A few seconds later both have disappeared into the dense underbrush in search of the third of five markers they will have to find as part of the map reading and land navigation test that ROTC Ranger class 11-74 underwent last week.

During this phase of instruction the ROTC Ranger students have learned another meaning to the motto "Rangers, lead the way" — that is a command to all Rangers to be able to rapidly find their way through any kind of terrain and lead others to the objective.

"A Ranger's path," an instructor explains, "is not usually the easiest or the most direct route. Often he must travel a seemingly impassable route because the enemy won't be expecting him to come that way." In fact, the Ranger's path is seldom a path at all. The students are cautioned throughout the course by combatwise veteran cadre members that to use a known and well-beaten path is to invite an ambush. Cross-country routes that would have daunted many an old-time woodsman are preferred.

ROTC Ranger class 11-74 has been learning its land navigation, terrain association and map and compass skills in the more heavily-wooded sections of Ft. Benning. As many of them comment, "It's sure a lot different than doing it in a classroom;" but the students prefer it that way. Not simply because they have to pass the difficult map reading test at Nininger Ranger, but because they know that land navigation is one of the Ranger's most important skills, and that only those who thoroughly master it will be able to successfully complete their Ranger training and graduate at the end of August.

An ROTC Ranger student orients his map "on the ground." To do this he holds his map in such way that the compass direction on the map is the same as the compass direction on the ground.

ROTC Rangers told to prepare for worst on ambush

"Always prepare for the worst thing that can possibly happen to your ambush," SFC Gary E. Cupit of the Ranger Department explains to the ROTC Ranger students of the first squad of the 4th platoon of Class 11-74. The students are undergoing training in how to set up an ambush and what to do if ambushed. And SFC Cupit, a Vietnam veteran, is making sure that they plan for every contingency. "What is the worst thing that can happen to you?"

"We could be ambushed," offers one student.

"We could be overrun," ventures another.

The sergeant nods. "The worst thing that can happen to you is that you might bite off more than you can chew. The force that you ambush might be too strong for you. If it is, break contact and meet at a predesignated rallying point."

With this possibility taken care of, SFC Cupit continues to explain how to set up an area ambush; alluding to his practical experience, he explains that he had used this particular ambush method three times in Vietnam, "and it worked very well."

The students set up their positions and successfully ambush another patrol, also made up of other ROTC Ranger students. As they are searching the fallen enemy, there is a loud clanking noise to the right, and two "enemy" armored personnel carriers roar into the clearing with machineguns blazing.

"This is an enemy far too strong for the Ranger patrol to handle, so the students, heeding their plan, immediately break contact and disappear into the brush.

The students are called back and a brief critique is held in which the students first explain what they did and why they think it was right or wrong, and what they should have done. The instructor adds a few comments of his own and then sends the patrol to the next instructor and the next ambush.

The students spend the entire morning and most of the afternoon alternately setting different types of ambushes and being ambushed.

Finally it's time to go back to camp. It has been a rough day and the students, as a rare treat, are riding in a truck. Sure enough! A loud explosion, a burst of fire. "Ambush!" shouts the patrol leader. The truck lurches to a stop. The students tumbled out the back and, firing as they move, quickly find cover and concealment on the far side of the road.

After the ambush is defeated, the students climb back into the truck. This particular training period is over. It's time for the next problem.

10-74 Ranger students move to Florida

The 172 ROTC Ranger students of Class 10-74 have completed mountain training and have been airlifted into Northwest Florida to deal a severe blow to the aggressor force made up of elements of the 101st Airborne Division from Fort Campbell.

The airlift, which marked the beginning of "Operation Stiletto", was conducted in two phases. First the Airborne-qualified students parachuted into a drop zone near the swamps around Camp Rudder at Eglin Air Force Base. Then the remaining (non-airborne) students were flown into Field 6 and rapidly moved overground to link up with the Airborne Ranger students.

For the next 18 days the ROTC Ranger students will conduct extended combat patrols and amphibious operations against the aggressors, an irregularly-organized guerilla force that has been active for some time in the vicinity of Camp Rudder, Eglin Air Force Base.

The Florida phase is the third and final phase of the Ranger course. The students will learn the techniques of operating in a jungle environment, and use, the techniques of survival and patrolling that they learned in the previous phases at Fort Benning and in the mountains at Dahlonga, Georgia.

After completing the Florida phase, the students will return to Ft. Benning. Those who have successfully completed the Ranger course will then graduate and receive Ranger Tabs.

The students of ROTC Ranger Class 11-74 have completed the Ft. Benning phase of their training and moved to Camp Frank D. Merrill at Dahlonga, Georgia, where they have begun the mountain phase of training recently completed by class 10-74.

OCS: the work never changes

By George Korda

Some things never change. Times, ideas, and attitudes may vary over the years, but there are a few particles of life that remain unaffected by it all. One of these is the U. S. Army Officer Candidate School, presently housed in the 5th Student Bn., TSB.

On the surface OCS has changed a great deal since its birth in 1941. Instructional methods, number of students, and course length have changed a number of times; it's the deeper meaning of OCS which continually exists.

It's the realization upon completion that you were pushed to the limit, but endured, and passed the test.

This fact was brought home on July 12 when 27 new members were inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame at Wigle Hall. After receiving his certificate of induction COL Victor F. Diaz moved to the podium to thank those in attendance and to say, "The men who attend the OCS program now are no different than I was when I went through 28 years ago. They arrive hesitant, unsure, and wondering if they can make it. When they leave with their gold bars, they are confident and proud of what they have accomplished. There are many voices of gloom and doom in our country today, but I'm glad to say that this is still a great country, and I'm thankful men are still coming to OCS as its importance to our national defense is great."

The standards for OCS are high. A man must have a GT score of 110 or higher. He must score at least 115 on the Officer's Candidate Test. A combined score of 200 for the OCT and the Officer's Qualification Inventory is also necessary. An applicant must have completed 50 per cent of the requirements for a B.A. degree from an approved university. He must also score a minimum of 300 on the Army Physical Fitness Test.

When you ask an Officer Candidate what the program is like the words "rough," "tough," "murder," "pressure," and "I'm sleepy" are used many times. OC Art Hagel was a SP4 investigator with MPI before coming to OCS, and he finds a certain amount of inspiration within the walls of the Hall of Fame. "I don't think you can appreciate the hall fully unless you are in, or have gone through the course. When you are, it means a lot because you see just how far you can go," he said.

There are currently 697 members of the Hall which include 66 General Officers, 43 distinguished civilians, 30 Medal of Honor Winners, and 568 full Colonels. OC Hagel continued, "It's good to look at a Colonel or a General and realize they had to go through this at one time."

Officer Candidate Larry Kabelac has a special motivation. His wife's grandfather is General (retired) L. B. Hershey, former head of the selective service agency. "He helps to keep me from slacking off, along with my tactical officer," Kabelac said.

A sergeant with five years in service, he came to OCS with the feeling he could get by on his experience. "I thought they couldn't hit me with anything I hadn't already had. But I found out different in a hurry."

He continued, "It's just a matter of plugging away, never quitting, and doing the best you can do every day."

OC Hagel said "You're kept under pressure to see how you will perform. You either do it or you don't. There isn't a halfway approach. It will all have been worth it though when I pin on that little gold bar." Thousands before him have said those exact words. It never changes.

43rd Engrs help in environment cleanup

By WILLIAM D. SAMS

Improving our environment is a never ending job. Preserving natural resources and safeguarding the ecology is the responsibility of all citizens, military and civilian.

People working together, achieving the ultimate goal in restoring the environment, with the close knit cooperation of military units and civilian organizations the combination has proven effective. During recent weeks soldier engineers from the 43rd Engr. Bn., 36th Engr. Grp., have performed effectively as "hosts to the ecology" during the Columbus "CLEAN-UP" project, sponsored by the Columbus Youth Organization (CYO).

Assisting the CYO for the past four years have been the 43rd Engrs., supplying equipment and manpower for the "CLEAN-UP."

The "CLEAN-UP" project for the CYO was originated in 1970 as an effort to rid the city and surrounding developments of unsightly waste material, junk and old automobile bodies.

At the same time the CYO project offers summer jobs to over four thousand young adults from high school and college levels.

During the summer the CYO "CLEAN-UP" project pays out over $77 thousand to young men and women; enabling them to gain job references and earn money at the same time.

Summer 1974 will mark the fourth year the 36th Engrs. have been called upon to assist the CYO "CLEAN-UP" project.

Introducing the talents of the 43rd Engr. Bn. has proven to be a great asset to the CYO.

"For the past several years the 36th Engrs. have provided valuable assistance to our organization," stated Army COL (Ret) Jesse Wheeler, supervisor and director, CYO.

Wheeler also said, "Without the lending assistance from the engineers our job would have taken longer and been more costly."

In a relatively short period of time, ten days, the CYO CLEAN-UP project was able to accumulate almost 105 tons of debris. Over 35 tons of waste material was recyclable.

"The problem didn't come from not having enough 'people power', Wheeler said, "but we needed heavy equipment for moving junked cars from certain areas. The engineers were there when we needed them," he added.

Within the ten day pick up the engineers were able to strip the city's street of the eyesore of over fifty junked cars.

"The interest and responsibility displayed by the 43rd Engrs., was noticeably well distributed among the men who took part in the 'CLEAN-UP' project," explains the CYO Director Wheeler.

"We are looking forward to working with the 36th Engr. Grp., further on future projects of this nature in bettering our city and community," Wheeler stated.

"The first phase of the CYO 'CLEAN-UP' project has been a tremendous success," Wheeler said. "Beginning again Aug. 5, the second phase of the CYO 'CLEAN-UP' project will consist of searching the land for any injustice placed on our ecology by littering, dumping and abandoning old junk vehicles," concludes retired Army COL and CYO Director Jesse Wheeler.

The "CLEAN-UP" project is another civic action undertaken by the soldier engineers of the 36th Engr. Grp.

These projects have often been described as being valuable to both civilian and military.

No truer words could be said when talking to the men who have worked on these projects. Heavy equipment operators, truck drivers, dozer and loader operators all do a job they were trained to do.

"It's different than having to stay in the motor pool all day, it gives me a chance to work and feel I have done a day's work," remarked SP4 John F. McCumber, Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn.

McCumber was a truck driver for the CYO "CLEAN-UP" project, and made sure the workers got to where they were going.

"Being out in the civilian public is very important to the 36th Engr. Grp.'s image and the Army as a whole," stated SP5 Billy Bennet, Co. A, 43rd Engrs. "People can really see the Army is trying to work for them, instead of producing a nuisance.

"There are big things going on," an engineer of the 43rd Engrs. said, "we'll be up in our necks before long, and it's great." Everyone will know how important an engineer unit can be when the men are properly utilized.

Comments and statements such as these are common place throughout the 36th Engineer Grp., concerning their civic projects.

197th settles year-old grudge

By C. B. Hoover

The argument of who won the annual May grudge match softball game between the officers and NCOs of the 197th Inf Bde, was resolved last week in a return to Golden Park. The NCOs squeaked by the officers to win 12-11.

"Flash" Parham, the pitcher for the officers, had several malfunctions in his rocket ball and was tagged for two runs in the top of the first.

"Hammer Head" Hamerly for the NCOs was unable to put the wind into his Georgia twister ball or sting into his buzzball and gave up five runs in the bottom of the first.

The second inning saw "Hammer Head" Hamerly put the wind back into his Georgia twister and "Flash" Parham correct the trajectory of his rocket ball to tighten up the game.

The pace of the game slowed down but, "Bernie-the-Wif" Muller-Thym's pace didn't. Thinking he was playing football he ran into the first baseman "Bones" Jones trying to get to base and was effortlessly up-ended and put out.

"Little Willie" Little added a touch of dramatics to the game upon taking over a plate umpire using varied and colorful gestures in calling the plays.

"They're using mush balls on us now!" "That's why we can't hit out of the infield," commented the officers as they went two innings without a run.

"There weren't any mush balls being used," stated Little. "At least not when I took over as umpire."

"Galloping" Gillem blasted the ball for a triple on an error as "Bones" Jones let the ball fly over his head in the fifth.

The top of the sixth saw the officers nearly save the game when "Boomerang" Ordway made a diving catch deep along the right field foul line to steal at least one run from the NCOs.

For his outstanding playing ability "Boomerang" Ordway was voted the winner of the Golden Glove Award by the press following the game.

At one point tempers flew between "Slippery" Spencer of the officers and "Little Willie" Little when Little called a strike on Spencer. "Horrible" Hill, the chief umpire, resolved the problem however by reversing the call.

Driving in four runs on as many errors the NCOs took and held the lead in the seventh and final inning.

"Hammer Head" Hamerly of the NCOs was named the game's most valuable player by the press at the game. Hamerly's clutch hit in the seventh put the NCOs ahead and his outstanding pitching won the game for the NCOs.

Darrel Winterton, Hq & Spt Company, 1-29th Infantry rounds third en route to a score, as the Headquarters clerks romped to an 11-1 victory over league leader Company A. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Co A upset again; now tied for top

Darrel Winterton's three-run double and Gordy Thomas' two-run homer sparked a five-run third inning as the surging Hqs team of the 1/29th Inf mauling the first place Co A team by a score of 11-1.

Thomas' blast came with two out in the third inning with one man on base and pushed Hq & Spt Co of the PIONEERS out in front, 5-0.

Faltering Co A picked up their lone run in the fourth inning on a base hit by Sandy MacPherson, and he came home minutes later on a Willie Thames sacrifice fly.

The fifth and final inning — due to the 10 run lead rule — proved to be fatal for Co A, as the Hqs clerks opened up with a base hit barrage that literally knocked the spirit out of their opponents.

Consecutive hits by Bruce LaPorte, Richard Fields, Wilmer Gray, and Calvin Hastie brought the Hqs & Spt lead to nine. With still no outs, Roy Pittman came to the plate with two men on, needing to drive in but one of them for the victory. Pittman smashed a double to left-center and the game ended, Co A realizing their second defeat of the season, against 13 victories.

While Hq & Spt Co was embarrassing Co A, the artillerymen from Co E, 1/29th Inf were taking advantage of the brief setback of the league leaders.

Beginning the week with a 9-2 record, Co E, FA swept to four consecutive victories to push them into a tie for first place in the Yellow Division with Co A.

All four victories were "fairly routine" for the big guns of Co E, as they amassed a total of 65 runs in the four-game spread. The first two wins were against last place Co B, who fell easy prey, 16-8 and 20-3.

In their second doubleheader of the week, the artillerymen found little opposition from the Co C Rangers who literally handed both games to Co E, 17-1 and 12-0.

STANDINGS — YELLOW DIVISION OF TSB:

Co E - 13-2
Hq & Spt - 8-6
Co D - 4-9
Co C - 3-12
Co B - 2-12

Three teams favored in 197th tourney

By Bob Thomas

Home runs, double plays and rhubarb are all a part of the 197th Inf Bde Slow Pitch Softball Championships which began July 15 and continued through this week.

After a full week of play three teams emerged as favorites in the double elimination tournament. Only two of them will represent the 197th Inf Bde in the Ft. Benning tournament slated to begin August 12.

Co A (Admin), 197th Spt Bn, runner-up in the 1973 post level championships, defeated Co A, 2nd Bn, 69th Ar. by a score of 19-11.

"We have most of our team from last year back," explained the A-Admin assistant coach, spy Bob Mayhew. "The new players we have had strengthened our defense and hitting from last year."

The redlegs of Btry C, 2nd Bn, 10th FA, pulled of a surprise win over Cbt Spt Co, 2nd Bn, 69th Ar, 12-10. The artillerymen finally took the see-saw battle with errors playing a part in the outcome.

"Not to take anything away from Charlie Battery," stated the tanker's catcher, LT Karl Zart, "but we really had a bad night. During the regular season we only lost four games, all of them like last night. We have to buckle down now since another loss would put us out of the tournament."

The redlegs saw their victory from another light. "A desire to win," stated LT Steven A. Emison, "has been the key. After spending three days and nights in the field we came in late Wednesday night and played two games Thursday, winning both."

The redlegs defeated Co A, 1st Bn, 58th Inf, 16-8 the morning after returning from their Operational Readiness Test (ORT).

Entries for officer's golf tourney now being taken

Entries are now being accepted for the Officer's Country Club Golf Tournament to be held on August 31 through September 2.

This year's tourney will be a 54 hole medal play event on the Pineside course. 18 holes will be played on each day of the tournament.

All members of the Officers Club are eligible to enter. A $5.00 entry fee will be collected which will be returned in prizes.

Apply for entry at the Country Club Pro-Shop before the deadline of 5 p.m. on August 28. Further information can be obtained by calling 687-1940.

Motorcyclist will attempt record jump

The largest, most spectacular event in the Southeast takes place when a daring young man, 22 year old Bob Pleso from Ocala, Fla., attempts a 30 car, new "World's Motorcycle Record Jump," Sunday afternoon, August 4 at the Phenix City Dragway in Phenix City, Ala., along with a full program of Drag Racing.

Pleso, a Youngstown Ohio native rated as one of the nation's top jumpers and riding a Yamaha 360, will be going after the "World's Record" currently held by fellow Floridian, Bob Gill from St. Petersburg. Gill established the record of jumping 22 cars, a distance of 171 feet, at the Seattle Int'l Raceway in Seattle, Wash, on July 17, 1973.

Pleso will attempt to clear 30 automobiles and a distance in the vicinity of 200 feet, an exploit never before accomplished by any jumper. He is one of the very few jumpers in the country that lands without the aid of a landing ramp. His ramp-to-ground landing is the roughest and toughest a jumper can use. He has had four major crashes in his two and one-half year jumping career but proudly boasts he is the only major jumper that has never suffered a broken bone.

In addition to Pleso's record attempt, fans will be treated to a program of top-notch drag racing featuring the best 3-out-of-3 runs for the Double A Nitro Burning Blown Funny Cars of "Wild Willie" Borsch from California and 19 year old Spring Nationals winner Billy Meyers from Waco, Texas. Borsch pilots the Revell Toy's "Wild Man Charger."

Top modifieds, gassers and Super Stocks from all over the Southeast will take part in the afternoon's giant program.

Another special added attraction will be the first appearance in this area of 13 year old Tuck Henderson from Nashville, Tenn. Tuck will attempt to jump four automobiles riding a stock street bicycle from J. C. Penney's.

Borsch and Meyers will start the show off promptly at 2 p.m. followed by the modifieds, gassers, super stocks and Tuck Henderson's jump on the bicycle.

The final event of the day will be Pleso's attempt of a new "World's Record Motorcycle Jump" over the 30 automobiles.

Gates to the Dragway will open at 10:30 a.m. and tickets go on sale then. Phenix City Dragway is located 3 miles of Highway 80 West on Woodland Road.

Slahucka named to US shooting team

CHARDON, Ohio — SP4 William Slahucka, United States Army Marksmanship Unit, held on to second place in the U.S. International Skeet Championship to gain a berth on the U.S. Shooting Team that will compete in Thun, Switzerland this September against the best nations in the world. Slahucka, from Johnson City, New York, held a commanding three bird lead after 200 birds with a near perfect 199. He saw his lead vanish in the final 100 birds, however, as SP4 John Satterwhite, U.S. Army Reserve, bolted to the front with a clean round of 100. Satterwhite finished with a 296 to grab the National International Skeet Championship, while Slahucka with a 292 settled for second.

IOAC-4- SAC battle for first

By GEORGE KORDA

The classic battle for first place was in the making. Two teams with identical 12-3 records, IOAC 4-74 and the Small Arms Committee squared off for a fight for the lead in TSB's Red division. It was a great game if you were an IOAC 4 fan. They nailed SAC 10-0 at field No. 1 on July 17.

It began as a tight defensive struggle, neither team relaxing for even a moment. In the third inning SAC's seams started to come apart. Three successive singles by IOAC 4 and some untimely errors by SAC put two IOAC runs on the board.

In the fourth inning errors by SAC fielders contributed to two more runs for IOAC 4. Then with two men on Jack Baker hit a hard ground ball straight up the middle. It took a bad hop and glanced off the centerfielder's leg, and by the time the dust had settled Baker was in with an error assisted home run and IOAC 4 led 7-0.

In the SAC fourth with two outs IOAC 4 left fielder Skip Butler made the defensive play of the

Holton, Burford, Wadsworth winners in golf tournament

Freddie Holton, of Phenix City, routed Kris Starling in the match play finals for the Georgia-Alabama Golf Tournament 15-16 year old championship at the Four Lake Golf Course last Sunday.

Scott Burford, son of LTC (Ret.) and Mrs. Osear Burford defeated Terry Kee 2 and 1 to win the 13-14 year old title. Burford, a Columbus resident, scored a semi-final win over Tommy Culpepper by a 3 and 2 score while Kee dispatched Roger Glenn by the same score in his semifinal match.

Fred Wadsworth, son of LTC and Mrs. Fred Wadsworth, defeated another Benningite, Paul McGillicuddy, 6 and 5 for the 11-12 championship.

game. The SAC hitter lofted a short fly ball along the left field foul line. At the swing of the bat, Butler was running flat out. An instant before the ball struck the ground he dove and caught it for the inning ending out.

One inning later the game came to an end. With two men on Bill Harp drilled a line drive home run over the left field fence putting IOAC 4 ahead 10-0 and they were declared winners by virtue of the 10-run rule.

Pony club members compete at Midland

Three members of the Ft. Benning Pony Club are competing in the National Pony Club Rally at the Midland Pines Stables in Midland, Ga. this week.

Terry Lahnstein, Betsy Tully and Laurie Pennisi are veterans of Benning's entry in last years National Rally in Omaha, Nebraska. They will be joined by Blythe Joslin and Ann Hutton of the North River Pony Club from Tuscaloosa, Ala., to form the South Regional "B" team. All team members qualified at a regional meet held in Huntsville, Ala., last month.

"We rode well in last years National", stated Mrs. Robert Tully, co-chairman, Ft. Benning Pony Club, "but we had problems in stable management. We hope that Larue Pennisi, acting as the team stable manager, will do the job and keep us in contention this year."

"There will be about 20 "B" teams, from all over the country, entered in this years rally," concluded Mrs. Tully.

The rally opened Tuesday, July 23, with actual riding competition starting Thursday with dressage events. Friday's program will cover cross country and Saturday's wrap-up will include a parade of teams and stadium jumping.

Southern Open offers Birdie watcher tickets

Sam Wellborn, Southern Open President, has announced the start of Birdie Watcher ticket sales for the Southern Open Golf Tournament to be held at the Green Island golf course, September 3rd through the 8th.

The familiar "gift-pak" will be known as the "Birdie Watcher Special" and will consist of four tickets at a total cost of ten dollars. Birdie Watcher tickets will be available through Aug. 31 from the Columbus Jaycees and the Metropolitan Boys Club. Each ticket is good for one admission to the tournament on any of the five days of the tournament or may all be used on the same day.

This year's Southern Open will feature the biggest and best field of professional golfers ever to come to Columbus. The Birdie Watcher Special is a great way to support the Southern Open while at the same time getting admission to the tournament at half price and giving a great boost to two of the area's most active civic organizations, the Jaycees and the Boys Club.

For further information contact Richard M. Olnick, 1st VP, Columbus Jaycees at 323-6485 or Roy Turgeon, Executive Director of the Metropolitan Boys Club at 689-1199.

Eufaula to host speedboat race

Mr. Donald Pruitt, Outboard Performance Craft Vice President of the American Power Boat Association, has announced that Lake Eufaula will be the site for the 1974 National Championships for the Outboard Performance Craft. The race will be the largest of its kind in the United States and will be held August 23, 24, and 25.

The race, which matches the top boat race drivers from all over the United States, will be part of the 11th Annual Lake Festival which annually draws thousands of visitors to the Bluff City for a gala weekend.

The national boat races this year will be located at Old Creek Town Park, two miles north of the city of Eufaula. Pruitt stated that Lake Eufaula probably has the best viewing area for races of any racing lake in the nation. Although the actual races will be held on Saturday and Sunday, August 24-25, the avid boat racing fans will undoubtedly want to arrive early on Friday the 23rd to view the boats in the racing pits and during their trial runs.

SFC Lloyd Hutchinson has been nominated for the All-Army slow pitch softball team. Even the best players have their problems sometimes though. Here an errant throw from shortstop bounces in the dirt and gets by SFC Hutchinson at First base. The IOAC 4 runner slides in safely. This was just about the way the whole game went for SFC Hutchinson and the rest of his Small Arms Committee teammates as they dropped a 10-0 decision to IOAC-4. (Photo by George Korda)

Club has lack of interest

By BILL KLOEB

An old commander I had years ago always said "At least two per cent of the troops never got the word." It seemed that in the case of the Rod and Gun Club general membership meeting last week there were a lot more than two per cent who didn't get the word. It could be that publicity was lacking. On the other hand it could have been a lack of interest. Or the time was not convenient for a large number of members. Or maybe some just forgot. At any rate I'm going to give a brief rundown on what took place for the benefit of those who are interested but just couldn't be present.

There were very few people present but the members who were there demonstrated a great deal of interest and thirst for knowledge.

COL Jack Whitted, chairman of the club advisory council "chaired" the meeting. He gave a brief rundown on the regulations under which the club operates and club activities during the past few months with emphasis on financial and organizational problems past and present.

Members Have Questions

He also stressed that a club is no better than its membership. An active membership will produce a club with a lot of action and interesting activities. He encouraged everyone to help make the club an active and interesting organization. Those present were encouraged to volunteer for seats on the advisory council or to act in some capacity on committees. No time limit was set for volunteering. The invitation is still open to anyone interested.

At this time the colonel opened the meeting to questions from the floor.

During the next two hours the colonel fielded questions on subjects that ranged from the fairness of post litter laws to the daily availability of certain type fishing lures in the club pro shop. I'd be less than honest if I didn't say that quite a few of the questions were really complaints. In most instances COL Whitted's answer carried two themes. "We will do what we can to correct the situation but if you want to make sure, volunteer and help to set it straight."

Safety Orientations

Some people who have hunted and fished here for years feel that they should not be required to attend. They say they know all the regulations and abide by them. I'm sure there are quite a few people who don't need the orientation but its just not feasible to find out who they are and excuse them. Those who are here next year can take some consolation in the fact that they won't have to attend again when the 1975-76 permits are issued. Those attending one of this year's orientation will have a special stamp placed on the 1974-75 permit. If they produce this stamped permit next year, the new license will be stamped to indicate they have complied with the regulation.

The first of these orientations will be presented in Classroom 5, Infantry Hall at 7 p.m. July 31. It will consist of a brief discussion concerning safety problems unique to Fort Benning and a movie on hunting safety. Additional briefings will be held August 7, 14, 21 and 28.

3/7th troops enjoy ladder climbing

By LAMAR BATTLES

"Ready? You bet we're ready!" That's the feeling "Cottonbalers" of the 3rd Bn, 7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, are voicing about the unit's readiness posture.

Building that confidence in the battalion, its soldiers and the proficiency of both, was the subject of airmobile training conducted last week for two of the unit's mortar platoons.

"It was good training because it was real training. Working with the helicopters and actually doing everything ourselves was exciting," commented PFC Chris Martin, a member of the heavy mortar platoon, combat support company.

The heavy mortar platoon and Co C's 81mm mortar platoon spent an entire day learning the fine points of transporting equipment, supplies and themselves by helicopter. Two more platoons participated in the training the following day and more airmobile training is scheduled for the future.

Troop ladder training highlighted the day's activities as the "Cottonbalers" learned how to board and deploy out of a CH-47C aircraft using the troop ladder. The big CH-47C "Chinook" hovered over the training site as each man took his turn climbing up the ladder and back down again.

"It's a little scary at first," explained SGT Jewell Day, acting platoon sergeant for Co C's mortar platoon. "The whole platoon was apprehensive until the first man got on the ladder, but once you get half way up it's OK."

MAJ William J. Windham, battalion S-3, explained that the exercise was the very first troop ladder training the unit has participated in.

"It was not only good adventure training, but also a confidence builder," added MAJ Windham.

Instruction in use of the troop ladder and transporting procedures was provided by Chief Warrant Officers Ludwig Burger and David Hill who traveled from Ft. Bragg, North Carolina with the Chinooks to take part in the training.

"The mortar crews were given a good briefing before we loaded on the aircraft and we had very little trouble getting set-up. Without that briefing we would have had problems," commented SP5 Thomas Yarbrough, chief computer, fire direction center, 81mm mortar platoon.

Six gamma goats, two jeeps and trailers, and 53 soldiers were airlifted to the training site by the giant Chinooks. It was the first time the platoons were able to move the crews, mortars, gamma goats, and jeeps at the same time during an airmobile operation.

LTC Richard D. Gillem, battalion commander, circulated throughout the training area and characterized the operation as part of the soldiers airmobile familiarization and confidence training.

"This in essence is readiness training oriented toward preparing the units for participation in future airmobile operations," added MAJ Windham.

"It'll work for us," concluded SSG Bill Wallace, heavy mortar platoon sergeant. "We've got the best unit in the brigade, and we did a great job on the exercise."

TSB holds special command changes

Three "extra-special" changes of command have taken place in TSB within the past two weeks. They are special in that in two cases the company guidon was passed from a captain to a First Sergeant, and in the other a First Sergeant turned his command over to another First Sergeant. These out-of-the-ordinary ceremonies are part of the new NCO School of Infantry concept.

ISG Henry Caro took command of the 54th Co 5th Student Bn not quite 5 months ago. On July 13 he turned his company over to ISG Charles Gibbs as ISG Caro is to be promoted to Command Sergeant Major on August 1.

ISG James Tidwell, new commander of 56th Co is a veteran of command. A former captain, he reverted to NCO after a reduction in force. A past commander of Non-commissioned Officer Candidate Companies, he says, "I can't detect any difference between being a commanding officer or a commanding ISG. I'm just doing it with less rank now."

ISG Jesus Villagomez of 53d Co feels being a ISG is the best training for command. "When you are a ISG you run the company anyway" he remarked.

These are the kind of men who must mold the Army's future NCOs. Dedicated, confident, and primarily professional.

Three PIONEER's selected for prep school

Three PIONEERS from Co C (Airborne-Ranger), 1st Bn, 29th Inf, TSB have recently been selected to attend the United States Military Academy (USMA) prep school.

SP4 Michael Tanner, SP4 Burkhard Burbank, and PFC Forrest Taylor are all riflemen with the PIONEER Ranger Company. They were approached in Basic Training and queried about attending West Point.

Their written test scores were adequate, and coupled with high recommendations from their company commander, led to their being accepted to the preparatory school.

Tanner, Burbank, and Taylor have one small advantage over most soldiers attending the USMA prep school; they have a first hand knowledge of exactly what to expect and of what will be expected of them, not only at the prep school but at West Point too.

West Point Cadet Michael Bass, currently in his final year at the academy, is presently assigned to Btry C, 83rd Artillery of the PIONEERS. When he learned of the three soldiers being accepted to the prep school, he offered to help.

"Prep school wasn't really all that rugged," stated Bass. "The real discipline comes when you men get to The Point."

"As a Plebe (freshman)," Bass continued, "there's a lot of harassment and discipline forced on you. But you get used to it ... after a while it becomes second nature."

SP4 Tanner was particularly concerned with academic requirements at West Point, and Cadet Bass was able to give him the details.

"Is there an adequate selection of subjects; that is, can you choose your own curriculum?" queried Tanner.

"Your first two years are pretty well laid out for you," Bass told his attentive audience of three, "but

1st Cavalry horse platoon performs

The 1st Cavalry Division's Horse Platoon led the Jaycees Rodeo Parade last night and will take part in the rodeo tonight and tomorrow night at the Municipal Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Year's Day, they marched in the Cotton Bowl Parade in Dallas.

Whenever possible, they use authentic equipment, and when it isn't available, they have exact copies hand made to look like the uniforms and gear of the U.S. Cavalrymen of the 1880s.

Membership in the platoon is selective; prospective members undergo a 10-day trial before they are accepted. Most of the riders grew up on farms or ranches.

The men do their own maintenance on equipment, and transport themselves and their horses to and from shows. The unit has a blacksmith, an auctioneer, a bugler, a signpainter, and a muleskinner who was in veterinary school before entering the Army.

The drills they perform are taken from an 1873 tactics manual, but some of the drills are changed to include more action for the audience. They run a saber course that come straight out of the old manual. They also perform a downed rider pick-up in which a man is unhorsed in combat and another rider goes out and picks him up. The mules they use to pull the escort wagon were in the movie, "The Cowboys."

At the Rodeo, the Horse Platoon will present the colors and will give a 15-minute drill during the program. Proceeds of the Rodeo will go to the Listening Eyes School for deaf children and to other Jaycee projects. The rodeo is sanctioned by the American Cowboys Association.

The Horse Platoon is from the 1st Cav Div headquarters at Ft. Hood, Tex., and will perform at Ft. Benning today at 4 p.m. in conjunction with the 27th annual 1st Cav Div reunion August 1 through 4. Today's performance will be on Gardner Field, adjacent to York Field.

The platoon was organized as a volunteer honor guard in 1971 with four men, and now has 32 members. The 1st Cav Div Association provides financial support to the platoon, and gave money to buy authentic equipment.

The platoon's first demonstrations were given in April 1972, and the riders have been performing throughout the Southwest ever since. On New

Inform your survivors

"If you haven't done so, tell your survivors what benefits they might be entitled to in event of your death," the Veterans Administration periodically reminds the nation's more than 29 million veterans.

Officials insist there are good reasons for this advice.

"Too often," they pointed out, "the veteran and his wife neglect to discuss the subject of death, resulting in unnecessary burden on survivors in times of great emotional stress."

Not only should the veteran and his wife discuss locations of important family documents, they should make sure they are protected from fire, theft and damage. It also was emphasized that survivors should be briefed on what to do in case of the veteran's death.

The veteran's family should be told of possible survivor's benefits such as VA's dependency and indemnity compensation for service-connected death, or nonservice-connected death pensions for widows or just for children in cases where a widow may be ineligible because of excessive income.

Burial benefits for wartime and certain peacetime veterans should not be overlooked. These include a maximum $250 burial allowance, plus a plot allowance not exceeding $150 for veterans buried outside national cemeteries. In lieu of these benefits, there is an $800 burial allowance for veterans who die of service connected disabilities.

VA officials further stressed the importance of keeping track of GI insurance policy numbers, claim numbers for inclusion in all correspondence with VA, commercial insurance policies, social security numbers and naturalization papers—all important in claiming various survivor benefits.

AUG

197th leads the way in this black boot Army

By Bob Cowles

Many people say the Army will never be able to entice the type of men it needs into joining. Others say it will be a long, hard fight.

The Army may have a long way to go before it gets to where it wants to be and it may never reach that goal, but as long as there are units such as the 197th Inf Bde experimenting and proving new theories, the chances of succeeding for the Army are greatly improved.

The 197th Inf Bde (a leader in the unit-of-choice recruiting program) and Ft. Benning were among the original participants in Project VOLAR in 1971. In keeping with and improving on these original concepts, the 197th has lived up to its motto 'Forever Forward.'

The modernization of the billets on Kelley Hill is a good example of how the brigade and the Army are improving the living conditions from what they used to be. No longer do men have to sleep in the old World War II wooden barracks with the open bays.

Today's soldiers live in air conditioned, carpeted recreation rooms and drinks from beer machines located in the barracks. They're allowed to decorate their rooms, within reason, and they have their own postal boxes instead of having to stand mail-call formations.

Another improvement in the living conditions is the dining facilities. The men now have an option of eating the regular menu at the noon and evening meals or they can choose something from a "short order" menu, consisting of various sandwiches and french fries. Even the meal hours have been extended on weekends and holidays for those who are late sleepers.

"I never dreamed that the Army would ever live like this," stated SFC Billy J. Cox, a member of the 3/7th, 197th Inf Bde and one who worked with the VOLAR team when it came to Ft. Benning. "There is just no comparison between the way the 'brown boot' Army lived and the way we are living today."

"The only part of the new living conditions that I felt would not work was the beer in barracks idea. But so far it has been doing all rights," added SFC Cox.

No longer are there restrictions on how far a soldier can travel during a holiday or a three-day pass. "There never should have been any restrictions on distance," commented SFC Cox. "How far a man can travel in a given amount of time depends upon himself and the mode of transportation he is taking. Nowadays it's possible to travel across the country in only a few hours."

Low wages is probably the biggest complaint of the young soldiers today. Pay in the Army has been on the incline for quite a few years now, and raises have been coming on a pretty regular basis. Pay for the middle ranking enlisted men (grades E-4 to E-6) are now comparable to that of many civilian jobs, and with the major benefits a soldier receives, his money stretches even farther.

Unit-of-choice and job options play a big role in today's changing Army. Soldiers today can usually pick the field in which they wish to work. They are thoroughly trained in their field of occupation and are relatively secure in that they won't be doing a different job.

Like the 197th, the rest of the Army is doing all it can to keep work limited to a five day week. For the most part, a man is given compensatory time off for duty performed during a weekend or holiday.

As far as the unit-of-choice program, a man can now enlist or reenlist for the unit or duty station of his choice and be guaranteed a certain amount of time at that place.

"A man will do better work and will work harder when he knows he is going to be doing one certain job and he at a certain place for a period of time," said SFC Cox. "This takes a lot of the worry off of the soldier's mind."

The elimination of demeaning tasks was one of the greatest steps forward for the Army, especially the elimination of kitchen police (KP). Men are now given advanced notice of any extra duties they may have to perform.

"The training that is available today is outstanding," continued SFC Cox. "A man today has an almost unlimited opportunity to better himself through the many advanced schools that the Army has available."

Unit training has become more advanced and tactical in nature as the years have gone by. Repetitive non-essential training has been eliminated from the Army.

"In order to get the type of people that the Army wants and needs, they have got a lot more to improve upon," concluded SFC Cox. "What they have done so far is just open the door to expansion. What has been done has been great and if things keep progressing in the manner they are now, I'm sure that the Army will reach its objective."

Aggressor team cited for training 100 men

A six-man aggressor training team (ATT) from the 179th Military Intelligence Detachment (MID), 197th Inf Bde has been awarded a brigade Certificate of Achievement for training 100 officers and men from Troop A, 15th Cav in aggressor doctrine and for supporting the 1st Bn (Mech) 161st Inf during its annual training at Ft. Benning.

The special training was conducted in preparation for Troop A's mission as an aggressor force against the 1st Bn (Mech), 161st Inf during a recently held field training exercise.

Aggressor support for the FTX was just one phase of the administrative and field support provided by the 197th for the visiting National Guard unit.

"This training was very beneficial to Troop A," commented SSG Larry Boswell, ATT NCOIC. "Now they have been introduced to aggressor techniques."

The first day of training included comprehensive classes on aggressor uniform and insignia, aggressor equipment, psychological warfare, and aggressor tactics.

A practical exercise covering tactics, battle formations and communications highlighted the second day's training.

Classes concluded with a summary by ATT instructors and a question and answer session.

"This was without a doubt the best training they've ever received on aggressor doctrine here at Ft. Benning," stated ATT instructor SGT Carry Morgan.

"It was a lot better than just being stuck out there to make noise," commented SP5 John Chant, a Sheridan crewman from Troop A. "The classes were well presented and explained everything we had to do."

"That's right," added PVT Glenn Hasley, also a Sheridan crewman. "The instructors were really professional and the training helped us do a good job."

COL White nominated for brigadier general

COL John W. White, Commander of the Medical Department Activity and Martin Army Hospital, has been nominated for promotion to brigadier general.

He has served in a number of capacities during his career, including Chief, Surgical Service and Professional Services at the United States Army Hospital, Ft. Hood, Texas; Chief, Department of Surgery, Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, Colorado; and Chief, Professional Services and Surgical Consultant, Office of the Surgeon, Headquarters, United States Army, Europe.

He has also been Chief, Surgical Consultant, Directorate of Professional Service, Office of the Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C.; Deputy Commander, Director of Medical Education and Chief of Professional Services, Brooke General Hospital; and Commander, Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas.

COL White received his B.S. degree from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and his M.D. from the George Washington University School of Medicine; He took his internship in the Emergency Hospital, Washington, D.C., and a fellowship in pathology at Georgetown University in Washington. His residency in general surgery was also taken at Georgetown.

He is married to the former Betty Alden Waitt and is the father of Kathryn Elizabeth Seeburg, Betty Alden Taylor, and Margaret Marie White.

TIC Credit Union announces winners

The Infantry Center Credit Union has announced 14 winners in its contest to see who could guess the exact date and hour that the Credit Union would reach $10 million in assets. That time and date was 4 p.m., May 31.

Four individuals guessed the time and date exactly. They are Martha B. Boyette, Sara V. Bishop, George Cleave, and Emmanuel R. Villareal. Two people missed the exact time by one-half hour, but guessed the date correctly. They are Shirley Shaw and John W. Childs. All six of these winners will receive $166.67 each.

Soldiers complete M16 fire

It was almost Basic Combat Training all over again for soldiers of Cbt Spt Co, 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf (Patriots), 197th Inf Bde as they completed their M-16 rifle qualification at Malone 16 range.

"As a whole, the company had an extremely high score," stated LT Richard W. Parrish. "Out of 53 men about one third scored expert."

PVT Brian Plahn had the unit's highest score in record fire, hitting 53 of 56 pop-up targets.

"I thought it was fun," Plahn stated after the exercise. "It was the first time I've had a chance to fire at targets since A.I.T. (Advanced Individual Training)."

"This is different from my normal job," explained SP4 Stoney Godfrey of the unit's mortar platoon. "It's a change I'd have to say I enjoy."

PIONEER's selected

Continued from p. 2 the last two allow much greater freedom in selection of courses.

"And what about my obligation to the Army," PFC Taylor asked.

"You will have a five-year commitment," Bass stated, but I sincerely believe that it's worth it. West Point is a very worthwhile experience — you can get a lot out of it if you set your mind to it."

The three fortunate PIONEERS definitely plan to set their minds to it.

"I have every confidence in the world that I can make it," Burkhard said. "I figure if I can make it through Ranger school, I can make it through anything."

Adjusting to military service

By Chaplain (COL) Sterling Wetherell

IMMATURITY

Environmental factors are not the only hazards. A person's immaturity also can create problems. There are forms of maturity over which a person has no control. Physical maturity, for instance, comes at its own bidding and in its own time. Social maturity, or to be grown up enough in one's reactions to inhabit a grownup's world, is something over which we do have control. To cling to childish ways of reacting to life's stresses is often the result of deliberate conscious effort. Pouting, sulking, surliness, copious tears may be symptoms of a dangerous immaturity.

To be mature, especially socially and mentally mature, has such a large role to play in everyone's life, male or female, military or civilian, that it will be the subject of another separate discussion. In that discussion we will consider the symptoms of immaturity that have a way of lapping over or hanging on into adulthood, hampering our efforts to realize all that we want in life.

LACK OF PURPOSE

Many people seem to reach adulthood in the manner of little Topsy, who "just grewed," without ever asking themselves the significant question, "Why?" Their lack of purpose in life remains their bitterest and most constant enemy. In the surveys we mentioned this was cited as the leading cause of much dissatisfaction and a cause for many problems that develop in the individual's life. Much has been written recently, too, about the growing stress of the sense of personal uselessness or emptiness caused by the automated nature of modern households. The frustrations of large numbers of wives and mothers who spent years on higher education are recounted, and how they question its value in their confinement to their few household chores or in caring for minor children.

In the military, once people have answered the question as to what their job's purpose is, they should have a heightened appreciation of the strong element of service that is in it. Conceivably, because of the vastness of the military establishment, some people might begin to look at themselves or their assignment as a mere serial number, another MOS, a job of small dimensions. An honest and earnest look should enable them to see that they are serving their nation and mankind no matter how small they may personally consider that contribution. They learn to take pride not only in what they do, but how they do it and why they do their job.

You might now proceed to discuss some of the things and some of the attitudes that go to make up the real purpose of this life.

A SENSE OF BELONGING

To be aware of her feminine dignity and nature and that same nature in others also makes belonging to a unit or a group a natural thing. This sense of belonging grows as she takes more interest in others who may need her. Service life contains many opportunities to offer friendship, sympathy, and one's concern for others. Getting to know other people and their problems, even their faults or flaws, can add the dimension of tolerance and understanding to one's character. It opens the way to become more in her unit than just a lodger or boarder. She contributes and she belongs.

To have group identification — to really belong — calls for effort. We must look for and expect to find friendship in others. When we look for goodness, for the likeable qualities in others, we are liable to find that many are potential friends, many are of an amazing goodness and are most likeable.

Post school registration set for August 15-16

School registration for Ft. Benning children who have not pre-registered (grades kindergarten through 8) will be held August 15-16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in all Ft. Benning Dependents' Schools. Information on where to register by grade and housing area will be mailed to all on-post family quarters.

Children who were in school at the end of the last school term were pre-registered. Between August 6 and 15, parents should inform the schools whether or not their children will be here for the coming school term. This is most important for transportation and placement planning.

High school students may attend public schools in Muscogee County School District without charge if properly registered with the Ft. Benning Dependents' Schools Officer. This is a must even if they attended Muscogee County Schools and pre-registered last year.

Registration for these students will be held in the homeroom at the Don C. Faith School on August 15 and 16 (or in Building 880-A for those arriving on Post after Aug. 16).

Transportation will not be provided for registration but will be available on the opening day of school.

On-post parents with children who attended special education classes in Muscogee County last year are being contacted to arrange for proper placement again this year. Parents who are new to the system and have children who have been enrolled in special education classes in another school system should contact the office of the Assistant Superintendent (543-7743) for grades 1-8 or the Schools Officer (545-4418) for grades 9-12. These offices are located in Building 880-A.

Transportation schedules, cafeteria meal coupon books and information on extracurricular activities will be available at registration.

Representatives of the PTA will assist parents at all schools.

Retired COL writes, 'I am concerned'

TO THE EDITOR:

I am concerned.

I am concerned that the soldier of today (male and female) does not understand the enormous changes in the Army in the past ten years — changes that virtually without exception have been intended to improve the life and the lifestyle of men and women under arms. In my earlier days, short-sleeve shirts, rolled sleeve fatigues, wash and wear uniforms — to name only some comfort items — were unheard of.

The spectrum of improvements is in truth astounding and not to just the brown shoe, but to those of the post Korean and more immediate entrants into the service. Our uniform, haircut, pass, leave, travel and duty hour policies are more liberal today than ever before in the 200 year history of the Army.

Almost without exception the reader of these lines is a volunteer. You were not drafted and the Army must have offered something that civilian life did not offer. In short you volunteered to live within the life pattern of the Army and I cannot visualize an American community so remote from the contemporary world that you were totally ignorant of what a military lifestyle entails. Thus, the Army and you, like any other career employee, made a contract.

Conform to Army lifestyle

In return you would physically and mentally to the best of your ability conform to and comply with the lifestyle of the Army. Think about it! The only onus on you is to conform and to comply to the best of your physical and mental capability with the Army lifestyle. You are not asked to give up your religious conviction. You are not ordered to surrender your political beliefs. You are not denied the right to marry. You are not discharged or penalized if you become a parent. You did not swear an oath of allegiance to the Army or to a brother-or-sisterhood whose initiation rites are secret or whose social purpose is contrary to the rights of the American citizen. You swore an oath of allegiance to your nation of which the Army is a part. Thus, your voluntary service on your sworn oath abridges none of your fundamental privileges; it confirms only your commitment to conform and comply.

I am concerned at the appearance of Army men and women. There are too many ungroomed, unpressed, unshined persons among you to be classed as an exception to the rule. I am offended — not only as a former soldier but as a citizen — when I encounter slovenly, sloppy men and women in uniform on and off post. The female soldier whose hemline is so high as to cause stares is neither a sex symbol nor an object of admiration.

She is a comic. There are miniskirts in our contemporary culture that cause males to stand and stare in admiration or amusement — but those miniskirts are not Army green. The male soldier whose shirt is unbuttoned — hairy-masculinity evident — with his cap swiveled on the back of his head, looks like a bum.

The Black soldier, male or female, with cap perched atop an exaggerated Afro does not convey the impression of a sharp soldier but of a civilian accidentally in the Army. Before someone yells racist, honkey, pig, let me state: our Black citizens, in my opinion, look great in and out of uniform in a well-groomed Afro contoured to the head rather than copied from an entertainment world singer or actor.

NCO, officer sight loss

I am concerned at the numbers of noncoms and officers in all grades who suffer sight defects. They must be blind when, within their immediate presence, a soldier does not salute, flips his fag onto the sidewalk, drops his coke or beer can curbside and then that NCO or officer takes no corrective action. I am concerned that our blindness may hamper our ability to correct deficiencies of conduct during a fire fight.

I am concerned that so few among us have an interest in our Army community. This is more than an outpost of the great green machine. It is a community of human beings who have more in common among them than any other segment of American society. The condition of the yards, the appearance of buildings is your condition and your appearance.

The theft from an installation on post — be it the PX, the Service Club, the commissary or a motor pool — robs you. The individual who vandalizes — vandalizes you. Every facility here at Ft. Benning is your facility. You are the only individual entitled by law to use these facilities. Thus any abuse is not to some remote impersonal system but rather it is an abuse of your property and your privilege.

Best money can buy

Never in the world's history has any military force been afforded more equitable treatment by the taxpayer and citizen than our Army. Our uniforms are the best cloth money can buy, our medical care the best the medical profession can provide, our food is of gourmet quality at time of procurement.

For the careerist our retirement is the most generous offered by any institution under our flag.

If the uniform is not spoozy as you wear it, then the blame does not lie with our citizen. If your mess hall serves tasteless, monotonous food, someone made garbage out of the raw first class food but it was not the taxpayer. If our constant appetite for more pay, more allowance, more everything is not soon sated than that taxpayer will pass his ability to support us and in place of respectful support the Army now enjoys, we will become a public burden.

The perception of the citizen is affected by your dress, deportment and demands. The decision must be yours.

As you read these lines the writer will have faded into the obscurity that all retiring soldiers rightfully deserve. Whatever opinion moulding or decision making voice the undersigned exercised is now stilled forever. These are merely thoughts based on 3½ decades in olive drab, khaki and Army green as an enlisted soldier, a warrant officer and as an officer. My reflections concern you — the men and women in uniform. You are the Army — you are the person — and whatever the Army is or is not is attributable daily, directly and decisively to you.

Signed,

COL (Ret.) Charles Reidenbaugh

Military dogs getting their share of rappelling

Members of the Military Dog Detachment (MDD) of the 1st Bn, 29th Inf (PIONEERS), TSB recently took part in a unique rappelling exercise in preparation for their upcoming support of the XVIII Airborne Brave Shield mission.

The exercise was unique because soldiers from the PIONEER's MDD unit took part in the rappelling training with their dogs.

SFC Billy T. Harris, kennel master of the Military Dog Detachment devised harness in which the canines could be raised and lowered safely. His solution to the problem may net him some cold cash through the Army's Incentive Awards program.

It's "Dick" of the Military Dog Detachment, 1/29th Inf (PIONEERS), TSB, rappelling in his newly designed harness. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

According to 2Lt Larry Wortzel, MDD commander, "the harness that is now in use by the Army has limited tactical use. But the one designed by SFC Harris can be used for rappelling and Airborne drops too."

SFC Harris conceived his idea for designing the new harness from a drawing in the current Army manual. "I was studying the sketch," said Harris, "when it just came to me, and then I thought, why not kill two birds with one stone."

The first, and obvious bird, an improved dog harness, is already in use at the MDD. The second idea, and one that is currently being considered by the Combat Developments Command for possible adaptation, is using old dog blankets to construct the harness.

"I'd guess there are about 100,000 or so of these blankets in the Army inventory," Harris said. "They get limited use, as they are cold weather blankets used mostly in Alaska, so I felt it would be a good way to recycle these blankets."

SFC Harris is awaiting the Army's decision as to whether or not the blankets can be converted to harnesses, but as far as the Military Dog Detachment is concerned, the idea has been an immense success.

"I was tremendously impressed when SFC Harris brought me the finished product," stated Lt Wortzel. "After testing the harness at a rappelling training area, I'm convinced it's a winner."

'Ole Doc Sez

'Ole Doc is careful not to move injured patient

Howdy, Bub. Sally Lou, my missus, an' me drove down to Savannah last weekend for a little vacation. We wuz goin' along ok, when we came to a place in the road that had a bunch of cars lined up on both sides.

As I slowed some, a fella flagged me down, an' ast me to give them a hand with some folks that had jes gone over an embankment in they's car. I pulled over, an' follered the man who stopped me, to the scene of the accident. Sure 'nough, there wuz a little bitty car down the embankment scrunched 'ginst a tree. I had to watch where I wuz walkin' 'cuz there wuz hundreds of sapling stubs, 'bout an inch in diameter that had been cut down with a machete.

These stubs wuz astickin' outta the ground jes a couppla inches; it wuz like walkin' in a field of short daggers. Anyway, when we got to the crashed car, I seen there wuz a youngin in the front seat with her daddy, an' momma wuz sittin' in the back actin' kinda dazed 'bout the whole episode.

I 'nounced that I wuz a doctor, an' I wanted somebody to fetch my doctorin' bag from my car, an' I wanted somebody to get to a phone an' get an ambulance out here, an' I wanted two fellas to go out to the road to alert folks 'bout the cars that wuz stopped by this accident.

I could see we were gonna get the youngster and the missus outta the car without no problem, but I could see that the man wuz goin' to be a different proposition. He tole me that his chest wuz really painin' him, an' that his left leg wuz busted, for sure, an' that his back wuz stoveup some.

I got out my stethoscope, listened to his chest, an' then felt 'round some. His heart wuz ok, but it sounded to me like maybe he had a collapsed lung on the right side, an' he most likely had some broken ribs to go along with it.

His left leg wuz definitely out of alignment, an' I 'spected he had some breaks in his pelvis, an' lower back, from the way he wuz actin'. When I finished my examination, I tole everybody to jes stand back 'til the ambulance showed up.

I then gave him an injection for his pain that wuz risin' up on him while we waited for the Emergency Squad. As usual, some big-mouth decided that the man should be moved up to the road, so that when the ambulance arrived, we could save some time by havin' him there already.

I allowed that maybe we could save a lot of time, but that I thought that we'd better wait 'til we had us a litter, 'cause I didn't know ifen this fella had anything wrong with his back or not, an' we stood as good a chance of hurtin' him as helpin' him.

They tole me to stand aside, an' commenced to move him. I raised my voice, an' ordered them men to stop, but they paid me no never mind, an' kept on with the movin'. Half way up the steep embankment, one of the men stumbled an' that caused the rest of the carriers to lose their grip on the patient, an' they dropped him right on topa those sharpcut tree stubs.

Jes then, thankfully, the Emergency Squad showed up an' we got the patient into the ambulance, an' on his way, 'thout any more mishaps. I followed the ambulance to the emergency room and talked to the medico and found that the man had a collapsed right lung, a fractured left leg, a cracked pelvis, a dislocated verterbra, an' fourteen holes in his back from when he wuz dropped.

Fortunately, the back wounds were not very deep, but it wuz fourteen extra injuries that he coulda done without. Listen, Bub, it is bad business movin' a patient from a car wreck without plenty of help, an' the right equipment. If the man had been bleedin' or ifen the car wuz on fire, I woulda moved him 'thout even thinkin' 'bout it, but in this case, there wasn't no hurry, jes stupidity.

Drive defensively, all the time.
Good health to you and yours.

The good neighbor.

Rangers take PT, head for Dahlonega

"Where's the rest of sixth platoon?" asks student company commander Michael C. Buchieri.

"They're just finishing the run," comes the reply, followed by shouts as the last twenty ROTC Ranger students join their fellows.

It is a cool Wednesday morning, the sun is just starting to burn away the mist. In the distance can be heard the traffic noises of office workers on their way to their jobs. But the students of ROTC Ranger Class 11-74, standing in formation in sweat-soaked fatigues, began this day several hours ago.

They have just completed the Basic Physical Fitness Test, which all ROTC cadets are required to pass during the advanced summer camp. Of course, all of the Ranger students passed the test, though some were slightly disgruntled by the scores they made. "I should have scored at least ten points better on each event," remarked one student. That improvement would have made his already high score almost perfect.

The student company commander calls the formation to attention and takes the report. All present. He then gives orders for the ROTC Ranger students to board the buses that will take them to Camp Frank D. Merrill near Dahlonega, Ga., and the second phase of training. This order, marking the end of the first training phase, is a milestone and the students know it. The fatigue and the tired silence that were so apparent only moments ago evaporate suddenly. The double-timing students are singing their platoon songs with a volume that even the raucous grumble of the starting bus engine can't stifle.

"Oh, David was a small arms expert—'And you can be one, too, RANGER,'" the song goes.

ROTC Ranger student William F. Brown comments, "It feels great to have completed the Benning phase. We know it's going to get tougher but the start is the most aggravating part."

"The biggest part is getting your mind set, which is what the Benning phase does," adds cadet Chris Boetig. "After that all that is left is a lot of hard work."

Now the buses have closed their doors; the singing can still be heard as the buses start to move down the road. Then the buses, the students and the songs are gone.

'Don't get to see much of my brother'

"I don't get to see much of my brother," comments ROTC cadet David R. Townsend, a senior at Texas A & M. Dave is here for Ranger School. His older brother is CPT James W. Townsend, an instructor at the school's Camp Darby.

It might be said that cadet Townsend is following in his brother's footsteps. CPT Townsend also attended Texas A & M and also received his commission through the ROTC program. But according to both brothers, CPT Townsend's presence had very little to do with cadet Townsend's decision to attend the Army's most demanding leadership school.

"It was because of the challenge," cadet Townsend explains. "I'd probably would have gone through the course after I graduated from college; so when the chance came up, I decided to do it now," — in lieu of advanced summer camp.

Does cadet Townsend gain any benefit from having a brother as an instructor? Not a bit!

"It's just one of the students, as long as he's here," explains CPT Townsend. "Drop, little brother, and give me ten."

ROTC cadets get congrats

Three students of ROTC Ranger Class 11-74 were congratulated recently by LTG Orwin C. Talbott, Deputy Commander of TRADOC, for high scores on tests they completed as part of their training at the Army Ranger School. The cadets are among the 395 ROTC volunteers who were selected to attend the Ranger course in lieu of the usual advanced summer camp that each ROTC cadet is required to attend during the summer following his junior year.

Cadet Larry M. Banks, a student of Southern State College in Magnolia, Arkansas, is one of the few soldiers ever to make a perfect score on the Army's trainfire course here at Ft. Benning. Eighty targets popped up and immediately went down as mute witnesses to cadet Banks' skill with the M-16 rifle.

According to cadet Leonard E. Dodd, from Fort Valley State College, Ga., he "worked hard to get ready to come to Ranger school." The results of cadet Dodd's preparation were evident when he scored the highest in his class on the Ranger/Special Forces Physical Fitness Qualification Test that all the cadets were required to pass to be eligible for the Ranger class.

"You don't mess around with Vaughn" may never make it as a song title, but when Vaughn is ROTC Ranger student Vaughn L. Tate, of Arkansas State University, the other Ranger students would agree that you don't mess around with him. "King of the Pit" Tate was congratulated by general Talbott for being the hand-to-hand combat champ of his class. The nickname "King of the Pit" is awarded (along with some extra points) to the last student left standing in the hand-to-hand combat test.

All three of the cadets said that they found the Ranger course to be quite a challenge, but they were all confident that they will successfully complete the demanding course, graduate and receive their Ranger tabs at the end of August.

"Since I've been in the Army, the longest I've sat still is for this photograph."

SP/4 Susan Boguta likes to keep active, but we interrupted her busy schedule to find out what she likes about the Army. "After I graduated from college, I decided to try a technical job, one that would help me learn about flying. Because eventually I'd like to be a pilot. So my training's helped a lot. "I also enjoy meeting people and talking about my work. So recruiting work has been a natural for me. "One of the things I always mention to the young people I meet is that the Army's taught me you can do much more than you think you can. The opportunities are here, all you have to do is take advantage of them. And that's what I'm doing."

Today's Army gets better every time a good woman reenlists.

Two 1/29th teams in TSB playoffs

The two top teams from the 1st Bn, 29th Inf (PIONEERS) are scheduled to play in The School Brigade softball playoffs.

Though a first place team has yet to be decided for the PIONEERS, it is now final that the top two teams will be Company A of the 1-29th and Btry C, 83rd FA of the PIONEERS.

Co A has held the first place position in the Yellow Division for most of the season, behind the efforts of team captain Tim DeBey and Co A slugging star, Kanny Keith. Late season losses by Co A, however, have forced a play-off with the Artillery team.

In a recent double-header between the two top teams, Btry C, 83rd FA temporarily took over the first-place berth with a 64 win over Company A. Alpha Company came back to win the second game 4-3 however, so the two teams are in a tie for first place.

In the first game, Company A got out to an early 4-1 lead which they held until the sixth inning. The Alpha Company runs came in the 3rd inning behind base hits by Charles Ledbetter, Tim DeBey, and Danny Keith, who doubled in the three runs.

In the Artillery half of the sixth inning, the big guns opened up for five runs on six base hits and several close calls.

One of the controversial plays involved the tying run and came about when Thomas Kelly of C Btry allegedly missed third base en route to a score. The officials ruled in favor of the artillerymen, and slumping Co A had lost their third game of the season.

Company A had its revenge in the second game despite an early 3-0 lead by the artillery battery Alpha company was back in the ball game in the 4th inning on a Quillie Thames home run.

In the sixth inning, Charles Ledbetter singled, Tim DeBey got a free walk to first and Danny Keith singled in a run. Minutes later, artilleryman Jukius Buskie dropped a William Smith fly ball and DeBey came in for the winning run.

The Co A victory gave them a 17-3 overall standing in the PIONEER league, while C-83rd boasts a 15-3 record.

The two teams will enter the TSB tournament next week, and each are confident of victories which will place them in the post tournament.

Since the TSB tourney is a double-elimination event, it is possible that both School Brigade representatives will be PIONEER teams.

SSG Waterman wins Army/Marine rifle meet

A hard shooting Army marksman from Santa Barbara, Calif., grabbed the Quantico Regional High Power Rifle Championship from the grasp of his many aspiring Marine and Army competitors July 28 on the Marine Corps firing range at Quantico, Va., with a five match grand aggregate of 982-39X of a possible 1000 points.

In what was almost a photo finish, SSG Earl Waterman edged companion Army marksman SFC Martin Edmondson, San Saba, Tex., by one X count or center hit of the bullseye to claim the top honors while top Marine gunner MSG R. E. Martin posted a similar 982 with 37X for third place.

Sharply contested all the way through the two day tourney, Waterman failed to win any of the individual matches but gained the crown through his persistent high scoring in each event.

Marine gunners capitalized on their home range advantage by winning the first two matches, both events from 200 yards but the Army shooters zeroed in and took over the lead from that point.

Edmondson won the first event for the Army contingent with this 199-8X in the 20 shot 300 yard rapid fire match and was followed by MSG James L. McQueen, Plant City, Fla., who captured both 600 yard contests.

The honors for team competition also fell to the Army contenders as an Army "Blue" quartet fielded by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won the top award with their 1963 composite score while a Marine "Blue" squad was five points back for runner up.

The Regional High Power match, annually sponsored and conducted by the Quantico Marine Corps Base Rifle and Pistol Club, served as a preliminary to the big prestige match of the season between Army and Marine gunners, the annual Interservice High Power Rifle Match. Army shooters are defending champions in this highly contested event.

In an almost repeat of last year Co A (Admin), 197th Spt Bn captured the 197th Inf Bde slow pitch softball championship with Btry B, 2/10th FA taking second place.

The same teams finished one-two in 1973, only in reverse order with Btry B on top. The admin specialists of Co A came back this year, however, to defeat the field artillerymen 7-6 in the final round of the 197th Inf Bde's double elimination tournament. Both teams will represent the brigade in the Ft. Benning tournament scheduled to begin August 12. "We were forced to forfeit our first game in the championships because of our ORT (Operational Readiness Test)," explained Btry B's assistant coach, SP4 Dwight Kittenger. "A lot of people thought we were out of it then. The pressure was really on us."

After their first round forfeit Btry B came back to defeat Co A, 1/58th Inf 9-4; Co C, 3/7th Inf by a score of 7-6; Cbt Spt Co, 2/69th Amr (9-5) and C Btry, 2/10th by a score of 8-7.

"Our team plays well in a clutch situation," Kittenger pointed out. "All of our scores were close, including the game we lost to A-Admin."

"Our game with B Btry was the closest game we played in the tournament," recalled A-Admin coach, SSG Rick Mallott. "They had a better team than most people thought they had."

Co A had gone into the tournament finals undefeated after beating Co A, 2/69th Amr (10-9); Co C, 3/7th Inf by a score of 15-5 and Btry C, 2/10th (13-7). They combined solid hitting with keen base running to score most of their runs.

Beginner's judo class available

Beginner's judo classes will be held for children ages 6 to 17, adult dependents and soldiers in the old TSB Gym (Bldg. 2592). Boys and girls ages 6 to 17 can register before August 5 at the Recreation Services Office under the bleachers at Doughboy Stadium.

Adult dependents and soldiers may begin classes any time by reporting to the old TSB Gym at 6 p.m. any Monday or Wednesday. Classes for children will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Fees are $8.00 for one person, $12.00 for two people, or $14.00 per family (three or more people). No family will be charged more than $14.00.

For more information call Mr. West at 545-1902 or Ms. Cleveland at 545-3980.

2nd Evac hospital downs 498th med Co

With the base running and powerful hitting of Ricky Belk, the 2nd Evac Hospital downed the 498th Med Co in 34 Med Bn softball action, July 23.

Belk scored three times and drove in two runs, helping his team to a 9-8 victory. With that win, 2nd Evac moved up in the standings to second place in the league.

Wilson Ingram got things started for 2nd Evac in the first inning with a lead off double. Belk followed with a RBI single to center and scored on a double from Wilmont McLaughlin. With one out and McLaughlin on second, Anderson Wright, John Fogarty and Archie Brown hit doubles and Milton Chatman added a triple, making the score 6-0 in the middle of the first.

Larry Blackwood got things going for 498th in the bottom of the first with a single. Blackwood scored on a double from Robert Price but excellent defensive playing held him on second and 2nd Evac held a 6-1 lead after one inning.

Ingram started in the second with a lead off triple and scored on Belk's triple and his second RBI of the game. Belk scored on a sacrifice fly making the score 8-1.

498th struck back in the third with two triples from Larry Blackwood and Thorpe McConville. A sacrifice from Robert Price made the score 8-3. Once again, Belk got on base in the fourth inning with a single and scored off a double from Ronald Messer.

498th added another un in the bottom of the inning with doubles from Arthur Weygandt and Ernest French, making the score 9-4.

The game went scoreless until the bottom of the last inning when 498th started a comeback. Jerry Hahn walked. Blackwood followed with a single and McConville blasted a triple. Price scored McConville with a single and scored off a base hit from Richard Kessock. Price hit into a force and Robert Wood walked. That left two on and two out and 498th one run behind. 2nd Evac pitcher Wallace McCormick settled down and set down the next batter leaving 498th a run short, thus winning the game, 9-8.

In other action, the 690th Med Co held on to the first place spot with a 14-12 win over Dental Co. The 546th Med Co took a loss from Med Co, Martin Army Hospital, 13-3.

598th looks for easy win in post tournament

Winning the upcoming post softball tournament will be a feather in the sports cap for the hopeful Lt Maint Co the 36th Engr Gp softball champions.

Sweeping by all rivals, the 598th ended the regular season with a 15-1 record.

Their final tri-game winning streak came late in the season as they put down the 444th Trans Co, HHC 36th Engrs, and Co A, 43rd Engrs.

"The team developed all through the season," said SP4 Ray Coulter, versatile catcher and outfielder. "The players' true spirit shown continuously. When others counted themselves out, our team never gave up, even when we were behind," he said.

With the speed and agility of players like outfielders Albert "Bud" Waltman and Victor Crawford, very few base hits slipped by.

"Judging from what I've observed during regular season activities, the team has a definite shot at the post title," commented 1SG Phillip Somon, player-coach of the 598th.

Benning Pony Club members place in pony rally

By Susanne Bostick

The South Regional B Pony Team, including three members of the Ft. Benning Pony Club, placed third out of twelve regional teams in the 20th annual National Rally of the United States Pony Clubs, Wednesday through Saturday, in Midland, Ga., at the Hardaway Farms.

This marks the first year the rally has ever been held in the Chattahoochee Valley area. The Midland Fox Hounds Pony Club hosted the rally, which attracted the top Pony Club riders in the nation.

Terry Lahnstein, scored 12th among 80 B riders. The South Regional Team, led by Laurie Penisi, stable manager, was runner-up in the competition for the George C. Scott Trophy. This is a competition in care and feeding of horses. All the equipment and tack used is also judged.

Betsy Tully, the other member of the South

Regional team from the Ft. Benning Hunt Club, rode the youngest horse at the rally, a five-year-old which she has owned and trained from the time he was two years old. Blythe Joslin and Ann Hutton of the North River Pony Club from Tuscaloosa, Ala., were the other two members of the South Regional Team.

All the riders in the national competition had previously won in regional competition, and include some of the best under-21 riders in the nation.

Riders were judged on actual performance, were given a written test on their knowledge of horsemanship, and were graded in the care of their horses and tack. Each rider took part in the dressage event, in the cross-country test and in the stadium course of 12 jumps.

Competition was among individual riders, A and B categories, among pony clubs, B category. The top individual rider in the A category was Janis Kuehn of Connecticut, who also took the title in 1972 at the Pony Clubs national rally.

First place among eight competing B Club teams was the Bath Pony Club of Bath, Ohio, and second place was the Rapid Creek, Iowa, Pony Club. The Midland Fox Hounds Pony Club placed third in the B Club team competition.

First place among the 12 B Club regional teams was the Midsouth Region Pony Club, and second place went to a team from Virginia. Third place among regional teams went to the riders from Ft. Benning and Tuscaloosa, headed by Blythe Joslin of the North River Pony Club in Tuscaloosa.

USAIC Golf Championship scheduled for Officer's Club

The 1974 USAIC Golf Championship will be held from Aug. 28 to Aug. 30 at the Fort Benning Officer's Club Golf Course. All active duty military personnel at Fort Benning are eligible to participate.

Individual entries must be submitted to the Golf Pro Shops at the Fort Benning Officer's Club and Recreation Services Golf Course, Sand Hill, or the USAIC Sports Office, Bldg 394, no later than August 19. Entry forms will be available at each of these locations.

Championships will be conducted in men's and women's open division and men's senior division.

The champion of each division will be determined on the basis of the low medal score for 72 holes of play. Flight winners will be determined by total score of third and fourth rounds of play (36 holes). Should a tie exist in any position for which an award is being given, a sudden death play-off will be played.

A team consisting of two men's open division two men's senior division, and two women's division will be selected to represent Fort Benning in the TRADOC Central Conference Golf Championship to be held at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Sept. 16 to Sept. 20.

Drive a Datsun. Help send a kid to Y Camp.

If you test-drive any new Datsun at a participating dealer between now and August 31st, we will donate money in your name to the YMCA Campership Fund. Then we can send thousands more needy boys and girls of every race, creed and color to Y Camp.

Two years ago, Datsun test drives enabled the U.S. Forest Service to plant a quarter of a million trees. That many test drives this year would send five thousand more youngsters to Y Camp.

So drive a Datsun—help set a kid free for summer fun.

"The Fantastiks," presented in Auburn and the production of "TV" in Atlanta. This is his second appearance in a children's play; his first performance was "Uncle Shelby's Alphabet."

Rick Kuhn says he really enjoys children's theatre because the response from the kids is so phenomenal. He has appeared as Christopher Robin in "Winnie the Pooh" and Linus in "A Charlie Brown Christmas." He says he hasn't done nearly enough of this type theatre. I have a feeling he will; he's really enjoying the part of Mikey, the dragon.

Karen Reinke and Patti Reed are from the Benning area. They will be playing the parts of Jessamine and Jonquiline, sisters of Beauty. This is Karen's first speaking role in a play, as she has previously been involved in musicals. She's a pianist and from what I hear, she loves to sing. There's no telling too; she's appeared in such productions as "Music Man," "How to Succeed in Business without really Trying" and "Fiddler on the Roof." They are all musicals; but, she is looking forward to more speaking roles in future plays.

An ordinary soldier goes out for ordinary stroll . . .

By William David Sams

Evening slowly approached. The shadowy curtain of dusk was starting to blanket the small town of Hattiesburg, Miss.

For everyone it was a routine evening, quiet and ordinary as any evening in a small town could be, except for one man, SGT Laurence E. Rape — operations sergeant, 533rd Trans Co., 36th Engrs.

Rape was TDY at the USA Reserve Reinforcement Processing Center, CAMP Shelby, Miss., assisting reserve units with inprocessing, uniforms, and records during their two week annual reserve training.

"It was about 8 p.m. as I walked out my front door at the Royal Oaks Apartments," the twenty two year old soldier engineer explained. "I continued to go about my affairs. I had gotten off work several hours earlier and wasn't really putting forth an effort to do very much — except just take it easy," he said.

The young sergeant began to paint a vivid word picture of the event which was to win him honor, respect, and a citation for heroic actions from Hattiesburg citizens, civilian dignitaries, and military officials.

"As I got closer to the Royal Oaks Apartment's swimming pool," Rape stated, "things just didn't seem right; something was in fact very wrong."

"I noticed several small children moving about frantically, crying, and pointing to the water in the pool."

"Now I knew something was wrong," He said. "I stood beside the pool; stunned. Time held me breathless as the seconds ticked away."

Rape searched his mind for a flashback of what happened that day. "I glared into the water with disbelief at what was before me, then, I glanced around the area of the pool and noticed several signs," he continued.

"There were "DANGER" signs placed around the pool to keep the residents of the apartments away; the pool was being cleaned and treated with highly acidic chemicals," Rape explained.

"Possibly unwary in the excitement of going swimming or just playing around, one of the small children, a young girl, fell into the pool." Rape began to fit the puzzle together. "Evidently she and the other kids didn't see the "DANGER" signs," he said.

"Her small body lay at the bottom of the pool, lifeless, without motion of any kind." The young sergeant continued, "there wasn't time to ask questions or check the water; it was up to me, I had to do something," he said.

The soldier engineer, disregarding his own safety and thought of losing his own life, dove into the water, subjecting himself to the dangerous chemicals.

In minutes the child was retrieved from the water and Rape immediately began lifesaving procedures. Within moments the little girl's breathing was restored.

For his bravery that day, Rape was awarded the Army Commendation Medal (ARCOM) for his heroic actions in saving the young girl's life.

However, for Rape, there were more benefits to come for his heroism. He received a citation presented by MG E.A. Baby Turnage, Adj Gen, Miss., and BG Emmett H. Walker Jr., Camp Shelby Troop Commander, and assistant Adj Gen, Miss.

Mr. Steve Ward, owner and operator of Royal Oaks Apartments presented Rape with a $250 check in appreciation for saving the life of the young girl.

Trondalette Stokes, daughter of Ethel Stokes, Hattiesburg, is an ordinary young girl who is alive today thanks to one ordinary TDY soldier out for an ordinary evening stroll. Ordinary, indeed.

To these, Army says 'togetherness'

By George Korda

"Private First Class Jones, do you take Private First Class Roland to be your lawful wedded husband?" Sound strange? It isn't really. Although the vows didn't sound quite like that PFCs Cathy and Steve Roland really were united together in holy matrimony on July 24 in The Infantry Center's Main Chapel. They are one of the increasing number of young couples who are finding Army life is beneficial when both members are part of the Green Machine.

There was an old-fashioned, storybook romance. Two years ago Steve walked into a church youth group meeting in Santa Cruz California. Cathy was there. To hear both of them tell it, it was love at first sight. However to hear him explain it, there was one thing that helped. "After we talked for a couple of hours I took her home. One ride in my super sports car and she was hooked," he added.

They were both attending Cabrillo College in Santa Cruz at the time. He was studying drafting technology while she was taking liberal arts courses. "We decided we wanted to get married, but money was a problem. We wanted to see a recruiter and he explained everything to us, so we decided to enlist," said Cathy.

After basic training she went off to Ft. Sam Houston, Texas for Advanced Individual Training as a nurse's aid. He came to Ft. Benning and went to work in the S-3 section of The School Brigade as a draftsman. After graduation from AIT (where she was Distinguished Honor Graduate) Cathy came to Ft. Benning to work in Martin Army Hospital.

Their enlistment as a boyfriend-girlfriend team caused a stir in their hometown of Santa Cruz. "The recruiter made a big fuss over our enlistment," Steve said. "He had a picture of us signing our enlistment and it made the newspapers. Recruiting in our area was up 30 per cent the next month."

They both signed up for three years. She is stabilized for 16 months at Ft. Benning; he is stabilized for a year. "Even if we are separated we don't think it will be long. The Army really does make every effort to keep active duty husbands and wives together," said Cathy.

The two have started their life together—the start made possible by the US Army.

Thirteen lucky soldiers get REDEYE training

Thirteen was the lucky number for soldiers of the REDEYE sections of Cbt Spt Co, 1/58th (Mech) and Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th Inf. That's how many people went to Eglin Air Force Base, Florida for REDEYE Tracker Training July 22-26.

MAJ Thomas V. Woods, assistant S-3 for the 197th, explained two reasons for sending these soldiers to train at Eglin with the REDEYE — a man-portable, shoulder fired, heat seeking anti-aircraft missile.

"It enabled the soldiers to track high performance aircraft and supplemented the normal training received here. It also provided a chance for the men to familiarize themselves with high performance aircraft," he said.

"The sections also went to Florida to test sending a team to train on a monthly basis," LT Peter K. Vanderwerf, the REDEYE section leader of Cbt Spt Co, stated. "I was given a free hand in setting up the training program."

LT Vanderwerf continued, "At Eglin there are high performance aircraft making actual bombing attacks constantly, which gave us plenty of tracking time. At Ft. Benning we have had the opportunity to track some high performance aircraft when they come in to support training exercises, but they are only on station for 15 or 20 minutes. The section can also go to Lawson Field and train, but there is no practical environment."

For some of the men it was the first time they had undergone tracking training against high performance aircraft.

PVT John W. Bezreski, a newcomer to the unit, said, "I had never worked with the REDEYE before coming here. The experience in Florida helped me. I shouldn't have any problems when I go to Ft. Bliss, Texas for the REDEYE course."

"I was stationed in Alaska before coming here," stated SGT J. P. Pleas. "There I didn't have the opportunity to receive this type of training. It is very beneficial and we are hoping it will continue," he said.

197th units conduct Command Post Exercise

By Willie R. Cage

"Make the command post small, light, mobile and hide it." These were the instructions issued to all unit headquarters participating in the 197th's Command Post Exchange (CPX) "READY 1," conducted last week.

The three day "free play" exercise was also designed to test communications, liaison between all participating headquarters, and intelligence collection and dissemination capabilities of the brigade, according to LTC John Campbell, the brigade S3.

The controllers for the CPX were kept abreast of the tactical situation round-the-clock, providing friendly and enemy situations back to their respective higher headquarters for command and staff actions.

LT Thomas Burton, the controller representative for the 1/58th Inf (Mech), said, "Playing the role of a company commander in this exercise is one of the most challenging tasks I've had. Now I can keep the battalion headquarters jumping and at the same time appreciate some of the problems my company commander is confronted with." And he did keep the battalion jumping.

"This free play CPX is the best one I have participated in," said Maj Russ Zink, S3 of the 1/58th. "We were getting good reports and information from our controllers which permitted us to use our communications, liaison personnel and planners to the max. This is the way it should be."

Scaling down the tactical command post of each unit, and placing the units a realistic distance from each other, were prime objectives of the exercise.

"Scaling down the size of the brigade headquarters allows us to set up equipment and be ready to go much faster," said 1SG William McGinty of the brigade HHC. "Just look around, we don't look like a brigade complex. We just have enough here to get the job done. But of course it's a test and the brigade will have to do some additional study to sure that it will work in other situations."

"Keeping the tactical command post small does three things. It assists us with our security — which in a great measure is camouflage and concealment. It allows us to deceive the enemy as to the true size of our activity. And it allows rapid mobility," commented LTC Richard Gillem, commander of the 3/Inf.

Paratrooper retires after 700 jumps

By George Korda

Jumping out of airplanes is a risky business. That's why Army jumpers receive hazardous duty pay. Some men forego jump pay after a short time; the pressure of jumping and wondering if that parachute will open the next time out of the aircraft door wears down the nerves. But to other men like MSG Julian R. Guzman, formerly of HHC, 4th Student Bn, TSB, Airborne is a way of life. He's been on jump status for 27 unbroken years. He made his final jump Friday, July 26 and retired July 31.

How many jumps did he make in his Airborne career that spanned most of four decades? Not even he knows for sure. "I lost track around number 500," he said. "I guess I've made about 700 jumps total." All his jumps have been military, too, he never joined the skydivers.

He completed jump school in 1947 and immediately took up residence with the 11th Airborne in Japan. Through the years he has served with both the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions.

In Vietnam he was an advisor to the Vietnamese Airborne Brigade. "The Vietnamese use their Airborne soldiers a great deal although they didn't make many combat jumps. I made one combat jump while in Vietnam," he added.

With all the varied opportunities the Army has to offer, why stay in one area of the military service so long? MSG Guzman explained, "I think there is a discipline, a pride, and a feeling you have when you are an Airborne soldier you don't have in any other area of the Army. Paratroopers are an elite group of soldiers. In a combat situation I would rather have Airborne soldiers next to me than any other kind. They have proven their ability in a pressure situation."

Now a civilian, he says there were two things he will always be especially grateful for during his military career. "I'm thankful for the First Sergeant at Fort Knox who talked a young soldier into going Airborne in 1947, and I'm thankful that in 27 years and 700 jumps I never had to use my reserve parachute."

ACS Day Camp begins Monday

The annual Army Community Service Special Children's Day Camp begins Monday, August 12 and lasts until August 23. The camp is held every year for mentally retarded or physically handicapped children between the ages of 6 and 18.

ASC volunteers staff the camp, and lead the children in recreational therapy activities such as music, organized games, bowling, swimming, miniature golf, and crafts. There are six volunteers to lead between thirty and forty children.

Mrs. Betty Webb is the director of the camp. On the last day, a picnic is held, and every child who participates is given a certificate at a closing ceremony.

Raft training experienced by 72nd Engr Co

Crossing a river where there is no bridge can be a difficult task unless the bridge platoon, 72nd Engr Co, 197th Inf Bde, is around. They are specialists at getting anything from a truck to a tank across a river.

Twenty-six bridge specialists from the 72nd's bridge platoon displayed that ability and sharpened their skills last week as they participated in a week long river crossing exercise on the Chattahoochee River.

Raft training was the center of attention as the engineers learned techniques of raft construction, control of a raft carrying cargo across a river, and operating procedures for the twenty-seven foot bridge erection boats used to power the rafts on the river.

"This is the first time we've actually rafted; that is, constructed the raft and moved vehicles and equipment back and forth across the river," said 2LT Michael McGee, bridge platoon leader. "Everyone participated, getting their minds on the equipment and seeing how it is done."

Monday and Tuesday were dedicated to working with a light tactical raft (LTR) that had been constructed the week before. Repairs were made on the raft and movement techniques practiced.

Wednesday the platoon constructed a five float reinforced raft capable of carrying a tank. The larger raft presented greater control and operating problems and provided the engineers with an opportunity to gain first hand experience with the equipment.

"This is the biggest raft we've ever built and it seemed to go up faster than the smaller one," stated PFC Howard Sarquist, a bridge specialist.

Thursday the men practiced rafting techniques and procedures. On Friday they disassembled the raft and took it back to the engineer company area.

In addition to the experience and training gained during the week, the bridge platoon increased its capabilities by qualifying and licensing eight new power boat operators. The power boat operators handle the twenty-seven foot bridge erection boats used to move the rafts on the river.

"The power boat operators are very important," explained 2LT McGee. "They have a lot of responsibility and can make or break you."

Construction of the rafts is not an easy job. It requires know-how, skill, and team effort.

"It's not really hard when all the guys work together," commented SP4 Byron Flowers, a bridge specialist. "And this platoon works great as a team."

The engineers bivouaced along the Chattahoochee during the week-long training period. A mess section and mechanics were brought along to support the exercise.

SFC Jimmie Barnett, bridge platoon sergeant, characterized the training as some of the most important in which the platoon has taken part.

"This training dealt with our primary mission, it was a good morale builder, and it gave the platoon a chance to see something they had accomplished," concluded SFC Barnett. "They did an outstanding job."

Army ROTC program spotlighted in exhibit

During the week of 12-16 August, the display in Infantry Hall (Building 4) will spotlight Army ROTC at the college level. The Columbus College ROTC Instructor Group will sponsor the display.

The ROTC program is open to male and female college students and affords the participant the opportunity to obtain a commission as a second lieutenant while earning a college degree.

Veterans are eligible to enroll in Army ROTC and may receive VA benefits concurrently with ROTC scholarship benefits or Advanced Course subsistence allowances. More than twenty percent of the ROTC students in the Columbus College program are veterans of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

The purpose of the display will be to provide information on the many aspects of the Senior ROTC Program. During part of the week, a representative from the Veterans' Administration will be available to assist persons in matters pertaining to VA benefits. Persons are encouraged to visit the display and learn about the Army ROTC program.

How do you feel about being required to attend racial awareness programs? How effective are these programs?

SSG Robert Treadwell
HHC 158th Bn Ft. Campbell, KY

"I think it is pretty good. I think they should be mandatory."

SP5 Gregory Morris
B Co 864th Engr Ft. Lewis, WN

"If they could get more company commanders to go to the classes that the enlisted men go through, he could get the foresight we get from these classes. It would be better. If you understand a person's background you can talk to him better as an individual."

SP4 James Bierbaum
23rd Replacement TSB

"Out of the four classes you attend you walk away with a worse attitude than before you attended and there is nothing learned."

SP4 Larry Avery
608th Ordnance, 36th Engr

"They are not too effective. I think we should attend but some changes should be made."

PFC John Parker
444th Transportation

"It is really nice. There are a lot of different feelings and attitudes brought out. I think it is effective."

CPT P. M. Cotsonas
11th Co TSB Leadership Dept

"I am the OIC of the URRDLC which is responsible for training discussion leaders who conduct the race relations raps. There is a definite need in the Army to attend the raps to bring about racial awareness and understanding. We are constantly looking for more contemporary issues in order to make the programs more effective and pertinent to the needs of the Army."

An editorial

A day to remember the family

By Terry Dean Ragan

The family is the cornerstone of our society. It is the first and most important element in our relationships with other human beings. To us, family ties are the most important ties we can have, for it is from these ties that we branch out into the community, the nation and the world.

Many people feel it doesn't have to be this way, that voluntary (even self-imposed) separation from the family is not bad. These people say that such a separation is good for the mind and spirit. Who needs a family anyway, with everyone telling us what to do and how to think? It's aggravating, maddening and just plain unnecessary. To be independent is to experiment in self-realization or self-defeat. In any event, they say, get away from family or die (spiritually) in its complexities.

We agree. After all, look at the religious, military and literary greats that embellish history with their feats. Few, if any, thanked their families for their greatness. The Dalai Lama has no family. Napoleon Bonaparte had no family. Ernest Hemingway acknowledged no family on his upward climb to greatness. But every one of them had a family; every one of them grew up with a mother and a father and brothers and sisters. All (except the Dalai Lama) eventually had families of their own.

All went back to the ties of the family; never mind that it was a family of their own making.

We agree that independence from the family is important and very necessary in one's claim to fame and fortune. But we maintain that the importance of the family is consuming enough to want to return to it for sustenance and hope.

And that's especially true in the military, where separations are the rule. Who hasn't felt the pangs of having to be away from loved ones back home? Try to define that need—what is the reason for the pangs? We feel it's basic, fundamental, even primordial that humans need the warmth and comfort of home.

Join us this Sunday for Family Day, Aug. 11. When was the last time you shook your Dad's hand, or gave Mom a hug?

31st Avn Bn has rare opportunity

The 31st Aviation Battalion of the Alabama National Guard had the rare opportunity to be the "prime mover" in a "one-Army" Inter-Service operation while on active duty at Ft. Benning.

It started at the U.S. Air Force Armament Development and Test Center's Weapons Effect Division at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida. This agency is responsible for developing and testing aircraft armaments, and they needed targets.

The Navy had six junked A-4 fighter aircraft at nearby Jacksonville Naval Air Station available. These were just what the Air Force needed. The problem was to move them from Jacksonville to Eglin. The planes could not be flown, and there was no rail link between the two bases. That left only trucks, which would mean spending considerable time, effort and money disassembling the aircraft, loading them onto trucks and reassembling them at Eglin Air Force Base.

At the time, the 31st Avn Bn of the Alabama National Guard was training with the 145th Avn Cnd at Lawson Army Airfield at Ft. Benning. The job was just right for its subordinate unit, the 307th Avn Co (Heavy Helicopter) and their CH54 "Sky Crane" helicopters.

"Any time anybody wants something moved, they call us," explained CPT Terry A. McDowell, the 307th operations officer. He further explained that the Air Force at Eglin is not a new customer. "We've probably moved 20 to 25 aircraft for them already," he said.

The 478th Avn Co, an active Army unit which was hosting the 307th, sent along two of their own "Sky Cranes" to train with the four Guard helicopters. "This was done as part of the 'one-Army' concept; and it's worked out real fine," explained CW3 Noel J. Winner, one of the 478th pilots.

"There was a regular Army pilot and a Guard co-pilot in each of our 'cranes' and a Guard pilot and regular Army co-pilot in each of the Guard's," added CW2 Edward A. Jones, who said that he was "impressed by the professionalism of the Guard members."

As a result of the operation, the Air Force got its jets, the taxpayers saved over $20,000, and the Alabama Army National Guard and the 478th received some excellent training.

Work on that college degree while you're here at Benning

Why don't you join some soldiers who are earning college degrees at Ft. Benning, and let the Army pick up most of the tab? Interested? Read on.

Columbus College offers Associate (two-year) and Bachelor (four-year) degree programs in a variety of fields, and the new Chattahoochee Community College offers Associate degree programs.

Both Columbus College and Chattahoochee Community College accept the GED high school equivalent in lieu of a high school diploma as one of the prerequisites for admission. Quarters at both schools start in January, March, June and September. Act now to attend the September quarter.

The first step is to visit the Educational Development Section in Room 309 of Building 35. There one of the counselors will talk to you and find out what type of degree you want to pursue.

If you have never attended college before, you will probably have to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test. The counselor will make arrangements for you.

Columbus College has an office located in Room 330 of Building 35. You can register there. If you intend to attend Chattahoochee Community College, obtain application blanks from the educational counselor. Expect to pay a $10 application fee for registration at Columbus College, and a $5 application fee for registration at Chattahoochee Community College.

Under the Tuition Assistance plan, the Army will pay 75 percent of your tuition. Veterans can get help from the Veterans Administration. Amounts paid by the Veterans' Administration vary from case to case; the counselor can help on this too. The counselor will help you fill out your Tuition Assistance Form. If you are a veteran, he will also help you apply for aid from the Veterans' Administration.

To receive tuition assistance, your commander must certify that you are eligible and available and he must agree not to require you to perform duties during class time.

Fees for Columbus College are $9.75 per quarter hour, or $132 for a full course load of 15 quarter hours. For non-residents of Georgia, there is an additional fee of $14 per quarter hour. These fees apply only to courses taught on the Columbus College campus. Special fees are charged for night courses taught at Ft. Benning. This fee is $105 per course.

Fees for Chattahoochee Community College are $6.50 per quarter hour, $65 for two courses, or $67.50 for a full load of 15 or more quarter hours. No non-resident fee is charged to out-of-state students.

Columbus College offers a variety of degree fields to choose from. Four year programs include art, English language and literature, German language and literature, history, mathematics, music, political science, psychology, sociology, speech, drama, business administration, music, biology, chemistry, criminal justice, medical technology, and elementary and secondary education.

Two-year programs offered at Columbus College include mental health associate, nursing, secretarial science, business administration, criminal justice and dental hygiene.

Chattahoochee Community College offers two-year programs in art, business administration, elementary and secondary education, physical education, library science, pre-law, secretarial science, music, economics, agriculture, agricultural education, agricultural science, biological science, forestry, home economics, or mathematics.

'Ole Doc Sez

'Old Doc tells everything he knows about family planning

Howdy, Bub. They said that I wuz 'sposed to say somethin' 'bout Family Planin' this time out, but to tell you the truth, I probably know less 'bout planin' a family than I know 'bout astronautin' an' jail-breakin' put together.

'Y'see, once Sally Lou an' me got hitched, we jumped right into the family business, an' com5 menced to have seven children, pratically afore the honeymoon wuz over. I sure got to say one thing for that Sally Lou of mine, she certainly took everthin' serious, an' I mean, mighty serious.

I 'member when our oldest wuz thirteen, an' we had our fina' blessin' from the Almighty. Sally Lou came aprancin' home from the hospital with little bitty Sug, the hew youngun, in her arms, an' 'nounced that I had better take a tuck into my overalls, 'cause we wuz goin' to have a teenager 'round the house for the next twenty years. I hadda grab aholt of the bannister to keep from collapsin' when she sprung that one on me.

Now, I knew that we had all of these younguns bellyin' up to the table everyday, but my mind refused to grasp the fact that they wuz all goin' to turn into teenagers, sooner or later. Once it wuz said out loud, it caused my legs to wobble a mite; havin' to look forward to all of them formals, haridos, dances, an' weddins an' things would drain the sap outta anybody.

When you are inna a home with wall-to-wall children, there ain't never no lag in the conversation or lack of activity. I usta get the vapours jes' watchin' them children head for the table at mealtime. If wuz like watchin' Attila the Hun an' his men enterin' a convent.

We hadda cat that tried to live off the scraps from the table. I 'member, afore we started to buy him cat food, you could read a newspaper through him, he wuz so thin.

I sure wouldda given a lot to sneak a look at Sanny Claus or the Easter Bunny approachin' our house, in the days that all of the children wuz home. I bet they wuz hip-shot, back-cracked, an' bowlegged, judgin' from the load of presents that wuz left 'round our livin' room on them festive occasions. Why, we'd have more toys, wrappin' paper, an' Easter Grass 'round the house than a body would believe.

When it came time to clean up the mess, I wuz of a mind to get out the lawnmower an' whittle some on that grass, 'steadof tryin' to sweep it all up.

Today, them younguns is spread out all over the county seat, pursuin' they's own destinies, an' mowin' they's own grass from the livin' room floor. I sure enjoyed havin' them children 'round, and, y'know what, Bub? I'd do it all again, iffen I wuz given the chance. So, as you can plainly see, I don't know nothin' 'bout Family Planin', howsomever, I don't think I coulda done better if I'd done it apurpose.

I looked into the phone book an' found out that iffen you need Family Planin' advice, you can call the Public Health folks downtown at 327-1641. Military folks got to go to Martin Army Hospital at the OB-GYN clinic. You can make an appointment by callin' 544-1096.

Good health to you and yours.

Kids can enjoy 'Beauty, Beast'

If ever there has been a play that children of all ages can enjoy, it's "Beauty and the Beast." The Ft. Benning Dramatizers would like to take all kids on a trip to the land of make believe. Actual dragons will roam the stage before your very eyes. We hope to bring you this and more through the magical world of stagecraft.

Would you believe a beast could be transformed into a handsome prince? Why not! Anything is possible when the Dramatizers put on a children's show.

"Beauty and the Beast" will be presented on August 16, 17, 23 and 24 at 7:30 P.M. All performances will take place on the "mobile stage" in front of the Ft. Benning Playhouse. Bring a chair or cushion and enjoy live entertainment under the stars.

Now's the time to go to Europe

For all you dudes who can't wait to get some time in overseas — especially first-terms — there's good news. A special recruiting team from USAREUR is visiting Ft. Benning to snatch up volunteers for immediate assignment to Europe — mainly Germany. That includes everyone except BCT, AIT and "D-pack" personnel.

Here's the schedule. The team will be in:

- The School Brigade, 9-14 August
- 36th Engineer Group, 15-22 August
- Hq Command, USAIC, 23-27 August
- 34th Med Bn, 28-31 August
- 197th Inf Bde, 1-9 September

Says SSG Tim Ohr, one of the team of three men here from Germany, "This will be the first time a first-terminer can choose his assignments over the entire three-year period, from BCT to ETS." MAJ Thomas F. Durham said, "some of the guys got advanced notice of our coming and are looking for us already."

Are there disqualifying factors? You bet there are. Along with the three mentioned above, here are the rest:

•If you have a record of the sale, unauthorized possession or use of drugs and punitive or corrective action has not yet been taken.

•If your records are flagged and approval has not been granted from HQ DA for the transfer of flag to USAREUR.

•If you have a current pattern of alcoholism, financial irresponsibility or character disorder.

•If you have a history of judicial or nonjudicial punishment involving moral turpitude.

•If you have been dropped from the rolls of an organization and have not performed 12 months in the CONUS since the date of return to duty.

•If you are not medically qualified to perform in your PMOS under field conditions.

•If you were not eligible to and did not hand carry your records.

•If you are currently barred from reenlistment.

•If you have been confined within the last 12 months as a result of Special or General Courts Martial.

•If you have failed your PMOS test for two consecutive years.

•If your assignment to USAREUR would be the first assignment following release from a personnel control facility.

Okay, that was quite a laundry list of "ifs" just ticked off. What impact will it have in Europe?

