The machines will be used at these locations for about a year to verify control procedures and acceptance by the patrons. Eventually, the official said, there may be slot machines in about 230 clubs in USAREUR, 127 clubs in Korea, five clubs in Japan and at the three armed forces recreation centers in Germany, Korea and Japan.

Parking area restricted

The Headquarters commandant, U.S. Army Infantry Center, has revised USAIC Regulation 210-36, control and use of parking areas of Infantry Hall (Bldg. 4).

The new regulation explains further parking restrictions in and around Infantry Hall that the old regulation did not cover.

The regulation covers policies and prodedures for use of the front parking areas, which are slated for the general, the assistant commandant and the protocol staff. It also covers the control and use of rear entrance and parking areas, control and use of driveways to the classrooms and control and use of parking spaces and areas adjacent to Infantry Hall.

The Headquarters Commandant is responsible for the policies and procedures governing use of these areas. Reserved parking in the prescribed areas will also be controlled by the Headquarters Commandant.

The Provost Marshall's Office will enforce these policies.

CHAMPUS says no to 'test tube' babies

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — CHAMPUS will not pay for the cost of getting pregnant through the "test tube" baby program, according to DoD officials.

The question of whether CHAMPUS would cover this program arose when several military families asked about using benefits to pay the cost of getting pregnant.

According to officials, a family's decision to use the "test tube" baby program is a personal one and costs of the attempt must be paid by the individual.

However, after a CHAMPUS beneficiary or sponsor becomes pregnant through the "test tube" baby program, she would qualify for regular CHAMPUS benefits.

Pot: Commanders discipline users, pre-service use now allowed

Local commanders will have more latitude in dealing with cannabis users under a Department of Defense policy announced at the end of October.

At the same time, the new policy covers pre-service use and provides guidelines for the enlistment of individuals who admit to using cannabis on a limited basis.

While pointing out that military personnel are expected and required to obey the law, the new policy statement also recognizes that the use of cannabis is related to the phenomenon of adolescent experimentation.

The use of cannabis within the military is still a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and commanders are expected to enforce the law and to take appropriate action against those servicemembers who break the law.

However, commanders are now advised under the new policy to consider all administrative, punitive, and nonjudicial punishment measures to determine the appropriate level of punishment.

In making this determination, the new policy permits a commander to consider all the facts and circumstances surrounding the alleged use of cannabis, the length and character of the individual's service, and any and all other mitigating or aggravating circumstances. Normally, the new policy advises, for a cannabis offender who uses or possesses a minor amount and who otherwise has a good record, the use of Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, as opposed to trial by courts-martial, is appropriate.

However, if the use occurs during duty hours, then stronger disciplinary and administrative actions may be more appropriate.

Motivational education in after-hour classes is considered one effective way of dealing with individuals caught with cannabis for personal use.

In addition to the commander, the new policy recommends that the individual's immediate supervisor, drug and alcohol prevention personnel, and medical, legal, security, and religious representatives might be brought in to aid the cannibis user.

Full penalties under the Uniform Code of Military Justice should be used against those individuals who traffic in cannabis, the Department of Defense stated.

Self-help program receives new emphasis here

The recent issue of USAIC Reg 420-22 brought about a new emphasis on self-help (SH) by occupants of family quarters.

At the mandatory SH class within 21 days after assignment of quarters, the attendee receives a SH certificate (DA Form 3941) for drawing supplies and tools and a nameplate for the residence.

SH type service requests will not be accepted in the Work Reception Center over the phone or by work order; this SH work must be done by the occupant.

SH supplies, tools and plastic bags will be issued at the SH issue point, Bldg. 466, only if the occupant has the SH certificate and a military ID card. Families who have not completed the SH class are asked to enroll soon at the Facilities Training School. For further information call 545-7093.

OCS class in review

By David B. Knudson

"Don't let that butt sneak forward!" On paper, these words sound gentle enough. When bellowed by a TAC officer, the words have a much more sinister tone. It also didn't matter who was on the receiving end of that directive. As if in reply, the butt of my own M-16 inched forward along my leg. I pulled harder on the sling, fighting to keep the rifle down. I considered sneaking my left hand across my back to help out, but wisely thought better of it.

Class 1-80, Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course (BIOCC), Officer Candidate School was practicing again for its Senior Status Review. Every OCS class conducts a review to "strut its stuff" in front of family, friends, and the 5th Student Battalion and The School Brigade commanders. During the ceremony, the class is awarded the senior status streamer for the guidon, and the orders awarding senior status are read. Another step on a tough ladder has been reached.

I doubt if any class has an easy time preparing for the review. I know we had troubles. It seemed as if many of the candidates were marching for the first time, although the big candidate in the sky and the Infantry School commandant knew otherwise. In this target-rich environment of one hundred seventy candidates, the TAC's enjoyed a field day. I heard, "Get the butt of that rifle behind the seam of your trousers. Keep it there!" "Get that thumb behind your sling, everyone WILL see it! Pull down on your sling! Present arms. No, too slow! Try it again! And again, and again."

For a third time in one day we prepared to run through the whole review again. March out, column left, half, left face, dress right, dress. I studied the neck of the candidate to my right. I knew that neck's most intimate details. But my own neck was common knowledge to the candidate on my left.

We stood for an eternity, dressing right. Left arms sagged; revived with a TAC's presence; then sagged again. Finally "Ready, front." Ahh!

Next we presented arms to the colors, and tried it again thirty or so times to get it straight. We watched the band, only our eyes moving, as it marched around us and played. We watched us make believe ribbons were attached to our guidon, more interested in pulling down on those slings and keeping those butts back.

Then came the final phase of the review. Right face, forward march, column left and then left flank, march. Now this was crazy. Who ever thought of marching eighteen men on line? To keep our dress required the extremes of peripheral vision. Candidates surged forward and then dropped back. I thought of a buffalo stampede in slow motion, no buffalo in his right mind taking the lead, all jostling each other, careening this way and that. "Eyes right." The herd followed its eyes, and the TAC's saw our not quartering off to the right. To put it kindly, they explained our errors to us.

But practice makes perfect, or nearly so. After numerous run throughs we started to look good. We could tell. The TAC's shouts and corrections lessened in frequency. The marching music sounded alright. We were alright. Shades of the Light Brigade! Why not have cannon going off and mount us all on horses? We could make this a spectacle!

The day of the review drew near. We were ready. We were finely honed. Standing tall, looking good, butts back. We could do it. We would do it. Wrong, candidate! The morning of the review saw the temperature drop unexpectedly to arctic lows. We packed into Wigle Hall and Col. George Geczy, TSE commander, simply tied the senior status streamer to our guidon. No cannon, no Light Brigade, not even a band.

But it now seems fitting to have worked so hard for apparently no reason. A review would have been anticlimatic, as the day of our commissioning proved. No ceremony could show our families what we had learned. Ceremonies meant little. We had gotten up in the dark to run three miles too many times. Done too many endless tasks, been screamed at for imperfect gigliness too often. Now that was OCS. Somehow it was fitting that we worked so hard for a review that never happened.

Armchair Sports

Patriotism

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) --What quality is there in an ice hockey game that Americans, who for the most part don't even know the rules, who couldn't tell the difference between an icing and a bucket of chicken, would cheer in happiness, cry in joy, carry national flags and, in public, for goodness sake, sing patriotic songs spontaneously.

I don't know the scientific reason, and I don't care to know. I'm just happy. I'm satisfied with having the feeling. I don't need to understand it.

I'm glad the United States Olympic Hockey Team beat the Communists. Twenty enthusiastic young amateur men playing together in a special sort of American brotherhood defeated the two best professional hockey teams in the world. For Americans who don't fully appreciate the magnitude of upsetting the Soviet and Czech teams, beating them is comparable to a group of Canadian college all-stars defeating the Pittsburgh Steelers in football.

I'm happy that Americans can become so engaged as to wear their pride and patriotism on their sleeves. I don't ever want to see those cynical days of the 60's and 70's again. I want to stay happy, forever, if possible.

It can't be done, of course. When the excitement cools off, the relative importance of this sporting tournament will seek and find its proper place in history. It may well be the most spectacular upset in sports history to defeat the Soviets. To be sure, it will never be forgotten by those who saw it, let alone the participants. But, no matter how reluctantly I write the words, hockey, after all, is only a game. It is not forever.

There. I've put things in proper perspective. I've given you a mature, rational way to view the games. For myself, I wish to exercise a different viewpoint, for now and for the rest of my life. I see myself as something of a child in this, not in possesion of a mature sense of reasoning at all. I'm thrilled as those youngsters hugging and falling all over the ice. Good grief, I feel like singing the National Anthem, of all things. I've caught myself humming "America the Beautiful" a dozen times today.

Seeing my brother and sister Americans act as wildly as they have over this hockey tournament has exposed something of the national spirit to me. In each of us, beneath the cynicism, below that doubt, under the facade of cold, hard pragmatism, lies the essence of America.

We can do it if we have to. Anything. We can see our potential in the example of the hockey team. We can see it in the reaction of each other to the victories. We are free to believe that we can be winners on ice or in any other arena. Don't ever forget that knowledge you've carried so deep inside you that you almost forgot it.

We are better than they are. We are winners.

Barracudas host splash, 300 swimmers compete

The Ft. Benning Barracudas hosted the Spring Splash B-C swim meet at Briant Wells Field House last weekend. Thirteen teams from surrounding areas with over 300 swimmers competed in the two-day event.

The Barracudas, coached by Rick Fagersten, assisted by Tom Duckett and Beth Schwedo, once again collected their fair share of the first six places. Many other Barracudas fell just a few seconds short of placing.

The 500-yard free style event was the final event Saturday afternoon and proved to be a tough endurance test for the tired, but still fired-up swimmers. In the girls division Harold came in third (6:05.93), Walters took fourteenth (7:04.34) and Carter, sixteenth (7:19.97). In the boys division D. Christensen (12) came in seventh place (6:14.12) S. Kimsey (16) seventeenth (7:01.33) and S. Latorre (14), nineteenth (7:05.02), P. Parke (11) competed but was disqualified.

For parents whose children are involved in swimming competition, it is usually a long drive for a short haul. However, parents of the teams from other areas in Georgia and Alabama say this is always an enjoyable weekend because of the tremendous help and friendly attitude of the OCS candidates who volunteer their free time all day Saturday and Sunday.

The candidates time the swimmers during each race, amidst mass confusion in the different heats. Their friendliness and warmth towards the kids help make everyone leave Ft. Benning with a good feeling.

Appreciation is also extended to the Briant Wells Field House staff who are there to make sure everything is in top-notch condition. The volunteer parents, headed up by Col. Doug Christensen, are the ones who spend the long hours of preparation before, during and after the home meet in which hundreds of swimmers must be systematically grouped in each event.

Even when the meet is over, statistics must be prepared and sent in to the Georgia AAU Swim Association under very strict and technical guidelines to insre the accuracy of each swimmer's official time.

The Barracudas end their short course season as they travel to the Junior Olympics in Gainesville, Georgia, April 26 and 27. The long course competition, based on endurance rather than speed, begins in late spring. To join, please call 545-3070 or 662-1833, or come by Briant Wells Monday through Thursdays between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m.. Any family member between the ages of six and eighteen are encouraged to join the DYA Barracuda Swim Team.

Interservice Championships

Army shooters dominate

By Tommy Pool

Shooters from the Army and Army Reserve dominated all the action last week during the 1980 Interservice International Shooting Championships held at Fort Benning.

In the Running Target competition, Army competitors accounted for two new national two-man team records and two new Interservice four-man team records.

Capt. Randy Stewart and Master Sgt. Martin Edmondson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit totaled 763 points to break the old mark of 762 by one point in the standard runs competition. They set another national record the following day in the mixed runs matches with a final team score of 768 points, three points over the old record.

In other team competition, the four-man Army squad of Stewart, Edmondson, James Reiber and Robert George swept all interservice team competition while setting two new interservice records in the process. The Army squad totaled 4,537 followed by the USAR at 4,382 in standard runs and 1,507 in mixed runs competition followed by the USAR at 1,472.

Stewart scored a narrow two-point-victory over Edmondson to claim the individual Interservice Mixed Runs Championship. Stewart's final tally was 385 out of 400 points to Edmondson's 383. Robert Partridge of the U.S. Marine Corps finished in third place at 379. Partridge came back to win the standard runs competition by edging Capt. Louis Theimer of the Reserves in Colorado Springs by a single point, 1,705 to 1,704.

Robert George finished third at 1,701 followed by Stewart at 1,698.

In the Interservice Pistol Matches, the Army Reserve took the majority of the matches by winning four out of five individual and team championships.

DYA Demons down Razorbacks

A damp late Saturday morning didn't cool the spirit of the orange clad Demons in Dependent Youth Soccer. They continued their winning ways by defeating the previously unbeaten Razorbacks 7-1.

Darrin Tucker scored an astonishing five goals and was the obvious offensive standout in the game. Bruce Welke connected for his first goal of the season and Eddie Sprague finished off the scoring for the Demons.

Coach Butch James congratulated the Demons for their best team effort so far but he singled out fullback Greg McCann and Goalie Mike Burke especially for their outstanding defensive play.

This was Burke's first time in goal and he stopped several strong Razorback attacks. In the final quarter Darryl Grogan finally hit for the Razorbacks but by that time it was too late to make any difference.

Only one rain soaked game was played in the Junior Division this week. The Panthers sloshed to a 1-0 victory over the Red Devils. Shea Briscoe scored the only goal of the game while Chad Holter and Alex McKindra played outstanding games for the Panthers. Steve Traub, Troy Brian and Greg Gnetti were the other standouts for the Red Devils.

Making Tracks

By Bob Kuwik

Despite the weather running went on last weekend at the Fort Benning Bunny Fun Run. A total of 430 runners showed up for the gala affair.

An electrical storm hampered the minimarathoners but despite being soaked to the bone, none of the runners quite the race . That was true dedication folks.

Maj. Goodman, Morale Support Activities Division, thanks all the people who helped make this run the most successful ever at Fort Benning. Results of the race will be published in next weeks Making Tracks.

Other Columbus runners who performed well were Jeff Heas and Jerry McCrum. John Moore set a personal record of 39:58 for the 10,000-meter-run.

Library Run

The Library Run Sunday was a real success and well conducted by the Bradley Library.

Of course, Bruce Skiles won the 3.1-mile-race with a time of 16:18. The weather had no affect on the turnout as 160 runners participated.

Others who did well were Leonard Horning (17:13), Jeff Keas (17:19), and Fred Dyer (19 flat). In the women's finish Tanya Jenerette, Marylin Hicks and Jean Dyer all performed well.

Next week Tom Breeding will be back in his home space and I'll revert back to a feature writer with RUNNER'S PROFILE.

Elections coming

Elected school boards will be coming to dependent schools on post this spring. The new board will have 11 elected members, including the president.

This is a change from four appointed members at large and seven elected members, one from each of the schools. The board will hve duties similar to those of civilian boards except they will not have the power to levy and collect taxes.

Candidates need to be a parent or guardian of a student attending one of the dependent schools, not be on orders or known levy to leave the post for the next 12 months, be at least 21-years old and not be a school employee or a family member of a school employee. Candidates are to nominated by any group of four or more eligible voters. Elected board members will serve for two years.

The election will be held May 20 with balloting at each school. Parents with children at more than one of the schools can vote for a representative at each school. For the president and the members at large parents can vote only once.

Board selects Dr. Coss

Col. J. Ross Franklin, president, Fort Benning Dependents' Schools Board, has announced the boards' selection of Dr. Richard H. Coss to be the superintendent of the Fort Benning Dependents' Schools effective July 1. He will replace Dr. Joseph T. Conforti who will retire June 30.

Coss, presently serving as the director of Dependent Education, Office of the Adjutant General, Department of the Army, has an extensive background involving the education of military dependent children.

He received his BS degree in 1950 from Phillips University, Enid, Oklahoma; his M.Ed. degree from Phillips University in 1952; and his D. Ed. from the University of Oklahoma in 1960.

Coss taught English, speech and social studies at Waukomis, Oklahoma from 1950 to 1953; served as teacher-assistant high school principal 1953-56 in Frankfurt, Germany; elementary school principal 1956-57 in Wurzburg, Germany; supervising principal of an elementary and junior high school 1958-1960 in Poitiers, France and Hanau, Germany and high school principal 1960-61 in Frankfurt, Germany. From 1961-1967, he served consecutively as the superintendent of schools for the districts of Heidelberg and Karlsruhe, Germany; then, the Army and Air Force schools in the districts encompassing Wiesbaden, Germany, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium.

In 1976, Coss returned to Headquarters Department of the Army where he has since served as the director of Dependent Education for the Section 6 schools on the Army posts in the United States.

Guidelines given for OERs

A zero percent late rate for Officer Evaluation Reports (OER) has been established here thanks to the cooperation and the priority management that the Major Subordinate Commands (MSC), Departments and Staff Sections have given the OER system.

While the cooperation of the MSCs has been outstanding, after reviewing the initial 67-8 OERS, there are a few areas that still need improvement, according to CWO 2 Frederick Claassen, OIC of the OER section. New guidelines for the improvement of these areas was outlined in a recent letter from the Post AG dated March 31, 1980. Raters should refer to the following guidelines for future OER requirements:

Several OERs have been received using narrative gimmicks, according to Claassen. These reports included, but weren't limited to, the use of excessive capitalization, underlineing, double and triple spacing, trite comments and brief unqualified superlatives or phrases.

According to Claassen, the use of gimmicks promotes form over substance and it is an obvious attempt by the rater to give the rated officer an advantage which is not based on his performance or potential. These gimmicks are prohibited by paragraph 4-19 of AR 623-105. The use of gimmicks was originally stopped during the 67-7 OER system as the result of selection board complaints.

Performance narratives

Another area in which there appears to be considerable improvement over the way OERs were previously done, is the rater's narrative evaluation of the rated officer's performance including results achieved and the manner and degree of achievement. Use of the support form to establish this focus is a fundamental aspect of the evaluation process. Should this trend continue, the new system will go a long way toward providing the type of narrative that DA Selection Boards have been requesting.

A few reports have been returned for correction or improvement of the performance narratives. These reports, so far, fall into two categories.

The first category contains those which include comments on potential. Separation of potential comments from the performance narrative was intended to provide more structured narratives and an increased focus on performance.

The second category contains those narratives which simply do not address the specifics of performance. For an example of a well written performance narrative, see DA Pam 623-105.

Signatures

A number of inquiries have been received concerning the date of signature of the rated officer and rating chain members on the OER. Paragraph 4-11 of AR 623-105 explains that the rated officer may sign the report prior to the "thru date" of the report, but the rating officials may not.

Also, as stated in paragraph 4-11c of AR 623-105, a rating official cannot date the report prior to the date of the rated officer's signature or any preceding rating official's signature. In those situations where it is impossible or extremely impractical to obtain the rated officer's signature or to obtain it in the proper sequence, the report may be submitted provided the Senior Rater explains, in Part VIIb, why the rated officer's signature is missing or out of sequence.

Late requests for packets

Several requests for the OER Packet have been received as late as 49 days after a change-of-rater or change-of-duty assignment. It is almost impossible to process an OER and mail it to Department of the Army Headquarters (HQDA) with so little time remaining because HQDA requires an OER within 60 days of the "thru date".

It is requested that the Officer Personnel Branch (OER section) be promptly notified of any situation which requires the initiation of an OER Packet. The notification may be phoned in (the OER section's number is 545-2854) prior to submitting the proper documentation for a packet.

The OER office has received several OERs without the necessary documentation for a change in duty or change in rater. These OERs only add confusion to the smooth OER operation now in progress. According to Army regulations, DA form 67-8 will be initiated at the Military Personnel Office. It is requested that units, departments and staff sections refrain from initiating the OER Packets at their level, and that the OER Section be promptly informed when a Packet is required.

A copy of the most recent "By Name Rating Chain" should be furnished to the AG office personnel branch by each commander and activity chief. Chanes to the rating chain should be furnished to the AG office personnel branch promptly to insure compliance with pragraph 1-5 of AR 623-105.

Officers assigned or attached for rating purposes must be provided a copy of the latest rating chain to insure their rating officials are known. Also, the letter "P", as it pertains to the senior rater, should only be used in rating chains if senior raters are in the authorized position for the new grade.

Clerk honored

Sp4 Mary Gruss, Company A, Headquarters Command, works at the Consolidated Military Personnel Activities (COMPACT) section for the 1st Infantry Training Brigade. She was selected as Fort Benning's first recipient as the Adjutant General's Soldier of the Month.

Mary is a personnel action specialist. As a clerk at the brigade she processes trainee discharges and does various clerical work.

Mary enjoys working as a clerk, saying she has gained, "plenty of job experience in the business field," being in the Army. Mary, who joined the Army in 1976, mentioned, "I didn't want to go to college right out of high school. I felt the Army would help me to decide what direction (career) to lead me."

At night and on Saturdays she attends Troy State University, currently majoring in Business Administration with an emphasis in accounting.

In her off time she keeps busy by sewing her own clothes and trys to stay in shape by running and exercising when she gets a chance. Before being assigned to Company A, Headquarters Command she was in the 36th Engineer Group and competed reguarly in the group's five-mile runs and Run for Your Life Program.

Being Soldier of the Month is nothing new to Mary. She has also been Soldier of the Month for Company A, Headquarters Command and the 524th Personnel Service Company.

Mary is married to Sgt. Daniel Gruss, also a personnel action specialist who works for the Student Personnel section for the Airborne Department and Officer Candidate School (OCS).

As Adjutant General's Soldier of the Month she received a Certificate of Achievement.

Riding the Panama waves

The 72nd Engineers can't walk on water but they don't do bad on a raft. See story on the 197th's jungle expert training on page 16.

Glad you asked

Is the Army's system of rating officers and enlisted soldiers a just method of judging an individual?

Sgt. Maj. Clinton D. Stephens,
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

No, it is not fair. While some commanders want to be fair and equal in rating the soldier, others want all the soldiers to have good EERs. It can and is being used by some superiors as a tool to allow their personal feelings to become involved without justification in their method of rating.

Maj. Robert Wiese
121st Aviation Company

It doesn't seem fair because you cannot give a man a rating of average or below average and expect him to compete with his contemporaries. However, the new system is attempting to correct this problem.

Company B, 2/69th Armor

I think it is pretty fair since you are graded by your immediate supervisor over a period of six months and that's long enough to check out what kind of person the individual is.

PFC Daryle Costello
Headquarters Company,
1/58th Infantry

Well, the way it is supposed to be is pretty good. But I find that overseas it is easier to get a max EER. Here in the States you have to prove yourself. If you're not a bad troop, you'll earn it.

CWO 2 Willie James Baldwin
10th Company, 1st Battalion,
Infantry Training Brigade

Under the new system it is fair because the officer can explain what his own job description is and can write in his own objectives for the year. I like the new system.

MSgt. William R. Story
Staff Judge Advocate Office

I think they are overinflated. As most of them read now, they are unrealistic. Nobody's that good. It's human nature to give as high an EER as possible so the soldier can get promoted.

PFC Thomas J. Bergeron
MEDDAC
Martin Army Hospital

I think it is a pretty good deal. I understand that the soldiers are judged on job performance, looks and overall atitude. If a soldier has a problem, he can look in his EER and see what to do to better himself. When he betters himself, his job performance is upgraded.

Sp4 Darrell G. Holcomb
Airborne Department
U.S. Army Infantry School

No, with all of its intentions it is abused. I think the EERs are inflated. I have known some good NCOs who have recieved bad EERs from a rater who didn't like them. A soldier can have an excellent career for years, get a bad EER and when he goes on to his next duty station he's already got something working against him.

I think the SQT scores, job performance and school experience should be given more weight.

Traffic jam

To the Editor:

What is the justification af the time change of the traffic pattern in the evenings from 4:30 p.m. to 5:10 p.m? My understanding is a traffic pattern exists for the smooth exodus of traffic as personnel leave post after their work day. Since personnel leaving work at 5 p.m. from Building 4 and further points cannot possibly reach the intersection before the cut off, at this time there will inevitably be a bottle neck, especially for the left lane and Lumpkin Road traffic which will result in a defeat of the traffic pattern.

Will the savings of 20 minutes in the pattern justify the wasted time and frustrations for employees not able to exit the post before the cut off?

Evelyn M. Pohl

Editors note: According to a spokesman from the Provost Marshal's Office, the time was changed from 4:30 p.m. to 5:15 p.m. approximately a year and a half ago after an intensive traffic survey.

Rude employee

To the Editor:

To the people who live on Fort Benning, especially the Lavoie Manor Community, its distinguished mayor, Karen Cockrell and SFC Boyd and Juanita Christian.

We were one of the families affected by the tragic fire on the Saturday before Easter.

Those of you who have not been through something like this cannot comprehend what goes through your mind and how it affects your life. Here we were watching the possibility of years of struggling going up in smoke, clutching our family close to us and thanking God we were safe.

At that time the only thing that crosses your mind is if everyone is safe. Later the whole impact of what has happened sinks in.

If it were not for the wonderful people of the community who held our hands and offered everything they had, we would have been totally at a loss.

Thank you, Fort Benning, for your offers of help. Thank you Lavoie Manor for your support. Thank you Lavoie Manor Community Life and the chapel for your prayers and all that you did for all of us that was possible.

Thank you Sgt. and Mrs. Christian for supplying sandwiches and hot coffee for the firemen and the young troops through the night.

If it were not for all these wonderful people and many more, we would have found it very difficult to pick up the pieces adnd carry on.

You're a super bunch of people, the military.

Family grateful

To the Editor:

I have been assigned to Fort Benning since October of 1976 as an instructor in the Infantry School. Effective Jan. 6 of this year I departed Fort Benning on TDY to Fort Lee enroute to my new assignment. I was authorized to keep my quarters at Fort Benning for my family while I was on TDY.

My outprocessing from Fort Benning in January was relatively efficient and the persons at the Finance Office, Personnel Office, Family Housing and the Officers' Club were especially helpful. It should be noted

EERs shape soldiers' careers

By Gary Jones

"I'm sorry, but you can't clear post without an EER sergeant," explained the clerk in the Senior Enlisted Evaluation Report (SEER) section.

"But, I've got to leave post today," said the disgruntled NCO, "my plane leaves for Germany tomorrow." Similar scenes happen frequently to soldiers trying to clear post, according to Sgt. Deborah A. Walker, NCOIC, of the SEER section here. "One of the main problems is people coming up here trying to clear post without an EER," she explained.

"When a soldier comes here to clear without an EER we call their unit PSNCO and tell him that the soldier can't clear without one," said Walker. "If the unit can't get an EER completed on the soldier that day, then the only alternative is the soldier who was delayed while the SEER section questioned his unit, will be forced to leave without an EER. This lack of an EER can cause the soldier definate problems later in his career."

EERs don't just happen

According to 2nd Lt. Jeanne Charbonneau, OIC of the SEER section, "Many people think that an EER is automatically kicked out of the system and will be waiting on them but that just doesn't happen. It is very important that a soldier who needs an EER have the initiative to keep checking with his rater (immediate supervisor) to insure that his EER is completed, explained Charbonneau.

The Army places great importance on a soldier's EER score because this score, along with other qualifications are used as a basis for such personnel actions as promotion, school selection, assignment, military occupational specialty (MOS) classification, command sergeant major (CSM) designation, and qualitative management actions. The EER is designed to provide a brief, clear assessment of the rated soldier's past performance and potential for the future. With this in mind, it is easy to see why a soldier's new unit would want to see an EER for the rated soldier's last assignment and how much impact the lack of one would have, explained Walker.

There are many instances besides a PCS move where a soldier needs an EER completed. Under the present system, soldiers in grades E-5 thru E-9 need to have an EER completed annually or anytime their immediated supervisor changes.

Also, if a soldier changes job positions and is then responsible to rate soldiers under him, then all those soldiers under him need to have an EER completed within 90 days but not sooner than 60 days after he takes over (a supervisor has to observe a soldier for 60 days before he can rate the soldier).

Another problem facing the SEER section, according to Walker, is units not getting their soldiers' EERs back in time. "The units, for the most part, are filling the EERs out right, that's no problem, but they are missing their suspense dates," said Walker.

"We get an EER in and then send it down to the unit, giving them at least a month to complete it and send it back to us. I try to allow about two to three weeks after that to process an EER here and get it mailed to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. in order to meet their deadline of 60 days after the soldier's last rated month of the report," she explained. "When the units miss a suspense to us then it makes it extremely difficult to get the EERs to Fort Harrison by the required date."

Rating chains forgotten

Unit commanders are a vital part of the EER system, according to AR 623-205. It is the responsibility of the commander to insure that official rating schemes are published by name and duty position and posted in the unit so that each soldier knows his rater, indorser and reviewer. A copy of the rating scheme also must be furnished to the Enlisted Management EER section in Bldg. 83, Rm. 226, according to Capt. Zachary M. Doppel, OIC of the Enlisted Management EER section here.

It is also important that commanders insure that each rating official is fully qualified to meet his responsibilitys and knows whom he is responsible to rate, and that reports are prepared only by the individuals designated in the published rating chain.

In order for the EER system to work as it is designed, each rated soldier must be provided with a copy of his completed EER and be given any assistance he requires (if requested) in preparing andsubmitting appeals. A soldier's immediate supervisor should counsel the rated soldier about his EER when it is prepared in order to insure that all of the rated soldier's questions are answered. This helps the rated soldier to understand his short comings so that he knows where improvement is needed.

Unit commanders vital

What many units here are forgeting is that any time there is a change in the unit rating chain, a new official rating scheme must be published and posted in the unit as well as sent to the Enlisted Management EER section, according to Doppel. "Besides EERs, we also get soldiers' reassignment orders up here, so a missing rating scheme from a unit is fairly easily noticed." he said.

"For example, if an E-7 arrives on post, we know that when he arrives in his unit more than likely he will have several soldiers working under him which he is responsible to rate. Therefore we know that new EERs are needed from that unit for not only the new E-7 but every soldier that works for him. However, unless the unit submits a new rating scheme we have no way of identifying those soldiers," he explained.

EERs are very important to every soldier's career. Right now the biggest step that could be taken to improve the EER system here would be to make sure that required suspenses are met. Also soldiers should take an interest in making sure their rater is aware of the need for an EER so that a completed one is in their possesion before trying to clear post, according to Walker.

that I was wearing my uniform at all times while outprocessing. My rank is captain.

Unfortunately, when it came time for my wife to outprocess, she found being a dependent did not merit the good treatment that I had received as an officer in uniform. The Martin Army Hospital records section was particularly discourteous.

She went to pick up the medical records on March 21. We were to pack out on March 24 and our quarters would be inspected on March 26. After waiting in line for 25 minutes she finally reached the window. She was bluntly informed that she could not pick up her records until 24 hours prior to leaving Fort Benning due to regulations. The man behind the counter offered no further options, but to return on March 25, while we would be clearing quarters. This would be totally impractical as anyone who has cleared quarters knows. Let it be noted that the 24-hour regulation was not mentioned in the bulletin posted from family practice on how to clear the hospital.

In frustration, my wife went to the hospital adjutant whose secretary (who was most courteous) told her that she also had the option of having her records mailed to our new assignment. The man at the records section had given her no such option.

I should mention at this point that when I went to pick up my records this man did not question an Army captain in uniform if he was leaving within 24 hours. He merely handed me the records, neither checking an ID card or my orders to verify my authorization. He asked for my medical ID card only to get a social security number.

Although I do not agree with this 24-hour regulation, that is not my basic complaint. My complaint is with the rude and discourteous treatment my wife received and the fact she was not told of the mailing option until she sought out the adjutant.

In comparing our experiences at Martin Army Hospital over the past four years with others, it would appear that the individual in the records section seems to be perpetually obnoxious to dependents, retired personnel and lower enlisted personnel while displaying a different attitude when dealing with officers in uniform.

I suggest this man treat all people fairly and courteously as he is there to perform a service and give assistance. It is small wonder many good people, enlisted and officers, leave the Army when these incidents of discourtesy occur on a repetitive basis by petty bureaucrats.

Clip job?

To the Editor:

In recent years, when a person went in for a haircut, that also included trimming of the eyebrows and clipping hair inside the nose and ears. These days, you are lucky if the hair is cut off of your head.

Why can't the PX system maintain the services it once rendered in the past? A customer would not mind tipping a little more, if at all, if the barber provided good service. The price of a haircut is now $2.55, and you don't even have enough time to get sleepy in the chair.

More fish stories

To the Editor:

I thank you, Mr. Brown, for your exceptional composition on Fort Benning wildlife management. The fog factor in your response probably has poor Tom so confused he will forget his fishing pole if he gets to go fishing. I believe you would probably be more accurate in saying that 61 thousand channel catfish, 51 thousand bluegill and five thousand largemouth bass were dumped into the Upatoi and drifted into the Chattahoochee. Muscogee County could have used half these fish for an exceptional stocking program.

It is unbelievable that you charge $4 to fish at Fort Benning and one can fish in some of the finest lakes and streams all over the state of Georgia for $3.25. Recently I drove around Twilight Pond and saw twice as many blue tags as red and most of the people I talked to with red bumper stickers were senior grade enlisted personnel. Your comment about perpetuating the fish and wildlife on the reservation for the enjoyment of the soldier and his family is another familiar field of fog to wade through. For an E-3 or 4 to go fishing at Twilight Pond it would cost $17.25, plus gas, and if he wanted his over 16 dependent to also fish, it would cost $34.50, plus gas. With the inflation spiral continuing on food and gas per your article, how can the soldiers and their families enjoy fishing at Fort Benning? Also, the no live bait and size limits on these ponds make it an additional handicap.

Why doesn't the Morale Support Division donate some of their funds to lessen the cost of post fishing permits? Why doesn't Fort Benning support its soldiers and families by offering $1 or $2 permits and family permits free? The Provost Marshal's Office, which issues the permits, can monitor the guest permits to insure they aren't daily fishermen. Also, personnel should be able to pick up one or two day guest permits during the week for weekend guests.

Fort Benning, we soldiers need your help and support. We ask so little and give so much.

M. Martin

Barracks conditions

To the Editor:

As a member of the U.S. Army, I realize that I have individual responsibilities and obligations not only to the Army, but to myself as well. That is why I am writing this letter. The subject of living conditions within the unit and variable differences in the condition of the units on post, in my opinion, has not been well discussed.

I have had the opportunity to travel a great deal through my growing years,, and some with the U.S. Army. I have experienced living in many countries and various states within our own country.

To get to the point, I have lived here at Fort Benning for two and a half years, and in those years I have often wondered why there is such a wide difference in the various billets and housing conditions. In the beginning of my tour here, I lived in the same billets for approximately one year. While living in and working around this unit, I began to notice that the everyday housework or cleaning details started to taper off, and the common area were only being cleaned in time of inspection or protocol. The general condition of the unit fluctuated with each commander and with the priority they set on this particular matter.

I personally feel that a unit and its condition can dramatically affect the individual soldier, such as his or her morale, pride, esprit de corps and even their job efficiency. For example: if a soldier has a professional atitude or even a good attitude, training and some type of military bearing, he or she may do very well in the service. But even the best soldier can be, and often times is, worn down by a units living conditions and other personnel in that unit with a "I don't care attitude" concerning dirty hallways, abused bulletin boards, walls, floors, laundry rooms inoperable and the most important of all the only areas where a soldier with guests or a visitor may socialize, the day room. Unless you are fortunate enough to live in a company that has and allows visitation rights.

Now to some people, this may not seem to be an important issue. For the single soldier living in the billets on post it is, or at least should be. The saying, "the grass is always greener on the other side," is true, at least when it comes to looking at other unit's living conditions. I can say this because I now live on the "other side". In Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, I am now able to see just how well a soldier may live, if the proper care, maintainence and attention to detail is kept up by the individual soldier and commander of that unit. I feel that the condition of a unit, good or bad, reflects solely on the comander and the occupants of that unit. I also feel that it shows how much the individual commander cares for the soldier or how hard they try to insure that their troops receive the best. Of course the shoe also goes on the other foot, it shows the care and pride the individual soldier places with that unit. This is where morale comes into play.

I wonder why things can not be this good in every unit. Some people say that a team is only as good as the worst player. I would like to add that the same feeling when speaking about the condition of a unit. A unit can only be as good as the soldier or commander caring for it.

In closing, I would like to say that I have often felt that way while living in my previous unit.

Why should I care so much about doing the duties assigned to me as Assistant Charge of Quarters, if no one else does? The other personnel who disregard those instructions, do not feel any repercussions from it. I realize now that if a soldier or commander maintain an open and free line of communication just about anything can be accomplished. If you show the same respect that you as an individual expect, no matter what the rank, people will eventually know that you are doing the best for them, and they will do the best for you. By doing this, you will be able to accomplish two things, care for your personnel and more effective completion of the unit mission to a very high level.

1/58th tests goggles

Members of the 1st Battalion (M), 58th Infantry "Patriots" are in the process of testing new, lower cost, night vision goggles for use by U.S. Army soldiers. The goggles now used by the Army cost approximately $8000 a pair as opposed to approximately $2500 a pair for the new system.

The testing is broken down into several phases. There was a range week in which soldiers of 3rd Platoon, Company A fired the M16 rifle and the M60 machinegun with and without night vision devices.

In the mechanized maneuver week, the soldiers tested the goggles while maneuvering up to 30 kilometers per night without lights.

During the dismounted maneuver week the sol-

In the target detection week, both mounted and dismounted targets were presented at various ranges while the test platoon was in a defensive posture.

Throughout the testing, the platoon is continually tested on their ability to perform certain functions while wearing the different types of night vision devices. Some of the objectives were for the soldier to: place the PRC 77 radio into operation, set up an M18A1 Claymore mine, make a range card for the M60 machinegun, prepare a squad sector sketch, and the disassembly and assembly of the M16 rifle.

Census takers easy to identify

Census takers for the 1980 Census of Population and Housing are easy to identify, according to census district manager, Jerry Luquire.

They wear red, white and blue cards with the U.S. Department of Commerce seal and "Census Enumerator, Official Credential" printed on them. Their cards also have their signatures, certifying that they have sworn to keep confidential all information they collect for the census. Any Census Bureau worker who breaks this oath faces a fine or imprisonment or both, but the Bureau's record on this is spotless, the manager said.

Census takers have started making their rounds here, calling at residences from which householders have not mailed back their census questionnaires. They are using the telephone to reach most of the householders who have mailed back questionnaires inadequately filled out.

Anyone without this official identification card who claims to be a census taker should be reported to the police or to the district office.

Changes made to Army reg on retirement

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Officers and enlisted soldiers may now apply for retirement up to 13 months before their retirement date.

Changes to AR 635-100 and AR 635-200 permit soldiers to apply for normal voluntary retirement and retirement in lieu of PCS once they have completed 18 years and 11 months of active federal service.

Those who apply more than six months early must request a retirement date no later than the end of the month during which they attain 20 years of service.

Soldiers requesting retirement to avoid a PCS have 30 days from the time they are notified to apply for retirement. Enlisted soldiers are notified in writing. Officers may receive written or oral notification.

The new policy, effective April 1, offers some servicemembers a greater opportunity to retire at 20 years, explained a MILPERCEN official. Under the old system, soldiers received alerts or orders up to six months before a scheduled retirement. Now members can lock in their retirement at an earlier date, he said.

Some soldiers who were notified of alert orders before April 1, but weren't eligible for retirement in lieu of PCS, can still benefit from the new changes during the month of April. Those who meet the following conditions for retirement may apply until April 30:

- 18 years and 11 months of active service on April 1 and can complete all present service obligations before the requested date of retirement.
- Have not reported to their new duty station.

Eligible soldiers who were already in transit during the April 1-30 period may report to the nearest Army installation which has a retirement approval authority for processing.

Soldiers arriving in an overseas command during the April 1-30 period who were in transit on April 1 must complete one year in the overseas command before retiring.

Legal Notes

Brig. Gen. Rector to visit Benning

Brig. Gen. Lloyd K. Rector, commander of the U.S. Army Legal Services Agency and chief judge of the U.S. Army Court of Military Review at Falls Church, Va., will be visiting Fort Benning for participation in Law Day activities on May 1 as guest speaker at the annual luncheon being held at the Fort Benning Officers' Supper Club.

Rector received a Bachelor of Science Degree from Wake Forest University followed by his Juris Doctor Degree from the Wake Forest School of Law. He attended the Academy of International Law, The Hague, and is a graduate of the Army War College.

Major assignments include Executive for The Judge Advocate General of the Army; Staff Judge Advocate of U.S. Army Force Command, XVIII Airborne Corps (Fort Bragg, N.C.), U.S. Army Air Defense Command and Fort Bliss, 82nd Airborne Division (Fort Bragg); Chief of Operations and Policy of International Law, U.S. Army Europe; and Chief of International Law and Staff Judge Advocate of the U.S. Army Southern European Task Force.

Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal with first Oak Leaf Cluster, National Defense Service Medal with first Oak Leaf Cluster, Vietnam Service Medal with four Service Stars, and the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal and the Gallantry Cross with Palm.

This yearly event will be attended by approximately 300 invited guests including Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., commander, U.S. Army Infantry Center; Brig. Gen. John E. Rogers, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School; Col. Addison D. Davis, III, the Infantry Center chief of staff; post directors and battalion commanders; attorneys from the Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City, Opelika, and Atlanta areas; Staff Judge Advocate retirees, and post legal personnel.

Included in the highlights of Law Day will be the dedication of the courtroom in Bldg. 5 immediately following the luncheon to the memory of the late Col. (ret.) Robert M. Lathrop with Col. (ret.) Reid Kennedy officiating. Lathrop was initially assigned to Fort Benning as Staff Judge Advocate of the 2nd Infantry Division. When the division was deactivated in early 1965, Lathrop was reassigned as Deputy Staff Judge Advocate of the Infantry Center at which time he also served as Acting Staff Judge Advocate during the Dominican crisis. After a tour in Korea, Lathrop was again assigned to Fort Benning in 1968 as the Deputy Staff Judge Advocate, shortly afterwards being designated the Staff Judge Advocate, a position he served in until 1972.

Lathrop's tenure from 1968 to 1972 was marked by heavy case loads, often with complex factual situations and sensitive legal issues, such as those manifested by the U.S. v. Calley trial. Upon return from a tour in Berlin (1972-1974), Lathrop assumed the role as military judge of the II Judicial Circuit at Fort Benning until his retirement in July 1972. Lathrop died of cancer in May 1978.

Attorneys from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, U.S. Army Infantry Center, will speak at the various post dependent schools with Law Week concluding at the awards ceremony for participants of the annual essay contest.

"THE AUTO INSURANCE SPECIALISTS"

Car theft leading crime today

Once dominated by youthful "joy-riders," auto theft has emerged as one of the leading crime problems facing our country today. A growing part of the problem is professional rings which resell stolen vehicles or strip them for valuable parts.

Operations such as these have contributed to an alarming increase in auto theft during recent years. Latest FBI statistics indicate auto theft in 1979 was near the 1,100,688 mark — up approximately 11 percent from 1978. The resulting monetary loss to the American public is estimated at $4 billion annually.

According to Robert Barber, manager of property loss for a major insurance company, a high percentage of stolen vehicles are unlocked at the time of theft — many with keys left in the ignition. Barber says this indicates something can be done on a personal level to stem the growth of auto theft and possibly prevent the loss of your own vehicle. He suggests the following simple rules.

- Always lock your car and take the keys with you. Even if you are leaving your car for only a few minutes, lock it! If you must leave valuables in the car, always put them in the trunk.
- Completely close all windows when leaving your car unattended. It's better to return to a car that is poorly ventilated than to return to an empty parking space.
- If you park your car in your garage, always lock the door of the garage as well as the door of the car. Protect your vehicle by placing as many obstacles as possible between it and the thief. The more locks and doors the thief has to open, the more difficult it will be to steal the vehicle.
- If possible, install an alarm system or other anti-theft devices in your car. A variety of these are available on the market and many can be obtained at a reasonable cost. It may not be a foolproof method for preventing the theft of your car, but it can certainly act as a deterrent.
- Avoid leaving your car overnight in repair shops, parking lots and parking garages. The longer your car is out of your sight and control, the greater the risk of having it stolen. If you must leave if overnight, the insurance company suggests that you make sure it will be stored in a locked, secured area.
- Avoid leaving keys with parking lot attendants at public parking lots. It's a very simple procedure for someone to have your keys copied. If you must leave them, make sure the attendant is an authorized employee.
- Park in well-populated areas only. Never leave your car parked in a deserted alley or on a lonely side street. This poses a danger to both you and your vehicle.
- If you must park on the street when at home, try to park at a variety of locations. Don't invite theft by always having your car parked in the same place at the same time. This is something that is difficult to do in an urban or metropolitan environment where parking areas are at a premium, but predictability is something thieves frequently rely upon.
- If you are taking a trip and leaving your car at home, tell family and friends. In addition, the insurance company suggests connecting some of the lights in your house to a timer switch. This will give the potential thief the impression that your car had not been left alone.
- Don't leave your license or car's title in the glove compartment. This is another open invitation to theft and may assist the thief in avoiding detection. You may also need the information contained in these documents when reporting the theft to the police and your insurance company.

While none of us can totally escape the threat of auto theft, each person can help by making the thief's job as difficult and uninviting as possible. Do your part and join in the fight against this growing crime. Don't leave the door open to auto theft.

PT tough for OCS candidates

By Lester H. Albers

Most people would love to be in physically great shape but aren't motivated enough to reach that goal. However, soldiers reaching Officer Candidate School (OCS) quickly find that they need to get motivated toward good physical conditioning if they intend to finish the course.

Daily scheduled periods of physical training (PT) starting at 5:15 a.m. are normal at OCS. During the basic phase, PT is conducted twice each day in gray sweatsuits and tennis shoes in the winter or "T" shirts and shorts in spring and summer. During the basic phase, candidates must also double time in the battalion area and to and from classes.

Following the prerequisite Advance Physical Fitness Test, the candidates are divided into one of three prearranged running groups, A (fastest), B (faster) and C (fast). The runs progress from a one mile warmup to four miles by the end of the eighth week. This may not sound like much to the average runner, however, the fast pace leaves much to be desired. In fact, this was the biggest complaint registered against the PT program. "The running groups took off too quick," commented 2nd Lt. Paul Fesler, a former member of A group. "As soon as we turned the corner of the building, we were off like lightning."

Physical fitness is an important ingredient in OCS and many forms of training comprise the program. Candidates are challenged by the 1st Infantry Training Brigade confidence course and the Ranger confidence course (which includes a 40-foot log walk and a slide for life off a 75-foot tower) and ten and fifteen mile marches in full field gear. PT includes regularly scheduled conditioning drills, grass drills and guerrilla drills. PT is also incorporated into daily training.

What did all the physical training achieve besides sore muscles and aching bodies? "It developed basic leadership ability," commented 2nd Lt. Gina Aichele, "besides being exposed to a wide variety of physical conditioning."

To the TAC officers, it also proved something about their candidates. According to 1st Lt. Richard Jackson, "PT is just another tool to help build the confidence and ability of the prospective officer."

Added to this, 1st Lt. Frank Gearing said, "The first four weeks are designed to generate additional stress on the candidates while the subsequent weeks are to maintain the candidates' physical fitness."

Physically fit indeed! 90 percent of the recent OCS graduating class (BIOCC 1-80) completed the five mile run in under forty minutes, ten minutes below the USAIS goal. The APFT scores were also good, with all candidates scoring over 400 points and a company average of 462. The final APFT saw four students scoring 500 points. The Retired Officers Association provided a trophy to 2nd Lt. John Ashford, winner of the class PT award, based upon all APFT scores taken throughout the course.

How does OCS compare with other units on post? In the Valentine Fun Run held recently, OCS candidates finished first in the five mile platoon run in thirty-one minutes and eight seconds.

Engineers break NBC record

PFC Gregory Brown (L) and Pvt. 2 Johnnie Johnson rinse the contamination off a vehicle used during the NBC test.

HHC, 36th Engineer Group (Combat) recently broke the post Nuclear, Biological and Chemical (NBC) defense team record with an average score of 96 percent.

The old post record was 95 percent. Units from the 43rd Engineer Battalion, "Bravo," "Charlie," and "Delta" previously held the old post record with a score of 95 percent.

HHC NBC Team was comprised of five seperate teams: a decontamination team, survey team, monitor team, chemical detection team and a control party. SSgt. Robert C. Dickerson, 36th Engineer Group chemical staff NCO, said their performance was "great." Dickerson also touched on the point of command emphasis in training of young soldiers and its importance in chemical safety. "Command emphasis is the key to any type of success," said Dickerson. "Anything can be accomplished with a strong backing from command."

The company commander, Capt. Charles P. Gates, was with them throughout the testing. A four-day pass was awarded to the members of the NBC defense team by Col. Charles L. Shreves, 36th Engineer Group commander, for beating the post record.

Former POW relives story

By Becky Bulgrin

The bowl of barley soup sits on the table looking very inviting to the man in front of it. He is extremely hungry. As he begins to take his first bite, he notices the worm-like creatures floating around and his stomach turns. At the same time his hands begin pushing the soup away, four more hands grab for the same bowl. The others are also extremely hungry and could care less that the soup is infested with larvae.

That is just one of the many scenes that took place while retired Air Force Lt. Col. Rex Ellis, assistant operations officer, Lawson Army Airfield, was held captive by the Germans as a prisoner of war (POW) during World War II.

"The men got used to it (food), though," recalled Ellis while talking about the 14 and one half months he spent as a "guest of the Third Reich."

"I feel the Germans treated the POW's as well as they were capable of considering the conditions their country was under (being bombed),"commented Ellis."They provided us with one meal a day in addition to the Red Cross parcels we received once a week."

Besides the barley soup, the Germans provided pototoes and bread. "They must have rolled it (bread) on the floor," laughed Ellis. It contained pockets of sawdust and even had splinters in it."

The Red Cross parcels contained powdered milk, jelly, sugar, oleo and D-bars (concentrated chocolate which made the men sick if they consumed too much). Each man was also allotted five packs of cigarettes per week.

"Since I don't smoke, I bartered my share for food," recalled Ellis.

Shot down

Ellis was shot down over Berlin in March of 1944 in the midst of his 18th bombing mission. He was flying a B-17 as a member of the 100th Bomb Group and was scheduled to complete 25 missions.

"We were confined to a small area," remembers Ellis. There were 16 men to a room with double bunks. We had to endure extremely long and cold winter nights."

Since "no one could sleep that long" and the men were given only one hour of electricity each night, the made candles out of their GI belts using oleo as fuel. "We'd run the belt up through a can and it would work like the old kerosene lamps, then we could stay up and play cards," continued Ellis.

"The Red Cross helped by doing an outstanding job providing for us." He said they provided books and sports equipment for baseball, volleyball and horseshoes.

"They also provided us with one pair of pants, one shirt and two sets of underclothes. One extra pair of pants was provided per 16 men to be passed around while washing what clothes we had," he added.

Former POW Rex Ellis

After being under the watchful eye of the Germans, the prisoners were then controlled by the Russians for approximately two weeks before being released, according to Ellis.

"We woke up one morning and there were no guards," exclaimed the former POW. "We organized patrols and scouted around for any military equipment to make up a so-called 'Third Force'. We were free for about three dys until we were encountered by the Russians and put back in the compound. The Russians found out we were POW's and continued to treat us as prisoners until arrangements were made with the United States for our release."

The prisoners' long-awaited release finally came on Mother's Day, 1945 when the prisoners were "stacked in B-17s like cordwood" and flown to France.

"We were put in a rehabilitation center for 30 days. It was run by the U.S. Army and the Red Cross. They put us on supervised diets because of the low rations we received while captive," related Ellis.

The men were then returned to the States by boat and given a 60-day covalescent leave before being sent to reassignment centers to get back into their occupation specialty.

"It had been so long since we'd flown that we were given primary and advanced training to prepare us for assignment to tactical units for the continuation of the war," recalled Ellis.

However, the war was over before the men finished training.

And now, Fort Benning is like an old home to Ellis. A native of Kansas, Ellis first came to Fort Benning in July 1946 after World War II. He was assigned to the 75th Troop Carrier Squadron flying C-46 and C-47s for the basic airborne.

"I did much like what is done here today with the C-141s and the airborne," said Ellis.

He was also assigned as Public Information Officer (PIO) at the old Lawson Field Headquarters which is now the Pathfinders building.

Ellis then served in the Korean War from 1950-53 flying B-29s. He then flew B-47s for ten years as a member of the Strategic Air Command.

Ellis' career took a 'twist' before he retired from the Air Force after 24 years of service. "It was quite a different experience hunting hurricanes as we flew WB-47s over the North Atlantic during the last three years before my retirement," recalled Ellis.

Back to Benning

After retiring April 1, 1966, Ellis came back to Fort Benning the following December and has been here ever since.

He worked as a civilian pilot for the U.S. Army Infantry Board and as PIO for the Army Marksmanship Unit before starting his present job in the summer of 1975.

"I'm responsible for managing the airfield for the Aviation Division," said Ellis.

Ellis has 12,000 hours of flying time under his belt, most of which are in multi-engine aircraft.

A big part of Ellis' life involves doing volunteer work at the Steam Mill Road Presbyterian Church where he teaches Sunday School. He also has a hobby of repairing sewing machines in his spare time.

Ellis and his wife June currently reside in Columbus. They have five sons ranging in age from 21-32.

Being a prisoner of war would be an ordeal that would make anyone's hair stand on end. Luckily, Rex Ellis lived to tell his story.

Workshop studies safety

By Bill Powell

Improved safety was the theme when the Tradoc/Forscom Safety Workshop was held at Fort Benning earlier this week.

Participants from seventy-five installation safety offices, some from as far away as Alaska and Panama, assembled here Tuesday for a two-day conference to discuss safety and exchange ideas on how safety could be improved at their own installations.

The conference started with an address by Post Commander Maj. Gen. David E. Grange. The post commander talked about safety and its effect on mission accomplishment. "The potential magnitude of safety's contribution to the accomplishment of the commander's mission is staggering when we realize that the same errors and defects that produce hazards also adversely affect morale, productivity and the overall efficiency of the entire organization," he said.

When asked about the purpose of the workshop, Army Director of Safety Dr. Francis McGlade said, "We're always in the market for new ideas and that essentially is why we're here." He added, "It is important to do things a little better and to be more cost effective in this age of austerity in money and personnel."

Of course, in a conference on safety the big question is, "What is the major cause of accidents?" and Post Safety Director Bennie Padgett best summed up all the answers when he said, "Human error causes ninety-seven percent of all accidents. If we could indoctrinate the average individual (to safety), we could save the government millions and millions of dollars annually."

Just how much money could be saved? Dr. McGlade estimated that if half the accidents that occurred each year were prevented, approximately fifty million dollars could be saved.

This workshop is one of the events leading up to a Department of the Army conference on safety which will be held in May.

In case of fire

Prepare family with emergency escape plan

A major concern of Fort Benning's fire inspector, James E. Floyd, is the record of fire deaths in private dwellings. Fires in private dwellings account for a majority of fire deaths in residential-type occupancies and a majority of deaths in building fires. In part, this poor record can be attributed to the large number of dwellings in the country.

Fatal residential fires show characteristics distinct from those of other types of residential fires. They mostly occur at night during hours of sleeping. Non-fatal residential fires peak during the afternoon hours when people are more likely to be active and less likely to be sleeping. Fatal residential fires usually start in the living areas where people usually are during the waking hours but where they may not be during sleeping hours such as family playrooms, kitchens, basements but not necessarily bedrooms. The majority of those fires originate when smoking materials ignite textiles, such as upholstery and clothing.

The victims usually do not sense the fire until it has gained some headway. Heat and smoke make escape difficult. Often, people can be overcome by smoke while trying to escape, or they may return to rescue someone or something. Lack of a practicable escape plan is also a hindrance.

BE SURE THAT YOU HAVE AN ESCAPE PLAN FOR YOUR FAMILY AND THEY ARE MADE AWARE OF IT.

Soldiers are taught the proper techniques in rappelling, to be used later in air assault training.

197th units return from j

Members of the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep.) and the units attached to them returned to Fort Benning last week after completing the Jungle Expert Course at the Jungle Operations Training Center at Fort Sherman, Panama.

The Jungle Expert Course is designed to teach soldiers the many skills needed to survive and fight in a jungle environment. In order to learn those skills the soldiers from the 3/7th were required to attend a wide variety of classes. These classes included jungle living, plants and foods, rappeling, mines and booby traps, waterborne operations, squad and platoon combat techniques and jungle navigation.

In the jungle living class the men were taught how to construct shelters from materials available in the jungle for protection against the jungle environment. Also, diseases common to the jungle and protection against them were covered along with tips on the prevention of heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

The classes showed the different types of wildlife found in Panama. Some of the animals studied were the cougar, the white face monkey, the tapir, the two and three toed slouth, the vampire bat, the boa constrictor and bushmaster snakes.

The class on plants and foods covered water sources, poisonous plants, water substitutes, edible plants and animals. At the end of the class everyone was given a chance to sample some of the foods they had just learned about. This included the opportunity to eat monkey meat.

Of the classes given the one which was enjoyed the most was the one on waterborne operations. The reason for this class's popularity was because it offered the students a chance to get in the water and receive some relief from the heat and humidity. The class taught the troops how to construct a rope bridge, how to make a poncho raft and how to load equipment in and crew a RB-15 rubber raft.

The three weeks of training were wound up by a five-day field training exercise. During this exercise the men of the 3/7th held simulated combat with units from the 3/7th Special Forces.

Support was provided to the 3/7th by elements of the following units; 197th Military Police platoon, 179th Military Intelligence Detachment, Company D, 197th Support Battalion, Company B, 197th Support Battalion, 72nd Engineer Battalion, 2/10th Field Artillery, 187th Pathfinder Detachment, Company B, 1/29th Rangers, and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Along with performing support for the Battalion most of the attachments also participated in the Jungle Expert Training.

When asked his opinion on the training he received, Sp4 Carl Maynor said, "The training was tough but good. I think each man who participated in the training can perform in a jungle environment 100 percent better than before."

Airborne team looks promising

By Tim Boivin

When someone has been doing something for a long time it is hard to make the necessary adjustments when even the slightest variation occurs from their accepted norm. This is how it was with me as I attempted to recapture the glory of my youth last Monday in a softball game for my team.

Being from Chicago, where they do everything different from the rest of the country, it made it hard for me to play 12 inch softball. In Chicago, they play 16 inch softball and catch with their hands. Here they play with a 12 inch ball and catch with their gloves.

The last time I used a glove was in the summer of 1972 when I led, if you can call it that, my Kiwanis Little League team to a last place 1-17 season. In our final game we were winning 17-5 with one inning to go when the roof caved in. We lost 18-17 after Rotary's final hitter hit a three R.B.I. pop-up to the first baseman. I was that first baseman.

Winning streak

The Airborne team on post doesn't have that problem. Last year they came in second place to a team from the 1/29th. This year they started right up where they left off by scoring two outlandish victories. Monday they defeated IOAC 2-80 by the score of 26-4. Airborne piled up two eight-run innings including one in which Kevin Beaudin, Dan Kieth and John Hester hit consecutive home runs. Beaudin ended up going four for four on the night.

After seeing that score I decided to go out and watch this team. Wednesday I trudged out with my camera and would have thought I was having a bad dream if I didn't have it down on film. When I left there was only one out in the top of the first inning, Airborne batting, and the score was 10-0. They ended up with a 13 first run inning and went on from there to shut out 2nd Battalion 20-0.

On their way

It seems as though the Airborne Department team is well on their way, even this early in the season, to another finish near the top of the post. Hopefully, my team won't have to play them. In the meantime, I'll just keep trying to recapture that dubious glory of my past youth, only this time out in left field. It's not such an embarrassment when you miss a pop-up out there that goes for three R.B.I.

Benning boxer suffers injury, 4 others want to form team

By Tim Boivin

A Fort Benning boxer will be going to the Eastern Regional Olympic Trials after coming in second in the Southeastern Regional Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) tournament.

Sean Pruitt, the son of Lt. Col. Ken Pruitt, suffered a cut under his eye and his fight with Larry Byrd of Miami was stopped as a result, under AAU rules. If a cut and the resulting bleeding can't be controlled, the fight is stopped and the other fighter is awarded a technical knockout (TKO).

Georgia chose four fighters from among those who did not make it through the AAU or Golden Gloves to go to the Eastern OLympic Trials and Pruitt was one of them.

Pruitt suffered his cut in the first round as a result of a head butt by Byrd. Because his injury was a result of a head butt Pruitt's ranking of tenth among amateurs is not in jeopardy.

Another Columbus boxer and a former service member, Darrish (Sweet Pea) Brummage, advanced to the semifinals before losing a decision 4-1 to Kevin Seagrave of Miami. The last Columbus boxer, Donnie Belflour, was stopped in the semifinal in the second round by Terry Kemp of Fort Gordon.

Pruitt opened up in the tournament against Lonnie Rogers of South Carolina and he knocked him out in the second round. He then fought Greg Young of Florida in the semifinals and also knocked him out in the second round.

In the Eastern Olympic trials all of the winners and runnerups will advance to the National Trials June 15 in Atlanta. The Eastern Olympic trials will be held May 20-24 in Greensboro, N.C. Fighters will be coming to box form everywhere in the United States east of the Mississippi River.

Updating the boxing news here on post, four boxers have contacted The BAYONET's sports editor about forming a team. They were referred to Mr. Will Dunnum at the Physical Activities Branch here. For any other boxers who are interested contact Dunnum at 545-2332.

Of the four boxers, one coached for nine years at Fort Rucker and another fought as a semi-pro and also held a Michigan Trainer's license. These two, coupled with Lt. Col. Pruitt's skills as a coach, should provide a good nucleus of management for Fort Benning's boxing team.

Then maybe Fort Benning can compete on the same level as Fort Gordon. Fort Gordon sent five fighters into the finals in Miami and one, 112 pounder Raymond Cruz, won by a knockout.

The 1980 Fort Benning Men's and Women's Slow Pitch Softball Leagues are presently being formed under the supervision of the Physical Activities Branch of the Morale Support Activities Division.

Fort Benning league competition will include teams from major commands, military women's teams and active duty military dependent women's teams. The minimum age for dependent women is 18 years old.

Fluids

(AP)—When you exercise you sweat, and that means you need to increase your fluid intake to replace the fluids you have lost through sweating.

In "The Complete Diet Guide for Runners" David Costill says water is perhaps the most important fluid to consider. Costill is director of the Human Performance Laboratory in Muncie, Ind.

He says tests have shown that water is absorbed by the body much faster than fluid with sugar content, such as soft drinks. Some specially prepared athletic drinks contain a small amount of sugar. Costill says these can be absorbed into the bloodstream at a rate almost as rapid as water. At the same time, they deliver as much sugar to the liver as a strong sugar drink that remains in the stomach for longer periods. Costill concluded from his tests that they are a better choice than soft drinks.

Costill also says none of the tests conducted by his organization found any connection between drinking cold fluids and stomach cramps. He says it's more likely that reports of such problems are due to the amount of fluid a person drinks rather than to how cold it is. He also says there's no apparent evidence that drinking cold fluids can cause heart problems.

Soccer season ends

The Fort Benning Dependent Youth Activities Soccer leagues wound up their regular season last weekend.

The Junior Division completed regular season play with a flurry of activity. On April 16 the previously unbeaten Sounders fell to second place in a hard fought battle with the fourth place Blazers. Jeff Christiansen slipped in to score the game's only goal for the Blazers.

It,s a bird, it's a plane, no. . .it's a soccer ball. Dependent youths wait for proof of the old axiom that what goes up must come down in a recent game.

The fifth place Bobcats jumped into the winner's column on the strength of two goals each by Clay Van Meter and Karl Mueller and one each by Jody McWaters, Karl Mueller and Kyle Abbott. The final score was 6-4 over the sixth place Cosmos.

On Saturday the luckless Sounders slumped again with a loss to the first place Panthers. The Panthers scored on two penalty kicks on their way to a 4-1 victory.

In a valiant effort the Cosmos lost to third place Red Devils 5-1.

In the Intermediate Division the Demons finished the regular season with a perfect 5-0 season record by defeating the Blue Knights 9-2. Darrin Tucker led the Demon scorers with six goals. Eddie Sprague, Eric Entlich and Chris Bradford also scored. Ray Bradshaw scored the Blue Knights' two goals.

The Blue Knights earlier had earned their first win of the season by defeating the Chiefs 3-1. Ray Bradshaw scored two goals and Richard Montalvo added another for the Blue Knights.

The Cosmos nailed down second place by grabbing two wins. First they edged the Blazers 1-0 on a goal by J. M. Butler and then downed the Razorbacks 3-2. Darryl Grogan scored twice in the second game on penalty kicks.

The Blazers lost a close game to the Cosmos 1-0 and then came back Saturday to tie the Cosmos 3-3. The Blazers' three goals were scored by Pat Riccinto and the Chiefs' three goals were scored by Kevin McKay.

Hunter safety course set

(AP) — Archery deer season in Georgia has been tentatively set to run from Sept. 20 through Oct. 24, with the gun deer season to start Oct. 25 and wind up Jan. 3.

The dates and other hunting regulations will be the subject of nine public hearings to be held throughout the state April 28 through May 8. A public hearing will be held in Columbus May 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the Elizabeth Bradley Building of the Turner Center Auditorium at Columbus College.

The Game and Fish Division is stressing again this year that young hunters must pass a hunter safety course before they can buy a hunting license. Everyone over age 12, born after Jan. 1, 1961, will have to pass the course before he or she can buy any license to hunt.

Honorary deer tags, available to those who are under age 16, will not be given to anyone who has not passed the course. Conservation rangers, who have been worried about the number of hunting accidents, will be checking hunter safety certificates as well as hunting licenses this fall.

Rangers advise young hunters to take the six-hour safety course in the early part of the summer — when there is room in the classes.

To enroll in the hunter safety course, contact the nearest Game and Fish office, the Department of Natural Resouces or a local conservation ranger.

Making Tracks

By Tom Breeding

Dothan dynamite

That's what the Columbus Track Club produced this past Saturday in Alabama. CTC won both the women's and men's team titles, with 13-year-old Tanya Jenerette roaring to a 41:48 10K win.

The Women's Division winner also copped the award for the youngest female runner as she led the rest of the team to victory. Connie Cullifer, ever improving, bested her previous personal record by four minutes to take second in her age group, fourth overall, with an impressive 43:57. Barbara Flournoy got first in her age group and fifth overall with a 44:10. Patty Pfeiffer posted a 45:28 for sixth place, and Marilyn Hicks came in third AG and eighth overall with a 47:29 to round out the CTC top five that took home the team gold. (But let's not forget Sue Emmerson, aka Faith School Flash, and all the others who were there and ran for it, only to have that fleeting glory elude them. Yeah, don't forget.)

While the men might not look quite as impressive as the women on paper, they were just as effective where it counts; they won. Leonard Horning squeaked past teammate George Gilkes to take fifth place by a second, running a 33:19. CTC consistency continued uninterrupted with Robert McDuffie's 33:30 seventh place. CTC prez, that tireless retiree Dave Fields, sailed in on Bob's heels with a 33:38 eighth place. Jerry McCrumb's twelfth place 35:30 completed the winning team's top five, but Robert Wilson and Bernie Pfeiffer weren't too far off the pace either.

The Columbus Track Club and Fort Benning can be proud of the great showing our fine athletes gave on the 19th. I hope more of you will be inspired by their example and get out there and plug away. Perhaps you'll never be a part of the gold medalists' circle, but better to be a has-been or a would-be than to be a never-were.

Exercises can help running

By Skip Dayton

As a form of exercise running is not complete in itself. In addition to running, specific exercises for the trunk and legs are important to the experienced and novice runner.

The experienced runner is motivated to keep in shape, to run quality miles and to compete. The novice runner exercises to build a base from which to progress. Runners can enjoy the experience of running by remaining free of injury through exercising.

Many runners emphasize stretching exercises in warm up and cool down periods of their activity. Often exercises that increase muscle strength are not a part of the runner's program. Bot types of exercise are necessary. The runner needs to be strong as well as supple.

Running can create muscle strength imbalances that can lead to injury. Painful conditions involving joints, muscles and other soft tissues are commonly seen both in the experienced runner, who, for example, begins to run faster or farther without proper conditioning, as well as in the novice runner who may attempt to do too much too soon.

It is important to realize that as part of a runner's training program strengthening exercises are as essential as stretching exercises. A weak muscle is as prone to injury as a tight muscle and also contributes to instability around the joints making them vulnerable to injury.

Running on flat terrain only is especially conducive to the development of strength imbalances about the knees and ankles. The runner who sticks with the flat courses may strengthen the muscle on the back of the hip, thigh and leg, but running a course without hills does little to strengthen muscles up front that straighten the knee and lift the foot or those muscles on the sides of the leg that contribute strength and stability to the ankle and foot.

Serious and novice runners should run hills as part of their training program to benefit strength development. Running hills improves a runners performance. Strengthening exercises along with hill running will enhance any runner's ability.

The following exercise program may help to correct or prevent muscle strength imbalances and contribute to safer, more comfortable running. The program is basic, not all inclusive; it will get you started without taking much of your time. Try the exercises in front of the TV as you watch the news.

Try to build up to at least thirty repetitions of each exercise, perhaps in sets of 10 with a short rest between sets. Progress with the resistance applied to the motion being performed.

Remember that if a muscle is to become stronger, it must be made to work hard. To guide you with the amount of resistance applied, consider that the weight used allows you to complete the thirty repetitions with increasing difficulty. when thirty repetitions of an exercise are performed easily, add a pound or two more weight the next time you exercise.

1. Situps. Situps should be performed with the hips and knees bent by bringing the chin to the chest and curling the spine. Situps should be performed slowly, emphasizing the "curl action" with a controlled return to the starting position. It is not cheating to have someone hold the feet. Hands behind the head as the trunk is curled toward the knees is hardest. The exercise may be made easier by keeping the arms folded across the chest, and even more easy with the arms at the sides. Work toward performing all repetitions with the hands behind the head!

2. Quadriceps exercise (muscle that straighten the knee). Straight leg raising with weights applied to your ankle is an effective way to strengthen the quadriceps muscles on the front of your thighs. Lying on your back or half sitting, taking the weight of your body on bent elbows, tighten the quadriceps muscles and lift the leg off the floor about six inches. Hold the leg in this raised position with weights attached to the ankle for seven seconds, then slowly lower the leg keeping the knee straight and rest for seven seconds. The key to this exercise is being able to perform the exercise thirty repetitions against a maximum resistance that allows you to maintain a straight knee while raising and lowering the leg.

3. Ankle exercises. Ankle resistance is easily applied using a loop of rubber tubing attached to a stable object at one end, the other end of the loop being placed over the foot while wearing a running shoe. There are three essential exercises:

a. Sit on the floor. Loop the tubing over the front of the foot just below the toes. Keeping the knee straight and flat on the floor, back away from the tubing so that it builds tension, applying resistance to your foot. Pull the foot slowly and repeatedly toward your shin as far as you can each time. The amount of resistance offered depends on the tension you place on the tubing.

b. Sit on the floor. Loop the tubing over the inside of your foot just below the big toe. Apply tension by positioning your body away from the rubber tubing. Point your foot down slightly and keeping the knee straight and flat on the floor pull the foot in toward your other leg. Do not let the hip roll in. Pull from your ankle. Muscles on the inside of your leg below the knee will tire as you exercise.

c. Sit on the floor. Loop the tubing over the outside of your foot just below the little toe. Apply tension on the tubing and with the foot pointed down slightly, the leg position as in the exercise above, pull the foot out to the side. Do not let the hip roll out. Pull from your ankle. Muscles on the outside of your leg below the knee will tire as you exercise. As with the other exercise, do this one thirty or more times against as much resistance as you can tolerate. Resistance should not be so great that you cannot perform the exercise correctly.

AUTOVON, Army's 'Ma Bell'

By Becky Bulgrin

Does the term 'AUTOVON' ring a bell? If not, it should. Soldiers have been ringing AUTOVON bells all around the world for quite some time now. Telephone bells, that is.

The Automatic Voice Network (AUTOVON) is the Department of Defense counterpart to the Bell Telephone System, and provides direct dial capabilities throughout worldwide DOD activities, according to Lt. Col. Edward Lee Jr., Directorate of Communications and Electronics at Fort Benning.

The AUTOVON system was started by the Defense Communications Agency (DCA) in 1963 to satisfy a need for direct voice communications between DOD activities. The system has greatly expanded since 1963, however, its growth fails to keep up with the ever-increasing demands.

The CONUS system consists of both government owned and leased lines, trunking circuits and switching centers, capable of intercommunication with overseas AUTOVON facilities.

Locally, Fort Benning's access to AUTOVON service is through the Rockdale Switch, Rockdale, Ga. Of the 44 main AUTOVON lines provided Fort Benning, 19 are for incoming calls only, while the remaining 25 lines are available for both incoming and outgoing calls. A total of 864 telephones, plus extensions, at Fort Benning have AUTOVON access, however, each must compete with the others for an available line, within the 25 line group, when making a call. Fort Benning is only one subscriber to the AUTOVON system via the Rockdale Switch and calls originated here must further compete for an available circuit within that switch, with other subscribers, such as Fort McPherson and Fort Gillam.

The AUTOVON system is for official Department of Defense use only, not for personal or other non-official calls.

While federal law prohibits the monitoring of telephone calls to detect abuse of the "for official use only" rule, Lee said other methods are available for this purpose and his staff periodically advises commanders at various levels when evidence indicates abuses within their respective command.

Lee also provided the following suggestions and comments concerning AUTOVON use:

- Busy periods: 8:45-11:15 a.m. and 1-2:45 p.m. daily.
- Use other than the above time, if possible.
- Limit calls to the minimum time required for conduct of official business.
- If you are in an organization which frequently calls the same overseas unit, accumulate information to accomplish several actions during a single call instead of placing a call for each action.
- Consider time zone difference prior to initiating a call.
- Remember—when you are participating in an AUTOVON call, you have reduced the number of lines available for use by others!

Phones: Army gets new system, completion expected in 5 years

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — "Hey, Sgt. Jones. Can you call me back? I can barely hear you." Anyone who's been stationed in Europe knows this problem.

Well, there's relief on the way. Soldiers in U.S. Army, Europe will soon see work being done on a new telephone network, DA officials announced recently.

A contract between DA and the West German Telecommunications Authority, the Deutsche Bundespost, was signed to upgrade and modernize the pre-World War II telephone network of U.S. forces stationed there.

The $125 million project includes the delivery and installation of a complete switching network as well as all needed engineering, documentation and training, according to the officials. Completion of the network is expected within five years.

The new system will use the U.S. forces' defense communication system in Europe along with leased lines from the Deutsche Bundespost. It will connect 80,000 subscribers and will also feature direct dial access to the public telephone network of the Deutsche Bundespost.

Sp4 Griselda M. Bonachea takes a throat culture from Pvt. Michael R. McBroom during her daily rounds at Martin Army Hospital's upper respiratory infections ward.

SOQ named

Sp4 Griselda M. Bonachea was named Post Soldier of the Quarter April 8. She is assigned to Medical Company, USAMEDDAC.

She competed against eight men and one other woman soldier from various major commands. They all had previously won their command's Soldier of the Month.

The 22-year-old Bonachea has been in the Army 23 months. She works in the Preventive Medicine Clinic as an environmental health technician.

She was born in Caibarien, Cuba but came to the United States with her parents when she was seven years old and lived in Miami, Fla.

The selection entitles her to compete for Soldier of the Year and earned her several awards including a $25 bond, mail opener, piggy bank, four-day pass and certificate of achievement.

Kyzer leaves 1/58th Infantry

In unique ceremonies at Kelley Hill, CSM Delgado P. Rosado succeeded CSM James D. Kyzer as command sergeant major of the 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry (Patriots). The ceremonies featured a NCO-led review and marching Patriots in colonial uniform.

197th Infantry Brigade CSM Freddie J. Weston, the reviewing officer, said, "This ceremony marks a great day for the NCO Corps and for the Army." MSG Leroy McSmith was commander of troops while Sp4 Michael Banks led the marching Patriots.

Honored guests were command sergeants major of all Fort Benning units.

Not only did the command sergeants major exchange colors, they are also exchanging battalions. Rosado comes to the Patriots from Germany and the 3rd Battalion, 64th Armor (Rampage). Kyzer is enroute to Germany and the Rampage battalion.

Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher, battalion commander, presented Meritorious Service Medals to both command sergeants major. Bouquets of red carnations were presented to Mrs. Kyzer and Mrs. Rosado.

Post NCO of Quarter selected

SSgt. James W. Wiehe was selected Post Non-Commissioned Officer of the Quarter April 15. He is assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. Wiehe competed against six other non-commissioned officers.

The selection is based on a point system by the five sergeants major that sit on the board. The solider is graded on his manner of reporting, military bearing, appearance, oral expression, self confidence, and his own efforts toward self improvement. The questions are basic soldiering subjects not related to any particular job specialty.

Wiehe received an 90-day exemption from the duty roster, a U. S. Army Infantry Center Letter of Achievement, a certificate and a watch from the local AUSA chapter, a three-day pass, a $50 savings bond, a bayonet letter opener, and lunch with the post sergeant major.

He has been a drill sergeant for two of his seven years in the Army. "When I first became a drill sergeant I was full of fire but I've calmed down now," he mentioned. "It's quite a learning experience."

He has been before four boards recently. "When I prepare for a board, I try to relax, read manuals and talk to people that have been before boards to get experience and know what to expect," he explained.

Soldier gets 3rd medal

First Lieutenant Charles J. Grebinger, tactical officer, 50th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The School Brigade, Fort Benning, was awarded the Bronze Star Medal, second Oakleaf Cluster, by Lt. Col. Johnnie W. Britton Jr. in a ceremony here on April 16.

Grebinger earned this award during July 1970 to July 1971 for his meritorious service while assigned as a sergeant to the Military Assistance Conmand Advisory Teams 95 and 98 in the Republic of Vietnam. His duties there included liaison NCO for American units to Vietnamese units, driver for the deputy for CHORDS (Civil Operations and Rural Development Support Military Region III) and in Binh Hoa Province Long Tanh District as the Regional Force/Popular Force advisor.

Grebinger had no knowledge of this award until his interview with DA MILPERCEN branch manager, Capt. Charles W. Hurd Jr. During this interview, he saw orders for the award on his microfiche. Hurd then arranged for the citation and medal to be sent to Grebinger.

