Soldier voting made easier

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Soldiers will find it easier to register and vote in the 1980 elections.

A new Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) will be accepted in most states as both an application for registration and for absentee ballots, according to Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP) officials.

Some states, however, will still treat the first FPCA sent as a registration request only and require voters to send another FPCA requesting absentee ballots.

The new FPCA contains 16 detailed questions, a change from the old 11-question FPCA. Questions include citizenship status, state residence, ballots requested, personal information and Social Security number.

Also, the application is larger. According to officials, all states recommended this change so the new card would fit into state filing systems.

The revised FPCA will be available at military installations and at U.S. embassies and consulates beginning this month. Meanwhile, the old FPCA will continue to be accepted but many states will use it for registration only.

U.S. citizens should contact their local voting assistance officers or counselors to pick up the FPCA along with other information on absentee voting.

As long as it is mailed in a U.S. postal facility or mailed from an APO or FPO facility, the FPCA is a postage-free form. Voters may also mail FPCAs from U.S. embassies and consulates.

Voters can help themselves and their states by filling out the FPCA legibly, signing it and mailing it early.

Individuals having questions which cannot be answered by their local voting officers should contact the Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301.

Glad you asked

Would you recommend Fort Benning as an assignment? Why or why not?

SFC Travis Magee
44th Company,
The School Brigade
Yes, this is a fine assignment if you are in the infantry.

CWO4 L. H. Mc Quay
121st Aviation Company
Yes, this is a pleasant duty assignment. Fort Benning is a nice post and Columbus is a good community.

Pvt.2 Jose Perez
Headquarters,
Infantry Training Brigade
Yes, this is a beautiful place.

SFC James Cummingham
Company C, Committee Group
Yes, this is a good place to live for the retirement community.

Sp5 James Smith
598th Maintenance Company
No, I don't like stateside duty.

Sp5 Allen Hanson
U.S. Army
Communication Command
Yes, I think Fort Benning is alright, but I would rather be at Fort Gordon.

2nd Lt. Keith Daveline
Corp of Engineers
No, I wouldn't. This post is too spread out. It makes it hard on the young soldier, transportation wise.

Col. B. J. Maynard
Headquarters,
197th Infantry Brigade
Yes, this is a great post and great place to live.

Col. Joseph Franklin
Deputy Commander for Readiness and Training
Yes, this is a great post.

Anonymous letter from soldier provides insight

By MATTHEW BOISON
36th Engineer Group
Public Affairs Office

Seventy percent of the Army's first termers are leaving the Army after their first term. This problem plagues not only the Army's manpower and recruiting areas but it is also a great concern of the public affairs branch.

I recently came upon a letter left by a soldier who probably has, or will, leave the Army. It carries a great deal of meaning and insight to the problem of keeping a good soldier in the Army.

The letter reads as follows:

Remember me? I'm the person who goes into the orderly room and patiently waits while the first sergeant or his assistant does everything but pay attention to me. I'm the person who goes into the supply room and stands quietly while the supply sergeant and his assistant finish their little chit-chat. I'm the person who does not grumble while I clean rifles in addition to my own while others wander aimlessly around the company. Yes, you might say I'm a pretty good person. But do you know who else I am?

I am the person who never extends my enlistment or reenlists and it amuses me to see you spending many hours and dollars every year to get me back into your unit when I was there in the first place; and all you had to do to keep me was . . . Give me a little attention, show me a little courtesy, use me well, treat me well; then ask me to reenlist.

High school restrictions impede Army recruiters

There has been a great deal of discussion about the first-time failure of all the armed services to meet their quotas for recruits during the 1979 recruiting year. The shortfall has generated proposals to increase enlistment incentives and to restudy the military compensation system. It has also enlivened discussion about the need to seek a more reliable source of military personnel by renewing selective service.

But one major contributor to the services' inability to meet their goals has either been ignored or glossed-over. That is the continued refusal by many high schools to permit military recruiters ready access to young people approaching graduation. Nationwide, 25 percent of the high schools will not let a military recruiter onto school property. Another 25 percent will only let recruiters into the school during job fairs which usually occur just once a year. The combination of these two proscriptions effectively bars recruiters from half of our high schools and denies them full access to the prime source of quality volunteers.

Last year the Army recruited 126,800 volunteers which was 16,400 short of its requirement for new soldiers. In order to achieve that number of enlistments the Army's recruiters made 5,021,300 contacts with young people — an average of 39.6 contacts for every enlistment. Considering the refusal of half the nation's high schools to participate in the process the recruiting achievement was remarkable, so remarkable, in fact, that one wonders how many high school graduates would have volunteered for service if no doors had been closed to the recruiters.

Speculation on the reasons for this resistance on the part of educators wanders in several directions but almost always comes back to residual anti-military sentiments imbued during the Vietnam period and still entrenched in the minds of teachers and administrators who were college students during that period. This state of mind at the high school level is exactly contrary to that which seems to prevail on most college campuses today, where reserve officer training programs are increasingly popular.

Congress will not let the muscle of our armed services atrophy. To keep the ranks filled they will commit more tax dollars and, if that does not do the job, they will surely return to selective service. If the nation truly prefers a volunteer military establishment it must get squarely behind that establishment and see to it that no impediments are scattered in front of the recruiters. One way would be to get our high schools to open their doors.

How About That?

Young have faith

By WILLIAM W. ERBACH SR.
TIC Chaplain

Dr. James McConnell tells a fascinating story. One day while fishing on the Missouri River he saw a boy frantically waving a red flag from a temporary dock of homemade pilings. Dr. McConnell looked up and saw a large Missouri River steamboat coming down the river full steam ahead. It looked as if this barefoot boy was trying to flag down that steamboat. Moved by curiosity, he went to where the boy was and began to talk to him.

"You don't mean to tell me that you are fool enough to think that great river boat will respond to your signal and try to stop at this little dock on the bend of a swift moving river?"

"I sure do mister. It'll stop all right. It'll stop."

"Why, that boat couldn't stop on this bend of the river even if they paid attention to your flag.!"

Just at that moment, and to his surprise, he saw the great boat make a sudden swerve out of it's down river course, and heard the whistle sound twice in recognition of the signal. Then the steamboat slowly made its way into the crude homemade dock on piles. The gangplank was run out, the boy stepped on board, looked over his shoulder at the stranger standing on the shore and said, "I ain't no fool, mister. My father's the captain of this boat!"

How about that?

Oh, that we all should have the knowledge and faith of the young, to trust the captain of the ship of life, who will always and everywhere respond to our call.

Customers help determine PX stock

NEW ITEMS ARE INTRODUCED in the marketplace every day. Someone is always coming up with a better way to mow the lawn, dry wet hair or catch mice. And around Christmas shopping season manufacturers spend millions to advertise new toys that children look forward to receiving from Santa.

How are these products selected for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) stock assortment and what route do they take to end up on the shelves?

First, it is important to realize that AAFES purchases most of the merchandise for resale in its stores on the basis of negotiations with private industry. All interested and qualified sources receive fair and impartial consideration of their products. Merchandising specialists worldwide negotiate with vendors for the best price and terms in order to give customers the greatest savings and highest quality available.

BUT BEFORE NEGOTIATIONS BEGIN, the price lines and items which go into the stock assortment must be selected. AAFES has several methods of picking which products it will buy, depending on the type of merchandise.

For certain categories of merchandise such as apparel, audio equipment, cameras and housewares, AAFES uses selection committees to examine and evaluate numerous vendor lines to determine which will be stocked to exchanges. These committees consist of personnel who possess special product and commodity knowledge and are qualified to make professional judgments regarding specific products.

Since no retail organization can possibly stock all brands of all products, the selection committee process is designed to identify those items or specific brands which best meet the varied needs of AAFES customers. To accomplish this, the committee impartially considers, on a side-by-side basis, the quality, construction, features, styles, value, consumer acceptance, etc. of vendor samples.

BRAND DEMAND BY CONSUMERS plays a part in the selection of some merchandise, for example, watches and watch bands. A look around civilian stores shows that certain brands of these items are most popular with consumers. In order to offer the same merchandise to exchange customers, AAFES personnel study the market and tailor the stock assortment to reflect the most wanted products.

Industry reports detailing the share of market held by various products are important tools used to select such items as cigarettes, beverages, detergents and cleaning supplies and health and beauty aids. With this information AAFES can choose the most popular brands of merchandise for stockage in its stores. As space permits, other brands are added to meet the varied needs of customers.

In addition, Exchange Service professionals are constantly reviewing new items in all categories and adding them to the stock assortment as justified. Most vendors cooperate with AAFES in presenting new items for consideration so the exchange will have them at the same time as other retailers.

AFTER ITEMS ARE CHOSEN for the stock assortment, they must be ordered from vendors, added to computer files, delivered to warehouses, shipped to stores and placed on shelves. All of this takes time.

Sometimes, in spite of all efforts, AAFES is unable to procure an item. Perhaps it is a situation where the manufacturer cannot supply the amount AAFES wants to order. Or maybe the advance advertising has caused such an unexpected demand that the company is not able to fill all orders and AAFES is left out.

And then there is the case where an exchange is simply sold out of a popular new item.

THERE ARE SEVERAL OPTIONS open to the customer in the event he does not find what he is looking for in the store; exchange employees should be able to explain these alternatives when asked about items not in stock.

First, the customer can check availability through the Catalog Sales Program. The AAFES catalog allows customers to order many items not regularly stocked in the store.

If the customer can't find the merchandise in the catalog, he should proceed to the customer-services area and determine if the product is available through the special order program.

ANOTHER POSSIBILITY is to fill out a customer comment form requesting that the new product be added to the stock structure. This form will be evaluated along with others to determine if enough demand exists to stock the item. If so, the product will be added.

AAFES patrons have a right to expect continuous improvement in merchandise availability and selection, especially the addition of new items. All levels of Exchange Service management, from the individual store to the worldwide headquarters, constantly strive to present well-balanced stocks of merchandise that have the greatest amount of customer acceptance.

Soldiers may have hidden college credits

By BRENDA-LEE KARASIK

Many soldiers are taking college classes to earn a degree. They may also be taking tests for college credit. These are the only methods for earning college credits—aren't they?

No, not really. Many soldiers may already have hidden college credits from service schools they attended. Soldiers may also have hidden credits from their military occupational specialty (MOS).

The American Council on Education (ACS) has evaluated service school courses as well as MOS's and has recommended credit for most of these. Potential credits are converted into actual college credits when a college or university accepts them and puts them on a transcript.

Not all schools will accept ACE credit recommendations, however. Check with your selected college to determine its policy.

Your Army education center has ACE credit evaluation guides for your use. Also, the counseling staff will be glad to check the evaluations for you. Just have your course completion certificate or a copy of your DA Form 2-1, Personnel Qualification Record with you. Or, write down the course title, the dates you attended, the number of weeks, and the location of each course completed.

For example, a soldier who completed the Telephone Installation and Repair Course between November 1953 and December 1968 could receive three semester hours in electricity and two in communications for electronics programs when applied to an associate degree.

Most enlisted and warrant officer MOS's have also been evaluated. For example, a soldier holding the MOS Administration Specialist, 71L40, who has taken and passed an MOS test between November 1973 and August 1977 could receive 22 semester hours toward an associate degree.

To request credits from your college, fill out your part of DD Form 295, Application for the Evaluation of Educational Experience During Military Service. Have your personnel office complete and sign their part. Then take the completed form to your education center for forwarding directly to your college.

It's easy to find out what the ACE recommendation is and how to gain credit for your military experience by calling or visiting the education center.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Quartermaster laundry bargain for post soldiers

By T. A. SABEL

The 'two-dollar soldier' is the motto. Not the soldier's worth, but rather, the cost per week for the soldier's clothes to be laundered and pressed.

The Quartermaster Laundry Service in Building 2500 offers a substantial savings to the soldier's laundry bill. For a $2 weekly deduction from his/her paycheck, any soldier on Fort Benning can have up to 26 items cleaned and pressed, including civilian clothes, according to Ruth Drinkard, laundry supervisor. She added that items needing dry-cleaning could not be handled through the laundry.

Normally, the clothes take three days to be processed, she said. If the soldier is not on the $2 a week program, then the cost is 80 cents for a set of fatigues as compared to $1.45 off post, said Drinkard.

The soldier in a hurry is not neglected. A one-day service is available for 96 cents per set of fatigues. "If we have them by 8 a.m., we can have them out by 4 p.m.," said Drinkard.

A pickup and delivery system is available for 1st Infantry Training Brigade trainees and Officers Candidate School students. There is also a pickup and delivery system set up with Harmony Church, according to the supervisor.

For the permanent party soldiers here, laundry turned in through unit supply sergeants takes a week, but there is nothing stopping the soldiers from taking care of their own pickup and delivery, added Drinkard.

Airborne students have a special 50-cent deal for three-pound bundles of white and colorfast items. The items are returned in a plastic wrapped bundle "strong enough to play football with," according to Drinkard.

W. Lee Goodson, the new plant manager, says the facility has an unusual problem in the constant change of customers. He added that the facility is underused by permanent party personnel. "Even if you own your own washer and dryer you still can't wash for less than $2 a week and do as good a job."

The automated plant can handle large amounts of laundry. The washer-extractors can do a 600-pound load in approximately 45 minutes, said Goodson, and the dryers can dry 400 pounds in 12 minutes.

Do you want to be a first sergeant?

Washington (ARNEWS)--Do you want to be a first sergeant? If an old MOS test score stopped you from applying for the first sergeant program before, you may now be eligible.

An MOS score of 100 or higher is no longer a requirement for the first sergeant program, MILPERCEN officials announced recently.

Since most NCOs don't have a recent MOS score, MILPERCEN has removed the restriction, officials said.

The first sergeant program gives NCOs in balanced or overstrength non-combat MOS, a chance to serve as first sergeants in a combat arms unit. This enhances their chances for selection to attend the Sergeants Major Academy and promotion to E-9.

There's a continuing need for about 20 to 25 NCOs at any one time to fill vacancies as NCOs complete the 24 month program, officials said.

Participation in the program is voluntary. To be accepted volunteers must:

- Be an E-8 or an E-7 on the E-8 promotion list.
- Have no profile prohibiting duty with a combat arms unit. This includes weight standards.
- Be released by their branch.
- Applications must be accompanied by a recommendation from the volunteer's command sergeant major or E-9 rater.

Applications should be sent through channels to: USA MILPERCEN, ATTN: DAPC-EPK-A, 2461 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22331.

Those selected are stabilized for 24 months at one of the following locations: Forts Campbell, Carson, Hood, Lewis, Ord, Polk, Riley, Sill or Stewart. A post of choice option is available as long as vacancies exist, officials added.

Upon completion of first sergeant duty, the NCOs return to their parent career branch for assignment in their PMOS.

Use caution, common sense with winter fires

A roaring fire on a cold winter evening can be very cozy, but it can also be dangerous. The U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that each year over 6,000 people receive hospital emergency room treatment for injuries associated with fireplaces. Most of these injuries are cuts and bruises caused by handling wood, andirons and other equipment, but the most serious injuries are burns, and most of the victims are children.

- Five-year-old Steve was standing too close to the fireplace and his clothing ignited. He received serious burns over 80 per cent of his body.
- A spark from an unguarded fireplace ignited a small carpet. The fire spread to a nearby sofa and soon engulfed the whole room. Two people died in the fire.
- After starting a fire in a poorly ventilated fireplace, Tom threw in some wrapping and polystyrene which had been used as packing. The polystyrene produced so much carbon monoxide that Tom fell unconscious and died from the poisonous gas.

The typical accident patterns associated with fireplaces include: Clothing ignition from open flames, sparks from the fire landing on nearby flammable material, using flammable liquids to kindle or rekindle the fire, and carbon monoxide poisoning caused by inadequate ventilation.

In order to enjoy your fireplace in safety this winter, follow these tips.

- Check to make sure the fireplace was constructed to be used, not just for decoration.
- Don't use gasoline or other flammable liquids to start a fire because the flammable vapors can explode.
- Always keep the damper open while the fuel is burning to provide for efficient burning and to prevent the accumulation of poisonous or explosive gases.
- Don't use coal, charcoal, or polystyrene packaging in a fireplace unless the fireplace is well ventilated.
- Don't treat artificial logs (made from sawdust and wax) the same way you treat real wood logs. Use only one at a time — if you use more, they can produce too much heat for some fireplaces to withstand.
- Always use a screen that completely covers the opening around a fireplace to keep sparks from flying out. Don't put combustible materials, such as carpets or furniture near a fireplace.
- Keep children away from the fire because their clothing can easily ignite. Warn the entire family about this hazard.
- Check fireplaces regularly (at least once a year) to determine that all vents and chimneys are operating properly.
- Be sure that all ashes have thoroughly cooled before you dispose of them.
- Make sure the fire is completely out before retiring for the evening.
- Use chimney guards. Squirrel and bird nests can stop up chimneys.

Legal assistance valuable help

You work hard for your money, and when you buy something you have the right to expect that guarantees will be honored and promises kept. If you have the feeling that there is nothing you, the consumer, can do to protect your rights, contact the Legal Assistance Office. You can get advice there on legal remedies for a variety of consumer problems.

Contact the office, for example, when you think that a plumber has unfairly charged you a fee that exceeds the original estimate. Also seek advice from the office on what to do when a new appliance or used car falls apart.

The Legal Assistance Office can help you understand and prepare legal contracts that concern you as a consumer. For example, legal officers can explain the landlord/tenant responsibilities in a lease; the payment terms in a contract purchase, and the legality of contract demands. You can also get advice on deciding whether you should draw up a contract to receive services or repairs.

Understand what a contract or lease says before you sign it. Protect your rights.

Save-A-Toy is ACS success

By TIM BOIVIN

A lot of dependent children were insured a merry Christmas because of the many concerned families who donated toys for the Army Community Service's (ACS) Save-A-Toy Program.

Toys were distributed to 75 needy families with over 200 children. Fatigue details were provided by The School Brigade to restore repairable toys.

Members of the International Wives Club made numerous outfits for unclothed dolls. The outfits were made in the various styles of the different nationalities represented in the club.

ACS extended a thanks to everyone who contributed their services to make the Save-A-Toy Program a success.

ENERGY QUIZ #4

Conservation of energy not only helps protect the environment for our children, but it also helps to lower our utility bills. This true-or-false quiz may give you an idea of how much you actually know about saving energy. Are the following statements true or false?

1. Keeping a light bulb on uses less energy than turning it on and off several times an hour.
2. Showers use more hot water, therefore more energy, than tub baths.
3. Electricity used to run the refrigerator contributes to heating the house.
4. It takes less gasoline to restart the car than it takes to let it idle a few minutes.
5. "Long-life" incandescent light bulbs are less efficient than ordinary bulbs.
6. Closing doors of unused rooms will decrease the amount of fuel used in heating the entire house.
7. Drying clothes in consecutive rather than sporadic loads uses less energy.
8. A fluorescent lamp is more efficient than an incandecsent (regular) bulb.
9. The lighter the car, the less gas it uses.

ANSWERS TO QUIZ

seven are true.

The first two statements are false; the other

Setting it straight

On page 28 of the Dec. 28 issue, an Army News Service (ARNEWS) article entitled 'Bonus program adds six MOS's', stated that the 13 E MOS had been added to the Army's bonus extension and retraining program.

The MOS that has been added to the program is 13 L and not 13 E as the article stated.

Charitable group offers vision aid

Recycle old eyeglasses to bring sight to the poor? Why not — recycling may seem like a new conservationist idea, but a group of volunteers in Short Hills, N.J., many of them housewives, have been doing it for years, ever since 1932.

As a non-profit organization called New Eyes For The Needy, Inc., this group of volunteers has helped over one million persons to see.

Last year over one million pairs of old glasses were sent to New Eyes For The Needy, Inc., where groups of volunteers over 250 in numbers, have been taught to sort and classify them.

Simple non-astigmatic lenses go to medical missions abroad since Federal law now prohibits their redistribution in this country. Simple sunglasses are prized in bright, hot countries, even leper colonies where the burning rays of the sun are too much to tolerate.

Metal frames go to a refiner to be melted down, along with other scraps of precious metal, such as gold from dentures and tooth inlays, old watches, broken jewelry, spare cufflinks, earrings and old silver.

The money realized from refining goes to establish special eye funds for hospitals and welfare agencies throughout 48 of the states, to purchase new prescription glasses for those who can't afford them.

New Eyes holds periodic sales of antique jewelry and silver along with resalable costume jewelry, which adds significantly to these funds.

Since its inception 47 years ago, New Eyes has asked only for old eyeglasses and precious metal articles, never for a cent in donations.

Not only individuals, but many church groups and service organizations such as the Lions and Kiwanis, have made New Eyes' collections their project.

Collection boxes are placed in banks, shopping centers and libraries where local publicity through newspapers, TV and radio stations soon has them full to overflowing. Upon request, New Eyes will send a pamphlet of background information and helpful ideas to groups interested in starting community projects.

Hundreds of packages arrive each day by mail from all over the country, directed to the white stucco building on Millburn Avenue in Short Hills, N.J. 07078.

Anyone for Opera?

New Eyes For The Needy, Inc., a non-profit charity in Short Hills, N.J., recycles not only old opera glasses, but other used eyeglasses, old jewelry, gold and silver items, inlays and other bits of precious metal. After refining, New Eyes uses the proceeds to establish eye funds in hospitals across the nation, as well as redistributing reusable glasses to foreign missions. Never asking for a penny, New Eyes has helped over one million people in the past 47 years since it began. Send your old eyeglasses and precious metal scrap to New Eyes For The Needy, Inc., Short Hills, N.J. 07078, where they will help some needy person to see.

Health care system

Computer enrollment to affect all

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new computer-based enrollment system affecting all active duty and retired military personnel and their dependents and survivors will become effective early next year and will be used to record and verify their eligibility for military health and medical care benefits.

The Defense Enrollment/Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS) is aimed at improving the management and administration of the military health care system and eliminating waste and fraudulent practices according to DoD officials.

The first phase of the DEERS program will be conducted in selected areas of southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina from February through April 1980. Subsequently, the system will be expanded to cover the rest of the country and overseas locations where military personnel and their dependents are assigned.

By 1982, more than nine million people are expected to be enrolled in DEERS. Their eligibility for military health care benefits will be certified and entered into a computerized data bank which will track their eligibility in the future.

No one denied

Under the DEERS System, when a military person or dependent seeks medical service from a Uniformed Service health care facility, their eligibility can be verified by a telephone computer hooks-up with the DEERS central data bank, which will be located in Monterey, Calif.

Until the system is well underway and all eligible persons have had the opportunity to become enrolled, no one will be denied necessary health care. Those who may later be proven ineligible, whether by circumstance or design, will be the object of administrative and/or legal action, including being billed by the government for services to which they were not legally entitled.

For active duty and retired personnel, enrollment in DEERS will be virtually automatic, based on administrative actions carried out by each of the uniformed services.

Enrollment for dependents, however, will become the responsibility of the sponsor, and is expected to include use of an application form and proof of the dependent's eligibility for health care.

Dependents whose sponsors are not available, such as those whose spouses are deployed overseas, should report to the nearest military activity affiliated with their sponsor's service for assistance in enrolling in the system. The same is true of eligible survivors of deceased active duty and retired personnel.

Enrollment necessary

Applications for enrollment of dependents will be available from personnel offices at military facilities, which will also process the applications and review any verifying documents, such as marriage licenses, birth certificates, adoption papers and dependency forms.

Enrollment will be necessary whether or not dependents presently have identification cards in their possession, DoD officials said. New persons entering the service and their dependents will automatically be enrolled in DEERS when their ID cards are first issued.

"Getting all of our military and dependent personnel enrolled in DEERS is a massive undertaking, but it is a necessary first step to developing an ongoing, reliable register of those entitled to health care of law," said Dr. Michael J. Mestrovich, director of Health Systems Planning for the DoD.

In addition to reducing fraud, the DEERS will result in a number of benefits to the military community, Dr. Mestrovich said.

Accurate system

"Right now, we don't know exactly how many people are legitimately entitled to military health care, despite all the record-keeping and files maintained by DoD and the services. With DEERS, we will have a much improved and more accurate system for planning health care budgets, personnel requirements and facilities and thus be able to provide better medical care to the military community," he said.

By establishing a rapid means of verifying eligibility on the spot through use of the computer data bank, fraudulent practices will be reduced and the military health care system including direct care at military facilities and use of CHAMPUS, will be improved, he said.

During phase one of DEERS, techniques for processing dependent applications for enrollment will be refined for use in the expanded nationwide program. Approximately 400,000 persons in Virginia and North Carolina are expected to be enrolled between February and April 1980.

Phase one will also be used to determine the most effective methods of reaching eligible dependents who are outside the normal chain of military and dependent communications. This includes dependents of active duty personnel who are away on overseas deployment and eligible survivors of deceased members.

Biggest challenge

"One of our biggest challenges in building the DEERS data bank is getting the word to those eligible dependents who are not in direct contact with their sponsor's service," Dr. Mestrovich said. "They must be made aware as soon as possible of the requirement to enroll in DEERS in order to continue receiving their health care benefits."

You read a newspaper ad for a land deal that's so fantastic you can't believe it's true—"One-quarter acre lots, swimming pool, golf course and clubhouse, for just $2,000. And if you come out today, you'll get a free tank of gas and a free clock-radio."

Sometimes if the deal sounds too good to be true, it's also too good to be legitimate.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) warns consumers to get the facts on land before they buy. And, knowing your rights under the law is the first step.

Whether you're contacted by mail, by phone, or notice an ad in the newspaper, never buy a lot sight unseen. Ask the developer if the company is registered with HUD or is entitled to an exemption. Registration means that according to law the company must file a statement of record with HUD and give all prospective customers a copy of the property report.

HUD does not inspect lots, nor do they prepare the property report or check the facts in the report. If any statement in the property report turns out to be false or if an important thing is left out, you have the right to cancel your contract and sue for damages in court.

"Here you are—2 acres overlooking the sea!"

Once you find a development you're interested in, check the facts. Get the property report and read it. Ask questions. How large will the development be? What zoning controls are specified in the contract? Are there extra charges for using the amenities like the swimming pool or fishing lake? What about utilities and water? What are the plans for sewage disposal? Will you get clear title to the property? Will you be able to build a house on your lot?

Avoid high-pressure sales tactics or you may find yourself making payments on a lot you're not completely satisfied with.

Be skeptical about overly optimistic estimates on the future resale value of the land.

Watch out for the "bait and switch" game where lots are advertised at extremely low prices, then you're told the cheap lots are all sold but some "excellent sites are still available at a higher price."

For more information, send for the HUD booklet, Buying Lots from Developers. For a copy, send $1.00 to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Curbs needed

Reenlistment curbs help the Army keep a balanced force by grade, skill and years of service, and help avoid massive, unpopular reclassification/retraining programs, according to MILPERCEN officials. Soldiers are reclassified into a balanced or shortage MOS when their primary MOS is overstrength, officials said.

MILPERCEN officials recently explained published reenlistment curbs.

Reenlistment controls are in effect only for first-term male soldiers who entered the Army from Oct. 1, 1975 through Sept. 30, 1976 and who hold one of the following primary MOSs: 22K, 24B, 24D, 24F, 25K, 26Y, 63G, 63H, 71N, and 75B.

These soldiers must select at least three MOS preferences they would accept retraining in if they cannot reenlist in their primary MOS.

The same requirement and consideration applied to first-term male soldiers who entered the Army from Oct. 1, 1974 through Sept. 30, 1975 and who hold one of these primary MOSs: 22K, 24B, 24D, 24F, 25K, 36K, or 76J.

In addition to these curbs, no soldiers in grades E5 or below, regardless of sex and years of service, may reenlist for retraining into an overstrength MOS as listed in DA Circular 611-65.

Army recruiter 'draft' announced

About 1,000 soldiers will be selected for involuntary recruiting duty by the end of March.

The additional soldiers are needed to help meet FY 80 recruiting goals, according to DA officials.

Last fiscal year, when more recruiters were needed than were volunteering, a test of involuntary assignments for about 500 NCOs was conducted. Most of these soldiers were selected from CONUS posts.

The program is now being expanded to overseas commands and will involve shorter tour lengths for some.

Soldiers will be selected using the following guidelines:

- Whenever possible, soldiers will be assigned to recruiting duty upon completion of an overseas tour.

- Some soldiers serving overseas in long tour areas may be moved up to one year early.

- DA will try to avoid cutting tour lengths in short tour areas.

- Soldiers in Space Imbalanced MOS (SIMOS) will not have tour lengths shortened for recruiting duty.

For the time being, soldiers in the following MOS will not be selected: 05H, 11H, 13F, 16R, 27F, 31E, 31S, 35M, 45K, 97B and 98C. This list will be reviewed and changed if necessary.

Some soldiers will have to move on short notice because of the large numbers required over a short period of time, officials said, but DA will provide as much lead time as possible.

TIME TO COUNT NOSES

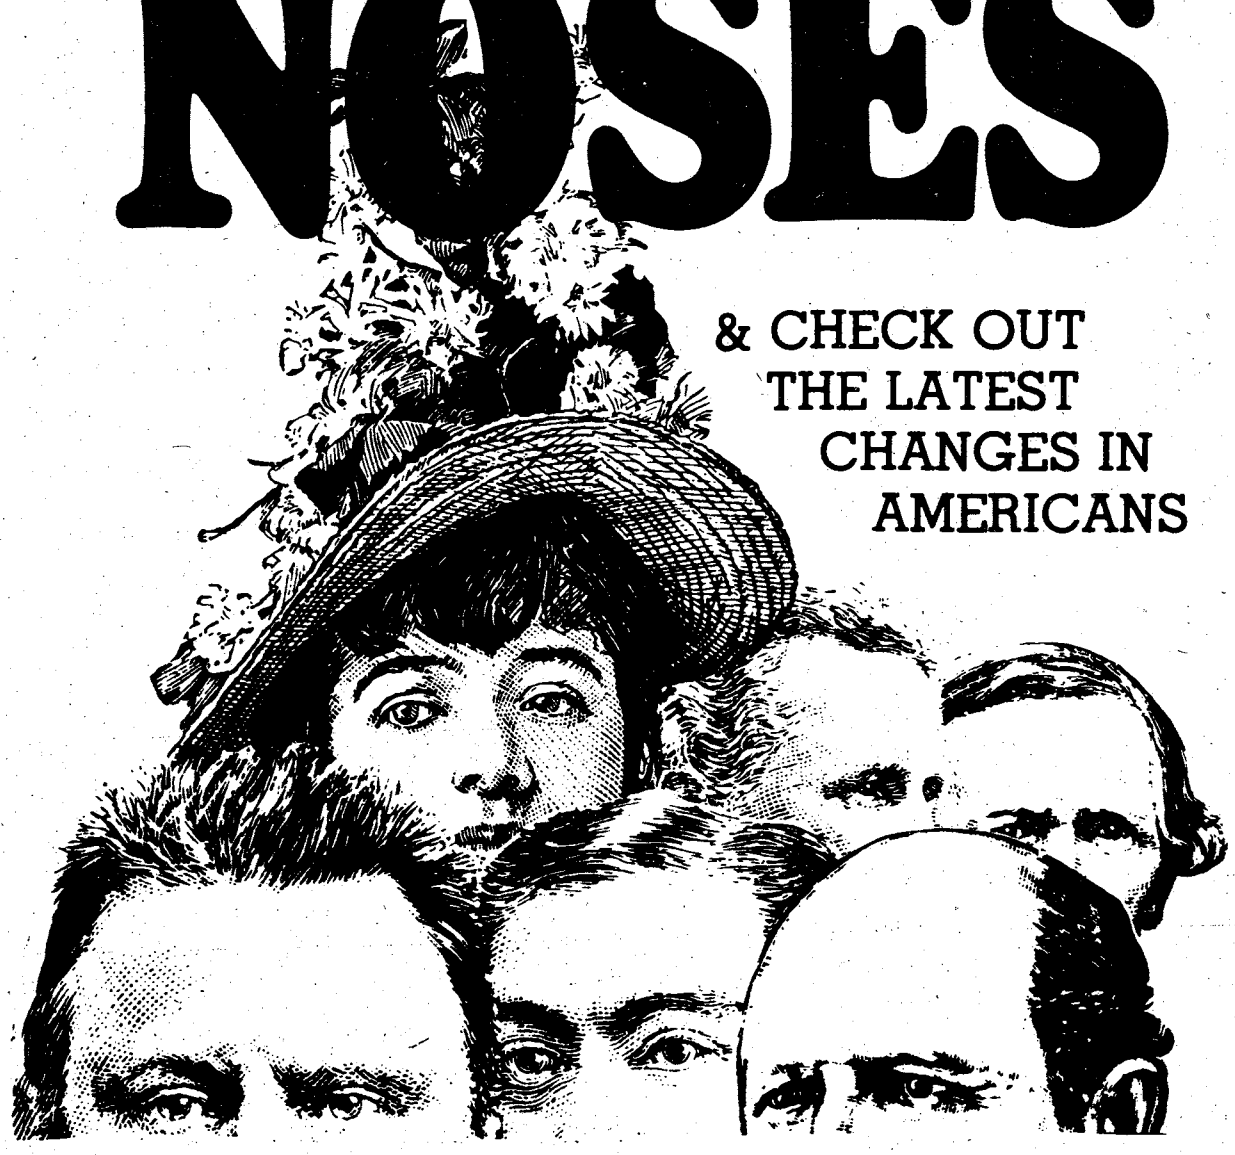
& CHECK OUT THE LATEST CHANGES IN AMERICANS



The 1980 census, which begins April 1, will mark the 20th time in the nation's history that Americans have counted themselves.

The number of questions and the uses of census data have both grown considerably since the first count, and quill pens have yielded to computers, but the census has never lost its roots in the Constitution.

When the delegates to the Consitutional Convention met in 1787, they decided that population distribution should be the basis for direct taxation and for apportionment in the House of Representatives, so they approved a Constitutional requirement that every person in the nation be counted at least once every ten years, beginning in 1790.

For nearly two centuries since then, the decennial census has monitored the growth and development of the nation, yielding invaluable information about ourselves as a people: who we are, what we do, how we live. Taken together, these 10-year assessments of the developing republic form the backbone of our history.

The first census

Congress appointed Secretary of State Thomas Jefferson to direct the first census in 1790. Jefferson delegated the responsibility to the 17 U.S. marshals, who in turn hired as many assistants as they needed. These census takers, or enumerators, were paid between one-third cent and two cents for every inhabitant they counted in the 16 existing states and the Southwestern Territory.

They traveled by foot, boat, or horseback through areas with few roads and bridges. Maps were scarce, town and county boundaries were vague or unknown, and numbers of superstitious or untrusting citizens were uncooperative.

Despite arguments from some members of Congress, led by James Madison, that the census ought to collect facts of use to "agricultural, commercial, and manufacturing" interests, the first census asked only five questions: number of free white males 16 years of age and older; number of free white males under 16 years; number of free white females; number of other free persons; and number of slaves.

Census takers recorded answers on any kind of paper they happened to have and posted the lists in each town or city in a public place. Anyone missed was expected to add his or her own name to the list. Apparently Thomas Jefferson was one of those missed the first time around, for he had to add his own name to the list posted in Philadelphia.

The count took 18 months, and showed a population of just under four million.

Developments during the 19th century

For the next 50 years, the census questions remained largely unchanged. There was an attempt in 1810 to obtain information about domestic industrial capacity, but that effort failed because manufacturers feared the information might leak to their competitors. There was no guarantee, such as that in force today, that census answers would be held in confidence. A major improvement in the census during this period was the introduction in 1830 of a printed census form.

In 1840, the government expanded the scope of census information, introducing a Census of Agriculture and a Census of Mineral Industries. By 1860, six separate census questionnaires posed 142 different questions covering population, health, mortality, literacy, pauperism, occupation, income, wealth, agriculture, manufactures, mining, fishing, commerce, banking, insurance, transportation, schools, libraries, newspapers, crime, taxes, and religion. Hand tallying led to many errors, but no attempt was made to verify the data.

By 1880, with 50 million people living in 38 states and nine territories, the U.S. marshals could no longer handle the census. Congress created a temporary civilian census office headed by a presidentially appointed superintendent of the Census. This new office was soon swamped by the record number of census questions in 1880, and after publishing 21,203 pages of reports through 1888, the work stopped even though there was more data to be tabulated and published.

About that time, a former census office employee, Dr. Herman Hollerith, patented a punch card system of electrical-mechanical tabulation that was destined to revolutionize informtion processing.

Hollerith's punch card system

Hollerith's system consisted of two steps. First, an operator using one machine punched tiny holes in cards representing answers on individual census forms. Then another machine "read" the cards with a set of needlelike small wires. Wherever there was a hole in the card, the corresponding wire was able to pass through to make electrical contact with a metal post below, thus closing a circuit and signaling a set of dials which recorded totals. Hollerith's method was immensely faster than the primarily manual methods of tabulation that preceded it, and by one estimate his machines saved some $5 million and two years' time in processing the 1890 census data.

Hollerith's invention also paid off handsomely for his new company, the Tabulating Machine Company, which later evolved into today's International Business Machines Corporation.

The confidentiality requirement

As early as 1840, U.S. marshals were instructed to treat census information entrusted to them as "confidentially imparted," and citizens were assured that "individual facts" as they provided would be indistinguishable in the mass of information collected in the census.

Nevertheless, it was not until 1929 that Congress set up the modern-day standards of strict confidentiality which still govern the Census Bureau.

Current law requires that any information collected from an individual be used only for compiling statistical totals, and that the data be published only when an individual is unidentifiable. In fact, no information concerning a particular individual may be released to anyone other than that individual — not even at the request of the President of the United States or another government agency. In the history of the Census Bureau, no census employee has ever been charged with a breach of this confidentiality.

The Census enters the 20th century

In 1902, Congress established the Bureau of the Census as a permanent organization, with responsibility not only for the decennial census, but for interim census and surveys to maintain current statistical information to meet a variety of needs.

President Roosevelt's New Deal programs made unprecedented demands for accurate, up-to-date information on employment, hours worked, wages, age and sex dstribution of the population, employment experience, and so forth.

Later, wartime emergency information related to manpower and production made heavy demands on the Census Bureau's burgeoning statistical files.

Responding to these expanded requirements, the Cenusus Bureau in the 1930s developed another innovation, called sampling — the technique of choosing a small number of individuals in such a way that their responses provide an accurate indication of the whole population. Sampling enabled the Census Bureau to provide a wide range of useful, reliable information on a regular and continuing basis.

The volume of information collected, however, continued to exceed the Bureau's mechanical capacity to process it, making necessary in the 1940s another technological breakthrough.

Pioneer in computer technology

While electronic computers were being developed for scientific use during the years of World War II, the idea of adapting a computer for mass data processing was a radically new one. In 1948 the Census Bureau, in partnership with the National Bureau of Standards, contracted for a rather unique general purpose electronic digital computing system known as UNIVAC I.

It took until April, 1951 to install the system. It was successful. It set new worldwide standards in the electronic tabulation of vast amounts of data. Twenty-fours a day, seven days a week for the next 14 months, the new equipment tabulated data from the 1950 census. UNIVAC I continued working until retirement in 1963. Then it went to the Smithsonian Institution, where it is still on display.

Innovations in electronic data processing continue to increase the speed and capacity of the Bureau's work. In 1790, one clerk using a pencil could process about 30 items per minute; in 1980, the most sophisticated data processing system in the history of the Bureau will tabulate 45 million characters per minute.

Data processing in 1980

Soon after some 86 million households answer and return their 1980 census questionnaires, each will be checked at the nearest of 409 district offices to see that all questions have been answered completely, and then the questionnaires will be organized and shipped to one of three processing centers. There, a camera will photograph on microfilm the names and answers on questionnaires, but not the addresses, which are face down during filming. The microfilm will then be "read" by a FOSDIC scanner — a "film optical sensing device for input to computers" — that overlooks the handwritten names but picks up the filled-in dots which represent census answers. The answers will be transmitted at the speed of light via digital transmission lines to Census Bureau headquarters in Suitland, MD. for transfer to magnetic tape for the computer.

No name or address ever enters any computer, which helps to guarantee that information traceable to a specific individual or household will not be released.

By Jan. 1, 1981, the first 1980 population report must be ready for the President. After nine months of round-the-clock processing, the Census Bureau will have fulfilled its first responsibility: to provide a count of the nation's population by State, for purposes of Congressional apportionment. Three months later, more detailed population counts for counties, cities, and other political subdivisions must be provided to the governors of the 50 states for potential use in the redistricting of their legislatures.

The historical importance of the census is clear. With continued public trust and confidence, the Census Bureau will carry forward a tradition of nearly 200 years of impartial, professional, and non-political service as the Factfinder for the Nation.

How it works

A questionaire will arrive in the mail on March 28. The recipient will simply answer the questions, which will not take long, and then either mail back the form on April 1 or hold it for a census taker to pick up, depending on the instruction.

What may not be apparent to millions of Americans, as they answer the census in the privacy and convenience of their homes, is the fact that they are making personal contributions to an undertaking so vast, so complex, that the 1980 census qualifies as one of the largest peacetime efforts ever mounted in this country.

The 22 million residents, a nine percent population increase since 1970, include some people who do not speak English, people with various political opinions, the rich and the destitute, the educated and the illiterate, members of all the earth's races. The census must also assess their housing — single-family homes, houseboats, condominiums, shacks, "abandoned" buildings, migrant worker camps, jails, school dormitories, at sea, ad overseas. The census is expected to count 25 percent more housing units in 1980 than in 1970.

At the same time, never in the history of the census, which has been taken every 10 years since 1790, have census findings played as important a role in American life as they do today. Besides the Constitutional mandate to provide a basis for reapportioning seats in the House of Representatives, the census measures how well the nation is doing, from the block level to the entire country. Its findings are used in the private and public sectors to decide how billions of dollars will be spent annually.

Planning for the 1980 census, which has gone on since the early seventies, reflects this heightened need for the most complete count ever taken, especially of minorities.

In 90 percent of the nation's households, people will be asked to take their own census, in effect, by answering the questionnaires and mailing them back in postage free envelopes. Census takers will obtain the information from households that fail to mail back completed questionnaires as requested.

The remaining 10 percent, which will receive instructions to hold the completed questionnaires until census takers pick them up, are mostly in sparsely settled areas in the Western half of the nation. In some cases, the census takers will ask additional questions.

Census questions seek basic information about people—age, sex, occupation, and the like—and about subjects such as housing, personal transportation, and energy use. Most people will be asked to answer a basic census questionnaire, which has 19 questions. About one of five households, chosen randomly, will be asked to answer a longer version with 46 additional questions.

Famous Army cartoonist lays down pen

"What I'd like to do is repaint all the history paintings that have ever been painted to make them more realistic," says S.J. Stout. "I'd like to repaint Washington crossing the Delaware. Instead of having him standing up in the front of the boat, I'd put him in the back eating a sandwich."

Just who is this character S. J. Stout? For years his cartoons have appeared in both military and civilian publications including the Pacific Stars and Stripes, Stars and Stripes Europe, Soldier's Magazine, the Army Times and many DA publications.

His cartoon characters have graced the pages of Army newspapers throughout the world. Depending on the viewer, his work has been admired and hated.

All in all, he's a man who's made soldiers see an amusing side of themselves and the Army.

SFC S.J. Stout, creator of the Army cartoon series 'The NCO', 'Brown Shoes' and 'The System', has recently retired after 23 years of service. His retirement won't mean his work will stop appearing, however. Newspaper editors will continue to dig in their files for just the 'right' cartoon or illustration.

Stout feels his sense of humor has enhanced his years of service, including three years in the Marine Corps and 20 years in Army infantry units in Korea, Vietnam and Germany.

He isn't quite sure where all his ideas come from. They seem to materialize out of the blue and blank paper turns into some well-respected Army humor.

"One good thing about cartooning," explains Stout, "is that you can speak out. You can get away with poking fun at situations, and many times this method of communication gets a point across better than words. People will look at cartoons. They have impact."

"You can't change the system," Stout contends. "It's too big to change. But I've always believed in speaking out for the little guy, the private. He probably knows the most about what's really going on in the Army since he's the one who's living with it.

"So much of what happens in the Army today happens because of a lack of communication. This is the one thing I've brought out in my cartoons.

But, as Stout discovered, you have to know what you're doing. "I remember I happened to draw a lieutenant saluting with the wrong hand once. I don't know how it happened but I sure heard about it afterwards," remembers Stout with a bemused gleam in his eye.

"It's not easy to retire from the Army," Stout said. "It's a decision that affects the rest of your life."

"I think I'll grow a beard," he mused. "It'll be nice to be called Mr. Stout."

Runners brave cold for Christmas Run

Cold winds kept many away from the fun and family run held Dec. 21 sponsored by Morale Support Activities. The Christmas runs had an adequate turnout, according to 2nd Lt. Tony Knight, race organizer.

Those runners that braved the cold had great enthusiasm as the first of three runs began. The races, held in front of Crain Hall, ended with awards going to the first and second place winners of the first two races (2.5 and five mile). Each of the families entered and finishing the family run received a special patch given to all participants in that event.

Boxing series coming soon

Boxing is a popular sport that over the years has been receiving less attention than once did "the Saturday night Gillette fights." The weekly event drew many people packed into dimly lit living rooms to watch giants in the sports world fight it out.

Today the tradition lives on. Kelley Hill, Sand Hill, 197th Infantry Training Brigade and Main Post all have boxing teams practicing now for a full night of boxing in February. The exact date of the matches will be announced at a later date. Next week The BAYONET will have the first of a series of profiles on the boxers training for the fight.

The first subject of our profiles will be Ricky Minggie of the Kelley Hill Boxing Team. He is a former lightweight champion of Fort Gordon in 1976-77 and he is aiming to become the lightweight champion of Fort Benning this year.

Be sure to read The BAYONET sports section in the following weeks for profiles and information on Fort Benning's revitalization of the sport of boxing.

Two Benning soldiers get motivational course here

Two USACC-Fort Benning soldiers recently graduated from the post's two-week Unit Discussion Leaders Course (UDLC).

SSgt. Mario Gabriel Jr., an air traffic controller team supervisor, and Sp5 Verline Franklin, unit training clerk, were among 35 graduates of the course conducted here.

This course trains soldiers to conduct unit seminars aimed at improving organizational effectiveness by motivating people within the unit. Much of the course content deals with equal opportunity and awareness of individual differences.

Training was conducted in a small group seminar fashion which allowed all potential discussion leaders to participate.

"To graduate we had to train, practice and work hard," said Gabriel. "But it paid off. I learned how others feel and it increased my understanding of human and race relations."

Both soldiers said they learned a good deal about how others feel during the course.

Franklin said, "It (the UDLC) was an experience I'll never forget. I learned more about myself while I was studying other peoples' cultures. I hope that I've become more objective."

Both graduates will take a wealth of cultural experiences back to their unit to share with others.

"I think we'd better consult your map again, Cosgrove!"

CENSUS

Federal law requires everyone to answer the census; it protects the confidentiality of personal information. The only people who can see an individual's replies are census employees, who are sworn to secrecy under threat of a $5,000 fine and a five-year prison term.

Courts uphold privacy

In the 50-year history of the modern census confidentiality law, not once has the Bureau or one of its employees been formally charged with releasing census information about any individual. Landmark court rulings through this century have continually upheld the Bureau's refusal to release such information, even to the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, or to corporations involved in litigation.

Moreover, the Bureau designs its procedures to avoid situations that could lead to a breach of the confidentiality law. Names, addresses, and telephone numbers are never allowed to enter any computer. Social Security numbers are not requested by the census.

The 1980 census tabulations will yield a comprehensive statistical picture of the nation, and of every state, county, and community. This data about social and economic characteristics will be used time and again in ways that benefit all strata of society, though the Census Bureau merely provides the data, and never applies it.

Being counted is crucial to full political representation as well. Census figures, besides their role in reapportioning the House of Representatives, are also used by most states to redistrict their legislatures and to adjust boundaries in municipal election areas.

American business firms, from local stores to multinational corporations, rely on census statistics when selecting new sites, evaluating product lines, and for other purposes that ultimately affect the state of the nation's economy.

Concern is often voiced about why particular questions are included in the census. For example, one question asks about plumbing facilities. Why? Because, for several decades, plumbing facilities have been an important indicator of housing quality. The adequacy of plumbing facilities is a key factor in determining which communities receive Federal housing assistance funds.

Almost every question in the 1980 census is needed for legislative purposes and often provides valuable data for industry, local government, and others. All census questions survived years of scrutiny and have been reviewed by Congress.

Pressure increases

As the importance of census information has increased, so has pressure to assure that every U.S. resident is counted. An unprecedented effort will be made by the Census Bureau to obtain the fullest possible count, especially in areas with significant minority populations.

For several years, advisory committees composed of Black, Hispanic and Asian-American leaders have worked with the Census Bureau to devise ways for improving the count of minorities. Similar meetings have been held with Native American leaders. A number of innovative methods will be used during the 1980 census to obtain the best possible count, such as double-checking households reported vacant and placing census takers in all night movies, taverns, and on street corners in major urban areas to find the uncounted.

Promptness helps

There has also been an unprecedented effort by the Bureau to prepare a complete list of mailing addresses, to assure that every household receives a questionnaire on March 28. It is estimated that $2 million will be shaved from the cost of the census for every one percent of the nation's households that promptly mails back fully answered questionnaires.

By law, the Bureau must provide the President with the population totals for all the states by Jan. 1, 1981, for purposes of Congressional reapportionment. A new law also requires that the population of counties, cities, and other political subdivisions be provided to each state no later than April 1, 1981, for redrawing district lines.

Volunteer of Year named

By TIM BOIVIN

Olga Davis, president of the Fort Benning International Wives Club and an Army Community Service (ACS) volunteer, has been chosen as the Volunteer of the Year for the second consecutive year.

In the recognition of her achievement, Mrs. Davis received a commemorative plaque and a bouquet of flowers. Mrs. Davis is the wife of SSgt. Jack Davis and has two children, Kristina and Eugene.

The International Wives Club is a social organization of foreign born wives of military personnel. The ladies participate in various social and fund raising activities throughout the year as well as performing ACS volunteer work.

Monthly membership meetings are held the first Tuesday of each month at Bldg. 83 at the ACS yellow arch. Membership is open to any foreign born wives of military personnel.

Traffic tips

Georgia Code 68-1702 and Fort Benning Regulation 190-5 state that motorists are required to turn their headlights on when driving "from a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise, and at anytime when it is raining in the driving zone, and at any other time when there is not sufficient visibility to render clearly discernible persons and vehicles on the highway at a distance of 500 feet."

In accordance with Georgia Code Ann 568A-605, any vehicle stopping or turning must give a signal by means of the hand and arm or by vehicle directional devices.

In accordance with Georgia Code Ann 568A-606, all signals given by hand and arm shall be given from the left side of the vehicle in the following manner, and such signals shall indicate as follows:

- Left Turn — Hand and arm extended horizontally.
- Right Turn — Hand and arm extended upward.
- Stop or Decreased Speed — Hand and arm extended downward.

1/58th declares war on waste

With OPEC's latest price increase, it will cost the 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) more money to operate their armored personnel carriers.

Lt. Col. H. Thomas Fincher Jr. has informed his command that he is "waging war" on energy waste and has an energy conservation program in full swing in his battalion.

The success of Fincher's program lies with his men who observe energy conservation during the course of their daily duties. They make on the spot corrections and report energy waste to their superiors and then, together with their supervisors, discover a way to resolve the waste problem.

These corrections and suggestions, if of substantial merit, will not go unrewarded. Fincher makes his appreciation known with letters of appreciation and passes.

Fincher has also stated that if a suggestion has indication of a large savings to the Army, or if the soldier wishes that his suggestion be forwarded for evaluation, the Battalion Conservation NCO will assist the soldier in filling out DA Form 1045 (Army Suggestion Form).

OCS Hall of Fame inducts 39 new members

By JAY BRITTON

The weekend of Dec. 7, was the highlight of the year for several former OCS graduates, as well as for the candidates currently in the course.

On the morning of Dec. 7 39 graduates were inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame. The Hall of Fame honors those graduates who have been awarded the Medal of Honor, been promoted to at least the rank of colonel while serving on active duty, been recognized for prominence in the civilian community or been recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service. Since the Hall was established in 1958, 131 general officers, 743 colonels, and 51 prominent civilians have been inducted. Those attending the ceremony, conducted by Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., himself a Hall of Fame member, included six general officers, 10 colonels and one civilian. Each inductee spoke briefly to the candidates attending the ceremony about the program "in the day," the changes they observed (principally the women in the program now), the Army as a career, and the absence of the "old school" at Harmony Church. All candidates, former and present, seemed to appreciate the fact that very few real changes have taken place over the years — OCS remains a tough course which turns out the highest quality second lieutenants in the Army.

The memorable weekend began the evening of Dec. 6 with a social hour at the Fort Benning Officers Club hosted by Col. George Geczy Jr., commander of the School Brigade, and attended by inductees, candidates, and guests. There was much reminiscing and renewing of old acquaintances among the former graduates, and all enjoyed comparing notes with the present candidates.

The culmination of the weekend was the OCS 50th Company Senior Status Review held after the induction ceremony on York Field. The company had completed its 10th week of training and the review, planned and executed entirely by the candidates, denoted the change from intermediate to senior status. The Hall of Fame inductees, who were asked to vote on the performance of the review, voted to award the company The School Brigade's Drill and Ceremonies Streamer for displayed proficiency.

Reverend H.J. Flakes

Benning service honors King

A memorial service honoring the late Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on the 51st anniversary of his birth, Jan. 15, was held Tuesday at Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium. Soldiers and civilians alike came from all over post to fill the auditorium.

The service began at 11 a.m. with a call to worship by Airborne Chaplain Anderson Grant opening the program. The OCS choir sang the spiritual 'Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen' and the 283rd Army Band played the prelude music.

The gospel according to St. Luke was read from the scriptures by Chaplain Charles J. McDonnell, USAIC, who then praised Dr. King for his leadership and teachings.

Col. Richard McKee, deputy post commander, introduced the special guest speaker, the Reverend J. H. Flakes of the 4th Street Baptist Church in Columbus and president of the local NAACP chapter.

In his memorial address, Flakes began by saying, "If our nation had lived out the truest meaning of its creed, Dr. King would still be alive today. Yet people of all nationalities gather here today to honor and memorialize King."

One of the highlights of the service was the playing of the Martin Luther King speech given at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. on Aug. 28, 1963. In his famous speech he said, "I have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed. We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

In the King tradition of love and service to others, the Fort Benning audience expressed their tribute to the memory of this great American.

Courtesy more than saluting

By TIM BOIVIN

Military courtesy is something that everyone hears about from the moment they join the Army. However, few soldiers really know what courtesy means. As my buddy, PFC Harval Schnard, said, "Oh yeah, that means I have to put my cigarette in my left hand when I salute an officer." Military courtesy is a lot more than just saluting.

Sure, there's saluting and taking your hat off when you're in a building but it is also more than that.

Courtesy means not having to use foul language to prove how tough a soldier you are. It also means not making a big scene in the mess hall so all of your friends know that, yes indeed, you are without a doubt the biggest, baddest and meanest guy in this or any other world. Some people like to have a nice quiet dinner and, while you may think you are having fun shouting across the hall at someone, it does annoy some people who were raised to believe the proper way to eat is quietly.

Speaking of the mess hall, military courtesy also applies here when you are waiting in line. You stroll up and see your old drinking buddy at the front of the line. So you excuse yourself to others and move to the front of the line. What's wrong with that?

Well, this is what's wrong with that: 99 percent of the people patiently wait in line even though they can see their friends ahead of them. Usually, it also embarrasses your friend who had to wait his turn like everyone else.

Military courtesy takes other shapes and sizes. It means not letting someone sit on hold while you finish gabbing with your buddy on another line. It means hurrying up a little so the person ahead of you with his hands more than full will have someone hold the door open.

Then, and this especially applies to the new people in the Army going through initial training, there is your conduct at theatres, bars and other places people go to spend their leisure time. There is no need for the screaming that goes on during the movies or for destroying and defacing the building you are in.

As you can see, military courtesy is an everyday, 24 hours a day thing and a lot of the decisions made in regards to it are common sense. There is no need to act like you are back in grade school when you are a grown person.

Military courtesy reflects on your own personality and, in the end, helps to improve you as a person. It also reflects in the way other people thing of the military. Be on your best behavior and use a little common sense and you will notice that other people will think better of you than previously and that is always a good feeling to have.

Platoon sergeant airs job gripes

By CHARLES S. YOUNG

He wakes up in the morning ready to take on any and everything that the day may bring or force on him. Each day brings about a new change within the platoon, everybody has their own problems and he must cope with everyone on an individual basis. He gives 110 percent to his work, his job, the people he works with and himself.

But when plans just don't pan out the way the platoon wants them to, the sergeant becomes the fall guy. The platoon sergeant's task is a very difficult job; he is like a rubber band, stretched from end to end. He must still be able to keep his head above water and always come up with the proper solution. No one really cares about his feelings, his ups and downs, or what bothers him, as long as everyone else is taken care of.

When the platoon sergeant gets the men off work to take care of personal business, he's okay. But when the platoon sergeant gets hard and tells the men they will have to find a way to take care of business during lunch hours, or let the wife take care of matters, then the platoon sergeant is a biscuit eater, not understanding and cold hearted.

It's not easy being a platoon sergeant. His plans must be kept quiet, his feelings must be kept to himself, he can't really be friends to anyone. His problems are totally his own; if he seems like his problems are bothering him, that's a sign of weakness as far as the platoon is concerned. He should be above all that.

The platoon sergeant dies at least 1,000 times a week within himself because he has to convince his family as well as his troops that he is available any time they need him and personal life comes second to the men.

I feel if more soldiers understood the role of the platoon sergeant, appreciated him and what he stands for, then maybe he wouldn't be the "man alone."

Credit Union customers say service too slow

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to address the subject of prompt service and drive-in windows.

On three separate occasions, I have found that during the hours of noon-1 p.m., TIC Federal Credit Union does not properly man its drive-in window. Unfortunately, this is the period during which the majority of the military community (DA civilians included) MUST take their lunch.

I considered writing after the second occurrence in order to voice my feelings. However, I decided that maybe I had simply experienced two isolated cases. Today, Jan. 10, I became convinced that such was not the case as, once again, I had to wait in excess of 15 minutes for service.

The term, "drive-in window" connotes and rightfully should indicate prompt, time-saving service. I submit to the Credit Union management that possibly they could reschedule the lunch hours of their employees so as to provide this "prompt, time-saving" service.

If this is not feasible, maybe they should just close the drive-in win-

Operation Crime Stop

WHAT: Aggravated assault/attempted robbery

WHEN: 6 p.m., Jan. 4

WHERE: Cusseta Road, Sand Hill area

SUMMARY: A Fort Benning soldier walking alone was stopped by two unknown white males operating a Plymouth Duster, dark blue in color. The occupants of the vehicle demanded the soldier's money. Upon refusing the demand, the complainant was shot in the leg.

Anyone having information pertaining to the identification of the suspects is requested to contact the military police desk at 545-5222 or CID at 545-5237.

Crime prevention is everyone's business. Anyone suspicious persons or activities should be reported to the MP desk, 545-5222.

WHAT: Housebreaking/larceny of private property

WHERE: Rooms 215, 217, 231 and 232, Bldg. 2754B (barracks), 44th Company, The School Brigade

WHEN: Between 6:45 a.m. and noon, Jan. 11

SUMMARY: Person(s) unknown gained entry into the unsecured rooms and forcibly entered four wall lockers removing a total of $464 and three watches valued at a total of $175.

Personnel living in the barracks are reminded to secure their wall lockers and rooms.

Anyone having information on this larceny is requested to notify CID at 545-5237 or the MP desk at 545-5222/5223/5224.

Crime prevention is everyone's business. Call the MP desk sergeant at 545-5222/5223 whenever you observe suspicious personnel.

Hospital has call-in system

Martin Army Hospital's clinical laboratory has initiated a new system of informing out patients of their throat culture results.

As of Jan. 14, all patients receiving throat cultures will be given an identification number. The results will be determined within 72 hours and the numbers of all positive tests will be recorded on a tape connected to a telephone.

The patient has only to call 544-COLD and listen for their number. If it is listed, showing a positive culture, then they must call their initial treatment clinic for further instructions. This usually means coming back for specific medication.

Each positive number will remain on the tape for 24 hours. Previously, the clinic tried to call every individual with a positive culture but many times were unable to reach the patient. It is hoped this new system will be more efficient.

Glad you asked

If a single soldier lives off-post and pays rent, do you think the servicemember should maintain a room in the barracks?

Sp4 Slyvia Jones
15th Finance Company
No, let someone else who needs the room take it. It is too much hassle for the servicemember to manage and take care of two places.

Sp4 Dwayne Stork
261st Medical Detachment
No, they shouldn't have to maintain a room, if he doesn't use the facilities in the barracks. By living off-post it shows he has more responsibility. A individual has to have more freedom. Everything he does in the barracks is under observation and he can't totally exercise his/her freedom or learn responsibility.

Sp4 Michael Rowland
187th Pathfinder Company
No, in the company that I belong to, they do not have enough accomadations to house everyone so people are not sacrificing their rooms. Also, BAQ and separate rations should be authorized for specialist fours and above.

SSgt. Donald Smallwood
15th Finance Company
No, because the company commander has authorized the servicemember to live off-post and the servicemember shouldn't have to clean the common areas etc., unless the whole company has to. It should be given to the CQ to do instead.

CWO3 Alfred W. Thompson
USASSC-FORSCOM Fort McPherson, Ga.
No, if the servicemember is responsible to live off-post then he should not maintain a room in the barracks. Normally, it's a good policy that they have a phone off-post where they can be contacted in case of an emergency.

PFC Kenneth Ross
Headquarters Company, USAG
Fort McPherson, Georgia
No, not if he is paying rent. He wouldn't have time to clean his house and then his room in the barracks also.

dow during this period to preclude customers from wasting their limited lunch period, awaiting the expected "prompt" service.

While on the subject of the Credit Union, I would like to share one more observation. On several occasions, both inside and at the drive-in window, I have observed and received service from tellers who seemed to have a somewhat exasperated or indifferent — if not outwardly indignant — attitude. While this can be understood when infrequently encountered, it is not acceptable on a recurring basis. I have wondered if these attitudes could be attributed to stress caused by work overload.