"We're looking for soldiers who can be dependable, responsible and mature," MAJ Durham said. "We're starting to see that in Europe now. The young company commander is stabilized much longer, so the command interest is there."

Let's be honest, you gotta work to get it. But if you qualify, if you are a first term, the folks here for 60 days might be able to help you out. Right now many towns in Europe are celebrating their liberation (30th year). They're celebrating with American soldiers. After, all, who liberated them? You would be there doing your thing with the Europeans. If you're airborne, you could be jumping at a celebration show in the Netherlands. The possibilities are endless. Europe is where it's at in the Army.

"If you qualify and want to go to Europe, we want to help," SP4 Jim Kitchens said. They'll be in Building 35, Room 109, or give them a call at 545-2715, until 8 p.m. After 8 p.m. the number is 545-5455, including weekends.

2/10 FA motor pool also a safe parking lot

Soldiers of the 2/10 FA need not worry about their privately owned vehicles (POVs) when they go to the field since the unit's motor pool also doubles as a guarded parking lot.

"We started letting the men park their POVs in the motor pool during field problems in October 1973," stated CPT Bruce Minger, S-2 officer of the 2/10th. "Prior to that we had been having a problem with larcenies in the battalion area with POVs, especially when our batteries were in the field."

Since the program was initiated, not a single larceny has been experienced by those who use the motor pool to protect their cars. However, CPT Minger pointed out that the use of the facility is not mandatory and some larcenies had occurred on cars not in the motor pool.

"We only require that the vehicles be registered on post, have current inspection stickers, are locked and registered with the dispatcher or motor pool guard," explained CPT Minger. "Since we require a safety inspection sticker, this also serves as a double check on soldiers keeping their inspection stickers current."

Participation in the program has been good. More than 140 cars were parked overnight in the motor pool during a recent battery FTX. In January, during the battalion's ATT there were more than 350 cars parked in the motor pool.

"There is no doubt in my mind that my car will be safe when it is in there," stated SP4 Calvin Jones, Jr., a cannoneer in B Btry. "I've been using it at least three times each month. I feel a lot better knowing that someone is watching my car for me."

"I've been in the Army for 13 years and this is the first unit I've been in that has let its people lock their cars in the motor pool," said SSG Ralph Owens, a section chief in C Btry. "It is an excellent idea and I encourage the men in my section to utilize the motor pool to secure their vehicles."

By Michael DeVita

After six unforgettable hours in an Army pickup truck, the other photographer on the PIO team, Specialist Four Don Brower, and I managed to find Eglin Air Force Base. The Air Policeman at the gate responded to our query about directions to Camp Rudder by telling us to "go to the second traffic light and turn right." From his expression, you might have thought that we had asked directions to Timbuctu.

Twenty-five miles of back country roads, range gates and signs warning us that the areas off the road were just chock full of unexploded ammunition explained his expression. By this time, the well-kept, if somewhat elderly, buildings at Camp Rudder, the Florida Ranger Camp, were as welcome to us as a landfill was to an ancient mariner.

A check with the Florida Ranger Committee confirmed that, just as we had expected, the Ranger students were on patrol, somewhere, in the field. However, one of the medics was going out to join them and he would be our guide.

Several more miles of bumpy dirt roads further, we found a group of cadre and ROTC evaluators. Among them was CPT Kenneth W. Hinkle, who, besides his primary job of instructor, was the camp's Information Officer. He told me where I could find the students — split up into patrol-size groups and spread out over the countryside; and what they would be doing — planning and preparing for another patrol. CPT Hinkle then introduced me to CPT Alfred B. Williams, another instructor, who would be working with one of the patrols.

CPT Williams took me to where his patrol had set up their perimeter and explained that at the Florida Ranger Camp, "the students remain tactical almost all the time." 'Tactical', I soon found out, meant that while not actually walking a patrol, the students had to remain alert, maintain security along their perimeter and conduct themselves just as they would in a combat zone. "The only time that the students aren't tactical," he explained, "is during a critique. A critique takes place after a patrol; the actions of each of the patrol members is discussed and evaluated by the other members of the patrol and by the cadre who walked the patrol with the students. The students pay very close attention during these critiques because, as one of them express it, "the mistakes we make now could cost lives if we repeat them later."

But just now the students were getting ready for their next patrol. The patrol leader was revising his plans, other students were improving the camouflage on their faces, some with the aid of small metal mirrors, some with the help of a buddy. Here and there, some were enjoying a meager C-ration breakfast, cooking on improvised stoves made of empty C-ration cans containing a small fuel tablet. The breakfasts were meager because the students are only issued one C-ration packet per day. "On long patrols," a student explained, "we have to carry everything we are going to use. A pack of Cs weighs more than a grenade, and which would you rather throw at an enemy?" I walked over to another buddy team; one was alert and kept scanning the perimeter, the other was cleaning his machine gun. An M-60 may be heavy and rugged, but it is also a fairly intricate piece of machinery and keeping it clean in the swampy conditions of Camp Rudder is a constant job.

"We've just given them something of a problem," CPT Williams tells me. "They've been using the same bridge team over and over, so we told them that they will have to use a different one this time."

A few minutes later I walked over to where the new bridge team was rehearsing the actions they will go through this evening when they will have to build a rope bridge across a river in the dark. One student, the rope tied around his waist, was walking across an open space between two trees, which simulates the river he will have to swim. An instructor looks at the student's equipment, turns to the bridge team leader and asks, "how is he going to signal you that he's made it across?"

"By red flashlight."

"He doesn't have one now. What were you told about rehearsals?"

"To make them as accurate as possible."

"Right," says the student, as the "swimmer" is handed a flashlight.

I recognize the swimmer now; he's Jon M. Bonfiglio, an ROTC cadet from Howard University. "How does it feel to be on the downhill run, only a few days from graduation?" I ask him.

"Great," he replies, sounding tired and singularly unconvinced. Now I realize that this course has no downhill slide at the end; the climb only gets steeper as the students near the summit, where, for those who make it, a Ranger tab awaits.

CPT Hinkle, meanwhile, has been readying the rubber boats that the students will use this evening. Specialist Brower and I have arranged to be on two of them. When we arrive at the river we are given bulky Kapok life preservers. CPT Hinkle says that he is sorry, but Brower and I will have to ride as passengers; all the rowers' places are filled. We, of course, express our profound (if somewhat unfelt) regrets.

I had been assigned to a raft with seven fully equipped Ranger students. Six of the students kneel on the sides of the raft, one leg inside and one leg along the spray tube of the boat. I am seated with my legs stretched out in front of me, in the center of the raft. The coxswain sits directly behind me. I know this because I can hear him give his commands, but try as I will, I cannot turn my cramped body enough to see him.

The raft starts to move downstream. It is obvious that the crew of this particular raft isn't used to working as a rowing team. The rowers on the right side are doing a more efficient job of paddling. The raft inevitably starts for the left hand shore. The coxswain shouts for the paddlers on the right to stop, but it is too late. We are ensnared in the lower branches of a tree growing on the very bank of the river.

A sergeant shouts from the next raft, "What are you trying to do — kill the photographer?"

Chagrined, we manage to extricate ourselves from the foliage and get under way again. The students seem to be getting the hang of it now as their paddles dip in unison. The coxswain steers us into the current and we are on our way.

The main topic of conversation is food. Each of the students describes the meals that he will eat when he gets home. The topics begin to change after a while. The student directly to my left, David B. Kalita, is from Alaska. After the course, he plans to go home and sail a raft down a river. The other students, continuing to paddle, give their opinions about this idea — mostly negative. Behind him sits Miguel Gonzales, a resident of Puerto Rico, who tells about the changes to which he has had to adapt since leaving San Juan. One of the other students has visited San Juan, and soon they are discussing the beauties on interesting parts of the Island.

Throughout the raft trip, the students are constantly paddling. Occasionally the coxswain, Michael R. Rooney, a West Point cadet, will call out for two of the paddlers to rest. The men will then rise up off their knees, just a little, so as not to upset the raft, and try to stretch their cramping muscles. The paddling is hard work, about fifty strokes a minute, I estimate, and the students are tired. The talking dies down.

At last, on the bank just ahead, we see two of the patrol's other boats. It's time to beach the rafts. Smartly, the coxswain brings the boats alongside the other two. As we wait a place to unload, the fourth raft comes up. The first two rafts are unloaded. Now it is our turn. The raft is pulled right up to the bank and made fast. Quickly the students disembark. "Hurry up," the instructor whispers urgently. The rucksacks, ammunition, rifles and machineguns that had filled the bottom of the raft are rapidly brought ashore. The students prepare to move off through the seemingly impenetrable swamps. They will have to cross about a half mile of this terrain on the way to their objective. The completion of their entire mission will require most of the night.

According to the plan, I am to remain and will be picked up by the motorboat that will come for the rafts. I walk a few meters into the swamps with the students, trying to get a few last photographs, and then return to the bank to await the safety boat.

Rod and Gun Club notes

Members don't seem to know the work involved

By Bill Kloeb

Questions posed at the recent general membership meeting of the Rod and Gun Club indicate that most people don't know the planning and work involved in providing the enjoyable hunting and fishing activities at Ft. Benning.

Some things that the Rod and Gun Club and the Fish and Wildlife Branch make all the regulations and are the sole activities involved. Other have the idea that the land that makes up the Ft. Benning reservation should revolve around hunting and fishing. Neither assumptions are true.

Military requirements are the first justification, for the real estate at Ft. Benning. Military administrative, logistical and training requirements must therefore come first. But the commanding general must also insure proper care for the land. These include controlling vegetation to prevent fires, stabilizing the soil to prevent erosion and protecting natural resources to sustain productivity of grass and timberlands. Encouraging both fish and wildlife propagation and harvest come next.

The Natural Resources Management Board coordinates the activities of all the various agencies having interest and responsibilities in achieving these objectives. This permanent board is made up of the Assistant Post Commander, Director of Personnel and Community Activities, Director of Plans and Training, Director of Industrial Operations, Director of Facilities Engineering, the Comptroller and a representative appointed by the Assistant Commandant. The Assisted Commander is president and the Director of Facilities Engineering is the secretary of the board.

The Director of Facilities Engineering is also president of a working committee established to provide technical information and assistance to the Natural Resources Management Board. The working committee is a group of engineering and other types who do most of the resource management work. Other members come from directorates and agencies affected by the engineering activities. These members coordinate their actions to have minimum adverse effect on all involved.

Representatives from the Directorate of Facilities Engineering include: the Chief of Roads and Grounds, Chief Environmental Management Division, the Agronomist, Entomologist, Forester and Fish and Wildlife Administrator. Other members are the Deputy Comptroller, Chief, Personnel Services Division, Chief, Housing Division, DIO, Recreational Services Officer, Operations Officer, Provost Marshal Division, Deputy Chief, Range Division, the Veterinarian, and the Chairman of the Advisory Board of the Rod and Gun Club.

That's a long list of titles and agencies but it makes the point that regulating hunting and fishing and other natural resources is not done by one or two individuals. Nor are rules made without looking at the total picture.

Conserving natural resources presents many complex problems and the responsibility doesn't end when decisions are made and regulations published.

A lot of work is needed to insure that the programs are carried out for the benefit of the post and its people.

Sometimes we as individuals have a difficult time understanding why some regulation is in effect when just the opposite policy would be to our benefit. You can rest assured that someone on one of these boards had the same idea but was overruled for very good reasons. Of course if you don't agree you can always let that fact be known. Don't try to get action by griping to your buddies. They probably can't do any more as individuals than you can. Contact the one on the working committee who has a primary interest in your problem.

If it is a hunting or fishing problem the man to contact is your unit representative on the Rod and Gun Club Advisory Council, or go directly to COL Jack Whitted, chairman of the Rod and Gun Club Advisory Board.

Excitement, tension mount

Softball tourney coming up fast

By Rick Wasser
HHC, 10-C/83rd, 2

HHC, The School Brigade opened up the TSB softball tourney with a stunning 10-2 victory over Btry C, 83rd FA of the 1/29th Inf (PIONEERS).

The Artillery's big guns — Mike Benoit, Thomas Kelley, and Julian Buske — couldn't muster the necessary fire power, and took a first-round defeat in the tournament.

5th Bn, 9 - Co A, 6

Though Company A, 1/29th Inf (PIONEERS) led the 5th Bn, TSB for six innings, they couldn't hold on for the last inning — handing the game to the 5th Bn softballers, 9-6.

The roof fell in for Co A in the bottom of the sixth, as the 5th Bn loaded the bases with only one out. Three consecutive base hits narrowed the PIONEER lead to one run.

With two out in the final inning, Charles Ledbetter of Co A ripped a stand-up triple off the center-field fence, and Ken Hight followed with a walk. Co A team captain, Tim DeBey, representing the potential tying run, then dribbled a weak grounder to the second baseman for the game-ending out.

C/83rd, 10 - 5th Bn, 9

Umpires Paul Bonari and Bob Pereira had their work cut out for them in the Artillery PIONEERS vs. 5th Bn game, with close plays and head first slides prevalent throughout the contest.

The 5th Bn drew first blood in the second inning when they picked up five runs on four errors at the expense of C Btry, 83rd FA. Charlie Battery came back in their half of the inning with two runs, however, narrowing the 5th Bn lead to 3.

Going into the fifth inning, 5th Btry held a 6-3 lead, but when the Artillery PIONEERS were finally out that inning, the score was tied. Ken Lee walloped a two-run homer to get the ball rolling for C Btry. Benny Williams followed with a single and Roland Marsh tripled him in to tie the score at 6-all.

The 5th Bn picked up one run in the sixth and two runs in the seventh, giving them a three-run lead, and the Artillery team with but three outs left in the ball game.

Jim Reeves and Ron Tillery led off the bottom of the seventh with singles, and Ken Lee doubled them home, leaving the PIONEERS one run behind. Benny Williams singled Lee to third and Marsh Roland drove in the tying run.

With no outs, and the bases loaded, Flozel Troup lined a shot down the right field line, and as the first man scored, the game ended, in favor of the Artillery PIONEERS, 10-9.

Co A, 7 - HHC, 6

HHC, TSB — who opened the season with a 10-2 victory over the Artillery PIONEERS — were knocked out of the tournament two nights later by fellow PIONEER unit, Co A of the 1/29th Inf.

Alpha Company got off to an early 2-0 lead in the first inning but HHC came back in their half to go out in front, 3-2.

In the next six innings, the lead changed hands no less than eight different times. Charles Hines was the leading slugger for HHC, TSB as he doubled in two runs, and hit a solo homer in the fifth inning.

With the score tied 6-6 in the sixth inning, Tim Lewis and Don Moss singled for Co A, and Joel Royal drove in the winning run.

By Bob Thomas

When the Ft. Benning Slow Pitch Softball Tournament begins August 12, two contenders for the post title will be Co (Admin), 197th Spt Bn and Btry B, 2/10th FA, both from the 197th Inf Bde.

Co A (Admin) took the 197th Inf Bde title after a full season while the artillerymen of Btry B captured the runner-up slot. Both teams enter the post level playoffs for the second year in a row.

"We have eight of our players back from last year," explained SSG Rick Mallott, Co A coach, "all of them starters." Mallott, who pitches for the team, also leads the Admin specialists in hitting with a .730 batting average.

"Our hitting is much better this year than it was last year," Mallott added. "This year we have several players who will be able to hit it out of the park." The player-coach has six home runs this season himself. "Last year we were lacking in the hit department."

The Co A (Admin) team averaged 15.6 runs per game during the regular season with a team batting average of well over .500. In a recent practice game at Gowdy Field, the admin specialists defeated the well-known Benning Ammos, an independent team which plays in the Columbus City League.

"The Ammos have beaten just about every team on post," Mallott explained. "Our game was a close one, but we beat them by one run, 11-10."

"Morale will be the key factor if we are going to win the post title," Mallott continued. "I think we can do it if everyone works together and doesn't give up."

Med Bn softball season almost sewn up

By Tim Purdon

The 690th Med Co held their first place spot by defeating the 2nd Evac Hospital, 12-6, in 34th Med Bn softball action, July 29.

The game was scoreless until the second inning when 690th's Matthew Riggins and Gerald Roberts got on base from 2nd Evac's errors and went on to score.

2nd Evac retaliated in the bottom of the second with two runs off base hits from Larry Stanley and Johnny Jones.

2nd Evac took the lead in the fourth with three runs. Larry Robinson started with a double. Four straight singles from Ricky Belk, Anderson Wright,

Third baseman Ken Lee (R) of C Btry, 83rd FA, 1/29th Inf collided with a 5th Bn baserunner and the two men await the call of the umpire. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

SP4 Steve Smith, the Co A team captain, agreed. "I think our players have a better attitude than they had last year when we lost two games in the post finals."

Smith also pointed out that this year's Co A (Admin) team is more versatile. "We have a number of players who can play four or five positions well. That way we can move people around if things don't work out just right. When we get fired up we are hard to beat and I expect we'll be fired up for the post championships."

Btry B, the other 197th Inf Bde representative, met defeat in the first two rounds of last year's post tournament.

"We hope to do better this year," stated SP4 Dwight Kittenger, who pulled the team together after a poor early season start. Kittenger, who plays shortstop, is one of the three players on the B Btry team that played with last season's Kelley Hill champs.

"I think the new players we have make us a better team," Kittenger explained. "However, I hate to predict the outcome of the tournament. We have some stiff competition, including A (Admin) from the 197th. I can say we will give any team a good game and if we can keep it together I think we can win."

Both 197th Inf Bde teams are practicing regularly for the post tournament which begins August 12 and runs through August 21. It will be double elimination tournament with games being held on Gowdy and Glenn Fields on main post.

Jones and Haywood Wright made the score 5-2.

The 690th made its comeback in the top of the fifth. Stanley Scott singled and Aldrie Condrey walked. Leon Dantzier singled in one run and Jessie Johnson batted in another. A single from Joe St. Jacques, a triple from Thomas Wachlarowica and a single from Nathaniel Weaver capped a six-run fifth inning and 690th held an 8-5 lead.

690th went on to score four more runs in the sixth and 2nd Evac scored one in the seventh; the 690th won the game, 12-6 and held a one game advantage over the 456th Med Co.

The second place 546th Med Co team defeated 498th Med Co, 5-2.

Dexter Turner opened the game for 546th with a lead off single and Richard Bradshaw scored him with an RBI single. It looked like 546th was going to wall away with the game in the first inning when Bob Gagne got on base with no outs but clever pitching by 498th's Jerry Hahn and great defensive playing shut them down.

Another run was added by 465th in the second with hits from Fonald Corrigan and Daniel Clawson and two more were added in the third making the score 4-0.

The 498th went scoreless through the fourth inning but came back for one run in the fifth off a base hit from Jerry Hahn. A fielding error was made which enabled him to score.

After one out in the sixth, 498th touched home again off a single from Bob Price and an RBI single from Lynn Rasmussen. However, it wasn't quite enough as the 546th Med Co scored again in the seventh, ending the game at 5-2.

With three regular season games left, 690th, 2nd Evac and 546th all have a good chance to take the battalion title.

TSB's Lonas almost turned pro boxer, but decided to reenlist instead

By George Korda

"Foster was fast and deceptive, and could punch hard with both hands. He hit me harder than anyone else ever has." Bob Foster is now Boxing's light-heavyweight champion of the world. SSG Melvin E. Lonas, TSB's Athletics and Recreation NCO recalls his fight against the man many consider to be the greatest light-heavyweight of all time.

"I lost on a split decision," said SSG Lonas. He broke two nerves in my jaw which had to be removed. It was easily the toughest fight I was ever in." SSG Lonas was no beginner when he met Foster in the Southern AAU championships in 1960 at Jacksonville, Florida. He had already won seven major championships since 1959, including the Third Army light-heavyweight championship, the Southern AAU championship, and the Southern Golden Gloves championship. He fought his last fight in 1969 at the age of 28.

An accident made necessary the insertion of a steel pin into his right wrist, ending his career. What he has now are a roomful of trophies, and some memories he can enjoy long after the trophies have tarnished.

"One time in 1960 I was at home in Toledo, Ohio when they were holding the AAU National tournament. I almost entered as a light-heavyweight but didn't because I had something else to do. I kind of wish I had now. One of my opponents in the light-heavyweight division would have been a fast-talking kid named Cassius Clay," he said. Clay later changed his name to Muhammad Ali and became heavyweight champion of the world.

SSG Lonas nearly turned professional in 1962 but decided to reenlist. "I wanted the security the Army offered, and I really wasn't sure how long I'd be able to keep fighting." He was assigned to Panama and won the Panama Armed Forces Championship in 1962 and 1963.

In 1967 he was stationed in Alaska, and won his last fight there. Fighting in the heavyweight division, he battled his way to the Alaskan Army Command title, and was also crowned the Alaska state Golden Gloves champion.

He still maintains an avid interest in the sport. His opinion on the upcoming heavyweight championship bout between Ali and George Foreman is interesting. "If Foreman is going to win he'll have to do it in the first couple of rounds, but if it goes beyond four I think Ali has a real good chance to win the title back," he said.

According to him, more people should be getting into boxing for recreation. "It's a beautiful thing really. You're not really trying to kill anyone in the ring. It's more of a science." For those who have any questions on the science of boxing, just contact the eminent SSG Lonas. He knows what he's talking about.

Golf team for Pro-Am tourney

Ft. Benning will enter a three-man team in the annual Pro-Am handicap golf tournament to be held at Callaway Gardens Nov. 11.

To select the three-man team to represent Ft. Benning, a handicap competition will be held in conjunction with the 1974 USAIC golf tournament to be played at the Ft. Benning officers club course Aug. 27-30.

To be eligible for selection, individuals must have an established handicap based on a minimum of five 18-hole rounds. Certification of handicap must be made by a golf club professional or manager based on play during six months prior to Aug. 26, 1974. The USAIC sports office will confirm certified handicaps of each entry.

All active duty military personnel at Ft. Benning are eligible to participate in the 1974 USAIC Golf tournament and the handicap competition for selection of the threeman team for the Pro-Am tournament.

Houston Astros looking for new baseball talent

The Houston Astros will conduct a full try-out camp at Golden Park on Victory Drive Saturday morning, August 10 beginning at 10 a.m.

All those wishing for the opportunity to sign a professional baseball contract should report to the park by 9:45 a.m. and bring their own glove and shoes. The camp will be conducted by Astro scouts Dave Yoakum and John Jemison.

For additional information, call 324-3594.

Stombres and O'Brien are champions at bridge

Mrs. Vickie Stombres of Ft. Benning and Mrs. Hayne O'Brien of Columbus were winners of a 60-player section in a single session championship event of the 1974 Summer National Bridge Championship held in New York City.

The 10-day event is among five major championships and 12 regional titles at stake in the 10-day tournament at which more than 8,000 players from throughout North America compete.

The tournament is among three major championship events held each year by the American Contract Bridge League. The event drew a total entry of 344 players.

PT plays key role in unit performance

By Lamar Battles.

Softball, basketball and horseshoes aren't new ways of training, nor are they hard work. But in Co A, 1/58 Inf Mech, 197th Inf Bde, they take up one afternoon every week—and play a key role in the performance of the unit. Co A, like many brigade units, schedules organized athletics as one of their weekly activities designed to help build and maintain the morale and unity of the company while providing good physical exercise for the troops.

"The company enjoys organized athletics," explained 2LT Randy Rheem, executive officer. "It builds esprit de corps, breaks the monotony of the every day training schedule, and builds company unity."

Competition between platoons gives an added dimension to the weekly sports events that see anywhere from 100 to 150 of the company's men take part either as participants or enthusiastic spectators.

"The softball and basketball games give the men something to look forward to every week," commented PVT Jesse Latham, an M-60 gunner in the 1st platoon. "The competition makes it better than just going out and throwing a ball around."

ISG Edward Garret

attributes the success of the weekly athletics to the strong support of the company commander, CPT Russell Calvert, and the organized manner in which the program is conducted.

"I play basketball myself," added ISG Garrett. "I'm not as good as some of the players on the team, but I give it my support."

For the new man coming into the company, organized athletics provides a good way to get acquainted.

"I'm looking forward to organized athletics," stated PVT Lafayette Moore, a new man in the company attending his first organized athletics, last week. "Everyone wants to play and they want to win. It's better than doing the same thing every day, and it gives us a good change."

"Most of the men don't get a chance to participate regularly in sports," said SGT Joseph Simmons, acting mortar platoon sergeant. "They get that chance here."

690th learn water crossing at Schley Pond

Realistic training is perhaps the most challenging aspect of military operations today. The more realism injected into a problem, the more interest is generated and the better equipped the personnel are to cope with actual combat situations.

Members of the 690th Med Co, 34th Med Bn recently accepted the challenge by conducting water crossing exercises across Schley Pond. Crossing a water obstacle is a conceivable situation under combat conditions.

Following a brief class on the construction of the rafts, teams composed of select members of each platoon competed in a race against the clock using only a large paulin and seven litters.

Each team was required to construct the raft, load it with a patient and cross a course on the pond.

The team of CPT Kenneth J. Kremenak, company commander, Harry L. Shaffer, acting first sergeant, and platoon leaders, 1LT Jesse A. Johnson and 2LT Paul V. Kiehl were among the top finishers.

"The results were encouraging. Not only did the company gain valuable experience from which they can draw on later but the competition also served to heighten platoon spirit," said CPT Kremenak.

Floatbridge company trains Memphis reservists

The 467th Engr Bn (CBT) arrived from Memphis, Tenn., recently to begin their training in floatbridge construction by the 586th Floatbridge Co, 36th Engrs.

Reserve soldiers of the 467th Engrs began a twenty four hour floatbridge operation their first day with the 586th Engrs.

Both units of the Army, active and reserve, worked around the clock to complete their mission of constructing a floatbridge.

For the 576th their job was to supervise and train the engineers of the 467th on all types of floatbridge construction.

Over the past few years the idea of active and reserve units working together on projects of this nature has proven to be of great asset to both types of military units.

These projects give the 586th Engrs an opportunity to put their knowledge of supervisory skills to work in order to benefit others.

For the reserve engineers, "the training is excellent," remarked SP4 Jesse Shortie, 467th Engr, "the experience I received from the 586th

Engrs will benefit me further in my job I have in the reserves."

Shortie concluded, "it's really different from my regular job back home, I think of it as sort of a summer vacation."

ROTC class 10-74 graduates

ROTC cadets from 106 colleges around the country and a number of West Point Military Academy cadets graduate from Ranger training in ceremonies held this morning at Todd Field. Lieutenant General Donn R. Pepke, Deputy Commander of FORSCOM, WAS GUEST SPEAKER AT THE GRADUATION CEREMONY. Of the 218 students who began the course nine weeks ago, approximately 170 graduated and received the Ranger tabs they worked so hard to earn. On hand for the ceremony was Col. James F. Bowers, the Director of the Ranger Department, USAIS. A band was provided by the Infantry School, and an honor guard took part. Congratulations, Class 10-74, on a job well done!

Active and Reserve Army units share rodeo work

The 467th Engr Bn (CBT), a Reserve unit, and the 43rd Engr Bn (CONST), an active army unit, worked together recently to help the Columbus Jaycees prepare the Columbus Auditorium for the 1st Annual Columbus Jaycees Rodeo.

Using a variation of equipment such as dump trucks, front end loaders, and a road grader, the engineers were required to transport fill from a nearby location into the auditorium. Once in the auditorium the soldiers were required to spread the fill to a desired depth of one foot. In less than four and one half hours the engineers spread over six hundred cubic yards of fill inside the auditorium to accommodate the rodeo that was to take place that evening.

Surprisingly enough, the man in charge of the operation at ground level inside of the auditorium, was ROTC Cadet John Potter, from Georgia Institute of Technology. Mr. Potter, was sponsored by 1LT Thomas Chalifoux, HHC, 43rd Engr Bn (CONST).

Appreciation from the Columbus Jaycees was high. Mr. Paul Redding, a member of the Columbus Jaycees, expressed his appreciation of the soldiers stating, "We couldn't have gotten by without them."

The two army units returned at a later date and removed the fill from the Columbus Auditorium. Community action projects such as this greatly enhance the Image of the Army.

Lay-aways can help beat the Christmas rush

Christmas may seem like a long way off in August, but count the number of paydays between now and Dec. 25. Now match your holiday budget to the number of people on your gift list. Get the point?

The Ft. Benning Exchange can't offer an all-expenses-paid yuletide, but it does have what may be the next best thing: the AAFES layaway program.

Each year, more and more exchange shoppers are using layaway to beat the Christmas rush and parcel out those holiday expenses.

A versatile program, it is useful both to set aside that special once-in-a-lifetime present or for the less expensive items that always seem to add up to a larger total than expected. A layaway may be opened with a collective or individual purchase of $15. The customer selects the items, then makes a down payment of as little as 10 percent of the purchase price. That merchandise then is laid-away for the exchange for installment payments that may be spaced over as much as 90 days.

In these days of rising prices, the program has become an added blessing since merchandise placed on layaway is never subject to price increases. Buy now, pay later—at today's prices.

Perhaps the biggest side feature of AAFES layaway is that shoppers may check off their guest lists in an atmosphere far more relaxed than the hectic holiday rush. Since there usually are several second and third trip additions to the Christmas shopping list, a late summer or early fall holiday shopping interlude still allows for those supplemental shopping trips if need be.

Blood donor center moves

Martin Army Hospital Blood Donor Center has moved into a new air-conditioned building, 2755-A, on the corner of Benjamin and Riordon Streets in the Airborne receiving point area. The new donor center has more space for processing and examining of donors and a larger area set aside for the canteen.

American Red Cross volunteers maintain the canteen area, offering cold drinks and cookies and giving each volunteer donor a wallet-size donor card.

The Center is open each Thursday afternoon from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Military, civilians, and dependents 18 years and older are accepted as donors. For any additional information call the Blood Bank at 544-3741.

Swimmers Wanted

The Ft. Benning Barracudas swimming team is looking for boys and girls aged 6-16 who have competitive swimming experience or who desire to participate in and learn competitive swimming.

For more information contact LTC Clarke at 687-7647 or SGM Rodrigues at 687-8920 (545-2722 during duty hours).

Stars fall on MAH commander

COL John W. White, Commander of the Medical Department Activity and Martin Army Hospital, was promoted to brigadier general in a ceremony at the hospital last week. Pinning stars on the new general were his wife and MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning commander.

BG White has served in a number of capacities during his career, including Chief, Surgical Service and Professional Services at the United States Army Hospital, Ft. Hood, Texas; Chief, Department of Surgery, Fitzsimons General Hospital, Denver, Colorado; and Chief, Professional Services and Surgical Consultant, Office of the Surgeon, Headquarters, United States Army Europe.

He has also been Chief, Surgical Consultant, Directorate of Professional Service, Office of The Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Washington, D.C.; Deputy Commander, Director of Medical Education and Chief of Professional Services, Brooke General Hospital; and Commander, Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas.

SFC Freddie Thomas' recent promotion from SP6 climaxed an already "perfect two week," in his words.

Thomas, dining facility manager of Co A, 1st En 29th Inf, TSB and his crew of culinary experts were presented with the TSB Best Mess Award last week.

One week later, Thomas and the PIONEER dining facility was presented with the Post Best Mess Award (small unit category), on the same day he was promoted to Sergeant First Class.

PIONEER commander, LTC Kenneth S. Pond praised Thomas for his outstanding achievement in being named the best dining facility on Ft. Benning for July.

"It is a true pleasure and distinct honor," LTC Pond stated, "to promote you to the rank of SFC. Your obvious devotion to duty and meticulous attention to detail has resulted in this tremendous award."

Alpha company commander, CPT William MacPherson added his congratulations to those of LTC Pond. "SFC Thomas, your efforts reflect great credit upon yourself, the 129th Inf, and the United States Army."

Company A has won the TSB Best Mess Award three times this year, but the Post level award was the first in 1974.

"I'm extremely proud of my dining facility personnel," Thomas stated. Without everyone working as a team, this award could not have been possible."

American Legion's National Security Commission visits Benning

Some 90 members of the American Legion's National Security Commission are at Ft. Benning through today for a tour of the post. They arrived yesterday and will leave today at 4 p.m.

The purpose of the National Security Commission is to assure a strong national defense, and to give a better understanding of today's modern Army as background for recommendations to be made to the national convention of the American Legion on Aug. 17 and 18 in Miami Beach.

The group is made up of civic and business leaders and professional men from all over the country, all of whom have a military background and have served in at least one major war.

Members of the group include Mr. Emmett G. Lenihan, the national chairman of the National Security Commission; Dr. Stacey Garner, chairman of the Defense Civil Preparedness Committee; Mr. Granville S. Ridley, chairman of the National Security Council; and Mr. John J. Wrenn, chairman for Naval Affairs.

Also attending are MG (Ret.) Francis P. Kane, MG (Ret.) George Pearson, MG (Ret.)

Milton A. Pilcher, and BG (Ret.) Charles Baron.

The commission observed the Combat Arms-Tactical Training Simulator while at Ft. Benning and visited the Individual Learning Center. They also saw Scout Dog, Rangers in Action, and Airborne training demonstrations.

The group visited the Infantry Museum, saw a presentation of "I Am the Infantry," and toured the 197th Inf Bde and the 36th Engr Gp area. They also attended an official dinner last night at the Ft. Benning Officers Club. A plaque was presented to MG Thomas M. Tarpley by the commission as a token of appreciation.

MAST aids auto accident victim

When a man is pinned inside an overturned car, every minute counts.

The 498th Med Co (Air Ambulance), proved itself when an urgent MAST (Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic) call was received by radio at 2:50 a.m. August 6.

Ronald S. Gordy, 19, of a Route 1, Box 40, Manchester, Ga., was driving down Highway 85-West six miles north of Manchester at 1:30 a.m. Tuesday when he lost control of the car. He ran off the road and overturned several times, and ended up pinned in the back seat with the car upside down in a ditch.

The Meriweather County Ambulance Service and Georgia Highway Patrol Post 34 arrived promptly at the scene of the accident. Trooper Michael Perkins of Post 34 radioed instructions to the Manchester station for a call to the MAST unit. They left Ft. Benning at 3 a.m., only ten minutes after receiving the call, and arrived at 3:20. The landing was delayed by ground fog and power and telephone lines, but Trooper Perkins outlined the landing area with red flares.

Gilstrap, and SP4 James Curry, medic. The two-man crew from the Meriweather County Ambulance Service had kept Gordy alive, but had been unable to get him released. The MAST crew set to work immediately.

CW2 Kagle climbed under the car and SP4 Curry got inside the car with the ground ambulance attendant, while SP5 Gilstrap and the other attendant held lights so the men could see. The five-man team had Gordy free, on a litter and on his way to the Columbus Medical Center at 3:40 a.m.—twenty minutes after the helicopter arrived on the scene.

As the 498th Med Co helicopter took off, Columbus Approach Control was contacted by radio; CAC relayed vital information about Gordy's condition to a doctor at the Medical Center. The trip to Columbus took twenty minutes.

Medical Center personnel found that Gordy had head wounds and multiple cuts; doctors diagnosed his condition as critical.

The operation was the first emergency call received in this area since the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic program was inaugurated on May 24.

MAST: what is it?

The Ft. Benning MAST program serves 54 counties in Georgia and 15 counties in Alabama within a 100-mile radius of Ft. Benning.

The program is a joint effort of the Departments of Defense, Transportation and Health, Education and Welfare. The 498th Med Co (Air Ambulance) maintains a UH-1H helicopter on a daily 24-hour standby, with a secondary aircraft and crew available on 30 minutes' notice.

Requests for aid must come from an official source such as a hospital, law enforcement, Department of Public Health, or some other competent official, or a doctor. The request then goes through one of seven Central Regulating Committees, where it is screened for validity, appropriateness and clinical feasibility. However, when time is of the essence, competent officials may make request directly to the 498th Med Co from the scene of an emergency.

MAST missions may extend beyond the 100-mile radius when death or disablement of the patient is at stake and MAST is the only available means of aid, considering the seriousness of the patient's condition.

No interest in youth program?

I am writing this in view of this year's Youth Activities baseball program at Ft. Benning.

I've been at Ft. Benning for almost two years and have coached two baseball teams and a football team. I couldn't understand that of all the dependents on this post, why only a handful participated in the sports programs. Why were only 240 playing baseball this year between the ages of 7 and 15? Not only that, only 60 between the ages of 13 and 15 played. Maybe there was lack of interest in sports, I thought. Since I've been involved with Youth Activities, I believe I now know the answer.

Many of the parents complain about the fee. The money went to the umpires, equipment and trophies. I don't understand why the umpire gets paid. The coaches do more for the program and don't get paid. I don't mind not getting paid because I enjoy the work but I think the money could have been spent improving the program instead of the umpires.

The uniforms I was issued from YA looked like hand-me-downs from the fifth grade. Most of these players will be freshmen in high school this year. The uniforms didn't fit, and some of them couldn't even raise their arms with them on. They are made out of wool, which makes them exceptionally hot in the field. So we chipped in and bought our own shirts, something YA should have provided.

The teams this year were split up by housing area. The reason being that parents didn't like the idea of bringing their kids from Sand Hill and Bouton Hill to Main Post in order to practice and play games. The games were played on Main Post. I was told that practice would be held in the Sand Hill area since I had that team. I had my first practice behind the Community Center in Sand Hill. If anyone has been to that field, they know that any team can't practice well enough to play in a game. The infield was half grass and half rocks. Woods surrounded the playing area which was ideal for losing baseballs. Besides, a pitcher's mound was needed. Needing another field, I moved down the road and found a backstop. The field was all grass, about a foot tall. I wound up practicing on the same field only in an area where there was no backstop and the field was all grass. I got to practice sometimes on the softball field up the road, but that was limited because the units on post played their games there.

I called YA to ask if I could practice on Main Post. No was the answer. I also asked if there were any baseball fields in Sand Hill. No again. The season started and we got stomped the first four games. Why? Lack of experience, not enough time to practice, lack of practicing on a regulation ball field and the pitchers hadn't pitched from a mound in a year. So, after that we started practicing on Main Post. The other teams were getting experience on the field where we played so we did too. Nobody complained. In fact, the parents were glad to see us practicing over there. Of course, this isn't what I was told by YA.

The paid umpires they had did not know all of the rules. That's always a complaint which can be counteracted because coaches always complain about the umpires, but these umpires weren't required to have the rule book in their possession.

12 games made the season. Enough time so that a team can just get organized, just get to know each other better, just begin to play the type of ball they should, and just enough time to begin to understand the game of baseball. We had only two weeks before the season in which to get ready.

We finished the season tied for second place. Why couldn't there be a play-off? Football season is next and they didn't want to run baseball into football like they did last year. I don't buy that. One game would have meant a lot of difference to 15 young men.

Some of the rules incorporated in the league were made after the season started. I didn't know who the league commissioner was until the fourth game.

Despite all of this, I had a great time. I enjoyed it and I think all the coaches did too. But now, after two years, I can understand why there has been lack of participation. There was a lack of interest, not in sports, but in the Youth Activities Program.

Co B, 3/7th Inf get refresher training in land navigation

With compass, map and protractor in hand, soldiers of Co B, 3/7th Inf (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf Bde took part in a one-day refresher course in land navigation in preparation for the unit's upcoming Operational Readiness Test (ORT).

"The purpose of the refresher training is two-fold," explained platoon leader 2LT Apollonia Garcia. "First we are preparing for our ORT and second we are giving our soldiers training in an area that is covered quite comprehensively on their MOS tests."

The training began with a two-hour refresher class on map reading, use of the compass and eight digit coordinates.

"The eight digit coordinates are new to me," stated PVT Glenn Warren, who has been in the unit only three weeks. "We had a lot of land navigation in basic training and AIT, but this is the first time. I have had to use eight digit coordinates."

Contestants preparing for Chattahoochee raft race

This year's Chattahoochee Raft Race, sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, should have plenty of excitement, if recent entries and proposed rafts are any indication.

Some of the entries from Ft. Benning include 8-10 people from TSB (The School Brigade) on a rubber raft, and entering from the 197th Inf. Bde. are 1/58th, Co. C/Spt. Bn. 179th Military Intelligence Det., and the 2/10th, who will start the race. Several men and officers of the 197th are members of the Columbus Jaycees.

Entrées are now being accepted by the Columbus Jaycees, and entry forms, which must be completed and sent to the Jaycee office before the race, are available at the office.

Among the crafts anticipated for the race will be rafts made out of milk cartons, coffins, bathtubs and a Volkswagon turned into a boat.

Several boats will be equipped with paddle wheels, one will contain an outhouse and one will be created to resemble a monster.

Judges of the best boats will include the current Miss Georgia, and winners will participate on a TV special in September.

Jaycee officials urge all participants to pick up their entry blanks and get them back to the Jaycee office as soon as possible.

Following the class, the unit was divided into two-man teams, and each team was given a compass, map, protractor, and was given coordinates and azimuths to follow.

"I find map reading both fun and interesting," stated SP4 James Lane, who last had a land navigation class during AIT in February of this year. "It is something that is very helpful to the field soldier. You never know when you might have to assume a leadership position and lead men through an unfamiliar area."

"It's challenging," explained PVT Lester

Lawrence. "It is not at all boring and I really enjoy running these land navigation courses."

Those teams that completed the course the first time called it a day while the remainder of the unit was given a second course to follow.

"I think most of the men learned things today that will help them do well on their MOS tests," stated SFC Fred Crane, NCOIC of the training exercise. "You can study all you want from a book but nothing beats going out and doing it, and that's just what we did."

Camp gives disadvantaged kids opportunity for some summer fun

The Domestic Action Summer Resident Encampment Program, a part of the Ft. Benning Domestic Action Program in direct coordination with the Columbus Youth Opportunity Program, CYO, is a program that gives disadvantaged Columbus area youths the opportunity to attend summer camp for one week.

"The encampment, located in the Harmony Church area of Ft. Benning, is an eight week program. Fifty male and fifty female children, ages 6-14, attend on alternating weeks. They have the experience of being away from their environments for one week," said the Rev. Brother Pritchett, the camp supervisor.

The managing sponsor for the encampment is the CYO director, Colonel (Retired) Jesse F. Wheeler, Jr.

Ft. Benning provides living quarters, dining facilities, transportation to and from the children's homes to the camp site, all recreational facilities, including the use of the Harmony Church olympic-size swimming pool, and emergency medical facilities in case of an unexpected accident or any serious illness," Rev. Pritchett said.

The CYO director and his staff direct the campers in activities, and furnish schedules and immediate supervision.

A poorly tied knot means 'curtains'

"You can trust him with your life." How often have you heard somebody say these words? Usually the speaker has no intention of following his own advice. But at Camp Frank D. Merrill, the ROTC cadets of Ranger class II-74 learned exactly what those words mean. They also learned that they can literally put their lives in the hands of their fellow Ranger students.

Mountaineering is a hazardous activity. The simplest error — a poorly tied knot, a moment's inattention — can lead to a fatal accident. It is the job of the instructors of the Mountain Ranger Committee to insure that the students master the necessary skills so well that this 'simplest error' does not occur.

After the ROTC Ranger students have learned how to take care of themselves, they learn to take care of each other in the mountains. Now is when they learn the meaning of the word — 'trust'. It is personified in the form of the "belay" man—the man who holds the ropes.

"This is the most important class that we teach in the mountains," CPT Riley T. Griffin, the OIC of the Mountaineering Committee, says as he begins the class on belaying. "Almost every climber, at some time during his career, is going to lose his footing. He is going to fall! Whether his fall is going to be fatal depends on the belay man."

Why have a belay man? Why not just anchor the rope to a tree or other solid object? The answer to these questions is demonstrated by SFC Gordon Roberts. Standing atop the thirty-foot rappelling ramp, he holds in his hand an 18-pound metal weight on a manila rope tested to hold 500 pounds. The other end of the rope is attached to the top of the ramp. At a signal from CPT Griffin, SFC Roberts drops the weight. It falls the full length of the rope, about 15 feet, bounces once, and then, as the rope breaks, it falls to the bottom of the ramp.

The experiment is repeated, but this time SFC Roberts holds the rope across his back, using his body to absorb the shock. The weight falls, bounces, but remains suspended about halfway down the ramp. The rope has not broken. The point has been made—a belay man is a necessity.

The class continues for about an hour, during which time the students learn the techniques of belaying a climber and how to safely lower a stretcher down a cliff.

At the end of the class, the students move to the top of a 60-foot vertical cliff. Here they divide into groups of four. One plays the part of a casualty — securely tied to a litter, just as he would be if he were injured; he cannot move. He is completely helpless. "It's not so bad," one of them says. "All you have to do is not look down, not think about it and just stay numb." Two men will rappell down alongside the stretcher and guide it over any rough spots. But if the belay man fails to do his job, they will be unable to do anything to prevent the stretcher from crashing to the bottom of the cliff. The fourth man is the belay man. With the help of two rappellers, he arranges his ropes through the snap-links (attached to trees, the snap-links serve as pulleys.) Then he stands with his feet braced, the rope passing behind his back, under his armpits and through his gloved hands. He is ready. The litter is pushed over the edge, the two rappellers begin to guide it down the face of the cliff. An instructor, SGT Ronald A. Gieger, stands at the edge of the cliff and watches as the litter begins its slow descent, and signals to the Ranger on belay. Suddenly the litter becomes stuck; SGT Gieger's open hand signal becomes a closed fist. The belay man immediately grips the rope more tightly with his right hand and brings it sharply across his chest. The litter stops. One of the rappellers guides it back to its proper path, and on signal the belay man again carefully allows the rope to pass through his hands. And make no mistake, his buddy's life is in those hands. The stretcher again begins its slow descent. Then it is at the bottom of the cliff, where it is removed from the ropes. At last the belay man can relax . . . for a minute.

Motivation, determination and single-minded concentration on the task at hand are vital to the successful completion of the Ranger course. The students become so engrossed in their training that events of importance not related to the course are sometimes forgotten.

So when the ROTC cadets of Ranger class II-74 were returning from the first day of training on the rugged slope of Yonah Mountain, during the Dahlonega phase of the Ranger course, and Ranger student Norrell E. Lantzer heard his name called, he immediately wondered, "Oh, no, what have I done now?" Thinking back over the day's work as well as previous days of training, he 'knew' that he was passing. They couldn't be dropping him from the course; but what else could it be?

The stocky young student, from Martin, Tennessee, decided that there was only one way to find out; he quickly sought and found the medic who had been calling his name.

What he discovered that he had done was to become the father of a 7-pound 2-ounce baby boy. He also found out that both the baby, named Jason Scott, and the mother, Teri-Lea, were doing fine.

"I knew the baby was due; I was waiting for it; but when I heard them call my name, I just didn't think of it," explained the ROTC Ranger student.

Ranger Lantzer will return home this fall to see his new son and to continue his pre-med studies at the University of Tennessee on an ROTC scholarship.

The Bayonet, August 14, 1974

'What better way to spend summer?'

For two ROTC cadets of Ranger class I-74, the move to the Mountain Ranger Camp was a return to familiar surroundings. Cadets Howard D. Kinney III and David A. Jordan both attend North Georgia College in nearby Dahlonega.

The mountainous surroundings of the camp are especially familiar to Ranger student Kinney, whose hobby of mountaineering has taken him all around the cliffs of Northern Georgia. After he earns his degree in Business Administration and Management, Ranger Kinney intends to try the Army as a career. "Being an Army brat and having a father in Special Forces, I guess, had something to do with my decision," explains the young Ranger student.

As for attending the Ranger course, Cadet Kinney "just couldn't think of a better way to spend the summer."

Cadet Jordan, who hails from the Atlanta area, first attended college on a basketball scholarship. But the tall, athletic Ranger student "found that there was more to college than just basketball," and changed to a pre-med major. At the same time he became involved with the Reserve Officer Training Corps program at North Georgia College.

"I don't know how many Airborne Ranger doctors there are in the Army," Ranger Jordan says. "But someday soon there will be at least one."

1/58th, now your breakdowns must go to Co D

By Lamar Battles

Where do you go if your armored personnel carrier breaks down?

If you're in the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, you used to go to the 598th Maint Co (light), but that's all changed now.

In a step to further the readiness posture and self-sufficiency of the brigade, Co D, 197th Spt Bn, recently assumed the responsibilities, formerly held by the 598th Maint Co (light), for providing direct maintenance and supply support to the 1/58th.

CWO John Idell, shop officer for Co D, heads a new contact team that delivers "on site" maintenance support to the 1/58th.

"This team can do anything to track vehicles that needs to be done," explained CWO Idell. "We provide one stop support when and where the track vehicle support is needed."

Co D officially took over 1/58th support responsibility on July 22 and have already put out nearly twenty jobs for the battalion.

"Working with armored personnel carriers (APCs) is a brand new field for us," commented CPT David E. Boyken, Co D commander. "We hand pick the people for the contact team and see that the more experienced personnel help the young soldiers get the necessary practical experience."

is one of the team's more experienced workers and is happy with the new job.

"I enjoy this type work because it's not the kind of job you do every day," stated SP4 Woods. "All of the new men I've worked with seem to enjoy it too. I've taught them most of what I know and I think they do a good job."

PFC Joe Murray has been in the Army one year and is getting his first experience working with track vehicles as part of the contact team.

"I've picked up a lot while actually doing the work," stated PFC Murray. "You get a lot of experience here and I wouldn't say it's hard since I enjoy what I'm doing."

To insure that the team is always prepared, a special contact shop set truck has been equipped with everything from a welding set to any hand tool they might be called on to use.

"The contact truck is what you might call a shop on wheels," explained CWO Idell. "Without it we couldn't do the required work."

Columbus Symphony Orchestra slates 1974-75 season rehearsal

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, Harry Kruger, Conductor, will have the first rehearsal of its new 1974-75 season on Tuesday, Sept. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the rehearsal room of the Fine Arts Building at Columbus College.

An exciting season is planned, including four subscription concerts featuring outstanding guest artists: three free Family 'Pops' Concerts—the first of which is Thursday, Sept. 12 at 8:00 p.m. in Watacoba Park—free children's concerts given for the children of the Muscogee County School District, and certain special concerts and programs.

The orchestra rehearses every Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at Columbus College beginning Sept. 3. Any qualified musicians, especially string players, who might be interested in playing in the Symphony please contact Harry Kruger at Columbus College (561-5134, Ext. 292) or at home (563-4367). For ticket information or information pertaining to the season write P.O. Box 5361 or call 323-5059.

VA tests flameproof materials

Can a hospital environment, including bed linens and room draperies, be made completely flameproof?

The Veterans Administration Hospital at Buffalo, New York, after two years of testing and research, believes it has discovered a process that not only makes fireproofing possible but can prolong the life of mattresses and save on laundry bills as well.

In April 1966, the Buffalo VA Hospital tested what is believed to be the first pair of lifetime "fireproof" pajamas.

The experiment was successful, and from this beginning the VA has made flameproof pajamas standard wear in all its 171 hospitals.

The two-year test has demonstrated that flameproof fabrics are more economical than ordinary cotton because they last longer. The durability was recently demonstrated by two two-hundred pound men who took a bedsheet in use for two years and used it in a tug of war. Not a single item from the test ward has been discarded because of wear and tear.

Patriots continuing to learn DePuy concepts

The first unit in the Army to be trained in the DePuy concept of mechanized operations, demonstrated the concept to squad leaders, platoon sergeants and platoon leaders of the other line units of the Patriot battalion last week.

The DePuy concept was first tested and demonstrated by Co C 1-58th Inf for GEN William E. DePuy, TRADOC commander, in April and May. The DePuy concept employs methods of movement to contact that expose as few men as possible to hostile fire at any one time. The techniques, which include traveling, traveling overwatch and bounding overwatch, all involve one tank or armored personnel carrier covering another.

The concept makes maximum use of vegetation and cover and the vehicle speeds have been reduced to around 20 mph.

Instead of a 44-man platoon, the unit has been cut to 38 men and a position has been created for an assistant platoon sergeant. The traditional weapons squad has been moved to the weapons platoon while the weapons themselves remain with the rifle platoon. Through cross training the weapons could be used by the platoon if needed.

In addition, the squad leader rides inside the armored personnel carrier, rather than the track commander's hatch. A designated gunner now rides in the old track commander's hatch to man the .50-caliber machine gun. A new armored personnel carrier is now under development with a track commander's hatch in addition to the designated gunner's hatch.

The leaders of Co A, Co B and Cbt Spt Co, 1-58th, climbed aboard the armored personnel carrier of Co C to actually ride through the demonstration.

"It was a good way to demonstrate the techniques," stated SGT Kenneth Berquist, a squad leader in Co B. "That way we were able to see and hear exactly what was going on from the position we will be in when we do it."

The entire battalion is now in the process of training in the use of the concept and once the training is complete the 1-58th will be the first battalion in the Army fully trained in the use of the DePuy concept.

"We should have all units fully trained by the end of September," stated MAJ Gale R. Zink, Jr., the battalion S-3. "The squad leaders are the key men in this training. They are the ones that must make it work."

"The DePuy concept is still in the forming stages," MAJ Zink emphasized, "although training circulars have been printed and approved."

"I think these techniques will be much better than the traditional line and echelon movement techniques," stated SGT Herbert Ervine, Co B squad leader. "I also feel this was an effective way to demonstrate the techniques."

197th soldier must be 'fit to fight'

By Lamar Battles

Health is not a new weapon nor a code name for a secret operation. It is, however, one of the most important elements of the overall readiness posture of the 197th Inf Bde.

In a letter to the brigade on health, COL William B. Steele, brigade commander, stated, "It is a necessity that the state of health of the brigade be known at all times and that appropriate actions be taken to constantly improve the medical well being of all individuals."

To insure that every soldier is in top shape and ready to deploy should the brigade be called on, responsibility for the health and well being of brigade soldiers has been placed on the individual, his commander, and the 197th

Group study program should improve proficiency scores

Co A, 1st Bn, 29th Inf (PIONEERS) TSB is holding a group-study program designed to improve proficiency pay scores, and to give select soldiers a better understanding of their MOS.

192 soldiers from Co A are enrolled in the 'Light Weapon Infantryman' course (MOS 11B) which is held every day. The men study during duty hours, in their spare time and during their off duty time, all in an effort to better themselves in their own particular specialty.

The course, which runs from June until November, is the brainstrom of Company Commander CPT William MacPherson. "I feel this study program will improve the men's pro-pay scores by 50 per cent," MacPherson said. "Come November, I anticipate the majority of A Co soldiers will be drawing that extra money."

Car club plans solo driving event

The Sports Car Club of America, Chavaga Region 38, has announced plans for a Solo II Driving Event at the Traffic Circle Shopping Center August 18.

This event involves maneuvering your car through a set course of pylons against time. Contestants may run the course three or four times. The best time will be used.

Registration for this event will open at 10 a.m. and the event will actually start at 1 p.m. Registration fee for this single event is $4 for non-members and $3 for members.

A Challenge II Road Rally is also planned at the Traffic Circle Shopping Center August 25.

This event involves the running of a 75-mile course set throughout the Columbus-Ft. Benning area. Contestants will be timed from checkpoint to checkpoint. Instructions will be given prior to the start of the road rally event on the proper running of this event. This is not a road race. Drivers will observe all local speed limits and adhere to the laws of the area involved.

Starting time will be 1 p.m. with registration time at 10 a.m. Registration for the single event will be $4 for non-members and $3 for members. Fees for the pre-registration of both events will be $7 for non-members and $5 for members.

For information on membership in the Sports Car Club of America or information on the two driving events, call Bart Wheeler at 689-4399 or Richard Herr at 561-3664.

Spt Bn.

In his letter, COL Steele called on the individual to take an active role to insure that their immunizations are up to date and that medical and dental records are filled properly in the troop medical clinic supporting their unit. Responsibility was also placed on every soldier to see that his individual shot record is updated and instantaneously available; that he have two pair of military glasses if poor eyesight requires glasses; that every individual be identified as to medical profile; and that every soldier have their correct blood type and Rh factor recorded in their medical record, their individual shot record, on their dog tags, and on their ID card.

Commanders are tasked to use their organic medical platoon to advise them on the health and medical condition of their command and to take necessary actions to insure that brigade health standards are upheld. Periodic screening of medical records at supporting troop medical clinics is an important part of this effort.

The 197th Spt Bn and its medical company have the job of coordinating from a technical and staff standpoint the medical efforts of all medical organizations within the brigade to insure that the objectives of brigade health policy are met and to advise the brigade commander and staff on the health and medical condition of the brigade.

In addition, the Spt Bn is responsible for stationing a medical representative with the brigade adjutant general to assist with the in-processing of all new personnel coming into the brigade. The representative will check the medical records of new personnel and make sure that their individual responsibilities are either taken care of or scheduled for completion. If possible, all medical requirements will be accomplished prior to the individual reporting to his unit.

"Every man must be 'fit to fight' at a moment's notice," explained LTC Jerry K. Patterson, special assistant to the brigade commander. "We have to maintain our health today so we'll be ready at all times."

Daffin named driver of the month

SP4 Lent Daffin, D Co, 1st Bn, 29th Inf, TSB has recently been named driver of the month for the PIONEERS. Daffin, a native of Jackson, Alabama, has been with the PIONEERS for over a year and serves as the company commander's driver.

"This was the most difficult part of the competition for me," Daffin continued, "but for the over-all test, I was the best!" Daffin was presented with a three day pass and a $25 savings bond for being selected PIONEER driver of the month.

The driver of the month competition tests each participant on the various aspects of his vehicle to include maintenance, driving ability, and knowledge of the vehicle.

For SP4 Daffin, the road test proved to be the most challenging of all in the competition. "We had to drive an obstacle course," Daffin said, "which included backing the vehicle up with a trailer attached."

SP4 Lent Daffin, Co D, 1st Bn, 29th Inf., TSB was recently selected the PIONEER driver of the month. Daffin, a Jackson, Alabama native, has been with the PIONEERS for over a year. He won the award based on his proficiency in driving ability, maintenance, and knowledge of his vehicle. (PHOTO BY RICK WASSER)

Even truer than in civilian life, women fill expanding roles in the green machine

By Joyce Wright

"What???? You!!! I can't believe it." That's the general enlisted man's reaction when PVT Linda J. Paulk of West Palm Beach, Fla. says she's an Airborne Parachute Rigger.

PVT Paulk is one of many women branching out into new career fields now open to women in the Army.

In this modern Army, one writer is no longer right, when she wrote in the April 1972 edition of Army magazine, "Unhappily, the Army is full of misogynists and chauvinists who just can't take the idea of a woman in their world."

And the women in the Army have come a long way from Germanin Greer's observation in her novel, "The Female Eunuch". She wrote: "The female branches of the Armed Forces are not soldiers in their own right, but clerical assistants and other kinds of handmaidens to the male officer."

Enlisted women have always been more readily thought of as working in the administrative, personnel, and finance fields. They have also been accepted in such fields as communication, medical and dental, air operations, support, photography, drafting, information, intelligence, recreation, transportation, machine accounting and food services.

Within the past few years, WACs have started to be accepted into other fields that were thought of as being "for men only," such as Military Police, mechanics, and Airborne.

PVT Paulk, the first WAC to come back to Ft. Benning after completing Airborne training her and Parachute Rigger School at Ft. Lee, Va., says the women undergo basically the same airborne training as men.

The physical training is modified for the women, but they get the same instruction in swing landings, parachute land falls, exits from the 34-foot tower, and women must make the five regulation parachute jumps before they can receive their wings.

What makes a woman want to go into a field that up until a few years ago was considered unfeminine?

"I just wanted to do something different. I didn't want to work in an office and sit behind a desk," said PFC Ava West from Kennedy, Ala., who is assigned as a mechanic to the 1st Bn 29th Inf.

PFC West changes tires and spark plugs, and handles the usual mechanical maintenance of vehicles.

PFC Christine Jewell, who is assigned to the 139th Military Police Company, Traffic Section, said, "After finishing high school, I wanted to work in law enforcement. There wasn't any openings in my home town of Beauty, Kn. I moved to Columbus, Ohio, and wasn't able to get a job in law enforcement there either. So I came into the Army as an MP."

PFC Jewell directs traffic and works on radar and road blocks.

"I applied for a job as a policewoman in Washington D. C., but was turned down because of my eyes," said PFC Jo Perry, a native of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who is a juvenile investigator also assigned to 139th MP Co.

PFC Perry handles the cases of dependent children who have been picked up for allegedly committing such offenses as shoplifting. She calls their parents and reads offenders their rights; if they are placed on probation, she informs them of the rules they have to follow, such as not associating with other known delinquents. She also acts as probation officer — who they have to report to once a week.

Pvt. Paulk simply states, "I wanted to do something different."

Once a woman is in her chosen field as an Airborne parachute rigger, mechanic, or MP, how is she accepted by the male enlisted man who works along side of her?

Some men still may have the notion of protecting frail womanhood from the cold, cruel world.

"Some feel that if a woman MP didn't have a weapon at her side, she'd be as defenseless as any other woman," says PFC Perry.

Women MPs aren't allowed on the duty line, they can't "cruise" around post in a car or jeep, and they aren't allowed to participate as night escorts. To most men, women MPs couldn't handle a drunk or a riot situation.

But WACs take their Military Police training at Ft. Gordon, Ga. They complete the same training as the men. They are taught hand-to-hand combat, how to search people and how to apprehend an offender. They receive about 12 hours of Judo and fire arms training, and have to qualify with a .38 caliber pistol. They learn how to investigate and interrogate criminals, and they attend classes on military law.

PFC West feels that she is more or less accepted as a woman mechanic. "At first they didn't know what to do with me," she said. "For the first two weeks we kind of felt each other out. They wanted to see what I would do."

"They accept me, just like one of the guys" says PVT Paulk. She hopes to become an Airborne instructor later.

The women's role in the Army is widening. Women are proving their moxy in more and more career areas, and still remaining feminine. They are the personification of what the WAC insignia stands for — that of the Pallas Athena, the Greek goddess of victory, wisdom and womanly arts.

Women in the Army are exemplifying the fact that the "so called" weaker sex can function in a man's world, and the women in the 197th Inf. Bde. are helping to prove it.

With more and more jobs opening up for women in the Army, it is not surprising to find them in a Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) unit such as the 197th.

Mixed feelings flowed like water as the women invaded the privacy of Kelley Hill last October, but things settled down and the change was accepted.

"I believe that most of the men in the brigade were happy to see the women come to the unit," said MAJ Layton C. Matt, the brigade IG.

The women in the 197th have many opinions about being assigned to a deployable unit.

"At first I didn't want to be assigned to the brigade," stated PVT Martha L. Moore, clerk-typist for the IG office. "Kelley Hill is so far away from the Women's Army Corps Detachment's barracks and transportation was scarce."

"I was also a little scared about being assigned to an all-male unit; I thought I'd be teased constantly," Martha said.

"The main thing that bothered me when I first came to the brigade was that I didn't think I had anyone to discuss my personal problems with," stated Martha, "but I soon found that a man can understand and will cooperate just as much as a female boss would."

"I wanted to come to the 197th," added SP4 Sylvia J. Grisson, a personnel specialist with the brigade's personnel records detachment. "This way I can be a little closer to my husband, who is also in the brigade."

"When I first came to the office and saw there were no other women I was a little skeptical, but now it's just like working in any other office," continued Sylvia.

"Like Martha, I found that I could take my personal problems to my NCOIC or OIC and they would try to help," stated Sylvia. "I like working for the brigade."

"A girl has to get used to having a male supervisor," added Martha, "since in civilian life she considers herself equal to men. Of course the men had to change their attitudes as much as we women did. They had to learn how to deal with our problems and many other things."

Although the women are assigned to the 197th, they are attached to the Women's Army Corps Detachment on main post.

"This is one of the biggest hassles," Martha stated. "As I said before, our barracks and our places of duty are so far apart."

"It's not just the distance," added Sylvia, "but having to work here during the day and pull duties at the Women's Army Corps Detachment is also a hassle. It gets to the point that you don't know who to listen to."

"A lot of problems would be alleviated if the brigade would set up its own Women's Army Corps Detachment and have barracks on Kelley Hill," continued Martha.

"Another problem arises for those women who have children," stated PFC Janet L. Norland, of the brigade's administrative services division. "The nursery here on post doesn't open early enough for us to get our kids there and be to work by 7:30 in the morning."

"Not only that," added Sylvia, "but nurseries get awfully expensive."

"What the Army needs to do is set up a nursery on each installation for Army women with children," stated Martha. "They could take so much money out of the checks of those involved."

Being assigned to a unit that is deployable and could pack up and move at any moment brought different responses from the women.

According to MAJ Raymond G. Brandenberg, the brigade's Adjutant General, "All women assigned to the brigade will ship if the unit is ever deployed."

"I don't mind being assigned to a deployable unit," stated Janet, "but I feel we should be trained just as the men in the brigade."

"As far as I'm concerned," added Sylvia, "I don't want to go through the same training as the men. I won't believe that we would be deployed with the brigade until it actually happens."

"I don't know," commented Martha, "if I were more aware of combat tactics, being deployed wouldn't bother me at all."

"All we want is to be able to take care of ourselves in combat," continued Martha. "We don't want to have to hide behind the men. Without any physical or tactical training, I feel we are neither ready physically nor mentally to be deployed."

"I'd have to agree with the girls on this subject," commented MAJ Matt. "If they are going to be classified as soldiers, then they should be trained the same and be able to do the same things as the men."

With more than 90 per cent of MOSs now open to women, TRADOC officials say women "ought to be able to protect themselves and the only way to do this is for marksmanship training to be mandatory for all Army women."

Concerning the role that women are playing in the Army, the girls expressed themselves explicitly.

"I feel that some things have to improve for women in the Army in order to keep them in," stated Janet. "But I feel that these improvements will be made in the near future."

"I think its beautiful that women are getting into almost all the areas of the Army," commented Martha.

"A woman coming into the Army," Martha continued, "should keep an open mind and not be disappointed if she doesn't get the job she wanted. If at all possible, she would try to become an officer."

"As far as a combat situation is concerned, I think a woman could keep up with a man," added Martha. "I feel that women react faster than men in an emergency."

"I don't think there is any basis to women not being emotionally stable or strong enough to be in combat," commented Martha. "We go through the same emotional strains in every day life."

"I don't think women will ever be equal to men in the Army," Sylvia stated. "They may fight side by side but there would still be superiority conflicts."

"With more women than men in the country today, I feel that we should be utilized to supply part of the power in protecting our nation," concluded Martha. "Women being completely accepted in the Army is in the near future."

"The Army's been good to this Army wife."

Mrs. Vera Coles, whose husband's a tanker, likes the Army. And likes to talk about it.

"Charlie wasn't in the Army when we first got married. But after a while we decided to give Army life a try.

"One of his reasons for joining, and for reenlisting, is college. He says that although it might take a little longer in the Army, it's easier, and a whole lot cheaper.

"The medical benefits are important to us, too. Our bills would have been impossible as civilians. Plus, the doctors have been outstanding. You know, they don't treat you like you're just another case.

"But basically, we're staying in because we're happy here, as a family. And I think that's the best reason of all!"

Today's Army gets better every time a good family reenlists.

'Ole Doc Sez

'Ole Doc checks out them younguns for school

Howdy Bub. I worked my sox off this week, doin' the annual school physicals for the school board. I seen tads I ain't even heard of, much less knowed in that passel of children. Me an' the school nurse, Betty Ellen Coffey, seen the whole lot of 'em in three days. I know that most folks don't hold with the inconvenience of havin' to get they's younguns into they's Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes, ahaulin' 'em down to the town hall, an' then havin' to undress 'em so's I can get a peek, but I think that a school physical is as important as the schoolin' itself.

Why, there musta been ten-fifteen of them children that ain't never seen a doctor since the day they left the hospital in they's mama's arms. You'll be happy to hear, Bub, that most of them younguns wuz as healthy as colts, but they wuz a few that I am goin' to have to see agin in my office.

Susie Burnett had an early case of measles, an' I had her mama take her straight home. I seen her when I wuz done with the other children. Lionel Wharton had a little rub in one of his lungs, an' I sent him off to the hospital for an x-ray. Little Judy Simpson had a nice case of poison sumac that will need some followin' up. Arlington Guenther had some unusual sounds in his heart pump, an' I got him over to Doc Kelly's for an evaluation. A little girl by the name of Mary Mulligan wuz complainin' of a tummy ache that turned out to be appendicitis, an' I took care of her.

The rest of the tads wuz ok, 'cept for some minor aches and pains, an' me an' Betty Ellen cerified 'em all fit for schoolin'. Billy Bob wuz helpin' us, some, by takin' heights an' weights. We had to have Shirley Wise, from the senior class, writin' down what Billy Bob seen on the scale an' the yardstick, 'cause nobody can read his writin'. He wuz struttin' 'round yelling out pounds an' inches like he wuz in a hog-calin contest.

He got them kids to call him doctor Billy Bob, an' wuz jes generally havin' hisself a time. Like I said, we done all four hundred of them younguns in three days. If we can get Billy Bob to stop measurin' an' tryin' to weigh folks, I'd say that we done good.

I know, Bub, that you ain't rasin' a fuss 'bout yore little people havin' a physical, but lottsas folks thinks it is pure hogwash. Try an' get 'em to think our way 'bout this important phase of schoolin'.

Good health to you and yours.

Medical research volunteers wanted

A four day work week, no fatigue details and sixty dollars a month per diem. Sound unbelievable? It is true. The Medical Research Volunteer Program offers these incentives to qualified personnel interested in the program.

Medical Research Volunteers have been utilized at Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland, since 1922. In 1955, the Department of the Army authorized the recruitment of male enlisted men to participate in the investigation of clinical pharmacology, human factors evaluation and psychological research. Since 1955, more than 6700 medical volunteers have participated in the program.

Applicants for this program must be in excellent physical health, enlisted male between ages of 18 and 35 and citizen of the United States not currently enrolled in a training program.

Volunteers selected to participate in this program will be placed on TDY to the Biomedical Laboratory, Edgewood Arsenal.

Interested personnel are advised to write to Lt. D. Jay Bice, Biomedical Laboratory, SAREA-BL-RC, Aberdine Proving Grounds, Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland, 21020 for further information and for the necessary forms for application.

Blowing air into the "float balloons" was one of the tasks assigned to the reservists of Co D, 467th Engr. Bn. (CBT) Reserves from Memphis, Tenn. The job consisted of rolling the float off the back of a truck, unfolding it, blowing it up, and preparing it to be lowered in the water. (Photo by Gary Cathcart)

Rod and Gun Club notes

Dove season coming fast so get ready

By Bill Kloeb

Hubert Handy, chief of the Georgia Game and Fish Division, has announced the dates for dove seasons in Georgia. As in previous years the season has been split in two periods with different dates for the southern and northern parts of the state.

The North-South dividing line gives local hunters the opportunity to hunt during all four periods without a lot of travel. The line runs east and west along US Highway 80 from Columbus to Macon, along Georgia Highway 49 from Macon to Milledgeville, Georgia Highway 22 from Milledgeville to Sparta, Georgia Highway 16 from Sparta to Warrenton and US Highway 278 from Sparta to Augusta.

In the northern section of the state open season dates are from September 7 to October 26 and December 14 through January 2. Dates for the southern section are September 28 through October 26 and November 30 to January 9.

Hunting hours are from noon until sunset. The bag limit is 12 daily with 24 birds in possession.

The season or seasons for Alabama have not been announced but Roy Johnson, administrator for the Ft. Benning Fish and Wildlife Branch, has received information indicating the opening date will be about September 21.

Time To Get Ready

The announcement of the dove season dates always catches me off guard. It's difficult to adjust to the idea of hunting while my primary worries involve keeping cool and cutting down on the air conditioning bill. Nevertheless, now is the time to start preparations for opening day.

The first problem is the decision on buying that new bird gun. It seems more appropriate to spend the money for more scuba equipment or golf clubs. New gun or old gun, it takes a keen eye to down doves on the wing. A few Sunday afternoons at the Rod and Gun Club Skeet Ranges are in order. They are open from 2 p.m. until dark. Then there is the problem of reconnoitering for doves. It takes some time to cover the likely spots on the reservation and quite a bit of planning to arrange for land use off the reservation.

Permits, Licenses and Registration

Several administrative actions are necessary before hunting on the reservation. All weapons used must be registered at the Provost Marshall Registration Office, located in Room 218 of Building 83.

It's not necessary to bring the weapon but the serial number, model, manufacturer and length of the barrel must be listed on the registration. Registration is good for two years. Then the gun must be registered again. Better check your gun registration.

Hunting cars must be registered, too. A car that isn't registered can lead to problems. It might make the game warden wonder how many other regulations are being violated. This could lead to a check for gun registration, state hunting licenses and post hunting permit. The warden will probably check that post hunting permit to make sure it has been stamped to indicate the owner has attended the required hunting and fishing safety orientation. You can expect a critical game warden after he travels several miles cross-country trying to determine who belongs to that unregistered vehicle.

The time to attend the hunting and fishing orientation is getting short, too. Remember you are not authorized to hunt or fish on the reservation until you have attended. Classes have been scheduled in Classroom 7, Building 4 at 7 p.m. each Wednesday evening during the remainder of August and the month of September. Hunting and fishing permits will be sold at the classroom entrance beginning 45 minutes before each class.

Let GAC put a jingle in your dufflebag.

The way prices are going right now—you may need more money than you thought you'd need. GAC wants to lend you all the money you'll need to help beat prices and to buy the bargains you want before they're gone.

You don't have to make a lot to borrow a lot at GAC. The size of your loan depends on many things: the bills you have or have had. What you own or want to buy. The kind of work you do. And, because you wear a uniform, the kind of work you do rates very high with GAC. A steady income makes it easier for you to get a loan. But, more important, GAC wants to serve you because you serve your country.

Whatever your needs, whatever the reason, let GAC put a jingle in your dufflebag.

Georgia golfers line up for Southern Open

A dozen pro golfers from Georgia, including 1972 Southern Open winner DeWitt Weaver of St. Simons Island, are the first to officially make commitments for the Southern Open golf tournament next month at Green Island Country Club.

Columbus golfers Hugh Royer, Jr., George Johnson and Tommy Aaron (who represents Callaway Gardens on the pro tour) will enter the competition.

Larry Hinson and Lyn Lott of Douglas, Steve Melnyk of Brunswick, Bunky Henry of Valdosta, Paul Moran of Blue Ridge, Larry Nelson of Acworth and Pete Davidson of Augusta are other Georgians who have made commitments to compete.

Royer is pro at the Bull Creek Municipal course here and ventures into competition once a year—at the Southern Open—since he retired two years ago from full time tour competition.

Bonus prizes available in post golf tournament

Skip Odom, Recreational Services Sports Officer, has announced three bonus prizes available to entrants in the USAIC Golf Tournament to be held at the Officers Golf Course August 27-30.

Scores for the first 36 holes played during the tournament will be used to select golfers to represent Ft. Benning in the Annual Callaway Gardens Pro-Am Handicap Golf Tournament on November 11.

The three golfers carding the lowest net scores after deduction of handicap will be en-

Flag football clinic scheduled for coaches

The 1974 USAIC Flag Football Coaches and Officials Clinic will be conducted August 21 and 22 in Building 395 at Gowdy Field.

The Clinic will be conducted to train coaches and officials in the techniques of play and officiating flag football in order to promote better company level sports competition within the USAIC command.

Major units are asked to send at least one representative from each company-size unit to the clinic.

For more information concerning the 1974 USAIC Flag Football season and clinic contact the sports division of Special Services at 545-1516.

MAH Med Co has winning streak

The MAH Med Co won its game with the 560th Med Co 13-3. The onslaught began in the first inning when four runs were scored off the bat of Billy Grantham after he hit a triple with the bases loaded. The third inning also produced four runs, three of which were scored when Billy Grantham once more stepped into the batter's box with the bases loaded and slammed his second bases loaded triple. The game ended after only five innings because the ten runs rule was in effect. Batting honors go to Billy Grantham with two triples and six RBIs out of three times at bat, Steve Schaefer was three for three and David Guy was two for two.

On July 29 the Dental Co went against the MAH Med Co in a ball game that was eventually won by the Med Co 12-7. The Dental Co started things off with 3 runs in the first inning off hits by Fitterling, Kendle and Nichols, but the Med Co was not to be outdone and also scored three runs in the first. The second inning saw the Dental Co go scoreless while the Med Co scored 3 more runs to lead 6-3. Runs were swapped for the remainder of the game. Leading hitters for the Med Co were Bob Forte with 3 for 4 and David Guy with 2 for 3.

On July 30 the Med Co MAH went against the league-leading 690th Med Co in what proved to be one of the best games of the season. It appeared as if the Med Co was going to win with ease when after 5 innings they were ahead 7-0. Then in the 6th inning the 690th scored 5 runs to bring them within 2 runs of the Med Co. In the 7th inning the Med Co was unable to push anyone across the plate and the 690th came to bat needing 2 runs to tie and 3 to win.

The inning progressed to the point where the 690th had 2 on with 2 out when St. Jacques drove a long ball into left field that tied the game at the end of the seventh, 7 all. Med Co and the 690th traded runs in the 8th. The 9th inning proved scoreless for the Med Co but the 690th was able to score the winning run to terminate a hard fought ball game with the 690th on top 9-8.

PIONEERS enter post play-offs

C Btry, 83rd Artillery of the 1/29th Infantry swept to victory three consecutive times to finish number one in the TSB softball play-offs, and assure themselves a berth in the Post tournament.

After putting away the Small Arm's Committee by a score of 7-5, the Artillery PIONEERS had to face the previously unbeaten IOAC-4. They stopped the advanced course players 4-1, which locked them into a first-place deadlock with each other.

In the final game of The School Brigade softball tournament, C Btry, 83rd FA finally emerged victorious over IOAC-4 to capture the TSB championship.

IOAC-4 drew first blood, when in the first inning they picked up one run on two hits and a Benny Williams error in center field. The Artillery PIONEERS got back in the ball game in the second inning as Mike Benoit sacrificed in a run and Mike Reeves doubled in two more, giving the Charlie Battery PIONEERS a 3-1 lead.

IOAC-4 picked up one run in the 4th on a sacrifice fly, and in the fifth inning, IOAC pitcher Fred Tucker hit a routine infield grounder, and three errors later, ended up at home before the Artillery team could get a handle on the ball.

With the score tied 3-3 in the bottom of the 5th, the Artillery PIONEERS and their big guns opened up with an aerial barrage. Mike Benoit and John Reeves started the inning with singles. Benny Williams doubled Benoit home, while sending Reeves to third. Then, with two outs, Roland Marsh crashed a three run homer deep down the right field line, and the PIONEERS took the lead, 7-3.

With their spirits slightly daunted, the IOAC team fought back gamely, picking up one run in the sixth and two more in the seventh, but to no avail, and C Btry, 83rd FA of the PIONEERS became the new softball champions of The School Brigade with a 7-6 victory.

The Artillery PIONEERS and TSB's number two team, Small Arms Committee, will represent TSB in the Post softball tournament which commences next week.

Uncle wants you . . . in Germany

Volunteers swap special team, but number who leave are few

The special volunteer recruiting team from USAREUR reports that, in the two weeks the team has been at Ft. Benning, 259 persons have volunteered for assignment to Germany, and 63 persons have been approved and processed for overseas orders with arrival dates in Germany during September and October.

So, about one fourth of those who volunteered for Germany actually got orders. Why?

According to MAJ Thomas F. Durham, "we're looking for the first-terminer who can move out almost immediately — like within the next two or three weeks."

197th shows off powerful weapon

Cameras whirred and eyes watched as the 72nd Engr Co (Combat), 197th Inf Bde showed off its most powerful and devastating weapon, a 165mm cannon mounted in a Combat Engineer Vehicle (CEV), at a demonstration held for distinguished visitors from main post.

The CEV, operated by a four man crew, sighted its targets, two concrete bunkers and a reinforced log structure, and annihilated the three in short order.

"Actually," stated SP4 Michael R. Johnson, a crew member of one of the two CEVs, "the vehicle is an M-60 tank chassis with modifications."

One modification of the vehicle is the 165mm gun. It fires a 65 lb shape charge (high explosive plastic) with a maximum effective range of 1,000 meters. The main gun is accompanied by a .50 caliber machine gun, a 7.62 coax machine gun and a Zeon

MAJ Durham pointed out that three-fourths of those volunteering were NCOs who: 1—weren't first-terminers, 2—aren't single, 3—aren't Unit of Choice—Special Unit Enlistment or Station of Choice enlistees, 4—don't have one of the MOSS listed in the Daily Bulletin.

Think it through . . . In order to qualify for assignment through the fast method used by the team, you almost have to be single — simply because your personal affairs have to be wound up so quickly. Getting concurrent travel with your family would be practically impossible. If you are willing, however, to put up with leaving the moving to your search light with 75-million candle power.

Another modification of the vehicle is the winch mounted on the sides of the turret. The winch has a single line pulling capacity of 17,500 lbs. The third modification is the bulldozer blade mounted in front of the vehicle.

"The main gun of the CEV is used for demolition purposes only," commented 2LT Michael E. McGee, platoon leader of the CEV section. "It can be used for blowing bridges, destroying reinforced structures or used for 'in city' fighting to destroy buildings where snipers may be hiding."

"The 165mm gun is not mounted with a range finder, therefore it is ineffective to fire at enemy troops or tanks," concluded 2LT McGee.

wife — not to mention the wait you'll undergo until you find quarters in Germany — well, it's up to you and your wife. The team can give you more poop.

You must be a first-terminer. Persons who have reenlisted have already been programmed (generally) for tours lasting up until the end of that reenlistment. To be reassigned through the team will mean coordinating with DA — and that takes too much time.

You should have one of the MOSSs listed in the Daily Bulletin to qualify for the super-fast reassignment. These are the MOSSs that are critically needed in Germany. But if you're a first-terminer without one of the MOSSs listed, don't give up hope. The team keeps up-to-date on those MOSSs that may be needed, but aren't listed. They can inform you if a slot opens up in your MOS.

You almost have to be a Unit of Choice — Special Unit Assignment or Station of Choice enlistee. Why? So you can waive whatever remains on your current contract in favor of going overseas to another unit, station or area of your choice. What does that mean? Less paperwork for everyone concerned — hence the faster assignment.

So pick up the phone and dial 545-2310 and ask for MAJ Durham, SSG Ohr or SP4 Kitchens. Yeah, they want your bod. But just think: You can be doing your thing in Germany — your way.

WHEN IT'S TIME FOR LEAVE, WILL YOU HAVE ENOUGH MONEY TO GET OFF BASE?

You know where you want to go. The problem is, you don't know where the money's coming from to get you there.

HFC has a suggestion. With our Traveloan, you may borrow up to $2500. Money enough to get you on your way. Money to spend on anything while you're away. When you return, all you do is pay us back in simple monthly installments.

What happens next? Before you go on leave, take a trip down to HFC and see about the Traveloan. Household Finance. An equal opportunity lender.

36th conducts Race Relations Course

SSG Robert L. Adams, Hq Co, 36th Engr Gp (Cbt), will be one of the principle instructors for a two week Moderator's Training Course being conducted by the 36th Engrs this week. The course began Aug. 19.

A rapid turnover of Race Relation-Equal Opportunity (RR-EO) personnel within the 36th Engr Gp (Cbt) necessitated the need for the course. Instructors for the course will be comprised of graduates from the Defense Race Relations Institute, Patrick AFB, Fla.

The mission of the MTC is to conduct training for selected unit personnel that have been designated as Race Relations moderators and instructors. The course will help prepare the soldiers to moderate and instruct personnel in their respective units through small group discussion seminars.

Adams says, "The course has several objectives for the students that will increase their knowledge and confidence once they are returned to their respective units."

"The course will start off by familiarizing the students with current Department of Defense and command Equal Opportunity Treatment (EOT) policies." Adams continued, "From there we will provide the students with a working knowledge of various minority group histories, contributions minority groups have made to the nation and to the Armed Forces, and finally provide the students with some social, psychological, and cultural factors relating to race relations."

"We want to prepare these men to be able to lead group discussions when they return to their parent units. From the attitude displayed by the men so far, I think they will do just fine," concluded Adams.

Two Benning units depart

Two of Ft. Benning's company-sized units departed post August 21 for their new home at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Ga.

The units are Hq Co of the 145th Avn Bn and the 609th Trans Co. Their combined authorized strength is slightly more than 300 officers and enlisted personnel.

Departure ceremonies were held at Lawson Army Airfield at 6 a.m. August 21.

LTC Duane C. Ingram was the host officer for the ceremony. The 283rd Army Band furnished music.

The 145th Avn Bn was first activated in Sept., 1963, in Vietnam. The 145th received the Presidential Unit Citation and the Valorous Unit Citation for service in Vietnam, as well as two Cross of Gallantry awards.

It was activated again at Ft. Benning in May 1973.

The mission of the 145th was to maintain a combat-ready status, command and operate Lawson Army Airfield, and train and maintain aviation personnel.

On departure of the 145th, Lawson Army Airfield will be operated by the Aviation Division, Directorate of Plans and Training.

The 609th Trans Co. was activated in 1941 as

"B" Company, the 394th Quartermaster Battalion. The 394th served in the Pacific in World War II. It was renamed in March 1956, and was activated at Ft. Benning in August 1965.

Its mission is to perform direct support maintenance on Army aircraft and related equipment, and supply and recovery support to non-divisional units.

Engineers build right-of-way for college

The 43rd Engr Bri (Const) has once again been called upon to prove its motto—"Power for Service". The mission of C's B and C involves constructing a "right of way" for the new home of the Chattahoochee Valley Community College (CVCC), in Phenix City, Ala.

The present plans reveal that the new road, approximately one mile long, will provide access to the CVCC campus from two different locations in Phenix City.

"This is my first construction job," admits SP4 Gary Minks, "since I started on-the-job training. Judging by the plans for this place, I have a feeling that I'll be gaining a lot of experience and knowledge of just what the engineers are all about."

"A lot of people would think that this type of work is just training," said SFC Willie Spiegner, "but in actuality it's as real as real can get."

The Engrs faced two problems from the very beginning of the project. They were—private property on one side of the "right of way," and limited space on the other side.

The original plans introduced a road with 150 feet of clear space on each side, but now, with an ecological approach in mind, the space has been limited to 37 feet on each side.

"This project is going better than I expected," stated PFC Tom Larking. "Starting with nothing but a thick woody and hilly area, we have cleared the trees, started leveling and shaping the road, and prepared the road for the actual paving in only five days."

"This was expected to take nearly three weeks," Lking continued, "but thanks to the availability of fuel and willing bulldozer operators, we have come a long way in such a short time."

The Engrs expect to work on the CVCC road project until November.

Remember water safety rules, 'Bub'

Howdy Bub. A bunch of us wuz sittin' 'round Spud's Barber Parlour yesterday when we espied Sheriff De Witt aspeedin' down Main Street with the sirean awhoopin', an' lights aflashin' on his way to somewheres important.

We wuz all standin' on the sidewalk alookin' down the street after the sheriff when Spud's phone starting ajanglin' offen the wall. It wuz Sarah, the town operator, acallin' the Volunteer Firemen to 'port to their's duty station, an' head for the Market Street dock with the motorboat.

By the time we arrived at the dock with the 'quipment, Sheriff De Witt wuz talkin' to some lads in drippin' wet cut-off jeans. Sheriff came over to us an' tole us that it 'peared that maybe little Jimmie Preston had gone an' got hisself drowned. He pointed to the place in the water where Jimmie had last been seen, an' for us to get the boat out there an' start draggin' for the body.

Sheriff grabbed aholt of me an' tole me to take his squad car an' get over to Widder Preston's house, n'case she needed me. I threw my doctorin' bag into the car, an' got to the Widder's place lickity-split. She knowed, soon's I walked into the house that sometin' wuz amiss, so I sat her right down, an' tole her that Jimmie wuz missin' an' the sheriff an' his people were lookin' for him, bests they could, an' they would let us know the minute they had some news.

We musta sat in that living room, forcin' conversation, for most an hour. All of a sudden, the screen door on the porch opened an' then slammed shut, but 'stead of Sheriff De Witt, was wuz Jimmie Preston bellerin' for a sandwich.

I sat there frozen for moment afore I could ask the lad where he had been. He said that he'd been swimmin' an' then swam underwater across the river 'thout a breath, an' I bet you can't do that, Doc, an' then follered a yaller dog for a while, then came on home, why? I tole him that some folks thought he wuz missin' an' were alooking' for him, but now that he wuz back home, it wuz ok.

When I got back to the dock, I seen the sheriff wuz all beety-red in the face ayellin' through one of them portable spekin' horns, an' knowed right 'way that Billy Bob wuz in the boat. I looked, an' sure 'nough there wuz Billy Bob ayellin', an' astompin' wuz all beety-red in the face ayellin' the floor of a haunted house.

The other men in the boat wuz clutchin' the gunnels 'til they's fingers were all white, atryin' to keep the boat upright an' afloat. Nobody wuz draggin' for a body. I guess that survival is man's strongest instinct. I tole the sheriff what had happened with Little Jimmie, an' he used his 'lectric horn a coupla times, to try an' get the 'tention of the men in that boat, but it were no use.

He shook his head, looked at me, an' we both walked to my car an' left. Four hours later Angus McLean got Billy Bob's attention by throwin' a rock at him. I hear tell that they had to pry Clem Akins' hands free of the gunnels when they got the boat ashore, an' he still has a glazed look on his face this mornin'.

'Member yore safety rules when you are on the water, Bub. All stories ain't necessarily got to have happy endings.

Good health to you and yours.

Troop A surprised with readiness alert

Soldiers of Troop A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde were surprised with an unannounced operational readiness exercise alert on Aug. 9 and a visit from LTG Donn R. Pepke, Deputy Commander of FORSCOM, at the same time.

LTG Pepke visited the unit to observe Ft. Benning's only armored cavalry troop as it prepared to deploy.

"He was particularly pleased with the processing phase of the exercise," stated LTC Jerry Patterson, special assistant to the brigade commander, who accompanied LTG Pepke. "The administrative processing went quite smoothly."

The exercise was concluded in the afternoon, prior to the beginning of a movement phase.

"It was a good working session," LTC Patterson concluded. "I feel the unit learned a lot from the exercise and many problems were ironed out."

"The one major problem we encountered," stated CPT Robert Steele, Troop A commander, "was getting our people together since the alert was called on a training holiday. Many of our people had already left the state on a three-day weekend. However, we still managed to get about 65 percent of the unit together and ready."

Back to school -- a dangerous journey

Next month, a quarter of the American population will go back on the job, schoolbells will ring, and amid groans, grumbles, and maybe some mixed cheers, millions of children will settle down to the serious business of getting an education.

Whether your child walks to school, rides a bicycle, takes a bus, or is driven in the car by you, there are certain precautions that will help prevent him from having an accident.

If you drive your child to school, don't load or unload children across the street from the school, don't stop on the crosswalks as this is unfair both to the children and the safety patrols directing them, don't double park or stop too close to crosswalks. Pool rides with neighbors to reduce the number of cars in the school area. Have a designated location for meeting your child, and use more than ordinary caution when approaching a school zone.

If your child rides a bike, make sure that he understands that he must follow the same rules as motorists—observing traffic lights and signs, yielding right of way, and giving proper hand signals indicating turns, slow and stop. A bicyclist should never cut in or out of traffic, ride against traffic, ride two abreast, or perform bike stunts on a public thoroughfare.

For children riding the bus, crossing the street or highway to and from the bus stop is probably the greatest single hazard he faces. Your child should always cross at designated crosswalks after he has looked both ways to be sure no traffic is coming.

He should arrive at the bus stop in plenty of time, but not so early that he has time to loiter. Get him up early enough to avoid last minute scramble for the bus stop. He should board the bus without delay, in a single line, and without pushing. He should remain seated while the bus is in motion and avoid loud or boisterous conversation enroute. Obey directions from the driver promptly and without argument.

If your child walks to school, map out the safest route for him if school officials have not already done so. Make sure he understands it. The safest route is one that avoids busy thoroughfares as much as possible and allows your child to cross streets at corners protected by crossing guards. Teach your child to obey all traffic signs and signals, cross the street in marked crosswalks or at intersections.

Never jaywalk, by crossing diagonally, or in the middle of the block, or against the light, or from behind parked cars. He should wait on the curb for cars to pass, then look both ways and for turning cars before starting to cross. Walk quickly and directly across the street; never move at a snail's pace or loiter in the street. Parents who heed these tips will enhance the safety of their children, preventing them from becoming involved in accidents as they make the hazardous journey.

10,000th Enlistee

Carter chose Ft. Benning 'It's close to my home in Fla.'

PVT Richard I. Carter, Ft. Benning's 10,000th Unit-of-Choice enlistee, recently moved into his new home on Kelley Hill with Btry C, 2nd Bn, 10th FA, 197th Inf Bde.

When Carter enlisted on Mar. 7, he became the 10,000th soldier to choose the 197th Inf Bde or Ft. Benning as his Unit-of-Choice option. Since the Unit-of-Choice program began in 1971, more than 6,400 soldiers have selected the 197th Inf Bde, a pioneer in the Unit-of-Choice program.

"I chose the 197th because Ft. Benning is close to my hometown," stated PVT Carter of Crestview in the Florida panhandle.

Carter completed Basic Combat Training at

Ft. Jackson, S.C. and advanced Individual Training at Ft. Sill, OK. as a field artillery crewman.

"I dropped out of school to work at a garage," Carter explained, "but soon realized I had made a mistake. That is when I went to Chipola Junior College and took a trade course at night while working as a mechanic during the day."

Carter received a certificate from the college for successful completion of a vocational course in plumbing. However, the 17-year-old elected to join the Army rather than seek an apprenticeship.

"I wanted to make my parents proud of me," Carter stated. "That was my main reason for joining the Army. I'm really glad now that I did."

When Carter arrived at Btry C, 2nd-of-the-10th FA, the entire unit was in the process of taking its Operational Readiness Test (ORT).

"I'm sorry that I missed taking part in the ORT," Carter stated. "Being a country boy, I am looking forward to going to the field. I think I like the field better than working here (garrison). There's just something about the outdoors."

Carter admitted that when he was first told about being the 10,000th Ft. Benning enlistee he thought it was a joke.

"Everyone kept telling me I was number 10,000 and I really didn't know what they meant," he recalled. "I honestly thought they were kidding me."

Evans to receive Outstanding Teacher honor

Mr. Norman Evans, a fifth grade teacher at Ft. Benning's Richard G. Wilson Elementary School, was selected one of the top five elementary teachers of the nation by the Outstanding Elementary Teachers of America Organization, Washington, DC. Mr. Evans was selected from 48,000 other teachers representing school districts throughout the United States. The only teacher in the Southeast to be selected, he will receive his award at Dexter Elementary School, Sept. 24.

The Outstanding Teachers of America program seeks to honor these men and women who most influence the lives of their students, by involving themselves in both the social and emotional growth of the students. They are distinguished by their unusual dedication, superior ability and leadership in elementary education.

A letter is sent to principals in schools across the nation. They are invited to send in as many as five names whom they consider eligible for the award. The Board of Advisors bases most of its criteria for selection on the principal's judgement. Other things taken into account are accomplishments, travel, professional writings, certificates and awards.

Mr. Evans has been teaching at Wilson Elementary school since Sept. 1973. His first assignment at Ft. Benning was as assistant principal at Don C. Faith Elementary School, from 1971 to 1973. Mr. Evans received his Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts degrees in secondary and elementary education from Alabama State University, then Alabama State College. He received his Master Arts degree in School Administration from Atlanta University.

His additional studies include geography, at the University of Georgia, race relations at Fisk University, and educational psychology at Auburn University.

He has served 22 years as a teacher and school administrator. "I first taught in Phenix City, Ala.," said Mr. Evans. "I didn't like teaching that first year. It took me three years to learn to like and understand kids," he added.

Mr. Evans' teaching philosophy is summed up this way: "Children should be taught more and more to depend less and less upon teachers for their own learning."

"When a student comes into my room I'm not interested in what he learned last year. Teaching from a book is no problem. I'm interested in teaching basic social skills," said Mr. Evans.

Mr. Evans' other accomplishments include being selected by fellow teachers as "Teacher of the Year" three different years during his career. He is working on a book.

It's back to school Aug. 26

Classes for kindergarten - eighth grade will start Aug. 26 for Ft. Benning dependent schools. Students must be living on post or their sponsor must have a billeting slip indicating availability of quarters.

Students in grades nine - twelve who live on post may attend public high school in Muscogee County without charge if they have been properly registered with the Dependent Schools Office, Classes for Muscogee County Schools start Sept. 3. School hours are 9-11:45 a.m. or 12:45-2:45 p.m. for kindergarten; 9-2:45 p.m. for first and second grades; and 8:30-3:15 p.m. for third through eighth grades.

Grades kindergarten - six must attend the school where they registered, as far as possible, depending on school enrollment.

Kindergarten children have been assigned to a morning or afternoon session after registering. Kindergarten and first grade children should wear their name tag with their address and telephone number during the first month of school.

Transportation for all dependent schools will be available on the opening day of school. For students attending Muscogee County High Schools, transportation will be available beginning Sept. 3, the first day of school, for Baker and Spencer High Schools. Each student must have a pass and tentative bus assignment and schedule which he obtained at registration. Students without a bus pass may be denied transportation.

The Pre-Kindergarten School is located in Bldg. 7 (Patch School). For more information, call 687-2404 between 8 and 12 a.m.

All post schools will offer a hot lunch program. Lunch will be served for 42c on a meal ticket basis or 45c cash. Meal coupon books may be purchased for $8.40 a book, cash or check. Milk may be purchased separately at all schools, including morning kindergarten. The first day of school will be a regular school day and all students should have money for their lunch or milk.