Grebinger's other wards include: Bronze Star for Valor, ARCOM (one Oak Leaf Cluster), Purple Heart (one Oak Leaf Cluster), GCM (one Oak Leaf Cluster), Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal with seven campaign stars, NDSM, CIB, EIB, Vietnam Civic Actions Award, Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm and Meritorious Unit Citation.

First Lieutenant Charles J. Grebinger receives the Bronze Star Medal from Lt. Col. Johnnie W. Britton Jr.

Army changes jacket policy

Forget what you know about field jackets. Beginning Oct. 1 the Army's policy will change and new soldiers will be issued two field jackets when they enter the reception station instead of one.

The familiar green jackets will also become an item of personal clothing and will be noted as such on the soldier's personal clothing record.

Soldiers who entered the Army before the new policy goes into effect are also in for some changes. Here's what to expect:

- All enlisted soldiers must have at least one field jacket on Sept. 30, 1980 issued at the expense of the Army. If he/she does not have at least one field jacket, then an issue of one must be made before March 31, 1981 at government expense.
- If the soldier has only one field jacket and it is unserviceable, he/she may exchange it. Exchanges must be made not later than Sept. 30, 1980. The issue of this coat will then be recorded on the soldier's personal clothing or organizational clothing record, depending on the soldier's length of service.
- The unit commander must determine if each of his soldiers has been issued a field jacket. The commander is also responsible for making sure that anyone who has not already been issued a field jacket receives one. This is done by having the soldier record a statement on his organizational clothing record stating he has not been issued a field jacket. This form is presented at the CIF and the soldier will be issued a jacket.
- The soldier already issued two field jackets may keep both coats but he cannot exchange either one, regardless of their condition.
- Officers issued a field jacket from the CIF have the option of purchasing that coat at 50 percent of the cost of a new coat or retaining the one they have until they make a PCS move. If the officer decides to keep the coat without buying it, then it remains on his organizational clothing record and is turned in when clearing CIF.

After Oct. 1, 1980 the field jacket will be a personal clothing item and must be laundered or dry-cleaned at the soldier's own expense.

Emergency telephone numbers change here

Due to a recent organizational change, the telephone numbers for emergency ambulance service here have been changed.

Ambulances are now dispatched from Martin Army Hospital's emergency room rather than from the fire station. The new number for emergency ambulance requests is 544-3911. All calls will be subject to recording for accuracy purposes only.

If you don't live on post, the number to dial for emergency ambulance requests in Columbus is 322-5454 and in Phenix City, Ala. it's 911.

NBC training improves here

By Dave Bristow

The first nuclear, biological and chemical (NBC) training building in CONUS able to accommodate the soldier, his vehicle and all his equipment in a chemical environment is now operational here.

The installation facility located on Aparri Range will enable soldiers to accomplish realistic NBC training wearing protective masks and NBC outfits as they perform their normal work routines.

Previously there was no place other than in a field situation where soldiers could work with their equipment in a chemical environment.

Maj. James Morris, USAIC chemical officer, was there when the first soldiers worked in the new facility (members of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry) and he commented on the unique training the soldiers were receiving. "Troops here, for the first time, will be able to perform maintenance, TOW and mortar crew drills, and other basic soldier skills while in an actual contaminated environment. They will be able to train with all their equipment while in protective clothing. The German army has been doing this for some time now, but this is the first operational facility used by U.S. forces in CONUS. The facility will be operated by the NBC branch and all units on post will be able to take advantage of this important training."

Training in a chemical environment with NBC clothing on is not an easy task to perform. SSgt. Ernest Potts, NBC NCO for the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, commented on the facility after training in the building, "after working with my equipment in the building I was soaking wet," he explained. "It must be something like 120 degrees in there with the suit on. You can't see well with the protective mask, so everything you do is really slowed down."

The new NBC facility is expected to greatly enhance Fort Benning's NBC program and give both the combat soldier and the support soldier the feeling of what working under contaminated conditions is really like.

The soldiers were some of the first individuals to work on a vehicle while in a chemical environment at Benning's NBC training building. The facility is the first in the country to accommodate the soldier, his vehicle and all equipment for realistic NBC training. The facility opened Aug. 28.

Hispanics celebrate

Hispanic Americans can trace their language, customs and cultural to their heritage of Spain which was one of the earliest centers of human development in prehistoric times.

Catholic Spain brought to America a zeal for spreading the "true faith" to all parts of the world. Religious orders, including the Society for Jesus, Franciscans and Dominicans, firmly established the Catholic faith in Latin America.

During its Golden Age, Spain became a leader in education and culture. Social customs were very formal and ceremonial. The rich culture of Spain profoundly influenced and dominated the New World culture for centuries.

More Hispanic Americans are now living in larger cities which brings more opportunities to them. As a result, family and neighborhood ties and the authority of community leaders have been weakened.

Hispanic Americans are also beginning to hold professional and white-collar jobs because most of them are bilingual.

Spanish, English and Indian (from which English has borrowed many words--for example, chocolate, bronco and mosquitos. Many Hispanic Americans speak pure Spanish--a trend likely to continue as more and more people take pride in their ethnic origin.

Hispanic Americans are many peoples, Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans, Cuban Americans, Panamenians...with their own histories, beliefs, lifestyle, cultures. All Americans should respect their differences...and honor their contributions to our culture and nation.

Hispanics have been major contributors to our Nation's defense in every major war that our country has been involved in, as well as during peace time operations.

They have contributed both as soldiers in the many branches of our military force, and as civilians employed by the military. In both of these areas they have served loyally, honorably, and with distinction.

This week has been dedicated to the recognition of Hispanics as a vital asset to our nation. In this regard "The BAYONET" wishes to focus its attention on some of the contributions that Hispanics have made toward our defense as well as to the accomplishment of our local mission.

Celebracion Hispano-Americano

Los Hispanos Americanos deben sus costumbres, lenguaje y cultura a Espana y quien fuera el centro de la cultura en la era prehistorica y creadora de nuestra raza actual. Los catolicos de Espana trajeron a nuestra America la religion catolica y ademas otras sectas religiosas tales como los Padres Jesuitas, los Dominicos y Franciscanos los cuales han establecido la creencia catolica en la America. Durante la "era de oro" fue la ganadora de la educacion y la cultura la cual ha dominado en el Nuevo Mundo por siglos

Actualmente los Hispanos Americanos han notado cambios en sistema de vida, como por ejemplo; muchos de ellos viven en grandes ciudades y en las cuales existen mas oportunidades de empleos y condiciones de vida, al igual que los empleos de oficinas. Muchos de nuestros latinos americanos son bilingues. El espanol prominente de Espana ha ayudado en grande a la creacion de palabras tales como chocolate, bronco y mosquito. Existen tambien en la actualidad muchos latinos americanos que solamente hablan espanol.

Los Hispanos Americanos son muchas personas; Mejicanos Americanos, Puertorriquenos, Cubanos Americanos, Panamenos.....con sus propias historias, creencias, sistema de vida, cultura...Todos los Americanos deben de respetar las diferencias de los hispanos americanos...y honrrar su contribucion a la nacion americana y a sus culturas.

Hispanic Heritage Week Sept. 7-13

Fort Benning will be celebrating Hispanic Heritage Week Sept. 7-13. The theme of this year's celebration is "Hispanics in America's Defense."

The Hispanic Americans possess a rich culture. This culture is part of their Spanish origin and is an integral part of the American heritage. Hispanic soldiers have long been great contributors to the defense and growth of our great Nation: as soldiers, they have distinguished themselves on the battlefields; as citizens, men and women of Hispanic heritage have been instrumental in the attainment of our economic, social, and democratic goals.

So that we might become more aware of the contributions that Hispanic Americans have made to our Country, to our defense, and to Fort Benning, I do hereby proclaim the Week of Sept. 7-13 as Hispanic Heritage Week, and I urge all of our soldiers, their dependents, and civilians to observe and participate in the week's events.

Soldiers help public

Remember back when you were a kid and your eighth grade class took a field trip? If you can remember back that far, you probably still recall details of where you went that day and what your impressions were.

For many local students, Fort Benning is the site of their field trip and they'll remember it, hopefully in a positive way, for many years to come. It is the job of the community relations section of the Public Affairs Office here to see that not only students, but all of the many visitors to Fort Benning, get a first-rate tour of the reservation and leave with a good impression of what today's Army is all about.

Benning's community relations program involves much more than conducting tours, however. The best way to get the Army's message across is by allowing the public to see the Army and its leaders first-hand and this is done in a variety of ways.

The three-man community relations team, consisting of 1st Lt. Erling Frazier and SFCs Carl Crump and Forrest Picknell, handles and coordinates everything from a "stable" of military speakers to answering about 1,000 requests a year for general information or requests for patches or photos.

Installation tours and visits range from a day-long field trip from community schools to three-day educator tours sponsored by District Recruiting Commands from as far away as New York or Texas. Tours usually include the Airborne "5000" demonstration, Ranger in Action demonstration, static displays of equipment, lunch in one of the dining facilities and visits to the Infantry Museum.

Crump explained another aspect of the program that involves soldiers from different units on post visiting area schools to explain their particular job and their role in the Army and answer students' questions. "This type of eye-to-eye contact with the high school students, in their own environment, provides some of the best feedback in our program," he noted.

The speakers bureau consists of military personnel and DA civilians who appear primarily before civilian groups to talk about their particular area of expertise. Unlike other forms of Army support or participation, the speakers may be authorized to appear at religious or fraternal organizations or at meetings sponsored by business, professional and veterans organizations.

The community relations program here is even involved in projects such as opening post recreation facilities to underprivileged or handicapped persons.

No matter how large or small the request may be, if it involves interface between the military and civilian communities, the community relations team is called in to ensure everything runs smoothly. The job is not without rewards, however, such as the letter from a fifth grade student thanking the team for letting him eat in the mess hall, "...because my mom is a lousy cook."

Some quarters inspected today

Despite much emphasis by the chain of command, some quarters occupants in the Custer Terrace and McGraw Mannor areas have failed to comply with the regulation on quarters maintenance and appearance.

This has resulted in grass not being cut, shrubbery not being trimmed, and garbage strewn about. According to Col. Richard McKee, Deputy Post Commander, this lack of concern by some occupants is not fair to those who comply and won't be condoned.

To meet the standard, grass must be cut weekly, garbage cans placed out for pick-up at the appropriate time and brought back in when emptied, trash policed, and shrubbery trimmed as required.

The Commanding General has directed that the occupants of the government quarters in both the Custer Terrace and McGraw Mannor housing areasbe brought into compliance with the post standards not later than 1 p.m. Friday, Sept. 5. Quarters will be inspected at that time.

The sponsor of those quarters failing the Friday inspection will be required to bring their Company Commander and Battalion Commander to meet with the Commanding General at 7:30 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 6. Those failing inspection will be notified by a letter attached to the front door of the quarters. Attendance will be mandatory.

Failure to meet post standards for maintenance of quarters, or failure to attend the Saturday morning meeting required, may result in disciplinary action and/or termination of the privilege of occupying Government quarters.

Hispanics serve with honor

The true test of a soldier, it has been said, is on the battlefield. This is where all the training, discipline and skills are put to use toward the accomplishment of the mission; the reaching of the objectives.

Throughout the various wars in which we as a nation have participated, the Hispanic soldier has served gallantly and with honor. The Hispanics' involvement in our national defense dates back to the early 1800s, during the battle of the Alamo.

During the Civil War two Medal of Honor winners were Hispanics: Seaman Ortega, of the U.S. Ship Saratoga, and ordinary Seaman Bazaar, of the U.S. Ship Santiago De Cuba. Since those days, many more Hispanics have contributed to our national defense and have earned the Medal of Honor. These are just a few of them:

1st Lt. Baldomero Lopez, born in Tampa, Fla., earned his award while serving with the 1st Marine Division during the Inchon invasion in Korea in September 1950. Lopez and his platoon were engaged in the reduction of immediate enemy beach defenses after landing with the assault waves. During the course of the attack, Lopez sacrificed himself by cradling a hand grenade and receiving its full impact, thereby sparing the lives of many of his men.

Sgt. Joseph C. Rodriguez, born in San Bernadino, Calif., earned his award while serving with the 17th Infantry regiment near Munye-ri, Korea, in May 1951. Under heavy fire, Rodriguez wiped out five enemy automatic fire emplacements that had halted the friendly attack. He moved from one pillbox to the other which were covering the front and both flanks, dropping hand grenades in them. Rodriguez's actions exacted a toll of 15 enemy dead, broke the opposition's defense, and the strategic strong point was secured.

Cpl. Rodolfo P. Hernandez, born in Colton, Calif., earned his award while serving with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team (RCT) near Wontong-ni, Korea, in May 1951. While his platoon was in a defensive position on Hill 420, it came under ruthless attack by a numerically superior and fanatical hostile force, accompanied by heavy artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire which inflicted numerous casaulties on the platoon. His comrades were forced to withdraw but Hernandez, although wounded, continued to deliver deadly fire into the ranks of the onrushing enemy until his rifle jammed. He then left his position and engaged the enemy in hand-to-hand combat with his rifle and bayonet, killing six of the enemy before falling unconscious from his wounds. Hernandez's heroic action momentarily halted the enemy advance and enabled his unit to counterattack and retake the lost ground.

Sgt. Jose M. Lopez, born in Mission, Texas, earned the Medal of Honor while serving with the 2nd Infantry Division in Belgium, December 1944. He prevented his unit, Company K, 23rd Infantry, from being enveloped and destroyed by covering their retreat with the use of a heavy machine gun which he moved to different positions to cover both flanks. Under heavy enemy fire from enemy tanks and infantry he prevented the enemy's advance. When his ammunition was exhausted he had killed at least 100 of the enemy and his unit had withdrawn successfully.

Armed Forces Voter's Week

On Nov. 4 Americans will go to the polls to elect the President of the United States, State and Federal officials of their choice. The Army has more than one million potential voters among soldiers and their dependents who will be eligible to cast ballots in this year's election.

The week of Sept. 8-14 has been designated as Armed Forces Voters Week. I will kick off the week with a rally in Marshall Auditorium on Sept. 5 at 10 a.m. Major command commanders, USAIC staff and USAIS directors, battalion and company level commanders, and all unit voting assistance officers are invited to attend.

The 1980 Army Voting Assistance Program ensures that every opportunity is made available for those who wish to exercise their privileges. Commanders are encouraged to plan programs that will stimulate those who have never voted and to remind others who have voted in the past to vote in the 1980 elections. Armed Forces Voters Week is an excellent time to plan activities that will assist soldiers and their dependents in the preparation of the Federal Post Card Application, which is now used to both register and request a ballot.

Join with me in encouraging all eligible voters in your units, staff sections, and activities to cast their ballots for the candidates of their choice.

Grave site of history

John O'Quin and his wife, Rhoda, are buried in a small, well-shaded cemetery located off Red Diamond Road in the northeast section of the Fort Benning reservation.

O'Quin was a soldier — an infantry soldier.

There is one significant distinction between O'Quin's grave and those of hundreds of other infantrymen who are buried in the numerous old cemeteries on the post. His is the only documented burial site containing the remains of a Revolutionary War soldier.

O'Quin, as a private in the infantry, fought with Army units from North Carolina in four engagements against the British. His last battle was at Stono, near Savannah, Ga., of which he said, "we left a good many men there."

Fort Benning's chapter in the O'Quin story began to unfold early in 1976, the United States' Bicentennial year.

James O'Quinn (the family surname gained another n at some point) of Griffin, Ga., wrote to the post Information Officer (now Public Affairs Officer) regarding one of his ancestors, John O'Quin, a Revolutionary War soldier. He said John O'Quin was buried on Fort Benning and provided the approximate location of the gravesite.

The O'Quin cemetery was listed with the Buildings and Grounds Division, Directorate of Facilities Engineering, but that he had served during the Revolution was not known.

Pursuing the matter further, the Information Office contacted the National Archives in Washington. O'Quin's status as a soldier during the Revolution was confirmed.

When this was verified, the 1st Advanced Individual Training Brigade (now the 1st Infantry Training Brigade) took over the cemetery as a Bicentennial project. New soldiers cleared and beautified an area around the cemetery. Other post agencies joined in the effort and soon a white picket fence replaced a strand of wire around the two graves, a metal marker donated by the Veterans Administration was put in place, and a short access road to the site had been built.

On July 2, 1976, the O'Quin cemetery became a part of Fort Benning's Bicentennial celebration. Approximately 50 O'Quin descendants from around the country joined others from this area in a ceremony at the gravesite. Most of the descendants were from Georgia, where John O'Quin elected to live and rear a family of nine children after being discharged from the Army.

Maj. Gen. Willard Latham, post commander at the time, and representatives of three local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution placed wreaths on the graves.

The ceremony was colorful and impressive, featuring the 283rd Army Band, a color guard, color bearers for the 50 state flags, an honor guard, a bugler for taps and a firing squad.

An American flag was presented to the senior O'Quin descendant who attended.

Another part of the O'Quin story came to light after an act of Congress drafted in June of 1832. The act provided for pensions for "Continental Line" soldiers, "state troops," "militia" and "volunteers" during the Revolutionary War.

National Archive records revealed that O'Quin applied for a pension in May of 1833 in Muscogee County, Ga.

O'Quin's statement during the hearing included the following:

"My first three tours in the militia under a draft was in Col. James Moore's Regiment under Gen. Ash in the state of North Carolina. I then volunteered and served in Col. Johnson's Regiment. We joined the militia at Sharlot Town, North Carolina,

THE PREVENTION OF ROBBERY IS EVERYONE'S BUSINESS

It is about 20 minutes past midnight, the evening after payday night. You have been down town, had a good time, a few drinks, but you're not drunk.

You check on the cost of a taxi ride back to post and decide the fare is too high. Beside, you are a soldier and used to walking. As a matter of fact, you just completed your 12-mile road march in full combat gear two days ago. From where you have had your good time back to your unit area is less than four miles. So the heck with the taxi, you decide to walk.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

About half way home, somewhere on Fort Benning Boulevard, a car with four other people in it, who appear to be fellow soldiers, but most likely are not, stop and offer you a ride. What should you do?

a. Say, "Thanks," and jump in.
b. Say nothing, and jump in.
c. Act meek and say yes.
d. Act bold and tough and jump in.
e. None of the above.

Many of our soldiers are faced with making smilar decisions, late at night, several nights each month. If you answered other than, "none of the above," you have just become a prime candidate for a victim of the crime of robbery.

At Fort Benning there were seven robberies during the month of July reported to military police. Most of the robberies took place after an individual accepted the offer of a ride from a stranger. A total of $700.00 was taken from the victims, and in two of the incidents, soldiers were beaten by the robbers.

To complete the story of the soldier above on Fort Benning Boulevard, a taxi would have cost him no more than $6.00. Accepting the ride could have cost him the remaining money in his pockets, his wallet, credit cards, ID cards, watch, rings, and anything else of value, Don't misinterpret what we are saying — we are not advetising for taxi companies — what we are saying, is plan ahead, especially after payday. What do we advocate?

- Never carry large sums of money.
- Never brag about or flash large sums of money.
- If walking at night, use the buddy system.
- Try to arrange for transportation back to your unit with a buddy that you know, preferably in advance.
- Never accept rides from strangers.
- Never hitchhike.
- Stay off dark streets by staying in well lighted areas.
- Know emergency numbers for police and use them (Fort Benning: 545-5222; Columbus: 322-7711).

A note of interest to the robber: Maximum punishment for conviction by a court-martial for robbery is — dishonorable discharge and confinement at hard labor not to exceed 10 years and total forfeiture of all pay and allowances. For a civilian, under the U.S. Code the maximum punishment is — 15 years confinement.

If you desire more information on this subject, call the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Section at 545-4164. Help us help you prevent robbery.

O'Quin

under Gen. Butler. I don't know what unit. We then marched through South Carolina and crossed the Savannah River and joined Gen. Lincoln in Georgia. We marched down the river in pursuit of the British, crossed the river and pursued them to Stono where we had an engagement and left a good many men. I was discharged a few days after the battle . . ."

But, O'Quin could produce no written documentation that he had served during the Revolution. He died on Jan. 6, 1836, still seeking his rightful reward for service to country.

During years following his death, efforts were continued to obtain the pension for Rhoda O'Quin and the perseverance finally paid off.

On March 16, 1850, a letter from William Collins, comptroller for the state of North Carolina, certified "that the name of John O'Quin appears on record in this office as having been paid the sum of forty-one pounds, sixteen shillings and one pence for military service as will appear in Book No. 28 (Bound) page 76. Also another payment of fifteen pounds. See Book A.M. No. 16 page 39 . . ."

Collins' letter paved the way for Mrs. O'Quin to belatedly receive the pension due her husband. Records show that "Rhoda O'Quin, widow of John O'Quin, who was a private in the Revolution, inscribed on the rolls at the rate of 70 dollars 00 cents per annum to commence on the 4th day of March, 1843. Certificate of Pension issued the 21st day of Sept '50 and sent to Wm. Howell Cobb, speaker (Georgia House of Representatives)."

According to the National Archives files, O'Quin's widow, Rhoda, "was allowed pension on her application executed April 11, 1850, at which time she was aged 80 years and resided near Lumpkin, Stewart County, Georgia."

Mrs. O'Quin died on March 2, 1852.

The Archives were also able to provide more information on O'Quin, using data "obtained from the papers on file in Revolutionary War pension claim, W.5449, based upon the military service of John O'Quin in that war."

The pension claim stated that "John O'Quin was born June 13, 1754 in Halifax County, North Carolina . . ."

The claim also contained the following data on O'Quin: "While a resident of Sampson County, North Carolina, John O'Quin enlisted and served three tours of three months each as a private in Col. James Moore's North Carolina Regiment: no dates for these tours are given; he then volunteered, date not given, served as a private in Col. Johnson's North Carolina regiment, was in the battle of Stono and was discharged a few days after the battle; the length of this tour was not stated by the soldier but he stated he received a discharge in the first three tours from Capt. Hardy Holmes and from the service when a volunteer from Capt. James Lenear. (Mrs. O'Quin's application for pension lists his last tour as one year.)

"After the Revolution, he lived in North Carolina, for ten or twelve years, then moved to South Carolina, and lived 20 years, the (sic) moved to Georgia."

Promotion points recomputation due

If you have documents in your possession that are worth promotion points and should be in your 201 personnel file, now is the time to get them there.

It's getting close to the time when the promotion points are recomputed. for all soldiers on the E-5 Promotion Standing List. The points for E-5 will be recomputed during the month of October 1980. Recomputation will be based on the soldiers' records as they appear on Sept. 30, 1980.

To complete the recomputation, commanders must award each eligible servicemember between 0-150 administrative points (awarded in lieu of an EERWA) on a DA Form 4187.Each unit PAC should screen the Promotion Standing List and submit to the Promotion Section a roster with the supporting DA Forms 4187 attached. Each individual must have a separate DA Form 4187.

It is requested that all personnel, grade E-4 on the Promotion Standing List to grade E-5, check their 201 file for correctness prior to Sept. 30, 1980, for all documents needed or required for recomputation.

Lt. Col. B.J. Maynard and his son and his son Alex are in the last canoe to hit the river. Maynard was the scout leader for the 56 mile trek down the Chattahoochee River.

Scouts earn 50 mile patches

Doug Dietz mans the front of the canoe. As part of their conservation program he and the other 21 scouts collected 83 bags of litter from the river.

To earn their 50-mile patch and their historic trails award, 22 scouts and two adult leaders spent the Labor Day holiday on a five day canoe trip down the Chatahoochee River.

Beginning on a rainy Friday evening, the scouts put the 12 canoes into the river behind the Columbus Trade and Convention Center and finished the trip 56 miles downstream at Rood Creek.

This was not just a pleasure trip for the scouts. They worked at cleaning trash and rubbish from the river, collecting a total of 83 bags of garbage, according to Lt. Col. B. J. Maynard, scout leader.

He also reported that while the Fort Benning area was plagued with random showers, during the holiday, the scouts were not. "We would see the thunderclouds but they would move south of us."

Throughout the trip the scouts provided their own food, tents and cooking utensils.

COMET grades 1/58th

By Joe Rich

Company B, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, (Mech), 197th Infantry Brigade, (Sep), was the first unit here to undergo an evaluation by COMET (Command Maintenance Evaluation Team).

COMET is designed to evaluate rather than inspect the unit commanders' maintenance procedures. The COMET must evaluate every part of a unit maintenance system, its vehicles, its supply system, record of maintenance and even the training of mechanics. Not only the motor pool receives attention, but also the communications and Nuclear, Biological and Chemical rooms. This lets the team see how the commander manages his time, resources and assets.

Company B went into the evaluation with only two hours notice, a commander with only 24 hours in command and other key personnel newly assigned to their jobs. In spite of this, Company B came out of the evaluation with a better idea of their standing in maintenance management.

"COMET is a good idea and I am looking forward to seeing the long term results," said 1st Sgt. James B. Skinner. "They pointed out areas that need improvements and we are working on them."

Lt. Col. Peter Dudek, chief of the Optometry Clinic at Martin Army Hospital, checks MSgt. Ralph D. Crumley, Law Enforcement Command, with the phroptor lenses to determine possible eye defects.

Eye clinic cures ills

If you've been experiencing headaches or blurre vision, then the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Servic at Martin Army wants to see you.

A routine eye exam can detect defects and di: eases in the early stages.

During an eye examination, the patient is checke for unaided or aided acuity (how well a person ca see using an eye chart). The doctor also checks fc diseases, such as glaucoma, and examines both th interior and exterior of the eye. Then the doctc uses lenses to determine the refractive error (hov serious the patient's eye defect is) and determine the prescription needed.

Since black service type eye glasses are the onl type available through the clinic, dependents ar given a prescription and can either go to optica shops downtown or to the PX Optical shop at th Main Mall. Contact lenses are not available. I usually takes one to two weeks for soldiers t recieve their glasses for a normal prescription an four to six weeks for bifocals.

Parents needing an appointment for their childrer should call 544-3984.

Children below the age of five are treated only when referred from the pediatric clinic.

The clinic is open from 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m Monday through Friday. For an appointment cal 544-1676. Soldiers do not need to go through thei troop medical clinic to schedule an appointment fo a routine eye check.

At present, as in the past, the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) stands ready to perform any iob necessary to insure the successful completion of a mission during either war or peace.

Bittl takes over 36th Group

Col. Charles L. Shreves relinquished command of the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) during a ceremony held at York Field Friday morning. Col. Frederick E. Bittl now commands the group whose history is long and distinguished.

The 36th Engineer Group was organized more than 47 years ago and fought in both World War II and the Korean War. Its colors carry 20 battle streamers with five bronze arrowheads representing five amphibious assault landings.

During World War II the unit performed all types of combat engineering and was committed as infantry on several occasions. It helped take the Army into North Africa in November 1942 and operated invasion ports. In July 1943 the 36th went into Sicily with General Patton's Seventh Army. With Sicily conquered, the 36th was assigned as a Corps combat regiment with the Fifth Army for the Italian campaign.

At Anzio, for 50 consecutive days, the 36th was committed as infantry and held a seven mile sector of front line around the beach head. The Germans started calling them the Little Seashore Division," because this engineer unit was still wearing a seashore shoulder patch which was adopted during its amphibious training period.

When the Seventh Army sped north from Marseilles, the 36th collected its arsenal and went along. The 36th was in the line again, fighting as infantry. On New Years Day 1945, it assembled as infantry on two hours notice to meet the German attack in Alsace-Lorraine.

The 36th never made it to the Pacific during World War II but it did arrive at Pusan in October 1950 at the beginning of the Korean campaign. While assigned to IX Corps, the group fought the toughest foe in its history—the Korean weather.

Road construction and maintenance in the Corps area were their primary mission and the accomplishment of it was obstructed continuously by the elements. In the winter of 1951-1952, new roads and bridges were built through rugged mountainous terrain. Equipment and men were punished severely by the sub-zero temperatures and frozen ground. In November 1951, the units of the 36th Engineer Group carried asssault troops across the Pusan river, built 1,236 feet of threadway bridge, punched six miles of road through rough mountainous terrain and transported tons of supplies by water to insure the success of the operation.

The engineers served continuously in Korea from theirarrival in Pusan in October 1950 until May 1972, when the unit's colors were returned to the United States.

The 36th Engineer Group (Combat) was activated July 2, 1973 here and has worked continuously in support of improving the civilian and military communities throughout the southeastern United States.

Rape, crime of opportunity

Rape can happen anytime, anywhere. Officials call it a crime of opportunity, taken at the opportunity of the rapist. Rapes have happened in broad daylight, in the hidden shadows of night, in the victim's home and in the streets.

For the victim, the crime is a decidedly traumatic experience. She feels abused, dirty and may not know where to turn. She may turn to a friend, neighbor or the MPs for help and advice. Her path here will eventually lead her to Fort Benning's Criminal Investigation(CID) unit.

First, CID makes sure the woman is taken to Martin Army Hospital for a medical examination. After the medical examination, the victim is then interviewed by a CID agent. Normally a woman from the Rape Crisis Center is also called in. According to one CID agent, having another woman with the victim can be a real help. "Most of the women are very sympathetic with and knowledgeable in handling rape victims. She calms the lady down so we can get an accurate statement from her," stated the agent.

The agent explained the problems in getting an accurate statement, "Rape is a psychologically demeaning act. The rapist is putting the lady down. He feels superior to her by raping her; he feels he has accomplished something."

The interview can be a trying time for the victim. "We need to find out exactly what happened in very specific terms. In order for us to go into court we have to be able to prove she was raped. We have to have her tell us that she was forced to have sexual intercourse against her will and then be able to substantiate this with facts.

Women who 'cry wolf'

But these are not the only problems facing the agents. "We have a lot of rapes that are reported but are not really rapes. A woman may have an affair with another man, feel guilty, and try to get the man for rape," said the agent.

"It's a tender track to follow, you don't want to accuse her of not being raped. You don't want her to think you don't believe her because she feels bad enough as it is. So we edge around that issue a little bit, to see if there is any reality to her story," he said.

"With an actual rape, it doesn't take long to figure out if the story's genuine," added the agent. "Women act differently, some seem calm, some will hold it inside and some will sit there and cry and you won't be able to get their story that night."

"But their story will hang together. She'll be able to relate a great deal about the approach of the man. She may falter in the story but she won't make conflicting mistakes."

While the interview with the victim can be trying for the agent as well as the victim, a more difficult task is at hand when the suspected rapist is caught and interogated. "We apprehend him and we're nice to him. We have a tendency to not want to be nice to him because of the nature of the crime. However, we have to be, since we're after a confession. We play the role with him, put on the face. Sometimes we have to sympathize with him, laugh with him, joke with him. Act like his friend, let him know you understand him and all the stuff starts coming out."

Throughout all this is the thought in the back of the agent's mind, "My God, he could have raped my wife, sister or daughter." Still, the interogation goes on. "You have to be above the situation. It's not easy to control your emotions on something like this. But I do it and can't explain it other than it's part ofmy job," explained the agent.

No typical rapist

There isn't a typical rapist, according to Capt.Richard Jaworek, Ph.D., clinical psychologist with Martin Army Hospital. However, he added there are some characteristics which tend to be found in rapists as well as others displaying anti-social behavior. "The rapist tends to be unconcerned for the welfare of others. They don't spend a lot of time thinking about the rights and welfare of others."

Jaworek continued, "Frequently, the rapist is impulsive and unable to delay gratification, he has little ability to resist a strong impulse. In one case of a convicted rapist, he talked very strongly about strong sexual feelings and that he hadn't had any type of sexual satisfaction for a period of time. He had a strong urge and was overcome by it. That kind of impulsive person is overcome by a lot of things.

"Rapists often display poor judgement when dealing with social cues," said the doctor. Jaworek explained social cues this way: "Suppose I'm walking down a street and I see a woman and she looks at me. There is a simple message there. But how do I interpret it? If I don't have good social judgement I could see this woman as attractive and could interpret that as some kind of communication to approach her. I might approach her and if she verbally pushes me away, I could get angry because I thought she communicated to me to approach and now she pushes me away."

Rapists insecure

"There are suggestions that many rapists are insecure and rape is a flamboyant overcompensation for insecurity and inadequacy. For example, if I am feeling unmanly, unsure about my male role, sometimes by doing something flamboyantly masculine, like getting into fights or drinking a lot with the buddies at the bar, can help make me feel more like a man. Rape is kind of like that, a type of masculine aggressive action, a he-man kind of act," he explained.

"There is a tendency for rapists to have shallow feelings rather than deep feelings for people. Rarely, if ever, have they been close to the opposite sex in a way that would lead them to have feelings of warmth, empathy and feelings of concern."

In a recent announcement from the Fort Benning Provost Marshal, he stated that reported rapes throughout TRADOC during the first six months of this year exceeded the total number reported during each of the five previous years. This is an increase of 236 percent over last year. Rape is a problem, a crime that will not go away. If ignored, the problem may worsen. By reporting a rape, the rapists may be taken off the streets; if not reported, he may rape again.

Common items can become weapons

There is no single definition of a rapist. He can be a total stranger or an acquaintance. He may be drunk or sober, high or straight. At the time of a rape there is only one thing for certain, he is attacking.

For the woman who is attacked there are two options available for her. She can fight back either physically or mentally. Either way, survival is the name of the game.

If she fights back physically, she should not try to defeat her attacker, just delay him so she can get away as fast as she can. There are some improvised weapons easily accessible which she can use to ward off her attacker.

Don't allow a rapist the opportunity to make you his next victim by walking alone at night.

- A plastic lemon filled with ammonia can be used to spray ammonia into her attacker's eyes. It will spray up to 15 feet.
- An umbrella can be held in both hands and jabbed towards his neck or stomach. Don't swing the umbrella wildly.
- A hat pin can be easily concealed and can be used to strike in the area of the face.
- Keys can be held between the closed fingers of a fist and be used to rake across the eyes.
- A woman can always use her natural weapons. She can kick th attacker in the knees to throw him off balance. She can scream to attract attention; bite, scratch or punch at the attacker's eyes, nose, mouth and ears.
- But remember, never try to defeat him, just get away as fast as possible.

Fredrick Storaska, author of the book, "How to say No to a Rapist", suggests a more passive, mental approach in handling an attacker. He offers five tips to women which can also be used to save their lives.

- Retain or regain your emotional stability. You have to keep your cool. You are dealing with an emotionally unstable person. You have to be aware to pick up on clues that would help you slip out of danger.
- Treat the rapist as a human being. It's not going to be easy to treat someone who is trying to assault you as a human being. Consider this: "Treat someone like an animal and he will be glad to attack like one." You also have to remember that the attacker is not stupid, just irrational.
- A lit cigarette can be smashed into the face or hand of the attacker.
- Gain his confidence. Storaska emphasized that few women realize it but, in general, the rapist is just as frightened during the asault as his victim. Until he is gone away from you, you are a tremendous threat to his security.

For your own safety, you have to ease his fears. Make him believe that you are no possible threat to him.

He added that many women have defeated their attackers unharmed by gaining their confidence.

- Go along until you can safetly react. Give the attacker the impression you are going along with him. This will give you time to retain stability and get a handle on the situation. This will also give you a possible chance to get away safetly.
- Use your imagination and your good judgement. This comes into play when a standardized technique will not meet the situation. You have to rely on common sense and impovising.

If you become a rape victim, CID officials suggest that you try to get a good look at the man and to remember all details possible about him. When possible, record information such as where the attack took place and the car licence number.

- Notify authorities immediately.
- Do not bath, douche, or comb hair.
- Preserve the clothing worn when attacked, particulaly underclothing. Don't change or wash clothes.
- Do not disturb the scene of attack. Make sure not to touch anything the attacker may hve touched.

"it is very important that they do not disturb any evidence of rape. You have to remember that rape crimes usually have no witnesses, so physical evidence is necesary," a CID official noted.

Victim tells of terrible night

Help, I've been raped!

Editor's note: The following account is a true story of a female soldier who was raped.

By Julie Casey

One night, a young woman returned home after a long day's work. Her brother was out of town for the night and her parents had asked her not to spend the night alone in the house.

"I was really tired and didn't feel like driving 20 miles before hitting the sack," she commented.

At 10 p.m., two friends of her brother came to the house asking to use the phone. She invited them in. They made their phone call, watched a little TV and left.

Later that night one of the friends broke into the house through her bedroom window.

"I told him to leave right away or I would call the police. I was really afraid because he was very hostile and threatening toward me. He told me that if I called anyone he was going to wrap the telephone cord around my neck. For some reason, I tried to put him in a head hold, over powering him, but it didn't work."

He wanted her to take her clothes off and when she refused, he threatened her, saying that he was going to "mess up" her face.

She continued to resist and a struggle resulted. She tried to use her house keys as a weapon, but she was injured by her own weapon. He severely beat her, kicking her in the head and kidneys before she surrendered.

He raped her and told her if she told anyone, that he would kill her.

Afraid to act, she waited a while. When she couldn't find her car keys she set out on foot to find the police. When she did, they took her to a hospital.

The assault left her with a concussion and severe bruises on her head, back and arms.

What provoked the young man? "I don't know. I don't understand why. He knew me and he knew that I was going to get married soon. I hardly knew him. I usually wasn't around when he was at the house."

The man was eventually convicted of rape and sent to San Quentin.

"The trial was a terrible experience. First of all, my brother didn't want me to press charges, but I wanted to get the guy. The defense attorney tried to make it look like it was my fault. I wanted him off the streets so he couldn't do it again to someone."

It turned out the rapist had a long history of juvenile crimes and also been involved in an earlier gang rape.

What does she suggest to other women who are faced with a possible sexual assault?

"It may sound like a funny thing to do, but don't fight him. The beating I took only made things worse. Look at it this way; if someone hits you, don't you want to hit back? I really do feel that if I hadn't given in he would have killed me," she concluded.

Doughboys on the way

By Tim Boivin

"The Doughboys are coming! The Doughboys are coming!"

No, that wasn't Paul Revere warning the countryside. That was Coach Ralph Santaliz informing fans that the Doughboys are ready to open the season next Saturday. Although they do have some problems the Doughboys will kick off their season in Doughboy Stadium.

Season tickets go on sale today at Crain Hall, Bldg. 229. Season tickets for adults are $9 and for children they are $6. They cover all Doughboys games, day and night.

The Doughboys opening day opponent is Carson-Newman College. Last year the Doughboys battled Carson-Newman to a 27-27 tie on their way to a 6-4-1 season. This year the Doughboys are hoping to get a victory as they take on the Junior-Varsity team of Carson-Newman.

Practice usually makes perfect but this year it means injuries. Practice has taken its toll on the Doughboys this summer. The biggest casualty so far has been Leroy Benson, the running back star of a year ago. Leroy broke his ankle in three places during summer training camp. He will be lost for the entire year and sorely missed.

Ed Hykland bruised his knee and the only other injury besides that was a linebacker who broke his thumb. The problem is worse than it sounds because the Doughboys have a depth problem.

Santaliz said, "We already had a depth problem and the rash of injuries has taken its toll on our reserves. We're going to slack off on the hitting drills and concentrate on the fundamentals and conditioning again."

Last year one weak point for the Doughboys was their kicking game. Santaliz hopes to remedy this by dedicating more time to the specialty teams.

The Doughboys kicking game was one of the few low points in their season. Moments such as this, when Central Florida blocked a kick to win the game, enticed Head Coach Ralph Santaliz to emphasize the specialty teams in practice.

Santaliz said, "We consistently got hurt on that last year so we are trying to emphasize it more this year."

The Doughboys will hold a press day for photographs next Wednesday around 6 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Putt-Putt hits big time

By Tim Boivin

For some soldiers, the only sports they participate in is when they watch television. With the new Columbus-based sports network, ESPN, shown on cable in the barracks, they can almost work up a sweat.

The sports network has every sporting event conceivable going on 24-hours-a-day. There's World Cup soccer, international softball championships, Canadien football and regional college games. This week, however, they got scooped by CBS Sports.

CBS covered that nostalgic, world renowned and revered Professional Putter's Association Putt-Putt Open. Is nothing sacred?! This is miniature golf we are talking about. That game you go out with Mom and Pop and Little John on Friday nights to play.

The sport's world is going off its rocker trying to get viewers and beat the competition. In miniature golf the announcers spoke in hushed tones throughout the match like it was the 18th hole of the Master's Tournament in Augusta, Ga.

There was not a green jacket at stake but there was the draw of $10,000 in victor's spoils. "Ed Haggerty has to make a putt at 18 to clinch the open," the announcer whispered to his cohort.

"It's got a tough roll and could come all the way back, but Ed handles it and he clinches the championship!" the other announcer exultantly whispers.

Now that miniature golf has hit the bigtime, I wonder what the repercussions throughout the sport's world would have been if Ed had missed the putt. Would Sport's Illustrated, the bible of competitive athletics, run a cover picture of Ed with his head in his hands as the ball rolled on down the incline.

Would Brent Musberger have shouted, "Oh No! What a terrible thing to happen. What do you think about that Greek?"

And the Greek would sit there munching on his ever-present cigar saying, "50 to 1, a 50 to 1 shot, Brent. I'm going to switch to Putt-Putt. The odds are better than college football."

But I don't think miniature golf has hit the big time. I think it's a plot to get The BAYONET to cover the sport. Up to now we have ignored Putt-Putt but I don't see how we can now. I'm going to get CBS for this if it's the last thing I do.

After Putt-Putt on the tube who knows what's next? Will I be forced to get an interview in the Gold Cup Dominos Tournament? Or maybe at the Heritage Hopscotch Open? Or how about the Tijuana Tiddlywinks Tournament? And what about the Sahara Hotel World Series of Solitaire? There's no end in sight and they'll want stories in my sport's section.

But I know what I'll do! I'll get them back! I'll cover the Professional Patty Cakes Championships and then they'll have to cover it on their networks! This is war!

Shooters go to China

By Tommy Pool

The United States Army Marksmanship Unit(USAMU) has been busy competing in national tournaments. Some of them are presently with the United States Olympic Shooting Team. The Olympic team left Aug. 28 for Peking, China to compete in the invitational shooting championships through Monday.

USAMU placed eight members of their unit on the 17 member Olympic Team. Mr. William C. Pullum, USAMU shop officer, is the team captain for the Olympic Shooting Team while Mr. James Sizemore, USAMU small arms repairman, will serve as the team armorer.

Other USAMU members who made the team include Lones Wigger, two-time gold medal winner in rifle shooting; Randy Stewart and Martin Edmondson in running target; Dean Clark and Matt Dryke in skeet; and Earnest Neel in trap.

The invitational championships will include all international shooting events normally fired in the Olympics. Scheduled are two shotgun events, international trap and skeet, 50 meter smallbore rifle position and prone events, 25 meter rapid fire pistol, 50 meter slow fire or free pistol and 50 meter running target.

The match was arranged through the National Rifle Association and will be funded by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

In other USAMU news, the team brought home a lion's share of the titles during the 1980 National Rifle and Pistol Championships held last month at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Wigger successfully defended his smallbore three position rifle title for the fifth consecutive year and 13th in the last 18 years. He scored 1,745 points out of 1,800 to easily outpace the second place finisher, Lance Peters of the National Guard team, by 36 points.

In the smallbore rifle prone championship, Ernest Vande Zande completed the four day match in a tie with three other competitors at 6,396 out of 6,400. Vande Zande won the title by virtue of more shots in the center X-ring, scoring 571 X-rings. The runnerup, Perry Kendall of the National Guard, had just 555 X-rings.

In other competition Clint Hilbert of the 988th Military Police Company won both the National Trophy Pistol Championship and the FORSCOM Pistol Trophy. Hilbert fired a 291 out of 300 points to win the National Trophy and 576 out of 600 for the Forscom Trophy over 500 other competitors. He was

The Southern Open has been won by nine different professionals in its ten year history. Jerry Pate is the only person to win it twice, in 1977-78. He will be back along with other former champions Forrest Fezler, Ed Fiori and Mac McLendon. Johnny Miller is also expected to atend. He won in 1971.

Last year Fiori went to two sudden death holes before defeating a stubborn Tom Weiskopf in the $200,000 classic.

Benning recently lost to Muscogee in a smoker here, but according to head boxing coach Anthony Stoddard, he expects the team to do much better this time. "It will be a big test, but we're prepared to give it everything we've got and we expect to take it all," he said.

Tickets will be sold at the door or you can get them in advance by contacting the Harmony Church Fieldhouse at 544-6652. Prices are $5 for ring side seats, $3 for general admission and $1.50 for student tickets.

Doughboys take crown

Fort Benning's men's softball team, the Doughboys, recently topped off their finest season to date by taking the TRADOC men's softball championship. The tournament was held at Fort Jackson, S.C. beginning Aug. 8.

In the first game the Doughboys met a tough Fort Gordon squad in what proved to be one of the closest games of the tournament. The Doughboys put together a come from behind rally late in the game to survive the first round scare by winning 6-5.

In the next game the Doughboys regrouped to show off their offensive might against Fort Dix by winning 14-6. This advanced them to the semifinal game pitted against a formidable Fort Bliss team. The Doughboy's defense took their turn in the big play column as they held Fort Bliss to only three runs while putting nine on the board themselves.

This advanced Fort Benning into the finals undefeated on Aug. 14. Fort Benning had to face the artillery of Fort Sill, Okla. coming out of the loser's bracket. Fort Benning jumped out to an early 11-3 and then watched it all disappear. Because of a few costly Doughboy errors Fort Sill came back to wipe out the early lead and take a 13-12 victory.

This led up to an exciting championship game with both teams having one loss each. In the daytime heat Fort Benning had to dig down deep to score five runs while the Doughboy defense again rose to the occasion by holding Fort Sill's big guns to just two runs.

To add icing to the cake the Doughboys also had the Most Valuable Player of the tournament in Dave Thierolf at pitcher and three players were named to the 1980 TRADOC All-Star team. Catcher James (J.B.) Brown Jr., Second Baseman Kevin Beaudin and Third Baseman Terry Thomas all represented Fort Benning on the team.

The TRADOC champions were coached this year by Warren Hodge. Other players who were members of the championship team included First Baseman Danny Keith, Shortstop Ramon Martinez, Outfielders Frank Amicucci, George Reid, John Van Antwern and Fred Suggs and reserves Jim Reed and Greg Singleton.

In high power rifle competition, USAMU's Greg Strom won the President's Match with 297 out of 300. He received a congratulatory letter from President Carter after his victory. Strom also took the Crescent Cup Trophy in the 200 yard standing event with 196 points out of 200.

In the final phase of the competition, USAMU's Carl Sprouse won the Marine Corps Cup Championship with a score of 200-13 X-rings in the 300 yard rapid fire prone event. He missed the existing national record by only one X-ring.

In team competition the Army squads won four national titles. They took the .45 caliber Pistol Championship, the National Pistol Team Aggregate Championship, the Iron Sight Smallbore Rifle Team and the Any Sight Smallbore Rifle Team Championship.

NRA announced recently that the Fort Benning Junior and Sub-Junior Rifle Teams had won this years National Indoor Team Championship in their category for both the conventional and NRA three-position shooting events.

Wigger, the coach of the Junior program, said after learning of the news, "When we started the program five years ago we set our goal to win the national championship. I never dreamed they would win all four titles plus David Cannella's outstanding individual victory."

Cannella scored 581 points out of 600 to win the National Individual Junior Championship and lead his team to victory. Other members of the National Championship Junior squad were Billy Haracourt, Walter Scott Jr., Danny Wigger and Cannella. Members of the championship Sub-Junior team were Chris Valentin, Bobby Lucker, David Edmondson and Denna Wigger.

Nearly 200 youths from Fort Benning and the Columbus area have gone through the junior rifle program since 1975. The program is run under the watchful eye of Wigger and members of USAMU's International Rifle Branch. Youth Activities sponsors and helps fund the program.

Strict firearm's safety is taught along with basic and advanced fundamentals of marksmanship by some of the top competitive shooters in the world. Anyone interested in joining 12 years of age or older can call 545-2343 for further information.

Hunt Club offers riding pleasure

By Tim Boivin

Horses have been, and still are, a significant part of history for the past 2,000 years. They have ranged in style from the wooden one used by the Trojans to recapture Helen of Troy to Genuine Risk, the first filly in over a half century to win the Kentucky Derby.

Horses have been the prime transportation used for invasions, the main source of power before electricity and engines and have always been a beautiful sight.

Horses are presently used mostly for pleasure on a sunny afternoon here. The pleasure can be all yours by visiting the Fort Benning Hunt Club and spending an afternoon riding the trails.

The Hunt Club is located on Marne Road down the hill from Martin Army Hospital along the way to Main Post. Regular membership in the Hunt Club is open to all active and retired military personnel and their dependents. Nonmembers can ride the trails that wind around the wooded area between the Hunt Club and Martin Army Hospital. The horses are rented out to nonmembers when they are available on a limited basis at $4 an hour.

Club 50 years old

When the Hunt Club was first started over 50 years ago it was primarily for hunting expeditions around the area. The focus has shifted from those bygone days to learning the basics of horsemanship and showmanship through English style riding classes. The classes are open to servicemembers and their families.

Once a year the Hunt Club sponsors a Horse Show at French Polo Field on Yeager Street. During the show the competition is tough as equestrians from across the Southeast come to ride. The festivities usually draws a large crowd of 'gazers' to admire the beauty of the horses and showmanship.

After going through riding classes some club members compete in equestrian shows across the southeast include the show here. Many of them come home with the top prizes of the shows.

If you want to enjoy the pleasure of riding the fine horses at the Fort Benning Hunt Club, hoof it on down to the stables during some free time. If you are interested in having your family join the Hunt Club, call 689-3945.

Water Games

Scott Yanney (left), Jeffrey Trawitz (center), and David Edmondson get ready for one last ride on their "inner tube canoes" at the recent Fun Day held at Carey Pool on Main Post. Sponsored by Morale Support Activities, Fun Day consisted of "water games" for all ages and certificates were awarded to the winners. Each of these young men received a certificate for winning races in their "canoes." Made by folding and taping tractor tire inner tubes together, the "canoes" were a lot harder to guide than they looked, and everyone who participated in the event seemed to have plenty of fun.

Bowl holds history of horses

By Betty Zimmerman

Popularity of horse shows as social and sporting events at Fort Benning led to the construction of the "Campbell King Horse Show Bowl," one of the many historical places still in existence on post.

The first recorded horse show held at Benning was in 1923 and for the next several years they were held in a number of places, including Shannon Field, Gordon Field, French Field and Doughboy Stadium.

Many well-known personalities visited here to attend the horse shows. A 1929 issue of The Infantry School News carries a picture of Franklin D. Roosevelt, then governor of New York, talking to Brig. Gen. Campbell King, then commandant of the Infantry School, at the horse show held that year in Doughboy Stadium.

A partially finished bowl was used for the eighth annual horse show in 1930. At first it was known as the "Horse Show Bowl" but in December 1933, just after another show, newspaper accounts began referring to it as the "Campbell King Horse Show Bowl." However, there are no records available to show that it was named in honor of Gen. King. King, a dedicated horseman, retired in July 1933 after 36 years in the Army.

The June 6, 1930 issue of the News describes the Bowl as "just north of the Infantry School Stables." The article says, "The new Horseshow Bowl, though not yet completed, is one of the beauty spots of the post, and on this occasion formed a most picturesque setting for the biggest horse show ever given at Fort Benning. This beautiful bowl, with its two show rings, is set in a natural amphitheater surrounded by a dense growth of shade trees, and is a restful and alluring spot in which to hold a horse show."

After an account of the program, the article goes on to say: "The show was the first to be held in the new showing and with the improvements that will be executed this summer, Fort Benning can boast one of the most beautiful show rings in the country."

Another issue of the same paper speaks of the setting as a natural dell near the Chattahoochee River, and fancifully conjectures on the possibility of Indian tribes having once built fires there to hold ceremonial rituals."

In addition to the horse shows, the bowl was also used periodically for Easter Sunrise Services. Then, for some reason, it was allowed to deteriorate and nature reclaimed the area.

In 1975, as one of the Bicentennial projects, the Campbell King Bowl was cleaned up again and used for a small horse show sponsored by the Fort Benning Hunt Club.

Nature has again reclaimed the site of Benning's historical horse shows.

WFBG Highlights

Voting tops schedule

By Bill Powell

Making out a television station schedule is always an interesting occupation. There are many questions that have to be asked when a schedule is made. Questions such as: What can we show? Who is our audience? What is the best time for a particular show? Will this show be interesting enough? Does our audience gain from the show? Hopefully, when the schedule is finished we've answered the questions correctly and WFBG-TV, Channels 5 and 13, has a schedule everyone will find interesting and entertaining.

The following are programs that you may find especially interesting, entertaining or both:

- "Have Your Say-Voting" is a program for all Americans. It gives the idea of just how important the individual's vote is.
- "Introduction to CBR Operation" is the title even though CBR is now called NCB. But the importance of good technique in case of nuclear, biological or chemical warfare cannot be underemphasized.
- "Beyond the Call" will show the courage and daring of Medal of Honor winners. You'll see a fairly complete history of our nation's highest decoration and the people who have been deserving of that honor.
- "Army's Music Men" takes you to Fort Myers, Virginia for a look at the U.S. Army Band. Included is a tuneful look at songs from WWI to contemporary music.
- Audio programming on WFBG-TV will be really special next month. From 2 until 6 p.m. mostly special programming comes your way. You can look forward to informational programs on Hispanic-Americans during Hispanic Heritage Week. You'll hear about the backgrounds of Hispanic-Americans, what they're doing and where they're going, in English and Spanish languages.

Movie review

Trekkies differ on silverscreen

By Bill Powell

When I first saw the title of the movie "Star Trek-The Motion Picture" I wondered if it was going to be any better than Star Trek—The Television Series, which has been played and replayed to a great cult following nationwide? After seeing it I can say only one thing, it isn't better but it is different.

It was the first time I had ever seen Star Trek with a ticket stub in my pocket, a drink in one hand and popcorn in the other. The movie is a basic Star Trek type story of supposed conquerors of earth being fought by the intrepid crew of the equally intrepid USS Enterprise led by, who else, but the intrepid Captain (now Admiral) Kirk and Mr. Spock.

The special effects are the best I've seen outside the Star Wars pictures and add a great deal to the movie, as a matter of fact it almost looks like the story line took a back seat to the special effects. I don't mean to upset Star Trek fans but it seems like the movie was meant to be a reunion on a grand scale for the fans instead of an extremely well done story, tightly crafted, to which the special effects were supplementary instead of being the star (if I can use that term in a space picture).

The movie was long on special effects and short on story, and by this I mean they could have added a few more missions to the movie and make the length make more sense. Instead they stretched a one-hour story into a two hour movie.

Personally I liked the movie, liked seeing all the old stars of Star Trek together again and would like to see another Star Trek movie. But if they make one I hope they'll get a story with more action and maybe concentrate on special effects a little less and make the movie more like the television series so that when I "boldly go where no man has gone before" I will enjoy it just a little bit more. I rate "Star Trek-The Motion Picture" as three stars on a possible scale of four. ★ ★ ★.

Game warden slots open

The Provost Marshal's Office here has taken some new steps to combat illegal activities on the reservation. The Fish and Game Enforcement Section has a Deputy Game Warden Program established to boost the number of active game wardens available to enforce fishing and hunting laws.

Deputy game wardens are from many of the different units on post and are receiving law enforcement training to effectively perform their duties. Personnel who wish to apply for these part-time positions as deputy game wardens must meet the following qualifications:

- Be on active duty military status in the pay grade of E-5 or above.
- Be free from criminal offense record with no serious or habitual driving offenses.
- Produce a letter of recommendation from their commander.
- Pass an oral interview.
- Receive a passing score (80 percent) on a written test of USAIC Reg 210-2.
- Have six months remaining at this duty station.
- Bring an identification picture (similar to the one on a military identification card) with your name on the bottom, at the time of application.

Deputy game wardens will be required to work a minimum of 12 hours per month with the Military Police Game Warden Section and attend a deputy game warden meeting once each month. Interested applicants may pick up an application form from the Fish & Game Section which is located in the Military Police Station.

During the upcoming hunting season military police and deputy game wardens will be working in uniform and civilian clothing. All wardens will be checking vehicles, bag limits, weapons and licenses. Deputies may not be accompanied by military police but will have the authority to enforce all fishing and hunting regulations of Fort Benning, Georgia and Alabama on the Fort Benning reservation.

Military police and deputy game wardens who may be in civilian clothing may be identified by the Game Warden's Identification Card, FB (PM) Fm 1 & 31, which will be carried at all times. Deputy game wardens will also have a letter of authority issued by the Office of the Provost Marshal.

For more information call Sgt. John Pritchard, 545-1308, Fish & Game Enforcement, Provost Marshal's Office.

Off limits areas to be enforced

The Fish & Game Section of the Provost Marshal's Office is also strictly enforcing the regulation concerning off limits areas on Fort Benning. Hunters and fishermen are advised that open hunting areas and some ponds on post may be in restricted/off limits areas or have a part of the open hunting areas posted as restricted or off limits.

Hunting maps do not show all the off limits areas and warning signs and barricades may be damaged, therefore not readily seen. Be attentive and save your own life. Hunting is not permitted in any areas marked "OFF LIMITS," "DUD AREA" or "RESTRICTED AREA."

I SHOULD'VE VOTED.

You know that's what you're going to say if your candidate doesn't win.

●U.S.A.--20 to 25 percent of all married women are regularly assaulted.

Facts:

●Wife-beating is the most under-reported crime in the United States.

●In 60 percent of all wife assault cases, alcohol consumption by the assailant was present at the time of attack.

●Violence is more prevalent in families where husband's educational and occupational status are lower than his wife's.

●More than 58 percent of domestic violence victims have been victims of previous assaults.

●Domestic violence calls are the number one cause of police officers' deaths since 1972

●Domestic violence is most common in the 41-50 age group. The average age of the beaten wife is 37.

Myth:

WIFE ABUSE OCCURS PRIMARILY IN THE LOWER CLASSES AND AMONG MINORITY POPULATIONS.

Fact:

Wife abuse is common to all classes and races. It occurs at every income and educational level. Even the ruling class participates. Ingeborg Dedichen, who lived with Aristotle Onaisses for 12 years, stated he beat her. Prime Minister Sato of Japan (winner of the Nobel Peace Prize) is also a known wife-beater.

Myth:

A MAN RELEASES BUILT-UP TENSIONS BY BEATING HIS WIFE, AND THE LIKELIHOOD THAT HE WILL LATER EXPLODE AND COMMIT SEVERE VIOLENCE IS REDUCED.

Fact:

Violent activity does result in an immediate reduction of tension and emotional release but it has the long term effect of increasing violence. In a reliable study of women who have been beaten, they report the beatings increased in both intensity and frequency. A Kansas City study involving spouse killings found that in 85 percent of the cases the police were called at least once before the fatal act and in 50 percent of the cases the police were called five times or more. Rather than relieving normal aggression, wife-beating appears to be mere foreplay for an eventual homicide.

Myth:

WOMEN WHO GET BEATEN BRING IT ON THEMSELVES BY NAGGING, BEING FRIGID, OR DELIBERATELY PROVOKING THEIR HUSBANDS.

Fact:

As with rape, the attempt is often made to place the blame for the abuse on the recipients rather than the perpetrators. A common report of women who are beaten is that their husbands use any minor frustration or irritation as an excuse for a beating. Case after case illustrates the point that though husbands may make up excuses, the beatings are unprovoked.

Myth:

A WOMAN WHO REMAINS WITH HER HUSBAND AFTER BEING BEATEN IS MASOCHISTIC AND MUST RECEIVE SATISFACTION FROM THE BEATINGS.

Fact:

The main reason women stay with abusive husbands is because there is no place else for them to go. Financial dependency is one of the major reasons women remain with their abusive husbands but there are emotional and psychological reasons as well. Many feel embarrassed or humiliated by the fact they've been beaten. They have been urged to believe, and many of them have accepted the notion, that it is their fault they are beaten and it is a sign of their failure in marriage. These attitudes, plus a low self-concept produced by constant battering, keep many women trapped in a violent home.

Myth:

MOST WIFE-BEATING CONSISTS OF A SLAP IN THE FACE OR A ONE-PUNCH FIGHT. SERIOUS INJURIES SELDOM RESULT.

Fact:

The violence women receive from their husbands

is often incredibly brutal. Rather than a momentary loss of control, the beatings are frequently prolonged and sadistic. In a study of 20 abused wives, six were beaten severely enough to require hospitalization. In that study alone there were four concussions, four miscarriages, one fractured jaw, one dislocated shoulder, one broken and one cracked set of ribs. One woman was burned on her breasts by a lighted cigarrette and another received first degree burns from a hot iron. None of the wives reported that the beatings were of the one-punch variety. The beatings lasted anywhere from five minutes to more than an hour. The cases reported in this study reflect a pattern of severity that is repeated in virtually all literature on wife abuse.

What do you think is more beneficial to the morale of the soldier–post level athletics or company level athletics?

MSgt. Dan Chapman
USAIC, Marksmanship Detachment Provision
Company level athletics. Everyone gets the chance to participate. In post level, only the best get to take part.

Cpt. Bruce Moore
3rd Ranger Company
Company level athletics because more people get to participate. The competition with other units on post means more to the average soldier than competition with other posts which he has never seen. For example, every team on post would like to beat Airborne in anything.

24th Company, 2nd Student Battalion, The School Brigade
I would think that company level athletics is more beneficial for the morale of the soldier, because I feel the soldier enjoys competing against other companies to see who is the best in certain athletic areas, whether in baseball, football, etc.

Sgt. Wilhemenia Coffee
Company A, Headquarters Command
It is most beneficial for morale purposes that soldiers become involved with company level athletics. Reason being, only X number of players will become involved with post level athletics. Company level develops pride, endurance and espirit de corps in one unit when one can be involved in activities such as sports.

PFC Andy Bentzel
Company B, Headquarters Command
Company level. More people get involved instead of just the elite few. That way the average Joe can be involved. It brings each soldier the spirit of competition.

Berry Van Deboe, civilian
J & J Maintenance
Company level athletics. More people get involved because each company has its own team. It builds company morale and everyone in the unit is closer.

SSgt. Daniel Bellina
11th Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brig
Everyday PT gets boring and incorporating c pany level competitive sports builds morale, es de corps and teamwork.

Sgt. Keith Hubbard
Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engi Group
Post level. They get to play against different sch and its more competitive. More support from fel soldiers who like to go out and see competi sports.

Sgt. Charles Jones
Company B, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 1 Infantry Brigade
In company level athletics each player gets compete in seasonal sports and no one who want play is left out. If the team is good they get a cha to go to battalion and then go for best of post.

Lack of can raises stink

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

"Garbage" is one of the few words I would convert to various four letter words if given the chance here.

As a matter of fact, until I got a galvanized garbage can it happened twice weekly, on the average. Why the four-letter words you might ask? Well, have you ever had the thrill of putting all the garbage for a two or three day period out on the curb in these huge garbage bags provided by self-help and come back a while later to find the garbage everywhere? I certainly have and if you ask who'd do such a thing, I'd answer vandals: the four-legged kind. Who by super sense of smell knows what's in my garbage bag and proceed to invade the bag to get what they want.

Can was needed

This happened on garbage pick-up days until I bought a can the animals couldn't get into. Until that time I didn't dare leave a garbage bag on the back porch or exposed because the animals would get them. What about putting the garbage out the night before? Just try it and you'll find out what mess really means. Obviously there is a problem here because short of putting garbage in the basement or keeping it in the house until garbage day there's nowhere else to keep these bags. That is unless you buy a garbage can.

My question is, that with such a problem, why housing doesn't institute the issue of one good garbage can to each residence on post to stop this problem? It is my understanding that garbage cans were issued until either late last year or early this year and discontinued in favor of the supposedly more economic garbage bags.

Economical, yes; but problem solving, no. The garbage bags, when opened by animals and strewn about causing a cleanliness, odor and even a possible health threat outweigh any economic savings that housing may realize from this short-cut method.

I would suggest that those who say, then buy a garbage can, take a look at the fact that other housing occupants have garbage cans that have been around for a while plus the new garbage bags and they haven't had to buy cans and probably won't have to. This is unfair to those who weren't lucky enough to be issued a house with a garbage can. And with all the fuss about soldiers barely making ends meet to put food on the table, I suggest the cost of a can is an excessive expense.

Are pets to blame?

Of course, there are those who say that the bags aren't at fault that it's pet owners who let their animals run free that cause the problem. To which I reply, "Sure, they're a part of the problem but what about the squirrels, chipmunks and other assorted cri that live on Fort Benning." The nothing you can do about them s of investing in a garbage can.

My solution is simple, just cont issuing garbage bags and start iss garbage cans again. The bags will split or break easily when suppo by a garbage can and the can will k out the animals. With the emph now being placed on cleanliness o post and the neatness of quarters the surrounding yards this is a m problem not to be put off easily.

Of course, there are those who that housing doesn't have the mo to buy garbage cans because of pe useing up Housing's extra money not being cautious of utilities. which I reply I'm paying the sa BAQ as a specialist four with conditioning in his quarters and I to buy an air conditioner for family to survive in this muggy mate. So I don't see where anyone a complaint about the amount energy the air conditioner I bou uses.

Soldier's pay raise now law

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — An 11.7 percent pay raise and a family separation allowance for junior enlisted soldiers is included in the FY 81 Department of Defense (DoD) authorization bill approved by Congress recently. The bill was signed into law by the president on Monday.

A figure of $52.8 billion in DoD auuthorizations for FY 81 is in the legislation.

In calling for the large pay increase, Congress suspended for one year the normal method of deciding how much of a raise to give servicemembers. The 11.7 percent increase will affect basic pay, subsistence allowance (BAS) and quarters allowance (BAQ) beginning with October 1980 pay.

Congress also gave the president the authority to reallocate up to 25 percent of the pay increase by grade and years of service. This allows the president to give a greater increase to servicemembers in certain grades and years of service. However, Congress limited that authority by saying such a reallocation cannot be used to increase the raise in basic pay above 11.7 percent for service personnel with four years of service or less.

The family separation allowance for E1-E4 who are not in a career status will amount to $30 per month for each month the servicemember is separated from his or her family.

The legislation also calls for an active Army end strength limit of 775,300 for FY 81, with no more than 35 percent of male enlistees being non-high school graduates. Further, no more than 25 percent of personnel enlisted during the fiscal year can be those who scored below the 30th percentile on the entrance tests.

Another feature of the authorization bill calls for an increase in the per diem allowance from $35 to $50 for military personnel on TDY. For TDY per diem in high cost areas, the maximum rate was raised from $50 to $75.

Other military compensation and benefits areas affected by the FY 81 DoD authorizations include:

- An increase in reenlistment bonuses from $15,000 to $20,000 for certain specialties.
- An increase in enlistment bonuses from $3,000 to $5,000 for certain skills.
- An increase in the reimbursement paid for moving a mobile home or trailer.
- A one-year extension of the enlistment and reenlistment bonuses and educational assistance programs for all units of the Army National Guard and Army Reserve.
- A new reenlistment bonus of $600 for the individual ready reserve for a one-year trial period.
- A new selective affiliation bonus for the selected reserve.
- $75 million for a directed one-year test of increased educational benefits, including a loan forgiveness program.
- In the civilian health and medical program of the uniformed services (CHAMPUS) program, coverage for routine infant medical care. Also, an increase from $350 to $1,000 per month in the maximum coverage for handicapped dependents.

CG's message

The 1981 Combined Federal Campaign will be conducted at Fort Benning from Tuesday through Nov. 4. This campaign solicits monetary support for over 50 humanitarian agencies through a single appeal. This combined effort affords each of us a chance to contribute to local, state, national, and international activities which provide many services to both our military and civilian communities. Last year, through the local United Way, this campaign provided $104,000 for Fort Benning's youth, welfare, and health activities.

The goal for this year's campaign is $325,000. This goal can be attained by the wholehearted participation of all personnel here and federal personnel in the tri-community area. Generosity and concern for others has always been symbolic of those who serve in the United States Government. Let us continue this tradition.

While the amount you contribute is a personal and voluntary decision, I trust that each of you will join me in supporting the Combined Federal Campaign to the fullest extent possible.

Clean-up week slated

Post Wide Clean-up Week starts Monday and the thrust of the cleaning will be towards areas not always included in day to day cleaning, according to officials at the Direcorate of Plans and Training.Everyone is expected to participate in ths semi-annual event, stressed the official.

The official said special emphasis should be placed on close in areas such as lawns, shrubbery, sidewalks, curbing gutters and parking lots next to buildings. Common areas used by more than one unit or group such as athletic fields, parade grounds and large areas between facilities or units should also receive special attention.

All residue and salvageable items need to be turned in at the following areas: nnsalvageale trash to the land fill vacinity; ammunition and ammunition residue to Bldg. 5956; quartermaster supplies and repair parts to Bldg. 224, section A; and salvageable scrap metal to PDO in Bldg. 326.

Helmets being stolen

A spokesman for the Provost Marshals office warns Fort Benning bikers that "leaving their helmets in parking lots with their bikes is a good way to lose them."

Infantry Hall (Bldg. 4) parking lots have been the scene of at least 6 helmet ripoffs in the last two weeks, while a total of nine helmets have been stolen on post in the past three weeks, the spokesman explained. The helmet holders on foreign motorcycles are of little use since the chin straps on the helmets can be cut and new rings sewed on to make the helmets useable again, he added.

The spokesman recommended that riders take their helmets into their offices with them.

Save the children

The 20 mph school zone speed limit is in effect on school days as follows: from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and between the hours of 1:30 p.m. and 3:45 p.m. The speed limit is also in effect any other time children are present.

Housing gets boost

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — A variable housing allowance (VHA) for CONUS-based servicemembers highlights the Nunn-Warner Amendment recently approved by Congress. The amendment, attached to a bill affecting military officer strengths, was signed into law by the President Monday.

The VHA program, DA personnel officials say, is designed to help pay part of the housing costs not met by the current basic allowance for quarters (BAQ). The new allowance takes effect Oct. 1 if the Department of Defense (DoD) decides to start payments.

Under a compromise worked out in a conference committee, DoD has optional authority to pay the allowance during FY 81 which begins Oct. 1. However, beginning in FY 82, VHA becomes an entitlement which is to be funded with federal money and paid to servicemembers.

According to DA officials, BAQ under the new program will not be reduced for any servicemember, but some military personnel will receive more housing money. Officials add the variable allowance will also benefit servicemembers assigned overseas but with families living in CONUS.

VHA will be paid based on an index of 115 percent of authorized BAQ and average housing cost indexes for CONUS areas, officials say. Housing costs survey forms have been sent out by DoD which will help determine an average cost for housing in sections of the country. According to officials, CONUS will be sectioned into military areas and assigned an housing cost index. These indexes will be used to determine VHA payments. Pay grade will also be a factor for VHA.

Servicemembers will receive the difference between the average cost of housing and 115 percent of BAQ. If the average cost of housing is less than 115 percent of BAQ, officials say the servicemember will get only the normal BAQ entitlement.

For example, a servicemember draws $100 BAQ, and DoD has determined the average cost of housing in his area for his grade to be $200. The amount of $115 (115 percent of $100 is $115) is subtracted from the $200 (average housing cost). Eighty-five dollars is the difference which would be added to the normal BAQ entitlement of $100. Thus, the servicemember would receive a total of $185 for housing.

Other areas affected by the Nunn-Warner Amendment include:

- Lifting of the 10 cent per mile PCS reimbursement rate. The new rate will be determined by DoD.
- An increase in subsistence allowance (BAS) of 10 percent.
- An increase in flight pay. For enlisted crew members, the increase is based on time in service and pay grade, while officer pilots will get a 25 percent increase.
- A save pay provision for officers who served before as enlisted members or warrant officers. In effect, the provision guarantees that officers in this category will not lose any pay in accepting a commission appointment.
- The PCS, BAS and flight pay increases took effect Sept. 1, 1980.

Handicapped parking changes

ATLANTA — Certain disabled veterans as well as other handicapped persons in Georgia are affected by a new law which went into effect July 1, 1980 making it a misdemeanor, punishable by a $40 fine for anyone other than a qualified handicapped person to occupy a parking space which is designated as being for "handicapped only," but Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler feels the new law is incomplete.

Under the law, the Department of Public Safety will issue a "Handicapped Parking Permit" to qualified persons upon payment of a $3 fee. Permits will be issued at all locations at which drivers' licenses are issued.

An applicant having an "obvious permanent walking disability" may be issued a permit immediately upon submission of his application to a driver's license examiner; an applicant whose disability is not obvious, or whose disability is only temporary, will be given an affidavit to be completed by a licensed physician, notarized and returned to the examiner for issuance of a permit.

As the law is now written, the familiar red, white and blue Handicapped Veteran (HV) license tags will not be recognized as a handicapped parking permit. And that's the part of the law that Wheeler wants improved. "A veteran whose disabilities are so severe as to qualify him for a specially adapted automobile and an HV tag should be allowed to park that car in a 'Handicapped Only' parking space without having to pay a fee and obtain a special permit," he said.

Wheeler plans to recommend to the Georgia General Assembly in January that the law be amended so as to exempt those veterans displaying HV vehicle license tags or DV (disabled veteran) tags by recognizing such tags as prima facie evidence of meeting disability requirements and, consequently, as permits to use the specially-marked parking spaces.

The HV tags are provided free to those veterans whose service-connected disabilities qualify them for a special auto-purchase grant from the Veterans Administration. The DV tags are purchased by disabled veterans whose disabilities are not rated service-connected.

Buy tickets first lest price rises

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — From now on when you plan to fly on official travel, get your requirements to your transportation office as soon as possible. Even a day's delay may mean a jump in fare of $10 or more.

According to military traffic management command (MTMC) officials, airline deregulation allows airlines to file fare changes on one day's notice or less. The fare charged is the one in effect at the time a ticket is issued — not the fare which may have been quoted earlier.

Travelers should plan their trips so schedules will not have to be changed and tickets reissued. Any change in original flight or some part of a multiple flight schedule means DA will have to pay any increase in fare after the original ticket was issued.

Early planning and advance reservations may also mean tickets can be purchased at discount fares, MTMC officials stress.

Vote rally held

A kickoff rally for Armed Forces Voters Week (last week) was held in the Marshall Auditorium Friday. Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander, spoke to the audience of commanders and voting officers on the need to get the soldiers to vote in this fall's general election.

The post commander said that in his travels around the country as a representative of the U.S. Army Infantry Center he has been told graduates of the basic course for officers are great infantry tacticians, but they don't always make the best mess officers, supply officers and voting officers. "Anyone who thinks an assignment as a voting officer is a ho-hum assignment is wrong, dead wrong. It is a very important assignment for the country, the soldiers and the Army," he said.

He stressed the importance of voting saying that while soldiers and commanders gripe about the state of things, the best voice of change we have is our vote. He commented that those who do not vote have no reason to gripe since they did not have a hand in deciding representation in the government.

He went on to explain that the military voting block could be a powerful voice. He cited the million potential military voters who could become a voice in changing the political scene in America. "I want all of Fort Benning to vote. I don't care how you vote, only that you do vote," he said. "Everybody on post should have the opportunity to vote, to make decisions on how their lives and their children's lives will be affected. There are big stakes involved and we shouldn't jeopardize it," he added.

Maj. Gen. Grange noted the importance of a single vote and how all votes are judged equally. "An E-1's vote is as good as a brigade commander's vote."

Thrust of changes mold unit strength

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Army Chief of Staff, Gen. E. C. Meyer, announced Friday a number of major changes, particularly at the small unit level, directed at increasing readiness and developing cohesion for the Army of the 80's.

"Small units — companies, platoons, squads, teams and crews — are the cutting edge of the fighting force," Meyer stated at the mid-morning briefing for the Pentagon press corps. "Personnel readiness of these units depends heavily on the length of time soldiers spend in their units and their loyalty to their fellow soldiers and their units as a whole.

"Last year when I took over I said the key problem that faces the Army today is the ability for us to be able to man the force," Meyer stated. "I continue to feel that is a key problem as we look at the future — the ability to have both the quantity of the manpower we need and to insure that we have the skills available to take care of the equipment as it comes in."

Increase stability

He asserted that, "in manning the force, it's not just a question of 'can you get the people.' To me, there are three basic aspects to it.

"One is accessions (recruiting); two is the training — the individual training once we get them; and three is insuring we have a system that brings them up to full readiness, keeps them together and maximizes their combat capability."

To address those aspects, the general outlined a number of planned changes which "should further increase stability and enhance cohesion."

Planned changes

He added some of the package changes are being done now and others are still being studied. To increase stability, he said the Army plans to:

- Eliminate the practice of bringing units up to strength for exercises and begin a policy where units will "come as they are."
- Reduce by attrition oversea strengths to 100 percent (currently, oversea units are manned above 100 percent of their authorizations).
- Eliminate overstrengths which had been common practice in certain selected units.
- Develop a test plan to rotate entire companies of soldiers as a possible alternative to the present individual replacement system.
- Recruit new soldiers to support the company rotation idea.
- Direct that officers commanding companies and similar sized units remain in command for 18 months.
- Reduce practices which excused certain units from personnel assignment ceilings or which gave special assignment priority for personnel to these units.
- Make standard the way Army combat units are manned and equipped.

Closer relationships

Meyer commented that changes planned to "create a climate for closer relationships of soldiers to each other and to the unit," or personal and unit cohesion, include:

- Permit periodic changes in the times when officers will be eligible for promotion to first ))eutenant, captain and major to help in overcoming officer shortages at that level.
- The wearing of insignia for soldiers in basic training as soon as their future unit assignment is known and permit the wear of distinctive accoutrements once they arrive at their permanent station.
- Developing additional peacetime awards and unique uniform items.
- Looking at pay proposals that more clearly reflect degrees of experience and responsibility to make sure trained leaders are retained.

Berets back?

The Army Chief also expects to make a decision on berets, looking at it from a total Army context, after the next commanders conference scheduled for late October. He added he is leaning toward approving the wearing of berets, eventually to replace the garrison cap, for all soldiers with certain differences to support unit cohesion.

All the measures announced and possibly more, according to Meyer, will be started as soon as details are worked out.

"Enhanced readiness is the focus of Army efforts and we will continue to develop ways to meet that goal," the general concluded.

How Important Is ONE Vote?

