Hq Cmd's canoe race has new twist

SP4 Teddy Taijerson and PFC Walter Dunovant competed in the Hq Cmd's race Oct. 24.

Thursday, Oct. 24, found Hq Cmd up to their necks in water again. The semi-annual canoe race was again a big success, even with the new twist thrown in. The race began at 2 p.m. at the intersection of Santa Fe Road and Upatoi Creek. The contestants raced from there, down the Upatoi, into the Chattahoochee River, down to the Pathfinder Recreation Area where it culminated in a picnic for both the wet and weary contestants and anyone else in Hq Cmd who could make it out for the picnic. Out of 12 canoes entered, four of them were powered by WACs. The women made a good showing, even though they didn't place in the trophy winning top four places.

LTC Rogers, commander of Hq Cmd, was on hand to present the trophies for the winners. PV2 Joe Jones, Co B, and PFC Fred Gaige, Co A, captured first place; SP4 Patrick Henry, Co A, and PVT Timothy Graham, Co A, took second place; PV2 Steve Wolf and PFC Robert Molitor of Co A got third place, with PV2 Henry Tatum and PFC Frank Leslie of HHC took fourth place.

SP5 Paula Stonecipher (front) and SP4 Deborah Monday were two of many soldiers that paddled their down the Upatoi Creek in the Hq Cmd's canoe race.

CHEETAH (Acinonyx jubatus)

The cheetah is one of the fastest mammals in the world. In two seconds, from a crouching position, it can be moving at 45 miles per hour. For short distances, it can reach speeds over 70 miles per hour. Today the cheetah is found mainly in Africa. A few remain in parts of Asia. The cheetah is the only member of the cat family with claws that do not retract fully. When stalking prey, the cheetah's spotted coat helps keep the animal hidden until the moment of attack.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

Dog trials, deer contest scheduled for weekend

By BILL KLOBE

The Rod and Gun Club at Victory Lodge will be a busy place this weekend with management personnel involved in support of the field dog trials and registering deer in the Club Big Deer Contest.

Anyone needing a post hunting permit had best get it today. The safety orientation will be shown at noon, 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. The manager has made arrangements to show the orientations continuously from noon until closing time tomorrow, but there will be no showings on Sunday anymore.

Blanchard Barcus (left) and Ernest Clark display the catfish they took from Victory Pond last week. Barcus, a member of the 444th Transportation Truck Co landed his 30-pound catch first. About one hour later Clark hooked into his 29-pound catch. Both men were fishing at the dam and using cut snad for bait.

Personnel are not authorized to hunt unless their post permit has been stamped to indicate they have attended the orientation.

Mr. Zentko, club manager, could use some volunteer help from the membership. Anyone interested in helping with the deer weighing and registering, or in operating the lunch stand at the field trials can call him at 687-0562.

Field Dog Trials

The Rod and Gun Club field dog trials start this morning with the events for professional dogs and handlers. Saturday the amateur puppy, amateur derby and amateur shooting dog events will be held. Sunday is the day for testing dogs owned and handled by owners who normally use their dogs for bird hunting. The commanding general's trophy will be awarded to one of these owners.

Top dogs from all over the southeast have been registered for these events. Spectators are welcome. The trials will be run on the Alabama side of the reservation. From Alabama turn off Highway 165 at 82 Airborne Division Road and follow signs to the trial area. Those coming from Georgia should cross Eddy Bridge behind Lawson Field and follow signs to the trial area.

Georgia Deer Season Opens

There will probably be more than a thousand hunters trying to bag a deer on the reservation at daybreak tomorrow morning. Areas frequented by deer will no doubt have more hunters than deer. It's going to be a day to be especially careful.

Use the buddy system. Don't go hunting alone. Check the range maps posted at the Rod and Gun Club, Provost Marshal Office and Range Control. Make sure the area you intend to hunt is open for hunting. Watch out for duds. If you see one, mark the location and report it later. Call 545-5186. The phone is manned 24 hours each day. When you shoot, be positive your target is a buck and not another hunter.

All deer taken on the Ft. Benning reservation must be tagged immediately with a Georgia Deer Tag. They must also be checked in at the deer check point at Building 5883, Harmony Church. The check station is open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. daily.

Deer will not be registered in the Rod and Gun Club Big Deer Contest until after they have been checked in at the check-in point.

Big Deer Contest

The Rod and Gun Club will award three automatic shotguns to members at the completion of the 1974-75 deer season. The awards will be made at Victory Lodge at 7 p.m. Jan. 31.

A shotgun will be given the hunter who registers the heaviest deer, another to the hunter who registers the deer with the most number of antler points and a third will be awarded to a hunter who registers a deer in the contest, but does not win one of the other prizes.

Complete details on the contest can be obtained at Victory Lodge.

608th Ord Co goes to FIREX 74

A 55-man detachment of Ft. Benning's 608th Ord Co (AMMO/DS/CS) arrived at Ft. Bragg, NC late Oct. 15 by Air Force C-130 with enough equipment to stock a huge ammunition supply point (ASP) in support of joint training exercise "FIREX 74."

Under the command of CPT Ed Helton, the detachment moved to a point near Bragg's Normandy Drop Zone and were camped by midnight.

By 8 a.m. Wednesday the ASP was ready with more than 700 tons of various artillery munitions set up for issue to 15 artillery battalions.

Ammunition trucks from the XVIII Airborne Corps, Arty, the 82d Airborne Div, Arty, the 101st Airborne Div (Airmobile) Arty and National Guard and Reserve Units — all participating in "FIREX 74," were lined up Wednesday by 11 a.m. awaiting entry into the field ASP.

Before sundown, a ten-man detail from the detachment had issued 200 tons of artillery and aerial munitions. All of the munitions were issued before sunup Thursday.

The 8th Ord provided a small liaison team headed by 2LT Rich Spryberry to give technical assistance to the Benning unit during their stay. Meanwhile, the 8th Ord continued their operation of the post ASP in the normal garrison mission as well as shipping ammo as needed to the field site.

Recreational facilities will close during FTX

Several 197th Inf Bde recreational facilities will be closed or will operate a curtailed schedule while the brigade is at Ft. Stewart.

The Auto Craft Shop, building 9064, the Multiple Craft Shop, building 9049, and the Bowling Center, building 9049, will close Nov. 9 and will be reopened Nov. 26.

Theater 4, building 5200 at Harmony Church will be closed Nov. 11-24, and Library 6, building 9027, will be closed Nov. 9 through Dec. 1.

The Recreation Center (Service Club) will remain open daily, but its hours of operation have been changed to 4 p.m. to 10 p.m.

36th Engrs still preparing for Cabre Warrior II

By David Doctor

The soldier engineers of the 36th Engr Gp have been busy preparing for the upcoming Cabre Warrior II exercise at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

A 43 man team, from HHC 36th and augmented by the 988th MP Co as a security element, will represent the Gp during the exercise. The exercise is designed for the deployment of Airborne, Airmobile and Light Infantry divisional forces.

Cabre Warrior II, which has been in its planning stages since early spring, will utilize over 6,000 military personnel from across the U. S. The exercise is expected to last six days.

As one of the major supporting units, the 67th Maint Bn provides much of the transportation and all of the munitions for Ft. Benning. Within the 67th the 444th and 533rd Trans Companies are the prime supporting units, having recently returned from a Range support mission at Elgin AFB, Fla.

Providing the maintenance for the battalion is the 598th Lt Maint Co. Also a part of the battalion and providing all of the munitions is the 608th Ord Co.

Throughout the Gp are a number of unique companies not affiliated with the two major battalions. One of these companies, known as the "bridgemen," is the 586th Floatbridge Co. The bridgemen have the task of providing all of the various types of floatbridges, assault boats, divers and reserve floatbridge training for the Gp.

Another one of these unique units is the 89th E.O.D. They have been tapped with the dangerous responsibility of disarming, removing, and disposing all types of explosives.

The Gp also has its own law enforcers. Located within the Gp are the 139th and 988th MP Companies. They can be seen patrolling the post daily.

Every organization must take care of its own. Aiding in this very difficult problem is the 524th PSC, whose mission it is to maintain over 3,800 records. Also helping to strengthen this delicate area are the 15th Fin Co. and the 18th Rep'l Det.

Keeping up with the current Army trends and producing the appropriate literature is the job of the 13th Public Information Detachment.

Last but not least is the 43rd Engr Bn — the battalion which is responsible for the Community Assistance Projects. They have aided in such projects as Cordova Recreational Park, the road for the future Chattahoochee Valley Community College, ground prep for Double Churches Park and many other such projects.

This highly diversified combination of units and personnel comprise the complex 36th Engineer Grou. The Gp, which formerly occupied the Sandhill area, has now relocated their headquarters on main post (bldg 2827).

German villagers have tri-terrace athletic field

By Gary Geard

For years the villagers of the southern German community of Neresheim had a dream. They wanted an athletic field behind the high school. Time and again the project was considered. And time and again it was tabled for lack of resources. But now as a result of REFORGER '74 their dream is coming true. That dream started coming true last summer when the villagers learned that Co B, 82nd Engr Bn. would set up camp nearby during REFORGER '74. The engineers were to support maneuver forces in the exercise.

The engineers are equipped with heavy construction machinery — the kind of equipment necessary to build an athletic field.

Aware of the engineers' capabilities, the people of Neresheim asked the Army if the engineers could do the earthmoving required to build the athletic field. It was a big request. According to ILT Frank Wright, Co B executive officer, the area for the field is a steep hill, almost a cliff in places. The total amount of earth to be removed and filled within the field area was about 3,000 cubic meters.

The Army quickly agreed. The only condition was that the engineers could work on the project only when their regular duties allowed. When Co B completes the task, the savings to the village will be about $84,000.

The 10,000 square meter athletic field will be situated on a three terrace design. The upper terrace holds a 100-meter track, a grass playing field, and a hard-surface area for games. The second level will be for track and field events. A recreation area for small games will be found on the lower terrace.

Soldiers in Neresheim have been treated hospitably. The residents appreciate the public work being done and seem to understand Exercise Reforger.

The people show their gratitude in other ways. Every soldier from Co B was a recent guest for Sunday dinner with a German family. And a tour of the imposing local abbey was offered.

There are reports that it is impossible for a soldier to buy a beer or a glass of wine in Neresheim — the villagers always insist on buying.

REFORGER '74 brought Co B and Neresheim together for an experience they'll long remember. (ANF)

Free classes slated on individual betterment

15th Cav's Trp A training at Stewart

Troop A, 15th Cav, which serves as the eyes and ears of the 197th Inf Bde in tactical operations, is at Ft. Stewart, Ga., putting it all together with annual tank gunnery qualifications, tactical training in preparation for Army training tests, and the brigade's Field Training Exercise (FTX) "Label Cleaver," Nov. 13-27.

"Concentration on tank gunnery is our prime concern now, but we are also devoting time to reconnaissance of the FTX area," said CPT Ernest E. Bubb, commander of the cavalry troop.

Gunnery qualification will consist of firing the Sheridan's two 50 caliber machineguns, the 152 mm main gun, and the shillelagh missile.

"While the crews of our nine Sheridan Reconnaissance Vehicles are undergoing annual tank gunnery qualification our scout sections and infantry squads will receive tactical training and take their Army training test," said CPT Bubb, "and will at the same time conduct reconnaissance of the FTX training area."

"See and yet not be seen" is the way PFC Rick Kasm of Trp A, 15th Cav put it as he explained his reason for camouflaging his helmet and body prior to going on a reconnaissance patrol at Ft Stewart, Ga. He is a member of the troop's scout section. (Photo by W. R. Cage)

Home loan liabilities released

More than 11,700 veterans and servicemen were released from liability for their GI loans last fiscal year, and the VA is urging others to request releases when purchasers assume loans on homes bought with GI loans.

The agency issued 9,270 releases in FY 73, and has given 57,300 over the years.

"There's a good reason for obtaining a release," VA officials explained, "since without it, the seller could be held financially liable should the purchaser default on mortgage payments."

VA grants releases provided the veteran's loan is current, the prospective purchaser agrees to assume the veteran's liabilities and the purchaser is a good credit risk with sufficient income to meet assumed mortgage payments.

Officials pointed out, however, that a release does not automatically restore GI loan eligibility to the veteran used to purchase the home being sold. Under the law, veterans may qualify for restoration if VA has been relieved of liability and if the property was disposed of for what is described as "compelling reasons."

As soon as a purchaser agrees to assume the loan on a home, the veteran should apply for a release from the VA office which guaranteed the loan, officials advised.

Longest-held POW Thompson visits Saigon again

LTC Floyd J. Thompson, the longest-held American POW of the Vietnam war, returned Tuesday from Saigon, where he participated in Vietnam's Independence Day Nov. 1.

Other visitors were CDR John McCain of the Navy, COL Bud Day, Air Force, CPT James D. Bernardo, Marine Corps and Mr. Doug Ramsey of the State Department, all former POWs. The Veterans of Foreign War, American Legion, Catholic Veterans, Jewish Veterans, American Veterans and the Blind Veterans were represented at the official function.

During his week-long visit, LTC Thompson was briefed by top echelons of the Vietnamese government, including the Minister of Defense, the Minister of Information, the Minister of Veteran Affairs, head of the POW Organization and by the commander of Military Region 3. He was also briefed by U.S. Ambassador. He visited the military academy at DaLat and the defense college, which is similar to the Army War College. The highlight of his tour was a visit to a Vietnamese prison. The former POWs requested to see the prison and were given access to tour the area.

LTC Thompson, who hadn't been to Vietnam since his release in March, 1973, received six decorations during the visit. They include: the Vietnam Veteran Medal, 1st class, the Psychological Warfare Medal, 1st class, the Gallantry in Action, with palm, the Vietnam Medal of Honor and the Vietnam Airborne Wings, which he had earned before he was captured. He was also made an honorary member of the defense college.

"In general," he stated, "we were treated like visiting royalty. They did a really fine job of it. If I go back, it will be on vacation."

"Another thing that I was impressed with is their gratitude to the American people."

In addition to the decorations, LTC Thompson received gifts and attended dinners, parties and receptions.

Georgia war heroes to be enshrined

Plans for the formal dedication of the Georgia area in the Medal of Honor Grove at Freedom's Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa., were announced this week by Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler.

He said that dedication ceremonies are scheduled for 2:00 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, 1974. Heading the list of dignitaries invited to the ceremonies will be the living Medal of Honor recipients and the next-of-kin of all of them. Guest speaker will be Georgia's Senator Herman E. Talmadge.

The 1972 Georgia General Assembly appropriated $10,000 to be placed in the Department of Veterans Service budget for the establishment and maintenance of the Georgia area in the Medal of Honor Grove "to honor those who gave such outstanding service to our country."

Records show that 23 Georgians have been awarded the Medal of Honor. The first recipient was George W. Leland of Savannah, cited for heroism while serving in the United States Navy in 1863. Two other Georgians received the Medal of Honor during the 19th century: Mason Carter, Augusta, while serving with the United States Infantry in Montana in 1877, and Ernest A. Garlington, Athens, who served with the United States Cavalry in South Dakota in 1890.

Georgians awarded the Medal of Honor for feats of valor during World War II include: Henry Talmadge Elrod, Rebecca (USMC); Clyde Thomason, Atlanta (USMC); Aquilla James Dyess, Augusta (USMC); Daniel L. Lee, Alma (USA); Bobbie E. Brown, Columbus (USA), and John R. McKinney, Woodcliff (USA).

Three Georgians received the Medal of Honor for gallantry in action in Korea. They are: Luther H. Story, Buena Vista (USA); Lee H. Phillips, Stockbridge (USMC), and Raymond G. Davis, Fitzgerald (USMC).

Georgians awarded the Medal of Honor for their acts of heroism while serving in Vietnam include: Hilliard A. Wilbanks, Cornelia (USAF), Matthew Leonard, Ft. Benning (USA); Joe M. Jackson, Newnan, (USAFM); Donald R. Johnston, Columbus (USA); Fennis D. McCleery, Ft. Benning (USA); Ray McKibben, Atlanta (USA); Ronald Eric Ray, Cordele (USA); Rodney Maxwell Davis, Macon (USMC); James E. Livingston, McRae (USMC); Stephen W. Pless, Newnan (USMA), and Harold Bascom Durham, Atlanta (USA).

The Medal of Honor Grove is comprised of some 52 acres which are being equally divided among the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. Each of these state areas will have a 7 foot, 7 inch fiberglass obelisk patterned after the Washington Monument. On one face of the obelisk will be the official state seal. The opposite face will contain a donor's plaque and the other two faces will carry the names of recipients of the Medal of Honor from that state. The obelisk will be centered in a 625 square foot brick plaza on which redwood benches will be permanently mounted. A 30-foot metal flag pole from which the state flag will be flown, will complete the plaza area.

In addition, each Medal of Honor recipient will be identified by an individual stainless steel marker consisting of a staff and plate on which will be inscribed the name and organization of the recipient and the date and location of the recipient's act of valor. This staff will be permanently installed in concrete.

Freedom's Foundation officials hope that every state will participate in the development of the Medal of Honor Grove in time for the planned official dedication of the entire area by the President on July 4, 1976—the 200th anniversary of America's independence.

197th Spt Bn makes changes with suggestions

By Michael Bellino

Soldiers of the 197th Spt Bn have "taken up the slack" by submitting more than 110 suggestions to the Ft. Benning Incentive Awards Committee since July 1.

Officers and NCOs of the battalion encourage their subordinates to write down their ideas on DA Forms 1045 and submit them to Mr. H. O. Turner, the Installation Suggestion Coordinator. Mr. Turner assigns control numbers to them and sends acknowledgements to the suggestors.

Suggestions are forwarded to agencies who are qualified to evaluate them. Adopted suggestions can win for the suggestor awards up to $25,000, depending on how much time and money the suggestion will save the Army.

A recent winner of $25 is SP4 Jay J. Bozinko of Hq Det, who submitted a suggestion which resulted in additional drop mail boxes being installed in the Spt Bn area.

If you have a suggestion on how to save money, or man hours or both, or one that will save fuel and conserve energy — or an idea on how to make a job easier, don't just discuss it with your friends. Worse yet, don't just complain about the way something is being done; submit your ideas to the Incentive Awards Committee. Suggestion evaluators do not know the identities of the suggestors and all suggestions are evaluated fairly and promptly.

If you have any questions regarding the suggestion program, call Mr. Turner at 545-1154. Remember: THERE IS ALWAYS A BETTER WAY!!!

'Ole Doc Sez

Here's a few tips 'bout care of yore deer carcass

Howdy Bub. I thought I'd say a few words 'bout takin' care of yore deer carcass this time out. I had to confer with the expert on the correct way to dress an' handle big game, 'cause I ain't never kilt anythin' bigger than one of them mechanized ants that some folks call water roaches hereabouts.

After some lookin' I found Billy Bob at Caldwell's drugstore inhalin' a chocolate sody. As I walked into the door he wuz jes' vacuumin' the bottom of the container. It wuz like hearin' one of them big sympathy bands finishin' their favorite song, with everybody hammerin' an' sawin' on their music tools for a real bang'up endin'. On a clear day, you can hear Billy Bob in Massachusetts.

After the noise died down some, I ast Billy Bob to tell me a coupla of things that hunters has been doin' wrong with their kill that has been causin' a lotta meat damage. Billy Bob allowed that there had been meat wasted 'most ever' year that hunters wuz out, but with inflation an' all, he thought that folks would be more careful this year than before.

He began to soapbox 'bout this favorite subject by sayin', do not drag yore deer, draggin' causes meat damage. Do not tie the carcass to the hood or roof of yore car, 'cause the heat of yore engine, or exposure to road dust will hasten spoilage. The best place for the critter is in the trunk or the back of a station-wagon, but you have to make sure that there is lots of ventilation.

Bleed yore deer as soon as possible, 'cause blood also will speed up the spoilage. Iffen you shoot the varmint in the lungs or heart, very little blood will flow during the dressin' process, and if perchance you hit the intestinal area, them digestive juices will flow, and 'ventually fill the chest cavity, so that's jes' some of the reasons to git that carcass bled, an' dressed soon's you can.

Everbody knows 'bout them musk glands on the lower hind legs, but the real reason for their early removal is to keep from touchin' them durin' the dressin' 'cause that will give a very unpleasant flavor to yore meat. Billy Bob wuz really wound up by this time, an' I had some problems makin' notes, but I kept after him, best I could.

After I caught up in my notes, Billy Bob ast me if I ever heard of skinnin' a deer with a golf ball? I tote him that, for all I knew them deers had a zipper in their coat, but I wuz pretty sure that they didn't travel 'round with no golf ball in their pockets. Well, Billy Bob got his dander up on that one, an' said that the deer didn't have no zippers, an' the skin had to be taken off afore you could eat the meat.

So he went on to tell me how it wuz done; after removin' the innards in the usual way, he said, split the skin on the inside of each leg. Then cut off the front legs at the knee joint, an' the rear legs at the hock. Iffen you are not goin' to mount the head, split the hide from the rib cage to the lower jaw, an' then cut the skin 'round the upper neck, jes' ahind the ears.

Startin' at the ear cut, carefully remove the hide from 'bout six inches of the neck. Now then, tie a rope 'round the skinned section of the deer neck, an' attach to a tree trunk. Next, insert a golf ball 'bout four inches 'neat the loosened skin on the back of the neck. Gather the flap of skin 'round the golf ball, an' tie another rope around the skin covered ball. Tie the other end of that rope to yore taller hitch, jump into yore flivver an' drive slowly away from the carcass.

The rate of removal is directly 'portionate to how fast you drive away. When Billy Bob finished givin' me all of this information, I upped an' bought him 'nother sody to wet his whistle. I hope that some of this article is of some use to you, Bub, but if it ain't, tell somebody who might not be as savvy as you an' Billy Bob.

Be careful when you are out in the huntin' grounds, 'cause there will be lotta new folks huntin' this year. Good health to you and yours.

'Black Hawk War' a condemning tale

By Robert G. Clarke

Ed. note. This week marks the inauguration of what we hope will be a weekly book review section. Our many thanks to Ft. Benning's Infantry Magazine for the reviews. We think the reviews will provide interesting, provocative reading and if you're stimulated to read the book, well, what else are reviews for?

THAT DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR: THE BLACK HAWK WAR. By Cecil Eby. New York: W. W. Norton Co., Inc., 1973. 354 Pages. $8.95.

During the spring and summer of 1832, a relatively minor Indian war was fought in the western areas of what are now the states of Illinois and Michigan. This affair, known to history as the Black Hawk War, involved about 1,000 Indians of the Sauk tribe led by Black Hawk, and about 4,000 soldiers under the command of General Atkinson. That war now serves as a mirror into which we might look to see if we recognize ourselves.

It is no secret, of course, that the American Indian fared poorly under the strains and stresses of the frontier as it steadily moved westward. Cecil Eby has written a very readable account of our shabby and brutal treatment — our often brutal treatment — of the Indians. While I do feel his book is somewhat biased in favor of the Indians, it, nevertheless, makes good reading. It certainly should serve to make us examine our outlook on minority groups.

Since the Government's official policy was aimed at moving the Indians to specified reservations by force or otherwise, it is not too surprising to find that this policy was often interpreted as a "holy" mission for dealing with "savages."

The Sauk tribe fell victim to this policy and its members were summarily forced out of their lands in northwest Illinois. Aply led by Black Hawk, the Sauks resisted the white man. Eby's detailed account of the four-month campaign, which ended with the massacre of most of the tribe at the battle of Bad Axe, is an interesting but condemning tale.

Years of Indian hating peaked with the killing of braves, women and children at Bad Axe. Afterward, there is no record of punishment for those guilty of the needless killings. But, then, as one militia soldier put it, "The Almighty had decreed the battle and the Whites were only agents of His vengeance."

One cannot read this condemning account without wondering if the white man was really that unlovely and unmerciful, or wondering if we have made much progress since then toward improving our attitude toward non-whites.

We like to believe that our forefathers were sometimes rough and hard men, but not so with us. Our suits are stitched from a much finer cloth than theirs — or are they?

Free diabetes test offered

The Diabetes Association of Columbus, Ga., and the Muscogee County Health Department are offering the citizens of Columbus, Phenix City, and Ft. Benning a FREE blood test for Diabetes during National Diabetes Week. The hours for testing are: 9 to 11 a.m. - 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

Find out if you are a "hidden diabetic." Many people have it and don't know it. They fail to realize that Diabetes can happen to anyone, at any age, at any time. Those with greater than average likelihood of developing Diabetes are:

- Blood relatives of Diabetics
 - Children of Diabetic parents
 - The obese
 - Persons over 40 years of age

- Early detection of Diabetes makes it possible to control this condition more effectively so that a person has a reasonable expectancy of being able to continue his normal activities and lead a satisfying and productive life.

National Diabetes Week begins Sunday, Nov. 17, at which time the Diabetes Association of Columbus will have a meeting at the Gas Light Company of Columbus Auditorium, beginning at 3:00 p.m. Dr. Robert Slayton, Endocrinologist, of Ft. Benning, will be the speaker.

Benning marksmen complete course

U.S. Army Marksmanship instructors completed a two-week intensive course of handgun and shoulder fire weapons instruction for officers of the Canadian Penitentiary Service November 8. The top level group of Canadians, consisting of 17 prison security and training officials led by their Staff Training Officer R. J. Shier, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, will form the nucleus of prison security training within their penal system. The Canadian visitors received pistol instruction during their first week with the Unit followed by a week in classroom work and actual range firing under the tutelage of the high-power rifle section. Classroom and range instruction of both rifle and pistol fundamentals occupied over half of the visitors' attention. Instructors in both departments included many of the nations' and the Army's Champion marksmen who spoke on their own personal techniques and factors in successful marksmanship. Along with the basic fundamentals of trigger control, mental discipline, sight alignment and zeroing, the Army marksmen emphasized the importance of knowing the effects of weather and light. In rifle shooting, the ability to read the mirage on distant targets enhances the success of their hits. On the rifle range where the visitors fired on targets at distances varying from 100 yards to 1000 yards, an innovation of pop-up targets on a walk-through range challenged the imagination of the shooters. In addition, the riflemen also demonstrated the night firing devices and techniques for the visitors. The shooting of both handgun and rifle for the visitors was based upon the usual Army qualification procedures for U.S. Army shooters.

"The Army's been good to this Army wife."

Mrs. Vera Coles, whose husband's a tanker, likes the Army. And likes to talk about it. "Charlie wasn't in the Army when we first got married. But after a while we decided to give Army life a try. "One of his reasons for joining, and for reenlisting, is college. He says that although it might take a little longer in the Army, it's easier, and a whole lot cheaper. "The medical benefits are important to us, too. Our bills would have been impossible as civilians. Plus, the doctors have been outstanding. You know, they don't treat you like you're just another case. "But basically, we're staying in because we're happy here, as a family. And I think that's the best reason of all!"

MOS test coming up?

Do you have an MOS test coming up? Is your reenlistment or promotion riding on it? How can you "bone up"? What can you do and where can you go to make the most of the opportunity?

The answer is simple. Go to the Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) library in Building 1369. The library should have any publication you need to help prepare for your upcoming test. Library staffers will assemble what you need if you'll just give them a call. There's a study guide for each MOS spelling out what is required to master the test.

Staffers can also arrange classes for large numbers of soldiers taking the same MOS test. After the test is over, they'll also give you advice on how you can improve your test score the next time around.

Remember the place — building 1369.

IOAC 1-75 takes a look at 197th's AG office

While the tankers of the 2/69th Armor, 197th Inf Bde were busy qualifying with their big guns at Ft. Stewart, a small group of mechanics and armament specialists of Co D (Maint), 197th Spt Bn provided the technical know-how to keep the tanks on the range and firing with accuracy.

The 17 soldiers comprise a Direct Support Contact Team, tasked with the job of supporting Ft. Benning's only armor unit during their annual tank gunnery qualification at Ft. Stewart, Ga. The support specialists began their job early last month by traveling to the post, located near Savannah, and helping the advance party in the receipt of tanks from

Students of Infantry Officers' Advance Course (IOAC) 1-75 had a look at the 197th Inf Bde's Adjutant General office last week.

The IOAC students taking the tour selected personnel management as an elective with a visit to the brigade as a part of the curriculum.

"The visit to the brigade gives the IOAC students a first hand look at a Strategic Army Force (STRAF) unit's adjutant general office and compares its operation with the doctrine received at the U.S. Army Infantry School," stated MAJ Charles E. Hobbs, an instructor in the personnel committee of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

During the briefing MAJ Raymond G. Brandenburg, brigade AG, stated, "The brigade is like a mini-division with the AG shop much like that found in a division, except that there is no machinery branch."

MAJ Brandenburg also said, "The AG shop has an important role in personnel management; however, the unit commanders are becoming more and more involved in personnel management. Since the Standard Installation/Division Personnel System (SIDPERS) has been initiated the unit commander and first sergeant must also know personnel management."

the National Guard Equipment Concentration Site there.

"We have had fewer maintenance problems this year than ever before," stated CPT Paul E. Dickinson, commander of Co C, 2/69th Armor, the first unit to challenge the tank gunnery course. "The contact team has done a fine job in taking care of our maintenance problems."

The contact team is comprised of wheel and track vehicle mechanics, turret and fire control repairmen and small arms repairmen, all from Co C (maint), 197th Spt Bn. In addition, the team has two truck drivers from Co C, 197th Spt Bn.

"All of the men have been working hard down here," stated SFC Erick Vidrine, the contact team's NCOIC. "In addition to providing service support to the 69th Armor, we are getting a chance to work under something other than a garrison situation, many times repairing equipment on the firing range."

Following the tank gunnery qualification, the contact team will be joined at Ft. Stewart by the remainder of Co D (maint), which will provide maintenance support to the entire 197th Inf Bde during the upcoming field training exercise there.

Drafted African plans a military career

By Gene Smith

When a soldier is assigned to a new unit he is often greeted with a standard question, namely "where are you from?" One can well imagine the surprise to the men of C Btry, 83rd FA, 1/29th Inf, TSB when SGT John Mezikiph replied, Africa.

SGT Mezikiph is originally from West Africa. His life has been one of adventure and considerable travel.

He was born in Palime, Republic of Togo, a city of 7,000 population. SGT Mezikiph is the son of a retired police commissioner and has five brothers and two sisters. His family is still living in Africa, except for one brother living in Washington, D.C. SGT Mezikiph mentioned that in his homeland, many parents did not know the precise age of their children, and this created a problem registering children for kindergarten. This problem was solved by giving a simple test; the child was instructed to place his arm across the top of his head and touch his ear. Regardless of age, the child who could not perform this test was denied admission.

SGT Mezikiph attended elementary and secondary schools in Togo, but he went to college at Lycie Monteil, in Bordeaux, France. He felt this exposure to a European culture later helped him adjust to the American life style.

The artillery sergeant is now an American citizen. It is ironic that he will be celebrating the 200th birthday of his country, and was also present for the first birthday of his old country.

The independence of the Republic of Togo was two-fold, some celebrated by partaking in festivals, singing and dancing, while those who had opposed independence in favor of French rule, were given public beatings.

The regime which brought independence was overthrown in 1963, so after returning from college in France, Mezikiph moved to the Republic of Niger. There he worked as a clerk in a road construction company. A few months later, he formed a local elementary school and taught for three years.

SGT Mezikiph arrived in America in 1966. He worked at the Mali, and later the Cameroon, embassies. His duties including acting as a receptionist, party coordinator and translator. He is infinitely qualified for the latter duty, as he speaks five African dialects, French and English.

In 1970, Mezikiph decided to venture into the import business. He pursued his business interests until 1971 when he was unexpectedly drafted into the Army. After serving two years in Germany, he has reenlisted for Btry C, 83rd FA, of the Pioneers. He is currently applying for OCS, and intends to make the military his career.

"Our job, should we go into a combat situation," 2LT Campbell stated, "would be to set up the tents and equipment. Doctors would then be assigned to our unit to utilize the equipment."

"During the Ft. Stewart exercise, however, we will be acting much like a troop medical clinic, complete with an 80-bed ward. We will attempt to take care of most of the brigade's medical problems."

More serious medical problems will be handled either by the medical facility at Ft. Stewart or be transported back to Ft. Benning.

Mini hospital will be part of FTX

By Bob Thomas

The Clearing Plt, Co B (Medical), 197th Spt Bn went through a training exercise of setting up its "mini-M.A.S.H." last week in preparation for the role the unit will play in the upcoming 197th Inf Bde field exercise at Ft. Stewart, Ga. in mid-November.

The 20-man platoon will act as a mini field hospital during the exercise, utilizing 11 large tents and a variety of medical equipment.

"We set up this practice exercise as a way of inspecting the physical plant itself," explained 2LT Robert R. Campbell, platoon leader. "We wanted to insure that all of the tents were in good shape and that the equipment is properly packaged and marked."

The clearing station, as it is properly called, will provide soldiers of the 197th with medical services.

Even with inflation the exchange offers good savings

"The effectiveness of the inflation-fighting programs underscored the value of the exchange privilege as a military benefit during these uncertain times."

That statement was made by MG C. W. Hospelhorn, commander of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), currently in the midst of a campaign to stretch the buying power of soldiers, airmen and their families in this era of rising prices. The general was emphatic in making the point that today, perhaps as never before, the Exchange Service plays a vital role in making the military life attractive.

"It is very easy to overlook the bright spots in the dismal economic picture," he conceded, "but AAFES is making definite progress toward obtaining quality merchandise and services at a price the serviceman and woman can afford to pay."

"Take the 'Money Saver' program. When that program was introduced last year, many said it was too good to be true. They didn't believe the exchange could offer quality merchandise at a savings above and beyond that normally offered by AAFES."

Today hundreds of items are identified by the yellow and brown piggy bank symbol of the Money Saver. Clothing, appliances, dinnerware, luggage—lower-priced merchandise of tested quality is available in every exchange.

Hospelhorn disclosed that everywhere he goes, people he people voice their approval of the Money Saver program. "I've also received many letters from senior commanders and junior enlisted personnel alike praising the program," he added.

"Money Savers really have made the difference to families of lower income," the general continued. "Take children's wear for example. Every parent knows how kids can outgrow clothing in no time. AAFES has concentrated on finding items of real value for that category. AAFES has done the same for other merchandise that fills the needs of everyday use."

Always on lookout for ways to increase the scope of the program, the general recently announced that Money Savers were being expanded to include cafeteria specials. AAFES also is studying ways to add personal services into the program.

Another budget-stretcher is the "Extra Dividend" program which passes along an added savings for merchandise obtained through special purchases and one-time buys. These specials vary from store to store and appear for limited periods only, but all main exchanges have a wide selection of Extra Dividends at all times.

"Extra Dividends cover a wide range from health and beauty items through tools, bicycles and recreation items. Since these specials frequently change, our shoppers have been watching for each new Extra Dividend. They've come to know they'll be getting vitamins, shampoo, cosmetics, products they need and use every day. The brands and names customers recognize and respect—and at prices well below what they normally would pay."

The general then covered a program that ranks among the best as an inflation-fighting measure. "How many times have you heard the comment that clothes are too expensive even when on sale or part of a special program? Well, after studying several possible remedies for that situation, we discovered that statistics show clothing expenses can be reduced as much as 50 per cent by people who make and alter their own clothing."

"A program was developed that provides a complete range of sewing machines, patterns, yard goods, notions and accessories for sale in a sewing center concept. All larger exchanges have these centers and the response simply has been tremendous," he smiled.

"I think the success of the over 200 AAFES sewing centers proves the military wife is really budget-conscious," the general observed. "Many of these young wives have learned to sew because of the program and have become very proficient at it. They know a good thing when they see it and they see it and they're not about to miss the chance to cut living expenses and develop a skill that will serve their families for years to come," he said.

"It all boils down to this," Hospelhorn concluded. "AAFES still stands as the customer's best choice for value and quality at the lowest possible prices. As a military benefit, the exchange must be considered second to none."

Brazilian trains in small arms repair

From 'way south of the border, (5,000 miles to be exact), Brazilian Ruy de Castro Paulo of Rio de Janeiro visited the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at this west Georgia Infantry post where he received fundamental and highly delicate points of small arms repair from the skilled craftsmen.

Mr. Paulo, a graduate engineer whose lineage springs from a background of German and Italian immigrants, was a daily guest in the marksmanship shops of the "Home of Champions", where he learned the ways of successful gunsmiths, weapon technicians and highly skilled armorers of the U.S. Army.

A 30-year veteran installation designing engineer with a soft drink company in Brazil and an avid marksman, Paulo came north, he said, "to receive six weeks of intensified instruction from the best gunsmiths, armorers and shop men in the world. Their expertise, overall experience and performance single them out to us," he added, "as the ones to set us on the right track."

Arriving Sept. 1, Paulo said the first 30 days were possible through the spending of his annual vacation. His company agreed to cover the remaining 15 days so he could complete the special six week course of instruction.

In Rio, Paul in addition to his work as an engineer, performs duties as the Technical Director of Civilian Marksmanship. He has 18 years of experience in marksmanship and has competed on the International Free Pistol and Center Fire Pistol circuit.

In the marksmanship shops, Paulo's schooling covered six phases of gunsmithing. Instructors for

SP5 Dennis P. McNally of Co C, 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde, was selected Cook of the Month for Ft. Benning for October.

After winning the honors of brigade Cook of the Month for the third time last month, SP5 McNally went on to capture the post title for the first time. "I guess the old saying that the third time is a charm is true," explains McNally.

A native of Jersey City, N.J., the 27-year-old cook has been in the Spt Bn for 13 months and the Army for six years.

"The competition was very tough for the post award," explains McNally. "I did the best I could and just barely nudged out the cook that finished second."

Having been a cook in civilian life, McNally states that he enlisted in the Army as a cook, "because cooking is very interesting to me."

"The long hours and weekend duty of being a cook gets to be a habit after awhile," McNally said.

586th walks away with another win

The impact of a 100-mile-per-hour headon collision could best describe the gridiron meeting between the 586th Floatbridge Co, 36th and 4th Stu. Bn TSB during the first playoff game for the Post Flag football Championship last week.

During the first half the 586th offense dominated the game completely. The TSB team's defense tried desperately to keep the game alive, but the offensive power of the 586th could not be dealt with. Their running and passing game was an unbeatable combination.

Early in the first quarter the 586th quarterback Eligha Blunt hurled a 60-yarder to his wide receiver Tom Robertson. Robertson strolled into the end zone for the first score of the game. A successful extra point conversion gave the 586th a 7-0 lead over the TSB team.

The TSB offense and defense had trouble getting started the first half. Their attempt to cope with the 586th was like water running uphill. At half time the score was still 7-0.

The second half began with TSB team coming out red hot. An interception early in the third quarter set up their first score and extra point conversion, making it a 7-7 ball game.

The potent offense of the 586th struck back as wide receiver Roy Hill staged a 70-yard touchdown pass for the Bridgemens' second score, widening the margin to 13-7.

In the closing minutes of the game, the TSB defense held strong as they pushed the 586th deep into their own territory, forcing the bridgemens into a two point safety situation. TSB was unable to score before the game ended which left the final score at 13-9 with the 586th walking away with another win.

TSB teams even in post journey

By Rick Wasser

Both of TSB's entries in the post flag-football tournament have but one more game to lose before they are removed from the double-elimination competition.

The TSB entries—Co A of the 1/29th Inf and the 4th Student Battalion—each took opening game losses but came back to win their second contest.

The 1/29th Inf Pioneers were dealt a 13-9 loss by the 596th Engineers while the 4th Battalion was mauled by the 197th Spt Bn 30-0 in their opener. The Pioneers' second game victory over the 298th Sig Pst knocked that team out of the post competition. The contest was one of the closest thus far in the tournament, the 1/29th winning 6-0 in the final minutes of the game.

Co A received the game opening kick-off but failed to get a first down, even from the three-inch line. The 298th took over, but only briefly, as Charles Ledbetter intercepted the ball back for the Pioneers on the second down.

Ledbetter ran for 12 yards and then for six, but two penalty plays negated the yardage, and the 298th took over again. The ball changed hands three separate times again, with neither team gaining a clear advantage.

With less than a minute to play in the first half, the Pioneer defense team pushed the 298th hard—so hard in fact that they were able to get a touchdown. On the first play of their possession, Co A's Ledbetter floated a 50-yard bomb into the arms of Sandy MacPherson, but time expired only seconds later with the score 0-0 at the half.

In the second half, the 298th initiated a 67-yard drive—mostly on the ground—but they couldn't quite make it in for the score.

The Pioneer offense took over and threatened briefly. Ledbetter hit Tom Vier for 36 yards and then it was Ledbetter around the left end for 20 more. But still, the 1/29th couldn't find the right path to the 298th goal line.

James Smithy (00) of the 298th Signal Platoon carries for yardage against the 1/29th Inf. Smithy and the 298th didn't carry for enough however, as they lost to the 1/29th 6-0. (Photo By Rick Wasser)

With but a minute to play in the contest, Co A finally came alive. Ledbetter connected with Sandy MacPherson for 25 yards and the play left the Pioneers only a few yards from the goal line. Two plays later, Ledbetter dove over the goal for the Co A touchdown, and that was the ball game.

197th Spt Bn wins brigade championship

By C. B. Hoover

The 197th Inf Bde football play-offs were completed this week with Co C, 197th Spt Bn winning the brigade championship and the 298th Sig Ptl taking second place to go to the post play-offs.

Co C, 197th Spt Bn started the elimination of teams from the 2-10th FA by shutting out A Btry, 180.

Where Co C left off, Co A, 197th Spt Bn, took over by eliminating HHB, 2-10th, 6-0 and then A Btry, 6-0.

Co A, 197th Spt Bn and the 298th Sig Ptl had their second encounter in the play-offs and again Co A went down to defeat 12-6.

Co C, 3-7th Inf, the last team in their battalion competition, suffered two defeats in a row and were eliminated. Co C, 197th Spt Bn ran away in their game with Co C, 37th scoring with a bomb in the opening seconds of the game.

Capitalizing on the impressive start, Co C, 197th Spt Bn went on to defeat Co C, 3-7th, 29-18.

Co C, 37th proved they were no pushover for the "Truckers" of Co C, 197th Spt Bn, by being the only team in the brigade to score on them.

The final game played by Co C, 37th was against the 298th Sig Ptl, which they had defeated previously. The game featured more defense than offensive play as neither team could score during the game that went into overtime.

Overtime play again featured the defense until the fourth down when the 298th intercepted as Co C pass to win the penetration scrimmage and the game 1-0.

The 298th Sig Ptl met the "Truckers" of Co C, 197th Spt Bn in the final game of the league play-offs. The defense for both teams was unforgiving and held the offensive teams scoreless until just before the half when the 298th put six points on the board.

The score remained six-zip until the closing minutes of the game, when Co C dropped a bomb to tie the game. Going into overtime, the "Truckers" proved to have more drive, pushing the men of the 298th back from the 40-yard line to their 10-yard line to win the brigade championship, 7-6.

COL Joseph E. Wasiak, brigade commander, made the presentation of trophies at the conclusion of the championship game between the 298th Sig Ptl and Co C, 197th Spt Bn.

By Gary Helmer

The Biddy League Redskins, league leaders, slipped by the still winless Razorbacks last Saturday in Blue Field pigskin action.

The Redskins, a proven team offensively, did not produce a score until late in the second quarter. The Redskins led 8-0 at the half.

The second half again saw both teams dominate on defense until late in the fourth quarter when the Razorbacks scored. An extra point attempt failed and the Redskins won 8-6.

The third place Lions demoralized the second place Dolphins, 14-6 at Doughboy Stadium.

The Dolphins of the Pee Wee league torpedoed the Rams, 12-0, and the Redskins were scalped at the hands of the Buffalo Bills, 14-0.

The Pee Wee League-leading Vikings had a bye. The Patriots of the Doughboy League were crunched by the league-leading Razorbacks, 30-0. The Dolphins swam by the wading Raiders, 6-0.

In the Pony League, the undefeated Wolverines upended the Rams, 28-14 and the Jets flew over the Steelers, 8-6.