Winter reprieve Make your reservation now for winter fun
at Destin, Fla.

Starting Sept. 6 and running up to the Memorial Day weekend in May, reservations for cabins at the Infantry Center Rest Camp at Destin, Florida will be on a first come - first serve basis. Active duty personnel at Ft. Benning may make reservations one month prior to the date desired, and retired military personnel not more than three weeks prior to the date desired.

Major commands, support units, USAIC directorates, and USAIS departments and staffs are authorized to reserve a minimum of four cottages or a maximum of ten cottages up to two months in advance.

The rest camp, located near the famous Gulf of Mexico Miracle Strip, provides recreational activities of interest to all ages.

Thirteen cottages, a trailer park and a camping site are available. The trailer parking pads are equipped for complete hookups. The camper service building provides toilets, bathing and laundry facilities.

A snack bar and a PX convenience store provide staple and convenience items.

The camp has small boats and catamarans which are used for close shore fishing, water skiing and sailing. Lifeguards are on duty during the summer season.

Other types of recreation include volleyball, horseshoe pitching and swing and slide sets for the kids.

A deep sea fishing boat can be chartered through Recreation Services Office, Building 394, not more than one month in advance on single reservations and not more than two months in advance for group reservation of the date desired.

Personnel are encouraged to use the Destin facilities from Sunday through Friday when the demand is low. For further information call 545-7414. The office - where application and reservation must be made, is on the second floor of Building 394 (Doughboy Stadium). Use the entrance nearest the Top Five NCO Club.

'Stripes for Skills' program earns Crunk additional rank

Under the Army's 'Stripes for Skills' program, a person can enlist with additional rank awarded them on the basis of skills acquired as a civilian.

That is exactly what PFC Charles Crunk of Hq & Spt Co, 1st Bn, 29th Inf, TSB, did in April.

Crunk, a native of Bartow, Fla., worked for three years as a welder with the W. R. Grace Company in Bartow. His brother-in-law and fellow Pioneer, SGT Ronald Todd of Co A, 1/29th told Crunk of the opportunities available under the 'Stripes for Skills' program.

"I'd been in my hometown for eight years without getting away," Crunk stated, "and I was really looking for a change of scenery."

Crunk enlisted under the station-of-choice option for Ft. Benning because, "my brother-in-law was here, and also I didn't want to be too far away from home."

"When SGT Todd told me about entering the Army as an E-3," Crunk continued, "I went and checked it out with my recruiter and it all looked pretty good to me, so I joined up."

The major difference in welding for his civilian firm and welding for the Army, according to Crunk, is the lack of supervision as a civilian.

PFC Charles Crunk, Hq & Spt Co, 1/29th Inf, TSB joined the Pioneers under the Army's 'Stripes for Skills' program. With this program, he can receive additional rank based on his past experience as a welder. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Tea welcomes new teachers

An Ecumenical Tea, hosted by Chaplain Division and the religious-oriented women's groups, will welcome new teachers to Ft. Benning's dependent school system Sunday from 3 until 5 p.m.

The US Army Infantry Center Chaplain, Sterling A. Wetherell, and his wife Anne, will greet the new teachers, "old timers," parents, dependent school staff, Board of Education officials, and PTA leaders at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex of Sigerfoos Road, Main Post.

Almost two hundred teachers from the Ft. Benning Schools have been invited, with an emphasis on those who are new in the community. Protestant Women of the Chapel, Catholic Women of the Chapel, and Jewish Women of the Chapel who are sponsoring the tea, emphasize that the purpose of the tea is to acquaint these newcomers with the warm fellowship of the Chapel "families" at Ft. Benning.

Ft. Benning families send their children, up through the eighth grade, to school on post. These parents, as well as other interested persons, are invited to attend and greet the staff and faculty of the dependent school system.

LEADERSHIP DEPARTMENT

The ladies of Leadership Department attended a tea at the home of Mary Vail on Miller Loop, Ft. Benning, last week. Farewells were bid to Lib Williams, Margaret Baker and Norma Childs. A warm welcome was extended to newcomers Mona Rabin, Sharon Gushwa, and Kathy Flint.

197th SUPPORT BATTALION

The ladies of the 197th Support Battalion were invited to the Normandy Room of the Officers Club for their mid-summer coffee by hostesses, Mrs. Norman Nolde and Mrs. Jessie Brock.

Mrs. Ellis Morris welcomed newcomers Mrs. Charles Hahn and Mrs. Michael Bellino. Also given a warm welcome was special guest Mrs. Vernon Appleby, wife of SGM Vernon E. Appleby.

Business matters were highlighted by the final selection of unit projects for the OWC Christmas Bazaar. The Support Battalion has chosen project concepts suggested by Mrs. Richard Wieberg and Mrs. Wilbur Speer. A special thank you is extended to all who worked on samples and offered ideas for projects.

NCOWC

The ladies of the NCO Wives Club have really been busy for the month of Aug. Hospital Coffee Call has taken place two times with Chairman, Mrs. Raymond Watson, in charge. There has been a Chairman Coffee and a Board meeting. The ladies furnished cakes to the Service Club Bakery Bingo, with Chairman, Mrs. Grady Vines, in charge. The Business Meeting was highlighted by special guest, Maj. Patricia Ernst, Club Advisor, speaking to the ladies. Hostesses for the Business Meeting were Mesdames Charles Gibbs, Roy Von Bokern, Arthur Butts, and William Jackson.

The special function of Aug. was the Heritage Tour and Luncheon. Guests for this event were the ladies of the Maxwell AFB Wives Club, Montgomery, Ala. A going on the famous Heritage Tour, the ladies returned to the NCO Clubhouse for a Spaghetti Luncheon. Hostesses were Mesdames Waller Colson, James Villagom Melton Abrams, Ernie Reed, Thomas Jones, P. Dillard. Busy ladies those NCO Wives.

Dramatizers present 'Beauty and Beast'

The Ft. Benning Dramatizers are presenting "Beauty and the Beast" tonight and tomorrow night at the Playhouse, located in Building 1237, behind the Infantry Museum off Ingersoll Street. The show starts at 7:30 p.m., and admission is free to anyone in the Ft. Benning - Columbus - Phenix City area. "Beauty and the Beast" is an old-fashioned fairy tale with a sugar-coated moral with live-wire current between actors and audience.

Peopled with wizards, dragons and a prince of a Beast, the story once more reaffirms our belief in justice. The play's characters include the untruthful child-dragon Micky and the rude, arrogant Prince-Beast. The fairy tale contains a definite social message, but remains an entertainment experience.

For the sheer fun, laughter and happiness of taking a magical journey into the land of make-believe, come and spend a summer evening under the stars with "Beauty and the Beast." The admission is free, and you may call 545-5057 for further information.

Cadets learn patrol coordination in the field

By Mike DeVita

A stiletto is a dagger having a thin slender blade. "Operation Stiletto" was the code name for the air movements of the ROTC cadets of Ranger Class 11-74 into the swampy environs of Camp Rudder. It began, appropriately, with an airborne thrust in the wake of a thunderstorm.

Although the drop zones at Camp Rudder are less than an hour's drive from some of Florida's famous resort beaches, the summer weather was less than idyllic. The morning had been hot and muggy and in the early afternoon the storm clouds began to gather, covering the drop zone.

"They (the airborne-qualified Ranger students) won't jump if it rains," one of the instructors explained. "We don't have the facilities to dry the chutes if they get wet."

It began to rain almost as he spoke. In very short order everything on the ground or in the open—equipment, people and cameras—was drenched. The canvas top of the field ambulance was soon saturated and began to leak. "Not much use in sticking around now," he thought. As we were making our way along dirt roads that had become a succession of streams and lakes, we noticed the bulky shape of a C-130 circling along the edge of the thunderstorm. We stopped and waited.

The lone aircraft continued to circle along the edge of the thunderstorm just outside the DZ. The wind was slowly blowing the clouds and rain away. With each pass the plane was coming closer and closer, until finally its path was crossing part of the drop zone. The DZ was clear, though the far side of the fields was still being soaked and occasionally lightning struck only a couple miles or so away. The C-130 was passing close to the center of the drop zone; it seemed to be going slower this time. Through the telephoto lens, its open doors could be seen. Then there were six specks behind the aircraft that hadn't been there before. The specks grew larger, not because they were coming closer, but because their parachutes opened. These were the "wind-dummeies", six instructors whose job was to indicate the wind conditions by the drift of their parachutes.

The plane circled again; this time about 20 jumpers could be seen floating downward. Twice more it circled while lightning flashed and thunder rolled in the distance. Twice more it disgorged more of the little white circles until 53 students and instructors were on the ground.

Shortly after the plane left, the students moved quickly to the rendezvous points, their rifles at the ready.

The combat-loaded Airborne Ranger students carried somewhere between 70 and 100 pounds of gear through the low scrub to the distant rendezvous points located at the edge of the woods surrounding the drop zone, about two miles from where the students landed. At the rendezvous points, the sweating Ranger students happily turned in parachutes and other "jump" gear, which was then loaded onto trucks.

As the two patrols began to set up security perimeters, they were visited by two observers who have a great interest in the Ranger students' training—the commanders of two of the ROTC regions that had sent cadets to the Ranger course. Brigadier Generals Robert Arter and Sinclair L. Melner, the Commanding Generals of the 3rd and 4th ROTC regions respectively, observed the airborne drop, and while reviewing the positions occupied by the patrols, they stopped to talk to cadets from their regions.

BG Arter said, "Ranger training offers a unique opportunity for the ROTC cadets." He added that he was favorably impressed by the training and by the performance of the students.

"It has changed a little since I went through 21 years ago," BG Melner, a Ranger himself, said of the Ranger course. "The emphasis and some of the techniques have changed, but it is still the finest training of its kind that the Army offers."

The security perimeters had been established, the generals had completed their visits; the patrols had been issued contingency instructions—all seemed quiet. The two patrol leaders, under the direction of an instructor, had just begun coordinating between themselves, when some kind of disturbance began just forward of one patrol's position. The patrol leaders quickly re-joined the patrols.

The disturbance was a probe by the Florida Liberation Army, an irregularly organized guerrilla force composed of Ranger cadre. The two patrols responded immediately. "Fire team Alpha—lay down a base of fire! Bravo—maneuver right!" shouted the patrol leader. Half the patrol took whatever concealment was available and began firing through the dense trees and brush in the direction of the disturbance. The other half began to move to the right to circle around whatever "aggressors" were to the front.

The two fire teams continued to advance in turn, one firing and one advancing. On the left the fire of the other patrol could be heard. Ahead the scattered fire of the "aggressors" was moving to the left; evidently they were withdrawing in that direction. "Maneuver left!" was the patrol leader's command to maintain contact.

Until this time, the FLA's fire had been light and sporadic. Then, on the left came the louder, deeper sound of a machine gun. "Maneuver left!" again was the order as the Ranger students rushed to assault the "enemy."

Suddenly it was obvious that the patrol had maneuvered too far to the left. It had become mixed in with the other patrol. The Ranger students were firing at each other as well as at the aggressors. There was only one thing to do. The Ranger patrols broke contact with the FLA and returned to their original perimeters.

A valuable lesson had been learned—never again would coordination between patrols be neglected.

The patrol leaders reported the action to the "Company Commander" of the exercise—a Florida Ranger Camp instructor. "Did you get any of those . . .?" he asked. "We found one body, dressed in civilian clothes," answered one of the patrol leaders, handing the captain the papers they had found on the body.

"Good," replied the instructor. "Now I want your men in those trucks in five minutes, ready to move out." The patrol leaders rounded up their men.

Five minutes later, as the trucks prepared to pull out, the instructor told me, "We have another ambush planned for them on the way to the camp."

Rope is one valuable tool—but not for the homebody

By Michael DeVita

Rope is one of a Ranger's basic tools. And the ROTC cadets of Ranger Class 11-74 have learned to do many useful things with a rope. It helps them to climb mountains, descend cliffs, carry equipment and perform many other tasks essential to the mission. They even learned how to build a bridge with rope.

"When a stream is deeper than the chest of the shortest man in the patrol, or the stream bottom is uneven, or the current too swift, use a one-rope bridge," SFC Charles R. McPeak tells the Ranger students at the beginning of the class on one-rope bridges. A full-scale tactical demonstration across a wide, rapidly-flowing river, complete with an "enemy" attack, colored smoke and loudly simulated artillery fire, is then staged for the students by the cadre.

After the demonstration, which lasts about ten minutes, the Ranger students receive detailed up-close instruction in each step of the construction and use of the rope bridge. Then it is their turn.

The students separate into six groups or bridge teams. Each group receives all the equipment, which isn't much. It fits into a large bag that could be carried by a single Ranger student. Each bridge team proceeds to a crossing point. Here they will construct a one-rope bridge across a deep river slew about 30 meters wide.

One of the strongest swimmers of the bridge team quickly removes his clothes and ties the end of a thin cord around his waist. Then he swims across the slew. Once on the other side he removes the cord from his waist. He pulls the cord across the stream and then the heavier rope which is tied to the end of the cord. He fastens the rope to a nearby tree, and signals to the men on the other side.

At his signal, the rest of the bridge team pulls the rope taut and attaches it to a tree on their side of the stream. In the meantime, another strong swimmer, cadet Michael C. Buchieri of Norwich University, has removed his clothes. He looks rather incongruous standing on the bank wearing only an inflatable life jacket, but in a few seconds he is in the stream serving as a lifeguard.

He will assist the other members of the patrol in fastening their equipment harnesses to the bridge. He will also aid those who have difficulty in swimming across the stream.

The day has been hot and muggy, as usual, and cadet Buchieri notes, "The water feels good, but the bubbles tickle." The bottom of the stream is deep with decaying vegetation, and each time he moves bubbles seep from the ooze.

The cadets, among them Russell R. Cleveland from Claremont College and Michael K. Sims of the University of Miami, quickly—but one at a time and carefully—fasten themselves and their equipment to the rope and step out into the water. The stream bottom drops off rapidly and soon each student finds himself neck deep in water working his way along the rope.

After each member of the team has made his way across, they simply reverse the procedure, return and disassemble the bridge. Ironically, the lifeguards, who have spent the most time in the water, are the only members of the bridge team who now have dry clothing. Their fatigues have made the two-way journey in waterproof rucksacks.

A one-rope bridge may be a rapid and efficient method of crossing a stream, but it doesn't keep your feet dry—or anything else.

SAINT ANNE'S SCHOOL

Saint Anne's School has set final registration for all students as Friday, Aug. 23, between 9 a.m. and noon. The first day of school will be Monday, August 26.

Saint Anne's has openings in the second and third grades. Interested persons should call the school at 561-8232.

FOREIGN TRAVEL

All Department of Army personnel, military and civilian, planning foreign travel on TDY, leave, or leave in conjunction with PCS, are required by regulation to submit DA Form 2374, Notification of Foreign Visit. Travelers should contact the Directorate of Security, 545-4772, as soon as travel dates are known.

PRE-REGISTRATION OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

If you pre-registered your children to attend the on-post dependent schools, this fall and have since learned that your children will not be attending, please notify the principal of the schools concerned, or notify the Central Office at 545-7743, 545-7194, or 545-3193.

PAPER BAG SHORTAGE

Customers are urged to immediately start bringing their own containers to the Commissary Store to package purchases. Paper bags are critically short nation-wide and there is no foreseeable relief. Any containers customers may provide for purchases will help during the shortage period. Old paper bags, shopping bags, barracks bags, boxes, etc., if clean, can be used.

NEW OPENINGS

Applications are now being accepted for the 1974-75 school year in the position of music teacher. The person hired will work mornings, four days a week. For further information call 687-2404 before noon.

MUSIC LESSONS

New piano and guitar classes begin September 9 and end October 18. Classes will be held from 5 to 8 p.m., Monday and Wednesday, Tuesday and Thursday. Classrooms are located at the Recreation Services Music Center, Bldg 1684.

Cost of the six-week course is $9. All military and DA Civilians and dependents are eligible to attend. Beginners, intermediate and advanced levels of instruction are offered. Private instruction is also available.

For further information and enrollment, call the Music Center at 545-1679.

ROD & GUN CLUB

The hours of operation for the Rod & Gun Club are as follows: Pro Shop, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday thru Friday and 6 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday and Sunday; The Snack Bar, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Tuesday thru Friday, the bar, 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., Tuesday thru Sunday. Pioneers fall to pieces in softball tourney

BY RICK WASSER
2/10th, 26-C/83rd, 13

Btry C, 83rd FA's softball year was almost a repeat performance of last year's football season. In both sports, the Artillery Pioneers captured the battalion championship, the TSB title and then fell to pieces in the post-level competition.

In their first game in the post tourney, the Pioneers were dealt an opening round loss by B Btry, 2/10th FA of the 197th Inf Bd.

The 2/10th drew first blood, as they picked up a lone run in the first inning. C 83rd of the 1/29th Inf, came back in their half of the first inning however, with five big runs to take the lead.

Julian Busky and Flozel Troupe drove in two runs a piece for the 1/29th Artillerymen, while 2/10th shortstop, Dwight Kissinger, allowed another run to score on his error.

Pioneer pitcher Harold Phillips got wild in the third inning, allowing three men to obtain a free pass to the bases. Two errors and two hits later, the 2/10th led by a score of 6-5.

Roland Marsh led off the C/83rd half of the third with a standup triple and Julian Busky drove him home to tie the score. Ron Ball singled Busky to third and Roosevelt Ingram smashed a triple to left, scoring both men ahead of him, giving the Pioneers an 8-6 edge.

The 2/10th tied the score in the top of the 4th behind a Dwight Kissinger triple and a Mike Pickett home run. They picked up two more runs on Pioneer errors and took over the lead, 10-8.

Ron Tillery, Benny Williams, and Flozel Troupe opened the Pioneer half of the 4th with base hits, and tied the score at 10-10, but it was the last time the score would be that close.

In the top of the 5th, 2/10th dealt what proved to be the fatal blow to the Artillery Pioneers. Harold Phillips walked two more men in a row and was relieved by Mike Benoit. Benoit was greeted with doubles by Kittinger, Pickett, Hill and Sharp, while the Pioneer infield continued to boot what should have been routine outs.

When the scoring finally ended, the 2/10th softballers held a commanding 10-10 lead over the 1/29th.

Ken Lee of C Btry drove a towering fly ball over the centerfield fence to lead off the sixth inning, and the Pioneers added two more runs to that, but to no avail.

The 2/10th sluggers continued to hammer away at the shaky defense of C/83rd, causing them to err frequently and add to the already insulting score. Dwight Kissinger hit another double — his third — and the 2/10th picked up five more runs.

The Artillery Pioneers could not even muster a single base hit in the bottom of the seventh — and final — inning, thus the TSB champions had dropped their first post-level contest, 26-13.

C/83rd, 17-Medics, 1

The Medical Company of Martin Army Hospital was sufficiently shell-shocked after only one half-inning of play with Btry C, 83rd FA, that they played the remainder of the contest in a seemingly helpless stupor.

The Pioneer Artillerymen unleashed a first inning aerial barrage, the likes of which have been unequal thus far in the post tourney. In addition to Roland Marsh's grand-slam home run, the Pioneers picked up nine more runs, and before the Medics came to bat for the first time, they trailed 13-0.

The MAH players managed to finagle one lone run in their half of the first inning, but they could do no better for the remainder of the game.

In the top of the second Artillery pitcher, Mike Benoit singled and John Reeves doubled him to third. Ron Tillery then doubled both men home and Ken Lee followed with a massive homer over the center field score board, giving the Pioneers a 17-1 lead.

With precipitation threatening to erase the Pioneers' efforts, team captain Benny Williams gave the order to "lighten up on the stick" in order to complete five innings of ball quickly.

The Pioneers followed the order — as did the Medics — and there was no further scoring, with the Pioneers winning by an impressive 17-1 margin.

34th Med, 7 C/83rd, 3

The 1/29th Artillerymen were fired up for the kill after their slaughter of the Medical Company of MAH, but the 34th medics were prepared to douse that fire.

197th places finishing touches on its rafts

By Bob Cowles

With the roar of a cannon and the flash from a flare, the "Great Chattahoochee Raft Race" will be under way Aug. 24.

Contestants are placing the finishing touches on their rafts, and the units of the 197th Inf Bde are no exception.

Members of Co C, 197th Spt Bn, are squeezing in every spare moment of the day completing the construction of their super raft.

"We had a basic idea of what type raft we wanted when we first started building," stated 2LT Billy D. Coleman, OIC of the construction. "As we built, people from the company would come by and make suggestions. We've used every suggestion we could to improve on the original idea."

It has not been decided yet if the 30 by 12 ft. raft is going to be entered in the "showboat" or "speed raft" category.

"We figure on having some 40 people on the raft during the race, continued LT Coleman. "Of course, we intend to test the raft prior to the race, so this number could fluctuate either way."

"The raft will be completely painted and will have the support battalion crest on it," added LT Coleman. "It will also have a rope railing around it both for looks and for safety. We haven't decided on what other decorations may be used."

"There will be ten rowing stations on the raft, five on each side," LT Coleman said. "We'll have enough people to keep someone fresh on the oars at all times."

"As far as a name for the raft, we haven't come up with one at this time," stated LT Coleman. "We may hold a company contest for naming it."

It may take a crane to lift the gigantic raft onto the flatbed truck needed to transport it to the river, which may cause a problem getting the raft into the water within the mandatory 15 minutes after registration. But the men of Co C have already found a solution to that problem.

"We plan to make the platform in sections," explained LT Coleman. "We'll have a large crew to carry the pontoon part to the water. Smaller groups will carry the platform sections and put them in place. If need be, we can nail the sections down as we float."

The primary workers on the raft, PFCs Danny L. Hunter, Fred L. Whitfield and Eugene L. Grate, have been working steadily for three days.

"I figure we can be completed in about three more days," commented PFC Hunter, "and that will include painting and all."

"We've had good cooperation from other companies," added PFC Grate. "The welder came from Co D and we are getting the life jackets from Co B."

"Most everyone in our company has contributed in some way," explained PFC Whitfield, "either with the actual work, helping to obtain the material, or making suggestions on improvements."

The company intends to keep the raft after the race for use as a recreational facility. "The men in the unit can use it for fishing, parties or whatever," explained LT Coleman.

HHC, 1st Bn, 58th Inf is decorating a rubber reconnaissance raft to enter in the "rubber raft" classification with one to four participants. They will have three men on the raft, leaving room for the necessary litter bag and beer.

"Everything is in our favor," commented SP4 Eugene W. Mathes of HHC. "The current will carry us easier and faster than the rafts made to float on pontoons."

The 179th Military Intelligence Detachment of the brigade is entering a raft in the "rubber raft" category, five or more participants. They will have 15 people on board during the race.

The race is due to begin at 12:15 p.m. with B Btry, 2nd Bn, 10th FA firing the starting gun along with Miss Georgia, Gail Nelson, who will fire a starting flare.

The starting point will be at the Columbus Boat Ramp behind the Columbus Iron Works on Bay Ave., and will conclude at the Bradley Landing on Ft. Benning.

Winners of each category and of the race will appear on a TV special Sept. 21 with Miss Georgia presenting the trophies.

Soldier holds black belt, instructs Tae Kwan Do

SP5 Lawrence Way, 608th Ordinance Co, from New Orleans, La., is a first degree black belt in the martial art of Tae Kwan Do.

Tae meaning kick, Kwan meaning punch, and Do meaning method, is the art which concentrates on the use of the feet and hands to deliver blows to key areas of vulnerability to the opponent. The head, abdomen, and groin are key areas of vulnerability.

It's a bird!!! He, his SPS Way doing what he does best — practicing the art of Tae-Kwan-Do with one of his students.

"The art engages in 75 percent use of the feet and 25 percent use of the hands. Tae Kwan Do requires a high degree of concentration, coordination, and a lot of physical flexibility", stated SP5 Way.

Way feels he has an excellent background in Tae Kwan Do. He received instruction from an 8th Dan Black Belt from the Kan Anyang Association School while stationed in Korea, and formal instruction while in Vietnam. Combining his instruction with three hours of strenuous practice each day, he feels the time he has spent has been worthwhile.

He is now instructing four classes a week in his spare time to members of the 508th and personnel from other units on post.

One of his students, PFC Holloway, commented, "He is definitely one of the best I have seen and he knows what he is doing."

SP5 Way concluded, "I have a rigid training program for my students and I work out three hours every evening myself. I am looking forward to organizing a class on post real soon."

Pioneers seek 2nd victory in race

"For any other military unit to enter against us in the Chattahoochee raft race will be a pure waste of time," says CPT Max Carter of Hq and Spt Co, 1st Bn, 29th Inf (Pioneers), TSB.

Carter pioneered a 10-man raft from Hq & Spt Co to victory in last year's annual raft race, finishing first in their division and third overall in the race.

"With a year's experience behind us," Carter stated, "I don't see how we can lose. And this year I'm anticipating a first place overall finish, in addition to winning our division."

Other Pioneer units don't share CPT Carter's confidence concerning the annual race, and each of the five Pioneer entries will be attempting to prove him wrong and dethrone the champion Hq team.

The third annual Chattahoochee raft race, sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, consists of a grueling 12-mile course down the turbulent Chattahoochee River.

The race will officially begin at 12:15 on Aug. 24 with the firing of a flare by Miss Georgia, Gail Nelson, and will conclude at Bradley Landing, Ft. Benning.

Winners will be on a television special Sept. 21, where Miss Georgia will present them with trophies.

Bassham and US marksmanship team dominate 'Military Olympics' in France

Led by gold medal winning CPT Lanny R. Bassham, Ft. Worth TX, and the US Army Marksmanship Unit, a strong US Team of Military marksmen dominated the Conseil Internationale du Sports Militaire (CISM) at Fountainbleau, France and repeated its triumph of the past six years over the world's best Army teams.

US shooters won three of the four individual gold medals awarded in the annual masters event, commonly called the "Military Olympics" and half of the team gold awards. Four silver team awards were also picked up.

In the overall point total among the combined shooting events for the 23 nations participating, the US gained first place and retained the coveted CISM trophy with a 102 point margin over the second place nation, Finland. Switzerland was third in the highly contested matches which included two events each in military rifle and pistol competition.

Bassham, firing a new CISM record score of 578 in the 300 meter rifle of a possible 600 and 273 of 300 in the Rapid Fire Military Rifle contest, claimed both gold medals for the US while companion marksman MAJ John Foster, Columbus, GA, gained runner up positions for the silver medals in both events.

In team action, the four-man squad of Bassham, Foster, Goldsby and MAJ Lones W. Wigger, Jr., from Carter, MT, won gold medals in each rifle event, bringing to a total of ten gold medals for their victory haul.

Perennial CISM handgun champion, SFC Bonnie Harmon of the US Army Marksmanship Unit, posted a near record 590 in the Center Fire Pistol match to pick up the gold award for the US. The four man team of Harmon, SSG John Kailer and US Air Force Tech Sergeants Hubert Legg and Bobby Tiner won the silver in the event.

The 1974 CISM matches hosted by France revealed one of the best representations of nations of the world military teams who vied for top honors in the annual event. Of the 23 nations participating, most of the teams were from Central Europe while Brazil was the only South American nation and Thailand and South Vietnam were the lone Asian entries. Romania was the special guest and observer of the CISM events for the first time.

The CISM trophy, a pair of priceless 16th century sterling silver dueling pistols, originally presented to the world's military champion marksmanship team by King Paul of Greece, has been a permanent possession of the United States since 1968.

News Media Day slated for Aug. 28

A special "News Media Day" at Ft. Benning on August 28 will give area newspaper, radio and television representatives a first-hand look at today's volunteer Army.

"News Media Day" is being held at all active Army installations in the continental United States at the request of Secretary of the Army Howard H. (Bo) Callaway.

In announcing the upcoming event, Callaway noted that the Army completed its first year as a volunteer force on July 1. This, he said, "was a magnificent achievement and one that all members of the Army can be proud of."

However, Callaway pointed out, numerical goals alone do not tell the full story of the volunteer Army's success. "There are many other exciting aspects of today's Army that are not revealed in statistics: the high state of our combat readiness, the quality and meaningfulness of our training, the enthusiasm of the young men and women who fill the Army's ranks, the educational opportunities that we have opened up for those men and women — these are things that cannot be fully understood by adding up the numbers and reading the reports; they have to be observed first-hand."

As a result, Callaway added, "I have asked that each active Army installation in the United States issue special invitations to the news media to visit with them on Aug. 28. All appropriate activities of these installations will be open for the newsmen to observe as they see fit."

"We have an exciting and important story to tell to the American people," he added.

Newsmen visiting Ft. Benning on Aug. 28 will be officially welcomed by Major General Thomas M. Tarpley, post commander. At a 9:30 a.m. breakfast coffee in Infantry Hall, MG Tarpley will discuss Ft. Benning activities.

Also during the day, newsmen will tour facilities to see for themselves the many educational and technological advances that have been made in better training the soldier for the role he has in the volunteer Army.

At the same time, all appropriate facilities and units at Ft. Benning will be open to the visiting newsmen, who will be invited to talk freely with the troops involved, and to view their day-to-day activities.

Sept. 21 is AUSA picnic

By BOB BECHDOLT

The annual Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA), picnic has been scheduled for Victory Lodge at Ft. Benning on September 21.

The picnic will get under way at 1 p.m. with a full afternoon of activities planned to please the old and young alike — through 6 p.m.

Some of the events already lined up for the youngsters are pony rides; rides aboard the CVS Hustler, a small military vehicle that resembles a dune buggy; the Gama Goat, a newly developed vehicle designed for patrols through rugged terrain; and a Ft. Benning Fire Department fire engine.

Demonstrations will include the Rangers in Action, skydiving, and dog shows by the Military Dog Detachment.

Providing festive music for the occasion will be Ft. Benning's own 283rd Army Band and Chorus.

What's on the "chow line" menu? According to SGM Charles L. McCray, military coordinator for the event, the food will be varied enough to suit everyone's taste — barbecued chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs, potato salad, club salad and cole slaw, washed down by a soft drink or cold beer.

"To top all of this off," added CSM Theron Gergen, last year's coordinator, "we will have three whole pigs barbecued on a spit."

Plenty of food and rides for the kids will vie with many other attractions in gaining attention of picnic-goers this year. A number of exhibits will include armored vehicles, weapons, communications, medical, Rangers, parachutist gear and display by The Infantry School Television Division.

And there will be carnival "midway" attractions such as a BB gun shooting gallery, balloon board, horseshoe pitch, balls in the can, and a coin toss.

"Last year our picnic drew approximately 1,800 persons, and with the many added 'extras' planned for Sept. 21, we expect this year's event to be the best ever," said Brown Nicholson, AUSA Picnic Chairman.

Tickets for the picnic — $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children, food and drinks included — will go on sale early in September, with sales locations to be announced later.

VA helps blind vets

Science may never be able to restore sight for some 650 Vietnam veterans, but the promise of easier reading and mobility looks brighter as the result of a number of aids being developed through Veterans Administration research.

In addition to a recently patented device which "reads" ordinary print and pronounces the letters audibly, VA is funding further development on many other aids including a lighter weight laser cane that will warn a blind user of objects in his path. Also being refined is an ultra-sonic eyeglass project that could enable the blind to perceive objects in much the same way that sonar permits ships and submarines to detect under-sea objects.

Even more important, according to Russell C. Williams, VA's Chief of Blind Rehabilitation, is training for the blind person and his family in the techniques and attitudes for coping with blindness.

Williams, a combat injured veteran of World War II, has extended this training beyond VA hospitals with the help of the Blinded Veterans Association. BVA and VA are cooperating in a field service program that supplements the work of 72 VA Visual Impairment Services teams through the country. Through these programs, contact is made with hometown veterans organizations.

82nd Airborne Div platoon visits Benning

Training, absorbing and executing... Those three words explain in a nutshell what it takes to keep a modern, combat-ready Army on its toes. A crack anti-tank platoon of the 82nd Airborne Div was at Ft. Benning to learn, examine and absorb the latest techniques in battling armor this month.

Under the direction of the Weapons Dept of the Infantry School, the unit was here for two purposes. "They're going to see what we have to offer them, and we're going to check them out to see what improvements they can help us make in our program," said LTC James Stone, Director of the Anti-armor and Mine Committee.

The platoon arrived at Ft. Benning via a heavy drop on Fryar Field. The words "heavy drop" mean exactly what they say. Then came with six TOW weapons and little motorized transports called MULES to move them.

From the moment they hit the drop zone, the 28 men of the platoon were kept busy. Anti-mine techniques, helicopter insertions and Airborne drops and operations were all part of the schedule.

Some of their most critical work was done at Molnar range with the TOW. At distances of 500 to 1,000 meters, they practiced sighting the weapon on a small moving target at varying speeds. 1Lt William Leszczynski, platoon leader, said about the practice, "If they can sight the weapon on that tiny target at this distance, they can hit a tank at any distance."

Almost as important as firing the weapon is tracking the target, and the platoon got plenty of practice at that. At North Ruth Range, the field tracking exercise was performed with the M70 training set and flares. Tanks and armored personnel carriers were tracked at distances from 800 to 2,700 meters. At night the practice was continued using flares to illuminate the range. The platoon also practiced landing in helicopters, setting up the TOW and engaging targets. Classes were conducted in the Dragon Anti-armor weapon and tank identification.

The practice all came down to performance when the platoon fired their annual qualification rounds from the TOW. Each gunner fired one actual TOW missile. With that, their work at Ft. Benning was completed and it was just a matter of getting packed up and ready to ship home. SP4 Hal Gladson said before the training "I knew some of what we were shown before we got here, but there were some things we saw that I never even thought about. It was great."

A 36-hole, two-man low ball Labor Day Golf Tournament will be held at the Sand Hill Golf Course, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

The tournament, open to all active duty, retired military personnel and their dependents 14 years of age and older, will be governed by the US Golf Federation rules and regulations.

Participating individuals will select their own partners, and at the completion of the first 18 holes of play each team will be divided into flights, according to their team scores.

The number of flights will be determined by the number of tournament entries. When the scores are tied in determining each flight, all ties will be placed in the same flight.

The championship and flight winners will be determined based on low medal score for the entire 36 holes of play. In the event of inclement weather, the number of holes may be reduced by the tournament director.

Tee-off time for the 36-hole tournament will begin at 7:30 a.m. each day of the tournament. All players not present at the time of tee-off will forfeit their rights to participate in the tournament. Awards will go to the two-man team winning the championship, and a special merchandise award will be presented to the individual who shoots closest to the pin on hole number two during the first 18 holes, and hole number four the last 18 holes of the tournament.

For additional information concerning the Labor Day tournament contact the Sand Hill Golf Pro Shop, Recreational Services Division at 544-4131.

Team fixes small arms for 197th

The small arms maintenance team of Co D, 197th Spt Bn, provides the 197th Inf Bde with the critical service of inspecting and repairing all of the STRAF unit's small arms.

"The small arms team performs field maintenance on all of the brigade's small arms," explained CW2 John C. Idell, shop officer of the armament section. "This includes everything from M-16s and .45 cal. pistols to 106mm recoilless rifles and 4.2 inch mortars."

The team consists of four men trained as small arms repairmen. They use a large mobile van equipped with all essential tools and parts to complete their mission.

"They do about 90 per cent of their work on site, from the van," CW2 Idell added. "It is their expertise that keeps all of the small arms in this brigade in top condition."

SP4 Johnny Bowman is the soldier in charge of the team. "I really like working with small arms," Bowman stated. "We get to travel around the brigade to different units, inspecting and repairing small arms. Thanks to our platoon sergeant, SFC Maurice King, we are really able to function as a team."

The other three soldiers on the small arms team are PFC Michael Silverwood, PVT William Ulmer and PVT John Anderson.

Anderson enlisted for his present job as well as the 197th Inf Bde. "I worked with guns as a hobby before coming into the Army," Anderson explained. "When I decided to enlist I asked the recruiter if I could enlist for a job working with small arms. I'm glad I did because now I'm interested in my job."

43rd begins renovation project

Soldiers of Co B, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engr Gp, began construction on five buildings in Harmony Church last month.

Currently working on the buildings are some eight electricians from Co B. Their job primarily consists of rewiring the whole building with heavy-duty circuit wire. Along with this task goes the job of installing light fixtures and wall outlets, and replacing the junction boxes.

The purpose of renovating these buildings is in case a reserve unit is suddenly activated.

"This will give the men a temporary place to sleep until they are assigned to the specific area to which they were activated," stated SP4 Robert Gentry.

The completion date, based on a six-hour workday, will be Sept. 18.

"I enjoy this type of work," admits PV2 Mark Dudley "because I'm finally beginning to work in my MOS, which is something I haven't done since my AIT."

Soldier of the Quarter

Brown 'missed greens and boots'

SP4 Joseph M. Brown, parts clerk for Co D, 43rd Engr Bn (Const), has been selected Outstanding Soldier of the Quarter for the 36th Engr Gp (CBT). SP4 Brown first entered the Army in 1963 after graduating from Cumberland High School in Nashville, TN.

After serving a tour in Vietnam with the 1st Cavalry Division in 1966, SP4 Brown left the Army

Pioneers win mess award

Co C (Airborne-Ranger), 1/29th Inf, has been awarded the TSB Best Mess Award for July. Pioneer dining facilities have won the prestigious award for six of the last seven months.

Dining facility manager SFC Joseph Methvin said "Our facility has only been open since May, and this is the second time we have been inspected for the award."

The Ranger facility lost out to another 1/29th mess hall in their initial inspection, but defeated that same facility for the July award.

"I really think we were better organized this time," Methvin said. "We had a better idea of what they were looking for."

Co C will be inspected later this month for competition in the post level Best Mess Award. The facilities are inspected on food preparation, sanitation and administration.

but re-entered in 1973, because he "missed Army greens and shiny boots." After another Basic Training he was assigned to the 43rd.

Kids in Cordova will have modern park

Members of 1st Plt, Co C, 43rd Engr Bn, are in the process of completing an ultra-modern recreational park for the city of Cordova, AL.

The project, which was initiated by the Cordova City Council, Parks and Recreational Department, requested the manpower of the 36th Engr Gp, and as a result the 43rd, being a construction battalion, was given the honor of undergoing the difficult task of moving massive quantities of earth and combating the forces of mother nature.

The facilities to be constructed include two baseball fields, two dugouts, three tennis courts and one multipurpose court. The platoon will also construct a concession stand, containing two baths, two showers and two dressing rooms.

While undergoing the construction of the park, the 43rd Engrs had an opportunity to demonstrate their expertise in the skills of operating scrapers, steelwheel rollers, bucket loaders and bull dozers in the earthmoving phase of the project.

SGT Sibley commented during the sweltering 90 degree heat, "We are getting good cooperation from the people of the community, they feed us three times a day, provide us with rooms while we're here and the training and experience we are getting is what we need to function as a proficient unit."

"The park will provide the city with recreational facilities which may be used during the day and night hours."

Casey Pate, the Director of Parks and Recreation, summed up the project by saying, "This is the best thing that has happened to our city in a long time. We really needed this park for our youth. I am truthfully saying that without the help from the guys of the 43rd we couldn't have done it, and if we can ever be of service to them, our doors are open."

Kendall enlisted to go to college

PFC Bruce R. Kendall, a light weapons infantryman of Co B, 3rd Bn, 7th Inf (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf Bde, was named the Brigade Soldier of the Month for August.

Kendall, who enlisted for the 197th Inf. Bde under a combat arms enlistment bonus contract, completed Advanced Individual Training in his present unit in February 1974. The 22-year-old soldier completed Basic Combat Training at Ft. Knox, KY.

"I plan to finish school while I'm in the Army and then apply for OCS," Kendall explained. He was attending Gordon Military College in Barnesville, GA before enlisting and is one year short of a degree.

"In fact," Kendall added, "one of the reasons I enlisted for the 197th Inf Bde was so I could go to Columbus College."

Kendall is from Bunnell, FL, where his mother now lives. He resides on Ft. Benning with his wife Elaine.

"I like my job, the 197th and Ft. Benning," Kendall concluded. "I'm really happy that I enlisted for here."

"When you're doing something of value you value yourself more."

That's the way SP4-Dominic Rocco feels about his job as an Air Defense Acquisition Radar Maintenance Instructor.

"When I first came in the Army, I didn't know the first thing about electronics. But I had forty solid hours of the basics before I even started the course, so now I feel right at home with an oscilloscope and a maze of wires."

"In the lab it's my job to show students, right on the equipment, the things they've been studying in a theoretical way in the classroom. And sometimes I get the feeling, by the questions they ask, that it's not just the equipment they're testing."

"Eventually I might try setting up my own repair business. But for right now, I like the challenge of teaching. And that's why I'm staying in."

Today's Army gets better every time a good man reenlists.

Will cadets return to USMA this fall?

Among the 203 college students who attended the opening ROTC class this summer are 30 men who now have an important decision to make — "whether or not to become cows."

The men are United States Military Academy cadets who have completed their "yearling" (sophomore) year and must decide whether to continue their education at West Point. Until a cadet enters his junior (or cow) year, he is not service obligated. However, once he begins his junior year, he incurs a military obligation to complete his education at the Point (two more years) and serve five years on active duty following graduation.

According to MAJ Emmette Y. Burton III, one of the evaluators who is normally assigned as a tactical officer at West Point, "The Ranger program is one of the most popular choices offered to cadets during their second summer as part of their adventure training. Therefore, competition is always very keen and there are always many more applications than allocations."

Nine cadets are selected for Ranger training from each of the four cadet regiments based on leadership, conduct, physical education, military science and academic standing.

Since the Academy began sending cadets to Ranger training in 1971, those cadets who have completed the Ranger course and have received the coveted Ranger tab have invariably returned to continue their studies at the Point, and MAJ Burton said he expects to see all the cadets who recently completed training back in class this fall, proudly wearing their Ranger tabs.

Why drown?

You've made it almost all the way through summer and here you are alive and well and looking forward to the long Labor Day weekend.

If you are like most Americans you have had your share of water sports this summer. Have you stopped for a moment to ask yourself why you have been able to enjoy water sports and remain alive while others failed. Was it just plain luck or do you attribute your success to something other than luck?

In our opinion, you owe your success to your own good sense and judgment rather than luck. Your good sense has more than likely been influenced by your exposure to the water safety part of the Army Safety Program. To keep up your good record and to help insure you make it through the last long summer weekend, we emphasize the following simple but very important points:

- a. Swim only in authorized and guarded areas.
- b. Do not exceed your capabilities.
- c. Always use the "buddy" system.
- d. Never dive into strange waters.
3. If boating, wear a personal flotation device even if you are a strong swimmer.
- f. When water skiing, wear a ski belt and insist on two persons in the boat. One will drive while the other watches the skier.
- g. Know and use the ski signals.

Please, enjoy yourself over the Labor Day weekend. But enjoy yourself safely. It is not one bit less fun and certainly worth sparing yourself a lot of agony.

"Remember to buckle up," states 197th Inf Bde poster girl, Linda McClenny. "Drive safely over the Labor Day weekend." (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Play safely over the long weekend

Most people want to keep on living, and most people enjoy a good time. Coming up soon will be the three day Labor Day Holiday. Millions of Americans will be joining the already crowded highways. Most Americans will, through careful driving, good luck or other reasons, survive the trip and arrive back home, safe and sound.

Unfortunately, hundreds will die in highway accidents. Now all of us are prone to think that while accidents can and do happen, they won't happen to us. It's the other guy who will get it, not me. The National Safety Council has predicted there will be at least 500 "other guys" who will be killed this Labor Day weekend. The odds are pretty good that you won't be one of them.

You believe in insurance don't you? Well why not pick up some extra insurance to increase the odds in your favor. Here are some insurance bonus points:

1. Stay near home. It's probably as much fun, is certainly cheaper, a lot more restful, and without question is much safer than "foolin'" around in your car.

2. If you must drive — observe the following:

a. Plan your trip in advance to include a safety check of your vehicle, a detailed route map, frequent rest stops and daylight driving only.

b. Always be alert for the actions of the other guy. In other words drive defensively. Don't get boxed in a tight situation with no maneuver room for an escape route. Let the other fools follow too close, pass when they shouldn't, and exceed safe speeds. You may get there a little later, but you'll get there.

c. If weather, road or traffic conditions change, change your plan accordingly. Always plan on the safe side. Remember, tomorrow is another day. There will be a lot more tomorrows. You insure that you'll be here to enjoy them.

Labor Day tips

Labor Day — the last big holiday of the summer season — is right around the corner. Unfortunately, it may be the last holiday for many people.

The National Safety Council predicts that between 450 and 550 persons will lose their lives on the highways over Labor Day 1974, and that the disabling injury total will be between 18,000 and 20,000 persons. This last long weekend traditionally contributes a large share of the drowning toll, too.

The Safety Council also reports that during the height of the gasoline shortage, and the advent of the 55 mph speed limit, traffic deaths were off about 25 percent as compared with the previous year. However, with more gasoline available, that favorable ratio is giving way. Statistics show that in March of this year, the ratio was 24 per cent and by June it had dropped to 02 per cent.

The bright spot in this whole picture is that the 1974 fatality prediction is the Council's lowest in 11 years. If all of us follow the basic safety rules of the road and use common sense when participating in water sports, the fatality figure will fall short of the council's prediction.

Let's put Labor Day 1974 on the record books as the holiday with the lowest number of fatalities and disabling injuries.

Seven miles an hour doesn't sound very fast, but it sure seems quick to SFC Charles G. Rittenhouse, NCOIC of the S-1, 1st Stu. Bn., The School Brigade, as he comes to a screeching halt during a ride on the seatbelt simulator. (Photo by George Karda)

VGLI covers Viet vets

Some 2.7 million Vietnam-era veterans are eligible for a new low-cost Veterans Group Life Insurance program which offers as much as $20,000 coverage for $3.40 per month to young veterans, but they must apply before Aug. 1, 1975, the Veterans Administration pointed out today.

The nonrenewable, five-year term insurance is available for veterans discharged from military service since April 2, 1974.

The new Veterans Administration-supervised program, authorized May 24 under the Veterans Insurance Act, also offers coverage in amounts of $5,000, $10,000 and $15,000. Rates for the maximum $20,000 coverage are $3.40 per month for veterans aged 34 and under and $6.80 for those 35 and over.

Application forms for veterans discharged prior to Aug. 1, 1974, are available from VA offices or from the Office of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, 212 Washington St., Newark, N. J. 07102. Applicants must furnish evidence of good health. However, VA-rated service-connected disabilities will be waived.

'WATCHING BUZZARDS ISN'T JUST A LOT OF HOT AIR,' BENNING SOLDIER SAYS

THEY SEARCH FOR 'LIFTS' AND SO DOES CPT NOLDE

By C. B. Hoover

Some soldiers play golf, some tennis, but few take up the sport of soaring. CPT Norman L. Nolde of Co A (Admin) 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde, is one of the few who spends his weekends at Woodard Field near Williams, Ga. flying a plane that has no motor.

Soaring is the art of gliding a sailplane along unstable air masses in the sky.

Watching his son-in-law roam the sky's of Georgia in search of more "lift," Mr. Wyndal Carter explained how a sailplane works, "For some people to look up and see a buzzard flap its wings and start to glide in tight circles means very little. But, to the person who soars it means a lot.

The buzzard is searching for lift — the phenomenon that occurs when the earth absorbs heat and creates a furnace effect, sending columns of air rising thousands of feet. By entering these columns of rising air, or thermals, the sailplane is carried up, like a bird. Should the thermal dissipate or the pilot lose its center, he must then search for another thermal, and another free ride.

"Watching buzzards for thermals is not just a lot of hot air," said CPT Nolde. "One time I was at 600 feet and searching for some lift when I saw a bird floating off to my right. I joined him and the next thing I knew we were up to 3,000 feet and off on another free ride."

A dream come true could be the story behind CAPT Nolde's start in soaring.

"As a young boy I became interested in flying," CPT Nolde said. "After entering the Army I attended the Army aviation courses at Ft. Stewart, Ga. and Ft. Rucker, Ala. I actually started flying in 1966. The transition to sailplanes came in 1969. It required some 15 flights before I was certified."

"My father-in-law really started soaring first," added CPT Nolde. "He received his rating in 1967, after he became a grandfather. Then in 1968 he took up soaring and became qualified."

Soaring is not all that difficult; you can be as young as fourteen and solo. Beginners with no flight experience can make their first solo after seven to nine hours of dual instruction.

Getting a sail plane off the ground and into the air at Woodard Field is unique. A powered aircraft tows the sailplane until both are airborne. Once they are airborne the two climb to an altitude of 2,000 to 3,000 feet. There the sailplane pilot releases from the tow plane and starts searching for a thermal.

"When searching for a thermal you usually are traveling between 70 and 90 miles per hour. After finding one you soar at approximately 42 mph. When making an approach to the field you are traveling between 58 and 60 mph. Touch down speed is about 40 mph," said CPT Nolde.

It may seem a little dangerous flying around the sky in a plane with no engine, but according to the Federal Aviation Agency the risk involved is the same as flying commercial.

Woodard Field and the Atlanta Sailplanes Inc. is the only locaton for soaring in Georgia. Should someone want to go elsewhere they would have to go north to South Carolina, south to Florida or west to Texas.

Last ROTC cadets graduate today

The ROTC cadets of class 11-74, who successfully completed the Ranger course, will graduate at 11 a.m. at Todd Field. The ceremonies will mark the end of the fourth consecutive summer of Ranger training.

COL James M. Bowers, director of the Ranger Department, will introduce the guest speaker — LTG Orwin C. Talbott, deputy commander of the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). General Talbott was the commander of Ft. Benning at the time the Ranger course was first offered to ROTC cadets, and was instrumental in setting up the ROTC Ranger program.

The graduation will begin with the presentation of awards to the outstanding members of the class. The Distinguished Honor Graduate is Cadet Carl A. Cockrum of Gonzaga University.

Honor Graduates are — David I. Dawley, University of Connecticut; Gary G. Dacey, University of Pittsburgh; Willie C. Garrison; Cameron College; Charles F. Reed, University of Texas; and David R. Townsend, Texas A & M.

The Merrill's Marauders' Award, a Silva Compass, is presented to the Ranger student receiving the highest marks in Land Navigation and peer ratings, and will be awarded to David A. Jordan, of North Georgia College.

The ROTC Company Leadership award will be presented to Cadet Carl A. Cockrum and Platoon Leadership Awards will be presented to Cadets Gary G. Dacey; Jackie B. Yeager, Handerson State College; David I. Dawley; David R. Townsend; William F. Brown, University of Tennessee; and Kevin J. Kehoe, Syracuse University.

The Military Proficiency award will be presented to Cadet Gary G. Dacey.

Cadet Vaughn L. Tate, Arkansas State University, will be presented the Physical Fitness Award.

His perfect (80 out of 80) rifle score won the Marksmanship award for Cadet Larry M. Banks of Southern State College.

After the presentation of the awards the students will receive the Ranger tabs that they have labored for nine weeks at Ft. Benning, in the rugged mountains of Northern Georgia and in the swamps of Florida to earn, and that they will proudly wear throughout their military careers.

But the cadets will take home more than a Ranger tab. They will also, in the words of MAJ James T. Price, the administrative officer of the ROTC Evaluation Committee, "take home a keen sense of accomplishment and pride. They will also make a tremendous contribution to the ROTC program when they return to their colleges and universities."

LTC Byron F. Frahm, the deputy director of the Ranger Department, remarked on the significance of the occasion and on the performance of the ROTC cadets: "The graduation of class 11-74 marks the completion of another successful ROTC Ranger Summer Camp. The cadets depart here having proved to us and, more importantly, to themselves that they are capable of leading men under the most adverse conditions. They will return to the campus this fall and show, by example, why RANGERS, LEAD THE WAY."

The Distinguished Honor Graduate of Class 11-74, ROTC VCadet Carl Cockrum, Gonzaga College.

COL Preston retires with honors

COL May R. Preston, Army Medical Specialist Corps, received the first oak leaf cluster to the Legion of Merit and The Surgeon General Medallion at a retirement ceremony held on York Field yesterday.

COL Preston, whose last assignment was Chief, Army Medical Specialist Corps Dietetics Health Services Command, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, will reside at 3727 Britt David Road, Columbus, Georgia.

A graduate of Georgia State College for Women, she took her dietetics internship at University Hospitals of Cleveland. COL Preston also holds an M.S. degree from Michigan State University in Institution Administration.

In 1972, COL Preston was honored as the recipient of the Michigan State University College of Human Ecology Alumni Citation, which is the highest honor given alumni for outstanding contributions to profession, community and society.

COL Preston was instrumental in completing new formats for the technical manuals on hospital diets used throughout the Army, and assisted in the preparation of other technical manuals dealing with diet therapy management, food service administration, food production and subsistence management. She also participated in research which lead to the development of food transportation equipment for cold climates. COL Preston also helped develop a Hospital B ration which could be used where field ration A was unavailable. She has been active in local, state and national activities of the American Dietetic Association.

'ALL THINGS MUST END'

"All things must end," Ranger class 11-74, the second and last ROTC Ranger class for this year, graduates today. And thus, it is time for our Public Information team of Army Reservists, who have brought you the ROTC Ranger centerfolds this summer, to say "Good-bye."

We leave with regret, and in leaving would like to thank those who made our "Ranger" summer so rewarding — to the staff of the Bayonet who have waited so patiently for material, to the post photo-lab who often worked overtime so we could have our pictures on time, and to Post Transportation who will have to retrain the pick-up truck (now tactical) that they loaded us.

A special thanks to all the officers, NCOs and other personnel of the Ranger Department here at Ft. Benning, at Camp Merrill and at Camp Rudder, to the ROTC evaluation committee and especially to the ROTC cadets of classes 10- and 11-74.

Thank you — one and all.

EXPECTANT PARENTS COURSE

An Expectant Parents Course will begin Tuesday, Sept. 3, 7 p.m. in the Second Floor Conference Room at Martin Army Hospital. There are four classes in the course, two hours each.

Interested prospective parents may register by calling the Army Health Nursing Service at 545-5431 or 545-4041.

DOG SHOW

Youth Activities will sponsor its Second Annual Dog Show at the Youth Center Sept. 7 at 10 a.m. All Active and Retired Military Dependents, ages 8-12, are eligible to enter their dogs.

Registrations can be made by calling the Youth Activities Office, 545-1902 and 545-7765.

PETS

Individuals who must move but cannot take their pets should advertise to find a new home for them. However, it is possible to travel anywhere with most animals. If it is not possible to place pets in other homes, they should be brought to the Veterinary Small Animal Clinic, Bldg 265, where additional efforts will be made to place them. If these attempts fail, the animals can be disposed of quickly and painlessly. Pets should not be abandoned under any circumstances. For more information call Veterinary Activities at 545-4444.

ADMISSION PRICE RAISE

As you've probably noticed, theater admission prices, like inflation, has gone up. Basic admission prices are sixty cents for adults and thirty cents for children from twenty-five cents for children. Prices of seventy-five cents and one dollar remain unchanged.

SAND HILL LIBRARY

Take advantage of the reopening of the Sand Hill Library. Read for business or pleasure! The library services were available for all interested patrons starting Aug. 24 & 25. The new hours of operation are 1-6 p.m., Saturday and Sunday only.

FACILITIES FOR VACATIONERS

Over five-hundred military installations around the world have lodging facilities for vacationers. For a nominal fee service men and women can get a temporary place to stay at either a lodge or guest house. For more information contact your Community Services Office and ask to see a copy of "Temporary Military Lodging Around the World."

ARMED FORCES VOTERS DAY

Sept. 24 has been designated Armed Forces Voters' Day. The purpose of this day is to remind military men and women, as well as their families, of the general election on Nov. 5.

Military Voting Officers and Counselors are prepared to assist eligible voters any time of the year. So you don't have to wait until Armed Forces Voters' Day to start preparing to cast your ballot.

What happened, Max?

It was third place for Pioneer raft racers

By Rick Wasser

The rubber raft crew from Hq & Spt Co, 1/29th Inf, TBS paddled and stroked to a third place finish in the annual Great Chattahoochee Raft Race.

But Max missed the boat!

Maxwell Carter was coxswain of the Pioneer raft that took first place in the 5-man and over division in last year's race.

It was Carter who organized this year's team, practicing for weeks before the race to have another winning crew.

And it was Carter who predicted another victory for the Hq & Spt Co crew based on "a year's experience at the helm."

Carter arranged to meet the rest of the Pioneer crew at the Columbus boat dock at 11 a.m. Saturday. He arrived a few minutes before 11, but the rest of the Hq & Spt Co. crew was just leaving the

Many will suffer with sunburn, sore muscles

By Bob Cowles

By 11:30 a.m., Aug. 24, only small puddles of the murky Chattahoochee River were visible through the mass of bobbing rafts.

Men and women squeezed and forced their rafts to the front positions at the starting line, pressing dangerously against the rope stretched across the river.

Hundreds upon hundreds of fans lined the water's edge, already hollering and rooting for their favorites as all waited with great expectations for the Third Annual Great Chattahoochee Raft Race, sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, to begin.

About ten minutes before the start of the race the rope starting line suddenly snapped and the race was prematurely underway. Rafts were already heading downstream as the roar of the starting cannon, furnished by the 2nd Bn, 10th FA, 197th Inf dock.

The Pioneer crew tried desperately to get back to the dock and pick up Carter, but the turbulent Chattahoochee and the scores of people present made it impossible to return. So Max had missed the boat.

Carter shouted encouragement to the crew he had so dutifully organized, giving them last minute pointers as they drifted further and further away from the dock.

The Hq & Spt CO RAFT didn't fare as well as last year, but they did nab a third place finish in their division, and a beautiful trophy.

Hq Co Commander CPT John Patterson assumed the duties of coxswain in the absence of Carter. "It's really strange," Patterson said, "we beat last year's time by twenty minutes, yet we only finished third."

Bde, sounded behind them.

Cheers and sighs momentarily erupted from the crowds ashore as they watched their hopefuls lurch forward or bog down.

It was then a mad scramble of fans racing for their cars, trucks, motorcycles or what-have-you, heading for the first checkpoint down river to see how the rafts were moving.

About midway down the 1 1/2 mile course some participants were still paddling, some were already sitting back, sunning and refreshing themselves, while others were being towed to the finish line.

Although the 72nd Eng Co took 1st in the rubber raft, 5-man or more category, the "super raft" from Co C, 197th Spt Bn., set a precedent by showing how

"I think the competition was much stiffer this year," said Bob Martin, one of the crew members. "But at least we beat the ladies," he added, "and not all of the companies can say that."

Martin was referring to the all-lady raft entered by the wives and girlfriends of the 29th Inf. That raft finished 35th over-all in the race.

Martin's wife Edith skippered the all-gal raft, which finished ahead of two other Pioneer companies, C Ranger and Co B.

"The ladies put on the best showing of all," Martin said. "A lot of people didn't even think they would finish the race, but to finish 35th in a field of more than 200 is really phenomenal."

Max Carter doesn't know if he will be here for next year's race, but he is already working on his victory strategy just in case. But aside from his strategy to win, his main concern will probably be making sure that he doesn't miss the boat!

"super-slow" it moved — crossing the finish line last, some six hours after the race began.

Rednecks and redlegs, not referring to Mississippians or artillerymen — but sunburns — were treated gently, as sailors from all walks of life crawled off their rafts and readapted their "sea legs" to land again.

Comments such as "it was fun, but I'm glad it's over" and "wait til next year" were heard from every direction at the finishing point.

Fun and good times were had by all, whether participant or observer, but one thing is for sure; many people suffered for several days with sore muscles and aching sunburns.

Avoid burial
ripoff

When discussing their eventual deaths, John Jones, a 20-year military veteran, and his wife agreed on burial in a veteran's cemetery. When he died, Mrs. Jones arranged for her husband's funeral to be held at the Stardust Memorial Cemetery.

Two weeks later, Mrs. Jones received a $1100 bill for burial expenses from the cemetery. She, along with many unsuspecting wives and parents, had been misled by the cemetery's claim of being a recognized National Cemetery. It wasn't, and the papers Mrs. Jones had signed resulted in a large financial loss she could not afford.

This story is true, but the names have been changed to protect the innocent; and, unfortunately, the guilty.

Not all cemeteries which bear the words "Veterans," "National" or "Memorial" are part of the newly reorganized National Cemetery System. Of the 103 cemeteries in the system, only 56 have grave sites still available. The open sites are located in 28 states and Puerto Rico.

If a cemetery is not included in the system, the Veterans Administration (VA) will pay only the regular plot and burial allowance of $400. If a veteran dies of service-connected causes and is buried in a private cemetery, the VA will pay up to $800 of burial expenses. If the veteran is buried in a recognized National Cemetery, VA will pay for everything except the cost of the casket.

Some cemeteries will offer their services by sending letters to veterans and/or their families. If the letter implies or states the cemetery is in the National Cemetery System, check it out with the Veterans Administration. The VA will verify the cemetery's standing and could save you money and grief.

the company's commander, stated, "Our biggest problem up here right now is the rain; as long as the rain continues we just simply cannot perform our mission. We originally lost three days of work because of the rain, but we have gradually caught up, thanks to the soldier's willingness to cooperate."

"These men enjoy being up here because they are being cross-trained to operate other equipment than they were trained to operate," said SFC Richard Bivens.

to pass the Hanger swim test with flying colors." Co C commander, CPT Robert Howard, is personally teaching the physical training portion of the Ranger preparatory course.

"The men received PT at least twice a day," said CPT Howard. "Before they are eligible to even get into Ranger School," he continued, "they will have to demonstrate outstanding physical prowess. And when they are finished with their training here at Co C, I am confident that everyone will pass the PT test."

supplies were gradually drifting down the hill and into a small stream. The stream, filled with medicine and syringes, flowed into a civilian community, giving the children in the neighborhood access to it.

Once the children were discovered with these improperly destroyed supplies, the plea suddenly reached FORSCOM, which immediately gave the honors to the 43rd Engr Bn (Const) CPT James Ball, the OIC of the project and also 43rd Engrs practice art of ecology in erosion control of former dump

"Power For Service" — It's not just a motto but a way of life for soldiers of the 4- Engr Bn (Const). This time their way of life took them to Ft. Gillem, below Atlanta, to practice the arts of ecology.

Their job primarily consists of erosion control of a former dump which was used by a medical unit for medical supplies consisting of rubber gloves and other rubber equipment, medicines, syringes and metal debris.

Since 1964 when the dump originated, all of the Pioneers plan for Ranger School

While Ranger School is generally accepted as one of the Army's more rugged courses, just preparing for the nine-week course has proven to be a challenge for men of Co C, 1/29th Inf, TSB.

Some thirty men assigned to the Pioneer Ranger Co are currently undergoing physical training and swimming tests which will prepare them for the rigorous Ranger course.

The soldiers — all volunteers — are recent arrivals to Co C and haven't yet received their Ranger tabs. Some of the men are from other companies within the Pioneer battalion, while others have volunteered for Co C from other units on post. What they all have in common is the burning desire to win the coveted Ranger tab.

SGT Burkhard Berger is in charge of teaching the men swimming and water-safety techniques in preparation for the Ranger swim test. "All of the trainees are doing great," Berger stated. "When we are finished with the swimming portion of their Ranger preparatory course, every man will be able

'Take it easy in school zones'

Howdy Bub. I seen Wilma Mae Shedlock down at the diner this mornin'. Y'know that Wilma Mae is the school crossin' marm for the elementary school, an' she does a right good job, too. Well anyway, she ast me to 'mind folks that school is in, an' the youngsters is out.

I 'member last year when Wilma Mae put that sign up in the school zone, asayin', "Dear Crossing." I thought it wuz kinda cute, even if it wern't an official sign, an' the mayor made her take it down. I hear tell that she's gone an' made up some more,

'bout, "give our kids a brake," an' sech like. So now, I done like she wanted, an' tole you to take it easy in them school zones.

For some reason, I can't help thinkin' 'bout Eleanor Flount, you might 'member that she wuz the school crossin' marm afore Wilma Mae. That Eleanor is some kin of woman, I'm here to tell you. One time this here tourist came aroarin through our town an' wuz headin' for the school crossin' 'thout slowin' down.

Eleanor seen him

acomin', an' got the younguns outta the street quick-like. Then she stood in the middle of the road, an' blew on her whistle 'til she 'most had the blind staggers, an' still that dang fool wouldn't slow down none. As he wuz whizzin' past Eleanor, she ups an' whams the side of that roadster with Tommy Martin's bat.

Well sir, that gets the tourist fella's attention, an' he starts to brake his car. He finally got it stopped 'bout half-way down the block.

As he steps outta his car onto the pavement, to look at his dented side panel, 'ole Eleanor wuz arunnin' down the street towards him wavin' Tommy's bat, an' yellin' she's gonna give his head a dent like his car 'lessen he learns to slow down when the signs tell him to.

That fella seen that Eleanor wuz in no mood to talk, an' hopped back into his flivver, an' headed outta town. Sheriff De Witt showed up 'bout that time an' pulled the speedin' car 'over afore he could make the city limits. When Judge Hayou heard the story, he sentenced that varmin to one year in jail, for endangerin' pedestrians, or ten days of workin' that school crossin' with Eleanor.

The man said to show him to the jail, cause he couldn't work with no crazy woman. The judge convinced him to work with Miss Eleanor on that crossin', but he wuz kinda wall-eyed an' screamed real easy for a few days, 'til he got usta her ways.

Good Health to you and yours.

I 'member that he took the bus when it wuz time

586th trains the 46th Engrs

The 586th Engr. Co. of the 36th Engr Gp, has started training soldiers of the 46th Engr Bn from Ft. Rucker, Ala. The training site is Engineer Landing, across from Lawson Army Airfield.

The training exercise includes several hours of classroom instruction, in addition to field construction of the bridge. 586th Engr. Co. provides on-the-job supervision and training support.

The 586th also provides administrative support for some 60 soldiers while the 46th Engrs train here.

Instruction is given in different subjects dealing in construction. Some of the subjects are taught during classroom periods and also during the actual construction of the bridge.

A safety briefing is given before the actual bridge construction begins. Construction training begins with the overhead cable, followed by the assembly of a single float, end section and then the normal two floats.

Construction and removal of different types of bridges, such as the M4T6 Bridge, Light Tactical Raft (LTR) footbridge, and expedient raft with foot-bridge are given in the last phase of instruction. After training in the construction and removal of the bridge, the instructors of the 586th will provide a critique or summary of the training unit's completed work.

During interviews with several of the soldiers, the men were showing enthusiasm, self-discipline and great pride in doing their work.

"I like working on the floatbridge," stated PFC Davidson. "It's a lot of hard work, but very good training. This is the first time I've ever experienced this type of training."

1/58th performs realistic squad ORTT

After crossing into no-mans-land, the squad leader and his ten highly qualified armed men encountered an enemy minefield. The squad leader reported the situation to higher headquarters, then quickly probed his way clear and proceeded toward his objective. Along the way the squad was confronted with an ambush, wounded prisoners, a chemical attack, a hostile air attack and a live fire assault on a lonely hill.

Upon successfully proving that they could defend the hill, the squad was ordered out again to cross a river. The squad leader sent out security and prepared a M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier to "swim". The men entered the water with no apprehensions because of the confidence they had that the 13 ton vehicle would float.

All this, plus a written exam afterward, is what the men of the 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf (Patriots), 197th Inf Bde went through last week during their Squad Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT), considered the "grass root" training of a combat unit.

"As a squad leader," commented SGT Oscar J. Lattimore, Co C, 1/58th, "I was placed in complete command of my men and was given a mission. The only part of the training that was mandatory was that the DePuy system had to be used."

"I feel that the squad leaders were very well organized and knew what they were doing," stated

SP4 Hayward Mackins of Co C.

The toughest part of the ORTT was the live fire objective," stated SGT Marlin G. Tollison, also of Co C. "It was the longest part of the training, was uphill, through swamps and it was deathly hot out that day."

"The training was as realistic as it could be without being the real thing," added SGT Lattimore. Once all the squad ORTTs are completed, the 1/58th will conduct platoon-size ORTTs. Company size ORTTs are then next on the schedule.

A battalion size ORTT will be conducted while the "Patriots" are at Ft. Stewart this fall. All this is in preparation for the upcoming brigade Field Training Exercise.

Engrs construct new firing positions

Fire Power!!!

Members of the vertical line platoon of C Co, 43rd Eng Bn, are currently constructing the latest thing going in offensive and defensive firing positions.

The new design employs a new low profile construction of the position. As a result, the position is non-detectable during day and night hours. Also, because of its design, the enemy cannot look directly into the front of the position. This allows the occupant an opportunity to observe his sector of fire with utmost scrutiny.

The most devastating factor of this range design is the cross sector fire pattern. A cross sector fire pattern employs an overlapping of fire of each adjacent position sector, creating an "X" pattern across the front of each position. This makes it extremely difficult to out-manuever.

The range will consist of 2 one-man positions, one machinegun position and 7 two-man positions. The Weapons Department will use the range for firing technical training

Cadets leave 43rd Engrs

Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Maine were just a few of the far away states represented by the ROTC cadets as they departed the 43rd Engr Bn (Const) last week.

Having elected to attend the Army Orientation Training (AOT) program for their summer training, all cadets were carefully assigned to sponsors in the 43rd Engr Bn (Const), 36th Engr Gp (Cbt).

The objective of the AOT program is to provide the cadets with realistic leadership experience and, at the same time, assign normal duties that would normally be given to newly assigned second lieutenants.

Not all of the cadets were assigned to line units for their two week AOT Programs. Some received staff assignments.

"A staff job is not as easy as it looks," Cadet Richard Nettleton, from the University of New Hampshire, stated. "We wanted to be where the action was. That's why we chose the AOT Program."

As Cadet Ross learned, "I thought it would require a lot of supervision to lead the men of B Co, 43rd Engrs, but I actually found out that they don't like someone looking over their shoulders every minute. They like their orders simple and straight to the point."

Cadets Ross and Nettleton will be graduating in the spring of 1975 along with the other cadets who attended the two week AOT program.

3/7th have a crying time

By C. B. Hoover

It was a tearful event for some soldiers of Co B, 3-7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, as the unit underwent Chemical, Biological and Radiological (CBR) Operations training recently.

"It required about two weeks of preparations to set up this training for the unit," stated CPT Edward DeVos, the company commander.

Six stations were set up for the soldiers to receive instructions on CBR operations, as explained by CPT DeVos, "The training is set up as a round-robin with the stations providing instruction in CBR operations. The subjects are first aid, decontamination, CBR instruments, CBR environment, M-17 protective mask drill and the maintenance of its component parts."

The alarm 'GAS' was given as tear-gas floated over the area where some of the soldiers were receiving instructions on the M-17 protective mask.

"I got a little touch of it, my eyes are still burning slightly. You can bet the next time I hear the word 'GAS' I'm going to have my mask on under the count of nine," stated PVT Foster L. Smith.

SP4 Albert O. Gosha commented, "That's a rough way to find out I wasn't putting on my mask properly. I can't seem to stop crying. This is one class I won't be forgetting for quite a while."

"It's the first time that I've seen what the M-13 decontamination kit contains. I never did know exactly how they were used until now. I've learned a lot here today. This type of training is good for everyone," concluded PVT Lester C. Lawrence.

BG Richardson goes to Canal Zone

BG William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant of The Infantry School at Ft. Benning, has been named commanding officer of the 193rd Inf Bde at Ft. Amador in the Canal Zone.

BG Richardson, who has been at Ft. Benning since July 1972, will assume his new duties in mid-November.

Before coming to Ft. Benning, BG Richardson was Deputy Commanding General of the U.S. Army Training Center, Engineer, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

BG Richardson is a veteran of combat in both Korea and the Republic of Vietnam. He served as a Platoon Leader and Battalion Staff Officer with the 7th Inf Div from August 1952 until May 1953, and was then assigned to Ft. Benning as an Instructor in the Weapons Department of The Infantry School from 1953-1956.

He became Commander of the 3rd Bn, 39th Inf, 9th Inf Div, Ft. Riley, Kan. in February 1966, and later served as Battalion Commander and Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, for the Division in Vietnam until July 1969.

He returned to Vietnam for another tour of duty in June 1970 as commanding Officer, 198th Inf Bde, 23rd Inf Div (Americal), until March 1971. He then became Chief of Staff of the Division and served in that capacity until March 1971.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy in 1951, BG Richardson also has held many high level staff assignments, including duty as Executive to the Assistant Vice Chief of Staff, Department of the Army.

He is a graduate of the Canadian Army Staff College, Armed Forces Staff College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, and has a Master of Science degree in Business Administration from George Washington University.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster; Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters; Distinguished Flying Cross; Bronze Star Medal with "V" and three Oak Leaf Clusters; the Air Medal with "V" (20th award); the Purple Heart; the Combat Infantryman Badge (second award); and the Parachutist Badge.

Legion committee checks out 197th

The American Legion's National Security Commission got a good look at a "Ready" Strategic Army Force (STRAF) brigade during its visit to Ft. Benning last week. The 90 commission members spent four hours touring the 197th Inf Bde during the two-day stay.

BG (then COL) William B. Steele, brigade commander, welcomed and briefed the group of civic and business leaders and professional men from all over the country at the Kelley Hill service club early Friday morning.

A question and answer session followed as the commission members voiced great interest in today's soldier, recruiting activities and the 197th Inf Bde.

After the briefing the group was given an opportunity to meet and talk with brigade soldiers of all ranks to get their feelings on today's Army.

A tour of modernized barracks located on Kelley Hill was next on the schedule, followed by a look at an equipment display located at the 1/58th Inf motor pool. The American Legion members ended their visit to the brigade with lunch at the brigade dining facilities.

AUSA Picnic Coming Up

Happy youngsters on a firetruck will again be a familiar sight at this year's annual AUSA barbecue & picnic at Victory Lodge on Sept. 21. The fire engine rides will be one of many activities available for youngsters, and tickets can be purchased at major units on post, the Information Office in Infantry Hall, at downtown banks and the Chamber of Commerce in Columbus and Phenix City. Prices are $2.50 for adult tickets and $1.25 for kids, 3-12 years old.

197th Bde commander joins general ranks

William B. Steele, commander of the 197th Inf Bde, was promoted to Brigadier General Aug. 30 in the office of MG Thomas M. Tarpley, post commander.

Mrs. Steele, the former Virginia Akin of Vienna, Ga., assisted MG Tarpley in pinning the star insignia on her husband. Later, an honor guard ceremony was held for the new general officer on York Field, followed by an informal reception in Infantry Hall.

Participating in the honors ceremony were two 197th Inf Bde units, Company C, 3/7th Inf., and Btry A, 2/10th FA. The 283rd Army Band provided music for the event, witnessed by General Steele's friends, relatives and fellow soldiers at Ft. Benning.

Prior to assuming command of the 197th on March 21, 1973, BG Steele was USAIS Secretary.

A veteran of 24 years of military service, BG Steele entered the Army in 1950 after he was graduated from the University of Georgia at Athens. He later received a Master's Degree in International Affairs from George Washington University.

He also completed the Infantry Officers Advanced Course and the Basic Airborne Course at Ft. Benning, and was graduated from the Naval War College Command and Staff Course and the Army War College.

BG Steele has served in a number of command and staff positions, including commander of the 5th Battalion, 60th Infantry, 9th Infantry Division, and later Chief of Staff of the Division in the Republic of Vietnam from April 1967 to July 1968.

Before coming to Ft. Benning as Director of the Infantry School Leadership Department in Aug. 1970, he was Executive and Senior Aide to Army Chief of Staff General William C. Westmoreland in Washington.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star with one Oak Leaf Cluster; the Distinguished Flying Cross; the Legion of Merit with one Oak Leaf Cluster; the Air Medal with 17 Oak Leaf Clusters; the Meritorious Service Medal; The Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters; the Combat Infantryman Badge; The Senior Parachutist Badge and the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm.

BG and Mrs. Steele have two sons, Wade, 22 and Bill, 18. General Steele is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Steele of Route 2, Vienna, Georgia.

Pioneers perform half-time in Oiler-Falcon game

By RICK WASSER

Football fans who viewed the Aug. 26 Houston Oiler-Atlanta Falcon game received a special treat during half-time ceremonies courtesy of the 1/29th Inf, TSB, Pioneers.

Elements of the 1/29th Inf, consisting of the Military Dog Det and the Co C Rangers performed in front of the Astrodome audience during the half-time show, which was televised nationally on NBC.

According to CPT John Mitchell S-5 for the 1/29th, the Pioneer exhibition was a "unit-of-choice recruiting mission that put Ft. Benning on the map, for viewers of the football game."

"Since re-organizing this elite battalion," Mitchell stated, "we have had a relatively small turnover in personnel. But since we have attained full strength and a greater turnover in soldiers, we are now actively engaged in recruiting only the finest men for the Pioneers."

During their debut at the Astrodome, the Military Dog Det performed several attack dog demonstrations, designed to show the great control that the handler has over his dog. In addition, the scout dog drill team executed a drill and ceremony routine, including negotiating the obstacle course.

For their finale, two of the Pioneer canines ran through the flaming obstacle course, and finished with a leap through a flaming hoop.

In the second part of the Ft. Benning demonstration, six Rangers from Co C (Airborne-Ranger) of the 1/29th Inf rappelled 220 feet from the ceiling of the Astrodome to the ground.

SGT Gerald Stansell and SP4 Gary Horton, two of the Ranger rappelling team, recently rappelled from the roof of the Astrodome — during a rehearsal — for an unprecedented 212 feet, shattering the previous indoor record of 197 feet.

"It was a very impressive demonstration," CPT Mitchell said, "as the Rangers were carrying full combat gear just as they would on an actual mission."

In addition to the half-time show, the Co C Rangers also participated in the pre-game ceremonies. During the pre-game show, the Pioneer Rangers presented the Astrodome — and unfurled — the largest American flag in the world. The flag, over 120 feet long and 70 feet wide, will be permanently mounted to a wall in the Astrodome.

Gold Star Wives plan first meeting

The Chattahoochee Chapter of the Gold Star Wives of America, Inc., will hold their first meeting of the 1974-1975 season Wednesday, September 11, in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Mess at Ft. Benning, GA.

A social hour at 7:30 p.m. will be followed by dinner at 8:00 p.m.

Special guest will be MAJ G. P. Rhoads, Registrar at Martin Army Hospital, who will speak on Civilian Health and Medical Program of the United States (CHAMPUS).

Gold Star Wives had the purpose of providing friendship and assistance to women facing similar problems and serving as an educational tool to keep widows informed of changes in congressional legislation affecting them and their children.

Membership is open to the widow of any man who died while a member of the armed forces or who died subsequent to service as a result of an injury or disability incurred during service.

Call 561-3270 or 323-6246 for additional information.

A fast two-mile run

'I'll bet he's going for the record'

A two-mile run in fatigues and combat boots climaxes the Army's Ranger/Special Forces Physical Fitness Qualification Test. Because it's given in the early morning following a grueling combination of other physical tests, times shorter than good college track times — 12 or 13 minutes — are not expected.

But somebody forgot to tell that to 2LT Jerry Dwayne Johnson, who is now in Ranger Class 2-75. All he knew was that the old record for the test at Ft. Benning was 11:07. And despite the fact that his sport was boxing, the 23-year-old West Point graduate "knew I could do better than that."

As the group of prospective Ranger students began the run, LT Johnson immediately broke away from the pack and took the lead. LTC Byron F. Prahm, the deputy director of the Ranger Department, was observing the test. Seeing LT Johnson's burst of speed, he commented, "I'll bet he's going for the record." A very short time later the newly commissioned artillery officer crossed the finish line, and The School Brigade had a new record — 10 minutes and 47 seconds.

And that, in the words of MSG William Miller, who timed the run, "is pretty doggone fast, you'd better believe it."

Seat belts effective . . . if you use them

The evaluation of the effectiveness of safety belts requires consideration of three devices — the lap belt, the shoulder belt, or a combination of both.

The main purpose of the lap belt is to prevent the passenger from being ejected from the car and to prevent his body or lower torso from going forward as a free-floating object in the event of a collision or sudden stop.

The shoulder belt's main purpose is to restrict the upper part of the body — the head, chest and upper abdomen from flexing forward and hitting the steering wheel or instrument panel.

A lap-shoulder belt combination provides protection against ejection as well as against injuries sustained from body impact against any part of the car interior — the steering wheel, instrument panel, windshield or frame.

Safety seat belts keep you in place. By acting as a restraining device, safety seat belts overcome the force of momentum and slow you down with the car. When you make a sudden stop or turn, or when wheels hit dips or holes in the road, safety belts hold both driver and passengers firmly in place.

Safety seat belts reduce force of impact. Most motor vehicle deaths and injuries occur when the car stops suddenly, as in a collision, and you don't. Safety belts reduce the force of body impact against any part of the interior-instrument panel, windshield or frame, thereby preventing many serious injuries.

Safety belts prevent ejection. The fact that lap belts prevent occupants from being hurled out of the car is vitally important because your chance of being killed is five times greater if you are ejected. If the driver is kept behind the wheel to exert greater control, all occupants are safer. Safety seat belts protect rear seat riders. Rear seat riders are subject to the same forces as front seat passengers. They can be hurled forward against front seat, windshield, instrument panel or thrown from the car. Safety belts are just as essential, therefore for rear seat as for front seat passengers.

Safety seat belts are comfortable. Properly installed and snugly secured, safety belts actually make you more comfortable behind the wheel. Your safety belt lets you drive with greater peace of mind while keeping you erect and alert.

When you fasten your safety belt, you are demonstrating that as a concerned citizen, you are aware of your social responsibilities — to yourself and others — by accepting the fact that an accident can happen to you, at any time. But, the most reliable safety belt is of no value unless it is used.

Penny carnival highlights Special Children's Camp

A Special Children's Penny Carnival was held two weeks ago as part of the completion day program for the two week Special Children's Day Camp at Ft. Benning.

For the price of a penny at each booth, day camp children shot darts, tossed rings, tried to hit the doll and fished for prizes.

Children who took part in the fun were awarded the following certificates: Terri Moore, the most helpful; Stacy Walker, the most improved Bowler; The best clock watcher, Gary Collier; Edward Saynay, the Day Camp Comedian; the Dav Camp Cookie Monster, David Roberson; James Moore, the best Basketball player; Stephen Swann, the best Rope Climber; the most improved swimmer, Jeff Moore; Michael Alford, the Happiest; the most artistic, Michael Booth; and the most improved in music, Margaret Buckley.

How does the Department of Army-Wide Training Support (DAWTS) help the soldier?

LT DAVID BUTO
23RD CO. 2ND STU BN (IOBC)

"I've never heard of it."

ISG FRED MARSHALL, JR.
10TH CO TSB

"DAWTS places an abundance of up-to-date literature at the soldiers disposal, giving him the opportunity to considerably increase his knowledge of MOS and MOS-related subjects. It's like placing him in the center of a huge MOS library. The major drawback is that too few soldiers and leaders are aware of its existence and mission."

SSG WAYNE GIBNEY
AIRBORNE DEPT

"I don't think it helps sometimes. Too many people are in too many jobs. They are not specialized in the job they are supposed to be performing."

SFC CLARENCE WHITMIRE
10TH CO 1ST BN TSB

"It helps any individual soldier who wants to progress in his military career and also in his MOS tests."

SP4 JOHN BUCHETTE
HHC HQS COMD

"From what I know about it, it benefits the soldier. It broadens his knowledge of his particular specialty."

PVT DANNY SCOTT
43RD AIRBORNE TSB

"Really, I don't know anything about this. I've never heard of it."

Marriage and military women

A young woman enters the military at a crucial time in her life. It is during this period that she normally makes far-reaching decisions regarding her life work, marriage or combining marriage and a career. Yet, at the very time she needs strong guidance, she is removed from her traditional sources of guidance—close friends, parents and the church. In this new environment with its stresses and strains of readjustment the military woman can make some premature and improper decisions regarding the most important areas of her life. Could she get the proper guidance and help she needs in considering marriage from her first sergeant who may obviously have some negative feelings about marriage?

"The 18-22 year old feels halfway out of the family and worries about being reclaimed. Members of this age group are often living away at school, working, paying rent, owning their own cars, but they are not totally committed to leaving their families. The peer group becomes an important ally in their struggle to cut family ties." (Connecticut Walker, The Cycle of Life, Parade Magazine, June 2, 1974, page 12.) The military woman thus removed from her family and friends, the decisions for marriage is that much more difficult.

How does one prepare to commit himself as a person to the most basic unit of the American society? Marriage preparation, quite naturally, begins in the home. The primary source of the marital concepts and ideas a person carries into his marriage is brought from his own home environment. But there are other sources too. Books, talking to and observing happy families, marriage preparation courses in school or church, all are ways of gaining knowledge from the lives of others.

To prepare for marriage means that one must be willing to improve himself so as to contribute to one's own family and the neighborhood and to learn to live a community life. Preparation for marriage demands that one have knowledge of self and others. Before one can love another, he must first love and accept himself. "Even so husbands should love their wives as their own bodies. He who loves his wife loves himself. For no man ever hates his own flesh, but nourishes and cherishes it, as Christ does the church..." (Eph. 5:28-29).

Preparation for marriage also involves learning to communicate. They should develop the means to communicate to each other their attitudes and tastes, their thinking and feeling, their values—all those things that make them what they are. Preparation for marriage also means becoming more mature. Age is a very little indication for maturity, but some signs of maturity are: (1) Accepting responsibility and then acting responsibly.

(2) Learning to make independent, objective decisions.

(3) Living with the consequences of those decisions.

(4) Giving as well as receiving.

- (5) Thinking of the needs of others.
- (6) Respecting the opinions of others and listening to them.
- (7) Waiting for what you want.
- (8) Learning not to take yourself too seriously.
- (9) Asking for and accepting help and advice from others when you need it.

Is the role of husband and wife in their marriage relationship according to the Biblical view? David Mace says in Whom God Has Joined, "Marriage is two relationships. It is a relationship between equal partners who divide the duties and share the responsibilities and a relationship between lovers who delight in each other's differences."

Given the fact that attitudes toward male and female identities are changing, what is likely to happen to marriage roles in the future? It is certain that there will be confusion for some time. (from: Roles in Marriage, The Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention).

As Lord William Henry Beveridge said: "My father has a saying about marriage—that if two people ride on a horse, one of the two must ride behind. Today marriage is more like two people riding abreast on the same horse, doing a rather difficult balancing feat and each holding one rein. It's more companionable than the old way, but it's more complicated and must at times be rather confusing to the horse." (quoted by David Mace In Whom God Has Joined, Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1953, page 60.)

This specialist really keeps busy

A bite to eat or a good deal on a used car is the word you hear around the 197th Inf Bde, from SP5 Ralph E. Wright, of the 298th Signal Platoon, and his wife Gloria.

The Wrights own their own restaurant, named Yum-Yums, on Victory Drive. SP5 Wright also works as a used car salesman during his off duty time from the Army.

"I worked as a part time cook at the restaurant before I went into business for myself," explained SP5 Wright.

"It's a great challenge to operate my own eating place," continued SP5 Wright. "I've always wanted to go into this type of business for myself and when I was offered the chance to get this place I was very happy."

"My wife and my manager, Mr. Anthony Ortiz, take care of the business during the day while I am working for the Army," added SP5 Wright.

"The hours are long and the work is hard," commented SP5 Wright's wife, Gloria. "Some days I work as many as 15 or 16 hours."

"I realized when we went into the business that it would be hard work on me with my husband in the Army," added Gloria. "but we both know his military duties come first and our business second. I do what I can to keep the place going while he is away. It is a lot of extra work but I don't mind, I love this type of work."

SP5 Wright also works part time as a salesman for a used car lot in Phenix City.

"I enjoy this kind of work also, and find it very interesting being able to meet different people," concluded SP5 Wright.

SP5 Wright works with Race-Relations and on special assignments for his commanding officer during regular duty hours.

The Wrights lived in Atlanta before he entered the Army, but now make their home in Columbus.

Army Community Service is sponsoring a tour of Riverside through the cooperation of Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley.

Riverside, the historic home of the Ft. Benning Post Commander at 100 Vibbert Avenue, will be open to the public for a conducted tour 1-5 p.m., Sept. 15, 1974. ACS officials are expecting many visitors of all ranks, as well as many area civilians.

A donation to the Ft. Benning Emergency Foodlocker will be accepted at the door.

The Emergency Foodlocker assists 60-90 military families per month. Various units on post donate food each month but this does not always meet the need.

Canned and dried staples such as canned fruits and vegetables, dried milk, dried vegetables and packaged one meal dinners are acceptable. Home canned goods are not acceptable.

Adequate parking is available, with MP traffic control in the area. Volunteers will be on hand for child care during the tour.

If possible come at times indicated by the initial of your last name: A-G 1-2; H-M 2-3; N-S 3-4; T-Z 4-5 p.m.

For more information call the Welcome Center at 545-4679/1158

ACS, which "helps people to help themselves," is assisted in its operation by more than 100 men and women volunteers from all ranks and grades of the active Army and retired.

ACS sponsors Riverside tour

"Riverside," home of a succession of Commanding Generals at Ft. Benning, is an historic landmark in its own right.

Built in 1909 by Arthur Bussey, a Columbus, Ga., businessman, the spacious residence was both a summer home for the Bussey family and the seat of a great self-supporting plantation.

An enchanting latter-day legend has grown up in the community which claims that the white columned frame house, surrounded by verandas, was once the scene of beautiful belles, handsome beaux and music until dawn.

Although this legend has no basis in fact, a part of it will become real next June when Riverside dons the trappings for the 8th annual Heritage Ball, a highlight of the area social season. Sponsored by the Historic Columbus Foundation, the Ball is rotated each year among the various historic homes in Columbus.

This event will constitute a part of the area's salute to the Army and Infantry on their 200th anniversary and usher in the bicentennial observances.

The first lands which were later incorporated into the Bussey plantation were purchased by Colonel John Woolfolk in 1827 and 1828 (the year Columbus became a city). The land had been opened up by lottery after the Creek Indians had moved — by treaty — to Alabama in 1825. Families were able to obtain plantation size holdings by combining lotteries and buying up adjacent land. The Woolfolk place was called Cusseta Plantation, taking the name of the original Indian town of Cusseta, located on the property.

Following the Civil War the estate was broken up and sold. In 1883, Marthan Hatcher, wife of Benjamin Hatcher of Columbus, purchased approximately 1,780 acres of the land, adjoining the Chattahoochee River.

It was from the Hatcher family that Bussey bought the property. The new owner named the place Riverside Plantation and began the construction of the home that was later to become the "CG's Quarters" while retaining the name the businessmanplanter gave it, "Riverside."

An old meeting house on Lumpkin Road was moved on logs through a grove of oak trees to the homestead to form the nucleus of the plantation's "Big House." The housemoving was headlined by the newspapers as an amazing engineering feat. The building had been painstakingly inched through trees in the area of Patch Elementary School "without damaging or destroying a single tree."

The ecology practiced by Arthur Bussey is continued even now as many of those same old oak trees on the Riverside lawn receive the care such landmarks deserve.

Bussey added two kitchens to the simple meeting house, a bathroom of the "bowl and pitcher" type and upstairs bedrooms and porches. The completed home had two parlors and a dining room. Although designed for a summer home, there were fireplaces in the parlors and dining room and one between the two kitchens. The original meeting house had no chimneys; only flues for stoves. The wood panels and floor were pine.

There were black metal light fixtures fueled by a gas produced by mixing Carbide with water. Because of the danger involved in the process, the mixing station was located some distance away and the gas was piped underground to the house.

A rarity in those days was the running water system. From a pond at the foot of a hill about a mile away, water was pumped by a ram to a tower and then piped into the house.

Riverside Plantation, after Bussey's improvements, was one of the last great self-supporting agricultural projects of the plantation system in western Georgia. Convenient to the big house was the Riverside Trading Company where Patch School now stands. Next to that was a cotton gin. There was a completely renovated housing development for employees of the plantation, with one employee devoting his entire time to the repair and preservation of the stately old oak trees. Colorful peacocks graced the lawn.

Riverside made the transition from a family summer home to military quarters soon after The Infantry School was moved from Fort Sill, Oklahoma, to Columbus, Georgia, in 1918. A camp named for Confederate General Henry Lewis Benning had first been established on Macon Road and then moved to its present location and designated Fort Benning.

Riverside Plantation and the home were part of the acreage acquired by the government to accommodate what was to become the Home of the Infantry.

Today, after renovations, there are five bedrooms and three baths at Riverside, and the house is centrally heated by steam radiators. A plaque in the hall bears the names and dates of residence of former Commanding Generals, men whose military service is an integral part of the history, not only of this house and this installation, but of the nation and the world.

In July 1972, the future of this historic home was insured when "Riverside" was added to the National Register of Historic Sites. Thus, "Riverside" joins a distinguished list of famous places nationwide which will be forever preserved.

Below is a partial list of wives who have volunteered to serve as hostesses at the CG's open house:

Mrs. Robert G. Betcher
Mrs. John Purnell
Mrs. Harrell Franklin
Mrs. George A. Segrest
Mrs. Phillip Lee
Mrs. P. A. Gwilliam
Mrs. Parker Stockdale
Mrs. Kenneth Holtzaple
Mrs. Donald F. Lang
Mrs. Jubal Rodriguez
Mrs. Robert Horan
Mrs. Gerald Hefty
Mrs. Michael D. Lamning
Mrs. Harney C. Phelps
Mrs. Karl Brandenburg
Mrs. Dalton R. Piel
Mrs. L. T. Seagraves
Mrs. Jimmie Young
Mrs. R. D. Yearout

Mrs. Dalton R. Piel, wife of SP4 Piel, is one of the many listed above who has volunteered to serve as a hostess at the Commanding General's open house. When Mrs. Piel was asked why she volunteered, she gave many reasons. "There is a fascination of being involved with the General's quarters, which has so much history and heritage within the walls. I also enjoy working with the other military wives serving as a hostess to the community. And I wanted to help work toward a worthy cause, in opening the Post Commander's home to let everyone enjoy its beauty, and in receiving food donated by visitors for the Army Community Service emergency food locker; it's all just great."

SOC Recruiting Program is 'a people business'

By GEORGE KORDA

"Join the People Who Have Joined the Army." This new recruiting slogan points out a key aspect of today's Army; it's a people business. The all-volunteer force is an organization increasingly concerned with individuals. The Ft. Benning Station of Choice Recruiting Program, operated by TSB, is a method of recruiting where soldiers communicate with civilians on a one to one basis to point out the advantages of serving in the Army.

SSG Sweeney has been with the program since April. He points out that the most important part of the operation is people working in the field as canvassers.

"Right now we have four canvassers working in the field," said SSG Sweeney. "SP4 Thomas Whorton is in Rome, Ga., SP4 Leonard Dukes is in Dublin, Ga., PFC Ruth Ware is in Atlanta, and SP4 Gary T. Horton is in Houston, Tex. He is in the C Co Rangers of the 1/29th Inf, TSB, and was a member of the team that put on the pregame and halftime shows of the Atlanta Falcons-Houston Oilers football game on August 28," he added.

Canvassers bring in the bulk of Station of Choice recruits. Area recruiters send some to Ft. Benning, some come from other states, but the largest number comes from the canvasser out beating the bush.

Most innovative ideas like the S.O.C. program spawn other imaginative creations like the Ft. Benning Station of Choice Van. When it rolls into a city you can't help but know its there. It is red, white and blue and its decked out with a variety of sophisticated, eye-catching equipment designed to draw the eye of future soldiers. Inside the renovated tractor-trailer are color photos, slide shows, displays, and a color video tape shown on a television set. SP4 Donald R. Grubbs and SP4 Robert L. Parry drive the van to its various commitments around the country. "The recruiters in the towns we visit really like to see that van," said SSG Sweeney, "because they know its one sure-fire way to draw a crowd in a hurry."

New MOS library dedicated

The process of preparing for Military Occupation Specialty (MOS) Testing was made easier for the soldiers of the 197th Inf Bde last week when BG William B. Steele, brigade commander, dedicated a new MOS Library on Kelley Hill.

The library is presently prepared to support the soldiers on Kelley Hill by having available the reference materials for some 200 MOSS. There are areas where soldiers may study individually or where group study sessions may be held.

The hours of operation for the facility will be from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"This will enable the soldiers on Kelley Hill to study more often and be better prepared for their MOS test. It also provides a place where references are readily available to soldiers for preparing lesson plans," commented SSG William L. Quick, the platoon sergeant for HQ section, Co B, 3-7th Inf.

The materials for preparing lesson plans, checking TOW, or studying for an MOS test are kept at the library in four copies with all changes posted, and one copy without changes. To insure that everyone has access to the study materials they will be used only in the library.

"The soldiers will not be permitted to sign out reference materials," stated SSG Robert G. Smith, the NCO librarian instructor at the library.

SFC Johnny W. Rogers, 1SG of Bat C, 2-10th FA, and a user of the main post Learning Center, stated, "The establishment of a MOS library here will enable the men to study whenever they have a little extra time. Before, when going to main post, if you had to take a shuttle bus, it would consume most of the time dedicated to studying. It will be especially beneficial to the men in this unit."

Banach is chosen new soldier of the month

SP4 Charles A. Banach pulled through for D Co, 43rd Engr Bn.

On Aug. 20, 1974, SP4 Charles A. Banach competed for the 43rd Engr Bn Soldier of the Month. Through a close recount of the scores, SP4 Banach came through and was the winner by one point.

The Board asked questions on military knowledge, and current events.