In 1645—ONE VOTE gave Oliver Cromwell control of England.
In 1649—ONE VOTE caused Charles I of England to be executed.
In 1776—ONE VOTE gave America the English language instead of German.
In 1839—ONE VOTE elected Marcus Morton Governor of Massachusetts.
In 1845—ONE VOTE brought Texas into the Union.
In 1868—ONE VOTE saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.
In 1923—ONE VOTE gave Adolph Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party.

On November 2, 1980, all 435 members of the House of Representatives, except for those who have announced their retirement, are up for re-election. In the Senate, 34 members will be up for re-election.

New assault strip built

It doesn't look like much more than a dirt road going nowhere in the middle of a field — but it's Benning's new assault airstrip.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, has been working on the dirt airstrip since early August. It's located about seven miles southeast of Lawson Army Airfield on a plot formerly known as Dekkar Strip. It should be operational by Oct. 1.

The 4,200-foot runway will accommodate Air Force C-130s. These planes are the workhorse transports used in moving troops and equipment. Their pilots are required to make so many landings and takeoffs on unimproved airstrips and now they can do it here.

Why here when they're Air Force? Well, according to Lt. Col. Alexis Maas, Directorate of Plans and Training, "This capability will also serve Benning well in Emergency Deployment Readiness Exercises (EDRE).

Units of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion are required to pack up and move out with very little notice and within a specified time frame on an EDRE.

Previously, they drove down to Lawson Army Airfield and stopped there. Now they can train in a more realistic combat situation by convoying out to Dekkar, actually boarding the planes and flying out to Fort Bragg's air assault strip for example.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,300 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,300 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits. I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX. I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve. I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

How much can you make part-time with the Army Reserve?

| | Per Weekend | Per Year |
|---|---|---|
| E-3 with 2+ years | $73.08 | $1231.41 |
| 3+ years | 76.04 | 1248.03 |
| E-4 with 3+ years | 80.52 | 1360.44 |
| 4+ years | 86.80 | 1459.35 |
| E-5 with 4+ years | 89.24 | 1510.38 |
| 6+ years | 95.08 | 1602.36 |

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

Choppers assist in bridging the big Chattahoochee

The loud whir of rotor blades interrupted the normally quiet skies over Fort Benning last weekend as three CH-54 Sky Cranes made their way above and across post to Cat Field.

The Sky Cranes were from the 1160 Tranportation Company, Georgia National Guard of Savannah. They were here to work with components of the 72nd Engineer Company and Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade on an exercise to transport and construct a bridge across the Chatahoochee River. They would later use the bridge to cross the river.

At Coddy Landing

Before the exercise, members of the 72nd Engineer Company's Bridge Platoon moved all the needed equipment, parts of a complete ribbon bridge and two class 70 rafts, to Cat Field. The Class 70 rafts can each carry 70 tons of cargo. At Cat Field the platoon readied the cargo with slingloads and waited for the large, locust like helicopters to arrive.

The helicopters quickly arrived, making a loud, low droning noise as they rose over the horizon. All seemed to be going well as they approached Coddy Landing on the Chatahoochee, the site of the exercise.

River crossed

Suddenly, from 100 feet in the sky, one of raft's ramp bays fell from the helicopter to the ground. The problem was with the helicopter and now one of the rafts could not be used. The damage to the ramp bay was extensive, according to Lt. Richard A. Havrisko, 72nd Engineer Company. "It was damaged beyond use, so we were unable to use one the two class 70 rafts," he said.

The guardsmen, supported by the 'Forever Forward Brigade' soldiers, worked around the difficulties - the mission taking priority over the problems. During the mission, soldiers from Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry,crossed the river in 15-man-assault-rafts to secure the far bank.

With the both sides of the river secure, the engineers breached the river with the ribbon bridge and assembled the remaining class 70 raft. When they were finished, the 58th Infantry soldiers returned, their mission complete.

Uniform on way

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Wearing civilian maternity clothes to work will soon be a thing of the past for pregnant soldiers, according to DA officials. The Army's new maternity service uniform will replace the civilian maternity clothes pregnant soldiers now wear.

According to a spokesman for Fort Benning's Military Clothing and Bookstore, the maternity items are currently available on a special order basis. Both expecting officers and enlisted need to bring a SF form 1034 from their company commander, the spokesman said. The wear policy on this uniform is expected to be in the field at the same time.

The uniform consists of a green, top-length, sleeveless tunic, skirt, slacks and the women's standard white short sleeve shirt with black tab. The shirt will be worn under the tunic with the lower portion unbuttoned if necessary.

The tunic does not have pockets and will be available in five sizes. The skirt and slacks, also available in five sizes, has an elastic waistband and a knitted nylon stretch panel across the upper front. The slacks are straight legged.

According to officials, pregnant enlisted soldiers will be issued the new maternity uniform at no cost. As soon as an enlisted soldier has medical proof of pregnancy, she should take a clothing issue record form to the PX and get two uniforms. Replacement uniforms will be authorized three years from initial issue date.

Pregnant officers must buy their uniforms. Estimated cost of the uniform is: skirt — $8.50, slacks — $10.75, and tunic — $13.75.

According to the wear policy on the new uniform, pregnant soldiers must wear the maternity uniform as the duty uniform after the 24th week of pregnancy until delivery. Commanders, however, may order the pregnant soldier to begin wearing the maternity uniform earlier than the 24th week if her condition is obvious when wearing a normally fitted uniform.

Also, commanders may order maternity uniform wear if the normal duty uniform when worn does not meet Army appearance standards.

The only accessories authorized on the tunic will be the nameplate, say officials.

Items which may be worn with the maternity uniform include:

- Black beret or Army green service hat
- Black pumps or oxfords with the tunic and skirt
- Black pumps, oxfords or jodhpur boots with the tunic and slacks
- Black anklets may be worn when jodhpur boots or oxfords are worn.
- Army green or black raincoat. These outer garments may be worn unbuttoned if necessary.

Sheriff's Target

There are over three million burglaries and housebreakings a year in the United States. That's one every 10 seconds, totaling close to 1.5 million dollars in lost property. During the month of July 1980, there were six incidents of housebreaking here which resulted in a loss of over $600.

Decals needed

Recently, the military police have been stepping-up their enforcement of the post vehicle registration and decal display regulation. Motorists here should remember all privately owned vehicles operated here must be registered with the military police and have a Fort Benning Decal conspicuously displayed on their front and rear bumpers. The decal must be the permanent kind obtained from the military police and must be placed on a metal or other nonporous plate securely attached to vehicles not equipped with bumpers or having small, narrow, rubberized or painted bumpers. Pictured above is a good example of how to display the decals on such vehicles.

Although the maximum punishment for housebreaking and burglary is severe (confinement for five years and 10 years respectively, dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of two-thirds pay and reduction to E-1), it alone does not deter the criminal. PREVENTION is the key word. Most people become targets for housebreaking/burglary by making it too easy for the criminal.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

The following is a list of actions we can take to help prevent housebreakings/burglary.

- Ensure all doors and windows have functional locks.
- Lock your quarters when you leave.
- Don't hide extra door keys outside.
- Report inoperable street lights to the Engineers.
- Don't keep large amounts of cash in your residence.
- When you are away for extended periods of time, stop your mail and newspapers. Have a friend check your quarters frequently and mow your grass if needed.
- Report any unusual or suspicious activity to the military police.
- Mark all your valuables or record their serial numbers.

The actions mentioned above are just a few things that may help prevent a crime. In the event your quarters are unlawfully entered, you should leave everything exactly as you found it and immediately notify the police (Fort Benning: 545-5222, Columbus: 322-7211).

Through our combined efforts we can reduce housebreaking and burglary on post. Engraving pens are available at the Provost Marshal's Office. Their use will make it easier to identify your property if and when found in the possession of a criminal.

If you desire more information on housebreaking and burglary, call the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Section at 545-4164.

Hispanics take on challenges

Fort Benning offers many challenges in leadership and some of these challenges are being met by Hispanics. For CSM Manvel Aponte-Sandoval the challenge lies in his position: command sergeant major for the 1st Infantry Training Brigade (1st ITB). "I have approximately 9,000 soldiers to care for," Aponte said. "I insure that they are properly trained and ready to take their places in U.S. infantry units around the world." Aponte served in Korea with the 65th Infantry Regiment (an all Hispanic unit from Puerto Rico) and in Vietnam.

Maj. Jerome C. Zamora is the executive officer for 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. He has served 14 years, two in Vietnam as a company commander in the 9th Infantry Division.

Except for leading in combat, he considers his present assignment the most challenging in his career. He is concerned with "insuring that the soldiers receive the best possible support without regard to the time of day, or day of week." Zamora advises young soldiers "life in the Army requires dedication at all times, not just when wearing the uniform."

63 years experience

Also, in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade are 1st Sgt. Carlos Pena-Ojeda, 1st Sgt. Frank M. Foronda and MSgt. Eleno Rodriguez. They represent a total of 63 years military experience. Pena-Ojeda of Company D, 2nd Battalion, served three of his 20 years in Vietnam where he earned the Silver and Bronze Stars among other awards. He comes from a military family, his brothers influencing him to join the Army "in order to serve the country," he explained. He sees combat as "the true test for the combat arms." To young soldiers he says "be honest, be proficient, be patriotic, and be proud to be a member of the team that keeps America free."

Challenging jobs

Foronda is with Company E, 6th Battalion. Among his many awards he wears the Silver Star, Bronze Star with V devise and Oak Leaf Cluster and two awards of the Air Medal. He served two of his 23 years of service in Vietnam but finds his job in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade as one of his greatest challenges in the Army. "All the new soldiers," he says, "are right off the block, and 12 weeks later they have completed their first step towards becoming soldiers."

Rodriguez, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, is the Battalion Logistics Coordinator. Rodriguez served two years in Vietnam where he received, among others, the Bronze Star and the Meritorious Service Medal. To him, the training of soldiers is the greatest challenge and responsibility of a non-commissioned officer. "Their lives," he says, "and the security of our country depends on how well we train (them)."

CSM Antonio Cartagena also sees his challenge in the training of soldiers. He has served as a platoon sergeant in training centers at Fort Chaffee, Fort Ord, Fort Gordon, Fort Jackson and here. He is currently the command sergeant major for the 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade. Cartagena recognizes the need for young soldiers to "r mentally and physically prepared for combat and defend our country." Cartagena has served in Kor with the 65th Infantry Regiment, where he earned Silver Star, and Vietnam.

1st Sgt. Julio C. Feliciano is "Top" for Compar A, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry. His challenge is in h position. "This job," he said, "gives you t opportunity to deal with the different problems th today's soldiers have. It gives you satisfaction know that you have accomplished something at t end of the day." Feliciano realizes the importance "providing the best training available" for t soldiers. He has served in Vietnam, and has earn the Bronze Star Medal among other awards.

In The School Brigade (TSB) is 1st Sgt. Rafael Corella. He is one of the few NCOs in the Army hold the position of company commander. His U is B Company, Non-Commissioned Officer School Infantry (NCOSI). Corella, like most of his conten poraries, sees training as the NCO's greates responsibility: "to set the example for them (th young soldier) as to what a soldier and a leade should be all about." To the young soldier he say "you are only as good as you want to be — neve underestimate yourself." Corella has served for 1 years and has earned an assortment of award including the Meritorious Service Medal with Oa Leaf Cluster, Air Medal and ARCOM with two Oa Leaf Clusters.

Basic Skills Education Program

Teaching soldiers English

The Basic Skills Education Program (BSEP) is designed to increase a soldier's English skills: building confident speaking, better understanding of written and oral language, and improvement in reading, writing and military technology for Initial Entry Training.

The program insures literacy for English speaking soldiers and "survival" English skills for non-English speaking soldiers, basically the Hispanic soldiers.

English as a Second Language (ESL) is the portion of BSEP for Hispanic soldiers. The ESL program not only teaches non-English speaking soldiers vocabulary enrichment and American cultural background, but also offers valuable psychological benefits. Military terms, customs, and limited tactics are taught in preparation for their training. In addition, the morale building which comes with the confidence gained through mastery of skills and course completion sets these soldiers well on their way to adjusting to their initial entry training and going on to do well.

Included in these programs are conversation exercises (speaking and listening), reading and writing, sentence patterns and structure, grammar and the use of verbs.

These classes vary in size from eight to 15 soldiers per instructor. This allows for individualized instruction and exchange of ideas. The programs were started here in the Sand Hill area in October 1978. As of July 24, (of this year) 519 soldiers have participated in BSEP, and 493 soldiers have completed ESL. The Education Center Staff of BSEP consists of six females and one male, each with a Master's Degree in Education and a good deal of experience in the field.

VA benefits offered

Widows, or widowers, of certain disabled veterans should check into the possibility that they may be eligible to receive valuable education benefits from the Veterans Administration.

According to Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler, spouses of veterans who died from service-connected causes, or who suffer total and permanent disability due to military service, are eligible to receive up to 45 months of schooling. Children of these veterans are also eligible for similar education benefits if they are between 18 and 26 years of age.

The termination date for eligible spouses to use these benefits occurs ten years from the date the veteran was "found to have a total and permanent disability," or ten years from the date of the veteran's service-connected death.

Spouses who plan to take apprenticeship on-the-job training or correspondence courses are eligible for the ten-year period or until Oct. 24, 1982, whichever date is later.

More information is available at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Recall

Stereo turntales can be shocking

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Approximately 5,600 stereo turntables are being recalled by their manufacturer, Philips High Fidelity Laboratories, Ltd., of Knoxville, Tenn., because they may pose a shock hazard to consumers.

The recall is being conducted in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Philips is a subsidiary of Magnavox Consumer Electronics Co. of Knoxville, Tenn.

The turntables were wired improperly so that "safety fuses," which serve as circuit breakers, do not operate. In the event of a short circuit, consumers could receive a severe electrical shock by touching any metal part on the turntable or any metal components connected to the turntable. No injuries or deaths have been reported to the company or to CPSC.

The recall includes Philips turntable models 22AF685/44B and 22AF685/94B. The turntables have been sold nationwide since March, 1979, for approximately $140 in stereo-equipment retail outlets. The model numbers are printed on a label affixed to the bottom of the turntable base.

Owners should contact the dealer from whom the unit was purchased or the Philips Consumer Affairs Department to make arrangements for free repairs. The company's toll-free number is 800-251-9104;ask for consumer affairs.

Anyone wishing to verify the model numbers should contact CPSC's toll-free hotline at 800-638-8326.

Safer skies class' topic

By T. A. Sabel

The first graduates of Fort Benning Flying Club's pilot proficiency program received their certificates at Lawson Army Airfield Sept. 4 from Lt. Col. Millard Burke, commander of Lawson Army Airfield.

The program for licenced pilots is being sponsored by the flying club to promote safety in the air. Three hours of dual flight instruction as well as safety meetings make up the annual Federal Aviation Administration directed program.

During the first hour the pilot and the qualified flight instructor work on maneuvers in the air such as stalls and steep turns. For the second hour they work on take-offs and landings on different types of airstrips. Flying by instruments takes up the third and final hour of dual flight instruction to check the pilot's proficiency of flying by instruments alone.

The safety meetings are held on te average of every three months, according to Herb Emery, FAA accident prevention counselor and assistánt flight instructoer with the Fort Benning Flying Club.

Burke sees the program as a step in the right direction for safety in the skies. "The FAA has recognized that a problem exists for pilot's safety and this program is hoping to develop a program the community will accept," he said.

The Lawson Army Airfield commander also sees the need for annual re-evaluation of pilots. He stated that getting a pilot's licence is like getting a licence for a car since the pilot is only tested once on his proficiency as a pilot. "You could be 50-years-old and still flying even though the last time you were tested was when you first got your licence, when you were 20," he explained.

Those receiving certificates were: SGM Frank Massa, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade; Lt. Col. Lott Lawson III, Aviation Division of DPT; retired Col. Hal. J. Gibson and his son David, Columbus; Bud Schuman, chief flight instructor at the flying club; Herb Emery and retired Col John B. Wine, Columbus.

YOUR BEST MOVE COULD BE NO MOVE AT ALL.

Some people spend all their lives looking for a job they'll like but never find it. You might have found yours already—in the Army. Listen to what Sgt. John Jackiewicz has to say about staying in.

"The Army's just like any other career—if you like it, you stick with it. A lot of guys get out and within a year they're right back in. They just don't realize all the benefits they had until they start paying for them. If you've got something good going, stick with it."

You don't have to leave the Army to get ahead.

Your Reenlistment NCO has all the facts on how you can advance in your present MOS or cross over into something you've always wanted to do.

If you're going to make any move at all, make it a walk to the office of your Reenlistment NCO.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

Do neighbors hear you scr

By Deb Hilgeman

SSgt. Jones puts on a good front. His buddies think he's a great guy and he's always had an outstanding military record. His mother brags about him to her friends. But his wife tells a different side of the story, "He's a violent, explosive man who can fly into a rage over nothing."

Few people outside of the immediate family usually know when a man is a wife-beater. Yet spouse abuse is a problem that occurs in all walks of life and has been destroying families for centuries.

As bad as the problem is today (according to recent FBI reports, a woman is physically abused every 18 seconds in this country) it used to be much, much worse. For instance, during the reign of Ivan the Terrible in Russia, the state church issued the Household Ordinance which spelled out how a man could most effectively beat his wife. A husband could even murder his wife if it was for "disciplinary reasons."

That worked for about 50 years until one day the Russian women got fed up and went on a husband-murdering rampage. Unfortunately, there WAS a law against wives murdering their husbands and the women were buried alive, standing upright with only their heads above the ground. Guards made sure they stayed that way until they died, which reportedly could take more than a week.

Even today domestic violence results in 25 percent of murders committed in this country every year. But social change is inevitable. While wives are overwhelmingly the victims of assaults, husbands are the homicide victims as often as the wives are. Highly publicized recent cases of battered wives finally killing their husbands out of fear and desperation are even resulting in court room acquittals.

Why does violence erupt in so many homes?

Victim

Battered background

Low self-esteem

Learned helplessness (hopelessness, shock, entrapment)

Role entrapment

No escape (no money, fear, shame, no skills, no psychological fortitude)

NO PLACE TO GO

Abuser

Violent background

"Masculine attributes" (distorted) such as violence, strength, situation control

Insecure, feelings of inadequacy, such as being obsessed with a masculine image

Poor coping patterns (especially in frustrating experiences)

Projection and transference used as defense mechanisms

Poor ability to express self verbally (especially regarding fear, insecurity, frustration)

Uses alcohol and drugs as a disclaimer

According to Mary Behrend, a social worker at Army Community Services (ACS) here, wife-beaters and their victims are often doing what they learned from their parents.

"Many of these husbands and wives come from abused backgrounds. The husband may become absive because he was often abused as a child and he's learned this response. Chances are his wife was beaten as a child or saw her mother being beaten by her father and still has the mental attitudes she had then. She has that same feeling of helplessness, even if she's 34 years old," the social worker explained.

Insecurity and lack of self-esteem are traits shared by both the abuser and his wife, according to Behrend. These traits can open the door to abuse and it can happen in even the "best families." In fact, researchers have found that the greater the educational level, the greater the acceptance of marital violence.

But as Behrend pointed out, "Most of the abuse we see in the Army is among high visibility people. Lower ranking soliders are more reliant on social systems where they and their problems are noticed and recorded. That doesn't mean higher ranks are not affected; it's only easier for them to cover up. A private beats his wife senseless and takes to her the Emergency Room at Martin Army Hospital (MAH); a major sends his wife to a private doctor's office and no one ever hears about it.

Model soldiers

"Because of feelings of inadequacy or insecurity, the abuser may work very, very hard at being a good soldier and be successful in his job. The stress and strain of maintaining a consistently high level of achievement can be his undoing. He becomes frustrated when he fails to meet his standards and takes it out on his wife. The key word is STRESS. Whether it is a drill sergeant, a battalion commander or a bank president, when stress is combined with those negative traits, you have a possible abuse situation," she continued.

The social worker said abuse usually surfaces early in a marriage and beatings may occur once a week or once a year, but however often it happens, violence tends to escalate. "If a husband slaps his wife during an argument she has a tendancy to say, 'It won't happen again' but it probably will. The pattern is that it will continue and that it will continue to get worse."

Behrend advises couples to seek marriage counselling and find out what is triggering violent situations before they get worse. Capt. Edward James is a clinical social worker at Benning's Community Mental Health Activity (CMHA) who treats couples identified as having a problem with spouse abuse.

A vicious cycle

He says battering usually follows a cycle which can be broken into three phases. Phase one, which lasts from days to months, is a stage of increased tension. Phase two, a short-lived crises stage, is the actual acute battering. Phase three is the loving stage: "I'm sorry, dear, it will never happen again." Then back to phase one until the next outbreak of violence. Said James, "It's my job to break that cycle."

Sports

Doughboys face old rival

The Doughboys will kick-off their 1980 campaign at home tomorrow against Carson-Newman College (kickoff at 7:30 p.m).

Although the Doughboys will be playing Carson-Newman's junior varsity, several members of the varsity team will make the trip (and possibly see action). The varsity players will be using the game to hone their skills for their season opener next weekend.

As for the Doughboys, they go into this game with both high hopes and high doubts. The high hopes are because they went 6-4-1 last year and the high doubts are because of injuries suffered in practice and scrimmages. Also, their defense will look totally alien to veteran Doughboy fans.

'79 opener a tie

The Doughboys opened last year against Carson-Newman's varsity and fought to a 27-27 tie. That was the beginning of one of the most successful seasons in Doughboy history as fans flocked to see the Doughboys win six games after losing nine the year before. However, because of the transitional ways of the military, the Doughboys have lost their entire defensive unit this year except for one player. That player was moved to a new position, so the entire defense will be playing in new positions for the first time.

Coach Ralph Santaliz said, "Sure, we'll make mistakes the first game on defense. That's to be expected with 11 guys who have never played together. But after they get the hang of things, which I expect to be around the third game, they should play a real team oriented type of defense. They have the skill, now they just need the experience of a couple games under their belts."

Hall gets partner

The Doughboys also have their highs and lows on offense. College All-American quarterback, Leamon Hall, returns to direct the nucleus of last year's (at times explosive) offense after spending a couple weeks at the Dallas Cowboys rookie tryout camp in Thousand Oaks, Cal. this summer. He also spent some time with his father-in-law, Homer Smith, the former Army coach, over the summer. The results should be a better than ever Doughboy passing attack.

When Hall was at West Point he teamed up with Brundidge to rewrite the West Point record book for passing and receptions. This year Brundidge will be teaming up with Hall to showcase the Doughboy's strong point, passing.

The running game should also have an added advantage because of the defense's fear of the pass.The running game did suffer one setback during the preseason. The Doughboys leading rusher from last year, LeRoy Benson, broke his ankle in three places and will be lost for the season. Although the Doughboys suffered three or four other injuries in practices and scrimmages, most of them are expected to play.

One of the real surprises of the preseason has been the play of the second teams. On a team that didn't look to have a high quality or quantity of reserves, the second teams have played the first teams tough all the way. If the Doughboys are going to repeat or do better than last season, the second teams are going to have to continue to pull through.

Last year the Doughboy's leading rusher was LeRoy Benson. He suffered an injury this year but the Doughboys are pinning their hopes on Greg King (45) to come through in the clutch.

1980 schedule

The Doughboy's schedule for the rest of the season will look like this:

Sept. 27 Fort Bragg(away) 3:30 p.m.

Golfers go for $200,000

Once a year the big stars in golf come to Columbus to participate in the Southern Open. This year is no exception. The open, to be held Oct. 1-5 at Green Island Country Club, has over 65 professionals competing for $200,000 in prize money.

Leading the list of professionals is a native Georgian, Larry Nelson. Nelson won this year's Atlanta Classic and earned more than $280,000 last year. That was good enough for second place on the money winner's list.

Other big names that have committed to play include Johnny Miller, Jerry Pate, Forest "Fuzzy" Fezler, Miller Barber, George Archer, Ed Fiori and Tommy Aaron.

Some of the marshalls for the open came from Fort Benning. For their hard work during the four days of golfing they receive a green Southern Open marshall's jacket.

There are two ticket packages available. The better of the two, the Golf Nut Special, is on sale through Sept. 22 and goes for half price. For $20 the package includes five coupons that are redeemable at the main gate. This means that you have five tickets to use during the tournament. The sales generated by the Golf Nut Special will benefit the Metropolitan Boys Club of Columbus.

The other type of ticket available will be the Clubhouse Badge. This will entitle the bearer to clubhouse and grounds privelages for one. The cost of the Clubhouse Badge is $40.

Armchair Sports

Post level sports vs intramurals

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning has a unique way of running their sports programs. Without much interference with day to day Army duties, Fort Benning fields competitive teams in boxing, basketball, football and softball.

In the Aug. 25 issue of the Army Times an article appeared under the heading "Return to Post-Level Sports Opposed." Staff writer Larry Carney wrote that most major commanders oppose resumption of post-level competition. The story was referring to an Adjutant General's report.

The argument by most major commanders was post-level teams take up too much of soldier's duty time. Current Army policy allows only two hours daily on sports, whether they are post-level or intramural.

However, Fort Benning is a training post where Soldiers are not given special duty just because they are participating on post-level teams due to the emphasis on training. Every coach I have talked to has always backed that statement.

Last year, the football team went 6-4-1. The men's basketball team took second place in the TRADOC tournament. The men's softball team took the TRADOC championship just last month. The women's basketball team went undefeated much of the season before suffering key injuries and being eliminated in the TRADOC tournament. The boxing team has suffered only one loss and one tie.

Intramural sports are important. That doesn't mean we can't have successful post-level teams without taking away from the military objective. It takes dedication, hard work and long hours by a lot of people to pull off any sporting event. All soldiers ask for is a little support and maybe their name in the post paper once in a while.

Other major commanders would do well to take a look at the way Ralph Santaliz runs athletics here (and the way Maj. Gen. Grange supports them). He does it without ignoring the military objective. He makes sure all the people working for him take into acoount the military objective as well as the team's success.

There is room for both intramural and post-level teams and there is a successful, proven way to do it. Look at Fort Benning and see what we have. Many post commanders don't allow their posts to have the teams that we have. Sometimes you have to look outside the world of Fort Benning to realize how lucky we really are.

Boxers take 2nd

Fort Benning's boxing team continued its successful fighting in matches at Comer Auditorium in the Bibb City neighborhood of Columbus Saturday night. The boxers came in second place out of five teams while taking three out of six matches. Muscogee County's boxers, who defeated Benning in their previous match here, came out the winners of the tournament.

The Doughboy victors were led by Gregory Staten, who beat his opponent so badly in the first 1:28 of the fight that the referee was forced to stop the fight. The referee also stopped Darrin Turman's fight in the third round to make Turman the victor. Dwayne Edwards also decisioned his opponent.

The Doughboy's Broderick Williams lost his match by a bitterly contested decision. Donald Lawson also lost his fight by decision and Timothy Russell's opponent won after the referee stopped the fight in the first round.

The Doughboy's next match will be in Smith Station, Ala. tomorrow against Montgomery's and Tuscogee's teams.

Their next fight after that will be at home next Friday at Briant Wells Fieldhouse on Ingersoll Street. Fort Benning's boxers will be taking on fighters from Tuscogee, Ala. and Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala.

Hunting rules important

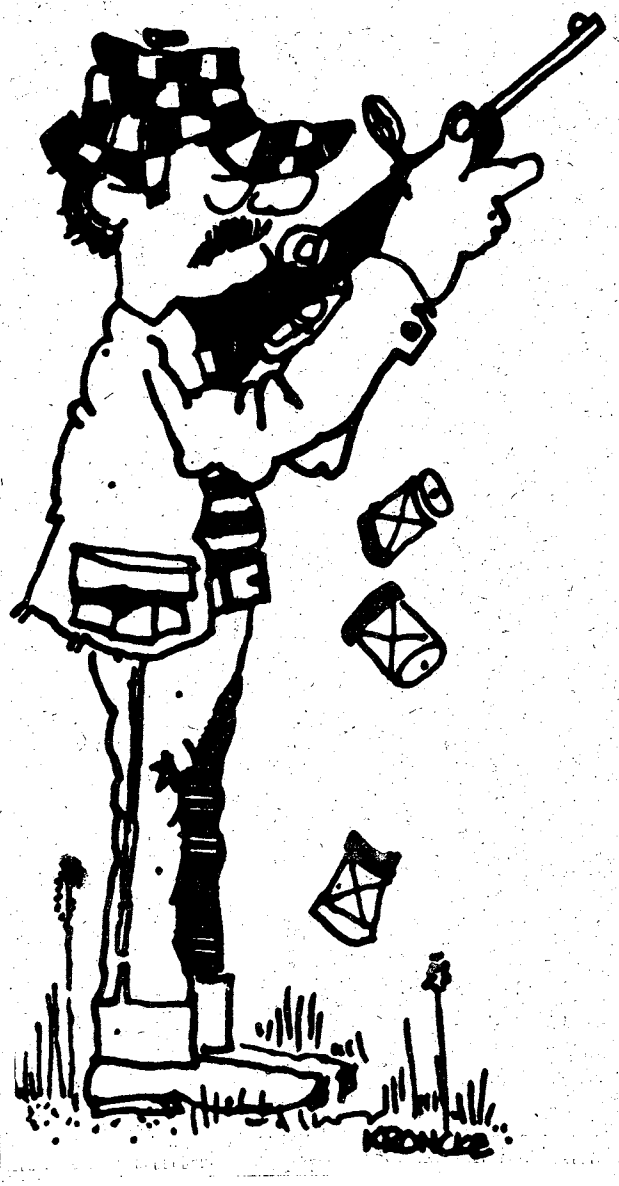
Of all the sports in which firearms are used, hunting is perhaps the most popular. According to the National Rifle Association, more than 14 million Americans buy hunting licenses every year, and the popularity of the sport continues to grow. The increasing number of hunters in the field makes the potential for hunting accidents very high.

The key to hunting safety is proper handling of guns. Of the cardinal rules for firearms safety there are three which, if faithfully practiced, will prevent firearm accidents.

- Treat every gun as if it were loaded.
- Always point the muzzle in a safe direction.
- Be sure of your target.



When in the field with other hunters, you must carry your gun in such a manner that it is ready for instant use, yet is not threatening to others. To insure this margin of safety, there are a number of good gun carries that are commonly used.

For example, one carry is to grip the small of the gun stock with the trigger hand while cradling the barrel in the crook of the other arm. Another gun carry is to hold the small of the stock with the trigger hand and the fore-end of the stock with the other hand. Or simply hold the gun in a shoulder carry. No matter which carry you use always carry the gun with its safety "on" and keep it "on" until you have positively identified your target as game and are ready to shoot. You must keep your finger outside the trigger guard until ready to shoot and must keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction and under control at all times.

Hunting with a group, particularly when hunting for small game, can be dangerous for two reasons; the close proximity of others and the unpredictable flight of the game when flushed. Hunting under these conditions requires discipline and a constant awareness of others in the party. To insure the safety of the group, the following precautions and considerations must be carefully observed by all members in the group. Agree who will shoot and when — avoid confusion and the possibility of one hunter swinging his gun in the direction of another while leading game. Each member of the party should understand and observe the limits of his or her zone of fire.

It is far better to let the game go than to jeopardize the life of a companion. When a bird breaks, it may fly back toward the hunters or a rabbit may break and dart back between the hunters. Be ready to hold fire in case the path of the game comes near others. Keep track of others in your party and don't be in a hurry to get the shot off.

The act of hunting generates a tremendous amount of emotional tension. The hunter's senses become keenly tuned to locating game and the anticipation of shooting as the game is flushed. The hunter is ready to react at the snap of a branch, a rustle in the brush, or a movement caught out of the corner of the eye. The hunter must learn to be calm and in control at all times in order to hit only the intended game.

Football underway for post youngsters

More than 400 helmeted boys and pom-pom waving cheerleaders gathered at Doughboy Stadium Saturday to officially kick-off another season of Flag/Tackle football. The teams are sponsored by Benning's Youth Activities (YA).

Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander, opened the season by throwing out the first football to one of the young ballplayers. Then, each team was introduced to the crowd while proud parents and coaches looked on.

There are four divisions of youth football this year. The Grasshopper Division (6 to 8-year-olds), the Termite Division (9 to 10-year-olds), Pee Wee Division (11 to 12-year-olds) and the Midget Division (13 to 16-year-olds). The Grasshopper Division is the only flag football division. After games, coaches are reminded to give Sharon Cook at Youth Activities a call (545-3070) or come by her office so she can record the scores for publication in the BAYONET. Football scores are already in on some of the first games played Saturday. Here are the results available at press time:

Is this trip really necessary?

By Brad Byers
U.S. Department of Energy

The best way to save gas is to stay out of your car.

Without becoming a recluse, you can cut down on your driving enough to save a bundle of money if you go about it systematically.

First, keep a driving record. It can be a detailed record that would pass an audit by a CPA, or just a small notebook of mileage and gallons entries each time you buy gas. You'll get more benefit if you record the purpose of the longer trips and for a few weeks jot down every trip you make.

With the record, you'll be able to tell how much of your driving is essential. Then you can set a realistic target for reduction.

For many people, a 20 percent mileage reduction for the first three months makes sense. Until you have a month-by-month record for a full year, you won't be able to make steady reductions because your pattern of driving varies too much with the seasons.

It may help to divide your trips into categories such as:

- Work
- Home (shopping, school, errands)
- Recreation

Work

Only you can tell whether it is essential that you drive alone to work every day. But before you decide it is impossible to carpool and is unreasonable to take the bus, bike, or walk, ask yourself: "If the gasoline were $10 a gallon, would I still drive?"

Even one day a week of carpooling or riding the bus could cut your work driving by nearly 20 percent.

Home

Household driving is easy to reduce, but only if you keep records. Without records, it is like trying to lose weight without ever stepping on the scales: you could spend a lot of time fooling yourself.

If you chauffer the kids to school or to little league, work out a ride-sharing routine with a neighbor. Or, if it's safe, insist the kids ride their bikes three days a week, or that they walk every Friday.

If you run numerous errands for yourself or the children, set some limits. Like: only one trip a day, or three days a week, or only between four and five p.m.

When shopping for unusual items, call ahead to find a store that has them. Then jot down the miles you saved by not making a useless trip. And congratulate yourself.

You also can save gas by combining erands into one trip. A car that has been warmed up gets better mileage than one that is cold. Even if you have to make six stops on a trip, you get better mileage with the warmed-up car, and you'll probably save miles as well.

Recreation

Don't eliminate recreation. But do set a goal of reducing the amount of gas you burn. If you own a boat, reduce your use of it (and the drive to the lake) by one fourth. And reward yourself with a dinner out in a nearby restaurant or a visit with friends.

Goals and rewards are very important, especially if there are several drivers in the household. You may want to keep a chart in the kitchen to record your progress. And, if there are teenage drivers, you may need to make the rewards fairly substantial.

CFC drive scheduled

It's time again for the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). This year the fund raising campaign will run from Sept. 18 to Nov. 4.

This year's goal is the same as last year's — $325,000. Officials give the almost unchanged post population as reason for not changing the goal. A kickoff breakfast will be held at the Officers Supper Club Tuesday at 8 a.m. Chief of Staff, Col. Bobby J. Harris is scheduled to be the main speaker.

CFC is a combined effort of all U.S. government employees, including both military and civilian personnel. The campaign is held to support the United Way, National Health organizations, and international and national service agencies whch provide services to the local community.

Col. Richard W. McKee, deputy post commander, is this year's campaign chairman and Col. Daniel S. Rickard, director of Personnel and Community Activities, will be hs assistant. According to Jim Schoonover, post CFC project officer, "The aim this year is to make sure everyone on post, military and civilian, as well as the federal agencies in Columbus and Phenix City, are contacted and are afforded every opportunity to contribute."

From last year's contributions of $325,000; 77.5 percent went to the United Way, 15.8 percent went to the National Health agencies and 5.2 percent went to the Inrernational Service agencies. This year 56 different agencies will be helped through the CFC fund drive.

Movie Review

Bo, Bolero both tens

By Bill Powell

"10" would be a rather notable movie, even if it didn't have pin-up Bo Derek as one of its stars.

It features a rather credible story of a middle-aged composer (Dudley Moore) trying to pull himself out of that useless feeling he has as a middle-aged man. In his search for a way to pull out of this feeling he becomes obsessed with finding a girl he has seen only twice, once on the way to her wedding and the other time at the wedding itself. His long suffering ladyfriend (played creditably by Julie Andrews) has to put up with his antics and eccentricities as he seeks to turn himself around. The composer is a rather bumbling man who falls, trips and is generally a klutz even before he drinks as heavily as he does. Eventually he catches up with the perfect "10" he has seen and the results are different.

That's all I'll say about the remainder of the plot. You'll have to see it for yourself to find out what happens. I had a thoroughly enjoyable time watching Dudley Moore's antics as the composer and class him as quite funny with his pratfalls and other unusual bits he does to make his character that much more klutzy.

The actors do well and it is a night I believe you'll enjoy. The movie is produced by Blake Edwards, the same man who brought you the "Pink Panther" movies. The movie "10", while with less antics than the "Pink Panther" series, is a night of good clean (for the most part) fun, but it does deserve its "R" rating. A movie that will make you want to go home and play Ravell's "Bolero" again and again. I rate this movie four stars ★ ★ ★ ★.

Editor's note: "10" is the feature tonight at the Main Post Theater (number 1) starting at 8:30 p.m.

Spouse abuse

reestablish her marriage? Does she want independence?' or whatever. Trained counselors at the shelter help her see her options but the woman makes her own choices," Behrend said.

If a woman decides to seek refuge at the shelter, ACS notifies the husband's commander who will only tell the man involved that his wife and children are "safe and secure." Behrend said that when a husband finds his wife is at the shelter, his main reaction is embarrassment. "Once the man knows that other people are aware of his problem, he figures he may as well deal with it since he can't cover it up. At this point, change is almost inevitable. Some of the husbands act relieved that they've gotten out of the trap while others act very surly and arrogant," she noted.

James said if a couple is willing to work at therapy, the majority will keep their union intact. "Most of the couples involved in abuse can't talk to each other or even listen to what the other person is saying. Once they start to open up, a typical response is, 'I didn't know you felt that way!' "

He pointed out, however, that not all marriages are salvageable. "I never advise divorce because no one has the right to tell a wife, 'He abused you so you should leave him'. But if a couple undergoes therapy and realistically decides that their wisest option is to separate then I help them part as friends. Divorce therapy is just as important as marriage therapy."

Even though it may be buried under harsh words and outbreaks of violence, love is often the bonding agent that holds the husband and wife together. "Some people see this as a sick love but it's not," James explained. "It's genuine love and you can't judge a person because he or she acts differently than you would."

Behrend agrees that couples plagued with frustration and physical abuse are not usually in a loveless marriage and concluded, "These marriages presently have a big problem but have the potential of being good marriages. All it takes is proper therapy and the pattern can be broken."

Who's who changed

Giving credit where credit is due. The BAYONET gave credit to SSgt. Ernest Potts as being the Nuclear, Biological and Chemical NCO for 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry in last week's NBC article. We would like it known that SSgt. Royce Dale Norrod is the battalion's NBC NCO and that Potts, although he works with Norrod, was at the new facility to undergo training only.

Crimes and consequences

He was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for 130 days, forfeiture of $299 a month for four months and a Bad Conduct Discharge.

WFBG Highlights

Chaplain, TV magazine aired

By Bill Powell

WFBG-TV has another week of television and radio programming for you and your dependents. Our longtime viewers are aware that WFBG can be seen on Channel 5 in Bldg. 4 and on Channel 13 on Alert Cable in on-post housing.

WFBG is currently half radio and half TV. The station starts out broadcasting television programs at 8 a.m. and continues until 2 p.m. At 2 p.m. the station puts up color bars and time, and in effect, becomes a radio station until 6 p.m. when it leaves the air. It's really a convenience for those spouses unable to tear themselves away from the television programs and get a little housework done.

If you stay until WFBG goes off the air you'll hear all kinds and types of music and special programming. You'll hear about what's going on on-post and all the latest music from TRADOC and AIRS in Washington, D.C. That's why WFBG's slogan is "Your station with a difference", and it's hoped you'll tune in to see AND hear that difference. The following are highlights of next week's schedule:

- "Stillwell Road" offers you a look at the construction of a highway through lots of obstacles and under enemy fire. You'll see soldiers put forth heroic effort to accomplish their goal in this historically interesting program.
- "Soldier's TV Magazine" covers a number of topics of interest to soldiers in the field and at their desks. Topics covered are: Black History, 82nd Airborne, ROTC, MILPERCEN Reports and Army support for the Winter Olympics.
- "The Big Picture-Basic Combat Training" brings you into the heart of training for the new soldier and gives you an idea of what training is like now and how the new soldier gets combat ready.
- "The Chaplain in the Army Community" lets you see the wide variety of activities that a chaplain engages in when dealing with the personal lives of sooldiers and their dependents.
- Music and information time is from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. and has a couple of specials you may like to listen for. These include the movie soundtrack of the hit play "New York, New York" and a music special featuring Linda Ronstadt. In addition, you'll hear lots of music and information to inform you what's going on in and around Fort Benning. For times and dates of programs, consult your BAYONET or the DAILY BULLETIN for schedule information.

Care needed when choosing trash can

Trash, rubbish and garbage. By whatever name, it still needs to be thrown out. Combustible trash can give added problems, especially if not disposed of correctly.

One important aspect of trash disposal is having the right container for the right kind of trash. Trash should be thrown into non-burnable containers. Industrial waste barrels should be made of metal and have a fitted cover.

Plastic waste baskets offer a colorful alternative for decorative wastebaskets. However, not all plastic baskets burn the same way, some melt into the fire, adding fuel to the fire while others do not melt so readily and do not add fuel to the fire.

If using plastic wastebaskets, keep in mind that the different ones have different burning rates.

I SHOULD'VE VOTED.

You know that's what you're going to say if your candidate doesn't win.

Hidden talents found in all

By William W. Erbach Sr.
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

How many of you like to play baseball, or watch baseball games? Almost everyone likes baseball, but not everyone can play the game well.

I want to tell you of a young boy whose name was Jim. He wanted to play on the Little League team in the worst way, but he just couldn't make it. Jim wasn't a good pitcher, and his hands and body were too small for catching. When he was up to bat he never hit the ball very far, and when he ran he was usually too slow. Sometimes Jim wanted to quit trying to play baseball, but his dad wouldn't let him give up.

Jim's dad told him that in order to make him valuable to a team he must develop a specialty that none of the other members of the team had. What specialty could he develop? Jim couldn't think of any. But his dad took him to some ball games and told him to watch carefully. At last Jim noticed a kind of batting that he thought he could learn to do. Bunting.

Jim noticed that when the hitter bunted the ball, he might be put out, but it usually allowed another player to advance a base. Jim's dad showed him how to hold the bat, and Jim practiced bunting every night. After several weeks he was beginning to become a good bunter. He could bunt to the left, to the right, or straight ahead. Jim had developed a talent that was different and valuable, and he not only made the team, he got to play in almost every game. How about that?

The truth is that we all have special talents that will get us where we want to go. We all can't be fast runners or eagle-eyed pitchers. We all can't be champions at math or key musicians, but we all have a talent that we can develop to make ourselves useful in the world, and as a consequence, we can make ourselves happier persons.

Sometimes we may have a hard time realizing what our special talents are. We may have to watch and learn from others who are older and wiser than we are. And we may have to spend hours and hours practicing to develop whatever the talents we find within ourselves. But the time and effort will be worth the struggle. Take a hard look at yourself and see what potential you have - what is your talent. Are you useing it? If not, why not?

V.D. strikes every 11 seconds

By Becky Bulgrin

Venereal diseases have been around for hundreds of years and, even today, are seen in epidemic proportions. More than three million cases of VD are caught in the United States each year, at a rate of one every 11 seconds.

According to Fort Benning's VD control officer, Sigsbee Mainous, he sees an average of 700 to 800 people a month at the Preventative Medicine Clinic for VD checks, although not all of them actually have it.

There are different types of VD and while symptoms and treatment vary, all the diseases can be very dangerous if not diagnosed and treated in time.

Venereal diseases are caused by germs that are spread from person to person by sexual relations and some types by other close physical contact.

If detected early enough, most types can be cured with today's modern drugs before any permanent damage is done to the body.

Among the most common types are gonorrhea and syphilis, and both can be quickly cured by antibiotics if detected in the early stages. The symptoms of gonorrhea in men include an itching or burning when he urinates, along with a whitish discharge. This usually happens two to eight days after contact. A woman, however, usually has signs that hardly show. But she may have burning urination, vaginal discharge, fever or stomach pain.

The warning signs of syphilis appear in three stages and include a painless sore (chancre) on the sex organs or mouth during the primary stage. Symptoms usually begin 10 to 90 days after contact. Although the sore slowly disappears without treatment, the disease has not gone away. After approximately six months, the secondary stage occurs and the infected person develops a rash first on the palms and soles, then the whole body.

After two years or more, a person with syphilis enters a stage where he can't infect others but his health steadily deteriorates without treatment.

According to Mainous, at one time syphilis was more common than the other venereal diseases but with the treatment now available it has decreased considerably. "I've only been seeing 10 to 15 cases of syphilis here per month due to the fact that the contacts (people who have been in contact with an infected person) are found and treated," he added.

While syphilis and gonorrhea are easily diagnosed and treated, there is another common venereal disease which is harder to detect and there is no cure. Genital herpes (Herpes simplex type-II) starts as blisters on or around the sex organs. A man will probably feel burning when urinating and a woman may have fever and headaches. Although there is no cure for this type, treatment is available. Without treatment, symptoms disappear in a week or two, but the virus doesn't leave the body; it lies dormant for long periods, but may flare up later.

According to Mainous, 30 to 40 cases of Herpes simplex type-II are found here every month. "One of the problems with this type is that it takes a while to diagnose. If the blisters erupt, it's even harder and may take five to six weeks," he said.

NGU now first

Mainous went on to say that gonorrhea used to be the leading venereal disease here, but there is now another disease with similar symptoms which has passed the high rate of gonorrhea in the last six months. The disease, nongonococcal urethritis (NGU), isn't new but doctors used to think it wasn't very dangerous, according to Mainous. "With more research being done on NGU, it has been found that it is very dangerous and can cause great damage if not treated," he said.

While symptoms of gonorrhea and NGU are similar, and both diseases cause an inflammation of the urethra, they are not caused by the same virus and cannot be cured by the same medicine. "Gonorrhea is cured by penicillin, but it does nothing for NGU," said Mainous. "When gonorrhea is ruled out and NGU is diagnosed, it can easily be treated and cured by another antibiotic."

As with gonorrhea, it is very important for the man to get anybody he has come in contact with in for treatment, since a woman can go for a long time without knowing she has the disease. The disease stays down in the cervix and if the woman is pregnant, it can cause great damage to the fetus or cause the baby serious problems after it is born. Also, if a woman goes without treatment, she may develop Pelvic Inflammatory Disease (PID) which can require surgery and cause her not to be able to have children at all. A man can become sterile if not treated.

VD nothing to mess with

VD is nothing to mess around with and should be treated as soon as possible after the first warning signs are noticed. The first thing a person who suspects he has VD should do is go on sick call and pick up his health records. Males then report to Preventative Medicine Activities, Bldg. 322 (next to the Infantry Museum) between 6:45 a.m. and 10:5 a.m. Monday-Friday. Females should go to the same place from 12:30 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. Monday-Thursday.

According to Mainous, most venereal diseases are quickly diagnosed and treated on the first visit. The patient is interviewed for contacts and sent to the emergency room for shots or medicine, depending on the type diagnosed. A routine blood test is also given to detect or rule out syphilis.

If patients are treated for gonorrhea, they must return in seven days to make sure they are cured. The test of cure is a simple and painless culture. Patients treated for syphilis should have another blood test after three months to make sure it is cured.

"Everything is strictly confidential," said Mainous. "If a male gives names of contacts, his name is not mentioned. We just want to get the contacts in for treatment as soon as possible."

Mainous added that minors can come in for treatment without parent's consent and the parents are not told.

The high incidence of venereal disease will never decrease unless people get checked and treated before spreading it to others. If not treated, VD can eventually cause blindness, heart disease, paralysis, deformity or even death. If you suspect you have VD, you not only owe it to yourself, but to others, to get treatment as soon as possible. The life you save may not be your own; it may be the life of an unborn child.

If you have any questions or need more information about VD, feel free to call 545-1900.

Medical class re-opens

By R.K. Bailey

Recently 18 emergency medical technicians (EMTs) graduated from the first such class taught at Fort Benning in several years.

The majority of the students were medics from Martin Army Hospital, 197th Infantry Brigade and 34th Medical Battalion. One civilian employee from Martin Army Hospital also graduated.

The course was sanctioned by the Georgia Department of Human Resources and West Central Georgia Emergency Medical Services (EMS). All graduates will be eligible to take the Georgia EMT-A certification examination as well as the national registry exam. Upon successful completion of both tests the EMT-As will be licensed by the respective agencies.

The 160-hour course was taught by 1st Lt. R. Keith Bailey, Medical Service Officer, 197th Infantry Brigade, and many guest instructors from several departments on Fort Benning and civilian EMS instructors. According to Bailey, "The program was spread out over a six-month period meeting two nights a week because all personnel involved had other full-time military commitments."

Some of the skills taught were: application M.A.S.T. trousers, I.V. therapy, C.P.R. certification, traction splinting, moving patients, triage, taking a history, unscheduled childbirth and handling psychiatric emergencies. Bailey said, "This type of training program has been needed for some time and should be an on going program at Fort Benning."

In addition to obtaining a license, a graduate can earn up to eight promotion points for attending the class. Arrangements are being made to get another class under way through the 2nd Combat Support Hospital. The 2nd CSH Commander, Lt. Col. James Weiss, help set up the program at Fort Gordon and is currently screening potential instructors to help teach the class. The primary instructor must be licensed to teach through the Department of Human Resources and Department of Education. The requirements for personnel who wish to enroll in the course is that they hold a medical military occupational specialty (MOS) or be a civilian working with an EMS unit.

The Doughboys played before 7,000 fans and came away with a 23-13 victory over the Eagles. Smith joined forces during the game with surprising Christian Lamar to power their way throughout the game past the Eagles' defensive wall. Last year the Doughboys opened against Carson-Newman and came away with a 27-27 tie on their way to a 6-4-1 season. The Doughboys play Miles College of Montgomery, Ala. tomorrow night. Game time is 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

Point

By T.A. Sabel

A man's home is his castle, but first he has to have his castle. For the lower enlisted soldiers at Fort Benning the chance of a castle is difficult. These soldiers, E-1 through E-4 with less than two years of service, are considered ineligible for standard housing here, according to Kenneth Hankins, family housing manager.

With 550 substandard units available at Custer Terrace the current waiting list for ineligible soldiers is six to eight months. The waiting list for eligible soldiers, which includes just about everybody else, is approximately four to six months, according to Hankins.

On the surface, family housing looks equitable. At Fort Benning, if there are too many vacancies in the senior NCO quarters they can temporarily be allocated for use by the eligible lower enlisted. The same goes for company grade officer's quarters. However, this situation could quickly change for the ineligible enlisted.

Hankins alluded at the desire to have the Custer Terrace units' status changed from substandard to standard. Should this happen, the ineligible soldiers would more than likely be out on a limb, thrown to the capricious downtown economy where rising rents, utility bills and gas prices can quickly consume a paycheck.

For example, take a mythical PFC Jake Payne, his wife Irma and their two children, Alex, aged 10 months, and Dora, aged 2 years. Jake and his family do not live in Custer Terrace, rather he lives in one of the apartment complexes off post. The housing referral office gave him a list of several possible available apartments. The cheapest was $125, plus utilities, and the most expensive was $250, plus utilities. The Payne family discussed the problem. Neither Jake nor Irma wanted to live in the cheapest apartment. The furnishings were not what they had anticipated and the neighborhood was, in their opinion, an undesirable place to raise their children.

The most expensive was very nice, but beyond their budget. There was an apartment available that was more than they wanted to spend, but they liked the furnishings and the neighborhood and at $225 a month, plus utilities, they rented.

With his take home pay of approximately $415, his BAQ of $160.80 and his separate rations of approximately $90 he has a monthly income of $665. His two bedroom apartment costs him $225, food for his family runs $50 a week (they eat little meat), utilities cost an average of $80 a month and his phone bill averages $25 a month. Along with this, his used car which costs him $75 a month in bank payments, $19 a month for minimum auto insurance coverage (that is required by law in Georgia) and $40 a month in gas (they don't travel much either). His monthly payments run $664 a month. This leaves him $1 for entertainment and vacations. Some people wonder why he may have an ulcer, can't always keep his mind on the job and worries a lot.

Haves and have nots

PFC Payne and family sit in the home of his friend Sgt. Woodall. Woodall lives on post with his wife and family and the whole group is watching TV. For Woodall's family it is a normal evening; for Payne's family it is a grand outing since they don't have a TV; one can't be fit in the budget.

Life for Woodall and his family is much easier than for Payne. Woodall lives close enough to his office to walk to work and while he does not receive BAQ (his BAQ is paid in exchange for on post housing), he does receive separate rations. With his rent and utilities taken care of, his major expenses are with food, the car payments, insurance for the car and his family. Life insurance for Payne is just one more luxury they cannot afford, while Woodall even has a few bucks stashed away at the bank.

While Woodall has a few more stripes than Payne the main reason that he is getting ahead, ahead in a world that judges advancement by the money in the bank, the car in the driveway and the quality of stereo equipment, is that he has the opportunity, an opportunity he grasped, for on post housing.

That everyone in the Army makes more money than the lower enlisted with less than two years of service is well known. Why then, are they banished into the land of substandard housing or to the economy when they are the ones least able to afford rent on the outside?

Give equality a chance

Perhaps they should be given an equal chance for on-post housing with the rest of the soldiers on a first-come first-serve basis. With financial trouble frequently given as one of the main problems in marriages why should these young soldiers, who are trying to start both a marriage and an Army career, be given the largest share of the burden?

It may be like I had once heard from an Armywise NCO, the Army takes care of its own only after you have been in long enough to show you are part of the Army. Maybe these young soldiers are not part of the Army but are taking part in some type of tribal ritual where they have to prove their worth until they get the opportunity for equal footing.

Who knows, if this one unfair and unjust obstacle was to be removed then they may feel they are an active part of the Army and maybe, just maybe, one of the major problems facing the Army could be closer to being solved: REENLISTMENTS!

Counterpoint

By Gary Jones

Government housing is a distinct benefit for career soldiers and that's how it should be. While it's true that E-4s and below here are not eligible for standard post housing, only a minority of them suffer financial hardship because of a lack of housing.

According to a spokesman from the post finance office, only one-third of the E-4s and below here with less than two years service are married. This is primarily due to the age of the majority of these soldiers — late teens or early 20s. At this stage in many peoples' lives they are still single and concentrating on either starting a career or finishing an education.

Therefore in an effort to provide housing for the majority of soldiers who need it the most (married soldiers with dependents), the Army places priority on the soldiers (E-4s with over two years experience and up) who are more likely to have families. According to the Pentagon, the Army is currently able to provide post housing for about 40 percent of its married soldiers.

With not enough housing to go around, placing priority on the group of soldiers who are more likely to have families makes more housing available to those who need it most. While the system isn't perfect, it still works effectively for the majority of military families here.

The Army, just like any other career field in society today offers the best benefits to the workers who have the most on-the-job experience or have been promoted to supervisory positions. Just like the old saying — you have to start at the bottom not the top — a first term, lower enlisted soldier can't expect to have the same benefits as a senior NCO with close to 20 years service. This doesn't mean that the lower enlisted aren't as valuable or as important to the Army as its senior members, because the lower enlisted are definitely the backbone of the Army (without them all of the Army's leaders would be out of a job). What this does mean is that the Army, like any other job, offers many

Soldier saved

A Fort Benning soldier escaped a narrow brush with death Friday evening, thanks to the courage and quick thinking of Sgt. Robert E. Howard of the Military Police Investigative Section, 139th Military Police Company, Law Enforcement Command.

The soldier had threatened suicide and had climbed to the 100 foot point on one of the 250 foot airborne jump training towers on Eubanks Field, located on main post. Upon his arrival at the scene, Howard evaluated the situation and decided to climb up the tower after the man and attempted to talk him down.

With complete disregard for his own safety, Howard climbed the tower until near the soldier and convinced him that nothing would be gained by jumping. Ten minutes later they started climbing back down the tower with Howard offering constant reassurance to the soldier. When they had descended to the 50 foot level, they were met by two soldiers from the Airborne Department who assisted Howard in getting the soldier safely to the ground.

Later, Howard said: "I don't know what to say. It was just part of the job."

CFC starts

The Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) officially began Tuesday with a kickoff breakfast in the Officer's Club Supper Club.

Speaking to an audience of approximately 200 commanders and command sergeants major Col. Bobby J. Harris, chief of staff, stressed the importance of this year's campaign. "Last year we met our goal of $325,000 and Fort Benning got back $104,000 from the campaign," he said.

Payroll deductions are the best and simplest way someone can contribute to CFC, said an official for the campaign. "By giving a little bit each month, you can support CFC painlessly and easily," he said.

Still sober 12 months later

Editor's note: One day without booze is a long time for an alcoholic. A full year sober is an agonizing lifetime. What follows is an account of an alcoholic's decision, and resolve, to gain control of his drunken life and live one day at a time — sober. He celebrates the 1st anniversary of his new life this week. His name is not used for obvious reasons. Ed.

Sept. 24, 1979 to Sept. 24, 1980.

One year. Another 365 days. Who cares?

Years come and years go, so what makes this past year special?

It was just a little over a year ago that I came back to the states from Germany. Ah, that good German beer. How I missed it. Still do.

Got quarters while on leave. Signed in. Moved in. Went to duty station. Really a bore.

Wife decides to go to Florida with my daughter. Leaves boys with me. One 15, one 16 and one 6. Have to take another leave to be able to get kids to school. Another five days. Crap.

Week's over. It's Saturday morning. Glad when wife gets back. Only have one car and it is getting expensive using taxis to get my beer and Jim Beam.

Cartoons on television. Me and six-year-old watch. Feel terrible. Too much beer and Jim Beam Friday night. Beer cans all over living room. Another year in the making! Crap.

Still feel bad. It's 9 a.m. Coughing, choking, too many cigarettes, beer and Jim Beam. Cough, cough.

Six-year-old, "You feel OK, Dad?"

Cough, cough. "Yeah."

"Can I get you somethin' Dad? How about a beer? You don't cough so much when you drink beer."

Why not?

Big boys get out of bed. "Clean up this rat's nest. Get these beer cans out of here. Is there any booze left in the Jim Beam bottle?"

Another taxi ride for more "Beam." God, it's costing me a mint.

How long has it been since I went at least one day without a drink? Hell, I don't know. Years!

Time for bed. Drunk again. Think about what the six-year-old asked earlier. "How about a beer, Dad?" Why didn't he say, "How about a coke or a cup of coffee?" Helleva way for a six-year-old to grow up, isn't it? Fall into a drunken sleep.

Sunday. Same as Saturday. Cartoons, coughing, feel like H---.

Why don't you quit drinking for a while? Think. Think. Think.

Can't do it. That's why!

Asked big boys. Ha, ha. "You Dad?"

Is that what my family thinks of me? "Ha, ha?"

Can I stop? Why don't I and my conscience sit down and talk it over?

Mind is made up. I'll go to the hospital and say, "I think I might drink a little bit too much."

I'll go on sick call in the morning. It's about 1030 and it's decision time.

Call my boss, "Hello, sir. I won't be in for work in the morning."

"What's wrong? Anything serious?"

"Nothing serious. In fact I probably won't be in for work for quite a while. I've decided to turn myself in as an alcoholic." (Alcoholic, ALCOHOLIC! Who the hell said that. I never would.)

"OK Sarge, good luck. Anything I can do for you, give me a call."

"Goodbye."

"How many beers left in the frig, boys?"

"Twelve, left out of the two cases you bought yesterday, Dad. Want one?"

"No."

Wife comes home. Anniversary is in six days. "Honey, I've got a present for you for our anniversary. I've decided to turn myself in as an alcoholic." (DAMN, that's twice I've said that word today.)

No comments from anyone in the family. I drink six of the beers before bed.

Sept. 24, 1979. Get up. Call Benning House. "Come right over." Interview. "How long have you been drinking?" "30 years. Last 10 heavy."

Another year started.

Enter hospital, physical, bed, doctors, nurses, wardboys (persons). Psychiatrists. (I'm not crazy, just a drunkard.)

Out of hospital. Back to Benning House. To Alcoholics (there's that word again) Anonymous. To home. Back to work. Temptations, more temptations. Parties, cookouts, meeting at NCO Club. Can't do it?

A promise to myself. ONE YEAR WITHOUT A DRINK. Sept. 24, 1979 to Sept. 24, 1980. Now no clubs but coin collecting clubs. No Jim Beam, only Pepsi. No big bash, only big bass.

I made it.

That six-year-old, that wife, those two big boys, my daughter, my boss. What can I say? Now another year starts, can I make it? I don't know. I'll try.

That is the end of my tale. Still an alky but a sober alky.

Oh, by the way, could you make it for a year? Try it.

Letters to the Editor

Why the profanity ?

To the Editor:

I had the good fortune this past weekend to see the Doughboy football victory over Carson-Newman. And it made tears of pride come to my eyes to see all our young soldiers stand proud and salute the flag during the playing of the national anthem. However, following the game, these same young men succeeded in ruining the evening. As each platooon of new soldiers (or trainees, as they used to be called) reassembled to return to their barracks, the sound of cadence calls filled the air. And across the parking lots drifted the refrain...

"I wish all the ladies
Were pies on a shelf
And I were a baker,
I'd....."

(If you don't know the last line, just ask.)

As a service member assigned to an infantry brigade, one expects to overhear profanity and suggestive phrases occasionally. But should our families and guests be subjected to this? Since the cadence call was vocalized by an organized unit, the public must have surmised that the chain-of-command approved of the context. Is this really the image the Army wants to project? Is locker room language really an essential part of learning to be a soldier? If so, let's at least attenpt to keep these cadences in the locker room and out of the public ear.

Benning officials tour airport

By Tim Boivin

On a tour through the nearly completed Atlanta Midfield Terminal recently, Fort Benning transportation officials got an idea of how the ultra-modern facility is going to work. The transportation officials will now be able to explain the layout of the terminal, which will open Sunday, to soldiers buying tickets.

The tour also included members of Fort Benning's Christmas Exodus team. They came to figure out the best way to run the Exodus program this year at the Midfield Terminal. They will visit Midfield one or two more times when it opens before Christmas to give them an idea of how the airport will actually operate.

Exodus team goes

Ronald K. Johnson, a Transportation assistant, said, "We estimate that we will move 11-12 thousand soldiers in three days of departing for the holidays and four days of returning from the holidays. It is important that members of the Exodus team are totally familiar with the airport, its operations and its layout. That's why they will return after the airport opens."

The transportation officials who visited the airport were from the Post Transportation and Ticket Office, the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, the United States Army Marksmanship Unit and the Allied Student's Liason. They will be going back to their respective units to explain the new features of the airport.

Scientific idea

The airport's big concept is to "go with the flow." The airport was designed almost scientifically by taking every person's approximate route of travel once they reach the terminal. There is a transport system which will move passengers in three-car trains between the terminal's four vast concourses.

The concourses, one of which is 2,200 feet long and the other three 2,000 feet long, will also have movable sidewalks to take some of the pain out of walking down the spacious wings. Members on the tour found they could speed up by walking on the movable sidewalks and reach their destination faster.

The USO, which operated in the Hartfield terminal, will not be in the Midfield terminal. During the Exodus program this year, sergeants from the 1st Infantry Training Brigade will be keeping an eye out for the troops' welfare.

One problem many soldiers face in airport terminals around the world is being solicited for donations to religous groups. The Atlanta Midfield Terminal, built by the airlines and not costing the city of Atlanta a penny, will be privately owned and religous groups will be prohibited. The only place they will be allowed to solicit will be in the inter-concourse transport system.

Future plans for the old terminals, which will be closed down completely, have not been finalized. Right now the leading plan calls for turning the old terminals into shopping malls but nothing official has been announced.

For further information on the new Midfield Terminal call the Transportation Office at 544-2011.

First combined retreat retirement ceremony set

The first combined Awards and Retirement and Retreat Ceremony is scheduled to take place Wednesday at 5 p.m. on York Field in front of Bldg. 4.

Formerly an option of the retiree, the ceremony is now mandatory for all personnel retiring at Fort Benning unless given written exemption by the chief of staff. According to a Directorate of Plans and Training spokesman, participation is now mandatory because previous ceremonies showed a definite lack of support from retirees' units. The only other exceptions are general officer retirements and retirement ceremonies previously scheduled. Retirees from other posts are also welcome to participate.

According to 2nd Lt. Thomas Favorite, ceremonies officer, Plans and Operations Division, DPT, each major command on post will be tasked once every four months to provide support for the ceremonies.

The 2nd Student Battalion, Infantry Officer's Basic Course (IOBC), The School Brigade, will participate in this month's ceremony. They will provide four 29-man platoons, a six-man color guard, and flag bearers for the event. The 283rd Army Band will also perform.

The public is invited to attend and should be seated five minutes before the start of the ceremony. In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will take place in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

Cars, bikes could spell disaster

By Anita Langford

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that over 400,000 persons suffer bicycle related injuries serious enough to require hospital emergency room treatment each year. About 1,100 persons die each year from these injuries. These injuries and deaths are not restricted to children; in fact, since the energy crises has increased the number of adults using two wheels instead of four, the accidents occur as frequently to adults as children.

If you drive on or off post during rush hour you are certainly aware of the potential danger of mixing bicycles and automobiles. If you are an auto driver you probably feel that bicycles are a nuisance which should not be allowed on the road; if you are a bicycle driver you probably feel auto drivers are dangerous, inconsiderate maniacs. Both of these viewpoints, unfortunately, are valid in many situations. Since it is not feasible or economically possible to build an entirely separate network of bike paths to parallel all the roads, cyclists and motorists will continue to share the roadways and must make every effort to do so safely.

Let's first explore the motorist's reasons for feeling bicycles are a nuisance. Bicycle drivers are not licensed nor are they tested for ability and judgment as are auto drivers; they rarely receive traffic tickets for reckless driving nor do they have their driving privileges revoked for unsafe cycling. Bicycle drivers here run stop signs, ride on the wrong side of the road, dart out from driveways, fail to give signals and do manyother things on the road which both break the laws and create a hazard to themselves and others. This problem is not restricted to children who drive bicycles, many adults who should know better seem to feel that when on a bicycle they are out of the reach of the law.

Combine disregard for traffic laws with the instability of bicycles and their low visibility and you have a combination almost certain to result in tragedy. In order to avoid this outcome, cyclists must obey all traffic laws; children who are unable to understand these laws should not be allowed to ride on the roads. Since bicycles are small in comparison to cars, cyclists should make themselves more visible through use of lights at night and possibly a pennant on a long pole during the day. All riders should practice off the road until they are secure on the bike in all situations, and are thoroughly familiar with traffic laws.

On the other side of the coin, even though 80 percent of auto-bicycle accidents are caused by bicycle riders disregarding traffic rules, much of the burden of protecting bicycle riders rests on the automobile driver. When you are driving expect the unexpected from bicycle drivers. Even if you don't see one, expect a cyclist to appear anywhere, anytime. Assume cyclists will violate your right of way, especially young cyclists.

Many car-bike accidents occur at intersections due to low visibility, lack of signaling, or unsteady operation of the bicycle while signaling. Be extra cautious and give the cyclist all the room he or she needs. When turning right, make sure you don't catch a cyclist between your car and the curb. When passing a cyclist allow plenty of room to the side to compensate for the wobbly zigzag course which is frequently seen on Fort Benning's roads.

It doesn't take much to wipe out a cyclist, a slight bump or sideswipe can send one to the hospital; the cyclist is not encased in a metal shell to shield him from other vehicles or the hard pavement. If you are still annoyed by cyclists, try driving a bicycle for a change. It should help make you an even safer motorist by showing you how the other half lives — how dangerous it can be for the cyclist out there on the other side of your bumper.

Battalion gives support

The 197th Support Battalion of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) is alive and active. It was reorganized in March 1973 from a combat support battalion to a service support battalion and has fulfilled its mission of supporting the brigade ever since. It has personnel working in career specialties from medicine to electronics maintenance.

Company A handles several functions that are normally found in a headquarters company and an adjutant general company in a larger unit. These functions are the offices of the inspector general, reenlistment, public affairs and legal. It also handles personnel and finance services.

Company B's mission is to give medical support to the 197th Infantry Brigade. Although some of its personnel are attached to Martin Army Hospital, it also operates the 197th Family Practice Clinic and handles normal troop sick call at Troop Medical Clinic #3. TMC #3 saw 30,000 active duty and 6,000 dependent patients last year.

Company C has a four-part mission in supporting the 197th Infantry Brigade. One; providing the petroleum, oil and lubricants (POL) for the brigade and operating the refueling facilities for the other battalions and separate units. The second is transporting the personnel and material of the 197th Infantry Brigade. Third is its mission of ordering and issuing all field clothing and equipment to the personnel assigned to the brigade. Fourth, when the brigade goes to the field, it consolidates orders for food from the units of the brigade, orders the food, then breaks it down and distributes it to the units.

Company D has the mission of direct support of all the maintenance requirements of the Brigade. This covers all wheel and track vehicles, generators, small and large weapons, and all electronics.

The 197th Support Battalion has a large and diverse job. It travels with the 197th Infantry Brigade wherever it goes. The men and women of the battalion strive to uphold their motto of "Ever Ready Support."

benefits but a soldier must work his way to them.

Lower enlisted not forgotten

Even though the lower enlisted soldiers here aren't eligible for standard on-post housing, they are eligible for substandard on-post housing in the Custer Terrace area. Using Custer Terrace as an example, substandard does not necessarily mean low quality. According to the housing office here, it was redesignated as substandard housing because of the relatively limited floorspace of the units. In many cases, the Custer Terrace area provides better living conditions than comparable apartments downtown that cost the soldier from $40 to $100 more per month (figuring that a soldier exchanges his BAQ for his quarters with all utility bills paid).

Lower enlisted soldiers who wish to live in the Custer Terrace area must do so on a first-come first-serve basis, competing against other lower enlisted soldiers. Even with the limited number of housing units available in the Custer Terrace area, all hope for cheap housing is not lost. For soldiers who own their own furniture, the Battle Park area near the post's front gate is available.

According to the post housing referral office, a two-bedroom apartment rents for about $125 per month (plus utilities) while a three-bedroom apartment runs about $140 per month (plus utilities). The Battle Park area, although civilian owned, is government controlled and provides low income military families with a relatively cheap place to live close to post.

One problem facing the Army today is the decline in NCO reenlistments. The decline of military benefits has been named as one reason for the reenlistment decline. If the Army were to restructure its priorities so that rank and seniority meant nothing in obtaining such benefits as post housing then it would be even harder to keep many good NCOs in the Army. After all, they have paid their dues and just when all their years of hard work are paying off they find that they have to compete with a soldier just out of Basic Combat training for housing, it could be a serious detriment to morale.

According to a recent article appearing in ARMY TIMES, Army Vice Chief of Staff Gen. John W. Vessey Jr. says he strongly opposes efforts to make married junior enlisted soldiers eligible for on-post family housing. He said extending housing eligibility to married E-4s and below would have a "bad effect" on the morale of senior soldiers and make an existing bad housing situation worse.

Sheriff's Target

Vandalism is the deliberate and pointless damaging of property. It is not a harmless prank; it is a crime — a crime that wastes time and money.

It is a crime that can cause tremendous suffering and time consuming efforts to repair or replace what has .been damaged. Whenever vandalism occurs, we pay either directly (when our own property is damaged) or indirectly (via higher taxes to repair public properties and higher insurance costs).

Provost Marshal

Many acts of vandalism are caused by youngsters; however, there is no typical vandal. Involved are males and females, good students and dropouts, whites and blacks, the well-to-do and the poor. Grade school children as young as six or seven have been known to vandalize schools, parks, etc. Teenagers often have "growing-up" problems which may lead them to act more destructively by misusing vehicles and even spraying graffiti in public places. Older youths account for more serious damage involving vehicles, machinery and buildings. Vandals often work in groups. They may damage property on a dare, or as part of being initiated into a peer group. A group usually feels bolder than does a single person. These incidents may happen more often, and damage may be more serious.

Vague motives

Most vandals do not have a clear motive for their actions. Basic social problems and attitudes are often at the root. These include anger, boredom, drug abuse, disciplinary problems, personal problems and social conflicts.

Vandalism costly

There is a high price to be paid when vandalism occurs. This price deals not only with dollars and cents, but with danger and suffering too. Some examples are:

- A disruption of vital services (fire, police, electricity, etc.).
- Injuries resulting from hazards created by vandals.

The high price in dollars and cents is caused by:

- Large sums of money for repairs and replacement of damaged property.
- Time spent trying to prevent vandalism and fix any damage.
- Protection (special services, devices, guards, etc.).
- Medical and insurance costs.

Action needed

At Fort Benning there were 34 incidents of vandalism to private property reported to the military police during August, at an estimated cost of approximately $4,700. Most of these incidents involved damage to parked vehicles. In addition, there were 13 reported incidents of vandalism to government property totaling approximately $1,165. These losses are unacceptable; we must take effective action now, individually and as a community, to combat these senseless crimes.

Everyone in the community can help prevent vandalism. The best time to fight it is before children begin to vandalize. From early childhood through the growing years, parents and all members of the community can develop an environment in which children have respect for the property of others and no need to vandalize. We can further reduce these needless losses by:

- Knowing why vandalism happens, who is involved, and what can be done to prevent it.
- Reporting vandalism when it is observed (Fort Benning Military Police: 545-5222; Columbus Police: 322-7711).
- Joining in the community efforts to stop vandalism.

If you desire more information on this subject, call the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Section at 545-4164. Help us help you prevent vandalism.

Can't find your car?

Stopping or parking vehicles in places where prohibited by official signs is a violation of paragraph 12, USAIC Regulation 190-5. Although violators are routinely cited by the military police, motorists continue to wrongfully park privately owned vehicles in areas reserved for military vehicles, emergency vehicles, bicycles and motor bikes, handicapped parking, service vehicle loading and unloading behind Infantry Hall, and loading zones outside the classrooms at Infantry Hall. Effective Oct. 1, unauthorized use of any of these areas may result in the towing away and impoundment of the improperly parked vehicle.

It was in this same time frame that the attempt was made to rescue the American hostages in Iran.

Husbands also suffer abuse

By Deb Hilgeman

"See this?" the young corporal said, pointing to a long, jagged scar on his well-muscled arm. "My wife got mad because she wanted me to go to the store and I told her I didn't have any money. She threw a bottle and it would have broken in my face but luckily I threw my arm up in time and deflected it. I got cut pretty bad but it could have been worse."

When asked if he considered himself an 'abused husband' he replied angrily, "What the hell else could you call it?"

The soft-spoken young soldier has only been married nine months and he's disillusioned and bitter. He knew his wife a "long time" but says she became a different person after they tied the knot. "I think she has a split personality or something but she refuses to see a counsellor. She won't even talk to her family because she thinks they're against her."

Meanwhile, the soldier dreads going home from work because it means having to face her. "I'm not happy but when I try to talk about our problems she gets mad and wants to fight. She throws stuff, smacks me or does something crazy like picking up a knife and threatening me. I'm afraid that some night she's going to sneak up behind me with a knife and actually use it."

At work the soldier has become nervous and preoccupied. His wife threatens to call his company commander with wild stories to get her husband in trouble and he believes her when she says, "No matter what you say, they're going to believe me."

Behind every great man there's a woman. But what's a man to do when the woman behind him takes advantage of her position and stabs him in the back?

A soldier is particularly vulnerable when he makes the unhappy discovery that he married a shrew. Army tradition, backed by current regulation, says a soldier is responsible for his dependents. That burden can become unbearable if the wife just flat out refuses to act in a manner that will put herself, her husband, and the Army in a good light.

It is almost impossible for a soldier to keep his marital problems a secret. Either the man's work is affected by his unhappy home life and he is called in by his boss and ordered to explain, or else the soldier's wife calls the unit and unloads her problems on the company commander.

Capt. Michael Ball, commander of Company B, Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, says he has been called by wives at 2 a.m. and listened to their complaints. He added that acting as a referee in a couple's marital dispute sometimes places him in a difficult position. "Wives call and give me their side of the story but when I call the man in he gives me a different version. For instance, of all the calls I've received from wives telling me their husbands beat them, I have yet to find a case where the soldier really hit his wife," he noted.

While marital disputes stem from a number of causes, certain conflicts occur more than others. Ball said, "I see a lot of problems involving alcohol use by either the soldier or his wife. Money is also a definite factor; the wife runs up bills, especially telephone bills, or writes bad checks and the husband just can't afford to pay. Many of these wives are young, immature women, recently married, and this is their first time away from home so they have trouble coping. That's the setting and the problems often start from there."

The captain added that whatever affects his soldier, affects him so it is his job to do whatever he can to help. "If a couple is having marital problems we'll set up a counselling appointment and more or less insist they go," he said.

1st Sgt. John R. Harrison, also of Company B, feels very strongly about dependent wives who virtually cripple their husbands by their irresponsible actions. In Harrison's opinion, when wives start voicing complaints about their husbands, it is the man who usually ends up on the short end of the stick. "Sometimes commanders or agencies lean toward the story the wife tells. They assume that if there is a problem in the home it must be the man's fault. We look at it differently in this unit, though. We do some research and come to a decision after getting the facts from both sides," he explained.

As I turned on the tape recorder the sergeant sitting next to me seemed to be having second thoughts about agreeing to the interview.

"Let me just explain the BULL I go through," he began. "When I come home from work the house is filthy, the baby's diapers are dirty, dinner's not cooked and there's garbage everywhere. And there sits my wife glued to the TV set."

Any initial reluctance vanished and the stream of complaints became a torrent. "I work long hours and since my wife doesn't have a job I expect her to at least keep the house clean and see that the baby gets fed. She always has an excuse why she didn't get anything done. We talked about our roles before we got married but it's a whole different story now.