I appeal to other readers to speak out regarding the services they receive (or do not receive) from the offices, AAFES concessions, and other enterprises which serve the military community. Too many people express or maintain the attitude "it won't do any good." If no one ever expresses their opinions or complaints then "it won't do any good" is exactly right. As my uncle always said, "Can't do never could do nothing."

To the Editor:
One of the biggest drawbacks of today's Army is a waste of important resources. Military life needs to be geared toward efficiency and away from wastefulness. Poor organization is a cause of much waste, not the least of which is wasted time.

The Federal Credit Union, like a large number of other enterprises, is using the drive-thru window service as a method of efficiently serving customers. Ideally, this is supposed to be a time-saving device for people finding it necessary to handle financial matters when little time is available — often during THEIR lunch hour. The TIC Credit Union often defeats the entire purpose by failing to have these windows properly manned. When this occurs, instead of the drive-in window being an expedient method of serving clients, time is wasted by clients waiting for assistance. At times, when the Credit Union does not have a sufficient number of employees to assist clients at both the inside desks and the drive-thru, it is highly suggested that the drive-thru window be closed. Clients would then know it is necessary to go inside to receive assistance.

This reorganization would alleviate much wasted time for clients and allow employees to work more efficiently.

Degree program for enlisted?

To the Editor:
I would like to know the reason the Army conducts a degree completion program for officers and not one for enlisted personnel.

It is my understanding that both enlisted and commissioned personnel are entitled to the GI bill until it's expiration date in 1989, as well as tuition assistance while on active duty. But only officers are afforded the opportunity of attending college on a full time basis.

If this is not the case I would like additional information concerning the degree completion for enlisted personnel to be published. If it is in fact correct, I would appreciate an explaination or justification for this type of discrimination.

There is a degree completion course (Fully Funded Enlisted Education Program) for enlisted personnel contained in chapter 5, AR 621-1, Training of Military Personnel at Civilian Institutions. Details may be obtained from the Army Education Center.

Army man gets Air Force reunion

By SKIP KORSON

ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE, GA.--Christmas came a little early this year for retiring Army CWO Robert L. Wolff, of Racine, Wis., now stationed at Fort Benning.

A former Air Force tailgunner, Wolff wanted one thing before leaving the service Dec. 31 after 20 years, one month, two weeks and a day, divided between the Army and Air Force. The dual-rated chief warrant officer--he flies helicopters and the Army's fixed wing aircraft--wanted a reunion after 13 years with his former B-52 aircraft commander, Col. Donald O. Pflugrath, now 19th Bomb Wing commander at Robins.

The Army gave permission for Wolff's flight recently to the Middle Georgia air base in a four-seat T-42. The 19th Bomb Wing arranged for the tiny plane to land in the Strategic Air Command area at Robins and to park alongside a towering B-52.

Santa's red suit might not have been visible but the cooperative spirit of the holidays prevailed as Wolff's former captain welcomed him back to the Air Force for a few hours.

Boarding a later model B-52 than he served with Wolff, Pflugrath admitted, "I think he wanted to fly a B-52 but this tour should update him. It's great to have him back."

Wolff quickly chimed in, "I really just wanted to see the colonel and to thank him for steering me toward my second career. He put me in a flight simulator for the first time and said he thought I'd make a good pilot."

That was in 1966, two years before Wolff was graduated in the top 10 percent of his claass at the Army warrant officer candidate flight school. Pflugrath and Wolff had served three years as members of the same B-52 crew at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, with the 17th Bomb Wing, which they identified on the day of the reunion as "Jimmy Doolittle's old outfit."

Wolff hopes to fly with a Vermonth airline after he settles in his Burlington, Vt., retirement home with his wife and two small children.

Before the t rim, green-clad blond Army man departed at the controls of the T-42, his former boss escorted him on a tour of the SAC area, linched with him, gave him a wing history, then stepped aside for a presentation to Wolff by wing tailgunners.

Speaking on behalf of the Bulldogs' (tailgunners') Association, MSgt. Leeroy Birtain, squadron gunner, told Wolff as he presented his membership certificate, Bulldog patch and tradtional coin, "Once a gunner, always a gunner. This is late coming but now you have the proper credentials to be a lifetime gunner. Don't ever be caught without this coin. Take it in the shower. If you're cuaght without it, you have to stand the challenger to the beverage of his choice."

The reunion was arranged by 1st Lt. John M. Brown, weather officer at Fort Benning's Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron. Wolff had given Detachment 10 119 PIREPs (pilot reports) of critical weather information while flying during 1979, setting a new record for Army aviators.

Col. Donald O. Pflugrath (R), commander, 19th Bomb Wing, Robins AFB, holds a reunion in the cockpit of a B-52 this week with CWO Robert L. Wolff, who retired Dec. 31 from the Army at Fort Benning. The dual-rated Army pilot formerly served as Pflugrath's tailgunner on another B-52 at Wright-Patterson AFB in the 1960s.

Professor Safety

Placing your citizens band radio transmitter in the trunk of your car and running just the microphone to the dashboard may seem like a great anti-theft idea, but it may be less than safe, warns the Federal Communications Commission. Any spark caused by proper or improper functioning of the radio could ignite the highly combustible gasoline vapors that sometimes escape from the car's fuel tank or filler peipe. Bumper-mounted whip antennas are also hazardous. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine–Spring 1979)

Reunited after all these years

By TIM BOIVIN

Two officers in Company C, 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, recently discovered that their ancestors were comrades in the American Revolutionary War.

2nd Lt. Terry Driskill, attached to the company while waiting for his Infantry Officer Basic Course (IOBC) to begin, and 2nd Lt. Wesley Jense, C-3-1 executive officer, were comparing their family backgrounds when they discovered the similarities.

Jense's fourth great-grandfather was Brig. Gen. Nathaniel Greene, brigade commander of the Rhode Island Line in 1775. Driskill's fifth great-grandfather was Pvt. William Driskill, who served under Greene and fought for the duration of the war.

Driskill said, "We both have an interest in genealogy, the study of family history, and that is what led us to the discovery."

Jense said, "The amazing thing is that the situation is practically repeating itself. Lt. Driskill is assisting me while he is waiting to begin his IOBC here."

C5-A loads up

The 43th Engineer Battalion, "Bravo Company, practices loading, unloading and tiedown proceedures on an Air Force C5-A during a training exercise at Lawson Air Field January 10. The C5-A is as wide as a four lane highway and can carry loads up to 209,000 pounds. This large aircraft is used during peacetime and especially during wartime for the deployment of equipment and other necessary supplies needed by troops.

Shipping allowance upped

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) Senior NCOs and officers going on accompanied tours to certain areas in Germany will now be able to ship more household goods than in the past, according to DA officals.

Some soldiers are assigned to locations where the Air Force provides housing and furnishings, officals explained. Due to a shortage of furnishings, E-7s and above assigned to Kaiserslautern, Ramstein, Landstuhl and Sembach are now authorized the full joint travel regulations weight allowance for their grade.

Officals say this will allow 800 soldiers to ship the same amount of household goods as Air Force members assigned to these areas. In addition, an offical explained, this action will make more furnishings available to junior enlisted personnel.

Junior soldiers assigned to these locations, and all grades assigned to most other areas in Germany, will continue to be limited in the weight allowances currently authorized for overseas shipment, officals added.

Soldiers being assigned to one of these locations should check with their local transportation office for details.

Power of Attorney can ease soldier's worries

A Power of Attorney is a legal document in which you give to another individual the power and authority to act for you. The Power of Attorney is a very useful instrument, particularly when you are overseas.

Let us suppose, for example, that you are going overseas on an unaccompanied tour. You may wish to give your spouse a Power of Attorney to take care of all your general business while you are away. Or maybe you and your spouse are going on a vacation without the children. You may wish to give a Power of Attorney to the person taking care of your children so that emergency medical treatment can be administered if necessary. Or maybe you are buying a house in a state other than the one in which you are stationed. A Power of Attorney given to someone in that state could make the purchase much easier.

Within the limits specified, the person to whom you give the Power of Attorney has full authority to sign your name or deal with your property as though it were his own. Consequently, such authority should be given only to a person whom you trust completly.

Types of Powers of Attorney

There are two types of Power of Attorney: the Special Power of Attorney and the General Power of Attorney. A Special Power of Attorney grants a "limited" or "special power," for example, the power to cash checks or sell property. A General Power of Attorney is much broader. It grants to another the authority to transact your business in general.

Revoking a Power of Attorney

A Power of Attorney may be revoked at any time. Normally, a termination date appears on the Power of Attorney and it automatically expires on that date. Revocation will also take place automatically at the death of the person giving the power or of the recipient of the power.

A Power of Attorney can also be revoked by informing the recipient of the power of its revocation and by notifying third persons who deal with the recipient. If you desire to revoke a Power of Attorney, you should consult the Legal Assistance Office.

Notary public services

Notary public services are furnished free of charge by the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Office to all active duty and retired military personnel and their dependents. Notary publics are legally authorized to acknowledge signatures, administer oaths and perform other similar services which can expedite handling your legal affairs.

The following are tips which should be considered prior to seeing a notary.

- DO NOT sign any papers which you desire to have notarized until you are in the presence of the notary.
- DO NOT make any changes in the document(s) until you have seen the notary or an attorney.
- Document(s) cannot be notarized unless the individual whose signature is to be notarized appears in person before the notary.
- If you desire certified copies be made of any document, be sure to have the original document with you so that the notary can compare the copies with the original. Make sure the entire document (both sides) has been copied.
- A general notary public cannot make certified copies of birth certificates, marriage certficates, death records or DD form 214. Certified copies of these documents must be procured from the office (normally the State-County Clerk's Office) that issued the original document.

Persons interested in seeking more information about Powers of Attorney or the services of a notary public are urged to call the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

Livsey says offensive spirit important

Editor's note: Maj. Gen. William J. Livsey, commanding general 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized), in Germany and a former commander of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning from July 1977 to May 1979, recently was the guest speaker for the IOAC students in Marshall Auditorium.

Story and photos by GARY JONES

"Today's soldiers are just as good, just as brave and just as trainable as soldiers in the past," said Livsey. Livsey was speaking in response to a question about the quality of today's soldier.

"In the 27 years that I have been in the Army I have watched soldiers very carefully," Livsey explained, "I notice a tendency here lately for some officers and NCOs to say some bad things about their soldiers. That can never work, it should never happen! You often hear it said that today's soldiers do not read very well and you hear a lot said about the quality of them but I can't recall anybody ever asking a soldier for a high school diploma when the fighting had to be done," Livsey said.

"All that today's soldiers need is the care, compassion, leadership and love of the officers and NCOs responsible for them. You have to love them all! Some of them are occasionally bad and they are the ones that require a lot of love but you have to do that," explained Livsey. "Given the kind of leadership, care and compassion I'm talking about, they (the soldier) will never let you down. There will never be a problem with that, I can guarantee it!"

"Every time the United States has gone to war it has done so unprepared. And we always pay in the same way — with American lives and blood."

Not only today's soldier but the Army's ability to defend this country and maintain world peace recently has been questioned. "Every time the United States has gone to war it has done so unprepared," Livsey said, "and we always pay in the same way - with American lives and blood."

Livsey recommended that the students read a book by T.R. Fehrenbach, entitled, 'THIS KIND OF WAR' about the situation preceding the Korean War in order to get a better insight into today's need for leader preparedness and understanding. He emphasized to especially read chapter 25, 'PROUD LEGIONS' for not only a better understanding of the Korean conflict but also the similarities that could exist today.

For many years, opposing forces around the world have been bettering their military capabilities. According to Livsey, it is the duty of the military to defend our country's interests based on the will of the American people.

When considering the ever-expanding capability of potential enemy forces "it is imperative that we plan to fight forward" and that the officers and NCOs display and maintain an "offensive spirit" within themselves and their men, according to Livsey. "In the 8th Division, our entire defense plan is based on offensive action and it's not something that we dreamed up just so that we could say that but it's something that makes sense to me," explained Livsey. "The active defense in the final analysis is nothing more than putting your combat power where it can do the most good."

According to Livsey, the key to a division's effectiveness is communications, knowledge of and planning for the active defense. "The lieutenants and captains in Germany (8th Division) know more about their defense plans today than they have at any time since I have been in the Army," he said.

Keeping the force manned

Livsey emphasized that the Army's position on manning the force in the future lies with the volunteer Army and a big part of manning that volunteer force is keeping today's good soldiers in the Army.

It is always a good idea to re-enlist the soldier who has distinguished himself by being named Soldier of the Month or has won a award or medal of some kind, but it is more important for commanders to "re-enlist any soldier that can satisfactorily do his/her job," Livsey said. "When talking re-enlistment, don't get hung up on statistics. When you talk re-enlistment you are talking about the whole Army," explained Livsey. It doesn't matter so much which unit is first in re-enlistment, as long as the Army as a whole has the soldiers it needs to do the jobs that are required. "You are talking cost and what it takes to go back into the civilian sector and bring a soldier in and put him in the slot where the soldier didn't re-enlist," explained Livsey.

Do drugs affect combat readiness?

"The bewildering thing about drug abuse is that in terms of your overall combat readiness, except for the turbulance that is created when you have to court martial a soldier, it doesn't bother your combat readiness nearly as much as, say, alcohol abuse," Livsey said.

Livsey explained that drugs are plentiful in Europe. Marijuana is not that big of a problem although it does exist but rather hard drugs, such as heroin that is sold very cheap, is one of the main problems in Europe. "We are addressing it (drug abuse) on every front with every program we can think of and I believe we are making some progress," he explained. "As a matter of fact, I will go so far as to say that alcohol impairs combat readiness more than some drugs."

Be energy conscious

Home insulation takes many forms

Can you count yourself among the thousands of Georgia home dwellers who have committed themselves to energy conservation? More than 100,000 residents added insulation to their attics in 1977, and nearly that many planned to do so in 1978, according to a recent survey by a major energy supplier.

Assuming these consumers had already taken the initial steps of reducing winter thermostat settings to 68 degrees, adding caulking and weather stripping and possibly storm windows and doors, they went to the next logical place--the attic--to continue energy conservation measures.

Why the attic? Because heat is lost up through the attic in winter, and that's where it builds up in summer. Therefore, this area needs insulation strongly resistant to heat transfer, a quality described by the products's "R-value." Residential energy conservation experts recommend attic insulation with an R-30 value for Georgia's climate.

Where to insulate next? Under the floors--because studies show that energy savings are greater for each dollar you spend there than in walls. Also, insulation is more easily installed under floors than in walls. Floor insulation should have an R-13 value.

The previously cited home survey showed, however, that Georgians are insulating their walls ahead of their floors by nearly a two to one margin. If you have not begun to insulate, keep the proper sequence for insulation in mind: attic, floors, walls. The suggested standard for wall insulation is R-18.

Two major types of insulation are available for attics and floors: mineral wool, consisting of fiberglass or rock wool, and cellulose.

Fiberglass and rock wool insulation can be blown in or purchased in batts with either a foil or kraft paper vapor barrier. Batts have an insulating value of R-3.3 for each inch or thickness. Loose fill has an R-value or about R-2.2 per inch.

Cellulose is finely ground newspaper or other paper products, mixed with fire-retarding chemicals. It is either poured in or blown in. It has a rating of about R-3.5 to the inch and can be used in walls as well as attics.

Another type of wall insulation is foam, or urea formaldehyde, with an R-value of about R-4.25 per inch. Foam can be pumped into the walls of existing homes by drilling small, easily patched holes. It is generally more expensive than other types of insulation, however, and in its present form cannot be used in attics and floors. Since it is usually mixed on the site, the quality of the final product is dependent on the skill of the operator. If the foam is imperfectly mixed or installed, it shrinks, leaving walls unprotected.

How About That?

Contrast needed

By WILLIAM W. ERBACH SR.
TIC Chaplain

Most of us have had the experience of seeing the trees change in the fall. Some trees are decked out with scarlet. Other trees are golden yellow. A few will be brown and still more will be green. This contrast of colors is one of the real beauties of the fall season.

You may think of some special tree, like the maple tree in your yard, as the prettiest. But if all the trees were scarlet would the world be as pretty? It would be nice, certainly, but wouldn't you miss the contrast of colors? One of the chief complaints I have heard from people living in Florida is that they miss the change of seasons. The scarlet leaves always seem more brilliant when we see them next to the gold and the brown and the green. How about that?

I believe that people are like those trees. They come in all shapes and sizes and colors. And all these are needed to make up the beauty of the world. God knew what he was doing when he passed out the leaves. Can you imagine a winter holiday expressed in palm trees? How about a maple tree with rubber tree leaves? Each tree had leaves that matches the rest of it's structure.

And so it is with humans. We are each given talents and capabilities to match our own make-up, personalities. We never need to be jealous of what someone else has or what someone else can do, because it is the very differences that make this world the wonderful place that it is to live in, and you are a very important and valuable part of it.

Gymnastics for boys offered

The Fort Benning School of Dance will be offering gymnastics for boys ages 7-12 years. The classes will begin Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. and end at 8 p.m. The instructors will be Jack Hancock and Zane McFadden, both accomplished gymnasts and former members of the West Point gymnastics team. An orientation will be held this evening at 7 p.m. at the studio (Building 1231). For more information call Leslie Richardson at 687-6019.

Discussion group planned

A discussion group is being planned for new Army wives. Discussion will include how she can maintain her freedom and still do the things necessary to support her husband's career, the part she plays in her husband's career and how to be assertive without being aggressive. For more information about this informal group call 682-0928.

Smokers to pay more for habit

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--Major tobacco companies have announced a cost price increase for cigarettes, necessitating a price increase by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) effective next Saturday. The increase will include both individual packs and cartons and will apply to tax-paid cigarettes in CONUS, Alaska and Hawaii and to tax-free cigarettes sold in overseas Exchanges.

King/regular size cigarettes in CONUS will increase from $4.25 to $4.45 a carton and the price of 100 mm cartons will be raised from $4.35 to $4.55. Individual packs in all lengths will go from 50 to 55 cents.

Overseas carton prices will be $3.55 for king/regular size and $3.65 for 100 mm: both prices reflect a 30 cent increase. Prices for individual packs will rise from 40 to 45 cents.

FPCA Opens Doors To Absentee Voting

Displayed with this article is one of the most important documents you—as an American—probably will read this year.

It is the new, improved Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) which in most States, when properly completed and submitted, will serve as an application for registration and a request for an absentee ballot.

Three general rules to follow when completing the FPCA are—

- TYPE or PRINT clearly all entries,
- SIGN where indicated, and
- CONSULT with your voting counselor or officer if you have questions.

In the abbreviated explanations below, general information is provided. For a broader explanation, consult the instruction sheet which comes with the FPCA. If there are still questions, CONSULT with the unit voting counselor or officer, your commanding officer, the nearest U.S. Embassy or Consulate, or anyone with access to the 1980 Voting Assistance Guide.

First step is to complete the "APPLICATION FOR STATE OF _____" and the "COUNTY, CITY OR TOWNSHIP OF _____" blanks at the top of the form.

From here on, numbers in the explanation chart refer to portions of the FPCA.

1—Provide full name—Last name, first name, middle name.

2—Give your Home of Record or Domicile in the U.S.

3—Give City, State, County, and Date.

4—If naturalized, you must provide Place, Number, Date; if you are American-born, write "Not Applicable" in these spaces.

5—Self-explanatory.

6—(a) Provide Social Security Number; (b) provide ID card number.

7—CONSULT with voting officer/counselor. Some States require a separate application for registration and ballot requests. If you circle "(a)" or "(b)" or "(c)" and are eligible to vote you will receive a ballot only for the election circled; if you circle "(d) All as permitted" you will receive ballots for all elections as permitted by that State's law. CONSULT before selecting.

8—In Primary elections you do not have to disclose party preference in Alaska, Guam, Hawaii, Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, or Wisconsin since party choice is secret. CONSULT if in doubt.

9—CONSULT. In some States you may be liable for State or local taxes if you vote in State or local elections. However, the exercise of any right to register or vote in Federal elections by any U.S. citizens outside the United States shall not affect the determination of place of residence or domicile for purposes of any tax imposed under Federal, State, or local law. CONSULT.

(Mail this portion of the card to proper addressee.)

POST CARD REGISTRATION AND ABSENTEE BALLOT REQUEST

Notice: Illegible or incomplete information may delay or invalidate your request

Sergeant boosts supply efficiency

Sgt. Federico Sarnelli

By MARK CAUTHEN

In order for the Army to run smoothly and efficiently, its supply system must run smoothly and efficiently. The person who sees that it does just that is your unit supply sergeant.

Sgt. Fedirico Sarnelli, a native of Long Island, N.Y., is the supply sergeant for Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command. At the end of his first enlistment he decided to change his MOS from 19E (tanker) to supply. He said he decided to change to the supply field because, "I wanted a challenge and in my time in the Army as a tanker I failed to observe what I thought was an effectively run supply room. So I decided to try the job myself and see how well I could do."

The job of supply sergeant covers a lot of ground. Sarnelli's job includes ordering and stocking all the supplies his unit needs for its daily operation, equipment maintenance, linen turn-in and Quartermaster Laundry turn-in. Since the personnel in Headquarters Command cover a wide area of jobs, Sarnelli is also used as the unit armorer and energy conservation NCO.

Every job has problems and being a supply sergeant is no different. Sarnelli explained, "There are a lot of little problems but I'd say the paperwork is the biggest problem I have. You have to stay right on top of it or it'll bury you so far under it would be impossible to catch up."

Like all supply room, Sarnelli experiences problems at times with a soldier in the unit who wants something that is not available. "I try to overcome that problem by being courteous to the soldier I serve and explain the reason for any problem that might arise," he added.

During his off time, Sarnelli enjoys a wide range of activities, which includes music, drawing, photography and traveling. "I guess I enjoy traveling the most; it gives me a chance to meet people with backgrounds different from my own," he said.

Sarnelli plans to continue his career in the Army and try for a warrant officer position in the supply field.

524th cook wins again

By MATTHEW BOISON

Sp5 Elizabeth B. Dingler, a member of the 524th Dining Facility staff, was presented with the Cook of the Month award for her job performance in December.

This is not the first award listed to the five-year veteran's credit. Dingler placed second and third at the Culinary Art Show in the food color paintings division and won Chef of the Quarter, first quarter, fiscal year 1979. The award for Cook of the Month is Dingler's second.

"Women in the Army have a definite place," said Dingler. "All women should spend some time in the Army."

In March of this year, Dingler and the culinary arts team will leave for Fort Lee, Va. to compete in the Army-wide culinary competition. "The Army provides excellent training for a person," commented the native Georgian, "and it sure hasn't hurt me any."

The 25-year-old Dingler was a classical pianist before entering the Army. She was also runner-up in the county beauty pageant and entertained in theater shows while stationed in Germany.

During her three-year stay in Germany, Dingler served many meals to the soldiers in the field. "I even served meals while having to wear my gas mask," Dingler recalled. She even had the opportunity to cook for the American delegation while on temporary duty in Nijhemegan, Holland.

"The people in the 524th are good to work with," Dingler said. "They're people who believe in working as a team. It's tough for one person to accomplish these tasks alone; you need to develop a good working team."

Guard duty goes on ... and on

Guard mount begins the detail. The men stand ready for inspection by the officer of the day for military appearance and knowledge of military matters.

From the beginning of armies in the prehistoric dawn, there have been guards and guard duty.

Today's Army is no different. At Fort Benning the guards are posted 365 days a year, maintaining their posts in the summer's heat, the damp chill of winter, in rain, clear weather and even occassional snow.

Guard duty begins with guard mount. The sergeant of the guard prepares the men for inspection by the officer of the day. Standing proudly at their soldierly best, the men are ready for an intense and close inspection.

The officer of the day inspects each man individually, eyeing the soldier's appearance and testing his knowledge of military matters. "Soldier, what is your third general order?"

"Sir, my third general order is I will report violations of my special orders, emergencies and anything not covered in my instructions to the commander of the relief," spouts the soldier.

And so on down the line of troops until all have been inspected. There is a reward for the best soldier. He is named "Supernumerary" and his only duties are to be on call if one of the guards on duty falls sick and can no longer perform his duties.

The guards at Fort Benning are armed with either M16's or riot clubs. Most of the guards are armed with the clubs. "There have been instances of soldiers injuring themselves with M16's," said SSgt. Fredrick Holt, a sergea

Officer of the Day 1st Lt. Kenneth W. Johnson, Headquarters Company, 1/58th Infantry, closely inspects one of the soldiers during guard mount.

"Guard duty is not dull and routine, it is a great necessity to make sure nothing is stolen. It may sound ridiculous, but there are agents everywhere and they would love to get into one of our tracks and find out how they work. I think it is one of the most important duties a soldier can pull in the Army."

1st Infantry Training Brigade

Post's largest unit celebrates 4th anniversary

By PAT ASTRAN

The 1st Infantry Training Brigade celebrated its fourth anniversary on Jan. 7.

The celebration began with breakfast at the 7th Battalion. Brig. Gen. John Rogers and Col.Harold C. Van Meter found that sharing a cake cutting experience did not belong solely to brides and grooms.

The celebration continued in front of Bldg. 3410, Infantry Training Brigade Headquarters, Sand Hill where a narrative of the Brigade history was given.

In 1976, the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, orginally designated the Advanced Individual Training (AIT) Brigade was formed.

The initial activation of the ITB was held on York Field. Its prescribed mission was to conduct the specialized infantry training needed by each soldier following his basic training.

The AIT Brigade was envisioned to have five battalions with a total of 24 companies as well as the Headquarters Company and the Brigade Headquarters. Plans included 5,000 trainees and 1,650 permanent party support personnel at full stregnth.

The AIT concept ended in November 1978 and at that time the Brigade was tasked by Congress and the Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters to test the One Station Unit Training/Two Station Unit Training and the One Station Training strategies.

The test began January 2, 1978 and ended May 15, 1979. The Brigade is conducting One Station Unit Training and Two Station Training while the results of the test are being evaluated. The 1st Infantry Training Brigade now has seven Battalions and 37 Companies, this includes the new "F" Company in the 2nd Battalion and the Headquarters Company and Brigade Headquarters. The approximate daily stregnth is 6,000 soldiers in training and to date 1,047 cadre support personnel. The Infantry Training Brigade is the largest organization at Fort Benning.

Four of the seven Battalions are now located at Sand Hill area in the new multi-million dollar buildings. Along with them, the chapel, Brigade Headquarters, dental clinic, two troop medical clinics and a gymnasium were designed for the support of the troops in training.

There are plans for the ground breaking ceremony in February 1980 for the 5th Battalion Complex. Additional plans for a reception station to be built.

As of this writing, the One Station Unit Training (OSUT) strategy has been approved and the 1st Infantry Training Brigade will, beginning in May 1980, conduct OSUT exclusively.

Based on the continued dedication of the "Professional Cadre" and their devotion to duty, the 1st ITB will continue to live up to their motto: "Relentless in Training, Unyielding in Battle."

New logistics course avaliable to commanders

Newly assigned unit commanders will now be able to attend a logistics orientation course at Fort Benning.

The purpose of the course will be to provide an overview of the Installation Logistics Support Program.

The first class of company, battery, troop and detachment commanders was held last Friday in Classroom 56, Infantry Hall.

The course is approximately eight hours long with locations selected by the Directorate of Industrial Operations activities.

The program provides comprehensive and useful information about logistics functions on Fort Benning. Principle subjects discussed during the course include:

1. Supply
   a. Reports of survey
   b. Publications
   c. Equipment accountability
   d. Processing of requisitions
   e. Supply issue and storage facilities
   f. Reconciliation requirements
2. Services
   a. Food service program
   b. Laundry facility
3. Transportation
4. Organizational maintenance policies and programs
5. Material readiness reporting
6. Unit status reporting
7. Maintenance management improvement program

Maj. Steve D. Kuehl, chief of Material Readiness, said, "This program is to provide a meaningful relationship between their level of command and the installation; permiting a smooth and effective interface with all support functions provided by the Director of Industrial Operations."

Commenting on how the first class went last Friday, Kuehl added, "Exceptionally well! Thirty-seven students attended, including S4's and a representative from the IG office."

The course will be conducted on a bimonthly basis and scheduled three weeks in advance. Individuals concerned will be contacted individually concerning date, time and location.

Benning pet owners reminded to maintain control

By LOU GOLDMAN

Have you ever looked out your quarters window in time to see a pack of three or more dogs making the contents of your trash can their morning meal? Their table manners are awful, spreading trash all over the landscape. Or maybe your neighbor's pet has a favorite spot in the middle of your front lawn to deposit a little gift for you to clean up later. It's a growning problem at Fort Bebnning--STRAY ANIMALS.

The Fish and Game Control people at Fort Benning have picked up as many as 27 stray or abandoned cats over a recent two-day period. USAIC Regulation 210-10 states that pets will be leashed or under voice control and in sight of a responsible individual at all times. Animals which do not respond to voice commands are considered uncontrolled!

Military police will pick up animals found or reported running loose on post and turn them over to the veterinarian for confinement and dispostion if the pet is identifiable by the pet's registration tag number or other identification. The pet's owner will be notified to claim the animal.

Owners will be responsible to pay a $2 a day fee for feeding and maintaining their animal and, if the animal is in need of shots, a $5 fee will be paid before the animal is released to the owner.

Irresponsible animal control will not be tolerated. If the animal is apprehended and confined more than once, the owner will be notified in writing through command channels of his or her failure to adequately control the animal on the installation. Animals apprehended and confined three times will be removed from the installation.

Your pet is your responsibility. It's up to you as owner of the pet to see that it is not a nuisance. In the context of pets, the term "nuisance" is defined as a pet which commits actions that are injurious to public health, safety or peaceful enjoyment of property. A pet which is involved in biting or scratching episodes will be adjudged a nuisance under public health standards.

For the sake of a peaceful coexistance with your neighbors and the military police, please keep the pet you love in the loving environment of his or her home--NOT all over post.

Doughgirls run roughshod over Maxwell Owls

By TIM BOIVIN

The explosive Doughgirls played David against the Goliaths of Maxwell Air Force Base last weekend and slew the Owls twice.

Friday night the Doughgirls played like mere mortals and won 88-46 but Saturday they put on an awesome display of defense to annihilate the taller Owls, 107-28.

Coach Hezzie Baines said, "Although we rolled up large scores, if it wasn't for our 1-3-1 zone press that we used baseline to baseline we wouldn't have fared as well."

The pressing tactics of the Doughgirls resulted in 80 turnovers by the Owls Saturday night. The Doughgirls also dominated the boards at both ends of the court as they outrebounded the taller Owls by a four to one margin.

The Doughgirls had 70 rebounds Friday night and 76 rebounds Saturday. Coach Baines said, "We knew that the Owls average height was six feet so we spent the majority of practice the week before working on blocking out and other rebounding techniques."

All of the players Coach Baines took along on the trip scored in both games. Friday night Phyllis Colbert and Earlie Rockette led the Doughgirls with 14 points each and Angela Burns added 13. Sylvia Jones hit for nine points and had 27 rebounds. The entire Owl team pulled down only 19 rebounds.

Saturday night the Doughgirls were again led to victory by Colbert, who poured in 30 points and pulled down 23 rebounds, the same amount as all of the Owls could muster. Marietta James added 18 and Jeannette Dent and Earlie Rockette both had 14.

Coach Baines said, "Even though they did have a height advantage over us, they could not handle our press and my players did a good job positioning themselves for rebounds."

Asked about the defense the Owls tried to use, Coach Baines said, "They tried to use a 3-2 zone but Phyllis Colbert broke the zone's back by shooting the lights out from the outside, and then they had to go to a man-to-man defense. They were taller and slower and just could not keep up with us."

Although the victories pleased Coach Baines, he did face a problem in the future in that the Doughgirls lineup has been decimated by departures. Coach Baines searchingly asked for help, "We are looking for tall experienced centers and forwards who played in high school or college and a good penetrating guard who can hang in the air well."

The guard position is one problem that Coach Baines feels he has solved. He explained, "Marietta James was switched to guard a couple of week ago and she has pulled the point production way up from what was previously being put out."

The Doughgirls finally had some fans follow them to a game away from home and Coach Baines appreciates the support. He said, "The two games down at Maxwell saw about fifty fans come and stay overnight for both games and that was a first for us. We really appreciate the support and that makes the girls play that much better."

Coach Baines is very pleased with his team's progress thus far but he does have some reservations. He said, "I just hope we don't peak too early. Our only real goal this season is to win TRADOC in March and all these games are doing is preparing us for the tournament."

The Doughgirls next games are tonight and tomorrow at Fort McClellan.

Maxwell Air Force Base newest victims

Doughboys tune up for TRADOC, defeat Owls

By TIM BOIVIN

The Doughboys, using their superior manpower, defeated the Maxwell Air Force Base Owls twice last weekend. Friday night the Doughboys trailed for most of the game before pulling it out, 86-75. Saturday, the Doughboys were just too much for the undermanned Owls as they wore them out, 80-59.

The Doughboys fell behind early Friday night, mostly due to an unusual, for the Doughboys, rash of turnoers. The Doughboys committed 21 turnovers in the first half while the Owls were hitting at an 80 per cent clip from the field.

Although the Owls were literally shooting the lights out, the Doughboys stayed close by controlling the boards on both ends of the court. The Doughboys played tough defense underneath and close to the basket and did not allow the Owls very many inside chip shots.

In the second half, the Doughboys were sparked by Robert Lyons, a reserve who came off the bench and put some punch into the team. Lyons ended up with six points and six rebounds in a short time of playing in the second half.

The Doughboys kept chipping away at the Owls lead and finally pulled ahead with about eight minutes left. After that the weary Owls just could not keep up with the Doughboys.

The Doughboys ended up hitting about 50 percent of their shots but the really story was their turnaround in turnovers from the first half. After committing 21 turnovers in the first half, the Doughboys only had eight in the second half and controlled the tempo of the game because of it.

The Doughboys were led in the scoring column by Luke Fencher with 14 points. Frederick Nelson and James King both had 12 while Larry Varnedoe had 11 points. This was the first game back for King, who has missed much of the Doughboys season.

In the action Saturday night, the game was close early as the Doughboys seemed to learn their lesson from their errors the night before and they did not turn the ball over as much.

About midway through the first half, the Doughboys began to assert themselves and they controlled the tempo of the game.

The Doughboys were led by Nelson with 19 points while guard Nate Harris continued with his consistent play while contributing 17 points.

Overall the Doughboys seem to, despite some careless play in the first half Friday, be taking control of the play and blending well as a unit. The addition of big James King, an All-Army selection the past few years, will tremendously help them as they go into the last month of play before the TRADOC tournament at Fort Jackson.

The Doughboys' small guard, Nate Harris, has played consistently all season and is one of the reasons the Doughboys are 13-5.

Reservist's qualification open for military events

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Qualified men and women athletes from the reserve components are needed to compete in two international military skill related events this summer.

All National Guard personnel and Reservists on extended active duty, on special active duty, in the Individual Ready Reserve, or Selected Reserve may try out.

According to Army Reserve officials, the U.S. will send six three-member officer teams and one three-member enlisted team to the InterAllied Confederation of Reserve Officers (CIOR) military skills competition in Montreal, Canada. This year, officials say, will be the first year a team composed of enlisted people will participate in the CIOR competition. Plans do not call for enlisted participation in future years.

All reserve component members — officer and enlisted — are eligible to compete for membership on the seven-member International Military Sports Council (CISM) military pentathlon team.

According to officials, tryouts for the CISM and CIOR teams will be held during June and July at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, with selections being made for the CISM team June 19 and for the CIOR teams July 10. Those individuals selected for the teams will train at Fort Sam Houston until departure for Canada and Europe.

Applicants must meet the following DoD minimum requirements:

- Five-mile run: CIOR, 32½ minutes; CISM, 30½ minutes
- 50-meter swim: CIOR, 36 seconds; CISM, 30 seconds
- Pullups: CIOR, 10; CISM, 10
- Softball throw: CIOR, not applicable; CISM, 50 yards

The 33rd Annual CIOR Competition will be held in Montreal July 29-August 9. Team members will participate in such events as a running obstacle course, swimming obstacle course, shooting match (rifle, pistol, and submachine gun) and an orienteering event.

For the CISM military pentathlon, events include a running obstacle course, swimming obstacle course, shooting (Big Bore Standard Rifle), grenade throwing and cross country running.

Seven American athletes will participate in the 29th CISM Military Pentathlon Competition in Munich, Germany, August 17-26.

People interested in obtaining more information and/or application forms may contact Capt. (P) Robert Harvey, Reserve Forces Coordinator, Modern Pentathlon Training Center, BLDG. 189, Fort Sam Houston, Texas 78234.

CISM applications must be in by March 3; CIOR applications are due March 20.

Reserve officers on extended active duty are eligible to enter the competition.

Register for DYA soccer through January 25

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) registration for spring soccer is still open until Jan. 25. Registration is at Youth Activities, Bldg. 1054, from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. The fee is $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second and $5 for the third. Any other children are free. Coaches are still needed by DYA and if you are interested, contact Mr. Plotner at 544-4462.

In DYA basketball action, the Supersonics defeated the Celtics, 41-26, and the Lakers defeated the Hawks, 32-19, in the Termite League on Jan. 9. On Saturday, it was the Celtics 40, the Hawks 20, and it was the Supersonics over the Eagles, 31-27.

In Pee Wee League action Jan. 9, it was the Cougars downing the Bullets, 31-28. On Saturday, the 76ers squeezed by the Cougars, 30-27.

In Midget League action Jan. 9, the Blue Devils defeated the Bullets, 54-27. Saturday, Maxwell Air Force Base beat the Bullets 42-19.

In the Senior Division the Fort Benning Blazers worked their way past the Owls of Maxwell Air Force Base, 55-50.

Sports Shorts

Swimming

The Swim-For-Your-Life program is open to anyone at the Briant Wells Swimming Pool seven days a week. Swimmers can go at their own pace and get credit for how far they go with a certificate and a patch. The hours for the program are 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. Monday through Friday or else there is a lane reserved for program swimmers anytime the pool is open.

In the past week, Cathy Rhear was awarded 10, 20 and 30 mile certificates and Earl Lasseter was awarded 10 and 20 mile certificates. Others awarded 10 mile certificates were Carl Potts, Paula Blayney, Steve Alvarado, Nancy Brooks, Sally Lasseter, Robin Sakoda, Kathy McVey, Sylvia-Elena Galvis, Paul Scott, William Bates and a Mexican soldier, Maj. Gallardo.

Barracuda results

The Fort Benning Barracuda's Swim Team had three swimmers finish in first place in a swim meet sponsored by the Dynamo Swim Club at Mercer University in Atlanta.

The swim meet was a B and C developmental meet, where potential A level and Olympic hopeful swimmers competed against the clock.

Berit Fagersten came in first place in the girls eight-years-old and under 50 meter butterfly with a time of 48.38. Cackie Walters took the blue ribbon in the girls 11 and 12 year-old individual 200 meter medley. Steve Latorre took first place in the boys 13 and 14 years-old 100 meter breast stroke.

Basketball

In the 1st Infantry Training Brigade basketball league out at Sand Hill Jan. 8, 5th Battalion defeated 6th Battalion, Team X, 59-28, and 4th Battalion cruised past 6th Battalion, Team Y, 44-30.

On Jan. 9, 3rd Battalion sneaked by 6th Battalion, Team Y, 43-42; 4th Battalion walloped 6th Battalion, Team X, 50-23; and 2nd Battalion defeated 7th Battalion in a squeaker, 42-38.

On Jan. 14, 3rd Battalion smothered 6th Battalion, Team X, 60-32; 2nd Battalion hurdled over 6th Battalion, Team Y, 51-39; and 7th Battalion flew past 1st Battalion, 53-42.

Boxing

The night of boxing reported in last week's BAYONET has been postponed indefinitely due to a lack of participants.

SPANKO-JROTC rifle match

The Spencer High School Junior Reserve Officer Training Corp (JROTC) Varsity Rifle Team took first place at the Spanko, Inc.-JROTC Rifle Match at Fort Benning's Indoor Rifle Range January 8. Spencer, coached by 1st Sgt. Gordon Burke, was led by Cadet David Cannella, who took top individual honors with a score of 568 times 300.

Spencer finished with a score of 2679 times 3000 and was followed by Kendrick High School with 2567 and Baker High School with a 2489 score.

Other members of Spencer's team were William Haracourt, Danny Wigger, David DeRoach and Harold Mullins.

Junior Rifle Club course

The second annual Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club Basic Marksmanship Course will begin Jan. 22 at 4:30 p.m. at the post indoor range. The range is located in Bldg. 1106 on Bergen Street behind Infantry Museum.

The six-week course will consist of a two hour block of instruction per week in basic marksmanship techniques and safety. All youngsters 12 years of age or older who are interested in joining the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club must attend the course. The cost of the course is $15.

For more information contact Lt. Col. Lones Wigger, rifle club advisor, at 545-2343.

Winter Olympics—don't just drop in

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — If you're planning to wait until you get to Lake Placid to purchase tickets for 1980 Winter Olympic events — don't.

No counter tickets will be sold during the XIII Winter Olympics, Feb. 12-24, 1980, according to Lake Placid Winter Olympics Organizing Committee officials.

All tickets must be prepurchased through the mail with ticket confirmation taking four to six weeks. The admissions office will furnish you with alternate tickets if the events you requested are sold out unless you indicated alternate tickets would not be accepted. By the time you submit another request for tickets to alternate events, they too may be sold out.

More than half a million tickets will be sold with over 50 percent of these tickets being handled by bus tours. Most of the tours will require individuals to purchase tickets to two or more events.

About 51,700 people are expected to travel in and around Lake Placid during competition days.

Only three major highways — all two lane — lead into Lake Placid. To ease traffic flow and keep roadways clear, parking areas away from Lake Placid will be set up. Travel into Lake Placid will be restricted to people who need to be on the highways. They will be identified by sticker or markings.

Individuals entering the area in their own vehicles and holding tickets for Olympic events will be directed to the nearest parking lot. Free shuttle buses will take spectators to and from their desired Olympic event site. Parking areas will be located at Marcy Airfield, near Keene Valley High School along Route 73; in the Wilmington area along Route 86 to the northeast of Lake Placid; and in Saranac Lake to the west.

Information on tickets — tour packages and individual tickets — may be obtained by writing to 1980 Olympic Winter Games, Admissions Office, Box 1980, Lake Placid, N.Y. 12946.

Making Tracks

By TOM BREEDING

Well, after making ski tracks in the Rockies for the last few weeks, it's at least a contrast to be back in scenic Fort Benning. Although my absence probably had little to do with it, little seems to have occured in the last month, and little seems slated for the next few weeks.

It's time for runners of all ages and all categories, has beens, would bes or never weres to log that necessary preparation for warmer weather running excellence.

The one event of note in this part of the country was the Savannah Marathon. According to John Moore, the event was well-run, including plenty of fluid stations, traffic controllers and split time callers. The Martin Army Hospital staffer and his son, Mike, ran the half marathon in 90:55 and 91:25, respectively. Fren Dyer, Tom Baker and John Lavoie ran the full distance, finishing with 2:56.44, 2:59.30, and 3:15.16. The performance of Dr. Dyer, noted sedentary academic, and John Lavoie, well-worn retired sergeant major, should inspire runners of all ages.

On the horizon for the run and fun bunch is the Perrier Mardi Gras Marathon on Feb. 9. This and a 40-miler in Florida are the only things immediatly upcoming for which any detailed information is avaliable. For that information call Maj. Charles Briscoe, 545-5457.

The next meeting of the Columbus Track Club will be held on the 29th at the Gas and Light Company of Columbus. The Gas and Light Company located at 1421 4th Ave. directly across from the Pontiac automobile dealership.

Beginning next week, the BAYONET will have a full page of complete Making Tracks due to the wide interest in running on Fort Benning. Reporting for the BAYONET on the different events taking place in the surrounding community will be running enthusiasts Tom Breeding and Bob Kuwik.

Before and after

The officers of Fort Benning ran their monthly 2.5 mile run last Friday. Although the run was not timed, the officers' spirits were high throughout the event.

Art exhibit enlivens post dependent schools

By T. A. SABEL

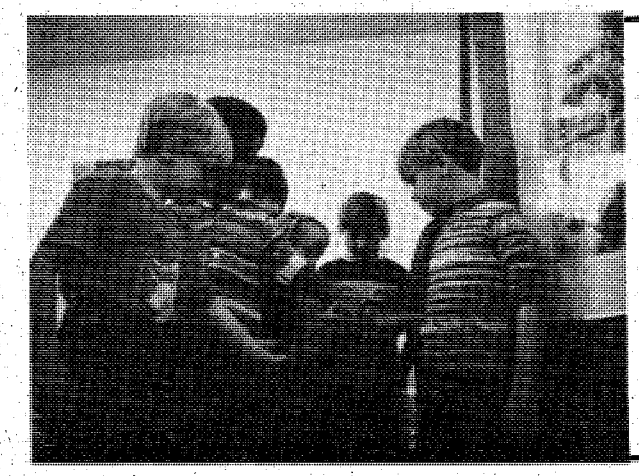
The students at Edward White School were recently treated to an art exhibit sponsored by the Fort Benning Fine Arts Commission.

According to the principal Pearl M. Brakonecke, this program is just part of the dependent school system's program to give the students a broadened view of the world of art. The students have also visited the Columbus Museum of Arts and Science.

The art exhibit, which will be touring the schools on post, is the combined efforts of local and Fort Benning artists. The collection offered examples of oil and acrilic paints, pottery, sculpture and stained glass.

The fifth grade class, in particlular, had studied the artists and the different mediums each artist used. Many of the students were attracted to the pottery and sculpture over the paintings. Said one student about a mug shaped like a human head,"It looks just like my grandpa."

The eyes of the students at dependent schools are opened with a touring art exhibit.



With one of the few "touchable" pieces of art, the students' hands follow the lines of the carver's chisel.

Prayer breakfast slated

By DEBBIE HARRISON

This year the annual National Prayer Breakfast Day will be held at Fort Benning on Jan. 28-29 at two locations.

Jan. 28, at 6:30 a.m., Kelley Hill Recreation Center, the speaker will be Chaplain Charles McDonnell.

Jan. 29, at 6:45 a.m., Officer's Supper Club, the speaker will be TRADOC Army Chaplain Col. Max Wilk.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower was influential in establishing the Presidential-Prayer Breakfast which later became the National Prayer Breakfast Day. It became a routine occurance in the military, major corporations and smaller businesses throughout our nation to observe this special day.

The National Prayer Breakfast Day was a routine part of the presidential schedule and it became the beginning of the National Prayer Breakfast Day as we know it today. The Prayer Breakfast soon was a part of many major U.S. corporations and smaller businesses alike. The breakfast was led by religious leaders, politicians and business executives who prayed for our nation at an early morning gathering.

LIVSEY

Todays challenge

Livsey was asked how today's situation was affecting the morale of the 8th Infantry Division soldiers. He stated that it was having a positive effect "they are really fired up!"

Livsey emphasized to the IOAC students that they needed to be concerned especially with the wellfare of their soldiers but also with their soldier's families and the Quality of Life Programs. He told them they should concern themselves especially with these things because, "You are not here (at the Infantry School) studying to be a good lieutenant or captain whether you know it or not.

With the world situation the way it is now you should be thinking at least battalion level," Livsey said. "You have to think about what would happen if all of a sudden you found yourself commanding a battalion."

Livsey concluded by challenging the audience to recognize that the Army is a wonderful institution and that the Army needs each of them. He said he worries when he sees talented soldiers/leaders getting out of the Army. He stressed that the Army is not a job but it is a commitment and a way of life.

"I urge you to take whatever piece of the Army that belongs to you, no matter how small it may seem, and make it the very best that you possibly can," Livsey concluded.

MILITARY WIVES

WE NEED YOU!

The real estate profession is in dire need of people who can identify with and understand a traumatic situation of moving families. Those of us associated with CENTURY 21, whose primary concern is the relocation of transferring families, can really appreciate the special qualifications of military wives for the real estate profession.

The military wife has always contributed her time, efforts, and sympathy to the needs of the military community. Why not consider doing it professionally, and consequently reap the financial records associated with the real estate profession? Call today for a confidential interview 324-6464, Bill Hodges. # AWOL: No way to go

AWOL, absent without leave, is a problem few soldiers want to face, but many of them do.

The decision to go AWOL is seldom made one bright cheery morning with a soldier waking up and saying, "I'll split." According to Capt. Everret Urech, chief defense counselor with the Staff Judge Advocates office, it is seldom the soldier with a good record who decides one day to go AWOL.

"It is my gut feeling most of the soldiers going AWOL have been building up to it. Most have gone AWOL before for a few days, get an Article 15, and go again."

As defense counselor, Urech has been involved with hundreds of AWOL cases ranging from company level Article 15s to those resulting in Bad Conduct Discharges.

"Technically, if a soldier is one minute late for formation, he can be tried in a special court martial," said Urech. However, it has been his experience that most AWOLs under 15 days are handled by company level Article 15s, he explained. He went on to say that AWOLs up to 30 days are handled by field grade Article 15s and after 30 days the soldier is often subject to a special court martial.

"But there are differences in each case. Let's say there is a person with several Article 15s, has been counseled and doesn't care about the job. A special court martial is more likely for him than for a soldier with a good record, cares about the job and possibly goes AWOL over an emergency leave," said Urech.

For AWOLs of more than 30 days the military can presume intent to desert. But in

Personnel offices need soldiers' support

By RICHARD J. WESLEY

A few years ago the Army decided, for several reasons, to consolidate unit and battalion level personnel offices into what is called the BnPAC (Battalion Personnel Administration Center).

Since that time, many advantages and disadvantages have been noted. The advantages have, of course, been praised by the originators of the PAC and the disadavantages are the subject of most discussions held by most PAC supervisors.

Many soldiers seem to think that the "personal" has gone out of personnel. It used to be that a soldier could stroll into the orderly room with a finance or personnel problem and one person could fix him right up with some sort of solution--at least it always seemed that way.

These days a soldier normally will go through the first sergeant to get an appointment slip before going to the PAC about his problem. If you're afraid of the first sergeant or you just don't like the way he grits his teeth at the morning formation, then your problem goes unattended until it gets out of proportion and affects your life, your family life and eventually your career.

Those who don't encounter problems at the unit may encounter a problem at the PAC. Have you ever gone to the PAC and found everyone on the phone, or perhaps the only person who can take care of your problem is not in the office and no one knows where this person has gone or when he will be back?

Worst of all is the PAC that is understaffed and the personnel available are not trained for this type of work.

So, the bottom line must be that the PAC is worthless--or is it?

What about the soldier who was afraid to see the first sergeant? Couldn't he ask his squad leader or platoon sergeant to go with him the next time he needs help?

What about having to wait when your appointment was a half hour ago? Couldn't the soldier have a little more patience? And couldn't the clerk on the phone continue the conversation after he has serviced the soldier?

And finally, what about the problem of being understaffed? Is it because your manning report isn't straight and management is unaware of your problem? Is it because the personnel are being kept at the unit because they are good typists?

I hope by now you're beginning to see my point. Without the support required by everyone concerned, your PAC will be reduced to a few poorly trained soldiers not knowing the difference between a disposition form and a finance allotment form.

If you are in any way responsible to the PAC, take a long hard look at what you've helped to create. Do you have zombies mechanically answering phones and throwing away forms because they don't compute, or do you have a well-trained, well-staffed PAC whose responsibility is to support the needs of the individual soldier, your battalion and the U.S. Army?

New Fort Benning speed limit called 'ridiculous'

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I have just read in The BAYONET the reason behind the change of speed limit on 1st Division Road.

This is the most ridiculous speed limit for a road of that type. To keep a car at 35 miles per hour on that road is next to impossible. We have a cruise control on our car and at 50 miles per hour I can set it and hold a steady speed and save gas; but at 35 miles per hour I can't and that wastes gas.

What about the people who work the grave yard shift and travel that road at night and are the only car on the highway.

Why not set the speed limit back at 50 miles per hour from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.? Those of us who must travel that road every day to get to work at Sand Hill or Columbus really get frustrated to have to do 35 miles per hour and then get behind somebody who is doing 30 miles per hour as happened to me the other morning.

It seems a little out of line with reasonable thinking to subject the driving public to 35 miles per hour on an unpopulated road.

Since I arrived here two years ago from Fort Hood, Texas, I always said this post has it's priorities mixed up and this speed limit just proves my point.

To me, this post should take a close look at the people who insist on running on the road at night and the early morning in dark clothing instead of being on the track provided. I guess nothing will be done about that problem until someone is killed or seriously injured.

Back to 50 miles per hour on 1st Division Road.

E. Lotter

Staff duty NCO bored

After reading the staff duty NCO instructions several times and completing the work brought from my office (this took approximately eight and one half hours) I find that I now have 16 hours to go. Since TV's, radios, and books are not authorized, the only thing left is the few checks to be made and listen for the phone to ring, (it rang five times in eight hours, one of which was a wrong number) I am trying to decide how to keep awake for the next 16 hours. I thought I would further my military education, however, I find all the regulations and military litertature are locked up. Evidently, staff duty officers and staff duty NCO's cannot be trusted to use the regulations or field manual library while on duty.

With the world situation today, I feel the soldier, of all people, should keep himself informed but I am not authorized to listen to the news for a 24-hour period. I personally feel there is something missing somewhere, that after many years of service to be restricted in this manner while performing my duties. A staff duty NCO is performed by an E-7 and a staff duty officer is performed by a lieutenant or captain who is the representative of the commander. I certainly hope that senior commanders have more trust and respect for their subordinates than this duty indicates.

Building bridges needed in combat

By MATTHEW BOISON

The 586th Engineer Company's job is a little different than that of average units. On call day or night, the 586th Engineer Company builds floating bridges.

"Bridges are essential in battle," said 2nd Lt. Eileen Lanzarone, senior platoon leader of the 586th Engineer Company. "Water is a very difficult obstacle to overcome without the mobility that the floating bridge provides."

The 586th Engineer Company supports the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C., and are subject to deployment at any time. "If the airborne goes, we go," said Lanzarone.

During the Vietnam War, Baily Bridges (fixed bridges) and the more popular M4T6 floating bridges kept up the momentum of an attack. "We can very quickly deploy troops and vehicles across water obstacles," said Lanzarone. "We can build 400 feet of float bridge in roughly three hours."

With the cover of night, the 586th Engineers build bridges across all types of water obstacles, with the goal of defeating the enemy in mind. "It's dangerous to build a bridge at night," said Lanzarone, "but more troops can be moved across water obstacles at night with fewer casualties."

At least 30 inches of water is necessary to use the aluminum alloy floating bridge effectively. During this training exercise the 586th Engineer Company used a class "60" load bridge, a bridge that can withstand loads up to 60 tons. This type of bridge can move an M-60 tank across water with ease.

A raft bridge is being used to transport an M-60 tank across the Chattahoochee River during a training exercise conducted by the 586th Engineer Company.

Boat driver maneuvers for 586th

By MATTHEW BOISON

With night as his camouflage, PFC John V. Noethen helps keep the onslaught of a complex military regime moving towards the enemy. Noethen, a member of the 586th Engineer Company, helps the mechanized soldiers of today's Army overcome the paralyzing obstacle of water by building float bridges.

Noethen, a 19-year-old native of Ohio, pilots a 250-horse power, 27-foot diesel "erection" boat for the 586th Engineer Company. "It's cold and wet out there," said Noethen, "but I'm out for a good time."

Playing quarterback for his old high school in Toledo, Ohio, kept Noethen busy before he joined the Army in 1978. "Travel made me join the Army," said Noethen, "but I'm afraid it caught me by surprise."

One of a family of six, Noethen hopes to go back to college and study business. Noethen, in past years, surfed on the warm waves of California. "I'd also like to do some surfing in Australia," comments Noethen. "That's where they have the big ones."

Noethens' younger brother, 17-year-old Rodney, recently joined the Army and will be taking basic training and advanced individual training at Fort Benning. Noethen has been stationed at Fort Benning for three years and would like to go to Germany to see the country.

"It's pretty nice here during the summertime," admits Noethen. "The unit is pretty good to me, too. As a matter of fact, they're all pretty nice."

DON'T LOSE OUT WHEN YOU GET OUT.

If you've decided to leave the Army before retirement, you don't have to leave behind all of those valuable benefits. Just serve part-time with your local Army Reserve unit.

You'll earn a good extra income based on your present rank and service time, for serving only 16 hours a month (usually one weekend) and two full weeks a year.

And you can still take advantage of part of your Army benefits. Like low-cost life insurance. As a Reservist, you'll continue to earn PX privileges (a day for each eight hours of unit training attended) and credits toward retirement pay.

Most of all, by your becoming an Army Reservist, your country benefits. By your training. Your experience. Your dedication.

So don't lose out when you get out. Join today's Army Reserve. It's well worth your time.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Hotline system open worldwide

The U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning has instituted a "Hotline" telephone system open to units worldwide that have questions or comments on the Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

The new service, put into effect by the Collective Training Branch of the Directorate of Training Developments, will be open 24 hours a day. The "Hotline" (Autovon 835-4759 or Area Code 404-545-4759) supplements existing comment sheets contained in the Trainer-Evaluator portion of ARTEP documents.

Questions or comments concerning ARTEP's 7-15, 7-202, 7-255, 7-500, 57-55 or 71-2 are welcome.

Since the recording equipment on the "Hotline" limits messages to 30 seconds, callers with lengthy questions or comments are asked to leave an autovon number and point of contact for a return call from The Infantry School.

Or, questions and comments may be mailed to: Commandant, U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., 31905, attention ATSH-I-V-ET.

3 post dining facilities to compete

Story and photos by MARK CAUTHEN

Two dining facilities from the 197th Infantry Brigade (SEP) and one dining facility from the 36th Engineer Group (Combat), have been chosen to represent Fort Benning in the Army's Phillip A. Connelly competition, held annually to choose the best Army dining facilities.

The worldwide competition is broken up into three categories; small garrison, which serve less than 200 persons per meal; large garrison, which serves more than 200 per meal; and Field Kitchen, which has no size restrictions. A winner and runner up is chosen from each category.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry with SFC Ernest Bowie, manager, is competing for the award in the field kitchen category; Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 197th Support Battalion, SFC Larry Stephens, manager, is competing in the small dining facility category; and the 67th Maintenance Battalion, SFC Joe Harvey, manager, is in competition for the large dining facility award. A large dining facility is one that averages feeding more than 200 soldiers a meal.

The Fort Benning Installation Food Services Office chose the three Post Dining Facilities which will represent Fort Benning in the TRADOC portion of the competition. The TRADOC winners will then compete against the other major commands in the final phase of the competition.

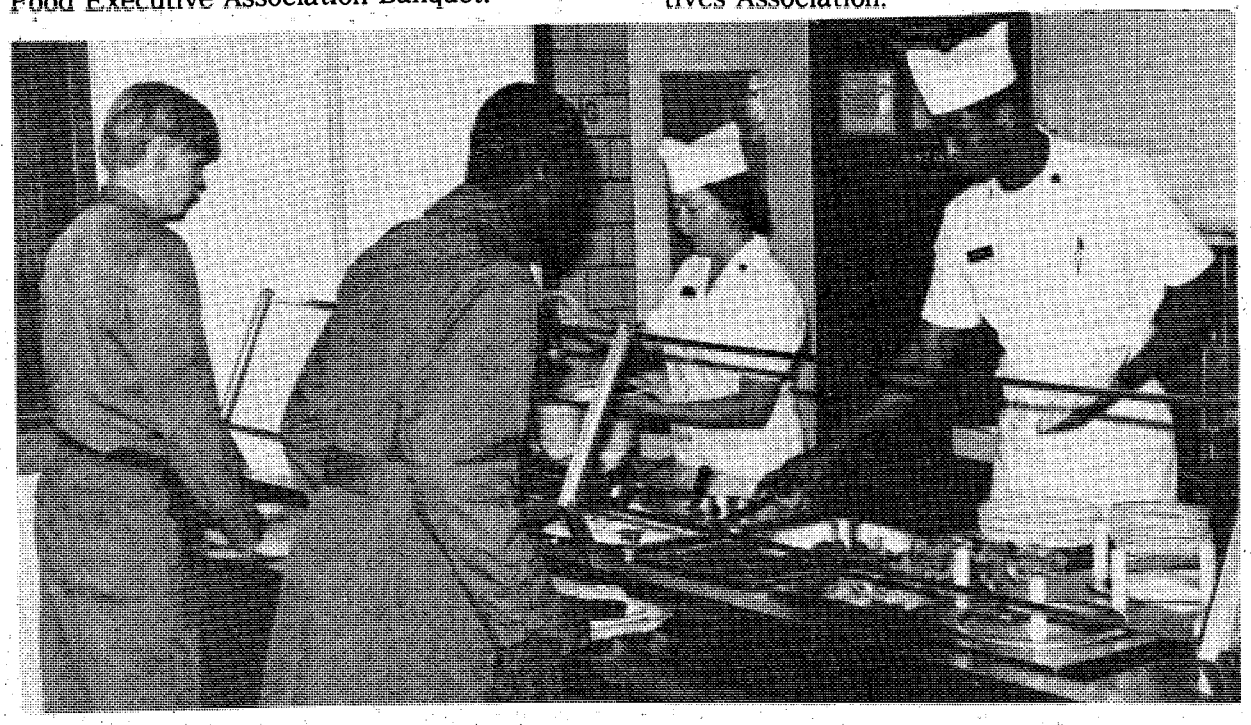
The units in the competition where inspected recently by two members of the TRADOC Team, Capt. James Eaves, TRADOC Headquarters, Fort Monroe, VA, and 1st Lt. Susan H. Swisher, of Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D.C. The team inspects every aspect of dining facility management including, food preparation, sanitation, administration, and in the case of the field kitchen, they inspect tactical layout.

"It's the greatest honor a dining facility can receive," said SFC Larry Stephens of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 197th Support Battalion. "It's every Mess Sergeant's dream to compete for the Connelly and to win it would be the highlight of my career," he added.

The winners of the TRADOC showdown will be announced Feb. 1. The competition between the major commands will take place during May and June and the winners will be announced in July and the awards presentation will be at the International Food Executive Association Banquet.

The objective of the Philip A. Connelly award program is to provide recognition for excellence in the preparation and serving of food in Army troop dining facilities and to provide added incentives to competitive programs of major Army commands by higher level competition and recognition in the form of trophies and scholarships to select food service personnel.

The program was originated to pay homage to the late Philip A. Connelly, who for many years was a key figure to promoting food service recognition and aware programs in the Armed Forces. The program is sponsored for the Department of the Army by the International Food Service Executives Association.



Soldiers of the 197th Support Battalion walk along the food service line at the Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Dining Facility. The facility is representing Fort Benning in the Connelly Award Competition.

