Post bandmaster reassigned

CWO2 Brian D. Arnold, bandmaster for Ft. Benning's 283d Army Band, has been assigned to the School of Music at Ft. Monroe, Va., and will be leaving post around Jan. 1.

Since CWO2 Arnold became bandmaster in July 1972, the 283d Army Band has maintained the reputation and proficiency that it has had for many years. The unit will become the first military unit to be awarded the Action 75 pin for their participation and musical contribution in Theme I of Action 75, a special program designed to reward individuals and groups which support the Army and National Bicentennial activities.

The bandmaster was also instrumental in the formation of the Bicentennial Concert Band last summer. The 100-member band, comprised of both military (active and retired), dependents and civilians from the Columbus-Ft. Benning-Phenix City area, performed two major concerts during the summer: the June 8 concert in celebration of the Army's 200th anniversary and the July 4 concert held on York Field in front of Infantry Hall.

During the Nov. 11 Veterans' Day Celebration in Birmingham, Ala., the 283d Army Band was rated the best military band of Active and Reserve elements and was presented the winning trophy.

Arnold was very active in community services and acted as director of the 40-voice choir at the main post chapel.

He was born in Oakland, Calif., on Nov. 27, 1937. He entered the Army after graduating from the University of Texas at El Paso (then Texas Western College) where he received a Bachelor of Music degree. As an enlisted man, he served in Army bands, attaining the rank of staff sergeant. In June 1969, he was appointed as a warrant officer, bandmaster and his first assignment was to command the 192nd Army Band at Ft. Benning.

He is married to the former Evelyn Ann Garrett and they have two daughters, Kristina and Nichole.

Those 1976 promises...

Will you keep 'em?

By Terry D. Ragan

Starting Jan. 5, everyone is back to work or school. The Christmas and New Year holidays, although in the recent past, are nevertheless gone. With bloodshot eyes straight ahead, we put out of mind the good, the not-so-good and the plainly terrible days of last year. More to the point are the resolutions you make in good faith in 1976.

Did you promise yourself that you would earn an ACTION '75 Gold Certificate? Incidentally, working toward that goal would get you into activities you never thought you had in you to do.

How about getting involved in the Bicentennial? Your own post newspaper is literally a wide open forum for such Bicentennial topics as early American or early Army history, Bicentennial themes, the American spirit — you name it. Getting into the Bicentennial could include speaking to your church group (or any other group) about the Army or your unit's history through the years. The possibilities are endless. By writing for the Bayonet, you also get completely away from commercialism. We don't pay.

Did you promise yourself that since it's inevitable, you'd run the fat off your rear end gladly? Like, instead of getting into your PT clothes as though you were going to your own execution, you get ready to exercise as though you knew that at least — in 1976 — your body will look like a Joe Weider ad. You know, "before" and "after."

Here's one: How about breaking 120 on both your next MOS test and your next EER? No sweat.

Did you faithfully promise yourself that you'll enroll in at least one higher education course every quarter this year? Since you're already exercising your muscles, might as well exercise the gray matter between the ears.

Whatever you promised you'd do in 1976, make this the year that you can confidently say, "I succeeded. I did it all."

Now, about that shoeshine and haircut

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"We've been invited! We've been invited!" I yelled, leaping from the car after I parked in a neighbor's space. I stumbled toward our quarters waving a tiny card and envelope. "We've been invited to the Post Hall and Farewell!"

My wife pushed the screen door open and jerked me inside. "For crying out loud," she snapped, "do you want to tell the whole neighborhood?"

"Yes. Yes," I gasped. "Isn't it exciting?"

"What's so exciting about a hail and farewell?" she asked. Wiping flour and dough from her fingers with her apron she shrugged. "If you've been to one you've..."

"... No, no," I urged. This is different." I waved the card and envelope under her nose. "You don't understand. This hail and farewell is by invitation only."

Warily she took the card. "By invitation only?" She read quickly and suddenly beamed into a huge smile. "BY INVITATION ONLY! And they even spelled our name correctly."

"Isn't it wonderful?" she laughed.

"We've finally made it," I said. "This could mean instant recognition all over the post. It could mean unlimited parties."

"I'll have to buy an entirely new outfit," she whispered.

"We've got to make our very best impression," I advised.

"A new hair fashion."

"The latest style," I grinned.

"I'll have to buy a new coat."

"Make it sable," I laughed.

"New jewelry."

"Make it diamonds," I offered.

"New make-up and cosmetics."

"Make it Prince Match..."

"... I just don't know where to begin," she sighed, handing me the invitation.

Clutching the card to my chest I felt drained of energy. "Everybody who is anybody on this post will be there. Can you imagine what it will be like?" I dreamed aloud.

On the evening of the function we climbed into the car after promising to bring home souvenirs to our children who stood on the sidewalk waving good-bye.

"Now remember what you're supposed to say in the receiving line," my wife reminded as we paused at a traffic light.

"First of all you must announce our names to the first person in the line," she instructed.

"Mr. and Mrs. T. Gunner," I nodded.

"That's right," she confirmed.

"Mr. and Mrs. T. Gunner," I repeated.

"No, you're only supposed to say it once."

"I was just rehearsing," I answered.

The light turned green and I eased through the intersection. "Mr. and Mrs.

T. Gunner," I whispered.

"Then the first person will tell the second person our names.

"Who will that be?"

"The first person will tell us. It's the first person's responsibility to begin the introductions."

Christmas spirit prevalent during unit party

By C. B. Hoover

No matter how hard a visitor searched last week, there wasn't one "Scrooge" to be found among the soldiers of Co A, 2/69th Ar. The Christmas spirit had enveloped everyone during a Christmas party for the dependents of the unit's soldiers, and for 24 pretty young ladies from the Columbus Girls Club that were special guests for the festive occasion.

Candy, cake and cookies, headed the list of goodies served during the party, but that wasn't what made the party special. There was something else added. That one thing that makes Christmas a special time of the year, the spirit of giving.

The spirit of giving started as far back as November and ended when a jolly fellow dressed all in red gave presents to each young lady visiting the unit. 1LT Jerry G. Wilson, a former platoon leader in Co A, but now the commander of Cbt Spt Co, 2/69th Ar, explained: "I think it all started with the men talking about what they could do for the soldiers that were not going home for Christmas. The ideas of what to do were discussed and a plan was made that included having a party for the soldiers and dependents and also inviting some underprivileged children."

"The wives of the men said they would bake cakes," continued LT Wilson, "and the cakes were auctioned off in the unit to raise money for gifts. The auction was a great success. The men raised over $300.

"After we had raised the money, the United Way was contacted for the name of a deserving organization. They gave us four names. We screened them and selected the Girls Club of Columbus to join us for Christmas."

The party had already started when the children arrived, but it wasn't long after their arrival that the spirit of Christmas had taken over.

PFC Fred Davis added his talents to the occasion by leading the children through some Christmas carols, however PFC Davis and the men had a pleasant surprise as the children soon took over and led the others at the party through a medley of Christmas carols.

Suddenly the carolling stopped as some one shouted, "Santa Claus just landed in the company area."

With a "Ho! Ho! Ho!" Santa Claus, who was SSG Nelson W. Tatro, the company supply sergeant, walked into the dining facility.

"I love playing Santa Claus," said SSG Tatro, "It is so much fun being around children and being able to add a little joy to each one's life."

Before Santa's visit ended, each child had a chance to sit on his knee or at the table where they were enjoying the Christmas goodies and talk with him.

As the children started to depart Santa Claus gave each one a present and the wish that they have a "Merry Christmas."

"It was wonderful," said Mrs. Lloyd Stanford, program director for the girls club, as they started to leave. "I would like to thank everyone for having such a nice party for the girls."

'Be a winner': motto carries 197th through past pursuits

By Roger J. Kelly

An important year in the development of the 197th 'Forever Forward' Brigade, 1975 began with Operational Readiness Training Tests (ORTTs) being administered to many of the maneuver battalions of the brigade.

It was a fitting way for the new year to begin. Only eight months prior, the 197th had met the challenge issued by Headquarters, Department of the Army to become a combat ready Strategic Army Forces (STRAF) unit by May 1974.

The brigade wasted no time in the new year developing its combat skills. In March, 600 soldiers from the 1/58th Inf and the 3/7th Inf deployed by aircraft to Ft. Sherman in the Panama Canal Zone to undergo the Jungle Operations Course there. As a result, the Jungle Expert Badge was awarded to 554 of those men.

The 2/69th Armor and Trp A, 15th Cav, conducted their annual tank gunnery at Ft. Stewart, Ga. It was a great success, and was the first year that the armor battalion took their own M60A1 tanks to qualify during tank gunnery. Continued artillery firing, tests and extensive field training, both at Ft. Benning and at Ft. Stewart, kept the 2/10th FA busy throughout much of the year.

The 197th Spt Bn, true to their motto of 'Ever Ready Support', provided just that for all brigade training activities while conducting training to perfect their own combat service support activities. The 72d Engr Co, 298th Sig Plt and the 179th MID all contributed largely to helping the brigade achieve its goal of proficiency at the cutting edge.

The brigade's aviation platoon, the Steel Scorpions, were off and flying to California in July for FTX 'Low Desert'. The aviators negotiated some rugged desert and mountain terrain during the exercise and gained valuable experience by working closely with elements of the California National Guard.

However, the brigade did a great deal more than just enhance their own combat readiness during the year. In July, the 197th hosted two Army National Guard battalions during their two weeks of annual training here at Ft. Benning, the 3/161st Inf from Washington State and the 3/153d Inf from Arkansas.

Not only did the 'Forever Forward' soldiers extend their experiences outside the state, but outside the country as well. September saw the brigade conducting a small unit exchange program with elements of the 2d Cbt Grp of the Canadian Armed Forces from Petawawa, Canada. Sixty men from each of the two armies switched places for one month and lived and trained with their host unit.

With 1975 being a Bicentennial year, the 197th was also a part of a great deal of activity within the confines of Ft. Benning. The brigade had been chosen earlier in the year to be the project unit for the June celebration of the Army's 200th Birthday. The celebration was a very impressive one and made particularly memorable by the visit of the President of the United States.

Men from the 197th Inf Bde stand tall during their presentation of the 'Glorious Heritage Pageant' during

August of 1975 saw the 197th, along with the entire Ft. Benning community, bidding farewell to MG Thomas M. Tarpley who relinquished command of the Home of the Infantry to MG Willard Latham. The new Commanding General was no stranger to the 197th, for only four years prior he had commanded the 'Forever Forward' Brigade himself.

As Ft. Benning bid its hails and farewells, so also did the 197th. Four new battalion commanders joined the brigade in 1975: LTC Theron H. Hill, 1/58th Inf; LTC John J. Tedesco, 2/69th Armor; LTC Paul Makowski, 2/10th FA; and LTC William B. Seely, 3/7th Inf.

The old year witnessed the 197th continuing to improve upon the concept it was so instrumental in pioneering — the Modern Volunteer Army. Working conditions, job satisfaction, and living conditions continued to improve.

Almost 2,000 soldiers are now housed in modernized barracks on Kelley Hill, and almost that same number volunteered during the year to join the 197th under the Unit of Choice enlistment program.

Integration of women into slots formerly held by males continued to increase in 1975. Three officers and 41 enlisted women are now assigned to the brigade and hold a full range of positions from unit clerks to military police.

Perhaps the biggest test for the 197th Inf Bde came in October as the brigade deployed 3,000 troops to Eglin A.F.B. Fla., to participate in Joint Training Exercise (JTX) 'Brave Shield XIII'.

The JTX, which involved over 15,000 soldiers, pitted the 197th as the opposing forces against elements of the 82d Abn Div.

The brigade's efforts were capped when during the JTX it conducted an insertion into the rear area of the 'friendly forces' destroying their Tactical Operations Center and capturing the friendly forces commander, BG Guy S. Meloy.

As the year closes, resolutions are in order. "BE A WINNER", the motto which has related the brigade's goals since its reorganization in March 1973, is being revised as the new year is ushered in. The brigade is a winner, and the new motto "TOTAL READINESS" accepts that fact and further challenges the 197th to go 'Forever Forward' in pursuit of its expanded goals.

PVT Peter Pritchett (r) and SSG Jose H. Aguon, both of Co A, 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, patrol an area during 'Brave

Country fare a favorite of 197th top cook

By Fred A. Easterling

For some 'down home' cooking join the men of the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde for the delightful taste treats of SP4 Alton Countryman, 197th Inf Bde Cook of the Month. Beef is his favorite food to prepare, and one of his succulent roasts is a mouth watering adventure in good eating.

Proving that he had brains as well as talent for the culinary arts, SP4 Alton Countryman, of HHC, 1/58th Inf won the Cook of the Month honors from six other contenders from within the brigade. "The Cook of the Month board was easy for me. I had prepared myself mentally and psychologically before I even agreed to try for the award," he explained. "Besides, the 1/58th Inf had won the Soldier of the Month and the Driver of the Month for December, and I wanted to make it a clean sweep for the 'Patriots'. The real victory for the battalion and brigade would be if I were to be able to win Post Cook of the Month."

Cooking good food is not all that SP4 Countryman enjoys. Politics and watching sports on TV are his favorite pastimes when he is home with his wife, Carrie, and son, Gregory. They presently make their home in Columbus, GA but are originally from Albany, GA.

When asked about his plans for the future, SP4 Countryman stated, "I would like to attend the food service management course and at a later date perhaps take a chef's course for gourmet food preparation. Right now I have plans to attend college and am drawing up plans for our new home in Albany. I hope to retire there someday and do a little country living."

For winning the Cook of the Month honors, SP4 Countryman will receive a three-day pass and 197th Inf Bde Certificate of Achievement.

SP4 Alton Countryman of HHC, 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde checks some of the delicious roasts he has prepared for the 'Patriots' who are eating at the 1/58th Inf dining facility. SP4 Countryman is Cook of the Month for the 'Forever Forward' Brigade for December.

Medics service 500-mile area

By BRUCE BERGSTRESSER

Covering medical commitments over a 500-mile area is a dedicated group of people in the 690th Med Co (Ambulance), 34th Med Bn. The company consists of an effective chain of people who service Ft. Benning, Camp Merrill in Dahlonga and Rangers at Eglin A.F.B., Fla.

To handle the numerous assignments the 690th receives it takes the full cooperation of all the company personnel, especially the medics. Two of these medics are SP4 Kathleen Price and PV 2 William M. Alexander. Both of these corpsmen are trained medics holding the 91B MOS.

SP4 Price is usually assigned to post commitments. Her most harrowing experience occurred earlier this year when an Airborne trainee was injured during practice jumps. The soldier received severe head injuries that demanded immediate attention. Due to the nature of the injuries he was not a good subject for ground ambulance transportation. Price and her assistant maintained and stabilized the patient until a 498 Med Co air ambulance could transport him to Martin Army hospital.

PVT Alexander is a recent arrival to the 690th, but he's no stranger to field situations. He recalls an experience that happened during the Brave Shield exercise. Alexander was assigned to the base hospital at Eglin Main as a medical liaison for his company. On the night of the Airborne drop he and many of his companions were stationed on the landing zone.

The private's first patient was BG Malloy, from the 82d Abn Div, who needed treatment for a sprained ankle. The situation later became hazardous when a heavy equipment drop took place on the landing zone while the medics were still working there.

Both medics agree that "the safety and comfort of the patients comes first." With this in mind, the NCOs and officers of 690th Med Co try to insure that their medics are the best.

As we begin our Bicentennial Year, resolutions fresh, will we fall back into that some old routine? Extended that holiday season feeling throughout 1976 — think of others . . .

Magie, Magic, Magic!
Alakazam! The doors opened and hundreds of children and adults poured into Marshall Auditorium to witness Abb Dickson in PRESTO! A MAGICAL SPECTACULAR in three performances on Dec. 22 and 23!

Some watched closely trying to detect HOW it was done. Others just watched in awe as Abb Dickson sawed a lady in three pieces. One child was heard to ask if the lady was a dummy! Mr. Dickson was even able to conjure up Santa!

The fantastic show here from a sell-out in Atlanta is a production of Atlanta Children's Theatre.

NCOWC Hamilton House
Mrs. Billy Dinnell and volunteers of the NCOWC gathered at Hamilton House in Columbus on Dec. 19 for a holiday party for the residents.

Carols were sung, refreshments served and there were gifts for all!

Children's Party
On Dec. 20 the children of NCOWC members gathered at the Main Post Recreation Center for the Annual Holiday Party.

Alfred Hancuff, the Magician, entertained the children with his wonderful acts of magic and transforming balloons into animals.

Special guests for the afternoon was Mr. Santa Claus from North Pole.

The children enjoyed refreshments, sang carols and visited with Santa who was passing out gifts.

Gift Wrapping
The ladies of the NCOWC wish to thank all who participated in any way with the Gift Wrapping booth at the PX. ORCHIDS to you all!

197th Inf Bde
The Normandy Room of the Officers Club was the scene for the HQ, 197th Inf Bde Hail and Farewell on Dec. 18.

VA questions & answers

Q — I understand the school notifies the VA when a veteran student drops out of GI Bill training. Why should the veteran have to duplicate this notification?

A — It is the veteran's responsibility to prevent VA over-payments by notifying the VA upon termination of training. Sometimes the time lag in the school's notification causes an overpayment to the student who must then repay the VA.

Q — I have been granted a waiver of premiums on my NSLI policy, five-year level term, because I am permanently and totally disabled. Can I convert this policy to a permanent plan and retain the waiver?

A — Yes, provided conversion is to other than an endowment plan. Waiver of premiums would continue on the new policy. If, however, you become able to maintain substantial employment, the waiver of premiums would be discontinued.

Q — Hasn't there been a change in VA regulations which allows a remarried widow to regain pension benefits if the second marriage is dissolved?

A — Since 1971 the remarriage of an eligible widow does not prevent resumption of death benefits to the widow when the subsequent marriage is terminated.

Montalban looking for ultimate role

By Joseph Molina

Ricardo Montalban, whose classic Latin good looks have made him a screen favorite for many years, says he is yet to find that "ultimate role."

He told TRADOC News Service in a telephone interview from his home, that he'll not be satisfied until he secures that role.

"To me," he said, "life is like climbing a mountain. It seems I don't want to get to the top unless I know there's a higher mountain to climb. I think it's the climb that makes life interesting."

"What happens in some careers is the actor reaches the top too early. Then he can only go down the mountain. It is painful and often these actors just disappear."

Ricardo Montalban

"I've never had that 'great role,' so I'm still climbing. I feel better things are still ahead; that in itself had helped me a great deal in life."

Montalban admits he has reached many significant plateaus in his life, but the one big role thus far has been the lead in "Don Juan In Hell." He toured with the production company for six months in the role.

He hasn't limited his acting horizon. He will accept a role regardless if its for television, movies or the stage. The prerequisite is, however, that it be a meaningful role, one that has dignity not only for him, but for others of Spanish descent.

Montalban has managed to overcome the stereotype roles. He no longer portrays the ram-paging bandit or illiterate peasant. Now he wants others of Spanish descent to find the same dignity in their acting chores.

An outgrowth of his work has been formation of an organization called "Nosotros," which means "Us."

"The idea of Nosotros," he said, "was to create an area of communication among producers, directors and writers so that we (persons of Spanish descent) are portrayed in a legitimate manner . . ."

"Not always the bandit, but as lawyers, decision makers — hard working men; an image portrayed with dignity whether the characters are good or bad."

"Even a bandit," Montalban continued, "is not an accurate caricature (of our people). Until recently, you seldom saw the Mexican-American as one who wore a suit and tie."

Many actors with Spanish sounding names have been forced to anglicize them, otherwise their job possibilities were limited, Montalban pointed out. If "Nosotros" proves successful, he added, those actors can avoid such problems.

"I asked the media to judge us, not by our names but by our ability. Some actors have limitations . . . accents for instance, others have none at all. Many don't even speak Spanish, or they have blue eyes, but if their name is Garcia, well . . . All we want to do is open the doors to their abilities and see if the actor is capable; forget the names."

"I think these are sensible goals," he emphasized. His beliefs kept him out of films for a while because he considered many of the roles to be in poor taste. Some approached pornography and Montalban rejected them altogether. The youth-oriented industry also kept him away from films for a while, but tastes are changing.

Ricardo Montalban, actor and activist for basic human rights, sees new horizons and he wants to be a part of the future. It's a new world and with "Nosotros" he may already be playing that ultimate role.

NEXT WEEK: Montalban discusses the Army, his visit to Vietnam and the late General Creighton W. Abrams.

Deer season over

By Denny Blankenship

Deer season ended in Georgia yesterday and from all indications hunters enjoyed another good year. The 12-day doe season accounted for a slight increase in total deer killed during the closing days with the deer-check station reporting 597 killed as of last Monday.

For those of you who are still trying to bag old "moss horns," the Alabama deer season does not end until January 24. Game officials expect an increased use of the Alabama portion of the reservation and due to the limited number of huntable acres in that area, all hunters are urged to use caution and to show consideration to fellow hunters.

Several members of the Post Bass Club have been catching nice strings of bass during the past few days. Although conditions and patterns are continually changing this time of year, one pattern seems to be holding firm — Bass in the river are taking "Spinner Baits" at the drop-offs of shallow shelves. A successful technique is to crank the spinner bait across the shelf at slow speed, "kill" it at the drop-off and let it

Spaghetti sauce inexpensive treat

By Joseph P. Frankoski

A glass of Italian red wine glistening like a ruby.

The soft and slightly wavering light of a candle.

The contented sigh of one who's stomach is pleasantly full.

The sights and sounds of a spaghetti dinner.

The most important part of a spaghetti dinner is the meat sauce (with the possible exception of the wine).

Here's an easy, inexpensive way to produce a sauce which will delight the palate.

In a large sauce pan melt one tablespoon of butter with three tablespoons of olive oil. Slice a large onion, and toss it in the pan with a whole clove of fresh garlic. Cook until the onion turns a golden color and add one and a half pounds of lean ground beef.

Cook the beef for five or six minutes, being careful not to burn it. While this is taking place open up a can of tomato paste and a can of tomato sauce.

When the meat has turned a sort of grey color, add the paste and sauce. Add a tablespoon of sugar, one of Oregano, a teaspoon of Sweet Basil and a large pinch of Thyme. Sprinkle in some salt and pepper.

Mix all of it together, put a lid on the pan, and simmer for at least one and a half hours.

Now comes the important part — allow the sauce to stand for two days. For some reason, a bit of aging imparts a delightful taste.

The entire cooking operation should require no more than fifteen minutes of actual work.

Cost-wise, this sauce is rather cheap.

At commissary prices

a pound and a half of lean ground beef costs about $1.20. Tomato paste at 14¢, tomato sauce at 22¢, an onion, 3¢, the spices about 2¢, the oil 2¢, the garlic about a nickel — there you have it. For less than $1.75 you have a sauce that will amply feed three adults.

As the last noodle is swallowed, the last sip of Italian wine gone, you may even hear, "Mama mia, such a good cook." (TNS)

Arriving at the post club I let my wife at the front entrance. "I'll meet you as soon as I park the car," I told her. Returning moments later I couldn't see outside. Laughter and conversation hundreds of voices boomed at me as I pped through the front door. I spied a id waving above the heads of the wd. Surging forward toward the spot ere I had seen the hand I strolled past ne people who were formed in a line ough a door.

"Please!" someone suggested as I pass-them.
entered a room and someone asked: our name, sir?"
"Is this the receiving line?" I blinked.
"Yes, it is. Your name, please."
"Mr. and Mrs. T. Gunner."
"Mr. and Mrs. T. Gunner," the first son repeated to the second person who smiled and greeted me before asking someone next to me: "You are Mrs. Gunner?"

"I certainly am not," a gruff masculine voice belted. "I've never seen this turkey before."

Later I found my wife near the front entrance. "Where in the world have you been?" she demanded. "I've been standing here for over an hour waiting for you."

"It's a long story," I answered. "Let's go home."

"What do you mean go home? We haven't been through the receiving line."

"Yes we have and you made a very big impression," I said.

"I have not been through the line," she gasped from exasperation. "How could I make an impression?"

"Dressed as a colonel of engineers," I shrugged.

Married officers and enlisted personnel overwhelmingly choose medical care as the most valuable non-monetary benefit offered by the Army, according to a recent survey conducted by Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN).

More than 70 per cent of those polled placed health care benefits first in their list of "bennies" offered by the Army.

MILPERCEN spokesmen say such benefits always rate high. Next on the list was commissary privileges (12 per cent) and on-post housing, a close third.

Some 3,900 officers and 16,600 enlisted personnel took part in the random sampling. Single soldiers were not polled.

Lightning

An Overlooked Killer

Due to concern with high winds and damaging hail during a thunderstorm, the major killer, lightning, is often overlooked. Lightning kills more persons annually in the United States than tornadoes and hurricanes. It strikes somewhere on earth 100 times every second.

Lightning occurs when differences in ground and atmosphere electrical charges are large enough to overcome the insulating effect of air. It may occur within a cloud, between clouds, and between the cloud and the ground. The rapid expansion of air heated by the lightning stroke causes accompanying thunder. The distance in miles to the lightning can be estimated by counting the number of seconds between the lightning flash and the thunder and dividing by five.

The following safety rules can protect you from the lightning of a thunderstorm.

Stay indoors. Venture outside only if absolutely necessary.

Seek shelter in large metal or metal frame buildings or buildings protected by anti-lightning devices.

Stay away from open doors and windows, fireplaces and all plug in electrical devices.

Do not use the telephone as lightning may travel into your home over the lines.

If inside shelter is not available, seek shelter in a cave, deep depression in the earth or at the foot of a cliff.

Avoid the highest objects in the area such as towers or isolated trees.

Crouch near the ground in the open away from these objects if better shelter is not available.

Do not use metal objects like golf clubs or fishing rods. Golfers with metal cleats are particularly vulnerable.

Stay away from metal fences, telephone and power lines, metal clothes lines and exposed pipelines.

Post crime rate declines

"The Home of the Infantry" is a much safer place to live than it was six months ago, according to figures released this week by the Office of the Provost Marshal.

Whereas 529 offenses were reported as occurring during July of 1975, only 325 offenses were reported in December. The graph on page 5 illustrates the decreased crime trends for Ft. Benning during the past six months as compared to a like period in 1974.

Reported larcenies showed the most drastic decline. After reaching a high-water mark of 162 in August, 81 larcenies were reported last month.

Traffic accidents and miscellaneous offenses also decreased significantly during the six-month period. Ninety-six traffic accidents were reported and investigated in July. This decreased to 65 in December. Miscellaneous offenses, which include forgery, sodomy, driving under the influence, drunk driving, wrongful appropriations and dog bites, dropped from 252 in July to 128 in December.

Crimes of violence, which include murder, rape, robbery, and aggravated assault, have also decreased, but less markedly. After only four crimes of violence were reported in July, the number jumped to 11 in August. Four crimes of violence were reported on post in September; five in October; four in November; and four in December. These numbers indicate reported incidents. Of the total 32 crimes of violence reported, only 25 incidents were determined to have actually occurred during the past six months.

CPT Ronald S. Phillips, provost marshal operations officer, says the decline in reported offenses can be attributed to "increased command emphasis within the units and greater awareness by individuals in protecting themselves and securing their property."

The sharp reduction in the number of reported larcenies, however, can be tied directly to tighter security measures, says Phillips.

"Most larcenies, for example, are related to automobiles, so we have concentrated our patrols on the known problem areas, specifically the parking lots in which many larcenies have occurred in the past," he explained.

Phillips adds that one of the big problems post MPs have to contend with is unsecured property. "People could really help reduce crime by securing their valuables and leaving some lights on when they go out."

Each major unit on post has implemented its own "Standard Operating Procedure" for crime prevention and there are more similarities than differences.

CPT Eric Kraemer, Crime Prevention Officer of The School Brigade, reveals that his unit has initiated two-man patrols equipped with radios during hours of darkness.

"There is a greater emphasis on awareness of the

Offenders to walk

New law costly to drunk drivers

A new law went into effect in Georgia last week and its far-reaching ramifications may cause a lot of foot blisters for Ft. Benning soldiers.

With the enactment of Ga. Code Section 68A-902, anyone found guilty of driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol will lose his driving privileges in this state for one year on the first offense.

A second offense means suspension of driving privileges for three years and three-time offenders will have to make do without their licenses for five long years.

Soldiers with out-of-state drivers licenses are subject to the same penalties as Georgians. According to Captain W. L. Armstrong, clerk of the Columbus Recorder's Court, your license will be returned to the state which issued it upon conviction of DUI.

And should their law differ and they return your license to you, you are still not allowed to drive in Georgia.

Ft. Benning has similar penalties for driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. On the reservation the charge is called "Driving While Drunk." In addition to mandatory one-year suspension of your drivers license, you are also subject to punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Further, you can lose your post driving privileges just for refusing to take a blood/alcohol test while on Ft. Benning. According to SFC

See related story, page 7

David Christy of the provost marshal's office, refusal to take the test will result in a mandatory six-month suspension.

The message here is clear: If you drink, don't drive. And if you are convicted of DUI, whether on post or off, you'd better be prepared for a lot of walking in the next year.

COL Jack B. Farris (L) passes commander of the newly formed the guidon to LTC William J. 1st AIT brigade. See story page Windham, incoming 4th Battalion 6.

Memorial services for King scheduled here

Memorial services in observance of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday will be held Monday at 4 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall (Building No. 4). Chaplain (LTC) Roland F. Day, post chaplain, will be the guest speaker. Following the services, a reception will be held at the Main Post Recreation Services building.

Other activities on the reservation that will hold memorial services on Monday are: the 36th Engr Gp in the Sightseeing Chapel at 8:30 p.m.; the 43d Engr Bn at the 43d Engr Chapel at 1:30 p.m.; and 197th Inf Bde in the Kelley Hill Theater at 3 p.m., the 1st AIT Bde in the Sand Hill Chapel at 12:30 p.m., and The School Brigade memorial services will be held at 5:30 p.m. in the Airborne Chapel.

Dependent schools will also participate in the observance through the use of displays, readings and other appropriate activities.

IN MEMORIAM

On 15 January, Ft. Benning personnel will join Americans everywhere in observing the birthday of the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

On this day, we should be reminded of Dr. King's lasting influence on America's society. It is an occasion to rededicate ourselves to the principle for which he lived and died — dignity to all, regardless of color, creed or national origin.

In recognition of Dr. King's many contributions, special memorial services will be conducted in unit chapels and Marshall Auditorium. In addition, the local organizations will be sponsoring services throughout the community. All military personnel, their families and civilian employees are encouraged to join in these services.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was born in Atlanta on Jan. 15, 1929. His grandfather, Alfred William founded the famous Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta and his father Martin Sr., continued the work his father had started. As a result, the Ebenezer congregation became one of the largest in the city. Dr. King's mother, Alberta Williams King, was a school teacher who was also quite active in church activities.

Dr. King was graduated from Atlanta's Washington High School. After earning his Degree in Sociology from Morehouse College, he entered the Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa.

In 1951, he received a Bachelor of Divinity Degree at Crozer, graduating first in his class and winning the J. Lewis Crozer Fellowship. In 1955, he was awarded a Ph.D. Degree in Systematic Theology from the Graduate School of Theology at Boston University.

While studying in Boston, he met his future wife, Coretta Scott of Marlon, Ala. They were married in 1953.

Had it not been for Mrs. Rosa Parks, the world might never have heard of Martin Luther King, Jr. Mrs. Parks was arrested in Montgomery, Ala. for refusing to yield her seat to a white man. Outraged at Mrs. Parks' arrest, the black community organized the Montgomery Improvement Association (MIA) and elected Dr. King as its president. At the time, Dr. King was pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery. The MIA staged a massive boycott which lasted 381 days and resulted in a desegregated bus system.

After the historic bus boycott, Dr. King's name came to symbolize nonviolent change and civil rights for black Americans. After Montgomery, King and a group of Atlanta ministers formed the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) with King as its leader.

Non-violent in principle and practice, the SCLC became the base for future civil rights actions.

In 1964, Dr. King won the Nobel Prize for Peace. Characteristically, he donated the $54,600 prize money to the civil rights cause.

As SCLC's leader, King led non-violent protests nationwide, disregarding his own safety. In the end, he was the victim of the very violence he abhorred. In Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968, he was leading striking black sanitation men and was slain by an assassin's bullet at the age of 39.

Concern pays off

Crime prevention efforts yield results

By Terry D. Ragan

Crime has gone up, up and out of sight off post. Radio and television stations, as well as the newspapers, have decried the upsurge of crime (particularly armed robberies) in editorial and news formats. Capping the startlingly recent upswing in violent crimes were the senseless shooting of a young man in a Columbus restaurant last Sunday and the gunning down of a prominent Columbus business man only two days ago.

Such needless deaths are appalling.

Crime statistics for Ft. Benning are somewhat more heartening when compared to the onslaught off post. On page one of this issue, we spell out Ft. Benning's impressive drop in crime over the past six months, and the reasons why. But what it all boils down to is you.

You cared enough to lock up the house, the car and the wall locker. You turned on outside lights during darkness, and left on a light or two on inside the house when you were away. The result was the most drastic decline in larcenies in a long, long time.

Less spectacular, but still impressive when compared to the overall population of Ft. Benning, is the equally low number of violent crimes reported. Violent crimes — rape, murder, armed robbery — rose and fell throughout the six-month period ending in December, but averaged four per month. Still, all it takes is one crime like Sunday's shooting to raise (justifiably) a public hue and cry.

There are criminals in ever society, and no society in the history of man has been without crime. Now, in the face of the sudden rise in crime downtown, it is a particularly good time not only to think about Ft. Benning's successes in the past six months, but also to evaluate how far we still have to go.

Crime, violent or otherwise, is too close to ignore. The senseless deaths of two men should make the point vividly clear.

The home of the Infantry deserves your cooperation and concern in fighting crime...

from where I stand...

Ned Nearsight was huddled over a desktop piled with paper when I walked into the orderly room. "What'cha doing, Ned," I asked peering over his shoulder.

"Reorganizing the Army's Table of Organization and Equipment," he mumbled. "After that I'm going to rewrite the Table of Distribution and Allowances."

"Good grief," I exhaled. "That's quite a task. What's the purpose?"

"I'm putting the women in our Army into combat units where they say they want to be."

"Who told you to do that?" I asked.

"Nobody. I'm going to submit it when I finish. Maybe I can win an incentive award."

"How does it work?"

"There are lots of slots that a woman could fill in a combat unit. Like my job for instance."

"Company clerk?"

"Sure, Women are natural typists. Look how many go to secretary school, or business school, or..."

"Yeah, but old Backcrusher would raise the roof," I interrupted.

"First Sergeant Backcrusher just may not have anything to say about it, my friend," Ned proclaimed.

I felt my bottom jaw drop when I heard him say that. And when First Sergeant Backcrusher stomped into the room my bottom teeth suddenly felt loose.

"What's going on here, you two," the first sergeant bellowed. I heard a coffee cup rattle in a saucer when his voice rebounded off the wall.

I smiled weakly. "I was just watching Nearsight, First Sergeant," I stammered.

"What're you doing, Nearsight?" Backcrusher demanded.

"Reorganizing the Army, First Sergeant," Ned answered without looking up from the pile of papers.

Backcrusher's laugh sounded like Boris Korloff and Edgar Allen Poe yelling together. I backed into the wall when the first sergeant snapped a question at me.

"Gunner, did I hear Nearsight say he was reorganizing the Army?" His eyes bored holes into my chest.

"Ah, yes, First Sergeant," I whispered. "What does that mean?" Backcrusher ordered.

I swallowed hurriedly and sucked wind into my lungs. But Nearsight saved me from having to reply.

"I'm finding jobs for women in our combat units, First Sergeant."

"Put some of them in the messhall, Nearsight. We could stand a meal now and then with a woman's touch." He looked at me and his lip seemed to curl. "What's the matter with you, Gunner? Don't you like good food?"

"Yes, First Sergeant, but..."

"But? But what?"

"Women don't want those kind of jobs. That's not what the women are talking about when they say they want jobs in combat units. In fact, it's those kind of jobs they complain about."

"Complaints, complaints, complaints. I can't please everybody," Ned complained.

"Put some women in the support platoon, Nearsight," Backcrusher commanded. "Put some in the motor pool as mechanics. Place some women in the communications platoon and the supply room. Those are jobs in combat units."

"Nearsight said he was going to put a woman in his job," I offered in the silence.

"In my orderly room?" the first sergeant glared.

"Sure. Why not?" Nearsight shrugged. "It frees another man to go where the action is."

"There won't be no woman in my orderly room!" Backcrusher stated flatly.

"Well, it won't really be your orderly room, First Sergeant. It won't be any man's orderly room. You see," Ned explained, "with my reorganization the First Sergeant and the Executive Officer will be women."

I was out the door even before the overturned desk hit the floor.

problem and more people are alert to the problem today than they were before," he says.

COL Adolph Hight, commander of the 36th Engr Gp, reports "increased awareness, increased security measures, and a corresponding reduction in criminal opportunities" as causes for reduced crime statistics within his unit.

LTC Wayne Boles of Headquarters Command also reports the instigation of night patrols and additional security measures. "We encourage our troops to register their valuables with both their company commander and with the Provost Marshal, and we urge individuals to secure any large sums of money in their company safes," adds Boles.

LTC Donald Hull, commander of the 34th Med Bn says "closer monitoring of potential problem areas and the instigation of stiff but fair punishment for offenders" has contributed to a lower crime rate within his unit.

MAJ Robert W. Pegg, provost marshal of the 197th Inf Bde, attributes the brigade's reduction in criminal activity to total involvement.

"It is the policy of the brigade to insure that everyone is made aware of the problems we have with crime, and that a concerted effort be made at all levels to reduce criminal activity to a minimum," he says. "This widespread involvement has had favorable results, and has caused an overall reduction in our current crime rate."

The chart indicates the total reported crime trends for Fort Benning. The gradual total decline indicates that positive actions are being taken and favorable results are being recorded. Continued efforts will result in Ft. Benning achieving a "safe haven" reputation. This will occur because, as noted above, awareness of the problem and command action has been directed toward reducing crime. Solicitation and total support from the Ft. Benning community will be the ingredient that will make the Crime Prevention Program a success.

197th soldier eyes Olympic berth

By Ron Fowler

Who's faster than a speeding bullet? More powerful than a locomotive? Able to run long distances in short periods of time? If you said Superman, you were right. But if you had said Ansil A Callender, you'd also be correct.

PFC Callender, a medic in HHC, 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde can stake a claim to something that most people cannot. He has completed the 600-yard run during a track and field meet in four seconds shy of the world record. And he's getting closer to breaking the record each day!

Callender, a native of Arouca, Trinidad, started running when he was seven years old and he's been steadily improving ever since.

"My mother was the one who really got me started in competitive running," Callender said. "Right after my seventh birthday my mother had been shopping and when she came back she told me about a new track club that was being formed near the school that I went to. She knew that I really loved track and field because I would spend four and five hours a day just watching the professionals run on television. Then she asked me if I would like to join and I immediately jumped at the chance."

So Callender practiced and ran, and practiced and ran. During the time he was in the track club, he ran up a string of victories and record times for his age group that almost no one would believe. It was then that PFC Callender's big break came.

"Right after my 17th birthday I was chosen to participate in the Junior Olympics, which just happened to be held in Trinidad that year," Callender related. "I placed first in all the events that I participated in and there were some people in the stands who really took notice, namely the college track scouts."

"I was offered a total of about 25 scholarships, and finally accepted the one from Grand Valley State University in Michigan. They had the kind of track team that I wanted to run for."

It was at Grand Valley that he established himself as a viable contender in the field of long-distance running. He set a school record in the half-mile, running it in 1:48.0. Later he set a National Association of Inter-collegiate Athletics conference record by completing the 600-yard run in 1:14.1, just four seconds shy of the world's record.

According to Callender, that record was the first step towards his boyhood dream of participating in the Olympics.

"My next step towards that end is to be selected to the All-Army and All-Service track teams," the swift soldier said. And if past performance is any indicator, this selection is imminent.

Notice to veterans

States update bonus criteria

Some states paying Vietnam era bonuses have changed eligibility requirements and set cut off-dates; others have ended bonus payments.

Fourteen states and Guam are still paying a bonus since the Vietnam conflict was declared officially over Jan. 27, 1973 and award of the Vietnam Service Medal ended March 28, 1973

In all cases, eligibility determination rests with state authorities; those Vietnam era veterans who apply must meet all the state's requirements. If there is any doubt about eligibility, Vietnam veterans can apply to the proper authorities to allow them to rule on the claim.

In some states, veterans' surviving next-of-kin may be eligible for the bonuses.

State bonus payments are exempt from federal and state taxes and need not be reported on either tax form.

States still paying a Vietnam era bonus — along with cutoff dates — include:

Connecticut — July 1, 1978
 Guam — May 7, 1977
 Illinois — July 1, 1977
 Indiana — March 28, 1976
 Iowa — June 30, 1977
 Louisiana — March 28, 1978
 Massachusetts — no date set Michigan — June 30, 1980
 Minnesota — Dec. 31, 1976
 Montana — July 1, 1976
 North Dakota — Jan. 27, 1976
 Ohio — Jan. 1, 1978
 Vermont — nod date set
 Washington — March 28, 1976

West Virginia — Dec. 31, 1976

Delaware ended bonus payments June 30, 1974; Pennsylvania on March 28, 1974 and South Dakota on Jan. 1, 1975

AIT unit activated

A ceremony formally activating the 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade (Infantry) was held on York Field Wednesday.

Host officer was COL Jack B. Farris Jr., brigade commander and the reviewing officer was MG Willard Latham, Ft. Benning commander.

The AIT Brigade at Benning is envisioned at this time as consisting of five battalions with a total of 24 companies and a training cadre. Under present plans, approximately 5,000 trainees and 1,650 permanent party support personnel will be involved when the brigade reaches full strength in 1976.

COL Farris was graduated from the Citadel in 1958 with a BA degree in Political Science. Commissioned an Infantry second lieutenant, Farris completed the Infantry Officer Basic Course, and the Ranger and Airborne Schools here at Ft. Benning.

CSM James J. Gallagher is the top enlisted man for the new unit. The AIT assignment is Gallagher's third tour of Ft. Benning.

Other commanders in the 1st AIT brigade include: CPT Perry W. Martin, HHC; LT Benjamin J. Buckley, 1st Bn; LTC Robert L. Ord III, 2nd Bn; LTC Donald L. Williamson, 3rd Bn; LTC William J. Windham, 4th Bn; LTC John G. Fowler, 5th Bn.

Just when are you drunk?

By Rick Wasser

The new Georgia law that carries a stiff penalty for driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol obviates the natural question: at what point are you legally drunk?

To begin with, if you are swerving from lane to lane on the highway and the local constabulary sees you, chances are good that you'll be pulled over. But even if you're cold sober, you are still subject to a routine check by Columbus or military police.

It doesn't matter if you have the smell of booze on your breath or not, or if you can function normally in every way. In determining whether or not you are "legally drunk," a blood/alcohol test is given. If the alcohol content in your blood is in excess of one tenth of one per cent (.10%), then you are drunk — simple as that. And one DUI conviction is all that's needed now to cost you your driving privileges for a year.

To put this .10% in better perspective, let's examine some figures that will allow your blood/alcohol content to stay within the legal limit based on 86 proof liquor:

If you weigh 150 pounds, you cannot drink more than four ounces of alcohol in the first hour and still be legally sober; 160 pounds — 4½ oz.; 180 pounds — 5 oz.; 200 pounds — 5½ oz. At those levels, the amount of alcohol in your blood will not exceed .10%. If you are a beer drinker, merely substitute 12 ounces of beer for one ounce of hard liquor to stay within the legal limit.

Another point to consider is that the average human liver can dispose of about one ounce of alcohol per hour. Therefore, if you drink the above limits in your first hour of partying, you can only have one ounce of alcohol (or 1 can of beer) in each subsequent hour.

If the thought of losing your driving privileges for a year worries you, and the blood/alcohol content percentages confuse you, there is a solution. Don't drink if you're going to drive!

Woodcrafts

Looking for a constructive and potentially profitable hobby? Maybe getting involved in woodcrafts is what you're after to occupy some of your idle hours.

Ft. Benning has two fully equipped craft shops open to active duty, retired and dependent personnel.

"The facilities have just about every piece of electrical and hand-operated tool imaginable to make whatever you want," says Mr. Jack Stewart, the post craft director.

He adds that there are people on hand to provide professional guidance and instruction to beginners.

The craft shops are located on main post in building 2783, across from the bowling alley, and on Kelly Hill in building 9049.

The hours of operation for both facilities are: 1:30-9:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays. Both shops are closed Monday.

write'

The right of soldiers and DA civilian employes to correspond with their congressional representatives is protected by the U.S. Constitution, federal law, DoD directives and Army regs.

And that right is being reemphasized in a recently published circular (DA Cir 600-5, dated Oct. 8, 1975). The DA circular states that no one may restrict a soldier from communicating with a member of Congress — unless the communication is unlawful or violates national security.

Despite the right to write, DA points out that soldiers should seek advice or assistance from within their chain of command before forwarding their complaints. Letters concerning a personal problem inevitably must be returned to the local commander before help can be given. Soldiers also should inform their families of this fact, DA says.

Effective communication between soldiers and the chain of command is the way to handle personal problems and reduce complaints to members of Congress DA officials say.

Civilian employes, either individually or collectively, also may write to their congressional representatives. While DA prefers that employes settle problems or grievances locally, any employe who writes to a congressman may not be coerced for exercising that right, according to the circular. (ANF)

The most important thing to you in this world is managing your money so that you are better able to take care of yourself and loved ones, the longer you stay with one banking institution, the better they become at handling your finances, loans, and all the things that a bank is so helpful at doing. It just makes sense since like trading with your favorite retailer, you become more than a customer, you're a friend. When you move you have to make new acquaintances in a strange place, but you don't have to change banks, at the National Bank of Fort Benning you can bank by mail from anywhere in the world. # Connection with the past

By CHAPLAIN HENRY HARVEY

It has been said that the young people of this generation generally feel little connection with the past. They "feel quite removed from history," and that for many the past has little that is significant and worth affirming. I must disagree with those who have such an idea of the past.

I disagree on the basis of what Santayna wrote, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." Therefore, an adequate philosophy of life should include some knowledge and understanding of the past.

Rooted with knowledge and understanding of the past, we are better equipped to cope with the present and to prepare for the future without repeating past mistakes. Knowledge and appreciation of the past will help us avoid some mistakes. We can learn from the experience of others.

In order to think seriously and constructively about our relationship to the past, we must understand and accept the fact that the American Dream of freedom, equality, and justice for all is our heritage as American citizens. Freedom and equality cannot be separated within the American Dream. Freedom is like love, the more you share it, the more you enjoy it, and its fullness can only be realized when we share it equally with others.

The essence of freedom is that the restraints which make it possible, and the privileges which it confers, must be applied equally to all citizens. Unfortunately, the American Dream of freedom and equality, expressed so eloquently in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, has not been fully realized by all our citizens. Therefore, each of us must decide how to express our concern for those who are less fortunate than we are.

One way of expressing our concern for less fortunate citizens is to help the people of America open up their hearts and let the light of uncompromising good shine in. America, if it is to survive, and only each of us with our personal convictions can decide that, cannot afford the anguish and anarchy brought on by bitter frustration and confusion of past deeds. We must not permit the people of America to compromise those basic principles which demand that all citizens enjoy the American Dream of freedom and equality. We must join all people of good will in continuing to practice those basic principles which have made our country great.

It is not irreverent to love all people and to be concerned about them. Therefore, we must help the people of America to open up their hearts so that the light of faith and honesty may replace the dim rays of doubt, dishonesty and hostility. This is the responsibility of each American citizen. This is our heritage, a heritage of ideals and principles that make it imperative to extend the fruits of democracy to all people.

Those of us who would insure the American Dream of freedom and equality to all citizens must accept our connection with the past. We must endeavor to familiarize ourselves with each aspect of our heritage. It has served as a source of inspiration and courage in the immensity of problems and mounting crisis. It is each individual's responsibility to understand his birthright from the past, and to expand and defend this heritage for our posterity.

Self-move program Saves

Successful testing of the "move-it-yourself" program at six Army posts in the U.S. has resulted in an expansion of the program CONUS-wide beginning this month.

Under the self-moving option, a soldier can use rental trucks or trailers to move household goods locally or cross-country to the next duty station at government expense rather than have a commercial carrier do it.

The program works like this: First contact the post transportation office (TO) at 545-4588 and they will tell you if you are eligible and help compute your moving needs.

Next, the TO arranges the details with the truck or trailer rental contractor. The contractor, upon request, figures the best route, travel time and gives you a cash allowance to cover enroute fuel and servicing expenses.

The contractor furnishes the packing material. You can hire help and be reimbursed for it — but you can't hire relatives. Family members can travel with you and still receive a travel allowance. You pay for tow bar rental if you tow your car.

On the road, all your receipts should be saved. Minor route deviations — 10 per cent or 50 miles — can be made.

When you have reached your new station and unload, just turn in the truck or trailer to the contractor's representative — settle up — and you're finished. Claims for non-negligent damage can be filed as you would for a commercial firm move.

The voluntary "move-it-yourself" program, DA officials say, has been very successful since the program test began a year ago. During the first 11 months of the program, there were almost 500 moves which saved an average of $336 apiece. The average load was slightly more than 3,500 pounds. Moves ranged from 10 miles to 2,700 miles in distance.

The program also resulted in a number of hidden savings, such as no known claims for damages and storage charges have also been minimized. Users of the "move-it-yourself" program ranged from junior enlisted to at least one colonel.

Benning Dramatizers

Post theatre group enthus

By JOYCE WALKER

For several nights during the early part of December, Jacqueline O'Dell, a 15-year-old freshman at Baker High School, would age 42 years for a couple of hours and then return to her normal age.

However no one in her family was bewildered at the phenomenon. With the aid of a little grease paint and a few aged lines skillfully drawn by Robert Cunningham, a student at Columbus College, anyone could be made to look a 102.

Both Jacqueline and Robert are members of the Ft. Benning Dramatizer Theater Club. Jacqueline appeared as a 57-year-old witch in the group's latest production, "Bell, Book and Candle." Robert is head of the club's make-up department.

The Fort Benning Dramatizers are an enthusiastic group of theatre-minded people who got together at the Post Playhouse and formed the Dramatizers Theater Club on Aug. 25, 1969.

Mr. Roy Lothner, who was instrumental in the formation of the Dramatizers, serves as the Music and Theater Director on post.

He also acts as the producer for all of the Dramatizer's productions.

A dynamic figure within the group is its drama director, Ann Morgan. The energetic 5-foot blonde first started working with the club as a volunteer in 1972 and has been its drama director since May 1975. She holds a degree in Speech and Drama from Ripon College in Wisconsin.

Since her inception with the Dramatizers, she has directed five plays including "Rashomond," "A Thousand Clowns" and "Bell, Book and Candle."

The playhouse is an ideal place for people with a common interest to meet and work together within an informal atmosphere," says Ann.

Anyone over the age of 16 is eligible to become a voting member by attending five meetings held at the Playhouse each Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. One can also become a club member by working on one Dramatizer production.

Club members select and elect their own Board of Directors which consists of a President, Byrdi Austin, Vice President, Shirley CPT Michael Sedlack, who is assigned here for the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, played the part of Sidney Redlitch, author in the play, "Bell, Book and Candle."

A few strokes of Robert Cunningham's brush and old age starts to set in on Jacqueline O'Dell, a 15-year-old freshman at Baker High School. Robert is a student at Columbus College.

It is the responsibility of the board to select the director and the next play that the club will produce. Any would-be directors or those who already have some directing experience are welcome to come to the playhouse with a potential script and fill out a form that asks general questions concerning the play.

Each board member in turn, reads each submitted script. The potential director has to appear before the board to answer questions at one of the weekly club meetings. Club members then vote as to whether or not they are willing to perform the play.

Not only are potential actors and directors encouraged to join the club, but artists, carpenters, painters and anyone else with a creative talent that they think would be beneficial to the club are welcome.

Since its organization in 1969, the dramatizers have produced 23 shows ranging from a sentimental shakespearean comedy, "A Midnight Summer Dream," to a romantic fantasy, "Beauty and the Beast."

"We put on about four shows a year," says Ann.

Rehearsal periods for each production are about eight weeks long. Club members spend countless hours on every phase of preparing the productions. They do all their own stage work, costume designing and sewing.

"We have even made such things as bed spreads and couch covers for some of our shows," says Ann.

The playhouse has its own tool room, sewing room, paint shop and workshop where club members can construct their sets. Even the front office sometimes doubles as a workshop.

In addition to their many long hours and devotion to the theatre, the Dramatizers find time for social events too. They have had a picnic, several parties and other outings. But the major emphasis is on producing entertaining shows for the Columbus-Ft. Benning audience. After all, the show must go on!

Jacqueline O'Dell has to take the witches oath and promise Byrdi Austin that she won't practice anymore witchcraft, during a scene in "Bell, Book and Candle".

Montalban has seen a lot of the Army

Editor's Note: The following article is the second and last in a series of interviews with actor Ricardo Montalban. In this installment, Montalban discusses the Army and his friendship with former Chief of Staff of the Army the late Creighton W. Abrams.

By Joe Molina

Ricardo Montalban has seen a lot of the Army in recent years, some of that time as a father visiting his son and some visiting the sons of other fathers.

His own son was stationed in Vietnam when Montalban made a goodwill visit in the early 70s.

Montalban told TNS in a recent telephone interview, "When I was in Vietnam I went to visit the troops as well as my son. It was my way of saying to them, 'Thank you for all the sacrifices you are making.'"

"I visited everything from hospitals to field firing stations," he continued. "I remember one visit to a tank guarding a bridge in the middle of nowhere. The guys and I posed for pictures and we had the coldest beer I ever tasted in my life. I've never been able to figure out how they kept it so cold inside the tank.

"They were so grateful. Everywhere I went I was given a little medal that I put on my fatigues. I still have them . . . I've never even washed my fatigues."

The highlight of his goodwill tour was when he and his son were invited to have dinner with the late Gen. Creighton W. Abrams.

"We spent the evening in the most relaxed manner. He loved hi-fi and so when we arrived he had Mexican Mariachi music for my benefit. I really enjoyed his company.

"After the end of the war, there was a dinner at the White House for all the returning POW's. I was standing around talking to someone when all of a sudden I see this man with medals all over his uniform.

"I wondered if that was GEN. Abrams. . . he looked so different because before I had only seen him in a sport shirt. I was turning around to ask someone if it was him when I felt a tap on the shoulder and someone said . . . 'What's the matter amigo, don't you say hello to an old friend?' It was GEN. Abrams. I must say that when he died I felt a personal loss. He was a good man."

While at the White House, Montalban was amazed to find that many of the former prisoners talked to him in Spanish. He later found out they learned the language during their imprisonment in order to keep their sanity.

"I found out that the majority of them could speak Spanish quite well. It was an amazing thing. One of the men who was instrumental in this was the Mexican-American hero CPT Alvarez. He was one of the longest held prisoners in Vietnam. They all looked to him with immense respect. He endured an intensive program with which the enemy had hoped to break him down. All he ever gave was his name, rank and serial number. He was an inspiration to the other prisoners."

Montalban is convinced that the U.S. Army is important to peace.

"As civilization goes forward," he said, "there is an evolution, a point where you have to reappraise attitudes. If the military eventually develops too much power in the governing policy of the country . . . that's bad. It's happened frequently in South America, but I do feel that an army is vital to have . . . It's definitely needed.

Fund drive set for Inf museum

A fund-raising campaign to support the new National Infantry Museum will be conducted, from January 12-February 20, among all military and civilian personnel at Ft. Benning and the membership of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

Funds will be used for the renovation of the old hospital annex on Main Post into a modern, first-class museum facility. The Department of the Army donated the historic building (built in 1925) to the Infantry Museum Association last month.

The museum has been located in World War II buildings on post since October 1959. The buildings are now considered unsafe and have insufficient space for storing and displaying the thousands of valuable and irreplaceable artifacts now owned by the museum.

Heading the fund drive is COL Wallace Veaudry, assistant commander, who has scheduled a meeting of all unit project officers for 2 p.m., Monday.

Approximately $7,000 in door prizes will be awarded at the annual George Washington Birthday Ball, sponsored by AUSA, to those making contributions to the museum drive.

Theatre Guild slates 'Irene' Jan. 13

It's time for a relaxed evening of fun and pure entertainment, according to the Ft. Benning Theatre Guild. The musical hit "Irene", third production of the Guild's premiere season, promises to provide exactly that for tri-community theatre-goers on Tuesday, January 13th at 8 p.m. in Benning's Marshall Auditorium.

The show stars Virginia Graham as Mrs. O'Dare, and Meg Bussert plays the title role as Irene O'Dare, the piano tuner's daughter from 9th Avenue whose work leads her to the very plush Marshall Estate on Long Island. The musical recounts her madcap escapades and the mishaps she encounters. (Virginia Graham is substituting for Patsy Kelley.)

Originally produced in 1919, "Irene", features song and dance from the 'good old days' coupled with new music and lyrics which have been blended into the original.

Talented performers are a highlight of the show. "Irene" marks Virginia Graham's musical comedy debut, though she is a familiar figure to radio and television audiences throughout the nation. Miss Graham was the hostess and star of "The New Virginia Graham Show" and for seven years she presided over "Girl Talk," the most successful and longest running syndicated daily TV show. Next spring, Miss Graham will once again star in a new series, "Famous Faces".

Meg Bussert, who will play Irene, has appeared on Broadway in such shows as "Lolita", "Irene", "Lorelei", and "Applause". Her credits are numerous in stock and regional theatre as well. She played Helen McFudd in a Florida tour of "Irene". Miss Bussert's experience with "Irene" has ranged from ensemble to understudy to Helen McFudd, and now she makes her debut as Irene O'Dare.

Tom Boyd, who appears as Madame Lucy, has been stand-by for the role not only on Broadway but also in the national company. Mr. Boyd's other Broadway credits include Mins, the bartender in "Walking Happy" and Benjamin Burton Daniel Ovington in "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying". Mr. Boyd also has extensive experience in summer stock.

Combine these talented performers with the many others who make up the cast of "Irene", and you have the makings of a spectacular evening of entertainment for the entire family.

Circle January 13th on your calendar, and call 545-7414 (Information, Tours and Travel) for ticket information. This is a show you'd hate to miss! Good seats are still available for $8 each, and special reduced price tickets are available for military personnel, E5 and below, and students for $4 each. Tickets may be purchased early at Bldg. No. 229, and will also be available at Marshall Auditorium the night of the performance.

Crappie begin seasonal run

By Denny Blankenship

Crappie, one of America's best freshwater food-fishes, have started their traditional winter-spring run. With the advent of cold weather and the resultant water temperature drop, large schools of these ferocious little battlers are prowling around in search of food and spawning beds.

For those hardy fishermen who want to brave the winter chill, many enjoyable hours of excellent fishing is available on or near the reservation. Try fishing the mouths of creeks in the river with "shiner" minnows at a depth of 6-8 feet, use small hooks and be very careful in setting the hook. Many nice Crappie are lost due to hooks pulling out of delicate mouths. When you get a bite, just lift your pole or rod up with normal pressure, this is usually sufficient to hook the fish.

If you like to bank fish, fish up Upatoi or Uchee Creeks with small "gigs." The gigs can be rigged singularly or in tandem and should be reeled in slowly. Many folks also use a bobber 2-3 feet above the gigs when stream fishing, this will allow a slower retrieve and possible better lure presentation in some hard-to-reach spots.

Preventive maintenance: key to units' combat effectiveness

By Ron Fowler

An army cannot fight without vehicles. Effective programs of preventive maintenance (PM) keeps an army's vehicles in tip-top shape, combat-ready and ready to roll at a minutes notice.

Imagine being called out on a mission or having to deploy in a moment's notice. When you jump into your vehicle, you discover that for some unknown reason, it won't start. You sit there trying and trying to get your vehicle started.

And then you remember. You didn't perform your PM the other day when you used the vehicle. You just shut it down, and turned it back in to the dispatcher. "Why should I pull PM," you thought to yourself. "It started and ran well this time, it'll do the same next time."

Well, 'next time is now and your vehicle won't start, all because you didn't take a little extra time out of the day to pull a little PM. Now you're in a jam.

Many people shy away from PM because when the two words are mentioned they envision endless hours of taking mechanical gadgetry apart, cleaning it, and putting it back together. PM isn't that at all.

PM consists of three main things; a pre-operations check, a during-operations check, and a post-operations check. All of these play a large part in determining the combat-readiness of your vehicle and they don't take that much time to perform.

So if the three phases of PM don't take that long to perform, why don't they get done as often as they should?

The primary reason is laziness," said SP4 Walter R. McDuffie, a tank turret mechanic in Trp A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde. "It's too easy for a man to say, 'Well, I'll let it slide just this one.' And after he lets it go once, it becomes a habit."

23d winner named

Patterson Memorial Award

By Betty Zimmerman
Second Lieutenant Christopher F. Burton has been named the outstanding honor graduate of the U.S. Army Infantry School's 1975 Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOC), and winner of the 23rd Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award.

LT Burton, Company A, 2d Bn, 504th Inf, Ft. Bragg, N.C. will receive an engraved service pistol, a cash award, the Patterson Award Certificate, and a plaque from Mrs. Patterson in ceremonies scheduled here February 12.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 to honor the memory of the late Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who entered the military in 1916. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action in 1918 and later won the Silver Star for gallantry. He also received the Purple Heart. Patterson succeeded Henry L. Stinson as Secretary of War on Sept. 18, 1945.

Receiving honors is not new to LT Burton. He was first in his class at Virginia Military Institute in his freshman and sophomore years. In Basic Combat Training (BCT), he was chosen trainee of the cycle, and was the honor graduate in both Advanced Individual Training (AIT) and in the Non-Commissioned Officers Education System (NCOES). LT Burton made the Commandant's List in Infantry Officers Basic Course (IOBC) 10-75 in August 1975.

His achievements during BIOC 3-75 exemplified the attributes required of an effective leader. LT Burton was the Leadership Honor Graduate based on a 100 per cent score as judged by his peers and superiors. He placed sixth in overall class standing with a combined rating of 93.72 per cent.

The 23-year-old lieutenant from Long Beach, Calif., wears the Expert Infantryman Badge, the Parachutist's Badge and the Ranger Tab. He served in enlisted status from September, 1972 until graduation from Officers Candidate School in May 1975.

197th soldiers Alaska bound

By Ron Fowler

Some 150 men from the 197th Inf Bde will fly northward this month for about two weeks to learn how to work with, and conquer, the elements of cold.

The U.S. Army Northern Warfare Training Center at Ft. Greely, Alaska, will teach these men the methods of fighting and surviving in the frigid and hostile climate of the northland.

The men from the brigade will be going through the winter phase of the Operations in Northern Areas training, which is one of five basic programs of Arctic training offered at Ft. Greely.

Blocks of instruction to be given during the winter operations training will range from tactical movement on mountainous and glacial terrain to the effects of cold water on troops, material and equipment.

Some of the highlights the men will experience during their first week of Arctic training will be learning how to ski, classroom and practical application of different methods of field living, and the peculiar aspects of airborne and airmobile operations in an arctic climate.

I am really looking forward to the trip and the experience," said SP4 John Billips of Co A, 197th Spt Bn. "It'll give us the chance to see just what we can do in an environment such as Alaska and it will also afford me the opportunity of being able to say that I made it through one of the toughest courses, climate and weather-wise, that the Army has to offer."

But the experience and training benefits of the Alaska trip aren't the only thing that the northbound soldiers are looking forward to.

"I would just like to see for myself what it's like up there," commented SP4 Donald Alford of Co B, 1/58th Inf. "I've had some friends who went through the program up there and they said that it's something that you'd never be able to imagine, and I'll bet it is. I can't wait."

PFCs Richard and Jane Ammons scored identical 468's on the Advanced Physical Training Test and both ran five miles in less than 50 minutes for record timing. The Ammons, married nearly four years, joined the Army in November, 1974 and both work for the DA-Wide Training Support (DAWTS).

MPs in training to catch drunks

The Ft. Benning Military Police received a breath analyzer Wednesday which measures the amount of alcohol a driver has consumed, according to the MP operations sergeant.

SFC David W. Christy said the MPs will begin taking classes in operating the machine Monday.

At present, those suspected of driving while drunk, are asked to take a blood/alcohol (BA) test at Martin Army Hospital. The BA test will still be used in detecting drugs when the breath test is negative, Christy said.

Military personnel that refuse to submit to the BA test or that are convicted of driving while drunk on the reservation will lose their on-post driving privileges for six months. Civilian personnel convicted of driving while drunk on Ft. Benning are subject to the Georgia Law and will lose their driving privileges for one year.

Although the military cannot revoke a civilian license, a report of point assessment is sent to the driver's home state. The Army has a 12-point system similar to the one used by most states.

When a soldier goes to a new base, the loss of driving privileges does not follow him, but the point assessment does.

The opportunities are endless

Education: a foot in the door to success

By TERRY D. RAGAN

In case you haven't seen the advertisements or talked to your sergeant major lately (like since you enlisted), the Army is pushing higher education. The obvious benefit is higher rank. In this upwardly mobile society, in which those who attend college should (ideally) "go further" than those who don't, education makes sense.

But education literally goes a lot deeper than that. As an obscure professor of mine once noted, education doesn't provide "The Answers" as much as it helps ask the right questions. We would add that education goes a long way toward understanding this mad but fascinating globe that Man inhabits. That's quite a lot.

Education helps you communicate your ideas better, a tangible, real-world benefit. The way education does this is by ream after ream of reading followed by ream after ream of writing. If your own course work doesn't demand lots of reading and writing, something is wrong either with the professor or with the college.

At any rate, reading and writing can't help but make you a better communicator. If you've ever read a piece of Army correspondence that you couldn't understand (not much of that, right?), or if the writing contained misspellings and horrid sentence constructions, you know what we mean. Taken seriously, writing (coupled with voracious reading) is the be-all and end-all of a college education. It's that important.

On the more ethereal level, education will broaden your horizons to the limits of the universe. You'll find subjects you never thought existed, subjects that will hold you spellbound for the rest of your life. You'll hold your own in any conversation, whether the conversation is about Malthusian economics or Indonesian political thinking. You've never met anyone who talks about those things? That's his problem.

Finally, there's the aspect of applying what you've learned to the real world. You'll put your ideas across more concretely, whether spoken or written. Your skills will outstrip those who decided to let education pass them by, whether those skills be manual or in the realm of pure knowledge.

You might leave the Army. You might lose your civilian job. You might lose all of your worldly possessions. At any time in your life, you might find yourself penniless and without a friend. But until you die or become a lunatic, you'll have the single most important quantity any person can have — a creative, active, educated mind.

Strive for education. Let it do all the material things that education can do — more rank, more money, more prestige, more opportunity. But remember, too, what education really is: the process of training and developing knowledge, skill, mind, character, etc., by formal schooling. Forget that and you might as well push sand down gopher holes.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"Cleaning and clearing government quarters on a military installation is different than cleaning and clearing a civilian residence when a transfer comes along," Ned Nearsight told me.

"How's that, Ned?"

"Usually on the military post there are people who provide cleaning services for a fee in order to free the occupants for other matters. This cleaning service guarantees the quarters will pass the housing authority's inspection. You don't have that control in a civilian community," Ned explained.

"Yeah," I acknowledged, "but some of the quarters cleaning services' come under a lot of fire. As well as some inspectors."

"You mean about allegations that some inspectors have different standards when the occupants clean the quarters."

I nodded. "Rightly or wrongly, you have to admit that when you hear that complaint often enough there has to be doubt."

"What you're saying," Ned clarified, "is that some inspectors may let the cleaning service get by with something less than thorough cleanliness."

"That's the general idea. And there sometimes is the question of wrongdoing, or collusion, too," I said. "But I believe that the greatest majority of inspectors and cleaning services are conscientious. They all try to do the best job they can," I stated.

"I've got a solution that would eliminate any wrongdoing or double standard that may occur involving a quarters cleaning service and a housing inspector. Also, my solution would eliminate a families obligation to move into quarters that it felt was not adequately cleaned."

"Now that would be a huge step forward," I said. "I've heard a lot of people complain about moving into quarters they felt were unclean even though the housing authority presented an inspector's checklist and the quarters cleaning service contract to show the quarters were cleaned. But the families maintained that too many days, even weeks sometime, passed before the quarters are available to move in. The most common complaint that I've heard is that the quarters they accept were messed up by repairmen, or painters, or by somebody, who came through after the quarters were cleaned and cleared."

"I've heard that too," Ned agreed. "The old family either cleans the quarters themselves or hires a cleaning team and the quarters are cleared. Then repairmen come through for painting, or remodeling, or floor refinishing, or whatever, and the inspector doesn't come around to check or he doesn't enforce the regulation which require the workers to clean up after themselves."

"That's about it," I said. "And both families, the old and the new, suffer. First, the old family is out not only the time they used to clean the quarters, but they're out the rent they had to pay even though they didn't live there. On the other hand, if a cleaning team was employed, the old family is out the expense of the cleaning team and the two or

Portable heaters reduce electric bills

Electric rates are high in many areas, but using a portable electric heater can still be practical and economical under some circumstances, according to Consumers Union.

A portable electric heater can keep a night owl or an early riser warm while the central heating thermostat is set at a low nighttime level. A spare room usually shut off from the main heating system or an occasionally chilly room can sometimes be warmed economically with a portable heater.

Dwellers in old-erhomes and apartments should not use the units without checking to determine whether the building is wired to support them, Consumer Union warns. In old buildings, electric heaters could overload the wiring and cause a fire.

Consumers Union offers this advice for choosing a safe, portable electric heater and using it wisely:

- Check the stamp or seal that specifies the heater's wattage requirements. Recently manufactured heaters, limited to 1,500 watts if they are to be plugged into a regular outlet, are less likely to overload wiring than older models that have a 1,650-watt rating.

- Look for a label on the heater or a notation in the instruction book that indicates the heater is equipped with a "tipover" switch.

Peace Corps worker shifts from Kenya lifestyle to Army career

It's a pretty good jump from the highlands of Kenya to the S-3 shop of the 34th Med Bn, but CPT Marc G. Cloutier made the transition without any apparent difficulty.

Cloutier served in the Peace Corps in Kenya from January 1967 to January 1969 after joining the Corps in 1966. He completed courses in the culture and traditions of the country, the Swahili language, technical course and motorcycle riding before departing overseas.

He also attended an agricultural field involvement course at Tuskegee Institute.

While in Kenya, Cloutier had the responsibility of transferring over a million acres of formerly European held land to approximately 35,000 African families.

"My stay in Kenya has help me adapt to military life," Cloutier noted. "I met a lot of different people from many backgrounds, which is certainly on a par with the Army. Additionally, I really got a feeling of satisfaction from having accomplished something meaningful."

The Captain assisted in the running of the Orok West Combine which was comprised of 1,137 settlers on 24,000 acres of land. The settlers lived on their own 10 to 15 acres farms. The remoteness of these farms brought about the use of motorcycle traveling on all of the unimproved roads and trails.

Cloutier also had the additional responsibility of coordinating the activities of the agricultural and veterinary staff assigned to the Combine.

