." Miss Noble observes that "without hav-

Guard Units to Get Riot Control Training

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A special training program on riot control for Army National Guard units will be stressed in the expanded program because of the new dimension added to riot control training as a result of recent civil disorders in which arson, looting and occasional sniping were encountered.

The program will provide uniform guidance for riot control training for National Guard units, with the objective of producing units capable of functioning as teams to provide assistance and support to municipal or state authorities in case of civil disturbances.

Added Benefits Are Announced By AFR Assn.

Brig. Gen. George H. Krieger, (Ret.), secretary-treasurer of the Armed Forces Relief and Benefit Association has announced that effective immediately the A.F.R. and B.A. will require that members - officers of this association need have only one year continuous membership in order to maintain their group life insurance coverage after retirement or separation from the service.

Last year, for the first time since its founding in 1947, the A.F.R. and B.A. extended their group life insurance coverage to members after their retirement or separation, and at that time required that they have two years continuous membership in order to qualify.

This requirement has been modified so that present, as well as new members will benefit from this new one year feature.

The association is a non-profit organization founded in 1947 by officers for the benefit of active duty officers of all the uniformed services.

At Briefing Here Latest Techniques Shown Retired Military Members

Fort Benning played host to over 300 retired military personnel last week in an unprecedented move designed to keep them abreast of the latest infantry combat techniques and inform them of the latest developments in infantry weapons and equipment.

Retired military members from the Columbus-Phenix City area gathered in Marshall Auditorium where they were given an introduction through a stage presentation "I am the Infantry" followed by a welcome from Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, post commander.

Following the welcome given to the retirees, a briefing on retired benefits and privileges was given by the Retired Activities Office and a briefing on the Infantry Center and Infantry School activities.

During the afternoon and evening sessions, the guests were given a first-hand look at the Army's "Quick Kill" training facilities.

The demonstration of the new Army methods was presented on both upper and lower Simpson ranges.

The guests were next taken to Hook Range where they witnessed some of the latest developments for the Infantry new 1/4 ton truck, the M715 which are being tested by the U.S. Army Infantry Board at Benning.

Following these demonstrations, Lt. Col. Harold Jensen of the Supporting Weapons Test Division of USAFAPS, the retirees were given a brief summary of the mission of the Infantry Board and a test activity of the U.S. Army Test and Evaluation Command.

This was followed by a demonstration of various on (LAW).

LESSONS LEARNED in VIETNAM

Observations of a platoon leader in Vietnam - No. 3

The Delta Region This region most clearly resembles the rice paddy previously described. Here, however, water is more abundant and canals, streams, and rivers are influenced by tidal changes. Many marsh areas exist and present a formidable obstacle to foot and vehicular movement. Sugar cane brakes and pineapple crops are more abundant here than in the coastal regions.

The Jungle In and around War Zones C and D west of Ben Cat and north of Bien Hoa, respectively, much of the jungle terrain in Vietnam is encountered. The jungle may further be classified into district type of growth, primary and secondary growth.

Primary jungle—the canopy consists of towering trees often 250 feet high, which block out the light of day. A heavy rain becomes a steady trickle on the jungle floor below lasting long after the rain has subsided.

The absence of this canopy gives way to dense undergrowth or secondary jungle. Movement is rapid where the primary jungle or canopy exists as compared to movement through secondary jungle. The secondary jungle growth is perhaps the thickest vegetation in Southeast Asia.

Frequent use is made of the file formation in the jungle since control is a major concern. Problems of movement in the jungle resemble those in the dense vegetation of the Central Highlands.

Increase Seen In Promotions

Opportunity for advancement in the four services is on the increase and in fiscal year 1968, enlisted promotions in pay grades E-4 through E-6 will amount to 870,000, according to Thomas D. Moore, assistant Secretary of Defense. The largest portion of these promotions, 568,800, will go to the Army. In the top 500s, 1,300 Army men will be promoted to sergeant major, almost double the 700 promoted in the fiscal year 1965.

The greatest number of promotions will be to E-4, 227,000. The biggest percentage boost will be to E-5, with four times as many in the coming year as in 1965. The projected promotions for fiscal year 1968 are nearly four times as many as were given new stripes in 1965.

"Without exception," Moore said, "these are the highest authorizations available in each of the services since the creation of the Department of Defense."

Cave Exploring Is Full of Adventure

In a quest for adventure, many a modern explorer has become a spelunker, a person who navigates the underground passageways of the caves and caverns.

Candidate Michael G. Coltrin of 94th Co. (OC) is one of these underground travelers. Coltrin hails from Tucson, Ariz., an area which provides excellent hunting grounds for the spelunker.

Among the many sights which an underground explorer might see are stalactites hanging from the ceiling which appear to be ice flowing down the walls.

These are only a few of the formations which can be seen below, all made after countless years of drop after drop of water adding small bits of calcium to produce these formations.

Gypsum flowers appear to defy gravity by clinging to the ceiling and walls. There are also the soda straws, hollow rock formations twelve to thirty six inches long and as thin as a needle.

Then there are the drapes of rock which appear as if they were hanging from the ceiling.

Coltrin has made numerous finds. Once while crawling along a passageway, he glanced to his right and sighted a small bit of white. It turned out to be the top of a human skull. He left it alone and recruited the services of two anthropologists who found a second skeleton and determined them to be the remains of two Indians over 1,600 years old. Coltrin encourages everyone to give spelunking a try. But for enjoyment and safety on your first cave trip, follow these tips. First and foremost, never go into a cave alone. Two persons is even hazardous. To be completely safe travel in 4 or 5 man teams. Another important safety factor is never trust one source of light.

Song Lyrics Are Changed by OCS

Most officer candidates are familiar with the phrase from the cadet song, "Ought to be in Hollywood." For the candidates of the 96th Co. (OC), this phrase became reality recently when David Sutton photographed the company during an hour of pupil training.

Sutton is currently here in conjunction with the production of the motion picture, "The Green Berets." He promised several still photographs for the company yearbook. So now the cadet song is changed from "ought to be in Hollywood" to "going to be in Hollywood."

Benning Visitors Include 50 Wyoming Legislators

By Bill Hardin

If actor John Wayne happened to be shooting a western movie, instead of "The Green Berets," he would have found a group of likely 50 legislators and newsmen from Wyoming are visiting the post this week.

The westerners, who added a pleasant and somewhat unusual touch to the atmosphere of the post with western twang in their speech, arrived yesterday, and will conclude their visit tomorrow.

The lawmakers make periodic tours of various military installations to better acquaint themselves with the defense posture of the armed services.

The Wyoming delegation is led by Brig. Gen. Robert Outzen, assistant adjutant general of Wyoming.

Instructors Oriented

Another group visiting the post this week consists of officers who are attending a week-long ROTC instructors' orientation.

The instructors, ranging in rank from captain to colonel, will be assuming duties this fall as ROTC instructors in various colleges and universities throughout the Third Army area.

A total of 22 guest speakers, including Dr. N. N. Langdale, president of Georgia State College, will address the group. Other speakers include military members from CONARC, Third Army, Department of the Army and universities throughout the area.

Arriving Wednesday and departing the same day was Maj. Gen. (ret.) H. F. Hardin, professor of speech at the University of Texas. Gen. Hardin addressed an Infantry Officers' advance class.

Here for an overnight visit Monday, was deputy commanding general of the Third Army, Maj. Gen. H. A. Twichell. Among his activities was a visit to the ROTC instructor's orientation.

Eagle Scout Award Given

Ralph M. Finch III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Finch Jr. of Columbus, received the Eagle Scout award last week at a court of honor held by Troop 54.

The court was held in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall where Ft. J. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., post commander, was guest of honor and presented the Eagle award. Robert Helms, chairman of the Fort Benning District Advancement Committee, conducted the ceremony.

13-year-old Finch is an eighth grade student at Eddy Junior High School and has been a scout for less than three years.

Other awards that were presented to Troop 54 members included the rank of Life to Bobby Bland, Roger Lehman, Billy Gyson, Billy Colquhoun and Kelly Gristwood, were given the rank of Scoutmaster.

Workers Receive Service Emblems

The award winning Army Community Service (ACS) here celebrated its recent election as "Best in the Army" by presenting 63 service emblems to volunteers at a ceremony held at the County Club recently.

Maj. Geo. John M. Wright Jr., Fort Benning commandant, greeted each volunteer as Mrs. Wright presented the award. Capt. Frank X. Quinn, ACS coordinator, assisted Mrs. Wright.

Maj. Shirley Sneed, Third Army ACS officer, returned to the post for the ceremony. She was ACS officer here during the greater part of the time for which Fort Benning was selected for the annual award. Capt. Quinn served as ACS officer until the recent assignment of Lt. Col. Herbert Glen See to the position.

Gen. Wright, addressing the volunteers, their husbands and members of the Infantry Training Center said, "When I go to Washington in November to accept that award on your behalf, I will do so humbly. You have won the highest award the Department of the Army bestows on the Army Community Service."

"The real reason that Fort Benning is the best and the real reason that the Community Service Program is so important to soldiers here and everywhere," he said, "is that you ladies who might receive your pins and pin-guards have given yourselves, unselfishly."

"There are many people who deserve a share of the credit for this award," the general continued. "The military staff in the Army Community Service organization have performed very well and some of the glory is theirs. The Department of the Army, with its continued emphasis on the program, deserves some of the credit."

Mrs. H. S. Cunningham,

Volunteer Service supervisor, announced the winning of the award as she welcomed the guests to the celebration. "Each of us, volunteers and staff members alike, has already been rewarded, because we have had the satisfaction of helping our fellow man," she said.

Receiving 30 hour pins were Mrs. Claude Baker, Mrs. Dwight Beck, Mrs. Shelton Champagne, Mrs. Milford Downey, Mrs. Robert Eaton, Mrs. Richard Goularie, Mrs. Edwin Jones, Mrs. James Morris, Mrs. Rufus McIntire, Mrs. Dickie Powell, Mrs. Frank Quinn, Mrs. George Rohkoff, Mrs. George Scheibe, Mrs. Dan Schilling.

Also Mrs. L. P. Withers, Mrs. Miles Karan, Mrs. Gerald Purnell, Mrs. Lloyd Wilcox, Mrs. Roscoe Mansfield, Mrs. Robert Bayard, Mrs. Sam Smathers, Mrs. Aoy W. Akridge. Also Mrs. William R. Gillingham, Mrs. Warren Phillips, Mrs. Joseph Vetter, Mrs. John L. Waldrop, Mrs. Rollin Hill, Mrs. Bob Edwards, Mrs. Dominic Ferrelli, Mrs. James Barnett, and Mrs. Mitchell Barlianne. Pin guard chains with one year pendants were presented to Mrs. Guy Goodwin.

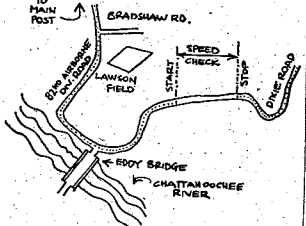

Certificates for 200 hours of service were given to Mrs. John Lavoie, Mrs. Bob-Muir, Mrs. French, Mrs. Hal Potrafna, Mrs. Leo Korch-Leon, Mrs. James McConaughey and Mrs. Cunningham, whose chain was presented by Maj. Sneed.

CTC Cops 7-5 Victory Over 197th; Infantrymen's 1st Loss in 2nd Half

By Spec 4 David Chaffon runs on a combination of Harbeck's single, Conley's walk, and Cole's three bagger, the 197th Infantry lost its first game of the second half of the Post League baseball play to CTC in a 7-5 decision that went 11 innings.

The loss to CTC puts the 197th in a precarious position as far as the standings are concerned. The Infantrymen now stand on a 9-1 record, while the CTC team is close behind with an 8-2 record. If both teams keep up their present pace, the championship for the second half of play could conceivably be in the hands of CTC.

Another run came in the 5th for CTC when Shannon's error and neither are offered serious resistance by any of the other teams.

Going on the supposition that CTC can better the Infantrymen in their last regular game, there would have to be a play-off game to decide the championship of the second half. Further supposing that CTC would be the victor in a play-off game, they would then have to face the 197th again to decide the League Championship for the season. In other words, CTC would have to top the 197th three games in a row to cop the Post League Championship.

Labor Day Golf Contest Set By SSO at Sand Hill Course

A Labor Day Classic Golf Tournament will be held at the Special Services Sand Hill Golf Course September 24.

The tournament will be open to all military personnel, active, retired and their male dependents 16 years of age and older.

The tournament will be 54 holes medal play for the medalist championship. At completion of 18 holes of play the field will be divided into flights according to score. The winner of each flight will be determined on basis of low medal score for the last 36 holes of play. The first round of play (18 holes) will be played on Saturday morning, September 2, with tee-off at 8 a. m., second round (18 holes) Sunday, 8 a. m., and final round on Monday, 8 a. m. The times will be posted next Friday at Sand Hill Golf Course (544-7428). Players not present at the tee-off time will forfeit their right to compete.

Competition will be governed by the 1967 USGA rules as modified by the local golf course.

Electric golf carts may be used by participants.

Entry fee for the tournament will be $8 per person paid on or before 6 p. m. next Friday. Entry fees will be utilized to defray cost of the tournament.

Awards will be presented to the medalist and runner-up

Can't Be Done

M.Sgt. Jim Martin, the 197th's coach doesn't think it can be done. Says Martin, "The only pitcher CTC's got that can come close to us is Gaines. They already work him to the maximum. I don't think he could take the strain of three games against us. No pitcher in the Post League could."

In the Brigades latest contest with CTC, Gains allowed the Infantrymen only six hits, opening the door to CTC's hitting victory, and Ward accounted for four of six of the 197th's hits getting two apiece.

MVP Award; Stuab, Clemente or Cepeda

BY JULIAN MARBURT

The Most Valuable Player award is one of the more coveted trophies in the game of baseball and the recipient usually deserves it.

In order to receive this award, a player has to be extremely valuable to his team in a number of ways. Now many players come under this heading during each season, but in order to win the award, an individual has to be of exceptional value to a team, prove that he is worthy and convince the judges of this fact.

And it should be added too, the MVP award always goes to a player who is on the winning team, the champion of his respective league. This year for example, the award in the National League will probably go to Orlando Cepeda or some other St. Louis Cardinal. In the American League as well, the trophy will surely drift to a pennant winning player.

Although my opinion means nothing in the British treasury, I think the award should go to a player that almost assuredly will not play in the fall classic. His team, although I dread the thought, may not even finish in the first division. And too, he is laying in a mighty tough league to win the award. The National League just has too many players of superstar status for this individual to walk away (or even sneak) with the gem.

Now if he was swinging a 300 plus bat or perhaps ended the year with 40 some odd home runs he might have a chance. But this gentleman can hardly hit over .200 this year, his batting average is in the .300's and he probably won't even make the 90's in the HR department.

But then let's think of why the award is given. The winner is to be of great value, productivity and morally, to his team. He is supposed to possess the qualities of greatness and be an asset to the game. But usually, however, the award is given to a player who is by how many runs he drives in, home runs, hits, stolen bases, etc. (all advocating power). No matter what you say, the fans always want to see power, the offense. (It might be noted that pitchers have their own award, the Cy Young trophy.)

When I reveal to you my choice for the National League Most Valuable Player, try to avoid choking from laughter and consider his credentials.

Although he is not even near the magic 300 mark, he's hitting his average and, at this writing, he has hit more homers than ever before in his career and also has driven in more runs than any one season previously.

But the question remains, is he deserving of the award? Ask the people in his home stomping grounds and the surrounding states. And be sure to ask his teammates. You'll receive a deafening reply.

This man is an American League reject. He played superbly for the New York Yankees in all their splendor and glory and had a great deal to do with their winning all those pennants over the last few years. But the Yankees decided on youth and some of the older players fell by the wayside. Search you will and you can find no better glove man in the league. Undoubtedly his glove is made of pure gold and no one will dare to say that he is not one of the best thirdbasemen in the majors.

Look at the facts and figures. Ask the other ball players, the fans and others who are with, for and against him. He deserves it.

The Atlanta Braves may not win a pennant in 1967 and, as I said, may even finish in the second division, but this man has put them in the spot they occupy at the time of this writing, second place.

With all due respect to the many great ball players in the National League and especially to Hank Aaron, I believe Boyer deserves the Most Valuable Player award more than any of the 500 man now participating in America's national pastime.

The Observer

— by Larry Mahoney —

Summer's almost gone and winter's coming in the song books. Well, first, let's not forget the fall, and according to the dozens of calendars on which I count my days, we're going to shake this long, sweltering South Georgia August in a matter of days. And that means football is only weeks away.

Nowhere is the game loved more or played better than in this section of the country. Fitting it will be, then, to begin this column's turn to football 1967 with a report on what to expect out of Dixieland this fall.

At least three Southern teams should be considered among the half-dozen most likely to take the national title from Notre Dame. First and foremost is Miami of Florida, packed with power at all positions, hardened by the return of virtually all of last year's upset-specializing team; and fired by the coaching of one Charley Tate, in his third season at the southernmost university in the land.

Next in line for the game of the year is the Hurricane's Orange Bowl encounter with Ara Parseghian's wish around Thanksgiving Day. You'll recall what happened in Notre Dame's game of the decade with Michigan State last year. Well, in 1965 Miami and Notre Dame pulled the same thing, an inconclusive tie. If this one does build up as the big one of 1967, may we be a little luckier. "A" J. Clemson coach Frank Howard once said, "Is like kissing your sister."

Alabama, of course, will have to be counted again among the leading contenders for national honors. Again, Bear Bryant's defensive tide, small though it is, should be the most vicious anywhere. His problem is the attack. Alabama offense is too green for the Bear's peace of mind. Still, we all know the "Floozie" terror will stick it out in the first 10.

Explosive Tennessee should give 'Bama a run for its money in Southeastern Conference. Alabama is often criticized for its weak scheduling, and the doubters of just how great the Tide really is should get a chance to resolve that question when the Volunteers journey down to Birmingham Oct. 21 to test their fiery offense against Bryant's stingy defenders.