Can't meet payments? Don't be home loser

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)--With rising prices, financial problems could make it difficult for military homeowners to make their monthly mortgage payments. According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), however, homeowners don't have to lose their homes.

If you're experiencing difficulty meeting your monthly payments, visit or telephone your mortgage holder as soon as possible. Discuss your problem with the lender and suggest a plan for getting your payments back on schedule.

Lenders may be able to offer recommendations but you must help prepare a plan that will eventually make it possible for you to make those monthly mortgage payments on time. Some lenders may prefer to:

Develop a repayment plan before foreclosure is considered.

Rework your mortgage under certain conditions. The unpaid balance would be increased by the amount overdue.

Temporarily reduce or suspend your regular monthly mortgage payments or have home mortgage loans insured by HUD/FHA assigned under certain circumstances.

Lenders may advise homeowners who feel they will not be able to make monthly mortgage payments within a reasonable amount of time to protect their investment by selling or prevent foreclosure by signing their property over to the lender. These actions should be considered only as a last resort to protect your future credit rating.

Whatever action you as a homeowner take, try to avoid foreclosure if possible and protect your future credit rating.

A bookelt, "Having Problems Paying Your Mortgage?" offers more suggestions for homeowners. It may be obtained at no cost from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

197th vs 82nd in exercise

An invading force of more than 600 paratroopers dropped in on Fryar Drop Zone Saturday afternoon to begin Dragon Team 1-80 which set forces from the 82nd Airborne against those of the 197th and 1/58th Infantries.

On an unseasonably warm and sunny January day, paratroopers from the 3rd Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, participated in Dragon Team 1-80, an emergency deployment readiness exercise. This exercise was used to evaluate the ability of selected 82nd Airborne Division units to deploy from their home base within 18 hours.

With members of the 197th Infantry Brigade acting as aggressors, the invading force wound its way through Fort Benning in a variety of methods. Some went by their own airdropped vehicles, some marched and others were carried in helicopter airborne assaults.

The drops, delayed several hours due to fog, began with heavy equipment drops of jeeps, gamma goats and other vital equipment. As the parachuted equipment loads hit the ground, the C-130s aircraft made run after run of paratroopers, filling the sky with parachutes.

Despite the normal precautions, there were a few casualties. They were assisted by ambulances and Dustoff helicopters.

Later, at nearby Dekkar Airstrip, a Low Altitude Parachute Extraction System (LAPES) exercise was conducted. The exercise has heavy equipment, including howitzers, being unloaded from C-130s flying at an altitude of three to 10 feet.

In addition to the aggressor force, Fort Benning supplied support from the 586th Engineer Company building a floating ribbon bridge, medical support from the 498th Medical Company and the 676th Medical Detachment from the 34th Medical Battalion and virtually all post staff directorates.

Also participating were units of the U.S. Air Force Military Airlift Command.

Dragon Team 1-80 is the latest of the series of emergency deployment exercises conducted by units of the 18th Airborne Corps. Such exercises are routinely scheduled by the Airborne Corps.

Brought together during 'DRAGON TEAM I-80, an emergency deployment readiness exercise (EDRE), twin brothers Mark (L) and Michael Cly, both airborne-ranger second lieutenants, opposed each other in the simulated battle which pitted the 197th Infantry Brigade against the 82nd Airborne at Fort Benning. Mark is a member of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th, while brother Michael belongs to Company A, 1st Battalion, 508th Infantry, 82nd.

When the 82nd dropped into Lee Drop Zone, 1st Lt. Rick Montonari of the 72nd Engineer Company was part of the ambush team that awaited them.

Sp4 Albert Dorsey of Bravo Company carries the company guidon during a field training exercise.

"The fortitude and courage of the 58th Infantry in those operations was truly inspiring," wrote Gen."Black Jack" Pershing in his memoirs on World War I.

One job is not enough for the 1/58th Infantry, the "Patriots," commanded by Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher Jr. and CSM James Kyzer. First, they have to be combat ready at all times. Second, they have to support the U.S. Army Infantry School.

In being combat ready, they need to be prepared to go anywhere in the world whenever duty calls. The armored personnel carriers (APCs), jeeps, trucks and Gamma Goats are maintained daily. The APCs are the heart of the unit's capability to provide protection, mobility and firepower for today's modern battlefield. The several hundred men of the unit work together in training and maintenance as a single, well-oiled machine, as they found out in Bold Eagle 80.

"Training is the single most important mission of the Patriots. Because of our support activity with USAIC, we don't waste a moment of training time," said Fincher, ceaseless pounding from the Germans for 24 days. When the "War to End All Wars" was over, the 58th Infantry had suffered 50 percent casualties.

In World War II, the reactivated 58th saw action in Alaska during the Aleutian Islands campaign. In Europe, regimental battle streamers were awarded for action in the Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe.

In 1960, the unit was again reactivated after a 15-year lull as a part of the 1st Infantry Brigade. In 1962, they were reassigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade to be later redesignated as the 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry.

The 1/58th Infantry is made up of three rifle companies, a headquarters company and a combat support company. As an infantry battalion, most of the jobs are held by infantrymen. They are assisted by specialists from other areas in intelligence, communication, maintenance and the Adjutant General.

The rifle companies have riflemen, grenadiers, APC drivers, radiomen, machine gunners and sub-unit leaders. Headquarters Company gives support in supply, intelligence, administration, maintenance, the planning of training and food service. The Combat Support Company has a diversity of jobs ranging from scouts doing reconnaissance to anti-tank specialists and recovery teams.

Unit pride runs strong throughout the 1/58th. For example, when an enlisted soldier meets an officer he sounds off with "Patriots, sir." The officer replies with "Love of Country"--one being the official nickname and the other the crest motto.

Coat of Arms

Shield: Azure, a chevron rompu point enhanced argent between in chief two fleurs-de-lis the dexter of the last the sinister or, and in base on an inescutcheon vert fimbriated of the second (argent) a cross pattee of the like.

Crest: On a wreath of the colors a torpedo argent charged with an ivy leaf vert.

Motto: Love of Country.

Symbolism: The field is blue for infantry. The regiment was originally organized with personnel from the 4th Infantry, as shown by the small shield. The broken chevron commemorates the piercing of the German line during World War I between Soissons and Rheims, which are represented by the silver and gold fleurs-de-lis taken from the arms of those cities, respectively.

The torpedo in the crest commemorates the first losses of the regiment on May 23, 1918, when the troop ship Moldavia carrying part of the unit was torpedoed by the Germans. World War I service in France as an element of the 4th Division is shown by the ivy leaf from the divisional shoulder sleeve insignia.

AWOL

peacetime, desertion charges are seldom pressed, according to Urech.

"Desertion is difficult to prove. The Army has to prove the soldier's intent never to return. Unless the soldier has burned his uniforms and moved to a foreign country the case is hard to prove," explained the defense counselor.

Urech went on to discuss action for a soldier on AWOL to take. "Call the company commander or the first sergeant. Let them know what happened. The soldier may still get changed with being AWOL but the penalties would probably be less severe," he said.

"If the soldier makes a conscientious effort by getting in touch with someone of authority,then the effort will look quite positive when the question of what to do about the AWOL arises," added Urech.

There are legal defenses against the AWOL charge, explained Urech. One of these is absent without leave through no fault of their own such as getting caught in a blizzard, having the plane hijacked or an act of God. However, a car breaking down or running out of money to return on are not considered in such a defense, stressed Urech.

"There is also mistake of fact where the soldier thinks he is on leave, perhaps thought he signed out but didn't, and is considered AWOL." Continuing, he said, "Beyond certain technical defenses there is also the 'broom closet' defense. This defense is used when the soldier can't be found and when he shows up he claims he was in the broom closet changing the light bulb. Of course, this defense is good for only very short AWOLs," added Urech with a smile.

As defense counsel he has sound advise for every soldier going on either emeregency or regular leave. "Each soldier should always carry the commander's, the first sergeant's and the staff duty officer's phone numbers so that if anything should happen while on leave they can get in touch and let someone of authority know what is going on.

Soldier's treatment limits AWOLs

By T.A. SABEL

Absent without leave has been a problem in the military for as long as anyone can remember. The battalion commander at the 1/58th Infantry, Lt. Col. H. T. Fincher Jr., has developed a program which possibly can drastically cut down the numbers of AWOLs.

Fincher said each new man, E-4 and below, is first officially welcomed by himself, the sergeant major and the chaplain.

The new soldier is told the history of the unit, its mission, and Fincher's own position on AWOL. "AWOL is more than committing a crime. It also means the soldier doesn't have enough responsibility to take charge of the job. It means leaving another man to do your work," he said, adding that a unit can not function efficiently when men are AWOL.

Beyond that Fincher sends a personal letter to the soldier's next of kin explaining how proud he is to have the soldier with the 1/58th and how much they care for the men in the unit. The letter also tells of the unit's mission and its history.

"We show the soldier and his next of kin that he is not a number; he is an individual with his own individual problems. There are no problems that can't be handled in the battalion," said Fincher.

When the parents know the Army is concerned, they are more leary of supporting their son or daughter going AWOL, said the battalion commander. When the soldier goes "over the hill," the battalion sends a letter to the next of kin saying the soldier has not shown up for work, the unit is worried and concerned, and asks that if they see him to tell him to come back to the unit.

The method seems to be working. According to Fincher, the most AWOLs recently wereafter the Christmas holidays. Out of a unit with more than 700 soldiers there were only four AWOLs. "And most of those were just overstaying holiday pass," added Fincher.

Doughboys boost record to 15-5

By PAT BARHAM

The Doughboys, again successfully defeated Fort McClellan's 'Big Mac' cager team last weekend, swept two games on McClellan's home turf to up their overall season mark to 15-5.

Friday's game started off with a bang when the Doughboys moved out to an early 10-point lead in the first quarter. Things were going well for the Doughboys as their patient, disciplined, two-three offense continued to open up the lead giving them some breathing room on the score board. Suddenly, Murphy's Law began to affect Fort Benning's pride and performance on the court. According to Coach Resino, the officals took command of the situation with some debatable calls which, combined with Doughboy errors, allowed the 'Big Mac' cagers to narrow the lead to only three points at the half, 37-34.

Shortly after the halftime break, 'Ole Murphy' eased up on the Doughboys. With both teams receiving equal treatment, the lead changed hands several times as both teams traded basket for basket until the closing minutes of the game. Then the hustling, tight Doughboy defense came alive to stop a determined 'Big Mac' comeback attempt that came to within two points of tying the score. The Doughboys held on to win 78-76.

Pat Harris, top scorer for the game, scored 19 points with James King and Tony Heycliff getting 17 and 16 respectivly for the Doughboy cause.

In Saturday's action, the Doughboys' unusually high amount of turnovers allowed the 'Big Mac' cagers to keep the score close. Both teams exchanged leads throughout the game and although Murphy (and the officals) didn't help matters much, the Doughboys finally managed to gain a good lead in the second half. However, once again the McClellan team came roaring back but the sticky Doughboy defense once again stopped their comeback drive short. The Doughboys held on to pull out another close one 80-71.

Coach Resino stated he was pleased with the team's performance and, despite some adverse circumstances, our team came through. Melvin Hudson was top scorer for the game with 18 points. Teammate Larry Varnedoe came in second with 12 while James King and Nat Harris tied with 11 points.

The Doughboys travel to Moody Air Force Base tonight to face the 'Zoomies' in what looks to be an easy game, according to Coach Resino. With the team's two-three offense and Moody's lack of speed, the Doughboys expect to add another victory to their season record. "TRADOC here we come."

Doughgirls split weekend wins with McClellan

By PAT BARHAM

The explosive Doughgirls got their fuses clipped when they split one of two games with Fort McClellan putting a damper on the dynamite in two close fought games played last weekend on 'Big Macs' home court.

According to Coach Hezzie Baines, "The game was kept close by bad officiating throughout the entire game." The Doughgirls, who normally keep fouls at a minimum, had 30 fouls to McClellan's 15, with four players from Benning fouling out in the first game.

Baines said, "McClellan's team height added to the Doughgirl's problems even though Phillis Colbert, high scorer with 12 points, continued to score against McClellan. McClellan played the backboards better than we did but through team effort and hard charging by our guards we beat them."

In the second game the Doughgirls fought to retain possession while keeping McClellan away from the board because of their height. Coach Baines said "Our guards were slow getting down court while McClellan worked the ball, but when the final buzz sounded our team had edged Big Mac 58-53 to win the game.

The Doughgirls lost their second game 58-56 as McClellan's two six-foot one-inch girls took command of the backboards throughout the final game. High scorer for the Doughgirls was Earlie Rackett with 19 points. Sherral Gregory accumulated 18 points and only three fouls to help the Doughgirl effort compared to the first game when four players fouled out. Baines said, "We worked better in the second since then we knew what to expect from the Big Mac attack force." Baines added, "We need height, usually the team averages 70 rebounds but due to McClellan's superiority in the height department we only averaged 47."

The Doughgirls had the score tied with 30 seconds left on the clock, after a super effort by the team. Then after running the ball down to within 20 feet with 15 seconds left on the clock, Angela Burns tried for a shot and missed. McClellan gained control of the ball and scored making it 58-56 with seconds left. In a desperate attempt to kill the Big Mac attack, our team tried to gain a time out after the shot but the clock ran out leaving the Doughgirls with a split decision on Mac's home turf.

The Doughgirls travel to Moody Air Force Base today in hopes of gaining another victory. Coach Baines said "The team will have to run the ball in order to win even though we have beat them twice before."

Raquetball tourney to be held in Columbus

Courtsouth of Columbus will hold a racquetball tourney February 8-9-10 at Courtsouth Racquetball Club. The tourney is open to anyone interested in playing competition racquetball.

Entry fees are $15 for both singles and doubles divisions. The three-day tourney will begin at 5 p.m. on the 8th and continue through the afternoon of the 10th.

The men's division will have five classes of play: Open, B, C, Novice and Seniors. Women's singles division will have three classes of play: Open, Intermediate and Beginners. The men's doubles division A and B class will be open to women who wish to participate in either of the two events.

A Courtsouth spokesman said all club facilities will be open for the use of those entered in the tourney. The club will also provide a hospitality feed, free beer and T-shirts for all participants.

Winners of each division and class will receive awards to include awards for consolation winners. Entry deadline is Feb. 1. The club is located at 1500 54th St., Airport Throughway/Beallwood Connecter. The staff of Courtsouth invites all interested players to view the facilities. For more information call Courtsouth at 324-2211.

Making Tracks

By TOM BREEDING

Sports in general and Making Tracks in specific are changing their format. We have been allotted more space until further notice, enabling us to offer the following: first, the BAYONET will print entry forms for most of the area races likely to appeal to our readers; second, I should be able to give you notice of more races (details will be avaliable at 544-4177); and last, there will be a new feature on a regular basis, Bob Kuwik's runners' profiles.

Bob Kuwik will present this new feature and fill in for me as necessary. This partnership will provide continuity when one of the other of us is not around, still another feature of the staff that leads the way in never-ending improvements to better serve you. So welcome aboard another part-time 11B journalist.

ALMA—DOUGLAS MARATHON FEBRUARY 2

This week's featured race is a run between two central Georgia towns. It features two, four and eight person marathon relays and at noon, Feb. 2.

If you're looking for the two cities, try the region about 200 miles ESE of Columbus on Georgia State Highway 32, or about halfway between Tifton and Jesup.

There are too many races in just the Southeast to bear even the briefest mention, so if you're going anywhere and would like to inquire about local competition, give me a call.

VALENTINE FUN RUNS

Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities is planning a number of races beginning at 8:30 a.m. Feb. 16. in front of Crane Hall.

The Valentine Fun Runs will be free of charge and open to the public. Races include a two and a half mile, five mile and mini-marathon with patches going to all participants and plaques to all first and second place finishers in all categories and age groups. In addition, there will be five-mile squad (five men) and platoon (16 men) runs to determine the fastest unit on post. Every Benning unit is invited to enter.

The mini-marathon will be held first, followed by the two and a half mile, five mile and squad and platoon runs. Categories will be broken into age groups with men and women competing together. Preregistration is required only for the mini-marathon and interested persons may enter by calling 2nd Lt. Knight at 545-2332. Knight stressed that registration for the mini-marathon must be completed by Feb. 13 and that if not enough people enter this category, it will be cancelled.

Runner profiles resume this issue

By DEB HILGEMAN

Sgt.Tom Breeding is a colorful character who describes himself as an "over-educated NCO" and anyone who knows him can verify that talking with him practically requires a thorough knowledge of Webster's most obscure words.

After 10 years of attending assorted colleges, Tom joined the Army one year short of completing his law degree. He now works as an operations sergeant for the Directorate of Plans and Training out of Bldg. 4.

The 32-year-old soldier began running in 1962. "I played football and that's what you did in the off season–run," he explained. "We ran 65 miles a week when that kind of distance was almost unheard of."

Tom said he quit running during his college years but picked it up again seriously in 1977. His weight dropped from 200 to 150 pounds but Tom says it "fluctuates with my running. I run as much as 60 miles a week and as little as 10, depending on my time and motivation."

What makes an intellectual run? "I've always loved running. It's a form of meditation without the chants. It's something non-runners don't understand," he philosophized. In fact, Tom says running is so much fun he tends to think of it as a reward. "If running was harder, I'd probably do it more."

The sergeant is a member of the Columbus Track Club and is also active on the club's race committee. "I like to race because you get to sit around and socialize with other runners," he laughed. Tom pointed out, however, that he "flat never had the time to train seriously. I'd like to find more time for this because running and racing are genuinely fun."

Tom has noticed a marked increase in the number of area runners in the 18 months he's been at Fort Benning ("It used to be something you only did in formation.") and is very interested in providing information on area races via Making Tracks. "I want to give everyone else the opportunity to go out and participate. I'm trying to transfer my enthusiasm to the readers and I hope it comes across. Some of my jokes are definitely in-house but if only one person catches on, it's worth it," he concluded.

Bob Kuwikis a 34-year-old sergeant first class assigned to the Airborne Department who says that since he began running in 1975 his life has taken some drastic changes. Physically, he went from 230 pounds to a stable 153 and, even more importantly, he says he has more confidence, a better attitude towards life and a more outgoing personality.

As an instructor, Bob says he doesn't get in much running on the job but he hasn't let that stop him; he runs 100 miles a week and tries to maintain a sub seven-minute mile. He also follows a diet low in sweets, soft drinks and red meats.

Bob said when he began running he had trouble completing a single mile but he continued to build and a year later entered his first race, the Plains Run. "I didn't do too well in that one but I set my goals higher and higher and kept improving," he said. "I'm really impressed with road racing and the caliber of people involved."

Bob is a member of the Columbus Track Club and every spring he runs 25 miles for the Hike and Bike which benefits retarded children. He is also a two-time member of the TRADOC marathon team.

Bob is currently finishing his bachelor's degree in social science and physical education at Troy State University and resides in Columbus with his wife Ann.

Through a series of runner profiles, Bob hopes to increase the number of area runners and keep them informed of how their peers are progressing. He wants to collect information on all caliber runners for use in his series, so if you know of anyone you would like to see spotlighted, give Bob a call at 545-2253 during duty hours.

34th Med Bn changes command

Lt. Col. Gail O. Bowen assumed command of the 34th Medical Battalion from Lt. Col. James E. Lombard in a ceremony held Jan. 14. Lombard will be reassigned to Fort Sam Houston, Texas after commanding the 34th from July 17, 1978.

Bowen is coming to the 34th from Fort Sam Houston where he served as chief of the Command and Staff Branch, Military Science Division, Academy of Health Sciences.

Bowen was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army on June 19, 1960. He has attended the Infantry Officers Orientation Course, the Fixed Wing Aviator Course and the Rotary Wing Qualification Course. Bowen has also graduated from the Command and General Staff College.

Bowen's awards and decorations include: Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster; Bronze Star Medal; Air Medal with V Device and 39 Oak Leaf Clusters; Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters; Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster; Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal; Air Forces Reserve Medal; Presidential Unit Citation; Valor Unit Award; Meritorious Unit Citation with Oak Leaf Cluster; Master Army Aviator Badge and Expert Field Medical Badge.

Assuming command

TV host honored

A high Army award has been given Rozel Fabiani, well known television personality and host of the morning "Rozell Show" daily over WRBL-TV in Columbus.

Col. Addison D. Davis III, chief of staff, presented the Army's Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service to Ms. Fabiani during one of her recent television shows on which she paid tribute to allied officers and their families.

During the 25 years Ms. Fabiani has been on the air, she has devoted many hours to furthering relations between the civilian and military communities and publicizing military events.

Her certificate was "in recognition of her outstanding contributions to the Allied student program at Fort Benning." She was cited for contributing "immeasurably to the promotion of international goodwill and understanding."

Col. (P) James R. Hall Jr., secretary of the Infantry School, promotes 1st Lt. Ken Hudnall, chief of Academic Records, to captain during a recent ceremony.

MILITARY WIVES
WE NEED YOU!

The real estate profession is in dire need of people who can identify with and understand a traumatic situation of moving families. Those of us associated with CENTURY 21, whose primary concern is the relocation of transferring families, can really appreciate the special qualifications of military wives for the real estate profession.

The military wife has always contributed her time, efforts, and sympathy to the needs of the military community. Why not consider doing it professionally, and consenquently reap the financial records associated with the real estate profession? Call today for a confidential interview 324-6464, Bill Hodges. # Post speed limit changes again

The speed limit on 1st Division Road (Collins Loop to Lindsey Creek Bypass) is reduced from 50 mph to 45 mph. In 1979 there were 11 motor vehicle accidents on 1st Division Road in which nine people were injured and there was property damage of $11,450.

A spot speed study was conducted with speed reduced to 35 mph during which period there were no traffic accidents reported on the roadway. However, because of the volume of traffic using this roadway, a recommendation was made that the speed limit be increased to 45 mph.

The new speed limit on 1st Division Road from Collins Loop to Lindsey Creek Bypass is 45 mph. MOTORISTS ARE REMINDED THAT THE SPEED LIMIT MUST BE REDUCED TO CONFORM WITH EXISTING ROAD CONDITIONS, i.e., fog on the road, heavy rain, and/or traffic congestion. Military police will cite violators.

Patterson winner to be honored

The 28th winner of the Robert P. Patterson Award will be honored as the fiscal year 1979 Branch Immaterial Officers Candidate Course's outstanding graduate Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

Second Lieutenant Richard Kevin Benner completed OCS in December 1978 at the top of his class with a 95.78 percent academic total. He was named honor graduate and leadership honor graduate.

Mrs. Robert B. Patterson will present the award that was established in memory of the late Judge Patterson's distinguished service as an infantry officer in World War I and as Secretary of War during the 40's.

The 28-year-old Pennsylvanian was selected for displaying outstanding qualities of leadership, academic efficiency, attitude nd character during the previous fiscal year. He had served nearly ten years as an enlisted man and was a sergeant first class before entering OCS.

Fraternization: where do you draw the line?

Point

By T. A. SABEL

Fraternization. Can it be a serious problem or what some would call an over-reaction on the part of an unmoving, unfeeling organization?

The old order has passed. The times when the lower enlisted could not mix with the NCOs and none of the enlisted could mix with the officers is a lamented part of the past. Despite the change, which now leaves the matter of fraternization to the discretion of the commander, the need for separation between the higher and lower members of the chain of command is real and genuine.

Only the mo t high minded individuals can make mental separation between an objective response and an emotional response. Objectivity in command is mandatory if sound justice is to prevail.

But the ways of the heart are beyond regulations and people, even soldiers, will fall in love. What happens when an enlisted soldier and an officer fall in love?

Before Cupid sends his bittersweet poisoned dart they first must meet. In a socially structured organization such as the Army, with its separate clubs and facilities for enlisted, NCOs and officers, it is doubtful they will meet in the post clubs.

More than likely they will meet on the job. Bonds of cooperation and friendship are likely to grow when people spend eight hours or more a day working together. These bonds are important for the mission to be accomplished smoothly and efficiently.

However, bonds of camaraderie grow beyond those necessary to get the job done. When strong, romantic emotions grow, objective judgement and reasoning become clouded. To say love is blind means more than overlooking someone's petty faults. Those blinded by love, no matter how happy they are, may fail to see the errors of their beloved.

Should commanders need to hand down disciplinary action to someone they're romantically involved with, will they handle it objectively or will they naturally allow their own affairs of the heart to interfere with their judgement?

Beyond the man and woman aspects, what about just a good friendship between the ranks? If, for whatever reason, a subordinate and a supervisor hit it off how will the command be affected?

Being human, favoritism occurs. We normally hold our friends closer to the conscious. Perhaps without realizing it, we show favoritism to our friends.

Favoritism can run two ways. One form is the typical form which may be little more than helping out a friend. The other is over-reacting to make sure favoritism doesn't exist.

Both forms are detrimental to command. If the "teacher's pet" is getting over, then the pet is the one who really gets hurt. When he is transferred to another area and he loses his guardian angel will he be able to work without the protective angelic umbrella?

If negative favoritism happens and the friend of the supervisor begins to feel put upon resentment can grow. Office disruption occurs.

The problems of fraternization may best be shown in an example of a field grade officer here. While as a PFC he made friends with a lieutenant since they had a mutual hobby. As their friendship progressed problems grew. The problem was not in their friendship but in their mutual friends. The then private first class's enlisted friends wondered who he thought he was, hobnobbing with the officers. The lieutenant's friends became indignant because this young private kept hanging around. The friendship had to break up because the groups of peers began isolating the pair until their effectiveness on the mission was greatly hampered.

The policy is there for a reason. By limiting emotional interactions between supervisors and subordinates objectivity is maintained, the work load can be evenly dispersed and the mission can be accomplished efficiently and effectively.

Counterpoint

By DEB HILGEMAN

The Army has a regulation to cover just about everything but how do you regulate love?

The concept of not allowing love or close friendships to develop between officers and enlisted or between non-commissioned officers and junior enlisted may look good on paper but it is one of those subjects that can't make the transition from drawing board to reality. How can the Army regulate the companionship a soldier may seek after his military duties are done and his time is his own?

As long as duties are not hampered, there should be no need to interfere in a soldier's personal life. Some couples can maintain a close relationship while working together and not let it affect their job performance. Others can never attain this objectivity.

The mission is only affected when two people, regardless of the rank of each, allow a close personal relationship between them to affect how well they perform their duties. If two privates (or two generals, for that matter) work together and allow personal feelings to affect their job performance, then the soldiers are in the wrong.

While fraternization sometimes occurs within a duty section, many social contacts are made off post and out of uniform. When a man and woman meet in an off post club, the usual introduction is not, "Hi. What rank are you?" And after a mutually pleasing acquaintance is made, and the parties find out they were inadvertently fraternizing, should the relationship be dropped like a hot potato? It is hardly likely to have an adverse effect on anyone's job performance if a sergeant from Main Post and a lieutenant from Kelley Hill are discreetly dating.

As long as soldiers are doing their job, the Army should leave well enough alone, we have enough restrictions already.

How about that?

Start with enthusiasm

By WILLIAM W. ERBACH SR.
TIC Chaplain

Have you ever thought of comparing each new day with a peanut butter jar? I did, but only in connection with a family that grew up next to me when I was very young. At that house there used to be a great fuss over who would get the first taste out of the jar. It got so bad that they had to develop a schedule over who got first dibs on the jar.

One brother liked to take a fork and make criss-crosses in the smooth surface of that new jar before he took a taste. For some reason that gave him pleasure. His sister used to take a measuring spoon and scoop out little balls of peanut butter and leave round holes in what remained. This pleased her. The older brother always dug into the peanut butter with a spatula, leaving a wide depression in the surface. That gave him his enjoyment. The thing is that they greeted each new jar with enthusiasm.

Compare a new day to that new jar of peanut butter. One nice thing is that we get a new day a lot more often than we get a new jar. But the anticipation, excitement and opportunity for just good fun are still there. How we dig into the jar of peanut butter really doesn't affect the flavor of it, but most assuredly the way that we did into a new day can definitely effect the flavor of those twenty-four hors. HOW ABOUT THAT!!

How different your day can be if you approach it with enthusiasm, determined to make the whole day count for something good. Tomorrow, remember the jar of peanut butter as you start the new day, and dig into it with enthusiasm.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Why don't you publish letters exactly as they are received? A recently published letter contained at least a dozen corrections from the original version. While these corrections did not alter the thrust of the letter, they did much to establish the writer's credibility which could have been challenged had the original submission been printed.

Editorialize some other place — on the editorial page, perhaps? — but not in letters. And while you're at it, why not crucify the civilian workforce some more? One or two more articles would really administer the coup de grace to those of us who believe in giving eight or more hours of work for eight hours pay.

About civilians . . .

To the Editor:

In response to Counterpoint — By Deb Hilgeman, I would like to say:

Having been a Civil Service employee for nine years, I certainly feel that in your Counterpoint, Feb. 1 issue, you are classifying ALL civilians as being the same. I have worked for 18 years in a variety of jobs and I have seen both good and bad in all of them.

First, I take pride in my looks and the way I dress but I also take care of this at home; not in the office or in the bathroom at work. I am sure that the majority of us are this way. The ones who do spend this much time in the bathroom (as you stated, 45 minutes) certainly have soft bosses who undoubtedly don't care. It is a shame, though, that you have no more to do in your own job than to keep up with these people. Secondly, I work hard in my job, and need a break occasionally to clear my head, but I earn that break, and if at break time or quitting time, there is something that has to be gotten out, I stay, and I don't mind staying. As for lunch, most civilian employees on this installation have 60 minutes for lunch, as they work an eight hour day from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

As for civilians being rude, I have found JUST AS MANY military in my career that were rude and very unpleasant, as you have civilians.

And as to being here to serve the military, you make us sound like a bunch of waiters and waitresses. I have always been proud of working side by side with the military, working toward the same goal, for my country. Before you start casting the first stone, remember we all have our crosses to bear, no matter where we work, or who we work for. If we could all rid ourselves of so much jealousy of each other, we could all do a much better job. I hope that not all people judge others by the few bad ones they see, as you have done.

To the Editor:

It's about time someone finally got down on civilian workers at Fort Benning. I can't count the number of times I had to go somewhere on post to get something done and a civilian employee kept me waiting while she yakked away to a friend or co-worker. If it was an Army person who kept me waiting, he or she would be dealt with swiftly and effectively. But many civilians seem to feel that people in uniform are simpletons unless they're field grade officers. That private who is kept waiting may have business just as important to him as the general's business is to the general put a little brass on the collar is about the only thing that perks up some civilian workers. I also think it is a sorry situation when Benning's Army engineers are sent out to do menial tasks while civilian workers get all the construction contracts. If we're ever mobilized, we'll have a lot of engineers facing tasks they're unable to perform because civilians have robbed them of the needed experience.

SSgt. John Kosslofsky

Offering thanks

To the Editor:

Ordinarily a point-counterpoint series of articles provides interesting debate on a common subject. However, Deb Hilgemen's counterpoint on the civilian work force in the Feb. 1 BAYONET, by naming specific organizations, steps out of the arena of general debate. My comments are on behalf of a portion of the Fort Benning civilian work force, those in the Transportation Division, who feel a bit slandered by the article.

I am a soldier who, until eighteen months ago, had always worked with and for other soldiers. I am now chief of an activity that employs 188 civilians; my top three managers are civilians and my boss is a civilian. There are also 144 soldiers assigned to the division. I freely admit that I moved into the job with severe doubts about the worth of DA civilians. It was cultural baggage, that many soldiers carry around and never have the opportunity to shed. Fortunately, I shed my prejudices after about three days on the job.

The first thing that impressed me was that my folks cared, I mean really cared, for the welfare of soldiers and their families.

Setting it straight

In the story about military funeral details in last week's issue, we stated that retired service members and veterans who got out before retirement were eligible to receive a full military burial detail.

The story should have stated that only retired service members receive a full burial detail and veterans only receive one military representative to present the flag.

There was the lady who came in early (without somebody telling her to come in early) to call Germany to find out which direction a soldier's personal property had taken on its way to Fort Benning. There was another lady who helped pressure a carrier into compensating a soldier because of a late household goods shipment. There was the bus driver and his supervisor working beyond their normal day (without being told to do so) to help a distraught mother locate a child who had chosen to play with friends rather than get on the school bus. This just didn't track, DA civilians were not supposed to like soldiers. But caring is a part of their job, and they do their job well.

I was impressed with their capacity for work. Their normal day was 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, except holidays. But there was the "early bird" counselor for those soldiers who couldn't make it in during normal duty hours; the fellow working around the clock at the airport in Atlanta helping soldiers get home for Christmas; the supervisor with a briefcase full of paperwork to do over the weekend because she had spent a lot of time personally assisting soldiers with problems; and the lady who worked seven days a week during MOBEX (and managed a household with the rest of her time). They worked these odd, extra, and long hours without complaining. DA civilians were not supposed to work like that. But doing what needs to be done, when it needs to be done, without complaining, is a part of their job, and they do their job well.

I was also impressed with their efficiency. One lady received Department of the Army recognition (properly indorsed down through channels) as being the best in DA at doing her job. Another received recognition for a suggestion that saves the Army thousands of dollars each year. The whole office could take pride in a 98.5 percent accuracy rate in important correspondence. One group is always on time or ahead of schedule in getting out commercial billings. Efficiency and DA civilians are not supposed to be mentioned in the same breath. But doing things as efficiently as possible is a part of their job, and they do their job well.

I will not attempt to convince anyone that every civilian who works for me is hard working and efficient. There are a few in my organization who do not care as much as they should, and some who are not as productive as they could be. But this can be said of any organization, no matter how efficient it is. The process of reducing or removing an inefficient employee is a time consuming process and you can not miss a step along the way. Few managers ever undertake this rather formidable task. The other personnel action that is as difficult and time consuming is the process of reducing or firing (putting out on the street) a soldier for inefficiency. But getting the most out of my work force is a part of my job, and other (civilian and soldier) will judge whether I do my job well.

To the Editor:

In reference to your article on, civilian workers: asset or liability, the remark concerning the Class VI store employees struck a resonant chord with me. On a number of occasions my wife has remarked on the rudeness and hostility of the people working in this facility. It's certainly a sad day when an individual has to boycott a service facility because of the bad attitude of the people working there. If a survey were done, I imagine there are a lot of people who have received discourteous treatment in this store. While the overwhelming majority of civilian workers are dedicated, hardworking individuals, there does seem to be a lack of an efficient mechanism to remove those who are not, the Class VI store being a prime example.

To the Editor:

I am writing in reference to the treatment of military by civilians at CIF.

On Monday, Jan. 28, while at CIF at Sand Hill I was treated very rudely on two separate occassions. I cannot give names because neither one had a name tag on. The first incident occured when I was given an item which had a strap missing. When I pointed this out I was given a strap assembly. Upon asking for help to put this strap together or get another one I was told to move down by Civilian #1. I moved and asked Civilian #2 the same and he was in the process of bringing me another when Civilian #1 took the item from #2 and brought me the original item. Upon asking for assistance I was told by #1 it was not his responsibility that my supply would do this. I replied I would not accept the item unless I knew it was serviceable. Civilian #1 then helped me and I said thanks.

At the final check out my forms were taken, marked and I was told to sign. When I started reading the form I was given a disgusting look by Civilian #3. I read and signed the form.

Then Civilian #3 gave me another form. I was told to sign because it was a list of issue for his files. Upon checking the form it had listed that I was issued an field jacket I didn't receive. I told Civilian #3 who acted insulted and stated, "OK, I'll mark it off." Like he was doing me a favor. Checking further down, a field jacket liner was listed which I did not receive. When I pointed this out the form was snatched out of my hands and corrected. If I hadn't pointed this out how many people already marked down for these items in my group would have signed for them?

During my visit I felt that I was a problem to be dealt with quickly and sternly like an errant little boy. I was made to feel that doing anything other than shoving items at me or telling me 'sign them' was doing me a great favor.

And if I asked a question about signing for something I felt I was questioning my father's decisions.

How would you like to be sick and treated like that? Is bringing a bed pan a favor? Even if it is a problem for me?

What happened to common courtesy? Besides, this is a military post. To be run for the military — not the civilians.

What's that smell?

To the Editor:

"Shooeeeee it sure does smell" (bad). We have had it FBOC (Fort Benning Officers' Club). The ladies bathroom at the Main Club "stinks". The "Foxhole" (club basement lounge) has no ladies facility so we must hike upstairs only to be grossed out by the odor which permeates the bathroom. We enjoy the club and believe our patronage and support is important enough to deserve better. Right now, it might be worth the effort to clear the men's room, post a guard at the door, and use their facility rather than face that foul smell in ours. The club has made many great improvements over the past three years and it saddens and embarrasses us when we see visitors in the bathroom suffering with an unpleasant situation.

Please help.

Music to the ears

To the Editor:

There is myself and many others who enjoy and appreciate the outstanding music played by Nancy and Company at the Main NCO Club.

Nancy and Company has performed there for eight months now and we all hope they stay on, and continue their fine entertainment at the Main NCO Club for at least another eight months!

Nancy and Company play and sing the Top 40 hits, country music, disco hits, and some soul music for a well-rounded performance.

Cut down ads

To the Editor:

I admit I do not have all the facts pertaining to running a newspaper and I know the cost of newsprint has gone skyhigh but I believe a paper put out for the military's fit such as The BAYONET should have more down to earth soldiering and military type articles and less advertisement in it than the one (and previous ones) I have just perused, namely Vol. 30, No. 18, dated January 25, 1980. This issue has twenty-seven articles of interest and one hundred sixty six advertisements which is not a very good percentage in the way of news.

At least four of the articles take up one or more pages while the other twenty-three are of a much smaller size.

I believe if the BAYONET had one hundred and sixty-six articles and twenty-seven advertisements of less than ¼ page it would gain more popularity through-out the military here at Fort Benning. We can always read the Ledger and the Enquirer for advertisements. What we want is news.

Special Sound Branch has unique mission

By T.A. SABEL

Without them, the many varied and important ceremonies on Fort Benning could not be conducted. Their equipment and expertice allow the many speakers to reach larger audiences than normal voices would allow.

They are the Special Sound Section of Sound Branch.

Special Sound has the unique mission of installing and operating sound equipment for speeches and lectures for the commanding general, visiting general officers, and local guest speakers. They also work for special presentations and all activities in the Marshall Auditorium, York Field and where ever their services are needed.

Apart from military activities, Special Sound supports the civilian community at the Salisbury Fair, the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center, the AUSA Picnic, the Miss Georgia Ball and many other events.

Mobility is important. Special Sound has two specially rigged vans. The vans have permanently installed amplifiers, mixers, cassette and reel to reel tape recorders, eight LS-103 loudspeakers and other necessary equipment.

In the sound booth overlooking Marshall Auditorium they have similar equipment as well as the machines needed to present the poem, I AM THE INFANTRY, at the many graduation ceremonies.

The people running and working in Special Sound are professionals. The military members are trained radio-television production specialists. Many have commercial radio and television experience as well.

The three civilian workers have former military MOS training, technical or college training in the audio field. All in all, there are more than 30 years of experience in the audio field working at Special Sound, according to SSgt. Ron Provencher, NCO in charge.

He added that with the many demands off and on post, they work most weekends and nights as well.

PFC James C. Pickens works the "board" in the sound booth overlooking Marshall Auditorium while Alonzo L. Cooper, a civilian employee, looks on.

ACS can help with food stamps

Soldiers may qualify for Food Stamps if their individual financial situation meets certain basic criteria. Rank is not the controlling criteria, net monthly income is. If your net monthly income based on the total number in your household meets the following criteria, you should make application for Food Stamps.

| No. in Household | Net Monthly Income |
|---|---|
| 1 | $306 |
| 2 | 403 |
| 3 | 500 |
| 4 | 596 |
| 5 | 693 |
| 6 | 790 |
| 7 | 886 |

For each additional family member, add $97.

Application forms are available at Army Community Services (ACS), Bldg. 83. They will help you fill out the forms and tell you where to apply in person for these stamps.

Residents of Muscogee County must apply at the Muscogee County Family and Children's Services Office, 1718 8th Ave., Columbus, 571-7311. If you live in Chattahoochee County, you must go to the Courthouse Annex, Cusseta, Ga., 989-3681. For residents on on-post housing, Upatoi Creek is the dividing line between counties. Residents of Custer Terrace and McGraw Manor apply in Columbus, residents on Main Post apply in Cusseta.

Only the Food Stamp Offices are in the position to determine if you are eligible and, if so, how many stamps you are entitled to receive. ACS also has brochures explaining Food Stamp procedures — how to apply and how they are used. Food Stamps may be redeemed in the commissary as well as food stores off post. If you qualify for these stamps, the system guarantees you will get your first stamps no later than 30 days from the date the appropriate office receives your application.

Depending on the number in the household and net monthly income, a minimum of $10 per month in food stamps is given to families with no more than two members and up to a maximum of $564 per month for a family of 12. Again, it is emphasized that the emphasized that the exact amount of stamps provided can be determined only at the food stamp office.

197th to conduct noisy training

Elements of the 197th Infantry Brigade will be conducting a planned training test Monday through next Saturday in the northwest area of the reservation.

A spokesman in the Directorate of Plans and Training Department said heavy artillery, tanks, armored personnel carriers, Air Force jets, helicopters and various other weapons will be used.

He also said the exercise is a routine and necessary part of military training for the brigade's 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry and 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor. Supporting troops will come from the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery and Troop A, 15th Cavalry.

Persons living in the Upatoi area will probably hear some of the noise generated by such testing exercises.

Unit profile

Cav has come a long way

Story and photos by MARK CAUTHEN

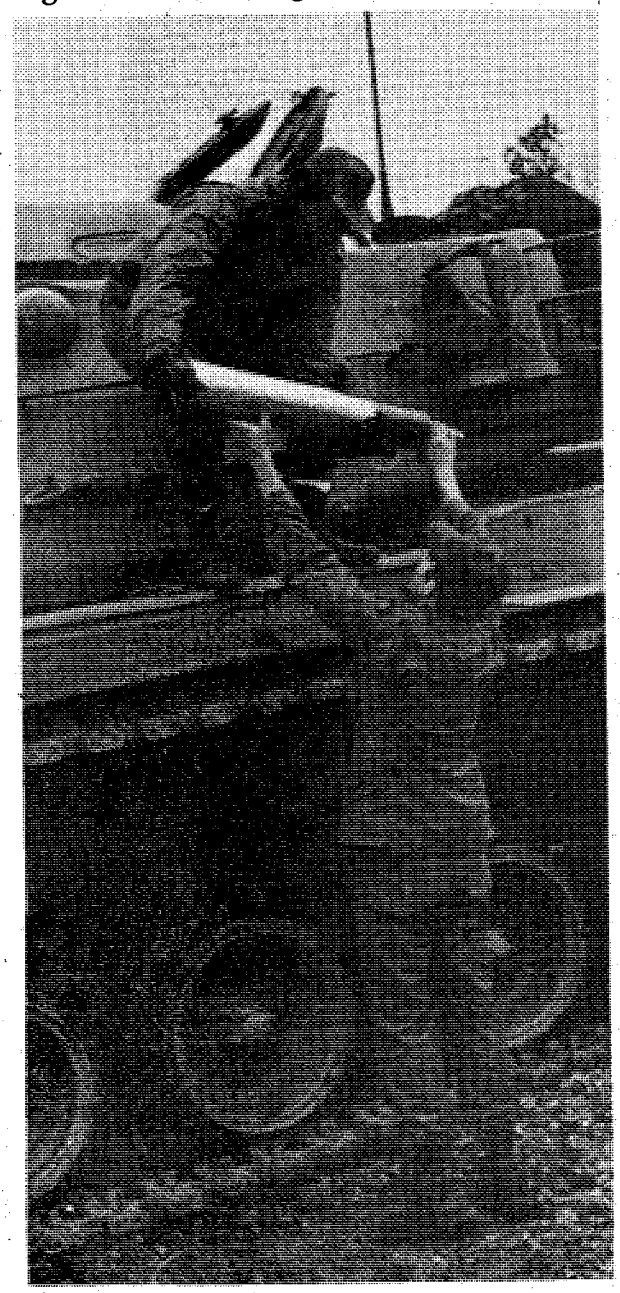
U.S. Cavalry. The mere mention of the words brings forth images from our nation's colorful history, when men in blue and mustard-colored uniforms rode their horses across the American west, fighting to maintain law and order. One man, one horse, together they made an unbeatable fighting team.

Today the cavalry remains a vital part of the Combined Arms Team. Their mounts have changed though, from those of flesh to those of steel; the M-60A1 Tank and the M113-A1 Armored Personal Carrier (APC).

Troop A, 15th Cavalry is the armored cavalry unit assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade. In peacetime, the unit's mission is to train so that the unit stays in a state of combat readiness in addition to providing support for the U.S. Army Infantry School. In combat A Troop can perform several different types of missions. These missions include reconnaisance, screening and being a covering force for the Brigade.



PFC Tommy Jones hands a round of ammunition to Sp4 Leroy Waller during a live fire power demonstration at Bryant Range.

Due to reorganization of cavalry units, A Troop replaced their Sheridan Armored Reconnaisance vehicles with M-60A1 Tanks. The unit is also now authorized six TOW and six Dragon mounted vehicles.

"The replacement of our Sheridans with the M-60A1 Tanks was one of the best things that has happened to A, Troop," said Capt. Buford C. Blount, commander of Troop A, 15th Cavalry. "The M-60A1 Tank is a much more reliable vehicle than the Sheridan and with the M-60's armor the Cav now has greater battlefield survivability and staying power."

In addition to Troop A's new tanks, they are also authorized six TOW and six Dragon mounted vehicles. The TOWs give Troop A the capability to destroy enemy armor vehicles at ranges in excess of 3000 meters.

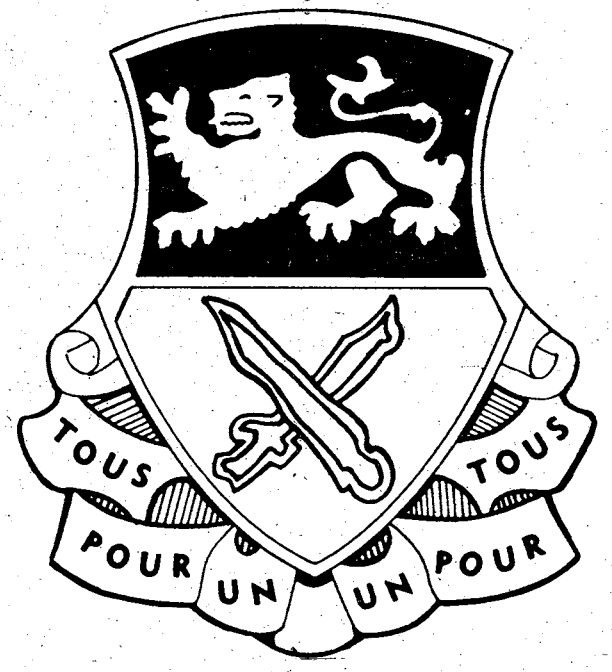
With its tanks, TOWs, Dragons, scout tracks, and mortars, Troop A has a tremendous amount of firepower for a unit of its size.

The history of Troop A goes back to the turn of the century. Troop A, 15th Cavalry Regiment was constituted into the regular Army in 1901. Less than one year later the unit saw its first combat action in the Phillipine Insurrection, with campaign credit for Mindanao and Luzon.

In World War I the unit served in France near Bordeaux.

During World War II, Troop A saw action in Algeria, French Morocco, Sicily, Normandy, northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, and Central Europe. For this action the unit received the Presidential Unit Citation and the Belgian Fourragere and was cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army.

The current organization of Troop A, took place on Aug. 17, 1973 when the unit was assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade, Fort Benning, Ga.



15th Cavalry crest

The red and white divided shield represents the old cavalry guidon. Hard fighting in the Philippines is indicated by the crossed Kris and Kampilan of the Moro and Lake Lanao campaigns. In World War I, the regiment served in France in the vicinity of Bordeaux and the golden lion is taken from the arms of that city. The translation of the motto "All for One, One for All" is indicative of the spirit of the regiment.

An M60-A1 Tank prepares to fire down range during a live fire exercise. The M60-A1 replaced the Sheridan and gives A Troop, 15th Cavalry much more survivability and increased combat effectiveness.

Life expectancy longer in 130 volt light bulbs

By DAVE BRISTOW

Chances are if you purchased lightbulbs at your post Exchange or commissary, you'd probably bought 120 volt lamps with whatever wattage bulb you desired.

Now available at the same locations is a new item that has not been around for a while. 130 volt bulbs are in! These lamps will not only enable you and your family to help save energy, but these bulbs last much longer!

130 volt lightbulbs like these are now available at your post Exchange or commissary as a new item. The 130 volt will save energy and at the same time will last three times as long as the 120 volts many people are now using.

Talking with Fort Benning's Chief of Utilities Division Mr. George Schladensky, he commented, "Naturally I'm interested in the best buy in lightbulbs for our Fort Benning residents. The 130 volt bulb is the better buy. There is a significant difference in the 130 versus the 120 bulb. Basically, the 130 will help save energy while giving you the light you need. Additinally, it will last three times as long as the 120. Many people are now using this size, since the filament is much stronger in the 130 volt bulb."

Schladensky warns customers, "Let people beware of the printing on the manufacturer's package. Each package has the electrical and life characteristics of a 120 volt bulb, even though a 130 volt bulb can be found in an identical box! The manufacturer has not packaged the product properly. They have failed to properly identify the product that is in the package. The package says the average life of the bulb enclosed is a life of 750 hours. However, it does not tell you that the 130 volt bulb which is packaged the same way lasts for some 21,750 hours despite the package information. This is a difference of three times at the durability of the 120 volt bulb."

Schladensky concluded, "The most expensive thing about a lightbulb is the labor. The most difficult thing to do is the changing of a bulb when it burns out. Changing of lightbulbs lead to accidents with people climbing on stools, stepladders, one person standing on the shoulders of another to get to a bulb, and so forth. If you have to change bulbs three times as much, you're three times more likely to have an accident. Purchasing 130 volt bulbs will avoid some of this bulb replacing, simply because they last and last and last."

NEW ITEM
Energy Efficient 130 Volt Bulb
Three times the life of standard bulbs when used in 120 volt circuit with resultant savings of energy.

This sign displayed at Benning Main Post Exchange informs customers there are new energy efficient 130 volt bulbs now on sale.

Patriots earn medals

In ceremonies on Kelley Hill, soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry were presented Good Conduct Medals. The Good Conduct Medal is awarded to soldiers who clearly distinguish themselves by exemplary conduct, efficiency and fidelity.

In presenting the Medal, the patriot Battalion Commander Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher, remarked, "This coveted award is very hard to earn and that only winners could wear it".

James Walker is congratulated by Col. Joseph R. Franklin, president of the Fort Benning School Board, upon his retirement after 27 years of service.

Retirement honored

A retirement ceremony was held recently in the Dexter School Auditorium for Mr. James Walker who is retiring after 27 years of federal service as a janitor leader for the Fort Benning Dependent School System. Walker was presented the Department of the Army Certificate of Appreciation by Col. Joseph R. Franklin, School Board president.

Col. Casey congratulates Maj. William H. Poe upon his retirement after 21 years of service in the Army.

Weapons expert retires

Maj. William H. Poe retired from the U.S. Army on January 31 after 21 years of service. He enlisted in March 1959 and was commissioned from infantry OCS in February 1965.

His duty assignments include: two tours of duty in Vietnam with Special Forces units, company commander of a training company at Fort Bragg, Headquarters company commander and S-3 of a tank battalion in Europe, and infantry team chief, Readiness Group, Oakdale, Pa.

His assignments at the Infantry School include: executive officer, Antiarmor Missile Division, Weapons, Gunnery and Maintenance Department; department operations officer; and for the past 15 months, assistant director, WGMD.

His awards include: Bronze Star Medal (1st Oak Leaf Cluster), Air Medal (3rd Award), Purple Heart, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal, Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm (unit-2nd Award), Presidential Unit Citation, Meritorious Unit Citation and Combat Infantryman's Badge. Upon his retirement, he received the Meritorious Service Medal for his contributions to the U.S. Army.

He and his family will reside in Orlando, Fla. where he will be a counselor for the placement of disadvantaged or mentally handicapped children.

Honor grad named

Second Lieutenant Terence B. Oliver and PFC Robert W. Johnson were named honor graduates of Basic Airborne Class #9 that was graduated here Jan. 25.

Coordinator appointed

The Alcohol and Drug Control Officer announced the appointment of Mr. James E. Henry as the Civilian Program coordinator for substance abuse problems among the civilian work force.

Civilian employees and/or their supervisors (either military or civilian) in need of assistance regarding alcohol or drug abuse problems are invited to telephone the Alcohol and Drug Control Officer at 545-5880 or 545-4891.

Chairman appointed

Appointment of subcommittee chairmen was among main items of business at the recent meeting of the Fort Benning Golf Advisory Committee, according to Col. Jerry Scott, overall chairman.

Billy Arthur will take over as subchairman of the Greens Committee. Other subchairmen are Capt. Bill Hauserman, Rules; George Britto, Tournaments; Lt. Jeff Benhigh, House and Facilities; and Lt. Col. Don Landrum, Marshals.

Maintenance schedules for the remainder of the year were outlined to committee members with a reminder to all golfers that post-emergence chemicals would probably be applied in February. Such weed killers will result in brown areas around greens and tees.

The proposed tournament schedule for 1980 calls for at least 24 events with others remaining to be scheduled. Tournaments will be held over both Lakeside and Pineside courses.

EDGEWOOD BAPTIST CHURCH
a brief history

In the middle of the 1940's a small group of people met in Edgewood School for Sunday School. By the summer of 1948 the City Missions Committee loaned the group a tent.

In April of 1949 the small Mission moved to an old barn (pictured right) and Rev. Frank G. Lavender became pastor.

On October 23, 1949 the Edgewood Baptist Church was organized and the grounds were broken for a new building (2nd picture).

By 1953, work was begun on a third building (3rd picture) but before it's completion a devastating tornado ripped through the Edgewood area. However, the first meeting was held in December of 1953.

Rev. Carl Peacock became pastor in 1955 followed in 1972 by Rev. David Howle.

As pastor, David Howle invites you to attend the dedication services this Sunday, February 10.

Sunday School 9:30 am. Dedication at 10:45 am followed by lunch on the grounds. Nancy Steinmann will be in concert at 7:30 pm.

Medical battalion operates in field

All is quiet and for the most part normal as the first squad, first platoon, of Company B, 3rd Battalion 7th Infantry(Cotton Bailers), 61st Infantry Division(Mechanized) moved out on their daily search and destroy patrol.

The quiet is suddeny shattered by the sound of small arms, automatic weapons and machinegun fire. The squad has been ambushed by elements of the Eastland Forces.

"MEDIC! Man down and wounded," shouts an excited comrade. His wounds are administered to, as others of his squad fall prey to the flying rounds. The medic attends to all the men as he gets to them, but they are in need of better medical care.

Priorities are set and the grid coordinates are called out.

The 34th Medical Battalion, and all of its medical units, support for the 61st Infantry, receives the call and rushes into action.

Helicopters from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) hurry towards the rendevous points called in by the ambushed squad. They swoop in and evacuate the more seriously wounded personnel and move them to the 2nd Comabat Support Hospital, bypassing the clearing stations that will be swamped shortly with the less seriously wounded.

Ambulances from the 690th Medical Company (Ambulatory) moved into position to receive the less seriously wounded, and transport them to the 546th (Clearance) Medical Company for more treatment and medical aid. The 2nd Combat Support Hospital (M.U.S.T.) prepares its staff for the incoming wounded. Doctors and nurses prepare the wards and operating rooms, while litter bearers wait patiently or the choppers to arrive.

This is how the scenario and sequence of events should have transpired for the members of the 34th Medical Battalion on their field problem Jan. 29 through Jan. 31.

Though the personnel and staff of the 34th did their jobs professionally and with the necessary skill, they had their problems and mix-ups, which became a vital element in the training exercise.

"This wasn't supposed to happen," said Lt. Col. James W. Weiss, commander of the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, as the Infantry Officer Basic Course students raided the hospital compound, raising havoc and chaos. "Yes we are supposed to be aggressed," he continued, "but the aggressors know which perimeter they are supposed to attack."

The raid by the IOBC class ends and the students prepare to catch helicopters that will take them on their next mission.

The training portion of the exercise ends with a tactical night move to another position. Prior to this move the casualties (actors) for the scenario are released to their parent unit, 3rd Battalion 7th Infantry, of the 197th Infantry Brigade. The field problem ends the next day with a vehicle road march back to garrison.

According to Capt. Goynes, S-3 officer for the 34th Med Bn, the training exercise was designed to evaluate unit operational capabilities in a combat situation. "Overall, the training went well," he said."Inhouse evaluation of the exercise showed that the units performed well, but there were some weak areas. These areas are going to be emphasized more as we restructure our training program.

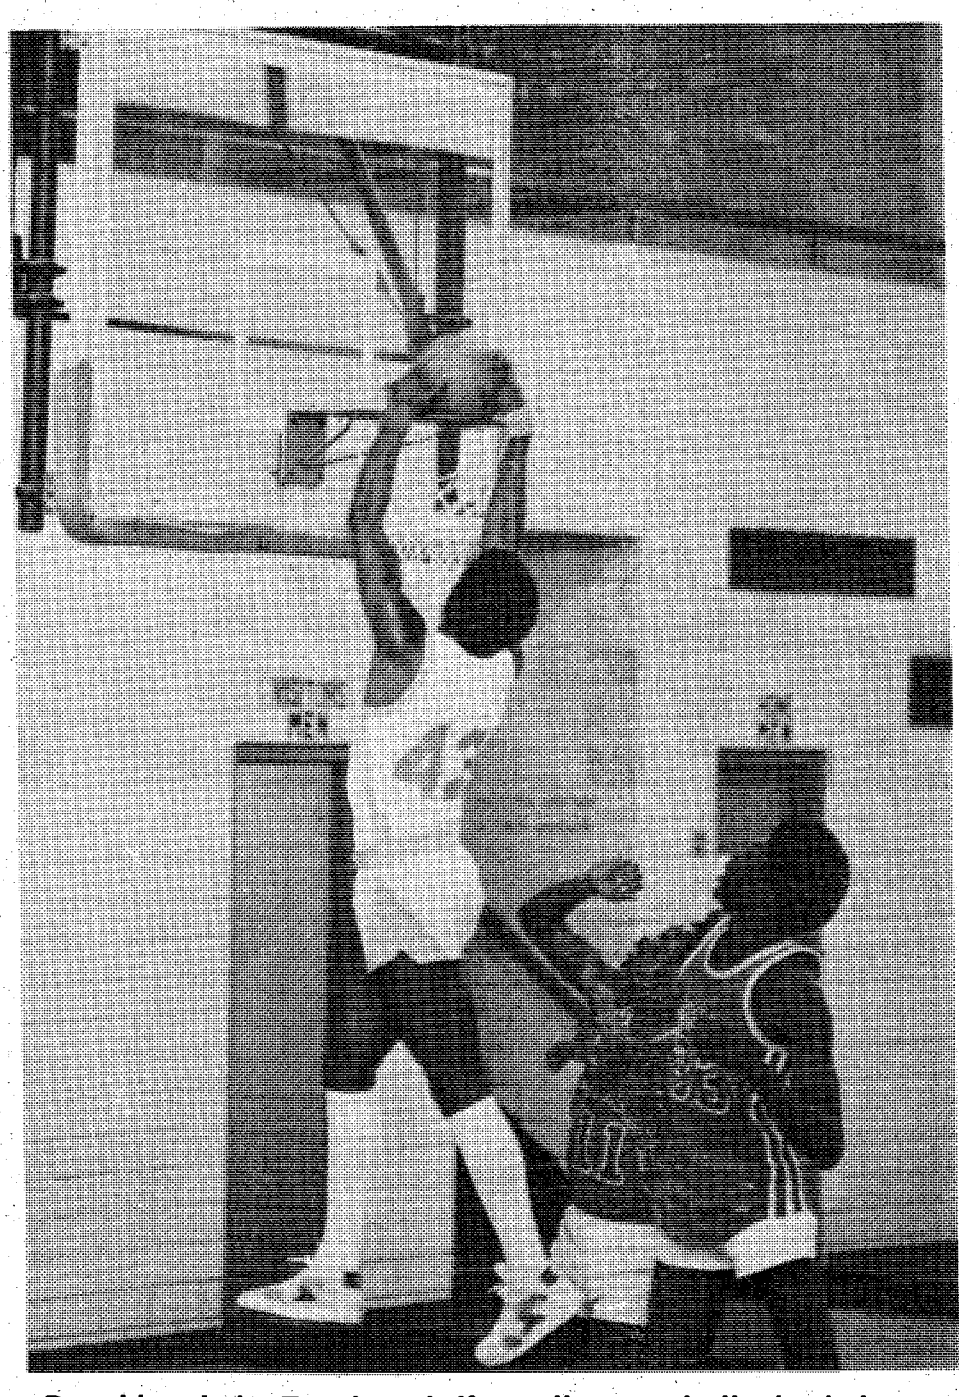
Silas Anderson (21) goes up for the rebound after a shot by Nate Harris misses the target, Melvin Hudson (33) waits, ready to assist if needed to gain control of the ball.



Doughboy Luke Fencher stuffs another one in the basket as a McPherson players look on. After a drive from half court Fencher out played the McPherson defense to score two.

Doughboys double winners over McPherson

Story and photos by PAT BARHAM

The Doughboys played two outstanding games last weekend as they blasted Fort McPherson 97-76 and 88-72, upping their overall standings to 20-5 for the season.

In action Saturday at Santiago Gym the Doughboys took a seven-point lead in the first quarter.

Saturday's game, plagued by fouls on both sides, became a defensive ball game as the Doughboys kept finding the slot to hit shot after shot from the fifteen and twenty foot line. The half left McPherson down as the Doughboys lead by 14 points, 47-33.

As the third quarter of play ended, the Doughboys had gained 13 points compared with 16 points gained by McPherson.

McPherson opened the fourth quarter with a burst of shots but the outcome of the game was in the cards. The Doughboy lead gained in the first quarter kept the home team on top for their first victory of the weekend, beating the Big Mac team 97-76.

Sunday's game started with a bang as the Doughboys began pulling out in front of McPherson early in the first quarter. In a repeat of the game played Saturday, the Doughboys began to mount up point after point before McPherson even scored.

The officals of Sunday's game liked blowing their whistles as evidenced by the large number of fouls given to both teams. The Doughboy defense again out played MacPherson forcing them to shoot from the key with little success.

