OSUT test underway here

By Pat Brown

The long awaited test of OSUT (One Station Unit Training) begins here today, ultimately involving ten companies in the 1st Infantry, Training Brigade, with a peak capacity of 220 men.

OSUT has been a reality here since August 1978 with the beginning of the OSUT validation period. The OSUT validation was required to correct minor discrepancies and to identify and solve problem areas before actual testing begin.

Concurrently, TST (Two Station Training) will begin at Fort Knox, Ky., also ultimately involving ten companies with a maximum capacity of 220 men. About midway during the training cycle, trainees there will be transported to Benning to complete the second phase of their initial entry training.

Trainees for both OSUT and TST are randomly selected at the Fort Jackson, S.C. reception station for Infantry training enlistees.

Six training companies will also begin OST (One Station Training) here. OST varies from OSUT, in that all training is conducted at one post, but midway during the cycle, trainees switch companies, and the original cadre of trainers is replaced by a second set of trainers, thus inserting an additional factor for comparison purposes.

The Program of Instruction (POI) for all

OSUT/TST/OST is conducted over a 12 week period with time variances for testing and transportation.

Following the end of the OSUT/TST/OST tests in May, the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) Combined Arms Testing (TCATA) will analyze training results and forward their evaluation to TRADOC. TRADOC will add the cost analysis of each type of training and forward both training and cost analyses to Department of Army (DA).

DA is expected to forward their recommendations to Congress sometime around the end of September 1979, who will make the final decision as to which type of training will be adopted.

Black Hawk

The UH-1 "Huey" helicopter will be replaced by the UH-60A "Black Hawk" as production increases. See related story on page 2.

Army acquires new combat vehicle

"The UH-60A Black Hawk helicopter will be one of the most versatile weapons on the modern battlefield." This is how Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. William Livsey describes the newest addition to the Army's arsenal of combat vehicles.

The Army plans to deliver a total of 1,107 Black Hawks to field units over the next eight years.

The Black Hawk will be replacing the UH-1 "Huey" helicopter in units that place a high priority on air mobile tasks. These units include air cavalry, medical and combat support aviation companies. The first deliveries will go to the 101st Airborne Div. (Air Assault) at Fort Campbell in May 1979. The 82nd Airborne Div. at Fort Bragg, followed by units in Germany, are next on the list.

TRADOC will conduct approximately 600 hours of comprehensive testing on the first eight Black Hawks that roll off the assembly line. The testing will determine if the Black Hawk is fully capable of supporting itself in the field.

The Black Hawk is the latest evolution in a chain of 14 Sikorsky-Army helicopter models that began with the R-4 model 35 years ago. The UH-1 "Huey" proved to be a workhorse during the Vietnam conflict. The "Huey" performed thousands of missions under trying conditions in a hostile environment. Although the "Huey" got the job done, it did have some shortcomings. It was with these shortcomings in mind that the Black Hawk was developed.

The initial concept for the Black Hawk began in 1966. The Department of Army approved the necessary materiel need documents in 1971, and after a competitive development program with the Boeing corporation, Sikorsky was awarded the contract in December 1976. The Black Hawk's advantages over its predecessor are numerous. By direct comparison, the Black Hawk is seven feet longer and almost three feet shorter in height than the "Huey." The Black Hawk has four rotors front and rear while the "Huey" has two. The Black Hawk is truly a squad carrier because it can carry 11 combat equipped troops with three crew members. Under alternate loading conditions, the Black Hawk can carry up to 14 troops.

The greatest advantages for the Black Hawks are in its performance. It is powered by twin General Electric T700 turbine engines rated at 1560 shaft horsepower each and is capable of running on one engine if necessary. The "Huey" on the other hand is powered by a single 1250 shaft horsepower engine. The Black Hawk has a substantially increased cruise range and a cruising speed of 168 miles per hour compared to the "Huey's" 104 miles per hour.

The Black Hawk is capable of taking off from

Correspondence course aids job effectiveness

Army Operations and Intelligence supervisors here and at other posts have one advantage over their counterparts. They've got a special training tool to help them increase job effectiveness and to improve career potential for those in their sections.

The program is known as SOJET, or Supervised On The Job Extension Training. It's a correspondence course available for armor, infantry, field artillery, and air defense artillery NCO's and specialists in MOS skill levels one through five.

The course has several advantages. It provides a quick guide to task priorities and individual training needs. Subcourse performance tests, given and scored by supervisors, insure that students meet task training objectives. Training time is minimal and all records are kept at the Army's Institute for Professional Development.

Supervisors play a major role in this course's operation and should be willing to accept this added responsibility. In the long run, it pays off. NCO's or specialists in one of these positions may contact their first line supervisor or their S-2 or S-3. For personnel not in these duty positions, the role of supervisor-trainer falls to the commander or his or her designated representative.

For further information or enrollment forms, write: US Army Institute for Professional Development, Training Support Center, Newport News, VA 23628 or call Paula Dalton, Operations Intelligence Course Team Chief at AV, 927-4876, local 878-4876 (TNS)

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

ITB vies for coveted award

By Peter F. Larson

Representing Fort Benning in 1979 for the large dining facility category of the 11th annual Phillip A. Connelly Award Program for Excellence in Army Food Service will be the 3rd 'Deal with it' Bn, 1st ITB Dining Facility.

As stated in DA Circular 30-25, "The objective of the program is to provide recognition for excellence in the preparation and serving of food in Army troop dining facilities and to provide added incentives to competitive programs of major Army commands by higher level competition and recognition in the form of trophies."

The program was originated also to pay homage to the late Phillip A. Connelly, who for many years was a key figure in promoting food service recognition and award programs in the Armed Forces. This particular program is sponsored for the Department of the Army by the International Food Service Executives Association (IFSEA).

Dining facilities throughout the Army areas will be graded closely on all phases of operations including dining area décor, attitude, appearance, meal hours, arrangement of mess area and adherence to recipes.

Sgt. 1st Class James A. Archuleta, 3rd Bn mess steward stated, "We're in this to win. I've got the best crew in the Army. They are good and I'm proud of them."

As the Company Mess Steward of Co A, 3rd Bn, at Harmony Church, Archuleta won Battalion Best Mess, a record fourteen times and captured the Brigade Best Mess Award twice. He was handpicked to manage the Consolidated Dining Facility for 3rd Bn upon occupation of the now multi-million dollar Kinsman Barracks at Sand Hill.

Since moving to Sand Hill, he has captured the Brigade Best Mess for large dining facilities three times. When asked what the secret to his success was, he replied, "Variety of food and honest belief that the mission comes first!"

Getting ready for a series of demanding inspections like the Connelly Award is no easy task and Archuleta, a realist, agrees. "Yeah, it's going to be tough, but my people can do it. After all, we feed 3,300 meals every day in as many as eight field locations plus garrison. We know what we're up against, but we made a commitment and we're going to give it our all!"

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

It is the new year and looking back, running has been a great experience for me. Most benefits felt in the beginning hold true even now. The effort is still a great release from work and the military. Running along the roadside taking in the Benning countryside is mellowing. That half hour to an hour of exercise puts me in a different frame of mind.

I've talked to many runners who consider themselves addicts — they need to run. Fitting into the same category, I get rather irritated if something interferes with my daily run. Is it good to be so involved in a physical activity? Personally I say yes, what other vice is so healthy?

The past week, I have noticed all the people out running in their new warm-up suits possibly filling a New Year's resolution.

People considering getting into shape for the New Year should remember they are out of shape. Do not try to do too much too fast. Reasonable exercise is very important to injury free running.

The road back to good health is a long one and there is no reason to get in a big sweat. Pay attention to what your body is telling you. If you ache from head to toe and find it hard to sleep at night, you are overtraining and should slow down. When your body is tired and run down you are more prone to injury and stress.

Weekend athletes are the most common casualties. They jump out there and play with all the fury of a high school student in forty year old bodies. For consistent health building, exercise moderately and at least four days a week.

Most of my injuries were the result of overstress which included: strained muscles, shin splints, sore hips, back aches and strained tendons. The above list may sound like I spent more time with the doctors than on the track but that isn't the case. The injuries have been few and far between in the past six years.

If you can only run to the end of the block it is rather foolish to jump up and try running a mile. Start out at a half a mile and run just to finish.

Pre-warmup exercises are extremely important especially for older people. Working muscles that are tight may cause injury and very serious injuries over an extended period. You should stretch at least 15 minutes before heading out on the track. If I'm properly stretched out, my stride is smoother and the run is more relaxing.

I've talked with runners who say their blood pressure has dropped and are less nervous because they started a regular running program.

How much should you run a week? You're the best judge. Run at your own level and run to finish a health race with your own life.

Glad you asked

Why do people join the Army?

Sgt. 1st Class Bill Payton, Hqs Co Hqs Cmd

The Army offers employment opportunities in over 300 different specialties, most of which are similar to occupations in civilian life. People join for various reasons such as a career, an apprenticeship, a post secondary educational experience or simply on-the-job-training. Some join to finance an education, while others consider military service to be an interim needed to find ones' self in order to make a more long-term decision.

Spec. 4 James Young, 197th MP Plt

I joined to finish my education and gain three years' experience as a policeman. There were schools that I attended in the service that I wouldn't have been able to attend in civilian life.

Spec. 6 Robert Bryant, Hqs Hqs Bn (PROV) Ft. McClellan, Ala.

When I graduated from high school, I married and had a child. I couldn't afford to go to college. This and the lack of a skill influenced me in joining the Army.

Spec. 5 Mark Kever, Co C, 2/69th

The reason I came in the Army the first time was primarily for patriotic reasons. I lived in an orphanage for eight and a half years and the two are a lot alike because we'd get up early and work hard. The only difference is that in Army we get paid for it. I reenlisted because I like my job and get satisfaction from it.

Commentary

Go ahead and smoke!

By John Pink

The United States Army encourages the soldier to smoke in many ways.

The smoke break, the low cost of cigarettes, and the availability of smokes, tend to make non-smokers smoke, and smokers smoke more.

Smoking and smoke breaks are a tradition in the Army. The fact that many work areas are "no smoking" areas encourages people to take an authorized smoke break. A non-smoker taking the same break appears to be loafing. If a smoker taking a break is asked what he is doing, he simply replies that he is taking a smoke break. He is then usually told to go back to work when he finishes his cigarette. It appears that it won't be long before a non-smoker learns that he can increase the number and the length of his breaks if he takes smoke breaks instead of plain breaks, and the only way to do this is to take up smoking.

The low cost of cigarettes in the Army tends to make people smoke more. In the United States, commissaries and post exchanges are not required to charge state tobacco tax or state and city sales taxes. The cost is further reduced because commissaries are not profit oriented; similarly, post exchanges operate to serve the soldier and not to make more than a minimum profit. In overseas areas the prices are still further reduced because there is no requirement to charge federal tobacco tax. In overseas areas, the result is that cigarettes cost less than two dollars a carton.

To encourage smoking further, the Army makes cigarettes available at all Army installations. In garrisons, all post exchanges and commissaries, regardless of size, carry cigarettes. During field problems, mobile post exchange trucks bring cigarettes to the soldier. In a combat zone, cigarettes are provided free to soldiers in sundry packs.

At a time when our government is spending millions to discourage smoking, it would seem the Army would try to do the same instead of encouraging it. Although it is hard to change tradition, the smoke breaks should be phased out of the Army. The price of cigarettes in the post exchange should be no less than the price charged off post. The additional profit could be used to offset the riding cost of necessity items. The commissary, being supported by public tax dollars, should not stock drugs like tobacco any more than it should stock liquor.

Smoking is no longer a thing that everyone is expected to do.

Instead of encouraging smoking, it is time the Army supports the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in its fight against smoking.

Editor's Note: CW3 John Pink currently attends the Warrant Officer Senior Course, Warrant Officer Career College, Fort Rucker.

Army Reserve offers good pay and benefits

So you're getting out?

Hanging up the uniform after only two hitches because you want to settle down somewhere?

Well, it's your choice, and one that is made every year by thousands of young men and women in the Armed Forces.

But, when you think back on the time you were on active duty, the pay wasn't bad, you might have seen some of the world, and inside you probably felt good knowing that you were doing something for the country.

Don't despair then, as they say. You can still wear the uniform and get the pay and the admiration. At the same time you will be making a real contribution to the security of the United States by serving in one of the Reserve Components (Army National Guard, Army Reserve, Navy Reserve, Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, or the Coast Guard Reserve).

And, just as though you had stayed on active duty, when you meet all the requirements, you even get retirement pay.

Uncle Sam will pay you to wear that old uniform even though you are not on active duty.

That's right, put it on for a couple of days a month — usually a weekend — and for two weeks once a year and Uncle will pay you the going rate for your rank or grade.

And most of the bennies that you enjoy right now while on active duty will continue when you are on Reserve duty.

The pay's there. It will make a real addition to the Social Security you can start receiving at age 65. Only thing is that the Reserve retirement will start coming in when you reach 60.

When you are called to active duty for training, you receive not only the basic pay, but also subsistence and quarters pay and any special pay you might be entitled to.

For only three bucks a month you get Servicemen's Group Life Insurance coverage in the amount of $20,000 all the time, not just when you are on weekend or two-week duty. Find a deal like that anywhere else in the U.S.A.

And the list goes on. You will be able to use the base exchanges on a limited basis during each quarter of weekend Reserve training and on a full time basis during the 14 days of active duty for training. During the same 14-day period, you and your dependents will be able to use the commissary, clubs, and other base facilities.

Now you're probably saying, "Oh, sure, and all this is for free."

Right?

Wrong!

You have to work for it. But the work that you will be doing should be something that interests you if you liked your military job. If a Reserve unit in your hometown doesn't have an opening in your field, they may be able to send you to school to learn something new, something that will aid you not only in the Reserves but also in civilian life.

One weekend a month, added to the 14-day training period, probably won't put you in a higher income tax bracket, but it will bring in enough to buy, for instance, a television tape machine so you can record any sports events you miss while on Reserve training. Or, enough to take a good vacation.

Maybe even more important, Reserve duty will put you in touch with the men and women in the community where you plan to live. Reserve "Community Action" programs throughout the United States have brought all kinds of praise for these citizen soldiers.

And most companies, large and small, are behind the Reserve program. Some to the extent of picking up the difference between the civilian pay and the base pay of a Reservist while the individual is on active duty for training.

A quick check with a Reserve unit in the state where you plan to settle might turn up even more bennies. Ohio, for example, will pay your tuition in full at any state-assisted school and at a private school, the average state tuition will be paid.

Texas lets you pay the much lower resident tuition at a state school if you join a Reserve unit in that state.

Let your fingers do the walking through the white pages of your local telephone directory under the heading "U.S. Government" for the telephone number of the nearest Reserve unit; or you can contact the closest military recruiter who can also help you in locating a unit.

SOC degree program goes overseas

The Servicemen's Opportunity College (SOC) associate degree program, previously limited to soldiers in the U.S., will be expanded to overseas locations beginning Dec. 1, according to officials at the Adjutant General Center (TAGCEN)

Six colleges and universities have agreed to extend SOC programs overseas. They are City College of Chicago, Central Texas College, Big Bend Community College, Los Angeles City College, Florida State College and the University of Maryland.

SOC standardizes academic evaluation of military schooling, experience and training for more than 70 participating schools. The program also provides flexible credit transfer.

The program was originally designed to serve combat arms personnel but is being expanded for other service members. SOC has developed associate degree programs for soldiers in air defense missile maintenance, Field and Area Communications Maintenance, Fixed Plant Communications Maintenance, Food Service and Mechanical Engineering, a TAGCEN official said.

Advantages of SOC, officials add, are the special arrangements made to enroll qualified soldiers, a liberal credit transfer participating schools also grant credit for other learning, such as military training and credit by examination.

Soldiers interested in the SOC program can get more information at local education offices. (ARNEWS)

Civil Service Reform Bill now law

Recently President Carter signed into law the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the first major revision of the Federal Civil Service in nearly a century. The Act is designed to improve the efficiency of government while striking a proper balance between management rights and employee protection.

Upon signing the bill, the President commented, "Our nation was built on a system of rewards and incentives, and this bill puts incentives and rewards back into the Federal system. 'You get what you pay for' is part of the American folk wisdom. Civil Service Reform will help taxpayers get what they have been paying for."

Major features of the legislation include a system for tying pay and promotions to performance, rather than length of service; new protections against reprisals for employees who blow the whistle on waste or wrongdoing by their bosses; streamlining procedures for hiring and firing employees; and an elite corps of senior executives willing to trade job security for a chance at bonuses for superior performance.

Combined with the Civil Service Reorganization Plan passed earlier this year, the new law will produce the most sweeping changes in Federal Civil Service since the passage of the Pendleton Act in 1883. That Act created the Civil Service Commission, and replaced the spoils system with the merit system. Under the spoils system, civil servants were hired, fired, and promoted based largely on their friendship with elected officials. Under the merit system, ability became the basis for hirings and promoting, and employees were given protection against being fired or demoted for political reasons.

Over the years, however, the number of regulations and mandatory procedures grew, making government service less effective.

Government managers did not have the necessary flexibility to pline poor ones. As more people became disenchanted with the quality of government services, the pressure for Civil Service reform increased.

Since 1937 there have been some 20 different studies, task forces, or commissions looking into the problems of the Civil Service, and all came to the same conclusion — reform was badly needed. Even so, it took a prolonged, concentrated effort by the Administration, as well as strong bipartisan support, to get the law passed.

With its passage, emphasis now shifts to putting the changes into effect. It will take several years before all parts of the reform can be worked into the system, so it may be a long while before we can tell how much more effective the bureaucracy has become. But that, in the long run, will be what the success of Civil Service reform is judged on. (FNCS)

Drugs affect body's use of food

By Marcia L. Beasley
Registered Dietitian

Drugs may impair proper nutrition by hastening excretion of certain nutrients, hindering absorption of nutrients or interfering with the body's ability to convert nutrients into usable forms. Although nutrient depletion is gradual, if the drug is taken over a long period of time a deficiency can occur in certain vitamins and minerals especially in children, the elderly, those with poor diets, and the chronically ill.

Some of the drugs which have an effect on specific vitamins and minerals include the antihypertension drug hydralazine and the antituberculosis drug INH which can deplete the body's supply of Vitamin B6. Also, anti-convulsant drugs that are used to control epilepsy can lead to deficiencies of Vitamin D and folic acid.

Quite a few drugs — colchicine, oral anti-diabetic agents, and the antibiotic neomycin — can impair absorption of Vitamin B12. Long use of diuretics, or "water pills" can lead to serious potassium depletion. People taking diuretics regularly should eat foods which are good sources of potassium. These include tomatoes, oranges, avocado, apricots, cantaloupes, peaches, bananas, rhubarb, potatoes, sweet potatoes, winter squash, dried beans and peas, cabbage, and mustard greens.

Modifying the diet to include more foods rich in vitamins and minerals that may be depleted by certain drugs generally is preferable to taking vitamin or mineral supplements. In fact, supplements of some vitamins can counter the effectiveness of certain drugs.

Fortunately, the diets of most Americans are sufficiently well-balanced so that the threat of drug-related nutritional deficiencies can be easily overcome.

The "Pill" and nutrition

Oral contraceptives are known to lower blood levels of certain vitamins, notably folic acid and Vitamin B6. Because the requirements for several vitamins may be increased, it is especially important for any woman on the "Pill" to eat a nutritionally balanced diet. Women on the "Pill" who are living on snack foods or who are trying to make do with very little income and who have limited nutritional knowledge are more likely to develop deficiencies and have difficulties than their counterparts who are daily eating green leafy vegetables, a good source of folic acid.

Over-the-counter-drugs

The worst are antacids because they are so widely abused by the public. Chronic use can lead to phosphate depletion and even Vitamin D deficiency. Mineral oil, an old-fashioned laxative still widely used, can hinder absorption of Vitamin D and K and cause reduced levels of Vitamin A.

Package inserts in 1979

In 1979 drug manufacturers will be required to spell out the known adverse reactions with drugs and food on patient package inserts that accompany certain prescription drugs.

Consumer's role

Undesirable food-drug interactions can be prevented by:

- Reading and following the instructions on drug labels and package inserts.
- Following the doctor's orders.
- Asking how drugs might interact with favorite, frequently eaten foods and beverages.
- Make certain that the doctor knows about any unusual symptoms that follow eating particular foods.
- Eating nutritionally well-balanced diets from a wide variety of foods.

Imprisoned vets eligible for bennies

A veteran may lose his freedom in prison, but not his Veterans Administration (VA) benefits. That was the message Georgia prison and parole officials heard last week at a special meeting called by the Atlanta VA Regional Office.

"Latest figures indicate that veterans comprise up to 20 percent of Georgia's prison population," said John Butler, VA benefits counselor and training coordinator. "We want to make sure prison and parole officials, as well as imprisoned veterans, realize that being sentenced to prison doesn't end a veteran's eligibility for VA benefits. In fact, the veteran in prison may need them more than ever."

VA counselors told prisoner and parole officials from throughout Georgia that only one VA benefit, veterans pension for nonservice-connected disability, medical treatment and even home loan guarantees — is unaffected.

"A veteran receiving VA pension loses those monthly benefits the 61st day of incarceration," Butler explained. "That doesn't mean his immediate family can't then apply for a veterans pension as dependents."

Butler noted that a veteran receiving VA compensation for service-connected disability continues to receive those monthly checks while in prison. He said most prisons maintain a "book system" which credits income to a prisoner's account and allocates it to him.

Butler explained that eligibility for G.I. Bill benefits and VA medical care is also unaffected by imprisonment, but that access to educational programs and VA hospitals limits use of those benefits while in prison.

"We told parole officers that these benefits are probably most important to veterans just released from prison," said Butler. "G.I. Bill education payments and counseling can help a parolee select the training to begin a new career."

"If the veteran qualifies," Butler continued, "VA medical care can take the financial pressure of large medical bills off his shoulders during this critical low income period."

Like many of their fellow prisoners, veterans in prison are there often because of drug or alcohol problems. Butler stressed the importance of VA alcohol and drug abuse programs in helping paroled veterans deal with those problems before they send them back to prison.

The VA Regional Office has had to pull many of its field-based counselors into its Atlanta office because of staffing cutbacks. They are no longer able to regularly visit prisons around the state, but, according to Butler, the VA will continue to make sure prison rehabilitation counselors and parole officers fully understand the VA benefits programs and how they can be applied to an imprisoned veterans rehabilitation effort.

W-2s ready

Military personnel's W-2 forms will be available for pick-up Monday, in Classroom 25, Bldg. 4 at 8 a.m. Company Commanders and First Sergeants are the only ones authorized to pick-up the forms there. They should bring a current company roster with them.

Six receive awards

Six employees of the U.S. Army Infantry Board were recognized in December for outstanding job performances.

Col. James P. Leighton, president, presented the certificates to his personnel.

Receiving Outstanding Awards were Bob F. Spitzmiller, John D. Kennedy Jr. and Cornelius O. Shanahan. Michael D. Haynes was awarded a Quality Step Increase while Paul W. Lavendar and Patricia P. Goodman received both an Outstanding and Quality Step Increase Award.

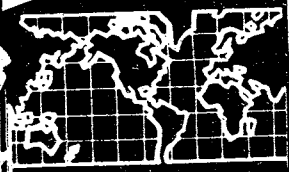

Civilian W-2 forms will be distributed to the different activities around Jan. 22 according to a spokesperson from the civilian pay section.

You too can be an easy 'writer'

By Cliff Purcell

"Bayonet, Capt. Purcell speaking, may I help you sir?"

"Yeah, this is Lt. Smith over in Company A. I want to know why there wasn't anything in this week's "Bayonet", "about our egg boiling marathon to benefit some local handicapped children? I thought you people would know about it. After all you are the Public Affairs Office," he responded.

Yes, we are the Command Information side of the Public Affairs Office — however, we don't create Command Information — we report what we find out — and much of what we find out depends on you.

It is impossible for us to call or visit every company or duty section on Fort Benning and the two outlying Ranger Camps. We can't possibly be aware of all the happenings.

In many cases, our story ideas come from a flyer in the PX, or from overhearing a conversation in the snack bar, or occasionally someone will approach us on the street or phone — like you.

This paper belongs to YOU — to the military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning. It is our job to inform you of who's doing what, when, where, why and how. THAT may mean a story on the woman who checks I.D. Cards in the PX Mall or the duty soldier policing along the sides of Custer Road.

Any type of story — features about soldiers, news articles, sports types — you name it, we'd like to hear about it. Keep in mind, the more people it affects, the more we can use it.

ANYONE can submit articles to us for publication in the post paper. You don't have to be assigned to the Public Affairs Office. If you see or hear of something going on around you, jot it down and give us a call at 545-4622/7841. One of our reporters will talk with you about it.

Remember however, we have space limitations that may prevent an article from getting in immediately. What isn't published one week may appear in a later issue.

So Lt. Smith we're only limited by your imagination and initiative. Let us know what YOU want to read about it. We'll see what we can do.

"Now, what about this egg boiling marathon?"

TSB Chaplain

As a young lad studying history I can remember transporting myself back over the decades of our country's history. I wondered what role I would have played in the Revolution, in the western expansion, in the Civil War, in World War I and so on.

Each time I could see all the things that I could have done to make a name for myself in history. Then I look around and say that opportunity has passed me by. I am so small, insignificant in this vast world. What could I do to change it?

James Russell Lowell was a great man of righteousness during the last part of the 19th century and the early part of the 20th. He fought long and hard against slavery; not just of the Negro, but slavery of any kind. One day, an eager young lad was visiting this great man reveling in the stories of his struggles against slavery. The young man exclaimed, "How I wish I could have stood at your side then!"

The aged warrior for righteousness stepped to the window, pulled aside the curtain to reveal the smoking stacks of a great industrial plant with wretched hovels housing its workers, and he asked, "What more do you want?"

Slavery was abolished in this country 100 years ago by act of Congress, but we don't have to go very far in our society to see people still enslaved by circumstances, by health, and even by others. The question still stands: What more do you want? "Though you do it unto the least of these my brethren, you do it unto me."

New pricing procedure planned

"A new pricing procedure will be used by the commissary beginning Jan. 1," announced Jose Fantauzzi, commissary officer.

The prices of all items already on the shelf will be changed along with the new shipment whenever a price change is made.

In the past, the shelf item's price was changed only if the new shipment brought about a decrease. monthly; therefore, Shipments vary from there will be constant weekly, biweekly to price changes.

Professor Safety Says

Rotate radials from front to rear on the same side of the car. Don't use a crisscross rotation pattern unless your tire dealer recommends it to correct a severe wear problem. For best performance, radials should be used on all wheel positions. But if you must mix tires of different construction, always put the radials on the rear. (Courtesy of Treasury Dept. Safety. Army medical facilities treat civilian injuries

A relative visiting you is severely burned in a kitchen accident. What do you do?

Army Regulation 40-3, permits the treatment of "Civilians in Emergency." Patients, not normally authorized care in a military medical facility, may be classified as civilian emergencies if they are determined by qualified personnel to have a disease or injury which if not treated immediately could cause loss of life, disfigurement, or impairment of faculties.

If the patient is found to have an acute, but non-emergency medical problem, he or she will be advised of their non-eligibility, and informed of where care can be obtained.

There is a standard fee for treatment of non-eligible patients in a military facility. This fee will be charged only if treatment is rendered. If the patient is denied treatment following evaluation, no fee will be charged.

Col. Villa takes over as Airborne chief

By Pat Brown

When Col. Joseph A. Villa takes over as director of the Airborne Department today, he will be realizing a long-standing ambition.

"It's a job I've wanted since I was assigned here as executive officer with the 4th Student Battalion," he stated, referring to his tour with The School Brigade from May 1965 to September 1967.

Villa, who has served as School secretary since February 1977, replaces Col. Stanley G. Bonta, who has headed up the Airborne Department since June 1977. Col. Bonta has been reassigned to Fort Myers, Va. where he will command the Capitol's prestigious 3rd Infantry, "The Old Guard."

One of the big challenges that Col. Villa faced during his two years as secretary was the reorganization of the Infantry School to enable it to continue its mission without a loss of effectiveness despite a cut in manpower.

Before his assignment as secretary, Villa was a Training Staff Officer with the Directorate of Military Personnel Management at the Department of Army in Washington, D.C. from May 1975 to February 1977. He also served as senior advisor to the Royal Thai Infantry School in Thailand from August 1972 to April 1973.

He had two tours in Vietnam, serving with the 51st ARVN Ranger Battalion and with the IV ARVN Corps in 1964, and with the U.S. 101st Airborne Division from December 1967 to November 1968.

He is a graduate of the Officers Candidate Course, the Airborne Course, Ranger Course and the Advanced Infantry Officers Course.

Other military education includes attendance at the Command and General Staff College and the Army War College.

He has a Bachelor's degree in Physical Sciences from the University of Nebraska and a Master's degree in Public Administration from Shippensburg State College, Pa.

His decorations include the Master Parachutist Badge; the Ranger Tab; the Expert Infantryman Badge; the Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters; the Combat Infantryman Badge; the Bronze Star Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster; the Meritorious Service Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster; the Soldier's Medal, and the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm.

Col. Villa, who is from Monterey, Calif., and his wife, Judy, reside on post at 303 Lumpkin Rd. with three of their children, Joe, 21, Nicole, 11 and Chris, 7. A fourth son, Steve, 19, is a student at North Georgia College.

Col. Villa's successor has not been named.

Col. Joseph A. Villa

Post gets CFC award

In a ceremony held here last week, Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning Commander, was presented a plaque by Henry Swift, chairman of the 1979 (UW) campaign in recognition of Fort Benning's successful 1979 Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). The CFC supports UW with contributions from post personnel and federal employees in Columbus and Phenix City.

The ceremony was attended by Sam Welborn, incoming president of UW, and Dennis Calhoun, who will be chairman of the UW campaign this year. Joe Medlin, UW executive director, was also present.

In accepting the plaque, Livsey cited the close connections between Fort Benning and its sister cities and gave credit to all Benning personnel for making the CFC a success.

He then presented the plaque to Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander.

Also representing the post at the meeting was Mr. John L. McCaskill, Jr., of the Community

Keep off grass

Fort Benning strives to maintain a beautiful post through post police and personal attention. A major factor affecting the appearance is the condition of the grassed/seeded areas throughout the post, both in common use and housing areas.

The driving and parking of vehicles on these areas have begun to detract from the desired appearance. According to Paragraph 11a (9), USAIC Reg 190-5, parking on lawns and grassed/seeded areas is prohibited.

"In the past, this regulation has been ignored and not enforced," stated Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander. "However, this is no longer the case, the regulation will be enforced," McKee added.

Your cooperation is necessary. Please insure that you and your dependents do not drive or park on grassed/seeded areas. Additionally, it is requested that you assist by insuring that the regulation is enforced in all areas for which you are personally responsible. All violators will be officially cited and action will be taken against repeated offenders.

Dr. Martin Luther King: 'I still have a dream'

There is one individual who has had more influence on the civil rights movement than any other, Dr. Martin Luther King.

Born Michael Luther King, Jan. 15, 1929, he was one of three children of Martin Luther King Sr., pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church, and Alberta King, a former school teacher. Dr. King did not receive the name "Martin" until he was about six years old.

Dr. King

He attended grammar and high school locally in Atlanta and then attended Morehouse College in 1944. When he began college, King had not intended to go into the ministry, even though it was his father's wish. During his studies at Morehouse, he came under the influence of Dr. Benjamin Mays, who later convinced him his life lay with the church.

After graduation from Morehouse, King attended Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa. where he graduated as the outstanding student. He completed course work for his doctorate and was awarded his degree two years later upon completion of his dissertation.

It was his faith in the Black people and firm belief in non-violent confrontation that made Dr. King one of the greatest leaders of the civil rights movement in this country.

In 1955, King returned to Alabama and became pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery. It was here that he made his first and greatest contribution to civil rights by organizing a 382-day boycott of the city's bus lines.

It was a period of personal trial for Dr. King. Arrest, violent harassment and the bombing of his home took place during his time. Because of the perseverance of Dr. King and the Black community of Montgomery, the United States Supreme Court declared the Alabama laws requiring bus segregation unconstitutional.

His next step was to call together a number of Black leaders; together they laid the ground work for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference whose aims were to help other communities fight segregation and discrimination.

The most severe test of his perseverance came in 1963 in Birmingham, Ala. Dr. King organized a mass protest for fair hiring practices, the establishment of a bi-racial committee, and the desegregation of department stores. Accounts of police brutality became the rule and not the exception and Dr. King was arrested and sent to jail again.

Later that year, Dr. King was the principal speaker at the historic March on Washington, and Time Magazine named him Man of the Year for 1963. Several months later he received the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize.

When he returned from Oslo, Norway, where he received the prize, Dr. King led a voter registration drive in Selma, Alabama, which ended with the Selma-to-Montgomery freedom march. From Selma it was on to Chicago where he became involved with slum rehabilitation and open housing programs.

It was during this time that young, fiery Black leaders began to preach violence as the only solution for the problems of the Black youth. For them, non-violent protest produced no results ... it was time to act.

Dr. King remained firm in his convictions. It was his realization of the convictions. It was his realization of the disenchantment with the civil rights movement that led him to strike another cause: the war in Vietnam. It was Dr. King's desire to form a new coalition based on equal support for the peace crusade and the civil rights movement. In this he was successful.

Speaking before the United Nations, Dr. King said, "Let us save our national honor-stop the bombing. Let us save American lives and Vietnamese lives-stop the bombing. Let us take a single instantaneous step to the peace table-stop the bombing. Let our voices ring out across the land to say that the American people are not vainglorious conquerors-stop the bombing." This appeal brought unity to the movement, forcing the black militants to release their control on the movement.

Dr. King turned his efforts again to domestic problems. He began to plan for a massive march of the poor on Washington, D.C., designed to force Congress and the political parties to recognize and deal with the problems of civil rights.

It was during this planning that Dr. King made a fateful decision. He decided to interrupt his planning and head for Memphis to lend his support to the Memphis sanitationmen's strike. He was unable to stop the violence which began with the arrival of the National Guard, and after days of unrest, calm was finally restored with the departure of the troops.

Dr. King remained in Memphis to plan a non-violent march in the city, in defiance of a federal court injunction.

On the night of April 3, 1968, King seemed to have a premonition of his own death. He told a church gathering, "Well, I don't know what will happen now ... but it really doesn't matter ..." Death came the next day on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel just off Beale St. While standing in the evening air with Jesse Jackson and Ralph Abernathy, Dr. King was felled by one shot through the neck, he was pronounced dead at 7:05 p.m. April 4, 1968.

The assassination caused waves of violence in a number of major cities, violence more explosive, ironic indeed, because Dr. Martin Luther King had been so totally dedicated to non-violence.

King memorial

A memorial service in observance of Martin Luther King's birth will be held in Marshall Auditorium Jan. 15 at 11 a.m. The Rev. J. H. Flakes Jr. is scheduled to be the guest speaker.

Rev. Flakes is pastor of the 4th Street Baptist Church of Columbus and the Good Hope Baptist Church of Phenix City. A world traveler, he has visited the Phillipines, Japan, Thailand, Hong Kong, China, Egypt and the Holy Land.

Civically minded, the reverend is currently President of the Columbus Branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and a member of the Executive Board of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the Advisory Board of Metro Columbus Urban League, the Senior Citizen Board, the Son of King Solomon Lodge No. 358 and a member of the Trustee Board of the American Baptist Theological Seminary in Nashville, Tenn.

Glad you asked

What do you think of the on and off-post transportation?

Pvt. Michael Last, 44th Abn, 4th Stu Bn

Buses need to run round the base and 1st Inf Tng Bde areas more than once every hour while the students are on pass. Transportation is much more available on Main Post. It would also be nice if there were more buses running to Peachtree Mall. On Sundays, Metra doesn't go there at all.

Pfc Sidney Gassett, Co A, 2nd Bn 2/10th FA

Not much, because sometimes, it's an hour between buses. It's even more difficult to catch a bus from Kelley Hill to Columbus. When I arrived here, I thought it would be similar to Fort Sill — where it only costs $1 to take a privately owned taxi all over post. At Benning, we're charged the same rate (depending on the mileage) anywhere on or off post. The average is $4.50 to go off post in a taxi!

Linda Butler, dependent, 22-A Battle Park

I think the transportation is good because I can catch a shuttle bus and go wherever I need to go and the prices are right. It's especially good for my family because we don't have a car.

Spec.4 Owen Mueller, Co C, 2nd Bn, 5th Special Forces

It's okay, but in certain areas (like Ranger school), the transportation could be improved. Perhaps the liaison officers could coordinate the bus schedules with the training units' pass schedules. It would help the soldier a lot because he doesn't want to waste his precious free hours waiting for a bus!

Letters to the Editor

Beret symbolizes spirit

In response to General Rogers' final decision to ban the airborne maroon beret, and as a member of the 1st Bn, 504th Inf of the 82nd Abn Div, I would like to distinguish between fact and myth.

I have read General Rogers indicated his main reason for the banning of the beret was its cost. I have yet to hear a soldier in my unit express discontent about purchasing a beret. If there were a trooper who claimed he could not afford a beret I am sure other troopers would have offered to buy one for him. I know that soldiers assigned to Special Forces and Ranger units buy berets because I have seen them in the same clothing sales stores buying the berets.

I agree that a line had to be drawn somewhere because the unauthorized items situation was getting out of hand, but by placing the green and black berets on one side and placing the maroon beret on the other side by not considering them for DA approval one thing is evident: someone does not feel the paratrooper is worthy of a beret.

The 82nd Abn Div's mission is to be ready to deploy anywhere in the world within 18 hours. To maintain this state of readiness the division works hard and sacrifices are made.

We work harder here, we soldiers, and we jump out of aircraft while in flight, which is a risk of life. We volunteered to be here be-

Federal workers overpaid

"The President is convinced that federal employees are overpaid and has ordered plans for an overhaul of the pay system."

This quote from an unidentified White House functionary appeared in newspapers all over the country recently. The speaker went on to say that, in the President's opinion, many federal workers are paid more than their civilian sector occupational counterparts, particularly in the "blue collar" part of the work force. There was no explanation by the White House of how the situation got that way nor was there a description of the sources of information that brought the President to this conclusion. There were no words of comfort for any of the federal civil servants who immediately leaped to the conclusion that they face a pay cut while inflation continues to spiral upward and while three of the Nation's largest civilian unions are proclaiming their intention to ignore the President's voluntary guidelines on limiting pay increases.

The whole process reminds one of the courtroom parody in which the judge opens a trial with the command, "Bring the guilty man in!" One cannot help but wonder why, before leaping to the conclusion that the federal civilian employees are overpaid, the President did not convoke a panel of experts to examine the issue, much as he did for military benefits when he organized the President's Commission on Military Compensation. There is more to this issue that can be dealt with in a summary decision.

To be sure there are some aspects of federal pay that probably need a hard look. General Schedule pay is set by Congress on a national basis and there may be areas in the country where private sector civilian pay is depressed and the federal employees are being paid at rates exceeding that of their local occupational counterparts, contradicting the concept of "comparability." This is unquestionably true in many blue collar occupations but the system devised for setting blue collar federal pay is the product of Congressional action and that body has been reluctant to make any adjustments.

The civil servant is an easy target, in many ways even easier than the military careerist. He has been stereotyped by generations of editorial writers and cartoonists as an individual, whose sole purpose is to delay, confound and obfuscate. And yet it is frightening to think of what would happen to governmental functions if the real majority of hardworking, dedicated civil service people turned in their stamp pads and typewriters and went home. They deserve much better than this kind of cavalier treatment from the President of the United States.

AUSA Defense Report

Bad checks costly to soldier's career

More than $4.2 million in dishonored checks were made out in Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stores in the first six months of 1978, according to an Exchange official.

The AAFES official said that "at least" $4.2 million worth of bad checks were received worldwide during the period but that exact figures were not available.

Much of the dishonored check writing is blamed on "kiting" or "floating" of checks. This is a practice of writing checks without sufficient funds and hoping to make checking account deposits before the checks are processed.

Floating checks is risky because modern electronic check processing avoids the time-consuming methods used in the past, said the AAFES official.

Floating can also be costly, she declared, since AAFES levies a $10 processing fee for returned checks and bad check writers are 119,467 of more than 127,000 checks were recovered by the Exchange, the spokeswoman explained.

The $4 million plus in bad checks wasn't a total loss for AAFES. About $3.9 million, or 119,467 of more than 127,000 checks was recovered by the Exchange, the spokesman said.

Total 1978 figures on bad check writing in exchanges will be available in February. (ARNEWS)

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Getting it together

This past week, members of the 586th Engr Co, 36th Engr Gp demonstrated how easily and quickly the new assault ribbon bridge could be assembled. The new bridge required only nineteen sections to cross the Chattahoochee River as compared to thirty six for the old bridge. In addition the new bridge takes only three hours to assemble as compared to ten or twelve for the old one. The new innovation in bridge construction is a big plus for the 586th and allows more training in other areas.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

James Murphy

Sergeant James Murphy is a team leader in an infantry unit. "The satisfactions? Training a new troop and seeing him proficient at his job. When you see a guy who really wants to learn, it's satisfying. I really enjoy working with other people. Sure, we're needed. The way I see it, if I didn't do my job, it wouldn't get done. In the Army, if you do your job, and do your best, you'll get promoted. It took me 3 years to make E-5. I think that's pretty dog-gone good."

The Army needs people like James Murphy. People who enjoy what they do. If that's you, why not see your career counselor today? You may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

West Point Prep School applications being sought

Applications from soldiers who desire to enter the West Point Prep School are being accepted through April, according to DA officials.

This year's course, Class 79/80 of the U.S. Military Academy Preparatory School (USMAPS) and located at Fort Monmouth, N.J., runs from August 1979 through June 1980, officials said.

The course is designed to qualify graduates for admission to West Point.

Most course graduates receive nominations that allow them to enter West Point, a school official said. However, these nominations are limited to 85 active duty and 85 reserve component members. Each USMAPS class of 300 students' graduates about 200.

Basic qualifications for the course are that applicants be single, not older than 21 on July 1, have no criminal record and have a High School education with emphasis on college preparatory work.

Application procedures are the same for active and reserve personnel and are outlined in AR 351-12.

For more information, call the USMAPS Admission Office at AV 992-1807 or commercial (201) 532-1807 or write: Commandant USMAPS, Fort Monmouth, N.J. 07703. (ARNEWS)

Flu booster shots to be given here

Flu booster shots will be available for post civilian personnel and military dependents, ages 13-25, at the Martin Army Hospital Immunization Clinic on Jan. 16 and 19 from 8-11 a.m. and from 12:30 to 4 p.m., and on Jan. 17 from 8-11 a.m.

The booster shot is follow-up to the initial shot against Russian type flu given to civilians and dependents in December 1978.

Both civilians and dependents should have a valid identification card. In additions, dependents should bring their shot record, and if under 18 years old and unaccompanied by a parent and or legal guardian, should also bring a current power of attorney. Power of attorney forms can be obtained from the Patient's Administration Division, Martin Army Hospital.

Fort Benning Runner of the Week

Patrick Riccinto

Three years after a heart attack, Maj. Patrick Riccinto is running five miles every other day and ten on the weekend.

"I changed my whole life style. I've lost forty pounds, quit smoking and started an exercise program," he commented.

"I'm really thankful to be able to run as much as I do. Being physically fit has given a great psychological lift to my self-confidence. After you get out of the hospital and you feel chest pains, you wonder if it's going to happen all over again," he replied. "I have more faith in myself knowing I can safely push myself."

Riccinto began getting back into shape October, 1977 by walking, and worked his way up gradually.

"When I began, I couldn't even run to the end of the block. I wasn't going to give up. One figure that after a heart attack, you must be resigned to doing nothing the rest of your life, but not me. If you give up physically, you may just as well be dead," he explained. "I'm not a doctor, but I really feel that running has brought my blood pressure down. I am no longer taking medication and am more able to handle daily stress. Running gives me a chance to clear my mind and I always feel good after a run," he added.

He remembered hating to run before, because it hurt so much. Now he talks about being irritated if he can't run for some reason; it doesn't matter what the weather conditions are — Riccinto hits the track.

"I feel people would be surprised at how much they can actually gain with a regular exercise program. I had never run ten miles in my life until a couple of months ago," he said excitedly.

Asking Riccinto if he had any pointers for getting into shape, he replied, "Especially in cases like mine, the first thing is to see the doctor for a check-up. If you can only run a mile or a half-mile, don't give up. You have to get out there every day and stick with it. Don't just jump out there, hurt a little bit and quit."

Frostbite : Prevention is easier than the cure

PREVENT Frostbite DRESS FOR HIKING

Remember the old Yukon flicks where the snow-bound hero cured his frostbite by rubbing snow on it?

Rubbing snow on frostbitten parts of the body is strictly a Hollywood cure. In reality such a practice would only do more damage.

Frostbite is more than a dramatic effect invented for old movies. It's the freezing of a part of the body by exposure to extremely low temperatures, and it's a constant threat during winter operations such as the Fort Drum exercise.

The most vulnerable parts of the body are the face, fingers and toes.

The first sign of frostbite is usually an uncomfortable sensation of coldness followed by numbness. There may be a tingling, stinging or aching feeling — even a cramping pain. The skin of the affected area turns red at first, and later becomes pale grey or waxy white.

Frostbite attacks in two general phases: superficial and deep. The treatment depends on the phase.

It's hard to tell the difference between superficial and deep frostbite. However, the best way is to know how long the affected area has been numb. If it is a very short time, the frostbite is superficial; otherwise, it must be assumed that deep frostbite has set in.

Treatment of superficial frostbite in the field is very basic. If the cheeks are frostbitten, cover the affected areas with warm hands until pain returns. Frostbitten fingers should be placed uncovered under one's armpits, next to the skin. Place bared, frostbitten feet against the belly of a companion, under the clothing.

DON'T rewarm any frostbitten areas by rubbing, exposure to open fires, cold water soaks, or rubbing with snow!

If the frostbite is deep, get the injured person to a hospital or aid station as soon as possible. Protect the frozen area from additional injury but don't try to thaw it out, it could cause infection, greater damage and gangrene.

It's easier to prevent frostbite than to cure it. Wear properly fitting clothing that doesn't interfere with blood circulation. Periodically exercise your face, fingers and toes to keep them warm. Use the buddy system; pair off and watch each other for signs of frostbite. Give mutual aid if frostbite occurs.

Remember, it's your face, your fingers, your toes. Don't let cold weather injury take them from you. (FORSCOM)

Eight holidays upcoming

Military personnel and federal employees can look forward to eight legal holidays this year, and five of them fall on a Monday, making for a long weekend. They are:

Washington's Birthday, Feb. 19; Memorial Day, May 28; Labor Day, Sept. 3; Columbus Day, Oct. 8; and Veteran's Day, which will be observed on Nov. 12, although it falls on Nov. 11.

The other three legal holidays are Independence Day, Wednesday, July 4; Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 22; and Christmas Day, Tuesday, Dec. 25.

478th no 'stick in the mud'

By Larry Weese

The 478th Trans. Co. (Heavylift Helicopter), 34th Med. Bn., recently was called upon to rescue a 2 1/2-ton truck belonging to the 2nd Combat Support Hospital (CSH) that had been stuck up to its undercarriage in the middle of Malone Range 17.

The truck had been dispatched to Malone 17 with a detail of personnel from the 34th Med when the driver inadvertently backed up into the marshy spot.

The truck remained stuck after two days of fruitless attempts to winch it out of the hole with a wrecker.

Finally, it was decided to bring in a CH-54 Skycrane in an attempt to pull the truck straight up out of the mud.

After coordination with 34th Med. Bn. Headquarters, the 478th, alerted to the situation, dispatched a Skycrane that was already airborne on a training flight.

CWO4 Walton Melson and CWO3 Paul Wilson, both pilots, arrived at Malone 17 shortly after receiving the mission over the radio, and surveyed the situation carefully.

They then circled nearby while the ground crew from the 187th Pathfinders rigged the truck to be airlifted. This also allowed the pilots to use up some of the fuel on board the Skycrane and give the helicopter a much greater lifting capability.

When conditions were right and the truck had been properly prepared for sling loading, Melson and Wilson brought the Skycrane to a hover about 100 feet above the stranded truck. The ground crew hooked up the slings and scurried for cover a safe distance away. The tremendous rotor downwash created a hurricane of sand, sticks and other debris.

The Skycrane pulled and tugged, and for a few minutes it appeared to the wind-blown ground crew that the helicopter was also going to fail to free the captive truck. Then, with one furious blast of power, the mud gave in and loosened its grip. The truck literally jumped about 15 feet straight up. After the truck was lifted safely above the surrounding trees, it was then gently lowered to a clear, dry spot about 200 feet from where it had been trapped.

Death of a salesperson

By Betty Zimmerman

If everyone abides by the army regulations (ARs), door-to-door salespersons would starve to death on Fort Benning.

AR 210-7 prohibits door-to-door solicitation on military installations. In fact, this regulation strictly controls all types of commercial sales — goods, services, commodities, bonds, insurance, stocks, funds, correspondence courses or other commercial educational courses. This includes the sale of cosmetics, plastic ware and cookware and covers the entire post including family quarters, barracks and offices.

People approached by such persons should contact the Personnel Actions Branch, AG Div, room 133, building 83, 545-3881.

The approved method of selling on post requires all sales to be by appointment only. The salesperson must have a permit issued by AG; but he may not contact you during your duty hours.

"No-no's" for the salesperson are: they may not approach or sell to trainees. If military themselves, they may not sell to anyone junior to them in rank. Nor can they obtain rosters of post personnel for their use. They cannot distribute literature publicizing their service or product except to the individual they are dealing with. In addition, they may not announce their presence through the Benning Bulletin or any other post publication.

Capt. Zachary Doppel, AG Div, encourages everyone to keep in mind that even though a salesperson may have a post permit complete with an identification card, this does not mean his product is endorsed by Fort Benning or the Army. You should still use discretion and have contracts checked out by the legal section before making a purchase.

In regards to purchasing insurance he suggests, "know what you are buying before signing your name. Every military unit is supposed to have an officer detailed to assist you in understanding the technicalities of policies and other long term contracts, see them first."

No person has the authority to enter an installation and transmit commercial business as a matter of right. It is a privilege and one that will be revoked if it is abused.

There are two companies presently banned from Fort Benning — they are the National Education Society of America and the National Benjamin Franklin Life Insurance Corporation.

Mr. Fort Benning Contest scheduled

The Fort Benning Recreation Services will sponsor the first 1st Annual Mr. Fort Benning Physique Contest at Marshall Auditorium in Bldg. 4. The competition will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 10.

Competition will be in three divisions: Teenage (18 and under), Junior-Novice and Open. Awards will be presented to the top three finishers in each division.

The contest is open to all active and retired military personnel and their families. Entry forms may be picked up at all gymnasiums and at the Sports Office in Bldg. 394.

Activities Association, who was post campaign project officer.

During its campaign last year Fort Benning exceeded its $300,000 goal by 40 percent, collecting $420,300

Overall CFC contributions, including those in Columbus and Phenix City, totaled $433,000.

CFC funds are divided between the local United Way, the National Health Agencies and the International Services Agencies.

Fort Benning has been allocated $100,000 of the funds collected for its own post community projects.

Two year enlistment option now available

A two-year enlistment option that includes a $2,000 education fund "bonus" began Jan. 1. DA officials say the option will be limited to combat related MOS, with most recruits being stationed in Europe and limited to about 1,000 new recruits monthly.

Although limited to 32 combat related MOS, officials said, 15 of these specialties are open to women, who are also expected to make up an estimated 1,000 of the 12,000 recruits who will receive the two-year option this year.

To qualify for the two-year option, officials explained, recruits may not have prior military service, must be high school graduates, must score in the upper mental category on enlistment exams, must accept an MOS and station chosen by the Army, must serve four years in the IRR after release from active duty (unless they reenlist) and must participate in Veterans Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) at least 12 consecutive months to receive the $2,000 bonus.

The bonus offer, officials declared, will increase the maximum Education Benefits under VEAP, after two years of contributions, from $5,400 to $7,400 for two-year recruits.

VEAP allows soldiers to contribute from $50 to $75 monthly for a minimum of 12 months. Soldiers' contributions are boosted by the Veterans Administration adding $2 for each dollar a soldier contributes. Soldiers have 10 years after separation to use the fund to pay for education costs or collect any unused portion of their personal donations.

About 43,000 soldiers are currently enrolled in VEAP, officials said.

The two-year option is being tested through 1979, officials said, and will not be offered in some areas so that its success can be measured before the Army decides to continue offering the option past this year.

More than 10,000 of the 12,000 recruits who will be given the two-year option will be stationed in Europe, according to officials.

The remaining recruits not assigned to Europe will be stationed in the U.S. with some "possibly" sent to other overseas locations, according to officials.

Since training of recruits consumes about four to six months initial service, on the average, most recruits are expected to serve in units for 18-20 months before their enlistments expire, officials observed.

Strict education and mental aptitude requirements are included as conditions, officials pointed out, not because the jobs necessarily require high intelligence, but because recruits should show some potential for using the education benefits and because higher mental scores and education generally reflect reduced attrition and disciplinary problems.

After serving two years of active duty, soldiers using the two-year option will be required to serve four years in the IRR. DA officials said the IRR service is "inactive" in that monthly meetings and similar "active" reserve obligations do not apply to the IRR.

Eight recruiting districts, scattered throughout the U.S., will not provide the two-year option while another 29 districts will make it available. (ARNEWS)

1st sergeant program expanded

The Field Artillery First Sergeant Program has recently been expanded to include Fort Carson, Colo., according to MILPERCEN officials.

Under the program, officials explained, non-combat arms E-8s serving in overage MOS may be given an opportunity to be assigned as first sergeant of either a headquarters or service battery of a field artillery battalion.

Those selected are stabilized for 24 months and at the end of that time, returned to their PMOS career branch for control and management, officials said.

The program serves two purposes. It gives NCOs a chance to serve as first sergeants in a combat arms unit which enhances their chances for selection to the Sergeants Major Academy or promotion to E-9. It also helps the field artillery fill critical E-8 shortages.

Criteria for acceptance are:

- Must be in grade E-8. E-7 (promotable) may apply, but acceptance and assignments will not be issued before the projected promotion month.

- Must have scored 100 or higher on the latest MOS evaluation test. MOS text scores are used since E-8s will not take SQTS until late 1979 or early 1980.

- Cannot have a profile that would prohibit duty with combat arms, including obesity.

- Must be branch releasable.

- Request must be accompanied by a recommendation for first sergeant duty by the individual, command sergeant major.

The Field Artillery Branch is currently looking for 25 to 30 NCOs to fill positions at participating installations, officials said. Along with Fort Carson, these include: Forts Still, Riley, Hood, Polk, Stewart, Ord and Lewis. Volunteers are given post-of-choice for as long as vacancies exist.

Applications should be submitted through command channels to: USA MILPERCEN. Attn: DAPC-EPKA, 2461 Eisenhower Ave.; Alexandria, Va. 22331.

Currently 44 combat support and combat service support E-8s are serving in the field artillery as first sergeants under this program, officials added. (ARNEWS)

The Fort Benning Dramatizers will begin their 10th anniversary season with a production of Neil Simon's "The Good Doctor" on Jan. 12, 18, 19 and 20.

The play, a series of comic sketches based on the short stories by Anton Chekov, will be presented at the Benning Playhouse located on the corner of Anderson St. and Wold Ave.

The doors will open at 7:30 p.m. and the performances will begin at 8 each night. Admission is free, but everyone is encouraged to make reservations early by calling the Benning Playhouse at 545-7696 after 1 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Professor Safety Says

Modern light fixtures that fit inside the ceiling or flush against it are designed for low-wattage light bulbs. They don't get enough ventilation to dissipate the heat of a brighter bulb. If you put in a high wattage bulb, the heat will bake the insulation on the wiring. Then when you open the fixture to change a bulb, the insulation may flake off and cause a short circuit or give you a shock. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

Prayer Breakfast scheduled

A National Prayer Breakfast will be held here Jan. 18 at the Supper Club from 6:45-7:15 a.m.

Attendance will be by invitation only. All major units are expected to participate.

Guest speaker will be Chaplain (Maj) William Erbach, The School Brigade, and the Officers' Candidate School choir will provide music.

Cost of the breakfast will be $2.25 for officers and enlisted personnel in the rank of E-5 and above, and $1 for E-4's and below.

Reserve pay increases

All recruits entering the Army Reserve now earn pay even before beginning their initial active duty for training. According to reserve officials, enlistees will attend local unit drills during this time, from 90 to 180 days, in a pay status.

From 1974, until the current change, many Reserve recruits did not receive any pay until they began basic training. Under the new ruling, enlistees begin earning pay immediately and are expected to attend local Reserve unit meetings while waiting for initial active duty for training. Meetings are usually held on weekends.

According to officials, the period for which recruits earn drill pay, cannot exceed 180 days for high school graduates and 90 days for non-high school graduates.

More information about training opportunities, with pay, in local Army Reserve units can be obtained by dialing a toll-free phone number, 800-431-1234 (in New York, 800-243-6370). — (ARNEWS)

Legal Briefs

So here you stand with an envelope all stamped and addressed to the local IRS office. After some hours of agonizing over all those blanks and all those figures, you convince yourself that everything's right with your just completed income tax return. You drop it into the mailbox, signed and sealed.

OH NO! A few days later, the form comes back. Your spouse forgot to sign the joint return.

How silly, you say and you're right. But it's just those kind of silly mistakes — mistakes that passed your scrutiny — which cause IRS people to start pulling their hair out. All they can do is mail it back for you to correct.

Here are some of the other common errors that filers make, according to IRS officials:

- Missing or incorrect social security account numbers.

- Missing Copy B of the W-2 Form or other schedules.

- Amounts entered on the wrong line.

- Failure to forward check for tax due.

- Information from other forms not carried forward to the face of the return (applies to the long form).

Checking all the above, as they apply to you, before dropping that envelope in the mail box, will keep you from getting that embarrassing notice right back.

Such a simple once-over would also reinforce a basic Army tenet — paying attention to detail.

NOTE: The Legal Assistance Office is available to advise service members and their dependents on federal and state tax problems, but is not equipped to prepare individual tax returns. For assistance please call for an appointment at 545-3281.

Three-year-olds Class

The Catholic Activity Center will sponsor a class for three-year-olds and their parents, starting on Monday, Jan. 15. The class will take place at the Catholic Activity Center from 10-11 a.m.

Each child admitted to the class must be accompanied by a parent.

Classes will be for the parents as well as for the children. To pre-register, please call the Catholic Activity Center at 545-2054.

Pre-Marriage Course

The Catholic Activity Center will sponsor a Pre-Marriage Course on Sunday, Jan. 14, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Catholic Activity Center instead of at the Follow Me Golf Course Country Club.

The Pre-Marriage Course is a requirement for all those who wish to be married in the Catholic Church. Please call 545-2054 to pre-register.

LES, W-2 may differ

Form statement and Leave and Earning Statement (LES) may not agree in some cases, according to officials at the Army Finance Center.

Officials said that December end-of-year LESs, for some soldiers; show different tax totals than 1978 W-2 Forms.

The tax withholding information on W-2 Forms, used to file Federal Income Taxes, is correct, officials stressed, even if it does not agree with a December LES.

The W-2 Forms were completed after December LESs were issued and, in some cases, contain updated information that was not available when LESs were completed, officials explained.

Questions on W-2 statements or LES information should be referred to Finance Bldg. 89. (ARNEWS)

Racquetball

Part V: Strategy

By Dave Lawrence and Seth Hamilton

The last article in our series will deal with strategy. You must realize that strategy encompasses all phases of the game. In fact, our previous articles were also concerned with strategy.

A most important aspect of the game is concentration. You must maintain your concentration at all times - do not become complacent. Many players can remember games where they led by ten or more points, only to go on and lose in the stretch. You can call it lack of concentration, brain-cramp or whatever, but it is the failure of the individual to maintain the intensity (physical and mental) throughout a 21 point game. One can not "just go through the motions" in racquetball and expect to win. The game is a test of the individual's mental and physical strength.

Shots that were not covered in the previous articles that are used in the rally phase of the game are as follows:

The Ceiling Shot

This shot can be a most potent offensive or defensive weapon. If driven into the ceiling and front wall with expertise and control, it can create havoc in the back wall and rear corners.

This shot should be hit at different speeds and angles to produce desired results. This is an excellent shot to use in order to cause a change of center court position with your opponent.

The Cut-Off Shot

This is used when your opponent is out of position. You are literally hitting the ball in the air before it has a chance to return to the back wall. The shot is usually a poor percentage shot due to the speed and angle of the ball off the front wall. Go for a low corner shot, but again, your opponent should either be out of position or daydreaming for the shot to be successful.

Round The Wall Shot

This shot is great for causing confusion. It is hit into the side wall angling towards the front wall. It is designed to hit every wall and create a confusing atmosphere as to where the ball will end up. The shot cannot be used against a player who is patient enough to wait for the ball to eventually return to center court where he can go for the kill shot.

Over-head Kill

This is a very poor percentage shot, but because it is hit like a ceiling shot, it can get excellent results if hit into the front corners about one and a half feet high using the side-wall-front wall pinch. If missed, you have set your opponent up for an excellent kill shot attempt close to the front wall.

Over-head Pass Shot

This is actually an overhead drive shot that hits the front wall about three feet above the floor and angles back to the rear corners. It will normally bounce twice before reaching the rear corner. It is a difficult shot to set-up on due to the velocity and angle of the ball. Your top B division and A division players are normally the only ones who use this shot.

Another thing you must do to maintain your game at peak level is to stay in shape, either by weight training or running. You must be mentally alert and hustle after every ball. It is amazing how a hustling opponent can demoralize you by getting to everything you hit. It has and will continue to win many a game. This "going after everything" cannot be underestimated. It is a primary and critical ingredient in the game of racquetball.

Try to play YOUR style of game. If your game is not a power game, do not try to match a power player shot for shot. Break up the tempo by using your ceiling and passing shots to your best advantage. If you want a power game, you must put in the practice and drill to become a power player.

Another aid is to always think center court. Do not give up your center court position for anything. You may have to retreat to the outer edges of it (see illustration A), but MAINTAIN that center court position. Don't stand in the back of the court or on the side wall — always move to the middle of the court.

Lastly, you must be able to anticipate where your opponent is going to hit his next shot and even what type of shot it will be. You may detect this by his body movement, feet position or by just knowing what his favorite shot is. Whatever, in a game where the ball is hit at over 100 miles per hour, you will need every second you can get. Keep an eye on your opponent to see how he is setting-up, and what type of return he might try. Always try to out-think and out-anticipate your opponent. The mental part of game can not be stressed enough.

Doughboys 'ram' Fort Gordon

Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning Doughboy basketball team swept a pair of games from the Fort Gordon Rams last weekend at the Briant Wells Field House. Benning's female team, the Doughgirls, followed suit by taking two from Gordons female team, the Bullets.

One good turn . . .
Jackson (21) goes for a slam dunk

In their first meeting since Benning's victory at the Fort Rucker Invitational Tourney over a month ago, the Doughboys' defense closed the door on a potent Rams' offense which up until now had averaged over 100 points per game. Final score for this one; Doughboys 95, Rams 85.

The Doughboys led throughout the game, and at one point building up a 27 point lead at 95-68 before the Rams stormed back with 17 straight points to close the final score to within ten.

Arnold Bray led Doughboy scorers with 24 points including five colorful slam dunks. Rick Donnell (22 points), James King (15 points), Charles Jackson and Larry Varnadore (12 points apiece) rounded out the Doughboy's offensive attack.

In the second game on Sunday, the Rams gave the Doughboys a run for the money but came up on the short end with a 105-93 final score. Gordon got off to a quick lead and held on during most of the first half. With 29 seconds left in the half, the Rams led by 16 points before Rick Donnell and Larry Varnadore hit buckets to rally the Doughboys to a 51-39 score at the half.

The Doughboys kept inching closer and finally Fredrick Nelson scored with nine minutes left to play to give the Doughboys the lead 70-68. After the Rams had taken the lead back briefly at 73-72, the Doughboys went ahead to stay 74-73

. . . deserves another . . .
Donnell (10) lays this one up for two on two free throws by Charles Jackson with eight minutes to go.

Fort Gordon kept it close and the score stood 95-91 going into the final minute of play. But the Doughboys put together six straight free throws and James King added a slam dunk at the buzzer to cement the 105-93 victory.

Six Doughboy players finished in double scoring figures for the game. Charles Jackson and Arnold Bray had 22 points apiece. Other's included Larry Varnadore (16), Rick Donnell (15), James King (14) and Steve Mims (12). Fort Gordon's All-Army guard Benny Shaw hit an incredible 53 points for the Rams.

The double victory ups the Doughboy's undefeated record to 16-0. The Rams meanwhile dropped to 13-5. These teams should be the ones to look out for the TRADOC Eastern Conference Tourney this March at Fort Jackson. Next week the Doughboys travel to Dobbins AFB for two games before returning home to host Warner Robins on Jan. 19 and 20 at Briant Wells Field House. Those games will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Doughgirls, meanwhile, were doing some winning of their own as they beat the Fort Gordon Bullets twice. On Saturday, the Doughgirls jumped out to a 20-0 lead after the first seven minutes and held on to win 67-43. Earlie Rockette topped the Doughgirl scorers with 23 points

In the second game, the Doughgirls overcame an early 8-1 deficit to defeat the Bullets 47-34. The Doughgirls led 21-14 at the half and at one point had a 16 point lead before the Bullets scored ten straight. Once again Earlie Rockette led all scorers with 12 points.

Strategy

As a final note, here are four cardinal rules on how to better protect your racquetball equipment.

1) Never put your racquet in your bag with wet clothes. The moisture is absorbed by the strings and they will break.

2) Never put anything on your leather grip such as soap or alcohol or you will lose the natural resistance from the grip.

3) Never leave your racquet in the car. Hot, cold and damp weather take their toll on your weapon.

4) Finally, the same goes for the racquetball in cold weather. It will cause it to lose its pressure permanently. Take a tip from the old handball players. Sometimes old racquetballs can be rejuvenated by placing them in a sink and soaking them in hot water.

In conclusion, racquetball is a game that requires mental and physical strategy in a very competitive atmosphere. Remember what you have read and practice telling yourself, "Stay low, keep an eye on the ball, follow through, etc., etc., etc."

This article concludes the BAYONET's five part series about racquetball. We hope that it has been interesting and informative to players and non-players alike. We would appreciate any type of response relating to these articles. Anyone wishing to comment on the series or just to ask additional questions should write to:

Summer Season

To insure that all military personnel stationed at Fort Benning have an equal opportunity to use the cabins during the summer season, reservations will be limited to five-day periods and will be determined by periodic post-wide drawings.

The five-day booking periods will be announced in the Benning Bulletin by Recreation Services Division.

Applications for reservation must be submitted, in writing, so as to arrive at the Recreation Services ITT office, Bldg 9079, Kelley Hill Recreation Center, no later than the date specified in the Benning Bulletin announcement. Applicants not selected during a drawing will be placed on a waiting list for that period. The position on the waiting list will also be determined by a drawing. Priority will be given to active duty personnel stationed here.

Winter Season

During the winter season, reservations will be accepted at the ITT office no earlier than 30 days in advance of date requested for active duty personnel and three weeks in advance for retired personnel, on a first-come, first-served basis.

Reservations may be made on a daily (2-day minimum), weekly, monthly or "snow-bird" special (90-day period) basis.

Personnel reserving cabins will be required to pay fee, in advance, for entire period of reservation. The only exception to this policy is payment for the "snow-bird" special basis. Payment may be paid in full or prior to the beginning of each 30-day period.

The cabins are made available, primarily, for family use. Therefore, for utilization of cabins during the winter in excess of a five-day period, the sponsor or his/her spouse must be present during all periods of occupancy. Subleasing or allowing other personnel to use the cabins in the absence of the sponsor or his/her spouse is not authorized.

New chaplain arrives here

By Seth Hamilton

Fort Benning has a new Episcopal chaplain. He is Chaplain (Capt.) Jaime Thomas assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Thomas arrived here Nov. 29 following a six-week course at the Army's Chaplain School at Staten Island, New York City. Benning is his first tour of duty.

Originally from the Dominican Republic, Thomas attended college in Puerto Rico where he earned his Bachelor's degree in business administration. From there he went on to get a Master's degree in Theology at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Caribbean. He has also studied at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. and had his clinical pastoral education at the Lutheran Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y.

After his schooling, Thomas worked with the Episcopal Church in the Dominican Republic before moving to Puerto Rico where he and his wife, Niurka, had two children.

Although Thomas was working for the church in Puerto Rico, he hoped to eventually find work in a hospital or prison. "I wanted to work with people who really needed someone to talk to. In a hospital or prison, there are a lot of guys who just need to talk."

While working in Puerto Rico, Thomas decided to join the Army. "I had overheard some Army friends talking about how there were very few Episcopal chaplains in the Army. It was then that I decided which direction I would head." After getting permission from his bishop, as well as the Armed Forces bishop, Thomas was on his way to the states.

The last Episcopal chaplain, Duncan Sinclair, left here over five months ago. Although Sinclair continued to hold Sunday services on post, there was no full-time Episcopal chaplain.

Chaplain Thomas now holds regular services 9:30 every Sunday morning at the Sightseeing Rd. Chapel. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Six Army ROTC cadets at Columbus College were commissioned as second lieutenants early in December after completing requirements for the baccalaureate degree. They are (l-r) William A. Bankhead of Columbus, who received a regular Army commission; Carol A. McKinney of Fort Benning; Clinton M. Musson of Columbus; Viv Ann Phifer of Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Ronald K. Scott and James A. Starcher, both of Columbus.

Cadets get scholarship

Two dependents are on the U. S. Army Training and Doctrine Command approved list for a one-year ROTC scholarship, according to Lt. Col. William J. Windham, professor of military science at the college.

Both Judith Hlavac, whose husband, Kenneth, is a lieutenant stationed here, and Patricia Sibley, dependent daughter of Lt. Col. Nathan Sibley, U. S. Army Infantry Board, are seniors and expect to complete requirements for baccalaureate degrees in June 1979.

They make a total of 20 Columbus College students who have received these awards — four cadets received four-year scholarships, 11 received three-year, three received two-year and two get one-year scholarships.

Hlavac, a general studies major, is scheduled for commissioning in June. Sibley, a biology major is to be commissioned in August after she completes Advanced ROTC Summer Camp.

The scholarships are retroactive to the beginning of the fall term and will pay for tuition, books, lab fees and for miscellaneous course work expenses. The $100 per month they receive will continue.

Plan for retirement now

People who are planning to retire in early 1979 should act now to make sure that social security checks start coming when their income from work stops, Tommy Morris Social Security district manager in Columbus said recently.

A person should apply for social security retirement checks two to three months before he/she wants them to begin. This way, the checks will start coming when they are needed.

It would be helpful to get the following information together before applying:

- The person's social security card, or a record of the number.

Regardless of our religious, social, or economic backgrounds all of us have been exposed in one way or another to the ideology that we should "love one another."

I grew up with it in Sunday School, others through confirmation, some even in yeshiva, others at the YMCA, and many right on the block. I found that it wasn't a Christian doctrine, but a universal one. And when I became a pastor I found I was selling this ideology to everyone, since it applied to everyone.

However, it wasn't until recently through my involvement with the Boys Scouts that I ran upon a wholly practical application to this ideology. We were a small troop of boys but very active.

On a hike one day in the country the boys found to their delight a stretch of unused and rusted railroad track. Each of the scouts

- Proof of the person's date of birth, preferably a birth certificate or church record of birth or baptism.

- Evidence of 1977 earnings, such as a W-2 Form or copy of a self-employment tax return.

- Information about 1978 expected earnings.

A person should not delay applying because he or she does not have this information. The people at the Social Security Office can suggest substitute evidence, Morris said.

For more information about social security benefits, call the Columbus Social Security Office at 324-5461, or stop by 1520 3rd Ave.

in his turn tried his skill at seeing how far along the rails he could walk. Most of them balanced precariously for a few moments, fell off and tried again.

But two boys had no such difficulty. They stood opposite each other on the rails, each extending a hand to the other. They balanced without faltering as they walked briskly along the track.

The day's lesson will long linger in my mind especially since one of the boys was a Black and the other wasn't. I realized that, as we extend a hand to another person, we ourselves shall walk more steadily along the road of life.

NCOWC Appreciation Luncheon

The NCOWC gave a luncheon at the Top 5 NCO Club on Jan. 4 for all members who worked so dilligently at the gift wrapping booth this past Christmas season. Honored guests were Mrs. William Livsey, Mrs. Vincent Roegiers, Capt. Jeanette Walker and Mrs. Katy Linder.

The gift wrapping booth is a very important fund raising project as all proceeds go into the scholarship fund. The guests praised the members for the many volunteer hours given for this worthy cause.

The NCOWC would like to thank the Post Exchange management for allowing us to have this fund raising project. Special thanks go to Mrs. Katy Linder for her help and cooperation in making this project the big success that it was.

Chairwomen for the gift wrapping booth were Mrs. Patricia Wilson, Mrs. Virginia Giles and Mrs. Lillian McCalla.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

Running Shorts

Jim Cambron placed first in the mile run at the Murphy Track Meet in Mobile, Ala. with a time of 4 minutes and 39 seconds.

Dave Cormier ran the Honolulu Marathon placing 154 in a field of 7,200 runners and finished with the time of 2 hours, 54 minutes and 20 seconds. He commented, "I really enjoyed myself. I felt it was the best run marathon I've ever seen. It was 86 degrees and heat casualties were practically nil."

Runners Should Carry IDs

Most runners carry nothing that could identify them in case of an accident. If you happen to be allergic to some medicines, it could be dangerous if you become unconscious and unable to tell anyone.

Although running is very healthy, people have been known to run you over.

Runners should carry some form of identification so family and friends can be notified.

Frostbite

With the colder weather frostbite is a threat to runners even in Georgia's climate. If you are out plugging along, and some extremity (fingers, toes, etc.) begins to feel tingly, stinging, aching or numb with cold, those are the first signs of frostbite. Prompt action should be taken to warm up these areas.

The two phases of frostbite are superficial and deep. To treat superficial frostbite, warm by covering with hands or direct heat source. If your hands are cold you can place them under armpits for warmth. Do not rub, this can cause tissue damage or infection in extreme cases. For deep frostbite, medical attention is required by a doctor and as soon as possible. Merely protect the exposed injury. Do not attempt to thaw.

At first frostbitten areas are red and then turn waxy white. In superficial cases warm the area until pain returns.

Frostbite can be easily prevented by proper clothing. Layers of light clothing are recommended by "Runners World Magazine". they also recommend wearing cotton underneath with nylon covering.

Forty percent of your body heat is lost through the top of your head. Wearing a stocking hat and mittens protects ears and fingers and also conserves body heat.

Over dressing for cold weather will not necessarily keep you warm. If you become overheated and sweat too much, your body will become chilled when the sweat breaks. Wearing a lot of clothing also reduces your stride. I found tights warm enough and less binding.

It may seem as if it is too cold to run, but once you get under way your body heat rises and running is quite comfortable.

THE BAYONET

Vol. 38, No. 18

Published in the interest of the personnel of Fort Benning

January 19, 1978

Road being closed

Beginning Monday, Jan. 22, Custer Road will be temporarily closed to traffic going east to the northbound Lindsay Creek Bypass ramp because of construction work. The eastbound lane will be closed for about three weeks.

Traffic from the Main Post side will have to turn left and use the ramp now provided for the westbound Custer Road traffic. Due to the volume of traffic departing post on this ramp each afternoon, it is recommended that users attempt to go by a different route to the bypass or, if possible, change departure time to a non-peak time.

Caution should be taken as road striping and signage will not be changed for this temporary detour.

A comedy tonight

The Fort Benning Dramatizers have begun their 10th season with a production of Neil Simon's "The Good Doctor." Tonight and tomorrow night are the play's final performances.

The play, a series of comic sketches based on the short stories by Russian author Anton Chekov, is being presented at the Benning Playhouse located on the corner of Anderson St. and Wold Ave.

The doors open at 7:30 p.m. and the performances will begin at 8 each night. Admission is free, but everyone is encouraged to make reservations early by calling the Benning Playhouse at 545-7696 after 1 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Preparing for flu

A two-hundred bed patient holding facility for active duty soldiers has been prepared in the Harmony Church area of Fort Benning. This facility will be used to alleviate any possible patient overcrowding at Martin Army Hospital during the flu season.

If the use of this facility becomes necessary, some of the services offered at the hospital may have to be temporarily suspended. This curtailment of selected services will be necessary in order to staff the Harmony Church facility with medical personnel. Further information concerning what services are involved will be provided if it becomes necessary to open the holding facility.

Daley becomes head of CMC

The fourth permanent chairman in the 32-year history of the Civilian and Military Council (CMC) of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning takes over his new duties at the January meeting of the Council.

Charles S. Daley, vice chairman of the Board of National Bank and Trust Company, automatically assumes his position with CMC as incoming chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Jake Riley, incoming president who was named CMC Chairman in October 1976 to succeed the late J.W. Woodruff Jr.

The announcement of Daley's appointment was made jointly by Riley and Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commanding general.

Daley, a graduate of the Fort Benning Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS), attained the rank of captain during service in World War II with the 82nd Airborne Division. He is a member of the Infantry OCS Hall of Fame.

Active in civic affairs, he is a past president of the Columbus Chamber and the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA).

The Council was formed on October 11, 1946, when the then commandant, Maj. Gen. J. W. (Iron Mike) O'Daniel, invited 13 Columbus and Phenix City leaders, drawn from all sectors of community life, to a luncheon at Fort Benning.

Concerned that the excellent wartime relations the military enjoyed with the adjoining communities was declining, Gen. O'Daniel asked these civic leaders to join with his staff in forming a council.

The council, as O'Daniel saw it, "would deal with all matters pertaining to the relations between Army personnel and the civilian population in the community, and exist for the purpose of settling difficulties which may arise due to either local military or civilian policies."

It would not be an executive body, he explained, but instead would act in an advisory capacity to the existing military and civilian agencies.

In practice, however, some of the council's decisions have executive power by virtue of its composition. For, from that day in 1946 when the council was born, its members have included mayors of Columbus and Phenix City; the chairmen of the Muscogee and Russell County Commissions; the presidents of the local newspapers and local radio and television stations and other community leaders.

Two original members of the group organized in 1946 still attend regularly. They are Maynard Ashworth, president-emeritus of the Personnel services evaluated

By Ben Walburn

Fort Benning has been designated by Department of the Army as a field test site for the evaluation of the personnel services provided active duty, retired and civilian personnel.

As a result, Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander, has established a Human Resources Management Team (HRMT) headed by Lt. Col. Donald W. Sawtelle Jr., former commander of the 5th Bn, TSB.

Sawtelle's team will be located in Bldg. 83, Rms 128 and 129. Its work has already begun and will involve most personnel service agencies and activities on post.

In establishing the team, Livsey said the purpose of the projects will be to assess the current personnel service delivery system and the needs of military and civilian personnel in the community in order to establish a sound management system for planning, programming, evaluating and providing services.

"Frequently our attention is diverted from our training development mission in support of the combined arms effort to resolve issues dealing with personnel service arising from a shortage of people, funds, and/or lack of proper management," Livsey said.

He added that fiscal restraints will continue "to challenge each of us to seek more efficient methods of allocating and managing our already limited resources.

"I intend to aid each agency and activity in their endeavor by examining our total personnel service system at Fort Benning. The end results should be a more unified personnel services effort across all agencies and better use of our personnel and monetary assets."

Sawtelle noted that his team's initial efforts will be at interviewing activity directors/chiefs and their staff regarding services rendered. "Concurrently, there will be a major survey effort to elicit views of consumers — active, retired, dependents of both, and department of the Army civilians regarding services received," he said.

Sawtelle added that the results will be consolidated and assessed by the HRMT and service directors/chiefs to determine where service voids exist, duplications occur, and integration appears feasible.

Company 'dramatizes' for tenth year

By Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning Dramatizers are celebrating their 10th season at Benning.

A self-governed group sponsored by the Music and Theater Branch of Recreation Services, the Dramatizers are military and civilian volunteers from the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City area. They vary in theatrical experience, but within the group, everyone works together as equals.

According to Drama Director, Ann Morgan, the uniqueness of the Dramatizers is that everyone contributes. "Everyone here gets a chance to try his or her hand at all facets of production, whether it be building and painting sets, making costumes or acting and directing." "For anyone interested in theater," she continued, "this is an excellent opportunity to get hands-on experience." Morgan noted that the volunteers work very hard, but have a lot of fun while doing it.

The Dramatizers have what they call their own "constitution." Everyone gets a chance to vote on which play is to be produced. Past performances have ranged from plays by Shakespeare to Neil Simon. Members also get a chance to select a volunteer to direct the play. Volunteer directors have worked on three plays this past year.

Currently, the Dramatizers are presenting Neil Simon's "The Good Doctor," with two more performances scheduled at the Benning Playhouse tonight and tomorrow night. The doors open at 7:30 p.m. and performances begin at 8. Admission is free.

The Dramatizers were organized in the fall of 1969 when a group of theatre-minded people got together and formed the Dramatizers Theater Club.

Three years later, Ann Morgan joined the group as a volunteer and in 1975, was appointed Drama Director. Morgan is a graduate of Ripon College in Wisconsin where she earned a degree in speech and drama.

In addition to their productions, the Dramatizers are also involved in putting on workshops for local groups who request their help. These workshops include lessons in acting, lighting, make-up and speech.

They are willing to consult with any group who may need help putting on their own plays. According to Morgan, the Dramatizers are now coordinating a series of acting workshops for inmates at a local prison. She adds that thus far, the response has been "tremendous."

So if you happen to drive by the Benning Playhouse late at night and notice the lights on, you'll know that the Fort Benning Dramatizers are once again burning the midnight oil as they prepare for their next production.

Retreat slated

A retreat to train women in techniques, skills and attitudes through sharing their faith with children will be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg 2605, Wednesday, Jan. 24 from 9 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Alice Chapin, from Rex, Georgia, will lead the retreat with the theme "How to Share Your Faith With Your Children."

Chapin was born in Batavia, New York. She has a B.S. in elementary education from Buffalo State Teachers College, and has worked as a radio and newspaper news writer in New York State and as feature writer and columnist for women.

She formerly worked as an editor at Syracuse, N.Y., and has been a free lance writer over the years with articles published in many magazines and newspapers including "Farm Journal," "Small Homes Guide," "Moody Monthly," "Guidepost" and many others. She is also author of "Let the Living Bible Help You," published in 1975 by Harper and Row.

Chapin is married to Norman B. Chapin, formerly a die-casting engineer, and is the mother of four daughters, three married. The fourth is a student at Georgia State University. Norman and Alice Chapin have been staff members in the military ministry of Campus Crusade for Christ since 1972.

Ladies are asked to bring their lunch, and lunch for their children who are in the nursery.

This retreat is being made possible through the hard work and dedicated efforts of Protestant Women of the Chapels: Frances Hart, president; Betty Owens, vice president; Pam Sutherland, secretary; and Toni Needham, treasurer.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Reenlistment

Spec. 4 Joy D. Weaver, Overseas Levy Clerk, Co. A, Hqs Cmd., reenlisted for three years on Jan 11.

Thank you!

Thank-you, a common two word phrase is all that can be used to show our appreciation for the aid that was given to Staff Sgt. John Singleton and his family.

Singleton, the supply sergeant for Co A, 7th Bn, 1st Infantry Training Brigade (1st ITB), lost his possessions in a fire on Jan. 7 at Fort Jackson. Fortunately his wife and two small children escaped harm.

To each one who so generously gave to the family in need — Thank you. It is satisfying to know that people still rally to extend a helping hand.

Signed, Grateful

Army life a family affair

By Pat Astran

When a son enters the service, the parents usually have a feeling of pride. However pride is not a big enough word to describe the feelings of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip J. Hoffman of Ellis Grove, Ill. Not one, but four of their sons have joined the Army.

Three of the sons have received their Advanced Infantry Training (AIT) here last year at the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

Specs. 4 Barry D. and Randy G. Hoffman entered the Army July 27, 1978. They completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. After graduation from the 1st ITB, Barry, 25, joined the Berlin Brigade in Europe, where he still remains. Randy, 21, received orders to Fort Carson, Colo.

Pvt. Ricky L. Hoffman, 18, following in his brothers' footsteps, entered the Army August 4, 1978 and was sent to Fort Leonard Wood for basic. After graduating here he joined his brother Randy at Fort Carson.

Spec.4 David R. Hoffman, 23, entered the service July 20, 1976. He completed both basic and AIT at Fort Leonard Wood. David is now assigned to the 2nd Div in Korea.

The Hoffmans have one son left at home. John, 14, talks of joining the Army after he graduates from high school.

Randy and his wife have twins, a boy and girl. David and his wife have a son.

Mr. Hoffman served in the Army during WWII and spent 13 months in the Phillipines. At the outbreak of the Korean War, he reenlisted and was sent to Korea in July 1950.

"We have always instilled patriotism in our children and are proud of the fact that they have joined the United States Army," the veteran stated.

Editor's note: The BAYONET will feature a People Page each week to recognize Benning personnel and their achievements. People Page will be dedicated to promotions, awards, births, reenlistments, arrivals and departures, thank-yous and special messages. If you have something you'd like to submit for the People Page, please have information typed, triple spaced and lines not to exceed 60 characters. Deadline is Friday noon, done week prior to publication date. Send to Bldg 4, Rm 602, Attn: BAYONET. Remember, this is YOUR page. If you have any ideas or information, please call 545-2131/2791. Hope to see your name or face on the next People Page.

Last Re-Ups

1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) met their re-enlistment quota for 1978 when the last career status person, MSgt. Bobby C. Mills, HQ, 6th Bn, was re-enlisted by Capt. Robert E. Copeland Jr. and first term, Spec. 4 Mary C. Grindall, (not pictured) of Co A, 7th Bn, re-upped.

Columbus Ledger-Enquirer newspapers, and Dr. Henry Shaw, former superintendent of Muscogee County Schools.

Another original member, the late T.G. Reeves, was the CMC's first chairman. He became chairman-emeritus with the appointment of Woodruff in February 1965.

From the original 13 members who met in 1946, the Council now has a membership of 76, including representatives from Marion and Chattahoochee counties. As a result of action taken at Riley's final meeting as chairman, CMC membership now includes female representatives for the first time in its 32-year history.

These distaff members are Mrs. C.A.

McClure, representing Columbus; Mrs. Joe Smith, representing Phenix City; and Captain Kathy Carlson, representing Fort Benning.

On the military side, it has included the commanding generals of The Infantry Center and any resident Army divisions, along with their senior staff officers.

Down through the years, the council has been able to mediate many differences, and as a military-civilian forum, it has served as the model for many other communities.

The Council meets regularly each third Friday of the month, carrying out important business of maintaining good relations between the military and civilian communities.

Peer group pressure is a fantastic thing. The styles of dress are not determined by their practicality but by what the rest of the gang is wearing. Our actions are controlled by a desire not to be left out and so we succumb to the pressure of the group.

There is a small town in Cape Cod that still has the old local telephone operator who runs the switchboard. Everyone knows her by name. Every morning she had what amounted to an anonymous phone call from a man who asked her the correct time. He never left his name and the conversation never lasted beyond the question and answer.

Finally, impelled by curiosity, she asked the inquirer, "Would you mind telling me why you call about this time of day and ask for the correct time?"

"Sure, I'll tell you," he said. "I want the exact time because I'm the man who blows the whistle at the factory at twelve o'clock."

"Well, that's funny, that is," she said, "because every day at the stroke of noon I set my clock by your whistle."

Multitudes of men and women take their moral and spiritual time from one another. "But mom, everyone is doing it." Sound familiar? As sure as we live there will be personal antagonisms, vested interests and warfare until we find a higher reference to live by than the standards of men.

Coverage prolonged

CHAMPUS coverage for retirees with military Service-connected injuries and illness has been extended for an additional year — through 1979 — according to CHAMPUS officials.

The CHAMPUS Regulation, 6010.8-R, currently excludes coverage for Service-connected conditions since this medical care is provided under a program administered by the Veterans Administration. However, implementation of this exclusion was delayed until Dec. 31, 1978, while Congress considered several bills which would eliminate the exclusion.

Pending congressional action, implementation of the exclusion is now delayed until Jan. 1, 1980.

Glad you asked

This week Spec. 4 Sue Davis asked male soldiers: "How do you feel women soldiers are treated and how do you rate their job performance?"

Sgt. 1st Class Clyde J. Farmer, Co A, 197th Spt. Bn (Sep)

Women are treated as women in many units. NCO's seem to try to work around them instead of assigning them jobs according to their qualifications. Rating of job performance is not standard due to the fact that she is not working in all phases of her MOS.

Sgt. Patrick M. Madden, BIOCC

Their job performances are, in most cases, superior to men; however I think that in some cases they're treated more severely by men on the job to see if they can take it. But in schools such as Airborne and OCS, I think they're given a double standard which makes it easier for them.

Sgt. 1st Class Henry L. Thomas, HHC 197th Inf Bde (Sep)

In many cases (I feel that female soldiers are given special treatment in job assignments to avoid field training. Many times they're assigned as mail clerks, typists, etc.; even though they've been school trained for other combat support-type missions. The female soldier's job performance usually is equal to or exceeds that of their male counterparts in situations where their supervisors insist that they perform the duties they're trained for — and set high, but realistic standards. The female soldier is no different from the male soldier in that if standards are not established and enforced, performance will be affected.

Pfc. Richard H. Smith, 139th MP Co

I think women MP's are very professional and very necessary. My only complaint is that there are too few women MPs at Fort Benning.

Letters to the Editor

Hunting isn't a game

With deer season drawing to a close, I wish to thank all those who participated while being mindful of the rules governing the sport, both written and unwritten.

To those inconsiderate globs disguised as hunters in their orange vests (sometimes) and orange hats (usually never), I offer some food for thought. Ensuing seasons will bring tougher regulations, smaller bag limits and less space. Before you blame either wildlife management agencies or land owners, recall the litter you left on the dove field, recall the standing timber you destroyed near your deer stand, recall the time you took your .22 rifle squirrel hunting during the doe season on the reservation; yes, recall those instances and the countless other infractions you were involved in at the expense of those who pursue the sport for much more than the sheer harvest of game.

Recollection will bring it home — BLAME YOURSELF.

TV menace to society?

By Phil Nesbitt

The "boob tube," "idiot box," "video vandal" and "evil eye" all aptly refer to television. Millions of human beings, sometimes referred to as vegetables, sit glued in front of this magical marvel ... and escape.

On the clock of human endeavor, the TV has just recently appeared, with all the impact of an atom bomb. It is not a totally negative media; it brings news and events directly into the home ... instantaneously (if the broadcasting company so desires). But there is only so much news and only so many documentaries, only so many thought provoking issues to be explored; the remainder becomes pabulum, half-hearted attempts to amuse, entertain and bolster ratings.

American society has fostered a generation of media children, children brought up with an electronic babysitter, quieted by Saturday and Sunday morning cartoons, by Saturday and Sunday afternoon cartoons and evening situation comedies. Many of these children receive a large part of their awareness of the world through television.

They have learned to laugh, applaud and cry with an audience. They have been exposed to vivid and realistic displays of violence. They have been conditioned not to think; TV does the thinking for them.

The art of reading has become all but forgotten.

Television assaults two of the human senses. In doing so it often incenses the viewer with babbling housewives scrubbing their floors, athletes spraying their underarms, and recently, mother and daughter discussing the merits of their favorite douche.

Television is money and money is power; thus, television is power, not only from the standpoint of money, but through the process of mesmerizing millions of people, from all walks of life, into forsaking person-to-person communication.

Lampoons of TV sports widows (TV widowers during soap opera time) are not humorous, they are frightening. And yet our society has done so much to accommodate the TV. The advent of TV dinners, remote control tuning, and hand-held portables all have a tremendous impact on the function of society.

Once mobile, relying on mobility to communicate, society became immobile, staying home to watch Jack Benny, Sid Caesar, Bing and Bob. We have become mobile again, only this time we take Mary Tyler Moore, Rhoda, Kojak and Charlie's Angels with us. Portable TVs!

Still, how many families rush home to catch their favorite, second favorite and third favorite programs ... for that evening?

Americans rely on Walter Cronkite or David Brinkley to give them their political philosophy. They rely on Barbara Walters and Good Morning America to supply exhilarating and dreamy insights into the lives of the high and

Few tips on reducing energy waste

By Betsy Beuke

Although the United States has only six percent of the world's population, Americans use more energy per person than any other people in the world. We use roughly one-third of all energy consumed each year.

Domestic production of petroleum from which most of the nation's energy comes cannot meet this country's needs. To meet these needs, the U.S. must import almost half of its crude oil at $45 billion a year (1977 figure).

Limiting energy use growth to two percent a year could extend the domestic supply of oil and reduce the U.S.'s reliance on imported oil.

About 26 percent of the energy used in the U.S. goes into the country's households — 70 percent for heating and cooling, 30 percent for heating water, lighting, cooking and running small appliances. Industry uses about 36 percent; commerce, including stores, offices, schools and hospitals, accounts for 11 percent; transportation takes up about 27 percent.

Energy used in homes and in transportation drains all our resources. Cutting back on personal use could reduce the nation's energy use about 30 percent and is the best way to make what resources we have last longer.

A consumer could reduce his own heating bill 10-20 percent by conserving energy in the home.

Homeowners should look into ways of conserving resources and consider some of the following:

Home Insulation

Find out if the home is sufficiently insulated to meet the needs of the climate. If it isn't, install mineral wool, glass fiber, or cellulose insulation in the attic and exposed side walls. Insulation can lower heating costs about 20 percent and increase comfort in the summer and winter.

Install storm doors and windows. They could reduce fuel costs 15 percent.

Caulk and weatherstrip doors and windows. This can be done for about $25 (an average home) and could save 10 percent on annual fuel costs.

Unoccupied rooms. Rooms not in use should be closed off and their heat and air-conditioning vents shut.

Set thermostats at 65 degrees Fahrenheit during the day; turning them down to 55 degrees Fahrenheit at night. For every degree homeowners reduce the average temperature in their homes, they can save three percent on their fuel bill.

The home heating system should be serviced and inspected for leaks at least once a year. A dirty furnace filter may create unnecessary energy waste, since the heat fan must work harder to distribute heat throughout the home. Clean or vacuum radiator surfaces frequently. Homeowners with steam or hot water heating systems and free-standing radiators can put sheets of aluminum foil on the walls behind the radiators. The foil will reflect heat back into the room.

New Stamps Honor Slain U.S. Leaders

New 15¢ stamps commemorating two assassinated American leaders who advocated social and political change in the 1960s are being issued by the U.S. Postal Service. A Black Heritage Series stamp paying tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be available at post offices on Jan. 15, 1979, the 50th anniversary of Dr. King's birth, following ceremonies at the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, Ga. First day of issue ceremonies for the stamp honoring Robert F. Kennedy will take place Jan. 12, 1979, at the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., where the former senator also served as U.S. Attorney General during the Kennedy administration.

Advance to Drum

By Mike Daigle

The first advance party, made up of 69 soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade, is scheduled to leave here Jan. 24 and 25 for Wheeler-Sack Army Air Base to prepare for the Brigade's cold weather exercise to be conducted at Fort Drum, N.Y. during the month of February.

The soldiers, from various units in the Brigade, will be responsible for making preparations for the arrival of their individual units, and will be finding billets, setting up dining facilities and drawing vehicles and other equipment.

A second increment of about 390 troops will leave Jan. 27 to complete preparations.

The first group will fly to Fort Drum in C-130 aircraft which will also be carrying snow removal and other heavy equipment.

The main body of the Brigade, including about 3,000 soldiers and commanded by Col. James Hall, will be flown to Fort Drum in commercial aircrafts on Feb. 1 and 2 to begin the month-long exercise.

The only elements of the Brigade remaining at Fort Benning will be the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; the 3rd battalion, 7th Infantry; and a housekeeping force — about 1,500 soldiers in all.

Lighting

Refrigerators may save electricity by replacing one bulb out of three with a compact fluorescent light bulb. As other lights burn out, they should be replaced with the most energy savings bulb. In areas where light is essential use one large bulb instead of several small ones. When lights are not needed, turn them off.

Repair leaky faucets as soon as possible. A minor leak could waste up to 60 gallons of hot or cold water a week. Rather than hot water, use cold water for household cleaning.

In the Kitchen

Use the oven to make complete meals when possible. Meals which can be stored or frozen for later use can also be prepared. Glass or ceramic dishes reduce the required oven temperature about 25 degrees. When using the burners on top of the range, cook food in covered sauce pans as less energy will be needed to heat the food.

Avoid using ventilating fans in kitchens and bathrooms. They allow heated air to escape.

About the refrigerator/freezer. Don't keep them too cold. For the fresh food compartment of the refrigerator the temperature should be 38 to 40 degrees; for the freezer section, 5 degrees. Frost on freezer walls will make the motor work harder, using more energy. The refrigerator/freezer should be defrosted if more than one-quarter of an inch of frost builds up on the walls.

Appliances

Use appliances such as dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers, and electric ovens in the early morning or late evening hours to ease peakload requirements.

A dishwasher uses about 14 gallons of hot water per load. When washing dishes, make sure the dishwasher is full, but not overloaded, before turning it on. When the washer completes its final rinse, it should be turned off and the door opened sufficiently to allow dishes to air dry.

Don't overload clothes washers and dryers. Wash clothes in warm or cold water, rinse in cold water. Heavily soiled clothing should be presoaked. When preparing clothes for the dryer, separate them into heavy and lightweight loads; lightweight items require less time to dry. Rather than waiting for the machine to stop, take clothing out as they dry, and dry clothes in consecutive loads.

Car owners

A person should purchase slightly less than a full tank of gas, removing the nozzle himself or asking the gas station attendant to remove the nozzle when it automatically shuts off.