SP4 Banach was assigned to D Co, 43rd Engr Bn on July 17, 1973 and served as the Bn Mail clerk for eight months, and is now working as an electrician in D Co's 2nd Plt. Through hard studying and a little spit-shining, SP4 Banach has held up D Company's known tradition around the 43rd as being the best in the battalion.

BE A RED CROSS VOLUNTEER

The American Red Cross at Ft. Benning will be holding a Basic Class for Volunteers in mid-September. All persons interested in Volunteer Service are asked to call the Red Cross Field Office, on Main Post for a volunteer interview as soon as possible. Please call 545-2122; 545-2123; 545-2124.

SCHOOL OF DANCE

A new class in Modern Jazz is being formed for all military personnel and dependents in the area. Classes begin at 6:30 p.m. on Sept. 17 at the School of Dance. For further information call Judy Johnson at 689-6135.

"HAPPINESS IS CATCHING" OWC THIS YEAR

The "kick-off" OWC event for the year is the Activity Sign-Up Day, Wed., Sept. 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. This event will offer wives of retired and active duty officers an opportunity to join the Ft. Benning Officers' Wives' Club, to register for arts and crafts or activities of their choice and for volunteer work in the field of their interest. A $2 deposit is necessary at registration for each class.

On Sept. 18, the OWC Fall Tea will be held on Riverside Lawn from 1-3 p.m. A musical program will be presented for your enjoyment. Hostesses for this event will be the ladies of the Ranger Dept. (In case of inclement weather, the tea will be held at Main Officers' Club.)

Plan to attend the Oct. 9 OWC Talent Show Luncheon. You might "catch" a friend with some hidden talent being spotlighted.

Come browse, visit and shop, Nov. 13 at the annual OWC Christmas Bazaar. All proceeds go to the OWC Welfare Fund.

A shopping spree to Lenox Square and Phipps Plaza in Atlanta will fill the December slate. Mark Dec. 4 on your calendar for this event.

The January Coffee will offer a chance to see craft demonstrations and to sign for activities you wish to join. This event will be at the Main Officers' Club, on Jan. 15 from 9:30-12 a.m.

An International Fashion Show Luncheon will highlight the OWC activity on Feb. 12, followed by the annual "Tour of Homes" on March 12.

On April 9 there will be a "Wine and Cheese" Party. The OWC year concludes its events with a Towel Show Brunch on May 21.

ACS RIVERSIDE TOUR

Don't forget the ACS sponsored tour of Riverside, the home of Ft. Benning's Commanding Generals, will be held Sept. 15, from 1-5 p.m. Check next week's Bayonet for further information.

MEDDAC NEWS

This month's meeting of the MEDDAC OWC will be an Arts & Crafts Fair. The event is scheduled for Fri., Sept. 13, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Youth Activities Center. A picnic lunch of pizza, soft drinks and ice cream will be served. There will be displays from Corne Cupboard Crafts and That Place, as well as dried flower arrangements, pottery, woodcarving, leatherwork, handmade toys, quilts, macrame and puppets. Also included are several local artists and their paintings. Articles will be available for purchase and several craftsmen will take orders for other items. The wives of Dental Clinic No. 5 and Family Practice will be hostesses with Mrs. Kenneth Holtzaple acting as chairman. Reservations should be made by noon Tues., Sept. 10, with your Reservation chairman listed in the MEDDAC Musings.

OWC REVIEWS YEAR

Welfare projects of the Ft. Benning Officers' Wives' Club are many and varied.

Heading the list of projects, last year, is the annual scholastic achievement awards to dependents of OWC members. Awards for the past year totaled $6000, which was raised from the Christmas Bazaar.

Other welfare projects for the past year included: Martin Army Hospital (including incentive award for blood donations, Red Cross coffee and cookie fund, and Layette materials for needy service families); the Army Community Service food locker; Teen Club; Ft. Benning Girl and Boy Scouts; Main Post library children's book department; films and play equipment for Ft. Benning's Pre-Kindergarten; Faith School Band jackets; the post's Pony Club and Sav-A-Toy Project, (sports equipment); Columbus Symphony's free concert at Ft. Benning; Army Distaff Foundation, Washington, D.C.

Other welfare projects for the past year included: Douglas School (Learning Problems), Columbus, Ga.; Penix City Jaycees, Underprivileged Children's Christmas Benefit Show; Human Growth Clinic; Headstart Toy Program (Christmas presents); Learning Foundations, Columbus, Ga.; YMCA Runaway Reconciliation Program; Community Organization for Drug Abuse Control; tickets for underprivileged children to the Salisbury Fair; and Children Incorporated "Adoptee" sponsorship and presents for "Adoptee".

The chief source of income for the Welfare Fund this year included the Christmas Bazaar and profits from the sale of the "Golden Heritage" cookbook, "The Thrift Shop and The Talent Tree."

Many benefits are given OWC members from the OWC's general fund, which is formed from the membership dues and profits from the OWC classes fees. All IOBC wives are given honorary memberships, (nonpaying) to the OWC. Ft. Benning's Allied Officers' Wives are also given honorary memberships, and this past year were guests of the OWC at all social functions.

Fire making can really be dangerous

Howdy Bub. Me an' Sally Lou went out to the annual Church supper-on-the-ground at Colson's pond last weekend. It wuz kinda nice seein' the whole congregation all at one time agin. Soon's we got there Pastor Wilson ast me if I do the honors for the bar-be-quin' of the chicken agin this year. He said that he already had Ted Jack Thompson an' Cletus Fairfield lined up to start the fire for me.

I agreed to lend my culinary skill to this festive occasion, an' began to drift over to the bank of fifty gallon drums that had been cut in two, so's we could put grills over 'em for the bar-b-que. I wuz standin' an' watchin' Ted Jack an' Cletus dumpin' the coals into them halved drums, an' when they wuz done, Cletus opened a case of charcoal lighter fluid.

They each took two cans, an' started to shake the fluid onto them coals. Ted Jack emptied his cans first, then reared back, struck a kitchen match offen his jeans, an' throwed it into the inverted drums. Not only did that one drum light up, but the other four lit off too. Cletus wuz jes steppin' back, from emptyin' his cans of fluid, as the whole shebang went up with a kinda subdued "Ka-Poof," that managed to singe Cletus' eyebrows with the flare-up.

Both of them 'ole boys fell to the ground, laffin' they's heads off. I yelled at 'em to stop that foolishness, afore someone got hurt. Well sir, when them flames died down from the first dose of that lighter fluid, Ted Jack an' Cletus beganst pourin' some more onto them hot coals.

There musta been a live flame in them coals somewheres, 'cause when Ted Jack tipped the can of lighter fluid over the coals, a bright blue flame crawled right up that stream to the can, an' exploded when it reached the nozzle. I wuz runnin' towards 'em, an' snatched up a blanket offen the ground by the time the live flames had reached they's clothes.

We had us a Thanksgivin' prayer meetin' right there to the Almighty for savin' these two boys from serious harm.

I know that you are mighty careful with yore bar-be-que, Bub, but keep a weather eye on them that ain't as cautious as me an' you.

Good health to you and yours.

Welcomed was the bride of LT Brad Beasley, Vernelle. Farewell was bid to CPT and Mrs. Thomas Curtin, MAJ and Mrs. Robert James and BG and Mrs. W.B. Steele, our special guests of honor.

The ladies of 3/7th Inf (Cottonbalers) held a coffee at the home of Mrs. James Bonfield, Ft. Benning. The cohostess was Mrs. Thomas Rosman.

We were pleased to welcome Mrs. Jerry Forbes and Mrs. Brad Besley to the group.

Camera lines to expand

An expanded selection of cameras and camera equipment has been authorized for continental United States (CONUS) outlets of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES).

The Department of Defense has advised AAFES that the House Armed Services Committee (HASC), which oversees exchange operations, approved increases in the cost-price limitation for cameras and projectors and camera and projector accessories.

The HASC action will enable CONUS exchanges to stock leading brands of cameras and projectors up to a $238 sell price range and accessories up to a $147 sell range. The increased price range will make it possible to stock some lines and models not previously authorized for sale in CONUS exchanges.

Vets May Use GI Insurance Policies As Loan Collateral

With the tight money situation making it increasingly more difficult for prospective borrowers to find willing moneylenders, veterans seeking loans might want to consider using their GI Life Insurance policies as security for loans through the Veterans Administration. Veterans may borrow up to 94 per cent of the cash value of their GI insurance policies, and Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said that even though borrowing on the insurance does reduce the overall protection normally due the policyholder, the policy itself will remain in force. Wheeler added that veterans should remember that "protection ceases once a policy is surrendered for cash, in which case it can neither be renewed nor reinstated."

The interest rate on loans made on GI insurance policies is still 5 per cent per annum. Payments on the principal sum may be made at any time in amounts of $5 or more. Information on GI insurance loans as well as on all veterans' benefits may be obtained at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

DAWTS helps soldiers broaden their military horizons

By GARY HELMER

"I've completed 196 hours of Senior Infantry Sergeant correspondence courses. It assisted me in raising my MOS score considerably and in being selected for promotion to E-9 ahead of my contemporaries.

"Career men know the importance of furthering their military and civilian education. Those who broaden their horizons with military knowledge are progressing; those who are satisfied with existing knowledge levels are simply not moving forward," says a first sergeant with less than 18 years service.

An Infantry operations sergeant on attache duty in South America has to maintain proficiency in his MOS. An operations officer in an Infantry unit in Korea must set up company tactical exercises for his unit. An advisor to the Turkish Army must organize a basic combat program for the unit he advises. An ROTC cadet in Kansas wants information to help him decide what branch of service to choose. A Specialist Five at Ft. Benning wants to advance his professionalism through home study. Another soldier at Benning wants to prepare for his MOS proficiency test.

The Department of Army-wide Training Support (DAWTS) of the Infantry School helps people with these and many other similar type problems every day.

Last year DAWTS shipped more than 1500 tons of Infantry oriented instructional material to units and individuals in all parts of the world. The department also operates a Customer Service Facility in Building 1693, Main Post. This service provides personnel at Ft. Benning the opportunity to obtain free Infantry School instructional materials by visiting the facility and asking for what they need.

DAWTS also manages the Infantry School Correspondence Course Program.

A platoon leader with the 197th Inf Bde had this to say about his platoon after the whole platoon enrolled in DAWTS correspondence courses: "It's to enhance their career development, improve their scores in their MOS's and to gain enough points for pro pay and promotion."

One infantryman added: "The subcourses can increase the score on your MOS test and you learn things that you wouldn't normally know. I think everyone should take it if they plan on staying in the service."

Another Infantryman commented: "I think the correspondence courses are good. They give you good training. Everyone should take them to further their position and rank.

"Sooner or later everyone will be in a position where they'll have to use these tools to survive in a combat situation."

This program includes eleven separate courses of instruction from Basic Noncommissioned Officer courses to the Infantry Officer's Advanced Course.

Included in these courses are over 200 separate subcourses, each applicable to an Infantry Military occupational specialty (MOS). Enlisted men in grades E-4 through E-6 can earn 125 promotion points for successfully completing subcourses at the rate of one half point for each credit hour completed. Each time a subcourse is completed, a certificate of completion is sent to the student through his commander. Copies are also sent to Department of the Army (DA) for inclusion in the student's official military personnel folder. When all subcourses in a course are completed, a diploma is sent to the student and official notification of course completion is sent through command channels so that permanent entries may be made in qualification records. Copies of all such notices are sent to DA.

The courses are available anytime, any place in the world. All required material is provided free of charge. The student studies what he wants, when he wants, where he wants. When he moves, he takes his classroom with him. The student has the option of enrolling for an entire course or for one or more selected subcourses. Thus, each student can establish his own curriculum.

More than 28,000 students located in all parts of the world are currently participating in the program. Complete information on the program is outlined in the 1973-74 USAIS Correspondence Course Catalog. The catalog is mailed to every Infantry unit in the Army down to company level. Catalogs can also be obtained from the Correspondence Course Committee of DAWTS, located in Bldg. 67, near the old post exchange. Phone numbers are 545-7011-5677.

DAWTS produces
good product

Most "do-it-yourself" kits are frustrating. They make a man wish he had never seen the mixed-up jumble of junk.

The United States Army Infantry School's Department of Army-Wide Training Support expends a lot of effort to make sure its customers don't feel this way when they get their correspondence courses.

Soldiers who have completed courses say these efforts have produced a good product. SSG Carl L. Doyle, 13th Public Information Detachment, has completed several courses. He said, "The course packets are complete and self-explanatory. They include everything a student needs. All you have to do is follow the instructions." Other soldiers voiced essentially the same opinion when asked what they thought of the correspondence courses.

The Instructional Material Preparation Committee of DAWTS writes the courses used in the USAIS correspondence program. The writers do not originate tactics or doctrine. They take a resident course problem and adapt it to the needs of the student who will use it. The final product is such that individuals in the field, whether in Reserve Components or the active army, receive instruction equivalent to training at the Infantry School.

When a writer receives an assignment, he contacts the resident department responsible for presenting that particular problem. Next he visits the classroom, training area or ranges where the resident instruction is presented. He pays particular attention to student questions and to areas that students have trouble understanding.

The next step for the writer is to prepare a draft of the problem, then go over it with the principal resident instructor. This insures that he adheres to proper terminology, tactics and doctrine.

The final steps in the preparation of a problem are final review and concurrence by the responsible resident instructional department and the DAWTS Education Advisor. The program is then ready to "go to press" at the Army Field Printing Plant.

Regardless of the soldier's location, the Department of ArmyWide Training Support provides him with the very latest Infantry School doctrine, tactics and techniques.

RECREATION VEHICLES

All personnel having boats, campers, and trailers stored at Boats and Campers, Recreation Services Division, should reregister these vehicles in Bldg 1707 from Sept. 28-30.

For further information call 545-1416.

SCHOOL ZONES

Dependent schools on the reservation began the school year Aug. 28. All motorists are cautioned to observe posted speed limits in school zones. While school crossings are normally manned by military policemen, only the cooperation and concern of all drivers and the practicing of defensive driving habits can ensure the safety of our school children and prevent injury or death. Drive carefully!

ROD & GUN CLUB

There will be a Rod & Gun Club employe in the lobby of Bldg 4, from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m. each Wednesday to sell memberships, licenses and post permits.

Post permits must be made available to the game wardens to show that the orientation was attended by the permit holder. Safety Orientations will be held each Wednesday through October 30 in Classroom 5 and 7 in Bldg 4.

For further information call the Rod & Gun Club at 687-0562.

BOOZE AND DRUGS

Rap sessions on alcohol and drugs are held in the Main Post Recreation Center each Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. Rap Sessions are also held in Bldg 2212 each Tuesday afternoon at 5 p.m. for female friends and relatives of persons who have problems with alcohol.

The Ft. Benning Alcoholics Anonymous Group meets on the first floor of Bldg 2605, located on Dixie Road, each Thursday evening at 8 p.m. An Alanon meeting for friends and relatives of persons who have problems with alcohol is held on the second floor of Bldg 2605 each Thursday at 8 p.m.

The Benning House Alcoholics Anonymous Group meets each Monday at 8 p.m. in Bldg 2215. For more information on these meetings call 545-LIVE.

WALT DISNEY WORLD

Walt Disney World is sponsoring a Salute to Armed Forces from Monday, September 16 through Sunday, September 22. Tickets are available at the Information, Tour, Travel Office, Bldg 394. For $5.75 you are entitled to unlimited use of the Theme Park with the exception of the Shooting Gallery on any day during this period.

JUNIOR BOWLING LEAGUE

The Junior and Senior Bowling League age groups 8-12 and 13-21, will register for the Winter Bowling Program beginning tomorrow, Sept. 7. Instruction classes will begin at 9 a.m., Sept. 14 and 9 a.m. Sept. 21. League organization and competition will start Sept. 28.

For further information call the Main Post Bowling Center at 545-4274 or 687-0098.

RETIRED ENLISTED COUNCIL

The Retired Enlisted Council will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Top Five Club, Ft. Benning, at 1 p.m., Sept. 10. All retirees, wives and surviving widows are cordially invited to attend. The Council provides prompt and complete information, advice and assistance on matters pertaining to services and benefits that retired Army personnel and their dependents deserve.

For further information call 545-4258, 563-5005 or 297-0456.

Springer Ballet starting new season

The Springer Ballet Theater, which is an extension of the Springer Theater Company, will start its 1974-1975 season Sept. 3 and will continue into May with a vacation at Christmas.

The Christmas break is always appreciated by the members of the Company. By that time they have all been through a rigorous training program, and most of them will have just completed five performances of the "Nutcracker", the first of the Company's two major performances which are presented in the Springer Theater. The "Nutcracker" is a ballet that is presented annually during the Christmas season and which is looked forward to with anticipation by Columbus citizens.

The second Ballet Company production is presented in the Spring, again in five performances. The Springer performance for the 73-74 season was titled "Circus Fantasy" and was well received, particularly by the younger folk. Members of the Company also appear in other Springer Theater productions, the latest of which, "Brigadoon" used a number of ballet dancers in dance routines.

The Springer Ballet Theater is looking forward to an outstanding season, and indications are that many new faces will be seen at the training sessions. Anyone interested in joining the Company and attending the training sessions is welcome, whether or not he or she has had prior experience. The desire to learn and to dance is the main prerequisite. The schedule for the training sessions follows:

Pre-Ballet (ages 4 & 5) — Tuesday, 6-6:45 p.m.
 Beginners I (ages 6-8) — Thursday, 3:30 - 4:30 p.m.
 Beginners II (ages 9 & 10) — Thursday, 4:30 - 5:30 p.m.
 Juniors — Tuesday, 7:30 - 9 p.m. and Thursday, 6 - 7:30 p.m.
 Seniors — Monday, Wednesday & Thursday, 7:30 - 9 p.m.

Members returning from last season will attend the same classes as last year. Adjustments will be made during September. Training sessions will be held at the studio located at 109 1/2 12th Street, on the second floor over Clason Optometrists.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Director, Mrs. Sonja Manzi at 563,2544, or by calling the studio, 323-4547 during the training sessions.

FDC, 2/10th's nerve center

Every well functioning unit has one section that is the nerve center of the unit; for the 2/10th FA the Fire Division Center (FDC) is that section.

SSG Joseph D. Simon, Chief Computer Operator for the Fire Direction Center of the 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde, feeds the necessary information into the Field Artillery Digital Automatic Computer to meet a request for fire support. (Photo by C. B. Hoover)

All requests for fire support from the 2/10th are made through the FDC. The FDC then speeds into action to meet the request.

With the aid of the Field Artillery Digital Automatic Computer (FADAC), all the necessary data is taken into consideration prior to a fire command being sent to the batteries.

"From the time that a request comes to the FDC until the first round is on its way takes about 1.5 seconds," said SP4 Robert W. Sneeden, a FADAC operator.

Although the computer is considered to be the primary source of information for the FDC a manual check is still made to check against any possible error.

"The computer is much more accurate and takes into consideration far more information than I do," said PTV James AM Handy, of the FDC section. "My re-check more or less is just to make sure that the correct data was fed into the computer to begin with."

The good neighbor.

197th replaces horsehide with pigskin for new season

Sp4 Leroy Sumpter (left) and PVT Larry V. Goodwin (right) hold off defenders while PVT Herbert G. Wells of Bat B, 2/10th FA, carries the ball for five yards on a power sweep as the 197th Inf Bde, kicked off the "Forever Forward" football season last week. (Photo by C. B. Hoover)

The start of the season has brought the excitement of winning and the bitter taste of losing to many a soldier in one short week.

Being zeroed in on and blasted was HHB, 2nd Bn, 10th FA, losing to B Btry, 18 to 12. Harold A. Odomes, the captain of HHB team commented, "We may have lost but we're coming back. We're going to work on our passing game first. The only way to win in flag football is to throw the bomb."

The passing of the long bomb has upset many hopes of winning. Dennis J. McBride of Co C, 197th Spt Bn stated, "Co D hit us with a 20 yard pass as soon as the game started. We just couldn't get cranked up to come back. We are going to practice our defense against the bomb and put our offense into high gear."

The paper tigers of Co A, 197th Spt Bn went through their first game without a tear as Co B forfeited the game.

The 298th Signal Platoon had their wires hooked up and the signals coming through as they squeaked by the 72nd Eng Co, 7 to 6. Henry C. Meders, the ISG, stated, "We're going to tear up everyone in the league this season. There's no one in the brigade that stands a chance."

"Things looked good for HHC Bde in the first half as they set A Trip, 15th Cav back with a touch back for two points. Then the long bomb struck again in the closing minutes of the game to upset HHC, 8 to 2.

The speed and power of the 2nd Bn, 69th Armor is being cranked up as the teams warm up for the season. "We haven't gotten our schedule set up yet, but the battalion should start its competition soon,"

Milbert R. Demery holds for Tyrone E. Williams as the men of Btry B, 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde, kick off the "Forever Forward" football season. (Photo by C.B. Hoover) commented SGM Paul W. Ring, battalion Sergeant Major.

HHC, 3/7th Inf probably felt the bitter sting of defeat more than any other team in the brigade as Cbt Spt Co assaulted them. To look at the score, 13 to 0, it would seem HHC did not put up much of a defense, however, that wasn't the story. HHC, like many other teams, fell victims to the bomb.

The outlook for flag football in the brigade seems to be one of constant upsets as the season gets under way.

Marksmen prepare for trip to Thun

Fifteen marksmen assigned to the US Army Marksmanship Unit are in the final stage of preparation before departing for Thun, Switzerland on Sept. 9, to compete in the 41st World Shooting Championships.

Individual vying for gold medals will be: Rifle Events; MAJ Lones Wigger, MAJ John Foster, CPT Lanny Bassham, LT Diana Zimmerman; Pistol; CPT Robert Merritt, CPT Sharon Best, SFC Heishel Anderson, SFC Bonnie Harmon, SFC Barbara Hile, SSG Marvin Black and SSG John Kailer; Running Target; LT Louis Heimer, SFC Charles Davis and SFC Edmund Moeller; Int'l Skeet; SP4 William Slahucka. Coaches for the U.S. Team are LTC Winston Dahl, Chief, Competitive Division, USAMU, and LTC (Ret) William C. Pullum.

Forty-two individuals will make up this year's World Championship Team, which many experts believe will be the strongest team the United States has had in many years. In total there will be 20 different shooting events including men as well as women competing for individual and team honors.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit commanded by COL Sidney R. Hinds, Jr., was responsible for filling nearly half the slots which make up the World Team.

Raft surprises everyone

'Nunn's Folly' drifts to 4th in its class

By George Korda

Everyone in the company thought the HHC, TSB raft entered in the Great Chattahoochee Raft Race would be showing an episode of Voyage to the Bottom of the River. However the team surprised everyone and nearly wound up performing Victory at Sea as they finished 4th in their class and 20th overall in the race held on Aug. 24.

Some 200 rafts made the 12 1/2 mile run down the Chattahoochee River, lending an even greater air of success to the 14 men who rowed the raft. Their class was titled "Rubber raft over five men," and they competed against some rafts in their class which had many more than 14 people rowing.

SP4 Thomas Nunn, HHC's company clerk, credits himself with the idea of entering the raft in the race, and CPT William B. Sweeney, HHC commander, titled the raft "Nunn's Folly." SP4 Nunn described some of the action that took place on the river. "The first three miles of the race we must have rowed five. We kept on going from one side of the river to the other because we couldn't get our stroke coordinated."

Highly reminiscent of such epic motion pictures as Ben-Hur and others that included Galley Slaves, the HHC production featured three men who alternated calling out the stroke to the beleaguered rowers. They were SP4 Nunn, SGT Michael Farley, and PFC Phillip Addington. "We were the ones who really kept everybody going," said Nunn.

"There was only one time in the whole race when we had anything resembling a problem," he explained. "Once we had to take a 10 minute break to cool down. We were bushed. If we hadn't stopped we probably would have won third place."

At 4 p.m. the HHC team dragged themselves into Bradley Landing, tired but proud. All that was left for them to do was go home, take care of some fire engine red sunburns, and get the soreness out of the area that would be meeting their shirts in the office Monday morning.

Also participating in Nunn's Folly and enjoying the day on the river were PFC Clinton Horton, PFC Steve Roland, PFC Aldrin Alston, PVT Philip Reilly, PVT Bill Malec, SP5 Arthur Seymour, SP4 Bill Chambers, PFC Walter Ward, PFC Roderick Gregory, and PFC Thomas Register.

SEPTEMBER

DoD's Human Goals

Our nation was founded on the principle that the individual has infinite dignity and worth. The Department of Defense, which exists to keep the Nation secure and at peace, must always be guided by this principle. In all that we do, we must show respect for the serviceman, the servicewoman and the civilian employee, recognizing their individual needs, aspirations and capabilities.

The defense of the Nation requires a well-trained force, military and civilian, regular and reserve. To provide such a force we must increase the attractiveness of a career in Defense so that the service member and the civilian employee will feel the highest pride in themselves and their work, in the uniform and the military profession.

THE ATTAINMENT OF THESE GOALS REQUIRES THAT WE STRIVE

To attract to the defense service people with ability, dedication, and capacity for growth;

who do business with the Department to full compliance with the policy of equal employment opportunity;

To provide opportunity for every one, military and civilian, to rise to as high a level of responsibility as possible, dependent only on individual talent and diligence;

To help each service member in leaving the service to readjust to civilian life; and

To make military and civilian services in the Department of Defense a model of equal opportunity for all regardless of race, sex, creed or national origin, and to hold those who do business with the Department to full compliance with the policy of equal employment opportunity;

Human Goals: The Army's Pledge

A pat on the back Since these human goals were first published in August 1960, the Army has continued to be a leader in integrating its troops, operating in an environment which assures fair treatment and equal opportunity to all.

Among the positive steps taken by the Army to fulfill its commitments:

—Enlisted selection boards are required to include minority group representatives.

—Minority group officers are advancing rapidly in command positions.

—Minority group enrollment in ROTC and the U.S. Military Academy has risen.

—All military occupational specialties, with the exception of those associated with combat, close combat support or strenuous physical demands, have been open to women.

—Equal opportunity officers have been appointed down to battalion and company level.

. . . . and a kick in the tail!

However, after a period of time when things have gone well, it's natural to sit back and rest on the laurels thinking that you understand everything you know about the subject.

Something as significant as equal opportunity requires constant attention at every level. The Secretary of Defense, in a recent memorandum to the service secretaries, stated that "equal opportunity goals are based unmistakably on the moral imperatives of American society. This Department must share that commitment to equal opportunity, not only as a matter of theory, but as a matter of abiding practice."

He was referring to a recent case where an Army officer was denied a key post because some staff members of the overseas command to which he was nominated presumed that the populace of the host country would adopt a negative reaction to him because he was black. They rejected the nomination.

The well-intentioned staff members thought they were sparing a black officer from a possible hostile environment. They did this based on their own sensitivities without determining the officer's personal perspectives and tolerances.

As a result of this case, Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway has reaffirmed the Army's position that assignments will be based solely on the abilities of the persons concerned and in no instance will race be a factor determining whether or not an individual is nominated for or assigned to any position.

In a memorandum for the Chief of Staff and other Department of the Army staff agencies, Secretary Callaway said: "I ask each of you to continue to be alert and work to eliminate any errors which suggest any wavering in our commitment to equal opportunity. Army leadership at all levels must affirmatively and sensitively implement equal opportunity policies and programs, taking appropriate disciplinary action where warranted against those who fail in their equal opportunity responsibilities. I am 100% behind the Army's equal opportunity program—for both military and civilians. To be effective, this program will require the dedicated support of you and every leader and supervisor in the Army."

These Human Goals are restated here as a reminder. Simple and basic, they require not only understanding but diligent application if they are to be made to work.

EM Awards Emphasized

WASHINGTON (ANP)—Department of the Army (DA) officials have noted during visits to the field appropriate peacetime awards to enlisted personnel are not being made in some cases. Army policy is to reward personnel whose achievements contributed significantly either to their unit's ability to accomplish its mission or to improving the morale, welfare, discipline, and overall effectiveness of individual soldiers. In accordance with AR 672-5-1, the Army Commendation Medal (ARCOM), locally devised certificates of achievement and letters of commendation are considered appropriate awards by DA for such efforts and their use is being encouraged for this purpose. DA officials also noted more favorable impact on individual morale in those units which habitually conduct formal Good Conduct Medal presentation ceremonies. Recently revised criteria for award of the Good Conduct Medal has increased the unit commander's role with respect to this medal.

197th practices aircraft loading

The ability of the 197th Inf Bde to deploy rapidly to any trouble spot in the world was enhanced last week as units of the brigade underwent aircraft static loading training.

The static loading training was conducted in conjunction with classes given by an Air Force air movement team from Charleston, S.C., AFB.

The training further honed the fine fighting edge of the brigade and its capabilities to move by land, sea or air. It enabled the drivers and supervisors to familiarize themselves with the techniques of aircraft loading and securing procedures. The aircraft training at Lawson Field offered first hand experience to the soldiers.

Dwarfed by the huge aircraft, CPT James L. Hine, the brigade assistant S-3 (Air) commented, "This is the most realistic and worthwhile training in preparation for possible deployment. Most of the training to date has been road type movement, rail or by sea. The brigade would most probably move by either sea or air. Movement by air is one of the most exacting. Should you load improperly, not only do you stand a chance of damaging your own equipment, but a multi-million dollar aircraft."

PFC Charles L. Beach of Co B, 2nd Bn, 69th Armor stated, "I thought my tank was big until I saw the C-5A. Its like a toy next to that thing. It was my first time loading the tank on an aircraft."

"Moving wooden planks from the rear to the front of an Armored Personnel Carrier caused some delay in the training," stated SP4 Obery H. Washington, Co A, 1st Bn, 58th Inf. "I know it's to protect the aircraft's flooring, but there has to be a better and faster way. Off hand though, it was the best training I have had in the brigade."

SP4 Reginald T. Miller, 197th Inf Bde Soldier of the Month for July, searches through his files for a recent letter. Miller is the legal clerk for Co A, 3/7th Inf (Cottonbalers). (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Franklin D. Roosevelt once said "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." This young lady would probably agree, but the 34 feet of open air to the ground below is probably adding to her anxiety a little bit. After the briefing most of the wives took a turn out of the 34 foot tower to see what it was really like. (Photo by George Korda)

New CSM comes to Pioneers

CSM Joseph C. Gagnon assumed the number one enlisted position in the 1/29th Inf, TSB, last week, replacing CSM Antonio Cartagena.

CSM Gagnon comes to the Pioneers from the Georgia Military College in Milledgeville where he was the chief instructor.

CSM Gagnon's service includes duty in Korea, Vietnam (3 tours), Laos, Taiwan and Berlin, Germany. His major decorations include the Combat Infantryman's Badge, Silver Star, Bronze Star (for valor), Army Commendation Medal, Air Medal and the Purple Heart (2 clusters).

This is not the Sergeant Major's first Ft. Benning assignment, as he was the first sergeant major of the newly formed Leadership Department in 1969.

In addition, he was with the original Ranger Company, in 1950, that went to Korea for combat duty.

CSM Gagnon has had a unique experience during his career in that he has been through the enlisted ranks twice. He was discharged in 1952 an E-7. In 1957, he re-entered the Army as an E-2 and has worked his way back up through the ranks to the grade of Command Sergeant Major.

"It was a very good experience," the Pioneer CSM stated. "Having been through the ranks twice, I've been able to watch the changing Army."

CSM Gagnon believes that professionalism is the watch word of the non-commissioned officer. And of the NCO creed itself, "I live it," Gagnon said.

Weekend Warriors make good

Qualified people in quality jobs is the way the Army is working today. This fact is just as important for the National Guard and Reserves as it is for the active Army. On Aug. 26, two National Guardspersons and one Army reservist were awarded the Military Occupational Specialty of General Draftsman after successfully completing an on-the-job training program in the S-3 section of TSB.

One of the National Guardspersons graduating OJT was PV2 Rosa Maria Gonzalez of Miami, FL. On active duty barely six months, she wanted drafting experience to further a goal she has in civilian life. "I'm an art teacher at North Miami Beach High School and I needed drafting experience in order to become an industrial arts teacher. Now I've got it."

The National Guardsman in the group is PV2 Marlin J. Weaver Jr. A snowmobiler or skier when he's not at his job as an ammunition guard at Camp Grayling outside his home of Grayling, Mich., he plans to return to Ft. Benning to attend OCS in TSB's 5th Stu Bn.

The lone Army Reservist of the threesome is PV2 Philip Reilly of Warwick, RI. Drafting is immediately useful to Reilly. "I'm a carpenter and this sort of thing can be really helpful to me in the future when I'm on a job," he said.

The attitude toward their training was summed up by PV2 Gonzalez who said, "it's definitely been an asset and I'm glad I got the chance to do it."

About four million veterans separated from military service between Jan. 31, 1956, and July 1, 1966, now have GI Bill eligibility until May 31, 1976, under provision of Public Law 93-337.

A headstone or gravemarker is available for any deceased veteran who received an other than dishonorable discharge from military service, but is not available to members of the veteran's family, according to the Veterans Administration.

36th Engrs practice with C5A aircraft

Four units involved in an air loading exercise were the 598th Lt Maint Co, 608th Ordnance Co and the 43rd Engr Bn.

A C5A was the aircraft used in the exercise. The aircraft, which is home based at Dover Air Force Base, Delaware, flew down fully prepared. The massive C5A was manned by five loadmasters, two engineers, one pilot, one co-pilot and a navigator. The C5A is 1/10 larger than the renowned 747 and can carry three times the load of a C-141 Starlifter.

The 598th Lt Maint Co was the first unit in line for the exercise. It was fully prepared with its maintenance equipment.

Then came the 586th with their float bridges, ready to span the widest rivers. Next was the 608th Ordnance Co, bringing its share of the load. And last but not least, was the fearless 43rd Engr Bn with its massive earthmoving equipment. The exercise proved to be very valuable and rewarding. All of the units demonstrated their tactical proficiency and professional knowledge while performing the exercise.

15th Cav has own mortars when a unit is on the move and needs only a few rounds of mortar or artillery fire, it usually radios back to an artillery unit or a mortar platoon. Not so with the 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde.

Along with the many other sections in a cavalry unit, there is a mortar squad.

Each of the three platoons in the 15th Cav have a 4.2 mortar mounted in a M106 mortar carrier (a track vehicle similar to an armored personnel carrier).

"The primary mission of each of the mortar squads is direct support of their platoons," explained PSG Norman R. Rousseau, first platoon sergeant.

"However, they can be grouped together in battery form in support of the entire Cav."

Each five-man crew can either fire their mortar mounted in the vehicles or they can dismount them and place them on the ground.

Other sections of the 15th Cav include an infantry section, armor section, and a scout section.

"With all the different sections in the Cav, it is one of the most versatile units the Army has," Rousseau said.

Check kiting costs

The risk is incalculable. Yet people who hardly would consider themselves gamblers take it every day, especially around payday.

It could mean prosecution in a civil court or a military court-martial. It can damage a military career, stamp a stigma upon an otherwise promising individual.

That risk is check kiting, a term used in banking circles to describe the act of writing checks, then rushing to the bank to make a deposit before those checks clear the bank.

Each year the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is drained of funds that surpass one million dollars by those who pass bad checks at the exchange. Of that staggering amount, hundreds of thousands of dollars represent expenses associated with collecting dishonored checks obviously the result of check kiting.

While AAFES has introduced such effective measures as the finger imprinted device and a computerized verification system that can spot a known bad check artist in seconds, the nagging problem of the check-kitter persists.

The problem can be traced to bygone days when banks and clearing houses needed several days to process a check. With that leeway, many used the delay to write worthless checks to get the jump on the payday crowd at the exchange, settle debts or enjoy a pre-payday fling. Others looked upon the exchange's $2 fee for dishonored checks as a very inexpensive "Short-term loan."

Those days are gone forever. A check cashed on Monday very likely will clear the bank on Tuesday, and the $2 administrative charge for a dishonored check has been raised to $5. Those who consider any penalty fee a price worth paying to continue that practice may find themselves deprived of further checkcashing privileges or facing military or civil court action. Automation and the mounting concern for that abuse has made check kiting a sure road to disaster.

Annual conference scheduled on Ambulatory Patient Care

The US Army Health Services Command will conduct the second annual conference on Ambulatory Patient Care at Ft. Benning, GA. Sept. 11-13 in Infantry Hall.

MG Thomas M. Tarpley, USA, Commander, Ft. Benning and COL. Anton L. Hitzelberger, Commander, Martin Army Hospital, will welcome MG Spurgeon Neel, MC, Commander, U. S. Army Health Services Command, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas as well as many other distinguished medical officers. The Navy, Air Force, Veterans Administration and Public Health Services will be represented.

The Conference will provide seminars and workshops for key ambulatory care personnel from many medical treatment facilities in order to surface major common problems, discuss workable solutions, evolve a common approach and present new programs that will have application throughout the Army Medical Department. The Conference is one part of the Surgeon General and HSC's coordinated efforts to improve ambulatory care.

Many facets of ambulatory care will be covered in the Conference. Those included are the Physician Extender Program Update; Physicians Assistants; Nurse Clinicians; Family Practice Update; AMEDD APC Progress; and the Emergency Medical Services Program.

Other subjects will be presented in small mini sessions at various times. This will enable all the conferees to attend the subject conference that would be of interest to them.

These mini sessions will contain subjects on centralized appointment systems; Medical Records Operations; Emergency Medical Services Communications; Patient Assistance/Patient Relations; Health Education; Management Techniques and Parking Problems/Solutions.

MEDDAC personnel honored

Two award ceremonies held recently at MEDDAC honored 53 military and civilian personnel.

The MEDDAC Certificate of Achievement was presented to SFC Edward W. Alderson, Operating Room Specialist.

The EENT Specialist Course Diploma was presented to PFC Kathryn F. Florio, EENT.

The monthly Blood Donor Award of $25 was presented to SP4 Wesley Arms, 283rd Band.

Federal Service certificates and pins were given to a group of civilians. Their accumulated time in service amounted to 310 years.

Thirty year pins were awarded to Ernest J. Brown, Supply and Service; and Ernest M. Casaday, Patient Administration Division.

Twenty year pins were awarded to Charlie M. Banks, Department of Nursing; William J. Boyd, Food Service; John W. Childs, Social Work Service; Lawrence K. Dahl, Supply and Service; Sigbee Mainous, Department of Clinics; James W. Mercier, Pharmacy; Henry Thomas, Jr., Supply and Service; Elizabeth C. Calhoun, Department of Nursing.

Ten Year pins were awarded to James D. Clark, Dental Activity; Jessie B. Dawkins, Department of Nursing; Billie R. James, Department of Nursing; Bennie B. Johnson, Department of Nursing; James Parris, Supply and Service; Walter E. Rodes, Adjutant; and Ceolar T. Hardman, Department of Clinics. A group of 31 people Dupriest, Dermatology; Dorothy Graham, Department of Surgery; Marion Holston, Department of Nursing; Jenouis Obleton, Department of Nursing; Daisy M. Penny, Department of Nursing; Mary D. Pierce, Department of Nursing; and Donna J. Wilmut, Department of Nursing.

Outstanding and Sustained Superior Performance Awards were presented to Susan A. Almon, Radiology; Blanche S. Barnwell, Supply and Service; Naboth Gordon, Supply and Service; Joan Hammonds, Social Work Service; Ruby E. Kitchens, Radiology; Dorothy Roberts, Patient Administration Division; James D. Swiger, Supply and Service; B. J.

Cavanaugh, Benning House; Seaborn Garrett, Supply and Service; Catherine Evans, Food Service; Carl W. Reeves, Supply and Service; Stephanie P. Streetman, Management Service

Division; Grace Thoman, Department of Dentistry; Jesse Dawkins, Department of Nursing; Emma A. Ezekiel, Department of Nursing; Margaret Houseman, Department of Nursing; Barbara Long, Department of Nursing; Lydia S. McCullough, Department of Nursing; Elmsoss Oss, Health & Environment; Anne W. Patten, Personnel; Mary N. Riggins, Department of Nursing; Dorothy S. Sanchez, Department of Nursing; Clifford Strawder, Department of Nursing; and Lois C. Walden, Professional Services.

A $60 million Veterans Administration Hospital at Loma Linda, Calif., incorporating design features to withstand a major earthquake, has a target completion date of January 1977.

A higher interest rate on homes purchased with GI loans is an alternative to an increasing probability of unavailability of financing at lower rates, according to the Veterans Administration.

A new Veterans Administration clinic with a first-year budget of more than $15 million was dedicated recently at Ft. Lee, Va., as part of a move to carry VA medical services closer to homes of veterans.

CFC sets '75 goal at $150,000

The fourth annual Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) for 1975, with a goal of $150,000 as its target, will open with a kickoff ceremony at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17 in Marshall Auditorium.

The Tri-Community campaign combines the fund drives for International Services Agencies, the local United Way and the National Health Agencies formerly held in Ft. Benning, Columbus and Phenix City.

Speakers at the kickoff will include MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning commander and COL Wallace F. Veaudry, assistant commander, who is the Tri-Community campaign chairman. Also speaking will be Charles Mize, Columbus and Phenix City's United Way campaign chairman, Bee Brown, acting regional director, International Services Agency, and Mr. William Myers, Georgia representative of the National Health Agency.

The six-week campaign, which is scheduled to end Oct. 31, is organized so that each office and major unit has a "key man" who will accept contributions and prepare receipts for the donor's tax records.

According to James Schoonover, post project officer, the military and civilian personnel in the Ft. Benning-Columbus-Phenix City donated $222,569.23 to the campaign last year.

The donor may make a blanket contribution which would be divided among the agencies, or he may specify which agencies he wants to receive all or part of his contribution.

Those receiving funds through the United Way Agencies are: Red Cross, Muscogee County; Red Cross, Russell County; Community Activities Association; Salvation Army—Columbus; Salvation Army—Phenix City; Cerebral Palsy Center; Boy Scouts—Chattahoochee Council; Girl Scouts—Concharly Council; Urban League—Metro-Columbus; Goodwill Industries; and Boys' Clubs and Girls Clubs in the Tri-Community area.

Others receiving funds are: Community Center—Tenth Street; Shepherd Home; Travelers' Aid; Family Counseling Center; Legal Aid Society—Columbus; Mental Health Association—Russell County; Crippled Children and Adults—Russell County; YMCA—Metropolitan, Main Branch, Brookhaven Branch; Deaf, Listening Eye School; and Diabetes Association of Columbus.

International Service Agencies to receive funds are: The American Korean Foundation; Planned Parenthood—World Population; CARE; Project Hope; and International Rescue Committee.

Among the National Health Agencies are: The National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation; The National Foundation—March of Dimes; The National Kidney Foundation; The National Multiple Sclerosis Society; and the National East Seal Society for Cripple Children and Adults.

Others include The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness; The American Cancer Society; The American Heart Association; The Arthritis Foundation; Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America; and the National Association for Retarded Citizens.

MAH heliport to be named after Medal of Honor winner

Joseph G. LaPointe Jr.

The Martin Army Hospital heliport was named to honor the memory of Medal of Honor winner SP4 Joseph G. LaPointe, Jr. during ceremonies held at the heliport at 2:30 p.m. Sept. 11.

LaPointe was awarded the nation's highest award for bravery posthumously for the manner in which he distinguished himself on June 2, 1969 while serving as a medical aidman during a combat helicopter assault mission in Quang Tin Province, Republic of Vietnam.

Specialist LaPointe entered the Army at Cincinnati, Ohio May 8, 1968. He served in Vietnam from November 1968 to June 1969.

MG Spurgeon Neel, Commander, Health Service Command, along with BG William R. Richardson, Assistant Commandant, USAIC will participate in the ceremonies.

Specialist LaPointe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. LaPointe, Sr., Route No. 1, Clayton, Ohio; his wife at the time of his death and his aunt and uncle will also attend.

Name that building, get a little richer

If you were in the Lavoie Manor Community area Tuesday night, you may have heard the sound trucks, seen the caravan of cars and children passing out American flags and candy, but it wasn't a reshooting of the classic film, "East of Eden." They were members of the Lavoie Manor Community Association passing out flyers.

It's all connected with Lavoie Manor Association's contest, "Name the Activities," Bldg. 2223 on Indianhead Road, for all residents of the Lavoie Manor Community.

Lavoie Manor Community Association is looking for a unique name for their newly acquired activity building that will be used by all committees of the association—and especially for meetings, socials, parties, and sewing and exercise classes.

Entry blanks must be deposited in the contest box at Lavoie Community Life Center by 4 p.m. September 26, 1974. All contestants must be a resident of the Lavoie Manor Community.

A $25 savings bond will be awarded to the person with the winning name.

The winning name is scheduled to be announced at the general meeting at Wilson School, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 3. An adult from the family must be present to accept the award.

Chaplain (COL) Sterling Weatherell, judge for the contest, will select the winning name.

If more than one contestant suggests a winning name, the winner will be decided by a drawing.

For more information or additional entry forms, contact the Lavoie Community Life Center.

BG Mueller named new assistant commandant

Paul J. Mueller Jr., who was promoted to brigadier general at Ft. Benning Monday, has been named Assistant Commandant of The Infantry School.

BG Mueller, presently Deputy Assistant Commandant, will succeed BG William R. Richardson, who will assume command of the 193rd Inf Bde at Ft. Amador in the Canal Zone in mid-November.

Mrs. Mueller assisted MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning Commander, in pinning the star insignia on her husband. An honors ceremony for the new general officer followed on York Field.

BG Mueller, a 1950 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, has served in his present position since coming to Ft. Benning from Washington, where he was Executive to the Vice Chief of Staff of the Army from August 1972 until July 1973.

A former Company Tactics instructor at The Infantry School, BG Mueller has had two tours of duty in the Republic of Vietnam. From September, 1967, until August, 1968, he was a Province Senior Advisor, and, returning to the war zone in January, 1970, he became Commander of the 1st Bde, 25th Inf Div. From July, 1970, until January, 1971, he was Senior Adviser to the 1st Army of the Republic of Vietnam Division.

BG Mueller is a native of Washington, D.C. He graduated from the Command and General Staff College in 1959, the Armed Forces Staff College in 1964 and the U.S. Army War College in 1967.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit with three Oak Leaf Clusters, the Air Medal with seven Oak Leaf Clusters, the Bronze Star with "V" and one Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Purple Heart.

BG and Mrs. Mueller have four children, Elizabeth, Margaret, Sarah and Paul III.

197th takes on new commander

BG William B. Steele will relinquish command of the 197th Inf Bde to COL Joseph E. Wasiak in a change of command ceremony to be held on York Field at 2:30 p.m. Friday, September 20.

Steele assumed command of the brigade Mar. 21, 1973 at the same time the unit was reorganized as a Strategic Forces (STRAF) brigade. He commanded the brigade through its critical transition from a school support unit to combat-ready status.

During his command the 197th made advancements in the fields of recruiting and human relations as well as the completion of Basic Unit Training, Advanced Unit Training, Army Training Tests and Operational Readiness Tests by elements of the brigade.

BG Steele served as the Secretary, USAIS, before joining the 197th. He was promoted to BG August 30, 1974.

COL Wasiak comes to Ft. Benning from Ft. Bliss, Texas, where he served as the Chief of Studies, Analysis and Literature Division, U.S. Army Nuclear Agency since June, 1973.

From July 1967 to July 1968 he served in Vietnam with the 1st Cav Div as the Assistant Chief of Staff G-5, Deputy Commander of the 3rd Bde, and Commander of the 1st Bn, 7th Cav. From Aug. 1970 through June 1971 COL Wasiak served as Military Assistant to the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense (Atomic Energy) and from June 1971 to June 1973 he served as Special Assistant to the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense (Atomic Energy).

COL Wasiak is a graduate of U.S. Military Academy and holds a Master of Science degree in nuclear engineering from the University of Arizona. He is also a graduate of the National War College in Washington, D.C.

The Ft. Benning Officers' Wives' Club will hold their Fall Tea on Riverside Lawn from 1-3 p.m., September 18.

The grounds of the stately, white columned mansion, home of the commanding general of Ft. Benning, will form the backdrop for an afternoon of Southern hospitality. Hostesses for the tea will be the ladies of the Ranger Department.

The program will include a brief welcome speech by MG Thomas M. Tarpley, commanding general of Ft. Benning. A special musical program will include a medley from "Fiddler on the Roof" by the Springer Opera House Players and organ music on the porch of Riverside by Mrs. John M. Riddle. In case of inclement weather, the tea will be held at the Main Officers' Club.

Ride the 'Goat'

Youngsters attending the annual Association of the U.S. Army picnic on Saturday, Sept. 21, will have the opportunity to ride the "Gamma Goat," a new Army vehicle that is replacing the ton and a quarter truck as a basic troop and equipment hauler. The "Gamma Goat," shown above, will be one of several rides available at the picnic. Pony rides and rides on other Army vehicles will also be a part of the afternoon activities. (US Army Photo)

AUSA picnic tickets going like hotcakes

Tickets for the annual Association of the United States Army (AUSA) picnic scheduled for Sept. 21 at Victory Lodge on Ft. Benning are now on sale.

Outlets for the tickets are the Columbus and Phenix City Chambers of Commerce, local banks, the Infantry Center Information Office (Infantry Hall, Room 604), and from Sergeants Major on post. The cost ($2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children 3 to 12 years of age) will include food and drinks, pony rides, fire engine rides and rides aboard Army vehicles.

The annual picnic, open to AUSA members, their families and guests, will get underway at 1 p.m. and will end at 6 p.m.

This year's event will feature such activities as a skydiving exhibition, Ranger demonstration, Scout Dog shows and music by the Infantry Center band and the Infantry Chorus.

"We have made special plans for food this year," SGM Charles L. McCray, military coordinator for the event, said. "Food will be served throughout the afternoon so there will be no waiting line."

This year's picnic menu will be topped by whole pigs barbecued on a spit, and will also feature hotdogs, hamburgers, barbecued chicken, potato salad, club salad, cole slaw and drinks.

In addition to the food, rides and demonstrations, picnic goers this year will be able to see some of the latest Army equipment on display.

WWII structures up for bids

Thirteen wooden type structures at Ft. Benning will be disposed of in the near future as the opening phase of a program to remove excess and outmoded buildings on post.

The buildings, all constructed in the early World War II era, will be offered for sale to the general public on a sealed bid basis, through the Savannah District, United States Army Corps of Engineers.

The first 13 structures to be disposed of are located in the Harmony Church area.

The Directorate of Facilities Engineering (DFAE) is aiming this sale towards individual civilian and military buyers rather than large contractors. The sale will give the average citizen an opportunity to purchase excellent scrap wood for home repairs and other projects at low cost, a spokesman said.

This sale, and others projected for the future, are part of the "Cleaning Up the Environment" program at Ft. Benning. Once the buildings are sold and removed, the areas will be cleared and beautified through engineer efforts.

Persons interested in receiving information on the sale should contact the Environmental Management Division on or after Sept. 13 by telephoning 545-2812-4957. Prospective purchasers will then be provided with an invitation to bid, specifications of the sale and details on the buildings, such as size and location.

The date indicated on the invitation is the date the bidding will begin. Prospective buyers will have 30 days from this date to bid on one of the structures.

The DFAE is making the sale terms and bid specifications as lenient and advantageous to the buyer as possible.

Successful bidders will be required to dismantle and remove the structures from Ft. Benning at their own expense after time periods for removal are agreed upon.

This sale is a pilot program for an overall plan to dispose of a large number of excess and outmoded structures on post during the next year. Other buildings will be offered for sale as soon as engineers prepare them for disposal.

A First Race relations course visited by soldier's wife

PFC Albrets, of C Co, 43rd Engr Bn, has just accomplished something that very few men have managed. Instead of going off to a military school and leaving his wife behind, he brought her along with him — right into the classroom, and she turned out to be an active participant in the 36th Engr Gp. Race Relations Moderator Course.

The Moderators Course was designed to help soldiers moderate and instruct personnel through small group discussion seminars.

SSG Robert Adams, of the 36th Engr Gp, a principal instructor of the Moderator Course, commented on her attendance.

"Mrs. Albrets was just as active as the rest of the group here. We have a 'good thing' going now with dependents participating, and I sincerely hope that this is just the beginning. Racism is slowly beginning to deteriorate within the ranks, and with the soldier's dependents actively participating in programs of this nature, they can help generate racial harmony at home and abroad."

"I enjoyed being able to attend this class," admits Mrs. Albrets, "because I've gained a whole new insight on racial cultures. The part I relished the most was the class discussions and interacting, when each person was allowed to express their own opinion, and then others were allowed to criticize, if necessary, or state their opinion or evaluation."

"I highly recommend that other soldiers' wives participate in programs such as this, because it eliminates some of the myths or rumors that were originally created by racism."

Voting

Your obligation, not just your right

By William D. Sams

Election time is the time when all Americans can voice an opinion in the political structure of our country. For almost 200 years this nation's governing body has been selected by the people, for the people.

Years have elapsed into centuries while a nation has grown stronger with free Americans exercising their right to vote.

An individual may express his personal opinion by casting a vote; the key to the ballot box.

There was a time in American history when only certain members of society were given the privilege to vote. Voting is no longer a privilege.

Voting is a constitutional right afforded all Americans. Many American citizens who grumble and gripe about the "poor state of the nation" are usually the same ones who sit at home during election time.

Unfortunately, election time seems to present the best opportunity for the American voter to sit back and "let someone else do it."

We are living in a modern generation where people are no longer kept from voicing their opinions because of financial status, ethnic importance, or racial background.

The right to vote is no longer reserved just for the select few holding large amounts of wealth and property.

Voting is everyone doing their share to elect government officials who will represent them and not the man with the most money.

During the early 20th century women and many minority groups gained the right to vote. Only in recent years has the right to vote been altered. Men and women may now vote at age 18, regardless of race, creed, sex or religion. If a person is considered old enough by the government, to fight in a war, then that person should be allowed to vote for the people representing him in government office.

Election time is a time when all Americans can voice an opinion to build a freedom foundation for a more democratic structure.

VOTE! It's your obligation, not just your right.

Something new mid-week church services started at Harmony Church

"Never on a Sunday. Well, sometimes, but on a Thursday?" were comments by soldiers of the 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde who attend the mid-week church services at Chapel No. 3 in Harmony Church from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. each Thursday.

Miss Linda Wilson, the newly crowned Miss Ft.
Benning, was present for last week's services and commented, "It's a real nice idea to have church services in the middle of the week." She joined in with the choir composed of soldiers of Co C, 197th Spt Bn to sing several songs during the service.

SP4 Gary Desha, the chaplain assistant at Chapel
Three, gave some details on how the mid-week services started. "The support battalion didn't have a chaplain assigned. The soldiers had to go to Chapel
One on Sundays and worship with the 2/69th Armor and Troop A, 15th Cav. With the help of LTC

Ellis R. Morris, the support battalion commander, we were able to open this chapel to serve the men of the battalion. There was still the problem of having services on Sundays because the chaplain had two services at Chapel One. That's when we decided on a mid-week service here," Desha concluded.

In the 197th Inf Bde, an all volunteer unit, many soldiers go home on weekends as often as possible.

This has caused them to miss services on Sundays when they may not have wanted to.

"Before, the battalion could only help the men with their responsibilities for knowing their jobs and being physically fit. Now, with the implementation of the mid-week services, the unit can aid them spiritually," stated 2LT Sargent Christian, the executive officer of Co C, 197th Spt Bn.

City policemen attend marksmanship clinic

Two members of the Columbus Police Department are among 29 law enforcement officers and military special weapons trainees who are attending a ten day marksmanship clinic conducted by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. Attending from the Columbus Police force are Patrolmen David Schofield and Bruce Robinson.

The ten day course, presented by some of the top Army shooter/instructors, includes both classroom instruction and range operations. The classroom periods cover the basic fundamentals of marksmanship, sight alignment, body positioning, trigger control, disassembly and assembly of weapons and care and proper cleaning of weapons.
The instructors, which includes many of the national champions in both handgun and rifle competition; stress gun handling safety, range precautions, mental discipline, concentration and target identification.

The law officers are given particular emphasis on marksmanship accuracy. The techniques and fundamentals for accomplishing this goal, including breath control and body stance, are continually stressed by the Army champions.

On the ranges, the students will receive lectures along with associated demonstrations on the effects of weather, sight alignment and adjustments, engaging targets and zeroing. They will also have the opportunity of trying their new found skills at engaging and hitting movement targets on the US Army Marksmanship's Skeet Range.

The students, representing states from the southeastern United States and Atlantic seaboard areas, include law officers from Vermont, Virginia, Illinois, Louisiana, Tennessee and Georgia.

Columbus Police Officers have always worked closely with the Army Marksmanship Unit in their training and many local law officers have attended instruction courses to include firing demonstrations given by the Championship Unit in the past years.

Ticket punching on the way out . . . but progress still made through certain pattern

By Howard Hodge

An outdated phrase "ticket punching" is on its way out of today's Army, but we must still progress through a certain career pattern. The jobs and schools are necessary for both experience and uniformity. As an officer progresses through a military career he should seek the necessary programs to develop his leadership, professionalism and career expectations.

The Command and General Staff College resident course is a very desirable course to attend, but not many Reserve officers are selected. In fact the Reserve Officer's chances of attending the resident course at Leavenworth are practically nil. For active duty officers who plan to make the Army a career, an excellent opportunity beckons right in Columbus: The USAR School offers the C & GS course.

There are very few officers who know if they will be chosen to attend the resident course.

But there are two alternate routes to the objective of a C & GS college diploma. One is the correspondence course offered by Ft. Leavenworth; the other is the USAR School extension course. Regardless of which course you select they are both designed to parallel each other, and provide interchangeability on a world-wide basis.

Enrollment in either of these courses is not a bar selection for attending the resident course, but completion is. For those who complete the course and are considered for the resident course, they most likely would be sent to the Armed Forces War College.

Now, let's take a look at the two most accessible routes to a C & GS diploma. First, the correspondence course is an excellent means whereby qualified officers can obtain the C & GS diploma. The course is well designed and is comprehensive and challenging. If you are suited to the self study method, enrollment is strongly encouraged. The average time for completion of this method is 3 to 4 years working at your own pace.

The second alternative is the Command and General Staff extension course offered by the 3249 USAR School located on Macon Road across from Sears. This extension course offers many advantages. The diploma awarded upon completion is just as valid as those awarded to resident course grads. The instructors are qualified C & GS graduates. The school is located in an easily accessible area. The classes meet on Monday or Wednesday nights from 7 to 11 p.m. There are 24 class sessions from September through May, plus a two week TDY summer camp in Hattiesburg, MS. The school offers flexibility in makeup classes for absentees, and there are two authorized absences each 24 sessions. If the Army moves you to another post state side, you can pick up right where you left off when you arrive at your next duty station. For those who PCS to Europe, there are eleven USAR schools; one should be near you. If you PCS to Korea or another area without a USAR school, you can use the correspondence course and move on toward completion.

By attending USAR school here you have the opportunity to attend and discuss the subject matter with peers. You benefit from interaction with others as opposed to self study. The staff are local businessmen highly dedicated to the reserve program, and if a problem arises during the school they will do everything possible to help you along. For example, if you attend Monday night and later in the year you find a conflict on a Monday night; with a little coordination on your part, you can attend the Wednesday night class and not miss a beat.

Enrollment in the program provides a "hedge" in case you're not selected for the resident course. This way an officer who is not selected can stay abreast of his contemporaries.

For the young captain or major, having the Command and General Staff College Diploma can improve his standing among his contemporaries and possibly lead to selection for resident attendance at other desirable service schooling.

The officer who partially completes the USAR school courses and is subsequently selected for the resident course is better prepared for Leavenworth than most officers who have had no instruction in the course.

If you are interested in furthering your career through participation in the USAR School Program, contact Mr. Brown Nicholson, telephone 324-3411.

The Bayonet, Sept. 13, 1974

Miniature village opened at Buckner Range

In recent ceremonies, MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning's commander, officially opened six newly constructed miniature villages at Ft. Benning.

Buckner Range, once a heavily wooded range, has been miniaturized by the Artillery Committee of the Infantry School, led by LTC Thomas E. Fitzgerald, to provide more realistic training for the Infantryman.

Six miniature villages have been constructed which include 75 buildings, four churches, and six water towers. They are all connected by miniature highways and a miniature airport has been constructed for additional realism.

The range is built on a 1:5,000 scale for use with the M31 training device, which fires a 14.5mm shell, instead of using regular artillery. This most realistic accurate range enables the student to use the same techniques of fire adjustment as for regular artillery fires under actual combat conditions.

An annual savings of about $60,000 can be realized, because each round for the training device costs approximately $1, while each round of the regular ammunition cost approximately $57.

In opening ceremonies, MG Tarpley fired the first round re-dedicating Buckner Range. Then those officers for whom the six villages were named, were called upon to fire a round to dedicate their name sakes.

BG William R. Richardson, assistant commander of the Army Infantry School dedicated Richardson, Ga., COL Lawrence Mowery, Moweryton, Ga., COL Joseph R. Franklin, Franklinville, Ga., LTC Thomas E. Fitzgerald, Fitzburg, Ga. and COL Russell A. Weathersby, Weathersby, Ga.

LTC Robert H. Allison, 2/10th FA commander, dedicated Lewis Heights, Ga. for BG Vernon B. Lewis who was assigned here as the Artillery Committee chairman and chief of the Combat Support Group. He is presently the Assistant Commandant of the artillery school at Ft. Sill, Okla.

Foster Freeway was named after SFC Edward Foster for his support in the operation.

After the informal dedications, MG Tarpley formally opened Buckner Range with the ribbon cutting ceremony at the Buckner Range miniature airport.

Anderson demonstrates Inf equipment to cadets

On Sept. 11, MSG Michael S. Anderson, Operations Sergeant US Army Materiel, Command, Infantry Research and Development Liaison Office, Ft. Benning, Ga., presented a display-briefing to ROTC cadets, faculty, staff and students at Old Dominion College, Norfolk, Va. Anderson explained the mission of his office and demonstrated a wide variety of recently standardized Infantry individual soldier equipment. He showed several items still in the development process of evaluation and testing that may become items of issue in the future to Infantry soldiers.

Among the many items of clothing and equipment on display were individual combat rations, all purpose lightweight carrying equipment, foot gear, shelters, foul weather gear and weapons-munitions.

The USAMC Infantry Liaison Office conducts many displays and briefings at Ft. Benning and throughout the US at a number of colleges, universities, and military installations on a year-round basis.

Infantry units desiring to receive a similar briefing-display are invited to contact the commander, USAMC Infantry Research and Development Liaison Office, Ft. Benning, Ga. Their phone number is 545-2052/2466. One month lead time should be planned in order that appropriate and timely coordination can be accomplished.

Rosh Hashana begins ten days of penitence

Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur and Sukkos are holidays that highlight the most active time of the year on the Jewish religious calendar. It is the time of the Jewish New Year, a time for setting right man's record before his maker.

Rosh Hashana, the New Year, begins sundown, Sept. 16 and ends sunset, Sept. 18. According to tradition, it is a day for Divine judgement in which the Lord inscribes the names of the righteous in the Book of Life for the next year, and ten days of penitence begin.

The days of penitence are ended with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. It is a day of fasting and disciplining the body. The traditional final blow of the ram's horn, or Shofar, signals the end of the days of penitence. Yom Kippur is observed from sundown, Sept. 25 through sunset, Sept. 28.

The Festival of Sukkos, of the Feast of Tabernacles, will be celebrated for nine days, beginning Sept. 30 through Oct. 9. The first two days and the last two days of Sukkos are days of holy obligation.

Babysitting services will be offered this year on Sept. 17, 18 and 26 in Bldg. 2605. For more information contact the Jewish Center at 545-3874/7843.

DOD sets apart time to pay attention to voting procedure

September 24 has been designated Armed Forces Voter's Day by Department of Defense. The day is a time for eligible soldier voters and their families to focus attention on the general election and voting procedures.

According to 2LT William Stoebe, voting officer for HHC, 36th Engrs, "the men are being informed of voting procedures in city and state wide elections through bulletin board notices and announcements in morning formations."

LT Stoebe also stated, "For soe of the men this is their first time voting in any type of election."

"Voting officers throughout the 36th Engr Gp are doing everything possible to provide information to the soldier urging him to vote," he said.

"It is the privilege of every man and woman to exercise his or her right to vote," Stoebe concluded.

Service members are encouraged to contact their voting officer for information about absentee ballots and other voting procedures in the exercise of an important part of citizenship.

ALONG THE FEMLINE

BY JUDY JAKUBOWSKI
NCOWC LUNCHEON

Morrison's Cafeteria, in Cross Country Plaza is the scene for this month's NCOWC luncheon, on Sept. 18 at 1 p.m. Reservation deadline is noon today. Hostesses are Dorris Musgrove, 561-2927 and Rita Flagg, 687-1768.

Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, Superintendent of Ft. Benning Dependents' Schools, launches the membership drive of the Benning Education Association. Watching him complete the form to become the first member is Owen T. Ditchfield, president-elect of BEA. The local organization is an affiliate of the Georgia Association of Educators and the National Education Association which promote professionalism in teaching and protect teacher rights and welfare. Last year, 171 educators belonged to BEA. (Photo by Robert Pecher.)

SCHOOL OF DANCE

A new dance class, in Modern Jazz, begins Sept. 17 at 6:30 p.m. in the OWC School of Dance. The class is opened to all military personnel and dependents 10 years or older. For further information, call Judy Johnson, 689-6135.

RIVERSIDE TOUR

Army Community Service is sponsoring a tour of Riverside through the cooperation of Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley, Riverside, the historic home of Ft. Benning Post Commander, 100 Vibbert, will be open to the public for a conducted tour from 1-5 p.m. on Sept. 15.

A donation to the Ft. Benning ACS Foodlocker will be accepted at the door. The emergency foodlocker assists 60-90 military families per month. Various units on post donate food each month but this does not always meet the need. Canned and dried staples such as canned fruits and vegetables, dried milk, dried vegetables, and packaged one meal dinners are acceptable. Home canned goods are not accepted.

WHO, WHAT WHERE

BY JACKIE ROBKE
NCOW

The NCO Wives Club kicked off the Annual Membership Drive with a Hail and Farewell Coffee at the Clubhouse. Hostesses were Mrs. Mildred Fuller and Mrs. Clarence Kelley.

Mrs. Thurston Massey, membership chairman, will present a silver tea service to the lady bringing most new members to the club at the Annual Membership Tea in Nov. Remember, ladies, to be eligible to participate, you must be a member in good standing.

197th Inf. Bde

The ladies of the 197th Bde. attended a tea given in honor of Mrs. William B. Steele, wife of outgoing commander, BG William B. Steele. Hostesses for the event were wives of the battalion commanders, Mesdames T. Haines Hill, Warren Walton, Ellis Morris, Richard Gillem, Theodore Voorhees and Robert Allison.

Free parking is available. Volunteers will be on hand for child care during the tour.

If possible, come at the times indicated by your last initial: A-G, 1-2 p.m.; H-M, 2-3; N-S, 3-4; T-Z, 4-5 p.m.

OWC TEA AT RIVERSIDE

Join the Ft. Benning Officers' Wives' Club at their Fall Tea, Sept. 18, on Riverside Lawn from 1-3 p.m. The grounds of the stately white columned mansion, home of the commanding general of Ft. Benning, will form the backdrop for an afternoon on Southern Hospitality. Hostesses for the tea will be the ladies of the Ranger Department.

The program will include a brief welcome speech by MG Thomas M. Tarpley, commanding general of Ft. Benning. A special musical program will include a medley from "Fiddler on the Roof" by the Springer Opera House Players and organ music on the porch of Riverside by Mrs. John M. Riddle.

Don't forget to make advance reservations for your children at Tot Town Nursery.

In case of inclement weather, the Tea will be held at the Main Officers' Club.

Special guests for the afternoon, punctuated by "thank you's" and "remember when's," rather than farewells, were Mesdames William R. Richardson, Robert L. Rollier and Robert Brumback.

197th Spt. Bn

The ladies of the 197th Spt Bn met at the home of Mrs. Allen Templeton for a "Salad Bonanza." Welcomed by Mrs. Ellis Morris were new members, Mrs. John Walker and Mrs. John Roddy.

Mrs. Templeton presented Mrs. Morris with a silver fruit bowl as an expression of thanks and bid her a sad, but fond farewell on behalf of the ladies.

'Ole Doc Says

Get that physical for the big leagues

Howdy Bub. I drove over to Spud's Barber Parlour this mornin' to get my weekly trim, an' catch up on the latest happenins' in our fair city, as is my custom. Spud wasn't busy, so I wuz able to flop into a chair 'thout havin' to wait. He beganst to clip away at my hair, an' wuz jes gettin' to the point of tellin' me who Kay Ellen Knutson's new sultr wuz, when Billy Bob walked in an' flopped onto the wicker couch, like he wuz waitin' for his turn for a haircut. He sat there, not sayin' anythin' for 'bout five minutes, an' when I couldn't stand it no more, I ast him how he wuz doin'.

Well sir, that innocent question of mine opened the floodgates of Billy Bob's mind. First, he ast me if I would do a physical examination on him this afternoon. I allowed that I could, but that he looked pretty healthy to me, an' I really didn't think that he needed one. Billy Bob stood hisself up outta that couch, stuck his thumbs under his 'spenders, an' tole me that he needed a good physical exam 'cause he'd jes been drafted by a professional football team, an' they wouldn't stand for no jes average-type goin' over, an' if he didn't get it done right they mos' likely wouldn't let him play next Sunday afternoon.

I glanced into the mirror to try an' get Spud's eye, but he wouldn't return my look. Even though I knowed better, I ast Billy Bob what Looney-Tune team had drafted him. He paused, to get the full dramatic effect, an' 'nounced that he wuz a bona fide member of a team by the name of, "Mom's Apple-Pie." I liked to have fallen right outta that barber chair, but Spud steadied me, some, an' kept me upright. Billy Bb went on to say that, after some stiff competition, he had been selected to play the "Shortening" position, which is to say, that is the same position that usta be called the Split-End Receiver.

He went on 'bout this new Universal Football League that had they's own teams, an' better'n that, they had their own terms for the different player's positions. Like on his team, the quarterback wuz called, "Recipe," and the "Crust" wuz the defensive team, an' the "Apples" wuz, naturally, the offensive team.

He kept talkin', and Spud had quit clippin', and wuz jes standin' with his mouth open; an' kinda saggin' as Billy Bob tole us that the Place Kicker wuz referred to as, "Cinnamon," and the coaches wuz the "Pie-Tin," that held it all together, an' then he wanted us to guess what they called the stadium, but I refused to bite on that one an' commenced to leave the premis fast's I could, but as I wuz gettin' my hat, Billy Bob says, "Oven," that's what they calls the stadium 'cause that's where it all turns into "Mom's Apple-Pie."

As I made for the door, I heard Billy Bob tell Spud that their first opponent wuz goin' to be a team that wuz called The Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich," the last thing I heard, as the door wuz closin' ahind me, wuz Billy Bob sayin' that the fella playin' across from his position wuz called a "Raspberry."

Well Bub, iffen you get drafted by one of them new teams, be sure that you get yoreself a mighty good physical examination. You know that you ain't in as good physical shape as you usta be, so use yore common sense, afore it's too late. Also, keep in mind that iffen one of yore tads is goin' to play with the Little Leaguers this year, why he needs a physical jes as much as you do. By the way, I'm the team doctor for that other expansion team called, "The Peach Cobbler With Whipped Cream." I'm the whipped cream, 'cause we're the only team in the league with a full time medic on the sidelines. See ya at the game! Good health to you and yours.

Tennis tourney slated

CHAPLAINS AT FT. BENNING: MORE THAN 'SUNDAY GO TO MEETIN'

By Ileana H. Horen

With the birth of the Chaplains Corps on July 29, 1976, came a group of men who served "so that soldiers shall not march alone."

Supervising this elite group of men at Ft. Benning today is Chaplain (COL) Sterling A. Wetherell, the USAIC chief chaplain. "Every chaplain at Ft. Benning is a fully qualified clergyman," says Chaplain Wetherell. "Their talents and services to the total religious life of all personnel assigned, their dependents and retired military people in Columbus, are an invaluable asset to the commander and the community of Ft. Benning."

Many of the 22 Ft. Benning chaplains perform more than just basic pastoral duties. Chaplain (CPT) Anthony W. L. Hollis, for instance, is in charge of the post's pre-marital seminars. He explained that the seminars are not intended to take the place of religious counseling, but to augment it. The seminar examines the individual's role and communication between two people. Chaplain Hollis, along with a doctor and a lawyer, holds the seminar once a month for couples about to be married.

"We present an opportunity for exposure to professional persons that the individuals will be involved with in married life," the chaplain said.

As chaplain of the hospital, he has also been responsible for chaplain activities at Benning House, where he conducted continuing religious rap sessions. "These sessions explored the religious and spiritual values as an alternative to drugs," he explained. He also conducted interaction groups, which were designed to permit a person to examine himself through his peers. "They worked on the premise that in order for a man to be honest, he must be open," Chaplain Hollis noted.

Another chaplain involved in the Ft. Benning drug and alcohol program here was Chaplain (CPT) Thomas R. Fraker. Some 50 people were involved in his 6-week rehabilitation program, based on the idea that drugs aren't a problem, but are a symptom of low self-esteem.

He also initiated a program for dependent schools, entitled "Life's Natural Highs." The two-hour program gave children an opportunity to define highs (for happy) and lows (for sad).

Another of Chaplain Fraker's programs was his problem solving seminars. At battalion level, this program trains NCO's and officers in the basic techniques of counseling.

As a part of his education and liturgy program, Chaplain (CPT) George W. Guduz has organized several retreats. The weekend at Holy Trinity Retreat House, in Blessed Trinity, AL, gives his congregation an opportunity to learn more about their faith, themselves and their place in the universe, he explained.

They participate in discussions and periods of meditation, and mass is celebrated. Chaplain Guduz said more people want to go than funds permit. "It's a great way to spend a weekend, away from everyone and everything," he concluded.

At the "high" spirited end of the chaplaincy is Chaplain (CPT) James Coppedge, the Airborne chaplain. Jumping at least once with each class, Chaplain Coppedge feels that his main responsibility is visibility among his troops and permanent party personnel. "They want to see you," he said, "not only in the training area, but in the chow halls and off duty. It gives them confidence to see a chaplain jumping with them, too."

Having been in the Air Force, the chaplain feels that Army chaplains spend more time with the troops, rather than in an office. He is also available to all members of the 4th Stu Bn for interviews, guidance, counseling and spiritual help.

Chaplain (CPT) John R. Kelly, (CPT) Wayne Smith and (LTC) Robert D. Crick recently participated in a "Duty Day with God" for a number of soldiers being held in confinement. Some 20 men spent the day at Holy Trinity Retreat House and participated in a problem solving seminar.

"For some of them," commented Chaplain Kelly, "it provided an opportunity to look at themselves as responsible persons."

Chaplain Smith noted, "We set it up with a hidden agenda to let them learn for themselves how to cope with their problems."

One of Chaplain (CPT) John K. Allyn's projects was a Human Self-Development Retreat. Financed with TRADOC grant funds, it was designed to help Racial Awareness Program (RAP) moderators learn through structured experiences. Twenty men from the 36th Engr Gp went to the Holy Trinity Retreat House for the exercise.

The chaplain's pet project is his Human Resources Office. Because the members of his office enjoyed working with people, they saw an opportunity to put their talents to use. The chaplain, his race relations monitors, his drug and alcohol abuse counselors and an ACS contact named the office and are enjoying the results, according to Chaplain Allyn.

"It gives us freedom in that our people can follow up on helping others where there is a need," he noted.

Chaplains (CPT) Billy J. Price and (CPT) William Brander are busy working in McGraw and LaVoie Manors. The LaVoie Community Life Center where Chaplain Price works has been modeled after the McGraw Manor concept of a total community.

Chaplain Price explained that the Army is moving towards the concept of assigning a chaplain to a community, rather than to troops. "My primary duty is as pastor to the community," he said. "The concept is to let the people run the program."

As the only Jewish chaplain at Ft. Benning, Chaplain (CPT) Glenn M. Stengel has unique responsibilities. On Friday nights he always has single Jewish men and women to his home for Sabbath dinner before worship services at the chapel.

"It's a very informative and religious experience for them," he commented. "It often brings memories of their religious childhood." His guests sing Sabbath hymns and discuss religious teachings.

Chaplain Stengel also arranges the delivery of Kosher food to men going in the field so they can adhere to their religious principles. In addition, the chaplain teaches Hebrew in the evenings to adults.

Coordinating the operations of all the Ft. Benning chaplains is Chaplain (MAJ) Lawrence A. Kelly Jr. Not only does he coordinate all the administrative actions from higher headquarters, but Chaplain Kelly is the custodian of the USAIC chaplains fund, which is a non-appropriated fund. The majority of this fund is derived from chapel offerings.

"I'm also the 'bullpen or relief preacher,'" Chaplain Kelly explained. "I relieve chaplains when they go on leave or TDY."

The Airborne chaplain spends time with men in the field, as well as in the air. Chaplain (CPT) James Coppedge feels that his main responsibility is visibility among his troops.

Chaplain (CPT) Anthony W.L. Hollis visits SPS Robert L. Mitchum and his wife during his daily rounds at Martin Hospital. As the hospital chaplain, he is also responsible for chaplain activities at Benning House.

When the men can't go to church, church goes to the men. Chaplain (CPT) Charles J. Davis provides a religious atmosphere for Ranger Students during training.

"I'm taking it one hitch at a time."

Although SP/5 Richard M. Draper has only been in the Army for five years, he has his own idea of what it means to be a careerist. "To me, that's a guy who stays in the Army because he likes what he's doing, and not because he's afraid of what it might be like somewhere else.

"One of the things I like about the Army is the opportunity you have to try out new ideas. You know, you're given the responsibility to get a certain job done, but you can be inventive.

"I like to try out new jobs, too. In fact, I've just parked my truck (my primary MOS is Heavy Equipment Operation and Repair) and I'm training to be a Hometown Recruiter.

"So as long as I'm happy with what I'm doing I'm not going to worry about the future. I'm taking it one hitch at a time."

Today's Army gets better every time a good man reenlists.

CLOSING OF SWIMMING POOLS

Recreation Services Swimming Pools located at Harmony Church, Kelley Hill and Custer Terrace will be closed to the public for the season effective Sept. 9. Carey Pool, Main Post, and Sand Hill Pool will remain open until Sept. 15.

CHILDREN'S CHOIR

The Ft. Benning Children's Choir meets each Tuesday, 4-5 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Dixie Road. All children in the grades 3 through 6 are invited to attend. The choir sings monthly at a chapel and on special occasions. For additional information contact the Director of Religious Education, 545-4334 or 545-2366.

ENGLISH CLASSES

English Classes for non-English speaking persons are held each Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m., Bldg. 2605, Religious Education Center, Dixie Road and each Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. at McBride School. Wives of American Service Men and Allied officers or any adult non-English speaking person are invited to attend.

Teachers are volunteers and a free nursery is provided. To register for the classes, call the Director of Religious Education at 545-4334 or 545-2366.

IN-SERVICE GI BILL

All military personnel are encouraged to initiate a program in education while on active duty to prepare for a career upon leaving the service. Personnel presently utilizing Army Tuition Assistance Funds in lieu of the GI Bill are advised that tuition assistance has been curtailed for commissioned personnel in graduate programs. Further reductions may be necessary.

Establishment of a final educational or professional goal with VA to obtain a Certificate of Eligibility for a program can be accomplished prior to registration with a school or college and expediate reimbursement of out of pocket tuition costs by VA. See a counselor at the Education Center to initiate this action. Call 545-7768 for further information.

VEHICLE REGISTRATION

The Vehicle Registration Branch, Bldg 83, is now open, effective Sept. 9, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday for vehicle registration and weapons registration and clearing. For further information call 545-4591.

WANTED: OHIO VETS

The Ohio Vietnam Veterans' Bonus Commission has stated that approximately 200,000 of the estimated 500,000 eligible bonus veterans have not filed.

A veteran or serviceman need not actually have served in Vietnam to be eligible. He must have been a legal resident of Ohio for at least one full year immediately before going on active duty.

Pioneers

opening new season of flag-football

The 1/29th Inf (Pioneers), TSB opened their flag football season Wednesday, Co A of the 1/29th defeating Hq and Spt Co, 6-0.

Charles Ledbetter of Co A picked off a Hq pass and ran the ball 65 yds. for the touchdown and the only score of the game. It was almost 12-0 about four plays later, but Billy Mathis of Hq & Spt knocked down a long pass intended for Sandy McPherson.

Hq Co threatened as the first half ended, when quarterback Charles Dahl dropped a long bomb near the goal line . . . but into the arms of an opposing player.

Bruce LaPorte kicked a tremendous punt to open up the second half of the game, forcing the Co A players to begin at their own 15 yard line. Sandy McPherson and his run-dominated offense drove the ball upfield to within 10 yards of the goal, but failed to score.

Charles Ledbetter (left), Co A; 1/29th Inf, TSB jumps for joy as he crosses the Hq & Spt Co goal line. Ledbetter scored the only touchdown of the game, as Co A won, 6-0. Bruce

With less than two minutes to play, the Hq clerks seemed to catch fire behind the direction of team captain, Billy Mathis.

Quarterback Charles Dahl completed two long passes to Bruce LaPorte — but both were called back due to penalties at the line. On the third down, Dahl hit Allen Holmes with a forty yard pass, but it, too, was called back because of a penalty. Co A opted to run the down over, and this time Dahl was caught napping at the goal line before he could throw the ball.

Only twenty seconds remained on the clock as Hq punted on their fourth down play, giving Co A possession. On the first play however, Winford Russell of Hq & Spt intercepted a pass and he headed down field in a futile attempt to tie the score, the game-ending whistle sounded, giving the clerks their first loss of the season, 6-0.

586th Floatbridge Co. downs 43rd Engr's Co. A

The 586th Floatbridge Co defeated the Co A, 43rd Engrs recently in the "KICK-OFF" game, beginning the flag football season in the 36th Engr Grp.

"Winning the first game possibly resulted from the abundance of sportsmanship and high spirits from everyone on the team," remarked coach LT

Heidi and Enos, two Scout Dogs from the Military Dog Det, 1/29th Inf TSB, are seasoned performers who will participate in the dog shows planned for the annual AUSA picnic Sept. 21 at Victory Lodge. The dogs will jump fire hurdles, leap through burning hoops and do a variety of obedience tricks. Tickets to the picnic are now on sale at the Infantry Center Information Office and from sergeants major on post. The cost, including food and beverages, will be $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children 3-12 years old. Picnic activities open at 1 p.m. and include children's rides, games, demonstrations and displays. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Cliff Elliot.

As one of the first teams organized in the Group, the 586th displayed the qualities of becoming one the "top rated" teams participating in engineer football.

The team exhibited qualities of determination which any "winning" team needs. At half time the 586th was down by 13 points.

"It was a tough first half," admits PFC Matthew Skipper, 586th defensive back, "I noticed the weak spots and in the second half had to make amends for first half mistakes."

As the game drew closer to an end the score was tied 13-13. The rule of "penetration" was inserted into this first game. At the end of regular playing time, if the teams are tied each team is given a series of four downs.

The team which penetrates deepest in the opponents territory in four downs will be declared the winner. The 586th launched their attack with everything they had and carried the ball deep in the 43rd Engr's territory.

197th football soaked in rain

By C. B. Hoover

The second week of 197th Inf Bde football was marred by a multitude of fumbles as the Georgia weather played havoc with the playing abilities of all the teams in the brigade.

The fumbles came fast and furious to include the scheduling of games on Labor Day.

Rain! Rain! Man did the water flow last week, forcing the cancellation of three of the five games scheduled in the 3/7th Inf. There was no action to speak of in the battalion with the two remaining games forfeited by one or the other company.

"Things are slow in the battalion, but we will be making up the games missed from the first of October to the fourth. Right now we have two teams that are looking good and should make it all the way. Those are HHC and Cbt Cpt Co.," commented SGT Vernon B. Lewis of HHC, 3/7th Inf.

A penalty of 65 yards and other shorter ones plagued Svc Bat, 2/10th FA as they dropped their game to HHC. "The umpire sure was messed up. He called back three touchdowns we made. Then to top it off, he called dead balls on us on kick-offs," stated LT Hal B. Sharp of HHC. "To say the least it turned out to be a fiasco." The game was contested and will be replayed later.

"Bad calls?" went against HHC brigade as they suffered their second defeat of the season in as many weeks, losing to the 298th Signal Platoon 14-0. The reverse was true for the 298th Signal as they roared over HHC to prove that they're going to be stiff competition for the rest of the brigade teams. "We're just getting it all together now. We should provide some exciting play for all to see in the next few weeks," stated PFC Ray T. Osborne of the 298th Signal Platoon. "There were some tough calls against HHC. We don't like to beat a team that way."

The old pigskin didn't get too slippery for the paper tigers of Co A, 197th Spt Bn as the tore up Co D by 7-0. The bomb was dropped on Co D to set up the touchdown to leave Co D with a one and one record and Co A with a 2 and 0 record.

Rain took its toll in the remaining game to be played in the support battalion, forcing HHC and Co C to cancel their game.

The men of the 2/69th Armor shut down their engines this week as they started preparing to move to Ft. Stewart for tank gunnery training.

"We may not be playing here, but we will get in a little scrimmaging when we get to Ft. Stewart. There's no better way to relax from training than a good ball game. We should come up with a good team when the time comes," commented CPT David L. Pickel, the S-5 of the 2/69th Armor.

Grinding down to low gear were the teams of the 1/58th Inf. The two scheduled games were forfeited to one of the other teams.

"The outlook for football seems to be growing dim, with all the field duty coming up. We should bet back in high gear come the end of the month," commented SGT Joseph W. Mitchell.

New Wac Co cmdr is 'Army brat'

By Heane H. Horen

Ruth J. Dieringer never thought about coming into the Army until she was no longer in the Army as a dependent. Now 1LT Dieringer is the new commanding officer of the Ft. Benning Wac Co, and she reflects upon her days as an "Army brat" with great pride.

Born in Eufaula, AL, she admits that while her father was in the Army she never paid much attention to her military surroundings. She spent two years in a small Baptist women's school and later received her B.S. from Arizona State University.

Her first assignment in the Army was 16 months as the executive officer for the Wac Battery at Ft. Sill, OK. Having heard about some new courses at the Defense Race Relations Institute, 1LT Dieringer volunteered for the school at Patrick AFB, FL. She was astounded by the exceptional curriculum and instructors. "It was a fantastic service school and a real learning experience," she commented, "but with all the self-determinations and goals stressed, it was ironic to have men always jumping to open doors for me."

After the school, 1LT Dieringer went back to Ft.

Sill as the RREO officer for 14 months. As the new Wac commander, 1LT Dieringer feels that Wac problems are basically the same as any other service member's. "They have some unique problems, just as men do, but this job I have isn't any different than a man's."

1LT Dieringer discussed the coed barracks now coming into existence at several Army installations. "Men see Wacs as getting special favors, but when they're integrated in the same unit they'll see for themselves that it isn't so. Taking the mystery away will solve a lot of problems."

Rod and Gun Club notes

Fishermen off the hook, hunters still under the gun

By Bill Kloeb

Fishermen are off the hook. They don't have to attend the safety orientations to fish on post.

The Post Resources Management Board recommended fishermen not be required to attend and the commanding general approved the recommendation this week.

The fishermen may be off the hook, but hunters are still under the gun. The orientation for hunters will be held in Marshall Auditorium each Wednesday in September at 7 p.m. In all probability more orientations will have to be scheduled for October but anyone who waits that long will also wait for that first hunting trip. The Post Game Wardens plan to start checking post hunting permits for the orientation stamp on Oct. 1.

The large numbers of persons showing up for orientations without post permits are causing problems. A representative from the Rod and Gun Club sets up shop at the auditorium entrance about an hour before orientation time. He sells Georgia state licenses, post permits and Rod and Gun Memberships. The problem is he doesn't have much business until a few minutes before time for the orientation to start. Then a long line forms. Sales are cut off at 7 p.m. with quite a few people still in line.

This makes for frayed nerves; later those involved get uptight when they find they have to go to the Rod and Gun Club for their permit—then to the Provost Marshal Office to have the permit stamped. Unless you have an emergency it's better to get the permit before you attend the orientation.

Permits may be obtained at the Rod and Gun

Club from 10 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Tuesday thru Friday and from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Stalcup Gets Elk Deer

Gene Stalcup, president of the Rod and Gun Club Archery Council, just came back from his annual bow hunting trip to Colorado. He hit the jackpot this time.

The hunting site was the western slope of the Rocky Mountains. Gene bagged a mule deer buck and a 700-pound bull elk. He took both animals with a 48-pound American hunting bow and bear razor head arrows he makes himself. This was the seventh year Stalcup has made the trip to Colorado but previously he had only taken one mule deer buck.

Cub packs ready for field day

Is your child physically fit? Parents of the twenty-two cub packs of the Ft. Benning district will find out on Sept. 14 from 9 a.m. till noon at Doughboy Stadium when the 197th Inf Bde. will be supporting the Cub Scout National Physical Fitness Program.

"This will be the first time the Cub Scout National Fitness Program is being held at Ft. Benning," stated MAJ Layton C. Matt, the committee chairman for Ft. Benning, and the IG for the 197th Inf Bde.

The program schedule includes field events, physical fitness contest and some family participation.

The field events will consist of a 30 yard dash, crab races, 20 yard ball race, hopping races, sack races, and bottle filling races.

The physical fitness contest will consist of standing broad jump, softball throw, modified pushups, modified situps, and the 50 yard dash.

The planned family participation part is to be with the mothers in a nail driving contest, fathers participating in the three legged race with their sons and the cub scouts' sisters in a shoe kicking contest for distance.

The contests will be judged and points awarded in each event.

A pack streamer will be presented to the top three packs with the highest number of points.

The three dens with the highest number of points will receive a den streamer.

First, second, and third place ribbons will be awarded to the winners of the father, son, mother, and sister events.

A 50 cent entrance fee will be charged for each participant and is to be used to cover the cost of a field day participation patch. The patch will be given to each participating cub scout and leader.

Christmas toyland opens soon at Benning Post Exchange

It may seem hard to believe, but it soon will be that time of year again.

The Fort Benning Post Exchange will open its Christmas Toylands Sept. 16, and that means it's time to start making out those gift lists and listening for hints from the anxious younger set.

This year shoppers will have added incentive to beat the yuletide rush. AAFES will feature many specials Sept. 16-through 21 and distribute tabloids and other promotional material that identify "Your Christmas Whistlestop." For the duration of the sale, advertised specials will be backed by the AAFES Rain Check policy.

Although advertised "Whistlestop" specials will be featured only over the week-long sale period, AAFES informs that exchanges will be receiving other excellent buys right along and a wide selection of toys will be available right up until Christmas.

Featured at all toylands will be gift ideas that cover all interests and age groups. These items range from infant pull-toys and stuffed animals through sports equipment, games, dolls, craft sets, bikes and projects that offer educational value in addition to entertainment.

AAFES traditionally unveils its toylands in advance of the commercial selling season. While that sometimes surprises folks not acquainted with the military, soldiers, airmen and their spouses know of the need to shop and mail early to friends and relatives at distant locations.

They also are becoming more and more aware of the advantages of AAFES Layaway. Each year the program grows in popularity because it is a no-charge convenience that allows patrons to pay by installment. With today's inflation, the exchange is anticipating an even greater customer demand to stretch those Christmas budgets by using the layaway program.

Pioneer mess hall leading the way

Army mess halls have traditionally had a 'bad-food' stigma associated with their existence. In recent years, however, great strides have been made in the food-service operations of the Army. Mess halls are now dining facilities, and civilians, not soldiers, pull KP duty. Food preparation and the meals themselves have improved vastly in the past few years.

A soldier now has a choice in the daily menu usually consisting of meat, several vegetables, salad, potatoes, dessert and beverage, or he can opt for a short order menu of hamburger and fries.

The dining facility of Co A, 29th Inf, TSB is the epitome of today's modern day mess hall. The Pioneer facility, headed by SFC Freddie Thomas has been awarded The School Brigade Best Mess award no less than five times since its inception. On September 13, the Co A Mess will receive the Post Best Mess Award for July — this is the fourth time they've received the coveted food award.

Only last week, SFC Thomas and his crew of culinary experts received one of the highest of all possible food service awards. Co A, 1/29th, has been selected to represent Ft. Benning in the competition for the 5th Annual Phillip A. Connelly Award for Food Excellence (small unit category).

The Pioneer Mess will be one of two Ft. Benning facilities undergo the TRADOC phase of the competition to be held Sept. 23.

SFC Benn Ross, the battalion food adviser for the 1/29th is prepared for the inspection. "We have a lot of experience behind us now," Ross said. "I honestly feel we have a very good chance to go all the way this year in the competition."

SFC Ross praised dining facility manager Thomas for his outstanding leadership at the Co A facility. "SFC Thomas has only been the Co A manager for seven months, yet he has already brought home two Post Best Mess awards this year for the Pioneers," Ross said. "His efforts at the Co A Mess," Ross continued, "have been nothing less than phenomenal."

SFC Freddie Thomas had nothing but praise for the cooks and civilian KP's under him. "Being selected to represent the post in the Phillip A. Connelly competition is a great honor for us," Thomas stated. "It is the culmination of a lot of hard work and determination on the part of all the mess personnel and I'm extremely proud of every one of them," he added.

Oct. Pay Raise In

Federal pay raises will go into effect Oct. 1. The Senate rejected President Ford's request to delay the pay raise by a vote of 64 to 35 yesterday. The percentage of the pay raise has not yet been determined, and whether or not it will be computed on the military base pay or all elements of the pay

"FISH EYE" VIEWS—SP4 Wes Fritschley of the Training Aids Division, Directorate of Educational Technology, used a special 'fish-eye' camera lens to take these unusual photographs depicting activities scheduled for the annual Association of the U. S. Army Picnic Saturday at Victory Lodge on the Ft. Benning Reservation. Food, of course, will be one of the many highlights for picnic goers and will include hotdogs, hamburgers and barbecued pork and chicken. One of the Ft. Benning fire trucks will be among the rides available for children (and adults too) during the afternoon. Other photographs and information on this year's picnic are on page 14.

CFC campaign off and running

The 1974 Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign for federal employees of the Ft. Benning - Columbus - Phenix City area kicked off in Marshall Auditorium Tuesday with a meeting for key campaign workers.

Chaplain (COL) Sterling A. Wetherell opened the ceremonies with an invocation.

COL Wallace F. Veaudry, assistant commander, stated in his opening remarks that this year's campaign's goal is $150,000 and Ft. Benning's portion of the goal is $145,000. He said "There will be no arm twisting or coercion, but rather through organization we can reach our goal."

Other speakers in the ceremony were MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Mr. Bee Brown, acting regional director, International Services, Mr. William Myers, Georgia representative of the National Health Agency and Mr. Charles Mize, Columbus and Phenix City's United Way campaign chairman.

Donations to the CFC will help support 45 humanitarian agencies under the local United Way agencies, International Services Agencies and National Health Agencies in the Columbus - Phenix City - Ft. Benning areas.

By giving through the CFC, the donor may make a blanket contribution to be divided among all the agencies, or he may designate his contribution to a specific agency.

Donations to the International Services Agencies supports programs that help people around the world.

CFC is for all

Military personnel and federal civilian workers sometimes hesitate to participate in the Ft. Benning-Columbus-Phenix City Tri-Community Fund Drive because they live outside the geographical limits of these communities.

The funds from the Tri-Community Fund are used for residents of the three communities but agencies receiving these funds also help others.

Last year more than 13,400 residents of Russell County and more than 600 residents of the Cusseta area were helped by Tri-Community agencies.

Bids on buildings still being taken

Sealed bids on 13 wooden type structures to be disposed of at Ft. Benning will be accepted by the Savannah District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers through Oct. 16.

The buildings, constructed in the early 1940 World War II era, are being offered for sale to the general public as the beginning of a program to dispose of excess and outmoded structures on post. The sale is being aimed toward military and civilian buyers to give them an opportunity to purchase scrap lumber for home repairs and other projects at a low cost.

Persons interested in receiving information on the sale should contact the Environmental Management Division, Directorate of Facilities Engineering, by telephoning 545-2812/4957. Prospective purchasers will be provided with an invitation to bid, specifications of the sale and details on the buildings, such as size and location.

Successful bidders will be required to dismantle and remove the structures from Ft. Benning at their own expense.

WO's holding September meet

The Ft. Benning's Chapter U.S. Army Warrant Officer's Association "Professionals" held their monthly meeting at American Legion Post 35 Sept. 12 at which CWO Frank Balus was elected vice president.

The chapter's president, CW4 Bryce C. Gordon, recognized the beginning of the organization of the ladies auxiliary. All warrant officer's wives interested in joining the Auxiliary should contact CW4 Gordon or CWO Balus at 545-4114 or 545-2921 respectively.

During the meeting, CW4 Gordon talked on many subjects relevant to the warrant officers of Ft. Benning and about the second annual convention held in Washington, D.C. One of the guest speakers at the convention, Secretary of the Army Howard (Bo) Callaway, commented, "One of the things the Army's got going for it is the increased professionalism of its warrant officer."

All active or retired warrant officers and their wives at Ft. Benning and surrounding areas are encouraged to attend the next chapter meeting scheduled for Oct. 10, at the American Legion Post 35. The social hour will start at 5 p.m. and the call to order will be at 7 p.m.

CATV finally comes to Benning

Cable Television will at long last be a reality at Ft. Benning, giving subscribers a selection on 10 viewing channels.