McPherson moved in close using pass plays to get the ball inside but bad shots and fouls kept scoring to a minimum. The Doughboy's constant communication on the court kept tabs on McPherson as the Doughboys retained their lead through the game.

At the half the Doughboys were on top 47-33 as a frustrated McPherson team, short of players, planned strategy going into the second half.

The Doughboy coach received a technical foul after contesting a tip-in call by officials. McPherson never gained the lead as the Doughboys finished off the team at the close of the fourth quarter 88-72.so

Doughgirl express blows by Fort McPherson

By PAT BARHAM

The Doughgirls rolled over Fort McPherson Saturday by the score of 62-25.

Phyllis Colbert piled up points early in the game as the McPherson team looked on in amazement. The Doughgirls charged from the opening tip as they applied constant defensive pressure on the slower McPherson team. They used their superior speed to score frequently on the fast break.

Although the Doughgirls were bothered by fouls, the spirits of the team were never dampened in the first half. No one scored during the second quarter as both teams fought to gain control of the court. At the half the Doughgirls led 22-13. The Doughgirls usually average 30 fouls per game but they settled down in the second half and ended up with only 21 Saturday.

McPherson had the height advantage as the Doughgirls used their speed and a 1-3-1 zone press to counteract the disadvantage in the second half. As has happened so many times this season, the Doughgirls' quickness on their feet and their slight of hand produced many steals.

The ball changed hands off and on as Doughgirl turnovers allowed McPherson to get control of the ball and score several times in the third quarter.

Sylvia Jones scored 14 points for the Doughgirls while Marietta Jones hit for 12. Earlie Rockette and Phyllis Colbert tied with 10 each.

After winning the game by 37 points before a large crowd, the Doughgirls excitedly looked forward to Sunday's game. That game never came about as Fort McPherson forfeited.

Coach Hezzie Baines commented on the Doughgirls' play by saying, "With the ability I have seen exhibited on this team and the good shooting we've been having, I feel we are prepared to compete in the TRADOC tournament in March.

The Doughgirls play at LaGrange Monday in a game that looks to be a challenge. Coach Baines said, "We have beat them once before and the way we're rolling I am confident that we should play well and win again."

Flyer's season nears, team in need of players

Consider the following: What's rugby? Now choose one of the following:
a. Isn't that just like soccer?
b. Maybe it's that English football game
c. Never heard of it

Like most folks, you probably picked 'D. All the above.' First, let me tell you what rugby isn't. Rugby is not a social disease, a game played by the neighborhood crazies or a free for all drunk.

Rugby, the forerunner of American football, is a fast action contact sport played for two 40 minute halves-no substitution-with a ball that looks like an over-inflated football. The object of rugby is to run or kick the ball foward, cross the try line (goal line) and touch the ball down. The ball may not be passed foward, only laterally or backwards.

The Flyers Rugby Club is the only team in the Columbus area and is made up of both civilian and military players. The Flyers have just started practicing for the spring season and are looking for more players. Matches for the season include teams from Atlanta, Tallahassee, and Birmingham.

The Flyers will play in two tournaments: the St. Patricks Day in Savannah and the Military Cup here at Fort Benning.

It doesn't take a lot of equipment to play rugby--just a pair of spikes and a set of shorts. Rugby has no blocking so all the action is around the ball. Don't worry about being the right size, little guys play positions with names like hooker, winger and scrum half. Big guys are called props, seconds, and locks. They also like to tackle wingers and scrum halfs. It takes a total of 30 players for one game, so everyone plays.

Don't worry about not knowing the rules. According to Mike Bearden, team captain and club president, neither do most of the players now on the team.

For more information, call Mike at 544-4410 or 563-6570, Tom Krupenevich at 544-2270 or 561-9712 or Debbie at 689-5272.

2 Barracudas honored by AAU

By Barry Cuda

The Swim Committee of the Georgia Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) recently honored two members of the Fort Benning Barracudas Swim Team, coached by J. R. (Rick) Fagersten. To qualify for the AAU All-Stars, the swimmer must attain at lest one AAA national time standard in an AAU sanctioned meet during the current year.

Manuel Pangelinan, son of SSgt. (ret.) Joseph Pangelinan and Mrs. Pangelinan, attained an AAA time in the 50-yd. back stroke (31.96), ranking him third in the state for 11-12 boys during the winter short-course season.

David Christensen, son of Col. and Mrs. Douglas Christensen, swam to All-Star status in four events during the 1979 short course season as a 10-year-old. He achieved AAA times in the 100-yd. Individual medley (1:15.12); 50-yd. back (33.81); 50-yd. free (29.87) and 100-yd. free (1:03.96).

David was ranked among the top five 10-year-and-under swimmers in Georgia for 1979 in five events. He placed highest in the 100-yd. free style and ranked second in the state.

David is now competing in the 11-12 age group and swims in the A-range in nine of the twelve events in which he competes. Coach Fagersten is confident David will attain All-Star status again in 1980, along with several other promising members of the team.

Making Tracks

By TOM BREEDING

A fistful of facts

The Feb. 23 YMCA RUN will cost $4 prior to race day when it will go to $5. The rest of the details remain as given last week. Entry forms may be obtained at Below the Knee, the YMCA, from me (544-4177), or, hopefully, out of the BAYONET prior to the race. (See entry for the Columbus Marathon.)

A footnote: that 'lite lunch' at the DIXIE BEER BIKE AND RUN FOR FUN on March 1 is purely liquid.

All you heroes who have been setting records on the Doughboy Stadium track might be interested to know that CTC Race Director Lt. Col. John Moore measured the track by wheel and found it to be a full 25 yards short. He just couldn't leave us our illusions, could he?

Last and certainly not least is a reminder of Birmingham's MAGIC CITY MARATHON coming Feb. 17 at 9 a.m. The $3 fee deadline was Feb. 1, but oe can register to run as late as 8 a.m. the day of the race. Call for further details.

Auburn to Opelike run March 1

Those not wishing to attend the Dixie Beer extravaganza might go from the pure running offered by this 7.7 miler, or the two-miler accompanying it. Cheap(er) registration is available prior to Feb. 23, but register up until the starting gun if you wish. On-site registration occurs and both events begin at the Auburn Recreation Center, Opelika Road. The 7.7 Miler ends at Lee County Courthouse, where the awards ceremony will be held. More information available from 544-4177.

Valentine Run

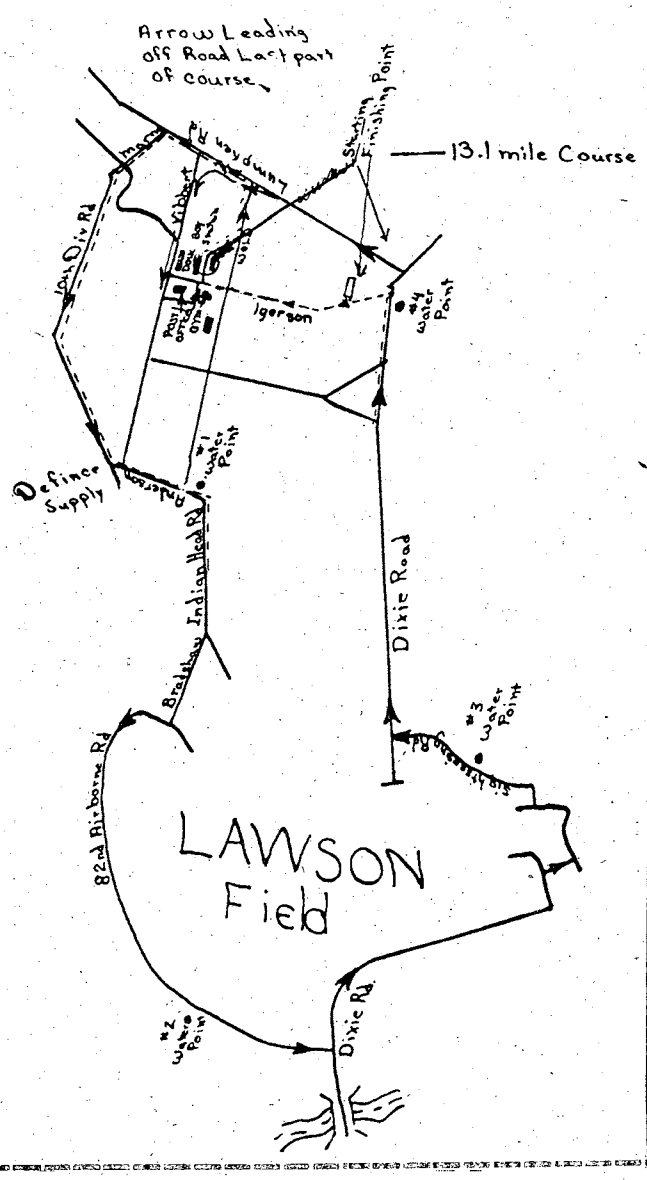
Morale Support Activities Valentines Weekend Fun Run is scheduled for Feb. 16. No entry fees or applications are required to enter the four events. A fifth event will be a mini-marathon starting the day off at 8:30 a.m. All entrants in this event must contact Tony Knight before Feb. 13 at 545-2332 to be eligible to compete.

The mini-marathon is a 13.1 mile run starting at the intersection of Lumpkin and Dixie Roads. According to Tony Knight, coordinator of the races, "This is the biggest run of the year and the first marathon of the year for this area."

The following runs are individual and family events, and five and sixteen-member squad and platoon events that begin after the mini-marathon.



At 9:15 a.m. a 2.5-mile run will be held on the same course as the Christmas Run last December starting in front of Crain Hall.

The five-mile family and individual run will begin at 9:30 which will be run on the same course with runners lapping the course twice.

The next two events will determine the fastest squad and platoon on Fort Benning with competition between Sand Hill, Harmony Church, Main Post and Kelley Hill.

At 10:15 a.m. the five-mile, five-man squad run will begin while fifteen minutes later the five-mile, 16-man platoon run will start.

Knight said there will be water, Gator-ade and towel stops at four points on the marathon course with hot coffee for all in Crain Hall to ward off the cold.

Knight added, all the courses are flat and fairley easy to run, for those that are worried about running.

Individuals participating in the runs will receive a patch with winners receiving individual plaques for first and second place in each event. Individuals participating in the squad and platoon runs will receive individual awards for first and second place in those events.

Plaques will be awarded at the end of competition in Crain Hall. Starter for the events will be Major General David E. Grange Jr., commanding general,and a 105mm howitzer.

For more information contact 2nd Lt. Tony Knight at 545-2332, Doughboy Stadium Sports Office.

Age categories for all the races will be as follows:

| MEN | WOMEN |
|---|---|
| 10 and under | 10 and under |
| 11-15 | 11-15 |
| 16-21 | 16-20 |
| 22-29 | 21-29 |
| 30-35 | 30 and over |
| 36-40 | |
| 41-46 | |
| 47-50 | |
| 51 and over | |

Runner profile

Dr. Dyer sees need for short races

By BOB KUWIK

Dr. Jean Dyer, like her husband Fred who was last week's featured runner, is a unit Army research psychologist and avid runner. Jean said she got started running "by way of Fred" and found out how badly out of shape she was. She began running when she was 35-years-old and recalls having problems running even one mile but stuck to a schedule of five to ten miles a week. She now runs four to five miles a day and nine or ten miles on Sunday.

With a low time of 44:30 for five miles, the doctor has participated in the Bonne Bell ten-kilometer race, the Faith School and Calloway Gardens 15-kilometers and is working towards the Columbus half-marathon coming up in a few weeks.

Jean says she keeps running for more reasons than just staying in shape. "I enrolled in the Run for Your Life Program here and found the cumulative mileage record that must be maintained in that program very reinforcing. It was encouraging to know that I had run so many miles even though the times were not very fast. I also appreciated the fact, and still do, that the officers and enlisted men did not ridicule my running, they encouraged me instead," she explained.

Jean encourages other women to try jogging, saying, "I can testify to the fact that a desk job does not promote physical fitness. Running is cheap compared to other means of increasing one's physical fitness such as health spas or tennis clubs. I must caution, however, that probably for the majority of women the running will not be fun (as is true of most exercise where you must sweat and strain to improve yourself), however, rewards will come with time and effort because you will get better and better and the running will become easier."

Jean concluded that she would like to see a few more short races (two or three miles as opposed to five or six) to induce women entrants. "It takes a fairly long time to work up to racing five or six miles," she explained. "A lot of couples I know jog rather regularly but do not race. One way of possibly encouraging them to join in the races would be to hold a 'couples' race; a fun race where the finishing time would be based on the time for both partners."

Crime Prevention Week observed

By PAT BARHAM

Fort Benning's Provost Marshals Office (PMO) will be observing National Crime Prevention Week Feb. 10-16.

Military police plan to step up patrolling in the housing areas during the week. Quarters and vehicles will be checked for security violations while on patrol and a friendly reminder will be left where a security violation has been found. This reminder is not a ticket but part of an awareness program designed to make Benning residents security concious.

The card lists what violations have been found such as, unlocked doors, windows down, keys in the ignition, packages in plain view, purses/wallet in plain view, or parked in unlighted areas.

During National Crime Prevention Week, on Feb. 11, there will be a forum at the Elizbeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education, Columbus College at 7 p.m. The speakers for the forum will be inmates from the Georgia State Correctional Facility. The forum will have a question and answer period about crime and prevention from the inmates' point of view. During the week there will be a static display on crime prevention in Infantry Hall provided by the Provost Marshals Office.

Crime prevention is not limited to a specific week or month according to Capt. Steven G. Bailey of the Provost Marshals Office, individuals should practice crime prevention every day.

Persons living in the housing areas should practice the good neighbor policy and watch out for the other guy. Nothing lets a thief know that a set of quarters are unoccupied, than a pile of newspapers in the front yard, or a set of quarters left with no lights on.

An intricate part of the Crime Prevention's Sections job is to inform incomming personnel and dependants about security measures that can be taken on an individual basis. This is accompilshed through briefings conducted at the 18th Replacement Det. and DFAE's Self Help classes.

Every individual, together with the Military Police has a responsibility to be security conscieous, no one can do the job alone. Through a team effort of people working together to prevent crime everyone will benifit. Remember....CRIME PREVENTION IS EVERYONES BUSINESS!

Black History Month

Racial conflict mars democracy

By ALVIRA PRESSLEY

Shirley Chisholm looks at the present for Afro-Americans: "The year of the Bicentennial, 1976, has encouraged many of us to reflect upon the American experience and led us to the realities of today.

Why are we described as a diverse and pluralistic society? We have the history of people being in violence and turmoil yet we have gone on. A nation proud of participatory democracy but have low turn outs in every election. We are the richest country in the world but have over 25 million Americans who fall below the national poverty line. We have the best medical facilities and the highest achievement in health technology yet 30 percent of the children in the ghettos of this country are suffering from some kind of malnutrition which will impair them for the rest of their lives. And, our pride rests on the citzenry which thrives on racial and ethnic diversity: still, we remain a society torn by racial conflict and discrimination."

The greatest challenge facing us today is the Russian and Tehran situation. I think it the struggle within our gates to assure that all citizens regardless of their race, ethnic origin or sex are not denied their human rights and are allowed to achieve their educational or occupational potential. Black Americans have made great strides during the past decade but the struggle continues because the expansion of rights and freedom and equality has not been realized.

We are not at the crossroad of our development as black Americans, we are only at the threshhold. The end of slavery didn't end with the Emancipation Proclamation; it only brought the problem into a diffeerent arena."

AAFES ups time for layaways, cancellations

Changes making the AAFES layaway program more attractive to customers and reduce paperwork have been announced by Brig. Gen. Duane H. Stubbs, AAFES commander. Customers may now use the 180-day layaway play for accumulatin of items other than clothing, shoes and perishables totaling more than $200. Clothing and shoes may still be placed on 90-day layaway.

The grace period available prior to Exchange cancellation of delinquent layaway has been extended from 10 to 20 days. This assures Exchange customers of maximum consideration before merchandise is returned.

Valentine's Day

Used to be for the birds

By PAT BARHAM

The month of February brings a time of love to hearts and the anonymous giving of gifts to loved ones. This tradition of giving gifts dates back to medieval times and over the ages has evolved to what is presently known as St. Valentines Day.

In pagan times nature was worshiped as a religion, the trees, grass and other earthly things were believed to be the the beginning of life. "On the second fortnight of the second month birds began to mate." the male bird chased female birds looking for the mate of his choice for that particular season. As Chaucer wrote, "For this was on Seynt Valentymes Day whan every foul cometh ther to chese his make". The belief held generally in England and France has carried through the years intertwining with other beliefs to become Saint Valentine's Day that is celebrated today.

The actual day that is celebrated as Saint Valentine's Day orginated as a seperate event in two different time periods. In the third century, St. Valentine, the disignation of several saints, was believed to have been given to the most prominent two martyrs whose feast is celebrated on Feb.14.

One of the priest, who died in Rome and the other the Biship of Terni (Interamma) who also died the same day some 60 miles away were be-headed during the persecution of 'Claudius The Goth'. Although very little is known for certain about either it is believed that both were buried along the Flaminian Way. This event in Roman martyrology falls on the same day in which during medieval times the mating season of birds began.

According to Collier's Encyclopedia, the medieval practice most probably had only an accidental connection with St. Valentines feast and the event that is celebrated today owes its origin to time and the fact that both events fall on the same day.

Today, St. Valentines Day is a time when everyone thinks of love. Candy and flowers have become the most appropriate token given to one's beloved. Even though over the ages the day's meaning has changed from its time of beginning centuries ago, the tradition lives on 'HAPPY VALENTINES DAY'.

MP awarded title

By BRIAN ADAMS

PFC Ruth A. Fitzgerald, of the 988th M.P. Company, in competition with nine other soldiers, was selected as the Post Soldier of the Quarter on Jan. 8.

Fitzgerald then, on Jan. 17, won MP of the Year in competition with fellow officers from the Law Enforcement Command.

Competition for Post Soldier of the Quarter began for her at company level on Oct. 9, 1979, which she won. She won the second level of competition at the Law Enforcement Command in November of 1979. From Post Soldier of The Quarter, she will compete for Post Soldier of the Year, which will be held later this spring.

Before coming into the military, the 21-year-old native of West Branch, Mich., was going to college. Her major was criminal justice. "I came into the military to become a police officer," she said. "It takes four years to become one, going through college, but the military sped up the process."

Fitzgerald, one of two female line officers in the 988th, feels a little overprotected sometimes by her male counterparts, but also appreciates it. "I would just like to let them know that I'm capable of doing the job."

"I'm competitor by nature," she went on to say. "I feel great winning these awards, especially in 'this man's Army', I feel that I won't have to prove anything anymore.

"As for my future," she said, "I would like to get out at the end of this tour and go back to college. I want to join the ROTC program and come back into the Army as an officer. The juvenile or accident investigation section is were I'd would like to work," she explained, adding that in her opinion the police field is wide open and interesting.

A $50 and a $25 Savings Bond, a watch from the Association of the United States Army, dinner for two at La Chateau and a three-day pass are some of the awards she will receive for her accomplishments.

PFC Ruth A. Fitzgerald demonstrates how she frisks a suspect.

Operation Crime Stop

WHAT: Georgia vehicle registration
WHO: Motorists
WHERE: Fort Benning
SUMMARY: 1980 license plates are now on sale for personnel who have their vehicles registered in the state of Georgia. Re-registration must be accomplished by April 1.

WHAT: Larceny of private property
WHERE: Building 2784, Top 5 NCO Club
WHEN: 1:40 a.m. hours, Jan. 17
SUMMARY: A PFC from Fort Bragg entered the Top 5 NCO Club and stole four purses from the table tops. He then took them to the men's latrine and removed the personal property. An alert noncommissioned officer from Committee Group detained the individual and notified the military police. The property, with a value of $551, was recovered.

Crime prevention is everyone's business and this is an excellent example of involvement by an NCO and prompt notification to the military police. Call the military police desk whenever you observe suspicious personnel or a crime in progress.

There is help for soldiers who need it

Sex in the barracks?

Point

By T. A. Sabel

Denying visitation rights to members of the opposite sex is not an attempt to legislate morals. The legislation of morals is a foolish enterprise at best.

To deny visitation rights is not an attempt to stop the natural social flow between the sexes, but rather, the policy recognizes the need for consideration. Consideration to the roommate. The majority of the barracks do not have single rooms. They have at least two people sharing the room, sometimes more. If one roommate, in the social intercourse with the date, denies the other access, then shouldn't some action be taken to prevent this?

As with many subjects in the Army, the answer to the visitation question comes from the commander. Some have opened up the barracks to some form of limited visitation, restricted between certain hours. Fortunately, most of the commanders have not allowed open visitation to undermine life in the barracks.

Like it or not, the barracks belong to the commander. The soldier, as any other guest in somebody else's house, has to abide by the rules of the commander.

His decision is not magically made or pulled out of the gold-braided hat some think he may have. More than likely, it was made after careful consideration and thought with the best interests of the troops in mind.

The commander is not as caught in the mesh of barracks life as are the troops. By standing back, he can see the long view and make a decision. With the limited space available in the barracks, the no visitation policy is the best. Both roommates are given equal access to their rooms giving them ample time to rest or study.

The inevitable intanglements with men and women living too closely together are hopefully limited, freeing the soldiers to concentrate more on the mission. And the mission is why we are all here.

Undue embarassment is stopped. Believe it or not, there still are some people in these jaded times who do get embarassed. Why should somebody have to put up with a member of the opposite sex running past half naked on the way to the latrine?

If all the soldiers had the level of maturity to live in coed barracks, then fine. Unfortunately, the level of maturity needed to live in coed barracks is sadly lacking. If the majority of soldiers were mature, then discipline in the Army wouldn't be, as many consider, at its all-time low. How many times have we heard, "You know what's wrong with the Army today? Lack of discipline."

Without mature, disciplined soldiers, open visitation will always remain a dream in the minds of many. The soldiers who try continually to get over, get by, and buck the system, have ruined it for those working diligently on the mission.

Unless human nature changes drastically, then closed visitation is the best policy to maintain any quality of life in the barracks.

Counterpoint

By Deb Hilgeman

It may not be much but if you live in the barracks, then your room is your 'castle'.

Barracks dwellers have to put up with roommates, daily inspections and a stringent set of restrictions set up by the unit. Too often, the restrictions are geared to control the problem soldier but it is the good soldier who pays the heaviest price.

This negative approach seems to be backfiring in that good soldiers resent living under restrictions that presume the soldier is not mature or responsible enough to conduct himself according to unit standards. Why not assume everyone is "innocent until proven guilty" and crack down when a soldier does mess up?

It should be left up to the people in the rooms whether or not they want visitors of the opposite sex. If one roommate wants a visitor of the opposite sex and the other roommate vetoes it, they should be adult enough to come to an understanding. And if one person abuses the privilege and no agreement can be reached, then and only then should unit overhead be called in to mediate.

Many of today's enlisted soldiers are well-educated, highly-motivated and mature individuals. Yet they are treated like wayward children from the time they sign into a unit. If commanders show no trust for their soldiers, the soldiers' morale is bound to take a dip. What's the point in working hard and keeping a good record when the same set of restrictions apply to both the good troop and the troublemaker?

Men in women's rooms and women in men's rooms goes on regardless of the regulation prohibiting it. And it is grossly unfair and untrue to assume that these visits are done solely for the purpose of sex. Just about every man or woman living in the barracks has, on occasion, a reason for wanting a person of the opposite sex in their room.

Living in the barracks promotes friendships between men and women and a private conversation or game of cards in the dayroom is impossible. Many people in the barracks work together and if a man and woman have work that could be done together after duty hours, why not let them have the peace and quiet of their home to work in?

By no wildest stretch of the imagination could anyone mistake a barracks for a motel on the strip. But it shouldn't resemble a monastery, either. Men and women living in the barracks have taken no vows of celibacy and very few practice it. But they shouldn't be penalized by having to spend the night in a sleazy motel when they want some time alone with someone they care about. It is degrading to the feelings they may have for each other and a hardship on their small paychecks.

Other services, other Army posts and even Fort Benning's officer corps have policies permitting visits by the opposite sex in billets and there has been no rape epidemic as a result. Fort Benning's enlisted soldiers deserve the same consideration.

The Victorian age is over and long may it rest. If the policy makers want to adhere to their grandmother's morals, fine. But they shouldn't shove THEIR morals down the throats of soldiers who are perfectly capable of formulating their own moral standards.

Glad you asked

This is crime prevention week. Do you think Fort Benning is doing everything it can to help prevent crime?

SSgt. Sam Larsh
Company B, Headquarters Command

Yes, they have a good education program which tells people how to prevent crime. The military police provide a good service on this post also. Although I feel it can be better by providing more personnel to work for the Provost Marshal. Most patrols should be put out in the housing areas and company parking lots to stop vandalism.

Sgt. Alvin Carlos
Company C, Committee Group

Yes, in my company they have locks and hasp on the doors. And they make sure your car is safe by having the CQ check the parking lot area.

Sp4 Shirley Myles
Headquarter Company, Headquarters Command

Yes, they have the CQ's check outside to see if people are loitering around the vehicles. In the company they have security checks to make sure things are alright.

SSgt. Walter Sutton
11th Company, The School Brigade

Yes, in the last four to five years fatal incidents have cut down some. The response from the military police is a contributing factor in lowering the causes of criminal activity on this post!

Sp4 Kenneth Williams
Company B, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry

No, they don't have enough military police. I feel they should have undercover military police to check areas where GI's go off-post, like Victory Drive, so young soldiers won't be assaulted or ripped off.

Maj. John Doble
Cheif, Protocol Division of USAIC

This is the first post I have been to that has created a crime prevention atmosphere. The post newspaper and the Benning Bulletin regularly publicizes incidents where soldiers have assisted in stopping crime under the Crime Stop Program. Also, they have emergency numbers for the wives to assist them in an emergency and the Sgt. Friendly program for the children.

Cpl. Charlie Montoya
1st Recon. Battalion, 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, CA.

Yes, the wall lockers they have at the Airborne Company are break-in proof and they have a barrack's monitor to make sure certain people don't come in the company if they don't have proper ID.

PFC Michael Roden
Company D, 4th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade

Yes, but one major thing on post is car stalling. People steal parts off these cars while the soldier is trying to get help to tow his car.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks, Coach!

To the Editor:

We would like to take this means to recognize an outstanding member of the Fort Benning community. This man recently completed a most successful regular season as coach of the Celtics in the Termite Division of the DYA Basketball League. His name is Don Larson and on behalf of all the parents and team members associated with the Celtics, we want to express a big 'THANK YOU'.

Coach Larson took eight young boys and one young girl and instilled in them the basic fundamentals of basketball coupled with a sense of sportsmanship and team play. Many of these children had barely dribbled a basketball that first day of practice back in January but their rapid improvement in skills can only be attributed to the fine coaching ability that Larson exhibited as each child progressed. His time and efforts were endless and undoubtedly rewarding.

This letter would not be complete without also thanking Mrs. Larson. Her support, not only to her husband and two sons, but to all the team members, was vital. She was by far the Celtics number one fan!

Again, Coach and Mrs. Larson, thank you. You are fine assets to the Fort Benning community.

Sarge needs air

To the Editor:

We have a definite smoking problem in our office and it appears endless. So, I', looking for public opinion.

Our office is relatively small with just one entrance and one broken air conditioning unit (the only vent in the office). We have constant traffic through our office as part of our operation. Just about everyone in the office smokes and most people who come into our office smoke. A staff sergeant in the office can't stand cigarette smoke and is constantly complaining.

Some of the smokers show a little respect for the sergeant (and I do mean LITTLE) and some show none at all. Sometimes it gets so bad the sergeant has to leave the office and his work.

Would you believe someone had the nerve to say, "It's a proven fact cigarette smoke doesn't bother non-smokers?"

The story doesn't end with the smoke. There are also the butts, ashes and dirty ashtrays. It is a proven fact that cigarettes are bad for your health.

If this letter has no effect, then God bless the respiratory tracts of all you non-smokers out there.

Sp4 Juan L. Wright

Employee grateful

To the Editor:

Thanks for allowing me this time to express my honest and heart felt opinions on the most comfortable and beautiful dining facility on Main Post, the Run-in-Chef Burger Bar. From the beginning to the completion of this building and the opening, the staff manager and workers have been proud to be connected with this facility.

To organize or run any business or facility, there are plans to be made, rules and regulations to be governed by. The plans, rules and regulations were instituted by the planners of this great organization and handed down to the staff, manager, and staff members to be governed by accordingly. I believe that anyone who has dealt with business knows this and understands.

I'm pretty sure other eating establishments have their days of criticism and had to make a few changes to give better service to their customers. We too are making changes and working very hard to render a better service.

I'd just like to give thanks to the manager and his staff for working harder each day to improve the service.

Again, I must say thanks to all the civilians, dependents, retirees, active duty and many, many thanks to the young officers who are here every day to patronize our facility. Special thanks to the Spencer High School student who came by and made our day just simply beautiful. We're very proud of you fine patrons. Please help us to help you. May God bless each of you.

Mrs. Mary Sullivan

will not often find a short line at the facility. In fact, the line stretches out into the street. Why then are there always only two of the four self-service islands open? I sincerely believe that with the additional pumps open time could be saved and customers would be satisfied.

Sp4 David C. Begley

Civilian replies

To the Editor:

I would like to commend Deb Hilgeman for bringing out the true facts of "some" civilian employees.

However, let's examine the reasons why some of us "have fallen into a rut of inefficiency . . .":

1. Favortism: Have you ever been conscientious and dedicated to a job, only to be rewarded by a swift kick in the pant? While a co-worker who does absolutely nothing reaps all the praise and rewards. I have. Try it. See how efficient it makes you feel like being.

2. Callous management: In agreeing with T.A. Sabel's statement, "When the supervisors, either civilian or military, grow uncaring . . ." I can only honestly state that of nine years in the AG Division I have had only one supervisor who could give a "damn."

At one point I had an employee working for me (described by Hilgeman as "dead beats who can not or do not perform their jobs well"), who was barely satisfactory. I attempted to help this employee improve their productivity and efficiency. Instead, I was made the villian and subsequently reassigned.

". . . have about as much chance of receiving walking papers as St. Peter has of receiving PCS orders." Bravo! Bravo! Well stated. Alternatively, what they can do is "reorganize" and issue "RIF" letters. What this does is allow management to "rotate" employees; that is, to reassign them freely, hand-picking their personnel.

Of course, their (management's) dear little scheme cannot function without the dedicated service of our "fine Civilian Personnel Office." Which brings me to point three.

3. Promotions: This is the biggest laugh of all. As far as advancement goes, there is none. Unless you know someone or work at the CPO, you can forget it. It matters little how conscientious and dedicated employee you may be. For instance, in our activity we have two employees of the same grade. Employee number one is loyal, dedicated and quite proficient in her position, while employee number two is lax, often late and does a lot of personal stuff on governmemt time. Guess which employee our "efficient managers" are trying to promote? You guessed it, employee number two.

What this employee needs (instead of a promotion) is a walk to the unemployment line. About her superior? A firm reprimand. And should he be caught pulling anymore shenanigans, a quick and merciless "dishonorable discharge" to him and all others who may be involved in promotiong an inefficient employee.

Further, number two employee's superiors would probably have to help her comlete the "outlandishly" stupid FB Form 532, which is another way for management to discourage "dedicated" employees from seeking advancement.

Complain you ask? By all means do utilize our "grievance" system. You'll soon learn that you'll get as much results as talking to a wall.

A transfer? Management doesn't give them unless it benefits management. Besides, if they did (this activity), may wake up and find most of its civilian employees gone.

Presently I am occupying a position that has been downgraded for over a year. In fact, the former incumbent received a handsome award ($920) for making this suggestion. I, also, have suggested that this postion is unnecessary. Yet here I sit, an overpaid and underworked employee. On whose shoulder does this responsibility lie? Certainly not mine. Then, the only conclusion--management.

In my opinion, the main reason some of us fall into this rut of inefficiency is because of an "inefficient" and "uncaring" management.

During the week of Sunday, March 1, we at Fort Benning join with the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History in urging citizens of this great nation everywhere, to assess Afro-American heritage. The experiences and accomplishments of black Americans are deeply rooted within American heritage. The national theme is "Heritage for American," and the local theme for Fort Benning is "Black Defenders of America."

The contributions of black Americans in defense of this country can be traced to the pre-Revolutionary War. The birth of this nation was assisted by the blood and sweat of the black men and women who fought for this great country.

The accomplishments of the black American are many and varied. They include law, medicine, surgery, technology, agriculture, music, sports and many other areas.

With these accomplishments in mind, and with pride and gratitude, Fort Benning salutes black Americans during the week of Sunday, March 1.

Washington's Birthday weekend is the first three-day holiday after the Christmas season, and many of you will be planning extended trips to visit relatives and friends. Wherever you go, keep in mind that the streets and highways will be heavy with holiday traffic.

Privately-owned vehicles continue to be the greatest cause of accidental deaths in this country. Traditionally, we experience an increase in traffic deaths during holiday periods. Holiday travelers frequently overextend their driving limits to reach their desinations early, then leave for home late, driving for long periods of time with no rest. Even if you are a safe and careful driver, remember, there are many drivers on the road who are not as safe.

People are our most valuable resource at Fort Benning, and we can't afford to lose anyone. I urge everyone to buckle up, drive safely and respect the right of others. Have a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Look to past for lesson

By Larry Whitley

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—As we begin a new decade, we find people writing and talking not only about what happened in the 70's, but about the past in general. Many people find that by examining history and looking into the past, one can sometimes foresee what the future may hold in store.

This year, as in every year since 1976, the month of February has been dedicated to recognizing the heritage and impact of black Americans in shaping America's short, but dynamic history.

The military, in particular, has played a vital role in shaping that history. And, though blacks have fought in all of America's major conflicts, it was only in the 1950's that black Americans were fully integrated into the framework of the military.

Yes, there have been accounts of black Americans fighting in the Revolutionary War, The War of 1812, The Civil War, The Indian Wars, The Spanish-American War, WWI and WWII. But, if one must formally date the integration of the black soldiers into the ranks of the U.S. Army and the other military services, it happened in 1948.

President Harry Truman issued executive order 9981 that year, declaring, "There shall be equality of opportunity and treatment for all persons in the armed services without regard to race, creed or color."

Full integration of all Army units was not completed until the early 1950's during the Korean War. The first time the military services fought together as fully integrated units was during the conflict in Vietnam, just a few short years ago.

Black enlistments in the military increased dramatically during the late 1950's and through the 60's and 70's. Spurred, in part, by new awareness generated by the many civil rights movements during that period, these black youths often questioned the slow movement toward equal treatment in the military — sometimes violently.

The Department of Defense recognized that the effectiveness of the military relies not only on the equipment and training provided soldiers, but also on the working relationships of people from a variety of cultural, economic and ethnic backgrounds. Thus, in 1971, the Defense Department established The Defense Race Relations Institute (DRRI) at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla.

The active Army began the decade of the 1980's with about 217,000 black Americans in the ranks of its 750,000 soldiers, or about 30 percent of the force.

The percentage of blacks in the Army today is greater in the lower enlisted ranks, with a high of 37 percent in the ranks of Pvt. 1 through PFC. These percentages are in line with the increased number of blacks who entered the Army through the draft, volunteer enlistments and reenlistments since the Truman integration order. Army efforts to equalize treatment of all soldiers through affirmative action and other programs also had a bearing on the number of black Americans entering and staying in the Army.

Unlike the many black Americans who fought and died for their country in obscure, segregation units, today's black soldiers work side by side with all other soldiers toward the Army's basic mission of national defense.

Black defenders Benning theme

The month of February has been proclaimed as Black History Month by President Carter for this year. The national theme this year is "Heritage for America." Fort Benning's theme is "Black Defenders of America." The post will specifically recognize black defenders of America in a display in the lobby of Building 4 during the week of Feb. 24-March 1. During February the tri-city community will be observing black history and heritage including art, music, religion, politics and other aspects of the black community.

Dr. Carter Goodwin Woodson established Black History Week in 1926. Traditionally, it has been observed during the second week of February to encompass the dates of the 12th and 14th. The first being the birthdate of Abraham Lincoln and the second, Frederick Douglas. Woodson, an educator and scholar with a Ph.D. from Harvard, was convinced that the history of black people in America was being ignored or misinterpreted by the majority of educators in colleges and universities.

Woodson founded the association for the study of Afro-American life and history in Chicago, Sept. 9, 1915. One year later he began publishing the Journal of Negro History. It was through the research and articles of these that Black History Month was made possible. Black History Month is an important instrument in making people aware of other people. This month is more than just a month for scholars to discuss history.

It is a chance for men and women to gain a better understanding of each other. Not all blacks have played a major role in the history of our country, but all have played some part, as all Americans have, in the formation of a nation a little more than 200 years old. Alma P. Smith wrote in a poem, "Here I stand, you may stand beside me, under me, or over me. Yet only I can stand here." So, too, is it with history of black Americans. No one else could have lived their history for them. Let's observe it and learn from it.

Defense budget request largest ever

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — The Department of Defense announced details on the FY 81 DoD budget program Monday — the largest budget request since the Vietnam Era.

The budget request, which provides for "real" growth in the FY 81 program of 5.4 percent over FY 80, asks for $158.7 billion over the estimated FY 80 request.

According to a DoD official, the budget request provides evidence of the nation's "willingness to bear the burdens" associated with continued leadership in the world.

President Carter, in a speech last December, expressed his intention to set "a growth rate for defense that will be tolerable over the long haul."

The DoD official stated the defense programs for FY 81 and beyond are designed to assure four major objectives:

- That our strategic nuclear forces are essentially equivalent to those of the Soviet Union.
- That the military balance between NATO and the Warsaw Pact will continue to deter the outbreak of war — conventional or nuclear — in Europe.
- That our ability to come quickly to the aid of friends and allies around the globe will be clear and impressive.
- That our navy will continue to be the most powerful on the seas.

DoD officials say a major research, development, testing and evaluation (RDT&F) program to develop an inter-theater airlift aircraft, the C-X, has been started and will continue in FY 81 in support of the Rapid Deployment Force (ROF). A new fleet of wartime prepositioning ships, two of which are programed for in the routine, will be used to carry the large equipment required by the RDF to predetermined overseas sites.

DoD has requested over $3.3 billion in military construction funds for FY 81 to provide the military forces with the modern facilities needed to support personnel needs and advanced weapon systems, officials say.

The family housing program includes increased funds for the operation and maintenance of existing units as well as new construction, officials said. The FY 81 program provides for the construction of 2,651 family housing units, and also includes funds for energy conservation projects, improvements to existing quarters, and advance planning and design. The program will support over 400,000 leased or government owned family quarters worldwide, an official explained.

DoD officials are also forecasting the annual pay raise for military members at 7.4 percent, while programing a 6.2 percent raise for defense civilians.

Other significant DoD changes for FY 81 are initiation of cost-of-living allowances for unaccompanied personnel living and eating in government facilities, and increases in the planned number of enlistment and reenlistment bonus payments.

The Army's part of the DoD budget for FY 81 is $39.8 billion, an increase of $5.5 billion over the $34.3 billion requested in FY 80.

Some of the major budget changes in the FY 81 budget request include:

- Increased emphasis in aircraft changes on the CH-47 helicopter modernization program.
- Funds for increased production of the Copperhead Guided Artillery Missile, the Patriot Air Defense Missile and the new multi-launch rocket system.
- Funds for more XM-1 main battle tanks and fighting vehicle systems (XM-2 Infantry Fighting Vehicle and XM-3 Cavalry Fighting Vehicle). The first production model XM-1 is scheduled to be delivered in March.
- Funds for initial production of the Division Air Defense (OIVAD) Gun System.

Speed changes

Effective today the new speed limit will be 45 miles per hour on 1st Division/Dixie Roads between Lindsay Creek Bypass and Collins Loop. Motorists are reminded that speed must be reduced below the limit to conform with road conditions: i.e., fog, heavy rain and/or traffic congestion. Military police will cite violators.

No left turns will be permitted from 1st Cavalry Division Road into 1st Division Road between 7-8 a.m. and 4-5 p.m. on normal duty days. This change is necessary due to traffic accidents occurring when vehicles on 1st Cavalry Division Road wereattempting to make left hand turns in the face of oncoming traffic. It is hoped this will prevent future accidents andmaximize a steady traffic flow on 1st Division Road. Users of 1st Cavalry Division Road should useMarne and Davis Hill Roads during these period.

Legal Notes

It's that taxing time

It is federal income tax filing season again. This means that required taxpayers should file their 1979 federal income tax return as soon as they can not later than April 15.

Who must file a tax return? Generally speaking, your income and filing status determine whether you must file a tax return. For example, if you were single (which also means legally separated, divorced, or married with a dependent child and living apart from your spouse for all of 1979), under age 65, and your income was at least $3,300, you must file a federal income tax return for 1979. If you are single, and 65 years of age or over, you must file if you had income of at least $4,300.

If you were married filing a joint return and living with your spouse at the end of 1979 (or on the date your spouse died), and if both were under 65 years of age, you must file if your income was at least $5,400. If one party to the joint return was 65 or over, you must file if your income was at least $6,400. If both parties filing the joint return are 65 or over, you must file if your income was at least $7,400.

If you were married filing a separate return or married but not living with your spouse at the end of 1979, you must file if your income for 1979 was at least $1,000.

What happens if I don't file or pay my tax on time? Failure to file your return by the due date will subject you to a failure-to-file penalty of five percent of the tax due for each month, or part of a month, that the return is late. This penalty cannot be more than 25 percent of your tax. You may not have to pay this penalty if you can show that you had reasonable cause for not filing on time. For example, military personnel on duty outside the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15, 1980 are allowed an automatic two-month extension to file their returns for 1979. If the servicemember uses the automatic extension he will not have to pay the failure-to-file penalty, but he will have to pay interest on any unpaid tax from the due date April 15 to the date you pay the tax.

In addition to the failure-to-file penalty, the Internal Revenue Service may assess a failure-to-pay penalty of one-half of one percent on any unpaid taxes for each month, or part of a month, after the due date that the tax is not paid. This penalty cannot be more than 25 percent of your unpaid tax. If you had a good reason for not paying your tax on time you may not have to pay this penalty.

To avoid paying the IRS any penalty and interest fees, service members who are required to file should do so by April 15. Some preventative tax medicine, filing a timely and accurate tax return, can save the individual taxpayer money, bureaucratic red-tape, and needless heartburn.

To assist service members at Fort Benning in the preparation of their tax returns, each special court-martial convening authority sent at least one tax representative to an IRS Tax Assistance Conference in Atlanta. The object of the conference was to train tax representatives in the fundamentals of preparing simple tax returns. Once trained, the military tax representatives will in turn train volunteers from their respective units to assist servicemembers in completing their return. This effort is part of the IRS Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program (VITA). The program is geared to provide tax assistance for the relatively uncomplicated tax return. The majority of the servicemembers at Fort Benning probably fall within this category. Any individual who is having difficulty in completing his tax return should find out from his company commander who the VITA representatives are in their unit.

To supplement the individual unit tax programs in effect, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate will be open from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturdays through April 12 for income tax guidance for active duty service personnel. Although policy precludes judge advocate officers from actually preparing returns, the judge advocate officers can provide legal advice and instructions on how to complete the forms.

Fort Benning selected for computer testing

By Brian Adams

Fort Benning has been selected as the 'test bed' for a new computer system serving as the prototype for other Army installations.

IIADS, Integrated Installation Administrative Support System, is designed to integrate all the areas of administration and management into one central network.

The system cost the military $30,000 and will include such items as full service automated text processing, electronic storage and retrieval, document indexing (suspense files), automated locator and mail forwarding and a few other packages.

There are thirty-seven terminals around post which feed into a central computer located in Building 75.

There are two types of terminals being used by the system. One is a television set (reader) and the other is a reader/printer which has the ability to do one, the other, or both.

Besides being able to read or read/print, the terminals also have the ability to send messages to other terminals and receive messages from other terminals. The terminals can also compose, edit, file and retrieve messages that the user has typed.

Coordinators for the system are hoping to improve it to the point that Battalion Personnel Administration Centers will be involved for easier processing of incoming and outgoing soldiers. This is expected to take place in six to eight months.

Job training counts

Several years ago, the Department of the Army activated the Army Apprenticeship Program to help servicemembers attain skill documentation while on active duty. Since that time the program has grown in excess of 16,000 apprentices in seventy-four occupational programs. Follow-up reports, volunteered by apprentices who have returned to the civilian sector, reflect a wealth of success stories in regard to competition with civilian counterparts for employment at higher pay scales than anticipated. Regardless of these "word-of-mouth" success stories, the obvious fact remains. Anytime a job application can provide a potential employer appropriate validated documentation of quality work experience and related instruction, he is securing his position as a qualified applicant. The employer does not have to guess at the extent of the military training and instruction; he has this detailed information spelled out in logbook form.

Take a look at yourself on your job site. Are you working long hours over a hot stove as a 94B or under a deuce and a half as a 63B and feel frustrated over the scores of additional work tasks which must be completed before "close of business" each day? What you need to do is channel those excessive hours and responsibilities into the Apprenticeship Program. A point that you might have been over-looking these past few months is that if your MOS is covered by an apprenticeship program, those excessive hours and various responsibilities could be used to your advantage in expediting your program completion. Otherwise, the program could take months longer before certification of completion would be attained.

To register with DOL in an apprenticeship program, you must contact your Education Center counselor. Your counselor will explain eligibility requirements and complete registration during the initial counseling session. Apprenticeship logbook forms will also be issued and explained at that time. During participation in the program you are required to annotate and verify daily work experiences and related instruction in your logbook maintained in a three-ring binder, and report quarterly to your counselor for program update.

It is possible for you to get previous work experience and/or related instruction credit for work experience or course work completed prior to the month of registration. Previous work experience can be awarded by the service school having proponency of the MOS if you validate this experience by obtaining a letter from your past supervisor, documenting hours, work performance, work tasks and time span involved. Prior participation in an approved federal or state registered civilian apprenticeship may also result in previous work experinece credit.

Previously-earned related instruction can be awarded upon certification of course completion and content. Course work must directly correlate with your particular program.

Upon successful compeltion of the program, the U.S. Department of Labor will award you a Certificate of Completion of Apprenticeship. While the award of this certificate does not guarantee you a job, it certifies that journeyman status has been achieved and enables you to be more competitive in the civilian job market, thus enhancing your future employment opportunities.

For more information concerning the various apprenticeship programs available and eligibility for participation, see an education counselor at your servicing Education Centers at Harmony Church, Kelley Hill, Main Post or Sand Hill.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

Husband, wife share Army careers

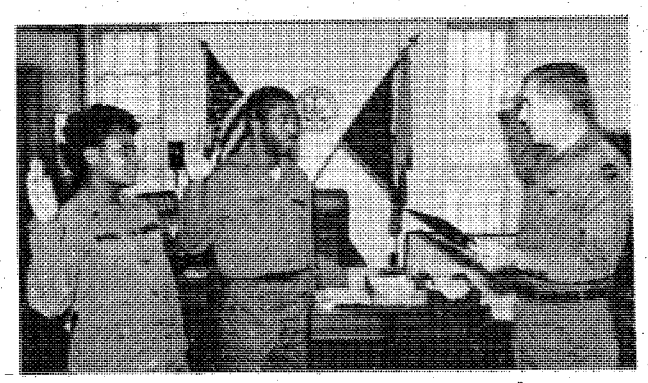
By Matthew Boison

"Keep a good family in the Army; Reenlist," is a slogan the Army uses. Reenlisting in the Army is a family affair to Sp4's Jeffry and Alfreda Johnson. They made it a point to keep their family together by reenlisting for another three years.

Married just 18 months ago, the Johnson team enlisted in the Army the same day to leave for basic training. Although the Johnson's went to different posts to complete basic training, they haven't been apart since. The Johnson crew went to the same Military Occupational Speciaity (MOS) school to be trained in supply. They were in the same company and the same platoon.



Sp4 Jeffry and Alfreda Johnson

"We graduated in two weeks from a six-week training school," said Jeffry. Then, the Johnsons were transferred to Fort Benning at the same time and have been here four months. The Johnsons will also be transfered to Hawaii together for their new duty station.

Jeffry G. Johnson, 21, graduated from Camden High School in Camden, N. J. During Jeffry's high school career, sports had been his life. 'All star' could best describe Jeffry's high school athletic career. As a wrestler, he received such honors as fourth in the state wrestling championships, all conference, most outstanding wrestler of the year and others.

But wrestling was not the only sport Jeffry excelled in. Football also brought him many awards and honors. Jeffry was named all-state and was on the second All-American team.

Majoring in business while attending Glassburo State College in New Jersey, Jeffry met his wife, Alfreda. "Jeff was playing a ballgame and decided to watch the cheerleaders, and I was one of them," said Alfreda. "While he took a break from the game, he came over to the sidelines and asked me for a kiss. It went on from there."

Alfreda, 20, also went to Glassburo State College after graduating from Woodrow Wilson High School in Camden, N. J. "We were cross-town rivals in high school," said Alfreda. "Jeff kids me about being cross-town rivals all the time." Alfreda, a cheerleader while in high school, went on to be a cheerleader in college and also majored in business administration.

The Johnsons were married before entering the Army and "never have arguments about both being in the Army. I would rather have my dependent in the Army," says Jeffry.

Alfreda agrees on that point and adds, "It helps us to understand each other better. The Army sometimes has longer hours from day to day and I understand why he comes home late at night."

Although both were not stationed in the same unit here (Jeffry is in the 546th Medical Company and Alfreda is in HHC, 36th Engineer Group), they still enjoy their time with the newest member of the team, their four-month-old son Jason.

Jeffry, who wants to go on after the Army and be a pro ball player, knows Alfreda will always be by his side. "We keep things straight by doing things together."

36th Group constructs projects

Lt. Gen. M.C. Ross is briefed by Capt. Emory E. Atwell, commander 598th Maintenance Company, while observing soldiers from the 598th Maintenance Company performing direct maintenance support in the field. They are about to replace an engine in a 2½ ton truck.

By Matthew Boison

Units from the 36th Engineer Group, conducting training exercises and working on construction projects, were visited last week by Lt. Gen. M. C. Ross, FORSCOM Deputy Commander.

Col. Charles L. Shreves, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, and Lt. Col. James D. Tipton, commander of the 67th Maintenance Battalion, greeted Ross at "Certain Forge," a battalion-wide field exercise (FTX) for the 67th Maintenance Battalion.

After group and battalion command briefings, Ross toured the field site of the 598th Maintenance Company and observed maintenance support in a tactical environment. Ross was then wisked off by helicopter to the 43rd Engineer Battalion, Company C, construction project at Red Cloud Range.

Second Lieutenant Jeffery C. Benchich briefed Ross on construction and production methods. Ross observed Company C constructing track vehicle access roads and mortar positions to fire on a combat village site.

Ross was then flown to the 36th Combat Support Battalion where the 586th Engineer Company was constructing four bay ribbon rafts on the Chattahoochee River.

Remove converter when shipping POV

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)——Planning to ship your vehicle to your overseas duty station?

If you do, you'll need to have the catalytic converter or catalyst components removed before it is shipped.

According to Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) officials, converter servicing facilities may not be able to remove catalytic converters on some vehicles. The emission control system may be too complex or the facility may not have the special parts.

All U.S. terminals, however, have the facilities nearby to remove the converters or catalyst parts, according to officials.

According to an official at the Transportation Office, Fort Benning does not have the necessary equipment to remove the converters or special parts required by foreign governments.

Soldiers shipping vehicles equipped with three way catalyst systems should call MTMC, Autovon 289-1744.

Advancement offered physician assistants

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — The Army is now offering an added incentive to enlisted soldiers interested in becoming physician assistants (PAs), DA medical officials announced recently.

Upon completion of a two-year training program, applicants may choose to become a WO1 upon graduation with a four-year service obligation or, they may elect to serve six years and become a CW2 upon graduation. Previously, graduates were appointed as a WO1 upon graduation and were required to serve at least four years.

According to a spokesman from the Surgeon General's Office, it normally takes two years for a warrant officer to go from WO1 to CW2.

The new CW2 option, the spokesman said, will provide improved career standing for PAs and help meet the Army's growing need for PAs. There are presently 375 PAs and plans call for training 120 candidates a year for the next four years.

PAs are an important part of the Army medical team, according to the spokesman. They are the "backbone" of the direct care system, he said. They've proven highly effective in providing medical care at troop clinics, out-patient clinics and emergency rooms, he added.

In addition to the new option, the spokesman said, the Secretary of the Army has approved a "fully qualified promotion system" for PAs from CW2 to CW3. This means that each warrant officer in the primary zone of consideration for the first time, who is found fully qualified by the promotion board, will be promoted without regard to quotas. This system will not apply to warrant officers in the secondary zone or those who have been previously considered, the spokesman said.

The fully qualified promotion system will apply to PAs in the field as well as those graduating in the future. The four or six year option will only be available to those candidates now in training programs and future applicants.

Presently, 59 candidates are attending the 21-month PA course at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Twenty-three Army candidates are attending the Air Force PA course at Shepard Air Force Base. Upon completion of this training, they will all attend the officer basic course at Fort Sam Houston.

Students for the next PA class, scheduled to begin in March 1980, have been selected.

Applications for the September 1980 class are now being accepted. Applications must be sent through command channels to: Superintendent, US Army Academy of Health Sciences, ATTN: PA Branch, Fort Sam Houston, Tex. 78234 by Jan. 31, 1980. Applications received after the deadline will be returned without action, officials said.

To be eligible, applicants must:

- Be an active duty enlisted member (National Guardsmen and Army Reservists should contact their personnel officer for information about reserve component PA programs).
- Hold a primary MOS in a medical CMF.
- Have worked in a medical MOS at least 36 months.
- Have a high school diploma or GED equivalency.
- Have a GT score of 110 or higher.
- Meet citizenship, character and leadership qualifications presented in paragraph 1-4, AR 135-100.
- Meet physical qualifications for warrant officer appointment established in chapter 2, AR 40-501.

Information on the new programs and application procedures is available by calling the Academy of Health Sciences at AUTOVON 471-4862/4834 or commercial (512) 221-4862/2424, or writing to the PA Branch, US Army Academy of Health Sciences, Fort Sam Houston, Texas 78234.

Gold and silver

Guard items

Commanders are reminded to provide adequate emphasis and security on silver and gold items within their commands (memorabilia, silver trophies and jewelry). Suggested security measures include locking display cases and insuring visual inventory of such items by CQs or Staff Duty NCOs during their tour of duty. Officer and NCO clubs with sterling silver items should insure that these items are properly secured.

PMO Physical Security personnel are available to assist you in security inspections (545-4164).

Recent burglaries in the local civilian communities and soaring prices for precious metal indicate an increased market for gold and silver items. Personnel are reminded to secure their valuables in their homes or quarters. Silver and gold items should not be visible from outside. Coin collections should be placed in a safety deposit box or a strong box within the quarters. Photographs these items, and make a written record of type item, brand name, description and value. Secure your private property and prevent theft.

Call the MP Desk Sergeant if you observe any suspicious person(s), 545-5222/545-5223.

How About That?

By William W. Erbach Sr.
TIC chaplain

A little child had been sick for several nights and her mother had tended her each night. The crisis passed, and so this one day she retired early for a much needed rest. The windows on that hot summer evening were open, which allowed in all the noise and din of the main street passing in front of their door. A fire engine swept by stopping in the adjoining lot, but she slept on, unconscious of what was happening around her. The telephone rang three times before the father answered it, because he was so absorbed in the T.V. When it proved to be a wrong number, he let out a yell of indignation — then he remembered his wife, tiptoed into her room, and smiled when he saw that his roar had not disturbed her sleep, nor did the phone. She was oblivious to all the noise.

He had hardly sat down again when the baby's voice in the back bedroom cried out feebly: "Mother! I want my mother!" In a flash that soundly sleeping mother was up, out of the room, and at her baby's side. She was not disturbed by cars, trucks, fire engines, boys yelling or the phone, but her ears were attuned to the cry of distress from her sick baby. How About That!

We all have ears but we hear only what we want to. We tune in or out other people's distresses or needs, depending on what we want. I'm proud to be part of a nation whose ears are tuned to the cry of distress from a hungry world and are trying to help. We may have many faults as a nation, and are put upon sometimes by circumstance, but we have always been tuned in to the world's cry of distress.

Think safety on holiday

Not only was George Washington our first president, he could also be considered as the proponent of the U.S. Army Safety Program.

During the Revolutionary War, in his instructions to Colonel Arnold as he prepared to march against the British at Quebec, Washington instructed Arnold—"And if you find that there is danger of your being intercepted, you are not to proceed by water, but by land, taking care on the one hand not to be diverted by light and vague reports, and on the other not to expose the troops rashly to danger . . ." Washington thought highly of his officers who tempered bravery with a careful assessment of the dangers involved. He was scornful of those taking needless risks and endangering their troops.

As we celebrate Washington's Birthday we should all take a lesson from our first president. Most accidents occur because someone committe unsafe act. Frequently, the unsafe act is the r of deliberate disregard for the risks involved. T needless risks do not contribute to the pleasure c experience, but they do often result in serious tragic consequences.

During the holiday many will be on the highw traveling home to visit family and friends o winter recreation areas. Most of these drivers not take needless risks. Unfortunately, there some who will. These risks run the gamut f excessive speed to driving under the influenc alcohol. Each of these risks is unnecessary should be avoided. Think before you take need risks. Follow George Washington's advice and not expose yourself and others to dangers by y own disregard for safety.

Indoor motion picture range could save Army's train

y Gary Jones

"Take up a good firing position, lock and ıad, firers watch your lanes!"

These commands are familiar to most soldiers in today's Army but, recently, soldiers walking ıe halls in Bldg. 4 have been surprised to hear them ɔming from behind the door of Classroom 33.

Soldiers normally receive commands such as ıese while on the firing line at a range, however, ɔldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) ıking part in the testing of the prototype 'Squad 'eapon Analytical Trainer' (SWAT) here, aren't eally out of their element in the classroom. Thanks to SWAT, Classroom 33 is equiped with an actual firing line, on an actual range complete with moving targets.

Testing of the prototype SWAT system began here Jan. 29 and is scheduled to continue through March 5 by evaluators from the Infantry Board and the firing line soldiers from the 197th. According to Maj. James R. Fagersten, test manager for the SWAT test, "The Army is looking for a cheaper way to effectively train the troops. The SWAT system is to be used as a supplement to the recently developed Infantry Remote Target System (IRETS) range." The SWAT system is presently one of two candidate systems being tested by the Army.

The SWAT system gives soldiers the feel of an actual range. It employs two motion picture projectors in dual operation. One projects a filmed battle scene with randomly appearing and disappearing enemy targets. The second projects an infra-red (IR) image superimposed over the targets or adjusted for lead shooting on targets moving cross-wise. The IR image is invisible to the soldier but is detected by the IR detector on the weapon when a soldier has properly aimed the weapon at the target.

Hits and near misses are recorded by the microcomputer sytem when a target is hit. The microcomputer determines the soldier's performance and gives immediate computer-generated voice feedback through earphones. At the same time it makes a complete record and analysis of the performance for review later.

To provide the soldier with a realistic stress environment, the system includes simulated battlefield sounds, rifle 'bang', recoil and the requirement to change magazines every 30 rounds. The SWAT has four training stations which are centrally controlled by the instructor through the computer console. The instructor can monitor the computer-generated voice feedback provided to each soldier as well as the detailed scoring which appears on the soldier's performance monitor.

The instructor can also provide individual instruction to each soldier through the soldier's earphones. At the completion of each training session the soldier is given a hard copy printout of his firing performance. The scoring is a total of each target event, the soldier's response to the event and analysis of his weapon firing performance. Additionally, an overall scoring analysis is provided as well as video tape playback of each rifle's movements during aiming.

The SWAT system now undergoing testing was installed for about $250,000 as opposed to about $6,000,000 for the IRETS range here. However, even though SWAT is cheaper to operate, it will not take the place of the IRETS range, which is the way of the future, according to Fagersten.

"SWAT is cheaper to operate than a conventional range, and when used as a suppliment to IRETS, should save a considerable amount of money if th said Fage

System Operation

One motion picture projector (1) projects the visual battlefield scenario, the second projects an infra-red (IR) image over the targets or adjusts for lead shooting on moving targets. Projections are displayed on a standard motion picture screen (2).

The training station (3) provides weapon fire for four trainees. IR detector on weapon receives hit/near-miss/miss information as weapon is fired. Real-time target positions and aiming points are recorded by the IR television receiver (4) and fed to television screen at the instructor operator station (5).

If "on-target", the IR detector on the trainee weapon records a hit. The IR image is invisible to the trainee, but is detectable by the IRTV camera and the weapon IR detector. Weapon fire data is fed to a microcomputer system at the instructor operator station where hits and misses are recorded and displayed.

Stress: Community Mental Health helps Benning soldiers deal with stress

By Tim Boivin

Scene One

The Setting: A small apartment on any U.S. installation in the world. The apartment, sparsely furnished and dimly lit, is the home of PFC John Doe, his childhood sweetheart he married, Jane, and his two small children, Jimmy and Jenny.

PFC Doe enters stage left. He greets his wife with an affectionate peck on the cheek. She notices the worrisome look on his face and asks what is wrong. He replies, "I don't know. The bank called today at the office about the payments on my loan and we just don't have the money. Not only that but it seems to be affecting my work and I just can't seem to get anything done. I don't know who to turn to for help."

Sounds like another case of a soldier going over his head in debt, doesn't it? That is not the only problem faced here. There is also the problem of the situation affecting his job as a soldier. Where does he turn for help?

According to members of the Fort Benning Mental Health and behavioral science medical community, the soldier should first seek help through his chain of command to deal with his problem. Capt. Gregory Bozeman, a clinical social work officer at the Community Mental Health Activities (CMHA) center in Building 324, said, "They should have an effective chain-of-command, someone they can go talk to. This is something that is built into the military system."

Bozeman sees some problems in the military in seeking help through the chain-of-command. He points out, "Some of the troops don't get support from the chain-of-command. This is a shame because at all times, where high demands are expected to be lived up to at all times."

Sp5 John Ferree, also a member of the CMHA staff, commented, "I think the difference between the military and civilian stress is the military will use stress to produce an effective soldier. We know in the Army we are going into a very stressful environment if we are ever faced with combat. A lot of the restrictions placed on the soldier is intentional and designed to meet the needs of the military. The closest thing a civilian might come to facing combat is five p.m. traffic."