"On weekends I just want to relax but I end up doing laundry and cleaning. I don't think I'm being unreasonable. If it was the other way around, if she worked and I didn't, she'd expect me to help."

The list went on . . . "Money is always a problem with us. She knows we can't afford it but she still runs up phone bills that are sometimes over $100 a month. We have a joint checking account and she lies about how much she takes even though she knows I'll find out. She even spends the food money and has nothing to show for it. I don't know where it goes. Her girlfriends run around on their husbands, so maybe that's what she's doing. I just don't know."

And on . . . "When she gets mad she calls the company commander and tells him I beat her up, threaten to kick her out, all sorts of lies."

The sergeant says he's fed up; he realizes his marriage is a tragic mistake. "All I want to know now is what my grounds are for a divorce and how much it will cost."

When a soldier's wife is guilty of irresponsible actions, the husband is usually held accountable. Harrison recalled a case when a wife got into a fight with her neighbors and "paperwork came screaming down the chain of command until it ended up on Capt. Ball's desk for action. It was the husband who got called on the carpet for what his wife did."

An Army saying that's been around for a long time is, "If a soldier can't control his wife, how can he control a squad?" Harrison, who is currently pursuing his Master's Degree in counselling and psychological services, pointed out that wives 20 years ago, as a general rule, were more responsive to their husbands' wishes and desires than the liberated women of today's generation of soldiers. "A soldier can wear stars on his shoulder but he's not going to tell his wife anything unless she wants to hear it," he said, "and yet that man is held accountable for his wife's actions 24 hours a day."

The private has been in the Army almost ten years and he's been reduced in rank twice, barred from reenlisting and been sent through the Alcohol and

What can a man do when his wife won't cook, clean, stay within a budget, or even provide enough care for the children? If he divorces her, she'll probably get the children, the house and most of his paycheck. Is there a fair solution?

ıg Abuse Program. He had a good service record il problems at home became so bad that rything he did was affected.

My career started going downhill when my wife rted smoking dope and drinking a lot. I think 's on some kind of drug that makes her act crazy. 's called the MP's I don't know how many times had me picked up because she lied and told m I was beating her. She calls my company nmander and tells him I hit her, won't give her money and start drinking before I even o work. One time she got mad and threw all my itary clothes in a dumpster somewhere.

No one ever seemed to listen to my side of the y. She's sat in my CO's office telling him how h she really wants our marriage to work and ıl we walked out she told me she was going to ruin my career and leave me with nothing. I think people are finally starting to see what she's really like but it's probably too late now.

"She knows exactly what she's doing and she's out to get me. I'm separated from her now and I could never live with her again after all she's done to me. I want a divorce but she won't agree to it. Why should she? She doesn't work and I pay all the bills and give her money every month. Her only job is harrassing me. She's learned how to use the Army and she's taking all she can get. One of my friends went through almost the same thing but he got lucky — his wife finally up and left."

The first sergeant would like to see soldiers relieved of some of the responsibility for their spouse's actions. "A lot of weight can be exerted on dependents by the command. If a dependent acts irresponsibly, take away privileges such as using the PX or driving on post. If a dependent wife is causing problems and refuses counselling, that should be a sign that she is not willing to make the marriage work and, if he so chooses, the husband should be able to get more assistance in obtaining a divorce without being financially raped," he said.

Harrison strongly believes a woman married to a soldier is a part of the military system and that what she does affects the soldier's morale and the image of the U.S. Army. "We (the Army) should have some control over her but right now we don't. The only control we try to have over her is through another human being. That's like trying to drive a car by blowing the horn," he concluded, "all you get is a lot of noise."

YA games continue

Last Saturday marked the second week of football for Benning's young flag and tackle pigskin players. The schedule was a busy one with some teams still undefeated. One of the teams, the Falcons, went to Fort Rucker to play the Rucker Packers and ran away with the game 43-0.

Highlights

Coach Russell Smith must feel quite content with the way his Falcons are playing in the Midget Division. Two shutouts in a row, 18-0 and 43-0. Falcons quarterback Randy Smith is really hitting his receivers, Darrin Tucker, John Gonzales and Darrin Williams. Smith's aerial completions plus a strong defense are making things rough on Falcon opponents.

In flag football (Grasshopper Division) where the Seahawks shut out the Main Post Steelers 14 to zero, Seahawks' Brian Richardson scored the first touchdown on a 25-yard run. The other touchdown came when quarterback Larry Holland rambled 40 yards for the TD. The Seahawks will play another undefeated team this Saturday, the Lavoie Cowboys.

In the Termite Division, quarterback Ron MacIver ran for 27 yards and threw a 32-yard pass to Maurice Memimger for the Buccaneers in their win over the Patriots 18-0. Outstanding players on defense were Jason Bargwell, George Bailey and Ned Moultrie for the Bucs.

Special mention goes out to Main Post Patriot quarterback Kevin Williams, who intercepted a Jet pass and returned it 95 yards for a touchdown in the Pee Wee League.

Armchair Sports

Oldtimer remembers

By Tim Boivin

Everybody remembers the good old days, but some people remember days more distant than others. Charlie Sisk is one such person.

I met Charlie at the Doughboys game Saturday. He's 77 years old, from Cordoba, Ala. and served at Fort Benning from 1922 to 1925. He was a member of the color guard at the grand opening ceremonies for Doughboy Stadium in 1922.

Charlie said, "I was in the Quartermaster Railway Transportation section at that time. The Doughboys were playing Louisiana State University in the first game. I damn near froze to death on color guard that day."

Many people won't listen to what a 77 year old man has to say at halftime at an Army football game. I have to admit that originally the man didn't seem like much to me. But he had something to say so I kept talking to him. He had views on anything and everything, some I agreed with and some I didn't.

On the Army, he said, "Back in 1922 you didn't go to your congressman every time an officer or NCO told you to do something. If you didn't do it you were thrown in the stockade. It didn't matter if you were right or wrong."

Mr. Sisk also remembers Doughboy Stadium a little differently. He recalls, "I stood straight across from where the press box is now under the lights. They didn't have the towers on the corners then."

Charlie was also at the opening game at Gowdy field. He remembers, "The old Washington Senators and the New York Yankees played at the field named after the old Yankee catcher, Hank Gowdy. Big George Kelly of the Senators hit the first home run out of Gowdy Field in that game."

Charlie hopes the U.S. changes its ways and reverts to the methods of the old time Army. He said, "We didn't ask questions. We just did what we were told. You think your room is bad! The whole 29th Infantry lived in tents across the field from Doughboy Stadium. Nothing but staff sergeants and above were allowed to live off post then. Now the soldiers have everything they could want. They aren't hungry anymore."

When it comes to pay, Charlie reminisces, "In July of 1922 the Army cut our pay from $30 a month to $21. No reason was given and I never have figured it out. This was before the Depression so we were in a prosperous time then. To think, now you people have a lobbying group fighting for a 10 percent raise in Washington."

In a football game that seemed to take forever to finish, Charlie Sisk was an interesting and compelling distraction. Besides serving at Fort Benning, he also served in the Air Corps in World War II, spending time in Sicily, North Africa, Italy and Cairo, Egypt.

Charlie was a product of the 'Brother, can you spare a dime' era. He appreciated what he had and didn't question whoever was giving it to him. I went back to school while talking to him. He provided a lesson that I was never taught while growing up in the prosperous 1960's, The lesson: to be thankful for what you had.

Doughboys win 1st, 23-13

By Tim Boivin

The Fort Benning Doughboys struggled for 45 minutes before putting together a game-saving six minute drive on the ground to defeat the Carson-Newman Eagles Saturday 23-13.

The Doughboys went into the game with a much-vaunted passing attack that never did get untracked. Quarterback Leamon Hall completed five out of 16 passes for 70 yards with two interceptions. Coach Ralph Santaliz said, "Donald Smith and Christian Lamar were able to run effectively on Carson-Newman."

Whether it's football or soldiering, the Doughboys subscribe to the "Follow me, I am the Infantry" motto. Running back Christian Lamar (44) follows teammate Robert Jackson (32) around left end on this play.

From there on in it was Lamar's lunging that did the job. The sleek running back went over tight end for three yards and then scored off left tackle. Tyler converted the extra point to make the score 10-0.

On their next possesion the Doughboys got hit by a rash of penalties and were forced to punt from deep in their own territory. Carson-Newman drove to the 15 yard line. Kicker Mike Sturgill made good on his field goal attempt and the score was 10-3 at the half.

On the first play after the second half kickoff, the Doughboys recovered a fumble on the Eagles 30 yard line. After a couple of runs, Robert Jackson drove in from the five to make the score 16-3. The extra point was missed.

After Hall fumbled on his 22, Eagle quarterback Cariso passed into the right corner of the end zone and Bobby Black ran under it for the score. The extra point was good and the Eagles were threatening 16-10.

After an interception the Eagle's Sturgill popped a 45 yard field goal to make the tally 16-13. The Doughboys got the ball back with 9:16 left in the game. The Doughboys put together an impressive, clock-eating ground attack from their own 18.

New players excel

With 10 new players and an 11th at a new position, the Doughboy defense was questionable going into the game.Defensive line coach John Hester said, "On defense we were spearheaded by tackle Edmond Adams. Adams had 14 unassisted tackles and was in on a bunch of gang tackles. John Marks plugged the gap well also at linebacker."

The Doughboys drove for a field goal with 3:08 left in the first quarter. Andre Tyler connected from the 15 for a 3-0 advantage.

In the second quarter, the Doughboy's Henry Baker recovered a fumble by the Eagle's Anthony Cariso at the Carson-Newman 25 yard line. Hall hit Clennie Brundidge for an 18 yard pick up to the seven.

Lunging for points

Lamar rushed six straight times to get to the Eagle's 45. After a couple more rushes by Smith and Richard Fletcher, Jackson went in for the touchdown from the one yard line. After the extra point was made the score was 23-13 and only 2:46 was left. The clock wound down and the Doughboys left the field with their first victory under their belts.

Tomorrow the Doughboys go up against Miles College at 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium on Ingersoll Street. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Santaliz said, "Miles has played three games already. They're also a varsity team whereas Carson-Newman was a junior varsity team. We're going to have to shape up in some areas, including the specialty teams."

Santaliz reflected on the Eagle game and concluded, "We made mistakes that were to be expected in the first game. Our defense kept us in the game while the offense was getting untracked and our running game was surprisingly terriffic. Our passing and secondary need to improve."

The Doughboys opened their season Saturday with a 23-13 victory over the Carson-Newman College Eagles. Doughboy running back Christian Lamar (44) was a surprising star in the game. Lamar replaced the injured Leroy Benson, the star rusher last year who broke his ankle in three places. Lamar hits the hole on this play in the Doughboys' final scoring drive. Eagle defender Chic Osborne (42) is set to hit Lamar as teammate Scott Hummontree (77) can only watch.

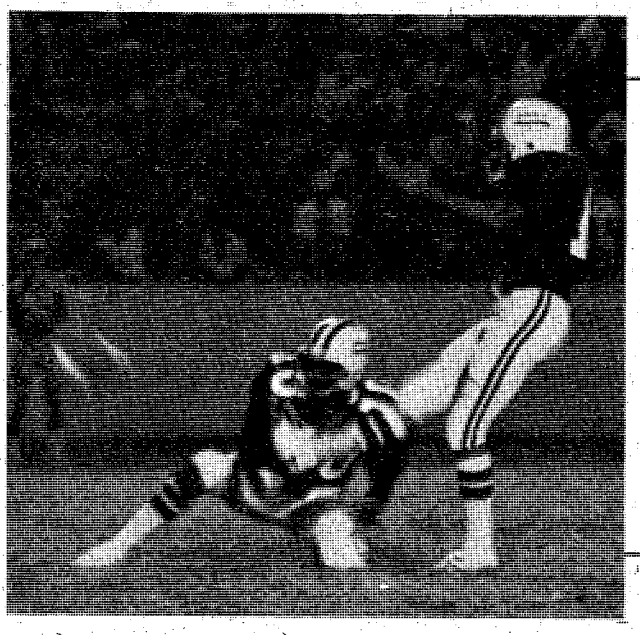
Doughboy running back Christian Lamar (44) tries to escape the grasp of Carson-Newman's Brian Foster and another unidentified Eagle defender. Lamar starred in Saturday's game and at one point carried the ball six straight times on the Doughboys' last clock-eating scoring drive.



Larry Varnedoe holds as Andre Tyler kicks a 25-yard field goal to score the Doughboys' first three points.

Clean neighborhoods a goal

With Post Wide Clean-Up Week getting over and the recent announcement in the BAYONET saying that unless a pleasant outside appearance of quarters was kept up the occupants would lose their on post housing privilege one would think Fort Benning has gone on a cleaning binge.

Fort Benning is more than an Army installation; it is a small community within itself with jobs, suburban communities, apartment complexes, shopping centers, medical facilities, movie theatres and all the rest of what makes up a community.

Since no one wants to live in a slum, keeping yards clean and well kept are important. "Our post military housing areas should be the best place in the United States to live," said Col. Richard W. McKee, assistant post commander.

He added that while it may appear that there has been a recent crackdown in the Custer Terrace, Magraw Manor housing areas this is only an enforcement of the standards set up in the garrison regulations.

"The majority of the residents on post comply with the regulations for tidiness," he said. "But there are those who give little or no effort in keeping a clean appearance on the outside of their houses. This makes the whole neighborhood look bad," added the assistant post commander.

It is unfair for those who take pride in their houses and the neighborhood to have neighbors who do not, said McKee.

McKee has a stern warning for those who let their houses get run-down. "Those who don't comply with keeping a neat appearance to the outside of their homes, in accordance to the guidelines set forth in the garrison regulation handout and who receive a second letter of non-compliance, will appear with their unit commander at the assistant commander's office to explain why they should keep the privilege of staying in post housing."

Cleaning tips

To keep the housing area clean here are some tips that everyone can pitch in and do.

•Where several families put their trash cans together for collection someone needs to take the responsibility to clean up the spills left after the trash has been collected.

•Keep children's toys picked up when they're not being played with. This will help prevent theft of the toys and accidents.

•Old furniture, carpets and other such random trash should not be stored at the rear of quarters. To get rid of them, call property disposal or take it to the dump on post.

•Cars and trucks should not be kept on grassy areas in the housing areas. For those who live in large complexes: do not drive around the rear of the complexes. This is inconsiderate to the neighbors and could be a safety problem since many children play in these areas.

For questions and problems residents should first contact the immediate area coordinator. Many questions can be answered in the garrison regulation, USAIC Reg. 210-5, and the Quarterly Facilities Engineering bulletin.

Swim team

Youth Activities sponsors a swim team that participates in Georgia Amateur Athletic Union(AAU) age group competition. Age group swimming is divided into categories wherein the swimmer competes with others of the same ability in an age group of the same sex. Several out-of-town trips are made in addition to meets held at Fort Benning.

The four strokes of competition are Freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly. Two courses are used: the short course using a 25 yard pool in the fall- spring period and the long course using a 50 meter pool in the summer months.

AAU times have been established for each age group and category by stroke. New swimmers generally are C swimmers and as they meet the times for the next fastest categories, they move up. Age groups are eight and under, 9-10, 11-12, 13-14 and 15-17.

The objectives of the swim team program are to provide for physical fitness, develop discipline and responsibility.

The Barracudas are now preparing for the short course season. Practice is held daily from 5:15 to 7 p.m. at Briant Wells Feild House Pool. If interested, call Col. Christensen at 689-5710 or Maj. White at 687-3634 or come by the pool.

Fort Benning boxing bouts set tonight

Fort Benning's boxing team, coming off a grand showing in Smith's Station, Ala. last week, will be holding their third boxing smoker tonight at 8 p.m. at Briant Wells Field House. This will be the first indoor smoker and admission is free.

The boxing team will be taking on teams from Maxwell Air Force Base, Tuskegee, Ala. and Muscogee County. Fort Benning took on Tuskegee and Maxwell last Friday night and won seven out of eight fights.

Winners by decision were Gregory Staten, Dwayne Edwards, Carlos Young, Donald Larsen, Willie Thompson, and William Gonzalez. Roderick Williams won when the referee stopped his fight early in the second round. In their only loss of the night, Benning's Manual Dixon lost on a closely contested decision.

Coach Anthony Stoddard hopes for more of the same tonight against Tuskegee and Maxwell Air Force Base. However, he is hoping for improvement against Muscogee County, who were the main inflictors of pain in the last smoker here.

The members of Fort Benning's boxing team sacrifice their personal time to practice their sport. Their reward? Very little if the fans don't show up to cheer them on.

Dental not in bill

Story adapted from Army News Service Releases

Expanded dental care under CHAMPUS was not part of the recently approved Nunn-Warner Bill or the Department of Defense Authorization Act.

While President Carter had proposed the expanded dental changes in the Fair Benefits Package he had announced on May 26, neither the Nunn-Warner Bill nor the Department of Defense Authorization Act included the measure.

However, this dental change is still under consideration by Congress.

The Nunn-Warner Bill included many benefits for service members such as a variable housing allowance which will give service members a higher BAQ where housing costs are not met by the current BAQ, an increase of subsistence allowance by 10 percent, an increase of flight pay and the lifting of the 10 cent per mile PCS reimbursement rate.

The DoD Authorization Act included the 11.7 percent pay increase, an increase in the per diem allowance from $35 to $50 for military personnel on TDY and an increase of reenlistment bonuses from $15,000 to $20,000 for certain specialties.

ACS, prejudice aired

By Bill Powell

Editor's note: WFBG comes your way on Channel 5 in Bldg. 4 and Channel 13 on Alert Cable. While television is a visual medium, WfBG has four hours featuring music and information of all kinds. This time, from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on weekdays, is now called "Spectrum". It is called "Spectrum" because it presents a spectrum of music and specials by big name groups and recording artists.

This week, in addition to all kinds of music and command information, you'll hear rock superstar Ted Nugent perform in a special from AIRS (The Army Informatin Radio Service). "Spectrum" has a sound we think you may like.

Be listening for The Beatles in just a few weeks as well as a few other surprises. As always, consult your copy of the BAYONET or the BENNING BULLETIN for times and days scheduled.

- "Take Ten-On Your Appearance" stresses the importance of looking good in uniform and explains how you can achieve this look by being careful and paying attention to detail.
- "Army Community Service" lets you in on what ACS does to make life better for soldiers and their dependents.
- "The Asian American" is a thought provoking program on the four major sub-groups of Asian-Americans and the discrimination they've experienced. The program appeals for more understanding and a concern for their problems and basic human needs.
- "The Congress" is a program concerning our national seat of government in Washington, D.C. and the processes lawmakers go through to make an idea into law.
- "The World's Champion Hater" deals with a very disagreeable person who dislikes everyone who is different from himself. You'll see a very eye-opening example of prejudice and maybe you'll see a little of yourself as well.

Indians have proud past

Today is American Indian Day and it is time to honor the first inhabitants of our country.

With as many cultures as the European colonists some of the Indian nations were farmers, building large settlements and tilling the land with reverence, some were nomads, following the great herds of bison first on foot and later on horseback, some were warriors, proud of their stamina in battle and ingeneous tacticians.

They were both friends and foes of the European colonists. At Plymouth, Mass. the Indian's aid kept the Pilgrims alive during the first harsh winter. At the first attempted colony, Roanoke, Va. theywaged war on the English and destroyed the colony.

Without the help of Sacajawea, a Shoshone guide, it is doubtful that Louis and Clark would have suceeded. This Indian maiden often helped them navigate the Missouri River, with the languages of the Indians and kept them alive in a new land they were exploring.

With Tecumseh, the general, and his brother, the Prophet, the Indians in the Indiana Territory had leaders who could organize the different tribes and lead them to war against the encroaching settlers. They fought for many years until they were defeated at the Battle of Tippicanoe against the future president of the United States, Gen. William Henry Harrison.

A man of genius feeling the need for a written language, Sequoyah a Cherokee, saw the future alphabet for the Cherokee language in a vision and went on to create a written language, the first written language specifically created, in the history of men.

In modern times, the American Indian has been an asset to the country's defenses. In the first World War more than 8,000 indians served in the Army and Navy, 6,000 of which were volunteers. This act of patriotism led Congress to pass the Indian Citizenship Act of 1924. The act made the Indians full citizens of the United States.

During World War II about 25,000 served in the armed forces. Famous in raising the flag at Iwo Jima was Pina tribesman Ira Hayes. American Indians fought on all fronts in Europe and Asia, winning 71 awards of the Air Medal, 51 awards of the Silver Star, 47 awards of the Bronze Star, 34 awards of the Distinguished Flying Cross and two awards of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

To the utter confusion of the Japanese a group of Navajo Marines used their native language as a battlefield code.

According to Veterans Administration estimates, there are about 74,900 American Indians among the country's veteran population.

Fires: Excessive fire damage caused by hesitation

By James E. Floyd

Within the past year we have had an excessive amount of fires in family quarters here at Fort Benning more so than ever before in the history of Fort Benning. The main reason for such a great dollar loss is the fact that occupants who have a small fire try to extinguish the fire themselves before calling the Fire Department. Once it gets out of control then the Fire Department is notified. By all means if you can extinguish the fire do so, but call the Fire Department first. By notifying the Fire Department first we can have professional firemen on the way to your house before it gets out of control. Don't second guess or cuss, call us.

If you have small children do not leave them unattended at anytime. Every member of your family should be educated in fire safety as soon as possible. If you cannot educate your children as what to do and what not to do, call us we will be glad to do it for you. One of our major causes of fires is unattended children playing with matches. Another is pans with grease left on stoves unattended — results — grease fire. Still another cause is improper storage in furnace rooms, carports and storage sheds.

Let's all work together in the future and prevent careless fires in our homes. Remember — the life you save may be your own.

If you need any information pertaining to Fire Prevention, call us at 545-2883. Your fire inspectors will be glad to assist you in any way.

MPs catch assault suspect

By Deb Hilgeman

A 20-year-old male soldier was apprehended by Fort Benning military police (MP) last weekend after allegedly assaulting and attempting to rape a female soldier on post.

The 20-year-old victim said she was getting into her car after leaving the Hidden Door Club about 1 a.m. Sunday morning when the khaki-clad suspect pushed his way into her car and began hitting and slapping her. He bound her hands with a belt and reportedly told her he was going to rape her and that he would kill her if she struggled. The suspect then took the woman's keys and drove off with his abducted victim.

Two MPs, PFCs Evelyn Tardif and Jeffery Webster, on a routine patrol noticed the suspect's car weaving erratically and with the bright lights on as it headed south on Lumpkin Road. Tardif and Webster said when they turned on their vehicle's flashing blue light and closed in on the suspect's car, "He took off like a shot."

Following in hot pursuit, the MPs observed the suspect running into the woods after abandoning the vehicle by the firing ranges on Dixie Road. The victim, dressed in civilian clothing, jumped out of the vehicle and ran toward the police car, screaming she had been assaulted.

Within 10 minutes, road and dog patrols were combing the area in the search for the suspect, according to Capt. Paul Holland, crime prevention officer for the post Law Enforcement Command, who was on duty that night.

After an extensive six-hour search, and aided by an article of clothing left at the scene by the suspect, MPs apprehended the man approximately one mile from where the incident occurred.

The soldier is being held at the post confinement facility pending further investigation. He is under suspicion of violating these offenses: kidnapping, communicating a threat, indecent assault and resisting apprehension. If convicted of the charges he could receive a Dishonorable Discharge, total forfeiture of pay, reduction to the lowest enlisted grade and life imprisonment.

"MPs are becoming more and more aggressive in their efforts to prevent rapes from occurring," Holland explained. He added that many of the rape victims on Fort Benning "open the door to trouble by hitchhiking, getting into cars with men they meet at parties or bars, and so on.

"Women must be aware of the possible dangers that might result from such careless actions. Most women have heard the common rape prevention tips but don't always follow them. No one thinks it (rape) can happen to them," the captain concluded.

Fire power display

Pvt. Joe McCrorey (Loader) locks and loads another live artillery round to be fired by their 105mm Howitzer as the empty shell case of the first round comes flying out at the same time. PFC Gregory West, (right) is his assistant gunner. Both soldiers are from Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery of the 197th Infantry Brigade. The soldiers were participating in a live fire demonstration of military hardware before faculty guests of North Georgia College from Dahlonega, Ga. The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry organized the project which enabled the student body to also view the infantry squad in action.

Sweaters approved for optional purchase, wear

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--A black cardigan sweater has been approved for optional purchase and wear, say DA officials.

The black cardigan sweater will be the second optional outer garment available in black. The other one is the black windbreaker.

According to officials, the black cardigan sweater will be available as an optional purchase itemsin PX's in 14-15 months. The optional green sweater now has an expected wearout date of Oct. 1, 1983. Both sweaters, however, will be authorized for wear until then.

The men's version, an improved version of the men's green cardigan, will be more form fitting and heavier. The women's version will be identical to the green sweater now available.

Both cardigans will be made of 100 percent acrylic yarn and be washable. The men's black cardigan will cost $20 while the women's sweater will run about $12.

Officials say, the black cardigan sweater may be worn as an outer garment indoors within the immediate confines of the indvidual's working area with the Army green uniform skirt, pantsuit slacks, trousers and hospital duty uniform. Women may also wear the sweater as an outer garment with the Army green cord, hospital duty, and food service uniforms, both indoors and outdoors.

The sweaters may be worn with the short sleeve service shirt when the shirts are worn with or without the necktie or tab. The sweater may also be worn with civilian clothes, added officials.

Letters to the Editor

Appeal to parents

To the Editor:

Spencer High School has a proud heritage of academic achievements, athletic accomplishments and effective extracurricular programs, which, at one time, were backed up by a strong and formidable Parent, Teacher and Student Association. These fostered and maintained school pride and high morale among all concerned Spencer Alumni. However, in recent years, the involvement of parents in all facets of school activities has been on a constant decline. Negative perceptions and poor communication with teachers and school administration have resulted. In fact, with the total enrollment of 1,500 students, the Spencer High School PTA had 45 members in the 1978-79 and 110 members in the 1979-80 school years. Parents, this is pathetic. Today, in a very dynamic and troubled world, our young men and women need our support. We have turned our backs on our youth. If students do not realize their full potential at Spencer High School, do not blame the teachers. Parents, it is you who have failed. The teachers cannot be expected to operate total school programs by themselves.

Let's review the educational accomplishments at Spencer High School during the period 1920-1960, when positive attitudes and environment existed. Remember this was a time when teachers, students and parents had to do more with less. Spencer Alumni revealed the following facts to PTA members and school administrators recently:

The family, church and community were cornerstones of that era.

Students had pride in their school.

Teachers and school administrators were actively involved in all facets of education, athletics and extracurricular activities.

Parents were actively involved in school activities and Spencer High School had a very strong PTA.

Comprehensive extracurricular programs were conducted.

The school, church and community were an extension of the family and complememnted the development of the student.

The athletic and academic programs were conductive to high morale, pride, and self esteem. Respect of laws and morals were stressed.

As you can see, high standards were established and maintained. Parents, we are faced with a task of revitalizing the Spencer High School PTA and making sure that our youth get the best possible education. Don't cop out. The adage that no action is the best course of action may apply in some instances, but not in this situation. Don't play russian roulette with your son's or daughter's future. This could lead to compounding problems with disastrous results.

Your input is needed in the development and implementation of various programs and activities at Spencer High School. Please join your PTA amd share in the activities at Spencer. This year, plan on donating some time, effort and a few dollars to help all of our youth realize their potential. Remember, "Many hands make light work." Remember, too, the world around us belongs to youth for youth will take over its future management. Our students must never lose their zeal for building a better world. We have powerful potential in our youth and we must have the interest in helping to provide the best opportunities possible for them.

Housing solution simple

To the Editor:

After reading your Point/ Counterpoint articles in last week's BAYONET, it occured to me that the real problem is the lack of standard post housing at Fort Benning. The solution is simple. Build more housing.

Who will pay for it? Once the housing is established and families are moved in, the Army would no longer have to provide them with BAQ. The money not paid out in BAQ would provide indefinite financing for the newly established housing.

A secondary benefit would come from this solution. Existing off-post dwellings would be forced to lower their rents. The new standard post housing would reduce the demand for off-post housing thereby making them more price competitive. This would help to ease the burden of the soldier who must still find housing in the private sector.

The addition of standard post housing may not be feasible for reasons not covered in this analysis. However, it may be something the Army could look into for the benefit of all ranks.

Was it worth it?

To the Editor:

I never cease to be amazed at the way Uncle Sam shoots himself in the foot. The most recent example of this is the replacing of windows in the Custer Terrace quarters. To top it off they only replaced the bedroom windows, leaving the living room, dining room and kitchen as is. You would like to think that replacing all at the same time would be cheaper. Additionally the new windows open inwardly. And because they do, the venitian blinds must be mounted on top of the windows, three or four inches higher than they were made for, therefore, leaving a space of three or four inches from the bottom of the window for people to look in. Of course, the drapes and curtains no longer fit either, they are five or six inches short, because they must be mounted above the venitian blind. Not much we can do about the short drapes, but that part of the window that was exposed is now covered with aluminum foil; we do not plan to exhibitionists. Obviously the answer to the way things were done is that the lowest bid got the contract. If that is the case, and Sam now has to go out and buy new venitian blinds, where is the savings? I was told by the engineers that tests have shown that there is a 10 percent energy savings with the new windows. If they would have replaced them all they could have had a 20 percent savings. All in all, the windows, at least to me, are useless. You have to run the venitian blinds all the way to the top to open the window, them must open your drapes and sheers to allow room for the window to open. And of course unless you have a breeze aiming directly toward the window no air will come in, sufficiently to cool anyway, because the window cannot serve as a block to divert the wind into the house.

Soldier angry, embarrassed

To the Editor:

I have worked in Bldg. 4 for approximately eight months and on occasion have used the coffee shop on the first floor. Note, I said only occasionally. Not only are the prices completely out of line but the attitude and personality of one of the employees is particularly distasteful.

When will civilians employed at Fort Benning realize that if not for the soldiers there would be very few jobs available in Columbus. In essence each and every soldier pays their salary.

I am sick and tired of being treated like a second class citizen in my own home town. Yes, Columbus is my home town. When I take off this uniform, I am just like they are. I am at home.

It is embarrassing to me to realize that the soldiers essentially make Columbus what it is, are treated this way. If an individual does not have the decency to be polite and treat the customers with the courtesy that is expected of thsoe working in the public eye, then I feel that employee should be terminated.

Inflation hurts pay raise

To the Editor:

A lot of people are thinking that the raise we are getting next month is a good deal but, judging by the recent price increases, it is not. The military clothing store looks like they are going to be the one to benefit from the raise, not the soldier.

The price of the most necessary items are going up. Boots are going up 75 percent, gloves are going up more than 100 percent and let's not forget that most visible item, the uniform. Before, we could have bought a shirt and a pair of pants for less than $20, now they will go for close to $35. That's another 75 percent increase and they're making a big deal about our 11.7 percent raise.

Let's take a look at the Bldg. 4 cafeteria, where you have to be rich to afford lunch. You can get two bananas there for 60 cents but it would be better to go off-post and buy two pounds for the same amount.

Then there's my car. I just got a brake job on post and labor alone was $40. The parts only cost me $12. If I had gone off-post I would have paid $50 at the most. It only took them two hours to finish the job.

Finally, I heard that they were not going to allow the white T-shirt with the new camouflague uniform. The OD green T-shirts cost $3.

You may argue that I could eat in my mess hall when I complain about the food prices. If you have ever eaten in our mess hall you would realize that most of the time when you get to the front door you have to turn right around. Not even a dog would eat some of that stuff. That just means more money out of the soldier's pocket.

Whoever made up the chant, "They pay you $100 and take back 99" sure knew what they were talking about.

Driving for less

By Brad Byers
U.S. Department of Energy

Perhaps you are one of the estimated eight million Americans who have seen the TV film, "Running on Empty." This half-hour movie showed a new kind of road rally sponsored by the Sports Car Club of America and the Department of Energy.

In these rallies, drivers competed with one another to improve gas milage. Eight percent of the drivers managed to get better milage than the EPA rating for their cars.

They did it by driving smarter. And what they did, you can do, too.

First, and most important, drive at or below the 55-miles-per-hour speed limit. Most cars get the best milage between 35 and 45 m.p.h. Miles-per-gallon decrease drastically below 30 and above 50. Driving at 55 uses 20 percent less gas, in the average car, than driving at 70.

And that mens 20 percent cheaper, too.

Don't idle around

But maybe you all ready observe the speed limits, or most of your driving is in town. You can still drive smarter and save.

First, avoid idling. Tests conducted for the Department of Enery showed that, on the average, one minute of idling uses as much gas as one minute of driving at 30 m.p.h. In other words, you use enough gas to drive half a mile during every minute idling.

Also, a minute of idling uses twice as much gas as restarting the engine. So, as a rule of thumb, if you're likely to be waiting in line for more than half a minute, turn off the ignition.

The half-minute rule also applies to warm-up time. True, your car gets fewer mpgs when the engine is cold, but it gets zero mpgs when idling. After the 30-second start-up idle, drive under 35 m.p.h. for the first couple of minutes and your car will warm up more efficiently than when idling.

Don't spill milk

One of the gas-saving surprises for careful drivers is the move on out rule. Contrary to popular belief, slow acceleration actually wastes gas. Brisk but smooth is the best acceleration technique. The quicker your car shifts out of low gear, the more gas you save. But do not use jack-rabbit starts. They waste the most.

Your car uses the least gas when it is moving at a steady speed. Imagine that you have a bowl of milk sitting on the dashboard and try not to spill it. That means a steady foot on the accelerator and slowing down without using the brakes. Braking wastes the momentum gained from gas that you've all ready burned; accelerating after braking uses more gas than a steady speed would have used. So:

- anticipate traffic flow and traffic lights 10 to 12 seconds ahead (about a block in town and a quarter mile on the highway).
- keep two or three seconds of space between you and the car ahead of you.
- by decelerating well in advance, try to avoid coming to a stop light when it is red. Starting from a dead stop uses a lot more gas.

Take load off

An overweight car, like an overweight jogger, burns up fuel at a faster rate. There's not much you can do to reduce the weight of your present vehicle, but you can avoid carrying around any extra weight. For example, if you leve those two 50-pound bags of fertilizer in the trunk for a week before applying it to the lawn, you cheat yourself out of four-tenths of a mile extra you could have traveled on each gallon of gas.

Another surprise awaits those with air conditioned cars. Most of the fuel penalty for air conditioning comes from just carrying that extra weight around and from running the unit in city traffic. Some tests have indicated that keeping the windows closed and turning on the air conditioning actually uses less gas at highway speeds, as opposed to driving with the windows open. Open windows increase air resistance.

Airborne saint celebrated here

By Jan Rose

The Episcopal congregation will celebrate St. Michael's Day with special services in Sightseeing Road Chapel Monday at 7:30 p.m.

St. Michael, the patron saint of the Airborne, was appropriately chosen as the patron of the Episcopal congregation when they began meeting. The first entry in the old parish records is a baptism on Sept. 29, 1950, just 30 years ago. At that time the fledging congregation met in the old hospital chapel, a temporary building which was razed in 1956.

From 1950 through 1955 there were also Episcopal services in the Airborne Chapel. When the Army decided to remove the hospital chapel, the congregation was loaded onto a bus and taken to look at two alternatives — the then-new Sightseeing Road Chapel and an empty wooden chapel in the temporary buildings where Lavoie Manor now stands. A passenger on that bus trip recalls, "the congregation was democratic — everyone voted for the little wooden building but one — that one dissenter happened to be the Commanding General."

They set to work with scrub brushes, paint and lots of elbow grease and St. Michael's-in-the-Woods was born. The first services were held there on June 17, 1956. During the following year they reclaimed several other buildings, making a parish hall, a Sunday school and a nursery. St. Michael's was given mission status by the Diocese of Georgia.

The Army furnished the chaplain and the buildings, the rest was up to the congregation. It was not unusual to find a general or a colonel firing up the furnace early Sunday morning. By 1958 the chapel was overflowing on Sunday mornings, and the parish register notes dozens of baptisms, weddings and confirmations.

A disastrous fire in 1965 destroyed the chapel. Max Spurlin, a well-known teacher at Faith School, was one of the earliest members of the congregation. He braved the flames against the advice of the firemen, and carried out the parish silver, which had been accumulated through donations by members of the parish. The parish records were also saved.

After the fire, St. Michael's met at Sand Hill for a time, and finally moved to Sightseeing Road Chapel, where they presently meet at 9:30 a.m. Sunday mornings.

Local AUSA wins awards

Members of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) will return home from the National AUSA Meetings Oct. 13-15 with two of the organization's most prestigous awards.

Jim Blanchard, local chapter president, has been informed that the chapter has been selected to receive the Council of Trustees Award for the Best Overall Chapter and for the Chapter Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives. Both awards are in the category of those chapters with more than 900 members. In addition the chapter will receive the Lt. Gen. C.G. Dodge Award for the Best Chapter Newsletter in the same category.

In a letter to Blanchard informing him of the awards, Col.(Ret.) Ralph E. Ropp, national AUSA director of regional activities, stated, "Our heartiest congratulations to you and to the officers of the chapter for an outstanding performance this past year. I sincerely hope that we can continue to count on the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter as it continues to grow in strength in the years ahead."

The chapter will be receiving the Best Overall Award for the second time in less than 10 years. They also received the award in 1971.

The two Council of Trustees Awards will be presented during the opening ceremony of the National Meeting at 10 a.m. on Monday, Oct. 13. The Dodge award will be presented at the Chapter President's and Delegate's Workshop on Tuesday, Oct. 14 at 8:30 a.m.

Blanchard also announced that the National AUSA Awards Committee has determined that the local chapter has earned a special award for Outstanding Service to the Soldier. This award will be presented at the President's Dinner Sunday evening, Oct. 12.

The special award for outstanding service to the soldier was earned for the numerous activities aimed at Fort Benning servicemen. These activities include:

- Presenting plaques and certificates of appreciation and commendation for outstanding achievement by soldiers.
- Presenting the Soldier of the Year, NCO of the Year and Drill Sergeant of the Year with a set of dress blues, membership in AUSA and sending them to the National AUSA Meeting at AUSA expense.
- Presenting the Soldier of the Quarter, NCO of the Quarter and Airborne Instructor of the Year with engraved wrist watches.
- Providing free tickets to soldiers for area sports activities, including the Alonzo Stagg Football Game.
- Paying for food and beverages for some unit activities.

A 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) helicopter flew to Thomasville, Ga. Thursday to transport a premature baby to the High Risk Nursery Center at the Medical Center in Columbus. The flight was the 1000th MAST (Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic) mission for the medical evacuation unit.

The mission to Thomasville, Ga. marked a milestone for Benning medical evacuation unit, which has been flying to save lives for six year.

The 1000th rescue mission was piloted by Capt. Johnny West with his crew, (Co-pilot) WO Thomas Dugan, (flight medic,) SP5 Steve Martin and (crewchief) Sp4 Thomas Goulart.

The aircraft lifted off at Lawson Army airfield at approximately 11 a.m. First they flew to Columbus airport to pick up Pam Campbell and Barbara Coffman, two registered nurses from the Medical Center's high risk nursery, along with a transport incubator. The nurses had been taken to the airport by civilian ambulance to wait for the Army medivac team. The next stop was the Archibald Memorial Hospital in Thomasville to bring back Brian Bisher, the five pound premature baby suffering from respiratory problems. "We flew a straight line to Thomasville to arrive their quickly. A vehicle on the ground would have to take a longer route because of winding roads. We take the most direct route by air," explained Martin.

The helicopter landed in Thomasville, a short distance from the hospital, where an ambulance picked up the nurses and incubator rushed them to Archibald Memorial. While this was going on the medivac helicopter was refueled for the journey back to Columbus.

At the hospital nurses Campbell and Coffman quickly put the life supporting incubator into operation and readied the Bisher baby for his flight. "This was a very good and quick mission. Usually we have to stay on the ground waiting much longer but this time everything was set up and ready in Thomasville," explained Campbell.

Campbell has flown with the 498th MAST unit since its beginning in May 1974. She said, "The Medical Center is one of five referrel centers in Georgia. Thomasville is in our area. The only time MAST will not fly us is when weather doesn't permit. The 498th are a tremendous help to us."

In less than two hours on the ground the helicopter crew, nurses, and baby, in his incubator, were loaded aboard the Huey and ready for the flight back to Columbus. The baby's father Mark Bisher, minister of the Cornerstone Church of Christ in Thomasville flew back with his son.

Concerning the 1,000th MAST mission, flight medic Martin said, "Kind of nice to get the 1000th rescue mission. Our crew just happened to be on duty at the right time. Everything went really smooth. The nice thing about working here is that we're really doing something, we're saving lives."

Problems can get heavy

By Chaplain William W. Erbach, Sr.
36th Engineer Group

Can you remember taking a trip when all the family was piled in the car on a winter day to go somewhere, maybe to granny's or to see some cousins. I remember such a trip. I wasn't the small one, in fact I was a teenager and didn't want to go at all. So most of the trip I sat and pouted in the car. I remember we were on a little hill and we slid back into a snow bank. Dad and I got out, because we were the big guys, and Mom sat behind the wheel to guide the car, but it didn't work. Then all three of us got some sand and tried to get that shoveled under the wheels. That didn't work either. Dad was blaming himself for not having filled the gas tank. He said that a full tank of gas would have given us the weight we needed to provide traction for the rear wheels.

At last we were exhausted and we sat in the car hoping that a passing motorist would stop and then send help from the nearest service station. My little brother got tired of waiting. You know small kids, they get fidgety. He got out of the car and started to build a snowman. When he was ready to put the great big snowballs together I got out to help him. But I also had an idea. Those big snowballs were heavy. Why not put them in the trunk of the car? Surely they would weigh as much as a tank full of gasoline.

Dad liked the idea and together we heaved the parts of the almost snowman into the trunk of the car. This time when we tired to go up the hill, the rear wheels caught hold and we were unstuck. How about that?

All families have problems in the course of our daily living. Sometimes they are caused by the very people in the family and sometimes they are caused by other outside circumstances. Most of the time they can be overcome, but only to that degree that all in the family help. Our teenagers surely are caught up in T.V., rock and roll and blue jeans, but they are certainly not limited to that. It would pay us all well to once in awhile listen to what they have to say because their youthful eyes may be a whole lot clearer than we adults who have come to accept overwhelming problems with grace and maturity and just quit. Sometimes I think that our young people are more in touch with the world as it really is than we are who have dreams and visions that have faded or become jaded.

Major first to jump masked

Maj. Daniel D. Turner collapses his parachute harness upon recovering from his 151st jump. Turner completed all of the steps required of an Army parachutist and completed his mission in the contaminated area wearing the M17A1 protective mask.

By Billy Arthur

On Aug. 23 a 37-year old U.S. Army major made his 151st parachute jump on a remote Fort Benning drop zone. As he struggled to collapse his parachute in the 100 degree heat, two movie cameramen and two still photographers moved in quickly to record every movement, yelling from time to time for him to slow down or move this way or that to face the cameras.

After rolling up his chute and packing it into his kit bag, Maj. Daniel D. Turner, U.S. Army Infantry Board, had completed all of the steps required of an Army parachutist upon landing, and he would continue his assigned mission in the contaminated area wearing the M17A1 Protective Mask. Turner had just become the first American soldier to execute an authorized parachute jump while wearing a protective mask.

Jumps into contaminated area

The jump was the first in a series to be conducted by the Infantry Board as a part of an operational test entitled Parachute Procedures in Chemically Contaminated Areas (PAPRICCA).

The test will find out what changes have to be made to current parachuting procedures for soldiers to land safely in contaminated areas. Present training literature does not contain any such procedures nor does the Army have any experience in jumping while wearing protective masks and equipment. Data collected in the test will provide a base for developing Army doctrine, plus current interest in anything chemical is high because of the recent publicity given to Soviet chemical warfare capabilities.

Aside from the high level concern for the subject, the testing is a contest between man and his environment; the parachutist must try to land safely while restricted by the mask and hood, and keep the mask tightly sealed so he will not be overcome by any chemical that might be in the air or on the drop zone.

Acts as guinea pig

Turner, the test manager, said, "The implications of this test are obvious; it's just a matter of our finding out everything that airborne troops would need to know to be able to jump safely into a contaminated area. So we act as guinea pigs, jump, and see what happens."

Turner is well-qualified to "see what happens." He attended jump school in 1965 on Okinawa and has served in the 82nd Airborne Division, 173rd Brigade, 1st (in Okinawa and Vietnam), 5th, 6th and 10th Special Forces Groups, and participated in the Son Tay raid. He graduated from the Taiwanese Rough Terrain Jump School and began a similar program at Fort Devens, Mass. He has a private pilot's license and rides motorcycles as a hobby. Presently, Turner is the Small Arms Test Division Chief, and the Airborne Test Coordinator, U.S. Army Infantry Board; he plans to retire in January 1981.

After Turner made the first jump successfully, two other Board testers jumped wearing masks. Capt. Tommy H. Giles III and SSgt. Sherman W. Jordan made two jumps each without any apparent problems.

Testing is scheduled to continue with test jumps on Fryar Field at Fort Benning, followed by jumps at Fort Devens, Mass., with the 10th Special Forces Group and mass tactical jumps in the 82nd Airborne Division.

Standardization trains soldiers

Standardization is one way to conduct effective training and to gain a soldier's confidence, according to Gen. Edward C. Meyer, Army chief of staff.

"The U.S. Army, like all of the other great armies in history, must standardize the way it does many things if it is to train and fight as an effective team," he said.

It is for this reason that the 1st Battalion, 1/58 Infantry (Patriots), 197th Infantry Training Brigade recently displayed the load plans developed by U.S. Army Europe (USAREUR) for two of the Army's battle vehicles. The combat load plans for the Mechanized Infantry Squad Track (M-113 A-1 personnel carrier) and the Mechanized Mortar Squad Track (M-125 A-1 81mm mortar carrier) were sent to the U.S. Army Infantry School (USAIS) here from USAREUR and soldiers from Company C displayed the same load plans for these two vehicles. The display showed a full combat load inside and outside the vehicles in its entirety for the benefit of the staff, faculty and students of the Infantry School.

According to Col. William L. Shackelford, Director of Training, USAIS, the purpose of standardization of combat loads is to allow the soldier, no matter what battalion he is assigned to, to know the vehicle will be loaded the same so he won't have to relearn different ways of doing things as he moves from unit to unit.

Standardization important in battle

"Standardization is particularly important in battle for the obvious reason that when casualties occur, new soldiers or soldiers from other units can move right in and continue to fight," he said.

Shackelford went on to say that the standardization of combat loading plans is only one way the Army will standardize. Standardization will also include crew drills, NBC procedures, vehicle preoperational checks, training management, selected tactical procedures, support procedures, selected operator and crew maintenance and further training management procedures. "Standardization procedures and practices will be incorporated in the Infantry School's resident instruction," Shackelford concluded.

Freeze to last until November

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Department of the Army (DA) officials recently announced that the federal hiring freeze, imposed since Feb. 29, is likely to last until November.

The freeze, officials say, was imposed in an effort to slow down inflation and reduce the 1981 budget. Since then, the hiring restrictions have affected all DoD full-time permanent direct hire job positions, including local national positions overseas, and transfers of employees between executive branch agencies.

To carry out the program, a one-for-two hiring formula was developed. This stated that for every two employees lost from DoD, agencies could hire one employee from outside DoD.

Recently, Secretary of the Army (SA) Clifford L. Alexander Jr. expressed concern over the hiring freeze, and how it would affect Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) program goals.

With that in mind, the SA issued priority hiring guidelines to use in filling certain job positions. These positions include key mobilization positions: professional, scientific and engineering jobs in research and development; positions based on court rulings which have set fair hiring objectives for women and minorities and positions severely lacking in minority group or female representation.

The early impact of the freeze was lessened by allowing job commitments made prior to Feb. 29, 1980 to be honored. Now, officials say, the Army strength could be reduced by as much as 1,500 per month for whatever period the freeze stays on.

DA has received reports indicating some commands may be suffering greater losses than are necessary.

According to officials, there are no magic solutions to the freeze. However, commanders and managers responsible for maintaining a civilian work force should consider all possibilities for limiting these losses.

All commanders and managers should review hiring freeze rules. This will allow them to make sure all persons affected by the freeze have a clear understanding of the rules, officials say.

There are some exceptions to the freeze. These include:

- Hiring employees in emergency situations involving safety of human life and protection of property;
- Hiring employees to secure nuclear weapons, chemical agents and munitions, ammunition, weapons and critical material; and
- Hiring for the preservation of human life (patient care).

Other exceptions include the summer aides and stay-in-school programs, and the Federal Junior Fellowship Program. Also, persons in developmental jobs under the Worker-Trainee Opportunities Program who were selected from worker-trainee registers or appointed under the Veterans Readjustment Appointment Program are included.

Along with the exceptions, officials say commanders/managers should make full use of the rule that vacancies can be filled from within DoD. Jobs to be filled should receive prompt hiring action, officials add.

Projected losses should be taken into account in deciding critical hiring actions. If agencies are faced with special or unusual requirements, they should contact DA.

If, for some reason, an agency or command has hiring authorizations that can't be used, they should also contact DA so the hiring authority can be applied elsewhere.

The hiring freeze is here to stay for a while, but commanders and managers should try to minimize losses and keep civilian strength up to legal limits, offer officials.

By knowing the hiring freeze rules, projecting losses and hiring quickly, agencies may be able to reduce the impact of the freeze, DA officials conclude.

Benning pilots senior PT test

Fort Benning has been selected to pilot the first physical readiness training program and test for soldiers between the ages of 40 and 60.

Senior officers and non-commissioned officers throughout the Army will be performing PT years from now based on the standards Benning's soldiers set here this winter and next spring.

The Army decided its senior soldiers should have a program of regular physical activity in order to meet the challenges ahead if called upon to lead soldiers on todays battlefield and set the example. A soldier who is conditioned when he is 35 and continues to exercise will remain in better shape year after year than one who rarely exercise.

The Army Physical Readiness Test (APRT), will only be administered to soldiers who have first completed a mandatory medical screening and have been on the training program for at least six months.

The soldiers, chosen from units here will all be volunteers. However, any found to have a high risks physical or medical condition will be taken out of the program. The program begins with a medical screening, then the individuals current readiness levels are determined. Next, the soldiers are prescribed an individual exercise program to follow and are monitored to measure their level of training.

Test Standards for the Army Physical Readiness Test have not been validated at this time and will be announced at a later date.

Soldiers with limiting physical or medical conditions, which prohibit running will be given the opportunity to participate in alternate activities for testing physical readiness. These events may be substituted for the 2-mile-run for soldiers in this category. The activities are swimming, cycling, and walking.

Sheriff's Target

Traffic accidents and speeding on Fort Benning have for some time been a matter of great concern. During the last eight months there have been 111 traffic accidents on Fort Benning; a 14 percent increase over the same period last year. Fifty-one of these accidents were considered major (damage in excess of $250). What has been the cost of these accidents?

- Vehicle damage $19,000
- Injuries 22
- Fatalities 1

Provost Marshal
Col. Ward

Other costs include loss of productive days due to injuries, higher insurance rates, payment of deductible fees not covered by automobile insurance, court fees for those charged with the accident, personal inconvenience of being without a vehicle and the time spent in Advanced Driver Training for those found at fault in the traffic accident.

Analysis by the Provost Marshal's Traffic Accident Investigation Section reveals the primary causes for the majority of these accidents include inattentive driving, failure to obey traffic control devices, driving too fast for road conditions and speeding. Of the 51 major accidents on Fort Benning, seven were directly related to speeding.

The results of a radar speed survey conducted by the Traffic Section last month on the installation revealed that 67 percent of the 500 vehicles checked were exceeding the posted speed limits. This survey was conducted in post housing areas and on the main traffic arteries at other than peak traffic hours. Within the post housing areas, where our children play and walk to school, 87 percent of the vehicles surveyed were speeding. On our major traffic arteries, where we, our families and soldiers ride and drive, 51 percent of the vehicles were speeding.

Some examples from the survey which depict a driver's gross neglect for speed limits and the safety of soldiers and our families are:

| POSTED LIMIT | ACTUAL SPEED |
|---|---|
| • 15 m.p.h. (Housing Areas) | 40 m.p.h. |
| • 20 m.p.h. (School Zones) | 38 m.p.h. |
| • 30 m.p.h. | 54 m.p.h. |
| • 35 m.p.h. | 59 m.p.h. |

Although these figures represent the most flagrant violations, the average speed in the 15 m.p.h. zones was 23.6 m.p.h. and 43.6 m.p.h. in the 35 m.p.h. zones.

Although military police have issued 260 citations for speeding during the last eight weeks, the use of our radar is only effective for a short period of time. Military police cannot stop traffic accidents and speeding through enforcement and investigations alone. We need your help! Everyone must get involved. All drivers must make a conscious effort to obey speed limits and traffic control devices, and use good judgement when operating a motor vehicle. Commanders must stress vehicle safety and compliance with traffic laws, and take appropriate disciplinary action against violators when they are reported. Through your help we can insure the safety of all of us who use the streets and roadways of Fort Benning.

A word of caution to those who committing moving violations. A recent command policy has made it mandatory that all first offenders cited for moving violations on Fort Benning attend the Advanced Driver Training Class. Subsequent violations may result in a six-month suspension of driving privileges. The few minutes "saved" by speeding hardly seems worth the risk of a ten-hour class or loss of driving privileges. The decision is yours.

Seeks problems

A traffic safety committee seeking Fort Benning's traffic problems hasrecently been formed, according to Jack Armstrong, Directorate of Facilities Engineers(DFAE). Armstong is one member of the three man committee.

The committee has representatives from the three major sections involved with traffic: Provost Marshall's Office (PMO), DFAE and the Safety Office, said Maj. Paul Tenhet, PMO Operations Officer and another member of the committee.

The committee will look into any problem vehicle drivers may face while driving on post, said Armstrong.

By taking in the three areas of traffic control, the committee hopes to solve the traffic problems by working together, according to Tenhet.

The committee wants any vehicle operator with a problem to contact any one of the committee members. "I'm just one person. I can't see all te problems," said the third member of the committee, Fort Benning's Safety Manager Bennie Padgett.

Anyone with a traffic problem is encouraged to tell one of the members about it. Call Maj. Paul Tenhet at 545-2942, PMO operations, or Safety Manager Bennie Padgett at 545-3267. They can also write Jack Armstrong, Directorate of Facilities Enfgineers, Bldg. 330, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Major unit undergoes name cha

By Nick Aleshin

There's more to a unit than the name but that name can be pretty important. At least that iswhat the folks at Committee Group thought when they decided the name of their unit didn't do them justice. The result? Committee Group is being renamed Infantry Training Group, or ITG.

ITG was actually born about five years ago and attached to the lst Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade (Infantry). The Brigade's instructors were all assigned to Committee Group.

Then the OSUT (One Station Unit Training, in conjunction with Two Station Unit Training conducted at Fort Knox) program came along in 1978 and changed everything. Fort Benning became the testing ground for a 12-week combined basic and advanced infantry training course. The lst AIT Brigade became the lst Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) and Committee Group became a separate command under USAIC.

When Col. Ronald Jebavy assumed command of Committee Group one year ago he decided all of these changes were incomplete without also changing the name of his unit. "The name 'Committee Group' does not truly represent this unit; it doesn't tell what we do, which is train infantrymen," he explained. "Infantry Training Group, as a title, conveys this message."

According to members of ITG, under Jebavy's command the unit changed much more than its name. "Commanders, officers and the chain of command are paying more attention to the troops and their problems. For instance, the Activities Center opened for the soldiers to use. The NCO's have really shaped up, too. It's just a 100 percent change for the better," said SFC Ramon Davila, the food service sergeant with Headquarters Company.

ITG is organized into four companies with an authorized unit strength of 1037 assigned personnel. However, due to manpower shortages the current strength is 748. Altogether, the ITG is responsible for providing an average of 500 hours of training to infantry students conducted at 32 ranges, 10 classrooms and 14 other outdoor training areas. This training produces five to seven divisions of infantrymen per year, a fact which makes ITG and "infantry school" in every sense. Next year ITG will train more than 35,000 new infantry soldiers.

The instructors, 62 percent of whom are E-5 or above, give 85 different classes and average a total of about 200 classes a week. The instructors must all complete the ITG Instructor Training Course and lst Sgt. Gilberto Canino of Company B said emphasis on instructors continually training themselves is another plus resulting from recent changes.

Each company in the unit is responsible for certain areas of infantry training. Company A provides instruction in individual and squad tactics, mechanized infantry training, patrolling, MOUT, OPFOR, first aid, commo, map reading and NBC.

Act stresses courtesy needs

"While Federal employees generally display courtesy and good manners, it is important for agencies to continually stress the obligation of all employees to do so."

This statement was contained in a memorandum to heads of Federal departments and agencies transmitting a policy statement on the subject by OPM director, Alan K. Campbell.

The Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 calls for courtesy and good manners in the conduct exhibited by Federal employees.

An amendment introduced by Rep. Elliot H. Levitas (D-GA) stresses the need for Federl workers to be periodically reminded that courtesy, timeliness and quality of work service are a part of civility in government and, where appropriate, may be considered integral parts of performance appraisal criteria.

The policy statement defines good manners as an informal, commonsense term meaning of a standard of behavior among Federal employees that is polite and considerate of others. Courtesy is defined as the practice, day in and day out, of good manners.

The basic statement reads: "It is the policy of the U.S. government that good manners and courtesy will be required of all employees in all of their dealings with the public, members of Congress and employees of their own agency and of other agencies."

It further states that agency heads are responsible for making the policy known to all employees, for providing appropriate training, and for reviewing the conduct of employees for courtesy and good manners.

The policy makes clear that Federal employees should generally perform courteously even if treated discourteously by members of the public. However, employees have the responsibility to refuse to violate the law or regulations or to give special advantage not called for by law.

In addition, employees should be periodically reminded that under the Civil Service Reform Act, courtesy to the public, timeliness of performance and quality of work service are integral parts of the criteria for performance appraisal.

In his memorandum, Campbell noted that members of Congress and others repeatedly emphasized the importance of good manners, courtesy and prompt service by Federal employees during hearings on the Civil Service Reform Act.

Campbell asked department and agency heads to:

- issue a strong statement on the importance of eliminating discourtesy;
- emphasize this policy as part of new employee orientation covering the merit principles and codes of conduct;
- pursue an active program of counseling by management of all levels.

Under the policy. Federal employees are responsible for their own good conduct in their official capacity, including good manners, courtesy and civility to the public.

In addition, supervisors and managers are responsible for creating and maintaining a positive and productive work environment in which employees are held fully accountable for discourteous service to the public and inappropriate, unprofessional or irresponsible behavior.

In the OPM policy, Campbell urges the full cooperation of all Federal managers, supervisors and employees in an area that is crucial to the efficient and effective administration of government.

Privates made statue

The Infantryman statue in front of Infantry Hall was created in 1959 by two young privates.

In 1959 Paul L. Freeman, then major general and post commander, conceived the idea of a statue symbolizing the charging infantry leader. Freeman wanted the statue to portray the infantry squad leader with his arm raised in the "Follow Me" pose.

Freeman assigned the duty of finding someone to create the statue to Col. John M. Woestenburg, then post ordnance officer. Woestenburg located Manfred Bass and Karl H. Von Klug, both of whom had sculpturing experience during civilian life.

In April of 1960, the statue was placed on a pedestal erected at the edge of Eubanks Field adjacent to the permanent barracks of The Student Brigade. When Infantry Hall was completed in 1964, the statue was moved to its present location, where it is viewed annually by hundreds of troops and visitors to Fort Benning.

The Infantryman statue weighs approximately one ton. Its height is more than 12 feet and it stands on a 10-foot pedestal. The statue shows the classic pose of the infantry squad leader — powerful, charging, daring, with weapon in hand and leading his troops ever forward.

HSM approved for operations

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — The Department of Defense recently approved the Humanitarian Service Medal (HSM) for soldiers who took part in two civilian relief operations, according to MILPERCEN.

Soldiers who directly took part in the rescue and evacuation of Alabama residents during the devastation by Hurricane Frederick from Sept. 12, 1979 to Feb. 23, 1980, are now eligible for the HSM.

Also, those soldiers who have directly participated in the Cuban resettlement operation since April 27 are eligible for the award. No cut-off date has been set for this operation.

Infant products can do harm

Four types of infant products have been found to possibly be hazardous to young children.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission announced that approximately 8,000 elastic crib decorations known as "Kickers" are being recalled voluntarily by their manufacturer.

The recall is being conducted in cooperation with CPSC to prevent any potential strangulations, although no injuries have been reported to the commission or the manufacturer.

Each "Kicker" crib decoration, manufactured by Rainbow Artisans, Inc., of Livingston, N.J., consists of four or five soft-sculptured fabric designs strung on a white elastic cord. A plastic ring is attached to each end of the elastic cord so that the decoration may be stretched across a crib or baby carriage and tied to the sides with ribbons.

The crib decorations are manufactured so that if kicked or handled by an infant, the fabric designs may slide from one side of the elastic cord to the other. Such actions may expose enough elastic cord to present a potential strangulation hazard if parents place the product too close to the infant, according to CPSC staff.

The "Kickers" being recalled were manufactured from Jan. 1977 through Jan. this year and were sold nationwide for approximately $12 in retail and specialty stores.

Consumers who own this product may obtain a free repair kit by cutting the elastic cord, removing the fabric designs and mailing only the cord and plastic rings to: Rainbow Artisans, Inc., 19 Troy Drive, Livingston, N.J. 07039.

The kit includes a new cotton cord, ribbon and instructions for restringing the designs.

Approximately 2,300 stuffed mobile toys are being recalled by their importer, Albert E. Price, Inc., of Bellmawr, N.J.

The recall is being conducted voluntarily in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The recall applies to two types of stuffed animal mobiles which are intended to be suspended from ceilings or cribs by a metal spring and two white string cords.

Although no deaths or injuries have been associated with these toys, a similar toy imported by another firm was involved last year in the strangulation of an 11-month-old baby girl when she became entangled in the elastic cords suspending it from her crib. Those toys have since been recalled.

The Albert Price toys being recalled include a duck, model 9160, and an elephant, model 9161. Both toys are covered with plush fabric.

The importer's name is printed on a tag attached to each animal, and the model numbers appear on the boxes in which the toys are sold.

The toys were imported from Taiwan and distributed in the U.S. from May through Sept. 1979. They have been sold nationwide for less than $10 in toy stores and other retail outlets.

Parents immediately should cut off the cords and the spring. To receive a full refund, consumers should return the toy to the place of purchase.

To verify the model numbers, contact CPSC's toll-free hotline at 800-638-8326; in Maryland, 800-492-8363; and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, 800-638-8333.

AAFES is participating in the recall of a travel crib, model 320, produced by the Kantwet Division of Questor Corporation. The recall affects only those cribs manufactured before July 1979.

The portable folding crib, which sells for $28, has a steel frame with zippered mesh top and mesh/vinyl sides. It is also fitted with casters. A potentially hazardous condition exists because the mesh on some of the cribs easily separates from the vinyl at the seams allowing the infant to fall.

AAFES urges its customers who have bought the Kantwet travel crib to inspect the federal law tag attached to the crib pad. Units involved in the recall will not have a date stamped on the back of the tag.

Customers who have a defective unit should return it to the local exchange for refund or replacement. Requests for refund or replacement of cribs with the law tag missing will also be honored.

Bassett crib "Mandalay" Models 5126 and 5621 (yellow) or 5225 (white) and Bassett crib "Candlelite" Model 5127 (pine) or 5028 (maple) may pose a potential hazard for neck entrapment and strangulation to infants old enough to stand in the crib and place their necks into the openings between the finials and the blanket roll. Extreme caution should be exercised in the use of these cribs until properly modified.

Individuals possessing one of the cribs described above should be urged to immediately unscrew and remove all four finials (the top part of the corner posts that unscrew). All owners of such cribs are urged to report the location of the crib and to send their name, address, and model name and number to Bassett Furniture, Inc., Department 340, P.O. Box 626, Bassett, Va. 24055. The company will then send modification kits.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,300 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,300 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits. I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX. I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve. I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

How much can you make part-time with the Army Reserve?

| | Per Weekend | Per Year |
|---|---|---|
| E-3 with | | |
| 2+ years | $73.08 | $1231.41 |
| 3+ years | 76.04 | 1248.03 |
| E-4 with | | |
| 3+ years | 80.52 | 1360.44 |
| 4+ years | 86.80 | 1459.35 |
| E-5 with | | |
| 4+ years | 89.24 | 1510.38 |
| 6+ years | 95.08 | 1602.36 |

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

Services give soldiers break

Five weeks of demanding infantry training had gone by for the student soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. While the time seemed to "fly by" for most of them, the students wondered if they would make it through the remaining seven weeks.

With only one more week until the halfway point, would not some kind of break in the normal routine and a chance to talk to each other in a different atmosphere be a help in getting through?

Finally, during their sixth week of training, the future soldiers got a chance to be a part of Operation Appreciation, giving them that much needed break.

Thirty-one student soldiers from the 2nd Battalion boarded a bus on a recent Saturday night and headed downtown Columbus to the First Baptist Church where they spent an evening talking, laughing, singing, eating and praying.

"It's been great," said Pvt. 1 Robert Rodriguez from Company A, about the evening out. "It lets you be yourself for awhile."

Operation Appreciation was coordinated between Fort Benning and the First Baptist Church for the benefit of the student soldiers. The program was started nearly two years ago when Ron Collins, music director at the church, saw a similar operation at Fort Campbell, Ky. and brought the idea back with him.

Since then the program has been a big success, according to John McCallon, minister of education at the First Baptist Church.

"People aren't so appreciative of the soldier since it's peace time," he said. "The church wants to say how much we appreciate what the soldiers are doing for our country and community."

The evening began with everyone just getting to know one another and relaxing. Name tags were made and people found out if they were from the same state.

Said one student while pointing to another, "I've been training with him and we've never even talked before."

"That's because we never really had a chance," said the other. Both looked like they found a new friend.

Then the singing started and everyone loosened up. The country and western singer who was scheduled for entertainment was ill and had to leave, but the students had just as much fun putting on their own entertainment. They took turns volunteering and getting up on stage to act out pantomines, after which the others tried to guess what they were doing. Some acted out parts from "old home days" such as "slopping the hogs" and "combing their long hair", while others "put up tents during bivouac" and "dropped for pushups by the order of a "teed off" drill sergeant."

Everyone then went upstairs to the chapel for more singing and a time for prayer. The students got to pick their favorite hymns and among them were "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Amazing Grace-How Sweet the Sound". Everybody stood up during the singing of "America the Beautiful". Afterwards the students got a chance to give their own personal testimony and a prayer was led by Chaplain (Capt.) Elenito Santos from the 2nd Battalion.

According to Chaplain Santos, the program is a good one, but could be improved by getting younger people to talk to the troops. "The program is relaxing and helps the soldiers," he said. "The non-military counselors who are provided give the troops a layman's opinion on any problems they might have and want to talk about."

After leaving the chapel area, the students went back to the "living-room decor" downstairs and had their fill of sandwiches, potato chips and iced tea. They continued to talk and reflected upon the past few hours of the night.

"Everyone got a chance to express his own feelings and also to share the word of God," said Pvt. 1 Scott Morgan of Company F. "I'm glad I was able to be here; it was a great experience."

Pvt. 1 John Wilm, Company F, said it was an "overwhelming experience," and another student from Charie Company, Pvt. 1 Douglas Bracey, even compared it to "what Bob Hope did for the troops in Vietnam."

CHAMPUS gets new system

The first steps toward tying CHAMPUS into the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS) were taken at a DEERS-CHAMPUS planning conference held recently at the Office of CHAMPUS in Denver, Colorado.

DEERS is a new computer-based enrollment system affecting all active duty and retired military personnel and their dependents and survivors. It will be used to record and verify eligibility for military medical care benefits--both direct care in military and PHS facilities and care from civilian sources under CHAMPUS.

Implementation of DEERS started earlier this year in selected areas of the country and currently is being used to verify eligibility only for those seeking direct care in military and PHS medical facilities.

Use of the system to verify eligibility for CHAMPUS benefits is planned to start on Jan. 1, 1981, when Blue Cross of Southwestern Virginia, one of the CHAMPUS fiscal intermediaries that processes claims, will be tied in with the DEERS computers. A DEERS hookup with Blue Cross of Washington-Alaska, another CHAMPUS fiscal intermediary is planned on June 1, 1981.

A work group consisting of DEERS and CHAMPUS personnel was formed at the conference to carry out the addition of CHAMPUS to DEERS. As DEERS is expanded to cover all of the United States and, subsequently, overseas areas where military families are assigned, the capabilities of the system will be made available to all CHAMPUS claims processors.

Eventually, approximately nine million beneficiaries will be enrolled in the system and their eligibility for CHAMPUS benefits will be verifiable through telephone hookups with DEERS computer banks.

CHAMPUS officials say that the DEERS integration into CHAMPUS claims processing will not interfere with the timeliness of the claim processing.

DEERS is aimed at improving the management and administration of the military medical care system and eliminating waste and fraudulent pratices, according to DoD officials. Combined with CHAMPUS, DEERS is expected to reduce the number of claims that have to be returned because of inaccurate or inadequate eligibility information.

Tire reinforced inside

Run flat device being tested

A new "run-flat" device for tires is being road tested by Goodyear.

The run-flat device is a reinforced fiberglass "tire" inside a tire that rides underneath the regular tires on all four wheels.

A gentle thump lets the driver know when air has gone out of the tire.

One advantage of the device is the capability of driving up to 50 miles at speeds as high as 50 m.p.h. on a flat without damaging the tire.

Weighing about 12 pounds each, the units on all four wheels of a standard car weigh less than most of the mounted spare tires and jacks that now take up trunk space.

When a flat occurs, the weight of the car is shifted to the inner tire which rides about two inches below the trend of the inflated tire. A lubricant released inside the tire when it goes flat vaporizes to cool the trend rubber pressed between the device and the road.

Worth more than gold!

Have you heard? "Every body's worth more. How much is that body of yours that you protect with safe driving worth? Well, it's worth more all the time because of inflation. The value of the human body's chemical elements are worth an all-time high of $5.60 compared with 98 cents in 1936, says Dr. Ernest Tillman, a staff physician at the Monsanto Chemical Company."

Boxers blaze at smoker

By Tim Boivin

If one word could describe the Fort Benning boxing team after the smoker at Briant Wells Field House Friday, it would have to be gutsy.

Time after time a Benning boxer would climb into a ring against fighters that seemed to clearly outclass them. Although the Doughboys lost five matches, they survived on pure guts to take six of the matches from their opponents.

The Doughboys took on teams from Maxwell Air Force Base, Tuscegee, Ala. and Muscogee County. Of the four teams, Muscogee County did the best with their two fighters dominating their fights, one of them the feature event.

In that feature fight, Muscogee's Donnie Bell Flower took on Committee Group's Roderick Williams. Bell Flower, the Amateur Athletic Union's state runnerup, was expected to easily defeat Williams. However, Williams hung tough and was warding off Bell Flower's advances until the start of the third round.

The crowd sprung to its feet and roared its approval as the fighters came out in true smoker fashion, trying to blaze each other with early combinations. Bell Flower's was winning both the first and second round on points as he was connecting with more punches.

In the third round Bell Flowers stepped up the attack and kept cornering Williams. Williams fought his way out of the corner until Bell Flowers got him on the ropes and then pressured him into the final, fatal corner. Williams seemed hopelessly trapped and the referee stopped the fight at 2:45 of the third round.

In the first fight of the night, a featherweight bout between Maxwell's Darren Kennedy and Benning's Manuel Dixon, there was a lot of leaning between the two fighters and they seemed to be hopelessly caught in a clinch. It looked like Dixon could have won the fight if he hadn't been leery of throwing the followup punch once he connected.

Despite pleas from his corner, Dixon never did connect with a solid combination unless he was in a clinch and was forced to fight his way out. Meanwhile, Kennedy was taking a slight advantage in points and won a unaminous decision 60-54, 59-58 and 59-56.

In the second fight Benning's Carlos Young started out slow and then surprised the crowd by coming on strong against Muscogee's other fighter, Ray Juhan, before losing a close decision. When the fight started it looked more like a back alley brawl than a boxing match. Juhan connected more and dominated the first round right to the bell, when he had Young in a corner.

Young seemed to lose interest in the fight through the second round and might have lossed his chance to stage an upset. Whenever the referee stopped the fight Young would gaze around before returning to do battle.Meanwhile, Juhan concentrated totally on the task at hand and ended up winning a unaminous decision 59-56, 60-57 and 60-57.

In the third fight of the night Benning fans got what they came for as they saw Gregory 'Slim' Stanton knock down Maxwell's Jeffrey Martin twice before the referee stopped the fight. The merciful end came at 2:50 of the first round.

Benning's Darren Turman hurt Maxwell's Bryant Simpson in their middleweight fight and went on to score a unaminous decision. Turman had knocked Simpson down in the third round and the grimaced look on Simpson's face belied the pain he was in. Simpson gallantly stayed in while Turman went for the knock out but the unaminous decision went to Darren 60-57,60-51 and 60-54.

In the heavyweight fight, Benning's DeWayne Edwards seemed to have his fight completely under control. He stalked his opponent, Maxwell's Calvin Palm, from corner to corner throughout the first round and won the round. However, in the second round Palm came out of a clinch and knocked Edwards out with a right. The time was 1:30.

Benning's Carlos Young uses combinations to come on strong in his fight against Muscogee County's Ray Juhan. The late rally by Young wasn't enough as the referees awarded the fight to Juhan in a close decision.

In other fights, Benning's Anthony Morris won his light middleweight fight with Maxwell's Wayne Newhouse by knockout at 1:10 of the second round. Benning's Willie Thompson lost a split decision to Maxwell's Gary Terrell 59-58, 59-58 and 51-60. The Doughboys DeWayne Edwards and Kelvin Green both defeated their opponents from Tuskegee by retirement.

One boxer who typified bullish beliggerence all night long was welterweight Samuel 'Shorty' Gonzalez. In the first round of his fight with Tuskegee's Bernard Holland, Gonzalez couldn't overcome Holland's superior reach and instead tried, unsuccessfully for the most part, to maneuver close to Holland's body.

The strategy to stay close was Gonzalez' only hope and he was rewarding when his tight punches began to take their toll on Holland. Holland's corner threw in the towel at 1:35 of the second round and the Benning team, not to mention the crowd, showered Gonzalez with adulation for his efforts.

Saturday night the boxers travelled to Fort Payne, Ala. and took three out of five fights. Roderick Williams, Darren Turman and James Prittle all won by decision while Kelvin Green lost by decision and DeWayne Ellis succumbed to a close referee's decision. The Doughboys next fights will be Oct. 10 at Fort Stewart, the Inter-Service Matches Oct. 17 at Maxwell Air Force Base and the next smoker here, Nov. 7 against Fort Campbell.

Seahawks outgain Cowboys

By David Bristow

A real defensive battle developed in the Grasshopper division when the Seahawks finally won in overtime over the Cowboys, 9-8. The Seahawks scored first and later scored a safety to give them an 8-0 halftime.

In the third period, the Cowboys came back with a touchdown on their own. The extra point was good and the score was 8 to 8. The Seahawks finally won the game in overtime where the penetration rule comes into effect. The overtime ended with the Seahawks on the Cowboys 18 yard line. Outstanding offensive player for the Seahawks was Bryan Richardson. Star defensive players were Ray Hoggard, Shawn Gentry and Charles Marshall.

In the Midget division this week, the Tri-City Panthers came back from a defeat by the Lavoie Seahawks last week to stage an upset over the previously undefeated Falcons by the score of 20-0. In the Panther win Ike Wychc scored two touchdowns. Fernando Jones scored the other touchdown with Kevin Sparks adding the extra points.

Elsewhere in the Midget division, two touchdowns were scored by Bruce Johnson in that Seahawks 18-14 win over the Packers. One of the touchdown's scored by Johnson was a 70 yard punt return. The go ahead winning touchdown for the Seahawks was scored by Terrell Telfare with 20 seconds left in the football game.

Doughboys shot down by Miles

By Tim Boivin

Miles College came into town at dusk Saturday looking bigger, badder and quicker than the Doughboys and handily defeated them in a shootout at Doughboy Corral, 40-21.

Golden Bear running back Christian Sealie went over from the two with 9:09 left in the first quarter and when Robert Davis connected on the extra point, the Doughboys found themselves quickly down 7-0.

After Davis' field goal in the second quarter gave Miles a 10-0 lead, the Doughboys regrouped and drove for their first score of the game with Christian Lamar pounding across from the two. The extra point was good to narrow the Golden Bear lead to three, 10-7.

Near the end of the half the Golden Bears drove for another score with the help of field goal kicker Davis' right toe. His 23 yard field goal raised the Golden Bear lead to six at the half.

Miles picked up second half action right where they had left it off and were again the first to score. Golden Bear quarterback Joel Handy went around right end to score from the seven. Backup quarterback Avery Young mishandled the snap on the extra point try but recovered in time to pass to another backup quarterback, Dennis Barnett. The harried two point conversion raised the lead to 21-7.

The sputtering Doughboy offense came right back when quarterback Leamon Hall connected on a 28 yard flea flicker to Clennie Brundidge for a first down at the Miles 13. After two defensive pass interference penalties, Hall scored on a sneak from about the half yard line. Andre Tyler connected on the extra point to make the score 21-14.

Doughboy euphoria was short lived as Golden Bear quarterback John Handy came back on the next series to hit wide receiver Bobby Gamble for a 68 yard touchdown strike.

Golden Bear reserve quarterback Young entered the game in the fourth quarter and immediately passed to Sealie for a touchdown from the Doughboy one. Davis' conversion raised Miles lead to 35-14.

The Doughboys managed to strike once more as Hall hit wide receiver Gregory Knight for a 60 yard touchdown pass. The ball bounced off three Golden Bear's hands who had converged in their lust for an interception before popping into the hands of Knight at the 25 yard line. He easily outdistanced the disgruntled defenders to the goal line to close the gap to 35-20.

The third Golden Bear quarterback, Joel Dodson, hit Patton Lewis for the final score of the game from the 18 yard line. Davis missed the extra point and the final score was 41-20.