Erection of the TV tower has been completed on a site near the Post Veterinarian's building on 10th Div. Road. Installation of overhead and underground cable started earlier this week.

The project will be installed in four phases and will provide additional TV entertainment to family housing areas and all troop facilities on Main Post, Martin Army Hospital and in the Kelley Hill area.

The first area (see map) is scheduled to receive service in late October and the overall installation is expected to be completed in December.

Thirty-five miles of aerial cable and 13 miles of underground cable will be installed to complete the project. Construction is expected to progress at the rate of four miles of aerial cable and one mile of underground cable per week barring unfavorable weather conditions and unforeseen difficulties.

Wometco Communications Incorporated of Miami, Fla., a subsidiary of Wometco Enterprises, is the contracted corporation installing the system. Wometco Communications has 10 cable systems in operation and nine more under construction.

A representative of the company said, "Cable TV offers a greater diversification of TV programming and eliminates the rooftop antenna. The company will offer 24-hour service, 365 days a year."

The system will provide 10 television channels. They will include WRBL-TV, an affiliate of CBS on channel 3; WTVM-TV, an affiliate of ABCC on channel 9; and WYEA-TV, an affiliate of NBC on channel 38, all located in Columbus.

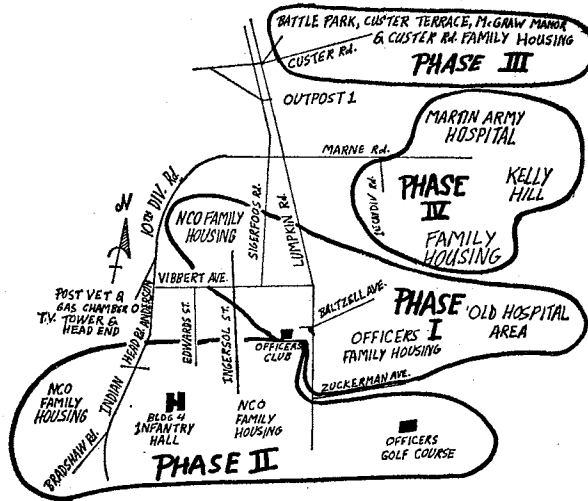

Two Atlanta stations not affiliated with a major network will be available. These are WTCG-TV and WHAE-TV, channels 17 and 46 respectively.

WTVM-TV, Dothan, Ala., an affiliate of ABC and CBS on channel 4 and WJSP-TV, a Columbus educational television station on channel 28 will also be provided.

Ft. Benning will provide three channels for public access, weather and government.

As an added feature, FM stereo will be included in the cable system.

Connection fee charged to subscribers will be $7.95 for the initial outlet and $4.95 for each additional outlet. Monthly rates will be $5.70 for the initial outlet and $1.20 for each additional outlet.

Above is staff artist Brent Swainston's drawing of the four phases of areas involved in the installation of cable TV on Ft. Benning.

WAC to lead 45-man band at Disney World

When the U.S. Army Forces Command Band appears at Walt Disney World Sept. 22 during the Magic Kingdom's Armed Forces Salute, the 45-man unit will be led by a woman.

The first enlisted woman to direct any Army Band (except the all woman Women's Army Corps Band at Ft. McClellan, Ala., SGM Patricia R. Browning, was named to that position while assigned to Ft. McPherson in Atlanta.

SGM Browning began her musical career while attending public schools in Ohio, where at the age of 11 she began playing tuba in the school band. Studying privately and in the school band, she became accomplished on her instrument and decided to pursue a career in music.

In 1954 she entered the Army and after basic training was accepted into the 14th Army Band (WAC), at Ft. McClellan, the only all-woman band in the military service. She served in that band in various positions, primarily as First Sergeant, and electric bassist until she joined the Forces Command Band.

She holds the highest enlisted position in the Forces Command Band and her primary responsibilities are directing the band and serving as enlisted bandleader.

The Army Forces Command Band, officially titled the 214th Army Band, was organized in 1845 in Texas as the 4th Infantry Regiment Band. Its heritage, which includes 26 campaign streamers and two awards of the French Croix de Guerre, spans the Mexican War, Civil War, the War with Spain, the Philippine the Philippine Insurrection and both World Wars.

Other honors make the 214th a unique unit. It is the only Army Band which has received a combat distinction from a President of the United States, Zachary Taylor. The band was authorized to wear red piping on the uniform in commemoration of distinguished service in the battle of Monterrey, Mexico, where they turned a captured artillery battery against the enemy.

Smaller components of the Forces Command Band include a 20-piece Studio Band, Jazz Combo, Jazz Ensemble, Rock Band, Brass Choir, Brass Quintet, Woodwind Quintet, and Men's Chorus.

The 1974 Armed Forces Salute at Walt Disney World, Sept. 16-22, will feature special attraction tickets for active and retired military personnel. Tickets may be purchased at base special services or at the ticket gates.

COL Wasiak takes command of 197th

COL Joseph E. Wasiak assumes command of the 197th Inf Bde in ceremonies at 2:30 p.m. today on York Field as BG William B. Steele relinquishes command of the unit.

COL Wasiak comes to the 197th Inf Bde from Ft. Bliss, Tex. where he served as the Chief of Studies, Analysis and Literature Division, U.S. Army Nuclear Agency since June 1973.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., COL Wasiak is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and holds a master of science degree in nuclear engineering from the University of Arizona. He is also a graduate of the National War College in Washington, D.C.

Among his decorations and awards are the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with V device and nine Oak Leaf Clusters, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Joint Services Commendation Medal, the Army Commendation Medal and the Combat Infantry Badge.

COL Wasiak's previous assignments include a tour of Vietnam where he served as a battalion commander with the 1st Cav Div. He also served as the Military Assistant to the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense (Atomic Energy).

Military Wife of the Year program cancelled by DA

The Department of the Army has announced the termination of the Military Wife of the Year program, and the TRADOC Army Wife of the Year competition.

The 1975 MWOY program, which is presently under way is also terminated. However, similar recognition programs at local levels may be voluntarily carried out at no additional expense to the government.

533rd visiting Eglin for Ranger support

During past weeks the 533rd Trans Co, 36th Engr Grp (CBT) has been on a Ranger Support Mission at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

The primary mission of the 533rd was to provide transportation for the Rangers during their 21-day training cycle. Nearly 100 per cent of the Rangers' transportation was supplied by the transportation company.

Twelve men were involved in the Ranger support mission headed by the 533rd's NCOIC, SGT Thomas Gee.

According to Gee, "One good thing about this mission is these drivers perform in their MOS, from the beginning of each day to the end." The transportation sergeant concluded, "Now I realize why they volunteered for this job."

SP4 Gregory Narcisse, 533rd truck driver, stated, "I enjoyed driving down there, that's the reason I joined the Army; to drive trucks."

"Doing my job was the reason I liked it," said SP4 Ronald Knight. "There are a lot of people in the Army that never get a chance to do the job they were trained to do. Assignments like this really gives a driver plenty of practical experience," he added.

197th Spt Bn sees change of command

LTC Ellis R. Morris relinquished command of the 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde to LTC Jerry K. Patterson in a ceremony held Sept. 17 at Engineer Field in the Harmony Church area.

Since taking command of the "Ever Ready Support" battalion in March 1973, LTC Morris was responsible for the activation of Companies A, B, C and D, of the battalion.

The 197th Spt Bn successfully completed Basic Unit Training, Advanced Unit Training, Army Training Tests and Operational Readiness Training under LTC Morris' command, thus enabling the battalion to become a Strategic Army Forces unit and maintain that posture.

LTC Morris has been assigned to the United States Army Training Devices Agency, headquartered in Orlando, Fla., with duty at Ft. Benning.

Since arriving in the brigade last May, LTC Patterson has been the Brigade Assistant Commander for Readiness. LTC Patterson was also in charge of this year's 4th of July carnival for post.

Coming to the brigade from an assignment in Korea, where he was the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4 for the 2nd Inf Div, LTC Patterson has seen over 18 years of active duty.

A native of Silver Springs, Md., LTC Patterson is a West Point graduate who also completed a Master of Science degree at the University of Alabama in 1962.

Among LTC Patterson's awards are the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Bronze Star Medal and the Army Commendation Medal.

NATIONAL GUARD ANNIVERSARY - 1974

On the occasion of the 338th Anniversary of the National Guard, I extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to all National Guardsmen.

The Guard traces its birth to the young struggling North American colonies and the militia system organized by these early settlers to protect home and family. Their efforts were an essential part of our Nation's birth. Like their ancestors, today's National Guard serves with great pride, a vital part of the Total Force concept, providing the bulk of reserve combat power. Guardsmen have met the test in the U.S. Army, maintaining strength while constantly increasing their combat proficiency.

I join your fellow soldiers in sharing your pride in past achievements and have the greatest confidence that you will continue your outstanding service to your state and our nation.

Overall school enrollment declining

No more pencils, no more books . . . and maybe, no more students.

During the 1970s, the number of persons ages 5-34 enrolled in school will decrease by more than one million, according to a leading insurance company's statisticians.

In 1970, 58,800,000 person — not in institutions or in military service — were attending school; by 1972 the number declined to 58,500,000, and by 1980 the enrollment will shrink to less than 57,800,000.

Statisticians trace the cause of this decrease to the baby boomerang — the drop in the birth rate in the 1960's following the boom in births during the 1950s. This trend has now reversed, but school enrollment will not feel its effect until the end of the 1970s.

The proportion of the population aged 5-34 enrolled in school will decline from its current level of nearly three out of five but will still be more than one out of two in 1980. The number of youngsters aged 5-13 in kindergarten and elementary classes will decrease by more than 10 per cent, from 35.5 million in 1970 to 31.5 million in 1980. Statisticians, however, expect the number of youngsters in school to increase during the next decade.

At the other end of the spectrum, during the 1970s the number of college students will increase from 7,414,000 to 10,284,000 — a rise of almost three million. The greatest rise in college attendance will occur among those 25-34 years of age. The number of students at these ages — mostly graduate students — will increase by almost 70 per cent. A 40-per cent increase in college enrollments will occur among men and women aged 22-24, along with a 30-per cent gain among those aged 18-21.

As a result of these shifts in the number of students, their relative proportion of the total enrollment will also change. In 1970, college students accounted for 13 per cent of the total enrollment, but they will account for 18 per cent in 1980. By contrast, the relative proportion of kindergarten and elementary school students will drop from 62 per cent to 57 per cent.

Virtually all youngsters 5-17 years old are enrolled in school. But what of older students — those over age 17? In 1970 the proportion enrolled at age 18-21 was 40.3 per cent, and will probably increase to more than 44 per cent by 1980. At ages 22-24 the proportion enrolled will increase from 14.9 per cent to 17 per cent, and at ages 25-34 from 6 per cent to 7 1/2 per cent.

Relatively more males than females are enrolled in school, particularly past age 18, and the gap grows with age. In 1970 the enrollment rate for males was 1 1/2 times that for females at ages 18-21, 2 1/4 times at ages 22-24, and almost 2 3/5 greater at ages 25-29. Statisticians expect this disparity to diminish by 1980 as more women stay in school to continue their education.

Something's wrong

To the Bayonet:

I would like to have a logical explanation for the reason why the Army pays me $2.28 and charges me $2.30 to eat in an Army Mess Hall? I know I only lose two cents a day and $7.30 a year and $160.60 if I stay in for 20 years, but still I don't see the reason the Army has for depriving me of the amount it allows the average soldier who is not on separate rations and is allowed to eat in the Mess Hall with out paying. Could you please give me an explanation for this in your paper, because I know of several other soldiers who would like to hear the answer also. M.J.F., 1/58th Inf

The answer is that, to avoid making change in pennies, every dining hall rounds off the cost of dinner and supper to the next higher even figure, hence the extra two cents a day that comes out of your pocket. And, since pennies are at a premium these days, the practice isn't likely to stop.

For new arrivals

Orientation program initiated in 36th Engrs

For the past four months SFC Willie Mattox, 18th Repl Det, 36th Engr Grp, has been the "work horse" for the engineers' Orientation Program.

The program's objective is to resolve the personal problems of each individual soldier as he or she arrives to the group. And also to inform the new soldiers of the Engineer group's historical background and its individual units activities.

Once a new soldier arrives at Ft. Benning, he or she is picked up at 18th Repl Det to begin his orientation of the 36th Engr Grp.

"The first thing I do," stated SFC Mattox, "is to inspect the soldiers to make sure they are in proper dress."

Phase I of the orientation program consists of a briefing of the group's background, and a complete breakdown of each individual unit's job responsibility to the group. "This is the most formal part of our program," commented Mattox.

Phase II, known as "Rap Session" is an informal discussion with each individual soldier. During the phase, any problem concerning anything from finance to fiancée's are discussed. After all problems have been brought forward, the group's bus then carries each soldier to the appropriate location for resolution to his problem.

PV2 Gary Lovern, 608th Ord Det, 36th Engrs, a new arrival to the group, commented: "The orientation program is good, especially the "Rap Session" phase. I was able to get a lot of things off of my chest that have been bugging me since I joined the Army."

Phase III of the program is conducted in the Group Conference Room by COL Albro, Group Commander, or LTC Franklin Jr., the Executive Officer.

During this phase individual problems are further discussed and a brief job description of each man is covered. An "open house" is then initiated for any questions concerning himself or the group that the new arrival may have.

Phase IV of the program is the final phase carrying the new soldier directly to his assigned unit.

Mattox concluded, "Experience has proven that the needs of the new soldier are more demanding than one would realize. A problem which is not fully solved for a soldier can affect the soldier's job performance and his military career. I look forward to meeting the new personnel everyday using my experience to help some of the problems which seem to some soldiers to have no solution."

43rd begins oil recycle project

The 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engr Grp, known for its professional construction skillsmen, has undertaken another important mission of cleaning up the environment.

This time it's not tearing down old buildings or building new ones. The job given to Co A, involves recycling used oil, which has been utilized by the Post Exchange Service Stations, Cox and Cannon Garage, and a few Craft Shops.

The project initially started July 1, 1971 and will be in effect until June 30, 1975, if funds for the project aren't sooner exhausted.

An average of 2,000 gallons of the used oil is picked up every two weeks by SP4 Kurt Harner, Co A, and is transported by mode of a 2 1/2 ton truck to the Waste Oil Reclamation Point.

"I enjoy doing this job," admits SP4 Harner, "because not only does it give me something different to do, but it also makes me feel better knowing the Army is doing something about the Energy Crisis."

"I just wish everyone else would get into the program," he added.

SP4 Kurt Harner, of Co A, 43rd Engr Bn, is putting the hose of a pump into the pod on his vehicle. Used oil is then pumped out and recycled so that it can be used again, instead of being wasted. (Photo by Bill Emery)

DA approves new enlisted career system

General Fred C. Weyand, acting Army chief of staff, approved the new Enlisted Personnel Management System (EPMS). The system will be implemented Army-wide over the next three years.

Military Personnel Center officials expect that the new system will be implemented for the Infantry-Armor career field and perhaps two or three others in the fall of 1975. All career fields will be brought under EPMS by fall 1977.

EPMS is the culmination of 18 months' work by MILPERCEN and the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). Most of the Army's service schools have been involved in the project as well as the two major troop commands — U.S. Army Europe, and Forces Command (FORSCOM). The views of more than 10,000 NCOs and specialists were solicited, in many cases, during detailed interviews with small groups.

Skill Levels Tested

EPMS will introduce a comprehensive system of career development for all soldiers. A soldier must qualify in the skills of the next higher grade before he is eligible to be promoted to that grade. He can do this by serving satisfactorily for a given period of time in a job calling for his primary MOS or by attending certain schools. In either case, he must make a high enough score on his "skill qualification test."

The overall framework of professional development is defined by "skill levels." Level 1 applies to E-1 through E-4; level 2 to E-5; level 3 to E-6; and level 4 to E-7. Finally skill level 5 will apply to NCOs in grades E-8 and E-9.

There will be a school system with a course for each skill level. AIT will result in the award of skill level 1. A new Primary NCO course, replacing the current NCO academies, will train E-4s to be E-5s; the Basic NCO Course will train E-5s to be E-6s; the Advanced Course will train E-6s for E-7 positions; and the Senior Course will train E-7s to be E-8s and E-9s. The Sergeants Major Academy will continue to prepare elected E-8s to become command sergeants major.

Under EPMS the skill qualification tests will eventually replace the MOS test. Every soldier—E-4 and above—will be tested in his primary MOS every other year. A passing score will verify qualification at the skill level corresponding to his current grade. A very high score — if he also has sufficient job experience in his MOS of military schooling — results in award of the skill level corresponding to the next higher grade. This makes a soldier eligible for promotion.

To help the system operate smoothly, work is also being done on the grade structure and job progression patterns of each career field and MOS. Whenever bottlenecks are discovered, appropriate corrections are being applied. The goal is that there will be no "dead end" MOSs.

Corporals Returning

Some additional features have surfaced during the developmental phase. An E-4 graduate of the Primary NCO course and serving in an NCO position can be appointed to corporal by his commander. The grade of Specialist seven is being abolished. Thirdly, performance tests will replace written tests where appropriate, beginning with the junior grades in the combat arms. Most technical MOSs will retain written tests as will the higher grades in the combat arms.

A lot of work remains to be done to bring EPMS into being. TRADOC will revise many of its courses and create new ones as well. The Enlisted Evaluation Center will convert current MOS tests into skill qualification tests. (ANF)

Wesleyan College lab spared by 89th EOD

By William D. Sams

Explosive specialists from the 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment (EOD), 36th Engrs, were contacted by Civil Defense officials Sept. 11 to assist in removing an explosive chemical agent at the Wesleyan College for Girls, in Macon, Ga.

Found in the chemistry lab of the college was a one pound explosive chemical called PIRIC acid.

An explosive compound itself, PIRIC acid is usually mixed with other chemicals to neutralize other explosive agents.

PIRIC acid can be very dangerous unless proper precautions are taken in order to prevent the chemical explosive from "blowing up." To do this the chemical must be stabilized and stored in a water tight container.

Frank A. James, chemistry professor, Wesleyan College, discovered the explosive compound in the college lab and found "the water in the container had evaporated."

The chemical explosive posed several dangerous problems for the EOD team. "If the chemical exploded it would send broken glass and other chemicals flying, possibly endangering someone's life," remarked 2LT John Mallamo, 89th EOD commander.

The EOD commander said, "It is necessary for the explosive to remain in water in order to stabilize the explosive agents, since the slightest disturbance could have caused the chemical to explode."

The building housing the lab and surrounding area had to be evacuated before the EOD unit began preparing to remove the chemical explosive.

The explosive was then transported outside and placed where the EOD team had previously dug a hole about 100 yards from the nearest building.

Carefully placing the chemical explosive in the hole the explosive then connected a "Time designated" explosive to the container of PIRIC acid.

The explosives were then covered with dirt to assure the chemical agent would not contaminate the area or allow loose fragments to be scattered about during the explosion.

Working in an EOD unit may become quite dangerous. But the men are well trained and well qualified in explosive ordnance. Further, each man shares his experiences with the others.

"If one man doesn't have the solution to a problem, another man might," explains SP4 David D. Carpenter, explosive specialist.

Carpenter added, "We work as a team of qualified experts, helping each other accomplish the main objective."

2LT John Mallamo, (LEFT), 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment (EOD) commander and SP4 Russell Adams (RIGHT), EOD explosive specialist, work as a team, sharing their knowledge of chemical explosives.

Recently the EOD team was called upon to remove a chemical explosive from the chemistry lab of Wesleyan College for Girls, in Macon, Ga.

197th Chorus sings for their dinner

By Bob Thomas

Twenty-two 197th Inf Bde soldiers not only sang for their dinner, but they literally sang for a three day trip to the Houston Astrodome as the 197th Inf Bde Chorus performed at a pre-season NFL football game as a part of a recruiting effort.

"I thought the trip to the Astrodome was great," exclaimed PFC Willie Easley, Co D, 197th Spt Bn. "It was exciting to see the Astrodome in real life after seeing it so many times on TV."

Under the direction of 2LT Brian L. Friedman, the 197th Inf Bde Chorus performs at public events throughout the Southeast in conjunction with local Army recruiting. The trip to the Astrodome has been the biggest event for the chorus since it became a part of the 197th Inf Bde.

Originally the 3rd U.S. Army Chorus, the group toured seven states performing at service clubs, radio and television stations, civic organizations' meetings and military functions. In 1967 the group was renamed the Infantry Chorus and became a part of Ft. Benning. In 1974 the chorus joined the 197th Inf Bde.

"We received a warm reception in Houston," stated SP4 Jack Lewis, a chorus member from Co A, 3/7th Inf. "In fact we receive a warm welcome just about everywhere we go. We also got to see a good football game between the Houston Oilers and Atlanta Falcons."

Members of the chorus are selected through a screening process of all new soldiers assigned to the 197th Inf. Bde. Those with a musical or chorus background are interviewed to fill vacancies.

"This was a great opportunity," stated PFC Aulton White, HHC, 3/7th Inf, of his job with the chorus. "Performing in the Astrodome is an opportunity I wouldn't have had if it were not for the chorus. It's a chance for all of us to do what we enjoy and help the Army too."

'Ole Doc Sez

Doc getting ready for dove season

Howdy, Bub. I went down town this mornin' to Lem's Hardware and Dry Goods Emporium to try an' get ahold of some scatter-gun shells for the up-com' dove huntin' season, when I run into Gunda an' Marie Ellen Gray acomin' outta the store. Gunda hadda sack seeds throwed over his left shoulder, an' a cuppla boxes bird-shot in his right hand.

Marie Ellen, pretty as a speckled pup, as always, wuz atotin' some packages, an' s'millin' like she just put one over on Gunda. Beln' sociable, as is my usual nature, I ast Marie Ellen what she had talked 'ole Gunda into buyin' her? She upped an' said that Lem wuz havin' his end of the season swimmin' suit sale, an' seeln' as how her old one had holes in the knees that couldn't be mended no more, she thought it wuz time to take advantage of Lem', "Sales of Sales."

I allowed as how I agreed it wuz always good to take advantage of all the bargains that a body could, but wuz careful not to ask what style of swimwear she had purchased.

Last year, Gunda had slammed the door of his pickup on his shotgun, an' had put a sizeable crack in the left barrel; he'd had the crack welded, but it still had a fault in it that could cause enuf blow-back to shatter the receiver an' prompt some damage, even to his big head. So I ast Gunda if he'd got hisself a new gun since the mishap, as I seen that he had a handful of shot.

He bunched his back up some, an' said that the crop wasn't as good as it could've been this year, an' he couldn't afford no new gun for this season, but he wuz only goin' to use the good side anyway.

Well Sir, I jumped right onto my soapbox an' beganst to lambast that big lummo, Gunda, right there on the sidewalk in front of Lem's. I musta gone for a good spell, 'cause afore I knew it, folks wuz agatherin' 'round to see what the commotion wuz all 'bout. I tole that dang fool that he wuz endangerin' his life, an' the life of anybody that wuz dumb enuf to go huntin' with him. I tole him that even if that fault wuz in the left barrel, jes' by firin' the right side could cause that gun to come part like a one dollar watch, an' that he'd spent too much time on the back-forty 'thout his hat on.

I wuz jes' gettin' warmed up, an' the crowd wuz 'bout three deep when I throwed in the clincher. I looked at Marie Ellen, an' tole her that she'd better take that swimmin' outfit back into Lem's, 'cause she wasn't going to have no use for it if she 'lowed Gunda outta the house with that faulty shotgun, as it ain't proper for a widder to be seen at no beach whilst she wuz in mournin'.

Gunda stood there for a few moments, shufflin' his feet, an' clearin' his throat, like he wuz goin' to say somethin', when, of a sudden, he set the seed sack down alongside the front of Lem's store, an' walked back inside with the shotgun shells. He came back outside ina few moments, looked at me, an' said, "Thanks Doc," whilst he scooped up his sack, then he an' Marie Ellen headed for his pickup, an' home.

I guess that you know, Bub, that most huntin' accidents are caused by faulty 'quipment, as much as by gettin' mistaken for a deer, etc. So, I want you to make a complete check of yore gear afore you get into the field, even if you are positive everythin' is copasetic. I 'member three years ago, Austin Lamont's boy had put a clip-type clothes pin into the barrel of his sixteen gauge, 'thout Austin knowin' 'bout it.

It wuz a closed coffin ceremony, an' a very sad affair for all of us. If he woulda jes', oh well, you know what I mean.

Good health to you and yours.

Columbus College offers new courses

Columbus College is offering two new courses this fall, including a Business Management Course designed for minority groups and a program offering a degree in Electronics Technology.

The Small Business Management Course will be aimed primarily at minority members of the community and will begin Oct. 8.

Sponsored by the Community Services Program and the Division of Business and Economics and partially funded by the grant, this course will be taught by Dr. Malcolm Henderson, professor of finance, and Nelson Jantzen, assistant professor of management and marketing.

The preparation for initiation and subsequent management of participants' own small businesses and the promotion of private enterprise among minority group members are goals of the course, according to Doug Chambers, program coordinator. Basics of finance, accounting, marketing and management required to establish, open and operate a business will be explored.

Designed to benefit those presently operating a business who need additional information, this course also will help persons who have the desire for but not the necessary fundamental education to operate a small business. Hopefully, this course can be a pivot for other courses needed to improve and stimulate minority members of the community and their business efforts.

For further information contact Doug Chambers, 451-5134 Ext. 308.

Columbus College will also offer an associate degree in Electronics Technology this fall through a coordinated program with Columbus Area Vocational Technical School. This is the second program under these auspices. The first students to graduate with associate degrees in Secretarial Science, another program of coordination, completed their work this summer.

The Columbus Area Vocational Technical School has been teaching electronics for several years. The new degree program will afford students two options: easy placement in the job market and an opportunity to study for a degree, according to W. G. Hartline, assistant director of the Columbus Area Technical School. "Students must have sellable skills if they expect to be employed. The unemployed are those persons who have no skills." The laboratory work and practical training will take place at the vocational-technical school and the general education courses or "core requirements" will be taught at the college.

Space is the upopia of electronics, but the market for employment has a wide variety of positions including circuitry in automobiles, appliances, and all types of medical equipment. The medical area is an increasing market for persons with electronics knowledge and training.

Ordinarily, these programs are planned for the convenience of students, and some courses will be done concurrently. Courses will be offered at the college during the day and evening.

Talent tree to host local craft exhibit

A three-artist craft show will be presented by the Talent Tree, Ft. Benning's art gallery and craft boutique, from Sept. 26 - Oct. 10. The public is cordially invited to attend a reception for the three artists Sept. 26 from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. The artists featured are Peggy Nielson, Chuck LaRue and Judd Walton.

Original, hand-painted needlepoint designs are the hallmark of Peggy Nielson's talent. Her children's designs, Christmas tree ornaments and stockings are some of the items you will be able to special order during the show. Each kit is complete with hand-painted needlepoint canvas, yarn, needle and free instruction. Mrs. Nielson has taught classes in Atlanta and has exhibited her work in Atlanta and on the Rozell Show in Columbus. Chuck LaRue started his work with leather as hobby at a post craft shop in Germany. He soon progressed to the point where he was teaching at that craft shop. His custom-made leather items have been shown at craft fairs in Georgia and Florida. He will exhibit shoes, purses, sandals, belts and wallets in a wide variety of styles and designs.

A childhood hobby has become the creative outlet for Judd Walton, who started whittling wood when he was a small boy and now constructs items as large as wall units. Although many of his projects are too large for exhibit at the Talent Tree, he will bring to the show lovely wood items whose beauty is only surpassed by their practicality and enjoyment. Some of his projects will be for exhibit only, but he will have a contemporary nativity scene, hobby horses and wood puzzles and games for which he will take orders during the show.

The Talent Tree is open every Tuesday and Thursday and the first Saturday of the month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Weatherman graduates

SP5 Robert A. Finch, HHB, 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde, recently completed the NCOES course in target acquisition for artillery related jobs at Ft. Sill, Okla.

Finch works as a ballistic meteorological creman in his battalion, helping to gather weather information for all of Ft. Benning's artillery units as well as local weather predictors and aviators. He was named the honor graduate of the 12-week course in a class of 25 students.

"It was a great course," Finch commented upon his return to Ft. Benning. "It was primarily aimed at preparing the junior NCO for the duties he will assume as an E-6 or E-7."

Finch entered the Army in 1971 and completed Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training at Ft. Jackson, S.C. He was originally trained as a radioteletype operator but upon assignment to the 197th Inf Bde requested a job with the METRO section.

"I was given on-the-job training and have been there ever since," Finch explained. "I really like the work because you are working with something that is changing all the time, the weather."

Finch extended beyond his normal ETS for the opportunity to attend the NCOES course. However, the 23-year-old soldier indicated that he intends to re-enlist.

The Ranger Department is getting in on this year's picnic — and in appropriate style. They're bringing along one eye, a 'pet' alligator for all to see. He'll be lodged in a shower room before making his debut. Alligators have a hungry look, and hunger reminds us (and gators) of food — and there'll be plenty of that, including three pigs roasted on a spit. We promise the alligator won't be anywhere near the food. (Ledger-Enquirer Photo by Rod Whitted)

Buses provided

Two picnic buses will run continuously from the Infantry Hall and Harmony Church areas Saturday. The stops are:
 In Harmony Church: 30th Inf, 3d Rangers, 43rd Regt, 1-27th Inf, 47th Helib, then to the picnic area and return.

From Infantry Hall to Hospital Annex, Main Hospital and Kelley Hill Theater to the picnic area and return to Infantry Hall.

Transportation will be available from 10:30 - 4:30 p.m.

"Enos," one of Benning's Scout dogs, is making quite a name for himself. He's been to the Houston Astrodome, state fairs and any number of demonstrations all over the area. Not so much as a hair gets singed when he jumps through that fiery hoop, either. It all makes us thirsty just to look at it — all of which is to remind you that there'll be plenty of soft drinks and beer at the AUSA picnic tomorrow, along with hot dogs, hamburgers and all those other picnic goodies. (Photo by Rick Wasser).

SFC Fred G'Connell loves the art of sport parachuting, but his smile is one of thanks — for that altimeter attached to his reserve chute. Seven Ft. Benning Skydiving Club members will jump from 10,000 feet tomorrow at the AUSA picnic. Fred is a 1,100 jump veteran and is assigned to The Tower Committee of the Airborne Dept. Come on out and meet him, after his feet get back on the ground, match.

Looks like the rubber balloon is stronger than this boy's lungs. It's going to get pretty "windy" at this year's AUSA picnic Sept. 21 as thousands of balloons will be distributed to the kids. And that's not all. There'll be other kiddie prizes, not to mention rides on a fire truck and military vehicles. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

'Big Brothers' are soldiers who help kids

Inside the ball park hundreds of young boys root for their favorite teams. Cheers and laughter fill the air surrounding the stadium with a party-like atmosphere, as kids of all ages enjoy hot dogs, popcorn and cokes.

But look on the other side of the stadium fence. Look at the small, sad face of the young boy standing there, unable to participate in the gay festivities on the inside.

This small child, and many more like him, are unable to enjoy their youth to the fullest — because they have no father. For whatever circumstances, these children have no father to guide them.

"Why tell me about it?" did you say? "What can I do about it?" Plenty!

Through the Army Community Services (ACS) any male can become a 'Big Brother' to one or more of these deprived young boys.

Deprived? That's right, they are deprived of the guidance and leadership that a father usually provides. You can help supply these vital needs.

"These young men desperately need an older man around that they can look up to. One that will help to mold their character," commented SP4 Nick Toparcean, Special Children's Coordinator and in charge of the 'Big Brother' Program for ACS.

"A 'Big Brother' gives these boys the male figurehead they need," continued SP4 Toparcean. "They instill the motivation these boys ought to have to achieve their goals in life."

By Bob Cowles

The young men who come to SP4 Toparcean are not shoved off on any man who wants to be a 'Big Brother.'

"Applicants for the 'Big Brother' program are interviewed and carefully screened," SP4 Toparcean stated. "They are then matched with a boy we feel they will be compatible with, one with whom they share similar interests."

"The boys who come to us range in age from six to 14 years old. However, there is no age limit for 'Big Brothers,'" added SP4 Toparcean. "Everything is conducted informally and there are no great demands a 'Big Brother' must meet."

"We have no problems finding the young boys, but we are always in need of 'Big Brothers.' All we ask is that the applicants be sincere and be able to spend some time with the child," concluded SP4 Toparcean.

"Sincerity is the biggest factor in applying to be a 'Big Brother,'" added PFC Jesse L. Bradley of HHC, 2/69th Armor, 197th Inf Bde. "If a man isn't serious about wanting to help these boys, then he needn't attempt joining the program."

PFC Bradley is a 'Big Brother' who now has four 'little brothers.' He has been with the program since June.

"All four of my boys are from the same family," continued PFC Bradley. "Troy, age 11, was my first little brother. He was soon followed by Twan, 8, and Tony and Nelson, both 12."

What type of a man volunteers for the program? PFC Bradley is a married man with an understanding wife and a big heart.

"I worked with some kids at a community center back home before I joined the Army," stated PFC Bradley. "It was similar to the 'Big Brother' program, so when I came here I decided to continue the activity."

"My wife and I have no children of our own now," added PFC Bradley. "She is a great help and goes with the boys and myself quite often."

Where do you take a boy to do things? How do you handle them and their problems?

"I spend about 20 hours a week with the boys, two or three days a week," commented PFC Bradley. "We go fishing, play football and visit the service club. One thing we all do is go to church each week. The boys live only a couple of blocks from me, so they stop by quite often."

"The boys are open with me and often come to me for advice," continued PFC Bradley. "I never put them off when they have a problem. I try to give them the best advice I can."

"It's easy for a 'Big Brother' and his little brother to become attached to each other," concluded PFC Bradley. "One thing I try to make sure they understand is that some day I'll get transferred and have to leave them."

The 'Big Brother' program now has about 22 'Big Brothers' and 26 little brothers. There are still scores of young boys in the community that need someone's help. There's always a need for 'Big Brothers.'

OVERSEAS ASSIGNMENT

DA has announced the end to stabilized tours for enlisted personnel with 27 to 30 years' service. The change, announced as an interim change to AR 614-30, will become effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Personnel with 27 to 30 years' active federal service will be subject to involuntary overseas assignment. Personnel, other than Command Sergeant Major, who complete 27 years' active federal service prior to January 1, 1975, will not be affected by the change and will continue to be exempt from overseas service until they complete 30 years' service.

This change makes all military personnel with 28-30 years' active federal service equally eligible for overseas assignment.

CHILDREN

Numerous complaints have been received that children are playing in the streets in the Family Housing areas. This is an unsafe practice and parents are requested to insure that their children stay out of the streets.

SANITATION LAND FILL

There is only one authorized trash dump on the Ft. Benning reservation. It is located in the vicinity of Old Cusseta Road and Marne Road.

The old sanitation land fill near the southwest corner of Lawson air strip, vicinity of Sightseeing Road and Sunshine Road, is OFF LIMITS.

SIMULATOR DANGER

Simulators used by units training at Ft. Benning have been abandoned in areas throughout the post include booby traps, hand grenades and explosives (M-80 firecrackers). These innocent-looking training aids can cause severe burns, loss of sight, loss of fingers or hands and even loss of life.

Every effort is made to account for and remove simulators that have not been detonated during training exercises. Some, however, are missed and they are waiting for the curious, the uninformed and the foolhardy.

Report the location of duds and simulators to the Range Division any time by calling 545-5186.

BOOZE AND DRUGS

Rap sessions on alcohol and drugs are held in the Main Post Recreation Center each Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. Sessions are also held in Bldg. 2212 each Tuesday afternoon at 5 p.m. for female friends and relatives of persons who have problems with alcohol.

The Ft. Benning Alcoholics Anonymous Group meets on the first floor of Bldg. 2605, located on Dixie Road, each Thursday evening at 8 p.m. An Alan meeting for friends and relatives of persons who have problems with alcohol, is held on the second floor of Bldg. 2605 each Thursday at 8 p.m.

The Benning House Alcoholics Anonymous Group meets each Monday at 8 p.m. in Bldg. 2215.

The Benning House Narcotics Anonymous Group meets every Monday at 8 p.m. at the Benning House.

Military Police will celebrate their anniversary

More than 400 Ft. Benning military police will observe the anniversary of their corps Sept. 26 during activities to be held in the Provost Marshal Conference Room and Top Five Supper Club.

The Military Police Corps, organized Sept. 26, 1941, is young as a Corps of the United States Army but military police activities date back as early as Jan. 1776, when a Provost Marshal was appointed to the Army of the United Colonies by "his excellency" Gen. George Washington. Two years later a Provost Corps was established, mounted on horse back, armed and dressed as Light Dragoons.

Since the Continental Army days the office of the Provost Marshal has been set up whenever needed.

During America's wars of 1812 and 1846, there were Provost Marshals, but they exercised limited jurisdiction.

In Sept. 1862, a Provost Marshal General was appointed in the War Department for the duration of the Civil War. The Provost Marshal system was set up in the Union Army as an answer to two specific needs.

The first need was for an agency to enforce military discipline and control over a large number of relatively untrained troops.

The second need was for some organization to exercise military control over civilians in areas of the South occupied by Federal Troops.

At that time the Provost Marshal's primary function was operation of the draft laws, but his subordinates stationed throughout the country were charged with apprehending deserters, arresting disloyal persons, inquiring into and reporting treasonable acts, seizing stolen government property and detecting spies. This office was disbanded in 1866.

A Provost Marshal General was again appointed in the War Department in 1917 and another to the American Expeditionary Forces (AEF). In 1918 a Military Police Corps was activated in the AEF but dissolved along with the Provost Marshal General Dept. shortly after WWI.

Military Police duties were performed by individuals and units designated for that purpose at military installations throughout the country between the years 1919 and 1941.

The need for a Military Police force became more and more apparent to an Army expanding in preparation for World War II.

In August 1941, a Provost Marshal General Office and a Corps of Military Police were again established. It had an organization of approximately 25,000 enlisted men Military Police under the direction of the Provost Marshal General, MG Allen W. Gullion.

Later Sept. 26, 1941 was set as the official date of the Corps birthday.

In 1941, standardized police doctrine and procedures were almost non-existent and training programs on civil police methods were not adequate. The Provost Marshal General School and the Military Police Training Center were established at Ft. Gordon, Ga. to meet these needs.

Ft. Benning's organization numbers approximately 20 male officers, a WAC officer, 389 enlisted men and five enlisted women. They are commanded by Ft. Benning Provost Marshal, COL Robert Reinek and Deputy Provost Marshal LTC Paul R. Stalker.

According to LTC Stalker, the Ft. Benning's Military Police primary missions are: to maintain order and discipline, enforce laws and regulations, expedite traffic flow, prevent and investigate crimes, operation of post confinement facilities, enforcement of hunting, fishing and preservation of wildlife regulations, supervise coordination of physical security operations and provide assistance to civil police.

Co B wins again

Co B, 1-29th Inf, TSB, swept to their third consecutive victory in the Pioneer flag-football league, while Hq & Spt Company lost their second straight game.

Co B took a first half initiative with a 55-yard drive—a Tynes to Greer pass for 40-yards and a Tynes to Watson for 15 more—but failed to score.

On the very first play of Hq & Spt Co's possession, quarterback Billy Mathis gave the ball right back to Co B. From there, it only took Co B four plays to go in for the score, and with the extra point, they led 7-0.

Headquarters kicked off to Co B to begin the second half of play. But on the 1st down play, Co B threw straight to the arms of a Hq & Spt Co player, and Willie Williams ran the interception for twenty yards.

The key interception seemed to spark some life into the Headquarters clerks. On the first play, Donald Freeman hit Roy Pittman with a screen pass to the 40-yard line. On the second down, once again the Freeman to Pittman combination worked, this time for 15 yards.

The next play proved to be fatal for the clerks, however, as Robert McCullough of Co B intercepted a Freeman pass and ran it back for some 40-yards before his flag was pulled.

James Tynes ran up the middle for a quick five yards, and then it was Tynes to Charles Pavia for a 10-yard completion and the score. Co B missed the extra point, but they held a commanding 13-0 lead.

Hq & Spt Co's Ray Pittman ran the kick back for 35 yards to set the clerks in motion, one last time. A Freeman to Pittman pass was called back for a penalty, and another holding penalty put the clerks back on their own 30-yard line.

Freeman hit Billy Mathis with two quick passes, as the Headquarters team began penetration into enemy territory once again. But the 22-yard line was as close as they could get, before Co B took over possession again.

Robert McCullough kept the ball on the ground for three downs, but it couldn't gain enough yardage for the first down, and Co B was forced to kick.

But as the 4th down kick spiraled through the air en route to the waiting and desperate arms of Hq & Spt Co, the game-ending whistle blew, and the clerks had been stomped, 13-0.

The Headquarters team has not scored a single point thus far this season, while first place Co B has not been scored against yet in the PIONEER league.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

Dove hunters have only a week to wait

By Bill Kloeb

The big day for Ft. Benning Dove hunters is only one week away. Opening day for doves is Sept. 28. Roy Johnson, chief of the Fish and Wildlife Branch, predicts a lot of doves in the area—at least for opening day. Roy wanted to hedge a little on that prediction, too. Doves habits don't lend themselves to predictions. All indications are that a lot of doves will be in the area, but they could be here today, find a freshly harvested peanut patch in Alabama tomorrow and never get back to this area again during the entire hunting season.

Move Out Now

Hunters who have been dragging their feet have a lot of preparations to make before next Saturday. Hunting cars and shotguns must be registered at the Provost Marshal's Office. Georgia state hunting licenses and the post hunting permit must be obtained. You can get the state licenses at most bait shops in town or when you obtain the post hunting permit at the Rod and Gun Club. The club office at Victory Lodge is the only agency issuing the post hunting permit.

If you don't have the post hunting permit you probably haven't attended the hunting safety orientation. This is a must before hunting on post. An orientation will be given in Marshall Auditorium this Wednesday at 7 p.m. These orientations have been scheduled for the same time and place each Wednesday during this month and the month of Oct.

It's a good idea to know where the birds are at this time. Hunters who have been on post a few years have a good general idea, but you can't be sure the field that was so hot last year will hold a single bird this year. Hunters new to the post need guidance. They can get this from the overlay and map at Victory Lodge. Talking to hunters who have been around awhile will help, too.

It doesn't make much difference whether you have been here for years or just came on post for the first time last week. If you want to have a fair chance of seeing birds on opening day you have to make a reconnaissance.

Knowing that you have complied with all of the laws will give you a satisfied feeling and knowing where the birds will probably be flying will give you a lot of satisfaction, too, but it all adds up to a bad trip if you can't hit that streaking dove when it

Pioneers aid 197th Bde FTX

ROWANDAN — fictitious and code name for an area of occupied territory held first by the enemy aggressor troops, and ultimately by the combat-ready 197th Inf Bde.

In last weeks' Field Training Exercise (FTX), Co A, 1/29th Inf (Pioneers), TSB provided armored personnel carriers and aggressor troops in support of the FTX.

A total of eight complete infantry squads from the 1/29th began the operation by attacking ROWANDAN and occupying it. Then elements of the 197th Inf Bde conducted operations to push the Co A Pioneers out of the occupied territory.

The Pioneers conducted delaying operations, maintaining their positions just outside the ROWANDAN perimeter. The 197th Advanced forward, seized their objective and then withdrew voluntarily.

The Rod and Gun Club has partial insurance against this. Hunters can get in some wing shooting practice at the club skeet ranges off First Division Road. These ranges will be open for operation from noon until dark each Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday during the hunting season. An attendant will be on duty during these periods of operation.

Deer Season For Archers

Sept. 28 is also opening day of deer season for archers. Archers also have quite a few things to do before they can take to the field. All archery hunters on post must have a Georgia Bow and Arrow Hunting License, a Georgia Big Game License and a Post Hunting Permit. They must also attend the hunting safety orientation.

Reconnaissance is most important for this sport. The limitations of the bow and arrow combination are many. Hunters must select a shooting spot and construct a blind that will provide them with a short range shot not likely to be deflected by brush or branches.

Cub Scout Field Day is big success

The first annual Ft. Benning District Field Day and Cub Scout National Physical Fitness Program was held Saturday, Sept. 14 at Doughboy Stadium. Two hundred and fifty Cub Scouts participated in the program.

The program opened with Field Day Director MAJ Barry D. Gasdek giving the opening remarks. Special guests were introduced by Emmett McKay, District Scout Executive.

Christopher Kelly son of COL James Kelly is seen here participating in one of the many events during Cub Scout Field Day activities held recently at Doughboy Stadium.

Cub Scout Pack 27 conducted the opening ceremony with an invocation by Chaplain (MAJ) Meredith Standley.

The Cub Scouts were then broken down into two main events. Each pack had their best eight, nine and ten-year-olds compete in the physical fitness program. The first place winners of these five events (which consisted of modified push-ups, modified sit-ups, fifty-yard dash, standing broad jump and softball throw) were: Steve McDonald, Pack 54, 8-year-old; Lawrence Hamblin, Pack 120, 9-year-old, and Alan Osborne, Pack 27, 10-year-old.

The six field events were run simultaneously with the fitness events. They consisted of: crab race, hopping race, bottle filling, 30-yard dash, sack race and 20-yard ball race.

The program was highlighted by the final event—the Parent Participation Event. This consisted of a father and son three-legged race won by Alan Osborne and Dad, Pack 27, a Mothers' Nail driving contest won by Mrs. Marie Thurman, representing Pack 27 and a sisters' shoe kicking contest won by Miss Barbara Jones representing Pack 120.

The winners were then presented with their awards and all participants received a Field Day patch. Boy Scout Troops 27, 120 and 127 were thanked for their efforts and assistance in the field day events and were also presented with Field Day patches. Thanks went out to members of the 197th Spt Bn and members of the Sound Branch, USAIS, for their support.

The morning consisted of fun, competition, family togetherness and a lot of hot dogs and sodas.

Cub Scout Pack 39 conducted the closing ceremony to terminate the hugely successful Field Day.

NCOA will sponsor Symposium

The "Follow Me" chapter of the Non Commissioned Officers Association of the United States of America is sponsoring a Symposium Sept. 26-27 at the Martinique Motel in Columbus.

The Symposium will commence with registration in the lobby of the Martinique from 12 a.m. - 6 p.m. Sept. 26.

Pre-registrations are now being taken at the NCOA Service Center at 2223 Lumpkin Road in Columbus. Cost of the Symposium registration is $15 per person or $25 per couple.

On Sept. 27 the Chairman will call the meeting to order at 9 a.m.

The morning activities will include: posting of colors, invocation, pledge of allegiance and the NCOA creed. Honored guests, International Headquarters representatives and host chapter officials, will be introduced.

In the afternoon the delegates will discuss sponsored services, legislation, awards programs, new programs and chapter planning and problems.

On that same day the "Followettes", the Follow Me chapter's ladies auxiliary, will sponsor a Heritage tour of ante-bellum and more modern mansions, including the Goetchius House and other local points of interest from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. A light lunch will be served.

The NCOA serves all five military branches E-4 through E-9 consisting of active, retired, reserve, National Guard or prior service personnel.

For more information about the upcoming Symposium, call the NCOA Service Center at 689-6611 between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. or Norman Rousseau 689-1934 any day after 5:30 p.m.

BG Steele commands his last 197th FTX

By Willie R. Cage

The 197th Inf Bde conducted its last Field Training Exercise (FTX READY II) under the command of BG William B. Steele, Sept. 9-12. Steele relinquishes command of the brigade to COL Joseph E. Wastak today.

The purpose of the FTX was two fold: enhance the overall effectiveness of the brigade, and conduct the Operational Readiness Test (ORT) of the 197th Spt Bn, which also changed commanders this week. LTC Ellis R. Morris relinquished command of the support battalion to LTC Jerry K. Patterson Sept. 17.

The testing of the support battalion, which provides the 197th Bde direct combat service support, was extensive throughout the exercise.

The battalion's four companies provided administrative; medical; supply and transportation; and maintenance support to all brigade elements participating in FTX READY II.

"Having to support the entire brigade logistically with the organic companies of this battalion was the only way to test us," stated LTC Morris. "We provided the brigade with all of the direct combat service support which would be required in a combat situation."

"The only area we were a little short in providing support was that of vehicle maintenance. There were very few vehicle breakdowns in the field which speaks well for the overall maintenance posture of the brigade. We were all geared up anyway and did provide some maintenance support, but not as much as we wanted."

"We were busiest in the area of fuel supply. All combat elements of the brigade were directed to come to the field with no more than a half tank of fuel which insured that our POL personnel would have to replenish the fuel of the combat elements," concluded LTC Morris.

Company C, the supply and transportation company of the support battalion, participated in a river crossing of the Chattahoochee River during the ORT using light tactical rafts provided by the 72nd Engr Co's float bridge platoon to float vehicles across the river. The river crossing was a first for many of Co C's truck drivers.

According to LTC Richard R. Florey, of Combat Developments of the Infantry School, who served as the chief umpire for the ORT, the support battalion's performance was very satisfactory.

"We worked the battalion to its limit in order to test all capabilities," stated LTC Florey. "I was impressed by the esprit of the battalion's officers and men."

"The 197th Spt Bn is capable of performing its mission in combat," concluded LTC Florey. Other umpires for the ORT were selected from the Infantry Center based on their skills in all fields of logistics.

The combat battalions of the brigade conducted extensive night operations during the exercise which included a night attack and a voluntary night withdrawal. Airmobile operations were also conducted.

"In addition to enhancing and improving upon our readiness posture, and testing the support battalion, FTX READY II was also preparation for our brigade field training scheduled for Ft. Stewart in November," stated LTC John Campbell, the brigade S3.

The aggressor force for the exercise was provided by the 1/29th Inf.

Benning driver wins G-stock car runoffs

The Sports Car Club of America southeastern divisional Solo II Runoffs were held at Skelly Army Airfield, Opp, Alabama last weekend. Benning soldier Ron Johnson drove his Honda Civic, sponsored by a local battery company, to a first place finish in G Stock Class. Johnson held off the charge of 13 other drivers as he ran the tight mile and a half course with a time of 2:57.

Rich Sherrill, Honda driver from the Chavaga Region of the Sports Car Club of America finished fifth in G Stock Class. The Divisional runoff was a two day event co-sponsored by the Wiregrass and Chavaga Regions of the Sports Car Club of America. The winners of last weekend's event will meet in Chicago on Oct. 12 and 13 to contend for the national title.

Repossessed homes available through VA

"The Veterans Administration has 860 repossessed homes for sale in Georgia. These homes are available to veterans and non-veterans with little or no money down in most cases," announced A. W. Tate, Director of the Veterans Administration Regional Office for Georgia.

These homes range in price from $5,000 to $38,500, and in many cases make excellent buys for the young couple interested in economic housing, or as an investment.

For more information on these homes, contact the real estate broker of your choice.

You can own a homesite at Sunny Hills at today's prices—even if you're not ready to move for years.

Are you planning to live in Florida someday? Well, you probably know that Florida is the fastest growing major state in the nation. And as population grows, demand for property grows, too.

By the time you're ready to move, your Florida dream may be just a dream because of rising prices.

That's why you should know about a plan developed by the Mackle brothers, who head The Deltana Corporation. It lets you own property at today's prices—even if you're not ready to move for years.

FOR FULL DETAILS MAIL THIS POSTCARD TODAY! (SEE OTHER SIDE)

The Mackles' plan has worked for thousands... here's how it can work for you.

Like all Mackle communities, Sunny Hills is on a timetable that spells out when each section will be developed. You choose a homesite in a section that will be ready in the year you plan to move. You make a small down payment and modest monthly payments... there are five easy payment plans to choose from. And by the time you're ready to move, you'll have the deed to your improved homesite, paid for at today's prices—which may be a lot lower than tomorrow's! They even look low today! We think you'll be pleasantly surprised when activities at the lakeside recreation center. The golf and country club is presently under construction and the course will be ready to play by the end of October (available to residents for moderate greens fees).

And the beauty of Sunny Hills will always be maintained as 5,000 acres are set aside for nature preserves and greenbelts.

The Mackles' record in Florida speaks for itself.

Property is an important purchase, and it's important to know the people you're doing business with. The Mackles have created eight planned communities in Florida. Their family has been part of the southern build-Credit life insurance plan.

Find out about a plan providing credit life insurance coverage at no added cost to eligible homesite buyers up to the total amount of their contract balance (not to exceed $10,000). No physical examination is required.

You've been promising yourself that someday you'll start living the good life in Florida.

Here's your chance to get all the facts... all the answers to the questions you have. Just fill out and mail the postpaid card. There's no cost or obligation.

The Deltona Corporation, 3250 S.W. Third Avenue, Miami, Florida 33129.

Distances indicated are from the locations mentioned to the center of Sunny Hills. Each purchaser should check the exact location of the property being offered in relation to the center of the subdivision.

The Mackles have earned your trust.

you find out how little it costs to own property in Sunny Hills.

And you have the choice of building on your property, simply retaining it, or even selling it. Paved roads will be in. Water mains will lead to your improved homesite, installed by a regulated utility.

You can enjoy the good life at Sunny Hills.

Sunny Hills is located in the rolling woodlands just 45 miles from Panama City's famous "Miracle Strip" beaches along the blue-green waters of the Gulf of Mexico. You can swim at Sunny Hills' own Boat Lake with its white sand beach. There's boating, fishing and a whole variety of indoor ing business for over 66 years. The Mackles have built a reputation... they've earned your trust.

Find out how easy and inexpensive it is to own property at Sunny Hills... fill out the card below.

We'll send you a full-color brochure on Sunny Hills plus a fact filled booklet, "Things You Should Know About Sunny Hills."

We pay the taxes.

Find out how taxes are our responsibility—not yours—up to the time your contract performance period ends or your property is dedded to you... whichever occurs first.

Try Operation Survival for confidence

By Terry D. Ragan

If rappelling down 50-foot walls, sleeping without blankets or tents, or walking long distances in a short time isn't your idea of a confidence builder, try Operation Survival on for size.

Not everyone is exposed to danger even once in his lifetime, and society is for the worse. Why? Because sociologists and social psychologists are increasingly coming to the conclusion that the facing of some serious challenge — especially danger — is one of the best ways a person has to learn how to deal with himself, his community and his world.

Operation Survival is a controlled exposure to danger, and it attempts to build confidence and self-esteem. Aimed at young people and located at Ft. Benning, the program tries to supplant a more self-destructive kind of challenge — drug abuse, alcohol abuse and juvenile delinquency. Early results are encouraging. (Cont. on Page 14)

Pioneers is 1SG son's new home

PFC John Dyar enlisted for Ft. Benning and the 1/28th Inf (Pioneers) for a variety of reasons, the primary one being that he would be close to home.

Under the unit-of-choice enlistment option, a soldier can enlist for the 1/29th Inf and be guaranteed 12 months with the Pioneers.

Dyar is a Columbus native and attended Kendrick High School, before obtaining his GED diploma. He is the son of 1SG (Ret.) and Mrs. John W. Dyar St., of 5261 Brinkman Street in Columbus. It was 1SG Dyar that put his son on the right track for joining the Pioneers.

"My father told me," Dyar explained, "that the 1/29th Inf was the most professional unit on Ft. Benning. I'd heard a lot about the 1/29th and also about the 197th, but was uncertain as to which to join. But he explained that the Pioneers were a very elite organization and a much better unit, and I figured he should know."

Dyar has been assigned to Co D of the 1/29th as a rifleman with duty in the Demonstration Platoon.

This elite platoon of professional Infantrymen travel throughout the United States, on behalf of the Infantry School, teaching and demonstrating tactics to other Infantrymen.

Prior to entering the Army in April of this year, Dyar was employed as an interior decorator in Columbus.

"My pay as a civilian was comparable to what I am making now," Dyar said. "But when you include the free medical and dental care and the PX privileges and what have you, the Army definitely comes out on top," he added.

Dyar entered the service as a PFC, two grades higher than most soldiers that come into the army.

"I had three years of junior ROTC at Kendrick High," Dyar explained, "which made me eligible for the higher rank."

During his tenure in the high school ROTC program, Dyar attained the rank of cadet captain, an honor bestowed upon only a few individuals.

"I've been associated with the Army all my life," Dyar said. "Between my experience in ROTC and growing up an Army brat, I've had a chance to see what Army life is all about. I liked what I saw, so I joined the team."

43rd's HHC wins best mess

The Dining Facility of HHC, 43rd Engr Bn, has proven itself again. Far superior to other dining facilities within the 36th Engr Gp, HHC has won the Best-Mess Award for the last two months.

The criteria for the award includes preparation of the food, sanitation of the kitchen, service line and dining room. Also included in the criteria is the administration work forwarded to group, cleanliness of the outside area around the mess hall, and personal hygiene.

SP6 James O. Dial, the Dining Facility Manager, admits, "The 'key to success' in winning the Best Mess Award, is teamwork. Not one man can say that he did it, because no single man can do this job alone. It's just like a clock, if one piece is missing, the clock will either slow down or stop working completely, depending on the value of the missing piece."

Commenting on the mess hall's benefit from receiving the award, SP6 Dial stated, "Competition such as this not only improves the moral of the men, but most important it improves the quality of the food being put out. I don't believe in putting anything on the service line that I wouldn't eat myself."

Exchange prepares for Halloween

With Halloween fast approaching, the Ft. Benning Post Exchange is now featuring all the makings for a "frightful" night.

Preparation for those neighborhood nocturnal visitors is also a must. Pick up candies and other treats by the bagful. Your exchange recommends a supply of individually wrapped items to provide parental peace of mind and to ensure freshness and flavor for those healthy young appetites.

Halloween parties continue to grow in popularity each year. This season the exchange will feature a wide assortment of party pumpkins, skeltons, plates, napkins, tablecloths, games and a variety of background pieces.

EPMS change

From Army Times

NCO courses attendance may soon be mandatory for promotion to E-5 in the combat arms.

Enlisted Personnel Chief BG William A. Patch says the Army is developing a new primary-level course for NCOs which officials say will be a "must" for infantry, armor, and artillery E-4s to make E-5.

The decision to make NCO course attendance mandatory for E-5 advancement is a sharp departure from previously announced intentions not to make attendance a requirement for promotion.

Patch said the new primary course will be about

NCO course may soon be mandatory for promotion to E-5 four weeks long and will replace existing NCO academies.

The Army now operates a basic level NCO course for E-4s and E-5s, and an advanced course for E-6s and E-7s and a Sergeants Major Academy for E-8s.

According to Enlisted Personnel Management System plans, the basic course would be shortened and instruction would be geared to training NCOs for squad leader duties. The advanced course would be geared to the platoon sergeant, particularly in the combat arms. Advanced courses are now designed to train NCOs for E-8 and E-9 supervisory roles in their own career management fields. The Sergeants Major Academy course would be kept pretty much as is.

Patch said the revisions in the NCO education program are being worked out between Training and Doctrine Command, Military Personnel Center and the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

He said the Army has hopes of putting down some of the NCO course changes in effect in 1975 when the Army begins its revision of the enlisted personnel structure. The infantry-armor career field (11 series MOSs) will be the first to be overhauled under EPMS.

2/69th will show speed and power at Ft. Stewart

By C. B. Hoover

The "Speed and Power" of the 2/69th Armor, 197th Inf Bde, is soon to be demonstrated, as elements of the unit departed for Ft. Stewart, Ga. this week for annual tank gunnery qualification, a continuation of training which started at Ft. Benning.

The unit's tank crewmen commenced training last month to qualify by participating in the Tank Crew Qualification Course at Brinson Range, Ft. Benning. The course consisted of firing tables one and two, which are stationary targets, and table three, moving targets, using sub-caliber rounds in the main gun instead of standard ammunition.

"The continuing of training at Ft. Stewart will allow each of the 54 tank crews in the battalion to fire the main gun, using standard ammunition. It will also test each soldier's ability to perform as a member of a tank crew," stated CPT David L. Pickel, S-5 of the 2/69th Armor.

The tank gunnery qualification at Ft. Stewart will test the tank crews in bore-sighting and zeroing of all the weapons on the tank. Then they go to record firing, firing tables four through eight. The course incorporates everything from firing the machine guns at stationary targets to firing on moving tank targets with the main gun.

"This type of training is what every tank crewman looks forward to. It's the one chance he has to work with every aspect of his tank, and it allows him to evaluate his own tank crew. The course and the grading will be tough, and the soldiers will be graded as a team. There will be point cuts if someone in the crew does not properly execute his duties. Scoring for tables four to six will be done by the companies, but seven and eight are going to be scored by personnel from the Armor School at Ft. Knox, Ky.," commented MAJ Galen D. Rosher, S-3 of the 2/69th.

The advanced party departed for Ft. Stewart on Sept. 24, with the other elements of the battalion departing throughout the remainder of September and October.

Man makes comeback after dishonorable discharge

By JOYCE WRIGHT

On Oct. 20, 1972, SSG Art Kuykendall, a Radar Missile Repairman assigned to Ft. Bliss, Tx., was sentenced to two years confinement at hard labor, reduced to the grade of E-1, and given a dishonorable discharge.

SSG Kuykendall was given a General Court Martial at Ft. Bliss, being charged with 29 counts of larceny and two counts of fraudulent claims. He spent 55 days in the stockade there, before he was shipped out to Leavenworth, Kansas on Dec. 14, 1972.

On Feb. 16, 1973, his dishonorable discharge was executed.

On Aug. 30, 1974, SP5 Art Kuykendall, a TV repairman assigned to Ft. Benning, Ga., held an informal orientational type question and answer period with six men in the Visitor's Lounge in the stockade who were due to be shipped out to the United States Army Retraining Brigade at Ft. Riley, Kansas and the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Leavenworth, Kansas soon.

As you may have guessed, SSG Kuykendall and SP5 Kuykendall are related. SP5 Kuykendall is SSG Kuykendall two years later.

During the eight years of active duty, before his confinement, SP5 Kuykendall had gotten married. His marriage was annulled, but he forgot to mention it to the government, and continued to reap the financial benefits.

How does a man handle his confinement?

"The first thing a person must realize is that he put himself where he is. Once he does this, he can only go forward, not dwell on things that happened in the past, but on the goals he has set for himself to attain," answers Kuykendall.

During the 229 days he spent at Leavenworth, SP5 Kuykendall took the vocational training course for TV repairman.

July 31, 1973, SP5 Kuykendall left Leavenworth to go the U.S. Army Retraining Brigade at Fort Riley, Kansas. After five weeks and two days of training, he was returned to active duty.

While at Ft. Riley, he was given the choice under the direction of the Secretary of the Army, of either serving out the remainder of his service or reenlisting for three years. He reenlisted on Sept. 18, 1973.

His first duty station was Ft. Benning and he arrived in Oct. 1973 and was assigned to Co A, Headquarters and Headquarters Command. He was later assigned Co B HHQ Cmd in Jan. 1974.

Presently employed in the Maintenance Electronic Communication Shop, in Infantry Hall, he said, "I like my job here very much. I am serving with a bunch of great guys."

This is what SSG James A. Jackson, NCOIC, Maintenance Electronic Communication Shop, comments about SP5 Kuykendall.

"Kuykendall demonstrates a lot of leadership ability. He is an excellent TV repairman. Black and white, or color TV's, tapes, stereos, anything that comes into the shop, he's good on it."

Kuykendall had been married to his second wife Franz only eight months, before his court martial. Their separation was very hard on her. Before, Art had done everything for her, suddenly she had to do everything for herself.

"Now that it's over it doesn't seem as bad as it did then," she remarked.

About once a week, usually on a Friday, Kuykendall holds an informal briefing with the inmates at the Ft. Benning stockade, who are shipping out to the USARB or USDB.

"I'm talking to them as a guy that was inside. I can relate to them because I was in their situation. I can answer their questions and thereby alleviate any anxieties they might have about either places," said Art.

At the beginning of a session, no one seems to have much to say, then they start with such questions as: "What's Leavenworth like?" "What kind of training will I get in the first two weeks?" "Will I get paid?"

There's no shucking and giving in his replies, just honest straightforward answers.

"I've been able to help some change their minds about staying in or getting out. It's easy to get an undesirable discharge while at USARB. But what a lot of them don't realize is that it takes longer in most cases to receive a discharge than the time it takes to complete the training," he commented.

Just how helpful are the talks to the men concerned? An immediate group reply is, "It's always nice to know what's going to happen to you."

In less than a year, SP5 Kuykendall has gone from an E-1 to an E-5. Going before the E-5 promotion board July 24, 1974, Art received 250 board points for a total of 828 points for promotion. His promotion was effective Sept. 1, 1974.

Since being assigned to Ft. Benning he has been selected as HHQ Cmd Soldier of the Month for April 1974, received letters of commendation from his unit Commander, and letters of commendation for being selected Colonel's orderly at Guard Mount eight consecutive times in addition to also being exempted from the duty roster for a period of 90 days. He has also received an AUSA plaque from LTC John C. Rogers, Commander HHQ Cmd.

What do you think of the WAC uniform policy regarding the wearing of fatigues only for dirty work?

SFC Frank Peabody
Tower Committee

"I think women in personnel, finance, and the like should wear Class A's. They deal with the public all day and should present a better image. Besides, women look better in Class A's. Because she is a lady, and her uniforms are more easily maintained she should wear Class A's. As for fatigues, no. I think fatigues do detract from femininity. A Wac is a soldier, but still a woman and should have her best foot forward all the time.

PV2 Velma Jackson
23rd Co, TSB

"I agree, fatigues take away all my femininity. Fatigues turn women into Army soldiers and I don't like that. I didn't come into the Army to be a man. I am a lady!

PV2 Donna Daugherty
139th MP
Traffic Section

"What happened to the slacks uniform they were testing? I work with traffic and Class A's don't offer enough protection from the wind created by buses and trucks. I don't mind wearing fatigues myself, but if I had my choice I'd go for a uniform designed so I'd look like a woman. In many jobs, from a desk to directing traffic, slacks are necessary for modesty as well as comfort.

PFC Dana Roulerson, WAC
Chaplain's Assistant

"I'm in total agreement with the new DA policy. I don't think it's really the fatigues which are unfeminine, but the jobs you do when you wear them, like hauling furniture around and other strenuous labor. I came into the Army to do a job which is appropriate for a woman, not as an "Army male soldier." I'm a FEMALE in the Army.

2LT Gary Pestrak
IOCB Class 3-75

"I really haven't noticed any change and it doesn't mean much to me anyway."

PV2 Audrey "Joyce" Waller
524th PSC, 36th Engr Gp

"I don't like the change. I'd rather wear fatigues because I don't like dresses. It's hard to get to the lower files with a dress on. Besides, fatigues are more comfortable for me."

An open letter to Mr. Rupert Nunnally

Our children, grades one through five, are now settled in their new schools of McBride, Loyd and White. We, as parents, will be working with our children's respective schools for a successful year of learning. Nevertheless, we will all miss William Wilbur School — its teachers and administrative staff.

But most of all, we will miss one man who means so much to our children, a man who treats our children as people, who loves them and who is loved and adored by all the children in a way not often seen in this world where most are nothing but numbers on a computer card. This man has taken the time to learn all our children's names, the names of their brothers and sisters, and the names of their pets.

We, the parents, were always made to feel welcome in his office, be it for a problem or just for a chat. He gave us all — parents, children, and, I know, teachers too — a feeling of belonging to a family.

On behalf of all the parents of former William Wilbur School, a heart-felt thank you, Mr. Nunnally. You have truly been a Prince-a-pal.

Sincerely,
Patsy Y. Taira
former PTAC Chairman

Peace for our time... peace with honor

By David Doctor

We as Americans are endowed with instincts for directing and guiding revolution. We won our freedom by revolution. We have set an example which is envied by others. We cannot remake and control the world in our image.

Unfortunately, in war, there is no second prize for the runner-up. Herbert C. Hoover understood the many sorrows which war can produce. "Older men declare war, but it is the young who must fight and die. And it is the youth who must inherit the tribulations, the sorrow and the triumphs that are the aftermaths of war."

If America is to survive, the preservation of its youth is essential. This nation must remain strong. It cannot afford to continue to advertise the discontent of its people to the world.

We must be prepared for the confrontation of power. Be steadfastly willing to uphold the limitations of power. As times of uncertainty arise, the youth must withstand these pressures. For the youth of today are the leaders of tomorrow. We must continue to seek what is justly theirs.

For peace with justice and honor is the fairest and most profitable possession. But, with wars and avarice it is the most futile and harmful of all. No one deserves peace as much as your youth. For they must pay the greatest penalty of war.

Zoonotic disease : Reservists seek to control it

By Terry D. Ragan

Ever heard of zoonotic disease control? SP4 Robert O. Stevens knows what it is.

"Zoonotic diseases are passed from animal to man — like salmonella," he said. He cited the recent case of children who contracted salmonella from a certain species of turtles sold in pet stores all over the U.S. It is this type of control that Bob gets involved with while he's in summer camp as a reservist. He leaves Ft. Benning this week after his two-week summer camp with the 358th Med Det (Veterinary Services) (JA), a unit stationed near here.

Army vets usually get involved with things very different from your ordinary run-of-the-mill vet. Like meat inspection — a job relegated to federal meat inspectors off-post but vital to soldiers here.

"Most vets never get into meat inspection," Stevens said, "except by special arrangement. True, vets do restaurant inspections, but not routinely. A vet's caseload is usually so high that he normally doesn't get involved."

Stevens, who trains with his unit in Opelika, AL, is winding up his senior year at Auburn University's School of Veterinary Medicine. "At summer camp," he said, "I'm able to combine my monthly military training with the knowledge I receive in school. This way I'm really able to benefit the unit as well as my career."

Is there a vet shortage in the Army?

"Not like the medical doctor shortage at all," Stevens says. "For one thing, the financial support is quite substantial. The Army and Air Force both have financial programs available. Each has a set number of years that must be served, depending on the financial support extended."

In addition to meat inspection and zoonotic disease control, Army vets minister to animals, naturally. Years ago vets took care of horses and mules — yep, they've been replaced by tank and trucks. So Army vets today serve soldiers by helping keep their pets well — the general view that people have of what vets do.

At reserve meetings, Stevens says, "we mostly keep the paperwork straight and set up our filing system. Plus we do field-trip kinds of things. Right now we're setting up a mobile vet hospital for treating small animals."

"By far the most challenging job for me here at Ft. Benning has been at the new commissary. We're trying to set up a system whereby vendor's trucks can get in, unload and move out more efficiently. Being in on that policy-making has been a real challenge," Stevens said.

Low income (and large) families can indeed eat better. After all, a well family is a healthier family, has fewer problems and is a better neighbor. We're talking, of course, about the Food Stamp Program. IT IS NEITHER CHARITY NOR WELFARE. The Food Stamp Act of 1964, as amended, provides for a permanent food stamp program, administered nationally by the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

The program is a voluntary one, and expansion is based upon requests from the states and the amount of funds provided by Congress.

ANYONE may qualify, depending on deductible expenses, suspended pay, rent, utilities and number of children. The Food Stamp Program lets your money go a lot further. The payoff? You'll have fewer worries, better students, more clothing and a happier home.

Food stamps are for food you can eat or drink. There are no restrictions on imported foods, or on bananas, tea, coffee or cocoa.

But, pet food, detergents and waxes, cigarettes, alcohol and paper goods must be bought with cash. Further, you cannot sell, give away or pay back old food stamps.

The specifics on eligibility are: net income of all members of the household, number in the family and the amount of the family's resources.

When those are taken together, a fourth consideration comes into play. That is the amount of "hardship" the household is paying. Sky-high rents, high medical costs and child care payments (such as babysitting or day care center expenses) are considered hardship expenses, but you'll have to present receipts and check stubs to show proof of payment.

The Army Community Service office at Ft. Benning is the place to go to see if you qualify (545-4679); they'll basically spell out what we just did, then send you to the Columbus Health and Welfare Office if you live in Chattahoochee or Muscogee counties.

So give it some serious thought. ACS will provide the processing information. There's no need to starve (or even go hungry) just because factors outside your control make it impossible for you to buy food.

Lock your car... or be ripped off

Effective immediately the military will place security reminders on the windshield of unsecured vehicles.

The 3x5 cream colored card reminding you to lock your car is additional service provided by the MPs for your benefit.

People sometimes fail to realize the importance of locking their automobiles until they are victims of a theft. To reduce the chance of your being victimized the MPs will take the extra time to fill out the card asking you to secure your valuables. Punishment, warnings or points assessed against your driving will not follow.

The only punishment you'll face is the madness that comes if you're ripped off.

Reenlistment personnel sell a good product

Story by William D. Sams

"Strength through Support" is the motto the Reenlistment NCOs and career counselors of the 36th Engr Grp live up to in bettering the Army by bettering the soldiers.

A quick glance around the reenlistment office and you may begin to hear the walls talk. Reenlistment posters, urging individuals to stay in the Army are tacked about in strategic locations. The numerous pamphlets and folders display the many jobs and careers available to both men and women.

At the time a man or woman first enters the Army, he or she is informed and counseled by a recruiting NCO. But, to stay in the Army and continue a military career, a soldier confronts another NCO; a reenlistment NCO. He is the man with the answers to many of their unanswered questions.

The reenlistment NCO acts as more than just the man who shows you where to sign your name when you are about to make that big decision.

He is a career counselor, guiding your decision, helping you to get the necessary information you would like to have. After all reenlistment is a "giant step" in your life and career makeup.

Many soldiers have taken that same "giant step", even the reenlistment NCOs have to make personal decisions on their careers.

After recapturing almost ten years of military service, SSG Arthur A. Mascarinas, career counselor and reenlistment NCO for the 36th Engr Grp, decided to continue his climb on the ladder of success in a professional military career.

Mascarinas entered the Army as a draftee in Oct. 1965. Since then he has accomplished himself in many areas in his past career. He has completed several Army training schools where he received training as a clerk typist, ammunition specialist, administration supervisor and equipment clerk. The knowledge he has obtained through the years has added greatly to his success as a career counselor.

It was 1969 when Mascarinas decided he would become a salesman for the Army. Upon this decision he entered the Army's Recruiting and Career Counseling School at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, IN.

Since graduating, he has performed duties with the Ft. Benning Reception Station, 931st Engr and the 36th Engrs, promoting the best possible advantages of the Army and the engineers.

"As the Army began to change, so did the reenlistment office, personnel and our program," stated the re-up NCO.

"To be effective you must be flexible and allow changes to occur when needed," he said. "Men and women learn about reenlistment and its benefits through counseling and interviews," Mascarinas added, "it is only one part of my job to estimate an individual's career desires."

"A career counselor may approach each individual differently each time he chooses to interview the possible reenlistee" he said.

"Counseling is practically 'selling'," Mascarinas admitted, "if you present your product honestly and with precise judgment the individual will understand much better the idea you are trying to convey, this means you have accomplished winning the soldier's confidence and attention."

"Good sales techniques are important in selling," the re-up sergeant explained, "as in counseling you also have to believe in yourself and your product."

"On many occasions an individual might seem hesitant to reenlist," Mascarinas said, "but a career counselor must convince the reenlistee of the Army's worthwhile benefits."

"Present him with opposing facts and ideas of military life compared to that of civilian society," he said, "then let the individual weigh the possibilities and assets of a military career with those of a civilian occupation."

By JACKIE ROBKE
OWC FALL TEA

The lawn of the stately columned Riverside, home of the commanding general of Ft. Benning, was the setting for the OWC Fall Tea. Hostesses were the ladies of the US Army Infantry School Ranger Department.

Following a theme of "Southern Hospitality" the tea tables beneath the trees were graced with pink cloths with white satin skirts and fresh flowers. Ranger Department ladies who served were Mesdames Roger Bauer, Paul J. Biscula, George Campbell, Dennis C. Deming, Robert J. Farris, James Fusha, Channing Green, Jack Hayman, David Herring, Donald J. Marnon, James Roach, William Spies, Richard Thibodeau and Daniel C. Washabaugh.

Receiving guests were Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley, wife of MG Thomas M. Tarpley and Honorary President of OWC, Mrs. Nathan C. Vall, President of OWC, Mrs. John R. Korhonen, 1st Vice-president of OWC, and Mrs. James M. Bowers, Chairwoman of the ladies of the Ranger Department.

Special guests included Mrs. Bob D. Hydrick, wife of the mayor of Columbus, Mrs. Frank Roberts, wife of the mayor of Phenix City, Mrs. James W. Woodruff, Jr., wife of the National President of AUSA, and representatives of many local ladies groups.

Mrs. Vail bid farewell to Mrs. Robert L. Whitt and presented her with a silver tray. Mrs. Whitt, who is retiring Oct. 1, has been the OWC Bookkeeper for 13 years.

The guests enjoyed a medley from "Fiddler on the Roof" presented by the Springer Theater Co. Mrs. John M. Riddle entertained throughout the afternoon with organ music on the porch.

100th BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Nancy Lavender recently celebrated her 100th birthday. To help her celebrate this very special occasion were her friends of Muscogee Manor.

SGM Cy Robke, Chairman of the NCOA Follow Me Chapter, presented Nancy with a letter of congratulations. The Followettes gave her a gift of her hearts desire, a lovely deep pink caftan trimmed with ruffles and flowers.

Nancy's guests were served punch and cake by Hilde Holmes, Chris Chavers and Essie Western.

LEADERSHIP DEPARTMENT

LUCKY 13 POT LUCK SUPPER

Friday the 13th the Leadership Department enjoyed a Pot Lucker Supper hosted by Department Headquarters and Conditioning, Combatives, and Drill Committee at Victory Lodge.

Welcomed to the Department were LTC and Mrs. Ronald J. Rabin, MAJ and Mrs. Alex E. Williams, MAJ and Mrs. Dennis D. Flint, MAJ and Mrs. Robert L. Gushwa, and CPT and Mrs. Frank J. Orians. Farewell was bid to LTC Edward M. Scott, MAJ Allen R. Simpson, and CPT and Mrs. Abraham L. Bain. Also hailed and farewelled were two "snow birds" LT and Mrs. Carter Thomas and LT Richard Goosen.

A silver tray and congratulations was presented to CPT Harold Rowland on his recent wedding.

After supper everyone joined in for the fun at the black jack tables and wheel of fortune, provided by Mrs. William A. Duncan of the Daughters of the US Army. MAJ Forrest V. Graves came in first with the most winnings of play money and received a bottle of champagne.

2/10th FA

The ladies of the 2/10th Field Artillery met for coffee in the home of Mrs. Hal Sharp. Mrs. Dennis Hill co-hosted.

Mrs. Ray Carter was welcomed to the group. Mrs. Michael Wells was presented a charm for her work as Reservations Chairman.

After refreshments a short business meeting was held.

NCOWC

The ladies of the NCOWC met for lunch last week at Morrison's in Cross Country Plaza. Hostesses were Mrs. James Musgrove and Mrs. Richard Flagg.

CITIZENSHIP CLASSES

Army Community Service will begin the Fall session of Citizenship classes Oct. 5. The classes run for six Saturdays and begin at 10 a.m.

PARTICIPATE IN A UNIQUE WORKSHOP

Do you have a friend or neighbor who does not speak or understand the English language well? Would you be willing to spend some time in better preparing yourself to help her communicate with others in performing, in a strange land, the necessary tasks of the wife and mother? Then mark Oct. 7-9 on your calendar.

Mrs. Ruth Holmes, of Marathon, FL, will conduct a workshop at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606, Dixie Rd., Ft. Benning, which will provide training for you. The purpose of the workshop is to teach interested persons to teach English to non-English speaking people, to enable them to communicate with others and eventually to read the Bible.

WORKSHOP SCHEDULE: Mon. through Wed., Oct. 7-9, from 9:30 to 2:30 p.m., with a lunch break. (The lunch break will be flexible to accommodate mothers with children who go or return from school near the noon hour.) Each person who stays the noon hour should bring a sack lunch. Drinks will be furnished. A free nursery will be available for your use upstairs in Bldg. 2605.

To register, please call the Religious Education Center at 545-2366/4-3341 or Sue Ward at 689-8690.

ENGLISH CLASSES for non-English speaking persons are held each Tuesday at the Religious Education Center from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and at the McBrude School (McGraw Manor) each Wednesday from 7-9 p.m. Teachers are needed in both programs.

OWC TALENT SHOW LUNCHEON

Join the OWC members and "catch" a friend or neighbor in the Talent Show Luncheon on Oct. 9 at the Main Officers' Club. Sherry hour will begin at 11 a.m. in the Main Ballroom, with the Talent Show and luncheon held in the Supper Club, from noon to 2 p.m.

Reservations need to be made by Friday noon, Oct. 4 through your unit representatives or by calling Joyce Boles, 689-6851, Carol Buckley, 689-7058, or Judy Viale, 689-7593. Cancellations may be made no later than 10 a.m. Monday, Oct. 7, by calling Carol Buckley or Judy Viale.

Remember that this year, you must sign your chit before it is considered a reservation! Pick up your nametag at the door in the Main Ballroom before going to lunch.

DO YOU GET YOUR COMMUNIQUE?

All wives of active duty officers are eligible to receive the OWC magazine, Communique, each month either through the mail or distribution. The IOBC wives and the Allied wives receive their copies at their coffees, while those women living in quarters receive their copies through the mail, addressed to the occupant of the quarters, and those ladies who live off post receive theirs through the mail, addressed directly to them.

If you have not received your copy of the Communique, call Mary Riviello, 689-7276, and give her your correct address.

OPERATION: SURVIVAL

What does it cost? Who can participate? What are Operation Survival's basic concepts? Does it really motivate?

Let's answer the last question first. "I always liked to do good, but I didn't want to work for it. Now, I want to be the best in everything I do."

Those are the words of one 15-year-old now that he's finished the five-week Operation Survival program. "I would give my life now to help other people with this type of program," he said.

Another 15-year-old said of the course, "This program has resolved the conflict in me and I don't know why. I've got a very large ego; I've always told myself I could do anything. Now I know I can."

A 21-year old has nothing but praise for Operation Survival: "(Operation Survival was) one of the great experiences of my life. In four short weeks and a weekend, I came to meet and trust people. I love to see people find themselves — indeed, I found myself. I saw value placed on life. I've come to experience knowing and loving people."

How to describe Operation Survival? Perhaps the best way is to compare it with a more widely-known program — Project Outward Bound.

Outward Bound is a civilian program designed to increase self-confidence. It's rigorous, demanding and expensive. Several areas in the US offer the program. It's meant for people of all ages. When it's over, you're tired, sore, hungry and very proud of yourself — which is the whole idea.

'All young people have the need to climb mountains'

Operation Survival is essentially the same with four important exceptions. It's not as long — three days actually in the field versus six weeks for Outward Bound. It's not nearly as expensive — ten dollars (for purchasing staple foods) versus $600 for Outward Bound. There is an involved testing procedure before and after the field exercise — unheard of in Outward Bound. Finally, Operation Survival is staffed completely with volunteers — most from the Army, with a few from Columbus.

Who can participate in Operation Survival? All young people have the need to "climb mountains," to be exposed to danger, to conquer that danger and — in the process — expand self-concept.

For no one is this more true than young drug users, alcohol users and those regularly in trouble with the law. It is these youngsters who have chosen to take risks in a socially unacceptable way. Oftentimes this behavior is self-destructive — a destroyer rather than a builder of self-concept. It is to this segment of young society that Operation Survival addresses itself.

Others participate too. Those who have lived with self-defeat in their young lives should find the program most helpful.

"We can do almost as much with ten dollars, volunteer Army instructors and other adults and five weeks as Outward Bound can do with six hundred dollars and six weeks," says Chaplain (EPT) Thomas B. Fraker, Operation Survival's originator and director.

Operation Survival was founded on the conclusion that American society contains no rites of passage. Young people are not routinely faced with dangerous risk to their lives and the decisions needed to overcome that risk. Further, older members of society do not celebrate the overcoming of that risk. Consequently, there is no graduation to or recognition of adulthood — no rite of passage.

Young people are caught in a Ferris Wheel that doesn't stop turning, so to speak. They want to be treated as adults — indeed want to be adults — but there is no social structure acknowledging adulthood. Adults have no structure by which adulthood can be measured or conferred. The Ferris Wheel keeps turning.

The time: 3 p.m. Friday, April 12, 1974. The place was the Airborne Department's 34-foot jump tower at Ft. Benning — first stop on the agenda for the young people participating in Operation Survival. They (and this reporter) will be facing danger for the next 48 hours.

On the ground the tower doesn't look that high. It looks exactly like a parachute without the canopy. That's what you keep telling yourself.

'It's a time to think seriously about life insurance'

Once in the tower, however, it's an entirely different story. You can't see the cable or the pulley — only the ground. And it's a long way down. All that equipment strapped on your back and between your legs doesn't add any confidence either. You keep hoping it's on correctly. Volunteer instructors from the Airborne Dept. check your gear. Then it's up to the tower door, risers (the straps attached to the pulley) hooked up.

Chaplain Fraker is there to give last minute instructions. "Keep your head down. Don't be afraid. Jump!"

It's a time to think seriously — if briefly — about life insurance. You jump. Some had to be pushed out; all were afraid.

The next thing you know, you're stopped by the cable. You feel two sudden pains. One is in the neck as the risers stop the fall. That's the reason for keeping the head down; otherwise it's the ears that get caught — and that really hurts as some found out. The other pain is in the groin; two straps from the back come between the legs and are attached to fittings on the chest. When you're caught in mid-air by the cable and pulley, you feel it; you're glad too.

Everyone jumped twice. The second time was easy. "I was so scared the first time," one young person said. "That thing up there is hazardous to your health," another said.

When it was all over, everyone was visibly more relaxed. Everyone was more talkative — better able to talk, actually. But the weekend had hardly begun.

Let's jump now to early Easter morning, April 14. It seemed like a long time getting to this morning. We had endured three other "problems" similar in danger to the jump tower, plus two sleepless nights due to rain with no sleeping bags, rubber mattresses or tents.

We had just finished a light breakfast of grapefruit and prepackaged instant oatmeal. No milk or coffee, no toast and no seasoning, just water. This reporter's temperament was similar to a zombie's in a thick fog. Very few even talked, although there were to be two very emotional happenings this day.

The day started with a short Easter service by Chaplain Fraker. Imagine the Crucifixion and Resurrection reduced to a 10-minute talk; that was the length of the service. We sat in a circle on the bank of a lovely pond; the morning sun filtering through a thin fog seemed to heighten the mystery of this day and made the Easter Service unforgettable.

Chaplain Fraker then sat down in the circle and asked, "For what are you most grateful right now? And, what is the best part about you?"

Slowly — very slowly at first — people began answering those questions aloud. "Right now I'm most grateful for the people sitting here with me," one girl (a nurse) said. "I've never felt that I could trust others to listen to my innermost feelings. I feel that the best part about me is the bigness of my heart — my willingness to accept people as they are."

"I'm most grateful for my understanding husband, who insisted that Operation Survival was tailor-made for me," one young woman said. It was a full ten minutes before she could contain her tears

— they were happy ones — long enough to answer the second question. "The best part about me is that I understand people, or at least that I try."

"I'm most grateful for other human beings; for it is through my relations with other people that I come to understand myself," one young man said. "The best part about me is that I do this consciously, with a purpose."

And so it went. Young Dan Pfeiffer was to say later, "those moments meant the most to me. I was inspired by the voices of the others. It made me feel good — more so than the physical aspects of the trip. For me, it was the highlight of the weekend."

But the weekend wasn't over yet. Yet to come was the biggest challenge of all. It wasn't to be the conquering of fear; it was to be the conquering of the urge to quit.

This last problem was a forced march of more than 10 miles. That doesn't sound like much, but it is. When you're tired and hungry, 10 miles (it was considerably more than that) seems like a light year. And it had to be walked in a hurry — which is why it's called a forced march. To fail to make it means getting picked up and facing everyone who did make it. But fortunately, no one had to face that.

From there it was back to the main post chapel annex. Awaiting the hikers were parents and a long table of FOOD. It was no contest. The social amenities came after a full stomach.

Operation Survival isn't just the 48-hour hike in the woods. There are tests for the young people and their parents to take — both before and after the weekend.

On April 7, one week before the hike, all the young people took the Tennessee Self Concept Test, a test designed to measure a person's acceptance of himself. When these people returned from the hike April 14, they took the test again. Each person's concept of himself had changed dramatically for the better.

On March 31, two weeks before the hike, each parent took the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis Profile. The parent was asked to judge his child's traits from his (i.e., the parents') perspective. Some of these traits tested included Nervous (and its opposite — Composed), Depressive-Lighthearted, Dominant-Submissive, Self-disciplined-Impulsive, Hostile-Tolerant and Sympathetic-Indifferent, among others. Parents took the test again two weeks after the hike. Again scores were significantly higher after the hike, indicating that parents observed better temperament in their children.

How long will it last? 'We don't know.'

Also starting March 31, two weeks before the outing, there were meetings during each week between Chaplain Fraker and his young charges. Some were sensitivity seminars; some were "get-it-off-your-chest" sessions. Some were physical training classes with calisthenics and distance runs around a track to get into shape. The final meeting one week after the hike was a "debriefing" session. Hikers were asked how the program could be made better.

How long will this increase in self-concept last? "We don't know," Chaplain Fraker said. "But I suspect that it will depend on its being reinforced at home, in school and in society."

"I think this heightened self concept will last a very long time; we hope our tests will bear this out." The Tennessee Self-Concept Test was given again six weeks after the weekend in the woods.

"But even if self-esteem regresses over the months and years, it will still be higher than it was before."

"Life is an ongoing process of change — sometimes seemingly better, sometimes seemingly worse. As a person passes from adolescence into adulthood, he will have to look back on a challenge that he successfully faced. He will be able to face future challenges more squarely and with less fear. I contend that the less fear a person has when faced with a challenge — especially a physical challenge — the more successfully he will be able to deal with that and future challenges," Fraker said.

HUNTING SAFETY ORIENTATION

Post regulations require that all individuals hunting on post attend a safety orientation. These orientations will be presented in Marshall Auditorium at 7 p.m. each Wednesday during the month of October. Individuals attending the orientation must have a post hunting permit. The permit will be stamped to show that the bearer has attended the safety orientation. Hunting permits may be obtained at the Rod and Gun Club. For additional information call 687-0562.

SWIMMING POOLS

Since we have been experiencing warm weather the last few days, Carey Swimming Pool, Main Post, will remain in operation 7 days a week until further notice. All other pools have been closed for the season. In addition to recreational swimming, Carey pool is available 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. for "Swim for Your Life" participants.

FT. BENNING CHILDREN'S CHOIR

Ft. Benning Children's Choir meets each Tuesday, 4-5 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg 2606 Dixie Road. All children 3rd through the 6th grades are invited to attend. The choir sings monthly at a chapel and on special occasions. Music Reading is also taught. For further information contact the Director of Religious Education at 545-4334.

REGISTERING VEHICLES

New hours for registering vehicles and weapons at PMO, Bldg 83, will be 9 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., Monday through Friday. These new operating hours have been changed to allow personnel in Vehicle Registration to screen and remove records of those personnel who have failed to properly out-process in the past.

Military and DOD personnel are reminded of their responsibility to properly clear through Vehicle Registration prior to permanent change of station. For further information call 545-3924.

CHILDREN

Numerous complaints have been received concerning small children playing in the streets in the Family Housing areas. This is an extremely unsafe practice and parents are requested to insure that their children do not play in the streets.

The Bayonet, September 27, 1974

How to tell your friends you're reenlisting.

Sometimes a good man leaves the Army for a bad reason. Pressure. The kind he gets from some of the people around him.

We know that there isn't an army of cranks out there. But we also know that the few there are can make it tough on a guy who's trying to make an important decision.

So we've gathered together some of the more frequently heard gripes, complaints, harassments and put-downs. And we've put down the facts.

This way you'll have the answers the next time someone questions your decision to reenlist.

"They'll promise you anything to get you to reenlist." That's a big one. You hear it all the time. And the irony of it is, it's true. But not the way your buddies mean it.

First, you have to qualify for whatever it is you want to reenlist for. If you do, we put your choice in writing. Along with your own understanding of the agreement in your own handwriting. So there's no chance of misunderstanding each other.

Then, if something goes wrong, we make it right. Or you make tracks.

Here's another one. "Only guys who can't make it as civilians reenlist." Wrong again. The average reenlistee today is smarter, better trained and more highly motivated than ever before. With a better chance of making it, anywhere.

The fact is, he stays because he likes what he's doing. (We know the importance of job satisfaction, and we've been working on making the Army more responsive to the needs of the individual.)

The only way we'll keep a good man is to make him a good offer. So we've become more competitive. That way you get a better Army, and we get a better soldier.

"You'll never make big money in the Army." Maybe so. But how many people really make it big whatever they do for a living?

You will make a good salary, though. One that will go a lot farther when you consider that many of the best things of Army life are free, or much lower than in the civilian community.

So don't be fooled by pay comparisons. It's the things that you as an Army man won't have to pay for that really add up.

And then there's "The Army's ok if you're single." Perhaps we should be glad that the complainers concede that much. But this statement implies that it's not ok for a family man.

We say, ask one. We think you'll find that Army benefits for your family are outstanding. Benefits that go beyond the savings at the commissary. Benefits that grow with your family. We like to think of today's Army as a family of families. As responsive to the needs of your family as we would be to our own. And last but not least: "What are you, a Lifer?" This one has been floating around for a long time. So we'd like to set the record straight, and see what a "Lifer" really is.

In today's Army, he's a man who's living his own life. Making his own decisions.

He's a man who wants and works for the good life. For himself. And for his family.

He's a man who realizes that the Army asks for an extra degree of dedication, over and above normal job loyalty.

He's a man who enjoys in return that unique sense of pride that comes from serving one's country.

If that's the way you feel, talk it over with your Career Counselor. He'll also be able to help you deal with any other discouraging words you may hear. He's a "Lifer," too.

Today's Army gets better every time a good man reenlists.

Pioneer football Hq and Spt Co finally score

Hq & Spt Co, 1/29th Inf, TSB did something in flag football action this week that they had been unable to do prior to this game—they scored a point. A touchdown, in fact!

Held scoreless in their two games this season, the Headquarters clerks were out to prove that they could score points with the best of them in the Pioneer league.

Hq & Spt Co received the game opening kickoff, but couldn't move the ball in four downs. Co D, 1/29th took over, and Willie Johnson fumbled on the first play, but he recovered his own boot just in time on the 2-yard line.

On the second down play, Headquarters' Greg Turner intercepted a Johnson pass, and the clerks had possession once again. And once again they failed to gain any yardage in four consecutive downs.

The Co D offense took over and Willie Johnson ran for 15 yards around the right end. On the second play, it was Johnson again, this time for 10 yards up the middle. He ran twice more, but to no avail, and the next play he took to the air but fared no better with an incomplete pass.

Delta company kicked the ball back to the clerks who began another quest for their first score of the season. They had no progress whatsoever on the first two downs, but on the third play, Donald Freeman hit Ken Harless with a thirty yard pass, and Harless scampered over the goal for the score, but the clerks missed the extra point.

It took Co D exactly one play to erase the Hq & Spt lead in the game. On their first down, Delta's Willie Johnson threw to Joe fincher for the score and they made their extra point, giving them a 7-6 edge.

Richard Collins scurries for yardage as the opposing team closes in on him during PIONEER flag football action

With 30 seconds to go in the first half, Headquarters tried a last ditch effort to take the lead in the form of a 60 yard bomb. Unfortunately, no one told Delta's Jeff Smith that the ball wasn't intended for him, as he intercepted the pass as well as Freeman's hope for another first half score.

Hq & Spt opened the 2nd half with possession of the ball, and Freeman promptly threw to the arms of a Co D player again. This time Howard Brown picked off the misguided pass. But Delta couldn't move the ball on four plays, and they gave it back to the clerks.

Headquarters tried the long bomb once again, but it was knocked off target by an opposing player. On the next play, Freeman faked the pass, and snuck around the right end for 18 yards. He gambled on his fourth down play, needing but two yards for the first and he got it, on a short run.

The clerks picked up 15 free yards on a penalty, followed by a 10 yard Freeman run and another first down. With first and goal to go, Headquarters failed to move the ball on three plays, and in fact lost 10 yards on a penalty. Freeman was run out of bounds on his fourth down attempt to score, and Co D took over again.

Johnson and the Co D players kept the ball on the ground for four plays, to run the clock out, and the strategy worked to some extent. When the clerks took over the ball for the last time in the game, only 28 seconds remained on the clock.

But it wasn't enough for a tired Headquarters team, for with two downs and a half minute of play, the clerks couldn't move the ball even a single yard, picking up their third straight defeat.

Local soldiers make good baseball coaches

One of the biggest highlights of the past summer for many 9- and 10-year old boys was little league baseball, sponsored by the Youth Activities Center (YAC).

Each summer many youngsters get involved in the activities of the baseball season. Since YAC didn't provide coaches for each team, a call for "volunteers" was sent out for interested personnel concerning coaching positions.

"Before entering the Army I coached little league teams in my home town in MA," explained PVT Richard LaFond, Co A, 43rd Engrs.

LaFond, a mechanic with the engineer battalion, said, "Coaching little league gave me a chance to relax and at the same time do something I enjoyed. Work with the kids was really enjoyable. I felt I was helping myself as much as the kids."

With only eleven players on the team it was evident that there was a shortage of players.

"During the middle of the summer many of the kids went on vacation," commented SP4 Thomas Gallo, assistant coach. "This left us a little shorthanded for players, but the boys didn't lose their spirit."

"I found winning wasn't all that counted; playing for the fun of it and knowing the boys needed me was just as important," Gallo added.