A car kept tuned-up can save up to 10 percent on gasoline costs. Engine filters should be kept clean; clogged filters waste gas. Use the right octane gas and the correct grade of oil in your car; these recommendations may be found in the owner's manual.

Unnecessary weight in a car reduces its fuel economy so remove what you don't need.

These are just a few of the things homeowners, renters and car owners can do to reduce energy waste. Conserving energy will help extend U.S. supplies and lower the burden of importing energy while new technologies and resources are developed. (ARNEWS)

LaVoie is Fort Benning Runner of the Week

By Julie Casey

Say TRADOC Command Sergeant Major and long distance runner in the same breath and you will probably picture 52-year-old retired Command Sgt. Maj. John F. LaVoie.

The lean and agile man runs seven to ten miles a day and hopes to compete in the 1980 Boston Marathon. LaVoie must run a qualifying time of three hours and 30 minutes to compete in the Master's Division (50 and over age group).

LaVoie, who began running longer distances in 1977 said, "I figured it would take me two years to work up so I could finish the Marathon."

LaVoie has been running since 1944 when he joined the Army as a parachute Infantryman.

He laughed commenting, "Back then we ran five miles every day and seven miles one day a week. After retiring, I continued running because I was in the Run For Your Life Program. I have the 5,000 mile patch and I'm working toward the 10,000 mile patch. Of course, I'm also an addict. I just don't feel right if I don't get in my morning run."

LaVoie, who did not begin competing until after retirement, is a strong age group competitor in the Southern Region. Since his first race in May of 1978, he has averaged first or second in 16 races.

He added, "I probably could have run a marathon last year if I had known more about long distance training. If I would have read a little more, I would have understood more of what local runners were telling me and what was going on with my body."

"Fred Dyer, a local runner gave me the best advice saying, 'John, don't worry about running for time in your daily runs, just run further. The distance will increase your speed,'" he added, that his time has been improving greatly.

"I have also been following Joe Henderson's book, 'Jog, Run, and Race.' He has got a great three-month schedule. I feel the book is the best one for the person just getting into running."

Does he plan to run the Columbus Marathon in March? His longest race being 13.1 miles he replied, "I don't know yet. I'm pretty pleased with my progress, but I haven't gone 20 miles yet. They say you don't physically have to run 20 miles before a marathon, but running the distance gives you a great psychological advantage."

"Why do I compete and push my body? My own feelings are that you are out there competing with one person, yourself. Deep down you want to master yourself. You say to yourself, I've set this goal and I don't care how I do it. If I hurt, that is part of the game or if I upchuck, that is part of the game. I'm going to put out my best effort. It is an old case of mind over matter."

LaVoie resides here in Columbus at 4321 Yates Drive with his wife, Beatrice, who has just received her 300 mile patch in the Run For Your Life Program.

Traveling first class

It is DOD policy that personnel will use less than first class accommodations for official travel. Approval by the Secretary of Defense is necessary when first-class accommodations are required.

There have been instances where mid-level managers have directed subordinate TDY travelers to obtain first-class accommodations. A request for after-the-fact approval of first-class travel is then required and the burden of proof is placed on the individual traveler.

If disapproved, the Finance Officer is authorized to reimburse funds only for the least costly accommodation and the traveler must absorb the cost difference in accordance with paragraphs M2000 and M2001 of the Joint Travel Regulations.

Medical Department Activity

By Betty Zimmerman

The Medical Department Activity (MEDDAC) is the largest tenant unit at Fort Benning.

Being a tenant unit means that MEDDAC is here to serve the post population, but their higher headquarters is Health Services Command, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

All medical facilities at Benning, except FORCOM's 34th Med Bn and medical personnel of the 197th Inf Bde, are commanded by Col. Anton L. Hitzelberger, who also serves as Director of Health Services on the staff of the Infantry Center. His area of responsibility includes Martin Army Hospital (MAH), the Veterinary Activity and the troop medical clinics (TMCs) around post and at the Dahlonga, Ga. and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. Ranger camps.

MEDDAC's military work force is assigned to Med Co and consists of 368 enlisted and 206 officer personnel. There are also 14 student officers and 23 enlisted people.

Civilian employees number 627 with their positions ranging from custodial care to physician. In fact, MAH now employs more than 20 civilian doctors.

The MEDDAC's activities, departments and services are as varied as they are numerous. The following is a brief description of some of their functions.

General Supportive Administration

Administrative divisions and offices including routine operations such as supply, comptroller, personnel, housekeeping and food services, are under the supervision of the Executive Officer, Lt. Col. Jack Story.

The Chief of Professional Services, Col. Lawrence Fagarason, supervises all medical departments and services.

Plans, Operations and Training Division handles the medical personnel's training, prepares the mobilization plans and operates the civilian disaster and mass casualty exercises in order to be constantly ready for an actual disaster.

The Adjutant is the hub of MEDDAC's headquarters as far as paperwork goes. Personnel in these offices maintain the correspondence central files, control and distribute publications and forms, operate the mail room, run the records management program and tend to other related administrative duties.

One of MEDDAC's newest divisions is Clinical Support headed by Maj. James P. Ginn. Their 11-member staff provides management consultations to four branches of MEDDAC with primary concern centered on personnel utilization, budgeting and equipment usage. They make special studies to determine the best way to accomplish the missions. The four branches are the Ambulatory Care Support Branch (all outpatient clinics), Inpatient and Ancillary Services Support Branch (wards, pharmacies, x-ray, pathology, etc.), Troop Medical Clinics Support Branch (ten TMCs), and the Emergency Medical Services Support Branch (ambulance transportation).

Patient Administration

As the name implies, the Patient Administration Division deals directly with the patient more than the other administrative services. Personnel under Maj. John S. Hart, act as custodians of outpatient medical and inpatient clinical records. This includes receiving, reviewing, maintaining, storing and disposing of these records.

Admission and disposition of patients, the treasurer and CHAMPUS advisor fall under this division. Also included are the medical data and statistics office and the medical dictation section that types clinical records from the doctors tapes.

Veterinary Activity

Contrary to popular belief, the major concern of the Army's veterinary services is not treatment of animals. "It is public health through food inspection for wholesomeness and insurance that all food products quality meets contractual requirements," according to the head of the activity, Lt. Col. William M. Sims Jr.

Food inspectors work at the commissary, troop issue point, and storage warehouses to continuously check the condition of incoming food products. They also make sanitary inspections of local establishments that furnish food for Fort Benning.

Other aspects of veterinary service are zoonotic disease control (diseases transmitted from animals to man) and the medical care of military dogs. Immunizations are given to post pets as a method of disease control. Approximately 1,000 stray animals are impounded each year by the facility.

Food Service

The hospital's food service division, run by Lt. Col. Marcia L. Beasley, serves 370,000 meals a year with a staff of 64. Her responsibilities are not limited to feeding the inpatients and staff but also include providing nutritional care and education to the entire post.

This is done through clinics and dietary counseling, necessary for certain diseases as well as weight control. Automated machines, such as dishwasher, garbage compressor, rotating ovens, tilting steam jacketed kettles, jet cookers and microwave ovens, help speed the food preparation and cleanup processes.

Social Work

Social work services provide counseling to active duty and retired personnel and dependents in many areas. Maj. Myra Gulley, said, "Many times an unbiased third party with training in helping others and knowledge about the dynamics of human interactions and behavior can help a person in emotional distress."

She and her staff of 10 work in the areas of marriage and family counseling, wife or child abuse counseling, individual counseling, and divorce counseling. They also provide social work services to unwed mothers and troubled children.

Pharmacy

MEDDAC's pharmacy service operates on a $1.2 million annual budget, according to the chief, Maj. Richard Cook. From 1,200 to 1,500 outpatients prescriptions are filled daily with 3,000 non-prescription items dispensed daily. The inpatient population accounts for another daily issue of 96 line items, 25 controlled drugs and 130 IVs with drugs.

Fourteen registered pharmacists, 18 technicians, two typists and one secretary handle this heavy workload with the help of automated pill counters, a conveyor belt and organization.

In addition to preparing and dispensing the medicines, the pharmacy personnel must prepare, label and deliver all intravenous fluids, prepare sterile products and supply pre-pack-

The Acute Minor Illness Clinic (AMIC) is a dependents walk-in clinic where patients are screened for routine treatment or receive referral to a specialty clinic.

rovides numerous services aged medicines to the 10 TMCs and eight dental clinics.

The outpatient pharmacy is open from 8 a.m. until 11 p.m. daily and one officer is available for emergencies during the rest of the night.

The newest innovation of the pharmacy service is the Unit Dose Section now being used by the internal medicine ward. One officer and one enlisted specialist prepare individual trays for every patient on these wards with their daily dose of all medicines, including syringes, measured and packaged separately. This method has proven to reduce medication errors and it frees nurses for more bedside care. The trays are labeled and carried by a cart to the wards daily.

Department of Primary Care and Community Medicine and Department of Family Practice

DPCCM Chief, Col. Costas Kleanthous, heads these departments which includes the Acute Minor Illness Clinic (AMIC), emergency room, physical examination, the diagnostic clinic at Harmony Church and the troop medical clinics.

He is responsible for proper staffing of physicians and is continually involved in recruiting civilian doctors to fill shortages of Army doctors.

The family practice department is affiliated with Atlanta's Emory University and has 21 residents and eight staff physicians. It is a teaching clinic for family practitioners but also serves to help MEDDAC care for dependents. Plans are in the offing for clinics in each major housing area of the post.

Department of Surgery

Personnel in the Department of Surgery handle just under 300 operating cases per month. There are 25 surgeons and 16 MSC or AMSC officers in his department with Lt. Col. Michael B. Antopol in charge.

Many clinics and surgical services come under Col. Antopol. They are:

Department of Medicine

Col. Augustus A. Hall, heads the Department of Medicine which deals with internal medicine, pediatrics, dermatology, neurology and cardiology. Other specialties include oncology, the treatment of cancer; endocrinology, the treatment of diabetes and glandular problems; and gastroenterology.

The telephonic screening system at MAH's pediatric clinic is working well and has eliminated long hours in the waiting rooms. Under this system, parents call in with a description of the child's problem. More often than not, the

Some S-1, S-4 positions get 1-year freeze

Officers assigned to S-1 and S-4 jobs at battalion level, usually captains, will be stabilized in these positions for 12 months, if possible, according to a recently approved Army policy.

The 12-month stabilized assignment goal was approved by the Officer Personnel Management System (OPMS) General Officer Steering Committee.

Officials said that stabilization in these jobs will enhance battalion S-1 and S-4 operations and improve readiness in promoting continuity in these critical positions.

Officials added that "prevailing company-grade shortages in certain branches" will prevent 12-month stabilizations in some units. (ARNEWS)

ANCOES board to meet

Soldiers in grade E-6 will be selected to attend Advance Noncommissioned Officer Education System (ANCOES) courses during FY 80 by a board slated to meet early in April.

Soldiers in grade E-6, with a date of rank after March 1974 on or before April 1977, who have a BASD after October 1962 and who have not been previously selected for ANCOES, will be considered for FY 80 courses, officials say.

These soldiers should review their official records before the board meets, officials advise.

Records review procedures and other information about the ANCOES board are available through local MILPOS. (ARNEWS)

Recruiting team coming to post

The USAREC Recruiting Team is scheduled to visit Fort Benning Jan. 23-25.

Interested male and female noncommissioned officers in grades E-5 to E-6 who are interested in increasing their promotion potential to grade E-7 are invited to meet with the team in Rm 7, Bldg 4, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. during their two-day visit.

Interested married applicants are also encouraged to bring their spouses to the meeting since much of the information the team has to offer will affect both the husband and wife.

According to the Recruiting selection team, recruiting offers an opportunity for stabilization, since they state 25 percent of the recruiters have been on the job for more than five years.

Other benefits offered by recruiting duty are the opportunity to work independently, a choice of duty assignment, special duty assignment pay up to $150 a month, a dress uniform allowance, specialized sales training that rivals the best the civilian community can offer, and government-leased housing.

For these and other personal and professional benefits available to today's Army recruiter, call 1st Lt. Michael Scott, post Reenlistment Office at 545-7387/5649, or plan to visit with the Recruiting Team during their stay here.

Tips for protecting your valuables

- Mark your property with your Social Security number. Engrave it on the main body of an object. This will discourage a thief by making your property traceable.
- Record the description, make, model, serial number, etc. of your valuables. Keep this record in a safe place.
- Insure that the lock to your room works if you live in an individual room.
- Wall lockers should have at least two good hasps, properly installed.
- Use a quality lock. A few dollars spent for a good lock can save you plenty later.
- Anytime you leave your personal area, secure those locks!
- Keep your keys with you, around your neck on a keychain, when in the shower or asleep.

Dental hints

Editor's Note: Feb. 4-10 is the 31st annual National Children's Dental Health Week. As part of the observance, the BAYONET, in co-operation with the Dental Activity at Fort Benning, begins a series of six articles on facts you should know about dental health.

Aside from an improved appearance, are there health related needs for orthodontic treatment that we should consider for our son?

If your child's teeth are crowded, or overlap or fail to meet properly, they cannot function effectively. If the condition is left untreated, it may eventually lead to further deformities of the face and jaws which can cause emotional as well as physical problems for the child.

Malocclusion is the technical term used to describe various irregularities in the position of the teeth and jaws.

Every child is different and requires the utmost skill in diagnosis to determine what is best. But the patient should have an orthodontic consultation as soon as a problem is detected, as many malocclusions should be treated while the child is actively growing.

If unchecked, some orthodontic problems can result in harmful effects on the general health of the patient. Some problems that can eventually arise include speech defects, psychological disorders and often undetermined personality difficulties that can influence a person's future social or career goals.

Failure of the teeth to meet properly can interfere with chewing which could prevent a person from selecting foods essential for good nutrition. Further, improper chewing of food puts an extra burden on the stomach and adds a strain to the jaw joints and muscles.

Teeth that overlap or are crowded are much more difficult to clean. To help prevent tooth decay and periodontal disease, plaque — the sticky film of harmful bacteria that constantly forms on everyone's teeth — must be thoroughly removed from all tooth surfaces at least once a day.

By starting orthodontic treatment at an early age (10-11 years), the dentist can supervise and guide the permanent teeth into a better position that could either shorten the orthodontic treatment or even eliminate the need for it altogether.

If you feel your child may need orthodontic treatment, obtain advice from the examining dentist and he can, if necessary, refer you to an orthodontist, a dentist specializing in orthodontic treatment.

mighty; many let television make their decisions.

Perhaps the greatest paradox is that TV is an invited, yes, eagerly-awaited-for guest in millions of households across the nation. Forget the bills, forget the homework, dinner burned again, it's time for the $85,000 pyramid!

If you've ever fallen asleep in front of the tube and awakened with a start to see this big blank eye staring at you, your feeling in those first moments of semiconsciousness was probably one of disorientation and fright. Maybe the tube was trying to tell you something.

Barracudas place third in open class swim meet

By Jim Tillman

Fort Benning's post swim team, the Barracudas, joined forces with the Columbus YMCA and the University Aquatic Club of Tuscaloosa, Alabama to compete in a open class "FUN" timing meet Jan. 13. The Columbus Aquatic Club hosted the multi-event meet that was held at the Columbus College pool.

Coming in third behind the Columbus Aquatic and the University Aquatic, the Barracudas made a good showing despite having some swimmers out with the flu bug. The fun meet introduced several new 'Cudas to the world of competitive swimming and two swimmers made their debut in style. Sherise and Tondi Batizy, both competing in the 8-year-old and under group placed at least once in their individual events.

Because this meet was a fun timing meet and does not count as AAU swim times, the Barracudas used the events to prepare for the upcoming AAU swim meets in Atlanta. The Barracudas will travel to the Class C and B swim meet hosted by Atlanta's Southside YMCA on Jan. 20 and 21. The Super-cudas, class A swimmers and better, will travel to Atlanta's Forest Park on Jan. 27 where they will compete in the Georgia State-wide AAU class A swim meet.

Doughboys to play

The Fort Benning Doughboys basketball team will host Warner Robins AFB tomorrow and Sunday at the Briant Wells Field House. Both games will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Doughboys hope to extend their undefeated record, which now stands at 16-0. The Doughboys have been playing top notch basketball and everyone is invited to come out and root them on.

Physique contest

The Fort Benning Recreation Services will sponsor the first Mr. Fort Benning Physique Contest at Marshall Auditorium in Bldg. 4. The competition will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 10.

Competition will be in three divisions: Teenage (18 and under), Junior-Novice and Open. Awards will be presented to the top three finishers in each division.

The contest is open to all active and retired military personnel and their families. Entry forms may be picked up at all gymnasiums and at the Sports Office in Bldg. 394.

Pinochle marathon

The Kelly Hill Recreation Center will sponsor a seven hour pinochle marathon on Feb. 3 starting at 1 p.m. Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place teams. The marathon will take place in the Kelly Hill Recreation Center, Bldg. 9079. For further information, call 544-1721/3079.

Doubles day upcoming

The Kelly Hill Recreation Center will host a mixed doubles day at the center, Bldg. 9079 on Feb. 17. A mixed doubles 8-ball billiard tourney will start the day off at 2 p.m. At 3 p.m., ping-pong matches will begin, and at 4 p.m. a shuffleboard contest will wrap up the day's event.

Golf series to begin

For those of you who enjoyed the BAYONET'S series on racquetball, we're doing it again, only this time we're talking about golf. So all you golf nuts out there can look for the first in our series about golf to appear in the Feb. 2 issue of the BAYONET.

doctor can order prescriptions or tell the parent exactly what to do and eliminate a trip to the hospital with the sick child.

Department of Nursing

One of the largest staffs in the hospital belongs to the Department of Nursing. They have 67 military registered nurses, 56 civilian RNs, 162 military medical corpsmen and 99 civilian para-professionals under the leadership of Col. Juanita M. Atchison.

These men and women work in the wards, clinics, emergency room, operating rooms, troop medical clinics, anesthesiology and the respiratory therapy section.

Along with the bedside nursing care and patient teaching duties, the personnel are continually involved in providing educational programs. There is a great deal of emphasis on in-service training.

Department of Radiology

One of the busiest places in the hospital is radiology. More than 30,000 x-rays are exposed in a month. This means at least 7,500 patients are seen at the x-ray clinic each month.

They now have a mammogram unit (used for breast tumor x-rays) and hope to have in the near future an ultra-sound machine (used in the study of the unborn child).

Twenty-eight personnel with 19 x-ray technicians and contract civilian radiologists handle this enormous workload.

Department of Pathology

The pathology department is divided into two laboratories, the clinical lab and the anatomical lab. Maj. Martin McCann, supervises 58 personnel including three pathologists.

From 200 to 250 blood samples are drawn each day in the clinical lab and more are done on the wards. With the use of automated machines, 4,500 tests per day are made on these blood samples. This lab also handles the urinalysis, microbiology (culturing of bacteria), hematology (blood counts), specimen procurement, blood bank and donor center.

The anatomical lab handles tissue specimens, autopsies and pap smears (cytology).

Department of Psychiatry

Maj. George Hubert, is the chief of the Psychiatry Department and the Community Mental Health Activity. His personnel supervise the hospital's psychiatric ward and run a consultation service.

They are divided into three teams; one for ITB, one for 36th Engr Gp, and one for the 197th Inf Bde. Every morning the teams visit the TMCs and see the patients with mental problems. They determine if treatment is needed and arrange such. When a definite psychiatric problem is established, the soldier is usually discharged through a medical board action.

Preventive Medicine Activity

"The mission is accomplished through four branches.

The Environmental Health Section monitors water sanitation, waste disposal; insect and rodent control, radiation protection, and hospital sanitation.

The Occupational Health Service deals with civilian employees mainly but does affect military also. They are concerned with industrial hygiene and monitor noise pollution, hazardous areas, ventilation and chemical pollution. They also evaluate fitness for duty determinations.

The Community Health Nurses provide follow-up care to discharged hospital patients by making home visits. They are also involved in disease screening.

And lastly, the Epidemiology and Disease Control Section is involved with respiratory and viral diseases as well as the detection and treatment of venereal diseases.

Patient Affairs Liaison

This concludes the summary of MEDDAC with the exception of the Patient Affairs Liaison (PAL) office, which is the patient's link to the complex system and the place to straighten out any confusion or dissatisfaction.

Major David J. Odum, and Jeanne Dickerson are now in their permanent location, between the ER and AMIC clinic, to serve the patient and the staff. They have more time to explain the whys and wherefores of problems and have the contacts to help in any area of hospital care.

The office has an answering service hooked up to 544-2788 during non-duty hours, so you may even call then. A recording of your problem is made and you will receive a return call within 24 hours.

Another innovation soon to be in effect is the hotline. A telephone will be placed in the lobby by the main pharmacy. Whenever anyone picks it up they will be connected automatically with the PAL office and given the assistance or explanation they desire.

PAL is not just the complaint department, but is also responsible for recognizing hospital personnel that do more than their jobs require or are extra nice to someone. Remember it's just as important to take the time to report good comments as it is the bad ones.

ACS sponsors unique program

By Seth Hamilton

Fort Benning's Army Community Services (ACS) has a special program for mentally and physically handicapped children. The program is open to children of active duty and retired military personnel.

The program is based in Bldg. 2604 on Dixie Rd. Volunteer workers get together with the kids on weekends and participate in various activities ranging from miniature golf and bowling to local field trips. The activities are simple and designed to create a relaxed atmosphere with the kids. According to Carol Iacona, chairman of the program, "The children who come out have a really good time. I just wish more kids could make it."

One problem is that only a handful of children are enrolled in the program. Mrs. Iacona said, "We've only got about a dozen kids now, but I know there are more eligible children than that. We want very much to get more children." But she added that the children must be enrolled in a special education program at their school.

The program is currently in need of volunteers to work with the children on weekends. Anyone who wants to help out or would like more information on enrolling a child can contact the ACS at the Welcome Center, Bldg. 83, or call Carol Iacona at 682-1343 after 7 p.m.

Q — Is there any time limit on when a veteran's widow can apply for his burial allowance?

A — Application for burial allowance must be made within two years after the veteran's burial or cremation.

Q — I am a widow receiving nonservice-connected pension benefits. If I remarry, will these benefits be discontinued?

A — Yes. However, if you have children, they can continue to receive benefits. Contact your nearest VA office for applications for each child.

King honored in ceremony

Three Columbus officials and the Rev. J. H. Flakes, Jr. joined Fort Benning in honoring Martin Luther King, Jr.'s 50th birth date during a ceremony held in Marshall Auditorium Jan. 15.

Mayor Pro-tem, A.J. McClung, Mayor Harry Jackson's aide, George W. Ford and Frank Chester, Columbus councilman, were present at the memorial service.

The observance began at 11 a.m. with the invocation and welcome by Chaplain (Col.) Charles J. McDonnell, Infantry Center Chaplain. Scriptures from the Old and New Testament were read by Spec. 5 Emily S. Hurst and Pfc. Rebecca S. Harden, both of the 197th Support Battalion, respectively.

Following the readings, Rev. Flakes, pastor of the 4th Street Baptist Church in Columbus and principle speaker during the ceremony, was introduced by the Chief of Staff, Col. Addison D. Davis, III.

Musical entertainment was provided by the 4th Street Baptist Choir.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey
 Runner's Classic I
 January 27

The Downtown YMCA is sponsoring a five and ten mile race Jan. 27 at 10 a.m. in an effort to kick off the New Year.

The course starts at Cooper Creek Park and proceeds along Milgen Road which is the route of last year's Columbus Marathon. The route has rolling hills but no major inclines.

Cooper Creek Park is located off of Exit 5 past Peachtree Mall. Take a right at the stop light and then an immediate left onto Milgen Road. Cooper Creek Park is behind the Cooper Creek Police Precinct.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each age group. They will have five age divisions in the women's category and seven in the men's. Printed towels will be awarded to the top 100 finishers in both races.

Pre-registration is $3 and $4 on the day of the race. For registration forms, contact Julie Casey at 545-4622.

Callaway Gardens Marathon

Runners interested in seeing the overall statistics of the Callaway Gardens Marathon held Nov. 11, may contact Julie Casey, Public Affairs Office, Infantry hall, Room 601.

Savannah Marathon

George Gilkes and Terry Bell ran sub three-hour marathons during the Savannah Marathon Jan. 6. Gilkes and Bell ran 2 hours, 52 minutes and 50 seconds and 2 hours, 56 minutes and 50 seconds respectively.

Bell commented, "It was a nice course, flat!"

Handicap 10 Kilometer Run

Sponsored by the Dublin, Ga., 27 January Emerald City Road Runners Club, The handicap 10 Km (6.2 miles) will begin noon at Moore Station Road. For more information contact the Emerald Road Runners Club at 209 Earlwood Dr., Dublin, Ga. 31021.

Journeys in Infinity

Quarks and Quasars

Among the most exciting of all man's journeys are the voyages science is making into the infinite vastness of interstellar space and the infinite smallness of sub-atomic matter.

And between these infinities are the exciting discoveries that directly affect the quality of your life.

These fascinating voyages into the world of science are chronicled informedly and in understandable terms by two of the world's most acclaimed science writers, Walter Sullivan and John Noble Wilford of The New York Times News Service.

Their reports are being expanded and The Ledger will be bringing you more of their illuminating stories.

Join them in journeys to the frontiers of infinity . . . the dimensions of quarks and quasars . . . exclusively in The Ledger.

Drill sergeant named Benning SOQ

By Sue Davis

Sgt. Bruce G. McLeod, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, was chosen as Post Soldier of the Quarter in a ceremony held in Infantry Hall Wednesday morning.

McLeod, a drill sergeant in 1st ITB, studied for the board while participating in Operation EXODUS, the mass movement of troops home for Christmas.

"Comparatively speaking, the Soldier of the Quarter board is similar to a Promotion Board. The questions were more difficult, but I studied it," McLeod said.

Like eagles poised for a strike, sergeant majors from various units on post who made up the Board, scrutinized McLeod closely.

They examined his appearance and tested his military bearing and forms of expression. They asked numerous questions to confirm his knowledge of basic weapons, map reading, first-aid, military history, current events and other military-oriented subjects.

In the end, the studying paid off for McLeod, because he was chosen above seven other soldiers.

McLeod will receive awards that include a $25 savings bond from the National Bank of Fort Benning, a $25 cash award from the Columbus Ledger, a year's membership and a certificate from the Association of the United States Army, a certificate of merit from Post Sergeant Major Vincent Roegiers and a certificate of achievement from Fort Benning Commander William J. Livsey, a three-day pass, an engraved letter opener from the Sergeants' Major Association, an engraved watch from the AUSA, a gift from the First National Bank of Columbus, dinner for two at the Le Chateau and, says McLeod, "one of the best awards of all" — 90 duty-free days.

McLeod reflects a sense of dedication while on the job. He is courteous to his troops as well as his fellow drill sergeants. "A new cycle has just begun so I'll wait to take my three-day pass, because it would put a strain on the other drill sergeants in the platoon."

McLeod feels that drill sergeants play an important role in the Army. "The type of drill sergeant you are is an impression these men carry Whenever you think it's cold here, think about the 197th Inf Bde soldiers learning to cope with the Fort Drum, N.Y. temperatures on their winter exercise.

197th dependents won't be forgotten

By Kim Carpenter

A briefing for the 197th Inf Bde wives of those soldiers going to Fort Drum, N.Y. was held at the Kelley Hill movie theater on Jan. 15.

The presentation featured five members of the brigade administration staff, with introductory remarks by Lt. Col. William McDonald Jr., commander of the 197th Spt Bn.

"Task Force Drum," code name for the operation, is a winter, cold weather exercise designed to test the 197th Infantry Brigade's readiness and combat capabilities under arctic conditions. McDonald stressed that assistance is available to the dependents of 197th Brigade soldiers who began leaving for Fort Drum on Jan. 23 when the advance party departed.

197th soldiers monitor their dining facilities

By Kim Carpenter

During the early times of the Army, the soldier might have found himself in a dining facility faced with a choice of only boiled corned beef, cabbage and vegetable soup — if he were lucky.

Today, if he's a soldier in the 197th Inf Bde, he can choose from over 35 entrees — baked, fried, grilled, roasted or even souffled.

What brought this about? It's a new deal called the Dining Facility Monitor Program.

Each dining facility in the Brigade is "monitored" by a board of soldiers who are chosen by their units. They meet with their dining facility managers monthly and voice their opinions and suggestions concerning the quality of food the troops are eating. Presto — soldier input — progress!

Dining monitor Spec. 4 Steven Puckett, Troop A, 15th Cavalry said, "The Dining Facility Program has definitely improved the food in this unit."

In Co B, 197th Spt Bn, the troops are now offered a choice of no less than four "main line entries" (meat items) each lunch time. Sgt. 1st Class Leo J. Crowley, dining manager, learned that the diners wanted a wider variety of meat items. "Because of the monitor program, we increased the number of main line entry selections from two to four, and because they had indicated they would like music with their meals, we added that, too! We do take positive action on many of the diners' recommendations," Crowley commented.

Sgt. 1st Class Ernest Jackson of Hqs & Hqs Co, 1st Bn, 58th Inf, said that he "expanded and re-did" his short order menu because of the suggestions. Soldiers of the 1st Bn, 58th Inf also receive a nine-ounce steak cooked to their tastes on their birthday. "The changes have improved the morale of both cooks and troops alike," he stated. Sgt. John R. Williams, Company A, 1st Bn, 58th Inf agreed. "The attitudes of troops and cooks has drastically improved here."

Sgt. 1st Class Frank D. Black, 3rd Bn, 7th Inf manager now serves more breads and pastries, especially cornbread. "As a result of the program, we are now serving more special items," commented Black.

To have the program fully work though, more soldiers need to be aware of it. According to random surveys taken by the 197th Public Affairs Office, 68 percent of the soldiers said that they were not aware of the 197th's Dining Facility Monitor program. Of those who knew and used the "monitor," all reported some type of improvement had been made based on their suggestions.

So, the question is, does the program really work? The answer is a positive yes — but only when the soldiers uses it.

Early preparations, make moving easy

All service members in receipt of reassignment orders are reminded to make early arrangements for the movement of household goods and unaccompanied baggage by Fort Benning transportation officials.

Early arrangements reduce last minute problems that may occur. Keeping in mind that June, July, and August are very busy moving times, arrangements for moving should be scheduled as soon as orders are received. Make sure you do everything you can to get your family relocated during the school break.

Service members must furnish sufficient number of copies of orders at time of counseling. By telephoning the Transportation Office you will be advised of the number of copies necessary for each type shipment.

Any spouse requesting shipment must furnish a Power of Attorney or Letter Authorization from the service member along with sufficient copies of orders. Counseling appointments are available and encouraged.

For further information contact the Transportation Office at 545-4857.

Concern to air

Fort Benning Concern, a monthly news and feature TV magazine, will air tomorrow at 6 p.m. on WYEA-TV, Channel 38. This month's program features "The OCS program today and includes an interview with a recent graduate and two other officer candidates; plus an update of the 197th Infantry Brigade Fort Drum Exercise due to begin in February."

Tune in as your hosts, Specs. 4 Syl Underwood and Kirk Dorn, keep you up to date on Army happenings at Fort Benning. Your comments and suggestions are encouraged and may be submitted to: Fort Benning Concern, Public Affairs Office, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Do you dare to be different?

If you do, you'll want to be interviewed by a special nine-man team from the 1st Battalion (Rangers) 75th Infantry Regiment Hunter Army Airfield, Georgia when it visits Fort Benning on Jan. 31.

The team will be available from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. at Building 4 Classroom 4.

The history of the American Ranger is a long and colorful one and is a saga of courage, daring, and outstanding leadership. It is a story of men in black berets whose fighting skills have seldom been excelled.

The history of the 75th follows in that tradition. It was organized on Oct. 3, 1943 and was the first United States ground combat force to meet the enemy on the continent of Asia during World War II. It was during the campaign in the China-Burma-India Theater that it became known as "Merrill's Marauders" after its commander, Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill.

The unit became famous for its disruptive lines of communication and fought the Japanese to a standstill although greatly outnumbered on many occasions.

The Rangers travel fast, they travel light and they travel far, The motto of the 75th is "Rangers Lead the Way, Sir."

If you want to become a part of this elite unit, your point of contact is Spec 4 Monica Guillory or Staff Sgt. Ronald Clemons, 545-3818.

Key military occupational skills (MOS) most needed by the Ranger Battalion, but not exclusive, are 75, 76, 91 and 94. Also, there is a need for all senior NCO's.

Glad you asked

"How do you feel male soldiers are treated and how do you rate their job performance?"

Spec. 4 Barbara Carter, Co A, Hqs Cmd

Male soldiers perform as well as females, however they are not treated equally. If a female soldier does something wrong, she is smacked on the hand. If a male soldier does something wrong, he gets burned.

Capt. Mary Murphy, Preventative Medicine Activity
(MAH)

I haven't seen a difference in the way males and females have been treated. Fortunately, with regard to job performance, I see soldiers being treated as individuals.

Sgt. Iris M. Baquero, Co A, 197th
Inf Bde

I recently returned from a tour in Germany where male and female soldiers encountered many field problems. No doubt, women get preferential treatment, but if my husband (an 11L) and I (a 71L) were both stranded in time of war, he would have a better chance of self-preservation than I would. We're both soldiers and should be trained equally.

Guys sometimes get away with murder. In the places I've been during 4½ years of service, there's been an equal amount of men and women in our office. The men can take off after a few hours work, whereas the women stay till the day is done — and sometimes work overtime.

Commentary

Investigate SBP plan

The recent series on the Survivor Benefit Plan was well-written, factual and a valuable aid to retiring military personnel.

I would like to add a few comments. I am an insurance agent and a recently retired Army officer. The information that follows was developed as I was making my decision on SBP.

It has been stated that the worst part of SBP is the Social Security offset. I agree that the offset is bad, but worse is the fact that once SBP is taken, it cannot be changed or canceled. A young retiree with children under 18 (22 if in college) can forget any SBP for his wife until the children are over 18 or out of school. I've worked up some figures of my own in this score. A 40-year-old E-7 with 20 years' service retires with retired pay of $510. He selects a SBP base of $500 at a monthly cost of $27.50 with an annuity for his wife of $275 per month. By age 45, he has paid in $1650, at age 50, $3300 and at age 60, $6600. His Social Security benefit to his wife will range from $300 to $800 a month depending on the number of children under 18 or in school.

For $27.50 a month, he can buy a $35,000 life policy (assuming he is insurable) and he has the option to cancel at any time. If his situation changes, he can withdraw the cash value in his policy. At age 45, he has $880 cash value, at age 50, he has $2400 and at age 60, he has $5648. If he died at any time under the policy his wife receives $35,000 plus her Social Security benefits. If he cashed in his policy at age 60, he would receive 85 percent of his investment, while he had $35,000 in protection. No return is possible from SBP.

A 45-year-old major with 25 years' service with retired pay of $1201 elects at SBP base of $1000 at a monthly cost of $77.50 and an annuity to his wife of $550. At age 50, he has paid into SBP $4650. At age 55, $9300 and at age 65, $18,600. Again, with children at home or in school, his wife can expect Social Security benefits around $1000 a month, totally wiping out any SBP benefit.

For the same monthly cost, this retired major receives a $37,000 policy plus cash values of $2516 at age 50, $6585 at age 55 and $14,911 at age 65. If he dies, his wife receives $37,000 plus Social Security. If he cashes in his policy at age 65, he receives 81 percent of his investment.

The Army may have the highest rate of participation in SBP, but I suspect that his results from lack of understanding rather than confidence in the plan. At my retirement orientation, I was handed a copy of DA PAM 360-539 "Survivor Benefit Plan." I know that the Air Force goes into more detail to explain the pros and cons of the plan.

Although the SBP has built-in cost-of-living increases, life insurance policies pay dividends in the four- to six-percent range. Life insurance benefits are tax free; SBP is not.

The plan is a valuable benefit to some, but with current restrictions, most retirees can do better with other plans. I would recommend that all retirees investigate the facts as they apply to their own personal situation to include a discussion with their own agent. Any changes that Congress may make in the future likely will not include those already retired. Once the SBP is elected, you keep it until death. (Reprint from Army Times)

Commanders go back to school

Department of the Army has directed all combat arms Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel command designees to attend a Pre-Command Course.

This four phase course refreshes the officers' knowledge in things concerning the soldiers soon to be under their command.

The first phase is home study with materials from their individual branch school and the Combined Arms center at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Then comes two weeks at their branch school, which for many of these designees is Fort Benning's U.S. Army Infantry School. They review tactics through battalion level, training management, electronic warfare, nuclear biological and chemical trends, logistics, maintenance, and communications and weapons update.

The third phase is titled Command Development Week and is held at Fort Leavenworth. It deals with human resource development and covers legal aspects, personnel administration and organization effectiveness.

The fourth phase of this mandatory course is called battle Captains' Week and involves tactics instruction and gaming simulations. It too is at Leavenworth.

During the Fort Benning phase for Infantry officers, 24 hours of instructions are given on new maintenance trends and procedures. Instructors from Lt. Col. Sam King's Maintenance Management Division teach the designees preventive maintenance by showing them proper checks, services and inspection techniques.

The 197th Inf Bde supports this operation by furnishing the vehicles and supportive personnel. Some of the vehicles used are the light recovery vehicles, armored personnel carriers, jeeps, tanks, cargo trucks and 2½-ton trucks.

Maintenance instructor, SSgt. John Robertson (r), watches as a pre-command course student removes the air filter of a jeep following his instruction on how to pull a meaningful vehicle inspection.

Just a reminder for all you ladies who would like to "shape up", an exercising program is available at the Bryant Wells Gym on Tuesday and Thursday from 9 - 11 a.m. After 30 minutes of group exercises, you may enjoy the sauna, exercise room or the racquet ball courts. I found it to be very invigorating.

Post CI program to be aired

There's a new way you can keep up with Command Information — it's called WFBG, and now it can be seen on Post Alert Cable TV Channel 13, between 7:15 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. WFBG will present news, programs music and information designed to keep the soldier and his/her family aware of what's happening at Fort Benning and throughout the Army. You can find out each week's programming schedule by checking the BAYONET. We invite all comments and suggestions as to how we can improve our programming and any additional programs you'd like to see. For comments or information call 545-7319/2791.

Red Cross needs more workers

By Pat Astran

Did you know causes of respiratory failure include heart disease, drowning; airways blocked by food, foreign objects, or the tongue; circulatory collapse caused by shock or bleeding; electrocution; toxic gases; suffocation or external strangulation, as in hanging?

In a respiratory emergency, breathing either stops or is so reduced that the body does not get enough oxygen to support life. Would you know what to do?

Properly trained Red Cross volunteer workers are always needed. The volunteer person might work as a social worker or receptionist or help in Dependent schools.

Workers are also needed at the veterinarian clinic, the hospital and the dental clinics. A dental assistance course will be held at the end of Jan.

The length of training to become a certified instructor varies for the various classes, such as cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), first aid, mother and baby care or advanced first aid. Safety class instructors are needed all year round

Anyone with prior experience as an emergency medical technician interested in conducting instructor training, please call the Red Cross at 545-5194.

Also, if there is any group interested in classes being given or anyone who wants to become a volunteer, contact the Red Cross.

Correspondence training

Correspondence training in records management is now available to soldiers and Department of the Army (DA) civilians, according to Training Support Command officials.

The new updated course is entitled "Special Correspondence Course on Records Management." The following elements are included:

- AG-400 Overall Army Records Management Program
- AG-401 Mail Management
- AG-402 Distribution Management

- AG-403 Files Maintenance
- AG-404 The Army Functional Files System
- FI-995 Reports Management
- AG-21 DA Publications
- AG-49 Forms and Reproduction

All active military personnel and DA civilians may apply for this course by filling out DA Form 145, Dec 75, and send to: Army Correspondence Course Program (ACCP), U.S. Army Training Support Center, Newport News, VA. 23628. (ARNEWS)

Black Americans: Serving wherever U.S. milit

Black history observances will be held during the month of February throughout the country, and around the world where Americans are stationed. Army publications and special activities will highlight the heritage and history of the black soldier.

"DA Focus" looks at the black soldier in the Army today.

"Focus" talked with three black soldiers: Lieutenant General Arthur Gregg, the Army's senior black officer; Command Sergeant Major James Murray, a veteran of 26 years' service; and Private Kate Jones, a recent recruit.

The officer

Lieutenant General Arthur J. Gregg is the Director for Logistics for the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Before being assigned to the Pentagon, he served as US Army Europe's Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics.

The senior black officer in the Army today, Gregg is one of only two black Army officers to have reached the grade of lieutenant general so far.

Gregg joined the Army in 1946 for many reasons — "a general feeling of patriotism, a boyhood dream of being a soldier."

"I saw the Army as an opportunity to gain some experience and I wanted to take advantage of many of the opportunities the Army offered," he explained.

Since joining, he's found military service "very stimulating, challenging, and rewarding."

Integration

Commissioned a second lieutenant after having completed Officer Candidate School at Fort Riley, Kansas, in 1950, Gregg has witnessed many changes in the role of the black soldier during his career.

"We've progressed from a segregated Army to an Army that makes a real attempt to fully utilize the skills and talents of black soldiers. In 1950 we had the beginning of integration in the Army and it progressed even better than most people anticipated. Then in the early 1960s we saw positive steps being taken toward achieving equal opportunity. The right school assignments, senior staff duty, and command assignments really brought blacks 'on stream' to take full advantage of all of the opportunities in the Army."

"Some of these efforts" he added, "are embodied in our equal opportunity program today and are continuing."

Progress

Recent progress Gregg considers "Outstanding! When we look at the Army today statistically, 29 percent of the enlisted members, 21 percent of the top NCOs, and 6.6 percent of the officers are black. In the officer training programs, 21.8 percent of those in ROTC and 5.1 percent of those at West Point are black. Today there are 16 black generals in the active forces. Black sergeants major and other senior NCOs are in evidence in most of our commands. The numbers of blacks selected for key command positions, staff positions, and school attendance have also increased."

On the negative side, however, Gregg notes, "The percentage of black officers entering on active duty is far less than the percentage in various officer training programs."

"What percentage of the ROTC graduates are coming on active duty?" This is a question Gregg feels needs some attention. "Statistically for the last five years the number of blacks in the ROTC program has been between 17 and 22 percent. This obviously should reflect on the number of blacks in the officer corps, and it does reflect but not in the degree that one would reasonably anticipate."

The number of black officers compared to the increasing number of black soldiers won't present a future problem, according to Gregg. Soldiers respond to a good leader regardless of race, he said. The presence of black officers is "one indicator of the effectiveness of the Army's equal opportunity program," he added.

The chances of blacks reaching top-Army positions are "very good" Gregg believes. "We have some very talented officers who have the experience and background necessary for senior positions. I'm optimistic that many of them will make it."

Coping

In many cases, black soldiers entering the Army have problems of coping with military life. "Many of our black soldiers come from an environment where education opportunities are limited, and they have lived in a society that is less integrated than the military. Their life style and speech habits are often different from those found in the military," Gregg said.

These soldiers "go through some changes in order to become full and participating members of the team in today's Army. In some cases they must catch up on educational requirements and sometimes even change their normal speech patterns. Some of these changes are challenging for the black soldier. They are also made more difficult by real and perceived biases. On the positive side, though, the fact that they have succeeded in adjusting is a tremendous credit to themselves, the Army and the nation."

The NCO

Command Sergeant Major James A. Murray is the command sergeant major of the Military District of Washington. He joined the Army in 1953 "not necessarily planning to pursue it as a career but to financially better" himself to return to college.

"I was in college but my father couldn't afford to send my sister and me to college at the same time so I decided to join the service," he said.

The first in his family to be exposed to Army life, he commented, "I didn't have the faintest

My presence is needed idea what I was getting into. My father had always drilled into us, though, that whatever we did we made certain we did it the best we possibly could."

According to Murray, his home state of Alabama was still segregated at that time and he had had little exposure to integration.

"The Army was integrated and I found working as a team with people from all over you've got to forget the color barrier. This was fascinating to me."

Murray feels "If a person volunteers for something, he either knows what he's getting into or since he's volunteered he should accept what's there." He had no difficulty adjusting to Army life and thinks "It's a question of whether or not a person wants to." At the end of his first three-year enlistment, Murray found the Army to be "a good life" and decided to make it a career.

One of the major changes affecting black soldiers that he's seen over the years has been the development of the centralized promotion system. "I've always been promoted on time, but before promotions to the higher enlisted grades were centralized, partiality or favoritism was sometimes shown."

Murray recommends that any soldier encountering a situation where he feels he's a victim of racial prejudice first discuss it with his chain of command. "Sometimes the chain of command can't solve the problem. Then the soldier should go visit the human relations office. That is an agency that could solve the problem," he said.

"I look at a person as a person rather than as to what color he may be," Murray states. "But, when I was a first sergeant I discovered that I was harder on the black soldier than I was on the white soldier in reference to appearance and personal affairs."

Murray believes black supervisors relate better to black soldiers. "For example," he explained, "the Army has a regulation on haircuts. Sometimes, white supervisors are reluctant to define the regulation or tell a black soldier to get a haircut." In addition, Murray said "The black soldier is going to respond to a minority group supervisor because he feels he can relate to him. It's not necessarily true in all cases — I'd say about 75 percent of the time."

Human Relations

Human relations training provides an opportunity for people to relate to each other by talking about their backgrounds, according to Murray. A person's "background has a lot to do with how they get along with other people. In human relations classes you get 20 or so people together and you get an interesting conversation going that you would never have gotten unless you were in that type of atmosphere," he said.

Maintaining the momentum of human relations training could become a problem area, however. "We need to upgrade the materials and the techniques of instruction."

Opportunities for advancement are "definitely there" for the black soldier in today's Army. "All a soldier — any soldier — has to do is show an interest and apply himself," Murray concluded.

The private

Private Kate Jones is an Administrative Specialist (71L) assigned to the US Army Management System Support Agency (USAMSSA) at the Pentagon. She joined the Army in June 1978 because she "wanted to do something" with her life.

"I graduated from high school in 1970 and worked at various jobs including short order cook. I wanted to travel, but mainly I wanted to learn a skill and have the chance to use it. The Army offered that chance," she explained.

The New Orleans-born volunteer says she has not experienced discrimination in the Army or had difficulty in adjusting to Army life. "Since I've been in, I've noticed we work as people. Everyone gets a fair shake."

Black or white?

Opportunities in the Army, Jones feels, aren't influenced by prejudice or preferential treatment by black superiors. "I don't think it would be any easier for me to work for a black supervisor than for a white supervisor. Blacks that are in positions of authority had to work hard to get there. I think they cherish their positions so much that they try to do an outstanding job."

"I think black supervisors tend to be harder on black soldiers. When they see another black dragging his feet and not doing his best they really come down on him or her. I guess they want to see them progress too," Jones said.

Working together

"People know they have to work together and, as the world progresses, people make progress too. When I was in high school they started integrating the school. Most of the trouble we saw was caused by the parents not the students. I don't think you see too much of that anymore. The world is changing."

Part of that "changing world," according to Jones, is that the "minority" classification doesn't apply to blacks under some circumstances. "I remember one human relations class in particular. A white soldier who hadn't had any contact with blacks before basic training got up in class to give his opinion. He said most of the trouble nationwide was usually caused by minority groups such as blacks. The class was 70 percent black — so where's the minority?"

Opportunity

Jones summed it up by saying, "I think blacks are aware they have a place in the military. I don't think they come in the Army simply to get a job. They're joining to make the most of the opportunities offered."

Black Servicemembers' contributions are recorded in military paintings: a servicemember probes for booby traps (Casselli)

Bayonet deadline info

As the new year gets rolling, we will be enforcing a new deadline policy. We ask that all items for publications be in the PAO office Room 602, Bldg. 4, no later than the Friday, one week prior to publication date.

In the past we've had publication problems due to late additions added to the paper. We hope that with our new policy, we'll be able to give you a better product.

If information needs to be printed, but is unobtainable before deadline time, please give us a phone call at 545-4622 or 7391, and we'll try to reserve space — if it's deemed important.

Please help us, help you in getting out information. . . We will be enforcing our new policy, and we appreciate your cooperation.

VA Q&A

Q — I know I have a VA overpayment from prior training. Is it possible to have a portion of my monthly entitlement withheld to apply to repayment and continue my education with the remainder?

A — This may be possible. If immediate full repayment would cause undue hardship, you may request this monthly repayment method. Upon VA approval, a withholding will be established to liquidate the overpayment within a defined enrollment period.

Selectees have no option

Senior NCOS considered for the Command Sergeant Major Program will no longer have the option of declining to participate in the CSM program after the board makes its selections.

According to MILPERCEN, individuals who do not decline consideration before the board meets and are selected will either:

Accept entry into the CSM program, or, if otherwise eligible, apply for Non-Disability Retirement within 30 days after the selection list is announced.

In the past individuals had the option of accepting or declining before or after the board made its selections. Most declinations were submitted after the boards met, resulting in wasted effort for selection boards.

Change 40 to AR 614-200 will detail the changes made to the selection procedure for the CSM program. The change is expected to be in the field during March 1979. (ARNEWS)

Doughboys now 18-0

By Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning Doughboys' basketball team boosted their record to 18-0 last weekend by beating the Warner Robins AFB Flyers twice by 104-79 and 101-88 margins.

In the first game, the Doughboys scored first and never trailed, although the Flyers managed to keep it fairly close throughout the first half. The Doughboys came out shooting in the second half leading 45-36. Steve Mims led the Doughboy attack with help from James King, Frankie Tatum and Tony Haycliff. The depth of the Doughboy bench was too much for the Flyers as they played tough in the second half and finished the Flyers off 104-79.

Steve Mims led Doughboy scorers with 26 points while James King added 18 more. Other Doughboys finishing in double figures were Tony Haycliff (15), Frankie Tatum (14) and Rick Donnell (10).

The second game saw the Doughboys dominate every aspect of the game once again as they sent the Air Force team packing early. The 101-88 final score doesn't reflect the Doughboys' dominance of the game. With his team leading by 35 points, Doughboy coach Tony Resino emptied his bench to allow everyone to play.

Once again Steve Mims led the Doughboys with 26 points. Following him up this time were Rick Donnell (16 points), James King (15 points) and Charlie Jackson (12 points).

The victories give the Doughboys added momentum as they try to bring home the championship which has eluded Benning for the past few seasons. Coach Resino feels that this year's team is better all around. "They have outstanding rebounding strength, speed and excellent shooting ability."

The Doughboys will be playing away games for the next few weeks, but they will be at the Briant Wells Field House on Feb. 6 at 8:15 p.m. for an exhibition game with the Western Georgia Correction Center.

Barracudas compete in Atlanta swimming meet

By Jim Tillman

The Barracudas traveled to Atlanta, Georgia to participate in the Southwest YMCA Dolphin Swim Team's Winter B-C meet. The meet, which was held January 20-21, was sanctioned by the Georgia AAU and held at the Campbellton Road YMCA's 25 meter pool.

Although still plagued by the flu bug, the 'Cudas held their own against the swimmers of the state's top seeded swim teams. Fifteen teams entered 464 swimmers in the meet, with teams like the Atlanta Swim Association, DeKalb Park and Recreation and the host Southwest YMCA Dolphins' entering 90, 112 and 82 swimmers respectively, taking up the bulk of the entrants in the 100 events.

Bridgett Pangelinan had a good meet with a first place in each of her four events. Terrell Grooms and David Christensen both placed first in their single breaststroke event. Terrell, who had competed in only one other AAU meet, completed the 50 meters in just over the Class A standard with a time of 39.56. Davis is not a "straight A" swimmer, with each of his event's times in either the A, AA or AAA time standards.

The Barracudas will send six of their fastest swimmers to the Georgia 100 A time swim meet January 27-28. Steve Latore (11 - 12 year old boys) and Bridgett Pangelinan (senior girls) are only scheduled to swim in one event, while Kurt Andree (senior boys), David Christensen (10 and under boys), Manuel Pangelinan (11 - 12 boys) and Kirby Pilsher (senior boys) are entered in events on both days.

Basketball championship

The 586th Eng Co (ARB) topped Co B, 43rd Engineer Bn 57-44 to win the 36th Engineer Gp basketball title in a game played two weeks ago.

Frederick Nelson led the 586th attack with 24 points while teammate Darryl Bedenfield chipped in for 12 more.

The 586th was the decided winner of the championship game, but both teams will represent the 36th Eng Gp at the post level company competition. Coaches for the 586th feel that their team will "dominate" the post level games.

the Army couple either having a joint bank account or a Special Power of Attorney specifying that it is for the express purpose of the wife cashing her husband's check. Post finance cannot and will not cash any check unless the power of attorney has been completed. Also, a dependent ID card is required when the spouse cashes the check.

A General Power of Attorney should be completed by all troops to speed the release of Army Emergency Relief (AER) funds in the event of a family emergency. Separate ration soldiers should also be aware that one month of their personal payment will be deducted from their March paycheck.

1st Lt. Roger P. Clouse, executive officer, talked about the Dependent's Assistance Center. This service will be staffed 24 hours a day to handle any and all questions, problems, or emergencies which may develop. A driver and a sedan will be available on a 24-hour basis. Translators will also be available to assist any foreign-born dependent in communicating.

1st Lt. Jesse L. Day, Support Battalion assistant adjutant, announced that there will be a new shuttle service on post serving dependents in the Custer Terrace and McGraw Manor complexes during the exercise. Also, DA Form 3801 must be filled out by all servicemen who want their wives to be authorized to pick up their mail at their unit until their return March 15.

Chaplain Roosevelt Winfrey Jr., 3rd Bn, 7th Inf, will be the only chaplain to remain behind and is offering his services directly to the dependents of 197th soldiers. He will conduct film seminars and stage various ethnic and cultural festivals. He will be on twenty-four hour call during the entire Fort Drum exercise and can be reached at 544-1692 (office) and 689-4507 (home).

The 3rd Bn, 7th Inf is the only 197th unit on Kelley Hill who will not go to the Drum exercise. In March, they will go to Alaska for their cold weather training.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey
Bumped but Birdied

Richard Morton was out on a training run one afternoon when he was struck down by a blow to the head. He was found unconscious and taken to the hospital for treatment.

The curious thing about the accident is that the culprit was a poorly aimed golf ball. Morton was running on 1st Division Road, along the Follow Me Golf Course.

Later, the golfer who owned the militant ball, called to apologize and in consolation added, "Thanks to you, the shot gave me a birdie for that hole. All was forgiven."

The Young Runner

While watching the Super Bowl last Sunday, a father and his five-year-old son were discussing the game.

Taking note of the large number of players on the football field, the son asked, "Who is going to win the game?"

"Well," the father replied, "It is hard to say, they are both trying to win."

"But there isn't enough trophies and T-shirts to go around for that," said the son in response.

Auburn Indoor Track Meet February 2 and 3

Auburn University is hosting a two-day indoor track meet Feb. 2 at 6 p.m. The field events will be on Friday continuing on Saturday at 11 a.m. with the track events runs. They will have open, college and high school categories.

Registration is $2.50. You must make reservations to compete. For information contact Mel Rosen, head coach, Athletic Department, Auburn University, Auburn, Ala. 36830.

Bowling centers closed

The Mall and Main Post Bowling Centers will be temporarily closed for resurfacing of the pindecks, lanes and approaches.

The Mall Center will be closed from Jan. 29 to Feb. 1, and the Main Post Center will be closed Feb. 2-5.

The Kelley Hill Bowling Center will be open during these periods or you may use whichever of the others that is open.

Some soldiers exempt from tax

Fort Benning soldiers are subject to Georgia's ad valorem tax on motor vehicles unless they submit an affidavit swearing residency in another state, according to the Judge Advocate General's (JAG) office.

Capt. John Warthen, JAG legal assistance officer, said that those with valid, out-of-state vehicle licenses need not be concerned with the tax. Those who do register their vehicles in Georgia may obtain affidavits for exemption from the JAG office in Bldg. 5 or the legal sections of all major commands.

Budgeting to be topic of seminar

Fort Benning's Army Community Services (ACS) will sponsor three instructive classes at the Custer Terrace Community Life Center on Feb. 6 beginning at 9:30 a.m.

The first class (9:30-10 a.m.) will cover legal documents. In the second class (10-11:30 a.m.), a member of the Georgia Extension Services will discuss various methods of economical budget planning and the manager of the CB&T bank on post will be on hand for the third class which deals with check balancing, deposits and general bookkeeping.

The classes are open to all active duty military personnel and their dependents. Free babysitting will be provided by the Community Life Center. For more information, contact the ACS at 545-1233/544-4969.

"Servicemembers are allowed exemptions because they are not here by choice," said Warthen. "Car owners who are dependents and service members who resided in Georgia prior to entering the military do not qualify for the exemption," he added. To qualify, the soldier must be a non-resident of Georgia and the owner of the vehicle as of January 1, 1979.

Awardee announced

BIOCC grad honored

By R. W. Buterbaugh

2nd Lt. James Gerald Thyne, Jr. has been selected to receive the 27th Annual Robert P. Patterson Award.

He will be presented the award at a ceremony to be conducted at 11 a.m., Feb. 12 in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, the Secretary of the Army or his representative and the Chief of Staff of the Army or his representative.

Established in 1952 in memory of the late Judge Patterson's distinguished service as an Infantry officer and Secretary of War, the award is presented annually to the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course graduate who displays the most outstanding qualities of leadership, academic efficiency, aptitude, and character during the previous fiscal year.

Thyne attended BIOCC class 4-77 from July to October 1977, where he was the Distinguished Graduate and Leadership Honor Graduate. He was a student company commander during Senior Status and served as President of the Student Council.

The 28-year-old Massachusetts native began his military career in 1969. During his seven years and eight months enlisted service as an Infantryman, Thyne served one tour of duty in the Republic of Vietnam and one tour of duty in Hawaii.

He was awarded the Meritorious Service

Medal, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with "V" device, the Combat Infantryman's badge, and the Expert Infantryman's badge. He is currently assigned to the 8th Infantry Division in Europe.

Boy Scout puts breath of life into his brother

By Beth Hamilton

The Boy Scout Medal of Merit was presented to 12-year-old Life Scout Otis Redmond of Columbus during the Chattahoochee Boy Scout Council's annual banquet held Tuesday night at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

On April 16, Otis and his nine-year-old brother, Anthony, were involved in a bicycle accident while riding on a Columbus street. Anthony was thrown from his bike and sustained serious head injuries.

Otis quickly began mouth to mouth resuscitation on his unconscious brother and at the same time asked a bystander to call for an ambulance. Otis managed to revive his brother by the time help arrived.

Although Anthony suffered a serious concussion and fractured skull, his life was saved because of his brother's coolness and first aid skill during the emergency.

The Medal of Merit is one of the rarest Boy Scout awards with only about 100 being presented nationally each year. Otis received the award on the recommendation of the National Boy Scout Court of Honor for outstanding service in putting the Boy Scout skills and ideas into practice.

Otis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Redmond of Columbus and a member of Troop 238, Fort Benning District.

Reward offered for slayer of student

The Fort Benning District, Third Region, U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command, is offering a reward of $5,000 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons involved in the murder of Kirk Lyle Bonney, formerly assigned to the 43rd Airborne Company, 4th Battalion, The School Brigade, Fort Benning.

The murder investigation was initiated by the Fort Benning CID in June 1978, when Bonney's body was discovered on the Military Reservation off 1st Division Road.

Bonney, 20, enlisted in the Army in January 1978 and received his Basic Training at Fort Bliss, Texas, and had been assigned to Fort Benning since March 1978.

Any information pertaining to the murder of Bonney can be given to any of the following Law Enforcement Agencies: Fort Benning CID, 545-7950/545-7052/545-5064/ - 544-4252/544 - 4306; Columbus Police Department, 322-4444/322-4445; Sheriff's Department, 322-7768 (ask for Capt. Guthrie's office) or Military Police, 545-5222/545-5223.

Questions regarding the reward should be referred to John Lanting at the CID numbers listed above.

Moonlighting:

Soldiers put in long hours for life's little luxuries

By Seth Hamilton

Moonlighting seems to be a necessary evil, especially with today's high cost of living. The Army is no exception as thousands of soldiers all over the country are taking on part-time jobs to bolster their government paychecks.

There are many reasons for moonlighting. For example, one specialist four at Fort Benning said his part-time job gave him added experience in his career field. A specialist five said he needed the added income to pay the bills, while another specialist five said she found her part-time job a good way to use up extra time and meet new people outside the military. Whatever their additional reasons, all of the moonlighters interviewed agreed that insufficient Army pay was the basic reason for moonlighting.

Who moonlights?

Just how many soldiers moonlight? In a report prepared for the Human Resources Development Directorate by the Department of the Army, a survey showed that 137,000 soldiers, or one-fifth of the Army's enlisted strength, have part-time jobs. The report isolated the E-5 to E-7 ranks as having the highest percentage of moonlighters, probably due to the fact that the marriage rate increases dramatically within that group.

In a random survey at Benning, soldiers were asked if they or someone they knew in the Army had a part-time job. Of the 100 soldiers, ranging in rank from private to sergeant major, questioned, 27 held part-time jobs and 85 of them knew Army people who moonlighted. These figures are not intended to reflect a realistic percentage of military moonlighters at Benning, but rather to illustrate the fact that moonlighting is as prevalent here as on any Army post.

Who are these moonlighters? They are enlisted men, non-commissioned and commissioned officers as well as general service personnel. Anyone who wants or needs additional income is a possible moonlighter.

Pfc. Danita Price is one of these moonlighters. Price works for Headquarters Command S2/S3 during the day. At night, she sells products for a leading cosmetic firm. She estimates that her part-time job brings in $80 to $100 extra per month.

Civilians earn more

"The Army simply doesn't pay me enough for what I have to do, so I work part-time." Price argues that a civilian doing her same job can make up to $10 per hour. "I'm making less than $3 per hour, plus I'm on call 24 hours a day just like everyone in the military. It's really not fair that a lot of Army people should have to look for part-time employment to make ends meet." She added, "If I made enough money in my Army job and didn't have to worry about how the bills are going to get paid, I could concentrate on my Army duties with a clear mind."

Spec. 5 Jim Clements of the Parachute Packing Branch works 30 hours a week at a service station. "The Army pays me enough to just get by. I am renting a house and I've got a car to maintain, so I must have more income than my Army job."

Some moonlighters resentful

According to the soldiers questioned here, many of these moonlighters resent the fact that they must take on part-time employment. To add to that, many are upset because they have to have their commander's permission to work part-time. Although the official okay is more or less routine, the soldier and his civilian employer must sign a form stating that the soldier isn't taking the job away from a civilian. One staff sergeant working part-time as a sales clerk called the required statement "ridiculous" and added that, "A lot of us need the jobs

Cooks awarded

By Julie Casey

Spec. 4 Patricia Crawford of 10th Co TSB and Spec. 4 Louis Rombro of Co B, 5th Bn, 1st Infantry Training Bde were awarded "Best of the Show" at the 2nd Annual Fort Benning Culinary Arts Exhibit Jan. 26. They took the honors with a beautiful fish centerpiece on a framed mirror. The fish was made of dehydrated potatoes sculptured and decorated with gelatin and frostings.

Capt. Jimmy Marshall, exhibit director, commented, "The exhibit is held to bring recognition to Benning cooks in five different categories: Degree of Difficulty, Artistic Ability, Overall Layout, Craftsmanship and Color Combination. The top three finishers in each category will compete in the 4th Annual Culinary Arts Exhibit in U.S. Army competition at Fort Lee, Va."

The following finished first in each of the following categories: Degree of Difficulty, SSgt. Charles Graham, 988th MP Co.; Artistic Ability, Spec. 4 Wanda Hardman, 67th Maintenance Co; Overall Layout, Specialists 4 Crawford and Rombro; Craftsmanship, Spec. 6 Peray Jones, Co C, 4th Bn, 1st ITB; Color Combination, Spec. 6 Darwin Duncan, 34th Medical Bn.

more than civilians do. Why should we be low man on the totem pole when looking for a job?

The reasons for moonlighting seem to vary almost as much as the types of jobs themselves, but one thing is certain: all of the soldiers interviewed here agreed that their Army responsibilities come first. One specialist five summed it up when he said, "You've got to keep the part-time job in its proper perspective. It's a second job, not the first."

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Black History month observed

Black men and women have fought bravely against America's foes since 1652. Free and enslaved blacks fought in the colonial wars. They died assisting the birth of the American nation — more than 5,000 blacks served in the Continental Army. And blacks shed their blood in the War of 1812 assuring the results of the Revolution.

According to President Lincoln, participation in the Civil War insured Northern victory and preservation of the Union. More than 186,000 Afro-American soldiers served in the Union Army. Two black cavalry regiments — the 9th and 10th — and two black infantry regiments — the 24th and 25th — played a large role in the "winning of the West" during the quarter century after Appomattox. These four regiments later fought in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

In the "war to make the world safe for democracy" more than 40,000 of the 200,000 black soldiers overseas served in combat. One of the leading American units was the 369th Regiment which fought so well with the French, it was awarded the Croix de Guerre. Two black divisions, the 92nd and 93rd, also saw action during World War I. These two divisions along with many other black combat units saw action in the Second World War.

But, ironically, most of these black men and women were denied the very freedom, equality, and citizenship they believed they were fighting for. Their contributions to the nation generally were unrecognized and unappreciated.

Since the white majority tended to doubt the black's soldiering ability, blacks initially were not allowed to join the war effort. But as the struggle deepened, whites were ready to have blacks as allies for the duration. Just as surely, blacks seeking to prove their worth would join the fight — only to be thrust aside when peace returned. And even in wartime, black soldiers faced the same inequalities they found in civilian life.

Equality in the armed forces began steps toward reality when President Truman issued an executive order in July 1948 directing "equality of treatment and opportunity" be implemented "as rapidly as possible."

During the last 28 years, a policy of gradual integration has expanded to equal opportunity in all aspects of Army life and beyond. Equal opportunity policies now apply to off-post housing and public accommodations.

Race relations education and training programs are designed to foster the active support and participation of all soldiers. The guiding light for equal opportunity today is the Affirmative Actions Plan — a step beyond nondiscrimination. (FORSCOM)

Black History observance kicks-off

Mayor Ford will be guest of Lavoie Chapel

The honorable Johnny L. Ford, mayor of Tuskegee, Ala., will kick off Fort Benning's Black History Week activities by addressing the Lavoie Manor Chapel, Feb. 11 at 11 a.m.

Black History week will be celebrated Feb. 11-17. The theme of this year's observance is "Torch for the Future."

Ford was reelected as mayor of Tuskegee in 1976 and enjoys large political and personal popularity in his district. Among the first blacks to be elected mayor of a southern city, he has made many contributions to humanitarian programs and has earned national recognition as a pioneer in black leadership.

Ford has served as Co-Chairman of the National Committee for the Two-Party System, Inc., and as a member of the Executive Committee, National Conference of Black Mayors.

He has also acted as District Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, Political Strategist for the late Robert F. Kennedy, Vice President of the Multi-Racial Corporation, and as State Supervisor of County Relations Service in the United States Department of Justice.

Other activities scheduled during the week by the Music Director of Lavoie Chapel, Mrs. Brenda Holmes, include a Gospel Workshop, Feb. 17 and 18. Members of several local churches plus students and administrative persons from Albany State College will participate in the workshop. The Albany State Choir, under the direction of Mr. Herman Shaffer, will join the local groups for training and performances.

Feb. 18, the final Sunday during Black History week, will feature Dr. Charles Hayes, president of Albany State College, as guest speaker.

The post Equal Opportunity Coordination Office will show the films, "Black History — Lost, Stolen, or Strayed" on Feb. 12-16; and "Heritage in Black" on Feb. 19-23, in observance of Black History and Culture. The films will be shown at Brown Hall, Bldg. 328 on Ingersoll Street.

Due to the limited accessibility of films a proposed schedule has been set up for major commands and directorates who would like to participate.

Army abortion policy revised

Department of the Army (DA) announced a new policy regarding abortions in Army Medical facilities. The policy will permit prepaid abortions for women located overseas, and abortions at government expense for women who meet the criteria established by the 1979 Defense Appropriations Act.

Abortions normally will be performed in Army medical facilities only in the following circumstances:

Where the life of the mother would be endangered.

When the mother is the victim of rape or incest which has been reported promptly to a Law Enforcement Agency or Public Health Service.

Where, in the opinion of two physicians, severe and long-lasting physical health damage to the mother would result if the pregnancy were carried to term.

When medical procedures make it necessary to terminate an ectopic, or abnormal, pregnancy.

The policy allows for prepaid abortions to overcome the disadvantage of military personnel and their dependents stationed overseas where abortions are unavailable or inaccessible. Except for those in Hawaii, Alaska, and the United Kingdom, military personnel and dependents who do not qualify for abortions at government expense may obtain abortions on a prepaid fee basis at the nearest military medical facility.

Patients will be charged $167 for an abortion performed on an outpatient basis and $408 if the abortion requires inpatient care. These charges will cover the full cost of performing the operation in a military facility. (ARNEWS)

Glad you asked

Should the Army pay for abortions for servicemembers and dependents?

Terry Parks, dependent

Abortions should be funded by the government only in cases of rape or incest. But if a girl goes out and gets pregnant without taking precautions, then she shouldn't be allowed an abortion.

Spec. 5 John Wood, Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd.

I don't believe in abortions unless the mother's life is endangered. Instances such as rape, incest or the physical inability to bear children should be regarded as examples of the endangerment of the mother's life.

Pvt. Sylvia Jones, 15th Finance

In my opinion if a woman gets pregnant while in the Army and wants to have an abortion for no logical reason, then the Army shouldn't pay for it; but if she has a legitimate reason, why not?

Staff Sgt. David Riley, MEDDAC

Yes, they should because abortions are legal. Servicemembers and dependents are entitled to free medical care.

Letters to the Editor

Parking for handicapped should be revamped

A few days ago I sat in the Commissary parking lot and watched a lady making her way toward the Commissary with the aid of two canes.

It took several minutes for the irony of the situation to soak in—a handicapped person who had used special spaces reserved for the handicapped had to travel a further distance than a healthy customer who was able to get a closer parking space in another aisle.

It also seems unusual that the parking spaces for colonels would precede those for the handicapped.

I would like to see the first space in each parking aisle reserved for the handicapped. The concept of reserved parking is to aid the handicapped by reducing the distance they have to travel. The present arrangement is failing in this respect.

Sincerely,
Concerned

Better barracks urged

The early days of the Volunteer Army were dotted with news releases about plans to build better barracks to house this new breed of professional soldier, a man or woman who could be expected to stay in the Army longer because they would no longer be subject to many of the unsatisfactory conditions typical of a predominantly draftee force. They were to have semi-private rooms where they could have their own stereo equipment, hang pictures and use an adjacent bathroom with a modicum of privacy. The rows of double bunks in one big room were to be relegated to World War II movies and old episodes of "Sergeant Bilko."

Progress has been made

But now, as we close out the sixth year of pure volunteerism, the best we can say is that some progress has been made toward modern troop housing. Army posts throughout the United States are still using clusters of ramshackle wooden barracks built at the outset of World War II, 36 or more years ago. Here and there some amenities have been added, like stall enclosures around the toilets in the communal bathroom. The original electrical wiring has probably been replaced in all of them to provide some measure of protection against a fire, but considering the uncountable coats of paint that hold their rotting timbers together, it is nothing short of miraculous that the Army has never had a major disaster in the form of a fire in a crowded troop barracks.

Overseas, particularly in Germany, the situation is even worse. Many of the old German Army barracks occupied by our troops there were built in the late 19th Century and they suffer all the ills of aged structures. Worldwide, 18 percent of the soldiers occupying military quarters live under conditions called "substandard." That totals 50,000 of the volunteers who cost so much to recruit, to train and to replace when they become disenchanted.

Money appropriated

Congress has been appropriating money to build troop housing but progress toward the goal of having the entire Army in adequate quarters has been slow. Some large military posts, like Forts Stewart and Polk, are still almost entirely in their World War II configuration. Fiscal year 1979 funding will only reduce the barracks backlog by 1½ percent. In Germany, the host nation, as part of an agreement to help offset the costs of maintaining U.S. forces, has made some progress toward rehabilitation of the ancient barracks.

But if we are to maintain an Active Army of true volunteers and to reduce the costly turnover rate we must convince the first term enlistees that they are something more than second class citizens. It was wrong to force draftees to live in military tenements, but at least they knew they could escape back to normal creature comforts after just two years. We want and need our volunteers to stay longer. —

Meet Tom Giffen

JOB: Sports editor with responsibility for the daily Enquirer, the combined Saturday Enquirer and Ledger and The Sunday Ledger-Enquirer.

INTERESTS: My family, Christian commitments, travel, food, cigars and pipes, participatory sports such as racquetball, golf and softball and reading history, theology and sports . . . plus anything else which will get me out of mowing the lawn.

VIEWPOINT: Athletic competition was originally conceived as a method of celebrating one's physical gifts and practicing discipline. Things have changed. Now winning, which was one of many goals centuries ago too, has become the primary focus in sports. Nowadays it's not how you play the game but rather whether you win and become No. 1. Winning has become a religion, but there's more to sports than that. It's people still disciplining themselves and striving to do the best they can. If sports is to remain an important, productive part of our society, we must learn to celebrate once again our talents and have fun doing the best we can as well as enjoying sports as entertainment.

Our reason is you.

New PMO sgt maj likes being with the troops

By Jess Walker

We, as military personnel, are aware of constant changes in personnel, be it for whatever reason, ETS, PCS, promotions or schooling. Well, the Provost Marshall's Office has a new sergeant major.

He is Sgt. Maj. Joseph A. Ouellette of Van Buren, Maine, a soldier with 24 years service, a Vietnam veteran, recipient of the Purple Heart, and most importantly, a friend to the troops.

Likes being with troops

"I've got to be with the troops or I'll retire," states Ouellette. "I make my self available to them. The most important asset is our troops."

During his first week here, he was answering questions, discussing possible changes and solving problems. He is constantly in demand and is seldom found sitting. In his first open meeting with all of Law Enforcement Command (LEC) personnel, a supply clerk asked why her presence was necessary when she was not an MP? He replied, "All LEC personnel, including support people, are equally as important in accomplishing the mission."

New uniforms

"The LEC is a job that applies to everyone," he continued. "If I had my way, MP's wouldn't wear their rank and they'd wear distinguished uniforms. We're gradually going into leather gear. New duty jackets are expected by 1980 and there will be more changes." The Army shares some-of-the-Sgt. Major's opinions. He was in the test group for the new uniforms.

Sgt. Maj. Joseph A. Ouellette

Personal goals

Ouellette has set a goal of making Fort Benning's LEC the best in the U.S. Army. We've intensified our missions and increased road personnel.

"You know it takes good NCO's to make good MP's. It's their responsibility. There will be more traffic checks, more roadside checks and

Post doctor acts in Springer play

By James E. Knisley

Maj. Stan Kelly, Audiologist at Martin Army Hospital and the Fort Benning Hearing Conservation Officer, will appear in the upcoming Springer Opera House production, "Forty Carats."

The comedy will open Thursday and will run through Saturday, Feb. 17. Curtain time each night will be at 8:30, with matinee performances on Sunday, Feb. 11, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. There will not be a performance on Monday, Feb. 12.

Kelly began his acting career at the age of 14 when he played the Master Inquisitor in "The Trial of Jaques DeMolay." The next year, the play won second place in the Florida Drama Competition.

As a 12th grader at Miami High School he played the lead in the Senior Class production, "Ask Any Girl." He was selected as the best actor at the school that year.

Kelly attended the University of Miami as a drama major. During his four years of undergraduate study he appeared in 12 productions including "Death of a Salesman," "Darkness at Noon," "Tartuffe" and "The Hostage."

A member of the Thespian Society, Kelly earned his pocket money by dubbing foreign films. His voice has been associated with such notables as French actor Alan Delon. He also appeared as a juvenile delinquent in the Gospel Films productions "The Misfit."

Kelly received his masters degree in Audiology from the University of Miami then entered the Army.

His first tour of duty was in Germany where he directed both "Oliver" and "The Perfect Nanny" (an adaptation of "Mary Poppins") using actors and actresses comprised solely of fifth thru eighth graders.

Kelly was next stationed in South Carolina where he was a member of the Columbia Town Theater, the oldest continually performing town theater in the country. He also appeared in five Educational Television movies and a Dinner Theater production of "Goodbye Charlie."

Since being stationed at Fort Benning, Kelly has done two voice-overs for local television commercials in addition to his current appearance in "40 carats."

Artists' Guild elects president

The Columbus Artists' Guild elected Mrs. Karin Murray, wife of Capt. Wayne Murray, as its new president during a general business meeting at the Columbus Museum of Arts and Science Jan. 22. Mrs. Murray succeeds Nell Spetel.

Mrs. Murray, who has taught Officers Wives Club watercolor and oil classes the past year, has exhibited her work in Europe and the Southeast, and won several prizes in drawing, oils and watercolors.

"There is a wide variety of artists and art-interested persons in the Guild. It's a mixture of many talents and wonderful people, and I'm delighted they elected me president. I'll work hard for them," Murray commented.

Other officers elected to serve in 1979 include Annette Bush, 1st vice-president; Donna Maddox, 2nd vice-president; Gertrude Sab-lonsky, recording secretary; Lauri Bode, corresponding secretary; Bob Bechdolt, treasurer and Ralph Taylor, publicity chairman.

Mrs. Murray expressed a desire for those Benning Artists hiding in the woodwork to come and join them.

"Our monthly Guild meetings are fun and beneficial to members. Our membership of approximately 70 contains a variety of artists, including painters, weavers, stained glass window makers, photographers and many others with interesting talents. The meetings give members a chance to exchange ideas and to gain knowledge from our guest speakers," Murray said.

For those interested, the Artists' Guild monthly meetings are held the fourth Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Museum of Arts and Sciences on Wynnton Road.

Getting it straight

In the Jan. 26 issue of the BAYONET, the front-page story "197th dependents won't be forgotten" contained an error. The story said, "Post finance cannot and will not cash any checks unless the power of attorney has been completed." The story should have read, "Post banks cannot and will not cash checks unless power of attorney has been completed."

Boy Scouts presented awards during annual ceremony

Presenting the award during the annual Chattahoochee Council, BSA banquet, was Lt. Gen. (ret.) Orwin C. Talbott, former Fort Benning commander.

Col. Addison Davis III, Fort Benning deputy commanding officer and chief of staff, as well as vice president of the Chattahoochee Council, served as master of ceremonies for the banquet and ceremony. Music was provided by the Explorer Post 76 Colonial Band.

Gen. Talbott also presented 10 Silver Beaver Awards to area individuals in recognition of conspicuous service to Scouting on a local Council level.

Receiving the Silver Beaver Awards were Dr. Donald P. Schultz, Pine Mountain, Ga.; Albert B. Chambers, Opelika, Ala.; Charles L. Bausch, Fort Benning; Capt. (ret.) Frederic Marlin Sieg, Columbus; Harry L. Reed, Columbus; Dr. Winfred Aldridge Shaw, Auburn, Ala.; Capt. Maurice Kirby Gordon II, Fort Benning; Don W. Taylor, Pine Mountain, Ga.; Dr. Zachary Taylor, LaGrange, Ga., and Mrs. Mary Griggs, Holy Trinity, Ala.

Also during the banquet, a resolution was read naming a Boy Scout Camp to be developed on West Point Lake near LaGrange in honor of the late James H. Gallant of LaGrange.

The resolution, presented to Mrs. Gallant along with a plaque by Guy E. Snively Jr., council president, noted that Gallant for many years exhibited exceptional interest in the Boy Scout program, "contributing greatly to the success of the program, and devoting his time and skill tirelessly and unselfishly to the solving of any and all problems facing the Scouting program."

Also recognized during the banquet were 39 Chattahoochee Council scouts who earned Eagle Scout Badges during the past year.

The Distinguished Eagle Scout Award presented to Daley was established in 1969 by the BSA. It is presented only to Eagle Scouts who earned the rank of Eagle as a member of BSA a minimum of 25 years previous to nomination. The nominee must have distinguished himself in business, professional activities or service to his country.

Daley earned the rank of Eagle Scout as a member of the BSA more than 46 years ago on November 30, 1932.

In making the presentation, Talbott, who is also a holder of the Distinguished Eagle Scout Award, said, "It is an honor for me to present . . . the second Distinguished Eagle Scout Award that has been made by the Chattahoochee Council."

Talbott then read a citation which stated that Daley "has continued to serve his God, country and fellowmen, following the principles of the Scout oath and law."

The Silver Beaver Award was established by the BSA National Council in 1931 to recognize individuals for conspicuous service to Scouting on a local Council level.

All interested persons must be interviewed and fill out an application Feb. 8 & 9 at the Red Cross Building on Main Post (corner of Vibbert and Ingersoll Avenues) from 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Volunteers can serve in many areas — hospital, field office and schools. For further information call 545-5194 or 544-3213.

AUSA boosted by business

Corporate membership in the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) reached a new high this week, with a total of 105 members.

Forty-five businesses joined in the past seven weeks, during the current membership drive under the leadership of James Blanchard, chapter first vice president and Col. (ret.) Charles Thebaud, corporate membership chairman.

The corporate membership program, which permits local businesses to join the AUSA as organizations rather than as individuals, was adopted by the Chapter in November 1975.

"The business community realizes the importance of a strong AUSA Chapter, and is extremely receptive to adding their firm's name to our membership roll," Thebaud commented.

Readiness requires rehearsal

By John Bayless

Emergencies can occur anytime, anywhere and Co A, 43rd Engr Bn is ready for the mission. Constant training and rehearsals help maintain their state of readiness.

"Through our continuous training in loading techniques we can be prepared for action when an emergency occurs requiring our assistance," said Capt. Phillip Pearce, Co A commander. "We train to be ready to move out in the shortest time possible. This time of year is especially important since the bad weather on the East Coast may result in our being put on alert," he explained.

The training and practice never really stops, with perfection being the ultimate goal. Loading practice is a must for the soldiers of Co A. MSgt. Larry Dudley, operations sergeant for the 43rd, said, "We've learned that loading at the railhead here requires experience and lots of good practice training. If the job of tying the equipment securely is not properly done, it could result in expensive damage to equipment that will be needed at the destination."

Bonus boosted in Armor field

To spur enlistments in the Armor Career Field, Department of the Army will raise enlistment bonuses in six armor Military Occupational Specialty from $2,500 to $3,000. The period covered by the bonus increase will run from Jan. 22 through May 31.

The six MOS affected by the increase are: 19D, 19E, 19F, 19G, 19H, 19J.

In order to maintain equity in the bonus program, DA officials say that individuals who enlisted for the MOS earlier, will be paid the higher figure if their service agreements call for entering on active duty on or after Jan. 22.

The higher figure will also be collected by those who enlist in the MOS prior to June 1, even if their entry on active duty takes place after June 1.

Those who enlist in the bonus program must meet the following eligibility requirements:

- Have a high school diploma;
- Be in mental categories I through III;
- Must not have prior service;
- Must enlist for four or more years. (ARNEWS)

Headquarters Command: They do WHAT?

By Julie Casey

Imagine 1,200 homing pigeons, located all over Columbus and Fort Benning, departing each morning and arriving at wide and various Fort Benning locations with as many different missions, then you can picture what it is like to keep tabs on the soldiers assigned or attached to Headquarters Command of the United States Army Infantry Center.

Soldiers, assigned or attached to Companies A, B and Headquarters of Headquarters Command, staff most of the directorates and the commanding general's staff. This places them anywhere from the 283rd Army Band to the AO Eagle Testing Range; from parachute packing to weapons maintenance and from food service to aviation. Even Fort Benning post commander Maj. Gen. William Livsey Jr. is assigned to Headquarters Command.

Lt. Col. Wm. Darryl Henderson, the commander, must keep track of all military personnel attached to Headquarters Infantry Center. He is responsible for the soldier's administration, training, billeting, supply, military discipline and welfare.

"Everyone is scattered all over post. It is basically an independent type of command. It is set up on a positive leadership. The standards are made known to the soldier and he or she is expected to meet them. Most of the time the soldier here does a pretty good job," he said.

The 1st Sergeant of Headquarters Co.

Larry A. Wing commented about a management problem in Headquarters Command, "You don't have the control over them as you would have in other units. They work in their duty sections and we never see them except after duty hours. By working with their supervisors, we work out most of the problems. I get a lot of cooperation from their sections."

Henderson tries to supply nice living areas, and adequate day rooms and to see that the soldiers needs are met.

"I have a program with the company commanders right now," he said. "At the first indication a soldier is having problems, the commander gets involved in an effort to solve problems before they get out of hand. It is working quite well. I call it Preventive Personnel Management. We also try to make sure the immediate company-level chain of command (the platoon sergeants and NCOs) has some daily contact with the soldiers to make sure everyone is looking sharp."

He felt that the positive leadership approach was the best way to command Headquarters Command. "In a command situation where total supervision, or as much control most commanders have, is not possible, you have to rely on the soldiers to fulfill their duties," he commented. "I'm glad to say that most of them do take their duties seriously. I have to contend with a very small percentage of the problem soldiers."

One cocktail may cost up to $1,000

Occasionally, a news item mentions an auction where a connoisseur had paid thousands of dollars for a single bottle of rare wine. Few of us would consider such a purchase anything less than frivolous. In fact, few of us would even dare risk the financial consequences of offering even a playful bid at such an auction. Were the gavel to fall on our bid, we might find payment an unnerving and unpleasant experience.

But many highway users figuratively have made exorbitant bids for various bottled spirits. And the gavel, not of an auctioneer but of a judge, called their bids to redemption.

Would you pay $300, $500, $1,000 or even more for a surfeit of ordinary bar cocktails? or a six-pack of beer? Or a last one-for-the-road martini? Those prices are possible, in fact actually have been paid, by motorists cited for and convicted of Driving While Intoxicated (DWI).

The High Cost of DWI

Aside from the financial sting of court costs, a stiff fine, probation fees, legal expense, — and three years of higher insurance premiums — a DWI apprehension and conviction carries with it additional unpleasant consequences. The ride to jail (usually in handcuffs for DWI offenses) booking, confinement, the bail process — all are particularly traumatic for ordinary citizens. And most DWI offenders are ordinary citizens, not hardened, habitual criminals. Then comes the mental anguish of court appearances and the ignominy of notoriety before family, friends, peers and supervisors. It's difficult, if not impossible, to keep knowledge of a DWI conviction from friends or neighbors or employers.

These things always are difficult to "prove", but statistics suggest that drunk drivers involve themselves yearly in something like 400,000 accidents which produce serious injuries. Even half of that is a ghastly thought. The amount of property damage appears to be in the millions of dollars. The possible bright side is a national trend toward tougher, less tolerant enforcement of laws concerning DWI.

As another trend, most motorists stopped for and convicted of DWI seem to make dramatic changes in their drinking habits. Most remain one-time offenders, alive and far luckier than the 20,000 or so killed each year by drunken drivers — some of whom are themselves killed — in auto accidents. Still, it's too bad the lesson could not have been learned by listening instead of doing.

Much more could be said about the seriousness of today's DWI problem and the consequences of a DWI apprehension and conviction. But we hope what little has been said will serve as a reminder the next time you have a choice of silence or further bidding. The unexpected rap of the gavel can be both unpleasant and expensive.

What "One too many" can cost

If you owned a 1978 Chevrolet Malibu and carried a conventional package of insurance coverages and limits, here is how a DWI conviction would influence your premiums in Columbus. Remember, the DWI penalty continues for three years.

Clean Record	DWI	Additional yearly DWI cost
$ 183	$ 456	$ 273

The middle column shows premium samples for people who are kept on by their insurers after a DWI. We call this the "voluntary" market because companies voluntarily accepted the person as a risk.

Serious DWI's frequently end in cancellations, throwing the former policyholder into the state's Automobile Insurance Plan. AIP's usually charge considerably higher premiums than those available in the voluntary market.

Sergeant appointed as warrant officer

By Pat Astran

Dennis J. Beaupre, Company C, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, was appointed a Warrant Officer on January 23, 1979.

"When orders from Department of the Army (DA) were published appointing me as drill sergeant, I had already compiled my packet for the Warrant Officer program, but had not yet submitted it," he said.

"My wife, Ana, and I concluded that I probably wouldn't be accepted into the program because of my being on drill sergeant status," he said.

Then a letter from DA, highly recommending his paper work for Warrant Officer be submitted, arrived at his old unit.

With encouragement from Ana, Beaupre submitted the action for Warrant Officer even though they still had doubts as to whether or not he would be accepted.

Appearing before the board in late August, he was recommended for Warrant Officer and the packet went forward to DA. Beaupre stated, "The day before Thanksgiving, we received a phone call from the Quartermaster Branch. I was told my appointment would be sometime in January 1979." He is now a Unit Supply Technician, 761A.

The family, Ana and the three sons — Steven, 9, Michael, 7, Mathiew, 5 — are all happy about the advancement. "They stood behind me even though it meant time away from home, for schools, traveling, and training," he said. "It makes it all worthwhile when you know you have your family's support."

Doughboys 'move out'

By Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning Doughboys basketball team is on fire, but no one here seems to be worrying about it. The Doughboys extended their unbeaten string to 20 games as they took two from Moody AFB this past weekend by scores of 85-70 and 89-76.

The Moody team, like others in past games, tried to slow down the hard-running Doughboys in the first game by using a slow, deliberate offense. But their efforts were fruitless as the Doughboys did it their way from start to finish.

Once again the Doughboys were helped by a balanced scoring attack as five players finished in double figures. Charlie Jackson led with 24 points. Others included Rick Donnell, 16; Larry Varnedoe, 13; Steve Mims and Fredrick Nelson with 12 points apiece.

The second game saw the Doughboys build up a 55-34 halftime lead by using their quickness and teamwork. The Doughboys played a strong inside game and forced the Air Force team to run with them. Moody seemed to get it together later on in the game, but the damage had been done and the Doughboys held on for the 89-76 victory. Once again Charlie Jackson led Doughboy scorers with 20 points. Steve Mims was close behind with 19.

When asked about his team's undefeated record so far this year, coach Tony Resino said he felt they had not yet reached their peak. "We hope to be at our best just in time for the TRADOC championships at Fort Jackson March 10-17."

Double victory for marksmen

Shooters of the United States Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU), stationed at Fort Benning, began the new year with back to back victories in matches held at Fort Benning Jan. 20-21.

Thomas Woods, USAMU, scored 879 points out of 900 to win the National Indoor Sectional Championship by three points over the Marine Corps' Jimmy Dorsey, to get the ball rolling for the Army.

In the indoor standard pistol competition, Jimmy McCoy, USAMU, scored a close two-point victory over teammates Emil Heugatter and last year's National Champion Charles McCowan. McCoy scored 576 points to 574 for Heugatter and McCowan.

A new national record was set in the standard pistol team competition with scores of 574 by Heugatter and McCowan. Ladies National Champion Kim Dyer added 558 points and Eric Buljung finished the team scoring with 566.

Their total of 2,272 raised the old record by 46 points set by the All National Guard team.

In air pistol competition, Marvin Black, USAMU, broke out on top with 385 points to runner-up Emil Heugatter's 383. Charles McCowan finished third at 381 points.

In other competition on the same weekend, Louis Theimer, an Army Reservist from Iowa Park, Texas, won the Georgia State Running Target Championship by three points over the Army's Charles Davis. In the two day tournament, Davis held a nine-point lead going into the final days shooting only to watch it vanish with an outstanding score by Theimer. Theimer's total two-day score was 1,133 (558-575) while Davis finished at 1,130 (567-563). Martin Edmondson, USAMU, finished in the third spot at 1,123.

In team competition, the US Army "Blue" team of Davis, Edmondson, James Reiber and Randy Stewart scored 2,951 points to win over the Army Reserve squad at 2,929.

Five Barracudas compete in invitational meet

By Jim Tillman

Five members of Fort Benning's Barracudas Swim Team traveled to Atlanta's Forest Park, January 27, to compete in the 15th Annual Georgia 100 Invitational Swimming Meet. Along with other state teams, thirty-four teams from as far away as Baltimore, Maryland; Roanoke, Virginia; Jacksonville, Florida; and New Orleans, Louisiana entered 360 swimmers in one of the most prestigious swimming events of the 1979 AAU swim season. The meet, hosted by the Tara Tarpons Swimming Association, has historically produced many state records and has served as a spring board for swimmers who are seeking national level competition. Unfortunately none of our 'Cudas got their names in the 1979 AAU record book, but two Barracudas came close.

David Christensen, a Dexter school 5th grader who is in his second year of competitive swimming, placed in five of the six events he entered. Achieving AAA time standards of 29.91 in the 50 yard free style and 1:04.01 in the 100 free, David placed second in both of these events. Placing third in the 50 back with 35.79 (AA), he captured fourth place in the 50 fly with a 33.79(AA) and finished in fifth place with a 1:18.19 (AA) in the 100 yards individual medley. In his sixth event (ED note: In this swim meet, a swimmer was permitted to enter three events per day), David wrapped it up with a 41.27 (A) time in the 50 breast.

Narrowly missing the highest time standard of AAAA for his age group by less than a second in each AAA event, this was David's last chance to reach that goal as a ten year old. He will celebrate his eleventh birthday February 4 and must begin competing in the older age group.

Placing in two of his five events, Manuel Pangelinan received sixth place for his 1:12.21 (A) in the 100 back and third place for his 1:17.97 (AA) in the 100 breast stroke in the 11 - 12 year old age group. Also in that age group was Steve Latore who competed in the 100 breast with a time of 1:22.27 for an A time standard.

In the Senior Boys, Kirby Pilsher and Kurt Andree were both entered in the 50 and 100 freestyle. Although they did not place in the competition, Kirby's 24.60 in the 50 free broke him into the AA time standard while his 53.74 in the 100 free brought his time just over the 53.29 required for AA. Kurt turned in a 25.71 (A) in the 50 free and 58.40 (B) in the 100 free.

Benning Bass Club holds annual banquet

The Bass Club of Fort Benning closed out 1978 with their annual banquet at the Torch Supper Club in Phenix City on Jan. 26, 1979.

The primary purpose of the affair was to honor the top 1978 fishermen in the club. The top ten awardees were: Bob Billman, Bob Babcock, Carlos Sellers, John Campbell, Don Henderson, Pat Huan, Henry Ferris, Willy Goble, Jack Tibbs Sr. and Harold Harris.

For finishing in first place, Bob Billman was awarded the Fisherman of the Year Award, a handsome wall plaque, and $50 cash. He also caught the biggest bass during the year's club competitions and received another plaque and $50 cash as the prize.

Don Henderson, president of the club, announced that a team consisting of Bob Billman, Carlos Sellers, John Campbell, Don Henderson, Henry Ferris, and Willy Goble would be representing Fort Benning in the Georgia Bass Chapter Federation Classic to be held on West Point Lake. The competition will begin on April 27 and run thru May 1, 1979.

The Fort Benning team finished third in Georgia last year, and this year looks even better since the tournament is being held on a familiar lake.

All-Army teams a big opportunity

Sports-minded personnel interested in athletic competition have a chance at the 'big time' with the All-Army teams.

The All-Army trial camp program gets under way Jan. 27 - with the men's basketball trials at Presidio, San Francisco. The men's trials end March 3.

Other trials include:

- basketball-women: Jan. 27-March 3, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.
- boxing-men: Feb. 1- March 30, Fort Meade, Md.
- wrestling-men: Feb. 1- March 16, Fort Devens, Mass.
- team handball-men: April 8 - May 2, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.
- track and field - men and women: April 7 - June 5, Presidio, San Francisco
- volleyball-men: April 28 - May 17, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.
- volleyball-women: April 28 - May 17, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.
- triathlon-men and women: May 12-19, Fort Sam Houston, Texas (All-Army elimination-major command teams)
- softball-slow pitch, men: July 21-August 15, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.
- softball-fast pitch, women: July 17-August 11, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

- softball-fast pitch, men: August 12-Sept. 5, to be announced

- archery-men and women: July 21-Aug. 3, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. (All-Army eliminations-major command teams)

- tennis-men and women: July 15-28, Fort Eustis, Va.

- golf-men and women: August 12-25, Fort Ord, Calif.

- bowling-men and women: May 12-17, to be announced

In addition to the trials, the Army will host four intersevice championships:

- women's basketball: March 4-10, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

- track and field-men and women: June 6-9, Presidio, San Francisco

- triathlon-men and women: June 6-9, Presidio, San Francisco

- women's softball: Aug. 12-17, Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Soldiers interested in the All-Army trial camps should call Sports Director Ralph Santaliz at 544-4516. Information on the application forms to be used is found in AR 28-1.

Soldiers must submit applications through their unit commanders, not directly to Headquarters, Department of the Army.

VA Q&A

Q — Is there any time limit on when a veteran's widow must apply for burial allowance?

A — Application for burial allowance must be made within two years after the veteran's burial or cremation.

Q — Did the Veterans Housing Benefits Act of 1978 increase the amount of loan guaranty?

A — The maximum home loan guaranty was increased from $17,500 to $25,000. The law provides for a guaranty not to exceed 60% of the amount of the loan, or $25,000, whichever is less. The effective date of this provision was Oct. 1, 1978.

Q — Is it possible for the Veterans Administration to issue a burial flag after the veteran's burial?

A — Flags will not be issued subsequent to burial except where circumstances render it impossible to obtain a flag in time to drape the casket of a deceased veteran prior to final interment.

Q — I receive education benefits under the war Orphan's Act. Will my marriage terminate these benefits?

A — Marriage does not affect entitlement to education benefits provided under the War Orphan's Act.

Some vets get "come first" medical care

The Veterans Administration has sent letters to veterans with service-connected disabilities and health problems telling them they will "come first" when seeking medical care at VA hospitals and clinics across the country.

It is the first phase of a new priority care program for service-connected veterans being implemented at all VA hospitals and clinics under the personal supervision of VA Administrator Max Cleland.