Henry Cox registers largest buck in Gun Club contest

By Bill Kloeb

You could hear all kinds of hunting stories around the Rod and Gun Club last Saturday afternoon. Most of them were about how hunters almost got that prize buck.

All of the stories weren't preceded by "if only" and "I almost." By dark Saturday evening 37 hunters had registered deer kills at the Game and Fish Weighing Station in Harmony Church. By the close of business Sunday the total had gone to 62.

The heaviest deer registered in the Rod and Gun Club Big Deer Contest belonged to Henry Mele. His deer weighed in at 158 pounds and had four antler points.

The deer with the most antler points was also a good sized buck. He had eight antler points and weighed 154 pounds. He was registered by Henry Cox.

An Unusual Story

Phillip W. Rice, Third Army Marksmanship Training Unit, had a most unusual hunting story.

Rice related the story this way: "I was walking through the woods when off to my right I noticed something move. I thought it was probably a squirrel, but I moved in closer to see.

When I got to within 40 yards I knew it was a deer, sleeping and apparently flicking his ear to ward off flies. At that point I could not tell whether it was a buck of a doe so I edged in still closer. As I moved in, I noticed that there was another deer laying close beside the one I had spotted.

I stood 15 yards from the deer when he awoke and saw me. He raised his head and I spotted his antlers and I immediately shot him.

As I fired, yet another deer ran deeper into the woods. The deer laying beside the one I had just shot, I noticed, had not made any attempt to escape.

When I got to my buck, I soon realized that the two deer had been fighting and their antlers had become entangled with a mass of wire and string. The carcass of the previously dead deer was decomposed except for the head and the fore part of his body. My deer, a seven pointer, had apparently been dragging this dead three point buck around for some time.

My seven pointer was strong and seemed to be well nourished. He had plenty of food and water in his stomach even though there was no water to be found in the immediate area."

Monster Catfish

The picture of two fishermen with monster-sized catfish taken from Victory Pond last Thursday caused quite a few questions. How do catfish that big get into Victory Pond? They were put there by the Post Fish and Game unit.

The fish caught were two of 27 blue catfish received from the Federal Fisheries Experimental Hatcheries at Marion, Alabama and placed in the pond October 22. According to Roy Johnson, chief of the Fish and Game Unit, the two were a couple of the smaller fish of the lot. The 27 fish had an average weight of about 35 pounds with several weighing in at nearly 50 pounds.

Prior to being placed in the pond each fish was tagged with a blue colored fish tag. The Rod and Gun Club will give any member registering one of these fish a merchandise certificate worth $10 at the club pro shop.

Blanchard Barcus and Earnest Clark were the two lucky fishermen last week. The fish Barcus caught weighed 30 pounds and Clark's tipped the scales at 29 pounds. The catch was worth a total of $25 in merchandise to Barcus. The $10 bounty on the fish and an additional $15 in merchandise for registering the largest catfish in the Rod and Gun Club October Fishing Derby.

Other winners in the October Derby were John Donnelly with a 10 pound, 8-ounce bass from Harps Pond and John Mayer with a 12 ounce bream from Kings Pond.

'Mr. Jack' takes top award in dog trials

Mr. Jack defeated all comers by winning the Commanding General's Award as the top hunting dog last Sunday in the Annual Field Trials hosted by the Rod and Gun Club at Fort Benning Nov. 1-3.

Jack, owned by Mr. Bill Harkins of Auburn, Ala., won the Walking category and placed third in the Mounted category to gather enough points to win the overall championship.

Owners and handlers of 90 bird dogs, mostly English Pointers and Setters, competed in the three-day tournament which included categories in both professional and amateur classes.

First place winners were:
Open Shooting Dogs: Mr. Laredo — Bill Moore, Coleman, Ga.
Open Derby: Palitons Kentucky Titan — Wayne Elsberry, Calhoun, Ga.
Amateur Puppy: Thor's Rebel Man — Barbara Brickner, Columbus, Ga.
Amateur Derby: Thortan — Mike Brickner, Columbus, Ga.
Mounted Shooting: Lady Bess — Frank Thompson, Atlanta, Ga.
Walking Shooting and Commanding General's Award: Jack — Bill Harkins, Auburn, Ala.

One more season

A few weeks ago, a major television network ran a 60-minute special concerning high school and pre school football injuries. Along with many other people concerned and interested in football here at Ft. Benning, I watched that program and came away not only concerned but downright scared.

This year's YAC football season surely has to be one of the most unorganized, slipshod, and certainly one of the most potentially dangerous in many years. I make that statement as the head coach of a YAC football team and as one who has first hand knowledge of this gross mismanagement.

As common sense will tell you, since football is a sometimes violent sport—perhaps the most physically punishing game in the world—it is only logical that one would have to have the proper equipment to insure personal safety.

That basic requirement is met by YAC but only minimally. It seems YAC is more concerned about getting "one more season" out of outdated and worn equipment than they are about the safety and protection of our pre-high schoolers playing football.

Must we have a crippling injury to bear out this point the same way we seem to need a head-on collision to tell us we need a traffic light at a corner, before we come to our senses?

It is quite possible that there will be no major injuries—injuries involving paralysis or loss of sight (or worse) this year. We've been lucky so far, but how long can we continue to depend upon luck when it comes to safety?

I for one, am tired of shoulder pads falling apart, of helmets breaking and seeing one of the young men I coach come so dangerously close to injuries of any kind. I am calling for a re-evaluation of the YAC staff and program directed with this year's football season.

It's high time we, who are involved in YAC football as parents, players, coaches and anyone concerned with the game, take a long, hard look at the present system.

Football not only builds athletic ability, but it also is a "training ground for life." It should be open to every boy, but many parents are not only dissatisfied with YAC organization and coordination of football, they are also afraid—and rightfully so—of their sons coming up with a serious injury because of shoddy equipment.

Let's make football a safe sport at Ft. Benning for everyone's benefit—especially those playing—before the time comes when a serious injury compels us to do so.

Benning dominates play

Five military and one dependent from Fort Benning play six of the nine parts in the production of "Never Too Late."

The Springer Opera House is putting on the production of "Never Too Late" by Summer Author Long. This delightful comedy dispels all gloom and will provide side slapping laughter for the audience.

What is a man to do when in his late years is faced with a major problem? The problem is standing in the doorway of fatherhood. After 24 years his wife is about to give birth to another child.

Faced with this shocking surprise from a less than romantic encounter, Mr. Lambert must cope with the situation.

The entire play will provide an excellent evening's entertainment.

524th completes ORTT

The members of the 524th PSC of the 36th Engr Gp have concluded their scheduled Operational Readiness Test designed to evaluate the tactical proficiency and readiness of the unit.

Included in the test is a number of different situations in which the unit must test their combat efficiency.

One of the key situations developed was the one of aggressor attack. In this situation the 524th had several significant requirements to meet, including defensive ability, prisoner handling procedures and evaluation of intelligence documents.

Also conducted during the exercise was effective night movement. They were called upon to demonstrate proper noise and light discipline, establish an operational facility and report intelligence data.

The ORTT is one of the various readiness exercises in which the 36th Gp participates throughout the year. Along with maintaining combat readiness the 524th has the task of maintaining approximately 3800 personnel records.

Two new national records set by Army marksmen

Two new national records were placed in the books by U. S. Army marksmen Nov. 3 when they gained a large share of the laurels at the International Triple Crown Indoor Rifle Championship hosted by Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex.

Led by the performances of John Foster and Larry R. Bassham, each with an individual rifle event, the Army quartet posted a new national record score of 2318 in Standard Rifle and claimed the remaining two team championship events.

The second national record was hung up by Foster when he grabbed the championship of the Standard Rifle match with his 584 to lead the Army in a clean sweep of top spots in the event. Runner up honors went to Bassham at 583 while companion marksman Boyd Goldsby gained the third spot.

The four man Army team, fielded by the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit, included Foster, Bassham, Goldsby and Ernest Vande Zande.

In addition to the Standard Rifle records and laurels, the Army marksmen also forged into the top places in the Free Rifle which Bassham won with 1171 and Foster was runner up with two less points. Of the three events fired in the Triple Crown tourney, the Army shooters prevailed in two and the Grand Aggregate Championship. The big prize was claimed by Bassham with a three gun aggregate of 2134 while Foster was one point down for runner-up. Both marksmen were members of the U. S. Team to the World Shooting Championships in Switzerland in September, where Bassham earned nine gold medals and Foster gained eight.

In the third event, an International Air Rifle match, Sue Sandusky of Fort Worth claimed the top position. The talented young collegian shooter championed the event with her outstanding 384 of a possible 400, four points ahead of both Foster and Bassham.

One of the first indoor matches of the season, the Triple Crown tourney was well attended by University rifle clubs throughout Texas and Army shooters. A total of 71 marksmen vied for the top honors.

Save A Living Thing

BLACK-FOOTED FERRET

The black-footed ferret is among the rarest of mammals. It is a member of the weasel family and lives on the Great Plains. Its main food is prairie dogs. It spends most of its time underground in prairie dog dens. Disappearance of prairie dogs has caused the ferret to disappear in many areas. The U.S. government is now leasing land where prairie dogs are found in create new homes for this ferret.

If you'd like to SAVE A LIVING THING, you can help. Ammo men keep units well supplied

The four-man ammunition section of Co C, 197th Spt Bn keeps units of the brigade well supplied with ammunition for training and record firing.

So what? So the STRAF brigade has the ammo it needs, that's what.

"Our job was to requisition ammo for every unit in the brigade," explained SFC

Robert M. Heltzman, Co C, 197th Spt Bn. "We request every type ammunition the brigade uses, from rifle to tank ammo. Other types of ammunition requested by us are grenades, rockets, and various types of explosive devices."

"They key to smooth ammo resupplying is early processing of the paperwork," added PFC

PFC Raymond Yurasko, the other clerk commented, "By ordering different types of ammo, I have learned a lot about requisitioning and resupplying ammo in garrison. If the need ever arises in a combat area, I will be at the more proficient."

MPs to hold private POVs during FTX

When the 197th Inf Bde goes to Ft. Stewart, Ga. for its field training exercise in mid-November, personal actions will be conducted as if the unit was being deployed to an actual combat zone, to include the impoundment of "Forever Forward" soldiers' privately owned vehicles (POV).

During the week of November 11 the impoundment of POVs will be held at Impoundment Lot No. 2, located on main post. The impoundment will be conducted by the 197th Provost Marshal's Office and the main post military police.

"All POVs not released to dependents for care during the FTX should be impounded," commended LT James Johnson, operations officer of the 197th Provost Marshal Office. "We don't want cars left on Kelly Hill while the brigade is at Ft. Stewart."

The main post MPs will keep a 24-hour guard on the impoundment lot throughout the absence of the brigade.

During the early morning hours of Aug. 6, Army specialist Charles Young was startled by the crackling ring of a red telephone in the radio room of Ft. Benning's 498th Med Co.

Less than 10 minutes later, a four-man Army rescue unit climbed aboard a UH-1H "Huey" helicopter and departed Lawson Airfield enroute to a lonely stretch of highway six miles north of Warm Springs. There they found a young Manchester man pinned and dying within the torn wreckage of his automobile.

A civilian ground ambulance crew already on the scene had been trying without success for more than 40 minutes to free the victim when the chopper set down in a nearby field.

But the helicopter unit, led by WO

William Kagle and assisted by the civilian crew, somehow managed to separate flesh from metal and glass, strap the victim aboard the aircraft, and lift off again within 20 minutes.

Despite emergency aid rendered the victim during a 20-minute flight to Columbus Medical Center, his condition steadily worsened and by the time crew-chief Kagle

LTG Rogers Takes Over FORSCOM

LTG Bernard W. Rogers has been named commander of the U.S. Army Forces Command headquarters at Ft. McPherson, GA. He succeeds GEN Walter T. Kerwin, Jr., who has assumed new duties as Vice Chief of Staff of the Army.

LTG Rogers has been nominated for the rank of four-star general by the President, who also gave him a recessed promotion with date of rank as of Nov. 7. LTG Rogers' nomination will go to the Senate for approval when Congress reconvenes.

Prior to his newest assignment, LTG Rogers has served as Deputy Chief of Staff, Department of the Army.

A 1943 graduate of West Point Military Academy with a BS Degree in Engineering, LTG Rogers attended the basic and advanced Infantry Officer's courses here. He also holds a BA Degree and Master's Degree in Arts, Philosophy, Politics and Economics from Oxford University, England.

Uniform Infractions Noticed

Many uniform infractions have been noticed outside the Ft. Benning Reservation.

The Army Green, Tan and Khaki uniforms are authorized for wear off post, providing they are in season. Duty uniforms such as fatigues, flight suits, hospital whites and cook's whites are not authorized off post except when commuting to and from your place of duty and your off post residence.

Limited convenience shopping is permitted provided that the duty uniform is neat, clean and presentable in appearance. An example of convenience shopping is stopping to pick up milk or bread.

Theaters, lounges, bars, dining rooms and restaurants, places of entertainment, are considered unauthorized areas for personnel wearing duty uniforms.

The duty uniform is also unauthorized outside a 35-mile radius of the Ft. Benning reservation.

'42 WAAC OCS grad speaks at Harmony Club

By Iléane H. Horen

LTC (Ret) Jacqueline Gutwillig, Chairperson of the Citizen's Advisory Council on the Status of Women, concluded Columbus College's EVE '74 program with a speech at the Harmony Club, Nov. 11.

She was one of 19 members appointed to the council by former President Nixon in 1969. "Unpaid and often unsung," she remarked in her speech, "we report and recommend to the President of the United States, recommend to the Federal agencies, and indirectly to the Congress.

"Regarding military service," she stated, "the Equal Rights Amendment, if ratified, will permit women to volunteer for military service on the same basis as men. That is, women who are physically and otherwise qualified under neutral standards could not be prohibited from joining the service solely on the basis of sex. This result is highly desirable, for today women are accepted as volunteers, only if they meet considerably higher educational and mental test standards than men.

"Women would be subject to any future law providing for compulsory military service. But now that the drafting of young men has expired . . . women will not be subject to the draft in the foreseeable future."

Mrs. Gutwillig explained that young mothers wouldn't be taken from their children any more than young fathers have been. She also advocated having women in combat areas. "If our men are good enough to die for our country, so are we. Only 15% of combat duty is on the front lines anyway. Some 85% of all men in combat areas have served in supportive areas.

"Actually," she explained, "Congress has the authority now to draft women and came away very close to drafting nurses in World War II. Only the end of the War in Europe stopped the bill after it had passed the House and had been reported favorably by the Senate Armed Forces Committee.

"The effect of the ERA on military service, therefore, will be to require the services to enlist and commission young women volunteers under the same standards as men and to open to them military assignments on the basis of individual ability to perform."

Mrs. Gutwillig was a member of the first Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC) OCS class in July, 1942. The class of 400 women took their training in Des Moines, IA.

The first women officers were chosen for their civilian experience. Mrs. Gutwillig had some background with the Aircraft Warning Service.

In an exclusive interview with the Bayonet, Mrs. Gutwillig recalled many amusing experiences in that class. Because it was the first women's class to be trained, the women went through all the same training as men did, excluding combat training. They viewed men's grooming films, were inspected by men and received physical training from men.

"The men were so annoyed to have to work with women," she reminisced. "Some were mad and others tried to transfer out. At first, they had no idea of what to do with us."

Mrs. Gutwillig was married before joining the Army, but she felt that not enough was being done to help the British. Because she had decided to join, her husband joined the Air Force. During those first few months they saw each other occasionally since he was stationed in Miami and she was stationed in Daytona Beach, FL. For the duration of that three-year period, they were at opposite ends of the world. Because of the secrecy during the war, they couldn't even disclose to each other where they were stationed.

After attending the Command and General Staff College in December, 1942, Mrs. Gutwillig went to Europe and became part of the Eisenhower staff as personnel officer, and later the executive officer, in Psychological Warfare.

Mrs. Gutwillig completed three years of active duty service as a major. Women weren't allowed to join the Reserves until 1949, so she then joined and got a mobilization tour in logistics. She became a lieutenant colonel in 1952. At that time women could be promoted no further. After several extensions, she couldn't be extended any longer. In 1964, Mrs. Gutwillig retired. Women were given the right to be promoted to colonel and above in 1969.

"I don't feel like I was discriminated against while I was in the service," Mrs. Gutwillig pointed out. "Had I been a man I may have had different assignments, but things were different then," she concluded.

SP4 Reggie L. Young, a clerk typist assigned to HHC, 197th Inf Bde, is one of many soldiers who has recently become involved in a unique and fast growing hobby, citizen band radio.

Citizen band radio, known as CB, is comprised of the high frequency radio band between 25 and 470 MHz, designated by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for short distance personal or business radio communications. The band is divided into 23 channels, which are shared by all CB users.

"I got interested in it mainly for use during emergencies," SP4 Young explained. "One channel is set aside specifically for that purpose, to report fires, roadside accidents and other emergencies."

A native of Tifton, GA, SP4 Young has had a CB radio in his car for about three months and plans to eventually set up a base station in his home.

"That way," he added, "my wife and I can communicate when she is not at work and I am in the car."

The 20-year-old soldier's wife is SP4 Linda C. Young, a dental assistant who works at Dental Clinic No. 2. They have a three-month-old son.

"She is not as interested in CB as I am, yet," explained the husband of the military family. "Right now, I have the set primarily to use in the event of an emergency."

Channel nine of the band is reserved for emergency calls of all types and a number of base stations in cities monitor the channel 24 hours a day to accept and pass on requests for help.

"The biggest problem with CB radio is the large number of irresponsible operators that use it as a toy," he explained. "It is illegal to use the bands for extended conversations, yet people do and they tie up the channels."

Benning soldiers eligible for early release

Some 100 Ft. Benning soldiers are eligible for early release from service under provisions of the Department of the Army Christmas Early Release Program.

Individuals concerned are non-regular Army officers and enlisted personnel whose scheduled release dates fall between Dec. 17 and Jan. 6.

Dec. 9 is the early release date for all officers and enlisted personnel whose scheduled release dates fall within the period of Dec. 17 - 21. Officers and enlisted personnel whose scheduled release dates fall between

Dec. 22 and Jan. 6 will be released from active duty Dec. 10 - 12.

If an early release would create any type of hardship for enlisted personnel, however, they may remain on active duty until their regular release dates.

Operational needs of the Army may dictate that officers be retained on active duty until scheduled release dates.

Reserve component (officers and enlisted) persons on Active Duty Training under special training programs are not eligible for early release under provisions of this program.

PATRONS are 'peacemakers'

"Smokers are smokers, and non-smokers are non-smokers, and never the twain shall meet." But now there's a group in Lawton, OK, trying to do something about differences between the two factions.

The group is known as PATRONS (People Advocating the Rights of Non-smokers). Tom Terrell, from the post Civilian Personnel Office, is the founder and chairman of the group.

Terrell says, "Most smokers don't realize how much their second hand smoke can bother others." But he also found that most non-smokers groups alienate smokers. So PATRONS seeks to organize smokers and non-smokers on neutral ground.

PATRONS doesn't want to persecute smokers nor try to make them quit. It takes a positive approach to a growing social problem. The American Lung Association (ALA) estimates that only a third of American adults smoke. PATRONS stands up for the rights of the non-smoking majority.

PATRONS asks larger businesses such as hotels, night clubs and restaurants to set aside non-smoking areas. For smaller businesses like barber shops and hair dressers, PATRONS suggest non-smoking days.

The group, which has about 100 members in the Lawton area, isn't on a witch hunt against smokers. Terrell says, "We advocate the rights of adults to make their own choice between fresh air and tobacco smoke." (ANF)

The SX-70: now there are two.

The new SX-70 Model 2 finished in Porvair with ivory plastic.

The luxurious original, still finished in top grain leather and brushed chrome.

And the new camera is $30* less.

Since we introduced the remarkable SX-70 Land camera, the world of photography has not been quite the same.

It isn't surprising. (Just press the electric button. Whoosh! The picture is in your hand, developing before your eyes.)

And now all the wizardry you've heard about (the ingenious single-lens reflex system, the astonishing lens that can take pictures from as close as 10.4 inches to infinity, the ability to take action shots every 1.5 seconds) is yours in the new SX-70 Model 2.

For $30 less.

Inside, you'll find our original SX-70, down to the very last transistor. But outside, you'll find panels of handsome Porvair instead of the fine top grain leather. And ivory plastic instead of brushed chrome.

Obviously, in considering a camera like this, some will prefer the luxurious original. (After all, you buy a camera like this perhaps once in a lifetime.)

But $30 is $30. And we wanted you to know you're getting the best camera we have. In any case.

Thanksgiving?

Every year Americans prepare to celebrate a time in our past when our forefathers found something new and made a new life. The Thanksgiving Day festivities originated two hundred years ago to mark a time when the first colonists in America had started their new homes and set a new course for history.

They had much to be thankful for then, as we do now. Their homes were built, their families growing and their futures bright. Today our goals may seem far removed from our early ancestors but we still have much to be thankful for. During this season families come together again over a hot meal to show their love for one another and to show their thanks for privileges that are denied to the majority of the world.

There is only one thing that can mar the feeling of happiness and enjoyment that is felt by all on this day. That is an empty chair at the dinner table. Thousands of American families will mourn over chairs left empty from last year's holiday and many more thousands will regret the coming season for there will be many more vacancies.

What is in your future for Thanksgiving? Will you have something to be thankful for? The majority of America's servicemen stationed in the United States are many miles from home and long to make the trip to join their families in this time for togetherness. Many forget that they are but a very small number compared to the thousands who will be taking to the highways for a quick journey home.

Too many motorists attempt to cover too many miles in their too little time. Some motorists begin celebrating the holidays even before they finish the trip. Others are simply heedless of their fellow drivers. The end result of this conglomeration of people and machines is a moving mass of potential death to all who join their ranks. The good driver cannot consider himself a truly safe driver if he worries only about his own driving ability. He must be constantly aware of his surroundings. He must also visualize the possible calamities that can occur at an intersection or around the next curve. He must be on the look out for the other guy, the man who didn't stop for a coffee break after driving all night. The safe driver is also a defensive driver. He must drive cautiously and courteously if he wants to sit at a Thanksgiving feast. The lives of his family depend on his judgment. It is better to arrive later than not to arrive at all.

Even after all precautions have been taken, the other guy may still prevail. Buckle your seat belts and make it home anyway.

Will you have a safe trip to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day?

Amnesty of Hess remains elusive phantom

HESS. By Roger Manvell and Heinrich Fraenkel. New York: Drake Publishers, 1973. 256 Pages. $7.95.

BY JOHN G. FOWLER JR.

At Spandau prison in the British zone of Berlin, the last of the convicted German was criminals waits for a release that may never come. Convicted at Nuremberg, Rudolf Hess, Adolf Hitler's former deputy, is the last and only prisoner incarcerated at Spandau for an annual cost which spirals into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

That Hess may never see freedom forms the underpinning of this highly readable biography of the enigmatic Hess, who electrified the world in 1941 with his solo flight to Scotland in search, he said, of peace with Great Britain.

More than anything else, this solitary act sealed his fate. Subject to spirited but inconclusive debate ever since, authors Manvell and Fraenkel (who have previously written several biographies of Nazi leaders) assert that Hess genuinely sought peace with England so that Germany would not be forced to fight a costly war on two fronts; he knew, after all, that the German invasion of the Soviet Union was imminent.

Finding himself rejected by Churchill on one hand and by Hitler (who considered him insane) on the other, Hess washed his hands of any further involvement with the war and retreated into the depths of his mind, feigning insanity. According to the authors, Hess suffered neither insanity nor schizophrenia—then, or ever.

At the Nuremberg trials, the Soviets clamored for Hess' execution; his quest for a peace with England was considered to be the strongest of German anti-Russian acts, and the Russians wanted vengeance. And despite pressure by the western Allies, Russia to this day remains sworn to the continued imprisonment of the 80-year-old follower of the Third Reich.

Whether the authors' thesis concerning the controversial peace mission to England will stand the test of time and further research is almost secondary to their emotionally charged case for Hess' release. Drawing on considerable primary and secondary source materials, including Hess' letters from Spandau to his family, Manvell and Fraenkel develop their case in tracing Hess' career during the tumultuous rise and fall of the Third Reich. Stated simply, their case avows that "the time for more hot-blooded vengeance has long passed."

Unfortunately, amnesty for Rudolf Hess remains an elusive, if disappearing, phantom.

Rangers, flyers help in festival

The 2d Rgr Co and the 121st Avn Co of Ft. Benning provided military demonstrations and displays during the annual "Gold Rush Days" festival at Dahlonega, GA.

The festival marks the anniversary of the first major American gold rush near the northern Georgia town in 1828.

Festivities included arts and crafts exhibits, parades, square dances and numerous other activities depicting the early nineteenth century.

Approximately 2,000 people watched as Ranger narrator, CPT William Walsh, appeared on the scene via a rescue rig attached to a Huey helicopter to introduce the activities which included sky-diving, rappelling from a helicopter, suspension traverse and rope climbing.

The Ranger's sky-diving presentation, consisting of a free fall and precision landing, was performed by CPTs Travis Griffin, Scottie Riffle, Wayne Maynard and Tracy Pittman, all of the 2d Rgr Co.

SFC Douglas Perry, SFC Gordon Roberts, SSG Heinz Ketchum and SGT Ronald Gieger, rappelled from a Huey helicopter demonstrating how to make an air insertion into an area where landing by aircraft wouldn't be possible.

The 121st Avn Co supplied an AH1G Cobra Gunship which flew overhead simulating battle conditions during the event.

SFC Earl Singeltary and SFC John Tyson executed a single rope bridge crossing in a demonstration of the flexibility and skills learned in the rigorous Ranger training.

The suspension traverse, a confidence test consisting of a slide down a 75-foot cable on a pulley reaching speeds in excess of 45 miles per hour, was performed by CPT Douglas McCabe. He was belayed by SFC James Anderson, MSG Francis Peterson and MSG Kenneth Rainwater.

Aircraft for the demonstrations were operated by CPT Steven Stanelle, CWOs Jimmy Edwards, Daniel Hixon, and Gary Nelson, WOs Roger Givens and Jerry McMorrough, SP5 Roger Marley and SP4 David Lewis of the 121st Avn Co.

Coordination for the Rangers' part in the "Gold Rush Days" festival was headed by CPT William Walsh. He was assisted by rappel masters, SFC James Griffith, SSG Emmett Hiltibrand, and NCO in charge of mountaineering, MSG Kenneth Davenport.

Pedal power pointers

As bicycle business increases, so do fatalities

Since 1960 there has been a real boom in the bicycle business. Unfortunately, this boom has been accompanied by a big rise in the number of bicyclists killed and injured. From the 1960 total of 400 fatalities, in 1973 it was estimated that 1,100 fatalities would occur. In addition, there were over 400,000 injuries requiring hospital emergency room attention in 1973.

Factors such as fuel shortages and interest in physical fitness have contributed to the popularity of bicycles in recent years. As a result of this popularity, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has given notice to begin the formal process leading to adoption of a highway safety program standard which relates to bicyclist safety.

Among the items to be considered are whether bicycles should be subject to the same rules of the road as motor vehicles, whether equipment such as reflectors, lights, rear-view mirrors, bicycle helmets, etc. should be required, whether there should be wider public information and education campaigns regarding bicycle safety and whether traffic violations by bicyclists should be more vigorously enforced.

Pending the adoption of a formal safety program standard, here are a few simple rules which will minimize the possibility of bicycle accidents: Know the bicycle parts - inspect them regularly - keep them in good working order. Insure the brakes are in perfect condition. Install a bell or horn on the bike. Equip the bike with a white headlight and a red taillight. Eliminate protruding objects on the bike. Obey all traffic signs. Avoid streets with heavy traffic. Also, keep the ball of the foot firmly on the pedal. Wear reflective or light colored clothing during hours of darkness. Travel on extreme right side of road in direction of traffic flow. Avoid carrying passengers unless special seats with spoke guards are provided and turn left at busy intersections by stopping bicycle, dismounting, and walking across the lights.

A cardinal rule for safe bicycle riding as in motorcycling is "see and be seen." Mounting the high attention orange flag on a 4-8 foot pole behind the seat is highly recommended. Another aid to night visibility is the recent improvement in bicycle tires which reflect light sources such as car headlights.

Bicycling is a healthful form of recreation and it can be fun. Let's keep it that way.

'Marat/Sade' scheduled for showing at CC

"Marat Sade," an award-winning musical, will open the theatre season at Columbus College on Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. in Fine Arts Hall. The play will run through Nov. 25.

Dennis Ciesli will direct the play, utilizing an orchestra of six and a chorus of thirty. Technical Director Sandy Luker designed the scenery and Dr. Hazel Hall is in charge of communications. Alice Ciesli is designing the costumes. Jim Decker and Ted Humphrey are in charge of lighting effects. Kari Stringham will direct the music for "The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade."

Actors, musicians and their roles include Wayne Sizemore, Marquis de Sade; Bruce Greening, Jean-Paul Marat; Jan Daniels, Herald; Joan Eubanks, Charlotte Corday; Marty Atherton, Simone Evrard; Jim Decker, Duperret; and Bill Heard, Jacques Roux.

The insane asylum at Charenton, France, is the background for the production. Despite the objection of medical doctors, Monsieur Coumier, the director, presented regular theatrical entertainment as a therapeutic treatment for the patients. These plays, written and directed by Marquis de Sade, were enacted on a specially built stage at the asylum. The inmates had to withstand the mockery of the wealthy Parisians who came as much to jeer at the pathetic antics of the lunatics as to watch the presentation. "Marat/Sade" takes place in 1808 and is about the assassination of Jean-Paul Marat, a leader of the French Revolution. Chief publisher of a subversive newspaper, Marat contracted a skin disease from hiding in damp cellars and sewers. His disease forced him to live continually immersed in water.

The production presents several levels of reality simultaneously; the inmates display various degrees of disorientation. This play is recommended for mature audiences.

Tickets are available and reservations can be made by calling 568-3801. Individual reserved tickets are $2.50 with special rates for military personnel, senior citizens, and student groups. Season tickets for "Marat/Sade" and the future productions of Shakespeare's "Henry IV," Part I and the musical "Man of La Mancha" are $6 and $3. The box office is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. and again at 7 p.m. on the nights of performances. College students and faculty will be admitted on I.D. cards.

The college production of "Marat/Sade" is entered in the American College Theatre Festival, a national competition for college and university theatrical productions, produced by the American Theatre Association and sponsored by the American Oil Company and American Airlines. The winning schools will be invited to perform their plays at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.D. set his fragile cargo down atop the hospital, the victim registered no pulse at all.

Attending physicians later noted that the victim would have almost certainly been dead on arrival had he been transported to the hospital by ground ambulance.

"There's no doubt about it," said Kegle later. "If we hadn't been called in, the victim would have died in the wreckage or on his way to a hospital."

Unfortunately, the young man died from his injuries six weeks later.

The above account is just an example of the type of emergency evacuation service being provided civilian residents of West Georgia and East Alabama by Ft. Benning's Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic program, known simply as MAST.

Officially stated, its purpose is to provide emergency air ambulance service to civilian communities and individuals in outlying areas where distance and time are critical lifesaving factors.

Thirteen other Army installations and two Air Force bases throughout the country are also providing MAST programs for their civilian communities.

Ft. Benning's MAST program was initiated in mid-May of this year. Manned by personnel and equipment of the 498th Med Co, its headquarters is located at Lawson Army Airfield.

Normally six helicopters are assigned to most MAST sites, but Ft. Benning has 13 at its disposal. Standard equipment includes individual first aid kits, oxygen, splint sets, resuscitator, litter, blanket set and radio links to civilian authorities. The helicopters are large enough to transport six patients at a time, but the local program has never had to carry more than two patients at one time.

Each MAST mission involves four crew members—two pilots, one medic, and a crew chief. In addition, a nurse is often required due to the nature of many missions, such as the inter-hospital transfers of premature babies with various bodily malfunctions.

Interhospital transfers, in fact, make up more than 90 per cent of Ft. Benning's MAST missions to date. Premature babies comprise the great majority of the program's patients, but transfers have also involved heart patients, burn patients, organ-transplant patients, and patients suffering from a rather common disorder known as aortic aneurysm, which in simple terms, means a severe swelling in the main artery from the heart.

MAST missions involving the interhospital transfer of medical equipment and supplies such as incubators, heart monitors, and blood plasma are also rather common.

The Medevac choppers and two four-man crews are available around the clock with additional aircraft and personnel available if needed. The primary rescue team must maintain immediate readiness, while the secondary crew is available on a 30-minute notice.

Although the range of MAST missions is usually restricted to 100 miles due to fuel capacity of the helicopters, with availability of refueling facilities and other extenuating factors, many missions have gone beyond that limit.

Several burn patients, for example, have been flown to Birmingham's University of Alabama Medical Center which specializes in that type treatment. Augusta's Talmadge Memorial Hospital, likewise, has been on the receiving end of several missions involving the transfer of diseased children.

MAST missions may be requested by any person or organization, but the request must be channelled through the proper authorities in order that it may be validated.

Final approval of each mission lies with the aircraft commander on duty at the time of the request. Normally, there is no delay in acceptance of a mission, but certain conditions could conceivably delay or even cancel a mission. These include marginal weather conditions, special enroute delays, unusual interhospital transfer requests, exceptional distance requirements, or fuel allocation limitations.

The scene above, although staged, depicts a MAST mission in progress at the scene of an automobile accident. With one of the 498th Medical Company's UH-1H helicopters idling in the background, Army medics,

Although the program is considered an overwhelming success at each of its 16 sites, a big problem involving communications between aircraft and ground medical facilities restricts operations in some areas, including Ft. Benning.

"If we could talk to them, it would be so much easier," explained Kegle. "It definitely hampers our operations. But, we're in the process now of getting the situation straightened out."

MAST is prohibited by law from competing with ground or previously functioning air ambulance service. Rather, it is a supplemental service used when it is impossible for a ground vehicle to reach a victim or when no other air transportation is available and time is a critical factor.

Based on medical evacuation experiences during the Vietnam conflict, former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird recommended in August, 1969 that an interagency committee study the possibility of providing air medical transportation for the civilian community.

In mid-1970, the committee, representing the Department of Defense, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the Department of Transportation, selected four MAST trial sites—Ft. Carson, CO; Ft. Lewis, WA; Ft. Sam Houston, TX; and Mountain Home AFB, ID.

The trial program was so successful that the inter-agency committee later approved nine additional Army sites, including Ft. Benning, and one other Air Force site.

Plans to expand the program to several other sites are now being studied.

Bridge project fails . . . then succeeds

Soldiers of D Co, 20th Engr Bn (Ft. Campbell, KY) prepare sticks of the timber trussell span of the bridge. dynamite for the internal charges placed in (US Army Photo)

By William D. Sams

Everyone waited, watched and listened with anticipation. After many delays it seemed the bridge demolition project at West Point, Ga. was finally getting underway. A ten minute warning siren was sounded to clear the area.

Television cameramen, newspaper reporters and photographers took their positions along with the soldier engineers from Ft. Campbell, Ky. and Ft. Benning.

Atop the cliffs and hills surrounding West Point Lake, the crowds gathered closer to the edge to get a better look at the bridge that was about to be reduced to rubble.

It was about 2:30 p.m. The explosion everyone had been waiting for shattered the silence. As the echo of the blast faded and the thick, heavy clouds of smoke thinned to a gray haze, the bridge became more clearly visible. The 24 ton section of Seaboard Coastline Railroad was still standing. This "London Bridge" refused to fall.

The only noticeable damage was a few girders missing along with explosive stains on the joints where the 52 pounds of plastic explosives had been planted.

The curious asked the inevitable: why didn't the bridge fall? Newsmen on the scene wanted answers. So the engineers explained. They didn't want to use too much explosives at one time because of fear of damaging a new multi-structure bridge located about 100 yards away.

Constant rescheduling was also a factor in delaying the blast. The engineers did not plan to do a rush job, especially with that much explosives around.

Precaution was the key word and the engineers placed as much or more emphasis on the safety of the men as on the completion of the project itself.

During a briefing with newswriters before the blast, COL Ames S. Albro, 36th Engr Grp commander, stated that there might be some delays since the bridge operation was a training exercise for the 20th Engrs of Ft. Campbell, along with being a civic action project.

The men of the 20th Engrs were at the West Point Project to plant the explosives on the bridge as part of their training. For the majority of the men this was the first time they were able to work with explosives on a mission away from their garrison unit.

Several of the platoon leaders of Co D 20th Engrs admitted that this project was the first opportunity they have had to work with their men as a complete unit.

The engineers from Ft.

Campbell also said that morale was high because they were working on jobs they were trained to perform — using the "tools of their trade" plus knowhow to accomplish the West Point Bridge Project.

The exercise was designed to teach the men of the 20th engineers how to blow up a bridge. So they combined the training with community assistance. The old railroad trussell had to come down anyway because the rising water level of the lake would soon cover the bridge, causing safety hazards to boaters, skiers and swimmers.

Inspecting the bridge after the first blast, the engineers found that only two small straps of steel were holding the span up. New explosive charges were set and at 4:30 p.m. the engineers tried again. This time a smaller blast brought the bridge down.

During the entire project units from the 36th Engr Grp assisted the 20th Engrs with ammo supplies, transportation, heavy equipment, divers, and supervisors.

Supervising the safe movement of the explosives was the 608th Ord Co 67th Maint Bn, 36th Engrs.

It was the mission of the 608th to set up ammo supply points at the bridge site. As safety was the main concern, explosives travelled separately from the blasting caps. The 608th also instructed the 20th Engrs on safety procedures while planting the charges on the bridge.

For salvaging operations, divers from the 586th Floatbridge Co, 36th Engrs, were called upon to begin underwater demolition. Some of the bridge which fell did not come apart completely. The 586th divers had to plant underwater explosives to break up the large portions of steel covered by water.

Because of boat traffic in the area the 586th also furnished security boats which were used as "guard-boats" patrolling the river to warn other boats of the danger of coming too close.

The 36th Aviation Platoon, 36th Engrs was on constant aerial watch. Their mission was to be sure that all civilians were out of the area before and during the blast.

Even with the bridge blown up there was still more work to be done by the engineers. As the water level continued to rise it was only a matter of time before the demolished bridge sections would be completely covered with water. The 43rd Engr Bn was given the task of removing all of the scrap steel from the water and placing it at a collection point on the bank of the lake where it was later removed by a civilian construction company.

But for the engineers to be mobile around the lake, access roads had to be built. This would enable the heavy equipment to get closer to the water during the salvaging operations.

After two weeks at the West Point Bridge Project the 20th Engrs and the 36th Engrs journeyed back here for training and supervision on floatbridge operations.

This thing is tough is the expression implied in the face of CPT Martin, commander of D Co as he concentrates on the complicated problem of sectional cutting of the

Howdy Bub. I been seein' some things that folks has been doin' to they's children that you wouldn't believe. It seems that when momma an' daddy drops into the hospital to see one of they's aillin friends, they has been leavin' the tads alone an' unattended in the hospital waitin' room.

Now, I ain't wrapped too tight, but how folks can think they is responsible parents when they run off an' leave the children, 'thout nobody watchin' them, is beyond me. Me an' Sally Lou never, ever, left our kids alone, 'til they wuz of an age to look after themselves.

I'll always 'member that one of us had to stay home with them younguns alla the time. We never even got to Sunday meetin' together 'til the last baby wuz old enuf that we could hesh her up, so's she wouldn't distract the Reverend when he wuz doin' his lambastin' of Cap'n Howdy an' sech like. It sure seemed like a long spell of one of us goin' somplace, an' the other sittin' home, seein' as how we had seven younguns, but we survived it 'thout no damage bein' done.

'Y'know, Bub, when I walk into the hospital, an' see them kids in the waitin' room, 'thout no aduit takin' care of them, all I can think of is the fact that they's folks sure don't think too much of 'em.

Thinkin' 'bout not havin' no respect for the tads, 'minds me of Arlene McCullers when she came into my office last week with her four children. I've been treatin' her for some Sinkin' Spells that she'd been havin' lately, an' wuz in for her checkup.

Howsomever, I wuz busier than a one-armed paper hanger with the itch, seein' all of my patients, an' havin' to answer the phone, 'cause Martha Mae Wilburson, my receptionist, wuz home with a bad case of the flu. I wuz generally jes havin' myself a good time, tryin' to do everthing that needed to git done, 'cept-emptin' the wastebaskets an' directin' traffic out in the parkin' lot.

So, with alla this commotion goin' on, Arlene had to wait a considerable time afore I could get to her. By the time I wuz free enuf to see her, Arlene managed to expose her younguns to everytin' from runny noses to Gallopin' Consumption. When she came troopin' into my office treatment room with them tads hangin' offen her, I tole her that she wuz a mighty brave women, seein' as how jes insured her family some sick days by havin' her brood out in the waitin' robm amongst them sick folks.

Why, even 'ole John Hollinger wuz out there, an' we ain't convnced yet that he ain't got tuberculosis, despite the fact that all his tests has come back negative. I tole Arlene that if she dldn't have no consideration for her children, she should at least have some mercy for me, 'cause I'm the one that would have to drive out to her place some night this week to put one of her sick younguns to rights. She wuz kinda apologetic, but I tole her to save her apologies for the rainy night I came knockin' on her door.

So, all I can say, Bub, is that children has they's rights as much as we adults do, but 'til they is growed up some, an' can fend for theyselves, it's up to us parents to take proper care of 'em.

Good health to you and yours

So, You Think Money's Tight

While you're debating over where to cut your budget . . . which meat to buy . . . cutting out a movie once a week . . . buying a black & white TV rather than a color . . . how much you can afford for Christmas . . . just stop and think! There are hundreds of children in this area that don't even have the choice of what they eat, they're happy to eat . . . they would be tickled to death to watch any TV . . . a movie a year would be heaven . . . and if they got a gift for Christmas they would probably weep with happiness. So, you think money's tight . . . far you it may be a bit tight . . . to them it's downright scarce. Won't you give a kid a smile, a dream, some hope. You might find you're not so bad off after all!

Buy at Higher Rates and Save?

You've decided that home mortgage interest rates are just too high now and that you'll wait until next year to buy a house when there's a good chance that the rates will go down. You assume that buying a home at next year's lower rate will save you a considerable amount of money over the 25 to 30-year mortgage period. Although that reasoning sounds sensible, it won't save you dollars and cents.

In fact, waiting to buy (at the possible 8 percent next year as opposed to the present 9 to 9.5 percent rate) will probably cost you more. Compare the figures:

You Purchase Your House Now
Purchase price	$35,000
Downpayment of 10%	3,500
Amount of mortgage	31,500
Term of mortgage	25 yrs.
Monthly payment at:
7%	$222.71
8%	243.18
9%	264.60
10%	286.34

You Wait One Year to Buy
Purchase price of home (up 10%)	$38,500
Downpayment of 10%	3,850
Amount of mortgage	34,650
Term of mortgage	25 yrs.
Monthly payment at:
7%	$244.98
8%	267.50
10%	314.57

Using the chart, compare buying a $35,000 house now at the 9 percent mortgage rate for 25 years with buying the same house next year at 8 percent over 25 years:

- your downpayment now is $3,500; next year, $3,850—a saving of $350 if you buy now;
- your monthly payment at 9 percent now is $264.60; next year at 8 percent, $267.50—a saving of $2.90 per month, $34.80 per year, and $870 over the 25-year mortgage period by buying now; and
- your total saving by buying now is $350 on downpayment, plus $870 on the 25-year mortgage for a sum of $1,220.

Needless to say, the larger the totals, the larger the savings. Thus, unless interest rates drop much lower than can logically be anticipated, and unless the prices of homes sharply decline as opposed to the long-standing upward trend, you will not save money by waiting for lower mortgage rates. Moreover, by waiting, you lose a year of tax benefits derived from home ownership and you're a year behind in building up the equity in your home as you amortize the mortgage principal.