Ole Miss has been out of it for some time, so look for the Rebels, reconstructed now, to push their way back among the best. The elite should also include Vince Dooley's vaillant Georgia, replete with seasoned veterans and bolstered by several strong sophomore prospects.

Don't think that these potent five — Miami, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Georgia — are the only Southern candidates for national rating.

Take Clemson, the state university of South Carolina. It now seems a certainty for Frank Howard's Tigers, 46 of them letter men from last season's "bung squad. A fellow by the name of Wayne Mass, a tackle of all things figures, moves in the offense, his sizeable role to be played on a muscular attack line.

Florida State, as usual, will keep its opponents scrambling to ward off a withering.

Army Fires Scoring High In Interservice Rifle Meet

QUANTICO, Va. — The interservice rifle competitors in the 100 and 200 yard matches. He had a final tally of 227 with 23 "V's" to best runner-up Marine 1st Lt. Andrew R. Barkovich who fired a 209 in the 100 yard match.

SFC James L. McQueen accounted for two of the Army's winning efforts as he took the service rifle 1000 yard event for the second year in a row and also won the Interservice Individual Long Range Championship.

At the 1000 yard line, McQueen shot a perfect score of 100 with 16 "V's." Marine SSGT. Richard A. Durbin made it a close second as he fired a 100 with 14 "V's."

In garnering the Individual Long Range title, McQueen fired the highest aggregate score among the field of 50.

ing passing game. For those of you who remember the great Seminole aerial duo of Steve Ross-Fred Blandhoff of 1964, here's news: A young flanker, Ron Sellers, is being touted as the best receiver ever at the Tallahassee school. Coach Bill Peterson's Tribe takes on Alabama in Birmingham late next month. This should be another test of the Tide's stopping power. Does it work in the air, too?

There's a little school up in Blacksburg, Va., that must always be considered. This is Virginia Tech, respected far and wide in the South but little known nationally. It's much a matter of coaching, and the name is Jerry Clairborne. Consider him of the Vince Dooley caliber.

Tulane was a surprise to every opponent in 1966. The Greenies seem bound back to their longtime inamminence on the gridiron. A classy quarterback, Bobby Duhan, will trouble more than a few defenses.

And what of Georgia Tech and Florida, of Louisiana State and Duke, N. C. State and the Virginia Tech, respected far and wide in the South but little known nationally. It's much a matter of coaching, and the name is Jerry Clairborne. Consider him of the Vince Dooley caliber.

The Midwest is a close rival to the Deep South's devotion to this game. Mike McNulty, who knows what's happening among Notre Dame, Michigan State, Illinois, Purdue and the like, will report on it here next week.

10th Group Cops Win Over TSB

The 10th Av. Co. baseball team, rallied in their game against the Student Brigade, to defeat TSB by a score of 10-6. The group was hit with Curtis Voshug, who hit two triples and one single with two RBIs, and Daniel Spitzer, who hit one homer and one single with 3 RBIs for the night. Spitzer homered in the first inning with two men on base. In the fourth inning back to back singles were a deciding factor with a rally of five runs for the Group.

Lowell Dempsey was the winning pitcher, who helped his own cause by getting two hits.

Meredith Sets New Record In National Rifle Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio. Capt. Bruce A. Meredith, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, Fort Benning, Ga., set a new national record winning the National Rifle Association Smallbore Prone Championship. Meredith bested teammate Capt. David Ross, USA, with a blazing 686 points out of a possible 6400 points. Following Ross in third place, and now 1967 National Civilian Smallbore Prone Champion, is John M. Garrison of Wilmington, Del.

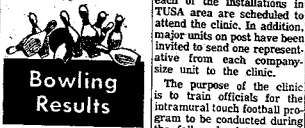

Repeating her championship from last year, Mrs. Wood from Elizabeth, N. Y., who also repeated his wife from 1966. Collegiate champion, Mary Parris, a blond marksman from Asheville, N. C., who attends the University of North Carolina.

Senior champion is once again, Herbert Hollister of Boulder, Colo., a constant winner at the age of 67 years, who almost took third place and civilian champion honors.

Chaplain Enjoys Jumping Along With Paratroopers

By BILL HARDIN

It is not unusual for a chaplain to be airborne qualified, but how many average five jumps per month? Chaplain (Capt.) Charles E. Brinkmeyer, assigned to the Airborne Student En. completed jump school in Pecos, N.M., and since that time he has been a familiar sight to the airborne instructors. The chaplain usually jumps on Monday afternoons when the students make their first of five qualifying jumps. He feels that his presence may give a little more confidence to the tense novices.

In July, he managed to take time from his busy schedule to attend the jump master course here, and participated in three jumps that week, including one at night with full equipment. He now has 30 jumps to his credit. Not a giant by standards in his native state of Texas, Chaplain Brinkmeyer stands 5 ft. 7 in. tall. He feels that his jumping will be hampered for the immediate future, since he is scheduled to leave Fort Benning today for a tour of duty in Vietnam. Asked why he jumps so frequently, the chaplain explains he enjoys it, and feels that he can establish support that the troops get only by being a reading adviser, but more so by jumping with them. What's so unusual about five jumps a month? Regulations require one jump each

For 'Green Beret' Crew 2nd Week of Filming is Busy One

The second week of filming the first feature-length movie on the war in Vietnam, "The Green Berets," starring John Wayne, was a busy one as shooting took place at over 12 different locations around post. And at the end of the week, filming was slightly ahead of schedule.

Wayne, cast in the part of powerful looking Col. Kirby, a two-time veteran of Vietnam, spent much of the week hand-picking a group of men to accompany him on a special mission to Vietnam.

At Warner Range, the studio on "Gabriel Area" in the Tuesday, a Special Forces team from Fort Bragg, N. C., gave a demonstration on unconventional warfare. Over 200 civilian contractors were on hand to watch the performance.

Later that day, cameras were rolling at Watson Field where soldiers were filmed going through the bayonet drill, a "general" and "Col. Kirby" were recorded on scene at Eubanks Field also recorded on film.

Daily Run Filmed The airborne trainees were filmed as they took their daily run-around the field shouting their cadence with the pounding of a hundred jump boots.

Airborne Battalion Given President's Unit Citation

WASHINGTON (ANF)—The 2nd Battalion, 503rd Airborne Infantry, 172nd Airborne Bde. (Separate), has been awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for "extraordinary heroism" during a fierce battle with the Viet Cong in Vietnam's War Zone "D."

During operation "Silver City" near Phouc Vinh, March 16, 1966, the battalion was deployed in a defensive perimeter prior to resuming search and destroy operations. It was attacked by a numerically superior Viet Cong force.

Supported by artillery fire, the Viet Cong repeatedly launched attacks all around the perimeter in an effort to break the defenses. "Personnel of the two companies including the wounded, steadfastly remained in their positions, responded at close quarters with fire that was both deadly and accurate, and succeeded in breaking up the determined enemy attack," the Unit Citation said.

Post Library Shelves New Titles For Enthusiasts of Art, Literature

The following books on post-library shelves should be of interest to students of art and literature. The publications cover many periods and give the reader insight into the thought and times that shaped the artists.

Benjamin Rowland, "The Classical Tradition in Western Art," Harvard Univ. Press, 1963.

This book provides an introduction to art through an understanding and love of our common Western heritage from Greece to Rome, the exaltation of the beauty and nobility of man in sculpture and painting.

The author considers the classical world, in the form and content of its art, as a source of vital creative inspiration for later artists, and merely as a model for architectural or archaic imitation.

He approaches this tradition as the one continuous force for original artistic expression throughout the history of Western Art.

An introductory section defines the standards of perfection in the plastic art, architecture that we describe as the classical ideal, an ideal which was destined to be reinterpreted in a hundred different ways by men who sought its inspiration in all later periods of Western history.

The classical tradition is illustrated by an analysis of one or two important works from each important moment in the development from the Late Antique to the Gothic period, the revival of antiquity from the Renaissance to the modern period as discussed in chapters of the work of individual artists who, each in his own way, exemplified the use of classical forms.

Finally, the author's analysis of classical inspiration in modern artists illustrates both vitality of the Greek ideal and the creative methods of contemporary masters.

Allred Neumeier, "The Search For Meaning in Modern Art," Prentice, 1964.

This book puts forward a challenging interpretation of contemporary art. The author sees in twentieth-century art reflection of the turbulent vitality of our age.

Clearly and artistically, he describes the development of modern art through its achievements. Among these are discussed are the open, transparent, informal build-up of modern architectural schools.

This author's book is at once comprehensive and concise. There is little that he misses in the complex panorama of modern art, and yet the reader is never lost in what he calls "the disarray of vanity."

Wylie Sypher, "Rococo to Cubism in Art and Literature," Random, 1960.

Mr. Sypher, focuses on the dominant style of each period as it reflects the prevailing world view, from eighteenth-century rococo style to contemporary cubism, analyzing and interpreting attempts at style in the picturesque, romantic art, impressionism, post-impersonalism and Art Nouveau.

He presents penetrating and brilliant analyses of such writers as Pope, Flaubert, Gide, and such painters as Watteau, Constable, Turner, Monet, Degas, and others.

The artist and writers are seen against philosophic background of each period as it manifests itself in the work of Newton, Bacon, Whitehead and Einstein.

This work has been recognized as a classic in its field. Thomas P. Whitney, "The New Writing in Russia," Univ. of Michigan Press, 1964.

In spite of years of suppression and official party-line literature, a new wave of Russian writers has finally emerged to follow in the footsteps of Gogol, Dostoevski, Tolstoi, Turgenyev, Chekhov and Gorki. Humanity and the Russian people are the heart of the new writers and tell of them with grace and beauty, revealing their loves, hates, dreams, ambitions, fears and frustrations.

In his extensive introduction the author analyzes the important role of literature in the U.S.S.R. and the traditional conflict that has always existed between the writer and the government, from the days of the Tsars to the present.

In this book the author included stories which deal with Russians as human beings rather than Russians and patriots of party leaders.

Edith Hamilton, "The Ever-present Past," Norton, 1964.

In this collection of essays and reviews, Edith Hamilton reveals not only her keen inteligence and critical judgment, but also the enormous range of her interests. The collection begins with illuminating essays on Plato and the Greek theater. In the first section the author examines Goethe's "Faust" and the classical religion and man's responsibility to himself and his world.

In the last section the author discusses her views on optimistic reminder that the heritage of the past must be used to light our way into the future.

New Officers Hear Speech By Col. Wine

"You are on the threshold of a career, and it is up to you to control the ingredients that go into it like an artist creating a work of art," advised Col. John S. Wine, a graduate of the officer candidate school here in 1943, as he addressed the 123 graduating officer candidates for the 92nd Company (OC) recently.

Col. Wine, chief of the Staff Group, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of the Infantry School, continued by pointing out the newly commissioned second lieutenants that with them "goes the reputation of Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School," and it is their responsibility to uphold it throughout their Army careers.

Honor and distinguished graduate was 2nd Lt. William A. Randall, who achieved a 92.87 per cent average. He also was the recipient of an AUSA plaque.

Leadership honors went to 2nd Lt. George J. McKigney and academic honors went to 2nd Lt. Robert B. True.

16th Gp. Begins School to Train Mess Personnel

By Spec 4 John Olsen

Since the Vietnam buildup many Benning units are feeling the pinch for trained mess personnel.

The 16th Gen. Spt. Gp., which is also feeling the pinch, is providing its own solution to the problem.

Under the direction of SFC Charles A. Edwards of the group's 6th Light Maint Co., a comprehensive eight-week cook school has been initiated.

"This program will enable men within the unit to get classroom and practical experience before working in the mess hall," remarked Edwards.

Most of the 16th Group's units have sent men to fill their own needs.

Lasting eight weeks the program is divided into three parts. For the first six weeks the men work in a mess hall learning how to operate the equipment and prepare dishes.

The last two weeks are spent in the mess hall, split equally in the mess and bakery schools on main post. "It's hoped that this school will turn out well trained cooks for a long time to come," Edwards added.

Interviews Set Next Week

Post Play House Prepares for Tournament of Plays

Each November Third Army staff entertainment director William B. Diamond designates three accomplished and recognized members of the American Theater as Judges for the Third United States Army Tournament of Plays.

This annual competition is open to each installation with the command to enter one dramatic play. Trophies are then awarded to the most accomplished members in all categories of theater.

In preparation for this year's competition the Playhouse Production Staff has announced the dates it will hold open interviews for interested actors, actresses, directors, designers, technicians and stagehands at 5:30 p.m. at the Playhouse (Bldg. No. 1437) located behind the Infant Museum.

"These interviews will be the initial step in the theater program here. They will provide a foundation that we may build on to form our plans, the response to the interviews will help us determine which play to enter in the Tournament of Plays," said production manager PFC Michael Moriarty.

"Currently we are considering 'THE ARMS AND THE MAN' by George Bernard Shaw and Robert Bolt's 'A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS' he said.

In last years competition Fort Benning placed third with "Night of the Iguana" it was Fort Benning, N. C. that won the first place honors by its presentation of "Merchant of Venice."

In an interview, director Dickmann said "This year's competition is the largest in all fields and we hope that other people with experience in theater will help us win the Tournament."

Playhouse Objectives The Playhouse staff comes under the direction of the Special Officer Lt. Col. Roger L. Miller and the post entertainment director Roy L. Lothner. Under their guidance the Playhouse staff carries out the objectives of Army Theater.

These are "to encourage the development of spoken drama and English in this home state of Wisconsin and performed professionally in the Midwest and on the East Coast.

Before being assigned to Special Services, Dickmann was with the Third Army Soldiers Chorus. Currently he is appearing in "The Green Berets."

Spec. 4 Kent Bowers attended UCLA and majored in technical design.

lights and sound equipment will be set up in service clubs, tents or the open air.

"This is a tremendous method of boosting the welfare and morale of the troops," says Lothner. "Even as we entertain the men we help them understand and appreciate art and culture."

The Playhouse staff consists of five enlisted men whose talent is derived from extensive education and experience both prior to military service and while on active duty.

Taught Drama Spec. 4 Thomas Leigh Dickmann is a graduate of LaCrosse University and has a Masters Degree in Theatre Arts from Bowling Green University. He has taught Drama and English in his home state of Wisconsin and performed professionally in the Midwest and on the East Coast.

Field Presentations In addition this section will also produce several one act plays for presentation to the troops in the outlying areas and the field. Stage, set,

PFC Robert C. Hammel is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University and has earned a Bachelors Degree in Theatre Arts. After graduation Hammel performed summer stock with the State Repertory Company.

Attended Southern Cal. PFC Michael Moriarty at Southern California University of California (Berkeley) Troop."

PFC John Shober attended a graduate of Pennsylvania State University and has earned a Bachelors Degree in the public department of Desilu Studios and for Warner Brother Studios as a research writer and later as a production assistant.

Moriarty has several plays to his credit, including "The Man From Uncle," "The Rogues" and "Tournament of Plays."

5041st Reservists Here For First Training Visit

The Davenport 5041st Army Reserve School arrived last week for two weeks of training. Commanded by Col. Frank A. Park and staffed by personnel from Eastern Iowa and Western Illinois, the 5041st is now conducting classes as part of a progressive four-year ADT course. Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, commander of Fort Benning, welcomed the 5041st School here for their first tour, and expressed the hope that their training would be valuable.

Centered in Davenport, Iowa, the unit is the main school for a large area of the Midwest, which it has served for many years.

Instructors represent a wide sampling of civilian and military occupational specialties. The school staff is unique in possessing a husband and wife team in Sergeant Ernest and WAC Margaret Root, both long-term staff members.

The 5041st is training over 100 students here in a variety of areas including weapons, communication systems, intelligence and operations command supply and inspections and medical subjects. The program is an eight phase four year program. The active duty phases must be taken in progression.

Phase II is an active duty training part of the first year instruction. Phase IV represents the second year of ADT. Career officer courses are taught during the year at the home school, but the Reserve duty training courses need not be taken in strict progression.

The school's students are diverse as Texas, Wisconsin, Oregon, Vermont, but mostly from the 6th Army (Midwest) area.

Emaciated Prisoners Are Freed by Paratroopers

WET WORK... Spec. 4 Donald Underwood leads the way as Theodore Knudson provides rear security. The men part of a larger element of the 17th U.S. Cav. Aero-

Long Army Reporters. From Binh, Vietnam. "DUC PHU, Vietnam. "God, they were a mess!" said one paratrooper. "They looked like something out of those World War II prison camps." The 101st Airborne Division trooper was shocked at the physical condition of two South Vietnamese soldiers liberated from a Viet Cong prison camp near Duc Pho during a recent operation. The prisoners were emaciated, haggard and beaten. Eyes and cheeks were sunk into their gaunt faces and their voices weak and inaudible due to lack of strength. Both suffered from malnutrition and exhaustion. "They were in pretty bad shape," said Lt. Col. Knudson. "The VC had beaten them, used them for laborers and fed them just enough to keep them alive. And that was a very macabre sight." The two soldiers, PFC Nguyen Xuan, 21, and PFC Binh Thuan, 22, were members of the Binh Thuan Province, hamlet's Popular Forces platoon. Captured by the VC last month, they were beaten and subjected to propaganda classes during his imprisonment. Capt. John Lawton, intelligence officer for the battalion, interrogated the friendly Vietnamese soldiers for information applicable to immediate actions against the VC in the area. The two former prisoners, exhausted and limited in their knowledge of enemy movements, were little help. "We can't help you," said Xuan. "We just dug tunnels. They watched us carefully, all the time and never talked in front of us." The prison camp was run by the VC, but five days prior to the paratrooper attack six NVA soldiers came into the camp. The NVA forces had been part of a 40-man food-gathering detail sent to bring rice from nearby valleys back to their unit's base camp, the four NVA prisoners told 101st interrogators.

Parachute Tester Now in OCS Here

By OC Quayle Dutton
Officer Candidate Rafael Vasquez, with OCS as a veteran of over 100 parachute jumps since 1959, but some recent jumps are ones he will probably remember for many years. In January he made five jumps from 1200 feet with a purposely defective main parachute in order to test a newly developed parachute deployed reserve parachute.