Under current legislation, veterans seeking care for service-connected health problems are supposed to receive priority service in VA hospitals admissions and outpatient treatment areas. During the last decade, however, the VA's outpatient workload has more than tripled. Under this tremendous workload, Cleland said, the service-connected veteran sometimes becomes "just another face in the crowd." Service-connected veterans make up only 30 percent of the VA's current outpatients business.

The new VA priority care system will identify all service-connected veterans using VA health care facilities with special ID cards and medical files which will mark them for the front of the line during hospital and clinic visits. The VA is asking such veterans to contact their local VA hospital or clinic and get their new service-connected care cards.

In addition to speeding service for those requiring care for service-connected injury or illness, Cleland claims the new uniform priority system will help VA hospitals serve all veterans more efficiently.

"Feedback from those hospitals that have already implemented this priority system shows that the effort to establish priorities in admissions and outpatient services makes the entire procedure more efficient," he said. "When first things are put first, everything runs more smoothly."

more violations written. People need to be aware of this. There are more than 282 square miles of Ft. Benning, Ga and we are going to cover them," he said.

This is not Sgt. Maj. Ouellette's first tour of duty at Fort Benning. He first served here in 1958 through 1960 with the 69th Armour as a unit clerk and instructor on Sand Hill. His next tour came after he was awarded the Purple Heart for the wounds he received in the DMZ in 1970.

He got out of combat arms in 1971 and came here in March of that year.

While here he was selected to be NCOIC, 197th Correctional Custody Facility (CCF). He set up and administered the facility at its present location until early 1974 — when he switched to the Main Post CCF. His last tour here ended in August 1974.

Air Force honors post Army aviator

By John M. Brown

An Army aviator assigned to the 478th Aviation Company became the first Lawson Airfield-based pilot to fly a high performance military jet aircraft while on active Army flight status.

The satisfaction of a lifelong desire came Jan. 28 for CW3 Lyle Real. The flight was arranged by Air Force 1st Lt. John M. Brown, Benning's chief forecaster, of Det 10, 5th Weather Squadron (also at Lawson Field) as a part of the detachment's recent Career Motivation Day activities. The event was held at Dannelly Field, Montgomery, Ala. — home of the 187th Tactical Reconnaissance Group (Alabama Air National Guard).

Flight was "Super!"

Real was recently noted by Det 10 for his transmission of 117 pilot reports (PIREPS) of needed weather information to Fort Benning forecasters during CY78.

"Mr. Real's extensive cooperation in relaying valuable weather information to us during the year was purely voluntary. He values quality weather services and provides constant updates concerning the accuracy of our forecasts of in-flight conditions," said Brown. "Only with this type of information are we able to say with complete certainty that our forecasts and advisories are valid. Mr. Real did us a great favor in 1978, and the F-4 ride was the least the Air Force could do for him," he added.

The flight was coordinated through Alabama Air National Guard Colonels Turnipseed and Tyus, the Deputy Commander for Operations and Director of Operations of the 187th. Maj. Crum, 187th Information Officer, provided Real and the 14-person tour group a four-hour presentation of the Dannelly Field unit and its various functions.

When asked how he enjoyed his flight, Real replied, "Super! We were at 3,000 feet almost immediately after we left the ground. Our mission was to fly to Lawson Field, shoot several approaches, and then perform training maneuvers for a total of one hour and 10 minutes. We peaked at 600 knots, and performed several aileron and barrel rolls.

Acclaimed by commander

"I flew the aircraft on much of the flight and it was quite an experience! As I turned 30 the next day, it made a tremendous birthday present. I am extremely grateful to the 187th for allowing me to participate in the mission. My pilot in the RF-4C was Maj. Greer — a full-time 727 pilot and he's a real professional. The 187th is perhaps the most impressive organization I have ever toured. I would love to do it again."

Acclaimed by Lt. Col. Millard Burke, Lawson Airfield Commander, as one of the finest Army aviators on Fort Benning, Real has 11 years of aviation service and totals 5600 hours flight time. He has flown the UH-1, OH-58, CH-54, T-42, and C-12 aircraft, with 3100 in rotary wing aircraft and 2500 in fixed wing.

Real is scheduled for PCS reassignment in July to Europe. Commemorating his year of support to Det 10, 5th Weather Squadron, under the command of newly-arrived Capt. Gibson Morris, Jr., Real will be awarded a Letter of Appreciation and distinctive plaque in a ceremony to be held later this spring.

27th Patterson Award to be given

By R. W. Buterbaugh

2nd Lt. James Gerald Thyne Jr. will receive the 27th Annual Patterson Award in a ceremony at Marshall Auditorium Monday at 11 a.m.

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson will present the award, assisted by Maj. Gen. James F. Hamlet, Deputy Inspector General, DA, and Post Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey.

The Patterson Award is presented annually on or about Feb. 12, the birthdate of Judge Patterson. Mrs. Patterson has traveled from New York these past 26 years to personally present an engraved pistol, trophy, and monetary award to the recipient. Her guests rank among the highest civilian and military leaders of the country.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 to honor the memory of the late Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson, and his service as an Infantry officer.

Patterson rose to the rank of captain while serving in the U.S. Army during WWI. For his actions in France, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star and Purple Heart.

Patterson continued his public service after his discharge as a Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as Secretary of War.

Following the plane crash which killed Judge Patterson in 1952, a group of his friends and admirers, headed by Mr. Winthrop Rockefeller and General Julius Adler, established the award.

The award honors the outstanding Infantry graduate of the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course who was rated as possessing the highest qualities of leadership, academic efficiency, aptitude, and character. The awardee should exemplify the principles upon which Judge Patterson based his life — hard work, personal integrity, and a high love of country.

The 26 Patterson Award winners are:

Drug abuse: recognizing personal problems first step in finding solution to drug dependency

Recognizing our own problems is the vital first step towards solving them. It is perhaps the largest single challenge that we face as human beings. Getting "outside" yourself long enough to take a good look "back in" is difficult at best. In the case of problems caused by alcohol or drugs, this difficulty is multiplied. It can, however, be overcome.

Self-honesty is critical

The ability to be completely honest with yourself is a critical necessity in solving your own problems. Self-honesty is often the most difficult thing in the world to practice.

We have all made a great emotional investment in the building of our self-image. Such a large investment that even the tiniest "crack" in the structure can be as painful as a broken bone. yet, if you can identify or create such "cracks" yourself and proceed to repair them on your own, the structure of self-image becomes stronger and sounder than ever before.

Identify your problems

Granting self-honesty, the process of identifying your own problems with alcohol and drug becomes relatively simple. It is necessary to ask yourself only three questions, remembering all the while to be unfailingly honest in your response.

The first, "Is my use of alcohol/drugs exacting a greater price in terms of my physical health than I am willing to pay for the pleasure it provides me? Unfortunate as it may be, the human body is a non-expendable item, not available for reissue. While it has a tremendous capability for self-repair, it is all too easy to overtax that capability with drugs or alcohol. And, once it breaks down, it is often impossible to repair.

Second, "Is my use of alcohol/drugs adversely affecting my relationships with people I care about?" Except for a tiny number of reclusive individuals, we all require closeness to and approval from our family, friends and supervisors for vital emotional and professional nourishment. When people lose this nourishment through the use of alcohol or drugs they often begin to use more in order to dull the pains of the loss. A vicious circle is created from which the individual is powerless to escape, until he recognizes that the root of the problem is in he change in himself, caused by its use.

Third, "Is my use of alcohol/drugs hurting my job performance?" Unless you expect to win a sweepstakes or inherit a substantial sum of money it is necessary to keep a job to provide the basic necessities of life. Anything which threatens your job threatens those means by which you make a living. All too often, alcohol or drug abuse can cost you all of your living.

If you can honestly answer all of the above questions with a "NO", then the chances are very good that you have an excellent relationship to whatever drugs you choose to use.

It is wise to remember, however, that nearly all drugs except alcohol, tobacco and caffeine are illegal. The penalty you may pay for use of illegal drugs can often be that of obtaining new social status as a convicted criminal.

Assistance available

If you get an honest "YES" answer to any of the three questions above, you stand a good chance of needing assistance with a very sticky problem. That assistance can be obtained by visiting or calling the Benning House, Bldg. 2212, at 545-5964/4891 or the Alcohol and Drug Control Office, Bldg. 2215, at 545-5880/5774.

All such inquiries are treated in the strictest medical confidence.

Drills instructed

By Donald Carr

Before drill sergeants of the 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade present classes to their trainees, all instructors must be certified. This certification program is called "Train the Trainer."

The foundation for the program starts many months before the drill sergeant presents his first class. Following a quality screening by the personnel managers of Enlisted Personnel Management Division at Alexandria, Va., qualified drill sergeant candidates are assigned to their prospective units.

Once assigned, they have the opportunity to watch certified drill sergeants prepare and present their instruction. Within 30 days, the candidate departs Fort Benning for six weeks of intensive training at Fort Knox, Ky. or Fort Jackson, S.C. Upon the successful completion of drill sergeants school, the graduates become recognized drill sergeants.

Even though qualified to wear the "hat", drill sergeants still must be certified to present every class. Senior drills, first sergeants, and company commanders provide coaching assistance in the preparation and rehearsal evaluation. When the company commander is satisfied the objectives are being met, a certification or "murder" board is scheduled.

Members of the board are either the battalion commander, executive officer, or command sergeant major and a subject matter expert from Brigade. If the board determines that the class has been presented correctly, the drill sergeant receives a "GO" or certification for that block of instruction.

The final product of the "Train the Trainer" program is that the drill sergeant is confident of his method of instruction and subject matter expertise. At the same time, trainees receive expertly presented classes by true professionals, the certified drill sergeants of the Infantry Training Brigade.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Glad you asked

Should your Officer in Charge (OIC) be as proficient as you are pertaining to your job?

Spec. 4 Marjorie Rickling,
608th Ord Co, 67th Maint Bn

I think he should have a general idea of the section that he's responsible for, but not in great detail. The NCOIC will take care of all the job-related problems that arise.

Spec. 4 Richard A. Brockelbank,
HHC, 36th Engr Gp

It depends on the job. I work in a construction section and my OIC should know just as much, if not more, because he oversees everything.

Sgt. James Henyard,
988th MP Co

Yes, because most of them don't understand the job to its fullest. By that, I mean getting out and observing exactly what the people in the sections are doing on their various jobs.

Spec. 4 Melvin Morrison,
Hq Co Hq Cmd

I believe my OIC should be more knowledgeable about my job than I am and, if I need guidance, I should be able to approach him or her for it.

Exchange service decreases losses

Exchange service officials say that improved security programs have substantially lowered losses over the last three years.

Losses from robbery have decreased by 86 percent, burglary losses are down 62 percent, and losses from other larcenies have been reduced by 72 percent, according to officials.

Detectives in Army and Air Force Exchanges detained more than 11,500 shoplifters last year, according to exchange officials.

The detectives were also responsible for uncovering more than 1,500 incidents of employee theft last year, involving nearly a half million dollars in pilfered merchandise.

VA Q&A

Q — What is the Veterans Administration's definition of a "helpless child"?

A — A helpless child is a child who becomes permanently incapable of self-support due to a mental or physical defect before reaching age 18.

Q — Is there any time limit on when a veteran's widow must apply for burial allowance?

A — Application for burial allowance must be made within two years after the veteran's burial or cremation.

Q — Did the Veterans Housing Benefits Act of 1978 increase the amount of loan guaranty?

A — The maximum home loan guaranty was increased from $17,500 to $25,000. The law provides for a guaranty not to exceed 60% of the amount of the loan, or $25,000, whichever is less. The effective date of this provision was Oct. 1, 1978.

Q — I am the widow of a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. My husband never used the government home loan benefit provided for such veterans. Am I entitled to his loan?

A — You are only if your husband died as a result of a service-connected disability incurred during his World War II or Korean service, and you are presently unmarried. The fact that your husband may or may not have obtained a GI loan would not affect your entitlement to this benefit. Contact the VA regional office or veterans service organization in your area for specific information.

Q — I held on to the National Service Life Insurance term policy after WWII. Is it true that if I continue to hold this policy during my older years it could cost me as much as $554 a month for this $10,000 policy?

A — That's correct. Term insurance while you're young is excellent, inexpensive coverage. As you grow older, the cost increases dramatically. You may convert to a permanent plan which will build cash reserves, and the premium will not increase in cost with age. Check with your nearest VA regional office.

Q — I served in World War II. Is it true that I may be entitled to a VA pension in addition to my Social Security now that I am 65 years of age?

A — You may be entitled to a VA pension, but only if you have limited income and assets. You should contact your nearest VA regional office for information and assistance in making application.

Dental hints

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of six articles on dental health published by the BAYONET, in cooperation with the Ft. Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 4-10.

We recently moved to a post which does not offer dental care to dependents and would like some advice on locating a family dentist.

Choosing a family dentist is no easy task. You are wise not to wait until an emergency strikes to start your search. Because dental care is such a personal service, you may want to visit several dentists before selecting one that you are comfortable with and find easy to talk to. Keep in mind that a dentist in general practice is fully qualified to provide all routine care. Some parents may prefer to take their youngsters to a pedodontist who specializes in the treatment of children.

How do you locate the right dentist?

- Inquire at a nearby hospital with an accredited dental service;
- Ask faculty members of dental schools in your area for recommendations;
- Check the "ADA Directory" listing the names of practitioners by city and state at the public library;
- Consult your family physician or local pharmacist;
- Ask friends, neighbors or co-workers — in whom you have confidence — for recommendations of dentists they are pleased with.

Once you have the names of several reputable dentists, call each for an appointment. Explain that you are attempting to select a family dentist.

Don't be embarrassed to ask questions. You can learn a great deal in an initial office visit.

Is the location of the office convenient? How available is the appointment schedule? Is the general appearance of the office and staff neat, clean and orderly?

Is the dentist, prevention oriented?

Does the dentist seem to take an interest in you and your family's health? Is a record of your medical and dental history taken for file to assist in the evaluation of future needs?

What arrangements are made to handle emergencies outside of office hours? Is a back-up colleague or emergency referral service available?

What about the use of dental

X-rays in diagnosis?

Finally, don't hesitate to ask the dentist about fees and any other financial arrangements that might be required.

Naturally it is impossible to give a hard-and-fast set of rules for assessing quality dental care — primarily because individual patient needs vary. But a good experience with dentistry starts with the right choice of a family practitioner. The individual patient does have considerable control over his own oral health and the cost of dental care.

250 top E-6's to get recruiting duty

Two hundred fifty "Top quality" E-6's will receive nonvoluntary, three-year assignments as Army recruiters, MILPERCEN officials said recently.

DA officials ordered the selections on a test basis to compensate for what they termed "a decline in ... qualified NCO volunteers" for recruiting duty.

The selection of E-6's (both NCO's and specialists) for recruiting duty began today, MILPERCEN officials said, and should be completed later this month.

Soldiers selected for recruiting duty will be notified by mail early in January, MILPERCEN officials explained. They added that 50 of the 250 selected soldiers will begin five weeks of training at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., on March 1. Training for other reclassified soldiers will begin every two weeks thereafter as course openings allow.

Requirements necessary

Selection criteria being used to choose among E-6's, MILPERCEN officials say, requires soldiers to meet the following requirements:

- A. Be in grade E-6
- B. Minimum EERWA of 115.
- C. Minimum general technical aptitude (GT) of 110 or special technical test (ST) of 100.

- D. High School graduate or GED holder.
- E. At least 30 months remaining on current enlistment.
- G. 21-35 years old.
- G. Meet height, weight and physical standards.
- I. Be currently stationed in CONUS.

Restrictions listed

In addition to requirements used to select NCO's for recruiting duty, MILPERCEN officials add, there are numerous restrictions that will disqualify soldiers from selection. They are:

- A. Soldiers serving in CME 23, 33, and 98.
 - B. Soldiers serving in MOS D5D, D5G, D5H, D5K, 16J, and 17C
 - C. Soldiers now receiving a reenlistment bonus.
 - D. Soldiers who have been reclassified and have not completed minimum tours in their current MOS.
 - E. Drill sergeants who are stabilized.
 - F. Soldiers with more than 12 years of active service.
 - G. Soldiers with more than four dependents.
 - H. Soldiers who are sole parents.
- MILPERCEN officials remarked that most of the NCO's picked for recruiting duty (40 percent) will come from combat support branches, fewer will come from combat service support branches (35 percent) and the smallest number will come from combat arms branches (25 percent).

Advantages of serving as a recruiter, MILPERCEN officials stressed, include a three-year stabilization in the job with an option for qualified recruiters to extend. And, they add, recruiters (MOS OOE) enjoyed a 30.7 percent selection rate to E-7, compared to a 17.4 percent Army average, from the last E-7 board.

Because the Army has an estimated need for about 1,700 new recruiters this year, MILPERCEN officials say, volunteers are still needed. Officials are encouraging soldiers (primarily E-6's, but also E-5's and E-7's) to volunteer for the MOS through reclassification (AR 601-1) or as a reenlistment option (AR 601-280).

DA officials said the reclassifications into recruiting is being described as a test because officials will closely monitor selected soldiers in the areas of attitude, abilities and personnel turbulence, before any possible additional reclassifications are made. (ARNEWS)

MAH: the battle for life

By James E. Knisley

10 p.m.: A man suffering from chest pain enters the emergency room, accompanied by his wife, daughter and son-in-law. While being examined, the patient's heart stops. CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) is performed as the patient is rushed to the Cardiac Care Unit (CCU).

In CCU a team of three doctors, three nurses and two medics enters the battle with death. The battlefield is a 58-year-old man with a history of cardiac ailments suffering from congestive heart failure. It has only been five weeks since his last attack.

After several injections are given, the defibrillator (that ominous contraction of lights, wires and paddles we see so much on EMERGENCY) is brought into use. The monitor shows that the heartbeat has been restored.

The attending physician straightens and starts to smile . . . "Damn, he is in arrest again." The patient's heart has failed to continue beating. CPR is restarted, it is going to be a long fight.

Chaplain notified

The hospital Chaplain, notified of the serious condition of the patient, offers spiritual aide and comfort to the patient's family.

11 p.m.: A sense of urgency prevades the room. Four times the patient's heart has stopped, four times the heartbeat has been restored.

The drip . . . drip of the IV is accentuated by staccato bursts of orders from the attending physician. Each order is followed by a flurry of activity from the other members of the team.

Lab results from blood samples drawn earlier are handed to one of the doctors.

A medic catheterizes the patient in order to monitor fluid outflow.

Another doctor makes an incision and places a tube into the patient's windpipe to insure that enough oxygen enters the lungs.

Family holds vigil

The patient's family holds a lonely vigil in the waiting room. Reddened eyes, tear-streaked cheeks and clenched-whitened knuckles are all they have to offer the rapidly approaching new day.

MIDNIGHT: The patient's heart has stopped twice again in the last hour. The first time the patient's heart responded readily to the application of the defibrillator.

One doctor, back, shoulders and arms aching, is relieved by another. The effort of continuing the CPR is exhausting. But, continue it must in order to keep the body supplied with blood and oxygen.

A sense of urgency

Again the command "ALL CLEAR" is heard as the defibrillator is applied. The patient shivers as the electric charge courses through his heart. The monitor shows the telltale peaks of a restored heartbeat.

The heart has stopped six times and the expert reactions of the team have turned back the tide of death six times. But even as they continue to work on the patient, death stealthily reapproaches in the guise of a heart that is just too tired to continue.

For the seventh time, the light on the monitor screen travels in a straight line. Again the immediate burst of activity as the team attempts every available method to restore life.

The tide of death

00:30 a.m.: This time death has won. The weakened heart could not respond. The team walks away leaving a medic to disconnect the machinery and prepare the body for the morgue.

The attending physician walks into the waiting room to inform the family.

The administrative officer gathers the necessary paperwork and tells the family that he will make arrangements to have the remains transported to the mortuary of their choice.

A time for reflection

The doctors, nurses and medics sit in the break room. This is the first time any of them has been off their feet since it started. Each mentally goes over the proceedings to see what they might have learned that could affect a future case. Each hopes that there will not be another case tonight.

Death wins

Exhausted, stiff and saddened by the death of a patient they fought so hard to save, each one of these professionals will be back at work tomorrow. So, if you see a doctor, nurse or medic who seems hurried and abrupt, don't get mad, just step aside and smile, they may be on the way to A BATTLE WITH DEATH.

Future 197th commander promoted

By Pat Brown

"He's done all the things an Infantry officer should do," said Fort Benning commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey as he promoted Col. Michael F. Spigelmire to his present rank earlier this week, "and he understands soldiers very well."

Spigelmire, who has served as deputy director of Combat Developments, U.S. Army Infantry Center since July 1978, will assume command of the 197th Inf Bde Mar. 19, replacing Col. James R. Hall who has commanded the Brigade since September 1977. Lt. Col. Charles H. Jackson Sr. has been named as Spigelmire's replacement, serving under Col. Stanley T. Skaife, director, Combat Developments.

Started as Reservist

Spigelmire entered active duty in 1960 as a Reserve Officer Training Corps Distinguished Military Graduate from Loyola College in Baltimore, Md. After attending Basic, Airborne and Ranger courses here, he was assigned to Germany for four and a half years where he served in company and division level positions and with Special Forces.

After returning here for the Advanced Infantry Officers Course, he commanded Company C, and was battalion adjutant of the 2nd Battalion, 8th Cavalry (Airborne) in Vietnam.

Instructed at Benning

Another tour as instructor at Fort Benning was followed by a second tour in Vietnam as a district Senior Advisor. After attending Command and General Staff College and Georgetown Graduate School, he was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, Department of the Army, and subsequently to the Office of the Army Chief of Staff, where he first became acquainted with Maj. Gen. Livsey.

Returning to duty with the troops, Spigelmire was executive officer of the 2nd Brigade (Blackjack) and commanding officer of the 5th Battalion, 7th Cavalry and of the 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry (Brigade 75), 1st Cavalry Division, Fort Hood, Tex. This was followed by attendance at the U.S. Army War College in 1978.

Spigelmire's decorations and awards include the Bronze Star with "V" Device, Meritorious Service Award, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with "V" Device, Purple Heart, Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm, Vietnam Armed Forces Honor Medal and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Commenting on his upcoming command, Spigelmire stated that he is "looking forward to returning to working with soldiers and to continue to improve the present good reputation of the Brigade."

Command is pinnacle

He continued, "At this stage of my career, this new command is a pinnacle."

Spigelmire resides at 411 Baltzell Ave. with his wife, the former Linda Diane Cast of Columbus. They have a nine-year-old son, Christopher, who is a student at Dexter Elementary School on post.

Col. Michael F. Spigelmire, who assumes command of the 197th Infantry Brigade next month, briefs Lt. Col. Charles H. Jackson Sr., who will replace him as deputy director, Combat Developments, U.S. Army Infantry Center.

PX offering catalog sales

The Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is one of 37 Continental United States (CONUS) stores that is offering the over-the-counter program that allows customers to order merchandise from the AAFES catalog for delivery to the exchange, saving mailing and insurance charges and insuring quicker delivery.

The program which is less than six months old, began on a test basis in two exchanges in June, and customers quickly accepted the convenience of placing and picking up their merchandise orders at the exchange.

AAFES expanded the program to 35 additional exchanges, and sales surpassed every expectation — so much so that some out-of-stocks have been reported. However, AAFES is developing an improved automated inventory management system, and shortages in the increasingly popular program should be eliminated shortly.

"We are extremely pleased that customers have accepted this new program and are taking advantage of the quick, easy and less expensive methods of purchasing AAFES catalog merchandise," stated Jerry Robinson, Benning shopping center manager. "Our staff will do everything possible to expedite the orders when they are received from the AAFES catalog warehouse, and we ask for the understanding of our customers while we make these adjustments to what is proving to be a very popular extension of the catalog program."

524th conducts training exercise for annual tests

By John Bayless

The 524th Personnel Company was involved a field training exercise (FTX) this month.

The FTX, held from Jan. 30-Feb. 1, involved approximately 100 individuals, and was commanded by Capt. John M. Smith.

The main emphasis was placed in camouflage, perimeter security, noise and light discipline and CBR training.

Trenches were dug around all tents and un-turned earth placed on the tent edges to control noise and light.

Despite the drizzling rain and severe cold the company performed a 20-mile tactical road march by vehicle with tops removed while an ambush with aggressors also took place.

The company will return to the field in April to exercise what they have learned in the FTX.

The purpose of these FTXs is to prepare for the annual Army Readiness Training Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

Greenery beautifies Columbus

Mayor Jackson of Columbus will proclaim Feb. 16, 1979 Arbor Day which is an annual tree-planting day for the beautification of our community and the forestation for empty tracts of land.

Greater Columbus is directing and coordinating an effort to beautify the city by making available seedling trees. Georgia Kraft Company is providing 20,000 seedlings consisting of Dogwood, Live Oak, Red Bud, Red Maple, Virginia Pine, White Pine and Cyprus.

Free variety packs of seedling will be given away at Columbus Square and Peachtree Mall on Saturday, Feb. 19, beginning at 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

AAFES returns earnings

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) returns the major portion of earnings every year to the Morale and Recreational Funds of the Army and the Air Force. These services use the funds in support of libraries, chapel activities, swimming pools and other athletic programs, dayroom operations and unit funds.

Over the past 20 years more than $1.2 billion has been paid to these funds, representing 79 percent of AAFES's earnings. The dividends represent essentially all earnings not used to build new exchange facilities and expand merchandise selections for the benefit of the airmen and soldiers and their families.

Post program insures worker safety

By Betty Zimmerman

The Occupational Health Program is a personalized and industrial hygiene program under MEDDAC's Preventive Medicine Activity.

Its purpose is to see that all post personnel are physically and mentally suited to the work environment and that their physical and mental health are maintained during their service or employment.

Success in this department means less productive time loss and economic loss as a result of occupationally related disability, illness or injury.

Ms. Barbara Murrin's staff of four civilians accomplishes this through special knowledge and skills in the fields of industrial hygiene, health education, safety counseling, environmental health, safety and epidemic disease analysis.

Routine checks, work-site inspections, detailed industrial hygiene and occupational health surveys and close contact with other related offices help them maintain a continually updated inventory of health hazards such as:

- Toxic chemicals
- Radiation sources
- Industrial operations
- Noise hazardous equipment and areas
- Eye hazardous equipment and areas
- Respiratory hazards

For example, when their inspections turn up a hazard, they first try to eliminate it. If that's not possible, then they show the workers how to protect themselves. Sometimes they are also able to show the workers easier as well as safer ways to get the work done.

Part of their time is spent convincing the Nurse Corps celebrating anniversary

The Army Nurse Corps (ANC) was officially established as a part of the Army Medical Service by Congress early in 1901.

The history of military nurses goes back to the War for Independence and continued in the Civil War. But it wasn't until the Spanish-American War that the use of professional nurses became commonplace.

Woman laid foundation

Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, as acting Assistant Surgeon General in charge of the Army Nurse Division in the Spanish-American War (1898-1900), laid the foundation for the Army Nurse Corps.

McGee knew the nursing profession leaders felt the Corps director should be a nurse. Therefore, she selected Mrs. Dita H. Kinney as the first Superintendent of the ANC.

Thus from 200 members in 1901, the Corps has expanded to 3,824 present members. Of course, the numbers fluctuate constantly depending on whether it is war or peace time.

There are 69 ANC members stationed at Martin Army Hospital. The Nursing Department Chief is Col. Juanita M. Atchison. These registered nurses, men and women, as all ANC members, have earned B.S. degrees in Nursing.

Second lieutenants first

Those right out of college enter the Army as second lieutenants. Others with specialized training or additional experience may enter at a higher rank. Nurses do not get any additional pay and their promotions are subject to the same guidelines as any other officer.

There are many different duties an Army nurse may perform. Some of these include: clinical staff nurses, as inpatient or outpatient medical care providers; head nurses, as managers; nurse practitioners, as physician extenders; section chiefs on all hospital wards; nurse specialists, such as infection control of the entire hospital; operating room nurses; and nursing education and training.

Education extensive

The education and training field is extensive. At MAH, nurses are responsible for training medical corpsmen and operating room specialists in their second phase of schooling with on-the-job training. They must also provide continuous training for all hospital nursing personnel, both professional and para-professional, civilians and military.

For example, the entire hospital staff is now being taught basic cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) by the Nursing Department's training division.

Atchison stated, "I am most fortunate in that all my nurses do an exceptional job and have a beautiful attitude. They are an entirely professional staff committed to their chosen field."

Capt. Carol J. Witter, surgical nurse in MAH's operating room, prepares sutures for the physicians who are performing heart surgery. She must keep a ready supply of surgical instruments during the entire procedure.

Capt. Mary Maynard says one of her most pleasant duties in the newborn nursery is feeding the babies. Stephanie Ann Gregory enjoys the loving care as much as the nourishment.

As head nurse of the orthopedic ward, Capt. Bernice Dority is responsible for maintaining accurate records on each patient.

Maj. Lowell Dollander, head nurse of the emergency room, prepares to sew up a cut on Steven Veve's mouth. Men make up about 26 percent of the Army Nurse Corps.

New program keeps post informed

There's a new way you can keep up with Command Information — it's called WFBG, and now it can be seen on post Alert Cable TV Channel 13, between 7:15 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

WFBG will present news programs, music and information designed to keep the soldier and his/her family aware of what's happening at Fort Benning and throughout the Army. You can find out each week's programming schedule by checking the BAYONET.

We invite all comments and suggestions as to how we can improve our programming and any additional programs you'd like to see. For comments or information call 545-7391/2791

Suggestion campaign underway

By Seth Hamilton

Fort Benning will be conducting a special suggestion campaign called "Operation ESP" (Elimination of Stale Procedures) during the month of February. The campaign will be coordinated with the Army Suggestion Program on all TRADOC posts.

The main purpose of Operation ESP is to encourage Army personnel, both military and civilian, to question procedures, steps, SOP's, etc. The idea of the campaign is to get the employees to ask themselves, "Why do I do this? Can this step be eliminated? Is there a more efficient way of doing this?" and most importantly, to allow the employees to share their answers to these questions with management through the Army Suggestion Program.

Operation ESP, which began Feb. 1, will continue through Feb. 28. The campaign will have the full support of unit commanders, directors, department and activity heads, managers and supervisors. Full participation by all personnel is encouraged.

There are cash awards for suggestions which are used. The Department of the Army pays the employee a certain percentage of the total amount saved as a result of the suggestion. For instance, last year at Benning from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, more than $2,000 was paid out for suggestions which saved the Army more than $92,000 in that same three-month period.

Anyone who thinks they have a useful suggestion should fill out DA Form 1045. The form can be obtained through normal publication channels or by contacting Betty Frankovitch of the Civilian Personnel Office at 545-4483. Completed forms should be turned in at the Civilian Personnel Office, Room 133, Bldg. 35.

The Army's greatest asset is the imagination and creativity of its military and civilian work force. It is the purpose of Operation ESP to tap this valuable resource.

worker how important it is for him or her to wear their ear plugs, eye protection or face masks. All the safety devices in the world are no good if they are not used or used properly.

The staff works closely with the Environmental Management Branch, the Community Health Nursing Section and the Physical Exam Section.

Another responsibility is to oversee pre-placement, fitness for duty and disability retirement medical exams. They insure that the exams performed are specific to the job requirements. They also conduct periodic medical monitoring for each occupationally related hazardous ex-posure.

The Occupational Health Section works closely with Civilian Personnel concerning establishment of new employee health records and job related examinations, such as vision and hearing tests.

The Management Employee Relations Branch consults them in reference to supervisor, union or employee management disputes that involve health and safety related problems.

Yet another aspect of their job is in-service education on safety topics, such as classes at the Basic Supervisor's Course and unit safety meetings.

Doughboys finally lose one

By Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning express was finally derailed last Saturday as the Fort McClellan Blues topped the Doughboys 89-76 in the second game of their weekend series. The Doughboys had nipped the Blues 82-81 the night before for their 21st straight victory before Saturday's loss.

In Friday's game, the Doughboys once again used a balanced attack as six players finished with double scoring figures. The Blues kept it close throughout the game as they showed they are a much improved team from when they last met the Doughboys. The Doughboys scored repeatedly from the inside as their quickness kept the Blues off balance.

Leading the Doughboys was Charlie Jackson with 20 points, followed by Rick Donnell and Steve Mims with 15, Larry Varnedo with 12, Tim Haycliff with 11 and Frederick Nelson with 10.

The Doughboys let victory slip from their grasp in Saturday's game as they blew a couple of early leads and ended up on the short end of the 89-76 final score. They had jumped out ahead of the Blues early by an 18-2 margin but the scrappy McClellan team fought back to keep it close. The Doughboys went into the locker room with a 46-42 halftime lead, and judging from their past performances it seemed the Doughboys would soon wrap up their 22nd consecutive win.

The Doughboys ran into some bad luck in the second half. The Blues went to the free throw line 37 times. Coach Tony Resino felt that the excessive foul shots for the Blues was a major factor in breaking the Doughboy's momentum in the second half, but he added, "We needed a game like this to show us that it will take 110% effort in every game if we want to win the TRADOC championship.

Rick Donnell hit on 18 points for the Doughboys, with Fredrick Nelson close behind at 16. Tony Haycliff added 11 points.

The Doughboys play out of their conference this weekend on the road against two FORSCOM teams. Friday they visit Fort McPherson and Saturday they'll be at Fort Campbell to take on the Eagles. The Eagles are considered to be one of the top teams in their conference.

Orienteers needed

The Fort Benning Orienteering Club is currently looking for people to join their ranks. Orienteering is a unique sport which combines elements of cross-country running with map and compass reading.

Orienteering taxes the mind as well as the body. Participants run a course through the woods using maps and a compass to reach the finish line. The courses range from one and a half miles for the beginner to 14 miles for the elite orienteer.

Anyone interested in more information can contact club representatives by calling 545-5754/4214 or by visiting Rm. 454, Bldg. 4.

DYA needs coaches

Fort Benning Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) is looking for men and women who would like to coach youth soccer teams at Fort Benning. Anyone interested can sign up at the DYA, Bldg. 1054, or call 545-3070 Monday thru Friday.

Cadets sweep match

The Baker High School JROTC varsity rifle team won the Tamco-JROTC Rifle Match held Jan. 20 in Tampa, Fla. at the Tampa Police Pistol and Rifle Range.

The team, coached by John Gerstenschlager, placed first by scoring 1206 out of a possible 1500 points. Spencer High School Cadet David Cannella was the high individual shooter for the match with a score of 258 out of 300.

The Spencer team, coached by Gordon Burke, finished second in the competition with 1154 points. Kendrick High School came in third with 1116. The Kendrick showing completed a sweep of the annual event by Columbus area teams.

Soccer registration set

Registration for youth soccer at Fort Benning is currently under way. The youth soccer is sponsored by the Dependent Youth Activities (DYA). Youngsters between the ages of 6 and 17 can sign up at the DYA, Bldg. 1054, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Registration ends Feb. 15.

Registration fee is $10 for the first child in the family, $7.50 for the second, $5 for the third and anyone after that gets in for free. Youngsters must be accompanied by a parent and have proof of age (birth certificate, ID card or passport).

For more information, call 545-3070. First come, first served!

Anglers offered benefits

The MILITARY ANGLER, a sportsmen's magazine, is offering exclusive memberships for military members of the civil, reserve, retired and National Guard forces, plus civil service and veteran personnel.

The magazine offers the reader information on boating, hunting, shooting and camping. Membership also entitles the member to discounts on fishing tackle brochures as well as local and national bass fishing tournaments.

For further information call John Hester at 545-7723 or 689-6282.

Mr. Fort Benning Physique Contest

21 contestants vying for title

Pumping iron

Tony Concepcion, son of Sgt. Juan Concepcion of the 121st Avn Co gets ready for tomorrow's contest.

By Deb Hilgeman

Some of the best-looking bodies on Fort Benning will be "strutting their stuff" tomorrow night at the first Mr. Fort Benning Physique Contest at 7:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg 4.

The 21 contestants, ranging in age from 15-32 years, will be vying for the title after months of pumping iron, flexing biceps and stretching torsos.

The contest is open to soldiers or dependents who will be competing in either the Teenage, Novice or Open Class. Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each class.

Admission to the contest is free.

Five Atlanta Judges (one is chief AAU judge) and three local judges will be grading contestants in three areas: symmetry (overall body balance), muscularity (how much development) and presentation (poise, selection of trunks, skin preparation and posing).

The physique contest, sponsored by the Sports Office here, is being organized in part by Capt. James Grimes, Jr., who recently took charge of special projects for the Sports Office after serving as Chief of ROTC Affairs, Extension Training Management, DOT.

Grimes will also be competing in the contest and is the only contestant experienced in body-building competition. He became active in body-building about a year ago because he was "tired of being skinny."

The final days before a contest are extremely important, according to Grimes. "Diet is critical now. Ranger students are eating better than we are. Contestants can't even drink much water because it adds bloat," he explained.

Grimes knows of no other post having this type of competition. "It will be interesting to see how this is received," he said.

Golf series begins this week

By Seth Hamilton,
George Cliff and Ray Wells

This is the first segment of the BAYONET'S four-part series about golf. The article will give tips on various aspects of the game as well as common rule infractions and general courtesies on the course.

While the game of golf is much too involved to cover completely in four articles, we hope that this series will not only be informative to those already playing, but also serve to inspire those who have not yet begun.

Special thanks to George Cliff, golf pro at the Follow Me Golf Course, and Ray Wells, teaching pro at the club, for their assistance with these articles. These men are Class "A" PGA professionals and their advice has been invaluable.

The first sign of golf in the United States came in 1786 when a few Scottish men formed the South Carolina Golf Club in Charleston.

New ball invented

The game didn't seem to catch on until the 1830's. At that point a new ball had been invented to replace the old type which had been made partly of compressed feathers. The new ball caused an increased interest in golf and many Americans came out to try their hand at the strange new game.

In 1892, the Shinnecock Hills Country Club was founded in Long Beach, Calif. This was the first golf course to have full clubhouse facilities. From that point on, golf caught on like wildfire as more than 1,000 new golf clubs were established between 1892 and 1900.

It was in the 1920's when golf was really coming into its own, that the game came to Fort Benning. Golf was so popular here, that at one point, Benning had 45 holes to offer the golf enthusiast. But late in 1976, the nine-hole course at Sand Hill was closed down and the former 36-hole officers course, The Fort Benning Country Club, was turned over to Recreation Services and the name changed to the Follow Me Golf Course.

By 1978, the Follow Me course had more than 600 full time members. During that same year, more than 60,000 rounds of golf were played on the course!

Object of game

Golf is an outdoor sport to be enjoyed by men and women, young and old. According to the rule books, the object of the game consists of, "playing a ball from the teeing ground to the hole by successive strokes in accordance with the rules."

That definition is only a rough outline of the game. The key words might be "in accordance with the rules," for anyone who has played before knows that golf is an involved game with many, many rules.

Upcoming articles

The next three articles will cover different aspects of the game. We have broken these down to: short game play, iron play and wood play. Along the way we will inject various rules and regulations, as well as important tips on golf etiquette. We will begin next week by covering the short game.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

Savannah Five-Kilometer Run February 10

"Run For Your Life"

Sixteen members of the United States Army Communications

Command (USACC), Air Traffic Control Branch received certificates of achievement in the "Run For Your Life" program here.

These soldiers work around the clock in shifts, seven days a week. They gained the awards spending their own time logging miles.

Those receiving the 100-mile patch were Wesley Basey, George White, Grady T. Gilbert, Roger Sigmon, Ronald Backes, Charles Dooner, Judy Wethington and William Wethington.

Those receiving the 50-mile patch were David A. Mineart, Paul Blackman, Virginia Fawcett, Alan Oppgaard, Richard Petty, Mark and Stephen Willett.

1,000-Mile Mark

Alan Hanson, assigned to Air Traffic Control USACC, has obtained the elite 1,000-mile patch in the "Run For Your Life" program. With the same dedication, Hanson hopes to reach the 2,000-mile mark soon.

The Jekyll Island Jaunt

February 24

The 25-kilometer (15.5 miles) Jekyll Island Jaunt will be Feb. 24 at 1 p.m. The race begins and ends in the south parking lot of the Convention Hall, Brunswick, Ga. The Jekyll Island Jaunt will also include a 2-mile novice run.

Trophies will go to the first place finishers in each age group and ribbons will go to the second and third place finishers.

Pre-registration is $2 for those who do not want T-shirts and $5 for those who do. Race day entry fee is one dollar more. For registration forms contact Julie Casey, Rm. 601, Infantry Hall.

Magic City Marathon February 24

The Magic City Marathon will be Feb. 24 at 10 a.m. in Birmingham, Ala. The course is relatively flat and fast. Certification is pending and is expected by race day. It is a loop course that begins at Woodrow Wilson Park in downtown Birmingham.

T-shirts will go to all runners and trophies will be awarded to age category winners.

Registration of $5 will be accepted until 9 a.m. on race day. For more information and entry forms, write to: Birmingham Magic City Marathon, c/o Birmingham JayCees, P.O. Box 10127, Birmingham, Ala. 35202.

CSM Gallagher: runner of the week

By Julie Casey

Stretching Out

Command Sgt. Maj. James Gallagher warms up before a run.

Show me a man who completed Airborne training at 45 and I'll show you Command Sgt. Maj. James Gallagher who has been running for nine years.

"I run to stay young," he commented, "It gave me a great deal of confidence to be running strong when those young officers were falling out around me."

Gallagher began running for distance in 1970 when Col. Willard Latham (now Maj. Gen. Latham) assumed command of the 197th Inf Bde.

"Latham started me running. At the time I didn't think much of the idea. I figured since I didn't run out of my first ambush in Vietnam, why should I run now? Of course now, I enjoy running and have a positive attitude," explained the 47-year-old gentleman.

Leaving the 197th, he went to Germany and continued to run long distances.

"I started my company in Germany running every day," he said laughing, "It just about killed them at first, but they got use to it."

He began traveling around to the various Volks Marches in Germany running 20- and 30-kilometer road races.

"I feel, the one thing this country needs, as far as the development of its running program, is a National Club like the one in Europe. They have the Volks Marches all over the country and publish a yearly calendar of events. They award medals and mile stones for miles logged," he commented.

The Volks Marches are not road races per se.

Most participants walk the distance, but Gallagher ran them.

As Command Sergeant Major of the Infantry School, Gallagher enjoys getting away at lunch time. "A run in the afternoon is like a re-charger. I really feel good after a run and shower," he explained.

Running his 35 miles a week, he figures that he probably ran about 10,000 miles wrong before he started reading and going to clinics.

"I didn't know how to run long distance," he emphasized, "I used to run like the football coach told us on my toes and leaning forward. That is fine for 45 yards. I also use to suffer with a lot of minor injuries which I don't have any more since I've improved my stride."

The theory behind his diet is "moderation in all things. My biggest downfall however is pretzels. I must eat a whole package of them at night watching TV," he said chuckling.

Runs for fun

Gallagher, who says he runs just for fun, has a wall full of medals and certificates won from road racing.

When he started running he didn't even place in his age group. After logging a few more miles he began outrunning a few more of the younger men and placed in his age group.

Gallagher, who is in the Run for Your Life Program plans to continue running after retirement in June with 30 years of military service. He will continue running and hopes to finish a marathon when he has more time to train.

Chaplain's Corner

Can this be love?

By Chaplain (Maj.) William Erbach TSB Chaplain

Somewhere in my reading I came across the following list of signs which indicate the presence of true love:

- A genuine interest in the other person and in all that he or she says or does.
- A community of tastes, ideals and standards with no serious clashes.
- A greater happiness in being with the one person than with any other.
- A real unhappiness when the other person is absent.
- A great feeling of comradship.
- A willingness to give and take.
- A pride in the other person when comparisons are made.

Each person's list may vary some but should not be much different from the basic list. However, there is one criterion that I think is as foolproof as any possibly could be in trying to put a yardstick on ones' feeling towards another.

Only when you are eager to make sacrifices for the object of your affection, to give and not to count the cost, will you be able to say without reservation that you are in love.

This applies not only to our romantic affiliations but to our relationship with all men. Less than this is unworthy of the gift of life given to us by God.

Nursing home visit

It is always a rewarding experience when the NCOWC visit the Muscogee Manor Nursing Home to help the residents celebrate birthdays. Mrs. Luise Paulshock, chairwoman, along with Mrs. Lois Cameron, Mrs. Sue Patrick and Mrs. Shigeko Brown, served the birthday cake and punch to approximately 75 residents on Jan. 29. Those celebrating birthdays each received a gift chosen especially for them.

Mr. Parley Davis played their favorite music for them on the accordion.

Food costs more

The cost of fresh fruits and vegetables and possibly some packaged fruits and vegetables are expected to increase through the winter and spring, Army Commissary officials announced this week.

Recent bad weather has damaged California citrus and vegetable crops, officials explained. The freeze hit the citrus crops the hardest and although it is still too early to assess damage to the crops, prices are expected to increase, officials added.

Some shortages as well as lower quality may occur as a result of the worst freeze since 1949, officials said. The freeze came early in the season which means more damage can occur before winter ends, officials added.

Army commissaries will continue their efforts to obtain fresh fruits and vegetables for custom — needs and to provide customers with the best available products at the lowest possible cost, officials said. (ARNEWS)

Apprenticeship program has first graduation

By Betty Zimmerman

The Directorate of Facilities Engineering had its first apprenticeship program graduation Jan. 28.

Curtis Williams was promoted to Journeyman (WG-9) as a sewage disposal plant operator.

Williams began his apprenticeship as a WG-2 in June 1976 and has now satisfied all requirements outlined in civilian regulations.

This particular trade program required a total of 2,000 hours on-the-job training (OJT) in various areas. They involved general orientation, plant operation, sewage collection system, pump lift stations, industrial wash problems, equipment maintenance and other activities such as safety.

Correspondence course completed

In addition, an extensive correspondence course was satisfactorily completed through a government agreement with the International Correspondence Schools, Scranton, Pa. This course covered approximately 180 hours and included mathematics through trigonometry; various aspects of trade drawing such as blueprint reading, architectural drawing, sketching and specification writing. There were also other related courses, such as trade chemistry, bacteriology, ecology, and water treatment.

Purpose of program

The purpose of the Apprentice Program is to assure the use of up-to-date training concepts and the establishment of high standards of selection and performance for employees entering skilled blue collar trades in Facilities Engineering organizations.

The program will establish apprenticeship as one means of maintaining the Facilities Engineer trade skill base. It will support the overall technical training effort to upgrade existing skills and provide a basis for upward mobility in blue collar trade fields.

Selections for the program are made by first advertising within the installation by means of job opportunity announcements issued by the Civilian Personnel Office, which is tasked with general program responsibility. An Installation Joint Apprentice Committee then considers the applications, interviews applicants and selects those judged best qualified.

Joint effort required

Throughout the apprenticeship, a joint effort is made by the apprentice committee, the supervisory chain and the Civilian Personnel Office to see that motivation and quality of training remains high.

Although there have been a few dropouts for various reasons, since the program began in 1976, both management and apprentices agree that the program is already reaping benefits for Fort Benning and is successfully fulfilling its intended purpose," stated Jim Kvicala, apprentice coordinator.

There are now 13 apprentices enrolled in the program, working in such trades as plumbing, high voltage electricity, carpentry, pipefitting, air conditioning equipment mechanics, and sewage disposal.

Checking equipment

DFAE employee, Curtis Williams, checks the water pollution plant's mixing system's pump motor temperature as part of his new duties as a journeyman sewage disposal plant operator.

36th changes chaplains

The Sightseeing Road Chapel, 36th Engineer Group (CBT) has a new chaplain.

Chaplain (Capt.) James H. Ward Jr. took over the job from Chaplain (Capt.) David E. Meyers recently.

Prior to his assignment to the Group Chapel, Chaplain Ward was working at 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Battalion.

Unit sponsored church services will be initiated at the chapel in the near future. Chaplain Ward will help lead these services along with his usual 11 a.m. Sunday Protestant service.

Chaplain Ward is a Southern Baptist with many years of experience. He will be leading retreats and directing tours to help the men of the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Distinguished Grad named

2nd Lt. Addison D. Davis IV, son of Fort Benning Chief of Staff, Col. Addison D. Davis III, was named Distinguished Graduate of the Infantry Officer Basic Course 9-78 at the U.S. Army Infantry School Jan. 18.

Honor Graduates were 2nd Lts. Leslie J. Carroll, Paul V. Kohl, Levon S. Maksoudian and William G. Wilson.

BAYONET

Vol. 38, No. 22

Published each Friday by the R. W. Page Corporation, Columbus, Ga., a private firm in no way connected with the Department of Army. Opinions expressed by the publisher and writers herein are their own and are not to be considered an official expression by the Department of the Army. The appearance of advertisements in the publication does not constitute endorsement by the Department of the Army of the products or service advertised.

New battle dress uniform planned

The Army is now taking a close look at plans to replace the currently used durable press utility fatigue uniform with a new field camouflage outfit.

The Infantry School here, as the proponent for individual field clothing and equipment for the Infantry soldier, in conjunction with U.S. Army Natick Research and Development Command, the materiel experts, has forwarded for approval a requirement document for a Battle Dress Uniform. This document is at Department of the Army for staffing.

The new battle dress uniform is designed to provide clothing that is highly functional, more comfortable and more durable for field and combat use.

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army Chief of Staff, will visit here today and Saturday to observe training in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade and the Infantry Officers Basic Course.

Rogers, who will be accompanied by his wife, will meet with Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey today. He will then travel by helicopter to the ITB, getting an overview of Brigade Operations at Sand Hill.

Rogers will depart Saturday afternoon.

Testing of the uniform will begin later this year. If approved, the uniform could be introduced into the supply system beginning in the 1982-1983 time frame.

Uniform Similar

The basic coat and trousers of the new battle dress uniform will be similar to the present jungle fatigues worn by Rangers and Special Forces soldiers, to include type, capacity and placement of pockets. The material used will be 50-50 nylon and cotton twill in a four-color camouflage pattern.

The uniform will be a little heavier than the jungle fatigues, more durable and more suitable for field use in moderate temperatures. Material reinforcement will be provided in the high-wear areas — elbows, knees and buttocks.

The requirement document considers two types of basis of issue plans. Under one plan, the new uniform would be issued on a Common Table of Allowance basis to soldiers who habitually operate within a division area, except those issued the ground combat vehicle crewman's or aircrewman's uniform. Under the second plan, the uniform would be issued to soldiers upon initial entry and maintained with their Clothing Allowance Funds thereafter.

New Considerations

Also being considered for the new uniform are rough-side-out, earth-brown combat boots which are designed to provide increased durability, water resistance and a speed lacing system. The brown boots would reduce detection of the soldier by infrared detective devices.

The new battle dress uniform will be supplemented by a newly-designed personnel armor helmet and vest approved by Department of the Army in June of 1978. The armor, or fragmentation vest, and the one-piece helmet which will replace the "steel pot" are both made of Kevlar ballistic filler. Both vest and helmet provide increased protection against fragmenting munitions.

Spec. 5 Martin J. Hunt of the 36th Engr Gp, models the new uniform.

27th Patterson Award presented

The 27th Annual Robert P. Patterson Award was presented in a ceremony in Marshall Auditorium at 11 a.m. on Feb. 12.

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, widow of the former Secretary of War, personally presented the trophy and monetary award to this year's winner, 2nd Lt. James Gerald Thyne, Jr.

The 5th Student Battalion (OCS) held a tea in honor of Mrs. Patterson before the ceremony. The candidates presented her a Tree of Leadership Quilt.

Honored guest at this year's ceremony was Maj. Gen. James F. Hamlet, Deputy Inspector General, DA.

The Patterson Award honors the outstanding Infantry graduate of the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course of the year who was rated as possessing the highest qualities of leadership, academic efficiency, aptitude, and character. The award is presented annually on or about Feb. 12, the birthdate of Judge Patterson.

The Patterson Award was established in 1952 to honor the late Secretary of War, and later Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Robert P. Patterson.

After his death in an airplane crash in 1952, a group of his friends and admirers established the award.

Safety Message

The weekend of Washington's Birthday will present an impelling challenge for any of you who must drive during this period. As you pause in your everyday pursuits to pay honor to our first President, take a moment to reflect upon your obligation to your families and all others with whom you come in contact. Spare everyone the burden of suffering by accepting and fulfilling your responsibility to drive safely and avoid traffic accidents.

Analysis of fatal traffic accidents involving Fort Benning personnel reveals that the majority of the deaths could have been prevented through defensive driving and use of seat belts. If you must drive, "buckle up" and drive defensively. Anticipate the unsafe acts of others and give them the right-of-way if they demand it. Allowing for other drivers' mistakes will greatly enhance your chance of surviving on the highways.

Have an enjoyable holiday and remember; stay alert, stay alive, and drive to live.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Glad you asked

What would be your first recommendation to improve the appearance of the female soldier's uniform?

Staff Sgt. Jon Clanton, A-3-5 (Special Forces), Fort Bragg, N. C.

I think women soldiers ought to wear male fatigues and field jackets. They look better in them. Other than that, everything else is OK. I feel that most women take more pride in their appearance than the males.

Pfc. Ruth Blanks, 18th Repl Det

I think they ought to shorten the skirt slightly so they don't look like Grandma Girtie. Female fatigues look much like potato sacks — if the Army wants us to be equal with the men, then we should dress equally as well.

Sgt. 1st Class Carroll Sledge; 988th MP Co (S4)

I think the female soldiers' uniform looks pretty good as it is now. On the average, I think many women look sharper than the men.

Pfc. Raymond Harrison; 18th Repl Det

I think the women's fatigues should be tailored to fit correctly.

Letters to the Editor

Parking problem remedied

"Concerned" (Letters to the Editor, Feb 2) pointed out a situation that I'm sure has bothered many people. The reserved parking spaces at the Commissary actually added a burden to a handicapped person.

A drive through the parking lot now will prove that the suggested corrections have already been made.

It is gratifying to know the leaders of Fort Benning are open to suggestions and will act quickly to make corrections where possible.

I would like to thank those responsible for making life a little easier for the handicapped.

Handicapped inconvenienced

In your Bayonet issue of February 2, there was a letter about "Handicap Parking" being revamped.

I think it should be enforced first. Why revamp it if you don't enforce it.

It has been a concern for many years to my husband and me. We have tried many times to have it enforced, but we are told "We can't do anything about it." Why put up signs and give medical stickers to patients of Martin Army Hospital?

My husband was in the hospital these past two weeks and his room faced the MAH parking lot for the handicapped. I saw the same car parked for two days in the same place. Men in fatigues and men and women in whites park there. You try to say something to them and they tell you to go to hell and that they'll park where they please.

You just try that kind of parking at Fort Carson, Colorado. Let me tell you, you'll get a ticket.

Why can it be enforced in one place and not another?

Like concerned, I am concerned. My husband is in a wheel chair and I am 62 years old, and it's no fun handling a wheelchair, each little thing that is made easier for me, I'd appreciate.

Fort Benning and MAH have signs all over saying "We Care". Who do you care about? Yourselves or do you really care about handicapped veterans who served and can't park in a place set aside for them?

Commentary

Some words meaningless

By Pat Astran

"Race" and "racial" have been used in a loose sense to distinguish a difference in people, primarily by color of skin and cultural background.

We should be aware that these terms have no precise meaning. There is no clearly expressed meaning and there is no way, scientifically, of defining "races" of man. Technically, Adam was the head of the human race. Common usage of race and racial is in reference to skin color.

"Minority" is another word without a precise meaning. The place where one lives relates to who is in the minority or who is the minority.

America depends on the thinking, understanding and behavior of all people of various racial and cultural groups. Relationships are established and sustained through communication. Equal opportunity results from understanding relationships and communicating requirements.

The Army has a positive, clear policy on this matter: "It is the policy of the Army to conduct all of its activities in a manner which is free from racial discrimination, and which provides equal opportunity and treatment of all uniformed members irrespective of their race, color, religion, sex, age or natural origin," states Army regulation 600-21.

If you feel you have a problem call your Equal Opportunity Coordinating Office (EOCO).

Don't waste freedom

William W. Erbach, Sr.
TSB Chaplain

More than three centuries ago a handful of pioneers crossed the ocean to Jamestown and Plymouth in search of freedoms they were unable to find in their own countries. The freedoms that we still cherish and defend even today:

The freedom from want, the freedom from fear, the freedom of speech, and the freedom of religion known today as the classic Four Freedoms.

Today, the descendants of those early settlers, as well as the millions who have joined them since, are fighting to protect these freedoms at home and throughout the world.

But to these freedoms I would add a fifth — almost more basic than the other four — that we are in danger of losing: The freedom to be one's best.

I see so many young soldiers wasting their time, talent, money and youth on foolish pursuits. Soldiers going down the tube because of a joint, going over the hill because of a pill, or just being unproductive for the two or three years they are in the military.

Ironically, the four freedoms have made it possible for such an attitude since they are guaranteed regardless. Unfortunately, the gift of life and its fulfillment is not a guarantee but merely an opportunity. What each person does with or to it, is his own responsibility; he calls the tune and he pays the piper.

Don't waste even a little bit of it.

Knowing the rules at tax time can be beneficial

Most soldiers are — or should be — aware they may have to pay income taxes on their active duty pay to states where they maintain legal residence. States that impose no income taxes on legal residents include: Florida, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Wyoming.

New Hampshire and Tennessee impose income taxes on investment income only.

Additionally, Alaska, Illinois, Michigan, Montana and Vermont exempt soldiers' duty pay from their income tax requirements. Other income, however, is subject to taxation.

Situations vary

Service members who are legal residents of some states may or may not be taxed on their military income depending on their individual situations. These states include Connecticut, Idaho, Missouri, New York and Pennsylvania. There are also several states that allow partial exemptions in varying amounts.

Retirees need information

Soldiers nearing retirement — and retirees — should know about the tax liabilities they may face on retired pay. Generally, states that tax active duty pay also tax retired pay, although a certain amount may be exempted from taxation.

Active duty soldiers and retirees also should understand the state tax liabilities on Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP) and Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan (RSFPP). Again, generally the states that tax active duty pay also tax these annuities as income. (Under SBP/RSFPP, a certain amount of money is taken out of the servicemember's retired pay each month so that a widow and dependent children will receive a monthly annuity if the retired servicemember dies.)

Contributions reduce tax

In most states, taxable retired pay is reduced by the amount a servicemember contributes to SBP/RSFPP. Gross taxable retired pay — before deduction of annuity cost — is subject to state income tax in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina.

A handful of states also impose inheritance/estate tax on SBP/RSFPP after exempting varying amounts from taxation.

Garnishment of pay

Active duty and retired soldiers also should keep in mind most states have laws that permit garnishment of military pay for alimony and child support. Only South Carolina has no garnishment law.

For specific details on state tax and other liabilities, call the JAG legal assistance office at 545-3281.

The area to be assaulted is prepared by artillery.

An assault team uses smoke for concealment while moving to a building.

Soldiers practice combat in ITB simulated village

At Military Operations in an Urban Terrain (MOUT), each soldier learns to perform combat techniques of movement, entry, search, clearing buildings and selection of firing positions.

When studying the techniques of movement, the soldier learns that alertness and all-around security is important. The enemy may appear from the front, flanks, rear, above or below. The soldier learns to avoid open areas, stay low and to select his next position before moving. Movement can be concealed by the use of smoke, covering fires, buildings, rubble or vegetation.

When entry is being studied, the soldier finds that the best entry is from the top of the building. Entering from top to bottom is not always possible, so the soldier must learn the proper entry from the bottom or lower levels also. Windows and doors should be avoided as much as possible because of boobytraps and enemy fire.

Soldiers should create an entrance with the use of demolitions, artillery, tank fire, antitank weapons fire, or similar devices. If the soldier must enter at the lower level, extra precautions must be taken.

The mission of a search party is to enter and clear buildings that are under attack. The search party is comprised of two teams; the covering team and the search team. The covering team provides continuous firing protection for the search team. The search team must clear each room within the building under attack.

Sound easy? The members of the search party must remember to clear from the top down, enter low, clear, move up and clear down, avoid hallways, hug walls, watch for boobytraps, use plenty of grenades, get in fast, use automatic fire, use voice alerts, avoid silhouettes, and mark cleared rooms.

Army aviator policies to be changed

Several steps have been taken to relieve an Army company grade aviator shortage and others are planned to allow the Army to "maintain an acceptable level of readiness," according to MILPERCEN officials.

Officials this week spelled out what is being done to compensate for these shortages that they say are caused by decreased training of new aviators, increased aviator requirements and the fact that aviators, also serve in branch assignments that decrease the number actually on full time flight status.

"Near term" solutions to the shortage, officials say, include:

Limited assignments of majors to captain positions.

Allowing more aviators to remain on flight status for longer periods before returning to ground duties. This includes "a case by case" review of MACOM or individual requests to shift from an aviation assignment to ground duty at the same installation.

Aviators, since Oct. 1 now assume a four-year service obligation after completing flight school. This requirement includes a goal of keeping these new aviators on flight status during their full four-year initial obligation.

Certain officers who formerly held specialty code 15 positions will be reassigned to the specialty at company grade levels. These assignments will not be mandatory and the officers picked for reassignments may request redesignation.

MILPERCEN officials also announced in October that commissioned officers next year will be allowed to enter flight training immediately after completing basic branch training. Currently, officers are required to serve 24-36 months in their basic branch assignments before entering flight training.

MILPERCEN officials stressed that these actions will not penalize officers in specialty 15 because their assignments do not follow normal career patterns. If necessary, officials say, promotion and school selection boards will be given guidance to ensure fairness to aviators.

Officials added that this will probably not be necessary. However, since post-Vietnam era aviators have performed as good as, or better than their contemporaries in DA board actions.

Announcement of the steps being taken to ease the aviator shortage follows a DA comment in August that the aviator shortage problems would receive quick and positive attention. Officials remarked then that post-Vietnam losses among aviators left the Army with less than 80 percent of its required company grade officers on active duty in specialty 15. (ARNEWS)

Army cap shortage expected

Exchange customers should be prepared for a fatigue cap shortage in the near future, according to Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) officials.

An Army decision to review the new specifications and patterns for the cap will delay the changeover to a new fatigue cap. Earlier plans called for release of the new specifications and patterns on Jan. 31.

A hold placed on the schedule will create a lag in the manufacture and shipment of the new cap. AAFES expects the shortage to last about two months until the manufacturers can get back into production.

According to the manager of the Military Clothing and Book Store here, retired Col. W. J. Thiel, the shortage is not expected to effect Benning exchange customers. He added that the fatigue cap supply here should outlast the two-month lag.

Famous Blacks in American History

The Black heritage in America is far greater than most Americans of other ethnic backgrounds are aware. Blacks have contributed significantly to the American way of life but their contributions, until recently, went largely unrecognized in American history. The following is a list of only a few noted Blacks who played an important role in our history.

- Peter Alonso Nino — pilot of one of Columbus' ships.
- Peter Mexia — traveled with Ponce de Leon in Florida in search of the "Fountain of Youth."
- John Garrido — planted three grains of wheat that initiated wheat growing in the New World.
- Esteban Dorantes — greatest and most famous Afro-Spanish explorer in annals of American discovery.
- Crispus Attucks — the first person killed during a confrontation between colonial citizens and garrisoned British soldiers on March 5, 1770.
- Katherine Dunham — significant contributor to the modern dance.

- Benjamin Banneker — mathematician and astronomer who was America's first black scientist.
- Ira Aldridge — greatest Shakespearean actor of his day (1821).
- Frederick Douglas — Abolitionist and federal officeholder who was one of the greatest Americans of all times.
- James P. Beckwourth — legendary black pioneer who discovered Beckwourth Pass through the Sierra Nevada mountains.

Phillis Wheatley — poet who won wide acclaim for her works and was the second woman in all British America to bring out a volume of poetry.

- Harriet Tubman — Abolitionist who freed over 300 slaves via underground railroad.
- Nicholas Biddle — the first man to shed blood during the Civil War when he volunteered to protect the nation's Capitol.
- Booker T. Washington — great American educational leader and founder of Tuskegee Institute.
- William E.B. Dubois — brilliant scholar-writer who became an international legend in his own time.
- Paul Lawrence Dunbar — popular American poet.
- Henry Ossawa Tanner — one of the finest painters ever produced in America.
- Martin Luther King Jr. — civil rights advocate-preacher and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize.
- Mathew Alexander Henson — co-discoverer of the North Pole.
- James Weldon Johnson — famous author and writer of the famed "Lift Every Voice and Sing."
- Bessie Smith — famous early female blues singer who made black music known world wide.
- Paul Robeson — champion college athlete and singer who was hailed as one of the world's great actors and leaders.
- Langston Hughes — caustic and keen observer of the American racial scene and one of the most widely quoted poets.

Thurgood Marshall — Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court and outstanding constitutional lawyer who spearheaded the legal foundation for most of the civil rights legislation of modern times.

- Ethel Waters — singer and prototype of racially conscious radio, television and stage personalities.
- Elijah Muhammad — founder of one of the major religious organizations in the U.S.; preached belief in blackness, "love of self" and opposition to slavery traditions.
- Walter Augustus Hinton — world-renowned bacteriologist who developed the Hinton test for syphilis and the Davis-Hinton tests of blood and spinal fluid.
- Mary McLeod Bethune — one of the greatest women in American history; presidential advisor and confidant, college founder and president of the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History from 1936-1951.
- Charles Richard Drew — foremost researcher in blood plasma and universally known as the "Father of the Blood Bank."

George Washington Carver — renowned agricultural botanist who developed more than 400 synthetic products from peanuts, sweet potatoes and pecans; gifted artist and pharmacist.

Marion Anderson — internationally recognized contralto and beloved stage figure.

Retirees need right paperwork

Inaccurate, incomplete paperwork and misinformation are causing separation problems for soldiers who retire at a "location of personal choice," according to MILPERCEN officials.

Soldiers don't have to retire from their current CONUS installation of the U.S. port that services soldiers returning from overseas, officials say. Instead, they can choose to retire from any of the 40 Army Separation Transfer Points (STP) in the U.S.

But soldiers who use the "personal choice" option are often misinformed and ill-prepared, MILPERCEN says.

Officials say that feedback to MILPERCEN shows that some soldiers are arriving at STPs without health and dental records, without retirement orders, without complete DA forms 4240 and 3713 (for pay), and without proper leave forms.

In addition, some retiring soldiers are showing up at STPs too early. Regulations say that they cannot report to STPs earlier than two working days before retirement.

MILPERCEN officials say that soldiers exercising the "personal choice" separation option should also be told that travel from their current station to the preferred STP is made at personal expense. And travel pay from the STP to a retiree's "home of selection" is not paid until after travel is completed.

Other common problems with "personal choice" retirements include confusion resulting from using 'terminal' leave, improperly compiled travel time and "permissive travel," officials caution.

MILPERCEN has directed local MILPOS to follow STP closely and to counsel retirees on regulations and entitlements pertaining to personal choice options. (ARNEWS)

THE MOST FAMOUS MODERN ARMY UNIFORM DESIGNATION IS THE GREEN BERET—THE HEADGEAR OF THE ARMY'S SPECIAL FORCES SOLDIER!

Some SQTs valid for training only

SQT results now available in 30 MOSs, according to MILPERCEN and DA officials, are "valid for training purposes" but not necessarily for personnel management.

In eight MOSs, for example, SQT results are not being used in any form to determine promotion, reenlistment or other personnel management qualifications. These MOSs are 55G, 74B, 74D, 74F, 76D, 76J, 76P and 76Y.

SQT results for these MOSs, if used to reenlist and promote soldiers, officials say, would put soldiers at a disadvantage because these MOSs have undergone one of several changes.

Some MOSs, officials explained, have been integrated into different career management fields or MOS skill requirements have changed since the tests were developed. As a result, they added, soldiers in these MOSs cannot be expected to be proficient in new skills.

In another 22 MOSs that also have SQT results, officials said, liberal waivers are allowed.

One official explained that these waivers, while aiding low scorers, do not penalize high scorers. High scorers, the official observed, earn far more promotion points for their better performance than do low scorers.

Soldiers in these 22 MOSs may also receive waivers on reenlistment standards by an E-5 or above, who can permit a soldier to reenlist based on other considerations that may compensate for a lower SQT score.

While the army would fall short of the number of soldiers it needs to promote and reenlist, in some MOSs, if waivers were not permitted, an official pointed out that this doesn't put soldiers in other MOSs at a disadvantage. Since promotion and training standards are different for each MOS, the official said, lowering standards in one MOS has no impact on others.

In MOSs that were not affected by training or skill changes, an official concluded, soldiers are generally earning high scores and the SQT has proven its value as both a training and personnel management tool. (ARNEWS)

Professor Safety says

Abnormally low blood sugar levels, induced by missed meals, may be a direct cause of accidents. A study in England found that several truck drivers who were involved in accidents had extremely low blood-sugar levels. Symptoms associated with low blood-sugar are weakness, drowsiness, mental confusion, aggression and other abnormal behavior. All the drivers were young and healthy. The common factor was that each driver had not eaten for at least twelve hours.

Drivers who make daily starts without breakfast are taking a risk. So are people on reducing diets. (Courtesy of Treasury Safety Bulletin)

Post Infantry Museum has

By Pat Brown

James Lett, Museum display technician, uses a bandsaw in the Museum workshop, to carve the date of a Museum exhibit.

"Two Centuries of Proud History" proclaims its logo, but the National Infantry Museum at Fort Benning, with its collection of prehistoric Indian artifacts, Bronze Age weapons, Japanese swords, memorabilia reflecting the soldier's life during war and peacetime, atomic missiles, Presidential letters, objets d'art by Tiffany, paintings and sculpty by world-famous artists and much, much more, reflects an atmosphere not usually found in a military museum.

"We try to be more than just a collection of things painted olive drab," states Dick Grube, Museum curator since December 1972, and he, with his skilled and professional staff, have been more than successful in meeting this goal.

The Museum, open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday and Friday, and from 12:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, is located on Baltzell Ave. off Lumpkin Rd. It was first established in 1959, but until 1977, was located in a temporary barracks building with limited display space.

Setting appropriate

At one time a drive was underway to construct a new building, but when it became apparent that this goal was unrealistic, the National Museum Association decided to renovate the former post hospital, a seven-building complex built in the early 1920s.

This solution proved to be a happier one than the construction of a modern edifice, since the four-storied spacious white building, with broad steps and grey trim, located on a high shady incline, and built in a slower-paced era, seems appropriate for a collection reflecting the history of the Nation and its' Army Infantry past.

A one-time visit to the Museum is not enough to absorb all that is offered by the Museum's 120 permanent displays and its numerous special displays. One recent visitor, a retired Army sergeant, stated that he came at least once a year. On his last visit, he wandered over the outside grounds with his young son, pointing out the difference between World War II artillery pieces built by the Japanese, with their aid of expendability, and those of the Third Reich with its dream of a thousand-year reign, constructed in a massive, ponderous mode.

Clean and attractive

Entering the Museum, the visitor is immediately struck by the Museum's spruceness, and its warm, attractive appearance. The credit for its attractiveness must go to Grube himself, who designs and arranges the displays and exhibits, and to James Lett, display technician, who con-

Constructs many of Grube's designs in a workshop located in the Museum basement.

Credit also goes to C. Clay Alexander, Museum registrar, described by Grube as having "accumulated a wealth of experience with more than 30 years in the museum field, who, in addition to recording gifts and marking them, is responsible for the preservation and conservation of artifacts and preparing them for display.

As far as its spick and span condition, Grube says "My whole staff gets credit for that. We have a cleaning crew that comes in three times a week, but the rest of the time, we clean the Museum ourselves, and depend upon the cooperation of our visitors to help us keep it that way."

Something for everyone

To attempt to describe the diverse exhibits is an impossible task. They are far-ranging, and have attraction, not for just the militaristic-minded, but for anyone interested in America's heritage. There's the Sutler's General store, that, with its display of items ranging from horseshoes to ladies' hats, gives sudden insight into the life of a military family on a desolate Army outpost in the past century.

There's the Presidential Room that includes, in addition to numerous memorandums and letters, the duffle bag carried by President Franklin Pierce during the Mexican War and the uniform worn by a young Captain Harry S Truman in World War I.

There's the Medal of Honor Room that serves as a reminder that the country's heroes were once ordinary young men with ordinary hopes, dreams and plans for the future.

There's the poignancy of a letter mailed from a New York insurance firm to a Columbus businessman at the start of the Civil War, telling him they are returning his check, "not for lack of confidence in you or your business, but because of the state of affairs between our two countries."

There's the humor of Clay More, the Ironman mascot built by an Officers Candidate class from salvaged U.S. Army ordnance and other metallic materials and donated to the Museum in February 1969, and the anachronism of a David Crockett atomic missile on display a short distance away from a "crow-foot", a four-pronged twist of metal used to impede the enemy's advance during the Bronze Age and still in use by the Viet Cong a decade ago.

There's the display of a 1905 Army mess breakfast menu with its eight entrees beginning with sirloin steak, plain or with mushrooms, and ending with calves' liver, broiled or fried, and offering a choice of Sally Lunn and five other breads and three beverages, among other items.

Admission free

There's ... well, there's something for everyone, young and old, civilian or military, whatever their interest. And best of all, it's all free.

The headlines of a Dec. 8, 1941 newspaper, on display in the Museum, proclaim America's entry into World War II.

Officers get new rating system Oct. 1

The Army's new Officer Evaluation Report (OER), set for implementation Oct. 1 promises to have more credibility among officers than the current OER.

In developing the new report, the Army's Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN) gathered information from more than 100 Active Army, Army National Guard and Army Reserve organizations, a large cross section of the Active Army officer corps, more than 50 selection boards and a large number of DA managers. A great deal of assistance, support and enthusiasm came from field participants.

The effort also included a worldwide survey of the officer corps and a review of information from past Army systems, other services, selected foreign services, civilian industry, government and academia.

New features

The new system uses three forms:

- DA Form 67-8 replaces DA Form 67-7, the current OER. The new form differs in several ways. It does not use a numerical score. It emphasizes the duty description. It includes a more structured performance narrative. It increases the role of the more senior officer in the rating chain.

- DA Form 67-8-1, the Support Form, accompanies the OER through the rating chain but does not go to DA. It allows the rater and the rated officer to discuss the duty description and specific objectives at the beginning of the rating period and encourages counseling then and throughout the period. It also allows the rated officer, at the end of the rating period, to describe his accomplishments in light of the duties and objectives.

New forms

The new OER system incorporates several features not included in previous officer evaluation reporting systems:

tion reporting systems:

- Rated officer participation. The rated officer's participation throughout the rating period should improve the professional development of officers and the effectiveness of organizations.

- Senior rater concept. The names of rating officials have been changed from rater, indorser and reviewer to rater, intermediate rater and senior rater. Most rating situations will involve only two rating officials, the rater and the senior rater (usually the same person as the current system's indorser). The senior rater's role has been increased from a purely administrative one to a more active one that includes a critical evaluation of the rated officer's potential.

- Senior rater profile. The profile provides a comparison of a specific rating with a senior rater's normal rating tendency.

- Professional development. The emphasis on better communication, objective-setting and development of subordinates helps daily performance and expands the traditional functions of the officer evaluation system.

- Personnel management. Explicit techniques and procedures support the specialty concept, focus attention on the human side of the organization, emphasize the functions of programs, and encourage communication.

- Administrative accuracy. The new system simplifies certain administrative items such as the accountability of rating periods, and it allows the rated officer to review and authenticate administrative data.

In the transition to the new system, each officer will get a final report under the old system. This will ensure "a degree of fairness that was lacking when we changed systems in the past," said General Bernard W. Rogers, Army Chief of Staff. (DA SPOTLIGHT)

New weather boss arrives

On Jan. 30, Fort Benning gained its newest organization commander. He is Capt. Gibson Morris Jr. and he takes command of the Air Force 5th Weather Squadron at Lawson Air Field.

Capt. Morris arrives from Keesler AFB where he spent five years as an Air Weather Service advisor.

His previous tours include flying hurricane reconnaissance at McClellan AFB and supporting fighter operations in Thailand.

His decorations include the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal, Air Force Commendation Medal.

Capt. Morris feels qualified to assume command of weather support operations at Lawson Army Air field.

Q — I have a five-year $10,000 Limited Convertible Term Policy (W). Can I convert this to a permanent plan?

A — This policy may be converted to a permanent plan before the end of the five-year term which ends on or after the veteran's 50th birthday. It can't be renewed after the veteran's 50th birthday.

Q — I am currently entitled to CHAMPVA benefits but will reach age 65 next month. How will this affect my CHAMPVA benefits?

A — At age 65 you become eligible for Social Security Medicare benefits. You lose CHAMPVA benefits.

Q — Is there any time limit on when a veteran's widow can apply for his burial allowance?

A — Application for burial allowance must be made within two years after the veteran's burial or cremation.

Q — What is the amount of the new VA automobile grant which became effective Oct. 1, 1978?

A — $3,800.

TSB takes dining award

By Betty Zimmerman

The School Brigade's (TSB) 43rd Company Dining Facility has been named Benning's Best Large Category Dining Facility for 1978. They also captured the Brigade's yearly award.

The award is based on management, paper work, overall cleanliness and quality of food preparation as voiced by the soldiers who eat there.

This particular dining facility is presently feeding two companies, 43rd and 42nd. That's about 650 airborne students per meal. There are ten civilian and four military cooks plus 12 KPs under the guidance of facility manager, Sgt. 1st Class James Nelson.

Winning is old hat to Nelson. His AIT Bde messhalls did the same thing seven times in the late sixties.

The 26-year food service worker attributes his success to conscientious cooks and good management. He said by proper budget management he can serve four meats at every meal. He also prepares a super supper once a month with feature dishes of Alaskan King Crab, steak, shrimp or steamship round.

He commented that their barbecued spare ribs were one of the commanding general's favorite dishes. And added that he has, on his staff, the best chicken cooker on post, Willie J. Bell.

His baker, Thomas Pope, took second place in the post's cake decorating contest at the Culinary Art Show.

They received another accolade in November when they were awarded a plaque for preparing the post's best Thanksgiving dinner.

Nelson said he wouldn't trade his cooks for any others on post. He keeps them current by continuously sending them to various schools and helps them progress in their field. "Happy people don't mind working late when the students are held up for an airborne jump or something, they know they will be compensated in the long run," Nelson stated.

Dental hints

Children need flouride

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of six articles on dental health published by the BAYONET, in cooperation with the Fort Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 4-10.

I am breast feeding my 3-month-old baby. Since we live in a fluoridated community, can I assume that she is getting the recommended amount of fluoride for the development of her teeth?

If your infant is being breast fed exclusively, she unfortunately may not receive even a minimum amount of fluoride. That's because mother's milk actually contains almost no fluoride.

Generally speaking, it cannot be assumed that while the mother obtains optimal fluoride benefits the milk will contain it or fluoride will be passed on to the child.

Since a number of studies indicate that fluoride supplementation may be indicated for breast-fed infants, it is suggested that you seek professional guidance. A fluoride supplement may be advised in those instances where breast milk is the only fluid given.

By the same token, children from the age of birth to two years in nonfluoridated communities should receive a fluoride supplementation. This is because it has been established that persons who receive adequate fluoride from birth onward can expect to have 65 percent fewer cavities than they would otherwise experience.

Because infant diets do vary considerably — and many youngsters receive food or formula that is processed with fluoridated tap water — it is wise to seek the professional advice of your family dentist on the best method of providing the fluoride protection needed in tooth development.

USAREUR team to visit

A team of junior officers and NCOs from Europe will visit here on Feb. 23.

The purpose of the visit will be to discuss conditions which military personnel and their dependents may expect to encounter upon being assigned to Europe.

The team will conduct the first informal discussion in Clrm 9, Bldg 4, from 9 a.m.-10 a.m. on Feb. 23.

For personnel unable to attend the morning session, a second session will be held from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. at the same location.

Attendance at one of the two sessions is mandatory for students and permanent party personnel with orders or official notification of assignment to Europe. All other interested parties are welcome to attend the discussions.

In addition to visiting here, the team will visit Fort Leavenworth, Ka. and Fort Knox, Ky.

Golf Part II: The Short Game

By George Cliff,
Ray Wells and Seth Hamilton

When people talk about the short game in golf, they refer to play from 75 yards out to the hole. Most of the action in golf centers around the short game, and without strong, short game play, it would be difficult for any player to be very successful.

Two primary shots are used in the short game situation: the chip shot, used when within 75 yards and off the green, and the putt, used on the green.

Many articles have been written over the years in golf publications pertaining to putting and chipping. If you were to gather all the information in these articles, you might find that the words that come up the most are balance, acceleration and firmness. By incorporating these three ideas, the player can make the best of the short game. We've broken these words down so you can relate them to your own game and the ways in which to lower your score.

BALANCE — Balance is one of the most important aspects of golf. When you assume your stance for the chip or putt, your weight should be slightly forward towards the target, and the feet no more than 12 inches apart.

ACCELERATION — A chip or a putt requires a relatively short back-swing and little or no body movement from the waist down. The forward swing consists of the arms returning the club to the ball and following through. As the ball is struck, the head of the club does not come to a screeching halt. The club is accelerated through the ball by using the arms, not by a flick of the wrists.

FIRMNESS — You must have control of the club during the complete swing. This is most easily accomplished by thinking of swinging through the shot rather than hitting at it. Hitting at a ball instead of through it encourages a wristy or choppy stroke.

In summary, think of the chipping or putting as a miniature golf swing. Learn the short game and the long game will come easier.

COURTESY OF THE WEEK

Slow play here at Fort Benning is one of our biggest problems. The next time you play under crowded conditions, why not be ready to hit when it's your turn? Slow play is not created by lost balls, but by players who are trying to be overly courteous to their partners by standing close to them, telling them what they should hit and then spending a couple minutes telling them what a good or bad shot they hit.

The next time you play, try to be ready to hit when it's your turn. You can tell your partner what a good shot he hit as you're walking to your next shot. By doing this, you will be extending a courtesy to everyone on the course.

Basketball wrap - up

Doughboys now 24-2

The Doughboys were on the road last weekend as they played three out of town conference games.

On Friday night, the Doughboys faced a tough Fort McPherson team and lost only their second game in twenty-three outings this year. Final score for this one was 82-75. Doughboys Steve Mims and Rick Donnell had 16 points each in the losing effort.

The Doughboys quickly got it together though as they traveled to Fort Campbell, Ky. and beat the Screaming Eagles twice, 76-69 and 85-84.

In the first game, the Doughboys once again used the balanced scoring attack which has been their hallmark all season long. Frederick Nelson led Doughboy scorers in Saturday's 76-69 victory with 21 points. Charlie Jackson had 12 points and Steve Mims, Frankie Tatum and Larry Varnedo finished with ten points apiece.

Sunday's game was a nail-biter as the Dough-boys pulled out a 85-84 victory in a very close contest. The win raised the Doughboys' record to an impressive 24-2. High scorers for the Doughboys were Charlie Jackson with 18 points, with Frederick Nelson close behind at 16. Steve Mims chipped in with 14 points.

This weekend the Doughboys are on the road again as they travel to Robbins AFB for games tonight and tomorrow. The Doughboys will take a break after this weekend in preparation for the upcoming TRADOC tournament March 10-17.

Doughgirls split series

The Fort Benning Doughgirls basketball team traveled to Fort Campbell with the Doughboys last weekend and they split a two game series with the Fort Campbell female team. They dropped the first game 75-63 then came back the next day to win decisively 85-62.

The Doughgirls will play two games against Fort McClellan this weekend here at Briant Wells Field House. The first game starts tonight at 7 p.m. and tomorrow's game time is 1 p.m. The Doughgirls will also play a game against the Atlanta All-Stars tomorrow night at 7 p.m.

HQ finishes season

Regular season play in the Headquarters Command Basketball League ended last week with the 139th MP Co finishing on top, two games ahead of Co A.

The final standings for the season are as follows:

TEAM	WON	LOST
139th MP Co	17	3
Co A	15	5
USAIB	13	7
Headquarters Co	6	15
988th MP	4	16

The four top finishers qualified for the double elimination tournament which concludes today. Due to the conflict of Bayonet deadlines, we will cover the playoff results next week. The winner of the tournament will represent Headquarters Command in the post playoffs.

1st Mr. Fort Benning chosen

"Bodybuilding is like being your own sculptor."

With a flex of his muscles, 24-year-old Pfc. Rusty Johnston of Co D, 43rd Engineer Battalion became the winner of the first Mr. Fort Benning Physique Contest on Saturday night at Marshall Auditorium.

Capt. James Grimes, Jr., assigned to 14th Co, 1st Bn, TSB, was first runner-up and SSgt. John Franklin, Jr. of HHC, Comm Gp, took third place.

The contest was sponsored by Recreation Services to give bodybuilders a chance to get recognition for their accomplishments.

While many posts hold annual "Miss Fort So-and-So" contests, Benning may well have set a precedent by giving men equal time in the spotlight, according to post Athletic Director Ralph Santaliz. "We weren't sure how this would go over but about 400 people attended and really seemed to enjoy it," said Santaliz. He added that he hopes the contest will become an annual event.

Contestants had to be either soldiers or dependents and were divided into three classes: Teenage, Novice and Open. Trophies were awarded to the top three finishers in each class and plaques were presented for the Best Body Parts (Arms, Back, Legs, Chest, Abdominals and Symmetry).

The 13 contestants ranged in age from 17-32 years old and, with the exception of Grimes, had never competed in a physique contest.

The first Mr. Fort Benning is an all-around athlete who began weightlifting in high school to increase his strength for football. Johnston is also adept in wrestling, boxing, track and karate.

"I believe being an athlete is making the most of what you are. I want to be the best in everything I do and it takes a lot of dedication. I have to give up a lot of partying but this is my chance to be someone, be recognized," he said.

Johnston, 5'5", 145 lbs., says winning this contest is the first step toward his goal — becoming a professional bodybuilder.

About two months ago, Johnston began training for the contest seven nights a week. "Since I'm small, I knew it would be a matter of definition against bulk," he said. He even took a week's leave to devote himself to training.

The soft-spoken native of Fairchance, Pa. in the Appalachian Mountains says he psyched himself up by meditating. "By the day of the contest I knew I was ready. I woke up at 8 a.m. and began shaving my body and preparing," he said.

"I had a cocky attitude on stage but I had to be like that," Johnston explained. "I've wrestled and boxed in public and I feel I'm a crowd pleaser. I was out there to please myself, of course, but I have to satisfy the people."

"You're in your own little world up there."

Story and Photos by Deb Hilgeman

"Bodybuilding is grace, beauty and athletic ability. Some people may doubt my masculinity but I'm proud of what I've got," he emphasized.

Like Johnston, Capt. Bill Davis, a student in IOAC 5-78 and third place winner in the Novice class, is "amazed at the misconceptions people have about bodybuilding" and hopes this contest will enhance the image of bodybuilders.

Davis, 5'6", 142 lbs., says bodybuilding is like being your own sculptor. "When I pumped up backstage and oiled up, I looked in the mirror and never saw myself like that before. It was euphoric," he recalled.

What motivates a bodybuilder to endure the pain that is often a part of training? According to Davis, there is a difference between pain that is bad for your body and pain that is good. "No pain, no gain," he said. "You know what the gain is and it justifies the pain. I worked on my abdominals until I didn't think I could lift my legs, then I did a couple more. You reach an intensity that is almost pleasurable."

Each contestant performed a routine of five-second poses for the seven judges while the audience vented their approval with applause. "You hear the applause yet you're oblivious to it," Davis said. "You're in your own little world up there."

Each contestant had a reason for wanting the Mr. Fort Benning title. Davis was motivated by this: "My father died last year. When he became ill he knew about my weightlifting but had not seen me. I know he saw me Saturday night and that is very satisfying."

"Bodybuilding is grace, beauty and athletic ability."

Runner's Profile

Coniglio stays on the run

By Julie Casey

Tom Coniglio, a top runner in the Columbus-Ft. Benning area strides a marathon with the best.

"In high school and college, I mainly ran 2 and 3-mile races. As the years went on, I didn't have the quality speed for the 5,000-meter or 10,000-meter races so I tried the marathon," commented the Boston qualifier who has completed a marathon in 2 hours and 31 minutes.

Coniglio ran for two seasons with the All-Army Track Team on the marathon squad. He is a runner in a different category, shooting for the Olympic trials in 1980.

Why the Olympics and why the marathon? Coniglio replied; "I'm a fanatic and running is my bag."

His goal is to run in the Olympics in 1984 when he feels he will run his best time. Coniglio trains at a rigorous rate of 90 to 115 miles a week.

He has run the gambit, struggling and working at running more than most people. He has had his share of victories, defeats and frustrating injuries. When asked what he thinks about when he knows a marathon isn't going to go well, he said. "I'm already thinking and planning workouts for the next marathon. You get addicted to it — running and competing.

Coniglio became a veteran in January and plans to stay in the Columbus area. He plans to work actively with the Columbus Track Club organizing events and clinics for runners.

VA planning construction

Veterans Administration chief Max Cleland has announced approval of a construction project to provide additional ambulatory patient care facilities at the VA medical center, Tuskegee, Ala.

The project, estimated to cost in the area of $4.3 million, will entail construction of a one story addition to building 3A, as well as extensive interior alternations to that building.

The contract also calls for demolition of building 17, Cleland said.

VA's tentative construction schedule calls for the award of an architect/engineer contract in August, award of the construction contract in October 1980, and completion of the work in October 1982.

Cleland also announced the award of a contract to the firm of Heery & Heery Architects and Engineers, Inc., of Atlanta, Ga., for working drawings for a proposed 120-bed nursing home care unit at the VA medical center in Atlanta.

The amount of the contract is $310,646.

The nursing home care unit will cost in the range of $6 million and is tentatively scheduled for completion in October 1981, Cleland said.

Army medics are well trained

The enlisted soldiers of the Army Medical Department are among the best-trained specialists in the Armed Forces, said the highest ranking noncommissioned officer of the Health Services Command (HSC) at his retirement.

Command Sergeant Major Edward E. O'Boyle retired from the Army Oct. 31 after more than 29 years of active duty.

Of the Army's enlisted medical specialists O'Boyle said, "We offer such a high degree of training and education that many soldiers find their acquired skills in great demand by civilian institutions."

HSC's Academy of Health Sciences offers more than 41 medical courses of resident instruction ranging from basic medical specialist training of six weeks duration to such sophisticated courses as the advanced medical laboratory course which is 50 weeks in length.

In addition to being the best trained, the medical soldiers are also among the best prepared to assume a wartime role, noted O'Boyle. "They don't have to simulate situations to remain prepared for their wartime duties, because we work in real life situations with patients who need our care and attention in hospitals across the nation," he explained.

O'Boyle was Brooke Army Medical Center's Command Sergeant Major prior to joining HSC headquarters. His Army career began in 1949 at Camp Pickett, Va. Since then, his assignments included duty with a Korean military advisory group, Fort Sam Houston Post Surgeon's office, Tropical Research Medicine Laboratory in Puerto Rico, and the 22nd Surgical Hospital in Vietnam. He was also Sergeant Major of the 5th U.S. Army Surgeon's office in 1973. (ARNEWS)

Lack of College Degree Is No Officer Candidate Drawback

Army Survey Shows Only 70 Per Cent Have College Sheepskins

If you're undecided whether the Army is the place to get ahead, stop for a minute and realize that six of every 100 officer candidates you pass on the post proper or in the Harmony Church area are not high school graduates and that 24 out of that 100 completed high school but had no college education.

These are percentages compiled by the War Department and announced this week in a survey of the present officer candidate program of the Army.

The survey was of special interest at Fort Benning because one of the 18 officer candidate schools operated by the Army — the great Infantry School — is located at Fort Benning.

The War Department disclosed that before the end of October, the various officer candidate schools will have their highest attendance since their inception. Included in the 18 schools are 70 widely-distributed branches. In any of these schools, only a man serving in the ranks can be appointed.

ONE-THIRD COLLEGE MEN

A survey of more than 20,000 officer candidates disclosed that 34.45 per cent are college gradu-

When Captured Button Your Lip

In this war as in every war, one of the enemy's objectives is to capture prisoners from whom they would like to obtain valuable information.

Before going into action destroy all papers, letters, diaries or tags that might identify your organization.

In the event of capture you should remember that the International Code in regard to prisoners dictates that the only information a soldier has to volunteer is in regard to his name, rank and serial number.

Don't believe the enemy if he promises to drop a message from you to your unit stating that you are safe.

Don't address any letters in such a way that your organization's whereabouts are disclosed.

Remember directions and landmarks, so that in the event you escape, you will be able to tell what you have learned.

Infantry Drops As Flour Bags Turn To Paste

Seventh Observation Squadron Shows Men Danger Of Bombing

Fort Benning's Infantrymen may be subjected to bombing and strafing attacks by enemy aircraft once they move into a theater of operations. So to train the troops to be on guard against enemy aircraft the Seventh Observation Squadron has been assigned to the post — just to plop flour bags on unwary, perspiring troops at every opportunity they have.

Be the Infantrymen officer candidates working out a tactical problem or a platoon from the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning on a field exercise, the observation squadron is most cooperative in agreeing to flour-bag the troops when the opportunity arises.

Based at Lawson Field, the Seventh Observation Squadron is under the command of Major John K. Coughlan, a veteran Air Corps Officer. Lieutenant W. J. James is the operations officer.

The bombing practice from the light observation aircraft serves a double purpose. It provides practical training in giving ground forces air support, demonstrating to troops the value of support in the operations and how to defend themselves against hedge-hopping enemy aircraft. The pilots of the planes likewise gain valuable experience in the art of destroying enemy ground concentrations.

Another phase of the work being done by the squadron is that the pilots fly on reconnaissance missions to observe and se-ates; 34.72 per cent had some college training; 24.35 per cent were high school graduates, and 6:48 per cent were not high school graduates.

The War Department added that "there are no inflexible rules in the Army as to the educational background required for appointment of officer candidate schools. Obviously, the technical branches require more academic training than the non-technical ones. However, even the technical branches require more academic training than the non-technical ones.

"Men who are outstanding in their mental alertness and capacity for hard work have ample opportunities to win commissions under the officer candidate system. A man who is regarded as having the quality of leadership does not lose out through lack of academic training; he is asked to make an alternate choice as well as a first choice among the schools.

cure information about an area, road, route, locality, or objective in co-operation with the ground troops — depending on the nature of the problem they are engaged in.

Variety of Missions

The observation squadrons perform other missions. They also undertake photographic assignments, providing friendly ground troops with aerial photographs with which to study the terrain features ahead.

"Mother" Baker Reigns At "Tigers" Service Club

10th Armored Troops Find Relaxation, Fun At the Service Club

It didn't take the men of the 10th Armored "Tigers" long to find the most popular spot in the Sand Hill Area. That spot has a large sign over the entrance reading "Tenth Armored Division Service Club."

Here at Service Club No. 2 the men find a host of activities to add to their comforts, relaxations and entertainment needs. All this is brought about by the capable and efficient management of Mrs. Winifred H. Baker, Senior Hostess. Her never-ending efforts have given the Tenth one of the top Service Clubs in the country and she is affectionately known to all the boys as "Mother Baker."

Many a young soldier has gone into the office of 'Mother' Baker to talk over his personal problems and there he has found cigarettes handy so that he could relax and feel more at home and tell his troubles to the one who would so willingly help him solve his problems. In the winter time, Mrs. Baker always has candy and apples around for the men to enjoy as they sit in front of the fireplace and partake in the many activities planned.

"I really love my work and couldn't use up all my 15 days of my vacation this year. My day off is Monday but I simply must return at 10:30 to see that all is properly closed in the evening," was Mrs. Baker's answer as to how she enjoyed her work.

Benning Alumni Are In Action In African Blitz

Two major generals well-known at Fort Benning for their work at the post last year and in previous years are in command of important theaters in the U.S. invasion of French Africa.

Capable, aggressive, colorful Maj. Gen. George S. Patton, known to the Army as "Old Blood and Guts" and former commanding officer of Fort Benning, commands the West African landing. General Patton was the commanding officer of the 2nd Armored Division and the First Armored Corps while he was at Fort Benning. He left last year to command desert training in California.

Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, another former post commander and the chief of the 4th Motorized Division while the division was at Fort Benning, is the commander of forces invading Oran.

Another leading general who is acting as deputy commander-in-chief under Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, commander of the invasion forces, is Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark; former chief of Army ground forces and a visitor at Fort Benning earlier this year, with General George C. Marshall, chief of staff.

Ayers to turn 36th Engr Gp over to Shreves Mar. 1

By Pat Brown

An Infantry private who rose to the rank of colonel in the Corps of Engineers will become commander of the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) March 1.

Col. Charles L. Shreves, who was born in Cumberland, Md., will replace Col. Robert E. Ayers, who has been Group commander since August 1977.

Shreves entered the Army in June 1953, and received his commission after being graduated from the Engineer Officer Candidate School, Fort Belvoir, Va.

He has served in various engineer and troop assignments in Austria, Germany, Korea, Okinawa and Vietnam as well as in the United States. Past troop assignments have included that of platoon leader, executive officer, company commander, training officer, battalion executive officer, Chief of Human Relations Division, battalion commander and deputy brigade commander.

He has also served as a Facilities Engineer; Chief, Engineer Plans and Services, and Deputy District Engineer.

Before coming to Fort Benning, he was Assistant Division Engineer and Contracting Officer for the European Engineer Division where he administered a $1.6 billion construction and architect engineer program from the NATO countries.

After reporting here in July of last year, he was officer-in-charge of the planning for the Mobilization Exercise held here last summer, and then spent several weeks in Washington, D.C. as a member of a Command Selection Board. He returned to Benning in time to be the Project Officer for President Carter's visit here in December and then left again to attend the Pre-Command Course at Fort Belvoir, Va. and Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the Senior Officer Legal Orientation Course, Charlottesville, Va.