But before you take on a home mortgage now or later, a note of caution: be sure you understand completely all the terms of what will probably be the largest single debt of your life; moreover, the monthly mortgage payment will likely be the largest single amount in your budget. Buying a home is a big move even before you start moving in. Plan it carefully.

Co C, 197th Spt Bn is post football champ

By C. B. Hoover

With cheers from a small but enthusiastic crowd, the men of Co C, 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde, won the post flag football championship last week.

Co C was one of the two teams entering the play-offs from the 197th Inf Bde. The 298th Sig Plt also participated. However, they were eliminated from competition by the 1/29th Inf in a last minute win, 6-0.

The first game for Co C in the post play-offs saw them maul the challengers from the 4th Student Bn, 26-zip. The high point of the game featured the passing of Steve Sullivan, the quarterback for Co C, throwing not one but four TD passes. Two of the passes were received by Walter Slone and the others went to Richard Hite.

The second game for the "Truckers" had them squeaking by the 598th Light Maintenance Co.

Harry Blevins helped save the game when he intercepted a pass and ran it in for six. A 50-yard bomb from Sullivan to Henry Ward put the ice to the game, 14-12.

Morale dropped a little for Co C players as they dropped their third game to HQ Command, 13-7. The game was all tied up 7-7 and went into overtime. It looked like the "Truckers" had it in the bag when instead of knocking down a bomb of HQ Command's one of the "Truckers" intercepted it to reverse the yardage gain. Following the interception that gave them some unexpected yardage the men of HQ Command went in for a TD to win 13-6.

The defense of Co C rallied during game four when they met the 586th Eng Co, holding them scoreless. In overtime play the front four was featured, with outstanding plays by Charlie Holmes, Dennis McBride, Melvin Caldwell and Willie Green. The game ended with the "Truckers" winning 1-0.

Getting back in their winning ways the "Truckers" rolled back for a showdown with HQ Command for the championship. Their first encounter had another tie game in the making when Sergeant Christian of Co C broke into the open and received a 60-yard bomb, and went in for a TD to win 13-6.

It was a do or die situation for each team as they met for a third time.

The bugler-boy of Co C, Ronnie E. Brown, sounded the charge as Co C kicked off.

Unable to move the ball HQ Command kicked and the "Truckers" started a 6-yard TD drive down field.

The men of HQ Command came back, driving down to the "Trucker's" 10 yard line, when Stanley Faniel, voted the most valuable player, intercepted a pass and wisely elected to down the ball for a touch-back, bringing the ball out of the twenty.

Again the "Truckers" started to roll, going 80 yards for the TD ending the first half 12-0.

On a button-hook pass pattern, late in the half, the "Truckers" iced the game 18-0 to win the post championship.

Tommy Houston, the Recreation and Services Officer, USAIC, presented trophies to each team at the conclusion of the game.

Vikings keep perfect record

The Pee Wee League Vikings maintained their perfect record by trouncing the winless Rams, 30-0.

All the scoring was done in the first half as the Vikings scored touchdown after touchdown almost at will. The second half saw both teams play extremely defensive ball allowing neither team to hit the scoreboard.

In other Pee Wee action, the Redskins scalped the Dolphins, 12-0.

The Redskins of the Bidy League barely convinced the Lions that they are the first place team in the Bidy League. They nipped the Lions, 6-0.

The Razorback sunk the Dolphins, 13-6. The Knights were crowned by the Razorbacks in Doughboy League action t the tune of 22-6. The Raiders raided the Patriots 36-6.

The previously undefeated Wolverines of the Pony League lost their last game of the season to the second-place Jets, 12-6. The last place Rams were pulverized, 52-0 by the Steelers.

NOV

Hunting season into full swing

By BILL KLOEB

The hunting season gets into full swing next week with the opening of the rabbit and quail season in Georgia, and deer and quail season in Alabama, on Nov. 20.

If you think you might be hunting next Wednesday make some plans or you may have an experience similar to that of an ex-hunting buddy of mine.

This enthusiast called me late the night before quail hunting season opening day a few years ago. He wanted to join me and another friend in a hunt we had planned. His participation didn't fit in with our plans, but during a weak moment I said "Come along."

We were late getting in our hunting area the next morning. My ex-buddy's wife followed him right to the car discussing plans she was going to have to change because of his late decision to go hunting. I raced the engine while they exchanged opinions.

When we arrived at the hunting area and began making last minute preparations it became apparent that these were the first preparations made by my ex-buddy. He discovered the box of shells he was carrying were No. 4 shot, not at all suitable for quail. At this point I gave up half my supply of No. 9 shot.

We had good luck finding birds, but my ex-buddy, normally a good shot, didn't do so good. He missed six times on half as many coveys. He claimed the sun was getting in his eyes. Claimed it was sunburning his nose, too. He borrowed my cap to wear "for just a little while." The cap didn't improve his shooting. The real problem was in the mark-gun combination. When I made a remark about his new gun he told me he had received the gun as a birthday present and had never fired it before.

We had covered about half the area we planned to hunt when we decided to eat lunch. You guessed it. My ex-buddy hadn't thought to bring a lunch. We shared.

Just about the time we were ready to start hunting again, a stranger approached. He was a game warden wanting to see our licenses. Right again. Ex-buddy hadn't bought a license. That was the end of the hunt and it was at that time that a hunting buddy became an ex-hunting buddy.

A hunting trip needs planning. You owe it to your hunting friends, your family and yourself to make sure your plans are complete and announced in time for others to react.

Rapid reduction of real estate available for hunting activities makes long range planning a must. Use of private land requires sometimes lengthy negotiations and applications for permits to hunt on public lands must be submitted well in advance.

The transport you are going to use to get there and back home should be in good mechanical shape. A break-down going or coming is a tragedy.

The clerks who sell licenses, shells, hunting clothes and other hunting equipment talk to quite a few hunters. Most times they are hunters. They pick up a lot of hunting information. Talking with them can be enjoyable and may recall some requirement that has slipped your mind.

Shooters from five nations participate in clinic

The shooters of five North, Central and South American Nations gathered at Ft. Benning to participate in an International Marksmanship Clinic, Nov. 11.

Hosted by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, the group of 100 visiting marksmen were welcomed to the post by COL Sidney R. Hinds, Jr., Commander of the elite shooting unit, during an opening ceremony at the Skeet Lodge. Following his welcome, he outlined a two week period of clinical shooting instruction for the visitors which would include a weekend international tournament at the midpoint.

Conducting the instruction through combination classroom and range exercise will be many of the top marksmen of the nation. These instructors, all members of the Marksmanship Unit, include such international famous shooters as MAJ Lones W. Wigger, Jr., MAJ John Foster, CPT Lanny R. Bassham, SFC Hershel L. Anderson and SFC Bonnie Harmon.

Conditioning drills begin next Monday for combatants in the third annual Infantry Bowl football game, scheduled for Dec. 14 at Doughboy Stadium on Main Post.

Proceeds of the annual gridiron showdown between athletes of the U. S. Infantry School Staff and Faculty and it students will be channeled into Ft. Benning's Youth Activities program.

LTC Wayne Boles, a former University of Arkansas grid standout, will coach the Staff and Faculty team, while LTC Jack Barham will handle coaching duties for the Student team.

Each of the first two games was won by the Staff and Faculty. In 1972, they triumphed, 10-6, and last year the score was 20-0.

Marksmanship unit to move

The United States Army Marksmanship Unit (AMU), more commonly known as the "Home of Shooting Champions," will be moving soon from its present location on Edwards Street (Bldg. 1500) to the former WAC barracks (Bldg. 243) in the old hospital area.

Since the unit was formed in 1956, the temporary World War II buildings have been the home of such well-known shooters as Sergeants Major Joe Benner, Olympic and world pistol champion; and Bill Blankenship, six-time national pistol champion; Gary Anderson, the two-time Olympic rifle champion and now a State Senator of Nebraska; and present day shooter MAJ Lones Wigger, two-time Olympic winner and the holder of four world rifle records.

The 43d Engrs have been tasked for the modification work to support the move, tentatively scheduled for Dec. 10-20. This will include relocation of an indoor rifle and pistol range to an adjacent building by troop labor and extensive modification for housing the unit's equipment. Relocating the sophisticated tools, including lathes, milling machines, air gauging test equipment for completion rifle and pistol barrels and electronic powder weighing devices used in the reloading of match grade ammunition is expected to be the biggest problem involved in the move.

The equipment gives the AMU the capability of rebuilding its competitive weaponry and performing its research mission of developing new types of equipment and ammunition.

Future plans involve removing all the old temporary buildings in the 1500 area.

Check antifreeze, AAFES advises

WOODSY OWL SAYS: DON'T BE A DIRTY BIRD!

Dirty Birds don't just litter. They also drive cars with faulty mufflers and out-of-tune engines.

In one way or another, nearly everyone's guilty of being a Dirty Bird. But you can do something about it.

Woody Owl has a list of ways you can help stop pollution and keep America worth living in. It's in poster form, and it's yours free when you write Woody Owl, Forest Service, U.S.D.A., Washington, D.C. 20250.

And Remember Woody's Words of Wisdom: Give a Hoot! Don't Pollute!

18 Twelfth St. 324-6491. Loans to $10,000.

The birds and squirrels know it—you should know it too: "Old Man Winter" and his aidekick, "Arctic Blast," are closing in. And the early morning chill should be a reminder it's time to think about winterizing your car.

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) advises its customers to check their cars' antifreeze levels early and avoid last-minute buying of the increasingly scarce radiator coolant.

Antifreeze is in short supply throughout the nation and prices are spiraling upward.

No improvement in the situation is forecast for the near future because of a continuing shortage of ethylene alcohol, the main ingredient of antifreeze. New, and more profitable, uses have been found for the chemical, including the manufacture of double-knit fabrics.

Stocks of antifreeze at AAFES service stations and retail outlets depend solely on the ability of suppliers to provide the product. Heavy demand on the industry, AAFES officials said, may delay some shipments by antifreeze manufacture.

Stagg Bowl tickets now available

Ft. Benning personnel, both military and civilian, who would like to attend this year's Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl football game may obtain tickets at Bldg. 394, between Doughboy Stadium and the Top 5 Club, on Main Post.

Tickets to this year's Stagg Bowl, to be played on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 7 in Phenix City's Municipal Stadium, are selling much faster than last year, according to bowl chairman Carl Jones.

The Stagg Bowl was elevated by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) last year to the status of a national championship game within College Division II. For many years prior to that, the Stagg Bowl was merely one of several small college post-season contests without championship stature.

For the second consecutive year, the Stagg Bowl will be televised regionally by the American Broadcasting Company.

Contestants for this year's Division III showdown won't be decided until Nov. 30, when four teams selected by a special NCAA bowl committee clash on two of the respective campuses. The winners of those games will meet for the national championship one week later in Phenix City.

Wittenberg University of the Ohio Valley Conference defeated Juniata College of Pennsylvania, 40-0, in last year's Stagg Bowl, while Heidelberg University and Ohio Wesleyan came out on top the two previous years.

The game's namesake, Amos Alonzo Stagg, is considered one of college football's all-time great coaches. He began his coaching career at the University of Chicago shortly after the turn of the century and later coached for nearly 40 years at the College of the Pacific in California.

Teams being seriously considered as Division III semifinalists include Slippery Rock of Pennsylvania (8-0-1), Ithaca College of New York (9-0), Evansville University of Indiana (9-1), Central of Iowa (9-0), Baldwin-Wallace of Ohio (8-1), and Wittenberg (6-1-2).

Divisions I, II and III are distinguished by the number of athletic scholarships their member schools may annually award.

Division I members, such as Oklahoma, Notre Dame and Alabama, are permitted well over 100 athletic grants each year, while Division II schools, such as nearby Troy State University, may award no more than 60 athletic scholarships annually.

Division III members, like Slippery Rock, are prohibited from awarding any athletic scholarships at all.

Division III schools are concentrated in the far west, midwest, and northeastern sections of the country.

BLACK-FOOTED FERRET

(Mustela nigripes)
The black-footed ferret is among the rarest of mammals. It is a member of the weasel family and lives on the Great Plains. Its main food is prairie dogs. It spends most of its time underground in prairie dog dens. Disappearance of prairie dogs has caused the ferret to disappear in many areas. The U.S. government is now leasing land where prairie dogs are found in order to create new homes for this ferret.

If you'd like to SAVE A LIVING THING, you can help. VA questionnaire deadline moved up

More than a million persons, who will receive income questionnaires with Veterans Administration pension checks for November, must return them by Jan. 1, instead of the customary Jan. 15 deadline.

VA officials explained that the new deadline was set to relieve the annual logjam in preparation of January checks when pensioners returned the questionnaires.

Under the law, VA mails questionnaires to veterans on non-service-connected pension rolls, widows of veterans receiving pensions based on the non-service-connected death of a husband, and certain parents who receive monthly checks because of the service-connected death of a veteran or serviceman.

According to VA, thousands of beneficiaries missed the former Jan. 15 deadline over the years. Prompt return of questionnaires by the new Jan. 1 deadline will avoid delays in next year's checks, the agency said, stressing that a special effort is needed this year by the late filers to comply with the new deadline.

While many companies train in the field to maintain combat proficiency, the 121st Avn Co tackled a double requirement recently; that of training for combat readiness and its regular mission of supporting the Infantry School.

Specific areas of concentration were perimeter security and the handling and interrogation of POWs. The dining facility was also operational in the field.

Six Huey Cobras make up the Gun Platoon of the 121st and the Cobra pilots spent a day "working over" Furgerson Range with 40mm grenades, 17-pound rockets, and the fires up to 4,000 rounds per minute in an impressive display of accuracy.

"All in all, the three days in tents were profitable training experience adding both to the expertise and professionalism of the unit," said MAJ Richard F. Rockwell, commander of the 121st.

'Kilroy was here' has all but disappeared

The three word proclamation, "Kilroy was here," with a sketch of his nose and fingers hooked over the top of a wall, as he peered unsurely at a world ripped by World War II, once appeared almost everywhere.

But now he's missing in action. Gone are the three-word present-and-accounted-for announcements and the simple line drawings that magically materialized on any flat surface.

He is even missing where you'd think you'd find him for sure: the current world capital of graffiti, New York's subway. Or if he is there, he is all but invisible amid the spray-can slogans, salutations, and undeleted expletives that adorn the sides of subway cars in the latest eruption of self-expression. "Maybe New York today is too scary for him to come out from behind that wall," says a New York cab driver.

That protective wall may be why he survived the war while still turning up in hot spots no matter how unlikely. It may also be what concealed his true identity, the National Geographic Society says.

"Who is Kilroy?" The question popped up every time his scrawled self-portrait appeared — chalked on the unreachable stern of a Liberty ship coming in from a convoy run, or scratched in the sand to greet the first wave of troops as they hit the beach of a Pacific island.

The mystery deepened as Kilroy became the most famous GI on every front. He signed in "Kilroy was here" on probably every barracks wall, not a few guardhouses, and even the doors of a few generals' quarters.

After ordering one soap-and-water policing of a latrine wall, a satisfied colonel posted a notice for his men: "Kilroy is now dead. Anyone believing otherwise, and writing on these walls can have an interview with the commanding officer." Kilroy was back the next day, but the CO heard no confessions.

There were, in fact, 62 men in uniform named Kilroy. One of them, fresh from his share of action, was point blank: "Kilroy was there, and he didn't like it!"

Even so, scribbling GIs secretly saluted Kilroy everywhere. And he was popular with the English troops as well. In the spirit of wartime operations, however, he adopted a code name. His nose and fingers appearing from behind the same wall, he announced to the British, "Chad was here."

A wartime shipyard inspector named Kilroy innocently may have started it all, chalking his name to show he was doing his job no matter where, crawling into tanks or under the keels of ships.

Kilroy hardly made the fighting in Korea or Vietnam, but he was there during the American Revolution. Mathew Kilroy, with two l's, was one of the nine British redcoats who shot dead five patriots in the Boston Massacre. Found guilty of manslaughter, his thumb was branded for punishment. (AFPS)

283rd Army Band needs new members

Tired of toting an M16 or pounding a typewriter all day, every day? Considering a change of jobs?

CWO Brian Arnold, bandmaster of Ft. Benning's 283rd Band, whose ranks have been decimated during the last year, can help.

"We need musicians," says Arnold, "and I feel very strongly that if we could reach people in the field, we could get enough to put us back up to full strength."

Arnold had 35 musicians under his direction last year at this time, but that number has presently dwindled to a mere 18.

Before the draft was eliminated, of Marital abuse: Is the honeymoon over?

By Ileana H. Horen

Mary, a foreign-born wife, was married to an NCO. After more than 25 years of an abusive marriage, they divorced. She has many scars and bruises to show for those years.

Why didn't she leave sooner?

"I had two children and my homeland was far away. I couldn't just pick up and run to mother like American women can," she explained.

Donna is a Wac and her husband outranks her. She discovered his violent temper after almost a year of marriage. Legal and medical advisors told her she could divorce him on the grounds of mental and physical abuse.

Why hasn't she divorced him?

"I feel sorry for him and I believe our marriage can be saved," says Donna.

"Sometimes a woman has so much compassion; she's built with it," Donna continued. "She'll love her husband and won't hurt him, even though he'll hurt her.

"My husband teases me with threats. He'll slap me and say, 'Call the MPs,' or 'Go home to your mother.' Mostly, he gets angry over trivial things. He apologizes and soon it happens again."

There are countless cases such as these, most of which go unreported, according to many Ft. Benning authorities. Wife beatings — and husband beatings on a lesser scale —

'Price as marked' policy well received

Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) store managers at many locations are reporting enthusiastic customer response to the new "price as marked" policy for sales floor and stockroom merchandise.

That word comes from MG C. W. Hospelhorn, AAFES commander, who has been keeping in close touch with exchange managers and customers alike in a continuing effort to stay at least one step ahead of the spiraling inflation that has been eroding the buying power of the military consumer.

The latest inflation-fighting measure implemented by the general has meant that goods received from the manufacturers reflect procurement cost price increases only after present stocks are exhausted. Merchandise on exchange shelves or in the stockroom will be sold at prices originally applied. Formerly, exchanges immediately re-marked on-hand merchandise to reflect manufacturers' cost increases.

"One might think that such a change would have a minimal effect on what the customer pays during a shopping trip," he said. "Actually, this holding up the price measure will mean an estimated annual customer savings of some $9 million."

MG Hospelhorn conceded that the new pricing policy will not provide the cure-all for today's cost of living upsurge. "It is, however, one more definite weapon in the AAFES arsenal to combat this vexing problem, and a positive action in keeping with the President's Whip Inflation Now (WIN) program."

The AAFES commander reviewed other steps that have been taken by AAFES to counter inflation including the introduction of "Money Savers" and "Extra Dividends," two programs that offer merchandise of proven quality at savings even greater than those normally realized through exchange purchases. As an additional measure, sewing centers, now at all larger installations, have merchandise that gives patrons the chance to save up to 50 percent on their total clothing bill by making and altering their own clothes.

To keep pace with programs that show a direct favorable impact on the patron's pocketbook, AAFES has trimmed its internal expense through a series of sweeping behind-the-scenes economy measures applied to every aspect of operations throughout the global exchange network.

Magazine survey being conducted

The Recreation Services Libraries, located on Main Post and in Martin Army Hospital, on Harmony Church, and Kelley Hill are conducting a magazine and newspaper survey. They are asking military personnel to suggest what periodicals and newspapers they would prefer to have in the libraries.

The survey will be held November through mid December in the Main Post library, and January through mid February in the Hospital, Harmony Church and Kelley Hill library.

The libraries presently subscribe to 393 different newspapers and magazines. The cost of periodicals subscriptions and the decrease in annual funding may force the libraries to reduce this number.

In each library, periodicals will be tagged and the library staff requests you check each tag as to whether you want the subscription to be continued or discontinued. Also there will be two books available with listings of newspapers and magazines in print so that you may suggest other new titles.

Husband-wife teams, now becoming reality

What was once a rarity in the Army is now becoming commonplace — husband and wife teams. This is considered to be one outgrowth of the expansion of the Women's Army Corps. The Army is revising regulations to deal with this increase in military marriages.

One recent revision states in part: "Whenever possible, married couples who are both members of the Army will be assigned to locations where they can establish a common household. They should not be subjected to family separation more than other married couples, except when a joint assignment would not be practicable." Although this change encourages the assignment of married couples together, there is no guarantee since there must be a valid requirement for the individual at the new assignment before a request can be granted. Also, requests for joint assignments must be based on actual marriage.

Career planning is essential for a military married couple since they do face special problems. Several options which may make it easier for the military couple are "Station of Choice" and "Retraining to Compatible MOS."

THANKSGIVING

Not many people realize that our first Thanksgiving in 1621 was not a celebration of a bountiful harvest. Our Pilgrim Fathers experienced a very lean harvest that year and had suffered many hardships. Their spirits were low, but rather than giving up in bitterness, they set aside a special day to rejoice in their meager harvest and to give thanks that they had made it for another year. America was created with that kind of determination... the determination that no matter how difficult the present might be, we still had a lot to be thankful for and we would go on to build a better future. Today, 353 years after our first Thanksgiving, we are the strongest, most powerful and richest nation the world has ever seen. We have our problems, we have difficulties and have experienced great crises, but the determination our forefathers had lives on in us. We still have a lot to be thankful for.

Ex-POWs receive medals

Two Ft. Benning soldiers who managed to escape while prisoners of war in Southeast Asia received a total of seven medals last week in ceremonies held in Infantry Hall.

LTC Floyd J. Thompson, deputy director of Department of Army-wide Training Support, The Infantry School received the Silver Star, Bronze Star, and the Legion of Merit.

SSG Stanley A. Newell, 5th Bn, The School Brigade, who is now an officer candidate at Ft. Benning, received the Silver Star, Bronze Star, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Army Commendation Medal.

The presentations were made by BG Paul J. Mueller, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Thompson, held prisoner of war longer than any other American in history, was awarded the Silver Star for escape actions during October, 1971. Newell's Silver Star citation was for his escape on Nov. 6, 1967. Both men were recaptured a short time after they eluded their North Vietnamese captors.

Their citations read that both distinguished themselves by "gallantry and intrepidity in action as a prisoner of war in connection with military operations against an opposing armed force in Southeast Asia."

The citations continue: "With profound courage and a strong conviction in the Code of Conduct he (Thompson and Newell) escaped from an enemy prisoner of war camp, knowing that the odds for success were slight and that if recaptured he would receive torture and long periods in solitary confinement. The success of his escape was short lived, and he was recaptured and punished. This officer's (soldier's) actions were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military services and reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Army."

Thompson received the Bronze Star for actions during the period Jan. 1, 1971 to March 16, 1973, and Newell's Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster was for the period July 12, 1967 to March 5, 1973.

The citations read, in part: "His (Thompson and Newell) ceaseless efforts, by a continuous showing of resistance to an enemy who ignored all international agreements on treatment of prisoners of war, in the extremely adverse conditions of the Communist prisons of Southeast Asia, demonstrated his professional competence, unwavering devotion and loyalty to his country. Despite the harsh treatment through his long years of incarceration, this American continued to perform his duties in a clearly exceptional manner. . ."

Thompson's Legion of Merit citation was for the period of March 24, 1964 to Jan. 1, 1971.

"For the first four years (of his confinement), he was kept either in bamboo huts or small cages and never had the sight of another American," the citation reads. "He escaped from the enemy several times, but was recaptured each time."

"Thompson", the citation continues, "suffered through numerous periods of severe inhumane torture, was placed on reduced rations and was denied medical treatment as punishment, because he would not cooperate with his captors."

When he finally joined other Americans, "he set an example for all to follow and frequently placed himself in danger of punishment to protect or assist his fellow prisoners," the citation states.

The Bronze Star was presented to Newell for the period October, 1971 to May, 1972 when he, in an atmosphere of enemy brutality and harassment, "continued to establish and maintain communications (with other prisoners) through unusual and ingenious methods which resulted in American and Allied prisoners presenting a posture of increased resistance to the enemy's wishes and at the same time improving prisoner morale."

The Army Commendation Medal was presented to Newell for the period April, 1972 to February, 1973 in connection with his "performance of duties involving highly classified material while detained as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam. . ."

Newell performed these duties while under constant surveillance of the enemy, and "generated new ideas and improvised techniques which greatly enhanced covert operations," the citation states.

Band seeking new members

course, Army bands had no trouble at all recruiting new musicians to compensate for the normal rate of attrition. But since the all-volunteer concept was initiated, replacements have all but vanished.

In an effort to recruit new musicians, the 283rd will conduct an Open House at the Main Post Service Club, Dec. 6 and 13.

"It'll be an informal sort of thing," explains Arnold. "We'll be playing pop tunes and odds and ends and anyone interested in the band is invited to attend."

Facilities for on-the-spot auditions will be available each night of the Open House and if prospective qualified musicians so desire, and their present commander concurs, the necessary paperwork will be initiated to have them transferred into the Ft. Benning Band. Door open at 6 p.m. each night and free refreshments will be served.

Arnold also notes that the 283rd has an "open door" policy available to prospective musicians. The band is located in Bldg. 2838 near Bernheim Clinic. Information can be obtained by telephoning 545-2902.

Routine band functions include class graduations, military parades, retirement ceremonies, honor guard ceremonies and concerts.

Arnold lists only two requirements for becoming a member of the band. "First, they must be able to read music. And second, they must not be a discipline problem. We just don't have the time to teach the basics or play around with administrative problems."

Retiring? Convert SGLI to VGLI

Anyone due to separate or retire from the Service soon should give some thought to replacing the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) coverage which will terminate shortly after an individual moves to civilian life.

The U.S. Congress has enacted legislation to allow persons to avail themselves of a new military insurance plan known as Veteran's Group Life Insurance (VGLI). Enacted by Public Law 93-289, VGLI is a low-cost non-renewable five-year term insurance plan available to all members leaving active duty.

Coverage of the SGLI continues, without further premium payment, for 20 days after military separation or retirement, and may be converted to the new VGLI which would become effective upon expiration of the 120-day grace period.

Medical qualification is waived when converting SGLI. Also, the same waiver privilege applies if conversion of the VGLI to a commercial policy is sought at the end of the five-year term.

As of August 1, 1974, VGLI became available and becomes effective upon payment of the initial premium by the veteran.

Premiums for the VGLI coverage will be payable directly to the Veterans Administration (VA). Persons going into the processing for separation or retirement should contact the VA for additional information assistance. (AFPS)

And the new camera is $30* less.

Since we introduced the remarkable SX-70 Land camera, the world of photography has not been quite the same.

It isn't surprising. (Just press the electric button. Whoosh! The picture is in your hand, developing before your eyes.) And now all the wizardry you've heard about (the ingenious single-lens reflex system, the astonishing lens that can take pictures from as close as 10.4 inches to infinity, the ability to take action shots every 1.5 seconds) is yours in the new SX-70 Model 2.

For $30 less. Inside, you'll find our original SX-70, down to the very last transistor. But outside, you'll find panels of handsome Porvair instead of the fine-top grain leather. And ivory plastic instead of brushed chrome.

Obviously, in considering a camera like this, some will prefer the luxurious original. (After all, you buy a camera like this perhaps once in a lifetime.)

But $30 is $30. And we wanted you to know you're getting the best camera we have. In any case.

Hardin says 'president all too often out of control'

PRESIDENTIAL POWER AND ACCOUNTABILITY: TOWARD A NEW CONSTITUTION. By Charles M. Hardin. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1974. 257 Pages. $7.95.

By Albert N. Garland

In the wake of the Watergate affair and the resignation of Richard M. Nixon, there have come a spate of publications which purport to show conclusively why our system of government and, particularly, our Constitution, should be changed, and changed immediately.

This is one of that "spate." It has been written by a professor of political science at the University of California at Davis, and while I don't necessarily believe Hardin's book is the best of the lot, it does give you some idea of the sort of changes that are now being thrown out for our consideration. One advantage his book does have over some of the others I have read — Hardin sums up his ideas in his introduction, so one doesn't have to go too far into the sometimes murky waters of deceptive rhetoric to find out what is being said. In short, if you read Hardin, you will have read at least a half-dozen other authors.

Hardin believes, it seems to me, in the parliamentary system of government as presently practiced in a number of European countries, England probably being the outstanding example. And he has apparently come to this conclusion because, in modern times, our "president all too often was out of control" and "the inadequacy of Congress to provide an alternative to presidential government had been shown from the close of the Civil War to the end of the nineteenth century and fitfully demonstrated again thereafter."

To Hardin, then, the only way out of this dilemma of a too-powerful president and a too-weak Congress is "constitutional surgery at least as severe as that of 1787." He suggests, as his major propositions, that "the president and Congress should be elected for simultaneous four-year terms" and that "the defeated candidate for the presidency should have a seat in the House of Representatives, priority in committees and on the floor, and a staff, offices, and other prerequisites suitable to his position as the leader of the opposition;" that the office of the vice-president be abolished; that the leverage of the Senate be reduced; and that a certain number of national at-large candidates be elected to the House.

Hardin uses the bulk of his book to explain and defend his proposed changes, not hesitating along the way to take a healthy swipe (43 pages worth) at the "military bureaucracy."

One may not agree with Hardin's proposals. But his book, at the least, gives you one side of an argument that seems to be raging in academic circles. Just remember, there is another side to the argument, and I would suggest you consider that side before you make up your mind.

Vets with a yen to travel--check with the VA first

If you're a veteran with a yen to travel or establish residence overseas, you'd better check first with the Veterans Administration.

Under the law, VA cannot provide certain benefits in foreign countries, the agency advised. Knowing what benefits are available could become crucial to a veteran's well-being, especially if medical problems arise.

Before traveling outside the U.S., a veteran should obtain a statement of his service-connected disabilities from the VA office which maintains his medical records.

In an emergency, an eligible veteran is entitled to VA-paid hospitalization for service-connected conditions if he or a representative presents the VA statement to the embassy or consular office within 72 hours after hospitalization begins, together with an application for medical benefits. Notification of outpatient treatment must be made within 15 days.

Care for veterans with both service-connected and non-service-connected disabilities is available only in the Philippines at the Veterans Memorial Hospital in Manila. As in the United States, however, veterans with non-service-connected disabilities are eligible on a space available basis, and only if they are unable to defray expenses.

Only veterans who are retired servicemen are eligible for medical benefits from military hospitals and clinics.

Education benefits are available overseas to eligible veterans, eligible wives, widows and children pursuing degrees in VA-approved foreign schools.

Compensation and pension checks also may be mailed to most overseas addresses but GI home loans are not available to veterans living in foreign countries.

To insure prompt receipt of checks, veterans traveling in foreign countries should maintain stateside mailing addresses, where possible.

Under special discharge program, you can be 'fired'

By Jerry Hill

Unless he's married to the boss's daughter, a private enterprise employe who can't cut it, doesn't usually last very long. Most successful employers simply rid themselves of stragglers and trouble-makers with one swift kick in the seat of the pants.

Within 30 days, at the most, all unit commanders at Ft. Benning will have the same authority as their civilian counterparts. In other words, they will have the authority to "fire" substandard, non-productive soldiers under their command.

The new special discharge program began in U.S. Army Europe last fall and has now been extended to two major stateside commands (FORSCOM and TRADOC) and Eighth Army in Korea.

The program is expected to become effective at Ft. Benning around Thanksgiving or shortly thereafter, while the Army hopes to extend it to all units, world-wide, by July 1, 1975.

Under provisions of Chapter 5, AR 635-200, the program hands commanders the authority to give honorable and general discharges to soldiers in their sixth to 36th month of service without court martial board action.

To guard against indiscriminate "firing," however, the new program stipulates that soldiers getting the boot must agree to the action. In cases where soldiers refuse such discharges and commanders feel individuals should be discharged anyway, commanders could subsequently initiate action for unsuitability and unfitness under the provisions of Chapter 13, AR 635-200.

The special discharge program has been in effect since October, 1973 in USAREUR, where 2,500 "marginal soldiers" have already received the old heave-ho.

Factors which must be considered by commanders before recommending discharge under the new program include: attitude, motivation, self-discipline, social and emotional adaptability, promotion potential and rehabilitation potential.

Ft. Benning commanders are currently undergoing a thorough briefing on the

The straight poop on your EER

By Maude Adams

What does EER mean to you? An EER is the Enlisted Efficiency Report given at least annually to all soldiers (an individual with a 3 year or more total active duty commitment). EERs comprise a part of the total evaluation score you will receive in accordance with your first MOS test and all subsequent MOS tests.

How does it affect you and your career?

Your EER makes up 40% of the total evaluation score. The EER weighted average is indicative of your proficiency on the job (MOS), along with the answers, you provide on the test answer sheet when you are MOS tested.

When are EERs given to each career soldier?

The first EER an individual should receive in today's modern career minded Army is after completion of 16 months continuous active duty, when you are subject to have your first MOS test. If you are in a PCS status after about 15 months continuous active duty, your supervisors should complete an EER to be forwarded to the gaining unit as a part of your Military Personnel File to be used at the gaining unit's discretion for the Initial Test. They have the choice of using this EER or having one completed by the gaining unit after 60 days with the new unit.

The EERs written after the first for Initial Testing will be completed for anual review depending on grades. Rating periods are:

August — all E4s and below who have had an Initial Test
November — E5s
January — E6s
March — E7s
May — E8s and E9s

EERs must be sequential (i.e., no overlap of rating or gap in the rating period). The only exceptions would be in the event of a service member having a break in service, which should be stated in Part IIA of the first EER received after he or she returns to active duty or if member is a patient in the hospital for an extended period of time, in a Medical Rating should be permanent typed or preferably black ink if hand entries are made.

Recommendations for Career Development

Items 1, 2 and 3 — only one Yes allowed and must have a yes.

Items 4, 5, and 6 — only one YES allowed or all may be NA.

Specify MOS means just that — errors most often noted are ANCOES, BNCOES or types of Development Courses.

Comments of Rater must be brief, yet concise, also they should coincide with the Characteristic Rating. An RREO statement is required on all EERs of those individuals who supervise. The first Reviewer would prepare another EER stating the reason or reasons of non-concurrence, thus becoming the rater. The reviewer in this case is the supervisor of the reviewer of the first EER. The two EERs must be attached.

If an EER should be an adverse EER, a statement must be signed by the individual receiving the EER. I do/do not wish to submit a rebuttal, making his or her selection of their desire. If they wish to submit a rebuttal statement, it must also be attached to the EER.

Any individual receiving an EER who does not agree with the rater or reviewer and the differences can not be reconciled and corrected before the EER is submitted to the Evaluation Center has the right to appeal the EER.

EER Responsibilities

First of all the individual is responsible for seeing that he informs his or her supervisor when he is due an EER for all EERs except annual reviews, which will be suspended to the unit shortly after the closing period.

Secondly, the unit and supervisors are responsible for notifying personnel of the need to prepare EERs for individuals in their unit and the timely completion of same if the individuals are in a PCS status, changing units on post or changing duty sections so that his or her personnel records will be properly updated prior to the change. Also, if regular EERs are not submitted on any individual in their unit at the time they feel it should be due, contact should be made with the personnel office to insure one is indeed due or if not an explanation can be provided why one is not due.

Your EER — will the impact on your career be good or bad? The decision is the individual's in Today's Modern Army.

After the EERs are prepared by the Personnel Office and suspended to the individual's unit, it should be completed and returned to the Personnel Office as quickly as possible so it can be forwarded to the Evaluation Center to be scored.

Errors most often noted:
The minimum rating period for E-6s and below is 60 days, for E-7s and above, 90 days, except specials, which may cover 30 days or more and must be reviewed by the first field grade officer over the rater.

CHARACTERISTICS OF RATING SHOULD BE PENCIL ENTRIES, Total

Sergeant potential statement is a must on all individuals E-6 and above. A negative statement is not considered adverse.

Rater must be at least one grade higher than the rated individual, at least an E-6 or if civilian, supervisor may rate.

Rater's Organization and Duty Assignment are often omitted. This is required as well as signature, Typed or Printed Name and Rank of the Rater. This must also be dated to coincide with the Ending Period of the Rating, e.g.: an EER with an ending period of August 1974 could not be dated July 20, 1974.

Reviewer — must annotate "concur" or "do not concur." If the Reviewer should not concur with rater, the 197th Spt Bn doing two requirements at once

The 197th Spt Bn is killing two birds with one stone during Field Training Exercise (FTX) 'Label Cleaver' at Fort Stewart, GA., Nov. 18-22.

During the FTX, the support battalion, commanded by LTC Jerry K. Patterson, is also undergoing its Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT), an annual requirement for combat and combat service support units.

"This is the ideal time to test the battalion," said COL Joseph E. Wasiak, the commander of the 197th Inf Bde. "All elements of the brigade are participating in the FTX and it is here with all of our support requirements that we can best test the support battalion. There will be no simulation of support requirements — vehicle evacuation and repairs, medical support, supply and transportation, and administrative. With the large number of brigade troops and equipment in the field, the support battalion's requirements will be real."

The ORTT is designed to test the support battalion's ability to provide combat service support to the brigade in tactical operation.

Also included is an evaluation of the unit's support of the brigade's convoy movement to Ft. Stewart, and the return trip to Ft. Benning.

"During the ORTT, we will be tasked to perform full combat service support to the brigade. In addition we will identify areas which require refinement in organization and procedures," said LTC Patterson, the battalion commander.

LTC George Ordway, the 197th deputy commander, is the chief controller for the test. The Infantry Center is providing umpires to evaluate the administrative, maintenance, supply, and transportation activities. A doctor from the 82nd Airborne Division will evaluate the battalion's medical activities.

Probably fewer than 300 pairs of these birds remain. They spend the winter in the Bahamas Islands. They only nest in the sandhills of northern Michigan. Is the honeymoon over? It doesn't have to be occur daily in our society. Some of them are minor cases, others are severe.

The Legal Aspects

"The woman is presumed not to be the attacker" says CPT Ted A. Schumacher, chief of the Judge Advocate General legal assistance section.

"The woman is presumed not to be the attacker."

"If the incident happens off post, the man might be thrown in jail," explained CPT Lewis R. Stark, legal assistance officer. "Georgia courts do give women favorable benefit of the doubt."

Both CPTs Stark and Schumacher believe that physical violence in a marriage stems from a lack of communication. "A lot of it boils down to basic immaturity," says Schumacher. "Once people start yelling, they say cruel things. It often leads to harsh actions."

The legal officers suggest that after a woman has been assaulted by her husband, she should first see a doctor, then find out what prompted the action, and finally she should discuss counseling, separation and, as a last resort, divorce from her husband.

"Not all assault cases are reported to us," says SGM Billy Dinnell of the Provost Marshall's Operations Division. "The wife is scared that rank-wise her husband will be reduced, and that means less money at the end of the month. One minute she's ready to hang him, the next minute she thinks about him getting into trouble with his unit, so she changes her mind."

From his recent experiences in Germany, SGM Dinnell attributes many cases to drinking. More domestic disturbances are reported just before or after pay day because men usually stop for a drink before going home during that period, the sergeant major has observed.

All domestic disturbances are entered on the PMO Desk Blotter, the same as any other report. When weapons are used, or bodily harm is involved, an investigation is conducted.

Persons apprehended and brought in after the occurrence of a domestic disturbance assault are turned over to the duty officer or the officer from the individual's parent organization. This officer is requested to insure that the individual will not return to his quarters until the company commander has investigated the incident.

The Religious Views

As spiritual leader and counselor to many military couples, the chaplain plays an important role. "The chaplain is there to instruct and establish spiritual and social values," says Chaplain (CPT) Glenn M. Stengel, Ft. Benning Jewish chaplain.

"Husband and wife should institute spiritual values . . ."

"I would tell the couple to prevent this problem by redirecting their goals to spiritual values and by instituting religion into their daily lives," the chaplain continued.

"More specifically, the husband and wife should institute spiritual goals to replace the hostility that has caused aggression. They should replace it with love, harmony and, most important, mutual respect.

"Since the family is the center of civilization, it's through the family that values are nurtured and established. I would get the couple to understand themselves and to honestly reevaluate their social values and their place in society. Success depends upon reestablishing the unique and sacred husband/wife relationship," Chaplain Stengel concluded.

The Medical Side

According to Dr. (COL) James S. Ketchum, chief of Psychiatry and the Mental Hygiene Consultation Service, Martin Army Hospital Annex, some rare cases of wife beatings are attributed to mental imbalance. "These persons act in accordance with delusions," he explained, "such as those who see such actions as a desire to wipe out sin."

"These persons act in accordance with delusions."

He stated that the majority of physical abuse cases are committed by "normal people, those in touch with reality," he clarified.

"In almost every case," Dr. Ketchum continued, "behavior of this type is a manifestation of immaturity. Almost everyone has hang-ups," he said.

People whose parents administered punishments harshly act in the same manner in many instances, according to the doctor. It is based on the example that's been set for them.

He also attributed the problem to alcohol and certain drugs. "Surprisingly enough," he elaborated, "barbiturates are likely to increase assaultive behavior more than alcohol. They remove controls one has of his behavior. However, at least 50% of all acts of violence are associated with alcohol intoxication."

Dr. Ketchum believes that even without alcohol and abnormal upbringing, every marriage has stresses. He indicated that mild abuse, such as a slap or a push, and even an occasional punch, is common to some marriages.

Dr. Ketchum suggested that cross cultural marriages are often subjected to difficulties because the couple isn't always on the same frequency. There are misunderstandings and one party may be hurt. He also brought out that these marriages frequently have problems because of a lack of communication.

Why does he think abusive actions aren't always reported?

"A wife is either afraid of her husband retaliating further, afraid of him getting in trouble, is more afraid of losing her husband than being beaten or it is a masochistic/sadistic relationship between a husband and wife. Also, many feel reassured by being punished and may even provoke it. This indicates counseling or psychiatric help is needed," he expressed.

"... something can be done."

"If the couple agrees they have a problem and seek help, something can be done," Dr. Ketchum added. "Any properly trained person can help. Essentially, there is an advantage of bringing in a neutral third party, or even fourth party or group. Someone else can bring in a new perspective," he concluded.

Chaplains, legal advisors and medical authorities can assist the couple, but nobody can better evaluate the situation better than husband and wife.

When a man strikes his wife, is the honeymoon over? It doesn't have to be.

67th takes $25,000 to triple its CFC goal

Engineers of the 67th Maint Bn, 36th Engr Grp more than tripled their goal in the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) drive of $7,000. The men of the 67th contributed a total of $25,000.

The 598th Lt Maint Co was the battalion's highest contributing company with $21,000.

"We tried to explain to all of our men what the CFC was," stated assistant "Keyman", ISG Phillip Simon, 598th Lt Maint Co., 36th Engrs.

"By telling the men about the different causes their contributions would be assisting and the number of people who would receive help the men responded generously," Simon added proudly.

The 444th Trans Co., 36th Engrs, was second in highest contributions with over $5,400 to their credit.

dividually," explained LT Charles Stan, 444th Trans Co "Keyman".

"If the men are approached on an individual basis, they tend to be more interested in giving," Stan pointed out.

"Many times group CFC presentations add negative ideas to the program," he concluded.

Trailing behind the 444th only by a small margin was the 608th Ord. Co, who accumulated over $5,000 in contributions.

"It was simple," remarked CW2 Charles Huffman, 608th Ord Co "Keyman". "I tried to place special emphasis on the personal effort and responsibility of each man and explain to each the need for a CFC fund drive."

VA encouraging vets to tell dependents death benefits

Deaths of 355,000 veterans during fiscal year 1974—206,000 with World War II service — has prompted the Veterans Administration to encourage 29 million living veterans to make certain their dependents are aware of the death benefits to which they may be entitled.

The FY 1974 death total was 30,000 more than the previous year and 58,000 higher than the 297,000 veterans' deaths recorded in FY 1970. The World War I veteran population was decreased by almost 10 per cent with the deaths of 106,000 veterans.

Veterans' families should be informed of survivors' benefits, such as dependency and indemnity compensation for service-connected death or non-service-connected death pensions for widows. The latter may apply only to surviving children if the widow's income makes her ineligible for VA pension benefits.