Vasquez, then a staff sergeant, made the jumps while attached to the U. S. Army Airborne Electronics and Special Warfare Board, Fort Bragg, N. C. The jumps were made from a C-54 aircraft. The team of five were each equipped with a main parachute with known malfunctions and unknown performance of the reserve parachute.

Received Medal
As a result of the five jumps Vasquez was awarded the Army Commendation Medal. The citation accompanying the Medal stated in part, "The jumps required great courage and a high degree of self confidence. This voluntary act of risking his life can only be commended above and beyond the call of duty."

By Rod Reed

Abolish auto racing! cries the intermittent editorial.

Still the sport, which no doubt started as soon as the second car was built, continues to grow in popularity.

The editorialist always complains that first, auto races are too dangerous and second, all auto race fans are ghouls, never happy unless watching a crash. Danger's there all right and the casual spectator may be seeking his thrills in flips and spin-outs. But the true fan is interested primarily in skillful, daring driving, keen competition and the workings of the machinery. If crash-ups were eliminated entirely, he'd still go to the races every chance he got.

Stock car matches at neighborhood tracks constitute the bush league of the gas jockers. Many of the big shots of Indy and Daytona got their starts in these half-mile and quarter-mile dirt ovals scattered across the country.

A few years ago I moved into a new town and was puzzled that everybody on Sunday morning seemed to be asking, "Hey, did you go to the stocks last night?" Of course, I soon learned what they were talking about, but the very name of the game had a tremendous lack of appeal and I wondered what made the nuts so enthusiastic.

Then a buddy lured me out to watch my first race. Almost the first thing I saw was a smashup involving half a dozen cars, one lying upside down against a fence and another slammed on its side and catching fire. I was terribly shocked for I was certain there must be three or four dead men amongst the tangled metal.

What a surprise to see all six drivers hopping or diving out of their no-glass windows (the doors are bolted) and though an ambulance was standing by, nobody needed so much as a bandaid. My pal explained the miracle as being due to roll bars, crash helmets and seat belts. Almost as miraculous, five of the six "wrecks" were able to run again that same night, after considerable work by pit crews.

I became a nut and went back there every week for several years. At first it was the slamming, banging, flipping, rolling that interested me most. But soon I got to know the styles of certain drivers, to recognize a skillful maneuver on a turn or a daring squeeze through a tight opening. I had favorites to root for just as in football, tennis or hockey. I no longer felt cheated if a whole program was run off without a spinout.

SHORT SHORTS

Australia owns tennis. Canada owns hockey and Jack Nicklaus owns the U.S.

No, Chauncey, an all-night poker game isn't called setting up exercises.

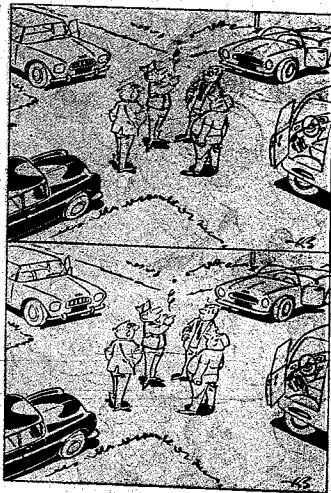

If Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packers are so good, how come they haven't beaten anybody for several months now?

Bowler Wayne Zahn set a new record winning $54,720 last year. So that's what you mean by "pin money?"

Some complaints have been made about Mexico City as an Olympics site, because the air is thin. But who wants to breathe fat air?

Spot The Seven Goofs

The two pictures differ in at least seven subtle ways. Check how good your eyesight is and then for the solution, turn page upside down.

SOLUTION: (1) In the car back wheel of the car on the left. (2) The door on the upper left car is not so wide open. (3) There is no crash in the left rowing of the left rowing. (4) The man facing me is not on the road. (5) The right man is not facing me. (6) There is a third pedal of the truckdriver is bent. (7) In the right.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Tell It To Meg

DEAR MEG: My dad is okay some ways but the way he treats me he's a Great Big Square. Like he's got a strict midnight curfew and if I blow in a Couple Minutes after 12 he chews me out like a top kick. All the guys I run around with can stay out all hours and their parents don't care. How can I get pops to take the leash off of me?

—T.U.T. (Tied up Teen)

Dear Tut: Quit griping! Your Square Father is very liberal letting you stay out 'till 1/2. Even Cinderella got in trouble staying out longer. And baseball managers find it smart to impose a curfew on grown men—with stiff fines for tardy Toms.

You say the other parents "don't care?" You're lucky. You've got a parent who Does Care!

DEAR MEG: Even though my husband knows I can't stand it, he continues to tell dirty jokes whenever we are out with any of the other couples on the base. How can I get him to stop this horrible habit?

—EMBARRASSED WIFE

Dear Embarrassed Wife: Maybe if you didn't object so much he wouldn't tell them. But if you really want to stop him, the next time he tells one you top him with a dirtier joke. Coming out of your mouth may make him realize how objectionable they can sound.

DEAR MEG: My buddy is going out with a girl who is taking him for a ride. But, ever since I told him he doesn't talk to me. Since I considered this fellow a good friend, wasn't I right in expressing my opinion? After all, it was for his sake.

—A REAL PAL

Dear Pal: When it comes to the opposite sex, people really don't want anyone else's advice—especially when not asked for. Try to look at it this way. When you criticize the girl you are also criticizing your friend's taste and judgment. Remember the cliché "Love is blind!"

DEAR MEG: Well, I was always a shy fellow and scared of girls you might say. But I always loved them, from a distance. I heard girls were always impressed by a man in uniform so I enlisted. I'm in uniform. What should I do? They still don't go for me.

—BASHFUL

Dear Bashful: Go for them.

DEAR MEG: I'm a shory in love with a doll who is six feet tall. Our friends call us Mutt and Jeff and though they think it's funny, it's embarrassing. Is there some way to make them stop?

—LITTLE MAN

Dear Man: No, but Love laughs at lovers. Be thankful you two aren't built to be called Laurel and Hardy.

DEAR MEG: Should a non-com marry a WAC lieutenant? Will she still think she's my superior officer after we are wed?

—SARGE

Dear Sarge: No doubt. But she'd feel the same if you were a General.

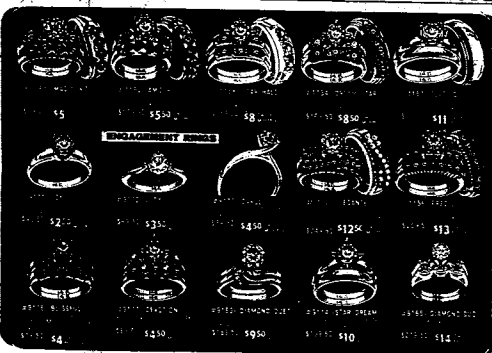

DEAR MEG: My steady is tall, blonde and handsome and when they see him in uniform the other women turn green with envy. But he is always saying "ain't" instead of "aren't." Once I tried to correct him and he got mad and said, "Go marry a college professor!" He didn't phone me again for two weeks.

"Ain't" is a word that grates on my ears but I'm afraid to mention it again for fear he'll get mad and stay mad.

—LUCY W.

Dear Lucy: If that's his only fault, you ain't got anything to complain about.

The Story of 1st Lt. Seymour W. Terry

HE BRAVED THE HAIL OF BULLETS TO SECURE
THESE POSITIONS AND HIMSELF CAPTURED BY
THE ENEMY. HE WAS KILLED BY AN ENEMY BOMB AND DESTROYED THE ENEMY'S POSITION.

WHEN HE WAS KILLED HE WAS
BY DEATH THE 4 PRIZES OF HONOR AND DESTROYED THE ENEMY'S POSITION.

ON JANUARY 1942, 1ST LT. TERRY WAS LEADING AN ATTACK AGAINST HEAVILY DEFENDED TRENCHES
ON THE TRENCH ISLANDS. WHEN DEFEATIST
FIRE FROM THE ENEMY STOPPED THE ADVANCE, HE RECALLED THE HAIL OF BULLETS THAT ATTENDED HIS DEATH.

THE ADVANCE WAS AGAIN HELD UP BY AN INTENSIVE ENEMY BOMBING WHICH IMPACTED SEVERAL CASUALTIES.

RECOGNIZING THE STRENCHES OF TRENCH FIRE TRENCHES ON THE REVERSE SLOPE OF THE HILL, LT. TERRY, GUIDED BY THE SIGNAL CORPS, LAUNCHED A ONE-WAY ATTACK.

HE WEIGHED THE ENEMY'S DEFENSES BY THROWING EXPLOSIVES AND, THEN, POSITIONED HIMSELF CAPTURED BY
THE ENEMY. HE WAS KILLED BY AN ENEMY BOMB AND DESTROYED THE ENEMY'S POSITION.

INSPIRED BY THIS BOLD ACTION, THE SUPPORT
PLATOON CHARGED THE TRENCHES
AND ANNULATED THEM. SOON AFTERWARDS
HE OBSERVED HIS COMPANY
POSSIBLE COUNTERATTACK. THE CALLING A COMPANY COMMANDER WAS WOUNDED BY THE SHOTS OF AN ENEMY

BY HIS HIGHLY ABLE

Movie Extras Needed Here

Oriental "males" are needed for night filming in the John Wayne movie, "The Green Berets." The shooting schedule now calls for such filming on September 11-12. Persons interested in employment after duty hours on those evenings should contact Al Murray at Doughty Stadium Tuesday at the Camellia Hotel, 687-2330, ext. 300.

Bond Show Seen By Over 12,000

By Bill Hartha

Fort Benning's commanding general, Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr. introduced the

CG Issues Warning To Holiday Drivers

During the coming Labor Day holiday millions of people will be traveling the country's highways to beaches, lakes and other recreational areas to take advantage of the long weekend. Many of these people will lose their lives needlessly and many more will suffer injuries from accidents that could have been easily averted.

We, at Fort Benning, have reason to be proud of the excellent safety record we have consistently maintained. Last year, Labor Day weekend travel did not claim the life of any member of this command. While we cannot surpass last year's record, we can and must establish one equal to it this year. To do so, however, will require an intensified safety effort on the part of each of us.

To lessen Labor Day accident probability, avoid the hazards of highway travel. Take advantage of the many recreational facilities at Fort Benning or the area in which you live. If you must drive, remember and practice the do's and don'ts of safe driving: do use your seat belts; do observe all traffic laws; do drive defensively; don't exceed speed limits; don't drink after drinking; and don't drive when weary or fatigued.

Make this Labor Day a happy holiday for you and your family. Make it a safe one.

Smallest Lt. Commissioned Stands Shorter Than 5 Feet

By Spec. 4 Richard Benson

Second Lt. Richard J. Flaherty stood as tall as his classmates yesterday when he was commissioned into the Army, the 21-year-old native of Stoughton, Conn. tried to enlist but was held by several recruiters he could not serve in the armed forces because of his height.

Flaherty, who stands 4 feet 11 and one quarter inches tall, completed the 22-week officer candidate school at Fort Benning, Ga., in October of 1966.

J. L. Runyon Named Sgt. Maj. of USATCI

James L. Runyon has assumed duties as sergeant major of the U. S. Army Training Center, Fort Benning, Ga., with the 2nd Infantry Division, French and Belgium Four, who has been named sergeant major of the First U. S. Army at Fort Meade, Md.

Runyon, a native of Stoughton, Conn., graduated fourth in his basic training class, and made 450 out of 500 points on his physical proficiency test. His next step on the way to officer candidate school was a two week leadership course in which he graduated.

AER Fund Drive Far Behind Goal

This week the following statement was issued by Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, Fort Benning commander, concerning the AER fund drive:

"We are close to the end of our campaign for funds in support of the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society fund drive. At this time we are far short of our goal. These two organizations are providing assistance to personnel assigned to Fort Benning. I urge that you contribute generously today."

Flaherty attended Sacred Heart University in Bridgeport, Conn., for two years. Not letting his height be his only distinguishing mark at college he grew a "Van Dyke" beard.

He has been offered jobs as a jockey, and was once offered a "Mickey Rooney type part" in a movie which he did not accept.

Recalling his six months of OCS training he grinned and added, "I guess my biggest problem was putting my helmet liner on top of my wall locker."

In Japan

Unaccompanied Dependents Not Due Privileges According to Regulations

Much confusion has arisen because of financial difficulty and inconvenience to dependents of U. S. service men who mistakenly assume that their household goods and car would be admitted into Japan, even though the military member is not stationed in Japan.

This is a false assumption and has provoked considerable financial difficulty and inconvenience to dependents whose husbands are stationed in nearby countries such as Korea or Vietnam. Unless a military member is stationed in, or is physically present in, Japan, his dependents cannot be granted dependent status, nor can they enjoy the privileges of that status.

The only support they can receive is medical aid and dependent schooling. This is a ruling covered by the Status of Forces Agreement (SOFA), which governs relationships between the U. S. military and the host nation. Unaccompanied dependents arriving in Japan must enter through ordinary Japanese immigration and customs laws and procedures. This means that a visa is required and that customs duty must be paid for entry of household goods.

Canadian Officer Departs After Tour With 10th Gp

By PFC Barry Nelson After nearly two years with the 17th Avn. Co., 37th Avn. Bn. (P), 10th Avn. Gp., Canada, William J. A. Tait has returned to his home in Canada.

Upon his return to Canada, Tait will become an instructor in the UH-1 "Huey" helicopter, which the Canadian Army has just purchased.

A car may be admitted duty - free only if the dependent obtains a non-resident visa and if a resident of Japan guarantees that the vehicle will be shipped from Japan within twelve months.

Tait was assigned to the 17th Medium Helicopter Co. as an exchange officer. His duty was to verify the quality of instruction and training in instrument flying.

He did this through annual check rides that instrument flight examiners give instrument rated aviators. This type of duty is not unusual in the United States Army, however, Tait is the first Canadian Army Aviator to become an instrument flight examiner.

In January 1966, Tait began his training in the CH-47 Chinook Helicopter. In March after 26.3 hours he was qualified to pilot the CH-47.

Tait is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tait of Stone Cliff, Ontario, Canada. He joined the Canadian Army in August of 1960 at the age of 22. In November 1965, after graduation from Army Aviation Training School, Rivers Manitoba, Canada, Tait came to the United States as an exchange officer.

The Judge Says...

Public highly susceptible to illicit business methods

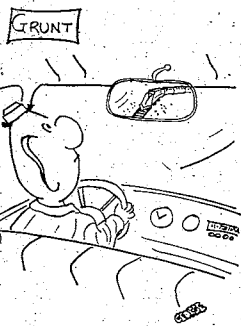

"Merchandise pirates" rob the public of millions of dollars annually and undermine the public's confidence in the great majority of honest businessmen who operate with integrity and sincere regard for the consumer.

The lamentable fact of deception and fraud in the sale of merchandise, real estate and securities is constantly called to the attention of legal assistance officers by numerous complaints of deceptive practices and outright fraud.

Do not sign a contract unless you have read and understood every part of it. You are legally bound by what the contract states—not what a salesman tells you.

Do not accept an oral guarantee. Get it in writing. Make sure you understand what it says and that it protects you fully.

Do not be rushed into buying anything by talk of a "golden opportunity" or persuasion that it is a "last chance" to get in on a "good thing." Take your time, investigate and take up your mind carefully.

Labor Day Safety Message

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, Jr., commanding general, United States Army Infantry Center, has called for Labor Day personnel to make this Labor Day the one marked by tragedy. Safe driving practices, courtesy on the road, and the use of common sense in recreational pursuits will do much to make this a great holiday for everyone.

Labor Day was never intended to result in injury or loss of life of the American people. In keeping with the true intent of this holiday, which is to recognize the special contributions of the country's workers, each military and civilian member of this command should be one marked by tragedy.

Beginning at 6 p.m. today the nation's streets and highways will be filled with probably the greatest number of cars ever to take the road. When driving, keep this in mind and remember that increased traffic increases the possibility of accidents.

When participating in recreational activities such as fishing, boating and swimming, play it safe and follow these tips on water safety:

- a. Supervise children playing in or near water.
- b. Swim and boat only with companions, never alone.
- c. Provide each person in the boat with a Coast Guard approved life preserver.
- d. Should the boat swamp or overturn, stay with it. Wait for help or push and paddle it toward shore.

For those of you who plan to spend the weekend at home, do not leave your safety practices at work Friday. The safe way of doing anything is the right way, anywhere.

Join the Labor Day Safety Campaign. As representatives of Fort Benning, you are urged to set an example of safe driving, and safe habits while participating in recreational activities or while working around the home. Work for SAFETY ON LABOR DAY!

Gum disease chief cause of tooth loss after age 35

Tooth decay is primarily a disease of childhood, adolescence and early adulthood. Most of its damage occurs before the age of 35. After that, the chief cause of tooth loss is periodontal disease—a disease of the gums and other supporting tissues of the teeth.

Some of the aspects of nutrition, that may contribute to the development of periodontal disease, are: 1. Inadequate or unbalanced diet. 2. The texture of food eaten. 3. The inability of the body to properly utilize the food.

Any of these factors may lower resistance to periodontal disease. A vicious cycle may follow because once the disease becomes established, many coarse but nutritious foods cannot be chewed comfortably and they are deliberately omitted from the diet.

The physical character of food plays an important role in keeping the mouth clean and healthy and in providing the muscles used for chewing with the exercise they need.

Some morning you may wake up and find a strange ache in your baby's bed. Instead of your healthy child there will be a sick, puffy-eyed, fussy bundle of fever. It happens to all of us.

Unless you are a very experienced parent, you will suspect that something is not right with your child. You will call a doctor and say something like, "He won't eat, can't sleep, he's hot, he's fussy, he's crying."

The most correct answer to the question, "What is something going around?" is, "Almost always, and sometimes two or three times a year, there is an outbreak of viral illnesses in the summer as well as in the winter. Two or three children in the family are likely to be infected with the same virus, although the symptoms of one may be a cold and high fever while another has croup and a third vomiting and diarrhea."

It is becoming harder to answer, because control of viral diseases with the measles vaccine has allowed expression of a half dozen "new" viruses which also give fever and a skin rash. And with so many potentially dangerous viruses around, it is not unusual for a normal child to have the same thing twice or more within a few weeks.