Shreves is the only officer in the Corps of Engineers to have attended both the Army War College and the Naval War College. He is also a graduate of the University of Nebraska at Omaha and has a Master's Degree from Arizona State University. He is a registered Professional Engineer in Wisconsin.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Shreves resides at Fort Benning with his wife, Inge (Menne) and their children, Heidi, 17, and Ken, 17. Both are students at Spencer High School. Their oldest daughter, Sonja, is a senior at the University of North Alabama.

197th update

By Pat Jones

The 197th Infantry Brigade; undergoing cold weather training at Fort Drum, N.Y., completed individual training last week and has begun company and battalion level maneuvers.

Individual training includes fitting and use of skis and snowshoes, as well as proper dress for the climate. Many hours were spent in this area as the majority of personnel had never been exposed to the sub-zero temperatures.

Battalion training will include field training exercises and maneuvers to test each unit's ability to function under extreme conditions. Battalion training is also supported by the Brigade Tactical Operations Center as well as normal support of other sub units.

Glad you asked

Do you think that the Enlisted Efficiency Report (EER) and Officer's Efficiency Report (OER), now being used, is a fair way of gauging a soldier's performance of duty?

Pfc. Laurie Spray, 15th Finance Section (Disbursing)

I don't think the system is fair. For example, I know an enlisted member who was rated several times. The first time he was given a bad EER when he thought he'd done a good job. The second time (when he was ready to ETS), he got a good EER and admitted he hadn't done much. So really, it's a pointless system.

Sgt. 1st Class John Q. Newby, HHD, 67th Maint Bn

Yes, I think it's fair, but only if the rater understands the job the soldier is doing. I'm a supervisor, and I believe that if a servicemember does a good job and soldiers — that's all that's important. The personality of the person shouldn't interfere with the EER or OER score.

Warrant Officer Milas L. Rose, 197th Bde (Avn Sec)

No, I don't. Using inflated numeral scores as a measurement with limited space for comments is poor. The system allows too many false reports as raters don't rate the same but everyone is judged as though all are rated on the same basis. As bad as this is, all alternative methods I have heard of don't eliminate any of the problems.

Staff Sgt. Josephus Thompson, Co B, NCOSI (PLC)

It's a fair system if it's used correctly, but sometimes people will abuse it. I feel that there's some fudging — it's not necessarily intentional; I think that the lack of knowledge of the proper use of EER's. However, I think that people are becoming more informed on how to properly evaluate their subordinates.

Commentary

Selective Service System

Of all the trends that have developed over the past year, one, public appreciation of the need for an operable Selective Service System, has been very easy to identify. But by including barely enough money in his proposed Fiscal Year 1980 Budget to maintain the existing emasculated system at its present level, President Carter shows that he either failed to appreciate the swell of public support for realistic Selective Service funding or decided to run headlong into this strong shift in public opinion.

The most recent evidence of this shift came from a Harris Poll in December, 1978 which found that 66 percent of the Nation would support the immediate registration of all young people between the ages of 18 and 28 so they would be available if needed in an emergency. An even greater number, 76 percent, supported the notion of having a pool of people available for training and use as needed in a military emergency. These percentages are too significant to be overlooked and yet the President seems to have done just that.

The present Selective Service System, as described by its own Director, by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and by the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, cannot begin to meet the documented need of the military services for large numbers of selectees quickly in the event of a military mobilization. With our Army reserve units short by at least 150,000 people, with the Individual Ready Reserve decimated by a six-year absence of draft calls there is no source of the manpower that would be needed to carry the Army through the early weeks and months of a mobilization. The Selective Service System, as it would be continued under the President's latest budget, could not produce trained replacements in sizeable numbers for at least seven months after a mobilization order was given.

Estimates of the cost of upgrading the Selective Service System to the point at which it could register and classify 18-year olds and have them available for speedy final screening are in the neighborhood of $50 million. This is about five times as much as the President has requested for the next fiscal year, but in the context of the entire amount requested to support our national security needs, a miniscule sum.

There are many issues in the Federal Budget of a half trillion dollars that involve making hard choices, not the least of which is the basic decision of how much to allocate to provide security for our way of life. More often than not, the President is beset by conflicting views over how the defense share of the budget should be allocated but in this case the only dissent against spending more money for a reliable source of mobilization manpower seems to be in the White House.

Civil Service passes Act

Passage of the Civil Service Reform Act is a major milestone in the effort to make government work better for the benefit of all Americans. Congressional support for the President in his determination to cut waste and improve efficiency reflects the deep-seated desires of the American people for a fair, open, honest government.

Reforms of the civil service will provide many opportunities for improving effectiveness — without making unreasonable demands on employees. And, government can be more effective without threat or damage to the careers of the many dedicated workers who already are doing a good job.

But the law itself will not automatically mean better public service. It will merely create a new institutional system and possible new ways of working. The real test will be in the implementation, in making the changes work at every level in the government job ladder.

All employees must help make the system work. There is, in fact, no way in which the reforms can be made to work without employee cooperation. This doesn't mean blind acceptance of the new law, but rather understanding it and then joining in the effort to make it work.

Those of you whose jobs put you in contact with the public have a special part to play. You are the front line troops in the battle to restore public confidence in the civil service. Your attitude and efficiency will be reflected in the public attitude toward all government workers.

Chaplain's corner

Opportunity not limited

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
TSB, Chaplain

One night in New York on the subway I asked a man what was the nearest station to 181st Street. Being a stranger in town I wasn't at all familiar with the stations up that way.

He said, "I don't know."

"You don't know? How can that be, you live in this town, ride the subway every day, and yet you don't know?"

"I ride the subway every night but I never go above 168th Street."

His daily world he explained to me was between 168th Street and 34th Street.

If such a person is not careful he could get a 168th to 34th Street mind. You can live in the greatest city in the world or the smallest hamlet in the country and become awfully little by allowing your horizons to shrink and your visions of the great world to shrink.

You have opportunity in the service that is unlike any you would normally take on your own. You have left that rut and gone out into the world. You see things, that are denied to those trapped in their little world. You can find that beyond the limits of 168th and 34th Street, there are people with hopes and problems; pains and joys just like yours.

God has not limited us in this wonderful creation called the world, we have. Now that you're out of the rut, don't go back. Live your life with your horizons set on destroying the narrow-mindedness that you find, the pettyness you encounter and bring hope for a bigger, better and closer world for us all to live in.

NCO Club to get $85,000 face lift

To get "IN" with the "IN CROWD" Fort Benning's Top 5 Club will be undergoing some remodeling starting around March 1.

According to Sgt. 1st Class William J. Giering, club manager, the construction will cost an estimated $85,000.

The two bars presently located at the club: the Cocktail Lounge and the Stag Bar will receive the face lift. New carpeting, furniture and lighting will be installed in the bars. The bars will be redesigned and relocated in the club, according to Giering. A disco type operation will also be put into effect with the renovation.

Bars remain open

Giering stressed, "There are no plans to close the bars."

The renovation is projected to be completed in five months and reflects a current improvement trend.

Better club facilities and services are seen in the coming years, the Army's director of club management, Col. Lee C. Dickson, said recently.

The Army's 664 clubs and 125 package beverage stores had total sales of $238.1 million in fiscal 1978, up $18.5 million compared to sales of $219.6 million the year before, he said.

Planning produces profit

Dickson attributed the progress of the improved financial results to "deliberate plans" by club managers and commanders to improve operations.

Dickson sees better club management as a key part of the Army's overall efforts to upgrade the quality of life for soldiers and their families.

Past efforts favorable

According to Dickson, the favorable financial results of the past five years have provided the dollars needed for future "attractive clubs providing good food and beverages at affordable prices" to club members.

Dickson said that the $11.3 million net income which clubs realized in fiscal 1978 will provide the money for "much needed" facility improvement.

He added that the money made over the past five years will allow the Army to build more "first class" clubs in the coming years. He pointed out that nearly nine out of ten Army clubs "made money" in 1978.

Profits distributed locally

Contrary to some beliefs, club profits are not brought back to some central point for redistribution, Dickson asserted. "Installation officers and enlisted club branches are separate fiscal entities and the money they make is used to improve local operations."

Army-wide, officers clubs made over $3 million in fiscal 1978 and that money will be used for Officers Club facilities and improving programs in the clubs, he said.

NCO clubs made nearly $8 million and the money that they made will be spent for improvement of NCO and Enlisted clubs.

Patronage increased

Dickson described a cycle whereby better clubs result in increased membership and patronage which helps generate more revenue to improve clubs.

He emphasized that "clubs exist for the members and their families" and added that with "continually increasing membership support," clubs can "continue to improve their facilities and services."

Military policeman honored

The Military Policeman of The Year (1978) for the Law Enforcement Command, Spec. 4 Charles Jones of the 988th Military Police Company, represented Fort Benning at the Columbus Exchange Club's annual Crime Prevention Banquet Feb. 15.

Jones, a military police investigator, is a Cleveland, Ohio native, who graduated from Cleveland State University with a BS in engineering in June 1970. He worked as a detective for the Cleveland Police Department (1970-1977) prior to returning to active duty as a military policeman.

Jones, along with two other Chattahoochee Valley law enforcement officers, received a plaque and $250 for their outstanding efforts in the areas of Law Enforcement and Crime Prevention.

By Cliff Purcell

The TRADOC Publics Affairs Office recently announced that the BAYONET, a civilian enterprise newspaper published for the Fort Benning community, was awarded a special U.S. Army TRADOC Journalism Achievement Award for 1978.

Public Affairs Officer Col. Donald Shuffstall received the award for the USAIC commander. Shuffstall said the award belongs to the units and personnel of Fort Benning who provide the material for publication. He also credited the BAYONET staff for developing and refining that material for release, and the publishers, The Columbus Ledger and Enquirer.

Communication increased

The award cited the BAYONET's "overall improvement coupled with its outstanding front page displays. These moves by the BAYONET staff have enhanced the newspaper's potential for communicating ideas and for supporting information objectives and consistently maintaining the highest journalism standards."

Col. Richard G. Hyde, Chief of Public Affairs TRADOC, explained in a letter to Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey why the award was presented: "The BAYONET has been recognized for overall improvements coupled with the outstanding front page displays thereby enhancing the readability of its above-average presentation. Clearly not an individual award, it is meant for all who shared in making the BAYONET a success. It is with pride and satisfaction that this award is forwarded. The BAYONET exemplifies the purpose of a command information newspaper, promotes Army journalism and supports the command information program."

Staff is delighted

The entire staff of the BAYONET, is delighted and wished to thank the major post units for their support and indulgence this past year, and the TASC photo section who have given outstanding support.

The BAYONET staff also credits the expertise of the Ledger-Enquirer staff; Mr. Joe Riva's Sr., production director; Mrs. Frances Moore, BAYONET layout and photo composition; Mr. James Pope, general platemaking; Mr. Lawrence Smith, manager of photography; and Mr. Kellon Shepard, manager of the offset press unit.

The BAYONET staff invites your continued comments and support and will remain dedicated to serving the Benning community.

Dental hints

Nutrition campaign needed

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of six articles on dental health published by the BAYONET, in cooperation with the Fort Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, Feb. 4-10.

I am attempting to coordinate a good nutrition campaign in the schools to create student awareness of health snacking. In particular, I would like to replace high-sugared vending items with health snacks. Are there guidelines available to assist in such a campaign?

The dental profession certainly appreciates your concern for good nutrition and sound oral health in your school system. While your students are learning about nutrition, they are developing permanent eating habits in the lunchroom, at school concession stands and vending machines.

Children pay price

If your schools are selling sugar-rich foods, your children eventually will pay the price. The relationship between sugar consumption and dental decay has been well established.

Research studies show that the total amount of sugar eaten is not the only factor in the decay process. The frequency of eating sugary foods, the length of time they remain in the mouth and the physical form of the food are equally important. Among the most hazardous items to dental health are sweet sticky snacks, hard candies, sugar-containing breath mints and cough drops and sticky dried fruit, such as raisins.

Further, dental disease is the most widespread disease in the United States today, despite the fact that it is almost totally preventable. By the time a child reaches school age, an average of three or more teeth will be decayed, missing or filled.

In an effort to reduce children's exposure to sweet snacks and to discourage them from becoming dependent on sweets, the American Dental Association recommends the removal of sugar-rich products from school vending machines and school lunch programs and has called for the limitation of advertising of sugar-rich products on children's television programs.

Assistance available

To assist you in planning activities and formulating policies on vending both in the schools and in the entire community, the ADA's Bureau of Dental Health Education has developed a nutrition campaign packet that contains helpful information including regulations, pamphlets, resource articles, Bibliographies and organizational policies (including the ADA, American Medical Association, and National Congress of Parents and Teachers).

Information on obtaining the ADA Nutrition Campaign Packet is available to administrators by contacting the Bureau of Dental Health Education, 211 East Chicago Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, 60611.

AER campaign to kick off Monday

By Garland Zeiher

The 1979 Army Emergency Relief (AER) Fund Campaign will officially kick off Monday at Bldg. 4. Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander, will be guest speaker at the conference.

The 1979 campaign will be conducted March 1 through May 2 with a goal of $25,000. Since the main source of funds for AER assistance is the annual fund campaign, all military personnel will be given the opportunity to contribute when contacted by their AER fund drive key-person.

Project officers have been appointed by each major unit, activity and office throughout the post to collect contributions for the drive. Military personnel are requested to make their contributions at their unit. Retirees living in the tri-city area are asked to send their donations to the AER Office, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905; or bring them in person to the Welcome Center, Bldg. 83, Room 112.

NCOWC business meeting

The NCOWC held their business meeting Feb. 14 at the Top 5 NCO Club with President, Mrs. Patricia Wilson officiating. Many items of business were discussed. A decision was made to purchase two mannequins for Martin Army Hospital to be used in their CPR training course.

Hostesses were Mrs. Vermell Harrell, Mrs. Barbara Hancock, and Mrs. Sandra Jackson.

NCOWC newcomers coffee

The next coffee for newcomers will be held at 10 a.m. Feb. 27 at the NCOWC Lounge on Lawson Field. All newcomers and interested persons are cordially invited to attend.

The NCOWC has much to offer the NCO wife. In addition to the monthly luncheon and brunch, a well supplied ceramic shop is available for your enjoyment. The most important thing about the NCOWC is being involved in community affairs and charities, and helping where needed.

Won't you join now and be a part of this worthwhile organization? We will be looking forward to meeting you.

For further information on becoming a member contact Mrs. Patricia Wilson 689-9656 or Mrs. Ann Cogar 687-0999.

OWC sponsoring art auction

By Diana Landau

On March 3, the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club will sponsor their annual art auction/exhibition at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The exhibition will be from 6-8 p.m. with the auction to begin at 8 p.m. Park West Galleries of New York, Detroit and Atlanta will conduct the auction of 200 custom-framed etchings, engravings, woodcuts, aquatints, lithographs, serigraphs and oil paintings by Alvar, Chagall, Dali, Manet, Neiman, Picasso, Rockwell and many others.

The OWC Annual Art Auction is a major fund-raising activity that supports the many welfare projects at Fort Benning and in the Columbus-Phenix City area. These projects include: assistance for spouse abuse, West Central Georgia State Hospital, Girl and Boy Scouts, Adoptee Program, Red Cross, Learning Abilities Clinic, Music Scholarship at Columbus College, Infan-try Museum, scholarships for high school seniors of military personnel.

The Officers' Club will also feature a la carte dining from 6-8 p.m. and a buffet from 5:30-8 p.m. Reservations may be made for either of your dining pleasures by calling 682-0640.

Whether you browse or bid, come join us, and bring your friends and families for a stimulating evening of art, conversation and dining — you'll be glad you did! Hope to see you there.

BENNING

I came back to the pines and clay
Of Fort Benning again today;
The beginning, they say,
For Infantrymen.

I remember the day
I first came his way,
And the ideals that burned;
But today I returned
Youth spent.

Profession became "just a job" somehow.
So I stand here now, ashamed.
Did Chaldeans, Centurions fret,
Ere they forget, careerism?

But then, I saw them again.
Young men; how young!
Were they always so young?
And I smell and hear
The battle and fear
And remember them falling,
Recalling their cries.

Young faces and eyes
March by today,
And I know why
I stay.

Concern showing tomorrow

Fort Benning Concern, a monthly news and feature TV magazine will air tomorrow at 6 p.m. on WYEA, Channel 38.

Features on this month's program include an interview with three visiting allied officers, a report on Fort Benning's civilian workforce and a feature on the 283rd Army Band.

This month's question asks, "Should women be allowed in combat?" And finally, Fort Benning's Jewish chaplain talks about how he's able to overcome the fact that his religion is different from almost all of those whom he serves. Spec.4 Kirk Dorn is the host.

Your comments are encouraged and may be submitted to: Fort Benning Concern, Public Affairs Office, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Air Force weathermen explain weekend storm

By John Brown

"According to climatological records, Fort Benning has one freak blizzard every 60 years," claims 1Lt John M. Brown, post Chief Forecaster. "And if you remember the eleven inches of snow measured during the February 73 storm, you might think we've had more than our share of snow — but not so. Our phenomena was an ice pellet shower, not snow, which is much rarer than snow at Ft Benning," adds Brown.

Meteorological records maintained at Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron, the Air Force weather station located on Lawson Field which is tasked with weather forecasts, advisories, and warning support to Ft Benning and its aviation assets, reveal the fact that snow actually fell only 42 minutes — from 9:59 to 10:41 a.m. Sunday morning, and only .14 inches accumulated.

The mainstream of precipitation fell in the categories of ice pellets and freezing rain, of which another 1.32 inches were measured. Records indicate freezing rain began at 2:27 Sunday morning (even though temperatures moderated at 33°F), only to be added with ice pellets (commonly called sleet) at 2:53 a.m., and the temperature quickly dropped to 31°, where it remained until 4:15 p.m. when the sleet turned back to rain in 33° temperatures.

Freak union

Technical Sergeant Ricardo Rivera, Det 10 standby forecaster during the storm, explains, "According to existing climate records, freezing precipitation and ice pellets are almost impossibilities at Ft Benning. The system was caused by the freak union of a low pressure center aloft with a stationary front positioned along the southern border of the state. As fronts of this type are unusually high in precipitable water content, the high probability of weekend precipitation existed already and was on the forecast since Friday. But it was the exceptionally rapid movement of that low and its peculiar position in relation to the front that made all the difference. It moved such that just for a few hours we received extremely cold polar air. Mixed with frontal precipitation, it was a short-lived storm, but intense. I issued a weather warning for the Ft Benning Reservation eleven hours and thirty minutes before the first occurrence of freezing rain was observed."

Capt Gibson Morris, Jr., Commander of Det 10, remarked, "The physical distinction between freezing rain and ice pellets should be clearly understood. Freezing rain is liquid precipitation that falls and freezes upon impact with the ground or objects such as aircraft. Usually, freezing precipitation is caused by supercooled water particles, but it may occur when the surface is cold enough to freeze water particles that are near freezing. Ice pellets are transparent particles of ice which are round or irregular in shape and have a diameter of .2

inches or less. Ice pellets are formed by two processes. If continuous precipitation freezes, the result is a transparent ice pellet, or sleet. Snow pellets that become encased in a thin layer of ice are classified as ice pellets. This occurs when a snow pellet begins to melt or refreeze or it may occur when snow pellets come in contact with water droplets while falling. In this case the water freezes, producing a thin layer of ice around the snow pellet. This type falls in a shower. Ice pellets usually rebound when striking hard ground and make a sound on impact."

Precautions to take

As freezing rain is by far the most hazardous condition when walking, driving, or flying, ice pellets can also be hazardous. In both conditions, it is advisable to stay off roads and in a warm place if at all possible. If you have to travel — either on foot or in a vehicle, the following precautions should be taken:

1. Wear loose clothing. This insulates your body and maintains body heat.
2. Don't drink alcohol. This thins the blood and gives only the impression of warming. It increases your likelihood of getting frostbite.
3. Warm extremities in warm water. Do not rub them in snow. This prevents tissue damage.

AAFES has new catalog

A Spring/Summer 1979 Catalog loaded with outdoor sports and leisure equipment, travel needs and ideas for spring-time gift giving is available now at the PX customer service counters, according to Mr. Elston Norden, general manager.

The new catalog will allow customers to order seasonal spring and summer merchandise in addition to the larger selection of items available in the 1978-79 AAFES Catalog. That catalog can still be used until the next edition is published in late summer.

"Our new catalog marks an expansion of service for shoppers who are unable to visit an exchange because they are located at a remote site where there is no AAFES-operated retail store, for customers who are hospitalized or for those who are unable to visit a large exchange," explained James R. Hensley, chief of the AAFES Catalog Sales Center. "We think everyone will enjoy shopping from a new catalog that introduces a wide variety of spring/summer merchandise that is not available to customers through AAFES stores."

Nutrition affects high blood pressure

By Marcia L. Beasley, MHA, R.D.

High blood pressure (hypertension) is a leading cause of disease and death in this country. Approximately one out of six adults in this country has hypertension, however, only 50% know that they have it. Early detection and treatment can significantly reduce the serious results of long severe hypertension.

In the last twenty years, potent antihypertensive drugs have been developed which have revolutionized the treatment for hypertension. These drugs have eliminated the need for the very rigid dietary sodium restriction previously used in a semi-starvation type diet. However, effectiveness of these drugs is definitely enhanced by a moderate sodium restriction and depending upon the individual's response to the drugs, a further sodium restriction may be indicated.

Sodium

Sodium (salt is about 40% sodium) has been found to cause an increase in hypertension among some individuals.

The U.S. Senate's Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs quotes reputable nutritionists as warning: hypertension may develop as a result of high salt intake by children. The Committee recommends a decreased use of salt by all persons.

Calories

Obese individuals with hypertension have a greater risk of coronary atherosclerotic heart disease than the non-obese hypertensive. A reduction in excess weight has shown to decrease blood pressure, sometimes strikingly.

Potassium, fluid, calcium

Other nutrients which have a role in hypertension include potassium, fluids and calcium. Evidence shows that increased potassium may decrease blood pressure possibly by offsetting the adverse effects of high sodium consumption. Potassium replacements and increased consumption is best accomplished by the increased use of foods high in potassium.

The sodium content of water may be high but in Columbus it is very low (3.8 mg sodium per liter).

Research evidence suggests that there is a relationship between the low-calcium diets and increased blood pressure-raising effect of the sodium. Also, there is some suggestion that hypertension is more prevalent in populations who are unable to consume milk or dairy products.

Changing life style

Since the treatment of hypertension must be continued indefinitely, changes in eating habits must be considered in this light — the individual with hypertension is not "going on a diet" but changing life style in regard to eating.

Prevention

The prevention of hypertension requires early recognition (in childhood as well), early beginning to therapy and continued follow-up of such treatment. Basic to prevention is the prevention of kidney and urinary tract infection, attainment of proper lean body weight, stop (never start) smoking and decrease salt (sodium) intake.

Free presentation

As a service to the community during National Nutrition Week, March 4-10, the Columbus District Dietetic Association assisted by the Georgia Heart Association will present The Role of Nutrition in High Blood Pressure (Hypertension) free of charge to the public in the St. Francis Hospital Auditorium at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, March 6.

TALK OF SALT

A salt talk is being held, but this one is not in Europe and the subject is not arms limitations but salt limitations. This talk concerns one-sixth of the U.S. population and one of the leading causes of disease and death in this country.

The Columbus District Dietetic Association assisted by the Georgia Heart Association will present THE ROLE OF NUTRITION IN HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE (HYPERTENSION) at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, 6 March 1979 in the Auditorium, St. Francis Hospital.

The program is designed to alert the general public to the dangers of hypertension, excessive use of salt and the role other nutrients play in the treatment and prevention of hypertension.

The Georgia Heart Association will take the blood pressure of all in attendance.

Registered dietitians from the Dietetic Association will discuss the meaning of high blood pressure, the role of certain nutrients in hypertension and clarify some myths and misunderstandings concerning foods and high blood pressure.

There is no charge for this education program. It is provided as a service for the community during National Nutrition Week which is March 4-10.

Fort Benning soldiers meet Mrs. Coretta King

By John Bayless

Members of the 36th Engr Gp, Law Enforcement Cmd, 34th Med Bn, and Hq Cmd, visited the Martin Luther King Center for Social Change in Atlanta, Feb. 14.

The tour included visits to the Center for Social Change, the Ebenezer Baptist Church and King's grave site. The trip to Atlanta was part of a retreat sponsored by the Sightseeing Road Chapel honoring Black History Month.

The work he began and fought for was radiated to those present by several guest speakers. The social problems that Dr. King faced are continuing to be championed by Mrs Coretta Scott King, president of the Center for Social Change.

As the group prepared to leave they had an unexpected surprise. Mrs. King learned that the group had come from Fort Benning to visit and she stopped by the Center.

"Everyone enjoyed meeting and talking with Mrs. King. It was a perfect ending to a very informative and interesting day. I know everyone will remember meeting a woman who has played such an important part in Black American History," said Chaplain Phillip J. Cassibry.

Black History Week activities planned at mall

By Pat Brown

A number of activities have been scheduled throughout the week of Feb. 26-Mar. 4 at Fort Benning's Main Mall in connection with Black History Week.

Daily, Monday through Saturday at 10 a.m., and on Sunday, at 11 a.m., an exhibition of Nigerian sculpture will be open to the public. The selection of artifacts are from the Mayo-Johnson collection and is designed around 15 pieces of priceless art works from the Yorubas, largest of Nigeria's sculpture-producing tribes.

This display will be supported by additional artifacts from the Bradley Museum and from local artists.

At 1 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, there will be a hair-sculpture demonstration and at 1 p.m. on Wednesday, a hairwrapping demonstration. On Thursday, at 1 p.m., the Post Exchange will sponsor a Fashion Show with door prizes.

Also on Thursday, beginning at 3 p.m., the 283rd Army Band will present a one-hour concert, followed by a concert by the Lavoie Choir at 5 p.m.

Kay Crowley Energy Services

Don't waste heat

If you are among the more than 200,000 Georgians who have added attic insulation in the last two years, then you are well into a responsible, results-oriented home energy conservation program. In addition to taking the major steps, including a thermostat setting of 68 degrees or lower, follow through on other conservation measures that, added together, will increase energy effectiveness in your home and minimize winter heating costs. Acting on the suggestions requires no special mechanical ability.

Do you have an attic fan or disappearing staircase? If so, heat can be lost through the ceiling in which they are placed. Consider building a box around the opening in the attic, then placing insulation on top of the box. You may also need to add weatherstripping to seal the enclosure even more effectively. Scuttle holes should also be covered with insulation which can be held in place by wire or glue.

Holes in the roof caused by turbine roof ventilators also need to be covered in winter. Either tape plastic over the hole from inside or put a plastic trash bag over the turbine and secure it with heavy string or twine.

Reduce the use of kitchen and bathroom ventilation fans in winter since they draw away heated (and ultimately paid-for) air, or, if possible, avoid using them altogether during the heating season.

Consider the use of foam covers for sockets and switch plates located in exterior walls. This new product, placed immediately behind the wall plates, provides an inexpensive method of removing small energy-stealing drafts.

On sunny days, leave curtains and blinds open to allow the sun to warm your house. At dusk or on cloudy days, close curtains and blinds to reduce heat loss. Remember that drapes with insulation or a lining better protect your home from air leakage.

While you're wrapping your house up to conserve energy, don't forget to wrap yourself up in practical, warm clothing made of flannel, wool and wool blends.

Finally, the localized warmth provided by electric blankets may allow you to lower your nighttime thermostat setting even further to save energy.

On Friday at 1 p.m., Black athlete Otis Sistrunk, a professional football player, will be on hand at the Mall to greet and talk with Mall shoppers. This personal appearance will be followed at 3 p.m. with another concert by the 283rd Band.

On Saturday, Explorer Post 76 The Colonial Band will present two concerts, beginning at 11 a.m. and at 1 p.m.

Coffee and cake will be served daily by the Post Exchange throughout the week.

Col. Ben Purcell, professor of Military Science and Commandant of Cadets at North Georgia College, was guest speaker at the Infantry Officer Advanced Class Feb. 14. Purcell was the senior Army officer held POW during the Vietnam conflict, spending more than five years in captivity. Pictured above are items made by Purcell during the time he was held prisoner, 58 months of which were in solitary confinement.

Combat/admin both important

By John Bayless

Some people might ask members of the 18th Replacement Detachment, 36th Engineer Group (CBT) if combat training is as important as their administrative job.

Helping soldiers make the transition to Fort Benning appears to be the main job of the men and women assigned to the 18th Repl. Det., said 1st Lt. Earnest C. Smith, commander.

However, being combat ready has become just as important as their administrative jobs and our people have discovered that field training can be very rewarding, Smith continued.

Just recently, the 18th Repl. Det. was involved in an FTX held Feb. 12-15, which emphasized the basic combat skills such as camouflage, perimeter security, CBR Training, and noise and light discipline. This training instilled confidence that each man and woman would be ready for a war time environment, Smith noted.

"Our people are professionals at whatever they do whether it be administrative or combat jobs and must be perfected through continuous training," he concluded.

Sgt. Michael D. Watson of the 18th Replacement Detachment, 36th Engineer Group rigs a simulator, as part of the training conducted, by the 18th Repl. Det. during their recent FTX.

AUSA sponsors Jaycee dinner

Fifty Columbus Jaycees were honored guests at the 10th Annual Jaycee Appreciation Night Feb. 15.

This year's program and dinner were sponsored by the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) and the 50th Co, 5th Stu Bn, TSB.

The Jaycees were welcomed by TSB Commander, Col. George Geczy Jr., at Wigle Hall. They then viewed a film telling the OCS story and toured the candidate's barracks.

The OCS choir serenaded the guests in the dayroom and the class president spoke to them. Following a social hour, the Jaycees, guests and 75 candidates had dinner at the Follow Me Dining Facility.

Col. (Ret) Wallace Veaudry, 2nd vice president of the local AUSA Chapter, presents an AUSA plaque to Columbus Jaycee's President, H. Russell Byrd, for ten years continuous service to the U.S. Army and Fort Benning, during Jaycee Appreciation night at Fort Benning, Feb. 15.

Catalog speeds delivery

The Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is one of 37 Continental United States (CONUS) stores that is offering the over-the-counter program that allows customers to order merchandise from the AAFES catalog for delivery to the exchange, saving mailing and insurance charges and insuring quicker delivery.

The program which is less than six months old, began on a test basis in two exchanges in June, and customers quickly accepted the convenience of placing and picking up their merchandise orders at the exchange.

AAFES expanded the program to 35 additional exchanges, and sales surpassed every expectation — so much so that some out-of-stocks have been reported. However, AAFES is developing an improved automated inventory management system, and shortages in the increasingly popular program should be eliminated shortly.

"We are extremely pleased that customers have accepted this new program and are taking advantage of the quick, easy and less expensive methods of purchasing AAFES catalog merchandise," stated Jerry Robinson, Benning shopping center manager. "Our staff will do everything possible to expedite the orders when they are received from the AAFES catalog warehouse, and we ask for the understanding of our customers while we make these adjustments to what is proving to be a very popular extension of the catalog program."

Customers are also reminded to check the catalog order desk for the new catalog supplements, which are issued to introduce new items into the program during the year:

Some may not reenlist

Reenlistment curbs, mostly for first term soldiers but also affecting many E-4s and E-5s, took effect Oct. 16, MILPERCEN officials said recently.

First term male soldiers who entered active duty from October 1975 through September 1976 who hold one of the following MOSs may be restricted from reenlisting in these MOSs. They include: 23Q, 24B, 24D, 24F, 35K, 51R, 54D, 62G, 62J, 63G, 63H, 71Q, 73C, 75B or 91E.

The same restrictions apply to first term male soldiers who entered active duty from October 1974 through September 1975, who hold MOSs: 22K, 23Q, 24B, 24D, 24E, 41C, 43M, 55B or 68D.

Soldiers in these two previous groups may still be allowed to reenlist in these MOSs but must submit, along with reenlistment requests, a list of three shortage MOSs they are willing to accept training in if their primary MOS request is rejected.

All first term soldiers, regardless of when they entered active duty, face the same restrictions of when they entered, submit three alternate MOSs for retraining if they hold MOS 02B, 02E, 02F, 02G or 02M.

Other restrictions prevent soldiers in grade E-5 and above and E-4s on standing promotion lists, who do not now have a primary MOS in CMF 91, from reenlisting for retraining into MOS 42D, 42F, 76J, 91B, 91D, 91E10, 91JM, 91N, 91P, 91R, 91S, 91U, 91Y or 02B.

Soldiers in grade E-6 or E-5 and on a standing promotion list may not reenlist for retraining in MOS 42C, 71G, 91G, 91H, 91L, 91Q, 91T or 94F.

No soldier in grade E-5 or E-4 and on a standing promotion list may reenlist for retraining in MOS 13B.

Soldiers may not reenlist for training in MOS 91R3D if they have not held 91R as a primary MOS for at least one year. Soldiers with four years or more active duty service may not reenlist for training for one of the following MOSs but must have verification of having completed prerequisite courses appropriate for each MOS. They are: 35G, algebra; 91N, chemistry, physics and algebra; 91R, math; and 92B, algebra and chemistry.

More information on these latest reenlistment controls is available through local reenlistment NCOs. (ARNEWS)

It's that taxing time again

It's that time again . . . time to start assembling papers and preparing income tax returns.

1040 or 1040A

The first decision to make is whether to file the Long or Short Form. People with additional sources of income and various deductions or tax credits should consider the Long Form (1040). In most other cases, the Short Form (1040A) is the answer.

Here are a few tax tips to keep in mind:

- GI Bill or VA benefits are not taxable.
- If you are married, you can file jointly or separately. Usually the joint return is more advantageous.
- You may file a joint return if your spouse died in the past two years and you have a dependent child. You must use the Long Form (1040). You cannot claim exemption for your spouse but can use the joint tax table. Any child born alive, though deceased during the tax year, may be claimed as a dependent.
- You may file as Head of Household (and get a better tax rate) if you are either unmarried, or married living apart, and have a dependent child who lived with you all year.
- You can claim as a dependent your child who is a full time student for at least 5 months of the tax year, regardless of how much income the child has or how old he/she is.
- If you are divorced or legally separated at the end of the year, you are considered to be single for the entire year.
- If you are married to a non-resident alien and live in the U.S., you can file a joint return, but must report all income regardless of where it is earned.

• You can designate $1.00 to help pay campaign expenses for the next Presidential election. This does not reduce your refund or increase your tax.

• You may be eligible to deduct moving expenses if they were more than the amount you were reimbursed.

• If you made less than $8,000 (jointly if married) and have a dependent child who lived with you all year, you may be eligible for the earned income credit. This can reduce your tax or add to your refund if you pay no tax.

Chemicals damage eyes

Methyl Ethyl Ketone Peroxide is used as a catalyst for polyester resins which are used for boat repair (fiberglass resin), certain casting resins, some paints, and hole fillers. The catalyst is added to fiberglass resin before the resin is applied. A drop of this catalyst in the eye will progressively destroy the tissue of the eye and result in blindness, unless immediate action (within four seconds) is taken to wash the catalyst from the eye.

Once the chemical has started destroying the eye, there is no known way of stopping the destruction or repairing the damage.

Consequences serious

A report of one case of MEKP eye exposure demonstrates the serious consequences. The accident occurred while fibreglassing a chair at home. Though the victim made every effort to wash his eyes, several minutes apparently elapsed before the water was located. The victim lost one eye almost instantly; the other was lost over a period of about eight years.

Safety devices

Wearing chemical safety goggles will prevent chemical eye injuries. Eyewash fountains or eyewash bottles should be readily available wherever chemicals are used or handled. If eye exposure should occur, rinse the eye(s) immediately with water for at least 15 minutes and then obtain medical attention.

The cost of a pair of goggles is a very small price to pay when you consider that your eyesight is irreplaceable.

Reserve aviators plan meeting

Reserve Component aviators will have a greater-than-usual stake in the 21st Annual meeting of the Army Aviation Association of America (AAAA) which will be conducted in Atlanta, GA, April 20-21, 1979.

The meeting of AAAA in Atlanta is historic in that it is the first time that the organization has held its annual meeting other than in Washington, D.C. in October and piggy-backed onto the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army.

Maj. Gen. Emmett H. Walker Jr., Director of the Army National Guard, and Maj. Gen. Henry Mohr, Chief of the Army Reserve, will make presentations on the Reserve Component aviation program. Additionally, Forces Command, in its presentation, will review the Reserve Component aviation force structure as well as discuss the Flying Hour Program (FHP).

Other professional sessions at the Atlanta meeting, following a keynote address by the Department of Army representatives on personnel and logistical requirements to meet wartime scenarios; a presentation by Training and Doctrine Command on special programs and doctrinal developments; Aviation Research and Development Command's pitch on aircraft survivability in the mid-and-high-intensity combat environments; plus several industry presentations.

The program begins at 1 p.m. Friday, April 21, at the Colony Square Hotel in uptown Atlanta and will conclude with the annual awards dinner and reception on Saturday night.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting the Aviation Division, Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, FORSCOM. The principal action officer is Lt. Col. Tony Gonzalez, Autovon 588-2709. Queries regarding room reservations should be directed to the Colony Square Hotel, (404) 892-6000. (FORSCOM N-5)

Professor Safety says

Here is advice for using your maintenance-free battery safely:

- Don't set your battery on its side or upside down. Because of their smooth tops, these batteries may appear to be sealed, but many of them aren't.

- To check the condition of the battery, always use the "load testing" system — checking the voltage the battery delivers while subjected to a normal starting load.

- Never "quick charge" a maintenance-free battery. An explosion can result from over-heating, overcharging or rapid charging.

- When jump-starting either to or from a maintenance-free battery, remove the jumper cables as soon as the car is started.

- Always warn the service station attendant, garage repair mechanic or tow truck driver that you have a maintenance-free battery. (Courtesy of Automotive News, 20 Feb, 78) and The Safe Foreman Nov. 78.

USAMU women win rifle matches

By Tommy Pool

The battle of the sexes came to Fort Benning over the weekend as the National Indoor Rifle Sectional Championships and Champion of Champions Invitational Rifle Tournament were completed with surprise results in both matches.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU)

members Wanda Jewell and Karen Monez locked up in a shot for shot duel while outdistancing all other competition in the process. Both Jewell and Monez finished with perfect scores of 800 out of 800 with Jewell being declared the winner by virtue of more X's, or center shots, 71 to 69 for Monez. Both scores tied the existing national record. Third place went to Kathy Kelly (796) another female from Karen Monez and Wanda Jewell (right) rank as two of the top female shooters in the USAMU.

USAMU, as she defeated two time Olympic Champion Lones Wigger who finished in fourth position.

In the Champion of Champions Tournament held the day before, Karen Monez and Lones Wigger ended in tie after a day of shooting with 2,393 points for both competitors. Again Monez upset the pre-match favorite by winning the tie-breaking procedure. Third place went to Linda Baily at 2,386 as Earl Ellis finished fourth at 2,375.

In team competition, a new national record was set by the Womens Team of Jewell (399), Monez (399), Kelly (397) and Baily (400) with a total of 1,595 points, sparked by Baily's perfect score of 400. The new mark exceeded the old record by 11 points. In the sectional team championships, Wigger, Monez, Jewell and Baily all fired 399 points out of 400 to post an excellent 1,596 points for an early lead in the national ranking. National Sectional Championships are held nationwide with the final individual and team winners announced in May.

Doughboys lose twice to Air Force team

The Fort Benning Doughboys ran into some tough luck at Warner Robins AFB this past weekend as they dropped two games to the Air Force team 78-75 and 82-81.

High scorers for the Doughboys in the first game were Charlie Jackson and Frankie Tatum with 16 points each. In the second game, it was Rick Donnell putting on a one man show as he hit for 37 points.

Doughboy coach Tony Resino blamed lackadaisical play for the Doughboys double loss. He also added that spirits are running high now after Monday's practice session here on post.

The Doughboys will play tomorrow night at Briant Wells Field House at 7:30 p.m. against the champs from the Columbus Industrial League.

Doughgirls on the go

Because the Doughboys have had such a good season, many people might have overlooked another basketball team enjoying a fine year. They are the Fort Benning female basketball team, the Doughgirls, and they have been playing some winning basketball.

In competition against other Army posts, they sport a 6-2 record with the two losses coming at the hands of Fort McClellan and Fort Campbell. They won the Columbus City League, a women's recreational league, with a 16-0 record. In that league, the Doughgirls averaged more than 60 points per game.

Members of the Doughgirls include: Cheryl Kaufman, Sylvia Jones, Earlie Rockett, Denese Nimons, Debbie Bourque, Rosa Valez, Cindy Maxwell, Sandra Kensley, Angie Burns, Shirley Scott, Iris Love and Princess Sears.

Coach Hezzie Baines has coached female teams for four years and feels this team is the best he's seen. "They have all it takes, all they need to do is go out and get it."

When Baines refers to "it", he might be talking about the TRADOC championships coming up March 11-17 at Fort Jackson.

The entire Doughgirls team would like to thank the company commanders and first sergeants involved for their cooperation and support.

Post markmen excel

Six firing members of the USAIC Marksmanship Detachment (Provisional) Composite Rifle Team participated at the Cherry Point Marine Station NRA Matches on February 18-19.

Due to the adverse weather conditions, only individual matches were held. Weather conditions ranged from -5 to 0 degrees wind-chill factor with winds 15 to 25 mph gusting to 35 mph.

The cold was so intense that some weapons would not function due to the lubricant freezing. These weapons had to be operated by hand.

There were 44 competitors entered in the matches of which 13 were civilians.

Three members of the USAIC team won awards during the individual matches.

Among the top winners for the detachment were: Victor Kinikin, who placed first in the Unclassified Master 300 yd. Rapid Fire, Todd Wenzel, who placed first in the Master Class 200 Off-Hand, and Glenn Camp, who placed first in the Expert Class 600 Slow Fire.

The other members of the detachment were Norman Hosier, Bill Elian and Ronald Muzyka.

The USAIC Post Basketball Tournament is underway. Competition began Tuesday and will continue to the tournament finale which will take place on March 2 at the Briant Wells Field House at 6 p.m.

Tournament games will be played at the Briant Wells Field House and Audie Murphy Gym. Thirteen teams from all the major commands on post will compete in the championship.

The golf swing that produces a long, straight drive is not in itself any different than the swing which is used to hit a 9-iron shot close to the flagstick. For most golfers, however, hitting the longer clubs is the toughest part of the game and there are several reasons why this is so.

One reason is that as the club gets longer in length, it gets tougher to control during the swing. Imagine trying to swing a club as long as a telephone pole. Another inherent difficulty in swinging the longer clubs, by that we mean woods and long irons, is the lack of loft angle on

Golf Part III:

Swinging for distance and accuracy the club face. Possibly the greatest fear any golfer has is not getting the ball off the ground, especially if there is a water hazard to clear on the way to the green. This lack of loft angle on the club face gives the golfer the impression that he must give the club a little extra help to get the ball airborne. What results is a golf swing with a pronounced scooping action, which usually doesn't produce the desired shot.

We have just mentioned that the longer clubs are built for distance, and for this reason most golfers feel that their swings must shift into high gear when they pull one of these clubs out of the bag. After all, where is the distance going to come from unless the swing literally pulls the golfer out of his socks?

Efficient swing important

As was said in the beginning, the swing with a driver should be no different from that with a pitching wedge. A pitching wedge is shorter in length than a driver, has more loft angle on its club face and is not the club to be hitting long distances with. Therefore, most golfers feel more at ease with the wedge. They are more likely to swing the club away from the ball with the arms, with the rest of the body following their lead. The key here is no waste of motion. A man five feet tall may be able to hit farther than someone six feet four inches. Why? Because the best swing is the one that doesn't waste energy on anything else than hitting the ball. When a player swings and his arms, legs, feet and hips are all moving in different directions, that means energy is being wasted.

Swinging aids

There are a couple of good swing aids that golfers can do to teach themselves the value of a swing with no excess motion. One is to take practice swings with the feet together. With the feet in this position, the golfer will surely fall flat on his face if he swings the club other than with a smooth arm swing. Another drill is really a mind game. Imagine yourself standing inside a barrel which comes up to your waist. When taking full practice swings, the hips turn within the barrel, never making contact with the sides of the barrel. What the drills stress is to swing the club back with the arms first, allowing the hips and legs to respond in turn. A more efficient swing is the result, and when hitting the long ball, that can be very important.

This series has chosen to discuss the long and short aspects of the game before going into the basics. Next week we shall cover as many of the basics as possible to include club selection, grip, stroke and helpful hints.

Horsing around

This crazy looking game is donkey basketball. These games are always a whole lot of fun and people at Fort Benning will soon be able to see it first hand. The Fort Benning Dependent Youth Activities will sponsor a donkey basketball game at the Briant Wells Field House on Feb. 27 at 7:30 p.m. Admission for the game is $1.50 for everyone. Funds raised will benefit Benning's Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Junior Rifle Club. If one of these games isn't enough for you, you can catch another donkey game to be played at the Harmony Church Field House on Feb. 28 for ITB personnel only.

Runner's profile

50 miles a breeze for Lance Lovelace

By Julie Casey

Running is a way of life for Lance Lovelace, a specialist four assigned to the 43rd Engineer Battalion. He runs an average of 50 to 60 miles a week and more when a marathon is on the horizon.

He was All-State in soccer his sophomore year in college. To look at him, you wouldn't believe that he once weighed 165 pounds.

"When I joined the Army in 1975, I wasn't used to eating three square meals a day and didn't take the time to burn off the extra calories because of cold Alaskan winters," commented the lean, young man at 135 pounds.

He began crosscountry skiing and running a little when weather permitted. He arrived at Benning in 1977, continuing his struggle with fitness when he met Tom Coniglio.

"I couldn't believe him. He was so involved in running. All he talked about was running. I arrived here in August and Tom felt that I should race in October. I went out and tried to run four miles and almost died in the Georgia heat," he said.

Lovelace ran his first race in October, a five-miler in Auburn, Ala.

Determined to get in shape

"I was running two and a half miles a day and had to run five that weekend. I was stunned to see men twice my age racing past me. I didn't realize how bad off I was," commented the young man who has completed two marathons.

Lovelace came back running harder than ever with more incentive for physical fitness.

Lance Lovelace

"When I started running, I felt I was accomplishing more than going out and drinking with the boys. Although I never really did much of that anyway," he said.

Persistence pays off

A couple of weeks later, Lovelace ran a four miler in 23 minutes and 51 seconds.

"I was effervescent, so happy and feeling more confident because I did so much better than my first race," he said remembering.

Family and friends at home noticed the drastic change.

"I went home, on leave, and they couldn't believe all the miles I was running," he said.

In the beginning of 1978, Lovelace began training with Coniglio, setting his sites on The WRBL-Pepsi Cola Columbus Marathon in March. He trained really heavy that January and February and lost five more pounds. He ran the out and back course missing the Boston qualifying (three hours) time by five minutes.

"I felt great during the marathon and probably would have pushed it a little more if I had known I was so close to qualifying. You can't always depend on your training. I went out and put in 350 miles the month before the Callaway Gardens Marathon Nov. 11 and didn't do as well," he said.

The Callaway marathon was hot and tiring for most of the runners. Temperatures rose to 86 degrees during the run making it much too hot for a marathon.

His favorite race

"I was running at a 6:30 pace the first 10 miles with a friend talking the whole time. I started downing liquids, after that, but it wasn't doing any good. The heat was a surprise to me that day. The last four miles were hard and I was running thirsty to finish," said the runner who completed the 26 miles and 385 yards in 3 hours and 23 minutes.

Lovelace felt his favorite race was 10,000 meters (6.2 miles). In December, he ran a personal record (PR) of 36 minutes and 51 seconds in a driving winter rain.

"I like runners because they are not greedy about their own accomplishments. They are happy about others' accomplishments," he said. "Running has a mellowing effect. You do not run into many depressed or pessimistic runners."

Lovelace's plans for the future include logging 2,400 miles, a hundred more than last year, and to give running a go in the civilian world.

"I'm very happy with my running and the people that I've met. When I leave, I'm going to meet new running friends. They are great people."

Disco dance

McGraw Manor Youth Council will hold a Disco Dance tomorrow night from 7:00-11 p.m. in Building 11303, (Community Life Building) for ages 6 to 19 years.

The admission is 50¢. Snacks will be available and chaperons will be present.

Veteran Days

This year's Veteran Days, a special two day salute to Veterans, will be held at Peachtree Mall, from opening to closing, tomorrow and Sunday, so that the citizens of Columbus through their Veterans Organizations can say "Thank You - Veterans."

A special brief ceremony will be held on the stage inside of the Mall opposite the main entrance tomorrow at 2 p.m. to officially open the event. A Proclamation will be read designating the weekend as Veterans Days.

The Chattahoochee Valley Veterans Council, comprised of all of the local Veterans organizations supported by the U.S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning and other veteran oriented organizations and agencies, is the sponsor of this event.

Teacher Training Workshop

A Teacher Training Workshop will be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg 2605 Dixie Road, Wednesday evening, Feb. 28 and Thursday morning and evening, Mar. 1.

The purpose of the workshop is to train teachers and leaders as church school teachers, vacation Bible school teachers, leaders of youth and children's groups and adult groups.

A free nursery will be provided for small children upstairs in Bldg 2605. All interested persons are urged to attend. Call Mrs. John Waldrop at 545-2366 or 544-4594 for further information.

If you play trumpet, french horn, trombone, oboe, clarinet, or drums and ARE ABLE TO READ MUSIC BEYOND THE ELEMENTARY LEVEL, you are invited to contact WO1 O'Preska, Bandmaster, 283rd Army Band (545-5313) to arrange for an audition.

All personnel accepted will be considered for permanent assignment to the 283rd Army Band.

Women at West Point

CBS will air "Women at West Point." The Feb. 20 edition of "US" magazine published an account of CBS's Feb. 27 TV movie "Women at West Point," saying, "The film concerns itself with the severe plebe-year trials of the female cadets who entered the point in 1976 and who will become its first women graduates a year from June." The account continues, "The film's producers promise a sensitive yet authentic rendering of the difficulties of entering this rigorously military all-male society — one that not a few young men have found too difficult to endure."

Air time will be from 8 p.m. till 10 p.m. on CBS, WRBL, Channel 3.

Black History Month display

A unique display will be available for viewing at the Fort Benning Mall from Feb. 26 until 4 Mar. in conjunction with Black History Month.

Highlighting the exhibit will be rare Nigerian artifacts from a private collection in New York. The priceless pieces include bronze and wooden sculptures and jewelry.

Columbus' Bradley Museum and local black artists will also contribute works of art to the exhibit.

The public is invited and the hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Family Pops Concert

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra is presenting a Family Pops Concert March 3 at 8 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Admission is free.

World Day of Prayer

A World Day of Prayer will be observed at The Infantry Center Chapel on Fort Benning, Mar. 2 at 10 a.m. Mrs. Alice Chapin, Rex, Ga., will be the guest speaker. The women of Africa for international order of service, prepared by use, follows the theme "Spiritual Growth."

All persons are urged to join the Protestant Women of the Chapels in this time of prayer and giving. Contact Mrs. Waldrop, 545-2366 or 544-4594 for information.

Foreign made vehicles

Overseas auto requirements differ

"If you plan to buy a foreign made vehicle overseas for import to the United States, be sure it meets U.S. safety and emission requirements. Also be sure it has a manufacturer's plate attached, certifying that it meets those standards."

That's the advice of commander J.W. Lunn, S.E., USN, Chief of the Terminal Management Branch at the Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) Headquarters here. He cited two examples in which military members' foreign-built automobiles were impounded by U.S. customs because they failed to meet import requirements.

In one case a sergeant's Honda automobile was impounded at the U.S. port of entry and the owner was told that it would not be released unless he posted a bond equal to its value, $3,000. Customs officials told him the bond would be returned if the vehicle was brought into compliance with federal highway safety and emission standards within 90 days.

Thinking the manufacturer had merely forgotten to affix the required label the sergeant left in the vehicle at the port, continued to his new duty station, and wrote the manufacturer, asking for certification that the vehicle was built to comply with U.S. standards. The company wrote back, advising the sergeant that his vehicle's design and engine could not be modified to meet U.S. requirements.

Impoundment expensive

Lunn said a captain reassigned from Europe to an Army post in California bought a used Mercedes as a second car and arranged for a commercial carrier to deliver it to New York and drive it to John F. Kennedy International Airport prior to his arrival there. The captain planned to drive the Mercedes to California, taking leave enroute.

"To be on the safe side the captain had paid a dealer in Europe more than $200 for modifications which, the dealer told him, would bring the Mercedes into compliance with U.S. safety and emission requirements. Upon his arrival at UFK he learned that customs officials had impounded the vehicle and placed it in commercial storage because, even with the dealer modifications, it failed to meet U.S. standards."

Unable to pay the required $2,000 bond, a $400-plus shipping bill and the accrued storage charges, the captain left the car in storage and continued his journey by air. By the time he obtained modification instructions from the manufacturer, more than $1,500 in storage charges had accumulated. At last report, the storage charges had grown to more than $1,800 and the owner had not claimed his automobile, Commander Lunn said.

He said the Clean Air Act prohibits the importation of any 1968 or later model year motor vehicle engine unless it conforms with applicable U.S. air pollution standards.

"If you import a nonconforming vehicle, you are liable for a civil penalty of up to $10,000," Lunn warned.

Certificate of conformity

"Only vehicles which are covered by a certificate of conformity with U.S. standards may be imported without posting bond until conformance is established. Certified vehicles can be ordered for delivery overseas through numerous tourist-delivery programs offered by foreign car dealers and some travel organizations. 1971 and later model vehicles and 1978 and later model motorcycles manufactured in conformity with the standards will have a label showing that they conform. This label is affixed in the engine compartment or in another reasonably accessible location."

He said 1968-70 vehicles manufactured in conformity with U.S. standards can be identified by a Department of transportation doorpost label indicating that federal safety standards have been met.

Wary of claims

"Be very wary of accepting claims by anyone that a used vehicle obtained overseas meets standards or can be readily modified to meet them. Most vehicles manufactured abroad in conformity with U.S. standards are exported for sale in the United States. It's highly unlikely that a used vehicle obtained overseas meets U.S. safety and emission standards," Lunn warned.

He said further information may be obtained by writing to Director, Office of Standards Enforcement, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 2100 2nd Street, S.W., Washington, U.C. 20590. Additional information is available from Public Information Center (PM-215), U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C. 20460. (ARNEWS)

Army training program is reborn

A military training program, phased out in November 1975, received a new lease on life recently with the reestablishment of the Army's Physician Assistant Training Program.

According to an official in the Army Surgeon General's office, the Physician's Assistant Training Program prepares qualified persons to support military physicians in minor medical cases. Physician Assistants can treat anything the supervising doctor feels they're qualified to handle based on their training, the official said.

A two-year program, the PA training has one year of classroom instruction and one year of on the job experience in a hospital. Soldiers who complete the two-year training program receive a U.S. Army Reserve warrant officer appointment and serve four years of active duty.

Active duty enlisted personnel interested in the Physician's

Assistant program should submit their applications as soon as possible through local personnel offices to: Superintendent, Academy of Health Sciences, U.S. Army, Attn: PA Branch, Fort Sam Houston, Tx. 78234.

The course is slated to begin during the second quarter of fiscal year 1979. (ARNEWS)

VA issues cards

The Veterans Administration will issue personal identification cards to more than two million service-disabled veterans.

The move was ordered by VA Administrator Max Cleland who said the identification cards will expedite medical care for the disabled veterans.

In a letter to 2,225,000 veterans receiving VA monthly compensation checks for service-connected disabilities, Cleland explained the priority system and enclosed an application blank which veterans are to return to obtain the cards.

Also eligible for the cards, in addition to those Cleland wrote, are another 500,000 veterans with service-connected disabilities for which they are not now being compensated. These veterans may call the nearest VA regional office or medical center for information. (ARNEWS)

Korean assignments

Un-sponsored dependents face woes

Command sponsorship: Korea-bound dependents quickly learn the difference it makes in their lives.

Generally speaking, command-sponsored dependents are entitled to all the privileges and services available in CONUS.

Non-command sponsored dependents get only what is required by law and, according to the Joint Committee on Military Appropriations of the 94th Congress, that boils down to medical care.

Presently there are about equal numbers of sponsored and non-sponsored U.S. military dependents in Korea, with the total fluctuating but averaging around 13,000.

It was a different story two years ago. Use of support services by non-command sponsored dependents was stopped by the Joint Committee in 1976. In February of that year, the Secretary of Defense directed the uniformed services to implement the policy, and it was made effective in Korea as of July 1, 1976.

Congress expressed two main concerns on dependents in Korea: the overcrowding of support facilities, and evacuation of non-combatants in case of war.

Withdrawal of support service from non-sponsored dependents was one way of saying "We don't want you there."

Action proved effective

The action proved effective. The number of non-sponsored dependents declined from nearly 12,000 in February of 1976 to 6,700 in June 1978.

Gen. John W. Vessey, Jr., Commander of U.S. Forces Korea and 8th Army summed up his position in an interview, commenting that, "It's a rough life for those who come over here and who don't have Command sponsorship, but some have elected to come anyway."

"I can't violate the edicts of my superiors to give them support I'm not authorized to give them."

The command's interpretation of Congress' phrase that "in no case will non-sponsored dependents be permitted to use support services" means that not only are such dependents denied access to schools, commissaries, exchanges and class VI stores, but their sponsors have a monthly dollar purchasing limit designed to cope with only the sponsor's needs.

Education expensive

Education for school-aged non-command sponsored dependent youngsters in Korea is expensive. There are three Western-type foreign schools with curriculums comparable or above normal U.S. standards, but yearly enrollments cost from $1,400 to $3,000 per child.

Reactions and opinions from the dependents themselves on the subject of sponsorship differ sharply.

Military-oriented publications have published dependents' stories and letters ranging from bitter complaints of second class citizenship to replies of "The Army never promised you a rose garden: If you don't like it, go home."

Whatever the emotional overtones may be, there are some real problems faced by dependents who choose to come to Korea without command sponsorship. The three areas of housing, food and convenience turn out to be the biggest headaches for most.

Editor's note: Part II of this article will appear in next week's issue of The BAYONET.

Be prepared for tornado season

It's tornado season again in Georgia. As a result, this past week has been designated as Tornado Preparedness Week throughout the state.

Fort Benning's tornado readiness program held it's own preparedness week which coincided with the statewide program. A full scale tornado alert, complete with sirens, took place yesterday at Benning to test the post's readiness in the event of a real tornado emergency.

Should a tornado approach, the following precautions could save your life:

IN HOMES, open some windows (but stay away from them); take shelter in the basement or under heavy furniture in the center of the house.

IN SHOPPING CENTERS, go to a designated shelter area, (not to your parked car).

IN OPEN COUNTRY, move away from the tornado's path at a right angle. If there is no time, lie flat in the nearest depression with your hands shielding your head.

IN SCHOOLS, move quickly to shelter areas or to an interior hallway on the lowest floor.

IN OFFICE BUILDING, go to a interior hallway on the lowest floor or to a designated shelter area.

IN FACTORIES, move quickly to shelter areas.

IN MOBILE HOMES, evacuate the trailer park for low protected ground, if there is no shelter nearby, since mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to overturning during strong winds.

In the event of a severe thunderstorm or tornado watch, personnel are advised to listen for radio and television broadcasts for the latest national weather service bulletins.

1st Sgt. Daniel Stevens

Professional profile

First Sergeant Daniel Stevens, E Co., 3rd Bn, 1st ITB, has served in the United States Army for the past eighteen years. He entered the Army and took basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. From there he went on to Fort Hood for AIT and finally on to Fort Campbell for airborne training and the RECONDO School.

Stevens saw a tour of duty at Fort Richardson, Ala. before coming to Benning to work as an instructor in the Airborne Dept. His stay at Benning was interrupted twice over the years; he toured Vietnam as a small arms instructor and he worked at Fort McClellan as an instructor at the NCO Academy.

On Jan. 13, 1978, Stevens was promoted to 1st Sgt. of his current unit.

Daniel and his wife, Carol, have two children: Derick, 14 and Sherri, age 11.

First Sgt. Stevens takes great pride in his work and he has shown how far one can go with what he calls the "can do" attitude.

Jose Fantuzzi, Fort Benning Commissary officer (center), accepts an award from Charles Fulmore, director, Southeast Commissary Field Office, for the Best Commissary in the Southeast Region for 1978. Looking on is Col. Richard McKee, deputy post commander. The Commissary, which serves 65,000 customers monthly, competed against 19 other commissaries for the award.

Lieutenant Col. Stephen Perry Jr. congratulates Spec. 5 Charles Wimberly, C Co., 4th Bn, 1st ITB, during the weekly command retreat ceremony held in the battalion area at Todd Field. The command retreat ceremony is usually conducted by a battalion or larger unit, with all members of the command present, to honor the flag. The ceremony is an opportunity to honor selected individuals for their achievements. On Feb. 4, Charles Wimberly received an Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service while assigned to D Co., 79th Cbt. Engr. Bn., 18th Engr. Bde., U.S. Army Europe.

Captain John Regan (left) hands over command of Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command to Captain Tim Piister during a change of command ceremony held Friday, Feb. 9 in front of Hq. Co. Captain Piister was previously assigned to the office of the secretary, Infantry School, as Chief of Academic Records. Capt. Regan will soon be reporting to a new assignment in Turkey.

U.S. Army photos by Carl Crump

USAIC 'Tank Buster' display highlights Veteran Day's activities at Mall

By Pat Astran

No, we don't salute Veteran's Day, it's "Veteran Days" this year. Columbus was the first city in the nation to proclaim FY 1977 as, "Disabled Veteran and Vietnam Outreach Year" to help those in need of employment and now the first with their second year of "Veteran Days."

Saturday and Sunday was celebrated at Peachtree Mall as the special two-day salute to veterans.

The Honorable A. J. McClung read the Proclamation for our salute to veterans and Col. Richard McKee, representing Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, let the veterans know they are not forgotten and will always be remembered!

It is estimated by the Georgia Department of Labor, Labor Information Systems, that there is a total of 56,030 veterans in the Columbus and surrounding area. Of this number, there are 22,840 veterans from the Vietnam Era; 12,230 from the Korean Era; 19,350 from World War II and 770 from World War I. If the average holds true, there are approximately 5,600 disabled veterans in the area. A number of these veterans came to this area from all over the United States.

Yes, these men are our "stars."

The National Infantry Museum displayed all fifty of the state flags in the side hallway of the mall. The 283rd Army Band, under the direction of Ben Hines, and other area bands played throughout the week-end. The Army Infantry Center (USAIC) had an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 people held in awe by an audio-visual "Tank-Buster" display. The National Infantry Museum Mobile Van with its "History of the Infantry" was in front of the main entrance.

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the AUSA provided a display and information area to better inform the veterans of AUSA activities. In addition to the pageantry and displays of the various veterans organizations, the Volunteers of the Chattahoochee Valley Veterans Council (including the DAV Field Service Unit and other veteran oriented groups) offered free services to veterans.

Columbus Mayor Harry Jackson and Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander, were among the attendees at the pre-showing of an exhibition of Nigerian sculpture on display at the Benning Main Mall through Sunday. In the background is a painting depicting black soldiers of the 24th and 25th Infantry charging San Juan Hill on Jul. 2, 1898 during the Spanish-American War. The painting was presented to Maj. Gen. Livsey by a major cosmetic firm, sponsors of the Black History exhibit.

Watch out for used car ripoffs

By James E. Murphy

The Legal Assistance Office at Fort Benning has received numerous complaints recently concerning the sale of used autos by local car dealers.

Many service members find that the "souped-up" hot rod that looks like the sharpest car in town usually turns out to be a lemon after it has been purchased. Unfortunately, in most instances a binding contract which disclaims all warranties has been signed and the servicemember finds that he has many months or even years left to pay on a promissory note for a car that will not operate properly.

Be Cautious

It is a wise policy to be cautious when buying a used car. Many servicemembers are apparently failing to thoroughly investigate before buying and are often neglecting to test drive the auto. It is recommended that the vehicle be checked out by a reliable mechanic prior to purchase.

The words "as is" in an auto sales contract are words of general disclaimer, and they mean exactly that they say. When an auto is bought "as is", if it breaks down immediately after leaving the car lot, the dealer generally has no legal responsibility to repair the auto or replace it. The buyer usually has no remedy available to him because the dealer sold the car without warranty. Furthermore, the buyer usually cannot legally cease making payments on the car.

Get it in writing

When a car salesman promises that if anything goes wrong with the car, "We'll take care of it," the purchaser needs to make sure the written contract states exactly the same as the oral promise. If it's not in writing, there is a good chance the salesman will conveniently forget about the promise when the car is brought back for repair work.

It's very hard to prove the salesman made such promises when the written contract contains the words "as is" in bold type, and other language in the contract expressly states there are no warranties in the sale.

Don't rush

It is recommended that prospective buyers spend sufficient time when shopping for a used car. Attorneys at the Legal Assistance Office are available to examine auto sales contracts. If the contract is brought to them prior to its being signed, they are in a much better position to lend assistance. After a buyer has signed a contract (especially if it says "as is"), there's not too much that can be done to help.

What has been your favorite assignment in the service so far?

Sgt. Eugene Carter,
11th Co, 1st Bn., TSB

Frankfurt, Germany was my favorite assignment because I enjoyed the people, the environment and the way of life there. I got the opportunity to see much of the countryside. I'd go back there if I had the chance. but I like it here too. I enjoy my work; I'm an instructor in the weapons department.

Staff Sgt. Marion C. Bomar,
Co. D, 43rd Engr Bn

My favorite assignment has been Co. B, 32nd Engr. Bn at Fort Carson, Colorado. I enjoyed the mountain area and Colorado Springs. There were all kinds of recreation. The engineers' facility was good because we never had too much trouble getting materials for a job. The unit was well organized. Fort Carson was a nice location on and off-duty.

Sgt. Joseph Rogers, Hqs, 2nd Br., 69th Armor

My favorite assignment has been Germany because of the cultural experience and the travel.

Spec. 4 Ramiro Rodriguez, 608th Ord Co.

My favorite assignment has been my tour in Korea. The prices were very reasonable and I could buy clothes at a moderate price. The people were basically pretty friendly and my unit was well organized.

Letters to the Editor

Craft center photolab needs more "exposure"

The situation at the Main Post Arts and Crafts Center looks bleak for photo enthusiasts. Existing circumstances may be leading up to a shut-down of the photo facility.

As of now, the photolab is open on Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. It is closed on Sundays and Mondays. Most people are only able to use the lab on Saturdays.

Why the threat of a closing, you may ask? The photolab, as well as other sections of the craft shop, are pitifully understaffed. It seems that there aren't enough "funds" to pay employes a decent salary.

The only problem seems to be that there's no one to "watch the store." There is a definite interest in photography, so having enough people to use the facility is not a problem. On Saturday morning (Feb. 24) there were more than seven people using the lab — over four at one time!

lab at their craft shop, it is smaller and less equipped to handle a greater number of people.

I propose a solution to this seemingly hopeless problem. Why not advertise for volunteers to sit in the lab and assist on Saturday mornings? Perhaps a service-member from recreation services would be interested in work at the lab on Saturday? To assist other photographers and be able to use the facility him or herself would be a fair trade of services.

It's important to make the public aware that this problem exists so they may be able to give their ideas/opinions if they choose.

Who knows? There may be hundreds of other photo buffs on Fort Benning who would be utterly devastated if the photolab were to close down completely.

Let's not let this happen.

The lighter side

It's a wild, wild world

By Morticia Figg

Troubled over the recent untimely deaths of several friends long before their time, I lay awake into the night worried that possibly the same fate might await me. Finally, I decided that I had to start taking better care of myself — watching everything I eat and do. Having made this decision, I drifted off into a troubled sleep.

The next morning I awoke early, and with a burst of energy and a strong resolve, I leaped from my bed and began to do a few exercises. But my wife warned me that due to my age, I really should have a complete physical before beginning an exercise program. Acknowledging that she was right, I decided to forgo the exercises.

Bacon has preservatives

After getting dressed, I went into the kitchen for my usual big break fast — but had to refuse the bacon because of the preservatives which everyone knows cause cancer in mice. I couldn't eat the eggs because tests have showed they cause hardening of the arteries. I by-passed a bowl of cereal — additives you know. I looked longingly at the apple. But somewhere in the back of my mind I recalled how fruit absorbs the insecticides used to protect it during growth — so I decided it really wouldn't hurt me to miss a meal occasionally. And I started off to work.

Once in the driveway, I decided against driving my car. After all, auto accidents are the major cause of death in America for people under 35 years of age and a leading cause of death for people over 35.

Exercise helps

I couldn't walk the 3 miles to my office because there was an air pollution alert. So I breathed dirty air for four blocks and caught a bus to work. After 45 minutes and 2 transfers, I arrived at work 20 minutes late.

My secretary brought me my usual cup of coffee with 2 lumps of sugar — another reject. I cancelled my first three appointments, because I knew they would lead to heated discussions which would send my blood pressure soaring.

Aimlessly, I wandered to the Monthly retirement ceremony held

The monthly retirement ceremony was held Wednesday in Bldg. 4. Two retirees were honored during the ceremony.

Lt. Col. Donald Whitlock, received the Legion of Merit, first oak leaf cluster, and Staff Sgt. John Tatum retiring to Columbus, received the Meritorious Service Medal.

Army Women prefer administration jobs

The Army's enlisted women prefer administrative jobs but more are entering fields such as maintenance, according to DA personnel statistics.

While some of the 28 Career Management Fields (CMF) that women may enter have only been open to them for a short time, the largest numbers of women are still serving in administrative and medical jobs.

Statistics as of August 1974 show that almost twice as many (32,919) of the Army's 49,647 enlisted women are serving at CONUS stations as those serving outside CONUS (16,728).

The following shows the CMF population ranking, CMF title and the actual number of enlisted women in the CMF as of August 31:

1 - Administration - 13,018; 2 - Medical - 7,780; 3 - Communications/Electronics Operations - 4,963; 4 - Supply and Service - 4,567; 5 - Food Service - 3,259; 6 - Transportation - 1,082; 7 - Mechanical Maintenance - 2,126; 8 - Electronic Warfare/Crypto Operations - 2,056; 9 - Law Enforcement - 2,053; 10 - Communications/Electronics Maintenance - 1,101; 11 - Aviation Maintenance - 800; 12 - Automatic Data Processing - 758; 13 - Military Intelligence - 684; 14 - Public Affairs/Audial Visual - 506; 15 - General Engineering - 457; 16 - Ammunition - 406; 17 - Band - 331; 18 - Petroleum - 296; 19 - Unassigned - 82; 20 - Recruitment and Retention - 256; 21 - Chemical - 99.

Army consolidates uniform regs

The Army has consolidated all regulations setting forth DA policy for the proper wear and appearance of uniforms and insignia which will be worn by both male and female, officer and enlisted.

Army Regulation (AR) 670-1, dated Feb. 15, 1979, effective Jan. 1, 1979, supercedes AR 670-5, AR 670-6, AR 670-30, AR 702-2 and portions of AR 600-20 and AR 672-5-1.

There have been some changes made as well as clarifications of previously unspecified policies. Some of these are mentioned below.

The new regulation provides standardized placement of female insignia. It also prescribes the proper length of skirts. They must be no more than one inch above the knee or no more than two inches below the knee using the crease behind the knee as the guideline for measuring.

Olive green boot socks are now the only ones authorized for wear with combat boots.

Some clarifications affecting men concerning sideburns and mustaches.

Sideburns may not be flared or longer than the exterior part of the ear opening. They will be neatly trimmed and end in a clean-shaven horizontal line.

Mustaches are permitted but not handlebars. If a mustache is worn, it will be kept neatly trimmed and tidy. No portion will cover the upper lip line nor extend beyond the crease of the upper and lower lips.

Beards are only allowed by medical authority and the authorization must also state the length allowed.

The new regulation covers everything pertaining to the appearance of all U. S. Army soldiers and the index makes it easy for everyone to locate any particulars.

Parent training course slated

A course in Parent Effectiveness Training (P.E.T.) is scheduled to be held here, beginning Sunday, March 18 and continuing for the next eight weeks.

The course, co-sponsored by the Infantry Center Chapel and the Religious Education Center, will be conducted weekly at the Infantry Center Chapel from 6 to 9 each Sunday evening.

Mary Ann Rogers, who has been a P.E.T. trainer for four years, will be the instructor. She has previously trained parents in Missouri and at Fort Benning.

Mrs. Rogers is presently employed by the Muscogee County Schools. She has worked in a variety of jobs in the Education field from nursery schools to adult education in the past 14 years.

The course is open to active duty personnel and their dependents. A minimum tuition fee will be charged and enrollment is limited to 20 participants. It is recommended that both parents take the course at the same time, but if this is not possible, one parent will be accepted. Single parents are also welcome and should find the course helpful.

This is not just a course for troubled parents, but for new parents, experienced parents and parents to-be.

For further information and to make reservations, call the Infantry Center Chapel, 545-2050.

OCS: challenge is tomorrow

By Jeffery Terrill

"So help me God!"

It was done. Repeating that statement finished the oath for commissioning as a second lieutenant: the climax after 14 weeks of Officer Candidate School.

And I was now a second lieutenant.

Going to OCS was something I had looked forward to for my 2½ years as an enlisted man.

There were times when I thought it wouldn't come true. And when I did make it into OCS there were times when it seemed more like a dream than reality.

But I knew it was real when I walked across that stage. And calming down from that natural high during the next several hours gave me time to reflect.

Who am I?

I was a lieutenant for real now. I had a piece of paper that said so.

But had I changed? Was I really a different person from the moments before taking that oath to those moments just after; and even now?

Looking back, there were many new experiences for me: the leadership reaction course, the 55-foot rappelling tower, the ranger problem, land navigation, the 5-mile runs in 25 degree weather.

There were classes on leadership, tactics, weapons, taking charge, and taking care of "my people," and on and on.

In my platoon (fifth platoon, above the rest. We're not average, we're the best) I was a squad leader, platoon sergeant, platoon leader, paperworks officer and finally, supply officer, adding to the million things that needed to be done for which there seemed to be no time.

My platoon had some of the best people I've ever known. I made some close friends. I had a chance to learn a lot from those friends, from knowing God to being infantry, and all else in between.

Counting lessons learned

Perhaps the most important lesson was that to get along in the world (the Army) you've got to care about the people around you. For it's those people who are the ones you've got to rely on.

1st Lt. Jack Hyde, my tactical officer, proved to be a big influence by virtue of his position; but more so by examples of good leadership and honest caring that I hope I never forget.

But had I really changed because I was wearing and still wear that gold bar instead of a specialist four patch?

I've learned a lot between now and the beginning of my OCS experience. But all the learning in the world isn't worth a dime unless applied.

"Make a decision, candidate!"

It's my ballgame now

And maybe that's what they were trying to tell us all along when they'd say "Make a decision, candidate!" Maybe they were telling us to apply ourselves against our potential.

That gold bar pinned on my shoulder gives me the opportunity to go out and try to be a leader.

It's up to me now to go out and apply myself to do just that: to be a leader, to be a lieutenant, to be an officer.

And I intend to do just that.

So help me God.

(Editor's Note: 2nd Lt. Jeffery A. Terrill graduated from 50th Company on February 22 after serving 2½ years as an information specialist at the 1st Armored Div, Germany and Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md. After completing Adjutant General school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, he will return to Aberdeen Proving Ground.)

Officer Candidate Suzanne Hutchinson executes a "slash and hold" against fellow candidate Scott Price as part of the several hours of training in Instinctive Rifle-Bayonet training.

Officer Candidate's Joyce Atwell and Richard Cook try to enjoy their cold C-rations during one of the few breaks in the OCS training schedule. Then it's back to the lessons, with this day's training being field work in Offense, Defense, and Retrograde.

Chaplains corner

Don't miss out on life

William W. Erbach, Sr.
TSB Chaplain

A close friend of mine related this story to me that I'm sure has happened to countless numbers of you in varying ways as it happened to him.

My friend was sitting on a bus with a young boy next to him carrying a beat up old music case. The boy was on his way to or from his music lesson. During the course of their conversation the boy asked, "Did you ever take piano lessons?"

"Oh yes," my friend answered, "but that was many years ago."

"Did you quit?" he questioned.

"Yes, I quit during the first year."

The boy was silent for some time after that before he asked, "Are you sorry you quit?"

My friend related to me later that he rejoiced at the fact the bus had arrived at his stop and he didn't have to answer the question. But I put him to the test and asked him myself. Certainly the answer is almost always the same, "If I had only . . ." Sort of pathetic, isn't it? Yet it's one that we all use.

How many joys in life have we missed out on simply because we lacked perseverance? God gives you many opportunities to enjoy life to its fullest, but the joy is derived not from the gift of the opportunity but participation in it.

You only get out what you put in; and that applies to all things in life that you do.

Savings Bonds: still a good security idea

You'd rather face tomorrow after it becomes today.

But sooner or later, that day comes.

You tighten the last bolt. You rip the last page out of the typewriter. You sign the last document. You do whatever it is you've done these many years before you retire.

Examine options

Whether you've been toying with the idea of retirement, or it's only a vague intangible looming in the mists of your mind, there are some heavyweight choices to make.

What will you do? Where will you live? What will you live on? You'll need answers to all these personal questions. And based on your individual needs and desires, you'll need to examine all your options.

Other than housing and health care, your biggest retirement concerns will be financial. Decisions about health and housing require careful study and planning. It's the same with financial planning.

Start today

The future may be too late for saving. So if you want security, you'd better start today. Luckily, the Payroll Savings Plan makes it easy.

An amount you choose is automatically set aside from each paycheck to buy U.S. savings Bonds. That way, your savings build year after year. And by buying Bonds regularly during your working years, you'll have a substantial stack before retirement time comes around.

After you've saved a lot of E Bonds, it's time to think about H Bonds. H Bonds pay you current income every six months. They're mailed right to your door. That way, your savings have steady work and you've got regular income coming in.

With a 10-year maturity, Series H Bonds earn five percent the first year, 5.8 for the next four years, and 6½ percent the last five years. This gives you an average six percent yield.

Regular income

When you apply your accumulated E Bond interest to the purchase of H Bonds, your tax liability may continue to be deferred until your H Bonds are redeemed or reach final maturity. And since there's an optional 10-year extension, that could be 20 years.

Buy an H Bond each month for six consecutive months and get an interest check every month. That way, you'll have 120 checks in a row guaranteed — and 120 more in the extension.

Your banker has purchase applications for H Bonds — at face value of $500, $1,000 and $5,000. There's an annual purchase limitation of $10,000 — $20,000 with a co-owner. But there's no limit when you're trading in E Bonds.

What if you don't own Series E Bonds? Or you want to keep those you own? Just buy H Bonds with plain ol' cash. They're still a good idea. Because the older you get, the better they look.

So start tomorrow. Tomorrow, today will be yesterday.

Take stock in America.

Luncheon set

The Health Service Command Activity will sponsor a luncheon at the Officers' Club on Wednesday, March 14, at 11:00 a.m. Susan Moye, from the lovely town of Westville, will present a program of slides and information about this historical town. She will also talk about antiques from the Westville area. All members and retired HSCA members are invited to attend this special event. For reservations call 561-2991.

Hair Styles demonstration

All active-duty and retired sergeants major wives are invited to attend a luncheon at the Top 5 Annex on Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. There will be a demonstration of hair styles presented by Great Haircuts Unlimited. Cost of the luncheon will be $4 including tip. For reservations please call Mrs. Frankie Caro, 689-1899 or Mrs. Rosemary Jones, 687-0190 no later than Monday.

Welcoming coffee

The next OWC Welcoming Coffee will be held Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the OWC Lounge. Newcomers are cordially invited to attend. No reservation is necessary.

Art auction

Tomorrow evening the Officers Club will be turned into an art gallery. The OWC is sponsoring an art auction that will feature 200 custom-framed etchings, engravings, woodcuts and oil paintings by many famous artists including Alvar, Chagill, Dali, Manet, Neiman. The public is invited to this auction. The art may be viewed from 6 - 8 p.m. with the auction beginning at 8 p.m. The Officers Club will feature a buffet from 5:30 - 8 p.m. or ala carte dining from 6 - 8 p.m. Reservations for the dining may be made by calling 682-0640. The proceeds from this annual affair will go to support the many welfare projects of OWC that benefit the entire Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area. Come, bring your friends, and have an enjoyable evening.

NCOWC Luncheon

On Feb. 21, the NCOWC honored their club advisor, Capt. Jeanette Walker, with a farewell luncheon at the Red Lobster. Capt. Walker was presented ceramic pieces, made in the NCOWC ceramic shop, as farewell gifts. It was indeed a pleasure to have Capt. Walker as our advisor and we wish her all the best at her new duty station.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Barbara Hancock, Mrs. Vermell Harrel and Mrs. Sandra Jackson.

water cooler, but just as I raised the paper cup full of refreshing cold water to my lips, I remembered all the warnings from news papers and television about the danger of drinking water which has not either been distilled or at least run through a charcoal filter. So I poured the water down the drain. My mouth was still dry; so I reached into my pocket for a pack of chewing gum but had to drop it into the trash can when I remembered that gum causes cavities.

After 2 hours of complete boredom, I decided to have an early lunch and started out to my favorite fast food restaurant. But I by-passed it, because a recent newspaper article had called attention to the fact that most fast-food hamburgers have almost no nutrition and contain preservatives.

Needless to say, the rest of the day — indeed the rest of the week — continued in the same way. By the end of the second week, I checked into the friendly neighbor hood hospital suffering from malnutrition and a mental condition diagnosed as psychosis complicated by severe depression. (I had also lost my job.)

The nice doctor assures me that I can go home in a couple of months a "new man." I am certain that the "new man" the doctor spoke of is going to live dangerously, eat delicious (but not very nutritious) hamburgers whenever he pleases, and at least once a day eat a T-bone steak with a side order of preservatives and additives — and die happy!

Non-sponsored dependents face woes

Most of the non-sponsored dependents reside in Seoul, the capital city of Korea. Housing costs in Seoul seem to ride a continuous skyrocket, and rival those of New York and Tokyo.

Families accustomed to paying a single month's rent as a security deposit stateside are in for a shock from "key money" rates in Seoul. Key money can range from $500 to $20,000, depending on the size, location and demand for the particular kind of apartment or house.

Rents from $230 to $750 are common for a Western style dwelling, and that doesn't include utilities.

Those prices cover housing considered acceptable by Western standards. It isn't always available, and the alternatives may lack modern toilet facilities, dependable hot water and kitchens.

Heat is often provided by an ondol, or charcoal briquette, floor heating system. The ondol system, both cheap and effective, is an illegal heating system for USFK members, since it claims victims every winter through carbon monoxide poisoning.

Convenience is lacking in Korea for non-sponsored dependents. Privately owned vehicles are available only to command sponsored service members in rear areas. Conditions in forward areas, such as the 2nd Infantry Division and the I Corps (ROK/US) group areas, where the majority of Army troops in Korea are stationed, are considerably harsher than those described for Seoul and southern areas. They also lack the resources available in the capital city.

Allowing access to family services, recreational sites, snackbars and service clubs is within the command's authority, and they are used to help ease the problems of non-command sponsored dependents as much as possible.

Vessey summed up the situation by saying, "I can understand the Congress' prohibition and we've followed the restrictions Congress has laid down."

"Now at the same time, once the dependents are over here, they are our dependents and we're going to give all the help we can . . . within the restrictions laid down."

One specialist five recounted the difficulties caused by bringing non-command sponsored dependents to Korea.

"I decided I would put up with the hassles, obstacles and roadblocks rather than be separated from my wife and son for a year."

"I get to use the commissary, but my wife can't enter and that's a hassle too. I'm always forgetting something, even with a shopping list, that my wife would have remembered." (ARNEWS)

Post to get manpower reduction

A reduction in the number of civilian and military personnel authorized at Fort Benning will become effective around mid-June as a result of a Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) manpower survey and the announced strength reductions throughout the Department of Defense in fiscal year 1979.

Involved in this latest personnel reduction will be 88 civilian and 420 military personnel. However, due to attrition, retirements, and other causes, the number of civilians actually losing jobs will be "considerably less," according to officials.

Few affected

Although relatively few of the post's 7,500 civilian workers will be involved in the reduction in civilian workforce, some will be affected by job realignments.

Career employees affected by the reduction will be given maximum assistance in continuing their careers as employees of the Federal Government through reassignment to other positions in the Department of Defense or other federal agencies. In addition, in cooperation with the Department of Labor and State Employment Services, assistance will be given to employees in locating positions in private industry.

Retraining programs

Where appropriate, they will be given the opportunity to undertake retraining programs to qualify them for jobs available in their local labor markets.

All DA civilians employed here will receive a letter Monday, Mar. 5, outlining procedures that will be taken by the Civilian Personnel Office (CPO) to implement current DOD reduction-in-force procedures.

CPO officials will analyze personnel records and establish accurate retention registers to determine exactly who will be affected.

Employees affected will receive a letter of notification by April 9. Persons receiving RIF notices will be individually counseled by a CPO representative regarding their entitlement to other jobs, pay retention or adjustment, placement assistance at other Federal agencies or in civilian industry, and their retirement eligibility.

Information Center

Following RIF notification, a RIF Information Center will be set up in Room 133, Building 35, containing material such as retention registers, competitive level registers, and applicable regulations. Employees and supervisors affected by the RIF may review the materials any time between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, subject to the provisions of the Privacy Act.

CPO officials emphasize that all RIF actions announced in the letters of notification are subject to change based on such factors as retirements, attrition and other causes.

The RIF is expected to be completed by June 22.

 Weather stripping

Does your home seem to let in the cold winter air? Perhaps yours is one of the many Georgia homes that needs weather stripping to block out drafts and help reduce heating costs.

To test your home for air leakage, place your hand close to door and window cracks on a cool, windy day. Another test is to shine a flashlight along the window and door edges at night while another person watches for light penetration on the other side.

Once drafts have been located, select the best form of weather stripping for your needs. For both doors and windows, strippings in flexible rolls of metal, felt, plastic foam, rubber, or vinyl are best.

Spring metal is the best easy-to-install stripping for double-hung windows. Although felt, rubber and plastic types of stripping are easier to install, they are invisible after installation and must be replaced sooner.

A vinyl gasket with a deep groove that slides into all four edges of the window frame can be used for metal casement windows. Wood casement windows are best sealed with spring metal nailed to the frame.

Gliding windows with movable sash require scaling with spring metal and vinyl or rubber gasket stripping.

Check doors to be sure they hang straight, as improperly hung doors can also allow drafts. If adjustment is needed, tighten hinge screws or sand the door edge at the binds. For cracks at the sides and top of a door, V-strip or doorstop weather stripping can be installed.

Sweeps can be used to seal the bottom of a door. These are seals that drag a flexible strip against the threshold. Other seals which press a flexible edge upward against the bottom door edge may also be used.

Both plain sweeps and bottom sweeps can be installed without removing the door. The plain sweep attaches to the outside of the door, whereas the bottom sweep slides under the bottom of the door. Threshold weather stripping requires removing the threshold it replaces.

Weather stripping may be bought at any hardware store or building supply store. The average cost for weather stripping is about $3 per window or door. This cost is economical when you consider that the National Bureau of Standards attributes as much as 40 percent of a home's energy loss to infiltration.

IADB visits Benning

The Inter-American Defense Board, (IADB), the oldest multilateral military organization in the Free World today, visited Fort Benning this week. The 41 members visiting here represented the highest military echelons of 21 respective member nations of the IADB.

They arrived Wednesday afternoon at the Columbus Metro Airport and were greeted by Col. Donald C. Shuffstall, post Public Affairs Officer. The purpose of the board members' visit was to receive various briefings, orientation on training and teachings of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School.

Chairman of the Board Lt. Gen. Randal Adams, Jr., U.S. Air Force and Vice-chairman of the Board Maj. Gen. Rafael Nivar, Army of Dominican Republic, met with the Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey in his office Thursday morning for a briefing.

While here, IADB members toured the Airborne area and the Infantry Museum, plus observed Rangers in Action and training at the Infantry Training Brigade.

Lt. Gen. Adams hosted an official dinner in the Corregidor and Benning Rooms of the Fort Benning Officers Club Wednesday night at 6:30.

Since its establishment March 30, 1942, the Inter-American Defense Board has been dedicated to planning for the collective self-defense of the Americas. It is primarily concerned with hemispheric security. Whenever this security is threatened or affected, the IADB has been available.

For example, officers assigned to the IADB were used as observers in the Honduras-El Salvador crisis of 1969, in the Belize issue of 1972, and again, in August 1976, during recurrent Honduras-El Salvador border incidents.

To enhance the Board's planning capability, the International Staff was formed in 1949 to carry out the working functions of the Board. To prepare future military and civilian leaders for their role in hemispheric security, the Inter-American Defense College was established in 1962.

197th Infantry Brigade troops

Balmy, early spring-like weather greeted the first 250-man increment of soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) as they returned to Fort Benning Tuesday, following a month-long cold weather training exercise at Fort Drum, N.Y.

Task Force Drum

The exercise, called "Task Force Drum" was designed to test the Brigade's capabilities in arctic conditions. Fort Drum, located 20 miles south of the Canadian border, was selected for the operation, because its winter weather is similar to a European winter. The opposing forces (OPFOR), was composed of elements from the 4th Mechanized Infantry Division, at Fort Carson, Colo. Commanded by Capt. Dan E. Vaughn, the OPFOR's personnel and equipment were from Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Mechanized Infantry and Company A, 6th Battalion, 32nd Armor.

According to Vaughn, the OPFOR's mission was to provide the most realistic training possible for the 197th Infantry Brigade, by being able to assemble any six threat units from a threat rifle squad to a reinforced Mechanized Infantry Battalion.

Move planned in advance

The 197th planned well in advance for the cold weather training exercise. The Brigade's Material Management Center worked many hours studying records to determine what would be needed to maintain the Brigade for the month at Drum.

Advance parties left Benning Jan. 24, 25 and 27 to prepare for the Brigade's arrival, with the main party of about 3,000 soldiers, commanded by Brigade Commander, Col. James R. Hall Jr., departing here Feb. 1 and 2. They arrived at Drum amid blowing snow and freezing temperatures.

Cold weather training consisted of cold weather survival, skiing and snowshoe training and cold weather warfare.

Air Support

An Air Force Liaison Office Forward Air Controller (FAC) was attached to the 197th to advise them on how to use close air support of its line combat units. In a tactical situation, it is the FAC, usually a captain or lieutenant with fighter experience, who is responsible for getting the best aircraft available during a combat situation.

The job of taking care of sick or ill troops of the 197th while undergoing cold weather training, was the responsibility of the Brigade Medical Services. They provided a field hospital not only for the troops but also for area dependents on an emergency basis.

Some cold injuries treated

Fort Drum facilities provided the building for the hospital that had been remodeled on the inside. Although it was a little seasoned with age, it proved to be adequate and reasonably comfortable to the soldiers receiving treatment there.

Some of the injuries they treated included: 1st and 2nd degree frostbite, ski injuries and common lacerations. Also, there were some cases of hypothermia and dehydration among the troops.

"Soldiers lose an enormous amount of fluid just by being in the extreme cold," said Chief Warrant Officer Paul F. Moore, physician's assistant. "As a result, they are often unaware that their body fluid level can easily dip to a dangerously low amount just by their breathing the cold air."

Army chaplains accompanied troops

Despite the harsh cold, precautions were taken and there were few serious medical problems. Dr. Magdi B. Hanna, Brigade surgeon commented, "In addition to all the cold weather and training injuries the brigade has endured, we also had a small epidemic of the flu and several cases of pneumonia.

Wherever the troops are, you'll find an Even in the coldest weather, 197th soldiers keep on truckin'.

return from chilling exercise

Army chaplain. This was evident during the "Task Force Drum" exercise. Four brigade chaplains, headed by Chaplain (Maj.) Michael Yunk, accompanied the troops to Drum and set up a Chapel Activities Center in an old mess hall there.

The center functioned as a chapel, office for the chaplains and a place of fellowship and relaxation for 197th soldiers. Films (with and without a chaplain's theme) were presented nightly. Games, books, newspapers and a color TV were also there for the troops' entertainment.

"We were trying to provide the troops a place where they could relax in their off-time," explained Yunk.

During deployment exercises, 197th chaplains visited troops in the field as well as in the barracks. They were frequent visitors to the Brigade field hospital and the ranges where the bulk of the Brigade's winter training was conducted.

Although the primary task of the 197th Brigade was cold weather training, it wasn't all work and no play. The soldiers of Company D, 197th Spt. Bn. constructed "Mindy the Snowwo-man." Also, there were two ski areas located nearby. Recreation Services offered snowmobiles, ice-skates and snowshoes which were available for rent to all 197th soldiers.

During the month-long exercise, Kelley Hill, where the Brigade is headquartered, was virtually deserted, with the 1st battalion, 29th Infantry, the 3rd battalion, 7th Infantry and a housekeeping force, being the elements left behind.

Three additional 250-man increments returned on Wednesday and the largest party is expected to return today.

A soldier in the field hospital receives top attention — Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey and Col. James R. Hall.

Poet's corner

Reassure me when I'm afraid, miss me when I'm away
 Keep good the vows you made, believe in what I say.
 Laugh with me when I'm happy, cry with me when I'm blue,
 And when you love me—really love me, prove your love is true.

Correct me when I'm wrong, stand by me when I'm right,

Think of me in the morning, dream of me at night.

Comfort me when I'm lonely, have faith in what I do,

Follow me to the end of the earth, as I would follow you.

Kiss me softly and gently, hold me tenderly but tight,

If I should lose my temper, please don't let us fight.

When you say you love me, mean it with all your heart,

And if you really mean it, even death can't make us part.

Forgive me when I'm not myself, try to understand,

Just put your arms around me, and tightly hold my hand.

God bless you when you say your prayers, the way I pray for you,

And tell Him with all your soul, to keep our young love true.

Keep these rules of love with everything you have to give,

Though rules were made to be broken, our love was meant to live

Nutrition: learning the basics

The Nutribird, the American Dietetic Association's feathered symbol of good nutrition, is sporting jogging shoes this year. The bird is official promoter of National Nutrition Week (March 4-10).

Followed down the jogging path in the promotional posters by an animated slice of bread, rolled roast, an orange and a chuckling milk carton, the bird and his pals support ADA's contention that good nutrition and daily exercise are cornerstones of good health.

The goal of Nutrition Week is to provide the public with the latest nutrition: a vantage point from which the consumer can make choices.

By eating a variety of foods and coupling food with exercise, one can, according to ADA, eat heartily, stay fit and actually enjoy eating.

It only takes a little time to learn the basics of nutrition, ADA says, in order to avoid the myths propagated by food faddists.

FOOD FACTS AND FALLACIES:

1. Claim: Vitamin E can heal burns, cure arthritis and improve sex prowess.

Fact: These claims have never been proven.

2. Claim: Vitamin C can prevent the common cold.

Fact: Conclusive evidence supporting this has yet to be uncovered. Problems can occur with taking too much Vitamin C.

3. Claim: Eating pork will cause high blood pressure.

Fact: In the past when refrigeration was scarce, most of the pork eaten had been cured or smoked by the use of salt, therefore, it was very high in sodium. Fresh pork such as chops, loins, ribs and fresh ham have no more salt than beef. However, cured and processed meats should be avoided if one is supposed to lower sodium intake.

4. Claim: I can drink as much alcohol as I like and as long as I eat a balanced diet my body will not suffer damage.

Fact: False. High concentrations in the bloodstream affect the brain and nervous system. The liver can also be affected.

5. Claim: Honey has a high nutritive value.

Fact: Like preserves, jellies and other sweets, honey is high in calories. It is made up of two sugars, glucose and fructose. Table sugar is sucrose. It is a double sugar composed of one molecule glucose connected to one molecule of fructose. The body breaks down fructose into glucose. Glucose is the major sugar used by the cells for energy. Brown sugar has very small amounts of calcium, phosphorus, Thiamine and riboflavin but more than contained in honey. Granulated sugar contains even less.

show includes the works of George Gershwin as well as Broadway and Dixieland medlies.

Meditation Lecture

Transcendental Meditation (TM) is more than just a technique for deep relaxation. Thousands of practitioners of TM have testified to a more dynamic, enjoyable, and fulfilling life. Numerous scientific studies demonstrate that significant changes in oxygen consumption, carbon dioxide elimination, blood chemistry, cardiac output, skin resistance, and brainwaves do take place during the practice of TM. These changes clearly indicate that during meditation the See POSTPOURRI on following page

Four teams were left in the post basketball tournament at Tuesday's Bayonet deadline. They were 498th Med Co, 34th Med Bn; 139th MP Co, LEC; Inf Tng Bde; and 1st Bn, TSB.

Either ITB or TSB was eliminated Wednesday night because they played each other and each had one previous loss. The two undefeated squads of 498th and 139th also played Wednesday, and the loser played either ITB or TSB in the semi-finals Thursday.

The remaining two teams of the original 13 will face each other tonight for the post company-level championship at Briant Wells Fieldhouse at 6:30 p.m.

Doughboys drop one

The Fort Benning Doughboys dropped their fourth game of the season by losing a tough exhibition game to the Bob Carter Industrial team of Columbus 88-84 last Saturday night at Briant Wells Field House.

Rick Donnell was top scorer for the Doughboys with 25 points, followed by Charlie Jackson with 19.

The Doughboys and Doughgirls are now in training for the upcoming TRADOC championship. They will hold practice sessions here on post until March 8 before they pack up and head to Fort Jackson, S.C. for the tournament.

Racquetball tourney set

The Courthouse South (formerly Courthouse 1) racquetball complex will sponsor a racquetball tournament March 16, 17 and 18. Play begins at 4 p.m. on the 16th and 8 a.m. on the 17th and 18th.