Burial benefits for wartime and certain peacetime veterans include a maximum $250 burial or cremation allowance, plus a plot allowance not exceeding $150 for veterans buried outside national cemeteries. In lieu of these benefits, there is an $800 burial allowance for veterans who die of service-connected disabilities.

Cremated remains presently are interred in reduced-size gravesites at national cemeteries. New cemeteries planned by VA's National Cemetery System include columbaria for these remains.

Burial flags and headstone or grave markers also are available for many deces-ed veterans upon application to the VA.

Veterans service organizations or local VA offices should be contacted for information and assistance in applying for benefits. Such documents as military separation papers, divorce decrees, guardianship or child custody evidence, birth, marriage and death certificates should be accessible to validate claims.

VA answers

Q — I am the widow of a World War II veteran who died as a result of a service-connected injury before using his GI home loan entitlement. I have not remarried. Am I eligible for this Veterans Administration benefit?

A — Yes. If you are not currently married, widows of World War II and later periods who died of service-connected causes, as well as wives of servicemen missing in action or prisoners of war for more than 90 days are eligible for this benefit.

Q — How can I get a job with the Veterans Administration similar to the one I had in a medical laboratory before discharge from service?

A — Suggest you contact the personnel office of nearest VA hospital for information on employment opportunities at the agency's hospitals and clinics. You may qualify for a Veterans Readjustment Act Appointment. If you do, it would eliminate much of the paper work connected with Civil Service appointments.

Q — How many nurses are caring for the nation's veterans at Veterans Administration hospitals?

A — The agency's corps of registered nurses increased 7 per cent, or 1,551, during fiscal year 1974.

"When you're doing something of value

That's the way SP4-Dominic Rocco feels about his job as an Air Defense Acquisition Radar Maintenance Instructor.

"When I first came in the Army, I didn't know the first thing about electronics. But I had forty solid hours of the basics before I even started the course, so now I feel right at home with an oscilloscope and a maze of wires.

"In the lab it's my job to show students, right on the equipment, the things they've been studying in a theoretical way in the classroom. And sometimes I get the feeling, by the questions they ask, that it's not just the equipment they're testing.

"Eventually I might try setting up my own repair business. But for right now, I like the challenge of teaching. And that's why I'm staying in."

Stagg Bowl could bring 'Slippery Rock' to town

Because of its peculiar name, Slippery Rock State College has been something of a standing joke among football fans from coast to coast for years and years.

But the Rockets of coach Bob DiSpirito take their football seriously. So serious, in fact, that chances are at least 50-50 they'll wind up playing for the College Division III national championship in the annual Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl, Dec. 7 at Phenix City Municipal Stadium.

The small Pennsylvania school's football team was one of four selected last week by the NCAA to compete in this year's Division III championship playoffs. The other three teams chosen for the playoffs are Ithaca College of New York, Evansville College of Indiana and Central of Iowa.

The Rockets, once-tied, but unbeaten through nine games, end their regular season campaign Saturday when they play Westchester for the Pennsylvania Conference title.

But win or lose Saturday, Slippery Rock will face Ithaca (9-0) Nov. 30 at Cornell University in the first round of the Division III playoffs. Evansville (8-1) will host Central of Iowa (9-0) the same day in the other semifinal contest.

The winners of those two games will clash for all the marbles before a regional television audience and an expected near-sellout in Phenix City one week later.

Tickets to this year's Stagg Bowl are available at Bldg. 394, between Doughboy Stadium and the Top 5 Club on Main Post.

The halftime show at this year's game will feature a mass performance by at least nine local high school bands. Several beauty queens will also be on hand, including Miss Columbus, Miss Georgia, Miss Columbus College, Miss Phenix City and the national Peanut Queen.

The game is sponsored by the Phenix City Lions Club and all proceeds go to charity. Game time is 1:30 p.m. (EST).

USAIS staff and faculty team favored in upcoming Infantry Bowl football game

By Jerry Hill

Opposing squads in this year's Infantry Bowl football game haven't even put on pads and helmets yet, but early coaches' reports indicate that the USAIS Staff and Faculty team should be considered a solid favorite to post its third straight victory on the turf of Doughboy Stadium, Dec. 14.

Among the 37 former collegiate, semi-pro and professional football players who turned out for the Staff and Faculty's first practice session Monday, were five offensive and two defensive starters off last year's team that crushed the Students, 20-0.

"Those who have showed up so far appear to be in pretty good condition," reported LTC Wayne Boles, coach of the Staff and Faculty team. Boles' gridiron troops are utilizing Gowdy Field for all practice sessions leading up to the Dec. 14 showdown.

Borrowing a line from Alabama coach Bear Bryant's patented pre-game sob script, Barham assumes the role of underdog without hesitation. "Boles has a tremendous advantage," he sighed after his team's first workout Monday. "He has the whole post to choose his players from and he's been here almost three years, so I'm sure he's recruited some top-notch athletes.

SRB total moving up

As time goes by at Ft. Benning, the reenlistment bonuses go up. This quarter, the Selective Reenlistment Bonus (SRB) total in The School Brigade amounted to over $185,000.

Sixty-nine of the 76 men and women of TSB signed their reenlistment contracts with an option guarantee to remain at their present duty station. These statistics don't include the 83 first term and 20 career soldiers who opted to extend their term of service here.

The first term soldiers received the largest share of this quarter's SRBs with a tally of over $109,000, all of which was received in cash. The career men received over $76,000 in SRBs.

Think of it, Station of Choice options, stabilizations, guaranteed MOS, security, benefits, and of course SRBs. Why are you staying in?

"I'm encouraged by the early performance of our own ex-athletes, however," added Barham on a more optimistic note. "We've had some real hard workouts."

The Student team is working out each weekday afternoon on the field opposite Audie Murphy Gym.

The game itself is strictly a benefit affair, with all proceeds going to Ft. Benning's Dependent Youth Activities program.

Suggested admission donations are $1 per adult and $.50 per child under 12 years of age. Tickets are available at all Recreation Services facilities and from each member of each team.

Razorbacks clinch league title, two games remain

The Doughboy League Razorbacks clinched their league title with two games remaining by gashing the Raiders 8-0.

The Razorback defense dominated the first half as they intercepted a pass and recovered two fumbles to help the offense to a 20-0 halftime lead. The Razorback defense has allowed only one touchdown from scrimmage in 6 games.

Razorback runningback, Dan Goeres scored three touchdowns on 1, 2, and 3 yard plunges.

Quarterback Tony Steverson passed for one touchdown and tailback Joe Lind scored twice.

In their final game, the Biddy League Redskins had no difficulty in convincing the other Biddy League teams that they were No. 1 when they defeated the Dolphins at Blue Field last Saturday and won the championship with a 5 win, no loss, 1 tie record.

The Redskins were fired up and dominated the entire game. The dynamic defense of the Redskins allowed only one first down until later in the fourth quarter.

The first Redskin touchdown came early in the first quarter when Thurman Johnson ran into the end zone from 30 yards out, untouched.

David Rogers added the extra points and the score was 8-0. There was no further scoring until the third quarter.

It was during this stanza that 'Skins Quarterback Erik Bouchellon added the next touchdown with Baxter Barber going over for the conversion.

The Dolphins lone score came on a run by Erik Thomas and extra point by Tony Mason.

At the gun it was 16-8, favor of the Redskins who were only inches away from another score.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

Thanksgiving Turkey Shoot open to the public

By Bill Kloeb

The Rod and Gun Club will hold its annual Thanksgiving Turkey Shoot at the club Skeet Ranges off First Division Road, Nov. 23 and 24. The shoot will be open to the public from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. tomorrow and from noon until 4 p.m. on Sunday. Frozen turkeys weighing from 10 to 12 pounds will be given as prizes.

Participants may use personally owned shotguns, but must use ammunition furnished by the club.

The club will sponsor a taxidermy course beginning at 1 p.m., Dec. 7, providing enough members register prior to the course. Joe Frazier, a local taxidermist, will conduct the course in two sessions. The first will concern skinning a squirrel carcass and treating the hide. During the second class, Frazier will demonstrate how to mount the hide on a taxidermy form. The course is free, but students must provide the squirrel carcass and purchase the squirrel form. For additional information call Loraine Holloway at 687-0562.

The Rod and Gun Club has a limited number of Honorary Deer Tags for hunters under age 16 and over age 65. They will be issued free for members and their dependents. They may be obtained at the club pro shop from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and from 6 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Rod and Gun Contests

George Axtell has the deer with the most antler points in the Rod and Gun Club Big Deer Contest. His 10-pointer weighed in at 127 pounds. Clifton Hutchinson leads in the heaviest deer contest. His nine-pointer weighed in at 160 pounds. As of Tuesday, 47 members had entered deer in the contest. The club will award an automatic shotgun to the hunters who have the heaviest deer and the deer with the most antler points during the current hunting season. A third gun will be awarded to one of the members who registers a deer, but does not win one of the other two prizes.

Another one of the giant catfish has been taken from Victory Pond. This time it was Davie Sparks. He landed a 34 pound monster on Nov. 15. He was using a worm for bait.

Other leaders in the November fishing derby are Gatlin Blanton with a 10 pound, 8 ounce bass he took from Kings Pond and John Mayer with a 12 ounce bream also from Kings Pond.

The Fish and Wildlife Office has been receiving numerous bitter complaints from hunters who spent time and money constructing deer stands on the reservation. It seems that other hunters have looked on these structures as gifts from heaven and taken them for their use.

The entire reservation is public property and normally individuals cannot preempt a part of it for their personal use. But deer stands are a special kind of personal thing. The builder usually spends hours or days in reconnoitering the area, hauls in material, and then spends more hours in the construction.

A true sportsman will recognize the proprietary feelings builders have about these structures. Builders should identify these structures by name and telephone number. They would be even more cooperative if they put up a sign declaring the stand open on a "first come first served" basis after they have taken their deer limit for the season.

USAIS instructor visits Africa

By Nancy Zizunas

Vacations are a time to get away from the routine. Being on the faculty at the Infantry School, life is never routine. Thus, a vacation must be extra special! I decided to explore Africa — to shoot big game — shoot with a camera, that is. I spent sixteen days of enjoyment and discovery in East Africa, visiting both Kenya and Tanzania.

I arrived by plane in Nairobi from London. What a change! Warm weather! The cold climate of England had been replaced by bright sunshine and an ideal climate. Nairobi was near the equator, and had a high altitude which resulted in a delightful climate.

The first of many boardings was in a VW bus. Accommodations in Nairobi were provided at the New Stanley, which has a personality of international clients and continental atmosphere.

Thinking of Nairobi, I never envisioned the night life as being so "big city." The International Casino provided excellent food, dancing, gambling and entertainment. One could easily believe they were in Las Vegas, but this was only one of the many contrasts that East Africa had to offer a visitor. In an area of minimal space one finds Mt. Kilimanjaro and Mt. Kenya, snow topped and often hidden by the clouds, but you also find desert areas near Amboseli that play havoc with your mind, creating mirages. Much of the land was spacious with open ranges, while other areas were crowded with trees and other vegetation.

The Masai Mara and Serengeti game areas were filled with a wide variety of habitats. We saw at least one of every animal. One of the most thrilling parts of the journey was when the chase began. The VW busses were driven on roads, which in many areas amount to nothing more than ruts that were well worn. If a leopard or cheeta was spotted off of the beaten path, the chase was on. The animals were quick, but the busses traveling in groups of three or four joined efforts and "surrounded the victim." The cheetah was too quick. We gave chase for awhile, but he was too cunning even for pictures.

Elephants, giraffes, and zebra were plentiful, and it is surprising how close you can get to them for pictures. Even without a zoom lens, clear accurate pictures were possible.

At the Ngorongoro Crater, it was amazing how near we got to several prides of lions. In fact, while we parked and engaged in a photographic euphoria, one of the lions nonchalantly walked to the bus, and sat down in the shade provided by the bus. Animals were plentiful at the Crater, and so was the mud! Thus we found our land rover stuck. At first it was fun, spurring mud in all directions trying to escape the slushy ebony earth. But after 45 minutes, it was tiring and hot. With the assistance of three other land rovers we made our escape.

We visited the prehistoric Olduvai Gorge, finds of Dr. Leakey, and then headed to Lake Manyara. Lions here sleep in the acacia trees, so as not to be bothered by the mosquitos. The baboons were also dominant in these lush tropic surroundings. Flowers were explosive in their coloring, and everything was bright and plentiful.

Arusha, a trading center, was fantastic for bargaining — a shoppers paradise. Ebony carvings, for a fraction of US prices, baskets, Masai sabers and shields made up part of the day's purchases. West Tsavo had crocodiles, lions, and elephants, plus volcanic eruptions.

Lodges are unique and beautiful, each having its own personality and style. One looked like a "Flintstone Village," little huts stacked together. Others used rocks and natural scenery to enhance the atmosphere of the lodges. All of the lodges had one thing in common, and that was a watering hole for the animals, so that close viewing was possible. Another place we visited was Treetops, world famous for its clientele and concept of viewing animals. Small rooms and tea time were enhanced by the presence of hungry baboons performing for cookies and crackers. Mt. Kenya Safari Club was posh and expensive. Lunch was a gourmet feast and the landscape extremely scenic.

Life in the jungle was a matter of survival. Animals kill each other. We never saw an actual kill, but we found a dead gazelle placed on a tree limb by a leopard.

Animals were often in conflict among themselves. Numerous elephants were gorged or maimed. Not only do the elephants destroy each other, but many of the trees were pulverized by the mighty tusks. Some trees are now being protected by mesh wires. The termite mounds which were immense and castle-like were scenic also. The tranquility that one experiences on the ranges or in the lodges was fantastic.

The people varied greatly from friendly to the Masai who didn't want to be photographed. The Masai villages were interesting. We visited the remains of an abandoned one. They were huts made of wooden strips and dung. They were circular and serve not only as a living area, but also as a fence to keep the cattle in bounds.

Squirrel puts Benning in the dark

A common squirrel's curiosity got the better of him and subsequently left the entire Main Post of Ft. Benning without electric power for about three hours last Friday.

The squirrel stuck his nose into the electrical wiring of the transformer power bank near Theater No. 1 at approximately 5:55 p.m. and immediately suffered the shock of his life. Almost three hours later, power was finally restored, but not the squirrel.

Another power failure occurred the next day when the Georgia Power Company switched over to a new transformer which had just been installed. It lasted approximately one hour.

The squirrel's inquisitiveness resulted in a short circuit which, in turn, caused a power surge and a blown fuse at the Baltzell Switching Station. The control circuit thus became inoperative. Such power failures are rare, but not unheard of. More often than not, they result from the intrusion of birds or other foreign substances.

The Directorate of Facilities Engineering is attempting to determine if adjustments to preclude future power failures are possible.

Although certain wards at Martin Army Hospital were momentarily blacked out during both power failures, the emergency room, operating room, cardiac care unit and delivery rooms automatically reverted to emergency battery power without interruption.

A Challenge To Improve Ourselves Now

ACTION 75 is the name selected by the Ft. Benning Bicentennial Project Agency as the theme of the Ft. Benning Bicentennial celebration. The ACTION of soldiers won our independence; ACTIONS of soldiers preserved it. Such ACTION required of the US Army necessitates a substantial development of the physical, mental, social and spiritual capabilities of each individual. This ACTION will be both commemorated and continued through the Bicentennial years by the Ft. Benning Bicentennial program. ACTION 75, whose logo is shown here. This ACTION by the US soldier produced great contributions to the American way of life in all fields; it shines in the valor of the US Army from Lexington to Vietnam and radiates today by the manner in which soldiers strengthen our nation through active community involvement. Today's soldier should rededicate himself to that ACTION through the ACTION 75 program which will begin in January 1975.

Select Christmas toys for age, safety

In an effort to reduce the number and the seriousness of toy-related injuries, the Child Protection and Toy Safety Act was put into effect in January 1970. Under this Act, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has the authority to remove and keep from the market toys and other children's articles with electrical, mechanical, and thermal hazards.

Since that time, over a thousand toys have been removed from the market under Federal toy safety regulations. Those retailers who ignore the law and continue to sell banned toys are subject to prosecution. But while parents no longer have to bear the sole responsibility for protecting their children from unsafe toys, their obligation remains to choose toys carefully.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission advises parents selecting toys to consider the size and age of each child; his dexterity, strength and maturity; and the area in which he plays.

Many toys which are safe for older children can be dangerous in the hands of infants and toddlers. They just don't realize that sharp points and edges are hazardous and that small pieces aren't meant to be put in the mouth. When you choose a toy for an infant or small child, select one that:

- is too large to be swallowed;
- does not have detachable small parts that can lodge in the windpipe, ears, or nostrils;
- is not apt to break easily into small pieces or leave jagged edges;
- does not have sharp edges or points;
- has not been put together with straight pins, sharp wires, nails, etc., that might be easily exposed;

- is not made of glass or brittle plastic;
- is labeled "non-toxic." Avoid painted toys for infants who put playthings in the mouth;
- does not have parts that can pinch fingers or toes or catch hair;

• does not have cords or strings over 12 inches in length.

Certain toys should be bought for the older, more mature children. These toys include chemistry sets and electrically-operated toys, particularly those producing heat.

Save-A-Toy will be Santa to some Christmas is . . . carolers, Santa Claus, children with packages and toys galore. But Christmas to some children will be just another day unless you help the Ft. Benning Save-A-Toy project.

Do you have broken, discarded toys taking up precious storage space? You can solve this problem by donating these toys to the Ft. Benning Army Community Service project.

After Christmas each year, ASC begins to collect toys from individuals as well as from businesses that donate broken toys. These toys are taken to the post stockade where the men have volunteered their time and effort to renovate them. SSG Troy Logan supervises all the work done by these men, providing the guidance and the know-how in accomplishing the repairs.

After taking an inventory of the toys that are available for distribution this year, ACS especially needs bicycles, tricycles and dolls. Donations of bicycle parts and doll clothes are appreciated. Those parts needed but not donated are purchased through special funds. This year the funds are extremely low, so widespread support and donations are encouraged.

If you are interested in making a donation to the project, you can call ACS at 545-4679 or deliver the toys to the back gate of the stockade. Also ACS volunteers will be glad to come to your house or business and pick up the toys.

Local health facilities will provide clinical experiences

Four additional health facilities will provide clinical learning experiences for students in the mental health program at Columbus College through an agreement with the college and administrative approval by the Board of Regents. Agreements are contracted on a yearly basis.

Bradley Center, Inc., Columbus Health Department, Harris County Training Center, and the United States Army Infantry Center

Confinement Facility have contracts for this service through Aug. 31, 1975.

At least 22 students will be involved in clinical courses at Goodwill Industries, Ann Elizabeth Sheppard Home, Regional Youth Development Center, Warm Springs Foundation, Bradley Center, Columbus Health Department, Harris County Training Center, and the U.S. Army Infantry Center Confinement Facility.

Blood donor qualifications listed

Ft. Benning's Blood Donor Program has a continuous need for 60-80 pints of blood each and every week. There are also many emergency situations at Martin Army Hospital which require human blood and blood products. Blood Donor Program Director, LTC Harvey C. Phelps, has provided a list of qualifications for potential donors.

Donors must be in good health and meet requirements set forth by the American Association of Blood Banks. The following list may be retained for future reference. Some of these qualifications are cause for rejection and it is hoped that use of this listing may save unnecessary trips to the Donor Center by unqualified potential donors. If there are questions, please call the Hospital Blood Bank at any of the numbers listed below.

'The General' to be aired Thursday

He was not on a Normandy beach when the Allies invaded France on June 6, 1944. He wasn't present at Malta when Italy surrendered, at Reims when the German armies collapsed, or aboard the U.S.S. Missouri on Sept. 2, 1945, when the Japanese formally admitted defeat. Some Americans who danced and cheered and prayed and cried on V-E and V-J Days were not, at the time, even familiar with his name. He was not paraded, ticker-tape-showered, newsreel-filmed or front-paged when World War II was over.

But there are many who say he won it.

Then, as now, they referred to him not as Gen. George C. Marshall but, rather matter-of-factly, as "the General."

The life of this unique man, who never led a combat troop but is credited with winning the world's largest war, who wore five stars and considered the battlefield "the most terrible tragedy of the human race," is the subject of "The General," to be broadcast as the fourth special in THE AMERICAN PARADE series THURSDAY, DEC. 5 (9-10 PM, EST) on the CBS Television Network, narrated by Ben Gazzara.

The Bayonet, Nov. 28, 1974

Thanksgiving, our American heritage

Thanksgiving turkey with all the trimmings and four weeks later Christmas with Santa Claus! All this and much, much more are part of our American heritage. From time to time each person needs to stop and ask the question: "Why should I be proud to be an American?" This country is not perfect — we know that; but we also know that it has the capacity to see and to correct social ills and economic injustices. All this is because of our heritage — a heritage given to us, a heritage we need to know, to protect and, in our lives to enrich.

As a nation we have a heritage of the struggle for freedom — in Europe, Asia and Africa. Our pilgrim forefathers' ideas of freedom were different from ours; but the heritage of a restless seeking after freedom and justice was passed on to us. A constitutional form of government was created and lives on.

In twentieth century America many proud and noble heritages can now take their place side by side, each giving much to the American tradition, each in turn benefiting from the freedom to rub shoulders with the others. This land is our land — "from California to the New York Island," but also ours, whether we be Asiatic — who may be the original Americans, or European, or African, or Latin Americans. No longer are we just a 'melting-pot' in which all Americans were expected to take on the values and morals of the Western Europeans. Now Black Americans can look with pride at their African heritage and Americans of Hispanic, Oriental, Middle-and Easter-European descents can and must affirm their unique contributions to the American scene.

The Pilgrims left repressive laws in Britain and Europe. It was left to the men who fought the Revolutionary War to write a Constitution that would be a living, growing instrument for the maintenance of liberty within law, responsive to the changing needs of an everchanging society. In the free encounter between different groups in this "new land" America, the rule of law is tested and the good in many heritages is drawn upon. All that we have, our cherished belief in individual liberty, our religious freedom, our free spirit, all are our responsibility, ours to exercise, ours to enhance.

Each person affirms his heritage or harms it. There is no middle ground. Use your personal freedom creatively and positively. Become involved in active concern for other people. Be involved in the democratic process, for involvement is the lifeblood of all our heritages and is the guarantee of our freedom in years to come.

'Last Campaign' fails on all counts

THE LAST CAMPAIGN: GRANT SAVES THE UNION. By Earl Schenck Miers. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1972. 213 Pags. $7.95.

By John G. Fowler Jr.

Unlike America's two most recent wars, there was no winding-down of the Civil War, no stalemated lines with limited probes of the enemy, no disengagements and troop drawdowns. Instead, the final year of the Civil War was marked by some of its bloodiest battles as the North played its final trump — U.S. Grant — against the genius of Robert E. Lee.

The story of Grant versus Lee forms the nucleus of this book, one of "The Great Battles of History Series," which is produced under the general editorship of the noted military writer, Hanson Baldwin. Unfortunately, author Earl Miers attempted too much — to shape and oversee his narrative through the four central figures of the war's final phases (Lincoln, Grant, Davis, Lee) — and fails on all counts.

Davis, Lee and Lincoln are treated in the skimpiest of terms, with few insights offered into their characters and the motivations behind their extraordinarily difficult positions. Davis appears too infrequently, and nothing is said of his efforts to rally a desperate Confederacy, to instill and bolster morale amid a war-weary people.

Lee encountered similar problems within his Army of Northern Virginia: widespread desertions, AWOLs, loss of experienced leadership, fighting a campaign with initiative lost, all crucial facets of Lee's campaign from the Wilderness to Appomattox, all overlooked by Miers.

Lincoln does come across in better light, although his adroit juggling of issues, politicians, military affairs, and the homefront throughout 1864 (an election year) receives scant notice and lesser appreciation in this history.

Miers concentrates primarily — and correctly — on Grant. But even when he does this, his portrait of Grant as an unimaginative plodder, waging a terrible war of attrition, shows a lack of understanding and appreciation for Grant's overall strategy of coordinated action on all fronts: from Banks toward Mobile; Siegel in the Shenandoah Valley, Sherman against Johnston.

Grant's aim of total war against all the resources of the Confederacy highlighted the farsighted vision and good judgment that studded his earlier Civil War experiences. He made mistakes along the way, certainly, but he profited from them, and by Cold Harbor had Lee completely on the defensive, locked in vise-like grip which Lee could not shake and which Grant tightened relentlessly to its conclusion.

The battles in the Wilderness, the "Bloody Angle" at Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, and the "crater" at Petersburg are well-known and Miers, to his credit, has done them justice. Conversely, Sherman's march to the sea rates only two paragraphs, although it had a tremendous impact on the war in Virginia, and his subsequent campaign northward into the Carolinas isn't even mentioned.

And, finally, the North's organizational capacity to raise, train, equip, and speed troops with timely dispatch to the sound of the guns was vital in the last year of the war, as Allan Nevins has told us in "The War for the Union," but, again, Miers overlooked this important facet, and ended, overall, with a narrative of little note and lesser value.

Stay in shape during

Recycle the Bayonet

Don't give up "staying in shape" just because the warm and sunny weather has replaced itself with cold, miserable and wet weather, advises the personnel who control the six gymnasium facilities available on post.

Located on Main Post, Kelley Hill, Sand Hill, Harmony Church, in the Headquarters Command Area and the Youth Activities Center, these facilities provide all the activities needed to "stay in shape" until warmer weather warrants running and exercising outdoors again.

Basketball, volleyball, handball, paddleball, squash, and weightlifting are a few of the activities that go on at the gyms.

If swimming is your thing, the Briant Wells Fieldhouse plans to open its indoor swimming pool at the beginning of the year. This will be great opportunity for personnel to continue in the Swim for Your Life Program.

Sauna baths and showers are available at most of the gyms for those weary muscles after a long workout.

The gyms provide equipment, such as tennis shoes, tennis rackets, handballs, handball gloves, basketballs and volleyballs.

WHY didn't I get promoted?

It happens every time a promotion list is published. Letters by the score arrive at MILPERCEN, DCSPER, SMA and at a dozen other addresses.

They all read alike. Only the names and service numbers are different. Each seeks an answer to the gnawing, imponderable question: Why didn't I get promoted?

The letters are written by good soldiers who believe they are doing their best.

Take this one from an old soldier in Third Army:

"Upon completion of the last E-9 promotion board, I found it hard to believe my name did not appear. I know my records should be clear. I am dumb-founded as to why I was not selected. I would appreciate a complete records audit and any help and/or advice you could give towards bettering myself. Being a trouble-shooting First Sergeant, it's hard to get away to take care of personal business, especially so far away . . ."

Or this one from an E-6 stationed in Germany:

"I've checked the last promotion list for E-7s and it seems my name is not on it. I've tried to find out what I needed through my chain of command and I feel I received an unsatisfactory answer . . ."

An E-8 in the mid-West put his question point-blank: "Who on God's green earth can tell me why I wasn't selected for promotion?"

There is a poignancy in each letter. Each soldier is career motivated. Each perceives himself as having "done the job" and more. Each perceives himself as having given the Army his best.

Possible Indicators

Let's examine the OMPF file of each of these NCOs and see what may have been the reason for non-selection. Keep in mind we are only looking at possible indicators in the file. We do not know what discussion went on among promotion board members as they voted on the merits of each soldier in the zone of consideration.

First, the busy first sergeant. He's 45-years old and has 27 years service. His file dates back to 1947. He served first in the Navy, then joined the Army. With the exception of minor breaks in service, he has been Regular Army all the way. His file contains MOS evaluations dating to 1960 and efficiency reports from 1964. The most recent MOS test score reads 126 for his primary (15Z50) and 94 for his secondary (71L50). His file contains several letters of commendation and appreciation. Frankly the file looks good. But — for some reason — he was not selected. Possible reasons are:

— Low secondary MOS score.

— Enlisted Efficiency Report Weighted Average (EERWA) was only 119 at the time the board convened and 119 was average for E-8s Army-wide at that time.

— Minimal effort to attend any military schools and no effort to strengthen his civilian education since his 1953 GED equivalency.

— In three more years, QMP will require him to retire. What is his real potential and contribution as an E-9?

These factors plus a 15-25 per cent selection rate may have influenced non-selection.

Next, the staff sergeant stationed in Germany. Possible reasons for his non-selection to E-7:

— Average and below average PMOS evaluation test scores.

— Neither qualified for nor been awarded a secondary MOS as required by current directives. (It's a must for E-6 and above.)

— A recent Article 15 (for a serious offense).

— An EER for July to January that boasted three excellent ratings and three above average. The rater marked him in the middle of "promote ahead" and "promote with" contemporaries.

— the file shows attendance at an NCO academy in 1970 and a leadership course in 1973.

— DA Form 20 says high school GED equivalency in 1969 but nothing in the OMPF to back it up. The file does show he tried and failed a GED test in 1962.

— No effort to further civilian education despite proximity to education centers in the last five years.

These factors should not be considered decisive. But when only 20-35 per cent can be selected from an outstanding field, everything in the file assumes added significance.

Now, let's examine the OMPF of the E-8 in the mid-West. He faced tough competition. Only the top 20 per cent could be selected when his records came before the E-9 promotion board.

—EERWA of 109. A weighted score of 121 is average for his grade.

— The last EER considered by the board showed five "excellents" and one "outstanding." Earlier EERs had been max. Performance has been slipping since November 71.

— PMOS score was 105 when the board looked at his file. That's barely average for his grade, skill level and MOS. (Since then, his MOS score dropped to 95. He won't even be considered by the Sergeants Major Academy board when it meets.)

— PMOS proficiency scores have been dropping since 1971; SMOS score of 84 is well below average.

Past Laurels Not Enough

The chief of his division in the career management field pointed these factors out in a letter and added "I am telling you as gently as I can that you are currently non-competitive for promotion, in my personal view. Past laurels will not get you to E-9; if you really want it, then get to work. No one else is going to do it for you."

Analysis of these three files points up reasons why a non-com may not have been selected for promotion:

— Low EERs.

— Low MOS scores.

— Lack of a SMOS and a good score to go with it.

— Failure to improve both military and civilian education.

— Failure to insure all awards and citations get into the OMPF.

Each of these areas can be corrected by the soldier — if he really wants to get promoted.

As an eager E-5 wrote recently:

"I enjoy my job, I relish the pressure, and the hours are only a challenge. . . . But can you explain to me why I'm still an E-5 . . . I could have been promoted three times in the last eight months in my SMOS. Explain this to me. I still have a positive mental attitude, yet I'm positive that I am being screwed to the wall. Have no fear, for as I walk deeper into the valley of death, I will not quit. No demon will drive me to my knees. My next year will be more productive than my first. But what is my reward?" He got it.

He's been E-6 for some time now. And — he's driving hard for E-7. (ANF)

The Christmas Season is a very special time at Westville, the village where it is always 1850, located on the outskirts of Lumpkin, GA.

Already, candles are being dipped and molded for lighting the Westville buildings and bright yarn dolls are being made to decorate the Christmas tree.

Later, fruit, native greens, and berries will be brought to the various outbuildings of the village to be used in wreaths and garlands. Gingerbread men will be made and popcorn strung.

As the day of the Annual Yule Log Ceremony draws near, activities become more frenzied; for wassail and yule log cake must be prepared to be served to the visitors.

The Lighting of the Yule Log and the Hanging of the Greens, a charming and delightful ceremony combining both holiday and holy day, will take place at Westville at 4:00 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 7. Activities begin with an exciting yule log hunt by costumed children. Then the greens are hung, the yule log is lit, carols are sung, and lastly, wassail and yule log cake are served to the visitors.

Visitors are urged to arrive early to watch the costumed craftsmen at work and to tour the various houses decorated for Christmas in the 1850 manner. The village will be open, as usual, from 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.

After the festivities at Westville, visitors are invited to drive the half mile to Lumpkin for a candlelight Christmas tour of the Beddingfield Inn, an 1836 stagecoach stop, located on the Lumpkin town square and restored by the Stewart County Historical Commission.

All events are open to the public. Lumpkin is located on U.S. Highway 27 in Southwest Georgia.

200 Years Later... Paul Revere Rides Again in Philadelphia in September and October.

The Suffolk Resolves were enacted by delegates from across Massachusetts Bay Colony as an expression of militant opposition to punitive legislation such as the "Intolerable Acts" imposed on that colony by the British Parliament.

A relay of horsemen recreated Revere's rush to the First Continental Congress with the Suffolk Resolves, a document which played an important role in directing American opinion toward revolution.

Revere's ride, two hundred years ago this past September, came seven months before his more famous midnight ride of April 19, 1775. The recreation of the earlier ride was in conjunction with the eight week celebration of the Bicentennial of the First Continental Congress held

Two hundred years of transportation progress forced some departures from the route taken by Paul Revere, and safe horsemanship along today's highways permitted daytime riding only. Thus, the 1974 ride took a day longer than it did in 1774. Another difference from the original ride is that over 60 horsemen did Revere's work in relay.

The ride was designed to spread the word that the American Revolution Bicentennial is already here and to encourage its celebration everywhere.

197th returns from 'Label Cleaver'

The 197th Inf Bde returned to Ft. Benning this week from Ft. Stewart, GA after a week-long Field Training Exercise (FTX) dubbed "Label Cleaver."

Advance elements of the brigade arrived at Ft. Stewart Nov. 12 to receive the main body of the "Forever Forward" soldiers throughout the week, with the last elements arriving Nov. 15.

"Label Cleaver" was the first 197th full scale field training exercise off the Ft. Benning military reservation.

Final preparation and occupation of initial tactical positions commenced Nov. 16 and the battle was on when the 1st Bn (Abn) 325th Inf of the 82nd Abn Div from Ft. Bragg, N.C. made an airmobile landing and a parachute drop into the exercise area Nov. 18. The "battle" raged continuously for the next five days, ending Nov. 22.

According to COL Joseph E. Waslak, commander of the 197th Inf Bde, "Tactical operations during the exercise included employment of four troops in all tactical roles, the use of all available fire support agencies, electronic warfare operations to counter a sophisticated electronic warfare threat, the use of tactical communications systems and collection, reporting, evaluation and dissemination of tactical intelligence."

The brigade received its anticipated tough

'battle' with the airborne unit, which served as the aggressor force during the exercise (see battle log).

Control for the exercise was provided jointly by the 197th Inf Bde and the 82nd Abn Div. Control teams had the primary mission of controlling the tactical play, issuing appropriate orders and messages based on the scenario already developed, to insure maximum training benefit was received by both sides.

The 197th Inf Bde's primary objectives during "Label Cleaver" were to provide: training for the deployment of the 197th Inf Bde and to develop data and tie factors for future deployments; training in the planning and conduct of airmobile, mechanized and armored operations; training in the planning, integration and provision of all types of fire support.

Other primary objectives were: utilizing the problem as a vehicle for planning and conduct of combat support and combat service support operations; training in planning for and conduct of electronic warfare (EW) operations in an active EW environment; training in the planning for and employment of tactical communications and training in the planning for, acquisition, processing, dissemination and use of intelligence information.

Supported by the 121st Avn Co and the 497th Avn Co, the brigade conducted airmobile operations to include insertion and extraction of the 3/7th Inf and the extraction of some elements of the 2/10th FA during the delay phases of the FTX.

The FTX scenario was based around a struggle for territorial control between a small, Third World Country called Rowanda, and Karibo, a country with a large, powerful army trained and equipped by Aggressorland (82nd Abn).

The 197th Inf Bde was alerted and landed at the Port of Savannah to provide security for the evacuation of U.S. citizens from Rowanda.

Immediately upon U.S. intervention, Karibo Armed Forces (KAF) assisted by Aggressor Forces move into Rowanda. From this point the tactical situation for FTX "Label Cleaver" was developed.

During the course of the exercise the brigade commander and his staff, and the subordinate commanders and their staffs were required to plan and conduct defensive operations, reconnaissance in force, coordinated attacks, withdrawals and delays, airmobile operation and rear area protection operations. In addition the 197th Spt Bn was required to undergo its Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT), an annual requirement for all combat and combat service support units.

SP4 Jimmison Lee, 72nd Engineers, provides the 197th Inf Bde with combat engineer support, stringing barbed wire.

SGT Melvin Houston, HHC, 197th Inf Bde, guards the dismount point at the brigade's command post.

Infantrymen of Co B, 3rd Bn, 7th Inf run for the tree line during an airmobile operation.

A tank crew of the 2/69th Armor proceeds through mud and rain during an attack on aggressor positions.

Airborne parachutists of the 1st Bn (ABN), 325 Inf, 82nd Abn Div jump from C-130 aircraft to begin tactical play.

A gun crew of the 2/10th FA moves to a new location, towing a 105mm howitzer.

PFC Harold Ellis (front) and PFC Alex A. Hill Jr., both of the Redeye Section, Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th Inf, await enemy aircraft as they provide cover for a 197th Inf Bde airmobile operation during FTX "Label Cleaver."

An armored personnel carrier of the 1/58th Inf and tanks of the 2/69th Armor proceed to the objective during the daylight attack.

Label Cleaver Battle Log

Monday, Nov 18 — The 197th Inf Bde occupies defensive positions with the 3/7th Inf and the 1/58th Inf occupying the forward edge of the battle area. The 2/69th Armor in reserve with Troop A, 15th Cav occupying the general outpost. The 2/10th FA provides artillery support while the 197th Sp Bn provides combat service support, and the 72d Eng Co provides engineer support. The brigade aviation section and the 121st Avn Co provide aerial reconnaissance support. The aggressor force, 1st Bn (Airborne), 325 Inf makes an airmobile landing with one half of its troops at 11 a.m. The remaining force conducts a parachute drop into the Taylor Creek area at 4 p.m. The "battle" is on.

Tuesday, Nov 19 — The 197th Inf Bde conducts a reconnaissance in force with elements of the 2/69th Armor and a mechanized company of the 1/58th Inf to seize an aggressor position and develop intelligence on the aggressor force. The aggressor conducts an unsuccessful company size airmobile assault on the 197th Spt Bn. Aggressor forces are driven off as the brigade's support troops demonstrate their fighting ability, capturing half of the aggressor force in the process.

Wednesday, Nov 20 — The 197th Inf Bde conducts a daylight attack with the 2/69th Armor executing a passage of lines through the 3/7th Inf, and making the main attack to seize two objectives. The 1/58th Inf makes the supporting attack to seize two objectives while the 3/7th Inf conducts an airmobile attack. With all objectives secured, the 3/7th Inf conducts a night ground attack to cut-off retreating aggressor forces. The 2/10th FA provides artillery fire support throughout all attack phases.

Thursday, Nov 21 — The aggressor force gains the initiative and the 197th Inf Bde conducts delaying operations with the 1/58th Inf and the 2/69th Armor. The 3/7th Inf and some elements of the 2/10th FA are extracted from the area by the 121st and 487th Aviation Cos. The 197th establishes new defensive positions.

Friday, Nov 22 — The aggressor force attacks the brigade in its new defensive positions and penetrates the lines of the 1/58th Inf and the 3/7th Inf. The brigade conducts a counterattack with the 2/69th Armor and Troop A, 15th Cav and restores its front line defensive positions. FTX Label Cleaver terminates.

Roads to college still open

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Many avenues remain open to the soldier wishing to get through college, although the enlisted degree completion program, Bootstrap, has been closed for the rest of FY 75.

The fully funded enlisted education program gives qualified soldiers as much as two years of schooling in one of five disciplines: business administration, engineering, computer science, law enforcement and court reporting.

The fully funded program is highly competitive requiring selection by an Army board. Check Army regulation 621-I for details.

The fellowship, scholarship or grant program allows qualified soldiers to apply for and accept fellowships, scholarships or grants offered by corporations, foundations, funds or educational institutions organized primarily for scientific or educational purposes.

The program gives outstanding soldiers an opportunity to study for two years in disciplines of functional use to the Army. Army regulation 621-7 has details.

Other educational opportunities are open through local installations and other educational programs. The servicemen's opportunity college (SOC) provides the means for soldiers to study at colleges through non-traditional means.

The external degree program gives an alternate route to a college degree for soldiers who are unable to attend classroom courses.

Tuition assistance is also available to enlisted soldiers. Appropriated funds can be used to pay up to 75 per cent of a soldier's tuition when attending classes during off-duty hours. Check Army regulation 621-5 for details of these latter three programs.

Why unleaded Gas?

The end is in sight for leaded gas nationally partly because a joint study involving Rutgers and the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry uncovered atmospheric lead as an important source of poisoning in the blood of children.

A team of doctors from these institutions became curious about the reason for the lead content in the blood of 5,226 Newark, New Jersey, children. Previous off-the-cuff analysis had implicated only chips of peeling lead paint being eaten by the youngsters. Curiosity grew into a hunch which led the team to study the possible relationship between traffic density on streets where these children lived, and the lead content in their blood.

Considered as a whole, 35 per cent of the children had levels of lead in the blood that approached the minimum to be called "poisoning." Examined from the standpoint of nearness to traffic, 32 per cent of the affected children lived less than 200 feet from a roadway. More than 57 per cent of children residing within 100 feet of the roadway had high blood-lead levels.

These findings played a significant role in the report of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency which set up regulations on automobile emissions incorporated in the Clean Air Act.

This Act required that gas stations make unleaded gas available by 1 July and that national use of leaded gas be reduced by 50 per cent by 1975. Thus, many 1975 automobiles are equipped with restricted gas tank fillers necks, allowing the use of unleaded gas only, and catalytic converters to reduce further exhaust emissions.

The research team studying blood lead content is now focusing on the possible influence of lead on learning ability, suggesting that test scores might be correlated with the distance students live from highways that have high density automobile exhausts.

Thus, the long range effects of lead additives in gasoline are far greater than the short range objective which added lead to stop engine knock. (AFPS)

How did you get that goat?

QUESTION: State your name, 2LT Morris A. Perice

QUESTION: And, Morris, who are you assigned to now?

I'm in 24th Company here.

QUESTION: And when did you graduate from West Point?

In 1974, in June.

QUESTION: Can you relate the story behind what led up to the theft and the actual operation of stealing the Navy Goat?

Well, during my second class summer at West Point we were trying to make the coming year more interesting than past years had been. And in the history of West Point it had been noted that the rivalry between Army and Navy was quite strong at times so we hit upon the idea of stealing the Navy's goat. It was their mascot.

This has been done previously, we felt it was time it was done again. So, we set out in our plans and as the fall progressed and we got into football season, we did some intelligence work to find out where they kept the goat and how they guarded it and we had heard rumors that it was guarded by a platoon of Marines and all this. So we wanted to make some pretty good plans if we were going to snatch it.

We found out that it was kept near the Naval Academy at Annapolis, but not on the campus. As a matter of fact it was kept about a mile from Ft. Meade, Maryland, and very convenient. So we went down there one weekend, myself and a friend of mine, and scouted it out. It was a very simple operation — we just went and rented a U-Haul truck and backed it up and got a pair of wire cutters and cut the three fences and stole the goat. The next day we drove it up to a place about 100 miles from West Point where a guy in my company had a farm.

For the next six weeks we commenced to move it about every 3 or 4 days so nobody would get wise to this new stranger in the neighborhood. We wanted to keep it quiet that we had it, so we didn't tell anybody in charge. Being cadets we didn't tell any officers, just other cadets.

One of the things we did was take a picture of the goat. The day after we had stolen the goat — or the day before — was the day Navy played Air Force, and Navy lost. So I sent a letter back to some friends of mine at Ft. Carson and told them just to drop this letter in the mailbox so it would have a Colorado Springs postmark. And it had a picture of the goat with a letter representing to be from the Air Force Academy saying sorry about your goat.

As it turned out, this worked very well and they, for quite a few weeks, thought the Air Force had it, even though nobody in the Air Force knew anything about it. But that's where they thought their goat was.

Even best kept secrets are found out and my tactical officer was the last person to find out, and, naturally, he took all the credit for it. Anyway, the week before the game we brought the goat down to West Point and locked it in one of the trunk rooms where we had a big rally that posted a near riot condition in our messhall and 4,000 cadets all throwing things at this goat and everything.