The Doughboys take on Fort Bragg tomorrow in North Carolina. They return home next Saturday to take on the University of Alabama's junior varsity. Game time is 7:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium on Ingersoll Street.

Saturday night the Doughboy defense, like Jeff Tobias(54), spent most of the game chasing down wayward Miles College running backs. The defense wasn't the only ones having their problems against the big and bad Golden Bears during the game. While the defense was running after the Golden Bear's fleet of quick running backs and receivers...

...the Doughboy offense wasn't faring too well themselves. Leamon Hall passed for 207 yards, much of it in the fourth quarter when the game was already beyond salvaging. The running backs, like Christian Lamar(44), totaled only 67 yards in 40 rushes for a 1.67 yard average. Reuben Collins(22) makes the tackle on Lamar, who was the star of the game just a week ago in the Doughboy's home opener against Carson-Newman College.

Beautiful loser in winner's world

By Tim Boivin

Bruce Springsteen was "Born To Run." Until I came to Fort Benning, I was born to lose, or at least to support losing teams.

It goes all the way back to my childhood and being raised in a Catholic family of six. Now I'm here at Fort Benning supporting and writing about, of all things, winning sports teams.

As a youngster, I lost at everything. I think my sisters conspired to make me lose. Gin Rummy, Monopoly, Chinese Checkers and even when it would come to what we would watch on television, I would lose. Before my brother came along when I was seven, and until he was five, I also lost at the chores.

While my sisters got the easy things, such as dishwashing, vacuuming, or sending Christmas cards, I would get all the tough work. I moved air conditioners, cleaned gutters(YUK) and cut the lawn, which was hilly,usually flooded and about the size of a football field.

It was only natural then that I would support losers in sports. There were the Cubs in baseball, the Bulls in basketball, the Bears in football and the Black Hawks in hockey. All these teams would show delusions of grandeur, just to fall by the wayside because of bad drafts, trades or management.

The Cubs were my first love. The year: 1969. The first year I took interest in sports. That year the Cubs folded quicker than a secretary sending out the last piece of correspondence on Friday. The Mets (from New York, of all the hated places) came from eight games back in late August to take the pennant and eventually, the World Series.

After that, the Cubs were never the same. The excitement, the craziness and innocence of 1969 was gone. Now their in last place and probably would give my 1972 Little League team a good game if they got the right breaks. That team was 1-17.

My hometown, Chicago, is known as the Second City, but why do we have to keep finishing that way? Maybe because it's also known as the Windy City and the teams are just whistling in the breeze, blowing their chances away.

I don't know how much longer I can take Fort Benning sports. Their basketball team wins, their football team wins, their boxers win and their softball team wins. I tend to get excited when I'm talking about Fort Benning sport teams and begin ranting, raving and generally foaming at the mouth. People start looking at me googly-eyed and walk away shaking their heads, muttering something about that new fashion trend, straitjackets.

However, I am getting better. I think I've found the cure to my insanity. To keep my euphoria down, I just take a look at the standings in the morning paper. Yup, there's the Cubs 24 games out of first place and the White Sox 27 and one-half out. Ground Control, this is Armchair One, prepare for a soft landing.

The action was fast and furious at French Field in the competition for the Grange Cup Polo Championship. Although Louisville looks like they were on the attack in this picture, most of the game it was the other way around. Atlanta waltzed away with a 4-0 victory and the Grange Cup.

Columbus takes third

Atlanta wins Grange Cup

By Tim Boivin

In a battle for the Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. Cup, Atlanta's Polo team shutout Louisville, Ky. on French Field Sunday 4-0. Louisville had defeated the Columbus Polo Club in a come-from-behind semifinal victory 5-4 to advance to the championship game.

Tom Brown and his grounds crew had the field kept in fine shape both Saturday and Sunday as eight teams came to compete for the Grange Cup. Atlanta and Ocala, Fla. sent two teams each while Columbus, Charleston, S.C. and Louisville and Lexington, Ky. each sent one team.

In the Columbus-Louisville game, Columbus jumped out with three quick goals to build a seemingly insurmountable lead in the first period. However, Columbus committed major fouls close to their own goal late in the contest and Louisville converted them into four easy goals. The other goal came on a regular shot during the game and Columbus was forced to watch the championship from the sidelines.

In the championship match, Atlanta used a combination of pure horsepower, speed and finesse to put the game away early. Dolph Orthwein led the attack with two goals while Bill Douglas and Winship Rees both added one in the second period. The other player on the championship Atlanta four man team was Dave Smith.

Movie review

Black Hole buries itself

By Bill Powell

"The Black Hole" is one of the latest films from the Walt Disney Studios. It is also a one of a kind Disney picture in that it is rated "PG" or Parental Guidance suggested instead of the usual "G" or General Audience rating which has always been a Disney trademark.

The reason "The Black Hole" has its "PG" rating is that it includes some "adult" language and maybe a tad more violence than the usual Disney picture. But for my money it probably could have been given for the story line of the movie. This movie is one of a group that sought to cash in on the popularity of "Star Wars." It's complete with robots that are cute, aliens that aren't, and lots and lots of science fiction hardware designed for quick sale later in toy version.

The stars of this movie are Maximillian Schell and Anthony Perkins who do the best they can with what script they have. The story briefly is about some explorers who happen upon a giant ship in space containing, what else, a mad genius who wants to explore the depths of a black hole. A black hole is a phenomenon in space that supposedly extends into another dimension or time, or both. The mad genius is the one who has the burning desire to find out.

To be quite honest with you I was disappointed in this movie. Somehow I've come to expect more from Walt Disney Studios than a partially boring story with a "what does the ending mean? conclusion. Children may enjoy the flash and the cute robots but as far as their understanding the story line I doubt they will. If this is the best Walt Disney Studios can muster in their first venture into the area of "PG" movies then I would suggest they go back to re-releasing "Bambi," "Fantasia," "Snow White" and all of the other proven family pictures.

It's clear to me from this effort that Walt Disney Studios have fallen on hard times by giving up their family image by putting "PG" on a "turkey" like this. I give "The Black Hole" one star for effects and a black hole to go into so audiences won't have to see it. ★

Programs offer change

By Bill Powell

When someone says, "Television is a vast wasteland," they are requoting a former Federal Communications Commission Chairman named Newton Minnow. WFBG-TV is here to offer a difference in television viewing. WFBG offers hard-to-find news, entertainment and features. A combined television and radio program called "Spectrum" runs from 2 until 6 p.m. and offers music and information about Fort Benning

The television programming has more historical military films than anywhere else. Following are highlights of programs coming up next week:

●"Drill Sergeant" is a program that gives a look at the world of the drill sergeant. Reportedly one of the hardest workers in today's Army these dedicated NCOs bring order out of chaos and make civilians into soldiers.

●"Combat Bulletin #37" gives a close-up look at the action in 1945 on Leyte and Mindoro as well as Nazi action in the east.

●"The Man on the Hill" is a member of Congress. This program is on the activities in the typical day of a lawmaker.

●"Espionage Target — US Army" is a story of intrigue. This program shows how unwitting Army personnel fall into the trap of giving away secret information by compromising their consciences. The proper procedures for deterring this threat are also shown.

●"Trying to Work It Out" is the story of a confused young man who looks to his chaplain for help and guidance in sorting out his feelings and identity.

Was Benning a pasture?

By T. A. Sabel

This Tuesday marks the 62rd anniversary of Fort Benning. From a camp that was built in seven days to the modern infantry center it is today, Fort Benning hasn't done too badly.

The whole idea began on Sept. 12, 1918 when the War Department decided to transfer the three sections of infantry training to a central location located at an 85-acre site east of Columbus, Ga. on Macon Road.

The camp's first commandant, Col. Henry E. Eames, arrived from service in Hawaii to find his assignment an un-named and unbuilt camp in a dairy pasture. Maj. John Paul Jones, construction quarter master, assisted Eames in the construction of the camp. Word was received that in seven days the first troops would be arriving from Fort Sill to begin training but the camp was still an undeveloped pasture. Jones, gathering materials and workers, often in a catch-as-catch-can situation, managed to construct temporary quarters and other buildings. On Oct. 6, 400 enlisted men and officers arrived from Fort Sill "before breakfast".

Benning almost abandoned

After the end of World War I, there was a conscientious move by most Americans and Congress to disassemble much of the war-time temporary camps. An order arrived on Jan. 17, 1919 calling for the abandonent of Camp Benning and to salvage the equipment.

Jones took the word "salvage" to heart and, armed with the definition of "salvage" to mean "save," went on to repaint and preserve the camp he had worked so hard on.

The 1920s heralded many changes for Camp Benning. To start off the decade, the War Department approved in April special regulations prescribing courses the modern infantry school would conduct. This infantry school would, in time, become what is now known as the School Brigade.

Camp becomes fort

Secretary of War Wainwright visited the burgeoning camp in January, 1922. He was so impressed with the camp and the school that Camp Benning became Fort Benning a month after his visit and a permanent housing program began that year.

Training in the 1920s included courses that seem odd in today's modern Army. Courses for officers included many hours of animal husbandry and officers were expected to ride a horse well.

With the threat of war rising in Europe in the 1930s, training at Fort Benning was pushed into high

The first housing at Camp Benning was little more than a city of tents. The camp was built in just seven days under the direction of the industrious Maj. John Paul Jones.

Votes make difference

By T. A. Sabel

There's little more than a month left in the political campaigning in this year's election. The politicians and their campaign managers have been hitting all of us with a barrage of media hype.

Some may think that this Madison Avenue approach to our American elections has lessened the value of our votes. This year we have three major candidates running for President instead of the time honored two. This makes each individual vote more important than ever.

There are some cynics in the crowd who say that their single, puny little vote doesn't matter. They're wrong. The record shows how a single vote could have changed history.

Without the single vote he received in 1923, Adolph Hitler would not have gained leadership of the Nazi Party.

One vote in 1868 saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

Texas would not have been admitted into the Union if it were not for the vote cast in 1845.

We would be speaking German had one vote been different in 1776 when English was adopted as the official language of America.

One vote, your vote, counts. All the members of the House of Representatives, except those retiring, are running for election; 34 Senate seats will voted upon.

The trend in the country is towards closer, not landslide, elections. More than ever, your vote counts.

Fire Prevention Week

Honor firemen, prevent fires

By Joseph C. Alford
Fort Benning Fire Chief

During our observation of Fire Prevention Week, I want to pay tribute to an important group of unsung heroes, the firefighters of Fort Benning.

As men and women of the military and civilian population, we understand and share many of the same challenges and risks faced by our firefighters. We share a similar purpose for each of us is trained to accomplish a mission.

However, the firefighters' job is different from other jobs. Most of the people living and working here, from clerks to MPs, from soldiers to civilians, know they can return home after a day of hard work the same way they left, on their feet.

Firefighters are never sure. When a firefighter kisses his wife and children when he leaves for work the family make a conscious wish that he will return to them. His wife hopes she will not have to make fast, desperate arrangements for a babysitter so she can visit him in the hospital. Each time there is a knock at the door she hopes that the fire chief, chaplain or other official will not be there to say kind words about how good a firefighter he was and how brave and dedicated he had been.

Last night while you and your family slept a firefighter stood a lonely watch. Silent alarm bells, dim lights and a quiet telephone were his only companions as he waited for the alarm to sound. Had the alarm sounded, firefighters only a few feet away would have immediately gone into action, prepared to risk their lives for you and your property.

They are so reliable that we take them for granted. If you pick up your phone you may or may not get a dial tone. If you get on a bus you may or may not get stuck in a traffic jam. The electric wall outlet may or may not have current. But you know the firefighters and their trucks will come when you dial 117.

We count on them to risk their lives for us. We count on them to put out a small trash fire at two o'clock in the morning. We entrust our lives and our children's lives to them.

This week we should let them know they can count on us to recognize the importance of year round fire prevention and that we will do all we can to prevent death, damage and destruction by fire in the upcoming year.

C. G.'s message

The President of the United States has dedicated by proclamation next week as Fire Prevention Week.

All personnel, military and civilian, are urged to cooperate in the program "to assist the national effort to reduce loss of life and property from fire."

The theme for Fire Prevention Week this year is Partners in Fire Prevention.

Partners in fire prevention means working together with others, family, neighbors and the fire department, to make homes and community safer from the hazards of fire.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled many events during the week to emphasize the importance of fire prevention to include fire demonstrations, visits to all schools and rides for the children.

Let's all support our fire prevention program at Fort Benning and have a fire safe 1981.

Advance course still teaching

Gen. Edward C. Meyer, Army chief of staff, and Gen. Donn A. Starry, TRADOC commander, decided to retain the Officer Advanced Course during a Sept. 19 meeting.

An earlier Review of the course's Education and Training study (RETO) had recommended the elimination of the Officer Advanced Course in favor of short, temporary duty, job specific courses enroute to new assignments.

However, after a careful examination of this and other alternative proposals by all of the service schools, one consistent finding kept emerging: the Officer Basic Course followed by service in the field, then assignment to the Advanced Course provides the right training at the righttime in an officer's career. It helps prepare lieutenants and captains to train, command and serve in staff positions through the brigade level.

This decision keeps the present resident training structure with the Officer Basic Course upon commissioning followed by the Officer Advanced Course intact. New training for senior O-3's be added.

This training will include a Combined Arms Service (CAS) College course at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. CAS will be attended by senior captains in their seventh to ninth year of service and is designed to prepare the officer to function at higher staff and installation levels.

Gen. Meyer also supported continuation of the Officer Job/Task Analysis Program currently being conducted Army-wide. The Infantry School is one of the four pilot schools in the Company Grade Job/Task Analysis Program.

At the meeting Gen. Meyer also reaffirmed his support of the Military Qualification System (MQS). Under this system, an officer would be required to progress through three different levels of military skills: MQS 1 (precommissioning), MQS 2 (0-3 years of service) and MQS 3 (4-10 years of service).

The officer will be certified at each skill level. Each MQS is divided into two components: military skills and knowledge and professional military education. The military skills and knowledge component consists of those skills and knowledge which an officer requires to perform successfully at the moment or in the immediate future in his specialty.

gear. The 2nd Armored Division was activated under the command of Gen. George S. Patton, The Officer Candidate School came into being, and the fledgling paratrooper training, later to become the Airborne School, was being tested.

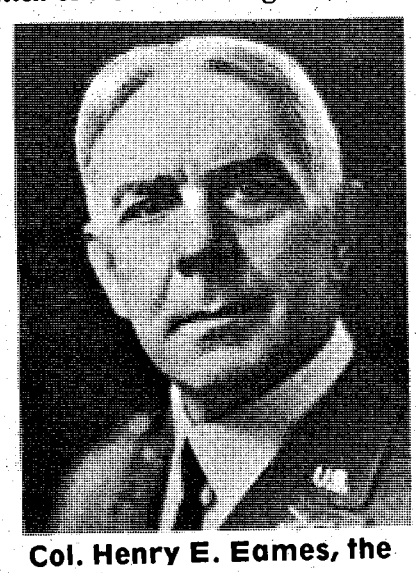
In April of 1940 a construction program began, including road improvements, sewage disposal projects and the now outdated wooden barracks.

Then Brig. Gen. Omar Bradley was commandant of The Infantry School during the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the outbreak of World War II.

Training was accelerated. Nine-month classes were shortened to three and a half months. Twenty-six classes were in continuous sessions in The Infantry School by late spring of 1941. During the war years, 66,141 second lieutenants were graduated from OCS and 204,425 airborne students were graduated.

Other training was also affected by the war. Some courses were halted altogether while others were shortened. These shortened courses enabled the Army to get more trained troops into the field and onto the front.

In the past 63 years, Fort Benning has hosted a vast array of dignitaries both domestic and foreign. Six presidents have visited here: Harding, Roosevelt, Truman, Johnson, Eisenhower and Carter. The foreign dignitaries have included such notables as Field Marshall Montgomery and the late Lord Mountbatten of the United Kingdom, Crown Prince Constantine of Greece, King Hussein of Jordan and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.



Col. Henry E. Eames, the first post commander, arrived to find himself in command of an unnamed and unbuilt camp in a dairy pasture outside Columbus.

Hand in hand with the history of Fort Benning is the history of The School Brigade. Until the brigade was founded the various Army infantry courses were scattered in different places under different names. Due to its central location, Columbus was chosen as the site for the future infantry schools and Fort Benning.

Infantry School did it all

Until 1940, The Infantry School directed administered, and taught all students. As the country prepared to meet the war, it was shown that the Infantry School could not direct classes for the students as well as cope with all the administration problems.

At first, the three training battalions were combined into the Student Training Brigade.

Later, The Infantry Service Command was formed to administer and house the instructors and permanent party members within The Infantry School.

With the declaration of war, training was pushed beyond earlier limits. The Department of the Army ordered the school to begin training 14,000 officer candidates at one time. By this time, the school's training units were again reorganized into the First, Second and Third Training Units.

Despite these changes, there was still a problem with the administration of the students. For a more far reaching solution, a separate and independent unit was needed to take the responsibility for administering the 17,000 students at Fort Benning in the spring of 1942.

Student Training Brigade formed

The Student Training Brigade was formed in the summer of 1942 to take care of all the students assigned to The Infantry School. At this time there were four training regiments: two for OCS, one for student officers and one as a specialized training unit for enlisted members training in radio and tracked vehicle maintenance courses.

Toward the end of the war, the demands on the School lessened and The Student Training Brigade was disbanded with its duties reverting to The Infantry School Detachment and one student training regiment.

In 1951, in response to the demands of the Korean War, the unit was renamed the 1st Student Brigade. OCS was reactivated and the Ranger program was increased. By 1959, the unit was once again renamed The School Brigade and has remained almost unchanged until the present time.

The School Brigade now handles OCS, IOBC, IOAC and various NCO schools.

Infantry Training Group vital

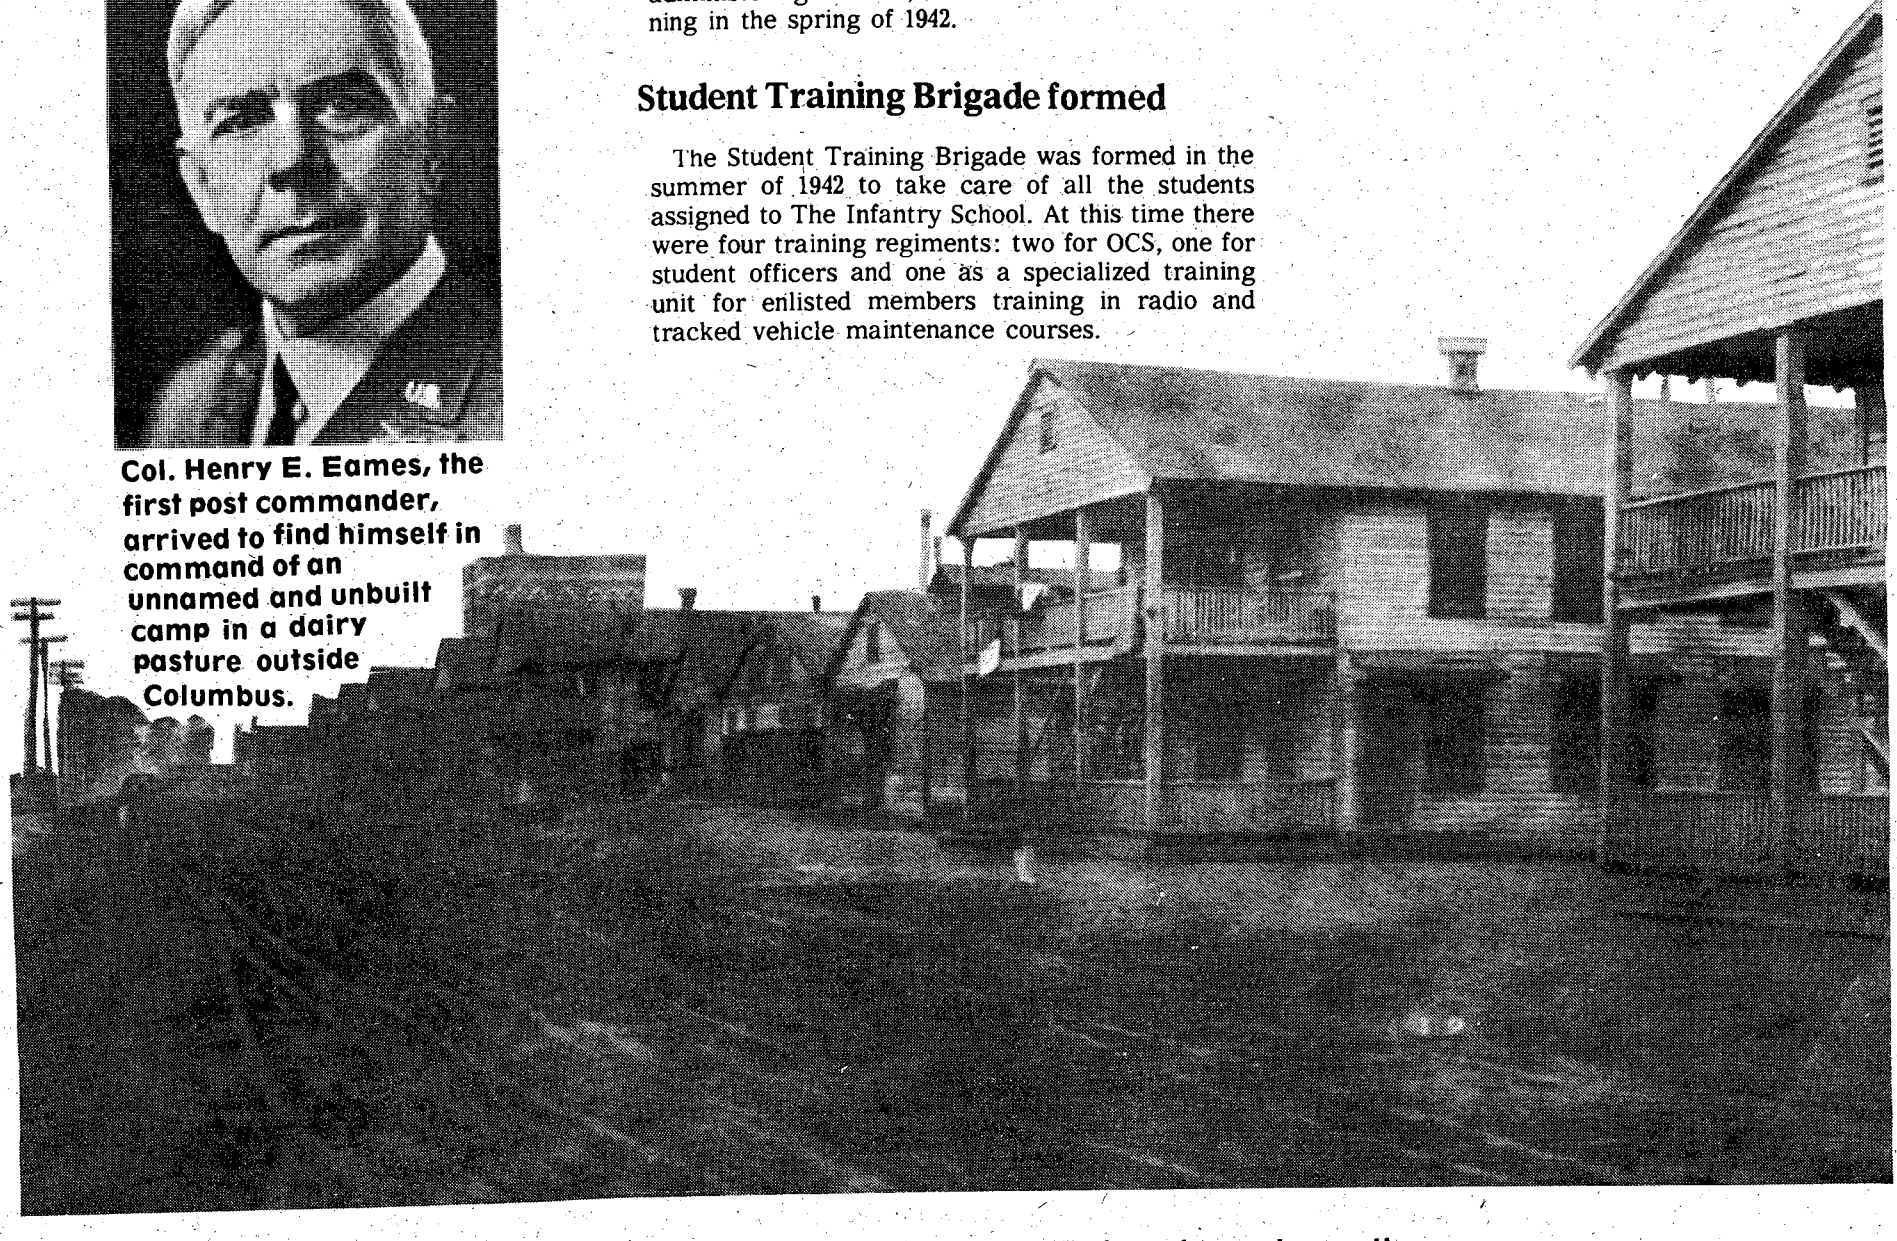
The Infantry Training Group (formerly Committee Group) is responsible for providing an average of 500 hours of training to infantry students conducted at 32 ranges, 10 classrooms and 14 other outdoor training areas. The training produces five to seven divisions of infantrymen per year. Each company in the unit is responsible for certain areas of infantry training. Some of the subjects taught are squad tatics, mechanized infantry training, Military Operations on Urban Terrain (MOUT), TOW, ITV, rifle marksmanship and map reading.

The training the schools provide makes Fort Benning the "Home of the Infantry".



An early street scene from Fort Benning shows how drastically housing has changed over the years.

ITV training hits mark

By Mike Ungar

"Gunner-Tank-Deflection 145 degrees-Range 2800 meters-Fire."

The gunner turns the mode select switch to erect and hits the erection drive switch. The turret is heard moving into the erect position, then he hears a loud clank. The locking pins just fell into place. The gunner sees the erection lights come on. He quickly turns the turret using the slew switch to 145 degrees. "Target Identified," screams the gunner.

SSgt. Thomas Tompkins, instructor with the Improved TOW (anti-tank optically wire-guided missle) Vehicle Course, checks his watch, "19 seconds, not fast enough!" The standard is 17 seconds.

Sighting in on a target is just one of the tasks needed to complete the Improved TOW Vehicle (ITV) Trainer/Transition course.

The ITV course graduated its first class in February. Since then, four additional classes have completed this course taught by the Anti-Armor Missile Division of the School Brigade.

The course is designed for all TOW qualified service members going to units having or receiving the M901 Improved TOW Vehicle. The course is what SFC MarshaLL Baker, ITV course principal instructor, terms a "self-taught course." After initial training, the students are allowed to help each other and practice on their own with instructor supervision. Then they are tested to see how they have progressed. If they have not met the standards, they practice until they meet them.

The ITV is replacing the TOW weapon system mounted on the M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier. The advantages the ITV has over the older system are significant. The ITV can be fired with the crew completely protected from small arms fire and air burst artillery. The older system left soldiers exposed to this fire and artillery. The older system also was not able to hide behind a hilltop as well as the new ITV can. Finally, the ITV can fire two missiles down range without reloading while the older system could only fire one.

Divided into three parts, the first part of the course involves a one-and-a-half-day TOW refresher course. This brings everyone up to the same level in the use of the TOW.

The second part is hands on training with the ITV at Appari range. Along with sighting in on a target, several other tasks must be mastered. One of the first tasks taught is crew drill. "Dismount the TOW!" signals the crew to remove the TOW from the ITV and set it up 25 meters from the vehicle. "Install the TOW!" alerts the crew to return the system to the ITV.

The Operations Checklist or OCL is one of the most difficult tasks to learn. This 28-step checklist must be performed prior to putting the ITV into operation. The first time the students go through the OCL, it takes nearly three hours to complete. The student's goal is twenty minutes.

Other tasks include qualification with the M70 trainer, manual operation of the turret without the use of vehicle power, maintenance of the M113 type vehicle, tank identification, and target engageability, and drawing a correct range card.

The final day of the hands on training is highlighted with the live fire of the ITV. The top gunner from the three mornings of qualification training is given the one $5086 live TOW round. The target is a M113 hull 2800 meters down range. The missile will travel as fast as the speed of sound and will impact on the target within 16 seconds. Sgt. Brian Olson, from Company B , 1/29th Infantry, the last class' top gunner, had a direct hit with his missile. He was heard to remark, "The gunner can hardly detect the noise or backblast sitting in the ITV when he fires the missile." This enables greater accuracy in firing.

The third part of the course is three days of training management and tactics classes. The final day is a written test covering these subjects. Upon graduation, soldiers receive an "Echo-9" on their 11H MOS to tell commanders of their specialty training.

The ITV Transition/Trainer course is not the only course training soldiers on the ITV. Soldiers are being trained during ITB at Lee Field and there will soon be a similar course taught to personnel at Fort Knox, Ky. In Europe, there is another Transition/Trainer course which trains instructors from units receiving the ITV.

OCS: Reunion brings back memories for officers

Officers Candidate School Commemoration Day, Saturday, brought approximately 175 OCS graduates back to the home of OCS.

Beginning with opening ceremonies at Wigle Hall, OCS's hall of fame, the former candidates were given a tour of the 5th Battalion area by the commander, Lt. Col. Ralph Burr. The ceremony included a slide presentation showing how OCS has changed over the years. After this presentation Burr entertained questions from the audience.

After lunch at the Officer's Club the group went to Victory Pond's OCS Confidence Course. While watching one of the current classes manuever through the water obstacles some of the visitors commented on how OCS has changed.

When OCS began 39 years ago, some of the organizers were not sure how the school would be run, according to retired Col. Starley N. Boykin, one of the original TAC officers.

"The only guidance we had was the training of the 90-day wonders of World War I. We did everything from scratch," said Boykin. "We tried whatever would work. We began using peer evaluation to test the students, a first as far as I can remember."

At the heighth of OCS training during the war a new class would come in as one was graduating. "We were using some of the graduates to train the new classes," concluded Boykin.

Retired Lt. Col. Alfred H. Chappel said that in his class, class 68 of 1942, they did not have the sophisticated obstacle courses now available. "All the water we had to work in was the Upatoi and the Chattahoochee. We first waded the Upatoi in full field equipment and then we crossed the Chattahoochee. We had a difficult time swimming the river; we were pretty well saturated when we got out," said Chappel.

Though a war time candidate, he recieved little news of the war. "We were too busy training during the day and spending time in the study halls in the evening. The only paper we had was the BAYONET," he added.

Paul Grissom, class 26 of 1952, said, "We weren't co-ed. These girls are doing good. Today's courses are shorter. When I went through the course was 22 weeks long."

"OCS has helped in civilian life. I learned how to become a leader and I picked up traits that stayed with me," he added.

OCS Commemoration Day concluded with a dinner at the Officers Club. The Benning Belles and the OCS choir provided entertainment for the evening. Maj. Gen. James F. Cochran III, commander of the 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga., was the featured speaker.

Candidate recalls experiences

OCS works wonders in 90 days

By Bill Powell

"Candidate! Cease work! That's not the way you stand at attention!"

"Candidate, did I see you smile?"

All day long and into the night these are the words OCS candidates hear. The candidate is on his way to becoming a second lieutant.

Years ago the candidates were called 90-day wonders. On the first day I entered OCS I thought, "If I make it through 90 days of this, it'll be a wonder."

I was expected to be up by 5:15 a.m., dressed for physical training, bed made, shaved and in formation by 5:30. We went from standing tall to push-ups for breaking the rules or being late to formation. The rythmic count of "One, sir. Two, sir." was heard as the push-ups were counted to the required 10 and asked permission to recover.

Many former OCS graduates came and watched one of the current classes going through the confidence course. This was just one of the events given to honor OCS Commemoration Day.

We marched, drilled and did everything else at a fast pace and never seemed to catch up. The old timers, those who had been in earlier classes and hadn't made it then, told us the constant action was part of the plan. We were given more work than we could handle to learn to organize.

The people who now were running our lives were our TAC officers. These officers were there to train, advise and counsel. At times, I felt I was being attacked by these officers. I later knew that this was all part of a grand plan to make me a second lieutenant.

The yelling, corrections and demerits were part of this plan. I, like the other candidates, came to hate demerits. Demerits were paid back in marching time and restrictions. They were given for unbuttoned pockets, an item always high on my demerit card, and for unshiny boots.

I polished boots until I thought my fingers were going to fall off and still got demerits. On the day I received a merit for my boots I had succeeded and felt was proud.

The best place to get demerits was on the dining facility stoop where one or two TAC officers inspected for uniform demerits. Once inside the candidates hustled through the line and concentrated on eating. There were only 10 minutes to finish eating. When the trays were put up we could count on being asked a question on the day's instruction by the TAC officers. If we couldn't answer, more demerits.

Occasionally the pressure was relieved . Fly guard was a detail always good for a few laughs. I remember one time when a candidate was marching around the dining facility with the required fly swatter at port arms and a napkin to keep his kills in. A TAC came up to him and asked what the kill ratio was, how many flies had been killed in relationship to the number of swats. The TAC then asked for the splatter radius of the fly.

The next candidate who took over as fly guard decided to get a new napkin. The TAC officer asked the new guard the same questions and demanded to see the kills. The candidate said he had flushed them down the toilet. When the TAC asked why, the candidate replied, "I wanted to do the decent thing and give them a burial at sea."

Teamwork is another key to OCS. Those platoons that started to act like a team earliest got the heat removed from them. The platoons succeeded or failed on what we all did. We learned about loyalty and hard work in a hurry. OCS is no place to be an individual when there is a mission to be done.

We faced all kinds of hazards, went through many changes, worked until we were ready to drop and shared each other's joys and sorrows. We felt a growth in our abilities. We began to get a feeling what it was like in the real world, what it was like to be a lieutenant.

Suggestion earns cash prize

A Certificate of Achievement and a $25 cash prize were recently awarded to Willie Faye Beaty, Special Actions Section, Adjutant General Division (AG), for her entry in a nation-wide contest.

Beaty, who has worked in the AG Division since 1967, says she entered the contest because she likes to be helpful and share her productivity experiences. "Other people's suggestions have helped me, so I thought mine might help someone else," she said. Her entry discussed the methods she uses to reduce, and hopefully eliminate, errors due to carelessness.

The certificate was presented by the Research Institute of America as part of the contest sponsored by their Managing Government program. The contest judges said her entry was selectedbecause many managers have similar problems and her solution can be easily adapted in a variety of situations.

Beaty's job involves the planning, organization, and directing of a variety of special cases in her section. "I am responsible for the processing and policy implementation of these cases, along with giving meaningful input daily on all aspects of my job," she said.

Along with the award from the Research Institute, Beaty was presented a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement by Lt. Col. Guy A. Smith, AG, United States Army Infantry Center. "Mrs. Beaty's ingenuity, initiative, and overall knowledge and application of principles of good management are deserving of the nation-wide recognition she received," said Smith. As a result of her efforts, Beaty's section has adopted a "no carelessness" attitude.

The 62-year-old wife and mother is active in the community and has a hobby of collecting antiques. She celebrated her 43rd wedding anniversary yesterday with husband Roger R. Beaty, retired first sergeant and disabled veteran.

"We're both so pleased with the awards," she smiled. "They make an extra nice anniversary present and celebration."

New approach to CHAMPUS claim filing

Several changes are planned in CHAMPUS claim forms and filing procedures that are designed to improve accuracy in initial claims submission, thus reducing the number of claims that have to be returned.

Revised versions of forms used by the American Medical Association and the American Hospital Association will be used when the provider of medical services fills out and submits the claim. These forms, already widely used by the medical professions, will be used for other government programs as well as CHAMPUS and are expected to greatly simplify claim filing procedures for physicians and hospitals.

When a beneficiary submits the claim, one form, a revised version of CHAMPUS Form 500, will be used for all CHAMPUS claims — for services of both individual and institutional providers and for benefits under the CHAMPUS Program for the Handicapped. The form requires completion of only eligibility information and the attachment of the provider's itemized bill.

CHAMPUS officials say the changes will be phased in over a period beginning Oct. 1. 1980, when the new claim forms are expected to be available.

Details about the new forms will be published as soon as they are announced by CHAMPUS officials.

This cat exemplifies the kind of homeless animal often left abandoned here. Due to the large number of animals found, they can only be held for three days until they are put to sleep. You can go to the veterinary clinic on post and adopt one. A loving friend can be yours for only $7 to cover the cost of vacinations and blood tests. Adoption hours are 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Lightening can kill

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — IT'S LIGHTENING! RUN FOR COVER! But where do you run? Would you know what to do if you were suddenly threatened by a violent, unexpected thunderstorm?

Chances are many of us would have to admit to being less than knowledgeable about "what to do" and — perhaps more importantly — "what not to do."

Many thunderstorms come suddenly, with little warning. Here are some tips that may save your life if you get caught in a sudden thunderstorm:

- If you're indoors, stay there.
- Keep away from open windows and open doors.
- Don't use the telephone or the television set.
- Don't wash dishes or take a bath during the storm.
- Don't wade, go swimming, fishing or boating in the storm. If caught on the open water in a boat, stay low in the craft.
- Don't use plug-in electrical appliances such as hair dryers or electric razors.
- If your laundry is on the clothesline, leave it there.
- If you're in your car, sit tight. Your car offers excellent protection against lightening.
- Stay away from lone trees. If only isolated trees are nearby, crouch in the open, keeping twice as far away from isolated trees as the trees are high.
- DROP TO THE GROUND IMMEDIATELY if your hair stands on end or your skin tingles — lightening may be about to strike you.

Remember, every year people are killed or injured by the Shock of Nature. Don't let it happen to you.

Sheriff's Target

Secure property in quarters

Most of us are aware that the crime rate througout the United States is on the rise. Statistically, each of us becomes more vulnerable to crime every day. If we intend not to become victims, we must make every effort possible to protect ourselves, our families, and our property. Many people become victims because they are unaware of the problems and fail to take necessary precautions, or they have the attitude, "It can't happen to me."

Provost Marshal
Col. Ward

Some occupants of government quarters have the misconception that since they live on a military installation they are offered some mythical degree of protection above that of their civilian counterparts. While military installations generally have more control than the civilian community over the personnel granted access, soldiers must not become complacent about securing personal property in and around their quarters. From the thieves' view, "Where there is a will, there is a way." Unsecured property is an open invitation.

During the last four months, Fort Benning military families have lost approximately $6,000.00 worth of property from areas outside quarters. Of the 91 reported incidents of housing area larcenies, 62 involved property taken from locations such as porches, carports, storage sheds, driveways and streets.

Bicycles, the item most often stolen, accounted for 20 of the 62 incidents. Other items stolen included such things as lawn mowers, hubcaps, lawn chairs, clothes and potted plants.

When did these larcenies take place? The typical larceny occurred at night or when the occupants were away from their quarters, but this was not always the rule. Some occurred during daylight hours or at night when the occupants were at home. Because of the unlimited access to post, all family housing areas here are vulnerable to larcenies. Therefore, occupants must make a conscious effort to secure unattended property at all times.

What can be done

Here are some hints to assist in protecting your property:

- Secure personal property (tools, clothes, toys, etc.) inside quarters at night or when unattended for any length of time.
- Personal property that is too large or awkward to be placed inside (lawn mowers, bicycles, and lawn furniture) should be secured in a storage shed or chained to a fixed object.
- Vehicles should be secured at all times and never used to store valuables in open view. (A thief can enter your vehicle with something as simple as a coat hanger in a matter of seconds.)
- Record serial numbers of valuable property and mark property for easy identification with your Social Security Account Number. (Engraving tools can be borrowed from the PMO Crime Prevention Section for this purpose.)
- Bicycles should be registered with the Vehicle Registration Section at the Provost Marshal's Office. Most have serial numbers which make for easy identification, and a sticker showing proof of registration also serves as a deterrent to potential thieves.
- Prior to going on leave, secure all valuable property either inside quarters or a storage shed. Call or stop by the Military Police Desk and request that your quarters be checked during your absence. Make arrangements with the Post Office to hold your mail or with a neighbor to pick up your mail and newspapers until you return. Make arrangements to have your lawn cut during summer months and leave one or two lights on in the quarters to give the appearance that occupants are present.

Can reduce chances

By following these suggestions, we may substantially reduce the likelihood of the loss of our property through theft. In the event an item is stolen, notify the military police immediately (545-5222).

If you desire more information on this subject, please contact the Provost Marshal Crime Prevention Section at 545-4164. Through our combined efforts we can reduce these incidents of property loss.

Harder tires mean savings

By Brad Byers
U.S. Department of Energy

Remember way back, years ago, when the neighborhood service station filled your tires while filling your tank with 30-cents-a-gallon gas?

In those good old days passenger car tires were mostly one size, and many service station attendants recommended inflating them to their 32-pound maximum. The tires would last longer, they'd say.

Later, owners' manuals became the authoritative guides, and tire pressures dropped to 24 or 26 pounds to yield a softer ride.

Well, with gas at $1.20 or so, it's time to go back to 32 pounds, or whatever is the maximum pressure marked on the tire itself. This may be eight more pounds pressure than the manual or the sticker on the door of your car recommends.

The more pressure you put in your tires, up to the stated maximum, the less gas it takes to drive a mile. That's because harder tires have less resistance to rolling.

However, it is useful to maintain whatever difference in pressure between front and back tires the owner's manual recommends. For example, the manual might recommend 24 in front and 26 in the rear, while the maximum marked on the tire is 32. In this case, you should inflate the front tires to 30 and the rear tires to 32.

Saving 7 Cents a Gallon

All tires slowly lose air pressure. One tire company checked 1,900 cars and found that 28 percent had tires that were severely underinflated. And tests conducted by tire companies and by others confirm that more pressure means better gas mileage.

In a report to the Department of Transportation, an independent company concluded after examining test results that each two pounds of additional pressure in bias-ply (non-radial) tires improves gas mileage by one to one-and-one-half percent. Because there may be a difference of eight pounds between the owner's manual and the tire manufacturer's maximum, this presents the possibility of a four to six percent gas saving.

That's like reducing the price of your gasoline by seven cents a gallon.

These savings possibilities are for highway driving. In town, the percentage will be less because of the time your car spends idling at traffic lights or being braked to a stop.

The saving from increased pressure will also be less with radial tires. With radials, eight pounds of increased pressure yields about a two-and-one-half percent fuel saving.

Radials, however, give better gas mileage than non-radials when inflated to the same pressure. At full inflation, you should get about three-and-one-half percent better in combined city and highway driving.

To realize these savings, you have to keep your tires fully inflated all the time. This means checking them about once a week, when the tires are cold (when the car has been sitting for three hours, or before driving more than one mile).

You'll need your own tire gauge. One can be bought for a couple of dollars.

One last word: Full inflation undeniably produces a harder ride over bumps. But it does not damage the suspension system (as some people believe), and it does not shorten tire life. In some cases it will increase tire life.

More than a market...

By Becky Bulgrin

Food is necessary for our survival. However, the rapid rise of food prices over the past few years has put a strain on most people's budgets. After all, it isn't the only thing we need to live. With the costs of housing, clothing and other needs also rising, it pays to find the best bargains when it comes to grocery shopping.

The commissary is designed to provide all active duty military members, dependents and retirees with the best possible selection of products at the lowest possible prices. One-hundred percent disabled veterans are also eligible for commissary benefits. "We try to save our customers as much as possible and we take advantage of all promotions offered by different companies," said Commissary Officer Jose Fantauzzi.

Customers who shop at the commissary on a continual basis can save a considerable amount overall, according to Fantauzzi.

The commissary carries a total of 5,500 line items, to include groceries, meat, produce, and health and beauty aids.

According to Fantauzzi, the commissary tries to get the nationally and regionally known brands. He also reported that health and beauty aids are one of the best buys available in the commissary, "We sell these items at cost and if people check, they will find that our prices are lower than the post exchanges'."

"Produce is received daily, so it's fresh," added Fantauzzi.

Lower prices aren't the only service the commissary offers its customers. Food stamps are accepted and personal checks can be cashed for $10 more than the purchase for extra money.

Coupons available

Customers can use coupons from any magazine and two free magazines are passed out at the commissary each month which contain many coupons for commissary items, along with recipes and military lifestyle articles.

According to Fantauzzi, between eight and 12,000 dollars worth of coupons are redeemed each month.

Communication plays a big part in the commissary's operation. A commissary bulletin is put out for the customers every other month. The bulletin lists new items in the commissary and items which have been discontinued. It explains the store's policy, lists hours of operation and gives information on different subjects, from temperatures for storing milk to facts about nutrition.

"We also give information about cashing checks and any other items of commissary interest to inform our customers," said Fantauzzi.

People who are new here can get a guided tour of the commissary. "Usually, a group of new wives get together and we give them a briefing and a tour, which includes "behind the scenes," explained Fantauzzi. "We also have discussions with a question and answer period at the Officer's Wives Club or for other groups who make the request."

There are suggestion boxes set up at the commissary and all are answered, either by phone or in writing, according to Fantauzzi. "We are always happy to give an explanation to any complaint a customer may have," he said.

Council discusses problems

A Commissary Advisory Council has also been set up and conducts a meeting once every three months with the post's commands, which includes a representative from every activity on post, including retirees. "The council discusses new products, problems and ways for improvement, along with other topics," said Fantauzzi.

In turn, the different commands on post support the commissary. The military police help with security, the engineers help with maintenance, etc. "They're all a tremendous help," said Fantauzzi, "especially the veterinarians who inspect our products and help with sanitation."

MSgt. Albert Matsui, special assistant to the commissary officer, is tasked to handle customer complaints and refer them to the commissary officer. He also handles special projects, such as the bulletin, special reports and studies, and improvements.

"When customers see someone in a military uniform, they can identify with it and may be more apt to voice their complaints," explained Matsui, "and the commissary management is always available for complaints, along with customer service."

There are 47 and one-half shopping hours available every week to serve approximately 31,500 families who shop at the commissary, according to Fantauzzi.

"Some soldiers think the commissary is only for married personnel, but this is not true," he continued. "Single soldiers can also benefit from the savings they receive on products from the commissary."

"People should also be aware that bus transportation is available to and from the commissary," Fantauzzi added.

Award winning commissary

Since it opened at its present site in 1974, the commissary received the 1978 "Best Commissary Award for the Southeast Region" competing with 18 other commissarys, and recently won the "Best Administrative (Control) Section" for 1980.

Always looking for better ways to serve their customers, Fantauzzi announced that they already have authorization to add a delicatessen and are looking forward to it in the near future. Besides paying lower prices and receiving the other available services at the commissary, customers can also save gas and time by takingadvantage of the other stores and services near the commissary because of its convenient location in the same complex with the PX, Party Store, beauty and barber shops, optical center, cafeteria, donut shop as well as many others.

Convenient hours are available and are as follows: Tuesday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Wednesday, 9 a.m-6:30 p.m., Thursday, 9 a.m.-7:30 p.m., Friday, 9 a.m.-6:30 p.m., Saturday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. The commissary is closed on Sunday, Monday and all federal holidays.

Commissary shoppers fill up their carts, getting the best possible bargains on groceries and other items.

...Meat cutters add quality saving

By Becky Bulgrin

Anyone who shops in the commissary here would probably say the meat department is one of the busiest areas in the store. There are plenty of meatcutters working in the commissary, all knowing their jobs well and keeping the big operation running smoothly, according to meat department manager, Charles W. Harper.

Harper, who started here as a meatcutter 32 years ago, has been the department manager for 20 years. He has 21 meatcutters, seven meatcutter helpers, two meatcutter leaders and an assistant manager working for him. The number of workers shows how large the operation is. The meatcutters must do a lot of work to keep it going.

During the month of July, the meat department processed 193,746 pounds of beef, 95,000 pounds of pork, 69,000 pounds of poultry and 1,100 pounds of veal. In addition, 108,000 pounds of pre-packaged meats, such as coldcuts and bacon, were set out for the customers. Total sales for the month amounted to $557,281.29, which was 20.5 percent of the overall commissary sales.

According to Harper, the job is a challenging one. "Our first objective is to please the customer," he said. "Our motto is 'the best for the least.' "

As opposed to the rest of the store, the meat and produce departments are self-sustained. They can change prices according to the balance of their accounts. Harper said they strive to keep an even balance in their account, and can be over or short by one-half percent. "If we're ahead in our account, we reduce prices to satisfy the customers," he said.

Harper went on to say that the whole concept of the meat department has changed since he started working here in 1948. The butchers used to be behind the counter and people would tell them what they wanted and the butchers would get it. The department is now run by self-service, with the customer picking out his own meat.

"Everybody thought the self-service method would never work," said Harper. "But we found that we could serve many more people this way and service was quicker."

However, the meat department still makes up special orders. "Customers just write up their order and pick it up later," said Harper.

"We used to just make sure meat was available to the customer," he continued. "Now we put on demonstrations, such as cooking different products and giving samples, to introduce new items or to reinforce the old." Coupons for the products may also be passed out during the demonstrations.

The butchers' job involves more than just cutting meat. He must be able to package it and make it look appealing to the customer.

According to Tommy Cain, who has been a meatcutter here for seven years, "Meat cutters have to take pride in their job because a lot of money can be lost if the meat isn't cut right." He has worked in other grocery stores before coming here, and says "This is the best operation I've seen."

According to Clarence Alexander, who was a cook here for 12 years before becoming a meatcutter at the commissary two years ago, they must know how to do different jobs since they swap jobs daily. "This keeps us up on the different jobs and breaks up a routine," he said.

Working in very cold temperatures doesn't stop the butchers from doing their job well. "It has to be below 50 degrees where the meat is, but everybody gets used to it and the temperatures don't hurt job performance," said Billy Pope, a meatcutter here for seven years.

The meatcutters also take turns working the night shift for sanitation purposes. "We do clean-up during the night shift and this place is kept extra clean," said Cain. "It is a must for a department like this."

Recently inspected, the meat department was awarded the title of "Best Meat Department in the Southeast Field Region", competing against the 18 other meat departments in that region. They were inspected on sanitation, cutting procedures, percentage of sales, and complying with regulations.

This wouldn't have been possible, of course, if it wasn't for the workers running the commissary's meat department.

Puzzles are rewarding

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

One of the greatest bits of fun that we indulge ourselves with is trying to solve puzzles. They may be word puzzles, picture puzzles, sentence puzzles, or whatever and the challenge is what attracts us while the solution is what rewards us.

We feel extra proud of ourselves when we get into a difficult situation and can find a solution for it. But there are times when in our maturity and vast knowledge we are confronted by a situation that just seems to knock us for a loop, there seems no answer. Maybe we can't see the forest because we are standing to close to the trees.

I remember a story my Dad told me once that had something to do with that. There was a truckdriver who had gotten his truck stuck under an overpass. There the truck sat, and it was about an inch to high to allow it to pass completely under. Oh, he had started through, but the road lifted up enough that he finally got a point where he could go neither forward or backward. Alternate highways had been miles out of the way, the cargo had been perishable and he wanted to get to his destination on time.

The police stood around wondering what to do. The truckdriver stood around wondering what to do. The motorists sat in their cars and honked their horns, irritated at the delay. I'm sure you have seen this happen before. But over on the side of the road sat a little boy with his bicycle watching all this adult confusion over what he thought to be a simple problem.

Finally he forced his way through the crowd and spoke up loudly enough to be heard. "If you let some of the air out of the tires, it would lower the truck enough to get it under the bridge."

Silence! Everyone looked at the kid for a moment and then they grinned. It was a good idea. The driver released some air from all the tires and managed to drive his truck right under the overpass. How about that?

Out of the mouths of babes is sometimes wisdom that we neglect because we feel that the kids are too young to understand. I don't think we give them the credit that is due them, nor the chance they deserve. Certainly some of their ideas won't work or are too childlish, but some of them will. It behooves us to listen to them, because many times they are far enough removed from the trees that they can see the forest where we cannot.

Flats hazardous

Professor Safety Sez. . .

Every driver should know how to change a flat tire. If you get a flat tire on the highway, slow down gradually; slamming on the brakes can throw your car into a dangerous spin. Get off the road if possible, even if you have to drive with a tire flat. No tire is worth as much as your life. Drive slowly with the emergency flashers on. Get to even ground before you try to change the tire. Don't risk having the jack slip on a hilly road.

Promotions come up for E-7

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — About 11,750 E-6's should be tapped for promotion by a DA selection board in January, according to Military Personnel Center(MILPERCEN) officials. The board will meet at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and consider about 42,500 soldiers for promotion to E-7.

A Fort Benning spokesman said, "Between now and January over 1,000 E-6's, including some from the 197th Infantry Brigade, will get promotion packets."

All E-6's on active duty with a Date Of Rank(DOR) before Dec. 1, 1977 are eligible for consideration in the primary zone. Those with a DOR between Dec. 1, 1977 and Jan. 31, 1979 may be considered in the secondary zone, say officials.

Soldiers in the zones of consideration must also have a Basic Enlisted Service Date(BESD) before June 1, 1975 and a high school diploma of GED. Also, soldiers may not be restricted by the provisions of paragraphs 7-37 and 7-61 of AR 600-200 to be eligible for promotion. Officials stress soldiers must meet all requirements to be considered.

E-6's with an imposed bar to reenlistment or an approved retirement date before Jan. 2, 1982 won't be considered, say officials. Also, those who have been denied reenlistment through the Qualitative Management Program(QMP) won't be considered.

This board, as in years past, has the additional responsibility of identifying those soldiers who aren't performing up to standards for QMP. Officials note all soldiers with a DOR before Feb. 1, 1979 will be screened for QMP unless they are now on the E-7 list, have a bar to reenlistment or have an approved retirement date before Jan. 2, 1982.

Soldiers in the zones of consideration who have worked for at least three months in their current assignment by Oct. 30,1980 and haven't been rated in that assignment may receive a "complete the record" evaluation report(SEER). All SEER must be sent through military personnel offices to arrive at Fort Benjamin Harrison by Dec. 6.

Soldiers in the zones of consideration wanting to review their records may receive a microfiche copy of their Official Military Personnel File(OMPF) by writing to Commander, USAEREC, ATTN: PCRE-RF-I, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249.

Officials remind commanders that all Personnel Qualification Records(PQR) submitted for the board must be readable. Many PQR's submitted for past boards have been hard or impossible to read, they explain.

Retreat

Soldiers of the 2nd Student Battalion, Infantry Officer's Basic Course (IOBC), TheSchool Brigade, participated in the first combined Awards, Retirement and Retreat Ceremony held recently. The ceremony, held in front of Bldg. 4, is now mandatory for all personnel retiring here unless given written exemption by the chief of staff.

Vehicle deaths outnumber all 20th Century wars

From 1900 through 1975, motor vehicle deaths totaled 2,100,000. American battle deaths in all 20th Century wars — both World Wars, the Korean War and the Viet Nam War — add up to less than one-fourth that number — 425,783. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

Army takes contest

Strom wins second rifle title

By Tommy Pool

Sp4 Greg A. Strom of the United States Army Marksmanship Unit(USAMU) defeated 90 of the top rifle competitors in the country recently as he won the 1980 Regional High Power Rifle Championship held in Cherry Point, North Carolina.

Strom scored a solid performance of 985 points out of 1,000 to win the two day competition by a narrow margin over WO J. Busher of the United States Marine Corps. Busher finished with 983 points. USAMU's SFC Tommy Covington tied for third with 981.

It was the second major win for Strom in the last month. He had earlier won the President's Trophy during this year's National Rifle Championship at Camp Perry, Ohio, where over 500 shooters competed from across the United States.

In team competition, the United States Army Blue squad scored another victory as they defeated the top civilian, National Guard, Army Reserve and Marine Corp rifle teams with a total score of 1,949 points. Team members were coach Gerald Lebish, Strom(487), Covington(485), Ronald Muzyka(492) and Anthony Leone(485).

Greg Strom took aim and came away with two prize catches. Strom won the President's Trophy and the 1980 Regional High Power Rifle Championship.

Handicapped or just gifted?

By Tim Boivin

This is a story dedicated to the handicapped children who went to Camp Smiley this past summer. It's a story more of happiness than courage. It offers a choice between living and surviving.

In Monday's Columbus Enquirer, columnist Richard Hyatt wrote about a handicapped schoolmate of his in the seventh grade named Bobby Smith; how Bobby wasn't made to stay during dance lessons; how Bobby wasn't smiling in his yearbook picture; how Bobby was there but the other kids couldn't relate to him.

I have a friend named John Feldon back home. He's crippled from the waist down. John always had a kind word, a quick smile and was quite an athlete.

My first year in public school was when I met John. There weren't any handicapped kids in the Catholic school I had been attending. Turtle, as John was affectionately called by his classmates, was out on the playground playing kickball.

John didn't have a wheelchair. He didn't want people to think he was lazy. Since he had full use of his upper body, he insisted on using crutches. He would swing like a pendulum from side to side as he waltzed on his way. Because of the crutches, John's upper body developed into an after picture for a muscle building magazine. Not many people beat John at arm-wrestling.

The kickball pitcher would roll the ball to John. He would swing at it with his crutch. Someone would run the bases for him, but when it came time to take the field, John would take his position at catcher just like any other 10-year-old kid.

John and I went all the way through high school together. One year, for his birthday, I bought him a turtle. He got a lot of enjoyment from that turtle. One day, his turtle died. John would let him run around the house loose once in a while. The poor thing suffocated under a rug. John didn't like to keep things in cages, just like he wouldn't allow his handicap to cage him.

John could shoot a rifle well, went to music classes with us and even joined us at our graduation dance in eighth grade. The fact that he couldn't dance didn't bother him. Just as always, he wanted to be where his friends were and enjoy the same things they did.

For every Bobby Smith who took a sad picture in his yearbook, there was probably a John Feldon who put smiles on people's faces day after day. Camp Smiley, here, is a positive step toward putting smiles on these kids faces. It's still up to the kids to make full use of their resources. Hopefully, these kids will take John's example. He gave me a valuable lesson in life; to enjoy it with a smile; to make the most of each and every moment.

Children who have handicapped kids for classmates should also learn from John's classmates. Because they included John in their activities, John flourished. Don't be afraid to communicate or relate to them.

Bragg flags Doughboys

By Tim Boivin

The Doughboys traveled to Fort Bragg last weekend and came up on the short end of their penalty ridden game with the Dragons 23-12. A total of 425 yards in penalties was called in the game as the referees tried to prove the adage that you can call a penalty on every play if you look close enough.

The Doughboys were assessed 162 yards to the Dragons 263. On one play in the first quarter the Doughboys were assessed 30 yards in penalties on one play, 15 for a personal foul and another 15 for unsportsmanlike conduct. Those penalties changed what was a fourth down and 10 for the Dragons at their own 35 to a first down and 10 at the Doughboy 35. Three plays later Dragon running back Kenny Baldwin scored from the Doughboy eight and Matthew Earl converted the extra point for an early 7-0 lead.

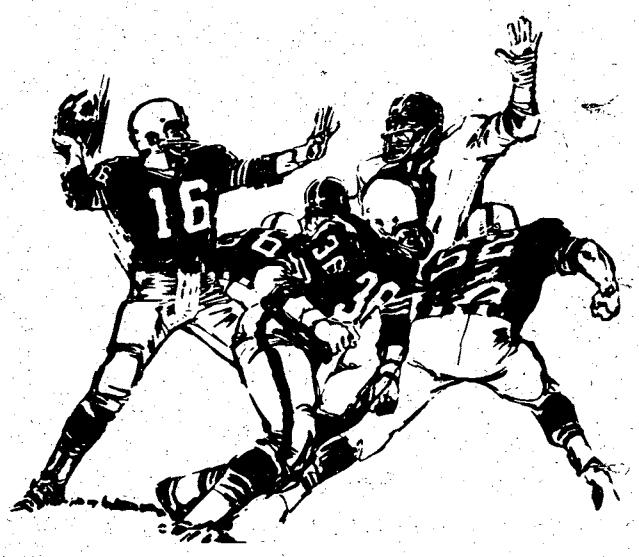
Near the end of the first half Doughboy running back Richard Fletcher fumbled at the Doughboy 34. The Dragons missed an excellent opportunity to increase their lead as Earl missed a 20 yard chip shot field goal.

The Doughboys couldn't do anything on their next possession and they punted to the Dragon 15. The Dragons drove 85 yards as fullback Steve Jewell went over the middle for the touchdown with 3:28 left in the half. Earl connected on the extra point and the Doughboys were down at halftime 14-0.

After nine straight running plays that ate up much of the time in the third quarter, Fort Bragg was forced to punt to the Doughboys. The Doughboys used 10 running plays and two passes before scoring on quarterback Leamon Hall's one yard sneak. Andre Tyler's attempt at the extra point was blocked and the Doughboys were down 14-6.

The euphoria in Doughboyland was shortlived as the Dragons came right back after the kickoff to score again. Quarterback Gregory Hoke hit split end Ronald Martin from 20 yards out for the touchdown with 1:20 left in the third quarter. Earl converted his third extra point and the Doughboys began to settle in the gathering gloom of the 21-6 score.

The Doughboys went to the air in the fourth quarter in an attempt to play catch-up ball. In their first drive the Doughboys were helped by a 15 yard personal foul penalty and Hall again scored on a quarterback sneak from the one.



The Doughboys went for two points to give them a chance to tie or win the game if they scored again. The Dragon defense breathed its fire to melt the Doughboy threat as running back Christian Lamar was swarmed as he went around left end. Lamar ended up one yard short of the goal line and the Doughboy scoring was finished for the night.

After Hall threw an interception to the Dragon's John Vernon, Coach Ralph Santaliz put reserve quarterback Harry Vaughn in the game with a couple of minutes left. Vaughn didn't last to long as he was tackled in the end zone by Dragon middle guard William Hardison for a safety with 1:45 left in the game.

The Drgons ran out the clock and off the field with a 23-12 victory. To add injury to insult, the Doughboys lost fullback Henry Wilson with a broken arm. The only bright spot of the whole evening was that the Doughboy defense, despite the loss, played an outstanding game.

Riding back to the guest house with the defense, shouts of "Hold your head high" and "We've got a lot to be proud of" could be heard the length of the bus. Although the secondary looked like it needed improvement, the defense played an outstanding game against the run. Defensive back Alfred Crenshaw made a couple of hits that could be heard up in the stands on end runs.

The Doughboys play tonight against the University of Alabama junior varsity in Doughboy Stadium beginning at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $1:50 for adults and $1 for children.

8-0 winner

USAIB takes opener

The United States Army Infantry Board (USAIB) pulled out an 8-0 victory over Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command (HHC) with only two minutes left in one of the opening match-ups of the Headquarters Command Flag Football League Sept. 25.

A crucial pass by quarterback Ralph Milliken to receiver Larry Riley set up the only touchdown of the game. On the next play, Milliken scored from inside the 10-yard line.

First half action consisted mostly of penalties by both teams, with USAIB getting three in one play and HHD getting five more. There were two interceptions, one by HHC's Leon Knight and another by USAIB's Harvey Scott.

USAIB's Jeff Poitra stifled HHC's efforts to score by intercepting a pass at the 80-yard line during the second half. Joe Foreman wrapped up the game with the two extra points for USAIB.

Current team standings are HHC, 1-3 and USAIB, 3-0-1.

The BAYONET will be highlighting a different game each week and will report other team's records around post. Teams wanting their standings published should call the BAYONET at 545-2201/4622.

Fish fry treat's soldiers

Foot-stomping blue grass music helped the catfish, beer and other delectables slide down the hungry throats of those at the annual AUSA fishfry.

At Victory Lodge the Sept. 25 event featured the four piece band, Blended Blue Grass, fish catered by Pritchett's and opening speeches from Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander, and Jim Blanchard, AUSA chapter president. The strides AUSA has made in membership in the last year were mentioned in both speechs.

Spoken of with particular pride were the many awards the local chapter will receive at the upcoming national convention in Washington D.C. Some of the awards are the Council of Trustees Award for Best Overall Chapter and for the Chapter Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives.

Speaking on the gains in membership in the last year, Blanchard said to the crowd , "Next year, we're going to pass the Braxton-Fort Bragg Chapter in membership ."

AN HOUR OF YOUR TIME

It only takes an hour, more or less, to make a better soldier. Instead of marking time or waiting for something to happen, your troops can take a Training Extension Course (TEC) lesson to improve job performance and increase proficiency. There are over 1,500 different TEC lessons available now. TEC lessons prepare soldiers for higher SQT scores. TEC is a good teacher. Soldiers are not required to hurry through a TEC lesson. TEC lessons are guaranteed to teach. TEC lessons are prepared by Army schools and validated by soldiers in the actual MOS being taught. TEC is a time-saver and cost-efficient too— actually costs less than conventional teaching methods. TEC lessons can be given almost anywhere anytime— in the field if necessary.

It barely takes one minute to read this message. Imagine how much your troops can learn in one hour with a TEC lesson. Call AUTOVON 927-4868 for additional information.

Ranger repairs

Not only did the soldiers construct sidewalks, they also poured concrete for steps, cleared a drop zone on top of a mountain 30 miles from the camp and replaced roofing and floors in two buildings. The troops traveled to the camp by convoy and completed their tasks three days ahead of schedule.

'Global village' offers old sports, Golden Knights

By Bill Powell

A communications pioneer once said that, "The world is a global village." Sounds strange, doesn't it? But electronic media, specifically Radio and Television, have brought the world within our grasp and made everyone more accessible. When man landed on the moon and took that first walk over 75 percent of the world's population was watching.

WFBG doesn't span the world but it does bring its share of that global village to you. Information you can use both now and in the future for training or recreation purposes. Following are some of the highlights of next week's programming.

●"Sportsreel" features a look at sports events from the year 1956 including deep sea fishing, ski jumping and a children's boxing tournament.

●"Attack — The Battle for New Britain" shows attacks on Arawae and Cape Gloucester in the Pacific during WWII from plan of attack to final victory.

●"A New Man on the Team" tells the story of the physician's assistant. The new man on the team of the overworked physician who takes care of some of the more common tasks leaving the doctor more time to diagnose.

●"Introduction to Psychological Warfare" gives you a perspective of what psychological warfare was like back in 1956 and a rough idea of what it's like now.

●"Big Picture — The Golden Knights" is all about the Army's precision parachuting team. You'll get a chance to see this exciting group as it goes through its paces in a typical exhibition.

●"A Free People" is a cavalcade of songs of America from its beginning to the space age. Consult The BAYONET or the Benning Bulletin for times and days of scheduled programming.

Retirees eligible for optometry care

Dependents of retired personnel are now able to receive service at Martin Army Hospital's Optometry Clinic on a space available basis.

In an effort to better serve the military community, a limited number of dependents will be eligible for treatment by appointment on the first working day of each month until the limited number of spaces are full, according to Lt. Col. Peter Dudek, chief of optometry.

People calling after the schedule is full will need to try to get an appointment the following month. The service will be re-evaluated on a monthly basis and all efforts will be made to keep the service available, according to Dudek.

Clothing rates rise this month

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Clothing allowance rates for soldiers will go up this month, according to officials at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center (USAFAC), Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Basic rates for enlisted soldiers in their sixth month to third year of service, and standard rates for those over three years service, will show up in the October end-of-month checks, officials say.

The Clothing Maintenance Allowance (CMA) is paid to soldiers to help replace clothing issued during initial entry training. Although the CMA may not meet all of the clothing needs of enlisted soldiers, USAFAC officials say the Army considers it fair and equitable.

The new rates are:

| | Old | New |
|---|---|---|
| Male basic | $ 5.70 | $ 7.30 |
| Male standard | $ 8.10 | $10.20 |
| Female basic | $ 7.80 | $ 8.70 |
| Female standard | $11.10 | $12.60 |

CFC starts for $325,000 goal

Contributions from Fort Benning personnel to the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) totaled $51,000 as of Wednesday, against a post-wide goal of $325,000.

Campaign officials are confident this goal will be reached by the conclusion of the CFC fund drive, with the support of commanders and project officers.

CFC contributions help support a number of on post activities, as well as the United Way. Youth Activities, citizen classes, dental hygiene programs and Scouting.

The CFC office is located in Bldg. 83 with Army Community Services (ACS) and is open from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. For further information call 545-1332.

Drive carefully, your unit needs you

By Anita Langford

Do you know that the Army wants and needs you? Each and every one of you, military or civilian, is necessary for the accomplishment of Fort Benning's mission. On Tuesday, after Columbus Day, if one of you fails to return because of a fatal accident, you will be sorely missed.

According to Bennie Padgett, the USAIC Safety Manager, here are a few tips that may possibly help you to have a safe, accident-free holiday weekend: Last year's long Columbus Day weekend was marred by many traffic deaths. Fortunately, no Fort Benning personnel were included in the death toll. To achieve a similar record this year, Mr. Padgett urges everyone to recognize that safety is everybody's job - in the home, at play, at work, and especially on the highway.

• Beginning today, a larger than usual number of vehicles will take to the nation's streets and highways. The intelligent driver will keep this in mind and remember that the increased traffic magnifies the possibility of becoming involved in an accident. Such a driver will be especially alert during the holiday, and will observe all the rules of good driving while being aware that the "other guy" may not do the same.

• The smart driver is always ready to yield the right of way and never depends on another driver to yield or to obey a stop sign or any other traffic regulation. The defensive driver assumes that the "other guy", given two choices in any traffic, will usually make the worst possible decision for everyone involved.

• Above all, the intelligent driver uses safety belts no matter how far or fast he or she is going. Using seat belts may help prevent another fatal privately owned vehicle accident among Fort Benning personnel. "Believe it or not, of the Fort Benning soldiers killed in privately owned vehicle accidents this year, not a single one was wearing his seatbelt," stated Mr. Padgett.

"Have a happy Columbus Day weekend by making sure it's a safe holiday for yourself, your family, your friends and anyone else with whom you come in contact," Mr. Padgett urged. "Accept safety as a way of life and live longer."

C. G.'s message

As many of us crowd the highways to enjoy another Columbus Day holiday, we should plan our trip with safety in mind. Let us set our goal now to enjoy an accident-free weekend. This goal can be accomplished by avoiding long trips, planning for rest breaks in driving, buckling seat belts, observing speed limits and driving defensively at all times.

For many of you Columbus Day will bring increased interest in camping and hunting. If participating in these outdoor activities, protect yourself and your family by thorough planning and taking proper safety precautions.

Only through a concerted safety effort can we enjoy an accident-free Columbus Day holiday. I ask for your full support.

Have an enjoyable holiday but keep it safe.

Letters to the Editor

Army food good!

To the Editor:

In answer to PFC Ivan Blanco's letter I would like to say that I don't think it is fair to the best Army in the world for you to make your remark about mess hall food. Obviously your taste buds were never exposed to really good eating. Therefore, you do not know good food when you taste it.

I'm glad I'm not the one running the Army, for your sake and mine.

Finally, if inflation is doing away with your raise, why not try harder to improve yourself. Who knows, perhaps you might become an officer, get officer's pay and keep a step or two ahead of inflation.

Hospital complaint

To the Editor:

Friday night I had the misfortune of having to use the emergency room at Martin Army Hospital (MAH). I don't want to go into details of te reason, so I'll just say it was for an X-ray as a result of an injury of an injury I received during the Doughboy football game against Alabama.

I have heard and read many times about the staff at this facility, but until Friday, I never really paid too much attention. But I will now say thank God I wasn't hurt seriously.

I realize after five years on this post that an enlisted soldier is lower than the dirt he walks on. However, being a medic, I also realize that by saying hello, showing a smile and just a minimum amount of concern, many illnesses and injuries become a little less painful and waiting for treatment becomes a lot more bearable.

All I saw at MAH were staff members who had better places to be, better things to do and wanting so much for their shift to end so they could "...get the hell out of here."

A personal observation from someone who has had pretty much the same training and wears the same Army name tags:

The majority of the staff at the emergency room in MAH needs to brush up on the very basics of patient care.

This facility is an obvious embarassment to the Fort Benning community . Patient care is deplorable. I don't care how cool the doctors are or if the medics can all perform brain surgery with pocket knives, my family and every other family on this post deserve the very best they can get.

Whether it be surgery or two aspirin. Please don't tell me how the type of emergency dictates the type of action taken. I've seen soldiers wait three hours with a broken leg before receiving treatment and others wait three hours just to get a bottle of aspirin.

Is credit needed?

To the Editor:

I wish to express my opinion with regard to the your recent article, "Sober for one year" to the readers, editorial staff and the individual who offered the article for print.

Although, this is a matter for the contributor to deal with, he should be soundly admonished for blatantly violating the principles and traditions of the Alcoholics Anonymous Program by using it for his personal gain. He's openly asking for a pat on the back for having toughed it out for a whole year. I submit to those he attempted to impress that he, like the rest of us, is merely a "drunk away from a drink and a drink away from a drunk," and will remain so

Disabled veterans get cost of living increase

ATLANTA-Following lengthy discussions and debates, the U.S. Senate have agreed upon a cost-of-living increase for service-connected disabled veterans and their survivors. Presidential approval of the measure is thought to be imminent.

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler said that the bi-level measure provides for a 13 percent increase in compensation rates for veterans who are rated service-connected disabled from ten through 40 percent; those with more serious disabilites from 50 to 100 percent, will receive a 14.3 percent increase.

The recommended legislation also calls for a 14.3 percent increase to veterans' survivors receiving Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) and to seriously disabled veterans receiving statutory disability payments and clothing allowances.

The last increase in compensations was in Oct. 1979. Since that time the Congressional Budget Office has estimated a 12.8 percent rise in the consumer price index. Wheeler pointed out that the latest recommended increases slightly exceed the cost-of-living projections and, consequently, should provide a bit more assistance to the more severly disabled veterans.

In addition to the compensation increases the new measurealso provides for an qncrease in the maximum VA loan guranty from $25,000(to $27,500 for home loans and from $17,500 to $20,000 for mobile home loans. Also, VA home loans may be refinanced.

Delicious?

Darleen Chase believes in what her T-shirt says - "A women's place is in the house...and in the Senate." Chase is doing her part by working as an aide to Congressman Daniel K. Akaka of Hawaii. Chase got her introduction to good Army chow, such as C-rations, while visiting Fort Benning. For lunch her C-rations were that old soldier favorite, beef steak. Chase was here last week along with other congressional staff members to view an Army fire power demonstration put on by soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade at Red Cloud Range.

"Floating checks" bad news

DALLAS(ARNEWS) — Some people are gambling with promising careers and don't know it.

The gamble is "kiting" or "floating" a check. These are terms used by banks to describe the act of writing checks without having sufficient funds to cover the amounts, then rushing to the bank to make a deposit before they clear. Advanced automation techniques used to speed up the process of clearing checks has made the practice a risky business.

Check kiting could result in prosecution in a civil court or a military court martial. It could damage a military career, cause the permanent withdrawal of valuable exchange privileges or stamp a stigma upon an otherwise promising individual.

According to Maj. Gen. Duane H. Stubbs, USA, commander, Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES), the dishonored check problem continues to be a problem of major significance. During the past fiscal year, 312,762 checks amounting to more than $11.5 million were returned as dishonored at AAFES facilities, Stubbs said. More than $1 million of that amount was written off as uncollectible at exchange level and the net loss to AAFES was $621,161.

Stubbs said floating checks can be traced to earlier days when banks and clearing houses needed several days to process a check. With that leeway, many used the delay to write worthless checks to get the jump on the payday crowd at the exchange, settle debts or enjoy a pre-payday fling.

A quick survey of three local banks most frequently used by Fort Benning soldiers, Columbus Bank and Trust Company, First National Bank of Fort Benning and the First National Bank of Columbus, shows that checks may take anywhere from less than one day to 10 days to be processed.

However, one official said that kiting checks can be quite tricky. "Especially if you don't beat the check to the bank," said the official.

The penalties for issuing checks with insufficient funds as well as the inconvenience of not being permitted to write a check at the exchange are important deterrents to be considered each time the pen is poised to sign a check. Additionally, a $10 processing fee is charged for each returned check. The fee, which represents the cost to AAFES of administratively processing a dishonored check, is imposed to assure that the cost of bad checks is absorbed by the maker of the check rather than spreading the cost among all AAFES customers.

A "first" at Fort Benning

Woman recalls start of BAYONET

By Becky Bulgrin

Some people seem to have a certain quality that makes them a natural for being a "first." The first man on the moon, the first girl to get a perfect "10" as a gymnast in the Olympics, and the first doctor to perform a heart transplant, to name a few.

Myrtle Joines, whose enthusiam for life belies her 87 years, seems to be one of those people. Not only was Joines a "first" on a lot of things at Fort Benning, she also saw some "firsts" happen during the three years she spent here.

Joines first arrived in 1941 and recalls that it was a week before Pearl Harbor. She was looking for work, and with the great love she has for people and working with them it seemed only natural that she would be hired to work in the Public Information office. The only unnatural part of her getting the job was the fact that she was, first of all, a civilian, and also, a woman. Two firsts right off the bat and more would follow.

Myrtle Joines

"Although I was the first and only civilian working in the office, and a woman, didn't seem to matter," she remembered. "I was there to do a job and that's what I did, while at the same time enjoying every minute of it."

Thinking back with that ever-present twinkle in her eyes, Joines said her job became even more of an enjoyment when the newspaper was started and she was able to write for it - another first. "We held a contest to name the paper and a young soldier came up with the name that was finally selected," she said. "It's been the BAYONET ever since, of course."

Her job included handling publicity for the blacks, civilians and the Women's Army Corps (WACs). She devoted one column each week to the civilians, wrote feature stories, and took care of the publicity for the reception station.

Joines also handled the publicity for the 505th Parachute Infantry here at the time. "I remember when the 505th was preparing to go overseas around 1944," she said. "It was really a big thing and I got to cover the story for the BAYONET."

The very first division of WACs came to Fort Benning and Joines, of course, was here to see it happen. She was tasked to handle publicity for them, and says, "they were professional in every way and a joy to work with."

The hours and hard work she put into her job were not without rewards, according to Joines. "A lot of famous entertainers came to Fort Benning in those days and I had the pleasure of meeting them," she smiled. "Among them were Gypsy Rose Lee and Al Jolson."

"Oh! I also got to meet Norman Rockwell and his wife," she said with a great delight as another flash came back from the past (as they often did). "Mr. Rockwell was here to draw the paratroopers in action for the cover of the Saturday Evening Post and I kept company with his wife during their stay."