The tourney will be conducted in the following divisions: Men's A, B, C, Novice and Seniors (35 years and up). Females A and B (combined), and C and Novice (combined). Men's doubles in the A, B, C and Novice divisions.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each singles division and the top two doubles finishers. There will also be a consolation round for all first round losers. Everyone entering the competition will receive a tournament shirt.

Entry forms can be picked up at all post gyms and at Courthouse South. Entry fee is $10 for one event and $15 for two. Forms must be postmarked no later than midnight, March 11.

For additional information, call Dave Lawrence at 545-5161.

Lifesaving classes

How would you like to spend the summer basking in the sun at some swimming pool?

Lifeguards will be needed on post as well as in the civilian community and now is your chance to become a qualified senior lifesaver.

Three separate sessions of six classes each will be conducted at Briant Wells Fieldhouse for active duty military, retired military and dependents 15-years-old and up.

The instruction for certification of life guards will be in accordance with American Red Cross Accredited Senior Lifesaving standards. It is sponsored by the Sports and Athletic Training Branch of the USAIC Morale Support Activities.

The first session runs March 5-16; second, March 19-30; and third, April 2-13. All classes will meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7 to 9 p.m.

A fee of $15 will be charged only if you successfully complete the course. Further information and required pre-registration may be acquired by calling the Sports Office at 545-2282/2283.

PT record established

Once again the "Bravo Bushmasters" of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade set a new Physical Fitness record for Platoon and Company Advanced Physical Fitness Test (APFT). The "Bushmasters" hold the record for platoon P.T. Test for the dynasty of the Infantry Training Brigade; with a platoon average of 465.

On February 20, 1979, Bravo Company completed the APFT test with a Company average of 448 and a platoon high of 451.06 set by the 4th platoon.

Golf series concludes

The BAYONET's golf series will wrap up in next week's issue. The article will cover the basics of the game to include proper grips, club selection and helpful hints.

USAMU's Lones Wigger tops two championships

By Tommy Pool

Ending a week of frustration, Lones W. Wigger of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) bounced back to win consecutive championships held last weekend, February 24th and 25th.

After losing one championship on a tie and finishing fourth in another the previous week, the two-time Olympic gold medal winner scored a ten point victory in the first match, putting together scores of 1,167 and 1,184 for an aggregate of 2,351 while Karen Monez finished second at 2,341. In the next match, the International Indoor Sectional Championship, Wigger scored a solid 1,181 out of 1,200 points to defeat

Ray Carter, an Army Reservist by nine points at 1,172. Third place again went to Monez at 1,169.

The U.S. Army team of Wigger, Monez, Wanda Jewell and Ernest Vande Zande scored a team total of 4,661 points over the U.S. Army Reserve squad in second place at 4,630.

In the 40 shot Air Rifle competition Karen Monez scored first with 389 out of 400, as teammate Linda Baily finished second with 385. Philip Whitworth, also of USAMU, picked up third place with 384. The squad of Monez, Wigger, Jewell and Vande Zande scored 1,535 points to again defeat the Army Reserve team who scored 1,511.

Barracudas compete in AAU meet

Fort Benning's Dependent Youth Activities swim team, the Barracudas, competed in the Columbus Aquatic Club's (CAC) AAU "B-C" Invitational Swim Meet Saturday and Sunday. Fourteen teams entered in the 154 event meet which will be the last meet hosted by the Aquatics in the 1978-79 AAU short course season.

One of the outstanding swimmers at the meet, Karen Hill, CAC, has had a tremendous month of swimming competition. Beginning with the Georgia "100," ten-year-old Karen set the state record for the 50-yard breaststroke with 37.04. At Huntsville, Al.; Feb. 16 - 18, she broke the unofficial 10 and under 500-yard freestyle of 6:00.00 with 5:47.4. At Columbus College, Karen swam against the senior girls (15-18 year olds) in the 200 freestyle and 100 freestyle taking first place in both events.

While all of the Barracudas steadily improved their times in preparation for the upcoming Georgia Junior Olympics, four of the Cudas set the pace for the other competitors at the meet.

Eight-year-old Atlantis Tillman, who has been hovering at the "A" time standard for the past month, finally broke through in three of her seven events. Ms. Tillman turned in a 51.17 in the 50 breast, 17.78 in the 25 free and 1:39.67 in the 100 individual medley. Placing first in all but two of her events, Atlantis narrowly missed her "A" times in the 50 back with a 46.89 and 50 free with a 40.48.

Cackie Walters, 9 - 10 year old girls, also broke through the "A" time standard barrier in her 100-yard breast with a 1:31.04. This time is just over the "AA" time standard of 1:30.49. Walters was edged out of first place in four of her six events and "A" times in the 100 back, 50 free and 200 individual medley.

Story and Photos by Jim Tillman

Ready, set
Atlantis Tillman waits for the starting gun

David Christensen and Manuel Pangelinan, the Barracudas' own Georgia All-Stars, recently celebrated their birthdays and swam in the older age group during this meet. Although they did not break any records, both of these men swam hard and are on their way to all-star status in their new age group.

The Barracudas will host their annual spring swim meet here at the Briant Wells pool April 7 and 8. The public is invited and the admission fee is just right . . . free.

The Barracuda's Atlantis Tillman finished first in all but two of the events she entered.

Runner's profile

Running is part of Terry Bell's life

By Julie Casey

A convert to the max, retired Maj. Terry Bell is now a full-fledged runner. Starting at 200 pounds he began whipping himself into shape and is now running 80 miles a week comfortably and weighs 147 pounds.

"It has changed my whole life style and how I feel about myself. I have met some really nice people who helped me change my life. I remember wondering how they could stand all those fricky foods that I now thrive on," commented the reformed pie and cake man.

Bell began running when Maj. Gen. Latham was here, laboring under the threat of having to run five miles in less than 50 minutes. He is now running a speedy five in 28 minutes and 12 seconds.

"I ran my first half marathon (13.1 miles) in July of 1977 here at Benning. I did it in 2 hours and 4 minutes. That is a long time but what astounded me is that I made it. I was so shocked with myself, I had no idea that I was capable of running that distance. It got me interested and I wanted to run a whole marathon (26 miles and 385 yards)."

Dave Fields, a local runner, helped Bell with his training and taught him how to really love running.

"He told me to just forget the clock for a month and run as long as I wanted to or do just what I felt like doing. That month kept me from worrying about how I compared with other runners," commented the man who recently completed a marathon in 2 hours, 56 minutes and 50 seconds.

He felt that part of the reason he is racing so well is because he has begun to understand how to train Terry Bell. The now mostly vegetarian attributes his success to advice from Dave Fields and personal reading.

The change in his life style also effected his family in a drastic way.

"It was hard for my wife to understand why it was so important for me to run. It also made it difficult for her when I stopped eating the things I use to love, like pies and cakes," he said. "I also made things difficult because I would get rather irritated if my running schedule was interrupted."

"I'm a believer in LSD (Long Slow Distance).

If I feel like walking during a run, I walk. Even if I wasn't improving, I would still want to run. I really enjoy it," he commented.

Free boating classes

The height of the boating season is rapidly approaching in the Chattahoochee Valley area. More and more people own boats of all types and sizes and have the leisure time to use them. These two factors lead to busier and more crowded waterways with a resultant increase in water and boating accidents.

With these facts in mind, the members of Columbus Flotilla 81 of the Coast Guard Auxillary will offer a three lesson Boating Safety course on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 13, 14 and 15, from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. EST. classes will be held in Building 4 (Infantry Hall) at Fort Benning.

The course is free and open to all interested persons. No pre-registration is necessary. The Auxillary recommends that all members of a boating family attend the course since nearly everyone participates in some form of water activity, such as fishing, water skiing or cruising.

Dental hints

Sealant retards decay

Editor's note: This is the fifth in a series of six articles on dental health published by the Bayonet, in cooperation with the Ft. Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, Feb. 4-10.

I recently saw an article on ways to prevent dental disease. Mention was made of a sealant to be placed over children's teeth to prevent decay. What does this process involve and how successful is it?

Pits and fissures, on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth, are sites of much of the dental decay that occurs in children and adolescents. The enamel in these areas is often thin and difficult to clean thoroughly. The bristles of a toothbrush cannot always reach into these minute depressions. A sealant is a material that is applied as a coating to the grinding surfaces to seal off the pits and fissures.

Sealants available

The American Dental Association's Council on Dental Materials and Devices has accepted a number of sealant materials which are available commercially to dentists. The Council's recognition, however, does not pertain to the therapeutic or decay-preventing characteristics of the sealant products but does recognize that they produce a physical barrier to decay.

The sealant material is a liquid that is brushed onto the biting or occlusal surfaces of teeth and then hardened to a transparent coating. The hardening may be accomplished by chemical action or by subjecting the material to ultraviolet light, depending on the type of sealant being applied.

Ultraviolet light

In the ultraviolet light process, a small hand-held lamp is focused on the teeth for less than a minute. Sealant materials are not applied to either the sides of teeth or to the surfaces between teeth, therefore, they have no sealing value for other areas that are particularly susceptible to decay such as the surfaces between the teeth or at the gum line.

Pit and fissure sealants are not designed as an alternative to regular oral hygiene. Instead, they are intended to augment other proven preventive practices, including daily brushing with an accepted fluoride dentifrice, use of dental floss, fluoridation of drinking water and regular professional care.

Army abortion policy clarified

DA has announced a new policy regarding Aero Medical Transportation for soldiers and their dependents requiring abortions at government expense and on a prepaid fee basis.

Soldiers and their dependents who meet the criteria for abortion at government expense as established by the FY 79 Defense Appropriations Act are authorized medical transportation within CONUS and between the U.S and overseas areas.

Soldiers and their dependents who do not meet the criteria and who are located in most overseas areas without access to acceptable civilian health care facilities may obtain abortions on a prepaid fee basis at the nearest military medical facility. The new policy authorizes government transportation for this purpose.

Soldiers who do not qualify for government expense abortion but who need abortion consultation and are stationed where such services are not available locally are also entitled to government transportation. Dependents who do not meet the criteria, however, are entitled to transportation for abortion consultation only outside CONUS.

Abortions will be performed at government expense only in the following circumstances:

(A) Where the life of the mother would be endangered:

(B) When the mother is the victim of rape or incest which has been reported promptly to a Law Enforcement Agency or Public Health Service:

(C) Where, in the opinion of two physicians, severe and long-lasting physical health damage to the mother would result if the pregnancy were carried to term:

(D) When medical procedure makes it necessary to terminate an Ectopic, or abnormal, pregnancy. (ARNEWS)

Alexander states opinionAmerica needs 'better system' in time of war

The U.S. needs a better system for making the transition from a peacetime volunteer force to a conscripted force during wartime, Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander, Jr., told an audience in Phoenix, Ariz. recently.

Peacetime registration

Alexander told the Phoenix Urban League that a useful step would be to provide for the peacetime registration of young Americans. The Army Secretary cautioned that he was not advocating the measure as a preliminary step to peacetime conscription, but to offset any "future crisis in which we are unable to respond quickly enough if we have neglected to take some basic precautions."

"The Army is a National Service Institution," Alexander said, and he identified the Army's contribution to social justice as being "close behind" the service's role in the preservation of national security.

The top civilian leader of the Army said he was proud to be associated with an institution in which the barriers of sexism and racism are breaking down. "Some barriers we work hard to destroy; others collapse under the weight of their own uselessness," he remarked.

Equal opportunity

Discussing equal opportunity for minorities, Alexander said the Army offers "qualified men and women an opportunity which just does not exist for them in many sectors of corporate America."

Pointing to the number of Blacks who have enlisted in the Army in recent years, Alexander said the situation had caused alarm in some quarters, but the alarm was misdirected. "The truly alarming fact is that unemployment among Black teenagers is running at 40 percent," he said.

Alexander expressed the belief that women in the Army have a better chance of equal opportunity than in any other American institution.

As evidence of opportunities for women in the Army, he cited the recent opening of all but a few combat specialties to them, along with a breakdown in stereotyping. "Many myths about female abilities have fallen by the wayside," he said. Findings of the study of women at West Point "reflect a growing psychological and social maturity," remarked Alexander. Such a maturity is essential to solving modern social problems, he concluded.

Contributions praised

Alexander singled out for praise the contribution of those who serve in the Reserve Components — National Guard and Army Reserve. Highlighting the Reserve Component mission in the event of mobilization, Alexander also noted their peacetime contribution. He cited the Arizona National Guard's rescue, supply and law enforcement activities last month during severe flooding as one example. (ARNEWS)

Fabrics tested for uniforms

Three year-round Army green uniform fabrics are being tested to determine which one will be most comfortable and present the best appearance, according to DA officials. The fabrics are being tested for shade (color) control, wrinkle resistance and recovery, durability, and appearance.

Savings

The fabric selected will replace the four basic fabrics and weights of the present uniform, and may save the Army $2 to $4 million of the $110 million spent annually on active Army clothing allowances.

Being tested are an 11-ounce 55/45 polyester wool made of spun yarns, an 11-ounce 72/25 polyester wool made of texturized and spun yarns, and a 12-ounce all polyester made of texturized yarns.

For the test, 500 men's and 500 women's uniforms were made from each fabric. One-hundred of the women's uniforms are pantsuits.

Cross-section

Soldiers wearing the test uniforms were selected by grade and duty to represent a cross-section of the Army, but most of the soldiers selected are lower enlisted who have less money to spend on uniform care.

Areas picked for the test of the fabrics include: Ft. Monroe, Va.; Ft. McPherson, Ga.; Ft. Sam Houston, Texas; Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.; and Germany, Hawaii and Panama.

Cost

The year-round uniform will cost $45 to $50 in clothing sales stores and be drycleanable only. Expected date for the uniform to be available is December 1981. According to officials, soldiers should continue to replace worn-out uniforms with currently available fabrics. New soldiers will be issued two sets of the year-round uniforms when they enter the Army Supply System. (ARNEWS)

25-mile march

Doing it on the road

By Michael Thompson

A 25-mile road march can be fun, as the members of Co E, "Evil Echo," 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade have found. In the completion of the 25-mile road march, a requirement for Infantry initial entry training graduation, the men of Evil Echo also conducted an air assault, three enemy contacts and a stream crossing by use of a rope bridge.

The scenario dictated an air assault from PZ Weatherby (Weatherby Field) behind enemy lines to the vicinity of Cactus Landing Strip on the eastern end of the reservation. Once the air assault was complete the company was to move along a predetermined route to reconnoiter and gather information for the continued brigade attack to the east.

The air assault went perfectly. Six UH-1H helicopters from 121st Aviation Company lifted the company out and flew nap-of-the-earth (NOE) to the landing zone (LZ). Three trips were required to complete the operation. Time in the LZ was minimal and the company was soon moving swiftly on its route reconnaissance. The entire LZ mission was completed under restrictions of radio silence.

Two enemy ambushes were repulsed and the unit continued along the route to complete its mission and gain valuable information; information necessary for the thorough planning of the brigades' advance.

Upon entering friendly lines, Evil Echo was informed that enemy forces had destroyed the bridge crossing Upatoi Creek, and navigation of the stream would be accomplished by the use of a rope bridge. On the bank of the creek, the soldiers were instructed in the various methods of using rope bridges to negotiate water obstacles. A bridge was constructed and all members of Co E, cadre and trainees alike, returned safely. The mission was accomplished.

A debriefing of the mission ensued and information immediately passed to Brigade Headquarters. Hours later, after a foot check, weapons maintenance and chow, the Infantrymen of Evil Echo settled down to a well deserved rest.

Germany not world end

Pack up those OD bags and don't forget the heavy socks, because you've just received orders for Germany.

Yeah — cold weather, hardship times and your station is somewhere far away, off in the north. Not only that, nobody's ever heard of it.

Many soldiers and dependents arrive in northern Germany with the feeling that they're landing at the end of the world, according to Judy Fias. Fias is language coordinator of the Bremerhaven military community.

They're not. All they need to do is look around them.

You can start by learning to know the people — not just about them. That begins with learning at least a little of their language. Maybe they speak some English, especially in such larger cities as Hamburg, Bremen and Bremerhave. But that's no excuse.

"It's very important that people make an attempt to learn some of the language whether they're still in the States or over here," says Fias. "If you try one word of German and 15 words of English, the people know you're trying and half the battle's already won."

"The German people develop acquaintances rather quickly," adds Clyde A Wilkes, chief of public affairs Norddeutschland. But, for many Europeans "a friendship will take time."

Another rule of "survival upon arrival" is to discover how the transportation system works — and then to get out and use it.

"There's plenty to do here," says Fias. "It's just a matter of going out and looking for it. It hasn't been piled up on a silver platter."

A duty train runs from Bremerhaven to West Berlin, and another from Bremerhaven to Frankfurt. Arrangements can be made to use these when on orders or on a space-available basis when on leave or pass.

Local transportation is just as efficient with many connecting bus and streetcar lines.

Once you've discovered its simplicity, there's nothing to stop you from visiting any of the castles, museums, concert halls and churches.

Not appealing? Try one of the local festivals.

There are fishermen's festivals, the reenactment of the Pied Piper of Hamelin or simply a boating trip down the Elbe.

If you're an international traveler, you can trek to Denmark, Norway, Finland or Sweden. There's Amsterdam in the Netherlands, home of the tulip festival, and Belgium and Luxemburg, all within driving distance.

Great Britain can be reached overnight by ferry. There you can visit London and Stonehenge or Scotland, Ireland and Wales.

The rest of Europe is at your feet. There's Paris, Rome, Madrid, The Riviera, all of Europe. Plan your time carefully or your tour will be over before you see half the land where there's "nothing to do."

Just being near the sea affords the opportunity for boating, fishing, water skiing and swimming. And then there's snow skiing, hiking, camping, biking — you name it.

Some gamesmen call Germany a "dream come true." For instance, the Lueneburg Heath Land between the Elbe and Weser rivers is largely forest and game preserves. The 8000-square kilometers of nearly untouched land is rich with legends and fairy tales.

"Somebody coming here for the first time must realize things are going to be different from things in the States," says Fias.

"Problems will arise. There will be difficulties to overcome and many adjustments to make. There will be frustrating periods. You must adapt to the different electrical current, traffic signs, weights, money, food — the entire culture.

"If people come here with the idea that it's going to be something new, different and a one-time experience, then they are more likely to really enjoy their stay," she concluded.

Be careful changing lanes

Several complaints have been received concerning foolish drivers who cut into the normal flow of traffic with a sudden lane change

An area where this is occurring quite frequently is at the end of the Lindsay Creek Bypass just before the First Division Road exit. Errant and discourteous motorists speed in the left lane to pass the cars lining up in the right lane preparing to exit toward Main Post.

The "nutty" motorists look for an opening and make a quick cut into the right lane. This is a dangerous and an illegal maneuver defined as improper lane changing. The penalty is an assessment of three traffic points.

Perhaps more important than the penalty is the strong likelihood of setting up a probable accident and the blatant discourtesy to other motorists.

Motorists who observe traffic violations are encouraged to submit an observed violation report under the provisions of paragraph 20a, USAIC Regulation 190-5.

PEOPLE

Lt. Patti Ann Schwab, daughter of the late Mr. & Mrs. Charles Schwab of Tomahawk, Wisconsin and Lt. Robert B. Nett, Jr., son of Col. & Mrs. Robert B. Nett, formerly of Columbus, Georgia now of Colorado Springs, Colorado were married January 6, 1979 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Tomahawk, Wisconsin. Father Edward Powell officiated. Miss Jo Ann Karl was maid of honor and Col. Nett served as best man. The bride was given in marriage by her brother. The bride is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, School of Nursing and at present is stationed as a community health nurse at Fort Carson, Colorado. The groom is a graduate of the University of Georgia, School of Pharmacy and is stationed at Madigan A.M.C. in Tacoma, Washington. They spent a skiing honeymoon in Whistle, British Columbia.

Brig Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant (I), stands with Lt Col. Terrell Naumann at the opening of the Lexington Room Feb. 17 at the Officers' Club. Rogers cut the ceremonial ribbon and gave a brief speech thanking individuals for their time and effort in the renovation of the Main Dining Room at the club.

Martin Army Hospital's (MAH) Tumor Registry has been accredited by the American College of Surgeons for its accomplishments in the area of cancer diagnosis, treatment and post-care. A Letter of Accreditation was presented to Col. (Dr.) Anton L. Hitzelberger, MAH commander, by Dr. Robert M. Vaughn on behalf of the American College of Surgeons' Committee on Cancer in a ceremony held earlier this week. MAH is the only hospital except Columbus' Medical Center in the local area to have received this accreditation.

Staff Sgt. Doyle B. Alford of E-6-1 was the Distinguished Drill of the Cycle. Alford gives his views as to what he feels is important in being a drill sergeant. "Being a drill sergeant is hard unless you have a family like mine. Pat, my wife and our three children, Dale, 9, Thelma, 7, and Daniel, 3, support me 100 per cent. My other family, "Evil Echo" is successful due to the hard work among people like Capt. Michael A. Thompson, 1st Sgt. Arthur Hill, Jr.; Sgt. 1st Class Robert Galloway, Staff Sgt. James Wilkerson, Staff Sgt. Darrell K. Walters and Staff Sgt. James Meriweather. Troops cannot be properly trained without proper cooperation and coordination within a unit; this begins before the troops arrive."

A Great State

I would like to take a few minutes of everyone's time to remind all Texans and to inform the rest of Fort Benning that today, March 2, is a day to remember. Of course, today is Texas Independence Day. It is a day when we Texans remember the Alamo; Sam Houston defeated General Santa Anna, and the start of a great nation, and now a great state. All Texans are aware of this monumental day and the courage of our forefathers still exists even today on Fort Benning. If you don't believe me just ask a Texan. I am sure he can tell you countless stories of his heroism in Vietnam, Korea, and a few in World War II, and if the soldier is young and has not been to war, he can tell just how good a soldier he is. So a salute is due all Texans and a big happy birthday to the largest state in the union. By the way, do not believe the rumor that is going around that Alaska is bigger than Texas — this is a vicious slander of our great state.

Entire Army overstrength with E-4s, promotions cut in all post commands

By Sharron Calabrisi

"It will affect a lot of people and it will hurt them," commented Robert Sample, chief of Enlisted Promotions, when asked about the new promotion policy for E-3's.

"The Army is overstrength with E-4's," explained Sample. In view of the current and forecast overstrength of soldiers in grade E-4, it has become necessary to further restrict the number of promotions to that grade in each command. The E-4 promotion policy is designed primarily to curb an excess of E-4's, MILPERCEN officials said, while also avoiding "extended stagnation" for many senior E-3's.

The Army ranks included almost 10,000 more E-4's than the budget ceiling allowed in December, officials said. Then, Army strength included 185,963 E-4's while the budget ceiling authorized only 176,324, they explained.

Officials say that the current 70 percent E-4 promotion restriction must be lowered to 65 percent to reduce the current overstrength and to control expected increases in E-4 strength if the 70 percent limit isn't cut.

Senior E-3's, with 18 months time in grade, officials said, will be exempt from promotion restrictions if they are assigned to units that cannot promote E-3's because of the new restrictions. Officials stressed that E-3's with at least 18 months time in grade, not time in service, are eligible for the exemption.

The reason these soldiers will receive the exemption, a DA personnel official observed, is that many units with large E-4 populations and small E-3 populations are not able to promote any E-4's under current policy.

In addition, MILPERCEN officials said, soldiers in the "Stripes for Skills" program will also be exempted from promotions restrictions.

The 50 percent promotion waiver authority remained unchanged when the new policy took effect Feb. 16, officials commented. They added that promotion orders published on or before Feb. 16 will also be exempted from the new restrictions.

PFC Seth Hamilton, Hq Co Hq Cmd, commented that, "This is just another example of the system becoming bigger than the people. One of the basic ideas in the Army is that a soldier is promoted on his merits, as well as time in service." Hamilton added, "It is a bad situation when PFCs who deserve promotions are held up because the Army has overextended itself in the E-4 ranks."

As one PFC put it, "I'm short, it doesn't matter." Many PFCs aren't even aware of the new policy which is affecting their careers in the Army.

Promotions to E-4 are authorized and controlled at unit level and specific questions on the new policy should be referred to orderly room personnel.

Benning hosts TRADOC Conference

The TRADOC Leadership Conference, sponsored by the Command and Tactics Branch of Fort Benning's Infantry School, was conducted March 6-8 at Infantry Hall.

The "meeting of the minds", the first since 1975, was comprised of representatives from TRADOC, FORSCOM and DA who are involved in leadership training and development.

The goal of the "working" conference is the implementation of organizational leadership doctrine and training Army-wide. To be specific, the conferees, who worked in small groups, strived to develop universal leadership tasks for all rank levels in the Army — from E-5 through general officers.

One point was especially stressed: that a leader must be technically competent in his/her job.

"Competence is a prerequisite for a leader to successfully have his soldier do the job," said Maj. Christopher Mullane, project officer for the conference.

Eight areas were discussed during the first half of the meeting. These included communications, human relations, counseling, supervision, management science, decision-making, planning and ethics.

The second half of the meeting was devoted to taking the eight task lists which had been discussed and going over them with a fine-toothed comb, thus eliminating any redundancies, errors in fact, etc.

The end result would have all agencies (ie: ROTC, Reserve, and Active Army) all "working from the same sheet of music." Leadership principles will, eventually, become consistent Army-wide.

Recruiting

Best Benning soldier to be selected for exhibit team

The U.S. Army Recruiting Support Center, like its predecessor, the U.S. Army Exhibit Unit, has been tasked with telling the Army story to the people of the United States.

This is accomplished by creating mobile exhibits to tour the continental United States. The exhibits are manned by volunteers selected from Army units. To obtain these volunteers, the Department of the Army has authorized commanders to interview and nominate highly qualified soldiers for selection as exhibit team members with the U.S. Army Recruiting Support Center.

Considering the emphasis on maintaining an all volunteer force and the involvement of the exhibit team members as Army representatives in the community activities nationwide, only the best qualified soldiers should be nominated for selection. Prerequisites for exhibit team members are:

- Currently assigned to FORSCOM Unit (36th

Engr Gp, 34th Med Bn, 197th Inf Bde, 988th MP Co, Marksmanship Training Unit)

- Pay grade E4 through E7, minimum time in service is two years

- Outstanding personal appearance and military bearing

- Desire to meet the public

- No records of courts-martial or Articles 15

- Financially stable

- High school graduate or equivalent

- GT score — 110 or higher

- Minimum of 18 months retainability

- Eligible to obtain a military driver's license

- Not currently due for overseas tour

- Combat or Combat Support CMF

- Preferable having MOS and grade which is worldwide overage (see DA Cir 611-65)

- Single preferred (due to extended TDY)

Soldiers selected as exhibit team members will transport and man exhibits designed to support Army recruiting themes at college and high school campuses, shopping malls, state and county fairs, conventions and other public events throughout the United States in support of the Army Recruiting Program.

The normal tour of duty for exhibit team members is two years. Team members are TDY for approximately ten months each year.

Personnel possessing these qualifications and desiring to volunteer for this duty should contact Miss Whitley/SSgt. Clemons at 545-2066/3818 for an interview. Soldiers must obtain a letter of release and a statement from the company commander certifying the individual meets the prerequisites prior to the interview date.

Fort Benning's quota is one nominee who will be the best qualified soldier interviewed. Additional information may be obtained from Miss Whitley at Building 83, Room 319.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Gen. Bernard Rogers

Return visit

Graduates of Infantry Officer's Advanced Course (IOAC) 1-78 will have Army Chief of Staff Bernard Rogers speak at their graduating ceremony this morning. Gen. and Mrs. Rogers will be met by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William J. Livsey at Lawson Army Airfield. This is the second visit to Benning by Rogers in the last two weeks.

Let DA know before you go

Soldiers with handicapped dependents should notify DA of their needs before being assigned to Europe, according to U.S. Army Europe (USAREUR) MILPERCEN officials.

Services for people with physical, emotional or intellectual handicaps are limited in USAREUR, officials explained. Several families have experienced hardship because USAREUR was not told of the handicap and did not take the handicap into consideration in making the assignment or in approving dependent travel, the official said.

Army Regulation 614-203 requires that handicapped dependents be identified to DA as soon as the handicap is known. This will insure the handicapped dependent is taken into consideration before a new assignment is given.

In addition, officials said the soldier must indicate the handicapped dependent on the application for concurrent travel (DA Form 2370) before being assigned to Europe. An attempt will then be made to assign the soldier to an area where the dependent may receive the educational or medical care he or she needs.

If the soldier can't be assigned in an area where these services are available, DA will help solve the problem, officials concluded.

It's up to you to save energy.

Bonding glue: a sticky situation

Human skin can become accidentally bonded to itself by a cyanoacrylate adhesive — a strong, fast setting material that can bond human tissue in seconds. Produced in the United States by several companies, cyanoacrylates are sold widely in the consumer market.

A major manufacturer of cyanoacrylates, recommends the following first aid techniques for bonded human tissue.

SKIN BONDS: Do not try to pull the bonded surfaces apart with a direct opposing action. Immerse the surface in warm soapy water. Peel or roll the surface apart by using a blunt edge such as a spoon handle. Wash the adhesive off the skin with soap and water.

EYELID TO EYELID OR EYEBALL BONDS: Do not try to open the eyes by manipulation. If the eyelids are stuck together or bonded to the eyeball, wash thoroughly with warm water and apply a gauze patch. The eye will open without further action, usually in one to four days.

ADHESIVE ON THE EYEBALL: Cyanoacrylate introduced into the eyes will attach itself to the eye protein and dissociate from it within a matter of hours, even if gross contamination has occurred. During the period of contamination, weeping will occur and double vision may be experienced.

MOUTH BONDS: If the lips are stuck together, apply a stream of warm water to the lips and encourage maximum wetting and pressure from saliva inside the mouth. Peel or roll lips apart gently. Do not try to pull the lips with a direct opposing action.

The National Safety Council recommends that for serious cyanoacrylate accidents the victim should obtain professional medical help.

Coupons save $$ at PX

Thrifty shoppers who clip cents-off coupons saved more than $350,00 in Army and Air Force Exchange Services (AFFES) retail outlets last year. The figure is the estimated face value of the more than 1.6 million coupons turned into PXs and BXs worldwide for additional savings through the merchandise redemption program.

Fort Benning PX patrons are no different in their constant search for added savings. According to Operations Manager Paul Taylor, 100-150 coupons are collected daily in the Main PX alone. In dollar figures that represents about $65.

Any merchandise coupon available through direct mail advertising newspapers, magazines or in merchandise packages will be honored if that merchandise is stocked by the exchange. They must be presented for redemption prior to the expiration date indicated on the face of the coupon.

This is the seventh year this added bonus has been available to AFFES customers enabling military families to take advantage of manufacturer's promotional offerings.

Glad you asked

If the Selective Service System is reinstated, should women be drafted too?

SSgt. Steven Collier,
B Btry, 1st Tng Bde,
Fort Sill

The majority of the people drafted would be in combat arms jobs and females are physically unable to withstand combat. They can't carry rucksacks.

PFC Bonnie Wood,
Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

Yes. If we're going to get the same pay we should run the same risks. The government put limitations on what we can do, but every time a woman fills a slot (that would otherwise be filled by a man), that leaves one more draftee (male) to fill a combat-related job slot.

Sp4 Sue Jones,
Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

Yes, it's only fair that women be drafted, but I don't believe they should be placed in combat-type skills. Society cannot accept women fighting alongside men. For those men who feel women should be in combat situations, they would be sorely disappointed when some women wouldn't be able to bear the physical strain. Some women, who feel they can endure combat situations, would try to prove that they are physically equal to men — which is not true.

SSgt. Robert Heeks,
Co C, 15th Bn, 4th Bde, Fort Jackson

I don't believe so because they'd spoil the morale of the men by trying to be equal. I'm a drill at Fort Jackson and I've realized that having women with the men provide no physical competition for them. The men never reach their physical capacity running side by side with women.

COMMENTARY

Should women fight?

By Sue Davis

Should women be drafted for combat? That probing question begs in the minds of our country's decision makers. There are so many aspects to consider — It's a social question that raises many eyebrows and lends "numerous" comments.

In the event of a national emergency, women should be drafted, but not to lob grenades or fire M16's.

A point to consider is the physical structure of women. Granted, some are built like tanks and could perform great feats of physical prowess (there are exceptions to all rules). But a generalization is called for in this situation. Women aren't built to haul 100 pound 'rucksacks', ammunition and a weapon while traipsing through underbrush, jungle, marshes or desert.

Let's face reality. For the most part, men are emotionally unable to detach themselves from the idea that they may, at some time, fight alongside a woman — that they may both be diving into foxholes, dodging zinging bullets, nursing each others' wounds and comforting each others' anxieties.

One hypothetical situation may be true. If women and men were together in the throes of combat, they would share one common bond: comradery —and one common emotion: horror.

America's leaders should substitute the question "Should women be drafted for combat?" with "Should anyone fight?" OK. Now convince "them"!

On wills

Make a grave decision

By Morticia Figg

Miguel de Cervantes said in Don Quixote, "There is a strange charm in the thoughts of a good legacy, or the hopes of an estate, which wondrously alleviates the sorrow that men would otherwise feel for the death of their friends." The thought that we might gain financially does seem to make the passing of a loved one a little easier to bear.

That is the reason, I suppose, behind the will of one moderately well-off Georgian. Shortly after his death, all his close (and distant) relatives crowded into the small office of the only attorney in town for the reading of his last will and testament. Silence filled the room of hopeful heirs as the lawyer opened the will. It seemed he would never read it. And when the attorney did speak, there was no other sound as he read, "Being of sound mind, I spent every dog-gone dime I had before I died."

While eating lunch in a restaurant frequented by a large number of people in the legal profession, I overheard two men at the next table talking. "Your law practice must be doing very well these days, Tom," the first man said. "That diamond tie pin you're wearing must be at least 2½

carats, actually," said

Tom. "This is a memorial diamond, you know."

Puzzled, the first man asked, "What is a memorial diamond?" "Well," said Tom, "several months ago a very wealthy client of mine died, and I was named the executor of his estate. The will instructed that the executor should take $5,000 from the estate and purchase a memorial stone, and this is it."

All you "treasure hunters" take note. Not long ago, while passing through a certain county in Kentucky, I was told about a lady who died many years ago. Her husband had left her a small fortune he had made from several coal mines. Not trusting banks, she had kept the money at home. She left the money to her children, along with the location where she had hidden it — among some peach trees in a nearby field. There are a couple of people who say that her kids, grandkids, and great-grandkids never stopped digging for fifty years; but they never found that money.

Actually, she probably did her children a favor, because money which comes easily is never fully appreciated. If you sweat for your money, then you learn the value of it. I have never inherited as much as a dime and you can easily see

VA directs easy access for disabled veterans

The wheelchair-bound chief of the Veterans Administration has directed that all VA-sponsored meetings or other events be held in locations fully accessible to the disabled.

Max Cleland, a Vietnam Era triple amputee, said that by issuing a formal VA directive on locations for meetings he was acting "to further our commitment to the total elimination of barriers that prevent disabled individuals from participating in meetings, conferences or other activities of the Veterans Administration."

Last year Cleland told all VA departments and field stations "to make every effort" to remove architectural barriers "so that no area in our system is off limits to handicapped persons."

In a recent VA circular, he added that VA facilities chosen for meetings or other events should afford:

- parking spaces reserved for the disabled and close to the facility;
- ramps and wheelchair entrances and exits;
- accessible restrooms on each floor;
- priority seating locations for the hearing impaired and for those in wheelchairs;
- elevators and meeting rooms of sufficient size to accommodate wheelchairs;
- supporting facilities such as restaurants and shops that are accessible to the disabled;
- easy access to emergency medical equipment and personnel.

Cleland said he realized that not all the guidelines can be met in all cases, but added that "I expect every VA employee involved in planning these events to exert maximum effort to achieve this most desirable goal."

Prior to becoming VA Administrator, Cleland — as a Georgia state senator — authored legislation making public buildings in the state accessible to the handicapped.

"The discrimination created by such barriers is very real," he said. "The limitations of physical access compound the personal handicap experienced by disabled persons as they work to take their rightful place in the mainstream of business and social life."

Officer 'alert date' defined

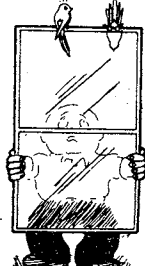

Officers wishing to retire or resign in lieu of accepting an assignment should be aware of what constitutes an official date for initial alert for assignment, say MILPERCEN officials.

Officials cite the "30-day rule" that allows officers to submit a voluntary retirement application or unqualified resignation if they do not want to comply with assignment instructions. The 30-day rule, they say, requires MILPERCEN managed officers (excluding those in the AMEDD, Chaplain or Jag Corps) to submit separation requests to their approving authority within 30 days of assignment notification.

Official assignment notification is defined as an interview, phone call or correspondence from a MILPERCEN career manager to an officer that includes a "firm" explanation of where and when the officer will be assigned, officials explained. (ARNEWS)

Medals given for humane services

Service members who participated directly in the following areas of operations during the time periods specified, are entitled to the Humanitarian Service Medal expected to be available in July according to MILPO officials. They are:

Eagle Pull — Cambodia, Thailand and Contiguous Waters; Apr. 12, 1975.

Frequent Wind — Republic of Vietnam and Contiguous Waters; Apr. 29-30, 1975.

Baby Lift — Vietnam, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif. and Fort Benning; Apr. 4 — May 9, 1975.

New Life/New Arrivals — Guam, Fort Chaffee, Ark., and Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.; Apr. 1 — Dec. 20, 1975.

Personnel officers will ensure that individuals who meet the criteria, verify their participation in the approved operations prior to recording the HSM in the individuals' field personnel file and submitting MILPO change transaction.

Verification may be made by substantiating documents such as:

- Certificates, Letters of Appreciation or Achievement

- Copies of TDY or Special Duty Orders reflecting participation within the specified geographical location

- After Action Reports, SITREPS, Rosters, unit files or any records or other documentation which will substantiate the individual's participation.

- Statements from supervisors, commanders or other officials who were in a position to substantiate the individual's direct participation in the area of operations.

The HSM is a service medal, not an individual decoration. Submission of Department of the Army Form 638 (Recommendation for award) is not required.

Inner beauty important

William W. Erbach, Sr.
TSB, Chaplain

Out of a war time economy, a war time generation, a war torn country, there comes numerous stories of heroics, bravery, defeat and destruction. We are in such a generation. I've lived through three of these generations to participate in a physical sense in the present one with you.

As a chaplain I had occasion to visit troops at Walson Army Hospital in Fort Dix. I happened to be visiting two young men who had found their way back to this ward from Viet Nam. As coincidence would have it, both boys had lost their right arms and from the very same shrapnel burst.

One of them said to me in the course of our conversation, "I'm going to sit back and collect my pension as long as I live. I can sit on the cracker barrel and be a philosopher."

The other lad heard him and he shook his left arm at me and said, "Nothing will stop me. I'm going right ahead as if nothing had happened."

Dramatic? Sure, but true. This experience led me to a truth that I think we could all take to our hearts: What happens to us is a lot less significant than what happens within us. The size of man you are is not measured in volume but in purpose, not pounds but production.

Dental Hints

Selecting, using proper toothbrush important

Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of six articles on dental health published by the BAYONET, in cooperation with the Fort Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 4-10.

The last time I purchased toothbrushes for my family there were so many shapes, sizes and degrees of bristle firmness that I was confused. Is there a recommended brush? Also, how long can most toothbrushes be used before their effectiveness is reduced?

Most dentists recommend a toothbrush that has a straight handle, a flat brushing surface and soft, end-rounded nylon bristles. Soft bristles are less likely to injure the gum tissues.

In addition, the head of the brush should be small enough to permit easier access to the rear of the mouth and the tongue side of the teeth. Children require smaller brushes than those designed for adults.

Quarterly replacement

Considering normal wear, a toothbrush probably should be replaced four times a year. A worn-out toothbrush can't clean off the plaque and bent bristles can injure your gums. You should check your family's toothbrushes often. When they become bent or frayed they should be replaced.

While toothbrushing will remove plaque and other debris, a truly effective cleaning job actually requires the combined daily use of a toothbrush, dental floss and fluoridated dentifrice.

The problem begins with plaque which is the sticky colorless substance that constantly forms on everyone's teeth. The bacteria in plaque utilize sugars to produce harmful acids that attack the tooth enamel and cause decay. This same substance can also irritate the gums, making them tender and likely to bleed.

If plaque is not thoroughly removed at least once a day by careful brushing and flossing, plaque will harden into a deposit called calculus. As calculus accumulates, the gums slowly detach from the teeth leaving deep pockets where bacteria and debris continue to collect, eventually destroying the tissues and bones around the teeth and the teeth themselves.

Where hard meets soft

An especially crucial area to keep clean is where the hard and soft tissues meet. Brushing should be done carefully in this area.

One recommended method is to place the head of the brush at a 45-degree angle alongside the tooth at the gumline. A series of short back and forth strokes, using a gentle scrubbing motion, should be used to cleanse each individual tooth. Use the same manner of brushing to scrub the inside and outside surfaces of each tooth, upper and lower, as well as the chewing surfaces of all the teeth.

While there are many sizes and designs of toothbrushes on the market today, ask your family dentist to recommend the toothbrush that is better suited for your oral health care needs.

Naumann retires

"It's been a fast 22 years"

Editor's Note: Lt. Col Terrel K. Naumann, installation club manager, is retiring from the Army after 22 years. He has been the club manager at Benning for two years.

By Sharron Calabrisi

Wearing civilian clothes and sitting comfortably at his desk, Lt. Col. Terrel K. Naumann, installation club manager, comments, "It's been a fast 22 years."

When asked what he is going to do after he retires, Naumann leaned back in his chair and sighed, "I don't know."

"I want to go into the food and hospital industry but first, I'm going to take a two month vacation," he added. He plans to travel to Montana, his home state, and down through California. "If I have time, I would like to go to the Bahamas," he continued.

Naumann has been the installation club manager on Fort Benning for two years. He chose it when the officers went under the OPMS.

"I had always had aspirations to go into the food and hospitality business," he explained.

Naumann commented on the renovations that have been taking place on Fort Benning. He mentioned that the renovations came about because of the old and worn out appearance of the clubs.

Continuous facility maintenance

"The management continuously has to maintain the facility, and they have to stay attuned to what is happening in the civilian world," he explained. "We are as good, if not better, than our civilian counterparts," he stressed.

The club renovations that took place while Naumann was manager were: the Foxhole in Jan. 1978; the disco at Custer Terrace in May 1978; the Concord Lounge in Aug. 1978; and the Lexington Dining Room in Nov. 1979.

In the future, Naumann mentioned the renovations would be directed toward the NCO branch.

Naumann also commented on the profit of the clubs. He explained that the profits from the package store are split between the clubs, with a certain percentage going to the Morale Support Fund.

He explained, "Club systems now aren't any different than the civilian world.

Club managers today have to be educated and if they don't have college degrees, they should at last have associate degrees in business or management," Naumann emphasized.

Tough world

Naumann sighed, "It's a tough world." Trying to have lower prices than the civilian world, and at the same time offer better quality is one of the clubs' objectives, he added. "Our labor is doubled, but our prices are half," he explained.

Lt. Col. Naumann urged, "The club belongs to the membership, not the managers."

The clubs try to bring in big name entertainment. "We draw a lot of ideas from big civilian enterprises," he added.

Quality vs. quality

"We want to use quality to compensate for the civilian specials," he explained. Naumann stated,

New club manager named

Maj. Johnny L. Murphy has been named Installation Club Manager, replacing Lt. Col. Terrel Naumann who retired Feb 28.

Murphy, who entered the Army in 1965, has previously held Infantry and Aviation Officer assignments in Vietnam; Fort Rucker, Ala.; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; and Fort Campbell, Ky.

He is a graduate of both the Infantry Officers' Basic and Advanced Courses here, the Rotary Wing Course at Fort Rucker, Ala. and the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

He was one of the original members of the 180th Avn Co., which was formed here in 1966 before its deployment to Vietnam.

A native of Alva, Okla., Murphy has a Bachelor of Science degree in Business from Oklahoma State University.

Before coming to Benning, he attended the seven-week Club Management Course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

He and his wife, Vicki, reside at 205 Miller Loop with their children Robert, 11 and Alicia, 10.

"Our objective is to provide a better facility than the local community." We want to see them here every day," he urged. "It's alright if they go downtown occasionally to break the monotony, as long as they come back."

The big management problem is you have got to be all things to all people," he explained. "We provide variety to suit everyone's taste," he added.

Naumann stressed that the Concord has class and atmosphere and people can talk at a normal tone. You also have your places to go on Fort Benning if you want to get a headache from the noise and music," he chuckled.

Renovations all over

"In CONUS there have been about 12 clubs that have had major renovations, and even new clubs built," he commented.

Naumann believes that Fort Benning needs a new officer's club. "The old one," he stressed, "is a grand and glorious building that has been around for about 40 years and is totally dysfunctional."

"The reason being," he added,

"is that the facility is too spread out. To have a new FUNCTIONAL club built would require about 30,000 feet and $2½ million."

Variety for all

In the past, Naumann explained, Benning was "the place" to go. Before Columbus had liquor by the drink, everyone would come to the clubs for drinks.

Naumann said complaints come in about wanting to have large affairs held in the clubs and not being able to get a discount. He explained that it was against the regulations to do this.

"We are handcuffed because of the operating regulations," he added. Naumann mentioned the limitations are "possibly due to the alleged club scandals in the past, and the regulations have not been relaxed."

In closing, Naumann said, "I'm sorry to be going. I've been here since 1974, the longest in any one assignment."

"I've been very happy with the work, because it was very challenging and demanding," he concluded.

Army BLACK HAWK field testing in final states

The U.S. Army's UH-60A BLACK HAWK, produced by Sikorsky Aircraft Division, has begun rolling off the assembly line and taking to the air for a multitude of destinations.

From New York State to Alaska, from Alabama to Panama — and many points in between — BLACK HAWK helicopters flown by Army pilots will confirm over 2000 hours of testing performed by the prototype aircraft.

More than two years of flight testing by prototypes, plus demonstrations by the first three production aircraft, will have fully proven the BLACK HAWK's abilities.

Eugene Buckley, vice president, BLACK HAWK, said, "We have a record of success, and of accomplishment. Now we enter the year of production and our watchwords must be quality and efficiency. Let us always do justice to the fact that we are sending into the field the best military helicopter in the world today."

BLACK HAWK sets continuous flight record

The most visible and dramatic accomplishments in a new aircraft program come in the flight program. A prototype aircraft achieved a major milestone at year's end with a historic almost seven hour continuous flight, the longest ever by an Army helicopter. The aircraft travelled 880 nautical miles over the states of Connecticut, New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, utilizing an extended range kit. The results demonstrated the feasibilities of the BLACK HAWK to self-deploy to Europe without mid-air refueling.

It's off to Panama in April for another prototype for seven months of testing under the most punishing jungle conditions. The aircraft will be called upon to show its ability for high performance in steaming tropical conditions with a minimum of maintenance support.

Performance evaluations

In January, the third production aircraft was loaded aboard a C-5 at Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks, Conn., and flown to California for all-important performance guarantee testing.

One of the most rigorous assignments goes to the fourth production aircraft which this month is beginning 11 months of extensive evaluation to determine the helicopters' reliability, availability, and maintainability-durability. Stops along the way for the aircraft include cold weather testing at Fort Drum, N.Y., mid-summer desert operations in Yuma, Ariz., and a journey in December to the Arctic for the deep freeze of winter in the far north.

A dramatic demonstration of BLACK HAWK capabilities will take place this month at Fort Bragg, N.C., where the BLACK HAWK will be used by the Army for a series of parachute jumps and rappelling maneuvers. Rappelling is the term for rapid exodus of troops from a hovering helicopter by means of ropes or cord ladders.

An extensive BLACK HAWK Force Development Test and Experimentation will take place over a period of several months at Ft. Campbell, Ky., utilizing several aircraft in a wide range of missions. The demonstration, commencing in May, will mark the first time production BLACK HAWKS are delivered to an Army operational unit to perform virtually every aspect of their mission as the world's technologically advanced utility transport aircraft.

In addition, several demonstrations will be carried out to confirm the compatibility of the various kits which are available for special BLACK HAWK missions. One of the most extensive kit demonstrations — medical evaluation — will take place at Ft. Campbell in April and May. The activities will test the aircraft's "lazy Susan" litter configuration which permits medics to place the ill and injured aboard the aircraft with minimum patient movement.

BLACK HAWK production to increase

As the BLACK HAWK proves itself in the field in these and additional checkouts, production dates at Sikorsky's Stratford plants will increase during 1979. The current schedule of two deliveries per month will gradually escalate to seven deliveries by November 1979. The Army has already contracted with Sikorsky for 200 BLACK HAWKS in a program that calls for more than 1,100 of the aircraft be deployed by 1986.

For the U.S. Army, 1979 might well be called the year of the BLACK HAWK, the time when the finest production helicopter in military history makes its dramatic debut, performing its designated missions with qualities never before achieved in rotary wing flight.

36th Engr Gp Combat Support

The 36th Engineer Group was originally formed in 1940 by an Engineer Combat Regiment. It was redesignated the 36th Engineer Group and arrived at Pusan Korea at the beginning of the Korean Campaign. The Group remained in Korea until its deactivation in 1972.

It was reactivated at Fort Benning on June 29, 1973. The Group's present missions are to maintain a high degree of combat readiness, and support the U.S. Army Infantry Center (USAIC).

There are a wide variety of jobs within the Group. Qualified personnel serve as construction draftsmen, plumbers, electricians, carpenters, structural specialists, mechanics, firefighters, welders, structural specialist mechanics, operators, finance specialists, legal clerks, clerk-typists and bridge specialists.

Other services provided are ammunition supply and storage, motor maintenance, truck transportation and two special units, the 586th Engineer Company (tactical bridge construction) and 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment (EOD).

The units that make up the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) include the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat Heavy), the 67th Maintenance Battalion, the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Ribbon Bridge), the 89th EOD, the 18th Replacement Detachment, the 524th Personnel Services Company, the 15th Finance Detachment, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineers and the 520th and 597th Engineer Detachments (Fire Fighters) at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

With nearly 2500 people assigned to its variety of units, the 36th Engineer Group is one of the most versatile commands in the Army.

Deadline for scholarship program told

Active duty enlisted soldiers interested in the two-year Army ROTC Scholarship Program have until May 1 to submit their applications for the 1979-80 school year. Winners will be announced in June.

The scholarships provide full tuition, books and educational fees, plus a living allowance of up to $1,000 per year. Winners will also be paid while attending the advanced camp, normally held during the summer between the junior and senior years of college.

To compete for the scholarships, soldiers must meet the following criteria:

- Have served at last one year on active duty:
- Be under 25 years of age on June 30 of the year they're eligible for commissioning:
- Have received credit for at least two, but not more than two and one-half years of college:
- Have been accepted by a college for next fall's enrollment:
- Have earned a GT score of 115 or higher:
- Be a United States citizen.

Winners may attend any four-year college or university hosting Army ROTC or a non-host college with a cross-enrollment agreement with a nearby host school.

Scholarship winners will receive an early discharge so they can arrive on campus in time to enroll for the 1979-80 fall term. They must also enlist in the U.S. Army Reserve before enrolling in the Army ROTC advanced course. They are not required to attend reserve meetings while enrolled.

After successfully completing their Military Science and Baccalaureate degree requirements, these soldiers will be commissioned second lieutenants in either the regular Army or the Army Reserve and will serve four years active duty.

Details on the two-year ROTC scholarship program for active duty enlisted are contained in AB 145-1.

Applications must be requested by April 15, 1979; however, applicants have until May 1 to submit them. Individuals desiring applications and information may write: Army ROTC Scholarships, Fort Monroe, Va. 23651. (ARNEWS)

USMAPS assists GIs apply for school

The United States Military Academy Preparatory School (USMAPS) assists selected members of the armed forces to qualify for admission to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

The concept of assisting soldiers to gain admission to the Military Academy began after World War I and continues today as a means of providing upward mobility to the commissioned officer ranks.

The school is open to enlisted men and women serving on active duty in the Army and to enlisted men and women serving on active duty in the Army and to enlisted members of the Reserve components of the Army.

The Preparatory School currently is located at Fort Monmouth, N.J. about 50 miles south of

New York City. The school complex includes its own classroom, living quarters, dining facility and athletic facilities. In addition, the customary conveniences found on most Army posts are available to all USMAPS students.

Interested soldiers who desire additional information should write the Commandant, USMA Prep School, Fort Monmouth, N.J. 07703, and see your unit commander.

Commanders should contact the USAIC West Point Candidate Advisory Officer, Capt. Frank Garabato at 595-7159/4258 and review AR 351-12 dated June 1 for submission and screening of necessary forms of USMAPS. Deadline is May 1 for soldiers who wish to enter the USMAPS class beginning in August.

Eligibility requirements (as outlined in AR 351-12, dated July 1, 1978):

- Member of the Regular Army
- At least 17 and not more than 21 years old on July 1 of the year he/she wishes to enter USMAPS
- A citizen of the United States
- Unmarried and not previously married
- Pregnancy or a legal obligation to support a child or children will be bars to enrollment.
- A high school graduate or equivalent with a scholastic record indicating preparedness to enter the Military Academy
- High moral character
- Potential leadership traits
- Motivation — a sincere interest in attending the U.S. Military Academy and becoming a career Army Officer.

MPs win post basketball tournament

By Betty Zimmerman

The 139th MP Co outlasted the 498th Med Co in a two-game playoff last Friday night to win the post basketball tournament.

Wednesday night's preliminaries brought about the medics' first loss as the MPs put them down 48-34. ITB then disposed of 1st Bn, TSB, 59-48.

That left ITB and the 498th, with one loss each, to battle it out in Thursday's semi-finals and the medics squeaked by, 59-58.

Friday night's endurance event resulted in a 64-63 first game victory for the 498th. The MPs led at halftime 38-32, but then their shooting percentage dropped and the medics pulled it out.

James Howard and Nat Harris scored in double figures to lead a 498th team effort and James Hunter played a good inside game.

The 139th likes a fast running game but the slower 498th team controlled the pace and made them play their way. Rick Donnell, Carlton Rand and Stuart Roberts bucketed 20, 15 and 14 points respectively for the 139th.

The second game of the night began with the 498th jumping off to a six-point lead, but finished with the 139th leading 58-55.

Stamina played an important part in the MPs' ability to continue running the press. They forced four turnovers in a row to overcome a first half deficit of 25-32. Donnell and Al Perkins were high scorers with Roberts protecting the boards for the MPs.

Harris and Howard again led the medic scorers with 18 and 15 points.

Both teams worked hard all season and played well. Four good free throws by Rand and Kevin Wilson in the last minute gave the win to the 139th MP Co.

Ronald Collier heads for the other end of the court on the double because the 498th had given away a ten-point lead.

Kevin Wilson (13) makes sure James Howard (15) gets no basket while Al Perkins (15 left) and Carlton Rand (10) wait for the rebound.

Junior shooters win rifle matches

Junior shooters from the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club successfully defended the Southeastern Sectional Match of the National Junior Indoor Smallbore Rifle Championships last weekend at the post indoor range. There were 43 competitors representing seven junior shooting clubs from Georgia and Tennessee in attendance.

The National Junior Indoor Championships are conducted January through April in approximately 90 locations throughout the United States and have more than 4,500 individual entries representing some 900 shooting teams each year. The sectional matches are conducted on two types of targets, conventional and metric (similar to those targets used in olympic shooting competition).

In team competition at the Fort Benning sectional, the Fort Benning Junior "Blue Team" of David Cannella, David DeRoche, Billy Haracourt and Ronald Wigger completely dominated the shooting, winning both the conventional target team match with 1556 x 1600 and the metric target match with 2218 x 2400. Both scores should place Fort Benning within the top three teams nationally when scores are compiled.

In the individual competition, Kurt Fitz Randolph of Cookville, Tenn., won both matches with near record scores. His scores of 395 x 400 in the conventional target match and 581 x 600 in the metric target match were high enough to give him an excellent chance to win the national individual championship after scores are compiled. The next four individual places were won by Fort Benning shooters.

Conventional Target Match

2nd place David Cannella — 391
3rd place Billy Haracourt — 389
4th place David DeRoche — 389
5th place Danny Wigger — 388

Metric Target Match

David Cannella — 559
David DeRoche — 555
Billy Haracourt — 555
Danny Wigger — 551

Senior soccer kicks off

Saturday, March 3, The Military Youth Dependent Soccer League (MYDSL) got underway and came up on the short end of the 3-1 final score as Fort Benning's senior boys clashed with the Maxwell AFB Atoms.

The Atoms took the lead in a hard-fought first half as Glen Kolofski and Jim Osgood penetrated Benning's defense to take a 2-0 lead. The Atoms opened up mid-way in the second half with another score by Scott Swanson.

With ten minutes to go, a determined Fort Benning attack split the Atom defense as center forward Terance Thomas and striker Chris Volta powered the ball and Atom's goalie into the net in a dramatic side-by-side slide, which produced Benning's only score.

Doughboys recruiting for spring football

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team will play their first spring football on April 26. Anyone interested in playing should be at the Sports Office, Bldg. 394 on March 15 at 6 p.m. for an organizational meeting.

The Doughboys will go into training from March 15-April 26. For more information contact Head Coach Ralph Santaliz at 545-2281.

Golf Part IV: Helpful hints

Helpful Reminders

1. Downhill lie

Most golfers have a tendency to hit low shots to the right, so adjust accordingly.

2. Uphill lie

Many golfers also tend to hit the ball slightly to the left on these shots so again, adjust your swing accordingly.

3. Sidehill (feet below ball)

This causes a tendency to hit low off to the left.

4. Sidehill (feet above ball)

Shots here will tend to be low and veer off to the right.

5. Playing into the wind

Position ball farther to the rear of your stance. This will help you to hit a lower shot.

6. Playing with the wind

Position ball to the front of your stance. This will create a high shot that can get up into the wind and thus give you a longer shot.

7. Wet sand shot

Play three to four inches behind the ball and swing harder. This will allow for the bounce of the club head and still get the ball out of the trap.

8. Extra dry sand shot

Play closer to the ball and swing very smooth. The club has a tendency to go through dry sand extremely fast.

9. Are you slicing?

The slice is usually caused by cutting across on your downswing and not extending to your target. The next time you slice a shot, check your swing and then try to extend more towards your target.

10. Are you hooking?

The hook is caused by what we call a round-house swing using your hands too much. Again the correction is made by trying to extend the club head more towards the target.

Rules Reminder: Lateral Water Hazard

This discussion will hopefully clear up any confusion about the lateral water hole hazard and the proper procedure on playing from them.

The lateral water hazard is defined by red stakes (not to be confused with a regular water hazard which is defined by yellow stakes). The boundaries of the lateral hazard are determined by the imaginary line connecting one post to another. When you have hit a ball into the hazard, the boundary line becomes very important in planning your next shot.

After determining the spot where your ball last crossed the boundary line into the hazard, you may put the ball within two club lengths of that spot no closer to the hole with a one shot penalty. You may also go to the point on the opposite side of the hazard which is the same distance from the hole and follow the same procedure.

The final option is simply to return to the spot where the original ball was played and reload, under a penalty of one stroke. A reminder, the line of flight plays no part in this or any other rule.

DYA donkey basketball

The U.S. Army Infantry School staff and the Infantry Center staff played donkey basketball Feb. 27 to raise funds for Dependent Youth Activities. The school staff outrode the center, crushing them 8 to 0.

During the 8-minute quarters players spent most of their time trying to get on the donkeys.

One spectator felt that the donkeys were better conditioned for the game than the players.

Players are to be commended for their gallant efforts in attempts to make points while on the donkey's back. Unfortunately, their "asses" were not very responsive during the game.

The tough part about donkey basketball is getting the donkeys to go where you want.

A perfect example of a donkey hook.

Graceful, coordinated movements aren't usually found in donkey basketball.

Runner's profile

Hennigan's thing is to run for fun

By Julie Casey

Hooked on the idea that extended exercise leads to a beer, Capt. Al Hennigan is one of the most dedicated and consistent runners to be found on Fort Benning.

Seriously, Hennigan enjoys healthy exercise and competition with himself.

"I like the feeling of community among runners. It is like an unofficial club. The healthy competition is also fun. The one thing I find very special about the competition is the appreciation runners have for others' efforts. It doesn't matter where they come in. Everyone knows what it is like to start out," he commented.

Hennigan has always ran to some extent during his 12-year Army career, but the mileage buildup came when the Latham 5-mile run became a standard on Fort Benning.

"It was necessary for me to increase my mileage to perform well at the 5-mile run each week. I began to build up and started to enjoy the run. Running began to feel good. Now it gives me great satisfaction to be able to run 10 miles farther than the average man and to do it comfortably," said the Infantry captain who completed his first marathon last year and is looking forward to the next one.

"I wanted to run the marathon (26 miles 385 years) because of the mystique involved. It has something more than even longer runs. It is a continuous three-fold effort of running. It involves you mentally, physically and performances depend on the weather. At some point you are physically going to run down and mental determination takes over," he said.

He added that upon finishing the marathon he swore that he would never run another one, but the next day he was already making plans for the next one.

"Finishing gave me a tremendous amount of satisfaction. I'm competing mostly with myself to run a good marathon," commented Hennigan, whose object is to run a good race at any distance hoping for a personal best.

Hennigan ran his best time in a 10,000-meter race in Dothan last October with a one-minute warmup in 38 minutes and 25 seconds.

"I feel I ran a good race considering the only stretching I did was on the way down there," he noted.

Running in one of the toughest age groups (30 to 35), he commented, "I really don't get psyched before a race because I'm not really an age group competitor yet and I'm only competing against myself."

According to Hennigan, the most unique thing about running is the unpredictability of the daily runs. It is frustrating at times because you have good and bad runs.

"I guess if you had a great run every day things would get boring. When you finally do have a good run it feels great and makes up for all those awkward runs. I really get a lot out of running," he concluded.

Al Hennigan

Dramatizers getting ready for spring production

Benning Dramatizers present "An Almost Perfect Person"

The Fort Benning Dramatizers will present "An Almost Perfect Person" on March 23, 24, 29, 30 and 31 at the Benning Playhouse. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. and showtime will be 8 p.m. Admission is free.

"An Almost Perfect Person" is a comedy by Judith Ross. The plot concerns a woman who has just lost an election to Congress. Pat Wainwright stars as the 'almost perfect person' with Tim Wiperman and Seth Hamilton rounding out the cast as her campaign managers.

Cancer discussion group

Martin Army Hospital is forming a discussion group for cancer patients and their family members. Interested persons may come to the Ward B-5 lounge Thursday at 3 p.m.

"These discussions will offer an ideal opportunity for people to ventilate their feeling plus receive reassurance from others undergoing the same problems," said one of the discussion leaders, Capt. Mary B. Johnson, assistant clinical coordinator of Ward B.

For further information, call Johnson at 544-1275/1797 or Helen Horwitz at 544-1252.

Parent Effectiveness Training

Mary Ann Rogers, Muscogee County educator, will conduct Parent Effectiveness Training (P.E.T.) for active duty military personnel and their dependents. The eight-week course begins March 18 and classes will be held weekly each Sunday evening from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel. Call 545-2050 for registration information.

Band members needed

The 283rd Army Band needs trumpet and clarinet players. Interested service members should contact WO1 O'Preska at 545-5313 for an audition.

Columbus College

Registration for Spring Quarter classes at Columbus College will be March 26-28 in Woodruff Gym. Fort Benning registration is from March 26 through 30. For information call 545-7768.

Mime

The Celebration Mime Ensemble will perform tonight at the Springer Opera House beginning at 8 p.m. There will also be a mime workshop tomorrow at the theater from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Celebration Mime Ensemble is a mime group which performs throughout the United States and Canada. The group also maintains a theater and school in South Paris, Me. The group's founder, Tony Montanaro, is an internationally known mime who studied with Marcel Marceau.

Military travel guides

Military travel guides are available in the Information/Tours/Travel Office, Morale Support Activities Division, Bldg 394 at a discount price ($1.75). These guides list hotels throughout the United States that give military discount rates as well as guest house facilities at various armed forces installations. Call 545-2281 for information.

English workshop

A workshop to train persons to teach English to non-English speaking persons will be held at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606, Dixie Road, Monday-Wednesday, March 19-21 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This workshop will prepare persons to teach in the English classes for non-English speaking persons which are held each Tuesday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605, Dixie Road, and on Monday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the McGraw Manor area at McBride School, Custer Road.

Mrs. Gayle Leininger, a Literacy Missions Associate for the Home Mission Board, Southern Baptist Convention, will direct the workshop.

A free nursery will be provided for small children. Each participant is asked to bring a sack lunch for herself and child. Coffee and punch will be provided as well as curriculum materials. All interested persons are requested to contact Mrs. John L. Waldrop, director of religious education at 545-2366 or 544-4594, for additional information and to register for the workshop.

Open pool tournament

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center Bldg. 9079 will conduct a 14.1 Open Pool Tournament (Center Level) on tomorrow and Sunday, beginning at 2 a.m. The first and second place winners will be determined and will represent the center in the post level tournaments to be played at a later date. Spectators are invited to observe the tournament. For further information, call 544-1721/3079.

Destin drawing

A post wide drawing for the first period of the summer season, May 1-17, 1979, will be held on March 13. Applications must be submitted in person in the Information/Tours/Travel Office, Bldg. #394, Doughboy Stadium.

VA Q&A

Q. — I am a World War II veteran and only recently established service-connection for a disability arising from my service. Am I eligible for service-disabled insurance from the VA?
A. — Eligibility for service-disabled veterans insurance (RH) requires separation from service after April 24, 1951. Therefore, you are not eligible.
Q. — I am a World War I veteran receiving a nonservice-connected pension. I will be 78 years old in three months. When will I receive the 25 percent increase?

A. — You will receive the increase effective the first day of the month in which you turn 78.
Q. — I have recently taken a loan on my GI insurance. What is the current interest rate?
A. — Effective Jan. 11, 1971, the interest rate is 5 percent. Loans taken prior to that date are charged a 4 percent interest rate.

Q. — Can the spouse of a veteran qualify for civil service preference based on the veteran's military service?
A. — The spouse of a 10-point veteran, who because of a service-connected disability has been unable to qualify for any appointment in the federal civil service, is entitled to a 10-point preference. At such time that the veteran should be able to use this preference, it would be rescinded from the spouse.

Q. — Are World War I veterans eligible for VA home loans?

A. — No. Home loan entitlement is for certain veterans who served during or after World War II. However, certain WWI veterans may be entitled to loans insured by FHA. You should seek information from that agency or its field offices.

Discharge review

The Veterans Administration would like to remind veterans who received undesirable discharges that they can now apply to the Dept. of Defense (DoD) for a discharge review without waiting for the 15 year period normally required. The deadline for applications to be turned in is Jan. 1, 1980.

Applications for discharge reviews can be obtained at Fort Benning, the VA regional office and various veterans service organizations. The VA and major veterans' service groups will be cooperating with the DoD in the program.

In addition to the application forms, an index of previous discharge review board decisions is available. These indexes can be used to assist veterans in preparation of their own cases.

For more information about the program, contact Benning's military personnel office.

Luncheon scheduled

The Health Service Command Activity will sponsor a luncheon at the Officers' Club on Wednesday, March 14, at 11 a.m. Susan Moyer from the lovely town of Westville will present slides and give information about this historical town. All members and retired HSCA members are invited to attend this special event. For reservations call 561-2991.

Ladies' golf clinic

A Ladies' golf clinic has been scheduled for three weeks in March. The clinic is for beginning golfers or those who wish to brush up on their game. The clinic will be a six-session class beginning Tuesday and will be held on Tuesday and Thursday at 10 a.m. To sign up or for more information call the Golf Pro Shop, 687-1940.

NCOWC nursing home party

On Monday, Feb. 26, the NCOWC gave a birthday party at The Muscogee Manor Nursing Home. The hostesses, Mrs. Lois Cameron, Mrs. Sue Patrick and Mrs. Shigeko Brown, used a St. Patrick's Day theme. Shamrock arrangements were placed on tables covered with white linen cloths. The birthday cake was also decorated with shamrocks.

Those celebrating birthdays were presented gifts and music was played by Mr. Parley Davis on the accordion.

NCOWC games and brunch

The NCOWC met at the Top 5 NCO Club on Feb. 28 for their monthly games and brunch. The games began at 9 a.m. followed by brunch in the party room. A choice of a barbecue plate or chef salad was served.

Hostesses for this month's activities were Mrs. Barbara Hancock, Mrs. Vermell Harrel and Mrs. Sandra Jackson.

Painting classes

New classes in tole and decorative painting will begin on March 15. Call Diane Osborne at 563-3674 for more information.

Golf groups forming

The Ladies' Golf Group is gearing up for spring! There's a place for you in either the 18-hole group or the 9-hole group. Come out to the Clubhouse every Tuesday at 9 a.m. and join the fun.

Single soldiers as well as those who are married will benefit from the recently approved Junior Enlisted Travel (JET) entitlements package, according to DA officials.

Single soldiers, officials say, are eligible to ship a privately owned vehicle (POV) to authorized areas and will also receive an increase from 225 pounds to 500 pounds in the amount of personal baggage shipped at Army expense.

While only 15 percent of all junior EM are expected to ship a POV overseas, an official explained, he cautioned soldiers about high insurance rates, which start at $400 and up in Germany for single soldiers under 24.

An AAFES official said that non-leaded gasoline is not available in Europe and that there is a "critical" shortage of parts for cars more than six years old.

A Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) official also said the catalytic converters must be removed from U.S. cars shipped to Europe and the cars must meet stringent packaging requirements before shipment.

Advance party heads north

Recently the advance party from the 3rd Bn, 7th Inf. (Cottonbalers), 197th Inf Bde (Sep), left for Alaska for a month of arctic weather training.

The advance party will draw and prepare equipment for the rest of the Cottonbalers when they arrive at Fort Wainwright, Alaska.

The main body from the 3rd Bn, 7th Inf will depart on three flights from Lawson Army Airfield Wednesday.

The Cottonbalers in Alaska will undergo training similar to that experienced by the rest of the 197th Inf Bde at Fort Drum, N.Y.

Extension proposed for NCO course

The Infantry School's Enlisted Training Division, Directorate of Training Development, has requested a two-week addition to the 10-week Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Course. Other changes have also been proposed as a result of a recent survey.

The survey showed a need for more instruction in weapons, military leadership, medical subjects, land navigation and physical training. Additional instruction is also needed in tactics; nuclear, biological, and chemical warfare; engineer operations; and artillery support — all at Skill Level 4.

The school says it needs 64 more class hours to adequately teach these men to be effective platoon sergeants or operations sergeants.

Course deletions include Air Force operations, personnel, legal subjects and material readiness reporting.

A modified 10-week course will begin with Class 3-79 on March 25. If the proposal is approved, the 12-week course will start with Class 4-79 on June 10.

'Lump Sum' reup bonuses to return

"Lump Sum" reenlistment bonuses will return April 3 according to MILPERCEN officials.

MILPERCEN officials added that unless soldiers ask for annual bonus installments, they will receive full payment at reenlistment time, minus taxes.

Soldiers who reup between now and April 3 will continue to receive annual bonus payments and will not be allowed to extend enlistments only to take advantage of the one-time payment. If they are eligible to reenlist after April 2 without extending, soldiers will be able to take advantage of the lump sum option.

The lump sum offer applies to soldiers collecting a selective reenlistment bonus. Regular reenlistment bonuses are always paid lump sum because they are $2,000 or less.

For more information, contact your battalion reenlistment NCO or the post reenlistment office. (ARNEWS)

Improved TOW vehicle ready soon

By Betty Zimmerman

The Improved TOW Vehicle (ITV) is one of the latest additions to the mechanized Infantry battalion, and is expected to be fielded later this year.

The ITV will replace the current TOW vehicle, a jeep, on a one-for-one basis in selected mechanized Infantry units. It will also be issued to some cavalry and armor units until the Cavalry Fighting Vehicle is fielded.

Its purpose is to provide a protected crew and system that can kill enemy armor with a reasonable chance of surviving. The official designation is Carrier, Guided Missile Equipment, M901.

The modified armored personnel carrier will be the only full-time, armor-protected system in the mechanized Infantry battalion with an effective range in excess of 1,000 meters. Its maximum range is more than two miles.

The modifications include a three-position launcher; fire, load and travel. The launcher holds two missiles and the vehicle can carry ten more. Reloading takes only a maximum of 45 seconds.

The vehicle has a four-man crew consisting of a gunner, driver, loader and squad leader. The gunner must be able to actually see his target to hit it.

He has a choice of three sights, a 2.8-power acquisition sight, the 13-power TOW day sight or the TOW night sight which has 4.5-power and 12-power magnification. The image from each sight is transferred to the gunner through a series of lenses, prisms and mirrors, called the Image Transfer Assembly (ITA). This is so he may fire while under armor protection.

The TOW components can be removed from the carrier and set up for ground use in less than five minutes.

School training for operator and maintenance personnel will be held at Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Benning and Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. in late 1979. A group of USAREUR supervisors and instructors will also be trained using the TRADOC developed training package, so they will be ready in Europe when the vehicle arrives.

The Improved TOW Vehicle at right will soon be fielded, replacing the jeep as the TOW's fighting platform in Infantry units Army-wide. The switch will be made on a one-for-one basis. Some cavalry and armor units will also get the ITV.

TOW gunners finish ITV training

By R. W. Buterbaugh

The first group of TOW gunners has completed training at the U.S. Army Infantry School for the initial testing of the improved TOW vehicle (ITV).

Twenty soldiers were selected from Army posts throughout the United States to participate in the ITV Initial Production Test. Each soldier was a qualified TOW gunner with the additional MOS skill identifier.

The purpose of the Fort Benning course was to train ITV gunners and drivers, devise an instruction program for future classes and test the ITV equipment.

The test group was sent first to Yuma Proving Grounds, Ariz., for organization and briefing before reporting to Fort Benning Feb. 11.

While at Benning, they requalified with the TOW, learned how to operate and maintain the ITV, became familiar with the communications system and acquired techniques of night firing.

On March 3, the group returned to Yuma Proving Grounds where they are being taught ITV tactics. When the test is over, the students will return to their parent unit.

The Weapons, Gunnery and Maintenance Division conducted the Fort Benning phase of the test at Lee Range. While here, the group was attached to 11th Co, 1st Bn, TSB.

Fort Polk, La., soldiers attending were Sgt. Nolan Adcock, Sp4 William Insel, Sp4 Michael Lowe, Sgt. Daniel Neal, and Sp4 Maximo Velez.

Fort Lewis, Wash., sent Sgt. Nelson Tenney, Sp4 Blaine Bennett, Sp4 Robert Bingle, Cpl. Paul Roy and PFC Robert Lynch.

From Fort Hood, Tex., came Sp4s James Gambrell, Michael Grahame and Elge Orlando.

Coming from Fort Ord, Calif., were Sp4s Reymundo Avalos, Emil Tomko and Michael Zacharia.

Rounding out the group were Sgt. Johnny Kornegay from Fort Stewart, Ga.; Sp4 Bobby Caldwell from Fort Campbell, Ky.; and Sp4s John Lee and Loren Bingman from Fort Bragg, N.C.

Information calls jam Benning

By Seth Hamilton

The Fort Benning telephone exchanges are being congested with "unnecessary" telephone calls according to Willis Smith, chief of operations, USACC-Fort Benning.

Smith refers to the thousands of calls that come into the Fort Benning exchanges for on-post information. In January 1979, almost 150,000 telephone calls went through Benning's three switching centers. One third of those, or 50,000 calls, were people calling from Benning looking for on-post information.

The operators that handle these information calls are the same ones who handle all the long distance commercial calls, as well as Autovon assistance. Because of the huge volume of post information calls, the operators are not able to respond to other important calls as fast as they would like.

The solution to this problem is simple. Instead of calling the operator for a number on post, find it yourself in the post directory. Smith said that most of these information calls are unnecessary because in most cases, the information needed is in the post directory.

Next time you have to get a post phone number, why not try looking it up yourself instead of calling information? You'll be helping to ease the telephone exchange workload and besides, its good exercise to let your fingers do the walking.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Members of 498th awarded medals for Guyana mission

By Pat Brown

Members of the 498th Med. Co. (Air Ambulance) and their commander have been recognized for their participation in the evacuation of more than 900 victims of the Jonestown, Guyana, massacre last November.

Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander, presented Maj. Clarence Cooper, 498th commander, with the Meritorious Service Medal in a ceremony held at Lawson Army airfield last week, and the Joint Service Commendation Medal to the 42 members of his command who assisted in the evacuation.

After being alerted for duty in the recovery operation, the 498th immediately began preparation for airlift by C-141 to Guyana.

Upon arrival, members of the Air Ambulance company were used basically for movement of supplies and equipment in and out of Jonestown. Their tasks were made more difficult by adverse weather conditions and by the lack of up-to-date maps or other navigational aids.

Those not directly involved in flying or in aircraft maintenance, volunteered to assist in grave registration and body identification.

Those receiving the Joint Service Commendation Medal were: 1st Lt. Joseph L. Bradley, CW3 Charles F. Angle, CW3 Roger W. Duprey, CW3 Louis W. Mann, CW2 Richard E. Hilgendorf, CW2 Robert A. Price, CW2 James W. Tiller, WO1 Tommie L. Eiland, WO1 Woddy J. Vines and SFC General E. Woods.

Also cited were SSgt. Harold D. Ball, SSgt. George W. Carpenter, SSgt. James H. Jackson, SSgt. Claude H. Lackey, SSgt. Richard A. Nuesslein, SSgt. Raymond E. Penick, SSgt. Joe A. Williams, Sgt. Rufus J. Dixon, Sgt. Richard E. Downey, Sgt. Richard M. Fry and Sgt. Brian H. Kautz.

Others included: Sgt. Phillip G. Livingston, Sgt. William D. Powell, Sgt. Samuel C. Roland, Sgt. Ralph W. Williams, Sp 5 Richard R. Bussell, Sp 5 David R. Holly, Sp 5 Thomas C. Hughley, Sp 5 Daniel C. Lopez, Sp 4 David R. Barkley, Sp 4 James L. Crawford, Sp 4 Jerry M. Fair and Sp 4 Raymond D. Fashaw.

"Uncle Sam needs me."

Michael A. Mazza

SP5 Mike Mazza is a medic. He works in the emergency room of an Army hospital. "I think this job is great. It gives you a chance to see the real world. Me? I lived in a little town in Virginia for 18 years. Bam! The next thing I knew I was in Japan. Helping people. Like in a hospital ward. You do little things for them. And they think the world of you. I don't consider that kind of job to be work."

The Army needs people like Mike Mazza. People who are committed to doing a better job. If that's you, why not see your career counselor today. You may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs you.

Keep a good soldier in the Army. Reenlist.

Glad you asked

Do you think there are enough playgrounds on Fort Benning?

Rosa Davila, Lozada St. Davis Hill, 1st grade

There aren't enough playgrounds because where we live, there's not enough baby swings for the little kids. I heard that a little girl was swinging and the swing broke and she hurt her head. Big kids tore up the slides and swings; they're very dangerous to play on.

Lee Marbach, 546-B Langhorn St., 3rd grade

I don't think so. I know of two, but I only go to the one near my house. The one I go to has swings, a slide, a merry-go-round that makes me sick and monkey bars — and some baby swings. I guess there's enough equipment.

Reginald Bush, 305-B Kawmura St., 2nd grade

We have three playgrounds, but people knock down fences and break everything. Yes, we do need more.

Debra Kelly 117 Baltzel Ave, 2nd grade

Yes, I believe there are because there's enough room for us kids to play and animals to roam. The equipment is good. I especially like the monkey bars, but one seesaw is broken.

Letters to the Editor

Kids need room to play

Editor's Note

The following "playground pleas" were written by school-age children in the Davis Hill area. Their main concern is to have enough space to play, rather than have playgrounds with equipment such as monkey bars, swings, etc.

Dear Sir:

My friends and I have a club called Safety Needs Room. We have complaints from people that kids don't have any room to play. So, is it possible to dig up the woods behind the houses 539-A and 539-B and as far as you can go to make a skating area, and basketball and tennis courts?

I live at Davis Hill, 539-B Hartsock Lp.

Sincerely yours,
Vicki Gibb

thing that we can play ball on because when we play ball, sometimes we accidentally break a car window or house window. Please help us.

Scott Stribling, Age 11
541-A Hartsock Loop
Davis Hill, Ft. Benning

Dear Editor,

Will you help the kids on Davis Hill and talk with the person who is in charge of recreation and ask him to build a ball park or some-

Dear Sir:

I live on the higher part of Davis Hill. My house number is 532-A Hartsock Loop. There is a big field about half a block from where I live. Is it possible for you to make a football field and baseball field there? If we play baseball in someone's yard, we might break a window and if we play football, we might tear up the grass. So is it possible that it be cleared so we will have a place to play football and baseball?

Sincerely,
Butch Brzezicki

Craft Shop

Keep the photolab open!

This is in response to the Letter to the Editor in the March 2 issue of the BAYONET.

I too, am concerned about the craft shop photolab closing completely. On numerous occasions, I have gone to the photolab and the doggone thing's been closed. Weekends are the only times I have for printing.

Even though the photolab has fewer devotees than the woodshop, does this constitute the grounds for closing up shop?

I feel that if the craft shop were to advertise itself more, larger numbers of people would investigate.

It's important — public awareness.

Isn't it the Army's responsibility to insure that servicemembers and dependents have recreational activities to become involved in during their free time? Saving money is fine, but in this instance, the result would be less for people to do. Oh, of course there's always "drinking on the weekends."

Rangers seeking eligible volunteers

Enlisted men in one of 13 MOS, or who are willing to retrain and accept one of these MOS, are being sought for jobs in the Army's two Ranger units.

Assignments are available in the 1st Ranger, 75th Inf., Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., and in the 2nd Ranger Bn. 75th Inf., Fort Lewis, Wash., according to MILPERCEN officials.

Soldiers in the following grades and MOS, or those willing to accept reclassification into one of these MOS, are being sought: E3-4 in 05B, E1-8 in 11B, E1-6 in 11C, E1-7 in 13F, E4-6 in 31V, E1-5 in 91B, E4-6 in 91C, and E1-7 in 94B.

Qualifications for the assignments are outlined in AR 614-200. Basically, they include certain physical standards, at least 18 months remaining service after arrival at a unit, no record of any court-martial during current enlistment, no record of AWOL, have either Airborne or Ranger training, or accept training before assignment, and be a male, officials said.

Soldiers who have a secondary MOS that is one of the 13 listed may also volunteer for Ranger assignments, officials added.

Soldiers in grades E5 and above must qualify for both Airborne and Ranger duties before reporting to units, officials said, while soldiers in grades E4 and below must qualify for Airborne only, then receive Ranger training after reporting to units.

Soldiers who do not require training before reporting to units may apply for Ranger assignments by submitting an "Enlisted Preference Statement," (DA Form 2635) and sending it directly to Commander, MILPERCEN, Attn: DAPC-EPK-S, 2461 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22331.

Local personnel offices can assist soldiers with either direct or command channel applications. (ARNEWS)

Rogers addresses graduation

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard Rogers made his second visit to Fort Benning in as many weeks when he spoke at IOAC 5-78's graduation Friday at Marshall Auditorium.

Rogers' son, Michael, was one of the graduates of the class.

Rogers commented on how advanced weapons systems have caused our vision of the modern battlefield to mature over the last six years. What hasn't changed, according to Rogers, is that, of all the skills needed in the Army today, leadership remains foremost.

Capt. John S. Klega, who attained the highest academic average in the class, was cited as the Distinguished Graduate and received the Gen. George C. Marshall Award.

MP working dogs to give exhibition

Members of the Law Enforcement Command will give a demonstration on military police working dog techniques Monday, March 19 at 1 p.m. in front of the kennels, Bldg. 2863, located on 1st Infantry Brigade Loop.

The general public is invited to attend.

The Distinguished Allied Honor Graduate was Maj. Hans Ulrich Scherrer of Switzerland, who had the highest academic record among allied students in the class.

Officers who had averages within the top five percent of the class following the Distinguished Graduates were designated Honor Graduates. They were Capt. Kevin T. Murphy, Edwin M. Perry, Geoffrey A. Robinson, John R. Schmader, Thomas R. Watson Jr., Joseph O. Rodriguez, Samuel G. Hoffman, Clifton A. Finch and Robert C. Sutton.

The Physical Fitness Award was presented to Capt. Thomas R. Bailey, who was the graduating officer with the highest score on the Army Physical Fitness Evaluation Test.

Correspondence courses geared for soldier's growth

By John V. Williams

The U.S. Army Institute for Professional Development (IPD), commonly known as the Army Correspondence Course Program, is geared towards professional development for the soldier while in the Army. Correspondence courses help the unit perform its mission and help the soldier advance himself through continual training, learning advanced skills, learning new skills, mastering old skills, and reviewing old skills.

Correspondence courses consist of: 250,000 soldiers. That is more than any other Army training support program available in today's smaller and more professional Army. There are courses for officers, noncommissioned officers, and enlisted personnel.

Training the soldier has been commonly referred to as "sergeants' business." These courses are primarily designed to assist these trainers of the Army.

Correspondence courses consists of:

- A series of "subcourses" similar in content to residential (service school) classes. The content of a three-hour block of service school instruction would be contained in a single subcourse. Technical manuals, field manuals, etc., would be included within the subcourse too.

- The latest doctrine, literature, and materials. Since the courses are taught at the same institutions where doctrine is generally formulated, when change occurs, it can be readily incorporated into instruction. It may take a great deal of time for the doctrinal publications to be written or revised and distributed. Subcourses are constantly subject to change.

- Courses that complement the Soldier's Manual. Correspondence courses provide greater subject matter detail, better step-by-step instruction, and more graphics. Soldier's Manuals are geared to prepare the soldier with enough familiarization of critical tasks to pass the skill qualification test. Correspondence courses provide soldiers with a well-rounded military education in support of EPMS/OPMS.

- Courses can be integrated with TEC lessons. The TEC tape can be shown for a good overall introduction. The course can be studied for changes in doctrine, details not discussed in the TEC lesson, resolve confusion, and allow for self-paced instruction.

- Courses do not require facilities, hardware, instructor, or supervisor. The exception is the supervised on-the-job training (SOJT) which requires materials, equipment, facilities, and supervision, but are usually available where the soldier performs duty. This allows for hands-on training in the correspondence course program.

Most military managers have heard and voiced loud complaints about the poor educational background, poor trainability, and the sheer inability of many modern soldiers to do the jobs they're supposed to do. These managers know that as a soldier's proficiency increases, so does the unit as a whole.

Army trainers are confronted with new policies in the area of "critical task" orientation

(what specific tasks a soldier must be able to do in order to do the job) and performance-oriented "hands-on" training. SQT testing has caused many present training methods to be modified and improved.

Yet, in spite of all these problems, Congress and the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) are taking an even-harder line on high institutional training costs.

Should a soldier in Europe or in reserve status receive the same training as the resident student at Fort Benning or the U.S. Army Institute of Administration at Fort Benjamin Harrison?

Should we keep up with increasingly sophisticated equipment, increasingly sophisticated maintenance requirements, and exploding technology?

Because of the frequent and unfortunate requirement to work outside of an MOS specialty, soldiers or officers may have difficulty keeping current in their field and learning new, unfamiliar jobs they are called on to do.

What about the soldiers who want to learn a new MOS, maybe for reenlistment or maybe because they didn't get what they wanted in the first place?

Trainers find themselves tasked to teach a subject in which they have little or no experience. What's available to help them?

More and more, educators are turning to the correspondence courses as a first-rate alternative.

In fact, the correspondence course medium has tremendous advantages and even more unexploited potential which makes it uniquely suited to fill the training needs of today's Army.

Correspondence courses are accessible. They are a readily available alternative for a soldier who can't get a school quota or for an organization that can't spare an individual for the length of time required to attend a resident course.

Correspondence courses are also available when TDY and travel money is not.

What about the soldiers who want to learn about something outside their fields?

For example, a soldier may want to learn more about the combat arms or an Infantry officer may feel it would be helpful to understand armor or engineers.

Resident training is out of the question, but an appropriate correspondence course is probably readily available.

Most correspondence courses have no restrictions such as grade, branch, or other prerequisites.

Correspondence courses are economical. Compared to resident training, the cost is almost negligible.

CORRESPONDENCE continued from page 10

IPD at Fort Eustic, Va., prints, stocks, and mails subcourses, enrolls students, maintains their records, grades exams, and issues diplomas or certificates of completion to active duty students.

Most student inquiries and problems are handled directly by IPD.

Upon enrollment you will be assigned to a counselor who will maintain your records and act as point of contact for you from enrollment until graduation.

There are advantages and personal rewards to the soldier who takes courses.

The program is accredited by the National Home Study Council. This means the quality of instruction and service is high. It implies that your course of study is considered acceptable to the industry. For example, should you work in food service and obtain a chef's certification, restaurants will usually accept this just as they would a chef's college or school certificate. Certification also encourages civilian schools to be more generous in granting credits for correspondence work already completed.

The program offers promotion points. Enlisted students currently received one promotion point per every 15 credit hours of successfully completed course work. This is expected to be revised shortly to one promotion point per every five credit hours of successfully completed course work.

The program trains the soldier. This additional proficiency will show on efficiency reports, on the skill qualification tests, and in successful completion of the unit's mission.

Listings of the courses can be found in the Army Correspondence Course Catalog which is a series of DA pamphlets. The catalog begins with the general volume DA PAM 351-20 and continues through DA PAM 351-20-20. Each school has its own pamphlet. (DA PAM 351-20-8 is the course catalog for the Institute of Administration.) These DA pamphlets are available on pinpoint distribution to company-size elements.

Once you have chosen a course of study, you may enroll by the following procedures:

- For individuals, complete DA Form 145, Army Correspondence Course Application.

- For groups, the leader fills out only one DA Form 145 for each course and attaches a roster which includes the name, rank, social security number, and the unit.

Upon completion of the application, mail it to IPD.

As more emphasis is placed on exportable training, the Army's goal of soldiers helping themselves will become more important. Correspondence courses offer all soldiers an excellent opportunity for personal and professional advancement with a minimum or no time away from their jobs. Hey leader! What have you done for the soldier today?

ACS begins citizenship course

By Joyce Walker

Army Community Services (ACS) has begun its spring session of the citizenship course offered twice yearly to military personnel and their dependents, according to Don Drach, coordinator of the program.

The course, which consists of six sessions held on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to noon, began March 3 and will end April 7. To receive a certificate of completion from the course, students must attend at least five sessions.

Thirty-nine dependents, mostly of Southeast Asian origin, attended the first class held at the ACS Welcome Center in Building 83. Drach, who has been conducting the classes for ACS for a little more than two years, has had students from Thailand, Japan, Korea, Germany, Italy, Poland, England, Mexico and other Central and South American countries attend the class.

"I even had one student from Ethiopia last year," he commented.

Five volunteers from the Columbus Retired Senior Citizens Program (RSVP) help instruct the course. Students are given a basic entry test at the beginning of the course to see how much they already know about American history and government.

The curriculum includes handouts on the Constitution, the Pledge of Allegiance and one that gives a comprehensive coverage of American history and government. "We also sell textbooks that have been recommended by the Immigration Service," Drach added.

The volunteer instructors try to teach the students a basic knowledge of American history, organization of the Federal and state government, with emphasis on the three basic branches, executive, legislative and judicial, and provide them with information on how officials are elected and appointed.

"At the end of the course, we give them a comprehensive exam to see how much they've learned, plus it lets us know how successful our program is," said Drach.

They also pass out a form, requesting the students to fill it out when they are naturalized and return to them. "There have been times," he continued, "when I was standing in line at the commissary or PX that one of my students recognized me, approached and said, 'Hey, I passed that test.'"

Army needs soldier musicians

The Army is looking for musicians.

There is a shortage of soldiers in the Army bands program, mostly among those who play the French horn, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, saxophone, piano and guitar, MILPERCEN officials said.

Band members perform in marching, concert and stage bands, combos, and instrumental groups. Each specialty requires a musician to play at least one instrument as outlined in AR 611-201, according to officials.

Soldiers in the program often travel, supporting recruiting and community relations events. For this reason, officials explained, band members must meet high standards as musicians and soldiers.

Most Army bands members attend school at Norfolk, Va., officials said. The school offers classes in theory, harmony and ear training. It also conducts private lessons and band rehearsals.

Soldiers should contact the nearest bandmaster or their local MILPO to arrange an audition and for more information. (ARNEWS).

ACS wants to help with financial woes

Its been a couple of months since Christmas, but many people are still paying holiday-related bills.

If you're in that group and the bills are beginning to wreck your budget, visit Fort Benning's Army Community Services (ACS) center.

The ACS center offers a Financial Planning and Assistance Program to military personnel and their dependents, retirees, and widows or divorcees of military personnel.

The program involves budget counseling, consumer education and debt liquidation. It emphasizes money management and detection of indebtedness.

Army Community Services can act as a liaison between you and your creditors. In many cases, the ACS counselor can persuade creditors to let you make lower minimum payments until you are financially "on your feet."

Your case is handled confidentially and free of charge. ACS works closely with many other military and civilian agencies to insure that maximum assistance is given to service members with financial problems.

For more information contact the ACS at 545-1233 or visit them in Bldg. 83 at the Welcome Center.

'Soldiers' recruiting writers, photographers

Want to be published in "Soldiers"? Just dust off your typewriter . . . take the cap off the camera lens . . . and get your brilliant ideas into print. "Soldiers" uses a wide variety of articles: probably the kind you'd like to write yourself. If you want to make sure you're on track with their needs, call "Soldiers" (AV 284-6671) and they'll be happy to discuss the scope and photo coverage.

Black and white photos are suitable for most articles. If you want to try color, they prefer Kodachrome slides, but Ektachrome will do. Color prints do not reproduce well. If you are an accomplished photographer, try sending some stand-alone photos which have cover possibilities. Consider yourself a member-at-large of the "Soldiers" team and give them the chance to show your photo credit or by-line. (ARNEWS)

Islamic officers to have mosque

By Pat Brown

Through the combined efforts of the post chaplain's office, the Allied Students Training Division (ASTD), and the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., allied officers of the Islamic faith training here will soon have a mosque in which to hold worship services.

The mosque, the only one locally and one of the few at any military installation in the United States, was suggested by Chaplain (Capt.) Kenneth J. Leinwand. He and his wife, Bracha, whom he met in Israel, have worked closely with allied students since their arrival here 18 months ago.

Rabbi Leinwand, who studied classical Arabic for two years as a rabbinical student and has visited in the Mideast, is particularly sensitive to the needs of the Moslem students.

He explained, "I have never considered myself as chaplain to Jewish troops only. As a chaplain in the Army, I am concerned about the welfare of all the soldiers here

"Moslems and Jews have always had a natural affinity for each other," he continued. "Many aspects of the two religions have much in common. Even the opening words in the call to prayer are similar. Muhammad, their prophet and founder of the Islamic religion, grew up among Jewish people and looked to them for his earliest converts.

"Because of conditions in the Mideast, many people look upon Moslems and Jews as enemies. Actually, until this century, members of the two faiths co-existed, for the most part, peacefully. Jewish people in the Mideast have never encountered the persecution, purges and pogroms that prevailed in European countries. Even now, our differences are political, not religious.

"The road to peace between the two faiths will be built by cooperation on both sides. Though this is only a small step, it adds to the total effort."

The mosque will be located in Olson Hall, next to the ASTD Office. Its furnishings are being financed by the chaplain's fund, with some items donated by the Islamic Center.

The mosque will be called the "Islamic House of Worship" and will be distinguished by the Islamic symbol on the door. Mrs. Charlotte Osterburg, ASTD, says there are about 50-60 Moslem students here now, and those who know about the plans are "delighted" about it.

It is anticipated that dedication ceremonies for the mosque will be held later this month.

Committee group trains Infantrymen

Famed German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel once said, "The best form of welfare for the troops is first class training." The Infantry Center's Committee Group has been in the business of providing that training to Infantry soldiers since March 1976 when Infantry Advanced Individual Training (AIT) was begun here.

Activated in September 1975, Committee Group spent four months preparing for its mission of training AIT soldiers to be professional Infantrymen and Infantry indirect fire crewmen before being attached to the 1st AIT Bde at Sand Hill when that unit was activated in January 1976.

Range of efforts

During the past year, Committee Group was deeply involved in the OSUT/TST planning and developmental effort to meet the OSUT/TST test requirements. This effort zeroed in on personnel, equipment, lesson plans, training aids, range aids, range facilities, training areas, weapons, ammunition, instructor requirements (including the Instructor Training Course), a Joint Standardization Board, safety and other related matters.

On July 22, Committee Group separated from 1st ITB and became a major Infantry Center subordinate command. Then, in August, to meet the growing command's needs, Committee Group moved from Sand Hill to Harmony Church.

In response to requirements that all OSUT/TST instructors be qualified through an instructor training course, Committee Group created a two-week, 80-hour course of instruction designed to provide soldiers assigned as instructors with the skills, methods and techniques needed to teach military subjects effectively, and to assist the new instructor in developing the self-confidence and assurance needed to present meaningful training to large groups. The first class began training in February 1978.

A Committee Group Joint Standardization Board was also organized in accordance with the OSUT/TST test plan. The Board's function is to insure standards and conformity in assessing training methods and instructor qualifications.

Affirmative evaluation

All instructors who have a teaching role must receive an affirmative evaluation before they are allowed to begin teaching Infantrymen. This is accomplished through the use of "murder boards," panels of experienced instructors who sit in judgement on their newly-assigned counterparts.

Currently, under the OSUT/TST concept, Committee Group presents more than 490 hours of formal instruction and performance-oriented training ranging from first aid to mechanized Infantry tactics.