Understanding viruses is that there is no effective antibiotic against them. Penicillin, the magic "pills" are useless. The correct prescription is for aspirin, cool baths, liquids and letting the child sleep it off.

When your baby suddenly gets a fever, check with the doctor. Let him be sure there is no pneumonia, an infection or strep throat. But if he calls it a virus and he is right, there is nothing you can do to help him.

A virus is not a disease, or a mysterious catch-all diagnosis. Viruses are real.

Doctors Might Say: Changes are seven out of 10 the well-meaning doctor will not say what you expect to hear, or be able to do something dramatic with a shot. With the help of friendly neighbors, you may be convinced that a child's sick must have meningitis, diphtheria, whooping cough, pneumonia, scarlet fever, appendicitis, diabetes or leukemia. But the doctor will take a careful history and do a careful examination, get whatever blood and urine tests or X-rays he needs (which may be none) then seven out of 10 times he will hear better of your child's life a virus. He will try various ways of putting you at ease, which range from the nonchalant approach ("What else is new besides 104 degree fever?") through "there's a lot of this going around."

When your baby suddenly gets a fever, check with the doctor. Let him be sure there is no pneumonia, an infection or strep throat. But if he calls it a virus and he is right, there is nothing you can do to help him.

But if he calls it a virus and he is right, there is nothing you can do to help him. But if he calls it a virus and he is right, there is nothing you can do to help him.

Chaplain's Corner

Attitudes may change when behind the wheel

By Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope Most men, and certainly a gentleman, will sit in a car and permit a lady to enter an elevator ahead of him. Few men there are who will refuse to hold a door for a lady and let her precede him into or out of a building. But put that same man into an automobile, and his personality changes radically and for the worse.

No longer is he polite, no longer does he show respect and tip his hat. He becomes a snarling boor. He asserts his "right" to be in that spot, at that corner, in that lane, FIRST.

Any lady who will demurely precede a gentleman and say "Thank you" at the elevator or at the door will usually also change her attitude in the auto as well. She becomes unpredictable, selfish and self-asserting.

I often speculate on this and wonder why we do this. Certainly a religiously dedicated man or woman displays consistent behavior. This leads me to the conclusion that few of us are truly dedicated.

Peter Cartwright, a pioneer American evangelist, described us when he said, "We are sanctified in streaks."

Isn't this true of you and me? We live separate lives. Maybe they are fragmented — all broken up as I don't know. But we have a segment of our lives in which we are polite, considerate, thoughtful and helpful to our fellowman.

We also have other sides. We are prone to show one side of our lives to the company commander, another to our chaplain, still another one to our friends, and yet a fourth one to our family. And yet, we may consider ourselves a religiously dedicated person.

I believe most of us have not let our religious feelings permeate all of our lives, and we are not religiously dedicated until we do. We have a positively stated Golden Rule which says, "Therefore all things whatsoever we would that men should do to us, we even so do to them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matthew 7:12). I suspended the emphasis to the word "do."

Mrs. O'Neill Honored At Main Club Farewell

The wives of the Infantry School's Company Operations Department feted Mrs. O'Neill, wife of the department's director, at a coffee held recently at the Main Officers' Club.

After being crowned "Queen O'Neill" with a crown fashioned from Follow Me patches and given red roses, Mrs. O'Neill was the "front row" guest for a program in her honor. In a "This is Your Life" type skit with humorous sidelights, the Department thanked Mrs. O'Neill for her service to the department and for her two-year tenure on the board of the Officers' Wives' Club. Gifts, more flowers and a scrapbook ensued as farewells were said to Col. and Mrs. O'Neill. O'Neill retired yesterday. Miss Perry O'Neill, the O'Neill's daughter, was welcomed as a guest, and welcome were also extended to newcomers, Mrs. Thomas Abercrombie, Mrs. Mark Benson, Mrs. Thomas Dornier, Mrs. Raymond Kauff- man, Mrs. Bernardo Bosch, Mrs. Carl Reiber, Mrs. Barry Nell, Mrs. William Ros- van, Mrs. William Donsbach, Mrs. David Hardin, Mrs. Chester Davis, and Mrs. Bobby Oake.

Mrs. Nauman is Active As a Volunteer Nurse

Registered nurse, volunteer president of the Fort Benning Chapter of Panhellenic, chairman of the Fort Benning Nurses Association, chairman of the Red Cross Nurse Volunteers, mother of three, homemaker and wife, Mrs. Alan Nauman is another one of the post's busy wives.

As chairman of the Nurses Association and the Red Cross volunteers, she strives to help herself and keep up with what's new in medicine. With nursing expanding into such fields as aero-space nursing and with medical knowledge also expanding with new procedures and new drugs, it is a big job "keep up." The group does it by regular meeting with pharmacists, therapists, nursing consultants and doctors, for classes.

Not only do the nurses want to gain knowledge that they may later need in jobs but also as Mrs. Nauman explains: "When a neighbor asks me about the new pill that she's taking, I'd like to know what she's talking about."

Volunteer Program In addition, through the volunteer program, nurses who are not able to work full time in their profession, can give many hours in part-time service to the community. Mrs. Nauman is another way of "keeping up" they say, and part of the "giving" that is so much a part of nursing.

One of the Panhellenic Chapter's main projects this year is acquainting high school senior girls in the area with knowledge about all aspects of college life.

But most of all, she explains, "I enjoy my family and my home immensely." Her family of course includes her husband, Maj. Alan Nauman whose job is with the Infantry Center's Director of Operations and Training, and their children, Jeannine, 9, Bill, 7 and Lynne, 5. They enjoy being together. A visitor to their home might find Mrs. Nauman teaching Jeannine to play the saxophone, showing her children how to make and arrange the beautiful tissue flowers that decorate her home or helping her family work in the yard.

Army Life To Mrs. Nauman, moving in Army life is nothing new. The daughter of a former Navy officer and school teacher, she had literally "grown up on the move." She and her family had lived in Sidney, Neb., Scottsbluff, Neb., Fairbury, Neb., Denver, Colo., San Diego, Calif., Waukegan, Ill., La-romie, Wyo., Douglas, Wyo. and Sheridan, Wyo.

MRS. ALAN NAUMAN Registered Nurse

Besides that, Mrs. Nauman points out, "My saxophone took me to a lot of places that I wouldn't have been otherwise." She started playing the saxophone in the sixth grade. As a sophomore in high school and for the next eight years, she played with a phony orchestra in Butte, Mont. Even as a nursing student and a member of Delta Gamma Sorority at Montana State University, music was a vital part of the college for her.

Surgical Nurse After earning her Bachelor of Arts Degree in nursing and her license as a registered nurse, she worked as a surgical nurse at the Sheridan, Wyo., hospital.

It was then that she married the young 1st Lt. Nauman. Their stations included Fort Hood, Fort Belton, Germany, Fort Benning and Fort Sill, Okla.

In Fort Sill, she started to work at the hospital in Lawton, Okla., with the intentions of working only six months, but because "it was worth a million more than money," she continued her work for 22 months. During that time her husband went to Vietnam.

In Germany, she was the welfare chairman for the Officers' Wives Club and taught classes in mother-and-baby care for the Red Cross. Also there, because their husbands were frequently gone on long maneuvers, their wives made lasting friendships over potluck suppers and games of bridge.

A lady of quiet dedication and service, and a lady who takes sincere interest in others, she carries her many responsibilities with an air of ease.

Preparations Set For '49er Party

Once more the Daughters of the U. S. Army are making preparations for their '49er Party, the gay once-a-year festival reminiscent of the Gold Rush era in Old California.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, Jr., recently kicked off the first tickets to the party from the purchasing office. Mrs. Paul R. Buckley, the organization's president, the party, to be held October 7, will encompass all the entire Main Officers' Club and its Support Club for the enormous fund-raising "fun" night for all of the post's prospects, acting as advisor to the decorations committee. Mrs. Robert G. Hertel will direct the floor show; Wes Carr will be master of ceremonies; Mrs. David G. Sheppard lends her hand with the prizes and judging; and Mrs. A. Szecvanyi and Mrs. Curtis Herrick are aiding the Junior Army Daughters in the organizing of the country store.

The cigarette girls, led by Mrs. Erik Van Brero, will also aid in selling tickets at the end of September from major unit representatives. During the party, Maggie's Chuck wagon will feed hungry gold-diggers, the Country Store will offer its wares, and the band will play music of the '49 era. Breakfast will also be served from midnight many units on post, which appoint military coordinators to handle the sale of tickets, property and games. Mrs. Larry Franks, Town Nursery supervisor, has announced that the nursery will remain open until 2:30 a.m. to care for children of parents attending the '49er Party.

Army Slackens Allotment Policy

WASHINGTON—Down in the directive for has liberalized its policies for allotments for retired service men. The changes contained in the Department of Defense Directive 73301 affect retirees in the Marine Corps and Navy more than they do those in the Army and Air Force because the last two services named have been following the procedures laid down in the directive for some time. Under the terms of the new directive, men who retired pay for all existing and previously approved purposes. They may take out new allotments for U.S. Savings Bonds, insurance and for liquidation of certain kinds of debts.

'Operation Custerica' Tests 16th Gp.'s Field Capabilities

"Business as usual" was the motto for more than 1500 soldiers of the 16th Sp. Gp. throughout "Operation Custerica" here last week.

Operation Custerica, the Group's latest training exercise, tested its capability to perform normal support missions under field conditions. The 16th maintained normal post support missions for 24 hours a day through six days of guerrilla harassment and constant rain.

Army Training Tests were administered to three 18th Spt. Gp. units during the operation. The 232nd Engrs. built a panel bridge across Randall Creek. The 511th Heavy Equip. Maint. Co. repaired and rebuilt automotive parts. The 698th Sup. and Service Co. set up shower and laundry points, POW distribution and ration breakdown for all units on the exercise.

Compared to our last operation," said Col. Arthur V. Corley, 16th Gp. commander, "Operation Custerica showed a substantial improvement in our professionalism."

Russian Newspaper Issues Warning to John Wayne

'Great Berets' Greeted by Rain On Third Week

By Lt. David Leonard
Some Benning area residents undoubtedly were startled to hear the following news release which was broadcast last week. Originating with a British news service, one version, published in a Buffalo, N.Y. paper, read:

A Russian newspaper, Soviet Culture, has warned John Wayne that he might find himself in the path of real bullets if he goes ahead with plans to shoot a movie in the South Vietnamese jungles about the U. S. "Green Berets" special forces units fighting the Viet Cong.

When asked to comment on the release, a Wayne spokesman noted that someone had their facts mixed-up — Wayne was already filming at Fort Benning and had no intention of doing so in Vietnam. One bystander was heard to say "You can't buy publicity like that," while another dismissed the whole thing as Soviet propaganda.

In the filming of the "Green Berets" (plural not singular as in the quoted release), Wayne and his crew moved to the site of the Special Forces "A" camp for most of the filming in the past week and a half.

The first day of shooting at the "A" camp was hampered by rain. Two days in a row crewmen had to rebuild parts of the camp which were washed away.

Although the rain slowed shooting somewhat, it has done some service to the set. "The rain has helped age the grounds making it look much better — more authentic," said Lt. Col. William Byrns, Department of Defense project officer for the film.

Filming went on as usual during the rain, Byrns said, but it put more of a strain on the special effect people. When it stopped, artificial rain had to be used in order to maintain continuity in the scenes.

Daily activities around Fort Benning have put filming off the regular schedule. "The more we film," Byrns said, "the more interesting things we find to add."

Last Saturday, an OCS class was filmed while performing helicopter assault pickups. Col. Byrns said that it would have taken probably two days to stage and shoot the exercise.

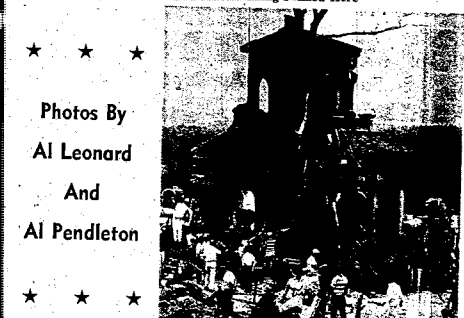

Last week filming took place mostly inside at the "A" camp dispensary and headquarters building.

New Chinooks Arrive at 177th Avn. Co. for Testing

By PFC Barry Nelson

The first "B" Model Chinooks arrived at the 177th Avn. Co. recently and the unit is the only company on post to have the new modified Chinooks in their inventory.

The first production CH-47B was delivered by its manufacturer, Boeing-Vertol Division, to New Cumberland Army Depot, Harrisburg, Pa. earlier this year.

The new Chinooks were then transported by air from New Cumberland Army Depot to Fort Benning by pilots of the 177th Avn. Co. Presently there are 13 of the new aircraft in the company's possession. Three more of the new "B" Models are due to arrive this weekend to make a total of 16 aircraft. The 177th Avn. Co. is to receive the new aircraft in substitution for the ships they recently turned over to the 22nd Avn. Co.

The mission of the 177th is to receive and check-out all incoming aircraft. They then train the men of the unit which is to in turn receive the aircraft from them. In this case, the 271st Avn. Co. will be receiving the new "B" models.

About the Ship
The CH-47B is now in major production, the result of the Army's need for greater payload and speed capabilities.

The gross weight of the current Chinook was expanded from 23,900 to 28,550 pounds. Cruising speed of the CH-47A is 130 knots and was increased to 135 knots in the CH-47B.

When operating under sea-level standard conditions with a full fuel load, the CH-47B payload capability is 24,000 pounds. This is a 42 per cent increase over payload capabilities of the CH-47A.

The CH-47B also has a 60 per cent increase in productivity when operating under combat conditions.

Changes in the CH-47B include the incorporation of the TSS-LTC Lycoming engine. This results in an increase of available horsepower from 2,650 to 2,850. In addition, it incorporates a new rotor system that provides rotor blades with a wider chord and a camber airfoil.

The blades also have gone to a honeycomb core, adding to their strength. All these changes in the rotor system enable speed and lift capability increase.

Although the specification of the CH-47B vibration level have been met, Boeing-Vertol, manufacturer of the CH-47B, and the Army have conducted additional flight to correct pilot complaints of vibration in the forward cockpit. As an aid in cutting down this vibration, the manufacturer has added four vibration absorbers.

Minor visual changes have also been incorporated into the CH-47B. Among these are the forward pylon on the fuselage. These lights were incorporated in an attempt to increase the night formation capability of the helicopter.

The CH-47B is but a forerunner to the CH-47C Chinooks, mounted just at look configuration.

Benning Schools to Open Tuesday for 1967-68 Term

By Ida Love Evans
More than 200 military dependents will "go back to school" here Tuesday as seven elementary schools for the post open their doors for the 1967-1968 term.

Schools See Many Changes Since 'Good Old Days' of 21

In the "good old days" of 1921, the first school for military dependents was opened here with 60 pupils and three teachers.

It was a momentous occasion for the children and their parents. The dirt roads between here and Columbus made it impossible for the children to get to school in town on rainy days.

The school was conducted in a classroom scaled to the size of full-grown men — officers attending "The Infantry School." That classroom, heated by a pot-bellied wood-burning stove, was located in a converted barn, formerly occupied by cows on the old Bussey Plantation.

One of the major problems facing the school was the very high desks and small benches from which small legs dangled. The pupils could barely see over the desks, much less do their sums and write in their tablets.

Ingenious Solution
An ingenious sergeant came to the rescue. He fashioned little stools which he placed on the benches, bringing the youngsters up in reach of their man-sized desks.

When school let out in the early afternoon, the stools were stacked away in the classroom was set up for infantry instruction in the evening.

This first elementary school at Fort Benning was a private institution, supported by tuition fees, supplemented by post funds.

There are seven modern educational plants on the post now, with 4,000 students and 193 teachers.

The contrast between the first elementary school and the present school system is not just a matter of size of the school population, furniture, buildings and freedom from fees.

The growth goes farther than physical accommodations. The modern heating and transportation available today would have seemed luxuries to those early pupils and teachers, but so too would the many machines such as tape recorders, call-phone record players, projectors and TV sets.

Schools Accredited
The fact that Fort Benning's Children's Schools have been accredited for the

Col. Don C. Faith Jr. and superintendent of schools, Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder.

With a rich educational background and extensive experience as both classroom teacher and school administrator, Mrs. Scudder has served as Post school superintendent since 1950.

Mrs. Scudder also engaged in graduate study at the University of Chicago, George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., and State University College of Education in Plattsburg, N. Y.

Mrs. Scudder's experience in Army life makes her preeminently qualified to guide the educational careers of military dependents.

As administrative head of the school, Mrs. Scudder recruits, interviews and recommends personnel for employment in the school system. She organizes and supervises school activities to insure the highest practicable level of instruction.

Her duties as superintendent are administrative and executive, consistent with the responsibilities of superintendents in civilian communities. Most important of these duties is leader of the instructional program. All other functions secondary to providing facilities, materials and conditions that make effective teaching and learning possible.

Mrs. Scudder is administrative officer for the Fort Benning School Board, as well as advisor to the board in matters of general policies. A President of the School Board is Col. Gen. G. M. rey. Other members of the

As assistant superintendent for instruction, Dr. Conforti supervises the instructional program. He directs the selection of teaching material and textbooks and coordinates the program of inservice education for teachers.

He holds bachelor of arts, master of arts and doctor of education degrees from the University of Kentucky in Lexington. He spent the past summer participating in a workshop in Inservice Education on a National Science Foundation grant in mathematics, held at Mercer University in Macon, Ga.

None of the administrators are new to the system this year. For Mrs. Scudder, this will be the 18th year and for Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, assistant superintendent for instruction, and Miss Ruth Massey, director of guidance, the ninth year. Miss Margaret Ratteree, elementary education consultant, will begin her fourth year with the system.

Mary Sherrick, at Wilson School is beginning her 16th year. Mrs. Pearl Brakoske, Edward A. White School, 14th year; Mrs. Mildred Carter, Patch School 13th year; Rupert C. Nunnally, Wilbur School, 12th year; George C. Nix, assistant principal, Faith School 10th year.