There were midshipmen up there trying to get the goat back and we were running all around the MP's guarding it and we got through that part all right, showing the goat off and had pictures and movies made of it.

Then we took it down to Navy to Philadelphia and kept it in the quartermaster depot overnight and we had six MP's guarding it and, low and behold, the Commandant of the Midshipmen of the Naval Academy happened to show up using his two stars as a pretext of authority to get his goat back.

The next day we made up for it by soundly trouncing the Navy team. It all worked out to our benefit because we got a good time out of it and lifted everybody's morale. That following Christmas on the last day of our Christmas leave, the same bunch of us went back to the place where they kept the goat and again we stole that goat.

This time we did not intend to keep it, we just took it back to Admiral Zumwalt's house in Washington when he was Chief of Naval Operations and talked our way into the Naval Observatory where he lived, which is supposedly a high security installation, and we staked it on Admiral Zumwalt's front lawn. I, myself, spent three hours walking punishment tours at West Point for this, but it was well worth it, I think.

QUESTION: Did the senior cadets know what you were doing the first time that you took the goat?

Not really, it was just something we thought of and did ourselves.

QUESTION: And you had privileges to get off campus? Yes.

Are you a Micropterus salmoides addict?

By David R. Deutscher

Our society is faced with an epidemic for which there is no known cure. I am referring to Micropterus salmoides; more commonly known in "street" language as the largemouth bass.

Pharmacologically, little is known about the bass except that rate of addiction is high and can affect Americans of all ages, sex, creed and color.

Are you a bassin' addict? Let's look at the symptoms of addiction.

Misconceptions can kill you. There are people who believe that the bass addict actually enjoys his sport. The fact is that we have a deadly fear of the bassing trip. We pray for the day when we could drive past a fertile lake without reaching for a rod.

Willpower is the greatest misconception of all. "Why don't you catch just one or two bass and then stop?" Willpower has nothing to do with the effects of bass upon the body and the emotions of the excessive basser. Once we have taken that first bass, there is set up in our bodies a physical, as well as a psychological, need for more.

Another misconception is that bass addicts fish to escape reality. I use fishing to help me get more out of life — not to escape it. Some addicts claim they fish to calm down and escape the pressures of everyday hustle and bustle. Striking bass have accounted for more than one cardiac arrest since the development of the top-water plug.

Another misconception is that a person can't be an addict if they fish only with tiny spinners for yearling bass. A diabetic is a diabetic whether he takes a small or a large dose of insulin.

So, when I speak of the bass addict, I am speaking of anyone who is having consistent trouble within certain areas of his living that can be directly or indirectly traced to fishing.

Problem fishing hits the victim in four ways. He has symptoms of physical, psychological, social and spiritual maladjustment.

PHYSICAL SYMPTOMS: You may not necessarily show any advanced signs of physical deterioration; that is, your eyes aren't bulging and there are no gill covers growing from the upper neck. But you do have loose fish scales stuck to your eyebrows. As summer progresses your skin gets increasingly dried, cracked and blistered. Your thumb is chafed from dehooking deeply imbedded lures. You smell suspiciously of anise oil after a long lunch break. Your liver is swelling from guzzling beer in the seven-ounce bottle between casts. You don't sleep well on nights prior to a fishing trip.

PSYCHOLOGICAL SYMPTOMS: You worry about your performance in the last tournament, or how you felt yesterday when Bill topped your eight pounder. Or worse, you remember vividly what you said, and your remorse is accompanied by an anxiety about tomorrow. You feel guilty about spending grocery money on genuine, hand-carved, balsawood alphabet plugs. You dislike yourself for leaving your wife stranded in the cabin on vacations. And now you don't like to talk about all the fishing you're doing, because you're scared.

You're edgy. You fear insanity except when on the lake or in the john with the most recent copy of Bassmasters Monthly. You are out of control. You make excuses to miss work. You develop enormous egocentricity.

SOCIAL SYMPTOMS: Your wife, your close friends, your relatives seem to always be on your back about your fishing. Because they "don't understand," you move on or close yourself off. You begin to lose interest in things around you. Your only satisfaction comes from dragging a bucketmouth out of the brush.

There is no known cure for bass addiction. I once read that wives could hide decaying fish heads under their spouses' pillow or could soak dorsal fins in his morning coffee. The purpose is to sicken the addict with the very taste and smell of bass. This so-called cure is false. Many bass addicts hate the taste of fish. He's not fishing for table fare.

Another professed cure is to sabotage his tackle. File grooves in his line guides; strip the drag on his reel; bake his leader under an infra-red lamp. Theoretically, he would come to hate fishing after losing every fish that bit. But we addicts will continue bassin' regardless of the cost to us emotionally and financially.

Ouchless.

Infantry Bowl showdown coming up

After a brief respite to woof down turkey and dressing and say thanks for the American way of life, Ft. Benning's best athletes get back to serious preparations today for their annual gridiron showdown known as the Infantry Bowl.

The game pits the USAIS Staff and Faculty against the USAIS Students and kickoff is set for noon on Dec. 14 at Doughboy Stadium. All proceeds derived from admission donations and concessions will be funnelled into the post Youth Activities program.

Benning Judo Club travels to Atlanta

Members of the Ft. Benning Judo Club participated in the Northside YMCA Open Judo Tournament in Atlanta last Saturday.

Benning Judo Clubbers captured five first, three second and three third places in the tournament.

In second places were; SGT Andy Connelly, 154 pound class, Jeffery Dean, 14 year old lightweight class and Buddy Burby, 7 year old class.

Third place honors went to CPT Bernard Funke, 154 pound class, J. R. Grimes, 7 year old class and Freda Burby, girls lightweight.

Coaches LTC Wayne Boles of the Staff and Faculty and LTC Jack Barham of the Students have been working their squads for two weeks now, but because of various conflicts with practice schedules, still aren't completely familiar with their personnel.

Barham reports as many as 60 athletes for some practices while as few as 40 have shown up for other workouts. The number of troops in the Staff and Faculty camp, meanwhile, has ranged from 45 to 50.

"I haven't had a chance to make a player evaluation yet," explained Barham early this week. "We've been working mostly on throwing and running thus far and I'm encouraged by our backfield potential. But we seem to have a distinct weakness in the offensive line because nobody wants to play those positions."

Although Boles isn't quite ready to challenge the Miami Dolphins, he appears much more confident at this stage than his counterpart.

"Things are looking pretty good," he reported in mid-week. "Our linemen and fullbacks, in particular, have looked good in practice and most of our people are in better condition than I had hoped at this point."

Another contributing factor to Boles' optimism is the fact that seven starters off last year's victorious Staff and Faculty team are back again this year, including "best offensive player" Richard Fluharty, and "best defensive player" Vernon Frlot.

Be the hunter,
not the hunted

For every sportsman, the 1974 hunting season promises the enjoyment of man's closeness to nature, the thrill of the hunt, and the relaxation and comradeship shared at the end of a day's successful outing; however, all of the pleasure of hunting can become a catastrophe if the principles of weapons safety are not observed both at home and in the field.

Listed below are some tips which must be observed:

1. "NEVER presume that a weapon is empty" is one of the oldest maxims that goes without saying.
2. Keep weapons pointed in a safe direction at all times.
3. Ensure proper functioning of all safety devices and keep the "Safety" on until ready to shoot.
4. Know the operation of the weapon being used. If you load your own ammunition, adhere to the limits prescribed in the reloader's manuals.

5. Unload the weapon prior to entering vehicles, crossing fences, jumping obstacles, etc.

6. Store weapons and ammunition separately.

7. Keep weapons out of the reach of children.

8. Never fire a rifle at water or hard, flat surfaces.

9. Use good, sound, common sense whenever dealing with weapons. "SOUND SHOOTING" is both dangerous and poor sportsmanship. Always identify your target.

10. Save the alcoholic beverages until the completion of the hunt and after the weapons are unloaded and put safely away. (AFPS)

The more you drink, the more coordination you lose. That's a fact, plain and simple. Still, people drink too much and then go out and expect to handle a car. When you drink too much you can't handle a car. You can't even handle a pen.

Statute of limitations may run out on hijacker

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It has been three years since the skyjacker called Dan Cooper parachuted from a Northwest Airlines jet with $200,000 in ransom money and wrote himself into the folklore of the Pacific Northwest. Two more and he'll be home free — if he's alive. "The federal statute of limitations on that crime is five years," said Sidney Lezak, U.S. attorney in Portland.

According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, Cooper is the only person ever to hijack a domestic airliner who has not been killed or brought to justice.

"We know nothing more about him today than we did at 11 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 24, 1971," says Julius Mattson, special agent in charge of the Portland FBI office. "I just wish we had something to go on. We don't have a thing. Just a big zero."

These are the events of that Thanksgiving Eve as authorities reconstructed them:

A man who gave his name as Dan Cooper bought a one-way ticket at Portland International Airport to Seattle aboard Northwest Airlines flight 305 which originated in Washington, D.C. No antihijacking measures were in operation as the 38 passengers boarded the Boeing 727 for the 25-minute flight.

In the air, Cooper handed stewardess Tina Mucklow a note saying he had a bomb. Following Cooper's orders, Miss Mucklow sat beside him and wrote down instructions to the pilot.

He wanted 10,000 $20 bills to be delivered to him at Seattle in a laundry sack, along with two sets of parachutes. Otherwise, he would blow up the plane, he said. Airline officials and FBI agents complied and Cooper allowed the passengers and two of the three stewardesses to disembark at Seattle.

Then he ordered the plane to fly south to Reno, Nev., at 200 miles per hour, at 10,000 feet, flaps down. The crew was to stay in the cockpit.

After takeoff from Seattle, a red light flashed in the cockpit indicating the plane's rear boarding ramp had been unlatched.

Nothing was heard from

Cooper for about 20 minutes. At 8:10 p.m., as the plane crossed the Lewis River in southwestern Washington, Capt. William Scott thought the skyjacker was having trouble with the ramp and called back over the plane's interphone:

"Anything we can do for you?" There was no answer. Another light flashed showing the ramp was fully extended. A few seconds later Cooper came back on the interphone: "No."

That was the last ever heard of him.

When the plane landed in Reno, the rear ramp was down and Cooper was gone. The 21-pound sack of money was gone.

Pearl Harbor

A SGM reminisces that fateful Sunday morning

It was about 7:45 on Sunday morning, December 7, 1941, and 18-year-old Henry Hasson, a civil service employee at the time, was three decks below topside of the battleship "Pennsylvania" then docked at Pearl Harbor.

Suddenly he and his co-workers, welders and chippers, were startled by explosions above.

"At first we thought the explosions were caused internally," related Hasson, now a 51-year-old Sergeant Major with the 197th Infantry Brigade, on the eve of the 33rd anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. "Then we heard the alarm and knew we were under attack," he recalled. "There was so much confusion that all we thought about at first was getting off the ship. But after the initial shock, we went to work fighting fires."

Hasson is the only known witness of the attack now on active military duty at Ft. Benning. He joined the Army in 1945 and after 30 years of service, will retire from active duty early next year.

"We were in dry-dock at the time," he continues. "So we weren't hit as hard as some of the other ships in the bay. We saw the "Arizona" go under and the "Oklahoma" capsized and several other ships hit hard."

After the initial shock, according to Hasson, military personnel aboard the "Pennsylvania" reacted in "an outstanding manner."

"We didn't return the fire immediately, but when the second wave of aircraft came in, many of our guns started firing. I didn't see but two enemy aircrafts go down, but I understand that we shot down 25 or 30 during the attack," he said.

SGM Hasson's retirement plans include a brief stopover at his home in Colorado. But he plans to eventually return to Hawaii, where he owns a small tract of land and intends to spend his retirement years.

'Do-it-yourself' moving plan to be tested

Have you ever wished there was some way you could just up and move yourself at PCS time? Well there may be a solution to part of your "PCS blues."

The Army soon is going to test a "do-it-yourself" moving program at six installations: Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort Gordon, Ga.; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Lexington Blue Grass Army Depot, Ky.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; and Fort Eustis, Va.

The program works like this: under the new self-moving option, a soldier will use a rental truck to move his household goods locally or cross-country to the next duty station. First, you'd contact the local transportation officer (TO). He'll tell you if you're eligible and help compute your moving needs.

Next, the TO arranges the details with the truck rental contractor; he also computes mileage for cross-country moves. The contractor, upon request, figures the best route, travel time and gives you a cash allowance to cover enroute fuel; and servicing expenses.

Everything now should be set to pick up the truck; the contractor furnishes the packing material. You can hire help and be reimbursed for it — but you can't hire relatives. Family members can travel with you and still receive a travel allowance. You pay for tow bar rental if you tow your car.

On the road, save your receipts; if you exceed your cash allowance, you'll be reimbursed. Minor route deviations — 10 per cent or 50 miles — can be made if you want to visit or sightsee.

At journey's end, you move into your quarters if they're ready. In emergency cases when quarters are not ready, the destination TO will put your household goods into storage at government expense.

Once the truck's unloaded, turn it in to the contractor's representative. Settle up and you're finished. Claims for non-negligent damage can be filed like you would for a commercial firm move.

If the test program is successful it may be expanded CONUS-wide. (ANF)

AUSA making world-wide friends

The Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), is making friends all over the world through its program of recognizing allied officers who attend The Infantry School.

In a program initiated by past Chapter president LeGrand Hinson, departing allied officers are presented certificates of honorary membership in the Chapter. The handsome certificates are signed by president Joe Windsor and presented at a formal ceremony by Chapter officers.

According to Hinson, the purpose of the program is to acquaint the foreign visitor with AUSA and present him with a lasting reminder of his visit to Ft. Benning.

The certificates are given "for outstanding and significant contributions of ideas and suggestions to the Infantry of the United States Army."

Suitable for framing, the certificates are

Emergency phones installed at MAH

An emergency telephone network connecting Martin Army Hospital with the Columbus Medical Center, the Columbus Rescue Squad and the police and fire departments of both Columbus and Phenix City is now in operation around the clock.

During a briefing of Martin Army Hospital personnel, Rescue Squad Chief Lloyd Booth said the new system "will save lives by speeding the connection between ambulances and the designated hospitals."

"Hospital personnel will have vital information concerning the victim's condition and will be prepared to give proper treatment to the victim on arrival," continued Booth.

All conversations transmitted by the system will be recorded on tape, according to Booth, as a safeguard against possible legal action regarding treatment of patients.

During their stay at Ft. Benning, Allied students and their families engage in a number of other activities under sponsorship of the local AUSA chapter. This year, due to efforts of chapter members, 160 Allied officers and their families were guests at a western-style rodeo sponsored by the local Jaycees, 119 attended the Chattahoochee Valley Fair, and 115 were guests at the annual Shrine Circus.

Also, AUSA members coordinate with a local Kiwanis Club in inviting Allied officers to an Oyster Roast held each year downtown.

KIRTLAND'S WARBLER

(Dendroica kirtlandi)
Probably fewer than 300 pairs of these birds remain. They spend the winter in the Bahamas Islands. They only nest in the sandhills of northern Michigan. They build nests on the ground under stands of young jack pines which reseed themselves only after a fire pops the seeds open. Special controlled burning is one effort being taken to help maintain jack pine nesting areas for Kirtland's warbler.

If you'd like to SAVE A LIVING THING, you can help. The National Wildlife Federation and your local Audubon Society are sponsoring an Eagle Range as part of the National Wildlife Refuge System. To contribute, send your contribution to the Federation, Department of Zoology, 1419 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004.

"The Army's been good to this Army wife."

Mrs. Vera Coles, whose husband's a tanker, likes the Army. And likes to talk about it.

"Charlie wasn't in the Army when we first got married. But after a while we decided to give Army life a try."

"One of his reasons for joining, and for reenlisting, is college. He says that although it might take a little longer in the Army, it's easier, and a whole lot cheaper."

"The medical benefits are important to us, too. Our bills would have been impossible as civilians. Plus, the doctors have been outstanding. You know, they don't treat you like you're just another case."

"But basically, we're staying in because we're happy here, as a family. And I think that's the best reason of all!"

Today's Army gets better every time a good family reenlists.

Swamp living includes telephone

Picking up the telephone to call a friend or the corner grocer comes as a natural thing, but what do you do for a phone if you are in the middle of the swamp? That problem is solved by the men of the Communication Platoon, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde.

"The field-wireman is the one who has the tough work. He strings the WD-1 telephone wire, connects it to the telephones, checks out the lines, makes necessary repairs, then when it's all over, that is the field problem, he picks everything up. He's the workhorse of the commo platoon," commented SGT Leroy Williams, the wire foreman of the communication platoon.

"The platoon has the capability of laying 60 miles of wire," stated LT Kevin L. Carter, platoon leader of the platoon.

Within the brigade headquarters area, the wiremen may lay up to two miles of wire; and there may be as much as 50 miles of wire strung overhead to service the units of the brigade.

"After a wireman lays or strings the required wire, he then works as a back-up switchboard operator. The switchboard remains in operation 24 hours a day," concluded LT Carter.

Another unit in the brigade communications chain is the 298th Signal Platoon.

"Our unit supports the headquarters with communications vans, TRC-145, a radio terminal set," stated LT William L. McNeese, commander of the 298th Sig Plt. "It has a multi-channel terminal capability that can take up to 24 land lines and transmits calls to higher or lower headquarters. The unit also has teletype capabilities which make up a complete telephone system for the brigade," said LT McNeese.

First NCO commander still going strong

By Mark Williamson

His short cropped hair and direct manner holds you spell-bound awaiting his next word. Everything he says seems to have more important just because he says it. He is SGM Henry Caro, commander of the newly-forming Non-Commissioned Officers School of Infantry.

Last February, SGM Caro, then a first sergeant, assumed command of 54th Stu Co, 5th Bn, with 12 cadre and 204 students.

A plan to institutionalize the NCO Education System courses began when MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning commander, set a priority for changing the image of Ft. Benning from one of a school for officers to one of the home for Infantry NCOs and officers.

Theron V. Gergen, recently retired Ft. Benning command sergeant major, originated the idea of an all NCO staffed NCO school. The plan consisted of placing first sergeants in command of NCOES training units, with SGM Caro as the first in command.

The choice of commanders for the companies was based on qualifications. The unit commander is a recent honor graduate of the Sergeant Major Academy at Ft. Bliss, TX, where he was voted by the student body as the outstanding leader of his class.

Other companies followed the example of 54th Co with SGM Caro being replaced by 1SG Charles W. Gibbs, leaving him available to fill the position as Commander of NCOSI on July 9, 1974. Jesus T. Vallagomez assumed command of 53rd Co and 1SG James R. Tidwell took over the helm of 56th Co.

Commenting on the improvement of morale since its all NCO changeover SGM Caro noted, "It has been like a shot in the arm for the NCOs in this command. Pride comes from being primarily responsible for turning out a fine product, today NCOs."

SGM Caro announced that he felt "very privileged" to be the first commander of an all NCO unit. The NCOs are adamant about not trying to take the place of commissioned officers. In fact, the aspect of proper respect and carrying out the orders of officers is a major part of the student NCOs' training.

SGM Caro expounded on the excellence of the younger NCOs, "The students have improved all the way around. We turn out better NCOs than ever before. We don't threaten the students; we relate to them because they realize that we went through the same thing they are going through. Mostly, they are career soldiers and can see themselves in our position in a few years. We are living proof that it can be done."

The sergeant major declared that the improvement in the weaker NCOs' confidence as leaders was amazing. Communication with the men is constant and is used by the commanders and cadre in a beneficial way.

"We lead by example," is the motto of the unit and the theme is constant throughout the schooling. There is nothing that the NCOs of the school ask the students to do that they, themselves haven't done and wouldn't hesitate to show the students the correct way.

As for problems in the unit which other officer-commanded units might not have, SGM Caro stated, "We are preparing to be a separate unit Dec. 16, except for the fact that 5th Bn handles all our UCMJ actions. Besides that, getting other units to accept me as a commander is sometimes difficult. Most people don't believe that there is an NCO commander in the U.S. Army."

Lighting curtailed again this year

As an energy saving measure, Christmas lighting will be curtailed again on post this year.

With the exception of Infantry Hall, exterior lighting will not be allowed in family quarter areas or on government buildings. An outdoor lighted tree will be permitted at Martin Army Hospital, and at the McGraw and LaVoie Mannor Neighborhood Centers only. Also, lighted exterior nativity scenes will be permitted at designated chapels.

All exterior lighting will be turned off at 10 p.m.

TRADOC has reserve seat in Marine NCO Academy

Since April 1974, the U.S. Marine Corps NCO Academy has reserved a seat in four of their classes for a representative of TRADOC. The course is six weeks in length and is given at the Staff Noncommissioned Officers Academy, Officer Candidates School, Marine Corps Base, Quantico, Virginia.

Competition is tough. The individual selected must be an exceptional soldier since he/she will be representing all of TRADOC's noncommissioned officers. Some of the prerequisites for attendance are that the individual is MOS qualified, a high school graduate or equivalent, has a GT score of 100 or above (waiverable to 90 by nominating installation commander for male personnel only), has character and efficiency ratings of excellent, and is physically qualified. He or she must have 12 months service remaining after graduation and must be a SGT, E-5 on the SSG, E-6 promotion list or be a SSG.

The next class starts in January, 1975 so if you think you qualify for this worthwhile program, additional information is available through your normal command channels.

Applications for the January class must be received at TRADOC Headquarters by Dec. 16.

What is an alcoholic?

How often have you heard someone say, or said yourself, "He drinks, but he's not THAT BAD yet!" Not HOW bad yet?

Many of us still cling to the fantasy that an alcoholic is that poor misbegotten individual with the bulbous red nose, bleary eyes and grubby appearance of the Skid Row bum! This sad individual constitutes only about 3% of persons who fall into the category of problem drinkers/alcoholic. AN ALCOHOLIC IS ONE WHOSE DRINKING CAUSES SERIOUS LIFE PROBLEMS! It is as simple as that!

The trick, it would seem, is to be aware of the early signs of developing alcoholism, and preventing the problem from advancing into the chronic stages.

Naturally, the most prominent symptom would be excessive drinking. However, the amount differs with the individual. The significant factor would be how much is too much for the person in question; the answer is whatever amount of alcohol causes problems for that individual. There may be indicators that your loved one is beginning to have some problems with, or because of, his drinking. If this is the case, the earlier you seek knowledge and help, the better off you and your family might be.

Beware of early danger signals — that is to say, any problem that comes into focus due to alcohol, and begin to do something about it!

The family of the alcoholic needs help the same as the alcoholic. Somehow, much comfort comes in realizing that you are not alone in the dilemmas created in an alcoholic marriage. In the world surrounding the private world you have created there are millions the same as you, living in tension under the same roof as a drinking alcoholic. The thinking of the most rational person becomes warped and the composure of the most even tempered child is shattered.

During yesteryears, it was the popular conception that alcoholism was shameful and should not occur. The mere fear of exposure could cause tension to pile on top of tension. Today many still dwell in that realm of fear, due to the belief that no one could understand the world in which they live.

More and more are now accepting the disease concept of alcoholism and many non-alcoholic family members are beginning to pool their interests and experiences to better their performances as human beings. It is extremely important for those of you who fit into this category to realize you must not be trapped in the existence of which you are now a part.

There is an agency available to you who cry for help into the emptiness of night and do not know which direction to take. We haven't the answer, or a cure for your alcoholic spouse—that he must find himself. There is hope for you, however, and that is the individual with whom we are concerned. In congregating with others who have similar fears and frustrations, life somehow becomes easier. Doors are opened to a new way of life.

Benning House is an agency not only for the person with the actual drinking or drug problem. It is a place where the family members may become involved also, even though the abuser is not interested in helping himself at this time. If it is not possible for you to help yourself here, perhaps we can refer you to another agency with which you will be more comfortable. For more information, dial 545-LIVE.

Fort Gaines features a reconstructed blockhouse

Known by the Indians as A-Con-Holloy-Way Tal-lo fa (Highland Town), Fort Gaines, Georgia had its origins as a frontier fort established by General Edmund P. Gaines in 1816. Strategically located on a bluff high above the Chattahoochee River, Fort Gaines soon became one of the most important cotton shipping points between Apalachicola, Florida and Columbus, Georgia.

Today, this Queen City of the Chattahoochee Valley's best kept secrets. Boasting a colorful past, this picturesque city is enjoying a period of prosperity made possible by an energetic citizenry and the construction of the Walter F. George Lock and Dam which forms 85 miles long Lake Eufaula, Georgia. The city is designated as a Bicentennial community.

Spanish moss draped liberally across stately old oak trees combined with antebellum homes of outstanding design bring to mind visions of the Old South. Complementing this attractive setting is the Fort Gaines frontier village consisting of restored log cabins, a reconstructed Fort Gaines blockhouse and other pioneer relics.

The Frontier Village complex will be the scene of Fort Gaines' first annual Christmas Arts and Crafts Fair on Saturday, Dec. 7, 1974 from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. EST.

The fair will offer beautiful and original crafted Christmas ornaments and gifts to those who attend. Fair-goers will be able to select distinctive Christmas decorations from several trees trimmed with handmade ornaments of wood and stained glass — some encrusted with jewels. Of unusual interest will be craft demonstrations of cane grinding and candlemaking. Terrariums, plants, dish gardens, needlepoint, aprons for men, women and children, placemats and napkins will be featured in the Garden Club booth. The rustic Cornelia Club House will be headquarters for these craft exhibitions.

In addition, the High Museum of Art in Atlanta will have the Georgia Art Bus Traveling Exhibition at the Village. The bus will provide, free of charge, artists in residence who will offer students an opportunity to observe media demonstrations and will produce their own works of art. These artists will be working from 1-5 p.m. EST in the Newt Engram house.

Fair-goers will also enjoy delicious homemade chili provided by the women of Fort Gaines Methodist Church in the Fort Gaines Recreation Hall. Serving will begin at 11:30 a.m. EST and will continue until sold out.

An unusual educational experience coupled with unparalleled family fun awaits visitors to the Fort Gaines Christmas Arts and Crafts Fair. Fort Gaines is located in southwest Georgia on Georgia Highway 39 in Clay County.

This is a view of the Fort Gaines Frontier Village, site of the first annual arts and crafts fair to be held tomorrow, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Rapid elimination to become the rule

CINCUSAREUR, Cdr TRADOC, Cdr FORSCOM, and Cdr 8th US Army have been authorized to discharge individuals under the Expeditious Discharge Program (EDP). EDP was designed to provide for the rapid elimination of substandard, unproductive soldiers who could later be selected for discharge for more serious offenses, and to relieve units of the administrative burdens normally associated with processing elimination cases.

First tested in USAREUR, the program proved to be highly effective in the early identification of soldiers considered unacceptable for further service. Unacceptable for further service can be a result of such conditions as poor attitude, lack of motivation, inability to adapt socially or emotionally or failure to demonstrate promotion potential.

This program applies to all active Army personnel, including Reserve Components who have been ordered to active duty, who have completed at least six months, but not more than 36 months, of active duty. The unique thing about this program is that the affected member must voluntarily consent to the discharge. Should he/she decline and subsequent conduct indicates that such action is warranted, members may be subject to disciplinary or administrative separation procedures under other provisions of law or regulations.

How can I get promoted?

And, verily, it gives
A precedent of hope, a spur of action
To the whole corps, if once in their remembrance
An old, deserving soldier makes his way.
—Friedrich Schiller: Wallenstein 1798

There is something on an Army post that triggers a sixth sense and announces a promotion list is about to be disclosed. It's uncanny like the way a flight of Canada geese lifts off a northern marsh and heads south, knowing Nature is about to ring down the curtain on summer and winter is only a brief intermission away.

Career soldiers know.
They know also the ecstasy and the agony inherent in each list.
Winners and losers.

For some, joy better described as astonishment. For others, dismay born of denial.

How can I get promoted?
Promotion boards are instructed to consider the whole-man as they review each file. Within this evaluation concept, five areas are clearly shaped by the soldier who intends to climb the promotion ladder.

IMPROVE MOS SCORE

First, take a look at your last PMOS score. If you're just average for your grade or a few points above average, your work is cut out for you. Average or slightly above average marks just won't hack it. Your PMOS score is 60 per cent of the weight in determining your Enlisted Evaluation Report Weighted Average (EERWA). You alone control the big end of the stick. If you pray for promotion, give some effort to improving your score. This is critical. The competition is keen if the board is told to choose the top 20 or 30 per cent. Close only counts in pennypitching and horse shoes. The solution is to study.

Impose Self-Discipline

About three months before your PMOS comes up for testing, your personnel office will have the MOS Study Guide. It's a tailor-made reference on the subjects and situations you are likely to find on the MOS test.

Get a copy of the guide and dig in. Establish a sound, systematic study program. Some soldiers pick one night a week for four hours of concentrated study. Three months later they are ready for the test. Some prepare outlines. Others develop questions which may be similar to what they expect to find on the test. The key is self-discipline. Make notes. After you study a chapter or section, close the book and mentally review what you have studied. Ask yourself: What are the key points in what I just read?

Get a good night's sleep before the test. Get up a little earlier on test day and review your notes. Go into the test with confidence knowing you are prepared and you are going to improve your score.

Max EERs

Second, strive for nothing less than an outstanding EER. If you're really a professional soldier this is already your objective. If you want to be a pro, aim high. Look for tasks that guarantee a challenge and increased responsibility. Volunteer for jobs that require ingenuity, leadership and your best effort.

Your supervisor has to rate you each year. Get together with him or her and go over your performance. Don't wait until a week before the rating is due. Find out where you stand and what you need to do to improve your performance.

Look at your personal copies of the EERs. Are you moving up or down? Why? How do you stack up in each of the six categories? If you have doubts, rate yourself low and work for improvement.

If you haven't received an EER report in the last year chances are the Enlisted Personnel Center at Ft. Benjamin Harrison doesn't have one either. If they don't have it, your promotion opportunity may be dwindling.

What happens if you get an EER you consider unfair? Take it up with the rater and reviewer. Most supervisors are generally reasonable. If a compromise can't be reached, your personnel officer can tell you how to rebut or to appeal a bad report. Redress machinery works but rest assured your request will be curried with a fine-tooth comb. Don't argue poor performance; it has a way of haunting you. If you're a pro — act like one.

Secondary MOS

Third, choose and qualify for a SMOS. It's a must for all E-6's and above. If you haven't made your preference known, better get with the program. Absence of this qualification in the OMPF of potential E-7's is hard to explain. The void may stand out during the board's review.

If you're an E-5 and you haven't opted for SMOS, better get crackin'. The sooner you choose, the sooner you can start working on qualification. High scores in PMOS and SMOS areas strengthen your case. They tell the promotion board — here's a comer. This soldier has his act together and he's going places.

Pursue Further Education

Fourth, take advantage of the opportunities for advanced military and civilian education. Although NCOES is not a requirement for promotion, it does help narrow the gap between close and selection. NCOES is now a reality and the opportunity is there. Getting tabbed for a school says this soldier is a charger; he or she wants to be a pro, wants to get ahead. Good grades will strengthen your knowledge in MOS testing, too.

How about a college course or two? Thousands of soldiers are pursuing undergraduate and graduate degrees. Some installations have fantastic arrangements with area colleges and universities. Your education center has reams of material about educational opportunities.

Awards and Achievements

Fifth, don't slough off awards and certificates of achievement. They count. Make sure copies get to your OPMF at Ft. Ben. Chances are that if you are an outstanding performer, the goodies will take care of themselves.

One thing more, make certain your OPMF contains an up-to-date photograph. It's important so the board can see what a hard-charger like you looks like. If you haven't posed for such a photo, see your personnel specialist — he can fill you in.

Finally, the most important person in the promotion process is you. It's like the old fable where two boys planned to destroy the credibility of the town's wisest man.

They caught a bird with the idea of asking the old man what they had in their hands. If the old man said, "A bird," they would reply, "Yes, but is it alive or dead." If the wise man said the bird was dead, the boys would release it. Should he say it was alive, the boys would crush it.

The confrontation came before a crowd who had gathered around the old man to listen to his wise philosophy. The youths challenged him to identify what they had in their hands.

"It is a bird," the old man replied.

"Yes," said the boys, "but is it dead or alive?"

The wise old man looked them straight in the eye and said: "It's in your hands."

So is your promotion. (ANF)

'Money Saver' a good inflation fighter

The "Money Saver," most popular inflation fighter offered at exchange retail outlets soon will be seen throughout the PX activities.

The announcement was made by MG C. W. Hospelhorn, commander of the worldwide Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), who explained that exchange personal services will begin featuring periodic Money Saver specials at selected barber and beauty shops, laundry and dry-cleaning outlets, portrait studios, florists and watch and shoe repair shops.

The specials will vary from location to location. All, however, will be identified by the familiar Money Saver piggy bank logo.

According to Gen. Hospelhorn, the expansion of the Money Saver program has progressed at a rapid pace since its inception in July 1973. "At that time, selected items, carefully chosen for their quality and low price were introduced," he said. "These were the items patrons had been searching for at discount centers — merchandise so badly needed by younger, growing families and single, lower-graded soldiers and airmen."

Based on tremendous response, AAFES continues to expand the program. Savings are offered for a wide range of men's, women's and children's clothing, small appliances, tools, luggage, dinnerware, sewing machines and many other items. AAFES now projects annual savings to the customer in Money Saver merchandise at some $18 million.

This past August, Gen. Hospelhorn unveiled

ed a new phase of the Money Saver program: specials at cafeterias and snack bars. "Already the food specials have earned wide approval from patrons," the general said.

Citing the growth of Money Savers into the personal services area, Gen. Hospelhorn indicated that AAFES hopes to continue expanding the program wherever possible. "The Money Saver program will continue to be a flexible and far-reaching one that will add popular lower-priced merchandise and services as arrangements can be made with manufacturers and AAFES concessionaires," he said.

"One thing is certain: AAFES recognizes the need to provide a hedge against the inflation that is devouring the hard-earned dollars of the serviceman and servicewoman," he said.

Getting out soon? The Army Reserve could be for you

By Leonard M. Brubaker

If you're planning to leave active duty, you don't have to lose all of that new, higher Army salary when you return to civilian life. You can take some of it with you — by joining the Army Reserve.

Congress and the President recently approved a cost-of-living increase of 5½ percent for some 3½ million federal civilian and military employees, including those in the Army Reserve.

If you join an Army Reserve unit in or near the community in which you plan to make your civilian home, you retain your present military rank and you're paid pro rata at the same scale you're now earning.

You only spend 16 hours a month — usually on one weekend — and two weeks of annual training with your unit each year. The remainder of the time you're a civilian.

For your 16 hours of monthly drill and two weeks of annual training you can earn a substantial sum of money. Even a casual reading of the newspapers will give you a good idea of how important that extra, part-time pay can be in these days of rising prices. This is especially true for someone like you who is planning to make the transition from military to civilian life.

Let's say you're a SP5 and you'll have three years service completed when you return to civilian life. If you sign up with an Army Reserve unit — there are more than 3,000 of them in about 1,000 communities across the country — you'll be paid more than $65 for your one weekend a month of training with your unit, in or near your home.

The hourly figure is even more impressive

— it comes to more than $4 an hour. For your two weeks of annual training, you're paid on your present active duty scale.

If you'd like to know more about the advantages and opportunities available to prior service men and women in the Reserve, why not drop by our office. The In-Service Recruiter headquarters is located at Bldg. 83, Rm 136. We're there every day from 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Or, if you'd like, call us at 5454132/2710.

36th mechanic's course will have first WAC graduate

PVT June A. Wileman, 444th Trans Co became the first female in the 36th Engr Grp to graduate from the Wheel Vehicle Mechanic's Course (OJT) on Dec. 2.

Not only did Wileman become the first female to complete the course, she became the "Top Honor" graduate with her standing 95 average.

The Wheel Vehicle Mechanic's Course was conducted by the 598th Lt Maint Co, 36th Engrs.

During the eight week course, soldiers are trained to become familiar with the mechanical operations of all different types of military vehicles.

"We cover every mechanical aspect of all vehicles found in Army motor pools," explained SSG Walter T. Custer, 598th Lt

Maint Co instructor, "including all types of jeeps, two and a half ton trucks, wreckers, five quarter ton trucks and M60 tracks."

Wileman stated that she became interested in automobile mechanics when she got her first car. "I wanted to be able to do my own repairs," she said, "and a lot of my experience came from learning how to order parts while working as a clerk."

She found some of the areas covered during the mechanics class to be especially interesting and challenging.

Early in the course the students are taught the fundamentals of the mechanic's responsibilities, including equipment maintenance and shop safety.

"I soon found out that there's more to being a mechanic than just being able to fix a vehicle," Wileman confessed.

"Operating and maintaining quality efficiency in a company motor pool is no easy task," she added, "but I am looking forward to the challenge of the new job."

SSG James Lyninger, instructor on universal joints and propeller shafts, commented that, "PVT Wileman displayed a lot of initiative and motivation."

He also said she showed excellent response in accepting the responsibility of a mechanic.

"Not only am I proud to have instructed her but I feel sure the other instructors share the same feelings," Custer said. "We are all equally proud of her for becoming the 'Top Honor Graduate' of her class," he concluded.

Lost birth certificate? Don't worry

Don't let a lost birth certificate or marriage license deter you from seeking benefits, the Veterans Administration today advised eligible veterans, dependents and survivors.

Officials said less formal proof of marriage and birth have been acceptable since 1971 when this information is needed to establish claims for bigger checks.

Formerly the VA required all statements of marriages and births to be supported by formalized documentary evidence, it was noted.

It was also pointed out a veterans' or widow's certified statement of marriage now is sufficient on applications for compensation and education benefits for veterans, widows and orphaned children — provided neither he nor his wife has been married before and VA has no contradictory information on file.

A certified statement also is acceptable regarding birth of a child of a veteran's marriage and as proof of age and relationship.

Robert E. Lee returns--heading south

Robert E. Lee is back in the US Army, in good standing and very close — much of the time — to general's stars.

But SP4 Robert E. Lee Jr., a great-great-grandson of the South's commander in the Civil War, is content to work for a general, not to be one.

Specialist Lee, 22, from Kansas City, Kan., is awaiting transfer to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where he will attend Pharmacy School.

He is accustomed to being asked if he's related to the Robert E. Lee as soon as people hear his name.

"I explain it," he said, "but I don't really know if they believe me." He says his family has papers tracing their lineage back to the General.

Specialist Lee was drafted in August 1972, and during basic and advanced training was repeatedly told that "anybody with a name like that should make the Army a career." He soon agreed and, while working as a water purification specialist, re-enlisted for six years.

"General" Lee as he is called (what else?) adds, "I am very proud of my name and heritage." Just how proud was evidenced recently with the arrival of a son, promptly named Robert E. Lee III.

People with famous names usually have a few funny stories to tell and Lee's favorite is an incident that happened to his father, a former Navy man.

"My father was selling insurance in Kansas and was out knocking on doors one day. At one house, he introduced himself to the man, and the fellow sort of did a double-take and then introduced himself.

"He was Ulysses S. Grant. And U. S. Grant ended up buying an insurance policy from Robert E. Lee." (ANF)

Ole Doc Sez:

Correct sore throat treatment is the answer

Howdy Bub, Billy Bob came into my office this mornin' with a mighty sore throat. Y'know, no matter what happens to Billy Bob, there is always a story connected with it.

It seems that Billy Bob took the speed-readin' course they wuz havin' down at Widder Merchant's Boardin' House. Billy Bob commenced to go through that course like a Blue Racer through a hen house. First off, he doubled his readin' speed, then he ups 'n is readin' six times what he usta read. By the time the course wuz over, he could read ten times the speed that he could afore takin' the course. When I ast Billy Bob how many words he wuz readin' now, he tole me that he wuz able to read eighty-four words a minute with sixty per cent comprehension. Y'know, Bub, my dog, 'old Blue, can read eighty-four words a minute, so I guess Billy Bob ain't so hot after all.

Now that Billy Bob wuz a speed reader, he wuz able to read the comic books at Caldwell's Drugstore 'thout havin' to buy any. He had 'em 'bout all read, when Melvin Hoskins came in an' bought the last copy of Cap'n Billy's 'Whiz-Bang, an' Billy Bob hadn't got that far in his readin' yet. So he made an agreement to ride in the back of the Hoskin pickup truck an' read the magazine on the way out to Mel's place, in return for watchin' that the hog he wuz sharin' the ride with, didn't tumble out. They wuz a serial in Cap'n Billy's magazine that Billy Bob had been readin' for the better part of six months.

It wuz a story 'bout a girl named Little Nell an' a mean feller by the name of Oilcan Harry. Parantly, this Oilcan Harry had foreclosed a mortgage on Little Nell's dad-dy's farm, an' had her tied onna railroad track someplace outta town. Little Nell's boyfriend, who wuz a Mountie, or some sech, got wind of Mr. Harry's plot, an' wuz on the way, to set things to rights. That wuz where the story left off last month, an' Billy Bob wuz dyin' to find out if Little Nell got herself chopped up by the train, an' wuz also hopin' to find out what a Mountie wuz.

Well anyway, Billy Bob finished the story by the time they got to Mel's place. After they got the hog put up, Billy Bob jumps astride his bicycle, an' headed back to town. Whilst he wuz pedlin' home, it began to rain, then Billy Bob wuz bitten by Amos Cheever's watchdog, an' then got hisself throwed into Russell's Creek, when he ran over a slippery rock durin' his crossin'. By the time Billy Bob got back to town, he had hisself a sore throat that wuz really risin' up on him.

When he wuz gettin' ready for bed, Billy Bob put two kitchen knives under his pillow, to cut the pain, an' then wrapped a red sock 'round his neck, so he'd be cured by mornin'.

Billy Bob tole me that even after doin' all of them sure-fire treatments, he wuz still sick this mornin'. I cultured his throat, for a possible strep infection, an' then gave him some aspirin to take for fever, an' some Dobell's tablets that he could mash up inna glass of water to use as a gargle. I tole him to go hom, an' git plenty of rest, an' he'd be OK inna few days. Afore he left, he ast me if I had any books he could take home to read. He said that he'd read everthin' in the house, includin' cereal boxes, ingredients inna loaf of bread, an' had even read the directions that wuz printed on his flyswatter. I gave him some books that had been layin' 'round for awhile, an' he went on his way.

If you git a sore throat, Bub, I hope that you will use yore Patient Medical Advisor to get started with the correct treatment, 'stead of usin' knives an' socks for a cure.

Good health to you and yours.

Ithaca, Central to clash in Stag Bowl

It won't feature the running of an Archie Griffin or Anthony Davis, nor the passing of a Tom Clements or Pat Haden, but you can bet there'll be plenty of offensive fireworks when Ithaca College squares off against Central of Iowa in the College Division III championship football game at Phenix City Municipal Stadium Saturday.

Ft. Benning personnel, both military and civilian, who wish to attend the Stag Bowl may purchase tickets at Bldg. 394 on Main Post or at the gate prior to kickoff.

Ithaca's Bombers qualified for the championship showdown, known as the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl, with a convincing 27-14 victory over sentimental favorite Slippery Rock in one of two semifinal contests last week.

Central's Flying Dutchmen fought their way into the title match by upsetting heavily favored Evansville, 17-16, in the other semifinal clash.

Ithaca, now 10-0, possesses the most explosive offense within the ranks of College Division III. Led by quarterback Jerry Boyes and fullback Dave Remick, the Bombers have averaged 488 yards and 43.8 points per game this season.

Remick has rushed for 1,010 yards, while Boyes has accounted for 859 yards and 15 touchdowns through the air, another 635 yards and eight touchdowns on the ground.

Central, also 10-0, has proven it can put plenty of points on the board, too, but relies heavily on a super-stingy defense to provide good field position.

The game is sponsored by the Phenix City Lions Club and all proceeds are donated to charity. Halftime festivities will include music and marching by several local high school bands. Miss Alabama, Miss Phenix City and Miss Columbus will also be on hand to enliven intermission activities.