After working in public information, Joines was transferred to the main post library, a job which would keep her in contact with many people. "I was switched for the benefit of the library," she recalled, "and the job was a gratifying one."

Once again Joines followed the 505th Parachute Infantry when they were moved into Alabama. A library was needed there and she was sent to get it started. "I did everything for that library," she said. "I decorated it, hung pictures, made covers for furniture and even handled the buying of the books.

"And I continued to work with people as I assisted the enlisted soldiers while they studied for Officer Candidate School (OCS) exams," she added.

A move to Florida with her husband didn't interrupt her career in public information and the newspaper business. Together they started their own advertising business and put out their own paper called the "Suncoast Shopper." They stayed for 22 years then decided to move back "home".

Originally from Atlanta, Joines now resides in downtown Columbus and is still as active as ever, working with people and newspapers. "I just like to keep busy, you know, anything to keep my mind occupied," said the lady who keeps herself looking years younger than she is.

Joines puts together a "talking newspaper" once a week for the W.C. Bradley Library which is distributed to the blind. "It takes about 15 hours to do one," she said. "I go through the newspaper and clip out articles of interest then record them on a cassette. Fifty tapes can be made from one of mine."

She also does freelance work for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer and loves to write "letters-to-the-editor." In keeping with her publicity experience, Joines is the Publicity Chairman for the 62-Plus Club at Ralston Towers where she lives.

Joines would be the "first" to say that living life to the fullest is the only way to live it. "I've always enjoyed my life and plan to keep right on enjoying it," she concluded.

for the rest of his life. I trust no one was led to believe that one year's soberiety is immunity from future alcoholic drinking or behavior.

It further appears that he claims all the credit. I believe a humility check is overdue. He should get down on his knees and thank a loving God for the AA fellowship which helped him this far and better yet more soberiety--one day a time.

Our program is one of attraction, rather than promotion, therefore, those who want to find out how it really works should attend one of our open meetings.

Soldier's honesty pays off

By Tim Boivin

With the cost of living being what it is today, finding $150 is nothing to sneeze at. A lot of bills could be paid up with $150. For Sp4 Antonio Grandison of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, it would have been especially welcome. Antonio's house had just burned down when he found $150.

Sp4 Antonio Grandison prepares to work on a tank.

Antonio found a wallet with $150 inside three days after his Forest Home, Ala. home had burned down. Antonio lost all of his belongings in the fire. Instead of keeping the money, Antonio took the wallet to 2/69th headquarters to be returned to its rightful owner.

Antonio explained, "I was brought up to return anything I found that belonged to someone else and wasn't rightfully mine. It didn't even occur to me to keep the money just because I had some bad luck."

The benefactor of Antonio's Good Samaritan act was a NCO in Company A, 2/69th. Company B 1st Sgt. James Maffett said, "Antonio is always honest and sincere in everything he does. He works hard at his job and wants to become one of the best tank commanders in the Army. Returning the money was just keeping in character for him."

Antonio's wife, Lucy, and his two kids were at Lucy's parent's home when the fire broke out. Antonio said, "The fire department wouldn't answer the call. Luckily, Lucy and the kids weren't injured but they have to stay with her parents until we recover and find another place to live."

When asked if he had contacted any relief agencies, Antonio said, "I haven't really had enough time to. Army Community Service told me to contact the Red Cross in Forest Home but I've been working and haven't made it up there yet."

Maffett said, "99 out of 100 people wouldn't have returned the money. Not a penny was missing from the wallet when we returned it to the NCO from Company A. That shows what kind of integrity Antonio has."

Word was put out throughout the 2/69th about Antonio's plight. Over $300 was raised to help Antonio out. Maffett commented on the soldiers of the 2/69th, saying, "I don't care what other people have to say about today's soldiers, when one of their fellow soldiers are in a bind, they help him out. Antonio showed a lot of integrity when he returned the wallet and the soldiers of the 2/69th showed a lot of heart by helping him out."

Commenting on his situation, Antonio said, "You can't put a value on your home. I worked long and hard for it and now everything that goes with it is gone. I've always felt that one kind favor deserves another. I just want to thank my fellow soldiers for helping me out."

Help, in the form of $300, is what Antonio needs to get his family back on the ground again. Still, $300 doesn't come close to replace the amount Antonio lost. If you are interested in helping Antonio out, call Maffett at 544-6715/6397.

30 years service brings awards

By Becky Bulgrin

Rosalie Beach is a lady who understands very well what Ranger training is all about, but not because she's been through it; she has worked as a clerk for the Ranger Department since it first started in 1950.

"People always ask me how I could work at a job like this for so long," said Beach. "But they don't realize that this job is a challenge and something I've always enjoyed."

Beach was recently surprised when she received two Certificates of Achievement, a yellow rose corsage and a bottle of wine for 30 years of dedication and service to the department. Her fellow workers, rangers, and Ranger Department directors (former and present) got together as she was presented a certificate by Maj. Gen. David E. Grange, Jr., post commander, whom she has known since he was here as a captain and Ranger instructor. Another certificate was given by Col. Duane G. Cameron, Ranger Department director.

Mrs. Rosalie Beach, budget clerk for the Ranger Department, talks on the phone to clear up a problem as part of her job.

Starting as a clerical worker, Beach says there has been a lot of changes in both her job and the department. She remembers when the department began as the Ranger Training Command. The Korean War broke out and 120-men companies went through training here then to Colorado for the mountain training phase before being sent to Korea. Two years later it became the Ranger Department under the direction of the United States Army Infantry School (USAIS) that was then located in Bldg. 35.

"There was a great amount of work to be done at that time and I became a stenographer after taking classes," said Beach. "I was then transferred to supply because they needed help to get straightened out, since so much equipment had to be accounted for, among other things."

A site in Dahlonega, Ga. was acquired for the mountain phase of training and the rangers lived in tents during warm weather and used a Boy Scout camp during the winter. Permanent buildings were built and it became known as Camp Frank D. Merrill.

As the department grew, Beach grew with it and became the accounting clerk when one was needed. "As I gained more responsibilities I went through more training and attended the Finance School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. in 1969," she recalled.

But she didn't stop there. Beach said she believes in staying active and that working is the key to feeling young. "I'm continually taking new classes to keep up with things and to keep busy," she said. Beach has taken classes in financial fundamentals, real estate and data processing. "The data processing classes will be helpful because we're getting a computer terminal for the department."

Beach's present job is budget clerk and she has taken over other jobs because of a cut-back in personnel. "I'm able to perform many jobs ecause of my experience and time on the job," she explained.

Beach went on to say that she keeps up by working ahead. "I try to get things done about two months in advance so I can handle my responsibilities," she said. "I devise ways to speed things up like cutting stencils for recurring things that need to be done."

Not only does Beach keep busy on the job, she also has many hobies and activities after work. She is currently taking classes in oil painting and does a lot of needlecraft. "One of the most rewarding things I've done is making rosaries to send to missions overseas," said Beach. She is a member of the Rosary Guild of St. Patrick's Church and also a member of the American Business Women's Association, an educational organization which raises money to send young girls who need financial assistance to college.

Beach may be small (4-feet, 11-inches), but she is big on working for the Ranger Department. "I think the Rangers is an elite group to work for and I'm proud to be a part of helping them carry out their mission," she said.

The wife and mother of four children, Beach says she is lucky to have a job that she looks forward to day after day and will continue to work for the department. "When I finally do retire, my husband William and I plan to do some traveling together," concluded Beach.

How About That?

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

Have you ever noticed how long it takes for a tree to grow? I'm a bit of a tree and bush enthusiast and wherever I go I liketo plant trees and bushes even though I may not get to see them come to full size. I have looked in advertisements for trees and of course they show them in full bloom. All the lovely leaves and even fruit is growing on them if you looked at the fruit trees. That's a real good gimmick for the sellers and we fall subject to this trick. When you go to buy the tree, or send away for it, you can hardly believe that it is the same tree. It would be too costly and ridiculous to buy a full grown one, but the one that you end up with usually is a far cry from the picture.

Of course you can rationalize that the tree is young and has the potential of becoming what you saw in the picture. It sure takes a lot of imagination to see it become full grown and providing the shade or the fruit you want.

I remember buying many such trees. One was a cherry tree. I tried to imagine what it would be like to be able to go to the backyard and just pick all those wonderfully ripe cherries right from the tree, and for free, too. But when I had planted the poor thing I stood back and looked at the most awful-looking, spindly trunk and scraggly limbs that you ever did see. My tree looked like something a comic artist might draw as a cartoon. It was planted close to the house, so all I had to do was look out the window and watch it grow. But like the watched pot that never boils, it looked like the more I watched it, the slower it would grow.

A couple of years passed and still there was this ugly stick in my yard. Oh, yes it has grown and even put out some limbs, but no fruit, not yet. But one day I saw a bird in the tree. The weight of the bird on the ends of those little limbs made them bend way down, but they didn't break. It seemed pleased because it was singing. The next day I saw two of them sitting in basically the same place.

Then the next thing I knew there were these two birds building a nest right where the limb joined that spindly trunk. As the days passed I watched that nest grow, and before long there were eggs in the nest, and then babies, and then they left. Gradually, I began to respect that little tree. It certainly wasn't anything like the picture yet, but it had been useful. It had provided a home for a family of birds ad would probably do so again. It had done what it was able to do. How about that?

I think we can learn from that tree. We are all in the process of growing regardless of the stage of life we find ourselves in. Some grow faster, some slower, some are farther along than others, but grow we must or we die. I think it is important that even though we have not gotten to the fullness of our potential, along the way we can be like that little tree; we can be useful. We should be doing what we can do and doing it freely and well, whatever our present stage of growth.

Congress aids view army weapons

Forty congressional staff members recently visited the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) receiving an orientation on the brigade's mission, organization and weapons during their visit.

The orientation for the congressional visitors was designed to give them a first-hand look at many of the brigade's weapons.

The thirty-six congressional staffers and their four escorts were divided into four groups, then were shown the M113 Armored Personnel Carriers (APCs) and were transported in the carriers to Red Cloud Range. Enroute they were ambushed by a light infantry squad.

This gave them their first opportunity to look at the working of an infantry squad and its capabilities.

When they arrived at Red Cloud range, the visitors received a briefing on the 197th Infantry Brigade from the Brigade Commander, Col. Michael F. Spigelmire. Following the Commander's briefing, WO 1 Jeffery K. Downes explained that the visitors' lunch would consist of C rations, and each visitor would receive one MCI ( Meak Combat Indvidual). Then the visitors were shown how to open, heat, and mix the meals they received.

After lunch the visitors were briefed by Brigade CSM Freddie J. Weston on the weapons used by modern infantryman. These weapons included the M16 rifle, M203 grenade launcher, M60 machine gun, M2 .50 caliber machine gun, the Light Anti-Tank Weapon, the Dragon Anti-Tank missile as well as Nuclear Biological and Chemical (NBC) training. The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry soldier of the month Sp/4 Scarborough assisted as Weston's demonstrator. Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher, Jr., commander of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, then explained the concept of the Combined Arms Team and the composition of both a light and mechanized Infantry squad. During his presentation, a light infantry squad was airlifted out. Fincher also explained the anti-armor family of weapons-the LAW, Dragon, and TOW. He also talked about tanks and their capabilities, the 81mm and 107mm mortars, and 105mm artillery.

The staff visitors were again divided into groups and allowed to fire the weapons which had been demonstrated, earlier.

Mrs. Mabel Johnson, a congressional case worker said, "I was overwhelmed and very impressed with the entire operation and the skills of our men. She explained, "Our orientation tour gave me a better understanding of the military and a beter respect of its members."

Miss Patricia Rones, another congressional case worker said, "We've been treated royally. This gave me a chance to hear first hand from the soldiers in the field. She explained that, we are getting a very positive outlook of the soldiers by being exposed to the life they lead."

A congressional aide, George Withers, said, "I am very taken by it, it was extremly well organized and a real learning experience. I did not know we would see so much fire power and be able to work and use the equipment.

Congressional assistant Sallie Turner prepares to fire a round down range with an M-72 Light Antitank Weapon (LAW).

Agent Orange vets get care

"No eligible veteran who is concerned about Agent Orange exposure will be denied Veterans Administration medical care," Max Cleland, VA Administrator, assured Congress today.

Testifying before the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Cleland told Congress, "Unfortunately, we cannot provide all the answers to the many questions being raised today, nor will we be able to do so in the near future."

But Cleland described a comprehensive government-wide effort which was sparked by his personal determination to find scientific answers to the many questions about Agent Orange exposure being raised by his fellow Vietnam veterans.

Medical care will not be delayed until the answers are in, he emphasized.

Fourth hearing

Today's hearing was the fourth time this month that scientists and government officials have reported their progress publicly to the groups and indviduals who have expressed concern since 1978 that veterans may have latent effects to exposure to herbicide Orange during duty in Vietnam.

Cleland said, "This concern is genuine and is evidence of the real fears of many those who believe they may have been exposed to this chemical agent."

We are committed," he said, "to the rigorous pursuit of a resolution of this complex issue in a forth right and scientific manner."

He also reported progress on a board scale epidemiological study veterans of veterans being planned by the Veterans Administration and an Air Force follow up on personnel heavily exposed to the chemicals while involved in handling and spraying

Kills weeds

Cleland pointed out that the two chemicals that make up Agent Orange, which have been used by farmers and homeowners since 1940 to kill weeds, have been throughly tested and found harmless in normal use. But a contaminatnt, dioxin, in one of the chemicals has been linked to a variety of problems among laboratory animals. Pregnant female animals exposed to dioxin, for example, have had a higher than normal incidence of birth defects and deformed offspring. Humans who have been exposed to dioxin during industrial accidents have suffered headaches, nausea, blood disorders, alterations in liver function, nerve damage and a specific skin condition called chloracne.

"These conditions appeared shortly afer exposure and with the exception of chloracne were of limited duration...", Cleland said.

Known scientific information and a summary of government efforts to deal with veterans' Agent Orange fears are summarized in a VA phamphlet, "Worried About Agent Orange." The phamphlet is only part of a comprehensive information and education program on the subject to update both veterans and VA personnel, Cleland said. Films, professional meetings, telephone conferences, special staff organizations and a variety of VA publications are being used to insure that the VA response to Agent Orange is both comprehensive and uniform among the agency's nationwide medical system.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

CHAMPUS: Benefits improved in Well Baby Care areas

Department of Defense(DoD) officials announced that the 1981 DoD Authorization Act, signed by the President on Sept. 9, provides for improved CHAMPUS benefits in two areas for eligible dependents of active duty service members.

The act authorizes CHAMPUS to share the cost of "Well Baby Care", such as routine physical examinations and immunizations, for children up to two years old of active duty service members.

Since Well Baby Care involves outpatient services, any active duty family may elect to go to a civilian physician to obtain such care for their child, whether or not they reside close to a military facility.

John H. Moxley III, M.D., Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs, said, "Realistically, however, this new benefit will be particularly helpful to those active duty families who are stationed where they do not have access to this care at a Uniformed Service medical facility."

In addition to the newborn examination, PKU test and newborn circumcision which are now covered under CHAMPUS, the Well Baby Care benefit will cover the following services rendered by the attending pediatrician or family physician to a child up to two years of age:

- History, physical examination, discussion and counseling
- Vision, hearing and dental screening, developmental appraisal
- Immunizations (i.e. DPT, polio, measles, mumps and rubella)
- Tuberculin test, hematocrit or hemoglobin, urinalysis

Whether Well Baby Care is provided in a military facility or from civilian physicians, Dr. Moxley urged all military families to see to it that their children receive this care. He said, "The first two years of a child's lide are extremely important in assuring his or her long term good health."

Well Baby Care was previously specifically excluded by statute for all categories of beneficiaries. It continues to be excluded under CHAMPUS except for children of active duty members, up to two years of age.

As an outpatient service, Well Baby Care is subject to the annual fiscal year CHAMPUS outpatient deductible and the beneficiary's 20 percent sharing.

Also included in the act is a provision for increased financial assistance to active duty members for the care of a spouse or a child who is seriously physically handicapped or moderately or severely mentally retarded and receiving benefits under the CHAMPUS Program for the Handicapped(PFTH).

The monthly CHAMPUS share of covered expenses under the PFTH was increased from a maximum of $350 to $1,000. The other provisions of the PFTH remain the same. The "up-front" deductible, ranging from $25 to $250 per month, depending upon the sponsor's rank, is still in effect. Also, any monthly costs beyond the initial deductible and the government's $1,000 benefit payment would still be the responsibility of the sponsor.

Dr. Moxley noted, "This increased monthly payment is a substantial benefit improvement. It recognizes the significant increases in costs for maintaining a handicapped individual that have occurred since the PFTH started in 1966."

The Well Baby Care and PFTH improvements are effective with services and supplies rendered on and after Oct. 1, the beginning of Fiscal Year 1981.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,300 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,300 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits. I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX. I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve. I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

| How much can you make part-time with the Army Reserve? | Per Weekend | Per Year |
|---|---|---|
| E-3 with 2+ years | $73.08 | $1231.41 |
| 3+ years | 76.04 | 1248.03 |
| E-4 with 3+ years | 80.52 | 1360.44 |
| 4+ years | 86.80 | 1459.35 |
| E-5 with 4+ years | 89.24 | 1510.38 |
| 6+ years | 95.08 | 1602.36 |

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

an attempt to apprehend the people involved. These patrols helped but with so many access routes to the ranges and training areas, it was like trying to plug holes in a window screen. After a detailed analysis of the larceny incidents by the Crime Prevention Section, which included the location, time, type of material and equipment stolen, we opted to conduct night operations in an attempt to catch the violators," the colonel added.

With hunting season approaching, the 988th's mission will be intensified to search for and apprehend wild game poachers. Since Fort Benning is a federal reservation with exclusive federal jurisdiction, military violators will be prosecuted through the U.S. Federal Court system.

"The operations provide the military police an opportunity to get away from the day-to-day, on the street, white hat mission," Ward said. "The 988th's primary mission is combat support and the training available through these operations stress just that. Roadblocks, checkpoints, patrolling, surveillance, map reading and use of tactical communications procedures are reinforced. So even if no thieves or poachers are observed or apprehended, the time is not wasted--training continues."

Army families examined

Finances and separations due to duty are the two largest problems facing families in the Army, according to the finding of a family conference held here Oct. 1.

The conference, entitled, "Family- Fort Benning Style", took place at the Infantry Center Chapel with approximately 50 people attending. Nearly every housing and family life area was represented at the morning meeting.

Families here run the gamut of problems facing families anywhere. Some are only man and wife, either or both may be in the Army. Some are single parents facing the problem of raising young children and working. The military family is no more isolated from society than any other American family. However, life in the Army often places the family in a situation that can affect its stability and quality of life.

Young families suffer the most in separations Members of the conference said that often the spouse may not want to go overseas with the service member. Families may encounter great difficulty during a lengthy seperation.

With the absence of a service member, the spouse is responsible for the management of the family. The spouse left at home raising children often tires of being leaned on, according to couples at the conference. The absent parent is concerned about family life and the effect the absence of one parent has on the children.

During a separation, the spouse and soldier adapt to being independent and find resuming family life may be difficult. They may find it difficult to communicte and their life together may be filled with tension.

Very often mission requirements interfere with family life. Soldiers learn early in their Army careers that they need to respond to the mission requirement of the unit for the good of the unit as well as for any personal recognition and advancement.

Finances, or the lack of adequate finances, are another major problem military families have to face. It is well known that not being able to make ends meet is one of the major problems in any marriage. For the military family this isn't any different, said members of the conference.

One particular question that came up in the conference was whether or not Army families create their own problems by entering the service or marriage with unrealistic expectations; anticipating security and freedom of all worry. The conference found Fort Benning families who have adjusted to military life's changes expect their marriage to survive.

The conference came up with some possible solutions to the problems facing military families. Some families said they would like more say in their assignments as well as the option to turn down assignments without fear of jeapordizing their careers.

According to a conference spokesman, these topics and others which came up in the morning conference will be taken to a symposium on military families held this weekend in Washington, D.C.

Tide's 'D' stifles Doughboy attack

By Tim Boivin

Alabama's junior varsity, featuring a defense that would bend, but not break, gunned down the Doughboys Friday night 30-8. The Doughboys play the University of Florida's junior varsity Sunday at 1:30 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys drove into Crimson Tide territory eight times during the game but came away with only one score, late in the fourth quarter after the game was out of reach. Meanwhile, Tide running back James Gross scored two touchdowns, one on a spectacular 52 yard punt return, to pace Alabama's offensive attack. Gross finished with 112 yards rushing.

In the first quarter, Doughboy quarterback Leamon Hall was intercepted by Gerald Swann deep in Doughboy territory. Despite a clipping penalty against Alabama on the interception, the Tide wasted no time in getting on the scoreboard as freshmen running back Jimmy Watts scored from the three. George Mardini added the extra point to give the Tide a 7-0 edge.

Mardini connected on a 45-yard field goal with 6:11 left in the first quarter to increase the Alabama advantage. Near the end of the first half, the Doughboys were caught with too many men on the field during a punting situation and Alabama chomped at the bit, ready to score again.

After the Doughboys were driven back by the penalty and forced to punt from their own 15, Mardini came on to boot a 27 yard field goal with just four seconds left to give the Tide a 13-0 halftime lead.

Mardini connected on another field goal in the third quarter as the Crimson Tide built their lead to 16-0. Five minutes later, Gross took a Doughboy punt at his own 48, shook off a tough hit by the Doughboy's Fernando Smith as he fielded the ball, and raced up the right side for a touchdown. Mardini split the uprights and the Doughboys were down 23-0.

Gross scored the final Tide touchdown from four yards out in the fourth quarter with 6:04 left in the game.

The Doughboys scored their only touchdown of the game on a screen from Hall to running back Robert Jackson on the right side. Jackson ran into a Tidal wave of Alabama defenders but twisted and turned his way out of it. He raced 33 yards down the sideline for the score.

The Doughboy's record is now 1-3 while Alabama is 2-0. One final note; the Doughboy game against Citadel, originally scheduled for Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m., has been moved up to 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboy defense held their own for most of the game Friday night against Alabama's junior varsity despite the final 30-8 score. Defensive tackle Randy Wilson chases down Crimson Tide running back Johnny Dyess on this play for a loss.

Doughboy running back Christian Lamar runs into a wall of Crimson Tide defenders on this play in the first quarter. The Doughboy offense had their finest game to date but were still hampered by a severe case of turnover-itis, including four interceptions and three fumbles once again stifling their victory hopes.

Gators come in with surprises

By Becky Bulgrin

The Doughboys upcoming opponent this Sunday will be the University of Florida's junior varsity Gators. With a record of 1-1, the Gators come into Doughboy Stadium with the advantage of surprise on their side as the Doughboys don't know much about them.

Doughboy head coach Ralph Santaliz said, "We don't know much about them because we don't have the resources to scout them. The varsity throws the ball a lot so I expect the junior varsity to do the same thing."

With the ball expected to be up in the air often Sunday, defensive secondary coach John Redmond said, "We'll be working hard on pass defense right up to the opening kickoff. Cornerback Larry Connor played a good game last week, shutting out Alabama's wide receiver all game. If we are going to be successful this week, all of the secondary is going to have to play as good as Larry did last week."

Although the Doughboys have had trouble getting the ball in the end zone, Santaliz doesn't plan on changing anything. He explained, "We moved the ball really well last week. The line was blocking really good and we did roll up some yardage. What we have to work on in order to get the ball into the end zone is those turnovers. They're what's killing us."

Angler's accident gets fish

By Jim Porter

I saw a unique pattern develop at the Virginia State Championship this spring. The bass were trying to bed around the base of the trees in two to four feet of water, reluctant to strike a lure.

Quite by accident we discovered if you hit the tree very hard just above the waterline with a heavy slip sinkered worm or a good, tough alphabet plug, Old Iron Jaw would immediately load on as the lure fell into the water. This was a bit tough on plugs but it produced fish.

A good investment for the man, or lady, who fishes it to replace chrome or carboloy guides with the newer aluminum oxide type, commonly called "speed guides". Developed as a fast heat disipating surface for the nose cone of space re-entry vehicles, it has virtually no friction with monofilament lines and, therefore, reduces line wear drastically.

Chrome or stainless steel guides wear quickly and then will literally shred your line. Carboloy holds up well but is a very abrasive material and really causes wear on lines.

I've had a set of speed guides on one of my rods for five years and I fish 150-200 times a year. To date, these guides show no wear whatever. If you're the lazy type like me, you'd rather fish than wrap rod guides, the slip-on type speed guides are as good as the standard type. In fact, I feel they're better as they can be switched to another rod without a lot of thread wraps to get cut or torn. If nothing else, replace your tip-top. That is where the greatest amount of line friction and wear takes place.

Discounting nicks and other damage, the weakest place on your line will be the knot at the lure. A simple way to improve knot strength is to double over the first 12 inches of line, then tie the knot with a double strand. This also gets rid of the last foot or so of line occasionally. that's where a lot of the damage occurs.

Don't forget, anytime your line breaks it is entirely your fault whether it be an old or damaged line, or a poor knot. Every cast is a potential trophy fish and your line is your only contact with him.

A trick which often works on small mouth bass is to modify a plastic grub to look more like a crayfish. Take a large sewing needle with a large eye abnd thread two to three inch pieces of rubber band through the grub body. This gives the lure "legs", adds action and makes it appear extremely life-like.

If you're out on the pond jerking them hawgs in pretty good and find you're running out of the only color worm they seem to want, here's a little tip. To repair a torn plastic worm, simply hold it in a lighter flame until it starts to burn or melt. Immediately douse it. This will reseal the torn spot pretty well and, although the repaired spot will be a bit soft, the worm can be used again and again.

Some of life's finer moments are spent over a platter of golden fried fish, some skillet fried taters with a bit of sweet onion thrown in, a few hot hush puppies and a big ol' jug of cold, sweet tea. Accordingly, here are a few tips for your outdoorsman recipe book:

Cut the fish fillets into strips about the size of a fish stick or weiner and soak them in milk for a few hours. This removes any oily or fishy taste. Drain and pat the pieces dry with paper towels. Make up a coating mix as follows:

1 cup plain white corn meal
½ cup flour
1 Tbs salt(or to taste)
3 heaping Tbs lemon pepper seasoning(or to taste)

Key Ingredient

Now, take one egg and one-half cup of water and beat together thoroughly. Put a cup of flour in a bowl and set it to one side.

When ready to prepare this feast, roll the fillet pieces in the fillet flour. Next, dip them in the egg/water mixture.

Now, using a shaker bag preferably, coat the prepared fillets with the mix and drop into ½-inch of very hot cooking oil. Fry until golden brown. Prepared in this manner, the fish will be crisp and fairly grease-free. The taste cannot be adequately described by words.

And now I think I'll put some fillets in to soak, check my line and go try that smoke worm some more.

Doughboys rebuilding?

.By Tim Boivin

What's wrong with the Doughboys? I've heard the question about 25 times since I came to work Monday morning. A few basic facts about the team have to be brought out for fans to understand why the Doughboys are 1-3. They aren't excuses, they're just facts, plain and simple.

Injuries hurt

The Doughboys are in a rebuilding year after last year's 6-4-1 team was dissipated by injuries, transfers and other assorted problems. The Doughboys were looking forward to having about 11 starters return. There are now only three or four.

Defensive end Henry Baker is the only returnee on defense this year. He's playing a new position. He played well enough Friday night for Alabama's coaches to take an interest in him.

The Doughboy offense, expected to be explosive, has been crippled by injuries. Center David Holly was injured against Alabama. He's the glue to the Doughboy's offensive line. Fullback Henry Wilson broke his arm against Fort Bragg. The Doughboys lost Fred Suggs before the season even began. He was their star receiver a year ago.

The Doughboy coaching staff took the blame for their first two losses. The third loss they didn't and shouldn't. The Doughboys were playing a team featuring players that would be on most college's varsity teams. Next year, they may well be starting for the three time National Champions.

The Doughboys held their own against Alabama Friday night. Alabama only had 20 more yards than the Doughboys in total offense. Despite the 30 points scored, the defense, as they have all season, played a sound game. Alabama alternated three seperate offensive lines against the Doughboys all game long and just plum wore them out.

Defense digs in

Another argument for the defense(there goes that Perry Mason in me again) is that three times Alabama was forced to settle for field goals. That's only realizing 50 percent of their full scoring potential.

The Doughboy offense came alive for the first time this season. The Doughboys only had 23 yards less than Alabama in total offense. As they have all season, they were hurt by turnovers. If not for some turnovers, the Doughboys would have been right with Alabama in the fourth quarter. The turnovers will end when the offense gets more experience.

Considering the adversity the Doughboys have faced this season, they're playing quite well. So what's wrong with the Doughboys? Nothing from this sportswriter's view point. Here's one pat on the back for hanging tough. They deserve it.

Fish feed in fall

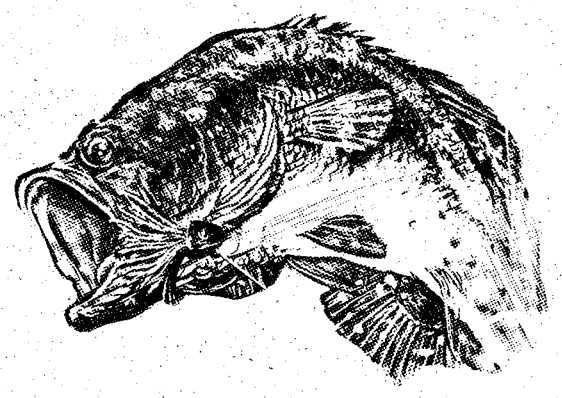
By Jim Porter



My frosty toes tell me that fall is fast approaching. Another good indication was the absolute lack of water skiers on West Point Lake this past weekend. Go ahead and put your skis away but, for goodness sake, don't retire your fishing gear.

Mr. Bass and Mr. Crappie will be going on their fall feeding spree before too long and that's something you will not want to miss out on. If you've never caught that seven or eight pound bass, October, November and early December will be the prime times to do so.

Now would be a good time to get all your gear ready for some hard fall fishing, so let's take a look at what we need to do.

First off, repack those wheel bearings on the old boat trailer. Bet you can't remember when you did that last! Check the wear on your trailer tires and look for cuts, cracks and other road damage. Be sure to check the bolts and nuts on the spring and shackle assemblies. They have been known to work loose.

How about the winch rope? Is it going to break and pop you across the snout? This is also a good time to put a little new carpet on those trailer runners. This makes the boat easier to load and saves wear on the hull.

A new set of points and plugs in that outboard will sure help with these cold morning starts. Nothing could be worse than to get up some cold morning, drive to the lake and then not be able to fire old Betsy up.

Speaking of firing up, you'd better replace that battery if it has been showing signs of being weak. Cold weather will kill it altogether.

Be sure to lubricate the two or three fittings on the outboard, too. It'll steer a lot easier. Check the gear grease down in the foot of the motor, also. Better yet, drain that gear grease and refill it.

Now check all the smaller items. See if the drain plugs are worn or cracked. Take a look at your anchor and mooring ropes. Check the mounting bolts and screws on your boat seats.

Be absolutely sure you give the boat's steering system a good visual check. If that item ever fails, you could be in for a serious accident. This is one reason that positive kill switches are so important on high powered boats.

Do you remember where you put the long underwear and wool socks last spring? Better go dig them out and be sure they're serviceable. Also, replace that leaking rainsuit. A little water down your back is alright in August, but it's misery in October. (Courtesy of Military Bass Anglers Association and Military Outdoors Magazine)

30-0 over 10th Co

Fondy paces Airborne

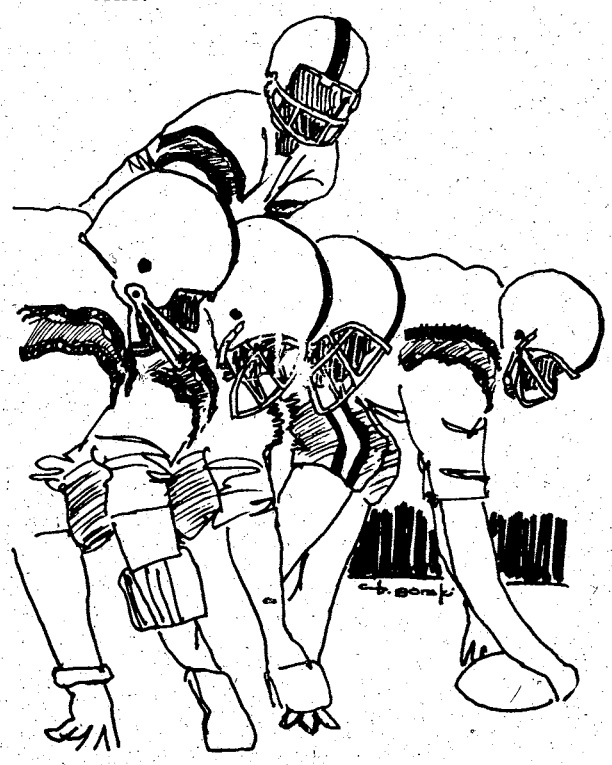
Airborne flew to a 30-0 romp over 10th Company, 1st Battalion in The School Brigade flag football action Monday night.

Dan Fondy ran 25 yards for one touchdown and passed 35 yards for another score to pace the Airborne attack. It was the second straight shutout for Airborne.



After Fondy's touchdown run early in the game, he passed to J.B. Brown for the two point conversion and an 8-0 lead. Later in the half, Fondy passed to Ed Stewart for a score but the conversion was missed and Airborne led at halftime 14-0.

In the second half, J.B. Brown intercepted a 10th Company pass and raced 40 yards for the touchdown. Benny Montgomery passed to Stafford Brown for the two point conversion and a commanding 22-0 lead.

Jasper Hurst scored the final Airborne touchdown on a 20 yard run. Montgomery hit Ronnie Rose to close out the scoring and give Airborne the 30-0 victory.

Defensive standouts for Airborne were Fish Simmons, Butch Campbell, Chuck D'Amico and Wil Ziegler. Airborne's record is now 2-1.

Each week The BAYONET will spotlight a company level flag football game in the sport's section. If you would like your company's team featured or have results of your games published, call The BAYONET sport's desk at 545-4622/2202.

Soldiers help Southern

By Tom Sabel

The Tri-community area's annual golfing extravaganza, the Southern Open concluded last week. While no Fort Benning soldiers won or placed in the prestigious PGA event, some did help to insure that it ran smoothly.

The golf fans all ready know Mike Sullivan won the tournament and that Arnie's Army couldn't help Arnold Palmer out of his seven-year-rut in PGA tournaments. However, not many golf fans know the legacy of hole 11. This year, as in former years, the slightly dog-legged par four hole was marshalled by paying volunteers from Fort Benning.

In the familiar blue knit shirts emblazoned with the Southern Open emblem, these soldiers made sure the pros had only to worry about their playing and not about the gallery of spectators.

When the pros came through, the marshalls made sure the crowds, some as large as Arnie's Army and others as small as one person, kept off the fairways and were quiet. As the players concentrated on their shots, the marshalls held up large paddles labeled quiet. The crowds then knew a cone of silence had to be thrown over the greens.

This four-day-outing was not a free ride for the marshalls. Each of them paid $23 which covered the cost of the shirts, the Southern Open hat, free refreshments, one round of golf at the exclusive Green Island Country Club and free admittance to the tournament.

According to Sp4 Ed Harris, one of the hole marshalls, it was well worth the cost. "I like golf and wanted to watch Palmer play.He looks just as good in real life as on TV- rich," commented Harris, chief illustrator with TASC.

Harris's job on the foggy Thursday, opening day of the tournament, was measuring distances for the long ball contest. He said the dense, low-lying fog hampered the morning tee-offs on opening day. "The players couldn't even see the greens for the fog," he said. Playing was delayed until later in the morning.

According to SFC Carl Crump, hole captain, the soldiers received many fine comments on the way they handled themselves.

Soccer added to intramurals

Soccer has been added to the USAIC intramural sport's program this fall. The program will be conducted at the brigade level.

The 1980 Brigade Level Soccer League will open its season Oct. 16. All games will begin at 6 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays on Gowdy Field.

Major Command teams are drawn from all of its company size units. Commands that are sponsoring teams include The School Brigade(two teams), 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group, 34th Medical Battalion and possibly a team from MEDDAC.

A single elimination tournament will be held at the conclusion of league play to determine the league champion. Teams will be seeded depending on the outcome of regular season team competition.

Each team will consist of 15 uniformed players and one coach. A schedule of games will be published prior to the start of the season.

Crawford scores three TDs

Panthers take bite out of Cowboys

High scoring games were the rule in Youth Activities football action last weekend. The Tri-City Panthers were the most explosive as they shutout the Cowboys 54-0.

The Panthers remained in first place in the Pee Wee League by defeating the Cowboys. The first touchdown of the game was a 69-yard pass from Peter Marshall to Mike Holmes. Marshall also hit Donny Harris on a 49 yard scoring strike.

Tyrone Crawford was the Panthers leading scorer with three touchdowns. Xavier Carter and Mike Guyn added touchdowns also.

In another Pee Wee game, the Jets knocked off the Patriots 16-6. Mark Owens scored the decisive touchdown in the game from 30-yards out. Defensive standouts were Christopher Jones and Paul Thomas.

In the Grasshopper League, the Seahawks blew out the Cardinals 34-0. Bryan Richardson led the scoring parade on touchdown runs of 40, 25 and 50 yards and Larry Holland scored two touchdowns. Defensive players of the game were Max Chapa, Eric McIntosh and Larry Moyers.

The lowest scoring game of the week was in the Termite division as the Buccaneers slid by the Patriots 6-0. Quarterback Ron McIver scored the lone touchdown of the game on a 62 yard run. The Buccaneer defense was led by Shane Coombs, Stanley Maxwell, Kevin Bailey and Michael Creek.

In the Midget League, the Tri-City Panthers bulldozed the Fort Rucker Packers 32-0. It was the Panthers fourth victory in five games. Ike Wychc led the Panther scoring with two touchdowns while Mike Carter and Terry Irvin scored one apiece. In another Midget game, the Falcons slipped by the Seahawks 20-14.

The game started off as Kevin Sparks sacked Fort Rucker's quarterback in the end zone for a safety. Other key defensive players were Fernando Jones, Andrew Bell, Tracy Rucker and Ernest Barman.

A Patriot football player anxiously attempts to bring down a rival Buccaneer player running away with the ball. However, the Buccaneers came away with the win, 6-0 in the Termite division.

Deer season

With the arrival of fall, the leaves turn brown and the hunters head out in search of the big catch. Deer season is the main attraction on post and as a primer for it, the Fish and Wildlife Advisory Council is sponsoring a gun check.

The gun check, for shoguns only(no rifles), will be held Oct. 18 from 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. on Porter Range at the corner of 8th Division and 1st Division Roads. The buck deer season for firearms will open a week later and last until Jan. 11, 1981. The total bag limit is two bucks with a minimum of 3" antlers.

There will be two doe seasons this autumn. The first one will be from Nov. 27-30 and the second one will be from Dec. 20 through Jan. 11, 1980. The total bag limit is either two bucks and one doe, one buck and two doe, or three doe.

The archery deer season will end Oct. 24. The total bag limit is either two bucks and one doe, one buck and two doe, or three doe.

The maximum number of deer that may be killed by any person by any means on the entire reservation(Georgia and Alabama) during the entire open season shall be three, of which one must be anterless. Anterless deer can be harvested only on dates in which either sex hunting is authorized or during archery season. No hunter, under any circumstances, shall take more than bucks during the entire season.

Hunting deer with dogs is prohibited throughout the entire reservation, as is using traps for any hunting. A special archery license is required for Georgia. Bows, including compound bows, may be used during firearm season, but the hunter must abide by firearm's regulations.

All hunters should become familiar with and abide by USAIC Circular 210-4. They can be obtained by contacting Master Sgt. Lyle Brown, secretary of the Fish and Wildlife Advisory Council, at 545-7387.

Sheriff's Target

This week there are two subjects that should be of concern to everyone working or living here — parking lots and pet control. Unfortunately, our parking lots are continuing to be used for more than the parking of cars, and some of our pets are becoming a nuisance to other pet owners and non-pet owners alike.

Parking areas

Parking areas continue to be a hot spot for larceny and vandalism, they are still under attack by unscrupulous individuals, even with increased surveillance and enforcement. During August and September, eight automobiles, three motorcycles, 66 wheel covers and 14 motorcycle helmets were stolen from parking lots. An additional $5,000 damage was reported by vehicle owners due to vandalism. Several suspects have been apprehended by military police investigators but others are still helping themselves.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

Observations by our military police indicate there is also an apparent connection between the number of people loitering in parking areas and the numbers of vandalism and larceny. To counter this problem, an updated crime prevention regulation, USAIC Reg 190-31, will prohibit loitering or repair of vehicles in parking areas, effective in November.

However, revising the regulation is only a start. Our individual efforts can also assist in curbing parking area crimes by:

- Reporting people who are loitering in parking areas to your unit or the military police (545-5222).
- Never leaving keys in the ignition of a parked vehicle or hiding them on or inside a vehicle.
- Placing packages, clothing or other articles in the trunk.
- Removing helmets from motorcycles (even those with a special lock).
- Marking for identification all wheel covers, batteries, radios and stereos.
- Keeping a record of identification numbers, state license tag numbers and post registration numbers in a place separate from the vehicle.

Pet control

The control of pets is becoming an increasing problem here. USAIC Reg 210-10 requires that all pets, when outside, be leashed or under voice control and be within sight of a responsible individual. Military police receive an average of 35 complaints regarding uncontrolled pets each week.

During August and September, military police impounded 86 pets running astray, issued 20 citations for failure to control pets and charged the owners of 11 pets involved in unprovoked biting and scratching incidents. Of the 86 pets that were impounded, 15 were picked up in Custer Terrace, 17 on Main Post, 13 in Bouton Heights, 17 in McGraw Manor and 13 in Davis Hill. This is a lot of dog chasing!

Due to the severity of the pet control problem and concern for the safety and health of residents of the installation, a tougher policy concerning the control of pets has been put into effect by the command. The new policy requires the removal of a pet from the installation when:

- It has been impounded for running astray twice or been declared a nuisance three times.
- It has been involved in an unprovoked biting or scratching incident.

It is not that the command does not like dogs, cats and other pets and wants to rid the post of them. The fact is that we, as pet owners, have the personal responsibility to control them. What some of us may consider to be an adorable pet and almost consider a member of the family, others may consider a nuisance. Especially when they are allowed to run loose and destroy lawns, shrubbery, flowers, and on occasion bite or scratch people.

Women's clothes altered

Women soldiers issued or purchasing male fatigue uniforms may now have them altered but not so they achieve a form-fitted uniform. The sizes available in men's utility uniforms have been expanded to meet the needs of women soldiers.

The following should be observed when making alterations:

Fatigue trousers may only be altered in the crotch, seat and waist.

Authorized alterations to the shirts are limited to sleves, shoulders, collar, side seams and back waist length.

The fatigue uniform must be loose fitting after alterations are completed. Soldiers may not add pockets or flaps to the sleeves or shorten the sleeves by cutting them off.

Chapter 15 and Table 15-2, AR 700-84. "Issue and Sale of Personal Clothing," contains information on the alterations of uniforms. The above information applies to women in the Active and Reserve Components. Fatigue uniform policies for men remain unchanged.

SQT changes start FY81

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--Most of those changes announced last year concerning the skill qualification test (SQT) program will begin to affect all soldiers scheduled for testing during fiscal year (FY) 1981., according to a Department of the Army training official.

One of the major changes calls for the annual testing of all soldiers. Now, the official explains, all soldiers will be tested in their primary MOS annually once their SQT dates are set.

Test forms of E-4s and below are sent to the U.S. Army Training Support Center (USATSC), Fort Eustis, Va., which scores the tests and prepares the individual soldier's reports (ISR). The ISR is then returned to the soldier's unit. The official stated that a copy of the ISR is kept in the soldier's field file (military personnel records jacket) for use when the soldier competes for promotion to grade E-5. The official added, however, that the ISR is not placed in the soldier's official file (official military personnel file) kept at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Test forms of E-5s and above are also sent to USATSC for scoring and preperation of ISRs. In addition, the U.S. Army Enlisted Records Evaluation Center (USAEREC) at Fort Benjamin Harrison gets the scores so that a USAEREC form 10A can be prepared. These soldiers will continue to receive the ISR and the USAEREC form 10A which will give the SQT result, the soldier's percentile ranking and the senior enlisted evaluation report score.

Other SQT changes announced in 1979 but which start during the FY 81 testing period include:

* A shorter Skill Component (SC), previously called the written component, part of the SQT. The official explained that the SC test portion for combat arms soldiers will be one hour long, while all other soldiers will have a two-hour test.

* An improved SC section of the SQT which uses more charts, diagrams and visual aids for the soldier to work with.

* More emphasis on performance using the job site component part of the SQT, previously referred to as the performance certification component. The SQT job site component is like the hands-on component, he explained, but does not require the set up of a formal test site or special training for scores. It is given to the soldier by the immediate supervisor.

Another change which will have impact on the SQT program is that soldiers will now be tested on their present skill level only. There will be no questions based on the next higher skill level, the official added.

Results from the SQT program are used by the Army to link training and personnel management decisions affecting soldiers' careers, the officiala offered.

President approves housing pay increase

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)-An excutive order signed Oct. 3 by the President paves the way for the Variable Housing Allowance (VHA) to be paid starting with the October pay period.

According to DA officials, the VHA will be paid to certain servicemembers stationed in CONUS who are entitled to draw Basic Allowance for Quarters (BAQ). The Variable Allowance will be paid to help servicemembers cover housing costs where the average cost for housing exceeds the average BAQ by 15 percent or more.

The allowance rates are currently being determined and housing cost indexes are expected to reach military finance centers by mid-October, officials say.

"Every effort is being made to include the allowance in the military member's October 1980 pay check," said one DA official.

A Pentagon finance official commented that the DoDWorking Committee, tasked with coming up with the housing cost indexes, will get the paperwork to finance centers on time.

The effective date for paying VHA is October 1, regardless of when actual payment to servicemembers is made, the official emphasized.

PCS mileage rates increase this month

WASHINGTON(ARNEWS)--Soldiers moving on Permanent Change of Station(PCS) orders are now collecting mileage reimbursement at a higher rate.

The new rate, which went into effect Oct. 1, is 18.5 cents per mile, according to officials. The old rate was 10 cents per mile.

The reimbursement rates for family members of soldiers remained the same at seven cents per mile for adult dependents(12 and over) and 3.5 cents for dependents ages 2-11.

Benning SSgt. accused in 10½ lbs. 'pot' bust

Fort Benning criminal investigation division (CID) apprehended a 31-year-old staff sergeant Oct. 4, for the alledged possession and sale of marijuana.

The soldier alledgedly sold an undercover agent one-quarter pound of marijuana on Sept. 23 and 27. Then on Oct. 4, he was packed up on post with 10 1/2 pounds of marijuana in his possession, according to a USACIDC agent.

The soldier was released to his company. His name is being withheld pending further investigation.

ID cards required for check payment

Effective Nov. 1, customers using personal checks at the Fort Benning Commissary will be required to present their ID cards to the cash register operator. This procedure is necessary to verify social security number and signature and is essential for the protection of customers in case of lost checks, etc.

Be conscious of handicapped

By Tom Sabel

Tomorrow ends a week dedicated to the awareness of handicapped people. For the handicapped, the world is, in many ways, different from the world we live in. For we healthy folks a long flight of stairs may look like a long chore ahead. For the handicapped, the same flight of stairs might as well be Mount Everest.

Many strides have been made in recognizing the problems some of the handicapped have. More ramps are being installed on stairs and curbs. Reserved parking has been set aside closer to many public buildings.

Architects are beginning to get handicapped people's opinions on how to better design their buildings. Questions such as how does a blind person feel in a cavernous lobby or can those in wheelchairs manuever through the maze of hallways have been raised by certain planners and designers.

More and more television stations offer either captioned stories or programs with a sign language interpreter for the deaf. Sophisticated technology has helped the deaf, mute and blind to communicate.

While many advances have been made in behalf of the handicapped, priveliged parking and ramps into buildings do not do them much good if some healthy person takes the parking space or if the ramp is blocked.

Being too lazy is a poor excuse to take the parking space of the handicapped. For them to walk or pull their wheelchair from the far end of a parking lot would ruin any pleasure they might have hoped for on their shopping trip. Blocking a ramp could easily deprive them of access into the building they need to enter.

Be aware of their problems. The handicapped can and do live normal lives but they have many obstacles to hurdle. Why should we place anymore in front of them.

Why not raise the limit?

Housing area speed limits unenforceable

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Perhaps we should consider changing the speed limits in the post housing areas from 15 m.p.h. to something much higher to accomodate the apparent desires of the majority of motorists and the MPs.

I live in the McGraw Manor housing area and have noted with some concern that I am the only motorist who actually drives the speed limit when in the housing area. Most others speed up behind me and ride my bumper, blowing their horns and whipping around me at the narrow curves to fly on thru the housing area.

While working in the yard in front of my house I often see vehicles rocketing past my house with litle or no concern for the many small children living in the area. I can understand some of this irresponsible driving by dependents, but I refuse to believe that the soldiers who are disobeying the posted speed limits do not know what they are doing. There must be some desire or reason to open up the speed limits. At the same time I almost never see the MPs monitoring or enforcing the traffic rules during peak traffic hours. Again, I can only think that the speed limits are set too low.

I have been told by informed sources that the main reason for the apparent lack of military police presence in the McGraw Manor area is due to there being only one patrol responsible for the entire Sand Hill area, Highway 27 and the Custer Road area. Taking all this into account, there seems to be no alternative except to increase the speed limit since it is obviously desired by most who drive in the area and since it is obviously unenforceable by those who are supposed to police the area. God help us!

Thanks to MAH

To the Editor:

It is with great pleasure that I take this opportunity to say thank you to the many people who have helped my family through a most traumatic experience. On Father's Day of this year my 13-year old son was run over by a motorboat. It's a terrible experience for a parent to see their child's life pass before their eyes.

My son's life was spared, but he received severe lacerations to his back, neck and head. He suffered a cracked rib and his right arm was almost severed at the elbow. After getting initial emergency treatment at the Barbour County Hospital, Eufaula, Ala. my son was air evacuated to Martin Army Hospital by members of the 498th Medical Company.

Upon arrival at MAH the treatment was outstanding in every way. My son underwent emergency surgery for six-and-a-half hours during which time his arm was put together and his head wound was closed. The hospital commander said that it was a miracle he didn't lose his arm. There were many times during the next two weeks that we thought we might lose him, but God was on our side.

My son has been in surgery again since the accident and more surgery will have to be performed before it's all over. He continues to go to the hospital each day for treatment. He has come a long way on the road to recovery, but still has a long way to go.

To the commander of Martin Army Hospital, the orthopedic staff, Drs. Fullerton and Snowdy, the nurses and wonderful people of the pediatric ward, the staff in occupational adnd physical therapy, the braceshop, the 498th Medical Company, Chaplains Hill, Casibry and Erbach and the many friends who have provided support to my family, we say, "Thank you from the bottom of our hearts."

Reservists: more training

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--Reserve Component (RC) soldiers will be doing more mission and training-oriented jobs now that DA is reducing the administrative workload for RC units, according to a DA Adjuntant General official.

Several important changes have been made in reducing the administrative workload which had "balloned to the point where it detracts from readiness," explained the official.

In late 1979, Army Chief of Staff Gen. E.C. Meyer made a commitment to reduce the workload which had been acknowledged as a problem in RC units. A Task Force, headed by the Adjuntant General and organized by the Reserve Component Coordination Council (RCCC), was formed to deal with the problem.

According to the official, studies and visits by the Task Force revealed that paperwork was "gumming up the works in regard to training, morale, job satisfaction, recruitment and retention as well as overall readiness."

The Task Force found a number of areas in which administrative requirements could be simplified, consolidated or even eliminated. Nineteen Task Force recommendations which modify or eliminate administrative requirements have already been accepted, the official said.

For example, the official offered, supply regulations are now being combined to avoid duplication and confusion. Also, instructions explaining the signature delegation authority for unit publications are also being provided. RC units now have to inventory weapons by serial number once each three months as opposed to the former monthly requirement.

Other recommendations made by the RCCC have been approved and there will be more in the future, the official state.

The Adjuntant General, along with represenatives of the U.S. Army Forces Command (FORSCOM) and the National Guard Burea (NGB), have set up a "watchdog" activity to make sure unwarranted admin burdens do not creep back into the system. This "watchdog" activity will also look for ways to use technology and other systems to reduce detractors from the RC units' primary missions.

"The RCCC Task Force has a big mission still ahead of them," commented the official. But, he added, "more improvements are possible which will help our Reserve Components achieve and maintain a high state of readiness."

Mechanic rewarded for courageous act

An aircraft mechanic from the Directorate of Industrial Operation's Maintenance Division will receive the Department of Army's Exceptional Civilian Service Award for Bravery today.

Mr. Claud E. Pulliam will be honored at the Secretary of the Army Annual Awards Ceremony that will be held in the Pentagon.

The 33-year-old Columbus man is being recognized for heroic action in the rescue of a military pilot from a burning helicopter.

While on an aircraft checkout flight, the helicopter carrying a pilot, technical inspector and Pulliam crashed and burst into flames near Fort Benning.

Although injured himself, Pulliam faced the flames and the possibility of an explosion and reentered the helicopter to physically lift and remove the trapped pilot who was seriously injured.

He returned twice to try to get the body of the other civilian who died in the crash out-but was unsucessful.

His total disregard for his own safety and exhibition of unusual courage has earned Pulliam this citation.

MAH gets new name

Fort Benning's hospital has a new name - Martin Army Community Hospital.

Health Services Command, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, has added the word 'Community' to their military hospitals to better convey their missions.

Army post's are essentially communities and the medical facilities treat entire populations - soldiers and families.

Martin Army also has a new medical procedure available for patients with circulation problems.

In the past, patients with poor circulation eventually ended up having bypass surgery, or if the problem were in the legs, amputation. Now, a new technique called transluminal angioplasty has been developed to improve the circulation by widening the narrowed blood vessels without surgery.

The procedure consists of inserting a special type of small tubing called 'Gruntzig' catheter inside the blood vessels. The secret to this procedure is the small balloon at the tip of the catheter which can be inflated inside the blood vessel. This procedure is now also being done in larger medical centers to improve circulation not only in the legs but also in the kidneys and in the heart.

Recently, radiologists Dr. Vicente P. Almario and Ildefonso Almonte performed the procedure on a patient at Martin Army Community Hospital.

C. G. praises soldiers, civilians

I wish to express my appreciation and to commend all of the personnel on Fort Benning for the fine job that is being done here.

When we compare the magnitude of all our missions to the limited resources we have to accomplish these missions, it becomes very clear how hard you all are working. What impresses me is that you do things so well and consistently conceive ways to do them even better.

Maj. Gen. Grange

The excellent rapport that exists between the military and civilian workforce is demonstrated by the great enthusiasm and cooperation with which each task is undertaken and executed. Through a concerted effort and hard work, we have achieved many successes including a vast improvement in our community environment.

We have initiated various programs to improve services to the soldiers. Shorter turnaround time for vacant quarters, more efficient administrative procedures and improved recreational programs have all been conducive to creating and enhancing a high state of morale among the troops and their families. During my inspections I have seen a genuine concern for the well-being of the soldier and his family by the leaders at all levels of the chain of command.

You may be proud, and justly so, of the fine record and reputation that Fort Benning has achieved. Both citizens of the United States and foreign visitors leave this post with a highly favorable impression. Their complimentary remarks on the appearance of the troops, the quality of training and the overall attractiveness of the post are directly attributable to your positive attitude and pride in professionalism.

I thank you for your fine support and ask that you strive to make our community an even better place in which to work and live. I'm proud of you and proud to be your commander.

Medical inspector named

New position helps VA's IG

Doctor Kenneth E. Lindsay, a career Veteran's Administration(VA) physician, has been named to the newly created position of medical inspector for the agency.

The post was created to to provide the necessary medical expertise to assist the VA inspector general on investigations and surveys of VA medical activities.

Dr. Donald L. Custis, VA chief medical director, said the new office "represents a professionally sensitive approach to reviewing medical care activities involving physicians and other health care professionals. It is another step toward monitoring and improving the quality of patient care in VA's 172 medical centers."

Dr. Lindsay has been a VA employee since 1952 and has served at four of the agency's medical centers. Before joining the field operations staff at VA Headquarters in Washington, D.C., he was chief of staff of the VA hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

The oversight provided by Dr. Lindsay's office and the VA inspector general is in addition to that of some 44 agencies and organizations that regularly monito and review VA medical programs. Among these oversight organizations are the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, the General Accounting Office and the National Academy of the Sciences.

Lindsay is an Army veteran of World War II and is active in the Army Reserve medical corps.

He is a graduate of Walla Walla College and received his medical degree from Loma Linda University School of Medicine. He has served on the medical school faculties at Northwestern University, the University of Cincinnati and the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Lindsay said that "...initially, the Medical Inspector's Office will be a small unit--one physician, an administrative officer and a secretary. The office will pursue investigations, surveys and studies primarily by assembling teams of physicians with the appropriate specialties to study individual situations."

Federal pay increase approved

A bill to raise the pay of federal civilian employees by 9.1 percent in most grades has been signed. This is the largest annual pay increase for federal employees since 1969, when a 9.1 percent increase was also granted. In recent years, pay raises have ranged from 5 to 7½ percent.

The 9.1 percent raise will take effect the first full pay period after Oct. 1. Special rates for engineers and architects GS-5 through GS-11 will not be established until later on this year.

Some cars barred re-entry to U.S.

WASHINGTON(ARNEWS)--Certain 1981 cars and trucks bought in the United States and used overseas with leaded gas cannot be returned to the U.S., DA officials say.

These vehicles are made with special equipment designed to meet 1981 U.S federal emissions standards. They are meant to be used with unleaded gasoline only. Unleaded gasoline is not available through Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) gas stations overseas, AAFES officials explain. If leaded gasoline is used, the vehicles may not run properly.

Vehicles affected are all 1981 General Motors cars and trucks; early 1981 Ford and Mercury models with the 2.3 and some 4.2 or 5 liter engines; the Lincoln with the 5.8 engine; and the Chrysler Imperial, say AAFES officials.

"Export" models sold for overseas delivery won't have an emission control system put in. Since they do not meet standards, they will not be allowed to be shipped into the U.S.

Before buying a 1981 automobile, personnel planning on going overseas sould ask the dealer if the emission control system can be removed, say DA logistics officials. If it can, they should also ask what the cost to replace it at a later date would be.

Cars not meeting the 1981 federal emissions standards will have to be entered under bond upon return to the U.S., the DA officials said. The cars will be impounded by customs at the port of entry until they are brought up to standards.

Questions about the emissions systems on 1981 vehicles should directed to car and truck manufactureres or their authorized sales representatives.

Boyhood dream finally fullfilled

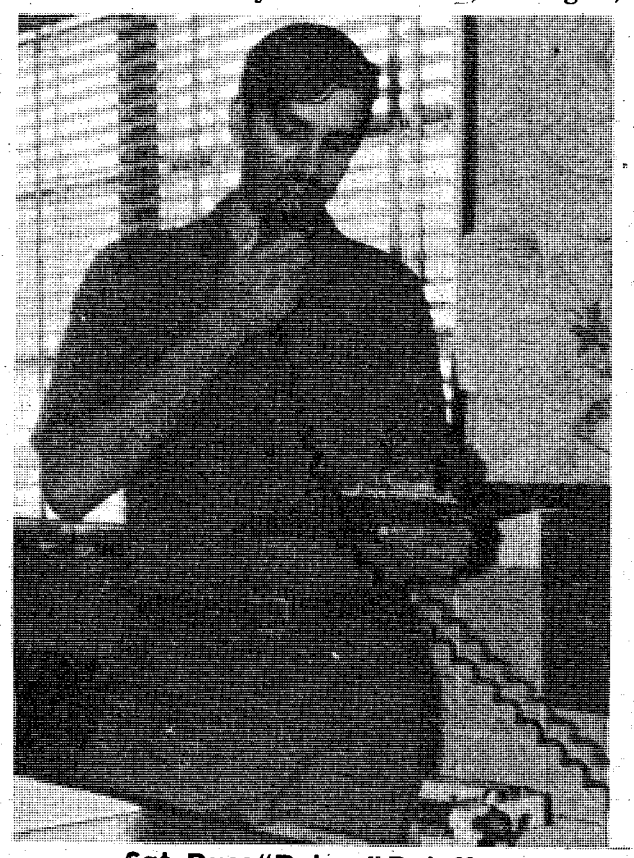
By Becky Bulgrin

Persistence can pay off, along with good timing and a little luck. So found out Sgt. Russ Roloff, who finally got something he has wanted since he was a young boy.

Roloff, a flight dispatcher with the 121st Aviation Company, said he wanted to work on the radio ever since he can remember. "I used to stay up listening to late-night radio all the time," he recalled. "My dream was to someday be on it myself."

His dream recently came true when, once again, he was listening to all-night radio. But it didn't happen all at once and came quite unexpectedly.



Sgt. Russ "Peters" Roloff

Roloff laughs about the way it began. "I ended up working the late-night shift at Lawson Army Airfield quite often," he said. "So I'd listen to the Columbus Nite-Line on WDAK-AM. It's a radio talk show where people can call and voice their opinions on different topics each night."

"I started calling and the more I called, the more I'd talk to the host, Dan Daniels," continued Roloff. "I'd get him laughing and one night he said, 'Hey, you'd be good at a show like this,' and we got to talking some more and he asked if I'd like to meet with him. So I did, and that's how it all began."

Roloff laughed even more when he recalled how he was hired. "I went to the studio to put my voice on tape and was told to act like I was doing a talk show and to think of a subject to talk about," he said. "So when I started talking about sex, everyone couldn't believe it and just busted up."

But Roloff's good luck came to a halt when the man who hired him left the station (not Daniels) and Roloff was out of a radio job before it even began. Or so it seemed — for two weeks later Roloff received a call to go to the station. Not sure what was going on, Roloff went and discovered he was getting his big chance after all.

"I couldn't believe it," exclaimed Roloff as he explained what happened. "Jason Scott, the program director for WDAK, was going through some tapes and ran acrross mine. He liked it, sex and all, and that's when I was called in - and hired."

Not having any on-the-air experience, Roloff started out as an EZ computer operator, running an easy listening music show for WEIZ-FM. He saw a spot for a commercial during the show and took it upon himself to do it. When his voice was heard over the air, Scott ran in, saying it was "perfect." Roloff was then asked to do Saturday shows for WDAK-AM - a dream come true, what timing!

Although Roloff had never worked on the air, the Indiana native did have some background in broadcasting. He attended Vincennes University for broadcast production technology before joining the Army five and one-half years ago. He wanted to join for broadcasting but there were no slots open, so he signed up for artillery. After spending four years in Germany, Roloff re-enlisted for his present MOS as a flight dispatcher.

Known as a "real character" by his fellow workers, Roloff says his part-time disc jockey job doesn't interfere with his duties as a soldier. "If I have duty on the weekend, the station understands and there are no problems," he said. "Besides I've always had some kind of an extra job since I've been here."

Standing six-feet, six-inches, Roloff possesses a "quick sense of humor." He says he loves his DJ job and plans to pursue a career in broadcasting. "I feel very at ease on the radio," he said. "It's great to sit there, just being myself and having fun, while at the same time getting paid for it."

Besides being a soldier and part-time DJ, 23-year-old Roloff says he is an avid stamp collector and a member of the Columbus Jaycees. He lives on post with his wife, Dawn, and two sons, Chris and Brian.

So, if you're ever listening to WDAK and hear the name "Russ Peters," don't let it fool you. It's really the voice of Sgt. Russ Roloff (he uses his first and middle name on the air), a Fort Benning soldier who made his dream come true.

Anzio's 157th Inf. holds reunion

Twenty-four battle tested veterans of Anzio--one of WW II's boldest invasions--will visit Fort Benning today as former members of the famed 157th Infantry Regiment meet for their 35th reunion.

Heading the delegation are Ralph Krieger, former battalion commander, and Dr. Peter Graffagnino prominent Columbus physician and former battalion surgeon who earned a silver star for bravery.

The group will be quartered at Callaway Gardens for the week 4-day reunion with a side tour to the post for a visit to training and a tour of the National Infantry Museum.

The 157th earned six battle stars during its 511 days in combat, with campaigns at Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, and Central Europe.

The unit was first organized in 1881 and was known as the First Colorado Infantry. It first saw duty in the Philippines in the late 1800's. The 157th received its present designation just prior to WW I and served on the Arizona-Mexico border. When the U.S. entered the war, the unit traveled to France with the 40th "Sunset" Division.

The unit was called again to the colors in 1940 as a part of the 45th Infantry Division and was mustered into service at Fort Sill, Okla.

On June 3, 1943, the 157th sailed from Hampton Roads, VA.

Scouting: Chattahoochee Council holds camperall here

By Tom Sabel

For the 700 boy scouts from 40 nearby troops the weather for their Chattahoochee Council Scouting Together Camperall 1980 couldn't have been better.

The site for the camperall, off Lee field here fit the event well, a large open field bordered by the woods of Fort Benning. The scouts had shady areas to camp in and an open space for their many contests and activities.

In addition to providing the location, Fort Benning also gave a great deal of support to the camperall. Seventeen water buffalos (water tanks) from the 197th Infantry Brigade, 34th Medical Battalion and 36th Engineer Group made sure the scouts had plenty of water during the weekend. The 34th Medical Battalion also supplied a medical team for the scouts.

"The suppoert we got was great," said Brad Walden, spokesman for the scouts. "They didn't just stand around, they got out and got involved."

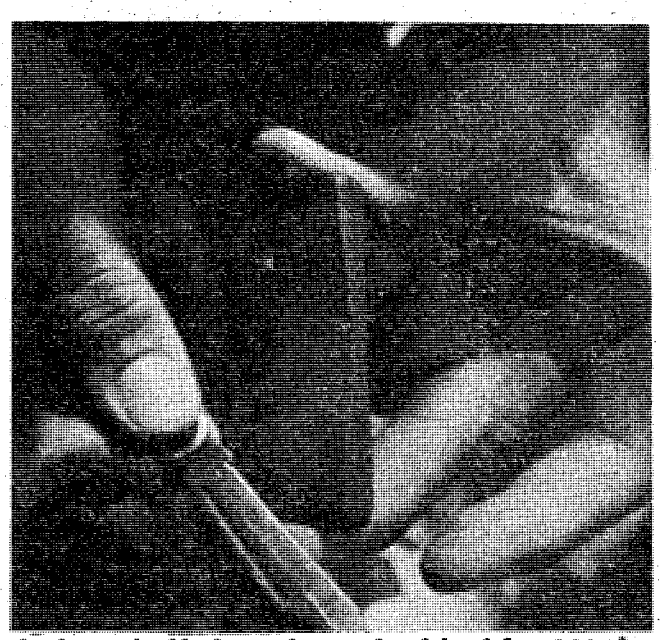
This camperall, like all the scouting events left the scouts in charge with as little adult supervision as possible. The scouts set up their own campsites, planned the meals for the weekend, and the different troops competed in a number of events.

With only one scout of the 700 present recieving minor injuries was a real accomplishment, said one of the scout leaders.

The scouts arrived at the site on Friday evening and set up their campsites. Saturday the troops held their competition and the day was capped off with a large campfire and a variety of amateur theatrics entertained the crowd. On Sunday the awards were given and the scouts ended their camperall.

Fort Benning's Silver Wings parachute club jumping in on Sunday with the list of winners giving adramatic finale to the camperall. Col. Bobby J. Harris, chief of staff, presented the awards to the winning scouts.

Troop 40, the Roadrunners, of Pine Mountain won the Hot Isotope contest. Troop 128, the Panthers, of Smiths Station, Ala. won the Compass Orientation and Axmanship competitions. Troop 15, the War Eagles, of Auburn-Opelika, Ala. won the Rope Climb. Troop 12, the Panthers,of Auburn, Ala. won the Chariot Race. Troop 2, the Foxes, of Columbus won the firebuilding competitin. Troop 250, the Beavers, of Manchester won the knot tying contest. Troop 30, the Foxes, of Auburn-Opelika won the tenderfoot competition.



A sharp knife is an important tool for scouts.

PCS system gives help for families

CHARLESTON, S.C.--An international network has been established to help military families facing a permanent change of station move. This system, PCS of America, serves the special needs of families moving to and from communities which host military bases of all branches of the armed forces.

The chief executive of PCS, Inc. (Property Consulting Service of America, Inc.), J. Marion Doar, explained that the ever expanding network operates in each community through a single brokerage firm.

Each affiliate must meet the rigid standards set up by PCS, Inc. The local affiliate refers families to the PCS counterpart in the town they are moving to. He stated that PCS of America already has more than 55 bases in America and overseas.

Too many checks may bring fraud

Normally, military paychecks are as dependable as the phases of the moon. However, errors happen and the soldier's mid-month or end-of-month paycheck doesn't always arrive.

Soldiers who have not received their checks may request a local payment for the missing check. They may also request local pay for missing allotment checks. However, such requests are limited to certain missing allotment checks for the current month only.

When a problem arises soldiers should first noitfy their commanders. The local finance officer can help soldiers start a stop payment action on the missing check. The amount of the missing check will then be given to the soldier in cash or check, depending on the needs of the soldier.

When the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center receives the stop payment action the soldier's account will be credited with the amount of the missing check. A deduction will be made from the soldier's pay account for the local payment received.

If the soldier should receive the original check after receiving a local payment, return the check to the local finance office. The original check also needs to be returned to the local finance office if the check is mailed to someone other than the soldier.

If the original check is cashed after a local payment has been made this constitutes an act of fraud against the U.S. government. The punishment for anyone who knowingly makes a fraudulent claim against the government may be fined up to $10,000, imprisoned up to five years or both.

Commissaries stay

WASHINGTON(ARNEWS)---The military services will continue operating their own commissaries, at least for the near future, announced Robert B. Pirie, assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics.

This decision comes after a two-year DoD study into the advantages of combining the various commissary store systems into a single DoD agancy.

However, the study did reveal the need for more effective DoD involvement in the operation of the commissaries, a DoD official said. Consequently, a DoD executive board has been set up to oversee commissary operations. This board, which will include top leadership from each of the service's commissary systems, will offer policy guidance on commissary operations, set goals and rate performance, the official explained.

The new board is expected to help achieve some of the more desirable aspects of consolidation without creating a new DoD ageny for commissaries.

Civilians get awards

The U.S. Infantry Army Board Commander, Col. Arthur P. Kinzel, presented certificates to the following civil service employees:

Christmas early- outs granted

If you're scheduled to leave active duty December 12 through January 6, you'll be eligible for an 'early-out'.

Eligible soldiers will be separated during December 11-17 or as soon as possible, unless they want to leave on their normal release date.

DA Circular 612-80-1, which lists the release schedule, also provides for a liberal leave policy for the holiday season.

Soldiers with approved terminal leave will have their leave date adjusted to meet the new separation schedule.

The schedule:

| Current ESA/ETS Date | Target Separation Date |
|---|---|
| Dec. 12-26, 1980 | Dec. 11, 1980 |
| Dec. 27-28, 1980 | Dec. 12, 1980 |
| Dec. 29, 1980- | Dec. 15, 1980 |
| Jan. 1, 1981Jan. 2-4, 1981 | Dec. 16, 1980 |
| Jan. 5-6, 1981 | Dec. 17, 1980 |

Officers eligible for this program may be kept on active duty if they're needed for unit operations.

Personnel not eligible for early release are:

- Reserve component soldiers on active duty for training.
- Soldiers scheduled for retirement.
- Officers having DA-approved release or resignation dates or those who are being involuntarily separated.
- Personnel affected by flagging actions under AR 600-31.

Overseas commanders are to make sure members being separated under this program are released in time to meet this schedule.

Doughboy Stadium celebrates 55 years of sporting today

Today in 1925, Doughboy Stadium was dedicated and the first football game was played on the then new gridiron, with the Infantry School defeating Olgethrope University, champions of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

The stadium was built by infantrymen as a memorial to their dead comrades of World War I. Plans to build the stadium was started by the U.S. Infantry Association. Since they could not use any money appropriated by Congress the association realized that the responsibility would rest largely on the indvidual soldier.

Each unit in the U.S. Army was asked to contribute what it could. Many large contributions were made by top infantry officers, including General of the Army Douglas MacAthur, who was then a brigadier general. Originally it was planned that all money recieved would come from infantry units. Contributions were also recieved from other branches of the serviceas well as many universities and colleges.

Beside contributing money to the fund, infantry soldiers gave willing support during off-duty hours to build the stadium. Construction was the responsibility of the Recreation Center Board, and the planning and building of the stadium was carried out by the U.S. Army engineers.

Work on the stadium began in Nov. 1924 and was completed in Oct. 1925.

Bags checked free on MAC flights

WASHINGTON(ARNEWS)--Passengers flying on Military Airlift Command (MAC) flights can now check two pieces of baggage free, according to MAC officials.

The new piece rate baggage system, which started Oct. 1, replaces the old system of basing baggage allowance on package weight. Under the old system, a passenger was limited to 66 lbs. of baggage. MAC officials say the new system applies to military and MAC contract charter flights.

Each piece of luggage may not be more than 62 linear inches (length plus width plus heigth) and 70 pounds under the piece rate system. One piece, not more than 45 linear inches, may be handcarried on board the aircraft, officials add.

Anyone carrying more than the free baggage allowance will be charged a flat rate of 18 percent of the MAC passenger fare, according to officials. This also applies to people authorized excess baggage.

The flat rate will also have to be paid if a bag exceeds size and weight limits. However, one duffle, B-4 or sea bag will be accepted as an authorized single piece regardless of weight and size. Any additional duffle, B-4 or sea bag will be considered excess and the 18 percent fee will be charged.

Air conditioning goes off

Last Friday air conditioning and mechanical ventilation devices were cutoff in quarters, except those of occupants who have a medical certificate.

Certain facilities have been excluded, they are: Printing Plant, Bldg. 9005, 498th Medical Company, Bldg. 301; all medical and dental facilities, as well as mechanical ventilation in areas where exhaust fans requiring removal of fumes and/or excessive heat are necessary and properly controlled. Any activity other than those mentioned having a special requirement for provision of air conditioning for personnel or equipment may obtain consideration to continue its use by submitting a written request to the Directorate of Facilities Engineering, ATTN: ATZB-FE-U.

Winter is slowly coming upon us. The heating start-up date will be announced after the daily average tempature reaches 60 degrees as recorded between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. for three consecutive days. Occupants should expect chilly nights and then a warm spell or two up till the last week in October. On those chilly nights conserve heat in quarters from cooking, bathing, lighting, etc. and this will conserve our natural gas. Heating systems will not be repaired on a routine basis until after the official announcement date.

Membership given

Firemen show off skills

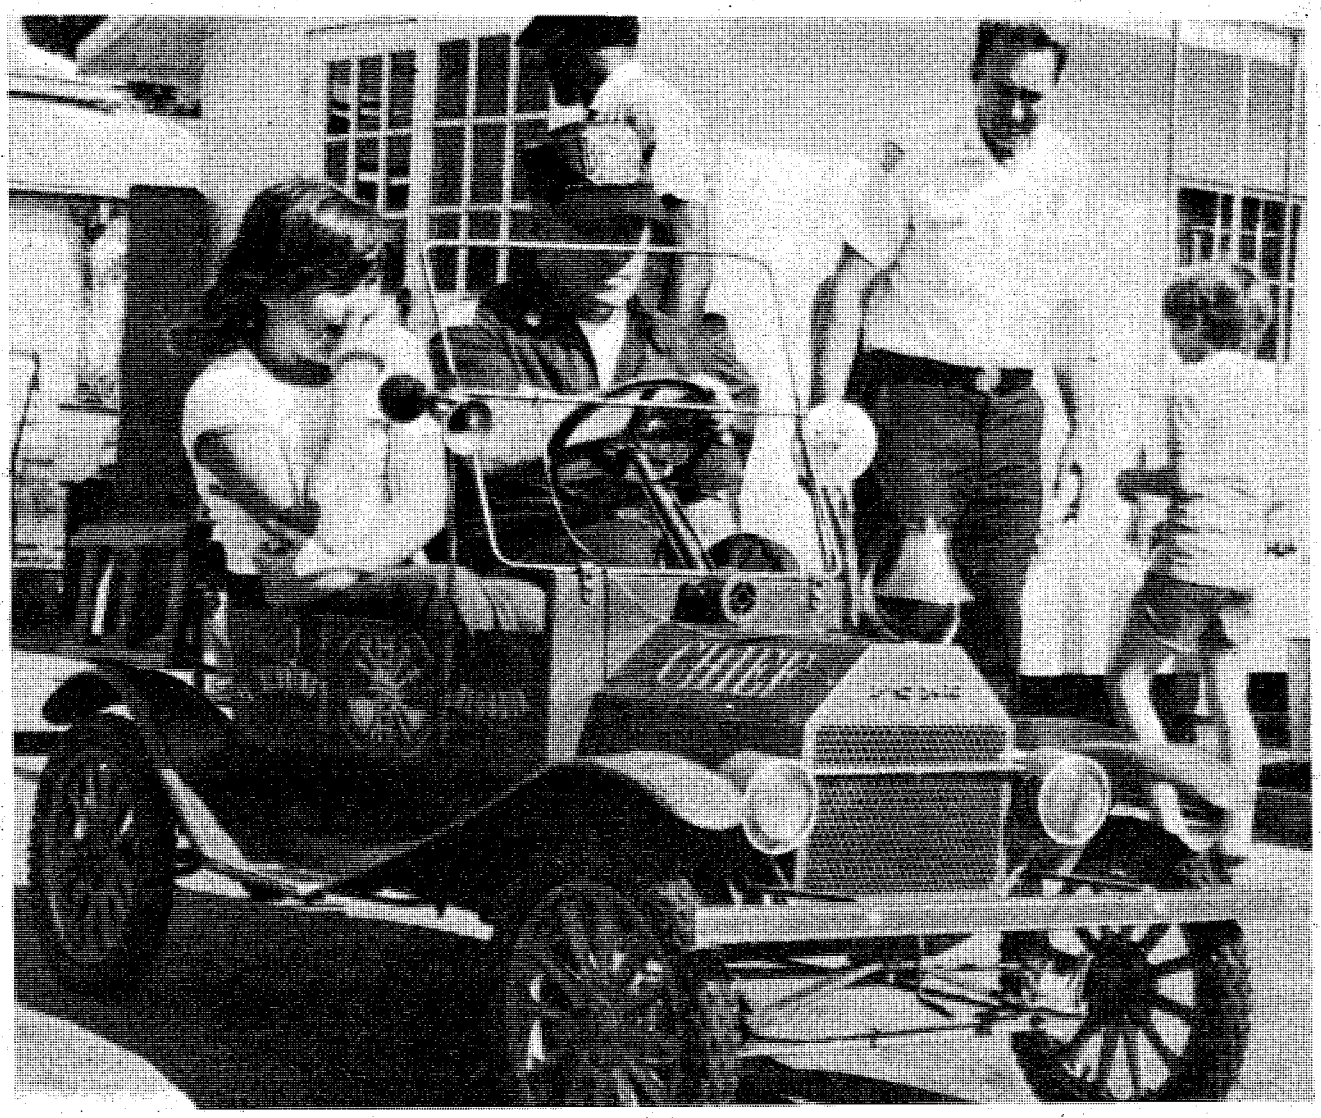
By Tom Sabel

Fort Benning's Fire Department took the chance to strut their stuff Friday, and strut they did. At a demonstration which signaled the end of Fire Prevention Week and showed off their new training area near Lawson Army Airfield they gave an impressive show of skills.