Scene Two

The setting: PFC Doe has decided to take his wife's advice and seek help through his chain-of-command. However, nobody seemed to care about his personal problem and, to add insult to injury, he was ordered to catch up on his work by the end of the week or be faced with punitive action. He is wandering aimlessly through the company area when he meets his buddy from MEDDAC, Sp4 Jones.

Doe mutters, "What's happening?"

Jones says, "What are you so downcast for, somebody die or something?"

"No, it's just I have a lot of personal problems, I don't know where to start, and I tried to get help through the company but they turned a deaf ear. To top it off, they told me to straighten out by the end of the week or they were going to sock it to me."

Fortunately for PFC Doe, Jones had seen problems like this and knew how to handle the situation. First of all, he let Doe know that it was all right to be under stress and there were alternative ways to handle it other than just through the chain-of-command. He suggested seeking help through his Troop Medical Clinic (TMC).

Ferree said, "Once he walks in here that doesn't mean we are going to cure him. We aren't going to bring in the great American placebo or cure which is going to solve his problems. We are going to show him a way to deal with his stress so that in the future he can better cope with other stressful situations."

One of the problems with helping soldiers who suffer from severe stress, or distress, is they can't be treated unless they seek out the treatment. One of the toughest groups to get through to, on Fort Benning especially, is the drill instructors.

Capt. Richard Jaworek is a clinical psychologist with the psychology service on post. He has set up seminars for drill instructors to come to so they don't have to face the stigma of going to see a 'shrink'.

Jaworek said, "The seminars focus on the same topics that are topics with individual clients in my office. A seminar setting is seen as educational and it does not label the participants as mentally ill. A seminar permits people to learn how to cope by exercising their coping. It permits them to learn new coping strategies."

Many of the drill instructors fear going to seek help because it would be deemed unmanly by their peers. Jaworek claims, "I don't know of a single drill instructor who would come to see me on an individual basis, because they would be labeled by their peers as being ill, which isn't true in the vast majority of the cases. Through a seminar they are learning in an educational process instead of a healing process."

Sp5 John O'Neal, a behavioral science specialist for The School Brigade who works at TMC 2, offers other avenues for help. He said, "If someone is undergoing excessive stress and someone recognizes this, they should refer him to the appropriate community support facility, whether it is a troop problem, a financial problem, or just a personal problem. Get him to someone he can sit and talk to. Everyone needs to be aware of what resources are available and to seek the professional help through these people."

Scene Three

The Setting: PFC Doe comes home. He has not yet been to the clinic that his friend recommended. His company commander found out and got on his case, claiming that he was just using this as an excuse for not finishing his work. His wife goes to greet him in her usual way but he just pushes her aside and berates her for not keeping a clean house. The kids are playing in their room and are a little boisterous. He runs in and slaps Jenny and warns Jimmy that he will be next if he doesn't shape up.

PFC Doe has now completed the full cycle. The stress he feels at work, combined with his financial problems, have caused him to bring his problems home with him and take them out on his family. Lucky for him that the next day will be his t the clinic.

Mrs. Peggy Locascio is the Social Service sentative at Martin Army Hospital and ru these types of family problems frequently. Sh the time a soldier puts into his job very often the problems at home. She said, "Many soldie put in upwards of twelve hours a day miss ou much of their childrens' growth. They mis birthday party or first haircut or Little L game and they build a resentment which the vent on their family. They could also ven frustations on the Army because they have t such long hours that they feel it is the A fault."

Mrs. Locascio fears that the Army's comp nature may hinder a soldier's family life. Sh "Soldiers are very competitive and perfecti and don't have a lot of energy or emotions le when they come home. Their top priority achieving and at times I wonder if tha detrimental."

Capt. Michael Sikorski, a psychiatric nurs cian at the CMHA, observed, "Very often v couple comes in the man may think his wi crab. What he doesn't realize is that what bringing home from his environment is causi to respond in the type of manner she does."

In today's society, the transient nature people, especially in the military, causes people to not make friends with other people Edward James III, a clinical social work of Martin Army Hospital, said, "People don't f starting of friendship, they fear the ending foresee they are going to be hurt and t through their lives that way, living negatively fear that the person, once he is gone, is g pretend he never knew you. With today's tech and the means to communicate over a long d available, that is the wrong attitude to take friendship can be preserved through long d communication."

Because of the lack of friends, a person is l very useful, everyday instrument for dealin stress. Certain problems they would no confide in their closest friends to seek l dealing with go unsolved.

Epilogue

The Setting: An empty stage. A voice spe of the darkness.

In order to solve a problem, you have to the problem. For this, you have to keep tabs past and present behavior. Are you actin different way than you would have six month Make friends so that when you do have a p you can go to them for advice and comfor

Brown boot Army to march

By Linda Kozaryn

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Over the past 200 years, soldiers have spent 9,478,542 hours spit-shining combat boots, according to the U.S. Army Trivia Research Agency (USATRA), Fort Littlefax, Ark.

"Gathering the information was a formidable task," said Mr. Minor Detail, USATRA project officer. "Some people have mastered the art and can bring a pair of jump-boots to a glossy shine in 20 minutes. Of course, these individuals have a tendency to spend another 20 minutes gazing at their reflection in the toe," he added.

For others, the process becomes a frustrating chore requiring hours of patience, countless cotton balls and elbow grease," he said.

"In the three years we've spent studying spit-shining — the time and patience involved, I've come to recognize this skill as an 'art' requiring a very special talent," Detail said. "This art, I'm afraid, may well be lost:" he prophesied.

Our fictitious Mr. Detail may well be right.

Future soldiers may never have to develop this talent — master this art. They'll never have black polish under their fingernails, edge-dressing stains on their hands or cherish the sight of a mirror-finish toe and heel.

By 1986, soldiers may be wearing boots that need no polishing — an 'earth-brown', rough leather boot resembling a good pair of hiking boots. In fact, the sole of this 'boot of the future' was designed in Italy and has been used by mountain climbers for about 40 years.

Some may say, "We're going back to the 'brown shoe' Army." Brown in color, yes, but hopefully that's where the similarity will end.

The new brown boots being developed by the Natick Army Research and Development Command (NARADCOM) will have the rough side of the leather on the outside making them more water repellant. Soft, 'glove' leather will line the inside for comfort.

Like the combat boot of today, the brown boot will have a 'cut-out notch' on the eyelet row allowing the ankle to flex normally. A 'snow tire' tread heel and sole will give better traction and stability.

Shielding the bottom of the foot will be a spike resistant insole plate and, for all the toe-stubbers and hammer droppers, a steel toe has been added.

Although spit-shining will become a task of the past, the new boots will need some care. A kit containing an earth-brown dye and a silicone water repellant will be issued. A hard bristle brush will remove most dust and dirt while soap and water will clean most stains.

A shiny spot caused by repeated rubbing will, in fact, be a 'no-no'. The boots are designed for wear with the new camouflage uniform and the rough surface serves a purpose. The black shiny surface of the combat boot now in use can be detected by electronic surveillance equipment.

Black edge-dressing stains will be replaced by earth-brown dye stains and cotton balls by a stiff brush. The 'art' of spit-shining may well be lost.

When asked to comment on the 'boot of the future,' Mr. Detail was unavailable. Since our interview he had retired and is now working as a marketing specialist for Keewee Polish Company.

NCOs: Soldiers in pay grades E5 through E9 being studied to eliminate shortage

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Concern has arisen over the current shortage of soldiers in grades E5-E9 who comprise the bulk of our NCO force.

The Army has nearly all of the E5-E9 soldiers (248,000 as of end FY 79) that our supporting budget allows. At any point in time, as experienced and as budgeted, about 11,000 of these soldiers are in a non-operating status. Thus, within a budget strength of 248,000, we have only 237,000 soldiers to man 252,000 unit authorizations. This translates to a 15,000 shortfall in units. Current projections indicate these shortages will persist in the future unless corrective action is taken.

To provide both near and long term relief to the current NCO situation, the ARSTAF has initiated and is exploring the feasibility of the following actions:

- Review TDA documents with the specific goal of reducing Top-5 (E5-E9) content to the lowest practicable level. Space reductions will be directed based on a TDA review DF each command. This action to be completed by end FY 82.
- Seek approval in FY 80-81 for the full 11,000 increased Top-5 enlisted grade content originally approved for gradual (FY 80-85) addition to the force.
- Revise the EFMP and the enlisted objective force to document the Army's need for a higher Top-5 content as a result of force modernization and NCO support for the AVA and total Army concept. All effort will be completed to support the Army's FY 83-87 POM submission.
- Change AR 600-200 to encourage the assignment of excess NCO to TOE units. TDA resources in excess of authorizations except for space imbalance MOS should be counted as borrowed military manpower while assigned to TOE units.

Although the above efforts are contingent on MACOM support and cooperation and on OSD and Congressional approval, it is hoped they will significantly reduce the near and long term effects of the current NCO situation, improve force readiness, and maintain the Army's combat capability.

Wear patches correctly

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—Ever wonder why some soldiers wear a unit patch on their left shoulder and another on their right shoulder?

The patch on the left represents the unit they're currently assigned to. The patch on the right is for a unit they served with in an area designated a hostile fire area.

Soldiers who served in the following during the periods listed are authorized to wear their former patch on their right shoulder if they so desire:

- World War II—Dec. 7, 1941 through Sept. 2, 1946
- Korea—June 27, 1950 through July 27, 1954
- Korea—April 1, 1968 through Aug. 31, 1973. Soldiers who were awarded the Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge, Combat Medical Badge or an overseas service bar during this period in Korea are authorized to wear the 'wartime' patch.
- Vietnam—July 1, 1958 through March 28, 1973
- Dominican Republic—Soldiers! who served there after April 29, 1965 in the XVIII Airborne Corps, 82nd Airborne Division and the 5th Logistical Command are authorized to wear their unit patch. Soldiers serving there who were not assigned to one of these units may wear the OEA, the Spanish equivalent of the Organization of American States patch.

DA officials report some soldiers returning from Korea are wearing their patch on the right shoulder. This is not authorized, officials say, unless they're wearing a patch from a unit they served in during one of the periods listed above.

General defends recruiters

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—"I have a sign in my office that reads, 'Somebody has to fight for the soldier' and I'm willing to do that," said Lt. Gen. Robert G. Yerks, deputy chief of staff for Personnel, during a recent interview with ARNEWS (Army News Service).

'The soldier' in this case, translates into about 750,000 men and women. Added to that figure are the countless wives, husbands and children of these soldiers.

Pay, housing, promotions, reenlistments and quality of life for 'the soldier' are just a few of the 'personnel' areas in the general's domain.

Major concerns

Bringing soldiers into the Army and providing a lifestyle to keep them in are of major concern right now, according to the Personnel chief.

"Our number one challenge today is manning the force in all its dimensions of recruiting and retention. If we don't meet this challenge, it will have a profound effect on our readiness and our ability to respond to our responsibility of defending this great country of ours," he said.

The recently completed recruiting investigation will not hinder the Army's efforts in meeting this challenge, Yerks feels.

"I don't see any way the investigation will have a long term negative effect on the recruiting force of the Army. In my judgment, it cannot help but produce a better Army with better morale and soldiers with the qualifications we desire," the general remarked.

"We were criticized and received bad publicity due to this supposed cancer in our ranks," Yerks stated. "At the same time, we must look at it from the vantage point that we found we had a problem, and the Army had the courage to stand up to the problem and try to correct it."

The problem, Yerks feels, must be put into perspective, however. "First of all, we're only talking about a very small percentage of the recuiting force. It runs in the vicinity of five percent.

"We sent super soldiers to the recruiting command but the situation confronting them caused some to perform in a manner we aren't particularly pleased with," he explained. "Within this group, you have those who are alleged criminals. Criminal acts allegedly were committed and, in due course, we must take the disciplinary actions necessary to address those acts," he stated.

"There is another slightly larger group who did not commit criminal acts but whose actions required non-judicial punishment in the form of Article 15's or letters of reprimand," Yerks added.

"A large group of the recruiters involved in the investigation," the general said, "were simply swept up in the morality of the marketplace. They did improper things that we can't condone when we're trying to recruit. They were relieved and sent back to their units," he said.

"Now that the dust has settled," the general reflected, "we need to look at where we've been. I, nor anyone else in the leadership of the Army wants to keep an albatross around a young person's neck for his entire career. We're looking at what we can do to minimize the long term career impact on that large group of recruiters swept up by the morality they found in the environment

"We're not going to pin medals on them, but we are looking at alternatives that in a reasonable length of time would erase the traces of their difficulties," Yerks stated. The general added that the way to do this would be through the established checks and balance systems such as the commanders' authority to remove Article 15's from the soldier's record.

The recruiting effort today, Yerks says, is better than ever. "We're recruiting more soldiers today than we've ever recruited before. Last year we had a shortfall of 17,000. We had an end strength shortfall of about 15,000. We started off this year in the hole and we'll have to recruit about 40,000 more soldiers this year than last year.

"If you compare where we are today with where we were last year at this time, you'll find we're about 18,000 ahead. That's about 95 percent of our numerical objective," the general said.

There are some concerns, however. "We see a continuing decrease in the percentage of high school graduates we're bringing in. We're recruiting more high school graduates than last year but the percentage is lower," he explained.

"A very important point I'd like to stress," the general remarked, "is that sometimes people equate quality to a high school diploma or a mental category. The Army's definition of 'quality' is how a soldier performs.

Some deficiencies

"Some of the young soldiers coming in from our society today have some deficiencies. Generally, we find about 30 percent of our soldiers need some reading instruction. This problem is nothing to back away from or be ashamed of," Yerks stated.

"Because of the TV orientation of our society today, the young men and women simply don't read as well or comprehend their reading as well as they did in the past. We're addressing this problem with our basic skills education program," he said.

The high school completion programs the Army offers also help combat this problem, according to the general. These programs "have increased the high school degree content within the Army to heights we've never had before. Last year 84 percent of our force had a high school diploma or equivalent," Yerks commented.

"We must recognize that 'quality' is not simply a high school diploma. It's how a young man or woman performs in a specialty once he or she is trained, led well and provided with the right weapons and equipment to do the job," he concluded.

Satisfying soldiers

Once the soldier is on the job, efforts are being made to ensure he's satisfied, according to the general.

"At any one time we have about a division—12,000 to 14,000 soldiers—working out of their units. This is what we call borrowed military manpower." These soldiers are doing jobs important and essential to the Army but they're out of their unit and, in some cases, they're working out of the skill they contracted for and were trained in."

The cause of this, Yerks explained, is the reduction in the civilian work force. "This is the first year the budget for the civilian force hasn't been cut. This will allow us to contract-out some of these post-related functions so our soldiers can get back to what they should be doing — training in their units," Yerks said.

"We also have a shortage of NCO's in our combat units and this impacts on training and training translates into readiness. We're trying to raise the number of our 'top five NCO's' by about 11,000," he added.

Energy budget can cut bills

If inflation causes you to "run out of money before you run out of month," then the last thing you need to be hit with is an electric bill that won't fit your budget. The element of surprise, after all, is fine for birthdays but not for families trying to meet the ever-rising cost of living.

Of food, shelter and energy, the only cost set in advance is the monthly mortgage or rental payment; the other two items allow consumers to plan consumption to fit their budgets. In the area of food, for example, unit pricing, conscientious menu planning and regular checking of grocery ads in this paper have become part and parcel of stretching dollars at the supermarket.

Just as you use a grocery budget to keep food expense in line, you can set up an energy budget to help control your electricity costs. It may require mastering new skills, but ones that are no more difficult than learning how to calculate the miles per gallon you get in your car or the cost per serving of a piece of meat.

First, you must find out how much energy it takes to run your home in a way that is comfortable and convenient to you. For instance, is your home centrally air conditioned? What thermostat setting do you use? If you have an electric water heater, at what temperature is it set? What about your refrigerator--is it a frost-free or manual defrost model?

Your local electricity supplier can provide the figures on the approximate kilowatt-hour usage and operating cost of nearly all electricity-consuming products in the home. Once you've determined which apply to your household, add up the kilowatt-hour consumption and how much they cost. Then you'll have a general idea of what you spend monthly for electricity.

Next, you'll need to learn to read the electric meter, which records the energy as you use it. Again, your electricity supplier has information that will teach you how to do this. Keep track of your meter readings daily at first, then weekly, to see how well you're staying within your budget.

Who was that masked man?

1/58th trains with masks

By Chip Koss

With more than bullets, bombs and missles to worry about, the American soldier also needs to contend with various forms of gas, nuclear and biological agents. Now days, the modern protective mask is as important to the soldier as is his weapon.

According to a 1/58th Infantry spokesman, the unit has intensified training of NBC (Nuclear, Biological and Chemical) warfare. They are perfecting a training program to make it as realistic as possible, he said.

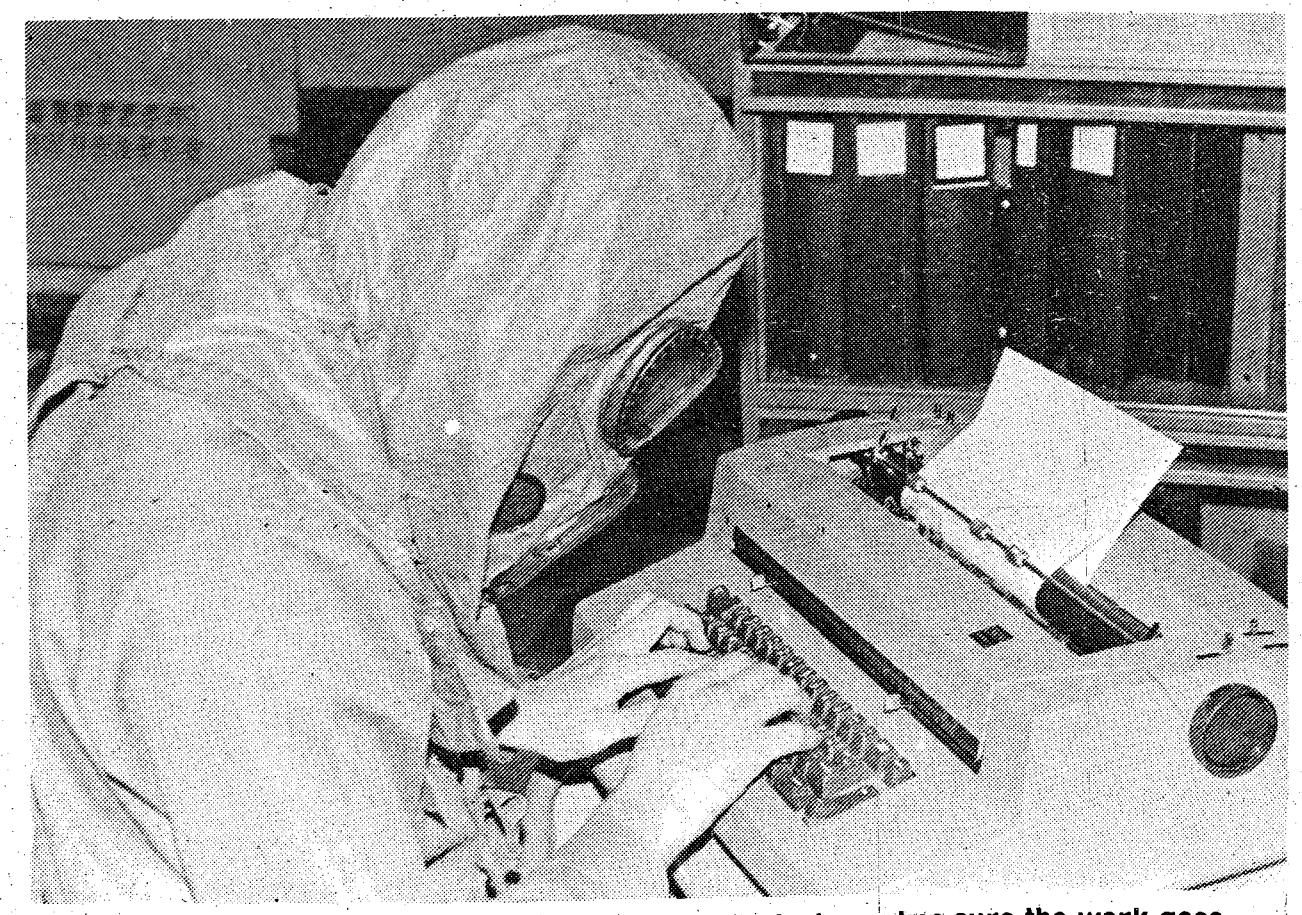
"For example, the phone will ring at Headquarters Company and the Battalion commander will tell the first sergeant his company is in an NBC environment," said the spokesman. He continued, saying the first sergeant notifies all the sections of the contaminated environment. All members of the company in the company area, including off duty members, have to get their protective masks and have them on in ten minutes.

After they have their protective masks on, members go back to their daily duties. Clerks back to their typewritters, mechanics back to motor pool, off duty members back to their tables, and the company commander to his job, all wearing the protective masks.

"By wearing the masks for four hours, the soldiers here at the 1/58th gain confidence, proficiency and experience in wearing the masks for long periods of time," added the spokesman.

Very important in the training is the 1/58th NBC NCOs and their assistants. They have the responsibility of updating serviceability and accounting for and maintaining the unit's protective masks and decomtamination equipment.

Sp4 Cliff Dill of Battalion S-1 said, "Typing is a little harder with the protective mask on. It fogs up some but I can perform my duties with no problem."



Sp4 Cliff Dill, HHC 1/58th Infantry Battalion, S-1 clerk, makes sure the work goes on.

Soldier saves student from rape

Pvt. 2 Daniel C. Rodgers put his own safety aside when he prevented a rape from occuring on Fort Benning.

By Matthew Boison

Helping a fellow soldier in danger is not always a matter of life and death. Sometimes being in the right place at the right time to help prevent a dangerous situation from happening can be just as important.

Pvt.2 Daniel G. Rodgers, a wheel vehicle mechanic for Company D, 43rd Engineer Battalion, recieved the Army Commendation Medal for his actions in preventing a rape on Oct. 8.

It was approximately 8 p.m. when the 5'10", 155 pound Rodgers was coming home to the barracks with two of his friends. He noticed a car off to the side of Sunshine Road.

"I thought the car was broken down at first," said Rodgers, "so I thought I'd pull off and see if anyone needed assistance." Rodgers then noticed two people in the car and proceeded towards the car. "When I arrived at the car, the two people, both of whom were in the military, were arguing back and forth."

"Finally, a female got out of the car and got into our car," Rodgers said. "After we had driven off, our new passenger began telling her story of the night's events."

The female Rodgers saved from being raped was an 18-year-old airborne student fron the 43rd Airborne Company. "She said she had been traveling around town with this guy when toward the end of the night she decided to call it an evening and have the guy take her home. Well, he started towards the barracks but decided to take her to Griswold Range instead. That's when we arrived."

Rodgers, a native of Texas, recieved the Army Commendation Medal from Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., Fort Benning's post commander, on Dec. 21. "I was glad I got it," Rodgers said, remembering back to when he stood in front of the commanding general and received the award. "Since it happened, a lot of people have joked to me about it, but they were just kidding."

HEROIC FEET

Capt. Zachary Doppel took second place in the Atlanta 50 Miles last Saturday. Fifty miles of running is no mean feat for any feet, but this past weekend in Atlanta created an achievement of even greater dimensions. It was cold: maximum temperature was 38 degrees. It was miserable: rainy. It was hard: the run consisted of four laps around the hilly Atlanta Marathon course. To survive such an ordeal is noteworthy; to place is remarkable.

Behind every good ultamarathoner there is a good handler, and Doppel's was CW2 Ron Karinski. For the entire fifty (50) miles and eight hours, faithful Ron met his cold, tired, soggy charge with warm fluids, encouragement and dry clothing every three miles. They both deserve a medal and several all-you-can-eat gorgefests.

Maj. (ret.) Dave Fields also ran an ultra last Saturday. In the Annual Phidippides St. Augustine to Jacksonville 40 Miler, however, he was certainly no also-ran. He won in 4:51. This tired old retiree reports that he ran with a strategy to: "go out at 6:50 per mile for the first thirty miles and just try to hang on for the last ten." I guess it worked. He brought home the gold.

FOR A FEW FACTS MORE

The facts are in for the First Annual Dixie Beer Bike and Run for Fun. Flyers are circulating and entry forms will be printed in next week's paper. Deadline for cheap entry is Feb. 26, but if you just can't wait call 544-4177.

Whosoever forgetteth the Valentine Run will miss a fun time. Remember that no money is required, no advance registration is required except for the 13.1 milers, and that you can only win by participating. Y'all come now, you hear?

Anyone learning of a running event or wishing to proclaim the latest miraculous run, either his or another's, please call THE BAYONET office or me. Making tracks is designed to provide information for runners and to propagate the subversive doctrine that running is fun. I can handle the doctrine, but the information put out is the information I receive. All contributions ar welcomed.

The Y.M.C.A. will hold its Runner's Classic II Feb. 23 in Cooper Creek Park in Columbus.

The entry fee is $4 before the day of the race and $5 the day of the race. Late registration will be held at the tennis courts in the park from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. Feb. 23 and the race will begin at 10 a.m. Checks may be made payable to the Y.M.C.A.

There will be a five mile and a 10 mile run starting and finishing in the park. The course, flat to moderately rolling, will cover portions of Milgen and Flat Rock Roads before returning to the park. The first, second, and third place winners in each category will receive an olympic style medal and the first 100 finishers in each race will receive a commemorative towel.

The age groups for the men are 14 and under, 15-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-59 and 50 and over. The women's age groups are 19 and under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50 and over.

To enter fill out the entry form THE BAYONET printed and bring it by the Y.M.C.A. at 118 East 11th Street or mail it to: Downtown Y.M.C.A., Attention: Runners Classic II, P.O. Box 118, Columbus, Ga. 31902. For more information call 322-8269.

Dave Fields

Runner profile

Retired soldier runs for gold

By Bob Kuwik

Dave Fields is one of the most well known runners this side of the Mason Dixon line. Depending on how Dave feels, he cruises at a sub-seven minute mile for 95 to 100 miles per week.

When he is not running, Dave manages a local store geared for runners. A retired Army major, he is presently training for a 40-mile run from St. Augustine to Jacksonville, Fla. In May of last year, he ran a 41-mile race with an average of 7:19 per mile.

Dave runs seven days a week, two times a day for a total of 15 miles per day. He also runs 20-mile time trials every Sunday morning with an average of 6:05 per mile.

Dave said the benefits of running have been weight loss (he went from 208 pounds in 1970 to his present 145-155 pounds, depending on the type of training he is undergoing) and helping and meeting other runners and would-be runners. Dave also notes that his personality has become more outgoing since he became involved with running.

Dave explained that he began running because he had only one cartilage in his left knee and his physician told him the knee would not take lateral stress. To prevent further damage to the knee, the doctor said running would be the major's only means of staying physically fit.

Dave participates in many races from five-40 miles and is unbeaten in his age group for the past three years. In the Columbus Historic five-mile run, Dave set a personal record of 25:27. He also competed in the Boston Marathon in 1974 and has competed all over the Southeast. In last year's Columbus Marathon, he ran 13.1 miles in 1:12:03.

What the future holds for Dave is more miles logged and more races, with a 50-mile run as his goal.

Sports

Looking for a fight?

Sp4 Timothy L. Russell works the heavy bag while 1st Sgt. Charles P. Thomas runs him through combinations.

Encouragement from his first sergeant helped Sp4 Timothy L. Russell, Headquarters Support Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Brigade, attain the Georgia Golden Gloves Championship in the 132-pound novice division.

"The first sergeant (Charles P. Thomas) heard me talking about wanting to be a boxer. He told me if I really meant it, I should be doing it and not talking about it," Tim said.

Thomas explained, "I always call my soldiers' bluff if I hear them talking big. Too many soldiers don't seem to have the inner drive to get something accomplished. Tim does and he proved it to me."

Taking up Thomas' challenge, Tim decided to train on his own and then joined the Muscogee Boxing Club. He entered into his first competition in the Bobby Morrison Memorial Tournament at the Columbus Memorial Auditorium and brought home a trophy.

"When I saw the trophy I knew he was serious and I told him I would help him train," Thomas said.

The 21-year-old Russell is a native of Memphis, Tenn. and has been assigned to the 1/29th Infantry since August, 1977, but he just recently decided to take up boxing.

"I really had a lot of time on my hands and didn't have any hobbies. I also felt that I wasn't in shape. Fighting is fun but if you want to survive in the ring you had better be in good shape," Tim said.

Tim's opponent for the Golden Gloves was stockier and this, coupled with Tim's inexperience in the ring, made him nervous. The first round didn't go much to his liking. In the closing moments of the first round Tim felt the turning point in the bout occurred.

Tim said, "Near the end of the round the referee was breaking us out of a clinch when I thought my opponent hit me with a cheap shot. From then on I was more angry than nervous."

Tim took charge in the second round and before the end of the third round he knocked his opponent to his knees. The referee stopped the fight. Tim feels his superior physical stamina, due to his extensive training, was the key to his victory.

After such an impressive debut, Tim doesn't feel too much pressure anymore. He just wants to get as much experience as he can, especially in competition, and go on training under the guidance of Thomas. His next competition is the Junior Olympics in Atlanta.

Tim stated, "Anywhere there are fights, I am going to try to be there."

As for Thomas, he has obviously gained a lot more confidence in Tim since the day he called his bluff. he said, "I've got me a jewel in this young man. He's got the two qualities needed in a good fighter: desire and ability."

Army athletes wanted

CISM applications needed by March 3

Although the National Guard is divided into state organizations, it also has national military skills and pentathlon teams that take part in international competitions.

The Coast Guard, Army and Air National Guard athletes will be competing abroad on one team this summer in two international meets.

The Inter-Allied Confederation of Reserve Officers (CIOR) meet will be held Aug. 4-9 in Montreal, Canada. The United States team will have 221 athletes in the fields of marksmanship, utility swimming, orienteering and the obstacle course run.

The International Military Sports Council (CISM) Military Pentathlon will be held Aug. 17-26 in Munich, Germany. The United States will have a seven-man team competing in the marksmanship, cross-country run, obstacle course run, utility swimming and grenade throwing competitions.

In these annual contests, the United States faces stiff competition from European and NATO allies. That is why the United States teams need the best all-around athletes available from each of the military organizations and the Coast Guard.

You don't have to be an expert in any single event, you just have to be an all-around competitor with the will to win. Officers and enlisted personnel may try out at the early summer qualification's trials. Those selected will stay in training until they depart for the competitions.

Applications for CISM are due March 3 and applications for CIOR are due March 20. For more infomation and an application form, call Capt. Roger Harvey at Autovon 471-5359 or on commercial lines at 512-221-5539. You may also write Capt. Harvey at the United States Modern Pentathlon Training Center (USMPTC), Fort Sam Houston, Texas 78234.

Doughgirls split weekenders

By Tim Boivin

The Doughgirls split a home and away series with LaGrange Seamco last weekend.

Friday night the Doughgirls held off a late rally to squeeze by the Seamstresses, 67-66. Monday night it was a different story as the Seamstresses blew out Fort Benning, 88-68, behind the offensive antics of their 6'2" three time All-American center, Gloria Brooks.

In Friday's game, the Doughgirls fell behind by 12 points early in the game. The Seamstresses had a huge front line and the Doughgirls overcame their initial shock to catch up in the last four minutes to lead at the half, 33-32.

In the second half the Doughgirls used a man-to-man defense to spurt out to a 16-point lead with just five minutes gone. The Seamstresses stitched up the problems they were having, and pulled ahead 64-62 with 1:31 left in the game.

Phyllis Colbert was fouled bringing the ball upcourt and hit the front end of the one and one. The second free throw bounced off the rim and the Doughgirls still trailed by one, 64-63. LaGrange decided to try freezing the ball and that strategy backfired as they were guilty of traveling.

Earlie Rockette popped in a 15-footer with 57 seconds left to give the Doughgirls the lead again, 65-64. LaGrange came right back with a hoop to go on top again, 66-65.

Colbert brought the ball upcourt and was fouled again. She hit both ends of the one and one to give the Doughgirls their final lead. A last second shot by Brooks was off target and the Doughgirls clinched the ball and the victory.

Coach Hezzie Baines said the bench was the key factor in the Doughgirls victory. "My reserves did a superb job, especially Marietta James, who had 20 points."

Colbert added 17 points and Rockette had 12 to pace the Doughgirls. The Seamstresses were led by Deborah Rice with 20 points and Brooks added 14. Coach Baines attributed the low point total of the All-American to the defensive play of Sylvia Jones. Although Jones only had six points she pulled down 10 rebounds to Brooks' 11.

In Monday's game the Doughgirls played their usual college style physical game. The problem was that the officials were ruling according to the less physical Georgia High School Association rules. The Doughgirls had four out of their starting five on the bench with four fouls after seven minutes gone in the first half, including a new player, Cuemi Gibson.

Coach Baines was forced to put a team of guards on the floor for much of the rest of the game. Colbert, Gibson and Cheryl Kaufman had all fouled out with 12 minutes left in the games. Sylvia Jones was the only tall person left to hold down the fort and she was playing with four fouls.

The Seamstresses made 36 of 46 free throws compared to nine out of 20 for the Doughgirls. Coach Baines said, "The 27 points difference in free throws were like putting a sixth player on the floor for them. It was the difference in the game."

The next opponent for the Doughgirls and the Doughboys is Fort McPherson. The games will be played at McPherson tomorrow and Sunday on the outskirts of Atlanta. Fort McPherson is only two hours away so a little fan support would be appreciated.

Fort McPherson will be the last games for both the Doughboys and the Doughgirls before the TRADOC tournament begins. The men will hold their tournament Feb. 27 through March 7 at Fort Jackson, S. C. The Doughgirls tournament will be March 7-14 at Fort Jackson.

The Doughgirls still are in need of another big player as they only have nine players and are hurting when they get in foul trouble. Anyone interested should contact Coach Baines at Audie Murphy Gym or by phone at 545-4375.

Dental x-rays important part of treatment

(EDITORS NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on dental health published by The BAYONET, in cooperation with the Fort Benning Dental Activity, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 3-9.)

X-rays or radiographs are one of the most important tools your dentist has at his disposal to check for hidden problems that affect your dental health. For this reason he will periodically suggest an X-ray examination.

Generally speaking, on your first visit the dentist will probably take x-rays of your teeth. From then on, his professional judgement will determine the frequency and extent of later x-ray examinations. The dentist and his staff are very careful, however, to prevent unnecessary radiation. They are trained to use techniques and equipment giving the most diagnostic information with the least amount of exposure.

X-ray examinations can indicate a number of dental problems that visual examination alone cannot, such as:

- early cavities between the teeth or underneath the gumline;
- damage to the bony support of the teeth by periodontal or gum disease;
- delay in eruption of a tooth or in jaw growth;
- impacted or abscessed teeth;
- bone diseases and tumors.

With X-rays, these types of problems can often be detected early enough to be treated successfully. But if you wait until they cause pain or visible damage, such diseases can destroy your teeth, gums and supporting bone. Repairing your mouth may then require much more time, effort and expense.

Federal expenditures for Vietnam Era veterans have totalled more than $40 billion. This includes some $25 billion for GI Bill education and training assistance and more than $3 billion for VA hospital and medical care.

Army clubs ban some dancers

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Topless and bottomless female dancers and male bottomless dancers are now banned from Army club, DA officials announced recently.

A change to AR 230-60, effective Jan. 23, prohibits this form of entertainment, officials said. A paragraph added to the regulation states, "Commanders will ensure that the types of entertainment and social events conducted in clubs are wholesome and adhere to the standards of good taste."

Commanders will avoid "entertainment and social events which offend the dignity of patrons, their dependents or guests," according to the new paragraph.

Although commanders are encouraged to meet club members desires, they cannot ignore their "responsibility for protecting the interests of the Army. Each event, when viewed in the context of both local and Army needs, must be capable of withstanding critical external scrutiny."

Previously, officials said, local commanders were responsible for setting policy on topless dancers for their installations.

New helmet, vest on way

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—By the mid-1980's, soldiers will be turning in their "steel pots" for the new Kevlar combat helmet and vest set.

According to DA logistics officials, the Defense Personnel Support Center will contract for 30,000 of the new helmet and vest sets this fiscal year. In the FY 80 DoD budget, Congress provided $9.4 million to buy helmet and vest sets for combat troops.

The Kevlar helmet and the vest are properly called the personnel armor support system—ground troops (PASGT), say the logistics officials.

The helmet and vest set was field tested at Fort Benning, Ga. during 1976-1977 and, according to officials, soldiers reacted favorably toward the new combat equipment.

The helmet, which resembles somewhat the headgear worn by German soldiers during WWII, is designed to provide protection to as much of the head as possible, officials says. The helmet is rated 30 percent stronger than the steel helmet. Officials were also careful to see that the helmet will work with other field gear.

Officials say the new combat helmet is the same weight as the 53-ounce steel helmet and liner, but the new helmet is designed to fit the head so much better that soldiers who have worn it claim it is lighter.

Setting it straight

In the story about the Post Soldier of the Quarter in last week's issue, we stated that PFC Fitzgerald was one of two female line officers in the 988th MP Company.

It should have stated she was one of 12 female line officers in the 988th MP Company.

Professor Safety

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has issued a public advisory to alert motorists to the hazards of driving without a spare tire. Motorists who get a flat tire and do not have a spare may have to leave their vehicle unattended while they summon help or theymay be forced to summon a tow truck. Either way it can be dangerous and expensive.

RETIRED
OR NEARING RETIREMENT?
WE NEED YOU!

Why not turn the skills you have practiced as an officer on non-commissioned officer into an exciting, very profitable second career! The special abilities which made you successful in the military service are ideally suited for immediate success in real estate. One of the most important facets of your military career was or has been the transitioning of personnel and their families into and out of your units.
It is my firm opinion that any officer or NCO who has a genuine concern for people and a strong desire for total financial independence can be extremely successful in real estate, especially with CENTURY 21.
CENTURY 21 is a franchise organization with over 8,000 offices across the United States and Canada, which although independently owned and operated work closely together through an international referral service in relocating families from one assignment to another.
I have a place for you in my organization RIGHT NOW! Here is an opportunity for you to be more successful than you imagined possible. All interviews are confidential. Next class starts February 27, 1980.

Who gets the children?

A custody fight can be devastating for the child.

By Dave Bristow

Child custody. It used to be considered automatic for the mother to keep the children after a divorce. In some states it still is. However, more fathers today are given custody since many courts are moving away from the traditional practice of automatically awarding custody to the mother, and more fathers are there to step in and raise the child.

A rejected father fearful of losing everything he has worked for ponders the thought of not only losing his wife but perhaps his child as well. A divorce is eminent and the problem of child custody is now very real. Secretly, the father is afraid it will be an uphill battle for him to win in a custody case. He thinks the law is normally on the mother's side but he wants to keep the child.

"I don't want to go through with my wife's wishes and have a divorce. She wants to take our son away from his dad and I won't let her get away with it. I'll fight her in court before I give up custody of my son."

Wanting custody of one's children is not always enough. Many times both parents decide they want to keep the kids. It happens everywhere, even in small towns today, as a now 43-year-old Columbus resident reveals. "It happened to me in Walterboro, S. C. My husband had such strong influencial and financial advantages that I was unable to find one attorney in two counties that would go against him. If I had had $25,000 at the time I might have had a chance. As it turned out, I signed voluntary release of custody of five children and retained only visitation rights. Today I miss not having my children with me very much."

The words 'child custody' themselves make one think of great personal trauma. A calamity to many if it ever happens to them. There are no winners in a custody case, only losers. And what if you are a loser in a child custody case? Imagine the heartbreak if one day you are faced with not only losing your marriage but your children as well.

It happened in Kansas. At the tender age of 11-years-old, a Kansas City girl, Debra D., found herself caught up in a divorce and custody case involving her parents. Debra had to choose whether she wanted to live with her father or her mother.

"It was a very difficult decision for me to make. I loved both my parents equally well. I was told by the court judge that that day I had to decide which parent I wished to live with. I chose my mother because I thought she would be able to spend more time with me than my father. Dad worked a lot when I lived with him before he and Mom were separated. My decision to choose my mom this time not only affected me but my little sister and two brothers as well. After receiving custody of all of us, six months later Mom had a nervous breakdown. We were tossed around from one foster home to another. Today, all of

Glad you asked

What do you think could be done to improve recruiting and retention in the Army?

Sp5 April Smith, 283rd Army Band
I'd like to see more reenlistment bonuses reinstated.

Sgt. Fred L. Young, 18th Replacement Detachment, 36th Engineer Group
I think training needs to be upgraded and also upgrade the standards recruiters have. Working in the Replacement Center, I run across people who feel they have been messed with by their recruiters. Also, I think the standards need to be raised for people coming in.

Sgt. James Sheffield, 72nd Engineer Company, 197th Infantry Brigade
I believe starting the draft again would be good for the Army. Also, make it easier to get parts for vehicles and give more power back to the sergeants. If we squared those three things away, we'd have a pretty good Army again.

SSgt. Walter R. Poole, HHC, Committee Group
One thing I feel enhances the reenlistment program is commanders being more concerned about the care of the individual soldiers. This means once the individual comes into the company, the man and his family should be made to feel welcome. He should be sure to have adequate living conditions. If he's satisfied with the people he works with and his living conditions, he's going to want to stay there.

Sp4 Francine Balmaceda, Company B, Headquarters Command
I think recruiters should tell people coming into the Army what they're entitled to regarding benefits. They should try to fit people into a job they'll be happy with, not just to fill their quotas. I think that, basically, the recruiters should be more honest. As far as keeping soldiers in, I think there should be more benefits, such as reenlistment bonuses and a two-year reenlistment option. More schooling and better assignments would also help.

Sp4 Diane Jorgenson, Company B, Headquarters Command
I believe the Army system was designed by a genius but it is too often run by fools. I love the Army by day but cannot tolerate it by night. The barracks is supposed to be my home, yet my personal life is stifled by rules which leave me feeling like a caged animal. All I am looking forward to now is regaining a little bit of my personal choice and freedom. Everything is dictated by SOP — from the company that I can keep down to and including the arrangement of the furniture in my room. If I could only see some understandable reasoning behind these rules maybe I could live by them.

Discrimination?

To the Editor:
It is with great interest that I examined your front page of Feb. 22 showing a black soldier faced with a dilemma of choosing an Article 15 or a court-martial. It is true that there are black soldiers who do have disciplinary problems. However, this is not exclusively a black problem.

I would suggest that in the future when you wish to depict a specific point on the front page of The BAYONET, either good or bad, that you use two or more figures; a mixture of black and White.

V.S. Howard
Columbus, Ga.

Reader provoked

To the Editor:
I am flammably irate about the sensitivity The BAYONET showed in depicting a black soldier on the cover of the Feb. 22 issue, trying to decide between a court-martial and an Article 15. The primary provoking point is that the sketch tends to imply that at Fort Benning criminal behavior comes only in "skin" color black.

Such visual evidence, while shocking in its revelation of discrimination, brings home the evils of prejudice with impact far beyond the power of mere words. It is of little consequences whether a discriminatory act was intended or not, all that is important is that it occurred. This truth is seldom understood by individuals in power; but the overwhelming structural and institutional factor is the lack of black participation in Fort Benning's decision making apparatus.

Dianne Tapley

Burger fan

To the Editor:
In response to the criticism of the Run-in-Chef Burger Bar, I think that this is a fine place for Fort Benning since it is the first one here.

Having served in the Army for 30 years and also I still eat quite a bit on post as I am a retiree. It is the best I have seen here and I compare it with any other fast food place such as Hardee's, Burger King, McDonalds or Krystal.

As for service, I think it is the best around.

Burger critic

To the Editor:

My family splurged this last weekend and went out to eat twice; once to McDonalds on Victory Drive and once to the "imitation McDonalds" across from the Main Post shoppett. We made a remarkable discovery and felt it only fair and necessary to pass it along to the econ-o-minded consumer.

Friday, the meal for three at McDonalds on Victory Drive consisted of three Big Macs, three milk shakes, three orders of french fires (two large, one small) and one regular hamburger. Our cost was $7.30.

Saturday, for an early dinner, we stopped at the "imitation" McDonalds (across from the shoppett) and our meal for three consisted of two double meat hamburgers (meat was so thin it had only one side and measured approximately two and one half inches across), one chicken box (cold, bland in taste, greasy and the two rolls were dried out and had no butter), one roast beef sandwich (surely false advertising could hold true here; it didn't look anything like the advertised product, the meat tasted like paper), one large milk shake (it's so thick you have to eat it with a spoon, and is tasteless--it's a bowl of ice cream in a paper cup), two 12-ounce draft beers in paper cups (wax from the cup mixed with the beer leaves much to be desired) and one large order of french fries (they were greasy and limp, not to mention cold). This meal cost $8.60.

On the tables at the "imitation" McDonalds there are cards that said something to the effect that the quality of food served there was "hot and flavorful" is guaranteed. Now, if that's the bottom line, I'd like to say that I DARE any fast food civilian place to display that same guarantee, serving the same type of greasy, cold, flavorless garbage, and I'll GUARANTEE they don't stay in business long.

What I don't understand is why our (yours and mine) tax dollars went into constructing such a beautiful facility, then turn around and insult it by serving utter trash they call food. That "imitation" McDonalds could offset any deficit that clubs and other eateries here on post create, it if served decent tasting, eye appealing foods. Why don't y'all wake up and smell the coffee, anyway?

CSM responds

To the Editor:

I want to congratulate Ms. Deb Hilgeman on her ability to write provocatively in the Point-Counter Point column. She certainly provoked me to write a letter addressing the subject of the article, "Single Soldiers Cheated?" The reasoning that she used is certainly the line of reasoning that most young soldiers have.

It appears that everyone wants to climb on the equal bandwagon. Ms. Hilgeman stated that "If a soldier decides to marry, fine, but the size of his or her paycheck should not be determined by the number of children the soldier decides to father or mother." The Army pays a soldier's salary based on the pay grade and the number of years of servie.

What many young soldiers are uptight about is the "allowances" that are paid to soldiers that are married. Basic Army quarters allowance is computed two ways only — "Without Kin and With Kin." The without kin BAQ is simply a measure used to compensate soldiers when the Army cannot provide adequate military quarters. The with kin is paid to all soldiers that have at least one legitimate dependent, be it husband, wife, mother or child. So the number of children one may have is irrelevant.

Families cannot live in barracks, so they have to live in post quarters and forfeit their allowances or rent or buy downtown. If quarters are available on post, their options are limited to two: stay on post or buy a house. All enlisted soldiers draw the same amount for basic Army subsistence (BAS). This allowance is paid to soldiers who do not eat in military dining facilities. If a soldier that draws BAS eats in the dining facility, he must pay slightly more than he draws from the Army for the meal. The point is, allowances are used by the military to compensate soldiers who by reason of family requirements cannot utilize single soldier facilities and maintain a family dwelling residence. Ironically, more than half of the Army's soldiers have dependents.

The only comment that can be made about the Army forcing soldiers into contract marriages is, "Baloney." Any soldier that is a partner in a contract marriage prostitutes him/herself for the love of a few dollars and degrades the sanctuary of marriage.

There are still a few soldiers around that believe the Army's old recruiting slogan, "The Army wants to join you." Army regulations and laws on soldiers' salary and allowances are set by the United States Congress. I suggest that the lowest participants in the political arena (soldiers from 18 to 22 years of age) exercise their constitutional right to vote.

Command Sergeant Major
197th Infantry Brigade (Sep)

Red Cross Month proclaimed

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — President Carter has proclaimed March as Red Cross Month.

"We depend upon the Red Cross not only to help us in time of disaster but also to collect and distribute blood, to assist members of our armed forces as well as veterans and their families, to instruct us and our families in first aid and water safety, and to provide a vast array of community health services," the president said.

The soldiers and civilians of the Army, whether active or reserve component, can help the Red Cross with volunteer time or donation of blood.

"As President of the United States and Honorary Chairman of the American Red Cross, I urge all members of the federal establishment and members of the armed forces to support this vital voluntary organization," the president concluded.

AER: Annual fund campaign to begin, March to July dates for donations

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — The Army Emergency Relief (AER) annual fund campaign is set for March 1 to July 1.

"Since AER is a family matter of deep interest to all of us, I wholeheartedly recommend your individual and collective support of this campaign for this deserving organization," stated Army Chief of Staff Gen. E. C. Meyer in announcing the campaign.

The AER provides emergency loans and grants to active and retired Army members and their dependents, as well as spouses and orphans of deceased Army members. It also provides educational loans and scholarships to certain dependent children of living or deceased Army members.

Many soldiers and their families have been able to meet financial emergencies with the help of AER. This help is possible only through voluntary contributions from members of the Army. The annual fund campaign is the only appeal made for contributions, conducted solely within the Army.

Contributions can be made through local fund drives or sent directly to national headquarters, Army Emergency Relief, Department of the Army, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332.

Donations can be made in memory of deceased loved ones. Acknowledgement will be sent to the donor and a letter of sympathy bearing the name of each contributor sent to the bereaved family. Gifts are accepted at any time during the year and all contributions are tax deductible.

AER can be a real morale booster and help for the Army family in time of need. If emergency financial assistance is needed, your unit commander, local AER officer, local Red Cross Chapter, or any Air Force Aid Society or Navy Relief Society office can steer you in the right direction to get help.

For education assistance contact your AER officer, any auxiliary of AER, or National Headquarters, AER. The AER will review the application, taking into consideration need, merit and ability.

Applicants must not have reached their 22nd birthday by June 1, 1980, to apply for aid during the 1980-81 school year. Assistance up to $1,800 a school year is available, with a maximum of $7,200 for four years.

Proof needed for I.D. cards

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — All soldiers must now show legal proof of dependency when applying for ID cards for their dependents, according to Adjutant General Center officials.

A change to AR 606-5 (ID cards, tags and badges), which should reach the field by the end of February or early March, includes new instructions.

A March 1979 Government Accounting Office report criticized DoD and the military services for weak control of dependents' ID cards. While the Navy and Air Force required legal documentation, the Army did not for its senior officers and senior noncommissioned officers.

DoD changed the rules to require proof of dependency from all soldiers, regardless of rank. Among the documents which may be required are birth and marriage certificates, divorce decrees, adoption papers, retirement orders and Veterans Administration letters indicating a service-connected medical disability. Widows and widowers should also have a copy of their spouse's death certificate.

Officials say the new policy is not intended to demean special trust and confidence, but should be viewed as a safeguard to protect the benefits and privileges an ID card authorizes.

Energy pamphlets now available

As energy conservation becomes more important to all Americans, the Federal government has printed a number of pamphlets which can point the way in many fields.

The following pamphlets may be ordered by sending a check or money order in the proper amount made out to the Superintendent of Documents.

In writing to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009, be sure to include all the information shown with the titles below.

How solar energy can be used to heat and cool a home is detailed in Buying Solar, 055G ($1.85). But before you get into that area, you might want to check out The Energy-Wise Home Buyer, 109G ($2.00) which includes energy checklists to follow when buying.

Maintenance and "how-it-works" information on your heating system is outlined in Home Heating, 048G ($1.10) and tips for those who have homes with oil furnaces can be had by sending for How to Improve The Efficiency of Your Oil-Fired Furnace, 605G. Best part is that this one is free.

The definitive answers to most of your home heating and cooling problems will be found in In The Bank Or Up The Chimney?, 056G ($1.70).

One other booklet, Tips For Energy Savers, 610G, is also available and the price is right — it's free.

Unsung heroes part of 1/58th

By Garrett T. Cowsert

Behind every successful combat unit there stands a legion of soldiers, bruised, tired and ragged, who have labored long with little sleep and less praise. These are not the vaunted infantry, but the behind-the-scenes logistics personnel. In the 1/58th Infantry, these men are "Hobb's Heroes." Capt. Robert Hobbs speaks of the unsung heroes, riflemen and TOWs provide the combat muscle in an infantry unit. However, the real power that provides strength, flexibility and endurance on the battlefield comes from the support personnel in the unit's support areas.

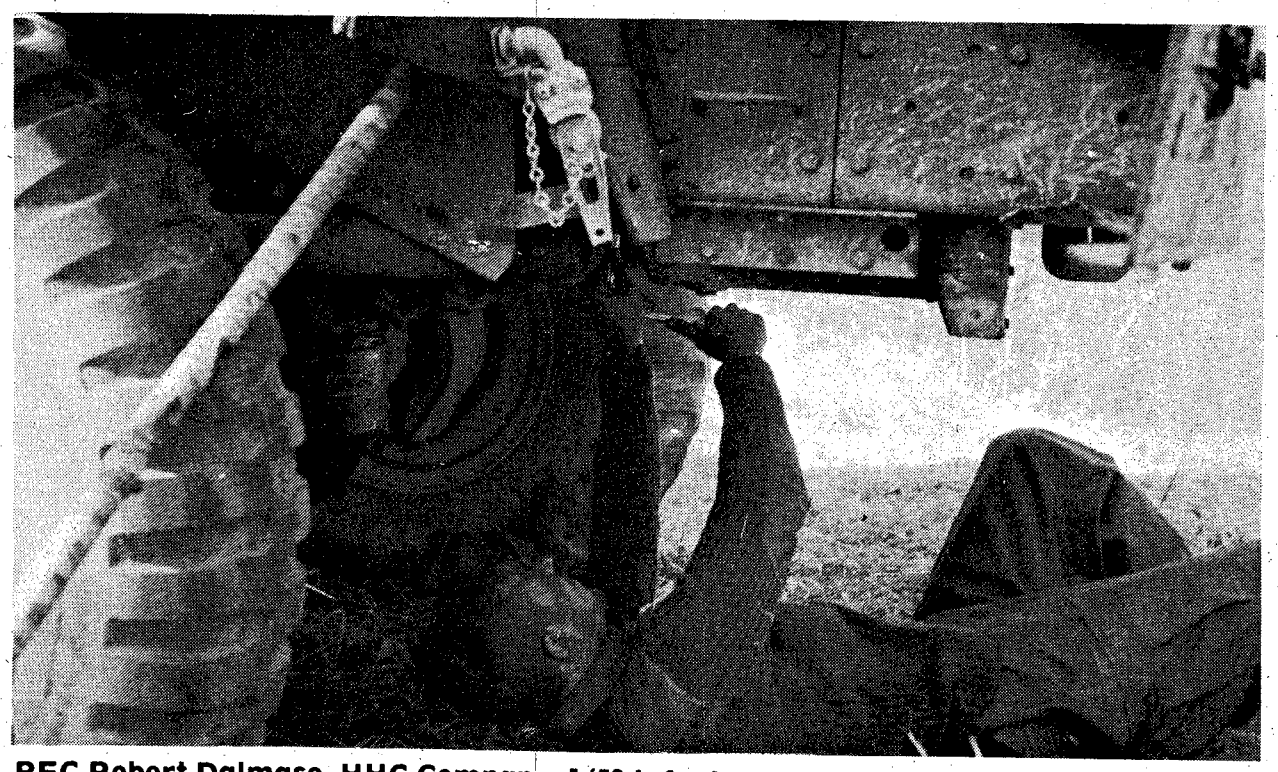
These men, the mechanics, recovery specialists, truck drivers, ammunition specialists, medics, cooks, supply men, radio repairmen, and administrative specialists routinely work hard and long keeping the men and equipment at the front well supplied with food, ammunition, spare parts and other equipment required to keep a modern Army on the move. Approximately 25 percent of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry (Patriots) work in the combat service support role. The mission to arm, fuel, fix and feed as far forward as possible is the by word for the Patriot's support crew. Because of this forward support, the need for front line security measures is vital. This begins in the company support area, only one kilometer behind the main lines. Here, unit first sergeants and executive officers use assigned men to care for unit combat personnel.

Five to seven kilometers behind the forward elements are the combat trains. Here fuel, food, mechanics and recovery specialists and transportation support can be found.

Relying on concealment and cover to avoid contact, the combat train digs in, prepares positions and as Pvt. Chris Martens, ammo handler and five ton truck driver, said, "We have to be as ready as our buddies in rifle companies."

A few kilometers farther to the rear lie the field trains. Here jobs too big or too time consuming to do forward are done. The same security measures are used as in the combat or company areas and, even though far to the rear, the threat of air attacks exists. Sgt. David Black, property book NCO, who just finished his guard watch at 4 a.m. and was completing a simulated requisition for a battle loss, could be heard to say, "I hope somebody forward appreciates this!"

Working all hours conducting their support mission, then coming back for guard and radio watch can make one very tired. This is the life for many soldiers who are not "up front." These are the 'unsung heroes.'



PFC Robert Dalmaso, HHC Company, 1/58 Infantry, gives that extra push to loosen a bolt on a two and half ton truck.

Aviation: Life support equipment for 'flyboys' has safety NCO here concerned

Story and photos by Deb Hilgeman

Maj. Smith was preparing for a routine flight in the UH-1 helicopter. As he slid the helmet on to his head and attempted to fasten the chin strap, some weak stitches broke and the leather strap fell off. "Oh, hell! Well, I'll turn it in after the flight," he thought with irritation.

Next he put on his survival vest and stuck a pack of cigarettes in the pocket designed to hold emergency flares. Finally, on went the gloves. "They sure don't make these things to last," he thought as the finger seam ripped a little further.

Maj. Smith had been a pilot for 13 years and never considered the possibility of needing his life support equipment. Twenty minutes later his chopper went down killing the other two crew members. The major probably would have survived but when his body was found seven hours later, he had died from loss of blood.

Although this incident didn't really take place, the chance of something like it happening is very real, according to SSgt. Edward Bruck, Life Support Equipment/Safety NCO at Lawson Army Airfield here. It is Bruck's job to ensure that Fort Benning's Aviation Division flight and crew members are carrying life support equipment and that the crews understand how to use this equipment if the need arises. "I'd say I'm responsible for everything from the soles of the boots to the top of the helmet," Bruck said, sifting through a mass of first aid kits and supply forms cluttering his desk.

Bruck says he is probably one of the most highly trained men in the Army for this job but points out that the training he received came from other services because the Army "is slow in developing schools." Bruck attended the Navy's two-and-a-half month basic aviation life support equipment safety course and became the Army's first enlisted man to graduate in the school's 54-year history. He followed that up with correspondence courses offered by the Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard and researched the subject on his own. The more Bruck learned about aviation safety, the more he felt the Army was not doing enough in this area.

Army development "slow"

"The Army does not even have an MOS for life support equipment personnel programs and that's a crying shame," Bruck complained. "I have been personally involved in trying to start the MOS since 1978 but all I hear is 'It's just around the corner.' I'm disgusted but you can't let if affect your work. You know at least one man's life is depending on it. Something as simple as a little mirror could make the difference as to whether that man is going to be picked up alive or whether he will die because no one saw him."

Since the Army does not offer enough in the way of formal training, Bruck and his counterparts at other posts have formed a grapevine system to relay information that could be useful. "If I run across something during a safety inspection that just doesn't look right and I don't know the answer, I'll call someone I know has this specialty knowledge," Bruck explained."There is constant communication between posts."

How safety conscious are the crews? "In my position as an LSE NCO, some of the flight personnel tend to disregard my advice but most are very good," Bruck said. "I gave a class recently on what the pilots carry in their vests and was surprised to have pilots coming up to me afterwards and saying, 'Thanks, I didn't know that.' "

Army rates a three

In Bruck's opinion, compared to other services, on a scale of one to 10, the Army's program rates about a three. He pointed out, however, that Fort Benning is doing better than many other posts. "I attibute that to the people I'm working with. They sit down and listen and if I have a good idea, they're behind me. And if I have a bad idea, we sit down and discuss it and find a better way."

Bruck's job does not end when the flight crews

A mannequin was set up in the flight operations building at Lawson Army Airfield as part of the ongoing aviation safety program. The mannequin had several deficiencies which personnel were asked to identify. People who participated in the program will receive an award for their interest in aviation safety.

197th hits field for ARTEP

Story and photos by Mark Cauthen

Two units from the 197th Infantry Brigade were simultaneously evaluated during a five-day exercise as part of the Army Readiness Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor and 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry were evaluated on the tasks they would perform in a combat situation. The two units alternated between defensive and offensive operations while performing the tasks stipulated in ARTEP 71-2.

The 1/58th Infantry began their ARTEP with a tactical night road march under radio silence and moved into defensive positions. Continuously working on those positions, they used overwatching fires with their individual weapons while setting up long range fire with their tanks and TOWs.

During the second portion of the exercise the 1/58th went on the offensive. One of the highlights was the dismounted night attack in which infantrymen dismounted their Armored Personnel Carriers (APCs) and walked six kilometers before attacking enemy positions. This was done under radio silence under the leadership of Maj. Garrett T. Cowsert, Battalion executive officer, after the commander had been declared a casualty by exercise controllers.

"This ARTEP was a great learning opportunity," said Lt. Col. H. T. Fincher Jr., commander of the 1/58th. "It will point out the strengths and weaknesses of our unit and help us structure our training in the right direction," he concluded.

The 2/69th Armor found the ARTEP to be a valuable learning experience. One of the key elements for the 2/69th was that many soldiers of lower enlisted rank had to perform as tank commanders, a position usually intended for an E-6 or E-7.

"You can imagine the immense responsibility of being in charge of a 60-ton, $800,000 piece of equipment," said Capt. Jeffrey L. Kimball, operations officer of the 2/69th.

The M60-A1 is the Army's main battle tank and as the main weapons system in the 2/69th it provides the speed, power and shock action for the 197th.

"We relied on those young soldiers and they came through for us," said Lt. Col. Donald H. Volta, commander of the 2/69th.

"One should remember that these young men were being evaluated on their jobs," he said. "Inexperienced as they may have been, they were put in the position in which they had to perform well, and they did," he concluded.

Both sides employed extensive close air support. Each battalion had attached a Forward Air Controller from the 21st Tactical Air Support Squadron, 507th Tactical Air Control Wing, Shaw AFB, S.C.

An important part of all ARTEPs is a series of tasks involving nuclear, biological and chemical defense measures. Wide use was made of simulated NBC warfare during this ARTEP, to include aerial spraying of a simulated toxic agent followed by individual and equipment decontamination.

A field decontamination site was established by the 613th Field Service Company, 548th Supply and Service Battalion, Ft. McClellan, Ala., and was used by both participating battalions for personnel and vehicle decontamination.

Engineers unpack and prepare explosives which will be used in the destruction of an obstacle. The men, from the 72nd Engineer Company, used bangalore torpedoes, shape charges, C-4 and TNT to get the job done.