"Coaching a little league team not only gave the kids a chance to play ball, but helped me learn more about coaching," stated PFC Dean Zehr, mechanic and coach. "If I'm around next year I'll volunteer to coach another team."

The little league coaches were not only recognized by the parents of the young ball players, but were also given Certificates of Achievement for their part in the little league program from their company commander.

Pony League Rams went against the Wolverines.

All leagues play their first official games tomorrow at Doughboy Stadium and Blue Field.

Pigskin action at Doughboy Stadium will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the Biddy Redskins pitted against the Razorbacks; the Pee Wee Redskins playing the Buffalo Bills at 10:30 a.m.; the Doughboy Knights versus the Razorbacks at 11:30 a.m.; and the Pony Rams playing the Jets with playing time set for 1 p.m.

Action gets underway at Blue Field at 9:30 a.m. as the Biddy League Lions face the Dolphins; the Pee Wee Rams are scheduled against the Dolphins at 10:30 a.m.; the Doughboy Raiders will take on the Patriots in 11:30 a.m. action; and the Pony League Steelers will vie for victory against the Wolverines in 1 p.m. play.

YAC football gets underway

Exhibition games highlighted last Saturday's opening ceremonies for the 1974 Youth Activity Football Season. Approximately 375 players and 100 volunteer coaches and parent representatives assembled on the field at Doughboy Stadium for introductions.

MAJ Tommy Houston, master of ceremonies, introduced Chaplain (CPT) George Gudz who gave the invocation. MAJ James D. Thurman, major sports commissioner, then introduced the teams, coaches and league commissioners; BG Paul Mueller, guest speaker, praised the tremendous volunteer effort and emphasized teamwork.

Two teams from each league played a quarter of exhibition football. The Biddy League Redskins played the Dolphins; the Pee Wee League Redskins played the Buffalo Bills; the Doughboy League Razorbacks were pitted against the Patriots; and

197th football Co B drops bomb on Cbt Spt Co

By C. B. Hoover

The return of fair skies saw the gridiron warm up with plenty of action as the "Forever Forward" football season went into its fourth week last week.

The "Patriot" League came up with surprise plays as well as squeakers as they played three of the four games scheduled.

It was a total surprise to Cbt Spt Co, 1/58th Inf when Co B dropped a 40-yard bomb in the opening minutes of the game, then went on with a two point conversion to defeat Cbt Spt Co 8-0.

"We try to get the bomb off in the first few minutes of play. If it works there is a psychological advantage established immediately over our opponents," said Donald Johnson of Co B.

Proving that the bomb doesn't always work, HHC lorded over Co B 6-0.

"No one seemed to be able to score in the first two quarters, but in the fourth quarter we used the quarterback sneak to zap them," stated Eugene Russell of HHC.

HHC carried their sneaky ways into a game with Co C, but found tough opposition up and down the line and the game was forced into overtime. Showing that their team had the strong line, HHC pushed Co C back in the scrimmage and defeated them 1-0.

The defeat of Co C gave HHC a 4-0 record. "It looks like we have it all together and stand a good chance at the brigade championship," commented Russell.

The "Red leg" League, 2/10th FA fired up the gridiron by playing all three games scheduled — and shutout two of them.

Btry B was the victim of both shutouts and felt the sting of defeat again as C Btry dropped them 13-0. HHB put in the final blows 8-0. It was a week of shutouts for Btry B.

Harold A. Odomes of HHB attributes their success in defeating Btry B to the zone defense featuring a free safety. "Our free safety 'Monster Man', Craig Hall, puts the skids on the bomb or short pass. He has intercepted six passes with three of them being run back for touchdowns in the last two games."

Running a power sweep left, A Btry moved C Btry defenders aside for their fifth win 6-0. Using the zone defense A Btry has been able to hold down the points scored against them to six, which were made on the ground, demonstrating the merits of the zone.

The "Cottonbalers" League, 3/7th Inf, played two of its three scheduled games.

The game between Co B and Cbt Spt Co was forced into overtime. In a fourth down sudden death penetration Co B came out victorious in the scrimmage and won 1-0.

"It was a knock down and drag out all the way. The quarterback, Nathaniel Lilley, and defensive safety Paul Cambell, played their hearts out trying to beat Cbt Spt Co, but Cbt Spt Co was just too much," commented Robert E. Grice of Co B.

The sweet taste of victory didn't last long for Co B; they were defeated in the next game by Co C.

"The dynamic passing of Isaac Brown to Michael Davis was the winning combination for our team. Of course, the interception of a B Co pass by Melvin Fuller and a 20 yard run back really helped turn the trick," stated Morris E. Price of Co C.

A two-point conversion after the play eased Co C by B Co 8-6, leaving them with a 1 and 2 record.

The "Independent" League saw the 298th Sig Plt maintain a perfect record by chalking up their fifth win for the season by defeating HHC brigade.

"It was a payback for last year," stated Jamie L. Walker of the 298th Sig Plt. "They never had a chance against our 'Quick Sand' defense. They were just sucked down every time they came up to the line."

A pass from Samuel Devaughn to Donald Rees gave the 298th Sig Plt their 6-0 victory over HHC brigade.

"We play A Trp, 15th Cav next and they had better get their ponies ready to ride or we're going to flash right by them," Walker concluded.

The "Ever Ready" League, 197th Spt Bn, saw some action. But at press time results of only one game was available. There was action between Co A "The Paper Tigers" and the "Super Medics" of Co B. Also seeing action were the Co D "Knuckle Busters" and "The Truckers" of Co C, with D Co winning 6-0.

"They intercepted a pass in the flats on us and went in to score," commented Sargent Christian of Co C. "We have a good offensive team, but we have to tighten up our defense. With a little more practice we will be giving other teams a rough row to hoe."

Bassing scene has changed -- for the better

By Dave Deutscher

ANOTHER ANGLE TO BASS ANGLING

A few years ago you could car-top a small Jon boat down to places like Harps Pond, Kings Pond, and a few others not-so-well known, and expect to run into most of Ft. Benning's finest bass fishermen on any Saturday morning. Today those same fishing addicts are found scattered up and down the Chattahoochee River in sleek bass rigs with the latest electric equipment at their side.

Yes, the bassing scene has changed and in my opinion, the river and Lake Eufaula has helped a lot of dreams come true for the Benning angler whether he be in quest of a five-pound lunker or an action-packed day of chasing "schoolies."

I'm not going to jump into the debate about the pros and cons of dam building on the part of the Corps. The undeniable fact is that several large reservoirs are close to us and each year more and more members of this community are turning to them for sport. Another undeniable fact is that locating bass in a large reservoir like Eufaula can be quite a challenge even with depth sounders, temperature gauges, oxygen monitors and light meters.

When bass are suspended (hanging somewhere between surface and river bottom) the average angler has to invest a lot of time to fill a stringer, especially if he's stubborn to the point of sticking with a weighted plastic worm. Yet, on certain days those hawks are hugging bottom like a leech and you can hit pay dirt like a champ; even if you're pounding shore lines while nobody's watching.

Why? What is the big factor that puts bass on those easy-to-find ledges? This is the question that a few of the locals have answered. One of them is Hank Beamesderfer, a dedicated bass man and a favorite boat partner.

After months of almost daily fishing Eufaula, we concluded that the bass followed a specific pattern dependent upon the particular day of the week.

To clarify, let's examine any two consecutive days. On Day One we might find bass suspended in the submerged trees under forty feet of water. On Day Two, with identical wind, weather, color and other conditions, we would find the bass sitting on ledges near deep water. We examined the possibility of sun-moon positions and found it inconsistent. The only factor which made one day distinct from the other was the rate of water flow.

When the dam was open and the water was moving at a good clip, the fish seemed to string out along ledges in tight schools. Often these ledges with close access to deep water can be found right against the visible river and creek banks.

Listening to other successful fishermen supported the findings with some pretty logical reasons. When the current in the river is strong, bass will seek something solid to hold near to avoid having to constantly swim against the pull. This could be a stump of the lake bottom which eases the current through friction. Considering most of the submerged river ledges in Lake Eufaula are lined with stumps; and remembering that big bass like to be near deep water, the target area is obvious.

Look for ledges that drop sharply into the old river bed. I prefer to hit the ledges that sit only eight to ten feet deep since it's really difficult to keep a worm on the bottom in fast water. From this vantage point, bass can ambush passing schools of shad as well as any food that rushes by up top.

There is no single secret to finding bass. But if your luck has been less than satisfactory on the big lakes, get out there when the water is pulling and bump those ledges.

All in the family.

Benning to conserve paper

A concerted drive is underway at Ft. Benning to alleviate a severe paper shortage and offset the effects of a 180 per cent increase in the price of paper that has caused concern throughout the country.

The post conservation drive is in keeping with a request by Secretary of the Army Howard (Bo) Callaway that Army installations reduce paper requirements to minimum levels consistent with effective mission and adequate records maintenance.

The Management Analysis Division of the Office of the Comptroller has been assigned the responsibility of coordinating studies to determine the most feasible ways paper can be saved in day-to-day post activities. Support for the program will be sought installation-wide.

While Ft. Benning has had an effective paper recycling program since Nov. 1971, more emphasis will now be placed on reducing the amount of paper actually used, especially in such areas as correspondence, textbooks, instructional materials and printing of circulars, bulletins, etc.

A spokesman for the Comptroller's office said the program will operate through command channels with each command or agency on post being responsible for determining methods of operation that will save paper. For instance, the spokesman said, since most all offices and individuals on post use sheet paper for typing and printing, this should be a main part of the conservation study.

In this area, commands and agencies have been directed to use both sides of typing paper for correspondence, to use carbon copies more instead of duplicating machines, and to use neat pen or ink corrections and deletions rather than retyping, in addition to many other paper-saving actions.

"The paper conservation drive is closely related to our efforts to conserve our natural resources," the spokesman said, adding that "it is just as wrong to waste paper as it is to waste water, electricity or fuel."

43rd quickly exceeds CFC goal

The 43rd Engr. Bn, 36th Engrs. were well prepared for this year's annual Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) drive.

The CFC combines three charity fund drives into one single campaign; the National Health Agencies, International Service Agencies and the United Way. As a result it saves valuable time and reduces expenses.

This year's battalion CFC goal was set at $5,700.

The "KEYMEN" (persons directly contacting personnel about CFC) played an important role in the campaign. The primary job of the "KEYMEN," was collecting cash, coordinating payroll deduction plans, and pledges.

Combining all these assets within a twenty-four-hour period, the engineers managed to collect a grand total of $7,200.

"Everyone was anxious to become the first unit on post to exceed it's goal," stated PFC McKinley Hussey, HHC, 43rd Engr's "KEYMAN."

Throughout the past year the 43rd Engrs have been actively participating in the CFC and other various Civic Action Projects.

All units within the 36th Engr Grp participated in the campaign. However, the 43rd Engrs is the only unit which has exceeded its goal.

The 43rd Engrs CFC fund raising drive was spearheaded and organized by MAJ Charlie D. Shaul, executive officer.

For more information concerning donations, contact your unit CFC representative.

Exchange has Christmas catalogs

Post exchange customers at Ft. Benning have a convenient, hassle-free way to Christmas shop this year — the AAFES American Showcase special-order catalog.

The catalog contains 1,200 US-brand items that can be ordered for delivery to United States Addresses. Although properly completed customer orders normally are processed at an AAFES facility at Atlanta, GA within five days of receipt, exchange customers are urged to order early, allowing at least six weeks for delivery during the busy Christmas gift giving season.

The Showcase catalog is for the use of authorized AAFES customers worldwide. In the CONUS, the catalog is available at exchange customer service counters for the in-store use of patrons.

The catalog contains diamonds, watches and jewelry, cosmetics, gifts, dinnerware, home furnishings, lamps and locks, luggage, apparel, toys and games, sports and hobby equipment, photographic items and electronics — all backed by the policy of "satisfaction guaranteed or your money cheerfully refunded."

Georgia offering educational and training under the provisions of the Veterans Educational Assistance Program, reports that an ever-increasing number of Georgia Veterans are taking advantage of the educational and training benefits available to them under the GI Bill. Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler said that VA figures show that 38,218 Georgia veterans, dependents and servicemen were in training as of June 1, 1974. Many veterans, whose benefits would have expired on May 31 of this year, appear to be taking advantage of the new law which now gives them ten years from the date of discharge in which to use up their GI Bill educational benefits. The previous limitation was eight years. It is expected that enrollments will increase even more if the Congress and the President ever reach agreement on proposed hikes in education allowance.

Columbus College receives approval for budget

Columbus College received the approval of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia last week for a revised project budget of $2.1 million for the Business-Education Classroom building which also will house the faculty of the Army ROTC program.

In addition of 27 faculty appointments, approval was received to begin a Specialist in Education Degree, to award three Regents Scholarships, to begin a clinical agreement with the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation Hospital, to establish the Judge John S. Averill Memorial Fellowship and to amend the Statutes and By-Laws of Columbus College.

The Business Education Classroom building will include 30,948 square feet of assignable space. Hecht & Burdshaw are architects for the building. After the bidding is completed, which will take approximately three months, the current allocation of time for the completion of the project will be 14 months or 400 days, pending minor modifications, according to Edward Burdshaw. The building will feature special purpose labs, office and general classroom space for use by the Business, Education and Army ROTC faculty.

The Specialist in Education degree in Elementary Education will provide for the offering of post-masters graduate work in professional education. Designed to afford an opportunity for school personnel in Columbus, implementation for this program will begin this fall. The superintendents of schools in the area have cited the need for this program, plus 175 students have been graduated from the Masters of Education program in Elementary Education offered jointly by Georgia State University and Columbus College since 1972.

Regents scholarships have been awarded to Robert Clyde Bardwell, junior history major; and James Michael Burns, junior accounting major, both of Columbus; and to Janet Deborah Rigsby, senior history major from Midland.

The Georgia Warm Springs Foundation Hospital will provide clinical learning experiences for approximately 60 students in the Mental Health Program at Columbus College.

The Judge John S. Averill Memorial Fellowship was established as a continuous Fellowship open to graduate students in Business Administration, Arts and Sciences, and in Education.

The amendments to the Statutes and By-Laws of Columbus College are concerned with new additions and in bringing these documents into accord with Regents policies. The amendments to the Statutes involve the creation of an office of the Director of Graduate Studies, a Graduate Council to serve in an advisory capacity to the President, an article on the appointment of a Graduate Faculty, and regulations on employment of relatives and leaves of absence.

Changes in the By-Laws concern membership, responsibilities, organization, meetings, and committees of the faculty organization, and the creation of the Faculty Senate.

What Price Credit?

Reprinted from Soldiers Magazine

By Larry J. Myers

"CASH or CHARGE?" smiles the young salesgirl behind the counter as her hands swiftly assemble the items for recording.

"Cash," comes a crisp reply.

"Cash? Now let me see," she thinks aloud as her eyes search the massive keyboard in front of her which looks more like a complicated flight panel than a cash register. "There must be a key for cash purchases on here somewhere."

An exaggeration? Maybe. But the latest trend in consumer purchasing is not. Cash purchasing is becoming obsolete! Last year more than half of all retail sales were charged. Americans in 1973 charged goods and services and obtained quick cash advances on bank credit cards alone to the tune of $13.8 billion, up from $10.5 billion the year before. It's getting so bad that "charge it" may get a listing all its own in the dictionary.

Time has drastically changed American buying habits. The early years of the American business environment were marked by the cash-and-carry philosophy, and it wasn't until the 1900s that credit became a possibility for the wage earners of this country. By the close of World War I, consumer goods were readily available due to tremendous increases in production. All this resulted in a phenomenon that took this country by surprise — the advent of consumer credit. In 1923 the consumer debt was a mere $7 billion. By June 1969, the figure had leaped to $116 billion and this year the consumer debt is closing in on $400 billion!

Cash Confusion. Today, even if a customer tries to avoid charging what he buys it can sometimes be bothersome. Paying cash for expensive merchandise can cause thorough confusion on the part of a salesperson and often result in his trying to persuade you to reconsider and open a charge account. According to them, "It'll only take a minute."

The ultimate end to the credit splurge is pure and simple personal bankruptcy for many. As the consumer credit debt goes up and up so do bankruptcy statistics. In 1950 there were 18,000 personal bankruptcies. In 1967 the figure stood at 207,000. And so the severity of the credit problem moves onward and upward.

People are often the 'things' that burn

The President of the United States has proclaimed the week of Oct. 6 to 12 Fire Prevention Week to emphasize the need for fire prevention throughout the year.

The major national theme for this year's Fire Prevention Week is "People are often the 'things' that burn."

The Ft. Benning Fire Prevention and Protection Division personnel, headed by Clyde L. Cadenhead, will hold fire prevention lectures and demonstrations for the Ft. Benning school children during the week.

Fire prevention pamphlets and a fire inspection check list to use as a guide for making home fire inspections will be passed out to the children and fire trucks will be on display for the smaller children in Kindergarten and grades 1 and 2.

Pupils in grades 4 through 8 will receive instructions on the use of fire extinguishers.

Fifth grade school children from McBride, Loyd, E. White, Dexter and Wilson Schools will tour the United States Army Infantry Center Fire Prevention Museum, Building No. 1819 Oct. 8-9. A 20-minute film on fire prevention will be shown after each tour.

Talks and demonstrations will also be held at different locations on post for military personnel and civilian employees. Fire prevention and removal of fire hazards wherever people work, live, study and find recreation will be stressed.

One of the most historical places to visit nearby to Columbus is Westville — city of the 1800's. You can tour the city of the past in a cart drawn by these two mules. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Gold Star Wives schedule meeting

The Chattahoochee Chapter of the Gold Star Wives of America, Inc., will hold their monthly meeting Oct. 9 in the Corridor Room of the Main Officers' Mess at Ft. Benning. A social hour at 7:30 p.m. will be followed by dinner at 8 p.m.

Special guests will be the candidates for political office in the coming election.

The Chapter has voted to offer an Associate Membership to widows of retirees whose death was not service-connected.

For additional information call 561-3270 or 323-6246.

Retired officers to meet

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter (Columbus), The Retired Officers' Association, will host the 16th Annual State Convention of Georgia Retired Officers' Association on Oct. 10-12 in Columbus.

Opening ceremonies at Infantry Hall will include welcoming speeches by MG Thomas M. Tarpley and Mayor Bob D. Hydrick, and a presentation of "I Am the Infantry."

During the convention, Third District Congressman Jack Brinkley and COL George Henrickson, Chief Legislative Counsel for the national organization, will address the members. State Senator Floyd Hudgins will be among the honored guests.

A dinner dance at the Ralston Hotel on Friday and a luncheon on Saturday will highlight the social events of the convention. The ladies will take a conducted tour of Ft. Benning and Columbus.

Where -- oh where -- are those wash 'n' wears?

If you're wondering whatever happened to those wash and wear fatigues the Army was testing, here's the latest.

The Army Uniform Board recommended that the 100% cotton sateen uniform be replaced by wash and wears. However, Department of Defense regulations require that all the services must adopt the same fatigue uniform. The Army, therefore, asked the other services how they felt about his wash and wear uniform.

The Navy liked it and said "yes."

The Air Force expressed concern that the polyester and cotton material may be a safety hazard on the flight line because of the excessive static electricity it generates.

The Marine Corps initially said it had no interest in the uniform but recently decided to give it a six-month test.

The fatigue uniform as we know it dates back to 1942 when green HBTs (Hering Bone Twill) replaced blue denims. The uniform is essentially the same today—other than having had a few styling and material changes—and is designed for use both as a combat and work uniform in temperate climates.

The advantages of a wash and wear fatigue uniform are that the cost and frequency of laundering is greatly reduced, and the soldier will look neater longer.

The Defense Supply Agency is coordinating action among the services in the acceptance of the uniform. (ANF)

Riverside to be dedicated as historic place

Riverside, the plantation home used by 28 of 31 Ft. Benning commanders since government purchase of the property in 1919, will be officially dedicated as a National Historic Place Oct. 6 with the unveiling of a permanent marker in front of the house.

The house was placed on the Interior Department's National Register of Historic Places in June of 1971 through the efforts of The Historic Columbus Foundation (HCF).

The acceptance of the former summer home of the late Arthur Bussey as a National Historic Site brings to 12 the number of properties listed in the Columbus area.

Special guests at the 4 p.m. ceremony will be the late Arthur Bussey's children; Mrs. L. Neill Bickerstaff, Mrs. Charles M. Woolfolk, and John Wycliffe Bussey, all of Columbus; Ed Neal, president of The Historic Columbus Foundation; and J. W. Woodruff, Jr., chairman of HCF Board.

MG and Mrs. Thomas M. Tarpley will join these and other guests in the unveiling ceremony.

While recognizing Riverside as an historic home, the bronze market also makes reference to two other significant sites at Ft. Benning, the former homes of Generals Eisenhower and Marshall.

New TSB commander stresses professionalism

By George Korda

Enlisted men who meet a brigade commander are usually nervous. That sudden feeling of "the bottom falling out" often takes years to overcome.

George L. Ball, the new commander of The School Brigade, quickly puts his men at ease with a ready smile and one other idiosyncrasy not widespread among officers of high rank — "talking with his hands" by means of gestures.

"I have my philosophy on command," he said. "I stress professionalism, which means a combination of things. It means knowing your job technically, getting along with people, general appearance; really a number of subjects. My belief is that if I, the commander, do my part in insuring the welfare of the men and women of this brigade, and do my best for them, then there won't be any problem in their holding up their professionalism. I intend to do my part," he said with a grin.

Having just returned from USAREUR, Colonel Ball's initial impression of the post is a good one, naturally. "I'm tremendously impressed with the contribution TSB makes toward the work of the Ft.

Benning family, and with the dedication of its troops," he said.

The Army's troops are a much-discussed topic in the country today. Some would have it that the performance of the Modern Volunteer Army is equal to or better than any of the past, while others say the MVA approach has weakened the Army.

On that subject COL Ball says, "In my last assignment I observed the new troops at first hand, and I noticed a constant improvement in performance, standards and influence on the mission of the units. I have confidence the rest of the Army is the same. Like some old-timers, I wondered if the MVA would work, and from what I've seen I know it can."

The mission of TSB is to command, control and provide administrative and logistical support to personnel assigned or attached to TSB; further, to command and control a composite support battalion providing support for academic instruction presented at the Infantry School. Also, TSB provides leadership development and evaluation of officer and NCO students. And finally, TSB conducts other evaluation and guidance programs and training as directed by the commander, USAIS.

To COL Ball, TSB is a place where one of the greatest influences on the Army can be found. He explained, "In TSB we have a fabulous vehicle for guiding officers, NCOs and Allies in their professional development. From here they'll go back to their units and will influence others who will affect still others. When a man sees his unit's standards are high, and his fellow soldiers are meeting them, then he will too, and you've got a stronger Army for it."

COL Ball is from Henderson, TN and is a graduate of West Point, after having successfully completed the USMA Preparatory School. He's filled billets in Europe, Vietnam and on several posts all over the U.S.

Local AUSA members will attend convention

Some 50 members of the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), are scheduled to attend the 20th annual AUSA meeting Oct. 14-16 at the Sheraton Park Hotel in Washington, D.C.

Jim Woodruff Jr. of Columbus, AUSA national president, will open the meeting Oct. 14, at 10 a.m., followed by the keynote address by Secretary of the Army Howard H. (Bo) Callaway.

The Chief of Staff of the Army is scheduled to speak at the group's annual luncheon on Oct. 15, and James R. Schlesinger, Secretary of Defense, will speak at the George Catlett Marshall Dinner the following night.

A highlight of the opening ceremonies will be the presentation of awards to outstanding AUSA chapters in such categories as largest overall chapter, greatest percentage increase in membership, and best contribution to public education about the Army. The local chapter, as in the past, will be the recipient of several of the top awards.

Several spaces aboard the aircraft chartered for the local delegation's flight to Washington are still open. AUSA members interested in joining the group are asked to telephone LTC Robert Bechdoit at 545-1544/3512.

RHIP, too

It's PFC to Sp5 in one fell swoop

Next to their pay, rank is what most soldiers want fast. Being promoted to E-5 is especially gratifying because it means the beginning of NCO status. It also means waving goodbye to many of the detail type tasks E-4s and below are required to perform. SP5 Jimmy Eaton, clerk of 13th Co, 1st Bn, TSB, took advantage of an Army program and has climbed up the promotion ladder by skipping a rung. She was promoted from PFC to SP5 under the "Stripes for Skills" program Sept. 20.

In civilian life SP5 Eaton was a bookkeeper and general office worker, a vocation she used to good effect when she joined up. "I went to all the recruiters for all the services," she said. "For awhile I thought about the Reserves, but I decided to go all the way and join the Army after hearing about the stripes for skills. If the other services had it, they didn't tell me about it."

It wasn't a decision she made in a hurry. In fact, it took SP5 Eaton nearly a year to make up her mind after she started visiting recruiters. "I made long lists of advantages and disadvantages to find out which list would be longer. I didn't want to mess things up by moving too fast," she said.

SP5 Eaton admits that in her younger years she used to put the military down regularly. "That's the way it was in California during Vietnam. As I got older though I realized it was wrong to criticize something I knew next to nothing about. Now I like it," she said.

When she finally did explore the possibilities of joining the military she had a great deal of help from her family. Several members of her family are career soldiers, including a brother.

She feels the Army offered her things that she couldn't get in civilian life. "I want to travel, and I know when I leave here I'll probably go someplace I've never seen before. Making SP5 so quick makes it that much nicer," says SP5 Eaton.

First female officer assigned to 197th

By BOB COWLES

The newly assigned assistant S-2 officer for the 197th Inf Bde wears a uniform unlike any ever worn by an officer assigned to the unit.

2LT Deborah R. Olson has the honors of being the first female officer ever to be assigned to the "Forever Forward" Brigade.

Deborah, a 23-year-old native of Oak Park, Ill., volunteered for the Military Intelligence Branch and Ft. Benning upon entering the Army.

Entering the Army in Aug. 73, Deborah has strong thoughts towards women in the military.

"I joined the Army because I feel it offers many more opportunities for a woman to prove herself than an occupation in civilian society," stated Deborah. "The Army is much more challenging than most civilian jobs available to women."

Coming from Ft. Huachuca, Deborah was looking forward to her tour of duty at Ft. Benning, not knowing she was to be assigned to a Strategic Army Force (STRAF) unit such as the 197th.

"Being assigned to the brigade came as a complete, but happy surprise," added Deborah. "I enjoy the attention I get very much and don't anticipate any problems whatsoever."

Deborah has the additional duty as the advisor to the brigade commander on matters pertaining exclusively to WACs.

"I won't be someone the girls can bring their complaints to," explained Deborah. "If an incident involving a WAC arises and a unit commander isn't sure how to handle it, then I will try to help."

A graduate from the University of Illinois and holding a degree in English Education, Deborah commented, "I was afraid I wouldn't be able to find a job as an English teacher and felt that the Army offered a very nice way of life, so here I am."

In closing, Deborah explained, "I hope that I can live up to people's expectations of me, both in the Army and the 197th."

Airborne Department sees reorganization

The projected importance of airmobility in future battlefield situations has prompted a significant reorganization of the Airborne Department at Ft. Benning.

No longer will the department concentrate all of its efforts towards turning out highly trained paratroopers who jump into battle from aircraft. As of Oct. 1, the training unit — now officially known as the Airborne/Airmobility Department of The Infantry School — assumed the added responsibility of providing all Airmobile and Pathfinder instruction, a responsibility once shared by two other School activities, the Brigade and Battalion Operations and the Company Operations Departments.

One of the primary purposes of combining the three departments was to end the division of instructional responsibility and to enhance coordination and standardization of doctrine. This, in turn, is expected to increase the responsiveness of The Infantry School to the needs of units in the field and insure a more effective utilization of airborne and airmobile-battlefield capabilities.

COL Jack G. Whitted is director of the new department and will command its two subdivisions, the Parachute Training Group, headed by LTC Donald E. Lunday, and the Aerial Employment Group, headed by LTC Philip A. Lee. LTC George F. Newton is deputy director of the new department.

Maturity is a growth process — gals

By Chap. (CPT) Charles J. Davis

Maturity is a process of growth toward becoming a more positive person. Mature people are attractive. We choose the question "Are women attracted to mature men" purposely as a discussion starter because it does not home right in on the distinction which should be made between age and maturity.

Rather it starts where the girls are, in a confusion of values. The public media often treat them as sex symbols to sell everything from cars to cigars. To some others beautiful women are "Playboy" bunnies, a male status symbol, in the same class as a good bottle of liquor or a sleek sports car. In this discussion, there is an unwarranted assertion of the idea that women fade rapidly from age 25 on.

An attractive woman is more than an attractive body. An attractive woman is a caring, sharing person, who can assume responsibility and work well with others. She is generous with time and effort to those needing her. In the home or in their public life their attractiveness will grow as they mature. To make their proper contribution, continuing education and development will be necessary.

Maturity is indicated physically. It is attained by a process of physical development and the person does little about it. Physically the girl becomes a woman and can be the bearer of future generations. Probably because of their affinity to life, many women have been true to nature and have been prominent in the struggle to preserve our natural resources. A woman acts maturely when she maintains her physical health.

Age and maturity are not identical. There is no age requirement for the exercise of maturity. A woman can be mature at any age but a lack of it often means that the individual has failed to make progress emotionally in step with physical and intellectual growth.

There is a provocative expression, "Act your age." Some people become fixated or are forced by social pressure, and styles, to act, dress, or speak in terms more appropriate to stages of development they should have left behind. They are acting immaturely by not accepting themselves at the stage of life, of physical and mental development, they are at. They are living in the "golden days, days of youth and love" as in Romberg's "Student Prince." It is interesting that children always play at being adults, not at being younger.

Intelligent men want intelligent companions with interests, knowledge, emotional balance, as well as being physically attractive.

Accepting oneself is part of maturity. Physical and biological chemical processes do influence personality and result in a certain way of looking at life. And so a mature woman takes pride in herself as a woman and cultivates those things that add to her femininity. Those women who talk and act in a womanly fashion seem to be more attractive to men. Perhaps it is a case of opposites attracting one another.

The alert woman is aware of the recent developments in the area of women's rights. Research will recover the achievements of women in the past. The past deeds should be like stepping stones to the future. But unless a woman is continuing her growth emotionally and intellectually, she will be left behind in this fast moving world.

To accept oneself, it is necessary to know oneself. A maturing person keeps on trying to understand herself, the reasons for her actions. This self-knowledge must be coupled with self-love and self-acceptance. "Love your neighbor as yourself" has little significance for a person who has not yet learned to love herself. In discussing self-knowledge and self-acceptance, the words of a familiar prayer come to mind: "O Lord, help me to change the things that need to be changed, the courage to accept the things I cannot change and the prudence to know the difference."

Self-knowledge should lead to self-respect. A person who respects herself has a sense of proportion about her weaknesses and her strengths. Because she can calmly accept herself, others also accept her. She produces. She gets satisfaction from work as well as from varied interests and activities.

Some people only seem to be mature. Related to her acceptance of her femininity is woman's service to others. Psychiatrists call it "essential feminine altruism." This regard for the service of others has its roots in woman's maternal instinct. In its deepest level it is a need to give the best of herself to her family and friends, to those who need her. Of a woman it probably was said, "Put love where there is no love and you will take out love." The military uniform itself symbolizes service to the nation. Even the expression, "she is in the service" indicates much.

A mature woman has goals in life and assists others in formulating and reaching theirs. Someone in the class may point out that traditionally women have selected vocations of service where a personal touch is needed. They have dedicated themselves to forming and teaching future generations, to nursing, medicine, and social work to being a mother. These are vocations that require a love for people and a desire to help them.

Another signpost of maturity is having a sense of responsibility. Responsibility means responding to someone, to their needs and wants. A well-adjusted adult has developed friendships with many people. True friendships are necessary in the military when most women are living away from their families. Worthwhile friendships just don't happen. To have friends, you must be a friend.

What happens when an item of government property is lost, damaged or destroyed? In the Army, a very effective system of property control exists and every piece of property is signed for and individuals have responsibilities for that property. It also must be accounted for.

The most common adjustment procedures to account for property include: the inventory adjustment report; cash collection voucher; statement of charges and report of survey.

The report of survey is a common method of adjustment and one that can involve mounds of paperwork and a great many man-hours.

What is a report of survey? It is simply an instrument for reporting the circumstances concerning the loss, damage or destruction of Army property, and serves as, or supports, a voucher for dropping the articles from property records.

An officer who has no personal interest in the matter is appointed to conduct an investigation.

No, this survey officer does not decide whether or not people responsible for items of government property have to pay for lost, damaged or destroyed property. Rather, this officer gathers all the facts and evidence possible and puts them together. From this comes his recommendation which goes on to reviewing authorities who make final judgement.

Reports of survey may be forwarded to higher commands for additional review and appeal, up to, and including, the Secretary of the Army.

It all sounds logical and really rather simple. No so . . .

Sworn statements from individuals involved as well as all evidence and information from witnesses must be assembled. It often involves technical diagrams, examining unit standing operating procedures, and even taking photographs.

What does it all add up to? First, it is a thorough method of investigating and account for lost, damaged or destroyed property. Secondly, it is a time consuming job that often takes an officer away from his regular duties.

It really adds up to money. The lost, damaged or destroyed items cost money. The survey officer's time as well as that of reviewing authorities cost money. Money spent by the Army costs you, the taxpayer, money.

No, there is no magic solution to this chain of costs, but there is a way of minimizing it. That involves being careful. Taking care in storing, securing and handling government property.

If nothing is lost, damaged or destroyed then no report of survey is needed. It can save you and the Army.

3/7th Co A has interesting training

By C. B. HOOVER

Incorporating variety into training can be difficult, but Co A 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde is working hard at it, by combining river crossing techniques, a night airmobile assault, night attack techniques, and a withdrawal under pressure, into one training session.

"We have tried to incorporate as many challenges as possible to make the training not only realistic, but interesting," commented CPT Jimmy R. Arnold, the company commander. "This training will test the physical as well as the mental endurance of each individual."

The men of Co A started training by receiving instruction on the 15 man assault boat from SFC Jimmie O. Barnett of the 72nd Engr Co.

"Everyone has to work as a team when operating the assault boats. You don't just hop into a boat and go six miles down river without each man doing his fair share," stated SFC Barnett.

Six miles or ten thousand meters, which ever seems the shorter distance, was what the men of Co A paddled as they proceeded down the Chattahoochee River to secure the river line.

Securing the river line, the soldiers of Co A started to move out and found there was something different, something was unfamiliar to them, there were no hills to climb, not even a good mound, everything was flat, flat, flat.

"This terrain was selected because it resembles what we will be operating on when the brigade goes to Ft. Stewart for a field training exercise in November," stated CPT Arnold.

Realism was added to the training by having the mortar platoon take the role of the aggressors after they had completed the trip down river.

Completing their night airmobile operations and defense, the men of the company were extracted by helicopter back to Kelley Hill the next day by the 121st Avn Co.

"This has been a good training session for the unit. It has made us aware of what we will be encountering at Ft. Stewart. I am looking forward to the trip. The difference in terrain will be interesting and a challenge," commented 2LT Barry J. Oaks, the executive officer of Co A.

'I didn't know the gun was loaded' — sad but true

By BILL KLOEB

"I didn't know the gun was loaded" was the title of a popular folk song several years ago. The song has lost its popularity, but the lament is still being repeated many times each year by people who have injured or killed others through careless handling of a firearm.

Each year thousands of persons are injured or killed because someone "didn't know the gun was loaded."

The circumstances surrounding accidents caused by firearms are many and vary from those triggered by a small child who doesn't understand the danger of a firearm to an experienced soldier-hunter who fails to think just one time.

The accidental discharge of weapons at home cause more injuries and deaths than do hunting accidents. Home accidents occur while people are playing with guns, examining or demonstrating them, cleaning or repairing them or just picking them up or setting them down. All accidents of this type can be attributed to carelessness. The handler didn't treat the gun as if it were loaded.

In homes of responsible people firearms are stored out of the reach of children, with ammunition stored separately in another safe place. About this time of the year—the beginning of hunting season—quite a few of them are taken out for cleaning and inspection. It is during this period that most youngsters become victims of accidentally discharged firearms. The owner plans to leave the weapon out for "just a short time." Just a few minutes is all it takes.

It happens many times each year. There are many variations to the scenario but generally it runs like this—a youngster brings a couple of friends into his home. The parents are not around. One of the youngsters sees a gun lying on a table. He picks it up to admire it. Then in a playful mood he points it at one of the others. There are words, a scuffle and the gun fires. One of the youngsters falls—badly wounded or dead. It can happen anywhere to anyone. Guns have a fascination for youngsters. Most children can't resist picking them up and handling them.

The circumstances surrounding firearms accidents sometimes make good plots for fiction stories. They vary from one simple act of carelessness to a series of complicated actions involving several individuals, anyone of whom could have averted the accident by the use of common sense.

The circumstances vary but the basic cause of all firearm accidents can be traced to where someone didn't treat the gun as if it were loaded. Quite often the fault is a lack of knowledge. Many agencies have published lists of rules for gun safety. These lists are made up of "dos and don'ts" to inform readers concerning practices that cause the majority of accidents. A list of this type has been printed on the last page of USAIC Regulation 210-2, Post Hunting and Fishing Regulations.

Alertness and common sense are the primary ingredients for safety around firearms. The old saying "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" also has a lot of application. You wouldn't want anyone to point a gun, loaded or unloaded, at you. If you observe the same courtesy you won't ever have to cry "I didn't know the gun was loaded."

Learn the safe use of firearms. Insist that all persons in your party also know gun safety rules. Insist that the rules are observed. You may hurt some feelings, but hurt feelings aren't as uncomfortable as a stay in a hospital or as permanent as a plot in a cemetery.

Tankers won't have to play owl to see

By J. H. Tatum

When night falls on Troop A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde, during their upcoming training at Ft. Stewart, Ga., the tankers won't have to play one in order to see.

Soldiers of Troop A recently completed instructions in the use of the powerful, one million candlepower zeon searchlight, which will get much use during the night tank gunnery qualification as well as the November Field Training Exercise (FTX) also to be conducted at Ft. Stewart.

"The tank mounted zeon searchlights are very important to the tank gunnery program," stated SP5 George W. Griggs, the class instructor, "especially during night firing."

The searchlight has two types of illumination, white light and infrared. With the infrared illumination the tank crew needs special optics in order to pick up the infrared light beam.

PVT Ron E. Storberg, of Troop A, said, "The zeon searchlight is something new to me. I am looking forward to seeing one in operation and learning how to operate it."

PFC Michael D. Vails, commented,

"Firing the tank guns at night with the use of the searchlight will be a great experience to me. I have learned a lot about the zeon light and I am sure that I can put my knowledge to use during night operations."

"I have worked with the zeon searchlight before," explained SGT Donald R. Reed. "The light is excellent. It gives you two types of illuminating beams, a narrow one for moving or stationary targets such as tanks and a wide beam for troops and convoys. It has an effective range of about 1200 meters, depending on the weather and visibility."

Troop A, will be taking three of the one million candle power zeon searchlights to Ft. Stewart for night firing. The lights are mounted on the unit's Sheridan reconnaissance vehicles.

SP5 Griggs concluded, "The searchlight must be bore-sighted with the main gun on the tank so the gunner will be able to put accurate illumination on a target. Each tank has to have its main engine running at 1200 to 1500 revolutions per minute to keep the battery charged during the operation of the light."

PFC Robert Fason, Troop A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde, adjusts a one million candlepower zeon searchlight, mounted on a Sheridan reconnaissance vehicle. The searchlights will be used during upcoming training exercises at Ft. Stewart, Ga. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Successful OWC Signup Day

The OWC Activity Signup Day was a success due to the efforts of many ladies, including Mrs. Galen Risher, Mrs. William Macpherson, and Mrs. Harold Smith.

The unique cover for the OWC Activities Booklet is a photo print of an original sampler by Mrs. Larry Loftus. Those arranging the booklet were Mesdames William Macpherson, Joe B. Foster, James Deegan, Donald Long and Robert Begland.

Others responsible for planning and carrying out the Activities Day were Mesdames Mark Cornwell, Joe West, Dan Toney, J. Rolle Brett, Joseph O'Connell and Mrs. Par Fry. Many thanks, ladies!

1/58th Luncheon

The Goethius House, in Columbus, was the setting for a luncheon hosted by the ladies of the 1/58th Inf (Mech), 197th Inf Bde. Hostesses were Mrs. John Ooley and Mrs. Russ Zink.

Farewell was bid and a gift presented to Mrs. Gary Halstead.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. Margie Uelk and Mrs. Jan Weir.

Office of the Secretary, USAIS

The ladies of the Office of the Secretary met for lunch at the lovely home of Mrs. Marna Brumbeck. After a sherry hour and lunch, plans for the upcoming trip to Destin were discussed. A bazaar workshop was held later in the afternoon.

3/7th INF

The ladies of the 3/7th Inf held a pot luck dinner and workshop coffee at the home of Mrs. William Windham, Baltzell Ave., Ft. Benning.

A wide variety of food was enjoyed as a lot of preliminary work was accomplished on bazaar projects.

Farewell was bid to Mrs. Jerry Forbes. A warm welcome was extended to Mrs. Barney Gates and Mrs. M. Ponitiski.

New chaplain joins 'Forever Forward' Bde

By Bob Cowles

"Forever Forward" soldiers of the 197th Inf particularly those from the 3/7th, have a new friend in the form of Chaplain (CPT) Robert K. Herndon. Chaplain Herndon, having just arrived to the brigade, is assigned to the Kelley Hill Chapel and will be working closely with the 3/7th.

A native of Atlanta, the military way of life is not new to the chaplain.

"My father is a retired Army chaplain," stated Herndon. "I visited 34 countries with my family while my father was in the service, the last being Germany."

"Upon returning from Germany in 1965," added Chaplain Herndon; "I immediately joined the reserves."

During his six years in the reserves as an enlisted man, Chaplain Herndon worked with a supply and transportation company, and an administration company.

"After being discharged from the reserves while at Georgia State University, I joined the ROTC program," he continued. "I majored in sociology and received a B.A. degree."

While at G.S.U., Chaplain Herndon was in Scabbard & Blade and was a member of the Pershing Rifles, a military fraternity. He was commissioned a 2LT in the AG branch upon completing ROTC.

"From G.S.U. I went to Emory University of Atlanta where I received my Master of Divinity degree from Candler School of Theology," added the Chaplain.

Herndon then spent a period of time serving at the First Baptist Church at Alavaton, Ga. "I love the civilian parish, but knew that my 'calling' was to be an Army chaplain," he explained. "I'm sure that the exposure thru my father had some influence on this."

Chaplain Herndon feels that he will be able to work closely with the men in the brigade. "I know what it is like to be an enlisted man and I know their problems," he stated. "I believe I understand these problems and will be able to help solve them."

"An enlisted man is not just a private to me. He is an individual and I'll stick with him until we get his problem solved."

Although Chaplain Herndon could not request being assigned to a particular unit of post he stated he was "proud to be a part of the 197th."

"Soldiering does not scare me," he concluded. "I feel that the crux of the Army is here in the Infantry."

Soldiers took 11 kids to picnic

Three soldiers of Co B, 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf (Patriots), 197th Inf Bde changed their lifestyle for a weekend as they became chaperones for a group of 11 youngsters at the recent AUSA picnic.

"The project was suggested by our company commander," explained SGT John Mirabella, one of the soldiers. "All of the men in Co B pitched in to buy the tickets but we ran into a problem of finding kids to take."

"Originally we had planned on taking children from an orphanage," SGT Ken Foster explained. "But we could not find one in Columbus. Finally we called the YMCA and talked to Allen Prapher, a YMCA assistant. He rounded up 11 kids and we were off to the picnic."

The children were between the ages of seven and 14 and proved a new experience to the soldiers.

"There were four adults altogether," SGT Foster explained. "My wife, Minan, went along also. However, SGT Mirabella was the only child-tending veteran of the crowd. He has a daughter of his own."

PFC Joe Cyer volunteered to drive the youngsters and chaperones to the picnic, which took place at Victory Pond on Ft. Benning.

"The kids were really great," SGT Mirabella added. "They all had a great time and I guess we did too."

"I'd like to point out how well mannered they were," SGT Foster concluded. "They were so well behaved, they really made our job easy. I am certainly looking forward to doing something like this again."

What Price Credit?

A few years ago consumers could be heard complaining that "everything is made out of plastic nowadays" or "they don't make them like they used to." The indictment of plastic and quality of goods may be correct, but who would have dreamed that money itself — good ole' cash — would be fighting for survival against a little 2 x 3 plastic card with bumps on it! They just weren't satisfied with depriving customers of solid wood furniture, metal toys, all-leather shoes and all the other goods that plastic found its way into. Now they want to sew the money pocket shut on wallets and purses and replace it with rows and rows of neatly arranged, multi-colored credit cards.

Plastic Fantastic. What these little plastic cards can do for you defies limits and boundaries. The plastic monsters can take you and your wife on a cruise around the world, put delicious gourmet dinners in front of you, rent a limousine and even pay for traffic tickets and post bonds in some cities.

It's harder to list things these cards can't do than what they can take care of. The rumble of the slide over the plastic miracle-maker plus a slip of paper and a quick signature can put you in a new tailor-made suit and get tickets for two on the evening flight to Paris (champagne included, of course). "The only reason why some people don't own an elephant is because no one has ever offered them one at $1 down and $1 a month," declares one department store manager.

There are built-in hangovers to these intoxicating credit adventures. Eventually you have to "pay the piper," or, putting it another way, "rob Peter to pay Paul." The slogan "buy now, pay later" can provide the uninitiated with a gigantic headache when the "pay later" time rolls around.

Saving Obsolete. The American consumer has been captured in the weird world of plastic money. Daily there is the advertising industry's bombardment of the "buy now, pay later" philosophy. Versions of this slogan appear in newspapers, magazines, on television, radio and are displayed prominently on roadside billboards and store marquees across the nation.

Whatever happened to the theory of saving up money for a trip, a new refrigerator with a larger freezer compartment or a new suit or dress? Those days are gone forever. Waiting until a purchase can be afforded by either paying cash or at least placing a substantial down payment is no longer fashionable. Why put off until tomorrow what you can charge today? That's the new buying philosophy.

Thanks to a multitude of new faces in the credit line business, good ole' cash-and-carry has been swallowed up by much more profitable approach to retail credit sales. There are basically three types of credit accounts: the open or charge account, the installment account and the popular revolving account. They work like this:

• Charge or Open Account. This type of account is more of a convenience account, enabling customers to pay for all purchases made during the month with one check in the month following the purchases. Usually there is no interest charge since this type account is treated under the "30 days same as cash" philosophy. Title to the goods is immediate.

• Installment Account. Here a written contract is used and title to the goods purchased stays with the store until the final payment is made. Payments on these accounts are made in equal monthly, bi-weekly or weekly installments and usually run from 4 months to 2 years.

• Revolving or Optional (Revolving) Account. The customer signs an agreement at the beginning, which becomes the basic contract covering his use of the account. A top dollar limit is assigned to the account and usually any amount charged above that limit must be paid within 30 days. If it is not paid, the whole balance becomes due immediately. Payment on revolving accounts is based on either a fixed fraction of the "top dollar limit" placed on the account initially or a percentage of the actual balance outstanding. A customer can keep right on charging so long as he doesn't exceed the "top dollar limit."

The Optional (Revolving) Account differs in that the customer has requested the "option" to pay the whole balance within 15 or 20 days — the same as an open account — after receiving the bill. This will eliminate any service charge. Or the customer can pay any portion of the bill he wishes within the 15 to 20 days and just be charged interest and service charges on the remaining balance.

Danger! Plenty of options are open on how to set up an account, but imagine a wallet full of credit cards for stores and gas stations all over town. Add up all your "top dollar limits" and if you go the whole route, look out! You're courting financial disaster.

But what can a family do these days? As inflation crept into the daily vocabulary and made a wreck of the family budget, so did the need for expanded credit if the same standard of living a family enjoyed last year was to be maintained this year. Just feeding the family was a problem. But don't worry. The credit card people are right there to ease the pain — for a price of course.

Today, it is unbelievably easy to fall into the credit card trap. In 1972 a military man below the pay grade of E5 wasn't looked upon as a good credit risk by most reputable companies, thus making credit card buying almost impossible. With current pay scales, however, the men and women in the service below the pay grade of E5 find the credit possibilities much better. They too are now acceptable to the plastic money market and consequently can face serious potential financial problems.

Too Easy. Americans today — especially young couples — are more than willing to tread down the path to eventual financial disaster, and they receive plenty of encouragement from the plastic money barons who are glad to light the path. They display the Horn of Plenty wherever the consumer might turn with a big sign: Why Wait, Charge It.

The move from cash-and-carry buying to credit card purchasing wasn't motivated by a strong sense of obligation on the part of companies to provide a service to faithful customers caught in a skyrocketing cost of living index.

Why let a few big outfits and loan sharks grab all the action by financing purchases and debt consolidations? Much better to get the consumer to begin "revolving" in their stores and do the combining of all those little debts into a single giant one under their roofs and reap some of the lucrative finance charge profits. Shylock made out like a bandit as a merchant in Venice, so why shouldn't they?

Don't Kid Yourself. They're making millions of dollars from the easy credit business. Not only can they move tons of merchandise that might otherwise have been awaiting final installment payments a few years ago, but now they include carrying charges right on the price tag. To those bennies they add the special feature for their credit card buyers — finance charges at a 1.5 percent monthly interest rate or 18 percent a year.

Rates vary and the 18 percent annual percentage rate is the most common but some go as high as 24, 36, and even 48 percent! Also, most firms use the "previous balance" method in figuring your finance charge. This means that no matter how much you pay on your account during the month, the interest charged on your next bill will be based on the previous month's balance.

What does the customer get from all this additional cost? He gets his hands on the goods right away and there's no contract to sign for each and every purchase. That's all been taken care of when the customer applied for and received his plastic money card.

Thinking about it, that isn't really very much for all the additional money spent over and above the price on the tag.

Double Jeopardy. But the credit card trap is a tough one to beat. Wise buying within your budget is a must because it's almost impossible to avoid paying part of the credit card buyer's cost whether you pay in cash or use a card. If it's a cash purchase, you're still paying for the store's credit service which is cranked right into the price. There's nothing you can really do about that — except just "do without." But if you pull out your credit card they're going to get you twice — first on the price and then on the monthly finance charge. In the long run it's still smarter to avoid overusing the credit card. That so-called "service" your friendly department store is providing costs you plenty.

Buy Smart. Since the consumer is finding it harder and harder to get a good deal and the cost of living is rising all the time, credit card buying may become necessary for some people. If you have to use your plastic money then at least use it wisely.

You can't buy cheap, so buy smart. Don't be taken in by the Plastic Card Kings. They want you to run that card under the roller just as often as possible.

So it's no wonder that getting credit isn't difficult at all. Fill out the simple form, wait for a credit check and bingo — you have a new source of debt. The difficult part is trying to resist the urge to fill wallets and purses with cards instead of cash and paying little attention to how much more an item you want to purchase is going to cost you by using that little plastic card.

And besides the millions of retail store cards, oil company cards and travel and entertainment cards that can get you into financial straits, use of the popular bank cards for quick cash has grown by leaps and bounds in recent years.

According to the Federal Reserve Bank, by the end of last year bank card credit outstanding had swelled to $5.6 billion compared to $953 million in 1968. In 1973 the outstanding credit on all the different types of cards combined totaled almost $12.3 billion.

The Biggie. The bank credit card field is dominated by two giants: Master Charge which last year had 31.3 million cardcarriers, and National BankAmericard with 26 million cardholders.

Last year in the United States bank credit cards were offered by 11,000 of the country's 14,000 banks. These credit cards are becoming more and more popular as prices go up and paychecks need stretching. But constant stretching has left many families in a financial bind.

Bank credit cards are unique. Signs indicating their acceptance can be found at all types of business establishments. If a store doesn't have its own credit service you can be sure it'll accept one of the bank credit cards. But unlike other cards, credit cards can be used for obtaining cash.

Using bank credit cards for cash advances can cost you plenty. Let's say you decide to borrow $1,000 cash on your bank credit card.

Under the terms of one card you pay an initial finance charge of 2 percent (24 percent annual percentage rate). This 2 percent is charged regardless of when the cash advance is repaid — 2 days or 12 months. On a monthly basis this 2 percent on that $1,000 amounts to $6.58 or $78.90 a year (principal x daily interest rate x 365 days = $78.90). On top of that they charge you — for that same $1,000 — another finance charge, only this one is computed on a monthly basis at 1 percent or 12 percent annual percentage rate. If you keep the $1,000 for a year that 1 percent per month charge amounts to $66.20. So $1,000 for one year has a price tag of $1145.10. Know what you paid in interest over that year? Almost 30 percent!

Comparative Credit. Let's shop around for that $1,000 and see what a credit union can do on the same cash loan. First, we find that the $1,000 can be borrowed under simple interest computations versus our charge card's discounted interest. Also there are no prepayment penalties — you pay only for the number of days you use the money.

The annual percentage rate is also 12 percent, but there are no additional finance charges. Again, you keep the $1,000 for 1 year but this time the bill is only $1,066.20 or 12 percent interest. You just saved yourself $78.90 on that cash you borrowed.

According to the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, the number of people in a financial bind has doubled in the last year. They estimate that between 5 and 6 of every 100 American families have serious credit money problems.

Founded in 1961, the foundation is a credit research and educational organization which has 160 non-profit consumer credit counseling services throughout the country. Last year they counseled more than 150,000 families, and in 1974 the number of cases is expected to triple.

The average indebtedness has also jumped from $6,000 to $8,000. Assets just aren't growing fast enough to keep up with debts. According to the Federal Reserve Board, since 1960 family and individual assets have increased 140 percent, but debts owed have jumped 192 percent. Debt has jumped 192 percent.

Up To Their Ears. Last year Americans were in hock for $821 billion. This included mortgages, credit cards, installment purchases and bank loans. This whopping debt has forced families to fork over almost 23 percent of their income to meet these obligations.

This 23 percent is higher than most budget counselors advise a family to reach, and is undoubtedly a major cause of the rising rate of delinquent payments. In New York City, 3 percent of the population ends up in court each year on financial problems.

Legislation. Congress, recognizing the public needed some form of credit protection, passed the Truth in Lending Act. This law required that money lenders and credit sellers advise their customers exactly how much they were going to have to repay for a loan or purchase of goods or services. This includes interest, and additional charges and penalty costs added if payments aren't made on time.

But as Americans continued moving to a credit-oriented society and more and more agencies entered the credit selling bonanza, another scheme abounded. Mail boxes were becoming a drop point for credit cards. Companies sent their credit cards — unrequested — to millions of Americans.

These credit cards arrived without application plus the increase of card misuse, loss and theft prompted Congress to amend the Truth in Lending Act in 1970 to deal with credit card issuance practices and liability on the part of individuals receiving them.

Limited Liability. The amendment to the Truth in Lending Act protects the public from having its mail boxes filled with unwanted credit cards. No longer can credit cards be issued unless they've been applied for. Individual liability for lost or stolen credit cards is also spelled out.

Liability exists only when the credit card has been accepted by the individual through application and use; for an amount not to exceed $50; and only if the credit card issuer has given sufficient notice to the cardholder that there is a potential liability.

In addition, the card issuer must provide the card holder with a self-addressed, pre-stamped notice that can be mailed to the card issuer in case the card is lost or stolen. Finally liability exists when the card is fraudulently used before the card issuer is notified of the loss or theft of the card.

Legal protection for the public against receiving credit cards and liability restrictions when they are lost or stolen is great but the habitual credit card abuser is still out there running up charges all over town.

When a young couple passes credit's point of no return and their monthly income doesn't meet the minimum payments required for charges on the multitude of credit cards they carry around with them, what happens?

Families who become hopelessly indebted have basically three choices. They can attempt to consolidate their debts themselves up to a certain point; they can seek professional counseling to assist in setting up a program to repay their debts while allowing for minimum needs of the family; and as a last resort they may go the bankruptcy route under Chapter 13 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. (Chapter 13 allows payments to be extended up to 36 months to avoid actual bankruptcy.)

Some military people think the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act still covers them, but this law only applies to debts that were made before coming on active duty.

ACS Counsels. No one knows exactly how much military men and their families are in debt as compared to their civilian counterparts, but the fact that it is a growing problem is well established.

In recent years the Army has set up numerous budget counseling services at Army Community Services (ACS) offices on posts in the United States and overseas. At Fort Belvoir, Va., ACS has offered the counseling service for 2 1/2 years.

First Lieutenant Walter Fahr, ACS coordinator at Belvoir, sees the hard sell and spiraling prices contributing heavily to the increasing indebtedness. "There is such an interest in buying. Wherever you go there are people trying to sell you something. The whole economy is geared toward pushing things at you. It's almost automatic that your level of expectations rises each year," says 1LT Fahr.

Investment? The constant Madison Avenue pitch to "buy now" adds fuel to the fire daily but a new twist has developed. "I have people tell me that buying now is an investment. They say they're investing money right now because the price is going to go up. So they say 'I've actually made money buying now,'" 1LT Fahr says.

The Budget Counseling Section of ACS is doing a brisk business. Specialist 5 Bob Freeman says, "On a monthly basis I would say we counsel between 35 and 40 people." SP5 Freeman does budget counseling at Belvoir and spreads the word about credit through command information talks at units on post.

When a soldier or dependent wife comes in for assistance the first step is to give him or her a form to take home and fill out. It includes the information that the counselor will need in subsequent sessions as he tries to put the financially hard-pressed family back on its feet. "Communication between husband and wife on financial matters is a major problem. Often they have different opinions on use of credit so we try to get them both in for counseling," says SP5 Freeman.

Plastic Problems. Credit cards have helped build business for counseling services both in and out of the military service. "If (credit cards) is one of the main problems — along with finance companies. People who lived during the Depression got accustomed to waiting for things. All of a sudden the vast majority of the population doesn't have to experience this type of waiting or anything resembling it. To them paying interest is a fact of life," observes Pris Bornmann, an Army wife who currently heads the budget counseling section at Belvoir.

Pris has a master's degree in family economics and gets plenty of opportunity to put her background to work. According to Pris it isn't at all unusual to have someone come in who is $10,000 in debt.

At Fort Sill, Okla., the ACS budget counseling service has just been in existence for a little more than a year. "We get about 80 people in per month and process about 27 cases. Some people just don't come back while others are referred to the staff judge advocate's office since they are new in the Army and can get assistance through the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act," says Specialist 5 Donald White, a budget counselor at Sill.

At Fort Sill the counselor requires both husband and wife to attend the counseling sessions while at Fort Belvoir it is encouraged but not mandatory. Can't Wait. SP5 White sees a trend developing in indebtedness. "The amount of debt is going up and so is the number of creditors. Bank credit cards and gas credit cards are the worst. People don't shop around for credit; they just want to get their hands on the goods as fast as possible."

Plastic money is spreading like a disease and can spell financial disaster for corporals and colonels alike. If more than 20 to 25 percent of your take-home pay is going for time payments a storm is brewing. Better seek financial counseling fast and take out a good sharp pair of scissors and cut all those plastic credit cards in little pieces.

BANDSMEN NEEDED

The 283rd Army Band foresees a critical shortage of bandmen in the near future. Personnel who can play a musical instrument and are interested in becoming a member of the Band should contact CW3 Smith, 545-7116 for information.

UNIFORM SEASON

The weather may have turned cool but the official changeover date to the winter uniform remains Oct. 21. Summer uniforms, Army tan and Army khaki, may not be worn after Oct. 20.

BIG BROTHERS WANTED

Army Community Services needs volunteers to become "Big Brothers" to young men ages 6-14. To qualify you must be a responsible adult male willing to establish a meaningful relationship with your "Little Brother."

For details, please contact Nick Toparcan, ACS Big Brother Coordinator, at 545-1233.

HELP SPECIAL KIDS

A bus driver is needed to assist Ft. Benning's special children. Every Saturday these children need transportation to and from the Special Children's building where they participate in many events. On the third Saturday of each month, they bowl at Kelly Hill. This outing and many others that the children participate in may have to be discontinued if a bus driver cannot be found. For more information, call ACS at 545-4679.

INVESTMENT SEMINAR

The Officer's Wife's Club is sponsoring a Dollars and Sense Investment Seminar Monday, Oct. 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the ACS Welcome Center. It is open to all interested persons. Investment problems discussed by the panel of bankers, brokers and real estate agents will be those who military personnel and families are most often confronted with. For more information call 687-1396.

LETTERED PHONE NUMBERS

Various word and letter phone numbers have been utilized on post to aid personnel in remembering important and often used numbers.

The Provost Marshall's Office has three such numbers relating to drugs. These are: 545-PUSH (7874); 545-DOPE (3673); and 545-DRUG (3784). For information concerning the Benning House, dial 545-LIVE (5483).

Martin Army Hospital uses the number 545-HURT (4878) for its walk-in clinic.

Persons desiring services with Army Community Service should call 545-HELP (4357). Dialing 545-REUP (7387) will give you the enlistment office on post.

For information on the Mall's Commissary hours dial 545-FOOD (3663).

AAFES to crack down on Christmas shoplifting

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) has issued a warning to would-be shoplifters who plan to do their "Christmas shopping" at exchanges.

MG C. W. Hospelhorn, AAFES commander, announced that "exchanges are bolstering in-store security 100 percent or more in an effort to catch or discourage rip-off artists who see the holiday season crowds as a chance to steal from the store that belongs to the soldier and airman."

According to MG Hospelhorn, AAFES has annually experienced an upward trend in shoplifting over the holiday period, a trend shared by every retailer in the country.

This year, AAFES hopes to reverse that trend and has spent months indoctrinating sales personnel in shoplifting-prevention techniques. "We've given in-depth training to all store employees and they have responded in a very encouraging and positive manner," he revealed. "They know what to look for, and what to do if they spot a suspicious person or detect an actual shoplifting act."

The general said exchanges now employ several preventive methods that range from visual survellance through the use of mirrors to closed circuit TV. Plain-clothes agents move unobtrusively through the exchange and military police also are posted during peak rush-hour periods to augment AAFES security teams.

"All these measures will be applied to the maximum extent possible during the Christmas rush," MG Hospelhorn vowed.

If beefed up in-store prevention measures don't discourage the sticky-fingered set, the firm hand of justice should. MG Hospelhorn said military commanders and civil courts alike have come down hard on shoplifters. He said that last year hundreds of military personnel faced courts-martial or Article 15a. In some cases they were subjected to trial in a civil court. Dependents caught shoplifting fared no better. Faced with criminal prosecution, they received sentences that in certain cases meant a fine of $500 and one year behind bars.

The general pointed out that the juvenile shoplifter who steals "for kicks" is a major problem and must be made to know the folly of that practice. He said loss of exchange privileges often has been imposed on an entire family because of such abuse.

There have even been instances of families being uprooted from their community and transferred because of these criminal acts.

Another problem involves the "innocent" person who looks the other way when a dishonest act occurs. The "it's none of my business" attitude doesn't cut it with MG Hospelhorn, because the AAFES commander pointed out that funds lost through shoplifting and other stealing rob the military's morale and recreation funds of vital dollars. "The entire military community is deprived each time a dishonest person steals from his or her exchange," he said.

MG Hospelhorn voiced the hope that a general awareness of the problem among the vast majority of honest patrons will help AAFES and the military authorities eradicate the shoplifting problem completely.

In the meantime, the AAFES crackdown on shoplifting continues.

And those who do not heed the warning may yet discover that shoplifting really isn't such a smart idea after all.

1/29th's Delta Dragons boast of many firsts

By Caleb Hinton

Co D, 1st Bn, 29th Inf (Pioneers) TSB, nicknamed by the men of the unit, the "Delta Dragons," boasts of many firsts since the reorganization of the 1/29th.

To begin with, Co D is the largest in the battalion, consisting of more than 200 men with a diversity of MOSs and equipment. Organized with three rifle platoons, one of which is the USAIS Demonstration Platoon, a weapons platoon and a transportation section, it supports all departments in the Infantry School.

On the surface, this does not appear too different from any other Infantry company. But a closer inspection will reveal several startling dissimilarities.

The weapons platoon, commanded by 1LT Harry Logan and PSG Lee Raines, is not the typical Infantry weapons platoon.

It consists of an 81mm mortar section, a 4.2" mortar section, and an anti-tank section equipped with the TOW missile system, all used in support of the Infantry School.

What makes this platoon such a rarity is that it contains both heavy and light mortars, and is a mechanized part of an Infantry company, with all systems mounted in the armored personnel carrier.

The USAIS Demonstration Platoon, commanded by 2LT William Houck and PSG Charlie Jordan is a special unit with a very particular mission. They were organized to perform rifle squad and platoon tactical demonstrations to Infantry School students, visiting VIP's and other dignitaries.

In the past few months, elements of the platoon have traveled to San Jose, California where they starred in a film with the new Mechanized Infantry Vehicle (MICV), and to Ft. Sill, Oklahoma where they presented their platoon demonstration to the United States Artillery School.

In addition to its precision demonstrations, the platoon also supports normal troop commitments and daily school support problems.

The First Platoon, commanded by 2LT John Giles and SSG Terry Brandand the Second Platoon, commanded by 2LT Billy Zenn and SSG Fred Stinson, are organized as normal rifle platoons.

They usually perform as aggressors against student personnel. However, in May of this year they combined forces and assumed the mission of the Demonstration Platoon while the latter was being utilized on a Mechanized Infantry demonstration for visiting TRADOC commander, Gen. DePuy. SSG James Henderson leads the Transportation Section with drivers and twenty-three vehicles under his immediate supervision for missions and maintenance. On a daily basis, he dispatches vehicles to support a multiple of school support missions.

Pioneers have active week of football

By Rick Wasser

Charles Ledbetter out-rushed, out-passed, and out-maneuvered his opposition Wednesday night, to lead the Co A Pioneers over sister Co B, also of the 1/29th Inf, by a score of 22-6.

It was Co B that made the initial penetration into Alpha Company territory; Edwin Bonner intercepted and Phillip Samuel ran up the middle for 30 yards on the next play. Then, quarterback James Tynes hit Larry Watson for 10 yards, but they only got as far as the 20-yard line.

Company A took over on their own 20-yard line, and on the third down play, Ledbetter threw a 60-yard bomb to Tim ("I lost it in the moon") DeBey, who tripped and fell just short of the pass. So Co B took over again — temporarily that is — for on the first down, David Vier of Alpha Company intercepted a Tynes pass and ran it 15 yards down the left side for the touchdown. It was Ledbetter to Vier for the extra points on a conversion.

Company B received the kickoff, and once again they gave the ball right back to Co A on the first play — this time Ledbetter intercepted on the two-yard line. The wily quarterback and his offensive team couldn't muster any real yardage before the first half ended however, and the score stood at 8-0 in favor of Co A.

The second half began with Alpha in possession: Ledbetter scampered over the field for a total 55 yds rushing in two plays. He ran a fourth down end sweep around the right side for 15 yards and a second TD. Ken Hight scooped up a low Ledbetter pass for the two-point conversion.

Company B threatened momentarily on their next set of downs, moving to the Alpha 30-yard line, their deepest penetration so far in the game. Tynes hit his favorite receivers, Watson and Samuel, and then ran up the middle all alone for 5 yards.

But on the very next play, it was Samuel who fumbled on the 30, allowing Co A to recover. Ledbetter took advantage of Bravo company's brief setback, and ran the first play down the right side for 65 yards and their third score of the game.

With their spirits weighted down by a 22 point deficit, once again Co B began an offensive rush. Tynes hit Watson for two quick passes, and then Watson scampered upfield for 15 yards. On the next play, Ledbetter picked off a Tynes Pass intended for Watson, but it was ruled invalid due to a penalty.

A penalty assessed against Bravo Company set them back 10 yards, but Tynes followed it with a key pass to Larry Peterson who ran it in for the first Co B score, but the last play of the game.

This was the second loss for the Bravo team, and it dropped them to second place in the Pioneer league, while Co A took over the number one position.

In other Pioneer action, Co D handed Hq & Spts Co their fourth straight loss, but the clerks came closer to victory than any other time this year. The game ended 7-7, but Co D won the contest in overtime.

197th Flag Football rundown

By C. B. HOOVER

The 197th Inf Bde's "Forever Forward" football continued at a blistering pace with the end of the season growing near.

Red Leg

The Red Leg continued to fire up the gridiron last week. HHC blasted Svc Btry 18-6 to keep up their winning ways.

"We killed them with the bomb. The combination of the 'flea' and the 'fly' made their heads buzz. Eugene 'Flea' Timmons caught two of the bombs and Richard 'Fly' Napier pulled in the third one," stated Harold A. Odomes of HHC.

C Btry, which fell victim to the power sweep last week, utilized the same tactics to shut out Svc Btry 12-0.

Lywood Wicker, the halfback, carried the ball on both sweeps and the TDs for C Btry.

Cottonbaler

The Cottonbaler League, 3/7th Inf, played three

Pigskin action sees Rams get rammed by Dolphins

In last Saturday's season opening "pigskin" action at Blue Field, the Pee Wee Dolphins battered the Rams in a heavily defensive contest. Neither team could make substantial gains offensively and the score remained 0-0 until late in the fourth quarter. Dolphins quarterback Bryan Bouchehon then took to the air with a pass to end Terrell James, who caught the ball after it bounced off a defender's fingertips, and carried the ball over for the score. The extra point try was missed and the score remained 6-0, favor of the Dolphins, at the gun.

In other Pee Wee action the Redskins beat the Buffalo Bills 14-6.

In the Biddy League, the Redskins fought the Razorbacks to a 0-0 draw and the Dolphins tamed the Lions, 13-0.

Doughboy League action saw the Raiders stomp the Patriots, 18-6. The Patriots jumped off to an early lead when they recovered a Raider fumble of the opening kickoff on the Raider's 3-yard line. Three plays later, Patriot back Boyce Bradford scored on a one-yard plunge. Late in the second quarter the Raiders tied the score on a 25-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Fred Wadsworth of five games scheduled.

Co C squeaked by HHC 7-6 then came back to assault and shut out Cbt Spt Co 12-0, leaving Co C with a 5-2 record.

Co B continued to demonstrate the power of their line as the game with HHC went into overtime and sudden death penetration. The game ended with Co B pushing their way to the win by a score of 7-6.

Independent

The 298th Sig Plt maintained their perfect record of 6-0 last week in the Independent League by defeating A Trp, 15th Cav 7-0.

"Our 'Quick Sand' defense just sucked the shoes off the ponies of the 15th Cav. We play the 72nd Engr Co next and they had better have their heavy equipment ready," stated Jamie L. Walker of the 298th Sig Plt.

HHC brigade fell victim to not one bomb, but four in their game with the 72nd Engr Co.

"They just picked us apart. All that held us together was our tight end Willie Brown. It was a disaster, but we're coming back," commented John L. Miller of HHC.

Ever Ready

"The lights being out at one end of the field made it hard to score," commented Marshall L. Soubler as HHD slipped by Co B 7-6.

The sweet taste of victory was short lived for the men of HHD as they were defeated 7-6 by "The Truckers" of Co C.

The "Paper Tigers" of Co A, roared to another victory by defeating "The Knuckle Busters" of Co D, 8-0.

The game started off slowly as neither team seemed to be able to penetrate the other's defense. Then late in the first half, with Co D backed up deep in their own territory, a rush led by Mike "Mad Dog" Alward and Chuck "Charger" Quinn, sacked the opposing quarterback for a safety and a 2-0 lead.

In the second half Co A marched 50 yards for a touchdown. A 35-yard bomb from 'Fly' Reynolds to Tiny "Too Tall" Mack, proved to be the only other score of the game.

The game was iced away for the "Paper Tigers" in the closing minutes when Bill "Bingo" Brown intercepted a Co D pass and a 45 yard runback, before being stopped.

to end Mike Dean. The Raiders scored again in the first half and once late in the fourth quarter.

The Wolverines upended the Steelers in the Pony League to the tune of 13-6. The Wolverines, spearheaded by its strong offensive backfield, rallied in the second half to score in the third and fourth quarters. The Steelers scored in the second quarter on a punt return.

Rabies diagnosed in local raccoon

A rabid raccoon was found on Fryar Field last week. There may be other infected animals on the reservation. Suspected cases should be referred to the Post Game Wardens, 545-1333.

Everyone should be cautious in any contacts with wild animals. They should never be handled by untrained people. Rabid animals will act in an abnormal manner. Special caution should be exercised when wild animals demonstrate a lack of fear of humans, exhibit friendliness or appear in areas not their natural habitat. These symptoms make them an attraction to children who have not been made aware of the danger of rabies.

Pets may be immunized against this disease at the Ft. Benning Small Animal Veterinarian Hospital from 1 until 3 p.m., Monday through Friday.

ROD AND GUN ACTIVITIES

The Rod and Gun Club is planning several events of interest to sportsmen. The first will be a turkey shoot and "Weapons Sight In Day" at Brinson Range October 18 and 19.

The club will operate Brinson Range both days to make a range available for hunters to sight in their weapons they intend to use for hunting. It doesn't make any difference what type of firearm you have. Bring it out to Brinson Range and find out how it shoots before you go hunting.

Everyone is invited to participate. You don't have to be military or a civilian worker on post. Each year many deer and other animals are wounded and escape to die later. Many of these instances can be traced to bad marksmanship caused by the hunter's lack of knowledge of his weapon. Sighting in weapons before hunting can eliminate quite a bit of this lost game.

Shooters must furnish the shotgun for the turkey shoot. The club will furnish the ammunition. Participants will not shoot at turkeys. Turkeys will be awarded as prizes.

The club will sponsor bird dog field trials Nov. 1, 2 and 3. There will be events for all owners from the professional who follows his dogs on horseback to the hunter who uses his dog to point game for the dinner table.

The club will hold a Big Deer contest again this year. Prizes will be awarded to hunters registering the heaviest deer and to the hunter registering the deer with the most antler points.

Tom Mann, local professional bass fisherman and bait manufacturer, will be the featured speaker at a meeting of the Ft. Benning Bass Anglers Sportsman's Association (BASS) October 8.

The meeting at the Black Angus Restaurant, Columbus, GA, will begin with a social hour at 7 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner at 8 p.m. Mann is scheduled to begin speaking at 9 p.m.

Mann will talk about bass fishing. He is recognized as the leading authority on the subject in the Southeast. He is especially noted for his knowledge of the Walter F. George Reservoir (Lake Eufaula). He knows this body of water from the top of the water to the bottom of the deepest holes. He should. As an Alabama game warden, Mann patrolled the entire area for years before it was covered with water.

His soft plastic "Jelly Worms," a spinner bait called the "Woolly Bully," and a lead-bodied spinner he calls "Little George" are known and used by bass fishermen throughout the country.

He has qualified for the BASS Classic, a tournament limited to the top 24 bass fishermen in the nation each year. He finished second in 1971, third in 1972 and fifth in 1973. He is virtually assured of being one of the eligibles for the 1974 Classic.

This meeting will be open to active members, their guests and prospective club members. All active duty and retired military personnel and Department of Defense workers on post are eligible for membership in the club.

Individuals desiring to attend should call Tommy Mueller, social chairman, 545-5555 or 687-8838 prior to noon October 8.

Co C mess hall doesn't serve snakes!

By RICK WASSER

RANGER — the definitive American fighting man. The very word conjures up visions of jungle fatigues and swampy terrain, and traditionally, of eating snakes.

But snakes are not on the typical menu of Airborne-Rangers in Co C, 1/29th Inf (Pioneers), TSB.

A typical menu in their dining facility consists of fried chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy, applesauce, black-eyed peas, sauteed corn, stuffed celery sticks, tossed vegetable salad with assorted dressings, blueberry pie, and a host of beverages.

It is well prepared food on the above menu that has led the dining facility of Co C to emerge victorious in every single competition that they have entered since they have opened.

The Ranger Mess, headed by dining facility manager, SFC Joseph Methvin, opened early in May of this year and took about two months to get their feet on the ground.

In July, August, and September the dining facility entered the School Brigade Best Mess competition and won every single month they entered! Their most recent award, is the Post Best Mess award for the month of August, the first month that they entered that culinary competition.

VA leads in veteran employment

The Veterans Administration continues to lead all federal agencies in employment of Vietnam-era veterans. Acting Administrator Richard L. Roudebush said that 24,486 Vietnam-era veterans were on the VA rolls Aug. 1. This represented 12 per cent of the total VA work force, almost double the average for all federal agencies. The VA hiring average is 1,400 per month.

Vietnam-era veterans included 5,954 on the job Aug. 1 who were hired under the Veterans Readjustment Authority (VRA) inaugurated by the President in 1970. This program offers employment, coupled with job training or education, in helping the veteran make the transition to civilian life. The VA had made 20,840 VRA appointments through Aug. 1.

Vietnam-era veterans continue to hold positions of increasing responsibility within the VA. Earlier this year Robert L. Winters was named director of the Des Moines Regional Office, the first Vietnam veteran to direct one of the 58 VA field offices. Almost 18,000 Vietnam-era veterans hold VA positions within its Department of Medicine and Surgery, the majority at 171 hospitals. More than 50 per cent of the physicians assistants are Vietnam-era veterans, as are almost 10 per cent of the physicians. Vietnam-era veterans make up 98 per cent of the 1,300 Vet Reps serving on college campuses this fall as VA benefits counselors.

Almost all have bachelor degrees and a significant number have graduate degrees. Included are 80 black Vet Reps, 50 Spanish surnamed veterans, 14 orientals and 4 Indians.

Scouts will learn survival techniques

Boy Scouts from the Ft. Benning area will participate in a survival course on Nov. 9 from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at Ft. Benning's Told Field.

The event is being sponsored by members of the Ft. Benning Rangers and Operations Department and is being coordinated through members of the Boy Scout Committee, MAJ Charles Woodson and Scout Coordinator, Mr. Emmett McKay.

Each scout will spend a day learning and observing various demonstrations by Ranger team members. Afterwards, scouts will be instructed in such survival techniques as building traps and snare, expedient shelters, building fires and determining directions. After the demonstrations and instructions the scouts will compete in the Silver Ax competition.

Before the full day in the field closes, each scout will undertake the task of preparing the evening meal. They will cook chickens to complement the one potato, carrot and onion each will be asked to bring with him to the field.

During the closing ceremony, each participant will be awarded a survival patch to signify course completion.

SUBJECT: Columbus Day and Veterans' Day Safety

ALL FORT BENNING PERSONNEL

- The month of October brings with it two holidays - Columbus Day and Veterans' Day. Some Fort Benning personnel will be traveling during these holidays while others will relax at home during this time. Whatever form of recreation you choose, take time to consider the safety of yourself and your family. Drive carefully and practice safety in all of your holiday activities.
- None of our personnel were lost as a result of Labor Day traffic accidents. This is an accomplishment which we should all view with pride. Let's match this achievement with similar ones during Columbus Day and Veterans' Day. Take time to be safe.

LTG James speaks in Tuskegee

U.S. Air Force LTG Daniel (Chappie) James, Jr., vice commander, Military Airlift Command, Scott Air Force Base, IL, was the featured speaker at the dedication of the Tuskegee, AL, Municipal Airport on Oct. 4. He was greeted in a ramp ceremony by units from the Senior Divisions of the Army and Air Force ROTC at Tuskegee Institute at Moton Field, the airport site in Tuskegee.

Army Junior ROTC cadets from Macon County high schools served as color guards and escorts during the ceremonies, and also participated in the unveiling of a plaque dedicated "in the honor of Black Almen trained in Tuskegee, who gave their lives in service of their country."

LTG James, a former student and resident at Tuskegee, was graduated from the Institute in March, 1942, with a B.A. in Physical Education.

He remarked, "I owe a great part of what I am to Tuskegee — it gave me a higher education, my wings, my lovely wife, mother of my children and my pride."

Upon graduating from Tuskegee, LTG James was an instructor pilot at the Army Air Corps Cadet Training program also held at Tuskegee. Later he entered the program himself as a cadet and received his commission as an officer in July 1943.

In his airport address he called for unity and for people to stop trying to find ways to hate each other because of race, creed, color, politics, or religion.

To the angry disillusioned young blacks of America he stated, "Don't yell at the door of opportunity, and when it opens, say 'Wait, I got to get my bags.' Come prepared with bags of knowledge and intelligence so you'll be ready when that door opens."

During the ceremonies, recognition was also given to C. Alfred (Chief) Anderson, one of the first black men to receive his pilot license and a former pilot instructor at Moton Field, the cradle of black aviation, where the 99th Pursuit Squadron was its first assigned unit.

"I use techniques now that I learned at the knee of Chief Anderson," stated LTG James.

While the Tuskegee Institute High School Band played "Wildflower," two jets of the Alabama National Guard made two fly-over tributes to the deceased flyers of Tuskegee-trained air units, and Tuskegee's Mayor, Johnny Ford, called for moments of silence during the fly-overs.

Lou Rawls, the international entertainer, sang The National Anthem at the dedication.

CFC rolls on

With the Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign a little more than three weeks old, approximately 48.9 percent of Ft. Benning's 1975 goal of $145,000 has been realized from donations contributed by 22 units throughout the post.

Seven of these units have donated 100 percent or more of their goals.

In the early part of this week, a total of $71,124.99 had been pledged by personnel on post, $61,355.66 of it through the payroll deduction plan.

According to James Schoonover, post project officer, $74,690.17 had been pledged in contributions at this stage of the fund drive last year.

Shelved item's prices will remain the same

In the past, whenever a commissary item was received at a higher or lower price, all stock in warehouses and on shelves was changed to reflect the higher or lower price. Effective immediately, prices of items on the shelves will not be changed when a new shipment is received at a different price according to Mr. Fantauzzi, commissary officer.

As items are restocked, they will reflect current prices. In most instances, a displayed item may reflect two different prices on the shelf, (i.e. 10 cans may reflect the price of 10¢ and the remaining cans may reflect the price of 15¢). This is due to the necessity of replenishing the item in sufficient quantity to service all customers.

The above is intended to reflect prices as nearly as is reasonably obtainable to actual acquisition cost for individual items.

WACs experience record fire

SP4 Glenna Duty and PFC Betty Winston, record processing control clerks for the 524th Personnel Service Company (PSC), 36th Engrs, took careful aim with the M16 rifle while qualifying during the company's record fire training.

"The proper handling and use of a weapon should be taught to all females in the Army," remarked Glenna Duty.

"Every woman should know how to handle a weapon of some kind, even though she may never have to use it," she added.

Qualifying with the M16 and getting involved in other unit activities may sound simple. However, if your job consisted of sitting behind a desk and shuffling papers, then it might not seem as simple as it sounds. Sometimes getting away from the desk can be a real task.

The PSC record processing clerks qualified on a record fire range from distances of 75 meters to 300 meters. Both women fired from the kneeling, standing, foxhole and prone positions to qualify.

"I have had past experiences firing other weapons," Duty said, "such as the 357 magnum pistol and the 30-30 high powered rifle, so I felt rather confident firing the M16."

"All women in the Army should be able to actively participate in various unit training exercises," stated Betty Winston, "because it would help them become better informed on unit activities."

Winston added, "Not only would she be more knowledgeable, but it would also break the monotonous routine of the day to day desk job."

"In no way do I feel I should have to compete against men in the company in firing weapons," remarked Duty, "I am just as equally qualified as the men are, if not more so."

"Much of the training in a company may not seem too important to a woman," Winston pointed out, "but if she is watchful and interested enough she may find a valuable type of education she has never before imagined," she concluded.

Army aviation has second WAC pilot

Army aviation now has two women pilots. 1LT Linda M. Horan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bruce McDonald of Grass Valley, CA., received her wings Tuesday, Sept. 24, at Ft. Rucker.

She follows by four months the Army's first woman aviator, 2LT Sally Woolfolk Murphy, who is now attending a fixed wing transition course at Rucker. There are five other women presently receiving training as helicopter pilots at the Army Aviation Center.

LT Horan, wife of LTC Michael J. Horan of Ft. Benning, GA., has been reassigned to Ft. Eusutis, VA. She will attend a five-month course designed to qualify maintenance officers who are Army aviators as maintenance test pilots, able to detect, diagnose, and prescribe appropriate corrective action for the problems that can be encountered with the UH-1 "Huey" helicopter. Following her graduation from that course next February, she expects to be assigned to Ft. Benning.

The newly rated aviator has been in the Army since August 1972. She serged in the Adjutant General Section at Ft. Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D. C., before beginning flight training at Ft. Rucker in December 1973.

LT Horan is a 1962 graduate of Nevada High School in Grass Valley. She later attended San Jose State College and the University of Montana. She earned a master's degree from that school in 1969.

1LT Linda M. Horan, the second woman to wear the wings of an Army aviator, poses in a helicopter.

Pro pay gets axe

Because of a $11.5 million reduction in pro pay money by Congress, some 40,000 soldiers will lose their monthly $50.

Special duty assignment pay, however, will continue to be paid to recruiters, career counselors and drill sergeants.

Pro pay will be cut in half on Dec. 1 and will be gone on Jan. 31, accord g to Pentagon officials. New superior performance pay awards will be authorized during this two-month period at $25 a month.

Sergeant Major of the Army Leon L. Van Autreve (seated aboard helicopter) arrived at Ft. Benning, Monday (Oct. 7) for his second official visit since becoming the Army's top noncommissioned officer. He is shown with Infantry Center CSM Theron V. Gergen prior to their departure to the Florida Ranger Camp at Eglin Air Force Base. Van Autreve also visited the mountain Ranger Camp at Dahlonega, GA, and met with officers and enlisted men of major units on post. He was scheduled to depart Ft. Benning this morning. November 1 is IQ day for many VA pensioners ATLANTA — Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler this week is reminding some of the more than 55,000 Georgia Veterans, dependents and survivors who will be receiving Income Questionnaire cards along with their Nov. 1 checks, that they will have less time in which to return their "IQ" cards to the Veterans Administration than they have had previously. The cards must be returned to the VA by Jan. 1, 1975. The old deadline was Jan. 15.

"Failure to complete the questionnaires and return them to the VA by the Jan. 1 deadline could result in pension payments being suspended," cautioned Wheeler. He added that this regulation does not apply to those veterans and widows receiving compensations for service-connected disabilities and deaths. It is applicable, however, to veterans and widows receiving pension, and parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC).

Subject to certain income limitations, VA pensions are paid to wartime veterans totally and permanently disabled from causes not connected with their military services and to widows of veterans. The amount of monthly payments is related directly to the amount of income a pensioner has.

"While VA benefits are not counted as income," said Wheeler, "other income factors such as Social Security retirement, rentals from real estate, dividends and interest, and earnings from employment are considered by the VA in determining a pensioner's benefits for the coming year."

As a result of legislation enacted in 1971, veterans and widows receiving pensions, and parents receiving DIC payments will not have to return the cards, provided they are at least 72 years old; have been on the pension rolls for at least two consecutive years, and there has been no significant increase in their incomes.

Detailed information about the questionnaire cards as well as assistance in filling them out may be obtained at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Display presented by Infantry research group

MSG Michael S. Anderson, Army Materiel Command Infantry Research and Development Liaison Office, Ft. Benning, presented a display/briefing to CSM's, SGM's and invited guests at the TRADOC Command Sergeant Major conference, Ft. Monroe, VA.

This briefing display was presented to serve as a springboard into the large pool of knowledge and experience among the conferees, with the hope that many constructive suggestions, ideas and recommendations would be made.

The US Army Materiel Command is very much concerned with supplying the best and latest equipment. By obtaining feedback from its customers, they are better equipped to serve the Infantry's needs and those of the individual soldier.

The TRADOC Command Sergeant Major conferees made numerous suggestions and recommendations which they felt would improve their soldiers' equipment and effectiveness.

Individual Soldier's Infantry equipment was displayed — items recently standardized and those further away from standard issue still in the developmental, prototype or experimental phase of the Army's research and development effort. Among the many items of equipment and clothing shown at the conference were individual combat rations, all-purpose lightweight carrying equipment such as field packs (rucksacks), 30-round ammo pouches, individual equipment belt and suspenders, foot gear, shelters, foul weather gear and weapons/munitions.

Infantry units, desiring to receive a similar briefing/display, are invited to make direct coordination by contacting the commander, of the USAMC Infantry R&D Liaison office. The phone number is 545-2062/2466. To insure proper and complete coordination a one-month lead time should be planned.

What is your reaction to the elimination of pro-pay?

CPT Mike Nelson
IOAC 7-74

Many junior enlisted relied on pro pay quite heavily. Now their standard of living is going to drop some. Also this decision is going to take away the impetus to study and cause problems in the form of low or invalidated MOS scores causing reclassification or fouling up chances for reenlistment.

CPT Robert Herb
IOAC 1-75

I think it will have a definite effect upon morale. The guys in my old unit who were drawing pro pay were really outstanding, sharp & hardworking. If a man doesn't have a goal to work toward anymore, it's going to affect his attitude. In the case of an NCO, this would also affect those who worked for him.

CPT John Dye
Company Tactics Committee

The majority of those who study for the tests will still maintain their proficiency in their MOS. Those who won't study as a result of this move will be in the minority. I think pro pay was one more incentive the commander could use to get his EM and NCO's to be more proficient in their jobs. It was an excellent reward for good work. I think there will be a morale problem with those who worked so hard for their extra pay, because a major goal has been taken away from them.

SSG C. B. Hoover
Co A, 197th Spt Bn

The elimination of pro-pay would remove any incentive to achieve the utmost proficiency in one's skill. It would also eliminate competition among soldiers of equal grade.

SFC Robert Horan
Electives Branch DOI

The Army Times said it with one word, SHAFT.

PFC Gregory Wentworth
HQ 4th Std Bn, TSB

It's taking away from the individual any reason to do better. Now a soldier will say "why study". It takes away from readiness too. A person who has worked and studied harder to be better in his MOS than the rest should get paid more. I don't get pro pay now, and suddenly I don't have a reward to work for.

SGT Charles Klasky
EDCON, DET

It's going to cost me $900.00 a year. This is going to have a big impact on the Specialist who's trying to be competitive and get ahead. As for me, I used to try for the highest scores on everything. Now I'll get my 100 points for promotion to validate my MOS and that's all. What is the sense in really trying? High scores are just overkill now.

SSG Oscar Melvin
Company Tactics Committee

When they took pro pay away from us they removed the competition and incentive. There used to be a reason for being better than the next guy.

Who discovered America??

If Columbus discovered America, then how did the Indians get here? Not even the Indians seem to know.

The discovery of America is one of the few remaining mysterious romances of history today. Today Christopher Columbus receives the credit for the discovery of East America about 482 years ago.

On Oct. 12, 1492, a sailor on the Pinta, Rodrigo de Triana cried out "Tierra! Tierra! (Land!)".

Before Columbus, human life went on for countless ages in both the eastern and western halves of the world without any contact between the two.

Of course, the possibility of other human beings having set foot upon American shores before Columbus is quite feasible.

In early pre-Columbus days, there seems to be many legends about a great deal of blowing and drifting on the open seas being done.

It is agued that in the fifth century of the Christian Era, certain Buddhist missionary priests came from China by way of Kamcharka and the Aleutian Islands and kept on until they got to a country they called Fusang, which is now called Mexico.

Japanese junks are credibly reported as having been driven ashore on the coasts of Oregon and California.

Jean Cousin of Dieppe, while sailing down the coast of West Africa was caught in a storm and blown across to Brazil.

There are even whispered legends of the Irish undertaking voyages to America in the days when the monasteries of Innisfallen were a center of piety. Five hundred years before Columbus, Norsemen inhabited Greenland and were making attempted migrations to the mainland of America.

History lessons tell of Lief Erickson's fabled voyage that was made to America around 1,000 A.D.

It is believed that the land where Lief spent the winter which was so bountiful with grapes so that he called it Vinland, is part of the coast of northern America, the northern coast of Newfoundland.

Nevertheless, the credit for the discovery of America goes to Columbus. It took a great deal of courage for a man to sail into what was then the unknown. And it wasn't until Columbus' discovery that contact between the two hemispheres was established.

SP/4 Susan Boguta likes to keep active, but we interrupted her busy schedule to find out what she likes about the Army.

"After I graduated from college, I decided to try a technical job, one that would help me learn about flying. Because eventually I'd like to be a pilot. So my training's helped a lot.

"I also enjoy meeting people and talking about my work. So recruiting work has been a natural for me.

"One of the things I always mention to the young people I meet is that the Army's taught me you can do much more than you think you can. The opportunities are here, all you have to do is take advantage of them. And that's what I'm doing."

Today's Army gets better every time a good woman reenlists.

Medical Care : A Right or a Privilege

The military medical care system began in 1775 with the first Military Medical Service. Since then, medical services have been available to servicemen and women to care for injuries and illnesses, whether directly or indirectly attributable to military service, and to restore them to their pre-service condition of health, insofar as possible.

Dependents of military personnel first were provided medical care as a supplement to servicemen's pay and because of the remote location of many military installations. Free health care for military dependents was authorized by an act of Congress in 1884 which stated that "medical officers of the Army, and contract surgeons, shall whenever practicable attend the families of the officers and soldiers free of charge."

WWI era manuals and regulations provided that "supernumeraries" might be admitted to a military hospital under certain circumstances. The term "supernumeraries" was construed to include retired personnel. Dependents of active duty personnel and retirees and their dependents received care under these provisions until passage of Public Law 51 during WWII. This law placed severe limitations on previously provided care; understandable limitations due to the situation of the time.

Basically, dependents could get treatment from military facilities only if adequate care wasn't available in an appropriate non-federal hospital. Also, care was to be provided only for acute surgical and medical conditions.

In 1949, Congressman Teague introduced a bill to amend Public Law 51 to include care in uniformed services medical facilities for unmarried widows and children of deceased members. Although this bill, and three other similar ones over the next four years, wasn't passed, concern was shown by DOD with the establishment of an independent Citizens Advisory Committee, headed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, to make a comprehensive and thorough study of the entire medical care for the dependents of military personnel. The study showed that as military medical facilities were not always accessible, medical care could not be provided for approximately 40 per cent of the military dependents. The Moulton Committee recommended that the medical care program for dependents in uniformed services facilities be supplemented by a somewhat similar medical care program in civilian medical facilities at Government expense.

DOD endorsed this position and transmitted the recommendation to Congress on March 7, 1955. A succession of bills followed and, finally, HR 9429, introduced on Feb. 20, 1956, by Mr. Kilday, passed by the House on March 2, and the Senate on May 14, and signed by the President on June 7, becoming Public Law 569 — the Dependents' Medical Care Act, effective Dec. 7 of that year.

This law injected the element of "right" to medical care, provided for a uniform program among the services and made provisions for care of active duty dependents in civilian facilities at Government expense. Further, the Congress included a clause that the care of military retirees and their dependents would be "subject to the availability of space and facilities and the capabilities of the medical and dental staff." This clause, in effect, changed care for retirees from a right to a privilege — something that may be given if certain conditions exist; in the case the availability of bed space, clinical facilities and capability of the professional staff.

While it appears that in approving the language of the Dependents' Medical Care Act of 1956, the Congress did not intend to reduce the scope of medical benefits long accorded retirees and their dependents it is evident that subsequent events of a different, but related, nature did result in such reduction; i.e., hospital beds for military retirees and their dependents were not being replaced

However, until 1966 adequate uniformed services facilities were available and medical care was being provided to retired personnel on request and to dependents to the extent desired, except in areas lacking facilities. The qualification in the law creating the Dependents' Medical Care Act that care for retired personnel and their dependents could be provided "subject to the availability of space, facilities and capabilities of the professional staff" caused an impact which wasn't fully realized until the retired population settled in areas adjacent to large military installations with medical facilities. This served, quite understandably, to overtax the medical facilities in those locations. This phenomenon, coupled with the restriction on programming hospital beds for retired personnel and their dependents, made it clear that the demand for medical services would soon exceed medical capabilities within the services and that remedial action was required.

The basic Uniformed Services Health Benefits Program (USHBP), of which CHAMPUS is a part, is a comprehensive medical care program. The wording of the law is subject of very broad interpretation and therefore, with the exception of the few benefits which the law specifically excludes, most procedures or types of care which are generally accepted as being part of good medical practice are covered services. Due to the law's broad wording, it hasn't been necessary to ask Congress for many amendments.

What'ja mean, it ain't covered under CHAMPUS??

The current dilemma may be attributed primarily to the fast growing retiree population, the reduction of the size of active military forces and proportional reduction in authorized medical personnel, base closures with accompanying closing of medical facilities, the increased number of dependents of junior active duty personnel and the end of the draft in 1972.

The Armed Forces have been unable to meet their requirements for military physicians with volunteers since September 1940. At present, only one-sixth of the physicians on active duty are serving voluntarily. Another one-sixth serve because of obligations incurred through DOD-subsidized military training programs. The remaining two-thirds serve because of the doctor draft. Although the draft ended in 1973, it has continued to provide the bulk of our military physician force.

During FY 75 the physician's strength authorization, based on operational forces supported, is 12,174, but actually only 85%, or some 10,335, will be on duty. DOD has projected a staffing level of only 68% by FY78 unless some remedial action is rapidly taken. The problem is not simply numbers but is compounded by the type of physician which is short.

Unfortunately, the developments that led to this problem are beyond military control. Since WWII, the trend has been toward specialization. The net result of all the factors is that there are insufficient medical personnel to provide all the care needed. Yet, by Public Law, the services are required to provide care for all active duty personnel. Also, by law they MAY provide care for the dependents and survivors of active duty personnel and for retired personnel, and their dependents and INSOFAR AS THEY ARE ABLE WITHIN THE LIMITS OF FACILITIES AND WITHOUT ENDANGERING THE PRIMARY MISSION.