AUSA Award Is Presented 58th Infantry

Awards for 100 percent unit participation in the Association of the United States Army were recently presented to Lt. Col. Charles D. Wright and Sgt. Maj. James A. Scott both of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.

Lt. Col. Wright, commanding officer of the 58th, accepting the award on behalf of his unit, said, "I am certainly happy to see this award come to our unit. We hope that we will continue to keep it."

It is the hard work of Sgt. Maj. Scott and the assistance of the first sergeants in each of the companies, that makes it possible for our unit to receive this award.

Sgt. Maj. Scott also made reference to the fine work of the first sergeants in each company stating, "Each first sergeant spent time interviewing and explaining the purpose and function of the AUSA to each man in his respective unit. It was this diligent effort which was responsible for the battalion winning this award."

The awards were presented in ceremonies at the 197th Bde. Hqs. by Col. Jack L. Treaswell, brigadier commandant.

O'Be Travels From Manchuria To Attend OCS

The 70d Co. (OC) has among its ranks an officer candidate who has come all the way from Manchuria to attend OCS here. He has not traveled here directly from Manchuria; as a matter of fact, the "Manchurian Candidate" began his trip twenty three years ago.

Mikio Abe was born on February 10, 1944 in Chientau, Manchuria. His father was a Tokyo policeman who had fled along with his family to Chientau in order to escape bombings in Tokyo.

It was also at Chientau that Mikio's father was sent to a concentration camp because of his refusal to join in the Japanese war effort and never returned.

Following the war, Mrs. Abe and her children again took up residence in Tokyo. It was here that Mrs. Abe later met and married an American soldier. This started Mikio Abe's, now 18, the Barton's American way of living.

Following a tour at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Sgt. Barton and his family were transferred to Orleans, France. The Barton family, after a lengthy stay in France, soon were finally transferred back to the states, this time to Fort Hood, Texas.

Barton intends to go "airborne" after graduating from OCS.

Fort Benning Theaters Offer Top Amusement Value

BY PVT. FRANK KAUFFMAN

On any given weekend at Fort Benning a soldier, if he times it right, can see nine different movies at the six theaters located on post.

The price? Roughly $4, about one-third of what you would expect to pay to see the same number of films as a civilian. Perhaps this is why movies are regarded as one of the best entertainers bargains around for today's soldier and his dependents.

Statistics tell the story of movie popularity at Benning. In fiscal 1967 (July 1966 to July 1967) more than 890,000 patrons streamed into post theaters to view 2,071 performances of the most popular films of the day.

This week alone local cinema buffs were offered a choice of 20 films, a variety which included everything from Westerns ("Rough Night in Jericho") to spy spoofs ("In Like Flint") to comedies ("Penelope").

Each year more than 600 pictures are shown at Fort Benning. At Theater No. 2 alone, where old pictures are brought back for revival, films change almost daily.

Distribution of these films is handled by the Army and Air Force Motion Picture Service (AAMPS), a self-supporting arm of the military which selects, rents and distributes films to installations throughout the world.

AAMPS, which maintains a regional office in Atlanta for the Third Army area, pours back the profits from its theater operations into renovation of older movie houses and construction of new ones on Army and Air Force posts.

New Theater

Here at Fort Benning these profits will help build a new $750,000 theater to replace the 24-year-old structure which now houses Theater No. 6 in the Sand Hill area.

The new building which 2nd Lt. Lionel A. Larcheveaux, post theater officer, says should be up by July of 1969, will have a seating capacity of 1,000 in an air conditioned building at the corner of Scott Avenue and 13th Street.

Other major projects slated include a major renovation of the outer and inner lobbies of Theater No. 1, work on which is expected to begin in December, and renovation of Theaters No. 11 and 5 at Harmony Church.

Looking toward the future, post theater officials hope to see a new theater built at Kelly Hill although there are no definite plans at present.

Theater No. 1, the largest on post with a 1,397 seating capacity, accounts for one-third of the total movie attendance here. Built in 1937, the main theater is still regarded as "one of the best designed theaters in the entire world," Larcheveaux noted.

Spy Films

Popularity wise, Larcheveaux says that spy-type pictures in the James Bond tradition and academy award winners have the most drawing power.

As would be expected on any Army post, "war pictures have a strong appeal," the lieutenant added.

For the last fiscal year, "The Dirty Dozen," the tense war drama which featured Lee Marvin in the starring role, proved to be the most popular film shown on post. But the all-time attendance record is held by "Goldfinger," the third James Bond effort shown here in 1965.

Other pictures which chalked up heavy attendance in fiscal 1967 include, "Dr. Zhivago," "Mary Poppins," "The War Wagon," "The Russians are Coming," "The Russians are Coming," "The Blue Max," "Caprice," and "The Way West."

Sgt. Rafael Santaluz-Toro, post theater NCOIC, who since 1950 has served in Army theaters from Puerto Rico to Hawaii, says that Fort Benning has "the most active participation in its theater program of any of the posts I've been."

The sergeant also noted that Benning's theater program serves functions in addition to pure entertainment. The Saturday matinee, Santaluz-Toro says, is "one of the cheapest babysitters available to parents."

And the theaters, added Lt. Larcheveaux, "are some of the best babysitters around."

Enactment of New GI Bill Benefits Delayed 1 Month

From Army Times

WASHINGTON — Foot-dragging on enactment of expanded GI Bill benefits will cost veterans $3 million. Recipients of the new benefits will be given veterans for each child above two dependents. It will permit veterans who have not completed high school to complete requirements and draw GI Bill allowances without it being counted against basic eligibility. Some 1.4 million poor and disabled veterans of WW I, WW II, and the Korean war will get a $4 cost-of-living increase in pensions. Veterans of Vietnam and other special medical benefits traditionally available to wartime veterans will be eligible for wartime compensation, (now only eligible for VA home loans and mortgage guarantees. for those with one dependent; and from $150 to $175 for those with two dependents. An additional $10 monthly will be given veterans for each child above two dependents. It will permit veterans who have not completed high school to complete requirements and draw GI Bill allowances without it being counted against basic eligibility. Some 1.4 million poor and disabled veterans of WW I, WW II, and the Korean war will get a $4 cost-of-living increase in pensions. Veterans of Vietnam and other special medical benefits traditionally available to wartime veterans will be eligible for wartime compensation, (now only eligible for VA home loans and mortgage guarantees. Their ap-year.

Sens. George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and John J. Williams (R., Del.) estimated that amount of money would be saved by the Administration because most provisions of the measure are expected to go into effect at the start of October, rather than September 1.

The lawmakers pointed out that there was ample time for enactment by August 21 which would have provided the earlier starting date for increased GI Bill education allowances and other features.

During the 10 days delay preceding the deadline, the Senate's busy schedule was interrupted by the passage of numerous private and public bills. Among other actions cleared for Presidential signature a measure authorizing "acquisition of certain properties within Colonial National Historical Park, Yorktown, Va." and another bill relating to the disposition of property of the Creek Nation of Oklahoma.

A unanimous Senate-House conference agreement last week had appeared to remove all obstacles to speedy passage and signing of the measure into law. The House acted promptly but the Democratic leadership failed to move before the August 21 deadline.

Other features become ineffective on date of enactment. These are the $50 burial allowance paid to survivors of servicemen killed during current hostilities, and the furnishing of drugs, pension and compensation drawers in need of regular aid and attendance.

The measure, agreed on during a recent conference between House-Senate managers of the legislation, cleared the House first by a 301 call vote of 404 to 0.

Additional Benefits
 In addition to substantially raising monthly GI Bill education rates, the legislation offers pilot training, on-the-farm and on-the-job benefits for the first time to peacetime veterans.

Other provisions of the bill: The monthly stipend for veterans attending college will rise to $120 a month for $100 for a single person.

General Knowles in Good Condition at Martin Army

The head of Task Force Oregon in Chu Lai, Vietnam, Maj. Gen. Richard C. Knowles, was in good condition this week after being flown to Martin Army Hospital for treatment of hepatitis.

Although his condition is not serious, hospital officials said he will undergo treatment for about six weeks.

Gen. Knowles left Vietnam August 21 flying to Honolulu and then to Washington, D.C. He arrived at Lawson Field Saturday where he was greeted by his wife and 11-year-old son Richard and Fort Benning officers.

He was promoted to brigadier general while serving with the 11th Air Assault Division at Fort Benning and while on leave in Columbus, he received his second star. He has served continuously in Vietnam since Aug. 25, 1965.

Assistant Commander He was assistant division commander of the 1st Cav. Div., chief of staff for Field Forces Vietnam II, commander of the 196th Light Inf. Bde. and in May, he became Task Force Oregon commander.

An Infantry Division, formed from independent units, called the Americal Division, was being formed in Vietnam before he was forced to leave. The Americal Division is expected to be composed of the 196th Light Infantry Brigade, the 11th Armored Regiment and the 196th Light Infantry Brigade.

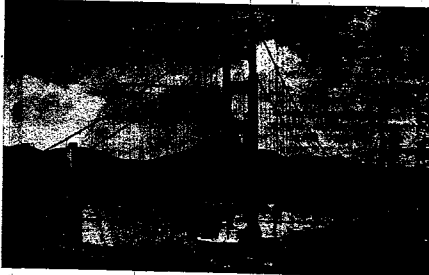

Most Experienced The most experienced commander in Vietnam, he was reportedly in line to command the new unit which will take the place of the I Corps, Task Force Oregon.

Task Force Oregon is now under temporary command

Three Science Books Added to Post Library Lists

James Muirden, Stars and Planets; Crowell, 1964. Beginning with man and the earth he inhabits, the author makes clear the relationship to the sun and other planets. He describes the origin, functions, and probable futures of all the members of the solar system. He explores the moon in terms of the latest information science has discovered about it, and shows why the lunar surface has become a multi-billion dollar target of man's maiden venture into space.

Moving among the stars, the author encompasses the entire night sky. He describes the different kinds of stars and galaxies, their magnitude, and the processes by which the astronomer "fixes" the position and path of stars millions of light years away.

He also discusses the possibility of life on other worlds. Amateur astronomer can have fun while learning about technical astronomy. Donald Cox and Michael Stokoe, Spacepower: What It Means to You; Winston, 1966. Between the covers of this book, you will find tomorrow as you face it. A. Edward Tyler, Space Around Us; Harper, 1966.

Here is a comprehensive survey of all we have learned about space up to now. The author begins with an exploration of the geography and climate in the oceans of space around us — the sun, the planets, magnetism, and radiation, including the Van Allen belts.

He tells of travelers in space; natural ones — planets, meteors, and comets and the man-made — satellites and the instruments of the space probes. He also explains the vast complexities of navigation in space. He considers the possibilities of life in space, both earth man on his explorations and other beings — even postulating chemical systems other than our own hydrocarbon-nitrogen systems which could support life in environments varying widely from ours on earth.

He covers the tools for space exploration — radio telescopes, radar, and instruments in spacecraft.

The final chapter suggests how far we may be able to get with space exploration and its technical rewards.

The Book of the Dead, The Hieroglyphic Transcript of The Papyrus of Ani; University Books, 1966.

The Book of the Dead is a great collection of texts, which the ancient Egyptian scribes composed for the benefit of the dead — kings, nobles, priests, and others.

These consist of spells and incantations, hymns and litanies, magical formulae and charms and words of power and prayer, cut or printed on walls of pyramids and tombs, and painted on coffins and sarcophagi and rolls of papyrus.

The most important of the religious writings go back before the Egyptian dynasties. Parts of it were four or five thousand years old when the New Testament began. The Book of the Dead is translated literally into English and is illustrated with black and white vignettes.

Benning Hosts Clinic For Football Officials

Fort Benning hosted the skills that make a successful football game possible. Football officials clinic held here Monday through Wednesday.

The purpose of the clinic was to train officials for the intramural touch football program to be conducted here during the fall and winter season.

Those attending were taught such things as the best way to throw down a red flag, "Don't take it out and just throw it down," said Clinic instructor Joe Navill of Fort Rucker, Ala. "You've got to throw it high in the air so the fans won't think you're mad at the players."

The official is required to think fast and coordinate many details at once. The job is not as simple as it seems. For example, he must coordinate with the band director before a game so the National anthem is played at the correct time. He must also be aware of the clock at all times. Precise records that may mean the game often tick away because the official is not at the clock.

Many techniques come into play during a game of football and an official must know them all. The clinic's goal was to impart these

Smallbore Contest Army Takes Title In National Meet

The U. S. Army International Rifle Team defended their National Championships at the National Smallbore Championships at the National Matches, Camp Perry, Ohio.

Riflemen Fire Record Score In National Trophy Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—The U. S. Army Rifle Team went into the opening day of the National Rifle Matches as pre-tournament favorites. They successfully defended their National Championship title with a record breaking score in the National Infantry Trophy Team Match.

U. S. Army Eastern, knowing they had the Marines to beat, posted a record breaking score to defeat the team which had won the 1966 National Trophy Team Match. The record of 1294 was set by Army Mercer in 1964.

Members of the championship team coached by SFC Roy Combs and S. Sgt. Stanley were S. Sgt. Roy Ambler, S. Sgt. George Jahelka, S. Sgt. William Sawwell, S. Sgt. Dewey Hill and S. Sgt. Paul Gupol and SFC Veron Reed.

Pan-American Shooting Team won for themselves and the Army three major championships.

Meredith led the Army in a clean sweep of the Prone Rifle Aggregate by setting a new National record of 2300-281. Ross and Lt. John Writer placed second and third respectively.

Gary Anderson, fresh from a double team victory in the Pan-American games, paced the Army to a one-two, three victory in the National Position Championship. He is still the writer's 3162 and Capt. John Foster's 3191. On his way to victory Anderson placed in the top three places of every match.

Foster's strong shooting won him the Any Sight Position Aggregate while Reservist David Kimer wrote Army Team member, won the Metallic Sight Position contest.

Thompson, 1967 Pan-American Games Gold Medalist, successfully defended her National Women's Position title with a 3127.

In the Team Matches Army Blue shattered two position team records. They fired a 1580 for the Four Position Metallic Sight Team Championship and 1582 for the Four Position Any Sight Team Championship. Members of the Blue team, coached by Lt. Wallace Lyman were Anderson, Foster, Ester and Maj. Presley Kendall. They added eight points to the Metallic Sight record and 19 to the Any Sight Team Match, record despite rain and bothersome winds.

PFC Gene G. Lumsden won the ATA International Clay Pigeon Championship of America in a shootoff with 100-100. His team mate, Spec. 4 James W. Beck followed closely with 100-99 while 1st Sgt. Billy Hicks, USMC was third with 100-98.

Present to see Lumsden's winning performance was his wife Diane and baby daughter whom he had never seen.

In the 16 Yard event Spec. 4 Rock M. Sorke placed second in a shootoff with 100-174.

The Grand American Trap Shooting Tournament was the grand daddy of Clay Pigeon Golf Country Club.

U.S. Army Firers Dominate Field At 8th Annual Interservice Contest

The 8th Annual Interservice Contest (ISC) was held at Quantico, Va. hosted by the U.S. Marine Corps, ended recently with the U. S. Army dominating the individual matches and sharing team match honors with the Marines.

Big gun for the individual championship was S. Sgt. Lawrence Cooper who scored 976 out of 1000 points in the five match aggregate to lead the Army to a one, two, three sweep of the contest. Placing second and third respectively were SFC Cecil Stevens and Spec. 5 Negri Barnett.

S. Sgt. Barbara Hill, the National Woman Service Rifle Champion and last year's Interservice Woman Champion, successfully defended her title.

In the long range matches, fired at 600 and 1000 yards, it were the bolt gun or service rifle, Army continued their domination at a bolt rifle, scored a 300-29 for his championship. Only Spec. 6 Edwin Frankowski, Herbert Duncan and SFC George Anthony for a sweep of the match. The 300-29 means that Felix shot all his shots in the bullseye and that of the shots were in the X ring, a small circle within the bullseye used for breaking ties.

Using the service rifle in the long range, SFC James McQueen fired a 297 and placed first while his teammate, S. Sgt. Ernest Weck's 295 was good for third place.

At the 600 yard Steady aim was the bolt rifle contest with a perfect 200. Teammate Duncan and S. Sgt. R. D. Rebinus, back at the 1000 yards both missed the center of the bull only twice and wound up in second and third places.

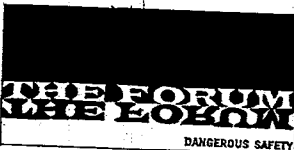

McQueen came through with the service rifle the team was first started at the 1000 yard point with all 29 shots in the five ring and 16 of these in the center.

The Marine Team fought back and won the first two team matches. Two Marine Foundation Sport Parachute teams, U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force, tied for perfect scores in the six man 1000 yard team cleared their "V" count gave the first place to the Leather-Knife indigine in a sport.

Michigan State led eight members from a defensive unit that held opponents to a total of 99 points in 1966; filling those gaps may prove difficult, even for Duffy Daugherty.

However, with such backfield stalwarts like Jim Raye, Bob Aples and Dwight Lee providing a potent attack, the Spartans will be a strong contender for the Big Ten Crown with an excellent chance of playing in the Rose Bowl.

Murry Warmath's entire backfield returns to Michigan this year. Coupled with durable offensive and defensive linemen, they will push the Gophers back into the contender class. Limited speed is the weak point and the other hand, Illinois has great speed and fine passing but lacks the great "Minnesota passes." The Illini also has a "clash fund" penalty imposed on them by the NCAA banning them from performing in all post-season games — which could

Arta Parsoghian, I'm told, has shed many tears during the past 10 months, most of them in front of that amiable man known for his sympathy: the sports writer. The problem, he bravely admits, is that he lost 10 members of his undefeated 1956 foot-ball team through graduation; most of them were super-stars. After admitting this he wanders away, shoulders hunched, mumbling about justice in this world. Ah, the plight of a college football coach.

It's all very touching, of course, and certainly a nice gesture on his part towards those departed. However, I don't think he'll be crying come December. At the end of the fighting Irish from Notre Dame should again be snugly perched on the prized throne reserved for the No. 1 college football team in the country.