Two members of a decontamination team scrub an M60-A1 tank from the 2/69th Armor. The 613th Field Service Company, 548th Supply and Service Battalion from Fort McClellan, Ala. put on a demonstration on the operation of a field decontamination site.

Reserve 'no shows' now discharged

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Enlisted national guardsmen and reservists will no longer be ordered to active duty for repeatedly missing drills, according to DA officials.

Beginning March 1, enlisted reserve component members who have nine or more unexcused absences in 12 months will be considered by administrative separation boards for transfers to the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) or discharge, officials said.

Previously, these members could be ordered to active duty or active duty for training. Now they can be transferred to the IRR to complete their six-year obligation.

Based on separation board recommendations, separation authorities will determine whether the member should be transferred to the IRR or discharged. The fact that a member has nine or more unexcused absences is not, by itself, sufficient reason for discharge, however, an official pointed out.

Whether transferred to the IRR or discharged, the member's service will normally be characterized as under other than honorable conditions, officials added.

Exceptions to the new policy will be made in cases where reserve component members have completed at least two years of active duty. These members may be transferred to the IRR without board action and without the 'other than honorable' characterization of service, officials said.

Soldier feels blacks vital

By CSM Freddie J. Weston Jr.

Many times I have heard or read statements by white Americans suggesting "a back to Africa" movement for this country's American blacks.

On the surface, any uninformed or misguided person might get the impression that the black man is an unproductive burden strapped to his back. That position, in my opinion, is carried only by those with a cross to bear. I submit that the black American has shouldered his share of the burden from the very first. This is very true in the military services of our country.

Black men and women have fought bravely against America's foes since 1652. Free and enslaved blacks fought in the Colonial Wars. They died assisting the birth of the American Nation — more than 5,000 blacks served in the Continental Army. Blacks also shed their blood in the War of 1812 assuring the results of the revolution.

According to President Abraham Lincoln, black American participation in the Civil War insured the Northern victory and preservation of the Union. More than 186,000 blacks served in the Union Army. Two black Cavalry Regiments — the 9th and 10th — and two black Infantry Regiments — the 24th and 25th — played a large role in the "winning of the West" during the quarter century after Appomattox. These four Regiments later fought in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

In the "war to make the world safe for democracy," more than 40,000 of the 200,000 black soldiers sent overseas served in combat. One of the leading American units was the 369th Regiment which fought so well that it was honored by the French and respected by the Germans. The all-black Infantry Regiment was awarded the Croix de Guerre, a high French military award.

The Regiment earned its award after a grueling 191 days on the front lines. While at the front, the unit repulsed German attacks, captured the towns of Ripont and Seclault, and fought in the woods of Petit Rosier. By the time it ended its six-month tour on the front, the Regiment had been under fire longer than any other American unit and had never retreated. It was also the first allied unit to reach the Rhine River. Impressed by their opponent, the Germans nicknamed the black unit "The Hell Fighters." Two black Divisions, the 92nd and 93rd, also saw action during World War I. These two Divisions, along with many other black combat units, saw action in the Second World War.

But, ironically and sadly, most of these black men and women were denied the very freedom, equality, opportunity and citizenship they believed they were fighting for. Their contributions to the nation generally were unreported, unrecognized and unappreciated.

Since the white majority tended to doubt the black's soldiering ability, blacks initially were not allowed to join the war effort, but as the struggle deepened, whites were ready to have blacks as allies for the duration.

Just as surely, blacks seeking to prove their worth would join the fight — only to be thrust aside when peace returned. Even in wartime, black soldiers faced the same inequalities they left in civilian life. Segregation, discrimination and poor job assignments were facts of life for black soldiers in the Army before the Korean War.

Equality in the armed forces took a step toward

Soldier finds father, heritage in display

When Sp4 Alvin Anjuan Allen, Combat Support Company, 3/7th Infantry, first saw the Black History Week exhibit, 'Heritage for America,' in Bldg. 4, he was shocked at what he saw!

When he looked at the unit picture of the 24th Infantry Division he thought that it looked familiar and after close inspection he realized that he had seen the photo at home, because in the picture was his father — Cpl. Joe Morris.

"When I saw my father's picture I felt really good," Allen said. "I used to think that the Army forgot the individual soldier but after seeing my father's picture on the walls of the Infantry School I now realize that that isn't true."

Allen's mother and father separated when he was very young, so he doesn't have too many memories of his father. "From what I remember about my father, he was always talking about the military and I guess that is what influenced me to join," said Allen. "My father served in both World War II and the Korean War and I'm really proud of him."

Sp4 Allem Anjuan Allen, Combat Support Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, points out his father's picture in the Black History Week display in Bldg. 4 to Sp4 Johnnie Pugh, Combat Support Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry.

Allen explained that when his father came on active duty, the way black soldiers were treated was quite different from the way they are treated today, but even though his father certainly faced some unfair treatment, he still loved the Army. "My father told me that if I was willing to work hard to make it, the Army was a good way to make a better life for myself."

Allen explained, "I can still remember my father telling me that if I ever do something wrong, to admit it and take my punishment like a man." Allen seems to agree with his father about the Army because as he explains, "Joining the Army is a good way for the black man to get ahead and advance in life."

"I think Black History Week is beneficial because it gives the black soldiers a chance to learn what their forefathers have done. However, I think we should have an American Heritage Week instead, to recognize not only blacks but all races. I think it would do more to draw everyone concerned closer together," Allen said.

Allen has been in the Army about six years serving with various units at Forts Sill, Polk, Bliss, Wainwright and Benning. Allen explained that one of his most interesting assignments was with the 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry (Manchus) at Fort Wainwright. He is presently taking part in the testing of the new Squad Weapon Analytical Trainer (SWAT) here.

When Allen isn't on the firing line in classroom 33, Bldg. 4 testing the SWAT system he relaxes by working with pottery and ceramics and he also enjoys woodworking. Allen's home is in Anderson, Ala. where he says he also enjoys doing some yardwork around the house because it enables him to get outdoors.

Athletic field named for courageous black soldier

Many Fort Benning soldiers have tested their endurance and stamina using its facilities but few soldiers know the story of the courageous black Medal of Honor winner that Olive Field is named for.

The field, located at coordinates 907807, was officially named Olive Physical Combat Proficiency Area in honor of PFC Milton L. Olive III, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry, on Nov. 2, 1966. Olive was awarded the Medal of Honor for his heroic actions in the Republic of Vietnam.

Olive, a member of Company B's 3rd platoon, was on a search and destroy mission in the Vietnamese jungle looking for Viet Cong. The platoon was subjected to heavy enemy gun fire and temporarily pinned down before turning the tables on the Viet Cong, assaulting their positions and forcing them to flee.

As the platoon pursued the enemy through the jungle, Olive and four other soldiers were moving through the jungle together when an enemy grenade was thrown into their midst. Olive saw the grenade, and then saved the lives of his fellow soldiers at the sacrifice of his own, by grabbing the grenade in his hand and falling on it to absorb the blast with his body. Through his bravery, Olive prevented any additional loss or injury to members of his platoon.

The injuries Olive received from the blast resulted in his death. He was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

reality when President Truman issued an executive order in July 1948 directing that "Equality of Treatment and Opportu-nity" be implemented "as rapidly as possible." With the desegregation of Army units during the Korean War, changes for the better began.

Despite desegregation, progress in getting rid of discrimination came slowly. Assignments and promotions were particularly affected by discrimination. For example, blacks were often given assignments or rated on their evaluations on the basis of their physical traits and not on their ability. Sterotyping made the situation worse because a good job performance meant simply that the soldier was not a typical Black.

During the 1950s and 1960s, prejudice was built into the Army's operation. Black officers and enlisted personnel were frequently assigned to less visible positions which hurt their chances for promotion. Repeated assignments to garrison and service support units did not give blacks the type of experiences needed for consideration to higher command rank. Also, fewer blacks were sent for necessary training at the Command and General Staff College, War College and NCO Academy. Without those courses, their chances for promotion were limited.

With the coming of the Vietnam War and the mass news media, especially television, the black soldier was finally showcased as a great American fighting man. American audiences saw that most blacks served in the combat units, elite units such as Airborne, Special Forces, Rangers, and long range reconnaissance patrols. They saw the courageous young black soldier lead the way as point man for his platoon, the small slim soldier commonly known as "the tunnel rat" squirm and slide into dark caves to either die or flush out an elusive foe.

The young black officer, more than anyone else, was given his opportunity to lead Americans in combat, not just black soldiers. They moved on to command companies, battalions, brigades and divisions, opening the way for the many senior black officers that are in the Army today. For many Americans, the Vietnam War Era was a black time in American history (excuse the pun). However, as far as the black soldier is concerned, it has to be the greatest time in American history, because for many people some of the myths about his ability to fight was exploded.

However, during the past 28 years, a policy of gradual integration has expanded to one of equal opportunity in all aspects of Army life and beyond. Equal opportunity policies now apply to off-post housing and public accommodations. Race Relations Education and Training courses are designed to foster the active support and participation of all soldiers.

The built-in prejudice which kept down the number of officers and enlisted personnel has gradually been rooted out. Promotion boards must now base their selections more on job performance than on assignments. This practice has helped officers and enlisted personnel. In 1949 the Army had no black Generals, one Colonel, 12 Lieutenant Colonels and 42 Majors. Today however, the Army has 21 Generals, including two 3 stars, one black woman Brigadier General and four more men on the promotion list including Col. James R. Hall Jr., former commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 200 Colonels, 591 Lieutenant Colonels and 752 Majors.

The Army rose from 12 black Sergeants Major in 1961 to 677 today. With the end of built-in discrimination, personal prejudice remains as the chief obstacle to equal treatment in the Army. It is a continuing problem that affects relations between blacks and whites in the Army and challenges individual soldiers to work for change. There is an old saying that you can't change a man's heart. Maybe not, but we hope to change some of the bad habits.

At this point I would like to mention just a few black scientific contributions to the military:

Garrett A. Morgan

A Kentucky-born black inventor, developed a gas inhalator in 1914. Improved versions of the inhalator saved thousands of lives in World War I when it came to be called a "gas mask."

Frederick Mckinley Jones

In 1935 he invented the first effective truck refrigeration system. He later used his creativity to serve the armed forces during World War II. Among other things, he devised an air conditioning unit for military field hospitals, military kitchen refrigerator and a portable x-ray unit.

Lloyd Augustus Hall

An industrial chemist, is best remembered for the processes he developed for preparing and packing food products and for retarding spoilage. His product is better known to the Army as "C" rations.

In conclusion, I would say that the American black has paid his dues to his country and should not be singled out for deportation to any foreign land. America and the United States is just as much his home as it is every other American citizens. Maybe even a bit more his than some, as he has put his life on the line for its honor and he stands ready to do so again should his country call.

Editor's note: CSM Freddie J. Weston Jr. is the Command Sergeant Major of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) here. He has seen over 24 years on active duty during his career. Weston came into the Army at a time when few black soldiers could be found in leadership positions. Next week the BAYONET will spotlight Weston as well as CSM Joe E. King Jr., Martin Army Hospital's CSM, and Col. James T. Bradley, Director of Plans and Training here.

take off. If a flight ends in an accident such as the one that occurred over Benning in November, Bruck aids the investigation team. "We're 'after the fact' in aircraft accidents. When the accident occurred in November, we worked seven days a week, 12 to 18 hours a day, for about a month. It was sheer hell; a never-ending investigation looking for a clue. You may look at a tree to find a certain scratch when looking for the answer but it's the training and knowledge of what to do that makes the difference. The one question on my mind is, 'What role did life support equipment play in the mishap?"

The crews of an aircraft have a "pretty damn good chance" of surviving in many accidents, according to Bruck. "It all depends on the individual's training. He has almost unlimited capabilities depending on his knowledge and equipment.

"Our aircraft are pretty cotton-picking safe," Bruck continued. "Our pilots are highly trained and most of them can maintain their cool under any circumstances."

Pvt. 2 William Causey was recently assigned as a crew chief at Lawson and said he thinks his coworkers need to be more safety conscious. "There's always room for improvement," he said. "And it's not the people who need improving as much as it is the equipment."

Being aviators on an infantry post is like being the proverbial 'bastard child', according to Bruck, but he said the situation is getting better. "We want to make people more aware of safety. Instead of seeing something wrong and thinking, 'It'll last another day', they'll stop right there and correct it. That's when they need a school trained man to fix or replace it. That is really the bottom line. First, we need trained people with an MOS in life support equipment. Once we get the MOS, we'll be light years ahead of where we are today," Bruck concluded.

Harassment violates policy

Robert B. Pirie, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics), has issued a strong endorsement of the policy statement on sexual harrassment that was given late last year by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM). Guidance and policy paralleling that put out by OPM are being developed for application to the servies.

DoD's top manpower official has also called for the institution of measures to express this policy in new employee orientation sessions and to advise current employees of the means of obtaining redress from sexual harassment.

The OPM policy statement on sexual harassment, which includes a specific definition of the term, reads as follows:

"Federal employees have a heavy responsibility under the Federal code of conduct and ethics for maintaining high standards of honesty, integrity, impartiality and conduct to assure proper performance of the government's business and the maintenance of confidence of the American people. Any employee conduct which violates this code cannot be condoned.

"Sexual harrassment is a form of employee misconduct which undermines the integrity of the employment relationship. All employees must be allowed to work in an environment free from unsolicited and unwelcome sexual overtures. Sexual harassment debilitates morale and interferes in the work productivity of its victims and co-workers.

"Within the Federal Government, a supervisor who uses implicit or explicit coercive sexual behavior to control, influence, or affect the career, salary, or job of an employee is engaging in sexual harassment. Similarly, an employee of an agency who behaves in this manner in the process of conducting agency business is engaging in sexual harassment.

"Finally, any employee who participates in deliberate or repeated unsolicited verbal comments, gestures, or physical contact of a sexual nature which are unwelcome and interfere in work productivity is also engaging in sexual harassment.

"It is the policy of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) that sexual harassment is unacceptable conduct in the workplace and will not be condoned. Personnel management within the Federal sector shall be implemented free from prohibited personnel practices and consistent with merit system principles, as outlined in the provisions of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978. All Federal employees should avoid conduct which undermines these merit principles. At the same time, it is not the intent of OPM to requlate the social interaction or relationships freely entered into by Federal employees.

"Complaints of harassment should be examined impartially and resolved promptly. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission will be issuing a directive that will define sexual harassment prohibited by title VII of the Civil Rights Act and distinguish it from related behavior which does not violate title VII."

Corrosion study being conducted

The U.S. Army Facilities Engineering Support Agency Corrosion Reduction Team arrived at Fort Benning Monday for a two-week study of the post utility systems for the Facilities Engineer.

The team is made up of two civilian engineers and four military enlisted technicians and visits five to seven installations a year. The team acts as an engineering consultant and technical advisor and does not have I.G. functions. Analyzing utility systems, troubleshooting problems and making recommendations are the main purposes of the team.

Some functions of the team, such as soil resistivity testing or gas piping investigations, require their presence outside offices, in yards and in family housing areas. Test equipment may also be attached to a family housing unit. Benning personnel are asked to cooperate with the team since their efforts may prevent future breakdowns of heating or cooling systems.

Corrosion and related problems cost the Army millions of dollars a year, as well as causing hardship to personnel when a boiler quits in the heating season or an air-conditioning system is out of order in mid-summer. The team makes recommendations which can result in the prevention of such breakdowns, as well as in saving the Army money. For further information, call Bob Wells at 544-4384.

ITV keeps going

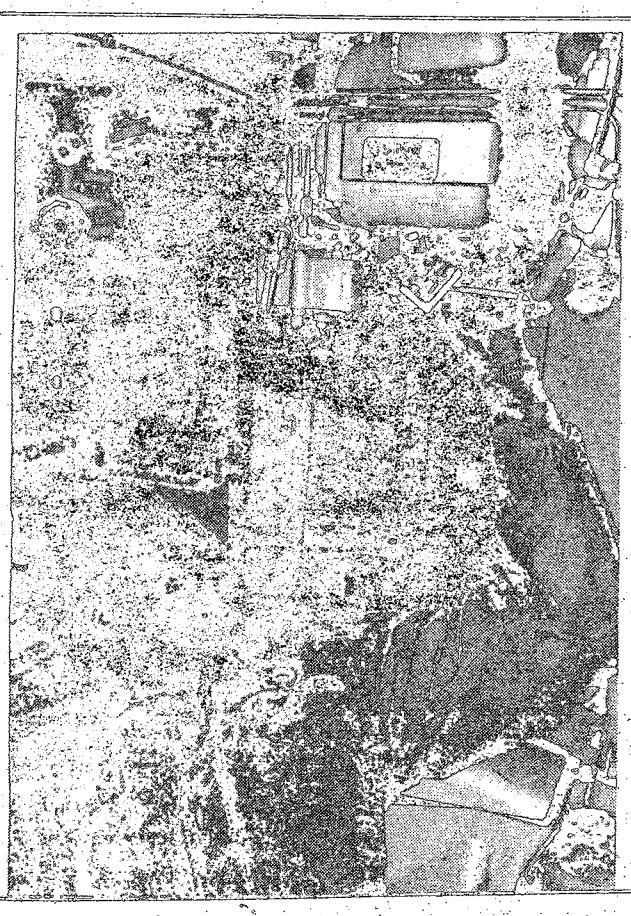
"All systems go," is the signal from the gunner of the Improved TOW Vehicle (ITV). The order of "fire" is given by the vehicle commander and with a loud roar the $3,500.00 missile heads down range for a direct hit.

All went as planned in a test 'fire power demonstration' given at Brann Range Feb.15.

But the real story of the ITV's successful mission on Brann Range comes from the Committee Group Motor Pool. The man behind the scenes making sure the ITV is ready and operating properly is SSgt. Arelius Mayes Jr.

Mayes, a turret mechanic on special duty assignment to the Committee Group Motor Pool, is a member of the 598th Maintenance Company. From the floor mount to the turret housing on top is Mayes' responsibility. "He's very good at what he does," says CWO2 John F. Williams, automotive maintenance technician for the motor pool.

It took eight weeks of schooling and one year of on the job training to totally understand the complex electronic and hydraulic systems involved in keeping the ITV working. "The whole tracking system is very complex," says Mayes. "The improvements made on this weapon's system further improves the vehicle's capability and the gunner's ability to fire more accurately."



SSgt. Arelius Mayes Jr. locates and corrects malfunctions on the Improved TOW Vehicle.

Custody

us kids have mixed feelings about who we love. I hope when I have children they never have to go through the whole mess we went through. Parents take kids for granted. I don't think I ever will."

Common problem

Child custody is not one of the most common problems confronting the military but it does come up. And what kind of chance does a soldier have of keeping the children in a custody suit? It is well known that soldiers must travel all over the world, with mission requirements that are expected to take priority and duties that require 24 hours at a time away from the home.

There's also the very real possibility that always hangs over the heads of military personnel, that at any time they may have to go off to war. So how difficult is it for the servicemember who wants to keep the kids to do so?

Talking with Fort Benning's Chief of Legal Assistance at the Staff Judge Advocate Office, Capt. Brian McQuade speaks regarding today's custody matters and the problems soldiers would encounter if they are faced with a custody suit.

"The modern trend today in some jurisdictions is that courts are no longer automatically awarding custody of the child to the mother. Courts are adopting a more liberal policy. This is a different view we are seeing, even though there are still some courts in a few states that are reluctant to separate children from the mother.

"Some states take the approach of appointing a family relations officer. This person basically functions as a social worker. After interviewing both mother and father and talking with the child, he presents his findings to the judge. This gives a perspective from a third objective party as to what would be best for the child.

Objective third party

Some states will have an attorney appointed by the court to represent the child's interest. This attorney, again, is an objective third party whose only interest is to work out a settlement that would be in the best interest of the child. The attorney has great flexibility. He can, in fact, go out and hire a psychiatrist to meet with the family to ascertain what is best for the child's emotional well being and for the child's future. He can, therefore, make certain recommendations to the judge. Additionally, many judges will interview the child privately to find out what the child's interest and needs are. The judge tries to find out who the child would be the happiest with as well as what is in the child's best interest."

Progressive movement

McQuade went on to say, "There is a movement afoot by some of the more progressive and liberal jurisdictions in this country today to award joint custody to both parents. I think there are some seven states that have now adopted this concept. Essentially, joint custody is when both parents would share custody of the child during a year. This is one of the more modern liberal trends that has come in.

"Fault. Some courts will consider this as a basis for awarding custody of a child. An example would be if a father was deemed to have caused fault in the divorce. The court would look at this and give custody to the mother automatically."

In a custody fight, it is the innocent child who may pay for his parent's selfishness.

Talking about the film "Kramer vs. Kramer", McQuade commented,. "What's important to note in the film was that the courts ruling did not apparently consider the underlying circumstances surrounding the breakup of that marriage. As you recall in the movie, the mother apparently walked out on the husband and the child. Later, the mother, after solving her personal problems, decided to return to New York and assume the role of parent and take custody of the child. In the film, the court gave the child back to the mother because she was the mother. The court applied the maternal custody concept.

Movie unrealistic

"They did not consider that the mother walked out on the child, did not consider the fact that she was at fault, did not consider the fact that the child was very happy to be with the father, that the father and son had developed a very warm relationship, and that the child did not want to leave.

"I think by the court giving the child back to the mother, it was somewhat unrealistic. Today, the courts would look at all the circumstances and then decide what is best for the child. What does the child want? Is the child happy? Is the father able to provide a stable and loving environment?"

If a servicemember, either male or female, wanted custody of their child following a divorce, McQuade explained that, "The soldier would have to demonstrate to the court that he or she is capable of providing a stable home for the child and that they are capable of meeting the needs and interest of the child. A soldier because he is a soldier certainly would not be treated differently by the court. The court would consider the particular circumstances.

Each case different

"How frequently a soldier is in the field and for how long at a time? What arrangements are being made to provide a stabilized home? What type of income does the servicemember have coming in? How frequently is he going to be traveling and relocating and how much time is he going to actually care for the child are all things that the court considers. "With the Army, the mission is, of course, the primary thing. Additionally, the Army may have certain considerations that they would look at regarding the children."

McQuade continued, "Basically, you have to argue with the court that you are the best one to care for the child and that you are able to provide a loving and stable home that is in the child's best interest. The courts are going to look at each particular situation and they will decide what is best for the child.

Benning offers help

"We are precluded from representing any servicemember in an actual appearance in any of the courts. The only exception would be where it has been specifically authorized by the Judge Advocate General in a particular state. In Georgia, we could not represent the soldier in a custody case. However, what we can do for the soldier seeking legal advice on a custody matter is give advice on what the law is and what burdens they may be facing and what they may have to establish in order to get custody of their children.

We can refer an individual to an attorney in Columbus. If out of state we can try to get a list of attorneys to the soldier from that particular state. The soldier will have to retain a private counselor, go to court, and fight it out for custody."

The parent who is found to be not at fault in the divorce receives custody of minor children unless the judge determines that the welfare and happiness of the child would be best served by placing him with the other parent or guardian. Minors over the age of 14 may choose which parent to live with unless that parent is determined not to be fit and proper for custody. The question of custody may be reconsidered in the future following the divorce decree if change occurs affecting the child's future welfare.

Father can benefit

Two Brandeis University sociologists in an exploratory study found that in the case of a divorced or separated father who has custody of his children, "Respecting his children's emotional and physical needs means respecting his own needs too. They also found that many fathers developed a stronger self-image. Telephone interviews taken by the sociologists revealed that a custody-seeking trend is growing among young fathers."

Being a father, mother and soldier in the military is not easy. Single parents face problems other soldiers never think about. Besides having to be on the job every day, they must pull CQ and field duty, make formations, stand inspections and be prepared to go overseas just like any other soldier. However, many soldiers, some estimated 13,000 enlisted soldiers and 1,800 officers who are sole parents, are doing just that.

Sports

Armchair Sports

Why not boxing?

By Tim Boivin

Armchair Sports this week will take a look at the boxing program, or the lack of one, at Fort Benning.

Three boxers from Fort Benning, two soldiers and one dependent, participate regularly in boxing cards at Comer Auditorium in Columbus. They fight under the guidance of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) and the Columbus Boxing Club. Two weeks ago they all won in their divisions in the Georgia State Golden Gloves Championships in Atlanta.

The boxers we are talking about are Anibal (Wally) Peniero, Tim Russell, and Sean Pruitt. They are now preparing for the Southern United States Golden Gloves Championships in Knoxville, Tenn., in March. What better kind of cornerstone could be laid down for a Fort Benning Boxing team than these three guys. It's a shame some of them may not get to go to the Southerns because they are boxing for themselves and not the Army.

Golden Gloves in doubt

Peniero is a quiet man not given to quick fits of anger. However, he is bothered by the prospects of not being able to go to the Southern Golden Gloves. He said, "Right now I am not sure if I am going to be able to make it. When I ask for special days off to go fight, the argument given against it is always the same; this is something I am doing for myself and not the Army. But the point is I would rather be boxing for the Army."

There may be many arguments against having a boxing team but there are three good arguments for having a team: Tim Russell, Wally Peniero and Sean Pruitt. It is understandable to have a basketball team, a softball team, a football team, and a soccer team but it is beyond understanding why there isn't a boxing team.

For some examples of boxers from the services who have done well just look at the 1976 Olympics. Howard Davis, Gold Medal winner, served in the Army. Leon Spinks, Gold Medal winner, served in the Marines. Right now at Fort Stewart there is a soldier named James Jones who is the third ranked amateur heavyweight in the country. At Fort Bragg Ed Green is the number one ranked welterweight.

But what about the Fort Benning soldiers? What if there is a possible Leon Spinks among us right now? Why do soldiers who want to box have to travel all the way across town to Comer Auditorium by the airport just to train, not to mention just to fight? Why, if the equipment is available to them, isn't there any recognizable authority to train them? The whys can go on forever but the problem is clear: There are soldiers out there who want to box but are running into a brick wall trying to.

Post script: Since the article that appeared in THE BAYONET last week two more soldiers have joined the Columbus Boxing team. Who says there aren't enough soldiers out there to form a team?

Next Week: Let's have a Volksmarch!

Stewart claims state title in rifle championships

Capt. Randy Stewart of the United States Army Marksmanship Unit (USAMU) outclassed the field to win the Georgia State Running Boar Championships held here Feb. 16 and 17.

Stewart scored 571 out of 600 in the Standard Olympic Runs for an eight point margin over second place finisher Harry Lucker of Columbus. Former national champion and recently retired Master Sgt. Charles Davis finished third with a score of 561.

Master Gunnery Sgt. Robert Partridge of the United States Marine Corps came back the second day of the match to win the Mixed Runs competition with an excellent score of 383 out of 400. Charles Davis finished a close second with a score of 375 and was followed by Sgt. Robert George of USAMU with a 372.

In team competition the USAMU squad of Capt. Stewart, Master Sgt. Martin Edmonson, SSgt. James Reiber and Sgt. George dominated both Standard and Mixed Runs with scores of 1,465 and 1,462 respectively.

Four new civilian national records were set by the Georgia Sportsman's Association in each event for both four and two men teams. The four man squads were composed of Harry Lucker and Charles Davis, both of Columbus, Bob Reiber of Stone Mountain and Ray Welch of Athens. Their scores were 1,428 in the Standards and 1,448 in the Mixed team matches.

Capt. Randy Stewart, United States Army Marksmanship Unit, scored 571 out of 600 to win the Georgia State Running Target Championship. Stewart is one of the top competitors in the event in the country and will be one of the favorites to win the National Championships to be held here May 8-11.

The new two man records were set by Lucker and Davis with 748 in Standard Runs and 745 in Mixed Runs.

Barracudas

Swim team does well on road

By Barry Cuda

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) Barracudas swim team has traveled every weekend in February. Seven Barracudas swam in the Groundhog A/B Invitational swim meet in Huntsville, Ala. Feb. 8/9.

Beth Ann Herold took three ribbons in the senior girls competition. She grabbed second place in the 200 meters B division individual medley (I.M.), seventh in the B division 100-meter-backstroke and a seventh in the A division 200-meter-freestroke.

Cackie Walters swam to seventh place in the 11/12 year old girls 100-meter B division I.M. Steve Latorre was the outstanding swimmer with the most improved times in the meet. Other swimmers competing were Valerie Carter, Berit Fagersten, Scott Kimsey and Beth McWaters.

Twenty three Barracudas combined to take 53 awards in the B/C Valentine Invitational meet Feb. 16 at the Montgomery, Ala. YMCA. All of the Barracudas improved their times in at least one event. The outstanding aquarians were Valerie Carter and Perry Parke.

Those who captured one or more ribbons were: eight and under; Hanna McNair, Starry Severn, Lyman King and Jonathon King; 10 and under; Joelle Carter, Kyle Abbott and Andy Erickson; 11/12 year olds; Valerie Carter, Beth McWaters and Perry Parke; 13/14 year olds; Terrell Grooms, Bill Herold, Steve Latorre and Lee Walters; and seniors; Beth Ann Herold and Scott Kimsey.

Other swimmers participating in the meet were Shannon Durham, Richard Edmondson, John Herold Raymond Jansco, Raymond King and Ted Severn.

Last weekend five Barracudas swam in a meet at the modern Martin Luther King Natatorium in Atlanta against 15 other teams. Beth McWaters achieved A division status in the 50 meter breast stroke and took fifth place in the B division event.

Competing in A division events, Berit Fagersten took fourth in the 100-meter-freestroke and third in the 50-meter-backstroke. Fifth place was awarded to David Christensen in the 50-meter-backstroke and he achieve AA division status in the 100-meter-I.M.

Competing in B division events, Beth Ann Herold took second place in the 100-meter-backstroke, fourth in the 100-meter-backstroke and sixth in the 500-meter-freestroke. Cackie Walters also participated and improved all her times.

Doughboys' finals have ups, downs

By Tim Boivin

The Doughboys split their final games of the regular season with the All-Air Force team Saturday and Sunday before heading into the TRADOC tournament at Fort Jackson this week.

In Saturday's game the Doughboys were literally run off the court while losing 98-74. Sunday, the Doughboys played a more patient style of basketball which was more to their liking and off set the speed advantage All-Air Force had while winning 79-76.

Saturday, All-Air Force used their superior speed and dominating bench strength to outrun and outgun the Doughboys. Doughboy's coach Oliver Green said, "We played their style of ball and let them dictate what we were going to do. We let them use their strengths and we had no business playing on the court the way we did."

The Doughboys were led by Fredrick Nelson's 25 points while guard Nat Harris pumped in 16 in a losing effort.

Sunday, the Doughboys turned things around and played up to their capabilities to squeeze out a victory over All-Air Force. The Doughboys were sparked in the first half by the return of flashy guard Robert Thomas.

Thomas brought the ball upcourt and would pull up at the free throw line and hit hoops. If the defense came out to meet him, Thomas would drive past them and either hit an easy lay-up or whip off a crisp pass for a layup by another Doughboy. Some of his passes were a bit too crisp since the other Doughboys missed them because they were surprised where the pass had come from. Thomas ended up with 10 of the first half points and countless assists.

The Doughboys could not pull away from All-Air Force despite the play of Thomas. Their biggest lead was only six points with five minutes left in the first half, 30-24. All-Air Force pulled within one at 36-35 with 30 seconds left and then the Doughboys lost the ball. All-Air Force committed a traveling violation and the Doughboys gained control at the baseline of their backcourt with three seconds left in the half.

Nelson went to inbound the ball and caught All-Air Force sleeping on the play as he threw a pass the length of the court to Anthony Chatmon. Chatmon layed the ball in for an easy basket and a 38-35 lead at halftime.

The Doughboys couldn't stretch their lead to more than six points in the second half but they never trailed. The pesky All-Air Force players kept giving it their all but a steal by Thomas with 20 seconds remaining sealed the victory for the Doughboys.

The Doughboys were led by Luke Fencher with 22 points, many of them from his favorite place on the floor approximately 25-30 feet away from the basket at a 45 degree angle. Nelson ended up with 19 points and Thomas finished with 18.

Now that the regular season is over, the Doughboys have set their eyes on winning the 16 team TRADOC tournament this week. The Doughboys should win the tournament if they play the way they are capable. The Doughboys want to have the big TRADOC trophy to place in their case next to the one they picked up this Christmas at Fort Rucker.

Green feels the Doughboys should do well at TRADOC. He said, "Fort Jackson, Fort Sill, Fort Dix, Fort Eustis and Fort Lee should provide the toughest competition for us. This doesn't mean we will take any team lightly. All our games will be tough."

Green feels the key to the Doughboys having a successful tournament lies in the play of the forwards. He said, "If Fencher and Melvin Hudson can really turn it on we can whale on the opposition. Also, the addition of Thomas will give us versatility at the guard position and allow us to alternate between three guards with Larry Varnedoe and Harris."

Green summarized his feelings before leaving for TRADOC by saying, "We will just have to play them one at a time, hope our players play their style and up to their capabilities and hope everyone hits their peak at the right time.

The Doughboy's guards, Nate Harris (4) and Larry Varnedoe (3), apply defensive pressure as their bench looks on in Sunday's game against the All-Air Force team.

Fish stories

A good lie takes practice

By Jim Porter

Lying is fast becoming a lost art and if it weren't for fishermen and politicians, it might completely fade away.

I was appalled the other day to hear my 11-year-old son telling one of his neighborhood friends about the two-pound bass that threw the hook on him on our last fishing trip. Needless to say, I've never lost any fish that didn't weigh at least four pounds. And since he's still in the water growing and gaining weight, I add a pound to him from time to time.

A good lie needs to be well prepared; first, to insure it's enjoyable to the audience, and second, to make it reasonably believable. It requires verification, ideally by a second party who is not accessible to the recipient of your tale. "Yeah, old John, nearly dropped his upper denture when that fish rolled up. He and I fought it together for over an hour until John got a cramp in his hand. I just couldn't hold that HAWG by myself. John would tell you all about it, if he were still here, God rest his soul."

The lie needs to have a bit of flamboyance and color so that it sticks with the recipient and will be passed on. Many a folk hero has gained his reputation in this manner. A good example of this technique is, "There I was, hanging by one shoelace from the pointer on the trolling motor and it running full speed. Old Iron Jaw was trying to pull me the rest of the way in and every time I'd get my head above water to call for help, he'd run under the boat and pull both loops of that line around my neck tighter. Finally the cuff of my free pants leg got caught in the trolling motor propeller and spread-eagled me completely, ripping the crotch completely out of my official Ray Say Scott Weekend Semi-Pro Leapin' Lunker jumpsuit. My boat partner, whose fishing instincts were razor sharp, even with his head in the beer cooler all day, immediately noted that something was wrong with the trolling motor and came to the rescue. After three hard heaves on the pull rope, he managed to get the trolling motor up and clear it of eight inches of blue jumpsuit material and a quarter pound of my leg. He then dutifully dropped it back into the water, pushed the go button and went back to the inventory of the beer box. Meanwhile, the trolling motor had come down in the general area once occupied by the seat of my jumpsuit, and..."

Stay fit with swim classes

By Richard E. Crotty

Can you swim? Do you want to be involved in a lifelong sport? Do you want to keep fit no matter what your age? Then the Masters Swim Program may be what you are looking for.

Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities Division is going to provide swimmers with the golden opportunity to compete with others in their own age bracket. USAIC is forming senior and masters swimming teams under the guidence of the AAU to compete in both classes.

If you are between the ages of 18 and 25 you can enroll in the Senior class. However, you can not be attending a high school or a college that sponsors a swim program. Competition in the Masters class begins at the age of 25 and continues in five year increments until age 79. Individuals 80 years of age or older swim in a single class. Competition is open in all classes such as the 50-meter-freestyle, 100-meter-freestyle and the 100-meter-breaststroke.

All active duty and retired military personnel, their dependents and Department of the Army civilians employed here are eligible for team membership. Practice sessions start at Briant Wells indoor pool from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. For further information contact SFC Ron Oldenburg at the pool or by phone at 545-5760.

Making Tracks

By Tom Breeding

Second looks

With a turnout of around 200 and a warm, sunny day for the occasion, the YMCA Runners Classic II turned out nicely. Bruce Skiles won the five-miler easily (what else is new?), with CW2 Ron Karpinski placing second in his age group and sixth overall. CTC Race Director Lt. Col. John Moore took third in his age group and 13th overall.

In the 10 mile, Capt. George Gilkes edged Paul Hendry for first, ad Capt. Scott Beard placed third in AG, 7th overall. Dr. Fred Dyer once again captured his age group title, and BAYONET 11B correspondent SFC Bob Kuwik took third in his AG.

SGM (ret.) John Lavoie is still the fastest man over 50 around here, but again, what else is new?

Last chance

The Dixie Beer bike and run funfest occurs tomorrow. All of us who were at the last one would hate for any of you who weren't to miss a time of great fun and free beer (soft drinks if you wish), not to mention the cameraderie of all those wonderful jocks. Last minute entrants may register at Dixie Beer Co., 4th Street off Victory Drive and behind the Farmer's Market Smorgasbord.

EVENTS:

9 a.m. - 5,000 Meter Open Run
9:15 a.m. - One Hour Bike Ride
10 a.m. - 3,000 Meter Run - Females Only
11:15 a.m. - Bike-Runner Team Event

Marine runs marathons

By Bob Kuwik

Capt. Val Lendaro, Marine Corps representative here, started running because of "peer pressure" toward physical fitness by his Marine buddies.

"The Marines are known for being in good physical condition," Val said, "and I had to live up to that." Val said he built up from a three-mile limit to his present record of 24 miles. "Being a life long athlete, it is fairly easy for me to stay in shape."

Due to an injury on his heel, the captain was out of action for two years but is now running four to six miles a day and totals about 35 to 40 miles a week. He added that he wants to build up his mileage and is working on that goal.

According to Val, the benefits he's received from running include being able to control his weight and finding it easier to cope with life. The only drawback he mentions is the injury to his heel but says he does his best to cope with the pain when he is running.

Val enjoys competing in races and has participated in the Faith School Run (32:38), the LaGrange Heart Run (42:50) and the Lite Run (41:52).

Val recalls being on board ship and continuing to run. "I don't like to run in circles but if that is the only way to train, I'm more than glad to do it," he explained. When the ship stopped at port in Greece, Val got off and ran a 24-mile marathon in Athens.

As for the future, Val plan on running the Marine Corps and New York City Marathons. He says he hopes to make getting older easier by staying in shape. "I plan on running the rest of my life," Lendaro said "Being a Marine is my first way of life and being a runner is my second way of life."

Benning to host Georgia Special Olympics

By Richard E. Crotty

Fort Benning will be the host for the 1980 Georgia Special Olympics March 7 and 8. Morale Support Activities Division is coordinating the games so that participants will be competing at Audie Murphy Gym, Briant Wells Fieldhouse and the Main Post Bowling Center.

In 1968 the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation created the Special Olympics. Since then it has become the largest program of sports training and athletic competition for the mentally retarded in the world. For people who are mentally retarded, sports and physical activity is the quickest and surest road to health, growth and self-confidence.

The mentally retarded have always been told, "You can't do it." The Special Olympics say, "You can do it. All you need is a chance to do it."

Each year from the community level all the way up to the national and international level, training programs and meets are instituted for these people who were never given a chance to succeed before. The mentally retarded have a chance through these activities to show their families and communities just how much they can accomplish. For them the Special Olympics is a new way to health and a new kind of joy.

The Fort Benning community welcomes the Special Olympics as it is a sport in it's most pure and true sense. The goal is not to win but to try; to experience, not to conquer. No time is too slow, no distance too small to earn a ribbon, a hug, a cheer or a sincere "well done." Special Olympics does not boast many broken records except those for courage, determination and sportsmanship.

Place the dates on your calender and come on out, even if it is just to cheer. Show your support. They need Special Olympics and Special Olympics need you.

Basketball will be played at Audie Murphy Gym from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day. The run, dribble and shoot will be held at Briant Wells Fieldhouse from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day. The bowling will be at the Main Post Bowling Center from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. each day.

Saluting: From antiquity to now an act of courtesy, respect

From the moment a person steps off the bus to begin basic training he is enveloped in the customs, courtesys and discipline needed to become a soldier in today's Army.

The new soldier is taught many things. However, one thing the new soldier isn't taught is the long tradition behind the various courtesys and customs that are a big part of his day-to-day life in the armed forces.

An example is the hand salute, one of the most basic lessons a new soldier is taught during basic training. A soldier is taught when, where, why and how to salute but he is never told why the hand salute (and not some other means) is used by the Army to show respect and how it developed into its present state.

Although it is not possible to give the precise origin of the hand salute, it is known that from the earliest times, and in many races, the right (weapon) hand has been raised as a greeting of friendship. The idea may have been to show that you weren't ready to use a rock or other more civilized weapon. Courtesy required that the inferior make the gesture first. Certainly, there is some connection between this old gesture and our present salute.

Many romantic 'origins' have been invented: for example, that it symbolizes the knight's gesture of raising his visor to reveal his identity as a courtesy on the approach of a superior. Another pretty myth is that the salute symbolizes a knight's shielding his eyes from the dazzling beauty of some high-born lady sitting in the bleachers of the tournament. (Why not say it symbolizes a frightened subordinate's throwing up a hand to keep from being backhanded across the jaw by a passing superior?)

The military salute has had many forms. At one time it was rendered with both hands. In old prints one may see left-handed salutes. In some instances, the salute was rendered by lowering the saber with one hand and touching the visor with the other.

The following explanation of the origin of the hand salute strikes me as being the most plausible. It was a long-established military custom for juniors to remove their headgear in the presence of superiors. In the British Army as late as the American Revolution a soldier saluted by removing his hat. With the advent of cumbersome headgear like the shako, busby and the bearskin which could not be readily doffed, the act of removing the hat degenerated into a gesture of grasping the visor. It finally became conventionalized into something resembling our modern hand salute.

This theory is substantiated by an entry in the order book of the Coldstream Guards, dated Sept. 3, 1745: "The men ordered not to pull off their hats when they pass an officer, or to speak to them, but only to clap up their hands to their hats and bow as they pass."

But only in some areas

Passed over officers get second chance

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—A DA board is slated to meet early next month to consider certain active duty reserve component officers for 'selective continuation,' DA officials announced Thursday.

The Secretary of the Army has begun a program to retain certain AUS officers who have been passed over twice for temporary (AUS) promotion to major or lieutenant colonel, officials said.

The March board will consider those officers passed over for the second time by the 1979 AUS Lieutenant Colonel board. These officers were originally scheduled for involuntary separation in January. They were granted a 60 day deferment, however, pending the start of the new program, officials explained.

Selection priority will be given to officers with specialties critical to the needs of the Army, officials said.

Those selected will remain on active duty as majors for three years or until they are eligible for retirement, whichever comes first. In cases where an officer would still not be eligible for retirement after the three years, an additional continuation may be requested, officials added.

Officers who are not selected for continuation will be involuntarily separated with readjustment pay not later than 30 days after notification of the board re-sults. Officials expect the board results to be announced at the end of March.

This is a strictly a voluntary program, a DA spokesman stressed. Officers wishing to be considered for continuation must submit a signed statement to their local MILPO or regional center, he said.

The program applies to Army promotion list, Chaplain Corps, Judge Advocate General Corps and Medical Department officers. Some of these officers, officials say, have already been involuntary separated. Some have applied for warrant officer appointment and some have reverted to enlisted status. These officers are eligible to apply for consideration by the board, officials said.

Officers reaching their 18 year mark before the board meets will be considered 'in sanctuary' and will not be considered by the board, officials said. They will remain on active duty until retirement. The same is true for officers who are considered by the board but who are not selected for continuation if they have completed 18 years of active federal service as of their adjusted release date.

Officials plan to extend the continuation policy to officers who are passed over for the second time for promotion to major or lieutenant colonel by 1980 selection boards.

The provisions of the first board, officials stressed, "should not be interpreted as applicable to earlier scheduled separations or as precedent setting for future boards."

"Selective continuation is an option exercised at the discretion of the Secretary of the Army to meet the special requirements of the Army in a specific grade for a given selection cycle. Selection criteria, period or terms of continuation may be modified in the future as dictated by the needs of the army," officials concluded.

Women must mask

HEADQUARTERS, U.S. ARMY FORCES COMMAND (FORSCOM), Fort McPherson, Ga. — The Surgeon General has determined that women must mask immediately upon any exposure to military smokes. Previous policy required immediate masking only when exposed to smoke agent HC. Possible harmful effects of certain hemical agents on a fetus, however, make the requirement for protection against exposure greater for women than for men. Except for HC, men must mask only if the smoke is dense, exposure is prolonged or the smoke causes difficulty breaking.

Perfect P.T. scores?

By Matthew Boison

Maxing the physical training (P.T.) test with a perfect score of "500" is every soldier's dream, but to Sp4 Michael F. Schmucki, it comes easy. Schmucki, 23, a member of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, has maxed every P.T. test he has ever taken.

"They used to compete me against the best man in different companies during basic training, and I beat them all," says Schmucki.

After completing basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Schmucki spent 11 months in Korea before being assigned to Fort Benning. "I'm from the north and it is unusual not to have snow for winter," says Schmucki.

Schmucki, a native of Connecticut, is a carpenter and is used to working with his hands. During his off-duty time, Schmucki uses his energy to restore a 1949 Chevrolet pickup truck. He's already invested $3,500 and two years work on this project.

Schmucki, who hopes to own his own racing parts store, is planning to go back to school after he leaves the Army. "I want to go to racing school and learn how to work on racing engines," says Schmucki. "I like everything that moves fast."

Open flights ready

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)—Routine space-available travel aboard MAC flights is now being offered on an equal basis regardless of rank, say Military Airlift Command (MAC) officials.

Feb. 1, space-a write-in privileges for senior officers ended.

The special write-in program, which was available to officers in grades 0-6 and above, was stopped because Congress directed an end to the program in the FY 80 defense budget.

Officials explained Feb. 1 was selected as the stop date to lessen disruption of travel plans.

International Day celebrated

By Debbie Harrison

"Girl Scout International Day" was celebrated at the Dependent Youth Activities gymnasium last Saturday by 350 girl scouts. Included in the gathering were scouts from Fort Benning and two troops from Columbus.

Eighteen Girl Scout Troops dressed in their favorite country's hand made costumes and performed song and dance routines before a capacity crowd. The special celebration was part of Thinking Days, a day founded by Juliett Low, the founder of Girl Scouts.

"Thinking Day lets the scouts experience the customs and festivals of countries around the world. Each scout troop prepared three food dishes from the land they represented and shared them with girls from other troops.

Fort Benning has observed International Day since 1973. Rita Butler, the resources and referral chairman, was the first to introduce International Day to the scouts. She originally was introduced to the idea by another Girl Scout council at Fort Rucker, Al. She said, "I felt it was an opportunity for the girls to learn and gather an insight into scouting."

Mrs. Addison D. Davis, the Fort Benning Girl Scout Board chairman, said, "The girls have been planning for this event for two or three months. To get ready for International Day the girl scouts talked to the Allied officers currently staying here to find out how each country actually celebrated their festivities."

ACS helps soldiers, families in need

By Tim Boivin

Mrs. Mary W. Behrend was added to the Army Community Service (ACS) staff recently as a social worker to fill the last vacancy left on the staff. ACS now has a comprehensive staff to help soldiers in need.

Capt. Frank Mastin, Jr., ACS chief, said, "We now oversee the social work services, emergency loans, the Community Life program, the Food Locker program, and the Big Brother program. We also provide information and possibly referral to other social agencies, hand out welcome packets and provide financial counseling and planning assistance."

Behrend worked at the Central State Hospital in Milledgeville, Ga., as a treatment team manager for the transitional living unit. She said, "The unit was designed to prepare long term institutionalized patients for their return to life in the outside community."

One of Behrend's personal goals in her new job is to develop protective services for battered spouses. She is also available for crisis intervention and short term counseling.

Rounding out the staff at ACS are; 2nd Lt. John Gronski, administrative officer; 1st Lt. Lesley Beckstrom, Army Emergency Relief (AER) officer; 1st Lt. Ann McMullen, AER assistant officer; Master Sgt. Alonzo H. Morris, Jr., NCOIC of ACS; Master Sgt. Jerry D. Holifield, Community Life program supervisor; Sp4 Tracy Richardson, social work specialist; Carol Sims, social services assistant and Margery Koper, AER accounting clerk.

ACS is currently surveying the Fort Benning community to find the needs of families with handicapped children and to meet them. The surveys are available in Community Life centers, family practice clinics and the pediatric centers.

Setting it straight

In last week's article on Article 15s we may have mislead some on a certain point. In the article we said the commander tells the soldier he has committed an offense under Article 15 and tells him what the punishment will be. We then stated that the soldier then has the option to accept or refuse the Article 15.

What we failed to mention is that the soldier has the right to seek legal counsel at that time and that he has a reasonable time before making his decision to the commander. However, the commander does not determine punishment for the suspected offense until all the facts and evidence have been presented.

Private recognized 62 years later

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — A former Army private finally received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism, almost 62 years after rescuing two wounded comrades during World War I. He braved a heavy bombardment of high explosives and gas shells to get the two soldiers to safety.

Col. Walter R. Collins, USMC (Ret.) was presented the cross by Gen. Volney F. Warner, commander in chief, U.S. Readiness Command, MacDill Air Force Base, Tampa, Fla., in ceremonies at the American Legion Hall, Pompano Beach, Fla., Feb. 15.

Collins was a 19-year-old private in the Army when he made the rescue. He was serving in France with the 1st Battalion, 165th Infantry, a unit of the New York National Guard's 42nd "Rainbow" Division.

According to the citation for America's second highest military medal, Collins was "the first to respond to a call for volunteers to carry a message through open terrain swept by machine gun fire and a heavy artillery bombardment of high explosives and gas shells."

"Although badly gassed, and at one time knocked down by the concussion of high explosive shells . . . Collins rescued two wounded comrades, carrying each in turn through the heavy bombardment to a position of safety in the town of Jonchey."

Collins refused medical aid and delivered the message although nearly disabled by mustard gas — a blistering agent — and almost exhausted by rescue efforts. His actions, according to the citation, helped his unit close up its military position without more loss of life.

Collins was recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross for his actions at Jonchey. The original recommendation, however, was downgraded to a Silver Star for heroism after being lost for several years. Not satisfied with the lower award, the former private asked the Department of the Army for a hearing to correct the error.

Since his only witness, an 86-year-old amputee, could not go to Washington to testify, Collins hired a camera crew to videotape the interview. The videotape was then presented to the Army Board for correction of military records.

Late last year, the Army notified Collins that his Silver Star would be upgraded to the Distinguished Service Cross.

Collins continues his ties with the "Rainbow" Division, serving as the division's Florida chapter president. Each year, he returns to the old battlefields of France to represent all surviving members of the division in ceremonies commemorating that World War I battle.

Jewish holiday to be observed

The Jewish Holy Days of Passover will be celebrated this year from sunset March 31 through sundown April 8.

The first two days of Passover and the last two days are days of religious obligation for personnel of the Jewish faith. Within the limits of military necessity, commanders will ensure that Jewish personnel are free to attend regularly scheduled religious services.

A liberal pass policy has been established by the Department of the Army. Commanders may grant passes to all Jewish personnel to attend religious activities in accordance with paragraph 10-2 reference B. Commanders should give special consideration to the matter of safe arrival of Jewish personnel at Sedar Services before sunset March 31, 1980.

For information regarding the schedule of Passover Observances in the Fort Benning/Columbus area, contact the Jewish Chaplain, Chaplain (Capt.) Martin J. Applebaum at 545-4878/2169.

Traffic tip

In accordance with Georgia code 68-1623 and USAIC regulation 190-5, the driver of a motor vehicle involved in an accident which results in the death or injury of any person or property damage will stop and render assistance or secure first aid if necessary and by the quickest means possible notify the police department (324-0211) or military police (545-5222/5223/5223).

Brushing, flossing important

Although I brush my teeth at least three times a day, I still have tooth decay. I'm beginning to wonder if my brushing is effective. Is there a recommended brushing method?

The point of a daily home oral hygiene program is to thoroughly remove plaque, the sticky, colorless adhesive film containing harmful bacteria that constantly coats the teeth, from all surfaces of your teeth. While you may be brushing your teeth properly, there are other factors to consider for complete oral care.

First of all, check to be sure your toothbrush is not worn. If your bristles are bent, frayed or broken, replace it. A worn brush cannot adequately remove plaque and bent bristles can harm your gums. It is a good idea to replace your toothbrush at least four times a year. The brush you use should have soft, end rounded bristles, a flat brushing surface, a straight handle and a head small enough to reach every tooth.

With regard to a recommended brushing method, the following is one that is currently being suggested for the removal of plaque:

1. Place the head of your toothbrush alongside your teeth with the bristle tips angled against the gum line.
2. Move the brush back and forth with short (half-a-tooth wide) strokes several times, using a gentle "scrubbing" motion.
3. Brush the outer surfaces of each tooth, uppers )nd lowers, keeping the bristles angled against the gum line.
4. Use the same method on all of the inside surfaces of your teeth, uppers and lowers, still using the short back and forth strokes.
5. Scrub the chewing surfaces of all the teeth, uppers and lowers.
6. For the front teeth, brush the inside surfaces of the upper and lower teeth by tilting the brush vertically and making several gentle up and down strokes with the "toe" (the front part) of the brush over the teeth and gum tissues.

Another important component in plaque removal is flossing. The only way to remove plaque and other debris from between the teeth, especially near the gum line where your toothbrush can't reach, is to floss.

Here's a flossing technique you might want to try. First, break off about 18 inches of dental floss and wind most of it around one of your middle fingers. Wind the rest of it around the same finger on your other hand to take up the floss as you use it. Using your thumbs and forefingers, guide about an inch of floss between the teeth. With a gentle sawing motion, insert the floss between your teeth, being careful not to snap it into the gums. Then, gently slide the floss into the space between the gum and the tooth and carefully scrape up and down against the tooth keeping the floss pulled against the tooth in a "C" shape. Repeat this process up and down on all your teeth.

Finally, it is a good idea to always use a fluoride toothpaste that has been accepted by the American Dental Association to help prevent decay. Studies show that fluoride toothpastes can help to prevent as much as 25-30 percent of the decay a child could get and is also of some benefit to adults.

Wife grateful

To the Editor:

I always hear about difficulties one has in the service. (I was to find out different.)

My husband, at 28, enlisted in the service. He left on Dec. 27 to go to Fort Benning and basic training started on Jan. 10. My young son and I stayed in Kerrville, Tex. and we were both having a difficult time adjusting without Daddy! We decided to leave for Fort Benning on Jan. 7. I had gotten my I.D. card in Fort Sam Houston and they explained the CHAMPUS program.

When we arrived in Columbus, there were signs everywhere directing us to Fort Benning. I was given a folder at the Welcome Center that completely explained everything. I was directed to Housing Referral and they were very helpful. I then went to the Red Cross and was given a number where I could reach my husband. I then went to the hospital where medical cards and files were made and an appointment for my son the same day.

I later went up to see my husband in training and I was allowed to visit (this was all in a matter of days two and three) without any difficulties. I have been allowed to come by on Friday evenings and it has been easier for my son and I to adjust to living on our own.

His first sergeant and drill sergeant both took the time to introduce themselves and see how everything was at home.

I have only been an Army wife for a month and a half but I think the service makes every effort to help the service and his family. I have only good things to say about the Army.

Mrs. Diane Bell

Traffic slow

To the Editor:

I must travel nearly the entire length of the Lindsay Creek Bypass each morning to get to Fort Benning and I am appalled at the number of drivers who seem to be "unconscious." Each morning I must follow those in the passing lane who are intent on causing the largest traffic tie-up possible. This morning it was my misfortune to get behind one driver who was drinking his morning coffee, munching a doughnut and traveling 45 miles per hour in the left lane!!

While I am not advocating speeding in any way, these people need to be made aware that the law provides that you shall keep right except to pass. It is apparent that many of these "slowpokes" probably got their license by mail. Some of them will not get over no matter what you do and cause people to take chances by passing on the right.

Maybe the Columbus police and MPs could join together to monitor the traffic each morning and afternoon and give tickets to those offenders; a few dollars out of the pocketbook might just wake some people up.

Tara Morgan

Doors broken

To the Editor:

On Saturday, March 3, the front door on my Fort Benning government quarters would not work and the back door was not working. The locking mechanism had frozen to the door that serves as a fire exit to the back in case of an emergency.

I called the emergency work order section and spoke to a Mr. King who told me that there was no one on duty that knew how to fix a door. I told him that my wife was nine months pregnant and the doctor had put her on bed rest so she would not have the baby early and she was in no condition to use a window. Mr. King hung up on me.

On Monday, March 5, I talked to WO-1 Epperson of the work order (Engineers) section who told me that the blocked door was not an emergency work order. He quoted from DA PAM 420-6 that an emergency work order is defined as: protection of health and safety. I agreed with that for the blocked door sparked great concern for the health and safety of my family. Mr. Epperson also stated that, by the regulation, the respond time to an emergency work order is 72 hours but he also stated that they do take care of them faster. I told Mr. Epperson that if a fire marshall would tell me that the blocked door was not a fire and safety hazard I would concede to his views. Mr. Epperson asked me if I was so concerned about the door being a hazard, why didn't I go to the outside of the back door and cut the screen on the screen door, unlatch the screen door and see if I could fix the locking mechanism myself. Good point, but I give my housing allowance (as rent) for the comfort and security of the post housing, not to fix the house myself. I also did not want to ask the engineer warrant officer the question that if a locking mechanism is broken from one side, it is probably broken from the other side. So, I went home, cut a small hole in the screen of the screen door and took a coat hanger and unhooked the latch on the screen door and checked the outside (reverse side) of the door mechanism. As I thought, it was broken. I had put an axe next to the door so in case of fire or emergency we might be able to chop the door down.

Mr. Epperson told me that the emergency work crews were working on heating and sewers that weekend. This is good, but, after the heating and the sewer should come my door.

Mr. Epperson told me that the cost of sending out a repairman is $25 to $38 dollars. I am not rich but I will gladly pay $25 to $38 to get the doors fixed, for my front porch handle fell apart Tuesday, March 4, and now both doors are blocked.

When I talked to the workman (Mr. King) this week he did not log my work order or make any note that I had a problem. After calling 117 times to a busy signal, I went down and put in a work order on Monday for the back door and Wednesday, March 5, for the front door. But for now, I still take garbage out the back window and groceries in the front window but I am glad my toilet works.

Music Center

To the Editor:

Constantly we read about the unused athletic and recreational equipment offered to the soldiers of Fort Benning. But what we never read about is the unused equipment at the Main Post Music Center. One reason may be because it is rarely open. Although we use the athletic and recreational facilities here on post, we would also like to enjoy the facilities offered at the music center. It would seem logical that the hours of operation would coincide with the free hours of a soldier (normally after 6 p.m.). Too many times many of our friends, or ourselves, have walked to the center during its posted hours, only to find it locked with no alternate hours posted. On the door is now posted a sign stating that the music center would be closed until further notice, signed by a Lt. Col. Crotty. Can this be explained? Some of us here, who are not in the Army band, would like to put our musical talents to good use and not have them dwindle away because we are unable to practice. For those who insist that we should buy our own instruments and practice in our barracks rooms, try to store a piano in your wall locker! If the problem lies in that no one wants to monitor the center, we would gladly volunteer a few hours each night or weekend so that others might be able to enjoy the music center on Main Post.

General to visit Benning

Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., Army vice chief of staff, will arrive at Fort Benning Tuesday for a four-day visit. He is scheduled to speak to BIOCC and IOBC students Friday at 10 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

He will also be the keynote speaker at the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of United States Army (AUSA) spring membership meeting that evening.

According to an AUSA spokesman the meeting will begin with a social period from 7-8 p.m. in the main officer club room. The buffet dinner will start at 8 p.m. in the supper club. All AUSA members and their guests are invited. Dress will be coat and tie. Tickets, at $8 each are available from Col. Charles Thebaud (retired), 571-2183 or on post from the deputy post commander's office, Building 35, 545-5121 and in the Protocol office, 545-1516 in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Battlefield commission

While here, Vessey will be briefed on the latest development in infantry combat training, weapons and equipment. He will also observe training in the 1st ITB and the 197th Infantry Brigade. He will then be flown to Fort Rucker, Ala. for a one day visit.

A native of Minnesota, Vessey enlisted in the Minnesota National Guard in May 1939 and was called to active duty in February 1941. He rose to the rank of first sergeant before receiving a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant of Field Artillary at the Anzio Beachhead on May 6, 1944.

Throughout all of World War II he served with the 34th Infantry Division fighting in campaigns in North Africa and Italy.

The early postwar years brought several tours of duty at Fort Sill, Okla., with the 18th Field Artillary Battalion, with the staff and faculty of the Field Artillary School and as a student at the school.

Much of his service has been with combat divisions. In addition to his long World War II service with the 34th Division, he was a field artillary battery commander and staff officer with the 4th Infantry Division in Germany 1951-1954, a field battalion commander with the 3rd Armored Division in Germany 1963-1965, the Division Artillary executive officer and a battalion commander with the 25th Division in Vietnam 1966-1967, and the Division Artillary commander and division chief of staff with the 3rd Armored Division in Germany 1967-1970. He commanded the 4th Infantry Division (Mech) at Fort Carson, Col. 1974-1975.

In September 1975, he returned to Washington to become the Army's deputy chief of staff for operations and plans. In October 1976, he was sent to Korea as commander-in-chief of the United Nations Command; commander, U.S. Forces, Korea; and commanding general, Eighth U.S. Army. In November 1978 he also became the first commander-in-chief of the newly formed Republic of Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command, serving in this position until he assumed his present position last July.

Decorations

Vessey's military decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, The Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, four awards of the Air Medal, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, the Army Commendation Medal with V device, the Purple Heart, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm, the Presidential Unit Citation, and a unit award of the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Palm. He also wears the Army Aviation Badge.

Vessey will be accompanied to Benning by his wife, the former Avis Funk of Minneapolis, Minn.

Kids hold primary

By Dave Bristow

Students in the 4th and 5th grades acted as presidential campaign managers last week while their classmates throughout Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School cast secret ballots for the nominee of their choice, as the school held their own presidential primary.

The program which enables children to do all this is "Project Search." This program is set up for the Fort Benning dependents' school system for the academically gifted children.

The children have all been actively involved in the presidential primary for weeks. They have been closely following current events, watching television news programs, clipping newspaper articles and studying the issues of the nominees. Additionally they made their own campaign speeches, campaign posters, hats and buttons.