Vikings, Razorbacks wrap up championships

The Pee Vikings and the Doughboy Razorbacks have wrapped up championships in their respective Dependent Youth Activities football leagues as play heads into the final games.

The Vikings, who sport record of six wins against a tie, will meet the Rams at Blue Field Saturday at 11 a.m., while the Razorbacks, winners of seven straight games against no losses, take on the Patriots at 12:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

In other games Saturday, the Pee Wee Redskins meet the Dolphins at 11 a.m. at Doughboy Stadium, and the Doughboy Raiders tangle with the Dolphins at 12:30 p.m. at Blue Field.

In games this week the Pee Wee Redskins defeated the Pee Rams, 22-0 and the Doughboy Patriots edged the Dolphins, 6-0.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

34-pound catfish taken from Victory Pond

By BILL KLOEB

Anglers racked up some good catches in the Rod and Gun Club November Fishing Derby. The leader in the catfish contest was one of the monsters recently put into Victory Pond. Davis S. Parks was the lucky fisherman. His catch stretched the club scales to 34 pounds, 4 ounces.

Garlin Blanton took a 10 pound, 8 ounce bass from Kings Pond to win the bass contest and John Mayer won the bream contest with a 12-ounce catch from Kings Pond.

Each fisherman was awarded a certificate worth $15 in merchandise from the club pro shop. The big catfish Blanton caught had a blue tag on the dorsal fin and netted him an additional $10.

Clifton Hutchinson has registered the heaviest deer in the club big deer contest. His buck had nine points and weighed in at 160 pounds.

Ronald Clipp has registered the buck with the most antler points. His entry had ten points and tipped the scales at 140 pounds.

The Rod and Gun Club will award three automatic shotguns to lucky deer hunters at the close of the 1974-75 hunting season. One will go to the hunter who registers the heaviest deer, and another to the hunter who registers the deer with the most number of antler points. The winner of the third gun will be a member who has

Kasperian's crew outguns all

SFC Andrew M. Kasperian of Co A, 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Gde has a lot to be proud of. He led one of A Co's tank crews to a 2288 score out of a possible 2400 to outscore 54 tank crews in the 2/69th in gunnery qualifications last week at Ft. Stewart, GA.

All 54 crews qualified, according to LTC Warren J. Walton, commander of the 2/69th.

The other members of Kasperian's crew were: SP4 Curtis Wade Jr., gunner; SP4 Herbert Freeman, driver and PFC James P. Eastridge, loader. This was Freeman's first qualification attempt. The others qualified last year.

CPT Delane Moeller, Co A commander, pointed out that eight SP4 tank commanders were filling SSG slots. "They all did an excellent job," he said. "Every single one of our tank crews successfully qualified on their first attempt."

"It is hard for an empty sack to stand upright."

How to have a good meal

Hot eggs, hot cakes, hot coffee and more! Great for breakfast in the field, but did you ever wonder how these rations get to the chow line?

For the 197th Inf Bde partial credit and a large share of responsibility goes to the Rations Breakdown Point, manned by men from the supply platoon of C Co, 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde, which kept the field mess lines supplied during the Field Training Exercise (FTX) at Ft. Stewart, Ga. last month. Each field mess unit submitted requisitions through their S-4 sections for the number of meals wanted and presented headcount of the number to be served. The rations were bulk ordered by the Brigade Supply Office (BSO) three times a week.

The bulk rations were drawn from the issue commissary on main post at Ft. Stewart and carried to the field on trucks. Here they were stored in refrigerated vans, all except non-perishable dry goods. There are separate vans for milk, bread, perishables, ice and non-perishables. The vans have self-contained power sources.

In addition, there was a storage area for 'C' rations. "We started with enough 'C' rations for every man in the brigade to eat one 'C' meal a day for the duration of the FTX," stated Lt. Dennis McBride of C Co. "We didn't run out" he grinned.

Each of the 16 mess units in the brigade went to the Rations Breakdown Point daily to collect rations for the following day. "The rations were issued in accordance with the master menu plan, that is, so far as possible men in the field were issued in accordance with the master menu plan, that is, so far as possible men in the field were served the same diets as those in the mess halls at Ft. Stewart," said LT McBride.

"This definitely was a learning experience for us," began SSG Charles Smith of C Co. "Our men were involved from every phase from paperwork to paper plate. We were food handlers, drivers, clerks and loaders. We were working with only two men who had previous experience in rations breakdown and handling. The others hold various other supply specialties. Everyone did a tremendous job, including the advance parties," he concluded.

Advance parties went to Ft. Stewart on Nov. 5 and 11 to set up supply tents, do advance paper work, and locate storehouses and refrigeration trucks.

"The food was given high praise by many of the field troops. Some have said it is the best food they have ever had in the field, and I agree it has been good," said LT McBride.

Benning officers chosen for Armed Forces institutions

Four Ft. Benning officers have been selected to attend the U.S. Army War College, one will be enrolled in the National War College, and another will become a student at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces beginning in August 1975.

The three Armed Forces institutions offer special courses designed to prepare selected officers for positions of higher command and staff responsibilities.

Attending the Army War College, located at Carlisle Barracks, PA, will be LTC Robert M. Brumback; LTC Richard R. Caravana, LTC Watha J. Eddins Jr., and LTC Edward C. Kielkopf. LTC Theodore Voorhees was selected for the National War College at Ft. McNair, Washington, D.C., and LTC James H. Gibbons will go to The Industrial College of the Armed Forces, also located at Ft. McNair.

LTC Brumback is currently Deputy Secretary of The Infantry School (TIS); LTC Caravana is Chairman of TIS Company Operations Dept. Platoon Tactics Committee; LTC Eddins is Chief of the Concepts and Studies Division, Directorate of Combat Development, TIS; and LTC Kielkopf is Chairman of the Personnel Committee, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, TIS.

LTC Voorhees is now Commander of the 1/58th Inf, 197th Bde, and LTC Gibbons is Deputy President of the U.S. Army Combat Arms Training Board.

Nine civilians receive kudos

Nine civilian employees in the office of the Directorate of Industrial Operations have received certificates and cash awards for outstanding performance of duties and suggestions in November.

Outstanding Performance Awards were presented to Bobby G. Clark, Linda L. Amos, Clarence A. Elliott, Bennie N. Cochran and Marvin E. McDaniel.

Recipients of Superior Job Achievement Awards included Mrs. Amos, Moley B. Blackston, Mr. Elliott and Ruth B. Johnson.

Thelma W. Emig received a Letter of Appreciation for a suggestion beneficial to her organization, while Dorothy H. Lartin received a Quality Step Increase in salary.

Beginning next week, the above decal will be available to dwellers on post who have registered their valuables with the Provost Marshal's office. This registry is being coordinated with law enforcement agencies off post. You can get registration information by calling CPT Lynch at 545-3933.

Kenneth Beasley, son of MSG and Mrs. Milton E. Beasley, receives a citation and certificate of appreciation from Mr. Richard Olson, president of the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

On July 10, Kenneth's Cub Scout Pack went swimming at Sand Hill on post. Ten-year old Kenneth had jumped into the pool when he saw six-year old Stuart Blackwell jump into the deep end and sink to the bottom. He swam after him, pulled him out and saved his life.

Radio personnel hanging high for Benning's Save-A-Toy drive

"I'm going to stay in the bus until enough toys are collected to make Christmas brighter for all the needy children in the area," declared Kelly McCann of WDAK Radio in Columbus. Kelly has been suspended by a crane in a Volkswagen bus 80 feet above the ground on Box Road since 12 noon Dec. 5.

WDAK personnel are helping to collect toys for the Ft. Benning Save-A-Toy project. The toys will be distributed to needy military families by Army Community Services (ACS), and to other needy families by the Valley Rescue Mission of Columbus and the Mercy Mission, Phenix City.

As the toys are collected and repaired, they are stored in the former Airborne Chapel on Bradshaw Road.

The facility will be opened to different post units, activity project officers and

Veteran's benefits increased

Congress has enacted a 22.7 per cent increase in educational benefits for Vietnam era veterans. The rate increase was made retroactive to Sept. 1, 1974.

The increase is for veterans pursuing institutional, cooperative or farmative courses on a half-time or more basis. Included are wives, widows and children pursuing institutional courses.

The act also provides nine months of additional entitlement for certain veterans to use in pursuing a standard undergraduate degree.

The new law increases benefits by 18.2 per cent for veterans who are receiving vocational rehabilitation training, institutional on less than half-time basis, flight, PREP or correspondence courses, or receiving apprentice or on-the-job training. The 18.2 per cent increase also applies to active duty personnel pursuing an education program and to wives, widows and children pursuing cooperative courses, or receiving apprentice or on-the-job training. The smaller increase applies to wives and widows pursuing correspondence courses and for eligible persons pursuing full-time restorative courses.

The Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 also authorizes loans up to $600 per academic year to veterans and representatives of the two missions Dec. 17 at 8 a.m. They will choose suitable toys for the children they are sponsoring.

According to CPT Robert Marrs, ACS project officer, there is a need to collect twice as many toys as there are on hand now.

Persons interested in making a donation to the project can call any of the participating organizations or deliver the toys to the back gate of the post confinement facility or WDAK Radio Station on Buena Vista Road. ACS will pick up any toys to be donated. Just call 545-4679.

TSB sweeps mess and cook competitions

The 51st Co, 5th Stu Bn, The School Brigade (TSB), Co A, 1/29th Inf, TSB, and the 3rd Rgr, TSB, all scored in the post Best Dining Facility and Best Cook competitions for November.

The best dining facility award in the large unit category was accepted by SFC Willie L. Milford for the third time this year. SFC Freddie L. Thomas, mess sergeant for Co A, 1/29th, accepted the award in the small dining facility category, also the third time this year that that unit has been cited for food service excellence.

In the "Cook of the Month" competition, SP5 William L. Aasen of the 3rd Rgr Co was declared the winner. He also was named "Cook of the Month" at Camp Atterbury, IN before coming to Ft. Benning.

The 51st Co and Co A, 1/29th, are representing Ft. Benning in the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command's (TRADOC) large and small unit dining facility competitions for 1974. Both were inspected by food service teams from TRADOC, headquartered at Ft. Monroe, Va., earlier this year. TRADOC winners will be named later and will compete on an Army-wide basis.

"I believe that the personnel, both military and civilian, working here make this facility successful," SFC Milford of the 51st stated. "Their attention to detail and their attitude are the main factors in our winning these honors."

SP6 Raymond L. Wilkes, Milford's assistant, credits the top mess sergeant with their unit's winning the best mess award so many times. "He has consistently shown his talents and initiative during the four years he has been here," Wilkes said.

Since Thomas arrived with Co A last January, the unit earned best dining facility awards in July and August, as well as last month. In addition, the unit has won The School Brigade's best dining facility award four times — in March, May, June and Oc-

Boswell wins Broken Wing award

The Broken Wing Award is coveted among Army Aviators. To obtain it one must demonstrate a high level of technical knowledge and personal skill. To qualify as a nominee for the Broken Wing Award, a pilot must land a damaged aircraft without causing further damage to the aircraft or its occupants.

CW2 Mike Boswell of the 121st Avn Co encountered such a critical situation while flying an AH-1G Cobra in the mountains of northern Georgia.

CW2 Boswell and his co-pilot were flying as attack helicopter support for an airlift assault for the Ranger students at Camp Merrill, Ga. Boswell was rolling out of a steep turn after completing a simulated gun-run on a landing zone when his aircraft

533rd excels its hauling capacity

The 533rd Transportation Co, 36th Engr Gp, switched over to a medium trucking company, making their hauling capacity excel to five tons.

"The switchover came about because Ft. Benning had two lightweight trucking companies, and Ft. Stewart had two medium trucking companies and no light trucking companies. An even exchange in vehicles between the two posts was made to better each base's hauling capacity," says SSG Herman L. Garrett, maintenance sergeant for the company.

The total exchange in vehicles between the two posts involved some 64 two-and-one-half-ton trucks, two jeep trailers and one five-and-one-quarter-ton truck in ex-

December is a busy month at the Ft. Benning Pre-Kindergarten School. Santa's little helpers and their teachers are hard at work at Patch School preparing gifts and decorations and rehearsing for their winter program.

Each child is making a gift and a greeting card for his or her parents. The gifts include many different creative craft projects, such as handprints in plaster and pomander balls, made from apples, oranges and cloves. Their Christmas tree is special since the children made all the ornaments and decorated the tree themselves. The tree will be on display in the auditorium for the winter program Dec. 18 and 19.

Holiday Music is the theme for the program and Mrs. Donald Harris, the school music teacher, is in charge of the festivities. There will be two programs each day. On Dec. 18 at 9:30 a.m., Rooms 1, 2 and 3 will perform and at 10:10 a.m. Rooms 4, 5 and 6 will entertain. The split classes in Room 10 tober. Thomas also credits persons working at the facility for its many successes.

Aasen, the "Cook of the Month," re-enlisted in October for another four-year tour of duty. He is a graduate of the Cooks' Basic NCOES School at Ft. Lee, VA, and the Ft. Benning Cooks' and Bakers' School.

developed a vertical vibration. He maneuvered the aircraft to determine the cause of the vibration, but as flight continued the vibration became worse and the aircraft harder to control.

Two miles north of the Camp the aircraft became almost uncontrollable, but Boswell made a running landing at Mosby Army Airstrip at Camp Merrill. Mosby Strip is a grassy area two thousand feet long and less than one hundred feet wide; it isn't wide enough for two helicopters to pass each other. On all four sides of the strip are trees about 50 to 60 feet high and the strip itself is on the side of a mountain in a densely forested area.

CW2 Boswell received the award based on his capability and professionalism in a situation which could have been a disaster.

change for 65 five-ton tractor trucks and 12 one-ton stake and platform trucks, plus one 5,000 gallon fuel tanker from Ft. Stewart.

The total exchange with Stewart took the 533rd 11 days and 39 truck drivers to complete.

"Mainly, the 533rd chief mission in the past at Benning has been to haul and unload ammunition to and from railheads. It was a slow and sometimes tedious process since we only had a lightweight hauling capacity. But since the switchover from light to medium, we can expedite the process and also transfer Ranger equipment into the fields or wherever the need is required, making the 533rd a more ready trucking company," SSG Garrett concluded.

will sing at 9:30 a.m., Dec. 19 and Rooms 7, 8 and 9 will join in the merriment at 10:10 a.m. Parents will receive special invitations and the public is welcome to attend any performance.

The program will feature several songs with the children playing rhythm band instruments such as tambourines, bells, drums, sand blocks and rhythm sticks. Several songs and finger plays that are favorites of the children will be included. A selection of holiday-music songs such as Jingle Bells, Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer and Santa's Helpers will be the highlight of the programs.

Each classroom will conclude the celebration with a Christmas party, Dec. 20. The children will have refreshments and will exchange gifts. The school has been notified to expect a special visitor that morning — Santa Claus will be there to pass out candy canes and hear some last minute requests for gifts.

Anti-tank and mortar platoons fire together

"It is rare that both the anti-tank and mortar platoons are able to fire live rounds in a training exercise together," stated CPT John E. Firth, Cbt Spt Co Commander. "The firing of live rounds in these weapons is excellent experience for all crew members."

The Patriots of the anti-tank and mortar platoons, Cbt Spt Co, 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf., engaged in a joint live fire exercise Dec. 2 in preparation for their battalion's upcoming Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT) this week.

The 106mm recoilless rifle has the reputation of being one of the noisiest of infantry weapons. Mounted on jeeps, four-man crews utilize the 106mm in an anti-tank role. Three 106mm crews participated in the live fire exercise.

The mortar platoon fired two of their Christmas Day — Mass at the Main Post Catholic Chapel, at 9 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 12 noon; Mass at the LaVoie Manor Chapel at 9:45 a.m.; Mass at Martin Army Hospital at 11 a.m.; and Mass at McGraw Manor Chapel, the McGraw Manor Chapel and Martin Army Hospital at regular weekend service times.

Catholic confessions are scheduled for Dec. 24 and 25 at 11:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. at the Main Post Chapel.

A special Midnight Ecumenical Watchnight service will be held on Dec. 31 at TIC Chapel.

4.2-inch mortars mounted in armored personnel carriers (APCs), with four mortar crews rotating so each could fire.

"I enjoy firing the one-0-sizes," explained SP4 Walter Johnson of the anti-tank platoon. "It is hard work but fun at the same time."

More than 35 soldiers participated in the exercise from the two platoons. SP4 Roy Reynolds was one of the 106mm gunners that scored a direct hit on a target at 1,400 meters.

"It is freezing cold out here," stated SP4 Reynolds, "I guess it has helped my aim."

"We are looking forward to the ORTT," stated 106mm team leader SP4 Glenn Brooks. "That will be the last big field exercise of the year and we'll be glad once we've completed it."

Alcohol creating life problems?

Begin seeking knowledge

by Barbara Kankel

The following is the story of a young married couple who are somewhere in the middle of the alcoholic syndrome. As you read this perhaps you find yourself before, beyond, or smack in the middle of this type situation.

Where could she go now? Suzie Smith had been pouring her story out to every sympathetic ear for as long as she could remember. Now there was no one. Friends had wearied of her tear streaked face, cracked bones, bruised flesh and tales of woe. The interest of her best friends flagged as Suzie related her latest saga. Where could she turn? Who would ever understand her misery she had endured these last years?

Suzie is one of millions of women who live with a man who just can't seem to handle his booze. But it isn't just Sam Smith who has a problem because of alcohol; it's his entire family. After all, it isn't Sam who feels the impact of his problem at all, because he isn't even aware that there is a problem. The only problem that Sam sees directly is that his wife doesn't understand him. Why should she be upset if he doesn't show for dinner, or if the food on the table is a little sparse? Money is hard to come by these days! Sam often discusses this with his buddies as he buys them another round at the club.

Another thing Suzie doesn't understand — comradery among military men is a necessity! Being a soldier is a difficult job, and nothing is more relaxing than a few cool ones with the guys after a hard day. It's just such a problem to get away when you happen to be in the middle of a discussion — or when someone has just bought another round.

Often (more often than not) before Sam realizes it, the club is closing and he is ordering one more as they announce last call of the bar. By this time Sam isn't in the best of shape, but he bids good night to the last of his comrades and heads for home. Amazingly enough he makes it without having an accident, even though he didn't know which white line in the center of the road was the correct one to follow.

At last Sam is home. Now it's Suzie's turn. Ever since 5:30 she has anticipated his return. After dinner had turned cold she finally fed the children, and prepared them for bed. Again, the questions came from the little ones. "Where's Daddy, Mommy? Is he drunk? Why don't we move away from daddy, Mommy?" And she saw fear in their eyes.

Finally, the children were asleep and quiet was upon her. But there was no relaxing. Television couldn't hold her attention, either could a book. Suzie lit cigarette after cigarette as she paced the floors, running to the window each time she heard a car approaching.

Exhausted at last she went to bed — but her eyes just would not stay closed. She felt herself trembling and could not quiet her anxiety. Occasionally she would jump out of bed to check on the sound of an approaching car, lighting another cigarette when it wasn't Sam.

Keys fumbling in the front door lock awakened Suzie just as she began to doze. Turning over in bed, she feigned sleep. The front door slammed. Why was he always so loud? Heavy feet lumbered up the stairs. Gad, he'll wake the kids! He entered the bedroom. Suzie saw red through her closed eyelids as the lights switched on. Silence.

Then "Suzie, wake up Suzie. I'm hungry." Pretending to be asleep did not help. He shook her until the pretense could no longer work. Trying to please Sam was impossible. It seemed the only reason he had wanted her awake was to harrass her. It began with quiet sarcasm, progressed to screaming and cursing from both and the finale was Suzie's broken, bloody nose, a black eye, and two young children clinging desperately to their mother as the MPs escorted their father from their quarters.

Sam Smith is a belligerent, arrogant, bellowing, violent, quiet, frightened, cowering, gentle human being who is besieged by a disease called alcoholism. He is many things to many people.

To his wife he is a terrifying monster who slowly is destroying her and her children. Suzie has attempted every imaginable scheme to seduce her husband back from his affair with the bottle, but nothing has succeeded. She has threatened, pleaded, promised, moved out, moved back in, loved, hated, and been indifferent, but any changes in Sam were temporary.

She had been to psychiatrists, physicans, psychologists, social workers, chaplains, ministers and friends to no avail. The next step is a lawyer — and this time for good!

But that is so final, and Suzie doesn't know if she's ready for that. Sam is always so sincerely apologetic after he sobers up, and he promised it would never happen again! But then he always promises that!

Suzie's story is no different from that of thousands upon thousands of women. There seems to be no escape from this frenzy. Suzie has not learned how to cope with this situation, or how to help herself. She hasn't discovered there is another way to live, and that there are people who care about her and are willing to share their experiences and ideas with her.

Your problem may not be as severe as Suzie Smith's at this time. However, if alcohol is creating serious life problems in your family, begin seeking knowledge so that you will have new ideas in dealing with this dilemma. Benning House is available 24-hours a day to talk with you about your problem. Dial 545-LIVE.

586th tests Rim Fire Adapter

The 586th Floatbridge Co, 36th Engrs, tested a newly developed bolt replacement device for the M16 called a Rim Fire Adapter (RFA) in November.

Test firing of the RFA was conducted at Farnsworth Range in conjunction with the Small Arms Testing Committee of the Infantry Board.

Used as a subcaliber device, the RFA replaces the original bolt on an M16 rifle. This replacement allows the weapon to fire .22 caliber rounds instead of M16 rounds.

The main objective of using the RFA is to cut down on excessive ammunition expenses for the M16 during training exercises. By utilizing a smaller caliber round, the Army will be saving about 5-6 cents per round.

After about eight thousand rounds have been fired, the RFA should just about pay for itself on a comparison basis with the cost of the M16 round.

There were three different RFA devices tested to determine which one would be used extensively throughout many Army training posts.

This device was originally developed to be used by soldiers being tested in marksmanship during their basic combat training.

The RFA may be used by other training units also, such as ROTC and Reserve components. The adapter may also be used by company level units to conduct refresher courses in firing on the rifle range.

The task of finding a 60-man detail to test the RFA was given to the 36th Engrs. Since the testing required 60 men to do the firing, the 586th was selected because of their availability. These men are the first to experiment with the RFA.

"The Rim Fire Adapter is relatively easy to use," commented SGT Larry McDaniel, 586th Floatbridge Co. "If a man can remove and replace the bolt and magazine from the weapon, he can easily insert the adapter."

McDaniel also said, "Every man is taught how to disassemble and assemble the M16 while he is in basic training, so replacing the original bolt is simple once a man is familiar with the operation of the weapon."

All in the family.

CHEETAH
(Adonipus jubatus)
The cheetah is one of the fastest mammals in the world. In two seconds, from a crouching position, it can be moving at 45 miles per hour. For short distances, it can reach speeds over 70 miles per hour. Today the cheetah is found mainly in Africa. A few remain in parts of Asia. The cheetah is the only member of the cat family with claws that do not retract fully. When stalking prey, the cheetah's spotted coat helps keep the animal hidden until the moment of attack.

If you'd like to SAVE A LIVING THING, you can help. The National Wildlife Federation has an Adopt-A-Wildlife program. You can adopt a cheetah as part of the National Wildlife Federation's Adopt-A-Wildlife program. 67th Maint creates new drug abuse project

Engineers from the 67th Maint Bn, 36th Engrs, have been given the opportunity to express themselves freely in a new project created in the battalion in conjunction with the Race Relations and Drug Abuse Programs.

SSG Ricardo Elizardo, NCOIC of the 67th Maint Bn Drug Abuse Office and project organizer, announced that, "We planned a hike to create the atmosphere we wanted, along with an overnight campout as our first program function."

Last week a party of ten hiked up the Upatoi Creek to the camping area. "At first, the men felt as if they didn't belong," acknowledged Elizardo, "but after just general conversation, the men soon realized that someone really does care about their problems."

The next morning a "Plain Talk" on drugs was moderated by Elizardo. "The overall objective of the discussion was to bring out the facts about drugs, explaining how drugs can affect the individual, his family and his entire life," he stated.

PVT William Tucker, 608th Ord Co and a participant in the program said, "I found the hike very relaxing. So far as the 'Plain Talk' on drugs is concerned, there was a lot of honesty and truth in the discussion. I think we accomplished a lot," he added.

In support of the new "Plain Talk" project, the 67th has set up its own "Miniature Halfway House". The "Halfway House" is a program designed to counsel a soldier in the early stages of his drug use. This program gives a man a chance to get involved with others in determining and examining his drug problem. "If we can not solve the soldier's problem at this level," Elizardo said, "our next step is the Benning House."

The Benning House offers an eight week resident and non-resident program. If a soldier is selected to be in the resident program, he is under a controlled environment which takes him out of a drug dependent life.

Elizardo concluded, saying, "More unity, better communication, professionalism and relations will come forth if these programs are properly utilized."

Holiday tips for safety

Decking the halls for Christmas requires more than a creative hand with boughs of holly. Christmas decorations must be selected with safety in mind, and used with care. To avoid trouble with trees and other Christmas decorations, follow these suggestions offered by the Ft. Benning Safety Office.

1. Flameproof artificial trees are the safest. The greatest hazard of the natural tree is fire. Even a small tree can turn your living room into a raging inferno in seconds. Make these Christmas tree precautions a holiday safety tradition in your home:

- Select a fresh tree and keep it in water.
- Replace light strings that have worn insulation or broken wiring. Look for the Underwriters' Laboratories label on new purchases.
- Light strings on a metallic tree can electrocute you. Use an off-tree spotlight instead.

- Keep tree away from fireplace, radiator, any heat source.
- Decorate with nonflammable ornaments.

- Never burn evergreen boughs or gift wrapping in the fireplace.
- Tree lights should be small to avoid excessive heat.

2. The tradition of gift-giving has made Christmas a magical time for children, an occasion warmed by their delight and surprise with the toys and gifts Santa brings. But sometimes a dangerous toy can turn the occasion to heartbreak. When selecting gifts for children:

- Consider the age and abilities of the child and select your gift accordingly.
- Look for an Underwriters' Laboratories label on electrical toys.

Pioneer didn't stand guard

Standing tall and looking sharp is old hat for SP4 John A. Beall, Co E, 1/29th Inf. The last twelve times he has been selected for guard duty he has never had to pull it.

Why? Well, by demonstrating his professionalism and military knowledge while standing inspection for guard duty, he has been selected as supernumerary seven consecutive times and the Colonel's aide five consecutive times.

SP4 Beall is from Daytona Beach, FL and has been in the command thirteen months. Previously, he was in Korea. For demonstrating his professionalism and military bearing, he will receive a Letter of Commendation and a three day pass from the battalion.

"If the generators don't work neither does the communications; so a good maintenance program is essential," LT William L. McNeese, commander of the 298th Sig Plt, says.

The men of the 298th Signal Platoon of the 197th Inf Bde are more aware than most people of the need for power generators. That's why they conduct daily generator stables.

The 298th Signal Platoon has ten 3 kilowatt (KW) and six 5 KW generators which are used in the field to generate power for the communications van.

SGT Donald R. Davis, a team chief of a GRC-145, communications van, commented, "There are two generators mounted on each trailer. When in the field one runs four hours and then the other is started, shifting the power requirements.

All radio-teletype operators assigned to the unit must also be qualified generator operators.

Double up, America

Carpools could save up to twenty billion gallons of gas every year. All we would have to do is increase the average number of riders in each commuting car by two.

But some people don't know how to start a carpool, or they don't understand the benefits of group riding. To help out, the Office of Consumer Affairs and the Department of Transportation have published some Questions and Answers About Carpools. Single copies of this fact sheet are available free from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

If you already have your carpool together, check on your insurance. Generally speaking, it should cover your carpool passengers the same as it would cover any other passenger in your car. Since the insurance on cars used for regular commuting costs from 15 per cent to 40 per cent extra, if you only drive once a week in a rotating carpool you may be entitled to a rate reduction. And if you stop driving to work altogether, you premiums should go down even more. In any event, check with your insurance agent. There are other ways you save, too. If you only use the car once a week, you may not have to replace it as often. Or perhaps you can get rid of one of your cars.

And finally, by carpooling you not only conserve our nation's energy, but you also lessen street congestion, reduce air pollution, ease the strain of fighting traffic, and cut your commuting costs.

Members of Army's European forces undergo Dragon Trainer Course

About 40 members of the Army's European forces are at Ft. Benning for the Dragon trainer course in the USAIS Weapons Dept.

The course is an intensive training period to equip the men to undertake the task of training and qualifying their own men in the operation of the anti-tank weapon.

The Dragon is a missile firing weapon which replaces the 90 mm recoilless rifle as an antiarmor weapon. The Dragon is similar to the light anti-tank weapon (LAW) in the respect that its missile bearing portion is disposable after a single use. Dragon differs from the LAW due to its further range, greater destructive power, and the reusable sighting device which is attached to the missile bearing tube.

Maximum range for the Dragon is 1,000 meters with a missile capable of penetrating all known armor. The sighting device is used in conjunction with a high tensile strength wire attached to the missile which allows the firer to compensate for target movement.

Because of the slow speed of the missile, it takes ten seconds for it to reach its 1,000 meter range. It is absolutely necessary for the firer to remain steady, otherwise, the movement would effect the travel of the missile. The missile is so sensitive to movement that the firer must hold his breath even while the missile is tracking to its target.

The entire weapon system is transportable by a single man and weighs in at about 40 lbs. Weighing so little makes it possible to fire from three different stances: sitting, standing and kneeling. The weapon is also mountable on a 1/4 ton jeep.

1/58th completes ORT

The 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf (Patriots) of the 197th Inf Bde underwent the field tactical portion of its Operational Readiness Training Test (ORT) Dec. 9-12 at Ft. Benning. ORTs are an annual requirement for combat and combat service support units.

The primary purpose of the ORT was twofold. One purpose was to determine the readiness of the battalion for deployment in accordance with standards established by the 197th. The second purpose was to evaluate the ability of the battalion to perform selected tactical missions under simulated combat conditions.

The tested battalion, commanded by LTC Theodore Voorhees, received its initial training alert Dec. 4 and prepared to move to the test area Dec. 9.

HHC, 197th Inf Bde administered the test; however to insure complete objectivity, umpires and controllers were provided by the Infantry Center.

The aggressor force for the tactical play was Trp A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde.

YAC pigskin season ends

Rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the players last Saturday as the Pee Wee and Doughboy Dependent Youth Activities football season came to an end with four games played.

The Pee Wee Vikings put the finishing touches on a championship season with a 32-0 victory over the Rams, and the Redskins finished second in the league with a 14-0 defeat of the Dolphins.

In the Doughboy League, the Razorbacks completed an undefeated season by beating the Patriots, 42-0, and the Dolphins and Raiders fought to a 0-0 standoff.

The league champions will be honored during halftime of the Infantry Bowl game pitting Infantry School students against the faculty.

Infantry Bowl

In a season of upsets it could be anybody's game

By Jerry Hill

It's no secret that the 1974 football season has proven to be the year of the upset. For that reason alone, it's anybody's guess which team will triumph in Saturday's Third Annual Infantry Bowl at Doughboy Stadium.

Coach Wayne Boles' U. S. Army Infantry School (USAIS) Staff and Faculty team has to be considered a solid favorite due to its hefty size and experience, but don't count out Coach Jack Barham's USAIS Student team yet.

The Students may be lightweight and relatively inexperienced, but their speed, quickness and youthful enthusiasm could more than offset the whopping weight and experience gaps.

Billed as Ft. Benning's sports event of the year, the annual gridiron showdown features many former collegiate, professional, and semi-pro players.

Pregame ceremonies start at 11:45. Kickoff is slated for noon with all admission donations and concession proceeds earmarked for the post Youth Activities program.

An added special attraction prior to kickoff will be a sky-diving performance by the Ft. Benning Parachutist Club. Sky divers will leap from an aircraft high above the stadium shortly before kickoff, with the game ball in their possession, and attempt to land inside the stadium.

The halftime show will feature a performance by the Kendrick High School ROTC precision drill team along with a selection of music by the 283rd Army Band.

Presentation of the championship teams of each football league within the Youth Activities program will also take place during intermission.

Both coaches profess utmost confidence in the ability of their defensive units; yet neither rules out the possibility of a high scoring contest.

"We've got to establish our ground game or we could be in real trouble," says Boles. "Our defense looks real good, especially in the line. We've got some real studs up front."

Barham, who has predicted it will take four touchdowns to win, says his Student outfit will also attempt to establish a running game early, but will probably have to rely on the "homerun" to put points on the board.

"Our strength is in our backfield," he explains. "Gary Bishop has looked real good running the ball and Ray Schlep has demonstrated he has some good moves at split end."

The Students' offensive line averages only 203 pounds per man, while their defensive line and linebackers average 207 pounds. The Staff and Faculty offensive line, on the other hand, averages 222 pounds per man, and its defensive front four and linebackers will line up at an average of 219 pounds per man.

The Staff and Faculty won each of the two previous Infantry Bowl games, by scores of 10 - 6 in 1972 and 20 - 0 last year.

197th drivers keep vehicles on the road

The men of Co. C, 197th Spt Bn have driven the equivalent of five miles across country without having a major mechanical problem.

The unit had 32 vehicles on the road at all times; 19 two-and-a-half-ton trucks, 9 five-ton trucks, and 4 one-quarter-ton utility vehicles, during field maneuvers two weeks ago.

"We attribute our success in being able to drive 25,427 miles without any shortcomings to two factors," stated CPT Jesse H. Brock, the company commander. "Each time a vehicle was at a stop the driver was out with the hood of the vehicle up and performing driver's maintenance. The second factor was the organizational maintenance. The men of the unit worked late into the night on several occasions to keep them rolling."

Best cure for the cold is prevention

Howdy Bub. I been readin' in the paper that the common cold can sometimes be caused by nerves . . . That is to say, if you git upset by somethin', afore you know it, you could be all stuffed up, an' in the midst of the flu syndrome.

Now, this nerve thing ain't been proved, but is another theory on what causes a cold. I guess that that theory is as good a guess as any other I've heard.

I caught a lulu of a cold, two weeks ago, on the day I wuz 'posed to speak to the Jeff Davis Quiltin' Society. I wuz so blamed sick, I didn't know up from left, an' hated to think of havin' to make a speech. I went an' spoke to the ladies anyway, but I don't think they got much outta my talk, 'cause I wuz blowin', an' coughin', an' hackin' the whole time I wuz in they's clubhouse.

I still ain't back on my taters yet, but as you an' me know, the only cure for a cold is tincture of time. I been drinkin' lotta fluids, takin' aspirin for the aches an' fever, an' nose drops for my stuffed up nose. I also have been gittin' all the rest an' sleep that I can. They wuz a time, durin' this bout with my cold, when I didn't think I wuz goin' to get no better, but that's jes the usual depression that comes with the cold. I 'bout wore out my nose with alla the honkin', wipin', an' blowin' I had to keep doin' jes to get some air into my sandpapered lungs.

Bub, I ain't never been so sick in my whole life, as I wuz with this cold. I had my flu shot 'bout six weeks ago, but that didn't help me at all with this strain of virus. Now, I really couldn't say that it wuz caused by my nerves afore talkin' to the quiltin' ladies, or if I wuz exposed from one of my patients, so I can't shed no light on that theory.

The best cure for a cold is prevention. The way you do the preventin' is by, gittin' lotta rest, eatin' a balanced diet, stay outta crowds, as much as possible, an' maintain good personal hygiene. Acorse, even if you do all of them things, you can still catch a cold, but you owe it to yoreself to do the best you can to stay healthy.

Good health to you and yours

The 1974 Artillery Ball will be held on Dec. 19 at 7 p.m. in the Officers' Open Mess Supper Club. The event has traditionally been one of the social highlights for all Artillerymen and their guests, both active and retired. This year's festivities will again include food, dancing, and "Artillery Punch."

All "Redlegs" worldwide gather at military installations throughout the world to celebrate "Saint Barbara's Day," the traditional name given to the birthday of the Army's Artillery Branch on Dec. 4, 1775.

As the patroness of firearms and against sudden death, St. Barbara has been the patron saint of artillerymen since early in the 17th Century. Flyers and invitations have been sent to all known Field and Air Defense Artillerymen in the Ft. Benning - Columbus - Phenix City area. Persons who have not been contacted and desire to attend should contact MAJ Sharpe, Artillery Ball Coordinator, at 545-2841/2760.

Eight 197th soldiers continue Pony Express tradition

Gone forever are the days of the Pony Express, but eight soldiers of the Communications Plt, HHC, 197th Inf Bde carry on the tradition — in a sense — as they serve the brigade as motor messengers both in the field and in garrison.

"Our motor messengers make the distribution runs while the brigade is in garrison," stated 2LT David L. Jorgensen, platoon leader. "During field exercises they carry printed messages throughout the area of operations."

The messengers process and carry important messages from unit to unit within the brigade, utilizing jeeps. They normally make two distributions runs per day.

"I enlisted for my job as a motor messenger," stated PFC Tyrone Nash, a 197th Inf Bde

Unit-of-Choice enlistee from Birmingham, AL. "It is an interesting job because you get to move around rather than sit in one place. You also get to meet a lot of people and see what the other units are doing."

During the brigade's training exercises three weeks ago, the messengers were able to move around plenty, delivering messages to various command posts spread out over more than 60 square miles.

"In addition to our driving we also had to move our message center twice, along with the brigade command post," explained SP4 Bernard O'Neill. "Everyone worked hard."

"Right now, with the weather as cold as it is, our job doesn't seem too pleasant," stated PFC Donald McConico. "But when the weather is warm, I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Two retirees remember colonels from OCS class of '58

Two saleswomen at the Ft. Benning main post bookstore on Morrison Street retired Nov. 27 after combined service of more than 30 years.

Mrs. Annie B. Wootten, 951 Belvedere Drive, and Mrs. Pat Hagberg, 2901 Hawthorne Drive, both of Columbus, received retirement certificates from Tom F. Jones, bookstore officer, and going-away gifts from fellow employees present at a special luncheon.

According to John H. Schultz, chief of the Incentive Awards Section, Civilian Personnel, they were the first two non-appropriated funds employees to retire since authorization by the Department of the Army for such personnel to receive retirement certificates.

These certificates are signed by the post commander and are given out at an activity function by the activity head. Before, only appropriated funds employees were authorized to receive retirement certificates and emblems.

Mrs. Wootten, who is retiring with 16 years of service, first came to Ft. Benning to work in February, 1958. Mrs. Hagberg is retiring with a computed total of 17 years of service.

"When I first started working here, I was in what they called 'the 90-day wonder area,' which is the Harmony Church area. They would take a civilian and in 90 days make him a second lieutenant," reflected Mrs. Hagberg.

Mrs. Hagberg left Ft. Benning when her husband was transferred in 1960, but returned in 1965.

When asked how they felt about their time spent working at the bookstore, Mrs. Hagberg commented, "It's nice. We've worked here so long that it feels like home."

"Sometimes it feels more comfortable here than at home," added Mrs. Hagberg. Officers who were Officer Candidate School (OCS) candidates at Ft. Benning have come back to the bookstore and looked them up.

"Those who were here in '58 have remembered us," stated Mrs. Hagberg.

"We have served them from OCS candidates on up until they've made colonels," commented Mrs. Wootten.

Jones has known and worked with the two women since 1963. He said, "Their loyalty to their jobs speaks for itself. Mrs. Wootten has accumulated a little more than 1,000 hours of sick leave."

The main post book store, which used to be known as The Infantry School bookstore, reopened Dec. 2 operating under the Post Exchange system. The Infantry School bookstore officially closed Nov. 23.

AAFES can help during motor trips

Ever planned an out of state or cross country motor trip with the wish that you knew where and when to take advantage of exchange facilities along the way?

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) has come up with just the answer — leaflets called "Exchange Travel Information."

Now arriving at all AAFES filling stations, the leaflets are free. Each state is included in the series and each leaflet is a different color for convenient state-by-state reference. They list exchange activities and provide such handy information as operating hours for AAFES service stations, retail outlets, cafeterias and barber and beauty shops. They also give easy-to-follow directions from major highways.

According to AAFES, the travel leaflets should be available for use during the upcoming holidays. Since supplies are limited, customers should visit local service stations and pick up leaflets they will need at the earliest opportunity.

AIT Brigade to be formed at Benning

Under present Army plans, a 24-company Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Infantry Brigade will be formed at Ft. Benning by late Fiscal Year 1976, boosting post strength by approximately 6,400 trainees and permanent party support personnel.

Formation of an AIT Brigade at Ft. Benning is part of the Army's announced conversion to a one-station training concept. The next step, tentatively set for Fiscal Year 1978, will be the establishment of Basic Combat Training (BCT). Combining the two will permit inductees to take both BCT and

Ft. Benning's Save-A-Toy program is getting a big boost from the 197th Inf Bde. By delivery date it is anticipated that some 50 riding toys and 400 stuffed toys will be delivered to needy children.

AIT at Ft. Benning. The one-station training concept will also permit trainees to receive BCT and AIT in the same company.

The AIT Brigade at Benning is envisioned as consisting of five battalions with a total of 24 companies and a training cadre as a separate unit under the command and control of a Deputy Commander of The Infantry Center. There will be approximately 5,000 trainees and approximately 1,400 permanent party support personnel involved.

In preparation for the movement of AIT,

Using the Brigade's main classroom as a workshop, troops of the brigade are repairing bicycles, tricycles and other toys.

A real family effort is being carried on by SFC Robert W. Modesitt, his wife Sella, their daughter Theresa, and their neighbors; Anthony Herman of the Advanced Marksmanship Unit, his wife Sonja and their daughter, also named Sonja.

Modesitt, the NCOIC of the 197th personnel office has carried some 500 stuffed toys to his home for repair. "We hope to salvage about 400 of these toys. The girls are making as many repairs as possible and giving the toys a thorough cleaning. We want everyone to have the best possible Christmas," said Modesitt.

"Waste neither time nor money, but make the best use of both."

How to tell your friends you're reenlisting.

Sometimes a good man leaves the Army for a bad reason. Pressure. The kind he gets from some of the people around him.

We know that there isn't an army of cranks out there. But we also know that the few there are can make it tough on a guy who's trying to make an important decision.

So we've gathered together some of the more frequently heard gripes, complaints, harassments and put-downs. And we've put down the facts.

This way you'll have the answers the next time someone questions your decision to reenlist.

"They'll promise you anything to get you to reenlist." That's a big one. You hear it all the time. And the irony of it is, it's true. But not the way your buddies mean it.

First, you have to qualify for whatever it is you want to reenlist for. If you do, we put your choice in writing. Along with your own understanding of the agreement in your own handwriting. So there's no chance of misunderstanding each other.

Then, if something goes wrong, we make it right. Or you make tracks.

Here's another one. "Only guys who can't make it as civilians reenlist." Wrong again. The average reenlistee today is smarter, better trained and more highly motivated than ever before. With a better chance of making it, anywhere.

The fact is, he stays because he likes what he's doing. (We know the importance of job satisfaction, and we've been working on making the Army more responsive to the needs of the individual.)

The only way we'll keep a good man is to make him a good offer. So we've become more competitive. That way you get a better Army, and we get a better soldier.

"You'll never make big money in the Army." Maybe so. But how many people really make it big whatever they do for a living?

You will make a good salary, though. One that will go a lot farther when you consider that many of the best things of Army life are free, or much lower than in the civilian community.

So don't be fooled by pay comparisons. It's the things that you as an Army man won't have to pay for that really add up.

And then there's "The Army's ok if you're single." Perhaps we should be glad that the complainers concede that much. But this statement implies that it's not ok for a family man.

We say, ask one. We think you'll find that Army benefits for your family are outstanding. Benefits that go beyond the savings at the commissary. Benefits that grow with your family.

We like to think of today's Army as a family of families. As responsive to the needs of your family as we would be to our own.

And last but not least: "What are you, a Lifer?" This one has been floating around for a long time. So we'd like to set the record straight, and see what a "Lifer" really is.

In today's Army, he's a man who's living his own life. Making his own decisions.

He's a man who wants and works for the good life. For himself. And for his family.