According to Chief Joseph C. Alford, this demonstration was to show that they could do much more than just put out house fires.

It began with a staged car crash with injured mannequins awaiting rescue from the smoke filled wreckage. Screaming sirens and flashing lights announced the arrival of first the MPs on the scene and then the fire engines and EMTs (Emergency Medical Technicians). As the MPs began to make their investigation the fire department went to work to put out the fire.



Kathy States, aged 10, gets a ride in Fire Chief Joseph C. Alford' miniature fire engine. Fireman Charlie Wilkes is the driver.

They discovered an injured person trapped inside one of the cars. Grabbing the power hacksaw, they cut off the door and took the injured mannequin to safety. The EMTs found that one of the mannequins needed immediate aid and called in a medivac helicopter to carry the victim off. In a cotton candy whirl of smoke and dust the chopper landed and carried the victim to safety. As part of their training, the firemen learn how to guide choppers to the landing site.

The next demonstration was a crashed airplane. The simulated downed airplane at the training field is made of welded oil drums in the rough shape of a plane. After being soaked in fuel oil, the plane was torched. Black clouds of smoke and orange flames leapt skyward. Flashing lights and sirens again heralded the arrival of the two brilliant lime green fire engines. The sparkling chrome gleamed in the sunlight as they raced past the reviewing stand. As they neared the burning wreckage a nozzle sprang from the roof of each of the fire engines. Like a scene from Star Wars, the turret mounted nozzle acted as if they had a life of their own, seeking their target. Suddenly, a dense foam showered from the mouth of each nozzle. In a matter of seconds, the burning plane was covered with a white foam, extinguishing the fire.

Firemen dressed in silver coveralls walked the field near the burning plane, making sure the fires were out.

The Columbus Fire Department showed off their ladder truck and its ability to hose down a many storied building. The ladder rose to the heighth of a four story building and then sent water streaming from a nozzle at the top of the ladder.

According to the chief of training with the Columbus Fire Department, Jack Nowell, Columbus and Fort Benning have a mutual aid agreement. They help each other with equipment one of the departments may not have or in the case of a fire too big for them to handle, he said.

"With this training area the well trained firefighters of Fort Benning will be even more well trained," said Alford.

Open house ends prevention week

By Tom Sabel

Fort Benning's Fire Department capped off Fire Prevention Week Saturday with an open house at Fire Station 1.

On display were the many different trucks and tools the firefighters use to stop all types of fires. Also included was a tour of the fire house and the chance for the children and adults to see how the firefighters live and work.

For the children the open house was particularly exciting. They had the chance to ride the fire department's antique fire engine, dress in the fireman's fire resistant clothes and ride the Fire Chief's miniature fire engine.

For the adults, there were tours of the firehouse, alarm house, a foam demonstration and information on how to prevent fires in the home.

According to Fire Chief Joseph C. Alford, "99 percent of the fires in the quarters are due to carelessness."

It is hoped that through Fire Prevention Week and through the different educational programs the fire department offers in the schools more fires will be prevented, said Alford.

The open house was very successful, said a Fire department spokesman. "We had been expecting 300 people to show up and 2,000 showed up," said the spokesman.

As the Army medivac helicopter arrives on the scene of the accident, firemen prepare to board the victim for the emergency flight to the hospital.

Annual flu shots: sign of winter

The cool air of winter arriving is an annual event, so are the annual flu shots. Yes, its that time again.

Military people are required to get the annual flu shot unless they have a medical waiver, said a MEDDAC spokesman. Civilian employees on post are urged to get the shot.

Those workers in what are considered to be essential service categories, such as firemen, maintenance workers, communications and electronic workers, key airfield people and hospital workers are especially urged to get the shot, added the spokesman. "This is in case there is a wide spread flu epidemic, these essential services will not have to be curtailed," said the spokesman.

Dependents over the age of 13 and retirees may also receive the shot.

While some concern has been shown over the side-effects of the vacination in the past years most of these have been eliminated, said the spokesman.

"The influenza vacine has been cleaned yp in the last few years. The number of mild side-effects such as a fever and a sore arm have been significantly reduced," explained the spokesman.

Pregnant women may get the shot since there is no evidence that the shot is harmful to the fetus. People who suffer from chronic heart, lung and kidney disease as well as diabetics and those over the age of 65 are also urged to get the shot. Getting the shot could prevent serious complications from the flu.

Hunting season on Fort Benning is here. Dove season and the archery deer season have been opened for a few weeks and the firearm deer season, squirrel, opossum, raccoon, bobcat and rabbit seasons will soon be opening on the Georgia or Alabama portions of the reservation. The dates and bag limits of each season are outlined in USAIC Circular 210-4.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

Hunting on Fort Benning will prove to be a rewarding experience for all hunters if safety rules and hunting regulations and laws are followed. Remember, hunting regulations and safety rules are designed to protect the hunter and assist in managing our wildlife resources.

Safety procedures that must be followed while hunting on Fort Benning are:

* Check the range clearance maps before going into a hunting area. Maps are located on the porch at the Provost Marshall's Office (Bldg. 215), Range Control (Bldg. 2611) and the Fish and Wildlife Office (Bldg. 5883).

* During firearm deer season, all hunters are required to wear an outer garment showing 500 square inches of international orange material above the waist.

* Loaded weapons of any kind will not be transported in vehicles.

* The possession or use of alcoholic beverages while hunting is prohibited.

Anyone planning to hunt on Fort Benning are reminded that they must have in their possession the appropriate state hunting licence, installation hunting permit, weapon registration card and a military identification card at all times.

To assist the regularly assigned Military Police Game Wardens in enforcing hunting regulations this year, 23 Deputy Game Wardens have been appointed by the Provost Marshall. Additionally, federally deputized Georgia and Alabama Game Wardens will be assisting the Military Police. The Deputy Game Wardens and State Game Wardens have the commander's full authority to enforce all hunting regulations on Fort Benning. This authority includes detaining; apprehending and issuing citations to hunting law violators and inspections of vehicles in connection with the enforcement of these hunting regulations.

With everyone's support we can make this a rewarding year for our sportmen and provide good hunting for the future. Everyone is encouraged to help in the wildlife enforcement program by reporting any violations observed to the Military Police.

Soldiers' battlefield survival depe

By W. Gessner
Special to the BAYONET

The ability of an infantry soldier depends largely on how well the soldier has been taught to survive on a battlefield. For the many thousands of young men who learn battle skills here, it is the instructors of the Infantry Training Group(ITG) who determine how successful the young men will be if they are asked to fight for their country.

Company A of the Infantry Training Group is responsible for much of this vital training that goes into making an American infantryman.

Company A is orgainized into six elements: the General Subjects Committee, the Individual Tactical Training Committee(ITT), the Squad Tactical Training Committee(STT), the Mechanized Infantry Committee, the Advanced Tactics Committee and the Headquarters Section.

2nd Lt. Mike McCullah is the chief of the General Subjects Committee and SFC Wildman is the chief instructor. Together, they supervise four sub-committees which provide basic information that soldiers need to know to survive on the battlefield.

Wildman says, "Our committees provide some of the most important training any soldier will ever receive. The information that they learn here is invaluable on the battlefield."

Although the General Subjects committees are classroom oriented, the new soldier receives plenty of hands-on training to reinforce the skills he has learned. The first aid instructors teach the soldier how to take care of himself and how avoid injuries and illnesses during his first few days at Fort Benning. Later they teach basic lifesaving and first aid. The nuclear, biological and chemical (NBC) sub-committee teaches the soldier how to protect him self from NBC hazards on the battlefield and how to recognize and eliminate chemical contamination of himself and his equipment.

The tactical communications sub-committee teaches the final word in the combat credo: shoot, move and communicate. The instructors teach the soldier how to place the PRC-77 radio and the field telephones into operation. Good communications are essential on the battlefield and every soldier must know how to use it effectively.

The land navigation instructors insure that the new soldier can identify terrain on a map and move cross-country from one point to another.

As much realism as possible

Hirome Fujio, Company A's commander, said, "Although the material presented by the General Subjects Committee is important, the heart and soul of Infantry One Station Unit Training(OSUT) is the tactical training that the infantry initial entry training(IET) soldier receives from the other four Company A committees. We belive we present that instruction so that there is as much realism as possible."

2nd Lt. Carl Cochran and SFC Rolland Miller are the force behind the ITT Committee. They are dedicated to providing the most effective and realistic training possible.

Miller says, "Whenever we teach tactics, we are teaching what these men are expected to find when they enlisted in the Army. It is imperative that we do a good job for several reasons. But most importantly, what we teach them here will save their lives on the battlefield."

At AO Black, the IET soldier learns camouflage, cover and concealment in the morning during period one. In the afternoon, period two begins with the low crawl, high crawl and rush.

ost effective combat unit; the infantry

In order to accomplish the training in the most effective way, they have organized the committee into seven periods of instruction given at seven locations. The committee goes to great lengths to promote combat realism on the ranges and training areas.

They create a realistic looking battlefield using smoke grenades, simulators and other pyrotechnics to simulate the noise and sights on the battlefield; and aggressors, where practical, to provide the illusion of fighting real people.

During period one at AO Yellow, the soldiers are given specific jobs within the squad and they remain in the same squad for the duration of their STT instruction. That first day they learn fire team and squad formations, reaction to indirect fire and fire and movement techniques.

Both periods two and three are taught at AO Green. Beginning at 11 a.m., the previous day's training is reinforced and movement to contact is taught. After the evening meal, the soldiers practice the same skills during hours of limited visibility.

At Malone 22 during period four, the soldiers learn how to conduct a deliberate attack using fire and movement and suppressive fire from an overwatch position. Then, two squads at a time, a live fire attack is made against an enemy position.

Squad defense developed

Periods five and six are devoted to the squad in the defense. At Mike 5, the fundamentals of interlocking fires, fields of fire, priorities of defense and reaction to indirect fire are taught. At Malone 18, the daytime live fire exercise is conducted against moving targets(Infantry Remote Target System). The defensive training ends in a night live fire exercise at Malone 26 with the aid of artificial illumination.

The last day of STT is the Infantry Squad Mission Course which is a series of ARTEP-type missions that test everything that has been taught during ITT and STT. It also measures the ability of an individ-

How About That?

By William Erbach
36th Engineer Group chaplain

I want to introduce you to a young man by the name of Hanson Gregory. Hanson lived about 125 years ago in New England. He lived along the seacoast, and each day he watched the ships go in and out of the harbor. Hanson wanted to be a seaman. That was one of the things that he hoped for.

Another thing that he hoped for was that he would not ever have to eat his mother's fried cakes for breakfast. Like most mothers, Hanson's mother believed that everyone should start the day with a good hot breakfast. Her feelings were hurt when Hanson refused to eat them. "I like your cooking, mama, but those cakes are so soggy in the middle. They lie in my stomach like bricks."

Now Hanson hadn't intended to hurt his mother's feelings, he just wanted to protect his stomach. How could he keep them both happy? Hanson like the edges of the cakes. They were light and delicious. He thought about it and then he had an idea. The next time his family had fried cakes for breakfast Hanson was allowed to cook them. That was his request. He took some of the unfried cakes and cut the middles out of them and cooked them as his mother did before. The unused centers he kneaded together and repeated the process. And the idea worked. The soggy centers were no more, and the outer rings of cake were delicious. Hanson didn't know it then, but he had invented the doughnut. How about that.

Before a person can have anything he must first have a clear picture of it in his mind. And then he must have faith in himself and the object to make the impossible become the possible. And then he must work at it to make it happen. Alexander Bell hoped for an instrument that would enable people to talk to each other when they were apart. His dream, his faith, and his work made it happen.

WIC program helps needy

Supplemental food available for certain cases

Supplemental foods to combat nutritional risk are being provided to certain publics by the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The program is called Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

WIC provides supplements to infants, children and pregnant or breast-feeding women who are individually determined to be at nutritional risk level. The determination is made by physicians, nutritionists and nurses.

The program provides foods that are good sources of nutrients that this special group does not get in their diets. Nutrients include iron, calcium, Vitamins C and A and protein. The foods include milk or cheese, eggs, iron fortified cereal and juices high in Vitamin C. For infants up to a year old the foods are iron fortified infant formula abd cereal and infant juice.

To be eligible for WIC, you must live in an approved program area. You must be pregnant or breastfeeding an infant up to one year of age, or be a child up to five years of age. The family income can not exceed 195 percent of the poverty guidelines.

Finally, you must be certified as being at nutritional risk. The amount of money available determines the number of participants for a program. If you are certified, you receive vouchers that are redeemable for prescribed foods at approved grocery stores. The vouchers are good for a limited time and list exact foods and the quantities to be issued.

Certification is required every six months except for pregnant women whose certification is valid until six weeks after delivery.

The program applied across the country. Community Health nurses at installations are aware of the program and handle the identification and referral of eligible dependents.

CFC's collected one-third of goal

Fort Benning is almost one-third of the way to their goal of $325,000 with more than two months left for contributing to the Combined Federal Campaign(CFC).

CFC chief project officer Norm Williamson said, "As of Oct. 15 the CFC total was $97,180, which is 30 percent of our goal this year. All project officers are urged to make turn-ins on a regular basis."

Williamson want on to add,"Project officers should insure that everyone on post is afforded an opportunity to contribute to CFC." Among the many benefiting parties of CFC, is Fort Benning Youth Activities and companies have money put back into their operations after the campaign.

Gators bit by Doughboys

By Tim Boivin

The Fort Benning Doughboys celebrated the return of wide receiver Freddie Suggs and the return to form of quarterback Leamon Hall by defeating the University of Florida junior varsity Gators 48-26 Sunday in sun-soaked Doughboy Stadium.

Suggs caught two touchdown passes and Clennie Brundidge caught three from Hall, who connected on 24 out of 39 for 340 yards. Hall also ran for two touchdowns in the game.

The Doughboy running game balanced the passing of Hall as Christian Lamar led the charge with 157 yards in 31 carries. Lamar had 109 yards in the first half on 15 carries.

Hall hit Suggs in the right corner of the end zone with 10:25 left in the first quarter to give the Doughboys an early 6-0 lead. Andre Tyler missed the extra point.

Florida came right back on their next possesion, driving 77 yards in seven plays and scoring on a pass from Dale Dorminey to wide receiver Broughton Lang. Conversion holder Rusty Moore fumbled the snap from center and the score remained tied.

The Doughboys couldn't do anything on their next possesion and when Thomas Hagan's punt was blocked, Florida went in to score two plays later on Dorminey's quarterback sneak. Florida went for two points but Doughboy defensive back Larry Conner broke up a pass from Dorminey to Jim Gainey to foil the attempt.

The Doughboys took over on their own 23 after the kickoff and sandwiched a 37 yard pass to Suggs between two rushes by Lamar and two by Hall to get the ball to the Gator 13 before the quarter ran out. When play resumed, two carries by Lamar got the ball to the Floriday one and Hall snuck in for the touchdown. After Tyler's extra point, the Doughboys had the first seven points of an awesome 27 point second quarter.

Florida's Steve Diego cut in front of the Doughboy's Larry Anderson for an interception in the third quarter.

Fred Suggs pulls a reception as the Gator's Steve Diego (19) makes the hit. Joe McTague comes over to help Diego out.

Florida took over and Doughboy defensive back Howard Hunter intercepted a Dorminey pass at the doughboy 18. The Doughboys rambled 72 yards in eight plays, the final one a 32 yard touchdown strike from Hall to Brundidge down the right sideline for a 19-12 lead. The extra point was blocked.

Florida's Lang took the Doughboy kickoff and raced 67 yards down the right sideline to the Doughboy 30 to give the Gators good field position. The Doughboy defense let the Gators a first and goal at the three before turning tough as nails. Running back Shannon Burch gained two yards, a sneak by Dorminey didn't gain anything and an illegal procedure penalty put the Gators back to the six.

On the next play Dorminey dropped back to pass but couldn't find anyone open. He scrambled to the right and looked like he was going to go in for the score. Doughboy linebacker Donald Brown saved the touchdown by wrestling Dorminey out at the two. On the fourth down play, a pass from Dorminey to Lang in the end zone was dropped.

In what may have been the turning point in the game, the Doughboy offense took the field after the fine defensive stand and drove 98 yards for a score. Hall hit Brundidge from 17 yards out as Clennie was falling down in the end zone for the score. Tyler came in and his extra point barely wobbled over the crossbar before hitting the referee in the head for a 26-12 lead.

The Doughboy defense wasn't through making things happening yet as Fred Wilkens intercepted yet another Dorminey pass and returned it 12 yards to the Gator 48. Hall hit Larry Anderson for 10 yards and then connected with Suggs at the right side of the goal line. Tyler's extra point made the halftime score 33-12.

In the third quarter, the Doughboys wer deep in their own territory when Lamar wa trapped in the end zone by Calvin Johnston fo a safety. After the Doughboy punt, Florida drove yards in seven plays, most of them coming on trap by Burch. The score came after the new Gato quarterback, Roger Sibbald, faked another trap t Burch and hit tight end Larry Keefe over th middle. Greg Riski's conversion made the scor 33-21 with 6:29 left in the third quarter.

The Doughboys went to the air on their nex possesion. First Hall hit Brundidge for 17 yards, the Freddie Suggs broke two tackles on a reception fo 27 more and Brundidge reached behind him to hau in a 19 yard gainer. Hall hit Brundidge in the righ corner of the end zone over his left shoulder for th score that gave the Doughboys a 39-21 lead.

Florida had a first and 10 on the Doughboy 2 but the Doughboy defense once again flexe their muscles. On the first down play, defen sive back Alfred Crenshaw literally yanked the ball out of the hands of Scott Waggoner. The next three passes fell incomplete and the Doughboy offense took the field.

The offense couldn't get anything going and when Reginald Terry dropped back to punt, he was swarmed by Gators. The punt was blocked and Florida's Zach Hellstrom recovered for the touchdown. After the conversion, Florida had pulled within 11, 39-28.

The final Doughboy score came after Sib bald fumbled when he was hit by Doughboy defensive end Ronnie Brawner. Defensive tackle Eddie Adams recovered the fumble and two plays later, Hall faked a handoff to Lamar going righ with the flow of the play. The Gator defense was completely fooled as Hall strutted around left end behind the only two blockers who didn't go to the left. Terry's extra point made the final score 46-28.

Fred Suggs (26) pulls in a pass (circle) from Leamon Hall in Sunday's game against the Florida Gators. Teammate Julian Harden looks back at Suggs as Gator's John Landry (91) and Joe McTague (62) head in for the tackle.

Bulldogs record 1-1

Doughboys set for Citadel

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's Doughboys, coming off of their most impressive game of the season last weekend, face the Citadel junior varsity tomorrow at 2 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium. Citadel is 1-1 this season and features a running attack that rushes about 60 percent of the time.

The Doughboys were hurt last week by a trap play that Florida ran effectively against them. Although the Gators didn't score any touchdowns off the trap, the Doughboys were lulled into preventing the trap on the scoring pass to Gator tight end Larry Keefe late in the game.

The offense can't ask for much improvement over last week's 540-yard total offense game. The defense made things happen despite the 28 points scored on them and set up three scoring plays, two on interceptions and one on a fumble recovery.

The defensive stands in the second and third quarter, despite the fine performance of the Doughboy offense, may have been what kept momentum on the Doughboy's side throughout the game. When Florida looked like they were ready to take control of the game, the defense came to the rescue. After the second half began, the Doughboys looked like they were content to run out the clock. Florida had other ideas, and if not for some fine defensive stands, may have even won the game.

The only real problem the Doughboys had last week, as they have in the past, is their specialty teams. The Doughboys punts were either rushed or blocked, the extra points the same way and they had a punt returned 67 yards against them. It's one of those things where the old adage "practice makes perfect" really is needed.

Overall, last week's game with the Gators could prove to be the turning point on the Doughboy's season if they play together as one unit, instead of a defense, an offense, and specialty teams. Against the Gators, the Doughboy offense was thankful for the defense's self-made opportunities and everything seemed to jell together. The return of wide receiver Freddie Suggs provided a much needed lift at a critical point in the Doughboy's season.

The game begins at 2 p.m. in Doughboy Stadium. Tickets are $1 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Armchair Sports

To the hunt

By Tim Boivin

Once in a while a sport's writer needs help on topics he has little knowledge about. So it is this week for your Armchair Sports jockey with the topic of hunting. Helping out is Lyle Brown of the Fish and Wildlife Advisory Council(FWAC).

Lyle explained, "About two years ago a group of concerned service employees from all branches here met to start a rod and gun club. Because of financial problems, it wasn't feasible. Instead, we formed the council with members from every unit on post."

Improvements made

Some of the projects that have grown out of the FWAC to improve hunting included establishing a field dog trial area, placing 100 wood duck nesting boxes out with planning for 200 more and building horse stalls, dog kennels and feed strips. Planning is underway to hold a dog trial in December.

Lyle added, "They have also been instrumental in enabling members of Fort Benning to purchase state and post permits seven days a week instead of the previous five. They can be purchased at Morale Support Activities Division(MSAD) in Crain Hall(Bldg. 229) from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. They can be purchased at Uchee Creek Recreation Center on Fridays from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m."

FWAC also helped revise USAIC Circular 210-4 dated Sept. 1. They are opening Porter Range tomorrow for anyone to check their shotgun prior to the opening of deer season. The range will be open from 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. and is located at the intersection of 1st and 8th Division Roads.

Lyle concluded, "We would like to have at least one unit representative from each battalion size unit and seperate unit. The FWAC meets every third Thursday of each month at 11:30 a.m. in Room 647, Infantry Hall(Bldg. 4). Anyone interested in being a representative from their unit should call me at 545-7387/5649.

Soldiers deputized

In a related item, the Fish and Game Enforcement Offices of the Fort Benning Provost Marshall's Office and the Georgia State Department of Natural Resources have combined efforts to concentrate on hunting violations on Fort Benning and the surrounding community. Persons who have information concerning illegal hunting can contact Fort Benning's office at 545-1308/5222 or Georgia's office at 404-846-8448.

Incidentally, soldiers on post have been deputized Military Police Game Wardens. The present Deputy Game warden I.D. Cards have an orange border around them but MP wardens will have a blue border around their I.D. Card. If you are very unlucky and caught illegally hunting by someone who looks familiar, you'll probably think twice before you ever do it again. Major General David E. Grange Jr. is one of those who has been deputized.

TKD school open

With the return of boxing to Fort Benning, sport's fans also get the chance to see martial art's demonstrations during the intermissions of the smokers. The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do (TKD) club has been giving TKD exhibitions during intermission at the smokers and even travelled to Fort Stewart recently with the boxing team for matches there.

The TKD club works out at Kimbro Gym on Sand Hill. The school is Black Dragon and the style taught is Chinese Goju.

Sensei McCall, the bald TKD black belt, some sport's fans might remember from the smoker, is the instructor of the school. McCall teaches classes every Tuesday and Thursday night in the gym from 7-9 p.m. McCall has a fourth degree blackbelt and is working toward even higher achievements in the Korean martial art.

The school costs $10 a month per person to attend but there are special children's and family rates. TKD students under 18 are charged $6, while thefamily rates are $10 for the first member and half price for each additional member.

When the club went to Fort Stewart, Regina Faust, a yellow belt, placed first in her division. Victor Anderson, a white belt, also came back with a first. The other two members of the team who took firsts were white belt Kenneth Roberts and black belt Ray Mathis.

Depth finder spot fish

Black box aids angler

By Jim Porter

Probably the greatest fishing aid to be developed in the past 20 years is the electronic depth finder. With one of these "black boxes" you can have a set of underwater eyes which will show you the shape of the bottom terrain and, if they're large enough, you can even spot fish.

The modern fishing depth finder is actually a sonar device, using a transmitted sound wave to determine depth. Using the known speed of sound in water and by measuring the time it takes the transmitted sound wave to make its way to the lake bottom and back, the depth finder can present a visible readout as to water depth.

Most depth finders on the market today will do the job intended. However, there are some factors to consider:

- A highspeed depth finder is most desirable whether you plan to operate it in a high speed boat or not. It has a stronger transmitted signal, a more sensitive "read" capability of the return signal and a much better resolution of the visible readout.
- It should be a 12 volt D.C. device so it will be compatible with the electrical system in a boat. There are not many six volt depth finders on the market, but you should avoid them from the standpoint of versatility.
- Be sure it's a good brand name. Off-brand products are often undependable and parts are difficult to find. Carl Lawrance is generally credited with marketing the first depth finder specifically for the weekend fisherman and his product is considered by most to be the standard with which to compare the others.
- The case or housing of the depth finder should appear watertight. None are 100 percent moisture-proof, but the more-so the better. You can complete the seal on yours with plastic tape or a plastic base caulking compound. Whether it has a plastic or metal case is not important, although the plastic cover will generally stay cooler.

As fas as how to read a depth finder and how to install it, the instruction booklet is our best guide. Practice will steadily improve your ability to interpret what the machine is telling you.

Finally, remember that the depth finder is only an aid. Unless it is used properly, you may as well leave it on the store shelf. Your first step is to get a contour map of your lake so that you can generally locate the movement routes and feeding areas for fish. Then you can use the depth finder to pinpoint these locations.

Invention necessary

Light warms fingers

By Jim Porter

Necessity, being the Mother of Invention, spawned the idea of a dependable, portable, cheap source of heat to maintain my old fingers at least thawed enough to grasp the reel handle.

Simply get yourself a mechanic drop light(also called a trouble light) and cut the electrical plug off the end. Replace that plug with either a small pair of alligator clips or a plug which will fit the electrical receptacle on your boat.

Next, paddle your big wheel down to the neighborhood hardware store and get a 12 volt, 50 to 100 watt, light bulb. Tell old Sam what you want it to fit and you'll find that there is a 12 volt bulb made whick looks precisely like the normal 110 volt model in your living room lamp.

The next time you're out there chasing them leaping lunkers and your pinkies get frosty, simply fire that old light bulb up and get some feelings. The shield which protects the bulb is just exactly right to keep from burning your hands or clothing.

An additional benefit is that, after your hands are fixed up, you can put the darned thing up your jacket and it will keep your entire upper body warm.

Cheerleaders come long way

By Becky Bulgrin

"We've come a long way, baby!"

That's what Doughboy cheerleader Jeannie Gibson had to say about the squad's progress since they started practice in September. "Since we all have our own opinion about the cheers and the way we do things, we know that we have to stick together. We give it all we've got no matter how tired we are, even after a 12-mile road march," she explained.

The squad has been practicing five days a week for three hours at a time, and it's all on their own time. The soldiers on the squad must work their regular eight-hour job along with pulling their share of the load when it comes to company duty and the like.

"As soldiers, duty comes first," said Gibson, who is a clerical worker at the headquarters, 67th Maintenance Battalion. "We don't get special privileges because we're cheerleaders. If duty calls, we just miss practice or a game if one is scheduled."

The squad has gone through a few changes since they started out, but was organized and ready for the first game, according to squad captain Vera Jackson. They lost one cheerleader and acquired a new one. The squad also added two little girls as mascots and gained Melody Williams, who gives the cheerleaders a lot of support since they lost their coach. "Melody comes to all the practices and games," said Gibson. "She really keeps us going with her spirit and builds up our morale."

All the cheerleaders have had previous experience and they take turns teaching each other cheers to perform at the games.

The Doughboy cheerleaders are Vera Jackson, captain, Jeannie Gibson, co-captain, Leslie Shaw, Denise Nesbitt, Kim Smith, Darrell Spearman, Tony Phillips, Cindy Moorhead, and Lisa Cole. The mascots are Amanda and Heather Williams.

Flag football record now 5-1

USAIB wins defensive struggle

The United States Army Infantry Board (USAIB) defeated Company A, Headquarters Command in what was a closer flag football game than the 14-0 score showed.

The 35 minute defensive struggle ended when USAIB turned two crucial end-zone interceptions into touchdowns in the last five minutes of the game.

Chancey Brown, quarterback for Company A, started to click with his team late in the first, but USAIB's defense managed to maintain its momentum and shut down their opponents forcing the game to a 0-0 halftime score.

USAIB started off the second half with a 60-yard touchdown pass which was called back on a forward motion penalty. Defense again proved to be the winning force in the game as Company A blocked a fourth down punt by USAIB on their own 20-yard line.

While trying to capitalize on the blocked punt, Company A threw away the ball on a first and goal to go, setting up a 60-yard drive by USAIB.

USAIB quarterback Ralph Milliken threw to Theodore Demp from the five-yard line to put the first score on the board. Company A managed to thwart the point after attempt, leaving the score at 6-0.

Following the kick-off, Company A managed to drive deep into USAIB territory, but was again shut down by an end-zone interception by USAIB's Tyrone Farley.

USAIB scored again on a 40-yard pass from Milliken to James Foster with less than a minute left in the game. Larry Riley sealed the victory with his extra point reception, ending the game 14-0.

USAIB's record is now 5-1 and Company A's is 4-2.

ual to function as a member of a squad or fire team.

The Advanced Tactics Committee's chief instructor is SFC Richard Dixon. He supervises four sub committees.

The Opposing Forces sub-committee travels to each ITB company to explain the similarities and differences between Warsaw Pact nations and U.S. Forces.

The Civil Disturbance Training sub-committee provides instruction regarding the role of the U.S. soldier during times of national need such as the large-scale rioting in Miami this year.

The Patrolling sub-committee has the mission of providing the infantry IET soldier tactical training in various patrolling techniques. The men conduct rehearsals, go on reconnaissance missions and execute ambushes.

The training at Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain(MOUT) teaches the soldier how to attack and defend towns and buildings. The instructors insure that each man understands the differences between combat in the cities and combat in the countryside.

Company A's Headquarter's section has an operations office in addition to the company commander, executive officer, 1st sergeant, driver and supply office. The operations people are responsible for coordinating the hundreds of hours of training provided to more than 2,500 infantry IET soldiers each day as well as the scheduling of road marches, mandatory subjects and SQT classes.

Company A, U.S. Army Infantry Training Group, is responsible for approximately 30 percent of the training given to the IET soldier as he undergoes OSUT here. Although the company is operating with only 57 percent of their authorized 383 soldiers, it still provides outstanding training in the various military subjects that help produce the finest infantrymen in the world.

Units stay together

By Brian Adams

Teamwork, discipline and morale are important factors in the operation of an infantry unit. The loneliness of arriving at a new duty station can have devastating effects upon these three qualities of a unit.

Cohesive Unit Program (CUP) is a new concept being tested by the lst Infantry Training Brigade and the Army to develop these traits in the new infantry soldiers. It will also alleviate the problem of arriving at a new duty station with a feeling of loneliness.

"Although it was in the planning stages at the Department of the Army level for some time, it was not undertaken by the lst Infantry Training Brigade until mid-July, when they initiated the program as part of 'Operation Surge'," explained SFC James Wadsworth, assistant NCOIC of the S-3 shop.

The concept itself is simple. Those soldiers going to the same unit upon completion of training are placed into the same training company and, in most cases, the same platoon. This creates a bond between the men which can be carried forward to their permanent party unit.

Wadsworth explained, "This doesn't mean because we put them into the same platoon that everyone in that particular unit is going to make it through the training 100%. There are still the washouts and recycles as in any training unit cycle."

The first step to establishing a Cohesive Unit begins at the Reception Station. Here the soldiers enlistment contracts are screened for Station/Unit of choice. Those soldiers that have the same type of contracts are placed into the same training company. When the company reaches its full capacity(240 men), the unit is then sent forward to Fort Benning to begin their training.

Phase 2 of the program begins when the soldiers reach the Initial Receiving Point at Fort Benning.

SFC James R. Delemater, NCOIC of the IRP, commented, "At this point, the new training company is broken down into platoons. The CUP soldiers are placed into one platoon and those soldiers that are going to different units make up the other three platoons."

Delemater explained, "For example, the average strength of a training company is 240 men. If 60 of these new soldiers are going to the 5th Infantry

Energy Week stresses savings

Oct. 26 — 31 has been declared Energy Conservation Week here. Energy is a vital concern of all Americans, both military and civilian. This week the BAYONET asked post personnel if they had observed anything here that could be changed to conserve energy. See their suggestions in the Glad You Asked column on page 2. Other ways to save energy are highlighted on page 4.

CFC reaches half-way point

CFC contributions as of Wednesday totaled $190,000 or 58 percent $325,000 goal. Campaign officials report that the total to date has been given by about 25 percent of personnel eligible to contribute. Commanders, supervisors, project officers, and key persons should insure all personnel are given the opportunity to contribute to CFC, say a CFC official.

Set clocks back

"Spring forward, fall backward," goes the time change saying. Yes, it's that time again when we have to change the clocks back an hour. The official time change is 2 a.m. Sunday when this part of the country returns to Eastern Daylight Savings Time.

Prices reduced

Prices have been reduced on 65 items in the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stores recently to save customers even more money, according to Maj. Gen. Duane H. Stubbs, AAFES commander.

The reductions were made in keeping with the AAFES policy of maintaining prices at least 20 percent below commercial retailers overall.

Some of the items reduced include household appliances, watches, health and beauty aids, sporting equipment, electronic toys, calculators and typewriters.

Uniform changes

Within the next two years, the Army plans to begin replacing the current winter and summer weight green uniforms with men's and women's green uniforms that can be worn year round. The fabric of the year round uniform will be a blend of 55 percent polyester and 45 percent wool.

The Army has also approved the use of a zip-in liner for the black windbreaker and heavier, part wool, gray-green shirt as optional purchase items. Both items are expected to be available early next year. (Story courtesy of DA Scene.)

In the morning and afternoon when soldiers are on road marches, motorists have to slow down. You can't pass them and have to cut your speed down to 10 mph. I would change the road marches to be done during normal working hours.

The use of military vehicles and fuel could be cut down some. Combine all your trips together. Some people are making two to three distribution runs when they could instead just make one trip at the beginning or the end of the day.

The lights in the offices between the hours of 10 a.m.-2 p.m., could be turned off when its a bright day.

Every other street light should be turned off, especially on Dixie Road. The rest of the lights could be turned off electronically after daybreak.

The use of military vehicles should be consolidated on runs. Instead of 15 vehicles going out, all they need to take is one. It can be done. You'd be surprised how much you can cut back and still feel comfortable.

The Girl Scout Hut in the Lavoie Manor housing area has its fire lights and its inside light left on 24-hours-a- day. I can't see why these lights couldn't be turned off during daylight hours.

When games are played on the athletic fields someone should be designated to turn the lights off after they are finished. You can see the lights on at 5 a.m. in the morning, when coming to work. I feel they could save a lot of money and energy.

Also, the lights on the outside of the barracks are left on 24-hours-a-day. An automatic timer is needed to turn the lights off at daybreak.

Lack of participation disappoints TSB donor

By Fredi Hale
Special to the BAYONET

Only 37 units of blood were available to personnel here Wednesday.

I know because I visited was here. I walked into Martin Army Community Hospital, a little scared at giving up a pint of my blood. The rest of a group and I from The School Brigade were met by a laboratory technician.

"We are here to give blood."

At that time we were led into a room where the procedure for donating blood was explained. After some preliminary tests and questionaires, we gave our much needed blood. For our participation in the blood donation program we were given a tour of the blood bank and sure enough there were only 37 plastic containers of blood in the refrigeration unit.

Thirty-seven units! I couldn't beleive that there were only 37 units. The personnel here , including active, retired, dependents and civilians, are in excess of 92,000 people. Someone is not helping out!

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage all of you to participate in this vital and worthwhile program. One day you may be in need of the services that it provides.

I breathed a sigh of relief when it was all over and now I have eight more weeks to work up my courage for the next trip and it will be a trip I'll take. I hope I can get some of you all to come out too. The Blood Bank takes donations Tuesday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. Telephone 544-2221, 2780 or 2376 for more information.

Benning impresses Chinese

Story and photos by Brian Adams

Slowly the five vehicles approached Lee Drop Zone, the flashing blue lights of the Military Police escort vehicle indicating that another V.I.P. visit was about to take place.

The officers there to greet the visiting dignitaries hustled about preparing for the visitors, as an air of excitement and tension made its way about the training site.

With awe and curiosity the young American soldiers watched as the visitors stepped lightly from the bus only looking around to return the salutes rendered to them.

It wasn't the visit that caused this much commotion at the TOW/Dragon site, Monday, for V.I.P. visits are a common happening, rather it was the visitors themselves. A delegation of military educators from the Peoples Republic of China. The delegation is touring post as part of an agreed exchange program set up in May by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and the Chinese Vice Premier Geng Biao.

Minister Xiao Ke, People's Republic of China, takes a few practice shots on the weaponeer training system.

"The United States and the People's Republic of China are friends, commented Minister Xiao Ke, leader of the 25-man delegation, "the purpose of this visit is to continue to further this friendship." After enjoying an excellent meal at the range, the members of the delegation sought out the young American recruits and asked them questions about their background, their training and their ideas about their army.

It turned out that the Chinese were just as curious about the soldiers as the soldiers were about them.

From the TOW/Dragon range the dignitaries were taken to the assault course and the grenade range, where the same formalities and briefings were conducted. "The soldiers we saw today and I, are in the same business, and I was very impressed by them and the training that was shown to us today," explained Xiao.

"Another thing that I noticed is the great abundance of trees and forests here, this impressed me very much. It showed me an ecological balance between the military and country in which they live. This is a good thing," Xiao said.

The visitors also saw a "Rangers-in Action" and an Airborne 5,000 demonstration earlier that morning.

The delegation left Tuesday morning from Lawson Army Airfield for the next stop on their tour of the United States. The delegation enjoyed a party at the Officers Club Monday night prior to their departure.

Division, we take and make one platoon of these. Now, if there were more than sixty or less than sixty what we would do is make one complete platoon (if possible) and fill the other with people going anywhere."

Phase 3 of the program begins when the soldiers arrive at their new unit and are performing their mission.

Wadsworth explained, "To determine whether or not the program is going to succeed we have to queery the receiving unit after the soldiers have been there for some time. This isn't possible yet because the first CUP unit just graduated from training recently and most of the people have gone home on leave. There were 160 men in the company going to the 5th Infantry Division at Fort Polk, La."

Wadsworth said, "The 5th did send some field representatives to Fort Benning to take a look at what they were receiving as far as soldiers went. They also spent some time talking to the soldiers to determine their attitudes toward their training and their future unit. The representatives brought along patches and welcome packets to familiarize the soldiers with the 5th division and its surrounding community."

Conservation of energy can be a money saver

Energy. The stuff that makes cars run, lights glow, houses warm and meals cooked is in short supply. With winter coming on, energy consumption will tend to rise. There are many things which can be done to lower the amount of energy used. This will also lower utility bills.

Windows and doors are often the biggest wasters of energy in the home. Poor fitting doors and windows can waste up to one-third of the heating bills. Energy is lost through air leaks around the frames or through heat conduction. Heat conduction is when the heated inside air travels through the window. Glass is not a good insulator against heat conduction because heat travels easily through it.

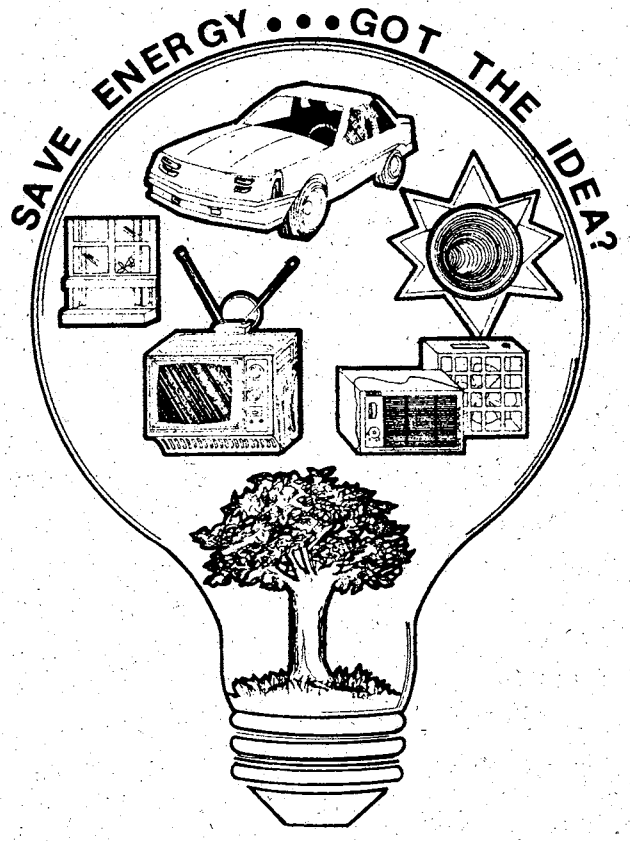
Air cracks around doors and windows can be sealed with weather-stripping and caulking. Other places which often have air leaks are around pipes and ducts. These also need to be caulked and weather-stripped.

Loss of heat through windows can be slowed by replacing the old, single paned windows with double or triple paned windows. These windows have a hermetically sealed dead air space between the panes.

Simply setting thermostates at 65 degrees during the winter will also save energy. When sleeping or while away the thermostate can be set even lower. Clock regulated thermostates are on the market which will automatically change the settings.

Attic insulation is another good way of conserving energy. An uninsulated attic is a tremendous energy waster. At least eight inches of insulation is recommended for attics.

Water heaters also use a great deal of energy which can easily be reduced. Lower thermostate settings, wrap insulation around the tank and install water flow constrictors in showers and faucets. These will all cut down on the amount of energy used.



When buying new applicances, look for a bright yellow and black "Energy Guide" label. These labels are beginning to appear on freezers, dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers and other major appliances using large amounts of energy.

The labels show the estimated annual energy cost or energy efficiency of the appliance in comparison with similar products. The labels are easy to understand. A big, black number beneath the "Energy Guide" arrow gives the energy cost or energy efficiency rating of the product. The smaller numbers on either side of this figure give the highest and lowest ratings for similar products.

Caulking helps save energy

When people think of caulking and weather-stripping they generally think of windows and doors.

However, most energy studies find that only 20 percent of that costly air infiltration comes through these places.

The other 80 percent gets in underneath the baseboards, through wall outlets, through holes where plumbing pipes and telephone wires enter the house, through holes around exhaust fans, around dryer vents and around sink and bathtub drain pipes as they exit the house.

These places are easy to plug up.All you need is a couple of tubes of inexpensive caulking and a bought or borrowed caulking gun.

Follow the instructions on the caulking tube and after the caulking is in place around the hole, use a small plaster knife or a piece of stiff cardboard to smooth it out.

For holes too large to caulk, use some of the left over insulation to poke in the hole.

The electrical outlets - both the switches and the wall outlets - can be sealed with inexpensive gaskets that can be purchased at most hardware stores.

Turn off the electrical current at the fuse box before working on any outlet.

With a small screwdriver, remove the plastic or metal cover plates, insert the gaskets, re-attach the plates and turn the current back on.

Then, on the next windy day, take a candle around to each outlet to make sure that the closure is complete.

With a ladder and a flashlight, make an inspection of the heating and air-conditioning ducts around the house. If there is space around the ducting where it passes through a wall, take some of the leftover insulation and stuff it in the hole.

Where they pass through unfinished attics or basements, they should be covered with insulation. If there is not enough left, invest a few more bucks in another roll and do the job right, making certain that all seams are taped.

This one-day task alone will save you up to $100 a year in heating costs and an estimated $35 a year in air-conditioning costs.

Computer will monitor use

Local energy conservation efforts, according to James D. Willis, chief of the energy branch, include, among other things, the Department of Defense wide energy conservation investment program (ECIP) and a sophisticated computer system which will monitor and control nearly all the large energy users on post such as boiler plants, water heaters and air conditioners.

ECIP calls for more investment toward energy conservation, according to Willis. "Installing storm windows, storm doors, adding caulking, weather stripping and automatic thermostats are just some of the ways we are working to conserve energy," added Willis.

"Already in the 2800 block we have removed the large bay windows and installed window units that consist of double paned windows and large insulated areas," added Willis.

The computer, considered to be the most sophisticated to date, will monitor and control the level of energy consuption and shut down non-critical areas when the level gets too high.

While the computer was supposed to be here last March, part of it will be here by December and the other part will be here and working next summer, explained Willis.

The 11.7 percent pay raise may not be the only extra money you will receive at the end of this month; a new allowance may be included in your pay.

A Monthly Variable Housing Allowance (VHA) will be paid for the first time in October. The VHA is authorized for the purpose of assisting members entitled to a basic allowance for quarters (BAQ) to defray housing costs.

Bank improves service

The National Bank of Fort Benning has recently installed the most up-to-date on-line teller equipment available, according to their vice president of accounting, Jim Gunby.

The equipment connects each teller window directly with the bank's central computer, providing each teller and customer service representative with up-to-the-minute customer account information.

All deposits and other transactions occuring on an account during each business day are immediately recorded, preventing many of the inconveniences often associated with transaction processing time, according to Gunby.

"This enables the tellers to give our customers faster service," he said. "With the new equipment, the tellers don't have to leave their window as often; the information is right there."

The bank currently has 21 teller units in its main office (located on Wold Ave) and two branch offices (one in the Main Mall and one in Cusseta).

There are also terminal display units in various locations throughout the bank to enable bank officers, customer service representatives, and other non-teller personnel to provide customers with requested information, such as amount of balance, recent checks paid, etc.

Insurance

Who's the rightful heir?

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--Do you know who would receive your servicemen's group life insurance (SGLI) should you die? If not, your $20,000 policy could end up in the wrong hands, warned adjutant general officials.

Soldiers insured under SGLI can either name a beneficiary or write the words "by law" on their insurance forms. When listing a beneficiary, the soldier may select anyone. The person may or may not be a relative.

By writing "by law" on the form, however, the soldier wills his or her SGLE to a closest relative in this order: spouse, children, then parents. If none of these relatives survives the soldier, the SGLI money goes automatically into the soldier's estate to pay off any existing bills.

"FIGHT INFLATION. DRINK BEER."

"The economic experts have told us the way to beat this inflation thing is by using less oil. That might work.

"But I have a plan that'll work better.

"It isn't based on saving oil. It's based on drinking beer. I mean Red, White and Blue beer, of course.

"Some people don't understand this at first, but when you drink Red, White and Blue, you're not just drinking a good-tasting, naturally-brewed beer. You're also revitalizing our economy. Because you're saving money with every six-pack. And, as everyone knows, saving money is what fighting inflation is all about.

"While getting Americans to save oil has been difficult, getting Americans to drink beer should be easier.

"If we all pitch in and drink Red, White and Blue, everyone in America could save three or four hundred dollars a year. At that rate, we'll have this country back on its feet in no time!

"So, when you get to worrying about economic conditions, don't just sit there. Do your part! Open a Red, White and Blue. Open lots of them! It's the only inflation-fighting plan this country needs: An honest beer. At an honest price."

Hypothermia lurks in winter's cold

Old man winter will soon be pounding on Fort Benning's door. When he decends into the valley, be prepared to dress for his annual visit because the exposure to cold air and water can be fatal unless you are prepared for it.

Body heat is gradually lost in the cold and when the outside air is less than the body's natural temperature, 98.6 degrees. During most of the year, the weather at Fort Benning does not warrant extreme measures for keeping warm. However, there are some winter days when the danger of hypothermia is a great and possible danger.

Hypothermia is when the body is unable to conserve or produce enough heat to keep itself warm. The body's temperature begins to fall and after falling to 95 degrees, the body's temperature begins to fall rapidly.

Hypothermia can come as quietly as a burglar at midnight. Its victim may feel nothing more than the urge to lay down to rest or sleep. As the condition advances signs of pain, poor coordination, numbness, tiredness, poor speech and mental confusion appear. When the body temperature drops further the victim may become unconscious; the skin may turn blue, the heartbeat may become irregular and the pulse almost undetectable. From then on, death may occur at any point.

In cases of severe hypothermia take the following steps:

- Take the victim to a warm place.
- Remove wet clothing, but only if it can be done with a minimum of movement.
- Do not message the victim.
- Keep the person's head level with the body.

Begin to rewarm the person by:

- Apply hot, wet towels to the victim's head, neck, groin, chest and abdomen.
- Apply your own body warmth by direct body-to-body contact.
- Do not give a hypothermia victim alcohol.
- Get professional medical attention as quickly as possible.

The easiest way to avoid becoming a hypothermia victim is to dress warm enough to fit the weather conditions. Most experts recommend dressing in layers rather than relying on a single, heavy garment for warmth. Do not put on too many layers, this can cause you to sweat which will soak the clothing and cause it to loose its insulation properties.

Seperation Point last stop

Not only are you leaving Fort Benning, you're also getting out of the Army. The first place most soldiers see when arriving here is the 18th Replacement Detachment for inprocessing. Now that you are retiring or ending your term of service (ETS), where do you go and what do you do?

Before making the journey back home or somewhere else to start a life in the civilian world, the last place you will see here is the Separation Transfer Point for outprocessing.

But you won't have to spend much time there because the personnel are ready for you and make your final step to leaving go as speedily as possible, according to CW3 Russel Smith, chief of the Separation/Transfer Point.

Sgt. Frederick Miller, NCOIC of the outprocessing section, Separation/Transfer Point, helps a soldier with the final steps of outprocessing.

"We are expecting the soldiers on a certain day and are prepared for them," he said. "As a general rule soldiers spend no more than 30 minutes to an hour here, unless there is an unusually large crowd."

To prepare for their last days here, all soldiers must attend a mandatory briefing which usually takes place 45 days prior to leaving, according to Smith. Retirees attend a separate briefing from soldiers who are ending their term of service. Three briefings are given each month, one for retirees and two for ETS (soldiers attend one of the briefings).

"The briefings tell the soldier all he needs to know concerning clearing post," said Smith. "Information is also given on benefits soldiers are entitled to and opportunities they may have in the civilian community." Films are shown and sometimes there are guest speakers from businesses and local colleges.

After the soldier gets his clearance papers from his unit and clears post, he must go through Central Clearance in Bldg. 83 to get them stamped. When he arrives at the Transfer Point his financial records have been verified and he can review his DD 214, which is the certificate of release or discharge from active duty. This gives the soldier's character of separation such as honorable discharge, general dishcarge, etc.

According to Smith, the Transfer Point workers try to make sure the soldier gets no harrassment during his last days in the service. "We feel it's important for the soldier to have a good last impression before leaving and we try to make this last stop as pleasant as possible."

The location of the Separation/Transfer Point was recently moved to the first floor of Bldg. 83 in room 142 (near the I.D. card section) to make it more convenient, according to Smith.

"We've made improvements in the facilities which we feel are beneficial, such as a lounge with a T.V. and magazines, and a place to have coffee, sodas and snacks," he said. "There is now a much better atmosphere which makes any wait soldiers may have more pleasant."

New hours were recently started at the Separation/Transfer Point and are: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Stress safety on Halloween

By Anita Langford
Fort Benning Safety Office

Customary Halloween festivities-dressing up, trick or treating, and enjoying the bounty-can be fun and danger free for children if parents preplan the evening's events. Bennie Padgett, USAIC Safety Manager, offers the following suggestions to get your children through the evening with happy memories of this special childhood holiday.

Anyone who has suffered through an evening in an ill fitting tuxedo or an elaborate gown will tell you that a simple, well fitted outfit can't be beat. Children's Halloween costumes should fit just right to reduce the hazard of tripping and to assure your child complete freedom of movement in case of danger. It is wise to avoid putting masks on trick-or-treaters, since they greatly reduce a child's field of vision, blocking out traffic, stairs, curbs and other hazards. If you must use a mask, consider enlarging the eyes holes for better visibility. Be sure your child's costume is light or bright colored. Dark costumes may go unnoticed by motorists. No costume is complete without lots of reflective tape applied to front, back and sides. Tape the treat bag as well. Placing your child's name, address and phone number on the bag is also a good idea.

Adults know that a night out is no fun unless there are friends to share in the festivities. "The more the merrier" takes on special meaning on Halloween. It is unwise for any child to go from door to door solo no matter how old they are. Small children must have an adult to supervise their activities. Parents should map out a walking route in advance, planning stops only at homes where the residents are known by the parents. If possible, restrict activities to the hours before dark.

What's on the menu for the masqueraders during their prowl? Nothing-until they get home and the parents can look over the goodies. The nibbling temptation can be avoided if you make a special meal of favorites before your "goblin" sets out. When the spoils are brought home, inspect candy bars by cutting them up in small pieces. Dothe same with fruit after it has been washed. The tales of pins and razor blades in edibles are all too true! Discard unwrapped or poorly wrapped items. Beware of homemade goodies unless you know their exact origin. Although it may not seem very original, the best goodies to give and receive are commercially manfactured and individually wrapped.

Are you spooked by Halloween? Don't be. Just scare up some time to prepare properly for this most monstrous of nights.

Soldier of year honored

Sgt. Philip G. Johnston, Company D, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, was recently selected Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year.

The road to winning Soldier of the Year is long and rugged. First, Johnston had to win Battalion Soldier of the Month, Brigade Soldier of the Month, Brigade Soldier of the Quarter and Post Soldier of the Quarter.

Sgt. Philip G. Johnston

"I was ahead of the game before I went before the boards," said Johnston. "I've always tried to put forward a good exemplary performance."

For achieving these honors, Johnston received a wrist watch and a set of dress blues from the Association of the U.S. Army, a weeklong vacation for two in Hawaii, six-month exemption from the duty roster, a three-day pass, the Army Commendation Medal and a Follow Me statuette.

The 24-year-old Delaware native has only been in the Army 17 months. He is a mechanic and technical inspector of wheeled and tracked vehicles.

"I was a mechanic as a civilian also, and I liked my job," said Johnston. "But I felt it was my patriotic duty to serve my country and I think everybody should."

Johnston has two years of automotive engineering training. He attended Delaware Technical Community College in Stanton and the Automotive Training Center in Exton, Pa.

Johnston is currently attending the Primary Leadership Course and is preparing to attend an advanced automotive course. He says he would like to submit a packet to Warrant Officer school for Automotive Technician.

"My wife gave me a lot of support during the competion," said Johnston. "She helped me study and asked a lot of questions. I think she deserves some credit for being so patient."

Johnston likes to ride his motorcyle and goes fishing in his spare time. He currently lives in Columbus with his wife, Gail.

Network aids soldiers PCS

CHARLESTON, S.C.--An international network has been established to help military families facing a permanent change of station move. This system, PCS of America, serves the special needs of families moving to and from communities which host military bases of all branches of the armed forces.

The chief executive of PCS, Inc. (Property Consulting Service of America, Inc.), J. Marion Doar, explained that the ever expanding network operates in each community through a single brokerage firm.

Each affiliate must meet the rigid standards setu up by PCS, Inc. The local affiliate refers families to the PCS counterpart in the town they are moving to. He stated that PCS of America already has more than 55 bases in America and overseas.

Soldiers visit nation's capital

A delegation of 90 persons from the Columbus-Phenix City-Columbus chapter of the Association of the United States Army(AUSA) attended the National AUSA meeting recently in Washington, D.C. AUSA won four awards at the meetings, the most by any chapter in the country of their size.

AUSA sponsored the trip for soldiers, who went sightseeing around the capitol and Alexandria, Va. as part of the tour. 1st Lt. Bill Wood, officer-in-charge of the trip, said, "As a result of the trip, soldiers came back with a different attitude towards the usefulness of AUSA and the things it can do for the soldiers."

Soldiers who went on the trip were asked by The BAYONET what they were impressed by on the trip. Their answers follow:

Sgt. Sesa Lawrence, S-4, 1st Infantry Training Brigade: I thought it was a good trip. I didn't have to spend any money but the bus trip was too long.

Sp4 James Brownell, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade: It was a pretty nice trip and exposed a lot of the history of our country. I'd like to go back again and be able to spend more time to look around.

PFC Manuel Rivera, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade: Except for the long bus ride, Washington, D.C. was great. It was quite informative. The exhibition was great but we didn't spend enough time learning about AUSA.

Sp4 Velma Price, AUSA Queen, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade: It was a nice trip. I liked the opening ceremonies the best.

Sp5 Earl R. McGee, Company A, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade: It was one of the best trips I've been on since I've been in the Army. Everything went well and was just outstanding.

PFC Johnny Johnson, Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade: The tour was nice and the key idea was to get members of AUSA familiar with the organization. We saw the new weapons and listened to General Meyer speak, among others.

Sp4 Kenneth McGhee, Headquarters, Headquarter Company, 197th Infantry Brigade: I got to see all the places I used to read about. It was a very exciting trip.

Sgt. Michael Coleman, HHC, Headquarters Command: It was an enjoyable trip. I'd like to go again next year.

PFC Eric Dykes, Headquarters, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade: It was a good experience and I think everybody should give AUSA a try.

PFC Eddie Preas, Headquarters, Headquarter Company, 197th Infantry Brigade: I wish more soldiers could do it. It was a great trip.

Sgt. Susan Lambert, Headquarters, Headquarter Company, Headquarters Command: I thought it was very enriching as far as learning more about AUSA and the Army. The trip was well-enjoyed.

How About That?

Cup runneth over

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

Crowds were hurrying toward the railroad station for the late day trip to home. In front of the old public library there was an old man sitting down playing a battered violin and doing it rather poorly. The library was so placed that it was both convenience and an inconvenience to the station, but for this little old man it was excellent, for it allowed him the maximum number of people to perform for and thus eke out his existence.

On this particular day it was especially hot, muggy and all around ugly. Everyone was in a hurry just to get out of the sun and be on their way home. As would happen a university music student stopped to look at this old man with both love and pity. And after listening to this untutored man play for a bit, she finally went over and asked to see his instrument.

The man handed it to her with doubt in his eyes. "May I play it, sir?" It was the "sir" that did it. She started to play Ave Maria. It was a beautiful thing under the trained hand of that young girl and soon the people began to stop and listen. She smiled at them and gently nodded to the old man's cup as she played. The intention was plain and the crowd caught the spirit and filled the cup...to overflowing, while the old man wept with delight and gratitude. How About That?

It really doesn't take much to make the weary old world a sweeter place to live in and that young girl sensed that fact. But more than that she did her bit to make it a nicer place not only for the poor beggar and not even for those who stopped to listen, but also for herself, that sometimes we need to stop in the midst of our self-imposed pressures and do a little bit to make this a happier place-even for ourselves.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,300 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,300 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits. I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX. I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve. I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

| How much can you make part-time with the Army Reserve? | Per Weekend | Per Year |
|---|---|---|
| E-3 with | | |
| 2+ years | $73.08 | $1231.41 |
| 3+ years | 76.04 | 1248.03 |
| E-4 with | | |
| 3+ years | 80.52 | 1360.44 |
| 4+ years | 86.80 | 1459.35 |
| E-5 with | | |
| 4+ years | 89.24 | 1510.38 |
| 6+ years | 95.08 | 1602.36 |

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

Sheriff's Target

During the past two months, this column has addressed a number of problem areas here ranging from pet control to larcenies, rape and robbery.

In each article, we have pointed out a number of crime prevention tips-things an individual can do to make him or her less likely to become a victim. While some members of the Fort Benning community have no doubt been following these tips, there is ample indication that others have not yet gotten or heeded the word.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

To illustrate this point, let's take a look at the incidents of larceny and housebreaking reported last month. There were 141 incidents reported-almost five each day. Forced entry was apparent in only 43 percent of the incidents. Even though 75 percent of the property stolen could have been identified by serial numbers or other markings, this information was not recorded by the victims in more than two-thirds of the incidents. Imagine yourself being asked to investigate a larceny where no action was taken by the property owner to prevent the theft and there is no legal means to identify what was stolen.

Like everything else in the Army, the military police are a limited resource. The hours spent investigating the "leadless" larcenies of the careless; running down and impounding the stray pets of those people too busy to control them; and responding to domestic disturbances involving families who cannot handle their own problems in a mature and adult way, represent time "robbed" from military police patrols designed to provide protection for all the law-abiding residents here. The military police have an important job to accomplish--we recognize this fact. However, we are the first to admit that we need the help of the community to perform our missions in an efficient and satisfactory manner.

Get involved with Crime Prevention. Know and obey the laws and regulations. Take advantage of military police tips and services and the services of other agencies on post. Report suspicious incidents.

Together, and only together, can we reduce crime and make our community a better and safer place to train, work and live. Get involved in our community's fight against crime.

Everybody's business

Pecan gatherers need to be wary

Pecans, pecan pie, cookies, cake, and stuffing - the list for uses of the versatile pecan goes on and on.

We at Fort Benning are blessed with an abundance of lovely pecan trees and as such are the recipients of their abundance. There is no regulation forbidding the gathering of these nuts.

The squirrels may get a little upset, but seriously, the MPs will definitely take action if the following is not adhered to:

- Gather only nuts that are on the ground.
- Do not park vehicles on grassy areas while gathering pecans, causing problems with the flow of traffic.
- Do not assist the fall of pecans by throwing stones or other missiles at tree branches.
- Do not use poles, sticks or other aides to hasten the fall of the nuts.
- Do not break off limbs.
- Do not climb trees or use ladders.

Post commander presents

MPs rewarded

Twenty-three members of the Law Enforcement Command were awarded the Army Commendation Medal. The awards were presented at a command formation by Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander.

This event marked the 39th anniversary of the Military Police Corps. A cake cutting ceremony followed the awards presentation with the post commader officiating.

Members of the 139th MP Company to receive the award were: Sp4s George Grimmett, Christine Liveoak, Andrew H. Loftin, Willie McClinton, William N McDermott,Larry D. Potts, Richard H. Smith, Javier Vega and PFCs Timothy W. Browning, Jack L. Cleveland, Anthony Daniel, Duane Faulkner, Ray A. Spurlock and Jeffrey A. Webster. Members of the 988th MP Company to receive the award were Sp4s Helen Rhodes, Jerry T. Hamilton, Richard A. Smith and PFCs Bruce W. Heddy and Demetrius Hicks. PFC Timothy J. Hunter, 197th MP Platoon, received the award.

Also receiving the ARCOM was Sgt. Robert E. Howard, 139th MP Company. Howard was awarded the ARCOM as an interim award for his heroic action of Sept. 12 when he climbed one of the 250-foot jumptowers and talked a soldier intent on committing suicide into climbing down.

Speed limits set for school zones

School is in session again. The 20-mphschool zone speed limit is in effect on school days during the following hours: 8-9 a.m., 1:30-3:45 p.m. and any other time that children are present.

We cannot overemphasize the necessity to adhere to posted speed limits when the life of a child could be at stake.

Fire drills save families

By James Floyd

Fires in the home do more than destroy property, they can destroy lives and sometimes entire families. This is an easily avoided tragedy; avoided if the family knows how to get out of the house quickly and automatically should a fire strike.

It is important that you carefully tell your family that this is not play-acting. The compliance with this guidance to the letter will determine whether you and your family will survive the fire.

Very few people die from flame. Most deaths result from asphyxiation caused by oxygen depletion, super heated gases and smoke. Fire requires oxygen, so does the human. The first affected organs are the lungs. Heated gases and smoke sear and block the smaller blood vessels in the lungs that carry oxygen to the vital organs, thus reducing the oxygen flow to the brain. The lack of oxygen reduces normal reflexes and the thinking ability, causes unconsciousness and finally death.

Remember that heated gases and smoke rise. Keep close to the floor and protect your mouth and nostrils with a wet cloth to filter the smoke and gases.

It is important for every family to have a prearranged meeting place. Many parents have perished by running into the house to rescue children who were not there. Once out of the burning building, go directly to an area you have pre-selected. Here persons may be accounted for quickly and accurately. Arriving firefighters can be advised of any missing persons and where they normally may be found.

Another important rule is to close the bedroom doors before retiring. It is important to have a barricade between you and fire. At nighttime this barricade is the bedroom door. It keeps both flame, deadly fumes and smoke away from you.

Teach your children to stay inside their rooms if they hear you shout to them that there is a fire. If they suspect fire and haven't heard you shout, they should stay inside, shout to you and follow these rules.

- Go to the door, do not open it, and touch it with your hand. If it is hot, go over to the window and carefully open it. Sit down beside the open window and scream for help. Stay there shouting until someone answers or comes to help you. WITH THE DOOR CLOSED AND WHILE BREATHING COOL, FRESH AIR, YOU ARE REASONABLY SAFE UNTIL HELP COMES.
- Be certain that your children can open the window. It may be necessary to break the window with a chair, stool, toy or some other item.
- When you give the children these instructions, do so from inside their bedrooms. Make sure they understand that this is not a game, but something even more serious than the fire drills at school.
- Of the greatest importance is practice. Conduct a family drill periodically. Discuss the mistakes or make improvement changes.
- Another good rule: If you are able to use your stairway or stairs to get out, impress everyone with the necessity of closing doors behind them. This will bottle up the blaze in the room of origin, at least for the time required to evacuate the building. In other rooms, it will cut down the draft which would otherwise fan the fire to spread throughout the house.
- Never waste time trying to dress.
- Never waste time trying to save material goods or pets.
- Never waste time trying to use the telephone (depend on the use of a neighbor's phone for summoning the fire department).
- Never attempt to extinguish a fire of any size yourself. Leave it for the professionals. A common garden hose with water applied from the exterior, through a window or door, can help confine the fire or protect exposures.

Scenario tests crisis skills

Medivac chopper to the rescue!

If you were anywhere near Martin Army Community Hospital and the Main Mall Friday afternoon, you no doubt wondered what was going on. Ambulances could be heard from several blocks away, as well as medevac helicopters, as they rushed to the hospital. Was a rescue operation going on? An accident somewhere?

Indeed a rescue operation was in progress-and if you had been at the tragedy site, you would have thought it was real, as 60 soldiers played the role of wounded soldiers waiting to be rescued.

Martin Army Community Hospital was undergoing a semiannual test of its emergency preparedness plan. A test requirement for accreditation by the Joint Commission for Accreditation of Hospitals.

Scenario:

At 1 p.m. last Friday tragedy struck. Two troop transport vehicles collided outside the 197th Infantry Brigade area on Kelly Hill. Emergency Medical Treatment vehicles from Martin Army Communtiy Hospital, field ambulances from the 34th Medical Battalion and 690th Medical Company and Medevac helicopters from the 498th Medical Detachment (Air Ambulance) rushed to the scene. The 60 casualties were quickly sorted, treated and evacuated to Martin Army Community Hospital.

While the evacuation personnel were getting patients ready for movement, Martin Army Hospital was preparing for the onslaught. Sorting teams, known as triage teams, were established at the emergency room.

An Emergency operation Center and a Trauma Center were quickly formed to orchestrate the operation. A central group of medics, operating room technicians, vetrinary specialists, medical maintenance technicians and other medical specialists was gathered in the basement of the hospital. Litter bearers and labor would come from this pool. Physicians, nurses and support personnel had already reported to the different medical teams.

By the time the first ambulance arrived with the accident victims, the hospital had changed from a routine hospital to a highly efficient life saving machine.

This was a staged accident. Sixty members of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade were prepared by moulage teams to look like they have been involved in a massive wreck.

Martin Army Community Hospital's part in the scenario was not staged. For them, the accident might as well have been real.

Hospital commander, Brig. Gen. (nominee) Frank F. Ledford Jr., M.D., was pleased with the overall outcome of the test. "The response of the staff was superb. I am especially pleased with the evacuation support provided by the 34th Medical Battalion units.

"We have learned a number of lessons today and will strive to immediately update and perfect our plan. Our unique role as a military hospital dictates that we must be prepared for just such a catastrophy as we witnessed today. I am confident that Martin Army Community Hospital could rapidly and professionally respond to an actual situation," he said.

This time the exercise was a test, next time it may well be the real thing, and may well include you as a victim. You can rest assured, Martin Army Community Hospital is prepared to meet the challenge, according to Ledford.

Doughboys rob Bulldogs

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's Doughboys, taking advantage of eight Citadel junior varsity turnovers, defeated the Bulldogs 35-21 Saturday afternoon in Doughboy Stadium.

Head coach Ralph Santaliz cleared his bench during the game and the result was that five different players scored touchdowns.

The Bulldog's John Maher blocked Thomas Hagen's punt on the Doughboy's first possesion and the Citadel offense took over on Fort Benning's 49 yard line. The Bulldogs were marching for a score when quarterback David Smith rolled to the right and threw into the waiting arms of Doughboy defensive back Charles Mata at the Doughboy six yard line.

The Doughboys took over and drove 94 yards in nine plays to score. the final three plays were passes from Leamon Hall to wide receiver Julian Hardy that covered 15, 14 and 24 yards for the score.

In the second quarter, the Doughboy's Eddie Adams recovered a fumble by Bulldog fullback Jim Cook at the 18-yard-line. One rush by Hall gained three yards and then James Marshall broke three tackles to get the ball down to the one. Christian Lamar took it over for the score.

The Doughboy defense found opportunity once again knocking at their door on the next Citadel series. Defensive back Larry Connor stepped in front of wide receiver Casey Blake to intercept Smith's pass at the Bulldog 48-yard-line. The Doughboys reeled off six plays before Hall connected with tight end Larry Anderson just inside the goal line from 18 yards out.

The Citadel came back to score when Smith rolled right and then decided to head downfield. Smith scrambled 45 yards to the Doughboy eight. Doug Wright scored one play later from the five to make the halftime score 21-7.

The Doughboy defense again created the opportunitities that enabled the offense to score against Citadel as they had the week before against Florida. The Bulldog's Laurie King (31) gets the Doughboys rendition of the Welcome Wagon here, led by defensive tackle Randy Wilson (76).

With 6:41 remaining in the third quarter, Smith connected with Blake from eight yards out to pull the Bulldogs within seven, 21-14. The Doughboys took the following kickoff 79-yards in 11 plays and scored when Hall, unloading just before being sacked, hit Freddie Suggs from 29-yards out.

On the first play after the kickoff, Smith fumbled after gaining five yards and Doughboy linebacker Donald Brown recovered on the Bulldog 36-yard-line. Hall hit Hardy for 11 yards but a holding penalty nullified the play and put the ball back to the Doughboy 48-yard-line. Hall then passed 52-yards to Richard Fletcher for their second score in less than a minute and a half to increase their lead to 21 points (35-14).

Doughboy linebacker Scott Krauchun finished a hard day for Bulldog signal caller Smith in the fourth quarter. Smith dropped back to pass as the Bulldogs tried to play catch-up ball. The Doughboys blitzed and, just as Smith turned to scan the other side of the field, Krauchin blindsided him like a freight train hitting a Matchbox car. Smith stumbled around for 30 seconds before the trainers came out to take him off the field.

Later in the quarter, reserve Bulldog quarterback Buzzy Lawson handed off to Laurie King. King rolled to the right and hit Blake standing all alone in the Doughboy end zone for the final score.

Doughboys battle Jacksonville

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's Doughboys, looking to go above .500 for the first time this season, will face the Jacksonville State University junior varsity tomorrow afternoon in Jacksonville, Ala. at 3 p.m.

Jacksonville State does not have a regular junior varsity team. The team pitted against the Doughboys will be made up mostly of freshmen who don't get time to play in the varsity games.

Head coach Jim Fuller of Jacksonville State, who has a lifetime record of 27-13, said, "We use this bunch of kids as the scout team during the season. We don't want to be embarrassed but the main point is for these kids to get experience."

Jacksonville State's junior varsity, or scout team if you prefer, is 0-1 going into the game while the Doughboys are 3-3. Jacksonville's loss came at the hands of Marion College 41-7.

On offense, Fuller said, "We throw about 30 times a game. The key to our offense will be the two freshman quarterbacks, Wes Bowers and Alan Porter, and how they perform under pressure to a veteran team like the Doughboys. We use mainly a split back look that we run out of the I-formation. On defense we go with the 50 set."

Doughboy coach Ralph Santaliz is worried that maybe there might be more than just inexperienced players on the field for Jacksonville State. He's taking a serious outlook for this game.

He should if there are some veterans performing for Jacksonville State. The varsity plays in the Gulf South league and is 5-1. That record is good for a tie for first place in the league and a national ranking of fourth in the NCAA Division II polling.

The Doughboys only remaining problem going into this game is their specialty units. Another punt was blocked in the Citadel game, and if it wasn't for a fine defensive effort, the Bulldogs might have had the early momentum that the Doughboys got instead.

The Doughboy defense, unheralded and inexperienced at the beginning of the season, has put it to the other team game after game. The Doughboy defense made each team fight right to the last minute of each game for every yard.

The doughboy offense, with the return of Freddie Suggs, is more balanced than ever. Last week Julian Hardy and Larry Anderson, two players who have been waiting in the wings, surprised the Bulldogs with touchdowns. Three times in a row Hardy slipped behind a defender on one drive and that takes some effort. He was rewarded on the third reception with a touchdown toss from Leamon Hall.

Goju school opens

In last week's BAYONET, there was an article on Tae Kwon Do (TKD), the school and its instructor.

The article contained some wrong information and we would like to apoligize and make the corrections.

The school does not concern Tae Kwon Do nor does instructor Sensei McCall hold a black belt in TKD.

The school is the Black Dragon Chinese Goju School and Chinese Goju System is the style the school teaches. McCall holds a fourth degree black belt in Chinese Goju, along with a first degree black belt in Japanese Goju and Shodakon karate.

The style was founded by Ronald VanClief and McCall has been studying with him for 10 years. McCall has a total of 14-years experience in the martial-arts and has appeared in a movie on martial-arts. He won first place at the East Cost tournament in 1979 for full-contact karate.

McCall is assisted at the school by David Wynn, a senior student who will be promoted to a second degree black belt in Chinese Goju soon.

Classes are also held on Saturdays from 12 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Where's the track team?

By Tim Boivin

Different notes from all over:

Fort Benning is trying to start up a track team. A lot of precious track equipment is going to waste by remaining unused under the stands.

Other arguments for a track team include a $1 million track that is used by just a few joggers around Doughboy Stadium's football field. The track was originally built for a track team but there hasn't been one developed.

The economic feasability of a track team is the best argument of all. A track team would cost practically nothing to operate. The equipment is all there under Doughboy Stadium. All that is needed is bodies.

Fort Benning has a good start toward the team in two people. Kenneth Smith, of 15th Finance, came up and asked me to help generate some interest. Smith ran the quarter-mile in college at North Carolina A&T. He said North Carolina A&T had a small track team and it can work here too.

The other person who is a good start toward a track team is Anthony Knight of the athletic director's office here. Knight, even though he doesn't like his name mentioned, is interested in track. He has a press clipping on his wall from his college track days at Arkansas and directed Smith to me in the hope of finding more athletes for the team.

Interest in a boxing team was sparked by the response from readers who were willing to sacrifice their time to be on the team. They showed they wanted to have a team and a team was started. Now the boxers have a first rate coach in Anthony Stoddard and the smokers that have been held have been very successful.

The same thing could happen with track. Running is rampant on this post, in case you haven't noticed. In order for the team to get started they need bodies. If you are interested call The BAYONET's sport's desk at 545-4622. We'll put you in touch with others trying to get the team started.

An area The BAYONET sport's section doesn't have to work that hard in covering is Youth Activities(YA). Everybody at YA does an outstanding job and it makes our job a heck of a lot easier. That's why we're saddenned to say that Bob Pate, our man with YA football results and highlights, isn't working there any longer.

When you meet people like Bob in life it just makes your day go easier. A few weeks ago I mentioned that it would be easier for us if the scores and highlights were typed in. Bob quickly double-spaced all the scores and names. To see how dedicated Bob was, just look at the fact that he turned in this week's scores and highlights even though he wasn't working at YA as of Friday.

Will Rogers once said, "Not everybody can be a hero. Some of us have to clap as they parade by." I guess that's what sports writers are for. Thanks for the help Bob.

In the Pee Wee league, the Tri-City Panthers remained undefeated beating the Main Post Patriots 16-0 last Saturday in a tough defensive struggle. During the third quarter the Panthers scored a touchdown on a quarterback sneak by Pete Marshall. In the last minute of play the Panthers scored their second touchdown on a 20-yard-pass from Marshall to Xavier Carter both touchdowns were followed by a 2-point conversion.

In the Midget league, the Falcons scored first, in their game against the Tri-City Panthers, threatening them four times in the first half but it wasn't enough to beat the determined cats.

The Panthers broke the 6-6 deadlock in the fourth quarter with a 17-yard-touchdown-run by Ike Wychc. Other standouts for the winning Panthers were David Archuleta, Eric Thomas and Kevin Sparks. The game was for first place in the Midget Division.

1/58th: Flag down HHC, advance in 197th

By Becky Bulgrin

Company C, 1/58th Infantry, defeated Headquarters Company, 1/58th Infantry (HHC) Tuesday night 20-6, ousting them from the 197th Infantry Brigade flag football tournament finals. The win gives Company C a chance to vie for a spot in the post tournaments.

Although penalties against Charlie Company far outweighed those against HHC, Charlie's offense still managed to come out on top.

An HHC punt to the two-yard line didn't slow Company C down. Then Michael Jackson rushed for Charlie's first touchdown.