Upon his return from Kenya, he enlisted in the Army with an Officer Candidate School (OCS) option. Upon graduating from OCS in January 1970, he attended the Medical Basic Officer Course at Ft. Sam Houston, and following a tour in Korea was assigned to Ft. Benning as the Operations Officer of the 498th Avn Co.

In June of 1974 he assumed his present duties as the Operations Officer of the 34th Med Bn.

CPT Cloutier and a veterinary assistant demonstrate the procedures for checking the health of sheep during the Agricultural Fair at Thomson's Falls, Kenya, Africa in 1968.

Night training gets emphasis

Night training or reverse cycle training (RCT) is receiving greater emphasis on Ft. Benning. The Company and Platoon Tactics Divisions of the Infantry School teach officers and enlisted men to plan and conduct a night attack on mythical units with mock aggressors.

The need for night training was shown by the Korean and Vietnam conflicts. DA training officials feel the enemy relied heavily on its skill in the conduct of night operations.

Another reason for this emphasis is that today's soldier no longer has to rely upon his unaided eye-sight at night. Sophisticated night observation devices have allowed him to fight effectively during darkness.

The goal of night training is to deny the enemy any advantage that might be gained during darkness. In doing this, soldiers have to be conditioned to night operations and prepared to operate continuously at night.

The Army hopes that each soldier will, through RCT, develop increased individual and unit proficiency in night operations. Other gains include improved noise and light discipline, night navigation and improved airborne/air assault night operations.

The Army's goal is to train its men so darkness becomes an asset rather than a liability. RCT has proven to be useful in reaching that goal.

546th Med Co cook takes battalion award

By Bill C. Walton

Cooking started out to be just a job for SP5 Melvin Brown of 546th Med Co, 34th Med Bn. But as he became more skilled it turned into a profession. SP5 Brown proved his skill, not only as a cook but as a soldier, when he was recently selected Battalion Soldier of the Month.

When the 546th goes to the field their assigned cooks go with them. Brown says he prefers this kind of field cooking over garrison duty because the men seem to appreciate the food more.

As opposed to some Army cooks, Brown doesn't do the cooking at home. He says that his cooking ability doesn't compare to his wife's, Linda. He also gives her a lot of credit for his winning the top soldier award as she helped him study current events, the chain of command and other military subjects.

Not one to neglect the physical aspects of his Army career, Brown's major hobby is sports. He is the player-coach of the 546th basketball team. His team isn't among the 34th Bn league leaders, which he says is due to a shortage of tall men in his unit.

The specialist enlisted in the Army in August 1973 and completed basic training and Cook School at Ft. Dix, N.J. Upon graduation he was assigned to the 34th Md Bn in January 1974 and has been in the battalion dining facility ever since. He reenlisted last May for five years to continue his trade.

For his success at his first attempt at the contest, Brown received a letter of commendation from the 34th Med Bn commander, a certificate of achievement from the local AUSA chapter, a three-day pass, a $25 savings bond and a chance to compete in the battalion Soldier of the Quarter Contest.

Computer identifies top clerk

By Robert R. Speer

Some people go before a board to determine their standards as soldiers but a man assigned to the 139th MP Co, 36th Engr Gp, earned the SIDPERS Clerk of the Month Award for December based on the results of a computer.

SP4 Michael F. Herman was honored Jan. 8 at 36th Engr Gp Headquarters and presented the award by COL Adolph A. Hight, Gp commander. To earn the award, he had to be proficient in typing, filing, processing and controlling personnel actions.

The results of these office functions were summarized by computers that identified SP4 Herman as having processed the least errors by percentage of the overall material submitted.

"Anyone with a little incentive could achieve the same results," Herman com-

Herman, originally from Moline, Ill., enjoys mechanical and electrical hobbies in his spare time.

GI home loan rate reduced

The maximum interest rate on GI home loans was reduced from 9 to 8.75 per cent effective Jan. 5, 1976, Administrator of Veterans Affairs Richard L. Roudebush announced today.

An increased supply of mortgage money was attributed to this first reduction in GI loan interest rates since last March, Roudebush said. The decrease was agreed upon jointly with Department of Housing and Urban Development. The reduced rate also applies to FHA home loans.

The nine per cent interest ceiling rate on multi-family housing mortgage loans does not apply to VA since the agency guarantees only single family home mortgage loans, including condominiums.

The peak interest rate of 9.5 per cent during the 31-year history of the VA home loan guaranty program was reached in August 1974. This is the 27th change in GI home loan interest rates since this program began in June 1944.

VA guarantees loans private lenders make to eligible servicemen, veterans and widows. This year the agency expects to guarantee more than one-third of a million GI home loans.

Suggestion net$ award

Henry I. Jehan, Jr., an operations research analyst with the Concepts and Studies Division of the Infantry Center has been presented a certificate and monetary incentive award by MG Willard Latham, post commander.

Jehan received the award after he proposed a method for management by exception of an equipment requirements computer program while serving as a production controller for the U.S. Army Major Item Data Agency (MIDA), Chambersburg, Penn. The suggestion resulted in a saving of 641 man hours per year and $55,943.95. For his suggestion, Jehan received $980.

Since July 1973, Jehan has had 15 suggestions adopted. Of these, seven resulted in monetary awards totaling $2045.

Mr. Jehan explains, "It pays to think about your job and suggest improvements."

Jehan arrived at Ft. Benning in November 1974 and resides in Columbus.

Mrs. Rosie Morris and Mrs. Annie Cooker prepare linen prior to shipping them to Martin Army Hospital. The Post Laundry not only supports MAH but all units and military personnel at Fort Benning.

Quartermaster laundry

Laundry bills getting a little expensive for you? Why not try the Ft. Benning Quartermaster Laundry?

In existence since 1940, the laundry has served soldiers through three wars. Continuing that service today, "We support all organizations on post, including Martin Army Hospital," explains CPT Louis G. Mason, Branch Manager. "Support extends to ROTC, National Guard and Reserve units that train at Ft. Benning as well."

For the individual soldier, a walk-in service is available. At present, various pick-up points are being planned and one test point is now operating in the Commissary while others are being devised for outlying areas of post. "We want to expand service to personnel that cannot always come in on a walk-in basis," says CPT Mason.

Active duty soldiers also have the option of payroll deduction. Under this plan, personnel can have as many as 26 items laundered per week at the minimum cost of $8.00 per month. Items include, not only fatigues, but underwear, towels, etc. Their laundry may be either turned in at their supply room or directly to the laundry.

"Payroll deduction is applied for at unit level or at the laundry," explains

Dan P. Mims, assistant Branch manager. "Personnel interested should contact their unit supply clerk to fill out the necessary form or see the laundry manager. The form is then forwarded through the laundry to finance."

"A average of 243,000 pieces of laundry are processed every month," says Mims. "Items are processed into the Receiving Department where they are marked according to description. From there they are sent for washing and tumbling. We then subdivide them, depending on items again, either to the flatwork ironing or to the pressing department. The last step, of course, is the sorting and shipping department."

"Depending on the item, the average process takes about three days," says Mims, "but one-day service is available to the individual."

"The Quartermaster Laundry employs a total of 54 personnel, which includes administrative and maintenance workers dedicated to providing timely and quality service to the soldier. "Their average length of employment is 25 years."

"Keeping the soldier in mind," says Mason, "we constantly strive to improve our services. If anyone has suggestions or questions concerning our facility please call 545-7722 or 545-3119."

Leroy Johnson, an employee at the Fort Benning Quartermaster Laundry, unloads a large load of sheets after washing. The sheets will then be pressed, folded and distributed to units on post.

Curfew restricts youth movement

Ft. Benning parents are reminded that under existing United States Army Infantry Center regulation, dependents under 18 years of age are restricted in their on-post movement between midnight and five a.m.

According to a Provost Marshal's Office (PMO) Juvenile Branch spokesman, juvenile dependents must be in their quarters during those hours, and not on the streets unless escorted by parents, guardians or responsible adults. This is to include being at the bowling centers, theaters, and other places of entertainment on-post, the spokesman said.

Exceptions to the above may be made for school, Youth Activities Center (YAC) functions and any emergency situation if the PMO is immediately notified and a proper request for exemption is made.

Any dependents found in violation of the curfew will be taken to the PMO where their parents or sponsors will be notified to escort them back to their quarters. If violation by the same dependent continue, it may provide evidence of misconduct on the part of the sponsor and families who reside on-post, and could result in eviction from family quarters.

Unescorted non-dependent juveniles are subject to the same restrictions as dependent youths, the Juvenile Branch spokesman added. If the violators are found on-post between midnight and five a.m., the PMO is authorized to take necessary action to assure they are removed from post and delivered to their parents, a responsible party, or to proper authorities.

Officer cutback eyed

The Army is studying ways to further reduce its officer corps to a level required to accomplish peace and wartime missions.

Current guidance from the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) would reduce the end FY 77 98,345 office force to 94,220 by the end of FY 80. OSD strength milestones include a reduction to 96,220 by Sept. 30, 1978 and 95,220 by the end of FY 79.

DA is pursuing several options to meet the reductions at a pace that matches the OSD strength levels set for each fiscal year. DA has asked major commands to assess how assigned reduction quotas could be met and what the impact would be. These quotas do not constitute an actual office reduction, DA officials emphasize.

If a reduction is required, DA does not foresee the need for an officer RIF because of the time period involved.

Kinky act headed for stardom

By Joe Molina

There are very few night club acts that ever reach the so-called "big time." One of these more determined to make it to the top is Kinky Friedman, the singing Jewish cowboy from Texas.

Proud of his heritage, Kinky isn't your run of the mill Gene Autry, Roy Rogers type. His sound is Texan and dominated by side-splitting comedy. Some consider his humor under the table, a little risqué — sort of like a Southern fried Cheech and Chong.

But his audience learns to take it all in fun and no one is offended after the initial 10-minute shock period.

Kinky's songs deal with everything from a trite and sincere love song to a take-off of Okie from Muskogee called "*$%! from El Paso," guaranteed to have you rolling on the floor.

He appears onstage wearing purple cowboy boots, black leather pants, embroidered shirt and his trademark cigar. Underneath a soot-black hat his eyes stare out at you through symbolic blue sunglasses. Within minutes, his charisma has you property of Kinky and the band.

Meting him backstage proved to be very interesting. He seemed slightly on edge when he found out where we were from. (The Army).

"How'd you guys like the set?" he queried rhetorically. "I've got a new album coming out in a few months. It's goona have a lot of stuff that's going to tear 'em up, but unfortunately they won't air a lot of it on the radio. Censors you know."

A single he hopes to get air play on is Ray Stevens' 'Ahab the Arab'. "That should hit the top ten," Kinky predicted.

From there, talk went to his travels with Led Zeppelin, current masters of high-voltage rock. "We have the same management firm as they do," Kinky offered. "They were in Los Angeles and saw me and invited me to fly out with them to one of their shows. When we stepped aboard their private jet, we were all wearing our cowboy clothes. Most of the people on the jet were really impressed."

Friedman discussed when he was robbed in his hotel room a month ago. "These guys came barging into my room with knives and guns that had silencers. I thought it was all over. They took my money, a diamond-studded watch and a $20,000 jewel-encrusted horseshoe ring. Those guys were 9-foot-4 and stone killers. I was petrified. It almost made a Christian out of me."

Things got so easy going after a while that Kinky even consented to tape an experimental Army recruiting radio spot. He has that certain charisma that's going to be the basis for his success.

At 4 a.m. when I finally departed, I left with one conviction: I would be there . . . at a moment's notice . . . front row center.

121st Aviation to be defanged

Three of the six AH1G (COBRA) helicopters assigned to the 121st Avn Co, 34th Med Bn will depart Ft. Benning January 26 for the Bell Helicopter plant in Amarillo, Tex. The remaining three Cobras will depart shortly thereafter and be reassigned to two other Army installations.

The 121st is one of the first of four assault helicopter companies to be affected by a recent change in the Table of Organization and Equipment (TO&E) for assault helicopter units. Under the new TO&E, attack helicopters will be reassigned to Cavalry and Aerial Rocketry Artillery units.

The concept of helicopter gunships may have originated well before the Vietnam era, but it was not until the Vietnam conflict that a need for an attack helicopter arose. H23's and H13's were first used and later, A, B and C model UH1's (HUEYS) were utilized. As the U.S. commitment increased, so did the need for additional firepower.

The Cobra was developed by Bell Helicopter and arrived in Vietnam in 1967 with more speed, accuracy and firepower than any of its predecessors.

The Cobras assigned to the 121st have supported almost every aspect of training conducted at Ft. Benning. They have participated in numerous static displays and exhibits throughout the southeast to include the fly-by for President Ford's visit last June.

MOWW to sponsor testimonial dinner

A testimonial dinner for Charles S. Daley, President of the National Bank and Trust Company in Columbus, will be sponsored by the Columbus Chapter of the Military Order of the World Wars (MOWW) Wednesday.

The ladies night meeting will start at 7 p.m. at the Supper Club of the Ft. Benning Officers' Club on Main Post. Entertainment during the program will be provided by the Infantry Chorus.

Reservations for the "Dutch Treat" dinner may be made by mailing a check ($5 per person) no later than tomorrow to MOWW, P. O. Box 5526, Columbus, Ga., 31906.

Daley will speak on his experiences with the 82nd Airborne Division during World War II. The meeting will be another in a "Military History Series" scheduled by the local group.

Daley's military career began in 1942 when he entered the U.S. Army as a private. That very same year, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant upon graduation from the Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Ft. Benning. Following OCS, he attended and graduated from Airborne School and was assigned to the 82nd Abn. Div.

Daley's civic contributions to the local area, state and nation are many. He is a trustee of Columbus College, chairman of the President's Advisory Committee of Agnes Scott College, president of Columbus Kiwanis Club, president of DeKalb Rotary Club, president of the local United Givers, and past president of the local chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army.

Daley also served as chairman of the Bicentennial Army Birthday Committee which arranged President Ford's visit to Ft. Benning last summer and he is president-elect of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

Special movie slated

"Journeys," a special two-part motion picture will appear at Ft. Benning's Theaters No. 1 and No. 4, Jan. 20 and 27, and is scheduled at 200 other installation theaters nation-wide. Featuring Matt Sullivan, Ann Vallodin and a surprise supporting player, this 93 minute P.G. rated movie is unusually presented in two combined parts that promise to be entertaining and realistic.

Journeys Part I; Lumps, Bumps and Heroes; is billed as a hilarious and outrageous spoof on motorcycling; reversed, speedy and invisible machines in satiric comedy situations that anyone will recognize. Part I also includes a stunning two wheel view of America for those who dream of the great adventurous escape.

Journeys Part II; The Windjammer; takes you on a redline run through Europe at speeds over 100 M.P.H. This as Matt Sullivan angrily runs from reality to find the arms of an understanding Ann Vallodin. He rides a narrow red line in what is otherwise a delightfully pleasant and easy movie. To give you a clue, the "Journeys" soundtrack album is used for intermission music at many installation theaters.

A good opportunity to escape from a dull TV night and get out to the movies and a giant silver screen.

Income tax: pays to file

Ignorance no excuse

State tax laws enforceable

The requirement to pay state income tax is nothing new, but in the past, states have done little to track down military members who fail to pay. It's a different story now.

Your annual earnings are reported monthly to your home state on your Leave and Earnings Statement.

Many states now have reciprocal enforcement laws in which the courts in one state recognize and enforce the liability for taxes imposed by another state. For example, Virginia may enforce collection of taxes owed in Arizona.

Penalties for late and non-filers are stringent. Paul Arrington, Georgia Department of Revenue, reports, "Every effort is being made to contact personnel who may not know that they must file state income tax in Georgia. Presently, we are contacting the commanding officers of individuals who have not filed and trying to collect taxes owed."

Arrington further said, "In the state of Georgia, non-filers are charged a five to 25 per cent penalty fee.

"Interest charged can be as high as nine per cent per year."

"Individuals in Alabama will be contacted and offered an opportunity to bring their taxes up to date," says Billie Billingsley, of the Alabama Department of Revenue. "Interest is six per cent per year for late filers and 25 per cent per year for personnel who do not file.

"Depending on circumstances," Billingsley says, "various penalties could be applied. For example, we could garnish an individual's pay or even put a lien on his property."

Tax laws vary in different states. If you are unsure of your tax status, look up your home state in the chart on the opposite page.

Detailed information on your individual filing requirements is available at the post legal assistance office at 545-3281.

File early

Don't get caught short

New tax aspects deserve attention

This year there are three new aspects of the tax law that deserve your attention. Why? They'll save you money.

The first is the extra $30 dollar exemption for yourself and your spouse and your dependent children. The second is a tax credit on the purchase of a home if the construction of that home commenced before March 26, 1975. The third is the earned income credit against total federal tax, based on how much you made last year.

The $30 exemption is easy to explain. There is space on the tax form (1040 or 1040A) to subtract from your tax an additional $30 for you, your spouse and each dependent.

If you bought a house (whether brand new or already built), and were the first to occupy it after March 12, 1975, you may be entitled to a credit against your tax. The credit is equal to five per cent of the purchase price limited overall to $2,000. In the case of married persons filing separate returns, the credit is limited to $1,000 per return.

You must have already entered into a binding purchase contract if you bought the home rather than constructing it yourself. Construction must have begun before March 26, 1975.

To be eligible, your purchase must be your principal residence, and you must be its first occupant. More rules are contained in IRS supplemental instructions.

The earned income credit is added to the total federal income tax withheld. Your tax (taken from the tables) is then subtracted from that figure, assuming the tax is less than the total withheld. The result is more bucks in your pocket. Page 8 of the long form booklet and page 18 of the short form booklet have all the instructions for computing the earned income credit.

One more item. This year's tax tables and instructions for filling out the various forms and schedules are easier to understand than ever. It's unbelievably simple, once you make up your mind to concentrate for an hour or so on the blanks and figures. If you do have a question, by all means call the IRS at 1-800-222-1040. It's a toll-free number for filers in Georgia who don't live in the Atlanta area.

A little effort could mean a lot

Overlooking common errors may be costly

So here you stand with an envelope all stamped and addressed to the local IRS office. After some hours of agonizing over all those blanks and all those figures, you convince yourself that everything's right with your just-completed income tax return. You drop it into the mailbox, signed and sealed.

OH NO! A few days later, the form comes back. Your spouse forgot to sign the joint return.

How silly, you say. And you're right. But it's just those kinds of silly mistakes — mistakes that passed your scrutiny — which cause IRS people to start pulling their hair out. All they can do is mail it back for you to correct.

Here are some of the other common errors that filers make, ac-ording to IRS officials:

- Missing or incorrect social security account numbers,
- Miss Copy B of the W-2 Form or other schedules,
- Mistakes in computation,
- Amounts entered on the wrong line,
- Failure to forward check for tax due,
- Information from other forms not carried forward to the face of the return (applies to the long form).

Checking all the above, as they apply to you, before dropping that envelope in the mail box, will keep you from getting that embarrassing notice right back.

Such a simple once-over would also reinforce a basic Army tenet — paying attention to detail.

early, pay to file late

No Statute of Limitations

State Taxes Due Along With Federal

All active duty service personnel have an obligation to pay state income tax to their home of record. The finance office does not withhold any portion of the service member's pay for this purpose, which may cause financial hardship for those individuals who have not been saving regularly to meet this expense.

There is no statute of limitations which applies to persons who have not filed a state income tax return, and thus the various states may go back for an indefinite period of time to collect unpaid taxes.

The following states have the following reporting requirements regarding income earned from military sources. Income earned from sources other than military employment should be reported to the state in which said income was earned.

ALABAMA	Income must be reported in full.	NEBRASKA	Income must be reported in full.
ALASKA	Income need not be reported. No filing requirement.	NEVADA	No state income tax.
ARIZONA	First $1,000.00 of active duty pay is exempt. Remainder must be reported.	NEW HAMPSHIRE	Earned income, and therefore military pay, is not subject to tax.
ARKANSAS	First $6,000.00 of service pay or allowances is excluded. Remainder must be reported.	NEW JERSEY	All active duty pay is exempt.
CALIFORNIA	Residents who leave California under permanent change of station orders become non-residents of California for income tax purposes at the time of departure and need pay no tax on income earned following departure.	NEW MEXICO	Income must be reported in full.
COLORADO	Income must be reported in full.	NEW YORK	Military pay is exempt if service member: 1. Was stationed outside state for entire year. 2. Spent no more than 30 days in state, 3. highlighted the 197th Inf Bde basketball action last week as the various teams began to wind down into the closing weeks of the season.

Co C, 3/7th Inf kicked off the action last Monday night as they walloped HHC, 3/7th Inf 44 to 21 behind the 18 points poured in by Charlie Lowe. CSC, 2/69th Ar and HHC, 2/69th Ar followed, with CSC coming out on top 56 to 29.

The last game of the night pitted two strong teams from the 'Patriot' league as Co C, 1/58th Inf and CSC, 1/58th Inf met. Thomas Hill and Richard Martin, both of Co C, 1/58th Inf turned out to be the deciding factors in that game as they scored a combined total of 26 points and led Co C to a 51 to 30 victory.

Game night two of last week only featured one game, even though three were scheduled. Co A, 3/7th Inf rolled over CSC, 3/7th Inf 60 to 35. Willie Anderson was the high man for Co A with 13 points and Larry Stikes led the scoring for CSC with 11 points in the losing effort.

The other two games were rescheduled due to prior commitments by all four teams.

Wednesday night featured the week's close games as six of the strongest teams on Kelly Hill met to do battle on the court.

George Hargrove was the spark for HHB, 2/10th FA in the first game as he rifled in 16 points to lead his team to a 44-35 victory of Btry B, 2/10th FA.

The second game of the night pitted two 'Ever Ready Support' teams, as Co A, 197th Spt Bn took to the court against one of their old foes, Co C, 197th Spt Bn.

"We had to go out there and really put the fire to them," commented Abraham McCall, player-coach of Co A. "Our defense really won the game for us. It kept Co C from scoring, and when we got the ball we were able to break their defense and go in for the score. I guess that's why we're still undefeated. Nobody has been able to break out defense and keep us from scoring."

So when the dust had settled from the hard-fought contest, Co A had stormed by Co C, 54 to 44.

The closest game of the week followed with Co A, 1/58th Inf squeaking by Co B, 1/58th Inf 50-43. Julius Jordan of Co A, pumped in 16 points for the winners.

Friday night many of the players could be heard talking about what they think is the best season ever as far as basketball is concerned on Kelley Hill.

"The season is really going along great," said T. R. Hill, Co Co C, 1/58th Inf. "Things really seem to be falling into place for our team. We're playing the best basketball that we've ever played."

And that was more than evident during the game against Co B as Co C trounced them 62-43.

Post basketballers split pair with Atlanta

The Ft. Benning men's basketball team came from three points behind at the half to nip the Atlanta Celtics, 100-95, in the Doughboy's season opener at Briant Well Fieldhouse last Saturday.

The post WAC team wasn't as fortunate, however, dropping a 53-22 decision to the distaff Celtics a semi-pro organization.

Guard Sammy Cole led the doughboys with 27 points, but all five starters scored in double figures. John "Tree" Crosby tallied 18 points and pulled down a bushel of rebounds, Otis Ray and J. C. Moore each netted 16 and Walter Trotter scored 14.

The Celtics led at halftime, 48-45, but couldn't contain Cole and company after intermission.

Crosby, Moore and Trotter played on last year's post-level team which bowed to Ft. Knox in the finals of the TRADOC Central Conference tournament. Ft. Benning has been switched moved to the Eastern Conference this year.

Dorothy Cason and Gina Johnson were about the only bright spots in the WAC's loss. Cason scored eight points and Johnson, a holdover from last year's conference championship team, added six. The only other Benning players to score were Geneva Irons with four, Sharon Koger with two and Linda Hooks with two.

Both Benning teams will travel to Ft. Campbell this weekend for games Saturday and Sunday.

All military personnel assigned to Ft. Benning are eligible to try out for the post-level teams. Interested male personnel should contact MSG Greene at 545-1262 and female personnel should contact Mr. Albert McGruder at 545-4756.

three days rent while the team cleaned the quarters. The new family is out at least a day or two of time, and rent, while they reclean the quarters to be able to live in them."

"That's exactly why I've been working on my solution," Ned answered. "Of course, my solution only works where a cleaning team is engaged. If a family elects to clean the quarters before moving out then the new family has to take it on the basis of the integrity of the inspector. What I'm saying is," Ned explained, "that if a family cleans the quarters and repairmen follow, then the inspector must be firm and insist the quarters be recleaned by the repairmen."

"What's your solution if a quarters cleaning team is hired to do the job?" I asked when he paused for breath.

"Reverse the process," he smiled.

"Reverse the process?" I frowned. "I don't understand, Ned."

"Instead of the old family hiring a cleaning team to clean the quarters when they move out, they hire the cleaning team to clean the quarters before the new family moves in."

"It works this way," Ned continued as my frown deepened. "The old family makes a contract to clean their quarters when the new family signs for them. The housing authority and the inspector accept the contract and clears the old family. When the new family signs for the quarters the cleaning team cleans them."

"And the new family moves into clean quarters," I smiled.

"And the old family is cleared on time just like before," Ned nodded. "And the repairmen can work in between without either family being penalized."

Ned Nearsight may have a workable solution for the quarters cleaning hassle. What do you think?

Commissary surcharge to increase

Army commissaries world wide will increase their surcharge from three to four per cent on February 1. The rise in surcharge is designed to offset construction and improvement cost.

The increase will amount to an additional charge of 50 cents on a 50 dollar tab run up at the Ft. Benning commissary store.

"You can't be Combat Arms all by yourself."

That's how SP4 Michael Montoya feels about his job as an infantryman.

"I'm in the Army for myself, all right. But not just for myself, and not just by myself, either. I like the feeling you get when you can depend on the next guy to do his job as well as you do yours. I like to help people, too. Because working with good people makes me better.

"I hate for somebody to say, 'You can't do it, Montoya.' Because I like to do the kind of jobs in the Army that most people think they can't do. I guess that's why I liked Pathfinder training. I like jumping, both static line and free fall. I like to be the first to get there, too.

"It's just not your everyday kind of job. It's tough. Not everybody can do it. But somebody has to do it, and I'm glad I'm one of the people who does it. That's why I reenlisted for Combat Arms."

Preparation key to SOM win

A member of Co A, 197th Spt Bn was the winner in the 197th Inf Bde Soldier of the Month competition for January.

SP4 Stephen L. Baruffi said, "The only way to win is to prepare well in advance."

Baruffi, who attended Oakton High School in Vienna, Va., presently calls Highland Park, Ill. his home. After graduating from high school, Baruffi continued his studies at Bradley University and graduated in 1973 with a degree in Marketing.

Baruffi

"I guess the way I prepared for the Soldier of the Month board was a carry-over from college," commented Baruffi. "It's all in the art of knowing just how long and how much to study. I studied for two hours a night for quite a few weeks before I went before the board. I made sure that I was up on my current events."

Going to school and continuing his studies seems to be what Baruffi's plans are for in the future. "I entered the Army to go to Officer Candidate School (OCS). I should know in the next few days if I have been selected. If I'm unable to attend OCS then I would like to attend the Ranger School or go to Special Forces.

"I know the schools require you to be physically fit, and that has been a major concern of mine," continued the specialist. "The Army has a good physical conditioning program, but I have found I need just a little more. Besides, I have found that physical conditioning can be fun. I took up karate about three years ago and it provides me with some good exercise. I also like to lift weights in my spare time."

Looking forward to going to school in the future and staying physically fit would seem to be enough for some soldiers, but there is the present and you have to prepare each day for it, explained Baruffi. "Performing well on the job and knowing what's expected of you is very important. It has been my experience that when you do a good job everything seems to go smoother. The same applies to preparing for a board. When you are well prepared, you do well," he concluded.

Medical unit far cry from M-A-S-H

By Bruce Bergstresser

The television program "MASH" may depict an Army field hospital of 25 years ago but it certainly doesn't represent the modern version now used by the 2nd Combat Support Hospital (2nd CSH) at Ft. Benning.

This updated field medical unit is known as "MUST," the acronym for "Medical Unit, Self-contained, Transportable." It is a far cry from the primitive conditions of television's MASH setting.

The 2nd CSH's MUST equipment is comprised of three type of module units that are 100 per cent mobile. They are the rubber "inflatables," the rigid "expandables" and the "power pack" unit.

"Medical Unit, Self-Contained, Transportable"

The inflatables are used as wards, intensive care units, dining halls, recovery facilities and administrative areas. They are 55 feet long, 20 feet wide and 15 feet high. When used as a hospital ward, the unit comes complete with beds, sheets, nurses stations, forms and other required equipment.

The rigid modules are used to handle the clinical and laboratory facilities, such as the pharmacy, laboratory and the x-ray service. The kitchen and the operating room are also expandable modules and can be made surgically sterile.

The third component and the actual heart of the module concept is the power pack assembly. It is a multi-purpose turbine-driven unit that furnishes the inflatables and expandables with their electrical current, hot and cold water, air-conditioning, and heat. It also houses the compressor used to inflate the rubber sections of the hospital. The 4,500 pound unit is transportable by truck, rail, air or sea, and can provide power for 15 inflatables and six expandables.

With the MUST concept, the modern field soldier is only a few minutes from a totally equipped hospital which has come a long way from the outmoded facilities of MASH.

Award encourages sports participation

Why not make '76 the year you do something about keeping fit — and win a Presidential Sports Award at the same time? Soldiers and DA civilians can earn awards by participating in from one to 39 of the most popular sports as a group or as an individual.

Free personal log books and information on qualifying standards can be obtained by contacting the post sports director at 545-1516 or 545-2063.

The Army Sports Program presents this award to encourage voluntary sports activities and to help

sport shorts

participants stay in shape by using recreational facilities provided on Army installations.

Qualifying standards for the Presidential Sports Award have been developed in cooperation with the appropriate sports-governing bodies and coaches' associations. The basic qualification is 50 hours of participation, spread over at least 50 activity sessions, within a period of four months.

Exceptions have been made only in sports where seasons may be short or access to facilities limited. In such cases, 50 hours of activity are still required, but they may be accomplished in fewer sessions.

Participants may earn as many awards as they desire as long as they meet the standards required for each sport. For example, to win an award in jogging the participant must jog a minimum of 125 miles but not more than two and one-half miles in any one day may be credited to the total.

Many people at Ft. Benning can already qualify for a presidential sports award based upon their participation in the Run for Your Life program . . . why not give the sports director a call and get the scoop.

Women tours same as men

A new policy requiring women to serve the same overseas tour length as male soldiers began Jan. 1.

The change applies to women who leave the Continental United States or their area of residence after the beginning of the year. The change does not apply to women who enlisted in the Army or the Delayed Entry Program before Dec. 1, 1975. Those women will not have to serve the longer tour during their initial enlistment.

'Raskulls' on top of 34th keglers

The 34th Med Bn mixed double bowling league, sponsored by the 498th Med Co has completed its first half of the bowling season.

First place position is held by the "Some Four Raskulls" with the "Strikes, Spares and Mrs." team only three games behind in a close second.

Individual honors thus far have gone to: Billie Watts 498th Med Co for High game (male) of 247 which he rolled the first night of the season; high series (male) also is held by Watts with a tabulated score of 624; Gail Wical on the distaff side holds the high series with a 504 while Eloise Lloyd reigns as individual score queen with her 231.

Although this league is not noted for its high scoring, it could well be entered in the Guinness records for high spirits.

League standings for mid season are:

NCO refuses to allow refuse pileup

"It takes everyone's cooperation to keep Ft. Benning a show place Army installation."

MSG Freddie James, Ft. Benning police inspector, preaches this philosophy wherever he goes.

"There are a few individuals who just refuse to join those of us who are proud of the post and the appearance it presents to the thousands of visitors we have each year," James said.

"As a result, there are times when trash is dumped without regard to the environment and those of us who strive for beautification and cleanliness are called on for extra effort."

James, under the direction of MG Willard Latham, post commander, and CSM Vincent Roegiers, monitors the housing areas as well as other parts of the reservation. By getting the troops and post residents involved, he recently undertook an intensive clean-up campaign to remove all unsightly debris.

"We are noting a decided improvement in the appearance of housing grounds that were once cluttered with trash, and the troop areas are becoming spotless," James said.

"We are pleased, but not completely satisfied — we want perfection if possible at Ft. Benning," he explained.

According to James, SGM Rogiers has geographically split the reservation into six major areas and assigned the responsibility for keeping each area policed to a different unit. The 197th Inf Bde, the largest single unit on post, was assigned the largest area of responsibility, including most of the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas.

"Dumping and littering is a mammoth problem," says CSM Nathan Hoover of the 197th Inf Bde "It's a problem we should be conscious of every minute of every hour of every day. We can't go home at the end of the work day and just forget about it, because its gonna be there the next morning when you get up.

"If we don't become more police conscious in the future, we'll be overcome by it," he adds with emphasis.

According to CSM Hoover and MSG James, dumping in certain isolated areas of the reservation is an offense practiced by both military and civilian personnel. Military personnel living on post will often drive many miles to find an isolated spot to dump their trash, while both military and civilian personnel living off post will enter the reservation via back roads to avoid being caught in the act of dumping in unauthorized areas.

Many offenders leave what MSG James refers to as "calling cards" among their trash and garbage. Such "cards" may be old pay vouchers, receipts, or even discarded clothing with name tags still attached.

"We've tracked down a few of the offenders," reports James. "Most of them deny it at first, but when we show them the evidence, they usually admit it."

Bi-weekly trash and garbage pickup service is provided for all family housing areas on post by the Sanitation Branch, Utilities and Pollution Control Division, Directorate of Facilities and Engineering. Dempsey Dumpsters, meanwhile, are strategically placed near all troop barracks, bachelor officers' quarters, and snack bars.

A special trash pickup service is also provided by the Buildings and Grounds Division, DFAE, for the purpose of removing large items such as discarded appliances or fallen trees from residential areas.

Thus, the dumping of trash and garbage in unauthorized areas is completely unwarranted anywhere on post.

But as long as it does continue, cleanup details, commonly referred to as police details in the military, will be necessary.

"Soon, perhaps, they won't be necessary," James said.

Post B.A.S.S. Club seeks new members

By Denny Blankenship

The Post B.A.S.S. Club begins a new year of competition this month and now's the time for all you bass fishermen to stop by a Club meeting and say hello. B.A.S.S. Club meetings are held on the 2nd and 4th Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in Classroom 23, Building 4. The Club boasts many of the area's top bass fishermen and it's a perfect way to spend an evening swapping yarns.

Lake Martin has been chosen as the Club's January tournament site and several club members have been doing well up there using a variety of crank-baits and six-inch green worms. CPT Archie Caldwell managed to haul in an 8 pound 2 ounce arm breaker with a "Deep R" while a front was passing through.

The results of last year's competition are forthcoming and we're all anxious to see Ft. Benning's team do well in the state tournament.

In a continuing effort to offer members a wide variety of entertainment, The Rod and Gun Club is currently planning to start a game night on the 1st Thursday in February and each week thereafter. Details will be published later. Don't forget the Club's monthly fishing contest. SSG Harry Jones is January's leader with a 10 pound, 2 ounce bass caught in Harps Pond last Sunday. Jones caught his monster by cranking a "Wooley Bully" very slowly.

Prayer fare slated here

The Bicentennial National Prayer Breakfast will be celebrated at the Ft. Benning Officers Club January 29 at 6:45 a.m.

Dr. G. Othell Hand will be the guest speaker. The music will be provided by the Infantry Chorus.

Stresses need for concern

Cancer awareness week slated

By BETTY ZIMMERMAN

One out of every six deaths in this country is caused by cancer!

National Cancer Self-Awareness Week, which begins Monday and runs through January 30, emphasizes the need for everyone to be aware of and concerned about cancer, its symptoms and the success of early treatment in order to reduce this staggering death rate.

Fort Benning's Community Health Nurse, CPT Barbara McPherson and Mrs. Barbara Murrin, occupational health nurse planned the post's participation to stress that the most important factors leading to cancer cures are early diagnosis and prompt treatment.

The American Cancer Society released some alarming statistics intended to help people be aware of the danger of cancer.

There will be more than 3 million deaths from cancer during the 70's in the United States. An estimated 330 thousand are expected to die from its effects this year alone. That's 900 per day!

The majority of these deaths are unnecessary because cancer can be cured if found early enough. There are over 1½ million Americans living today who have conquered cancer through surgery, radiation or chemotherapy.

"Physical examinations are the greatest weapon against this disease. Yearly check-ups are a must for men and women," stresses CPT McPherson.

She adds, "Women should include a Pap Test, which is a simple but important examination for finding cancer of the uterus and cervix."

Monthly self breast examinations should be conducted by all women.

Schedule of Events

Jan. 26-30—8 a.m.-4 p.m., Cancer Awareness Display, Infantry Hall lobby.

Jan. 26—1-2 and 4-5 p.m., Film, "Breast Cancer, Where We Are," with questions and answers by CPT Jones, OB-GYN clinician, Main Post Theater #1.

Jan. 26—12:30 p.m., MEDDAC wives will distribute pamphlets at Martin Army Hospital outpatient clinic.

Jan. 29—9 a.m.-1 p.m., Breast self-examination model at Infantry Hall display in multi-media room.

Jan. 30—1-2 and 4-5 p.m., Presentation of "Are You Killing Yourself Cheaply" by COL Fagarason, chief, Dept of Surgery MAH, at the Main Post Theater #1.

For more information, call the Community Health Nurse, 545-5431.

Everyone should know the seven cancer warning signals which are:

1. A change in bowel or bladder habits;
2. A sore throat that does not heal;
3. Any unusual bleeding or discharge;
4. Thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere;
5. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing;
6. Change in size or color of a wart or mole;
7. Hoarseness or persistent cough.

The community health nurses' office, MEDDAC personnel, and members of the MEDDAC Officers Wives Club are combining efforts to bring cancer awareness to the Fort Benning population.

Since taking command a little over five months ago, MG Willard Latham has brought a new vigor to Ft. Benning. New policies, programs and objectives are being stressed.

All of these are brought out in the interview beginning on page 11 with the new post commander.

Tank busting: Patriots train with LAW at Hook Range last week

By Fred Easterling

The light Anti-armor Weapon (LAW) is a small 66-mm single-shot tank buster that allows Infantrymen to find new courage against the giants of the battlefield. Last week at Hook Range, the LAW was put through it's paces by the men of the 1/58th Inf. (Patriots) 197th Inf Bde.

"The Infantryman's anti-armor training program is set up to give every soldier a good knowledge of the weaponry and tactics," explained MAJ Russell Calvert, 1/58th Inf S-3 (training and Operations Officer). "With the weapons systems available to engage enemy armor, any well-trained soldier on the battlefield is a potential tank killer. The LAW is a part of our overall training program to make the individual more anti-armor conscious."

The training program not only made the men more conscious of new anti-armor weaponry and tactics, but it bolstered their confidence to conduct such operations.

SGT Jonathan Barnes of Co A, 1/58th Inf said, "As a squad leader, I feel I will be better able to engage an armored enemy with my fire team. The LAW is the ideal tool for an Infantryman to bust a tank with. After firing the LAW and watching my men fire the weapon, I'm confident that we can match any armored adversary."

PVT Guy Sikes also of Co A, expressed his confidence this way, "being able to immobilize a giant machine like a tank is something I hope I never have to do, except in training. However, if I am ever in combat I will be glad to have had this experience."

197th holds monthly awards ceremony

Marching competition was stiff last week during the 'Forever Forward' Brigade's monthly retreat and awards ceremony. Co B, 1/58th Inf won the large unit category in the competition, and HHC, 197th Inf Bde marched away with the separate unit parade honors.

COL Joseph E. Wasiak, 197th Inf Bde

commander, presented awards and decorations for outstanding service to the following personnel and units during the ceremony:

The Army Commendation Medal was awarded to the following officers and enlisted men for meritorious service: CPT Curtis Echols, HHC, 2/69th Ar; ILT

Richard P. Disilvio, Btry A, 2/10th FA; SFC Weston B. Butler, HHC, 2/10th FA; SSG Billy J. Leonard, Cbt Spt Co, 1/58th Inf; and SSG Forrest J. Lee, Co C, 3/7th Inf.

A United Nations Certificate of Appreciation was presented to CPT Phillip D. Goodwin, of HHC, 197th Inf Bde for meritorious service as a U.N. company commander while serving in the Republic of Korea.

The brigade reenlistment trophy and a brigade Certificate of Achievement were presented to the 3/7th Inf for having the highest reenlistment total for the month of December 1975. At this time the trophy became the permanent property of the 'Cottonbalers' for having the most successful reenlistment program during 1975.

A brigade Certificate of Achievement was presented to ISG Heldon Jones, Co A, 3/7th Inf, for meritorious service and to PVT Tony R. Bryant, HHC, 1/58th Inf for being selected Driver of the Month for December 1975.

Co C, 3/7th Inf was presented a streamer and Certificate of Achievement for being selected as the outstanding marching unit during the brigade's monthly awards ceremony for December 1975.

Btry A, 2/10th FA; Co C, 3/7th Inf; Btry C, 2/10th FA; Svc Btry, 2/10th FA; HHD, 197th Spt Bn; Co B, 1/58th Inf; Co A, 197th Spt Bn;

298th Signal Plt; and the 179th Military Intelligence Detachment were presented Certificates of Achievement and streamers for having a zero AWOL rate for the month of December 1975. This was the 31st consecutive month that the 179th MID had achieved a zero AWOL rate. The following units were awarded a Brigade Certificate of Achievement for being in the top 10% of the Fort Benning SIDPERS performance order of merit list for the month of November 1975: Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th Inf; Co A, 1/58th Inf; and Co A, 197th Spt Bn.

Anything can be broken, including an aluminum weapons rack. That's when PFC Michael Merz of Co D, 197th Spt Bn goes to work. PFC Merz is one of the few soldiers in the 197th Inf Bde who has had the comprehensive training necessary to do aluminum welding.

Numbers against you

Motorcycle riding: a game with few winners

Few people would get into a card game with a professional gambler without a bit of apprehension. A card game with a man wearing a big diamond ring and shuffling the deck one-handed would make you feel that you didn't have a good grip on your bank roll — that the numbers were already against you.

If you've joined the motorcycle game — registrations are up 734 per cent since 1961 — here are some numbers to consider:

*Young Americans (60 per cent under 20 years of age) on small motorcycles are often hurt (360,000 in the nation), generally have no formal cycle operation schooling (72 per cent), die of head injuries (3,160) and are more likely to be hurt in an accident than car drivers.

*Most accidents occur on straight roads (because of highway speeds). Many other accidents (89 per cent) occur at speeds under 40 miles per hour.

*Most traffic accidents involve cars which "do not see" the motorcycle. Many riders fall off because of road defects (13 per cent) and some fall off because of loose matter on the road (seven per cent).

*Most accidents occur within 15 miles of the rider's home (79 per cent). Bikers are most often hurt between the hours of 3-7 p.m. on weekends on dry roads (96 per cent). Twenty per cent of the fatalities are female passengers, and 60 per cent of the accidents with a passenger involves a rear tire blowout.

Enough numbers? That's not all. Hitting things fast with your body results in the same impact as falling. If you hit something at 30 m.p.h., you fall three stories (30 feet). If you hit at 50 m.p.h. you fall 84 feet. At 70 m.p.h. the impact to your body is the same as falling over 16 stories, 164 feet.

Next time you see a building that tall, compare the height of the building to your need to ever travel that fast.

If you employ all the numbers to make your two-wheeled habits good ones, you'll win the safety game. Your life and limbs are the stakes.

Casual attitude main factor

Boiling a frog parallels accident prevention

Believe it or not, there's a parallel between boiling a frog and complacency in accident prevention.

If you put a frog in a pan of hot water he'll leap out instantly and make himself scarce if he's smart.

If you really want to boil the frog you have to use a much more strategic approach. You sort of sneak up on him. First, you put him in lukewarm water. He likes it so he's likely to relax and doze off.

Now increase the heat very, very slowly. If he should wake up the water will be warm but still relaxing. He'll probably yawn and go back to sleep. Just keep increasing the heat very gradually until the water is hot and the frog is boiled.

In much the same ways many people are boiled into accidents. Slowly, degree by degree, they allow impatience, carelessness and lack of attention to bring them to the point of mishap.

The "boiling" process may take many years, but the heat is on when bad habits are substituted for safe habits. And when a routine operation becomes a risky operation, trouble is inevitable. However, you don't have to "boil" and there are countermeasures you can take. Examine your safety habits and attitudes every day. It is necessary to do this frequently and regularly because human nature has a way of letting minor adjustments and allowances unconsciously cover up habits and attitudes that are going astray. Like boiling a frog, it's a slow, gradual process and it is hard to recognize or realize it's happening.

Take a clear look at yourself and how you're going to do things. It's the best way to stay out of hot water. (AFPS)

34th Med Bn Captain is archery enthusiast

CPT William J. Fitzgerald, HHD, 34th Med Bn, demonstrates the proper method of sighting with a modern compound bow.

By Bruce Bergstesser

According to the Guinness Book of World Records, archery is one of man's oldest acquired skills. The book states that Archaeologists have discovered stone arrowheads indicating that the first bow and arrow was invented around 46,000 B.C.

The first bowmen supposedly used the weapon primarily as a means of obtaining food, while it is believed that archery developed into a sport at least as early as the 4th century A.D.

Archery has become one of the fastest growing families in America. CPT William Fitzgerald, HHD, 34th Med Bn, is a modern student of the bow and explains some of the finer points of the sport.

According to Fitzgerald, secretary of the Chattahoochee Valley Archers Council, "The modern archer, unlike his forebears, cannot pull a limb from a tree, attach a strip of rawhide to it, and expect to compete equally with his peers. An up-to-date archer, with all the proper equipment, has invested a substantial amount of money for his intricately designed instrument."

The Bowman of today is usually armed with either a working "recurve bow" of simple construction, or with the more complex "compound bow."

"Bows are usually manufactured of fiberglass or of laminated wood," said Fitzgerald. "Arrows, no longer plucked from trees, are painstakingly machined of wood, molded plastic, fiberglass, or aluminum."

Equipped with these near-perfect outfits, the 20th century Robin Hood is able to score bull's-eyes at ranges up to 85 yards with an accuracy exceeding 95 per cent.

Anyone interested in archery can attend the Chattahoochee Valley Archers Council meetings held each Tuesday, 6 p.m., at the Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club. The council, open to all civilians and military, is an affiliate of the Georgia Bow Hunters and Archers Association, and the National Archery Association.

"Waste neither time nor money, but make the best use of both."

QMP is key

Re-up privileges denied to non-progressive soldiers

The days of the "Old Soldier" are dead. They were buried by the Army's Qualitative Management Program (QMP).

The "Old Soldier" could be any enlisted man content to stay at E-4 to E-6 until retirement.

QMP denies reenlistment to enlisted personnel who are non-progressive and/or unsatisfactory performers. Action starts when a DA promotion board selects a man to be barred from reenlistment or when he passes the quality retention point for his grade.

"QMP is a management tool to identify those who don't meet Army standards," says HQ Command Career Counselor SSG Robert E. Pritchett.

"QMP eliminates a lot of people who don't take the initiative for self-improvement. It makes people aware that they've got to perform. Also it has generated keen competition, especially in the NCO corps," Pritchett said.

The quality retention points are given below:

Grade	Total Active Service
E-1/E-2	3 years
E-3	5 years
E-4	10 years
E-5	13 years
E-6	20 years
E-7	24 years
E-8	27 years
E-9	30 years*

*With the exception of those granted special authorization under the CSM retention program.

Soldiers in the grade of E-5 to E-8 who meet the above requirements can still be barred by a DA centralized promotion board after the board reviews the soldier's official military personnel file (OMPF). OMPFs of E-9s are reviewed by the command sergeant major selection board.

Staff sergeants get the most QMPs because there are more of them, says Murray R. Lobell, military personnel clerk at AG Personnel Actions. E-5s usually get the second most, he added.

"The way to avoid QMPs is to get promotions," said Pritchett. "To do that personnel should continuously improve their military and civilian education. And they should aim for a score of at least 100 on their MOS tests," he concluded.

PFC Jones decided to reenlist for a second term. "I haven't been doing so well, but there is no way I can get QMPed for another two years," he bragged.

Jones knows that DA centralized promotion boards screen personnel in grades E-5 to E-8 only. The command sergeant major selection board screens E-9s.

Then his commander recommended that he be barred from reenlistment. Jones overlooked AR 601-280, enacted Aug. 1, 1975. The purpose of field commander's bars and the Qualitative Management Program (QMP) is to upgrade the quality of the career enlisted force. This means eliminating those personnel who are below the standards for retention.

Jones is fictional, but he is an example of those who fall into the category of sub-standard.

Commander's bars are more common than DA promotion board bars, according to HQ Command Career Counselor SSG Robert E. Pritchett. For example, the USAIC Reenlistment Office handled 34 commander's bars from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31.

"First termers usually get the most commander's bars," says SFC Henry Wooten, operations sergeant. "The service member cannot be promoted while barred," he added.

But what the commander can give, the commander can take away. He may recommend to void the bar at any time that he feels the individual has proven he is worthy of retention. The commander is required to review the bar six months after it is approved or 30 days prior to the individual's date of departure from his current unit or the individual's date of separation, whichever occurs first.

Reenlistment bars are rough on guys like PFC Jones, but they are necessary for a smaller, more professional fighting force.

Commander's bar plays major role in quality force

Following is a list of reasons for which enlisted personnel often receive commander's bars:

- (1) Late to formations, details, or assigned duties.
- (2) AWOL for one- to 24-hour periods.
- (3) Losses of clothing and equipment.
- (4) Substandard personal appearance.
- (5) Substandard personal hygiene.
- (6) Continuous indebtedness; reluctance to repay; or late payments.
- (7) Recurrent Article 15 punishments.
- (8) Frequent traffic violations.
- (9) "Rides" sick call without medical justification.
- (10) Late returning from pass or leave.
- (11) Cannot follow orders; shirks; takes too much time; is defiant.
- (12) Cannot train for a job; apathetic; disinterested.
- (13) Cannot adapt to military life; uncooperative; involved in frequent difficulties with fellow soldiers.
- (14) Failure to manage personal, marital, and/or family affairs.
- (15) Causes trouble in the civilian community.
- (16) Involved in immoral acts.

Commanders must initiate

Qualitative Management bars can be appealed

If you have been barred to reenlist under the Qualitative Management Program (QMP), read on before making plans for civilian life.

There is hope since QMP bars can be appealed by the service member's commander.

If the QMP comes after an enlisted person passes his quality retention point, the commander may recommend that the service-member (SM) be granted a waiver. The SM must have a current MOS score of 70 or higher.

Those who pass their retention points and fail their PMOS tests (score 41 to 69) for the first may apply through their commanders to extend their current enlistment up to 12 months.

The commanders (LTC or higher) of those barred by DA promotion boards may appeal. The commander should send a detailed statement through channels within seven days explaining why he thinks the soldier should be retained in the Army. MILPERCEN must receive it 30 days prior to the soldier's ETS date.

If the commander chooses not to appeal or if his appeal is rejected, he presents the bar to the soldier. The SM then has 30 days to submit a request for reconsideration to his commander. The commander sends it to the general court martial convening authority.

If the SM decides not to appeal or if the appeal fails, he may serve out his enlistment, request immediate discharge or request immediate retirement. The soldier has 60 days after receiving the QMP letter to make either of the requests. Discharge or retirement would come six months later if appeal channels fail...

Artist draws for fun, not $$

By Steve Lora

PFC Gary Woodruff of Co A, 1/29th Inf is one of the many people who go through life with a talent that seldom receives recognition. He's an artist.

The Atlanta native has been fascinated with drawing portraits and pictures since grade school. His work isn't extensive, about 500 pictures in all, but he draws what he thinks other people will like.

"Ever since I was young, I've been obsessed with mixing colors and trying to capture things on paper," he says. "I first started drawing cartoons and gradually my interest turned toward drawing pictures of people."

Woodruff entered the Army in October 1974 and was assigned to the Pioneers in February 1975. Since that time he has drawn at least one picture every night. Many of his works grace the corridors and individual rooms of the barracks he lives in.

The young artist has drawn numerous pictures of the soldiers in his unit and their families, but has yet to charge anyone for his talent. "I just like to draw and get different opinions on my work. If they like what I draw, it's theirs."

Woodruff uses chalk, art paint, water colors, crayons and charcoal in his works. An average portrait sitting takes him about 30 minutes. After his service obligation, he plans to attend art school and pursue a career as a commercial artist.

Editors note:

Did you read last weeks article in the Bayonet about cleaning and clearing Government quarters? If so, we want to let all our readers know this was a syndicated column that did not refer specifically to Fort Benning. The writer was talking about the military in general, but since it appeared in the Bayonet we have learned that many readers believed that all that was written pertained specifically to conditions and problems in clearing government quarters at Benning.

Since a very small percentage of military personnel clearing quarters utilize the government cleaning contractor, the workable solution as envisioned by "Ned Nearsight" in the syndicated column, "From Where I Stand", in last weeks Bayonet is not feasible at Benning.

However, realizing that clearing government quarters is at best a traumatic experience for the military family this is a part of military life that is of constant and continual concern to all in housing, so states the Family Housing Manager.

The Marksman

SFC Hershel L. Anderson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit has the unique distinction of recently being awarded two Amateur Athlete of the Year prizes. The first was by his native state of Tennessee and the second by the Atlanta Journal.

His glittering performance in the Pan American Games last month, where he captured four gold and two silver medals in pistol shooting, was a contributing factor for both awards.

A 20-year veteran of the Army, 38 year old Anderson has been shooting for the past 15 years. He holds some 30 national records and a dozen national championships. A native of Tracy City, Tenn., he is not a full-time shooter as his record might indicate. His is primarily an instructor with the Marksmanship Unit.

dressed in Bicentennial costumes as they gave needlework demonstrations around a cheerful fire.

The Bicentennial theme was carried out in the menu with dishes from the 1776 era, such as soups, corn pone, etc.

Unit training stresses battlefield situations

By Ron Fowler

SSG Kenshaw Walker (r) explains procedures for calling in mortar fire to PVT Donald L. Ruble.

Taking new personnel assigned to a cavalry unit and bringing them up to the level of combat readiness already attained by the other men of the Troop can be a very difficult task. But the men of Trp A, 15th Cav, 197th Inf Bde, have come up with a training tool that promises to address just that problem—an in-unit initial individual training program.

The program is to be conducted on a monthly basis and newly assigned personnel from grades E-1 — E-5 will go through the training within a period of 30 days after they are assigned to the unit.

Divided up into two distinct phases, the week-long program stresses all of the basic and advanced aspects of the battlefield situation that all cavalrymen should know.

Phase I of the program consists of two days of classroom instruction where they brush up on their knowledge of the mission of the cavalry unit, basic cavalry equipment, and basic cavalry battlefield techniques.

Phase II consists of practical application of the skills learned in the previous two phases. The men take part in a three-day field exercise in which they carry out a variety of missions designed to reinforce their classroom instruction.

Additionally, the men are afforded a very realistic look at what it's like to work in a chemical, biological, or nuclear environment as they will be required to don their protective masks for seven consecutive hours and continue their mission.

To date, approximately 20 men have gone through the in-unit individual training program and many more are to take part in the program in the future.

An interview with the CG

MG Willard Latham

BAYONET: Presently there has been an upturn in crime in the local community. What have you done, and plan to do, to reduce crime here on Fort Benning?

GEN. LATHAM: We have had a program ongoing now at Fort Benning for four months to reduce crime. I'm not familiar with what is causing the crime rate to rise in the civilian community. However, our crime rate since September has been on a continuous decline. On a military post — and I think it is true in a community — you have to take the view that there is no acceptable crime rate. Fortunately in a military community, we are able to somewhat control our environment. Certainly we control the security aspect of it. On a military post, those people who live and work here have the right to expect to be secure in their person and in their possessions.

"You have to take the view that there is no acceptable crime rate."

It's the responsibility of the Army — the government in this case — to insure that! That means that it gives us the duty to organize our security forces, our regular interior guard, the way that we run our barracks, and our military police to provide it. It is not a matter of just so-called armed or police-type effort. It is that certainly. But at least in my view — 50 per cent of that effort is what the citizens' attitude is. Crime doesn't flourish unless there is a permissiveness about it.

"Crime doesn't flourish unless there is a permissiveness about it."

BAYONET: In other words, the individual effort, sir?

GEN. LATHAM: Yes, the individual effort of our people. If you are aware and are conscious of the need to protect yourself, and just do common sense things, such as lock your car, secure your motorcycle, lock up belongings in high-risk areas, lock doors in homes, lock the door of your room — take reasonable precautions — the crime rate goes down.

On the policing side, there is a determination and a diligent effort to apprehend, to reduce those things that tend to encourage crime, such as speeding on highways, allowing suspicious activities to go on around an ammunition dump or places where there is money. If you have surveillance there, the possibility of crime is reduced. I don't believe there is an acceptable crime rate. We're working toward a zero crime rate. In the military, quite fortunately, we're able to direct our efforts vigorously.

BAYONET: You've said, "The United States Army has to be ready to win the first battle of the next war." Why is this first battle so important and exactly what are we doing here at Fort Benning to prepare to win it?

GEN. LATHAM: As we have seen in the recent wars in the middle east, the great increase in range and lethality of modern weapons is such that in a very short period of time, in an intense battle, tremendous casualties are inflicted on both sides. For instance, in the recent mid-east war, tremendous numbers of armored vehicles were destroyed and the casualties inflicted were so high that within a very short period of time both sides realized that some sort of negotiation was necessary.

With that kind of potential, that same kind of realization would very likely be made apparent to any belligerent anywhere in the world who had that kind of capability. It's very important that when you start those negotiations that you be in the most advantageous position possible. If we should be in a war, and it's a short intensive battle, it's important that when that battle is over, that the United States' position be advantageous

"... it is very important that we be able to do well in the first battle, because there may not be a second one."

If our view is to prevail. So it is very important that we be able to do well in the first battle, because there may not be a second one.

In all of our previous wars, there has been a second one, and a third one, and a fourth one. We've geared ourselves for the long pull and we had the technical know-how and industrial wealth to do it over the long haul. Now we have to be able to do it in the first battle. Indications are that it would be a relatively short but very intense battle, something like, in World War II lingo, a "Battle of the Bulge." It would be that kind of an operation.

BAYONET: What is your assessment of the racial situation at Fort Benning?

GEN. LATHAM: It seems to me to be a very good relationship right now. I have been here at Fort Benning at former times when it was not so . . . It was a very tense situation. It speaks very well of the programs that have gone on here in the past few years. There seems to be a high level of goodwill among all of our people. The policies that are going are accepted as being fair and people are working to improve them. I have sensed no particular degree of tension and I believe our efforts are paying off. I don't think we've reached the millenium in this area and have no further work to do. We do.

A continuous indoctrination and orientation

tation effort is required. You have new people to come in and they have to be convinced that the Army — the establishment — is fair minded. There's a need to make sure that on the individual basis people are educated to the principle that every man deserves to be accepted on his own merits, on what he's able to do. He has a right to be able to try to do anything as long as it's within the law. He shouldn't be restricted by race or color. Fort Benning has made tremendous strides in the last five years. I don't think just Fort Benning alone. It seems to me to be generally that way all over the Army.

BAYONET: In reference to the one station unit training program, what do you think the chances are that it will become a reality here at Fort Benning?

GEN LATHAM: I'm encouraged by it and I think it would be a good thing for the Army. Fort Benning is absolutely the best place for Infantry one station unit training to be implemented. The Army's official position now is that they are going to finish the test of this concept which is being done at Fort Knox and Fort Polk, and the results of those tests will be then communicated to the Congress in November of next year. A further decision will be made by Congress as to whether they will appropriate the money for it to come here at Fort Benning.

"... I am optimistic that the program (one station unit training) will come to Fort Benning. We are making plans for it to do so."

I'm certain the tests will show that it is an extremely cost effective, efficient way for the Army to conduct its training. Therefore, I am optimistic that the program will come to Fort Benning. We are making plans for it to do so.

BAYONET: You have indicated that personnel subjected to Infantry Center influence will be characterized as being the most physically tough individuals and units in the world. Why does physical training play such a big part in your command at Fort Benning?

GEN LATHAM: In all of the experience I've had in the Army, in combat and out — particularly in combat where the payoff is — it is my observation that PT is one area in which the American soldier falls down first. In the early days of the Korean War, we were repeatedly defeated because we couldn't move on the mountains and in the heat with the same degree of efficiency as the enemy, who could do it easily.

In Vietnam we were not able to operate to the same degree of efficiency as the enemy in the heat and over the same distances, without constant re-supply. That meant the enemy always knew where we were because they could see the helicopters come down, or drop loads through the trees.

There comes a time, particularly with the Infantryman, when the fight is a matter of which man or small group of men is best. If you are in a situation where you have tremendous firepower, and the other fellow does not have it, you can sometimes substitute one for the other. But it is the one ingredient which is not quantifiable. You can't engineer it. You have a weapon designed to do a certain thing and it will do it. The man can either have a high degree of efficiency or low level, depending on how well you've trained him or continuously train him.

"There comes a time . . . when the fight is a matter of which man is best . . ."

If we come against an enemy who is armed as well as we are — and our threat forces are — and he is tougher than we are, in my view, he will probably win — unless we are tougher than he is. That's one thing we can do something about. We must do something about all our problems — weapons, doctrine — but we must do something about toughness too.

Good physical conditioning is one of those things that is not negotiable. If I'm tougher than you are and we have the same weapons, I'll whip you. I'll do it nine times out of ten. You may get a lucky punch in every now and then, but I know that I can beat you. We both know it in the final analysis.

If you are faced with a physical challenge and you don't know whether you can do it or not, you are not as confident as the man or group of men who know they can do it because they have already done it. They are accustomed to doing it. And when you translate that into being able to operate in times of climatic extremes, very hot or very cold, over long distances — those things where you have to reach down and have the toughness to know that you can do it — whether it's sore feet, or some muscles, or lack of wind or whatever, if you haven't tried it . . . if you haven't conditioned yourself . . . you are going to lose . . . give up.

"I've had the experience of seeing American soldiers sit down on the side of the road and cry because they couldn't go any farther . . . a commander who allows that is criminally negligent."

I've had the experience of seeing American soldiers sit down on the side of the road and cry because they couldn't go any farther. That is unacceptable and it's unnecessary too. A commander who allows that is criminally negligent.

BAYONET: In view of the recent discussion about unionizing the military forces, we would like to get your personal opinion on the idea of forming a union in the Army. What about a union that had the restriction of existing just during a peacetime Army? Would there be any chance of a survival?

GEN LATHAM: In my view, I don't believe it's possible. Because the Army you train in peacetime is the one upon which your threat, whoever he may be, makes his decision about what he is going to do to you. Mr. Churchill said one time, both sides always believe they have a chance to win or there would be no war. And when one side or the other decides he has a significant advantage, then he may decide to go to war.

Anyone who threatens us — if they ever decide that their state of training and equipment is sufficient to defeat us — may take that chance. We have a number of unionized services right now who occasionally strike, like the mail. Would it be appropriate for the military to strike? I think not.

BAYONET: There has been a lot of emphasis on leadership at all levels thus far in your command at Fort Benning. Are you satisfied with what you have seen in the way of leadership?

GEN LATHAM: My watching the influence of leadership over the years has convinced me that it is the single most dynamic influence that can be brought to bear on the military situation. Leadership can make up for many deficiencies — lack of equipment and resources — therefore it is one of the things that a leader or a commander must always strive to maximize.

"Leadership can make up for many deficiencies — lack of equipment and resources — therefore it is one of the things that a leader or a commander must always strive to maximize."

One of the things that I indicated I expect of our leadership here is a total involvement. If a man is totally involved in his mission, he does a lot of the things I was talking about a minute ago. So my thrust in this area is to make clear so that every leader will understand that I do expect him to be totally involved.

And totally involved to me means the leader must know what the standards are and then set the example for he can — totally involve duty is to first make that cl look for those instances where the case.

The need to do that is all because if you have less the involved leadership, you get maximum result. And the country have a right to ex imum result from their peo expectations throughout th this dedication of leadersh all levels from commandi sergeant E5.

"I expect dynamic leadership — my expectation is that the higher the more leadership I expect a better example of leadership. But I expect ranks."

Leadership isn't just military rank. It is also civilian supervisors. It is forceable, but it is certainly the question was, am I satisfied? I'd like to answer that it's real progress but it is always look for. I expect aggressive leadership — of it is that the higher the leadership I expect, and the pile of leadership I expect at all ranks.

BAYONET: In your guidance you list as one of the things, improved standards assigned personnel. What do you contemplate in this area?

GEN LATHAM: Well, the whole spectrum, and it ranges from all making every attention to every thing — keeping the barracks where people live and work in the best condition that we can get within our own resources.

We have already done a lot to establish the cyclic support that the post support department around so that one unit always get the job that they never get. We set these up working rather well. We have the services on post — the PX, service stations, any services rendered — the work there, military and understand that their role is to be a vice, a cheerful service.

We are not a profit oriented activity. The reason they are there is to render a service. We have a program on the way and I have people who check to see that we do get this service, and obviously we don't always. But the point is, when we don't, we try to do something about it. The idea is to make pleasant the places that we have, the Commissary, PX, service stations, AG, Finance, gymnasium, any facility that we have — the hospital — is geared towards making people believe that we have their best interest at heart.

I have asked all the commanders, I have asked the IG, all to be constantly looking into that. When I send the Field Officer of the Day on his rounds, we have him on a 24-hour basis with nothing else to do but that. We have programs underway to upgrade some barracks that are just not up to the standards that we want. We have some instructions on the way to upgrade that. This is a never ending problem.

"We have programs underway to upgrade some barracks that are just not up to the standards that we want."

BAYONET: In the way of specialized training at Fort Benning, for example night training or combat in built up areas, do you feel that the US forces are on par with a potential enemy?

GEN LATHAM: The most versatile and flexible member of the combined arms combat team is the Infantryman. He must be able to do everything. The artillery and the tanks all have a powerful and important role in the combined arms team. But there are many places they cannot go and there are many things they cannot do.

There is one option that is never offered the Infantryman that he cannot be sent anywhere, no matter what the time of day or night, or the condition of visibility; no matter what kind of challenge it is, the Infantryman is the one man who must make up for any other deficiencies, or any deficiency in the other arms. He must go.

So we have the necessity to develop, and continue to develop, proficiency in specialized skills such as night fighting, fighting in built up areas, anti-tank, anti-armor expertise or skills that a small unit needs in extended operation. These are skills that an Infantryman must continue to work on. Many of our potential threat forces right now do have night vision devices that are very sophisticated. We have them also. But we must constantly work to improve on them. The short, highly violent battle can be fought equally at night as in daylight. It can be fought in all kinds of close terrain and built up areas — whatever is there.

The Infantryman is the one factor on the battlefield that has to be able to function in all of them. His expertise in those matters must be pronounced. That's why we have deliberate ongoing programs here that are going to get bigger (to do just that).

BAYONET: May we have your overall view of the Infantry Center, and the Army?

GEN. LATHAM: The US Army Infantry Center is a very, very important element in our nation's and our Army's mission to develop a sufficient military force. We have many challenges before us. The battlefield that we are going to face is different than we've ever had before, and the need to be successful immediately on it is something else we have never had so critically put before us. We have to win. The first time. We have a program underway here to accomplish that. We are under the same constraint as the rest of our country — we don't have all the money we would like — but what we have set out to do for ourselves is possible. We expect to get it done.

After having fought through all the challenges in the past, if someone should ask, "what is going to come out of Benning in the near future," I would have to say that we are going to produce the most physically tough individuals and units in the world. No less than that.

The people we produce are going to be totally proficient, tank-busting Infantrymen. They will have the best anti-tank weapons in the world — the TOW missile, the Dragon missile, and LAW missile. They are going to be totally capable of conducting extended operation. They are going to be tough enough to do that.

They will not have to ask for resupply every day. They are going to be highly competent night combat specialists. They are going to be proficient in weapon systems operation, and highly mobile warfare tactics, and experts in fighting in built up areas and in towns.

We expect that the troop leadership here — just by looking at it — to be the best found in the Army. We have the people here to do it. The people we have in the Army today are the best I have ever seen in my 26 years in the Army. They really are that good. From the time I came in the Army as an officer, young people — and the old, too — but the young ones, they get more done, they are more energetic about it, they are smarter. That has all come about in the last five years. There is just no limit to what our people can do.

Springer to present 'Butterflies Are Free'

A Ft. Benning soldier will play a supporting role in the Springer Theater Company production "Butterflies are Free."

CPT (Dr.) Bruce Wolff, 197th Infantry brigade surgeon, plays a cocky young rebel in the Leonard Gershe hit. There will be seven performances at 8:30 p.m., January 30, 31 and February 3-7 and a matinee on February 1 at 2:30 p.m.

The play is about a young man, sightless from birth, out on his own for the first time in his life to make a musical career for himself in New York. He discovers a girl — a zany, jovial young kook — in the apartment next to his in Greenwich Village.

The two of them come to believe that they are ideal for each other, but his protective mother does not share that opinion.

The production will star Carlyle Dukes as the young man striking out on his own, Allison Biggers as the uninhibited kook, and Betty Britto as the possessive but understandably affectionate mother. Clint Atkinson will direct the play.

Tickets may be obtained at the Box Office, 103 10th St., from January 23, through February 7, or by calling 327-3688 for reservations.

Enlisted personnel and students can obtain tickets for half price.

"Blue jean" night will be held at the theater for students and the younger set on February 3. A champagne party for season ticket holders will be held on opening night after the play.

Betty Britto says "I told you so" to Carlyle Dukes (left) when Allison Biggers brings Bruce Wolff to the apartment in rehearsals for "Butterflies are Free."

'Rangering' no picnic

Long hours and hard work are nothing new to the Rangers. Ninety per cent combat veterans, all qualified Airborne-Rangers, the 11 officer's and 24 NCO' instructors assigned to the Ranger Patrolling Division (RPD) go to the field 9 or 10 times a year, spending the entire 81 hours of field training with their students.

The Patrolling Division of the Ranger Department is charged with instructing BNCOC, ANCO, BIOCC/OCRC, and IOBC students. "We teach them techniques of patrolling, survival, evasion, resistance, escape, rappelling, tracking, and airborne-airmobile operations," says MAJ E. M. Young, chief of the RPD.

Students receive several hours of classroom instruction prior to the field patrolling exercise. They are then broken down into patrol size units, assigned RPD instructors, and issued equipment for their trip to the field.

Once in the field, students spend 81 hours in a simulated but realistic combat environment. Each student must lead the patrol through various phases throughout the operation and "the students are constantly critiqued on their performances. This allows us to observe their knowledge of patrolling and their leadership ability," Young said.

MAJ Young briefs a LRRP team prior to their mission. The LRRP's will jump into the target area to debrief the patrols prior to their extraction by helicopter.

Mistakes are pointed out immediately and the students are corrected on the spot. This keeps the instructors on their feet constantly as they must grade and evaluate every move the student makes.