He's a man who realizes that the Army asks for an extra degree of dedication, over and above normal job loyalty.

He's a man who enjoys in return that unique sense of pride that comes from serving one's country.

If that's the way you feel, talk it over with your Career Counselor. He'll also be able to help you deal with any other discouraging words you may hear. He's a "Lifer," too.

Today's Army gets better every time a good man reenlists.

Got the hots for E-5? Something can be done

"Now here, you see, it takes all the running you can do to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that."

—Through the Looking Glass?
Lewis Carroll

This bit of advice may well describe the plight of many E-4s in the Army today. They are running hard and fast. They have made it to the E-5 promotion list. They can see the stripes, feel the money, but can't get promoted. They are caught in a box and a brute named overstrength MOS sits on top. Once in a blue moon a soldier escapes to promotion and the clean air of job satisfaction.

What about you?
If you want to get out of that box and put on those hard-earned stripes, here's the straight skinny. (Bear with me a minute because this ball of yarn takes a little time to unravel.)

MOS Transfer Required

Way back in July, DA sent a message to all commands. The subject of the message is "Reclassification and Promotion of Soldiers to Pay Grade E-5."

The gist of the message is this — How to get promoted to E-5 in spite of MOS ceilings. How?

By changing from the crowded MOS to one that isn't, and then becoming MOS qualified in the new MOS by either school or OJT.

The DA message says to check DA Circular 611-14 for a list of crowded, short and balanced MOSs.

"Wait a minute," says the sharp PSNCO. "That circular expired June 30."

Sharp PSNCO needs a little honing. Two DA messages—one in June, the other in September — extended the life of the circular.

Now that we have that on track, let's get on with promoting E-4s who are waiting on the E-5 list.

First, the ground rules:

—Promotion to E-5 takes place immediately upon completion of school training or OJT in the new PMOS.

—School quotas will be granted on a first come, first serve basis. (Give 'em three choices of schools — just to play it safe.)

—Promotion to E-5 will be in the new MOS.

—E-4s on a promotion list whose PMOS is balanced or short can transfer, if qualified.

Second, here are some restrictions. Like we said, nothing but the straight skinny.

For example:
—Soldiers receiving an enlistment bonus, VRB or selective reenlistment bonus are not eligible.

—Soldiers drawing shortage specialty pay or special duty assignment pay may not be eligible. Check with personnel.

—Soldiers who change MOS in order to get promoted to E-5 must have at least three months to go after promotion.

—If you get a school that calls for an added service obligation, you must fulfill the contract.

—Soldiers promoted in the new PMOS cannot swap MOSs for at least a year.

—E-4s in CONUS who get promoted under this plan will lose any stabilization enjoyed in the old, crowded MOS.

Check It Out

Your personnel officer has all the details. Meanwhile, let's take a look at some of the E-5 shortage areas you may want to consider: Chinook Helicopter Repairman, Computer Programmer, Terrain Intelligence Analyst, Infantry Armorer, Administrative Specialist, Military Policeman or Field Artillery Fire Direction Assistant.

These are just a few of the E-5 openings. Your personnel officer has all the details and can fill you in. One thing to keep in mind. You will be counseled before you sign the MOS transfer papers. Nobody is going to force you to trade your 81-B for an 11-Bush.

But if you've got the hots for five there is a way out! And, you don't have to "truck" very far.

Psychological warfare declared on burglars

By Jerry Hill

Early this year, Jack Smith, a Columbus resident, shelled out almost $1,000 for an elaborate electronic security system to protect his home against burglars.

A few weeks later he and his family returned from a weekend camping trip to find their home ransacked. Estimated damages and losses totaled more than $2,500.

MORAL: There's no practical, fool-proof way to stop a determined burglar. You can discourage him and slow him down, but you can't stop him if he really wants to get into your home.

Substantial door and window locks, exterior and interior night lighting, watchdogs, and electrical alarm systems similar to the one employed by Smith are examples of the most common and effective types of burglar deterrents.

Now, another means of discouraging would-be burglars is available to Ft. Benning military personnel.

It won't squawk an alarm, take pictures, or physically restrict anyone attempting to illegally enter private residences or other living quarters, but if utilized properly, it can be a tremendous psychological deterrent to burglary and larceny.

If it sounds simple, it's because it is simple. But statistics provided by the Columbus Police Department, which initiated a similar program nearly three months ago, indicate that it can be very effective, indeed.

Here's how the program works: The Provost Marshal Division will provide all units forms for registering high risk personal belongings.

Many high risk items are already marked with a serial number, but other items will have to be marked in some way by the owner. One method of accomplishing this is with a special etching tool available at the Self Help store on Main Post. Units are encouraged to purchase these tools for their personnel at a cost of $13.90 each.

The Provost Marshal Division has purchased five of the etching tools for use by center staff personnel who live on post and work in Bldgs 4 or 35.

When all marked items are listed on the appropriate registration form and turned into the Provost Marshal Division, individuals will be issued decals to place on doors, windows, lockers, and the like, indicating their property is marked and on Attention parents!

There are ways of dealing with rebellious children

Attention, parents! Do the following comments remind you of you?

"My daughter missed the school bus for the third time this week."

"I can't get my son to do anything I ask him to do."

"I tell them what to do. I holler, punish them and spank them, but nothing seems to work."

Many parents in today's rapidly changing world admit frustration in their attempts to discipline their children. Daily hassles over getting up on time, brushing teeth, completing homework, finishing chores, watching television, and going to bed at a reasonable hour are just a few examples of the more common types of discipline problems which have many parents pulling their hair out and gulping down tranquilizers.

For parents with truly rebellious children, professional advice may be the only answer. But there are other, less drastic methods of dealing with routine discipline problems.

Parent study groups, for example, are springing up all over the country, in military, as well as civilian communities. Their purpose is simple — to review alternative ways of training and disciplining our youth.

Two parent study groups are currently being organized at Ft. Benning under the sponsorship of the Army Community Service (ACS)

Each group will meet once a week for 10 weeks to discuss Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs' book, "Children: The Challenge." The book offers a series of common-sense, practical principles and examples for disciplining children.

The study groups are especially recommended for parents with children 12 years or younger. Nancy Lanning, ACS volunteer, will be discussion leader for each

Course teaches NCOs art of counseling

Fourteen NCOs of the 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde are currently involved in a course in Personal Effectiveness Training (PET), designed to familiarize the NCO with the art of counseling.

"This is the first time PET has been used in the brigade," stated Chaplain (CPT) Wayne Smith, the course instructor. "Although, it has been used sporadically throughout the Army."

Chaplain Smith had heard of the unique training before but recently attended a FORSCOM workshop on the subject. It was that workshop that provided the material for the course in the 2/10th FA.

"The course is not designed to teach leadership," Chaplain Smith explained, "but rather to teach counseling. Every leader must also be a counselor and better counselors make better leaders."

All of the soldiers attending the 15-hour course are section chiefs, responsible for gun crews of eight lower-ranking men each.

"I only wish I had been able to take this course before," stated SGT William Thornburg of Btry A. "It would have helped me out in a number of situations—I have already been in."

"The whole program is very interesting," stated SSG Wilson Dent, a section chief in Btry C. "I am looking forward to applying some of the counseling methods and concepts we have discussed in the class."

Early out program ended

The army's Early Out Program from soldiers returning from overseas assignment ended Dec. 4. Those soldiers serving extensions to qualify for the early out will not be affected. Other soldiers who qualified for the early out before this date will continue to be returned for early release if they can be discharged by Jan. 31, 1975.

This policy change requires that the Army manage its overseas forces in a manner to insure that personnel will arrive in CONUS in time for out-processing and not weeks or months before enlistment expires.

Authorization has been given to the overseas commander to involuntarily extend the tour of soldiers who will have less than 120 days to separation. Both officers and enlisted men will be returned only a few days prior to the expiration of their obligation or enlistment.

However, under the old system some first-term soldiers assigned to short tour areas could expect release up to 90 days early after completing 12 months in country. Now, under the new system the maximum tour for these troops could be 16 months in that short tour area.

Article 15: Can YOU live it down?

Not too many years ago, some commands meted out Article 15 punishment at the drop of a hat. A young soldier out on the town traded bed check for another hour of fun.

Good morning, Article 15!
Another soldier found few more Z's more appealing than K-P.

Zap!
Career soldiers recall vividly that Article One-Five was easy to come by. It's a bitter memory for some. They hadn't planned on making the Army a career — then, — so, what the hell?

The hell of it is that an infraction years ago haunts them when they come into the zone of consideration for promotion.

What does it take to convince a promotion board that a 10-year-old Article 15 should not be used against an individual? How long does it take to eliminate any type of derogatory information from a file?

These are common questions addressed to DA and MILPERCEN as soon as a promotion list is announced. Soldiers who sinned once want to know the impact of disciplinary action in their files.

Perspective Is Important

It is DA policy that Article 15 and court-martial information be included in Official Military Personnel Files (OMPF).

The army is no different than any large corporation when it comes to selecting individuals for positions of leadership, trust and responsibility. It is the Army's responsibility to examine closely all information concerning its potential leaders. At the same time, the Army recognizes its responsibility to consider individual derogatory information in a proper and fair perspective.

"All right," you say. "That's well and good to talk that way in Pentagon philosophical discussions, but what does the record show?"

Let's look at it.

Guidance Is Clear

Each centralized promotion board has highly qualified members and they receive very clear instructions from DA on this very subject.

"The weight to be given derogatory information must be determined by the collective judgment of the board. The board will give the greatest weight to the most recent years of service.

"During early years of service an individual may lack the necessary maturity and experience to make the proper decisions. Mistakes made at that time will not militate (be held) against a favorable assessment of the individual's potential.

"Undue consideration will not be given to comments of a derogatory nature, particularly nonjudicial punishment for minor offenses, which are later followed by continuous outstanding performance of duty. Incidents of a disciplinary nature must be weighed against the individual's overall manner for performance and the seriousness of the infraction."

Consider Mistakes Carefully

There are some key thoughts here.

Note first the promotion board is told to use their collective judgment. That means all members have a chance to express their views on how well you have mended your ways. Your fate and future don't hinge on the views of just one member.

Second the board is told to be alert to the soldier who may have made a mistake early in his career. If he has, look at the most recent years of service. What kind of job is he or she doing? What kind of a profile is created by EERs, MOS scores, and other professional indicators.

Third, the promotion board is cautioned not to get carried away just because derogatory information is in your file, particularly nonjudicial punishment for minor offenses. Look at the long haul, says DA, and weigh clearly demonstrated, continuous outstanding performance against the seriousness of the violation.

"Yeah," you say, "that all sounds good but I'll be the record doesn't back it up."

Glad you mentioned it. Let's take a look at the results of the last E-7 selection board.

A random survey was made of records in seven career management fields (CMF). The OMPF's of 556 soldiers selected for the promotion to E-7 were examined. Thirty-nine per cent of those files contained Article 15 and courts-martial actions. They lived it down.

The promotion board carried out their instructions.

Wild Oats May Mean Crop Failure

If this information is an eye-opener for you, there are two important points you should keep in mind.

First, the competition is razor-sharp when it comes to selection for promotion to senior enlisted grades. The higher you go the harder it is to the next step up. When a board is told to choose the cream of the crop rest assured soldiers with the best records will be selected. An Article 15 or court-martial conviction can decrease your chances for selection. Rest assured soldiers with best records will be selected.

Second, just because the board is instructed to weigh the seriousness of the infraction against outstanding service, you don't have license to sow wild oats and expect a bumper crop. No sir! The sharp, professional soldier keeps his stuff together. He sees greater freedom as great responsibility. He knows that to court disciplinary action is to stack the chips against him in a contest where there is no prize for second and third place.

Yes, you can live down a minor disciplinary incident. The instructions to promotion boards and the record of selections prove it. But why take a chance . . . unless YOU just like doing things the hard way.

The Bayonet, Dec. 20, 1974

After all, God leads a sheltered life'

At the end of time, billions of people were scattered on a great plain before God's throne. Some of the groups near the front talked heatedly — not with cringing shame, but with belligerence. "How can God judge us? How can He know about sufferings?" snapped a joking brunette; she jerked back her sleeve to reveal a tattooed number from a Nazi concentration camp. "We endured terror, beatings, torture, death!"

In another group, a Black man lowered his collar. "What about this?" he demanded, showing an ugly rope burn. "Lynched for no crime but being black. We have suffocated in slave ships, been wrenched from loved ones, tolled 'till only death gave release."

Far out across the plain were hundreds of such groups. Each had a complaint against God for the evil and suffering He permitted in the world. How lucky God was to live in heaven where all was sweetness and light, where there was no weeping, no fear, no hunger, no hatred. Indeed what did God know about what man had been forced to endure in the world? "After all, God leads a pretty sheltered life."

So each group sent out a leader, chosen because he had suffered the most. There was a Jew, a Black, and an untouchable from India, an illegitimate, a person from Hiroshima, and one from a Siberian slave camp. In the center of the plain they consulted with each other. At first they were ready to present their case. It was rather simple:

Before God would be qualified to be their judge, He must endure what they had endured. Their decision was that God "should be sentenced to live on earth — as a man!"

But, because He was God, they set certain safeguards to be sure He could not use His divine powers to help Himself.

Let Him be born a Jew.

Let the legitimacy of His birth be doubted, so that none will know who is really His father.

Let Him champion a cause so just, but so radical that it brings down upon Him the hate, condemnation, and eliminating efforts, of every major traditional and established, religious authority.

Let Him try to describe what no man has ever seen, tasted, heard, or smelled . . . let Him try to communicate God to man.

15th Cav's Trp A usually plays enemy

By BOB THOMAS

During field training exercises, units of the 197th Inf Bde engage in tactical play with an enemy force comprised of familiar faces, the faces of soldiers of Trp A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde.

Trp A, Ft. Benning's only armored cavalry unit, is frequently tasked with the job of playing the role of the enemy because the cavalry troop is a company-size separate unit within the brigade and their missions are similar to the roles they play as aggressors.

"We are acting much like a cav troop would in a combat role as we play aggressors," explained CPT Ernest Bubbs, Trp A commander. "We are spread out over a large area. We are testing our communications, our reconnaissance techniques and other armored cavalry tactics. For us, the only difference is that we are not working with a brigade."

The Trp A soldiers have received classroom instruction on how to play the role of Aggressor Forces (the imaginary enemy in Army field training). Garbed in the bright green aggressor uniforms and black beret of the cavalry, the Trp A aggressors look the part of the enemy.

"I think it is fun," stated SP4 Jim Glass, an Aggressor scout from Pensacola, FL. "It is really a lot of fun playing the role of a small enemy force."

Trp A most recent aggressor commitment came when they played the enemy for the Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT) on Dec. 9-12 for the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde.

"We really fired up those Patriots," explained SP4 James Jelen, a Trp A Aggressor from Cincinnati, OH. "Of course, we are supposed to lose the battle. We have a much smaller force. But it is a challenge to put on a good show."

During the 1/58th ORTT, Trp A conducted probing attacks and delay tactics, both a part of a cavalry troop's mission.

"As Aggressors, we work almost the same tactics we would as a cav troop," explained SFC Billy Wheeler, a platoon sergeant. "Our people get just as much training out of these exercises as those who are fighting us."

Hq and Spt Co receives honor company trophy—for the fifth time Since the Honor Company Trophy was introduced into the battalion in July, Hq and Spt Co, 1/29th Inf, commanded by CPT John Patterson and ISG Richard Fields, has taken the honors five out of six months — July, August, October, November, and December.

The inspections which determine the honor company are focused on administration, supply, maintenance, security, training, and operations. ISG Fields said, "We've got it together because we're able to keep up with things. I feel that we are the best company and that the winning is through all the hard, combined efforts of all the sections." The company also received a streamer for having zero AWOL's for November.

Let Him be betrayed by His dearest friends.

Let Him be indicted on false charges, tried before a prejudiced jury, and convicted by a cowardly judge.

Let Him see what it is to be terribly alone and completely abandoned by every living thing.

Let Him be tortured and let Him die! Let Him die the most humiliating death — with common thieves.

As each leader announced his portion of the sentence, loud murmurs of approval went up from the great throng of people. When the last had finished pronouncing sentence, there was a long silence. No one uttered another word. No one moved. For suddenly all knew . . . God had already served His sentence.

And a Child was born, a Son was given

The festival of Christ's nativity is the most astounding celebration the world has ever known. Never, in man's history, has a single event so changed the course of human life as this single scene in Bethlehem. The social and political realms of the world have known the results of His Presence and Influence. The value of wealth and riches has been scrutinized by the standards of the Christ, and every man has been forced to make his decisions about the gathering and spending of his wealth under the influence of His commands.

But the basic joy expressed in the Christmas festival is the personal knowledge that God intervened in human history through His Child — His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ. And this fact of God's intervention in the affairs of human life is best understood by the individual man, woman or child. The story of His coming is not so profound as to be understood only by the mature, rich or most intelligent. What God has done is never beyond the understanding of the youngest, the poorest or the least intelligent.

So, again the world will pause, business will cease, and all of human life listen for the voices of God's angels to sing: "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy."

You and I may be separated from our families by thousands of miles — but, for each of us, as individuals, there is the knowledge that God has not forsaken us. His love and His presence will be made known to us again. His concern and His mercy will not be denied us. And through the spirit of Man will He speak.

Yes, a Child was born, and a Son was given nearly two thousand years ago: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." And the festival of His birth is our humble recognition that we have received God's greatest gift to man.

May God grant us His Love,
That this Christmas may not have been in vain.

To each and every member of our community, a most Blessed Christmas and joyous New Year.

Suggestions pay off in 197th Spt Bn

Participation in the suggestion program has paid off for five men of the 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde by having 19 of the 110 suggestions accepted.

The suggestions range from changing operations at the unit level to changes in post policies.

Soldiers going to the commissary during their lunch hour are seeing the results of a suggestion submitted by SGT Earl W. Evans, HQ Det, 197th Sp Bn. SGT Evans proposed that one cash register be designated as an express for uniformed personnel, preventing delays during their lunch hour.

MSG William Coombs and SFC Robert Heitzman, Spt Bn, went all out with 16 of their 19 suggestions accepted.

Ten of 60 suggestions submitted by MSG Coombs have been accepted to date. One of the suggestions was to change the taped recorded message advising personnel dialing an incorrect number to dial the information operator for the correct number. The new recording furnishes the number of the information operator.

SFC Heitzman submitted 30 suggestions with six being accepted. The conservation of fuel and the reduction of non-productive man hours resulted from a suggestion submitted by him. He suggested that instructions on defensive driving, conducted by USAIC Safety Office, be presented to military personnel at Kelley Hill and Harmony Church, rather than having a large number of personnel go by POV or being transported to main post.

Callaway wants 'Glad You Asked' policy to be considered by Army

Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway is asking that his "Glad You Asked" policy be considered throughout the Army.

Secretary Callaway explained the "Glad You Asked" concept this way: Suppose that tomorrow morning someone calls you and asks about your stickiest problem — the last thing in the world you wanted anyone to call about.

You answer, "Glad you asked," and mean it. This is possible when your attitude and actions result from an open, candid, honest evaluation of the facts at hand.

In the decision-making process, there generally are a number of basically correct courses of action. "Glad you asked" means selecting the course of action best for the Army and the nation.

"This means no 'hanky-panky,' no 'cover-up' for earlier poor judgment, no 'weasel-wording,' and no hesitancy to say 'we goofed,'" Secretary Callaway explained.

"Glad you asked" involves a concept of ethics and behavior that capitalizes on integrity, devotion to service and competence. It implies an attitude of pride, confidence and candor, openness and initiative in daily workings — an attitude that must be reflected in all our relations and communications with the public, Secretary Callaway added.

The video tape of Secretary Callaway's speech is available in the film library of Infantry Hall. If you desire to show it to your commanders or leaders make plans to view it. For additional information contact CPT Hodge at 545-2131/7391. (ANF)

Sweaters for soldiers?

"BUTTON UP YOUR OVERCOAT, WHEN THE COLD WINDS BLOW" was and is good advice, especially today, when cold air may be blowing through your office. Under the asutere fuel conservation program some offices can get downright chilly. But help is on the way.

The Army's Natick Laboratories are wear testing a number of sweaters at several installations to determine if they are needed and wanted as an addition to the soldier's duty uniform. If the test results are positive, the Laboratories will recommend to the Army Uniform Board to consider the sweaters. If approved, they could be an optional purchase by next winter.

The cardigan sweater is 100% acrylic, dyed the same green as the class A uniform. Because it carries no insignia, it would never be worn as a replacement for the uniform blouse; however, it can be worn underneath the blouse for added warmth.

These sweaters are not for sale, and only those participating in the wear test are authorized to wear them. At the end of the winter the wearers will fill out questionnaires, describing the number of times they wore the sweater, where, and if it was warm enough. Researchers are also checking specifically how the sweater fit, wore, laundered, whether the two pockets were satisfactory, and basically, if it is suitable for general issue.

Security tips for your home while you are away

FORT BENNING, Ga. — If you're planning to be away from home for an extended period of time during the holiday season, here are a few tips to safeguard your home and property against criminal entry and theft:

- Lock all outside doors and windows.
- Leave one or more lights on in locations not visible from windows. For extended absences, there are inexpensive plug-in timers that will turn lights on and off.
- Do not leave notes indicating your absence.
- Shut and lock the garage door.
- Do not leave extra keys in such obvious places as the mailbox or under a flower pot.
- Have milk, newspaper and other delivery services discontinued during your absence.
- Have telephone temporarily disconnected.
- Have the post office hold or forward your mail, or have a neighbor collect it daily.
- As a trusted neighbor to check your home periodically to be sure light timer is working and to vary lights and position of drapes.
- Don't publicize vacations ahead of time. Many thieves watch local papers for accounts of vacationers.

If, when you return from a trip — even a trip to the store — and there are obvious signs of a burglary, DO NOT enter your home. Call the police from a neighbor's house and wait until they arrive.

The decals are intended as a deterrent to burglary and larceny, of course, but if they are ignored by a thug, chances for recovery of stolen property are much greater if the property can be easily and positively identified.

The property registration/decal phase of the Ft. Benning Crime Prevention Program is a "first" for Army Installations and has already received enthusiastic initial response from unit commanders and Provost Marshal Division personnel.

"This thing can be a big psychological barrier against personal ripoffs," says CPT Larry Lynch, Crime Prevention Officer for the Provost Marshal Division.

In the Columbus community, where more than 1,000 homes have already been burglarized this year, a similar crime prevention program was initiated in late September. Since that time, only two of approximately 3,000 homeowners whose property has been registered with the Police Department have been "ripped off."

However, since the total number of burglaries and larcenies in the Columbus community has not declined appreciably, if at all, in the last two or three months, a valid evaluation of the civilian program is not yet possible.

"It's too early to tell, yet," says officer Bob Murphy, Assistant Project Coordinator of the Columbus Police Department. "It'll be some time next month, or maybe even February, before we'll be able to say for sure whether it's working or not working."

The Provost Marshal Division decals are similar in appearance to those issued by the Columbus Police Department. They're rectangular in shape, about five inches wide and six inches long and are black and white in color.

Alcohol: the choice drug for our society

By Jim Henry

The pursuit of happiness is a peculiarly human characteristic — as old, no doubt, as the dawn of consciousness and with it, the enlightened awareness of our own states of mind — and so have been the search for drugs to facilitate this pursuit.

All over the world, a variety of these mood changing substances, such as coffee, tea, cocoa, peyote and opium have been used for centuries before the invention of tranquilizers and these are still preferred in certain areas. In our own society, however, alcohol in its many preparations has been the drug of choice.

We live in a culture where many feel it is customary to drink. It is the abstainer who strikes some of us as more abnormal. We are tolerant of the man who has a drink, or even a drink too many. The alcoholic also once drank moderately. What made him cross the line into alcoholism? Where does the road lead and is there a way back?

The very nature of the disease often makes it impossible for the alcoholic to recognize the fact that he has a problem. He may be very miserable and not know who or what is causing the misery. Consequently, he rarely stops drinking on his own. He is compelled to drink and usually continues until a crisis arises in his life to cause him to want to stop or death occurs.

The really important people in his life, such as his employer, friends and relatives, are in an excellent position to encourage him to seek help. The commander who administers military justice for alcohol related offenses is often helping the individual recognize the problem and seek treatment. The spouse who refuses to tolerate excessive drinking may be forcing the individual to seek help.

Today, more and more people recognize that the alcoholic can be helped, whether he wants it or not. Let's face it, the alcoholic cannot make responsible decisions concerning his future as long as his judgment is impaired by alcohol.

The Army began focusing its attention and resources on the problem of alcoholism in 1970. Since then, much valuable experience has been gained in helping people return to a healthier, more productive way of life.

If you have an employee, friend or relative who appears to be drinking to excess, you have the responsibility for getting that individual in touch with a helping resource. The Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control Office/Benning House is available to assist you. Telephone 545-5774/5884/4891.

Buckner Range interesting--to say the least

During the early 1970's, the Army Field Artillery School (USAFAS), at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, developed an interesting range, to say the least, for training forward observers using the 14.5mm M31 Artillery Trainer. This new range was unique in that an observable, short-distance fire range was built to the scale of a subcaliber weapons system, allowing students to apply techniques of long range adjustment within a small area. A range of this type is extremely effective for two important reasons. It trains the neophyte observer and saves the US taxpayer some thirty dollars per round fired.

Since the M32 Artillery Trainer was used as a means of training the junior Infantry leader in the call for an adjustment of artillery fire at the Infantry School here at Ft. Benning, a range like the one at Ft. Sill might work here, too.

During October of last year, the initial phases of the project were formulated and two instructors from the Artillery Committee, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department (BBOD), US Army Infantry School (USAIS), were dispatched to Ft. Sill to have a look at the range and the logistics involved in developing such a training complex. Under the guidance of LTC Thomas E. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Artillery Committee, and the blessings of the Infantry School, the project was fully initiated in January 1974.

CPT Michael L. Bendit of C-Co, 83rd Artillery 1/29th Inf, stands in the middle of the Buckner Range miniature airport. The Artillery Committee at Ft. Benning completely miniaturized Buckner Range so that the six tiny villages are scaled just like the airport.

The simulated nuclear explosion above looks like the real thing, but it's a much reduced version, simulated at Buckner Range for students learning artillery firing and tactics.

Buckner Range, named in honor of LTC Simon E. Buckner, was chosen as the site for the new training complex. Through the able assistance of various US Army Infantry Center agencies, length. This illusion is further enhanced by six miniature villages which contain 75 buildings, four churches and five water towers. All the villages are connected by miniature highways and an airport makes the scene look even more realistic. Because of the unique terrain, the Infantry student finds himself overlooking an area just like what he might find during a midintensity conflict.

Although the Buckner Range renovation (believed to be the most accurate and detailed in the world today) was instituted under the premise of more realistically training the Infantry student in the call for and adjustment of artillery fire, it is even more effective than originally anticipated. During rehearsals prior to the reopening of this range, trainers found that the basic fundamentals of Infantry tactics could be incorporated into the instruction so that the student could actually participate in the combining of firepower and maneuver.

Instruction at this range by the Artillery Committee is now split into two phases which put the student into both offensive and defensive tactical situations. At the beginning of each phase the student is given a situation report and a mission of either attacking an objective or defending an assigned area. Miniaturized targets such as short, medium, and long range howitzers, ammunition and POL supply dumps, automatic weapons, air defense systems, convoys, personnel carriers, observation posts and trenchlines, are strategically positioned throughout the terrain to realistically simulate a midintensity battlefield. During the offensive operation the students evaluate intelligence information to determine which offensive technique such as Directorate of Facilities Engineering, Training Aids Service Office, Range Control and Echo Battery (Composite Field Artillery) of the 1/29th Inf, TSB, physical work was begun during February 1974.

Buckner Range was once a heavily wooded, hilly area 300 meters wide and 1,000 meters long. Today, the range is largely clear of trees and miniaturized (to the most minute detail) on a 1:5000 scale. Although the range is only 1,000 meters long, it has been built to scale in such a fashion that it appears to be 10,000 meters in could best be used. Although the primary purpose of the instruction is teaching the call for and adjustment of artillery fire, the nature of the various targets gives the student a practical appreciation of suppressive fires, obscuration and the shell/fuze combination which would best neutralize the target.

As the student theoretically reaches the objective area and contact with the enemy is imminent, he is caused to change his travelling technique to the bounding overwatch and call for immediate suppressive fires.

Upon "successful" completion of the offensive phase the student is placed in a defensive posture. In this situation he utilizes the methods of target location most effective in a stable position polar coordinate and shift from a known point, counterfires and final protective fires.

Far exceeding the goals of the early planning phases, Buckner Range has become a unique training facility where the student can use the tools and techniques of firepower and maneuver at a cost to the government which is commensurate with this austere period.

On Sept. 3, 1974, this novel facility was dedicated by MG Thomas M. Farpley. The miniature villages were named in honor of BG William R. Richardson, former Assistant Commandant, USAIS; BG Vernon B. Lewis, Assistant Commandant, USAFAS; COL(R) Lawrence L. Mowery, former Director, BBOD, USAIS; COL Joseph R. Franklin, Director, BBOD, USAIS; COL Russell A. Weathersby, Chief, Combat Support Group, BBOD, USAIS; and LTC Thomas E. Fitzgerald. Each village was dedicated by firing a single round by its namesake.

Captains stand pretty tall in the Army, but not this tall. An instructor at Buckner Range stands among the models that add realism to artillery training received here.

43rd Engrs push for park completion date

Engineers of Co D, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engrs, are striving toward the completion of the Double Churches Recreation Park Project which was initiated in September.

Double Churches Park will consist of a football field, two baseball fields, tennis courts, a basketball court and an olympic size swimming pool.

The 43rd Engrs are responsible for all the earthmoving and ground preparation work required for the initial construction of the park facilities.

The engineers have utilized dozers, graders and earthmovers for the preparation of the individual field and courts. The project is about two thirds completed.

"Even though we have been hampered by large rock formation during the grading operations, the project has made substantial progress," remarked LT Glenn Rievley, Co D Project Officer.

"The Park project is expected to be completed near the end of December," Rievley concluded.

1/58th Patriots successfully pass their ORTT

The 'Patriots' of the 1/58th Inf are merrily preparing for Christmas leaves after successfully completing their Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT) on the Ft. Benning reservation Dec. 12.

The tested battalion, commanded by LTC Theodore Voorhees, received its initial training alert on Dec. 4 and commenced preparation actions to move to the test area on Monday, Dec. 9.

HQ, 197th Inf Bde administered the test, however, to insure complete objectivity. Umpires and controllers were provided by the Infantry Center and the Infantry School.

LTC Thomas R. Ritchie, chairman of the Company Tactics Committee of the Infantry School, was the chief umpire. MAJ Ron Miller of the 197th Inf Bde assisted LTC Ritchie by serving as the test coordinator between the aggressor force and the 1/58th Inf.

The aggressor force for the tactical play was provided by Troop A, 15th Cav. The 'Patriots' received armor support from the 2/89th Ar.

The primary purpose of the ORTT was twofold. One purpose was to determine the readiness of the battalion for deployment in accordance with the standards established by the 197th Inf Bde. The second purpose was to evaluate the ability of the battalion to perform selected tactical missions under simulated combat conditions.

During the four day tactical portion of the ORTT the 'Patriots' participated in defensive, offensive and withdrawal operations as required by the scenario.

Dismounting from one of the battalion's armored personnel carriers during the attack phase one soldier was heard to comment, "If I catch an aggressor this time I'm going to tie him to a tree. It seems like I have been running these guys for a month and they are still fighting like hell!" And that's the way it went throughout the exercise — a tough battle all the way.

The 197th Inf Bde headquarters established the brigade Tactical Operations Center (TOC) to monitor the progress of exercise and ensure that it proceeded according to the scenario. The TOC issued the normal brigade operations orders, overlays and annexes required to conduct the four day tactical exercise.

43rd Engrs continuing construction

Soldier engineers of Co C, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engrs, are continuing their efforts in the construction of the Chattahoochee Valley Community College (CVCC) roadway which got underway in early August.

This project consists of constructing about 2,500 feet of paved roadway. The Co C engineers are presently completing the drainage system and preparing the surface for the first rock material base to be placed on the ground work.

In addition to the earth moving duties, construction of seven concrete culverts and two concrete sewer lines are also being installed.

Once the culverts and sewer lines have been completed, inlet boxes will be constructed, then the initial layer of base material will be placed on the roadway surface," explained SFC Jesse Fisher, NCOIC of the installation crews.

"The vertical construction crews are tasked to place the curbs and gutters, and build the remaining flume walls, spillways and headwalls, which are required for the completed project," continued Fisher.

Follow the rules while driving

Travel during the Christmas season places a heavy burden on the driver. As if the winter road conditions, such as snow, ice and limited visibility were not enough, there are more than the usual number of drivers on the road who have been drinking. National Safety Council reports show that more than 50 per cent of all fatal holiday traffic accidents involve persons driving under the influence of alcohol.

Never drink and drive.
Never rush.
Get on the road early.
Be sure that all seatbelts are fastened.
Have a thorough checkup of your car before you start.
Have your car equipped with snow tires or metal-studded tires if permitted.
Obey all traffic regulations.
Watch for the other driver.
Drive to arrive safely and in good health.

Veterans dividends coming

The Veterans Administration on Jan. 1 begins paying for the first time dividends to about 600,000 Korean Conflict veterans who carry "RS" and "W" prefixed National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) policies.

Officials noted the dividends will be paid on anniversary dates of policies, but pointed out they will be small in comparison to those normally paid on other policies carried by veterans of World Wars I and II. The dividends were authorized last May under PL 93-289.

VA mailed dividend option selection forms in October which allow acceptance of dividends in cash, or leaving them with the agency as a dividend credit or dividend deposit, both at interest.

Dividends also may be used to pay insurance premiums in advance, buy additional paid-up insurance, or to reduce debt on policy loans. Dividends left on credit are used to automatically pay premiums should the policy holder fail to do so.

CPT Jerry Watson presents the game football to COL Wallace Veaudry at the start of the Infantry Bowl last Saturday. Watson sky dived with the football from 8,000 feet and landed on the playing field. (Photo by Steven Lora)

Last Saturday at the Infantry Bowl game five men demonstrated the art of freefalling in a pre-game ceremony by jumping from 8,000 ft. When they landed, they presented the game football to COL Wallace Veaudry, Assistant Post Commander. The sky divers, members of the Ft. Benning Parachute Club, were Kenneth R. Johnston, Ian D. W. Sutherland, Jerry Watson, William R. Houck, and Lewis R. ("Ripcord") Riley.

Houck and Riley, both assigned to Co C, Airborne/Ranger, 1/29th Inf, have participated together in numerous demonstrations. Houck is from Bonnersferry, Idaho, and has been jumping for six years, one as a smoke jumper in the Idaho National Forrest, three as a sport jumper, and two as Airborne. He went to Deland FL with a ten-man team to participate in a 16-man star (the joining of hands to form a circle while free falling) in an attempt to top world records.

Riley is from Chetopka-Kansas, and has been Airborne qualified since 1957 with over 250 military jumps to his credit. He is a master parachutist and holds a U.S.P.A. (United States Parachuter Association) Jump Master rating and Advance Parachuter rating. Riley started jumping for sport in 1972 and has already jumped 289 times, the highest from 15,500 ft. which he has done three times and once from 14,000 ft.

Houck and Riley, working together, have jumped at the State Fair in Montgomery AL at the Ft. Mitchell rodeo grounds, at the 197th Infantry's Organization Day Celebration in May and in Decatur, AL for the Spirit of America Festival July 4, 1974. Riley more recently jumped at Dalton, GA for the Lions Club Air Show and at Ft. McClellan, AL in a demonstration for high school students.

'Holiday Turkey Shoot' slated for Dec. 27th

For those interested in a turkey, ham or just a sack of groceries for their guests who drop in over the holidays, the Ft. Benning Rifle and Pistol Club has the answer.

In the Club's monthly meeting Dec. 14, the membership voted to hold a "Holiday Turkey Shoot" Dec. 27 at Phillips Range for their members. The shooting events which will include competition in shotgun, (both trap and paper targets), rifle, running target and air guns are all squadded. The targets for the air guns will be breakable. A five-shooter squad will compete for the prize in each event with as many squads in the matches as will be required by the number of participants. There will be special events for women and children not wishing to compete in the regular events. The competition will commence at 10 a.m. and continue through 5 p.m.

Due to the inconvenience of having a large number of prizes at the range, particularly sacks of groceries, the club will be awarding certificates to winners of events. These can be exchanged for the turkeys, hams or groceries at a designated local grocery store.

Free lunch, coffee, hot chocolate and soft drinks will be offered the competitors, dependents and guests by the club to stimulate interest and promote the shooting activities.

Promoted by the rifle and pistol club, the shoot serves as a means of increasing interest in the club and at the same time offering the club an opportunity to do something for its members. The club president, LTC Winston A Dahl, emphasized that only club members may compete for the prizes but, for a $6 membership fee, the visitors not only receive annual membership entitlements but also the opportunity of winning a turkey, ham or sack of groceries. He further pointed out present members should renew their membership prior to Dec. 31 as the dues will increase to $10 after the first of the year. He indicated that all club members were urged to bring their dependents and new perspective members to participate in the shooting events.

Members are requested to bring their own shotguns and ammunition for the shotgun events. Some shotgun ammunition will be available to purchase at the club house on Phillips range. In the Air Gun events, the club will furnish the gun and the pellets.

Blue Owls emerge victorious at Infantry Bowl

By Jerry Hill

The U. S. Army Infantry School (USAIS) Staff and Faculty Blue Owls encountered a super-stingy Student Solution defense in the Third Annual Infantry Bowl football shootout at Doughboy Stadium Saturday, but mustered just enough offense to escape with a hair-raising 6-0 victory.

Stymied most of the afternoon by their own mistakes and the rock-hard Student defense, the Owls capitalized on their only real scoring opportunity late in the second period when quarterback James Wilson rifled a 10-yard touchdown pass to tight end Joe Lee to culminate a 10-play, 50-yard drive.

The Preppies conjured up their first legitimate threat on their first possession of the second half. Beginning on their own 15-yard line, they moved 79 yards in 13 plays to gain a first down on the Owls' six.

The Solution threatened again early in the final stanza, driving from the Staff and Faculty 40 to a first down on the 11. But tailback Ron Hyatt could gain only three yards on two snaps, a Mitchell aerial was off target, and a fourth-down Wesley reverse came up two yards shy of a first down.

With less than two minutes to play, the Preppies got their final shot at victory when they took over at the Owls' 21 following a 15-yard penalty against the Staff and Faculty for a face mask violation.

Flanker Kermit Wade then scrambled through the heart of the Owls' defense for 14 yards and a first down at the seven. An offside penalty against the Staff and Faculty put the ball on the four, but on the very next play, Owls' defensive end Mike Cooper nailed Hyatt with a vicious tackle, causing him to cough up the pigskin. When safetyman Mike Hartman recovered for the Owls, less than a minute showed on the clock and it was all over but the shouting.

Linebacker Dave Bankston of the Solution was voted the game's Most Valuable Player, while Wesley was selected as the Best Offensive Player and Cooper was chosen Best Defensive Player.

The Students outgained the Owls on the ground, 107 yards to 69 yards, and through the air, 96 yards to 24. Wesley accounted for almost half of the Students' total offense by picking up 33 yards on four running plays and 62 yards on six pass receptions.

Hyatt led the Students in rushing with 50 yards on 13 carries, while fullback Daniel Stevens was the Owls' top ground gainer with 50 yards on 15 snaps.

Attendance at this year's classic, was estimated at between 2,500 and 3,000. All proceeds from admission donations and concessions will be funneled into the post Youth Activities program.

Rod and Gun Club notes

421 deer registered so far on post

By BILL KLOEB

Ft. Benning hunters have registered 421 deer at the Fish and Wildlife Deer Check Point at Harmony Church. The number registered this year falls about 50 short of the number registered at this point of the hunting season last year.

Pre-season surveys of the Post deer herd indicated there were more deer on post than last year. Fish and game officials feel that more deer are being taken this year but hunters are just not bothering to bring them to the check point at Bldg. 5883.

Regulations require that a Georgia big game tag be placed on all deer taken on the Reservation and the deer with tag be taken to the check point.

It is important to the hunter. Non-compliance might result in a poaching charge. If large numbers bypass the check point, there could be a curtailment of the hunting seasons next year.

Fish and wildlife personnel use data obtained at the check point to verify surveys and obtain information concerning the size and condition of the deer population. Obtaining this information is especially important during the 'either sex' season which opened on the Georgia side of the reservation Dec. 14. It a sufficient number of does are not registered between now and Jan. 1, officials might decide the size of the herd won't justify an 'either sex' season next year.

GUNS FOR CHRISTMAS

Quite a few parents will no doubt give BB guns, rifles, and shotguns to sons and daughters this Christmas. The kids of course will want to try them as soon as possible.

Parents should know that Post regulations forbid the firing of any firearm on the reservation except for authorized hunting or on established ranges after clearance has been obtained from proper authority. Anyone observed with a rifle in an area where hunting is permitted will be presumed to be hunting in violation of Post regulations. Parents may make arrangements for children to shoot at the Post Rifle and Pistol Club or with the Junior National Rifle Association. For more information on the Rifle and Pistol Club call Tom Kirkman, 689-3371. Contact Sergeant Steele, senior instructor of the Junior NRA at 545-6909.

ROD AND GUN CLUB ACTIVITIES

Mr. Zentko, Rod and Gun Club manager, needs more reservations for the New Years Eve party before he can make final arrangements.

Music will be provided by the Jingles, a versatile country music band featuring a female organist and singer. Cover charge is $5 per person. This includes favors and breakfast. For reservations call 687-0562

There was no change in the club Big Deer Contest. Ronald Clipp leads the antler point entries with a 10-pointer weighing 140 pounds. Clifton Hutchinson has the heaviest deer. His entry weighed in at 160 pounds.

More than half the month has passed and there are still no entries in the club December fishing derby. The weather has been bad but not that bad. The club will give a $15 merchandise order to the fisherman bringing in the heaviest catfish, bream, or bass. Right now it appears that any entry can win.

Both Jones and Keaton are members of the Ft. Benning Judo Club. Other members of the Ft. Benning Club who won their divisions include: Jeffrey Dean in the 14-year-old boys' lightweight division; Jean Guilbaud in the 13-year-old boys' heavyweight division; Tessie Pierce in the lightweight women's division; and Susan Sutcliff in the 6-year-old girls' division.

Runners-up in their respective division-included Charles Menza in the 12-year-old boys' heavyweight division; Chris Guilbaud in the 14-year-old boys' heavyweight division; Oliver Guilbaud in the 10-year-old boys' lightweight division; Hamano Burgy in the girls' lightweight division; Cindy Stewart in the girls' middleweight division; Tessie Pierce in the girls' heavyweight division; and Beverly Ramsy in the 6-year-old girls' division.

Explore the world in the library

Whether you like to read a book, the daily newspaper or just sit around and listen to records, the Kelley Hill Library has them all available for the soldiers of the 197th Inf Bde.

Mrs. Rosale W. Land, the librarian, said, "The library is open seven days a week for the convenience of the 197th Inf Bde personnel. We have all type books to read. If they are not on the shelf we can call the main library and get them."

"I like to read a lot and I find the library a

Exercise care in activities

Since much of the family's Christmas activity is centered around the home — both inside and outside — particular care should be exercised.

Falls caused by hanging decorations from such unstable platforms as chairs are one of the main reasons for accidents in the home at Christmas. Before you decide to hang that mistletoe, make sure you are standing on something stable.

Fire dangers during the holidays can be reduced if decorations are fireproof or fire-resistant. It is also important to keep such things as matches and candles away from tiny hands. You know the havoc fire can cause but young children do not.

Many holiday accidents are also caused by ice left on sidewalks and steps. A heavy application of sand will prevent the unfortunate falls which can cripple a loved one. Remember, too, that exposure to cold weather can also cause injuries. Frostbite is a function of time, temperature and wind speed and can occur at temperatures normally not considered hazardous.