The Irish must be rated as the top contender from that area of the country where some of the toughest football is played — the Midwest. Parsoghian's boys have an almost unlimited amount of talent, experience and size, and their attack, led by quarterbacks Terry Hanratty and Coley O'Brien, should be one of the most explosive in the nation. Defensively, the Irish front four features a unit bigger and more experienced than the Green Bay Packers; it is backed up by a defensive unit which can boast of three All-American candidates.

Purdue should be the class of the powerful Big Ten Conference, even with the loss of Bob Griese. They rely on a muscular defense and the versatile, fast and powerful everything in their offensive and defensive backfields. I look for Mike Eglegrecht to come into the cow as a replacement for Griese at quarterback.

remove some of the incentive needed to win in the Big Ten.
The conference teams that could surprise everyone will be Ohio State and Michigan. I'm told by friend Joe Calabrese, an expert on such things as the Buckeyes, he informs me, have the finest passing combination in the league plus an experienced defense (second in the conference last year). Michigan will rely on the quarterbacking of Dick Vinder and some sure-handed receivers. Both teams, however, are green at many key posts and may lose a few games because of inexperience.

Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana and Northwestern have too many question marks at important positions. All have talent, though, and could easily upset some of the more highly ranked conference teams.
The strong Mid-American conference has been growing in prestige and national recognition during the last five years. I look for Kent State, led by All-American candidate Don Fitzgerald in 1968, to slip into national's second leading runner to slip into the No. 1 spot this year. State will receive very strong opposition from Western Michigan, Miami (Ohio), and Ohio University, all very capable conference teams.
The Midwest had a lot to boast about in 1966 and has much of the same to look forward to in 1967. Last year Notre Dame was the top statistical leader in the most categories and was the national champion; Michigan State finished No. 3 in the nation and Purdue ended up No. 7. 26 players from the section took All-American honors (compared to 22 from the South, which was second); and the Big Ten had more players drafted into the professional ranks than any other State was the national attendance champion. I look for improvement in all of these categories in 1967. It should be a great year.

Next week I will report on what's going on within the Pacific Eight Conference (including UCLA) and Southern California, and the battle for the Lambert Trophy in the East.

Wright threatened to use the Bowie knife on the weekerman if he fouled up the shooting schedule this week for Kent State. "I'm not going to let you slip into the No. 1 spot this year. Summers said that she was particularly pleased with her own performance. "I think I did a pretty good job of it," she said. ## Training Ends For Candidates In 54 Hour Test

The senior candidates of the 89d Co., 9th Sig. Bn. (OC) took their final test of tactical proficiency in stride recently by participating in the 54 hour rifle company field training exercise conducted by the Company Tactics Team, USAIS.
The 89d Co. (OC) demonstrated their progress through twenty weeks of Infantry School instruction by achieving a high satisfactory rating, a score never surpassed, and only three equal.

Their demonstrated performance puts the company in serious contention for the coveted Trophy Tactics Award.

Soldier Receives Medal For Saving NCO's Life

A 197th Inf. Bde. soldier received the Army's official recognition Saturday for a feat of heroism performed here eight months ago.

Sgt. Gregory V. Schauer, Hq. Co., 197th Inf. Bde., was awarded the Soldier's Medal during ceremonies that also included the presentation of decorations to four veterans of combat in Vietnam.

Schauer, 20, was cited for saving the life of his squad leader during training with the 197th Inf. Bde. at Fort Benning, Ga., in August 1966. He was cited for his actions during a training exercise in which he risked his own life to save a fellow soldier who had become disoriented during a night patrol.

During the exercise, Schauer saw a fellow soldier who had become disoriented and was in a wooded area near Kelley Hill. He went back to find the soldier and helped him get back to the main force.

Exercises Held For Graduates Of Radio Course

Eighty-nine men graduated from the radio maintenance course here recently. Thirty-one men finished six weeks early.

Gerald D. Balogh was distinguished honor graduate finishing the course with an average of 98 per cent. He was promoted to Private First Class at the end of the course.

Five other men were honor graduates of the course finishing with an average of 95 per cent or better. And 19 accelerated students finished the 12-week course in six weeks.

Col. Richard C. Horne III, director of Communications and Electronics Department, presented the diplomas and addressed the graduating class.

OCs Commissioned, Hear Speech

After 23 weeks of diligent study and hard work, the graduates of officer candidate class 49-67 received their diplomas and commissions in Marshal Auditorium, Monday.

The young officers listened to guest speaker Col. John E. Lance Jr., commanding officer of the 2nd Bde. at Fort Benning Training Center, who spoke to them on the values of integrity, loyalty and professional competence.

"Integrity is the willingness to stand up and be counted," he said. "It is the quality without which an officer cannot function. The colonel explained that part of integrity is admitting one's own mistakes and not letting others take the blame for them."

Col. Lance spoke also of loyalty, calling it a "two-way street." He told the 194 new lieutenants that they could not be loyal to their superiors while being disloyal to their own men.

An officer must support the decisions of his superiors, but at the same time he must go to bat for his men. He is in the middle of this "two-way street" and must be loyal in both directions.

New Devices Draw Water

AN KHE, Vietnam — The villagers of An Xuyen are finding it much easier to draw water from their wells as the result of the recent installation of two labor-saving devices.

Seeing the need for an easier and faster method of hauling the water, Capt. George E. Rossmann, operations officer of the 1st Cav. Div. 27th Maint. Bn., designed two windlasses.

The hoists were constructed by men of the battalion's service section from several engineering pickets, a few pieces of pipe, cable, and a couple of USmm casters.

Residents of the hamlet were at first dubious about the devices, but after preliminary instruction and encouragement by the village chief, the hoists proved a complete success.

Six Ex-VC Work With U.S. Forces

RACH KIEN, Vietnam — Six former Viet Cong work hand in hand with a unit of the 8th Inf. Div. tracking down enemy troops and uncovering supply caches in the Mekong River Delta.

The Ho Chiang (open arms returnees), who are exposed in VC tactics, volunteered to serve as allied scouts and were assigned to the 3rd Bn, 38th Inf.

Capt. Ronald Morrison, intelligence officer for the battalion, explained that the scouts have received three months training at the Chieu Hoi Center in Fun An.

"The scouts live with the troops and each scout is appointed a buddy in his platoon who is responsible for his well-being," said Morrison.

Already the scouts have proved their worth. The scout working with the 1st Platoon, A is Le Van Phouoc, a one-time squad leader.

"On our first night ambush with him, Phouoc spotted two VC snipers seconds before they started firing," said radio-dispatcher operator Specialist Neal Quittmeyer.

"The sniper rounds didn't hit us, thanks to the warning Phouoc gave. He knows what to look for when the VC are around," Quittmeyer added.

War Medals Presented to Widow of Captain

Six children whose ages range from six weeks to six years, participated with their mother in a posthumous award ceremony held here recently in honor of their father, Capt. David P. Gibson, who died in Vietnam April 8.

Mrs. Frances Gibson accepted a Silver Star for gallantry and a Purple Heart, presented by Col. David G. Sherrard, deputy post commander.

Gibson was commander of Co. B, 5th Bn, 7th Cav, 1st Cav. Div. making a river crossing at the time of the heroic action that cost him his life. When the enemy pushed down the entire unit with a line of automatic fire, he took a squad through the enemy fire to a position where they could effectively fire on the hostile force.

After silencing two of the enemy automatic weapon positions, Gibson led the squad across an open rice paddy in an effort to eliminate the remaining positions. He was mortally wounded in this action.

Gibson was graduated from Infantry Officer Candidate School here in 1959. He served with the 8th Inf. at Fort Hood until 1963, when he left

Engineers Drill Deep To Obtain Safe Water

BIEN HOA, Vietnam (ANP) — A deepwell drilling program, conducted by the U. S. Army Engineer Command, Vietnam, is providing base camps in Vietnam with a safe and economical means for obtaining potable water.

Since the program began in September 1966, 200 wells have been drilled and another 60 to 70 are planned.

Before the deep wells were in operation, almost all the water used by the Americans in Vietnam came from surface sources such as lakes, streams, rivers and shallow wells.

The water from these sources then had to be cleaned by mobile water purification units, and in many instances, transported to base camps not near the water sources.

With deep wells, the water sifts through the various rock or soil layers, nearly completing the filtering and settling processes.

By drilling for pre-cleaned water, the Engineers have decreased the need for the mobile purifier units designed primarily for combat use.

Many of the water sources are now inside the camps, enabling more effective distribution systems.

The work of the engineers also includes building pump houses, storage towers, and chlorination units.

Soil samples from the deep wells are forwarded to the U. S. Agency for International Development (USAID) branch office in Saigon where they are analyzed.

The information is then shared with the Vietnamese people enabling them to plan better water systems.

Men Rescued

After hitting an anti-tank mine in Dinh Xung province, South Vietnam, several members of the 9th Inf. Div. were trapped inside their wrecked armored personnel carrier (APC). A Boeing Asaugh Support Helicopter Co. hooked onto the 13-ton APC and lifted it upright while the wounded infantrymen were rescued.

After silencing two of the enemy automatic weapon positions, Gibson led the squad across an open rice paddy in an effort to eliminate the remaining positions. He was mortally wounded in this action.

Gibson was graduated from Infantry Officer Candidate School here in 1959. He served with the 8th Inf. at Fort Hood until 1963, when he left

'Civic Action' Program is Helping Vietnamese Build

"Revolutionary development" has many meanings to the men and women of the Republic of Vietnam who are struggling to build their nation.

To the Americans who are helping them "revolutionary development" often is simply people helping people.

The long range revolutionary development program of the Republic of Vietnam consists of these coordinated military and civil actions to liberate the people from Viet Cong control; to restore public security; initiate political, social, and economic development; extend effective government authority, and win the willing support of the people.

In support of this program, the U. S. Army assists by engaging in active combat, advising the Vietnamese government and army, and taking part in civic action.

Civic action involves Army personnel in projects useful to the local population in fields such as education, public works, agriculture, transportation, communications, health, and sanitation.

Objectives

This broad program of civic action has three major objectives:

- Humanitarian — To better the life of the Vietnamese people, from the overall national level down to the individual child.
- Political — To gain the confidence of the people in order to assure their support and loyalty to the government of Vietnam and their opposition to the Viet Cong.
- Military — To win the cooperation and assistance of the people in the destruction and defeat of the enemy.

Many Projects

Army personnel have participated in projects such as construction and repair of schools, roads, and bridges; rehabilitation of public facilities; digging wells for potable water; providing medical and dental treatment for villagers; and distributing food stuffs and supplies.

In addition, soldiers have undertaken many other projects to help the Vietnamese children, including support for orphanages and playgrounds.

This person-to-person contact with the people of Vietnam is not a one-sided effort. The American soldiers are there to help, and while helping they learn from the Vietnamese.

"There has to be respect for the people involved in civic action on both sides," one U. S. soldier says. "We are not trying to help. Sure, we learn from them."

PREPARING FOR SHOVE OFF
Scouts Took Journey Down Chattahoochee

Army Approves Production Of New Chinook 'C' Model

An advanced version of the Boeing Chinook helicopter has been approved for production by the United States Army. The new Chinook, the "C" model, will carry almost 25 per cent greater payload than the current Chinook model now in production.

With a maximum gross weight of 44,800 pounds (20,321 Kg), the new Chinook will be capable of transporting up to 19,650 pounds (8,913 Kg) on a 100 nautical mile mission, and up to 23,400 (10,614 Kg) on a 10 nautical mile mission (Sea Level Standard Day).

The "C" model Chinooks will be equipped with two Lycoming T55-L11 engines and produces 900 more horsepower than the current engines used in the Chinook.

Power increase in the new engine has been achieved with no increase in envelope size and only a 50 pound (22.7 Kg) increase in weight. This provides the T55-L11 with the highest power-to-weight ratio for any engine of its type.

Chinook helicopters went into service with the U. S. Army in April, 1962. To date they have flown more than 180,000 flight hours. The operational Chinese fleet in Vietnam, which recently passed the 100,000 hour flight mark, achieved in excess of 65 per cent average availability over the last four months. This exceeds the U. S. Army's goal of 50 per cent for the Chinook. Advanced "B" model Chinooks were delivered to the Army in May, 1967 and the more powerful engine installed, will be available for delivery in 1968.

Boy Scouts Take River Excursion

Fourteen Boy Scouts moved off in seven canoes from the Fort Benning Marina last week on a 57-mile excursion down the Chattahoochee River.

The boys, from Troops 51, 228 and 125, spent five days paddling down the Chattahoochee, the second largest river in the South, and spent the last day living off the land.

Robert Foster, committee chairman for Troop 51, the host troop, and Walter Cook, the troop's scoutmaster, accompanied the boys on the six-day expedition.

The scouts spent the night preceding the cruise under the stars at Fort Benning Marina only a few yards from where the journey was made. Rainfall that night muddied the area, but the scouts fixed breakfast, broke camp, and were on their way early down the Chattahoochee River.

Army Develops Specialized Course for Gun Pilots

FORT RUCKER, Ala.—For the first time in its history, the U. S. Army has developed a specialized course for training gun pilots. The course is designed to greatly reduce the number of pilots who are lost in Vietnam after they arrive in Vietnam.

Warrent officers and pilots would fly the left seat with an experienced man in the right, progressing from troop ships to gun ships. This training in actual combat flying is five months long. For a man to be considered a gun pilot.

7th Stu. Bn. Is Assigned Colonel Cox

Lt. Col. Charles F. Cox assumed command of the 7th Stu. Bn. during ceremonies held on York Field last week. Cox replaced Lt. Col. Raymond L. Fletcher Jr., who will be attending the "Bootstraps" program.

Cox was commissioned in the army after graduating in 1960 from Wilberforce University. He has held command assignments with the 9th Inf. Div., 1st Inf. Div. and the 37th Armored Inf. Bn. He also has held staff positions with the U. S. Taiwan Defense Command and U. S. MACV.

He has also graduated from the Command General Staff College.

He has most recently held the assignment as brigade S-4 since June 1966 after returning from Europe with the 1st Fleigh, a graduate of officer candidate school in 1961.

He has been company commander of the 8th Engr. Bn. USA, REUR and Opl. Tng. S-2 and S-3 USAEUR. He has also served with U. S. MACV. Among his decorations are the Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Bronze Star.

Before taking over command of the 7th Stu. Bn. he was XO for the 6th Stu. Bn.

struction to familiarize them with the capability of their ship's weapons.

Their real gunnery training was left to their company commanders and seasoned veterans in Vietnam. The new pilots would fly the left seat with an experienced man in the right, progressing from troop ships to gun ships. This training in actual combat flying is five months long. For a man to be considered a gun pilot.

With reshuffling of schedules, the Department of Tactics' Aviation Armament Division now has the students for 12 days. This was done without extending the present 32 weeks of the rotary wing aviator course. By combining some of the training previously conducted by the Employment Division, Armament was allotted the additional instructional time.

Flying and Tactics

During the 12 days, half of the instruction is devoted to flying and tactics and the other half to shooting. The division does not waste a minute of the student's time. When he is taking time for firing ranges, he flies as one of a group, getting in his formation flying.

Between turns at the targets, the novice pilot practices fire team tactics, tactical navigation and plans armed helicopter missions.

The work is not all done in the daylight. The student practices night flying tactics, such as how to land and take-off in the dark aided by only flashlight beams in the landing zones. Included in this session is night gunnery familiarization.

Daylight gunnery begins with the four 7.62-mm machine guns, two on each side of the UH-1. These guns split 2,000 rounds a minute when all four are firing.

Flexes Weapon

Coming in at an altitude of about 400 feet and speed of between 60 and 90 miles an locked into position, able to undeviate course to their target.

DOUBLE "THANK YOU"... A double "thank you" was said recently at Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., right, says "thank you" to Miss Pat Wightman, president of the Junior Hunt Club, for the club's $100 contribution to the Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society joint annual fund campaign. Miss Wightman, in turn, gives the check as a way of saying "thank you" to the post for its support of the club and its annual horse show. A total of $21,030 has now been contributed to the post's AER campaign toward its motto and goal, "The Army takes care of its own." AER hopes to reach its campaign goal of $1 per person or approximately $60,000 from the post.

96 Per Month

This gunnery training is given to 86 aviator students in a month or 25 per cent of the two rotary wing classes graduating every four weeks.

This "shooting from the ship" is a prelude to rocket instruction. Slitting right between the two actual machine guns on each side of the "Iroquois" is a 2.75-inch rocket pod. Each pod is loaded with seven rockets.

The rocket pods are stationary, so by locking the machine guns the student is familiar with noising his helicopter on a target to line up his weapons before he advances to the rockets. When the ship is "trim," with the wind hitting evenly around the pods, the rockets take an

Army Proposal Is Revised For Organizing Reserves

WASHINGTON (ANP)—The Department of the Army has proposed revision of the Reserve Components reorganization plan approved in June by the Department of Defense.

The revision alters the original proposal by retaining some combat and combat support elements in the U. S. Army Reserve and 200,000 men to the USAR.

The proposed drill strength of 660,000.

Of this, the USAR was scheduled to have a drill strength of 240,000 including maneuver area commands, the U. S. Army Reserve Schools, and service support units.

The revised plan accommodates major objections raised after the original proposal was announced. Three infantry brigades will be retained in the USAR, and the paid drill strength will be increased to 260,000. The National Guard will have eight divisions and 18 brigades, with a total drill strength of 400,000 as previously planned.

The total force structure of the previous plan is essentially unchanged. The number of combat maneuver battalions is the same. The proportion of combat, combat support, and service support units within each component is approximately the same as exists today.

Major Changes

The revision includes three major changes from the original plan:

- Retain in the Army Reserve three brigade bases, 10 infantry battalions, and 15 combat engineer battalions, all of which were to have been included in the National Guard.
- Retain or form in the National Guard the following units which were planned for inclusion in the USAR: two military police brigades, a Transportation Corps motor transport command, a support brigade, six engineer construction battalions, three signal battalions, 15 companies, 20 truck companies, and eight ordnance companies.

Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Ruseur said the revision "maximizes the use of existing assets in both components. It minimizes organ-

604th Engineers Here For Summer Training

For the nearly 200 residents of the 604th Engr. Co., summer camp this year will help qualify them among the Army's elite engineer maintenance men.