Danny McKnight intercepted a pass from HHC, setting up Charlie's next touchdown. A pass by quarterback Kevin McCalister to Lemule Leach gave Company C a first down on the 40-yard line. Although they were far from their goal line, McCalister didn't let up and threw a 40-yard pass to Frank Binns who went on to score Charlie's second touchdown. Tom Heineken connected for the two-point conversion, giving Company C a 14-0 lead.

HHC quarterback William Strozier's passing was effective but time and penalties got in the way of scoring efforts. A 30-yard touchdown pass by Strozier to Ernest Zanders was called back.

A pass by Strozier finally went through when Zanders scored HHC's only touchdown on a 40-yard play in the second half.

HHC kicked the ball out of bounds, giving Company C a first down and the start of another TD. A pass to Mark Atwood put Charlie on the five-yard line, and Lucious Albritton scored Charlie's last TD.

William Clement saved Charlie Company twice by batting-down the ball on two close attempts by HHC. Charlie's Michael Smith also stopped a close one when he intercepted a pass in HHC's end zone.

CISM has roots in U.S.

By Tommy Poole

The Council of International Military Sports(CISM) will be holding their championship rifle competition here this week and the CISM logo will be seen everywhere there is an event being held.

The globe in the CISM logo represents CISM's international nature while the sword signifies the military aspect of the competition. The laurel wreath is the eternal symbol of athletic prowess.

The five rings, or maxims, symbolize the meaning of sport. They mean that sport:

- means peace;
- is the opposite of war;
- is the cure for war;
- is international in scope;
- yet brings nations closer together.

Despite its French name(translated into English from Conseil International du Sport Militare), CISM is based upon an American idea.

At the end of World War II, the American Commander-in-Chief, President Harry Truman, wanted a means to bridge language and cultural barriers and bring together the diverse Allied Forces as a cooperative, cohesive force.

President Truman revived the highly successful Allied Forces Sports Council(AFSC) which General John J.(Blackjack) Pershing had created at the end of World War I when faced with a similar problem.

The AFSC was an instant success with Allied Forces from Western and Eastern Europe competing against each other harmoniously. However, Russia and other Eastern European countries withdrew in 1947 because of political differences with the West. England and the United States withdrew and quickly thereafter the AFSC disintegrated.

Some nations recognized the potential of sports in bringing together the armed forces of the world and refused to let the idea perish without a fight. In 1948, the French Armed Forces organized a meeting and invited all countries interested in forming a permanent military sports association to attend.

The rest, as is often said, is history. France, Belgium, Denmark, Luxembourg and the Netherlands attended the meeting, drew up and ratified the statutes and regulations for a worldwide sports organization. From those five "founding nations" CISM has grown to a current membership of 78 nations.

The goal of CISM, while setting a good example in each member country, is the encouragement of military sports and the development of friendly relations between the Armed Forces of the various countries. CISM strives to achieve this goal by:

- establishing permanent relations between the armed forces for the exchanges of ideas and encouraging research in the various fields related to sport and physical fitness;
- entrusting the member nations with the organization of the numerous sport championships and meetings organized under its auspices;

- encouraging and supporting all measures designed to establish and reinforce friendly relations between the military participants and promoting activities designed to increase understanding, mutual respect and friendship between nations.

CISM week starts tomorrow

By Tommy Poole

Visiting military shooting teams from around the world began arriving here this week to compete in the XXI Council of International Military Sports(CISM) shooting championships to be held tomorrow through Nov. 2 at Parks and Phillips firing ranges.

Early arrivals so far include delegations from Egypt, Oman and the People's Republic of China. The bulk of the remaining entries, expected to be a near record of 30 participating countries, will arrive over the weekend.

The official opening ceremonies are scheduled for 10-10:30 a.m. Monday on York Field. Lt. Gen. William R. Richardson, deputy commander of TRADOC and commandant of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Brig. Gen. Edward L. Trobaugh, deputy commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, will be among the dignataries present along with a number of CISM representatives.

Competition will begin on Monday at Phillips Range with the 25 meter pistol event. The 300 meter rifle events will start Tuesday at Parks Range with both rifle and pistol competition continuing through Oct. 31. More than 300 of the top military marksmen in the world will be on hand for the matches and will feature many of the present CISM and world record holders.

A close match is expected between the favored teams of Finland, Norway and the U.S. for the team championship. West Germany, Sweden, Switzerland and the People's Republic of China are also expected to pose strong challenges. Last year Finland defeated the U.S. squad by just five points, 9,017 to 9,012 out of a possible 9,600 total points. Norway placed third with 8,920.

Lones Wigger, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit and two time Olympic gold medalist, is considered one of the top contenders for this year's individual title in the CISM rifle championships. Wigger holds the record for most CISM medals garnered by any competitor in the history of the games with 16 gold, six silver and two bronze.

Movie review

Kermit goes Hollywood

By Bill Powell

The Muppets have left television for a brief fling in the movies. "The Muppet Movie" is hardly going to rock the world of social change or be a heavyweight drama, but it does represent good clean entertainment.

I'll be the first to admit that I was skeptical of the ability of puppets to hold down the story line of a major movie. I was pleasantly surprised when "The Muppets" did just that.

The creative genius behind this is no other than Jim Henson, the creator of "The Muppets". Henson apparently decided that Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy were ready for the big time of celluloid and bright lights.

The acting, if puppets are capable of acting, was just about right and the humans involved didn't do badly either. The story revolves around Kermit being advised to go to Hollywood after an agent hears him singing on his lily pad. Kermit goes and adventures follow him. He's chased by a "Frog Leg Restruant" owner and various other meanies. A sample of material from the movie includes Kermit, after nearly being run over by a steamroller while riding his bicycle saying, "Just think, if I couldn't jump so high I'd been gone with the Schwinn".

Don't worry it does get funnier and it holds your interest throughout. Whether you're an adult or an adult with children you can go to this movie without fear of being bored with what some have called a kiddie movie. "The Muppets" are definitely for children and grownups alike. The music, which includes a beautiful song called "Rainbow Connection", is great, the story line is entertaining and the characters are totally enjoyable. If you go to see the movie perhaps you'll enjoy it as much as I did. I gave "The Muppet Movie" four stars.

Viewers benefit from change

By Bill Powell

The hours have changed on WFBG. It's now on from noon until 8 p.m. on Channel 5 in Bldg. 4 and Channel 13 on Alert Cable. The new hours make it even easier to tune in. But the hours weren't the only thing about WFBG that changed. There is a new program called the "Benning Report" and with regular viewing you'll find out more about what's going around on post.

Those are only a few of the changes. Now let's take a look at the programs highlighted for next week:

●"Sportsreel" takes you back to the 50's and shows you various sporting activities. Whether it's the Rose Bowl or one of the many other sports featured you may get a new perspective on today's sports by looking at yesterday.

●"Big Picture" has various subjects this upcoming week. Tune in to "Payoff in the Pacific" and watch the final battles of WWII and the Japanese Surrender.

"Operation Cartwheel" detailing other operations during WWII in the Pacific. "They Were There" which gives an idea of how the Army has helped in times of disaster since the beginning of the 20th Century. Or watch the "Battle of North Africa" and see how the Allies met the Nazi threat in North Africa.

●"Spectrum" is WFBG-TV's four hour music and information program. "Spectrum" features all kinds of music, local news and special programming. The special programming during this next week continues "The Beatles Special". This program will be heard one hour per day during "Spectrum". Check the BAYONET and the Benning Bulletin for times and days that programs are scheduled on WFBG—TV.

Strange encounter

It's not everyday the military police run into a strange trio consisting of a witch (nine-year-old Jennifer Rhodes), Spiderman (five-year-old Daniel Conklin) and Plastic Man (six-year-old Nathan Bristow) while patrolling the housing areas here. The MP sergeants Kevin McCoy and Larry Doggett, just had to stop and "treat" the little "tricksters". The children were "treated" with lollipops from the MPs as part of the continuing "Sgt. Friendly" Program. Special military police patrols will insure the safety of Benning children with patrols of the housing areas this Halloween.

Voting can mean changes

By T.A. Sabel

"I believe that every individual within our ranks should make an all out effort to vote in this upcoming election," said the Army's chief of staff, Gen. Edward C. Meyer recently.

Voting, and the need for soldiers to vote, has been mentioned several times on these pages over the last few months. There are some who would consider the matter beat into the ground.

However, as the election comes down to the wire there has been a lot of speculation on which of the two major candidates will win. One poll shows one candIwhich of the two major candidates will win. One poll shows one candidate ahead of another; another national poll, released that same day, shows the opposite.

There is still talk of the election going to the House of Representatives because of the possibility that no major candidates will win a majority of the votes.

If ever there was a time in history when an individual's vote will count, this is it. Landslides are being judged by 10 percentage points.

There's another side of voting which has recently been brought up by one of the third party candidates. This candidate said that voters should not consider the election a horse race, with the voter picking a winner. Rather, this should be a time when we, the voters, voice our opinion on a ballot.

We all have opinions, some of which are based on sound evidence and others are based on gut feelings. Most of the time we voice opinions to friends, bartenders or anyone with an ear to lend. Once every four years we have a chance to voice opinions on a national level.

The act of voting is not a voice crying in the wilderness. The vote, the simple act of making a mark on a ballot or pulling a lever in a booth, changes an opinion into a part of policy. The right to vote gives every adult citizen the status of legislator; with power surpassing even members of the House of Representatives and Senators. While these members of the national legislature vote on laws, we vote for the person who has the final say on laws. For military members, this choice is especially important. Who else has the chance to vote for their Commander-in-Chief?

This year there are many who look at the candidates of the two major parties and see little difference, while others see them as poles apart. Lest we forget, there are other choices available.

There are at least 10 other parties to choose from. Sure, some of these will probably get less than one percent of the vote. However, one of the third candidates, who is running without any party affiliation whatsoever, has been getting poll percentages of 10-15 percent.

The election is not, and should not be, simply a contest to pick a winner. It should be the time when the voter selects the candidate with the views he most agrees with. With such an array of candidates to choose from, there surely is one for each voter.

Soldiers comment on trip

Letters to the Editor

Editor's note; This letter was addressed to 1st Lt. William Wood, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, who was the officer in charge of the soldier's trip to Washington, D.C.

To the Editor:

We just read about the AUSA trip in the BAYONET and we were very disappointed with the comments made by a few people.

We went to Washington, D.C. with the intent of learning more about AUSA. We had a great time on the tours, but the AUSA was the main topic. It seemed that the people interviewd were more interested in the long bus trip than with AUSA. To be frank, these comments (except those of PFC Johnson) told nothing of the AUSA and the article really put a damper on the trip.

Since you put so much time and energy into our trip, we think that you may also have been disappointed by the article.

We would like to thank you, the Fort Benning-Columbus Chapter and the AUSA for funding our trip and providing us with the accomodations at Fort Belvoir. We were very impressed with our tours of Washington for we learned much more about our nation's history and government. What we really learneda about was AUSA.

As we walked around the hotel, we were proud of our Fort Benning Chapter for the awards that it had won. We were impressed with how well the military was supported by the civilian community. The exhibits were so informative and interesting that we had no time to attend any discussions. Later we learned that we could have attended any of the open conferences. We were really impressed with the President's Reception.

It was an honor to attend and an honor to talk with Gen. Meyer (U.S. Army chief of staff). Even though he was overrun with dignitaries, he still took time to talk with enlisted men. In fact it was nice to see many higher ranking officers taking time to talk with enlisted men. We were exited when a small group of generals approached us and asked our opinion on current topics and they really were interested to see what we had to say. They offered advice on now to develop our careers and shape our future in the Army. It showed that they honestly cared. We came away with a very good feeling about the AUSA. It also made us realize that if the United States goes to war civlians and military peraonnel are ready with both spirit and advanced weapons. AUSA helped us to understand that the United States really is THE power of the world.

We received very much output from the AUSA convention. Sure, it was a long bus ride, but it was worth it. What you did or didn't learn about AUSA was all up to you. We put a lot of time into and got a lot out of it. We are very fortunate to have such an organization as the AUSA. Once again thank you for your time and energy and the Fort Benning Chapter for letting us represent them.

Powder puffs learn car care

By Dave Bristow

They call themselves Powder puff mechanics. These women are fed up with mechanics who take advantage of them because they are women by charging them high prices for routine automobile repair work.

The women decided to learn something about the automobile and its care. They meet on Monday nights at the Main Post Automotive Craft Shop to take classes on automotive preventive maintenance.

William Place, supervisor of the automotive craft shops at Kelley Hill and Main Post, is the instructor for these classes. "The classes teach people how to keep up with maintenance on the cars they drive," said Place. "By performing preventive maintenance they can do a lot of the minor repair work themselves such as tune-ups or oil-filter changes without always depending on a mechanic. Women should know what things to look for when they have car trouble so if a mechanic says something has to be replaced on their car they will at least be familiar with what he is talking about. Many women do not know much more than how to put gas in the cars they drive. This does not have to be," he explained.

One of the women signed up for the classes is Mrs. Jean Chatham who works for the Aviation division of the Department of Plans and Training (DPT) here. Chatham explained,"A woman alone, especially one who has depended upon her husband to handle automotive repairs and when that husband is suddenly overseas, finds herself easy prey to that special breed called the 'dishonest mechanic'. If she knows nothing about the workings of the inside of her vehicle, which I did not until I took the Powder puff mechanics class, she can be convinced that she needs anything from a tune-up to a complete engine overhaul."

William Palace, supervisor of the Kelley Hill and Main Post automotive craft shops, instructs Benning's "Powder Puff" mechanics in what fluids they need to check regularly. The ladies are tired of some mechanics who charge high prices for minor car troubles that they could learn to fix themselves.

Chatham went on to continue her experience. "My most frequent experience has been with the tune-up. A mechanic will give you a tune-up like a doctor will give you aspirin. He figures that as long as you came in to see him he should make some kind of effort to treat you, or your automobile.

"While not all mechanics will take advantage of a woman's ignorance, most are not against making an extra dollar or two. Especially if the woman has the bad habit of saying 'Just fix whatever is wrong and let me know what it costs.' This used to be my worst habit. I had no idea what could be causing my car to make all those strange noises and shudder when I would come up to a stop sign or red light. If the mechanic said 'Lady, sounds like you could use a tune-up,' I was more than happy to go along with his diagnosis.

"It is a terrible feeling to go through the effort of getting off work, taking your automobile to a garage, getting it worked on, and then have it continue to do the same thing. More than likely the woman will be told that what was done to her vehicle was necessary but it 'must be something else.' The something else is usually as simple as adjusting the idle. The woman could do this if she knew where the right screw was."

Chatham concluded saying, "Now that I know just what a tune-up is (thanks to this class) I can decide for myself if that is what I need. I can also check all of the routine things that confuse so many women simply because we didn't know anything about the inner workings of our automobile."

Mary Cunningham, director for the Kelley Hill Recreation Center and coordinator for the Powder puff mechanics class, talks about the popularity of these classes. "We keep our classes to no more than 20 ladies at a time. This enables better one to one instruction," said Cunningham. "We have another 20 ladies that are already signed up for the next class. So the demand is there. However, it will probably be early next spring before we can do this again. The class has been most beneficial to all the women. If one of them breaks down on the road, in many cases, they should be able to get themselves going again."

For more information about these classes contact Mary Cunningham at 544-3079.

Halloween: Legends of ghosts dance thru night

From ghoulies and ghosties and long-leggety beasties
And all things that go bump in the night,
Good Lord deliver us.
(Old Scottish prayer)

Tonight is the time for the ghosts, elves, fairies, witches and other citizens of the night to wander the earth.

The holiday we celebrate with our children going trick or treating is an ancient holiday with roots going back to before Christ. Originally it was celebrated by Druids in ancient Britain and Ireland as the end of the year. It was also the day of Samhain, the lord of death. According to druidic legend, souls of the dead revisit their homes on this day. Samhain also judges those who died that year. The wicked souls go into the bodies of animals, predominantly cats.

The ancient Celts of the British Isles built large bonfires on high hills to frighten away evil spirits.

Irish legend say that evil spirits came out of the cave of Cruachan in Connaught, called the gate of hell. When the gates are unlocked on Halloween, copper colored birds flew out of the cave with the wandering spirits. They would kill farm animals and steal babies, leaving a changling in their places.

One of these legends is the jack-o-lantern. Two versions of the story exist. One is that Jack was a very miserly man who died. When he went to heaven they wouldn't let him in because he had been too tight with his money. He was also denied entrance into hell because he had played too many jokes on the devil. He was then doomed to wander the earth until judgement day.

The other legend tells of a giant of a man who died and was too large to get through Saint Peter's gates. He then wandered to hell and the devil took one look at him and said, "I can't fit you in here, you'll have to go." The big man began to cry. The devil took pity on him and put a little bit of hell in the big man's hand saying, "Here, maybe you can find a place to rest." So Jack, which was the giant's name, wanders the earth carrying his little bit of hell glowing in the night.

When we make our pumpkin lanterns, we are doing this in commemoration of Jack of the lantern.

Precautions stop tragedy

Halloween is approaching and parents need to start thinking of the safety of their children during the traditional Halloween celebration. Halloween tragedies can be reduced by following these simple guidelines:

- All children under 7 years should be accompanied by an adult.
- Parents should not truck their children to unfamiliar neighborhoods.
- Children should go out in groups early in the evenings, preferably before dark.
- Costumes should be fluorescent or light so that children can be easily seen.
- Houses should be lit.
- Cross the street at corners.
- Look both ways before crossing streets.
- Parents should check all candy. Only indvidually wrapped or sealed candy should be allowed.
- Block parties and school carnivals should be encouraged in place of door to door soliciting.
- Parents-freshfruit, cheese kisses, boxed raisins, etc., make excellent "treats," are nutritious and do not promote tooth decay.

Help your children have fun by taking these simple precautions. Let's make this a safe Halloween.

Network helps families

CHARLESTON, S.C.--An international network has been established to help military families facing a permanent change of station move. This system, PCS of America, serves the special needs of families moving to and from communities which host military bases of all branches of the armed forces.

The chief executive of PCS, Inc. (Property Consulting Service of America, Inc.), J. Marion Doar, explained that the ever expanding network operates in each community through a single brokerage firm.

Each affiliate must meet the rigid standards set upby PCS, Inc. The local affiliate refers families to the PCS counterpart in the town they are moving to. He stated that PCS of America already has more than 55 bases in America and overseas.

"SELL GOLD. SELL SILVER. BUY BEER."

"Many Americans today are asking what financial investment will give them the best protection against the current inflation.

"A lot of experts are recommending commodities such as gold. Or oil. Or silver. Which do have some value. But also have some risk.

"All the while, one really sensible commodity is being completely overlooked: Red, White and Blue beer.*

"For some reason, the experts have failed to recognize Red, White and Blue has all the qualities we Americans need in an investment during this period of economic uncertainty. It is high-quality. It certainly is liquid. And compared to other good-tasting, naturally-brewed beers, it is definitely underpriced. You save cold, hard cash with every six-pack.

"So if you've got your money tied up in gold or oil or silver, do something sensible: get rid of it. And buy all the Red, White and Blue you can get. It's the one commodity we can all count on: An honest beer. At an honest price."*

Symposium: Military families face same problems wherever they go

Fort Benning families are not alone in their problems. This was one of the findings to come out of a symposium for military families recently held in Washington.

Two problems recanted throughout the symposium were financial difficulties and separation because of duty, according to Sally Entlich, one of Fort Benning's representatives to the symposium.

Other family related problems were how the family could participate in policy decisions and how families can cope with the stress of military life.

Most of the information used during the symposium was from the delegates of many armed forces communities. Working in a variety of workshops, the delegates exchanged information on problem areas and possible solutions, according to one of the delegates.

Gen. Edward C. Meyer, United States Army Chief of Staff, said that service members decide to stay in or get out depending on their family situation.

One area considered for helping family life was to improve employment chances for spouses and family members of sponsers getting overseas assignments.Delegates said the recent pay increase comes none too soon for the soldiers and their families. However, they added, that time alone will tell whether the increase is enough to keep up with inflation.

Legislation in favor of greater family involvement in policy decisions and more pay for the soldiers is not the only way family life can be improved, said an official of the symposium. Trust and moral support between parents and children and between neighbors is a matter which cannot be legislated, added the official.

"A harmonious family is vital in keeping the family strong," said Dr. H. I. McCubin, one of the featured speakers at the symposium. A harmonious family is best achieved when the wife has achieved a sense of self reliance and a high level of self esteem. This type of wife, the doctor said, pays attention to her own interests, is as fulfilled on an individual basis as her husband and is able to cope with the stresses particular to life in the military.This type of woman is different from the earlier generations of women, said a symposium spokesman. The more house-bound wife of the 40's and 50's belongs to an earlier generation, added the spokesman. These differences need to be recognized since they affect our daily lives enormously, continued the spokesman. Knowledge of these differences enhances our ability to get along with bosses, coworkers and neighbors. "Neighbors must help neighbors," stressed the spokesman.

"The direction of the world today is for prevention before treatment is necessary. Specific methods will vary from person to person, marriage to marriage and from commnity to community. But it is true that group efforts have more strength than individuals as is evident in the results of lobbies, unions, conferences and teams," added another speaker for the event to explain the importance of the symposium to the 175 delegates.

Other topis discussed were the uses of the family life centers, academic courses for self improvement, development of day-care centers, using existing supports such as the comunity health nurse, mental hygiene clinics and Army Community Service programs.

Worn jackets on sale

Effective today, the Clothing Sales Store, Bldg. 1698 on Wold Ave., will have used field jackets for sale.

The Army's policy on field jackets changed Oct. 1, with initial entry soldiers being issued two field jackets at the reception station instead of one. Although it is not yet mandatory for all soldiers to have two field jackets, this sale will enable soldiers to purchase a second jacket at considerable savings.

Field jackets with at least 75% of wear remaining will be sold at 25% of the cost or $7.03. Used field jackets with more than 75% of wear remaining will be sold at 50% of cost or $14.05. (New field jackets cost $28.10).

Sale of the used field jackets will continue until available stock is depleted. There will be no exchanges or refunds, and no more than two field jackets sold per customer.

Pretermination inspections begin

Beginning Nov. 17 pretermination inspections will be made prior to cleaning of quarters in preparation for termination inspections. This policy will pertain to anyone assigned government family quarters.

The main reasons for the pretermination inspection are:

- To determine what damage, if any, has occurred to the quarters during the residency of the occupant.
- To provide on-the-spot advice to occupants concerning standards of cleanliness which must be met before quarter's termination will be made.
- To reduce downtime by advance scheduling of needed maintenance and repair.

Pretermination inspections are mandatory and must be accomplished at least three weeks prior to the occupant vacating quarters. Personnel ordered on PCS/ETS with less than 15 day notice will be given a pretermination inspection as soon as possible.

The pretermination and final inspection must be scheduled in person by the service member or their dependents. At that time the occupant will provide the Inspection Section with a copy of the document authorizing the service member to vacate family quarters.

CFC insures opportunity

The purpose of this letter is to remind you of the ongoing Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) and the importance of insuring that all military and civilian personnelhere are given an opportunity to contribute. Although we have reached 70 percent of our goal, only about 30 percent of the eligible contributors have actually donated. We need to give the other 70 percent the opportunity to contribute.

Many on-post activities are directly benefited by the funds we raise for CFC. Last year, for example, we received $105,000 from the local United Way from the $325,000 we raised on post. This money is now being used to support Army Community Services, the Dental Hygiene Program in our dependent schools, Youth Activities and Scouting. We need to attain our goal this year to support these activities in 1981.

Your personal support of CFC is an absolute necessity if we are to reach our goal by the close of the campaign.

Edward L. Trobaugh
Brigadier General, USA
Acting Commander

Lost pets

Two strikes and yours is out

To reduce the number of stray animals on post the pet and animal disease control regulation, USAIC 210-10, is being changed to take in the following changes:

- Pets caught and impounded for a second time will be permanently removed from post by their owners after the pets have been picked up at the Post Veterinary Activity.
- Pets attacking people will also be permanently removed.
- If the pet was provoked into attacking, the military police will investigate the incident.

Masters train troops

SFC Robert Dunston, jumpmaster instructor, gives the hand and arm jump commands to jumpmaster students 1st Lt. Gary C. Powell and Sgt. Donald W. Rockefeller.

By Sharron Calabrisi

"Stand in the door." "Go!" These are just a few of the oral commands given by the black hats jumpmastering the aircraft flying basic airborne troops and jumpmaster students at Fort Benning.

The jumpmaster is the one responsible for the lives of each and every individual jumper on board his assigned aircraft as well as any equipment on board. He is normally selected by the airborne commander and there is only one jumpmaster per aircraft. He is helped by an assistant jumpmaster and safety personnel. The jumpmaster has been delegated authority over all jumpers and he in turn can delegate authority on down to his assistants but he cannot delegate his responsibility.

MSgt. Joe Wood is the chief instructor for both the basic Jump Training Branch and the advanced Jumpmaster Branch and the advanced Jumpmaster Branch. "I may wear two hats, so to speak, but they are both black," Wood commented.

All the instructors for the jumpmaster course are handpicked, with the final approval made by the Airborne Department sergeant major, Joesph Cross. "They are selected according to their experience, instructor ability, and by recommendations from other jumpmaster instructors," explained Wood.

The two-week jumpmaster course was scheduled 12 times a year, but is now only offered approximately every three months because of the instructor shortage in the Airborne Department.

The first week is all classroom work. Duties, responsibilities, techniques, procedures, and jumpmaster personnel inspections are taught. On Monday of the second week, the students undergo a stiff written and jumpmaster personnel inspections exam. Those students sucessfully passing this phase then continue on to the flying phase, where they are also closely examined and graded in their aircraft procedures.

The nine standard jump commands, hand and arm signals, and aircraft procedures for the Air Force C-123, C-130, C-141 and C7A are taught. The students also learn the procedures for the UH-1H Huey and CH-47 Chinook Helicopters.

"The jumpmaster has several cardinal rules he must follow. He cannot let his mistakes be the cause of a jumpers injury or death," explained SSgt. Barry Smith. "He must be highly proficient in inspecting the personnel and aircraft, and most importantly, he must make sure the personnel and equipment make it safely to the designated drop zone. In jumpmastering techniques and procedures, perfection is not the goal, it is the standard," emphasized Smith.

"The attrition rate for a jumpmaster course is very high because the standards have been set high and must always remain high. In jumpaster class 6-80, 40 students started. Five students failed the written exam, two failed the jumpmaster personnel inspection exam and six failed the flying phase. "Not everyone is cut out to be a jumpmaster," Smith added.

The Fort Benning Jumpmaster Branch trains all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces as well as allied students. The branch also has a mobile training team that has the capability of going out to airborne units worldwide to organize and conduct jumpmaster courses.

"Fort Benning's Airborne Department is responsible for all jumpmaster training techniques, procedures and doctrine," mentioned Wood.

The current jumpmaster instructors are: MSgt. Joe R. Wood, SFCs Robert G. Brown, Robert L. Dunston, Roy W. Hart, Joe Villarreal, SSgts. James D. Meschberger, John Turnmire and Barry O. Smith. Seven of the instructors are from the Jump Training Branch and one from the Tower Training Branch of the Airborne Department.

The eight jumpmaster instructors have a total of 106 years military service, 92 years on jump status and 60 years as jumpmasters.

Airborne past facts researched

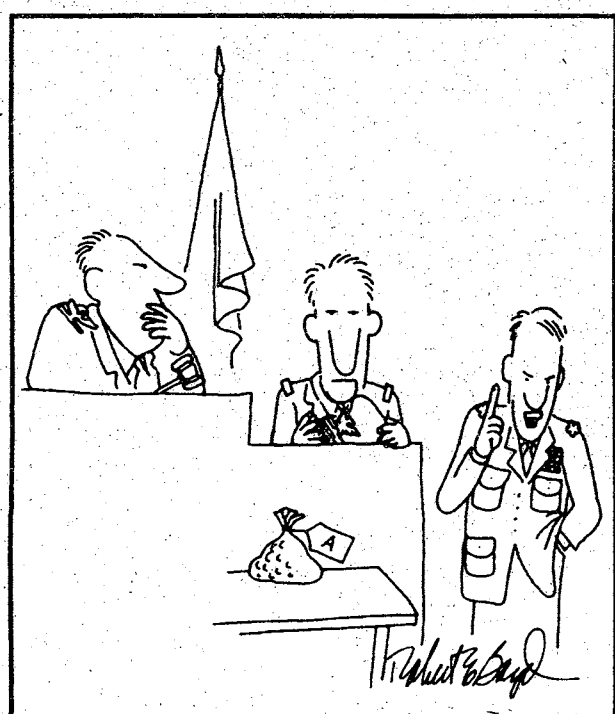
The Airborne Department, U. S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., is interested in obtaining historical information concerning active duty service members who participated in military combat parachute operations during World War II.

Any service member who is still on active duty and participated in a military combat parachute jump or was assigned to an airborne unit during World War II is requested to contact the Airborne Department.

This information will be used to set up a historical tribute to our active duty service members who served in the airborne community during World War II.

Information should be sent to: Director, Airborne Department; USAIS; ATTN: ATSH-A; Admin. Officer; Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, or call commercial 404-545-1873 or Autovon 835-1873.



"Let's get this straight, Lieutenant—you claim you traded your aircraft for this bag of magic beans, hereafter referred to as Prosecution Exhibit A—is that correct?"

'Early-outs' dates set

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--Soldiers scheduled for separation from Active duty Dec. 12, 1980 through Jan. 6, 1981 will be eligible for "early-outs", according to DA officials.

These eligible soldiers will be separated between Dec. 11-17 or as soon as possible, if they don't want to wait until their normal release date.

Soldiers will be released according to the following schedule:

| Current ESA/ETS Date | Target Separation Date |
|---|---|
| Dec. 12-26, 1980 | Dec. 11, 1980 |
| Dec. 27-28, 1980 | Dec. 12, 1980 |
| Dec. 29, 1980-Jan. 1, 1981 | Dec. 15, 1980 |
| Jan. 2-4, 1981 | Dec. 16, 1980 |
| Jan. 5-6, 1981 | Dec. 17, 1980 |

To prevent early and late arrivals at separation transfer points, overseas commanders are asked to make sure members being separated under this program be returned in time to meet this schedule.

Officers eligible for early release under this program, however, may be kept on Active duty until their normal release date if necessary for unit operations.

Soldiers not eligible for early release dates are:

- Reserve Component soldiers on Active duty for training .
- Soldiers scheduled for retirement.
- Officers having DA approved release or resignation dates or those who are being involuntarily separated.
- Personnelto whom the provisions of AR 600-31 apply.

Soldiers with approved terminal leave will have their leave date adjusted to reflect the new separation date.

For additional information on the 'early-out' program and the liberal leave policy for the holiday season, check DA Circular 612-80-1, July 15, 1980.

Education dollars

Work-study helps out

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — IF you're planning to enter college in the fall, your GI Bill will help, but you may have trouble earning additional money to supplement that benefit.

If you do, check out the Veterans Administration's (VA) work-study program.

Students can receive $775 in addition to their regular education assistance allowance by working up to 250 hours per semester for VA.

Veterans with a 30 percent or greater service connected disability are given priority for participation in the program. Also, consideration is given to financial need, motivation and the nature of work to be done.

Veterans don't have to work the 250 hours, but may work any portion of the time that meets their financial needs and fits their individual study programs.

Jobs for VA-related work are available on a given campus or at VA facility.

As soon as the employment agreement is processed, students may receive an advance of up to $2500, this covers the first 100 hours of work.

After the first 100 hours, VA will pay students after each 50 hours of work.

Don't let money problems, interfere with your studies. If you need extra cash, contact your local VA office or veterans counselor on campus, for assistance.

New washers, dryers put in

By Tim Boivin

Wring out the old and bring in the new. No, it's not New Years yet, it's just the Housing Division of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering(DFAE) installing new washing and drying machines in billets across Fort Benning.

Dick Grace, chief of the housing division of DFAE, said, "Salon Automated Services, Inc. of Doraville, Ga. was awarded a $165,000 contract to install 1,300 new washers and dryers in troop billets, basic officer's quarters, basic enlisted quarters and transient billets. The installation should be over within two months of the beginning of the contract, which ws Oct. 1."

The machines, owned and maintained solely by Salon, will last as long as the troops take care of them. Grace said, "This doesn't happen every year. We worked hard to get the money for these new machines and now it's up to the soldiers to take care of them."

One area that has been attributed in the past to the inoperation of the machines was negligence in operating the machines. Grace urged, "If you aren't familiar with the way to properly operate the machines, please contact your orderly room for help. If you see someone who is abusing the machines, for your sake and other soldier's sake, let your orderly room know that they are being abused."

The contract is for one year with a possible renewal for a maximum of three years. Grace explained, "With the new machines in place, we hope to reduce the frequency of breakdowns and provide a better laundering service to the soldiers. This way, a soldier won't have to worry that he'll get his laundry done, say on inspection night, because only one or even no machines are operating instead of the usual three."

Billy Sandlin, DFAE washer and dryer repair inspector, is supervising the installation of the machines. He said, "The most common problem, due to negligence, is overloading of the machines. Most of the time we go out to repair a machine it was because soldiers didn't know the machines were overloaded. Soldiers need to follow operating instructions on the machines and, if the machines break down, report it to DFAE right away. Don't let it sit there for days on end."

SFC Edward Lewis, whose company (Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade) received new machines Wednesday, said, "The new washers and dryers will be a big help and a morale booster for the troops. The next three or four formations I'm going to make sure the soldiers know how to properly let the machines run through their cycles and not to overload them."

APRT: New program works so Army stays fit to fight

WASHINGTON(ARNEWS)--"Fit to fight." That's what the Army's new physical readiness test (APRT) program is all about, say DA training officials.

An "immediate action" interim change to the Army physical fitness and weight control regulation (AR 600-9) explains the new three event APRT. According to the official, the change:

* Says to start the new program, including the over-40 physical readiness program, immediately.

* Provides an outline on the over over-40 program which will also be printed in a new field manual (FM) 21-20.

* Puts men and women under a single FM 21-20. The FM 35-20, which deals with a separate women's physical fitness program and test, is being rescinded.

The officels explained that there are provisions for shifting from the old to the new program. The provisions allow the use of the old phsical fitness test, if already scheduled, until Nov. 30, 1980. "Moreover," the official said, " from how until Nov. 30, the new test will be used only as a training vehicle and not for record. This gives the soldier time to adjust to the new test and standards." After Nov. 30 the new APRT can be give to soldiers for record.

The major change of the new APRT is that there is now one test for all soldiers, regardless of male or female gender or type of assignment. The test includes sit-ups, push-ups and the two-mile run, the official commented. While those over 40 are currently subject to only the two-mile run event, this may also change in a year to include the other two events, he added.

Both sit-up and push-up tests will now have a two-minute time limit as opposed to the former one-minute limit, offered the official.

He added that standards for push-ups and sit-ups are tougher. The push-ups, however, will be done differently under the new program.

The push-ups will still be started from the "front leaning rest" position, the official said. The tested individual will lower his or her body, bending the elbows wntil the upper arms, shoulder and lower back are straight and parallel to the ground. When the individual's body returns to the front leaning rest postition with the elbows locked, it will be counted as one push-up, the official said. Push-ups will be done the same way by men and women soldiers.

Sit-ups remain as they were under the old program with the knees bents at 90-degree andles and feet held to the ground by another soldier. Fingers will be joined behind the head. However, there is no requirement to touch elbows and shoulders to the ground. Only the hands and back must touch.

Accrding to the official, two-mile run times are faster for most age groups. There are no other changes in the two-mile run event.

In order to receive a passing score under the new APRT, soldiers must score at least 60 points in each event and have a total score of 180 points.

New APRT testing

Standards set for test

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--In announcing the new Army Physical Readiness Test (APRT) Program getting underway now, DA Training officials also released new scoring standards to be used.

Officials say the standards are tougher than the standards under the old physical training program.

The following tables will be used under the new APRT. The first figure shown in each column is the minimum number needed to pass the test, while the second figure is the number needed to score the maximum 100 points in each event.

Men Under 40

| age | pushups | situps | two-mile run |

Sheriff's Target

Once again Halloween is upon us all. This night of monsters, ghosts, and goblins has been a tradition in the U.S. since Colonial times. Young children receive an opportunity to enjoy themselves by "trick or treating" throughout their neighborhoods. They usually receive a handsome prize of assorted candies for their labors. Adults of all ages enjoy themselves by handing out candies to the youngsters and by reflecting on the joyous times experienced on this occassion when they were younger.

Provost Marshal Col. Ward

In order to maintain Halloween as a joyous and happy occassion for all, certain restrictions have been established by the Assistant Post Commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The hours of Halloween tonight will be from 6-9 p.m. Only preteenage children (12 years old and younger) are expected to participate. Parents are requested to supervise and accompany their small children while they are on their "trick or treats,"

Military Police patrols will be in the post housing areas to assist and insure children are safe while participating in the Halloween activities. Special military police patrols will also be patrolling the housing areas to increase crime prevention efforts on this night.

Parents are reminded to instruct children to:

- Stay out of the streets; cross streets at designated crossing areas; and use the sidewalks.
- Not to eat any candy until parents have inspected it.
- Know their home telephone number and address should they get lost.
- Not to accept any perishable items (fruit, unwrapped candy, etc.).
- Obey the instructions of the military police.

The American Optometric Association warns that ill-fitting masks or ones with too small eyeholes can block a child's vision of holes in the ground, obstacles in the streets, oncoming cars, or steps and curbs. I'm sure that we all want this Halloween to be happy and memorable occassion for our children, so let's help them meet that goal.

Troops go through OSUT

North Carolina's troops train here

Three hundred and ninety-seven members of North Carolina's 4th Brigade (Infantry OSUT), 108th Division (Training), recently participated in annual training (AT) here.

This year's AT has taken a different direction than previously. It has been a new experience and the reservists have accepted it with postive attitudes and pride in professionalism. For the first time the brigade has had the opportunity to work with the mission for which it was organized-one station unit training (OSUT).

The brigade's AT-80 job is to perform the same training mission as the Fort Benning's 1st Infantry Training Brigade. This includes satelization for the four battalions assigned within this brigade.

Since this is the first time we've worked with the OSUT concept, the understanding of its meaning has become clearer.

The OSUT concept represents the consolidation of basic training and advanced individual training. It is more econonmical to train in the OSUT concept, due to lower transportation costs and the morale and attitude of the student soldiers is high due to the continuity involved by remaining on one post.

OSUT retains retention award

By Patricia Fowler

For the second consecutive quarter, 1st Battalion, 108th Regiment, 4th Brigade (Infantry One Station Unit Training), 108th Division, Lumberton, N.C., has been presented the Quarterly Retention Award by 4th Brigade.

Colonel James R. Oliver, brigade commander, presented this award to Lt. Col. George W. Goldsmith, 1st Battalion commander here during Annual Training 1980 (AT-80).

Even though 1st Battalion was a Combat Support Training (CST) unit prior to reorganization in December 1978 and is now Infantry (OSUT), the unit has maintained a high level of morale and devotion to the Army Reserve.

This award means a great deal to the unit members and credit for the battalion's continuing success is given to SSgt. Sarah Oxendine, retention Noncommissioned Officer.

Annual training at Fort Benning has been a rewarding experience and things have gone so well that many of the soldiers in the 1st Battalion would like to extend their training for an additional two weeks at the home of the Infantry.

'Gas-savers' pay own way

By Brad Byers
U.S. Department of Energy

There's never been a shortage of devices to add onto your car, or to put into your gas tank or crankcase, that claim to give your better gas mileage.

Surprise! Some of them actually work, under some conditions. A few even pay for themselves in gasoline savings.

Among the most worthwhile "additives" are the new improved-friction motor oils. On the average, they improve gas mileage about five percent. And that is equal to savings about six cents a gallon on gas, or 80 cents to $1.00 at each fill-up.

There are two types of improved-friction oils now available at most service stations; regular motor oils with special additives, and synthetic oils. They test about the same for increased miles-per-gallon, although the range of results in different tests is very wide.

Both cost more than the regular oils, and the synthetics cost about twice as much as the other improved oils. Synthetics, however, are advertised for less-frequent oil changes (as much as 25,000 miles between changes).

If your car is still under warranty, check first with your dealer before choosing a synthetic and the less-frequent change interval.

Laboratory and road tests of two types of oil give results ranging from small losses in fuel economy to improvements of nine percent. It is reasonable to expect an average improvement of about five percent, in combined city and highway driving, for both types of oil.

You'll have to do your own figuring to determine whether you're likely to save money as well as gasoline. It depends on how much you pay for the oil, and how often you have it changed.

Playing Our Tune

Tune-ups save gas. Right?
Right.
Tune-ups are expensive.
Right?
Right again. You're not likely to save enough gasoline to pay for a full tune-up; but you need occassional tune-ups to keep your car running well, and increased gas mileage in added benefit.

In many cases, a less-expensive "minor" tune-up will yield significant gas savings. This means cleaning and regapping the plugs and points and adjusting the timing.

An evaluation for the Department of Transportation concluded that it is reasonable to expect three percent average improvement right after a tune-up. The year-long improvement would be about one-and-one-half percent, because the tuned condition gradually deteriorates.

This means that the average driver, who spends $1,000 a year on gas, should save about $15 from an annual tune-up.If you're willing to invest some dollars in hardware, there are a number of gauges and gadgets on the market that can help you help yourself to save gas. Tests show that the average driver is unlikely to save enough to pay for some of the gadgets. But if you are above-average in your determination to increase those miles-per-gallon, the gauges may pay for themselves. This is especially true if you can install the devices yourself.

Prices vary so much that none will be listed here.

Vacuum Gauges

A manifold vacuum gauge with a dial face, which can be mounted on or below the dash, measures the pressure in the engine intake manifold. It is a good indicator of the amount of fuel being consumed. Maintaining a high and steady vacuum pressure, as indicated on the gauge, can help you keep a light, steady foot on the accelerator when cruising. The gauge also indicates the benefits of decelerating versus braking. In tests, some drivers have increased their mileage by 24 percent using the guage as a reference. But some other drivers actually got worse mileage, perhaps from watching the gauge instead of traffic.

In a fairly typical test at Georgia Tech involving five vehicles, improvements ranged from 8.5 percent to 13.6 percent.

If you've strongly motivated to improve mileage, the gauge can be a big help.

Miles Per-Gallon Meters

Another more-expensive gauge that's fun to use is the miles-per-gallon meter. It givess you continous reading of the miles-per-gallon being obtained by your car. Mpg meters that add up the gasoline you use on each trip can be especially useful for figuring out the best routes, time of the day to travel, and costs of short trips.

However, there are some limitations on many current models.

- There's usually a short delay in the meter's calculations. You see what you were doing a few seconds ago rather than right now.
- In rapidly changing traffic conditions, the meter may be of little use. It won't remind you very effectively not to zip in and out of traffic.
- On the highway, the meter will show you convincingly that 40 miles-per-hour uses less gas than 55; but you already know that.

A good way to avoid wasteful, uneven speeds when on the highway is to use cruise control. This device, purchased as original equipment or added on, holds your car to any speed you select when on the highway. It is deactivated at a touch of the brake. You can override it with the accelerator to drive faster, and on many models it returns to the pre-set speed when you remove the foot from the pedal.

The gas-saving advantage of cruise control is that it prevents unintentional speeding and variations in speed. You can set it at a steady 55, stop worrying about the highway patrol, and know that you probably are saving gas as well.

Maybe it's not a lemon; maybe it's . . .

CAR NEGLECT

Ever wonder why the family car seems to break down when you take the wife and offspring on a weekend outing? The neighbor across the street never seems to have any problems with his car and it's the same year as yours.

You may say you have a "lemon"—or just bad luck with cars. The same problems came up with the last one you had.

Regardless of the make of automobile, these following items, if kept in mind prior to extensive driving, could mean a safe and less expensive trip:

TIRES—Air pressure should be checked every two weeks. Too little air will cause excessive wear and make tire hydroplane when roads are wet. Too much air causes rapid wear on the center rib, and reduces handling and braking capabilities. Check your tires according to the tire manufacturer's recommendation.

IGNITION—If the car is hard to start, a worn ignition system is usually at fault. Regular tuneups between 12,000 and 15,000 miles can eliminate the problems and increase the gas mileage. To make your battery last longer, check the fluid level frequently.

COOLING SYSTEM—Hoses and belts wear out, and usually at the most inconvenient time. Hoses usually last about two years or 24,000 miles. Some last longer, but don't count on it. Check the thermostat once a year, and insure that the radiator pressure cap seals properly and the valve is sound.

FILTERS—Cleaning and replacing various filters is a must. Abide by the manufacturer's time change and check schedule.

LUBRICATION—When the manufacturer's lubrication schedule is neglected, a fitting can freeze up mechanically and cause much more damage than the cost of a lube job.

BRAKES—Trying to get too many stops out of old linings may score the brakedrum and cost you extra on your next brake job. At the regular service intervals, check the master cylinder for adequate fluid level and leaks.

SHOCK ABSORBERS—Worn shocks cause cars to sway dangerously on curves and during lane changes. They usually wear out at about 30,000 miles.

EXHAUST SYSTEM—Check when car is on the rack. Replace mufflers and tail pipes when holes are discovered. Prevent carbon monoxide from causing you problems.

How About That?

By William W. Erbach
36th Engineer Group chaplain

I heard a story about Abraham Lincoln and shooting stars. Once Lincoln was visiting the home of a farmer. This friend happened to be up in the middle of the night, and he looked out the window and saw a whole lot of shooting stars. I've done the same thing, especially when on a camping trip, and you lie on the sleeping bag looking up at rhe beautiful sky. It is neat to see the stars shooting across the sky. They are brilliant and interesting, and they capture the imagination.

Well, the farmer had never seen such a sight in his life and he became very much afraid. He wakened Lincoln and told him the world was coming to an end. The heavens were falling down around them. Lincoln took a look outside and reassured the farmer. He told him to go back to bed, that they were only shooting stars, but that the great constellation would still stand. How About That?

I still remember that whenever I see a shooting star the greatest constellations still will stand. It's a comfortable thought. We all experience a lot of shooting stars in our lives, bright flashes that end in nothing, that disappear from sight even while we watch them. We all have bright plans end with disappointment. But the world still turns. The great constellations still stands.

The next time you are disappointed remember Abraham Lincoln and the shooting stars. Shooting stars make a beautiful and awesome sight, but when they are gone, you still have the universe God created and God is always with you to steady you along the way. The great constellations still stands.

Insurance returns won't double

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Full coverage in both the Veterans Group Life Insurance (VGLI) and the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) won't pay double returns for your beneficiary. The government insures all soldiers for a maximum of $20,000 whether they have full coverage under both programs or one, according to DA officials.

The Veterans Administration (VA) reports, however, that some soldiers obviously don't know about the $20,000 limitation and maintain full coverage in both SGLI and VGLI. Such situations are not discovered until claims are filed with both programs, VA says.

Those eligible for SGLI and VGLI may choose full coverage in one program or partial coverage in both programs for a combined amount not to exceed $20,000.

Officials advise soldiers to consider the monthly premiums and how long their coverage will last. SGLI insures soldiers of all ages for a flat monthly rate of $3 while on active duty and 120 days after discharge. In some cases of disability, soldiers may be covered under SGLI for up to one year after discharge.

VGLI, on the other hand, lasts for five years after discharge from active duty and charges according to age. Those 34 and younger pay $3.40 per month, while those 35 and older pay $6.80 per month.

VA officials also remind soldiers that coverage under SGLI and/or VGLI in any amount does not affect their right to keep National Service Life Insurance and/or U.S. Government Life Insurance.

ACS 'takes care of its ov

By Becky Bulgrin

The refrain "The Army takes care of its own" is still an essential ingredient of military life. The Army Community Service (ACS) does just that - takes care of its own.

ACS combines the expertise of a military trained civilian staff and volunteer workers to provide many services to members of the military community.

The general morale of the soldier and his family is improved due to the availability of prompt, reliable information and counseling services found at ACS.

Conveniently located at the yellow archway in Bldg. 83, the Welcome Center is the core of ACS. Many of the ACS programs available are based there.

The Welcome Center Reception Desk co-ordinates programs, activities and information sources for the Fort Benning community. Available at the reception area is a wealth of local information from "allotments" to "yard sales." A library of data from every U.S. military installation in the world is available for study.

ACS office hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Some of the services and programs available are:

Sally Entlich, asst. volunteer supervisor at ACS, checks the items that SSG Arnold Goodwin receives from the Lending Closet, a program sponsored by ACS to help new arrivals get settled. Goodwin got here before his hold baggage did, and he needed some basic household items until his arrive from Berlin.

The Lending Closet Program is open to soldiers assigned here as permanent party or to attend the Infantry Officer's Basic Course, Infantry Officer's Advanced Course or Officer Candidate School when accompanied by their dependents. It is also open to allied officers accompanied by dependents. The service is not normally available to airborne students.

Essential household items are loaned to service members in the event their own household goods have not yet arrived. Most items are issued for a 30-day period with two-week extensions available on many items.

Soldiers PCSing to another post who already shipped their household goods are also eligible for the service, but all items borrowed must be returned 72 hours prior to departure. Exceptional situations are handled on an individual basis by the chief of ACS.

Emergency Food Locker

The Emergency Food Locker provides food for families in emergency situations. Often, due to financial problems, a soldier's pay is not sufficient to cover expenses for the entire month. If a soldier runs out of food for his family, ACS provides the soldier with a three-day food bag to feed the family.

If, after three days, the soldier needs more food, ACS will examine his case carefully before deciding how to handle it. Usually, ACS will give the soldier food and money to help supplement the soldier's income to get through the emergency, according to Maj. Charles H. O'Dell, chief of ACS.

The Food Locker is stocked by donations from local military units, women's organizations and individual members of the military community here. Volunteers on the Food Locker Committee initiate donation requests to the units, maintain the supplies through purchases from the Volunteer Welfare Association Fund and help shelve the items when received at the Welcome Center.

Financial home management

Another alternative to assist the servicemember in alleviating a crisis is counseling in financial home management. The Financial Home Management Department offers instruction and counseling services to individuals and groups. Volunteers in the Budget Committee schedule individuals and families for monthly interviews on debt resolution and budget maintenance. Other volunteers are invited by various post units to present an hour block of instruction for basic financial management and consumer education.

After calling for an appointment at the ACS Welcome Center, the soldier is asked to bring pay vouchers for the previous three months, all credit contracts, a list of utilities and rent expenses, food bills, any letters from creditors, saving statements, and anything else that might help the counselor understand the soldier's financial situation more clearly.

The financial home management advisor gives the soldier a form to fill out listing income and expenditures. By looking at the form, the advisor can decide the proper course of action to pursue.

Depending upon the circumstances, the financial home management advisor may contact the soldier's creditors and explain the situation using the information provided on the form. In the letter, the advisor will ask the creditor to lower the payment. However, this is done only if the servicemember shows serious intent to take care of his payments and signs an agreement to take care of his obligations.

vn'

Financial home management advisors help the lient until he learns to be self-reliant. The most ommon problems, according to Carol Simms, ACS nancial home management advisor, are buying ttle things that add up and not putting any money side for unexpected circumstances. The financial ome management advisors help get finances traightened out and show the clients how to keep it iat way.

rmy Emergency Relief

The Army Emergency Relief (AER) office prodes financial assistance to members of the U.S. rmy, active or retired and their dependents when a inancial emergency arises due to reasons beyond heir control. Also included are widows and ependent children of deceased soldiers to include Iational Guard and Reserves on active duty 30 days r more.

Financial assistance may be extended either as a on-interest bearing loan, as an outright grant, or as combination of both. Whether or not a loan is given y AER depends upon the servicemember's finanialstate, management of funds, existing emergency tuations, if any, and his ability to repay the loan, ccording to lst Lt. Sue Rosbeck, AER officer.

Some of the typical situations for which soldiers e assisted are: non-receipt of pay, allotments or lowances; loss of pay or other personal funds; nergency medicl, dental or hospital expenses; neral expenses; travel expenses due to leave of an nergency nature; payment of initial rent or ayment to prevent eviction and deprivation of ependents due to emergencies not covered ove.

An active duty servicemember needing an AER an should bring the matter up to his commanding ficer or first sergeant. DA Form 1103 must be mpleted and signed by the company commander. he servicemember should take two copies, along ith a pay voucher for the current period, to the elcome Center. A military I.D. card and supporting documents relating to the hardship are also quired. Details are available in USAIC 608.4.

cial Services

The Social Services Department provides emerncy service and counseling in family problems. rvice is provided by volunteers in the Family Care mmittee by offering emergency foster home re, friendship to participants in the abused spouse elter program, and follow-up home visits as quested.

mmunity Life Centers

Community Life Centers in the various housing eas are intended to provide a central meeting ace for local activities. Volunteers in these centers e assisted by active duty chaplains and service embers. Teen dances, parenting classes and e-school programs are developed as needed and sired by the neighborhood residents. Presently, ere are four Community Life Centers - McGraw anor, Custer Terrace, Lavoie Manor and Bouton eights/Davis Hill.

The Community Life Centers are devoted to the nprovement of "quality of life" in the communies, limited only by the imagination of participants. hey also facilitate communication between comunities and post officials.

eager to provide friendship, language and cultural support to newcomers to the United States.

Members maintain their ethnic identity and share their customs and culture with the Fort Benning community through special programs throughout the year.

Annual social activities include family picnics, garden parties, Christmas dinners, luncheon and fashion shows, baby showers and an anniversary dinner-dance. Fund raising activities include yard sales and a Christmas bazaar.

The group also sponsors G.E.D. classes free to all military dependents. Qualified teachers and instructional materials are provided by the Muscogee County Adult Education Department. Classes are held at Bldg. 83 on Mondays and Thursdays from 6+15 p.m. to 9 p.m. September through June.

The International Wives' Club meets on the first Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at ACS.

Citizenship classes

Citizenship classes are offered twice a year (fall and springnteers of the Citizenship Committee. The course prepares instruction in the basics of American History and organization and operation of our government system. This instruction aids the students in qualifying for the American Citizenship examination.

Battered Spouse Program

Social work staff and volunteers maintain a program to shelter and cousel individuals who are the victims of spouse abuse. Services include the provision of physical security and referral to other support services.

A battered spouse shelter was recently opened here for abused wives. ACS will provide access to the shelter if the woman can get to the Welcome Center and she can stay there for up to two weeks. To contact the shelter during duty hours call 545-1233. After duty hours and on weekends call the Field Officer of the Day (FOD) at 545-3214.

Special Kids is a popular program designed to enrich the lives of families with handicapped children. A summer camp is organized and monthly activities throughout the year are planned by volunteers.

The Army Child Advocacy Program (ACAP) is a fairly new program . ACS is a referral source for reporting suspected cases of child abuse and neglect. The Social Work staff provides counseling to families involved in the child abuse/neglect syndrome and conducts an on-going educational program on child abuse.

The Sav-A-Toy Program is a Christmas activity designed to offer toys to needy families at no cost. Volunteers and staff members advertise, collect, repair and divide donated toys as requested through chaplains and Community Life Centers.

Welcome Packet

The Welcome Packet is probably one of the oldest and best known volunteer services that ACS provides. Volunteers collect maps, brochures, pamphlets, and tourist information of particular interest to newcomers. Packets are mailed as requested to incoming families before they arrive. All ACS's in the system exchange packets at least once a year for filing in the Installation Library.

ACS Volunteer Corps

A strong corps of volunteer workers is an essential ingredient of the military community and is needed for an effective ACS operation.

Recruitment and retention is certainly difficult due to constant relocation of service families, but the enthusiam generated by active, caring volunteers insures participation and appreciation by the community.

There are always job opportunities at ACS to fit anyone's capabilities. Persons interested in volunteer work may call Don Drach, Volunteer Supervisor, at 545-1169/1233 for information.

Vet's rights help job seekers

Are you about to leave active duty and return to the civilian world? If so, the chances are that you will be faced with the problem of looking for a job when you do separate from the service.

However, before you start pounding the pavement looking for employment, it might be wise to consider some of the rights and benefits you have earned as a veteran.

First, there are the veterans' reemployment rights. Under these rights, if you are eligible, you are entitled to be reemployed at the job you had before entering active duty. To qualify, you must have left other than temporary employment to enter military service; must have served not more than five years after Aug. 1, 1961, after leaving the employment to which you wish to be restored. However, any service over four years must have been at the request and convenience of the Government.

In addition, you must have been separated honorably or under honorable conditions; and must still be qualified to perform the duties of that job or, if disabled while in military service some other job in the employer's organization of comparable seniority, status and pay.

In the case of state and local employment, veterans returning to those jobs are protected if they have been released from the military training or service on or after Dec. 3, 1974. However, the time limits are extended in the case of a member of the Selected Reserve who was called up for active duty (other than training), by the length of the active duty if it lasted less than 90 days.

When applying for reemployment under these rights you are entitled to the position you would have attained if you had not been absent, or in another position of like senority, status and pay, including all benefits failing due after reemployment which you would have accrued by seniority.

You are entitled to protection against discharge without cause for one year. (six months in the case of a Reservist or Guardsman returning from active duty for training, or a member of the Selected Reserve returning from a call-up to active duty, other than training, for not more than 90 days.)

There is a 90-day limitation

An important thing to remember is that you must apply for reemployment within 90 days after separation from active duty or release from hospitalization which has continued for less than one year immediately after active duty.

Another area to consider when seeking a job employment in the federal government. As a result of the Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, a policy has been created promoting maximum job opportunities within the federal government for qualified disabled veterans and Vietnam era veterans.

Under the law, all federal agencies are required to establish affirmative action plans concerning employment and advancement of disabled veterans and other handicapped persons. All veterans may be eligible to receive helpful advantages in federal employment such as additional points added to passing scores in job examinations, waivers of certain physical requirements, first considerations, waivers of certain jobs, and preference for retention in layoff.

In addition, certain educationally disadvantaged Vietnam era veterans are eligible for special noncompetitive appointments under the Veterans Readjustment Appointment (VRA) authority. More specific information concerning the above benefits and federal job information can be obtained by contacting a Federal Job Information Center of the Office of Personnel Management. The Federal Job Information Center in the Washington, D.C. area is located at 1900 E. St., NW, Washington, D.C. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8:15 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The phone number is 737-9616.

VA will assist

Veterans may also inquire at any Veterans Administration (VA) facility for information about employment in the federal government. In addition, the VA will assist veterans who are seeking employment by providing information about job marts, on-the-job and apprenticeship training opportunities, and other employment opportunities, through VA Regional Offices and U.S. Veterans Assistance Centers. The VA Regional Office for the Washington Metropolitan Area is located at 941 N. Capitol St., NE, Washington, D.C., phone 872-1151.

Other employment assistance is provided to veterans through local state employment service offices throughout the country. The U.S. Department of Labor is the federal agency responsible for providing employment offices.

A Veterans Employment Representative at the state employment office will provide functional supervision of job counseling, testing and employment placement services. In addition, priority in referral to job openings and training programs is given to eligible veterans, with preferential treatment for disabled veterans.

Unemployment compensation

If you fnd yourself separated from active duty and still don't have a job, you may be eligible to apply for unemployment compensation. This will provide a weekly income for a limited period of time to help meet basic needs while seeking employment. The amount and duration of the payments are governed by state laws and may vary considerably.

To be entitled to the benefits, veterans must have served 90 days or more on continous active service (unless separated earlier because of a service-connected disability); must have been discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable; must not have been given a bad conduct discharge or, in case of officers, they must not have resigned "for the good of the service." In addition, applicants must be both able to work and available for work.

Generally, unemployment compensation benefits are not paid to persons receiving certain educational assistance or vocational subsistence allowances from the VA.

Veterans should apply immediately after leaving the service at their nearest state employment service or job service center (do not apply at the VA) and present their DD Form 214 (discharge) to establish their type of separation from service.

Making the switch from active duty to civilian employment can be unnerving and frustrating if you aren't prepared. However, by making use of your rights and benefits as a veteran, the switch can be painless and rewarding.

Jacks for changes

Bumper jacks are intended for one purpose only and that is changing a tire. It's not suitable for extended wheel work or any work that puts you or a mechanic under the car.

Make sure the jack platform is on a smooth, level surface and the shaft is perpendicular to the ground. Position the bumper hook properly according to your car-owner's manual and make sure the jack lock lever is in the full-up position before attempting to raise the car.

Press down the service brake and then set the emergency brake. This will lock all four wheels. Then shift into "park" on automatic transmission vehicles or "reverse" on manual transmissions.

Keep children and pets away from the work area.

If you're changing a tire, loosen the lug nuts before jacking the wheel off the ground. This makes it easier to unfasten the nuts. A sharp pull on a lug wrench while the car is on the jack could cause the vehicle to fall. When replacing the tire, semi-tighten the lugs while the wheel is raised. Finish the job when the wheel is on the ground.

Jack slowly to avoid shaking the car.

Check to be sure nothing is under the car before lowering it to the ground.

Leamon Hall spent much of the game scrambling for yardage as three offensive linemen were out with injuries for the Gamecock contest. # Injured Doughboys lose 31-14

By Tim Boivin

The Fort Benning Doughboys, decimated by injuries, traveled to Jacksonville(Ala.) State University Saturday and dropped a 31-14 decision to the Gamecocks.

The Doughboy offense was hardest hit, missing two receivers and three linemen. The fact that the Doughoys were supposed to play the junior varsity and instead went up against the second team varsity didn't help matters any. The Jacksonville varsity is ranked fourth in the nation in Division II NCAA football.

The Doughboys sorely missed tight end Clennie Brundidge(82) last weekend gainst Jacksonville State. Brundidge was one of five Doughboy starters who didn't make the trip becuse of injuries.

The Doughboys were missing their two main receivers, Clennie Brundidge and Freddie Suggs, in addition to linemen John Gronski, David Holly and Cecil Walker. Their field goal kicker also PCS'd to Fort Dix.

Gamecock running back Robert Driver set up the first score of the game by rambling around left end for 38 yards to get the ball to the Doughboy 37. One play later, tailback Kevin Ware squeezed through the grasps of four Doughboys and into the end zone for a 7-0 lead.

The Doughboy's Minor Swackhamer recovered a Jacksonville fumble at the Gamecock 42 and Hall hit tight end Larry Anderson, who played a fine game in defeat, between Baker and safety Jim Ryan for a 34 yard gain to the eight. Two plays later Hall rolled left and hit Robert Jackson from the six with 2:02 left in the half. Defensive back Howard Hunter came in and tried his luck at kicking but his boot was low and the Gamecocks blocked it.

Jacksonville took the second half kickoff and drove 77 yards in six plays to increase their lead. The key play was a quarterback sneak by Allan Porter on a third and one at the Doughboy 39 that gained 35 yards. Running back Daryl Farley ran past the grasp of Doughboy linebacker John Marks for the score.

After an exchange of punts Jacksonville took the ball at the Doughboy 42. On first down Porter hit Fran Blanchard on the bomb for the score. Blanchard had gotten about 15 yards behind the Doughboy secondary on the play.

The Doughboys took the kickoff and Hall hit Harden up the middle. Harden broke a tackle and gained 39 yards on the play, with an additional 15 tacked on for a personal foul on the tackle. Hall then hit Anderson for 25 yards to the Gamecock eight and one play later hit James Marshall for the touchdown. The Doughboys went for two points on the extra point try and Hall hit Anderson in the right corner of the end zone for the conversion to make the score 21-14.

The Gmecocks took over and Porter threw to Robert Driver two plays later in the backfield. Driver broke a tackle and then zigzagged his way 62 yards for the score.

The Doughboys were forced to punt on their next possesion and the Gamecocks took over on the mid-field stripe. When reserve quarterback Wes Bowen tried to hit wide receiver Steve White, it appeared to the native eye that White pushed off Doughboy defensive back Freddie Mitchell. However, in the referee's eye it was Mitchell who pushed off and, despite Santaliz' vehement protest, defensive pass interference was called.

The Doughboy defense stiffened and Bobby Lane came on to kick a 37 yard field goal to finish the scoring. The Doughboy's record fell to 3-4 while Jacksonville State(traveling incognito) junior varsity improved their record to 1-1.

One shining spot in a long day for the Doughboys had to be the play of tight end Anderson. Anderson had five catches for 100 yards, one a beautiful catch between two defenders and the other an important two point conversion.

The Doughboys next game is Sunday against Auburn University at Doughboy Stadium. Game time is 3 p.m. and admission is $1 for children and $1.50 for adults.

Scoring
G-Kevin Ware, 37 run; Bobby Lane kick

Fall show

The autumn crispness begins to envelope Fort Benning this time of year with the leaves turning wondrous shades of golden brown and the childish taunts of students getting set in the ways of school after summer's relaxation. It's also time for the Fort Benning Hunt Club's Annual Fall Horse Show.

Capt. Edwin Kennedy is chairman of the event this year and is looking for even more participation than last year's record spring show. The Fall Show, to be held Nov. 8, will feature competition in 11 classes including the combined testing of dressage and jumping. The show is free and open to the public.

This year, as in year's past, the show will be held on picturesque French Polo Field at the corner of 1st Division Road and Yeager Street. The Spanish style housing around the field and the trees turning their autumn rainbows provide a beautiful setting for the show.

The show will kick off at 8:30 a.m. and last until about 3 p.m. The judging will be done by Mary Lewis of Atlanta. Refreshements will be available on the showgrounds.

If you want to showcase your(and your horses) talents in the show, you better hurry to register. The entry deadline is tomorrow. Overnight accomadations are available on a limited basis.

Track team

It ws exhilirating to hear the response to my column last week on starting a track team hear on Fort Benning. A meeting has been set up for Wednesday at Crain Hall beginning at 6 p.m. for persons interested in getting the team off its feet. That includes coaches, trainers and runners.

With the response to the boxing team as an example, Fort Benning is willing to push for a track team to get off the ground. The boxers have represented the post well and will return here Nov. 7 to take on three more teams. Where they had to start literally from scratch, the track team has an advantage.

The track team already has the equipment neccesary for training and competing stored under Doughboy Stadium. A million dollar track was installed around the football field at the Stadium and all that's needed is bodies. With the interest in running on this post so obvious, the team shouldn't have too much trouble getting off the ground. If you're interested, make sure you get to the meeting Wednesday or call me at 545-4622 for more information.

Thanks Tech

Georgia Tech, although losing to Tulane University last Saturday, showed a winner's style by sending tickets for 50 soldiers to attend the game. This is the second time this season that Georgia Tech has given away tickets to soldiers from Fort Benning and many thanks are in order for Tech.

Charlie's champs

2/10th takes title

Charlie Battery, 2/10 Infantry, defeated Company C, 1/58 Infantry, Oct. 20 winning the title of 197th Infantry Brigade Flag Football champs and a spot in the post level tournaments.

Company C started out strong, coming out of the first half with a 6-0 lead. Their first attempts at scoring were foiled when Charlie Battery's Eugene Smith batted-down a touchdown pass by Company C's quarterback Lendale Gaston.

But their next efforts came through when a pitch by Kelvin McCalister to Mike Smith resulted in Company C's first touchdown.

Company C's Danny Knight then knocked down a pass by Charlie Battery only a few feet from the goal, saving a score by Battery.

Charlie Battery got tough during the second half, starting with an interception by Eugene Smith on the 25-yard line.

After four plays, Kerry Robinson caught a long pass from Gaston and scored Battery's first TD, tieing the score 6-6.

The highlight of the game happened when Battery's Jerome Brownfield made a fantastic interception-touchdown on the two-yard line, resulting in the winning TD for Battery.

Charlie Battery remains undefeated and will go on to the post tournaments to start Tuesday.

Panthers lost first

By Bob Pate
Youth Activities correspondent

In the Pee Wee League, the Panthers went into their game with the Jets undefeated but came out of it with their first loss of the season, 14-8.

The game was a defensive struggle, scoreless through the first three quarters. In the fourth quarter, Quinton Ford rambled to paydirt from 30 yards out and Todd Gonzalez added the extra point for the Jets.

The defense was responsible for the second Jet's score when Chris Jones and Mark Butler caused a fumble inside the Panthers 10 yard line. The Panthers score came during the final 30 seconds of play on a handoff from Pete Marshall to Tyrone Crawford. Defensive standouts for the Panthers were James Sells, Tim Evans, Leslie Lane and Bill Buckner.

In Grasshopper League action, Shawn Gentry led the Seahawks 34-0 rout of the Steelers with two touchdowns. Larry Holland, Bryan Richardson and Ray Hoggard all added scores with the help of fine blocking by Gerald Sayles and Steven Cook.

Defensive players of the game for the Seahawks in the whitewash were Gregg Perry and Chris Turner. Mike Wall was impressive on offense for the Steelers while Justin Winters and Todd Walker excelled on defense.

In the Midget League, Eric Thomas filled in at fullback and led the Tri-City Panthers to a 34-6 victory over the much-improved Fort Rucker Packers. Thomas had two touchdowns and Mike Carter scored twice on long passes to pace the attack. Ike Wychc scored once and Terry Irvin made the extra point conversions. Defensive stars were Andrew Bell, Tim Hunter and Kurt Baker.

All-American event at Bragg

Benning runners finish marathon

By Bob Kuwik

The recent All American Marathon at Fort Bragg, N.C. was a great success for Fort Benning. The race consisted of runners from posts all across the United States.

Although it was rainy, cold and windy throughout the race, Fort Benning runners hung in there and was the only team to have every member complete the 26.2-mile race. There were 250 runners at the start of the marathon and 108 finished.

A special thanks goes to Post SGM Harvey Parrish who took so much of his time and effort to make this trip a great success. Without his help, the Fort Benning team wouldn't have been represented at Fort Bragg.

Dyer recently took a vacation to London, England and participated in a 54 and one-half mile ultra-marathon. He completed the race in eight hours and two minutes, placing 85th out of 130 runners.

None the less, Dyer was proud. When asked about plans for the future, Dyer said, "Never to run 54 miles again!"

Oh Boy! Did you ever have one of these terrible days?

By Jim Porter

Did you ever:

• Put your boat in the water, go up to park your car and trailer, and come back to find the old rig half-full of water because you left out the "You-know-what"?

• Toss that new $3 lure over the side of the boat and, just before it goes "splishy-splashy," remember that you hadn't tied it on your line yet.?

• Wake up at 7 a.m. and realize you were supposed to meet your fishing partner two hours earlier?

• Rummage through the five tackle boxes you carry around and find that the only lure in existence that you don't have is the one the fish are climbing in the boat to get?

• See a bass break water chasing a shad, jump up to lure a sure cast at him, and find the lure tangled around the end of the rod?

• Get the boat in the water with everything loaded, then realize that you'd left home a minor item such as the boat battery, gas can, tackle box or all your fishing rods?

• Not get in the big fish pot at the fish-off and then catch two eight-pounders?

• Leave your boat ignition key in the other car and then drive two hours to Panama City?

• Catch a good fish on the first cast of the day and then turn so snake-bit that you couldn't catch a cold?

• Run 20 miles all over the lake for nothing and find out some kid with a Zebco 202 limited out in a hour off the boat ramp?

• Grab a catfish in the wrong place?

• Go into a tackle shop and manage to get out without buying something?

• Have your favorite fishing hat condemned as a health and/or fire hazard?

• Get taken in by one of those mail order ads for a super, sure-thing, magic fishing lure that "doesn't quite" live up to your expectations?

• Find the kids using your $40 fly rod and a piece of rope to make a bull whip?

• Put your markers on a submerged island or good drop-off area and then have a water skier mistake them for a slalom course?

• Hang up your favorite lure just as your fishing partner cranks up and blasts off for the far end of the lake while your screams are lost in the wind?

• Have some smart Alec watch as you pick out a backlash and ask you if you were measuring your line?(Courtesy of the Military Bass Angler's Association and Military Outdoor's Magazine)

Benning boxers top slate

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's boxing team has been on a rollercoaster ride in the last month and hope to return home Nov.7 for the high point of their up and down ride. The boxers will take on teams from Muscogee County, Fort Stewart, Ga. and possibly Fort Campbell, Ky. The fights will be held beginning at 8 p.m.in Briant WellsField House and admission is free.

The Doughboys traveled to Fort. Stewart Oct. 10 and lost eight out of 10 matches. Fort Stewart was their nemesis the next week at Maxwell Air Force Base as the boxers came in second, three points behind Fort Stewart.

The Doughboys toned up for their homecoming by dominating matches in Montgomery, taking first place in a tournament that featured teams from Muscogee, Montgomery, Tuskegee, Opelika and Prattville, Ala.

DeWayne Edwards took his match by knockout while seven other fighters came away with victories. Winning by decision were Luis Hernandez, Tony Stringer, William Gonzalez, Darrin Turman, Manuel Dixon, Carlos Young and Gregory Staten.

Jack Swift, the noted Columbus Ledger-Enquirer columnist, and members of his club will hold a martial arts demonstration at the intermission of the smoker Nov. 7.

CISM ceremony

The XXI CISM games, held this week at Fort Benning, will come to a close today with a ceremony on York Field in front of Infantry Hall. The ceremonies will begin at 5 p.m.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend the ceremonies. CISM drew more shooters from more nations this year than the Moscow Olympics did.

Chinese Goju

The Fort Benning Black Dragon Chinese Goju martial art's school went to Montgomery, Ala. Saturday and won four out of four matches from the H.C. Hall Karate School.

Prior to the fights an outstanding demonstration of Ippons, or one-step sparring, was given by Regenia Faust, otherwise known as the Dragon Lady, and 1st Degree Black Belt Jessie Hicks. Hicks also aided Dale A. Butcher in demonstrating Chinese Goju self-defense techniques.

The first place winners in the White Belt Division were Alex Nelson, Butcher and Ray Mitchell. Two Yellow Belts bouts were cancelled which were to feature Black Dragon's Faust and Kennedy Smith.

The main event was the Black Belt fight between David L. Wynn and Hall's Sylvester Cleland. Wynn defeated Cleland in the full contact fight, which went to sudden death. Wynn prevailed by living up to his Chinese Goju name, Dai Lung, which means Fighting Dragon.

Saturday was Wynn's last fight as a Shodan. He was promoted to Nidan, or 2nd Degree Black Belt, Tuesday by instructor Sensei McCall.

Classes in Chinese Goju are held at Kimbro Gym on Sand Hill every Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m. For more information contact McCall at 544-2988 or 682-2406.

US shooters zero in

By Tommy Pool

The military shooting teams of the U.S. and the People's Republic of China met in competition last Thursday in pre-CISM rifle and pistol competition at Fort Benning's Parks and Phillips firing ranges.

The match was conducted as a reciprocal gesture for the U.S. Olympic shooting team which visited Peking, China earlier this year. This is the first visit ever by the Chinese shooting team to the United States, and only their third appearance in the CISM championships.

Top scoring individuals in the competition were Lt. Col. Lones Wigger and SFC Charles McCowan, both of USAMU. Wigger's score of 581 out of 600 points in the 300 meter Standard Rifle Event was unofficially four points over the present world record of 577.

In pistol competition, SFC McCowan won both the 25 meter Centerfire and Military Rapid Fire Pistol Events with 591 and 596 points respectively. His score of 596 in military rapid fire, pistol, was also two points over the existing world record for the event. SFC Thomas Woods, of USAMU, also fired a 596 in the rapid fire match, but lost first place in the tie breaking procedure.

Rely purchases refunded

Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stores are now making refunds to customers who purchased Rely tampons, AAFES officials announced recently.

Rely tampons are being recalled after the manufacturer, Proctor and Gamble, suspended sales of the tampon. The action is the result of the alleged connection between the tampons and Toxic Shock Syndrome.

This sometimes fatal illness is characterized by the sudden onset of high fever accompanied by vomiting, diarrhea, and muscular pain. These symptoms are followed by extremely low blood pressure and, in severe cases, shock.

There have been no cases of Toxic Shock Syndrome seen at Martin Army Community Hospital (MACH) as yet, according to Dr. William Sutherland, chief of obstetrics and gynecology, MACH.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in Chicago examined the issue of the possible relationship between the use of tampons and Toxic Shock Syndrome. Based upon the scientific information available at this time, they made the following recommendations for women who are concerned about their continuing use of tampons:

- In general, women need not stop using tampons; however, it would be wise, at present, to discontinue the use of the newly-developed, super-absorbent tampons, until more conclusive scientific research has been conducted in this area.
- To reduce the possible risk of tampon use even further, women are advised to alternate tampons with sanitary napkins or mini-pads, during a given menstrual cycle.
- When tampons are used, they should be changed frequently - at least every 6-8 hours - to reduce the risk of potential infection.
- If a woman is using tampons, and experiences such symptoms as high fever, vomiting, diarrhea, or a sunburn-like rash, she should discontinue tampon use, and consult her physician immediately.

While the ACOG recognizes that an association has been established between Toxic Shock Syndrome and menstruation/tampon use, it shouldn't be assumed that this means there is a definite cause-and-effect relationship until we better understand the mechanism that creates this condition.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists represents more than 22,000 obstetrician/gynecologists throughout North America and is the leading group that speaks for those professionals who provide health care for women.

Customers who purchased Rely tampons at a post exchange may return any remaining supplies for a refund, according to officials.

Movie review

Modern Noah gets ark off ground, crashes

By Bill Powell

When I first heard the title of the film "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark" my curiousity was aroused. Being familiar with the old Bible story of Noah's Ark, I knew, as many do, that Noah's Ark was a boat full of animals riding the great flood to safety. But the term "flight" threw me because of course, with few exceptions, boats don't fly.

After taking a closer look at the movie posters, I realized that Noah's Ark in this case was a B-52, or similiar WWII aircraft, turned upside down in the water with animals galore and, of course, an assorted cast of characters. I decided to buy a ticket to the movie and find out why that "sucker" was turned upside down.

The story line is pretty good but a little predictable. It consists of a "down on his luck" pilot who is avoiding threats from his bookies by taking any job available. The job that turns up is to fly a plane load of farm animals to an island in the Pacific for a missionary. The pilot, named Noah, dislikes animals and a couple of orpans stowaway in the plane to protect the animals from mistreatment. Of course, the plane doesn't make it to its destination and while they're on the island they crash, and the story concentrates on their efforts to get off the island.

Don't go to this movie with any preconceived notions about it being for kids only. It will be very interesting for anyone liking a good story, and the movie has some first rate acting and directing. Elliott Gould stars as the pilot, Noah. Genevieve Bujold is quite an eyefull as the missionary, and Ricky Schroeder, who starred in the hit movie "The Champ," performesvery well as one of the stowaway orphans. ★ ★ ★