Christmas at home can be beautiful if you just practice the simple rules of safety.

(TNS)

very nice place to go to relax and read," stated PVT James L. Stanback, Cbt Spt Co, 317th Inf. "It can also help me better my education by coming here and reading some of the latest books."

"The library has just about any type book or magazines I want to read," continued PFC Daniel J. Reavey, Cbt Spt Co, 327th Inf. "I come over here and read on most all of my off duty time. I find it very enjoyable."

Mrs. Land concluded, "We get three newspapers, the Atlanta Constitution, the Columbus Enquirer, and the Columbus Times. The library also has about 500 record albums that one can come in and listen to in our sound-proof music room."

In addition to books, newspapers and record albums, the library subscribes to a large variety of magazines ranging from National Geographic to Sports Illustrated.

"I could never afford to subscribe to all of these magazines," commented PFC Elvin S. Wright, HHC, 197th Inf Bde, "Yet, I like to relax and read. The library is the perfect place for that."

Upward Mobility Program allows civilians to enter new fields

The Upward Mobility Program which gives lower level military employees an opportunity to enter new fields where they may advance above their current level has been approved for Ft. Benning. The program which will be implemented in two stages will begin immediately.

The first stage will provide a limited number of employees advancement opportunities through the utilization of restructured job positions. The positions to be restructured will be selected from vacated positions due to retirements and from vacant positions for which there are no qualified applicants under the Merit Promotion plan or for which recruitment and placement anticipates there will be no qualified applicants from within the workforce.

The second stage is scheduled for implementation in mid-calendar year 1975. Employees will compete through merit principle for selection for training to qualify them for future vacated positions.

Employees selected for training will not be guaranteed placement in the positions as they become vacant, but will have to compete with all applicants. The number of employees receiving training to qualify them for future vacancies will be determined through projected needs. After a projection of staffing needs for the installation is made, a determination will be made of the appropriate number of employees to begin training.

Each employee selected will have an Individual Training Plan (ITP) prepared outlining the training and developmental assignments to be completed. Once all ITP items are completed, the employee will be considered for vacancies that occur at his target series and grade.

Briefings will be held January 6-17 for all supervisors.

2/10th gets valuable training while giving school support

The artillerymen of Btry A, 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde are 'killing' two birds with one stone when they support Infantry School classes with live-fire field artillery exercises.

"We often fire for the Infantry School students who are learning to adjust artillery fire," explained CPT Robert A. Kromer, Btry A commander. "But, at the same time, our men are gaining valuable experience in adjusting and firing our guns. The experience they gain in that respect is the same they would get from a field training exercise (FTX)."

During such exercises the battery's observers and service sections do not receive the training they would on an FTX, since they are not tasked with the same combat service support. However, the six 105mm howitzer gun crews as well as the fire direction center (FDC) receive invaluable firing experience.

A gun crew of the 2/10th, FA 197th Inf Bde, during a recent live fire exercise with 105mm howitzers

Veterans Agency Encourages Living To Check Benefits

Deaths of 355,000 veterans during fiscal year 1974 — 206,000 with World War II service — has prompted the Veterans Administration to encourage 29 million living veterans to make certain their dependents are aware of the death benefits to which they may be entitled.

The FY 1974 death total was 30,000 more than the previous year and 58,000 higher than the 297,000 veterans' deaths recorded in FY 1970. The World War I veteran population was decreased by almost 10 per cent with the deaths of 106,000 veterans.

Veterans families should be informed of survivor's benefits, such as dependency and indemnity compensation for service-connected death or non-service-connected death pensions for widows. The latter may apply only to surviving children if the widow's income makes her ineligible for VA pension benefits.

Burial benefits for wartime and certain peacetime veterans include a maximum $250 burial or cremation allowance, plus a plot allowance not exceeding $150 for veterans buried outside national cemeteries. In lieu of these benefits, there is an $800 burial allowance for veterans who die of service-connected disabilities.

Cremated remains presently are interred in reduced-size gravesites at national cemeteries. New cemeteries planned by VA's National Cemetery System include columbaria for these remains.

Burial flags and headstone or grave markers also are available for many deceased veterans upon application to the VA.

Veterans service organizations or local VA offices should be contacted for information and assistance in applying for benefits. Such documents as military separation papers, divorce decrees, guardianship or child custody evidence, birth, marriage and death certificates should be accessible to validate claims.

Home for shooting champs completed

Engineers from Co C and Co D, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engr Grp, have completed the new "Home for the Shooting Champions." The new United States Army Marksmanship Unit is located behind the hospital annex in Bldg. 24 in the old WAC barracks.

Modifications on the old building will enable the Marksmanship Unit to house most of their offices. Located in the supper section of the building will be the supply room, S-1, S-2 and S-3 offices. In the basement of the renovated structure will be housed the arms room and machinery room.

The basement area will be considered as a security area because of the equipment and machinery located there.

Lt. William D. Walker, Project Officer for Co D, 43rd Engrs, stated, "The marksmanship unit moved because the other building was old and run down." He also said, "The new building will give the marksmen more room to house their necessary offices." Walker pointed out that, "the size of the building will enable the marksmen to have a shooter's "Hall of Fame."

The Hall of Fame will include a trophy room which will house trophies and awards won by U. S. Army Marksmen from units Army-wide.

Vol. 34, No. 15

December 27, 1974

"A Ledger-Enquirer Newspaper, published in the interest of the Personnel of Fort Benning"

Military Police program for dogs begins expansion

Those living in the dependent housing areas will soon notice members of the Ft. Benning military police patrolling the areas on foot. Some of them, however, will be sporting fur coats rather than the Army green jackets.

The military police, Selective Enforcement Section, will start using patrol dogs in dependent housing areas, company areas and parking lots. It is all in conjunction with the new crime prevention program at Ft. Benning.

Patrol dogs are not to be confused with sentry dogs. Sentry dogs are taught to be aggressive, whereas patrol dogs are normally friendly, and will attack only on command from their handlers. They may be safely used in housing areas where there are usually children playing about.

Patrol dogs will be used on both roving and walking patrols in all housing areas on post, company areas and parking lots at any time during the day or night.

It would be better for owners not to have

SP4 Kenny Renew gives the command to his patrol dog, George, to attack a mock felon, SP4 Bobby Hayes, another dog handler. George is one of the patrol dogs who will be used in housing areas. He is worked out every day by Renew so he won't forget any of his training. (Photo by Robert Pecher) their pets running around loose in these areas whenever the dogs are on patrol, suggests SFC Aaron Foster, NCOIC of the Selective Enforcement Section.

The patrol dogs will be employed in checking buildings where anyone is seen suspiciously lurking about, patrolling warehouses, acting as money escorts and assisting in helicopter reconnaissance. The dog is capable of alerting his handler to the presence of an intruder, who would ordinarily go undetected by the patrolman alone.

In the Selective Enforcement Section of the 139th Military Police Co, there are five patrol dogs and five qualified handlers. Each dog is trained to obey only the commands given by his specific handler. For example, "George" is conditioned to obey only the commands given him by his handler, SP4 Kenny Renew.

Both the dog and his handler have attended a 12 week training course in Lackland AFB, San Antonio, TX. They must be trained as a team and be certified as competent before leaving the school and performing military police patrol duties.

The training program includes on and off leash basic obedience, building searches, and hand and voice commands.

When told to attack, the dog will aggressively attack a culprit and only release the subject upon the command given by his handler. If the handler is attacked the dog will attack the culprit without being given the command.

These patrol dogs are also proficient in tracking, and have been used in finding children lost from the housing areas and in tracking fugitives from the law.

George and his handler, SP4 Renew, train every day so that George will maintain his competency.

In addition, the Selective Enforcement Section has in its section nine marijuana dogs. Though there are 14 police-trained and certified dogs on Ft. Benning, the unit has not as yet "completely gone to the dogs."

After the attack demonstration is over, George allows himself to be petted by SP4 Bobby Hayes, resuming a friendlier nature. (Photo by Robert Pecher)

'First Baby' contest open to women only

The National Bank of Ft. Benning will again present a $100 savings bond to the first baby born at Ft. Benning in 1975. This is the ninth year the bank has sponsored the award.

Last year's award went to CPT and Mrs. James Wilson. Daughter Angela Serena was born at one second past midnight. That's pretty good timing.

CPT Wilson, upon learning of the time of the birth, was reported to have said, "Well, there goes my 1973 tax deduction."

The rules are simple and are found elsewhere in this issue of the Bayonet. Among them are that the baby must be the first one born in 1975 to the wife of any active duty military personnel in the Martin Army Hospital at Ft. Benning, or any local hospital will be the winner; in the event of a multiple birth, prizes will be awarded to the first baby only. Check the National Bank of Ft. Benning ad for full details.

TRADOC spells out its position on Army women

TRADOC has spelled out its position on assignment and utilization of Army enlisted women. In accordance with current Department of the Army guidelines, TRADOC has issued the following policy standards covering a variety of matters affecting assignment, utilization and training of Women in the Army: Army women are noncombatants and will not be trained or used in combat roles. Women will not be assigned to Category 1 TOE units. WAC personnel will deploy with their units of assignment. Actual firing of weapons by women in the Army is completely voluntary — except military policewomen and women choosing the special unit option, who agree in their enlistment contracts to fire appropriate weapons.

Women will participate in the field training activities of their units. They will not be precluded from participating in defensive training which prepares them to defend themselves and their units. Women who volunteer to carry arms and are qualified with an appropriate weapon may perform guard duties in selected areas. As local circumstances permit, WAC units will be established and all command and control of enlisted women will be vested in their units of assignment. Under certain and specified conditions, female personnel may be detained in Military Police detention cells. Returnees will be processed in the same manner as male returnees.

CDR TRADOC message, ATPR-PD, 212311Z, Nov, 74, contains more complete information on the above. (TNS)

How did that PFC become SP5 so fast?

By C. B. HOOVER

The promotion of three men to SP5 at the same time would bring few comments from other soldiers, but when the promotion is from PFC to SP5, then there's something to talk about. The three soldiers, SP5s John D. Linn, David R. Carter, and Larry R. Cosson, of the 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde were promoted to SP5 last week under the Stripes for Skills Program.

The U.S. Army's Stripes for Skill Program is designed to attract and utilize applicants possessing civilian acquired skills required by the Army. Recognition of such persons is accelerated promotions based on skill level possessed.

"The retirement and medical benefits combined with a guaranteed income were some of the factors which convinced me to enter the Army," stated SP5 Carter.

SP5 Linn and Cosson agreed that those were key factors which convinced them to also enlist.

Enlisting for the benefits was not all that the men had in common. All three volunteered for Ft. Benning and they are married with children.

"My cousin, SSG Richard Jump, is a recruiter and he was the one who talked me into enlisting," continued SP5 Carter. "Before entering, I attended a vocational school for two years. There I learned to be a body and paint repairman. After that I worked in Columbus, OH. My wife, Sandra, was a little worried at first about me enlisting, but she and Christopher, our son, have adjusted well and are very comfortable with their new surroundings."

SP5 Linn commented, "I was in the Marine Corps before and knew about the benefits. I used two years of my educational benefits to attend a vocational school and learn to be a body and paint repairman also. I was living in Anniston, AL when I decided to try the Army. Peggy, my wife, didn't seem to be too worried about my decision. She and our son, John Jr., seem to be enjoying military life."

There were other reasons for SP5 Cosson, his wife Jamine, and sons, Gil and Craig, to join the military community.

"I had ten years in the Army when I got out. I went to work and learned to be an office equipment repairman. After learning of the Stripes for Skills Program, and the fact that I had only ten years to go in the Army to retire, convinced me to come back in. In the civilian community I would have had to start all over again no matter where I worked," concluded SP5 Cosson.

Antarctic unit honors explorer on 45th anniversary

"AMERICA HAS LANDED..." These words echoed throughout the Antarctic November 29 as a U. S. Navy Commander and his aircrew watched the American flag fall slowly to the earth in tribute to the American who 45 years ago became the first man in history to fly over the South Pole.

The symbolic message was given by Cmdr. Fred C. Holt of Columbus, Ga., Commanding Officer of Antarctic Development Squadron Six (VXE-6), climaxing a special mission in honor of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

The flight by the VXI-6 Airmen was in marked contrast to the problems that plagued Adm. Byrd's aircraft during its historic flight. As the Hercules moved toward the South Pole members of the VXI-6 aircrew talked about the Byrd flight that occurred five decades ago, November 29, 1929, and although a decrease in visibility was expected, this aircrew didn't seem concerned about what they considered one of their routine flights to the South Pole.

VXI-6 pilots have been flying in the Antarctic each year since 1955.

The flights are in support of the 17 nations involved in Antarctic research as part of the United States Antarctic Research Program. The unit also operates in the northern Arctic regions of the world.

"Admiral Byrd had to dump enough food to feed his aircrew for six weeks on the way to the pole. Today we haul thousands of pounds of food, mail and other items. It took Adm. Byrd 18 hours and 59 minutes to complete the 1380 mile round-trip flight from Little America. We cover the 1650 miles from McMurdo to the South Pole and back in six hours," said Cmdr. Holt, as he explained the difference between flying in the Antarctic 45 years ago and now.

Although he was not the first American to fly over the Antarctic, Adm. Byrd gained international acclaim for his airplane and ship expeditions to the unexplored continent. Adm. Byrd died in 1957.

During its observance flight, the VXE-6 aircrews traveled over the route flown by Adm. Byrd and dropped an American Flag at the South Pole that now supports a modern geodesic dome.

Repeat of a moment in history; Ensign Richard W. Stuyts, VXE-6 pilot from Bellingham, Washington, prepares to drop the American flag the same as Admiral Richard E. Byrd did Nov. 29, 45 years ago. The South Pole is visible in the background. (U.S. Navy Photo)

2/10th has three officers chosen for aerial observers

Three officers of the 2/10th FA are richer because they have been selected for training as aerial observers.

1LT Hal B. Sharp, HHB, 2LT Jeffery Kennedy, B Bry, and 2LT Joe P. Batts are the three men undergoing the training which will bring them an additional $110 per month flight pay for as long as they remain active aerial observers.

In order to qualify, the three officers were required to pass a class three flight physical, the same medical exam given to non-pilot flight crewmen. They will also be required to log a minimum of 12 flying hours every three months to maintain the status.

"Last month I got in nearly seven hours," stated 2LT Kennedy, who was enthusiastic about the training. "Being an aerial observer is quite different from being a forward observer since the perspectives are different from the air."

The training for the aerial observers is being conducted by CPT John W. Griffen, the battalion's assistant S-3 and a qualified aviator. Each of the officers will be required to complete a ground school and log 26 hours of in-the-air training. Upon completion, they will be awarded aerial observer wings.

"Aerial observers must be able to perform a number of functions in addition to adjusting artillery," explained CPT Griffen.

"AOs must also be trained in route reconnaissance, position reconnaissance and observation of artillery and mortar fire.

"In addition, the AOs must be familiar with aviation terminology and procedures. The ultimate goal is for the pilot and aerial observer to operate as a team. We have received a lot of help from the 197th Inf Bde Aviation Section."

The Army has no formal school for aerial observers so there are few trained AOs.

A problem drinker's letter to his host

It usually takes me a month to get over the Christmas-New Year's holiday season. Some years I have had doubts that I would ever get over them. The night-after-night and day-after-day marathon of parties is just too much for me.

I hope this year is going to be different. I'm not going to drink as much or stay out so late. My intentions are good, but I'm not blessed with an abundance of willpower. I need your help and understanding.

If I arrive at your house and decline your offer of a drink, take me at my word. Despite my track record of never refusing a drink, I'm going to mean what I say. Don't treat my refusal as you would an announcement that I have just returned from the moon. Astonishment or remarks about "one never hurting anyone" won't do me any good. You may change my mind.

There are a few things you can do to make it easier for me during my stay.

Lay in a small supply of various types of soft drinks. The usual cola, ginger ale, sparkling and quinine water just don't do much to turn me on. Cola and ginger ale have too many calories and I hate drinking sparkling and quinine water straight.

Augmenting these mixers with some Diet colas, orange and grape drinks, and even a pot of coffee, might activate my taste buds.

If you have hired a bartender for the affair, have him stack a can of each on the top of the bar so I know they are available.

If my resolve breaks down or if I have already had a few before I arrive at your party, there are still a few things you can do to help me.

Don't shove my favorite drink in my hand as soon as I arrive. Don't insist on "topping off" my drink every time my glass gets half empty — and when I get ready to leave, please don't insist that I "have one for the road."

I may drink too much despite all my good intentions and all your help. Don't let me drive under these conditions. I know I get obnoxious when I drink too much. There will probably be a bad scene if you take my keys or incapacitate my car. Neither of us will appreciate it at the time, but it won't be nearly as bad or lasting as the remorse both of us will suffer if I clobber myself or someone else on the way home.

I've started the holiday season with these same good intentions before. Until now the results haven't been too good. Maybe this year, with your help and a little help from my fellow guests (you might solicit their help too), I may be able to wake up the morning after your party with some of my self respect intact.

Hopefully — A Problem Drinker.

Chaplain speaks out on cultural awareness

Today's world challenges all of us to understand the other person's culture. By radio, television, touring, foreign relations, and technical assistance programs, we come up against people whose values, interests, and intentions may clash with ours. Personnel in the military, representing many cultures, cope best with this challenge to understand and share experiences of another's traditions and practices.

Because of our inadequate understanding, more than ever before it seems hazardous for people of different cultures to live together. If we want to learn and share the feelings of that one of a different background than ours, we must know what questions to ask and how to interpret our observations. Each one of us carries a heavy culture baggage, and as one begins to peep into another's, at that moment understanding may begin. Prejudice often results because of our ignorance of the other soldier's cultural way of life or style of life that he brings with him.

His or her tone of voice, environment, race, social organization, value system, and even religious concepts may be completely different from ours. Nevertheless, in order to live together in our society promoting harmony and good will, we should display a respect and a sincere desire to understand the variety of cultures within the community in which we live or work. The other person may not expect you to adopt his manners and customs, but that you might at least be aware of them and try to understand them.

An old, yet up-to-date, adage is: "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." Another admonition is: "Let each esteem the other better than themselves."

Hopefully these words were not taken out of their context. Guiding principles as these will help us to give proper acknowledgment to our neighbor. Someone also has said: "No man, not even the greatest genius, could invent, all by himself, a system of social norms and rites forming a substitute for cultural tradition."

Much more is to be gained than lost through cultural exchange. It will be worthwhile, even fun, to practice this awareness of the wonderful cultural expressions that make America so exciting.

E-9 promotion board postponed until March

The E-9 promotion selection board, scheduled to meet on Jan. 14, has been postponed until March 19 by the Department of the Army.

The Board has been delayed to allow soldiers eligible for promotion to E-9 an opportunity to personally review their Official Military Personnel File (OMPF) for completeness and accuracy.

MILPERCEN (U.S. Army Military Personnel Center) will send the OMPF of every eligible soldier to locations throughout the field to permit him to review his file before the E-9 Board convenes. Eligible soldiers will be given the opportunity and support needed to review and update their files if needed.

Records will be available at various installations within CONUS and overseas in early January. All reviews are to be completed and records returned to MILPERCEN by Feb. 14.

The decision to send records to the field for review by eligible soldiers is part of a test to evaluate the completeness and accuracy of individual files and to consider other methods of updating records if needed. Information received through command, personnel and informal channels indicates that many senior NCOs feel their files are not complete and accurate, affecting their chances for selection by promotion boards.

MILPERCEN will send further detailed instructions to major commands implementing the experimental review plan.

Safety tips for installing antennas

During a 16-month period, 14 military personnel were electrocuted as a result of accidents involving television and FM radio antennas. Before attempting to install an antenna, personnel must pay strict attention to avoid contact or close proximity between antennas and any electrical conductors. All inside or outside electrical conductors, whether low voltage or high voltage, can be fatal when not properly respected and avoided. Outside television or FM antennas will not be installed on any government facilities without prior approval of the Director of Facilities Engineering. This is in compliance with TRADOC Reg 420-1.

The first thing to consider before installing an outside antenna is whether or not adequate reception can be obtained by the use of indoor antennas. If the answer is yes — then go no further. If an outside antenna is deemed absolutely necessary, and you plan to do the job yourself rather than hire a professional, make sure you know what you're doing.

Some considerations when installing an antenna are —

- a. Avoid mounting antennas on chimneys.
- b. Antenna and its mast must be constructed of corrosion resistant materials.
- c. The antenna and all associated conductors and guy wires must be so located that they cannot swing into, fall upon or come in contact with electric light or power wires.

— d. Clearance from electric light and power conductors of more than 250 volts between conductors must be at least 10 feet.

These are just a few of the things to remember when installing an antenna. If you must install your own antenna, whether it be on your own personal property or on government property, it is very important to read TRADOC Reg 420-1. This is a job that should never be attempted unless you know what you're doing! (TNS)

Lack of dentists spurs assistants program

By Becki Kellam

The reduction in the number of dentists at Ft. Benning has had an impact on the amount and scope of care available to retired military and all dependent patients. However, this has been partially offset by the introduction of a new concept in dental practice — The Dental Therapy Assistants Program (DTA).

According to MAJ Brent M. Koudelka, Resource Training Officer, the program is being utilized to keep pace with the increasing health care requirements of the all-volunteer Army, provide essential care to retired and dependents and adjust to a shortage of dental officers.

The purpose of the DTA program is to increase the individual dentist's efficiency and ability to treat more patients by relieving him from the responsibility of performing routine technical procedures. This is accomplished by allowing the DTAs to complete the placement of dental restoration (silver and plastic fillings) after the dentist has completed the removal of all decay from the tooth. Also they perform such duties as taking X-rays, giving oral hygiene instructions and cleaning teeth.

The final decision as to the diagnosis of care needed by the patient, preparation of the teeth, and prescribing and administration of medication is still left to the dentist. Therefore, the DTA aids in freeing the dentist to treat more patients and spend more of his time on diagnosis and treatment planning procedures.

In the first year (1973), Ft. Benning's Dental Activity trained nine civilians for the DTA program. At present, there are 18 graduate DTAs and 10 students who will graduate in February. The trainees were all civilians selected from the various dental clinics on post who had a minimum of two years experience in a dentally oriented position.

Betty Pippins, one of the first graduates in the program, explained that the work and training is demanding, but is beneficial to anyone that is willing to give of themselves to become better trained in dental techniques. Her reason for applying for the program was, "I wanted to learn more and felt that I could be of more help to the dental profession by being better trained."

The basic structure of the DTA program is 48 weeks of training divided into classroom, laboratory and clinical instructions. Upon satisfactory completion of their training the graduates are assigned to a regular DTA position in troop and dependent dental facilities. There they work under the direct supervision of a dentist in a team consisting of one dentist, two DTAs and a conventional chairside dental assistant.

When asked if the new program was working MAJ Koudelka stated, "The program is working as evidenced by the fact that more patients are being cared for despite the reduction in dental officers. At the present a DTA team, functioning with one dentist and two DTAs, is treating approximately the same number of patients as two dentists."

As to the patients' reactions, he explained that many ask who the DTA is, and why the dentist is not doing all of their work. However, after a brief explanation of the program they seem to accept the DTA very well.

43rd soldiers build dayroom

The engineers of C Co, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engr Gp are currently enjoying the pleasures of a new dayroom facility.

Utilizing vacant office space, the construction got underway in mid-November and is now fully completed.

The new dayroom will have double floor space and will house many new fringe benefits. A new stereo, color television, furniture, ping pong table, football table and a recovered pool table will make off duty hours more relaxing for the men of Charlie Company.

SGT Walter Gordon, one of the personnel who helped construct the new facility, concluded, "One of the big advantages of the new facility is the doubling of the floor space. The new stereo and games will make it very relaxing after duty. It is a 100% improvement."

Co E grabs TSB's best mess for November

Contrary to public belief, Friday the 13th doesn't always bring bad luck. At least so is the opinion of SFC John L. Stablum and all the personnel of Co E, 1/29th Inf dining facility. On this day they were presented with TSB's Best Dining Facility Trophy for the month of November by the TSB Commander COL George L. Ball.

SFC Stablum has been with the company since April, 1973 and this year his dining facility has taken the honors two precious times. In addition, they have taken Post Best Mess in the Small Dining Category for February, April and November. SFC Stablum commented, "I can't take any of the credit as it wouldn't have been possible to win without all of the combined efforts of the cooks and KP's. They are the ones who did all of the work." Contary to what SFC Stablum says, it appears that a great deal of the credit should go to him as his record quite clearly speaks for itself. During his 19 years in the Army, he has been working in quite a few dining facilities and has always received numerous letters of appreciation and commendations. While serving at his last duty station, Ft. Ord, CA, he was awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

In 1973, Co A won the Post Best Mess twice and the TSB Award three times. In 1974 it also won the Post Award three times and TSB Award four times. In 1974, Co C won Post Award once and TSB twice.

18th Rep Det completes ORTT

The 18th Repl Det of the 36th Engr Gp (Cbt) completed their Operational Readness Training Test (ORTT) on Dec. 7.

The test started with an alert at 4 a.m. Within minutes, the men of the 18th started arriving at the company area. After a briefing by the company commander, the section leaders began supervising the issuance of weapons and the load out of the vehicles.

As the convoy neared the bivouac site, the company encountered a roadblock and an ambush. A ready reaction force, made up of members of the company's "Killer Team" quickly disposed of both the roadblock and the enemy ambush.

After securing and organizing the company area, the men of the 18th began the task of in-processing a total of 350 simulated replacements. Enemy harrassment in the form of CBR attacks, aircraft attacks and aggressor patrols did not hinder the 18th's accomplishment of their in-processing mission. The "Killer Team" managed to capture more than 50% of the aggressor force before the end of the exercise.

A torrential downpour on the final day of the test did not dampen the spirits of the 18th, as they struck camp in record time to begin the convoy home.

New rules set for mobile home shipments to Alaska

The State of Alaska has implemented new regulations that restrict mobile home shipment into that state. The regulations set minimum standards that must be met before a mobile home may enter Alaska. Under this change, most mobile homes over three years old will not meet the tougher new standards.

The new standards will not apply to travel trailers used for recreation, camping or temporary living accommodation. These vehicles must meet current highway regulations and be under 35 feet in length and 8 feet wide.

The State of Alaska will also not permit a mobile home to be sold within the state unless it meets the new standards. The new regulation does not apply to mobile homes brought into the state prior to Sept. 1, 1971.

The new standards are being strictly enforced, and the state will make no exceptions. Persons with mobile homes over three years old will be required to make extensive modifications to their mobile homes to qualify for entry into Alaska.

Personnel planning to ship a mobile home to Alaska should contact the Alaska Department of Commerce, Weights and Measures Section, 2263 Spence Road, Anchorage, AK, 99503, stating make and model of their home.

The State of Alaska will advise them if the home qualifies or, if not, what modifications are necessary. (TNS)

Ft. Benning events of 1974

By Becki Kellam

Ft. Benning units and activities have proved during the past year that the all-volunteer Army concept can be successful. Ft. Benning reached all-volunteer status when the last draftee was discharged last November.

The past year brought Ft. Benning a mixture of experimentation and change which combined to give the "Home of the Infantry" one of the most progressive years it has ever experienced.

In the short span of the past 12 months there were numerous achievements which ranged from individual to unit to post-wide. Some of the highlights of 1974 were:

JANUARY:

The post received national recognition with the birth of the nation's first baby in 1974. Angela Serena, daughter of CPT and Mrs. James Wilson, was born one second after midnight at Martin Army Hospital. LTG Robert H. York, former commander of Ft. Benning, returned to the post to address the Full Gospel Businessmen Fellowship International at the Infantry Center Chapel.

In accordance with Army policy, the post implemented a variety of programs to help save fuel for the Army and the country. One of the programs was the limitation of 10 gallons of gas to patrons of the post exchange service station during the shortage.

COL Robert L. Rollier is the Infantry Center Chief of Staff. He succeeded COL Charles C. Thebaud, who retired.

FEBRUARY:

SP4 Sylvia Campos, 139th MP Co, became the first woman to be selected as "Soldier of the Month" for the 36th Engr Gp and for Ft. Benning.

For the first time since World War II, the Army has a Ranger Battalion—the 1/75th Inf, which was activated at Ft. Stewart. Two Benning soldiers were selected as the first men assigned to the new battalion — LTC Kenneth C. Leuer, who is the new commander, and CSM Neal Gentry is the battalion sergeant major.

MARCH:

The 43d Engr Co, 36th Engr Gp completed the construction of the helipad at Martin Army Hospital. It was later named in honor of SP4 Joseph G. LaPointe Jr., who was killed in action in Vietnam. He was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

The 72d Engr Co claimed the post championship in the USAIC Company Level Basketball Tournament.

1SG Henry Caro became the first non-commissioned officer to assume permanent command of a company at Ft. Benning — the 54th Co, 5th Stu Bn, TSB, an NCOES unit.

The 197th Inf Bde celebrated its first anniversary after reorganization and the assignment as a Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) mission. The unit was declared combat ready after weeks and months of training and testing.

MG Tarpley was host for opening ceremonies of the $5.5 million dollar Ft. Benning Mall. The mall covers 240,000 square feet and houses the commissary and post exchange services in one location.

Vietnam Veterans Day was sponsored by the Association of the United States Army at the Columbus Government Center in honor of those men who fought in that conflict.

APRIL

The 36th Engr Gp assisted stranded vacationers on Hilton Island, SC after a barge struck the James F. Byrnes Memorial Bridge. They constructed a pontoon floating bridge which was used until other provisions were made.

The 1/29th Inf was the first unit in the Army to train a WAC as a mechanic — PVT Ava West. Also, the unit had their first WAC truck driver to join the group — PVT Nola Breetland.

The first year of the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course was completed.

The course replaced OCS and was shortened from 23 to 14 weeks in length.

MAY:

Three officers at Ft. Benning were nominated by President Nixon for temporary promotion to the grade of Brigadier General. They were colonels Alexander M. Weyand, Paul J. Mueller Jr. and William B. Steele.

The Infantry School Ranger Camp at Eglin AFB, FL, was named Camp Rudder in honor of MG James Rudder, who commanded the 2d Rgr Bn during World War II.

The Military Police received a new device for combat against speeders — "the Speed Gun." When the device is pointed at a car, the speed of the car is automatically registered.

Chaplain (CPT) Thomas R. Fraker received the Service to Mankind award from the Georgia District Sertoma Club for his counseling and guidance to the Army and Community on drug abuse.

The Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) was begun to provide emergency air ambulance service for accident victims within a 100-mile radius of Ft. Benning. This program was designed to transport patients in rural areas to metropolitan hospitals as quickly as possible.

Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway made his first official visit to the Infantry Center.

COL Wallace F. Veaudry was assigned as Assistant Commander of the Infantry Center.

The second woman in the history of The Infantry Center was promoted to the level of GS-13. Mrs. Theresa Gunter was promoted as Chief, Recruitment and Placement Branch of the Civilian Personnel Division.

PVT Fred Higgins and his wife Joyce became the first husband and wife team ever to graduate from the Infantry School Airborne Program. They were also the first marital partners ever to make an official military jump together from an Army aircraft.

JULY:

The Ft. Benning Carnival was bigger and better than ever. Prizes worth $8,500 were given away and Miss Linda Wilson was crowned Miss Ft. Benning during the event.

A group of 28 officers — three generals and twenty-five colonels — were honored by having their names added to the list of members of the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame.

AUGUST:

COL John W. White, commander of the Medical Dept. Activity and Martin Army Hospital was nominated and promoted to brigadier general.

Units and activities on post were busy constructing their rafts for the Great Chattahoochee Raft Race. At the end of the race, the 72d Engr Co, placed first in the category of five or more men in a rubber raft.

Norman Evans, fifth grade teacher at the post Richard G. Wilson Elementary School, was selected as one of the top five elementary teachers in the nation.

Two post units departed for their new home at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, GA. The units were HQ Co of the 145th Avn Bn and the 609th Trans Co.

SEPTEMBER:

The 197th Inf Bde commander, COL William B. Steele was promoted to brigadier general.

In ceremonies on York Field, COL Joseph E. Wasiak assumed command of the 197th Inf Bde from BG William Steele.

Paul J. Mueller, Jr. was promoted to brigadier general and was named Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School. He succeeded BG William R. Richardson, who was assigned to the Canal Zone.

OCTOBER:

Riverside, the plantation home used by 28 of 31 Ft. Benning commanders, was officially dedicated as a National Historic Place with the unveiling of a permanent marker in front of the house.

2LT Deborah R. Olson became the first female officer assigned to the 197th Inf Bde.

The Airborne Department of the Infantry School was officially changed to the Airborne/Airmobility Department.

Members of the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the US Army, attended the national convention in Washington, DC. The local chapter as in the past were recipients of several of the top awards.

Secretary of the Army, Howard

Callaway, announced that the Army would discharge its remaining draftees before Thanksgiving.

NOVEMBER:

COL Fletcher K. Ward assumed the position of Director of Plans and Training.

Retirement ceremonies for the post command sergeant major, Theron V. Gergen, were held on York Field in front of Infantry Hall.

The men of Co C, 187th Spt Bn won the post flag football championship after defeating HQ Cmpd, USAIC.

COL Douglas E. Bolling was appointed Director of Personnel and Community Activities.

LTC Floyd J. Thompson and SSG Stanley A. Newell received a total of seven medals for gallantry while they were prisoners of war in Southeast Asia.

The 197th Inf Bde moved to Ft. Stewart for a week-long Field Training Exercise called "Label Cleaver." Label Cleaver was the first 197th full scale field training exercise off the Ft. Benning military reservation.

DECEMBER:

PVT June A. Wileman, 444th Trans Co, was the first female in the 36th Engr Gp to graduate from the Wheel Vehicle Mechanic's Course.

CW2 Mike Boswell of the 121st Avn Co received the Broken Wing Award. To receive the award, a pilot must land a damaged aircraft without causing further damage.

The Army announced that Ft. Benning would receive 6,400 troops in the next 18 months. This is part of the Army's conversion to the one-station training concept.

In spite of all the intensive training that the all-volunteer Army has foregone this past year, there is still

Infantrymen charge from the ramp of an armored personnel carrier

(APC) during a training exercise.

Soldiers of the 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Bde, got into the Christmas spirit by collecting food to provide five families with enough food for a Christmas dinner.

"Each of our five companies collected enough for one family," explained 1LT Donald F. Ching, officer in charge of the project. "The food includes turkeys and everything to go with them. We are also delivering toys from Project Save-a-Toy."

The families were selected by Army Community Services and all were military families within the Armor unit.

"Giving is great," stated PFC Dwight Cox, HHC, 2/69th Ar. "We really hope that this food makes some people happy. It isn't charity, but rather a gift."

Chaplain (CPT) Raymond T. McCranie, the unit chaplain, was selected to deliver the food and toys.

"All of the soldiers seemed to take a special interest in this project," Chaplain McCranie commented. "They really have the Christmas spirit."

PVT Edith Crisco and SP4 Joyce Peters were selected to venture out as the first females in the history of the 690th Med Co to support an overnight medical commitment.

In support of the Pathfinders, Sp4 Peters stated, "We departed the Pathfinders area at 2:30 p.m. and reached our destination at 3:15. Their activity at the time was helicopter play and it was interesting to watch. The commander said they enjoyed having us there and for us to come back soon."

"With the possibilities of having to treat multiple injuries and possibly having to lift injured soldiers much heavier than themselves, plus the element of fear which has been associated with female medical personnel being placed in such an environment, these young ladies demonstrated not only that they were capable of handling the situation, but that the men they are asked to support have not forgotten the proper way to treat a lady," said CPT Kenneth J. Kremenak, 690th commander.

NCOES becomes the NCO School of Infantry

In a 1967 study undertaken by the Deputy Chief of Staff for personnel GEN William DePuy to determine the need for a formal system of education of NCOs, it was found that the NCO was lacking in career development with the majority of the NCOs receiving their training while actually performing the job.

After the 1967 study, DA stepped into the picture with their own requests for formal education of today's NCOs. DA carried the ball further with the establishment of a CONARC leadership board at Ft. Bragg, NC in 1970.

This board studied the problem and revealed the stark facts that NCOs were stalemated in the career development field. The average NCO, the board discovered, received basic training, advanced individual training and special training courses such as Airborne or Ranger school, which, in most cases, was found to be the extent of an NCO's formal training.

Rarely was the EM selected to attend NCO academy. The small enrollment of these academic was further limited by the lack of time and resources. Eventually, DA established a Non-Commissioned Officers Educational System, NCOES.

This program consists of three levels of instruction; Basic NCOES, Advanced NCOES, and the Senior or Sergeant Major school. These courses were set up to prepare the NCO to cope with the increasing responsibilities of increased rank.

The basic and advanced courses for Infantry were placed at Ft. Benning and the Senior level was established at Ft. Bliss, TX. The Senior level is branch immaterial and provides broad career enhancement for senior NCOs.

At its opening in early 1972, the Non-Commissioned Officer School of Infantry was a multi-faceted course to train selected E-3s through E-5s for positions on the fire team, squad leader and platoon sergeant level. Schooling was set up for MOS's 11B, C, F and H.

36th ends Save-A-Toy project

The 36th Engr Gp successfully completed their role in the annual Save-A-Toy project. The project is designed to assist families of active duty and retired personnel, widows and orphans of deceased military personnel to enjoy the holiday season.

The Gp initiated their project in mid-October. Toys and games for the project were donated by WDAK radio station and the Valley Rescue Mission. Damaged toys were repaired and painted by the post stockade. All toys were then placed in the post central collection and distribution point. Each child was given three small toys or games, and one large toy.

2/10th give Gold Star children Christmas party

Men of the 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde sponsored a Christmas party for the children of the Gold Star wives Dec. 23 at the Kelley Hill Service Club.

The Gold Star wives is a group of widows of soldiers of previous wars. There were over 40 children of the Gold Star wives and 50 children of the soldiers of the battalion present at the party.

Refreshments and entertainment was available, to include games and rides for the children in jeeps and gamma goats, plus a video television recording system to let children see themselves on television. Not to be excluded was the jolly ole' Santa Claus taking all Christmas requests.

"The Christmas party has been an annual affair with the 2/10th for several years," stated SP4 Robert Hadden, HQ Btry 2/10th FA. "This year we decided to include the children of the Gold Star wives in our gala affair."

CHEETAH
(Acinonyx jubatus)
The cheetah is one of the fastest mammals in the world. In two seconds, from a crouching position, it can be moving at 45 miles per hour. For short distances, it can reach speeds over 70 miles per hour. Today the cheetah is found mainly in Africa. A few remain in parts of Asia. The cheetah is the only member of the cat family with claws that do not retract fully. When stalking prey, the cheetah's spotted coat helps keep the animal hidden until the moment of attack.

197th Inf Bde ... The year 1974

By W. R. CAGE

The beginning of 1974 found the 197th Inf Bde (Forever Forward) engaged in intensive Army Training Tests (ATTs) of battalion and separate company units in order to meet the mandate of Headquarters, Department of the Army to become a combat ready Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) unit by May, 1974. The mandate was issued in March, 1973 when the 197th was transformed from a school support unit for the Infantry School to a separate combat brigade.

Having completed its initial training to reach a combat ready status, the brigade began operational readiness training which improved its combat readiness.

It moved further with specialized training; desert training at Ft. Bliss, Texas for the companies of the 1/58th Inf; Alrmobile training at Ft. Rucker, AL and Elgin AFB, FL for the 3/7th Inf; tank gunnery at Ft. Stewart, GA for the 2169th Ar and Trp A, 15th Cav; and continuing artillery firing and tests for the 2/10th Field Artillery here at Ft. Benning and Ft. Stewart.

The 197th Spt Bn, which was activated in March, 1973 to provide combat service support to the brigade, also proved its effectiveness in supporting all training activities, to include undergoing its Army Training Test. The 72d Engr Co and the 298th Sig Pit continued to improve their combat readiness, supporting the brigade on every field training exercise.

The brigade's aviation platoon conducted a three-week desert and mountain training exercise in Texas and New Mexico after flying its helicopters from Ft. Benning to the western states for joint training with elements of the 1st Cav Div.

In addition to carrying out its combat readiness training the brigade also hosted the 1/161st Inf of the Washington State Army National Guard during its two weeks of annual training here.

More than six thousand friends and dependents of the Army visited the brigade and its units during Organization Day activities of the brigade and its subordinate battalions. In addition, "Forever Forward" soldiers participated in ceremonies and community activities in many communities of the southeastern United States. The local press covered every major training activity during the year.

Working conditions, job satisfaction and living conditions continued to improve. Some 1,600 brigade soldiers moved into six modernized buildings on Kelley Hill and 30 renovated barracks in the Harmony Church area. During the year the brigade received over 1,700 unit-of-choice volunteers, to include the 10,000th soldier to volunteer for the brigade since the unit of choice program commenced in January, 1971.

During the year, the brigade's former commander, Col William B. Steele, was promoted to the grade of brigadier general and relinquished command of the brigade to Col Joseph E. Waslak on Sept. 20. New battalion commanders included LTC Robert H. Allison, 2/10th Arty; LTC Richard D. Gillem, 3/7th Inf and LTC Jerry K. Patterson, 197th Spt Bn; and CSM Nathan Hoover assumed duties as the brigade's top NCO.

The year 1974 was a true test for the 197th Inf Bde with the biggest coming in November when the brigade conducted its first full scale field training exercise off the Ft. Benning military reservation at Ft. Stewart, GA. Traveling by vehicle convoy and C-130 aircraft, the "Forever Forward" brigade moved some 3,500 troops to Ft. Stewart to participate in Field Training Exercise "Label Cleaver," a week-long "battle" with the 1/325th Inf of the 82d Abn Div.

"This has been a year of dedication on the part of every member of this brigade and the year 1975 promises more challenges," says Col Waslak, the brigade commander.

HSC dumps Co D in overtime

In hard hitting action at Harmony Church Field House on Dec. 17, Co D, 1/29th Inf was defeated the second time this season by their rivals Hqs Spt Co. In this low scoring game, it was a constant battle for possession of the ball.

At the beginning it looked bleak for HSC as Co D had lost only one previous game out of eight. But with the constant pressure by Therman Nash, who scored 17 points, and Ronald White, scoring 13 points, the result when the clock had run out was 47-47.

With five minutes of overtime added, Richard Petway, who scored 19 points during the game, and Michael Wilson tried to

The Columbus High School Varsity and Junior Varsity Rifle Teams captured two first place trophies when they walked away with the Lion's share of awards in the annual fall outdoor rifle match held at Ft. Benning Parks International Rifle Range Saturday.

The Columbus High School varsity team fired 1313 x 1500 points, with 28 X's in their

Pioneers sponsor Omaha Christmas party

The 1/29th Inf sponsored a Christmas Party for the Stewart-Quitman-Chattahoochee Mental Retardation Center in Omaha, GA, Dec. 17. The personnel in the battalion donated money and it was used to purchase stockings which were filled with fruits, nuts, assorted hard candies, gum, candy canes, socks, dental care kits and combs. Baseball and softball gloves, bats, footballs, softballs, volley ball sets, horseshoe sets and donated toys were given to the center.

Upon arriving, the people in the center were thrilled by the arrival of Santa (CPT John Mitchell), who was escorted by representatives of the companies of the battalion. Everyone then gathered in the auditorium and sang Christmas carols. Santa handed out filled stockings. LTC Kenneth Pond, commander of the 1/29th Inf, presented a check for $500 to Mrs. Ginger Morgan, the head of the center. The money

Don't be a Dirty Bird.

Dirty Birds aren't always the other person. Offences are, unless you're really very careful, you probably contribute to America's pollution in at least a small way yourself.
But you can do something about it. Woody Owl has a list of ways to stop pollution and help keep America a great place to live. It's in poster form, easy for kids to understand, plus it's free. For your copy, write to Woody Owl, Forest Service, U.S.D.A., Washington, D.C. 20250