Many new provisions have been implemented to relieve the doctor from administration duties and allow him more time with the care of patients. Many more are under study at this time. In no way will they solve the problem.

The change with the biggest impact is the 1 August elimination of the provision that out-patient care related to a hospital admission, 30 days before admission and within 120 days after release, was considered in-patient care. Under the new rules, this care would be treated as out-patient care with more personal expense to the beneficiary involved.

The action which most threatens the current military health care systems is a cost cutting study undertaken by the Office of Management and Budget at the direction of the former President. Begun in July of last year, the study is an in-depth comparative evaluation of existing military and non-military health care systems. When it was announced that this study was to be taken, several sweeping preconceived positions were listed, most as an outgrowth of a joint DOD-HEW report of 1972. Some of these were:

—"Eliminate or transfer to other systems specific categories of beneficiaries dependents and survivors of active duty and retired personnel.

—"Restrict scope of services offered or eliminate specific services altogether.

—"Co-payment of charges for office visits or prescription drugs.

—"Co-insurance — for example, each beneficiary would pay 20 per cent of all cost."

There emerges a rather cloudy but discernible direction to the study which goes far beyond the military perceived problem of providing quality care for all beneficiaries. There are strong opponents to the present system, and this group would like to alter significantly the mission of the military medical care system to include major reductions in medical active duty strengths and the transfer of dependent and retiree care to a HEW-controlled national health plan.

Everyone should understand that the military services have not reneged on any promises. The military medical personnel are doing more than can reasonably be expected in face of the problems being encountered. If strong public support for quality military health program is to be developed, it is important for all of us to understand to take an active interest in every program being proposed regarding health care for the future. It is not enough to worry only about CHAMPUS or whether retirees or any other segment will be able to get adequate care. It is all one problem of the well-being of the military establishment as a whole. The whole subject will be addressed at the up-coming Annual Meeting of the Association.

Movement in water is not as fast as on land but the "Patriots" of the 1/58th Inf are determined to complete any task assigned as they undertake amphibious training during their Operational Readiness Training Test. (Photo by C. B. Heavner)

1/58th Patriots swim Victory Pond

"Can a duck swim?" was the reply of armored personnel carrier (APC) drivers of the 1/58th Inf (Patriots), when questioned concerning their ability to use their APCs in an amphibious role as the battalion's line companies underwent Operational Readiness Training Tests (ORTT) last week.

One of the highlights of the four-day test was the crossing of Victory Pond by the units' APCs. In this portion of the exercise the tracked vehicles "swam" the width of the pond.

According to MAJ Russ Zink, the battalion operations officer, the M113 armored personnel carrier is a low-silhouetted track vehicle capable of amphibious operation on streams and small lakes and of extended cross-country travel over rough terrain. The vehicle is also capable of high speed operation on improved roads or highways. Movement of the track propels and steers the carrier on both land and water.

"This was the first time the track vehicles have undergone amphibious training since we became a Strategic Army Force (STRAF) battalion 18 months ago," commented LTC Theodore B. Voorhees, commander of the Patriots.

"The battalion's PAC drivers are extremely familiar with the vehicles cross-country operation, but amphibious operations were new to most of the 40 drivers who moved their vehicles with squad members inside across Victory Pond," LTC Voorhees concluded. Once on the other side, the land portion of the ORTT continued.

The overall purpose of the test was to determine the status of training and operational readiness of the companies of the battalion under conditions

298th Sig Plt gets 100%

"It's better to give than receive, and every man in the 298th Sig Plt believes it. SGT Jamie L. Walker, the platoon's Combined Federal Campaign senior keyman presented the platoon commander, 1LT William L. McNeese, keyman envelopes containing $1,009.00 from the 78 men assigned to the unit.

"We expected to get one-hundred percent participation, but over a thousand dollars from such a small unit is truly heart warming," said 1LT McNeese. The 298th is the first 197th Inf Bde unit to reach the objective of one-hundred percent participation in the Combined Federal Campaign.

that simulate those of a typical combat environment.

According to CPT Richard F. Timmons, assistant operations officer of the 197th Inf Bde and chief umpire for the ORTT, "The conduct of the ORTT incorporates the 'opposing forces' concept wherein all tested units actually play against each other throughout the entire test. This approach simulates realism and permits a degree of flexibility not possible in other forms of field testing."

To balance the force of the companies from the 1/58th, Co A, 2/69th Armor also participated in the test.

Florida FTX gives 3/7th Inf a time in the sun

By Bob Thomas

A field training exercise turned into a Florida vacation for members of Co C, 3/7th Inf (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf Bde as the unit completed a seven-day FTX at Eglin AFB, FL.

The training exercise began Sept. 29 at Lawson Field as the company was airlifted by U.S. Air Force C-141 aircraft to Eglin, located on the Gulf Coast in the Florida panhandle. A scout section of Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th also participated in the exercise, acting as an aggressor force and conducting training of their own. The Cottonbalers were supported by members of Co C, 197th Spt Bn, who provided truck transportation, and the 72nd Engr Co, which provided 15-man assault rafts for raft training.

"It's all right!" exclaimed SP4 Tyrone Pipkin of Co C. "The raft training has been the best thing we have done yet. I wouldn't mind doing that kind of thing every day of the year."

The rifle platoons of Co C spent three days training with the rafts on the Alaqua Creek and Choc-

Shelton selected Soldier of Month

SP4 LeRoy Shelton has been selected Soldier of the Month for September in a competition held by the 1/29th Inf, TSB.

Shelton is an Airborne-Ranger assigned to Co C of the Pioneers, where he works as a rifleman. He spends a lot of time walking patrol in the mountains of Dahlonega and in the swamps of Florida, in support of the Infantry School.

"I was very honored to have been selected the Soldier of the Month for the battalion," Shelton said. "I felt the whole test was pretty rugged, and I wasn't at all sure that I had fared that well."

The competition in the 1/29th pits one soldier from each of the six companies against each other. They are tested on general military knowledge, current events, MOS knowledge, and appearance.

tawhatchee Bay. "This was our first exposure to small boat training," stated CPT De Lloyd Voorhees, Jr. "All of the men seemed to enjoy it."

In addition to the raft training the soldiers conducted various field operations which involved the construction of rope bridges. "All of this training is in preparation for our upcoming Operational Readiness Test (ORT)," CPT Voorhees added. "We feel we will be fully prepared."

The unit took along its own four-man dining facility team which set up kitchen in large tent and provided the hungry Cottonbalers with hot meals when the men were not on the move.

"The food is definitely good," stated SP4 Pipkin as he ate a breakfast of scrambled eggs, bacon and grits from a paper plate. PFC Henry Newsom, a Unit-of-Choice enlistee from Columbus, GA agreed. "I've enjoyed the whole trip," PFC Newsom stated. "We have all worked hard and walked an awful lot, but we have had a good time."

The soldiers were given a half day of rest and relaxation with a swim in the Gulf following a raft exercise. Warm, sunny weather favored the Cottonbalers for most of the seven-day trip. Prior to returning to Ft. Benning the unit conducted a traditional company party.

"For me, this whole trip has been like a Florida vacation," stated SP4 George K. Washington.

Bids still being taken on wooden structures

Wednesday, Oct. 16 will be the cutoff date for submitting sealed bids to the Savannah District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on 13 wooden structures to be disposed of at Ft. Benning.

The buildings, constructed in the early 1940 World War II era, are being offered for sale to the general public as the beginning of a program to dispose of excess and outmoded structures on post. The sale is being aimed toward military and civilian buyers to give them an opportunity to purchase scrap lumber for home repairs and other projects at a low cost.

Persons interested in receiving information on the sale should contact the Environmental Management Division, Directorate of Facilities Engineering, by telephoning 545-2812/4957. Prospective purchasers will be provided with an invitation to bid, specifications of the sale and details on the buildings, such as size and location.

Successful bidders will be required to dismantle and remove the structure from Ft. Benning at their own expense.

EM Promotion Boards:

How They Work

Back in brown-shoe Army days when a corporal was godalmighty and paid 46 bucks a month, promotions were as scarce as beer in the barracks.

"I spent nine years as a corporal," a balding sergeant major recalls, drawing out the words as though he was polishing a hard-earned trophy.

"Times have changed," he adds in an inflection that is more resigned than philosophical.

"Times have changed in the enlisted promotion system but ouija board myths remain.

Board Selection

The promotion machinery begins when DCSPER officials add up the projected slots and compare them with grade ceilings. The cut off dates for the zones of consideration depend upon how many can be promoted, the number of soldiers with DOR in the potential zones, and a determination of selection rates for both primary and secondary zones. Once decided, the zones and the numbers to be selected are TWXed to the field.

While hopeful candidates pass the word among friends, MILPERCEN officials are going over names and attributes of potential board members.

It isn't easy to pick a promotion board. Twenty-six members are required. The senior member is a general officer. He serves as president of the board which includes both female and minority group members.

— All must have outstanding records.
— Colonels must have commanded at the brigade level and must be graduates of a senior service college.

— Lieutenant colonels must have commanded at battalion or equal level and must be graduates of C&GS.

— Command sergeants major and sergeants major must have recent CSM experience in both required levels and career fields. Each must be at least a high school graduate.

Once MILPERCEN selects the best qualified members, the list is forwarded to DCSPER for approval.

Guidance Begins

While DCSPER mulls over the board list, staff members at the Army Enlisted Records Center, Ft. Ben Harrison, complete the screening and updating of official military personnel files (OPMF). This insures the records of those in the zones are ready for the board. DCSPER and MILPERCEN are informed of the final count of eligible soldiers in each career field.

These numbers will be used to determine guidelines on how many NCOs can be chosen from each career group. The career field with the greatest shortage normally will get the heaviest selection; career fields with overages get the lowest selection. Selection rates vary because of the number eligible, the number authorized at the next grade up, projected losses, and the quality of individuals in each career group.

This guidance and more goes into a letter of instructions which the board president uses to guide board deliberations.

Board is Convened

TDY orders are issued to the board members who proceed to Ft. Ben where they report to the DA Selection Board Secretariat. They are briefed by the CO of the Enlisted Records Center, the commander of the Enlisted Evaluation Center, and a general officer from DCSPER. The thrust here is on the importance of the board's mission.

The board now is convened, sworn and organized. Each member becomes familiar with the voting procedures. Guidance comes from the board recorder provided by DA and from the board president. All boards have five panels who consider soldiers in five career groupings: Combat arms, communication-supply, general support, engineer-transportation, and special categories. Each panel has three specific tasks:

- to select those to be promoted.
- to identify unsatisfactory performers.
- to designate the promotion MOS for those selected whose normal career progression MOS is overstrength

Voting Starts

The next step is practice voting. Each panel is provided records for study and practice voting. This training, plus study of the letter of instructions, prepares each member to share equally and independently in weighing the merits of each eligible soldier.

Once the practice voting is finished, the selection process begins. Each individual OPMF contains a vote card and the file is passed to each member of the panel. The promotion board member goes over the file and writes a score, ranging from 1 to 6, on the vote card. After the panel has voted, the scores are totaled. The lowest score possible is five; 30 is max. Scores are then arranged in numerical sequence in each career field.

Best Qualified Selected

Now comes the actual promotion selection. For example, let's say a panel examining eligibles in the communications-supply career field considers and ranks 198 eligibles in the primary zone. The letter of instructions says to choose 62 in this field. So, the top 62 are recommended for promotion. The same procedure is used for selection in the secondary zone where, for example, the letter of instructions said six could be recommended.

After the best qualified are selected, the projected MOS status is checked. If the MOS group is overstrength, the panel designates a promotion MOS in an understrength MOS but in the same career field as the PMOS. Should the panel be unable to make this decision, the record is referred to MILPERCEN for selection of the MOS into which the person will be promoted.

Once all career management fields have been considered, the names are typed of those recommended for promotion.

Unsatisfactory Performers Weighed Also

But the promotion board is not through. Now comes the search for unsatisfactory performers. Records are reviewed carefully of those soldiers who are not recommended for promotion. At the same time records of those in the zone but not eligible for promotion are reviewed also. The end result is a list of soldiers who, in the judgment of the board, should be recommended for a bar to reenlistment. This opinion is later provided the commanding officer of the EM concerned.

The board sends the promotion list and the unsatisfactory performers list recommendations to DCSPER for approval. The promotion list is provided also to the Army Personnel Security Office for appropriate review. All that's left is to publish and to dispatch the DA promotion circular.

And — to sew on the new stripes. (ANF)

Bob Hope schedules appearance at Auburn

The Interfraternity Council of Auburn University will present comedian Bob Hope in its annual Homecoming Show, Oct. 25. Hope will appear in the Auburn Memorial Coliseum at 8 p.m. on the Friday evening prior to the Homecoming clash between Auburn and Florida State. Tickets for the show are now available, and are priced at 5, 6 and 7 dollars.

The special friendship between Hope and the American GI is based on feelings of mutual respect and admiration, and has spanned some 33 years, millions of miles, and thousands of performances. Bob first performed for an audience of GI's at March Field, CA, on May 6, 1941. Since that date, he has entertained millions of American servicemen at bases in the U.S., the North Atlantic, the Caribbean, Europe, North Africa, the Pacific and Southeast Asia.

Hope's Christmas shows began in 1948 when he entertained the Berlin Air Lift Forces, and since then they have become a tradition. Less publicized, but even more indicative of Bob's close relationship with American GI's, are stories about the long walks he has taken through miles of hospital wards, shaking hands and cheering up drooping spirits. His classic call of "At ease men, don't get up" as he walks into an orthopedic ward has done wonders for broken bodies and sagging spirits.

For many of the men at Ft. Benning, the Auburn

Homecoming Show will provide an unique opportunity to renew an old friendship, while for others it will be a chance to meet Hope for the first time. Tickets for the Hope performance can be obtained either by mail order or from the Memorial Coliseum Box Office, Monday through Friday, from 1-5 p.m. All sales will be cash, money order, or cashier's check — no personal checks will be accepted. Make money orders and cashier's checks payable to the IFC, and enclose 50¢ with mail orders for postage and handling. Address all ticket inquiries to: Auburn Memorial Coliseum, Entertainment Office, P. O. Box 591, Auburn, AL, 36830.

Pioneers on lookout for Ranger recruits

Have you ever had the urge to amuse a whole patrol of students, utilizing smoke grenades, an M-16 rifle, and perhaps even a fifty caliber machine gun?

If this thought appeals to you, then you may be in luck — Co C (Airborne-Ranger), 1/29th Inf (Pioneers), TSB is looking for volunteers who wish to become Ranger qualified.

Engineers help clear the way for city parks

Soldiers of 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engrs, are currently clearing the way for the Double Churches Park located north of Columbus.

The overall objective of the project is to provide a service to the local community and give experience to the unit.

The park will consist of a football field, two baseball fields, tennis court, basketball court, swimming pool, rest room facilities and parking lot.

About 22,000 sq yards will be graded. The engineers will have an opportunity to exercise the training they have received in operating construction equipment.

The powerful D7 dozer, grader, 290 earth hauler are two of the pieces of equipment being used.

Mr. Hubert F. Stubb, Park and Recreational Director concluded, "The engineers are doing an excellent job. We are very pleased with their work. They are doing an exceptional job for us."

Hand-to-hand combat is only one of the many new skills one can learn by volunteering for Co C of the 1/29th Inf. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

"Riverside," the former plantation home of the late Arthur Bussey before being acquired by the Army in 1919, was formally dedicated a national historic place in ceremonies Sunday. Among many guests attending were three of Bussey's children (L-R), John, Mrs. Charles Woolfolk, and Mrs. Neill Bickerstaff. MG Thomas Tarpley, Ft. Benning Commander, is at right of the historic marker which was unveiled on the lawn of the Commandant's quarters. The marker also makes reference to former homes of Generals Marshall and Eisenhower.

'Ole Doc Says

Don't buy patent medicine if ingredients aren't listed

Howdy Bub, I pulled the night shift in the Emergency Room last night, an' 'Ole Doc ain't trackin' so good today, havin' the blind staggers an' the, I-think-I'm-gonna-fall-asleep-any-minute-now, fallout. I seen the usual crop of folks that don't know that they shoulda been treated durin' the day, but called it an emergency, so's they could get treated at night instead.

I seen Chester James Hardin who had his thumb hung up inna bowlin' ball, down at our three lane Bowlaroma. I seen Billy Bob Arnold with a black-eye, caused by Chet Jim when he found out it wuz Billy Bob who put a wad of bubble gum into the thumb hole of his ball. And, I seen Angus McClean with a big cut on his hand that he got when he wuz pickin' up the pieces of his smashed headlight that Chet Jim accidentally hit with his bowling ball in the Bowlaroma's parking lot, on the way here.

That's pretty much the way things went 'til 'bout five thirty in the mornin' when Cristine Sue Barnett came in with her nineteen month old daughter, Alma Louise. Seems that while her mama wuz fryin' up breakfast, Alma Louise got into a bottle of pills that had been left out, an' commenced to take what wuz left in the bottle.

When it wuz discovered that Alma Louise wuz walkin' round with that empty bottle, Cristine Sue came right onto the Emergency Room to get her youngun' treated. Fortunately, Alma Louise wuz still playin' with the empty bottle when they came into the hospital, an' we thought that we wouldn't have no trouble startin' the proper treatment.

Howsomever, the label on the bottle had lots of directions, but no list of the ingredients wuz to be found anywhere. We called the Poison Control folks, an' they had never heard of the product, much less knew what wuz in it. We then called the National Poison Control Center, but they didn't have any information for us either, 'cept that maybe somebody made the medicine up in they's bathtub, an' didn't want the secret of what it contained let out to a competitor.

As a last resort, I ast Cristine Sue where she had bought the pills, an' she told me that she had got them at Caldwell's Drugs, Notions & Sundries Shop, across town. I called John Caldwell up and 'tole him to get down to his store-an' try and find out what wuz in this here medicine that this little girl had taken. John called back in 'bout fifteen minutes an' 'tole me there wuz some aspirin, soda bicarbonate, an' some dyed inert power in it.

an' some dyed inert powder in it.

So, then we were able to go ahead an' treat Alma Louise, 'thout no more problems. It wuz jes a good thing that ther wasn't something harmful in that medicine, or we coulda had us a sick youngun in a very short time.

Let that be a lesson to you, Bub, don't buy no patent medicine, 'lessen the ingredients are listed on the label. I know that you been keepin' yore hair retorin' an' bunion eradicator pills on the top shelf, but maybe one of yore little people will be able to figger out a way to get at 'em, so make sure that all of the labels have the type of information we medicos need to take care of anybody that might git into them when you ain't lookin'.

Good Health to you and yours . . .

7th Inf colors will fly

It will be an historic occasion on the Monterey Peninsula when the colors of the 7th Inf Div are unfurled after an absence of more than 30 years.

The date and time for the public activation of the HQ 1st Bde and Spt Cnd of the 7th Div is Oct. 26 at 10:30 a.m. The ceremony will include a formal review and a public reception at Stilwell Hall, the former Soldiers Club which was built under the leadership of GEN Joseph "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell and it was from here that the division went on to more than 30 years of service in the Far East. The 7th left the active Army rolls in Korea in 1971.

Invitations to the ceremony have been sent to as many former 7th soldiers for whom addresses are available, but obviously, an untold number have not been identified. Accordingly, the Commanding General has issued a blanket invitation to all former 7th Div soldiers to attend the activation ceremonies at Ft. Ord on Oct. 26.

Fest set for Officers' Club

The Ft. Benning Officers' Club will hold an October Fest on the Main Club Patio from 6 to 12 p.m. Oct. 16.

The event will feature German beer and a variety of German foods. Sausages, or Wurst as they are called in Germany, ordered from Milwaukee, will be cooked the German way, roasted over an open grill.

Those attending the fest can dance and sing to the musical entertainment provided by the Bavarian Festival Show Band. Members of the Officers' Club hosting the Fest will be dressed in festive attire. Guests attending the festival are encouraged to wear German costumes.

Tickets may be obtained at the Officers' Club Catering Office during normal working hours at $5 per person. For more information call CPT Jeff Troxell at 682-0640.

Hq & Spt Co still looking for a victory

By Rick Wasser

Hq & Spt Co, 1/29th Inf, TSB is still looking for their first real victory in the Pioneer league. This week's 18-6 loss to Co A was their sixth in a row, save a forfeit victory over the Rangers.

Sandy MacPherson, Co A, 1/29th Inf, pulls in a touchdown pass thrown to him by Charles Ledbetter. Co A defeated Hq & Spt Co of the Pioneers, by a score of 18-6. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Co A wasted no time in showing the clerks just how they would dominate this game. On their first set of downs, Charles Ledbetter started moving — he rushed for six, then nine yards, and then hit Sandy MacPherson with a 42-yard pass.

With first and goal to go, it was Ledbetter to MacPherson once again, this time for the touchdown. Tim LeBey dropped a Ledbetter pass in the extra point attempt.

Hq & Spt Co took possession on their own 40-yard line. Quarterback Donald Freeman tried two running plays and lost yardage on both. An unsuccessful pass attempt and two penalties later, Co A had had the ball again.

Alpha's Greg Collins ran the ball for several plays and about 12 yards total, but the clerk's defense was looking good and they held them back this time.

Headquarters took over once again, on their own 20-yard line, and Freeman was promptly nailed just behind it, before he could get his pass off.

On the second down, he launched a 65-yard bomb right into the hands of Ron White who was waiting in the end zone — but White dropped the ball. Perhaps feeling he was all alone on his team, Freeman ran the next play — with no help — for some 38-yards around the right end.

Then it was Freeman up the middle for the first down, and lo and behold, the clerks found themselves only 10-yards away from a score. But they were 10 long yards, for the Headquarters team couldn't get the TD before the first half whistle blew.

Co A took a six point advantage into the second half, but the way Ledbetter was scrambling around the gridiron, one would have thought he was losing by a considerable margin.

After two successful pass completions, the Alpha Co offense was dropped back to the thirty on penalties. On a third down play, Geoff Ellerson and the Hq & Spt rushing line were in hot pursuit of Ledbetter, behind the line of scrimmage.

But at the last minute, the wily quarterback leaped high into the air and got off an uncertain, if not erratic, pass to the end zone. Greg Collins dove to his right and came up with the Alpha's second score of the game. They missed the extra point, but held a commanding 12-0 lead.

The clerks took over the offensive position and Freeman lost yardage on his first two plays, as is par for the Headquarters course.

But on the third down play, Roy Pittman outmaneuvered two Co A defensive ends, and pulled in a Freeman bomb for the clerks first touchdown. Ron White dropped what would have been the extra point.

Apparently startled by one of Hq & Spt Co's rare touchdowns, the Alpha Co offense couldn't muster so much as a first down, and the clerks took over again, this time on their 20-yard line.

On the first down play, Freeman gave White his third chance to catch a pass — a 65-yard bomb down the right side — but once again he missed the ball.

A disgruntled Freeman handled the next play alone, and run it for 15-yards around the left end. He should have kept running, for on the next play he threw . . . and Co A's Tim DeBey intercepted.

Ledbetter connected with MacPherson for 10-yards and then threw it out of bounds trying to hit Greg Collins.

But on the third down, the Ledbetter-MacPherson combination was good for 26-yards and the TD. Co A missed the point again, but it mattered not. Thirty seconds later, they walked off the field with an 18-6 victory and a firm hold on first place in the Pioneer league.

Verbal challenges lead to payday run

By Lamar Battles

It all started at last month's physical fitness test. One cannoneer of the 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde, said to another, "I can out-run you any day of the week!"

One thing led to another and before you knew it, challenges were exchanged and the inevitable showdown was scheduled.

Monday, Sept. 30, was the day and Essebagger Field was the place. It was payday and the entire 2/10th turned out to watch the best from each battery compete in the strenuous two-mile run that would settle, once and for all, the question of who was number one.

Three determined competitors from each battery lined up at the starting line, anxiously anticipating

US marksmen lose by narrow margin

United States and Soviet Union marksmen collided in the 41st World Shooting Championships at Thun, Switzerland, Sept. 20-28, to decide the world's best shooters in rifle, pistol, shotgun and running target events.

The Soviet Union out medaled the U.S. Team by a narrow margin of one medal in the total count which ended up as follows in the week long competitions: USSR - 23 Gold, 11 Silver, 8 Bronze, total 42; USA - 15 Gold, 15 Silver, 11 Bronze, total 41.

In three previous World Championship meetings, the two teams have completely dominated the rest of the world in shooting with total number of victories see-sawing back and forth between them since 1962.

The high points in this year's World Championships were in the rifle events where six new world records were set, along with the total U.S. Gold count of 15 falling to the American Rifle Squad. Standout performances were recorded by Olympic greats, CPT Lanny Bassham, Ft. Worth, TX, MAJ Lones Wigger, Carter, MT, and MAJ John Foster, Phoenix, AZ, all of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, along with Army Reserve Captains John Writer, Margret Murdock, David Cramer and SP5 David Kimes.

It was a tough race that demanded every ounce of strength each man could muster. But in the end, a tall, lean former South Carolina State track champion won out.

PVT Nathaniel Daniels, a cannoneer in Btry C and 197th Inf Bde Unit-of-Choice volunteer, outdistanced his fellow runners to bring top honors for the event to his battery.

"I like to run and I've done a lot of running here to stay in shape," commented PVT Daniels following the race. In addition to being the 1973 South Carolina State Champion in the two-mile run, PVT Daniels also played football and basketball in high school.

PVT Daniels was followed closely by PFC Ray Murray, also of Btry C, who began long distance running in basic training. PVT Herbert Wells of Btry B took third place honors while 2LT Steven Church placed fourth for HHB.

LTC Robert H. Allison, battalion commander, officiated the event and recognized each of the participants following the run, but it wasn't over. Apparently, the question of who was the best long distance man was settled, but what about the top sprinter?

As an added attraction a 100 yard dash was hastily organized and the best of each battery was again assembled along with any other competitors who wanted to give it a try.

HHB took the honors this time as PVT Harold Odumes, a cannoneer and Unit-of-Choice volunteer, smoked all opposition and posted a phenomenal 11.5 seconds time.

In at 12.2 seconds to take second place was PVT Herbert Wells, who had just finished third in the two-mile run. Third place was captured by Btry C's PVT Johnny Dirden with a 12.8 second performance.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

Sight-in range open to anyone

By BILL KLOEB

A weapons sight-in, field dog trials and a deer contest were the main items on the agenda for the Rod and Gun Club Advisory Board during a meeting held at Victory Lodge last week.

The annual sight-in for weapons will be held at Brinson Range Oct. 19 and 20. The range will operate from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on the 19th and from noon until 4 p.m. on the 20th.

The sight-in range may be used by anyone who wants to test fire a weapon he plans to use for hunting. It doesn't make any difference what type gun you have. Bring it out and find out how it shoots. Shot guns with slugs or buckshot are the only weapons authorized for hunting deer on the reservation, but hunters who intend to use rifles or even muzzle-loaders off the reservation are welcome. You don't have to be a member of the Rod and Gun Club to use the range. The club is sponsoring this event as a public service to any hunter in the area. Each year many deer are wounded, escape from the hunter and die. The weapons sight-in will help reduce the number that are wounded because the hunter was not familiar with his gun.

Brinson Range is located on Jamestown Road. Those coming from Columbus, turn off Highway 27 at the second bridge over Highway 27; turn right onto Eighth Division Road; go East on Eighth Division Road to Jamestown Road; turn left onto Jamestown Road; follow this road to the Brinson Range sign.

The club will hold a turkey shoot in conjunction with the sight-in. Contestants must provide shotguns. The club will supply the ammunition. Frozen turkeys will be awarded to winners.

Volunteers are needed to help with the operation of the sight-in range or with the turkey shoot. Anyone interested should contact Frank Zenko, club manager, at 687-0562.

Big Dog Trials

The Rod and Gun Club will hold bird dog trials on the Alabama side of the reservation No. 1, 2 and 3.

Friday, Nov. 1 is for the professional bird dog handler. The Open Derby and Open Shooting Dog Events will be held. During the field trials last spring the club had handlers and dogs from as far away as Texas come for the competition and it is expected that these events will be even more popular this fall.

Saturday is the day for amateurs. These handlers and dogs don't compete for the money but for the fun of the sport. Quite a few of these handlers and dogs are as proficient as the professionals.

Sunday is the day for the average bird dog owner. He can run his dogs against local competition. The walking bird hunting stakes and the mounted bird hunting stakes will be held. There will be trophies for each event, and the handler who has the best overall dog will get his name on the Commanding General's Trophy.

Bird dog trials offer a spectator a thrill not found in many sports. It's difficult to describe, but the mingling of horses, dogs and people establish an atmosphere not found at other sports events.

Come out one of the days and see for yourself. The club will set up a refreshment stand to serve lunch and cold and hot drinks. Everyone is welcome.

For more information call Mike Brickner, 545-2164.

Big Deer Contest

There will be a big deer contest again this year. Only members of the Rod and Gun Club are eligible for this event. All of the details were not settled at the meeting, but it was decided that three automatic shotguns will be given as prizes, one for the heaviest deer, one for the deer with the most antler points, and the third to be awarded to some member who enters the contest but does not win one of the other prizes.

Knights blast Dolphins

The Bidy League Redskins tamed the Lions Saturday. The Redskins scored early in the first quarter and continued to dominate throughout the game. The Lions did not score until the third quarter when the Lion's quarterback Chris Stephens ran for the touchdown and extra point. The score was 40-16 at the whistle with the Redskins emerging victorious.

In other Bidy League action, the Dolphins swam over the Razorbacks, 26-14.

The Buffalo Bills rammed the Rams 38-0 in Pee Wee League action and the Vikings outscored the Dolphins 30-0.

The Pee Wee League Razorbacks exploded for 4 touchdowns in the first half to trounce the Raiders 40-6. The Razorbacks scored on every possession in the first half. The Raiders scored their lone touchdown in the third quarter.

The Doughboy League Razorbacks ran over the Raiders 32-0 and the Knights blasted the Dolphins with a score of 48-0.

The Steelers stole the Jets 22-6 in Pony League action while the Wolverines upended the Rams 48-0.

The 598th demonstrated their powerful offensive early in the first half. Quarterback SP4 Jessie Simms tossed a 30 yard pass to wide receiver SP4 Bobby Windhelm for the first score in the game. The unpredictable 598th offensive kept Co B, 43rd Engrs puzzled throughout the first half.

Co B had numerous opportunities to score, but the solid 598th defense led by SP4 Eddie Short and PVT Erran Davenport made the efforts futile.

The second half was sparked by the brilliant running of Co B quarterback, SP4 Melvin Wilson. The versatile quarterback kept the 598th offense humming throughout the second half.

But the 598th defense maintained their poise and kept everything under control.

Just as expected, a 60 yard pass to wide receiver SP4 Windhelm made the score 12-0. The point was made, making the score 13-0 final.

With little fan fare, but plenty of tough playing, the 197th Inf Bde "Forever Forward" football season went into its closing minutes last week.

Red leg

Lucius Carter Jr. of Btry A moved his team to a 12-0 victory over Btry B to clinch first place in the 2/10th FA play off.

Running a quarterback option for their first TD, Carter demonstrated why the team if 7 and 1 for the season. To add insult to injury, Carter came back and threw a short pass over the middle to Leroy M. Samuel for six more points and a shut-out of Btry B. "We have it all together for the brigade play off," stated Sethlo Hammon of Btry A. HHB zinged their way into second place with a 6 and 2 record. The last game of the season for HHB saw brother pitted against brother as they played C Btry.

The game was rough and tumble scrimmage all the way. The first half saw Otis Odom of Btry C lead his team to a 6-0 edge. The tables turned in the second half as Otis' brother Harold Odom fired up his teammates by making a 65 yard run for a TD.

Capping off the score for the win, Harold passed a bomb of 45 yards to Eugene "Flea" Timmons for six points, then on a quarterback option scored the extra point, defeating Btry C, 13 to 6.

Cottonbaler

All teams in the 3/7th Inf went idle last week. The final game scheduled is to be played shortly. Hq Co forfeited to second place Cbt Spt Co. The showdown and most exciting game is yet to be played. First place Co C will be playing Cbt Spt Co.

Ever Ready

The final blows were struck last week as the 197th Spt Bn closed out their season. "The Truckers" of Co C rolled over the "Super Medics" of Co B to capture second place 19-14.

The "Paper Tigers" of Co A moved into first place after dropping two in a row, when HHD forfeited their last game. Co A finished their season with a 6 and 2 record.

Independent

The 298th Sig Plt deflated the tires on the heavy equipment of the Third King Cavalry and to give a shock to 197th Bde HHC to capture first place in their league.

The "Six Thousand Dollar Man," Carl Dowdy led the way to the 19 to 6 victory over HHC.

"Dowdy is our double threat man, he's a good receiver and, when running, is always good for a first down," commented Glenn A. Smith, coach for the 298th Sig Plt. "We're the team to beat if anyone wants to go to the post play off."

The 298th Sig Plt ended their season with a perfect record of 8 wins to zero losses.

Patriots

The 1/58th Inf, with two games remaining to be played, has HHC in first place and Co C in second.

Co C went down to defeat last week to HHC, 6 to 0. "We would have made it a more decisive score, but the referees called back three of our TDs. Freddy 'The Streak' Cox was our best man. He scored the touchdown on a trap play up the middle," stated Eugene Russell of HHC. "We're going all the way to post."

The victims of the game with HHC still had their hopes up as they placed second in the league. "We will be at the brigade play off," commented Michael R. Bailey of Co C.

"All we're hoping for is a crack at "The Paper Tigers" of Co A, Spt Bn. We would like to put a few tears in their hides, and even give them a little taste of what the Infantry is like," concluded Bailey.

Pioneer PT test proves preparedness

The early morning frost still held closely to the grass on expansive Dickman Field when more than one thousand Pioneers from the 1/29th Inf, TSB gathered there last week to prove their preparedness on the Army Physical Fitness Evaluation. (APFE).

With their spirits slightly daunted by the frosty cold ground and snapping chilly air, the men plunged into the five-part test determined and hopeful of high scores.

Minimum standards established by Department of the Army (DA) call for each examinee to score at least 60 points on each event, with a minimum total score of 300 points.

It has been traditional in the 1/29th, however, for participants to attempt to score at least 400 points on the APFE.

The five events, including bent-leg sit ups, push-ups, run, dodge, and jump, horizontal ladder, and mile run, require a maximum output of energy. Each part of the test strains a particular set of muscles acutely, and each compels the person being tested to think carefully of the actions necessary for completion of each event.

The APFE amounted to a culmination of months of daily physical training — an integral part of the schedule for men in the Pioneer battalion — paced into those five events.

When the results were posted, the participants realized their efforts had been effective. The average score for the men in the 1/29th was well over the necessary 300.

Mullins is new lady golf champ

Bev Mullins fired a 261 total in 54 holes of play to defeat defending champion Lois Sutton and 28 other players in the Ft. Benning Ladies Golf Championship.

The contest began Sept. 26 and after two days of play, was postponed due to inclement weather. Play resumed Oct. 1, with Mrs. Mullins winning.

Other medalists were: Lois Sutton, second; Sequel Wood, third; and Helen Carroll, fourth.

197th prepares for Ft. Stewart FTX

By BOB COWLES

All command elements of the 197th Inf Bde, and two observers from the 82nd Abn Div, participated in a Command Post Exercise (CPX) here, named "Label Cleaver," Oct. 7-10, in preparation for the brigade's upcoming Field Training Exercise (FTX). It is also dubbed "Label Cleaver," to be conducted at Ft. Stewart, GA, Nov. 11-27.

The purposes of the CPX were to test communications procedures as they will be applied to command and control of "FTX Label Cleaver," and to provide training in the planning of tactical operations.

Planning of tactical operations included employment of troops, the use of available fire support agencies, electronic warfare operations to counter a sophisticated electronics warfare threat, use of tactical communications system, and collection, reporting, evaluating and disseminating tactical intelligence.

According to COL Joseph E. Wasiak, commander of the "Forever Forward" brigade, "The CPX was a controlled free play exercise encompassing all aspects of 'FTX Label Cleaver.' Limited modifications of 'FTX Label Cleaver' were incorporated in order to condense the time required for the Ft. Stewart exercise into a three and one-half day CPX."

The brigade will commence unit air and vehicle convoy movement to Ft. Stewart, Nov. 11 with the last brigade element arriving Nov. 15. All units are scheduled to return to Ft. Benning by Nov. 27.

"FTX Label Cleaver" will be a training exercise consisting of a five day "battle" between the 197th Inf Bde and a battalion of 82nd Abn Div from Ft. Bragg, N.C.

The FTX scenario is based around a struggle for territorial control between a small, third world country called Rowanda, and Karlobo, a country with a large, powerful Army (82nd Abn), trained and equipped by Aggressorland.

The 197th Inf Bde is alerted and landed at the Port of Savannah to provide security for the evacuation of U. S. citizens from Rowanda.

Immediately upon U.S. intervention, Karlobo Armed Forces (KAF), assisted by Aggressor Forces, move into Rowanda. From this point the tactical situation for 'FTX Label Cleaver' is developed.

On the first day of the tactical portion of the exercise, Nov. 18, the airborne battalion will parachute into the Taylor's Creek area of Ft. Stewart and both sides, the 197th Inf Bde and the 82nd Abn Div unit, will begin deploying into defensive positions and conducting patrols.

Throughout the next four days of the exercise the "Forever Forward" brigade and the airborne unit will "clash" in various offensive and defensive operations.

Professors visit Benning

Twenty-five professors and deans from Auburn University visited Ft. Benning Oct. 16 to observe education innovations initiated at the Infantry School.

The group was briefed by Col Billy E. Rutherford, Director of Educational Technology, concerning the individual learning center, training aids support and other educational facilities at Ft. Benning at Eubanks Field, and "Rangers in Action" at Victory Pond.

COL Aubrey G. Norris, the Professor of Military Science at Auburn, coordinated the visit to Ft. Benning. COL Norris was the commander of TSB from 1971 - 1973. He served on the USA Infantry Board as the Chief, Materiel Test Division before going to Auburn University.

In Lumpkin

November spells excitement

November brings great excitement and many visitors to the town of Lumpkin, located on U.S. 27 in Southwest Georgia. Westville's Fair of 1850, the Bazaar at Beddingfield Inn and the Flea Market on Lumpkin's Courthouse square are events, which take place simultaneously each year.

The Bazaar and Flea Market, sponsored by the Stewart County Historical Commission, will be held on Friday, Nov. 1 and Saturday, Nov. 2 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. The Bazaar features delicious baked and canned foods as well as a variety of unique and attractive handmade items. A guided tour of the historic Beddingfield Inn, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, is also available. The Flea Market provides a literal treasure hunt for those looking for interesting and unusual items. Spaces are rented to people throughout the area who bring their wares to sell.

Westville, with its more than twenty authentic 1850 buildings located on 58 acres of rolling countryside, provides a perfect setting for the annual "Fair of 1850," which takes place November 1-10. Hours are from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily and 1-5 p.m. on Sundays. Westville is located 1/2 mile from Lumpkin's town square.

At Westville, special activities which will be demonstrated periodically during the ten day period include: cane grinding, syrup making, candlemaking and soap making. The usual activities, which take place regularly in the buildings of the recreated 1850 village, will also be shown. These include: spinning, quilting, cloth weaving, pottery making, basket making, fireplace cooking and blacksmithing.

There's always something new to see in this constantly growing village. Several buildings have been completed and furnished recently and other buildings have been brought in and restoration started. For further information, write: Westville, Post Office Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga., 31815.

3/7th tests effectiveness of the LAW

By BOB COWLES

Members of Co B, 3/7th 197th Inf Bde took part in a weapons test conducted by the United States Army Infantry Board for the United States Army Infantry School, last week.

The test, titled "Customer Test of Field Target Hit Probability of the M72A2, Light Anti-tank Weapon (LAW)", was to determine the effectiveness of the LAW, a 66-mm, high explosive rocket, when fired in an operational environment at targets and ranges as specified in the test directive.

According to 2LT David R. New, executive officer of Co B, and platoon leader for the test, "Our objective in the test was to determine the hit probability of the LAW and to determine if improvements in training will increase the hit probability."

Blank ammunition and artillery simulators were used to simulate realism while the men of Co B went through each of the four test phases including: defense, attack, hunter/killer and raid operations.

Each phase took one day to complete, with the first day devoted to individual techniques of firing the LAW. The 'defense' portion of the test consisted of firing from foxhole-supported positions at stationary, pop-up and moving targets.

SGT Troy McAnnally, Co B, 3/7th Inf (Cottonballers), takes aim with the M72A2, Light Anti-Tank Weapon (LAW) as he participates in a test to determine the field target hit probability of the weapon. (Photo by W. R. Cage, Jr.)

During the third day the 'attack' portion was tested, in which the men of Co B advanced on their targets, firing from various positions.

Going into enemy territory and hunting down and killing enemy tanks took place during the fourth day with the 'hunter/killer' aspect being used.

Destroy and retreat was the name of the game as the training was concluded with the 'raid' phase of the test. "The maximum effective range of the LAW is 200 meters," concluded LT New. "But as you get better gunners through training, I believe the maximum effective range will increase."

School physical period extended for dependents

In coordination with the Superintendents of the local school districts, a final make-up physical examination period has been established for on-post and off-post dependents, kindergarten through 15 years of age, who failed to obtain a physical prior to entry in school.

Dependents 16 years of age or older may obtain physicals by calling the Medical Examination Service, telephone 545-5502.

The following dates and times have been established for the final make-up physicals:

On-post schools, Nov. 14 — children with last names beginning with A through G, 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.; H through N, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.; and O through Z, 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Off post schools, Nov. 21—children with last names beginning with A through G, 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.; H through N, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.; and O through Z, 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Physical examinations are required for students entering a school district within the State of Georgia or Alabama for the first time. Parents who are not sure if their child requires a physical should call the school nurse of the appropriate school.

Children requiring glasses for corrective vision who attend off-post schools are requested to bring their glasses with them on the date of their scheduled examination.

A urine specimen for each child is to be collected at home prior to reporting for examination.

Specimens are to be collected in glass or plastic containers. Containers are available in Medical Examination Service, Building 323, Martin Army Hospital Annex or Satellite Lab, Building 392, also in the Annex.

Identification and medical cards will be required on the day of scheduled examination; however, medical records will not.

These physical examinations will be conducted in the Medical Examination Service, Martin Army Hospital Annex, Building 323. Personnel should enter from the front entrance of Building 392. Further information may be obtained by calling telephone numbers 545-3514 or 545-5502.

Suspension Program includes tour of Benning

By C. B. HOOVER

"Does education help make for a better life style? Does it help you get the job you want?" These were some of the topics of discussion when six students, participating in the Columbus Metro Urban League Suspension Program, visited the 197th Inf Bde last week.

One of the program's goals is to encourage students who have been suspended from school to return and remain in school. Incorporated into the program is a tour of Ft. Benning.

The tour is conducted on Tuesdays and Wednesdays of each week. The Tuesday portion of the tour is a visit to a major unit, which is rotated between the 197th Inf Bde and the 36th Engr Grp. Coordination of the tours between the Urban League and the units is done by the Race Coordinating Office, USAIC.

"No two tours in the brigade are the same," commented SSG Freddie J. Owens, of the 197th Inf Bde race relations office. "The students receive a briefing on the advantages of remaining in school. Then they visit different areas in the brigade. Afterwards there is a question and answer session with them. Other times the students are introduced to junior enlisted personnel in the units where they discuss the advantages of education. On another occasion they may attend a race relations orientation class."

On Wednesdays there is a tour of the U.S. Army Infantry School's learning center where students are shown the latest training devices. They are also encouraged to participate in studies which could enhance their learning abilities.

"When students visit the installation we want to impress upon them the need for a high school education," commented MAJ Lawrence Hurst, chief of the Race Coordinating Office, USAIC. "The Army will enlist a few non-high school graduates, but if you want to advance you should have as much education as possible."

Local AUSA chapter receives award at convention

The Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), for the second consecutive year has been awarded the General Lyman Lennitzer Award as the chapter most active in telling the Army story.

The award, presented Monday during opening ceremonies at the national AUSA annual meeting in Washington, D. C., was one of nine citations the chapter received from the worldwide organization.

"We are exceptionally proud to have won the Lennitzer award again," local chapter president Joe Windsor said following the presentation. "After all, telling the Army story is what AUSA is all about."

The local chapter, represented at the annual meeting by approximately 50 military and civilian members, also picked up five runner-up and three honorable mention awards for activities during the past year.

In the runner-up category, the chapter received the Lieutenant General Milton G. Baker Award for Largest Overall Membership; the General John E. Hull Award for Greatest Membership Input; the Lieutenant General Walter L. Weible Award for Best Overall Chapter Meetings; the John Szlach Award for the Chapter with the Best Overall Projects of the Year; and the Council of Trustees

Award for Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives.

In the honorable mention category the chapter was cited for Greatest Civilian Membership Input (other than active duty), Best Single Chapter Meeting and Best Overall Chapter.

CSM Theodor Gergen, Ft. Benning sergeant major, accepted the awards from LTG (Ret.) Charlie Dodge, executive vice president of the association. Howard (Bo) Callaway, Secretary of the Army, and Jim Woodruff, Jr., National AUSA president, both members of the local chapter, were principle speakers at the opening session.

The local chapter was recognized again during the second session of the convention Tuesday when the Apocalypse, a group of young singers from the Evangel Temple Assemblies of God Church in Columbus, Ga, performed to a standing ovation.

The group traveled to the convention under the sponsorship of the local chapter. Funds to cover expenses were raised by a committee headed by Louis Kunze, a former local chapter president.

Rape-Crisis workshop scheduled

There will be a Rape-Crisis Workshop at Columbus College's Turner Center, Oct. 24. The purpose of the workshop is to provide professional training on the subject.

Registration is $5, which includes lunch, and will begin at 8 a.m. Chief Curtis McClellan will speak on the "Nature and Extent of the Problem." Jeanne Cahill will present the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women Study Results in Georgia. A representative from the Georgia Crime Commission will present the Psychological Aspects and Crisis Intervention Counseling.

After a short break, Mary Keefe, commanding officer, Sex Crimes Analysis Unit of the New York City Police Department, will present the police aspects of rape. She will be followed by Dr. Micki Souma, chief of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Columbus Medical Center.

Following lunch, the legal, psychological and sociological aspects of rape will be discussed. This will be followed by two workshops in which intensive counseling and attitudinal procedures, latest police procedures and discussions of medical protocol will take place. They will end by 4:30 p.m.

The workshop will be co-sponsored by the Columbus Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, the Columbus Community Relations Commission and the Columbus-Ft. Benning National Organization of Women.

For more information call 568-2183.

Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway has announced the Army will discharge its remaining draftees before Thanksgiving.

The Army's success in recruiting a volunteer force makes it possible to discharge the approximately 2,500 draftees prior to their normal completion of service. Draftees who volunteer to remain in the Army until completion of their normal tour of service will be allowed to do so.

With the last draft call in December 1972, the Army had 96,000 draftees in its ranks. The peak draftee strength of 553,700 was in 1967.

On June 30, 1974, the Army met a recruiting milestone on the way to an all-volunteer Army by exceeding its authorized (FY 74) strength of 781,000. Between January 1, 1973 and September 30, 1974 about 337,700 volunteers have entered the Army. (ANE)

Army offers early release of draftees

Medics get ready for 197th FTX

By Bob Cowles

Medical specialists of Co B, 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde are receiving intensive training on various sick-call procedures in preparation for the brigade's upcoming Field Training Exercise (FTX) at Ft. Stewart GA, Nov. 11-27.

During the FTX, a field hospital will be set up to handle the medical needs of the "Forever Forward" soldiers. Medics from Co B will be working at the field hospital under the supervision of WO1 JoAnn E. Nick, the OIC and Physician Assistant of Troop Medical Clinic (TMC) Three on Kelley Hill.

Ms. Nick has been training the medics at TMC 3 in screening sick-call patients, giving basic treatment, and basic laboratory and pharmacy procedures.

The medics have been participating in practical exercises, assisting Ms. Nick in treating patients at the clinic during the mornings, and attending classes each afternoon.

"During the FTX at Fort Stewart," explained Ms. Nick, a 12-year Army Veteran in the medical field, "I'll be depending very heavily on the medics help in the hospital and those at the battalion aid stations."

Ms. Nick intends to continue training the medics for the rest of this month and, if possible, up until time the brigade departs for Ft. Stewart.

"The quality of the medical aspects of this field exercise depends on how qualified the medics are," continued Ms. Nick.

Each patient will be screened during the FTX at the individual battalions. If need be, the patient will then be sent to the field hospital.

At the field hospital, the patient will be treated by either a medic or Ms. Nick. The more seriously injured or sick will be sent to the post hospital at Ft. Stewart.

"The medics will be the first line of service on medical treatment to unit commanders," added Ms. Nick.

This will be the first time that Ms. Nick will handle a task of this magnitude. "I'm not sure exactly how the hospital will be set up. I did observe the medical set-up during the brigade's Operational Readiness Training Test, so I have an idea of how things will be run."

Not only will this training be valuable for the upcoming FTX, but it will also be useful in garrison sick-call. "This training will help us to render better assistance in the field and in garrison," stated Ms. Nick.

Ms. Nick concluded "The FTX will demonstrate to the unit commanders the value of their medics and show the medics they have a very important job to do."

Ask about our Famous Omaha Steaks Fit For a King!

By Paul Rieck

LTC W. H. FRANKLIN
XO, 36th Eng Gp

The coed setup is definitely the system of the future. As we get more and more women into the service, it seems the only way the Army can fulfill its obligation under the equal opportunity employment laws. I believe the only objection to this program is that we haven't given it a fair chance as of yet.

SP5 Howard Leathers
Co C, 43rd Eng

I think it's outstanding! If women are going to be in the war with us, they should live like us too. Besides, it would probably help the men take more pride in themselves, their appearance, and the way they live.

The Army is currently conducting experiments with coed barracks. How do you feel about this program?

SP4 John Wayt
1/29 Inf

I really don't think it would be much different as far as the barracks go. It would probably help a lot of people understand each other, though. Right now, there's a hell of a hassle; a lot of the guys can't understand why women are taking over their jobs. Maybe being in the same building would let each side learn more about the other and smooth things out a little.

CPT Steve Stanelle
121st Av

I really don't think we need women in the Army, but as long as they're here, why not.

SP4 Mike Mullis
139th MP Co

I don't think it will work. Most of the GI's living in the barracks are young and just out of high school. I went through four years of college, and feel it might work in that environment. The barracks would probably get pretty well out of hand unless they were closely monitored.

PFC Pat Skomick
Co A, HQ Cmd

I think it's kind of neat, but I don't know how well it would work out. It would be great to be able to associate with the opposite sex. It would be more like living in an apartment house than a barracks.

PV2 Larry Purdue
546th MED Co

I lived in a coed dorm in college, and things worked out there. It makes for good human relations. Besides, WACS should be allowed to live where they work, just like the men. They sometimes have a big hassle getting clear across post to their barracks, and that's not fair to them.

SSG Rita Holmes WAC Co

The system will work, just like it's doing at Ft. McClellan. It's the same as many college dorms you find on the outside. If we're going to have an equal volunteer Army, not only between men and women, but considering conditions and standards on the outside, it has to be. We have to remember that our volunteers are coming from the outside, and if they're not happy they won't stay.

AAFES campaigns to save the soldier's money

"The effectiveness of the inflation fighting programs has underscored the value of the exchange privilege as a military benefit during these uncertain times."

That statement was made by MG C. W. Hospelhorn, commander of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), currently in the midst of a campaign to stretch the buying power of soldiers, airmen and their families in this era of rising prices. The general was emphatic in making the point that today, perhaps as never before, the Exchange Service plays a vital role in making the military life attractive.

"It is very easy to overlook the bright spots in the dismal economic picture," he conceded, "but AAFES is making definite progress toward obtaining quality merchandise and services at a price the serviceman and woman can afford to pay."

"Take the 'Money Saver' program. When that program was introduced last year, many said it was too good to be true. They didn't believe the exchange could offer quality merchandise at a savings above and beyond that normally offered by AAFES."

Today, hundreds of items are identified by the yellow and brown piggy bank symbol of the Money Saver. Clothing, appliances, dinnerware, luggage — lower priced merchandise of tested quality is available in every department of every exchange. MG Hospelhorn disclosed that everywhere he goes, people voice their approval of the Money

Saver program. "I've also received many letters from senior commanders and junior enlisted personnel alike praising the program," he added.

"Money Savers really have made the difference to families of lower income," the general continued. "Take children's wear for example. Every parent knows how kids can outgrow clothing in no time. AAFES has concentrated on finding items of real value for that category. AAFES has done the same for other merchandise that fills the needs of everyday use."

Always on the lookout for ways to increase the scope of the program, the general recently announced that Money Savers were being expanded to include cafeteria specials. AAFES also is studying ways to add personal services into the program.

Another budget-stretcher is the "Extra Dividends" program which passes along an added savings for merchandise obtained through special purchases and one-time buys. These specials vary from store to store and appear for limited periods only, but all main exchanges have a wide selection of Extra Dividends at all times.

"Extra Dividends cover a wide range from health and beauty items through tools, bicycles and recreation items. Since these specials frequently change, our shoppers have been watching for each new Extra Dividend. They've come to know they'll be getting vitamins, shampoo, cosmetics, products they need and use every day. The brands and names customers recognize and respect — and at prices well below what they normally would pay."

The general then covered a program that ranks among the best as an inflation-fighting measure. "How many times have you heard the comment that clothes are too expensive even when on sale or part of a special program? Well, after studying several possible remedies for that situation, we discovered that statistics show clothing expenses can be reduced as much as 50 per cent by people who make and alter their own clothing."

"A program was developed that provides a complete range of sewing machines, patterns, yard goods, notions and accessories for sale in a sewing center concept. All larger exchanges have these centers and the response simply has been tremendous," he smiled.

"I think the success of the over 200 AAFES sewing centers proves the military wife is really budget-conscious," the general observed. "Many of these young wives have learned to sew because of the program and have become very proficient at it. They know a good thing when they see it and they're not about to miss the chance to cut living expenses and develop a skill that will serve their families for years to come," he said.

"It all boils down to this," MG Hospelhorn concluded. "AAFES still stands as the customer's best choice for value and quality at the lowest possible prices. As a military benefit, the exchange must be considered second to none."

'Big Leroy' makes big recoveries

By Bob Thomas

When vehicle drivers in the 197th Inf Bde find themselves disabled or bogged down in the field they have SGT William Bennett, "Big Leroy" and the remainder of the 197th Spt Bn Recovery Section to come to their aid.

SGT William Bennett, 197th Spt Bn Recovery Section NCO, rests for a moment in the drivers compartment of "Big Leroy", the team's M-88 Track Recovery Vehicle. SGT Bennett and his six-man team are ready for any type of recovery operation. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

SGT Bennett is the recovery section NCO and "Big Leroy" is the unit's M-88 Track Recovery Vehicle, the largest, heaviest and most powerful recovery vehicle used by the team in answering recovery calls. The six-man recovery section also uses a five-ton wrecker, crane and two 10-ton low-boys, which are tractor-trailers designed for hauling heavy equipment long distances.

"We have the best recovery team in the U.S. Army," stated LTC Jerry Patterson, 197th Spt Bn commander, "and there is no doubt in my mind that SGT Bennett is the best recovery section NCO in the Army."

By a twist of fate, SGT Bennett was assigned to the same unit as LTC Patterson prior to coming to the 197th Inf Bde, the 2nd Inf Div in Korea. The battalion commander recognized SGT Bennett when he assumed command of the 197th Spt Bn.

"He was somewhat of a celebrity in the 2nd Division," LTC Patterson recalled. "While he was there he received a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and the Army Commendation Medal twice."

SGT Bennett is a native of Martinsville, IN, and enlisted in the Army in July, 1972. Following training, he was assigned to Korea and in May, 1974 he came to Ft. Benning and the 197th Inf Bde.

"When he arrived here as a SP4," explained 2LT Edward Kelum, the section leader, "it only took him about three weeks to take charge. He immediately assumed responsibility and began teaching the other men what he had learned from experience. We promoted him to the grade of acting sergeant and intend to send him before a promotion board just as soon as he is eligible."

SGT Bennett admits that his favorite recovery vehicle is the five-ton wrecker, but as the section NCO he primarily works with "Big Leroy." The mammoth track recovery vehicle weighs 56 tons and the 12-cylinder, gasoline-powered engine develops 850 horsepower.

"Our biggest job is keeping 'Big Leroy' in a high state of maintenance," SGT Bennett explained. "For every hour we spent pulling a tank, he requires eight hours of maintenance. Keeping 'Big Leroy' on the move is quite a job."

The track recovery vehicle is equipped with a 20-ton boom, welding equipment, an impact wrench, tools and spare parts. It is powerful enough to pull four tanks at once.

SGT Bennett has used the M-88 extensively during recovery operations. When a unit calls for aid, the young NCO will have his men and "Big Leroy" ready to recover.

OCT

A few years ago when marijuana was the topic of the day there were two sides of the story. One side advocated the use of grass as an excellent substitute for alcohol, or they at least tolerated the use of pot for the lack of evidence to prove potential harm. On the other side were those that said no, it's wrong and it will hurt the user. Their cries of warning were unheeded because of the lack of proof for their charges. As the conflict flew back and forth the pro marijuana group started to grow in size and added influential people to their ranks.

Many teachers, parents and writers started to often their doubt about grass and many openly advocated its use. Unfortunately, the subject was all one-sided in written material. One sided issues are too easy for weak individuals or narrow minded no matter what the subject. The main problem was the lack of positive information to balance the subject of marijuana and it's use.

Earlier this year a mass of information surfaced from dozens of sources dealing with the subject of pot. The sources were from medical research projects several years in duration, medical reports and doctors' analysis on the social effects. All of this information was offered by the authors of the information but many of the well known newspapers refused to handle or disseminate the findings.

This refusal to put out conflicting information to previous stands came to the attention of a Senate Subcommittee. The subcommittee brought all of the experts before them and made public record the latest info on what they consider the truth about the effect of marijuana and hashish on the human body.

These findings are from the Senate subcommittee on Internal Security in May of this year.

WIDE SPREAD USE

Last year Federal authorities confiscated 780,000 pounds of marijuana and 54,000 pounds of hashish. The authorities stated that they captured only about one-tenth of the pot that entered the United States. This adds up to a lot of grass especially when you consider one pound of marijuana can intoxicate two hundred people and one pound of hashish can do it to 1600 people. We know there is a lot of pot around.

Reports back up the fact that every social group and every economic level is involved in the use of grass. This has also caused alarm in the military because of the wide use. There is a rising concern over the possibility of security risk of soldiers that use marijuana. The purpose of this article is to point out the physical and mental effects of extended use of grass.

Many noted individuals have voiced warnings over the use of marijuana. Dr. Oliva J. Braenden, once director of the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory in Geneva, testified that among the scientists working in the field, there was a general consensus that marijuana is dangerous. He said: "As progressively more scientific facts are discovered about hashish and marijuana, the more one becomes aware of its potential dangers." This was a beginning of a change from the long blackout on medical information of the effects of grass.

TOXICITY AND ACCUMULATION IN THE BRAIN

Pot is a complex toxic substance, whose principal psychoactive component (brain-mental effective action) is THC—tetrahydrocannabinol. This chemical is highly soluble in fat, this gives it the ability to move to every part of the body, including the brain, the ovaries, the testes, and the fetus. This capability allows it to persist in the body for long periods of time and accumulate with repeated exposures. With the use of radioactively tagged THC it has established that one of the main areas of accumulation is the brain.

Sweet Mary Jane?

By HOWARD HODGE

EVIDENCE OF IRREVERSIBLE BRAIN DAMAGE

Also related to the poison and its ability to store in the brain, there is a mounting body of evidence that regular use of marijuana for a year or so may result in irreversible brain damage. This is also connected with evidence developed by several researchers that marijuana use reduces DNA synthesis and reduces the mitotic index. (This means it attacks the body's capability to reproduce cells).

Several psychiatrists who testified before the subcommittee said that a hypothesis of irreversible brain damage tied in with their own clinical observations that brilliant young people who went on prolonged marijuana binges were simply not able to capture the same level of mental competence they had displayed before becoming chronic marijuana users even after being off the stuff for several years.

Dr. Campbell and his colleagues at the Royal Bristol Hospital demonstrated that chronic young marijuana smokers aged 18 to 26 had suffered as much brain atrophy (loss of use through age) as is normally encountered in people aged 70 to 90.

DAMAGE TO THE CELLULAR SYSTEM

New scientific findings are not readily accepted by the science community unless it has been substantiated by many, from several different areas. One unique thing about the subcommittee was that many sources brought into the investigation were from many different areas of studies and they all backed up each other's findings. Many scientists' research pointed to damage to the cellular system, mainly in the area of reduced DNA and RNA synthesis.

Dr. Morishima of the Columbia University said: "When the specimens of three marijuana smokers were compared with those of age and sex matched non-smokers, the mitotic index or the proportion of these cells in process of cell division, was noted to be only 2.3 per cent in marijuana users, compared with 5.9 per cent for the non-users." Dr. Morishima found that a large section of the cell nuclei in marijuana smokers contained a significantly fewer number of chromosomes from 38 to 8 instead of the 46 chromosomes found in normal cells.

In another study of 51 marijuana users averaging three joints a week for four years, the product of immune cells—the T lymphocytes in the blood was 41 per cent less than in non-users. This means that their immunity system was impaired. Professor Paton who has studied about 800 research papers of effects of cannabis in connections with his responsibility as director of the British drug research program, told the subcommittee that there were many more papers dealing with other aspects of the damage done by marijuana to both cell metabolism and cell division.

DAMAGE TO THE REPRODUCTIVE SYSTEM

The idea that something can damage our reproductive system makes us sit up and take notice. We are offended at the idea of losing our masculinity or femininity. The loss is serious and worth studying. Dr. Robert C. Kolodny who heads up the Endocrine Research Section at the Masters and Johnson Research Foundation, reported that in a group of 20 males aged 18 to 28 who had used marijuana at least 4 days a week for a minimum of 6 months, the principal male sex hormone, testosterone, was found to be approximately 44 per cent lower than for the non users. In a few cases the sperm count was so low that the individuals had to be considered clinically sterile. On the female side, tests run with animals, dosages of cannabis during pregnancy caused fetal death or fetal abnormalities. In one of the animal experiments the teratogenic effects carried over another two generations without further exposures to marijuana.

There is growing amount of evidence that even single exposures to large dosages can lead to psychotic episodes, while chronic use leads to paranoid symptoms and serious and persistent deterioration in mental functioning. If you desire more information of the Senate hearing it is public record dated July 24, 1974, pages S13315 through S1 3328.

You are the final judge and as long as you have all the information you can best make the decisions that affect your future and the future of your children.

Brothers at Arms taken literally in 83rd FA

By Gene Smith

The expression, Brothers at Arms, is used to describe every member of the Armed Forces. At Btry C, 83rd FA, 1/29th Inf, TSB the expression has been taken quite literally.

Three pair of brothers are currently serving together in the Pioneer Artillery battery. The brothers are Westley and Gastone Stone, George and Anthony Smith, and Kenneth Talley and his half-brothers Jimmie and Greg Allen. None of the brothers enlisted under the buddy system.

Specialists Westley and Gaston Stone bear a striking resemblance to one another. This created a bit of a problem for the Stones during their BCT and Airborne training. Westley related a story concerning a mix-up in their Basic Training pay line. Gaston was due less money, however, the pay officer understandably confused the two and gave Gaston, Westley's larger check. The senior brother quickly corrected the situation after he received Gaston's check and the pay officer was none the wiser.

The Stones were also confused for each other in Airborne training. One day, after a jump was made, roll call was taken. The name Stone was announced and Westley asked which Stone they meant. His question was interpreted as a wise-crack and he was immediately dropped for 50 push-ups.

PFCs Anthony and George Smith relate that their being brothers is often overlooked because of the common name. Originally, three Smith brothers were members of the Georgia National Guard. Anthony and George decided to stay on active duty because the benefits of a military career far outweighed their civilian jobs.

PFC Kenneth Talley and his half brothers, Jimmie and Greg Allen, decided to enlist for the benefits afforded the military man. Kenneth and Jimmie are members of Btry C, 8- of the Pioneers while Greg serves in the 2/10th FA, 197th Inf Bde.

Talley relates that it is astounding that they have all made it to Ft. Benning together. "We didn't come in under the buddy system, plus a series of misfortunes hit right after we were signed up," Talley said.

"Jimmie was held over at the induction station for medical reasons," Talley continued, "while Greg and I went through Basic together until the fourth week"

During the fourth week of training, Greg broke his leg and had to be recycled. So when the three of them all ended up at Ft. Benning, they were indeed surprised.

PFC Talley is currently auditioning for the 1/29th jazz combo which is being formed by the Pioneers. Prior to joining the Army he was a member of a musical group and had been offered several musical scholarships.

"Though Jimmie and I are now working as FDC operators and enjoying it very much, I just can't seem to get music out of my system. It looks as if the 1/29th is a perfect fit for a good man," Talley said.

Early antifreeze check urged

With the approach of winter, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) advises its customers to check their cars' antifreeze levels early and avoid last-minute buying of that increasingly scarce radiator additive.

Antifreeze is in short supply throughout the nation, and prices are spiraling upward. No improvement in the situation is forecast for the near future because of a continuing shortage of ethylene glycol, the main ingredient of antifreeze. New and more profitable uses have been found for the chemical, including the manufacture of double-knit textiles.

Two Rangers from Co C, 1/29th Inf, TSB assist Mr. Willard Bass (L) of the Ft. Benning Fire Department in extinguishing a fire. The demonstration was in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week on post. The Pioneers received instruction on how to prevent fires, and which type of extinguisher goes with what class of fire. (Photo by Rick Wasser)

Tankers opened the festival season at an Oktoberfest held by MAJ and Mrs. Galen Rosher to hail newcomers and bid farewell to those departing.

COFFEE

The monthly coffee for the ladies of the 2/69th Ar was held in the home of Mrs. Jerry Foster. Guest speaker was LTC Warren J. Walton, Battalion Commander, who have a review of the approaching seven week field exercise at Ft. Stuart.

197th SPT Bn

Goodwill Industries served as a unique setting for the monthly coffee of the ladies of the 197th Spt Bn. Hostesses were Mrs. Ed Latham and Mrs. Buck Mandeville.

Mr. Harold McRae, director of rehabilitation for the Columbus Goodwill, discussed procedures and goals of the organization. In addition, he guided them through the various work areas of the plant.

OWC LUNCHEON

"Musical Talent" was the theme for the OWC Oct. Luncheon, held in the Supper Club of the Officers Club. Hostesses were the ladies of BBOD. The program consisted of delightfully entertaining and unique talent recruited from the ranks of the OWC membership.

546th conducts practice alerts

An intensive training exercise with a series of practice alerts has recently been conducted by the 546th Medical Company, 34th Med Bn. The alerts were to ascertain the units' capabilities to react in a national emergency.

The period of training began with a motor march conjunctioned with a tactical deployment of the troops. The motor march was arranged in two parts: a day course and a night course. The course was to instill confidence in the drivers by allowing them to traverse through rough terrain. The more challenging night course tested the unit's stamina and individual job knowledge by confrontations with such elements as gas, rifle fire, vehicle break down and injuries.

The rigorous training ended with a critique by CPT Curtis Tribble, company commander. "Training such as this is responsible for maintaining the 546th Medical Company's reputation as one of the finer clearing companies in the U.S. Army."

Ole Doc Sez

Blood donors still needed every day

Howdy Bub, I went out to the post hospital the other day to pay my respects to the new Chief 'Ole Doc, who's jus been assigned here. He really gave me a big, "Hey," an' made me feel mighty welcome by usherin' me right into his office. Soon's I wuz seated in the visitor's chair, I seen that Chief 'Ole Doc had been palavarin' with a medico, when I happened by. I tole the Chief that I could come back when he weren't busy, but he tole me to sit still, an' introduced me to Stilwell G. Phillips, the Chief of the Laboratory Department.

acorse, the men's groups do a lotta donatin' also, an' so far this year, The Checker Champ Club is leadin' The Horseshoe Hooker Hopefuls by a couppla gallons, but they wuz one or two other groups that were comin' on strong.

Faculty wives plan annual fall market

The Fifth Annual Fall Market at Columbus College will be Nov. 9 from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. in the Davidson Student Center.

Seems like Stilwell an' the Chief wuz tryin' to come up with a good workable plan to convince folks that there is still a very real need for blood donors. Jes 'cause there ain't no more combat needs; they is still havin' trainin' an' auto accident folks who require blood transfusions, now an' then.

Chief 'Ole Doc an' Stilwell thought that wuz a mighty good program we had goin'. So, I thought I'd mention it to you, Bub, maybe you could get yore group interested insome blood donatin'. Iffen you want to donate a pint of blood, where it will do the most good, I'd suggest that you get onna phone an' call for an appointment.

Sponsored by the Faculty Wives, the Market is open to the public who are invited to buy or sell. Mrs. Hugh Rodgers and Mrs. Joseph McIntosh are in charge of space displaying arts, crafts and fleas. Anyone can purchase space for items to be sold.

I stuck my oar into the conversation, an' said that I 'membered the days when the different units wuz all the time vyin' with one 'nother, to see which could give the most blood inna month. Chief 'Ole Doc said that the units wuz trainin' so hard, of late, that them men hardly had the strength to wipe the sweat offen theys faces at the end of the day, much less give a pint of blood.

Y'see, theys gone an' got it set up so's you can go when you get it suited to you. Ready, Bub? OK, here's what you do, call 544-3471, ask for LTC Phelps, an' he'll git you an appointment for either Monday or Wednesday 'tween the hours of 10 a.m. an' 2 p.m.

Other members of the planning committee include Mrs. George Panos, Mrs. Steve Robinson, Mrs. John Myers, and Mrs. James Chestnut.

Acorse, they is doin' operations everday, an' jes by the plain fact that havin' that buildin' bein' called a hospital, makes for the need to have blood on hand.

Now, how much easier could they possibly make it for you? Run this 'round your think box, Bub, seein' you are one of the eligible folks for medical service, there on post, you can never tell; you might be the very one who needs it the next time 'round.

Proceeds from this annual project provide a scholarship for the Junior students with the highest grade point average.

The Lab medico upped an' said that, also, the Army wuz smaller now, an' there wasn't as many men, overall, to keep the blood level up to snuff. I allowed that I hadn't thought of that, but maybe they could get some of the Community Organizations, located on post, involved inna kinda project type thing to donate blood.

Well, anyway, I had a nice visit with the new Chief 'Ole Doc, an' we made a date to get together later this week with the wives for some Scrabble out to my place. By the way, as long as I wuz already out there, I rolled up my sleeve an' gave up a pint of this old blood, jes to let them know that I understand their problem.

Christmas decorations will include gifts, foods and toys. Among specific items will be split oak and honeysuckle baskets, bread trays, pottery, cornhusk dolls, crocheted rings and key chains; antiques, plants, macrame, ceramics, paintings, painted wooden pins, place mats, long aprons, afghans, wrap-around skirts, lap boards, decoupage items, baked goods, and cloth pocket books, shoes and flowers.

I tole 'em that we had donors from The Volunteer Fireman's Ladies Auxiliary, The Jeff Davis Quiltin' Society, an' The Ladies Aid group from the church involved in our own project. I mentioned that,

See ya at the donor center, Bub. Good health to your and yours...

The good neighbor.

OCT

197th has first WAC in NCO course

By Bob Thomas

SP4 Sylvia Grisson, 197th Inf Bde, became the first woman to attend the brigade's NCO Development Course.

The two-week development course is designed to prepare junior NCO's for leadership positions. It includes instruction in map reading, first aid, vehicle maintenance, communications and other military subjects.

A housewife and mother, SP4 Grisson is a personnel records specialist with Co A (Admin), 197th Spt Bn. She entered the NCO course on Oct. 7 and is scheduled to graduate Oct. 18.

"My husband won't be satisfied if I just graduate," SP4 Grisson stated. "He finished in the top five of his class when he attended a similar course at Ft. Dix, N.J. He insists that I have to do better than he did."

SP4 Grisson's husband is SGT Freddie Grisson, a squad leader in Co A, 1/58th Inf (Patriots). The Grissons have a one-year-old son, Kerry.

"I'm really looking forward to the completion of this course," she explained. "I asked to go since it is designed to prepare you for promotion. I don't anticipate any problems with being the only girl in the class."

A native of Birmingham, AL, SP4 Grisson enlisted in 1971 after graduating from Hays High School in Birmingham.

"I wanted to visit different places," she explained. "I talked to a recruiter and the next thing I knew I was on my way. After basic and advanced training I was assigned at Ft. Dix, where I met my husband. We came to the 197th Inf Bde at the same time."

43rd does work at Camp Merrill

The general construction platoon of Delta Co, 43rd Engrs, 38th Engr Grp, began renovating squad bays & building a timber trussel bridge at Camp Merrill, Dahlonega, GA. Oct. 1-13.

Ranger students from here will use the newly remodeled buildings during the mountain phase of Ranger training. The 27-man construction platoon will be replacing the roofs on the squad bays and building new timber braces for the trussel bridge.

Due to the immediate training schedule of the Ranger Department, the engineers worked 14 days, including the weekends, in order to complete the project on time.

Much of the roofing on the old buildings needed to be removed and new roofing added to make the bays useable. The trussel bridge repairs will enable the Rangers to have immediate access to the airfield for transporting fuel and other supplies needed.

During the renovation project the engineers were able to utilize the skills of the engineer carpenters, electricians and masons.

The dilemma of a reformed drug user

Specialist Five Noname was a heavy abuse of opiates for two if his five years in the Army. Today he is a civilian going to school in the midwest. He no longer uses drugs:

The Addict's Story

In a lot of ways, I wish I had never quit doing dope; at least not while I was still in the Army. What a hassle! I used to get along fine down here in the unit. I was the best damn electronic communications repairman this outfit ever had. I know my job and I really enjoyed the work. Nobody knew I was hooked on heroin. At least none of the brass were aware of it. Man, I did dope every day for almost two years.

A lot of people have some crazy ideas about what a drug addict is supposed to look like. I guess I didn't fit into their picture. In Nam the stuff was pretty cheap and I could afford getting high. But stateside was a bummer. I went broke in no time. I began "dealing" a little bit on the side to support my habit. Then one day this guy got busted and I was scared.

I decided to quit drugs. I mean I really didn't want to, but it was definitely a financial necessity. Anyway, I walked up to my supervisor, and told him I was a heroin user and I needed some help.

At first he thought I was joking. To make a long story short, I volunteered for the Resident Program over at the Benning House. I really learned a lot in that place. The other residents never seemed to run out of ideas for self-improvement.

When I finished my 60 days in the house, I found myself wearing starched fatigues every day, my boots looked great, I maintained my barracks room like a little 'ole lady, and I enrolled in night school. I figured the officers and NCO's would be watching me pretty close so I made up my mind to really do a great job in the unit.

Like I said, it was a hassle. Now I am clean, clear-headed, and ready to impress somebody. Would you believe my boss sent two privates to supervise me every time I got near an aircraft radio? And I'm a SP/5. What is the logic behind that? I mean I'm better now than I was before.

They just didn't trust me I guess. And every time the old man got wind of drugs being used around the company I was the first guy he questioned. Check this out — the C.O. told me to get in touch with the company drug officer as a point of contact in case I ever had any problems.

So one day I went in to see the guy about the hassle I was getting on the flight line. We never even got around to dealing with the roblem. This drug officer spent an hour on questions about when I first used drugs, how it felt, and I walked out as he was mumbling something about how he understood the urge to do dope would never go away.

The hassle doesn't just come from the top. A lot of the guys in the unit avoid me because they think I'm some sort of narcotics spy or something. A lot of "straights" stay away because they view me as an "addict" and don't want me around their families. I feel like I've been labeled, and the people around me aren't going to let me forget it.

I thought about reenlisting because the Army is a pretty good deal. But I looked at the statement of personnel history form that I had to update and there was another question about my previous drug use.

"I'm not looking for a hand-out. I think it's the individual's responsibility to stay straight. Some do and some don't. I got straight but that doesn't seem to matter to a lot of people. So I'll be getting out soon. Maybe in the civilian world I can get into the community as a regular person and shed this label. I just don't know for sure.

The Supervisor's Story

Yes, I know him, he's a junkie. I'm glad he's leaving the service. It's dangerous to have a man like that working on helicopters and airplanes. There's no cure for drug addiction, you know. Maybe he's off the stuff right now, but it's only a matter of time before he gets back into drugs. And I sure don't want to be flying in a ship that some doper tinkered with.

I tried to get the C.O. to transfer him because he really puts me in a personnel bind. I have to send two other men out there to make sure he doesn't mess up the equipment. And I'm getting tired of having to baby-sit with an E-5.

I'm proud of the team we've got here and I don't want to see any of these men influenced by one bad apple. I think we've bent over backwards for him and he's still not satisfied. How can you forget someone's a dope addict?

The way I see it, that man played with fire; he got burned; so now he'll just have to live with the scars. He's got no one to blame but himself. Maybe this situation will serve as an example for those soldiers who are considering getting into drugs. I'll admit he's a hard worker.

But job performance is only a part of military life. Character and morals are just as important. In my opinion, he's an unfit troop based on his previous history of drug abuse.

The Alcohol & Drug Control Office Story

Obviously there's a problem in this situation. Who's right and who's at fault? October 20-26 has been designated National Drug Abuse Prevention Week. The theme for 1974 is "Community Acceptance of the Rehabilitated Addict."

This is an opportune time to examine situations such as the one presented here. Prejudice and double jeopardy are commonplace. Much of it is bred by ignorance and misinformation.

It is true that we have yet to find an easy, permanent "cure" for addiction to alcohol or other drugs. Recovery is a life-long process. But let's not throw it out of perspective. Perhaps we could be more understanding if we recognized that even for "straights", avoiding drug dependency is a life-long process.

The decision to use or to not use drugs isn't made just once. It's a continuous process; one we deal with each and every time drugs or alcohol is mentioned. It is not so very different for the person who has participated in a rehabilitation program.

Is prejudice a real problem? Does such a small thing warrant all this attention? It is up to you to evaluate that. But I will say that during the past couple of years I've encountered numerous teenagers who refuse formal rehabilitation programs simply because they fear the anticipated "hassle" they'll get from their parents. Unfortunately, "home-remedy" style rehabilitation often doesn't work. Effective rehabilitation must involve trained professionals.

I can sit here and think of the many NCO's and officers with serious drinking problems who postpone entering rehabilitation until after military retirement because they feel being identified as an addict would jeopardize their career.

True, many people fail during the rehabilitation process, and some successfully complete a rehabilitation program only to return to their former habits. But a large number do make it O.K. If they were acceptable to us prior to being identified, it stands to reason they will be even more productive citizens after quitting drugs or alcohol.

A lot has been said about "Confidentiality" being an essential factor in any rehabilitation program. Maybe it's time for us to take another look. Perhaps we'll see confidentiality as being a very weak suit of armor; designed to protect us from one thing — the attitude of those around us.

Wisconsin professor is keynoter for 'EVE' workshop

Dr. Kathryn Clarenbach, chairperson for the Wisconsin Governor's Commission on the Status of Women and associate professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, will be the keynote speaker for "Eve on a See-Saw" at Columbus College, Oct. 19 at 10 a.m. in Fine Arts Hall.

Other speakers for the Workshop, beginning at 9:30 a.m. and continuing until 4:30 p.m., will be Dr. Theodore Braganza, psychiatrist, Bradley Center; Dr. Mary Wilder, professor of English, Mercer University; and Joan Green, Regional Director, Women's Bureau, Atlanta.

Dr. Clarenbach received B. A., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin where she served as director of University Education of Women, Extension Specialist, and during her professional training was a graduate assistant. She has been economics lecturer, Edgewood College, Madison, Wis.; assistant professor of sociology, Olivet College, Michigan; executive secretary, Encampment for Citizenship, New York City; instructor in political science, Purdue University; and administrative analyst for the War Production Board, Washington, D. C.

The recipient of many honors and awards, Dr. Clarenbach has recently written 12 articles that have been published in popular and scholarly magazines and periodicals. Within the past year, she has given major addresses at the University of Hawaii, First Woman in Residence; Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies, Lake Tahoe, Nev.; National Council of Canadian Women, Saskatchewan; National Association of Governing Boards of Higher Education, Boston; Interstate Association of Commissions on the Status of Women; St. Louis and Minneapolis; National Jubilee Banquet for members of Congress, Washington, D. C.; Adult Education Conference on "Humanizing Career Education," Madison, Wisc.; and National Vocational Guidance Workshop, Boone, N. C.

Dr. Clarenbach is married and has three children, ages 16-25.

At 1:30 p.m., panelists exploring the balancing of careers and families will be Dr. Braganza who will discuss "Marriage Roles" from a personal and professional point of view; Ms. Green will present, "Demographic Profiles of Women in the Nation," from the latest national statistics; and Dr. Wilder will speak on "Aspects of a Woman Balancing Multiple Roles."

Mayor Bob Hydrick will introduce Dr. Clarenbach, and Dr. Fred Burgess, director of the Community Service Program at Columbus College, will give the welcome.

The public is invited. A registration of $6.50 will include Workshops and lunch.

43rd continues road construction

Engineers of Co B and Co C, 43rd Engr Bn, are continuing their mission despite inclement weather of the construction of the roadway for the future Chattahoochee Valley Community College (CVCC), Phenix City, AL.

The project was initiated in August and has now progressed to the drainage system phase. The primary drainage system is an intricate network of culverts, located in key positions underneath the roadway. The system will employ 15, 18, 24, and 30 inch culverts.

Careful earthmoving and support bed preparation is being conducted in a critical area of the roadway. The drainage system will allow the hillside and surface runoff to escape in the channelled culvert networks.

The utilization of dozers, graders and other horizontal equipment has proven valuable in the construction of the roadway. SFC Willie F. Speigner, NCOIC stated, "Our equipment has been holding up very well for us. The efficiency of the operators of the heavy machinery helped us on our job schedule."

"The project is excellent training for the men," concluded LT Michael W. Garrabone, OIC.

PFC Alfonia Sanford, a brickmason working on the project, commented, "I am really enjoying working here. As a brickmason, this experience will be valuable to me throughout my life."

43rd's Co C wins three in a row

By Michael Johns

"When you're hot, you're hot!" exclaimed CPT James H. Wigglesworth, company commander, Co C, 43rd Engrs, who doubles as coach and quarterback for the "Charging Charlie" flag football team. Winning their third straight game in the Eastern league of the flag football competition in the 36th Engrs., CPT Wigglesworth said, "We're beginning to jell into a solid team and if we make the playoffs we'll be serious contenders in the Post Championship."

In their spiffy red and white jerseys, the "Charging Charlie" team came on strong in the regular season play with a 4 win and 2 loss record which placed Co C in a tie for second place in the Group standings.

Only one game remains to be played to complete the season. The 598th, with a 4-1 record must play Co B, 43rd, with a record of 3-2. If Co B defeats 598th, a four-way tie will develop for first place. This development is exactly what the "Charging Charlie" company is hoping for.

"We got off to a great start," remarked SP5 Walter Gordan, "Charging Charlie's" back up quarterback, "but we became overconfident and let our offense get very lax." SP5 Gordan added, "After realizing our mistakes we quickly regained the momentum needed to reach our peak performance on the playing field."

The past victories for "Charging Charlie" on the gridiron consist of a 6-0 victory over HHC, 43rd, and a 0-24 defeat from the 598th. "Charging Charlie's" second defeat came from the 524th. "Charging Charlie's" list of losing victims include Delta Cm, 43rd, who suffered a 6-0 defeat, followed by Bravo Co who received a thorough trouncing by "Charlie" 13-0. The next slaughtering defeat was imposed on the helpless company of HHD, 87th Main Bn in an 18-0 upset victory by the "Charging Charlie" team.

With the inter-Group rivalries becoming intensely competitive, the championship is yet to be resolved. "Warming up for the games is the only organized practice we've had," remarked SP4 William Blasky, "Charging Charlie's" center. "I think the combination of officers and enlisted men competing together improves the competition greatly."

Football's important people aren't always playing the game

By C. B. Hoover

The teams are ready to play and the referees are there ready to call the play, but without Richard L. Janisse of Co B, 197th Spt Bn, nothing happens. Janisse is one of the individuals rarely noticed by players or spectators alike.

What does he do that's so important? He sets up the field each game. The referees cannot make their calls and the players would be unable to decide what play to use to obtain the yardage needed for a first down or how far it is to a TD, without Janisse's participation.

Before the game he puts out all the yardage markers and then keeps the downs during the game. After the games are over, he picks up the field and proceeds back to Kelley Hill gym and turns in the game score.

"The hours are long and the job is often frustrating, but I enjoy the sport with all its action. That makes it all worthwhile," commented SP4 Richard L. Janisse.

Co A takes championship

Co A, 1/29th Inf, TSB captured the Pioneer Flag-Football championship this week, capping a 9-2 season record with a forfeit victory over the Co C Rangers.

Alpha Co, led by the incredible passing duo of Ledbetter-to-MacPherson, will advance to the TSB playoffs with a yet-to-be-determined second place team from the 1/29th later this month.

The top two teams emerging from the TSB tourney will represent TSB at the post-level football competition in November.

The Pioneer Artillerymen were some of the TSB representatives at the post tournament last year, but were eliminated after early losses to the 139th MP's and the 198th Sig-Pit.

Highlighting next week's football action at Harmony Church will be the second place play-off between Btry C, 83rd FA of the Pioneers and Co D, both of whom finished with a 7-3 regular season record.

The Artillerymen are favored to win the play-of as they have had a top-notch team in all sports since the 1/29th reorganized. Co D, on the other hand, was a dark-horse entry in the battalion league, and surprised everyone by doing as well as they did.

Horse show scheduled for Benning

By George Korda

Without them, Roy Rogers would be a short order cook somewhere in Oklahoma, Ben Hur would have used goats to pull his chariot, and Royal Canadian Mounted Police would be riding Saint Bernards in search of Canadian desperadoes.

We're talking about horses. With all due respect to dogs, horses were for centuries man's best friend, and were responsible for his survival in many cases.

The tremendous teamwork that is possible between human and horses will be on display Oct. 26 at the 12th annual Ft. Benning fall horse show. Eight events will be held, offering even those who know nothing of horses the chance to watch, learn, and be amazed at what these animals and their riders are capable of.

The perspective on horses is lost while reclining in front of the tube watching Marshal Dillon gallop across the Kansas plains. Horses are immense beasts of terrific strength and delicate grace. Both these characteristics will be exhibited at the fall horse show.

Even the most casual viewer will be awestruck at the sight of a nine hundred pound horse vaulting over a fence nearly three and a half feet high, or be surprised at the almost rhythmic way a horse will walk, trot and canter upon a command from the rider.

Riders are ever bit as important as the horses in a show. The confident hands of an experienced rider emits an air of confidence to the onlooker. Both horse and rider know exactly what is expected of them.

The expect a show such as this to be demanding, and it is. Included within the eighteen events are shows at a walk, trot, and canter, equitation (jumping) over fences and hunters, meaning how horses would perform if they were in an actual hunt. The way they're graded sounds almost like a beauty contest. They are judged on soundness, manners, performance and way of going.

The show will begin at 9 a.m. Competition will be held on French Polo Field, Main Post.

Rod and Gun Club Notes

One-stop service for purchasing post hunting permits

By Bill Kloeb

The Wednesday evening hunting safety orientations have been discontinued. The few hunters in attendance the last two Wednesdays indicate the majority of those required to attend have already attended.

Effective Oct. 16 the Rod and Gun Club inaugurated a "one-stop service" for individuals purchasing Post Hunting Permits at Victory Lodge. Permits will be on sale from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. each day Tuesday through Friday, and from 6 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays. Hunters can view a video tape of the orientation at noon, 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Friday and at noon and 3 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays. The stamp indicating the orientation has been attended will be placed on the hunters permit at the completion of the showing.

Hunters can also view a tape of the orientation in the Individual Learning Center (Room 236, Bldg 4). The worker at the Learning Center will give the hunter a card stating he has viewed the tape. The hunter can then take this card to the Rod and Gun Club office at Victory Lodge and have the required stamp placed on his permit. The Learning Center is open from 8 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Saturday.

Rod and Gun Activities

The Rod and Gun Club management needs volunteers to help with the "sight-in" and turkey shoot at Brinson Range this weekend. These activities will operate from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturday and from noon until 4 p.m. on Sunday. Anyone willing to donate time should call Frank Zenkp, club manager at 687-0562.

The club has made plans to hold dances at Victory Lodge each Saturday night. The current band is Curley Money and the Jingles. Curley has added an organ to the outfit. The organist also doubles as a singer. Music starts at 8 p.m.

Children can no longer fish alone at Twilight Pond. They must be accompanied by an adult. Children can fish at Victory Pond without direct adult supervision. A catfish fishing permit is not necessary.

SFC Rand A. Perdue, post chief game warden, needs a few good men to help with the law enforcement business. Volunteers accepted will be deputized as deputy game wardens. Individuals will be expected to devote some normal off duty time patrolling the outer reaches of the reservation. Anyone interested can contact Perdue at 645-1333.

Looking for an ideal place to throw a company or private party? Contact Frank Zenkp, club manager. Arrangements can be made to use part of Victory Lodge at just about any time.

The Rod and Gun Skeeet Ranges on First Division Road are open from noon until dark each Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. An attendant is on duty. Quail hunters have just a few days to sharpen up their wing shooting before opening day Nov. 20. Dove hunters having trouble bagging their limit will also find this practice rewarding.

Georgia Deer Season

Hunters who intend to hunt deer on the Georgia part of the reservation have about two weeks to prepare for opening day Nov. 2.

There are always a lot of hunters out on the opening day and more deer are taken than on any other hunting day of the season. Usually these deer are taken by hunters who made good plans for the season. They made several reconnoissances, prepared stands and knew a deer was going to pass sometime during the morning.

Deer like other animals are creatures of habit. Generally they feed during hours of darkness then head for a secluded site to bed down for most of the day. Successful hunters determine the habits of their quarry and make plans accordingly. Beating the boondocks during daylight hours doesn't produce many deer. A hunter has to be lucky. Most times all the hunter sees is a white tail disappearing rapidly into dense brush.

Under these conditions some hunters take a quick "snap shot." Snap shots are more likely to find an unintended target than the well placed shot fired by a hunter in a deer stand.

I don't consider any place really safe on the opening day of deer season, but if I were going hunting I'd much prefer to be sitting quietly on a stand. You can hear approaching hunters and warn them of your presence.

197th play-offs get under way

By C. B. Hoover

Who has the grit to tear up the gridiron is the question posed for the teams of the "Forever Forward" 197th Inf Bde as the brigade play-offs started this week.

HHC 1/58 Inf put away first place in the "Patriot" League with C Co placing second. After a long and tough season for the "cottonbaler" League the close of intra-league play found Cbt Spt Co 3/7th Inf in first place with Co C placing second to go to the brigade play-offs.

The brigade play-offs started on Oct. 15 and will run through Oct. 23. Game play for the first game starts 6 p.m. with the other two games scheduled an hour apart. The games are being played at Essabagger Field, Kelley Hill.

The play from Oct. 21 through Oct. 23 should have the action everyone is looking for as the field of teams competing for the brigade championship is narrowed.

CFC is worthwhile

"I'm contributing because I feel it's one of the most worthwhile campaigns conducted," remarked PFC Jose Cebe-Mora, Co C 43rd Engrs, when asked why he was participating. "It's personally rewarding to know that you are helping needy people live happier lives." These comments typified the thoughts of the men of Co C, 43rd Engr Bn, as they responded to the call of the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC).

CPT James H. Wigglesworth, his company commander, addressed a company formation Sept. 18 concerning the purpose, organization and procedures of the CFC. His briefing emphasized a voluntary participation stimulated by a desire to help others.

Immediately following his appeal, four "Key Men" from the company were chosen to man tables placed before overflowing lines of contributors.

"It looked as if about 100 per cent participation of those present were contributing," stated SP5 Walter Gordan, Key Man for the first platoon. "It's amazing how well these people responded to a worthy cause," he added.

Within two hours following the formation $1,554 was collected which was later supplemented by an additional $648. The grand total of contributions made by Co C was $2,202 within 24 hours after the campaign began.

524th Chairborne Rangers victorious after battle

By PATRICK GODWIN

As a prelude to the upcoming Operational Readiness Training Test to be administered during November 1974, the 524th PSC was involved in a semi-tactical FTX Oct. 3-5. All phases of field readiness were covered in varying degrees to insure that the 524th would uphold its tradition of being an integral part of the combat-ready 36th Engr Gp.

After inspection and initial briefing by CPT Fehrs, the CO, personnel returned to their normal workday duties until 4:30 p.m. at which time an admin convoy was formed and the unit motor-marched to the training site at Sand Hill.

At this time, the field HQ and various unit field locations were established and work began on the task of transforming an area of tangled undergrowth into an area of tangled tent ropes and commo wire.

Following this dazzling display, there followed an hour of instruction on such subjects as tactical deployment from convoy in the event of a non-existent air strike and the proper procedure for protecting oneself from streaking through the undergrowth.

Then, in the manner of all good field soldiers, the unit divided itself into the various inherent factors that are inevitable in field exercises.

These included, a fast-paced card game in which the 1SG was a big winner, for obvious reasons; speculation by members of the unit as to lineage and marital status of the parents of their fellow soldiers; and the ever amusing game of find the latrine in the dark, but don't fall in.

Thus ended the first day of rigorous field duty for the 524th PSC.

Following a night of blissful sleep, the men of 524th awoke bleary-eyed and slightly blue to face another day of adventure.

After a road march back to 524th rear, the men prepared to again become garrison soldiers. Alas, the taste of field duty was not in their veins and they eagerly awaited the chance to return to the home of all true heroes.

As the hours dragged by, the men chafed at the bit and repeated over again to themselves the words of instruction given them by the CO in case of an ambush on the tactical march back to the 524th forward.

Unfortunately, the CO did not have time to repeat his own words, and the ambush was executed with all the military brilliance of Custer at The Little Big Horn.

The men stormed from the trucks screeching their battle cry "BACKSPACE" and blew each other to pieces under the watchful eye of "Fearless Fehrs".

A great tactical lesson is to be learned from this exercise. The aggressor force although well concealed and possessing superior fire power, retreated almost immediately, thus proving that noise is far superior to either accuracy or discipline in engaging the enemy.

Upon reaching the camp, the men set about the stupendous task of rendering the area safe from enemy aggression and penetration. The men dug night defensive positions and cleverly disguised the fresh dirt so as not to expose their locations.

Upon completion of this task, the 524th had, single-handedly, changed the face of that portion of Ft. Benning from having the appearance of a circus to having the appearance of a land fill.

And then it was evening and the area tingled with all the excitement of a mortuary as the time grew near for the expected assault. Clutching the remains of their 20 rounds, the men pressed close to hear the password that was to strike fear into the hearts of the aggressors; PINK BAYONET!!!

Men crouched lower in their positions as noise and light discipline went into effect. Only sporadic gunfire and an occasional "blow his (expletive deleted) away" was heard in the quiet Georgia woods.

Showing extreme courage, one of the officers disregarded his personal safety and used his red flashlight almost in the face of the enemy to determine why his rifle was jammed.

Upon realizing that his weapon was inoperable, the officer then took the weapon of one of his fallen comrades and promptly expended all the ammunition at his position.

Meanwhile the NCO's were not inactive. Several of them along with fellow warriors raced through the area in search of infiltrators, blasting away at friends and foe alike. The only major casualty within the 524th was caused by an unfortunate accident. When "Fearless Fehrs" failed to remember the password, one of the 524th's finest fighters immediately executed him in true John Wayne fashion.

And then, much to everyone's sorrow, it was over. Men climbed into their, or someone else's sleeping bags with memories of the day's battle still in their minds. Is it any wonder, then, that it took all of 30 seconds to fall asleep?

Thus ends the saga of the 524th's 2-day war. The rest is anti-climatic. The tearing down of those well-loved tents brings tears to the eyes, as did the CS gas later in the day.

No one will, however, forget the 524th's spirit and eagerness in the battle. Truly the "Field's Finest", the 524th once again lived up to it's name of CHAIRBORNE RANGERS.

All in the family.

2d Evac takes lead in 34th Med football

With a victory over the 121st Av Co, the 2d Evac Hospital took over first place in the 34th Med Bn Flag Football league.

2d Evac, now with a 7-1 record, took the aviators 13-7 and also shutout the 690th Med Co, 16-0. With those wins, it gave 2d Evac a three game lead over the 121st who has a 4-1 record.

In other action, the 478th Av Co. nipped the 408th Med Co, 7-6 and the 546th Med Co lost a heart-breaker to the 121st, 7-6.

To total out the standings, the 478th is in third place, the 546th holds fifth place while the 690th is trailing in the bottom spot.

We think you'll be pleasantly surprised when you learn how little it costs to own property in Marion Oaks at today's prices. And you have the choice of building on your property, simply retaining it or even selling it. When you receive the deed to your property, paved roads will be in and water mains installed by a regulated utility will lead right to your improved homesite.

Marion Oaks can be your Florida dream come true.