Key blocks of instruction include qualification of all trainees with the M-16 rifle and hand grenade, advanced rifle marksmanship for light weapons Infantrymen and basic tactical training, to include squad tactics, patrolling and combat in cities. Mortarmen are qualified as gunners using the skill level 1 standards as a minimum. Ground mount and M125 track tactical training round out the 130 hours of training given to mortar crewmen in their special skill area.

Training for excellence

Selected Infantrymen are given a chance to earn additional skill identifiers by qualifying with the TOW and Dragon weapon systems in a consolidated 40-hour block of instruction. By September, the improved TOW vehicle will be on line to provide further qualification of TOW gunners in the track dedicated to their weapons system.

A critical part of the Group's mission is to provide all resources necessary for the conduct of OSUT/TST initial entry training. In addition to providing virtually all weapons and equipment (with the exception of M-16 rifles and other weapons organic to each ITB company), Committee Group manages 28 ranges and 18 training areas scattered over 100 square miles of the Fort Benning reservation, illustrating the magnitude of the training mission assigned to the Group and its role in "training for excellence."

Bringing in the new ...

The command and control situation in Committee Group was significantly improved Feb. 28 when two provisional companies were activated at Group headquarters at Harmony Church.

- The ceremony saw 1st Lt. Randy Duffy take the reins of Hqs. and Hqs. Co. and Capt. David Deykes take command of Co. C from Capt. Dean Schiller.

Hqs. and Hqs. Co. provides the headquarters staff and maintenance personnel for Committee Group, while Co. C is comprised of the marksmanship committee.

The command's other two units, Co. A and Co. B, are made up of the tactics and special subjects committees and the weapons committee, respectively.

Co. A is led by Capt. Bernard Holt, and Co. B is commanded by Capt. Richard Curtain.

Col. John L. Jones Jr., Committee Group commander, passes the Hqs and Hqs Co guidon to 1st Lt. Randy Duffy, the newly-activated unit's first commander.

Check Your Meter For Energy Use

Want to read your utility meter and find out how much energy you're using?

It's just like reading a clock. Start with the far left dial. If the pointer is between two numbers, always read the lower number. And remember that the zero at the top can stand for 10. Take a reading now and record it.

Then do it again in a month. Subtract the difference, and you'll know how much electricity or gas you have used.

For more information, get a free copy of How to Understand Your Utility Bill from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

AUSA planning spring meeting

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army will hold a spring general membership meeting at the Torch Supper Club on the 280 Bypass in Phenix City April 6.

The keynote speaker will be Lt. Gen. Samuel V. Wilson (ret.), a former high-level intelligence officer whose ties to the intelligence community go back to the World War II office of Strategic Services. Wilson was also an Infantryman, and served in combat with "Merrill's Marauders" in World War II and was an assistant commander of the 82nd Airborne Division.

The evening will begin with a social hour from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and a buffet dinner will be served at 7:45 p.m. AUSA members and guests are invited, but seating will be limited to 250 because of space. Dress will be coat and tie.

Tickets are $8 and are available from unit sergeants major or by calling 545-1516 or 545-2131.

Lt. Gen. Samuel V. Wilson (ret.)

Prevent Poisonings March 18-24

Next week is Poison Prevention Week, and a special effort is being made to educate parents and children in preventive measures for accidental poisoning.

An estimated half-million children are victims of accidental poisoning each year. Most of the victims are between the ages of two and three. Eighty percent of all victims are under five years of age.

If you have children in these age groups, it is particularly important to observe these rules of poison prevention:

- Never call medicine candy.
- Never let children take medicine on their own.
- Never give medicine in the dark.
- Use child safety containers.
- Be sure all medicine is labeled properly.
- Keep all medicine locked and out of children's reach.

For additional information call the community health nurse at 545-4603/404/5431.

Additional help for parents will come in the form of the program "Teaching Children Poison Prevention," which will be shown on Fort Benning cable television Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 8:05 a.m. and 1:45 p.m., and Tuesday and Thursday at 10:45 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

The 20-minute program is a discussion between several children of various ages, and a pediatrician. It includes a cartoon geared for very young children. In the interest of family safety, why not take the few minutes it takes to view this film together?

USAMU shooters win skeet match

By Tommy Pool

Joseph Clemmons, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) defeated a field of more than 50 competitors to take top honors in the 1979 Interservice International Skeet Championship and the Gulf Coast Regional Tournament held last weekend.

Clemmons posted rounds of 97-97-98 for a 292 total in the 300 bird interservice event, three better than 19-year-old Dean Clark at 289, also of USAMU. Third place was taken by another USAMU member, Alger Mullins, at 288. Clemmons, the present world record holder in international skeet competition, also nailed down a victory in the gulf Coast Regional Championship with a 195 total out of 200. Regional tournaments are used to select competitors for the U.S. International Skeet Tryouts for the 1979 Pan American Games and World Moving Target Championships to be held later this year.

Dean Clark and Matt Dryke settled second and third place in a 25 bird shoot-off as both tied with scores of 192 in the regulation event. Clark gained second place while dropping one target as Dryke finished third after firing a round of 23.

In team competition, the U.S. Army squads dominated all the action as the squad of Clemmons, Clark, Dryke and Mullins won both the Interservice and Gulf Coast titles.

USAMU's Joseph Clemmons

Their interservice team score of 775 established a new record for the event. The Army squad of John Torbush, Bobby Ellis, Johathon Cantiello and Gary Beck took second with a score of 749, followed by the U.S. Air Force team at 723.

Tomorrow and Sunday the Interservice Trap Championship will be held at USAMU's Trap and Skeet Range (Hook Range Complex) with more than 40 competitors expected. Firing will begin at 9 a.m. daily and the public is invited to attend.

DYA sign-up underway

Registration is underway for 15-17 year olds to sign up for Dependant Youth Activities (DYA) Boys Senior Baseball and Girls Softball teams. Registration continues through the end of March.

Anyone interested should visit the DYA, Bldg. 1054, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Registration fee is $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second, $5 for the third and any children in the family after that get in for free. Applicants should also bring proof of age.

Doughboys getting ready

The Fort Benning Doughboy football team opened up spring practice last Monday at Doughboy Stadium. Practices will be held Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. from March 15 to April 26.

The initial practices consisted of registration and timing of the 40 yard dash.

Coach Ralph Santaliz expressed great enthusiasm about the Doughboys' coaching staff this year. Gary Sadlon will be in control of the Doughboy's offense. Assisting Sadlon with the offense will be Wayne Westover and Robert Urbano.

Tim Pfister will return this year as defensive coordinator. Pfister did a fine job of building up the Doughboy defense last year and is very enthusiastic about the coming season. Carl McKinney and Chuck Demico will assist as line coaches with John Redmond rounding out the staff as defensive back coach.

The Doughboys are still looking for a receiver, linebacker and a specialty coach. Anyone interested can contact Ralph Santaliz at 545-2281.

This season the Doughboys are tentatively scheduled to play North Alabama, Carson-Newman, Fort Bragg, Auburn University J.V., Morris Brown College, Florida State J.V., Fort McClellan and Alabama State.

The emphasis this year is on discipline and dedication to the game. Anyone willing to give his best to make the Doughboys a winning team is invited to come and try out.

Softball coaches clinic

A softball clinic for coaches and officials will be held April 4-5 from 1 to 5 p.m. at Gowdy Field, Bldg. 395A. The clinic is in preparation for league play which runs from May 2 to Aug. 1.

The purpose of the clinic is to train coaches and officials in the techniques of play and officiating softball in order to promote better company level competition within the command.

People attending the clinic should come dressed in athletic type clothing with gym shoes. All major units are encouraged to send a representative from each company size unit to the clinic.

Cycle race planned

The first of the 1979 Motorcycle Series Hare Scrambles will be held Sunday in Columbus. The race will take off Victory Drive to Lumpkin Road, three miles to the Columbus landfill. Gates will open for the race at 11 a.m. and the race will start at 2 p.m.

The race, which covers a six-mile course, is being sponsored by the Columbus YMCA and the Broken Spokes Motorcycle Club. Proceeds for the event will go to the YMCA.

Entry fee for racers is $6 and $3 for adult spectators, $2 for children. Trophies will be awarded in many different divisions.

For registration information, call 322-7328/8269.

Seminar Exercise and Preventive Medicine March 30-31

John D. Cantwell, M.D. and Jeff Galloway will host a seminar on exercise and preventive medicine March 30-31 at the Radisson Inn Atlanta in Atlanta.

Special guest, Jim Fixx, author of the best seller, "The Complete Book of Running," will speak.

The seminar is sponsored by the Atlanta Running Center. For more information contact Julie Casey at 545-4622.

The 1979 TRADOC Marathon Championship June 14-16

Fort Benning and other TRADOC installations have been invited to participate in the 1979 TRADOC Marathon Championship. Each post may enter a four-member team to compete in the 26-mile and 13-mile events. Both men and women teams may participate.

Runners interested must submit a statement of intent to the Morale Support Activities officer before May 1. For more information call 545-2281.

Mobile 10km Azalea Run

George Gilke placed 25th in a field of 2600 runners during the Mobile 10 kilometer Azalea Run in Alabama March 10. He ran the 6.2-mile race in 33 minutes and 34 seconds.

Jim Cambron also ran the distance in 39 minutes and 32 seconds.

36th Group 5-mile Run

Benning runners come on strong

By Julie Casey

Prior service member Tom Coniglio was aced out during the Columbus Mini-Marathon placing second behind Robert McDuffie on March 10.

Coniglio held a comfortable lead in the 13.1-mile race, until he was not warned of a turn around point and over shot the distance by 200 yards giving McDuffie the lead.

"I've had enough. I'm pretty disgusted," he said, "This is the second time in two weeks that I've been misdirected during a run."

Coniglio and many other runners were also led on a wild goose chase during the Opelika run March 3.

Dave Fields ran a personal best placing third with the time 1 hour 12 minutes and 8 seconds.

Julie Casey won the women's division with the time of 1 hour and 30 minutes and 3 seconds. Marilyn Hicks also ran a personal best placing second in her age group.

Benning marathoners came on strong placing three in the top ten — Rich Favati, Tony Moore and Fred Dyer — in the Columbus Marathon.

The loop course smoked many of the runners with its frequent hills. Many of the runners finished what they thought to be a complete marathon (26 miles and 385 yards) only to find that the course was a half a mile short. Runners mistook a saw horse in the course as a turnaround point before the actual points in Cooper Creek.

John LaVoie came across smiling to complete his first marathon even though it was short. LaVoie placed second in his over-50 age group behind Bill Weekley.

Even with the few problems that couldn't be helped, both races were a success. The weather was cool and overcast making it a comfortable run.

Columbus honors post allied students

Fifteen allied students here for Infantry Officers' Advanced Course Class 3-79 were honored by the city of Columbus Tuesday.

The students met briefly with Mayor Harry Jackson who presented each of them with a certificate of honorary citizenship in the city of Columbus.

They then made a one-hour appearance at the Columbus Council meeting, followed by a tour of the city. Following the tour, the Chamber of Commerce hosted a luncheon in their honor.

During the afternoon, the students toured Plains, Ga., home of President Jimmy Carter.

Senior allied officer in the group is Maj. D.K. Dhavan of India. Other countries represented are Greece, Kenya, Lebanon, Malaysia, Nigeria, Pakistan, the Phillipines, Portugal and Uemmn.

197th soldier saves life

By Hank Dowdy

Recently, a very strange but important incident took place. Pvt. Rex D. Wolf of D-7-1 became a casualty soldier.

At 9 p.m., D-7-1 started out on a 15-mile road march. Their objective was to complete bivouac and return to their unit.

Wolf wanted to be a part of the task. Enroute to the unit, Wolf started feeling weak, but he continued to march. Pvt. Steve Blair, another soldier in training, noticed that Wolf was turning pale and asked him if he wanted to get on the truck and ride the rest of the way. Wolf wanted to complete the march with the other soldiers rather than taking the easy way," stated Blair.

A few minutes later Wolf passed out and a couple of the other soldiers put him on the truck. Blair jumped upon the truck to check on his friend and noticed that Wolf's eyes were dilated. He notified his drill sergeant and company commander and proceeded to the hospital with Wolf.

Wolf paled even more and Blair noticed that Wolf had stopped breathing. Blair quickly took the four life saving steps that soldiers are taught in first aid. After Blair performed the mouth to mouth resuscitation, he performed cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR). Blair was aided by two fellow soldiers on the truck, Pvt. Eric Weekley and Pvt. Bryan Whitmore, in keeping Wolf warm and comfortable.

Cpl. Charles Rochon, company armorer of D-7-1, drove them to the hospital and with proper teamwork Wolf's life was saved!

NCOWC luncheon and fashion show

The NCOWC is planning a special event for the March 21 luncheon at the Top 5 NCO Club. A fashion show given by Mabel Bailey and five of her models will highlight the new spring fashions.

The cost of the luncheon, which begins at noon, will be $3.50. Newcomers and non-members are invited to attend. For information or reservations call the hostesses, Mrs. JoAnn Pollard, 689-6603, or Mrs. Helen Williams, 687-1159.

NCOWC Ceramic Games

The NCOWC is planning its annual spring ceramic games April 2 at the Top 5 NCO Club. This event proves to be a favorite with the public as beautiful ceramic pieces are given away as prizes.

Keep April 2 in mind and watch this column for more information as the date approaches.

Beware, casual pay could make you uptight

Officials at the Army Finance Center, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., say there are strict limits that apply to soldiers collecting money while on leave or PCS. And they advise soldiers to make careful financial plans before they take leave or PCS.

Soldiers on leave, officials explained, can collect casual pay from a DoD finance and accounting office, but only if they have an approved DA Form 2467 (record of casual pay).

The forms can be requested through a soldier's unit and must be approved by an official.

The amount of money a soldier can collect for casual pay is limited to normal monthly net pay and only the amount of accrued pay and allowances. If a soldier receives casual pay on Dec. 15, for example, it amounts to only 15 day's pay, minus allotments taxes, etc.

Local installations set policies on approving casual pay, officials say. And, although not a uniform policy, the rule generally followed is that soldiers with a "check to bank" option cannot receive casual pay. So finance officials advise soldiers with a "check to bank" option to carry check-books with them while on leave.

A soldier can receive payment from an EAO located away from the parent installation only if the soldier is on leave or PCS status and in possession of a DA Form 31 or orders.

Soldiers on PCS status, who may not have a casual pay form, can usually draw emergency pay if they have their finance records with them. By taking their records to any DoD FAO, officials say, their pay records can be verified at Fort Harrison if the local FAO calls (AUTOVON) 699-1618 or (commercial) (317) 542-1618. The local FAO may also want to call this number to verify approval for a DA Form 2467, officials remarked.

Soldiers on PCS, like those drawing casual pay, are limited to payment based on accrued pay and allowances and minus allotments and deductions, officials add.

If you want to avoid the sometimes bothersome casual pay route, you can also draw a partial pay before going on leave (or advance pay if in a PCS). Partial pays are authorized locally and can be made for the entire month, if you will be away past payday.

Soldiers with a "check to unit," "check to address," or similar options, can make special arrangements to have checks picked up by someone else or forwarded to a leave address by the mail clerk.

If soldiers on leave find themselves without money or emergency pay eligibility, they can still receive a transportation request to cover the cost of returning to their units. But, since these are paid for by the government, they must later be collected from the soldiers' pay.

While DoD interservice agreements allow soldiers to draw authorized payments at any FOA, officials declared, the collection process is quicker and easier at Army FAO's. (ARNEWS)

How about that?

Men choose burdens

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
TSB Chaplain

There is an ancient story which relates that many men, having determined to build a community structure, went individually to the forests to secure timber. Some of them returned at the end of the day tired and exhausted by their labors. But one man, who had chosen the heaviest burden, was refreshed and strong. He had cut down a fruit tree and, as he hauled it away, he paused occasionally to take nourishment from the fruit on the branches.

We all have goals that we set for the living of our lives, and we expend great time and energy in accomplishing them. We've all seen the wreckage of people who have burned themselves out by the end of the day just trying to accomplish their goals.

The wise man chooses his burden well for he knows that life is made up of people. He chooses that work which will involve others. And during the pursuit of his goal he will pause a while to extend his hand to those people and come away refreshed. As he comes to the end of the day when his labors are done, the temple that he has helped build will not have taken its toll on him, because he has built a life on the hearts and love of others, and great will be the story of it.

NCOA begins refund program

The Non Commissioned Officers Association (NCOA), in conjunction with the American International Group (National Union), has embarked on a comprehensive program to locate thousands of military personnel who may be due a refund of automobile insurance premiums. Those were personnel who were stationed in West Germany from 1972 through 1977.

The refunds would come from "Technical Excess Funds" of several companies who wrote automobile insurance for Non Commissioned and Petty Officers assigned to that country. The amounts refundable will be determined by premiums paid, and what companies declared technical excesses during this period.

However, everyone who believes they may be entitled to a refund may not be. Some companies automatically applied the refunds to policy renewals, which some insured may have considered safe driving reductions in premiums. Other companies may not have built-up excesses during all periods during the 1972-77 period being explored. In short, not everyone who applies for a refund will be entitled to one. Each request will be handled on an individual basis.

Scouts celebrate 67th anniversary

By Pat Brown

Fort Benning Girl Scouts are joining with other Scouts throughout the nation in a week-long celebration of their 67th anniversary.

Kimberly Davis, I. Cadette Troop 193; Elizabeth Matsui, Junior Troop 34, and Amy Benthien, Brownie Troop 258, display some of the items made by post Girl Scouts as part of their arts and crafts projects. Benning Scouts joined with other Scouts throughout the world to observe their 67th anniversary this week from Mar. 11-17.

The organization was founded by Juliette Lowe in Savannah, Ga. on Mar. 12, 1912.

On Sunday, Mar. 11, services were held at the Main Post chapel with chaplains of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths participating. Services were geared around the 1979 Girl Scout theme, "Year of the Child."

On Monday, "Homemaking Day," Brownies were encouraged to cook or help their mothers, the Juniors to prepare a family meal, and the Cadettes to cook for someone other than their families.

On Tuesday, the Scouts observed Citizenship Day by conducting a flag-lowering ceremony in front of Infantry Hall.

On Wednesday, "Safety Day," the Military Police gave a bicycle safety program.

On Thursday, the Scouts held an International Day Program at Camp Hideaway on post with a campfire and songfest.

Today, the Scouts will observe "Arts and Crafts Day" by making projects for a local children's hospital.

The girls will wind up the week's activities tomorrow by observing "Outdoor Day" with each troop planning individual events.

Insurance – quality vs quantity

By Sharron Calabrisi

Life insurance? Everyone needs it, but the real question is, "Who should you buy it from and how much do you need?"

Insurance representatives are allowed to come on post and sell policies to interested persons. The regulation controlling solicitation on Fort Benning is AR 210-7. No one has the authority to enter upon and transact commercial business on Fort Benning as a matter of right. The solicitation on Benning may only be done when a permit has been issued to the agent.

A file is kept by the Solicitation Section of Post AG on every company and each agent for that company doing business on post. Therefore, upon request, you can easily check as to whether the company and agent are reputable. All salesmen must have a permit card and should be required to present it when he is visiting you. If he does not have a permit, he should be reported to the Solicitation Section on Post AG.

The provisions of AR 210-7 states the selling must not interfere with military activities and must conform to post regulations. They must also conduct business on an installation, when possible, with a disinterested third party, counselling provided, hours set aside and facilities supplied.

The permission for agents to sell is not an indorsement of the company nor of policies offered for sale. The policies offered for sale must comply with insurance laws of the state or country in which installations are located. They must not contain restrictions because of military service or military occupational specialties of insured, unless clearly indicated. They must also list any extra premium charges imposed because of military service or military occupational speciality.

Lt. Col. Bart J. Carroll Jr., deputy judge advocate general, said, "It is a stringent regulation that provides a safeguard for young soldiers. For many, it's their first time away from home and they are vulnerable to the sales pitches."

"The key is CONTROL," he urged. "All people need life insurance and the Army's interest is to see they have it and are exposed to it," Carroll continued.

"The regulation limits are designed to watch over the soldier," he explained. "The Army is like a parent now, with this new Army," Carroll commented. "Salesmen are not a serious problem on Fort Benning," he noted.

Capt. John G. Warthen, chief of legal assistance, said, "I have not received any specific complaints. The only thing I can say is 'BUYER BEWARE'," he urged. Warthen stressed, "The Judge Advocate General and Legal Assistance Office is here to help in situations that arise like this, and not just for court-martials."

Capt. James Murphy, legal assistance attorney, commented, "Some people think the big policies are like savings accounts, and when they try to cash them in they receive little back, if anything."

Mr. Ed Horton, International Service Insurance representative, said, "The soldiers should first check the representative's credentials and see that the company has a local office if needed for filing claims." He stated his office is authorized to come on post, but they don't.

"The insurance companies that send representatives on post and harrass the soldiers hurt our business," Horton explained. "Some of the companies try to say they have special rates, but they don't, as the rates are established by the commission."

Capt. Donald Williamson, HHC, 36th Engr. Gp, stated, "The harrassment is no worse than going downtown. As long as they (the insurance sellers) stay in the dayroom, I'm happy. They can make appointments with the soldiers and then go to their rooms."

Capt. Gerald Marlowe, HHC company commander at the 197th Inf believes "insurance salesmen should be barred from even coming on post."

"They come on post and get the young soldiers to buy more insurance than they can afford," he argued.

Sp4 David Mizelle, 546th Med Co, said, "You see a lot of insurance salesmen on payday. They start off trying to get you to buy a small policy and if they see that you are interested, they build up and you wind up buying more insurance than you can afford."

Insurance should be purchased only after a thorough evaluation of the following factors:

- Buy from a reliable dealer.
- Check reputation of the company.
- Advertising does not guarantee reliability.
- Read and understand your policy.
- On-post coverage.
- Proof of financial responsibility.

Whether you are living on post or off, you, as potential buyers, should check with the Better Business Bureau to find out what type company you will be dealing with, especially before you sign the contract.

Insurance checklist

Before you buy life insurance you should know something about it. You can get basic information about life insurance from your local library, the insurance commissioner in your state or by writing: National Association of Life Underwriters, 1922 F St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.

1. The purpose of life insurance is to aid in protecting a family or other survivors from financial hardship that may be caused by the death of a spouse or sponsor.

2. Career objectives in the military must be a major factor in determining what, if any, commercial life insurance is needed.

3. Considerations in buying insurance: age of the insured; amount of coverage needed to provide desired income level; amount of debts and payable if the individual dies; amount of benefits and income available to survivors from government and other sources.

4. Buying insurance is like buying a car — there's a basic model and tons of options to fit every need. Shop around. Get the options explained. A good company, represented by a good agent, will be willing to explain its product to you.

Family housing to get assistance

By Gary Jones

Occupants of on post family housing will receive assistance with their area police program in early April under the revision of USAIC regulation 210-28.

The revised regulation calls for 95 area coordinators to be appointed. It will be the job of the area coordinators to conduct daily inspections of the family housing occupants within their assigned areas to assure that they maintain their areas in a high state of orderliness.

If the area coordinator finds a deficiency in the police of the area of the occupants in his area he will inform the occupant either verbally or with a written notice.

When an occupant receives a written notice from the area coordinator, a copy of the deficiency report goes on record in the area commander's office and is also forwarded to the individual's unit commander.

If an occupant receives six written deficiency reports from the area coordinator within a 12-month period, the occupant will be forced to vacate the quarters.

The revised regulation is designed to assist family housing occupants in removing uncooperative occupants from their neighborhood and to help area commanders ensure that family housing occupants have an attractive, clean place to live.

The area coordinators will be chosen by the area commanders and placed on orders for a minimum of 12 months and a maximum of 15 months (excepting PCS, ETS, etc. within the 12-month period). The area coordinator, at the time he is selected, will be the senior occupant living within the designated area.

For more information concerning the area coordinator program call the housing division at 545-4814.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Glad you asked

Is military discipline too strict? Too lax?

Robert Folker

Pvt. Robert Folker, 45th Co, 4th Stu Bn, (Abn)

I've only been through basic, but as far as that is concerned, it's basically easy. We had one female drill sergeant and female trainees and the training was easier because there had to be a balance. I feel that they ought to separate males and females in basic training platoons.

Pvt. Nancy Rippe, MEDDAC

It all depends on where you are and what your job is. Airborne/combat related jobs are more disciplined than, say, a job in the medical field. Each situation should be taken into consideration. We in the medical field don't have to be hardcore because we aren't out to win anything, just save lives. That requires a different kind of discipline.

Nancy Rippe

Sp4 Everett W. Green, Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

I feel that discipline is too lax. Basic training units have all types of people. Often, there are hardcore city-oriented people and stricter discipline must be enforced — moreso than what there is now. For example, people from the city require harder discipline than those from the country because many people from the country are already disciplined by work. Many city trainees are independent and are less likely to do as they're told — unless discipline is increased.

Everett Green

SFC Freddie Walker, Co E, 5th Bn, 1st ITB

Military discipline is not strict enough. It's the foundation on which the Army is built. Combat arms fields should especially concentrate on discipline and regimentation.

Commentary

The key to a better Army is self-discipline

By Dale Wilson

A lot of people are griping about a lack of discipline in the Army today. And I agree with them. We do have a lack of discipline. Where we disagree, however, is with the type of discipline that's lacking.

I really believe that anyone who'd like to go back to the old "brown shoe Army" days is nuts. I say good riddance to the days when drill sergeants verbally abused trainees.

Do we really need an NCO corps made up of "Sgt. Snorkels" who solve their problems with their fists, or by calling their troops "# # % & * * @ @ c ? ? ? ! ! ?" Not hardly. Human rights and dignity need to be recognized, not trampled.

What we do need is more self-discipline. The kind of discipline that's internalized. That causes us to get up in the morning and report to work on time.

The kind of discipline born of pride in self. A pride that leads to proper uniform wear, respect for authority and observance of traditional customs and courtesies.

The kind of discipline that motivates us to take the initiative and act in the absence of orders. Instead of walking past paper or cans on the ground it causes us to pick them up rather than leave them for someone else.

Of course, self-discipline isn't easily acquired. It takes time to develop. And it's something that's sorely lacking, not just in the Army, but throughout our "do-your-own-thing" society.

No, we don't need hordes of well-meaning officers and NCOs descending on private soldiers and badgering them — constantly accentuating the negative aspects of their performance.

What we need is officers and NCOs who will tactfully make on-the-spot corrections and also take time to recognize the good things their soldiers do.

By taking such a tack, leaders will be helping their troops develop the pride in self that increases self-discipline and makes all our jobs easier.

It can wait 'til tomorrow

By Suellen Cochran

"It's 3:30. . . I guess I'll wait and do it tomorrow. . ." How many times have we heard that or even been guilty of saying it ourselves?

Procrastination is an easy habit to fall into. It is popular worldwide and can be seen from time to time in almost every person's life style.

Some say they work better under pressure and, by putting it off, they have that type of back-up to battle with. Others feel by putting it off maybe, just maybe, someone will do it or it won't have to be done.

Let's face it, procrastination is just plain laziness. But for many people in America, the word procrastination means fun.

Procrastinators Club of America, a social organization for professional people, makes it a point to enjoy procrastination. Headquartered in Philadelphia, Pa., with more than 3,000 members, the group promotes the idea of relaxation through putting off until later those things that needn't be done today.

Since its origin in 1956, the group has celebrated such activities as Christmas in June, July 4th picnic in January, a "Be late for something day" on Sept. 5 and various other ridiculous, offbeat events to publicize their motto, "Do It Tomorrow."

One of their biggest events is the celebration of National Procrastination Week. This observance is held the first week of March, (unless it is put off). Amazingly, they did make it on time this year, so this week has been a legitimate week of delay. After all, National procrastination Week only comes once a year.

I was going to write about this week of celebration last week so all would have plenty of time to prepare to put everything off till next week. However, I got caught in the trap known to all practicing procrastinators, I said "I'll wait and do it tomorrow. . ."

EDITOR'S NOTE: This story was supposed to run a couple of weeks ago. Unfortunately, we put it off...

Retired SMA speaks

By Sharron Calabrisi

SMA Leon L. VanAutreve (ret.) spoke to the graduating class of the Advanced NCO Course 2-79 last Friday in Marshall Auditorium. In his speech, VanAutreve spoke on three topics: counselling, communication, and leadership.

VanAutreve said, "We spend 95 percent of our time on the bad soldier. Let's reverse it," he urged. "The lower enlisted like to be told that they are doing good," he added.

VanAutreve also urged, "If they are bad, get rid of them. When there is a vacancy, you should fill it with a person as good or better than you are."

VanAutreve also mentioned, "The lack of communication is a serious problem. We are constantly talking about it, but we never seem to do anything about it," he argued. "All of us are guilty of this," he added.

"When we talk about leadership, it makes us think about it," VanAutreve explained. He urged that we should "capitalize on our strengths, correct our weaknesses, extend our leadership range, seek additional responsibilities, and always continue to improve."

VanAutreve concluded by reading a letter by an Infantry private to his family, telling them he was dying. In the letter the private referred to himself as a peacetime patriot. VanAutreve called the NCO's of class 2-79 "peacetime patriots."

VanAutreve retired in 1975 after 32 years in the Army. Among his many awards, he received the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Army Commendation Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Safety belts that get pinched in car doors or caught in seat mechanisms may become abraded and weakened, warns the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. The agency urges motorists to make routine checks of safety belts when entering or leaving a vehicle and when moving the seat forward or back. A belt that feels or looks damaged should be replaced. Savings Bonds: Did you give at the office?

No matter where you work, people are always asking for your contribution to a worthy cause. But there's one campaign where the worthy cause is your own future.

Another charity drive? No. But we are going to ask for some of your money. The difference is, we're going to give it back. And more.

Just take a look around your office the next time checks are passed out. You'll see that some people seem to be getting two. That second check is really a U.S. Savings Bond.

Employees who could never salt away money to buy a home, or finance a vacation, or pad their retirement income, now find Savings Bonds an effortless way to save.

So why doesn't everyone buy Bonds? Well, one-third of all American families do. They now own more than $80-billion worth of Bonds.

Sure, some still argue that they could get more by putting their money somewhere else. But these are usually the same people who say: "If I had some ham, I'd have ham and eggs. If I had some eggs."

Savings Bonds never lose your money, or leave you short of funds. After a brief holding period, you can cash your Bonds to meet a financial emergency any time after purchase. No penalties. No hassle.

Any sizable savings takes a while to accumulate. But Bonds mature in just five years. And they yield a healthy six percent annually for 10 years after maturity.

For example, you may have $18.75 allotted from your paycheck so you'll get a $50 Bond every month.

Stash it away somewhere. Forget about it. In five years, it will be worth its $50 face value. And the longer you hold it, the more valuable it becomes.

U.S. Savings Bonds also give you some options on taxes. First, Bond interest is exempt from all state and local income tax. Even with federal income tax, you can defer reporting interest until the Bonds are redeemed or reach final maturity (whichever comes first).

If you're saving for your children's education or for your own retirement, you have additional tax-saving opportunities.

And if you're even a little patriotic, there's also this: You'll have the pleasure of knowing that while you're saving money, you're also helping your country.

Scout-O-Rama attracts crowds

By Sue Davis

The Chattahoochee Council of Boy Scouts conducted their annual Scout-O-Rama March 17 at the Municipal Auditorium.

The array of events began at 12:30 p.m. with an introductory speech by Brig. Gen. John Rogers, assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

The Scout-O-Rama gave Scouts from the surrounding Fort Benning/Columbus districts the opportunity to "show off" their skills and compete with other boys.

Activities ranged from games of skill and craft making to health and conservation exhibits and cooking.

All events were judged according to authenticity, originality, boy planning and knowledge of the project. Ribbons were awarded to the most outstanding projects.

The Airborne Department assisted by supplying and supervising the "Junior Jump Tower." The Department of Plans and Training (DPT) provided a helicopter for a static display.

Over 4,000 people attended the festivities which gave youngsters the chance to mingle, and more importantly, enjoy themselves.

Lightning: the charge of your life

Fort Benning is located in a one hundred mile corridor which runs from the southern coast of South Carolina west through Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana known as "lightning alley."

In the Fort Benning area, thunderstorms occur approximately seventy days out of each year.

With such high exposure it is not surprising that Fort Benning has had more than its share of lightning fatalities and injuries. In one eleven-year period, thirteen personnel were killed by lightning. In July 1976, nineteen soldiers were injured during a lightning storm on a firing range.

Although several were injured, no one died during this incident due to the quick and proper action by the unit commander.

Thunderstorms build up tremendous electrical charges in the clouds, while on the ground below opposite charges of equal potential gather. When the attraction between these opposite charges is strong enough to overcome the air resistance between them a lightning stroke results. The dual character of lightning — it carries currents of up to one million volts and produces destructive thermal effects — makes it doubly dangerous.

To help you save your life when lightning threatens, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has developed the following safety rules to keep you from being Fort Benning's next victim. Don't wait to apply these rules until you have seen the first stroke of lightning ... most people are killed or injured during the muggy lull which precedes the storm.

- Stay indoors, and don't venture outside, unless absolutely necessary.

- Stay away from open doors and windows, fireplaces, radiators, stoves, metal pipes, sinks, and plug-in electrical appliances.

- Don't use plug-in electrical equipment like hair dryers, electric tooth brushes or electric razors during the storm.

- Don't use the telephone during the storm — lightning may strike telephone lines outside.

- Don't take laundry off clothes lines.

- Don't work on fences, telephone or power lines, pipelines or structural steel fabrication.

- Don't use metal objects like fishing rods and golf clubs. Golfers wearing cleated shoes are particularly good lightning rods.

- Don't handle flammable materials in open containers.

- Get out of water and off small boats.

- Stay in your automobile if you are traveling. Automobiles offer excellent lightning protection.

- Seek shelter in buildings. If no buildings are available your best protection is a cave, ditch, canyon or under head-high clumps of trees in open forest glades.

- When there is no shelter, avoid the highest object in the area. If only isolated trees are nearby, your best protection is to seek low ground and crouch in the open, keeping twice as far away from isolated trees as they are high.

- Avoid hill tops, open spaces, wire fences, metal clothes lines, exposed sheds and any electrically conductive elevated objects.

- When you feel your skin tingle or your hair stands on end, drop to the ground immediately. Lightning is about to strike.

Observing these rules will greatly reduce your chance of being struck by lightning. If, however, you are called upon to perform first aid on someone who tries to beat the odds keep these facts in mind as explained in the "Annals of Internal Medicine."

Persons struck by lightning receive a severe electrical shock and may be burned, but they carry no electrical charge and can be handled safely. A person "killed" by lightning can often be revived by prompt mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, cardiac massage and prolonged artificial respiration.

In a group struck by lightning, the apparently dead should be treated first; those who show vital signs will probably recover spontaneously although burns and other injuries may require treatment. After emergency treatment is performed, all victims should be taken immediately to a medical facility for observation and further treatment.

tely to a medical facility for observation and further treatment.

Many people are killed by lightning each year because they think these are freak accidents that can't happen to them. Lightning is not choosy; it will strike anyone foolish enough to ignore the simple safety precautions outlined above.

It can and will KILL YOU! DON'T TAKE THE CHANCE!

For people: Waldrop has enjoyed 20 years as head of Religious Education

By Joyce Walker

A CALL FROM A total stranger affected the next 20 years of Marguerite Waldrop's life.

At the age of forty, Waldrop found herself alone with four children to support. Her husband, John, former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Columbus, had died suddenly of a heart attack in April 1957.

"With four children to support," said Waldrop, "I knew that I was going to have to go back to work. I had in mind to go back to teaching." The Milledgeville, Ga. native, who majored in Chemistry in college, had taught science in the Columbus Public Schools system from 1938-39, before her marriage.

"I WASN'T TRULY happy with any of the ideas I had in mind," she continued. "I prayed every day to the Lord for guidance."

One day in March 1958, she received a call from a man who identified himself as the Fort Benning chaplain, Chap. (Col.) Albert Wildman. They were total strangers to each other.

Wildman wanted to know if Waldrop would take over as the post Director of Religious Education. "I laughed and explained to him that I was a woman with four children and I had never even thought of working in such a position," Waldrop remembered.

But she agreed to come out to the post and talk with him the next day. "I felt the Lord had opened the door I had been praying for. The least I could do was enter and investigate," she said.

Waldrops visits 1½ year-old Angie Spackman in the Religious Education Center's nursery.

THE INTERVIEW WITH Chaplain Wildman resulted in a promise from Waldrop that she would work one year to help get the post Protestant Religious Education activity started.

To date, Waldrop is still uncertain how Chap. Wildman got her name. But ever since Mar. 23, 1958, the petite, trim figured, silver-haired lady, with the twinkling bluish-gray eyes, has been serving as Fort Benning's Director of Religious Education. She will retire during a ceremony to be held at the Infantry Center Chapel, Mar. 30 at 10 a.m.

As the director, Waldrop has had the responsibility of planning and directing all the Religious Education Center's training activities and work shops. Throughout the years, she has enjoyed responding to the needs of people and watching the activity grow.

MEMORIES OF HER first office are still vivid in her mind. Housed in an old building in the U.S. Army Hospital area, her office was glassed in with a western exposure. "I didn't have any curtains," commented Waldrop, "so I spent one Georgia summer there with the sun beaming down on my back." An old desk and a rickety chair, that Waldrop says tore her hose every time she sat down in it, plus another old battered desk and chair belonging to her assistant, made up her office furnishings.

In the summer of 1959, the Center moved into fourteen buildings located in its present area on Dixie Road. At that time, the entire post attended Sunday School classes sponsored by the Center. "We didn't decentralize to the Community Life Centers until 1974," Waldrop noted.

Her first view of the buildings, which were sub-standard duplex family-quarters that had been condemned, was not too encouraging. The family that had lived in the building housing the Center had kept chickens in one of the rooms. "For years," Waldrop said with a hint of laughter in her voice, "every time I walked into the building, I smelled those chickens."

WALDROP IS RESPONSIBLE for initiating a lot of the programs and activities that come under the Religious Education Center. Some of the programs are: Leadership Training and Teaching Readiness workshops for Sunday School teachers, Vacation Bible School personnel and youth leaders; Marriage Enrichment workshops; Protestant Women of the Chapel and youth retreats; the annual Sweetheart Banquet plus Personal Growth and Literacy Mission workshops.

The youthful spirited 62-year-old grandmother doesn't take all the credit for the success of these programs. She explained, "None of the programs would have flourished without the help of volunteers from the Fort Benning community. I had the ideas, but they put them in action."

She is particularly proud of the English classes for non-English speaking persons. It is a chapel outreach program that provides English instruction for foreign born wives of American servicemen and allied officers assigned to Fort Benning.

"THROUGH THIS ACTIVITY, I'm allowed the privilege of sharing my Christian faith with the world," Waldrop said.

She is looking forward to retiring and not having to rise every morning at six. "I'll have more time to spend with my six grandchildren, plus I'll finally have the time to clean out my closet," she said smiling. Waldrop, who resides in Columbus, plans to become involved in volunteer work and church visitation programs.

Two students of the non-English speaking class, Gudrun Fowler, Germany and Bay Holland, Vietnam, accompany Waldrop during morning devotional services.

Clowning serious business to GI

By Seth Hamilton

Sp4 Jerry Fleming is a chaplain's assistant at Fort Benning's TSB chapel. He works as an activities specialist, but his work day doesn't always end at five o'clock. When the time is right, Fleming dons a baggy polka dot suit, a rag tag wig and a generous amount of grease paint to practice his favorite hobby, being a clown.

Fleming loves children. He has entertained young people throughout the Columbus-Fort Benning area. He has performed at everything from birthday parties to benefits for needy children. Last Valentine's Day he passed out baskets of candy to youngsters in the children's ward of Martin Army Hospital. He also pays frequent visits to the Intermediate Care Nursing Home.

Proud possession

One of Fleming's proudest possessions is a letter of commendation he received for performing at a Halloween party which the TSB Chapel sponsored for wives of officer candidates.

Fleming hasn't been in the clown business too long, but he's making up for lost time. One of his main reasons for being a clown is to better communicate with children. Fleming feels a special attachment to children, and, as he puts it, "I'm really still a kid at heart; I love working with them."

He attributes his affection for children to an incident that happened to him while he was on a field trip in Texas with a church group. "We were staying in a house for a week. One afternoon, a fight broke out between a husband and wife living next door. I mean these people were yelling and throwing things at each other right out on the front lawn."

Fleming added that "the worst thing about the fight was that the children of the battling parents were standing in plain view of the fight. The kids were crying and yelling, 'Please don't hit each other'."

To this day Fleming can remember the hurt look on the children's faces. "Sometimes kids don't get the love they need from home. I want to do what I can to help. I want to reach out to these children."

Clown roots

Fleming first got the idea that he could be a good clown when he had to dress up in a crazy outfit to attract attention to a car wash that his church youth was having. He was 17 years old then. It wasn't until recently when he played a clown in a Christmas comedy play on post that Fleming got serious about the hobby.

Fleming grew up in Gary, Ind., and joined the Army in June of 1976 because, "I knew I wanted to head in the direction of my church and the Army offered me a perfect spot." Fleming has been at Benning since late 1976. He has worked at the Benning House Alcohol and Drug Control Office, the Religious Education Center, and the Airborne Chapel before coming to his present position at the TSB Chapel.

On to 'clown college'

There is a college in Florida that offers a one-year course on being a clown that Fleming plans to attend when he gets out of the military. After that he would like to go to a Christian college in Indiana for background work before becoming what he calls a "clown evangelist." Many of his performances include teaching the children something about the Bible.

"I think that we as people need something special to reach out to kids with, something the kids can relate to. I feel I am doing that with my clown act."

Jerry Fleming never accepts any money for his performances because he feels that, "to see children smile is all the pay I need." Fleming is truly devoted to helping other people, and that in turn gives him a purpose. "Entertaining people has given me a new sense of helping someone. My work gives me a strong feeling of goodness."

Fleming has fun at what he does, but more than that, what he does is important to a lot of people. And that is what makes Jerry Fleming the special person he is.

Guard, Reserve lieutenants get 'hands-on' training

By Dale Wilson

They come to Fort Benning each year from all over the Western Hemisphere. Alaska. Hawaii. Puerto Rico. Almost all of the 48 continental United States.

Today, the 171 Army National Guard and nine U.S. Army Reserve lieutenants will complete the Infantry School's four-week reserve component officer basic course (IOBC-RC), offered annually to newly-commissioned officers coming into the Guard and Reserve from various officer candidate schools.

The present IOBC-RC was modeled after the current 14-week IOBC course that prepares active duty lieutenants for duty as platoon leaders, and manages to cram 38 percent of the curriculum taught to active duty officers into 30 percent of the time, according to Maj. Jack W. Van Allen, commander of 24th Co 2nd BOTB, TSB, the unit responsible for this year's class.

Like most of the courses offered here, the emphasis is on "hands-on" training. Unlike past IOBC-RC classes that were built around nearly 50 percent classroom instruction, the new curriculum features almost 81 percent field work.

Unit trainers have 10 percent of the instruction, most entirely hands-on. In the past, Van Allen said.

"Field training is the key," said 2nd Lt. Charles Swanson of Chico, Calif., "There's a Ranger tire third week on various tactical and light."

Swanson's course is the active duty "tracked" into a "common core" to prepare officers, according to Van Allen.

The hands-on training is all the students.

"It's great to get the stuff and use it," said Collinsworth, a "We don't get the unit. There, I'm a trainer."

2nd Lt. Tommy P. Things like the M-203 grenade launcher, the TOW and the machine guns. Right now, we don't have any of them in my home unit."

The concentrated nature of the course — 256 hours of training crammed into four short weeks — leaves the men little free time, said Van Allen.

"It's pretty hectic," 2nd Lt. Gregory A. Ritch admitted. The Connellsville, Pa., Guardsman added that the entire "third week we were in the field and must have put in about 130 hours. The rest of the time we've been putting in 12-hour days."

Most agreed the pressure has been worth it, though.

"This course offers me a lot that I can't get back in California," said Swanson. "I've been in the National Guard and Reserve for a total of eight years, all of it in the Infantry, and we just don't get to do much of this stuff."

Reading a compass part of the job

A compass is easy to read, right? Yes, if it has north, south, east and west and there are no calculations to make.

But using the M2 compass in a tactical environment is a learning/practice process.

There are four ways to sight and measure a magnetic azimuth, and that is just the beginning of what a soldier learns during initial training.

The soldiers of 4th Bn, 1st ITB learn to sight on the object through the opening in the rear sight holder and through the window in the cover; sight through the window in the cover only; sight over the tips of the rear and front sights; and sight on the object, look in the mirror, and read the azimuth indicated by the black end of the magnetic needle.

If the front sight is nearest the body then the azimuth is indicated by the white end of the needle.

Just another day in the life of the Infantry soldier? Yes, but a very important one. Before one can sight the compass, he must know how to use it. He must know the front from the rear sight, and that if metallic objects are nearby, the compass reading may not be accurate. A soldier must learn whether to raise the rear sight holder perpendicular to the face of the compass, or to fold the rear sight holder out parallel with the face of the compass, or to fold the rear sight holder out parallel with the face of the compass, or to raise the front and the rear sight perpendicular to the face of the compass.

The Infantry soldiers of ITB are constantly going through training — physical and mental — but there is a wide variety of things to be learned if one is to be the 'best'!

The use of the M2 compass was not previously taught in basic or advanced training; but today the initial entry soldiers receive hours of training on the M2 — another example of how the Army has upgraded the program of instruction under the new OSUT/TST strategies.

Soldiers of the 4th Bn, 1st ITB learn how the M2 Compass works.

Post services

Survey upcoming

By Seth Hamilton

Fort Benning personnel will soon have a chance to tell it like it is.

A personnel services survey will soon be distributed to a random selection of Fort Benning active duty, retired and civilian personnel. More than 8,000 questionnaires will be sent out.

The survey, which is being conducted by a Human Resources Management Team (HRMT), is designed to evaluate services offered to Benning personnel. The goal of the survey is to make improvements where they are needed and to eliminate any unnecessary services.

According to Capt. John Darr of the HRMT,

Traffic pattern to be switched

A switch to one-way traffic will be implemented in McGraw Manor within 30 days, according to Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander here.

This will effectively produce 1,100 additional "on-street" parking spaces.

The one-way traffic switch is necessary because the parking situation is getting out of hand. Some people are forced to drive through other residents' lawns in order to park, and "it's a major nuisance," commented McKee.

"We're doing this as a service for McGraw Manor residents in hopes of solving this problem," McKee concluded.

"This survey will help us to justify the funds needed for important services on post."

The survey questionnaire is made up of three parts. Personal data, evaluation of services and possible reasons for dissatisfaction with services. The survey will cover 70 on post services ranging from recreational facilities and auto crafts to medical and dental care.

The survey will take about 30 minutes to complete and as Darr put it, "It might take a half hour or so to fill out the questionnaire, but the benefits will be more than worth it." He added that all forms will be handled in strict confidence.

Darr pointed out that it is important that the survey get a good response from Benning personnel. "If we don't get enough of these questionnaires back, the survey will not be valid and the entire purpose will be void."

The survey has the full support of Fort Benning commander Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey. Livsey was responsible for establishing the HRMT and it was he who volunteered Fort Benning to be one of the two TRADOC posts to test the survey. Fort Campbell, Ky. is the other test post.

Livsey stated that one of the primary reasons for the survey is that due to financial constraints, "We must seek more efficient methods of allocating and managing our already limited resources."

Semi-annual post clean-up to begin Thursday

The semi-annual post wide clean-up will begin Thursday afternoon. Troop areas and family housing will be the target areas of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

All nonmission essential personnel living on Fort Benning should be released Thursday afternoon to work in their areas.

All bulky residue is scheduled to be picked up from the housing areas April 2 by responsible major commands. Residue and garbage should be ready for pick up by March 31.

ACS sponsors "Riverside" tour

Each year the Army Community Service (ACS) sponsors a tour through "Riverside," the home of Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander. The "Riverside" tour provides ACS the means to fill the emergency food locker.

ACS supplies active duty or retired families with a three-day food bag containing everything needed for breakfast, lunch and dinner in emergency situations.

The cost of the tour is a staple item, such as cans of vegetables, meat dinners, spaghetti sauce, fruit juices or tuna. Cash donations for purchasing hamburger, bread and margarine will be accepted.

This tour is open to all and will be held on April 22 from 1 to 4 p.m. A nursery will be provided for children under 10 years of age. For more information call ACS at 545-1233/1169.

Dystrophy fund drive announced

'Shamrocks against dystrophy' is a campaign for the sharin 'o' the green — to help hundreds of people, young and old, afflicted by muscle diseases. High school students throughout the area will be Shamrock volunteers for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, helping collect needed money in local shopping centers for patient services.

Prayer seminar scheduled

An Evelyn Christenson Prayer Seminar is being planned for April 6, from 9:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. at The Rankin House, 1440 2nd Ave. The $2 fee will include a catered sandwich lunch. The interdenominational Prayer Seminar will be taught by Dianna Helms and Barbara Brockmann.

Reservations may be made by calling Barbara Brockmann at 687-7959 or Sarah Griffon, 687-8193. The seminar will be sponsored by the Great Commission Prayer Crusade Fort Benning-Columbus. The public is cordially invited.

Westville plans spring festival

The 1850 village of Westville will celebrate the coming of spring from Thursday, April 5 through Sunday, April 8. Located on 58 acres of rolling countryside, the village is open daily from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sundays from 1-5 p.m.

Visitors to Westville experience the sights and sounds of the mid-nineteenth century as they stroll along dirt streets or winding garden paths, sample delicious gingerbread and sausage biscuits prepared in the village kitchens, and watch the potter, basket weaver, blacksmith, spinner and weaver at work in the historic shops and houses.

Spring activities, such as old time cleaning methods, rail splitting, spring gardening, wood carving, broom and doll making, games, contests, and special music will take place during the days of the festival.

Lumpkin is located at the intersection of U.S. 27 and Georgia 27 in Southwest Georgia. For further information, write: Westville, Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815 or call: 912-838-6310.

New property reg

You break it—you pay for it

By Julie Casey

The new regulation on accounting for lost, damaged, and destroyed government property took effect Army-wide Jan. 1.

Soldiers became liable for lost or damaged property when they have been judged to be negligent. According to the new regulation, AR 735-11, negligence is "an act or omission that a reasonable person would not commit under similar circumstances."

Personal liability for property other than individual weapons and field gear has been limited to one month's base pay to be collected over a period of two or more months. If lost, the full cost will be charged for items issued to soldiers for their own use such as sleeping bags or other field equipment.

"The new regulation takes the accountability away from the division and puts it back into the hands of the brigade," commented Olin Patterson, general supply officer, Operations Branch, Directorate of Industrial Operations. "In essence, the authority has been redesignnated to local commands. I feel the new system is easier to administer. It can also be supplemented with administrative or punitive actions such as those allowed under the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

What AR 735-11 means to troops is that they are now more likely to be charged for lost or damaged equipment, according to Patterson.

"Before, you had to almost prove willful misconduct before any action was taken. If a soldier went out and wrecked a truck because he was drinking, he would probably have suffered only threats of making him pay for the vehicle. But because of the enormous amount of money involved, he would have ended by paying nothing," he explained.

The new regulation will make it easier to charge soldiers for the property they lose or damage. He may lose one month's base pay and can also receive an Article 15 depending on other factors in the case.

Patterson expects more dollars to be returned under the new system for lost or damaged government property.

ITB barracks dedication set

By Pat Astran

The 1st Battalion barracks of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade is soon to be dedicated in memory of PFC Jack Hanson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hanson. The ultra-modern, troop living area will be named Hanson Barracks.

Jack was raised in a small coastal town, Escatawpa, Miss. He was the youngest child in the Hanson family and had one older sister and seven older brothers.

Flowers were his favorite hobby; planting and caring for flowers that others could enjoy. He attended his home town elementary school and Moss Point High School in Escatawpa. Hanson was considered an average student who enjoyed associating with his fellow classmates.

Jack and his family attended the Escatawpa Baptist Church. He is remembered as a very humble person who enjoyed the company of children Hanson enlisted in the Army at the age of 20. After he completed basic training, he was sent to Korea where he served as an Infantryman. He died heroically on the field of battle during the Korean War.

"As a family, we frequently think Jack must have thought, when he encouraged his fellow soldiers to escape, that many of them probably had children back home waiting for a "daddy." Jack was single and there wasn't anyone who depended directly on him. Also, we are very honored that we are able to stand tall and salute the American flag with a special meaning; knowing that one of our loved ones gave his life so our flag can fly high and proud. We have something to pass on to our children that we hope will make them proud of America and willing always to support 'Her,' " stated Marie Hanson Neal, Jack's mother, of Mobile, Ala.

DYA sign-up underway

Registration is underway for 15-17 year olds to sign up for Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) Boys Senior Baseball and Girls Softball teams. Registration continues through the end of March.

Anyone interested should visit the DYA, Bldg. 1054, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Registration fee is $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second, $5 for the third and any children in the family after that get in for free. Applicants should also bring proof of age.

'Bullets' place second

The 1979 "Bullets" basketball team of the Midget Division, DYA basketball league represented Fort Benning in the Southeast Regional Tournament at Warner Robins the weekend of February 24-25. The "Bullets," who went undefeated during their regular season, received a 2nd place trophy at Warner Robins by losing to Fort Stewart by only eight points. David Doss and Ted Myers were both selected as "Most Valuable Players" from Fort Benning. The players and coaches for the "Bullets" are:

David Doss, Randy Smith, Rick Dahl, Ted Myers, Darrin Williams, Daniel Crowden, Benjamin Duncan, Tony Hillyard, Mike Noli and William Madison. Head Coach: Gary Sakowski, Asst. Coach: Lester Wofford.

Doughboys train early

The turn out for the Fort Benning Doughboys spring training has been encouraging and coach Ralph Santaliz expressed great enthusiasm about the upcoming season.

There are four quarterbacks competing for the number one spot this year. Santaliz feels that this will give the Doughboys a depth they haven't yet had at that position.

Coaches Tim Pfister and Gary Sadlon, defensive and offensive coordinators, have been stressing the fundamentals during this past week of training. Santaliz commented that, "Fundamentals will be a major area with us this year. A fundamentally sound team will defeat their opponents nine out of ten times."

The players, as well as the coaches, have been giving a hundred and ten percent effort according to Santaliz. "The players understand our philosophy of total dedication to the program. The coaches are doing a great job of keeping the best attitude going."

The Doughboys are still looking for players at all positions and according to the head coach, "The players know that all positions are open from the first day of spring training till the last day of the 1979 football season."

For further information call Ralph Santaliz at 545-2281.

Weighing in was one of the orders of business during the Doughboys first week of spring training.

Sports Shorts

1979 TRADOC marathon

The 1979 TRADOC Marathon Championship will be held June 14-16 at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

All interested runners must submit application forms to the Physical Activities Branch, Doughboy Stadium (Bldg. 394) no later than May 1. Applications can be picked up at all post gymnasiums.

Fort Benning will send two runners in the 13.1 mile and two in the 26.2 mile events.

Competition is open to all active duty men and women.

Softball clinic

A softball clinic for coaches and officials will be held April 4-5 from 1 to 5 p.m. at Gowdy Field, Bldg. 395A. The clinic is in preparation for league play which runs from May 2 to Aug. 1.

The purpose of the clinic is to train coaches and officials in the techniques of play and officiating softball in order to promote better company level competition within the command. People attending the clinic should come dressed in athletic type clothing with gym shoes.

Orienteering club

Orienteering is a sport that combines running with map reading. It has recently experienced a revival here resulting in the formation of the Fort Benning Orienteering Club.

The "O" Club, which presently has fifteen members, meets every Thursday in Room 402, Bldg 4 at 6 p.m. They have already begun classes and held one field training meet.

Future club plans include a membership drive, plus training and preparation for the Spring Orienteering Meet at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Park in Warm Springs, Ga.

Interested personnel, whether military, civilian or dependent, are urged to contact club representatives in Room 454, Bldg 4 at 545-5754/4214/4180.

Handicap golf match

The Spring Handicap at the Follow Me Golf Course will be played tomorrow and Sunday.

For information on exact times and registration, contact George Cliff, golf pro, at 687-1940.

Doughboys finish 1979 season

The Fort Benning Doughboys participated in the Eastern Region TRADOC Basketball Championships held at Fort Jackson, S.C. March 10-17. The Doughboys got off to a good start after drawing a bye in the first round. The Doughboys met Fort Eustis in the second round and beat them 88-85 as Luke Fencher and Rick Donnell scored 21 and 18 points respectively to lead the Doughboys to victory.

The Doughboys fell short in their next contest against Fort Jackson in the winners bracket as they lost a close contest to Fort Jackson 84-80. The Doughboys had a chance to tie the score in the waning minutes of the game, but failed to get a foul call by one of the officials. The Doughboys were led by Rick Donnell and Charlie Jackson with 16 points each.

The Doughboys lost their second game in the tournament to Fort Belvoir by a score of 61-60. It was one of those games where the Doughboys were completely cold from the floor. The top scorers for the Doughboys were Rick Donnell with 14 points and Frederick Nelson with 13 points. The Doughboys will finish up their season by playing in the West Central Georgia Open Adult Basketball Tournament in Greenville, Ga. on March 12-24. The Doughboys will meet Georgia Pacific in a contest tonight at 8:15 p.m. The Doughboys and coaching staff would like to express their appreciation to the Doughboy fans and followers. They would also like to express their appreciation to the Morale Support Administration staff for their whole-hearted support.

TSB soldier races hot rods for fun and excitement

By Betty Zimmerman

Soldiering doesn't keep one School Brigade sergeant from having fun. He has continued his drag racing hobby through 11 years of service.

Wayne Davis, IOBC support section, 2nd Bn, TSB, has been building and racing cars since Wayne Davis gets under his racing car to check out the transmission.

1961. His first "hopped up" car was a 1957 Chevrolet, which he ran in his hometown, Melbourne, Fla.

He came to Benning in 1972 and, despite the fact he was only a PFC, he managed to afford a race car. At that time he was running a '68 Camaro on the Phenix City Drag Strip in the ET brackets.

By 1973, Davis moved up to a B-Stock automatic and won the Orlando, Fla., Turkey Trot race.

Sgt. Bobby Edwards, 586th Engr Co, 36th Engr Gp, and George "The Doctor" Jones from Columbus, help Davis with the mechanical work. He also gets financial help from a brother and brother-in-law as partial sponsors.

His current pride and joy is "Staci's Toy," a black and gold '69 Super Sport Camaro. It is named for his six-year-old daughter, and the title and registration are in her name.

This car won second place in the competition class last March in the Chevy Unlimited Car Show at Columbus Square. The award was based on the car's appearance.

The A-Stock automatic car runs the eighth-mile in 7.60 seconds and the quarter-mile in 11.60 seconds, according to Davis.

It's equipped with a 375 horsepower 396 cubic inch motor with a 780 CFM carburetor and Reed cam. The 557 rearend gears are coupled to Summer Brothers axles and driven by a power glide transmission with a TCI 5,500 stall converter.

Davis says his luck at Phenix City has been down lately, but he wins frequently at Lee County Drag Strip, also in Alabama.

He, his wife, Patty, and daughter have matching black and gold outfits. And as of Feb. 25, he has another outfit to buy for his newest daughter, Heather.

Fort Benning Roll-off set

The 1979 Fort Benning Bowling Roll-Off will be conducted at the Mall Bowling Center, Bldg 9232, from March 27-29 to select team members to represent Fort Benning in the 1979 TRADOC Combined Men's and Women's Championship Bowling Tournament at Fort McClellan, Ala. April 15-21. The Roll-Off is open to all men and women on active duty. Entries will be submitted on an individual basis to the Mall Bowling Center not later than noon on March 27. Entry blanks are available at all Fort Benning Bowling Centers.

Les Koski, bowling with the Lads & Lassies League, led the men this week in series. Les put together games of 183, 234, 223 for a 640 series.

Dixie Jenkins led the Ladies in the Hi Games this week by rolling a 249.

Leprechaun Marathon

Bill Rogers burned up the pavement in 30 minutes and 13 seconds during the 3rd Annual Emerald City Leprechaun (10,000 meters) Marathon in Dublin, Ga. March 17. Hills and heat made the course that ran through the Dublin countryside tough.

John Gonzalez led Benning runners completing the course in 37 minutes and 50 seconds. His wife Kathy also ran, cutting six minutes off her previous time. Kenny Gonzalez ran placing 3rd in his age group.

Sean, Shea and Chuck Briscoe (brothers) placed well in a field of 300 runners. Shea took first in the under 11 age group and Chuck took the honors as the youngest to finish.

Al Hennigan ran strong, finishing in 40 minutes flat. Sheila Hennigan ran, completing her first 10,000 race in 83 minutes.

Julie Casey ran, placing second overall in the women's division.

2nd Annual Lions Run March 31

The 2nd Annual Lions 10,000 meter road race will be March 31 at 9 a.m. in Marietta, Ga. A one mile novice race will be run at 8:30 a.m.

T-shirts will go to all finishers in the 10 kilometer run and awards will go to the top five finishers in each age group.

The race begins and ends at Wheeler High School Athletic Field in east Marietta. The course is located on Holt Road — take Lower Roswell Road, then north on Holt Road to the school.

Pre-registration is $4 and $5 race day. There is a $1 entry fee for the novice run. All proceeds will go to the Georgia Lighthouse for the Blind.

For entry forms contact Julie Casey at 545-4622.

Atlanta Action Run April 7

The Atlanta Action Run-Action Trot will begin at 8:30 a.m. for children 12 and under. The one-mile is being directed by the Atlanta Running Center at Brookhaven near the Capital City Club.

The run is a benefit to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the Atlanta Children's Theater.

Registration is $2. For entry forms contact Julie Casey at 545-4622.

Pot Luck Relay April 7

Sponsored by the Campfire Girls, a novice relay and a pot luck relay will be held April 7 in Atlanta. The novice relay begins at 8:30 a.m. and each participant runs $\frac{3}{4}$ s of a mile. The pot luck relay is at 9 a.m. and each participant runs 3.25 miles during the relay. Teams will be determined by a drawing race morning.

The location is at the Memorial Park at the corner of Wesley Drive Northwest and Northside Drive, opposite Bobby Jones Golf Course.

For more information contact race director, Pat Stone, 862 Alpine Way, Forest Park, Ga. 30050 or call 361-3547 after 5 p.m.

The 2nd Annual Hummingbird Heritage Classic April 7

The 2nd Annual Hummingbird Heritage Classic is April 7 at 8 a.m. (Central Standard Time) in Eufaula, Ala. A 10,000 meter run and a 2-mile fun run will be held concurrently.

T-shirts will be awarded to the first 125 finishers in the 10 kilometer and to the first 25 finishers in the 2-mile run.

Both races will begin at the Old Creek Town Park, located just off Highway 431 north of Eufaula.

For entry forms contact Julie Casey at 545-4622.

Runner's profile

Pfeiffer moves out in training

By Julie Casey

He runs depending on how he feels, and cruises along at a sub-seven-minute training pace for 80 to 90 miles a week.

Capt. Bernie Pfeiffer of the Staff Judge Advocates Office, commented, "I run because I enjoy it. It is not a driving force in my life and I don't have to run to feel right during the day. It is like a hobby, not a religion. I don't believe in all the stuff you read in magazines about running."

Pfeiffer's running goes back to college days when he was attending law school at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. He ran the mile, 880 yard run, three mile run and the mile relay with the college team for two years, with his 4:08 mile being his main event.

"I was doing more intervals then, stuff like 15 440-yard sprints in 60 seconds with 110-yard walk recoveries in-between," the 28-year-old casually commented about his tough workouts.

In the summer of 1974, Pfeiffer ran a marathon (26 miles 385 yards) in 2 hours and 29 minutes.

"I was really happy with my time but a few months later I suffered a knee injury and had to have the cartilage in my right knee removed," Pfeiffer said, which forced him to remain off the track his last year in school.

The injury forced Pfeiffer to alter training habits. After recovering, he began doing more road work. He ran having to contend with re-occurring knee problems.

"I really didn't get back into consistent running until 1977. I ran the Fort Bragg All-American Marathon, but my knee suffered after the run," commented the once nationally classed runner.

He came back in 1977 with a 28 minute five-mile and has been improving ever since.

Pfeiffer ran the Callaway Gardens Marathon, a local favorite run, in 3 hours and 34 minutes. He was also taken in by the heat as were many others.

"I knew I was in trouble when I got up that morning. It was too hot. I had been putting in the training and had been running 20 miles in 2 hours and 15 minutes on a regular basis. I was dehydrated and ran out of steam. I used the Paul Bunyan technique, running from tree to tree," he said. "The day afterwards, Dave Fields and I were laughing about the state of our condition, but I could have really hurt myself."

Pfeiffer plans to run the Columbus Marathon but commented that he hasn't really been gearing up for the run. He added that he would settle with a time in the low "2:50s."

Commenting on his marathon strategy he said, "I run the first ten miles at a very rigid pace, hitting my pace on the mark, and the second ten is run according to how I feel. Then I just see what happens in the last six miles."

Pfeiffer continued to develop his hobby with no immediate goals to pursue except to run the HDPS (Historic District Preservation Society) Five Mile Run, here in Columbus, for a good time.

Commenting on whether or not he will get his time back down he said, "I hope to, but that is a ways off. That earlier marathon time was the result of five years of hard work. 1978 has been my first really good year since the injury and I feel it takes about two years to really build a proper mileage base.

"I just like to run," he concluded.

OWC to award scholarships to local students

The Officers' Wives Club will again award scholarships to outstanding high school seniors this spring. The students applying must be dependents of active-duty or retired personnel. There will be one $1,500 scholarship, one $1,000 and seven $500 scholarships awarded this year. These certificates will be used for tuition, room, board, fees or books at the student's chosen college.

The awards will be based on the senior's high school transcript, SAT test results, and his school and community activities.

Applications are available at all area high school counselors' offices or by calling Mrs. Davis, the scholarship chairman, at 687-2195. All applications must be mailed by April 16, 1979.

Bring-a-salad luncheon

The Health Service Command Activity OWC will host a bring-a-salad luncheon in the Main Chapel Annex on Wednesday, April 4, at 11 a.m. The members will be entertained by the Benning Belles and will also vote for H.S.C.A. officers for the 1979-1980 year. All members and retired H.S.C.A. members are invited to attend.

By Jo Lynn Allen and Donna Hale

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling 561-2991.

NCOWC newcomers coffee

The next coffee for newcomers will be held Tuesday, 10 a.m., at the NCOWC Lounge on Lawson Field. All newcomers are cordially invited to attend.

If you are contemplating joining the NCOWC, remember nursery service is provided at Tot Town Nursery by the NCOWC for members with young children.

NCOWC trip

The NCOWC is planning a trip to Orlando, Fla. April 6-8. Reservations must be made by March 31. Contact Mrs. Helen Williams at 687-1159 for more information or reservations.

The NCOWC has learned of a need for reading material for the patients on the 9th floor at Martin Army Hospital. If you have any paper back books or magazines that you would like to donate, take them to the 9th floor; they will gladly accept them.

TSB chapel offers OCs refuge

By Suellen Cochran

"If you're not a religious person when you get here, you probably will be by the time you leave." This comment was among the opening remarks made by the intermediate officer candidates to the beginning Officer Candidate Class 2-79.

Apparently, this advice was based on fact. In their tenth week of training, the class had more than 75 percent attendance at the Sunday morning services.

Protestant Chap. (Capt.) David M. Rhyne, of the Training School Brigade (TSB), credits the high attendance to the OCS environment.

"During the first weeks, the candidates can't go anywhere. The chapel offers a place for fellowship, seeing the family, having fun or just drinking a cup of coffee in peace," laughed Chap. Rhyne.

"Just to relax and unwind is helpful, but I like to think that everyone who sits in a chair here gets something out of being here."

The sermons are centered around present problems faced by the candidates. Chap. Rhyne keeps up to date on what's happening by making OCS a very active part of his life. "I like to do as many things with them as I can, so that when we all come together on Sunday, we're not strangers," he explained.

It is not at all unusual to see Chap. Rhyne up early running with the candidates or in the field eating C-rats with them. He also visits those who are sick and counsels those who want advice.

Chap. (Maj.) William W. Erbach Sr., brigade chaplain, notes that the reason for such a vibrant congregation at the TSB Chapel is the one in charge. "If you're singing and praising the Lord with happiness, your congregation will be doing the same. Chap. Rhyne is singing," he said with a smile.

There are two services each Sunday, Catholic mass at 9:45 a.m. and Protestant at 11 a.m. The OCS choir, directed by Senior Candidate Frank Dillard, sings for both services.

Candidates take an active role by leading scripture and responsive readings, making announcements and helping coordinate service activities. A nursery is provided for the young children and is run by volunteer wives and candidates.

In addition to the Sunday services, the chapel offers a Monday morning Bible study for the OCS wives and a Wednesday evening Bible study for the candidates and their families.

Capt. David Rhyne (r), TSB's 5th Bn chaplain, gets to meet his OCS constituents by joining in their activities.

One-Time Exclusion

Rule Changes

On Sale of Personal Home

For sales after July 26, 1978, individuals 55 and over are allowed a one-time exclusion of up to $100,000 of profit on the sale of their personal residence, the Internal Revenue Service said.

This replaces the provision that allowed individuals 65 and over to exclude all of the profit on the sale of their residence if the sales price was less than $35,000.

Additional information is available free in IRS Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling or Purchasing Your Home," by filling out the order blank found in the tax package.

Taxpayers money saved

Soldiers have saved taxpayers nearly $1 billion since 1965, a DoD report to Congress said.

Approximately 325,000 suggestions were adopted among more than two million submitted, according to the report, since the Incentive Awards Program

According to the Suggestion Program Coordinator here, Mrs. Betty Frankovitch, the program is doing well this year compared to last year. Already in FY 79, savings totaled have passed savings' tallies for FY 78.

Frankovitch added, "Although we are doing much better this year, military involvement is slack and suggestions would be a valuable asset."

At DoD levels Army-wide, over 14,830 suggestions were adopted among 98,011 submitted in FY 78. $37.26 million was saved last year.

Cash awards totaled slightly more than $1 million. Enlisted members received 81 percent of the awards.

How about that?

Pride can be pitfall

William W. Erbach Sr.
TSB, Chaplain

The bedroom windows of a mountain farmhouse were lightly shuttered to protect those inside from the elements outside. On the walls were cheap dime store pictures, hung there by these poor, ignorant people to beautify their home. This was all they could afford. Ironically, all they had to do would be to simply open their windows to the free beauty of the mountains all around them.

So many of us today try to escape from what is around us into a little shell, a little world of our own, just so we don't have to face the world. But then we bring into our new world cheap imitations of beauty. We decorate our lives with the clashing colors of commercialized art.

What is wrong? We are forever trying to brighten the commonplace ways with what is only gawdy and tawdry, neglecting to appropriate the beauty and wonders of work.

Dr. Schweitzer once smiled and said, "I used to be an intellectual too, but I couldn't live up to it."

The clean dirt of honest labor will never put any dust or rust on the mind. We must never become too proud to do honest labor or to accept the responsibility of putting to practical use our hands as well as our minds, for both are equal gifts of God.

Infantry Board celebrates 76th anniversary

The last day of May marks the 76th year of existence of the U.S. Army Infantry Board. Although most officers and noncommissioned officers are familiar with the fact that there is an Infantry Board, its activities remain a mystery to some.

It is a fact that the Board tested canvas leg-gins, an electric horse clipping machine, and a folding bicycle. It also tested the jeep, the M14, M16A1, TOW, DRAGON, starlight scopes, Infantry radios, wash-and-wear uniforms, and on and on.

On the lighter side, advanced course students wandering to and fro in the hallowed halls of Building 4 think all Board members speed around post in dune buggies and run tests on new models of golf clubs, racquet ball racquets and polo helmets.

It all started when . . .

So let's set the record straight —

War Department Orders Number 45, dated March 31, 1903, established the original Board of Fort Leavenworth, Kan. It consisted of two Infantry field grade officers of the 13th Infantry Regiment and two senior captains at the General Service and Staff College.

The Infantry Board's charter was stated in the General's Order as "a board to which may be referred, from time to time, subjects relating to the operations and equipment of the Infantry arm, upon which their opinions may be desired."

This charter was very general, few procedures were ever implemented, and the Board of Leavenworth was, at best, loosely organized.

Purpose of the Board

The continuity of the Board was further disturbed by the departure of the local Infantry regiment for the Mexican border in March 1911, after which its activities ceased, although no order can be found disbanding it.

On December 15, 1919, the War Department issued orders constituting the Board's permanent station as Camp Benning, Ga., and naming it as the first and only agency created whose sole function was to consider with continuity of effort the improvement of the Infantry.

The purpose of the Board was announced as: "To consider such subjects pertaining to the Infantry as may be referred to the Board by the Chief of Infantry, and to originate and submit to the Chief of Infantry recommendations looking to the improvement of the Infantry."

The commandant of the Infantry School was designated President Ex Officio of the Board, and members were the assistant commandant, three Infantry officers, and one Ordnance officer.

The Board functioned in close coordination with the Department of Experiment of the Infantry School which had the mission of investigating and developing new ideas. Army Regulation 350-200 provided that the Department of Experiment should consist of not more than five officers and was to "conduct such tests, experiments, and research as the Commandant of the School directs."

Strict procedure set

The procedure was that when a test project was assigned to the Infantry Board, it was first studied in conference with all members of the Board, the School Academic Department, Department of Experiment, and 29th Infantry Regiment. If the project involved material, the Department of Experiment would conduct an appropriate service test.

These tests were observed by the Board, and final reports were rendered by the Department of Experiment. Then, the Infantry Board considered the test results and submitted its final evaluation which generally embodied one of the following recommendations: 1) that the article

CSM Quick retires

By Seth Hamilton

CSM Clovie Quick was awarded the Legion of Merit March 21 in a ceremony at Bldg. 4 following his final leadership class for OCS candidates.

Quick retires after thirty years in the Army. During his career he visited Benning in 1950 and 1963 before coming here to stay in 1975. He has served 18 years overseas, including combat tours in Korea and Vietnam.

Quick, who is sergeant major of the 5th Student Bn, OCS, has been teaching a class on NCO leadership in the Army to officer candidates since May, 1977. He began teaching the class because "I sensed there was something missing in the officer candidate training — something that can't be covered in books or manuals."

In his class, Quick gives some practical advice to the officer candidates. "No manual can teach a candidate how to deal with a 40-man platoon on an individual basis. The OCS course supplies the basics of leadership, but I like to feel my class gives the candidate a feel for the nitty-gritty day-to-day part of leadership."

Quick cites an example. "A lot of young officers have problems when they first come into a command and start dealing with, let's say, a platoon sergeant with 25 years in the service. I am trying to teach these candidates things I have learned over my career to help them keep things running smoothly."

Quick has held every NCO position from squad leader to combat support sergeant major. His class, which many officer candidates felt was one of the best in OCS, is based on his 30 years experience as an NCO.

Quick will retire in Columbus with his wife, Hannelove, daughters Deborah and Laurie and son Charles.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Dramatizers enjoyed

Last weekend I went out to see the Fort Benning Dramatizers production of "An Almost Perfect Person" at the Benning Playhouse.

I enjoyed the show very much and I am planning to check out these shows in the future. I've been here at Benning for about a year and for some reason, I never knew that this group existed. I knew where the Benning Playhouse was, but I thought it had been empty for years.

I found out about this show because a friend of mine is involved in it. I was surprised to see how much work goes into a production like this. "An Almost Perfect Person" is being shown for five nights, but the cast and crew have been working for almost two months in preparation.

I guess the reason I'm writing is because I didn't understand why the playhouse wasn't filled to capacity. I went last Saturday night and there were about 150 spectators with about 40 empty seats left over. Maybe some people feel that because the play is free, it can't be anything worth seeing. That's wrong. The play was funny and well worth the trip.

I would like to commend the Dramatizer's cast and crew for caring enough to work a lot of hours on their own time to bring people at Fort Benning quality entertainment.

I would also like to encourage people to get over to the Playhouse and check the show out. As the saying goes, try it, you'll like it.

Hooked*

Ugly is only skin deep

By Morticia Figg

In 1616, John Davies of Hereford, England, wrote a poem wherein the following is found:

Beauty's but skin deep; nay, it is not so;

It floats but on the skin beneath the skin

That, like pure air, scarce hides her fullest flow:

It is so subtle, fading, fragile, and thin:

Were the skin-deep, she could not be so shallow

To win but fools her purity to harrow.

Being a plain and simple man, I prefer a similar poem (author unknown) which does not beat around the bush, but gets directly to the point. It goes like this:

Beauty is but skin deep, ugly lies the bone;

Beauty dies and fades away, but ugly holds its own.

I suppose that all of us at one time or another have seen a woman or man at a distance whom we admire for their pleasing physical appearance. However, upon meeting this person, we found that other qualities, or lack of them, took away from their outward appearance. On the other hand, an otherwise plain person may have taken on a more pleasing perspective after we came to know him. Granted, a great number of "pretty" people are very interesting; but the point is, a pleasing physical appearance is no guarantee of a truly "beautiful person."

It is interesting to note that a report in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, volume 20, number 3 (1974), gave the results of an experiment to determine if attractive women have any advantage over unattractive women in scholastic endeavors. The result was that there was no difference, provided the unattractive woman's performance was impressive. However, if her performance was below par, then attractiveness counts.

My attention was recently called to an organization founded in 1973 which goes by the name "Uglies Unlimited" whose headquarters are at 6508 Poco Court, Ft. Worth, Texas 76133. This club boasts approximately 350 members who pay a $2.00 annual membership fee which entitles them to the club newsletter. The club objective is to combat the discrimination that ugly people receive from the forces of what they term "pretty power".

Maybe all of us uglies of the world have a chance after all. I gave some thought to joining this club, but a "friend" suggested that I would probably be required to pay double dues. And even then, my looks would probably set the objectives of the club back a couple of decades. This brings me to the REAL issue in question: "When are we Super-Uglies going to get some help?"

Glad you asked

Do you feel that longer hair styles would improve morale?

David McNeely

Sp4 David McNeely,
Co B, Hqs Cmd

I really believe that longer hair styles would improve morale, however there should be certain restrictions. Longer hair, if it's kept neatly groomed, looks good.

Sp4 John Williams,
Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

Yes, but there must be limitations. For example, beards should be permitted and hair grown an inch over the ears, but all the hair should be neatly styled and combed.

John Williams

Sp4 Darryl Bedenfield,
586th Engr Co (ARB)

Yes, because this is one of the most talked about gripes soldiers have. And if you don't give them anything to gripe about, I think there will be more work and less gripes. Anything is worth a try to get morale improved.

Darryl Bedenfield

Pvt Richard Kinnaman,
Co B, 43rd Engr.

Yes, so they will feel like they're more at home — feel more conforming. That way, when soldiers go to town they won't feel so out of place.

be adopted as standard and issued to the troops; 2) that it be modified and retested; 3) that a larger number be used in extended tests in troop units; 4) that no further consideration be given to the article.

It also appeared that sometimes this strict procedure was waived as when World War II was just underway and then Brig. Gen. Omar Bradley, the School commandant, had a "walkie talkie" handed to him in his office. To his amazement, he talked to a station outside the old Infantry School Building. Immediately, he took the radio to the field (Kelley Hill) with members of the Board. A short test was run, and the radio approved.

About the same time, new helmets were being tested and Gen. Hodges, an avid polo player, was most insistent that it be shaped like a polo helmet. The liner was a problem in carrying the weight of the steel helmet. It was suggested, and it worked, to design the suspension similar to the system used in football helmets.

The Infantry Board has a rich history in testing and evaluating proposed equipment for the Infantry. The diversity of this testing is illustrated by test projects such as the Phillips Pack Saddle in 1920; spiral leggings in 1923; saddler's, carpenter's, and wheelwright's chest in 1935; and low silhouette vehicles in 1944. The lasting impact of the Board's testing is indicated by projects such as the .30 caliber and .50 caliber machine guns, the M14 and M16 rifles and the DRAGON Medium Antitank Assault Weapon System. To date, the Board has completed over 4000 tests of Infantry items.

A major organizational change occurred in 1975 when all branch test boards were assigned to Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). With this switch, more emphasis was placed on testing doctrine, tactics, logistics, and training, and less on material. The Board is now one of TRADOC's nine testing activities and assigned the mission of conducting operational tests of Infantry related weapons and equipment, organizations, tactics and techniques.

Tests at the Board vary in size, scope, tactical context and cost according to the item being tested and the information required from the test.

For the last 76 years, the Board has been concerned with everything the Infantryman shoots, carries, wears, rides in, eats or otherwise uses.

The Board's task has remained constant: to give the soldier superior arms, lighten his load and improve his equipment. In short, it is charged with making a more efficient and effective fighting machine of the Infantry soldier.

An Infantry Board display will be presented in the multimedia room in the lobby of Infantry Hall, Building 4, Monday through Friday.

Infantry Museum adds artifacts

Starting today, Fort Benning's Infantry Museum will display a collection of letters and documents written to or by the late Maj. Gen. Henry L. Benning during the Civil War. The artifacts, which have never been shown at the museum, are on long term loan from the Columbus College Archives.

Among the documents is Benning's personal account of the Battle of Chickamauga in 1863. In the report, Benning cited two of his soldiers for bravery in battle and described them as being "fine fellows."

Another item is a document issued by the Confederate States of America War Department in 1863. The document confirms the promotion of Benning to brigadier general. Also found in the document are orders for Benning to report for duty to Robert E. Lee.

The new exhibits will begin display today in conjunction with Benning's birthday Monday. The documents will be on display near the regular Benning exhibit.

AUSA to hold meeting

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) will hold a spring general membership meeting at the Torch Supper Club, 280 Bypass, Phenix City, Ala. April 6.

A social period will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The buffet dinner will be served at 7:45 p.m. AUSA members and guests are invited, but seating will be limited to 250 because of space. Dress will be coat and tie. Tickets are $8, and are available from unit sergeants major and banks in Columbus and Phenix City or by calling 545-5121.

The keynote speaker will be Lt. Gen. Samuel V. Wilson (ret.), a former high-level intelligence officer whose ties to the intelligence community go back to the World War II office of Strategic Services. Wilson was also an Infantryman, and served in combat with "Merrill's Marauders" in World War II and was an assistant commander of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Wilson is the brother-in-law of the immediate past president of the local AUSA Chapter, Samuel T. Downing, Jr. of Phenix City, and of Hudson J. Downing, associated with Johnson, Love, Space, Smith and Co., Inc. of Columbus, Ga.

ITB barracks to be named for war hero

By Pat Astran and Troy Gray

PFC Jack Hanson

The 1st Infantry Training Brigade will dedicate the 1st Battalion's new barracks in honor of PFC Jack Hanson.

Hanson was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for extreme heroism during the Korean War.

On the night of June 7, 1951, "Fox" Company, in which Jack was a machinegunner, was attacked by a numerically superior Chinese force. 1st Lt. Edward C. Abbott, company commander, ordered his men to fall back and reform on the next hill. Jack maintained his position even though his assistant gunner and three riflemen had been wounded. He told his buddies to "Run while I hold 'em" and continued to fire his machinegun.

Hanson didn't budge even though 57 millimeter recoilless rifle shells and mortars were landing within three feet of his foxhole.

Company F retook the hill the following day and found Jack lying face forward in his foxhole. The ground at his feet was carpeted with 2,000 .50 caliber machinegun cartridges. He was holding a .45 caliber pistol in his right hand, the ammunition clip empty. In his left hand was a blood stained machete. Around him and in front of his position were 22 enemy bodies. At the foot of the hill and in the valley below were several dozen more enemy dead.

This heroic soldier had remained to hold off a vicious attack by the Chinese. This action permitted the evacuation of his wounded buddies and the remainder of his company.

Jack had saved his company. Abbott said, "No one told him to stay but because he did stay, I and a lot of others are alive to tell the story today."

Not all men can be heroes like Jack Hanson, but all soldiers can aspire to his exemplary bravery. The troops who pass through the 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade will now have an outstanding soldier to "Lead the Way"!

Editor's note: In last week's issue of the BAYONET, an ITB barracks dedication article incorrectly identified Marie Hanson Neal of Mobile, Ala., as being Jack Hanson's mother. She is Hanson's cousin.

Fort Benning safe from oil pinch

While gasoline supply cuts to PX service stations nationwide are causing exchange patrons heartburn, Fort Benning will not feel the pinch — at least for the present.

According to Norman Williamson, chief of the Personnel Services Division in DPCA, local PX service stations are conducting business as usual.

"A standby plan is being developed by the Exchange people," explained Williamson, "but they foresee no need to implement it during the next few months."

Elsewhere, Army officials report cutbacks by major suppliers including Texaco and the Sun Oil Co. The cutbacks are forcing a reduction in operating hours and limits on gas sold at each visit in "scattered" areas of the nation, according to DA officials.

Other actions taken by Army and Air Force Exchange Service gas stations include closing stations on some days, closing early when daily supplies run out, closing all but one central station per installation and limiting sales of gasoline for power mowers and other non-automotive needs.

There is no present need for concern locally, Williamson emphasized, because Chevron, which supplies Fort Benning's fuel, is providing 100 percent of 1978 allocations. He did, however, encourage drivers to conserve existing fuel supplies as much as possible by avoiding unnecessary trips.

GI Bill time limit is up for many veterans

Approximately 20,000 Vietnam Era veterans in Georgia will lose their entitlement to GI Bill benefits during the next year.

VA Regional Office Director V. Ralph White said the figure represents the total number of veterans who will have reached the tenth anniversary of their separation from military duty. The law provides veterans with a ten-year time limit to use educational and training benefits.

White said that while some 59 percent of Georgia's veterans have used some or all of their GI Bill rights, there are thousands who can still make at least partial use of their remaining time.

VA estimates that on a nationwide basis more than half the number of veterans who have GI Bill eligibility today will lose it by 1984. "What we're emphasizing here," White said, "is the time factor. To make maximum use of GI Bill rights a veteran must be aware of the ten-year limit and get started well before time runs out."

A typical Vietnam Era veteran, for example, might have left the service in 1973 having earned maximum training or education entitlement. If that same veteran were to embark on a full-time, four-year college program, it should be started this year so that it could be completed by 1983 when the veteran's eligibility expires. In any event, benefits would be payable only until the veteran reached the time limit no matter how far along the program was.

"There are so many ways the GI Bill can be adapted to individual needs and circumstances," White said. "I hate to see anyone lose their rights to this program simply because they let time slip by."

Veterans concerned about their GI Bill benefits status can call the VA Regional Office in Atlanta toll-free, using the following number: Atlanta area 881-1776; statewide 1-800-282-0232.

Mime makes communication an art

By Paula Chomis

Recently at the Springer Opera House in Columbus the Celebration Mime Ensemble gave a performance and a free workshop.

Two members of the six member troupe, Nat White, a wiry young man from Maine, and Victor Azzam, a man with a very expressive face from the Middle East, hosted the workshop.

The word "pantomime" means to mimic. With that in mind one might wonder why anyone would want to become a mime. When asked that same question Nat White replied, "It is a form of expression for me. I derive joy out of relating to the people I perform in front of and the people I teach. I have the chance to become the people I dislike and the animals I admire". With that he became a monkey and chattered away.

In pantomime, the body is the main instrument of communication. To achieve his goal of communicating ideas without speaking, the mime must be in complete control of his body.

Doing stretching exercises daily enables the mime to have the flexibility and agility he or she needs to contort their body into whatever position they are in the mood for. A mime must be able to relax completely the part of the body not in use.

The ability to move together is also very important to a mime. Both have to know their partner's body almost as well as they know their own. When one is becoming an object, such as a telephone, there is not enough time to think about what is happening, or the mood is lost.

The lines the body forms is important in capturing the expression of movement. When pantomiming two people saying, "I'm sorry", the lines are considered soft as opposed to somebody pantomiming fencing, where the lines are considered hard.

Most pantomimes are done on a bare stage in complete silence. Often a single item of dress is used to communicate to the audience who the character is. For instance, a fireman's hat. Props can be used to set the stage. This lets the audience know where the scene is taking place.

If anyone is interested in becoming a mime, the person to write to is Allan Day, the manager of the Celebration Mime Ensemble. The complete address is — Celebration Mime School, South Paris, Maine 04281.

Monday is General Benning Day

Columbus Mayor Harry Jackson has declared April 2 as General Henry L. Benning Day.

In honor of the day, the Lizzy Rutherford Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) will hold a memorial at Benning's gravesite in Linwood Cemetery, April 1 at 2 p.m.

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, Benning assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, will be the guest speaker during the ceremony.

General Henry L. Benning

Members of the UDC will place an iron cross on Benning's grave. Dressed in Confederate uniforms, members of the James H. Warner Chapter of the Children of the Confederacy will perform their special ritual.

Only Confederate general

The idea for observing General Benning Day originated with a member of the UDC, Betty Taylor. She said, "As far as our organization knows, Benning is the only Confederate general buried in this area. We thought something should be done in his honor, because he was truly a great man."

Benning was born on April 2, 1814 in Columbia County, Ga. At the age of 20, he graduated from Franklin College (now the University of Georgia) in Athens, Ga.

After graduation, Benning studied law in Talbotton, Ga., and was admitted to the Bar in 1835. In 1837, he was made Solicitor General of the Chattahoochee Circuit and was later elected to and served in the General Assembly of Georgia. In 1853, Benning was elected as judge of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Began in Civil War

At the beginning of the Civil War, Benning entered the Confederate Army as colonel of the 7th Regiment of Georgia Infantry. Approximately one year later he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general.

Benning participated in the battles of Second Manassas, Sharpsburg, Chickamauga, and the Wilderness. He was severely wounded at the Wilderness and never regained the use of his arm.

He was known as "Old Rock" by his troops for his calmness and daring in battle. In the final days before the surrender of the Confederate forces, he was promoted to major general.

After the war, Benning returned to Columbus and practiced law until his death July 10, 1875.

Atlanta ROTC cadets learn from Engineers

By Gary Jones

The 586th Engr Co (ARB) gave 84 visiting ROTC cadets from the Atlanta University Center a demonstration of the Assault Ribbon Bridge here last Friday.

The cadets came here for their annual field trip. On the first day of their three day visit last week the cadets watched the best platoon of the 586th (the 2nd platoon) construct the assault ribbon bridge.

"The 2nd platoon was chosen for the operation because their time of seven minutes to put together a five float raft was the best in the 586th," explained Sgt. Chuck Harper, 586th operations sergeant.

The 586th, the only full time ribbon bridge company in the continental United States, demonstrated several different ways of putting the ribbon bridge in the Chattahoochee River.

First, the cadets watched as sections of the ribbon bridge or raft were airlifted in.

The huge helicopters, from the 478th Avn Co (sky crane), caused the cadets to hold on to their hats as the water-filled winds from the river came whipping past them.

After the first two sections were airlifted in, the 2nd platoon engineers demonstrated their versatility from the backs of two trucks.

When all the sections of ribbon bridge (raft) had been fitted together, with the help of the 27-foot erection boats and their crews, the raft was brought to shore for the cadets to have a ride.

Following the engineer's demonstration, the cadets ran the obstacle course and saw various other local sights before returning home to Atlanta on Sunday.

Engineers test skill during ARTEP

By Gary Jones

The annual ARTEP for the 43rd Engr Bn (Combat) (Heavy) proved once again that they could successfully complete their assigned tasks under combat conditions.

This year's ARTEP tested the engineers in many different areas of their job.

One task the engineers performed was to put into use their water purification unit in order to supply the battalion with water. They drew water from a local creek and ran it through the unit to make it safe to drink.

A more combat orientated task the 43rd performed was to construct various tank and vehicle barriers. One such barrier is called a tank ditch. This obstacle is designed to make an enemy tank make at least three passes at the barrier before being able to cross.

The idea behind this is to give the TOW gunner time to sight and destroy the enemy tanks.

Another tank barrier built by the 43rd Engr Bn during the ARTEP was called a crater. The crater is similar to the tank ditch except that it is constructed with explosives instead of engineer equipment.

During the exercise, the 43rd Engineers removed two aging bridges, replacing the one at Harp's Creek with a ford and building a culvert in place of the other.

"Working in the field is tough but that's all part of the job," remarked one engineer near the close of the exercise.

USASMA selection board to meet

A U. S. Army Sergeants Major Academy (USASMA) selection board will convene on July 31 to consider eligible NCO's for the USASMA nonresident course, beginning in April 1980.

The program of instruction for the nonresident course closely parallels that of the resident course. Both courses are equally accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and the American Council on Education. Both courses receive equal consideration in all personnel management decisions.

No service obligation

Soldiers who have completed or have been selected for the nonresident course are eliminated from consideration to attend the resident course. Soldiers completing the nonresident course will not incur a service obligation.

Prerequisites for enrollment are:

- RA NCO in an active status.
- Grade E-7 (P), E-8 (P), and E-9.
- Have completed not more than 23 years service (waiverable). Previous applicants meeting these prerequisites who have not been selected are urged to reapply.

Applications from E-7 personnel not on the E-8 promotion list cannot be accepted. No waiver will be granted. The application must be submitted through the immediate commander who will indorse with recommendation and forward to the Commander, MILPERCEN.

Army photojournalist named as photographer of the year

Sp4 Manuel Gomez, a photojournalist with the office of the chief of public affairs, (OCPA), has been named the 1978 military photographer of the year, DoD officials announced this week.

The 16th annual competition was sponsored by the National Press Photographers Association (NPPA) and the University of Missouri in cooperation with the Department of Defense, officials said.

Gomez, the first soldier to win the honor since 1970, will receive the "Columns" trophy, a Nikon camera, and a share of the praise given the NPPA news and magazine photographers of the year. Awards will be presented during journalism week at the University of Missouri, April 16-20.

Eligibility to compete for the title requires a portfolio of twelve photos and picture stories with at least one entry in each of the eight categories. This year 1,197 photographs were en-

ATTN: DAPC-EPZ-HB, 2461 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22331. Commanders having custody of personnel records will ensure that applications are administratively correct and contain a current copy of the soldier's DA forms 2 and 2-1.

The following procedures apply to submission of special complete-the-record SEERs:

- Special SEER should not be submitted solely because a soldier is applying for the USASMA nonresident course.
- Reference C established an optional "complete-the-record" SEER for soldiers in the zone of consideration for DA centralized selection boards.

Applicants who otherwise meet the criteria for this report must have completed three months in current duty assignment as of May 31, 1979. The ending month will be shown in part of the "complete-the-record" SEERs. The reports must be forwarded to Commander, U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center, ATTN: PCRE-OE, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249 so as to arrive no later than June 30, 1979. "Complete-the-record" SEERs not in accordance with the provisions of reference C and this message will be returned.

Letter to President of USASMA

Soldiers meeting the prerequisites and applying for the USASMA nonresident course may write a letter to the president of the USASMA selection board inviting attention to any matter of record at Headquarters, Department of the Army, that he/she feels is important in the consideration of his/her record.

• Communications will be addressed to president, DA USASMA Selection Board, C/O Commander, USAREREC, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249. Individuals should not include any file materials with letter. File materials will be sent separately IAW AR 640-10.

• Communications must be received no later than July 1, 1979.

• As announced in Reference D, submission of third party letters of recommendation are not authorized. Any such letters received will not be considered by the board.

tered by 143 photographers from all five military services, officials said.

In addition to placing first in portfolio competition, Gomez won first place in the picture story (military) category, second place in feature (military) and sports, and honorable mention in feature (non-military) for a total of five awards, officials added.

At present, Gomez is assigned to the Command Information Unit, OCPA, at the Pentagon. He is responsible for the photojournalism portion of the Army's newspaper seminars currently being conducted throughout the U.S. (ARNEWS)

OCS tradition has candidates 'turning blue'

Officer candidates from 51st Co march on York Field during their Senior Status Review.

by Suellen Cochran

Officer candidates in 51st Co, 5th Bn, TSB, "turned blue" last Friday during a pass-in-review on York Field.

No, these BIOCC students do not have heart problems. The expression means they have reached senior status with only four weeks to commissioning.

"Turning blue" is a tradition of OCS that can be traced back to when the school was 23 weeks long and for Infantry officer candidates only. At that time, the final 12 weeks was the "turning blue" period because that's when the students began their Infantry specialized training. Now this material is covered in the separate Infantry Officers Basic Course (IOBC).

In 1973, all Army officer candidate schools were consolidated into the one at Fort Benning and it became Branch Immaterial Officers Candidate Course (BIOCC). Each branch then began its own basic officers course.

The school was shortened to 14 weeks and the last four weeks were designated as the senior status period. The candidates are recognized by the Infantry blue helmet liners, white scarves with blue OCS emblems and the blue felt background with the OCS brass.

"As seniors they are in a more professional type atmosphere, rather than one of training," explained 51st Co 1st Sgt. August F. Klamar. "By this time, they already know what's going on. The last four weeks are more or less used to begin our processing and to add the final touches," he continued.

The ceremonies are planned and carried out by the candidates. Officiating officer was School Brigade Commander Col. George Geczy Jr.

One hundred and twenty-six candidates stood tall and proud as Geczy read the official orders of senior status. Then the senior status streamer was put on the guidon and the students passed in review.

Following the ceremony the students and guests went to a reception at the Officer's Club where cake and punch were served.

Senior activities

Celebration ends with dance

By Suellen Cochran

Senior status activities for the 51st Officer Candidate School (OCS) Company continued last Saturday with passes for all and a senior formal in the evening at the Officers' Club.

The formal receiving line included Brigade Commander Col. George Geczy and wife; Battalion Commander Col. Johnnie W. Britton Jr. and wife; 51st Company Commander Capt. Lester H. Albers and wife; and the company's student council president, Senior Candidate Langford W. Fowler and wife. Senior Candidate Steve Harrington acted as adjutant, introducing the receiving line to the guests.

Tradition was observed throughout the evening to serve as a student's training aid. "The senior formal is an opportunity to learn about military social functions," Albers said. "This is something that all officers must know," he continued.