"Our goal is to repair any engineer equipment that comes to post facilities in such areas as refrigerator repair and topographical instrument adjustment.

A stiff test is provided for new members in the unit in welding and heavy equipment in size from 1/2-ton kegs to fifteen wreckers were brought up from the unit's reserve armory.

"We staff our own motor ists are gaining on the job, pool, administrative and the unit's facilities," added the unit's first sergeant, George F. Baxter. Included in the unit's motor pool equipment are complicated electrical and field maintenance vans, giving the company maneuverability.

A direct support reserve unit, the 604th is the Florida headquarters for engineer equipment construction during the year.

197th Adjutant Surprise To Many Visitors

By Spec. 5 Michael McMillan
The first-time visitor to 197th Inf. Bde. headquarters seems to stare at the man sitting behind the adjutant's desk. Likewise, the unknowing caller who gets the brigade adjutant on the phone for the first time might easily be excused for being a bit startled at first. The man and the accent are, indeed, quite British.

In fact, Maj. Anthony W. Davis of The King's Regiment might easily have been the original model — tall, erect, thin mustache, brisk stride and all — for a Hollywood version of the British officer with tales to tell of famous campaigns and life "East of Suez."

Davis is a British Army exchange officer assigned to the 197th Inf. Bde. where he was recently appointed brigade adjutant after serving since last October as assistant S-3.

He is one of about 30 British Army exchange officers now in the U. S., only two of whom are Infantry Officers. The other is Lt. Col. P. G. Fleming, British liaison officer to the Infantry Center and School.

NCO Candidate Course Activated Wednesday

By Pvt. Frank Kauffman
The sergeant major of the Third Army said Wednesday that American involvement in Vietnam serves as "a vital shield" against the "gripping ambition of Asian Communism."

Sgt. Maj. William A. Craig said if the U. S. is driven out of Vietnam "no nation can ever again have the same confidence in American promise or in American protection. In each land of the free, the training of these forces of independence would be considerably weakened, and week period — 12 weeks in an Asia so threatened by Communist domination. The training would certainly impart the security of the United States itself."

Craig, who left here in January to become Third Army sergeant major, told the group that the American NCO's will be given in a 21-day training course. "The NCO's will be given in a 21-day training course. The NCO's will be given in a 21-day training course. The NCO's will be given in a 21-day training course."

To Assume Slot October 31 Gen. Mount Named 1st Army Chief of Staff

CG Addresses First NCO Academy Class

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commanding general of the Infantry Center, welcomed the candidates Tuesday here with a student roster of 48 enlisted men and 48 NCOs.

The Third Army Non-Commissioned Officer Academy is unique in that it is the only school to be completely staffed by noncommissioned officers. He stated that the students of this particular school would get the most thorough and the finest instruction that they could receive at an NCO Academy.

Fatality Rate On Upswing
Officials expressed concern this week over the growing rate of traffic fatalities involving Fort Benning personnel operating privately owned vehicles. Post Safety Director James E. Blount stated that since July 1, five Fort Benning military members have been killed in privately owned vehicles. (See "FATALITY," Page 2) viement without complaint. His morale has been consistently high. He has shown resourcefulness and courage on the battlefield. At the same time, he has assumed a warm, friendly and compassionate attitude toward the Vietnamese people," Craig said.

The sergeant major also contended that most American servicemen know why they are fighting in Vietnam. "To them the issue is as simple as this — the Communists must be stopped somewhere, and the 'Somewhere' is Vietnam.

The United States, Craig stated, "cannot afford to let any country that is controlled by the Communist dictators carry through with their threat to bury our children. The only prevention is to stop Communist aggression in Vietnam or any other country or to try to incorporate its huge evil and atheistic society."

From Polk, Jackson, Most of the candidates in the new NCO course came to Fort Benning from advanced Infantry training at Fort Polk, and Jackson.

LI. Col. Charles Cox, CO of the 7th Br., 75th, which is training the first group, says the course "fills a critical need for the Army." It also offers an "unusual opportunity for these men to be trained in their MOS (military occupational specialty) at the world's best Infantry training center." Cox noted that a total of 14 companies within the 6th, 7th and 8th battalions of The Student Brigade are expected to be training the future NCOs within the next three months.

The first group of men are assigned to the 72nd Co., 7th Br., commanded by Capt. Robert E. Lee.

Mount

Blount sounded one bright note when he reported that for the second consecutive Labor Day weekend, no fatalities were recorded for Fort Benning personnel.

This was attributed to the increased emphasis by unit commanders in cautioning members of their commands to be extremely careful during the holiday period.

Following a variety of assignments, Gen. Mount joined the 1st Inf. Div. in making station commander, moved on to command the 32nd Inf. Regimental Combat Team and participated in the landing at Inchon and the capture of Seoul.

Gen. Mount's wife, the former Mildred Louise Collins of Montgomery, Ala., and son, Bill, 14, will accompany the general to Fort Meade.

The 50-student classes are scheduled to report every two weeks for a six-week school of intensive instruction preparing them to accept their role as noncommissioned officers.

Unaccompanied Dependents Not Entitled Benefits

Unaccompanied military dependents desiring to go to Japan are reminded that unless the military sponsor is stationed in or is physically present in Japan, dependents are not entitled to the privileges provided under the Status of Forces Agreement (SOFA) with Japan except for medical care and dependent schooling.

A visa is necessary to enter Japan and duty must be paid on all items subject to duty when unaccompanied dependents pass through Japanese customs.

This includes entry of a privately owned vehicle, unless the traveler has a nonresident visa and a resident of Japan guarantees the vehicle will be shipped from Japan within twelve months. (ANF) ed vehicle accidents. This represents an increase of 136 per cent over the same period last year when two soldiers were killed.

According to Blount, four of the five lives might have been saved had they used the seat belts that were installed in the vehicles.

The overall number of fatalities recorded since July 1 is eight, 25 per cent higher than last year.

During the last reporting period (July 1, 1966 - July 1, 1967) a total of 33 Fort Benning personnel lost their lives due to accidents involving privately owned vehicles (19), Army motor ve-

The Judge Says ...

New law gives buyer right to cancel solicited sales

The 1967 Georgia Legislature has enacted legislation in its recent session which is of interest to every resident of the state of Georgia. The act entitled "The Retail Installment and Home Solicitation Sales Act" directly benefits the consumer in a number of ways. This article is concerned primarily with the home solicitation sections.

After October 1, a buyer who is sold an item (1) at his home (2) by the seller or his agent in person (3) on an installment contract or (4) signed at the time of the solicitation will have the right to cancel this contract. All four of the previously mentioned conditions must be present to benefit from the Act, however, it is obvious that any door-to-door salesman falls within this classification.

Notice of Cancellation. The buyer may cancel the contract by sending a notice of cancellation to the seller's place of business by certified mail, return receipt requested, postpaid, no later than midnight on the day following the execution of the contract. This notice of cancellation need not be in any particular form, however, the notice must convey the buyer's intention not to be bound by the home solicitation sale. There are penalty provisions however for the buyer. The seller must return the money received for down payment within 10 days of cancellation, but the seller is entitled to receive one per cent of the gross sales price or $25 whichever is less as liquidated damages. This is the extent of the buyers' and sellers' obligations.

Liability For Damages. Of course, if the buyer received the goods and a seller receives notice of cancellation, then the buyer must pay for the goods. The seller is also entitled to pick up charge for goods left with the buyer not to exceed $5.

This Act properly balances the rights of the buyer and seller. If the buyer acted hastily in accepting the "sales pitch" then he may cancel the contract by midnight of the next day. The seller is rewarded with liquidated damages up to $25 per contract for his effort and inconvenience. Please remember that the Act provides only a limited remedy.

The best preventive measure is realization of what you are signing at the time of the sale. If there are any questions, please do not hesitate to contact your legal adviser at 545-809 - 2441. He always is ready to assist you.

The Chaplain Speaks

Many have false belief that Bible is hard to read

By Chaplain (Col.) Holland Hope
The Word of God. Many persons, and especially the group less than 30 years old, but not only that, but askance at the Bible. "I can't understand it!" is a common statement. "Why should I read about a bunch of long haired and bearded men?" is another frequently heard statement.

Just a "cotton-pickin'-minute," I can't understand it!" I could page after page with statements that the Bible has which they would make you bluish that you had made a statement such as that. Let us look at just one: "Love your neighbor as yourself." I can understand that, and I know that you can. I find it hard to do. Any of the parables, and practically all the words of Jesus are easy to understand. But living in the manner which those words indicate we should is a bit more difficult. What's this about long bearded old men making you read about King David and his exploits as a callow youth? Paul and his exploits as a young man, Joseph, sold as a slave, worked his way up to a leadership position as a mere youth. Stay no more about old men, Jesus was about 30, possibly less, when he started his abort ministry, and was not more than 33 when it was terminated. Possibly he was not 33 years of age at his death.

Are you interested in stories about men? Guerrilla warfare? Look in the Bible, if you want sex stories, they are there. Action stories, love stories, heroic acts, interesting dialogue — look in the Bible. And everywhere in it you will find that it is startling, frank and honest about men. It just needs reading. I suggest a reading plan, but read.

Subconscious forces may cause childhood accidents

Most people believe that accidents just happen to children. That they are the result of inattention, carelessness or bad luck. Actually, there may not be the true causes they may be only symptoms of other, more deep-seated, forces at work.

Most accidents probably happen because children want them to happen. Like so many other behaviors, accidents frequently are a result of the child's unconscious. The child is unaware of this because the "accident solution" may be subconscious. Writers and researchers on the subject are agreed that accident-proneness is a kind of "feeling sickness." And, as such, it can be treated successfully only if the child is permitted to overcome the habit of "hotting up" his feelings, both good and bad.

Don't Foresee Danger. Young children in particular frequently have accidents because they do not foresee the possible dangers of certain of their acts. They get tired, take unnecessary chances, are in a hurry most of the time. They get angry, frightened and worried. All of the emotional conditions make the youngster susceptible to accidents, or accident-prone.

In a recent study of accident-proneness in school-age children conducted, it was concluded that some 98 per cent of the accidents reported could be traced to

Surgeon Says Prenatal care necessary to prevent complications

It is surprising that many women consider medical care during pregnancy unnecessary. Time and again one hears, "Why should I see a doctor during pregnancy and wait an hour to be seen for a few minutes when I feel well and have never had any problems."

Many women feel that presenting themselves for care only in the last month of pregnancy constitutes satisfactory prenatal care or that prenatal visits may be skipped without consequence. Let's discuss some of the problems and pitfalls that may be avoided by adequate medical care during pregnancy.

The patient who is seen for the first time has a physical examination and certain routine laboratory studies. These are designed to pick up diseases the women may have in association with pregnancy. Since many diseases are made worse by the added strain of pregnancy, it is important that any additional problems be diagnosed early in pregnancy for proper treatment.

A part of the physical examination is a pelvic examination with measurements of the bones of the pelvis. This is done to determine if the child can be expected to deliver normally or if cesarean section may have to be considered when labor occurs. A careful detection test or "Pap smear" is also part of the physical exam. This may detect early precancerous conditions in women who would not have come to a doctor if it were not for this pregnancy.

The blood tests taken during pregnancy are valuable in several ways. During pregnancy a certain amount of the mother's iron stores are given to the infant and therefore the mother may develop anemia which the routine blood tests will indicate. Another problem which may be detected by blood testing is the RH negative mother. When a patient is found to be RH negative she will require additional blood tests as pregnancy progresses to determine whether the infant is becoming sensitized to RH negative blood. Without knowledge of the existence of this problem most infants will be stillborn or seriously ill when born.

During the monthly and semimonthly visits attention is paid to several factors which may not seem related — blood pressure, weight gain, and a urine specimen. These determinations, when abnormal, may lead to the detection of toxemia of pregnancy or preeclampsia which has three cardinal findings, elevation of blood pressure, rapid weight gain, and albumin in the urine.

Since this disease of pregnancy is potentially so dangerous to mother and infant and usually does not manifest itself by overt symptoms until well advanced in pregnancy, it is of vital importance that these three terminations be made at periodic intervals. Here, too, a proper diet plays an important role in the prevention of toxemia, and the patient who is seen regularly in prenatal clinic is conscious of her weight and any tendency she may have to gain weight too rapidly.

In addition to the previously mentioned determinations, the growth of the infant is evaluated as is its heart rate and the position in which the infant is being carried is determined. In many instances an abnormal position of the baby may be changed to normal quite easily during a prenatal visit.

This has been a brief glimpse of some of the objectives Martin Army Hospital accomplishes by the prenatal care offered here.

Public accepting fluoride as a major health benefit

The number of Americans drinking fluoridated water has increased by 20 million in the past five years, according to Dr. Viron L. Dietschbach, assistant surgeon general. "This achievement is evidence that the public has accepted fluoridation as a major health benefit..." Dr. Dietschbach commented.

The latest figures show that 62.5 million consumers live in 3,146 communities where water is adjusted to the proper fluoride level. It has also been disclosed that 10 million persons, living in 2,300 communities, drink water which contains sufficient natural fluoride to protect teeth. The U.S. Public Health Service endorsed community water fluoridation in 1951 following several de-

Goal Set For Fund Raising Party

Daughters of the U. S. Army (DUSA) are busily preparing for the '68er Party scheduled October 7. The organization has its sights set upon raising $9,000 for the building fund of the new children's nursery. The approximate cost of the building is $12,000 and will cover approximately 8,000 square feet. DUSA has promised to pay from profits of other "68er parties five percent of the actual costs, which will amount to approximately $6,000 for the architect's plans.

Ground breaking for the nursery is not yet scheduled, but is expected late this fall. It is expected that completion will be about four months after starting time and it is hoped for in April, said Maj. N. L. Williamson, Personnel Services Division.

The new Tot Town will be of cement block construction with brick veneer and will follow the lines of the Edward A. White School. It will be located in front of the old nursery facing First Division Road.

Expected Accommodations The nursery is expected to accommodate about 225 children, as compared with 140 which the present facility is capable of housing.

Among the features planned for the new nursery is a central desk where parents will check their children in and out, a larger lobby and an awning which will lead out to the sidewalk.

An energetic mother, chairman of the Noncommissioned Officers' Wives' Club's Martin Army Hospital Coffee Call, a Red Cross volunteer, a grandmother, and a wife with "joint services," Mrs. Iris Thornton, wife of 1st Sgt. husband's second tour in Korea and on Eulwitak Island. After having been a Navy wife and an Army wife, she enjoyed being amid the Air Force in England, the Air Force Base and Spangdahlan Air Force Base. "I still have a soft spot in my heart for the Navy," she says, "and we have many friends in both the Navy and the Air Force." She suspects that at the annual Army-Navy football game, her loyalty would be to the Army but that she'd feel deep sympathy for a losing Navy team.

During their station at Spangdahlan, the Thorntons had a special experience. Because they could not readily move into quarters at the base, they lived "on the economy" in a small German village. She shopped in the village, learned the German language and enjoyed the village children's delight and amazement of the Thorntons' little Chihuahua, Cindy.

"We put a little fun in our lives. . . we tried dancing," says Debbie Pawlik and her mother, Mrs. Stephen R. Pawlik. Dear Community Service

I am a foreign born wife of an American serviceman who has resided in the United States two and one half years. I now want to divorce my husband. How will my divorce affect my application for recognition as a U.S. citizen?

Dear Reader: A divorce prior to your three year residence within the United States as the wife of a serviceman will mean that the residence requirement increases from three to five years. The three year period is only a concession to allow families of servicemen to become citizens within a reduced period of time and 1055.

'Identical' Captains Cause Problem in Medical Class

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex. — Instructors at the Medical Field Service School are having a problem with two identical twins, both physicians, both captains, wearing Army uniforms with Medical Corps insignia and both in the same class. The identical twins, George and Frederick B. Liebler, are "lost" among the more than 80 officers in the basic course. Ahead, though, are more individualized classes and field exercises at Camp Bullis.

The identical captains say the problem has not been too prevalent yet because so far most of their classes at Brooke Army Medical Center have been lectures and they Assigned Here And it is a problem which the Army will have to cope with for at least the next two years. Following completion of the basic course, the twins will be assigned to the Army Hospital, Fort Benning, Georgia.

One of them, which (which) explained that they never really had any difficulty until they entered college because "we were never in the same class in high school. It was a large high school, and I don't think we ever had the same teachers. However, in college our instructors were always confused."

They attended Mt. Lebanon High School in Mt. Lebanon, Pennsylvania, graduating in 1954. They received their Bachelor of Science Degrees from the University of Pittsburgh in 1958 and their M.D.s from George Washington University School of Medicine in 1962.

Interests Together Since graduation they have been serving internships and residencies in general surgery at Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh.

While at the University of Pittsburgh, they were on the wrestling team, in the 130-137 pound class. Although they were not on the university golf team, they frequently play golf together and shoot about the same scores.

Neither can express any reason for both deciding to become physicians; they have no relatives in the medical profession who might have influenced them. It just happened, they say. Their plans after completion of the basic course are indefinite, but if they do not remain in the Army, they hope to go into general surgery practice together in Pittsburgh.

They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Liebler, 139 Salem Drive, Pittsburgh.

Captain Frederick Liebler is still single, but Captain George Liebler is married.

Final Examinations Being Conducted on 'Hueycobra'

PORT RUCKER, Ala. — Taking its final examinations, the AH-1G Hueycobra is now Ala.

For Home Loans Vets May Get New Chance

ATLANTA — Although the deadline passed on July 25, 1967 for WWII veterans to apply for a GI Home loan, there's an excellent possibility the program will be re-vitalized, reports veterans service director, Fets Wheeler.

"Under new legislation now awaiting President Johnson's signature, eligible World War II veterans will have until July 25, 1970 to make application for a home loan," Wheeler said.

Another important part of the new bill gives the VA authority to increase the maximum direct home loan from $17,500 to $25,000 in areas where cost levels would indicate this necessity.