On the final day of the exercise, patrols are gathered into predetermined areas. LRRP instructors are briefed and dropped into the area to help coordinate the extraction of the patrols and to give the students their debriefing prior to equipment turn-in and release back to their respective companies.

Doughboys split with Campbell

Fort Benning's men's and women basketball teams broke even in a four game set at Fort Campbell, Ky., last weekend.

The men narrowly outdistanced Fort Campbell in Saturday's game 73-72. J. C. Moore, a 6'5" starting forward, paced the doughboys with 16 points followed by guard Sammy Cole with 15.

Sunday's game was a little different. Trading buckets throughout the contest, Campbell held the lead 72-71 with nine seconds showing on the clock. Then J. C. Moore tied-it-up with a free throw causing the game to go into overtime. But the overtime proved fatal to the Benningites and they lost 77-72.

Gina Johnson led the women's team in Saturday's 44-31 loss to the Campbell ladies with 14 points, but turned it around Sunday, and, behind Johnson's 25 points, outlasted Campbell winning 50-43.

The Atlanta Celtics travel to Fort Benning this weekend to face the doughboys

Weather hinders B.A.S.S. Club

By Denny Blankenship

Members of the Post B.A.S.S. Club battled 24 degree temperatures and 20 mph winds last Saturday when they held their January tournament on Lake Martin. Weather severity was evidence by the fact that rod eyelets clogged with ice, reels did not work properly, and many lines did not hold up.

Jack Tibbs Jr., one of the youngest and most knowledgeable members of the Club, put it all together again and managed to catch enough fish to best the field. Tibbs seems to have a feel for getting onto fish patterns early and last Saturday was no exception. You'll hear more about this talented young man in future bass fishing tournaments.

SFC Randy Harris caught enough fish just prior to weigh-in time to ease into second place ahead of MAJ Jim Connors who put together at last minute charge to beat several close contenders for third.

Despite the severe weather conditions, all Club members were in high spirits at the end of the day and, after all, that's what it's all about — dedication!

Iran. "I'm very pleased with the assistance the department and myself have received from the 1st Battalion," he noted.

43d Engineers complete project

By THOMAS BARBA

Engineers from Co D, 43d Engr Bn, completed the final phase of a construction project for the Ranger Dept. Jan. 11 at Camp Merrill, Dahlonge, Ga.

The initial three phases began in September when 2d Plt, Co D, departed from the Ranger Mountain Camp to redeck the 60-foot rappelling tower used by Ranger students. Working throughout a two-week period they were also able to construct a 40-foot, timber-trestle bridge and demolish one of the compound's few buildings.

Members of the same platoon braved the winter cold and snow of Dahlonge on January 6 to install a latrine and water heater in the camp's small commissary. The accomplishment marked the end of a task which challenged the skills of the engineers not only in repairs and utilities installations but also in heavy construction.

The platoon is again busy with construction work for the Airborne Jump Committee by constructing an insulated ceiling in the instructor's lounge in McCarthy Hall.

USMA Prep School vacancies still open

The U. S. Military Academy Prep School (USMAPS) still has vacancies for women who wish to apply for entry into the July '76 class of West Point. The Prep School will evaluate and accept female applicants who can be processed to arrive at Ft. Monmouth, N. J. before Feb. 23.

DA has requested that commanders of all levels give every possible assistance to any female enlisted soldier wishing to apply.

The Army operates the Prep School to help enlisted soldiers in the active Army, Army National Guard and Army Reserve qualify for entrance to West Point. It is the enlisted soldier's best chance for an appointment to the academy. The curriculum includes a heavy emphasis on math and English and an extensive athletic program.

Women interested in applying to USMAPS should notify their commanding officer as soon as possible. AR 351-12 covers application procedures. (ANF)

Unbeaten teams schedule contest

The unbeaten 988th MPs are scheduled to meet Co A, 43rd Engr Bn — who also sports a perfect record — in a fast-paced 36th Engr Gp basketball game Monday at Audie Murphy gymnasium.

The 988th MP's closest game thus far this season was with their sister company, the 139th MPs. The 139th led throughout the contest, but were surprised by a sudden 988th comeback late in the game.

With fourteen seconds remaining to play, Larry Madison netted a 30-foot jump shot which gave the 988th the necessary margin of victory.

Thomas Vasilon; Luncheon Committee Mrs. Robert Riviello and Mrs. Jack Whitted; Program Committee Mrs. John Dye and Mrs. Timothy Mason.

Compute Your Ideal Weight

WOMEN, allow 100 pounds for the first five feet of your height and five pounds for each inch over five feet. MEN allow 106 pounds for the first five feet of your height and six pounds for each inch over five feet.

After computing your ideal weight subtract 10 per cent of the total ideal weight if you are small boned; add 10 per cent if large boned. If your actual weight is less than 15 per cent over the ideal weight, you are overweight; if over 15 per cent, — obese. This computation is according to Ms. Aita Grapefruit, alias Mrs.

Craig Nielson, who spoke at the OWC

Luncheon January 14 on staying slim and trim.

Hq, 197th Inf Bde

The ladies of HQ, 197th Inf Bde gathered at the home of Mrs. Jimmy McGraw for their January Coffee. Co-hostesses were CPT Ruth Dieringer and Mrs. Guy Payne.

The door prizes carried out the Bicentennial theme with George and Martha Washington dolls made by the hostesses.

Mrs. Joe P. Coffman welcomed newcomers Mrs. Terry Arnold, Mrs. Richard Brown, Mrs. Phillip Goodwin, Mrs. Arthur Ingalls, Mrs. Gary Harrison, Mrs. Ronald Roughhead and Mrs. Henry Sanders.

The following new chairladies were announced: Treasurer, Mrs. Edward Lisecki; Hospitality, Mrs. William Reehm; Thrift Shop, Mrs. Jackie Catt; Cards, Mrs. James Thomas.

2/69th Ar

1976 has brought the best kind of prosperity to the 2/69th Ar in the form of new additions. Those welcomed were LT and Mrs. Stephen Pospicil and LT and Mrs. Robert Lawler.

A fond farewell to LT and Mrs. Lee Hamby.

The officers and ladies of the battalion presented LT and Mrs.

Jeremy Miller a baby cup on the birth of their daughter, Katharine Kine.

LTC and Mrs. John J.

Redesco closed the 1975 activities for the 2/69th Ar with a traditionally festive New Year reception in their home.

Early retirement cited as major military benefit

After 21 years of service SFC Jack Scudder of the 121st Avn Co plans to retire next month.

For 20 years Scudder has devoted himself to Army Aviation, particularly in the field of flight operations. Scudder began his career in the field of anti-aircraft artillery and was assigned to a Nike site in Massachusetts.

At about the same time in 1956, helicopters were being assigned for the first time to these units. As Scudder recalled: "I became fascinated with helicopters because they were fairly new at the time, and I knew that I wanted to work with them."

He completed the helicopter maintenance school at Ft. Rucker, and later returned to the Massachusetts area to become a crew chief on an H21 (SHAWNEE). In 1957 Scudder was sent to Korea and had his first experience with a Medevac unit. There he became a mechanic on an H13, the same type of helicopter seen on the television show MASH.

Since arriving at Ft. Benning, Scudder has served with the 121st Avn Co. He is responsible for much of the coordination involved in the busy flight operation section.

He feels that the Army today is a great challenge for any young man or woman looking for a rewarding career.

Scudder intends to employ the managerial skills that he has acquired while in the Army and accept a supervisory position in a local office of a nationwide company.

At 38 years young, he feels that being able to retire early and have a second career is a major advantage to an Army career.

SFC Jack Scudder (r) checks a flight plan being prepared by CW2

John Davidson in the 121st Avn Co operations office.

Prayer breakfast slated

A Bicentennial National Prayer Breakfast will be celebrated at the Ft. Benning Officers' Club, Supper Club on Thursday, January 29 at 6:45 a.m.

Dr. G. Othell Hand will be guest speaker at the breakfast and music will be provided by the Infantry Chorus. Military personnel and civilian employees should confirm reservations through project officers of major commands on post. Invitations have been distributed at all levels of command to provide equitable opportunities to celebrate the Bicentennial event.

Persons attending the Ft. Benning breakfast will be joining other service members world-wide and national leaders in Washington, D.C. in acknowledging the moral and spiritual values which are basic to the nation.

The tradition began as the Presidential Prayer Breakfast in 1953 under President Eisenhower and has continued since. President Ford and other national leaders are expected to participate in this year's breakfast at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

Commissary surcharge to increase

Army commissaries world wide will increase their surcharge from three to four per cent on February 1. The rise in surcharge is designed to offset construction and improvement cost.

The increase will amount to an additional charge of 50 cents on a 50 dollar tab run up at the Ft. Benning commissary store.

Commissary future uncertain

Rusty water not harmful

A slight discoloration in the water on Ft. Benning may result from routine maintenance on the post fire hydrants scheduled to begin next week.

According to the Fire Prevention and Protection Division (FPPD) of DFAE, the maintenance is required by regulation and is necessary to prevent possible blockages in the water supply in the event of a fire.

The annual upkeep will include flushing, greasing, lubricating and repacking every hydrant on post and will continue for approximately two months. This maintenance often gives a rusty-looking tint to the water, but the sediment which causes the discoloration is NOT harmful, says Chief Robert Young of the FPPD.

The first residential housing area to be affected by the maintenance operation will be Bouton Heights, Custer Terrace and McGraw Manor.

Ft. Benning photographer Bill C. Walton takes a look at himself photographically to illustrate a story by Jerry Hill. It makes interesting reading on page 8.

Price hikes due; some stores to close

An increase in prices at military commissaries is the result of a plan being studied by the Pentagon to eliminate $300 million in annual subsidies to the stores.

Last year Congress backed off from a similar plan to reduce subsidies when a torrent of mail from servicemen, their wives and retired personnel swamped the nation's capitol.

Pentagon comptroller Terence McClary said, "It was quite an emotional issue." He also indicated that service-related publications stimulated the hordes of protest mail by constituents, which influenced Congress to ease away from the issue.

The Armed Services operate 419 commissaries worldwide. They generate over two billion dollars in sales. Under the present system, the Pentagon subsidizes the stores by paying 25,000 civilian and 2,500 military personnel who work in the commissaries out of the overall defense budget. It is this subsidy that the Pentagon wants to end. Under the new proposal, the subsidy would be phased out over three years, as opposed to the original two-year phase out proposed in 1975.

McClary said that there has never been any intention to shut down the commissaries. He also pointed out that even after the new proposal is adopted, commissary patrons would still realize a savings of 12-13 per cent over retail supermarkets.

Currently, commissary shoppers save about 23 per cent by buying groceries and other necessities on post.

Last May, the Government Accounting Office (GAO) took the position that commissary stores are not justified at military installations in metropolitan areas of the U.S. This was on the basis that enough commercial food stores sell food at reasonable prices.

Pentagon officials say they now are studying a list of commissaries to determine

Marksmanship contest slated

The USAIC Service Rifle, Pistol, and M-60 Machinegun Competitive Marksmanship Match will be held February 11, 12, and 13 at McAndrews, Phillips, and Easley Ranges.

"The matches are designed to enhance training interests and to raise the standards of proficiency in the use of individual service weapons," says Maj. Peter H. Mitchell, Marksmanship Coordinator, Range Division.

"Each battalion-size unit on post is encouraged to enter one pistol team, one rifle team, and, if the unit utilizes the M-60 machinegun as a primary weapon, one machinegun team," Mitchell explained.

Although teams are being entered, Mitchell is quick to add, "this does not exclude individuals from competing."

Competition is divided into two categories. Personnel will compete in the combat category on either a team or an individual basis.

"Winning teams in the combat category will advance to the First Army competition (to be held this Spring) as teams," explains Mitchell, "but individual high-scorers will be appointed to teams representing Ft. Benning in the composite category."

Prior to the USAIC tournament, the United States Army Marksmanship Unit will conduct a three day shooter's clinic, February 2, 3, and 4.

For further information contact MAJ Mitchell at 545-4619.

Infantry Museum fund drive begins

The Infantry Museum Association will be awarding nearly $8,000 in door prizes to raise funds for Fort Benning's new National Infantry Museum.

Fifty-cent tickets can be obtained from unit project officers or by calling CPT Jim Smith, the post project ticket sales officer, at 545-2958.

Prizes include a 1976 Buick Skylark automobile, a Honda motorcycle, color television, a shotgun, a CB radio, electronic wrist watches, pocket calculators, and portable radios.

Regulations restrict eligibility to win door prizes. The eligibility list includes military (active and retired), DoD civilian, DoD contract and concessionaire, nonappropriated fund civilians and AUSA members. The dependents of those on this list are also eligible.

The Infantry Museum has been housed in temporary, wooden quarters for the past 16 years. It is scheduled to move into its first permanent home — Bldg 396 — later this year.

Ticket drawings will be held at the AUSA George Washington Birthday Ball on February 20. You need not be present to win.

197th names Cook of Month

By FRED A. EASTERLING

An avid hunter in Co. D, 197th Spt Bn, 197th Inf Bde bagged the 'Forever Forward' Brigade Cook of the Month with his second shot last week. The first time SP5 Earnest Hawkins took a shot at the brigade honors he missed, but being a good hunter, he stuck with it and scored on his latest attempt.

Hawkins explained his feelings about getting a second crack at the Cook of the Month competition. "My supervisors had faith in my ability and I am glad that they gave me a second chance at the board. This was the first time Co D, 197th Spt Bn had a chance to win in a long time. I couldn't let my fellow soldiers down, I had to win the brigade competition."

He entered the Army in 1973 and was assigned to the 2/52d Air Defence Artillery (ADA) at Homestead AFB, Fla. Following a two year tour there, he was assigned to the 197th in June of 1975.

Hawkins is the ADA's loss and our gain," commented SFC John G. Moran, Co D, Food Service Supervisor. "He is one of the most proficient food service personnel I have ever supervised."

Commissary battle looms on horizon

By Terry D. Ragan

Capitol Hill is gearing up for another commissary fight. Congress apparently didn't take the hint last year when all those letters told them the commissary system was absolutely necessary — especially to low-ranking enlisted men and women.

Now, politicians are arguing that we receive pay that is comparable to civilians, and that we don't need as big a discount on food as we did in the past.

Further, they maintain, commissary employe's salaries ought not to be paid solely by the Federal government, as they are now. Commissary patrons ought to pay these salaries through an increase in food prices, the argument goes.

We disagree.

Military pay scales don't even come close to pay in the civilian sector, except for officers. A quick computation of E-5 (over four years service) gross pay shows an average hourly wage of 83 cents per hour spread out over 24 hours a day, seven days a week — merely the time a soldier is on call for duty. That is a little less than two-fifths of the minimum wage. Military retirees living on pensions don't have it any easier.

The question of commissary employes and who should pay them is a little more complex. Congress has not released any studies on just how economically the commissary system is run. No one has suggested that the number of employees might need to be reduced, or that employing soldiers in the day-to-day operations of the commissary might save Uncle Sam more money.

One thing is true; taxpayers and military members alike deserve an accounting of the true cost of running the commissary system.

At stake is the salary of the little guy — the soldier who needs and uses the commissary.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

Some married service people who, during their military career, have been assigned temporary duty complained about being away from home and their wives each time a trip came up. This tact was fine until a group of wives formed to investigate their husbands' grumblings.

The old 'I-Really-Don't-Want-To-Go-But-They're-Making-Me' trick finally backfired.

Wives are now threatening to go along with their husbands when temporary duty calls.

This action by the wives has signalled a need for drastic changes in tactics by the husbands who receive temporary duty orders.

"This trip is for four days," a husband says. "If you're going with me you better pack plenty of heavy clothing. And don't forget the malaria pills."

"Why malaria pills?" a wife asks.

"Mosquitoes."

"In the winter?"

"Sure. And don't forget the water purification tablets."

"Water purification . . ."

"We have to go by pirogue down the bayou to the campsite."

"You know how I am about riding in small boats," the wife complains.

"Then you'd better take some of those motion sickness capsules along."

"Motion sickness?"

"And, oh, by the way, I bought a new Bowie knife for you. The best place to carry it is in your garter."

"You know how I am about riding in small boats," the wife repeats emphatically. "What if it tips over?"

"That's why I bought you the knife."

"The knife prevents the boat from tipping over?"

"No, the knife is for the alligators and rhinoceroses."

"Rhinoceros?" the wife screeches. "In America?"

"Certainly. So, I bought the knife so you could defend yourself if the pirogue capsizes."

"And the water purification tablets?"

"We won't be able to carry any cargo."

"I see," the wife says. "So if we can't carry any cargo we can't carry water. And if we can't carry water then we must use the water in the bayou."

"Right," the husband nods. "I'm sorry, dear," he shrugs.

"Well, that does it," says the wife. She begins unpacking her overnight case.

"Does it?" the husband inquires with upraised eyebrows. "Whatever do you mean?"

"I mean that I'm not going with you on this temporary duty trip."

"You mean that I have to go alone?" the husband whines.

"I'm sorry. I know how much you were looking forward to me going with you," the wife answers quietly. She places an arm around the husband's shoulders. "You'll have to go alone, dear."

"What can I say to persuade you to go?" the husband sobs.

"Nothing. Absolutely nothing you can say or do will change my mind," the wife shakes her head.

"You really mean it," the husband sighs. "You're really not coming with me."

"You chose the career. You'll just have to live with it," the wife admonishes. "You knew that there were temporary duty trips involved when you signed on."

"I may have to fraternize with the local populace," the husband advises. "I may have to stay up all hours of the night."

"That's your problem," the wife says rehangng dresses in the closet.

"I may even be required to eat exotic food that I can't even pronounce. And drink horrible tasting liquids."

"Then you'd better take an extra package of Alka-Seltzer," the wife prescribes replacing shoes in a rack.

"Then it's settled?" the husband asks cautiously.

"Definitely," the wife nods.

The telephone rings and the husband answers quickly.

"This is the Travel Agency, sir," an agent says over the telephone. "We have your flight to Los Angeles confirmed. We were able to get only one of the tickets that you requested for the new African Safari at Disneyland."

"I understand," the husband says, "that's perfectly all right." He looks at his wife and his bottom lip quivers. "My wife decided not to go along on the trip with me."

Paycheck may be worth more than you know

Most soldiers know how much money they earn each month but few know how much it is worth. A married E-5 with over six years service brings home a paycheck which includes: base pay, $573.90; quarters allowance, $153.60; and a subsistence allowance of $75.90 all of which totals $803.40. That's how much the soldier earns each month. But because of a tax advantage which each military member enjoys, it's actually worth from 4 to 4.5 percent more than that, or about $35.

There are many aspects of military compensation that defy understanding. Just what all the benefits are worth few people really understand. Army finance officers know how to compute pay accounts but they cannot tell you how much it is all worth. Congress, in an effort to enact pay legislation, cannot get a true feeling for what all the military benefits mean to the service member. The average soldier doesn't understand much beyond how his monthly paycheck is computed. One thing is certain — the soldier is receiving more benefits and advantages than he or she understands.

One of the terms used when talking about military pay is something called Regular Military Compensation (RMC). RMC is a combination of basic pay, quarters allowance and subsistence allowance plus the income tax advantage because the soldier does not have to pay tax on the quarters and subsistence allowance. The average civilian worker's pay is not separated that way so his entire pay, from which he pays for food and housing, is taxed.

The tax advantage is included as a part of the RMC figure because that is a cost which the soldier does not have to pay. True, the soldier does not receive that $35 in added hard cash, it does not have to be paid out at income tax time. Over a year's time that tax advantage amounts to about $400 for our E-5 example.

The figures quoted of course vary considerably with rank, years of service and if the soldier lives in the barracks or eats in the dining hall. A soldier not drawing quarters or subsistence is receiving housing or meals "in kind" but is benefiting from a savings. That savings can also be counted on the plus side of the compensation total. Like the tax advantage, it is not money in the soldier's pocket but neither is it money the service member has to spend out of his pocket.

The tax advantage is only one small aspect of the total military compensation and benefits. The others, such as the post exchange, commissary, medical and dental and retirement are variables which are difficult to fix a dollar value. They are a definite part of either money earned or cost avoided so they must be considered as a part of the total package. (ANF)

Leather is an art. People using Ft. Benning's two fully equipped craft shops are discovering how artistic they can be.

The two shops are open to active duty, retired and dependent personnel and civilian employees.

"We have just about anything a person wants in the way of leathercrafts," said Mr. Jack C. Stewart, the post craft director. "We have instructors on duty at all times from the start of an item to its completion."

The shops are located on main post in building 2783, across from the bowling alley, and on Kelly Hill in building 9049.

Both facilities are open 1:30-9:30 Tuesday through Friday and 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday. The main post shop is operational on Sunday 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m., however, the Kelly Hill facility will be temporarily closed for Sunday use, according to Stewart. Both shops are closed Monday.

The results of much time and skill are displayed.

Ace pilot holds variety of interests

Editor's note: When staff writer Jerry Hill came up with this interesting feature on Benning photographer, Bill C. Walton, we thought, who better to illustrate Bill Walton, than himself? The photos below (except the racer) and on the front page are all taken BY Mr. Walton OF Mr. Walton.

By JERRY HILL

Chief Warrant Officer (CW4) Bill Walton achieved a significant military milestone late last year when he became one of just a handful of Fort Benning pilots to complete 5,000 flying hours without an accident. That feat, alone, qualifies him as something of a rarity, but Walton is more than just a good pilot.

He's also a fancier of old automobiles, a wine connoisseur, and a darn good amateur photographer. He's also a better-than-average bowler and golfer.

An Army veteran of more than 27 years service, CW4 Walton is currently assigned to the 478th Avn Co (Heavy Helicopters), 34th Med Bn, as the battalion Information Officer (IO).

Oh, he still manages to retain his flight status with a minimum amount of flying time each month, but his IO duties keep him grounded for the most part.

But the Arkansas native and veteran of seven overseas tours isn't complaining — not yet, anyhow. As his unit IO representative, a position which he has held since last September, he's able to practice a hobby and skill which he learned many years ago — photography.

"I've had sort of a casual interest in photography as far back as I can remember," he says. "But I've been seriously interested in it for the past 10 to 12 years." However, he didn't build his own photo lab until 1971.

His official duties require him to photograph many routine situations, people and places, but he often finds some way to make the usual appear unusual. In other words, he specializes in so-called trick photography, a process of photo montage in which he combines two or more negatives and/or prints to achieve an eye-catching effect.

Recently, Walton has taken a keen interest in a form of photography known as stereography which was popular more than 20 years ago, but which is practiced by few photographers today. Simply stated, stereography is the art of reproducing images with a three-dimensional effect.

Another of Walton's favorite pastimes is tinkering with old automobiles. He recently purchased a 1940 Chevrolet to replace the 1959 TR-3 which he's driven for the past three years.

"The ironical thing," he says, in reference to his latest acquisition, "is that I paid $600 for the car last week and it cost only $685 brand new in 1940." He plans to restore the relic "to as near its original condition as possible," but a brake overhaul and complete safety check comes first so that he'll be able to drive it back and forth to work as soon as possible.

Walton's interest in cars, like photography, isn't contemporary. In fact, he was doing most of his own automotive repair work long before he took up the popular German sport of competitive hill climbing in 1960, the same year he was ranked 34th in the German National Hill Climbing Championships.

Six years later, during another tour of Germany, he was involved in his only automobile accident, when his Mustang went off the road at 95 miles per hour. Although he wasn't seriously injured, the accident marked the end of his competitive driving career.

they particularly enjoyed a certain type of wine the first time, I'll usually try to serve the same vintage again. If they didn't enjoy it, I'll serve something else."

At last count, Walton's wine log had 1,026 entries.

Despite a marked individualism which he makes no attempt to conceal, Walton has at least one trait in common with most "old soldiers." He has a vast storehouse of so-called war stories and interesting experiences accumulated over the years.

One of his most memorable missions as an Army pilot occurred in August, 1960, when he skipped what the German newspapers called the "helicopter hula-hoop."

Walton's taste for wine is certainly not unique, but the fact he has kept a written log of every bottle of wine served in his home since 1961 is definitely out of the ordinary.

He and his wife, Krys, a German by birth, enjoy wine with every evening meal, "duty permitting." His log book includes entries denoting when the wine was purchased or given to him, when it was consumed, who shared it with them (if anyone), and any remarks his guests may have had about the wine.

"It's just something I started as a referral whenever we had guests over for the evening," he explains. "If I notice

The term "hula-hoop" referred to a large flexible water pipe, the ends of which were connected to form a large ring, and the mission involved transporting the pipe via helicopter from one town to another town 160 miles away. Walton volunteered for the assignment and thus he and his crew became overnight heroes in the little town of Abtsgmund on the Kocher River.

Walton has taken advantage of the many opportunities afforded him to live and learn during his military career. And, to those who know him, it should be obvious that he's enjoyed every minute of it.

Leadership course vital to 197th mission

By C. B. HOOVER

Units of the 197th Inf Bde started another cycle of future leaders through the battalion leadership courses last week.

"The junior NCOs have to reach their full potential as leaders," said 197th Inf Bde CSM Nathan G. Hoover.

"The successful accomplishment of a unit's mission is directly dependent on the proficiency of its lowest functional element. I mean the E-4 or E-5 who is filling the next higher leadership position, such as a squad leader, section or crew chief," Hoover continued.

"The future of the unit's and the Army's capability to achieve its goals and accomplish its mission will be determined by the way the junior leader is educated today. These are just some of the reasons I think the course was started and why it is such an important part of today's training mission," Hoover concluded.

The 36 hour course of instruction includes seven major areas that are emphasized by the units: leadership, map reading, maintenance, physical training, dismantled drill, customs and traditions of the Army, and the promotion and education program in the Army today.

The instructions are given by the CSMs and 1SGTs or senior NCOs of the battalion and is continuously monitored by the Brigade CSM. Incorporated into the course is a four hour block of instructions on the particular mission of each soldier's unit and how that unit goes about accomplishing it.

"Only the best NCOs in the battalion were selected to give instruction to our future NCOs," stated 197th Spt Bn CSM Hugh M. Smith. "When I see an E-4 or E-5 working in the next higher skill level, then the idea of taking those junior leaders and training them correctly becomes very important to me. If the junior leader in the battalions are taught to perform or supervise a technical skill properly today, it will help the unit and the individual in the future."

When a unit is striving to have the very best instruction possible given to their junior leaders there is no better place to go than the experts. That's just what the 197th Spt Bn did last week as they requested and received assistance from the Map Reading Committee, USAIC who instructed one phase of the Battalion Leadership Course they were conducting.

The men of the 197th Spt Bn attended classes in Infantry Hall during the morning, then went to Cranston Hill where they put into practice some of the instruction given that morning by the Map Reading Committee.

"The training has been excellent so far," commented SP4 James J. Zdun of HHD, 197th Spt Bn, "I will be going before an E-5 board shortly and I'm sure that the things I have learned in this course will help me then, and in the future."

Some soldiers talked about the future, but others were concerned about the present too, as explained by SP4 Murtis J. Hindricks of Co D, "There has been one unique part of this course I have enjoyed. After attending the classes in the morning or afternoon I can go back to the unit. There I have a chance to put into practice what I learned throughout that day."

In the future, or in the present, training the junior leaders well is the key to keeping the "Backbone of the Army" — the NCO, in step with the ever changing environment and role the Army plays in today's society. The Junior Leader of today, is the Army of tomorrow.

Engineer vehicle vs. the bunker

By Fred A. Easterling

Ladies and Gentlemen, in this corner we have the reinforced concrete bunker. And in the opposite corner the challenger, the Combat Engineer Vehicle (CEV) with its 165mm main demolition gun. The challenger (CEV) will attempt to penetrate the bunker's wily defenses, and then level the bunker with an uppercut from its front mounted bulldozer blade.

At weigh in time, CEV tipped the scale at a petite 57 tons, while the bunker weighed in at over 100 tons. But CEV holds the edge in maneuverability, and is renowned for her lethal punch — 65 lbs of C-4 explosive at rangers up to 900 meters.

The stage for this contest was set last week at Spafford Observation Post (OP) here on Ft. Benning. The occasion was familiarization firing of the CEV by the 72d Engr. Co, 197th Inf. Bde.

The 72d Engr. Co has two such combat engineer vehicles and the crewmen fire the big guns annually for familiarization. They also fire the .50 caliber and the 7.62mm coaxial machine guns during the training phase.

"The CEV has a 165 mm gun that fires a 65 lb shape charge, capable of knocking out all but the thickest bunkers and fortifications," explained 1LT Michael Mcgee, 72d Engr Co, Executive Officer. "Additionally, the vehicle has a turret-mounted .50 caliber machine gun and a 7.62 mm coaxial machine gun. It is probably the most unique piece of equipment we maintain."

Last Friday the "Forever Forward" Engineers fired the earth-shaking guns at Spafford OP. Some of the targets were only severely damaged, but most were totally obliterated before the 72d Engrs., finished their firing.

The CEV is not only used in combat, but it is often called upon to clear ranges of large files of debris with its huge bulldozer blade.

1st AIT Brigade beefing up for

Workmen add the finishing touches to a fire control complex at one of the Malone Rangers currently being renovated.

Personnel of the 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade at Fort Benning finally "have a handle on the situation" with the arrival date of the first trainees just under two months away.

"We started from scratch with just a handful of people last June," says MAJ Danny Pounder, executive officer of the brigade.

"The grass was belly-button deep and we had to cut our way in before we could do anything else. But we've finally got a handle on the situation and we're building up the 24 companies at this point."

Formally activated on January 7, the brigade is gearing up to receive its first trainees on March 19. Three days later, on March 22, 660 trainees, comprising three companies, will begin seven weeks of Infantry AIT instruction.

Each week thereafter for six consecutive weeks, three additional companies of trainees will begin a seven-week cycle designed to qualify them as either Infantrymen (11B10) or Indirect Fire Infantrymen (11C10).

When the brigade reaches full strength later in the spring, it will include approximately 5,000 trainees and 1,270 permanent party support personnel. As of January 20, however, permanently assigned personnel numbered less than 500.

The brigade will consist of brigade headquarters, the Committee Group and Headquarters Company — all located physically in the general area of Sand Hill previously occupied by the 43d Engineer Battalion — and five training battalions, all of which will be located in the Harmony Church area.

The physical separation of the various components of the brigade was dictated by the lack of suitable facilities at any one location.

The construction of an entirely new and modern complex has been underway since last August. Phase I construction, which includes two enlisted barracks, is scheduled for completion in July, 1977. Phase II construction, which will include two additional enlisted barracks, a central energy plant, dispensary, chapel, gymnasium and outdoor recreation areas, is expected to begin this spring. Eight phases of construction in all are tentatively scheduled through 1983.

Until the new facilities are completed, the brigade will have to operate out of World War II temporary wooden structures, most of which required considerable upgrading.

"We've got most of the barracks buildings in the 1st and 5th battalions back from the contractors," explains MAJ Stoney Patterson, the brigade S-4.

"Each building is a little different in that some needed floor repairs, some needed windows and doors replaced, others had to have the plumbing replaced and a few had to have a complete overhaul," says MAJ Patterson. "What we want is just to get these buildings in livable condition for the next five years. By then, we'll be out of here for good."

Whereas civilian contractors are responsible for upgrading the buildings, the brigade is responsible for securing and installing such necessities as bunks and lockers, and for cleaning up the grounds surrounding each training area.

The brigade has received physical assistance from all the major units on post in assembling approximately 6,100 lockers, while most of the outside work — cutting grass, trimming shrubs, raking, edging, and hauling — is being done by permanent party

AIT Committee Group preparing int

The Committee Group of the 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade at Fort Benning is preparing an intensive program of practical instruction designed to give new soldiers the physical and mental skills necessary to become effective members of small Infantry teams.

The program of instruction will be ready when the 1st AIT troops begin training on March 22.

Due to the organizing stage of Committee Group, preparations have been administrative for the most part; involving briefings, meetings, research, discussions, and much detailed planning. Thus the lack of physical activity within the Committee Group may be deceiving to the casual observer.

Much has been accomplished since last fall when LTC Frederic Shean was appointed Committee Group Chief. Yet, much remains to be done before the arrival of the first trainees, according to LTC Shean.

"We've finished the concepts and we're now working on the lesson plans and bringing in the principal instructors," he explained last week. "The next step is to train the instructors and their assistants. By the middle of February, we hope to begin dry rehearsals."

The objective of Infantry AIT, says LTC Shean, "is to take the Basic Combat Training (BCT) graduate and qualify him in one of two MOSs, either 11B10 or 11C10."

The former MOS code designates the "Infantryman," who, according to AR 611-201, "serves as a member of an infantry activity employing individual weapons, machineguns, and anti-armor weapons in offensive and defensive combat operations."

The MOS code 11C10 identifies the "Indirect Fire Infantryman," who, according to the same regulation, "serves as a member of a mortar squad, section, or platoon employing crew-served and individual weapons in offensive, defensive and retrograde ground combat."

Besides the specialized instruction designed to provide trainees with specific MOS skills, Infantry AIT also provides instruction in subjects common to both AIT trainees, such as land navigation, water survival, basic communications, automatic rifle qualification, land mines, squad tactics, military operations in built-up areas, armored personnel carriers, and various individual weapons.

The 11B10 trainee will receive 182 hours of formal instruction from Committee Group personnel during his seven weeks of AIT, while the 11C10 will receive 179 hours of formal instruction. Reserve Enlisted Personnel (REPs) who attend AIT here will receive 24 additional hours of special instruction on civil disturbances and the M79 grenade launcher.

LTC Shean and his staff have had far more to worry about than just lesson plans and instructors, however. They've also had to determine the type and quantity of equipment that will be needed, where and how it will be stored, and how it will be maintained.

"For example," says LTC Shean, "we're asking for 55 mechanized vehicles, so we'll need to establish a motor pool with sufficient equipment and skill to care for the vehicles."

impending trainee arrival

personnel already on hand such as drill sergeants, clerks, and officers.

"When we first got started," says MAJ Patterson, MAJ Pounder had all of us out here on Saturdays cleaning up. Sergeant majors, captains, majors, everybody."

Whereas the Committee Group is responsible for planning, coordinating and presenting Military Occupational Specialty (MOS)-qualifying instruction, the brigade S-3 section is responsible for instruction on subjects such as welfare services, crime prevention, financial management, and other subjects required to show the trainee how he fits in the Army system.

LTC Howard Edmiston, the brigade S-3, views his role as "a broker of resources" for the brigade commander, COL Jack Farris.

"I pull it all together for the commander," says LTC Edmiston. "I analyze all the requirements, give them priorities and allocate our resources so that they make the greatest contribution to mission accomplishment."

"We don't teach trainees exclusively to be killers," Edmiston adds. "It's also our job to teach them the essential personal knowledge subjects, their rights and privileges, how to care for their families during garrison and overseas tours and how to obtain legal, financial and monetary assistance. It's our job to give each individual trainee the essential elements that will make him morally straight, physically fit, and mentally prepared to fulfill his mission both here and abroad."

In short, the brigade's mission is to produce good soldiers, good soldiers, and good men. Judging from the progress to date, that mission will be accomplished in the months and years ahead.

ensive program

A large percentage of the Infantry Center's initial expenses in preparations for training has been incurred with upgrading of the many firing ranges to be utilized. Upwards of 30 different ranges and training areas are being upgraded with all-new permanent facilities, including control towers, bleachers, ammunition units, firing control booths, and even barracks.

Committee Group personnel at the present time number less than 100, but authorized strength is 200 officers and 475 enlisted personnel. According to LTC Edmiston, most of the remaining cadre are scheduled to arrive by mid-February.

Of the total authorized strength, at least 60 per cent are slotted as E-5s through E-8 in rank, a fact which bears great significance, according to Edmiston.

"The NCO will play a very significant role in AIT," Edmiston says. "The Committee Group Chief. 'Instructors, who are E-7s, will be responsible for the conduct of their own blocks of instruction as well as being responsible for their assistants, their trainees, and their equipment. They're going to have a great deal of responsibility.'"

Training was originally scheduled to begin early in the year but the starting date was recently moved up to August 22, which means that only nine weeks remain to iron out large problems and small details.

LTC Edmiston is confident that Committee Group personnel will meet the challenge.

"We'll be ready," he concludes with a smile.

Jack Jones of the Training Aids Division, Directorate of Educational Technology, prepares a chart to aid instructors of the 1st AIT Bde.

A drill sergeant spreads grass cuttings over bare spots of earth adjacent to the barracks which will house the incoming AIT trainees.

Civilian workers construct fire control booths at one of the many firing ranges in the Malone complex being renovated for the incoming AIT personnel.

Warrant is only Utilities Tech on post

By Bill C. Walton

There are enough warrant officers at Ft. Benning to preclude them being called rare. But WO1 Steve Pappan, 2d Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Bn is the only Warrant Officer on post holding the MOS 521A, Utilities Technician, which makes him a rare bird indeed.

Mr. Pappan is presently on special duty with the Directorate of Facilities and Engineering (DFAE) where he serves in the capacity of Post Troop Self Help Officer. His office is charged with the responsibility to show and help unit commanders and selected NCOs the necessary steps in maintenance and repair of troop barracks.

He is the chief instructor in the Troop Self Help School sponsored by DFAE. The first class in over a year was conducted Jan. 21 with the 34th Med Bn Battalion and representatives from the AIT Brigade in attendance.

WO1 Pappan

No long, drawn out school, the instruction and practical work is covered in about two hours. The first class was well received by the students and future classes will be scheduled when requested by unit commanders. Mr. Pappan feels that with 175 regular units on post and 29 AIT units, that he will have a busy and rewarding schedule with the school.

WO1 Pappan enlisted in the Army in September 1964 and served in the Corps of Engineers as a Construction Supervisor until he applied for and received his Warrant in April 1975 while stationed at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. He was assigned to his present unit in July last year.

Both he and his wife Sandy are furthering their education by attending night classes at Columbus College. Pappan has plans for a 2nd career after Army retirement as a veterinarian and his wife is studying to become a registered nurse.

His main hobbies are hunting and fishing and his Army assignments have been beneficial in these endeavors. He was in charge of the Recreation Services 45-foot Salmon Boat at the Presidio of San Francisco which enabled him to deep sea fish to his hearts content.

Seat belts: a fact of life

By now every driver in America should be very much aware of the value of seat belts. The evidence gathered in support of seat belts is overwhelming. This evidence has been published in newspaper articles, magazines, on billboards, and on TV. Most drivers know the importance of seat belts.

A hundred people selected at random would be able to tell you the value of seat belts, but less than 25 per cent of them will say they use them. That's right, less than 25 per cent of the drivers on our highways use their seat belts!

Even though the facts and figures are well publicized, some of them are worth repeating. National Safety Council experts estimate that seat belts could save 8,000 lives a year. In addition, seat belts could reduce highway injuries by at least 2 million. The number of vehicles on our highways is increasing each year. With these facts in mind it becomes even more important to wear seat belts.

In addition to providing protection in a collision, seat belts can also help avoid collisions in some cases. If another vehicle suddenly whips out in front of your vehicle on the highway, you may have to turn sharply, perhaps even apply the brakes. In such a case, seat belts keep you solidly behind the steering wheel where you can maintain control of your vehicle.

None of this information should be new to any of us. Even though we all know better — why do the great majority of us still push aside or even sit on our seatbelts when we get into our cars? Why do we ignore the facts? Why don't you use your seat belts?

Many excuses can be given, but NONE are valid excuses. Each person has his own reasons for not wearing seat belts. The following examples constitute a small sampling of the most often used excuses along with the facts concerning each excuse.

Excuse: "I don't need a seat belt when I'm traveling at low speeds."

Fact: More than half of the serious accidents resulting in injury or death occur at LESS than 40 mph. Fatalities involving non-belted occupants have been recorded as low as 12 mph.

Excuse: "I don't need a seat belt. I'm just going to the store."

Fact: Three out of four accidents occur within 25 miles of home.

Excuse: "Seat belts are too confining. Besides, I might get caught inside a burning or submerged vehicle."

Fact: Less than one in a hundred accidents involve fire or possible drowning — releasing a seat belt takes a second. Also, if you do go under water while belted in, you will know exactly where you are.

Excuse: "I'll be safer if I'm thrown clear of my car in a crash."

Fact: Statistics prove that the risk of serious injury or fatality is five times greater for the person ejected than for the person who is kept inside the car.

Other excuses include: "I haven't got the time for seat belts; they wrinkle my clothes; I'm a careful driver — I don't need seat belts."

There are many other foolish reasons for not using seat belts. Is your reason listed above? If so, you may want to change your thinking.

The wearing of seat belts while riding in an vehicle in Ft. Benning is mandatory. Regulations place the responsibility for having all passengers strapped in on the "senior occupant."

The military police will not stop a driver for the sole purpose of checking his seat belts, but an unfastened belt can mean a ticket if the driver is stopped for another reason, according to SFC David Christy, MP operations sergeant.

By using seat belts you could be one of the estimated 8,000 people who could save themselves just by taking the time to "Buckle-Up." Be one of the smart drivers — use your seat belts instead of sitting on them. Get into the Life-Saving Habit: NOW!

Survey reports stats on fishing motivations

Do people go fishing to catch fish? This is a question that, on the surface, would appear elementary. It isn't. In fact, there's nothing elementary about it. Quite complex human motives are at work at least among the 524 salmon anglers extensively interviewed recently in the Vancouver, B.C. area by Canadian Environmentalists.

Sports Afield reports that almost one-fourth (22 per cent) of the anglers were fishing as an excuse "to be outdoors." Almost as many (18 per cent) were there "to take it easy and get rid of tension." A mere 13 per cent wanted to "eat fresh fish." Almost the same number (12 per cent) fished as a "change from working pressure."

I'm not sure how local anglers would fit into this particular survey but I would be willing to bet that if a similar survey were conducted locally, it would substantiate what many area wives have believed for a long time that not all fishermen go fishing to catch fish.

Springer to present 'Butterflies Are Free'

By Betty Zimmerman

A Fort Benning doctor and his wife will participate in the Springer Company production, "Butterflies are Free," beginning tonight.

CPT Bruce Wolff, a doctor at Troop Medical Clinic No. 3 at Kelley Hill, will portray Ralph Austin the arrogant boyfriend in the play. His wife, Carol Ponder Wolff, is the stage manager.

"It seems that I'm always selected for the arrogant, snotty, bad-guy parts," Wolff said. Carol came back with, "He isn't really that way, but many people think so after seeing him portray these parts. I have been asked repeatedly, how do you put up with him? When in real life, Bruce is a very nice, congenial guy."

The Columbus High graduate became interested in the theater while attending Davidson College in North Carolina where he played his favorite role — the second witch in "Macbeth." Wolff also sings, plays the piano, the five-string banjo and the 12-string guitar.

Carol, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, plays the guitar and autoharp and has sung professionally on television, in concerts, and in restaurants and lounges.

They both enjoy the acting opportunity offered by the Springer Company as well as the friendship of fellow participants.

There will be seven performances — at 8:30 p.m., January 30, 31 and February 3-7, and a matinee on February 1 at 2:30 p.m.

'Skycrane' the name, maintenance the game

By Bill C. Walton

How would you like to buy a complicated, expensive, foreign sports car and then discover that one of your best friends has worked on that make for 11 years, and that he is more than willing to spend any amount of time to insure that you are happy with the car?

This is essentially the set up between the 478th Avn Co, 34th Med Bn, and Les Ware, an Aviation Systems Command Technical Representative (Tech Rep) for CH54 Aircraft.

Known as "Mr. Skycrane," Ware spent twenty years in the U.S. Navy working in the aviation field. Upon retiring in 1961, Ware graduated from Troy State University with a Masters Degree in Education after which he taught school for two years in Alabama. But aviation maintenance was still his main interest so he became a maintenance instructor at the Army Aviation School at Ft. Rucker, AL.

Ware went to Vietnam in March 1969 where he spent six months assisting the 273d Avn Co in the assembly of CH54s which had been airshipped to Saigon.

After a refresher course at Sikorsky in April 1970 to update him on the newer CH54B, he returned to Vietnam to help disassemble six CH54s that were being returned to the United States, including two aircraft currently in the 478th. Completing this task he was sent to Danang where he became the Technical Representative for the 478th.

Ware was then sent to Alaska for a three year tour at Fort Wainwright. "CH54s are not the easiest aircraft to maintain and the cold in Alaska makes the task even more difficult," says Ware.

In July 1974 he came to Fort Benning and was most happy to meet old friends, both men and machinery.

Although he is a Tech Rep, Ware is not one to stand and watch when a problem occurs, but is more apt to get a wrench and get his hands dirty solving the problem. There are few problems that have occurred on the CH54 that Ware hasn't previously seen and fixed.

Having been in the CH54 program for almost 11 years, he has countless contacts throughout Army installations and the helicopter industry which he puts to good use when locating parts of solving problems.

"Hands Across The Sea."

From the opening moments of the show, when The Black Watch contingent enters the arena to the tune of "Highland Laddie" in very uniforms worn by their ancestors in 1776, followed by the 1776 version of the Royal Marines drummers and fifes, the audience will feel the excitement building.

Within a framework of two delightful hours one will thrill to the strains of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Pack Up Your Troubles," "Tipperary," "Scotland The Brave," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Over There," "Stars and Stripes Forever," and many, many more.

In addition to the krone pipers, the trumpet players, the special marching formations and ensembles, Americans will surely love the remarkable agility displayed by the expert Highland dancers of The Black Watch, performing the ancient art of sword dancing.

There is ample parking at Main Post Recreation Center for those desiring to leave their cars. Spaces are limited so please reserve early. Deadline for reservations is February 2. Reservations may be made by visiting the ITT (International Tour/Travel) Office Bldg. 229) Wednesday - Saturday from 1 - 10 p.m.; and Sunday from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m.

All military personnel, active and retired, DAC, NAF personnel and their dependents are eligible. For further information call 545-7414.

which can be closed.

The first military commissary was established in the early 1800s. The stores have been receiving increasing criticism since pay scales have been raised in recent years to levels comparable to salaries in the civilian domain.

The commander in chief of the armed forces believes that the commissary subsidies give the military community an advantage over the civilian world, in view of the equality of salaries.

President Gerald R. Ford said, "The pay of employes, military and civilian... is predicated on comparability with the civilian work force. The commissaries with a federal subsidy gives them an added advantage."

kitchen graffiti Salade Nicoise

By Joseph P. Frankoski

"What's this Bonjour stuff? It's me, your husband. Are you going Continental or crazy?"

"Just going a bit crazy with continental cuisine, mon cheri, because for lunch we're having Salade Nicoise."

"Well, hope it's as good as your French or whatever it is you're speaking."

It is good, not difficult to make, inexpensive, and gives you the chance to use your imagination.

Salade Nicoise is a mixed cold salad starting with hard boiled eggs, potatoes, tomatoes, string beans, lettuce, black olives, your choice of tuna fish, salmon and/or anchovies, topped off with your favorite vinegar and oil dressing.

Two small boiled potatoes (make sure they're firm), a couple of tomatoes cut in quarters, two or three cups of cooked string beans, half a head of lettuce and a dozen or so pitted black olives form the vegetable cast — refrigerate all of them.

Hard boil two eggs and put them in the refrigerator too.

About half an hour before lunchtime, take the cast of characters out of the refrigerator. Slice the potatoes and eggs into quarters or preferably, even smaller pieces.

Set the Stage

Line a salad bowl with the lettuce and place the sliced potatoes on the bottom to set the stage. Season the tomatoes and beans with dressing, open a can of your favorite fish and mix the tomatoes, beans, fish and olives together. Place them on the stage.

Carefully decorate the top of the salad with the sliced eggs, add a bit more dressing, and "Voila," it's ready.

Besides looking like first class production, it tastes like one.

This salad will amply feed two and allows you to omit or add one or more of the ingredients depending upon your taste, diet and what's on hand in the refrigerator or on the shelf.

And it's likely that your husband will say "C'est magnifique!"

'Doughboy' origins offered

No, not all American fighting men of World War I were "doughboys." "Doughboys" were the crossed rifles and blue hat cords of the Infantry, according to the staff of the National Infantry Museum.

The museum gives four different theories on the origin of the term.

The first theory says the earliest written reference to "doughboy" is in a book published in 1816. The tale is of some 300 buccaneers who landed on the Atlantic coast of Panama in 1680. They were each issued four doughboy cakes before their march across the Isthmus of Panama to the Pacific coast.

The second says that white was the Infantry color before blue. Infantry officers in the 1880's wore white horsehair plumes flying from their spiked parade helmets. White wool insets or shoulder boards identified the wearer as an Infantryman. Enlisted men had white cord on the facing of their uniforms.

In an effort to keep the uniforms looking sharp, the soldiers would dampen their white clay smoking pipes and rub the white clay paste on their uniforms to cover up a dirty spot on the white uniform facing. The clay pipes looked like dough.

The third theory says the name came from the large, round jacket buttons that Infantrymen wore following the Civil War. The buttons looked like dough.

The last explanation is that the word came from the mud the Infantryman marched through. The mud took on the consistency of bread dough.

Award winning Co A nabs best mess again

Second time around for Thomas & crew

For the second year in a row the dining facility of Co A, 1/29th Inf, TSB has captured the Post Best Dining Facility of the Year award, small unit category.

In a ceremony held January 29, Post Commander MG Willard Latham presented facility manager SFC Freddie Thomas with the now familiar trophy.

MG Latham praised Thomas and his staff for the culinary accomplishments during the award ceremony. The general cited the quality of food and the atmosphere of the facility as being superior. "It's a great accomplishment when a dining facility can manage to combine the two," MG Latham said.

SFC Thomas has generated favorable publicity about his facility throughout food-related circles in the Army. His prestigious operation nabbed the Post monthly award seven times and the TSB award six times in 1975. Co A was also selected as having the best facility in TSB and on Ft. Benning for 1974.

Thomas, a veteran of 16 years Army service, has been with the 1/29th since February 1974. His facility currently employs three military cooks, eight civilian cooks and eight civilian KP's. He is quick to credit them with the culinary accolades.

"Without all of the dedication and constant improvement by all concerned, none of this would have been possible. They are the ones who have done all of the work and should receive the credit," Thomas said.

Mrs. Thomas, wife of the dining facility manager was present during the ceremony and remarked about her husband's success. "Freddie cooks at home often and is really a good cook, but he has one problem. After cooking for hundreds of people each day, he comes home and finds it hard to cook for just two people. He always prepares too much!"

Soldiers return from Alaska

By Ron Fowler

One hundred fifty men from the 197th Inf Bde returned to Ft. Benning last week after spending two weeks in some of the roughest country that Mother Earth has to offer — the Alaskan wilderness.

The men, who were drawn from all of the brigade's units, departed Ft. Benning on January 19 bound for the United States Army Northern Warfare Training Center, located at Ft. Greely, Alaska, where the arctic training was conducted.

"I never thought that I would see any place as cold as it was while we were at the training center," said PVT Larry Ingram, of Btry C, 2/10th FA. "Forty-seven degrees below zero is nothing to smile about, especially when the wind is blowing and it's snowing so hard that you can hardly see."

Even though the low temperatures were probably the most prevalent factor at Ft. Greely for the men of the 197th, they had little time to think of it during their stay at the training center as they busied themselves learning new things and having fun while doing so.

"The personnel from the 197th Inf Bde went through what we call our Winter Operations in Northern Areas training," said MSG William D. Hendrix, NCOIC of the training center. "It's one of five basic programs of arctic training that we offer here at the training center."

The Winter Operations in Northern Areas training stresses many of the different aspects of fighting and surviving on the arctic battlefield. Emphasis is placed on such things as land navigation by dead reckoning, cross-country movement over the arctic environment, and the construction of field fortifications and field expedient shelters for protection from the cold and wind.

"The most enjoyable part of our training at Ft.

Greely was receiving instruction on cross-country movement," remarked SP4 Devarl Brooks of the 298th Sig Plt. "We all looked like gigantic penguins when we first put on our snow shoes, and when it came time to learn how to ski, that was the most hilarious thing that I had ever seen in my life."

Each man also got the chance, while at the training center, to put to practical use what he had learned during his classroom instruction. A short field training exercise culminated the training to show the men what it was really like to try and survive in the sub-zero temperature of an arctic winter.

"Do you have any idea what it's like to roll out of your bunk in the morning, get all of your Winter gear on, and then step outside where it's 30 degrees below zero and the wind is howling at 20 miles per hour? Let me tell you, it's an experience that you won't soon forget!" exclaimed PFC Robert C. Jowers of Co D, 197th Spt Bn.

Some soldiers exempt from ad valorem tax

Ft. Benning soldiers are subject to Georgia's ad valorem tax on motor vehicles unless they submit an affidavit swearing residency in another state, according to the Judge Advocate General's (Jag) office.

CPT Henry L. Gillis, JAG legal assistance officer, said that those with valid, out-of-state vehicle licenses need not be concerned with the tax. Those who do register their vehicles in Georgia may obtain affidavits for exemption from the JAG office in Bldg. 5.

"Servicemen are allowed exemptions because they are not here by choice," said Gillis. "Car owners who are dependents and service members who resided in Georgia prior to entering the military do not qualify for the exemption," he added.

To qualify, the soldier must be a non-resident of Georgia and the owner of the vehicle as of Jan. 1, 1976.

Family moves into 'ACTION'

By P. L. Smith

A Ft. Benning family won its third ACTION '75 Gold Certificate on January 30.

SFC William M. Hughes and family earned 6,862 points during the past six months with their physical, social, mental and religious pursuits.

Hughes puts in long hours as Motor Sergeant for the 586th Engr Co (FB). In spite of the demands on his time, however, he continues to engage in a variety of off-duty activities. He is involved in a host of youth organizations, the American Legion and physical activities both inside and outside the unit.

His wife Sammie

publishes the McGraw Manor Newsletter and participates religiously in several church-related functions. His children, Michael, Kimberly and Richard occupy their time with everything from reading and attending church to swimming and camping.

Safe driving secret revealed

In the early 1960s, researchers selected six of the highest-rated drivers and gave them an intensive series of physical, mental and psychological tests. They were only average or below average "in terms of some of the physical standards currently used in licensing," the researchers reported. Given a test designed to measure knowledge of operating a vehicle in modern traffic, five of the six drivers scored only average to poor; only one ranked good.

What, then, was their secret? All excelled, the researchers found, in one faculty. "They drove with total concentration and they seemed to have the ability to place their vehicle perfectly in traffic and to anticipate, always to anticipate, what might happen up ahead." Two practical road tests furnished vivid demonstrations of these skills in action. All six of the tested drivers were taken over a one-hour course in Chicago; then the top-ranking two were taken on a 1,200-mile run from Frazer, Colorado to Furnace Creek, California. In both tests the same traits stood out. These safe drivers always signaled their intentions well in advance; they were courteous to pedestrians and other drivers; their timing in passing and changing lanes was perfect.

In the 1,200-mile test run, they did not run a single red light; they made minimum use of the brakes; there was not a single "panic" stop. Observers on the long ride found it impossible to engage them in conversation, to distract their attention from the road. Their pattern, as an observer put it, was "Look, look, look — drive, drive, drive."

Asked what kinds of hazards the safe drivers avoided, a researcher simply shrugs, "The way they drove, there just weren't any, and I'm sure that normally on that 1,200-mile route there would have been some. That seems to be the point. With these men, the dangerous situation doesn't arise because they don't let it happen."

Current sick call system questioned

Three Army medic aid service officers advocate replacing the current sick call system with an outpatient appointment plan.

Such plan has "repeatedly demonstrated that it cuts the patients' waiting time and the physicians' idle time," wrote the medical team in "Military Medicine" magazine.

Sick call is still a good system for bringing in a large group of patients for evaluation, the report maintains. Further, the present system lets the most serious cases be treated first or returned to quarters.

The medics criticized this system, however, saying it results in a "bunching" of patients. This brings heavy pressure on doctors, making them feel they must rush their treatment. Being made to wait for long periods in crowded rooms also makes some patients feel uncomfortable, according to the article.

The traditional system "attracts many persons who feign illness to avoid duty" making some doctors think that many of the patients are "sick call abusers," the team concluded.

Suggestion nets $50

By Minnie Roberts

An operations sergeant from the Weapons Department of the Mortar Committee has been awarded $50 for a suggestion he made that was adopted by the Army.

SFC Raymond L. Nordwall suggested a change of two separate forms now being used to record fire direction computations.

His suggestion provided a common form usable for both the 81mm and 4.2-inch mortars and avoided the need to alter the forms when various types and sizes of weapons are operated.

SFC Nordwall

'America for all Americans'

By Terry D. Ragan

The Bicentennial year is a good time to do a lot of reflecting on what this country's been all about for the last two centuries. So it seems fitting that there be an "America For All Americans" month.

It just so happens that right now — in February — we celebrate (quietly and without fanfare) the very human aspects of American History. Every culture, religion and ethnic group is on parade this month. Also on parade is how all of these apply to the curious mix of peoples who have come to call America home. It's a great time to be alive.

Seattle to Miami, from Detroit to El Paso, people across the entire land have the opportunity to savor what has become the most diverse group ever to inhabit our nation. It's a wonder it all stayed together.

But stay together it did and probably will. Why? PERHAPS it is the relative youth of America that makes possible the assimilation of such a variety of cultures and groups. PERHAPS it is the demands of the national leadership that all groups be treated with fairness and equality — a concept not common to past generations.

PERHAPS it is a foundation of law, written and tested during the last half of this century, that makes inequality and prejudicial treatment illegal.

"America For All Americans" has another significance. We are a nation of individuals who are fascinated by our own past, and especially in our forefathers' part in American History. This is the perfect time to take that long look back. Such discovery would be a vital link to the generations.

And speaking of links, it has been hardest of all to link the dreams, hopes and aspirations of all groups in this country with the everyday practice of fairness, rationality and liberal outlook. Some would say it's impossible.

But that's the purpose of "America For All Americans" and that's the purpose of the Bicentennial. Dare yourself to ponder the implications of the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights. Challenge yourself to face historical truth. It's painful.

But like a friend once said, "you can face your own problems only when you're true to yourself."

This could be the most eye-opening year of your life.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"We've got to conduct a survey of the tens of thousands of people on this post to find out how many read our newspaper," a publisher said recently in a meeting of correspondents, editors, and photographers. "Our advertisers pay a lot of money to buy space and they're entitled to know if anyone reads their ads."

"What about the news stories and articles?" a well-known newspaper writer inquired. "We could find out how many people read the writing that's written."

"That's the picture," a photographer snapped. "We need to know if they look at our journal. Do the readers like what they see?"

"Then it's settled," someone decided. "We'll do a survey and ask our subscribers what they liked before, what they didn't like, and what they would like to see for the new year."

"What about the ads?"

"Oh, yeah. Those too."

"How are we going to make the survey?" someone asked from the rear of the crowded room. "What's our plan?"

"Yeah," someone from the front of the room supported. "We have to have a well, thought-out plan to make sure we get our readers' response."

"We'll just ask them in the next issue," the chairman said.

"Just ask them?" several voices questioned.

"Certainly," the chairman bellowed. "We'll ask the readers to write to us. You know, like 'letters to the editor.'"

"What if nobody writes a letter to us?" a meek voice suggested.

"What!?" A multitude of indignation erupted from the crowd.

"Stifle," a lady reporter ordered.

"The traitor!" someone adjudged.

"He's right," the chairman decided. "What if nobody wrote us a letter? Or even bothered to drop us a card?"

"What I meant was," the meek voice explained in the silence, "that we must make it easy for the readers to respond. Asking them to write letters may be too demanding."

"And, too costly," a voice from the side of the room added.

"That's right," the chairman acknowledged. "Postage climbed thirty percent after the first of the year."

"What we can do," the meek voice continued, "is to place the survey in the newspaper and ask the readers to check off their replies. . . ."

". . . so far, so good . . ."

". . . and then ask them to clip it out and send it in through the message centers."

"That's a well, thought-out plan," the chairman pronounced.

"Make it a front page headline," an editor suggested.

"Put it on the editorial page," a publisher countered. "That's where those type things are supposed to be, anyway."

"To really find out if our readers read the paper," a writer offered, "we should put the survey deep in the pages and make it as inconspicuous as possible. That way we'll know that the readers went through the newspaper, discovered the survey, clipped it out, filled it in, and sent it to us."

"Right," the chairman said. "Let's vote on it." All in favor?"

"Aye," a collective voice answered.

"Nay," someone ventured.

Silence.

"We have one dissenting vote," the chairman told the group. "Would the person voting 'no' please stand up and tell us why?"

"I don't think we should ask the readers what they like, what they dislike, or what they would like to see in our paper," a gentleman explained. "What do the readers know? We write what we want to write, the way we want to write it, and they either read it or leave it," the man said.

A low mumble rolled through the room.

"Let them eat cake?" a person paraphrased.

"Exactly," the man answered.

"We've heard the dissenting vote," the chairman decided. "The decision is to place the survey into our next edition."

The survey was prepared and published on page eight next to the fashion editors column.

Two weeks later another meeting was held to announce the results.

"We had 22,492 responses to our survey," the chairman began. A thundering applause shook the walls. He held up his hands. "Without exception in all the clippings sent in to us," he concluded, "all the readers said they never read our newspaper."

Congressional axe fells education program

The fully funded enlisted education program (AR 621-1 Ch 5) is being eliminated. Congressional action has deleted funds for this program from the FY 76 budget and there will be no further input into the program.

Applications currently on file in MILPERCEN for soldiers not selected for the program, will be returned to the individual.

The fellowship, scholarship or grant program (AR 621-7) for enlisted personnel continues operational. This program authorizes qualified individuals to compete for fellowship, scholarships, or grants offered by corporations, foundations, funds or educational institutions organized primarily for scientific, literary or education purposes.

The purpose of this program is to provide outstanding soldiers an opportunity to study for periods up to two years in areas which will satisfy Army skill requirements. Disciplines in which soldiers may compete for the educational grants will be announced in a forthcoming issue of THE BAYONET.

At this time, it is anticipated that skills required will be mainly in areas in the scientific and engineering fields.

The contribution of black Americans to our nation are given special recognition during February 1976, which has been designated as Black History Month. "America for all Americans" is the theme of this fifteenth annual celebration of Afro-American history.

Blacks have been actively involved in the history of America from the time of its discovery and exploration. It is strongly asserted that Pedro Alonzo Nino, pilot of one of Columbus' ships during the 1492 voyage was a man of black ancestry, and that Diego el Negro, who sailed with Columbus on his fourth voyage in 1501, was black.

However uncertain these claims might be, subsequent involvement and patriotism of blacks in the making of America are undisputed historical facts. Yet, until recently, such facts were seldom included in history books. Black History Month aims at increasing an awareness that the black presence in virtually every field of endeavor is woven inextricably into the whole American fabric.

During this Bicentennial year, American history recounts that Crispus Attucks, a black seaman, was the first to die in the revolution, and that 5,000 blacks joined the fight for freedom from England. Moreover, blacks in uniform have made noteworthy contributions throughout American military history.

Black soldiers and sailors were there during the War of 1812 and in the Civil War. They were there as the "Buffalo Soldiers" during the winning of the Southwest. They were there as chaplains and fighting forces during the Spanish American War and the Philippine intervention. They were there in World War I: although black Americans comprised nine per cent of the draft eligibles, 13 per cent of the enlisted corps were black. And they were there in World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War — as always, fighting, dying and receiving decorations for valor.

In 1976, black American men and women continue to serve in the U.S. Armed Forces. Through their dedication and service they are writing contemporary black history and American history, while sharing the responsibility and credit of protecting "America for all Americans." (AFPS)

BLACKS ANSWERED General Jackson's call to aid him in the defense of New Orleans during the War of 1812.

NOT UNTIL KOREA did black and white soldiers fight side by side in integrated units.

MAH tech. certified nationally

By Betty Zimmerman

One of only three certified urologic technicians in Georgia is a member of the staff of Ft. Benning's Martin Army Hospital (MAH).

Mrs. Armenthis K. Mitchell studied for two years in preparation for the certifying examination given by the American Board of Urologic Allied Health Professionals. Other requirements include being a licensed practical nurse, experience in urology and recommendations by physicians.

Mrs. Mitchell was quick to credit others with her success. "I couldn't have done it without the constant help and reassurances given me by my husband, Jimmy, Mrs. Doris West, another MAH urology technician, Mrs. Terry Bell, my neighbor and many others. They were as responsible for me obtaining my goal as I was," she said.

Although educated at Ullman High School and Lloyd Noland Hospital in Birmingham, Ala., Mrs. Mitchell and her husband now make their home in Columbus. She has worked at MAH for ten years as a Department of the Army Civilian (DAC).

Soldier, check your driver's license

Wide differences in state laws have some servicemembers believing that their state drivers licenses are good for their entire military career. The licenses for most are not.

Only 12 states have laws automatically extending drivers licenses for the entire time an individual is in the service. Other states have various laws, the most common being automatic extensions with specific time limits and some form of special license.

Fourteen states have no provisions for extension and licenses must be renewed in person.

A soldier may obtain a license from the state he is stationed in, but this license becomes invalid when he is transferred from that state.

The following list contains the most current information concerning drivers in the military.

Servicemembers should contact their home states for recent changes in the laws and for motorcycle drivers license validity.

ALABAMA: No procedure for extensions.

ALASKA: No procedure for extensions.

ARIZONA: License valid until 90 days after discharge or return to the state.

ARKANSAS: On request, extension is granted until 30 days after completion of first enlistment.

CALIFORNIA: License valid until 30 days after discharge or return to state.

COLORADO: Extended up to three years in service, or 90 days after return to state.

GEORGIA: Licenses valid until holder's birthday in 4th year after issue.

HAWAII: License issued prior to Jan. 1, 1968 valid until 30 days after discharge. License issued after Jan. 1, 1968 has no procedure for extensions.

IDAHO: Extended until 60 days after discharge or return to the state; maximum extension of three years.

ILLINOIS: Extended until 45 days after return to state.

INDIANA: Resident servicemembers given extension period of validity for as long as four years after entry into service or until 30 days after first discharge.

IOWA: Extended by request until six months after discharge.

KANSAS: No procedure for extensions.

KENTUCKY: Special military license issued on request. Valid for six years or until discharged.

LOUISIANA: Automatically extends until 60 days after discharge or on return to state.

NEVADA: Restriction code 9 extends license until discharge.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: No procedure for extensions.

NEW JERSEY: Automatically extended until 90 days after discharge.

NEW MEXICO: No procedure for extensions.

NEW YORK: Valid until six months after discharge.

NORTH CAROLINA: No procedure for extensions, may renew by mail.

NORTH DAKOTA: Valid for a period of 30 days after discharge.

Change of pace for troops

197th holds combined arms exercise

By R. Gordon Threlfall

There was a change of pace for soldiers in two battalions of the 197th Inf Bde last week. The 'Cottonbalers' of 3/7th Inf teamed up with Co A, 2/69th Ar for a combined arms exercise.

Each infantry company had a platoon of tanks attached for three days. During the training, classes and practical exercises were held in the Northeastern portion of the reservation. Several types of missions were practiced. These included movement to contact, coordinated attack, retrograde, prepared defense, and rais.

To take two unlike units and make them a team requires continuous coordination. It also means that all of the soldiers have to adapt to the other units' capabilities. Laughing, SGT Clarence Stewart, a tank commander put it, "We have to go a lot slower than usual, so the Infantry can keep up."

Ever since World War One, combining the heavy fire-power and shock value of tanks with the close-in fighting power of a well disciplined Infantry unit has worked well in combat.

The tanks need protection against anti-armor ground attack, which is a considerable threat. Equally important, the men on foot gain increased firepower from the tanks' main guns and machine guns.

SP4 Norman Richardson, a fire team leader in Co A, 3/7th Inf enjoyed the training experience. "This is the second time I've worked with tanks. We had a class about the things they can do, and then got to ride inside for awhile. The tanks are pretty impressive and can make our job a lot easier."

With increased emphasis on combined arms tactics, the 197th Inf Bde enjoys great flexibility. Having several maneuver battalions of different types allows for continued combined arms training. After all, what is expected during deployment must be practiced during training.

PFC David Weathers (l) and SP4 Fernando Whitehead, both of Co B, 3/7th Inf, 197th Inf Bde move out on a reconnaissance patrol as a tank crew from Co A, 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Bde supports them in a combined arms exercise conducted by both units last week.

586th Engr Co conducts static load training

By P. L. Smith

The 586th Engr Co, 36th Engr Gp conducted static load training on board a giant C-5A aircraft last week.

The purpose of this training was to check the validity unit air loading plans and to instruct new arrivals to the 586th on the technical aspects of air loading.

Members of the company were briefed on the positioning of vehicles to the aircraft, tie-down of vehicles to the aircraft floor and on the importance of securing loads in the vehicles themselves.

According to the unit air movement officer, 2LT William Harris. "Training of this nature is conducted periodically to insure that the 586th is able to successfully fulfill any contingency that requires the unit to relocated by air."

'Let them truckers roll' — aboard the C-5A, that is. And it was all part of unit training conducted by the 386th Engr Co last week.

Spare time put to creative use

By Betty Zimmerman

What do you do to keep busy if you are a Non-Commissioned Officer (NCO) living in the barracks?

SSG Richard Ganshaw, Co. B, Hq Cmd, has four hobbies which occupy his spare time.

The administrative NCO with the Directorate of Industrial Operations (DIO) makes cannons that actually fire from brass and steel at the post craft shop. His largest cannon is 1½ feet high with an inch and a half bore.

The sergeant also makes plaques out of nuts and bolts and other metal pieces. When SGM Mark Ward was recently reassigned to another office, he was presented a name sign made out of a wrench, nuts and bolts by Ganshaw. An elaborate plaque depicting an Infantryman pulling a tank and a cannon was presented to Ft. Benning Commander MG Willard Latham on his birthday.

Gun collecting has been another of SSG Ganshaw's specialties. He began collecting while still a high school student in Oakfield, N. Y. He has among, others, a Wesley-Richards muzzle loading, double barrel shot gun dating back to 1840, and an 1882 Mauser revolver.

His fourth hobby provides the sergeant with nuts and bolts for his plaque-making ventures. He restores old automobiles. Presently, he is rebuilding a 1946 Willys station wagon with a flathead Ford engine and four-wheel drive.

SSG Richard Ganshaw may have a desk job but he is a full-fledged cannoneer. He builds his own cannons and they will fire too.

Atlanta Boy Scouts tour post

By Ron Fowler

Boy Scouts from Atlanta got a firsthand look at many Ft. Benning units and activities.

The Boy Scouts, from Troop No. 623 in Atlanta, were sponsored by the 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Bde, during their three-day stay at Ft. Benning and were greeted by LTC John J. Tadesco, commander of the 2/69th Ar.

After a well-deserved rest, the scouts prepared for a full day of exciting activities. After breakfast, movies were shown about Ft. Benning and many of its units to introduce the Boy Scouts to the post. However, the big event for them was yet to come.

After a short tour of the 2/69th motor pool, the scouts were bussed out to Brann Range where equipment and weapons displays were set up. The scouts also received an added treat as rides on each of the vehicles were offered.

"I've never seen anything like this before," stated Tommy Parks, one of the scouts. "I'm sure glad that we got the chance to come down here. I can't wait to get back home and tell my friends that I rode in a real, live tank!"