Marion Oaks is located in beautiful Central Florida, 18 miles southwest of Ocala. This is rolling, tree-covered country. There are nine kinds of native oaks alone! Forests of pines. Wild olive trees. Mulberry, dogwood, hickory. The Gulf of Mexico with exciting deep-sea fishing and boating is less than 40 miles away. And Lake Weir with its sandy beach, and the Withlacoochee River, which old-timers claim is one part water and two parts bass, are both within twenty miles.

Are you a nature lover, a hunter, a hiker? The trail begins just 24 miles east at the 362,000-acre Ocala National Forest.

Tennis? The public courts at Ocala are only 18 miles away.

As for shopping . . . or an evening out . . . you're only a short drive from Ocala's modern stores,

Withlacoochee River - 18 miles restaurants and theaters. And it's all so easy to get to because the community is less than three miles from Interstate Highway 75.

And, of course, there's plenty to do at Marion Oaks itself.

Golf? The golf course is planned to be ready for play by December of 1975 and available to residents for modest greens fees.

The new Marion Oaks recreation center is in full operation.

And all community facilities are developing according to the master-plan. Sites are set aside in the master-plan for schools, houses of worship, shopping and medical facilities . . . everything community residents need for a better, richer, happier life.

And to preserve the beauty of the land, over 2,000 acres of park sites, recreation areas and greenbelt are set aside at Marion Oaks.

The Mackles' record in Florida is hard to beat.

Buying property is an important purchase, and it's important to know the people you're doing business with.

The Mackles have created eight masterplanned communities in Florida. Their family has been part of the southern building business for over 66 years. They've been commended by the Florida legislature for their contribution to the growth of the Sunshine State. The Mackles have a reputation second to none . . . they've earned your trust.

Find out how inexpensive and easy it is to own property at Marion Oaks . . . fill out and return the card below.

We'll send you a full-color brochure on Marion Oaks plus a fact-filled booklet "Things You Should Know About Marion Oaks."

We pay the taxes not you.

Find out how taxes are our responsibility—not yours—up to the time your contract performance period ends or your property is deeded to you . . . whichever occurs first.

Credit life insurance, too.

Find out about a plan that provides credit life insurance coverage at no added cost to eligible homesite buyers up to the total amount of their contract balance (not to exceed $10,000). No physical examination is required.

Here's your chance to get all the facts . . . all the answers to the questions you have. Just fill out and mail the postpaid reply card. There's no cost or obligation.

You can own a homesite in Marion Oaks, Florida, at today's prices—even if you're not ready to move for years.

Sidewalks provided in immediate home sales areas

Lake Weir—19 miles

The Mackles have a plan that lets you beat the rising cost of Florida property.

At the rate that Florida is growing—it's the fastest growing major state in the nation—today's prices figure to be lower than tomorrow's. As population grows, demand for property grows, too.

So if you have a dream about living in Florida someday, you should know about a plan developed by the Mackle brothers, who head The Deltona Corporation. It lets you own property at today's prices—even if you're not ready to move to Florida for years.

The Mackles' plan has helped thousands... here's how it can work for you.

Like all Mackle communities, Marion Oaks is on a timetable that spells out when each section will be developed. You choose a homesite in a section that will be ready in the year you plan to move. You make a small down payment, and modest monthly payments. There are six easy payment plans, so you're sure to find one that fits your own situation. And by the time you're ready to move, your improved homesite will be deeded and paid for—at 1974 prices—which may be a lot lower than tomorrow's. They even look low today!

The second span of an old railroad bridge over the Chattahoochee River near West Point, Ga. is hidden by explosive charges placed by a team of Army Engineers. Members of the 36th Engr Gp participated in the demolition of the bridge, destroyed last week by three separate charges. The bridge was destroyed because its low height would have made it a navigation hazard when water is backed up behind the West Point Dam. It has been replaced by a higher bridge.

Price change policy announced by AAFES

Under a new policy just announced, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) will no longer immediately change the price of merchandise in its retail outlets when a price increase occurs.

MG C. W. Hospelhorn, AAFES commander, made the announcement after a thorough study of the situation by the AAFES Merchandising Division. Effective at exchanges worldwide during the week of Oct. 14, the policy applies both to sales floor and stockroom merchandise. New prices will be applied only to merchandise received by stores after a price increase is made.

"I have directed that price markups resulting from wholesale cost price increases will not be applied to any merchandise on hand in AAFES retail selling activities," Hospelhorn said in his announcement. "The AAFES policy will be that of selling on a 'price as marked' basis."

There is one notable exception, the general noted. "As has long been the AAFES policy, in the case of price reductions, merchandise on the selling floor, as well as in stockrooms, will be re-marked to the lower price."

A practice of not applying markups to merchandise priced under $1 has been in effect in AAFES since June 1973, shortly after Hospelhorn assumed Exchange Service command. Inflation and the resultant frequent wholesale cost increases in recent months prompted the study leading to the new marking policy for all merchandise.

"The policy of not applying higher sell-prices to store stockroom merchandise in addition to that on the sales floor will mean significant direct savings to AAFES customers," MG Hospelhorn said. "Coupled with other inflation-fighters fund in the exchange — notably Extra Dividends and Money Saver merchandise — the new policy should further enhance the value of the exchange shopping privilege."

ACS plans dinner for Thanksgiving

Ft. Benning Army Community Services invites all retired Army personnel, service widows, and unaccompanied military dependents and their families to the post for a Thanksgiving turkey dinner at the Follow Me Dining Facility.

Cost for the dinner is $2.40 for adults and $1.25 for children 12 years old and under.

Tickets must be purchased at the Army Community Services Center, Room 124, Building 83.

Anyone interested in attending the dinner may make their reservations by calling the Army Community Services at 545-1169 or 545-4679. No reservations will be accepted after Nov. 15.

Migrating eagles will find refuge this winter

American Bald Eagles, preparing now for their annual migration south, will find new security in their favorite winter home.

An 835-acre refuge is being established as a permanent sanctuary for these majestic birds in one of the few remaining unspoiled wintering grounds found within the lower 48 states.

Thanks to Save A Living Thing, a nationwide project sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation and the 7-Eleven Food Stores Division of The Southland Corporation, the refuge is being purchased in time for this year's migration.

Threatened for years by pollution, loss of roosting and nesting areas, and by outright killing, bald eagle populations have been declining. For years, naturalists have expressed concern that these birds, symbols of our national heritage, were headed toward extinction.

The Federation and 7-Eleven joined hands this summer to launch a massive national program to purchase the area as a refuge, and to educate the public about endangered animals.

Success of the program has been outstanding. 7-Eleven's contribution to the program, based on a one cent contribution from the sale of each special Endangered Wildlife Slurpee cup, has been revised upward from an early estimate of $150,000 to now more than $200,000.

Funds collected in excess of the amount required to purchase the refuge will be used for additional public service projects related to endangered species, 7-Eleven officials said.

The refuge, located along the banks of the Missouri River in South Dakota, is the winter home for about 15 per cent of the total bald eagle population of the lower 48 states. Eagles are particularly fond of this site because the river is free of ice during the winter and the eagle's favorite food — catfish, walleyes, shad and carp — are available in abundance.

The Sikorsky UTTAS prototype maneuvers, above, on its first flight at the aircraft plant in Stratford, CT. The Infantry School is the proponent for the development of this advanced helicopter.

Sikorsky UTTAS makes first flight

The Sikorsky YUH-60A Utility Tactical Transport Aircraft System (UTTAS), an advanced technology prototype helicopter being developed for the Army, made its first flight Oct. 17 at the Sikorsky Aircraft plant in Stratford, CT. The Infantry School is the proponent for the development of the UTTAS.

The flight, which consisted of low altitude hovering and limited maneuvering, came more than a month and a half ahead of contract schedule.

The UTTAS is designed to serve as the Army's primary utility transport helicopter of the 1980s. It will carry a full 11-man squad plus a crew of three and has a large cabin that can also be used to carry four ambulance litters or internal cargo.

The UTTAS has a four-blade main rotor, a canted tail rotor and is powered by two General Electric T-700 turbine engines. It is a highly maneuverable and agile helicopter that achieves simplicity, easy maintenance and high reliability through use of advanced, yet proven, technology.

Among the technical advances that offer improvements in reliability are rotor blades using composite titanium/fiberglass, elastomeric rotor head, bifilar vibration absorbers, grease lubricated tail and intermediate gearboxes, and a new lightweight, extremely simple cross beam tail rotor.

The advanced features incorporated in the UTTAS are the most significant technological breakthroughs in the helicopter industry since the advent of the turbine engine in the late 1950s. Substantial credit for these advances must be given to the Army and, in particular, to the Army Aviation Systems Command (AVSCOM), The Air Mobility Research Development Laboratory (AMRDL) and TRADOC, which have funded many major research and development programs to make these advances possible.

Sikorsky is one of two manufacturers competing for an eventual UTTAS production contract. The other competitor is Boeing Vertol Div., Philadelphia, PA. The winner of the competition is not expected to be selected until late 1976, with the first production deliveries estimated for the fall of 1978.

Veterans' Day ceremony scheduled for York Field

The public is invited to observe a Veterans' Day ceremony on York Field at 4:45 p.m. Oct. 25 to honor the memory and accomplishments of veterans of America's wars.

An honor guard and color guard of Co C, 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, an honor platoon of officer candidates from The School Brigade, and a platoon from the WAC Co, Hq Cmd, will participate. The 283rd Army Band will provide music.

LTG (Retired) Reuben B. Jenkins will be reviewing officer, and MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning commander, will be host officer.

Draftees to be released; first all-vol Army since 1940

With the following exceptions, all inductees (draftees) will be released from active duty during the period from Nov. 13-22. Those exceptions are: *Individuals flagged under the provisions of AR 600-31 or who are pending disciplinary action will be retained until action is complete.

*Personnel in post-trial confinement will not be released until completion of their sentences.

This action does not preclude those personnel who desire to complete their 24-month term of service from doing so. Nor does it prevent personnel from reenlisting in RA should they desire. They must, however, state in writing their intent to complete their term and they will be required to serve until their normally scheduled release date. These individuals will be considered volunteers for the remainder of their service. VA benefits accrue only to those who have served at least 18 months on active duty.

Commanders are authorized to grant delay of separation beyond Nov. 22 in those instances where release of personnel would cause undue personal hardship because of currently existing circumstances. This does not mean that delay of separation can be for personal convenience. Its purpose is to preclude undue hardship.

When the early discharge of draftees is completed on Nov. 22, the Army will be a truly all-volunteer force for the first time since 1940.

As Secretary of the Army Callaway stated when making the announcement: "We are proud of these soldiers who were drafted into the Army. They answered the call to service and served honorably and well — many at considerable personal sacrifice. They have been as much responsible for the spirit and pride of the Army as our volunteers. I am confident that if the need for induction arises in the future — which may be the case in event of major war — other young Americans like these will once again served with distinction. I only pray that need will never arise."

The Bayonet, October 24, 1974

"Since I've been in the Army, the longest I've sat still is for this photograph."

SFC Susan Boguta likes to keep active, but was interrupted her busy schedule to find out what she likes about the Army.

"After I graduated from college, I decided to try a technical job, one that would help me learn about flying. Because eventually I'd like to be a pilot. So my training's helped a lot."

"I also enjoy meeting people and talking about my work. So recruiting work has been a natural for me."

"One of the things I always mention to the young people I meet is that the Army's taught me you can do much more than you think you can. The opportunities are here, all you have to do is take advantage of them. And that's what I'm doing."

Today's Army gets better every time a good woman reenlists.

OWC DOLLAR AND SENSE SEMINAR

RED CROSS COURSE OFFERED

A Case Aide Course for American Red Cross Volunteers will be conducted from No. 4 through No. 8. Military dependents who are at least twenty-five years of age and who are interested in performing duties of a social nature are invited to participate. A high school diploma is required and further education is of value. For further information, please call Jean Campbell, 689-8289.

ATLANTA TRIP

All members of the OWC are eligible to purchase tickets for the Atlanta shopping trip on Dec. 4. The tickets are $6 and may be purchased at the OWC Lounge Office (Mondays-Thursdays) and on the final day of ticket sales, at the OWC Christmas Bazaar on Nov. 13, at the Main Officers' Club. Tot Town will be open early and close late on Dec. 4, to accommodate shoppers. The bus will stop at Lenox Square and Phipps in Atlanta and return to the Main Officers' Club parking lot about 7:30 p.m.

OWC CHRISTMAS BAZAAR

Mark Nov. 13 on your calendar and make your Christmas list early because OWC is having their annual Christmas Bazaar early this year! The Bazaar will run from noon to 4 p.m. at the Main Officers' Club and everyone is welcome! This year there will be many new items available as gifts for children such as quiet books, stuffed animals, wooden stilt, puppet theaters, gingham lady-bug check board sets, clotheshorses, puppets, hobbyhorses and many other items. Among the gifts for adults will be leather tooled belts, crocheted purses, three dimensional framed pictures, beaded key chains, hot carrying trays, decorative flower pots, "frankies"-a type of wrap-around dress, jewelry travel cases, and men's ties. To help decorate your home for the holidays, there will be a "Trim the Tree" shop. Pine cone wreaths, cloth puff-ball kissing balls, holly decorated bell pull, decorative gumball Christmas trees, felt boots for candy, and many Christmas tree ornaments will be found in this "shop."

The "white elephant" booth, this year, will have such items as brocade material, decorative wooden wall hangings, wall plaques and many surprises. Come early and have a chance at all items.

To help shoppers quench their thirst and hunger, there will be gingham-aproned ladies selling soft drinks, tea, coffee and bakery items in the mirror room. A baked goods booth will be open to buy "goodies" to take home to enjoy.

There will be one room set aside for the children to shop for their presents they wish to give this year. The Children's Room will be open from 3:30-4:45 p.m. for children 8 and younger to shop, and from 3:45 until closing, all children may shop, for items priced at $5 and under. Santa will greet the young shoppers as they enter the room for their Christmas shopping. No mommies or daddies are allowed in the room, but there will be OWC volunteers to assist the shoppers.

Don't miss this fun-filled, holiday spirited event!

ETS soon? Maybe you'd like part time soldiering

So, full-time soldiering doesn't suit you. After your hitch, you're going to shed those Army greens for the latest style suits of the civilian world.

Not that you don't like soldiering. You don't mind wearing the uniform cause you're not ashamed of being a soldier. You just don't groove on the full-time bit.

There is an alternative, you know. One that many soldiers just don't think about. Why not be a civilian AND a soldier too? You can fulfill that ambition by joining either the Army National Guard or Army Reserve. Usually, there will be at least one such unit within commuting distance of your hometown. Most times you will have a choice. In every case, you will be needed.

Your Army skill, one in which you have become proficient, is being actively sought by the Army's reserve components. Both the Guard and Reserve can offer you a job now. You may not enlist in the same MOS, but, if you are an E7 or below, you can be accepted at your same pay grade. And get this — one weekend a month of duty (all day Saturday and Sunday) plus 15 days of summer training — is all that is required. And you sign for one year at a time. You get paid two days pay for every weekend drill day, plus a day's pay for every day of summer training, which means that you receive 63 days' pay for 39 days of work. And at your same base pay. During summer training, you also get the various quarters and subsistence allowances that you are receiving now.

But that's not all. Recently, Congress passed several bills favorable to parttimers. Members of the Guard and Reserve are now fully covered under SGLI ($20,000). Monthly premiums are deducted from pay checks, just as they are now. And Guardsmen and Reservists may now shop any two days of the month in PX's and commissaries. Spouses may accompany their service members to these locations but may not shop without them. During summer training periods, this restriction for the spouse is lifted.

Of course, you aren't thinking about retirement. But you can credit all those active duty days toward Reserve retirement. Guardsmen and Reservists officially retire when they reach age 60. At that time, they draw retirement pay, on a pro-rated basis, for the rest of their lives. Along with it come all the other full-time benefits: PX, commissary privileges, etc., that retired members of the active establishment enjoy.

Look at it this way: no more than 60 inactive duty retirement points may be credited to a parttimer in any one given retirement year. Therefore, your active duty year, which gives you 365 good retirement points, is the equivalent of about six years of Reserve duty. With, say, two years of active duty before joining the Reserves, you can start working toward retirement with the same number of points as a Guardsman or Reservist with 12 years' experience!

You might ask which is better, the Guard or Reserve. Well, it's basically a matter of personal preference since there's no difference between the components as far as training, equipment, etc., is concerned. They have the same type units, are both trained through federally funded and guided programs, and in case of national emergency, they both become part of the federal military (federalized).

The Guard has an additional mission of being a state force controlled by each state's governor during peacetime. It provides the governors with a ready backup force for civil disasters and emergencies. In fact, the Army Reserve and the Active Army have also provided assistance to states during extreme emergencies, such as the 1972 summer floods on the East Coast. It's just that the Guard is trained more heavily in domestic areas; but still maintaining its federal mission capability. In other words, the Guard has got to be able to handle its federal and state mission equally well.

Now, there's another thing to be said about the Guard and Reserve . . . that's tradition. Some units have histories that date back to colonial days. The Army's reserve components were based, and are still being based, on the principle that our nation's strength is built on our local communities, and how much they are willing to sacrifice for the common good.

Men and women who have joined Guard and Reserve units are local citizens — citizen-soldiers — who join with their neighbors to form an important relationship between the military and the community. They reflect local standards, and, in so doing, inject the attitudes and desires of the civilian world into the military establishment.

And so, for you, the fulltimer who wants to be a parttimer, there is an alternative: the Guard and Reserve, some 650,000 strong (active), are looking for your talents. It's just what you might be looking for.

Grievances?

What to do about hospital complaints

The overall goal of the Patient Affairs Representative Program is to work with the psycho-socio aspects of the patients' illness to enhance recovery with a minimum of discomfort and inconvenience to the patient and his family. Specific objectives are:

a. To resolve problems before they arise by being available from the time a patient enters the hospital, as an in or out patient.

b. To serve as liaison between patients and staff to solve quickly any problems that arise at the lowest level possible. The chain of command will be used when solution is not possible at the local level.

c. To record all complaints, identify potential problem areas and/or personnel, and develop a correctional education program Methods:

Any grievance from an inpatient or outpatient is taken by phone or walk-in and recorded. It is then discussed with the person or persons whom the grievance is against to get both sides of the story. If any assistance can be given to the patient at that time or something done to alleviate the nature of the problem, it will be done so immediately. If it is deemed the person against whom the grievance is being made is carrying out hospital policy this will be passed on to the patient with a proper explanation of the policy and why we could not help them.

NOTE: All grievances are recorded and acted upon as expeditiously as possible. They are reviewed by the people involved; their Department head; Chief of Professional Services, and the Hospital Commander. If the patient is not satisfied by the results of our investigation and our explanation of policy, it is his right to seek assistance elsewhere; i.e., Chief of Professional Services, Hospital Commander, IG, etc.

Cat show scheduled for Kelley Hill

By Bob Thomas

Area cat owners are invited to enter their feline companions in the Seventh Annual Kelley Hill Cat Show, Nov. 9 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The show will be open to all breeds of cats and kittens with five major categories — Kittens, Siamese, Longhair, Shorthair (American Domestic) and Exotic Breeds.

Ribbons will be awarded to first, second and third place winners in each category. Entry is open to civilians as well as military, however, entries are limited to one cat per person. Each person will be responsible for his or her cat. Declawed cats are not eligible. People are urged to get their cat's distemper and rabies shots up to date prior to the cat show.

Judges for the show include a representative from the Metropolitan Animal Shelter, the Chattahoochee Valley Humane Society and a devoted cat lover. Judging will begin at 2 p.m. Call the Kelley Hill Recreation Center before Nov. 7 between 1 p.m. and 10 p.m. for information concerning registration call 544-1721 or 5443079.

Latin best-seller added

Latin best-sellers have been added to the record and prerecorded tape stock assortment of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES).

Updated monthly, the list consists of the top-selling long-play albums and tapes in the various categories of Spanish-language music, including Puerto Rican, Mexican and "Tex-Mex." Individual exchange stores order from the list, which is compiled from information from trade publications and record manufacturers.

The best-sellers are in addition to regular assortments of Spanish-language music sent automatically to AAFES main stores and to an assortment of 25 "easy-listening" Spanish recordings that also can be ordered by the stores.

To further ensure that AAFES meets the music requirements of all its customers, technical representatives visit all stores regularly to inspect the record and tape assortments. The AAFES representatives meet with customers to get their recommendations for additions to the assortment.

AAFES now operates two record distribution centers — in Arlington, TX, and Atlanta, GA — to purchase and distribute tapes and records to exchanges worldwide. The program is designed to achieve increased customer benefits in the form of improved service, lower sell prices and larger and more current selections of ethnic music.

All AAFES outlets are served by the two distribution centers with the exception of those in Europe, Hawaii and the west coast of the United States. Exchanges in those areas are scheduled to be added to the system in early 1975.

Piano recital slated today

The Columbus Music Teachers Assoc. will sponsor a piano recital today, Oct. 25 and a teacher-student workshop on Saturday and Sunday. Renowned concert pianist, teacher and musicologist, Marvin Blickenstaff, has been engaged for these events.

The recital will be presented in the Fine Arts Auditorium at Columbus College and will begin at 8 p.m. It is open to the public. The workshop will be held in the Fine Arts Building at the college with registration at 9 a.m. Saturday. Sessions will be from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.; Sunday sessions are from 2-4:30 p.m. Details may be obtained from Mrs. Gladys Gaylord (327-2195), chairperson for the workshop committee of the Association.

We dedicate October 28th to all the American heroes throughout our nation's history who rallied to her cause in time of war and trouble. Gratefully, we remember the men who served, who fought, and who lay down their lives so that the American dream might survive.

We pause also to honor the veterans of recent wars, who, in our own time, have answered the nation's call to arms, who have put their lives on the line in the hope of a better world and lasting peace among men. Let us pray that their hopes may be realized. Let us work toward their fulfillment . . . that we may be worthy of our young men and the sacrifices they've made.

Many women serve nation well

There is a time for heroines . . . women who through their own achievements inspire other women to new heights.

Veterans urged to have papers recorded free

Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler is urging veterans to have their discharge papers recorded as soon as possible after their separation from service. "This benefit is provided absolutely free in the Superior Court Clerk's office in the county in which the veteran resides," said Wheeler.

Recalling the disastrous fire that occurred in July 1973 at the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis, Wheeler said, "That fire graphically demonstrated the importance of a veteran having his DD-214 form or other Report of Separation recorded so that replacements can be obtained whenever needed." Thousands of veterans' files were destroyed in the St. Louis fire.

Wheeler said that most World War II veterans and Korean War veterans utilized the benefit of having their discharge papers recorded, but the practice apparently has not been followed as widely by Vietnam Veterans.

Advising all veterans, regardless of when they may have been in service, to have their discharge papers put on permanent record, Wheeler said, "Should a veteran ever lose his original papers, it becomes a simple matter for him to secure a copy from his county courthouse.

"But if he fails to have his papers recorded, then the loss of the originals can result in considerable confusion and delays for the veteran, his dependents or survivors in filing for certain benefits and services."

Any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist veterans in having their discharge papers permanently recorded.

special. These women are surrogates for countless other women who are making contributions, known and unknown, to our society and nation. The activities of these Women of the Year are diverse; their backgrounds vary. But all are women.

The honors afforded these women again make an important and popular statement about women in our time. Women are moving forward. Even to those women who serve in smaller spheres, the achievement of our Women of the Year cannot help but encourage all women to fulfill their highest potential, and to live their lives with a heightened sense of dedication and purpose.

Organization day filled with activities

A picnic, games and displays were highlights of the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde organization day observed at Harmony Church last week.

The "Patriots" were organized in 1917 and saw service in France with the 4th Inf Div. In World War II, the regiment was employed as separate battalions, serving in Alaska, the Aleutian Islands, and Europe. The 58th Armored Inf Bn fought through France and Germany with the 8th Armored Div. Today, the rapid mobility of their armored personnel carriers provides the 197th with a potent mechanized infantry capability.

The festivities included a family picnic unit sports featuring the grenade throw, a tug of war, inverted crawl, and a push ball contest.

An equipment display on Patriot Field and rides on the battalion's M-113 Armored Personnel Carriers for the families of the soldiers were also provided.

A rough and tumble time was had by all as the 1/58th, 197th Inf Bde celebrated its organization day. (Photo by C. B. Hoover.)

Durham, organ and PVT Steve Cody, lead guitar, performed at a recent mid-week chapel service at Harmony Church Chapel No. 3. Miss Linda Wilson, the reigning Miss Ft. Benning, sang at the service with the band. (Photo by Bob Thomas)

Is there a doctor in the house?

By Howard Hodge

Is there a doctor in the house? Sometimes asked in a theater or at a ball game, there are many patients asking the same question while waiting to see a doctor — in his office. They don't know what is happening, but it's making them mad when they call up to make an appointment and the voice says, "I'm sorry but we have no openings for appointments for two and a half weeks." What do you mean two and a half weeks? I called to make an appointment now. I need to see the doctor now, not in several weeks. If that sounds familiar, try this one on for size.

Nurse, what seems to be the hold up? I had an appointment at one-thirty and now it's five minutes til three. I mean it's unreasonable; I have to pick up my children in ten minutes and I'm sick or I wouldn't be here. What am I going to do? "I'm sorry, but the doctor was called off on an emergency and I don't know when he will be back."

I'll tell you what. I'm starting to get tired of the crowded waiting rooms and the long wait to get in to see the doctor. I'm beginning to wonder if there is a doctor in the hospital. These are examples of complaints that have surfaced and caused rumors of a doctor shortage.

In the following story are questions that were asked of COL Anton L. Hitzelberger, the Commander of Martin Army Hospital.

it takes a little longer

(Q) The first and main question, let us cut right to the bone. Is there a doctor shortage at the Ft. Benning hospital?

(A) Yes we do. We have 78 practicing MD's, this is what is authorized. Our recognized requirements for doctors is 104. In addition we have an imbalance. We like many Army and civilian hospitals have no more general practitioners. Let's take the

Yes, there is, But...

gynecologist, one of the most important doctors in the minds of expectant mothers. We presently have five assigned, there used to be 10.

(Q) What does the workload of the five gynecologists consist of?

(A) Each doctor is required to see his patients or cover the entire OBGyn service in off duty hours. He has to attend to the women already in the hospital awaiting to give birth, or to assure care before and after the birth. The doctor has to have time off to rest and be with his family. The gynecologist has to take his turn at manning the emergency room. He is required to review the records of each of his patients and review the records of other doctors for quality control. All the doctors have to put in their time on the different boards throughout the medical facility in order to keep up their credentials at the hospital. This requirement is for all military hospitals and many of the civilian hospitals.

(Q) Why does a doctor have to be on any board?

(A) They are required to put a certain amount of hours on the different boards to put in suggestions for improvement, to see if the staff is doing all that is possible, and to see that the highest medical standards are being met. Martin Army Hospital is also a teaching hospital for the family practice residents and other training programs.

(Q) How many hours does the average doctor put in?

(A) The average is about 52 hours per week in the hospital, that does not count the hours that the doctor puts in at home to answer the phone when he is on call. And, he has to ask questions from the hospital staff and decide if he must go in or not.

(Q) Sir, let me turn to the subject of the hospital staff. The staff seems to be taking over more of the work with the patients, that the doctor used to do, and that we have come to expect over the years. Is the staff competent?

(A) Yes, they are competent, but for an example, let me refer back to the gynecologist situation. We have five active gynecologists. The acceptable workload for each doctor is 20 to 22 delivery equivalents per month. Last quarter we delivered an average of 126 babies. That is a heavy load. Then you have the unexpected appear. When a hysterectomy or a caesarian section is required, it takes two or three doctors in the operating room. This takes away from the patients that are waiting impatiently out there in the clinic. When you add this up, patients and doctors are pushed to their limits.

This brings us back to the staff. The staff is now required to take on more of a responsibility to assist the doctor in order that he has more time to spend with the patient load. We're into a program that trains the staff (nurses, medics, doctors' assistants) to become experts qualified to handle many of the tasks the doctor used to handle.

What we really have here is the team concept. We must look at the whole team. When we are short personnel in any one area, whether it is nurses, technicians, etc., it slows down the system and the service. When you're short nurses, it takes longer to get all the patients prepared to see the doctor. When you're short lab technicians, it takes longer to get lab results. When you're short a radiologist, it takes longer to get the x-rays read and back to the doctor. We have such an abundance of x-rays taken and such shortage of radiologists that we now send many x-rays downtown to be read.

(Q) Then COL Hitzelberger, what you are saying is that when there is an imbalance anywhere in the staff, it affects the quantity, but not the quality of the work. Is this true for the many medical clinics all over main post that serve the soldiers near their units?

(A) Precisely. All of our people are experts in their field. They know what limits they must work in. The medics and the doctors' assistants are trained to treat soldiers for minor illnesses or injury. They know that if there is any doubt in their minds, the soldier is to be sent to the doctor for evaluation.

These staff members save the doctors valuable time and take care of many people who don't need to see the doctor.

(Q) Sir, that sounds a little offensive; most people might feel that when they come in, they know that they are sick and they don't want a staff person doing what they want the doctor to do. Do you see this as a problem?

(A) Yes, it may be offensive to the individual initially because they don't receive the physician's attention they have been used to. Time and education of our people will overcome this problem. Once they realize that the staff personnel are qualified, they will learn to accept and trust the staff's new responsibility.

(Q) Sir, we're talking about the increased role of the staff members because of the imbalance of doctors. What is the population of the military community that the hospital serves?

(A) When you consider the active and retired military and their dependents, there are approximately 70,000 persons who rely on medical facilities at Ft. Benning.

(Q) That is a lot of people to take care of and there are only 78 doctors to take care of the situation. Why are there only 78 practicing doctors?

(A) Because there is a shortage of physicians Army wide M.A.H. has been allocated 85% of our true need. The strength of authorized doctors on any post is determined by the number of active duty soldiers, not the number of dependents or retired living in the surrounding area. This is controlled by law set by Congress, not the Department of the Army.

(Q) The draft is off and most of the doctors were brought in under the draft, a few under the federally funded assistance program. What will happen when no more doctors come in under the draft and those on duty now who decide to leave?

(A) There are several things the Army is doing. The physicians bonus is now reality to attract the doctors on duty to remain, however many young physicians will not receive the bonus at this time. We are opening the door for retired military doctors to return as civilian doctors. We plan to hire civilian and military MD's should they apply for a position.

(Q) Sir, I would like to bring up a subject that I have heard the most complaints on — the emergency room. After hours a person has an emergency arise and he rushes to the hospital to be taken care of only to be stopped by someone to answer a lot of questions and then sit in the waiting room, sometimes for hours, to be waited on. Is this true, and if so why does it happen?

(A) Yes, it does happen and here is why. The problem of illness or injury and emergency touches every family in time. The needs of the military and dependents are no different than any other person. And when the occasions arise, they want help. The emergency room is just that, it is for LIFE and DEATH situations, but the function of an ER is misused or misunderstood by the majority of people who come to the emergency room. We see between 100 to 200 patients per day in the emergency room.

For example, you come to the hospital with a child who has a three day cold. The nurse knows the signs to check for more serious illness, also she knows that the doctor is in the back room working on a soldier who was shot on the range during training and that the MPs informed her that there is an ambulance in route with several persons that have been involved in a car accident. You may have to sit and wait while the doctor attends these true emergencies. To you there is nothing more serious than your child's care and you become upset at the lack of immediate attention.

In reality, 90% of the people who come to the emergency room have social emergencies or use the emergency room for convenience

(Q) What is a social emergency?

(A) A social emergency is one that people come in for care not necessarily by understanding the immediate need for the medical care. For example, you have a young couple with their first young child and no transportation during duty hours. Frequently "daddy" is required to make a decision when it comes to the health of the kids. On the other hand, an seasoned mother with several children has experience and she takes the required action and cares for the child herself. Then the following day, if the child's fever has not dropped, she brings the child to the clinic.

(Q) Out of the real emergencies, how many are admitted to the hospital?

(A) Out of one-hundred persons who come to the emergency room no more than 5 need admission but, I want to assure our community that we do everything possible to insure that the real medical needs are taken care of. We have to rely on CHAMPUS programs in various specialties and we will have to in the future. No doubt, we cannot have all the specialty services in all of Health Services Command's thirty-seven hospitals. Neither is this possible in small or medium-sized civilian hospitals. Waiting for service is not an invention exclusively limited to Army hospitals. This unfortunately happens in the civilian world in the United States as well as other countries. Constraints in care or needs, real or implied, occur the world over.

I would like to say that if you need to be admitted to a hospital and receive care, we will do everything possible to provide you with this care. The hospital staff and I want to be positive in our approach. True, there are constraints we have to contend with but look at the many positive approaches to resolve problems we have taken and we feel we can be proud of. There may be inconveniences — but I feel we are on target when it comes to our medical mission.

HALLOWEEN

Halloween will be celebrated by the youngsters on Thursday, Oct. 31. Consider important safety features when devising your child's costume. Such as: reflector tape, flashlights, a mask that will not impair the child's vision and a properly fitted costume that insures freedom of movement. Parents are advised to limit the hours of Trick or Treating to 6-9 p.m. Insist that the youngsters move from door to door in small groups in a neighborhood that is familiar to the child. Parents should carefully examine consumables given to children prior to the child taking the first bite. It is requested that fruits not be given as a treat. Parents are also advised to be extremely cautious when driving in areas that children are Trick or Treating in. Make this a safe and happy holiday for yours and mine.

3/7th's Co C has the best platoon

The First Platoon of Co C, 3/7th Inf was named the best platoon in the battalion during the "Cotton-balers" recent Operational Readiness Test (ORT) and was awarded a three-day pass.

Through the hard work of the men in the 1st Platoon and the leadership ability of LT Gary Nicholson and SFC Preston Dawson, platoon leader and sergeant, the platoon set out on the ORT to prove to the rest of the battalion what they themselves already knew. "With professional soldiers such as these," commented LT Nicholson, "a changing situation or an unexpected development is a challenge rather than something to fear."

The first platoon is not perfect and does not pretend to be, but what it has going for it is 'esprit de corps' and the willingness to do its best and learn from a mistake and those of others.

Two teams still undefeated

197th football playoffs going strong

By C. B. HOOVER

The 197th Inf Bde football league ended its first week of play-offs last week with two teams remaining undefeated.

Co C remains the only undefeated team in the 197th Spt Bn League, defeating HHC, 1/58th Inf 7-0, the 72nd Eng Co 26-0, and A Btry, 2/10th FA 19-0.

Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th Inf dropped its first game to Co C, 3/7th Inf 8-0. The second game of the play-offs saw Cbt Spt Co eliminated from the competition by Co A, 197th Spt Bn, 13-0.

Co C, 3/7th Inf continued its winning ways by defeating the 298th Sig Plt 2-0 to remain one of the two teams in the play-offs still undefeated.

The news was not all bad for the teams of the 2/10th FA as A Btry zipped by Co C, 1/58th Inf 6-0 in its first game. But the second game left A Btry shut out by Co C, Spt Bn 25-0.

HHC fell victim to the 298th Sig Plt, losing its opener 13-6. Co A, 197th Spt Bn put the finishing touches to the elimination by defeating HHB, 6-0.

The 298th Sig Plt put a few tears in the hides of the "Paper Tigers" of Co A, 197th Spt Bn, shutting them out 12-0. Following the victory over Co A, they went on the next evening to spike the guns of HHB, 2/20th FA with another win 13-6.

Bad times fell on the 298th Sig Plt as Co C, 3/7th Inf edged them out 2-0 in their third game to break up the team's winning ways.

The men of the "Patrois" League were quickly eliminated from the brigade play-offs last week.

Co C, 1/68th Inf dropped its first game to A. Btry, 2/10 FA, 6-0.

There seemed a ray of hope for Co C as they zapped HHC, 1/58th Inf 14-0 in its second game, but it faded quickly in their third game as the 72nd Eng Co shut them out 6-0.

HHC, 1/58th Inf was unable to put it together losing to Co C, Spt Bn, 7-0 then to Co C, 1/58th.

Airborne soldiers give TSB a hard time

By RICK WASSER

Flag-football fans who predicted a Pioneer dominated TSB entry in the post level play-offs this year ended up only half right with the Tuesday night defeat of Co D, 1/29th Inf.

The Delta Company Pioneers were summarily knocked out of The School Brigade tournament after being shut out by 4th Bn, TSB, 12-0.

The Airborne soldiers from 4th Bn, who handed Co D their first loss in the tourney, 6-0 earlier this week, will take on Co A of the 1/29th for the Brigade championship tonight. Both teams will then be entered in the post flag-football championship regardless of the outcome.

Co A assured themselves of a berth in the post tourney with successive victories over 14th Co and 4th Bn, TSB.

Teams opposing Co A of the Pioneers in the post championship will find themselves up against a very nervewrecking offense, to say the least. The offensive team, led by Charles Ledbetter at quarterback, is famous for coming up with key plays in the final seconds of the ball game.

And the Ledbetter-to-Sandy MacPherson passing duo has accounted for 75% per cent of Co A's impressive rushing statistics. Small wonder they finished first in the 1/29th league and are favored to emerge the 'numero uno' team in TSB.

In Tuesday night's contest, Co D of the Pioneers just couldn't get going against 4th Bn, TSB. But the story of their lives, in Co D—you can't win ball games if you don't score any points.

After a tourney opening 6-0 loss to the Airborne men of the 4th Bn, the grunts from Co D 1/29th Inf, were out for revenge, to be sure. But vengeance and football don't mix, at least according to the game officials, they don't, and the Pioneers lost a lot of ground on penalties.

The 4th Bn took a first half initiative with a lot of short screen passes, that all added up to a big touchdown that was called back because of an Airborne penalty.

When Delta Company finally got the ball back again, Jeff Smith carried for thirty yards as the 1/29th team threatened for the first time in enemy territory. But the tremendous run was called back, due to a "roughness" penalty at the line.

On the next play, Steve Hebert's key interception set the stage for another Airborne touchdown, but it too was called back because of a penalty, and at the half the score stood, 0-0.

Jeff Smith opened the second half for the Pioneers by hitting Frankie Lynch with two consecutive passes. But four more incompletions in a row, and the 4th Bn took over again.

The Airborne team combined a running and passing offense to get to the Pioneer twenty yard line, but before any real damage could be done, Co D's Jeff Smith intercepted and ran back for 15 yards.

But an erratic Smith pass wound up in the hands of 4th Bn tailback, Joseph Lee who intercepted and ran it in for the score. They missed the conversion attempt, but led the Pioneers, 6-0.

With less than two minutes to go, Frankie Lynch dropped two Smith passes in a row, one of them in the end zone, and the Pioneers had to give the ball back to the Airborne team.

But the 4th Bn saw some 30 seconds left on the clock, and they wanted to play football, so they promptly added insult to injury with another touchdown in the closing seconds of the game to set the Pioneers down in defeat, 12-0.

4th Bn and Co A of the 1-29th will battle for first place supremacy in the TSB league later this week.

YAC football rundown

The Redskins moved to first place in the Biddy League after they defeated the Dolphins 28-18. David Rogers scored two of his three touchdowns on long runs from scrimmage. David, the Redskin Fullback, also scored on a 65 yard kickoff return. Richard Bell of the Dolphins scored all of his team's points.

The Razorbacks tied the last place Lions, 6-6. In Pee Wee league, the second place Redskins bucked the Rams, 26-6 and the first place Vikings slid by the Buffalo Bills, 6-0.

The Knights of the Doughboy League defeated the Raiders, 12-6. The Patrois upended the still victorious Dolphins, 14-0.

The Pony League saw the Undefeated Wolverines rally in a close contest against the Steelers to win 26-20. The rally came in the form of Wolverine Steve Mitchell who made a game saving interception in the fourth quarter and ran for the touchdown.

In other Pony League action, the Jets triumphed over the Rams 20-14.

There will be no Little League Football games tomorrow.

Datsun wins the EPA mileage test. Again.

On September 20, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency published the results of its mileage tests of 1975 domestic and imported cars to be sold in the United States.

The Datsun B-210 came in first for best highway and city mileage. Hardly a surprise. Our Datsun 1200 placed first in 1973, and the B-210 is first in its weight class for 1974.

Datsun's great engineering made this track record possible. But gas economy is only part of our economy story. There's Datsun's low maintenance plus high resale value. Also the long list of features you get as standard equipment at the low sticker price. See your Datsun Dealer for an enjoyable test drive.

RREO instructor spends time practicing Tang Soo Do

By C. B. Hoover

Is he a boxer? A master of Kung Fu or Tae Kwon Do? No, but SGT Joseph W. Mitchell, a race relations instructor for the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, is a nice guy to have around. SGT Mitchell practices Tang Soo Do, one of the Korean martial arts that's thirteen hundred years old.

SGT Mitchell's experience in Tang Soo Do started five years ago when he was studying Tae Kwon Do as a civilian, in Tallahassee, FL.

After entering the Army, he heard that Korea was where the best instructors were, and that's where he went.

"In Korea, a friend of mine introduced me to the art of Tang Soo Do. I watched several matches where Tae Kwon Do and Tang Soo Do were used. I decided that Tang Soo Do was the more aggressive form of the martial arts and enrolled as a student," commented SGT Mitchell.

Continuing to explain why he had selected

Tang Soo Do, SGT Mitchell stated, "Being a history buff, the history of the sport, and the aggressive nature of its form, intrigued me.

"While studying in Korea we were able to work with the instructors six days a week. However, if we were unable to find an instructor, other students were more than willing to work out with us."

SGT Mitchell teaches other members of the battalion and participates in an extensive daily program to maintain his proficiency in the sport.

Secrecy is an important word for people who practice Tang Soo Do. "You don't advertise who you are or what you do."

Although unable to find out just what standing SGT Mitchell has, it was discovered that he is an advanced student, and is fully qualified to instruct.

"Presently I am in the process of organizing a private class downtown. It will be meeting on Mondays and Wednesdays, depending on the size. Students, however, may be each night if they desire," concluded SGT Mitchell.

Fall fishing makes life exciting

By DAVE DEUTSCHER

Fishing in the Ft. Benning area this time of year has about as many different faces as the autumn weather.

Cold fronts, high winds, dense fog, and low water are commonplace and each has an impact on fish and fishermen. The clear, bright, crisp skies that accompany a cold front seem to turn bass off. Maybe it just drives them into deep holes or under dense brush, but I find the results frustrating at best.

On the other hand, those cool spells have helped in many ways. Water temperatures have dropped and big bass have been moving into shallow, easy-to-fish water, insect hatches have been retarded, resulting in fierce competition among the fish for food (including your lures); and best of all, boat traffic has decreased.

I think all true sportsmen recognize that every boater, skier, swimmer, and camper has just as much right to the lake as the fisherman. But it's refreshing to launch a boat without waiting in line; find your favorite hot-spot unoccupied; anchor without being rocked by passing wakes; and to work a submerged island that hasn't been turned to froth by a pretty young blonde on water skis.

I'm sure we fisherman aren't always welcome with our loose hooks, beer cans, noisy motors, foul language and miles of monofilament. But at least fall fishing allows the angler to enjoy his vices in solitude.

Winds this time of year are strong and dangerous and it doesn't take much blowing to tire a rower's arms or to wear out a trolling battery, but windy days can be an asset. Bass and crappie fishermen can take advantage of nature and drift with the wind to locate fish. Also the wind causes a rippled surface which diffuses penetrating sun rays and allows big fish to move shallower on structure. The wind will force baitfish onto shorelines and around visible cover; and you can bet that some prey-fish will be nearby. Scientific anglers will appreciate the effects of choppy waves on oxygen levels and on water color around points, run-offs, and clay banks.

There's something about foggy mornings that tell a fisherman he's going to be successful. I can't explain it, but you know what I mean. But a word of caution is in order. Check your car and trailer lights even if you'll only be traveling during the daylight hours. Heavy fog can reduce visibility to almost zero regardless of the time of day. If you're a crappie fisherman who prefers to do your angling at night, let me warn you about the autumn fog in this area. I vividly recall two nights last year that were cold and miserable because an unexpected blanket of fog closed in on us before we could get off the river. Spotlights and maps were virtually useless. When you can't see, distances and direction are greatly distorted. The best solution is to be prepared to make a night of it with blankets and a hot thermos. Previous discussions with your wife may avoid panic and over-reaction on her part.

Last spring we could roar up and down the creeks at high speed leaving tidal waves and rooster-tails as testimony to how much gas we could burn. Nowadays those creeks are low and previously unnoticed stumps, rocks, and humps lurk just under the surface waiting to ruin a twenty dollar prop or cause a sudden flip into ice-cold water. Now is the time to make notes and mark maps showing locations of islands, gravel beds, cuts and other forms of structure that will hold fish when the water-level rises.

Tactics for taking bass must be modified, too. Don't hesitate to try a noisy spinner-bait on the flats or toss a weightless worm into a weed bed. As the water gets colder, the metabolism of fish will slow down. Switch to a very slow retrieve.

Pick-ups this time of year are often light and hard to detect. Don't let that tiny TAP-TAP mislead you; it could be a real monster. Bass tend to break up into smaller schools so you may find it more productive to keep moving rather than sit on one piece of structure.

Jiggging a spoon or yo-yoing a tail-spinner might entice a strike along a trough whereas a crawling worm might go unnoticed by a half-sleeping bass. Low water normally spells clear water so it might help to switch to lighter line. If your summer-time shelf isn't paying off as a result of low water, move a little closer to deeper water and search for a secondary break. Chances are, you'll locate your favorite bunch of lunkers.

I love fall fishing for a lot of reasons, with big bass being number one on that list. My wife likes it because I can fish till sunset and still get home early enough to help the kids with their homework.

Steelers smash Rams, Wolverines next

A 78 yard touchdown pass highlighted the game between the Steelers and the Rams in Pony League action last Saturday.

The touchdown play from Steeler quarterback Tony West to tight end Fred Tramel iced the game for them in the fourth quarter as they went on to win the game, 20-12.

The Rams, after coming back from two straight losses kept the game scoreless through the first quarter. Midway in the second quarter, Steeler running back Bob Jenik blasted over the middle for four yards and the first score. Ernest Hardin added the extra points, making the score 8-0.

The Rams fought back to score but missed the extra point giving the Steelers a two point lead at the end of the first half.

The Steelers kicked off the start of the second half and the game became more exciting. The first play offered by the Rams was a screen pass, but Tramel, playing defensive end, played it perfectly and picked off the pass and went five yards for a TD. The Rams once again came back and closed the gap at 14-12.

Late in the fourth quarter, Rams' field goal kicker tried a 20 yard boot, but it was blocked by the Steeler defense. The Steelers took over, and on second down, West threw his touchdown pass.

That victory put the Steelers in second place behind the undefeated Wolverines who play this Saturday.

OCT

WITCHES AND WARLOCKS have their big day on Oct. 31, and this bewitching Miss from St. Pete, FL, Pam Thomason, is evidently concocting her own special boo brew. But whatever bubbly Halloween concoction you might enjoy, if you drink, don't drive — unless your vehicle is a broomstick. It could prove to be more than a haunting experience.

Football tourney set

The Ft. Benning 1974 Company Level Flag Football Tournament will be held at Gowdy Field and Doughboy Stadium Oct. 30 through Nov. 8.

The championship will be determined by a double elimination type tournament. Nine teams selected during major unit tournaments will compete. Official National Touch and Flag Football Rules will govern tournament play.

A total of 17 games will be played and appropriate team and individual awards will be presented to winner and runner-up teams.

The first four games scheduled to play Oct. 30 will be played in two locations. Gowdy Field will see the 34th Med Bn versus the 197th Inf Bde team No. 1 at 6:30 p.m. Then at 7:30 p.m., the 598th Lt Maint will challenge MEDDAC.

Doughboy Stadium action will include TSB Team No. 1 against the 586th Engrs at 6:30 p.m. and the 197th Inf Bde Team No. 2 against TSB Team No. 2, 7:30 p.m.

Careers work together

"A military career and a marriage works out great, if you have an understanding husband and are not fussy about housework," said Brigitte Haines, Columbus College ROTC student.

Success, the oplate of some and the ultimate goal of many, has been a gutsy business for Brigitte who was born in Grietswald, East Germany, and relocated with her family in Berlin in 1950. After high school graduation she entered the Free University of Berlin in 1967 to study medicine. She met a U.S. Army officer, married him in 1970, and when he was assigned to the Republic of Vietnam, she followed, living at Hue where she taught German and English to the Vietnamese people under a USAID education program.

They returned to Ft. Dix, N.J., for reassignment and Brigitte enrolled at Trenton State College to begin studies in elementary education. Her husband, an infantry captain, graduated from West Point, then was reassigned to Ft. Benning.

Brigitte entered the Columbus College ROTC program when it was opened to women in 1973. An honor student with a grade point average of 3.8 in spite of an average load of 24 quarterhours, Brigitte will graduate with a degree in elementary education in January, 1975. She speaks German, French, Vietnamese and English. "The ROTC program has taught me self confidence and I am able to meet people with the same desires," she said.

A law degree is her ultimate goal. After graduation she plans to gain further experience through an appointment in the Military Police Corps.

She enjoys reading, cooking and sewing, and plans to renew her training in Judo as soon as her schedule permits.

Car Rally scheduled for Traffic Circle

18th Rep Det takes to the field

By Ted Williams

The 18th Rep Det, a unit of the 36th Engr Gp, last week conducted a Field Training Exercise in preparation for their annual Operational Readiness Training Test (ORTT).

The exercise began last Thursday morning with a load out of the unit's TO&E equipment, and the issue of protective masks and weapons. At 1 p.m., the unit moved out on a tactical motor march to the selected area of occupation. Within a few hours, seven GP medium tents, five GP small tents and one mess tent were erected, sections and team ready to process replacements, and the mess section standing by to servechow.

Thursday night, the soldiers of the 18th gathered in small groups for informal discussions about tactics and the next day's training. Friday morning, each section conducted simulated replacement operations. After another outstanding meal from the mess section, the 18th marched to a scheduled area for an afternoon of tactical CBR training.

Following supper, the men of the 18th Rep Det prepared for the most challenging part of the FTX.

An advance party left the area to make a reconnaissance of an alternate position. After dark, the order to strike camp was given. Using only the red filters on their flashlights the entire unit dismantled their tents, loaded up the vehicles and conducted a tactical motor march to the new location.

Upon arrival there, men from the advanced party guided each section into their respective positions. Again using only red lights, the soldiers of the 18th erected their GP medium and GP small tents, and were ready to process replacements within two hours. Saturday morning, the unit struck camp and conducted a tactical motor march back to main post.

This FTX marked the first time that the 18th had gone to the field with its TO&E personnel and equipment. Most of the personnel will agree that the mess section deserves special recognition for their efforts. They prepared some pretty good chow under tactical conditions in the field.

Retirement ceremony scheduled for CSM Gergen

Retirement ceremonies for Post CSM Theron V. Gergen were held on York Field in front of Infantry Hall at 10 a.m. on Oct. 31.

Participating in the ceremonies were three companies of NCO's from the 1/29th Inf and the Military Dog Detachment.

CSM Joseph Gagnon of the 1/29th was the commander of the troops. CSM Gergen was the reviewing officer, and MG Thomas M. Tarpley, Ft. Benning commander, and BG William R. Richardson, former assistant commandant of The Infantry School, were host officers.

CSM Gergen was assigned Sergeant Major of the U.S. Army Infantry School on July 1, 1973. He assumed the position of Post Command Sergeant Major, whole remaining CSM of The Infantry School, on July 4, 1974.

He first entered the Army in January, 1951. He attended Airborne School in 1951 and Ranger School in 1952.

His past assignments include 25th Division, Korea, January, 1954-1956; 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, Japan, 1956-1960; 101st Airborne Division, Ft. Campbell, KY, 1960-1961; training paratroopers, Saudi Arabia, 1961-1963; 1st Cavalry, Vietnam, 1967-1968; 101st Airborne Division, Vietnam, November, 1968-August, 1970; Sergeant Major, Ranger Department, Ft. Benning, 1970-August, 1971.

He was Command Sergeant Major of the Third U.S. Army, Ft. McPherson, GA prior to his assignment to The Infantry School.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star; Bronze Star Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters; Meritorious Service Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster; Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters; Air Medal with ten Oak Leaf Clusters; Combat Infantryman's Badge with second award; Master Parachutist Badge, and Royal Saudi Arabian Parachutist Badge.

Benning exceeds CFC goal

Ft. Benning has exceeded its 1975 Tri-Community Combined Federal Campaign goal of $145,000. On Oct. 29, $160,142.33 had been contributed to the campaign by 31 post units.

Fourteen units reached 100 per cent or more of their goals. Several other major units plan to continue canvassing for the campaign until they have reached all the personnel within their units.

Those who haven't given their fair share, but desire to do so, still have time to donate through the "keyman" in their units or organizations.

ROTC cadets tour Benning

A group of senior ROTC cadets from Appalachian State Univ. in North Carolina toured Ft. Benning last week, including a visit to the 1st Bn, 28th Inf (Pioneers) of The School Brigade.

The Pioneers played host to the North Carolina students over a two-day period, giving them a realistic indication of what the Army is all about.

The future officers watched a Scout Dog Demonstration, attended a live fire artillery shoot by C Btry, 83rd FA, and viewed an actual Infantry problem in progress at Rowan Hill.

In addition they were treated to a tour of the 1/29th area of operation in the Harmony Church sector of the post, which included a guided tour of the track and wheel motor pools and an orientation briefing by Pioneer commander, LTC Kenneth S. Pond.

"I may be too small to trick, but I sure enjoy the treats," says 9-month old Jenny McBride, daughter of LT and Mrs. Dennis McBride, 197th SpBn, 197th Inf Bde during the unit's Halloween party last week. (Photo by C. B. Hoover)

New GI Bill headed for White House

ATLANTA — Reliable sources in Washington have informed the Georgia Department of Veterans Service that a long-awaited veterans' education bill is ready to go to the White House for Presidential approval. The bill is not expected to reach the President, however, until after the Congress reconvenes on Nov. 19. President Ford has hinted that he may veto the measure if he considers it "too inflationary," and supporters of the bill feel that by waiting until after Congress is back in session they will have ample strength to override a Presidential veto.

The latest version of the bill (H.R. 12628) known as the Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, contains essentially the same provisions as did an earlier proposed measure.

Included among these provisions are:

A 22.7 per cent increase in educational assistance allowance rates which would boost the monthly allowance for a single veteran from $110 to $270; a married veteran's allowance would be increased from $261 to $321 a month; a married veteran with one child would receive $366 a month (the current rate is $298) and another $22 a month for each additional dependent;

An increase of 18.2 per cent in the monthly training assistance allowance for veterans pursuing a full time apprentice or other on-job training program; More liberalized eligibility requirements for disabled Vietnam veterans to train under vocational rehabilitation programs;

An increase of 18.2 per cent in educational allowance for veterans enrolled in PREP, flight training, or correspondence education courses;

An extension of maximum entitlement to educational assistance benefits from 36 months to 45 months with the additional time to be used in obtaining a standard undergraduate college degree;

The authorization of supplementary assistance to veterans or eligible wives, widows and children by direct loans of up to $600 per school year to cover educational costs not otherwise provided for under any other Federal loan or educational grant programs.

All amendments in the proposed measure would become effective the date the bill is enacted except that the increase in educational assistance allowance rates would be retroactive to Sept. 1, 1974, and the new loan program would become effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Mailing deadlines set for Christmas

The U.S. Postal Service has announced deadlines for mailing Christmas cards and packages. Cards and packages should be mailed early to insure that they reach their destinations by Dec. 25.

First class cards and letters to the continental 48 states and Hawaii and Alaska should be mailed by Dec. 15. First class parcels to the 48 states should be mailed by Dec. 10, and packages to Hawaii and Alaska by Nov. 30. Cards and packages sent air mail to any of the 50 states must be mailed by Dec. 20.

Packages and cards to overseas destinations should be mailed according to the following schedule:

Air mail cards to the Azores, Canada or Africa should be mailed by Dec. 9; to the Near East (Ethiopia, Iran, Israel, Saudi Arabia and Turkey), the Far East (Burma, Australia, Indonesia, etc.), and South and Central American by Dec. 2.

Cards sent first class and packages sent under the Space Available (SAM) system should be mailed in the following order: to the Near East by Nov. 1; to South and Central America and Africa by Nov. 11; and to the Azores and Canada by Nov. 25. Packages sent to Europe and Far East by SAM should be mailed by Nov. 20.

Packages sent under the Parcel Airlift (PAL) system should be sent by Nov. 7 to the Near East; by Nov. 18 to South and Central America and Africa; by Nov. 27 to Europe and the Far East; and by Nov. 30 to the Azores and Canada.

NOV

Alert Cable TV preparing Benning for hookups

WOMETCO Communications announced last week that Alert Cable TV, Inc. will be the operating subsidiary for the Ft. Benning system. All questions and information should be addressed to Alert Cable TV, P.O. Box 2008 or telephone 687-6109.

Alert's system manager, Mr. Frank Leiter, told the Bayonet this week that the system is being built as fast as possible.

The Main Post area (except Bouton Heights) will be ready for initial installations by Nov. 15. When asked about the rest of the post, Leiter said that Custer Terrace, Bouton Heights, MAH, Kelley Hill and the Custer Road Area would all be ready for initial installation by Dec. 15.

HOW DO I GET HOOKED UP?

Personnel in barracks, BEQs and BOQs who desire Cable TV service can make application by calling 687-6109 or by going to the Cable Office to pick up your application. Applications will also be available at the convenience PX on main post and the Mall at various times during the initial promotion in November.

Cable TV will not be available to troop barracks in the Sand Hill or Harmony Church areas at this time.

Company commanders who desire Cable TV that must be funded through the Army should direct their requests to the custodian of the Central Post Fund.

Personnel in Family Housing will receive a brochure through the mail around the second week in November explaining Cable TV in general. This brochure will also have the channels carried and the installation and monthly rate structure included.

A special priority subscription application card is attached to the brochure so that you may send this back to the Cable Office indicating your name, address and the number of TV outlets you would like installed. This card is already addressed and stamped so you just drop it in the nearest mailbox at no charge to you.

LIMITED TIME OFFER

Alert Cable TV is going to offer free installation on the first outlet to anyone who calls, applies in person, or sends back the self-addressed card included with the brochure, before Nov. 30. This offer only applies to those people located within the service area — Ft. Benning.

It is obvious that with the large response anticipated to the free offer, installation to everyone cannot be made the same day. A representative will call to confirm the returned application and make an appointment for your installation as soon as service is available in your area.

FREE SERVICE

Alert Cable TV also announced that it will provide one outlet free of installation and monthly service charges to the following government-owned structures on Ft. Benning: Churches or other religious organizations, Officer, NCO and Service Clubs and Schools of a civilian nature.

Those responsible for the direction or management of the above organizations should direct their requests to the custodian of the Central Post Fund or call or write directly to the Cable Office, care of Mr. Leiter.

COL Ware becomes Director of Plans and Training

COL Fletcher K. Ware has assumed the position of Director of Plans and Training. He replaces COL Roy R. May Jr. who retired yesterday. COL May has been the Director since October, 1971 when he returned from Vietnam.

After graduation from the United States Military Academy in 1954, COL Ware attended the Infantry Officers' Basic Course, Airborne Training, and Ranger Training at Ft. Benning. His first duty assignment was Assistant Operations Officer, HQ, 1/61st Inf, Ft. Carson, CO.

From 1961 to 1962 he was Operations Officer with the 1st Battle Gp (Airborne), 506th Inf, 101st Abn Dv, Ft. Campbell, KY. In 1962-1963 he was assigned as Battalion Advisor to the Vietnamese Abn Bde. On returning to the United States, he was assigned as Tactical Officer to the United States Military Academy.

In 1967, he was Operations Officer in the 2d Bde, 1st Cav Div (AMB), Vietnam and in 1968 he was the Personnel Officer for the 1st Cav Div, Vietnam. Upon his return from Vietnam, he was a Personnel Staff Officer with the Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, in Washington, DC, from 1968 to 1970.

During 1970, he was the Executive Officer for the 2d Bde, 82d Abn Div, Ft. Bragg, NC, and in 1971 he was the Commanding Officer of the 2d Bn, 325th Inf, 82d Abn Div.

In July, 1973 he was assigned as Chief of the Curriculum Div for the U.S. Army Infantry School's Director of Instruction. His last assignment was as Acting Director of Instruction.

COL Ware received his Master of Science in Administration from George Washington University. He has completed the courses at the Command General Staff College and U.S. Army War College.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star for Valor, Purple Heart, Meritorious Service Medal, Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Bronze Star. He has earned the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Master Parachutist Badge, the Pathfinder Badge and the Ranger Tab.

COL Ware and his wife, Barbara, have three children — Diane, Michael and Shella.

Soldiers become instant firemen

It was 8 a.m. Tuesday morning when SP4 Clarence Daniels and SP4 Clifford Sibley of C Co, 43rd Engr Bn were on their way to the company motor pool. While passing the laundry and dry cleaners enroute both men saw smoke.

Reacting instinctively, they immediately went to the rear of the cleaners. There they discovered the rear wall engulfed in smoke. After alerting the fire department and grabbing a fire extinguisher they began to spray the rear wall. SP4 Daniels grabbed the axe from the jeep and began ripping the wall of the boiler room.

Upon entering the room, SP4 Sibley climbed into the room to find the source of the smoke. Daniels followed him. They discovered the problem in an electrical circuit in the main switchbox. Daniels shut off all switches.

The two said that "We could not even make an attempt to shut off the main switch box. It was literally red hot."

All of this happened in a matter of minutes. Soon the fire department arrived to help extinguish the fire. Accidentally touching the hot water heater with his axe, the firemen discovered a short in the heater. Quickly they alerted the post engineers to shut off all power sources. The engineers arrived at the scene in record time.

In very short order everything was under control, saving what could have been a disaster.

Sibley concluded "I think it's a part of everyone's duty to be alert at all times. This will in turn help support the effort of all the units on post."

Artilleryman re-united with his first howitzer

By Gene Smith

The Artilleryman attaches a very special significance to his howitzer; 'like your first love, you'll never forget your first howitzer', some have said.

SFC Charles Downs, Btry C, 83rd FA, 1/28th Inf, TSB, is the chief of firing battery for the Pioneer's redleg unit, or the 'chief of smoke' as he is commonly referred to.

While checking the howitzers last week in the Pioneer motor pool, Downs came across an 8" howitzer in the battery inventory that literally caused his jaw to fall open. It's serial number was No. 8.

"The first time I saw ol' number eight," Downs recalled, "was back in 1962 when I was a corporal in the 2/10th Artillery."

"I had a heavy duty MOS," Downs continued, "and at that time the 2/10th only had the light howitzer in its inventory, so I was confused that I got the assignment there from the 2nd Div."

Corporal Downs found out soon enough why he had been re-assigned, however. As Downs remembers it, one day his First Sergeant instructed him to pick up a heavy weapon from the railway station.

"I had never seen a self-propelled 8" howitzer before," Downs said, "and as I looked around the station, I didn't see anything resembling a howitzer."

So Downs asked a civilian where the alleged howitzer was supposed to be picked up and the man pointed in the direction of what Downs had mistaken for a large tank.

"My heavy weapons training had been on the towed 155mm and towed 8" howitzers, so I didn't know what to do. I just kept circling the flat car looking at this huge metal creature."

Finally, Downs climbed on top of the self-propelled howitzer and began exploring it, but discovered he knew nothing whatsoever about the strange weapon.

Apparently the civilian who had helped Downs locate the mammoth weapon decided that the young corporal might need further assistance, and stayed around to watch.

"The civilian got a good laugh from my frustration," Downs said, "but he did know how to operate the gun. He showed me how to start it and where first, second and reverse gears were at."

"He gave me just enough knowledge to take the gun off the flat car, but it was six months before I figured out that the self-propelled gun had five gears," Downs grinned.

Twelve years later SFC Downs ran across the gun again, in the motor pool of the 1/28th Inf. "I can only describe the feeling," Downs says, "as being like the old married man seeing the other girl he almost married, only years later."

Policy change set for off-duty employment

The recent establishment of new a DOD policy states that active Duty Military Personnel will not accept or commerce off-duty employment by an employer at a location where that employer is currently being struck. If off-duty employment is otherwise in conformance with this regulation, off-duty employment of Military Personnel by an employer being struck is permissible provided the member was actually working and on the payroll of such employer immediately prior to the commencement of the strike.

This change was effective Oct. 3. Existing employment that is improper under this change must be terminated.

Hospital's life line Blood donors

Martin Army Hospital (MAH) needs a transfusion—for its blood bank, that is.

While there is no critical shortage of blood to meet the hospital's day-to-day needs, there has been an insufficient number of donors to provide the 60 to 70 pints of blood required each week for patients treatment. Help is being sought.

A blood donation begins with a check of medical histories. SPS Claude Lett of the Donor Center interviews volunteer donors from 42d Co. TSB.

"We are not starting a massive blood collection campaign; we just need a 'steady flow' of donors each week," LTC Harvey Phelps, supervisor of the MAH Blood Bank, said. "The 'steady flow' of donors is the best method for collecting blood, since it must be used within 21 days after it has been drawn," he added.

The colonel pointed out that since January the number of blood donors has dropped and, as a result, Martin Army Hospital has had to obtain blood from other sources, such as the local hospitals and the Army blood bank at Ft. Gordon, Ga.

Ms. Linda Edelstein, Red Cross volunteer nurse, checks the blood pressure of PVT Leon Sullivan. Blood pressure and other checks assure that donors are completely healthy.

"Fort Benning is a large base with approximately 19,000 military personnel and 26,000 on-post and off-post dependents," LTC Phelps stated. "The hospital serves this population, as well as approximately 7,000 retired personnel and their dependents.

PVT Taylor Crook waits while SPS Noah Meek of the Donor Center checks hemoglobin content of blood.

"We are a community and as a community we should supply our own blood needs without resorting to outside sources. If only 10 percent of the people in our community donated blood annually, we would have more than enough blood to serve the needs of our hospital."

According to LTC Phelps, the end of U.S. participation in the war in Vietnam has not greatly lessened the need for blood. In fact, he said, the face of medicine is changing so rapidly that new requirement for blood must be met.

After processing is complete PFC Alia MacDonald checks card and issues donor, PFC Walter Beard, his blood bag.

"For instance," he continued, "blood use for therapeutic purpose is increasing, and with new medical knowledge, malignant tumors are now being treated with radiation and drugs which can inadvertently destroy blood cells which must be replaced. The life and cure of a cancer patient many times depends upon the availability of blood for transfusions."

Who can give blood at MAH? "Both military personnel, their dependents, retired personnel and their dependents, may give blood at Martin Army Hospital," LTC Phelps said. "We encourage military dependents to become donors because they represent a large fraction (62 percent of the patients at Martin Army Hospital in Fiscal Year 1974 were dependents) of those who use blood and blood components."

SPS Lett checks arm and prepares to draw blood from most suitable site. The donor is PVT Edward Richard. This requires 15 to 25 minutes.

Who cannot give blood? "Persons who have a past or present history of cancer, diabetes, hepatitis or heart disease are permanently rejected as blood donors," LTC Phelps stated. "Such rejection is necessary to protect both the donor and the recipient. Those persons who have been in residency in Southeast Asia may not donate blood until they have returned to this country as permanent residents for a period of three years."

Persons who wish to give MAH the "transfusions" the facility needs may do so by appointment, 10 a.m. to 12 noon on Mondays and Wednesdays (telephone 544-3471/2221.) Also, the MAH blood donor center located at Rigdon and Benjamin Streets (Building 2755-A, 42d Co. TSB) is open from 12:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. each Thursday.

Relaxing after giving blood is PVT James Maynor. Mrs. Ann Allen offers Mayor a cold drink. While relaxing the donors also fill out entry blanks for a chance at a $25 cash or Savings Bond given each month to one of the donors by the Association of the U.S. Army and Ft. Benning Officer's Wives Club.

The American Red Cross Nursing Services has received a request from MEDDAC for Volunteer Registered Nurses. Interesting new areas have been offered this fall, and there are always opportunities to donate professional services at Martin Army Hospital and Bldg. 396 in the wards and clinics. At present, American Red Cross Nurses are volunteering in the Army Blood Program, Two Week Army Health Nurse Follow-Up Clinic, Well Baby Clinic, Health and Grooming Course for Dependents, Parenting Course, Hospital Assistant Course and the Nurse Clinician Blood Pressure Screening Program.

Registered Nurses are reminded that their professional services may only be donated at Ft. Benning through the American Red Cross and that current active registration in one of the fifty states is required. For further information, please call Jean Campbell, 689-8289.

Camp Benning mementos sought

The Ft. Benning Bicentennial Project Agency is seeking photographs, mementos and other items from the Camp Benning era or the early days of Ft. Benning for use in connection with the post's Bicentennial Observance now being planned.

The agency will reproduce old photographs and will return the originals to the owner. Mementos, such as uniforms, equipment, weapons, etc., will be placed on display in the Infantry Museum with appropriate identifications of the donor.

Camp Benning was founded Oct. 7, 1918 and became a permanent installation in September, 1919.

Persons interested in donating or loaning early Benning items to the Bicentennial Project are asked to contact MAJ Charles Woodson at 545-7815/5669 or bring them to Building 2266.

Eastern Star are giving a Fish Fry on Sat., Nov. 2, from noon until 6 p.m. at 3545 Woodland Dr., Columbus. Dinner will cost $1.25 and sandwiches, $.75.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

DOLLARS AND SENSE SEMINAR

Plan now for the future. Attend OWC's Estate Planning Seminar, Nov. 4, Infantry Hall at 7:30 p.m. Bankers, lawyers and insurance agents will be on hand to discuss trusts, wills, term and life insurance. Everyone is welcome.

MEDDAC OWC'S PICNIC

The monthly function for the MEDDAC OWC will be a Family Picnic, on Nov. 9, from 2-5 p.m. at the USAIC Recreation Area.

Each family will provide their food, but there will be grills available for cooking. Soft drinks and beer will be furnished. Look for more details in your MEDDAC MUSINGS.

The hostesses will be wives from the Orthopedic Service and Dental Clinic No. 4 with Mrs. Billy Mullins and Mrs. Alonzo Diodene acting as chairpersons. Reservations should be made by Nov. 4, with your reservation chairpersons listed in the MUSINGS.

ENVIRONMENTAL WORKSHOP

The OWC Environmental Workshop will take a field trip to collect materials to dry for arrangements, ferns and mosses Tues., Nov. 12, from 9:30-11 a.m.

If you would like to go with the group, please call Murial Anderson, 687-4979.

Holiday decorations can be created at workshop

Artisan Larry Fair, florist and interior designer, will conduct the fourth annual Holiday Workshop at Columbus College in the Turner Center for Continuing Education.

Each of the three sessions is identical and will include a two-hour lecture demonstration and a "create it yourself" workshop.

The daytime session will be Nov. 6 from 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. Evening sessions are scheduled as follows: Session A with a lecture demonstration from 7:30 - 9:30 Nov. 5 and a creative workshop from 7:30 - 9:30 Nov. 7; Session B with a lecture demonstration from 7:30 - 9:30 Nov. 19 and a creative workshop Nov. 21.

Door wreaths, table arrangements, gifts, candles, tree ornaments and special pieces will be created from permanent or fresh materials.

Registration for one complete session is $7.50. Materials will be available for purchase at each session or participants may bring materials from home or purchase them locally. For further information call Community Service Program, 568-2024.

Larry Fair is chairman of District III Georgia State Florist Board; chairman, Georgia State Florists' Annual Convention Committee; member, Society of American Designers; and director, Academy of American Florist and Designers.

'Ole Doc Sez Prepare yourself for a long hard winter

Howdy Bub, I wuz talkin' to Callison Hawthorne, our local weather forecaster, an' he tole me that, as far as he could see, the little girl an' boy wuz goin' to be on the inside of they's house, whilst the old witch wuz goin' to be camped on the front porch the whole winter season.

Callison also said he seen one of them fuzzy-wuzzy caterpillars with a sweater an' ear muffs on headin' South, an' that I'd better get off my wallet an' get to choppin' another cord of wood 'cause all of the signs say it's goin' to be a long hard winter. It seems to me that with all these forewarnins, smart folks would be gettin' ahold of a cold-pak or two, for themselves.

It makes good sense to take advantage of the things that are available afore the real need comes along. I bet you forgot, Bub, that you can get cold tablets, aspirin, nose drops, an' sech like, over the counter at the Post hospital or TMC's 'thout needin' a prescription for 'em.

Acorse, you already got yore flu shot, an' now, if you get a cold-pak in the house, you'll be able to laugh at old man winter, 'cause you will be ready.

Billy Bob Arnold stopped by my office this mornin' with a snow shovel thrown over his right shoulder. When I ast him why he wuz carryin' that fool thing, he said that he wuz goin' to give up his pin-settin' job at the Bowlarama, an' wuz goin' to hire hisself out to shovel snow from in front of all the stores an' offices in town. I tried to tell that dummy, Billy Bob, that we ain't had enuf snow hereabouts to warrant the purchase of a broom, much less a snow shovel.

He allowed that this has been the case in the past, but it wuz goin' to be mighty different this winter, an' didn't I hear 'bout the little boy an' girl that wuz stayin' inside they's house, an' the caterpillars wuz wearin' galoshes on all they's feet? I tried to catch Billy Bob grinin', so's I'd know that he wuz jes jokin' with me, but he kept a straight face while he wuz talkin' to me.

As I wuz searchin' for some signs that Billy Bob wuz fannin' me, I 'membered the time that he wuz buildin' hisself a boat in his back yard, an' tellin' folks that Spring wuz goin' to be a mite damp, 'cause all of the spiders wuz buildin' they's webs high in the trees. Everybody laughed, an' thought they wuz havin' one on 'ole Billy Bob.

Howsomever, come April, us that lived on high ground had basements full of water, an' them in the lowlands hitched a ride with Billy Bob. Y'know, Bub, that Billy Bob ain't as dumb as most folks would like to believe. You know an' I know that it ain't goin' to snow 'round here, but the long an' short of the matter is that I give him twenny dollars for snow protection insurance the whole year. I really couldn't tell you if I wuz sorry for Billy Bob, or my mind tole me not to miss the chance to get my parkin' lot shoveled come snow time.

I unnerstan' that The Arnold Snow Protection Corporation has got ever' office an' business in town under it's care. I must be gettin' old; it ain't snowed here since Hector wuz a pup, but...

By the way keep yore cold-pak secured from the tads, lest they think them cold tablets is candy, an' gobble 'em up afore you know it.

Good health to you and yours.

Protestant women schedule retreat

Ms. Kay Lee Arthur, wife of missionary Jack Arthur, will be retreat leader for this year's Protestant Women of the Chapel three-day Fall Retreat Nov. 6-9 at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex.

Ms. Arthur, from Chattanooga, TN, and mother of three sons, has written a play, "The Quick and the Damned," which has been presented in five states and included in the Jerome Hines Festival of Christian Arts in Detroit, MI.

The retreat will open at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 6 with a family dinner at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The first topic to be presented after the dinner will be "Man - Woman, What Is the Difference?"

Thursday's program will consist of a presentation and discussion of Interpersonal Relationships and Discipline of Children, lasting from 9:30 to 11:30 in the morning and from 1:00 to 2:30 in the afternoon.

Spiritual gifts and other topics decided by group consensus will be discussed Friday morning at 9:30 and during the afternoon from 1:00 to 2:30 p.m.

A Youth Rally will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. SGT Stacey Stevens, guitarist, will lead the songfest.

Children from second grade on up are invited to come with their parents. A special program will be arranged for them while the parents and teenagers meet with the retreat leader.

Nursery children will be cared for at Tot-Town. The Chaplain's Fund will pay for their stay but not their food.

YAC needs volunteers

Ft. Benning's Youth Activities needs adult volunteers to work in support of its many activities. Volunteers are needed in Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts and Brownie activities.

Interested persons are also needed in drama, modern dance and music. Instructors, coaches and helpers are wanted for the Junior Rifle Club.

Supervisors and chaperones are needed for outdoor activities and special activities such as hiking, camping and dance nights. The Powder Puff League requires instructors to help out in girl's activities.

Persons interested in volunteering time should call 545-1902.

Tutor available to vets

Few of the 727,000 veterans and servicemen enrolled in GI Bill college courses this fall will need tutorial help, but the Veterans Administration will pay for it if needed.

Under a program not available under the World War II and Korean GI Bills, VA pays costs of tutoring, not to exceed $50 in any month, up to a maximum of $450. The benefit is not charged against the veteran's or serviceman's basic educational entitlement, it was also pointed out by VA officials.

Any post-secondary trainee is eligible if he trains fulltime or more and has a deficiency in a subject required in an approved program of education.

In order to receive payment for tutorial assistance, the agency advises eligible GI Bill trainees to complete a VA application and have it certified by the school. Applications should be sent within a year of the tutoring to the VA regional office which has the veteran's claim folder, said VA.

Total GI Bill enrollments, including other schools, flight, apprenticeship and on-job training, stood at 1.3 million in September.

Only the 727,000 college trainees are eligible for tutorial assistance. Since it became available in March 1970, 48,000 trainees have received tutorial assistance at a cost of $4.7 million.

Flight simulator is Benning's 'baby'

By Terry D. Ragan
and Howard Hodge

That white area beyond the simulated illusion of flying over the treetops. It's cockpit is actually a parabolic screen, uncanny. (Photo by Tomas where the motion picture gives the il. Rodriguez)

Ft. Benning has the first nap-of-the-earth flight simulator in the Army. It was built — in these days of cost overruns — almost with a hank of hair and a piece of wood. It is not — expectedly — fancy. It's green, but not avocado green.

But for under $4,000, it's a pretty good simulator.

Nap-of-the-earth? Yup. It's a tactic aviators (particularly helicopter pilots) use to stay out of enemy radar by hugging close to the ground. That means treetop level or just above — sometimes actually flying around trees.

According to CW2 Joe R. Hooton, one of the developers of the simulator, nap-of-the-earth (NOE) flying has been in the development stages for about three years.

"Ours is the first and only working model . . ."

"Ours is the first and only working model now, with three more being built at Ft. Hood, TX," he said.

"We started building it in January of this year, and we're still modifying it — occasionally changing the wiring, or just trying to make the simulator more "With a lot of help from all our friends, Paul Klasky and I would like to express our appreciation to:

— Carpenters Jim Williams and Charlie Turner;

— Welders Robert Suppe and Charles Ingram;

— Avionics man Jacob Yearty;

— Draftsman Bob Hinton.

With a combination of craftsmanship, ability, dedication and just plain hard work, you've made it all happen."

real."

The filming is done right here too. Mr. Hooton developed the techniques for flying at NOE altitudes and getting it all down on film. That meant going to several off-post advisors for help with lenses, angles and projection equipment once the film was processed.

"We ran into problems right off the bat."

"We ran into problems right off the bat," Hooton said. First, we had to find a lens that takes pictures at a 180-degree angle that would fit the camera we could get. Once we had that, we shot so that we wouldn't get graininess when it was projected onto a screen. That problem was solved by using a smaller-sized film.

"Then we had to find a projecting lens that matched — as closely as possible — the lens that took the original film, so the edges wouldn't be fuzzy. We still haven't done that, although we have the capability," Hooton said. "It's just a matter of doing what we now know we can do."

But the simulator has been one problem after another.

The OH-6 Cayuse was the helicopter used to take the treetop level movies.

The Cayuse is a stable aircraft, having little if any vibration.

detection or enemy weapons.

Now, flying at treetop level can be very exciting but there are several inherent dangers — not the least of which are the trees themselves. The unpredictable air currents can put the aircraft in the trees in a split second. This can be overcome by the pilot himself, in most cases. Mechanical failure is another reason for not flying at treetop level. Also, if the craft is flying slowly (the only way to go at that level) with a heavy load, that's bad news.

All of this had to be learned after pilots found that they no longer had control of all the airspace. Today, with an increasing emphasis on NOE tactics, student pilots are coming straight from the classroom without knowing one thing about what it's like to fly at treetop level. Hence, Ft. Benning's simulator.

The initial part of the conflict taught many lessons to the pilots who flew the choppers. They learned many new techniques in flying that were necessary to cope with a hot, jungle-type environment. The aviators found out the hard way that the helicopter was vulnerable to small arms fire at altitudes of 50-500 feet.

The pilots found that flying at 1,500 feet was a reasonably safe height. Later in the conflict, the enemy acquired the ground-to-air missile that made it unsafe for anything to fly above 50 feet. It became necessary for the pilots to fly at treetop level in order to avoid radar

"The incredible thing is the truly great support we got . . ."

How could a simulator be fabricated — from scratch — on the cheap? "The incredible thing," Mr. Hooton said, "is the truly great support we got here on the post. The people who have helped build the simulator have just been incredible."

SGT Paul Klasky is a project officer in the Dept. of Educational Technology at the Infantry School. He was in charge of the actual building of the simulator, as well as idea man.

It was Klasky and Hooton who sketched — on a cocktail napkin in an airplane returning to Columbus — what became the simulator.

A draftsman, Mr. Bob Hinton, made the working blueprints for the simulator.

Soliders at the Training Aids Support Office built, under Klasky's supervision, the simulator completely out of wood — including the parabolic viewing screen.

That's not all. Mr. Bob Suppe, a welder, fabricated the aluminum camera mount that Hooton planned. Also in on the planning was SP5 Bruce Fuller, a crew chief with what was then the 145th Avn. Bn.

Even the helicopter used for photographing was a one-of-a-kind OH-6 Cayuse. It is only one of its kind because it's specially trimmed to the weight of Mr. Hooton and the camera — so the vibration is greatly reduced. The payoff? Much clearer and sharper pictures. Bruce Fuller trimmed the ship, and he's the only one who can.

The point — you're getting the drift by now — is that this whole thing is being done for the first time.

What's it like inside the simulator?

At first sight, it's not much of anything. Oh sure, it looks like the cockpit of a helicopter — without any instruments except a mock control stick and foot pedals. Out in front of the model is a white, inside-curving parabolic screen, built by hand especially for the simulator and painted white.

But when the projector is turned on, and the headphones are also put on, it's a whole different world — flying above and actually hearing (in the phones) the sounds of rotor blades and radio communications. It's so real that the first films used (they came from Canada and served as models for what Hooton later did) actually made pilots nauseous. The reason: those films moved too fast and created — optically — vertigo in the pilots.

As Hooton reflected on the accomplishments of the craftsmen who put it all together, he said, "The whole thing here has been a coordinated progression of steps. Each completed task led to the next task to be done. And it worked."

Finally, the simulator is just that — a simulator. It's not meant to teach anyone to fly, just to help a pilot who's never done it before to see what it looks like — barely above the treetops.

Above is the camera used to take the pictures. Visible is the specially made camera and Joe Hooton, pilot for the platform for the camera. The ship had to be trimmed precisely for the photographic mission.

197th Spt Bn establishes FAST for 15th Cav move

By W. R. Cage

"Keepin' em truckin'" was the objective of the 197th Spt Bn, of the 197th Inf Bde, as it established a Forward Area Support Team (FAST) at the U.S. Naval Space Surveillance System Station at Hawkinsville, GA to support the vehicle convoy of Trp A, 15th Cavalry during its 200-mile move to Ft. Stewart, GA, for annual gunnery qualification last Monday.

The cavalry troop found the FAST to be a welcome sight at the half-way point between Benning and Stewart. It was a place to rest, refuel, conduct driver maintenance, make necessary repairs, have a C-ration lunch, and commence the last leg of the trip.

"This FAST has a maintenance contact team, a direct exchange parts capability, a vehicle recovery capability, fuel re-supply for vehicles and helicopters, and a medical aid station," said LT John Mandeville, the officer in charge of the FAST and the support battalion's assistant S3. "Our objective is to 'keep 'em truckin' and insure the smooth flow of the convoy."

"At this FAST we have a team of three officers and 35 enlisted men but the FAST can be organized with more men and equipment to accommodate a convoy much larger than the cavalry troop we are supporting today," said LTC Jerry K. Patterson, the support battalion's commander.

"From our experience here with a 30-vehicle convoy we will tailor the organization of future FAST's to support any brigade move," LTC Patterson concluded.

A jeep driver, PFC Bob Richards of Troop A, 15th Cav said, "It's good to have a stop over point like this. It would have been a long trip without it. It is also nice to see people wearing a familiar patch (197th) even if the faces aren't familiar."

At the medical station the medics of Co B handled a few minor medical cases, but the hub of activity was at the refueling points.

"Once we arrive at Ft. Stewart we will commence conducting our annual gunnery qualification," stated LT Roger Kelley, the convoy commander for the cavalry troop, "this FAST set up has been real helpful in our move."

"We are on the right track and we don't expect any problems that we will not be able to handle during any future vehicle convoy," concluded LT Mandeville as the last vehicle departed the FAST on its final leg to Ft. Stewart.

Explorers get aviation experience 'Huey' style

The adventuresome Explorers of Aviation, Explorer Post 142, sponsored by the 121st Avn Co, 34th Med Bn, decided to see for themselves if an Army helicopter is feasible to fly.

Though not actually at the controls, the 13 explorers viewed the Ft Benning-Columbus area from a "Huey" (UH-1H) helicopter.

The pilots at the control were CW2 Dan Hixson and WO1 Richard Dappen, both pilots in 121st Avn Co and a adult sponsor for Post 142. It was not merely a "joy ride" for the explorers but was a combination of proficiency training for the Army pilots and an activity to broaden the scope of aviation experience for the explorers.

Explorer Post 142 was organized in the fall of 1973 and under the new concept of Exploring (Boy Scouts of America) was designated as an Aviation Explorer Post. Its purpose was to provide an opportunity for experience in the aviation field to those Columbus-Ft. Benning youths interested in getting off the ground.

There are 13 active Explorers in Post 142 who all attend ground school once a week and those who are at the magic age of 16 are working toward a private pilots' license.

Mr. Hixson and Mr. Dappen also conduct the ground school and since Mr. Dappen is FAA qualified as an Instrument Flight Instructor, the Explorers have highly qualified advisors. The Post is not exclusive to the males either. There are three young ladies active as Explorers who think aviation is "just all right."

Though the main activity is aviation, the Post 142 Explorers find time for other activities which have included a trip last June to Florida during which they visited such places as Disney World, the Kennedy Space Center, and Daytona Beach. These Explorers proved their desire and industry by earning the money in different projects to finance the entire trip.

For anyone aged 15-21, Aviation Explorer Post provides an excellent and exciting opportunity to learn what flying is all about, and to have a great time doing it.

Benning has new Post Command Sergeant Major

CSM Vincent Roegiers has assumed the Post Command Sergeant Major job. CSM Roegiers was assigned to Ft. Benning after he was one of five Sergeant Majors selected to remain on active duty for an additional five years.

Roegiers entered the service in 1945.

On Sept. 1, 1974 he received his parachute jump and first plane ride. Following jump school he joined the 13th Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg in 1945 which later became the 82nd Airborne Division.

In 1955 to 1958 he was assigned to 2nd Armor Division. Roegiers spent a short tour with 101st in mid 1958. 1958 - 1960 Operations Sergeant in 82nd Division. Deployed with 503d Battle Group, the forward battle group of 25th Division. In 1961 it became a separate battle group in Okinawa.

Roegiers became a Sergeant Major on July 31, 1963. From 1963-64 he helped activate the 173rd Airborne Division. In 1964 he was assigned to Ft. Benning with the Ranger and Airborne School as SGM of 4th Sqn Bn.

In 1967 he saw action with the 173rd as both a battalion and brigade SGM. 1968 he was assigned to West Point and served as regimental, then corps SGM. In October 1973 he went to Korea to work with 2nd Inf Div and then came to Ft. Benning in October 1974.

2/69th winding up gun qualifications

By Bob Thomas

Under the slogan "Tank Gunnery '74-54 for 54" tank crews of the 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Bde, are now in the process of completing their Annual Tank Gunnery Qualification at Ft Stewart, Ga.

"The qualifying is off to a good start," commented LTC Warren J. Walton, the battalion's commander. "All of the first 18 crews to fire have qualified. Seventeen of them were from Company C, the first company to challenge the eight-table qualification test."

The 18th Crew that qualified was the battalion commander's. A total of 54 crews are scheduled to qualify, providing the slogan "54 for 54."

SGT Terry Pugsley, who was attempting the tough course for the first time as a tank commander, led his crew to their unit's top score of 2171 points out of a possible 2400. PFC Tommy Ledwell was the crew's gunner; SP4 Carl Monroe acted as driver and PFC Edmond Dyal was the loader.

2LT Michael Gibbs commanded his tank crew to second place in the company with 2138 points while SFC Lindsey McLendon, Jr. and his crew placed third with 2113 points.

Co C has now returned to Ft Benning to assume Infantry School commitments from Co A of the armor unit which departed for Ft Stewart last week to complete the annual gunnery requirement. Because of range restrictions on Ft Benning, the tank crews are unable to fire for record here. In order to conserve fuel, the armor unit utilized tanks belonging to the Georgia National Guard Equipment Concentration Site at Ft Stewart, rather than transport their own tanks from Ft Benning.

"We are really looking forward to our qualifying run," stated PFC Charles B. Jones, a tank driver in Co B, 2nd-of-the-89th.

SGT Daryel Arnold, tank commander in Co B, was also looking forward to the record fire run. "The entire crew has to function as a team," SGT Arnold stated. "You can have the best equipment in the world, but it is no good unless every member of the tank crew works together to use it."

"Each of the four men on the tank crew have specific duties they must perform," explained CPT Larry A. Loftus, commander of Co B. "The driver must provide a steady firing platform; the loader must quickly load the correct round for the target; the gunner must hit the targets and the tank commander must direct the other crew members in their tasks."

Trp A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde is also scheduled to complete the tank gunnery course along with the 2nd-of-the-89th. Tank crews from Trp A will be firing their own Sheridan reconnaissance vehicles.

The qualification tests are scheduled to be completed by November 15.

197th soldiers to participate in Caber Warrior II

Approximately 100 men of the 197th Inf Bde will travel to Ft. Bragg, N.C. Nov. 5, to participate in Caber Warrior II, A Command Exercise (CPX). More than 6,000 other military personnel from across the U. S. will also participate.

The exercise is scheduled to last six days and is designed to develop planning factors for the deployment of a three-division force, to examine the procedures and concepts of the employment of three different type divisions (Airborne, Airmobile and Light Infantry) and to determine the best means of supporting the force.

Representatives of all of the 197th Inf Bde's battalions and separate units will join 197th Inf Bde commander, COL Joseph E. Wasiak, and principle staff members in the exercise. The group will leave Ft. Benning from Lawson Field by U.S. Air Force C-130 aircraft Nov. 4 and is scheduled to return Nov. 11.

The CPX is being conducted by the XVII Airborne Corps, headquartered at Ft. Bragg. Elements of active Army and Air Force units from nine military installations and Army National Guard units from three states will participate. An additional 22 installations are participating in the CPX from their home stations.

Caber Warrior II has been in the planning stages since early spring and officially began Sept. 23, with all units initially participating from their home stations. Units have remained at their home stations through Phases I and II, which involve intelligence and planning for deployment.

The third phase begins when headquarters elements of participating units move into field locations on or around Ft. Bragg. During this phase, members of the 197th Inf Bde will be working out of a tactical operations center as they conduct tactical play. The 197th Inf Bde element will use 25 vehicles during the exercise.

Hurricanes finish three-day test

The 478th Flying Crane Co (Hurricanes) completed a three-day test in the field under simulated combat conditions last month.

The purpose of the test was to see if the unit could perform its mission in combat. All of the tests were designed to polish skills required to accomplish the unit's mission of moving cargo, artillery, and troops in support of combat operations with the CH54A Flying Crane. The huge helicopter can lift up to 18,000 pounds with an external winch and a 100 foot cage and can carry 45 combat equipped troops in a detachable pod.

The training exercise consisted of many different situations the unit could encounter in a tactical environment. It began with a motor march over unpaved wet roads with an ambush enroute. Different challenges such as processing casualties, setting up a night perimeter for defense, stopping infiltrators, processing POWs, being under an artillery barrage (explosive simulators), gas and nuclear attacks, and road marches under black out conditions were part of the exercise.

Different routine skills were tested including radio procedure, mess hall operation, repair of motor vehicles and writing reports. The training that led up to the completion of the ATT began in May, with a mixture of combat-seasoned troops to help lead the less-experienced. The unit is planning for another field training exercise at Ft. Stewart, GA in November.

Benning sees 12th annual horse show

Laurie Pennisi, Johanna Himic, Karen Ringrose and Beth Paul collected most of the first place honors in Ft. Benning's 12th Annual Fall Horse Show held last Saturday at French Polo Field.

Laurie Pennisi won first place in five classes. She was first in her class in Regular Working Hunter-Outside Course, Regular Working Hunter-Stadium Course and Fault and Out. She then teamed up with Johanna Himic and Terri Lahnstein to win the Hunt Team Class and again with Johanna Himic to win in Pass the Baton competition.

Alice Herin, riding Southern Comfort, clears an obstacle on her way to winning the Working Hunter Class in last Saturday's 12th Annual Fall Horse Show at French Field.

Johanna Himic, besides winning twice in team classes, won the Equitation and Equitation Over Fences Classes, for her age group.

Daren Ringrose was a double winner when she won the Small Working Hunter Class on both the outside and stadium courses.

First place winner in Equitation and Practice Working Hunter was young Beth Paul.

Other first-place winners in the Equitation Classes were: Leslie Herbert, Ann Richard, Sue Cronin, Teresa Lopez and Lydia Paul.

TSB flag action

Next week's game will decide championship

By Rick Wasser

If Co A, 1/29th Inf, TSB recovers from their surprise defeat to 4th Bn, they will get another chance to play them for The School Brigade flag-football championship.

Both teams now have one loss each — to each other — so the winner of next week's contest will decide the number one team for the Brigade, while both teams will advance to the post playoffs.

The 4th Bn took the first half initiative when James Carriker connected with William Riley for 18 yards and the first Airborne touchdown of the game, but the conversion attempt failed.

The Pioneers received the kickoff and took over on the 40-yard line, but promptly lost 30 yards on penalties. Charles Ledbetter, Co A's star quarterback, got 28 of the yards back on his first running play, but they couldn't muster a first down.

The next time the Pioneers got possession of the ball, Ledbetter gambled with a 52-yard bomb to Tim DeBey. DeBey was clipped from behind and missed the ball, but the Pioneers were awarded the play anyway, just 12 short yards from the goal.

Ledbetter took an eight yard loss on his next two plays, connected with a 12-yard screen on the third down, but on the last down, a bad snap pre-empted any ideas that Co A might have had about a first-half score.

The 4th Bn moved the ball well on their first two plays to open the second half. But on the third down play, Ledbetter intercepted a Carriker pass and ran it 65 yards for the first Pioneer TD — only to have it called back because of a penalty.

The Airborne team took advantage of the Co A setback, and David Brooks ran 45 yards around the right end for the 4th Bn score before the Pioneers knew what hit them.

Ledbetter came up with another key interception late in the second half, but only ran his threvery 12 yards before his flag was pulled. Co A couldn't go anywhere on their first three plays, and on the 4th down, the Airborne team intercepted back.

Both teams traded two sets of downs with each other, neither team gaining any real ground. With two minutes left in the game though, Ledbetter completed a 50-yard pass to Sandy MacPherson on the goalline, but it too was called back because of a penalty.

With their spirits daunted Co A tried once more to at least get on the scoreboard. Ledbetter dropped a long bomb to Tim DeBey in the end zone, but DeBey couldn't find the handle on it.

After that final blow, the last minute ticked away uneventfully for both teams, the Pioneers going down in defeat to the 4th Bn, 12-0.

It's time to winterproof vehicles

By J. H. TATUM

As the winter season nears once again it is time to get out the anti-freeze tester and make sure that all military vehicles are winterized. The Patriots of Co A, 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, are making sure that all their armored personnel carriers (APCs) and wheeled vehicles are ready to meet this test.

"We are getting all of our vehicles ready for the winter months ahead," explained CPT Russell W. Calvert, commander of Co A. "I give my unit about two hours of motor stables every day that we are not in the field. That way our vehicles should be in good running condition."

"We're in the process of checking all vehicle cooling systems in the company to determine how much anti-freeze it will take to winterize our vehicles," stated SSG Charles E. Nelson, the Co A motor sergeant. "In order to conserve anti-freeze, we only add the minimum amount for complete protection."

CPT Calvert concluded, "Our maintenance program is set up in two phases, first and second echelon, with the driver and crews pulling first echelon and the company mechanics pulling second echelon."

Co A, has a total of 24 vehicles assigned, including 18 of the 13-ton APCs which require the work of an 11-man squad to keep each one in top shape.

2d Evac will represent 34th Med in playoffs

The 2d Evac Hospital will represent the 34th Med Bn this year in the post flag football championship tournament.

2d Evac finished regular season action with a 9-1 record.

"It was a combination of great defensive and offensive playing that enabled us to take the battalion title," said PFC Johnny Chatman, 2d Evac defensive end. "Everybody on the team put out 100 per cent and everyone feels we'll go all the way to take the post title," he added.

2d Evac's only loss was to the 212st Avn Co who defeated them in a close game, 7-6.

"The game was a great defensive battle," said 2d Evac quarterback PFC Wilson Ingram. "The 121st fought hard against our offensive charge."

Below is the final league standings for the 1974 34th Med Bn flag football season:

	W	L
2d Evac Hosp	9	1
121st Avn Co	8	2
478th Avn Co	4	4
498th Med Co	4	5
548th Med Co	3	6
600th Med Co	1	8