The color guard, ushers and servers wore uniforms representing the Army from 1776 to 1976. Toasts were made to the President of the United States, The U. S. Army, the School Brigade and to the "lovely ladies."

Following dinner, the candidates had their chance to "get even" with their tactical officers (Tacs) with a skit performed as a spoof. Entitled "Snow White and the Seven Tacs," the satire made light of the various identifying characteristics that made each officer unique. The candidates' wives made the costumes.

The evening ended at 2 a.m. after hours of disco dancing.

Reaching senior status was important to all 51st Co students. Senior Candidate James Joy voiced his views of the new status, "I think it's a milestone in the program, but I can't say it's a milestone in my life until the bar is pinned on. At any rate, I am finally beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel."

1st ITB recognizes Cook of Quarter

By Pat Astran

Sp4 Constance Louise Landes of Co A, 1st Bn., 1st ITB has a reason to be proud of her red, white and blue hat.

Landes competed in the competition of the 1st ITB where a board selects the soldier who has demonstrated knowledge of food preparation, cooking, food service, and general military knowledge.

After being selected as the 1st ITB's Cook of the Quarter, Landes appeared before the installation "Cook of the Quarter" board. Also, each contender later had to prepare the same dish to help the judges determine who was the best cook.

Landes said, "I will remember that recipe as long as I live." The recipe is for pork chop suey, and was prepared in accordance with the Army recipe card in sufficient quantity to serve 100 people. She began with 32 lbs. of pork, first deboning the pork butts — then cutting it into one inch wide strips and slicing them into pieces one and one-half inches long.

Then other properly chopped, sliced and measured ingredients were added. These included celery, onions, molasses, soy sauce, cornstarch, salt, pepper, water and bean sprouts.

The letter of commendation from Fort Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, was presented to Landes by the Deputy Post Commander, Col. Richard W. McKee. Landes also received letters of commendation from Col. Carl W. Stiner, commander, 1st ITB and her battalion commander, Lt. Col. Robert B. Thomas.

Landes stated, "We work a lot of long hours and the job requires dedication so the soldiers will be pleased with their meals. Not only does dedication make it all worthwhile, but so do the compliments."

Livsey, Rogers speak

Fort Benning's top soldiers discuss Infantry School's past, present, future

EDITOR'S NOTE: In recognition of the 72nd anniversary of The Infantry School Sunday, The BAYONET sent 2nd Lt. Dale Wilson to interview Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, school commandant, and Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant, about the school's past, present and future.

BAYONET: Next week marks the 72nd anniversary of the Infantry School. Has there been any radical change in the school's mission during that time?

LIVSEY: I don't think there's been any radical change in the mission. But, because warfare changes and other factors influence the way you operate, we've taken on additional missions here. The exportation of training is one.

At one time the Infantry School was almost 100 percent resident. There were some correspondence courses, but nothing significant was leaving the post. Today, we're in this massive business of exporting training to the field — such things as SQTs, ARTEPs, "how-to-fight" manuals, etc.

The other added mission of great significance is combat developments from the user's point of view. Several years ago when they did away with the Continental Army Command and created TRADOC and FORSCOM, this responsibility was given to the various service schools.

Today we are closely monitoring the development of new Infantry equipment like the Infantry Fighting Vehicle.

ROGERS: That's where we're at. Our mission has always been to train Infantry leaders. But, today, we are more involved in developing Infantry doctrine and hardware requirements to support Infantrymen worldwide than in the past. More work is also being done to develop training materials. There may have been a different emphasis, a different focus from time to time, but our mission today is the same.

BAYONET: What is the major aspect of the Infantry being focused on by the school at this time?

ROGERS: Combined arms operations. We talk about the Infantry School, the Armor School, the Field Artillery School. But, it isn't that at all — it's combined arms. The focus here at the Infantry School is to emphasize combined arms operations — not just light Infantry, or mech Infantry, or Airborne or Ranger.

LIVSEY: We've been told our major focus is on Europe and NATO, so we, of necessity, have been emphasizing mech Infantry here at the school. And we've been doing it well — so well that I've directed we make certain we don't overlook all the other facets of Infantry in combined arms training, and provide a well-balanced training program.

BAYONET: In your personal opinion, what is the single most important course offered by the school?

LIVSEY: All our courses are important, but, if you were to pin me down, I'd have to say the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course. In that course we train NCOs to be platoon sergeants, and I can't see any Army being effective in combat without good platoon sergeants.

ROGERS: I agree with Gen. Livsey: that's a difficult question to answer. Each course we teach has a unique purpose. But, in my personal opinion — and that's all this is — the officer basic course. It's our opportunity to give the Infantry officer the foundation he needs.

Through the years the officer basic course has gone from a 16-week, classroom-oriented course to an eight-week overview course that hardly taught an officer which end of the rifle to hold, to the present 14-week, performance-oriented course designed to make an officer a platoon leader.

We try to train each lieutenant to Skill Level 4 (platoon sergeant — Ed.) using the Soldiers Manual as a guide. We're not teaching much on administrative, logistical or garrison-type operations. It's all tactically oriented with a little bit on maintenance and other essential skills thrown in.

BAYONET: Has modern technology made the business of training Infantrymen more difficult than it was 10, 20, 30 or even 50 years ago?

LIVSEY: Gunpowder made training Infantrymen more difficult. But, I have every confidence the equipment we're bringing into the inventory will be completely trainable.

"...the physical standards for Ranger have been increased. Airborne standards are about the same as they've always been. OCS? What's been cut out of OCS is the harrassment, and that's good."

"Our doctrine will remain basically the same. What will change will be the capability of the Infantry to participate as a member of the combined arms team."

"Every day we get more women assigned here, and they do super jobs. They're working as instructors in military intelligence, as tactical officers in OCS, as instructors in the Airborne Dept. . ."

"All our courses are important, but, if you were to pin me down, I'd have to say the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course. . . I can't see any Army being effective in combat without good platoon sergeants."

"Gunpowder made training Infantrymen more difficult. But, I have every confidence the equipment we're bringing into the inventory will be completely trainable."

"I guess we're at a 'Run, Spot, Run. See Dick and Jane' stage with this. I just think time is precious. We don't have the time or the people to do everything we need to do, so we've got to do better with what we've got."

What I'm really interested in, however, is finding ways to make our training more interesting and less repetitive. We really don't know how much repetition is needed, but I don't think there's any reason to spend 15 hours presenting material that can be effectively taught in two.

I guess we're at a "Run, Spot, run. See Dick and Jane" stage with this. I just think time is precious. We don't have the time or the people to do everything we need to do, so we've got to do better with what we've got.

BAYONET: Will the introduction of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle drastically alter mechanized Infantry tactics?

ROGERS: No, our doctrine will remain basically the same. What will change will be the capability of the Infantry to participate as a member of the combined arms team. It will give us increased mobility comparable to the XM-1 tank — something we don't have in the M-113, which can hardly keep pace with the current M-60 series tanks.

LIVSEY: That's right. But the incredible speed of the combined arms team built around the XM-1 and the IFV will require some different tactical thinking to maximize the use of that equipment. We're working closely with Fort Knox and the Armor School on this.

When you think combined arms, though, it's not just tanks and Infantry running around on the battlefield. It's the orchestration of combat power — to bring that power to bear at the point of decision. That's not easy. I tell our young captains they've got to be good Infantrymen, but to think combined arms. Know how to use it all — the tanks, the artillery, smoke, electronic warfare — all of it.

BAYONET: Some people say the quality of instruction at the school isn't as good as it was in the past. They also claim the "elite" courses such as OCS, Airborne and Ranger aren't as physically demanding. How would you answer these people?

ROGERS: I would not agree that the quality of instruction is not what it used to be. We haven't been able to carry on with what I call the "spit and polish" you used to see here when every rock was painted and every instructor was in starched fatigues and had a pointer for this and a pointer for that and a man to move this chart and a man to move that chart. We were manpower rich, so we were able to do a lot of things that, from an appearance standpoint, looked better.

But the subject matter and the manner it is being presented today is as good as and perhaps better than it was in the past. The lessons are very well prepared and presented.

As for courses being less physically demanding, the physical standards for Rangers have been increased. Airborne standards are about the same as they've always been. OCS? What's been cut out of OCS is the harrassment, and that's good. The pressure, the demands, the high standards, all that is still in the OCS program, the same as when I was a tactical officer in 1957. What I don't see today is the abuse of candidates.

LIVSEY: Agreed. I went Airborne in '56, and I think it's as physical now as it ever was. The same with Ranger training. But, let's be honest. I know we've got some people who aren't in shape. Still, on the whole, our people are physically fit. A few years ago a five-mile run was unheard of. Today it's a regular event.

In the way of instruction, what I'm interested in is practicality. I'm not impressed with leg-slapping pointers. They have nothing to do with training soldiers to fight. Hands-on training is much better than sitting in a classroom watching an instructor in starched khakis.

I'd much rather have a lieutenant who knows what a real motor pool looks like than how to describe one from a chart he's memorized.

BAYONET: How about the coed aspects of OCS and Airborne?

ROGERS: Having women in OCS and Airborne has not made those programs any different. OCS is the same program, has the same standards and curriculum. Nothing special has been added for women. They're doing exactly the same things to the same standards as the men.

Now, from time to time you may have to make some accommodations for the physical ability of a woman to perform some of the physical fitness training, but they come along. By the time they graduate they're at the same point as the men.

In Airborne the same rule applies. It's certainly no easier there. Women are Airborne soldiers, and they're treated like it. The only exception is a slightly modified physical training program.

BAYONET: Do you foresee women playing a more active role as members of the staff and faculty?

ROGERS: Every day we get more women assigned here, and they do super jobs. They're working as instructors in military intelligence, as tactical officers in OCS, as instructors in the Airborne Dept., as training developers in the Directorate of Training Development and as planners in Combat Developments and as staff officers. Just about any department you mention has women soldiers in it.

BAYONET: What do you predict for the school in the future?

LIVSEY: I see an expansion of the things we're doing now. New weapons systems will be developed. We'll see more exploitation of technology. We'll have to constantly re-evaluate our tactics and doctrine to keep pace.

The Infantry School of the future will remain a bastion of professionalism to handle all that.

I think Building 4 will remain the same, but the thinking inside will have to keep pace with what's going on in the outside world.

Training today focuses on preparing Infantrymen to be part of the combined arms team.

USAIS: training leaders for 72 years

The U.S. Army Infantry School was established in 1907, but at that point it was a far cry from what it is today.

After the Revolutionary War it was realized the Army needed a school to train officers to lead large bodies of troops and to serve on large unit staffs.

On April 1, 1907, the Army established the School of Musketry at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif. The school was moved to Fort Sill, Okla. in January, 1913, and four years later the name was changed to the Infantry School of Arms.

World War I keyed interest in the school and in 1918, Columbus, Ga., was selected as the new site for the Infantry School. In 1920, after the post-war demobilization, the Infantry School received Congressional authorization. This step broadened the entire mission of the school from subjects pertaining to marksmanship to the whole field of modern weapons and tactics.

Throughout the 1930s, classes at the Infantry School were being modified and consolidated until, when war broke out in the 1940s, the Infantry School offered 26 different courses.

The Korean conflict brought even more changes to the school. By 1951, the School listed 247 different courses ranging from weapons and small unit tactics to defensive combat and combined arms teamwork.

The Infantry School got into full swing during the 1960s and the Vietnam War. In 1964, the Infantry

School moved into its present six-story, $10 million complex.

Throughout its history, the Infantry School has built its curriculum on demands and necessities, as well as experience in the field. The School's mission has always been to train the soldier. Today, the mission remains the same: to provide the Army with Infantry soldiers, especially leaders, who can function with precision and effectiveness.

Lavoie Manor Chapel to host kids' crusade

The Fort Benning Lavoie Manor Chapel will sponsor the Charles Steger International Kids' Crusade April 6-8.

The special 90-minute programs are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. April 6 and 7 and 11 a.m. April 8 at the Lavoie Manor Chapel. Performances will be different each evening.

The Crusade is an interfaith program presented by Chuck and Lois Steger of Red Oak, Tex. They are designed to portray Christian living as an exciting way of life.

Since 1971, the Stegers, along with their two children, have been on the road presenting Christ to children and adults alike. They do this through means of illustrated songs, gospel magic, chalk art drawings, puppets and stories with surprise lighting effects.

Stars of the program are Leo the Lion, friends from the Sesame Street program and others.

Everyone is invited to attend; however, all children under the age of five must be accompanied by an adult. Admission is free.

Columbus Mayor addresses grads

Columbus Mayor Harry Jackson was reviewing officer and guest speaker at the weekly 1st Infantry Training Brigade graduation last Friday.

Soldiers graduating last week were participants in the Two Station Training test and were assigned to Fort Knox, Ky. for the first six weeks of training before coming to Benning for the final six weeks of the training cycle.

They were assigned to Co D, commanded by Capt. Charles Darwin and to Co E, commanded by Capt. Stephen Livingston. Both companies are elements of the 5th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Robert Hayes.

An unusual feature of the graduation was the presentation of the Eagle Excellence award to Co D. This award is presented to a company that achieves a maximum score on the Advanced Physical Fitness Test on the first attempt. This is only the second time in the history of the Brigade that this has occurred.

Before graduation exercises, Mayor Jackson breakfasted with the troops in Kinsman Barracks.

PFC Willie H. Pulliam, Co E, 5th Bn, 1st ITB was named Distinguished Graduate.

Pvt. Lawrence L'Hommedieu was named Honor Graduate

The Army Physical Fitness Training Award was awarded to Privates Franklin W. Lane, Robert Pace and James H. Davis.

Sgt. Luther Tookes was named Distinguished Drill Sergeant and SSgt. Billy M. Henderson was named Honor Drill Sergeant.

Check cashing

Where can you go to cash a check on Fort Benning?

Editor's note: The following article is published in answer to the often-asked question "Where can I cash a check on post?"

There are three banks on post with the following schedule:

1st National Bank — Bldg 16 — 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Mon.-Fri.

Columbus Bank & Trust Co. — Bldg 16 — 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Mon.-Fri.

National Bank of Fort Benning — Bldg 109 — 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Mon.-Fri.; 4-6 p.m. Fri. only Patio Window — Bldg 109 — 2-5 p.m. Mon.-Thurs.; 2-4 p.m. Fri. only.

Mall Branch — Bldg 9230 — 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Mon.-Thurs.; 3-5 p.m. Mon.-Thurs.; 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Mon.-Thurs.; 3-6 p.m. Fri. only; 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Sat. only.

All post banks are closed on federal holidays and on Sundays.

Check cashing services are also available at other activities. The Officers and Noncommissioned Officers Club will cash checks for members and transients during normal operating hours. The Officers' Club will cash checks up to $50 for members and $25 for transient officers.

The NCO Club and its branches will cash checks up to $30 for members and $20 for transients. Bowling alleys will cash personal checks with a limit of $5.

The Exchange offers a check cashing service to its authorized patrons. The Main Mall Exchange will cash personal checks during operating hours with a limit of $50 per family per day. Other Exchanges will cash checks for the amount of purchase plus $10.

Patrons should realize that the Exchange must place limits on the amount of money it can have tied up in check cashing funds. To provide the same check cashing services at all branches that it provides at the Mall, the Exchange would have to increase these check cashing funds which would limit the amount of inventory and stock assortment in the Exchange, and thus would reduce earnings and welfare fund contributions.

No activity will cash checks if the patron is on the dishonored check roster. One must be a club member (or transient with appropriate orders) to cash a check at either club. Persons seeking to cash checks at any activity should realize they must meet the check cashing criteria as established by that activity. Check cashing is a privilege, not a right. Protect it.

Anyone having questions on check cashing may call Personnel Services Division, DPCA, at 545-5931.

I&A Office last resort for EM

An officer at Alexandria, Va. calls it the soldiers' "Court of Last Resort" for many military personnel actions. Although this description implies a desperate appeal, thousands of soldiers each year discover that having their "cases" heard pays off.

No appointment needed

The "court" is MILPERCEN'S Interview and Assistance Office, where enlisted members can visit unannounced and attempt to have assignments changed, obtain compassionate reassignments and arrange to serve in or avoid special duty assignments.

Whether a court or interview room is imagined, the office actually is neither. Instead, it resembles a spacious lounge that is well decorated and simple.

As many as 300 enlisted members visit here during an average week in the peak months from July through October. The typical visitor is an E4 or E5. Most want to change an assignment order and many are on leave within a couple weeks or days of reporting to a new station.

Commonly, soldiers want to avoid an overseas PCS. Some on compassionate grounds, some for financial reasons and others because they simply don't want to go overseas.

'Give me Hawaii'

In contrast, many want one of several "choice" assignments, mostly Hawaii, but also in demand are Fort Carson, Colo., and areas in Calif. and Fla.

Others want to avoid areas they think are too costly, like Germany, Wash., D.C., San Francisco and many large cities.

Many other soldiers visit here in hopes of reversing a local decision on retirement, discharges, reenlistment bars, MOS reclassifications or having a "bad" EER upgraded or removed from a record.

As its name implies, the Interview and Assistance Office does just that. It listens to soldiers' problems and requests and refers these soldiers to their MOS management office, compassionate reassignment section or the specific MILPERCEN activity that can help them. It helps cut red tape and makes sure that soldiers get what they came for, or an explanation of why they didn't.

Compassionate reassignments

Among soldiers who visit here seeking compassionate reassignments, the official said, about half are able to get what they wanted.

Getting help from the "top" doesn't mean you have to personally visit here. You may also write or call.

If visiting in person, you can find the office in room 476 of the Hoffman One Building, 2461 Eisenhower Avenue, Alexandria, Va. 22332.

Keep number handy

If calling, dial Autovon 221-7792/3/4, or commercial (202) 325-7792/3/4, or write to the Interview and Assistance office at the above address.

MILPERCEN officials caution that soldiers who drive here often get lost or have their cars towed because they don't park in areas reserved for visitors. They advise visitors to keep the office's phone number handy for asking directions and checking on legal parking. (ARNEWS)

Not your average dog show

The use of dogs in combat is as old as war itself. In a peacetime Army, dogs also serve an important role.

The Army is currently using four types of dogs: patrol, bomb detector, drug detector and sentry.

The post Provost Marshall's office uses all but the sentry dog and recently gave a public demonstration, using members of the 139th M.P. Co, to show how well-trained their dogs are and how they are used.

The dogs used here are trained at the Department of Defense Dog Center at Lackland AFB in San Antonio, Tex. The Center trains and deploys hundreds of dogs annually to both military and civilian law enforcement agencies.

The use of dogs in police work is a relatively new concept, according to SSgt. William Carr, 139th training NCO. However, the patrol/detector dog has become an important tool to law enforcement personnel. Dogs give police officers a non-lethal means of apprehending criminal offenders by pursuing, attacking and holding offenders who resist apprehension.

Police dogs clear and search buildings, large open areas, track fleeing criminals, lost children and other persons who, for humanitarian reasons, must be located by authorities. But perhaps the most important reason for using police dogs is that they provide a strong psychological deterrent to crime.

Both handlers and dogs undergo 11 weeks of training before actually going to work. "To take a 'green' handler and a 'green' dog and teach them to work effectively as a team costs roughly $12,000," said Carr.

Benning currently has 16 dogs "on hand," according to Carr, and others have returned to school for refresher courses. Carr explained that the only dogs that periodically go through refresher courses are bomb dogs.

While most of the older dogs will work with more than one person, Carr said that new dogs are basically loyal and obedient with only one handler. "If a dog's handler ETSs or PCSs, the dog often needs a cooling off period before he'll accept anyone else," Carr noted.

He added that dogs are kept until "physically unable to do the job. Usually about 11 years."

Monte, a patrol dog, goes through his paces on the exercise and confidence course.

At least one spectator, Christopher Lowen, son of Sgt. Gary Lowen of the 139th M.P. Co, wasn't intimidated by the dogs' demonstration.

Sowers takes first at Follow Me handicap

Harold Sowers' 69-75 scores were good enough to take first place in last weekend's annual handicap tournament held at the Follow Me Golf Club using both the Pineside and Lakeside courses.

Bill Thomas, five strokes back with a two-day 149 total, was runnerup in the championship flight. Lee Howard and Tom Suitt rounded out that bracket by posting two-days scores of 149 and 150.

Other winners were: First Flight — D. Pullman (75-71-146), R. Orton (73-75-148), J. Henderson (69-79-148) and C. Roush (74-75-149); Second Flight — L. Marcotte (72-72-144), G. Goodwin (74-72-146), R. Williams (67-80-147) and B. Heshizer (72-76-148); Third Flight — T. Dellinger (72-64-136), R. Goodwin (65-73-138), H. Johnson (70-70-140) and D. Williams (68-75-143); Fourth Flight — J. Eley (70-75-145), F. Heady (66-79-145), A. Paison (73-75-148) and W. Lutz (76-75-151); Fifth Flight — T. Smith (68-75-143), K. Miller (70-77-147), G. McDonald (69-79-148) and C. Garwood (73-76-149) and Sixth Flight — D. Moody (69-73-141), W. Ballard (69-76-145), T. Morris (73-73-146) and R. Keating (70-79-149).

Benning Karate Club to hold belt testing

The Fort Benning Karate Club will hold testing for various belts on April 14 at the Officers Wives Club lounge located on Ingersol Rd.

Thirty karate students will be tested beginning at 1 p.m. The students will be tested in various levels of skill and performance.

For more information about the competition as well as the Fort Benning Karate Club, contact Phil Wargo at 545-5975.

Benning Orienteers off and running

The members of the newly formed Fort Benning Orienteering Club ran their first competition this past weekend at FDR State Park. Nine members of the club ran against a field of 40 on the two-day meet and captured six of the top ten slots. Results of the meet were:

Bill Cheatum, Oconnee O Club, Athens, Georgia.

John Scales, Oconnee O Club, Athens, Georgia.

Bill Gifford, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Steve Senkovitch, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Paul Stuart, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

John Taylor, Independent, Atlanta, Georgia.

Julia Atkins, Oconnee O Club, Athens, Georgia.

Fred Adamus, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Dan Telfair, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Bill Barker, Fort Benning O Club, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Also running on the senior level course from the Fort Benning O Club were Ralph Powell and Mark Earley from Fort Benning and Curtis Jordon, a civilian member of the club from Columbus, Georgia.

Running the beginners course were Edie Honek and Russell Petrino, both from Fort Benning.

The club is now preparing for its next two meets, the 7th of April in Atlanta and the 29th of April in Watkinsville. They are continuing to recruit and train with an aim of building a well-rounded, running team of all ages and both sexes. The Orienteers normally hold classes and club meetings on Thursday evenings and field training sessions on Saturday morning. Potential orienteers should call LTC Dan Telfair at 545-5754/4214/4180 or 689-4802.

Boxing team underway

Anyone interested in being on the post boxing team can sign up now at the Sports Office, Bldg. 394 at Doughboy Stadium.

The team will start training to compete in National AAU matches as well as taking on other military posts.

Starting soon, Fort Benning will provide "boxing smokers" at the Harmony Church Field House for the military and civilian community.

Horace Harrington, ex-Army boxer, will coach the team.

Doughgirls hold tryouts

The Fort Benning Doughgirls Softball Team will hold their first tryouts April 11 at 6 p.m. at Gowdy Field.

All active duty women are urged to come try out for the team. If enough women try out, two teams will be formed. The Doughgirls will compete in the Columbus Recreation Softball League.

For more information, contact Hezzie Baines, coach, at 544-2785.

Bradley Library Run April 1

In celebration of National Library Week, the Bradley Memorial Library is holding a 5,000 meter run starting in front of the library at 2 p.m.

Books will be given to the top two finishers in each age group and T-shirts will go to third and fourth place finishers.

Pre-registration is free. For more information contact the library at 327-0213.

10,000 Meter Heart Fund Race

Three-hundred and twenty-seven runners dashed along the Lakebottom areas March 24 during the 10-kilometer Heart Fund Road Race. The cool morning and slight winds made it a perfect day for racing.

Dave Fields did it again placing first overall and first in his age group with the time of 32 minutes and 58 seconds. George Gilkes and Tom Coniglio followed, placing fourth and fifth.

Julie Casey ran a personal best placing first overall in the women's division with the time of 40 minutes and 2 seconds. Susan Cruce ran well placing second in the 20 to 29 age division. Marilyn Hicks placed second in the 30 to 39 age bracket and Beatrice LaVoie placed second in the over 50 age group.

In the men's 20 to 24 age group Steve Hoagland was first, Tony Moore was second, and Jerry McCrom was third. George Gilkes placed second in the 25 to 29 age group and Tom Coniglio placed third. In the 30 to 35 age group, Thomas Armeil placed second. Fort Benning runners took the 35 to 39 age group with Dave Fields, Terry Bell and John Gonzales placing third. In the 40 to 44 age group Fred Dyer and William Schuler placed second and third. John LaVoie and Bill Weekley took the over 50 age group placing first and second. In total, 17 Benning affiliated runners placed in age groups out of 33 age group finishers.

Runner's profile

Weekley goes for the long one

Bill Weekley

By Julie Casey

Mild-mannered postman Bill Weekley walks a 13-mile route six days a week and runs 50 to 60 miles a week preparing for upcoming marathons (26 miles and 385 yards).

Running marathons is a hobby recently developed by 52-year-old Weekley. "I have always run. When I was a kid I used to run everywhere. I also spent eight years with the Airborne Department. You know how running goes around there," commented the retired sergeant first class. After retirement, he continued running and just decided to run a marathon.

"After my first marathon I said I would never do it again, but I did," he said. "Now I really enjoy marathons except for the last few miles. I usually blow an engine on about the 23-mile point."

He commented that he enjoys the longer races because it takes him a while to warm up.

"I really enjoy racing. You run along and talk to all the people and have a good time. I like to hear people on the sidelines say, 'look at that old man passing those young men.' It makes me feel young," commented the 3 hour and 18 minute marathon man.

His wife, Joyce, worried about Bill hurting himself, but was assured that he would take care of himself.

"You read about all these addicted runners neglecting their families, but that isn't the case here. He includes me in his races and that makes a difference," she said, "so many husbands exclude their wives."

"She usually helps out at the races. She is really experienced. One time they gave her the watches," he added.

"I really enjoy going to races with him. We just take a couple of days and enjoy ourselves," commented Joyce, who walks three miles a day herself.

Bill added that he feels a lot better since he began running and that he is a lot less stiff than he used to be.

"My goals are to run every Columbus race plus two marathons. Mostly I plan to go on running as long as I can. You have to do something to occupy yourself and I can't think of a better way," he said.

Future Army uniforms on tour

Fort Benning personnel will soon get a chance to see what some of the Army's future uniforms may look like.

Representatives of Natick Research and Development Command will provide a glimpse of the future through a "road show" of several proposed uniforms, including what could become the women's uniform in the 1980's, according to DA officials.

The road show is scheduled for April 6. Garments to be shown include the women's blue uniform, enlisted men's blue mess uniform, men's and women's black windbreakers and two versions of the women's Army green uniform ensemble.

"The objective is to determine troop acceptability and preference of the uniforms," an official said.

"The data collected will be considered in making the final decision on the uniforms to be adopted."

The show will be held in the Kelley Hill Theater Building 9023 at 10:30 a.m. and in Marshall Auditorium at 3:30 p.m. Uniforms will be worn by soldiers doubling as models. Soldiers attending the showing will hear a narration about the uniforms and will receive a survey form to complete.

After the road show completes its tour, officials said, the Army Uniform Board will meet to examine the data collected — including the survey results — and make recommendations to the Chief of Staff on which uniforms should be adopted.

The women's green uniform ensemble is being considered as a replacement for several existing uniforms including the green cord, mint green shirt, jacket and dress, pantsuit and the current green uniform. Each item in the ensemble is designed to be worn with any other item. Each ensemble includes green uniform coats, slacks, skirts and both long-sleeve and short-sleeve gray-green shirts.

"Whichever of the two designs of the ensemble selected to be produced will be the uniform of the 1980's for female soldiers," an official said.

Windbreakers on display will be the same color as the new black combination overcoat and raincoat. Currently, only male soldiers have an optional green windbreaker.

The public is invited to attend.

Q — what happens if I don't complete and return the annual income questionnaire that came with my November pension check?

A — Your benefits will be suspended at the end of January 1979. You will not receive checks after that date until VA receives your completed questionnaire.

Q — My husband is a veteran and has been told he's eligible for burial in a national cemetery. If I die before he does, can I be buried in a national cemetery on the basis of his eligibility?

A — Yes, you can, provided your husband signs an agreement with the cemetery director that he will be buried in the same gravesite with you at the time of his death.

Q — I am receiving a monthly disability compensation check, and I have recently moved. What must I do to have my checks sent to my new address?

A — Complete the reverse side of the envelope in which you received your check and send it to your local VA office. If you don't have the envelope, contact your local VA office and inform them of your change of address. Be sure to have your VA file number available.

Q — I am currently entitled to CHAMPVA benefits, but I will reach age 65 next month. How will this affect my CHAMPVA benefits?

A — Persons eligible to receive Social Security Medicare benefits at age 65 will lose their entitlement to CHAMPVA benefits.

Q — May I use my GI Bill educational entitlement to attend medical school in Mexico?

A — If the foreign school and your training program are approved by VA, you may attend school outside the United States. To obtain the list of approved schools and additional information call or visit your nearest VA regional office.

New incentive program promotes efficiency

By Julie Casey

A new Productivity Improvement Program is being instituted to bring recognition to Benning units and activities for work well-done. Semiannually, the Fort Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, will award the Commander's Resources Management Award to the activity that was most effective in reducing costs and management problems, according to Capt. Dennis Fricke, management analyst with the Director of Resources Management (DRM).

Fricke developed this program from AR 5-4 and feels that Benning is one of the first posts to initiate this program.

Packets will be compiled semiannually by DRM. They will be evaluated by the Program Budget Advisory Committee and will make recommendations to the commanding general for selection. Size of organization will be considered so all commands have an equal chance at the award. Information will be collected from the Civilian Personnel Office, the Quick Return and Investment Program and other such sources.

"Actions initiated by commanders, directors and activity chiefs that effectively eliminate management problems, will also be considered. Anything that the commanders feel improved conditions or cut costs will be included in the packets prepared for review," Fricke concluded.

Transportation officials say mopeds can be shipped

Effective immediately, soldiers may now ship moped and minibikes at government expense with their household goods, according to DA transportation officials.

Previously, mopeds and minibikes were considered privately owned vehicles by the Army. Soldiers having a car and a moped could ship one of the vehicles but not both.

According to officials, shipping a moped with household goods was prohibited based on a definition of what a privately owned vehicle was — a motorized vehicle primarily designed for carrying passengers.

According to officials, a moped will now be defined as a two-wheeled vehicle designed and manufactured to be operated either as a motorized vehicle or a manually pedaled bicycle.

A minibike is a small two-wheeled motor bike with neither wheel measuring more than 20 inches in diameter, including the tire. (ARNEWS)

Setting it straight

In the March 16 issue of the BAYONET, the story "ACS wants to help with financial woes," contained misinformation supplied by the local ACS office. The story said, "The ACS center offers a Financial Planning and Assistance Program to military personnel and their dependents, retirees, and widows or divorcees of military personnel."

ACS is prohibited from offering the program to divorcees of military personnel, according to 2nd Lt Angelo N. Grandelli, an ACS counselor.

Also, the story stated that "The program involves budget counseling, consumer education and debt liquidation." It should have also explained that ACS doesn't provide the funds to an individual for them to liquidate their debts. However, ACS counselors are willing to help individuals in setting up a budget which may aid them in liquidating their debts.

NBC uses new training methods

The MX Riot Control Dispenser used to simulate an aerial gas attack.

No, they are not crop dusting. They are members of the Nuclear, Biological, Chemical (NBC) School assisting the 43rd Engr Bn in their ARTEP (Army Training and Evaluation Program) March 22.

A MX Riot Control Dispenser loaded with CS gas (tear gas) was used to simulate an aerial attack.

"It was a test to simulate a gas attack in the most realistic way possible," commented the NBC evaluation team leader, 1st Lt. Charles McClure.

The evaluators were also on the ground monitoring reactions of the soldiers.

"I felt it was a valid test to find out if the soldiers know the procedues to follow in case of an NBC attack. I hope we can use it more often. it is a lot more effective than canisters placed along a trail," said SFC Potiphar Miller, part of the NBC evaluation team.

"It was also a valuable learning experience for them because it showed how one NBC attack can render a unit without proper training ineffective," McClure said.

The NBC (Nuclear, Biological Chemical) Evaluation team uses a MEDDAC helicopter to give the 43rd Engr Bn a surprise chemical attack.

EER rules to change April 1

Enlisted evaluation report (EER) rules for all EM are changing April 1.

Changes are designed to make EERS more complete and less frequent, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Starting April 1, EERS will still be required at least yearly, but not during a month that is based on a soldier's grade, officials said. Instead, annual reports will be made one year from a soldier's last report month.

If an E6, for example, last received an EER in December 1978, that soldier's next EER would be due in December 1979. The usual rule that an E6 receive an EER every June would be ignored as long as a soldier's last EER is less than one year old, officials explained.

Exceptions to this change, officials said, would be allowed if a soldier needs a "change of rater" or "special" EER, or if an EER must be delayed because a rater has not managed a soldier at least three months.

When a soldier does receive a "change of rater" or "special" EER, officials observed, the next annual report would not be due until one year after that EER.

Other changes, according to officials, include mandatory comments in all EERS. Currently, comments are only required if soldiers are rated below or above average.

Recommendations for promotion must also be explained in a rater's comments, officials said, no matter which option a rater recommends.

Career development recommendations for schooling and assignments must also be made in every EER, officials added.

Another change is that raters will have the option of using a "complete the record," or updated, EER for soldiers in grades E6-9, officials said.

This report could be made when a soldier is being considered by a DA promotion or selection board. Officials said this option will allow raters to "update the official record" and call attention to new and special information.

The new rules are spelled out in changes to AR 600-200, DA PAM 623-1 and DA PAM 600-8. (ARNEWS)

Teaching positions open for officers

Minority and women officers are being sought for staff and teaching jobs at West Point, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Officials say that candidates must have their nominations cleared by MILPERCEN, should preferably be in their seventh to ninth year of service, be qualified in their primary specialties and have above average undergraduate or graduate academic records.

More information is available in AR 614-130 or by writing: Superintendent, U.S. Military Academy, ATTN: MAAG-P, West Point, N.Y. (ARNEWS)

Professor Safety says

A University of Southern California study supplies fresh evidence that motorcycle helmets save lives by reducing the severity of head injuries. The value of helmets has been documented for more than 30 years. In 15 states that repealed their helmet use laws since 1976, the number of fatalities involving helmetless cyclists showed a dramatic increase of 88 percent from 1976 to 1977.

LEGACY

Grandmother cried when I left home.
She later died there all alone.
But I was young and wanted free;
I believe now she cried for me.

So I returned there yesterday,
Although it was out of our way;
And walked among our ghosts again,
But could not find myself back then.

The tree we planted has grown tall.
There's nothing left in back at all.
A part of me's still here, yet not;
Sometimes I miss those days a lot.

Only the land remains unchanged —
A chain I broke; now with disdain
Time hurtles forth and I'm alone,
With only one link to pass on.

M.A. Andrews

MARY

She liked the Guggenheim, moselle wine,
Poems that rhyme, and me.
I liked Irish Whiskey, green cigars,
Smoke — filled bars, and me.

She liked Bertrand Russell
And called me decadent.
I liked Dylan Thomas,
Bob Dylan, and consent.

We were young, it was long ago.
She loved me so.
But I loved wind, rain,
Trains, changing things.

When I grew up she was gone.
I sometimes long
For her ways,
And those fleeting days.

How to shop wisely for home insulation

It's a seller's market in insulation today, and wise consumers will be well informed before they make a major investment to reduce heating and cooling costs.

One major consideration is the order in which certain areas of the home should be weather-proofed. The most important steps, in sequence, are (1) upgrade ceiling insulation to R-30, (2) install storm windows, (3) insulate floors to R-13, and (4) insulate walls to R-18. R-value denotes the insulation's resistance to the passage of heat. The R-values cited above have been verified through extensive testing in Georgia.

Once in the marketplace, follow these guidelines:

1. Check insulation materials for approval by an independent testing agency such as Underwriters' Laboratory (UL).

2. Read guarantees carefully. When hiring a contractor, make sure both the insulating materials and the installation work are guaranteed.

3. Get two or three estimates from potential contractors. Check the contractors' work with previous customers. And deal only with a reputable contractor.

4. Ask to see test results for products that offer claims such as 50 percent energy savings. The tests should carry verification by the National Bureau of Standards.

5. Check the R-value of the specific material purchased, as rated by an independent testing laboratory.

6. Beware of high pressure tactics and outrageous claims.

7. Don't pay in advance. A down payment of 25 percent is almost always sufficient.

8. Get an itemized bill or other certificate stating that the contractor used the materials and performed the work described in the bid.

9. Check completed work to be sure you have received what you've paid for.

10. Order cellulose or blown fiberglass by the bag. Purchase the recommended number of bags to achieve the desired R-value in the size space to be covered. Ordering by the inch is an imprecise method, since cellulose or blown fiberglass can be packed either loosely or firmly.

Remember that proper installation is essential; a poor installation job can ruin the effectiveness of the best insulating material. Here are some tips to keep in mind during installation:

1. Keep attic insulation away from eave vents, attic-mounted furnaces and recessed light fixtures.

2. Protect against mineral wool's glass fiber dust by wearing a mask when installing it yourself.

3. If insulation has a vapor barrier, be sure the barrier is on the side of the conditioned space.

4. Insulation used to supplement existing insulation should have no vapor barrier.

New EER plan affects most Fort Benning E-4s

The March promotion recomputation for E-4's without current Enlisted Evaluation Report Weighted Averages (EERWA) has been extended through April, MILPERCEN officials said.

Updated EERWAS for E-4's, reflected on annual form 10AS, are now being mailed to the field, officials say, and delays should not cost soldiers points.

"We recomputed the weighted averages of the EER's for all E-4's that were up for promotion to E-5 by using old weighed EER averages," explained Robert Sample, chief of Enlisted Promotions. "On March 23, we received a new 10A for all E-4's that contained a weighed average."

"When we received this, we had to pull every record to see if there were any differences between the weighted average we came up with and the weighted average on the new 10A," he commented. "If there were any differences, we had to readjust it."

"The changes, if any, were to the advantage of most E-4's and may affect 90 percent of the E-4's on post," Sample added.

Only points earned by soldiers through the end of February will be included in the April recomps, with the exception of EERWAS, officials explained.

Once a soldier's EERWA is received, it will be included in recomputed scores, officials said. However, all recomps must be completed by April 30.

E-4 scores recomputed in either March or April will become effective June 1, MILPERCEN officials said.

Airborne Department

First Instructor of Quarter chosen

Sgt. 1st Class Donald Cruce, Airborne Department's selection for their first Instructor of the Quarter Award, has the responsibility as a jumpmaster of seeing that the plane's cargo is properly prepared and loaded. He also must inspect each jumper's equipment and pick out the point of exit on the drop zone.

By Betty Zimmerman

Airborne Department's new sergeant major, MSgt. (P) Joseph Cross, felt his instructors needed more recognition. Therefore, he started an Instructor of the Quarter competition for his instructors.

This includes the Airborne School's ground, tower and jump branch; the Jumpmaster School; the Pathfinder School; and the Condition and Drill Branch.

The first person to be chosen for this award is SFC Donald Cruce from Bartow, Fla. In his 11 years service, Cruce has had two tours as an Airborne instructor. He was with the ground branch in 1974 and 1975 and has been with the Jumpmaster School since 1977.

He completed Airborne School in 1967 and is currently active in the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club where he practices freefall jumps. His wife, Susan, is also an Airborne instructor and a sports parachutist.

The Instructor of the Quarter selection was based on outstanding performance of duties; knowledge of the individual's MOS; efforts of self-improvement; history of the Army and of Airborne; and all the other usual things included on a board.

His selection earned him a savings bond from the HHC unit fund, an Iron Mike statue, certificate of achievement and a letter of appreciation from the Airborne Department director, a certificate of commendation and an engraved lighter from the local AUSA chapter and a 96-hour pass.

The first Instructor of the Year board will be held in June to coincide with the Original Test Platoon's anniversary. Some of these retired parachutists will take part in the selection and in the award ceremony. They are also planning to give the winner a trophy. Cruce will compete with the April-June winner for this year's Instructor of the Year board.

Cruce says he enjoys teaching and that the results make it all worthwhile. He reports that he's never been injured in his entire jumping career and that he enjoys the responsibility of teaching his students the proper way so that none of them will be injured.

Post reductions on schedule

The reduction in force here which was announced Feb. 28 is proceeding on schedule, according to M. Lawrence Shannon, post Civilian Personnel officer.

One hundred and fifty three letters to affected employees will be delivered Monday. The letter will include a job offer if one is available; and for those employees who are scheduled to be separated on June 22, 1979, the letter will specify that no job was available at the time the letter was issued.

However, a Civilian Personnel Office (CPO) spokesman said combined efforts to place employees scheduled to be separated will continue throughout the notice period, which begins Monday and ends June 22.

The Civil Service Reform Act (CSRA) which was signed into law Oct. 13, 1978 includes some sweeping changes in grade and salary retention. The pay computations for this reduction in force were based upon all of the guidance available at the time the letters were prepared, the spokesman explained.

Any further guidance and/or regulations received during the notice period will be considered and/or applied at the time the personnel action specified in the individual reduction in force letter is taken or as soon afterward as possible, according to the spokesman.

He added that due to resignations, transfers, retirements, and other normal losses, the original estimate of 88 separations has dropped "drastically." The official said it now appears that there will be approximately 12 separations. All other employees will be made a job offer; most will be different types of positions, located throughout post.

All of the employees who receive reduction in force letters will be individually counseled. At that time, such things as their entitlement to placement under reduction in force regulations, pay retention or adjustment, retirement eligibility, etc. will be discussed. Questions asked by and pertaining to the individual employee will be answered by a civilian personnel specialist during the individual counseling meeting.

However, even before affected employees are called to the Civilian Personnel Office for individual counseling, group meetings will be held for those employees who receive letters. Further, there will be a reduction in force information center set up in Room 133, Bldg 35.

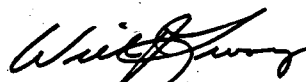

Normal staffing to fill vacancies which could not be staffed by reassignment of a surplus employee will continue during the reduction in force period, the spokesman concluded.

PASSOVER MESSAGE

On the occasion of Passover — the Jewish festival of freedom — I wish to extend my warmest greetings and best wishes to all personnel of the Jewish faith assigned to Fort Benning.

Passover, the symbol of liberation from bondage, has been a source of inspiration for freedom-loving peoples throughout history as they have sought to cast off the yoke of tyranny. This Biblical tradition continues to express the yearnings and hopes of a major sector of mankind.

As Jewish families the world over celebrate Passover this year, we at Fort Benning join with them in rededicating ourselves to the ideals of freedom.

TSB chooses Ranger SOQ

By Betty Zimmerman

The School Brigade's Soldier of the Quarter (SOQ), for January-March 1979, is an acting sergeant from 3rd Ranger Company's operation's section.

Sgt. Rafael Colondres has been in the Army for 28 months. He came to Benning from the 75th Ranger Battalion, Fort Stewart, Ga. in December 1978.

The 26-year-old soldier is from Ponce, Puerto Rico. His interest in the Army and the Rangers dates back to his ROTC days at the University of Puerto Rico, where he majored in civil engineering.

The appropriateness of his career choice became evident in basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., when he was chosen Trainee of the Cycle in basic and advanced individual training.

Colondres was also a Soldier of the Month in the 75th Ranger Battalion and has completed the following Army schools: Airborne, Ranger, Red Eye Gunner, Jungle Expert and Recondo.

He said he enjoys competition and adventure. He studies for the boards by reviewing current events and NBC, as it constantly changes. He is researching Fort Benning history at the USAIS library now to get ready for the post SOQ board.

Colondres now lives in quarters with his wife,

Brenda. But while studying for TSB SOQ, he lived in the barracks. He remarked, "This hindered me in current events as I didn't have a television, or many times a newspaper, to keep up with happenings. But I managed to win anyway."

Sgt. Rafael Colondres

Legal domicile, HOR explained

With the beginning of state tax withholding, soldiers seem confused concerning home of record (HOR) and legal domicile.

The terms "legal domicile" and "HOR" are not always interchangeable. Legal domicile is where the soldier votes, pays state taxes, registers a car, owns property and meets other state requirements for residency (owning property and registering a car do not automatically qualify for legal domicile). Legal domicile may change from time to time to keep pace with military moves and personal desires — provided the legal requirements of a particular state are met.

Whenever a change of legal domicile is made, a new W-4 Form (Withholding Certificate) must be completed. One entry on the W-4 is "Legal Residence" which, at the end of the calendar year, causes a copy of the W-2 Form (Wages and Tax Statement) to be forwarded to the appropriate state.

Home of record, as defined in Appendix J of the DoD Joint Travel Regulation, is the soldier's actual home just prior to entering the Army. At time of separation, HOR may be used to designate the place to which the soldier may be entitled to receive mileage and household goods shipment allowances.

Once a home of record has been officially recorded, it may not be changed unless a bona fide error was made in the original entry. If a soldier believes an error was made, Appendix J of the JTR spells out what is necessary to apply for a change.

The application — along with copies of documentary proof — should be sent to: U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center; ATTN: PCRE-R; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249 for enlisted personnel and, U.S. Army Military Personnel Center; ATTN: DAPC-PSR-S; 200 Stovall St.; Alexandria, Va. 22332, for officers.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Hanson Barracks to be dedicated today

A dedication ceremony for the new 1st Bn, 1st ITB barracks will be held at the 1st Bn headquarters today at 10:30 a.m. The barracks are being dedicated to Medal of Honor winner PFC Jack Hanson.

The new multi-million dollar barracks can accommodate 1,150 men, housing the soldiers of five two-hundred and twenty men companies as well as the cadre of the training battalion. This huge battalion size structure measures 536 ft. by 433 ft. and has an enclosed area of 210,000 sq. ft. An additional covered area of 42,921 sq. ft. is available for training. On the first floor of the three story building are the supply and administrative areas, the enclosed dining facility, classrooms and formation areas. Troop quarters are located on the third floor.

The barracks will serve as a lasting tribute to PFC Jack Hanson's exceptional performance of duty as a machine gunner during the Korean War. His actions will be remembered by Infantrymen who pass through the hall of Hanson Barracks in the years to come.

Oscar time is movie time— so celebrate with a free preview!

A whole weekend of great movies—for free! It's just a sampling of what Home Box Office is all about. (And movies—uncut and uninterrupted—are just part of it. There are fantastic nightclub specials and exclusive sports programs, too!) Here's what you can see for free this weekend:

SATURDAY, APRIL 7

2:30 PM "Harper Valley PTA." Based on the hit song, this hilarious comedy starring Barbara Eden tells the real story.

4:30 PM "Standing Room Only: Barry Manilow." Two hours of great entertainment—the kind you find every month on HBO!

6:30 PM "SportScene." Joe Namath is the host of this "magazine" special, with previews of the baseball season and of the basketball and hockey playoffs.

7:30 PM "The Great Brain." G-rated family fun, starring Jimmy Osmond—Donny & Marie's little brother.

9:00 PM "Revenge of the Pink Panther." Peter Sellers is as hilariously incompetent as ever, as he's joined by Dyan Cannon, star of "Heaven Can Wait."

11:00 PM "Wild Geese." This drama of mercenary soldiers in Africa offers he-man action starring Richard Burton, Roger Moore, and Richard Harris!

1:15 AM "Mean Dog Blues." Oscar winner George Kennedy portrays a sadistic warden in this story of a young man falsely convicted.

SUNDAY, APRIL 8

1:00 PM "Islands in the Stream," with Oscar winner George C. Scott. This Ernest Hemingway story was nominated for Best Cinematography.

3:00 PM "The Turning Point." The screen debut of Mikhail Baryshnikov. Starring Anne Bancroft and Shirley MacLaine, it received 8 Oscar nominations in 1977, including Best Picture.

5:00 PM "House Calls." The stars are Glenda Jackson and Walter Matthau, both of whom have received Oscar nominations.

7:00 PM "Upclose—Academy Awards." Film-clip samplings of this year's nominees, plus interviews with Nick Nolte, Jane Fonda, Warren Beatty.

8:00 PM "The Goodbye Girl." Richard Dreyfuss won Best Actor for his role in this Neil Simon comedy, which received 5 Oscar nominations.

10:00 PM "Coma." Terrifying science-fiction tale of a time when the demand for organ transplants has outstripped the supply.

12:00 AM "Julia." Vanessa Redgrave won Best Supporting Actress and Jason Robards Best Supporting Actor in this story of a friendship between two women.

Of course, to receive HBO, you must be a cable TV subscriber. So if you are, don't miss your free preview. This weekend is the perfect time to see what you've been missing!

Glad you asked

If you could make one change in your present duties, what would that change be?

Harold G. Markham

Sp 5 Harold G. Markham,
USACC Agency

I feel I presently have a very good job. The only complaint I have about my job which pertains to the service in general is the extra duties an EM has to pull around here such as CQ and post police.

Sgt. Roger Woods,
586th Engr Co

I would put the E-5 where he was in the old Army. Right now, the E-5 is the middle man. If he does a good job, someone else gets the credit and if someone else messes up, we get the chewing out. I don't feel that it's right, and it should be changed. Other E-5's and I feel that we are privates earning E-5 pay.

Realistic training a "must" for combat-oriented soldiers

It would seem obvious that combat training should closely approximate real battlefield conditions. Yet a report by the Army Research Institute indicates that some commanders and trainers are reluctant to inject into training a realistic opposing force environment. This is reportedly because they fear that introducing a correctly employed potential adversary would tend to make the US unit look bad.

This viewpoint must be overcome if we are to prepare our soldiers for combat. If our soldiers look bad against such a force in an exercise, this should tell us that they may perform at least as bad against a real adversary.

TRADOC has been tasked to improve realism in training through the establishment of the Opposing Force (OPFOR) Program. The armed forces of the Soviet Union and North Korea have been selected, for training purposes, as potential adversaries. OPFOR is a training program, not an intelligence program. But certain intelligence information is needed to make the OPFOR program effective. So far the intelligence community has had difficulty satisfying the North Korean force requirements. Department of the Army has been asked to declassify North Korean materials in order to support this requirement. Information about Soviet forces and equipment is available.

The TRADOC Chief of Staff stated recently that "Insofar as possible, military skills will be taught and exercised in the environment in which they will be used."

Realistic training will increase the Army's ability to win on the future battlefield. TRADOC is making strides forward to achieve this realistic training. Commanders and trainers who avoid such training should re-examine the purpose of that training. (TNS)

Back in the good old days

By Morticia Figg

In our day we hear many criticisms of those people in the medical profession who go by the title of Doctor. I'm sure that many times these criticisms are justified. Other times I think we simply expect too much of this science which cannot even give us the cure for the common cold.

Although many doctors would have you believe that there is very little modern medicine does not know, I am always amazed at how little they actually know. I am not putting down the accomplishments of doctors in the last 100 years. Today, a cancer victim does have a chance to be cured that he did not have 25 years ago. A chance, that is, if the treatment does not kill him first (as happened to a friend of mine recently who was taking cobalt treatments).

I suppose that modern medicine's only real crime is making people have too much faith in what a doctor can do. As limited as today's doctors may be in the cures they can accomplish, I would still rather be living in this age of medicine as in any past era.

In The Miracle Book (Moody Press), Harry Rimmer tells of some cures listed in the Pharmacopoeia Londensis of the year 1600. This book lists several thousand "cures" and "treatments" which were accepted by physicians of that day. Here are just a few.

For a broken heart: "A green tree toad, burned to ashes in a copper vessel, mixed with a tablespoon of vinegar, in which has been dissolved a small pearl; the entire mess divided into three equal portions and taken after meals, the same will cure a broken heart." I don't know about broken hearts, but it sounds like a sure-fire diet.

For alcoholism: "Eels, placed in wine or beer and suffered therein to die and rot, he that drinketh that mixture will never touch that kind of liquor again." Of that I have no doubt.

These are only two of thousands of similar cures which were used 400 years ago. Now consider how much medicine has progressed in those 400 years — and most of the advances have been made in the last 100 years! Just think where medicine will be in another 100 years.

So, next time you go to your doctor and he gives you a prescription which does not do any good whatsoever (except for the benefit to the pocketbooks of the doctor and the druggist), just wait another 50 or 100 years and go back. By that time they are sure to have a better prescription which won't do any good then either.

Military medical plans to be studied by DA

Wartime medical care plans need "Immediate" attention, according to a DoD study completed recently.

DA officials recently received the completed study which the Army will review and make comments on by spring.

"The current state of medical readiness ... demands immediate attention," according to the study, because "DoD will require extensive reliance on private sector hospitals and physicians early in a major war. Today, no plans exist to use them."

On routine medical care, the report states: "Civilian employees have improved their health care benefit programs, but the quality of the military benefit may have fallen in absolute as well as relative terms."

Study recommendations for improving medical benefits include:

(A) A maximum limit on "out-of-pocket" medical costs. It suggests about $1,000 per person or $2,000 per family yearly, under CHAMPUS.

(B) Charging $3 per outpatient visit to discourage unnecessary use of the direct-care system. Active duty military would be exempt from this charge.

(C) Expanding CHAMPUS to include well-baby exams and immunizations up to age two.

(D) Extending CHAMPUS to retirees and their dependents who are 65 or older, with Medicare designated as first payer.

(E) DoD should consider future CHAMPUS coverage for dependent dental care, with "appropriate" cost sharing, but only after the above recommendations are adopted and made.

(F) DoD should have a better understanding of why physicians accept CHAMPUS before making further changes to encourage physician participation.

(G) Test a concept of offering non-active duty beneficiaries optional health care plans.

(H) Offer a CHAMPUS referral system to help users find qualified physicians and to encourage follow-up visits to military physicians.

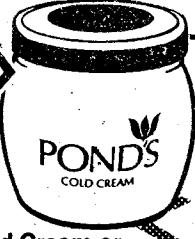

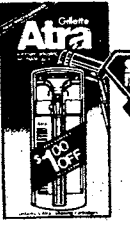

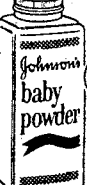

(I) Set policy and procedure to allow hospitals to contract locally, using CHAMPUS.

Salisbury Fair offers variety

The 283rd Army Band and the Explorer Post 76, Colonial Band will participate in the Historic Columbus Foundation's tenth annual Salisbury Fair to be held in the Historic District of Columbus April 21 and 22.

The Colonial Band will parade and perform during the opening ceremony April 21 at 10:30 a.m. on Lower Broadway. The 283rd Army Band will perform in concert in the amphitheatre on the Chattahoochee Promenade at 5 p.m. April 22.

The fair will feature for the first time a hot air balloon ride for its patrons. Other popular attractions from previous years include a magic show, paint-a-face, train ride, junk car beat and a dunk-the-punk featuring Jack Swift.

The Historic District Preservation Society will once again sponsor a five-mile runner's race plus an old fashion hoe-dorn at Rankin's Livery.

A bass rodeo at Lake Oliver and Nostalgia Night at the Springer Opera House will be other weekend activities.

A starving artists' show and sale will be held in the Columbus Irons Works Convention and Trade Center. Copper tooling, decoupage, hand-painted china and children's wooden swings are some of the things that will be on sale at reasonable prices.

The Historic House Tour, co-sponsored by the Historic District Preservation Society and Historic Columbus Foundation will feature six houses which have been adapted for reuse as offices and homes and are in varying stages of restoration.

In each home, some unusual type of decor such as tapestries and rugs, period table settings, plants and Christmas decorations will be featured.

Tour tickets are $5 and include admission to the Antique Show and Collectibles that will be in the Knights of Columbus Hall on Broadway. Individual admission will be available at the door.

Continuous live entertainment in the amphitheatre will add to the festivities.

Concessionaries will have cotton candy, hot dogs, barbeque, soft drinks and more for sale.

Caution: tornadoes respect no man

Tornadoes are violently rotating columns of air that descend in the familiar funnel shape from thunderstorm cloud systems. A tornado vortex is normally several hundred yards in diameter, whirls in a counterclockwise direction and contains winds estimated to be near 300 miles per hour.

Tornadoes occur on all continents, at any time of the year, at any hour of the day. They have occurred in every state of the Union. Their greatest frequency is in the spring, when large contrasts exist between warm air from the south, and cold air from the north; and in the middle and late afternoon, when a warm day is at its warmest.

Because they are often accompanied by heavy rain, hail, lightning, and the obscuring cloud system of the thunderstorm or squall line, tornadoes are sometimes difficult to identify. Organized rotary motion about a vertical axis is the clue to distinguishing harmless clouds from the funnel of a developing tornado.

In the random motion of thunderstorm clouds, funnel clouds appear as highly organized, rapidly rotating systems.

If your area is threatened by a tornado, the thought that should be uppermost in your mind is how to save lives, not possessions. Heeding the following safety tips will help you do so.

1. Seek safe places for shelter, such as modern, steel-reinforced office buildings, storm shelters, tunnels, caves, root cellars, basements, underground parking facilities and interior corridors.

2. Keep away from windows, structures with large poorly supported roofs, the upper stories of office buildings, house trailers and parked cars.

3. A parked car can be dangerous during a tornado. Violent winds can tumble a car over and over, crushing it and its occupants. If you are driving, attempt to escape by driving at right angles to the path of the storm. If there is no time and no underground or upright shelter available, seek protection by lying flat in the nearest depression, such as a ditch or ravine. If you are trapped in flat, open country, staying in the car can be better than no protection at all. Remember to keep windows open enough to allow for pressure differences.

4. If you are in an office building, stand in interior hallways on a lower floor, preferably in the basement. In homes, a basement usually offers the greatest safety. If no basement is available, take cover under heavy furniture in the center part of the house. Keep some windows open, but stay away from them. Covering yourself with a rug affords some protection from falling and flying debris. Mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to overturning during strong winds.

5. No matter where you are, keep a battery powered radio with you to listen to weather information and to hear when the warning is lifted.

6. Remember: Tornado Watch means tornadoes are expected to develop. Tornado Warning means a tornado has actually been sighted and you should seek shelter IMMEDIATELY.

TAC vs drill

Like drills, dedication is key word to TAC officers

By Suellen Cochran

Fourteen junior grade officers have one of the most important jobs the Army offers, the training of officer candidates in TSB's BIOCC (OCS).

To be a tactical officer (TAC) is not an easy job. The hours are long with a heavy burden of responsibility. "It's not unusual at all to find yourself working 100 hours a week during the course's first seven weeks," commented 1st Lt. William B. Gwaltney, senior TAC for 50th Co. "I think we have a very high caliber of officers here. They are very sincere and professional."

In many ways, compared with the drill sergeant, the TAC has an entirely different approach. "The drill sergeant is more interested in teaching skills. We are concerned with style and concept," Gwaltney explained. "Our major objective is to put the candidates into the right frame of mind, to seek and accept responsibility and to apply their own initiative. We want them to formulate directives and to be able to pass them down to subordinates in a logical manner."

"It not unusual at all to find yourself working 100 hours a week."

Up until last November, TACs were chosen for internal sources. They are now DA selected on the basis of leadership qualifications, character, level headedness and the ability to communicate with his or her platoon.

Much of the candidates' training is done through pressure. "Real leadership does not come out in an individual until pressure is there. Since we don't have a combat situation, we have to make conditions which induce pressure on the candidates," Gwaltney explained. Much of the type of pressure used depends on the TAC.

"The guidance that the TAC gives is going to have a lot of influence on the new lieutenants," spoke 1st Lt. Jesse Heredial, former TAC who is now the 5th Bn, TSB, adjutant. "It will normally be more stern in the beginning and then let up. To get a point across, sometimes a little more "emphasis" is needed. I don't mean yelling and screaming, but it does usually entail raising the voice a bit."

According to Gwaltney, consistency is the only real guidance given to the TACs now. New arrivals are given OJT for two to three weeks before the next class. During this time they observe the various stages of OCS and the different approaches each TAC uses.

"The drill sergeant is more interested in teaching skills. We are concerned with style and concept."

The current training system will soon be changed however, due to an extensive study made by 1st Lt. Edward H. Woodberry. Woodberry felt that the training lacked organization and consolidation. "When I was senior TAC for 51st Co, the rapid turnover of TACs left something to be desired. Everything seemed to be run by word-of-mouth. I felt the need for an organized training guide, so I asked for permission to study other OCS programs," Woodberry explained.

That was last September. Since then, he has observed OCS training with the Marine Corps, Canadian Forces, and training at West Point. Additional information and input was received from the Army Research Institute and other local sources of leadership evaluation. The result of the study was a training guide that will affect the TAC as well as the candidate.

"Everything seemed to be run by word-of-mouth."

Newly-assigned TACs will receive two weeks of training prior to getting a platoon. TACs and candidates will observe video cassettes with case studies on possible occurrences during OCS and the proper way to handle each episode. "I'm getting a mixed opinion from the TACs," Woodberry observed. "Some think it's a good idea, while others are reluctant to change." The new training techniques will be used on a trial basis for the next OCS class. Battalion staff members will determine, through the test, if these changes will become permanent.

Like the drill sergeant, the tactical officer for OCS is a highly dedicated individual. But for most, the long hours, heavy responsibility and physical pressure are all worthwhile in the end. As Heredial put it, "The time you appreciate it the most is when you see the candidates graduate. That's when I have my biggest feeling of pride. That's when I get enough strength to say ... let's do it again."

"... let's do it again."

Benning to host annual Easter Sunrise Service

Fort Benning will host its annual Easter Sunrise Service on Gowdy Field April 15 at 7:30 a.m.

The Reverend Gilbert Lee Ramsey, senior pastor at St. Luke United Methodist Church in Columbus, will be the guest speaker.

Ramsey was born in Elbert County, Ga., the son of a former Methodist minister in North and South Georgia Conferences. He attended Emory University Academy at Oxford, and received both his Bachelor of Arts degree, and his Bachelor of Divinity degree from Candler School of Theology, Emory University.

In the past, he has served as pastor of several Georgia cities including Adel, Statesboro, Pittman Park and Tifton. He has also served as superintendent of the Savannah District.

He is a member of Rotary Clubs in Statesboro, Tifton and Columbus, a member of the Conference Boards of Worship, Evangelism and Education and is now chairman of the Board of Ministry.

Ramsey has had several articles published in religious periodicals including, "The Christian Advocate," "Wesleyan Christian Advocate," "The Christian Home," "Tidings," and "The Pulpit."

He is married to the former Francis Smith of Macon. They have two children, Pamela, a graduate of the University of Georgia who is teaching school in Phenix

City, and Lee, a graduate of Emory who is working as a Youth Director in Bainbridge, Ga.

The U.S. Army Communications Command (USACC)-Fort Benning, under the 7th Signal Command, Fort Ritchie, Md., has been here ever since the post was founded, but its name has changed over the years. It has been called the Post Signal Section and Signal Services Division, among other names.

Although its designation has changed, its mission has remained the same; to support all military communications at Benning and, in turn, to serve as Benning's vital communication link to all U.S. military installations worldwide and to interface with the commercial telephone network.

One of the most important areas of communication today is the telephone. USACC controls the entire military telephone network at Fort Benning. It operates three DIAL Central offices or automatic switching centers on post. These are the Harmony Church, Main Post and Milliken (serving Martin Army Hospital, Kelley Hill and Sand Hill areas) exchanges. All official telephone calls to or from Fort Benning will pass through one of these exchanges.

One of Army's largest telephone networks

In addition to the automatic dialing, a manual switchboard is maintained for placing official long distance and overseas Autovon calls as well as handling information for military listings.

The telephone network here is one of the Army's largest. With an installed capacity to handle 6,000 telephone numbers, the exchanges are capable of rapid expansion to handle more than 11,000 telephone numbers if needed.

The Automated Telecommunications Center (ATCC) is another vital part of Benning. The ATCC handles all military communications incoming and outgoing on a daily basis. This center electronically transmits messages that can't be mailed due to time constraints. Messages included in the ATCC can't be mailed due to time constraints. Messages included in the ATCC can't be mailed due to time constraints.

MARS station

The Military Affiliate Radio Station (MARS) is a USACC operation which provides a direct link to soldiers here. Messages are sent via high frequency radio to other parts of the world. Besides being a link to other parts of the world, MARS offers the soldier a chance to talk to home, free of charge.

Air Traffic Control (ATC) at Lawson Air Field's control tower is a USACC operation. The ATC Branch is responsible for controlling aircraft and taking off from Lawson Air Field. Those aircraft passing through the tower's space. The controllers are in constant communication with the Columbia Air Force Base and coordinate their operations with the Federal Aviation Administration.

At times, heavy air traffic can become as hectic as the busiest day at a telephone switchboard. The ATC handles take-offs and landings from Lawson Air Field, controlled in one day if needed.

Maintenance is backbone

Operations are a vital part of the USACC. The Maintenance Division handles the physical mission. Lt. Col.

PFC Bob Waters works local control at Lawson Field's Air Traffic Control Tower.

Spec. 4 Alan Appegard operates the radar which is used for bad weather take-offs and landings at Lawson Air Field.

communications Center aspect of USACC-Fort Benning's record communications from Fort Benning operation deals with messages which are timely. The media tape, data cards and Radio System (MARS) which is of special interchanges can be sent over anywhere in the world. For commands, MARS is able to send a short message.

(C), based in Lawson Field, is another big operation. The ATC handles every aircraft landing at Lawson Field, as well as through Benning's airfield in constant communication with the Metropolitan Airfield operations with the station.

Traffic at Lawson can be handled by hours at the manual station. More than 1,200 aircraft in Lawson can be conserved.

of USACC

part of USACC, and the station is an equally important part. Raymond Elderd, USACC-Fort Benning commander, feels that although operations seem to be the heart of his mission, maintenance is also very important. "We maintain and install all the military telephones on post. The telephone is the most vital form of communication available to everyone, and proper maintenance is critical."

The Maintenance Division has three branches. One of these Outside Plant, is responsible for the upkeep on more than 300 miles of telephone cable, above and below ground. A fleet of 25 service trucks is required for maintenance support to cover the entire Fort Benning reservation.

Inside Plant, on the other hand, is responsible for repairs to the switchboards and switching equipment at all three post telephone exchanges. If a call comes in regarding a malfunction, they will trouble shoot within the exchanges to find the problem. If the problem isn't there, Outside Plant will trouble shoot the telephone cables and equipment at the user location.

Beacon in the night

The Navigational Aids (NAVAIDS) is another element of the Maintenance Division. Primarily their job is to keep Lawson Airfield communication-electronic equipment in good repair. This includes responsibility for the radio and radar equipment, as well as the various directional beacons that assist pilots in locating the airfield.

USACC-Fort Benning is involved in many different operations here. But each aspect adds up to the total support of communications within Fort Benning, and just as importantly, a communications link to the rest of the world.

67th supports area reservists

The 67th Maint Bn supported two reserve units while conducting their own CPX here March 24-25.

The two reserve units were the 2nd MTC (Maneuver Training Command) from Atlanta and the 352d Maint Bn from Macon, GA. The 2nd MTC, the "Test Control Headquarters," administered and evaluated the 352d Maint Bn during its CPX here.

The 67th Maint Bn, part of the 36th Engr Gp here, provided assistance to the 352nd Maint Bn and the MTC with personnel, equipment, technical and tactical assistance while conducting their own CPX.

Professor Safety says

Here are some safety precautions on the use of airless spray guns:

1. Handle the gun as a loaded firearm.
2. Keep away from spray. The spray can penetrate skin and inflict serious injury because of its high pressure and velocity.
3. If such an injury occurs, see a doctor immediately.
4. When gun is not in use, engage the trigger safety.
5. Before attempting maintenance always disconnect from power source and relieve all pressures.
6. Be sure spray gun, the paint hoses, and object being painted (if the object can produce a static electricity charge) are grounded. (Courtesy Navy LifeLine Magazine)

Put aside now for future home

Prices on new single-family homes are increasing twice as fast as family incomes.

Six years ago, almost half of the nation's families could afford the average new home. Today, only a quarter can.

A study by Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology concludes that the average price of a new home will be $78,000 in just five years. It may soon be the impossible dream.

"The cost squeeze on middle income families is replacing the slum as the major problem in housing," says Bernard Friedman, co-author of a report funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Construction costs have gone up nearly 50 percent since 1971. And financing costs can increase the price of a new home faster than building expenses.

The message is clear: If you can't move, improve! Kick off your own modernization campaign.

A third of all American families now own more than $80 billion worth of Bonds. Nine and one-half million Americans save an average of $38.75 each month through the Payroll Savings Plan.

And many of your neighbors are using Bonds to expand their homes. Many more are sprucing up the space they already have.

So if you're looking forward to modernizing your home, take stock in America today. Start putting money away into Savings Bonds on a regular, every payday basis through the Payroll Savings Plan.

CWC luncheon

The next luncheon of the Columbus Area Christian Women's Club is planned for Thursday, April 12 at 11:45 a.m. at The Martinique, 4th Avenue at 10th Street.

This club is part of an international organization with headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. It is inter-church and non-sectarian, having some 1900 groups across the United States, Canada and around the world.

Special features are a delightful part of each program as well as music and an out-of-town guest speaker each month. "Art — from Canvas to Rocks" will be this month's special feature.

All interested women from Columbus and surrounding areas are invited to attend by making reservations with Mrs. D. Harron, 687-5307 and Mrs. W. T. Golden 322-4901, for the luncheon and free nursery which will be provided at Trinity Episcopal Church.

Canine Obedience Classes

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center will sponsor a Canine Basic Obedience Class beginning May 8. Classes meet each Tuesday and Thursday night from 6-8 p.m. during the six-week course.

To be eligible, dogs must be at least eight months old and have had rabies and distemper shots. Military and DA civilians are eligible to send their dogs.

For more information, call 544-1721.

Walt Disney World

It's family fun time for the military during Armed Forces Days, May 19 through June 3. The salute to military personnel and their families features Walt Disney World entertainment at special prices. The Armed Forces Days special ticket will offer one day's unlimited use of the 45 Magic Kingdom attractions (except Shootin' Gallery) including the Hall of Presidents and Space Mountain. The tickets are $7.95 in advance and $9 during the event.

Eligible for participation in Armed Forces Days are active military personnel and their families, retired military, disabled veterans and civil service personnel working on military installations. Advance sale tickets will be available through the Recreation/Special Services office on most military installations in the southeastern United States.

Jewish Celebration

The Jewish Holy Days of Passover will be celebrated this year from sunset April 11 through sundown April 19.

The first two days of Passover (from sunset April 11 through sundown April 14), and the last two days (from April 17 sunset through sundown April 19), are days of religious obligation for personnel of the Jewish faith. Within the limits of military necessity, commanders will insure that Jewish personnel are free to attend regularly scheduled religious services.

A liberal pass policy has been established by the Department of the Army. Commanders may grant passes to all Jewish personnel to attend religious activities in accordance with paragraph 10-2 reference b.

For information regarding the schedule of Passover Observances in the Fort Benning/Columbus area, contact the Jewish chaplain, Chaplain (Capt.) Kenneth J. Leinwand at 545-4787/2169.

VA Q&A

Q — What is the Veterans Administration work-study program?

A — Veteran students enrolled as full-time students may agree to 250 hours per semester for which they are paid a maximum of $662.50. The maximum amount payable will change to $725.00 Jan. 1, 1979, when the new minimum wage provision becomes effective. Work sites may be VA regional offices, medical centers, or national cemeteries, as well as the college campus at which the veteran is enrolled.

Q — I am a Vietnam era veteran and wish to use my GI educational benefits. However, I am confused as to a specific direction and need assistance in planning a program. Will VA help me?

A — VA provides comprehensive educational and vocational counseling to veterans who need this type of help. Visit your nearest VA regional office.

Q — I am rated 30 percent disabled for a service-connected disability. I understand that I can now draw additional money for my dependents. How can I get these additional benefits started?

A — The percentage of disability for entitlement to dependency benefits was reduced to 30 percent by PL 95-479. If you have not already filed a claim for this benefit on the application form sent to all potentially eligible beneficiaries early in December, you should obtain VA Form 21-686C, complete it and submit it to your VA regional office.

Q — I have a 50 percent service-connected disability. My wife recently underwent surgery which left her partially paralyzed. Will VA pay for a visiting nurse to assist my wife?

A — VA will not make a direct payment to the nurse. The veteran may request additional allowance for aid and attendance for his or her spouse. An additional allowance of $20 per month may be approved for aid and attendance for the spouse of a 50 percent service-connected disabled veteran.

2211 FORT BENNING ROAD, COLUMBUS

Army shooters win rifle matches

By Tommy Pool

U.S. Army and Army Reserve marksmen dominated the International Interservice Pistol and Running Target Championships held at Fort Benning March 26-30.

In pistol competition, Erich Buljung, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, won top honors in Free Pistol as he scored 1,664 points, five ahead of teammate Emil Heugatter. Buljung and Heugatter teamed with Charles McCowan and Samuel Hunter for a 2,170 team score to nip the USAR squad by six points.

Thomas Woods, USAMU, took the other individual Army victory in Center Fire Pistol with 1,766 points over Reservist Jerry Wilder, Remington, Ind., who finished at 1,764.

A bright spot in the competition, however, was a new national open record set by the Army's Kimberly Dyer in Standard Pistol with a score of 585 out of 600 points. She broke her own record of 583 set last year in the same competition.

On the running target range another new record was established by Charles Davis and Martin Edmondson in two man team competition with 762 out of 800, 14 points better than the old record.

In individual competition, Louis Theimer, an Army Reservist from Iowa Park, Texas, scored 1,712 points to finish ahead of Edmondson at 1,695. Robert George, USAMU, claimed third place with 1,690. Robert Partridge, USMC, won the mixed runs championship after tying with Theimer at 375. Partridge was declared the winner because of a higher score on his final ten shots.

Flyers looking to finish strong this season

The Fort Benning Flyers Rugby Team opened up the second half of their spring season against powerful Tallahassee at the Southern Cup Finals Tournament in Tallahassee, Fla. Recovering from a 34-0 whipping by one of the nation's best teams, the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, the Flyers will stack their team with their best including some newly arrived talent from IOAC 3-79. Looking for a better second half season, the Flyers will then travel to Atlanta to take on High Country RFC.

A big event takes place May 5 and 6 when Fort Benning hosts the first All Military Rugby Tournament. Representing the Army will be Fort Benning, Fort Bragg, and Fort Campbell, with a possible addition of Fort Polk. Representing the USMC will be Quantico, and representing the U.S. Navy will be Pensacola.

The Flyers will end their season with a home game against Hilton Head RFC on May 13 and then will travel to Kentucky to participate in the Fort Campbell tournament May 26 and 27.

Home games are played at Stillwell Field at 2 p.m. Anyone interested in playing may contact John Sladky, 545-2918/544-4379.

DYA registration

Registration for Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) Boy's Baseball and Girl's Softball will be held April 16 through May 17. The DYA program is open to children ages 6-14.

Anyone interested can sign up at the DYA office, Bldg 1054, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Proof of age is required.

The Boy's Baseball League will be divided up into the following groups: T-ball, ages 6-8; Termites, ages 9-10; Pee Wees, ages 11-12 and Midgets, ages 13-14.

The Girl's Softball League will be divided up as follows: Pony Tail division, ages 9-11 and Juniors, ages 12-14 (ages 6-8 will play T-ball with the boys).

The entry fee is $10 for the first child in the family, $7.50 for the second, $5 for the third and anyone after that gets in for free.

Benning Bass Club wins 'Super Bowl V'

The Fort Benning Bass Club finally broke their second place jinx last Sunday when they claimed top honors in the Super Bowl V fishing tourney held at Lake Eufaula.

The Super Bowl is a local contest between the Tri community area bass clubs to determine who is number one for the coming year. The winning club receives a trophy and "Braggin Rights" for the year.

This year's participants were the clubs from Fort Benning, Dolphin, Georgia - Alabama, Oswebga and Phenix City.

The members of the first place Fort Benning team are Carlos Sellers, Willy Golfe, Don Henderson, Bob Billman, Henry Ferris and John Campbell.

Finishing second behind the champion Fort Benning fishermen was the Georgia-Alabama club with the Dolphin club third, Oswega fourth and Phenix City last.

The winning team members will again represent Fort Benning in the Georgia Bass Chapter Federation tournament to be held April 30 to May 1 at Lake West Point. This tourney is to determine the best bass club in the state.

The Fort Benning club finished third in the state last year and has high hopes of a first place finish this year. Good luck team!

Pacing the first place club was Sellers, who's total catch of 15 lbs 11 ozs was the best catch of the day and Henderson's 6 lbs 5 ozs bass was the largest fish caught during the tourney.

Swimming classes

Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities will sponsor a senior lifesaving course at the Briant Wells Field House April 9-20. The course is open to all military personnel and their dependents.

Classes will take place in the indoor swimming pool on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights from 7-9 p.m. People 16 years of age and older are eligible to qualify for the lifesaving certificate.

The cost for the three week course is $15, payable to the Sports Office no later than 3 p.m. today. For further information, call 545-2282.

Making Tracks

By Julie Casey

Making Tracks is going to look a bit different for the next two and half months. I will be away at the Presidio of San Francisco competing for a position on the All-Army Track Team. While there, I will be featuring members of the track team on the Making Tracks page.

Tom Coniglio, manager of Below the Knee Sports Shop, is going to take over the racing information. Tom is one of the top runners in the local area and will do a great job because of his background and contacts. For information call 561-2687.

I'm very honored to be making the trip and will consider it quite a challenge. Still, I feel some regret in leaving the community of runners that I have found in the South. Running in the South has been quite an adventure. You can race every weekend and find tough competition at each race.

The comradery among runners is great. Everyone is pulling for everyone else. It doesn't matter where you come in. Everyone's effort is valued. PRs (personal records) seem to be more important than where you place in the races.

Runners are special people. They enjoy life with few vices and have a great time competing. Road racing is a low pressure, environment that breeds enjoyment.

Good luck this season and I hope you gain many PRs.

Bradley Library Run

Mark Jourdon of Atlanta took the honors at the Bradley Memorial 5,000-meter Road Race April 1 with the time of 16 minutes and 40 seconds. John Smith led Benning runners placing third overall with the time of 17 minutes and 19 seconds.

Sue Emerson led in the Women's Division placing third overall with the time of 25 minutes and 56 seconds.

April is Cancer Prevention Month

Salt aggravates high blood pressure. Sugar may bring on diabetes. Beef and butter clog the arteries, leading to heart attacks.

But does the American Diet have anything to do with cancer?

This is an important question — with few firm answers, but here are some key observations and information.

Two aspects

"There are two aspects on the subject of nutrition and cancer," explained Dr. David B. Roberts, Medical Vice President of the Columbus-Fort Benning Unit of the American Cancer Society. "The first is the possible influence of diet on development of cancer. The second is the role that good nutrition plays in a cancer patient's response to therapy and general well-being."

Regarding diet and cancer, it is encouraging to know that in the last 20 years there has been a decline in stomach cancer among both American men and women, said Dr. Roberts. While there is no firm explanation, some experts theorize that better refrigeration of foods to prevent fermentation (which involves cancer-causing substances called nitrosamines) may have an influence. Another factor may be distribution of foods grown in different areas that once were only available seasonally — for example, foods high in vitamin C such as oranges and tomatoes.

Typical American diet

The typical American diet is high in animal fats — meat, eggs, whole milk, and cheese. Altogether, many Americans obtain 40 percent of their daily caloric total from fat. In Japan, where fat supplies only 15-20 percent of daily caloric intake, there is a much lower breast cancer rate among women. However, when Japanese women migrate and adopt a western or American style diet higher in fat, breast cancer incidence rises. Recently, laboratory studies done by the American Health Foundation have shown that when animals are on a high fat diet, they are more likely to develop breast cancer.

Influence of fiber

"Lately many people in the Columbus-Phenix City area may have read or heard comments about the influence of fiber as a dietary factor in cancer. Bulk or fiber are catch-all words for many foods including raw salads, lightly cooked vegetables, bran, cracked and whole wheat cereals and breads. While some experts say that the American diet, which includes refined foods low in bulk, may have an influence on the fact that colorectal cancer is very common in this country, there is no proof that bulk or fiber reduces cancer risk," Roberts said.

Regarding good nutrition and the cancer patient, there is no doubt that good nutrition is an important factor in a cancer patient's response to therapy and general well-being.

Nutrition can help

"At times it may be difficult to persuade a person to eat well because of the troublesome side effects of some forms of treatment or the loss of appetite associated with illness," Roberts said. "But, this is very worthwhile and can be achieved by serving small meals of needed foods, perhaps with greater frequency."

Studies at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston have shown that proper nutrition can help patients respond favorably to chemotherapy. Other studies have shown similar results for patients undergoing surgery or radiation. Dr. William Steffee of the Boston University School of Medicine has reported that the poor eating habits of many elderly people deprive them of the physical reserve needed to withstand hospitalization. In such cases, nutritional therapy must become a part of total care.

"Attention to nutrition is part of the team approach of managing cancer patients," Roberts said.

For a person recovering from cancer treatment, attention to diet has an added bonus: it can provide a positive way to do something significant and be part of the medical care process. While many people associate cancer with drastic weight loss and malnutrition, some experts argue that this sequence need not always be a necessary part of having cancer. It has been speculated that loss of weight and appetite may reflect a psychological reaction to having cancer.

Poor nutrition a problem

Poor nutrition is a problem of many cancer patients, but Roberts said, "this is a problem that in most cases can be solved, particularly if nutritional therapy is started early and is continually monitored and adjusted to an individual patient's needs. Sometimes this can be a simple, practical matter — for example, making it possible for a cancer patient to eat according to his own schedule — not just when hospitals serve meals."

Helping medical professionals and the public learn about new approaches to cancer treatment is one vital aspect of the American Cancer Society's programs. In addition, the ACS supports research, educates the public about means of cancer control, and provides services to patients.

"Doing all we can."

"We are doing all we can," said William L. Amos, Chairman of the 1979 Education-Funds Crusade that kicks off April 1. "Now, during our crusade, we need the help of everyone in the Columbus-Phenix City area to keep our programs moving forward."

For further information, contact: Unit Director Sara Cason at 324-5614 or Crusade Publicity Chairman Joliene Hutto, 323-3431, extension 292.

Todd A. Hann

Columbus youth West Point bound

Todd A. Hann, son of MSgt. Daniel and Jean Hann of 290 Lavoie Ave., Fort Benning, Ga., a senior at Spencer High School, has received an appointment to the U.S. Military Academy.

As to why Todd selected the USMA, he had set a few goals for himself — including the pursuit of a military career and to work in the field of nuclear engineering. "When I had viewed all the other colleges, I found that the U.S. Military Academy offered the best program that would help me accomplish my goals."

Hann started the application process for the academy last summer, and was granted a nomination by Congressman William Stanton, a representative from Ohio.

Todd is currently preparing to graduate from Spencer High School, and is involved in numerous activities. He is the JROTC battalion commander, JROTC drill team commander, president of the National Honor Society at Spencer, president of Explorer Post #164, and a Mu Alpha Theta member. Along with his involvement in school, Todd has been the recipient of numerous awards, including Spencer's Most Outstanding Sophomore, Superior Junior Cadet in JROTC, and a participant in the Governor's Honor program in the field of math.

While attending the academy, Todd will pursue his interests in coin collecting and model railroad construction, and would like very much to play on the USMA soccer team and be a part of the Drill Team.

As far as plans for the future, Todd will continue on into graduate work pursuing his interest in the field of nuclear engineering.

I WANT TO WRITE A CLASSIC

*I want to write a classic and have it remembered throughout history,
The passages quoted through all time, and acted out by a famous mime ...
Be it a shoot'em up Western, a love story, a mystery or a crime.*

*I want to write a classic
so full of humor, laughter and love.
A classic with George Pierott adventures that take place on land and turns one's Head to the sky above.*

*I want to write a classic about how a boy meets a girl
The cowboy wins the West, the spaceman who conquers the unknown,
And the Mounty who gets his man ... and all the rest.*

*I want to write a classic
about a romantic war,
About how the hero gets the honors and a little more.*

*I want to write a classic
be it all in vain,
I want to write a classic
and have my name go down in fame.*

*I want to write a classic and have everyone remember me,
I want to write a classic about life and how things used to be.*

*I want to write a classic
about the here and now,
I want to write a classic about how ...*

*Discoing is the rage,
Science-fiction has come of age,
Books have taken a pornographic twist ... with each turn of the page.*

*I want to write a classic about how a woman meets a man.
It's not at your local hot dog stand,
but in the single's club,
Be it a tavern or a pub.*

*I want to write a classic about the changing ways of now,
I want to write a classic
if only I knew how.*

Policy helps vets obtain free services

Veterans who want help in pressing claims for veterans benefits now have a wider range of free services as a result of a new Veterans Administration policy.

For the first time in 32 years, VA has opened the doors to claims representatives of organizations not chartered by Congress.

Under new rules adopted by VA Administrator Max Cleland, a major barrier has been removed that effectively limited VA accreditation to 12 chartered national organizations and 14 other groups with long-established positions in representing veterans.

Cleland emphasized that veterans who want to deal directly with VA benefits counselors are welcomed.

"VA benefits counselors are obligated to represent a veteran's best interests in processing his claims," Cleland said.

"But the new policies open the doors for more groups, both large and small, to represent veterans in the preparation, presentation and prosecution of claims for benefits," Cleland said.

Two additional organizations, the Polish Legion of American Veterans, USA, and Swords to Plowshares, have been accredited under the policies adopted in October.

4th Stu Bn, TSB changes hands

Tribute was paid to the outgoing commander of the 4th Stu Bn (ABN), TSB, Lt. Col. Richard W. Cato, and his replacement, Lt. Col. Don B. Munson, last Friday morning in a change of command ceremony at Eubanks Field.

He has studied three languages — Serbian, Thai and Hungarian; Russian Area Studies at Georgetown University; and International Affairs at the University of Belgrade.

Many of Munson's earlier Army assignments were with Airborne Divisions and Special Forces Groups. He does not believe that one simply graduates from airborne training — to him, it is a way of life.

Cato took command of 4th Bn 18 months ago. His next assignment will be with MILPERCEN, Washington, D.C., as Chief of Systems Analysis.

His departing comments included, "Eighteen months ago, I made a jump and today, I make the landing. I've enjoyed standing in the door and associating with the people that leaped out that door into a new life. To Col. and Mrs. Munson I say, stand up, hook up, shuffle to the door . . . you are about to make the jump."

Following the ceremony, those present were entertained by the USAIS Command Exhibition Parachute Team with a freefall demonstration. While forming a star, the four-man team passed a baton among them before opening their chutes. They presented the engraved baton to the departing commander upon landing

Use EERs to stretch appliance and electric dollar

It's unfortunate but true. According to dealers and distributors, high-efficiency air conditioning units are not being chosen by a majority of builders or homeowners in Georgia. The result? Increased electric bills and the inefficient use of energy. The problem multiplies when you consider that each year in Georgia more than 40,000 air conditioning units are either newly installed or replaced.

If you plan on investing in an air conditioner, you can get the most out of your appliance and electric dollar if you examine the Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER) before making a selection. The EER measures the cooling ability of the air conditioner (calculated in BTU's, British Thermal Units) in relation to the amount of power the unit uses (measured in watts).

Some manufacturers list the EER figure on the air conditioner's tag; but if it's not there, you can figure it by dividing the number of BTU's the unit delivers by its wattage. A 1,370-watt, 12,000-BTU unit, for example, would have an EER of 8.76. The higher the EER, the more efficient the unit. Seven or above is considered good.

If two air conditioners have equal cooling capacity in BTU, but one has lower wattage, the unit with the lower wattage will be more efficient.

Suppose, though, you are considering two models with different BTU ratings. One provides 7,000 BTUs and uses 750 watts. The other provides 8,000 BTUs and uses 800 watts. If you compared watts alone, you would think the first model was more efficient. Compare EERs, though, and you will find that the second model, with an EER of 10, is more efficient than the first model, with an EER of 9.3

High-efficiency air conditioning units are more expensive, but in the long run can save money in power bills.

Here's how to estimate operating costs. Suppose you are considering an air conditioner that requires 860 watts to operate. Assume you will use it for 1,500 hours each season (the Georgia average). Divide 860 by 1,000 to get the kilowatt rating. .86. Multiply that by 1,500 and 3½ cents (the average cost of one kilowatt-hour of electricity). Your operating costs for the season would be approximately $45.15.

Compare that to an air conditioner requiring 1,100 watts. Assume you run it for the same length of time and pay the same amount of electricity, your season's operating costs would be approximately $57.75.

We as consumers benefit when we learn more about the products we buy. When those products are air conditioners and electricity, a knowledge of EERs pays off.

How about that?

Who is my family?

By Chaplain (Capt.) Jamie Thomas
2nd Bn 69th Armor

I want to share a great experience that I enjoyed in connection with the deployment of the 197th Infantry Brigade to Fort Drum for winter training exercises last month.

As a battalion chaplain with the 2nd Battalion 69th Armor, I had the opportunity to hear some of the questions and expectations that were foremost in the mind of the soldiers of the battalion. "Why do I have to go to Fort Drum and be separated from my family?" "Who will take care of them?" "Who will help my wife if my children get sick during the night?" "My wife can't drive, how will she get to the hospital?" "How will she get to the commissary?" "What is it going to be like at Fort Drum?" "I dread barracks living." "I just can't stand some of those people and I'll have to live, eat and sleep with them and have them around 24 hours a day." "This being separated from my wife and kids for 30 days really bugs me."

I saw these soldiers going through stages of anger, hostility and depression.

But once at Drum I saw these same individuals face reality and grow. They accepted the fact that they had to work as a team and take care of each other to accomplish the mission and survive in the severe cold.

In fact, they developed great concern for each other, concern based on respect and acceptance. Strangers, days earlier, now regarded each other as brothers or family members. By the time redevelopment was scheduled there was a great degree of confidence and love among each other; confidence and love that has continued to grow each day.

It is very important to notice at this point, how these soldiers who had been living in the same area, working in the same place, seeing each other day after day but never before had they taken the time to listen, talk, and share with each other until circumstances forced them to change.

Now, I see a new family at the 2nd Bn 69th Armor, a family of happiness, respect and love.

NCOWC Birthday Party

The NCOWC gave a birthday party at Muscogee Manor Nursing Home on March 27. With Easter near, chairwoman Mrs. Luise Paulshock chose an Easter theme for the party. The birthday cake was decorated like a basket filled with roses. Residents celebrating birthdays were seated at a table covered with white linen cloths. Easter eggs and arrangements completed the decorations.

On hand to assist with the party were: Mesdames Lois Cameron, Sue Patrick, Shigiko Brown, Betty Daley, Mary Williams, Lillian Lambert, Claudia Calvez and Patricia Wilson. Special thanks to Linda Lambert and Bobby Brown for also helping with the party.

NCOWC Hawaiian Luau

The NCOWC enjoyed a husband and wife Hawaiian Luau on Saturday, March 31, at their lounge on Lawson Field. Authentic Hawaiian food was prepared by Mrs. Salu Galumalemana with Mrs. Gloria Dunlap, Mrs. Joanne Thomas, Mrs. Eleanor Scott and Mrs. Frances Williams assisting.

Highlight of the evening was the hula dance, complete with grass skirts, performed by Mrs. Galumalemana and two friends, Jan and Shirley. Many thanks to the hostesses and dancers for a very enjoyable evening.

April 13, 1979

Livsey assigned to Germany

Department of the Army announced that Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander since July 1977, will be reassigned as commander of the 8th Infantry Division, Bad

Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey

Kreuznach, Germany. He will be replaced by Maj. Gen. Dave Grange, commander, 2d Infantry Division, Eighth U.S. Army, Korea, and former director of the Infantry School's Ranger Department.

No specific dates have been given for the command changes.

On receiving word of his new assignment, Livsey said, "I am honored that I would be selected to command a division. Commanding Fort Benning has been a most rewarding job. The support I have received from the people of Columbus and Phenix City has been truly outstanding and I am deeply appreciative of their help."

He went on to say, "I have never worked with a more dedicated group of professionals than the soldiers assigned to the Infantry Center."

Livsey was highly complimentary of his replacement. "Dave Grange is a veteran of three wars. He is a distinguished soldier, a highly decorated Infantryman, and uniquely qualified to command the Infantry Center."

"Most of all," Livsey continued, "he is a soldier's soldier."

Maj. Gen. Dave Grange

Take the last plane to Clarksville

By Deb Hilgeman

Benning personnel catching flights out of Columbus are not finding it as easy as it used to be, according to Elzie Elmore, chief, Movements Branch of the post Transportation Division.

Southern Airlines discontinued service at the city airport March 31 and Eastern Airlines reduced service Dec. 31 from four to two flights a day until April 30. After that, they will schedule one flight per week, on Wednesdays, with total cutoff scheduled for May 31. The reason given by the airlines is that a shortage of aircraft forced them to divert their craft to larger airports where they can be used for longer flights.

Delta, the only remaining airline out of Columbus, "has no plans that we know of to increase service," according to Elmore.

"This action has and will continue to affect Fort Benning," said Elmore. "Flights are harder to get and we anticipate further problems when Eastern discontinues service. Wednesdays and Fridays, the days when the 1st ITB has large movements of troops departing from Columbus, and Thursdays when Airborne classes graduate, will be difficult days for getting airline reservations." Flights affected will be those leaving Columbus between 1:30 p.m. and midnight.

All Benning personnel traveling to Washington, D.C. will be affected by the cutback. "We were using Eastern and Delta all the way but will now use Delta as much as possible and when their flights are full, we will schedule Delta to Atlanta and from there, Eastern to Washington."

She went on to say that all official travel can be taken care of through the Transportation Office which has two locations on post — Main Post and Harmony Church. "If the government is paying, we issue the ticket."

Elmore added that the commercially scheduled airline offices are also located in the Transportation Offices to assist in handling official travel and to handle unofficial travel by post personnel.

While overbooking by the airlines affects some travelers, Elmore says it is "not too common." In order to avoid problems encountered with air travel, she advises making reservations as far in advance as possible and showing up at the airport at least 45 minutes before departure time, especially on holidays.

Post Transportation Office officials say an average of 3,100 Benning soldiers and dependents make airline reservations through the post Transportation Office or post airline ticket offices each month, and officials expect this number to increase "substantially" during summer months.

See related story on airline overbooking on page 7.

PFC Jack Hanson

The new complex at Sand Hill will be dedicated today.

In honor of Korean War hero

ITB barracks dedication set today

By Pat Astran

The fourth new barracks in the Sand Hill area will be dedicated in memory of Korean War Medal of Honor recipient PFC Jack G. Hanson today at 10:30 a.m.

The barracks is occupied by soldiers of the 1st Bn, 1st ITB.

Hanson enlisted in August 1950 shortly before his 20th birthday. He was sent to Korea after completing his initial training, and was assigned to Co F, 31st Inf Regt, 7th Inf Div.

On June 7, 1951, near Pachi-Dong, Hanson distinguished himself by killing 22 enemy soldiers before he died.

The action occurred as Hanson's company, in defensive positions on two strategic hills separated by a wide saddle, was attacked at about 3 a.m.

The brunt of the attack centered on the approach to the divide within range of Hanson's .50 caliber machinegun. Four riflemen were wounded and evacuated in the initial attack.

The numerically superior enemy, advancing under cover of darkness, infiltrated and posed an imminent threat to the security of the command post and weapons platoon. Upon orders to move to key terrain above and to the right of his position, Hanson voluntarily remained to provide protective fire for the withdrawal.

Hanson's assistant gunner and three riflemen had been wounded and crawled to safety, leaving Hanson to cover his unit's retreat alone.

Hanson volunteered to remain behind and cover his buddies' withdrawal.

Following a counterattack by the company's 1st Plt, Hanson's body was found in front of his emplacement, his machinegun ammo expended, an empty pistol in his right hand, a blood-stained machete in his left and the bodies of some 22 enemy scattered around him.

Present at today's dedication will be Hanson's sister, Mrs. Eran Rabby, his brothers, Fred, William and Lonnie with their wives, and Mrs. Virginia Hanson, widow of his brother Ronald.

Mrs. Rabby's daughter, Mrs. Patricia Crews, will present a family statement at the reception.

Nineteen other family members will also attend.

Post dignitaries attending will be Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey Jr., post commander; Lt. Col. David E. Cooper, acting commander of the 1st ITB; Lt. Col. Robert B. Thomas, 1st Bn commander; Maj. Jerry H. Durre, 1st Bn executive officer; and CSM Albert J. Avilla, 1st Bn sergeant major.

Medal of Honor recipients CW4 Michael J. Novosel, SFC James L. Bondsteel, Col. (ret) Edward R. Schowalter Jr. and Maj. (ret) Charles L. McGaha are also slated to attend.

Hanson barracks is a modern, air conditioned, battalion-size complex. The three-story building can accommodate 1,150 men which is equivalent to five companies plus cadre of a training battalion. The immense structure measures 536 x 433 ft. and has an enclosed area of 210,000 ft. and an additional covered area of 42,921 ft. The first floor houses administrative areas, dining halls, classrooms and training areas. Troop living quarters and recreation areas are located on the second and third floors. The complex cost about $6.47 million to construct.

The barracks will serve as a lasting tribute to PFC Hanson, and his actions will serve as a source of pride for those who will serve as Infantrymen in the years to come.

VA Q&A

Q — I have just been awarded educational benefits for an on-the-job training program. With the first check I received a computer card. What do I do with this card?

A — Your employer should certify the number of hours you work each month and sign the card. You must sign the card, and you should return it promptly in the envelope provided. Your payment for each succeeding month will not be made until the card is returned and processed by VA.

Q — When insurance premiums are made by a third party, may such person request that premium notices be sent to him or her?