Lunch followed the demonstration by the 2/69th Ar and they proceeded to Todd Field, where rappelling demonstrations were put on by the men of the 3d Ranger Co. Many of the scouts got the chance to rappell themselves over the short wall at the Ranger area.

A night of bowling at the main post bowling center rounded out the day's activities for the scouts.

"The boys have really enjoyed themselves since they've been here," commented Thomas W. Huseby, the scout director for the Atlanta troop. "They've been talking about this trip for weeks, just waiting for it to come about."

The scouts departed Sunday, but not before taking in two more of the many activities that had been planned for them. They attended services at the Kelley Hill Chapel that morning and that afternoon they were able to take a tour of Ft. Benning's Infantry Museum.

"This trip was everything I expected and more," concluded Bobby Hill, one of the older scouts in Troop No. 623. "It's been something that I think every scout should someday have the chance to do."

New home planned for sh

By Jerry Hill

After being housed for more than 16 years in temporary, wooden quarters at Ft. Benning, the Infantry Museum is scheduled to move, late this year, into its first permanent home — Building 396 — on post.

Commonly known as the Hospital Annex, Building 396 has been designated as the new site for the National Infantry Museum. But, before the Museum can be moved from its current location in Building 1234, extensive renovation of the Museum's new home must be accomplished by the Infantry Museum Association.

The renovation contract is expected to be "let" in about 30 days, which means that the building should be ready for occupancy sometime this autumn, according to Jim Woodruff, Jr., President of the Infantry Museum Association, Inc.

The estimated cost of renovation and the acquisition of necessary security and support equipment is in the neighborhood of 1.5 million, according to Woodruff. About $500,000 is on hand in the association. All expenses involved in renovation will be paid for out of the Infantry Museum Association Development Fund, which was started several years ago in hopes of eventually building a new home for the museum. At that time, the Board of Trustees of the Association decided to construct a new building on the main post as a learning facility for the benefit of the men and women of Ft. Benning and Allied students.

Former Arkansas Governor Winthrop Rockefeller, an Infantry OCS graduate, put together committees across the country to Shown here are the crowded conditions in the museum as they existed in 1972.

Although the exhibits have changed, there has been little change in the conditions.

Fund Drive History

The goal established for Ft. Benning during the 1971-1972 fund drive was $100,000 toward a $6.5 million new building construction requirement. Ft. Benning, including concessionaires, contributed $64,748 toward that goal.

Those funds and funds from other sources have been deposited in local banks drawing interest for a number of years ranging from 4½% to 8%. Total interest received as of June 30, 1975, was $55,028.38.

Available assets exceed $425,000. Active fund raising campaigns are now operating in Atlanta, other cities in Georgia, Boston, Dallas, Chicago, and Tacoma. Other campaigns centered around some active Army Divisions are also operating.

A contract has been signed with the architects with work to begin about Apr. 1, 1976, for a six months construction effort.

raise the necessary funds for constructing a new building.

With the death of Governor Rockefeller in January 1973 and skyrocketing construction costs, it became apparent early last year that a completely new structure would be economically unfeasible.

A study was undertaken soon thereafter to determine whether any permanent type buildings already in existence would be available and suitable as a home for the Museum's priceless collection of military artifacts and relics.

The results of the study indicated that only two existing structures met the museum's prerequisite — Building 35 and Building 396.

The Hospital Annex, Building 396, was the most logical choice of the two because of its availability following the transfer of most medical facilities and services to Martin Army Hospital's new wing late last year. Ample parking is available adjacent to the building.

Another important consideration in choosing a new home was the display and storage space available in a properly secured and protective environment. The current museum building is a wooden-frame structure with its attendant hazards of fire damage and provides just 11,000 square feet of display space, which means, among other things, that only 250 weapons in the museum's collection of more than 2,100 weapons can be displayed at one time.

Building 396 alone will provide 50,000 square feet of display and storage space. The other six buildings in the complex can provide an additional 80,000 square feet of space, for future expansion, thus assuring prospective donors of artifacts that adequate storage would be available.

Building 396 is a familiar structure to soldiers and their dependents who have been assigned to Ft. Benning and visited there for medical treatment.

Construction of Building 396 began in late 1923 and was opened May 20, 1925 as the post hospital even though the surrounding structures were not completed until four years later. All seven buildings in the complex were situated in a symbolically commanding position on high ground overlooking Main Post.

The Board of Trustees with the Commanding General, as an honorary Trustee of the Association, were enthusiastic about converting Building 396 into the new home for the National Infantry Museum and voted unanimously to accept it for renovation.

Museum visitation has increased dramatically during the last few years and more than 72,000 visitors were received during 1975. Early indications are that at least that many or more will tour the museum this year. Barring unforeseen complications, many of them will make that tour in Building 396.

Black history tribute slated

In honor of Black History Month, Ft. Benning's National Infantry Museum is exhibiting an art collection from John M. Carroll's book, 'Buffalo Soldiers West.'

Original sketches by such famous artists as Frederic Remington, Jose Cisneros, Chuck Kemper and Joe Grandee are featured in this 18-picture collection.

The exhibit this year will have some artwork that was not included when Carroll's book was shown in the museum in 1974. Ft. Benning's museum was one of three chosen out of the Army's 70 to show the exhibit 'The Black Military Experience in Western America' in 1974. The display was valued at $25,000.

'Buffalo Soldiers West' opened Tuesday in the connecting hall of the museum on Ingersoll St. and will continue for the rest of this month.

completed in autumn of 1976, the building will provide 50,000 square feet of display and storage space.

Batik, Anyone?

Mrs. Leanna Buchanan will teach this short introductory course. The cost is $1.50 and all materials are supplied.

If your interest is whetted by this course, a beginning batik workshop will commence Feb. 16 and will comprise three days for three hours each day. The cost for this workshop is $15 for members of the museum and $20 for non-members.

Kelley Hill store going TDY

By Fred A. Easterling

The Kelly Hill PX is going TDY (Temporary Duty) to the Recreation Center on Kelley Hill. The PX is currently being moved to allow renovation of the building that it presently occupies.

The temporary facility will be located in the rear of the Kelley Hill Recreation Center and will have such necessities as shaving cream, soap, shoe polish, toothpaste and other items for soldiers on Kelly Hill.

The inconvenience caused by the relocation will be short-lived however, as the refurbished PX will be open again in about two months.

Mrs. Lois Fowler, branch manager for the Kelly Hill store explained, "When we reopen, we will have a $50,000 stock of merchandise for the soldiers to select from. Many new items will be available for the people here on Kelley Hill."

The building and fixtures in the store are somewhat outdated, but the new face lifting promises to make the store a more pleasant place for the troops on Kelley Hill to buy their many needs.

"Renovation will include new fixtures and tiling on the floor," explained Mr. Ruder Jones, PX Administration Officer. The floor space will also be expanded, so a wider selection of merchandise may be stocked. This work will convert the Kelley Hill PX into a modern and convenient store."

He continued, "The ideas that the soldiers put into the suggestion boxes are taken into consideration when the time comes for restocking a store with new merchandise. If a customer wants a particular item in a certain store we will try to stock it, if possible."

"The ideas that we get from suggestion boxes in the temporary store will help us greatly when we resupply the remodeled PX," Mr. Jones concluded.

Mrs. Juanita Hamm, cashier at the Kelley Hill PX, packs some boxes in preparation for the move.

Language kits studied

Foreign language training will be provided to battalion, brigade and, when possible, division commanders assigned to Europe. The training, to begin July 1, 1976, will be conducted at the Defense Language Institute at Monterey, Calif.

Commanders will attend the training TDY enroute to their European assignment. The program will give commanders — and their wives on a space available basis — an elementary language proficiency.

For soldiers being assigned to Germany, a language and orientation training package is being developed. Titled "Gateway to German," it will be available to soldiers this summer at CONUS education centers to study in their off-duty time. Language kits for other countries also are being developed. (ANF)

Metric System is on the way

An international standard of weights and measures has become increasingly necessary with the changing times. A "standard of standards" is required in this shrinking world of improved transportation, communications, and active international trade.

More and more, the nations of the world have been adopting the metric system — including England, the nation from which we adopted the system used in the United States.

Although metrics may seem like a foreign language when compared to our systems of inches, feet, and yards, it is, in reality, the simpler system.

The metric system is a decimal system — based on the number 10. All areas within the system relate to each other, whether it is weight, distance, or capacity.

A gram is the unit of weight, a liter the unit of capacity, and the cubic meter the measure for volume.

To illustrate the relationship of one measure to another, consider that 10 millimeters equal a centimeter, 10 centimeters equal a decimeter, and 10 decimeters equal a meter. Their relationship to our present system, however, is hopelessly complex in terms of exact comparisons. For example, a meter is 39.37 inches, or 3.37 inches greater than a yard.

Our present system does not lend itself to simple arithmetic, because it is not based on a system of tens. Moreover, the complicated use of fractions in our English System will be eliminated following adoption of the metric system.

To assist in the transition, the National Bureau of Standards has published a concise package of metric information that will be very beneficial to teachers, students, business people, and consumers in understanding and using the metric system of measurement.

The package includes a handy, wallet-size card which converts customary units of measure into metric units and vice versa; a 15-centimeter (6-inch) ruler; a copy of "What about Metric," a publication which explains in simple terms all anyone needs to know about using metric in daily living; a brief history of measurement systems that includes a colorful chart explaining metric; a bibliography of metric information; and a summary of where we stand in the switch to metric.

Copies of the kit may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The cost of each kit is $2 with a 25 per cent discount for orders of 100 or more.

Metric measurements are now starting to be used in conjunction with our current measurement units. The transition, however, will take place over a period of years. Official adoption of the metric system will become effective only after Congress passes legislation approving the changeover.

34th Med Bn to honor 'Blind Tom'

On February 10 at 10:30 a.m. the 34th Med Bn will unveil a headstone on the grave of Thomas Wiggins, a world famous blind, black musician known as "Blind Tom" (1843-1908).

A Columbus native, he was a self-taught musical genius and could reproduce almost any sound or music that he heard. He played before royalty in Europe and in most large cities in the United States. Wiggins had a repertoire of over seven thousand pieces of music ranging from Beethoven, Chopin and Mendelssohn to many songs which he had composed.

The headstone, which will be erected on February 9, was purchased by individual contributions from personnel in the 34th Med Bn. This is a Bicentennial Project of the Race Relations Section, of the 34th in connection with the National Black History Month, 1976.

Unions may challenge reg

Army regulations that bar local negotiations between management and unions representing DA civilian employes may now be challenged for "compelling need" under a recently revised executive order.

The revised order (Executive Order 11491) holds that regulations or policies pertaining to civilian employment must:

- Be essential to accomplishment of the mission.
- Be essential to the management of the issuing agency.
- Be necessary to insure the merit system is maintained.
- Implement a mandate to the agency by law or other outside authority.
- Establish uniformity for all — or a substantial number — of an agency's employes when vital to the public interest.

Regulations or policies that don't meet the above criteria will be subject to challenge for compelling need.

DA officials expect that employe unions will take advantage of the new provisions.

Jaunting Joyner jubilant jogger

By STEVE LORA

An All-American track star from Faulkner State Jr. College, Ala., has made a new home for himself in Co A, 1/29th Inf.

PV2 James Joyner joined the battalion in October as an operations clerk. His interest in running began while he attended Milton High School, Milton, Fla. PV2 Joyner started this training by running four miles a day in 1972. At that time his interests were in the one and two-mile categories.

Joyner captured the one-mile championship in the Northwestern Florida

PV2 JOYNER

Conference that year. His achievements also included selection as district champion in the one-mile run and as the most valuable athlete on his 40-man track squad.

During his senior year, Joyner increased his daily runs to six miles a day. This increase built up his stamina. When he attended the state track meet in the spring, he won both the one and two-mile district championships. He also won the regional championship in the two-mile event.

Joyner majored in physical education and joined the track team at Faulkner State Jr. College in Bay Minette, Ala. He picked up the Alabama State Championship in the one-mile event with a 4:20 time and the three-mile event with a time of 15:02 minutes. He also won the title of regional champion in the three-mile run.

After the spring meets Joyner qualified for the National Championships sponsored by the National Jr. College Athletic Association, but he wasn't able to attend due to an injury. Joyner left school after one year to join the Army.

The private has applied for acceptance on the All-Army Track Team. "I believe if I had the chance I could help their team," he commented. "My goals are to try out for the team and hopefully to compete in the Olympics in 1980. With the proper coaching and competition, I think this is possible."

Rifle training standardized

Women officers are now required to take individual weapons training on the same basis as their male counterparts, according to a recent DA message. The change applies to all women officers, officer candidates, and ROTC and West Point cadets. The message gives commanders leeway in establishing appropriate training.

The same message revised individual weapons training policy for enlisted soldiers — men and women — in Army service schools, training centers and units. All soldiers taking basic rifle marksmanship now will qualify with the M-16 under the Army's standard rifle training program. (ANF)

These officers will also be considered for command in their alternate specialties if they forwarded requests to MILPERCEN.

A forthcoming change in command selection procedures — to be implemented in FY78 — will allow officers to ask they be considered for command in any specialty in which they have attained a recognized degree of proficiency and qualification. The change will allow commissioned aviators to be considered for command in their branch-related specialty even if they are designated out of that specialty to accept the new aviation specialty.

Out-of-state licenses, plates may be invalid

If you are driving with a license or license plate from a previous station you may be in violation of the law, according to the Judge Advocate General's (JAG) office.

License plates and driver's licenses from states other than a driver's home state or the state where he is stationed are invalid in Georgia, according to CPT Henry L. Gillis, JAG legal assistance officer.

This means driver's and vehicle licenses that a Ft. Benning soldier obtains from another state are invalid here unless that state is the driver's legal residence.

The charge would be "no state driver's license" or "no state tag." Maximum penalties range to a $50 fine.

If your license is valid in another state, only vision and written tests are required for a Georgia license.

Billman bags BASS bounty

By Eenny Blankenship

SSG (Ret) Bob Billman was named Ft. Benning's Bass Fisherman of the Year last Friday evening at the Post B.A.S.S. Club's Annual Awards Banquet. Billman, an avid bass fisherman for the past 12 years, amassed a total of 2,098 points during year-long competition to outdistance all competitors.

Points are awarded on the basis of one point per ounce of fish caught during competition with a bonus 16 points being awarded for each club meeting attended.

In accepting the award, Billman stated that "any member of the club is good enough to win this award and I feel very lucky that I was able to win."

By virtue of his win, Billman will lead Ft. Benning's "Top Six" bass fishermen in the Georgia State B.A.S.S. Federation Team Championship Tournament which will be held April 21-25 at Clark Hill Reservoir on the Georgia/South Carolina border. "I feel we have a good chance to win the team championship this year," said Billman. "We have a good team and with a little luck, we'll win."

Rounding out Benning's "Top Six" team, in order of Club standings, are: LTC Tom Ray, DDTD, USAIS; SFC Don Strickland, 4th Stu Bn, TSB; CPT Archie Caldwell, DOI, USAIS; CPT Bob Kramer, Company Tactics, USAIS; and CPT Jim Wyatt, Ranger Dept., USAIS.

Other Club members who received "Top Ten" awards at the gala affair were: CPT Denny Blankenship, USMC; 1SG Billy Rumberg, 1st Bn, TSB; 1SG Willie Goble, 4th Stu Bn, TSB; and SFC (Ret) Paul Wuestney.

In closing the awards presentation, club president, MAJ Joe West remarked, "The Benning B.A.S.S. Club is generally recognized as one of the best in the state. This recognition has come about through hard work and dedication on the part of club members. In the coming year, this reputation should be enhanced even more. Well done to all members."

Rod and Gun Club to close

The Fort Benning Rod and Gun Club located at Victory Pond on post will close indefinitely after the end of business tomorrow, Feb. 14.

Club officials said the closing is necessary because only a very few of its members comprising 1800 military personnel and dependents and civilian employes on post, use this facility. Army regulations require a club of this type to be self supporting. The low use over a long period has exhausted club funds despite efforts by the membership to increase participation.

"The Rod and Gun Club can no longer sustain itself as a non-appropriated fund activity," a spokesman said. "As a result," he added, "the Board of Governors has voted to close for an indefinite period." The decision was announced at a club meeting Jan. 31 by Colonel Sidney R. Hinds Jr., club president.

When the club closes state and post permits will be issued by the Provost Marshal.

Musical pageant slated for AUSA annual ball

The U. S. Army Forces Command (FORSCOM) Band and chorus will present a musical pageant, "200 Years of Readiness," at the annual AUSA George Washington Birthday Ball Feb. 20, beginning 7 p.m. at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse.

The band's musical multi-media production tells the story of America's military men and women and features songs that have followed them through the years.

Members of the chorus will be attired in various distinctive uniforms that have been worn by service men and women. The Forces Command Band will be wearing special Bicentennial uniforms which are near replicas of the uniforms worn by Infantry bandmen in 1889.

The jacket of the uniform is dark blue with white trim, which includes horizontal front stripes and ornamental white button facings on the cuffs and back. The gold chevrons are trimmed in scarlet and the sky-blue trousers have double white stripes trimmed in scarlet piping. The decorative headgear is set off by a large brass eagle, a brass plume holder with scarlet and white plume and white citation cords.

The United States Army Forces Command Band was organized in 1845 in Texas as the 4th Infantry Regiment Band. Its legacy,

MP of the year named

By BETTY ZIMMERMAN

Sergeant Franklin O. Mills was honored as Military Policeman of the Year by the Exchange Club of Columbus at its Crime Prevention Banquet Feb. 12 at the Martini-que Motor Hotel.

Mills was chosen to represent the military by a board consisting of three non-commissioned military policemen and CPT Bunny Brogdon of the Provost Marshal's Office. SGT Mills was selected as the outstanding MP based on job performance, military bearing, military knowledge and personal appearance.

The 25-year-old native of Smyrna, GA. is a member of the 139th Military Police Company. His duties are with the Juvenile Division of the Provost Marshal's Office. He is responsible for juvenile crime prevention, control and supervision of delinquent activities of youth, and the control of undesirable conditions involving youth. This is accomplished by juvenile investigative service, maintenance of records, consistent and effective police supervision and coordination with necessary Army and civilian agencies. The division also has the function of investigating possible cases of child abuse and child neglect.

Mills attended George C. Wallace State College in Dothan, Ala., and Troy State University. He also served in the Coast Guard and was a deputy sheriff in Bonifay, Fla.

Soldier honored for saving life

Second Lieutenant Dale R. Conner has been credited with saving the life of Specialist Five Arthur W. McCann after the Fort Benning soldier was stung by a bee.

McCann, who has a history of severe allergic reactions to stinging insect bites, was on his way to Martin Army Hospital to seek medical attention when he lost consciousness and the car he was driving collided with a tree.

Conner, who happened upon the accident on his way off post, immediately administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to the victim. With McCann's breathing and consciousness restored, Conner flagged down a passing motorist and advised him to notify the Military Police at the Main Gate to send an emergency unit to the scene.

Conner, having been informed by McCann of his bee sting, continued his life saving efforts as the victim continued to lose and regain consciousness.

For his efforts, the lieutenant was awarded the Army Commendation Medal upon his graduation from Officer Candidate School Jan. 30.

Expressing feelings

Tomorrow will be Valentine's Day, a Christian festival commensurating the martyrdom of St. Valentine, the patron saint of lovers. It is a special day for lads and lassies to choose lovers and exchange gifts and express their feelings of devotion. Even the birds are thought to mate on this particular day.

Here at Ft. Benning, there is a young man who feels that any day or any given moment is an ideal time for expressing ones sentiments.

Pvt. Ronald K. Baptise, Co A, Hq. Cmd, is Ft. Benning's unclaimed poet laureate. The 26-year-old New Orleans native who has been writing poems since the age of eight, considers himself a solitary man, who best expresses his conceptions, passions and intuitions to others through poetry.

"I found that through poetry, one can communicate so much more to another, than one might be able to in ordinary conversational language," says Baptise.

His poems deal with such subjects as the beauty in nature's world, the complexities of human relationships and love.

"Everything I've ever written is of a past experience that I've wanted to share the beautiful parts of, with others," he said.

He has thus far, shared his poems solely with his most intimate companions, but hopes to have them published in the near future so that he may share them with the world.

'Understanding and Love'

There is a bond between two people neither time nor distance can erase . . .

It is a bond born out of a special shared kinship which cannot be expressed in words, but only felt.

My relationship with you is a place where I don't feel alone.

It is a place where you can be a special part of yourself, and when something goes wrong, you care as much as I to make things right again.

Our relationship to me is one of pure love, and loving allows us to overlook faults common to everyone, and to forgive and accept each other.

The strength of any understanding is determined by the willingness of both parties to share their feelings and to remain open to each other.

To love someone is to care about the feelings of the other person as you do about your own.

There is one thing I want you to know, that is, I will always love you, because you have made me feel like a brand new man, something I have never felt before, and those thoughts and feelings I will always cherish.

Sand Hill match slated

into four categories and then paired in four member teams according to handicaps. All participants must have established handicaps.

A five dollar entry fee is required. Deadline for entry is noon, Friday, February 13. Trophies will be awarded to the winning teams and individuals in all categories. For more information contact Howard Holbrook at 544-3517.

Patterson awardee recognized

By BETTY ZIMMERMAN

The 24th annual Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award Ceremony was held yesterday in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Second Lieutenant Christopher F. Burton received the award which consisted of an inscribed plaque, a certificate, a service pistol engraved in silver, and a monetary award. He was selected as the outstanding graduate from all the 1975 Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Courses.

The widow of Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson made the presentation and addressed LT. Burton by saying, "I hope that, like my husband, you glory in the down-to-earth patriotism of the Infantry — take pride in belonging to the unromantic, 'hardest branch of all' — feel deep satisfaction to do your part among the rugged, plugging doughboys — your own men."

She continued, "As you step up the ladder, Lieutenant, Judge Patterson would hope you would never lose your close contact with the doughboys; not only because there are times when they have no where else to turn, but because this closeness and warmth is better for both officers and men. The Judge appreciated the qualities and limits of each of his men. He took to heart their personal problems, as together the men and officers learned day by day, that they could depend on each other."

Mrs. Patterson and other civilian and military dignitaries also took part in the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony in Wigle Hall later Thursday.

Sixteen OCS graduates, who have attained the rank of Colonel or above, were inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame. Among these was COL Gerald M. Girone, executive officer of Martin Army Hospital, Ft. Benning.

Hospital opens parking areas

More patient parking spaces are now available at Martin Army Hospital with the opening of two new areas.

An outpatient parking lot, most easily reached via the Santa Fe Road entrance to the hospital, features a reserved lane for handicapped, and easy access to the hospital clinic wings.

Two lanes of the old parking lot have also been reserved for visitors and patients.

FORSCOM pageant recommended

The United States Army's birth was the prelude to the birth of our nation. Now is the time to reflect upon the country's Bicentennial as more than an anniversary celebration or an historical milestone. Now is the time for all Americans to open their minds and hearts to a genuine celebration of freedom.

The ideals of our nation's founders are not outdated — they still inspire the United States today. The challenges we are meeting now are comparable to the challenges faced by our Founding Fathers when those ideals were brand new. The Americans of the Revolution have passed to us, their posterity, the responsibility to preserve the meaning of phrases like "government by the people" and "all men are created equal."

To help you generate a Bicentennial spirit the United States Army Forces Command Band and Chorus will perform "200 Years of Readiness" at Fort Benning Feb. 20 during the Annual AUSA George Washington Birthday Ball. The evening's entertainment begins at 7 p.m. at the Harmony Church Field House.

Harmony Church Field House.

All reports we have received from Chapter members who saw this pageant at the AUSA Annual Meeting in Washington, D.C. last October indicate this is a very interesting and worthwhile show. We urge all AUSA members and their guests to attend — we believe you will truly enjoy it.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"CONGRATULATIONS!" the letter that Oliver Overdrawn handed to me began. "You have been selected from numerous eligible prospects to participate in our Gulf Coast land offer. We are proud to extend an invitation to you to join us.

"Our company," the letter went on, "will fly you and one other person to our Gulf Coast land office on a beautiful three day excursion where you will dine, dance, and discover the opportunities available in land speculation. There is NO OBLIGATION! Everything is absolutely free. FREE! FREE!"

"Wow," I said handing the letter back to Oliver "Three days on the Gulf. What an opportunity."

"Can you believe that?" he laughed. "Absolutely free. Dining. Dancing. Discovering land opportunities. I never dreamed something this exciting could happen to me."

"Hey, wait a minute, Oliver," I frowned. "They aren't just doing this so you can have a ball. They want you to buy their land. And it's probably priced to include your three day trip."

"There's nothing in this letter that says I have to buy. A guy would have to be a dope not to take them up on their offer."

"That's probably why you got one of their letters. They want you to take them up on their offer. They want you to take their free trip. They want you to feel obligated, Oliver. That's how some of these companies work. Then when you feel obligated, they sock it to you and before you know it you own land you don't need." I shook my head. "I advise you not to go. Throw the letter in the trash can, Oliver."

He shook his head in rebuttal. "That's what's wrong. Everybody thinks like you. It's against the law for a company to put something in writing and then not go through with it. I'm too smart to fall for that old pressure tactic trick."

"So," I argued, "you think they are going to spend several hundred dollars to fly you out to their office, take care of you for three days, and pay your way back just so you can have a good time?"

"That's about the size of it," he acknowledged happily.

"And you're going to do that without buying their land?"

"Exactly."

"All of it absolutely free. No strings attached?"

"You've got it," he grinned.

"Oliver, you won't know what hit you when those land salespersons get hold of you. Pressure tactics are child's play with these characters."

"The first thing they'll do is probably take me out to a fabulous restaurant for dinner."

"It'll probably be Burger King."

"They'll probably spare no expense for the prospective buyer. The best steaks and the finest wines."

"Chopped sirloin and Sneaky-Pete '75."

"Then, they'll probably take me to the nightspots where I'll feel obligated to have a good time," Oliver murmured.

"Something along the line of A and W Root Beer stand."

"After all the nightspots close," Oliver continued to dream aloud, "we'll probably catch an early morning breakfast."

"Pancake House, I bet," I said.

"They'll wake me late where I've rested in the plushiest hotel and treat me to brunch at their most extravagant sports club."

"Motel Six and the Y.M.C.A."

"We'll eat roast duck under glass and taste a delicious white wine."

"Hey, Oliver! You're dreaming. Wake up, Oliver," I said.

"After brunch we'll take a short tour through the development area where they'll show their land, followed by a detailed business and finance briefing in their elaborate headquarters."

"They'll want you to sign the contract right away," I cautioned.

"We'll have afternoon tea and crumpets."

"Don't sign anything with blank spaces, and tell them right off that the first payment won't be due for ninety days."

"I'll ask them to take me to several sites where I can inspect the properties."

"Don't buy lots that slope. They're terrible to landscape."

"We'll probably fly out to the lots in their private helicopter and land near a waiting air-conditioned luxury automobile."

"I hope it's a maroon Mercury," I whispered watching Oliver's dream materialize before my eyes.

"We'll stop on a lot and let the soil drift through our fingers while they point out where the shopping center, hospital, and city government is planned to be built."

"I'm going to grow corn, tomatoes, potatoes in my garden," I sighed.

"Then they'll start with the hard sell pressure," Oliver exhaled loudly, "and I'll tell them I don't want to buy any lots."

"I'll take two," I blurted.

NCOSI dining facility named Benning's best

By MARK WILLIAMSON

During the past eight months, Co A, NCOSI has captured 15 out of 17 dining facility awards, in the large unit category.

SFC Richard A. Watts, dining facility manager, is the man most responsible for it's success. During his eight months as head of the Co A facility, the overall quality of service, food and cleanliness has led to the monthly Post Best Mess Award (large category) five times, and the Post Best Mess Award for the year.

In addition, Watts' efforts have netted the facility the TSB monthly award eight times in 1975 and the TSB yearly award.

Watts was Medevaced from Vietnam in 1970 and was assigned to Ft. Benning. After working for the S-4 section of TSB, he was assigned to Co A's dining facility in July of last year.

"Long hours, a desire to improve the Army's Food Service Program and the advantage of working with excellent personnel," were among the reasons cited by Watts for his success.

The NCOSI facility has also been entered in the Philip A. Connelly award competition. The annual award is a world-wide accolade for excellence in food service. Results of the TRADOC-level of the competition will be known later this month.

Guardsmen, soldiers join forces for training

By C. B. Hoover

Many long weeks of preparations came to an end Saturday when 80 Tennessee National Guard soldiers from the 2d Bn(Mech) 117th Inf arrived aboard two C-130 aircraft at Lawson Army Airfield. The units came to Ft. Benning to conduct training with the 1/58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde which they have been affiliated with since June, 1975.

"Preparations for the unit to conduct training here started back in October after a liaison team had visited the unit at Athens, Tenn.," said MAJ Russell W. Calvert, S-3 of the 1/58th Inf. "We wanted to introduce some of the latest training concepts to the men. Because of the limited training areas the unit has, they came here for a weekend drill. It has been a monumental task to coordinate the assets to move the guardsmen, but they have definitely met the challenge."

The special training mission for the 2/117th Inf consisted of the NCO's attending the Squad Leaders Course on how to train the mechanized rifle squad tactically.

The M-60 machinegun-firing prepared the gunners for the adoption of the Performance Oriented Training techniques, and allowed each unit to have its complement of qualified gunners. The training was supplemented by concurrent training, studying range cards, machinegun positions and crew drill.

"As long as there was light, we trained," said MAJ Calvert. "There was no time to waste. The men were issued C-rations for the noon meal to save a little of that precious time for training."

Some of the men from the 2/117th Inf thought the training here at Ft. Benning was just what the unit needed, as explained by CSM Joseph E. Blackburn. "The 1/58th has provided some of the best training our unit has received in years. I'm sure each soldier here has learned something that he can take home and pass on to his fellow National Guardsmen."

Under the watchful eye of SP4 Edward Shouse (l), Cbt Spt Co, 1/58th Inf, Sp4 John Huggins (c) and SGT Charles Latham of the Tennessee National Guard train on the M-60 machine-gun.

Benning's schools celebrate 200 years

All of Fort Benning's dependent schools were designated as Bicentennial institutions in a series of ceremonial flag presentations during 1975.

The Fort Benning Chapter of the National Sojourners, represented by COL (ret.) James C. McDonald, donated the special Bicentennial flags, now being flown at all Benning dependent schools. LTC John D. Jackson and MAJ Bill C. Drollinger of the Fort Benning Bicentennial Project Agency, accompanied him during the ceremonies.

Joining in the "ACTION '75" Army emphasis on the Bicentennial, the schools have planned various projects and events. The schools have their own four-member faculty committee to coordinate at least four of these programs for the year. In addition to such activities as historical movies and book readings on the Revolution, each school is planning a "Bicentennial Day."

The plan of this coordinated effort is to provide both an interesting and educational means of celebrating the Revolution. Some of the more notable projects include:

- An Arbor Day Tree Planting Ceremony Feb. 20 at Loyd and Wilson Schools;
- A review of Georgian history featuring 200 years of famous Georgians at White School;
- A Bicentennial puppet show by the Junior League Puppets (Columbus Women's Organization) at Dexter School;
- A study of 200 years of inventions at McBride School;
- A Tricentennial time capsule at Faith Jr. High School.

Name change

Over the past few years there have been recommendations to change the name of the local AUSA Chapter. Some feel that "The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army" is cumbersome and lacks "zing."

One long-time and very interested member of the Chapter recommended a change to "The Follow Me Chapter," which is shorter and has "punch."

Chapter President, Mr. Buddy Sparks, appointed Mr. William Schloth to chair a 7-man committee to investigate and recommend a course of action reference this suggestion.

The committee, and Board of Directors, agreed to solicit the chapter membership by newsletter to determine the most desired name change, if any.

The letters were mailed this week with members asked to comment on the following possible names, or to recommend no change or a name of their own. (Inadvertently, "Follow Me Chapter" was not listed in the newsletter, but most certainly should have been.)

- Chattahoochee Valley Chapter
- Doughboy Chapter
- Follow Me Chapter
- Gen. Henry Benning Chapter
- Queen of Battle Chapter
- Retain present name
- Suggestion not included above.

AUSA members are urged to mail their recommendations to AUSA, P.O. Box 2036, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, or mail to or call the Information Office, Rm 604, Bldg 4 (Tel: 544-4792, or 544-4544).

'76 voting eyed

Voting assistance is being emphasized by DA during the 1976 Bicentennial election year in an effort to encourage Army voters to cast their ballots. Steps are being taken to make registration and voting information, materials and assistance readily available to Army voters.

Unit voting officers now have a round-the-clock contact to turn to when they run into problems carrying out their voting programs. A DA voting action line — autovon 233-0527, commercial 202-693-0527 — will give voting officers a helping hand with their questions or problems on a 24-hour basis.

The Army's Bicentennial voting assistance plan is spelled out in DA Cir 608-54. (ANF)

Military Dog Detachment

Formerly the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, the Military Dog Detachment (MDD) is now an integral part of the 1/29th Infantry (Pioneers).

The unit dates back to action in the Philippines during World War II, and has seen combat in every major U.S. conflict.

The Army has three types of Infantry dogs, scout dog, mine/tunnel dog, and the tracker dog. The mission of the canine detachment at Ft. Benning is to provide support for the Infantry Center and School.

With ongoing research and development projects, the Detachment has currently been experimenting with a type of "Superdog," one which can combine the abilities of all three basic dogs.

Other functions of the MDD include bomb detection, drug detection, remote control dogs, multi-purpose dogs, and giving demonstrations throughout the Southeast.

The Detachment is currently commanded by 2LT James Scapin and has a total of 40 soldiers and 64 dogs.

Black poetess to lecture here

Nikki Giovanni, well known poetess, lecturer, and editorial consultant of "Encore American and Worldwide News" magazine, will speak at Marshall Auditorium Feb. 19 at 8 p.m.

Ms. Giovanni, an author of both poetry and fiction, has had 11 books published, the most recent ones being:

"Ego Tripping and Other Poems for Young Readers," "A Poetic Equation: Conversations Between Nikki Giovanni and Margaret Walker" and "The Women and Men." She has also made several records on which she read some of her works.

intense black awareness. Although many of her early poems are clearly militant, they also express compassion and universal themes such as "Black Love is Black Wealth."

On the lecture platform, her manner is said to be off-beat, cool and down to earth. She stands 5-foot-2, dresses casually. Ms. Giovanni's hobbies include painting, making collages, listening to music and playing Scrabble and Whist.

Prior to speaking at the auditorium, she will dine with the troops at the 36th Engr Gp dining facility at 5 p.m.

According to SGT Clarence Cales, project NCOIC, his squad is receiving valuable MOS training in carpentry, electricity, and plumbing. ## CofC fete has hangups

This year's Chamber of Commerce awards banquet was not without its hangups — 15 of them to be exact. Draped from a 75-foot high ceiling, 15 parachute canopies were backlit with red, white and blue bulbs and gave the Columbus Municipal Auditorium the appearance of a room full of patriotically colored, gigantic bubbles. Eight soldiers from the 533d Transportation Co. and five more from the 608th Ordnance Co. (all in the 36th Engr Gp) took 16 hours to decorate the auditorium. Don Fabiani, civic affairs director for the Chamber, requested the impressive display. Fabiani expressed his appreciation, stating that he was pleased with the results and praised highly those who took part.

'Super clerk' has many specialties

The 34th Med Bn has a "super clerk" that is not only involved in two military occupational specialties, but is also involved in three major hobbies.

SP5 Liz Skolweck is a trained clerk-typist whose 65-word-per-minute speed in typing enhances her ability to take dictation at the same rate. This ability, added to her skills as a medical specialist, combine to make her a valuable asset to the Medical Battalion.

The specialist is presently working as the secretary for the Staff and Commander of the battalion. "This is my first experience in six years of active duty where I have had the responsibility of being secretary to a commander," Skolweck said. "The experience is both interesting and challenging."

After being desk bound for 8-10 hours a day, the lady soldier uses her hobbies as a means to unwind.

Skolweck is an enthusiastic collector of hand blown glass pieces, has a fine collection of music boxes, and is also involved in sports car rally driving.

Her music box collection began about 18 months ago when she received one as a gift. Since that time she has added seven more to her collection.

Her collection of fine hand-crafted glass figurines began when Skolweck was about 12 years old. Since then her assortment has grown to more than 150 pieces. Her first items were hand blown animals from Russia. Some of these glass creations are even dressed and resemble characters from the Grimm Brothers Fairy Tales.

Other pieces of her collection were created especially for her by a cousin who is a practicing artisan of the glass blowing art.

Skolweck's third hobby is sports car rallies. She, and husband Rick, are proud owners of a Corvette sports car. Together they plan to participate in local rallies with the Corvette Club of Columbus.

While rally driving does not require the use of excess speed, she admits that is good to know "your car can do it if the need arises." She also confesses that her first attempt at driving the high performance vehicle left her "less than composed." But a few pointers from Rick, a more experienced and skilled driver, put her at ease.

MPs aid motorists

When a soldier or civilian is on post at night and has car trouble help is close at hand. The Military Police stand by to be of assistance.

Call 545-5222 and the MPs will secure a wrecker for the individual and the vehicle will be taken to the soldier's unit or a safe area.

It is important to realize that if an automobile is abandoned and is unreported for 24 hours it will be towed away and impounded.

A civilian may also receive assistance by calling the same number. The MPs maintain a listing of reputable wrecker services and the person may select the wrecker service he or she desires.

Dramatizers to hold tryouts

The Fort Benning Dramatizers will hold open tryouts for Arthur Miller's stirring drama "The Crucible" on February 18, 19 and 20 at 7:30 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 1 p.m. at the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bld. 1237, behind the Infantry Museum.

Anyone in the tri-city area is welcome to tryout. Parts are available for ten men and ten women, ranging in age from 10 to 83.

Set in Salem, Massachusetts in 1692, "The Crucible" deals with the Puritan purge of witchcraft. It offers both a gripping historical view and a timely parable of our contemporary society. The play deals with the erosion of truth within a community, and the destruction of humanity which ensues.

The club also needs designers, artists, writers, painters, photographers, carpenters, sound and lighting technicians, seamstresses, prop gatherers, make-up artists, hairstylists, and jacks-of-all-trades, with or without experience.

As a Dramatizer, you choose your own hours, devote as much or as little time as you wish, and have the joy of seeing the finished product — a play coming alive on the stage.

Tentative production dates for "The Crucible" are April 16, 17, 18, 23 and 24. For further information, call the Playhouse at 545-5057, or attend the weekly Dramatizer meeting Monday evening at 7:30 p.m.

Black history data needed

SP4 Curtis B. Courtney needs help.

Courtney is a Race Relations moderator in the 197th Inf Bde. He feels that Black history in the Columbus-Ft. Benning area is a sadly neglected area of study and he is requesting assistance from anyone having information on local Black history.

Courtney's primary research is in conjunction with the local Urban League. Both have an ultimate goal of gathering sufficient historical data to put together a tour of the area that will indicate the significant impact that Blacks have made.

"No one that I know of has ever done anything like this before," Courtney says. "I'm trying to put this project together before the end of February in conjunction with Black History Month.

The 197th specialist will continue his work as a Bicentennial project with the Urban League after February. Anyone with Black history information is requested to contact Courtney at 544-2860.

Black Soldiers and the B

By Joyce Walker

For two hundred years the black soldier has been fighting for his country as well as his own personal freedom. During that time, he has had to prove his ability as an ordinary combat soldier, and overcome his stereotype image of a laborer or body servant, a part time warrior or a rare hero.

During the American Revolution, freedmen and slaves took up the fight for Independence. Peter Salem became the first black soldier to distinguish himself when he killed MAJ Pitcairne, the British commander at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Several thousand blacks served and at the end of the War, General Washington publicly stated that they had done well. However, most slaves were not given the freedom they had been promised.

More than 200,000 black men were given the right to fight as free men in the Union Army and Navy throughout the Civil War. They were placed in segregated units under white officers who were often prejudiced. Less than 100 blacks were made officers. Their regiments were sent into battle with less training than the white regiments had received, with weapons inferior to those issued to whites. Their medical facilities were worse and their doctors were fewer. They suffered greater casualties than whites for all these reasons. However, they all continued to fight dauntlessly because they knew that if they were captured, they would be returned to slavery.

By the end of the war, there were 178,985 blacks in the Union Army. Few were officers, most of them were Infantry men. In 1866, six black regiments were established by law as part of the Regular Army.

In the western territories, the uneasy peace was kept by the U. S. Army, which included black units of the 9th and 10th Cavalries and the 24th and 25th Infantries. They fought bandits as well as Apaches, Sioux and Comanche. They took the field against Billy the Kid, Geronimo, Crazy Horse and the black chief of the Apaches named John Horse.

In 1877, West Point graduated its first black officer, Henry O. Flipper, of Georgia, who was commissioned as a 2d Lieutenant and assigned to the 10th Cavalry at Ft. Sill, Okla.

The most outstanding campaign made by black troops during the Spanish America War was with the famous Rough Riders under COL Theodore Roosevelt. Fighting alongside of the Rough Riders and Teddy Roosevelt at San Juan Hill were units of the 9th and 10th Cavalries.

The policy of segregating blacks continued during World War I. They were barred altogether from the Marines and were permitted to serve in the Navy only in the most menial capacities. In the Army, however, they served in nearly every branch, although, as usual, in segregated units.

Black support and supply units rendered honorable service, both at home and overseas. There was an official effort to keep blacks out of actual combat, but many black units distinguished themselves under fire and were cited for valor.

New York's 369th Infantry, which later became known as "Hell Fighters," received the French Croix de Guerre and records show that they were actually under fire longer than any other American regiment.

The 370th Infantry, later known to the Germans as the "Black Devils," participated in action on the Western Front and were the first Americans to enter the fortified city of Laon.

During World War II, the black soldiers began to emerge from confinement to labor detail assignments to find opportunities as Infantrymen, tankers, parachutists, as of-

...g to lose its uniformity and strength.
...ck soldiers served in Africa and in the ...ific and European theaters of war, but
...e still often used in menial and supply
...tions.

The 761st Tank Battalion was the first
...ck armored unit to be committed to com-
... The unit landed at Omaha Beach on Oc-
...er 10, 1944 after brief garrison duty in ...land. General George S. Patton Jr. prais-

On July 26, 1948, President Harry Truman signed Executive Order 9881 which created the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services.

At the beginning of the Korean War, blacks served in segregated regiments.
Among them were the 1st, 2d, and 3d Battalions of the 24th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division.

In Vietnam, soldiers fought side by side without regard to race, color or creed because of Truman's insight and wisdom.
Since then, a new black soldier has been emerging, not a laborer or body servant, a part-time warrior or a rare hero, but an ordinary soldier fighting and working on equal terms. He no longer needs to prove his ability as a combat soldier. Today the issues are acceptance as a human being, and an American citizen and being granted the dignity and the privileges those identities imply.

Fourteenth Amendment

President Andrew Johnson declared the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution ratified on July 28, 1868. Today, more than 100 years later, the amendment is still of special significance in one very important respect.

In a Supreme Court decision issued after the ratification, state and local governments became bound by the first ten amendments to the Constitution — the Bill of Rights. One clause, furthermore, forbids any state to make or enforce any "law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." The amendment declared all persons born or naturalized in the United States as citizens, which included former slaves.

Therefore, the still-living Fourteenth Amendment is cited in many civil rights cases of both the past and present. An amendment intended to serve a short range purpose has become a cornerstone of American liberties.

Percentage of blacks growing

Number of blacks in the Army and their has been the subject of considerable discussion, especially in the press, since the allegations during the Vietnam War that the number of blacks in the Army was too high considering the number of blacks in the Army.

Figures from the Army Staff reveal some information on the "black content" of the Army. The Pentagon calls it. The statistics show the number of blacks in the Army rose from 19.7 per cent in mid-1972 to a little over 22 per cent in late 1974. The figure in late 1975 was 22.7 per cent.

Experts believe that the percentage is about what it should be. They cite two factors: (1) the number of non-prior service blacks enlisted in the Army in FY 76 is slight (.7 per cent ahead of white enlistees) and (2) first term black enlistees continue to show a greater tendency to reenlist than their white counterparts.

Are blacks doing within the Army? The answer is now quite well indeed. From June of 73 to June of 75 the percentage of black sergeants (E-5's) rose from one per cent to about 19 per cent; E-6s dropped from 24 to just under 22 per cent; E-7s rose from 20 to 22.3 per cent; E-8s rose from under 15 to about 17 per cent; and the top grade, E-9s, jumped significantly from nine to nearly 14 per cent.

The figures also gave some indications as to what blacks are doing in the Army. For example, in combat divisions the black percentage was 22.9, somewhat above the Army-wide percentage. An increase in this figure is anticipated because so far in FY 76 23.7 per cent of black enlistments have been for the combat arms compared with an overall 19 per cent average for FY 75.

The figures also showed that the Army's extra efforts to obtain more black officers were beginning to pay off. Most notable was the input from ROTC which doubled from about 11 per cent in FY 72 to nearly 22 per cent now. USMA graduates also increased from under three per cent in 72 to an estimated 5.5 per cent in 76. The overall black officer input was 10.5 per cent in FY 75, up significantly from only two per cent three years ago. (AUSA)

Ft. Valley players to bring the 'Pig'

The Fort Valley State College Players Guild will visit Ft. Benning to perform the award-winning play, "The Sty of the Blind Pig" on February 13th and 14th at 8:00 p.m. at the Ft. Benning Playhouse (Bldg. 1237, behind the Infantry Museum).

Admission will be FREE, with anyone from the tri-community area welcome to attend.

"The Sty of the Blind Pig", by Phillip Hayes Dean, was honored by TIME Magazine as one of the year's ten best plays. It won the Drama Desk and Hull-Warner awards. It is a vivid and deeply affecting drama which combines humor and power in capturing the sense of black consciousness in America during the time of transition from old to new. The place is Chicago's south side and the time is the 1950's, just before the civil rights movement began to burgeon.

The Fort Valley State College Players Guild is one of the oldest organizations on the campus. It can boast of having produced three major plays each year plus miscellaneous one-act plays since 1940. Professionally, the Guild is a member of the Georgia Theatre Conference, College and University Division, and the National Association of Dramatic and Speech Arts. The Guild is a training ground for college students who wish to enhance their platform ability and/or strut about the stage for their sheer enjoyment and that of others.

The USAIC Recreation Services Division Music & Theater Branch is hosting the Guild's visit, as a part of Ft. Benning's celebration of Black History Month, but plans are in the offing to host future productions by the Players Guild and other area college performing groups.

For reservations call 545-5057.

Marksmanship records broken

A total of six new national records were set Saturday and Sunday on Ft. Benning Pistol ranges during the year's first outdoor pistol tour-

3-month project finished

January's rain and cold slowed but didn't stop construction on a 300-foot-long retaining wall built by soldier-engineers in the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

The three-foot-high wall will be used as an obstacle and backdrop for a moving target track on Muir Range. Company B's second platoon of the 43rd Engr Bn constructed the wall. The project took three months to complete.

Most of the lumber for the project was salvaged from last year's Santa Fe Bridge project. The new wall comprises 3x12 wooden sections which has to be braced behind posts and cemented in place. Soldiers mixed the cement and filled the post holes by hand.

SFC Hershel Anderson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit breezed to an easy victory in the two day match, as he scored 2674-103X, thirteen points ahead of teammate S/Sgt. Marvin Black who finished with 2661-113X. SFC Leslie Hornsby, also of the Marksmanship Unit, rounded out the third spot with 2653-103X.

The highlight of the matches, however, was the four new woman's records set by SP5 Kimberly Dyer also of the Marksmanship Unit.

SP5 Kimberly Dyer

SP5 Dyer totaled an excellent 2621-72X, with her records coming in the .22 Caliber National Match Course 297-13X, the .22 Caliber Aggregate 886-30X, Center Fire National Match Course 294-8X and the Center Fire Aggregate 875-24X.

SFC Anderson's 200 slow fire score in the Center Fire match and S/Sgt. Black's 300-12X in the .45 Caliber Aggregate accounted for the fifth and sixth new national records.

In team competition, the U.S. Army swept all three matches with the U.S. Army Grey taking the .22 Caliber 1173-53X, while the U.S. Army Blue squad won the Center Fire and .45 Caliber matches 1185-51X and 1175-42X respectively.

"We'll be spending our anniversary in Europe."

Renee Basa feels pretty good about her husband being in the Army.

"I love to travel, and that's one of the things I love about John being in the Army. We got married a few months before he reenlisted. Now he's on orders for Europe, and we'll be spending our first anniversary there. If it hadn't been for the Army, we wouldn't have made it.

"Of course, the travel is just one of the things I like about the Army. The medical care is great, too. The first time I went to the Army doctors they really treated me well; they really cared.

"I thought it was great that John reenlisted. I'm happy with the Army, and so is he. He's a Bandsman. In the Army, he can continue his musical education while he's doing something he loves. In fact, we're so happy with the Army I've thought about enlisting myself."

43d Engrs lend a hand

The 43d Eng Bn (Construction), 36th Engr Group proved to Phenix City that they care by lending a hand toward the development of the Russell County Boys Club.

The earth-moving platoon of Co C worked from January 19 to 23 clearing an area for the placement of a basketball and football field. SP5 Edwin Martin drove a bulldozer to remove trees, brush, and large amounts of earth. Martin also operated the 10-ton tractor that hauled the equipment.

The engineer's work was finished when a grader was used on the projected ball fields.

MSG Foiles joined the Professional Bowlers Association in 1973 and has competed in approximately 40 PBA regional tour events since then. He has recorded three 300 games during his career and last year averaged 203 pins per game on the regional tour.

Unit gets Itschner nod

A Ft. Benning unit has been nominated for the American Military Engineer's Itschner Award.

Co. A, 43rd Engr Bn, 36th Engr Gp is on tap for the worldwide award which is presented annually to the most outstanding active Army Engineer company.

Co. A, an equipment and maintenance company, was selected for its outstanding support to the Infantry Center and School throughout the year. Additionally, the unit was cited for premier engineer and ordnance equipment maintenance support to the 36th Engr Gp.

The unit's support to civilian assistance projects in Columbus and throughout the South, was also a major factor in the selection.

The intent of the award is to provide leadership in junior engineer officers and to foster "esprit" in company-size engineer units.

Adult attitude best on road

Childish behavior exhibited while driving in traffic has long been a problem to other motorists: the impatient driver who pulls up immediately behind a car, passes abruptly, and swerves back into the right lane without allowing sufficient space for the car just passed; drag racing on a public highway; or passing on the right side.

While many people ascribe these immature antics to mere recklessness, new insights indicate that the cause is more than superficial and may be rooted in early childhood emotions.

The primary consideration in analyzing driver behavior is how the driver views the rules of the road. Does he or she think of traffic laws as restricting or inhibiting freedom, or as creating a smooth, orderly, and logical progression of traffic?

There are basically three attitudes a driver can assume: parent, adult, or child.

The parent attitude means that the driver signals his intention and demands that other drivers respond accordingly. The adult attitude means that the driver signals and then, before proceeding, insures that others accept and respond to the signal. The child attitude means that the driver is oblivious to the other drivers on the road and proceeds as if the highway were his play toy.

These three attitudes, simplified as they are, can result in four conclusions of the driver.

I'm not OK, you're OK. This is the most elementary level of transactional analysis. At this level the driver is unsure of himself and is not a mature driver. He may drive trying to do what he thinks other drivers expect of him rather than as the driving conditions dictate.

I'm OK, you're not OK. This driver can be the most dangerous. He thinks that whatever he does is right and that you are the incompetent driver.

I'm not OK, you're not OK. This driver feels he is a poor driver and that everyone else is in the same condition.

I'm OK, you're OK. This is the adult attitude that recognizes that each driver has responsibility to each other to insure free movement in an orderly fashion.

Each driver sometimes lapses into an attitude that is not adult. If he or she recognizes the attitude as that of the demanding parent or petulant child and keeps his emotions under control, then some of the recklessness and crassness found on the highway can be eliminated.

Driving in traffic with other mature and emotionally stable adults presents a safe medium for travel.

Fish forecast: Bass bedding, better biting

By Denny Blankenship

Each year about this time, largemouth bass begin their exodus from deep water into the shallow water areas in preparation for going on the spawning beds.

Bass will hang around just off the shallow water areas and fatten up before bedding down.

If you know where some good spawning beds are, now's the time to fish the area where shallow and deep water meet. This is particularly true if an underwater shelf is located in that area. Spinner baits should be good along with most crank baits.

Cast into the shallow water, crank the lure out slowly and either kill it or deep-dive it at the shelf or deep water.

Hang on now, old "Bucket Mouth" might break your arm.

Nice strings of crappie are being caught in the River Bend area using minnows at 10 feet depth. The main river is also yielding some nice strings of these scrappy little battlers but at 6-8 feet depth. You might also use small "gigs" at the mouths of creeks.

One fella recently pulled in 40 crappie in a three hour period using this technique in the Uchee Creek area.

Catfish are off the beds now and hungry.

Several 6-8 pounders have been caught in post ponds using liver as bait.

If you know the depth of a particular area, fish your bait about 6 inches off the bottom. This seems to be the optimum depth for this time of year.

Equine Excursion

Without elaborating on the enjoyable and entertaining events entailing equestrians, we suggest you turn to page 6!

CHAMPUS users victimized again

Statement now needed

A non-availability statement is now required by CHAMPUS beneficiaries who utilize non-emergency care from a civilian medical facility within 40 miles of Martin Army Hospital (MAH).

According to a provision in the newly-passed 1976 Military Appropriations Bill, CHAMPUS patients must first seek care from the Ft. Benning Hospital. If MAH determines that it cannot handle the case, the patient will be issued the non-availability statement (DD Form 1251) allowing CHAMPUS to pay for the required services at a civilian hospital.

The bill, signed into law by President Ford February 9, does not apply to clinic visits or to emergencies. Also, there is an exception provided for expectant mothers who live more than 30 miles from the post hospital.

Patients face expense

Higher medical bills loom on the CHAMPUS horizon for Ft. Benning patients as a result of the implementation of a different rate system by officials January 1.

The rate under the new system, which governs reimbursement to patients, is calculated on the same basis as Medicare. The Medicare rates are generally lower than CHAMPUS.

Some civilian doctors can opt to not accept the lower rates, forcing the military patient to seek care at a non-CHAMPUS participating doctor. The patients then must pay their own bills and seek reimbursement from CHAMPUS. If the bill is higher than the rate allowable by CHAMPUS, the patient pays the difference.

Machinegun Matches. SP4 Steven Jones spots the target while SP4 Damon Jones (no relation) does the firing.

Pre-trial review now automatic

Soldiers locked up to await military trial are not forgotten.

A neutral and impartial review, looking at the necessity of pretrial confinement, is now automatically given to every soldier under recent changes to the Military Magistrates Program.

Effective January 1, the job of assigning military magistrates passed from the local level to the U.S. Army Judiciary in Washington, D. C. Assigned military magistrates are appointed by The Judge Advocate General or his designee. Alternate and part-time military magistrates are appointed for each confinement facility by the general courts-martial convening authority for that facility. The move also eliminated the provision that review was mandatory only at major confinement facilities.

The Court of Military Appeals indicated in recent cases that some officers might not be sufficiently neutral and detached to review pre-trial confinement. Past situations existed where cases were reviewed by military officers who were connected with law enforcement or prosecution.

The role of the magistrate has not changed, but unlike his civilian counterpart he does not consider probable cause or determine bail. The military magistrate presumes there is probable cause. He reviews records and interviews detained soldiers to determine if release would pose a danger to society or the individual. The magistrate also decides if the soldier can be trusted to appear for trial.

Magistrates complete their review within the first seven days of confinement. The decision of the magistrate to direct release from confinement or decline to do so is not subject to appeal.

However, the magistrate will continue to review confinement every two weeks for possible changes in the situation. Pre-trial confinement in excess of 90 days is usually considered a denial of a soldier's right to a speedy trial. (TNS)

Proficiency pay guidelines defined

Drill sergeants, recruiters and career counselors at Ft. Benning must be performing their respective duties to qualify for special duty assignment (SDA) proficiency pay. MILPERCEN officials say there seems to be some confusion in the award of the pay, particularly, when a soldier is reassigned to another post.

These guidelines from MILPERCEN should insure a consistent policy:

Soldiers receiving SDA pro pay who are reassigned to another post in an authorized SDA position will continue to receive SDA pay without interruption while in transit.

If a soldier is reassigned from an authorized SDA position to a non-SDA position, his SDA pro pay will stop when he is removed from his position in his losing unit. If the soldier is reassigned to another SDA position, but upon his arrival the position is already filled, the gaining commander will decide who shall fill the position and terminate the SDA pro pay for the one not selected. The effective date for the termination of the pay for the soldier not selected is the date of arrival of the incoming soldier.

During the implementation of One Station Training, SDA pay may be awarded or continued if a drill sergeant is reassigned to a post before the activation of a training activity or while awaiting the transfer of authorized DS spaces — if the soldier starts performing DS-related duties upon his arrival. MILPERCEN

New policy limits sell back of leave

A change in the Army leave policy now limits the amount of unused leave a servicemember can sell back to the Army.

Effective Feb. 10, 1976, a soldier cannot sell back more than 60 days of unused leave during his career. Payment for accrued leave made BEFORE this date will be excluded from the new ruling.

An M-60 tank furnished by 2d Bn, 69th Ar, 197th Inf, weighing over fifty-three tons, was gracefully floated from one side of the Chaffahoochee to the other by soldiers of the 586th Engr Co and B Co, 43d Engr Bn.

officials point out, however, that the number of drill sergeants receiving SDA pro pay may not exceed the total number of spaces a post will be authorized. (ANF)

Major concern, exercise objective

By J. Gorecki

Exercise! The physical type! What is your first thought, jogging, hiking, contact athletic competition, weight-lifting or just plain old moving around?

Whatever your feelings on the subject, your motivation should be a primary consideration.

If you set out on a hike to lose weight, you're in for a long walk — 36 miles to lose one pound — as tests have shown.

If you've been eyeing those Charles Atlas or Joe Weider ads in the advertising sections of your favorite magazine and are considering getting involved in a vigorous weight lifting program you might consider this: bulging muscles have proved to be ineffective when penetrated by bullets or slashed by a knife blade.

Today the aims of exercising are changing to mobility and flexibility — isometrics, Kung Fu, Yoga, tennis, walking and just being active.

The primary motivating force behind this new approach to exercise stems from people wanting to be and feel healthier — avoiding death as long as possible with as little pain as possible.

It is from our ever-improving understanding of how muscles function that the emphasis on flexibility has arisen. Muscles work by contracting and expanding, and they work very efficiently without the help of barbells.

The arm muscles of an ordinary man are capable of exerting a force of two thousand pounds. The muscles themselves weigh between one half and three fourths of a pound.

The contraction of muscles was once thought to slow down during exercising due to the presence of a fatigue hormone. This is wrong. A muscle stops contracting when it ceases to receive its primary energy source — oxygen. If muscles receive a constant supply of oxygen, theoretically they could keep on contracting at peak efficiency indefinitely or for as long as an individual desired.

This principle is seen in children. When you were a child you probably could run and play all day and never get tired or feel the pain of overexertion. Remember how easy it was to tire out the grown-ups? This was because the arteries were flexible. They could expand more easily to carry more blood and oxygen to the muscles.

As you get older and become less active behind a desk or the wheel of a car, the elasticity of these arteries isn't needed as much. Like an old unused rubber band in the back of a desk drawer, the arteries stiffen up.

When a person says he wants to take a walk to get his blood circulating, he is literally doing just that. The more you exercise for flexibility and mobility, the more the arteries get used. The more the arteries are used, the more flexible they become. More oxygen reaches the muscles and they begin to retain their child-like staying power. This takes the load off the heart as less force is required to push blood through stretched arteries.

Muscles and arteries work together. The flexibility of one creates the staying power, and consequently energy or "healthiness," in the other.

If you want to lose weight, diet. If you want to bully people or show-off, lift weights. But if you want to keep your muscles healthy, train but don't strain.

from where

I stand...

By T. Gunner

"Hurry, it's for you," my wife urged holding the telephone. "Hurry up!"

"Who is it?" I growled.

"It's Playgirl magazine," she whispered as I took the receiver.

"Playgirl magazine?" I whispered. "Did you subscribe to the magazine without telling me?"

She shook her head and I spoke into the mouthpiece.

"I'm Nancy Nice, Assistant Editor of Playgirl magazine, Mr. Gunner, and I'm calling to ask if you would come down to our local office for an interview."

I laughed. "You're going to put my picture in Playgirl!"

"Oh, good grief!" my wife exclaimed.

"Well, what we'd like to do is talk to you about it," Nancy Nice laughed.

"You can't do it!" my wife shook her head.

"How did you pick me?" I asked.

"Well, it's a very complicated process; we'll explain it to you if you agree to come see us," Nancy Nice replied. "Will you come down?"

"Sure. Wow! This is hard to believe," I sighed. "I'll be there anytime you say."

"You are not going to be in Playgirl!" my wife snapped. "What will the neighbors say?"

Nancy Nice told me when and where to report and I hung up the telephone.

"Can you imagine that? Playgirl wants me in their magazine."

"No, I can't imagine that! And if you're dummy enough to believe . . ."

" . . . But it's for real," I interrupted. "I wonder how they got my name?"

"I think I'm going to faint," my wife swooned. "T. GUNNER I WILL NOT PERMIT YOU TO BE IN PLAYGIRL MAGAZINE," she enunciated emphatically.

"Look at the exposure I'll receive," I signed. "I could become a famous model."

"Exposure is the word for it," she answered.

A few days later I reported to the local office of Playgirl magazine. "Nance Nice invited me down," I smiled at the receptionist. "I'm going to have my picture in your magazine."

She guided me to a small room that had fifty-two bright light bulbs burning and mirrors on all the walls. "Someone will come by for you in a few minutes," she said.

"Okay," I said. Momentarily there was a tap on the door and a young man opened it.

"Mr. Gunner?"

"Yes."

"Follow me, sir."

I did and he led me into a room where two dozen people sat around a large table. "This is Mr. Gunner," he said.

"I'm Nancy Nice," a lady said standing at the table. "Would you please step over to this little platform and face us?" Her hand swept toward a small stage where lights were set up. I stood on the stage.

"Lights, Harry," Nancy Nice called and bright lights came on. I began removing my shirt and shoes.

"Ah, Mr. Gunner, that won't be necessary," Nancy Nice said.

"Oh, I don't mind," I assured her. "I'm not bashful." I removed my trousers and folded them neatly.

"But you don't understand. Mr. Gunner. MR. GUNNER!!!"

A collective gasp pulled the walls inward as I slipped my undershirt over my head.

"Please! Mr. Gunner," Nancy Nice pleaded. "Don't take your clothes off. PLEASE!!!"

"But I thought you had to take my picture for your magazine."

"We do, Mr. Gunner. But the picture we're talking about is for the Army recruiting posters. You know, the one where several persons pose, with the uniforms on, that announces that the 'Army wants to join you?'"

"What about the other kind of picture?" I asked.

"Don't call us, we'll call you," Nancy Nice sighed.

Incentive awards program pays off

Success of the Presidential cost reduction campaign in 1975 has led to its extension through May 5, 1976. The campaign has resulted in about $50.4 million in savings since it was announced in May 1975.

The cost reduction campaign focuses on use of the incentive awards program to cut costs in federal agencies. President Ford will congratulate military or civilian personnel who submit suggestions or recommendations resulting in first-year savings of $5,000 or more.

So if you see a better and less costly way of doing things where you work, submit your suggestions now. We'll all be money ahead and you may get a personal letter from the President thanking you for your efforts. (ANF)

197th Avn flies to Ft. Carson

By Fred A. Easterling

"Steel Scorpion you are cleared for take off," radioed the air traffic controller at Lawson Army Airfield last Monday morning.

This short message signaled the beginning of 'Operation Eskimo' for the 197th Avn Plt, 197th Inf Bde as they departed for Ft. Carson, Colo. and two weeks of survival, mountain flying, and cold weather training in the Rocky Mountains.

The trip took two days and the helicopters refueled at eight different locations while enroute to the training area.

"We have prepared for this operation for three months," commented CW2 Norman, 197th Avn Plt operations officer. "The crew chiefs have prepared the five OH-58s and one UH-1 that we are going to be using in this exercise and the pilots have done their preparation for this type of mission."

SP5 Allen Edwards, one of the Avn Plt crew chiefs, expressed his feelings about the trip just before they left. "We are all excited about this training that we are about to be a part of. I have always wanted to learn more about survival under difficult circumstances. Now we'll be able to use our own equipment in this exercise. I suppose this type of operation brings out the adventurous spirit in all of us."

VA questions and answers

Q — I plan to buy a home with my GI loan. At this time my income might not be enough to entitle me to the amount of loan I would like to obtain. Will my wife's income be considered also?

A — The VA now gives full recognition to income of both veteran and spouse in determining ability to repay the loan.

Q — If a veteran who is receiving VA pension dies in a private hospital, will the VA pay transportation costs to place of burial?

A — No. The VA provides this benefit only if the veteran dies while in a VA hospital or while being treated at VA expense.

Q — I am a widow of a veteran and a veteran in my own right. Can I receive a veteran's pension and a widow's pension at the same time?

A — Yes, assuming you qualify for both.

Medal of Honor winner

A Medal of Honor recipient has been assigned to the 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigade at Ft. Benning.

SSG James Bondsteel, an instructor with the Communications Section of the Special Subjects Committee Group, was awarded the medal for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity during action at An Loc Province, Vietnam in 1969.

Bondsteel comes to Benning from Ft. Riley, Kan., and resides with his wife and two daughters at 227 Collins Drive, Columbus.

NCOES to be upgraded

Officials at TRADOC, other major commands, and MILPERCEN are now analyzing details of a plan that will upgrade the quality of basic NCOES training and instruction and allow a greater number of E-5s — including those in the combat support and combat service support fields — to participate in the revised program.

The plan, which already has been given concept approval, calls for relocating all combat arms basic NCOES instruction from five TRADOC service schools to division/installation NCO academies. This would establish common training sites for both the combat arms primary and basic courses.

Even more important, however, is the wide-ranging prospect of improved professionalism throughout the NCO corps:

- The relocations would allow nearly five times as many combat arms E-5s to attend and benefit from training which emphasizes the duties and skills performed at grade E-6 (skill level 3).

- Tradoc service school instructors would be assigned to conduct combat arms basic NCOES at the NCO academies. Local commanders would be able to influence course content by adjusting the new program to fit the precise needs of NCOs from their units.

- E-5s selected to attend combat arms BNCOES would continue to benefit from improved training, yet they would be required to spend less time away from their units.

The approved plan also takes into account the training needs of junior NCOs in the combat support and combat service support fields by permitting appropriate TRADOC service schools to introduce a series of formal primary technical courses (PTCs) in each combat support and combat service support field. The level and intensity of instruction in these new service school courses for technicians would compare with that given their contemporaries from the combat arms who attend the primary and basic NCO courses.

The changes tentatively are planned for the first six months of FY 77. This will give DA, TRADOC and other agencies enough time before formal implementation to insure the changes are compatible with the Enlisted Personnel Management System (EPSM), and to consider all suggestions and ideas for refinement which are being solicited from major commanders. (ANF)

New cars posing problems overseas

With many Benningites leaving for posts all over Europe, those with new cars are being alerted that 1976 Ford Motor Company autos equipped with catalytic converters will pose a major problem if taken overseas.

Ford Motors has advised DoD that its '76 models are equipped with emission control systems that make converter removal and reinstallation a time-consuming, complex — and, therefore, expensive operation.

Modification of '76 Ford autos before shipment overseas is not a practical way of maintaining a vehicle in line with U.S. emission standards so that it can be brought back into the states, DA transportation officials caution. Furthermore, it appears converter replacement service overseas will not be available.

For overseas sales, Ford intends to let new car buyers purchase extra converters — at manufacturer's cost of $50 — for installation at the owner's expense when the car is returned to the U.S.

DA is negotiating with the Environmental Protection Agency and Ford on ways of accommodating service members who bought '76 Ford vehicles in the U.S. If the negotiations are unproductive, service members will have to follow the same procedure as private citizens before they can bring the cars back into the U.S. — posting of a cash bond with U.S. Customs until the car meets federal emission standards.

Other '76 autos also will pose problems in preparation for shipment overseas and on return to CONUS. Servicemembers shipping '76 catalytic converter-equipped cars overseas should have the converter removed before the vehicle is operated overseas. Removed converters should accompany the car for replacement when brought back into the states.

The catalytic converter problem arose with 1975 model autos which require unleaded gasoline. Use of leaded gas — the only kind available overseas — destroys the converter, although it does not impair operation of the car. Owners of '75s were advised to bypass or remove the converter before shipment overseas so the car could be brought up to U.S. emission standards when re-entering the states.

Soldiers shipping catalytic converter-equipped cars overseas should contact their local transportation office for more information. (ANF)

34th Med erects monument to black musician

By Bill C. Walton

The placing of a headstone on the unmarked grave of a famous American signaled the completion of a two-month project by the Race Relations Section on the 34th Med Bn on February 10.

At a ceremony at Westmoreland, an estate owned by Mr. Frederick Dismuke, located east of Columbus, a headstone on the grave of Thomas Wiggins (1843-1908), a world famous blind, black musician known as Blind Tom, was unveiled. Participating in the unveiling ceremony, which was attended by all commanders in the 34th Med Bn, in addition to other interested personnel, were LTC Donald R. Hull, commander of the 34th Med B, Mr. Frederick Dismuke, Mrs. Enora Walker, niece of Thomas Wiggins, and three great nieces, Mrs. Carrie Ford, Mrs. Julia Lee and Mrs. Hazel Byrd.

According to some local historians, Blind Tom was probably the most famous person to ever come from the Columbus area. He was a self taught musical genius and could reproduce almost any sound or music that he heard. His concert career began in Columbus when he was young boy. He played before royalty in Europe in addition to most large cities in the United States, and amazed crowds wherever he played. He had a repertoire of over 7000 pieces of music, including over 1000 lengthy classical pieces and many songs, which he composed.

Scientists and musicians of note all over the world were asked to examine Blind Tom and render opinions. All said much the same thing. He was a "genius", a "prodigy", a "phenomenon". He was a man of such outstanding musical talents that, were the record not so well documented, we could scarcely believe the scope of his achievements. Tom was noted for his amazing memorization and repetition. As with many other blind persons, Tom's sense of smell was highly developed. In a 1946 interview of a great nephew of his, Livous, he told how his great uncle could recognize anyone he had met before without hearing his voice. All that was necessary was for him to smell the back of their hand and he could instantly recognize the person.

Tom, sightless from birth, was born into slavery outside Columbus. At an early point in his life his family passed into the hands of General James N. Bethune, who later became Tom's manager and the Bethune family took care of Tom in his later years when he could no longer perform. He died in Hoboken, N. J. in 1908.

The Bethunes wanted to bury Tom in the family plot in Linwood Cemetery in Columbus but permission was refused, some accounts say because an ordinance prohibited burial of blacks in that historical Confederate cemetery. CPT Oliver P. Poe, then owner of Westmoreland, permitted the remains to be buried in the West private cemetery as a favor to the Bethunes. His grave was marked with a field stone at the head and feet. Research indicates several attempts to have his final resting place properly marked had been made with no success until now.