Elected campaign managers traveled to different classrooms, informing others as to where their candidates stood on important issues such as inflation, energy, military defense and unemployment.

Vicki Anderson, supervisor for "Project Search," talked about the program. "People in the administration here decided it was time Fort Benning made an attempt to meet the needs of these students. This is the first time to my knowledge that something like this has been done. The children come in everyday and share things with you that they have read in the newspaper or that they have discussed with their parents or have seen on television. To help get them more interested in current events, to learn a little bit more about their government and the history of our country we decided that even though they were not of voting age they could participate in a primary in some way, shape or form. Now they are very much caught up in it. They are influencing their parents instead of their parents influencing them. So we're real excited about it."

Anderson went on to say, "Everything's been going very well. We've had the cooperation of all the teachers in the building. The 'Project Search' students have been working hard on this since January. They've had to do a great deal of research to make their speeches because everything in the speech has to be true. They cannot have opinions of their own. It's something they had to get out of the newspapers, TV, news programs, magazines and so forth. Then they bring in their information and we sit down and go over it. We take out things that are strictly opinions of reporters and so on. The children then created an outline, trying to include in the outline the candidate's qualifications, his experience and his reasons for wanting to be president. Also, the candidate's beliefs on the different issues.

Michael Williams, a fifth grader who campaigned for Jimmy Carter, said, "I think lots of people will definitely vote for Carter. I told everyone about the Iran crisis, the troops in Afghanistan. He sent war ships to the Persian Gulf. That's why he can't go on the campaign trail right now, because he's so busy."

Another campaign manager, Tony Cruz, campaigned for John Connally and said, "I told the teacher I wanted to campaign for Connally because I saw him when he came to Columbus and gave a speech at the Iron Works. I got his autograph. I went to the library and found out he used to be Secretary of the Navy and did a lot of things. I've gone to all the classes from the kindergarten on up. I think everyone will vote for Connally."

Third grader Amy DiGregorio exclaimed, "Others tried to get me to vote for them. But Tony's speech was good. Tony's got better support. I'm voting for Connally."

"Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, Ted Kennedy, who should I vote for?" This was the question of the hour as the time for casting their secret ballots drew to an end, wrapping up weeks of classroom debate.

So who was the winning candidate after all the votes were in? Jimmy Carter, by a wide margin, with Ronald Reagan as a distant second.

Soldiers on TDY must pay to eat

WASHINTON (ARNEWS) — People on TDY receiving per diem must pay the per diem surcharges when buying meals in Army dining facilities.

A recent IG investigation found that several Active Army and Reserve Component personnel had made false statements when they failed to follow these procedures.

According to DA officials, an officer or civilian signing the cash meal payment sheet in any army dining facility must enter the per diem surcharge in the surcharge column. The person should then tell the head count of his TDY per diem status an pay the meal rates listed below:

| | Meal charge | Per diem surcharge | Total cost |
|---|---|---|---|
| Breakfast | $ .70 | 1.00 | 1.70 |
| Lunch | 1.40 | 2.00 | 3.40 |
| Dinner | 1.40 | 2.00 | 3.40 |
| Brunch | 1.50 | 2.00 | 3.60 |

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Opportunity open in Army

When a soldier first comes on active duty he usually looks at himself being at the bottom of the ladder with little chance of reaching the top. However, the Army, unlike many other careers, offers limitless opportunities for anyone willing to work their way to the top no matter what their nationality, race or ethnic background or even their sex.

Today the Army is truly an equal opportunity employer but it wasn't always that way, according to CSM Freddie J. Weston Jr., 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) sergeant major. "When I first came in the Army back in 1956, I saw very few blacks in leadership positions," Weston said.

Weston, who has earned the Bronze Star with 1st OLC, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with six OLC, Purple Heart and Good Conduct Medal with 7th Award, has served through some difficult times for minorities during his 24 years on active duty. "Black soldiers used to have a difficult time getting good housing," he said. He explained that blacks were sometimes forced to live in sub-standard segregated housing but "now that has changed."

"Things started to change in 1962 after President John Kennedy instructed commanders to seek out the problems facing minorities and to do something to solve them," explained Weston.

CSM Joe E. Kings Jr., Martin Army Hospital sergeant major, agrees that "things have changed for the better in the Army." "In the early days blacks were put into the transportation, supply, food service or infantry MOS but over the years I have seen many black soldiers move into higher echelon positions," Kings said.

Kings started out as an E-1 in 1955 and has served in many positions including platoon sergeant and first sergeant in addition to his present assignment as the hospital sergeant major during his 24 years on active duty. He has earned the Bronze Star with two OLC, the Meritorious Service Medal, Joint Service Commendation Medal with one OLC, Army Commendation Medal with three OLC, the Good Conduct Medal — eighth award, the National Defense Service Medal, the Expeditionary Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal, the Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star, the RVN Honor Medal — second class, the Combat Infantry Badge, the Master Parachutist's Badge, the Pathfinder Badge, the RVN Racial Development Service medal — second class and the RVN Master Parachutist's Badge.

"Black History Week" (Feb. 24-Feb. 29) is beneficial because it gives the young soldiers a chance to see what blacks have accomplished," explained Kings. "Black History Week is very beneficial because it provides a forum for people to learn about blacks and their heritage," remarked Col. James T. Bradley, Director of Plans and Training here.

"Equal rights legislation has done a lot for the black soldier," said Bradley. He explained the equal opportunity policy blacks now enjoy has been accomplished through changes that have taken place not only in the Army but in society as well. "When I was here in 1951 as a second lieutenant, about the only place a black soldier could go 'down on the strip' (Victory Dr.) was to a used car lot or a gas station," said Bradley. "Now, of course, that has changed because blacks can go just about anywhere or buy anything they can afford on Victory Dr."

Bradley, like Weston and Kings, has seen many changes in Army policy during his 29 years in the Army. During his career, Bradley has earned the Silver Star, the Combat Infantry Badge — second award, Master Parachutist's Badge, DA Staff Identification Badge, Joint Staff Identification Badge, Legion of Merit with third OLC, Meritorious Service Medal — second award, the Distinguished Flying Cross with one OLC and the Bronze Star.

Bradley, Weston and Kings are successful soldiers and leaders and are prime examples of what a soldier can do if he puts his mind to it, regardless of his racial background, thanks to the Army's Equal Opportunity Program.

"Time, education and the efforts of many people have brought about many changes and for the most part, eliminated 'official discrimination' in the Army" ... CSM Freddie J. Weston Jr., 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate).

"The Army is what you make of it now. The opportunitys are there, you just have to go out and get them, no matter whether you are black or white" ... CSM Joe E. Kings Jr., Martin Army Hospital sergeant major.

"Awareness, appreciation and understanding are the three key words when trying to eliminate racial discrimination" ... Col. James T. Bradley, Director of Plans and Training here.

First two XM-1 tanks roll off line

LIMA, Ohio (ARNEWS) — With the breaking of a bottle of champagne over the bore evacuator, Julia Abrams, wife of the late Gen. Creighton Abrams, christened the new XM 1 tank 'Abrams'.

The 'Abrams', the Army's new main battle tank, is the first entirely new tank to be produced in the last 30-years.

The two tanks that rolled off the production line are the first of 110 tanks approved for this year and the first of the 7,000 planned for the next eight years.

The 'Abrams' tank is designed to replace the M60 series battle tank the Army is currently using.

The new tank features a 1500-horsepower turbine engine, double that of the older model M60's 750 horsepower diesel engine.

The turbine is capable of operating on a wide range of fuels including diesel and certain grades of jet fuel. The engine is smokeless and does not require an oil change.

The tank features a low silhouette, separation of crew fighting compartment from fuel tanks and on board ammunition compartments.

The tank has a 105mm gun which will be replaced on the tanks being produced after August 1984. The tanks built after 1984 will have te German made 120mm smoothbore cannon. Then tank also uses a new M240 machine gun which fires te 7.62mm amunition. The weapons system on he later model XM1s will bethe same as the German Leopard 11 tanks.

Army decides on IFV/CFVs

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — DA announced Tuesday at the decision to buy 100 Infantry and Cavalry Fighting Vehicles (IFV/CFV). These will be the first production models of the new fighting systems.

The first fighting vehicles are expected off the assembly line in May 1981.

Of the 100 vehicles, 75 will be the IFV and 25 the CFV. The new vehicles are designed to replace the M1 13A1 in mechanized infantry and armored cavalry units in the fighting vehicle role.

Both vehicles have a two-man turret which mounts a 25mm cannon, a coaxially mounted 7.62mm machine gun and a two-missile tow launcher. They have a 500-horsepower turbocharged diesel engine which gives them a top speed of more than 40 mph.

The IFV carries a driver, commander, gunner and six infantrymen who can fire modified M16 rifles through the six firing ports at targets to the sides and rear. The CFV carries a five-member scout crew.

CG's message

Throughout the years we have given assistance to members of our Army family when they have been confronted with financial emergencies. In the last twelve months the local Army Emergency Relief office provided over $201,000 in loans and grants to 1,036 active and retired military personnel and dependents. Undoubtedly increased demands will be made on AER in 1980 due to inflation.

This continued financial support for our Army family is made possible only by your contributions to the Army Emergency Relief Fund. I urge each of you to be generous in your support of the AER Fund Campaign which will be conducted during the period March 1-April 17.

Policeman teaches children here

Four-year-old Jimmy Jones comes home from school and finds his mother having convulsions in the kitchen. Alertly he picks up the phone and dials the emergency number posted near the phone. Minutes later an emergency crew arrives and saves Mrs. Jones' life.

Jimmy became a hero because he remembered what Sgt. Friendly said in his last presentation at school about what to do in case of an emergency and remaining calm.

The Sgt. Friendly program is an important part of the Officer Friendly program that originated in Chicago in 1966. It began as a cooperative effort between the Chicago Police Department, Board of Education and the Sears-Roebuck Foundation and has been adopted by police departments across the country.

SSgt. Ronald Hiles of the Provost Marshall's Crime Prevention section was selected to visit schools here as Sgt. Friendly three times a year. Last week he was assisted by Sp4 Doris Martinez of the Traffic Regulation Reinforcement Office when he visited Patch School for pre-school age children.

On his first visit to a school, Sgt. Friendly talks about a policeman's jobs and responsibilities. He also emphasizes the importance of using safety habits whether they are walking, riding on a bicycle or in a car.

During his second visit he discusses what to do in case of an emergency and stresses the importance of knowing their full name and address. Sgt. Friendly also talks about the use of fingerprints and how they are taken. He then issues fingerprinted identification cards and swears the children in as Military Police partners.

On the final visit Sgt. Friendly gives the children a tour of a patrol car and demonstrates how to use the flashing lights, siren and radio. The children are then issued a Sgt. Friendly badge and other awards.

Hiles said, "The program is in its second year at Patch School and I find it rewarding because it has a strong impression on the children."

Hiles hopes to expand the program to include kindergarteners next year.

Spring delayed

March storms in like a lion — A blanket of snow covered Fort Benning and the Columbus area last Sunday as many people found themselves indoors to stay for much of the weekend. It was the first snow of the year for Columbus, as children could hardly wait to play in the winter wonderland. Facility engineers and military police alike moved quickly spreading salt and sand to keep the streets safe and the traffic moving.

German Volksmarch arrives at Benning

By Tim Boivin

Germany in the summer: The grass is green and the air has that warm summer flow and scent to it. You grab the wife and kids, pack them into the car and head out to participate in that great getaway, the Volksmarch.

Does that bring back fond memories to you? If it does then you may be interested in Maj. (ret.) Emerson Addington's idea. Maj. Addington wants to hold Volksmarches in the Fort Benning and Columbus area.

Volksmarches have arrived in America. The American Volkssports Association (AVA) is the sanctioning body and currently has 25-30 clubs under its' wing.

For those of you who don't understand what a Volksmarch is, just picture a nice, leisurely, non-competitive stroll or run through some scenic surroundings. The courses may vary but one thing remains the same. That is the joyous feeling of enjoying the outdoors and meeting new friends.

This is a great idea for anybody. For those of you who had a tough time passing that last P.T. test, what better way can you think of than an enjoyable stroll every once in a while to make that next test easier.

For those of you who are bored with barracks life and are longing to meet new people, how about mingling with the crowd around one of the refreshment stands along the route. You never know who you may meet.

What about the heads of families out there who keep saying that this is the weekend we'll do something with the kids but never get around to doing it. This is something the whole family can enjoy and you won't have to blow a lot of money on gas getting there.

There is a fee for entering which covers the cost ofthe medal or patch which every Volksmarcher who finishes receives. People collect the patches for a variety of reasons, foremost of which is their beautiful designs. The design of the patches changes with every Volksmarch.

The main goal of Volksmarches are to let people see the various sights around them that they otherwise would not have noticed had they not participated.

The Volksmarch sounds like a good idea for those persons around here who aren't excited by fun runs and the such. To get the Volksmarch off the ground Maj. Addington is going to need some help. If you are interested in helping organize Volksmarches around here then give Maj. Addington a call at 568-1235.

Monez takes honors

Petite Karen Monez of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit walked off with all the honors in rifle competitions held last weekend at Fort Benning.

Last year's World Champion, Monez set four new records in three days, and won handily in the three different championships fired on Feb. 29-March 2. Her score of 1,190 points out of a possible 1,200 raised the record by one point which was formerly held by Olympic Gold Medalist Lones Wigger. Her other records came in standing with 392 points, a new womens record, 398 kneeling which tied an existing record, and finally a score of 391 out of 400 in air rifle competition was a new womens record in addition to being the winning score for the match.

In the third championship, Karen traded shot for shot with shooting great Lones Wigger in the 80 shot Indoor Rifle Conventional Sectional Champion, an event which will be fired at several locations throughout the United States with the highest scores being awarded the Indoor National Smallbore Rifle Championship. After a total of 80 shots down range, both shooters had scored 799 points out of 800. In the tie breaking procedure that followed, Karen Monez was awarded the championship because of a higher standing score, 200 to 199 for Wigger.

In other competition over the weekend, three time National Pistol Champion Bonnie Harmon won easily as he scored 2,646 points in three gun pistol competition. Harmon put together individual scores of 879-39X in .22 caliber, 877-47X in Center Fire and 890-52X in .45 caliber. In team competition the U.S. Army "Blue" squad of Harmon, James Laguana, Tom Wood, Roger Willis, Al Rodriquez and Gary March combined their scores to win all four team titles.

Next weekend, March 14-16, Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the 1980 Interservice Trap Championship. All of the major service teams ae expected to be on hand for the matches and the general public is invited to observe. Shooting will begin daily at 0800 hours at USAMU's Trap and Skeet fields near Hook Range.

Boxing

Benning fighter on way to Golden Gloves

A crowd of about 500 people came out to Comer Auditorium recently to watch the Columbus Boxing Team compete with five other teams in a night of bouts.

Columbus ended up winning four fights and losing three. There were 15 bouts in all matching up fighters from six teams.

Columbus' Jeff Belflowers scored a technical knockout over Lamar Hinson. Ray Juhan of Columbus won in a decision over L.C. Crowder and David Lee also decisioned Ricky McCurry. Barry Nifone won in a decision over Joe Tillery and Darrish 'Sweet Pea' Brumbage won a decision over Johnny Lomas. The 'Sweet Pea' and Lomas bout was the most exciting of the night as both fighters boxed excellently throughout the fight.

Jeff Blalock of Columbus lost a decision to Chris George and Fort Benning's Tim Russell lost in a decision to Chris Neese. In the final bout of the night Brinson Harley of Columbus lost in a decision to Willie Ross.

A little good came out of last week's Armchair Sports article dealing with boxing for Wally Peniero. Wally said he will be able to go to the Southern Golden Gloves in Knoxville, Tenn. Wally said his commanding officer became receptive to his need to train for the Southerns after reading Armchair Sports. That's part of the battle the boxers have won. Now if they could get a team going on post they would have a much easier time with training than they do by training over at Comer Auditorium on the other side of Columbus.

Bowling rolloff set

Soldiers wanted for squad

So you think you can bowl a mean game! You dazzle your buddies with the spin on your ball and they can't figure out how you always seem to win(never mind that you keep score and they don't know how to). Well, here's your chance to do try to qualify for the Fort Benning bowling squad that will go to TRADOC in April.

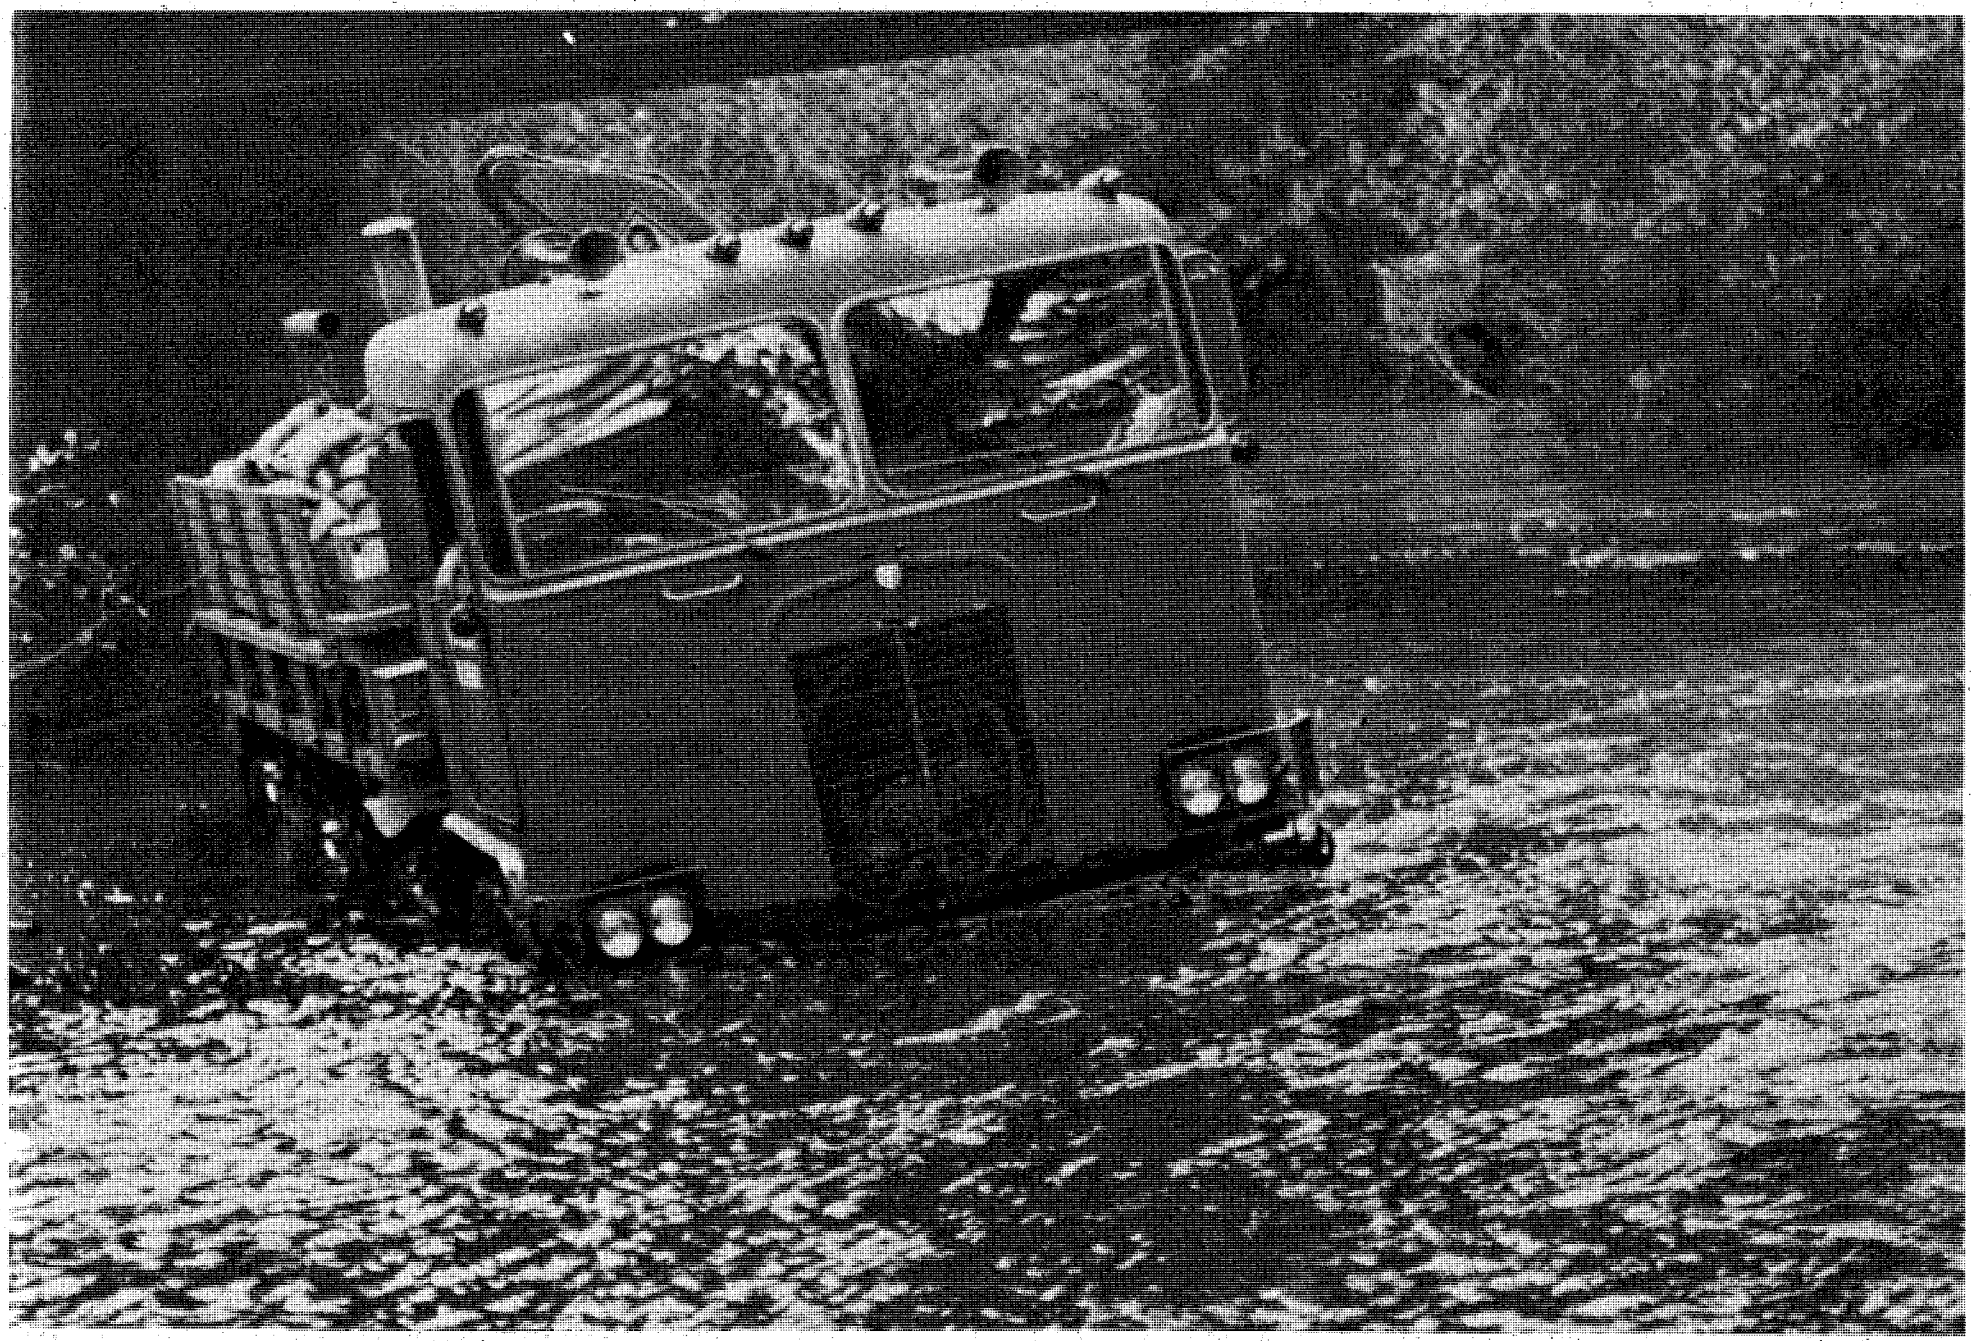
Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring a rolloff for men and women active duty service members to decide the four bowler squad that will be sent to Fort McClellan for the TRADOC tournament. The rolloff will be held at 1:30 p.m. March 18, 19 and 20 at the Main Mall Bowling Center located in Bldg. 9232.

Registration for the rolloff will be held until 12 p.m. (noon) March 18. Prospective bowlers will be required to sign an entry form stating that they will be available for the bowling during both the qualifications and the TRADOC tournament on April 12-18.

During the qualifications bowlers will bowl six games each on the 18th and the 19th. After those 12 games the 20 bowlers with the high total pin fall scratch will advance to the qualification finals on the 20th.

Once at the finals the bowlers will roll six more games. The two men and two women who have the high total pin fall scratch for all 18 games that were bowled during the qualifications will make the Fort Benning bowling squad.

So if you think you are good enough to make the team get out and sharpen your skills. Make sure that you will be available for the TRADOC tournament in April.



The High Mobility Tactical Truck fords a 40-inch stream. The added sandbags give the added weight to max the 10-ton carrying limit.

Infantry Board testing

5-ton cargo truck tried here

By Billy A. Arthur

Historically, the Infantry Board has been well-known for its operational tests of infantry weapons and the infantryman's individual equipment and less well-known for its vehicle testing. But it is a fact that the board has tested many vehicles, including a down-and-dirty look at the jeep after World War II and an operational test of the Gamma Goat in 1966. So, the recent test of the new High Mobility Tactical Truck was not as unusual as it might seem at first glance.

The new five-ton truck has high ground clearance and was designed to haul cargo into the battle area. It is equipped with an on-board crane and a side-mounted winch, and all-wheel drive for mobility. Under the board's supervision, representative soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) and the 36th Engineer Group used the truck in a series of mobility and cargo-handling exercises to obtain data to be used in evaluating the truck's performance.

In the mobility exercises a Gamma Goat was used as a control vehicle, with both vehicles being driven over a cross-country course in a follow-the-leader fashion. On the course drivers encountered mud, loose sand, forward and side slopes, ditches, fordable streams and obstacles. The drivers commented that both vehicles were able to traverse the course without any problems. Sp4 Roger Mitchell, 608th Ordnance Company, stated that driving the course to compare the vehicles was not only an interesting experience but good training in the techniques of cross-country driving. Another driver, Sp4 Sidney Hale, B Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, added, "It was a heck of a lot of fun, too."

The board's test manager, SFC Tom Dence, explained the cargo trials, "We used typical soldiers to load and unload various mixtures of ammunition on pallets using the standard 5-ton, M813A1 Truck for comparison purposes; we timed the trials and watched for human factors problems."

SFC Thomas M. Washington, test NCO in charge of daily operations, said that the loaders felt that the standard truck was somewhat easier to unload because its bed is lower than the new truck's.

All of the data collected by the board has been forwarded to the Infantry School for evaluation and use in preparing an infantry position on the new truck.

Washington added, "I was surprised to be assigned to test a cargo truck, but it was interesting and educational. Both the 197th Brigade and the 36th Engineer Group troops really did a good job and received excellent training in return for their efforts."

Sp4 Mitchell gives directions to Sp4 Sidney Hale from the bed of the truck, Hale uses the on-bed crane to unload a spool of wire.

72nd Engineers go airborne

By Mark Cauthen

Members of 2nd Platoon, 72nd Engineer, 197th Infantry Brigade (SEP), showed that there is more to being a Combat Engineer than bridge building and demolition.

The exercise began with platoon members learning the ins and outs of sling loading on a helicopter. Afterwards the men flew to a training site where they practiced Airmobile tactics in securing the landing zone.

After completing the airmobile training the helicopters were rigged with rappeling lines and for the next two hours the men practiced air assault techniques. For many of the soldiers this was the first time they had tried rappeling from a helicopter. The rappeling was done with and without gear from heights of 50 to 100 feet. From the rappeling site the platoon moved to another training site using land navigation techniques. The day ended with some NBC training and learning how to set up an ambush.

The combat engineer has a dual purpose; engineer and infantry. For two days the 2nd Platoon recently concentrated on training for their infantry related tasks. During the two days the platoon covered a wide range of tasks including, air mobile and air assault operations, NBC training, land navigation and even river raft operations.

The second day of training began with the platoon making a five mile river recon in a raft. After completing the five miles the men roadmarched to a minefield training site and after completion of some training on mines, they marched back to the raft and navigated down the river to a predetermined point. They were then lifted by helicopter back to Kelly Hill ending two days of hard training.

"This exercise proved we could perform a wide range of jobs under combat conditions and perform them well," said Platoon Sgt. Roger K. Garner.

"Some of the men may have been a little nervous about the rappeling but they all did really fine," said 2nd Lt. Glen A. Hollingsworth, 2nd Platoon leader.

97th holds cookoff

Patriots' chef wins at Brigade

By John W. Turner

The 197th Infantry Brigade recently held a cookoff involving cooks from eight separate units of the brigade.

Each man prepared an entire meal on his own and then was judged by a panel of judges to determine the overall winner. Contestants participating in the event are: Sp4 Jerry L. Harris, Company B Support Battalion; Sp5 John Barker, Headquarters Company 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry; Sp5 Paul J. Lott, Headquarters Company 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; PFC Calvin Fitzhugh, Headquarters Company 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry; Sp4 Stanley Kremkowski, 72nd Engineer Company; Sp5 Earnest Hawkins, Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery; PFC Jerry Mariani, Troop A 15th Cavalry; and Sp4 Lawerence F. Swan, Headquarters Company 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

Mrs. Lois Grange presents the First Place Trophy to Sp5 John Barker, HHC 1/58 Infantry, in the 197th Infantry Brigade Cookoff. He won the event in competition with seven cooks representing the Brigade.

These men were judged in the competition by Mrs. Lois Grange, wife of Post Commander Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr.; Col. and Mrs. Michael F. Spigelmire, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep); Maj. and Mrs. Loren Mcanally, S-4, 197th Infantry Brigade; CSM Gerald Mckinley, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, and Cheryl Davidson, a home economist from the Alabama Power Company.

Each contestant prepared the same meal of baked ham, canned sweet potatoes, buttered broccoli and a side dish of his own choice. They were judged on a scale of one to ten for this portion, as well as on eye appeal, taste, table appearance and chef appearance.

"This was quite a job by these young men," said Col. Spigelmire. "Their supervisors should be very proud."

After everyone involved enjoyed a great meal the winners were announced. The first place winner was the Patriots' own Barker. The runner-up was Kremkowski and third place went to Mariani.

As the winners were announced they were presented a trophy by Lois Grange.

"The food was excellent and I really enjoyed eating in the mess halls," said Mrs. Grange.

Also receiving praise for a job well done were WO1 Jeffrey Bownes and MSG Joseph Lukes for putting together this event.

Doughboys up record

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's Doughboys survived a scare in the first game of the TRADOC basketball tournament to go on and win two more games and enter into the semifinals against Fort Gordon.

The Doughboys ran up against some stiff competition right off the bat from Fort Eustis. The Doughboys played an up and down game before prevailing in overtime, 76-68.

The Doughboys jumped out to 10 point leads twice in the first half and at one point led by 20. Fort Eustis kept plugging away in the second half and tied the score at 58 at the buzzer to end regulation playing time.

The Doughboys regrouped during the break before the overtime period and came out firing. The Doughboys scored six straight baskets after the jump ball to take a 70-58 lead and the game was in the bag.

In their second game the Doughboys whipped their hosts for the tournament, Fort Jackson, 98-78. Fort Jackson was no problem as the Doughboys used their superior rebounding to keep control over the tempo of the game. After gaining a 10 point edge midway through the first half the outcome of the game was never in doubt. In the second half the Doughboys kept building their lead up to the final 20 point margin.

In the quarterfinal game against Fort Sill the Doughboys took advantage of their opponents foul problems on their way to an overwhelming 116-97 victory. The Doughboys stumbled a little getting out of the starting blocks and only led by two points at halftime. However, at the beginning of the second half Fort Sill was shorthanded because of their proximity to fouls. The Doughboys used this to their advantage to blow Fort Sill out of the game in the second half.

The Fort Sill game was well played as the teams both rebounded well and there were very few turnovers. At the start of the second half Fort Sill's turnovers increased as more reserves came in to replace the foul plagued regulars. This was the turning point in the game as the Doughboys turned this into their avenue to victory.

As of press time the Doughboys were preparing to play in the semifinals against Fort Gordon. Fort Gordon had beat Fort Belvoir in the quarterfinals to reach the semifinal game against the Doughboys.

Special Olympics

The 1980 Georgia Special Olympics will be getting under way here today and will last through 5 p.m. tomorrow. The activities are being coordinated by Morale Suppport Activities and are being held at Audie Murphy Gym, Briant Wells Fieldhouse and the Main Post Bowling Center.

The idealism of true sportsmanship that is generated through the Special Olympics is not challenged by any other sporting event. In a day of inflated salaries and egos among athletes, Special Olympics holds a special and unique spot in the sporting world. The mentally retarded have always been told, "You can't do it." The Special Olympics say, "You can do it. All you need is a chance do it." The Special Olympics gives them that chance.

Each year on every level from community to international training programs and meets are held for these people. The mentally retarded have a chance through these activities to prove to their families, communities and themselves just how much they can do.

Special Olympics needs your support. Come out and cheer these truly special athletes on. Basketball will be played at Audie Murphy Gym from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. both days. The run, dribble and shoot will be held at Briant Wells Fieldhouse both days 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. The bowling will be held at the Main Post Bowling Center both days from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

TRADOC tournament

Doughgirls don't take opponents lightly

By Tim Boivin

The Fort Benning women's basketball team, the Doughgirls, finished final preparations for the TRADOC tournament this week. The Doughgirls open up in TRADOC against Fort Leavenworth.

Coach Hezzie Baines looks to four holdovers from last year's third place TRADOC team to lead the way this year. Baines said, "Cheryl Kaufman, Angela Burns, Sylvia Jones and Phyllis Colbert have all been there before so they should be able to help the players who have never been through a tournament like this before. It's their job to lead the team and the way they perform will have an effect on the other players."

The big improvement on the Doughgirls has been the play of their guards. Halfway through the season Baines made a pivotable decision to switch Jeanette Dent and Marietta James to guard from their forward positions. The results have helped the Doughgirls to one of their finest seasons. Baines said, "They have given us the outside shooting that we missed earlier in the season. This forces teams to come out and guard them and leaves our big players underneath more room to operate. Geneva Walker has come on to provide excellent relief when either of the guards are out of the game."

The Doughgirls recieved a blessing when Chery Brown, who was with the team at the beginning o the season, returned from a stint on recruiting duty. Although she gives the Doughgirls another player Baines still feels that the Doughboys biggest prob lem is their height. He noted, "Other teams ar usually taller than us. All that we can hope for, an what has worked for us so far, is to run on them. I we can successfully outrun them consistently tha should more than make up for the disadvantage i size."

Coach Baines' strategy going into TRADOC is t use a wide open style. He emphasized this, sayin "Our guards need to get loose and hit those outsid shots. Their outside shooting gives our offense different dimension and I am confident that the will come through when the time comes."

The Doughgirl's first game is against Fort Lea venworth and Baines says he will go into that gam cautiously. The reason, he said, is, "I have neve seen them play and I don't know what to expect Usually I can tell what type of game a girls tea will play by watching their men's team. Th problem with Leavenworth is that they don't have men's team."

When asked who would provide the toughe competition, Baines said, "Fort Lee won last year we can pretty well assume that their going to b tough again. Fort Rucker was undefeated until the played us so they will be out for revenge. Fo McClellan and Fort Rucker are the top tean among the rest competing. However, we aren taking any of our opponents lightly. They're a going to be tough because this is the tournament f the championship."

Baines is planning to make use of a few innov tions when the Doughgirls play teams they ha already faced this season. He elaborated by sayin "Our center and tall forward are either going to pl a high-low or a tandem post.

Defense such as this is the cornerstone of the Doughgirl season.

Second Looks

This week we feature an overdue 'attaboy' for the 51st Company, 5th Student Battalion, TSB. For the benefit of the uniformed, the men of the 51st SOC led by 1st Lt. Jackson won the five mile platoon run at the Feb. 16 Valentine's Day Fun Run.

Faced with competition from IOBC, IOAC, ITB, NCO's, the Rangers, Airborne, and Engineers, the 15 student officers and their leader simply ran away with the prize. Their blistering 31.08 put them one second shy of four (4!) minutes in front of the second place team.

Congratulations to Lt. Jackson, leader. More of the same to SOC's Farmer, Emmerson, Prill, Gustafson, Hueber, Quinn, Janze, Miller, Hastedt, Deloris, Henderson, Germann, Nelligan, Brown, and Ashford.

Congratulations are also in order for the hundred or so folks who braved the harsh weather last Saturday to compete in the Dixie Beer Bike and Run for Fun.

Bruce Skiles won the three mile open event with a 16.18, followed closely by Leonard Horning and George Reynolds (Yea, Fort Benning!) with 16.21 and 16.27, respectively.

Lisa Perrella won the women's 3,000 meter event in 13.24. Trailing her were Connie Cullifer and Marilyn Hicks (Fort Benning scores again) with times of 13.36 and 14.07.

The novel event was the bike-runner combination. First, the runners completed their three miler together. Then, knowing by what margin they had to beat the competition, tne bikers took off on a six mile cycling segment. To determine the winners, the times for the team (one runner + one cyclist) were added together.

The winners of the three divisions follow:

| | Runner | Cyclist | Time |
|---|---|---|---|
| OPEN | Robert McDuffie | Bruce Sellers | 36.09 |
| CORPORATE | Bill Etchison | Bill McCloud | 35.42 |
| MEDIA | *Bruce Skiles | Paul Hendry | 34.05 |

*(Bruce ran his three miles in 15.05 this time.)

Reminders

Tomorrow brings the SK Realtors' Run at 10 a.m. in Cooper Creek Park. Come early and register until the gun. The entry fee remains the same and all proceeds go to the Girls' Club.

The Heart Run (10K) entry form is this week's clip-and-save item. The race is only two weeks off, so clip it and get it in ASAP, you hear?

Finally, we'd like to have all you slow but durable plodders join all the hardcore track nuts for the Columbus Marathon. That's only a week away. If there are any last minute developments, I'll try to feature them in the March 14 BAYONET.

Perimeter Road Race March 22

The Marine Corps Logistics Base outside Albany, Ga. sponsors an annual race around the base. The course is a 12.5 mile road which completely encircles the base, and is primarily dirt, flat, and scenic (a scenic Marine base?).

Early registration closes today, but late registration is available until the 9 a.m. starting time. Aid stations ad T-shirts for all finishers make the event appar attractive for anyone wishing to go out of town for the weekend. For details, call 544-4177.

Marathons attract runners

By Bob Kuwik

Thirty-seven-year-old Marilyn Hicks is a well-known local runner who has a goal of running a marathon under four hours.

Her last marathon was four hours and twelve minutes at Callaway Gardens in November but she expects to best that time at the upcoming Columbus Marathon. Marilyn claims trying to match her husband's speed, Lt. Col. Barry Hicks, also an avid runner, helps her speed. Marilyn's two daughters also train for races.

Marilyn averages ten miles a day and 15 to 20 on Sunday mornings for a total of about 70 miles a week. Marilyn says she does very little speed work and averages about eight or nine minutes a mile. A native of Oregon, Marilyn said she prefers running a marathon in cold weather and is definitely not a warm weather runner. "I have problems with the heat and have a tendency to dehydrate when I run in warm weather," she explained.

Marilyn's advice to beginning runners is, "Start slowly if your goal is preparing for a marathon. The first two and three miles are the hardest because that is the warm-up. When starting slowly, don't expect too much too soon and don't expect to be an expert right away."

Marilyn psyches herself up for a marathon by telling everyone she is going to be running. "The psyching up period comes in the last ten miles. If you can run the first 15, anyone can run the last ten," she said. Marilyn added that after completing a marathon, her first thought is when she will be in another one.

Besides running, Marilyn is also a ski enthusiast and spends a month each year on the slopes of Colorado, Nevada and Oregon.

Lt. Col. Skip Dayton is a 42-year-old physician from Martin Army Hospital whose goal is to run the Columbus Mini-Marathon in ten-and-a-half-minute

The doctor says he is an "on again, off again" runner who got the bug two years ago when he realized his physical condition was not as good as it could be. Skip trains four days a week, averaging about 25 to 30 miles, and says he is a "fitness runner, not a competitive runner."

When Skip is not doing roadwork, he works out at a gym, exercising his upper body and trunk. He also does stretching exercises every day to exercise the leg muscles not strengthened through running. "My goal is a balanced and preventative running program," he explained. "I'm trying to remain injury free while I train."

Skip says he likes running both alone and with others. He also enjoys running in all type of weather but prefers mild, spring days with little humidity.

The doctor psyches himself up for a race by mingling with other runners before the event begins. "Once you're committed to a race, it's hard not to do as well as you can," he noted. After a race, Skip says he is "happy with my world. I'm not sure about getting a 'runner's high' but I'm relaxed and feeling good and that's enough."

The doctor advises long distance runners to wear good shoes, be informed concerning trunk and leg exercises, stretch and strengthen appropriate muscles to prevent injuries and, most of all, start off slowly.

Skip will be joining with Bob Kuwik in presenting articles for The BAYONET in upcoming issues on running injuries and physical fitness.

Soldiers sing at state capitol

A battle didn't bring the 3rd of the 7th to Atlanta but, rather, an invitation from Columbus Representative Tom Buck which called 12 soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade to the state capitol last week.

These men are members of the Cottonbaler Choir which sang for the governor and the lawmakers of the Georgia State Legislature during the luncheon recess. Approximately 200 persons gathered to listen to their mini-concert held inside the capitol on the steps just outside Governor George Busbee's office.

During Bold Eagle 80 the Cottonbaler Choir was formed. "I had a guitar with me in the combat trains and during some of the slack time the medics and I started singing," says Chaplain (Capt.) Harvey Brown, founder of the group. "We enjoyed it so much that we kept singing together even after we got back to post." Others who liked to sing joined the choir and soon invitations to perform were received. Their most recent performance prior to their concert for the governor was at the National Prayer Breakfast at Kelley Hill.

The Cottonbaler Choir has medics, infantrymen, mechanics and a chaplain who combine their talents and musical skill.

In their musical program the Cottonbaler Choir uses songs with guitar, flute, saxophone and conga drum accompaniment, as well as the more difficult a cappella singing. "These soldiers have really worked hard and given of their own time to be a part of this group," said Chaplain Brown. "But the work really paid off when we had senators and representatives joining in with us when we sang Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Soldier awarded for saving life

SSgt. Vincent Mier, student operations NCO for the 4th Student Battalion, was awarded a Letter of Commendation Tuesday for saving another soldier's life. During his tour as the Staff Duty NCO Saturday night, Mier was informed by a duty runner that an injury occurred in the battalion area. When he arrived on the scene of the incident, Mier found a young soldier lying on the ground unconscious and bleeding from a cut in the head.

Noticing that people were standing around not knowing what to do, Mier took command of the situation. He sent one of the runners for a vehicle and another soldier for a blanket and towel. After doing this he applied first aid to stop the bleeding and control for possible shock. SSgt. Mier is also being considered for a USAIC Certificate of Appreciation and the Soldiers Medal for his actions.

High school courses paid for soldiers

Educational courses designed specifically to provide opportunities for soldiers to meet the requirements for high school completion are now approved for 100 percent tuition assistance.

Courses covering all required subjects will be provided for military personnel by Muscogee County School District through the Army Education Center effective Sunday. Classes will be conducted during off duty hours 6-9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. There will be no cost to the individual student.

Commanders will encourage participation by all non-high school graduates. Cost to the government is $125 per student for each course. Once enrolled, students may not drop out of the course and must maintain regular class attendance. Failure to comply with these requirements will result in the individual being required to reimburse the government the cost of the course.

Eligible individuals should contact the education center immediately.

Servicemembers asked to donate to AER fund

As of March 11, contributions to the 1980 AER Fund Drive totaled over $4,100. All military personnel are encouraged to contribute to this most worthwhile cause when solicited. A generous and timely contribution will give a real meaning to the AER slogan — "The Army Takes Care of Its Own."

Glad you asked

What can be done to improve life in the barracks?

Sp4 Patrice Maxwell
988th Military Police Company

They need some degree of privacy in the barracks. For instance, when visitors come you have to entertain them in the dayroom but there are too many people in there. We are always told this is our home. There are some companies who don't relay messages to people. They need to insure that people receive their messages and personal phone calls. As far as inspections go, I can see why they have them for the health and welfare of personnel who live in the barracks but they don't need to check the drawers and everything.

Sp4 Rusell B. Brownfield Jr.
121st Aviation Company

People should be considerate of not playing their stereos so loud in the middle of the night. You should also be able to fix your room as you want without getting any static. People should learn to take care of what they use and not be abusive. For instance, dayroom equipment should be treated as if it was your own.

Sp5 John Davis
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

In my company they need chain locks on the inside doors for better security of the rooms and less control of pass keys. For instance, by giving the keys to the CQ, anyone can come in the middle of the night and steal something without the tenant knowing about it.

SFC Rocky Martin
283rd Army Band

They should turn off the PA system after 6 p.m. in the barracks and let the CQ take messages or go and get the person. The PA system in the barracks is abused and really bothers the people who have to live in the barracks. It's bad enough we work for the military eight hours a day. We like to be able to relax.

Pvt. 2 Karlene Pattan
524th Personnel Service Company

We should be able to do what we want without any restrictions, as if it were your home.

Sgt. William Forlinse
Headquarters, 34th Medical Battalion

Companies should have a responsible senior ranking individual make sure the floors and rooms in the barracks are kept clean. They should also have better CQ control to be sure people turn down their stereos and noise after midnight.

Sp4 Cliff Dale
1st Battalion, 58th Infantry,
197th Infantry Brigade

I am tired of the living conditions in the barracks, ie. faulty showers and heating. There have been several cases where they don't take immediate actions to correct the deficiency. People should learn to clean up after themselves because there are a lot of guys who won't.

* * *

Sgt. David Baribau
15th Finance Company

The barracks should be like the dormitories in the Air Force and they should get rid of CQ.

Letters to the Editor

Korean floor show

To the Editor:

This is in reference to the Korean floor show held at the Sand Hill NCO Club on March 9 from 4-10 p.m.

I am speaking for myself and some of the other Koreans and Americans who were present at the show. I don't think it is just for any entertainment group, Korean or otherwise, to discontinue performing, pack up bag and baggage right in the middle of a show, and leave. In the first place, the show got off to a late start — 5:20 p.m. It was around 7:20 p.m. when the group packed up and left. The reason behind this, supposedly, was that someone in the audience was creating a disturbance and using obscene language.

I believe that if you are an entertainer of any sort, you have to expect and be prepared for this type of behavior. It is the same where ever you may go.

Another thing I would like to know to set the record straight. Is there something, preferably in writing, stating that only individuals holding a top position or living in high society, from a specific nationality, can kick up heels and boogie at a Korean floor show or any other type of show?

In my opinion, the group should be banned from Fort Benning and for everyone desiring their money back, the manager of the NCO Club should see they get refunds.

Sp5 Charles D. McConnell

Post speed limit

To the Editor:

This is in response to E. Lotter's comment about the speed limit on 1st Division Road in your Jan. 25 issue.

I would like to say that the individual(s) who have been complaining really have nothing to complain about. If you look at the people driving on this road you will find that at even 35 miles an hour some, or should I say most, people are still driving as if they were in bumper cars. Several times coming and going to work I have had people on my bumper so close that I couldn't even see their headlights. Several times I have even pulled over off the road to let them go by. A few times I have stopped and pulled a person over about it and I have received the same response of the person(s) saying that the speed limit was ridiculous and they will keep driving their vehicle the way they please.

So people take a hard, long look. Do you really have a complaint? I would venture to say two out of 10 people would have a valid reason to complain.

Shooting incident

To the Editor:

This letter is in reference to the erroneous reporting of a very unfortunate incident which occurred on post Wednesday night, March 5, 1980. The incident was a shooting which allegedly took place at the intersection of Ingersoll and Lauber Streets, near the football stadium, the post office, Bryant Wells Gymnasium and the Hidden Door EM Club. All four buildings are located within 50 yards of each other.

The incident allegedly took place at 10:50 p.m. that Wednesday night. The following day the local newspaper (LEDGER—ENQUIRER) and several radio and TV stations in Columbus reported the victim was shot inside the Hidden Door EM Club. As already mentioned, the incident happened outside and could not have possibly happened in the club because the club closes at 10 p.m. during the week.

It is my opinion that the communications process faltered between the investigating agency, the Public Affairs Office and the local news media. It is not the intent of this letter to find fault with any of these organizations. As a general rule, they all do an outstanding job. The public has a right

Missouri newspaper praises post shiner

Editor's note: The following article appeared recently in The RAY COUNTY CONSERVATOR, Richmond, Mo.

By Harry

I mentioned in a recent column that the feedback you occasionally get from writing a newspaper column is most gratifying. Since then I have again been privileged to receive a communication from a reader.

In the January 25th edition of "The Conservator," I devoted part of my column to the art of shining shoes and the pride in which shoeshine boys of the past took in their work. I have since heard from Sgt. Maj. (ret.) Frank N. Hayson (U.S.A.) concerning this subject. In a note to "The Conservator" in which he resubscribed to the paper, he was also kind enough to send me a tear sheet from "The Bayonet," a military newspaper published at Fort Benning, Ga.

The article is about Clarence Lee Walton, the only shoeshiner in Infantry Hall's barber shop at Benning. He first began shining shoes there at the age of 13 in 1938 and has continued his profession to the present time. I refer to it as a profession instead of a trade since anyone devoting that many years to his job is without doubt a true professional. Mr. Walton has become something of a tradition at Fort Benning; he recently shined shoes for a captain and recalled shining the shoes of the captain's father in 1941.

The story goes on to mention that Mr. Walton and his polish-stained hands are a reminder of times when men took pride in their work. Perhaps our country would be better off if once again Americans in all walks of life — particularly in the field of education — would endeavor to reaffirm the tradition of pride in work and encourage it to the fullest.

I do not know Sgt. Maj. Hayson but I assume he is a product of Ray County, and I suspect that he has shown the same high degree of pride in his work and has upheld the professional standards of our Army over a period of many years. We should honor such persons because they have been the backbone of our military forces and our security has rested with them.

It is a coincidence, I suppose, but this is being written one day after my son-in-law returned from a four-year tour of duty with the Army in Germany. I have seen in him the same dedication and sense of pride that I am sure motivated Sgt. Maj. Hayson as well as Mr. Walton in his own way.

On a visit to Germany in 1978 I saw at first hand my son-in-law's devotion to duty. He was in command of an artillery battery and this entailed long hours of training and long days of practice in the field. Consider the responsibility of the men in such units; in the event of hostilities they would be in the immediate forefront of any action.

Also while visiting in Germany, I took a military sponsored border tour of the East German border and was struck by the air of dedication and professionalism of these troops located at a forward base 10 km from the border. They are the ones who would bear the brunt of any attack, and who at this very moment are making patrols in the vicinity of the border. They are ever vigilant.

Throughout the history of the United States it has been the same; a relatively small number of professionals have stood guard, prepared to fight if called upon to do so. We should be grateful that for more than 200 years our country has always been able to find such men.

Semi-annual post clean up scheduled

Fort Benning will conduct its semi-annual post wide clean up during the week of March 24-28. Individual units will police their own areas and take nonsalvageable trash to the landfill vicinity. Occupants of post housing should place their trash by the street curb for pick up.

Precautions should be taken by anyone finding ammunition. "If anyone should find or think they have found a dud, they should not try to remove it. They should mark the place and notify the authorities who will in turn notify the Emergency Ordinance Disposal to dispose of the round," said SFC David Jones of the Directorate of Plans and Training, Plans and Operations Division.

"Policing of the post is everyone's responsibility. This is a good time for housing occupants to clean the area they are responsible for. People get a good feeling about post cleanliness," Jones concluded.

For further information call SFC Jones at 545-4258.

Beat the bite of barracks boredom

Most of the young recruits today join the Army for two types of experience; job experience and experiences gained from traveling.

Some soldiers here feel they are missing out on their chance to gain some traveling experiences. They complain about never having anything to do and never having anywhere to go, especially if they live in the barracks.

The problem is that some soldiers here don't know how lucky they are. The group that moans and groans the most are those living in the barracks who complain that the life of a barracks bum is boring.

The problem may well be that they don't take the time to visit and appreciate the surrounding areas and the activities they offer. Instead of putting a little money aside at payday to visit the sights during their off hours they blow it on drinks or some other activities.

Some use drugs and alcohol as a way to escape from their problems and the boredom. Pvt.2 Stephanie McDaniels of Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, said, "When they come down from their buzz those problems and their boredom is still there to slap them right in the face."

Capt. Charles Gates is McDaniel's company commander. He said, "We try to make their barracks like a home for them just as my house is a home for me. We try to get any extras for the room that we can like bookcases, rugs, endtables and lamps."

Two major complaints

Gates said he has found that no matter how comfortable he can make his soldiers they still have two major complaints: The lack of privacy when rooming with someone and the lack of visitation rights.

Gates understands their gripes, explaining, "I can have guests of the opposite sex over to my house. However, a soldier living in the barracks can't have any guests of the opposite sex visiting his room. I would like to initiate visitation rights but right now it is just not feasible."

As for the lack of privacy, Gates said the soldiers usually work their differences out. If the problems persist, he explained, "We have a large enough company so that we can afford to change roommates. Sometimes, though, it is the soldier who can't adjust to anyone and that becomes a different problem."

Alcohol and drug abuse

Gates also touched on the problems of alcohol and drug abuse. In response to a question about how many soldiers in his barracks have used drugs sometime in the past, he said, "The majority have if you mean marijuana. I attribute that to the changing social values in today's world."

Another problem here is alcohol abuse. Gates said, "I don't think soldiers are that interested in alcohol any more. Unlike marijuana, the novelty has worn off. That is not to say soldiers don't drink. The majority do but I don't think anyone in my company is an alcoholic."

Sgt. Michael Coleman of Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command feels strongly that hard alcohol should be outlawed in the barracks. He said, "Some of these soldiers don't know how to handle their beer so why put a powderkeg like hard liquor in their hands?"

Coleman said the biggest gripe he has about the barracks he lives in is the cramped rooms. He compared them to his barracks in Germany, saying, "The largest living quarters in my company are the same size as the smallest ones in Germany. The size of my living quarters in Germany was the same size as what is taken up by two people here."

Many soldiers find the way to get out of the barracks more often is to move out, permanently! Gates said, "Those soldiers who have consistently done a good job, have proven that they can handle the financial responsibilities and can get to work on time are the type that I allow to live off post. Of course, anyone who is married is allowed to live off post with their family."

Another problem is vandalism. Gates addressed this problem by saying, "If you want to see a big morale problem then just look at a company that has suffered through a rash of vandalism. The greatest advice I can give anyone moving in the barracks is to make sure, and I can't emphasize this

Warfare

197th simulates contamination

By Mark D. Cauthen

The emphasis was on chemical warfare in a recent field training exercise conducted at Fort Benning where two battalions of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) were evaluated under the Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP). The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor and the 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry were rated in a number of key areas, one of which was their ability to operate effectively in a hostile chemical environment.

In order to obtain an accurate picture of the units' nuclear, biological and chemical (NBC) proficiency levels during the ARTEP, personnel were required to operate in full protective gear for periods as long as six hours. A number of techniques were used to simulate the use of offensive chemical agents: aerial spraying of a simulated persistent nerve agent, the dispersing of CS to simulate a nonpersistent nerve agent and the dusting of large areas with powdered talc to symbolize contamination, all gave the maneuver units opportunity to react to situations to be encountered on today's battlefield.

Units confronted with contaminated areas were required to take necessary action to either cross or bypass the areas. More extensive actions were necessary for personnel and equipment exposed to the simulated nerve agents; a decontamination platoon from the 613th Field Service Company, 548th Supply and Service Battalion, based at Fort McClellan, Ala., established decontamination stations to facilitate the detailed cleaning of personnel and equipment.

NBC training is stressed throughout the 197th Infantry Brigade, and as a result of this emphasis the unit's soldiers have a better appreciation of the implications of operating in a hostile NBC environment. "The extent of the NBC play in the ARTEP and the interest and enthusiasm with which the units reacted were very significant achievements," said Maj. Frank W. Kelly, 197th Infantry Brigade chemical officer. "The play reflected the brigade's emphasis on NBC and provided the battalion commanders an opportunity to review their units' strong and weak points in NBC." He concluded, "The NBC training in this exercise was both challenging and realistic."

As recent world events have shown, the chemical threat is one to be taken seriously, and Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade is doing just that.

CG's message

The Fort Benning Equal Opportunity Program is a major area of concern to me. It is one of the key factors impacting on the United States Army Infantry Center's ability to accomplish its mission. Generally, people who are afforded the opportunity to develop professionally will do so. I want them to get that opportunity at Fort Benning. I trust commanders on this installation to do what is right for their soldiers. Therefore, what I want from commanders, managers, leaders and supervisors at Fort Benning is not a policy letter but, instead, I want people to exhibit their concern about all of their people, regardless of sex, ethnic makeup or race. I want leaders to lead, by example, showing their subordinates what they want regarding good and just treatment of every soldier. I still believe that soldiers and civilians alike will give the "boss" what he or she wants, provided they understand what the "boss" wants.

In the months ahead, as we continue our vital work at Fort Benning, I will have the opportunity to view directly the results of well-thought-out solutions to day-to-day people problems as they are implemented in the field. Managing people with diversified backgrounds is a difficult and sometimes frustrating task. All leaders and supervisors, however, must be capable of resolving people problems as fairly and as quickly as possible, treating each problem as if it were unique. We must continue to focus on finding just solutions to our problems and refrain from making excuses as to why they exist.

Tornadoes won't take you to Oz

The time of year when Fort Benning faces its most violent weather is fast approaching. The winter cold fronts combined with the warm moist air from the Gulf produce occasional severe thunderstorms with the potential for tornados.

A tornado is one of nature's most destructive forces and when threatening conditions develop, the chances of injury or death are greatly reduced when advance warning is given so that shelter may be found in time. The 10th Detachment, 5th Weather Squadron (an Air Force unit assigned here) provides weather support to Fort Benning and is responsible for warning post personnel of hazardous weather conditions.

The 10th Detachment issues two types of tornados advisories — a tornado WATCH and a tornado WARNING. A tornado WATCH is issued whenever conditions are favorable to the possible formation of a tornado. A tornado WARNING is issued when conditions are favorable for the probable formation of a tornado or when a tornado has already formed.

The National Weather Service's tornado WATCH originates from Kansas City, Mo. These WATCHES are usually for a county or state area. However, tornado WARNINGS are issued locally. Because the National Weather Service issues WATCHES for relatively large areas while Detachment 10 is specifically interested in Fort Benning, there are occasions when a tornado WATCH might be in effect for the Muscogee County area with no WATCH for Fort Benning.

Detachment 10 and the National Weather Service weather station (located at Columbus Airport) maintain close cooperation and support each other in times of crisis. Both weather stations have storm detection radars and qualified operators. Weather forecasters at both stations come under great pressure during periods of extreme weather. Since weather forecasting is not an exact science, particularly for tornado formation, the forecaster must weigh many factors in deciding whether to issue a warning. The probability of a tornado occurrence, and the possible consequences, must be evaluated against the disruption caused by issuing a "false alarm."

The average life of a tornado is about three minutes (with average ground path of 1.5 nautical miles). Therefore, early detection of a tornado is extremely difficult. Certain severe thunderstorms exhibit characteristics and radar signatures that indicate the probability of tornado formation. However, a tornado producing thunderstorm is constantly evolving and a storm that produced a tornado in Phenix City may pass over Fort Benning with no tornado activity.

When a WARNING for tornadoes is issued, it is important that immediate action is taken; action that may save your life.

- In homes, take shelter in the basement or under heavy furniture in the center of the house.
- In schools, move quickly (following advance plans) to shelter areas or to an interior hallway on the lowest floor.
- In office buildings, go to an interior hallway on the lowest floor or to a designated shelter area.
- In shopping areas, go to a designated shelter area (not to your car).
- Mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to overturning and should be evacuated when strong winds are forecast. If there is no shelter nearby, leave the trailer park for low, protected ground.

In open country, move away from the tornado's path at right angles. If there is no time, lie flat in the nearest depression with your hands shielding your head.

Remember: TORNADO WATCH — tornados may develop. TORNADO WARNING — tornados probable, or, already exist, take shelter. Fort Benning is not a major tornado area. However, tornados have occurred here before and will again. BE PREPARED.

Barracks

enough, that you keep your valuables under lock and key."

Coleman said, "There is a lot less vandalism here. People have better things to do than steal from each other."

But what are those better things? Besides the discotheques and ripoff joints downtown and on Victory Drive, what can a soldier do away from the barracks?

For shopping off post there are two large malls. Peachtree Mall is located off of the Manchester Expressway and Columbus Square is located on Macon Road. The bus takes about an hour to reach them so try to hook up a ride with someone else you know. A good idea would be to put an index card on your company's bulletin board and maybe help pay for gas. Gas money convinces a lot of people who were on the borderline and couldn't really decide if they wanted to go.

Looking for fascinating places to visit? Did you know that Columbus is the home of the Confederate Naval Museum? The museum houses the Muscogee Gunboat which was salvaged in 1963 from her 98-year-old grave 23 miles below Columbus in the Chattahoochee River. The iron clad boat was a secret Confederate weapon.

Columbus offers a heritage tour leaving from the Welcome Center on Victory Drive every Wednesday at 10 a.m. and every Sunday at 3 p.m. The tour features historic homes.

Closer to the barracks is the Infantry Museum on post. Clubs abound here for extracurricular activities. There is a Tae Kwon Do club, a CB radio club, a flying club, a sports parachute club, a rifle and pistol club and a horseback riding club.

At the Main Post Arts and Crafts Center many servicemembers pursue their hobbies or take up new ones during their leisure hours. The center is open Tuesday through Friday from 1:30-9:30 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. For additional information call 545-3677 or 544-4624.

Most of the materials needed for each craft may be purchased in the lobby of the main entrance of the center, Bldg. 2783.