A — Premium notices will be sent to a third party only when authorized by the insured in writing.

Q — I receive a widow's pension from the VA. If I receive a cost of living increase in my Social Security next year, will my VA pension be reduced?

A — Public Law 95-588, effective January 1, 1979, prevents any decrease in pension solely due to a Social Security cost of living increase.

Q — I am a veteran of the Army Reserve and have had no regular active duty. Am I eligible for a VA guaranteed home loan?

A — You are not eligible for a VA guaranteed home loan. However, you may be eligible for one of the FHA loan programs. Check with the agency that administers that program.

Q — Are veterans with a non-compensable rating for hypertension automatically entitled to a 10 percent rating if medication is continuously taken for control of the disease?

A — Veterans in this category are not automatically entitled;

however, there are provisions for compensable rating to veterans who take medication for control of hypertension when other medical standards are met.

Q — I was recently discharged from the military service. The only entitlement I have to school benefits is under Chapter 32 since I enlisted on Jan. 29, 1977. Am I entitled to tutorial assistance?

A — Veterans attending school under Chapter 32 are not entitled to tutorial assistance.

Q — Does the Veterans Administration require a downpayment on a VA home loan?

A — Yes. A statement from the director or custodian of records at a nursing home verifying that a veteran is in need of nursing home care usually will justify aid and attendance benefits in addition to the veteran's regular pension.

Members of the 444th Trans Co get into the suds. The 444th sponsored a car wash March 31 to benefit the Army Emergency Relief (AER). Twenty-four people took part in the wash which raised $165 for the AER. More than 70 cars pulled in for the wash and vacuum. The 444th went all out for the AER, first raising $208 in contributions and then collecting the money for the car wash for a total of $373.

MAH has hot line for troubled teens

The Patient Affairs Liaison (PAL) office at Martin Army Hospital (MAH) has a hot line for troubled teens of active duty and retired military personnel.

If you are a youth with questions regarding medical care, drug problems, venereal disease, pregnancy, or anything else in the medical field, dial 544-2788.

MAH has several physicians specializing in adolescent medicine, as well as a professional staff of counselors trained to deal with drug problems, teen pregnancies, family problems, and molested young adults. There are also staff members who deal in treatment of social diseases and other medical related problems.

"We at MAH want to do all we can to help our adolescent population in the sometimes difficult transition from childhood to adulthood," said Jeanne Dickerson, a social worker in the PAL office.

Bonuses offered

Non-prior service recruits can now receive cash bonuses for two more MOSs, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Soldiers enlisting for MOS 12E (engineer track vehicle crewman) will receive a $1,500 enlistment bonus as of March 6 and soldiers enlisting for MOS 11H (heavy anti-armor weapons crewman) will receive $2,500 as of March 13, officials said.

Recruits must meet the following requirements to be eligible for the enlistment bonus:

- (A) Be a high school diploma graduate
- (B) Be in mental categories I-III
- (C) Have no prior service (ARNEWS)

"Uncle Sam needs us."

Patricia & Sheltra

Sergeant Robert Sheltra is an infantryman. He reenlisted because he enjoys his work and his life in the Army. His wife, Patty, agrees. "I like Army life. The benefits are good. The medical help. And the travel. I've gone to more places, met more people than ever before. I have a lot of friends here in the Army. My husband enjoys his job. He likes the people he works with. I've always liked the Army. I would encourage anyone to reenlist."

Maybe your husband should have a chat with his career counselor. He may find out just how much Uncle Sam needs him.

Keep a good family in the Army.

Glad you asked

Do you feel the 197th chaplains are doing enough to support the troops?

SSgt. Leroy Holmes,
Co B, 1/29th, 197th Inf Bde

I feel that the chaplains of the 197th Infantry are doing their jobs very well, under the conditions that the 197th operates. Most of the time the men are in the field and just having the chaplain come out and say hello, or give a prayer brightens up the day.

PFC Ken Baublitz,
Co A, 197th Spt Bn

The chaplains on Kelley Hill are always willing to listen to a personal problem and give spiritual as well as moral advice. They always seem to have a smile and often just by that it brightens up a dull moment. In my opinion they are doing just fine.

Cpl. Bobby Lewis,
Co C, 2/10, 197th Inf Bde

I think the chaplains of the 197th are doing a fine job. They give support around the clock. But it is left up the troops to support them.

PFC Diane Schmidt,
Co B, 197th Spt Bn

They need to visit the units more often. I personally have never seen the chaplains around the unit at all.

Letters to the Editor

Chaplain service questioned

Dear Editor:

I would like to know something. What does the chaplain do for me; the average soldier? If I remember correctly, when I in-processed into my unit I wasn't given a briefing about chapel services. I'm certain that the chapel services weren't even on the in-processing sheet which lists those places that are important for the soldier to get to know. Does that mean that the command structure doesn't believe the chapel is important? Where were they when we went to Fort Drum in February?

*Name Withheld
197th Inf Bde*

The Kelley Hill chaplains provide a variety of services here.

Aside from the religious services performed regularly at the Kelley Hill Chapel, the five chaplains assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade are available for counseling and, in the event of emergencies, they are available on a 24-hour basis. The five chaplains assigned to the Brigade represent all major faiths. If there is a religion not represented, the chaplains will contact a representative in the greater Columbus area.

Counseling is not restricted to the men and women assigned to the Brigade and their dependents. During extended field exercises, at least one chaplain remains behind to see to the needs of the dependents.

While at Fort Drum, Brigade Chaplain (Maj.) Michael Yunk and his aides instituted a Chapel Activities Center to provide the troops a warm place of relaxation and fellowship out of the Arctic cold. There were games, books, a color TV and even full length movies. Attendance at the center increased from a handful nightly to almost fifty by the second week of operation.

For more information about chaplains' activities in the Brigade, visit the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Brother love is greatest gift

By William Erbach Sr.
TSB Chaplain

The story is told of a young boy who was called upon to give his small brother a blood transfusion because of a serious accident in which he had a dangerous loss of blood.

The older brother was called to the hospital suddenly and as it does sometimes happen even with thoughtful parents, doctors, and nurses in an emergency, no one had explained to him what a transfusion meant. He donned the hospital garb and lay down beside his unconscious brother. The needle was inserted into his arm, and he looked up at the doctor who was making the transfusion and said as serious as such a young boy could be: "When do I croak, Doc?"

He knew nothing about transfusions, and no one had explained that it was a harmless experience for a healthy body. He actually felt during the hurried trip to the hospital and then the transfusion itself that they were asking him to give his life for his brother. The one question, "When do I croak, Doc?" revealed to all that he had never raised a question about it.

The boy's parents wept as did a nurse. Two men blinked their eyes and coughed, and the physician, realizing himself the drama of the moment spoke of the great Bible verse — "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." How about that?

CAB announces policy

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) released its new overbooking rules designed to minimize the practice of bumping passengers involuntarily, but declined to prohibit overbooking altogether.

They maintain the practice benefits passengers by filling seats which otherwise would be left empty by no-shows and late cancellations. This, they say, keeps airline fares down and permits more travelers to get a seat on the flight of their choice.

Under the new rules, before anyone may be bumped against his will, the airlines must seek volunteers who will agree to be bumped in return for a payment by the airlines. If there are not enough volunteers, carriers may involuntarily bump passengers according to a priority seating plan approved by the CAB and available at ticket counters.

Involuntary bumpers will receive more compensation — the full value of their ticket coupons to their destination or first stopover (minimum $37.50, maximum $200).

Should an airline fail to provide alternate transportation that moves the bumped passenger to destination within two hours of originally scheduled arrival time, the airline would have to double the minimum monetary compensation the passenger (minimum $75, maximum $400). Under current rules, denied boarding compensation, ranging from $25 to $200, is payable only to bumped passengers who have not been rerouted within two hours.

In case of official travel, members will insure that checks issued by the carriers as denied boarding compensation are made payable to the Treasurer of the United States and forwarded to the Transportation Office with a copy of the applicable travel order.

For further information call the Transportation Division at 545-2123.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Springtime love brings rise in VD

By James Knisley

Treponema Pallidum, is a fancy name for the slender twisted microscopic organism that attacks anyone regardless of their race, social status, age, wealth, or sexual preferences. The disease this insidious organism causes is called SYPHILIS. It and its frequent partner GONORRHEA are on the rise in the Fort Benning and Columbus area, according to Sigsbee Mainous, post venereal disease control officer.

Syphilis and gonorrhea invade the body during sexual contact with a person who is already infected. The relationship can be either heterosexual or homosexual. Prophylactics, when properly used, reduce the chances of infection, but nothing can guarantee that you won't contract the disease, unless, you practice total abstinence.

How do I know if I have it?

Syphilis normally first appears as a chancre (a dull red, hard lesion) on the genital organs. It can appear on the lips or tongue as well. If left untreated it may eventually disappear, giving the infected person a false sense of security. At this point the syphilis organism has entered the bloodstream and will reappear months, even years later in other parts of the body.

In men, gonorrhea normally first makes its presence known by a burning sensation that accompanies urination. In women it frequently has no symptoms until it has caused damage to the uterus and other body organs. It may however, cause an unexplained vaginal discharge.

Syphilis, if untreated, will cause crippling, paralysis, heart disease, blindness, brain damage, and eventually death. Gonorrhea, if untreated, will damage most body organs. It can cause crippling arthritis, heart disease, blindness, and sterility.

How can I treat it?

There is no home remedy for treating syphilis or gonorrhea. Your only safe choice is to report to the Venereal Disease Clinic, Bldg 322. There you will be tested for the disease and given the appropriate treatment if necessary.

The personnel at the clinic will also need to do a contact interview. This interview is to help insure that the person you caught the disease from doesn't infect anyone else. If you don't give the interviewer true and accurate information, you could be setting yourself up to be reinfected by someone who was with someone who was with your first contact.

Your treatment and interview are confidential. Minors do not need parental consent for confidential treatment. By law, the clinic must report V.D. cases to the Health Department, but these are strictly confidential and your name will never be used.

How can I avoid it?

There is no 100 percent tried and true way to avoid venereal disease if you are sexually active. You can reduce your chances of catching V.D. by choosing your partner carefully and avoiding the local areas where V.D. contacts have been high. Contact interviews have shown that V.D. contacts frequently occur in the Benning Drive, Victory Drive, 8th Street, and 9th Street areas of Columbus, according to Mainous.

You are the only person who can stop the rise of venereal disease. By seeking proper medical treatment and being honest during the interview you can help insure that others won't become victims.

Poisonous snakes like warm weather, too

The Fort Benning Provost Marshal's Fish and Game Section, would like to take this time to address those of you who will be risking the wilds, to enjoy the fishing, boating and camping during the coming summer months. The Fish and Game Section would like to remind people that along with the warm weather will come the various snakes that are common in our area.

Here are some precautions that can be taken to avoid meeting these rascals:

- Don't put your hands or feet in places that you cannot see!
- Don't turn or lift a rock or fallen tree with your hands. Move it with a stick or with your foot, if your ankle and leg are properly protected.
- Don't disturb snakes.
- Don't place your sleeping bag near rock piles or rubbish piles and stay away from heavy brush areas.
- Don't sit down without looking around carefully.
- Don't gather firewood after dark.
- Don't step over any logs. Step up on them first, look and then proceed.
- Don't go out of your way to kill a snake, thousands of people are bitten each year trying to kill a snake.
- Don't swim in waters where snakes abound.

- Don't panic if bitten by a snake.

The following three snakes are the most common poisonous snakes encountered in the Fort Benning/Columbus areas. Descriptions of snakes are essential in the treatment of snake bites.

Copperhead

The head is triangular in shape, the body moderately stout. Color: pinkish-buff, russet or orange-brown with dark brown to reddish crossbands. The belly is pinkish white with large dark spots. This snake's length is anywhere from two to four feet.

Water Moccasin (cotton mouth)

The head of this snake is also triangular in shape, the body moderately stout. Color: olive brown with wide blackish crossbands often enclosing lighter centers. The belly is yellow with black spots with the tip of the tail being black. Average length is two to four feet.

Eastern Diamondback Rattlesnake

This snake's head is also triangular and has whitish stripes on the sides of the head. Color: olive green to dark brown with darker diamond shaped blotches on the back. This snake will usually give a warning by rattling the buttons on his tail, but these snakes have been known not to rattle before biting. Length is usually anywhere from three to five feet with a maximum length of eight feet.

Remember, if you are bitten try to get a description of the snake or at least know the area and get medical treatment as soon as you can without delay. For further information call the Fish and Game Section at 545-7669.

BANKRUPTCY

Bankruptcy is the condition of lacking sufficient assets to pay one's debts. To the wage earner drowning in a sea of debt, the Bankruptcy Act offers two lands of rescue. One is by Voluntary Bankruptcy, where an individual bankrupt, including a partnership and members thereof, is concerned, his adjudication in bankruptcy acts automatically as an application for a discharge.

The second alternative, although not as well known, has been gaining favor steadily in recent years. Called a Wage Earner Plan, it is designated for the person who is ready, willing and able eventually to pay his debts . . . if only he can have a breathing spell . . . to put his finances in better shape.

To hear a program on BANKRUPTCY call the National Center for Legal Referral.

From the mouths of babes ... to the mouths of Infantry soldiers

Story and Photos by Pat Astran

Dental clinics play an important role in the total picture of physical fitness. While physical fitness requires strength and endurance, it also requires good personal hygiene and health.

One unit dedicated to serving the dental needs of Fort Benning is the Salomon Dental Clinic, dedicated in memory of Capt. Ben L. Salomon on Feb. 23, 1978. The clinic serves the 1st, 3rd, 6th and 7th Battalions of the Infantry Training Brigade, as well as dependents of active duty and retired personnel. The ultra-modern facility is staffed by 13 officers, six enlisted members and 32 civilians.

Karen Wetherall, Registered Dental Hygienist, gives an oral hygiene instruction class.

The staff provides services in oral surgery, prosthodontics, periodontics, endodontics, and orthodontics, as well as dental laboratory services.

The oral surgeon provides treatment of diseases of the mouth and injuries of the jaw and associated structures.

Prosthodontics is the process of artificially replacing missing dental/jaw parts while periodontics provides prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases involving the tissue structures that involve the teeth.

Orthodontics is the prevention and correction of irregularities in the alignment of the teeth and the prevention and correction of malocclusion (the abnormality of the coming together of the teeth).

The clinic also provides an extensive lab service, the essence of which is Radiography (X-Ray).

Radiography is indispensable to modern dental practice. The dental radiographic specialist must have a thorough knowledge of the potential hazards associated with the use of radiation and how to protect against those hazards. He must also be thoroughly familiar with the procedures necessary to produce radiographs of diagnostic quality.

Dental anatomy, oral pathology, oral microbiology and sterilization and the use of materials in dentistry are only a few of the things in which a dental specialist is trained.

Just how important is a dental specialist? Clinical studies and surveys show that a dentist operating with an efficient assistant can provide at least 50 percent more service than one who works alone.

A dentist's job isn't just pulling teeth anymore, and a dentist in the Army supporting the ITB is a highly trained and motivated professional, dedicated to serving soldiers and their families.

DYA sponsoring Easter egg hunt

Fort Benning's Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) will sponsor an Easter egg hunt Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m.

The hunt, which is open to children ages 3-12 years, will be held in the field adjacent to the DYA, Bldg 1054.

Frisbees, Easter baskets, candy eggs and candy bunnies will be among the prizes given out.

Speaking of Easter egg hunts, the Top 5 NCO Club will sponsor an egg hunt as part of their Easter Sunday celebration. Following the hunt which begins at 1:30 p.m., there will be games at 3 p.m. with an Easter Buffet to follow from 6-8:30 p.m.

Military engineers meet

The April meeting of the Society of American Military Engineers will be held Wednesday and will consist of a guided tour through the W.C. Bradley Co. located in north Columbus on the Beallwood Connector (U.S. Highway 27).

People attending the field trip should meet at the Bradley Co. at noon. For directions, call 563-6088.

Easter egg hunts

The Easter Bunny is coming to Columbus Square Mall today and tomorrow.

Stop by and have your picture taken with the bunny today from 4 to 9 p.m. or tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Charge is $3.

Columbus Square Mall's Easter Bunny will also be making a special appearance at the Listening Eyes School for the Deaf today at 1 p.m. The Easter Bunny will be joining the children in celebrating their Easter party.

Easter Jam

Columbus Square Mall Merchants Association, WCGQ and Bash Productions presents the 2nd

Annual Easter Jam, tomorrow at Memorial Stadium.

Area bands will be performing from noon till 8 p.m. tomorrow night with lots of fun in between. Greased pigs, greased flag poles, flying frisbees and bikini clad girls are part of the fun planned. Five hundred Easter eggs will be hidden with a prize in every egg and a grand prize egg contains a $500 shopping spree at Columbus Square Mall.

In case of a rainout, the Easter Jam will be rescheduled for Saturday, April 21st.

Disco dance tonight

The McGraw Manor Youth Council is sponsoring a disco dance tonight from 7-11 p.m. at the McGraw Manor Activities Center, Bldg 11303. The dance is for youths ages 6-19 and chaperones will be present.

This strange looking contraption is a new rescue device which was being demonstrated by the 478th Trans Co, 34th Med Bn. Elements of the 478th traveled to Callaway Gardens April 5 for a demonstration of their newest apparatus, the Suspended Maneuvering System (SMS). The SMS is a device used to rescue people from hard to get to places like a burning skyscraper. The SMS is suspended by a 500 or 1000 ft. fixed cable. It maneuvers independently of the helicopter, horizontally in any direction by means of advance thrust and an altitude control system. The SMS is piloted by an on board operator, independent of helicopter operations. The system was developed for vertical takeoff and landing aircraft, as well as orbiting spacecraft permits exact placement of the SMS in areas that no other equipment could reach.

Mall service station cuts operating hours

A cutback in Fort Benning's gasoline allocation has forced shortened operating hours at the Main Mall service station, a PX official said this week.

The new schedule of 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday went into effect Monday.

The cutback was ordered after PX planners were notified by Chevron, the post's gas supplier, that Fort Benning would receive only 95 percent of its April fuel allocation.

To insure equal distribution to all customers, satellite stations will have to be prepared to revise their operating schedules on short notice, the PX spokesman said. He added that no changes at the Harmony Church, Kelley Hill or Main Post service stations have been ordered at his time.

The tour bus will leave Fort Benning at 7 a.m. on Friday, April 27. It will arrive in time for the Rose Parade at 10:30 a.m. from reserved seats. Next on the schedule is a guided two-hour bus tour of beautiful Thomasville and surrounding area plantations.

Everyone should bring their own picnic lunch and enjoy a day among the roses.

Cost of the trip is $10.50. You may make your reservation at the OWC Building. For further information call 682-2932.

OWC scholarships

Area high school seniors who are dependents of active-duty or retired military personnel are reminded that Monday is the deadline for applying for the scholarships to be awarded by the OWC. All high school counselors have the information and the necessary application forms.

VA check deposit problems avoidable

Some problems involving direct deposit of Veterans Administration Compensation and Pension checks can be avoided by following a few simple procedures, according to VA officials.

The direct deposit system allows VA beneficiaries to have compensation and pension checks sent to a checking or savings account at the financial institution of their choice.

Following application, beneficiaries should allow about 90 days for direct deposit to take effect, officials explained. During this time the checks will continue to go to the current address.

If a person wishes to cancel direct deposit at any time, VA should be notified either by mail or phone. Toll-free numbers are available in all 50 states.

A change of address card from the post office will not be enough to cancel, however, beneficiaries should keep their bank account open until the check is received at the new address.

If a person wishes to change banks, a standard form from the new bank is all that is required.

It is important to keep the account open at the old bank until the first payment is received at the new bank, officials emphasized. (ARNEWS)

Riverside tour to benefit ACS

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William J. Livsey will open the doors to "Riverside" on April 22 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

"Riverside" was designated a National Historic Home and accepted by the National Register of Historic Places in 1972. Admission for the tour is volunteer contributions of canned food items such as vegetables, meat dinners, fruit juices, etc. Cash contributions will also be accepted. Cash and food collected will be used for stockage of the Army Community Services (ACS) emergency food locker.

"Riverside" was built in 1909 by Arthur Bussey, a prominent Columbus businessman, and served as a summer home for the Bussey family. The spacious dwelling was surrounded by one of the last self-supporting plantations in this area. In 1918 Camp Benning was founded when the Infantry School moved from Fort Sill, Okla., to Columbus, and since that time this stately residence has served as the official living quarters for a succession of commanding generals.

The ACS staff and volunteers, who sponsor the tour, provide emergency food to financially burdened families in times of crisis. All active duty and retired families are eligible to receive such assistance. Normally a three-day supply of food is provided to the needy family to get them over their crisis. Nursery service will be provided at "Riverside" for children under ten years of age. All other children must be accompanied by an adult. For more information contact ACS at 545-1233 or 545-1169.

LRD helps people who want to learn

The U.S. Army Infantry School's (USAIS) Learning Resources Division (LRD) assists students, faculty and staff of the school in getting facts. It does this through conventional library materials as well as microfilms, audio-video tapes, slides and the Training Extension Course (TEC), supported by semi-automated reference and bibliographic services.

The USAIS Library and Individual Learning Center (ILC) make up the LRD. They are under the command of Col. Douglas M. Craver, director of training, and the supervision of Mrs. Vivian S. Howard.

Library

In the USAIS library, reference and research services are available for students, faculty and staff, who are studying, teaching and serving the Infantry School and Center.

Anyone interested in the history of the Infantry School in print or pictures, current materials on Infantry organization, tactics, leadership, weapons, decisive battles, foreign policy, after-action reports, students' staff studies, instructional materials and programs of instruction of the Infantry School can call or visit the library in Room 101, Bldg 4.

Librarians are willing to assist library patrons in locating any reference sources they may need.

Some of the special features of the USAIS library are:

- Inter-library loan services are readily available within the DoD libraries and related agencies, and from civilian libraries through affiliation with the Georgia Library Information Network.
- There is an extensive collection of detailed maps of countries produced by the Army map service.
- The library can obtain, without charge, DoD-sponsored research and development reports dating back to World War II from the Defense Documentation Center.
- Microfilm with portable microfilm readers are available for loan.
- Regularly prepared bibliographies and special bibliographies are provided upon request.

Individual Learning Center

The ILC provides a learning environment for individually self-paced instruction. Students and staff have access to learning carrels equipped with audio cassette tape players with television receivers, 35mm slide projectors and super 8mm projectors. Tapes, slides and printed materials cover categories ranging from military history and instruction to enrichment programs assigned to enhance the soldiers' training.

Enrichment programs are available in such areas as speed reading, effective listening, management series, American history series, GED, and language series.

SSgt. Wesley Bevelle gives a briefing on the ILC facility to some visiting Canadian Officers.

Instructional programs, especially TEC, are available for review by soldiers preparing for their Skill Qualification Test or those who just want to perfect their job proficiency.

A self-paced projectionist course offered by ILC enables an individual to train him or herself to be a qualified operator of the Sony Rover Television Trainer System and 16mm Projector Sets AS-25A and AS-25A1.

A special feature of the ILC, that might be of interest to post hunters, is a hunting safety orientation tape that can be viewed before obtaining a post hunting permit from the Provost Marshal's Office.

Shattering Ranger 'mystique'

By Sharron Calabrisi

"I wanna be an Airborne Ranger, live a life of constant danger." This is the chant that draws attention to the men with the black and gold tabs on their shoulders that read 'RANGER'.

There seems to be a mystique about the life of constant danger that the Rangers live.

The preconception that most everyone has is that all Rangers are big, dumb and ugly. This is not the case, at least, with the Ranger Dept. at Fort Benning. To be even more specific, it is not the case with SSgt. Gordon R. Pullen, U.S. Army Ranger instructor.

Ranger or not

Pullen is with the Morgan Branch of Rangers at Harmony Church. To talk with him, one would never imagine he is, indeed, a Ranger. The camouflage fatigues and black beret he wears are the only things that set him apart.

Pullen joined the Army in 1971 "for a challenge." He completed basic training at Fort Campbell, Ky., and AIT at Fort Polk, La.

"My brother was in the Army, and I wanted to follow in his footsteps," he explained. "I went to Airborne school because my brother was Airborne qualified. I went to Ranger school because I wanted to do something a little better than my brother."

"I knew when I graduated from Ranger school I could lead men," he noted. "When they pinned the Ranger tab on me, I could feel my chest swell."

Directly after Ranger school, Pullen was sent to Florida as a Ranger instructor. "I was 19 years old and an E-5; nothing could have been better," he recalled.

Busy Army career

Pullen has attended various other Army schools, including: Pathfinder, Jump Master, AGOS (Air to Ground Operations School) and SERE (Survival, Evasion, Resistance and Escape training).

Pullen has recently completed his 65th jump to be eligible for his master jump wings. "I didn't want to be a novice all of my life," he explained. "I'll be almost as proud of that as I am of my Ranger tab."

Before becoming a Ranger instructor, Pullen had to complete TRADEP, an instructor school at Fort Benning. Pullen has been a Ranger instructor since 1976.

Mental and physical stress

The training the Ranger students receive is very stressful, both mentally and physically.

SSgt. Gordon R. Pullen

"The idea is to put them in the closest environment to combat possible to properly train them," he explained. "They must learn to hold up under all conditions."

PFC Mark Bailey, 690th Med Co, commented, "The treatment has to be this way, because it is worse in combat." When asked about the Rangers, Bailey said, "They are the best!"

"When the school began in 1951, the purpose was to upgrade training standards and fighting spirit and leadership throughout the Army," Pullen said.

Different approaches

"The training has to differ from the classroom and the field," he commented. "In the classroom, we must try to appeal to their sense. We can't treat them the same as in the field. When it's time to train, we train, and when it's time for stress — it's there."

Pullen is one of the primary demonstrators in the hand-to-hand combat training Ranger students receive. His knowledge of Tae Kwon Do, a Korean form of karate, aids him in this training. Pullen holds a red belt in this art, one grade below a black belt.

"He demonstrates hand-to-hand because he is one of the most aggressive Rangers here," commented Sgt. David Libersat, Ranger instructor. "He is really dedicated," he added. Libersat concluded by saying, "He is also one of the best instructors, tactically, we have."

Misunderstood Rangers

Pullen feels that Rangers are misused and people don't really understand their mission. "People seldom see what we do because we put in our eight hours before they are even up," he explained. "We are not eight to four workers like most."

Sometimes his days go from 3 a.m. until 11 or 11:30 p.m. "I don't even go to bed some nights," he added. "I guess I have gotten used to it. The long hours will probably tell on me when I get a little age on me."

"In this department, we have the best NCOs in the Army. I feel that being a Ranger makes for a better soldier. We are the elite in our own right," he emphasized.

Rangers lead the way

"Prompt obedience and self-discipline used to be the Ranger motto," noted SGM Charles J. Riddle. The motto has been changed to 'Rangers lead the way.' This motto was derived in World War II when the 5th Ranger Bn invaded Normandy on D-Day. The Rangers use this motto to show their esprit de corps when they salute officers, saying, "Rangers lead the way, Sir."

"Not just anyone can be a Ranger. It's added responsibility and not everyone can handle it," Pullen stressed. "When you are around Rangers, you know you are around professional soldiers. I'm proud to be a Ranger. I'd rather be one more than anything else."

DUI can be the last

By Deb Hilgeman

If you find yourself feeling giddy behind the wheel, and your rearview mirror reflects a flashing blue light, then you are, as the saying goes, "in a heap of trouble, now."

Between October and March of this year, 64 Fort Benning soldiers were arrested on either Victory Drive or S. Lumpkin Road for driving under the influence (DUI). During this same time period, 31 soldiers were picked up on post for the same offense.

(Editor's note: DUI relates to the military offense of drunken driving. Article 111 in the UCMJ states that individuals are "drunk" if they are intoxicated sufficiently to impair the rational and full exercise of their mental or physical faculties.)

Learning the hard way

These soldiers found out the hard way that drinking and driving spells big trouble, no matter who catches you doing it.

"Ultimately, you receive more heartache if you're picked up for drunk driving on post," t dumb thing you ever do said Capt. Paul Holland of the post Provost Marshal's Office (PMO). "A soldier then has to go through the legal process, plus he faces the added embarrassment and stigma of having his chain-of-command obtain his release from the PMO."

Passing the test

Whether it is civilian or military police pulling you over, the next step is a "field test" (walk a straight line, touch your nose, etc.). If you are off post and flunk this test, you're on your way to jail. "Local police don't write a ticket and let the individual go," stressed Holland.

If you're picked up off post, you'll be escorted to the Columbus City Jail and your vehicle will usually be secured at the scene. At the station, you are given a test to determine whether or not you are legally drunk (.1 percent, according to Georgia law). The usual test administered is the breathalyzer, although urinalysis or blood alcohol is also available. By refusing to undergo a sobriety test, you automatically forfeit your state driving privilege. The same procedure is followed by the post PMO.

If you're being held downtown, in most cases a bond will be set and, provided you're able to pay, you'll be released when you're sober enough to drive. If you can't pay, you remain in jail until recorder's court meets the next day. At that time, most first offenders are given a fine which is "frequently in excess of $200," according to David Hopkins, spokesman for the Columbus Police Dept.

High activity areas

While some soldiers cry 'discrimination' in that Columbus police "look" for soldiers off post, Hopkins disagrees. "Victory Drive and S. Lumpkin Road are high activity areas-period! Soldiers are not being singled out and there is no quota system. By the law of averages, if 10 people are stopped in these areas on a Saturday night, at least half of them will be soldiers."

The legal process doesn't end when the fine is paid. A report of your case is forwarded to the Georgia Dept. of Public Safety and your driving license is revoked for one year. Benning police become aware of your case through a daily arrest report from the Columbus Police Dept. and, if found guilty, your post driving privileges will be revoked by PMO for six months to one year. Your company commander receives a copy of the report and delivers the last blow, which can be any form of administrative action, according to Holland.

Released to unit

If you are a soldier apprehended for DUI on post, you will be released to your unit after being processed at the PMO and the case will be forwarded to your unit commander. The commander forwards his findings and action taken back to the PMO. The PMO will automatically suspend post driving privileges for refusal to submit to a breathalyzer test and for personnel guilty of drunk driving.

I THOUGHT I'D NEVER GET CAUGHT.

Holland pointed out that although the PMO does not administer punishment to civilians picked up for drunk driving, they do forward cases to the local Federal Magistrate's Court. Punishment by the magistrate varies but usually a stiff fine is imposed, according to Holland.

If you haven't already decided to call a cab the next time you're out drinking, consider this: officials estimate that at least 80 percent of all traffic accident fatalities are alcohol-related. If you're picked up for DUI, you can consider yourself lucky. The alternative could have been scraping you off the highway.

MAH clinic accepting applications

Martin Army Hospital (MAH) has announced that for the first time in more than a year, applications are being accepted from active duty soldiers and their families who wish to become enrolled in the Family Practice clinic. Approximately 400 active duty soldiers and their families will be accepted during the next two months. There are still no openings available for retired personnel and their families.

Applications may be picked up in the lobby of Family Practice "A", located in the clinic wing of MAH on the first floor. A Red Cross volunteer or hospital employee will be available to assist in filling out the application.

Those accepted will be notified by mail within the next two months and advised when to report to Family Practice for their initial orientation.

EFMB test slated

Units from the 34th Medical Battalion will join with medical units from Forts Rucker, McPherson and McClellan in administering the Expert Field Medical Badge (EFMB) to over 100 applicants from these posts.

The testing, scheduled for April 30 to May 4, will include general military knowledge such as NBC camouflage, weapons maintenance, signal communication, military intelligence and land navigation.

The medical subjects tested are field sanitation and hygiene, evacuation of sick and wounded, emergency medical treatments and medical records.

In addition to passing a written examination of these subjects, the applicant must complete an advanced physical fitness test (APFT), APFT-W for women, with a minimum score of 400 points, a 12-mile (19.3 km) forced road march to be completed in a maximum of three hours and both a night and day compass course.

Anyone who holds a 91 MOS (Medical Specialist) and is or has been assigned to a corps or lower TO&E unit are eligible to take the test. For more information contact your unit S-3 or training section.

Some discharges may be upgraded

The Veterans Administration recently reminded veterans who received undersirable discharges (now called "Discharge Under Other Than Honorable Conditions") of the opportunity to apply to the Department of Defense for a discharge review without regard to the normal 15-year period in which such applications must normally be made.

The deadline for applying is Jan. 1, 1980. Applications for discharge review may be obtained from most military installations, VA Regional Offices and Veterans Service Organizations.

In addition to application forms, an index of previous discharge review board decisions is available at certain Veterans Administration Regional Offices and at all offices of State Directors of Veterans Affairs. These indexes may be used to assist former members in preparation of their own case.

If an applicant identifies cases on the index which appear to be helpful, copies of the pertinent documents may be obtained by writing to the Armed Forces Discharge Review/Correction Board Reading Room, The Pentagon Concourse, Washington, D.C. 20310.

The DoD has established standards and procedures to be used in evaluating applications. The standards and procedures may be found in the Federal Register, Vol. 43, No. 63, dated Friday, March 31, 1978.

Information about the program may be obtained from the military personnel offices at major military installations or from representatives of the American Red Cross, American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans of the U.S.A., Veterans of Foreign Wars or other veterans service organizations.

Spouse can help loan

Because the high cost of real estate today may keep some married veterans from seeking GI home loans, the Veterans Administration wants these veterans to know their spouse's salary can be counted in computing the loan amount for which they may qualify.

"VA policy considers the full combined income of both the veteran and his or her spouse when the income of the veteran alone isn't enough to qualify him or her for the amount of the loan," explained Ralph Franks, loan guaranty officer at the Atlanta VA Regional Office.

The same standards applied to the income of the veteran are applied to that of the spouse, Franks said. The type and duration of employment will determine if the income of either or both can be considered reliable for the relatively long term of loan payments.

He added that potential family growth is no longer considered by the VA in determining income for loan purposes, and the VA has been successful in discouraging lender solicitation from veterans or their wives regarding child bearing capability.

Complete information on GI loans can be obtained at the Atlanta VA Regional Office toll free number 800-282-0232 or from local veterans service organization representatives.

Looking? Find it in the library

The Fort Benning Recreational Services libraries may be regarded as large vaults filled with treasures for active duty soldiers, retirees, dependents and Department of Army civilian employees' personal enrichment and enjoyment.

"Libraries offer something for everyone," according to Gwen Redd, chief librarian. "For those who work in an office, there are books on office management and development. For students, there are reference services and five study booths with typewriters available at the Main Post Library Bldg 93."

"Libraries offer something for everyone."

Housewives can pick up books offering household hints, decorating tips, menu planning ideas, sewing suggestions and advice on do-it-yourself repairs.

Financial and stock news plus an extensive collection of non-fiction books for general interest are available. Then of course, there are all types of books and records for pleasure reading and listening.

The Sayers Memorial Library also has language records and books for learning to speak such languages as German, French and Spanish. A collection of Korean language fiction and non-fiction books and magazines is another special feature of the library.

"We do have some art reproductions and sheet music available for temporary home use," said Redd.

The visually handicapped can also enjoy the pleasure of good books and magazines from the Sayers Library. Within the main collection are a variety of large print books for popular reading. These books may be recognized by a plain green band above the call number.

With the co-operation of the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, books and magazines in almost unlimited subject areas may be obtained on disc, cassette or in braille. Special playback equipment is also available. These items can be delivered to the door and mailed back free of charge. For further information, visit or call your reference librarian at the Main Post Library at 545-4911.

Easter message

Easter Sunrise Service, 7:30 a.m., Gowdy Field

On Easter day, we are united with the followers of the Lord Jesus all over the world for the observance of the Feast of His Resurrection. Throughout the days of Holy Week, we have experienced the sorrow that existed in Jerusalem two thousand years ago. Jesus had suffered, He was nailed to the cross and had died. There was no presence, only absence, and a sorrow which was heightened by the emptiness of the tomb where His body had been laid. We have shared the grief and agony of soul of His disciples and His Blessed Mother.

But He is risen, as He said! He has won a victory over sin and death in which all of us share. Like the disciples, we rejoice and we recognize Him in "the breaking of the bread." Time and again the Gospel tells of the appearances of the Risen Lord sharing a meal with His followers. This is very significant for us because through the Eucharist the Lord Jesus is present to His people, as they continue their journey to the glory of the Resurrection He has promised to those who believe in Him.

A joyous Easter to all

Kelley Hill Gym offers weightlifting facilities

By Kim Carpentier

So, you want the girls to notice you. You want to look and feel fit. You might even want to turn into a Charles Atlas or something. Perhaps the answer for you is weightlifting. Charlie Carey (weight-lifting instructor of the Kelley Hill Gym during the weekdays) says, "Lifting exercises tired muscles and improves the functioning of all body systems."

The Kelley Hill Gym has just the facilities you need to build your body into winning shape. There are Universal Presses and barbels of sizes and shapes to fit every weight and class. In addition, the Kelley Hill Gym also has a weights is one of the most satisfying forms of exercise there is to do," according to Carey (who is also current title-holder of the "Mr. Fort Benning" novice class body building title).

The Mr. Fort Benning contest was held Feb. 10 at Marshall Auditorium. All-totalled, 14 contestants entered the competition and the three AAU judges from Atlanta opted for triple-title-holders. Response for the event was enthusiastic as there was constant cheering throughout the event.

The Kelley Hill Gym is interested in establishing a 197th powerlifting team whose members have the opportunity to go to various competitions Army-wide. Anyone in the 197th Inf Bde interested in participating is welcomed to do so. SFC Hezzie A. Baines, NCOIC of the Kelley Hill Gym said, "We offer one of the best weight-lifting programs on Fort Benning."

The Kelley Hill Gym offers soldiers of the 197th a challenge and a chance to better themselves through the sport of weightlifting. Consider for a moment what's being offered; then, make the move. The personnel and staff of the Kelley Hill Gym are waiting to assist you.

Runner's profile

Infantry captain bound for Boston

By Julie Casey

George Gilkes is Boston bound April 16 to compete in the most prestigious marathon world wide. The Boston Marathon is one of the oldest races in the country. To qualify, you must be able to complete 26 miles and 385 yards in less than 3 hours.

"Dave Fields says the Boston is like Mecca. Every runner wants to make the pilgrimage," said the Infantry captain from the 3rd Bn, Infantry Training Brigade.

Gilkes hopes to complete the distance in 2 hours and 45 minutes.

"Of course, there are a lot of variables to contend with but, I feel that 2:45:00 is a reasonable time for me to reach," he said. "The race is going to be a bear. You could be standing around for five minutes just trying to start after the gun goes off because of the crowds."

Gilkes will find the Boston an exciting race. People line the streets for the entire course cheering the runners on.

George's running career began at Florida State University where he worked as a trainer for the track team.

"I didn't really compete on the team but trained with them. I saw a lot of good athletes, doing heavy interval training, get burned out by the time they reach their senior year. They were running under terrific pressure without the proper mileage base," he said. "As a result, many of them never reach their peaks because they were under such heavy training without a chance to recover."

The 90 miles-a-week man is a strict follower of the Arthur Lydiard training methods. His method is the right mixture of aerobic and anaerobic training. The idea is it improves but without injury or over stress.

"If you don't give yourself a chance to recover your resistance is low and reaching your peak is going to be tough. So many of the athlete's training surpassed their level of strength. That is why so many good college runners don't compete after they graduate," Gilkes added.

Gilkes said that he is more of a 5-miler or a 10 kilometer man, but is running for marathons to build up his base.

He went to Germany for three years and upon his return George decided to get back into shape and just see what he could do.

"When I came back I was astounded by the incredible interest everyone had in running. I thought the only competition available would be at local invitational track meets. All the road racing is fantastic," he said. "The running environment is great. There is no pressure because you are only running against yourself. You don't have to perform like the students at Florida State did."

For Gilkes, enjoyment is derived by just doing better than he did before.

"If a race comes up, I don't have to run in it and I can chose my own runs. I haven't got to the point, though, where I can use a race for a training run. I always have to run to do my best," he said, adding that he just can't take goofing along.

George runs a race about every other weekend, because he feels that if he raced each weekend that he would get tired of it.

"I also don't like going through all the pre-race tension every weekend," stated the highly competitive man.

What happens after the marathon? he commented "I would really like to run in the 1979 TRADOC Marathon Championship and to run a good race at the Peachtree July 4."

Tent fires hazardous

For millions of vacation campers, back packers, and outdoor adventurers, tents provide protection from the elements and pesky mosquitoes. And for millions of youngsters across the country, a tent provides a clubhouse or overnight adventure right in the backyard.

Although most experienced tent users know the limitations and dangers of such shelters, the kid in the backyard 'pup' or 'lean-to' doesn't have the knowledge or experience necessary to use these tents safely. The National Safety Council suggests that parents of youngsters who have tents instruct their off-spring in the safe use and proper maintenance of their tents.

One of the most serious camp hazards is that of tent fires. A few mosquitoes or an occasional wet sleeping bag are common tenting inconveniences; but a tent fire is a threat to all occupants. The following factors are the major causes of tent fires:

1. Careless use of matches and smoking materials.
2. Wind blown sparks from camp fires built too closely to the tent.
3. Candles that fall over or ignite fabric close by.
4. Flame or direct heat from a portable heater, campstove, or lighting equipment.
5. Spilled grease, gasoline, kerosene or other flammable liquids or materials.

Most quality tents on the market today are treated to make them fire resistant but this does not mean they will not burn! The treatment merely slows the rate of burning and in some cases may even cause a hazard from toxic fumes.

The only way to prevent tent fires is to keep all flame or heat producing materials a safe distance away from the tent. If both you and your children understand this basic concept you should be able to enjoy many weekends outdoors without having a tragic accident mar the fun.

Soccer league tryouts

Fort Benning Youth Activities will sponsor a 19-years-old and under team in the Spring City League. Tryouts will be conducted at Gordon Field, Ingersoll and Burr Streets, from 10-11:30 a.m. tomorrow. For further details, call 545-5022.

Youth soccer

The Fort Benning Seniors kicked their way to a 4-0 win over Fort Rucker last Saturday afternoon in a fitting finale to the Military Youth Dependent Soccer League (MYDSL) season.

At the 15 minute mark of the first half, winger Charles Smith drove the first goal into the Rucker net. At half-time the score was 1-0, Benning.

In the second half Smith scored again at the 5 and 20 minute marks and Dan Butler pumped in the final Benning goal at 35 minutes. Jeff Carrero executed perfect assists on the last two goals.

Fullbacks "Reggie" Hill, "Chip" Ariail, Scott Miller and Randy Smith provided an almost impenetrable wall to give goalie Jim Klein a perfect afternoon at the Aviation Center.

Barracudas

The Fort Benning dependent youth swim team, the Barracudas, hosted their annual Spring Invitational AAU swim meet last weekend. Swimmers from twelve teams made up the 160 event meet that was held at the Briant Wells pool.

SERGEANT

The sergeant turns and glares
At privates' wary stares,
But home at night despairs
For soldiers everywhere.
Although he loves his wife,
Profession is his life.
She lost him everyway;
The Army takes care of its own, they say.
Amid busywork and paper,
Cold as last war's sheathed saber,
He dwells on seconds lost,
The fight, and what it cost.
She sometimes remembers
A younger September.
Love was what they lived for,
Before he went to war.

ITS program educates soldiers

By Pat Brown

When Johnny can't read or understand verbal instructions, he can be a danger to himself or to others — particularly if he's an Infantry soldier.

The 1st Infantry Training Brigade at Fort Benning has taken steps to remedy this by initiating a program called the Basic Skills Education Program (BSEP). The program is designed to assist two groups of soldiers:

- Those who have English as a second language (ESL) and cannot function in that language without additional training.
- Those whose educational skills fall below the fifth grade level — even though they may have attended high school — and require additional help to successfully complete Infantry training.

Buddy system

Before the program was initiated on March 20 these soldiers were trained by use of the "buddy" system, but this proved to be far from satisfactory, according to 2nd Lt. Thomas Lemon, BSEP officer-in-charge. "A soldier might be able to complete training with the help of a buddy or under a bilingual drill instructor, but when he left here to go into the field, chances were he would still be unable to function adequately and could place his life or the lives of those around him in danger.

During the first week of training, all trainees are tested by the Army Continuing Education System (ACES) Center. If a soldier is identified as having a problem understanding English, his company commander must make a decision as to whether or not to place him into the BSEP, ESL track. This is usually done during the second week of training, but the company commander has the option of letting the soldier continue his Infantry training and placing him into the BSEP later if he sees he is not progressing satisfactorily.

Conducted jointly

Soldiers who are identified as having educational skills below the fifth grade level and who do not have an ESL problem are allowed to continue Infantry training through the third week to give the company commander a chance to accurately determine their ability to successfully train as an Infantryman. If at the end of that time, the commander feels the soldier needs further development of his educational skills, he is referred to the BSEP, Literacy track.

The BSEP is conducted jointly by the ACES Center and the company. The Center provides six hours of individualized training per day, five days a week at a ratio of one instructor per 10-12 men in the ESL track and one per 15 men in the Literacy track.

The training is concentrated on the development of English, math and language skills and is geared to follow the Program of Instruction for Infantry training. That is, the soldier is not taught "See Spot run" but rather "This is an M-16 rifle," and math problems would be centered around land navigation or some other military subject rather than teaching the soldier the multiplication tables.

The instructor also follows the training being taught in the regular Infantry training cycle. If the other trainees are being taught drill and ceremony or weapons familiarization, trainees in the BSEP program would be learning the same subjects.

After the six hours at the Center, the soldiers are returned to the company for another three hours of instruction, including one hour of physical training (PT). Training in the company is conducted by 10 men, including five drill instructors.

Decision time

At the end of the third week of BSEP training, the men are tested and those who score satisfactorily are reentered into the Infantry training cycle at whatever point they were removed from it. Others are retained in the BSEP program for an additional three weeks.

At that time, the BSEP OIC and the commander must make one of three decisions: reenter the soldier in Infantry training, recycle him for additional BSEP instruction or, if the man shows a complete lack of motivation and ability to learn, he would be released from the Army.

Since the program is less than six weeks old, no statistics are yet available as to how successful the program is, but Lemon feels that since both the soldiers and the BSEP instructors are highly motivated, the program will prove to be satisfactory. A random survey of soldiers in the program indicates that each of them are well aware of their need for the BSEP and are highly appreciative of the opportunity to improve their skills.

Lemon is of the opinion that "most of the men are so motivated, that once reentered into the Infantry training cycle, they will, for the most part, become outstanding soldiers."

 problems may seem a little easier if you view them through rose-colored windows as the Continuing Education Center at Columbus College features classes in the art of stained glass and macrame. Both classes start Tuesday.

The macrame class meets from 7-9 p.m. for three weeks and costs $15. Liz Miller, owner of a local antique shop, will teach basic knots and the construction of a macrame handbag. The cost of practice materials is included in the registration fee. Come join the knotty world of macrame. The possibilities are endless once you learn the basics. The will also be a lunch-time class from 12:10-12:50 p.m. Cost is $4.

Introduction to stained glass class meets from 7-9:30 p.m. for six weeks and costs $33.50, including the cost of glass, lead, solder, glass cutter, lathkin, grazing pliers, etc.

For more information, call 568-2023.

Red Cross needs volunteers

The American Red Cross will conduct a volunteer training class tomorrow at the TIC Chapel Annex starting at 8:30 a.m. Volunteers are urgently needed and this is an excellent opportunity to become involved and be of service to your community. Volunteers can serve in many areas — hospital, field office and schools. Registered nurses are needed for service in MAH and may do so by becoming enrolled through Red Cross. For further information call 545-5194 or 544-3213.

Adult study group

The Sunday Night Place Adult Study Group will begin a new series on April 22 at 5:30 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Bldg 2605, Dixie Road. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) C. Jack Wood will lead an in-depth study of I Peter. The series of studies will end May 20.

Through many activities children of the chapel (first through sixth grades) will have an opportunity to learn about the Christian faith. These learning experiences will involve music, books, research, study, creative art, audio-visuals and story telling. They will be led by Amy Mikes.

Protestant Youth of the Chapels, both junior and senior high, will meet upstairs in Bldg 2609, and "Lighthouse" Bldg 2612 respectively. These organizations help youth cope with many critical areas of decision making in their lives.

Capt. & Mrs. Daniel French are Senior Youth of the Chapels leaders, and Sp5 Frank Strickland and Betsy Anderson, are junior high leaders. Refreshments and recreation are a part of all children and youth programs.

A free nursery upstairs in Bldg 2605 is provided for small children of adults involved in the program. For additional information call 544-4594 or 545-2366.

WCGRH seeks "volunteers"

Evening and weekend volunteers are needed at West Central Georgia Regional Hospital, Schatulga Road, Columbus. If you're employed full or part time but would like to make a valuable contribution by helping others, consider "volunteer moonlighting." General orientation and clinical training classes begin Monday and continue through April 26th.

WCGRH, which is a psychiatric hospital, needs arts and crafts instructors, volunteer visitors, special activity volunteers, and volunteer aides. All of these volunteer jobs can be performed after 6 p.m. or on Saturdays and Sundays.

Professor Safety says

According to an item in American World, a publication of U-Haul International, we may not have to worry as much about personal injury and fatal collisions in a couple of years.

In 1940, each car on the road contained an average of 3.2 persons.

In 1950, it was 1.4.

At this rate, every third car on the road will be empty by 1980.

Airborne: first step is the longest

By Sharron Calabrisi

"C-130 rollin' down the strip, Airborne daddy gonna take a little trip ... stand up, hook up, shuffle to the door ... jump right out and count

... to ... four." Actually, it was a 141 and it was the first jump for Pvt. 2 Shawn "Tim" Tilley.

"At first the wind sucked me right out," the Airborne student said excitedly about his first jump. "I felt like I was paralyzed."

Tilley is from Los Angeles, Calif., and has been in the Army for seven months. He will be assigned to the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C. upon completion of his Airborne training.

On March 26, 180 Airborne students made winds that afternoon were pretty bad." Capt. Stephen Pullen, chief Jump Training Branch, explained, "They can't be over eight knots (approximately 16 mph) on a student's first jump and the gusts can't be under 12 minutes apart." On that particular afternoon, the jumps were constantly being delayed because of high winds.

"It all happened so fast, I couldn't think," Tilley explained. "Most people imagine that you shut your eyes, but there's no time for that," he noted.

"The jumpers fall at a rate of 18 feet per second," explained Pullen. "It's like falling from a six foot high platform, that's why we train them from one."

"You start to feel yourself float, as the canopy opens and you know then that all is OK," Tilley sighed.

"It's fantastic, it's beautiful," Tilley concluded, as he grabbed his parachute and scurried off to make his second jump.

Shawn "Tim" Tilley waits anxiously to make his first jump.

Tilley makes his way to the door of the aircraft for the big jump.

Salisbury Fair upcoming soon

(The following article is a reprint from the April 1979 issue of the Communicue.)

By Margaret Walters

It's Salisbury Fair! This is the time when Columbus opens up its streets to laughter, gaiety, dancing; remembering times' past and the hopes of the future; a time that neighbors (Columbus, Phenix City, Fort Benning) can shake hands and toast each other . . . The Salisbury Fair!!!

Sponsored by The Historic Columbus Foundation, inc., the fair will be held April 21 from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. and on the 22 from noon-6 p.m. in the Historic District.

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant, USAIS, will open the fair in a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 9th and Broad Streets at 10:30 a.m. on April 21.

Over 13 years ago a group of dedicated citizens united and worked together to turn a deteriorated section of Columbus into a vital center for culture and commerce.

During the past years, these 19th and early 20th century homes which in other cities with less dynamic citizens, would have received nothing more than a demolition team to make way for modern buildings, were acquired, restored and resold by the Historic Columbus Foundation as both private residences and headquarters for local civic groups.

The first Salisbury Fair was introduced as a means to get the people downtown to see what was happening in their own town, and to persuade others to become involved in maintaining the traditions and heritage that Columbus holds so dear.

This year an even better fair is planned, and to start off, you need only park your car in the Municipal Auditorium parking lot, where continuous shuttle buses will take you to First Avenue, stopping every block for you to get off or on.

Colonial Band will open fair

The Explorer Post 76 Colonial Band will open the fair, marching down Broadway to Front Street to the Amphitheater.

Another new feature will be a hot air balloon on Front Street, sponsored by WCGQ radio station. That, plus the carnival, where there will be a magic show, paint-a-face, dunk the punk, etc., will keep the kids entertained while you take the tour of homes, co-sponsored this year by the Historic District Preservation Society and the Historic Foundation.

Six private homes will be open and, although some are not completely finished, each will have a unique display of tapestry, Christmas decorations, and a "Designer Showcase" at 622 First Ave. Twelve additional historic structures will be open and Fort Benning officers' wives will conduct tours at the Dr. John S. Pemberton House and Apothecary Shop. (Dr. Pemberton was the originator of the Coca-Cola formula and occupied the home from 1855-1860.)

Tickets for the tour will be $5.

Another added feature will be a yard sale!! Gather up all your items and get your reservations in to Mrs. Donna Kelly, phone 563-3199, by April 10. A five-mile runner's race will also be fun for the joggers.

Art show

The art show will be held again this year and will feature art by Lt. Col. Bob Bechdolt, executive officer of the Deputy Post Commander. Art will be for sale at the Trade Center — artists will bring their portfolio designed to fit everyone's budget.

The Antique Show and Sale of Collectibles will be at the Fine Arts Building at the Fairgrounds, and there will be a block filled with Antique Automobiles for all you car buffs.

Continuous live entertainment will be at the Amphitheater and to quench your hunger, chicken box lunches will be on sale.

Children's theater presentation

The Promenade, Columbus' outdoor historical museum, which runs along the river from Eighth Street to the Oglethorpe Bridge, will be the site of the Children's Theater presentation of Bend in the River, an original play tracing the roots of Columbus (1830's) to the present with true events. Three performances will take place at 1:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday, each lasting about an hour.

Once again the Springer Opera House Saloon will be the place for Nostalgia Night, with performances by some of Columbus' wonderful entertainers on Saturday night at 8.

A Sidewalk Cafe is planned to be operating from the Springer to the Livery Stable, where you can watch demonstrations or participate in square dancing during the hoe down, also on Saturday night.

There is a little bit of something for everyone at the 1979 Salisbury Fair.

586th takes part in Fort Campbell FTX

By Gary Jones

The 586th Engr Co (ARB) endured rainy weather and muddy conditions last week at Fort Campbell while taking part in an 18th Airborne Corps' FTX.

In the event of war, the 586th Engr Co stationed here would be in direct support of the 101st Airborne Division. The FTX was interesting for the engineers because "this time we trained with the units we would be supporting in the event of a real war," explained 1st Lt. Chester Fowler, 1st platoon leader, 586th.

The 586th hit the road with 156 engineers in 72 vehicles March 31 and drove through to Chattanooga, Tenn. They spent the night at the Tennessee Air National Guard Armory before moving on to Fort Campbell the next morning.

When the 586th arrived they found themselves to be part of 8,000 troops in the field and due to the heavy rains, they spent quite a bit of time with vehicle recovery, according to Fowler.

"Our bivouac site was pretty much a quagmire due to the rains," said Fowler. It was also too small to accommodate all the personnel and vehicles of the 586th, so they moved to an alternate site.

After getting set up the engineers started out on a very productive and busy week of activity.

One of the first things the engineers did was to send out a diving team to check the lake bottom and the approaches to it where they would later build several rafts and a complete ribbon bridge.

According to Fowler, one of the most interesting tasks accomplished by the 586th was the construction of a 725 foot ribbon bridge across Lake Kyle.

The significance of this is that the 586th had only 700 feet of ribbon bridge to span the 725 feet distance. This turned out to be only a minor problem for the hard working engineers.

Prior to flying in over 20 interior bay sections of the bridge, the engineers extended the shoreline at each side of the lake by building gravel foundations with a Bailey approach to the ribbon bridge on the near shore side.

According to Fowler, this was the first time this combination of Bailey approach and ribbon bridge had been used in the CONUS area.

Another function of the 586th was to provide the 15-man assault boats which were used to counterattack the two battalions of aggressors during the FTX. The engineers also trained Fort Campbell personnel in the use of the 15 man assault boats as a secondary function to the FTX.

While doing their part in the FTX, the 586th was being evaluated under ARTEP standards and, according to the evaluators, did an outstanding job.

Versatile appliances may reduce electric bills

You may be in for more than just a food treat when using toaster ovens, mini-fryers, electric skillets, and pizza cookers. Operated properly, these small appliances can reduce the amount of energy you use each month. And using less energy can mean lower utility bills.

The temperature-controlled toaster oven has great energy-saving potential. It requires only 1.5 kilowatt-hours to perform the same task as an oven using 3 kwh. In addition, the toaster oven can toast all kinds of breads, heat frozen foods, and bake potatoes, apples and small pies.

Variety of tasks

Although many appliances are promoted as serving only one function, some perform a variety of tasks. A mini-fryer with a thermostat, for example, makes the unit so versatile that it can be used for popping corn, preparing soups, cooking vegetables, and even serving as a slow cooker. Appliances with thermostats also use less energy than appliances that operate continuously.

Storage of appliances is an important consideration. Place them so they may be reached conveniently. When in use, keep them out of drafts that reduce efficiency. Be sure to unplug any heated appliance immediately after use and cool before cleaning and storing.

Check appliances for the Underwriter's Laboratories symbol, "UL," which means the appliance has been manufactured to the organization's safety standards. When using an appliance with a detachable cord or temperature control, plug it into the appliance before connecting it to the wall outlet. When unplugging, remove it from the wall outlet first. Always remember to grasp the plug and not the cord.

Check cleanliness

For efficient use, keep appliances clean and be sure not to block intake vents on any appliance that cycles air. Use outlets that provide a sufficient amount of electricity required for efficient operation. If uncertain of that amount, check the manufacturer's use and care book.

Experts say the kitchen of the future won't have a range. Instead, they say, a storage wall with sufficient outlets to plug in small appliances will take its place. With a variety of energy-saving appliances, almost any type of food preparation is possible.

Heating, cooling, and water heating are the biggest users of energy, but small appliances can be long-term savers. The type of appliance, along with the frequency and duration of use, will determine how much energy is consumed.

Hard work finally pays off

By Joe Rich

Determination is just a word to some people. For Sp5 G. Benjamin Ramirez of the 1st Bn (Mech), 58th Inf, 197th Inf Bde, determination has been rewarded with a Bachelor of Applied Sciences Degree through Troy State University.

The degree was awarded to him in a ceremony at the brigade headquarters conference room. With his wife, Elia, and their three children looking on, Ramirez was presented his diploma by Col. Michael F. Spiegelmire, he brigade commander. The road to attaining the degree has been a long and rocky one.

Ramirez was born in Puerto Rico but was raised in Santa Clara, Cuba. He left Cuba in 1965 at the age of 19. His wife was unable to get a visa and they were separated for nearly ten years. They were actually divorced for the latter part of that separation. When Elia was finally able to leave, she went to Riverside, Cal. where Ben had settled down. Wasting little time, they were re-married that same week.

At the time Ben left Cuba, he knew very little English. The school he had been attending, the College of the Antilles, had been shut down in 1964 because it was a private institution.

Sp5 Ramirez is all smiles as Col. Michael F. Spiegelmire hands him the diploma that he earned at Troy State University. Looking on is Col. Richard McKee, deputy post commander.

"Starting out in a strange country was hard," said Ramirez. "Of course, it would have been much harder, but the Cubans who had been here a while helped the newcomers a lot," he added.

In 1966 he was drafted and learning a new way of life became a must. Realizing that the language barrier was the first hurdle he must overcome, he began to teach himself English. He went to school at night. During the day he carried a card with ten new English words written on it. "It was like starting all over again," he said. "I felt like a child."

After his "hitch" was up, Ben decided to get out. Working and going to school as a civilian turned out to be too expensive. In 1976 he came back into the service as a cook and was stationed on Kelley Hill with the HHC 1/58th Dining Facility.

"One of the first things I did was to go to Troy State and find out how much credit I could get for my education in Cuba," he said. "I started taking classes almost right away. I decided to aim for a Bachelor of Applied Sciences in Resources Management," he explained.

Ben has been a success not only in his educational pursuits, but in his Army career as well. "He's an outstanding soldier," said SFC Ernest Jackson, chief of the HHC Dining Facility. "I believe he is qualified to run a dining facility of his own."

Dr. Paul L. Stansel, Director of Troy State Univ., Georgia Region, spoke at the ceremony. "During the time you have been with Troy State, you've gone from PFC to Sp5, while earning a B.A.S.," he said. "This attests to your outstanding perseverance and achievement," he continued.

"God has blessed me with two great women in my life; my mother (who flew from California to be at the ceremony) and my wife," explained Ben. "If it wasn't for them I probably would have quit my education long ago," he emphasized.

But quitting, as we know, isn't Ben Ramirez' style.

Uniform reg revised

A "complete rewrite" of appearance and uniform regulations, effective this month, has been approved by Army Chief of Staff General Bernard W. Rogers, according to DA personnel officials.

Included in the action is a grouping of several regulations and parts of others into AR 670-1, wear and appearance of Army uniforms and insignia.

Major policy changes in the revised regulations, according to officials, include specific language that reaffirms the Army's ban on handlebar mustaches and "flared" sideburns. The regulation also sets uniform policy on insignia wear for A-1 uniforms.

The reg will authorize only black leather boots and will ban synthetic and patent leather boots, and the wear of field jackets with tan or khaki uniforms. Wear of black scarf with the black overcoat will be permitted, and women in certain units and in certain jobs will be permitted to "blouse" green pantsuit slacks when wearing combat boots. Other changes for women set skirt and dress lengths to no higher than one inch above or two inches below the center of the knee (formerly two above and one below), and allow wear of a plain-toed ankle-high boot with the green pantsuit. For men, full buttoning of the sweater is required, along with at least three-fourths zipping of the men's windbreakers. Soldiers will have the option of wearing v-neck or regular t-shirts.

Six changes to the reg concern formal dress standards.

Officials say that the revised regulation will be distributed beginning next month.

Army regulations affected by the rewrite and consolidation are: chapter 5, section VI, 600-20; 670-5; 670-30; chapter 10. (ARNEWS)

Week's activities to honor Livsey

Clothing store to open after duty hours Mon.

The Army Clothing Sales Store in Bldg. 1698 is altering its schedule beginning Monday to allow post soldiers to make purchases after normal duty hours.

The new schedule calls for the store to be open from 11:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Mondays and 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays. It will remain closed Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Reup option ends May 1

The CONUS-to-CONUS station of choice reenlistment option will end effective May 1, according to DA officials.

A test program begun in January 1977, the option was designed to see if the number of soldiers reenlisting would increase. According to DA officials, the information collected from the test indicates that reenlistments did increase because of the station of choice option.

Officials will study the material gathered from the test and determine whether the option will be adopted for use on a permanent basis. (ARNEWS)

New PX check policy

Officers and senior NCOs no longer have to show their ID cards to cash checks in Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) facilities when in uniform, AAFES has announced.

Officers, warrant officers, and NCOs (E7 and above) must still display all required information on checks to be cashed, however, according to AAFES.

This new policy resulted from a recent change to Department of the Army and Department of the Air Force check-cashing procedure.

Tax penalty exemption

Fort Benning soldiers who failed to file Georgia estimated tax during 1978 need not fear any tax penalty, a Legal Assistance Office spokesman reported.

A check with state tax representatives showed soldiers who claim Georgia as their legal residence and failed to estimate their tax last year are excluded from such penalty.

For additional information about this exemption, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Scholarship deadline

Time is running out for enlisted soldiers here planning to submit applications for the two-year Army ROTC scholarship program. Applications for the 1979-80 school year must be in the mail by May 1.

Individuals desiring applications may obtain them from Mrs. Lockhart in Rm. 309 at the post education center, phone 545-7768.

A farewell review is scheduled for Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, Fort Benning commander, next Friday at 3:30 p.m. on York Field. In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall. The public is invited to attend.

Marching units from the Infantry School, the 197th Inf Bde, the 36th Eng Gp, the 34th Med Bn, the 1st ITB, Committee Gp and the Infantry Center Hqs Cmd will participate in the ceremony.

Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant of the Infantry School and deputy commanding general, will be commander of troops. Music will be provided by the 283rd Army Band.

Following the ceremony, a farewell reception for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Livsey will be held at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

Other activities in their honor throughout the week include a post sergeants major luncheon. See LIVSEY, Page 7

Post soldiers look at future uniforms

Fort Benning personnel got a chance to see what the Army's future uniforms may look like through a road show presented here Friday in Marshall Auditorium and at Kelley Hill.

Representatives of Natick Research and Development Command presented several proposed uniforms, including what could become the women's uniform in the 1980s, according to DA officials.

Garments shown included the women's blue uniform, enlisted men's blue mess uniform, men's and women's black windbreakers and two versions of the women's Army green uniform ensemble. Garments were modeled by post soldiers.

The 675 soldiers attending the presentation were given a narration on each uniform and were asked to complete a survey questionnaire on their uniform preferences. The Army uniform board will meet to examine the data collected — including the survey results — and make recommendations to the Chief of Staff on which uniforms should be adopted.

The women's green uniform ensemble is being considered as a replacement for several existing uniforms including the green cord; mint green shirt, jacket and dress; pantsuit; and the current green uniform. Each item in the ensemble is designed to be worn with any other item. Each ensemble includes green uniform coats, slacks, skirts and both long-sleeve and short-sleeve gray-green shirts.

Of the 675 soldiers represented in the survey, 35 were women officers, 55 were enlisted women, 90 were male officers and 495 were male enlisted.

According to the survey, the women's classic design was preferred by 228 of those questioned, while the princess-style uniform got 174 votes. Only nine people wanted the present standard coat and skirt, pantsuit, jacket and slacks.

The most popular shirt for women was the short sleeve overblouse, which would be worn with either the skirt or slacks. Women officers were about divided on whether to retain the black necktab or opt for the new ascot necktie. However, enlisted women preferred the black necktab two to one.

A new women's windbreaker was also displayed. The most popular version was the Army green hip-length version. It was preferred over the black or the waist-length windbreaker.

Women officers were also split on whether to retain the gray-green, long-sleeve turtleneck tunic. But again, enlisted women voted three to one for eliminating the tunic altogether.

Both female officers and enlisted generally liked the idea of a black stripe on the women's officer slacks.

If the Blue Mess uniform is adopted for Army women, the best liked version was the dark blue skirt, which got 167 votes, as opposed to 43 votes for the sky blue skirt.

It's time to tame your gas guzzler

There are more than 100 million registered cars in the U.S. A typical car, with an average fuel economy of less than 13.7 miles-per-gallon, travels about 10,000 miles each year — and consumes well over 700 gallons of gasoline.

The importance of individual gasoline savings cannot be over emphasized. Individual gasoline savings can be accomplished through a combination of the following suggestions.

- Join a carpool. About one-third of private automobile mileage is for commuting to and from work. If the average passenger load were increased by just one person, enough gasoline would be saved for some 67,000 cars to drive from San Francisco to New York City and back!

- Eliminate unnecessary trips. Take one less short trip each week. Do several errands in one trip, and combine your trips with those of friends and neighbors.

- Drive at moderate speeds. Most automobiles get about 21 percent more miles per gallon on the highway at 55 miles per hour than they do at 70 miles per hour.

- Watch that idling. Do not let the motor idle for more than a minute. It takes less gasoline to restart the car than it takes to let it idle. Generally, there is no need to press the accelerator down to restart a warm engine.

- Keep your car in prime condition. Regular tune-ups can save you as much as 10 percent on gasoline costs. Keep the engine air filter clean and check tire pressures regularly. If you have to buy new tires, consider steel-belted radials since they give better mileage and last longer.

- Choose accessories wisely. Purchase only the optional equipment and accessories you really need. (TNS)

Van Meter to take ITB reins Monday

Col. Harold C. Van Meter, director of Training Developments at the Infantry School since May 1978, will assume command of the 1st ITB Monday.

Van Meter replaces Col. Carl Stiner, who is on special duty in Saudi Arabia.

Lt. Col. David Cooper, commander of the 2nd Bn, 1st ITB, who has been acting brigade commander in Stiner's absence, is slated to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., later this summer.

After graduation from North Georgia College with a BS degree in 1958, Van Meter was commissioned in the Infantry.

His other major assignments include duty as a staff officer with Combat Developments Cmd, Fort Belvoir, Va.; aide-de-camp to the commanding general, Army Materiel Cmd, Washington, D.C.; executive officer of the 3rd Bde, 9th Inf Div at Fort Lewis, Wash.; and commander, 2nd Bn, 1st Inf, 9th Inf Div at Fort Lewis.

He is both Airborne and Ranger qualified and is a graduate of the Jungle Warfare School in Panama, the Army Aviation School, the Command and General Staff College and the Army War College.

He earned a Masters degree in Sociology from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash., in 1973.

His decorations include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, the Distinguished Flying Cross with oak leaf cluster, the Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster, the Meritorious Service Medal, 11 awards of the Air Medal, the Army Commendation Medal with "V" device and oak leaf cluster, the Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge and Master Parachutist Badge.

While at North Georgia College he was named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and as Small College All-American in basketball. In 1974 he was named Outstanding Federal Employee of the Year for the state of Washington.

Col. Harold C. Van Meter

SQT results switch

Soldiers are no longer considered for reclassification based solely on their latest Skill Qualification Test (SQT) results, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Soldiers who were promoted or recommended for promotion or reenlistment before receiving their latest SQT scores will not be considered for reclassification, regardless of the test results, officials said.

The second edition of SQT results for some MOs are being sent out this month, officials said. (ARNEWS)

PX halts some hair dryer sales

Three hand-held hair dryers have been removed from sale in Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stores pending results of an investigation by the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

The CPSC is investigating the hair dryers to determine if asbestos used in them is a health hazard. No recall action has been issued; however, CPSC has encouraged retailers to discontinue selling dryers containing asbestos until a final determination is made.

Refunds or replacements through AAFES will be available on Afromatic-Afro Blow Dryer, AAFES VRR No. 3-1791; and the Conair Model 065, VRR 3-0193. Only Conair units manufactured from July through November 1977 are affected by the suspension and each unit can be identified by a small plate bearing the date of manufacture.

General Electric manufactures the third hair dryer, the Pro 6 Model, VRR No. 3-1786. The company has stated that although asbestos was used in the dryer until late 1978, no health hazard exists. GE has not authorized refunds on the Pro 6, but customers should keep the units until the final decision by the CPSC.

AAFES stocks other dryers made by Gillette, Windmere, Schick and Clairol. These manufacturers state that asbestos is not used in these products.

Glad you asked

How tough should the Army be on overweight soldiers?

Dani Smith

Sp4 Dani Smith, Co D 197th Spt Bn

I think the overweight program as of now is pretty good, although more emphasis should be put on higher ranking personnel. Treatment of lower enlisted personnel, in my opinion, is stricter in the overweight program and is more rigidly enforced.

Sgt. James Everett, 444th Trans Co

I don't think the Army Overweight Program is tough enough. We have too many overweight soldiers who could not perform their duties in a combat situation.

James Everett

Pvt. Cynthia Loope, Hqs Co, Hqs Cmd

I feel the Army should be tough on overweight soldiers because overweight service members put a more unstable look on the rest of the military. Soldiers should be proud of their appearance — it is a direct reflection on the rest of the military. Most overweight soldiers aren't physically fit.

Cynthia Loope

Sp 4 Bobby Monochelli, 586th Engr Co

If a man is overweight and able to pass the PT test and perform all his duties, then it should not interfere with rank progression or anything pertaining to the Army.

Commentary

Being fat ain't so funny

By Seth Hamilton

Being hefty, or chunky, or let's say out of shape, or ... ah the heck with it, I mean to say if you're fat, it's not much fun. And if you happen to be fat in the Army at the same time, it's really no fun.

The Army's party line is that soldiers will be "fit to fight," to borrow a phrase. Because of this, fat people are a minority group in the Army and tend to stick out like sore thumbs. It would be safe to say there are a lot more overweight people outside the Army than in, but that fact doesn't help the, shall we say, more robust people who decided to be ^{died} the Army.

The Army goes to great lengths to remedy the overweight situation. All types of weight losing incentives are offered, ranging from extra PT and weight reduction programs to reenlistment bars and, ultimately, rejection from the service altogether.

Being kicked out of the Army is a drastic step which is rarely taken. But many Army men and women have become used to remedial PT classes when everyone else has gone home, weekly visits to the weight clinic, weight slips and the ever present threat of not being able to reup because of extra poundage.

There are many reasons why

'Travolta look' hit

Sloppy uniforms an eyesore

By Bill Lopez

The John Travolta look in uniforms is gaining popularity among soldiers who travel.

The Travolta look, in case you aren't aware of the latest styles, is a leisurely appearance that takes on many forms, usually something like an unbuttoned coat and a shirt collar that flares outside the coat. A hairy chest or low-cut blouse are a couple of options to this look.

And, taken to extremes, the style might include a look like the soldier just won first place in a marathon disco contest and hasn't had time to change clothes, shave, etc. But the style, of course, doesn't agree with regulations and standards for wearing the Army uniform. Therein rests the age-old tradition of pride in soldiering.

It's not new when various levels of command "clamp down" on sol-people become overweight, and there are plenty of reasons why people stay heavy. Surely the fact that many soldiers are more or less compelled to eat a mess hall diet which seems to be unusually high in starches and fats doesn't encourage the overweight soldier to slim down, but that is another story ...

This problem might come down to two basic facts. One, most soldiers are in the Army because they signed on the dotted line (Nobody forced you to join right?); and two, the Army is more or less run on the shape up or ship out theory. Many of the Army's programs are geared around either getting into or staying in good physical condition, and because the overweight soldier probably is in of his own accord, he has that responsibility to get in shape.

Let the overweight soldier take a look at himself as others do, acknowledge the problem, and do his best to solve the problem. Not necessarily because the Army is harping or because friends are ribbing or even because the soldier has to go out of state to get clothes that fit right, but because being in good shape is healthy — and fun.

If you're in good physical condition, you feel good. And if you're feeling good about yourself, other people will get the message.

diers who are sloppy — especially in public. But lately the rumblings about soldiers' appearance in public airports and the like have grown louder and more frequent in locations throughout the world.

To the troop and commander this doesn't mean you need to brush-up on rules for wearing the uniform or what's expected of you when you're in the public eye. It means that not following the standards you already know will carry unwelcome consequences.

Pride in being a soldier and command responsibility to enforce standards cannot be directed in a commentary. But it can be pointed out that a war of sorts should be declared on shabby troops.

The question, then, isn't who will win, but what side you are on. (ARNEWS)

Sgt. Maj. Academy board to meet

A DA selection board will meet July 31 to select about 400 regular Army E8s to attend class 16 and 17 at the Sergeants Major Academy, according to MILPERCEN officials.

Class 16 begins in August 1980 and Class 17 begins in February 1981, officials said.

NCOs must meet the following requirements to be considered by the board:

- Be a master sergeant or first sergeant with a date of rank from Aug. 1, 1974 through July 31, 1978;

- Have less than 23 years active service as of Sept. 1, 1980;

Gen. and Mrs. Rogers for command and staff officers and their wives Wednesday at the Fort Benning Supper Club; and a luncheon hosted by the local chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army, Thursday at the Officers' Club.

Maj. Gen. Livsey, who assumed command of the Infantry Center and School on July 25, 1977, has been assigned as commander, 8th Inf Div, Bad Kreuznach, Germany. He will report to his new command May 7, and will be accompanied by his wife, Bena Sue.

Maj. Gen. Dave Grange, commander, 2d Inf Div, Eighth U.S. Army, Korea, and former director of the Infantry School's Ranger Department, will be the new Fort Benning commander. His date of arrival here has not been announced.

- Have not submitted an application for retirement or have an approved retirement date;

- Have not previously declined a resident or nonresident course;

- Have not been selected for or enrolled in the nonresident course.

These requirements are not waiverable, officials said.

NCOs in the zone of consideration may send a letter to the president of the board on any matter they feel is important in the consideration of their applications. Letters should reach the board by July 1 and be addressed to: President, DA USASMA Selection Board, C/O Commander, US Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center (USAEREC), Ft. Benjamin Harrison, IN 46249.

Third party letters of recommendation, however, are no longer authorized, officials said, and any received will not be considered by the board.

Soldiers wishing to review their records should write to: Commander, USAEREC, ATTN: PCRE-RI, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, IN 46249, for a copy of their Microfilm Official Military Personnel File. Requests should include name, rank, Social Security number and address, officials said.

NCOs in the zone of consideration should ensure that their qualification records (DA Forms 2 and 2-1) are forwarded to reach USAEREC by June 1, officials added. (ARNEWS)

DIVORCE

Marriage breakdown is no new phenomenon. In 1966, the divorce rate was 2.5 per 1,000 population. An estimated 1,077,000 divorces were granted in 1976, doubling the 66 figures.

Since the state has a special interest in creating the marital relationship, it also provides for its severance. Two kinds of divorce are provided by law. One is an absolute divorce that dissolves the marriage and releases both husband and wife from the obligation of marriage, except for the obligation of one to provide support for the other in some cases. The second type of divorce is a separation by the court, a separation "from bed and board", with a determination of an amount to be paid in support in some situations.

Officer flight specialties to be entry-level skills soon

Officers will soon be able to enter the Army in aviation specialties, according to a new policy recently announced by the Army Chief of Staff.

Beginning this fall, some commissioned officers will be selected for flight training before entering active duty, MILPERCEN officials said. Aviation Specialty Code (SC) 15 is now recognized as a Combat Arms Specialty and all Aviation specialties will be entry-level specialties, fully aligned with the Officer Personnel Management System (OPMS), officials announced.

Direct aviation assignment

Newly commissioned officers will be assigned directly into one of the following aviation specialties: Army Aviator (SC 15), Aviation Materiel Management (SC 71), Medical Service Corps (SC 67J) or Military Intelligence (SC 15M).

Officers who select an aviation specialty must also choose a corresponding branch, officials said. Those who select SC 15 must choose Infantry, Armor, Field Artillery or Air Defense Artillery. Those who select SC 15M will join Military Intelligence, SC 71 will join the Transportation Corps and those in SC 67J will become members of the Medical Service Corps.

Formerly, Aviation was an advanced specialty, officials explained. Officers became eligible for flight training between their second and fifth years of service after becoming qualified in a branch specialty.

Aviators will attend the Basic course of their branch before attending flight school, officials said. They will not receive the ground specialty associated with their branch Advanced course. Both Basic and Advanced Branch training will incorporate tactics for employment of ground and aviation elements, officials added.

Although aviators will not be required to serve in ground assignments associated with their branch, they must be fully knowledgeable of the capabilities and employment doctrine of the ground elements of their branch, officials explained.

"In the past, for example, an aviator was an Infantry officer first and an aviator second. Aviators had to maintain their proficiency in their ground specialty as well as in Aviation," a MILPERCEN spokesman said.

"Aviators will now spend more time working in aviation jobs," the spokesman added. "Lieutenants and captains can expect to spend 80 percent of their time working as aviators," he said.

Fly on first tour

An aviator's first tour after flight training will be in an aviation assignment, officials said. Those who don't complete flight training will be assigned a specialty appropriate to their branch, officials added.

Flight school attendance in the future will be made up of 85 percent newly commissioned officers and 15 percent active duty officers with less than five years service, officials said. This ratio will be phased in over a three-year period beginning in FY 80, officials explained.

Active duty officers electing to attend flight training who are not in one of the related branches must transfer to an appropriate branch upon completing training, officials said.

The Army is asking for approval to train 598 aviators each year, officials said, thereby lessening current and projected company grade aviator shortages and building a balanced force in all grades.

The new policy also includes converting 300 commissioned officer positions to warrant officer positions. Most of the positions identified to be converted are those that call for "Pilot" or "Aviator" in the Unit TOE/TDA, officials said. Which positions will actually be converted has not been decided, however, officials stressed.

Expanding field grade positions is another goal of the new policy. More 05 and 06 slots will be opened.

Additional specialties okayed

Aviators will also be able to obtain an additional specialty, officials said. By FY 87, the Army expects to have enough company grade aviators to allow 20 percent of them to be assigned outside Aviation.

The new policy mainly affects young and future aviators, officials explained, and there's little change in store for senior officers.

Changes in personnel management policies and procedures are needed to implement the new policy, officials added, and MILPERCEN will develop these in detail. (ARNEWS)

Tennessee cadets visit 197th Inf Bde

Sixty-six ROTC cadets were recently the guests of the 197th Inf Bde here.

The cadets, mostly juniors at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, were invited by the brigade to familiarize them with an Army post and to introduce them to officers of different branch specialties. Cadets do not choose which branch they will go into until they are seniors.

One of the places the cadets went to on the first day was the Ferguson Field Artillery range. There, one of the cadet seniors, who had already chosen Field Artillery as her specialty, called in fire support. Later, they went to the 5th Officer Candidate School Battalion to see how their peers are earning their commissions.

2nd Lt. Russell Thompson, assistant S-1, 1st Bn 58th Inf, was the cadets' escort for the two days. "They seemed to enjoy the visit to the Airborne School the most," said Thompson. "One of them went off the 34-foot mock tower five times."

On the second day, the cadets were briefed on the mission of the 197th Inf Bde. Afterwards they were divided into six groups and shown the daily operations of different units in the 197th.

'Cottonbalers' in Arctic FTX

By Joe Rich

The 3rd Bn, 7th Inf started a 10-day field problem in Alaska recently, putting a final touch to a month of Arctic warfare training.

In the field problem, the men of the battalion will have more than ample time to test their new skills in Arctic warfare. Snowshoes and skis will be used as much as M-16 rifles.

The field problems will be very much like the field problems that the rest of the 197th Inf Bde participated in at Fort Drum, N.Y., in February.

The "Cottonbalers," the only "straight leg" battalion in the 197th, are traveling by "shoe leather express," instead of riding in trucks, tanks and armored personnel carriers.

Members of the battalion are using AKHIOs, sleds used to carry supplies, such as ammunition and rations, that an infantry squad needs to survive and fight in the Arctic.

The AKHIO is pulled by ropes tied to four members of the squad. Three men are used in the front to pull and guide and sled, and one of the largest men is in the back to act as a brake and for added control. The rest of the squad is used for braking brush and pushing the sled.

After the battalion completes the field problem, equipment will be cleaned up and turned in, and the return to Fort Benning will begin.

Savings bond campaign slated here next month

The 1979 U.S. Savings Bond Person-to-Person Canvass will be conducted during May. The goal of the campaign is to acquaint each military and civilian employee of Fort Benning with the advantages of investing in U.S. Savings Bonds. Participation is strictly on a voluntary basis for those being canvassed.

A Savings Bond Kick-Off Rally will be conducted at 10 a.m. on Monday at Bldg 4, Classroom 5. Col. Richard McKee, deputy post commander, USAIC, will address the canvassers of the 1979 Savings Bond Campaign during this rally and promotional material will be distributed.

Thomasville field trip

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives Club is sponsoring a chartered bus tour to Thomasville, Ga. to attend the annual Rose Festival held there next Friday. The bus will leave Columbus at 7 p.m. and tour members will have reserved seats to watch the Rose Parade beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Following the parade, there will be a guided two-hour bus tour of Thomasville and surrounding area plantations.

Attendees will take a picnic lunch and return to Columbus at 8 p.m.

For further information and reservations, call Jean Grossman at 682-2932 or Audrey McGrath at 682-2838.

PWOC holds spring retreat

A time for spiritual growth and renewal will be offered to ladies of Fort Benning when the Protestant Women of the Chapels (PWOC) celebrates its spring retreat. Marjory Bankson, a professional potter from Alexandria, Va., will be present for a two-day seminar based on the topic, "Spiritual Gifts." Bankson is a Virginia representative for Faith at Work and will be providing experiential exercises. The retreat will be conducted at the TIC Annex from 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. this Wednesday and from 9 a.m.-12 noon on Thursday.

Ladies are requested to bring a sack lunch on Wednesday and are invited to bring a salad on Thursday and stay for a time of fun and fellowship during a salad luncheon. Nursery care will be provided by Tot Town, but each lady is requested to make her own reservation. For further information, contact Frances Hart, 687-1631, or the Religious Education Center, 545-2366 or 544-4594.

Riverside tour

The Army Community Services (ACS) is sponsoring a tour of "Riverside," historic home of Fort Benning's commanding generals this Sunday from 1-4 p.m. Admission is a canned food donation.

Donations will go to replenish the ACS food locker, used to help needy families.

A nursery service will be provided for children under age 10. The tour is open to the public.

Free lecture scheduled

Mark A. Quinones, Ph. D., director of the Division of Social Medicine, College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, will speak on the evaluation of drug programs and modes and methods of treatment of drug and alcohol abusers at 1 p.m. in Stanley Hall this Monday.

Dr. Quinones is an associate professor in the Department of Preventive Medicine and Community Health. He was appointed to the New Jersey Drug Abuse Advisory Council in 1977, and is also a member of the National Minority Advisory Committee on Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration for HEW. He is a member of the Task Force of the President's Commission on Mental Health.

This free lecture is sponsored by the Columbus College Drug Abuse Committee with Joel H. Horowitz, Ph. D., as chairman. Dr. Horowitz urges all interested persons in the college and community to attend this session, which will deal with one of the most controversial issues.

Local agencies who have been invited to attend include Columbus' Drug Inclination Group clinic; Alchemy, a residential alcohol and drug treatment program; Turning Point, an intermediate care facility; the Garrard-Jordan Clinic, an outpatient alcohol program, and the West Central Georgia Regional Hospital Alcohol and Drug Unit.

Soybean burgers on the way

Soy protein will soon be used in military dining facilities to stretch ground beef, DOD officials announced this week.

Officials say using a 20 percent soy-extended ground beef product will save about 22 cents per pound and help offset spiralling beef prices.

DOD buys about 28 million pounds of ground beef yearly, officials said, and using the soy product could cut the DOD food bill by $6.2 million.

The first deliveries to dining facilities are scheduled for mid-June, officials said.

A DOD food planning board approved the use of the soy product in recipes calling for ground beef and in ground beef patties after reviewing the results of using the product in selected dining facilities on a test basis, officials explained. The product was favorably accepted, officials said.

Officials also pointed out the soy protein does not cut down the nutritional value of the food.

The use of the soy product will be evaluated throughout the year and a final decision will be made as to whether or not it will continue to be used, officials added. (ARNEWS).

67th Maint Bn chaplain helps parents bridge gap

By Gary Jones

Perhaps the most demanding job people ever do is parenting.

When people think of parent-child relations the term "Generation Gap" is often used. "Generation Gap" might better be termed as a communication gap between the parent and child.

In order to help bridge this communication gap between parents and their children, Chaplain Joseph Colley, 67th Maint Bn, is teaching a Parent Effectiveness Training (PET) class to six interested 67th Maint Bn couples.

"PET is basically a course to improve communication between parents and their children," said Chaplain Colley. "It teaches parents skills in listening, problem solving, and how to change unacceptable behavior," he explained.

According to Dr. Thomas Gordon, founder of the PET classes, PET has been called revolutionary. It shows parents why they should be neither strict nor permissive.

Tough, strict, authoritarian parents (parent wins, child loses) cause their children to rebel and retaliate. Soft, lenient permissive parents (child wins, parent loses) allow their children to become inconsiderate, selfish and unmanageable.

PET is beneficial because "it's a way of solving problems so that neither the parent nor the child lose," said Chaplain Colley.

It has been endorsed by churches, schools, YMCAs, probation departments, nursery schools, and many other agencies serving parents and youth. PET was recommended as a promising new model for the prevention of family disintegration in the report of the 1970 White House Conference on Children.

The New York Times called PET "a national movement." Already over a quarter of a million parents have been trained. Military couples who are already parents or who are planning to be parents can learn the PET skills at no cost to themselves by taking the class through an Army sponsored class.

The eight-week PET class being taught by Chaplain Colley at the Sightseeing Chapel is now in progress, meeting Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. This class is for 67th Maint Bn parents only, but other similar classes are in the planning stages for other units here.

One such unit is the TIC Chapel annex, tentatively planning to conduct an Education for Effective Parenting class, similar to PET, starting June 10 and running for six consecutive Sundays. Parents who wish to learn PET skills should find this class a reasonable facsimile.

HSCA wives plan luncheon May 9

The Health Service Command Activity OWC will hold a luncheon and installation of officers on Wednesday, May 9, at 11 a.m. at the Officers' Club. A special program will be given by Williams of Cross Country, who will bring his own models to demonstrate the latest in hair fashions. Reservations must be made by May 4 by calling 561-2991. Do plan to attend this final HSCA activity for the year.

Pre-Kindergarten registration

The Pre-Kindergarten Association will hold registration for the 1979-80 school year on April 23 and 24 from 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. at Patch School. There will be a $5 fee and shot records and birth certificates will be required. Children to be enrolled must be three years of age by September 1, 1979.

Disco classes

New disco classes will be starting at the School of Dance in May. This will be the last class of the school year, so sign up now! Call Liz Crissey at 687-0434 for further information.

Air Force SSgt. David Malley prepares to move out during a BNCOC field exercise. Attendance at some NCOSI courses is not limited to Army personnel.

A Primary Leadership Course student struggles to overcome an obstacle on the Leadership Reaction Course. The course tests students' ability to mentally and physically bypass obstacles such as this tank trap.

NCOSI provides

By Suellen Cochran

"The leader is extremely important in the Infantry. It is imperative that he command the respect and confidence of all his subordinates in order to accomplish the mission," said CSM Frank Caito, commander of the Noncommissioned Officer School of Infantry (NCOSI), which provides leadership training to combat arms soldiers here at Benning.

PNCOC

The first training level offered by the NCOSI is for the corporal or specialist 4 under the heading of Primary Noncommissioned Officers Course (PNCOC). PNCOC is a four-week course designed to train skill level one personnel to become team or squad leaders.

The objective of the course is to train the men to take their knowledge home to teach others basic tactical skills and soldiering tasks.

There are nine classes annually, with a maximum of 55 students per class. Students attend on a voluntary basis under the recommendation of their unit commander.

The major focus throughout the course is leadership. According to MSgt. Victor N. Magwood, chief instructor for PNCOC, it is a starting point to give the fundamentals and principles of leadership. "We want individuals to develop their own techniques," explained Magwood. "Once they get back to their units, we stress that they should allow those under them to do the same."

The student learns by doing. There are 246 hours of instruction with all but 32 taught in a field environment. While in the field, tasks are assigned and graded on a pass/fail basis. Areas of instruction covered throughout the four weeks include leadership counseling, military instruction, land navigation, communication, combat tactics, patrolling and drill.

Each student is placed in a squad leader or team leader position for 48 hours. The heavy burden of responsibility is felt by all PNCOC students while in this position.

"At times, it seems almost impossible to accomplish all assigned tasks within the given time limits, but it's not. We purposely overload the students with things to do. This reinforces the use of subordinate leaders. They can't do it all, there has to be team work," Magwood concluded.

BNCOC

The second training level is the Basic Non-commissioned Officers Course (BNCOC). Also a four-week course, BNCOC is offered nine times annually with a maximum of 73 students in each session.

This course is designed for E-5s and E-6s already in a leadership position. The objective is to update them on current Army doctrine as well as to teach them techniques in setting up training programs, conducting them and evaluating the final product.

"Almost everything we cover is part of their SQT. Therefore, everyone should benefit from our course," commented SFC John T. Collins, operations sergeant.

Training is performance oriented. "It's not self-paced, but many times it seems like it," explained Collins. "If a man is a slow learner, he has plenty of time to go over the tapes and catch up."

The class is divided by MOS, with emphasis placed on the particular obstacles faced in each job. The last week involves a field exercise to "put it all together."

ANCOC

The highest training level for the combat arms enlisted soldier at NCOSI is the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course (ANCOC). Unlike the others, which are voluntary, ANCOC students are DA selected.

Qualifications for acceptance are rigid. The individual must be an E-6 with no more than seven years in grade or 17 years in service. Selections are based on the top 20 percent of NCOs of their grade and MOS. All must have a good record, have demonstrated leadership and proficiency, and have at least 10 months remaining in the service.

ANCOC is a 10-week course, taught five times yearly with a maximum of 200 students. This number will increase when an additional class will be offered.

According to 1st Sgt. John L. Thacker, ANCOC company commander, the course objective is to capitalize on the NCOs' strong points and to provide students current doctrine in field maneuvers with an increase in performance abilities.

"Everyone knows a good NCO provides the beans and the bullets, but he also has the responsibility to train as the platoon leader and take over when he's absent. In reality, the NCO has to be better at the platoon leader's job than he is," spoke Thacker with a smile.

The first half of the course includes subjects taught to all students: land navigation, training management, medical, communications, maintenance, leadership and physical training. The second portion emphasizes individual tasks.

Benning is the only installation teaching the Infantry Advanced Course. The field is very competitive, but said Thacker, "we are only touching the surface, a good NCO must continue to strive for self-improvement."

PLC

A fourth class offered through NCOSI is open to all combat support and combat service support MOSs. The Primary Leadership Course (PLC) is a four-week school taught 10 times yearly with a maximum of 185 students in each class.

It is designed as a leadership management and development course that is primarily taught in the classroom. The course strives to teach first-line supervision to senior E-4s and junior E-5s.

"All course information is highly valuable for administrative positions, particularly in distributing work loads," commented SFC Dorth Krishe, class senior instructor.

Areas of concentration include counseling, leadership techniques, subordinate evaluation, preparation of duty rosters, organization effectiveness, communication and general management practices.

The class is broken down into platoons and squads with two instructors per 15 students. Plans are being made to test the teaching methods this June by using an experimental self-paced concept.

Artillerymen get computerized fuze

Time fuze settings accurate to within one-tenth of a second will become an easy task for Artillerymen in the early 1980s, according to Army Research and Development officials.

A seven-pound computerized box, part of the M587/724/36 electronic time fuze system, fits over the nose of a round, touches the three-ring "bull's eye" and, in a second, sets detonation time, officials said.

Harry Diamond Laboratories, Adelphi, Md., developers of the device, call it a safe, highly accurate and moderately priced system.

And, officials add, the system can be used for high explosive rounds, submunition rounds, and canister rounds for 105mm, 155mm, and 8 inch Howitzers as well as 175mm guns.

This device is the first all-electronic Artillery fuze system accepted for the Army inventory, officials say, and it uses the same technology found in push button TV tuners and computerized cash registers.

Safety features of the system include an automatic internal check that rejects fuze errors. The firing circuit cannot be powered until 3.4 seconds before target time.

Any interruption in the detonating process will cause a restart of the countdown, they add. If restarted, the round will detonate on or after impact, preventing explosion over friendly troops.

The fuze is also safe from enemy electronic countermeasures, developers say, because it is shielded by metal and it neither gives off nor receives electromagnetic energy.

The fuze system is highly reliable, officials declare. Its 98 percent reliability tests are "unusually high." The two percent difference is blamed on faulty rounds, none of which detonated early, officials said.

It is now in its eighth year of development and the system's project director calls it "a great departure from anything that has been done up to now in the field." (ARNEWS)

Marksmen compete in East Regional

Members of the USAIC Marksmanship Detachment Composite Pistol and Rifle Team, the USAIC Committee Group Combat Rifle Team, the 34th Medical Battalion Combat Pistol Team and the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade Machinegun Team competed in the FORSCOM Eastern Regional Rifle, Pistol and Machinegun Championships at Fort Meade, Md. March 24 through April 6.

Combat Rifle Team members were Donald Francois (team captain), Gary Kirkpatrick, Bruce Robinson, Ernie Waters, Jesse Waugh, Gary Beske, Phillip Crider, Trino Villegas and Jimmie Herr, all assigned to Co C, Comm Gp, USAIC, and placed first in the Combat Rifle Grand Aggregate Championship.

3rd Bn, 7th Inf Machinegun Team members Gregory Bell (team captain), James Lindsey and Norman Corbray placed second in the M60 Light Machinegun Team Aggregate Championships. Corbray was the first place novice winner in the machinegun competition.

Fort Benning Composite Pistol Team members Philip Krososky, 2nd CSH, 34th Med Bn; Roger Williamson (team captain) HHC, Hq Cmd; Loretta Holub, 2nd CSH, 34th Med Bn, Wilson D. White and Tom Loomis, HHC, 2/69th Armor were winners of the General George S. Patton Trophy Match.

The Composite Pistol Team was also the second place winner of the Composite Pistol Team Aggregate Championship Match.

Krososky was the first place winner of the Individual .45 caliber Service Pistol Slow Fire Match, the Individual .45 caliber Service Pistol Timed Fire Match, and the Individual .22 caliber Championship Aggregate.

The Combat Rifle and Machinegun Teams will represent their parent organizations in the U.S. Army Rifle, Pistol and Machinegun Championships to be held here May 21-25. Selected members of the USAIC Composite Rifle and Pistol Team will remain at Fort Meade attached to Marksmanship Training Unit No. 1 for further training and will represent the FORSCOM Eastern Region at the Army Match in May.

The USAIC Marksmanship Detachment (Prov) is a branch of Training Division, Directorate of Plans and Training (DPT) and has the mission of providing assistance to Benning units in weapons qualification training and conduct of the USAIC Rifle, Pistol and Machinegun Championships. These matches will be conducted Oct. 27-Nov. 2 on Easley, McAndrews and Philips Ranges at Fort Benning.

The matches are open to all military personnel interested in competing individually and in team competition with the .45 caliber service pistol and the M-16A1 rifle. Battalion level and equivalent organizations are encouraged to enter a team in each event.

Runner's profile

Moore looking towards TRADOC Marathon

By Julie Casey

He ran his first marathon in 2 hours and 48 minutes on one of the toughest courses in the South at the All-American Fort Bragg, N.C., Marathon.

Tony Moore, a specialist assigned to the 546th Med Co, hopes to represent Fort Benning in the 1979 TRADOC Marathon Championship. The 21-year-old runs an average of 85 miles per week.