Tree planting highlights Arbor Day celebration

An Arbor Day celebration will be conducted by the 34th Med Bn in conjunction with Theme IV of Ft. Benning's Bicentennial Activities today at 10 a.m. on York Field.

Arbor Day is a day dedicated to the preservation and usefulness and beauty of trees. It is also a day when the nation's dead have been honored by the planting and dedicating of trees as living monuments to their memory.

MG Willard Latham, post commander and host of-ficier for the festivities will participate in planting the ceremonial tree at the northeast corner of York Field.

Honor guard platoons from the U.S. Army Infantry School (USAIS) 197th Inf. Bde and the 36th Engr Gp will participate in the ceremonies. The 283d Army Band will provide musical entertainment.

Also at the ceremony, awards will be presented to the representatives of ten family groups that have earned first place achievement awards for their exceptional efforts in the Bicentennial Theme I, Phase II program.

The President of the United States traditionally plants a tree annually to observe Arbor Day.

Following the ceremony, troops from the 197th, 34th Med Bn and 36th Engr Gp will move out to the Davis Hill area to plant approximately 1500 trees.

Tomorrow Boy Scout troops on post will plant approximately 500 trees on the English and Roosevelt Ranges.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held in Marshall Auditorium and the tree planting will be held at a later date.

Money talk slated

By Betty Zimmerman

"Don't work for money, let money work for you" is to be the topic of a speech by Doctor Stewart E. Fason at Marshall Auditorium, noon on February 25. It is open to the public.

The Community Services Division of Columbus College and the Ft. Benning Recreation Services Office are co-sponsoring the 50-minute talk by this millionaire who made his first bundle in real estate, more in the commodity and stock markets, and recently added 800,000 in the corporate bond market.

Dr. Fason says it's easy. All anyone needs is a willingness to spend extensive time with boring detail and utilize the knowledge gained with total emotional detachment.

Room inspections are an important part of discipline. They also provide experience to the candidates in the proper methods of conducting inspections when they are in leadership roles.

Bayonet drill is but one of the many opportunities provided OCS candidates to experience hands-on training.

Pugil stick competition is a safe and practical way gain proficiency in the techniques of bayonet fighting.

Two hours of study each evening is a mandatory requirement for each candidate followed by a good night's sleep in preparation for another demanding day.

By Betty Zimmerman

Army training is rapidly changing in pace with the tremendous changes in educational technology. The Army Officer Candidate School, now called the Immateral Officer Candidate School (BIOCC), conducted at the U.S. Infantry School is one area where major changes are taking place.

Officers are commissioned at 22 instead of 23; but then they must complete 14 officer branch basic courses before they are considered branch qualified.

Ft. Benning's 5th Bn., TSB, has the only male officer candidate program. OCS programs at other service schools were closed effective April 1973.

"The days of scrubbing the floors, cleaning toothbrushes and useless formations at night are gone," emphasized the commander, LTC Dick LeClere. "The harassment and unrealistic training has continued. We are here to prepare these men to be leaders. They will be 'Tall' and learn how to do a job in a short period of time."

Mental stress is still an important part of BIOCC, but the curriculum changes will contribute significantly to the development of the candidate.

CS

Candidates are busy from reveille to retreat. There is the important classroom time, the chance to work with the tools of the trade, extensive homework, leadership training and normal garrison duties. In addition, each candidate is required to study two hours each night.

Every candidate spends more time in hands-on training, performing in the field environment and taking part in more basic skills, such as bivouacs, road marches and dismounted drill. Physical training is important and every officer is required to be as equally efficient and physically competent as his men.

"The key to success in this professional program is the tactical officers," declares LTC Le Clere. They observe the candidates daily and personally mold them by critique, counseling, and example. We very carefully screen and select each tactical officer assigned and now have the ratio of one tactical officer to 20 students."

Additional classes in social amenities peculiar to the officer corps are now being taught to these future officers. Subjects such as personal finance, social functions, etiquette and other personal know-hows are included.

All together, every effort is being made to develop and train capable, self-assured and well-prepared officers with the Ft. Benning stamp of excellence.

Cleaning weapons is but part of a typical day. Rifles are cleaned after each use.

Future officers must be in top physical condition and running is an integral part of their athletic curriculum.

WAC to ride Freedom Train

An enlisted woman in HHC, 197th Inf Bde has been placed in a position of honor that no other WAC on Ft. Benning has ever experienced before.

PFC Annette E. Keene was selected from many potential candidates to represent the post in an upcoming tour with the American Bicentennial Freedom Train.

Keene, a native of Tampa, Fla., got the chance to go before the Freedom Train selection board last week, when it was discovered that a new Freedom Train representative for Ft. Benning had to be selected due to ill health suffered by the original representative.

"I had heard about the Freedom Train many times," said Keene, "So when the opportunity for me to become a representative rolled around, I quickly grabbed at it. It's the most exciting thing that's ever happened to me."

To be eligible to be a Freedom Train candidate, soldiers must be in pay grades E-3 through E-5.

"I was really nervous a few days before I went before the Freedom Train selection board," PFC Keene continues. "But it all went away on the day of the board and I just walked right in and gave it my best."

PFC Keene was judged on a variety of things before the Freedom Train selection board, with emphasis placed on such things as general knowledge of military subjects, current events, individual attitude, and appearance.

PFC Keene will be traveling on the Freedom Train for approximately 45 days, as the train and its valuable cargo of artifacts, documents and displays significant to the birth and being of this country conducts its tour of 76 United States cities.

"This is really a great, great honor for me," PFC Keene concluded. "It's nice to be able to take part in an experience as thrilling and historical as our nation's bicentennial, and since our Army has played such a huge part in the building of our nation, I'm more than proud to represent a part of that Army by riding on the Freedom Train."

Army chief lauds resettlement

Army Chief of Staff GEN Fred C. Weyand has congratulated Army personnel for a job well done in 1975 with the Indochina refugee program and orphan evacuation. Resettlement of the last group of Indochina refugees on Dec. 20 marked the end of the Army's role in resettling persons uprooted during the fall of South Vietnam.

In "Operations New Life," "New Arrivals" and "Babylift," Army personnel cared for more than 1,800 orphans at Ft. Benning, Ft. Lewis, Wash., and the Presidio of San Francisco.

Almost 73,000 refugees at Ft. Chaffee, Ark., and Ft. Indian-town Gap, Pa., were resettled during an eight-month period. Benning units were present at both of these centers.

Weyand commended Army teams for the compassion and efficiency with which the refugee resettlement was accomplished. The Chief of Staff also noted the orderly phase-down of operations. Weyand asked commanders to extend his personal congratulations to persons who took part in the successful completion of the "most urgent and unusual undertaking."

He said, "Their responsiveness and efficiency have brought credit to the U.S. Army and the American people."

Year to become decade

International Women's Year (IWY) didn't end in December — it has been extended to become International Women's Decade, 1975-85.

The World Plan of Action, which was adopted by participating countries at the IWY Conference in Mexico City last summer, looks ahead to national action over the 10-year period. This sustained, long-term effort hopes to achieve the objectives of International Women's Year:

Equality, Development and Peace.

Already IWY Committees and other groups that have studied the World Plan have set out their goals and begun work on the first five-year section.

For more information on IWD, write the National Commission for the Observance of IWY, Room 1004, State Department, 2201 C Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20520. (ANF)

Dear Customers and Neighbors:

I want to take this opportunity to acquaint Columbus, Fort Benning, and the surrounding area with a new neighbor, HERITAGE MOTORS, LTD.

Heritage Motors is the only authorized dealership for sales, service, and parts for Mercedes Benz, Peugeot, and Mazda automobiles in Columbus. That's right! There is no more Bill Martin Foreign Cars. That dealership has been purchased by Heritage Motors and moved to 1445 First Avenue (formerly occupied by Cliff Averett Buick-Cadillac) as of December 8, 1975.

The owners of Heritage Motors are Cliff Averett, President, and Richard Averett, Vice President and General Manager.

Heritage Motors' new home affords you, our Customer, a nice comfortable showroom, ample parking, and better equipped Service and Parts Departments.

In the Sales Department, we have some very familiar faces to Mercedes Benz, Peugeot, and Mazda customers. Al Marshal and Joe Prescott moved with the dealership, and Ben Bentfeld has joined our staff as Used Car Manager. In Service and Parts we have had a much needed face lift. Ed White, with years of experience as a Mercedes and Mazda technician is Service Manager. Mike Bodnar with experience in automobile repair, is our new Parts Manager.

Service is the key to a successful new car dealership, and to be the absolute best is our only goal. Our mechanics are factory trained and conscientious individuals.

In order to better acquaint you with our dealership and our products, we are having a GET ACQUAINTED SALE and a drawing for 175 gallons of gas. Our Service Department will also have some special offers for you. For details see below:

*Sincerely,
Richard Averett*

Ordinarily, a hospital zone is expected to be a relatively quiet area, but on January 29 the silence around Buena Vista's Marion Memorial Hospital was temporarily shattered as an Army Helicopter from the 498th Med Co 34th Med Bn came in for a landing.

The medevac copter had not come on an urgent mission. It brought in a team of specialists to brief town's medical staff and local officials on the Army's Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) Program. A group of 50 to 60 persons, including Mayor Boyce Hanner, and Hospital Head Administrator Johnson Henson were in attendance at the meeting.

CPT Lynn Rasmussen, Operations Officer of the 498th, began the briefing. He explained the basics of the MAST Program covering military assets available to the civilian community as well as the program's limitations. The captain emphasized the point that success of the MAST program depended heavily on timely and accurate coordination between the civilian community and the military unit.

Mrs. Debbie Yates, of the Columbus Medical Center, spoke next. Her talk concentrated on the subject of inter-hospital transfer of infants. A large percentage of MAST missions flown by the 498th Med Co involve the transfer of critically ill infants from outlying areas of Georgia and Alabama to the Medical Center's Infant Intensive Care Unit. Mrs. Yates also demonstrated the specialized isolet used for life support while the infant is on board the helicopter.

The meeting concluded with an invitation by the medevac crew for interested persons to inspect their aircraft and equipment. For many, this was their first close-up look at a helicopter, which gave rise to several questions by the group.

As the helicopter noisily took off for its return flight to Ft. Benning, many of the spectators realized that the next return of the medevac would not be a "dry-run." Instead, it might well be a life or death mission whose success could well depend upon what had been learned that day.

SP5 Edgar Muriel, 498th Med Co, 34th Med Bn explains the use of medical equipment used by MAST personnel to Buena Vista Mayor, Mr. Boyce Hanner.

Pacifiers recalled

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) has issued a recall for three styles of water-filled pacifiers-gum soothers.

The Food and Drug Administration reported that water used to fill the items contains a compound that can cause vomiting if the pacifiers or gum soothers are punctured and the liquid ingested.

Manufactured by Reliance Products of Woonsocket, R.I., the items are style 550 Nuk Orthodontic Gum Soother (pacifier), style 559 Protecto-O Gum Soother and style 565 Protect-O Cool Ring Gum Soother (a nine-piece ring).

Exchange customers who may have purchased one of the items that is being recalled may return it to the nearest AAFES retail outlet for a replacement or refund.

Fowler named top soldier

SP4 Ron Fowler

An information specialist and frequent contributor to The BAYONET has been selected the 197th Soldier of the Month for February.

Sp4 Ron Fowler, whose name appears weekly within the pages of this newspaper, was chosen the top troop for the 'Forever Forward' brigade.

Being on a winning team for SP4 Fowler is nothing new. It started long before he became a 197th Inf Bde Unit of Choice enlistee. Prior to entering the Army Fowler attended Tabor City High School in North Carolina where he played football, basketball, and baseball.

While he was a team member the school was selected All-Conference in football for three years. During his senior year he was picked as one of the Coach's-All-American-Players by the N.C. High School Football Coaches Association.

Fowler graduated from high school with honors in June 1974 and entered the Army in November.

He was chosen Trainee of the Cycle during Basic Training at Ft. Knox, Ky., and, during Advanced Individual Training (AIT) at Ft. Gordon, Ga., Fowler was again at the top, graduating fifth in his class.

"It was a challenge to win the Soldier of the Month competition, but my wife Karen supported me all the way," commented Fowler. "It takes some help and understanding to meet a challenge and Karen has provided both."

Attrition rate may avert losses

Post to cut 270 civilian jobs

Although 270 civilian jobs at Ft. Benning will be abolished by Sept. 30, 1976, as a result of a budget cut and reduced manpower requirements, it's possible that none of the 4,600 Department of the Army civilian employees now employed on post will be separated.

About 250 of the jobs will be abolished by June 30 and the remainder by September 30, according to Arthur E. (Gene) Medlock, Post Civilian Personnel Director.

Medlock believes job vacancies created by resignations and other causes will compensate for the 270 jobs being abolished. However, employees affected must be willing to accept other jobs, including some of lower grades.

Medlock said that if an employee's current job is abolished, he or she will be given the opportunity to fill one of the existing vacant spaces that are authorized. "In some instances," Medlock said, "the displaced person may face a pay adjustment, but at least he or she won't be out of work altogether." Other employees, he added, will simply be transferred from one position to another at the same grade level, thus retaining their present level of income.

"We hope to avoid anyone having to leave," Medlock said. "If the employees affected are both capable and interested in other jobs, every effort will be made to retain them to fill current vacancies. Our goal is a job offer for each person and, hopefully, retention of all."

Medlock said personnel records will be reviewed to determine exactly which individuals will be directly affected by the reduction. According to Medlock, seniority is the primary consideration in determining those individuals to be affected. Employees will be notified before April 1.

197th shooters top competition

By Betty Zimmerman

The USAIC Service Rifle, Pistol and Machinegun Match hit Ft. Benning with a bang last week.

The red flags were flying at McAndrew, Easley and Phillips ranges, where nine rifle teams with 10 members each, eight pistol teams with eight members each, and nine machinegun teams with two members each competed in head-on competition. A few individuals also entered the shoot-offs.

The 197th Inf Bde blasted their way past all shooters to make a clean sweep of the marksmanship competition. The matches were conducted for three primary reasons:

To select the best shooters at Ft. Benning other than the professionals in the U.S.

Auction slated

A local auction sale will be held at Ft. Benning on March 11, 1976.

Bidder registration begins at 8:00 a.m., with the sale commencing at 9:00 a.m. at the Property Disposal Office in Bldg. 467. The general public is invited to attend.

Benning during an inspection period.

World prayer scheduled

"Education for all of life" is the theme for this year's World day of Prayer, to be sponsored here by the Protestant Women of the Chapel, March 5.

The program material was prepared by the Church Women United from Latin America and reflects the concern of Latin American women for education in all countries.

The special guest speaker for the service, slated to begin at 1:00 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel, will be Rev. Francis Scott, a Presbyterian minister from Birmingham, Ala., and a former missionary to China.

For additional information, contact Mrs. John L. Waldrop at 544-4594 or 545-2366. The general public is invited to attend.

OCS schedule announced

OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. TO 6 P.M. MONDAY NIGHTS TILL 9

Smoky issue aired from both sides

By Michael Livengood

"Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

Isn't it amazing that even though this blunt warning has been stamped on every cigarette pack and advertisement for years, more people are smoking today, and smoking more?

It appears that smokers will do their thing no matter how severe the warnings become. They have their needs and desires, but so do the non-smokers. As a result, there has been an increase in no smoking areas being designated throughout the Ft. Benning installation. There is justice in this action, but both sides of the issue need to be looked at carefully.

Beginning in the mid-sixties, there has been a steady stream of information and admonition from the Lung Association and other health groups to discourage smoking. Cigarette advertising has been banned on TV. Yet people keep on puffing.

Why?

There are a multitude of reasons why, but simplistic answers are suspect. There is no one reason why anybody does anything, even though we like to think there is.

We can, however, get a strong clue to the source of the problem in a largely overlooked observation in the Surgeon General's initial report: "The overwhelming evidence points to the conclusion that smoking, its beginning, habitation and eventual discontinuation is to a large extent psychologically and socially determined."

One clear motivation for smoking is that it meets some inner need. The smoker gets some real or related pleasure from smoking or some relief from tension. That positive gain is, for many, more than enough to offset any fear of an unknown and un-ceratin future cancer or heart disease.

Smokers are eternal optimists. "It won't happen to me." Others are fatalists. "I'm just as likely to get hit by a car." In either case, the anxiety about a future health problem can't compete with the immediate tension level which promotes the urge to light up right now.

No longer must the non-smoker sit through a smoke-filled class, or breathe what he believes are dangerous fumes as he leisurely shops in the PX. He can now choose to a degree, the level of exposure to cigarette smoke that he desires.

The current rules concerning smoking on the Ft. Benning complex are designed to accommodate both the smoker and the non-smoker. Both have a legitimate right to their own particular needs and desires. Try to recognize the rights of the other person, and we can cease to worry about whether or not the smoking rules are fair.

Do your own thing and let the other guy do his, in his own way.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"I only play bridge for fun," I laughed hesitantly as I gathered thirteen cards and fanned them out. The hostess who had invited us to her bridge party smiled sweetly from across the table.

"Don't worry about it," the gentleman on my left chuckled. "We all play for fun. Don't we, Helen?"

"Walter, as long as I'm not playing as your partner it is fun," Helen, my partner, answered. She nodded at Walter. "He's my husband."

I nodded and looked at my cards. I held nothing higher than the ten of diamonds. Swallowing the lump that was lodged in my throat, I said: "It's been years since I've played bridge. I hope I haven't forgotten too much."

The lady on my right bid.

"My partner says one heart," Walter mused softly while glancing over his cards.

"We heard her," Helen answered.

They all looked at me. "Ah, I pass," I responded.

"My partner bid one heart," Walter repeated.

"Walter," Helen groaned.

"Two spades," Walter snapped.

"Three no trump," Helen countered.

"Four clubs," Walter's partner answered.

Desperately trying to recall what Mr. Goren had instructed on replying to a bid of three a mental light flickered and I charged: "Four diamonds."

"Four diamonds," Walter stated.

"That was my partner's bid," Helen said coldly. She looked at me and I thought I detected her upper lip curling.

"Double," Walter bid.

"Four no trump," Helen spat.

"Double," Walter's partner sang.

Helen was in a jam and it was my responsibility, as her bridge partner, to extricate her. "Five diamonds," I assisted.

Walter choked on his drink and coughed rackingly. "Double," he sputtered.

"Five no trump," Helen strongly announced. Her eyes were red around the rims and her nostrils flared. "I bid FIVE NO TRUMP," she repeated. I knew then that she was giving me a signal but I didn't let on to the other players.

"Double," Walter's partner chirped.

They fell for the trap. "Pass," I smiled broadly.

"Pass," Walter guffawed.

"You pass?" Helen whispered inquiringly. I winked at her knowingly.

"He passed, Helen," Walter confirmed, "and you're doubled."

"Put your cards down, dummy," Helen ordered. I laid the thirteen pasteboards neatly in line. Walter's partner played the ace of hearts.

While still staring at my cards Helen's mouth slackened, her eyes glazed over. Her right hand trembled as she wiped a wisp of hair from her cheek.

"Play from the board, Helen," Walter prompted.

"Well," Helen sighed loudly when the last card of the hand was played and Walter had scooped it up on all the others on their side of the table. "You didn't have very good cards, did you?"

"He said he passed the first time around," Walter defended and cut the already made deck.

"Down five no trump," Walter's partner calculated, "and doubled, is nine hundred points."

I gathered the cards up Walter had cut and dealt them around. In my hand were the four aces, three kings, three queens, two jacks and the deuce of clubs.

"Sixty," I blurted loudly.

"Sixty?" Walter asked.

"I'm sorry," I apologized. "I lost my head. That bid was for pinochle."

Helen's gaze bored holes in my forehead. "What do you bid for bridge?"

"One diamond?" I ventured.

"Pass," Walter said quickly.

"One diamond, huh?" Helen tapped long glistening fingernails on the table. "Tonight's not going to be my night." She shook her head and passed. Walter's partner followed suit.

"We don't play ones," Walter ruled and tossed in his hand.

"May I see your cards?" Helen asked. I handed them to her, which was my second mistake.

Helen looked at them a long time before ripping them slowly into tiny shreds.

Just as the straight-jacket boys arrived tears began flowing down her cheeks. "He had thirty-three points," she giggled as they slipped the canvas around her shoulders. "A small slam and he bid one diamond," she screeched derisively as they led her away.

"We don't have any more cards," Walter said. "How are you with dominoes?"

SMOS tests suspended

Secondary MOS testing for soldiers through grade E-8 has been suspended until skill qualification tests (SQT) become available, according to a recent MILPERCEN message.

The suspension, effective with the February 1976 MOS test period, results from studies that indicate an extra heavy workload would occur at testing facilities adjusting to a combination of primary and secondary MOS testing, the new EER/SEER and the new SQT testing. More importantly, it will equalize SMOS testing requirements for all soldiers, until future SMOS policies under EPMS are formulated.

In an earlier MILPERCEN message, secondary MOS testing was permanently ended for all sergeants major. Another message temporarily exempted soldiers in grades E-6 and above of the requirement to acquire a new SMOS when their SMOS was eliminated through EPMS conversions.

Detailed policies governing award/designation, use and evaluation of SMOS under EPMS will be spelled out in a revised AR 600-200. (ANF)

Campaign nets $243 thousand

A total of $243,767.79 was pledged for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) completed at the end of 1975, according to COL Wallace F. Veaudry, chairman of the campaign coordinating group.

COL Veaudry said $192,184.35 of the funds went to the United Way Agencies in the Columbus and Phenix City area; $38,728.17 to National Health Agencies, and $12,855.27 to International Service Agencies.

COL Veaudry explained that the amounts distributed are based on the experience factors of giving of all the Federal military and civilian personnel in the Ft. Benning, Columbus and Phenix City area over the past several years, and includes the amount pledged by individuals to specify agencies.

Specific pledges this year totaling $50,921.72 were made as follows: $12,581.46 to various United Way Agencies, $33,310.84 to various National Health Agencies, and $5,029.42 for the International Service Agencies.

Of the total amount pledged, $40,850.03 was in cash for immediate distribution to the agencies concerned before expenses of $4,590.25 (campaign material, etc.) were paid.

The remaining $202,917.76 pledges was through the payroll deduction method and will be distributed as received, on a monthly basis from the various Federal finance offices.

Minority achievements deserve equal space

Commenting recently on the observance of Black History Month, H. Minton Francis, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity, emphasized that the historic contributions of black Americans should be in American history textbooks, where the heritage and contributions of all Americans belong. The historic interrelationship of all nationalities is one aspect of the "America for all Americans" theme of the 15th celebration of Afro-American history during February 1976.

Francis points out that a certain period set aside to recognize the involvement of blacks in American history might be a stop-gap measure to bring the contributions of black people to the attention of all people, but he doesn't believe it is the only way, or even the best way, to include blacks in the mainstream of America's cultural heritage.

"How many people, seeing that this is Black History Month," asks Francis, "just assume that if they are not black, it doesn't apply to them? Blacks have made the same contributions as other Americans, but we do not see the same result. History ignores the black contributions. Again, when we look at the patterns of American life, we see that it is not only the black contributions which have been ignored. All other non-white, non-European and, in fact, non-male contributions are similarly ignored.

"What is the answer? Do we follow Black History Month by Indian History Month, Hispanic History Month, Women's History Month, Chinese History Month and on and on until all Americans whose contributions have been ignored each have their own week designated to 'do their own thing'? If such were the case, Indians or women, in their own month, for examples, would begin to recognize their rightful place in the building of this country. But would it change the perception of that contribution by the other half of the population?"

During the past few years, much of the lost history of the minorities and women in this country has been uncovered. Francis believes that it is "time for each of us to begin to investigate our children's textbooks to see if these histories are being incorporated so that our children, at least, are exposed to the full panorama of our American culture and not left with an unfinished picture."

Francis says that his emphasis on putting minority history in the history books is closely related to the problems in equal opportunity and harmonious race relations in the Department of Defense and elsewhere.

Perpetual Edge

"A history which leads everyone to believe, minority and majority, male and female, that the white male was the achiever and the rest of us only onlookers — and that view is reinforced again and again, from first grade on through our whole education — can only lead to an inevitable bias.

For example, where there are three applicants for a job, a woman, a minority and a majority male, it is the majority male who is automatically perceived to be the achiever. Even though qualifications of the minority or the woman might outweigh that initial perception and secure the job, when it comes time for advancement, that minority or woman is again placed in competition with majority men who still have the perceptual edge of belonging to the group which history has taught us is the achieving group.

"The only way to break this cycle of institutional discrimination with lasting effect," insists Francis, "is to set the picture straight from the beginning: a resolve to insure that black history, and all other non-European histories, take their rightful place in American history.

No matter how you slice it

Commissary shopping saves bread

Compare prices

Commissaries have been a benefit to military families for over a hundred years. They were originally established for soldiers who were stationed far from civilization where the high cost of transportation combined with the low pay put daily staples out of reach for the average soldier. The Army paid for the shipping cost and then sold the food at cost to soldiers to feed their families.

That practice continues even though the pay of today's soldiers has become more comparable to civilians, and modern transportation systems move food items to the far reaches of the country without adding significantly to the cost. There are still some posts overseas and in places like Alaska where food costs on the commercial market would place a burden on today's soldiers.

Most soldiers agree that some money is saved by shopping at the commissary. An argument arises when an effort is made to place a dollar value on the savings. Some service families shop only at the commissary because they have always heard that the prices are cheaper. Other families shop for some items at the commissary and go off-post for other items because they are cheaper or better quality. And some service families only shop off-post because they feel the commissary savings are insignificant and would rather not endure the hassle of standing in line for a basket, getting a check cashed, checking out, and carrying the bags to the car.

The value of the commissary, like many other benefits, is difficult to assess, and the answer is rooted in the family's preferences, economic level, and their perception of the savings. If a service member thinks the savings are insignificant and shops elsewhere, then more importance is placed upon intangibles rather than money saved. But how much money is saved?

An answer to that requires much clarification. The figure often quoted is about 20 per cent. That means that soldiers could save about 20 per cent by shopping at the commissary. However there are many facets to every statistical diamond which must be studied with a jeweler's glass before the real value can be determined.

Every three years Army commissaries conduct a survey which compares prices on and off-post. A list of 89 items is drawn up and the prices of those items are studied closely to determine how much lower the commissary prices are. The results of the 1972 survey indicate an overall price differential of 32 per cent or a 24 per cent savings for shoppers at 75 Army commissaries in CONUS, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. As would be expected, a higher savings occurs in Alaska with an average of 34 per cent and Puerto Rico with 29 per cent. In Hawaii, although the savings were higher than the Army-wide average, the savings were actually less than some areas of the CONUS.

These surveys do not include the four per cent commissary surcharge or state and local taxes for goods bought at the local supermarket. In many areas those two offset each other. Also not included are the loss-leader or sale items designed to draw the customer into the supermarket or the reduced items at the commissary.

A study last year of ten commissaries using 103 items concluded that 24.55 per cent could be saved. Similar studies by the Navy and the Air Force indicate that their savings are in the same range. All of these studies do not consider surcharge or sales taxes. With the four per cent surcharge and sales taxes taken into account, the savings are between 20 and 22 per cent.

But how much of a savings do soldiers think there is? In January of last year a study was conducted of about 20,000 people to determine the perceived savings. The largest group, 28 per cent of the officers and 27.8 per cent of the enlisted members believed that the savings were about five to 10 per cent. The next largest group believed that the savings were between one and five per cent.

About 63 per cent of the officers and 74 per cent of the enlisted personnel believed the savings were zero or less than 10 per cent.

The actual savings can vary from none to as high as 30 per cent depending on the buying habits of the individual soldier's family. If the more expensive brand names in the commissary are compared with the house brands off-post, then there may be no savings at all. However if the lower price brands and items from the troop issue section of the commissary are compared with the more expensive brand names off-post then the savings can be significant.

There may be little taste difference between the more expensive brand name string beans compared to the supermarket house brand, but in some items, such as ice cream, the quality difference may be more apparent.

In the final analysis the individual soldier determines how much is saved by shopping at the commissary. The exact figure will vary from week to week and depend upon numerous variables such as the geographical location, distance traveled, and how often shopping trips were made.

If the Army wide average holds for the average soldier's family, a significant savings should be realized. A family of four who would spend about $50 per week off-post would save about $520 in a year shopping in the commissary.

A savings of over $500 in a year's time is definitely a benefit. (ANF)

Car rental rates lower for DoD

Lower car rental rates now are available to DoD personnel—military or civilian, active, reserve or retired—under a new agreement between the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) and National Car Rental Systems.

The new rates are under National's "simple commercial" (SimCom) program. The SimCom is a "dry" rate with unlimited mileage. By showing a DoD identification card or travel order, the traveler is charged a flat $19 daily rate for a compact car or $20 daily for a standard-size car. The traveler pays for all gasoline used.

SimCom offers progressive savings over regular rates when travel distances are 50 miles or more. Under National's previous rate structure, a compact car driven 70 miles would cost $28.50. Under the SimCom program the cost would be about $21.65, including fuel expenses. The present charge by two leading competitors for a compact car driven 70 miles is about $26.74 and $27.02.

No discount is currently being offered by National on Subcompact cars which are available to travelers at a flat rate of $13.95 a day with no mileage charge.

Trainers twist tankers' turrets

By Jerome Tubbs

Tank-busters from Ft. Benning's 1st AIT Bde turned the turrets on tankers from Ft. Knox on the tankers' own territory.

The Infantrymen took all honors at the graduation ceremonies of Drill Sergeant Class 76-4 at the U.S. Army Drill Sergeant School at the Armor Center.

The six-week class was composed of 89 students: 44 Infantry from Ft. Benning and 45 armor from Ft. Knox. Following the competition, the Infantrymen held all five Honor Graduate slots including the coveted Distinguished Graduate position.

"The hardest part of the course," said SFC Doyle JR. Cowden, the Distinguished Graduate, "was adjusting to the cold weather at Ft. Knox. We were not ready for it and it treated us unkindly."

"Going to Drill Sergeant School is much like going through basic training again," explained SFC Donald Newkirk, Honor Graduate. "In order to teach basic, you have to go through it again, this time from the instructor's viewpoint. In addition, the course was laced heavily with methods of instruction and stressed the personal military arts such as military bearing."

All Ft. Benning members of the class felt they had gained much professional expertise by attending Drill Sergeant School.

"It really helped me to see how basic my career field, Infantry, is to the Army," commented SFC Gary L. Conner, an Honor Graduate. "Basic soldiering, no matter what a man's career field, is Infantry."

In commenting on the outstanding performance of this first group of Drill Sergeant students from the newly activated 1st AIT Bde, COL Jack B. Farris, Jr., brigade commander, said:

"I expect this kind of esprit and duty performance to become a tradition in the Brigade. We will soon be the only source of Infantrymen in the U. S. Army, and our Army and country will accept nothing less than the best. We shall give them the best, and in order to do so we need the most outstanding drill sergeants and instructors. It appears we shall have them."

SOQ and SOY you can qualify

How does a Ft. Benning soldier prove that he is the best?

To compete in the Soldier of the Quarter (SOQ) Soldier of the Year (SOY) Program is one way.

The first step is to determine if you are qualified. Do you have a record of adverse character and job performance evaluations? Were you punished under Article 15 within the past year? Have you had any civil convictions to include AWOL or courts martial within the past year or current enlistment? Do you plan to ETS without intent to reenlist prior to the Soldier of the Year Selection? No? Good!

The second step is to appear before a board composed of the USAIC command sergeant major and the command sergeants major of the major units or their designated representatives. The USAIC command sergeant major will serve as chairman. The AG sergeant major will serve as recorder for the board.

The selection board will convene on the second Tuesday of the month following the end of the quarter, or at the call of the chairman. The board will judge you on military appearance, courtesy and bearing, general military knowledge, knowledge of duties required by your MOS, efforts on self improvement, your ability to communicate effectively, knowledge of current events, and superior performance of your duties.

Candidates selected to compete for the Soldier of the Quarter and Soldier of the Year awards will appear before the board in the Army green or tan uniform wearing all authorized awards and decorations. Those candidates selected as Soldier of the Quarter are not eligible for subsequent competition.

four Soldiers of the Quarter during the first week in August. In the event of an individual's reassignment, the Soldier of the Quarter who placed second will be named to complete the term.

Army no stranger to young couple

By Bruce Bergstresser

A husband and wife team in 2CSH, 34th Med Bn may be young but the couple is long on military experience.

PFCs Gerald and Irma Sheurer — both 19 — were involved in High School Junior ROTC programs while many students were involved in athletic activities in high school. Even before their entry into active service this team compiled a combined total of six years training time.

Sweethearts since their high school days, the pair enlisted in the Army through the Delayed Entry Program. They were married on June 7, 1975, after graduating from high school. They began active duty on July 9, 1975 as PFCs.

In Junior ROTC Irma attained the cadet rank of captain while Gerald became a company first sergeant.

The duo took their basic training at Ft. Jackson, S.C. where they were assigned to different companies. Mrs. Sheurer graduated on Oct. 3, 1975, one day earlier than her husband.

After completing basic training the pair was assigned to the AIT supply school at Ft. Jackson where they were awarded supply MOSS.

Gerald is interested in the Warrant Officer Flight Program while his wife is content to continue in her supply MOS, according to the couple.

During his off-duty time the man of the house likes to devote his time to sports activities while his wife enjoys practicing her skills in the culinary arts. They are both satisfied with their present jobs and attribute their rapid adjustment to military life to their junior ROTC and summer camp training.

Museum fund drive tops goal

More than $27,000 has been presented to the National Infantry Museum Association as a result of a fund drive held among all military and civilian personnel at Ft. Benning and the membership of the Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter, Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

tion of the United States Army (AUSA).

The money will be used to help in the renovation of the Hospital Annex building on post into a National Infantry Museum. The Department of the Army donated the historic building to the Infantry Museum Association last month.

Approximately $35,000 was raised during the drive by the sale of door prize tickets. Winners of door prizes valued at more than $7,000 were named at the AUSA George Washington Birthday Ball held February 20.

The drive exceeded expectations according to post and museum officials.

"The outstanding support by commanders and staff as well as the civilians and soldiers on post was reflected in the over-achievement of our original goal of $25,000," said COL Wallace F. Veaudry, Assistant Post Commander and chairman of this year's fund drive. Veaudry also added that the 197th Inf Bde contributed more than $10,000 as a result of its own fund drive campaign.

All told, 76 prizes were collected by lucky ticket holders. The first prize, a 1976 Buick Skylark, was claimed by 1SG (Ret.) John T. James; second prize, a Honda Motorbike, was won by Paul A. Sault; James Wesley garnered third prize, a 19-inch color television; fourth prize, a Savage 410-gauge shotgun, went to LTC John Tedesco; and Jimmy Deason won fifth prize, a Sharp Citizens Band radio; CPT Mike Starry, Michael Horne, Steven Hicks, Theo Peterson, R. M. Stevens and Eugene McCall received Waltham wrist watches.

Names of other winners are available at the Infantry Museum, phone number 544-4762.

Marksman set three records

The United States Army Marksmanship Unit's Running Target Team set no less than three new National Records during the Invitational Running Target Championships February 13-15.

Taking the overall championship was LT Louis Theimer with a total score of 1135, one point better than teammate MSG Edmund Moeller who finished at 1134. Theimer set a new individual record in Saturday's Standard Runs competition, with a score of 573, two points over the old mark, as Moeller also fired a 573 to become a co-holder.

In Sunday's Mixed Runs competition MSG Charles Davis, also of the AMU, shattered the existing National Record of 381 by 6 points as he posted a new record score of 387. Davis' score is also two points over the present World Record of 385 held by Russia's Valeri Postoianov. The third and final record came in team competition as the AMU squad of Theimer, Moeller, Davis and MSG Martin D. Edmondson combined for a new mixed team record of 1491, eight points over the old record.

Aviators receive 1000-hour pins

By Bill C. Walton

Awards are better given late than never. Five awards — earned in aircraft that are now obsolete — were recently given to 34th Med Bn aviators.

Sikorsky Aircraft, a division of United Technologies, has a long standing policy of awarding pins to individuals who fly 1000 hours as a crewmember in their aircraft.

A review of flight records by aviation operations personnel in the 34th Med Bn turned up five aviators who met this requirement long ago. A coordinated effort between operations personnel resulted in a letter to Sikorsky Aircraft to correct this oversight.

The 1000 hour pins were sent to the 34th Med Bn and were awarded to personnel listed below at Battalion Headquarters:

LTC Donald R. Hull 1000 hours UH-19 & CH-34.

LTC Ernest D. French 1000 hours UH-19 & CH-34.

CW4 Bill C. Walton 2300 hours CH-34.

CW4 Charles R. Wilhite 1000 hours CH-34.

SFC James D. Walter 1034 hours CH-34.

Unearned bonuses must be paid back

Enlistment or reenlistment bonuses must be paid if the enlistment terms are not fulfilled, according to DoD pay rules. Soldiers are liable for repayment of unearned bonus money if discharged voluntarily or for misconduct.

If a soldier cannot repay the full amount of the unearned bonus at separation, an indebtedness account is established and collection efforts continue by the Finance and Accounting Center at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Other federal and state agencies may be asked to assist in collecting the debt.

The process of collecting unearned bonuses is called recoupment. The number of recoupment cases has increased in the last six months. But DA officials point out the increase is probably the result of tighter control procedures, increased awareness of recoupment procedures and more bonus recipients in the Army. (ANF)

Post ruggers rally to rout Auburn

The Ft. Benning Rugby Football Union Club defeated the Auburn Rugby Club, 24-6, last Sunday to avenge an earlier loss to the Auburn Club.

The Auburn "War Eagles" scored early in the contest when an Auburn player fell on a ball mishandled by the Benning side. The chilly weather and early "War Eagle" score did not daunt the Benning team as Lynn Moore led them to storm back with a 30-yard run to tie the game, 6-6.

The Benning scrummage repeatedly won the ball and got it out quickly to the backs, as Auburn never controlled the game again and threatened to score only once for the remainder of the game. Jack O'Conner made the second Benning Club score by intercepting a pass and running 60 yards.

Strong defensive plays of forwards Sam Pride, Bob Okeefe, Joe Newman, Tom Farmer, Jerry Stanwix and Carl Linke pushed the Auburn team back. The first half ended with Ft. Benning continually running the ball for large gains.

The Benning Club began the second half controlling the tempo of the game as hooker Steve Church and scrummage half Randy Curtis delivered the ball cleanly out to the hard running Benning back line.

The most exciting and crisply executed play of the game resulted in the third score for Ft. Benning. An excellent passing and running combination by Hank Schrader to Art Saldana to Moore to Pat Reynolds, back to Saldana, and then to Schrader culminated in a score from 40 yards out.

Schrader, the team kicker, shanked an attempted penalty kick for the goal. Alertly Saldana picked up the loose ball and ran it over for the score. Schrader converted his kicks after all four scores.

Team captain Jerry Stanwix summed up the Ft. Benning play "as well as any team in the south. The forwards won the ball consistently and the backs ran and passed superbly." The Ft. Benning Rugby Club is now 2-3 for the season. The club's next game is Saturday, February 28 against Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Rugby: a rugged gentlemen's game

By GARY HELMER

"Rugger" means rugby, and rugby means rugged and rough. Basically a brutal sport, yet gentled by a post-game camaraderie among the adversaries, rugby, the English form of football, has been described more as a way of life than just a game.

Ruggers, as rugby players are known, are a special kind of athlete. They play a bone crushing game by having physical contact without padding, substitutions, or time-outs, for two forty-minute halves. The half-time lasts for five minutes and the players cannot leave the field. There is only one referee to control thirty chaotic bodies in constant motion and he must be as rugged and enduring as the players themselves.

It obviously takes a hardy breed to play this rough, though gentlemanly game week after week and the Ft. Benning Rugby Football Union Club is a group of men that definitely falls under this label. Other than being members of one of the few area rugby teams and their love for the game, they have little in common. The roster includes clerk typists, tactics instructors, and Infantry officers. Their sizes range from 5'6" to 6'4" and they weigh anywhere from 140 pounds to 230 pounds.

Invented in 1823, rugby didn't begin growing in America until 1905. Many of the schools in California dropped American football and took up rugby, and this interest led to the forming of rugby teams for the 1920 and 1924 Olympics. Supposedly out-classed by the stronger European teams, the Americans beat the best rugby teams in the world and eventually captured the only two gold medals in Olympicc competition for rugby.

The emphasis in rugby is not the vicious tackling, that has so dominated American football for decades, but the finesse of scoring plays. An extremely hard tackle in rugby is the exception rather than the rule. As one member stated, "You would be the dirtiest, low-down guy in the world to take a cheap shot or make a vicious tackle on a guy, and then socialize with him after a game."

Although the game was meant to match man against man in hard, clean competition on the field, the real essence of the game is the sportsmanship and socializing that goes on after the game. There is no bitterness, no sullen resentment of defeat when the final whistle blows. The home team starts applauding the visitors and forms a victory lane for them to go through, shaking hands and congratulations are given to everyone. Then the visitors return the gesture and the fervor of the game is forgotten.

There is something for everyone in rugby, the old game that is the forerunner of American football; the rough, enduring play; the post-game camaraderie; or just sitting along the sidelines watching the game.

Big bass bagged to top tournament

By Denny Blankenship

CPT Bob Kramer, Company Tactics, USAIS, put together a two-day total weight of 16 pounds, 4 ounces to win the Post B.A.S.S. Club's Annual Tournament on Lake Seminole. The two-day affair drew many of Ft. Benning's top bass fishermen to the well-known bass haven on the Georgia/Florida border.

The first day saw Kramer far behind the leaders with only 1 pound, 15 ounces of fish. Later that evening, as he prepared for the next day's fishing, Kramer said, "Something was wrong today. I threw good baits but just didn't catch fish." He rummaged around in his tackle box for awhile and commented, "I have one bronze spinner bait blade. I'm going to put it on a spinner bait and try that." A few snips of his pliers and "There, that ought to do it. Now that should catch fish." And catch fish he did. Kramer had his limit of fish by noon the next day and continued to catch fish right up to weigh-in time. All were caught on the jury-rigged spinner bait.

Jack Tibbs Jr. also put together a second day surge to take second place with 15 pounds, 15 ounces. LTC Tom Ray, DTD USAIS, was the first day leader but fell off the pace the second day and ended up third with 12 pounds, 11 ounces. MSG Andy Patterson, 2d Bn AIT Bde, USAIC, received the big fish award with a 5 pound, 14 ounce whopper caught on a Spinner Bait.

The ladies met to discuss and plan activities for their group for the coming weeks.

Commandant's Reception

The officers and ladies of IOB 6-76 attended the Commandant's Reception for them at the Officers Club.

Leave, pass policy proven peerless

Military leave is one of the benefits of being in uniform.

"Benefits?" you might ask.

Yes, it is a benefit provided by public law. But because of its tradition with the military services, it is often taken for granted. Few soldiers understand the benefits of the Army leave and pass program.

Annual leave is accrued by a soldier at the rate of two and a half days per month which amounts to 30 days a year. That leave can be used pretty much as the soldier desires. Of course the leave must be approved in advance so the unit's mission does not suffer.

Occasionally, advance leave may be granted if sufficient regular leave has not been accrued. However, any advance leave used must be repaid before separation.

Emergency leave is not really a different category but a situation under which leave may be used. The difference is that emergency leave prohibits the soldier — usually those stationed overseas — with priority treatment in processing and transportation.

There is one other type of leave for which the soldier is not charged. Convalescent leave is used while the soldier is under medical treatment and not yet able to return to work. Convalescent leave does not have to be made up or repaid.

Two Choices

Passes are another benefit whose value is often overlooked. Passes come in two sizes — 3-day and 4-day. Commanders may issue passes for a variety of reasons — to recognize exceptional duty performance, to attend events consistent with military requirements, to meet problems connected with military service, to vote, or as compensatory time for long or hard duty.

The 3-day pass may include non-duty days but must also include at least one duty day and not exceed 72 hours. The 4-day pass must include at least two non-duty days and not exceed 96 hours.

How does military leave and pass policy compare with the policy for civilians who work for the government or in private industry? A comparison shows service members enjoy leave and vacation policies more liberal than those for most civilians.

Federal civilian workers with less than three years federal service get 13 days annual leave a year. After three years of service the civil servant earns 20 days per year. Only after 15 years of service does it jump to 26 days per year. They could build up one day of sick leave per month.

There is no valid means of comparing military-civilian sick leave policies because the military does not have such a policy. If a soldier is sick, the time off is not charged. The civilian, however, must save up unused sick leave as a cushion for the time it might be needed.

Public Realm

In the Washington, D.C. area — and in other metropolitan areas — most county and state governments use the Civil Service Commission standard for their leave and vacation policy. Once outside the realm of public service, the differences and the benefits of military service become more apparent.

A four-year private university typically grants its non-professional employees leave or vacation time based on length of employment. If less than six months, then five days of leave is granted the following year. Employees with six months to five years service earn 10 days of vacation; six to 10 years service earns 15 days; 11 to 20 years service earns 20 days; and over 21 earns 25 days of leave.

A major supermarket chain allows five days of vacation in the first two years and increasing to 10 days during the next three years. Employees with six to 10 years service earn 15 days, those with 10 to 25 years can have 20 days off and persons with over 25 years of active service with that grocery chain have 25 days of vacation each year.

An international computer manufacturer has a similar plan except some allowance is made for the age of the employee.

A soldier might argue that all these companies and agencies only charge leave or vacation time for work days. That is true. The military does charge leave over weekends and if a soldier took leave over two weekends during the year, four days of leave would be used during nonduty days. The soldier would be left with 26 days of actual time off the job.

An important point to remember is that no time is charged to sick leave, and a person working in private industry would have to work for 20 to 25 years for the same leave benefits enjoyed by the newest recruit in the Army.

Effective Feb. 10, 1976, a soldier cannot sell back more than 60 days of unused leave during his career. Payment for accrued leave made before this date will be excluded from the new ruling. This change may be looked upon as a loss of benefits by many but the intent of the leave policy originally was to provide time off for the soldier to give a diversion from the rigors of daily work.

Vacation is a time for rest and recreation but if it is saved up to sell back then it is not being used for its intended purpose.

Military leave without some means of comparison can be easily undervalued. By comparison, military leave policy is more liberal than most civilian programs. Military leave means 30 days off each year with full pay and allowances. Few civilian programs compare with that. (ANF)

Officers to get second chance

Officer promotion boards are tentatively set to begin meeting in March to reconsider all primary zone officers originally considered for temporary promotion to O-5, O-4, CWO-4 and CWO-3 by 1974/75 AUS selection boards.

The new boards' actions will have no effect on officers previously selected by the original boards and who have been promoted or await promotion.

Convening of the new boards follows Secretary of the Army Martin R. Hoffmann's recent decision to accept an Army Board for Correction of Military Records (ABCMR) recommendation granting additional promotion opportunities to officers who challenged their nonselection for promotion in 1974 and 1975.

The new selection boards, which will include reserve officer members, will receive the same letters of instruction the original boards received governing primary zone selections.

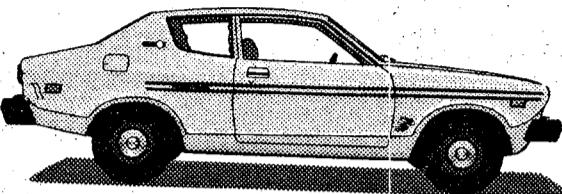

The records of all eligible primary zone officers which were reviewed by the original boards will be reconstructed as they appeared before those boards. This means documents — OERs, letters, etc., that would not have been included originally cannot be added.

The new boards' promotion recommendations — for selection or nonselection — on officers previously nonselected by 1974 or 1975 AUS boards will be reported to the ABCMR for its use in considering applications from previously non-selected officers for relief. DA officials expect the new boards' reconsideration will be completed by December.

Lists of officers not selected previously by any of the original promotion boards but selected by one of the new boards will be sent to the ABCMR. The lists will be made public concurrently and officers will be notified by DA letter.

Officers who consider themselves affected by this decision may apply now to the ABCMR for relief — or they may apply later after the lists are published and they have been notified by letter. Applications for relief should be submitted as outlined in AR 15-185. (ANF)

Insurance hoax explained by VA

The Veterans Administration and major veterans organizations have launched a joint effort to stamp out a hoax that has disappointed millions of veterans since it began in 1948.

VA is receiving thousands of telephone calls and letters weekly from World War II veterans who have been deceived into expecting dividends on GI insurance they allowed to lapse years ago.

The hoax has been recurring irregularly since 1948, and with each wave of letters it stimulates, VA explains to each applicant that dividends are payable only on policies that are kept in force. But the hoax is fueled anew every few years by the mysterious distribution of official-looking application forms complete with an address where dividends are said to be available for the asking. The bogus application alleges that dividends are payable even though premiums haven't been paid since 1945.

VA theorizes that the rumor may have its roots in a special dividend paid in 1950 and 1951. All payments on that program were ended in 1970 by a Congressional act stipulating "No claim by an insured for payment in case of a special dividend declared prior to Jan. 1, 1952, shall be processed by the VA, unless such claim was recorded within six years after such dividend was declared."

Another theory is that the rumor is fueled annually by VA's announcement of dividends for holders of current insurance policies. These annual payments are made automatically and no application is necessary.

New short-tour policy outlined, return assignment to be known

The Department of Defense has announced adoption of a new homebase-advanced assignment policy for personnel in grades E-5 to O-5 who receive overseas assignments to dependent restricted 12 to 13-month short tours. Personnel involved will be notified of subsequent CONUS assignments before they depart for the short tours.

In the past, enlisted soldiers have often completed the Enlisted Preference Statement (DA Form 2635) with only their next duty assignment in mind.

This policy change necessitates that individuals insure that their preference statement and DA form 2 reflect both CONUS and overseas areas of preference.

A revised preference statement is currently being printed and provides additional spaces for both the proposed location of dependents during the short tour and whether they currently reside in government, privately owned, or rental housing. These factors will be used by assignment managers in the assignment process.

Where possible, these individuals will be returned to the location of their current CONUS duty assignment. Implementation of this policy will be accomplished in two phases.

Phase one will apply to warrant officers and officers in grade O-5 and below who were issued overseas orders after Jan. 15, 1976, to 12 to 13 month short tour areas. For senior NCOs, pay grades E-6 through E-9, this policy applies to those departing after July 1, 1976, for a short tour in Korea.

Phase two concerns policy expansion to include senior NCOs departing after Oct. 1, 1976, for all short overseas tours. E-5s will be included under this new policy by the first of the year.

It's anticipated that many families, where the sponsor is homebased, will elect to remain at their current location rather than opting to move to another location to await the sponsor's return which continues to be authorized in accordance with Army Regulation 55-46. In this respect, DA is studying the idea of letting families in government quarters stay there until the sponsor returns from the short tour. These actions would reduce permanent change of station costs incident to family travel.

Requests for information concerning this policy should be directed to Headquarters, Department of the Army, Attn: LTC Johnson, or call Autovon 227-1012 or 227-2403.

Inannounced security inspections announced

By BETTY ZIMMERMAN

Physical security personnel will conduct unannounced security inspections of Army vehicles beginning March 15.

DAPE-HRE message O52132Z Feb 76 disseminated stringent requirements to be met in the securing of vehicles.

Ft. Benning Provost Marshal, COL Robert Reinke, intends to see that these security measures are implemented.

The requirements are that all Army vehicles in non-combatant areas will be secured with a locking mechanism when parked and unattended. This is in addition to any other security measures employed to protect vehicles.

Wheeled vehicles will be secured by engaging manufacturer installed door and ignition locking devices when available or by immobilizing the steering wheel with a chain and padlock.

The chain used for this purpose will consist of one quarter inch or thicker hardened steel links with one end permanently affixed to the vehicle. Secondary padlock, FSN 5340-158-3807 (with chain) or FSN 5340-158-3805 (without chain) will be used to secure the chain to the steering wheel spoke.

Tracked and/or armored vehicles will be secured by locking all hatches and similar openings. Padlocks specified above will be used when external locking devices are required.

The only vehicles exempt from this requirement are: vehicles actively employed in tactical exercises; and dispatched emergency, military-security police, courtesy patrol and interior guard vehicles for brief periods when response time is a critical factor in the successful performance of the operator's duties.

Vehicles having locally fabricated security devices already installed will not be modified to conform with this directive providing existing devices provide a similar degree of protection.

Vehicles will not be immobilized by removing integral operating parts and the installation of a master key operated locking system is prohibited. Stringent vehicle key control procedures will be implemented.

Donors save life

Ft. Benning personnel saved the life of a retired servicemember this week.

Martin Army Hospital sent out an urgent call for A-positive blood for a "bleeder." Within four hours, 50 pints were collected from concerned donors.

This was the second time in recent weeks that a call for blood received such a response at Ft. Benning. Over 100 pints were collected recently for the earthquake victims in Guatemala.

Ft. Benning has proven that it has a heart.

Reup rules misunderstood

It appears some soldiers on their initial hitch are not reenlisting because they do not understand reup rules.

According to DA officials, any first term soldier who has his CO's approval, who meets reenlistment criteria without waiver, has a high school diploma — or GED equivalent, and has an MOS score of 100 or better, may reenlist.

However, the Army is just as interested in reenlisting soldiers who may not meet all these requirements — such as those who have an MOS test score between 70 and 100. These soldiers — called group II first termers — have to submit a written request to the Year Group Management Division at MILPERCEN for authority to reenlist.

Group II soldiers should not consider themselves second class citizens. Army officials say soldiers were grouped according to Army need regarding maintenance of a balanced MOS structure and not an individual's quality level. Reenlistment from both groups, particularly Group II, are desired to meet FY 76 reup goals.

Upon reenlistment, the group II soldier may be channeled into skills that the Army needs. He cannot reenlist just for the sake of reenlisting — regardless of skill.

Many group II reup requests already submitted have been approved. Soldiers considering reupping should check with their career counselor or call SFC Henry C. Wooten, the USAIC reenlistment operations NCO, at 545-7387. (ANF)

Voting: a privilege, a responsibility

At one time or another each of us has had reason to disapprove of or even oppose an action taken by the governing elements of our society. Such was the case leading to the revolution undertaken by our forefathers which in effect established our Nation as it exists today. They created a system whereby we who follow them can express our disapproval without recourse to similar revolutionary means.

They provided us with the privilege of voting.

Periodic criticism is directed at this process for selecting American presidents. It is a time-consuming and very costly process. It is a system that includes state primaries, national conventions and national campaigns which encompass the better part of each national election year.

The system, perhaps, deserves some of the critical comment it attracts. But it also provides us with something most critics fail to mention. By the time election day arrives, each American voter has been furnished with a mass of information on candidates and issues and has been given ample time to make a choice — hopefully an informed choice.

No matter how many candidates announce their intentions, only one can win each party's nomination. Though as many as six or seven parties may nominate candidates, only the two chosen by our major political parties command significant attention by the electorate. By election day, the positions of these two on the major issues of the day should have been made "perfectly clear."

The American voter is the best prepared in the world to exercise what is not only a privilege but a responsibility. It is especially important that, this year, each voter use that privilege and fulfill his responsibility.

Voting officers are available in all major units on post to assist military members and their dependents to understand the basic mechanics of voting. Postcard applications for absentee ballots are available. However, no matter how much help is provided, the act of voting remains a matter of individual responsibility.

Excuses for not voting are many. Few, however, are valid. The very length of the American electoral process topples almost any reason the potential voter can dream up for refusing to exercise his privilege.

This is our Bicentennial year as well as a designated year for national elections. Perhaps voting is the most significant tribute we can make with regard to the Nation our forefathers created 200 years ago.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"Our newspaper carriers aren't receiving the credit due them, Gunner," my editor said over the telephone, "so I want you to go on a paper route and do a story about one of them."

"I don't need to go on a route, Boss," I laughed. "I used to be a paper carrier myself."

"Oh?" the editor questioned.

"Had a paper route in my hometown of Marshall, Texas, delivered the famous Marshall News Messenger."

"When?"

"From 1954 to 1956. I had over two hundred customers."

"For crying out loud, Gunner," the boss grumbled. "That was twenty years ago!"

I had no idea that editors can get so upset about one little ole assignment. I hurriedly scribbled down the place where I was supposed to report. "And don't forget your bike."

"You must be Mr. Gunner," a young girl said riding up at the newspaper drop off point. "I'm Marsha." She leaned her bicycle on its stand.

"Are you the carrier?"

"Did you expect someone else?" she asked.

"No, no, not at all. It's just that . . ."

" . . . I'm a girl," Marsha laughed dropping delivery bags onto the ground. "You expected a newspaper BOY?"

"Well, when I delivered papers, a girl

"The editor told me about that. Gee, I wasn't even born when you delivered papers."

"It really wasn't that long ago," I laughed weakly.

"Can you still ride a bike?"

"Certainly," I stated.

"Here, take this box of rubber bands and help me roll the newspapers. You take this bag and wrap it around the handle bar on your bicycle. You'll be tossing half the papers."

Finally all the papers were rolled and banded and stuffed into the delivery bags. We then loaded the bag onto the bikes. "You throw the papers at the quarters that are on the left side of the street and I'll throw on the right side," Marsha said.

"Okay," I nodded. "I got it. I throw on the left and you throw on the right. Which house do I throw the paper?"

"All of them," she said. "We deliver this paper to everyone who lives on post."

At my first house the paper landed in a puddle of water.

"Stop and go back," Marsha directed. "Put the wet paper in the trash can and leave a fresh one at the front door."

As I was leaving the paper by the door a lady behind the screen said: "Oh, hello. Are you the new delivery boy?"

"No, mam," I said. "I'm just helping Marsha today."

"Oh," she said, "that's good. I thought I was going to have to repeat my instructions for leaving my paper."

"I'm sure that won't be necessary, mam," I said.

In the next housing area I caught my trouser legs in the bicycle chain. The tiny beagle nipping my calf didn't help matters, either.

Two blocks later Marsha stopped.

"You missed a house back there," she said.

I turned my head looking for a paper lying in the yard. There was none. "I'll go back and leave one."

I stopped my bike and pulled a paper from the bag and raised my arm to toss it at the door. Two youngsters charged at me from the side of the building with toy machineguns hammering loudly. I managed to sling the paper onto the roof of the second story unit.

"Just throw another and come on," Marsha called. "We're way behind schedule."

"Why did you throw our paper on the roof?" one of the tots asked. "Momma, Momma," he yelled, "the man threw our paper on the roof!"

Pedaling quickly I caught Marsha at the corner. "I'm running low on papers," I huffed.

"I don't doubt it," Marsha answered. "That makes seven on the roof." She halted again and pointed at a house. "This paper must be placed on the porch."

Pulling one from the bag I propped the bicycle up and walked toward the house. "Watch out for the dog," Marsha warned.

Her words were still ringing in my ears when a huge German shephard bounded from the side of the building and leaped at me. Luckily its chain retained it at a safe distance. I flipped the paper onto the porch and trotted back to the street.

Later I called the editor. "I'll have a story to you about Marsha tomorrow," I said.

"Well, how was it?"

"Just as I imagined. Delivering papers hasn't changed in twenty years."

The Bayonet, March 5, 1976

Alternative offered to full-time soldiering

The Army offers excellent benefits for reenlistment, including bonuses, travel and education.

The Selective Reenlistment Bonus (SRB) system, for example, offers up to $12,000 to those in grades E-3 or above in certain fields. The soldier must reenlist for three years after completing at least 21 months of continuous active service, other than active duty for training.

Dreams of travel become a reality with the Overseas Area of Choice and CONUS Station-of-Choice Options. A yearly, 30-day paid vacation lets you travel even more.

The Army provides for your future by offering to pay up to 75 per cent of your college tuition. There are also close to 40 Army service schools across the country.

But if full-time soldiering doesn't suit you, there is an alternative, you know. One that many soldiers just don't think about. Why not be a civilian and a soldier too? You can fulfill that ambition by joining either the Army National Guard or Army Reserve. Usually, there will be at least one such unit within commuting distance of where you live. Most times you will have a choice of several local units. In every case, you will be needed.

Your Army skill, one in which you have become proficient, is being actively sought by the Army's reserve components. Both the Guard and reserve can offer you a job now. You may not enlist in the same MOS, but, if you are an E7 or below, you can be accepted at your same pay grade.

One weekend a month of duty (all day Saturday and Sunday) plus 15 days of summer training — is all that is required and you can sign for one year at a time. You get paid two days pay for every weekend drill day, plus a day's pay for every day of summer training, which means that you receive 63 days' pay for 39 days of work. And at your same base pay. During summer training, you also get the various quarters and subsistence allowances that you are receiving now.

Members of the Guard and Reserve are now fully covered under SGLI ($20,000). Monthly premiums are deducted from pay checks, just as they are now. And Guardsmen and Reservists may now shop any two days of the month in PXs. Spouses may accompany their service members to these locations but may not shop without them. During summer training periods, this restriction for the spouse is lifted and commissary shopping is authorized.

You can credit all those active duty days toward Reserve retirement. Guardsmen and Reservists officially retire when they reach age 60. At that time, they draw retirement pay, on a pro-rated basis, for the rest of their lives. Along with it come all the other full-time benefits.

For further information, contact SGM Leonard M. Brubaker in the Ft. Benning In-Service Recruiting Office, room 127, bldg 83.

BASS Club to clear Uchee Creek

The Ft. Benning BASS club will turn out in number Saturday at the Uchee Creek landing, but not to fish. This weekend is cleanup time on the Chattahoochee.

Approximately 25 members in 10 boats will gather at the landing at 8:30 a.m. to start collecting debris along the river from the Upatoi Creek area southward to River Bend. Participants are asked to bring rakes, gloves and other equipment to assist in the effort.

Club spokesmen say the weekend drive is part of the local organization's continuing effort to assist ecology and conservation. This effort will be considered a project for submission to the Georgia BASS Federation.

The Ft. Benning club, now consisting of 50 members, is appealing to the entire membership to take part in the weekend cleanup.

Post broadcaster takes DA award

SP5 Charles R. Farrell

A member of HHC, Hq Comd took second place in the television spot announcement category of the 1975 Keith L. Ware Award competition last month.

SP5 Charles R. Farrell, NCOIC of the Radio and TV Section of Ft. Benning's Information Office, entered a 60-second TV spot announcement into the annual DA worldwide print and electronic media contest. The announcement, entitled "The Army's Birthday," told of the festivities for the June 14, 1975 Army Bicentennial celebration at Ft. Benning.

"The fact that our small operation here can compete with million-dollar television networks in Korea and Europe amazes me," Farrell said.

The Ware Award was named after a major general who was killed in Vietnam in 1968 while commanding the 1st Inf Div. MG Ware was a medal of honor recipient in WWII and a former chief of information.

Farrell, 23, a native of Columbus, has held numerous broadcast positions, including a slot as program director of Radio Kunsan, a sub-station of the American Forces Korea Network. He has also worked at radio stations in the Columbus area, including WPNX, WHYD and WCLS.

Farrell graduated from Kendrick High School in 1970 and from the National School of Radio and Television Broadcasting a year later.

Re-enlistment bar explained

Some dudes believe that DA centralized promotion boards have a quota of reenlistment bars to pass out.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," says M. Sgt. Jim Hughes, an action officer in DA's promotion and separation branch.

Hughes explains that these boards look at the files of E6s and above, plus E5s with 11 or more years of service.

"Once a promotion board has made their selections for promotion, the board goes back and looks at the files of soldiers not selected to see how well they are performing," Hughes says.

As an example, Hughes says a soldier may have a 70-plus MOS test score but his EERs suggest he or she is not much of a soldier. Another soldier may have super test scores but a rough disciplinary record.

Will an Article 15 cause a soldier to be QMP'd? asked DA Scene.

"You have to look at the grade of the soldier being considered," Hughes answers. "Two Article 15s as an E8? I think a board would consider that seriously. On the other hand, if it's an E8 with two Article 15s -- say as an E5 and as an E7 -- that alone might not warrant a bar to reenlistment.

"The important thing is that, for whatever reason the board decides to issue a reenlistment bar, the board must say so and provide copies of those documents to the soldier so that he or she knows why the bar was ordered."

Once the selection board has decided to issue a reenlistment bar, the documents and decision are mailed to the commander of the soldier concerned.

Without telling the soldier, the CO can review the matter, the soldier's performance, and the CO can ask DA to remove the bar.

Most of the time, DA goes along with the commander.

If the CO decides to tell the soldier and give the soldier the documents and decision, the enlisted person can appeal.

The appeal must focus on those performance areas which the DA board felt were inadequate. The appeal must state what the soldier has done to correct or improve the situation. Help in preparing the appeal paperwork is provided by the commander.

Should the soldier feel his or her case cannot be supported strongly enough to have the bar withdrawn, immediate separation can be requested.

"If both commander and soldier efforts fail to get the bar removed, the soldier is on probation for one year from the date of the reenlistment bar," Hughes adds. "If the soldier does well on MOS tests and earns good EERs, the commander can again request removal of the reenlistment bar.

"The soldier who fails to hack it during that last year," says Hughes, "has had the course."

DA centralized selection boards make their decisions by applying the whole person concept. That's the yardstick by which selection for promotion is made and the same measuring process is applied in evaluating performance.

The Army's concern is quality. It can't be any other way.

Engine mechanic believes in tender loving care

By BILL C. WALTON

How many women can repair a 9,000 horsepower aircraft?

PFC Linda Elliott, 478th Avn Co., 34th Med Bn is one of the few. Her job is to help in the day to day maintenance of the T-73P1 turbine engines that power the ten CH-54 helicopters assigned to her unit. The CH-54 is the Army's largest helicopter.

"I feel lucky to be able to work on the CH-54 and be able to give tender loving care to its two 4500 horsepower engines," said Elliott. "At first there seemed to be mistrust from my fellow male mechanics. But after I demonstrated that I am capable of doing my job and am willing to learn from others they seemed to accept me as a person and a mechanic."

PFC Elliott enlisted under the delayed entry program in March 1975 and began active duty in August. After completing basic training at Ft. McClellan, Ala., she attended Turbine Engine Mechanic School at Ft. Eustis, Va. The only female in her class, she became the honor graduate and was promoted to her present rank.

Elliott, a native of Denver, comes from a racing-mechanic family (Evel Knievel is her second cousin). She went from repairing farm machinery as a little girl to rebuilding the 1966 Corvette she now owns.

Her ability with machines does not lessen her love for animals. In civilian life she raised and trained quarter horses. She hopes to raise exotic breeds of cattle. She has partial interest in a cattle farm in Ohio where she owns ten head of beefalo (a cross between a cow and a buffalo).

For the past five years her other interests have been oil painting and drawing. She had one exhibition of her work in Huntsville, Ala.

Elliott plans to make the Army a career. She believes she will apply for OCS after a year or so.

Benefit timetable worth a look

Veterans recently separated from military service are encouraged by the Veterans Administration to check the timetable on veterans' benefits.

Upon notification by the Department of Defense that service members have terminated active duty under conditions other than dishonorable, the VA sends the new veteran a summary of key benefits with time periods in which application must be made.

Separate communications provide the veteran with GI Loan Certificates of Eligibility for homes, condominiums and mobile homes and information on insurance and educational programs.

The veteran is urged to contact the nearest VA office or representative of veterans' service organizations for complete application procedures.

The benefits timetable includes:

- Register with local state employment service office soon after separation. Unemployment benefits vary between states.
- Within 90 days, apply to former employer for reemployment.
- Within 120 days (up to one year if totally disabled), convert Servicemen's Group Line Insurance to five-year Veterans' Group Life Insurance. Apply to Office of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, 212 Washington Street, Newark, N.J. 07102.
- Within one year from date of notice of VA rating on disability, apply to VA for special National Service Life Insurance based on service-connected disability, if applicable.
- Within one year, apply to VA for dental care.
- As soon as possible, apply to VA for GI Bill educational training, which must be completed within 10 years of separation from Military service. There are no time limits for veterans to:
  - Apply for GI loan guaranty to buy, build or improve a home.
  - File claim with VA for compensation for service-connected disabilities or disease or apply for hospital care.
  - Seek assistance from local state employment offices in finding work or entering Labor Department job-training programs. (VA)

Education: another service benefit

A soldier doesn't have to leave the service to get an education.

Off-duty education opportunities are part of the soldiers benefits. GI Bill educational benefits are part of military life. A soldier can attend classes during off-duty hours and the VA will generally pick up the tab including textbooks. The GI Bill pays the veteran monthly while attending courses. For correspondence courses the soldier or veteran must pay 10 per cent of the course cost.

The Predischarge Education Program (PREP) provides a means for the soldier to complete high school and remedial education. Soldiers are eligible to enroll in the program after 180 days of service. PREP is funded by the Veteran's Administration but participation in that program is not counted against other GI Bill education benefits.

The Tuition Assistance Program provides soldiers an opportunity for off-duty college or vocational courses. The Army pays for 75 per cent of the course; the soldier pays the other 25 per cent and for books.

Tuition assistance could amount to a sizable savings during a three-year enlistment. For instance, a soldier on off-duty time could pick up as many as 12 semester hours a year.

The soldier would pay about $135 for a three-hour course if taken without tuition assistance. However, with tuition assistance the soldier only pays about $34. During a three year enlistment the tab picked up by the Army could amount to $1,215 with the soldier paying only $405 for 36 semester hours of college credit.

Off-duty classes are not the only way to earn college credit. Up to 30 semester credit hours can be earned by taking the College Level Examination Program (CLEP).

College credit can also be granted for technical schools attended while in the Army. The Ft. Benning education center, Bldg 35, has a listing of courses offered by all the military services and the number of credit hours recommended by the American Council on Education. These are recommended hours and it's up to the individual school to grant credit.

Night courses and work experience can be used to gain credits toward vocational-technical training. In some fields it is possible to fulfill union apprenticeship requirements by participating in certain voc/tech programs.

The Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Education Support (DANTES) provides testing services and correspondence programs for military members worldwide. DANTES administers CLEP tests and standardized subject tests without charge to service personnel. Service members may have to pay for the high school GED tests if a charge is required.

Servicemen's Opportunity Colleges (SOC) have responded to the special needs of military personnel by permitting liberal entrance requirements and having residency requirements that are adapted to the mobility of Army personnel.

Project AHEAD is another program which enables a soldier to continue an educational program in spite of frequent Army moves. Over 1,400 colleges and universities participate in the program with one college acting as home campus which records all credits earned, regardless of where they were taken.

These education programs are dependent upon close cooperation between the individual soldier, the education counselor and the unit commander. The best education program available would not be worth much if the soldier were not able to participate. The education counselor works out a program that can be followed under normal work conditions but it is up to the soldier's commander to permit attendance at off-duty courses that will benefit the Army and the soldier.

What happens when the soldier is reassigned? With an educational program, today's soldier can usually pursue an educational goal no matter where PCS orders take him. Army education counselors and programs can be found at 332 Army installations around the world.

It would appear that only the soldier benefits from these educational programs. True, many soldiers participate in the programs with the specific intention of getting out of the Army after the first enlistment. But many career soldiers are advancing their education and the Army benefits any time the education level is raised.