Korean and Cold War veterans have little to worry about at this time, concerning expiration of eligibility. The absolute cutoff date for Korean War veterans is Jan. 31, 1972. Like WW II and Korean War veterans, Cold War veterans' eligibility is determined by adding ten years from the date of discharge plus one year for every three months of active duty.

Recent figures from the VA indicate that since the origin of the GI Home loan program in 1944, there have been over 140,000 direct and guaranteed home loans made to Georgia veterans amount-

The HUEYCOBRA has a greater range, speed, and firepower than previous Army helicopters. Since it has been developed from other models of the HUEY series, incorporating the same transmission, engine and rotor system as the UH-1B, no special training will be necessary for pilots when the HUEYCOBRA is deployed.

Following "graduation" the HUEYCOBRA will be deployed to Vietnam. This should be by the later part of this year or in early 1968. In the meantime, it is the job of the test pilots and engineers at the Test Board to evaluate all systems of the new helicopter under all possible conditions.

The object of the testing program is to submit the new AH-1G to even more rigorous activities than other helicopters are now flying in Vietnam.

For example, at Yuma, Ariz., where the Test Board will soon examine the HUEYCOBRA's weapons systems, the HUEYCOBRA is scheduled to fire 2 million rounds of 7.62 mm ammunition and 15,000 275 mm rockets.

The HUEYCOBRA is built by the Bell Helicopter Company of Fort Worth, Texas.

The Green Berets . . . Seen Behind the Scenes

During a day of filming at Batjac's 'A' camp last week, photographer Spec. 5 Michael McMillan captured these behind-the-scenes moods and actions of 'The Green Berets' actors and crew. The movie, which will depict the U.S. Special Forces' role in Vietnam, is being directed by John Wayne and is currently in its fifth week of filming here.

RIOT TRAINING . . . Members of the 43rd Engr. Bn., center troop command, are shown trying to contain a simulated mob of rioters during a riot control training class held last week. The training section of the Engineer unit gas, bayonet drill and civil affairs such as co-operation with civil authorities. The officers of the unit received practical training in the part of platoon leaders and other supervisory capacities.

British Adjutant May Provide Surprise to Visitors

Davis finds his new job as adjutant quite different from a good position to view some similarities between American and British armies, since he spent four years as adjutant of a British unit.

Much the Same
From the point of view of an adjutant, both armies are much the same, he says. The problem areas are quite similar. Only the staff procedures differ.

He finds "enormously impressive" the way in which the U. S. Army accomplishes its mission efficiently in spite of heavy personnel turnover, a problem not encountered in the British Army, which does not rely on conscription for its manpower.

Assignment Differences
Another quickly-noticed difference is in the assignment of junior officers. Where British majors will be assigned to command a company or battery, American lieutenants are often called upon to assume such a command. But, Davis notes that these lieutenants may lack in experience, they make up in enthusiasm.

Commanders' personal interest in seeing that their men are commended for jobs well done is another point of distinction. He finds American officers meticulous about change programs and as commendation are not as frequently used in the British Army.

To gain a great deal from an exchange program, Davis considers it necessary that both be given a job, as he has been here, and that he become completely absorbed in it. Only then can one fully understand an organization's workings and objectives.

Aside from a sound schooling in the organization and procedures of the U.S. Army, Davis feels he has gained valuable insight into the reasons behind U.S. policies and objectives. He suggests that exchange programs are of great value in making U. S. arms more clearly understood abroad.

Better Understanding
This matter of conveying better understanding works both ways, he believes. He feels that his mission is partly that of an unofficial ambassador and is anxious to help Americans understand their country better, both from a military and a cultural viewpoint.

He stresses the close ties interests here apart from his military duties.

He is currently receiving instruction as a member of the Fort Benning Sports Club and also enjoys golf and deep-sea fishing. His wife, Sue, is active in the tennis club. They have two children: Simon, 8, and Fiona, 6.

Davis hopes one of his future assignments will be a multi-nation one where the familiarity with the U. S. Army working methods gained during his tour here will be invaluable.

The Davis family has found their reception in the U.S. to be most friendly and hospitable. Davis has found other

'MICV' UNDERGOES TESTS ON BENNING RANGE. Vehicle Currently Being Checked by Infantry Board (U. S. Army Photo)

New Mechanized Combat Infantry Vehicle Now Being Tested for Military Potential

Military potential testing of the Mechanized Infantry Vehicle (MICV) began this week. The vehicle is being tested at Benning Range. The MICV is a fully equipped carrier, can accommodate 12 men, 10 fully armored combat men and their gear in the squad compartment. The squad compartment has the necessary number of port holes and vision devices to afford those men equipment aboard an opportunity for ground orientation, target acquisition and the firing of their individual weapons while the vehicle is moving. The highly maneuverable carrier is powered by a diesel engine which can drive the vehicle at top ground speed of approximately 40 mph. Not to be deterred by small streams or rivers, the MICV has a swimming capability in its own defense in the water. Normal cruising range for the vehicle is 370 miles.

Lt. Col. Robert B. Carmichael, chief of the Field Visitation Test Division, USAIB, is in charge of the testing. S.Sgt. Jose J. Fernandes is test NCO and will be putting the new vehicle through its paces over the ranges at Benning.

Excellent Attendance Expected for VA Meet

ATLANTA—Pete Wheeler, a member of the U. S. Veterans Advisory Commission has forecast excellent participation in a southeastern area meeting of the Commission at the DuPont Hotel, Sept. 15, 16, and 17.

Wheeler said, "This is an unprecedented opportunity for the veterans to make constructive suggestions and proposals from the grassroots level concerning veterans' benefits."

The eleven member U. S. Commission made up of national experts in the field of veterans' affairs has specified the summer conducting regional hearings across the country for this purpose. Any individual or group that has an interest in veterans' programs is invited to appear before the group and make their proposals known.

"If veterans are satisfied with current veterans' programs we want to know; if we are not satisfied, we want to know."

He is hopeful that the meeting will continue to offer new solutions to old problems and identify any areas to meet these needs," he said.

By Mike McNulty

If some members of UCLA's 1966 football team decided to start visiting their favorite head-shrinkers after that year's end, the reasons would be quite understandable. It seems that after completing a brilliant season of nine wins and one loss the Bruins tied for the Pacific Eight championship with the University of Southern California, which sported an overall record of seven wins and three losses. Since they had beaten USC earlier in the season, UCLA was considered by most experts as the team that would represent the West in the Rose Bowl.

Not so said the athletic directors of that conference, who decide such dilemmas. They voted Southern Cal into the Bowl game while the frustrated Bruins sat in front of the idiot box and viewed it. USC had defeated six of seven conference foes, the athletic directors rationalized, compared to UCLA's league record of five and one—meaning that Cal played and beat one more league opponent. Obviously the problem lies with the uneven scheduling in the Pacific Eight—which, I'm informed, won't be remedied for another year or so.

In 1967, the same situation could confront that conference again. There's talent galore throughout the Big Eight, but once more the two arch-rivals from Los Angeles are the prime contenders. Both teams have a chance of securing national honors, too.

UCLA will rely on the double-threat of quarterback Gary Behan, an All-American and Heisman Trophy candidate, to lead a somewhat inexperienced offensive attack. But he's a master of the pass-run option play, can throw the long bomb, and is a break away threat any time he gets past the line of scrimmage, so look for UCLA to put a lot of points on the scoreboard. The Bruins' weakness is lack of depth.

John McKay's Trojans will feature a host of speedy backs and a formidable defense. All he has to do is find a quarterback to lead his Men of Troy. If sophomore Mike Holmgren comes through for him at that position, USC will be a powerhouse.

There's optimism in Seattle, too. The Huskies of Washington, loaded with experienced personnel both offensively and defensively, may change the trend of a California-dominated conference and run away with the Western crown. If Washington's quarterback, injury-plagued Tom Sparlin, can stay healthy, the Huskies will return to the top and possibly make the sought-after trip to Pasadena.

After dropping to the bottom of the Pacific Eight in 1966, Stanford should show considerable improvement with the return of 26 lettermen. The Indians are a year or two away from the championships, but coach John Ralston's boys will feature a durable foe for conference opponents.

The remaining four teams in the Pacific Eight—Washington State, California, Oregon State, and Oregon—should be improved over last year but not enough to rate as contenders in 1967. Each team must overcome strong weaknesses and inexperience at important positions.

While the Rose Bowl trip is up for grabs in the West, the Lambert Trophy will be at stake in the East. And as many as nine teams have a shot at that exalted prize.

Yale has a fine quarterback in Brian Dowling, a veteran group of runners to back him up, and a stingy defense. Dowling was injured for most of the 1966 season and the Elis' title hopes hinge on his healthy return. If he's able Yale should return the Lambert Trophy to the Ivy League.

Princeton, Harvard, and Dartmouth would

Pan-American Former Baseball Player in Training Here

The star shortstop on the American Games held at Winnipeg, Canada. The U.S. team completed an impressive 11 and three record in the competition which brought together teams from all over the Western Hemisphere. Smith was the 22-year-old lieutenant who has been with the baseball uniform to wear the more familiar garb of the U. S. Army. Smith, a 1967 graduate of West Point, is set to enroll in the R. A. basic officer's course. Smith, with a .220 batting average, was instrumental in leading the United States to its first gold medal for baseball in this, the fifth Pan-American.

When asked what was his most exciting play of the games, he told of a crucial double play that squelched a rally by the Cuban team. With the score locked at 1-1 and only one out with bases loaded a Cuban batter struck the Cuban ball to the hole behind second base. Smith rushed over, made the stop and started the double play. The double play took place in the third game of the two out of three series, which decided the gold medal winner. Smith also added that the U. S. team really should be proud of the victory. The team was composed of amateur players just out of college while the Cuban players had been playing together for years in international competition. Smith, a native of Richfield, Minn., hopes to continue playing baseball this summer with the Student Brigade team in the post league.

42nd Co. Holds Rotating Trophy

The 42nd Co., 4th Stu. Bn. (Abn.) TSB captured the Airborne boxing trophy last week and moved into fourth place in overall standings for the season. Boxers from the 42nd won three of their four bouts to bring home the rotating trophy awarded to the winning company each week. Rain forced cancellation of four of the evening's twelve scheduled contests.

Standings now show the 48th and 49th companies in tie for first place with identical 11 and seven records. The 45th Company follows with a seven and five tally and in fourth is the 42nd whose boxers have compiled a nine and seven record for the season. Competition tonight will see the top two companies square off in an attempt to gain uncontested control of first place. Also fighting tonight are boxers from the 43rd and 44th companies. The action begins at 7:30 p. m. at the Beane Street boxing arena. In last Friday's competition boxers from the 43rd and 46th companies won with two and two records. The 47th company finished last winning only one of its four bouts. The only knockout of the night was scored by William B. Dudley of the 42nd who floored Don Crowe, 4th, in the first round of their bout. Visitors to the fights last week included children from the Anne Elizabeth Shepherd Home in Columbus and cub scouts from the 4th Battalion sponsored Pack 127.

SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT
The company level softball tournament will begin here Monday and continue through September 22. All major units will be represented. The 19th, CTC and 20th Avn. Co. will be permitted to field two teams each, while MAH and ATC will field only one team each.

up in a triple tie for the league title last year and each is capable of a repeat performance in 1967. Dartmouth will be a defense-dominant team this year as losses through graduation stripped the Big Green's offensive; Harvard has a smooth offensive backfield and a muscular defensive line; and Princeton will rely on a ferocious passing attack. All three, however, are counting heavily on inexperienced sophomores and may lose a few games before their teams are settled.

Syracuse should be the best of the independents with a good chance of retaining the Lambert Trophy. Rambling fullback Larry Coonke will lead another typical Orange running attack and an experienced defensive unit should hold opponents from doing much scoring. Coach Ben Schwartzwald's main problem is an inexperienced offensive front seven.

Tom Cahill of Army is hopeful that his well-balanced Cadets can sustain the winning momentum displayed last year. Hill will have to plug some defensive holes and supply some depth if Army is to repeat its 1966 performance, though. Penn State, another strong contender, has the same problem. If promising sophomores come through for these two teams, they'll be hard to beat.

Long-shots for the Lambert Trophy are Navy and Cornell, the former an independent and the latter a member of the Ivy League. Each has an explosive offense but both will have to find a few hardy players to stop opponents from scoring against them. We should see a few good scraps for top honors in both the East and West in 1967.

Ceremony Marks Retirement for Colonel

Col. Richard James O'Neill, who served as chairman of the Fort Benning Boy Scout District and president of the Youth Activities Club, received last week from active duty.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, Commanding General, presented him with a Letter of Merit with the first oak leaf cluster at the retirement ceremony. He was awarded the medal for his efforts while working as secretary and director of Company Operations Department at the Infantry School.

Col. O'Neill was active in community projects. Before serving as chairman of the Fort Benning Boy Scout District, he was active in scouting in Europe and was a district chairman while serving in Alaska. He was elected president of the Youth Activities Club in July 1965, and was responsible for the expansion of membership and facilities and for education programs.

Last week, he was presented a plaque from the Chattanooga Council of the Boy Scouts of America for his service to the Fort Benning District and the council.

Under his leadership, the district has provided a complete program of activities to the troops from Fort Benning and surrounding communities, including many tours for scout units from the outlying areas.

Col. O'Neill is a graduate of the University of Maryland in College Park, Md., and he received his master's degree in international affairs from George Washington University in Washington, D.C. He entered the service in December 1959, with an ROTC commission.

Test Facility Being Built For Cheyenne Rotorcraft

BURBANK, Calif. — Construction of a Lockheed-California Company flight-test facility for the new AH-56A Cheyenne combat rotorcraft has begun at Ventura County Airport, Oxnard, Calif., the aerospace firm announced recently.

A hangar and flight-test building covering 24,000 square feet are slated for completion by the end of September for testing of the advanced compound and rotor-bladed aircraft Lockheed is building for the U. S. Army at the company's Van Nuys, Calif., plant.

Roll-out in April. AH-56A took place in April. It was publicly introduced in Army-Lockheed ceremonies in Van Nuys. Ground tests have been under way since at the Van Nuys plant.

The 250-mph Cheyenne is designed to replace the armed helicopters currently used by the Army. The AH-56A will fly nearly twice as fast as armed helicopters now in Vietnam.

Primary missions of the two-man AH-56A will be to escort troop-carrying helicopters and to provide supportive fire in the combat landing zones.

The Oxnard flight-test facility — on a 40-acre site — will be linked to the Ventura County Airport by a 5.0-foot paved taxiway to the runway.

Platoon Rewards Boy For Spotting Ambush

CAT LAI, (89th INF-10)—A Vietnamese boy recently alerted a platoon from the 199th Light Inf. Bde. of a nearby Viet Cong ambush. The boy's name is Lang. He is 12 years old.

To repay Lang for his bravery, an appreciation fund was begun. The fund now contains enough money to finance his college education.

Lang was lagging along with a reconnaissance platoon from Co. 8, 4th Bn., 12th Inf. while on a search and destroy mission near here.

During a break in the sweep, Lang decided to fetch a few stalks of sugar cane for his American friends. As soon as he entered the sugar cane field, he spotted a squad of Viet Cong waiting in ambush.

Lang immediately cried out, alerting the Americans to the danger that lay ahead. He endangered his own life to save the lives of many.

As appreciation for Lang's bravery, 1st Lt. Leonard Cummings, platoon leader, decided it would be appropriate if the entire company gave Lang a gift.

After much discussion, the men decided to begin a fund to finance the boy's college education.

In a short time, word of Lang's action spread throughout the battalion, and soon other company commanders were asking their men to

Remodel Old Rural School

LONG THAM, 9th INF-101—Quan Tri hamlet school walls had been; and new Dutch doors replaced the decayed doors which had hung on rusted hinges.

Residents of Quan Tri labored for months with materials provided by artillery men of 9th Inf. Div. to finish the project.

The masons and carpenters even worked on Sundays to finish in time for opening day.

The battalion will continue to assist Quan Tri school. The possibility of improving sanitary facilities and a proposal to construct a school well are being studied.

Soldiers Convalescent Center Treats Malaria, Etc.

CAM RANH BAY, (1st) Log-100—The 6th Convalescent Center, part of the 4th Medical Bde., specializes in the treatment of malaria. It also cares for victims of hepatitis, convalescent battle casualties, and other diseases which require lengthy treatment periods.

A specially designed, three-phase malaria treatment program involves medical care and physical exercise.

Before the center went into operation, many malaria patients who returned to duty were suffering relapses. The relapse rate was lowered considerably when the combination medical-physical training program was initiated.

"The idea is to build up the patient's strength, through calisthenics and hard work, so that when he reports to his unit, he will be ready to pick up a rifle, if need be, and go on an operation," said Lt. Col. Anton L. Hiltzberger, commanding officer of the center.

The hospital's original malaria rehabilitation program involved 31 days. This included 14 days of rest and medication, followed by increasing degrees of physical activity. Studies conducted last fall and winter showed that the total period could be reduced without an increase in the relapse rate.

Malaria Sufferers Sufferers of Falci-parum malaria; the more serious of these strains commonly found in Vietnam, are now given medication for no longer than 14 days. These patients are now returned to duty in 28 days.

Victims of vivax malaria, the other common strain, are kept in this center for 16 to 18 days.

Gym activities, daily calisthenics, organized sports, and swimming build up the patient's strength after he leaves the medication stage. All these activities are supervised by experts in physical training.

The reconditioning period makes up the last two phases of treatment. In the first phase, patients devote a few hours a day to calisthenics and sports, and then are left free to swim or participate in additional sports.

"Unit pride plays a big part in this," said 2nd Lt. Ronald D. Reed, organizer of many of the athletic activities. "Men from one unit compete with men from another unit in a sport, it's good competition, and it helps us in our reconditioning goals."

In the final phase, the men are considered patients name only. "They live in barracks, not wards, and a military atmosphere prevails," the lieutenant said.

Back to Work
Kitchen chores, beautification projects, and other work details are part of the daily routine.

When construction at the convalescent center was in progress men in the final reconditioning phase helped to erect many of the buildings.

Caring for hepatitis patients has become another of the center's specialties. "Virtual-ly all hepatitis cases in Viet-