Education is one of the better appreciated benefits of being in the Army. Soldiers can get a head start on college, catch up on high school or get credit for vocational training and the dollar value of education benefits received while in uniform could easily amount to several thousand dollars. # Black History tour highlights 197th effort

By R. Gordon Threlfall

Several months of work got results as some 35 members of the 1/58th Inf Bn, 197th Inf Bde took a four-hour tour of black history sites in Columbus and Phenix City February 27.

SP4 Curtis Courtney, race relations coordinator for the 1/58th, decided to research local black history in honor of Black History Month. A booklet of his findings is being published to be offered to local libraries, he said.

The first stop was the Bragg Smith Memorial at Porterdale Cemetery. The City of Columbus erected the memorial to honor the man who died trying to save the life of a city official.

The second stop was the Fourth Street Library, opened to blacks on Jan. 5, 1953 under the "separate but equal" doctrine. The third was the First African Baptist Church. Founded 135 years ago, it is the oldest black church in Columbus.

The Springer Opera House, fourth on the agenda, was the scene of the debut of a young singer in 1900. The singer was Gertrude (Ma) Rainey, the "mother of the blues."

The Government Center was presented fifth as the scene of a court battle won by the Rev.

SP4 Curtis Courtney, who researched and compiled an extensive study on the Black History of Columbus, explains some of his findings to other members of the 1/58th Inf Bn.

Primus E. King to gain the right for blacks to vote in the Georgia Democratic primary. King, now 76, was the guest of honor at a dinner held at the 1/58th Dining Facility later Friday.

Horace King's monument to John Godwin was the sixth stop in the tour. King, an educated black bridge builder, built the monument listed in Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" as likely the only monument erected by a former slave to his former master.

The apartment complex named after George R. Rivers one of this area's pioneer civic leaders, was the seventh stop. The last was Marshall Junior High School, where Samuel P. Charleston, a black educator, was the first principal.

The tour, necessarily limited by time, barely touched the highlights of local Black history. Much more information has been gathered, yet there are still questions unanswered.

Hopefully, SP4 Courtney's efforts will spark interest in this important area. At the very least, a quantity of information has been preserved, and soldiers of the 197th Inf Bde have had an opportunity to better understand the community of which they are now a part.

Register and vote

Request your absentee ballot

The Federal Post Card Application for Absentee Ballot (FPCA) is a postage-free post card printed and distributed by the Federal Government to facilitate absentee voting by —

- members of the Armed Forces and their spouses and dependents,
- members of the Merchant Marine and their spouses and dependents, and
- U.S. citizens temporarily residing outside the territorial limits of the United States and the District of Columbia.

The Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955, which created the FPCA, merely recommends that States accept the FPCA as an application for an absentee ballot and for absentee registration. State law determines the extent to which this recommendation has been adopted for any or all of the three categories covered by the Act as listed above.

Because there are differences in the treatment accorded the FPCA in the various States, the law of each State should be consulted to determine exactly how the FPCA may be used.

In using the FPCA, individuals must—

- comply with the registration requirements if specified by State law.

- mail the FPCA to the appropriate election official (unit voting counselors can furnish the title) within the time period recommended by the State but always far enough in advance of the election to receive the ballot, vote it, and return it to the proper election official, and

- vote the ballot in accordance with the instructions included on it. THIS IS AN IMPORTANT STEP. The envelope containing the ballot should not be opened until the instructions are read. Some States, require that the envelope be opened in the presence of a commissioned officer, notary public, or other authorized person.

Unit voting counselors will have detailed information on the provisions of each State's election law and procedures.

In accordance with Federal law and Armed Forces regulations, no commissioned, warrant, petty, or noncommissioned officer of any civilian serving as a voting counselor shall attempt to influence any person as to the choice of candidate. The actual marking of the ballot — the voting — must be done secretly. This is required by law.

Delivery Of The FPCA: For general elections in which candidates for Federal offices are elected, the Military Departments, through commanders, are responsible for ensuring—

- the in-hand delivery of FPCAs by August 15 to Armed Forces personnel, their spouses and dependents, civilian employees of the Armed Forces and their spouses and dependents while residing with or accompanying them, who are serving outside the territorial limits of the United States and the District of Columbia.

- the in-hand delivery of FPCAs by September 15 to Armed Forces personnel and their spouses and dependents within the United States and the District of Columbia, and also

- that supplies of the FPCA are available to all eligible individuals who wish to participate in primary elections.

Armed Forces Voters Day: September 21, 1976, has been designated as Armed Forces Voters Day. This date, six weeks before the November 2 general election, will allow sufficient time for those who have not done so to obtain ballots for that election.

Filling Out The FPCA: Individuals using the FPCA must complete the sections correctly and completely. If election officials cannot read the information submitted or part of the FPCA is not completed, an absentee ballot may not be mailed. A complete and current mailing address must be indicated on the FPCA. Insofar as possible, military abbreviations should be avoided and complete words used, either printed or typed.

On the front of the FPCA, the individual must fill in the complete title and address of the official to whom it is to be sent. This information may be obtained from the unit voting counselor.

The numbered subparagraphs below refer to the numbered paragraphs on the reverse side of the FPCA as illustrated—

- Top Line: Fill in State of legal residence; if individual is uncertain of his or her legal residence, a unit legal assistance officer should be contacted.

- (1): As indicated on the FPCA, cross out 2 of the 3 words — "General," "Primary," or "Special" — which do not apply. As a rule, an FPCA must be sent in for each election in which a person desires to vote; some States, however, will mail all the ballots in an election year, or the primary and general election-ballots, with the submission of only one FPCA. The unit voting counselor can provide the definitive information on this. If a ballot is being requested for an election other than a primary or general election, it might be helpful to identify the election by its date or other descriptive words or phrase.

- (2): This should be completed if a State law requires that political party preference or affiliation must be shown to receive a primary ballot; the unit voting counselor can determine if the information is required.

- (3): Self-explanatory: make an "X" in the appropriate box.

- (4): Complete birth date as shown — day, month, year.

- (5): This item should contain the address within the State where the individual has maintained legal residence.

- (6): This item may be used to indicate to the election official any information needed to clarify the use of the FPCA; for example, persons who are using the FPCA to register absentee, if allowed by State law, should write in "Send registration forms" or "Request registration."

- (7): This item should contain the address where the individual currently receives mail; if an address other than an official military address is used in this item, the military address must be indicated on the front of the FPCA.

- (8): Self-explanatory, but must be understood by individual.

- (9): Signature of person requesting ballot must be placed here; if required by State law — the unit voting counselor can determine this — the signature must be made in the presence of a notary or other individual authorized to administer the oath.

- (10): Full name, rank or grade, service number must be printed or typed in this space.

- (11): This information must be completed if required by State law; the unit voting counselor will have the "Witnessing" requirements for the individual States.

Health care rated best Army benefit

Medical care is the U. S. Army's most valuable non-monetary benefit, according to a survey of married soldiers recently conducted by the Army's Military Personnel Center.

More than 70 per cent of the 25,000 soldiers surveyed rated health care first, followed by commissary privileges and on-post housing.

Other benefits cited by the soldiers were educational programs leading to bachelors and advance degrees, the Army's non-contributory retirement program, and 30 days paid annual vacation.

Second half rally, balanced attack key to win

By Joe Duggan

Shock Effect, mobility and firepower — the primary attributes of a tank — proved true for Cbt Spt Co, 2/69th Ar, 197th Inf Bde as they rallied in the last half to squeeze by Co A, Hq Cmd by a score of 65-64 in the post basketball tournament playoff game last week at Kelly Hill Gym.

This game culminated a double-elimination tournament which began February 17, and pitted nine company-level teams against each other.

At half time the score was 30-24 in favor of Co A, Hq Cmd, but with four minutes left to play, the tankers jumped ahead 54-43. A jump shot by Hugh Anthony and a lay-up by Sammie Cole were both good to increase the margin. Two foul shots by Anthony brought the rally to 60-53.

Fighting back with 15 seconds left, a jump shot by Hq Cmd's John Crosby was good, making the score 65-62. A tanker foul brought Hq Cmd to the free throw line, and a tap-in after the shot made the score 65-64.

With three seconds remaining, Cbt Spt Co froze the ball bringing the win and the championship to the 197th Inf Bde.

"We had beaten HQ Cmd before," commented Hugh Anthony of CSC, 2/69th Ar. "But we knew that we'd have our hands full during the championship game. It seemed to be a game that pitted their speed against our size."

The high scorer of the game was Melvin Hudson of Co A, HQ Cmd who poured in 26 points in the see-saw contest. Hugh Anthony and Sammy Cole were the high men for CSC, 2/69th Ar, with 15 and 14 points respectively.

Engineers active

Post engineers hope to complete work on clogged sewer lines in the Davis Hill housing area today, according to a spokesman in the Directorate of Facilities Engineering.

The problem resulted from a combination of increased number of families moving into the new 474-unit housing area and apparent vandalism. Engineers stated in many cases manhole covers had been removed and debris, toys, dirt and other materials thrown into the sewer lines.

Engineer personnel were delayed in repairing the lines by lack of access into the area. On completion of a temporary road early this week, equipment has been moved in and crews are working full days at unclogging lines.

Wanted: first termers

Is your ETS coming up soon? Have you given any thought to reenlistment? Hopefully you have because the Army needs first termers in a variety of skills.

If you are a first termer who requires no waiver of basic reenlistment eligibility criteria, possess a high school diploma or GED equivalent and attained 100 or higher on your current MOS test score, you can be reenlisted by your unit commander after a career counselor makes a phone call to MILPERCEN to get a reenlistment control number. The Army is just as interested in your reenlistment although you may not meet all of these requirements. However, you must submit a written request to MILPERCEN for authority to reenlist. You should do this no later than three months prior to your proposed date of reenlistment. This is particularly important if you desire unbroken service.

Your commanding officer and career counselor are there to assist you with any questions you may have concerning reenlistment. If you are not eligible for reenlistment, they can advise you on what you must do to become eligible. They are interested in you and your future career.

For further information see your unit reenlistment NCO or call SFC Henry Wooten, operations sergeant in Post Reenlistment, at 545-7387. Post Reenlistment is located in Bldg. 83.

SP5 Angelo C. Rodriguez, NCOIC of the drafting section of the 36th Engr Gp (CBT), gives assistance to Pvt. John Rishel. SP5 Rodriguez distinguished himself by being selected as honor graduate of the 36th Engr Gp Intermediate Leadership Course.

Toyota's rugged little pickup combines a powerful 2.2 liter engine with a smooth 4-speed synchromesh transmission for power and pep. Power front disc brakes for quick, smooth stops. Independent front suspension. Hydraulic shocks. This truck is built to work hard -- and to play hard when the work's all done.

Long Bed

The Long Bed Pickup comes with the same hard-working, gas-saving* 2.2 liter engine as the standard pickup. The same 4-speed transmission. The same power front disc brakes. But Toyota added over 15 inches to the bed length so you can haul more cargo. They added over nine inches to the wheelbase for extra riding comfort. Bigger gas tank, too!

SR-5 Sport Truck

The Toyota Pickup... plus a lot more. Like a standard 5-speed overdrive transmission to help save gas and reduce engine wear. Racy side stripes. Slotted steel wheels. Wide radial tires. Inside the roomy cab there's nylon carpeting, Hi-back vinyl bucket seats, tinted glass -- even an AM radio, at no extra cost.

SR-5 Long Bed Sport Truck

Toyota's newest truck model. It combines the features of the Long Bed with the features of the standard SR-5 Sport Truck. Now you can have the comfort and sporty touches of Toyota's fanciest truck, plus the extra utility of a long bed.

* Mileage claims are based on 1976 EPA tests. Your Toyota Dealer has individual model EPA test results. Your actual mileage may vary with road and weather conditions, optional equipment, driving habits and maintenance.

Carbon Monoxide: Colorless, odorless, deadly

Colorless, odorless, poisonous and potentially fatal! Frightening? You think so and everyone of us who drives a car should be aware of these deadly gases and take every precaution to avoid them.

The Interagency Motor Vehicle Emission Control Advisory Committee has the following suggestions to preclude the escape of monoxide filled exhaust gases into our cars: Do not run the engine in a closed garage or in con-finer areas any longer than needed to move your car in or out of the area.

- If it is necessary to sit in a parked car with the engine running for more than a short period, adjust your heating or cooling system to force outside air into the car. Set the fan at high speed and the controls in any position except "Off" or "Max A/C."

- The trunk lid should be closed while driving to prevent drawing exhaust gases into the car. If it is necessary for the trunk to remain open while driving, adjust the heating or cooling system to force outside air into the car with the blower set at high speed and controls set in any position except "Off" or "Max A/C."

- Properly maintain your engine exhaust system. When a change is noticed in the sound of the exhaust system, when exhaust fumes can be detected inside the car or when the underside or rear of the vehicle is damaged, have the complete exhaust system and adjacent body areas inspected for broken, damaged, deteriorated or mispositioned parts. Open seams or loose connections could permit exhaust fumes to seep into the trunk or passenger compartment.

- If you have removed a radio, seal all holes. Drain holes in the trunk floor should also be sealed.

Remember, exhaust gas entry can only occur if there is a path into the vehicle — make sure your car doesn't provide that path! (TNS)

VA questions and answers

Q — What is the Veterans Administration REP program?

A — The Predischarge Education Program (REP) is intended for military personnel who have completed more than 180 consecutive days of active duty and are in need of courses necessary for a secondary school diploma or courses necessary for entrance into a post secondary course of study. Complete information and application forms are available from military education offices and VA regional offices.

Q — If I use my GI loan benefits now, can I use them again in the future?

A — Yes, as long as you relieve the VA from liability in your current VA loan.

Q — I am a veteran and was hospitalized in a private hospital for my service-connected disability for more than 21 days. Am I entitled to an increase in my compensation?

A — Yes, if medical evidence supplied to the VA shows that the condition for which you were hospitalized was for the service-connected disability. You would be entitled to a 100 per cent rating from date of admission to at least the date of discharge from the hospital if you file claim for increase with the VA within one year of date of admission.

Q — I served in the Army for 24 months. How many months of educational eligibility am I entitled to receive?

A — Eligible veterans with at least 18 months of continuous active duty after Jan. 31, 1955, and separated with other than a dishonorable discharge, are entitled to 36 months of educational assistance. Veterans having less active duty than 18 months are eligible for 1½ months of eligibility for each month of active duty.

Q — Can an eligible veteran obtain a GI loan to purchase a unit in a condominium?

A — Yes, provided the unit is located in a project approved by the VA.

Disaster relief efforts praised

Secretary of the Army, Martin R. Hoffmann, and the Army Chief of Staff, GEN Fred C. Weyand, have extended their personal thanks to U. S. Army units for participating in disaster relief efforts in Guatemala.

In a February 26 message, the two top Army officials stated that they "join all your fellow service personnel and your country in recognizing and thanking you for your compassion and professionalism in your superb performance of duties in providing aid to the unfortunate victims of the earthquake."

They also added, "As representatives of a compassionate and friendly nation, you have demonstrated once more the Army's capacity to respond, to perform, and to excel under trying circumstances on natural disaster."

A nine man Ft. Benning dispensary team, from the 676th Med Det, 34th Med Bn, as well as other units from post throughout the U. S. are involved in the Guatemalan relief effort.

'Bass-off' bags big bounty

By DENNY BLANKENSHIP

The top six fishermen from five area bass clubs gathered at Chewalla Marina on Lake Walter F. George last Sunday for the second annual "Super Bowl" of bass fishing.

This affair is designed to pit fisherman against fisherman with an impartial observer in the back seat. The individual contestants are selected on the basis of year-long competition within each club and the team with the highest total weight is the winner. Observers were selected from prominent community leaders who have an interest in fishing. This year's contest drew many of the finest fishermen from the states of Georgia and Alabama and many of these "pros" are certainly among the best in the nation.

Water conditions were perfect as 30 boats eased out of the launch point for the 7 a.m. "ooze off". The eager anglers enjoyed bright sunny skies throughout the day and as they returned for the 5 p.m. weigh-in, it was obvious that the perfect conditions were reflected by the catches weighed in.

The Georgia/Alabama Bass Club team, led by Ken Stewart's string of 19 pounds, 12 ounces, was declared the winner with a total team weight of 60 pounds, 9 ounces of fish. Close on their heels and taking second place, was the Dolphin Bass Club. Dolphin's Charlie Whittle caught an 11 pound, 8 ounce whopper to lead his team with 16 pounds, 14 ounces but the team total of 55 pounds, 5 ounces fell short of the winner. Bi-City Bass Club captured third place with their team total of 42 pounds, 10 ounces. Bi-City's team was led by Dr. Allen Shaw's string of 16 pounds, 2 ounces. Fort Benning's team was fourth with 16 pounds, 9 ounces and the Oswego Bass Club, a new organization in the area, was fifth with 5 pounds, 14 ounces of fish.

The fishing performance by the observers was nothing short of superb. Rick Olnick led all observers with his single catch of a 10 pound, 2 ounce monster, and many of these anglers outfished the "pros". Notable among these were, MG (Ret) Thomas Tarpley and COL W. Rickard, Secretary, USAIS.

You'll Never Call It A Mini.

The Itasca C25C

Itasca's greatest "new place" is this super 25-footer. From the large rear bath, to the 24 cubic-feet of overhead cabinet space you can see that the term "mini" does not really fit this motor home. Yet you still get the advantages of a "mini". Economy. Maneuverability. And a noticeable price advantage. You also get the unbeatable Itasca smooth riding, dependable chassis by Chevrolet.

Having overcome an extreme physical handicap, MAJ William Spies, Assistant Director of the Ranger Department, demonstrates proper techniques for rappelling. See related story on page 13.

Commanders to change in two major post units

Change of command ceremonies for two major units at Ft. Benning will take place next week (March 16 and 19) at York Field.

COL Eldon Carr, presently chief of the Department of Army-Wide Training Support (DAWTS), will assume command of the School Brigade (TSB) from COL George Ball, on Tuesday, March 16.

Carr, a 1956 graduate of West Point, has served two years in Vietnam. Highly decorated, he has received, among other awards, the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Meritorious Service Medal, Purple Heart, and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

Ball, the present commander, will be assuming new duties with the US Army-Europe upon the relinquishing of his command. He, too, is a graduate of West Point, and his decoration include the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Bronze Star, WWII Victory Medal, and numerous others.

COL Fletcher Ware will assume command of the 197th Inf Bde from COL Joseph Wasiak on Friday, March 19.

COL Ware assumes command of the 197th after a year and a half as the Director of Plans and Training, the Infantry Center. He is a graduate of West Point and has also served two tours in Vietnam.

Col. Wasiak is also a graduate of West Point and has several tours in Vietnam to his credit. Upon his relinquishing of the command, he will be traveling to Ft. Sheridan, Ill., to serve a tour of duty with the US Army Recruiting Command.

In off-limits area

Explosion injures two youths

Two youths, playing in an off-limits range area on the Ft. Benning reservation, were injured March 7 when a round of ammunition they found on Hook Range exploded.

Michael T. Glynn, 13, son of SFC (Ret) and Mrs. Thomas Glynn, 24 Braselman Ave., and James R. Kennedy, 14, son of SFC (Ret) and Mrs. Kenneth Kennedy, 3695 Robin Rd., are listed in good condition following surgery at Martin Army Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Post authorities said the two Columbus boys had been dropped off in the vicinity of Phillips Range by one of their parents to watch weekend marksmanship firing. The boys entered a clearly marked restricted area on Hook Range, an area where all kinds of dud producing weapons are fired, via Phillips Range which is open for pistol firing to the Ft. Benning's Rifle and Pistol Club. While playing on a target track, one of the boys picked up a M202 Flash Round with a 66mm rocket and threw it to the ground, causing it to explode.

According to reports, the youths, both injured by shrapnel from the explosion, contacted the range guard and they were transported to the hospital for treatment.

A guard was on duty at the time of the accident, however he was stationed at an ammunition bunker on Parks Range next to Hook Range.

Follows dad's footsteps

Long lines of olive-drab clad soldiers busting out 25-miles are not an uncommon sight along Ft. Benning's roads these days without drawing the passing glance from the casual motorist.

However, people may sit up for a double take when they drive past marchers from the 1st AIT Bde. One of the marchers is a 13-year-old Boy Scout named Robert L. Chamberlain, son of SFC Werner Chamberlain of Squad Offensive Tactics.

"Robert has been a Boy Scout for nearly a year now," the elder Chamberlain explained. "He has five merit badges and is working on his sixth, which is hiking."

In order for Robert to qualify for the merit badge, he had to hike five miles a day for five consecutive days, and then hike 20 miles.

"Dad was going on a 25-mile march with the brigade, and I thought it would be a good opportunity to complete my 20-mile hike requirement," commented Robert. "He did not want me foing at first, because he knew I could out hike him." He let me go to teach me a lesson."

"I beat him in," the elder Chamberlain recalled regretfully. "However, not very many of us did. That boy can hike! He went the entire 25 miles and his feet were in better shape than mine when it was all over, and I'm in pretty good shape!"

An all-around athlete, young Chamberlain is active in football, hockey, and soccer. Soccer is his favorite sport, which he learned from his father who played the game semi-pro. His other merit badges include archery, first aid, rifle and shotgun and swimming. He has skill awards in first aid, outdoor cooking and swimming.

Robert says that he would like to go on the next march with his Dad.

"This time I'm going to give those guys more of a handicap," he boasted. "I'm also going to carry a heavier rucksack."

Robert L. Chamberlain (R) marches along with his father SFC Werner Chamberlain during the recent 1st AIT Bde 25-mile march. Chamberlain, who covered the entire distance, made the trek to complete a requirement for a Boy Scout hiking merit badge.

2/69th Ar takes best mess award

By RON FOWLER

HHC, 2/69th Ar took the 'Best Dining Facility of 1975' award after the unit's facility was chosen as the best in the 197th Inf Bde.

"I attribute our winning the award to long, hard hours and very competent staff," said SFC Leroy Hester, the dining facility manager.

SFC Hester and the dining facility staff were presented with a plaque signifying their achievement by LTC Joe P. Coffman, executive officer for the 197th Inf Bde, during a ceremony at the dining facility.

"Serving a unit like the 2/69th is no easy task," SFC Hester continued, "but we try to give all of the men as large a variety of foods as possible during meal times and the men really seem to appreciate our efforts."

This isn't the first or the last time, according to SFC Hester, that the 'Speed and Power' dining facility has captured an honor for best dining facility. They started off the new year with a bang as they won the 197th Inf Bde best dining facility award for the month of January also.

"We work hard, but it's all worth it," SFC Hester concluded. "And I think that it's a great credit to the dining facility staff and the 2/69th Ar that we were able to win this award."

Engineers key teletype training

Dit Dit Dah Dit ... ..

The sounds of continuous wave (CW) transmissions go beaming through the atmosphere as SP4 William G. Alexander transmits and receives messages from the 1st Corps Spt Cmd, XVIII Abn Corps at Ft. Bragg as well as Fts. Campbell and Stewart.

It's all a part of a new coordinate communications training program started March 4 and 5, 1976 at the 36th Engr. Gp Headquarters.

Radio teletype teams from HHC, 36th Engr. Gp and 608th Ord. Co, 67th Maint Bn are participating in the program which is aimed at improving communications personnel and equipment readiness.

"It's the type of training we need to stay proficient in this MOS," declared Alexander.

The equipment that is used in this training is the Army's Radio Teletype Set AN-GRC-142. It is vehicular mounted, highly mobile, and may be powered by external generator or from the vehicle itself. To receive the extended range to reach the distant stations, SFC Charles L. Looney, commo chief of the Engr. Gp., planned and used an inverted "V" type antenna.

"This antenna is extended approximately 50 feet on two angles from the center point in the direction of transmission to multiply and concentrate the radio signal strength," says SFC Looney.

SP4 William G. Alexander

What happened to the Rod and Gun Club?

By DENNY BLANKENSHIP

"Why was the Rod and Gun Club closed? What has happened, or is going to happen, to the facilities and services that were offered by that organization?" These questions and many more have been asked frequently in the past few weeks by concerned sportsmen around the post. I have attempted to cut through the maze of tentative decisions, inventories and meetings on the subject to bring the gospel to all concerned.

The Rod and Gun Club fell victim to the same fate that befalls many service connected organizations—it could not support itself. The Club was ordered closed in compliance with current regulations pertaining to such organizations.

The Club assets are presently being inventoried and firm decisions concerning the future disposition of these assets will be made at a later date. As for the operation of the facilities and future services to be offered, tentative plans call for Post Recreation Services to assume the former operations of the Rod and Gun Club. Most if not all, of the former services will be offered.

As an interim measure the Office of the Provost-Marshal (PMO) is issuing the necessary permits for hunting and fishing on the reservation. PMO spokesmen state that post permits may be obtained from the vehicle registration section, Building 83, between the hours 9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Required State hunting and fishing permits are not sold by the PMO but must be purchased in the local community. You must have a valid State hunting or fishing permit in your possession prior to PMO issuing any post permits. (All are reminded that Georgia fishing permits expire 31 March.)

In my quest for information on the subject, I did find that all personnel in the decision-making chain have the sportsman's interest at heart. Hopefully the Recreation Services will commence their operation on April 1. The success and degree of services offered will depend to a great extent on your suggestions and comments. Let's not allow this new arrangement to suffer a similar fate as the Rod and Gun Club.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"I'd seen the advertisement on television about this battery that's hard to kill, you know." Oscar Outcry explained, "the one that's guaranteed."

"Yes, I've seen the advertisements, too," I acknowledged. Oscar verbally replayed a couple of commercials to insure I knew which he meant. I assured him I knew the battery name.

"Well, I went down to their little store in the shopping center," he continued as he stirred his coffee while we sat in the Post Exchange cafeteria, "and said I wanted to order one."

"Does the battery give good service?" I preempted.

"I wouldn't know. They didn't have one that would fit my car so I ordered a conventional battery. You know, one that will die on you sooner or later?" He sighed and sipped coffee. "I mean this store has everything," he added expansively. "I looked through all their catalogs while I had waited to place my order. I remember when I was little," Oscar drawled, "we even had their catalog in our little outhouse. The old one, that is."

"About the battery," I encouraged. "What about the battery?"

"I was told it'd take a few days to be shipped in. The bill totaled $35.52. This battery was only guaranteed for three years."

"And?" I prompted.

"Next day I received a three dollar discount certificate in the mail from the same store," Oscar sighed. "So with that and the two dollars I was supposed to have received for my old battery I figured it was a pretty good deal."

"You didn't get the battery, did you Oscar," I nodded shaking a finger at his nose. "I know you well enough, my friend, to be absolutely positive that you didn't get that battery."

Oscar flicked a fruit fly off the lip of his coffee cup before gulping deeply at the oil slicked black liquid. "You guessed it," he shrugged picking a strand of hair off his tongue.

"I knew there was something more," I said inspecting my own coffee cup.

"When they called I took my discount certificate with me. At the little order store I presented it when the lady brought out the battery I ordered."

"I can't accept that' the lady told me," Oscar said. "Why not?" I asked. "Its only good for $35 worth of merchandise' the lady told me."

"But it was $35, Oscar," I said. "You told me . . ."

"Aha!" Oscar said softly. "I did say that. Just a moment ago to you, and to the lady."

"So?"

"The merchandise was only $31.45' the lady said." "What about the $2.50 handling and shipping charge and the $1.57 in tax?" I asked. "That's not merchandise' the lady said, "Oscar raised his eyebrows in resignation.

"I'll grant that maybe the tax isn't part of the merchandise," I shrugged, "but I think there is a case to be made for the shipping and handling charge." I blinked, "The total is . . ."

"A little short," Oscar sighed.

"Well, what happened?"

"I told the lady she could keep her battery and her discount certificate," Oscar stated.

"You just left the three dollar executive there?"

"I won't be needing it any longer," he sighed pulling a crumpled paper from his fatigue shirt pocket. He handed it to me and I unfolded it and read aloud.

"Dear Mr. President," I read slowly, "Enclosed please find the charge plates that you so kindly provided me several years ago to make instant purchases throughout your coast to coast stores."

"Fortunately . . ." I continued to read "I've lost the need and the desire to purchase merchandise from any of your many, many stores in the United States because I've placed your catalog back in the little outhouse where it can serve a useful purpose."

"Very truly yours,"

"Oscar Outcry."

ROTC to require 3-year obligation

All non-scholarship Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) students entering the Advanced Course of the ROTC program this fall will obligate themselves to a minimum active duty tour of 36 months.

The new three-year tour will not affect scholarship students or those who have already signed contracts.

In addition to changing the active duty tour, the decision stabilizes CONUS assignments at three years. Tour lengths, however, may vary slightly to support overseas needs, to allow for time-sensitive schooling and provide for reassignment of key personnel.

Tour length for first term officers (four years or less obligation) is limited to one primary assignment or one primary assignment plus a short tour assignment in not more than two locations following basic entry training.

The new policies will reduce some of the personnel turbulence Armywide and reduce costs of permanent changes of station. (TNS)

Civil credit for military training

Nine U.S. Army training schools have been accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, according to SFC Oliver Brown, Army Recruiter for the Columbus area.

As a result of the accreditation, Sgt. Brown said, many more civilian schools are expected to grant credit toward a degree to students who successfully complete Army training at these nine facilities.

To qualify for Southern Association accreditation, a school must meet rigid standards for all phases of its operation, including an evaluation of its philosophy and purpose, physical facilities, and student services.

Four additional Army schools are now being evaluated for acceptance by the Southern Association and Army training schools in other geographic areas and begun the lengthy accreditation process with their regional associations.

The accreditation represents the first academic recognition milestone of the Army's Accrediting and Recording Centralized System (ARCS). Through ARCS, the Army plans to eventually provide soldiers a transcript of their Army training that will be readily accepted and credited toward a degree by civilian schools.

Two of the nine schools accredited by the Southern Association are the Infantry School at Ft. Benning and the Aviation School in Ft. Rucker, Ala.

For information concerning accreditation or other military programs contact SFC Brown at 322-0661 or 323-5674.

Aviation assets aid Arty ARTEP

Photos and Story
By Bill C. Walton

You call, we haul! A CH54 of the 478th Avn Co, 34th Med Bn lifts two 105mm howitzers and an ammunition bag for the 2/10th FA during the FTX, Operation Indian Village I.

Going on field exercises with ten CH54 helicopters, the largest operational rotorcraft in the free world, is a little different than moving out in tanks or APCs, but the need for basic Infantry skills remains unchanged.

Operation Indian Village I conducted March 2-4 proved to the 'Hurricanes' of the 478th Avn Co, 34th Med Bn that perimeter defense, use of camouflage and 24-hour a day operations are but a few of the daily requirements of both aviation and maneuver elements.

The operation conducted in support of an ARTEP for the 2-10th FA Bn called for the rapid deployment of artillery assets by the 'Hurricanes'. With five helicopter sorties they moved the battery's six howitzers, a complement of ammunition and the necessary gun crews from an established base of operation to a pre-designated testing area.

The remainder of the exercise consisted of the movement of heavy loads throughout the Ft. Benning reservation with the aid of the 187th Pathfinder Det. These loads weighing as much as 16,000 pounds were directed to remote field location during both daylight and darkness.

The 'Hurricanes' conducted tactical road marches, a night displacement of the entire unit and night helicopter operations which contributed to the efficiency of the unit and proved what was previously known — the 478th remains one of the Army's most proficient aviation units.

If you want to get there, go by Army air. As the weapons depart the artillery troops of the 2/10th FA load aboard a 'pod carrying' CH54 of the 478th Avn

Co to rejoin their weapons in a new position during field exercises.

Vehicle, equipment security stressed

DA officials remain concerned over the continued theft, misuse and willful destruction of Army vehicles and equipment.

Unattended and unsecured vehicles were the most frequent targets for ripoffs while secured vehicles accounted for about 10 per cent of the total incidents reviewed.

Theft from motor pools also was frequent. A contributing factor was the false sense of security generated by the term "motor pool." Reports show that some vehicles were stolen during duty hours with motor pool personnel present — and at night with guards on duty.

Theft of vehicle items frequently involved batteries, tires and radio equipment.

DA currently is writing an aircraft and vehicle security regulation to prescribe practical and effective means to cut losses from theft and destruction. In addition, guidance requiring locking mechanisms on Army vehicles was sent to the field during the month of February, 1976.

Hunting, fishing permits will expire March 31

Attention all hunting and fishing enthusiasts! Both Alabama and Georgia's hunting and fishing licenses expire March 31. Ft. Benning permits run out at the same time.

You can not purchase Ft. Benning permits until you have obtained your new state license. However, the new state licenses are not on sale yet and according to SSG Ronald Brown, NCOIC, Fish and Game Section, they probably won't be until the last week of the month.

After a person obtains a new state license, he or she must go to Building 83, Vehicle Registration Office, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to purchase the post permit. The cost of the post permit varies according to status and rank. A chart of the fees is on page six of USAIC Regulation 210-2 dated Dec. 9, 1975.

Eligible personnel for Ft. Benning permits are active duty personnel, retired personnel, civilian employes, dependents over 16, and Disabled American Veterans having a service connected disability of not less than 30 per cent.

Everyone requesting a post permit must prove their eligibility and spouses and dependents must be accompanied by their sponsor. Everyone must also attend a special on-post hunting safety orientation presentation regarding the rules.

One rule that is often ignored, according to SSG Brown, is the one regarding weapon registration and transportation. USAIC Re 210-5, dated Dec. 1, 1975, states that every weapon brought on this post must be registered with the Provost Marshal's office. The registration must be in your possession at any time such weapons are carried or transported on the installation.

No weapons will be transported on Ft. Benning with a loaded round in the chamber or with loaded magazine/clip affixed into the weapon load chamber.

Hand guns will not be concealed in glove compartments, under seats, or hidden from sight in any other way.

Authorized shotguns, rifles, or bows and arrows will be transported in the trunk of the automobile to the ranges or hunting sites.

In those instances where a vehicle does not have a trunk, or the storage space is not adequate to accommodate firearms, the weapons will be carried in the vehicle in such a manner that makes them readily observable by law enforcement personnel.

Facts and myths explored

Suicide: the game with no winner

Suicide is not a disease, but most people confuse it as such. Suicide may be the saddest word and act in all the world. I think I can support that concept. We don't like to talk about suicide and we don't like depression. However, there are some basic ideas to share that ought to be common knowledge.

Suicide statistics are veiled in some obscurity because a lot of "accidents" may really have been suicides and because it is probable that many overtly suicidal deaths are purposely called something else by well-wishing but possibly misguided coroners or other physicians. Suicide as a "cause of death" is fairly often hidden because of social stigma that rise from common misunderstandings.

Why pick something obscure to talk about? Because although it is cloudy — it is BIG. About 25,000 deaths due to suicide are recorded each year. About 100 children between 10 and 14 each year, about 1,500 young people between 15 and 19 each year, and about 15,000 college students each year take their own lives. Indians, young adult blacks, and the aged all have high suicide rates compared with the overall national population. And for each of the completed suicides there are about 10 attempted suicides.

There are some myths about suicide that should be explored — perhaps the most awful untruth is the concept that people who commit suicide are crazy. In fact, only about one in five ever demonstrated anything to suggest mental illness.

Second, there is no truth to the thought that people who talk about it won't do it. In fact it is quite common for people to discuss it with someone before they do it. Third, there are always a few people who avoid the issue by disclaiming any right to interfere with someone else's suicidal intentions. In fact, if someone shares their suicidal thoughts with you it is most reasonable to assume that he is ambivalent about it and wants reinforcement of his will to live.

Nobody really knows why people kill themselves but enough information has been gathered to allow us some reasonably educated guesses. It seems that suicide victims haven't been "able to connect." Which is to say that something has prevented or broken meaningful ties with the live environment. They are "cut off" from tangible and emotional touch with other people. Sometimes it is very real, very big things which give this cut-off sensation. Such as deaths of loved ones, separations, poverty or economic disaster, and disease.

Confronting the real world with its hardships, those we all know, and some known only to those who face racial and economic discrimination — can be a long way off the American dream. Perhaps this is one reason why American Indians and young adult blacks are at high risk. Sometimes it is a lot of seemingly smaller things which outsiders don't think are big but make the individual crushingly sad such as a life of physical plenty without a feeling of being a success, of being loved, or belonging. In youth it may be a feeling of powerlessness over the future.

Suicidal ideas are very common, as idle speculation it might cross anybody's mind, but usually is quickly overwhelmed by our joy of living. When we feel sad our contacts tend to buoy us up again. Even in those whose will to die is overtaking their will to live there is reaching out to touch and feel and get feedback from the surrounding world.

Generally we turn from sadness in others. In the military there is the risk that sadness may be confused with weakness, and there are a lot of facades to cover sadness. As a culture we Americans are not gifted in dealing with each other's sadness. This probably comes from a mistaken apprehension that a sad person wants you to take his burden and carry it for him. This is not the case in general. Mostly what seems to be called for is the level of compassion which allows a person to be "up front" with his feelings — to tell it like it is — to connect in a way that is real. There is no magic to this, it takes no "degree"; it just takes human skill.

The sad person doesn't want you to be him; just to connect with him as he really is. And if that connection can lead to problem solving or to alternative ways of looking at problems that can't be solved, that's a gift of life.

Everybody ought to give some thought to what he might do if he was entrusted by someone else with the knowledge that they are contemplating suicide — or just that they are very very sad. The main potential life saver is establishing the fact that you are real and that you are willing and able to be a connection. Don't let go, nor brush it aside with some Yankee Doodle marching music or a British "chin up, old chap." First aid in this instance includes exploring it — where are the disconnections? How are they seen by the individual? Where are the immediate real alternatives? Possibly alternatives are in the family, on the job, or in some other social group. Going beyond first aid — action by the potential victim or the aware other individual should include contact with us at the hospital, where every corpsman, nurse and doctor are potential connections. Professionals skilled in knowing themselves and relating to others can add still further dimensions in problem solving.

Don't let a DUD make a dud of you

DUDS KILL! Many articles have been written about the dangers of dud ammunition but many people are still being injured or killed as a result of violating a basic safety rule — DO NOT TOUCH ANY UNEXPLODED ORDNANCE ON FIRING RANGES!

These accidents happen not only to members of the military but to civilian personnel as well. One such incident resulted in the death of two children who were playing with a 106mm recoilless round which had been taken from the impact area of a nearby installation. The round exploded after being dropped by one of the children.

In December 1963 two boys from Ft. Benning were killed on Hook range as a result of handling dud ammunition which they found in the impact area.

In a more recent incident, five military personnel were critically injured when a dud rocket exploded. The rocket had been brought from the range into a range classroom. The explosion was a result of the rocket rolling off a table onto a concrete floor.

Most dud accidents involve trespassers on ranges. Rarely do qualified ordnance personnel have accidents while engaged in dud disposal operations. In the case of the rocket accident, the military personnel were knowledgeable in the ammunition they were discussing, yet they violated the most basic safety rule regarding duds. In the case of the children, obviously the OFF LIMITS warnings at the impact were not heeded. What can be done about it? There are two important steps you can take right now.

● If you are located in an area where you have access to dud ammunition, learn and practice all safety rules and regulations.

● Educate your family and friends of the potential danger of unexploded ordnance.

Remember, regardless of the type, shape, size or color, ammo is designed to destroy — don't let it destroy you.

The 89th Ord Det gives classes twice a year to children at Ft. Benning schools in an effort to further the awareness of the dangers of handling explosives and the procedures to follow if dud ammunition is found.

Provisions, policy prohibit partisan politicking

In a presidential election year, political activity increases through the summer, reaches a feverish pitch in the early fall, then comes to nearly a grinding stop after the November election.

It is difficult to avoid getting involved in the process.

While soldiers and DA civilians are encouraged to vote in elections, they must avoid "partisan political activity."

Partisan activity generally means getting involved in political party campaigns by campaigning for a candidate, circulating petitions, or running for a national or state office.

PROHIBITED ACTIVITY

Specifically, civilians are prohibited from campaign activity by provisions of the Hatch Act. Soldiers are covered by DoD regulations. Under provisions of the Hatch Act, other public law and DoD regs, Army employees and members cannot:

- be a candidate for national or state office
- be a partisan candidate for public office
- solicit others to become candidates
- campaign for or against a political party or candidate
- serve as an officer of a political party
- participate in the organization of a political party
- solicit or collect funds for a campaign party or make a political contribution while on the job
- sell tickets for activities such as political dinners
- take part in managing the campaign of a candidate or party
- work at the voting polls or transport voters to the poll on behalf of a candidate
- serve as a delegate to a political party convention

- address a convention in support of or against a candidate
- distribute campaign material

PERMISSIBLE ACTIVITY

Although the list of restrictions seems lengthy and tends to discourage any political activity, there are still areas in which Army members and employees are permitted to participate. Soldiers and DA civilians can:

- register and vote in any election
- express opinion as long as it is not a part of a campaign
- contribute to political candidates or parties
- accept appointment to a public office if it does not interfere with work duties
- participate in a nonpartisan election as a candidate or supporter
- be a member of a political party
- sign petitions including nominating candidates
- petition or write to any member of Congress encouraging them to vote a certain way.

Essentially, the primary difference between the restrictions for civilians and soldiers is that soldiers, when participating in any political activity cannot wear their uniform in any way that might lead the public to believe that the Army supports a particular candidate or party.

In some areas with a large number of federal employees — such as Washington, D.C. — employees may ask the Civil Service Commission for partial exemption from political activity restrictions.

A bill to revise the Hatch Act and give government workers more political freedom passed the House of Representatives last fall and is now under consideration by the Senate. (ANF)

EXAMPLES OF SAVINGS

A Subcompact driver and a Standard driver, who are neighbors, decide to commute together to work. The trip is 10 miles each way so the annual savings for the Subcompact driver is $281 for the 20 mile round trip. For the Standard driver it is $427, or a carpool total of $708 savings between the two of them. Five standard car drivers in a small town form a carpool to commute the 20 miles to the city to work (40 miles round trip) which gives each of them an annual savings of $1,145 or a total for their carpool of $5,725.

"The Army is people"

"The Army does not use people. It is people. There is no higher priority, no more treasured resource, no more important category of Army management. . . ." That's how Secretary of the Army Martin R. Hoffman recently described the vital role of Army personnel before a Senate panel.

Profiling the typical soldier, Hoffman said, "Today's soldier may be male or female, 23 years of age, and has 3 years of active military service. He is 5'10" tall and weighs 167 pounds while she is 5'4" tall and weighs 130 pounds."

The Secretary noted that 80 per cent of the Army's total strength are high school grads; one of every two is married.

Detailing the typical soldier's background, Hoffmann said, "Most likely, he or she came from a community of approximately 25,000 people, and at the time of entry into service the family's annual income was around $10,000; probably not over $15,000. There is a one-third chance that a member of his or her family had previously served in the Army. Six times out of ten he will be in a combat unit."

"Today's soldier is well motivated," Hoffmann said, "and qualified in his military skills, interested in the military profession, and provides a challenge to Army leadership to excel. The soldier wants to be part of a team, and to know the whats, whys, and wherefores of the organization of which he or she is a part." Concluding, Hoffmann said, "The soldier feels that the Army mission is important to the country and provides an individual challenge as well."

'Doing the impossible inspires others'

Standing five foot one in jungle boots, MAJ William Spies, assistant director of the Ranger Department at Ft. Benning, will never be mistaken for a basketball standout.

But around Ft. Benning, he can be considered a standout in his own right — one who has refused to let a Vietnam-related handicap keep him from excelling as a "Super Soldier."

Spies, who lost his right foot in 1966 due to wounds received in Vietnam, was in the ranks when the Ranger Department scheduled a 25-mile road march in February as part of the post-wide physical training (PT) program.

He also proved that he can do things other than march by scoring 353 on his latest Advanced Physical Fitness Test. The test includes the inverted crawl; sit ups; a run, dodge and jump course; horizontal ladder; and a two-mile run.

Because of his physical profile, Spies was not required to participate in the march or the PT test, but participate he did.

For his achievements Spies has been cited by MG Willard Latham, post commander.

In a letter of appreciation to Spies, the general stated:

"I wish to take this opportunity to commend you for your enthusiastic support of the Infantry Center's physical training program. In completing the 25-mile road march in less than nine hours and scoring 353 points on the Advanced Physical Fitness test, in spite of your physical handicap, you demonstrated a degree of physical toughness which sets the example for all to follow."

Spies has a special personal reason for trying to excel in everything he does. "When a handicapped person performs what many feel is an almost impossible task, others with handicaps seem to gain strength from him — a will to try."

To Spies, the philosophy of physical fitness goes hand-in-hand with good mental fitness. In speaking of the road march and PT test, he said, "I believed in what I was doing and what the current directions on PT will lead to. I set out to fulfill a mission to become physically fit, and thereby more mentally alert. This, I feel, is to be expected for a soldier."

During the 22 months Spies spent in Walter Reed Army Hospital recuperating from his wounds, something happened that changed his whole outlook on life. "After reading an article in the Navy Times about an amputee soldier making a parachute jump into water, I lost my defeatist attitude and became psyched up," he said. "I wanted to get out and prove to the world that I could still jump out of airplanes, land on the ground and carry out the Ranger missions." Prior to attending Officer Candidate

School here in 1960 (he was one of the distinguished graduates), Spies served more than five years in the enlisted ranks. He has held leadership positions ranging from assistant squad leader to company commander in rifle and airborne companies. In addition, he has completed 17 service schools, including Pathfinder and Jumpmaster courses.

In April 1968, Spies returned to Ft. Benning as officer in charge of the Instructor Training Course before taking the Infantry Officer Advanced Course. His next three years were spent writing Infantry and Ranger Doctrine literature and in 1972 became an advisor to an Oregon National Guard battalion.

He was assigned to the Ranger Department of The Infantry School in 1973.

PX system seeks help to cut losses

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is promoting customer involvement in its loss-prevention program.

"The AAFES belongs to its customers. This unique relationship places a special responsibility on the military family who benefits from the AAFES mission of service," said MG C. W. Hospelhorn, AAFES commander.

The primary loss in this area is due to customer shoplifting and employee pilferage and this is where the customer can give the most assistance.

"Of course," Hospelhorn emphasized, "AAFES acknowledges the fact that the vast majority of its employees and customers were honest. It is exactly this majority that AAFES seeks to involve in its loss-prevention efforts.

"After all," he continued, "every dishonest act by an employee or shopper should be of extreme concern to all other customers and employees. In the retail business, a fact of life is that shoplifting and theft losses ultimately must be passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices."

AAFES is encouraging both employees and customers to be on the lookout for suspicious activities and to report any such instances to exchange supervisory personnel. The loss-prevention program addresses the problems of shoplifting, employees who do not properly check customer identification cards, cashier-checkers who do not properly operate cash registers and customer-employee collusion to purchase merchandise at less than actual cost.

AAFES long has advised customers and employees of the consequences of shoplifting and other dishonest acts. Now it is placing small signs on cash registers in all retail, food and service outlets advising customers to report cash register irregularities to management.

Hospelhorn encouraged customer participation in all loss-prevention measures. "I would truly hope everyone will join in this effort to keep AAFES losses to the absolute minimum."

Jump club tries for star record

The Ft. Benning Sport Parachute Club attempted to break the existing military record for a freefall star at Fryar Drop Zone last Sunday.

A star is a circle of four or more parachutists in freefall, facing the center, with each jumper being gripped or gripping the arm of the jumper next to him. The present record is 14 and the club tried to make an 18-man star.

The difficulty of forming the star increases with the number of jumpers and requires mastery of the art known as "relative work" which may be described as the intentional maneuvering of several jumpers in close proximity to each other during freefall.

The opening of 18 colorful parachutes at once against the back drop of a brilliant blue sky was spectacular. The continuous display of enthusiasm, and the rainbow of colors completely overshadowed the fact that the club was unable to break the record during this attempt.

Organizers for the jump were SFC Thomas Carr, an airborne instructor at Tower Training Branch, and CPT David Grueger, an instructor at the Command, Staff and Leadership Department, United States Army Infantry School.

Rugby Club splits a pair

The Ft. Benning Rugby Club was plowed under by the Georgia Tech "Engineers" 23-6 last Saturday in Atlanta, Georgia, playing aggressive ball, scored 4 "trys", two conversions, and one penalty kick. Playing "sloppy, individual football" Benning scored one try and a conversion for their six points.

In the second game, Lynn Moore, former West Point running back and Infantry Bowl football standout, scored all of Benning's 12 points as they defeated the Georgia club 12-6.

Benning's next game is against the Atlanta High Country Rugby Club to be held in Atlanta March 6.

Personnel interested in playing rugby or trying out for the team should contact Jerry Stanwix at 545-1922 or 682-0315.

Cash earned for suggestion

Two soldiers assigned to the Nuclear Medicine Service, Martin Army Hospital, received $120.00 by participating in the Army Suggestion Program.

SSG Richard D. Bennett and SSG Charles H. Faust came up with the idea of using 70mm film instead of regular poloroid film in photographing studies conducted by the Nuclear Medicine Clinic.

Adoption of their suggestion reduced film cost from 30-cents to 5-cents per exposure, improved technical film quality, increased film life, aided display and storage of studies and resulted in an estimated annual savings of $3,757.00.

How to prolong tire life

To realize full potential of tire life, tires should be rotated in accordance with the recommendations in the car owner's manual, if available, or at 6,000 to 8,000 mile intervals. The first such rotation is the most important one in setting the stage for long, even tread wear. In some instances, if irregular wear begins to develop, rotation will be advisable before the recommended mileage interval.

Earlier, and more frequent rotation may also be desirable due to differences in road wear between front and rear wheel tires.

Avoid mixing tires of different size or construction (bias, belted bias or radial).

After rotation, adjustment of individual tire air pressure to acceptable car or tire manufacturer's recommendation is required in accordance with the tire's new location on the car.

BIAS and BELTED BIAS TIRES

RADIAL PLY TIRES

SNOW TIRE ROTATION

When snow tires are installed, the regular tread tires on the rear should be moved to the front and front tires stored. When snow tires are removed, install stored tires on the rear.

Do not rotate studded tires. Always remount them in original positions.

50 per cent error rate noted in EER/SEERs

Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center (EREC) officials at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, IN. point out that nearly 50 per cent of the new EER/SEERs received have been returned to local personnel offices for reprocessing. The reports either contain administrative errors — generally the fault of rates, reviewers and indorsers — or were not properly certified by personnel offices.

EER/SEER preparation procedures are detailed in DA Pam 623-1.

Meanwhile, EREC is monitoring scores of the new EER/SEERs and will soon have enough data to begin providing newly computed enlisted evaluation report weighted averages (EERWA) on a quarterly basis.

When the new enlisted evaluation reports (DA 2166-5 and 5A) were introduced on October 1, 1975, DA temporarily suspended publication of EERWAs. And EREC computed a close-out EERWA for each soldier based on the old form (2166-4) in use through September 1975. (ANF)

Fatigue policy changes

Whether women soldiers may wear fatigues will not be decided by installation commanders, under a recent DA policy change.

Previous DA policy restricted when women could wear fatigues. Women soldiers could not be required to wear fatigues solely to appear uniform with male soldiers. The old policy also prescribed when the green work uniform could be worn. Installation commanders will now make those decisions.

Recently, the Chief of Staff approved the Army uniform board recommendation that Army enlisted women receive fatigues as initial issue items in basic training. Presently, women are issued fatigues through unit supply channels.

At some future date, when budgeting requirements have been finalized, four sets of fatigues will be issued to each woman.

'Do your own thing', let the youngsters 'swing'

By JOYCE WALKER

Any parent who takes the time to look over Ft. Benning's Tot Town Nursery, located on First Division Road before leaving their children there, will be reassured that they will get the best possible care by the nursery personnel.

The nursery, under the supervision of Mrs. Ida E. Barnes, provides babysitting service to children beginning at age six months who are the dependents of military personnel, civilian employes of the post, Ft. Benning civilian residents and bonafide house guests. Tot Town will care for babies from the age of three months and up on Sundays, only while the parents are attending church services.

Children should be registered before being checked into Tot Town. Up-to-date shot records are required on initial registration and each eligible family may purchase an annual registration card for $1. Children may be registered without purchasing a registration card and pay the normal rate of 50 cents per hour per child. An up-to-date shot record will have to be shown for each unregistered child each time they are entered into the nursery.

When a child is checked into the nursery, his registration card is punched into a time clock. This card also contains any special instructions for the child about snacks, naps and meals.

Children entering Tot Town are put into one of three nursery sections according to age: babies, six months to 14 months; toddlers, 15 months to three years; and school age children, four years and up. The nursery also has a coloring room and a dining area that seats up to 70 children at a time. Mrs. Ella Morten, who has been with Tot Town for 15 years, presides over the kitchen where well balanced meals with milk are served at 45 cents per serving.

Tot Town is stocked with many toys and games for the children and it has two outdoor play grounds. The nursery is not a school and no teaching program is offered.

Nursery attendants range from college students to grandmothers. Many have attended the Child Development Course at the Career Development School in Columbus. All attendants are trained in nursery procedures and registered with the Provost Marshal and possess an up-to-date health card.

In addition to its regular program, Tot Town offers several extra services for parents. Children can be picked up from post schools if prior arrangements are made. Car pool service to and from Dexter, Patch and White Schools is provided. Special permission slips signed by parents may be obtained at the receptionist desk and must be signed by the parents. They cost 25 cents for one way and 50 cents for round trips per child.

A free diaper service is also provided at the nursery. A child should be dry when checked into the nursery and he will be changed as often as necessary and just prior to going home.

Tot Town is open from 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. on Monday, 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesday through Thursday, 7:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. on Friday, 12 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Saturday and 8:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Sundays. A $5 penalty fee is charged for each fifteen minutes a family's children remain in the Nursery after normal closing time.

Sauerkraut soup a super savings

By Joe Frankoski

A rainy miserable Saturday (what else). Your husband walks into the apartment looking a bit damp after working on the car.

"What's for lunch?" he eagerly asks.

"Sauerkraut 'soup'" you answer.

"Sauerkraut WHAT?" he says in disbelief.

Yes, there is such a dish and not only is it easy to make and great eating, it is also very inexpensive.

All of the ingredients used in making sauerkraut soup were purchased in the commissary, contributing to the low cost.

Melt a tablespoon of butter (3¢ worth) in a soup pot. Add a tablespoon of salad oil (less than 1¢ if you buy the issue kind).

Brown on all sides a pound and a half of beef soup bones (21¢ — if you are buddies with the neighborhood butcher you might even get them free as "doggie bones").

Chop up a medium sized onion (2¢) and cook it in the pot until it becomes soft. When it softens pour in four cups of water, the contents of a can of sauerkraut with its water (17¢ for a 1 lb can).

Add a bay leaf, a dozen or so black peppercorns, and a tablespoon or so of caraway seed and salt to taste (total cost probably a couple or three cents).

Counting a cup of coffee, this should take about thirty minutes.

Put the lid on the pot, reduce heat, and simmer for two and a half hours. That's all there is to it.

There should be enough for three people, and the cost — less than 70 cents. If you have some sour cream you might want to spoon some over the soup.

The only woman in the 121st Avn Co., 34th Med Bn is involved in two of Columbus's educational programs.

Sp4 Ruth Garrett appeared in Marshall Junior High School to speak on the many facets of military life. Her visit was in conjunction with the Coordinated Vocational Academic Education (CVAE) program and the Program for Educational Career Exploration (PECE). The programs were designed to give career counseling to teenage students and to show them the benefits of a higher education.

The school became aware of Garrett's career through a newspaper article which told of her Army job as company clerk for the 121st.

Garrett made the one-hour presentation to two groups of students. She explained her military job, responsibilities, challenges and training to the students. A question and answer period followed each speech.

Flag display, the proper way

With the nation's bicentennial celebration coming up on July 4 more and more flags are being displayed in the housing areas on post. Some show evidence of negligent care and should be replaced.

Individuals wanting to purchase flags may do so at the Ft. Benning Garden Shop and Post Exchange for $3.50 each.

Persons displaying flags at their quarters are reminded of the following rules of flag etiquette:

1. The flag may be displayed daily from sunrise to sunset.
2. Frayed or damaged flags should be turned into the property Disposal Office, where it will be properly destroyed.
3. Precautions should be taken to keep the flag from becoming soiled. It should not be allowed to touch the ground, or to brush against objects.

Another provision in the Federal Code of Flag Etiquette states that during a ceremony of raising or lowering the flag, or when the flag is passing in review, those present in uniform should render the right-hand salute. When not in uniform, men should remove their headdress with the right hand and hold it at the left shoulder, the hand being over the heart. Women or men without headdress should place the right hand over the heart.

Junior rifles take honors

Ft. Benning's Junior Rifle Club swept the 1976 National Sectional Rifle Championships held on the United States Army Marksmanship Unit's Indoor Range last Saturday and Sunday.

Top scorer in the International 3 Position Phase on Saturday was Glenn Moeller, son of MSG and Mrs. Edmund Moeller, USAMU, with a score of 562 out of a possible 600. Taking the High ROTC category was Ronnie Wigger, son of MAJ and Mrs. Lones Wigger, also of USAMU. The team of Ronnie Wigger, Glenn and David Moeller and Johnny Winstead combined for the winning team total of 2203.

In Sunday's conventional competition, Denise Cannella, daughter of LTC and Mrs. Cannella, USAMU, was the overall champion with a score of 386 out of a possible 400 points. John Moeller claimed High ROTC honors with 384. In team competition the three Moeller brothers, Glenn, David and Johnny, combined together with Johnny Winstead to take the second team match with a score of 1533. Columbus High School placed second with 1483.

AIT Brigade receives first trainees

By Jerry Van Slyke

After months of feverish preparation, Ft. Benning's 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade is receiving an initial group of about 650 infantry trainees.

The trainees began arriving late Thursday evening and early today, the bulk of them coming from Ft. Dix, N.J. and Ft. Knox, Ky. A seven-week course of instruction will begin on Monday morning after in-processing over the weekend.

"Human Dignity will be preserved," stated Brigade Commander COL Jack B. Farris, "but soft pedaling is out. When they leave here they will be Infantrymen through and through."

The trainees will be followed here by more men from basic training centers around the country — Ft. Dix, Ft. Knox, Ft. Jackson — with each group arriving about a week apart.

At any one time the Brigade will have about 4,500 trainees undergoing the tough infantry course. Twenty-one of 24 companies will be undergoing training at all times.

Monday morning the trainees will find themselves falling out at 5:20 a.m. for an hour of physical training. The pace of their day will not let up as they receive various orientations.

"We expect that soon Ft. Benning will be the only source of American infantrymen," COL Farris said. "Under the One Station Unit Training (OSUT) concept, all the ground pounding will be done here."

"We intend to supply America with the finest, most fit, and most motivated infantrymen in the world," he continued. "We will have to depend on them one day."

The graduation ceremonies will be on Friday of the 7th week of training at 10 a.m. at Deckman Field, Harmony Church.

The construction efforts of the 586th Eng Co (Float Bridge) is tested by M-60 tanks during an ORTT conducted March 12.

Counseling statement imposes bar to re-up

Soldiers who elect to sign formal counseling statements to avoid complying with overseas assignment instructions frequently overlook the long range consequences of their decision.

While the signed statement does preclude a soldier from having to serve an overseas tour during the remainder of his current enlistment, it immediately places him in a nonpromotable status, requires him to separate upon reaching his ETS date, and dictates that he must wait 93 days after ETA before becoming eligible to apply for a waiver to reenter active duty. What is more, if the request for waiver is approved, the individual stands to lose one or two grades upon reentering the Army.

In essence, then, the counseling statement constitutes a self-imposed bar to reenlistment. The soldier who faces the prospect of an overseas assignment which he feels will impose domestic hardship or added financial strain on his family should consider this course of action only as a last resort.

Once the soldier signs a counseling statement, the original copy is forwarded to the US Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center, where it is entered permanently into his Official Military Personnel File (OMPF). The second copy is filed in the soldier's field Military Personnel Records Jacket (MPRJ). The soldier who signs a statement but decides later that he wants to reenlist — as is frequently the case — must then forward through channels a fully justified request for having the statement withdrawn. These requests, however, will be approved only in those exceptionally rare instances when the soldier is able to offer sufficient evidence that he resorted to a counseling statement action only after exhausting other means of resolving legitimate personal or financial problems.

Alternatives to signing a formal counseling statement include processing for deferment from overseas assignment under the provisions of Chapter 3, AR 614-30, or submitting a request for deletion from orders through local command channels to the appropriate career branch at MILPERCEN's Enlisted Personnel Management Directorate. In either case, justification as to the degree of personal or financial hardship the overseas assignment would cause the soldier or his family must be fully documented.

In order to give soldiers who are alerted for overseas assignments the opportunity to evaluate the full impact of signing the counseling statement in lieu or reenlisting to meet time-remaining requirements, several installations have placed a 96-hour moratorium on all length of service actions. During this period, commanders and MILPOs are encouraged to advise and assist the soldier in deciding what actions can be taken to alleviate temporary personnel problems or hardships. While the decision to sign a formal counseling statement ultimately rests with the soldier, commanders and MILPO personnel should caution soldiers contemplating this course of action that the result often is a miscalculation which ends what otherwise could have been a promising career.

Former Marine named top driver

A former Marine and Vietnam veteran has captured the top spot in the 'Driver of the Month' competition for the 197th Inf Bde.

CPL Ronald W. Reece of HHC, 3/7th Inf, the battalion commander's driver, earned the honor recently during competition with eight other drivers.

"I have taken part in the competition before," remarked CPL Reece. "But, I never placed any higher than second. This month though, I really seemed to have it all going for me."

To excel in the Driver of the Month program, each driver must prove his or her ability to perform before, during, and after operations checks on their vehicles, get through a technical inspection with the least possible number of deficiencies, and pass a written examination on their vehicle.

CPL Reece entered the service in January 1968 and served in Vietnam with the 9th Marines, 3d Marine Div. He returned to the states in December 1969, where he finished his tour of duty.

He reentered the service, this time the Army, in May 1975. After his basic and advanced individual training, he was assigned to the 'Cotton-balers' of the 3/7th Inf in September of 1975.

For his efforts CPL Reece will be awarded a three-day pass and a battalion and brigade certificate of achievement.

The first battle or the last battle

By GEN William E. DePuy

About two years ago, the Army adopted as one of its primary objectives — if not the primary objective — the winning of the first battle of the next war. This was a straightforward, logical mission derived from a whole variety of facts of life. Some of these facts are that we have forces deployed in Europe facing a very much larger force of the Warsaw Pact. If we lost the first battle in Europe, it would also be the last battle. Furthermore, if we deploy into a contingency situation elsewhere, against forces equipped with modern weapons, the first division into combat would also, in all probability, be outnumbered. The loss of the first battle in a contingency could signal the failure of the entire operation. Therefore, it seemed logical to emphasize the importance of quality — quality in equipment, training, tactics, techniques, motivation and leadership. We could go farther and discuss the pressures which may develop to end any war quickly — pressures coming from the world community, the United Nations or even from the Super Powers themselves, concerned about the risk of escalation to nuclear war. All of these considerations argue the importance of very high peacetime readiness.

Recently, there has been some adverse reaction to the emphasis the Army has placed on "winning the first battle." This reaction comes from those concerned with military political affairs who believe that the concept supports a so-called "short war policy." This point of view further contends that such a policy or concept will lead inevitably to reduced forces, lower appropriations and thus, we will engineer ourselves into a posture which could only fight a short war. Thus, the contention is that the short war becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Another point of view is sometimes expressed by officials within the Reserve Components who perceive that the possible short war implications of "winning the first battle" devalue the importance of those forces in the Reserve Components which might not fight in the "first battle." Actually, it should be reasoned the other way around. Losing the first battle is a short war concept. Losing the first battle probably means the Reserves would never deploy.

From the standpoint of policy, strategy, and national interest, the United States must, without fail, win the last battle of any war. About this, there can be no doubt or no argument. However, times, weapons, and circumstances have changed so that the first battle might well be the last battle if we lost it. This is the central point in the Army's concern. It is not a short war concept.

Historically, we have kept a small peacetime Army — mobilized at the beginning of war — and finally prevailed in the end. We did, in fact, win the last battles. This scenario is not too demanding. It does not require a high state of readiness in existing forces in terms of manpower and equipment. It does not require a high state of training, or leadership or motivation. It does not even require the accumulation of war reserves of ammunition or stockpiling of weapons vehicles and ammunition to replace combat losses. It does not require up-to-date, realistic plans, in fact, it would not even require the forward deployment of Army forces.

A policy which requires us to be prepared to win the first battle, on the other hand, also requires all these preparatory measures. The Army believes that the civilian leaders of our country, the citizens and our allies all expect us to fight and win the first battle so that we can fight and win the second, third, fourth, nth and last.

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"Good grief!" my wife exclaimed. The dog began yelping and ran from the room with its tail tucked under. "What on earth are you doing?"

"Dancing," I said and twisted again. "They don't make them anymore like Chubby Checker."

"You call what you're doing dancing?" she laughed. "I've got another name for it but I won't say it because the children are home."

Another record dropped onto the turntable and Wilbert Harrison and I stepped toward Kansas City. Slapping my hands together and snapping my fingers I jumped into the chicken. "I'm tired of being an old stick of wood on the dance floor," I huffed. "We're going to take dancing lessons."

"We?" she questioned. "We are going to take dancing lessons?"

"All the new dances. We're going to be hep."

"The word used to be hep," she corrected. "But on second thought I like the way you pronounced it."

A very young voice boomed out on the next disc. "That's all right, little Mama, that's all right, I say." "Go, Elvis, go," I encouraged.

"Have you been nibbling on the stypstick again?" she demanded. "I've told you to take that out of the medicine cabinet under supervision only."

"No, no," I retorted and harmonized with 'The Hips', "that's all right."

"I think you'd better sit down before

"... do you remember where my blue suede shoes are?" I asked as Carl Perkins talked about his.

"What on earth has got into you?" she demanded.

"I was watching television and saw this fellow Don Cornelius with a bunch of people dancing and decided that we were going to be groovy again."

"There's that we, again."

"Don Cornelius and that other guy Bandstand really know how to rock and roll," I said.

"It's not Bandstand," my wife corrected, "it's Clark. And those people on their shows are about twenty years younger than you are. They can take it. I'm afraid that you won't be able to."

Little Richard screamed: "Short fat fanny, jump back in the alley . . ."

"Described to a tee," my wife nodded.

"I'm serious," I urged. "Dancing is good physical exercise."

"Stop fooling around. You're going to jerk something out of socket."

Hopping into the bump I hustled to the victrola when Little Richard's voice faded. Replacing the small record with an L.P. we heard Sweet, or Sweat, or Swit, or some group scream the 'Ballroom Blitz'. I grabbed my wife and flipped her into the macrame hanging plant hanger. The hook holding the climbing ivy ripped plaster from the wall and the heavy vase shattered on the carpet.

"Now look what you've done," she chastised.

"You ain't seen nothing yet," I grunted and flung my arms and hands out like a robot and slapped a table lamp through the front window.

"Learning how to dance is one thing, but wrecking the house while you're doing it is entirely a different step."

"If I don't practice how will I learn?" I argued.

"Go back to the television and watch them. WALK through the dance movements," she instructed. "When you've learned the basic steps and motions then you'll be able to do the new dances like everyone."

I hopped to the front of the television set and mashed potatoes as I turned it on. The program was just signing off and I watched a locomotive puff down the tracks as its whistle wailed the theme song. Punching the off button I returned to the FM set and switched on the radio.

The tune floated out and filled the room with sound.

Frank Sinatra crooned: "My way . . ."

"There are some dances one never forgets," I laughed.

"Practice makes perfect," my wife agreed.

And 'American Bandstand' and 'Soul Train' faded momentarily as we danced our way.

ABCs of CBs

If you're thinking of joining the world of CB but feel unsure about buying the equipment, consider these tips from HEW consumer officials.

First, decide your needs. The number of channels and range you want will to a large extent determine the price of a CB unit. Be prepared to shop around. Price of CB units vary widely and a little shopping around may save a lot of money.

Buying a CB set that is equipped with both a positive and negative ground is a good idea. This will make your radio "non-obsolete" when you trade in your car.

Before buying a set, check the warranty. Determine which parts are guaranteed and for how long. Make sure the warranty is one that you will be able to depend on for service and parts.

Equip your unit with removable mounts — or a detachable antenna. CBs are a target for theft; your CB antenna marks your transmitter for ripoff artists.

Once you've found and bought the CB you want, don't forget to get a license to operate it — and the FCC rules on CB operation. Most CB kits contain application forms for the license and rules, or retailers can furnish the forms. Keep in mind it's illegal to transmit on a CB without a license and there probably will be a delay in getting your license.

'Eleven earn Expert Field Medical Badge'

One hundred and thirteen candidates, representing the 34th Med Bn and the 427th Med Co of Ft. Rucker, Ala. participated in the testing for the Field Expert Medical Badge at Ft. Benning last week.

The purpose of the testing was to provide recognition to the members of the Army Medical Department for the attainment of a high level of proficiency in the performance of field medical functions.

Testing began with the Advanced Physical Fitness Test. PFC Harold Briggs of B Co, 197th Spt Bn made the highest score with 498 points.

Upon completion of the PT testing, written exams covering all facets of military field medicine were administered. This was followed by a forced road march, on the second day. The march was eight miles for the women and 12 for the men.

Sp5 Vonzella Kenny, 546th Med Co, led the women home with a time of 1 hour 59 minutes and the best time for the men was made by Sp4 Ansil Callender, HHC 3/7th Inf Bde, 2 hours and 12 minutes.

Since medics, as well as other soldiers, must be able to find their way cross country, a day and night compass course was given and after its completion, the number of candidates in contention for the coveted EFMB, was narrowed.

On the last two days of the test, the candidates became involved in the real meat of the problem, a series of stations requiring them to demonstrate their knowledge of and skill in several areas of general military and medical subjects. Areas encompassed were military courtesy and discipline, military intelligence, field sanitation, medical records, emergency, military intelligence, field sanitation, medical treatment procedures, bandaging and splinting, map reading and use of compass, transportation of the sick and wounded, basic signal communications, and chemical, biological and nuclear warfare.

The last event in the qualification test was the litter obstacle course. In this event, the candidates, operating in a four-man team, were required to extricate a patient from a disabled tracked vehicle, place him on a litter, and transport him through the obstacle course. The 600-meter course consisted of a series of hills, ditches, barriers, a culvert, and a stream. It required both strength and stamina, as well as a knowledge of the correct ways of manipulating the litter without causing further discomfort to the patient.

The next EFMB Qualification Test, to be given by the 34th Medical Battalion, is tentatively scheduled for the week of September 13, 1976. Further information, regarding testing dates, as well as registration procedures for those personnel desiring to become candidates, will be published at a later date.

Members of the 427th Med Co, Ft. Rucker, Ala. discover that splinting and bandaging is an important part of the test in the last two days.

Carrying a "wounded" soldier through the litter obstacle course is the last and one of the most difficult events of the testing.

Direct bank deposits may save paychecks

Crossing your fingers, rubbing a rabbit's foot or throwing pennies in a well will not safeguard your paycheck.

Today's crook couldn't care less about Alice in Wonderland or Aesop's Fables, so let's wake up and see it like it is.

As long as you continue to have your check delivered to street-side or other outside mail boxes, you can anticipate thieves to catch up with you sooner or later.

The thief has a lot of things going for him.

He can spot the decal on the car parked in the driveway.

He could possibly guess which pay cycle you are on, the time you leave for work and, of course, he knows which days the mailman delivers paychecks.

You may wonder how anyone could forge your endorsement and cash the check.

There are many ways and the cooks know them all.

They usually have a drivers' license and other identification appropriate for every occasion.

If they don't cash the check at a bank, supermarket or department store to get the full amount, they will use it to open a small savings account in your name at a bank or credit union.

If you have a mail box at your home which allows the mail to drop inside the house, the thief must come inside to steal your check.

The one and only sure method to play it safe, however, is to have your payroll check sent direct to a financial institution of your choice.

After establishing an account, complete a simple request card at the payroll office and you can guard your paycheck with the direct deposit plan.

The personal touch of cashing paychecks just to get the feel of a wad of dough for a few days might be great for an ego, but the risk of having a large amount of cash on hand or having the check stolen is something no one can afford.

—A LOCAL CONCERN—

"Hounddog 6, this is Hounddog 3, standing down. Have six enemy PWs; no casualties."
 "Hounddog 3, this is Hounddog 6. How many dead enemy?"
 "Hounddog 6, this is Hounddog 3. No dead enemy."
 "Hounddog 3, this is 6—I want a report of three dead enemy."

In this hypothetical situation, what is Hounddog 6 telling 3 in response to the latter's statement that he has no dead enemy? At first blush it may appear that Hounddog 6 is ordering 3 to shoot three of the enemy PWs.

What if the patrol leader (Hounddog 3) responds to the statement, "I want a report of three dead enemy," by telling one of his men that the CO wants three of the enemy killed, and thereupon, the man to whom this information is passed raises his rifle to his shoulder and shoots three of the PWs.

Criminal Order

What has happened here? First, if shooting the PWs is what the CO meant (back to that later), then he has issued what is termed a "criminal" order; that is, the CO has issued an order which, if followed, will result in the commission of a clearly obvious crime. An individual who receives this type of order is under an obligation to disobey it (Article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice requires that only "lawful" orders be obeyed). Should he follow the order and it results in a crime, he cannot defend himself by claiming, "I was only following orders." No one has the authority to give a criminal order and one who carries out such an order cannot defend using the order as a shield against conviction. The individual carrying out the order is responsible for the crime as is the one who orders it.

In the example given above, did the commander mean for the person receiving the order to shoot the PWs? Or did he mean for the unit to submit a false count or to resume its patrol and come back with three dead enemy lawfully obtained in hostile action? This latter order to go out and kill three of the enemy is not ordering any criminal act. It is an order to become involved in combat activity and, if the situation allows, for the killing of three individuals during this combatant activity, then to report the number of enemy killed. Killing an enemy combatant during combat is lawful. It is the killing of enemy noncombatants or captured PWs that is unlawful and murder.

Upon receiving a criminal type order, what should you do?

- Seek clarification. Ask the individual issuing the order what he means by it. "Do you want me to shoot three of the prisoners?" If he answers "No, I want you to resume your patrol," etc., then you have no problem. But if he replies "Yes

I want you to shoot three," then it is plain he is ordering a criminal act. What do you do? It's not easy to refuse an order in combat. Nevertheless, the answer plain and simple is that you cannot obey this order. You are under a duty to disobey it.

- Try to have the order revoked. Explain to the person giving the order that it is a crime, and that following it would result not only in your committing a criminal offense, but in his committing one also. Point out that obedience to the directive would lead not only to your being court-martialed but would result in his being court-martialed too.

Condensed from an article by Major James McGowan, Jr., former Chief, International Law Division, The Judge Advocate General's School, Charlottesville, Virginia.

- Go to higher authority. If the person issuing the criminal order will not revoke it, report the order to that person's next higher superior. Explain the criminal effect of the order to the superior and ask him to revoke the order or see to its revocation. In the last step, if all others fail, refuse to obey the order.

- Report criminal acts. If you are compelled to choose the refusal alternative, then report the order and its results, if carried out by others, to your superiors. You may also report violations of the rules of war to the Inspector General, Provost Marshal, Chaplain, or a Judge Advocate. In any case, the law requires that you report such orders and actual or suspected violations of the law of war immediately so that evidence will not disappear or get lost. Reporting the order and any violation of the law of war will protect you and may prevent further violations.

Quick Reaction in Battle

Keep in mind that on the battlefield you may be required to decide immediately if you are going to respond to an order. All the law asks you to do is act reasonably. If you are not sure that following an order will result clearly in the committing of a crime then obey the order.

For example, you are in a combat situation and you are given the order to fire on a church or hospital. You remember a block of instruction on the law of war where you were told that these buildings are protected and may not be fired upon. Should you not be able to request clarification, or after informing the one issuing the firing order that the target is a protected building, you are nevertheless ordered to fire and quickly, then obey the order. It may be known to the superior that the enemy is using the building as an outpost, headquarters or for other military purpose. In any event, the order is not clearly criminal. Any resulting criminal liability will rest with the superior issuing the order, in this case, and not with the subordinate who carried it out.

Criminal vs. Unlawful

A criminal order does not mean one to "cut your hair," "do fatigue duty" or any other order which you may consider outside the authority of a superior to issue. Such orders may be unlawful, that is, the superior issuing them may not have the lawful authority to give the order; but, they are not criminal. You have the power (not the right) to disobey an unlawful order; however, you do so at your own risk. This means that should the order be unlawful, then your refusal to obey will be excused. Should the order prove to be unlawful, then you can be charged for violating an order, tried and convicted by court-martial.

The rule is: Follow lawful orders at all times; it is only criminal orders that you MUST disobey. There is no question about choice or risk. You are under a duty to disobey an order to commit a crime, and you assume no risk when you refuse.

History of federal civil employes union offered

By Betty Zimmerman

The American Federation of Government Employes was organized and affiliated with the Secretary of Labor on the national level in October 1932.

In February 1933, the national office chartered the Columbus, Ga. Lodge No. 54 which was comprised of 32 Ft. Benning employes. One, Mrs. Petty V. Light, is still a member.

In the beginning, the lodge was treated more as an association or fraternity than a union. But as they grew it was decided by the members that they could better accomplish their purpose by becoming the American Federation of Government employes (AFGE) Local 54.

The purpose of AFGE at that time was and now 42 years later still is to organize and promote the civic and economic welfare of all government employes.

AFGE is dedicated to obtaining better working conditions, safety conditions, and better pay and retirement benefits for federal employes.

At the national level, AFGE has seven lawyers who handle cases of its members throughout the world in federal courts.

At the local level, AFGE Local 54 has won many grievances, complaints, unfair labor practices, reinstatement cases, and back pay in excess of $4,000.

Membership dues make this legal action possible. There are over 300-thousand members nationally now with over 670,000 employes represented. Ft. Benning has 1400 members out of approximately 4600 general schedule employes who are eligible to join.

Lobbying is another method used by AFGE. There is a full time lobbyist in the Senate and in the House on Capitol Hill. They represent all members throughout the world in lobbying for legislation involving particular jobs and organizations. For example, they fight defense budget cuts because when budget cuts occur, the first people affected are usually civil service employes.

The union felt a necessity for lobbying for the right to organize in the federal sector. This was denied several times, but in October 1962, President John F. Kennedy issued Executive Order 10988, which authorized unions to legally organize workers on all federal reservations, military bases, Health, Education and Welfare, Social Security employes, etc.

Since being allowed to unionize the federal workers, the rules, regulations, and laws governing civil service employes have changed tremendously in favor of the workers; such as better pay, sick leave policies, annual leave policies, equal rights for women, and equal rights for all employes.

In 1965, AFGE Local 54 under John T. Cato, received the first exclusive recognition for the Firefighter Unit at Ft. Benning. The next recognition was for the commissary employes in 1966. Also in 1966, they received recognition for nursing assistants and nurses at Martin Army Hospital.

The next exclusive unit was won by an election under the supervision of the Secretary of Labor for all general schedule personnel, non-supervisory, working at Ft. Benning in 1966.

To obtain a contract or agreement, as management likes for it to be known, items of negotiability such as working conditions, hours of work and tours of duty, are agreed upon by management and the union. Then they must be adhered to by both parties.

Mr. Leo Lyons, a retiree of both the Civil Service and the United States Army, is the current president of AFGE Local 54. He feels that everyone eligible should join the union, thereby accepting their responsibility in protecting their rights.

Women and weapons

Local commanders now have the prerogative to establish local policy regarding women carrying weapons due to new Department of the Army policy. The Army's view is to permit women to take part in all of their unit's activities if such participation does not convey the impression that women are combat soldiers or members of the Combat Arms.

Women participating in ceremonial formations such as honorary firing details, funeral details and color guards is appropriate, since such participation is not considered as combat-oriented.

First-term female personnel who entered the Army prior to July 1 1975 and whose contract does not require weapons qualification cannot be required to carry a weapon. Voluntary consent is necessary.

"Since I've been in the Army, the longest I've sat still is for this photograph."

SP/4 Susan Boguta likes to keep active, but we interrupted her busy schedule to find out what she likes about the Army.

"After I graduated from college, I decided to try a technical job, one that would help me learn about flying. Because eventually I'd like to be a pilot. So my training's helped a lot.

"I also enjoy meeting people and talking about my work. So recruiting work has been a natural for me.

"One of the things I always mention to the young people I meet is that the Army's taught me you can do much more than you think you can. The opportunities are here, all you have to do is take advantage of them. And that's what I'm doing."

Boeing vs. Sikorsky in UTTA

A nine-month flyoff—called government competitive testing — between two versions of the utility tactical transport aircraft system (UTTAS) will begin with a demonstration and display of the prototypes at Lawson Army Airfield at 2:00 p.m. tomorrow.

The competing helicopters, built by Boeing Vertol of Philadelphia and Sikorsky Aircraft of Stratford, Conn., are powered by two 1,500 horsepower General Electric gas turbine engines. The winner is to receive a production contract, now scheduled to begin in January 1977.

Prior to flight demonstrations, MG Willard Latham, the post commander, will give welcoming remarks, and representatives of the two contractors will speak on the merits of their respective products. GEN Walter T. Kerwin will be on hand for the ceremonies. The 283d Army band will also participate in the activities.

For the convenience of the spectators, shuttle buses will run from Infantry Hall to Lawson Army Airfield starting at 12:30 p.m. No privately owned vehicles will be allowed in the vicinity of the airfield during the demonstrations. Spectators are asked to be seated by 1:55 p.m. Both military and civilian spectators are invited to partake in the ceremonies.

The UTTAS, one of the Army's "Big Five" development projects, will be the Army's main transport helicopter of the future. The vehicle will be able to carry a fully-equipped combat squad, and is built to meet the highest standards of reliability, survivability and maintainability.

In the late '60s, the Department of the Army formulated the UTTAS concept to replace or supplement the aging UH-1 "Huey" fleet. Designs called for a twin-engine helicopter with wheeled landing gear; to be air-transportable aboard C-130, C-141 and C-5A aircraft. It was to cruise at 145 to 175 knots (167 to 210 miles per hour), carrying a crew of three, plus 11 combat-equipped soldiers. Numerous other performance and design specifications have been added to insure maximum aircraft survivability and crashworthiness in a hostile battlefield environment.

Overseeing the development of this new aircraft is the UTTAS Project Manager's Office, of the U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM), Alexandria, Va. MG Jerry B. Lauer, UTTAS Project Manager, controls this operation through his offices at HQ, U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command (AVSCOM), St. Louis, Mo.

In 1971, the General Electric Company of Lynn, Mass., was selected to develop the UTTAS engine. The development contract was signed on March 6, 1972.

Six months later, Sikorsky Aircraft and the Boeing-Vertol Company were awarded airframe development contracts. Each company was to develop a design and build prototypes that would be tested against the specifications.

These aircraft will be evaluated by the Army for the remainder of this year. The winner will be awarded a contract by January, 1977, to build the UTTAS fleet for the entire Army.

Testing begins at the U.S. Army Development Test Activity, Ft. Rucker, Ala., which will conduct one of three phases of the competitive prototype qualifications tests. Simultaneously, one in-strumented prototype from each contractor will undergo engineering flight tests at Edwards AFB, Calif., conducted by the U.S. Army Aviation Engineering Flight Activity (AEFA). Phase three of this test by the 101st Airmobile Division (Air Assault) at Ft. Campbell, Ky., beginning in June.

Three Boeing UYH-61A helicopters fly in formation to demonstrate controllability and ease in handling during a test flight.

In the first two phases, two helicopters of each competitive design will be flown for three weeks of pilot training and nine weeks of testing, for a total of 295 flight hours per design. These tests will be conducted at Shell Army Heliport and in the vicinity of Ft. Rucker.

The complexity of the testing, which includes participation of numerous Commands, Schools, Centers and Agencies, has necessitated the formation of a test task force at the Aircraft Development Test Activity. The Test Activity has been augmented with additional pilots, maintenance personnel and test data collection teams from the 101st Airmobile Division (Air Assault), Ft. Campbell. This task force will work together to evaluate human factors, reliability, availability and maintainability data, armaments, electronics, safety, air transportability, ground handling and mission compatibility characteristics.

How well the competitors meet these required specifications during the testing period will determine the contract winner.

Sikorsky Aircraft's UYH-60A demonstrates a 90 degree bank angle and high roll rate that will provide the agility and maneuverability for effective nap-of-the-earth operation.

60A UTTAS candidate protects the tail boom and rotor in high flare angle touchdowns, especially in rough terrain.

Both sexes the same, for training purposes

Men and women ROTC cadets will receive the same summer camp training this year — and OCS training for men and women will also be the same, following a DA decision to standardize precommissioning training programs. Only essential adjustments will be made to allow for physiological differences.

The ROTC changes go into effect with summer camps this year. Until now, men and women have received different summer camp instruction although on-campus training is the same.

The OCS changes will go into effect October 17 when men and women attend the first class of FY 77 getting underway at Ft. Benning. The women's OCS course at Ft. McClellan, Ala., is 11 weeks long and differs significantly from Ft. Benning's 14 week version. The McClellan course will be phased out in FY 78. Also, the direct commissioning orientation course for women at Ft. McClellan will be phased out in FY 77.

West Point training for men and women next July will be the same except for minimum essential adjustments to allow for physiological differences.

Although all precommissioning programs vary, DA considers it important that all precommissioning candidates receive — to the degree possible — similar military instructions. This should allow officers in each year group to start their careers with similar training backgrounds in military skills.

Orienting women on combat skills, tactics and weaponry is a necessity, DA officials say. Women officers graduates of OCS and ROTC must compete with their male contemporaries — and later with USMA women graduate contemporaries — who will have had this background.

Conference looks at sexism, racism

By Betty Zimmerman

UNDERSTANDING and TRUST! These two words dominated the consensus of every workshop during the evaluation period at the close of the TRADOC Sexism and Racism Conference here last week.

The Ft. Benning Chaplaincy and TRADOC co-sponsored the conference with the theme being "Dialoguing with Sexual and Racial Uniqueness."

The participants were chaplains, company commanders, race relations counselors, etc. — people who are confronted with the problems covered in the workshops.

The conference attempted to bring about a greater understanding of various humane problems and to set up models of counseling methods so that the counselor can effectively help the distressed person in the sensitive areas covered.

The two keynote speakers were Dr. Quentin Hand from the Candler Theological Seminary, Atlanta and Dr. Roger Shinn of the Union Theological Seminary, New York.

The subjects covered in the workshops were: "Counseling the Black Male," facilitators — Dr. Edward Wimberly, an instructor in psychology of religion and pastoral care at the Theological Center, Atlanta, and as his assistant, Chaplain (CPT) James Coppedge;

"Woman's Concerns in Human Sexuality," facilitator — Ms. Frances Nagata, director of counseling and training at the Sexual Enrichment Center of Atlanta, with Chaplain (CPT) Mark Gruebmeier as the assistant;

"Marriage Enrichment and Growth," facilitator — Reverend and Mrs. Richard Robertson from the Pastoral Institute of Columbus with assistant, Chaplain (CPT) Larry Farrell;

"Understanding and Counseling the Homosexual," facilitator — Reverend Paul Kapp, chief clinical chaplain of the West Central Georgia Regional Hospital, Columbus and assistant Chaplain (CPT) John Allyn;

"Counseling Females in Rape and Other Crises," facilitator — Dr. Ann McAllister, director of the Rape Crisis Center, Grady Memorial Hospital, Atlanta with Chaplain (CPT) Leander Berndt as assistant.

The conclusion reached during the evaluation period at the conference closing was that enlightenment, compassion and understanding were the main attributes of the entire conference.

Airlines extend leave fares

Airline leave fares, scheduled to end March 31, have been extended an additional year.

Military reservation fares, in effect since the early '60s, allow servicemembers on leave and traveling at their own expense to buy reserved coach or economy seat tickets at a 25 per cent discount.

To qualify for the reduced fares, a servicemember must show a valid active duty ID when buying a ticket. Travelers also will be required to sign a statement that they are on authorized military leave/pass or within seven days of separation, and that travel is at their own expense. Travel in uniform is not required.

The airlines were unanimous in their agreement to extend the leave fares. The reduced fares put air travel within the reach of many servicemembers who might otherwise not be able to afford it. (ANF)

Marksanship unit rebuilding long-range rifles

This M-21 weapon systems is one 342 which are being rebuilt and tested by the Army Marksmanship Unit. They are capable of first round hits at up to 1,000 meters in the hands of a trained marksman.

The Army Marksmanship Unit (AMU) has launched a project to rebuild 342 M-21 long-range marksmanship weapons for use by the XVIII Abn Corps, headquartered at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

AMU, the developer of the M-21 system, expects to complete the project in two months. When rebuilt and "tuned up," these weapons will meet match grade specifications and will enable long-range marksmen to register first round hits on targets at ranges up to 1,000 meters.

During the rebuilding process, AMU is training unit armorers from the 82nd Abn Div, 101st Abn Div and the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center in the maintenance of the system. Each group spends two weeks learning about the M-21 and assisting in the rebuild process.

Rebuilding includes reglazing the stock to obtain a tighter fit for the action and "air gauging" the barrel, a process developed by the automotive industry which can accurately measure the diameter of the barrel to within 1/10,000th of an inch. AMU gunsmiths are able to rebuild one M-21 to meet match grade specifications every five hours.

The M-21 system is actually a finely-tuned M-14 rifle mounted with the Adjustable Ranging Telescope (ART). This telescope was developed by LT Jim Leatherwood while assigned to AMU and was used effectively in Vietnam by the 9th Inf Div.

The Army Marksmanship Unit conducts numerous long-range marksmanship clinics for all branches of the Department of Defense and various law enforcement agencies. Members of the XVIII Abn Corps who have completed the clinic will conduct their own clinics once the rebuilt M-21's have been delivered.

Interest in long-range marksmanship has resurged under the aegis of LTG Henry Emerson, commanding general of the XVIII Abn Corps, who was an early advocate of the development of the M-21 system and its deployment in Vietnam.

Value of medical benefits rated tops

Soldiers value medical benefits more than any other service benefit, according to recent surveys. When asked to rank benefits in order of value, soldiers usually place medical care at the top. Commissary and PX privileges, and then government furnished family quarters follow. They know that a lot of money is saved each year by not having to pay hospital and doctor bills. But how much money is saved?

The money saved depends upon the individual and hinges on whether the soldier is married and the number of dependents.

One way of looking at cost savings is to compare the nationwide per capita health and medical expense. According to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the national average was $547 for every man, woman and child in the U. S. during FY 75. For a soldier with a family of four the total cost that could have been incurred if the national average held true would be $2,188. Some would reply that the figure would be far too high. True, the national average is for people of all ages — including infants and the elderly who require much more medical attention. But some service families with specific medical problems receive medical attention from military hospitals that far exceed that amount.

Another way of comparing costs is to look at how much the civilian population must pay for similar health care benefits. The key word is "similar." No health care plan comes close to matching the full benefits of military health care. Federal employees participating in the Federal Employees Health Benefits program this year pay $520 in premiums for a high option family insurance plan which comes closest to matching the military health benefits. The government contributes to the premiums bringing the total to $1,121 each year in premiums.

Another way of measuring the cost associated with medical facilities is the price taxpayers pay for the operation of Army hospitals and medical care programs — including CHAMPUS. Again, the cost depends on the number of dependents. The Army estimates it spent $378 in FY 75 for each person — active duty, retirees and dependents — treated in military medical facilities or under CHAMPUS. So the average family of four saved about $1,500 by not having to pay for medical care.

CHAMPUS is a form of medical care available to dependents and retirees and their dependents. For outpatient care, the dependent or retiree pays the first $50 per person with a $100 maximum per family per FY. CHAMPUS pays 80 per cent of the remaining charges for dependents of active duty personnel, and 75 per cent for retirees and their dependents.

For inpatient care, the soldier's dependent pays the first $25 or $3.90 per day, whichever is greater, and CHAMPUS pays the rest. Retirees and their dependents pay 25 per cent of the total hospital charges and 25 per cent of the fees of professional personnel.

Although medical benefits may be viewed by the soldier as being free, actually they aren't. Army medical facilities are paid for an operated with taxpayer's money and are considered part of the total cost of operating the Army.

What military medical benefits are worth depends upon the personal circumstances of the soldier and dependents. If no one in the family becomes ill or injured, or otherwise requires medical care, then the savings may not amount to much — but the hospital was available at anytime. That availability contributes to the soldier's peace of mind. It becomes even more important if the service member is stationed apart from his family.

The availability of modern up-to-date medical facilities and competent professional care is a strong incentive when the service member ponders the question of whether to reup or not. When the decision time comes, military medical benefits weigh heavily on the plus side. (ANF).

Army relief campaign seeks $20,000 goal

A proposed goal of $20,000 is hoped to be reached during the Joint Army Emergency Relief-American Relief Society (AER-ARS) campaign which was kicked-off Monday.

"We are hoping that every unit will make an effort to reach its goal by the end of March," stated Colonel Wallace Veaudry, chairman of the fund drive.

Last year, 1,443 Ft. Benning personnel were assisted financially by AER in the amount of $156,170 in loans and grants.

Loans are made for emergency situations, such as loss of pay, travel expenses due to family illness or death, and emergency dental or medical expenses. Repayment of these loans is by allotment without interest.

Widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel may seek financial assistance from the ARS. AER is charged with helping members of the active duty Army, and their dependents, and dependents of Army personnel missing in action.

All personnel assigned to the Infantry Center and school staffs, operating elements, and offices and departments, are asked to contribute to the fund drive at their duty section. All others are asked to contribute through the unit to which they are assigned or attached.

Answers to questions about Benning House

In conjunction with the Open House on the 6th Anniversary of Benning House, MAJ Frank Shehulski, Alcohol and drug control officer, had the following answers to a reporter's question concerning Benning House.

Q. What is Benning house and what categories of people does it serve?

A. The Benning House, as we know it here, is the rehabilitation portion of the alcohol and drug abuse prevention and control program. It serves the military as well as their dependents, retirees and their dependents, and civilian employees.

Q. Who operates the Benning house?

A. Benning House is a part of the installation's Alcohol and Drug Control Program operation.

Q. How does someone voluntarily get into the rehabilitation program?

A. Someone that recognizes that they have a problem may enter the program by contacting our intake section for an appointment at Bldg 2212 or by calling 545-4891.

Q. Can someone be mandatorily put in the program?

A. Yes, a supervisor or company commander can enroll a member of his staff or command that has shown evidence of having a drinking or drug problem.

Q. If someone volunteers or is put into the program, will disciplinary action be taken against them?

A. No, not for the use of any drugs or alcohol. However, this does not preclude the individual being punished for something he did while under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Q. What type of treatment is given?

A. We have two types of treatment at this facility. One is the resident treatment, where the client lives in for 30 days and works out. The other is the non-resident treatment where the client lives at home or in the barracks but attends counseling sessions and other activities at the ADCO complex during non-duty hours.

The treatment consists of individual counseling as well as group therapy and the modalities vary according to the needs of the individual. We try to show clients other things such as hobbies, sports, etc. that they can do with their time in place of drinking for instance. This is called "alternative highs."

Q. How long must a participant stay involved with the program?

A. A total of 12 months. Thirty days in the resident program, 30 days in the non-resident program and 10 months of follow-up. Evaluations are made by the commander or supervisor during this period as to the production output of the client and progress reports of his rehabilitation and adjustment are maintained.

Hashish, marijuana -- a comparison

How are hashish and marijuana alike? Different? What are the dangers of both?

1. Background: Most users equate hashish with marijuana, a mistake that may prove to be dangerous to their health.

Most of the marijuana obtained on the streets in the United States is a low-grade form of the Indian hemp plant. Possession, use, or sale is illegal under the Federal "Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act" of 1970.

Hashish is eight to ten times more potent than marijuana and therefore is more likely to be dangerous to the user. Its use, possession, or sale is also illegal under the Federal law.

Attributing similar effects to the smoking of a joint marijuana or a bowl of hashish is like assuming that drinking a bottle of beer has the same effect as drinking a bottle of vodka in the same period of time.

2. What Causes The "Kick"? Both marijuana and hashish provide a "kick" from the same substance since both come from the same family of plants. The user's reactions come from two forms of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC).

These two active ingredients are levodelta 9 transtetrahydrocannabinol and levo-delta 8 transtetrahydrocannabinol. These intoxicants are contained in a sticky, golden-yellow resin produced by glandular hairs located on the flowers and leaves of the Indian hemp plant.

Hashish is the concentrated resin from plant cultivated solely to produce it.

Marijuana, on the other hand, is the cut flowers, leaves, and stems of the plant.

Hashish or marijuana — any drugs, in fact — affect the human body in direct relation to the amount of the drug getting into the physical system, the speed with which it enters, the relationship between the drug and other substances in or entering the body, and the rate of detoxification by the body.

Medical studies, however, indicate that hashish is a stronger irritant to the lungs, and both X-ray studies and autopsies made over the span of several years indicate that abnormal changes similar to precancer conditions in the lung structure of chronic, heavy cigarette users may occur.

For example, smoking hashish or marijuana permits the intoxicant to enter the body rapidly, while eating such substances would result in a slower rate of entry.

Q. What Are The Results of Use? Both hashish and marijuana cause a reddening of the eyes, a faster heart beat, a feeling of sleepiness after the first physical reaction, and a feeling of hunger. The use of either may also cause distortion of hearing and vision.

With hashish there are greater and stronger occurrences of acute psychotic reactions. Researchers have found that hashish users may have reactions ranging from mild to severe anxiety to addition to paranoid ideation, disorientation as to persons or times or places, mental confusion, and delusions. These are not easily passed-over reactions, but physical changes which can last from 30 minutes to up to eight hours, depending on the individual's response differences.

In addition to possible physiological and psychological harm from the use of marijuana and hashish, users leave themselves open to criminal prosecution since they are illegal to use, possess, or sell under Federal Law.

Smoking the product may be dangerous to the user's health.

Benning engineer nominated for Army award

By Robert P. Speer

For the second year in a row the 36th Engr Gp nominated an NCO from the same platoon for the Army's Sturgis Award.

SSG Albert E. Potter, Co. D, 43d Engr Bn (Const) is this year's nominee.

The Sturgis Award, named in honor of LTC Samuel D. Sturgis, is presented each year to the active duty enlisted member of the US Army who makes the most outstanding contribution in the field of military engineering.

In his recommendation, the 43d Engr Bn commander stated, "SSG Potter's performance of duty has been exemplary. Not only has he displayed individual expertise in both his primary and secondary MOS by his scores through the Army's testing system, but has demonstrated an enviable ability to apply that knowledge in actual practice in both areas of training and mission accomplishment."

"The major point of notice belongs to the men within the platoon," Potter said.

Recipients of the Sturgis Award for active units are selected by a team of personnel, chaired by the Assistant Commandant, US Army Engineer School, Ft. Belvoir, Va.

A typical fish story?

By Benny Blankenship

It is a well-known fact that fishermen are notorious liars. It is also a well-known fact that fishermen get involved in almost unbelievable situations in pursuit of their favorite quarry. In fact, at times, its downright hard to believe some of the things you hear concerning fishermen and the situations they find themselves in. A case in point — SSG Joe Brand, Ranger Department, USAIS, was bass fishing in the Cowickee Creek area awhile back.

Always in quest of "super bass," he cast a blue grape worm out in hopes of hooking old "bucket mouth."

As the worm settled to the bottom, he started his slow retrieve. Sure enough, there it was, the old familiar "tap" "tap." Brand reared back, set the hook, then settled down to leisurely reel in old "hog jaws."

But something was not right, he was having a tough time of it, the fish was taking out more line than was coming in. This, added to the throbbing lunger stick in his hand, served to enlarge the already expanded image in Brand's mind of the world's record bass he was hauling in.

After a great deal of grunting, sweating, swearing and reeling old "sow belly" surfaced next to the boat — a ten foot alligator!

Needless to say, Brand relinquished his grape worm to the unfriendly gator and beat a hasty retreat.

It rained all day last Sunday as the Post Bass Club held their monthly tournament on Lake George.

Undaunted by this, most fishermen turned in fine catches and LTC Tom Ray, DDTD, USAIS was declared the winner with 22 pounds, 4 ounces of fish.

Bill benefits. Can my children make use of these unused benefits?

A — Veterans can not pass on their GI benefits to their children.

Q — When is a veteran entitled to receive additional VA

A — The veteran's service-connected condition must be rated 50 per cent or more disabling.

CAREER CORNER

Since Colonial days, the infantryman has formed the heart of the United States Army. The first soldiers recruited for the Army in 1775 were infantrymen and the modern Army still places a high priority on recruiting top-quality men to fill the Infantry ranks.

Infantrymen start in such jobs as riflemen or as assistant gunners on mortars, recoilless rifles or anti-tank guided missiles. Assignments are also available in airborne units or Special Service Teams for qualified individuals. Infantrymen may progress in their field to such positions as light-weapons infantrymen or Infantry Operation and Intelligence Specialists.

Those who enjoy competitive sports and the outdoors might be especially well-suited to a job in the Infantry. A strong sense of teamwork should also prove helpful to a young man considering a career as an infantryman.

Memorial services held today for three soldiers

Memorial services for three of the seven soldiers who died in a helicopter crash near Dahlonega, Ga., last Saturday afternoon will be held at 10 a.m. today at The Infantry Center Chapel on Main Post.

The three men were CW2 Roger D. Givens, 25, who piloted the aircraft, and SP 4 Carl E. Campbell, 22, of the 121st Avn Co, 34th Med Bn. and 2LT William P. Russell, 25, who was assigned to Hq Co, HQ Cmd but was on temporary duty with the 121st Avn Co.

Memorial services for four other victims of the crash were held Tuesday in the Kelley Hill Chapel. They were 2LT William M. Warehime, 22; SGT Sheldon W. Gran, 20; SGT Daniel R. Deyarim, 21, and PVT Randall J. Ladwig. All were Rangers with the 1st Bn, 29th Inf.

The seven men were aboard a UH-1H (Huey) helicopter when it crashed on Aiken Mountain about 20 miles north of Dahlonega while on a training mission. Two Rangers of the 1st Bn, 29th Inf, PVT Shawn E. Patterson, 18, and SGT Albert W. Helwig, 22, survived the crash and are listed in good condition at Martin Army Hospital.

Patterson and Helwig walked away from the wreckage to seek help. Patterson made his way to a home about two and one-half miles from the crash site and telephoned authorities Sunday morning. Helwig was found later by a ground search party.

Medical evacuation units were dispatched to the scene and medics were lowered to the crash site by cable. Rangers then rappelled into the area for security purposes and to assist in removing the bodies by litter. They were then transported down the mountainside to Camp Merrill for identification. The bodies were brought to Martin Army Hospital from Camp Merrill at about 7 p.m. Sunday.

The cause of the crash is presently under investigation.

Trainees arrive, training begins

The first group of trainees to arrive last week for Advanced Individual Training at Ft. Benning have begun their tough, seven-week course and are on the way to becoming hard, seasoned Infantrymen.

Monday marked the first full day of training as the newcomers to the 1st AIT Bde began inprocessing after a one-hour physical training period. Training orientations and briefings on what will be expected of them during the next seven weeks followed. The remainder of the week was spent on road marches to field locations for weapons instruction and rigorous physical training Brigade Commander COL Jack B. Farris in a recent address, called for 'tough, meaningful training. . .while exerting care to preserve human dignity.' This coming week will consist of more strenuous conditioning on an ever increasing basis to develop stamina and strength for the more demanding training to come in the later part of the course.

This initial group of 650 trainees was joined by another 450 this week, rounding out the strength of the brigade at 1100 men. An additional five or six hundred trainees are expected to join the brigade next week.

Graduation ceremonies for the trainees will be held on Friday of the seventh week of training at 10 a.m. at Deckman Field, Harmony Church.

PVT Timothy Bilodeau, the first BCT graduate to arrive for AIT receives instructions on where to report from SFC Gary Connor, a drill sergeant with Co A, 1st Bn, 1st AIT Bde.

Squad members (L to R) are PFC Melvin Picou, PV2 Larry Taque, PVT Michael Cotton, PVT Randy Eldridge, SP4 Jackie Haskins, PFC Daniel Jones, PV2 Henry Jordan, PVT Jerry Smitherman, and PVT Michael Collins. The 1/29th Inf, which had the distinction of placing the first squads aboard UTTAS prototypes, was also the parent unit of the first airborne test unit formed at Ft. Benning on July 1, 1940. The test platoon became the original members of the 501st Parachute Company.

Top brass concerned with 'erosion of benefits'

There is a popular belief among soldiers throughout the Army that the time honored traditional benefits of the military service are being reduced or eliminated without any effort to resist.

True some of the benefits which have been taken for granted by the present generation of soldiers, are being looked at more closely in terms of today's austere budgets and tightened economy. And, true, some relatively new innovative approaches to soldier incentives such as Project Transition and pro pay have been terminated. But the leaders of today's Army are making a major effort to counteract the trend toward a loss of real Army benefits.

Called upon to testify before Congress, they have appraised congressional leaders of the concern with the Army over the perceived loss of benefits.

GEN Fred C. Weyand, Chief of Staff of the Army, in response to a question from Sen. Strom Thurmond replied, "The 'erosion of benefits' has had a detrimental impact on the morale of our members. We see it often in Congressional and White House correspondence as well as during interviews while on trips to the field. As I mentioned previously, service members view reductions or deletions of programs as 'hits' against them. Examples of some such 'hits' are reductions in medical, dental and CHAMPUS benefits, elimination of superior performance pay, and reduction of total accrued leave payments. Service members see their benefits being piecemealed away at a time when the bulk of these men and women are experiencing hard times economically. They consider such piecemeal changes as losses of earned entitlements and a breach of faith. This may well, in the long term, cause members to become dissatisfied with their commitment to the military, a situation which I view as serious. I urge that no further action be taken to reduce or eliminate benefits until a full assessment of the total personnel impact can be made."

In testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on Defense Appropriations, LTG H. G. Moore, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, pointed out to that subcommittee that the individual soldier is our most important weapon. He added that a large part of the reason why soldiers fight effectively is loyalty — loyalty to one another, to their units and ultimately to the Army and the Nation. He said that loyalty is a total commitment which is reflected in the compensation and benefits the Nation provides to members of active, retired and Reserve Components.

"Pay and benefits provided to a servicemember, are intended to support him (and his dependents, if any)," Moore continued, "so that he can devote maximum attention to demanding military duties. They are tangible evidence by the Nation.

"However, over the past 2-3 years, continued criticism and questioning of soldier pay, compensation, benefits, and way of life have frustrated and often bewildered our soldiers, including those who have retired. Some of these actions were not difficult to explain and the Army realized and accepts this. However, the continuing stream of piecemeal 'take-aways' by various government agencies, uncoordinated in some cases, all land on a small target — soldiers, their families and in certain instances the retired soldier and his family. And, of these, some actions have the effect of degrading the environment of the Army as a service institution. Certain of these actions . . . have been viewed by many soldiers as a failure . . . to honor contractual and unwritten, yet moral, commitments. Such actions have caused soldiers to doubt the credibility of current and future commitments by the Army."

Army leaders view the continued piecemeal attempts to reduce or eliminate Army benefits with the same concern as the soldier in the field does. These statements by Generals Weyand and Moore before Congress point out the seriousness with which the top soldiers view these activities.

The strength of their language emphasizes their desire to retain those compensations and benefit items necessary to attract and retain quality soldiers and to recognize the unique obligations and conditions of service. (ANF)

Enlisted reports can be appealed

Most soldiers know what a less than average enlisted evaluation report (ERR/SEER) may do to an Army career.

Usually, an ERR/SEER accurately reflects a soldier's overall performance. But there are a few times when a report is not accurate nor indicative of performance — either because of an administrative error or injustice.

In such cases, EER/SEERs can be appealed.

Appealing an evaluation report because of administrative error means the rated soldier thinks a mistake has been made on the report — such as a rating by the wrong rater or an incorrect rating period.

Appealing a report for injustice is another matter. This contends that the rater made an error in judgment or was unfair to the rated soldier.

If a soldier wants to appeal, the first thing to do is check Chapter 8, AR 600-200 to make sure there are grounds for appeal (the first sergeant or personnel officer can help).

Assuming there are grounds for appeal, the soldier should submit a copy of the report that was given to him when he signed his EER/SEER — a true copy of his DA Forms 2 and 2-1, which can be obtained from the local personnel officer — and a verified copy of the EER/SEER rating scheme from the unit orderly room. A stop at the local personnel office for a records check and other assistance — also should be at the top of the list.

If a soldier is making an appeal because of injustice he should have statements from personnel senior to him; sworn statements are preferred but aren't necessary.

Once this is completed the soldier should send his appeal to the Commander, U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center, ATTN: PCRC-RP, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249.

Regardless of the type of appeal, remember:

- The appeal must originate from the rated soldier. A commander can't initiate a soldier's appeal. A rater can neither reconsider nor change a previous rating. Once a report is accepted and scored by EREC it can be changed only by the rated soldier's appeal.

- If the soldier appeals and loses, the paperwork becomes part of his permanent record. Promotion/selection boards can then review the soldier's side of the EER/SEER.

- There is a time frame in which an appeal can be made. For the old EERs (DA Forms 2166-4), an appeal can be made any time up to five years from the ending month of the report. For the new EER/SEER forms (DA Forms 2166-5 and 5A), it's two years from the time the enlisted person signed it. If the soldier didn't sign it, two years from the date local personnel office certified it.

- Commanders are required to inform rated personnel of the local rating scheme and make it available.

- Before appealing an ERR or SEER, a soldier should consider whether it will raise or lower an EERWA. A mistake or error should be corrected, but a soldier shouldn't expect all approved appeals to raise the EERWA. (ANF)

Eeeyyy--you're not even 'COOL'

By J. Gorecki

Hear any new four-letter words lately? I'm referring to the vulgar ones that seem to permeate the environment and burn the listener's ears. By now it's quite possible that you've heard them all, but that shouldn't mean that you are duty-bound to add to their circulation in an attempt to educate the multitudes.

We are what we say. Our words reflect our personalities and our ability to communicate with others. Have you ever evaluated your ability to communicate and the vocabulary you use to get the message across?

Maybe it's time that you did. You might be unfavorably surprised.

The use of vulgarity may give you the impression that it adds flair and emphasis to a story and that you are coming across as being 'COOL.' The 'Fonz' doesn't resort to a four-letter word vocabulary and we all know that he's 'COOL.'

"Eeeyyy — you don't need it."

Next time your temper flares and the urge to spurt forth your vulgar venom and demonstrate your limited vocabulary becomes overwhelming; consider the people in hearing range. Not only are you polluting their environment but you're also demonstrating a lack of maturity and a disrespect for your position in the service.

Many times it's not a woman being victimized by a foul-mouth man. It might be women's lib or a lowering of moral values but there are a few women who could put the men to shame.

The impression received when overhearing a woman expressing herself with a four-letter word barrage of profanity is that she lacks human dignity, is cheap or ignorant and is probably not the type person to bring home to meet the folks.

The same impression holds true for the man who is unable to communicate in other than obscenities.

Consider the following as a check to determine whether your vocabulary is fit for aural ingestion.

- If what you say were said to you, would you consider it an insult?

- If your mother overheard you speaking, would she be offended?

- When you speak, do people tend not to listen or avoid your conversation?

- When your children repeat what you say, do you feel compelled to take remedial action?

- Have you ever been asked not to speak in front of a group?

- When you are talking or writing a letter, do you find it difficult to express yourself without resorting to your vocabulary of four-letter words?

If you answer yes to any of the above questions, you have problems. You're a foul-mouth, %!#!% and offensive person.

"Eeeyyy — you're not even 'COOL.'"

from where I stand...

By T. Gunner

"Where is everybody rushing to?" I yelled at Harold Hotfoot who loped down the sidewalk. "What's going on? What's happening?"

A huge fire-truck roared past, its siren screaming. Two firemen struggled to hold their balance on the rear platform as the machine screeched around a corner.

"Somebody said Mary Goround is trapped in the traffic circle," Harold gasped. His chest heaved when he gulped air.

"Good Grief!" I whispered. "It's finally happened."

"I'm afraid so," Harold shook his head sadly. Droplets of perspiration dotted the sidewalk where he stood. "I was going down there to see how bad it was."

"Come on," I snapped. "Let's go see what they're going to do about it."

Within minutes we arrived amid all the flashing red and blue lights. Harold and I darted from the car and joined the screaming hoard that surrounded the traffic circle. People stood twelve deep. Behind us a television network crew dragged heavy lights and cameras from a huge white van. Flashbulbs popped on photographers' cameras.

The throng of bystanders pressed toward the edge of the traffic circle and their momentum dragged us with them.

"Brave girl," someone near us sighed. "Did you see that smile on her face?" someone else asked.

"That wasn't really a smile," a man stated flatly. "That was a grimace. It was the look of fate. The face of destiny."

"They said she's been in there about forty minutes now," a lady on our left nodded. "I wonder how much longer she has?"

"Don't talk that way!" Harold exclaimed. I jerked back, startled at his outburst. "Why doesn't somebody do something?"

Everyone turned to stare at us. I grinned weakly and shrugged.

"Excuse us. Excuse us," someone behind us was shouting. "Pardon us, please! Thank you. Pardon us."

I blinked quickly as the television cameras followed the well known nightly commentator who came directly at us.

"Did someone here ask why somebody doesn't do something?" the well known commentator questioned looking at me.

My weak grin was still on my face. "I, ah, I didn't say nothing."

"He did," a man said pointing at Harold.

"Did you ask that question, sir?" the commentator asked. He shoved a microphone under Harold's nose.

"I sure did. And somebody better do something fast!"

"Fast, sir? Why?" the commentator asked.

"Because of the time," Harold said.

"Ah, the time. Yes," the commentator sang. "That poor girl, Mary Goround, has been inside the traffic circle almost forty-five minutes now. How much longer can she hold on?" the well known newscaster said into the camera lens.

"I'm not talking about that kind of time," Harold said and everyone looked back at him. "It's almost four-thirty."

Everyone frowned.

"Four-thirty is when everyone starts home around here. And if you think this is a mess now wait until the traffic hits the circle at quitting time."

A collective gasp swept the crowd. "Let me through! Let me through, there."

Get out of the way, you nincompoop," a voice bellowed. Finally the voice had a face and it was the man in charge. "What's going on over here. Can't you see we have an emergency on our hands?"

"This man here says that you're going to have even more of an emergency in less than twenty minutes, sir," the newscaster stated nodding at Harold.

"Less than twenty minutes?" the man in charge questioned.

"Four-thirty. It's quitting time then," Harold said.

"Good grief!" the man in charge shouted. "That poor little girl won't have a chance!"

The crowd cheered as Mary Goround went round again.

"I have no alternative in that case," the man in charge shook his head.

"What's your plan, sir?" the news commentator asked for his audience. We gawked at the man in charge.

"We'll have to remove the YIELD signs."

"REMOVE THE YIELD SIGNS!!" the crowd shouted.

"I'm going to put a stop to running around in circles once and for all," the man in charge said. He gave the order for stop signs to be placed where yield signs were. The work crew finished just in time and they were able to save Mary Goround.

Now they're trying to figure out how to untangle all the traffic that backed up while they were running round in the circle.

Document safeguards avoid future anguish

The importance of safekeeping for personal documents such as military discharge papers, marriage licenses, divorce decrees or child custody evidence is emphasized by the Veterans Administration in daily counseling sessions with former military members.

Other information that should be filed with family documents are government and commercial life insurance policies, VA correspondence with identifying claim number, social security numbers and, where applicable, naturalization papers.

"A few minutes in simple organization can do much in avoiding undue anguish during times of great emotional stress," a VA spokesman said. "These vital papers should be kept safe from fire and theft, yet readily accessible, and their location known to

Company affords educational edge

By Jerome Tubbs

Instead of waiting for members of Hq Co, Hq Cmd to come to the Education Center to register for classes, Troy State University officials went to them last week.

Dr. Paul L. Stansel, director of Troy State program at Benning, counseled and registered soldiers for the spring quarter. He previously visited the unit in January to register soldiers for the winter quarter.

According to Dr. Stansel Hq Co is the only Benning unit that has invited Troy State into its barracks to register students.

"This company has more people enrolled at Troy than any other organization at Ft. Benning," he said. "I have registered at least 35 people last quarter and 40 this quarter."

"A problem we're solving with Dr. Stansel's visits is that most people are not aware of the difference between the use of Veteran's Administration benefits and tuition assistance," said Cpt Robert Vasile, company commander.

Utilizing tuition assistance a five quarter-hour course at Troy State would only cost the soldier $20 with a one-time enrollment fee of $10. This does not count against V.A. benefits.

In an effort to further cut the cost of education Troy State has begun a book rental system. The University will rent hardback textbooks to students at about a third of their cost.

To make education more convenient Troy State is offering one Saturday morning class and is planning more, according to Stansel.

Troy State will provide an instructor to teach a class in the Hq Co barracks if at least 10 Hq Co, Hq Cmd members enroll into the same course, according to Stansel. Most classes are now taught in Infantry Hall, Bldg 4.

"People don't like going into strange places. But here in their own home their friends encourage them," said the company commander.

"You can sometimes see groups of them coming out of the barracks after PT carrying books," Vasile added. "You'd think this was a college classroom."

family members," he added.

The veteran's family should be aware of possible survivor benefits such as VA pensions or dependency and indemnity compensation for service-connected death.

Complete information on all benefits available to veterans and their families is available at VA regional offices or through representatives of veterans' service organizations.

40-mile limit for CHAMPUS

Many local users of the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) will no longer be able to choose between medical care in a civilian or military hospital.

Now, all persons eligible for CHAMPUS benefits must seek non-emergency, inpatient care at Martin Army Hospital if they live within a 40-mile radius of Ft. Benning. In the event necessary care is not available at the Ft. Benning hospital a statement of non-availability can be issued.

For further information and prior to seeking non-emergency treatment care from a civilian hospital, call the Ft. Benning CHAMPUS advisor at 544-4358/4341 or visit the Patient Administration Division at Martin Army Hospital.

Prevailing charges for CHAMPUS users revised

CHAMPUS has revised its guidelines for determining prevailing charges, making them more consistent with those of other federal health care programs.

CHAMPUS uses these factors to determine the amount beneficiaries receive for a health care service:

- Customary charge — the amount which a physician or other health care provider most frequently charges patients for a specific service;
- Actual charge — the exact fee charged by a health care provider;
- Prevailing charge — the amount most frequently charged by providers in three out of four cases for a specific service in a given locality;
- Reasonable charge — the lowest of the above three, including both the beneficiary's and the government's shares.

All CHAMPUS payments for services other than hospital charges are based on a reasonable charge.

According to CHAMPUS officials, the revision could affect the amount the program pays for any specific service or supply since the prevailing charge now is set at the 75th percentile — not 75 per cent of a bill charged. Previously, the prevailing reimbursement was the 90th percentile — or high enough to cover nine out of ten prevailing charges.

The revision, however, does not affect the CHAMPUS share of reasonable charges — which is 80 per cent above the deductible for dependents of active duty members for outpatient care — and 75 per cent for retirees, their dependents and survivors of deceased active duty and retired servicemembers for physician charges for either inpatient or outpatient care.

When selecting a source of care, CHAMPUS beneficiaries should seek a provider who participates in CHAMPUS.

Since participation in CHAMPUS is entirely voluntary, a physician or health care provider may decline to participate. If the beneficiary still wishes to obtain such medical services, the beneficiary must pay the provider and submit his claim to CHAMPUS. Then CHAMPUS pays the government's share of the reasonable charge directly to the beneficiary — in some cases less than the amount claimed.

Another change, announced earlier, concerns CHAMPUS beneficiaries who live within a 40-mile radius of a military or public health service hospital. These patients must go to that hospital for non-emergency inpatient care. If care cannot be provided, the hospital may issue a nonavailability statement — allowing the CHAMPUS beneficiary to seek care at a civilian hospital. Patients residing outside the 40-mile radius are not required to get a non-availability statement.

Under another change, CHAMPUS no longer can pay for Christian Science services.

Questions concerning these policy changes should be directed to the CHAMPUS advisor at 544-4358 or 4341 or visit the Patient Administration Division at Martin Army hospital — prior to seeking care from a civilian doctor, medical specialist or hospital.

Alka-Seltzer excites bass

By Denny Blankenship

Fishermen have been known to travel far and wide and spend a considerable amount of money in search of the ultimate "secret weapon." Fishermen have also been known to believe almost anything or try anything if it'll give them that little edge they are constantly looking for.

Word has come out of the west (origin unknown) that Alka-Seltzer tablets drive bass crazy. In venturing a guess, it must be something to do with the bubbly action.

A visiting fisherman from Ohio tried this technique at Lake Martin recently. After several unsuccessful attempts it was decided to try something a little more powerful so out came the Alka-II tablets. Although a good five-yard square area of water was bubbling and foaming like crazy, no fish were caught. Wonder why? If you ever catch a fish from Lake Martin that swallows "the whole thing" you can bet he's from this same area.

This same fisherman reverted to conventional techniques the following day and hooked two 10-pound bass at the mouth of Hatachubbee Creek on a Deep Mini-R. Unfortunately, both of these beautiful fish were lost at the boat.

Organization day wraps up big year for 197th

By C. B. Hoover

A big day in the history of Ft. Benning celebrated in military fashion with bands playing, troops passing in review and culminated in the spirit of family togetherness highlighted last week's activities.

The 197th Inf Bde celebrated its third anniversary as an integral part of the Strategic Army Force (STRAF) with an organization day. The activities began with a change of command followed by a reception at the Kelly Hill Service Club and a picnic.

COL Fletcher K. Ware assumed command of the 197th from COL Joseph E. Wasiak.

The event held in recognition of the previous year's accomplishments and as a tribute to the men of the brigade, combined athletic competition, military demonstrations, and displays and family participation to highlight this milestone in the history of the 197th Inf Bde.

The brigade wasted no time in its third year as a STRAF unit.

In March 1975, 600 soldiers from the 1/58th Inf and 3/7th Inf deployed by aircraft to Ft. Sherman in the Panama Canal Zone to undergo the Jungle Operations Course. The Jungle Expert Badge was awarded to 554 of them in early 1976 soldiers from the brigade departing Ft. Benning again for a strange environment, the US Army Northern Warfare Training Center, located at Ft. Greely, Alaska for training in Winter Operations.

The 2/69th Ar and Trp A, 1/15th Cav conducted their annual tank gunnery qualifications at Ft. Stewart, Ga. It was the first time that the armor battalion deployed its own M60A1 tanks to qualify.

The 197th Spt Bn held true to their motto of "Ever Ready Support" providing support to the units of the brigade over three states at the same time, while conducting training which enhanced combat service proficiency.

The brigade's aviation platoon, the Steel Scorpions, were off and flying to California in July for desert training. Then in January to Ft. Carson, Colorado where they underwent Mountain Flying and Cold Weather Survival Training.

At the beginning of 1975, the Bicentennial year, the 197th was chosen to be the project unit for the June celebration of the Army's 200th Birthday. The celebration was particularly memorable in that the President of the United States visited the post for the celebration.

The brigade did a great deal more than celebrate the 200th birthday of the Army or enhance their own combat readiness; in July 75 the 197th hosted two Army National Guard battalions, the 3/161 Inf from Washington State and the 3/153d Inf from Arkansas.

The soldiers of the brigade not only averted their efforts outside the state, but outside the country as well. In September the brigade conducting a small unit exchange program with elements of the 2d Combat Group of the Canadian Armed Forces from Petawawa, Canada. Sixty men from each of the two armies switched places for one month and lived and trained together.

Working and conditions continued to improve throughout the year. Over 1900 soldiers are now housed in modernized barracks on Kelley Hill.

Integration of women into slots formerly held by males continued, with members of the Women's Army Corps holding jobs ranging from clerks to military police persons.

The high point of the year came in October when the brigade deployed 3,000 troops to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. to participate in the Joint Training Exercise (JTX), "Brave Shield XIII".

The JTX which involved over 15,000 soldiers, pitted the 197th as the opposing forces against the 82nd Abn Div. The brigade's combat readiness was proven during the JTX when it conducted an insertion into the rear area of the friendly forces, destroying their Tactical Operations Center and capturing the friendly forces commander.

The past year as a STRAF unit saw five new battalion commanders join the brigade: LTC Theron H. Hill, 1/58th Inf; LTC John J. Tedesco, 2/69th Ar; LTC Paul Makowski, 2,10th FA; LTC William B. Seely, 3/7th Inf; and LTC James L. Bagdanov, 197th Spt Bn.

Free concert features musical past

The U. S. Continental Army Band will appear at Columbus College April 4 as a part of American history.

The band will perform in the Fine Arts Auditorium at 8 p.m. The performance is being sponsored by Ft. Benning, Columbus College and the Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

Tickets for the free concert may be obtained until April 2 at Columbus College, the Columbus and Phenix City Chambers of Commerce, all banks in Columbus and Phenix City, National Bank of Fort Benning, Sears at Columbus Square, Montgomery Wards at Peachtree Mall and the Recreation Services office on post. Directed by CWO Byron L. Smith, the band will make 12 concert appearances in 13 days, sweeping through Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi.

The 65-member band, which is homebased at historic Ft. Monroe, Virginia, will present a non-stop program that traces American history from the Revolution.

Entitled "Two-Hundred Years of American Music," the program will be augmented by "Living Statues," which depict in brilliant costumes the particular time period portrayed in the music.

Beginning with a heroic fanfare by herald trumpets and drums, the program will recall the fight for independence, the Civil War, the Taming of the West and major periods of the past 80 years including World Wars I and II.

Such tunes as "Dixie" and the music of George Gershwin and John Philip Sousa will punctuate the program. Musical stylings will include patriotic, classical and contemporary music as well as novelty numbers, solos, jazz and the ever-popular march.

One of five special Army bands, it features the ceremonial trumpets and drums, Continental Army Jazz Ensemble and Wind Ensemble. Under CWO Smith, the band is the official musical representative of the U. S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

Cautious soldiers miss promotion opportunities

Some soldiers at Ft. Benning, trying to play it cool with their promotion to specialist five and staff sergeant are getting the short end of the promotion stick.

Promotion eligible specialists four and five are computing their promotion points and comparing them against the cut-off scores for the next higher grade.

These soldiers have not been recommended to appear before local promotion boards and don't want to.

Why?

As the soldiers explain it, they want to wait until they have enough promotion points to make a promotion a sure thing.

"My plan is to wait until I can get on the list with enough points to beat the cut-off score and be a shoo-in for promotion," beamed a proud confident specialist four at Ft. Benning.

That kind of thrift is great when you're trying to save enough dough to pay cash for a stereo, but it is not the way to get promoted.

Here's why.

Army regulations require specialists four and five to be on the E5/6 recommended list for three months before he or she is eligible to be promoted. You can't just waltz in off the street, pocket calculator in hand, and announce, "I have enough points for promotion. Put me on the list."

April 1 cut-off scores will hit the field any day now. When the scores are announced, it will be too late for these super-cool soldiers who believe they have enough points and think they can get on the promotion list at the last minute.

They will have learned the hard way. They will have learned they first must appear before a local board and get on the E5/6 list, and second; they must wait out the three months.

By the time they have done that, the cutoff scores for their MOSs may have been revised upward. They missed promotion.

To get your hard-earned stripes:

- know when you're eligible to be recommended.

- get on the promotion list ASAP.

- add to your points through military and civilian education and training opportunities.

- remind your personnel folks to recompute your points as required, or request reevaluation.

498th acts as 'Big Brother' for reserve unit

A slightly known Department of the Army affiliation program between active Army and Reserve units is being further strengthened during a two-week Nap-of-the-Earth flight instruction program at Ft. Benning. It is being conducted by the 498th Med Co, 34th Med Bn. for the 145th Med Det., a Reserve unit from Dobbins AFB.

The affiliation program, which has been under way some nine months, is designed so Reserve units will have an active duty "Big Brother." This will enable them to take advantage of the many updated procedures and training that the active duty unit receives.

The 145th is organized in the same manner as the Ft Benning unit, but on a much smaller scale.

It has only six UH-1H helicopters and 13 officers. A 3-day visit, at least once quarterly, is made by representatives of the 498th. Instructor pilots, maintenance technicians, and personnel from the training section normally accompany Unit Commander LTC Ernest French on these liaison visits to provide help and updated information to the 145th.

The current exchange program, which brought four pilots, two crewchiefs, and two helicopters to Ft Benning is designed to teach the Reserve pilots the latest Nap-of-the Earth Flight Program. The NOE course, covered in 44 hours of ground school and 20 hours of flight instruction teaches the pilots to fly low using available trees and terrain to hide their path of flight. Assisting the 498th in the ground school instruction is CW2 Joe Hooton, 121st, who conducted the ground school for all aviators at Ft Benning who completed NOE.

DoD Med School seeks applications

Medical school applications are now being accepted by the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences. The first class of 36 students is scheduled to start in August 1976.

The school offers a four-year medical education to young men and women who demonstrate high potential for careers as medical officers in the military services and Public Health Service.

Students will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Army or Air Force or as ensigns in the Navy and Public Health Service. They will be on active duty during the four years of school, receiving full pay and benefits. The school will charge no tuition, and books and equipment will be provided.

Upon graduation, students can expect to receive regular commissions and be promoted to captain (Air Force and Army) or lieutenant (Navy and PHS). Graduates will serve seven years after completing medical school. Internship or residency does not count toward the seven-year active duty obligations.

Basic requirements include a B.A. degree with one academic year each of general chemistry, organic chemistry, physics, biology and math plus six semester hours of college-level English.

Additionally, applicants must be U. S. citizens; no older than 28 as of June 30, 1976; and meet the requirements for a commission in the uniformed services. Applicants must have taken the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT).

Interested persons may obtain application materials from the Director of Admission, USUHS 6917 Arlington Road, Bethesda, Md. 20014.

Voting assistance, ballots available

Soldiers and their dependents stationed in states other than their own need not lose their voting privileges. They can vote in their home states' presidential primary elections with the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for absentee ballots.

Time limits for the FPCA to arrive before the election varies with the state. If it arrives in time a ballot will be sent to the voter. North Carolina is to hold the next primary on March 23. New York and Wisconsin will follow on April 6.

FPCAs can be obtained from voting assistance officers. Post Voting Assistance Officer 1LT Donald W. Beatty may be reached at 545-7224. A list of the major units voting officers follows:

—A LOCAL CONCERN—

Military retired pay base

Are you one of those individuals planning to retire in the near future and concerned about what your retirement income will amount to?

Well, based on the most recent changes, computing one's retired pay has created a mass of confusion.

Effective Oct. 7, 1975, the change permits a service member who would have been eligible for retirement on or after Jan. 1, 1971 to base his retirement pay on any active duty rate on or before that date, at the grade and years of service he would have had at that time, plus cumulative cost of living increases (CLIs) added to that rate of pay. In selecting an active duty rate to base retirement pay, the service member must have had at least 20 years active duty and been eligible to retire on that date.

There could be as many as three different ways to compute the most favorable retired pay for servicemembers with definite retirement rates or future retirees.

The following procedures and adjusted pay rate table have been devised to assist in the computation.

How To Compute Your Retired Pay

• If you were eligible for retirement with over 20 years of active federal military service as of Sept. 1, 1974, you must compute your retired pay using Methods A, B, and C to determine the most favorable computation.

• If you did not have over 20 years of active federal service as of Sept. 1, 1974, but were eligible to retire with over 20 years as of Sept. 1, 1975, you must use Methods B and C.

• If you did not become eligible until after Sept. 1, 1975, use Method C.

To determine the most favorable rate of retirement pay based on your situation examine the following categories.

Method A

Step 1 — Determine your grade and years of service for pay as of Sept. 1, 1974.

Step 2 — Applying the grade and years of service for pay from Step 1, find your adjusted pay rate in the "Adjusted Pay Rate Table" under the section headed "Oct. 1, 1972 Adjusted Pay Rates." (Example: SFC (E-7) with over 22 years for pay as of Sept. 1, 1974 — $1,100).

Step 3 — Determine your retirement percentage by multiplying your creditable years of service for retirement as of Sept. 1, 1974 by .025 (2.5%) (Example: SFC (E-7) with over 22 years active duty — 22 X .025 equals .55 (55%).

Note — Creditable service for retirement normally applies only to active duty; however, inactive reserve prior to June 1, 1958 for officers is counted as creditable service for retirement. All creditable service for retirement over six months is counted as a whole year. Twenty years, six months and one day is counted as 21 years.

Step 4 — Multiply the adjusted pay rate (Step 2) by your retirement percentage (Step 3) to determine your retired pay. (Example: $1,100 X .55 (55%) equals $605).

Notes concerning

• Adjusted pay rates include the 5.4% cost of living increase (CLI) effective Mar. 1, 1976.

• CLIs added to the Oct. 1, 1972 pay rate: 3.6%, 5.5%, 6.3%, 7.3%, 5.1% and 5.4%.

• CLIs added to the Oct. 1, 1973 pay rate: 6.2%, 7.3%, 5.1% and 5.4%.

• CLIs added to the Oct. 1, 1974 pay rate: 5.1% and 5.4% (Oct. 1, 1975) pay rates had a CLI added of 1.7%).

ed on the adjusted rates

Step 5 — Now compute your retired pay under Methods B and C to determine which yields the greater amount.

Method B

Step 1 — Determine your grade and years of service for pay as of Sept. 1, 1975.

Step 2 — Applying the grade and years of service for pay from Step 1, find your adjusted pay rate in the "Adjusted Pay Rate Table" under the section headed "Oct. 1, 1973 Adjusted Pay Rates." (Example: COL (0-6) with over 20 years for pay as of Stp. 1, 1975 — $2,409).

Step 3 — Determine your retirement percentage by multiplying your creditable years of service for retirement as of Sept. 1, 1975 by .025 (2.5%) (Example: COL (0-6) with over 20 years active duty 20 X .025 (2.5%) equals .50 (50%).

See Note Step 3, Method A

Step 4 — Multiply the adjusted pay rate (Step 2) by your retirement percentage (Step 3) to determine your retired pay. (Example: 2,409 X .50 (50%) equals $1,204.50).

Step 5 — Now compute your retired pay under Method C to determine which of the computations will yield the greater amount.

Method C

Step 1 — Determine your grade and years of service for pay as of your actual retirement date.

Step 2 — Applying the grade and years of service for pay from Step 1, find your adjusted pay rate in the "Adjusted Pay Rate Table" under the section headed "Oct. 1, 1974 Adjusted Pay Rates" (Example: SGM (E-9) with over 20 years of service for pay as of May 1, 1976—$1,198).

Step 3 — Determine your retirement percentage by multiplying your creditable years of service for retirement as of your actual retirement date by .025 (2.5%). (Example: SGM (E-9) with over 20 years active duty 20 X .025 (2.5) equals .50 (50%).

See Note Step 3, Method A

Step 4 — Multiple the adjusted pay rate (Step 2) by your retirement percentage (Step 3) to determine your required pay. (Example: $1,198 X .50 (50%) equals $599).

Note: Since Oct. 1, 1974 active duty pay rate had CLIs of 5.1% and 5.4% added and the Oct. 1, 1975 rate had a 1.7% CLI, computation of retired pay using the Oct. 1, 1975 active duty pay rate would not be favorable.

Future pay raises and cost of living increases will also have to be considered in computing retirement pay.

Policy provides for the service member to apply any active duty pay rate on or after Jan. 1, 1971, at the grade and years of service he would have had at that time, if retirement eligible, plus the cumulative CLIs added to that previous rate to determine the most favorable computation.

The computer at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center is programmed to pay the most favorable retired pay computed under Methods A, B and C as applicable to the Individual situation. Current Army policy is to pay the maximum pay rate allowable.

the use of the table

may use one prior activity duty pay scale at grade and years of service at time of retirement; i.e., retirement eligible Sept. 1, 1974 — pay rates effective Oct. 1, 1973 were current. One prior pay scale would apply to the Oct. 1, 1972 rates.

• Amounts are rounded off to the nearest dollar for easier computation.

• The computer at the Finance Center, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. is programmed to pay the most favorable retired pay rates.

VA Questions and Answers

Q. — What does VA provide the spinal cord-injured veteran who wants to drive?

A. — A veteran whose disabling injury is service-connected is eligible for a one-time grant of up to $3,300 toward purchase of an automobile; installation, maintenance, and replacement of adaptive equipment; training in operating vehicle on which adaptive equipment has been installed.

Q. — Does the receipt of unemployment compensation have any effect upon a veteran's educational allowance?

A. — Income is not considered in the payment of educational allowances. Rates of payment are based generally on hours of attendance or cost of courses.

Q. — I am a retired school teacher interested in finding some way to help veterans.

A. — You could be of valuable assistance as a volunteer in a Veterans Administration hospital. Call the one nearest your home and talk to the person in charge of Voluntary Service.

Q. — Are all women veterans going to get a special bonus from the VA?

A. — No. Women veterans who were married and who trained under the GI Bill between June 1, 1966, and October 24, 1972, may be eligible for about $30 for each month they were in training under the GI Bill while they were married. The retroactive payment equalizes benefits with male veterans who received a GI Bill allowance for their wives.

Senior Status Review on York Field.

After reviewing the company COL Eldon D. Carr, commander The School Brigade, attached a blue streamer to the guidon, signifying the attainment of Senior Status.

Senior Status is both an end and a beginning. It is an end to the junior and intermediate phases of the program; but more important, a beginning of the last phase of reparation which culminates in their commissioning as second lieutenants.

Following a Senior Status Reception was held in Wigle Hall, OCS Hall of Fame.

The reception, done in the bicentennial theme, was planned by the Officer Candidate Wives Club of 51st Co. Those ladies serving were Mrs. Eldon D. Carr, wife of the commander, The School Brigade, Mrs. Dick T. LeClere, wife of the Commander of 5th Stu Bn, Mrs. Lafayette L. Sale III, wife of the Commander of 51st Co., Mrs. William R. Hlte, Mrs. John H. Bentley, Mrs. Joseph W. Fox and Mrs. Larry M. Wortzel.

The ceremonial Senior Status cake was cut with a sabre by Mrs. Gerald P. Belknap, President of the OC Wives Club and Senior Candidate Gerald E. Ferguson Jr., President of the Student Council.

Senior Status Reception
The Senior Candidates of 51st Co, 5th Stu Bn held their Senior Status Reception at the Sand Hill NCO Club on the evening of March 20.

Receiving guests were COL and Mrs. Eldon D. Carr, LTC and Mrs. Dick T. LeClere and CPT and Mrs. Lafayette L. Sale III.

COL Carr was the guest speaker for the evening.

The doormen and Color Guard were in un-

Some educational programs survive

Recent congressional action eliminated money to support the FY 76 fully funded enlisted education program. As a result, new enrollments in the program have ended; all pending applications at MILPERCEN's Enlisted Personnel Directorate are being returned.

Despite the end of the program — which gave selected soldiers up to two years of college education at government expense — other roads to a college degree are still open to the enlisted soldier.

The fellowship, scholarship or grant program — which authorizes qualified soldiers to compete for educational programs offered by corporations, foundations, funds or educational institutions — is still available to eligible personnel. This program provides outstanding soldiers an opportunity to study for up to two years on subjects needed by the Army. These subjects will be announced later. The required skills probably will be in the scientific and engineering fields. (See AR 621-7 for details).

Soldiers should contact their local servicing education center for other programs available for continuing their off-duty education under GED (see AR 621 5). The main post center may be reached at 545-7768, the Kelly Hill center at 544-3622, and the Harmony Church center at 544-6931. Under tuition assistance, the Army pays up to 75 per cent of tuition costs — or fees in lieu of tuition costs, for Army personnel attending off-duty classes conducted by accredited civilian education institutions.

The Army plans to request congressional permission to reestablish the enlisted undergraduate degree completion program (Bootstrap), which ended in October 1974. Major commands will be notified if and when the program is reinstated. (ANF)

Military compensation: too much--too little

Many, probably most, members of the military today are concerned at what they perceive to be moves to erode their military pay and other compensation they receive for their service.

The Secretary of the Army, Martin R. Hoffmann, commented on this problem this year in presenting the Army Budget to the Congress. He said, in part:

"The Army is not simply a job or a place to work. It is a total way of life. At times it is a difficult and dangerous way of life. . . . In return for his commitment of service to the Nation, the soldier expects and is entitled to a return from the Army and the Nation, concomitant with the exactions of that service.

" . . . Since 1973, many personnel programs have been reduced or terminated. A number of other changes are under consideration. The net effect of these piecemeal actions has been to convince many soldiers that the commitment of the institution to their welfare is not as strong as it once was. To attract and retain young men and women of quality . . . the Army must convince them that the institution's commitment has not lessened and that the needs of the professional military force will be supported at the highest level."

The piecemeal attack on military compensation referred to by the Secretary includes proposals which would provide substantially less savings in commissaries, more cost for CHAMPUS, reduction in family housing construction, and an arbitrary military pay raise limit below raises scheduled for civilians, both in and out of government.

Some observers, including the AUSA, believe some realignment in military compensation may be both necessary and logical, but that the problem should be studied in toto, rather than attacked piecemeal in an apparently helter-skelter fashion.

Both the Defense Manpower Commission and the Quadrennial Military Compensation Review study now under way in DOD are considering the total compensation package. Their recommendations will have the benefit of studied consideration by peers and therefore be more acceptable to the military man than the current piecemeal approach. If the Nation's commitment to its military is indeed not lessened, the piecemeal proposals should be withdrawn to await the availability of a well thought out total package. (AUSA)

Infantry Chorus seeks 'new look'

Ft. Benning's Infantry Chorus needs a new look. The Hq Comd based outfit would like to purchase blue blazers with red and white trim, grey slacks and light blue shirts with Bicentennial ties.

The Columbus-Phenix City-Ft. Benning Chapter of the Association of The United States (AUSA) contributed $500 towards the purchase price of $1800.

Another $700 has been donated from various Columbus businessmen.

The Non-Commissioned Officers Wives Club also donated $100 towards the 25 outfits.

The Infantry Chorus performs at many military functions as well as civilian affairs by invitation. Presently, they are undergoing an intensive training period in order to improve their

Top soldier in less than a year

Withstanding the stiff competition from more experienced soldiers and with the help of a previous competitor and his 1SG, PV2 Tony Moore was nominated the 34th Med Bn's Soldier of the Month for February 1976.

Moore enlisted under the Delayed Entry Program in June 1975 after which he completed BCT at Ft. Ord, Calif and Medical Specialist School at Ft. Sam Houston, Texas. In November he was assigned to the 546th Med Co (Clearing) as a clearing attendant.

Moore enjoys his Army duties but he feels as do many other young soldiers in a peacetime Army, that he should be spending more time on his Military Occupational Specialty and less on details. He has recently completed the CLEP tests available at the post education center and is currently enrolled in Columbus College where he is taking Pre Med courses. He feels that the educational opportunities available in the service are endless for a soldier who is willing to exert himself during off-duty hours.

When asked what his feelings were concerning women in the Army and coeducational barracks, he replied, "Women should share an equal role — get involved in all the details around the company area, not just the inside, more comfortable tasks. As far as coeducational barracks — can't see as it has made any difference in barracks living".

Hunting, fishing permits will expire March 31

Attention all hunting and fishing enthusiasts! Both Alabama and Georgia's hunting and fishing licenses expire March 31. Ft. Benning permits run out at the same time.

You can not purchase Ft. Benning permits until you have obtained your new state license. However, the new state licenses are not on sale yet and according to SSG Ronald Brown, NCOIC, Fish and Game Section, they probably won't be until the last week of the month.

After a person obtains a new state license, he or she must go to Building 83, Vehicle Registration Office, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to purchase the post permit. The cost of the post permit varies according to status and rank. A chart of the fees is on page six of USAIC Regulation 210-2 dated Dec. 9, 1975.

Eligible personnel for Ft. Benning permits are active duty personnel, retired personnel, civilian employees, dependents over 16, and Disabled American Veterans having a service connected disability of not less than 30 per cent.

Everyone requesting a post permit must prove their eligibility and spouses and dependents must be accompanied by their sponsor. Everyone must also attend a special on-post hunting safety orientation presentation regarding the rules.

Effective April 1

New ID card required

Many military personnel have been denied access to the Post Exchange, Commissary and other service activities because they did not have the correct identification card in their possession.

Effective yesterday, all post activities requiring that identification be shown prior to receiving service will check for the new ID card required by the Geneva Convention.

This new ID card has been available since October, however, many active duty personnel being checked still have the old cards. The difference between the two cards is that the new ones do not include fingerprints.

Those individuals requiring the new Identification Card prescribed by the Geneva Convention should contact their personnel office to make arrangements to acquire the new card.

Uniform switch set for Monday

With the onset of warmer weather, the switch to summer uniforms on Monday will be a welcome relief to many perspiring soldiers. Personnel should check their summer uniforms over the weekend to make sure that they are in tip-top shape. It's also time for you in fatigues to roll those sleeves up again.

Earlier departure, later return

Change to leave policy proposed

A proposed change to the Army leave and pass regulation could mean soldiers getting a headstart on their leave without losing any leave time.

In a change now being staffed, soldiers would be allowed to sign-out on leave after noon on the day of departure and have that day counted as a day of duty.

The soldier could sign-in anytime before noon on the day of return and have that day also counted as a day of duty. The soldier would, however, have to work the other half day on the departure and return day.

The changes would place the primary responsibility as to whether the day is counted as a day of leave or a duty day on the soldier's immediate supervisor. The change states that the leave approval authority will determine if the member is considered to have performed a "day of duty" on either the day of departure or the day of return from leave. If the supervisor feels that the soldier performed "duty" for more than one-half of the normal working hours then the day will not be charged to leave.

The soldier would be able to sign out at some time after half of the duty day had been performed and start travel to the leave location. He can sign in on the morning after return from leave, work for the remainder of the day and the day will be counted as a duty day.

Under present rules if a soldier signs out after work, leave is charged for that entire day. And on return the soldier must sign in before midnight to save an extra day of leave.

Other changes connected with the policy proposal specify that if the day of departure or return is a non-duty day when the entire day will be charged to leave regardless of the hour of the member's departure.

Also if the soldier departs on leave and returns for duty the same day, the soldier will be charged for one day of leave unless recalled to duty by reason of military necessity.

Other changes proposed involve leave in conjunction with PCS or TDY, plus details on how the leave form DA Form 31 will be filled out to reflect the changes. The revised regulation will also clarify provisions for granting extensions of pass periods, passes during periods of TDY and the disposition of AWOL reports for soldiers returning late from leave or pass.

The changes are currently being staffed and if approved could be in effect by this summer. Initial reaction from DA staff and MACOMs has been favorable. (ANF)

Team on target in recent match

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's running target team returned recently from a friendship match against the national team of Colombia held in Medellin, March 1821.

Helmut Bellingrodt, Colombia's world record holder, scored 575 points to win over the Army's LT Louis M. Theimer's score of 457. MSG Charles Davis, a teammate of Theimer, gained third place one point back with 546.

The U.S. entry came back to win the team event however, as Theimer, Davis, MSG Edmund Moeller and SFC Martin Edmondson combined for a total team score of 1460 to Colombia's 1437.

The AMU marksmen are tuning up for the final Olympic trials to be held in Phoenix this June, and are hoping to fill the two running target berths that will represent the United States at Montreal in July.

Eighteen members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit are among the 59 members of the United States Team to the Fifth Annual Benito Juarez Shooting Championships in Mexico City which begins this weekend.

American marksmen, particularly USAMU shooters, have dominated the matches since its inception in 1971. The U.S. team hopes to equal or better its mark of last year when Americans took 10 of 13 gold medals in individual events and 9 of 13 gold medals in team events.

Action starts in the tournament on Saturday and ends with the closing ceremony on Thursday, April 8. This 18-nation tournament brings nations from around the world together in friendly competition.

Captain of the U.S. Team this year is COL Sidney R. Hinds Jr., Commander of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. Members are chosen for the team on the basis of their finish in the U.S. International Shooting Championship in Phoenix last year.

The tournament is named in honor of a former President of Mexico, Licenciado Benito Juarez.

Let the 'Sarge' sign paperwork

Let key NCOs handle and sign routine correspondence and actions. This old policy — delegation of signature authority — is receiving renewed emphasis from DA.

Although such signature authority has long been permitted by Army reg (AR 340-15), it has not been widely used, especially at battalion or company level.

The policy offers several benefits to commanders and supervisors: Routine correspondence time lags. And managers, freed from signature duties, can concentrate on more critical matters that deserve their attention.

Many NCOs routinely initiate actions and correspondence which do not specifically require the signature of a commander or commissioned officer. With signature authority, NCOs can carry such actions to completion.

As the Army implements EPMS, there are actions that can, and should be taken to reinforce professionalism within the enlisted ranks. DA officials say that delegation of signature authority to NCOs is one such step. (ANF)

Bomb talk no laughing matter

Some things are no joking matter and security aboard military flights ranks at the top of the list. Jokes about bombs, weapons or hijackings are particularly unappreciated by passenger service personnel and chances are that the jokester will miss the flight, have his baggage searched and then will be turned over to the security police.

What might begin as a casual joke could evolve into a lengthy judicial action. The individual is apprehended and searched by the security police; all of the individual's baggage is removed from the plane and searched. The police then take statements from witnesses; prepare an official incident report and then turn the prankster over to his commander for disciplinary action. In the case of civilian personnel or dependents, appropriate civilian authorities are contacted.

Depending on the circumstances, persons apprehended for a false report about bombs, hijackings, etc., may face action under the UCMJ or civil penalties under the Bomb Hoax Act. (ANF)

Major causes identified

Why are soldiers missing their port calls?

Recent interviews with transient soldiers failing to meet port call dates indicates that conflicting instructions and inadequate information provided to soldiers and their dependents at losing installations are the main causes of "no shows" at the Aerial Ports of Embarkation (APOEs).

The largest number of "no shows" can be traced to installation personnel managers who fail to cancel port calls for soldiers whose overseas movement status has changed. More emphasis on the requirement to report immediately all changes in the personnel movement system to HQDA not only would eliminate confusion and hardship on transient servicemembers and their families, but it also would result in a substantial savings of PCS funds.

Conflicting instructions on orders, leave forms (DA Form 31), and MAC travel authorizations (MTAs) is another major reason for soldiers missing port call dates. Installation commanders are responsible for insuring that each servicemember prior to his department for an overseas assignment, be given a thorough briefing which includes the following information.

Where to report

All documents issued to the soldiers should include the location of the appropriate APOE. During his or her briefing, the soldier should be instructed to report directly to the passenger reservation counter specified in the MTA (DD Form 1482). He or she also should check to insure that the reporting time on the MTA has been entered on his or her assignment instructions and his leave form.

When to report

Soldiers should be reminded that they and their families must report to the APOE between one and a half to eight hours prior to their scheduled flight time. Those who arrive less than one and a half hours will not be permitted aboard the aircraft. They should also be informed that quarters at the APOEs are limited and off base family accommodations and food are expensive. Therefore, APOE arrival time should be programmed to minimize delay and additional expense.

How to get there

A copy of the Military Traffic Management Command's Tips for Travel for the appropriated APOE should be given to each department soldier during this period. The brochure includes information on facilities, connecting transportation schedules, costs and lengths of time required to get to the APOE.

Women deserve the same treatment

By Pat Ernst

SHAPE UP . . . familiar words to most soldiers, but seldom, if ever, said to some.

Male readers will probably not remember the last time they corrected a woman soldier on a uniform or other violation. For most men, there has never been a "last time." The reason commonly offered is "I can't say that to a woman." Oddly enough, that reason comes from the same man who will unhesitatingly tell a sister, daughter, wife, or secretary, that her skirt is too short, her hair is a mess, or that her clothes seem to be shrinking.

"I think it's cute," is another popular reason. Again, oddly enough, it comes from the same man who finds it somewhat less than "cute," when the men he supervises need haircuts or shoe shines, wear improperly fitted uniforms, wear unauthorized headgear, or even none at all. Why is it then that men are reluctant to correct uniformed women? Perhaps the answer is an unfamiliarity with the right and wrong of Army women's apparel and appearance.

AR 670-30 establishes the proper wear of the uniform for female personnel. This regulation should be as familiar an item in today's reference library as AR 760-5, the uniform regulation for male personnel. Although the two directives provide for obvious physiological differences between men and women, they both agree that uniforms should be neat, clean, well fitted, and worn with insignia and authorized awards and decorations properly affixed.

Let's deal with the woman soldier from head to foot, since the command and supervision of women is a rather new experience for most men, particularly commanders, at Ft. Benning.

Hair styles should be neat and attractive. The hair should not extend below the bottom edge of the collar, (below the top edge on hospital whites) nor should it be styled in extreme fashions that will preclude the prescribed wear of headgear. Corn rows, ding-a-long curls and pony tails are not proper hair styles.

Makeup is a rather touchy area. Makeup should be in good taste and appropriate for the occasion. When the woman wears makeup that is garish in color, overly heavy or of a variety more suitable for evening formal wear it is not proper for wear with the uniform.

Earrings of any kind are not authorized for wear with the uniform. You may very possibly hear the excuse that "my ears are pierced and the holes will grow together unless I wear earrings." Don't be taken in by that one.

Necklaces which are readily visible when open neck uniforms are worn are unauthorized. The woman should be advised to purchase a longer chain or remove the necklace.

Watches and bracelets may be worn (one on each wrist) provided the bracelet is of simple design such as the ID bracelet or of a single chain link or band design. Bracelets should not be outfitted with bangles or numerous charms. Rings are also acceptable when worn in acceptable numbers. A ring worn on each finger of the hand is hardly an acceptable number.

Bras are accepted as prescribed undergarments for women. Although they are not issued in the same manner as men's "Tee Shirts," women are provided necessary funds to purchase these items. Consequently, if an Army woman appears for a formation, or duty of any kind braless, especially when there is an obvious need for one, she should be told to return to her quarters to finish dressing.

Skirt lengths may vary from no more than two inches above mid-knee to one inch below mid-knee. Wear of the skirt too long poses very few problems in this day and age. Short skirts are however, common occurrences. Unfortunately, the greatest offender is not too often the woman who is as shapely as a pin-up, rather the woman who should be covering as much as possible. Women who wear their skirts too short should be advised to lengthen or replace the skirts. There are cases, of course, when skirts become shorter because women become wider. At this time, provided the woman is broadening for reasons other than pregnancy, she should be counseled on weight loss.

Black pumps, either patent leather or a smooth finish leather will be worn with the Army Green, Green Cord, or the optional summer dress and jacket unless duties are such that require other more practical footwear such as the issued low heel oxford. Pumps should be entirely plain, with closed heels and toes and free of all adornment such as buckles, bows and other trim. Heels should be of the same fabric and color as the rest of the shoe. When shoes with platform soles are worn, the sole thickness should not exceed 1/2 inch. Heel height may range from 1 1/2 to 3 inches.

Boots or the black oxford are acceptable footwear with the fatigue uniform.

There has long been some misconception that women in uniform are "untouchable" when it comes to compliance with Army Regulation simply because they are women. In this respect, women soldiers are not different than any other soldier. She will get by with anything she can, when she knows that her male commander, first sergeant or other supervisor doesn't know the difference anyway. Inwardly, however, she wants to be disciplined and corrected when wrong. This tells her that we do care about how she presents the Army image — that she is accepted, not as a woman who wears the Army uniform, but as a full-fledged member of the Army team.

Theme IV keys community service

What is Theme IV? What does it have to do with a soldier's community? How does it honor those who give time and talent to help service organizations? Does it apply to you?

Unless you can answer these questions you may be eligible for a Ft. Benning Bicentennial Theme IV award without knowing it.

Theme IV, sponsored by the 34th Med Bn, is "Active Community Tasks Improve Our Nation." It began January 1 and will last for the rest of the year.

The purpose of Theme IV is to improve the community through individual participation in services and activities. Active and retired servicemembers, Department of the Army civilians, and their dependents are eligible for awards.

Many activities that Benning personnel engage in every day make them eligible for consideration for a Theme IV award. Some of these are Army Community Service, church activities, race relations, Boy Scouts, youth activities, and Red Cross assistance to the elderly and handicapped.

The Ft. Benning Bicentennial Celebration Theme IV Community Service (34th Med Bn) issued the letter of Instruction in January containing a list of community activities that need and welcome assistance. The list does not set limits, however. A volunteer is limited only by his own ability and imagination.

Those desiring to work on projects not on the list or wanting to know which ones are listed should contact 1LT Bob Lantis of the 34th

Med Bn Bicentennial Committee at 545-4388. If the project is too great for the individual or group to handle it will be referred to the Ft. Benning Bicentennial Project Agency. The agency would see to it that the project is staffed and carried out by an appropriate group or unit.

After the committee approves a project, the volunteer fills out a registration form to be forwarded to his unit Bicentennial Coordinator and then to the 34th Med Bn.

Anyone having knowledge of individuals who have rendered a significant service can recommend the individual for an award. This recommendation is then used as a registration form and the service will be verified by contacting the agency served.

Quarterly awards of Bicentennial clocks will be made to the six most deserving individuals (as determined by the Post Bicentennial Committee) except in the last quarter when eight awards will be presented. Winners will be notified during the second week of each quarter. The first quarter ended Wednesday.

SGT Daniel Thomas, HHD, 34th Med Bn, works with the young people in the Macedonia Baptist Church as their choir director as a part of the spiritual side of community involvement. He is also a cubmaster.

Study guides ready in May

Hold the calls, cards and letters! That's the word for command sergeants major and others asking for copies of this year's "Consolidated Study Reference for Command Sergeants Major."

The study guide — which serves as a key reference for command sergeants major boning up for their annual MOS test — hasn't been printed yet, Sergeants Major Academy (USASMA) officials here say. The study guide should be ready in early May.

Meanwhile, USASMA will compile a list of names and addresses of all active duty and reserve component command sergeants major. Then, in early May, the academy will mail copies of this year's study reference to all who need it for the August 1976 00Z50 MOS test.

Command sergeants major who don't receive a study guide by May 15 may request it from the Commandant, U. S. Army Sergeants Major Academy; ATTN: ATSS-TEA; Ft. Bliss, Tex. 79918. (ANF)

Flight operations: backbone of Lawson Airfield

By Gary Helmer

No airline hostesses walk its halls, and the celebrities who pass through its VIP lounge are dressed in Army green: mostly General Officers with a smattering of civilian officials.

Lawson Army Airfield (LAAF) Operations, the backbone of LAAF, provides an unheralded service, 24 hours per day, seven days a week, to LAAF and to Ft. Benning.

Aside from supporting the frequent visits of high-ranking officials, Operations has numerous other missions which must be fulfilled.

Assigned 21 enlisted personnel, the Operations organization is divided into two main sections, Flight Operations and Airfield Service.

Flight Operations controls flight planning, provides "pilot-to-dispatch" radio service, emergency control and communications for rescue and recoveries; relays hazardous weather conditions and reports and coordinates transient aircraft parking and maintenance. Actually this is the nerve center of Lawson Field, as such, there is no end to the questions which are addressed to its people and the response expected.

As with all military flights, pilots must file a flight plan prior to taking off. The flight plan is a detailed itinerary of the aircraft's departure, proposed air route, manifests, and other related information.

Utilizing maps, weather information provided by Det 10, 16th Weather Sqdn, and numerous other working aids, pilots are able to determine the best possible route to their destination on any given mission.

An added, and very important feature for pilots, are "Notice to Airmen" or, as they are better known, NOTAMS. NOTAMS are teletyped information, providing an in depth listing of all airfield closing, reopenings, changes of fuel availability at certain points, navigational aids status, and a mass of other pertinent information that could have a bearing on a pilot's selection of routes or proposed refueling points. Updated NOTAM data is received over the teletype circuit, and regular posting must be done by personnel of this section to provide any pilot the latest information needed in pre-flight planning.

To complete his flight plan, a pilot must submit it to the dispatcher on duty. The dispatcher in turn reviews the flight plan to insure that it contains accurate and correct information, prior to transmitting to the FAA ATC computer or Flight Service Station.

Another important function of the Flight Operations Section is the service rendered in the event of an aircraft crash. If a pilot reports that he is having difficulties with his aircraft, which may result in a crash, the dispatchers must respond first by notifying the stations answering the Secondary Crash Alarm Circuit, then the Operations Office, Safety Office, and Airfield Command.

Like much of the other activity of a busy airfield, radio is used to carry out many of the functions performed by this section. The radio net is tied into airfield vehicle control used by the Lawson Control Tower and for control of the crash-rescued equipment. When not used for these primary missions, this radio net provides a means of dispatching refueling vehicles to aircraft on the airfield. It is difficult to imagine that there was ever a time when this radio net was not available. Flight Operations personnel may not have the disc jockey's audience, but those who hear the sometimes constant "chatter," appreciate that ready and sharp response, "This is Dispatch." It gets the job done and that's what it is all about!

SP4 Cordova D. Hall, Lawson Army Airfield Service, signals a C-141 to stop. Once the aircraft has stopped, Hall will refuel it and prepare it for the completion of its mission at Ft. Benning.

Air Force SGT Paul Moore, Det. 10, 16th Weather Sqn., transmits weather information via teleautograph. The device provides information to nine different stations at Lawson Army Airfield and eliminates the use of telephonic conversations where accuracy may be lost.

An aerial photograph of Lawson Army Airfield gives an overall view of its 2,000 acres. The large amount of acreage provides for future development and growth.

CONAR Band schedules performance Sunday

An 1824 musical salute to a hero of the American Revolution, French Marquis de Lafayette, launched the bands of Ft. Monroe, Va., on a continuous century-and-a-half of service to the country.

In 1976, Ft. Monroe's present musical ambassadors, the Continental Army Band, salutes the American people with "200 years of American Music" Sunday, April 4, at 8 p.m. at Columbus College's Fine Arts Auditorium.

The performance is being sponsored by Ft. Benning, Columbus College and the Association of the United States Army, (AUSA).

Tickets for the free concert may be obtained until April 2 at Columbus College, the Columbus and Phenix City Chambers of Commerce, all banks in Columbus and Phenix City, National Bank of Ft. Benning, Sears at Columbus Square, Montgomery Wards at Peachtree Mall and the Recreation Services office on post.

Ft. Monroe has had a band, ever since the 11 musicians of the 4th Artillery Band greeted Lafayette. The numbers have grown, the names have changed and the uniforms have changed, but their music, like Ft. Monroe, represents more than 150 years of the finest military tradition intertwined with the faces and events of history.

LT (later Confederate general) Robert E. Lee and his young bride often were entertained by the post band during their three year (1831-1834) stay as he completed work on the fortifications of Ft. Monroe.

Thousands of escaped slaves, who found freedom within the walls of the post during the Civil War, gained an added lift to their spirits from the music of the post band.

At the war's end, music drifting from the nearby parade field, was one of the few things to break the loneliness of Confederate President Jefferson Davis' two year confinement at Monroe.

Today's Continental Army Band is a blend of the old and the new. Modern dress blue uniforms are contrasted by the drum major's bearskin hat, which dates back centuries into the military history of Europe and America. The band is one of a few Army bands whose drum major is authorized to wear this distinctive headgear.

The mace, the drum major's symbol of authority, and the colorful sash or baldric both record the history of the units the band represents.

Music played by the 65 talented band members is also the best of the old and the new. Listeners are as likely to hear the works of Paul Anka and Rodgers and Hammerstein as they are those of Anton Dvorak or John Phillip Sousa.

The music is varied for the audience, but the quality is a constant. The Continental Army Band, Ft. Monroe's traditional musical group, remains today, as in the past, one of the Army's foremost bands.

Running 10-15 miles a day preparing for the Boston Marathon slated for April 19, are these five doctors from Martin Army Hospital. The doctors are (L to R) Majors Elbert Richardson, Harvey Taylor, Bernard Hirsch and Charles Robinett, and CPT John McAuliffe. Another doctor that has been also training for the run is MAJ Stephen Lohr, who is not shown.

Texas Aggies plan muster

It won't be in a foxhole, aboard ship, in an aircraft or at a hospital or base camp this time, as it was during wars. The annual Texas Aggie Muster will be held at the Black Angus Motel in Columbus at 7 p.m. on April 21.

Former students of Texas A&M University, their families, parents and friends are invited to the reunion, according to LTC Jack Lorms, commander of the 1st St Bn, TSB, who will chair the muster.

The Aggie Muster dates back to 1903. "More than 350 Centennial Muster will be held around the world this year," Lorms said, "wherever former Texas A&M students live or work." One was even held on Corregidor shortly before the Japanese captured the island at the outset of WWII.

Texas A&M ranks first in agricultural enrollment and 20th in graduate enrollment in science and engineering. It is 18th on the National Science Foundation's list of the nation's 20 leading institutions in research and development expenditures — higher than any other university in the south or southwest.

'Soldiers' need help

SOLDIERS, the Army's official magazine, needs good magazine feature stories from its readers. And SOLDIERS also needs top-quality color slides of professional or aspiring civilian models to use for back cover pinups.

All features need to be well-written in a light, easy-to-read style. The subject must be of interest to an Army-wide audience. No heavy "think" pieces. Accompanying photos are a must — black and white prints or color transparencies.

SOLDIERS' editors promise a "quick" response to all color slide submissions of models. Remember publication in SOLDIERS is great for photographer and model.

It Sounds Incredible

BUT EVELYN WOOD GRADUATES CAN READ

JAWS IN 41 MINUTES

At That Speed, The 309 Pages Come Across With More Impact Than The Movie. In Living Blood, You Might Say.

You can do it, too. So far almost 1,000,000 people have done it. People who have different jobs, different IQs, different interests, different educations have completed the course. Our graduates are people from all walks of life. These people have all taken a course developed by Evelyn Wood, a prominent educator. Practically all of them at least tripled their reading speed with equal or better comprehension. Most have increased it even more.

Think for a moment what that means. All of them—even the slowest—now read an average novel in less than two hours. They read an entire issue of Time or Newsweek in 35 minutes. They don't skip or skim. They read every word. They use no machines. Instead, they let the material they're reading determine how fast they read.

And mark this well: they actually understand more, remember more, and enjoy more than when they read slowly. That's right! They understand more. They remember more. They enjoy more. You can do the same thing—the place to learn more about it is at a free speed reading lesson.

This is the same course President Kennedy had his Joint Chiefs of Staff take. The same one Senators and Congressmen have taken.

Come to a free Speed Reading Lesson and find out. It is free to you and you will leave with a better understanding of why it works. Plan to attend a free Speed Reading Lesson and learn that it is possible to read 3-4-5 times faster, with better comprehension.

SCHEDULE OF FREE SPEED READING-LESSONS

You'll increase your reading speed

Pediatric Clinic to present child care classes

Melanie Harway wants to remind all parents to call and sign up for child care classes to be held at Martin Army Hospital.

Melanie is the daughter of SGT and Mrs. Richard Harway, who is assigned to Co B, 1st Bn., 1st AIT Bde.

Classes designed to help parents cope with common childhood diseases and recognize the need for professional consultation will be offered at Martin Army Hospital.

A two-hour class will be held April 26, 27, 28, and 29 from 7-9 p.m. One or both parents of any child 12 years old or younger, entitled to medical care at the post hospital may sign up to attend by contacting the Pediatric Clinic at 544-1777 or 1795. It is only necessary that one class be attended as the same information will be covered at each scheduled presentation.

Beginning on June 14, non-emergency patients will be seen in the Pediatric Clinic by appointment only. Currently, the clinic operates on a walk-in basis except on Thursday morning. Dr. (MAJ) Gentry Yeatman, assistant chief of the Pediatric Clinic, explained that this is part of a new system for outpatient care at Martin Army Hospital.

"Appointments will be made by the Pediatric Clinic rather than at the Central Appointment Desk. In many cases the parent will be able to talk with a physician or nurse clinician to determine whether it is necessary to bring the child to the hospital for care," he added.

When a clinic visit is necessary, every effort will be made to schedule an appointment for the same day. This new system should reduce waiting time in the clinic and allow the small staff of pediatricians to spend more time treating the seriously ill children.

Dr. Yeatman cited the following as points to consider when seeking care for sick children and consideration concerning 'well' children:

- Children should only be brought to the hospital emergency room when the urgency of the situation dictates. It is preferable to seek aid at the Pediatric clinic as they are better able to attend to childhood ailments.

- Do not bring 'well' children to the hospital when you, the parent, are keeping an appointment for yourself or another sick child.

- Tot Town Nursery, which is opened from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., will allow children to be left over the four hour limit if the parent is on a bonafide hospital visit.

This marks the first edition of Family News, a supplement to our post newspaper, which we feel will add a new dimension to the communication channel to our active duty and retired families.

The Bayonet will feature the Family News as a substitute for Fort Benning's Family Bulletin, which is no longer published. The Family News will be published every two weeks as an insert to the Bayonet and will feature news items and announcements which formerly appeared in the Family Bulletin. Additionally, Family News will be printed in sufficient copies to be given to non-Bayonet readers and may be found in the Mall and other appropriate areas on post.

This first appearance of the Bayonet's Family News section gives me an excellent opportunity to extend the military community's appreciation to the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer for their whole-hearted support to furthering the communication with the family readers of Fort Benning's Bayonet.

Your personal support and effort to make the Family News section of the Bayonet of real service to Fort Benning and its families will be appreciated.

We hope you will take an active role in providing pertinent and informative items for publication.

What's happening

Notice to Parents of School Children

The schools for the dependents of military personnel at Ft. Benning do not terminate school because of severe weather conditions. The individual schools are advised of weather conditions and institute "Tornado Watch" procedures when conditions warrant.

Each school will shelter their students in the safest areas of their buildings on receipt of a "Tornado Warning." Parents SHOULD NOT come to the schools to pick up their children except at the regular dismissal times. Calls to the schools during such weather conditions should be limited to emergencies.

Retention of Government Quarters

A recent change in housing policy now permits certain families to retain government quarters while the military sponsor is away on a short tour of duty overseas. The military member must have PSC orders which indicate either a return to Ft. Benning (Homebase) or a subsequent assignment to another CONUS or Hawaii installation (Advanced Assignment). Retention is voluntary so you must submit request in writing. Any further information you desire can be obtained by calling Mrs. Thompson or Mr. Fagan at Family Housing, Telephone 544-4511 or 545-7602.

Expectant Parents Course

An expectant parents course will be held beginning Tuesday, April 6 at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at Martin Army Hospital.

There are four classes in the course of two hours duration each. Interested, prospective parents may register by calling the Community Health Nursing Service at 545-5431 or 545-4041.

Shipment of Household Goods

Planning on departing Ft. Benning?

Are you aware of the 'early bird' counseling service available at the Transportation Office for those of you planning on shipping household goods? If you're not, you should be.

The office is opened at 7:30 a.m. during normal work days to provide you an opportunity to beat the rush. Normal duty hours begin at 8 a.m.; however, for the sake of convenience personnel will be on duty to assist you with filling out the required forms so that you are ready to go when the counselors come on duty.

Take advantage of the service and beat the crowds.

Once you receive orders and have decided on a date to move, let the people at Transportation know about it. A minimum of seven days in advance of your desired packing date will insure you of the service you expect. For additional information call 544-4423 or 545-4588.

Continental Army Band

The Continental Army Band will make a concert appearance April 4 at 8 p.m. at the Columbus College, Fine Arts Auditorium. This bicentennial Program, sponsored by The Association of the United States Army, Columbus College and Ft. Benning, traces America's history through music, narration and costume.

Free tickets may be obtained from all recreation facilities on post, the Columbus and Phenix City Chamber's of Commerce, all banks, Sears in Columbus Square, Montgomery Wards in Peach Tree Mall and from Columbus College.

Bicycle Jamboree slated

A "Bicycle Jamboree" will be held at the Harmony Church Recreation Center April 18 from noon to 6 p.m. Activities will include a road race, bicycle motorcross and a marathon bicycle obstacle course.

The Bicycle Jamboree is a program designed to promote bicycle safety and encourage biking as a family recreational activity. Trophies will be awarded and refreshments will be served.

To register or for more information, call 544-1712 or 544-3079.

Pulitzer Prize nominee

Columbus teacher to lecture

Dr. Virginia Spencer Carr, Pulitzer Prize nominee, lecturer and Associate Professor of English at Columbus College, will speak at the Main Post Library, Bldg. 93 on April 4, at 4 p.m.

Dr. Carr, who published her first book, "The Lonely Hunter," a biography of Carson McCullers last year, will lecture on the subject, 'The Awesome Responsibility of Biography.'

Following her lecture, there will be a tea and Dr. Carr will autograph copies of her book.

Since the publication of her book, Dr. Carr has been making lecture tours to various colleges and communities throughout the South. In December, 1975, she was invited to San Francisco to deliver a paper on McCullers for the Modern Language Association. In March she went to New York to participate in a Women's Writers Symposium of the New York Public Library at Lincoln Center.

She has been nominated for the Pulitzer Prize, National Book Award, National Critics Circle Award and the Francis Butler Simkins Award, offered by the Southern Historical Association.

Tennessee Williams, noted author, who wrote the introduction for her book said, "I have rarely read a more painstaking documentation of an artist of such unique talent and personality and of such epically heroic experience."

In her book, Carson McCullers, a native of Columbus, is revealed as an extraordinary, sensitive human being who, as a child lived one dimension of her life in a fantasy world of her imagination and whose childhood was filled with torment and pain as well as joy.

Dr. Carr joined the faculty at Columbus College in 1969 after receiving her Ph. D. degree from Florida State University, where she was awarded the 1968 Outstanding Teacher Award in the Department of English as a "teaching fellow."

Knowing rules avoids problems

Rather than finding yourself refused access to the commissary, PX or other military facilities on Ft. Benning because of an unawareness of the dress codes established by regulation, it might be more practical and realistic to make yourself more aware of the existing guidelines.

The wearing of civilian attire during non-duty hours is authorized by all personnel assigned or attached to Ft. Benning. However, when worn by military, their dependents or civilians 12 years and older, clothing will be in good taste and repair and worn as designed by the manufacturer.

It must also be appropriate to the occasion, especially when using the following facilities: chapels, Officer and NCO clubs including the FBOC Country Club and Golf Course, Post Exchange facilities, to include the Mall and the mini-mall (7-11 store), all concessions and theaters and Recreation Services activities to include the libraries, bowling alleys and centers.

T-shirts or other styles of knitted shirts designed and sold or issued for wear as an under garment, such as 'tank tops' or 'muscle shirts', when worn as an outer garment, will not be allowed in any of the facilities mentioned above. Also unauthorized is bare feet or shower shoes, except while at swimming pools and gymnasiums.

Modified items of the military uniform, such as cut-off fatigue trousers or fatigue jackets with the sleeves cut off or removed are not authorized.

The wearing of curlers by both male and female personnel will create sufficient cause for rejection from the aforementioned activities and /or facilities.

The wearing of the unauthorized apparel or items mentioned does not apply to persons seeking emergency medical or dental treatment but does apply to use of these facilities when engaged in routine appointments or visits.

Uniform items other than those authorized for wear with civilian attire will not be mixed. The only items authorized for wear with civilian attire are the windbreaker, overcoat, raincoat and under garments.

Don't get caught short or turned away needlessly — know the rules and realize that they are created to protect your rights.

The success of this publication will depend on the input received from you, the Bayonet reader. Information for inclusion in Family News will be accepted until noon on the Friday prior to publication and should conform with the Guidelines set forth in the Information Letter dated Mar. 23, 1976.

If you wish to contribute information for inclusion in the Family News, but have questions concerning format or acceptability, contact the Information Office at 545-2791 or 545-2131.

Judo classes offered

The aim of a beginner's Judo class is to give the student an understanding and appreciation of the martial art and to provide an outlet for expression through competitive and safe physical activity. The beginning student will learn basic Judo history, philosophy, terminology, proper methods of falling and several basic throwing and grappling techniques.

Intermediate and advanced classes are designed to broaden the student's understanding of Judo and to expand his techniques of execution which will prepare for promotional examinations and develop self-confidence.

The program is opened to boys and girls between the ages of six and 19. Registration fee is eight dollars per year for each participant, $12 for two in the same family and $14 for three.

Anyone interested in joining may register at the TSB Judo Gymnasium, building 2592 on Monday or Wednesday at 6 p.m. Military personnel are invited to participate free of charge and can sign-up at 6 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

Donny Allison, 7, gives his all while attempting to hold his opponent down during a recent Ft. Benning judo match.

Bonus no longer automatic reward

Looking forward to reenlistment and ways to spend your bonus money? Before you get carried away, check with your career counselor. You may not know that bonuses are no longer an automatic reward for everyone reenlisting in the Army.

In 1974, the Armed Forces Enlisted Personnel Bonus Revision Act replaced the Variable Reenlistment Bonus (VRB) with the Selective Reenlistment Bonus (SRB). It also did away with the Regular Reenlistment Bonus (RRB) except for persons on active duty June 1 1974. Those with prior service ending before June 1 or who entered on June 2 1974 or later are no longer entitled to RRB.

Bonuses were originally intended as an incentive for all soldiers who reenlisted. But the Army's needs have changed over the years and it was decided to limit bonuses to skills where retention is a problem.

In this way the Army can offer pay inducements for shortage MOS, enabling them to compete with the civilian market for skilled individuals. SRB is also an incentive for soldiers to serve in shortage skills required by the Army for which there is no demand in the civilian sector.

There are 107 MOS authorized SRB payments for first termers and 22 authorized for careerists. (TNS)

VA Questions and Answers

Q. — I have been in school since the beginning of the enrollment period and have yet to receive an educational assistance check. Can you help me?

A. — You helped yourself with the inquiry. It was VA's first knowledge of our new address. Your checks were returned for lack of a forwarding address.

Q. — How many days after a veteran starts school must he file his application in order for benefits to be retroactive?

A. — Educational assistance allowance may be paid retroactive for one year prior to the date of receipt of the enrollment certification.

Q. — When an educational check has the right claim number, but the name is misspelled, example: "Willie Hancock" is shown for "Lillie Hancock" and the claimant cannot get the check cashed, what action should be taken in order for a new check to be made and how long will it take to get a new check issued?

A. — This check should be returned to the VA office calling attention to the error. Action will be taken to correct the name and have the check reissued. If special pay procedures are indicated, the claimant should receive a check within seven days.

Q. — How is the GI Bill allowance paid for correspondence courses? How much entitlement is used for such a course?

A. — Instead of a monthly allowance, the VA will pay 90 per cent of the cost of an approved course. Payments are made quarterly according to the number of lessons completed by the veteran and services by the school. The veteran's entitlement is reduced by one month for each $270 he receives.

Q. — Who is eligible for CHAMPVA?

A. — The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Veterans Administration (CHAMPVA) is available to the spouse or child of a veteran who has a total disability, permanent in nature, resulting from service-connected cause, or to the surviving spouse or child of a veteran who has died as the result of a service-connected disability?

Q. — Can the nine months educational extension under the GI Bill be used for a master's degree?

A. — No. The veteran must be enrolled in a standard undergraduate college of first professional degree program at the time his original entitlement is exhausted.

Rifle Firing Policy

The firing of any caliber rifle on Ft. Benning is authorized only under the following circumstances:

- On established rifle ranges after permission has been obtained from proper authority.
- By military policy and wildlife officials in conjunction with predatory animal control.
- By military police or personnel on post interior guard duty in the execution of their official duties.

Although hunting in certain areas of the reservation is authorized, hunting with a rifle is not. Accordingly, individuals observed in areas authorized for hunting but in possession of rifles will be subject to apprehension.

All rifles in the possession of personnel living on post must be registered with the Provost Marshall.

Lawn Maintenance

Occupants of family housing and commanders of military units are cautioned NOT to rake leaves and debris into the streets. Large accumulations of leaves and debris in the street gutters cause serious stoppages of storm drainage systems. The end result is flooded streets and buildings.

Old cemeteries reveal Benning past

With the land acquisitions in 1918 and 1941-42, Ft. Benning assumed the responsibility of maintaining private cemeteries, but until recently, there was no record as to how many.

Numerous private cemeteries are located within the boundaries of the Ft. Benning Military Reservation with the oldest headstone depicting births in the late 1700's and deaths as early as 1864. Several of the cemeteries have but one marker to show a single burial, while two of the larger ones have as many as 200 gravesites.

The maps plotted at the time of the second land acquisition showed only 29 private cemeteries on the reservation. But, through efforts of the Buildings & Grounds Division, DFAE, about 3,000 gravesites have been discovered and recorded. The systematic recording of gravesites and cemeteries was started in 1969 when they were physically inventoried and the Ground Maintenance Branch was successful in locating cemeteries and plotting them on the cemetery map.

SFC (Ret.) Alfred Clack and John Zebreski, an employe of the Grounds Maintenance Branch, tackled the enormous task of clearing the lots, taking inventory of both marked and unmarked gravesites and maintaining the cemetery grounds.

Maintenance of the cemeteries includes clearing the underbrush, erecting fencing and gates, cleaning headstones and sometimes repairing broken headstones. Zebreski has added trees and shrubbery to several of the barren plots.

Leads to locations of cemeteries in the remote areas of the reservation came from the workforces of Forestry Branch and the Fish and Wildlife Branch, as well as military who bivouac or camp in the outlying areas. Usually in the vicinity of a burial plot is a chimney, well or other landmark that relates back to a settlement in that area in days past.

Echoes from days gone by spin tales of settlers who travelled from as far away as Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Rhode Island. Individuals buried here also represent soldiers of the Revolutionary War, Civil War, and World War II.

Some interested parties of the surrounding communities have called in to add some of the history of the old settlements.

Most inquiries furnish only a general idea of the area of burial and sometimes no information as to birth or death of deceased; however, the majority of inquiries are satisfied.

James Boone of Richmond, Texas, Mrs. Thomas F. Patrick of Satellite Beach, Fla., and Reverend Gene Walers of Tallahassee, Fla. are but three to write letters seeking information regarding ancestors.

In April 1975 Miss Mildred Smyth of South Haven, Mich. came to search for the final resting place of her grandfather. The only information she had was that his name was Charles Johnson and that he came to Georgia from Pennsylvania in 1860, or thereabout. A check of recorded names revealed that a Charles E. Johnson, born 30 August 1831 and died 10 October 1880, was buried in Cemetery No. 1 (the cemetery the old settlers called Good Hope Cemetery) and on the headstone was written, "Born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania."

The private cemeteries represent much history and a proud heritage. Personnel of the Buildings & Grounds Division are anticipating the completion of all records in conjunction with the bicentennial year.

This headstone in cemetery twenty-four is an example of one that had to be repaired and cemented together. Repairing broken stones is only one of the many jobs done to maintain smaller sites after they are located.

Cemetery number eleven is one site that still has the original fencing. It is located at the junction of Hourglass and Buena Vista roads.

Cemetery number ten is among the larger sites that have to be maintained year 'round. It is adjacent to Buena Vista Road and Moore Road.

Keep calm, give all the facts

In the case of an emergency, a telephone may be the only link between you and the help you need. But, in order to get aid in a hurry, you will have to do more than just pick up the receiver and yell "HELP."

Plenty of people do not know how to make an emergency phone call. Following are four points to remember when making an emergency call:

- Tell WHERE the emergency happened. Give the street and number and, if you live in an apartment, the floor and apartment number. Then repeat them. A brief description of the house or building will also be helpful, particularly at night. Be specific about location. Name some landmark or tell the names of the nearest intersecting streets.

- Tell WHAT happened. Is your home on fire? Is someone bleeding badly? Has someone had a heart attack? Has someone accidentally swallowed a poison or drug overdose? What?

- Tell WHO you are. That's important when the emergency is not obvious to the outsider, especially if a multi-family dwelling is involved.

- Tell WHAT kind of help is needed. Explain what kind of equipment you think will be necessary.

A lot to remember? No — it takes about 10 seconds to deliver that kind of information. After you cover these important points, do not hang up immediately. Give the person to whom you are talking a chance to ask questions.

One last point: don't waste precious time fumbling through a phone book. Be prepared by posting these numbers near your phone — the fire department, police, local poison control center, office and home phone numbers of your family doctor and one or two reliable neighbors.

Make sure that you know how to give vital emergency information quickly and clearly.

Cottonbalers test new tactics during ARTEP

Using the cover of darkness and complete camouflage during daylight, the 3/7th Inf tested all of the "how to fight" concepts that pertain to light infantry.

The signal was given by the evaluators for the successful completion of the new training concept known as the Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP) after two weeks of grueling field duty by the men of the Cottonbaler Battalion.

"An ARTEP is one of the hardest tasks a unit can be assigned. This is due, primarily, to the intensity of the activity — many combat roles are assigned in a short period of time," LTC Bill Seeley, commander of 3/7th Inf, said after the exercise last week. "The ARTEP is a true test of ability."

This ARTEP was designed to examine every detail of a light Infantry Battalion's capabilities. Subunits of the 3/7th Inf were tested individually, as were selected personnel.

LTC Seeley described another benefit of the new ARTEP. "This was a good opportunity for this battalion, our Brigade, and the Infantry Center to look at the new concepts being exercised under simulated combat. Consequently, we utilized mostly new concepts — Intensified Combined Arms Training (ICAT), planning defenses against a numerically superior force, and anti-armor techniques."

The Redeye Section of Cbt Spt Co, 3/7th Inf simulate shooting down another enemy aircraft during their ARTEP last week.

Running can be fun, if you enjoy it

By Dennis M. Seely

The sight of joggers at Ft. Benning is not at all unusual. Entire units run together for their physical training.

It is a bit unusual however for two individuals, who are required to run a great deal, to voluntarily run long distances.

Such is the case of Officer Candidates Rodney O. Luce and David J. L. Blinkinsop, both of 51st Co, 5th Stu Bn, TSB.

Both candidates, who are three weeks away from being commissioned, were avid runners before reporting to OCS and despite their busy schedules, have found time to practice their distance running skills.

Dave Blinkinsop (L) and Rod Luce spend a great deal of their off duty time running. Since most of the competitive races they run in are on hard surface roads, the airborne track is an ideal workout area. Both are officer candidates at 51st Co., TSB.

"The physical training we receive in the program helps to maintain our endurance. Our distance workouts bring us up to par with other area runners," said Luce.

"The weekly five-mile runs aren't as much fun as competition but they do help us stay in shape and progress in our regular workouts," Blinkinsop added.

Competition is what these young men looked forward to when they traveled to Columbia, S.C. Saturday to run in the Palmetto Cup 15 mile run.

In a field of 63, 24-year-old Luce placed 18th while Blinkinsop crossed the finish line two minutes later to come in 22nd.

"To put things in perspective," explained Luce. "First place was an incredible one hour, 17 minutes."

Luce's time was 18 minutes off the pace at 1:35:00 with Blinkinsop finishing in 1:37:16.

In the 30-39 age group, "Blink" placed second, running the distance in 67:37, while Luce placed fourth in the open division with a 68:19.

These officer candidates enjoy running and are already planning strategies for upcoming runs. On April 3 they will travel to Chattanooga for a 10-miler and then on April 17 they will be running in a seven-mile event sponsored by the Columbus Track Club.

While other 51st Company Officer Candidates think about the next five-mile run, Rod Luce and Dave Blinkinsop are thinking about their next opportunity to run 10 miles.

Into fourth week of training

First AIT soldiers approach halfway mark

By Jerry Van Slyke

The first group of trainees to arrive at the 1st AIT Bde has begun the fourth week of the tough, seven-week infantry course.

During the first week of training, the men received various unit orientations, and instruction in the M-203 Grenade Launcher and the Claymore Anti-personnel Weapon. The second week found the soon-to-be Infantrymen zeroing their M-16 rifles, receiving instruction in the M-72 Light Anti-tank Weapon (LAW), and qualifying with the automatic rifle.

Every soldier in Co A, 1st Bn, qualified with the automatic rifle, according to brigade sources. In addition, commanders were particularly pleased with the great aptitude most of the trainees displayed for anti-tank weapons and tactics.

"They did exceptionally well," one commander remarked.

The pace of training picked up noticeably during the third week as the trainees began to be molded into the kind of small, tactical units that will carry the field in the next conflict. Fire team and squad training commenced in earnest. Individual, fire team and squad movements were learned. Movement to contact was learned and squad in the attack was practiced until every trainee could perform the mission of any squad member.

Next week the trainees will be divided into two groups: 11B10 (Light Weapons Infantryman) and 11C10 (Infantry Mortarman). The mortar men will go directly into mortar training and will learn to operate the Army's lethal field mortars. The riflemen will continue through the week with squad tactics, stressing the attack, and will begin live-fire squad attack training.

The cadre personnel, battle-experienced officers and NCOs, are extremely pleased with the attitude, initiative and outright combative spirit displayed by the trainees.

"The morale, discipline, and esprit-de-corps is extremely high," commented SFC Michael R. Wagers, a drill sergeant in Co A, 1st Bn. "Every man is a double volunteer. Once for the Army and once for the infantry."

According to brigade sources, more than 2,000 trainees are presently on hand undergoing the hard, physical infantry training. The trainees have been arriving at the brigade in weekly increments of about 500-600 men. Another 600 are expected to arrive next week, swelling the total of trainees to about 2,600.

The brigade will continue to fill until the projected total of 4,500-5,000 trainees has been reached. Twenty-one of 24 training companies will be in cycle at any one time.

Infantry trainees from Co A, 1st Bn, 1st AIT Bde, climb over the 'high ladder' at the Harmony Church confidence course. The trainees go through a PT test every other week to measure their physical development.

The right to vote

The Bicentennial Voting Assistance Program was developed to ensure that Army personnel and their families are fully informed and assisted regarding their right to register and vote.

The right to cast a ballot and the actual use of that right by all individuals is critical to freedom and to American democracy. All Army members and their families are encouraged to take the time to register and vote by absentee ballot in the primary and general elections.

Voting Assistance Officers have been appointed at every level of command to lend personal assistance to all potential absentee voters throughout this election year. The Federal Post Card Application for Absentee Ballot (FPCA), Standard Form 76, is a postage-free post card printed and distributed by the Federal Government to facilitate absentee voting to include members of the Army Forces and their families.

If you need help with the proper voting procedures, consult your unit Voting Assistance Officer.

1/58th Inf on way to Texas

By C. B. Hoover

The gentle rolling hills, "wait-a-minute" vines, mud and tall pines of Georgia were all left behind by the men of the 1/58th Inf this week.

The roar of aircraft departing from Lawson Army Airfield and the Columbus Metro Airport represented the start of the mens' participation in another phase of tactical training. This time to be conducted in a desert and mountain environment at Ft. Bliss, Texas.

The terrain will be different for some of the men who have never been in the desert before, but the equipment they will be operating won't. The unit will be utilizing their own M-113 Armored Personal Carriers (APC) that were shipped earlier this month.

Another old friend will also greet the men when they arrive, their own assigned weapons.

Each unit in the battalion will spend approximately three weeks at Bliss. As one company completes its training and starts back to Benning another company will be departing for Bliss.

The training has been designed to enhance the achievement of the unit's minimum essential standards and to upgrade the overall combat effectiveness of each unit in the battalion.

The development of the unit's proficiency to conduct tactical operations in a desert and mountain environment is only one of the training goals the battalion has set. They also striving to develop the maximum degree of small arms proficiency; a formidable anti-armor capability; improve the unit's ability to conduct independent and night operations; and instill confidence and ability in the mens' military skills at every level.

The men of the 1/58th Inf (Mech) will be leaving their APCs behind for most of the first week of training. The emphasis is to be placed on Recondo Operations, day and night. Incorporated into the program will be map reading, rappelling, patrolling and dismounted movement in mountainous or desert terrain.

The second week is dedicated to developing small arms proficiency. Throwing live grenades; using small arms in an air-defense role; firing small arms against moving targets and conducting live fire battle drill are but a few of the activities to be conducted.

Conducting defensive, retrograde and offensive operations, and employment of mounted battle drill will highlight the third week of training as the unit conducts a field training exercise (FTX).

The soldiers of the 1/58th Inf will be "on-the-road" for the next two months, but instead of maneuvering their APCs through the forest of Ft. Benning, where cover and concealment is easily found, it will be on the open, and often forbidding desert of West Texas.

March Soldier of Month at 197th Inf Bde

Co A, 197th Spt Bn makes it three in a row

By Ron Folwer

For the third time in as many months, the Soldier of the Month award for the 197th Inf Bde went to a soldier from the same battalion.

PFC Thomas E. Carnes, a personnel records specialist with Co A, 197th Spt Bn was named over five other members in the brigade.

"It's really an exciting thing to go before a board and prove yourself worthy of being able to win something like the Brigade Soldier of the Month," PFC Carnes commented.

"I guess that I had a little bit more incentive than the others who went before the board. I had to keep the winning streak alive for the battalion."

PFC Carnes, who hails from Huntington, Ind., entered the Army in May 1975 under the delayed enlistment option, and completed his basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky.

PFC Carnes learned about personnel records in AIT at the United States Army Administration School at Ft. Jackson, S.C.

"I liked the idea of being able to perform an administrative job, and the training that I received at Ft. Jackson afforded me with just that opportunity," Carnes said.

Prior to joining the Army, Carnes was employed as a salesman at his father's business in Huntington, Ind.

PFC Carnes, his wife, Carol, and their daughter, Jennifer Lynn, reside in Columbus.

For his efforts, PFC Carnes will be presented with a Brigade Certificate of Achievement, $25 savings bond, and a three-day pass.

Learn brain surgery in your spare time : And other fables

Everyone has seen advertised promises of "high paying jobs, exciting work, no previous schooling required and placement upon completion."

Home study schools hold special interest for many since such courses allow study at home and at one's own pace. At the present time there are more than 700 home study programs throughout the United States. The majority of these programs are honest and provide a needed service; there are a number, however which are not so honest and a subscriber stands a good chance of losing both money and time.

Case of the mail nurse

Take the case of the woman with little education who was led to believe that by enrolling in a correspondence school she could become a practical nurse. After considerable time and expense she received an impressive diploma. However, when she went to get a job she was informed that her diploma was meaningless since the school was not accredited in that state, nor any state as she learned later.

Her situation, however, is not an isolated case; each year any number of people are fooled by these fake correspondence schools. Do you say to yourself, "It could never happen to me?" Or are you more honest and say, "Well it could happen to me if I'm not careful?" The person who says the latter will probably be more likely to see the danger signs and avoid being taken.

What things can you do to protect yourself? First, watch out for danger signs, which usually amount to promises of high paying, exciting work with little effort. If you do find a school that interests you make sure it fits your needs and will be of benefit. If you are interested in a motorcycle mechanics correspondence course, for example, contact prospective employers. Ask them the following four questions suggested by the Federal Trade Commission FTC :

- Would you hire graduates of the school?
- How many have you actually hired in the last year?
- Were they hired because of school training?
- Did training make the difference in starting salary?

Check for accreditation

Try to contact at least three employers and if their responses are favorable then you are reasonable safe in taking the correspondence course. Another check would be to contact the National Home Study Council Accrediting Commission, 1601 18th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20009, to see if the school is in fact accredited.

You should check to see if any complaints have been made against the school by contacting the local Chamber of Commerce of Better Business Bureau, the FTC office nearest you and any present or former vocational school students.

Remember your rights also. As a veteran or Service member you have a 10 day "cooling-off" period to cancel your course if you are taking it under the GI Bill. If you do not complete the course you may be entitled to special refunds.

If the student approved the enrollment agreement, but takes no lessons, the school can charge a registration fee of up to 10 per cent of tuition of $50 whichever is less. If the drop-out is after one lesson, but less than 25 per cent of the tuition. After 50 per cent of the lessons are complete, the law requires no refund.

Remember: the time to be cautious and to investigate is before you sign the contract. Once you have signed and then change your mind there is very little which can be done.

You have it bad?

The following item originally appeared in STARS and STRIPES during the era between World II and Korea. It was attributed to an Army First Sergeant. He presented it at his retirement ceremony in Wiesbaden, Germany:

So you've been crying about how much work you're doing. Never get any time off, eh? Well, let's look at it this way.

There are 365 days in a year. You are entitled to 30 days leave and have the privilege of a three-day pass about every six weeks. That's a total of 56 days, leaving 309 days.

There are approximately 16 National holidays and 104 Saturdays and Sundays. That narrows the balance to 189 days. You sleep approximately eight hours a day and spend another eight off duty. That takes up another 125 days of your year and leaves Uncle Sammy with 63 days.

If you take an hour a day for coffee, cokes, and incidentals, that's 15 days a year. Only 48 left, 52 half work days a year are set aside for physical training and information and education lectures. The balance is now 22 days.

Of these 22 days, 12 are pay days, and you know how much you get done then. That leaves 10 days.

Statistics show that the average person spends 2 days a year in the dental clinics and 7 days undergoing medical treatment. That narrows it down to one day. And brother, if you can't figure how to goof off for one day a year, you're hurting.

Red Cross explains tornado safety

The tornado season is here, but knowing what to do in the event that one threatens is a major factor in protecting yourself from their destructive powers.

"A tornado may occur in any state," according to J. C. Jackson, field director of the Ft. Benning Red Cross "however, they are most common in the Midwest, South and Southwest."

He urged that Ft. Benning residents pay close attention to the tornado warnings of the National Weather Service and be guided by them, especially in the months of the greatest tornado threat, from March to early fall.

Mr. Jackson explained that the term 'tornado watch' means that tornadoes may be expected to develop. 'Tornado warning' indicates that a tornado has actually been sighted. When the Weather Service has issued a tornado warning, persons close to the danger area should take cover immediately, preferably in a storm cellar, underground excavation or steel-framed or reinforced concrete building if possible.

In an office building, go to the interior hallway on the lowest floor or to a designated shelter area. Workers in an open factory or warehouse should move quickly to the section of the building which affords the greatest protection.

In the home, the basement offers the greatest safety. In homes without basements, seek cover in the central part of the house on the lowest floor in a small space such as a bathroom or closet or under sturdy furniture. Keep some windows open on the side away from the expected 'twister,' but stay away from them.

"Mobile home are particularly vulnerable to destructive winds," Jackson explained. "Secure tie-downs will help to prevent overturning and lessen the hazard. In times of danger from tornadoes, a warden should be appointed in mobile home parks to watch the skies for approaching 'twisters' and listen for radio warnings of sightings or progress of tornado activities. A hand siren should be kept readily available to alert residents."

"The best thing to do is get out of the mobile home," he emphasized. "Endangered residents should seek safety in a nearby sturdy building, or as a last resort, in a ditch, culvert or ravine. In any case, do not remain in the mobile home."

"If you are in open country and there is not time to find suitable shelter, lie face down in the nearest depression and protect your head with your arms," he said. "Do not take shelter in an automobile."

Mr. Jackson concluded by urging that communities cooperate with the National Weather Service and assist them in their efforts to reduce fatalities and injuries caused by tornados. He encouraged local leaders to prepare for tornado strikes by informing local residents of the precautionary measures they should take in the event of a 'tornado watch' or 'tornado warning.'

features... CSM Edward Crook Jr.

By Jerry Van Slyke

The face is strong with a fighter's jaw that was once punched by Rocky Marciano. The body is middle-aged now, but still well-proportioned and powerful. The fists are like sledgehammers and the star on the arm is circled by a laurel wreath and the stripes and rockers are all there too, three up and three down in gold.

One look is enough to warn anyone that CSM Edward Crook Jr., 5th Bn, 1st AIT Bde, is a non-sense man. The quick mind that survived Detroit's East Side still sparkles and the fists that won an Olympic gold medal are still hard.

"I used to work out in Detroit's Brewster Center when I was a kid," he said in a refined rumble. "That's the same place Joe Louis, Sugar Ray and lots of others got their starts. I used to watch the pros box there."

CSM Edward Crook Jr.

Crook began life hard in the unwallled but nevertheless iron-bound ghetto of Detroit's East Side.

"I grew up fighting. It was twelve blocks from my house to the school," he grimaced. "Every morning and afternoon I had to cross territory belonging to three or four different gangs."

"There was one gang," he continued, "that used to drive everybody, and I mean everybody off the streets. That's the kind of place the East Side was in those days."

After graduating from high school, Crook began attending West Virginia State University. "I did a little boxing and played baseball and football," he remembered. "Football has always been my first love."

Crook's collegiate life was short. "The Korean Conflict was on and I was drafted in 1951. I've been in the Army ever since."

Once in the Army, Infantryman Crook found himself playing football. His meteoric rise to the first string All-Army Football Team came within two years. National scouts found him and he was offered contracts by the Bears and Eagles in '54 and '55.

"It was a tough decision," he recalled. "Maybe I made a mistake and let my big chance go by. I'll never know. I decided to stay in the Army instead of turning pro-football."

Crook may have given over the idea of going pro in the world of sports (he had refused to go pro in boxing a year earlier) but, he wasn't out of the picture.

"I really like sports," he explained, "but when you mix sports with money, television and big business, it gets dirty. I don't want that and I don't think anyone else does unless they are there only for the buck."

"The Olympics, on the other hand," he continued, "was at the top of the heap outside the pros. That's where I wanted to be."

The Olympic trials of 1956 found Crook entered in the light middleweight class. One after another he knocked out his adversaries until, in the semi-finals, he broke his hand on someone's skull. His opponent hit the planks but Crook went into the finals with a broken hand and lost to the last man he had to beat.

"Ed Sullivan had picked a kid named Vinnie Ferguson to win in 1956," he grinned. "I knocked him out in the first round in the Cow Palace in San Francisco. That's the fight I broke my hand in."

"I went on to fight Jose Torres in the finals," he continued. "I lost. I never had a chance with that right hand like it was, and Torres went on to win a silver medal in the Olympics that year and later, after he turned pro, won the world middleweight championship."

Crooks was selected as an alternate that year, but "it meant nothing. I wasn't going."

The late '50s found him in the Berlin Brigade. In 1958, while a member of the 3rd Bn, 6th Inf, he and his battalion commander (then LTC Weyand, now full General and Army Chief-of-Staff) stood at attention while he was presented with the All-Star Army Quarterback Watch.

"I fought quite a bit on the side while I was in Europe," he said. "I got used to the way the Europeans fight and I studied their style which doesn't impress me much. I also won the All-Army and Inter-service titles a few times each during that time period."

When the Olympic trials came in 1960, Crook was ready. He was getting old and it was now or never.

"I picked up the inter-service title again in 1960," he said, "and went back to the trials in Frisco. I lost the semi-final to Wilbur McClure but I nearly knocked out the middleweight champ in a bout at Ft. Dix, New Jersey. After that, I was selected to represent the United States in the 165 pound class at the 1960 Olympics in Rome."

"You know, I stood at the edge of the Roman Forum," he recalled. "I looked into it and I thought, 'Three thousand years of history was made here and I'm still feeling it now'. It was a significant moment in my life. I felt it very deeply."

Crook went into the ring five times that year in Rome, each time with his heart in his throat and a gold medal on his horizon. He was like a machine. The faces of the men he beat into a pulp were like dim sign posts on the road to the gold medal. "Man, did I want that medal."

Finally, the end came. The preliminaries were over, the scrubs had been wiped out, and the next day Crook would go into the ring with a soldier from the Soviet Union for the Olympic championship.

"I went down to the Coliseum that night," he said. "I walked out on the sands where a different kind of athlete had competed in Rome a long time ago. I walked where Spartacus walked. I thought about what a good thing clean sports are and what a big slice of my life had been put into them, and suddenly I was really glad I hadn't left the Army. I stood there, at night, in the middle of the Roman Arena and I knew I was going to win."

Crook climbed into the ring, his own modern arena, the next day and fought to the roars of the crowd much like Spartacus did twenty centuries earlier, just a few miles away. When it was over, he was the world champion and the gold medal hung from his neck as the band played the Star Spangled Banner and statesmen politicked and children bought ice cream from the vendors under the warm, wine-blue Italian sky. Eddie Crook, the kid that had to fight his way to school every morning, was an Olympic Champion.

In 1961, a fresh young President with new ideas and a charisma still felt today came into office and Crook found himself on a good will tour of a dozen African nations for the State Department.

"I put on exhibition bouts and took on all comers," he grinned. "I vanquished all the local champions."

Crook and his party were in Leopouldville in the Belgian Congo when civil war broke out. "Leopouldville was the most beautiful city I've ever been in," he said. "It had wide, clean streets bordered by date and palm trees, sidewalk cafes, crowds of bustling, happy people of all nationalities and even the taxis were cadillacs."

"The next thing I knew," he recalled, "Patrice Lumumba was dead, machine guns were firing across the roof tops and precious human blood ran in the streets and in the gutters with the dirt and cigarette butts. What's wrong with people?"

"I lost contact with the State Department when the city was cut off," he smiled, "and they informed my wife that I had probably been taken. I got out, however. That in itself is another story."

After the Congo, Crook quit title fighting. He dropped out of football in 1964. "Age," he said. "It always gets you in the end."

"I still work out and stay fit, but no more rings, no more bells, no more shouting crowds, no more referees, no more freight trains in the face and guts."

In 1967 Crook went to Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Bde. When he returned, a combat wise veteran, he went on ROTC duty. It was the late 60s and America's campuses were battlegrounds themselves.

"It wasn't always easy, being a black, senior NCO on a college campus in Mississippi," he recalled, "especially with my conservative viewpoints and just fresh from the war."

"I got along with the kids fairly well though," he continued. "After awhile, the Army sent me on a series of speaking engagements to various colleges around the United States to answer questions about our viewpoint of the conflict in Vietnam."

"I didn't try to make it into something it wasn't, but I did tell them the stright skinny, straight from the shoulder. Most of them didn't have any real idea of what was happening over there."

"Every college kid in America was a self-professed expert on the subject and none of them knew any more about it than what the liberal press told them. It was one of the great tragedies of the decade."

Crook was promoted to Sergeant Major after the ROTC duty and served a tour with the an Air Defense Artillery battalion in Germany prior to coming to Ft. Benning in 1976.

Today he is the Command Sergeant Major of the 1st Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade's 5th Battalion.

Eddie Crook is walking death in the ring and out. Eddie is a man with deep sensitivities and highly developed ideas of right and wrong. Eddie Crook is a Command Sergeant Major of Infantry. But most of all, Eddie Crook is a complete champion.

Eddie Crook the morning of the big fight at the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome. Crook won five out of five bouts to win the Olympic Gold Medal.

Section sponsors tour to Ocmulgee

By Jim Wilbert

In the past the Race Relations section of the 34th Med. Bn has had several sponsored tours.

These tours have been to such places as the Martin Luther King Center for Social Change in Atlanta and the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, including the George Washington Carver Museum.

On March 24, a tour of Ocmulgee National Park, an area of Indian inhabitation from 1000 B.C. to 1100 A.D., was conducted by the section.

Thirty-three members of the battalion toured the national memorial park. Guided by Mr. Bernard Berg, a ranger with the U.S. National Park Service, the group toured the Ocmulgee National Museum and Earthlodge. The museum displays such artifacts as hand-made pottery, displays of food sources and weapons used for hunting by the Creek Indians.

The Earthlodge, an ancient community meeting hall, dates back a thousand years and was constructed for use as a meeting hall between tribal and clan chiefs, where problems were discussed. Other sites in the Ocmulgee National Park are the greater and lesser temple mounds, burial mounds, a cornfield mound, Creek Indian trading post and an ancient Indian ball field.

For the members of the 34th Med. Bn. this tour, to one of the more important ancient Indian centers in the Southeastern United States, was an important step in the process of learning about other races and cultures.

Members of the NCOWC gathered in the East Parking Lot of Bldg 4 at 8 a.m. on April 3 to begin a five mile road march. Many sore muscles, tired legs and blistered feet later the road march ended at the NCOWC Lounge in the Lawson Field area.

The tired ladies joined their husbands and families for a picnic, which the husbands had prepared. It was a lovely afternoon for a picnic and everyone enjoyed the first outing of the season.

Mrs. Guy Sullivan, chairman, and her committee wish to thank Mrs. Cook of Main Post Recreation Center, who served the ladies coffee, punch and cookies on their rest stop. Thank you to the 34th Med Bn for their medical support; the Military Police for their assistance; the Airborne Dept for use of their track; and last, but not least the husbands who sweated over a hot barbecue grill.

MAST completes its 300th mission

The 498th Med Co (Air Ambulance), 34th Med Bn has handled its 300th Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic (MAST) mission.

The 300th mission was called to transport a premature infant with respiratory disorders from Griffin-Spaulding Hospital to Columbus Medical Center.

Members of the crew were CPT Robert Dingley, mission commander; CW3 Bill Dunn, pilot; SP5 Stephen Ratliff, flight medic; and SP4 George Davidson, crew chief.

The MAST program was implemented at Ft. Benning in May 1974. The program responds to about one mission every other day. Transportation of premature infants accounts for 65 per cent of the MAST missions flown in the Georgia-Alabama area.

Strategic mobility: an Achilles heel?

In 1939, Germany conquered Poland in 27 days. Today, military planners say that it would take U. S. military strategic airlift 19 days to move a full combat division and all of its equipment to a European battlefield. NATO resistance in a war in Europe would surely be much better than that of the Poles in 1939, but 19 days is a long time!

The DoD plan, the Airlift Enhancement Program, would reduce the time to move a full division to seven days. Essentially, this program would:

- Assume maximum use rate of the most effective 70 USAF strategic cargo aircraft, the C-5s, by strengthening the wing structure, which will also ensure a much longer life span for the aircraft;

- "Stretch" the 275 C-141s in the USAF inventory, thereby increasing their capacity by about 30 per cent; and

- Enlarging the entryways of about 100 of the 153 wide-bottomed commercial cargo aircraft which will be made available to DoD in an emergency by the commercial airlines as part of the Civil Reserve Air Fleet (CRAF).

DoD proposed this program last year and Congress appropriated part of the money for the C-141 phase ($16.5M) and $32M for planning and the initial engineering for the C-5 portion. However, it turned down the CRAF proposal. DoD is asking for the CRAF funding again in FY 77 because, as Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld said, the CRAF modifications "would produce over half of the capability increase sought in the entire Airlift Enhancement Program at less than one-third of the total cost." (AUSA)

West Point Lake: a fishing hot-spot

By Denny Blankenship

West Point Lake is fast becoming known nationwide as the fishing hot-spot of the South. The 58,000 acre impoundment on the Alabama - Georgia border was opened to the general public last summer and most area anglers are taking advantage of the 525 miles of fishable shoreline. In addition to offering some of the finest fishing possible, many family recreational areas are either presently available or under construction.

Corps of Engineers spokesman state that "contracts were let for construction of the boat ramps first. Forty of these have been completed and are now in use. The accompanying park facilities are now under construction. Six family recreational areas on the Alabama side and two on the Georgia side have been completed."

Although still in its infant stage, the lake offers bass fishing that is nothing short of superb. Two Post Bass Club members, CPT Bob Kramer and SFC Randy Harris, easaily caught 35 bass in a few short hours last weekend. All of these bass were extremely healthy (1-4 pound range) and seemed to hit almost anything thrown into the water.

Now's the time to get up there and tear them up.

A word of caution though, the lake is hazardous for boating in many areas and will not be at full pool level until around May 1.

Woman vet, one of eight in the Army

By Betty Zimmerman

Ever since she was in the fifth grade, CPT Rachel Smith knew she wanted to be a veterinarian and now she is one of the Army's eight women "vets."

The Dearborn, Michigan, native earned her degree at Michigan State University in East Lansing. During her five and a half years studying there, she ran into several unusual patients.

Standing out in her mind was the case of the sick iguana. An iguana is a large American lizard — this one was six feet long with the name of "Baby Snookums." Six members of the owner's family accompanied him to the doctor to see what was wrong with the "almost-human" pet. It turned out that they had been feeding "Snookums" too much like a human — feeding it from the table, candy, beer and whatever it wanted. All that "Baby Snookums" needed was a "normal" iguana diet of dog food.

But treating animals is only a small part of CPT Smith's Army duties. She is the Officer in Charge of Food Hygiene and Inspection Section and only works in the animal clinic for two hours a day.

Most of this doctor's time is spent inspecting conditions and food at places like the commissary, dining facilities, and warehouses storing food products. Her section is responsible for seeing that the freshness, cleanliness, and handling of anything consumed by post personnel meets Army standards.

whether she will make the Army a career or not.

Seeing that the commissary beef is stored at the proper temperature is part of CPT Smith's duties as officer in charge of Food Hygiene and Inspection Section.

Job of food inspectors

Combating disease and keeping Army healthy

In the Civil War, spoiled food accounted for more than twice as many casualties as battle wounds. Many of the diseases that ravaged the ranks were transmitted by food and water consumed by the troops.

Today, the job of combating these diseases and helping keep the Army healthy falls on Veterinary Corps officers and Veterinary Service enlisted soldiers.

Food inspection is only a part of their job. But it is one that has become of paramount importance to today's soldiers and their families. Soldiers have come to depend on high health and sanitation standards in the prepared food they buy on post and the foodstuffs they buy in commissaries.

Numerous inspections of meat, produce and other food items that pass through Army commissaries help insure the highest standards of wholesomeness and quality. Few offpost supermarkets can boast of higher quality standards.

Long before a food item is purchased for shipment to a commissary, inspectors have checked the processors' plants to insure sanitation and cleanliness.

Food arriving at the commissary has passed through a long line of quality and sanitation inspectors who insure the food meets the highest standards. Beginning, for example, with steaks still romping through pastures or celery stalks growing in a field, the process is a lengthy check and double-check until the food reaches the commissary display case.

The inspectors may come from a variety of government agencies including the Army and Air