Sexual harassment not tolerated

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — "Sexual harassment is a form of employee misconduct which undermines the integrity of the employment relationship," according to a statement recently released by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM).

The statement reminds federal employees of their responsibilities under the federal code of ethics and conduct. According to OPM, employees must maintain the high standards of honesty, integrity, impartiality and conduct necessary for the proper performance of government business.

Examples of sexual harassment include taking or refusing to take a personnel action, promoting employees who submit to sexual advances or refusing to promote employees who resist or protest sexual offers.

"Specifically, sexual harassment is deliberate or repeated unsolicited verbal comments, gestures, or physical contact of a sexual nature which are unwelcome," the statement says.

"It is the policy of the Office of Personnel Management that sexual harassment is unacceptable conduct in the workplace and will not be condoned," the statement stressed.

Horse show scheduled

By Pat Barham

Fort Benning's Hunt Club is having their annual Spring Horse Show, Saturday, March 29 at French Polo Field located on First Division Road, Main Post.

The show will have two fields of competition operating simultaneously. Judges will be Joyce Duncan, dressage; and Lane Pratt, hunter jumper equitation.

Dressage riding matches the ability of the rider and horse to accomplish a set of prescribed maneuvers in sequence. The judge evaluates each rider and horse as a team, watching for any deviation from the sequence and horsemanship. The rider with the lowest number of errors is selected as winner.

There will be three levels of testing for the dressage competition with seven classes for the event.

There will be eight divisions of the jumping competition. The Preliminary Jumper Division is divided into three classes, Classes 8, 12 and 25.

The Junior Hunter Seat Equitation Division is also divided into three classes. Class 1, 3 and 20 are limited to those age 14 and under.

The Open Hunter Seat Equitation Division's three classes has jumping and non-jumping events where only the rider is judged.

The Commanding General's Cup Division has six classes with one event involving weaving through a series of poles from right to left or left to right against the clock. This event involves obedience and careful riding to prevent elimination.

There are four other divisions in the jumping competition but in the Pairs of Hunters, Over Fences Division is demanding of both rider and horse. This jumping event tests two riders working as a team. Seven different obstacles must be negotiated by each rider, but should a rider miss a jump his or her partner must make the jump and continue through the course. If each rider makes all the jumps, the times are then evaluated to determine the winners of the event.

Entry fees for the show are $3. Persons registering after midnight, March 24, must pay an additional $1 for each class. Checks are payable to The Fort Benning Hunt Club. For more information, contact Pat Barham at 545-2236.

Trophies and ribbons will be awarded in both dressage and jumping events.

Pregnant soldiers to get uniform

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Soon pregnant soldiers will no longer wear civilian clothes to work, according to DA officials.

The Army Chief of Staff recently approved a maternity service uniform similar to the Air Force maternity uniform. The uniform, according to officials, should be available through post exchanges in August-September 1980.

The uniform consists of a tunic, skirt, slacks and the women's standard white short sleeves shirt with black tab. The shirt will be worn under the tunic with the lower portion unbuttoned if wear with the maternity uniform is being considered. However, in the interim, the white shirt will be worn with the uniform.

Officials say pregnant soldiers will have to wear the maternity uniform when they begin to show, normally between the fourth and sixth month of pregnancy, and until they deliver. The only accessories authorized on the tunic will be the nameplate.

According to officials, as soon as an enlisted soldier has documented proof of pregnancy, she will be able to process a clothing issue record through the post exchange at no personal cost for two uniforms. Replacement uniforms will be authorized three years from the initial issue date.

Officers will be required to purchase their uniforms. Estimated cost of the tunic will be $11.50. The cost of the skirt will run $8.75 and the slacks will cost $11.

Eat smart, keep fit

"To Hit Your Stride ... Eat Smart" is the theme that Army registered dietitians are emphasizing throughout March for the eighth annual — and first month-long — celebration of good nutrition. Along with the general growth of nutrition awareness, National Nutrition Week has grown into National Nutrition Month.

"A sound diet and moderate exercise are basic to good health," it was pointed out by Lt. Col. Marcia L. Beasley, R.D., president of the Columbus District Dietetic Association. "With optimal nutrition and regular exercise," she said, "you feel good about yourself. And chances are you're cutting health care costs at the same time."

To help you keep fit, learn to eat smart. Begin with minimum servings of the essentials: milk and milk products; meat or an alternate, such as dried beans and peas, chili, eggs, or fish; fruits and vegetables — one deep green or yellow and one a source of vitamin C; and wholegrain or enriched breads and cereals. Then add more of these foods or other foods to meet your energy quota and for meals that satisfy.

National Nutrition Month is sponsored by The American Dietetic Association and its affiliates in the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Army dietitians have planned a host of activities for March.

Capt. Karen Hobson, Nutrition Clinic, Martin Army Hospital, is chairman of the 3rd Annual Nutritin Seminar sponsored by the Columbus District Dietetic Association. It is free to the bi-city community and Fort Benning community. The subject is "Role of Nutrition in High Blood Pressure" to be presented at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in St. Francis Hospital Auditorium. Blood pressure and weight checks will be made.

A nutrition and menus planning seminar is in the planning process for all food service dining facility managers.

Hobson will discuss "Nutrition and the Athlete" for the Columbus Track Club, 7:30 p.m. March 25.

Mrs. Judy Thwing, R.D., wife of JAG officer, has developed a recommended reading list on nutrition and physical fitness and has worked with the city libraries and three book stores, Whites, Daltons and Waldens, to arrange a display of recommended nutrition books for the month.

The dependent school system has been provided posters and a packet of nutrition reference and career guidance materials.

Beasley has written a newsletter explaining the terms "diet" and "dietetic", "low sugar", and "salt free". It describes how these terms are used on food labels. She explains which diets require restrictions in sugar, fat and salt. The commissary is making this newsletter available to all customers.

Posters, nutrition brochures and nutrition information letters have been distributed to youth activity centers, recreation centers, Army Community Services, Officers Wives Club Building, Life Centers, Family Practice Clinics, troop dining facilities and Pediatric Clinic.

The Army Community Health nurses will have nutrition information available in the PX Mall during their weekly visits throughout the month of March.

The Nutrition Clinic, basement of Martin Army Hospital, sees all categories of dependents and retired military. These individuals may walk-in to be screened and scheduled for a Weight Control Clinic. Your nutrition questions can be answered by calling Nutrition Clinic, 544-1542.

DON'T WAIT TILL YOU'RE OUT TO FIND OUT WHAT YOU'VE GOT.

A lot of good soldiers make the mistake of leaving the Army without realizing what they really had. One soldier who took the time to sit down and figure out what the Army had to offer was Sgt. Nancy Somerville, 591st MP Company, Fort Bliss, Texas.

"Being an Investigator is something I always wanted to do. As I came to the end of my first enlistment, I found out it would take 10 years to become a civilian Investigator. In the Army, I got what I wanted by reenlisting for it."

There are opportunities for advancement in the Army that can come a lot more quickly than in civilian life. Last year, in fact, over 5,000 soldiers who left the Army came back in. So before you make a decision to get out, have a talk with your Reenlistment NCO. It's the easy way to find out what you've got and how far you can go in the Army.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

Traffic tip

In accordance with USAIC Reg 190-5 Section IV, paragraph 15E and Georgia Traffic Code 68A 405, operators of vehicles on a roadway will, at the audible and/or visual sign of an approaching emergency vehicle, pull to the right curb or parallel to the right edge of the roadway, clear any intersection and stop, and not proceed until the emergency vehicle has passed or directed by police to otherwise do so. Operators in one way traffic or multi-lane roadways will pull their vehicles to the curb nearest them, allowing a lane to be opened for the emergency vehicles. The regulation or code does not operate to relieve the driver of any authorized emergency vehicle from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons using that roadway

Numerous Army motor vehicle accidents have occurred on this installation because senior occupants have not fulfilled their responsibilities.

TRADOC Supplement 1 to AR 385-55 states as follows:

Para 3-1e. The senior occupant of a vehicle is responsible for ensuring the safe operation of the vehicle to include: (1) compliance with local traffic laws and posted speed limits, (2) the authorized seating capacity of the vehicle is not exceeded, (3) all vehicle occupants wear available seat belts when the vehicle is in motion, (4) assisting the driver in such vehicle operations as backing movements and alerting him to hidden obstacles and hazards.

Effective immediately, military police upon investigating an accident involving an Army motor vehicle will identify by name, rank and organization the senior occupant of the vehicle if other than the driver. This information will be forwarded, through channels, to the commander of the organization experiencing the accident. If the review of the accident investigation report reveals the senior occupant to have been derelict, appropriate disciplinary action should be considered.

Operation Crime Stop

WHAT: Georgia vehicle registration
WHO: Motorists
WHEN: Not later than March 31
SUMMARY: All personnel having vehicles registered in Georgia are reminded that they must either re-register their vehicle with Georgia state authorities or register in another state prior to April 1. Military personnel who are not Georgia residents should complete an ad valorem form prior to application. The forms are normally available in your unit orderly room.

Personnel found operating vehicles on Fort Benning without a valid state registration will be cited by the military police.

WHAT: Aggravated assault
WHEN: March 5, 11:10 p.m.
WHERE: Hidden Door Club, Fort Benning
SUMMARY: At the above time and date, a soldier was shot with a small caliber weapon by an unidentified civilian male. Subsequent investigation by the FBI and CID identified the civilian male who has been apprehended and placed in Muscogee County Jail pending arraignment.

Crime Prevention is everyone's business. Whenever you notice any suspicious activity, immediately notify the military police desk sergeant at 545-5222/5223.

WHAT: Larceny of private property (bicycles)
WHEN: Any time
WHERE: Fort Benning
SUMMARY: Recently there have been two bicycles stolen from housing areas after they had been left unsecured. Any time a bicycle is left unattended, it should be secured to a rack or similar fixed object with a chain and locking device. To assist in identification of recovered bicycles, keep a record of the make, model and serial number. You should also engrave your name or similar personal data on the frame of the bicycle.

to be informed. However, they also have the right to be informed correctly. It is vitally important when reporting or making available information such as this that simple facts as to location and time be correct.

Such adverse publicity could possibly be detrimental not only to the Hidden Door EM Club but to all other clubs on Fort Benning as well. The Installation Club System on Fort Benning has a mission which is to promote and maintain the morale, social well-being and efficiency of military personnel, their dependents and bona fide guests through dining, recreation and other services.

It is this club manager's belief that post clubs are much safer than the majority of clubs downtown. There are always a sufficient number of security personnel on duty during operational hours to handle any incident which might arise inside the club. Management also works closely with authorities to prevent any illegal activities from occurring inside the clubs. Management cannot be expected, however, to control activities outside the club, particularly after closing.

The Hidden Door Club is open to the ranks of E1-E4. It provides a place where the young soldier can go after a hard day's work and training to relax and to associate with his/her peers.

The military club has always played an important role in the morale of our soldiers and should continue to do so. Clubs on Fort Benning, including the Hidden Door EM Club, are safe and enjoyable places to visit.

The intention of my letter is to make that fact clear to the public and all concerned.

Patriots ease 'new man blues'

By Chip Koss

The first week of a new unit is always the most trying for the new soldier. It's even harder if it is his first permanent duty station.

The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry (Patriots) have an inprocessing procedure that has been designed to ease what is called the "new man's blues." The new Patriots are personally picked up by a representative of the battalion Personnel Administration Center (PAC) at the 197th Infantry Brigade (SEP) personnel center. At the PAC, meal cards are issued, orders checked, pay records updated and all administrative problems are taken care of. While this is going on, Capt. Sam Peppers, the battalion adjutant, determines which company the new men will report to.

After initial processing, SSgt. Ernest Potts (PSNCO) calls the company to send a sponsor for the new man. The sponsor takes the new man and introduces him to his first sergeant and gets him processed into the company as smoothly as possible.

Pvt. James Mitchell of the Combat Support Company (CSC) said, "I have been out of Advanced Individual Training (AIT) for two days and the processing into the 1/58th was over before I knew it. I think I'm going to enjoy this unit!"

Once a week the battalion commander, battalion chaplain and the command sergeant major personally greet the new men that arrived that week. The battalion commander urges that soldiers reporting from overseas put their experience and skills to work. He asks them for their ideas and tells them that they all have a fresh start and encourages them to be winners. He also explains the unit history, colors and standards.

The meeting is then turned over to CSM Kyzer who explains the NCO and enlisted role in the battalion. He makes it known that if anyone has any problems, be it personal or professional, the chaplain and himself are available anytime for private conference. Chaplain Covington explains the spiritual program that is available on Kelley Hill and how he may be contacted.

After meeting each new soldier the battalion commander writes the next of kin of all the newly assigned personnel and explains that he is very proud and happy that their son or husband is in the 1/58th and provides them with a Patriots' Soldier Book. This booklet, which is also given to each new soldier, describes the history of the 1/58th, the mission of the Patriots and what is expected of the new soldier. Through these letters, it is hoped that the family will have a special kinship with the unit.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Childs:

I am happy to announce that your son, PVT Leroy Childs, Jr., has been assigned to the 1st Battalion (Mechanized) 58th Infantry. The 58th Infantry has a long and proud history with distinguished service in World War I, World War II, and in Vietnam. The battalion's motto is "Love of Country".

The battalion has two primary missions: (1) to remain combat ready through tough realistic training and, (2) to support tactical instruction of the US Army Infantry School. In these missions, Leroy's skills will be challenged to the utmost. The great majority of our soldiers are giving 100% of their efforts to improving the unit and themselves. These men are winners and I have asked Leroy to seek out and join this group. Your son has every chance to gain in rank and responsibility if he so chooses.

You have every reason to be proud that Leroy is working hard and serving proudly in the United States Army.

Education counts for points

By Tim Boivin

Every month the cry is the same; "Oh no, Sgt. Bill! They raised the points needed for promotion again. Why is it the deck is always stacked against the enlisted men?" Well, the deck isn't always stacked and the points don't always go up but there is a little used way in the military to gain more promotion points — education.

There are a lot of myths asociated with education while in the military. Practically all of them are untrue. Counselors who work at the Education Center can help dissipate those myths. Troy State University offers ways for these soldiers to overcome these myths and get that higher education they are aiming for.

Wayne Voter is a counselor at Troy State. He said, "The Army usually follows the Air Force when it comes to education for E-8's and E-9s. The Air Force is about to make it mandatory for them to have at least an associate degree. The Army very likely will soon follow suit. I am afraid all levels of enlisted personnel are in for quite a shock because they are going to need education."

Voter also pointed out that AR 200-600, and this is the key word right now, recommends that E-8's and E-9's pursue at least an associate degree. If previous trends are of any significance, associate degrees are about to become mandatory.

For those soldiers who aren't E-8 or above or planning on staying in the military past their first enlistment, education will be needed in the life of a civilian, also. Voter emphasized this, saying, "Industry's greatest concern is employee turnover and statistics have proven that college level employees have less of a turnover than those with lower education levels. Approximatey 50 percent of those students who graduate from high school go on to college and industry is demanding these higher educated workers."

Other reasons Voter gave for going to college were advancement of social and political learning, qualifying for military schools such as Officer and Warrant Officer Candidate School and the hidden curriculums of education which deal with bettering themselves as individuals. Some of the hidden curriculums were dealing with authority, withstanding peer pressure, achieving confidence, managing emotions, developing integrity, and establishing autonomy and individuality.

One of the biggest myths soldiers have about education is the economics involved. Voter addressed this problem by saying, "The Army has a tuition program that pays three out of every four dollars involved. The only thing a soldier has to pay for besides one-fourth of the tuition is his books. They can even rent those through our bookstore in Bldg. 35."

Another misconception soldiers have is that they don't have the time. However, classes are conducted during the evenings from 6 p.m. until 8:10 p.m. and 8:20 p.m. until 10:35 p.m. Classes are conducted on Saturdays from 8 a.m. until noon.

Soldiers without privately owned vehicles often moan that transportation is a problem. Classes are held in Bldgs. 4 and 35 on Main Post and in the Kelley Hill Education Center in Bldg. 9065. Post buses provide ready transportation to and from all of these buildings.

Voter said, "Many soldiers say their company

A tatto artist creates a design using an electric needle.

Tattos, an ancient skin a

Most soldiers hate needles. Mention flu shots or inoculations and visions of cold steel ripping into warm biceps quickly cause clammy foreheads and weak knees — even among the heartiest Airborne Rangers.

Strangely enough, though, the same "clinic coward" will sit bravely through a more painful ordeal, in a less sterile atmosphere and pay as much as $25 for the pleasure!

Tattooing is a method of decorating the skin with colored pigments. A sharp instrument, usually an electric needle, is introduced into the skin, which it punctures according to a selected pattern. Pigments are then rubbed into the punctures, producing a dull red or deep blue design.

History

Tattoo is one of the few Polynesian words that have become part of the English language. Captain Cook, the explorer, introduced the word in 1796 when he took it from the Tahitian "tatau" which was used to describe any kind of mark. The process, however, was practiced by the Egyptians as early as 2000 B.C. Many peoples adopted the practice mainly for adornment. The natives of Africa and the islands of the Pacific Ocean, however, regarded tattooing as socially and religiously significant. Color tattooing became highly developed among the Maoris of New Zealand and was also popular in China, India and Japan.

Primitive peoples often slashed the skin and introduced irritants into the wounds, which, when healed, left pronounced scars. This practice was called scarification. Scarification signified mourning among certain primitive tribes. It also designated social rank or affiliation.

While fear of the unknown and of evil may have accounted for the first appearance of the tattoo, there were many other less frightening reasons. They rendered the custom a permanent feature, and continued even when early man had outgrown his primitive superstitions and fears.

Sex has long dominated the human imagination and it is no wonder that tattooing was soon believed to serve as a potent means to increase virility and sexual attraction. Sometimes the marks served as badges of courage, reminding both viewer and bearer of the pains suffered at the hands of the tattooer. Early parents even had their children tattooed with the insignia of a favorite god to insure special protection.

Going even further, the scars' special significance extended from this world to the next. The Hindus of Bengal, for instance, regarded the tattoo as an identification mark needed for entrance into heaven. Even though Biblical references stated that, ". . . you shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor paint any marks upon you . . .," tattooing became fashionable among Christian nations, perhaps for aesthetic purposes.

Unique tattoo marks

The leading tattoo proponents have traditionally been sailors. They maintained the ancient belief that tattoo marks made them all the more desirable and assisted them in their amorous adventures. This was especially true if their bodies depicted suitable subjects and legends. Also, there was the constant but secret fear among mariners that one day they might be drowned and washed ashore beyond the possibility of recognition. Tattoo marks, which were always individualized, were a wise precaution to insure identification.

Many different types of tattos are available.

Dragons, snakes and motorcycles tell the world to 'beware'.

Fascinating and often odd use is made of tattoo marks. Sometimes they can be gruesome, as in the example of a man who once had a dotted circle tattooed around his neck with the inscription, "cut along the dotted line." During World War I, some English soldiers had an image of the German Emperor tattooed on their buttocks. Yet another wealthy American had hinges imprinted on all his joints. Perhaps the most ghastly tattooes were those with which Nazis branded their victims in the concentration camps of World War II.

Currently, the fad has become popular even with women. The butterfly on the shoulder and the cherry on the hip or bikini line are favorites.

Current trends

Today, because of complaints by health authorities that contaminated tattooing needles spread infectious diseases, particularly hepatitis, the practice has been outlawed in some communities of the United States and restricted in others to persons over 18 years of age.

The needle, however, has been almost completely replaced by body paints and pictured adhesives, called skin transfers. The latter, also known as decal tattoos, can be removed by nail polish remover or by washing. Body paints are generally water-based and can be removed with soapy water or cold cream. Tattoos applied with a needle, however, can be obliterated only by a laser beam or a complicated skingrafting procedure.

Macho themes persist

Soldiers today are no different than their comrades of other times. The variety of slogans and designs frequently reflect current attitudes. Themes of bravery and peril persist. Dragons, snakes and motorcycles tell the world, "Beware." The current fad of tee-shirts has only increased the popularity of tattoos. The most popular designs continue to be: roses, daggers, eagles and hearts. "Love and hate" — "fear and death" lead the list of slogans as they have for ages.

Is it a practice that is fading in popularity? Maybe. Will G.I.s continue to wait apprehensively as a buddy is encouraged to "go first?" You bet.

DA civilians added to Army program

The Hometown News Release Program is being expanded to include coverage of accomplishments by DA civilians. There is one limitation. If the civilian's hometown connections (items 8, 10 and 11 DA Form 1526) is within the post's local area (normally within a 100-mile radius), the post Public Affairs Office (PAO) should release the form directly to the media serving the parents, wife or wife's parents of the individual.

Form 1526 can be used with the following modifications:

- Item 6 — omit age
- Items 15 and 16 — omit
- Items 18 and 19 — omit
- Item 23 — omit
- Items 22 and 28 — omit
- Item 17 — Should be date entered civil service.

Forms must be signed in order to be released. PAOs are encouraged to add DA civilians to their Hometown Programs. For further information call Sp4 Pat Barham at 545-2236.

Film prices hiked

DALLAS — The unprecedented rise in the value of silver and the substantial increase for petroleum-derived raw materials used in the manufacture of photographic film and film components have resulted in higher prices for Eastman Kodak film.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) patrons started paying higher prices for Kodak products in CONUS facilities on Feb. 26. Overseas, AAFES will raise prices on April 26.

The retail price increase for black and white film will range between 35 cents and 50 cents per roll; for color print film the increase will range from 25 cents to 50 cents. Color slide film will increase between 40 cents and 80 cents a roll and instant film will increase between 60 cents and $1.25 each.

Movie film is also affected by the price increase and users will have to pay between 90 cents and $1.50 more for this film.

Allowances: Personnel chief testifies to raise soldier benefits

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — The Army Personnel chief told a House subcommittee recently that with the cost of living and travel expenses, soldiers today aren't making enough money to pay their bills.

Lt. Gen. Robert Yerks, deputy chief of staff for Personnel, testified before the Military Compensation Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee concerning an amendment to a military manpower bill.

The Senate passed the amendment earlier this month that would:

- Raise flight pay 25 percent.
- Increase subsistence allowances 10 percent.
- Authorize reenlistment bonuses for those with 10 to 14 years service.
- Increase mileage rates for PCS travel. The amendment would remove the ten cents per mile ceiling but DoD would have to actually raise the rates.
- Provide for a variable housing allowance for areas in CONUS where housing costs are more than 15 percent higher than basic allowance for quarters (BAQ).

E-1's through E-4's make up about 83 percent of our force. The Personnel chief told the Subcommittee, "You can have directed types of compensation of across the board compensation. The truth of the matter is, to the young soldier and his family it's all wrapped up in on paycheck."

In any consideration of increases in pay and allowance, the general urged the Subcommittee to consider the pay comparability problem "where inflation and pay caps have eroded the soldier's salary."

"A variable housing allowance is a very important provision in this piece of legislation because about 50 percent of our soldiers are married," Yerks said.

"You'll see a soldier marching at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and he's living in a hovel somewhere because he's married and can't afford living in an area like Washington D.C.," he added.

Increasing the PCS mileage rate is also important, the general said, because of the "great amounts of money the young soldier must take from his pocket for travel and lodging when we present him with an official set of orders to go from fort A to fort B."

DoD supports "many of the provisions of the amendment," Mr. Robert B. Pirie Jr., assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistis) told the Subcommittee.

"We favor the proposed increase in PCS travel reimbursements," he said. "Under-compensation of PCS moves is a major problem that we have recognized and have already proposed significant steps to solve. The FY 81 budget request includes the maximum increase in these allowances currently permitted by law plus a legislative proposal to eliminate the ceiling now imposed," Pirie said.

DoD also favors the proposal to use reenlistment bonuses for personnel with critical skills at their reenlistment points at 10 to 14 years, according to Pirie.

DoD does not favor an across the board increase in subsistance allowances as it "adds $139 million to the annual cost of the changes contained in the bill," Pirie said.

The Senate version of the amendment would set the effective date for the increase allowances as retroactive to Jan. 1, 1980. Representative Bill Nichols (Ala.), Subcommittee chairman, suggested a later effective date to reduce the first-year costs of the provisions in the amendment.

"It is unclear that retroactivity will enhance recruiting or retention of military personnel and, further, some of the provisions of the amendment could require a month or two following enactment for implementation to be worked out," Nichols said.

DoD recommends an effective date of April 1 which would save about $183 million of FY 80, according to Pirie. He also told the Subcommittee DoD does not "necessarily endorse" the variable housing allowance.

The Subcommittee had yet to vote on the amendment. Once the Committee recommends their version, the full House must vote on the amendment. Any differences between the House and Senate versions must be worked out before the bill goes to the President.

Doughboys end season

By Tim Boivin

The Doughboys pulled down the curtain to their season by taking second place at the TRADOC tournament at Fort Jackson, S.C. The Doughboys persevered despite being sent back into the losers' bracket and having to play four games in two days.

The Doughboys went into the final rounds of the tournament March 6 against Fort Gordon in the afternoon. Fort Gordon took advantage of the only strategical error during the tournament by the Doughboys to go on for the victory by the score of 85-71. Coach Oliver Green said, "We used a patient offense and we ended up playing without any pizzaz. We didn't play aggressively, didn't hit the boards and just generally played a flat ballgame."

The game was close until the final three minutes with the biggest difference being three points. Green said, "When they had the three-point advantage they spread their offense out, we started picking up loose fouls and that was the ballgame.

The Doughboys then faced Fort Jackson in the losers' bracket that night for the honor to play against unbeaten Fort Gordon Friday afternoon. The game was close until there were five minutes gone in the second half and the Doughboys pulled away for a 106-94 victory. Green said, "We controlled the free throw stripe and used the spread offense to draw Fort Jackson into untimely foul trouble early in the second half. We put Fredrick Nelson on the low post so if he didn't have a shot he would hit one of the forwards on the backdoor or one of the guards breaking off of his post."

Coach Green said the Doughboys were prepared when they faced Fort Gordon the next game knowing they would have to win two games in one day in order to take the championship. The Doughboys took the lead and spread out their offense again on their way to a 78-58 romp. Coach Green explained his reason for spreading out the offense by saying, "We wanted to bring Fort Gordon out of their zone so our guards could penetrate and we could go to Nelson inside. They didn't have anyone who could handle Nelson one-on-one and that was the difference in the game."

The Doughboys stayed alive because of the victory and had to play Fort Gordon one more time to decide the championship that night. Green said, "This game was a carbon copy of the first game against Fort Gordon practically all the way down to the score." The Doughboys lost 86-72 to settle for second place in TRADOC.

The Doughboys went into the game hoping the strategy they used that morning would again be effective. Green said, "We were alright early on but the turning point of the game was when we took a four point lead and then we allowed them to come down five times and miss while we couldn't score at the other end. This kept them close when we should have put them away. We turned the ball over a couple times and if we could have controlled it and scored we would have won."

Green said he enjoyed working with the soldiers on the team and was proud of their play all year long. He added, "I really enjoyed the whole season. I also enjoyed working with Tony Resino in coaching the soldiers."

One soldier overlooked all season long while the accolades were being handed out was trainer Howard Ingram. Howard was everywhere all season long and performed exceptionally well during the tournaments the Doughboys played in.

Congratulations are due for these fine soldiers who gave Fort Benning the very finest representation on the basketball court all season.

Last year the Fort Benning Doughboys took third place at the TRADOC mens basketball tournament. This year they fought tooth and nails down to the final gun before finally succumbing to the champions, Fort Gordon, and settled for second place. Next year?

Barracudas

Fort Benning youth swim team fares well in competition

By Barry Cuda

Fort Benning's Barracudas competed against more than 400 swimmers in a B/C level swim meet March 8 and 9. The meet was sponsored by the Columbus Aquatic Club and the Columbus College Student Recreation Association.

In the seior events, Beth Ann Herold took second place in the 100 meter breaststroke, third place in the 100 meter butterfly and sixth in the 100 meter backstroke and the 200 meter individual medley. Scott Kimsey took third in the 50 meter freestyle and sixth in the 100 meter butterfly. David Christensen usually competes with the 11-12-year-olds but this meet he swam with the seniors and pulled a second place in the 100 meter butterfly and freestyle events he swam were in AA division times.
two fifth places in the 100 meter backstroke and the 50 meter freestyle. Both the backstroke and the Steve Latorre swam to a second place B Division time in the 13-14-year-olds 200 meter individual medley and also came in fifth in the 100 meter butterfly. Cackie Walters scored a double bonanza when she led the field in the 11-12-year-olds 100 meter breaststroke while setting a personal A Division time. Walters also came in sixth in the 50 meter freestyle.

In the eight and under events the Barracudas did exceptionally well. Jonathon King won the 25 meter freestyle in A Division time, took second in the 100 meter individual medley and rounded it all off with a third place finish in the 25 meter butterfly. Lyman King took second place in the 25 meter freestyle in B Division time. John Duckett swam to a sixth place finish in the 25 meter freestyle.

In the relay competition the Barracudas relay teams dominated the others totally. The team of Patrick Fagersten, John Duckett, and Lyman and Jonathon King took first place in the 100 meter medley and placed second in the 100 meter freestyle. The girls eight and under relay team of Liz Connor, Berit Fagersten, Starry Severn and Hanna McNair swam to a second place finish in the 100 meter medley and placed third in the 100 meter freestyle.

Injuries stop Doughgirls

By Tim Boivin

The Doughgirls saw their season crumble last week in the form of injuries to two of their key players at the TRADOC women's basketball tournament in Fort Jackson, S.C.

The Doughgirls center, Cheryl Kaufman, and one of their top forwards, Angie Burns, suffered ankle fractures in the first game of the tournament. The Doughgirls went on to win the game against Fort Leavenworth by the score of 85-44 but the injuries cast a shadow over the joy they should have felt from the victory.

The Doughgirls played a zone press throughout the game and spurted out to a 41-18 halftime lead. They dominated the boards as they picked off 61 rebounds. Phyllis Colbert led all scorers with 20 points, Marietta James threw in 12 and Earlie Rockette popped in 11.

In their second game the Doughgirls ran into a tough and tall Fort Belvoir team. Doughgirl Coach Hezzie Baines said the key to the game was the officiating. He threw out some statistics to back up his point, saying, "Sylvia Jones, Kaufman, Burns and Colbert all fouled out of the game. They had only 12 fouls called on them while we had 34 called on us. Where we really lost the game was at the free throw line; they had 36 charity tosses and made 14 while we only had 12 and made 10."

The Doughgirls still had a right to be proud as they outrebounded a team that had one player on the 1976 Olympic team and one on the All-Army team. They outrebounded Fort Belvoir 63-37.

The Doughgirls came back and romped over Fort Benjamin Harrison by the score of 80-41. Baines said, "We blew them out early by using a zone press in the first half to force them into turnovers. The score was 36-22 at halftime and I called off the press for the second half. We coasted from there."

Jones led all scorers with 23 points while Colbert threw in 15 and Jeanette Dent popped in 14. The Doughgirls had 56 rebounds, shot 66 percent from the field and 73 percent from the charity stripe.

The Doughgirls were eliminated from the double-elimination tournament in their next game with Fort Gordon as they went down to a hard fought 58-53 loss. Baines said, "We tried our best but that wasn't enough with two of our key players out there playing injured. The game was close until the last three minutes when the loss of rebounding really settled in as Fort Gordon started to take advantage of us."

Coach Baines said, "I would like to thank all the fans who came out to support the team this year and just wish we could have brought something back to show for our effort."

The Doughgirls ended the season with a 24-4 record.

DYA soccer starts tomorrow

Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) will kick-off its soccer league tomorrow with a scheduled six-game slate.

The games will be held at Blue Field at the intersection of Yeager and 1st Division Streets across from the equestrian field. Opening Day ceremonies will begin at 12:30 p.m. and the first four games will begin at 1 p.m. Two more games will follow at 2:30 p.m.

At 1 p.m. in the Junior Division for children ages six to nine-years-old, the sounders will square off against the Red Devils on Field 2 while the Panthers will take on the Bobcats on Field 3. At 2:30 p.m. the Cosmos will battle against the Blazers on Field 3.

In the Intermediate Division for children ages 10-13 the Blue Knights will hold court against the Razorbacks at 1 p.m. in Field 1 while the Demons will square off against the Blazers on Field 4. The Cosmos will take on the Chiefs at 2:30 p.m. on Field 4.

Continue to read DYA highlights for information concerning the baseball registration that will take place at the end of March. For information concerning any DYA events contact Don Plottner at 545-3070.

Brigade championship

HHC, 197th edges HHB, 2/10th for cage title

By John W. Turner

In one of the most exciting games played all season, the 197th Infantry Brigade basketball championship was decided last week when Headquarters, 197th Infantry Brigade (HHC) defeated Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery (HHB 2/10) 40-39.

HHC was undefeated going into the Brigade finals after having beaten HHB 2/10 in the quarterfinals. HHB 2/10 had to fight back out of the losers bracket to get another shot at HHC.

Neither team could take advantage of the other in the low scoring game. At one point, HHC held a six-point lead and that was the biggest of the night. HHC led by a basket at halftime, 22-20.

In the second half the two teams continued to play nip and tuck ball while exchanging basket for basket. Neither team could gain more than a two-point advantage. As time ran out, Michael Wilson of HHB 2/10 was fouled and awarded two free throws. With nothing but zeros showing on the scoreboard he needed to make one to tie the game and both for the win. HHB 2/10 was heartbroken as Wilson missed both free throws and HHC had the championship.

Losing Coach Roy Burney of HHB 2/10 said, "When they fouled Wilson I really thought we had them because he was one of our better free throw shooters. Sometimes you can't get anything to drop no matter who you are."

HHC was led in scoring by Winston James with 16 points while Donald Evans contributed 14. HHB 2/10 Victor Jones had eight points in a losing effort while Albert Jenkins dropped in seven.

HHC finished the season with a record of 15-3. HHb 2/10 finished as Post Champions with a record of 18-3.

Members of Headquarters, Headquarters Company, 197th Brigade, mens basketball team showcase the trophys they received for winning the brigade basketball championship.

Special athletes compete here

By Debbie Harrison

Last weekend approximately 250 very special athletes from all parts of Georgia came to Columbus and Fort Benning to compete in the State Special Olympic Winter Games.

In Audie Murphy Gym Saturday spectators showed their excitement and support for the participants as two exciting teams fought to a 30-30 tie at the end of one hour of basketball. The tie threw the game into an overtime period and showed that there truly aren't any losers in the Special Olympics.

Baker High School's Kevin Mahone scored all four points for the red team in the overtime period to pace them to a 34-30 victory. After the end of the game Kevin said, "I feel good that we won. We have been practicing at least three weeks for this game."

Even though in the scoring column the red team won nobody really lost. In the Special Olympics winning isn't important. The goal is to try and to learn from the experience. The Special Olympics helps the mentally retarded and the handicapped to gain self-confidence and to show their family and friends, not to mention themselves, that they are able to accomplish something.

The mentally retarded and the handicapped have always been told "You can't do it." The motto of the Special Olympics is "You can do it. All you need is the chance to do it." The Special Olympics gives them that chance.

10 teams participated in the basketball games. Another event held was the run, dribble and shoot. There were 56 keglers in the bowling competition at the Main Mall Bowling Center. Monty Latham of Warner-Robbins, Ga. bowled a 250 average for the highest game to capture the gold medal.

LaGrange, Ga.'s Charlene Smith said, "I have been looking forward to playing in the games because it gives me a feeling of importance."

When a bowler did get a strike he was given a standing ovation from the other participants and spectators. This was the first time that Fort Benning and Columbus have hosted the Special Olympics.

All of the contestants in the Olympics get a gold, silver or bronze medal. The Special Olympics also give many of the youngsters the opportunity to travel for the first time outside of their hometown.

The next Special Olympics will be the spring games May 23-25 in Warner-Robbins. About 1,000 of the states 20,000 Special Olympians will be participating.

In 1968 the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation created the Special Olympics. Since then it has become the largest program of sports training and athletic competition for the mentally retarded and the handicapped in the world. Some of the victors from last weekend's games may go on to the Nationals.

2/10th takes BB championship from 586th

By John W. Turner

The 197th Infantry Brigrade (Seperate) sports program received a big boost when Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery captured the post company level basketball championship with a 54-50 victory over the 586th Engineer Company. The victory gave the brigade a clean sweep of all three post level sports championships for 1979-1980.

During the slow pitch softball season A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry captured the post championship with a hard fought 5-3 win over a tough Airborne Department team. The team was also crowned as the champions of the 197th Infantry Brigade playoffs and finished with an undefeated record of 39-0.

Flag football season began and the 197th Infantry Brigade was again the cream of the crop. A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry again made it to the finals of a post championship. They met a tough IOAC 4-79 team who came into the finals undefeated and needed to win two straight games. They captured the title by winning 18-6 and 10-8 with the second game going into overtime. They finished the season with a record of 13-4.

Congratulations go out to those soldiers who participated in these events and they should feel proud for being a part of this winning tradition in the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Housewife enjoys marathons

By Bob Kuwik

Connie Cullifer is a 30-year-old housewife and mother who began running two-and-a-half years ago while in Hawaii.

Connie says she began running to get in shape and after meeting other runners, she became interested in running marathons. She ran a marathon in Honolulu in 1978 and her goal now is to run the Columbus Marathon in under four hours.

To train for a marathon, Connie averages eight to ten miles a day and 15 to 20 on Sundays for a total of 48-63 miles a week. Connie said her husband will also be running the Columbus Marathon and even her children enjoy running.

Connie usually enjoys running with friends but occasionally likes to run by herself "when I want to think." She added that she also enjoys macrame, fishing, sewing and motorcycle riding.

Connie said she prefers running in 40-50 degree weather and likes running in the rain. "I can hang with the heat but I prefer to keep my cool," she explained.

Connie offers this advice to people who are just beginning to train for long distance running: "First, don't get discouraged. Get to know established runners and ask their advice. You may also find that running is more fun if you join a local track club."

This week's clip sheet is for a 10K road race in Alabama two weeks from tomorrow. Anyone interested in carpooling to this one may call 544-4177; even if I don't go myself, this office can serve as a coordination point for carpooling efforts.

FYI, Hartford is approximately 20 miles WSW of Dothan, Ala., or slightly over a two-hour drive from here.

Second looks

The 5K Realtors' Run drew slightly over 100 entrants last Saturday. Leonard Horning won the Cooper's Creek 3.1 mile event with a time of 16:01. Close behind him were a pair of local prep aces, Paul Hendry and Tony Byers, with times of 16:08 and 16:45, respectively.

The Women's Division fell to a young lady in the 14 and under category, Tanya Jenerette. Her 21:41 placed her comfortably in front of Connie Cullifer and Kathy Papst's 22:05 and 22:52.

In the geriatric competition, 40-49 was no place to be. Jack Norton slipped by Fort Benning ace fogey Fred Dyer, and the best youngster Allan Taylor could manage was a fading third. All of them ran under 19 minutes.

The running was so tough, the best Billy Rogers could do was third (in the 35-39 group).

Women only

(How's that for an attention getter?) Avon and the Atlanta Running Center will sponsor a 10 miler at Stone Mountain Memorial Park Saturday, March 29. This race is one event in the Avon International Running Circuit which culminates in the Avon International Marathon Championships for Women. Anyone interested call 544-4177 for details.

Columbus Marathon

As promised, Making Tracks presents a few bits of last minute information for you marathoners. First, all of those who preregistered may pick up racing information and your numbers at the Peachtree Mall information booth today between 5 and 9 p.m.

Medical support will be provided by the Columbus Rescue Squad. They will be assisted by the Columbus Amateur Radio Club, which will have members posted along the course to monitor the race and assist runners by calling medics or police if needed.

The course will be well marked. Mile markers will appear every mile in red for the marathon and green for the minimarathon. Color coded turnaround signs will be placed well in advance of the halfway point of each race. Six inch x 18" white arrows on a dayglow orange background will mark other turns on the course.

Finally, the awards ceremony for both races will be at 1415 (2:15 p.m., civilians) in the vicinity of the finish line.

6-minute mile soldier's goal

By Bob Kuwik

Dave Johnson is a very strong local runner with a goal of a six-minute mile for the Columbus Mini-marathon, his fourth long distance run this year.

When training, Dave concentrates on quality workouts with at least 15 miles a day, stressing hill running and interval workouts. Dave, a company commander with the 690th Medical Company, says he psyches himself up during a race by concentrating on the other runners. "I start to race slowly then catch up with the front runners. My goal is to pass them before they cross the finish line," he said.

Dave began running while attending the University of Florida in the days when Frank Shorter was attending law school there and training for the summer Olympics in Munich. His advice to novice runners is, "Start slowly and only after getting a physical checkup. Read everything you can find on running to keep yourself informed. This will keep down injuries and offers quality workouts. Finally, be consistent in training."

If you or someone you know would like to be featured in Runner Profile, give Bob Kuwik a call at 545-2252.

It's raining violets

By William W. Erbach Sr.
TIC Chaplain

Early one morning there was atremendous downpour, as if it were being poured from buckets. A young mother said to her husband, "Hurry downstairs and pull down the windows so that the porch won't get soaked."

The sleepy young father jumped out of bed and ran to the porch. As he entered the house again from his emergency journey, he was startled. For there on the step sat his five-year-old son, a big grin on his fact. He, too, had been awakened by the downpour and had followed his father downstairs. They sat together on that stoop watching the rain come down, with the father putting his arm around his little son. The morning was depressing, gloomy, and te father was silent, thinking about what havoc all that rain would bring to many, not the least of which was their own plans to go on a picnic that morning.

Then the son looked up at him with a twinkle in his eye and said, "It's a gorgeous bad day isn't it, Dad?" With a whoop he scooped up his son, laughing all the way. When he told his wife the cause of the laughter she too joined in laughing. HOW ABOUT THAT!

It was a gorgeous bad day, for the boy had sensed what a poet long ago had said, "It isn't raining rain you know, it's raining violets." Can there be such a thing as a gorgeous bad day? There can be to anyone who has sunshine in their hearts. Christ said, "Unless you become a child you cannot enter the kingdom of heaven". The father was depressed, but the child saw it as gorgeous,their being together. Oh, that we could only have been able to keep the eyes of our youth.

Women must mask immediately

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga. (FORSCOM) — The Surgeon General has determined that women must mask immediately upon any exposure to military smokes. Previous policy required immediate masking only when exposed to HC. Possible harmful effects of certain chemical agents on a fetus, however, make the requirement for protection against exposure greater for women than for men. Except for HC, men must mask only if the smoke is dense, exposure is prolonged or the smoke causes difficulty in breathing.

DIO wins 2nd award

The Directorate of Industrial Operations (DIO) won the Commander's Resources Management Award for the second consecutive rating period of July 1-Dec. 31.

This award, a part of the Department of Army Productivity Improvement Program, was established to recognize exceptional management improvement within a unit or activity.

A total of 34 DIO actions were implemented or approved during this period resulting in first year savings of $468,213. These actions included individual suggestions, Quick Return on Investment, Investment Program submissions and management improvement actions.

"Points are awarded to each participant by their relative standings in each category. In order for small activities to compete with larger ones, an equalizing factor has been developed," according to Gwen Merritt, program analyst in the Directorate of Resources Management. Therefore, an activity with 1,000 people would have to show ten times as many improvement actions as an activity with only 100 people.

An example that resulted in Fort Benning retaining $45,257 a year took place at the Clothing Issue Facility (CIF), a DIO activity.

When turning in field gear and equipment, individuals who were short items either signed a statement of charges or a Report of Survey was initiated. The Army eventually collected the money from the soldier. However, this money never came back to Benning's CIF. Therefore, CIF stock had to be replaced from locally authorized funds. Now soldiers will pay cash for missing items and CIF can immediately spend this cash on the purchase of new equipment.

The Directorate of Resources Management administers this program and the Program Budget Advisory Committee evaluates the submitted packets at the close of every six-month rating period.

Credit history can be transferred

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — "We're sorry, your loan request has been denied. You don't have any credit references."

"But, I had good credit before I went overseas. What happened?"

Soldiers returning from overseas often have trouble getting credit because they don't have a credit history at their new station.

Joan and David were stationed at Fort Devens, Mass. before they went to Germany. They had established credit through a charge account, a loan and a mortgage while they were there. Then they PCS'd to Germany for three years.

Upon their return, they moved to Fort Stewart, Ga. Since their jalopy wasn't going to make it through another year, they decided to buy a new car. That's when they found they had no credit history.

What they didn't realize, they could have 'carried' their credit rating with them. The credit history from the Fort Devens area can be transferred to the Fot Stewart area.

To do this, they must contact the Consumer Relations Department of the credit bureau that services the old location.

A credit bureau is a company that gathers and sells credit information about consumers. When a creditor asks a credit bureau for a report, the bureau sends the creditor whatever information it has on file about you.

Credit bureaus can be found in the yellow pages under 'credit' or 'credit rating and reporting agencies'. At their request, Joan and David's credit history would be transferred to the credit bureau servicing the new duty station. A small fee might be charged for this service.

But suppose you had no credit rating before you went overseas. In this case, you'd have to establish credit by giving the consumer relations department of your local credit bureau the following information:

- Name and social security number
- Prior address in the U.S.
- New address and phone number
- Previous bank accounts and any credit transactions.

You can also use letters from overseas establishments such as AAFEs, clubs, military banks or credit unions to establish credit. These letters should be on official letterhead paper. If possible, they should include information on the type of transaction, when it took place, when it was completed and a rating such as excellent, good or bad.

It is possible to establish and maintain a good credit history while you're overseas by making mail order purchases and keeping a stateside bank account.

If you are refused credit, talk to the consumer relations department of the local credit bureau to make sure the information in their file is accurate.

Don't be denied credit simply because you're new to a location. Carry your credit rating with you.

Hunters must abide by rules

By Tim Boivin

The spring turkey season is about to begin in Georgia and Alabama but hunters beware! There are rules and regulations that need to be followed.

The season in Alabama lasts from March 20 until April 25. The season in Georgia begins March 22 and ends May 4. The bag limit is one bearded gobbler per hunter for the entire reservation.

The only weapons to be used are shotguns with number two shot or smaller, muzzle-loading rifles, long bows and compound bows.

Any hunters on the Fort Benning Military Reservation 16 years of age or older must have in their possesion a valid Fort Benning Hunting Permit. Permits will be issued by the Provost Marshall (Bldg. 215) only to eligible individuals who have a valid state license. A big game license is required for hunting turkeys by the state of Georgia. Hunters are reminded that 1979-1980 post permits and Georgia hunting/big game licenses expire March 31.

The use of recorded calls or sounds, or recorded or electrically amplified sounds or imitations of calls or sounds to hunt any game bird or game animal is prohibited.

Clearence to enter areas for hunting purposes will be as outlined in USAIC Regulation 210-2, Hunting and Fishing Regulations.

All kills must be reported to the Fish and Wildlife Branch of the Directorate of Facilities Engineering (DFAE) at 544-6122 or to the Buildings and Grounds Division of DFAE at 545-7533. Information needed when reporting kills is the weight of the gobbler, the length of the beard and the general area in which the gobbler was harvested.

Aviation rules affect officers

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Officers interested in becoming aviators, take heed. The rules are changing.

Starting in October, active duty commissioned officers wishing to attend flight school for Specialty 15 (aviation) or Specialty 71 (aviation materiel management) will only be eligible until the end of their fourth year of service, according to MILPERCEN officials.

They may be required to branch transfer and, if so, they will not be eligible for flight school if they have attended their branch advanced course, officials added.

Up until April 1979, aviation was an advanced specialty, officials explained. Officers became eligible for flight school between their second and fifth years of service after becoming qualified in a branch specialty.

Specialty 15 and 71 are now entry-level specialties. Over the next two years, officials say, the number of flight school quotas for officers coming on active duty in these specialties will increase to about 85 percent. During FY 81, 195 slots will be available to officers already on active duty.

Officers wanting to attend flight school for Specialty 15 must be in one of the following branches or transfer into one of these branches upon completion of flight school: infantry, armor, field artillery, air defense artillery, military intelligence or Signal Corps.

Those wanting Specialty 71 must be willing to transfer into the Transportation Corps.

Officers may continue to apply for flight school during FY 80 but, officials advise, they should do so as soon as possible as quotas are very limited.

Eligibility requirements and application procedures are in AR 611-110, officials said.

Applications should be forwarded to:

- For Specialty 15: U.S. Army MILPERCEN, ATTN: DAPC-OPE-AV, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332 (AV 221-9794/9446)
- For Specialty 71: U.S. Army MILPERCEN, ATTN: DAPC-OPG-T, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332 (AV 221-7504)

Aviation opportunities are also available to Medical Services Corps officers or other officers interested in Specialty 67J (AERO-Medical Evaluation Officer), officials added.

Officers interested in applying for this specialty should contact the U.S. Army Medical Department Personnel Support Agency, ATT: SGPE-MSD, Buzzard Point, Washington, D.C. 20324 for eligibility requirements and application procedures.

OWC auction

Annual show a success

The Officers Wives Club Annual Art Auction was held last week at the Fort Benning Officers Club Supper Club with etchings, watercolors, oils, lithographs and sculptors by internationally known artists.

The auction had something for everyone, from the expensive works of Rockwell and Neiman to the moderate pieces of a fine Purcell and Tsang.

Stealing the show were the works of Norman Rockwell, who for 24 years was the top cover artist for the Saturday Evening Post. Today, his artwork are collectors pieces worth thousands of dollars each.

Mrs. Addison D. Davis III, wife of Benning's chief of staff, said the turnout was excellent and the show was apparently enjoyed by everyone attending.

Among the 250 pieces of artwork on the auction block were works of another world famous artist, Salvador Dali. Dali is the most eminent of the surrealistic painters and his work is displayed in all major museums of modern art, including the Metropolitan Museum, National Gallery and Beaverbrook Art Gallery in London.

The OWC holds the art auction each year with proceeds going for scholarships, charities and the overall improvement of Fort Benning.

Office paper worth dollars

By Tim Mullen

Are you recycling white office paper? Fort Benning still has an organized paper recycling program for office paper.

The program is for office buildings on Fort Benning that use and throw away a lot of white bond paper. The program is called "Waste Not" and has been in operation since FY 1978. Everyone who works in an office building should know about it and participate.

There's no great effort to recycling office paper, or any other material for that matter, if a simple technique called "source separation" is used. For office paper recycling, this means putting all the recyclable paper aside and saving it before it gets into the waste can. Once material (paper, cans, glass, etc.) gets into the trash, it gets extremely difficult and expensive to resort it.

In "Waste Not" the person at his/her desk saves their waste paper in a desk top holder. When it gets full, they take the paper to a cardboard box that has been centrally located in the office for dropping off the paper. When the box is full, it is closed, taped shut, marked "recycle" and put in the hallway.

From there, the box is picked up and taken to a central collection point in the building. On a regular schedule, the boxes of paper are picked up and taken to a warehouse where they're again stored. At this point, when enough has been collected, DPDO puts out bids for the paper and a local recycling firm buys it.

Over the last two years, approximatey 20 tons of paper per month have been sold for about $10 per load. A total of $9,800 was made in 1978 and $17,000 in 1979. This money has also been recycled. It has been used for conducting environmental projects on Fort Benning such as conducting a survey of the post for threatened or endangered plants and animals and for historic and archeological sites.

Also be sure not to put contaminants such as gummed labels, staples, carbon paper, newspaper, etc., in with the paper. Not long ago a load of paper was sold to a contractor and it turned out that 4000 pounds of it were not reusable since it was heavily contaminated with carbon paper.

Everyone who works in an office and whose office is in one of the participating buildings on post should still be recycling their waste white paper. If your office generates a lot of waste white paper and you're not currently recycling it, you are encouraged to start. For information on recycling, contact the Environmental Management Office at 545-4766.

AAFES

Survey reveals savings up to 21% in ConUS exchanges

In these times of rising inflation and increasing prices, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) continues to meet its goal of providing its customers an overall dollar savings of 20 percent on items purchased through its resale outlets. Meeting, or exceeding, this goal is important to AAFES as well as to the military customers, since AAFES is committed to its institutional role to consumer protection and as a form of non-pay compensation.

A recent survey conducted by the A. C. Nielsen Co. at market areas surrounding 17 ConUS military installations showed an actual overall average savings of 21 percent.

In addition to meeting its savings goal to the military customer, AAFES generates reasonable earnings, all of which are returned to the service community through dividends to the morale, welfare and recreation program or to fund exchange construction programs.

commander won't let them go to college in the evening because they will lose them. This isn't true! Our university is set up to work with the soldier and around his military job. Consent by his commander is just an acknowledgement that he is aware that you are trying to further your education. The college instructors are aware that there are unknown and unplanned changes in military schedules. They have been and will continue to work with and help those students who don't abuse this function."

Technical training by the Army might also be worth some college credits. To find out if the training you received is worth college credits, contact the Education Center.

There are several programs, both at the government and at the university level, that gives a service member as much help as possible. The Servicemen Opportunity College Program allows a student to complete his classes at other schools and still graduate from Troy State University.

Military personnel do not have to take the SAT or ACT tests before entering Troy State. They may apply up to 90 quarter hours from such nontraditional sources such as the College Level Entry Program (CLEP) and the Defense Agency Nonconditional Training and Education Service (DANTES).

Veterans Administration benefit's students may defer tuition and fees during registration for billing at a later date. Classes are also open to civilians dependents and retired military personnel.

From the summer of 1978 to the fall of 1979 126 soldiers have been awarded degrees from Troy State. Confucious once said, "Man should develop his mind to the utmost of his ability." Have you?

SQT test to change

Starting in the fall, the SQT you take will be different from the one you take now.

The Army Chief of Staff recently approved certain changes to the Skill Qualification Test (SQT) that will be made on SQTs fielded during FY 81.

The written part of the test will be called the 'Skill Component' and will be much shorter than before. For combat arms E-1s through E-4s it will be limited to one hour. For all others it will be limited to two hours.

Soldiers who can't take the hands-on portion because they're assigned where they don't have the equipment for their MOS will be able to take an additional or substitute written test.

A new 'Job-Site Component' will be given by the first-line supervisor. This will replace the Performance Certification Component now given. The supervisor will get the job-site test booklet to use in daily training and then will give the on-the-job evaluation.

In the past, about 25 percent of the SQT was made up of tasks from the next higher skill level. The new SQTs will test only one skill level. In the future, soldiers will know sooner how they did on the test. Now, when soldiers take the hands-on and performance test, they get the results immediately. They may have to wait more than 30 days to find out how they did on the written part, however.

To resolve this problem, practice questions and answers will be provided so E-1s through E-4s can be tested and scored locally. The SQT will still be given on a formal basis once a year and the results will be forwarded to the Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) for analysis.

A system is also being studied to allow commands to score the formal tests locally. Using a mini-computer, brigade level units would be able to score their own tests quickly. One change already in effect is in the use of scores. Before, soldiers had to score 80 or higher to be eligible for promotion without a waiver. Soldiers who scored less than 80 could compete for promotion without a waiver if their score was in the top half of all those tested in their MOS.

Now, soldiers with a score of 60 or higher are eligible for promotion without a waiver. Soldiers with a score of 59 or lower may compete with a waiver. For scores of 60 or above, soldiers will receive bonus points when competing for promotion to E-5 or E-6.

Glad you asked

Do you feel you are receiving adequate training in preparation for your SQT?

Sp4 Andrew Dunn
Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat)

I feel like I'm receiving adequate training, well, it's not really adequate but it is good enough to get by. My MOS is 67N10 (Aircraft Maintenance). The way things are now, when something major goes wrong with one of the aircraft, we send it out to a civilian contractor. I think it would be to everyone's benefit if we were allowed to try to repair the problem first and then if we found we couldn't do it to send it out. This would allow us to gain more experience that would really benefit the unit in an emergency situation. With the exception of this situation, I think our SQT training is very good.

SSgt. William L. Young
179th Military Intelligence Detachment, 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate)

I think with the materials the Army has available I will be able to do well on it but the problem I have is that what I actually do on the job and what the study guide says I am supposed to be doing are two different things.

My MOS is 97B (Counter-Intelligence Agent) and according to my MOS discription, I am supposed to conduct investigations to further the security of the military by directing SAEDA (Subversion and Espionage Directed Against the Army) investigations and fill out reports on those investigations.

However, in reality I am assigned to a tactical unit and I am basically concerned with OPSEC (Operational Security) related tasks such as OPSEC briefings and classes to assist units with their OPSEC program. This makes it hard because I really have to know how to perform two jobs but I am only tested on the one that I haven't worked in for years.

Sp5 Huong T. Kidd
Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 34th Medical Battalion

Yes, I've been doing a lot of things that are related to my MOS since coming into the Army and I feel like I have been trained very well in preparation for my SQT.

Sp5 Steve Martin
498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance)

I receive on the job training and we also have weekly classes to help us prepare for our test. I feel I have received adequate training and will be ready when my SQT rolls around.

SSgt. Douglass Hart
Medical Company, Martin Army Hospital

I will be prepared for my SQT even if I have to dig the information out of the regulations. However, being new in this unit I'm not really sure what they have to offer me in preparation for my SQT but I intend to find out shortly.

Sgt. Roger James
Company A, 1st Battalion 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate)

Yes I do. The company commander gives me classes to help me prepare for my SQT test.

Sp4 Russell Parker
Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat)

Being in a headquarters company I feel like we have the opportunity for a lot of training. However, the soldier has to have the initiative to study on his own. Most of the OICs and NCOICs in the 36th are very cooperative in giving soldiers time off to study.

Our company also has one day a week set aside for MOS training and that combined with our tech center gives soldiers in this company excellant opportunitys to prepare for our SQTs.

Pvt. 2 Elizabeth G. Sparks
Headquarters Company, 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade

They do a pretty good job in preparing me for my SQT. Where I work we move around into different jobs periodically so that we are all cross trained and know all the aspects of our job.

Letters to the Editor

Paperwork a hassle

To the Editor:

"Keep a good soldier in the Army--Reenlist" is a watch phrase Army-wide but how can you keep a good man in the Army when the personnel who handle personal matters don't seem to care? I recently PCS'd from Fort Benning and encountered a number of problems that could be a major factor in many a good soldier saying "to hell with it" and getting out.

I was notified of my PCS in early October 1979 and applied for both a sponsor and concurrent travel on Oct. 25, 1979. As of Dec. 15, 1979, I had no response from either. I sent a personal letter to my gaining unit at that time in the event my request for a sponsor had been waylaid (which it apparently had--there is no record of it in Europe). A tracer was initiated the first week of January 1980 on my request for concurrent travel. In addition, having supervisors interested in my plight, I was allowed to call the European Liaison Office to check on my request personally. Imagine my surprise when I was told they had just received my request that very morning (January!) and due to it being submitted so late, I would automatically receive deferred travel! Although more than a little upset, I figured this was an isolated case of one set of orders being misfiled or temporarily misoriented and didn't pursue the matter.

The last week of January brought a letter from my sponsor along with an information packet from the new unit. There were two bits of information which piqued my interest: (1) due to the good availability of housing, concurrent travel was always approved, and (2) due to limited government facilities, full weight allowances were authorized.

I immediately took the paperwork to AG, Overseas Levy Section and to Transportation to see if I could have the information verified. I was told by Transportation personnel to go to AG and by AG personnel to check with Transportation--which was a typical response. After checking my orders which assigned me to my parent organization, I was told, "You're not going to this unit (referring to my sponsor's letter) but to the unit on your orders."

Thinking they could be correct, I

Vice chief of staff visits

Presentation

Gen. John Vessey (L) accepts Infantryman statue from AUSA president Jim Blanchard.

By Cliff Purcell

Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., Army vice chief of staff, was the keynote speaker last Friday at the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) spring membership meeting. More than 400 AUSA members and guests attended the social period and dinner meeting.

According to Gen. Vessey, "The Army is well and healthy but it has been fed short rations for a while. These are troubled times but history reflects that the world has never been without troubled times." The general posed the question, "What does the nation expect of the military? The nation expects a disciplined, tough, dedicated and honest force. The force must be well led and able to take care of what it is charged with. We must expect the military dollar to be well spent. The job of our Army is not to start wars but they must not lose wars either."

The general then asked, "What can the military expect from the nation? We must expect fair and sensible orders, jobs to do that the nation wants done and expect to be well led by civilian and military authority. The military wants to be treated fairly."

Gen. Vessey stressed that an Army life is different from a civilian job. "You don't work in the military, you serve in it," he said. "Some of our soldiers shouldn't be required to use food stamps but they should expect fair remuneration for the job performed. An Army must be disciplined and well manned. However, the question of the draft can only be decided by the American people and their Congress."

The general said, "It is our duty to tell the nation our needs but it is your (the American people) duty to provide that manpower. To have a successful Army we must have incentives for our young people to reenlist and to join the military. Our country is a great country."

Finally, the general posed the question, "What, then, can AUSA do? AUSA must make sure that the Army has the man and woman power to defend the nation. Identify for the youth of this country that service in our military is a good thing and great pleasure can be derived from serving their nation."

Jim Blanchard, president of the AUSA local chapter, presented Gen. Vessey an Infantryman statue for his challenging remarks and visit. Blanchard asked the chapter to "now, more than any other time before, to show unity, strength and pool the support of the military and civilian tri-community toward the goals of our nation and our Army."

By Gary Jones

"The Officer Efficiency Report (OER) is one of the most important things in an officer's career," explained CW2 Frederick Claassen, OIC of the OER section here.

In an effort to more accurately and fairly report an officer's job performance, the Department of the Army made several changes to the OER which went into effect as of Nov. 1, 1979. "The main difference between the old OER and the new one is the addition of the support form," Claassen said, "This support form protects an officer by giving him written proof of exactly what his job requirements were, and what was expected of him during the rating period."

When the changes to the OER went into effect, it created the need for the majority of the officers on post to have their old OERs closed out and new ones completed.

With almost 1,400 officers on post, this presented a formidable task for the post's OER Section. They were responsible for identifying which officers needed new OERs and for closing out the old OERs. They also processed new OERs (while checking for mistakes), making sure they were sent to DA by the deadline date of Dec. 31, 1979.

According to Claassen, the personnel of the OER section did an "extremely fine job" meeting the challenge of this sudden surge in their work load. "Our average work load, normally, is about 60 to 100 OERs per month," said Sgt. James Urban, NCOIC of the OER Section, "However, when the OER changes went into effect we processed 1,247 OERs and completed the job about one week before the deadline." This was about a 750 percent increase in the section's normal work load.

In addition to taking care of the increase in OERs, the OER Section reduced the late rate of OERs to DA from 12.6 percent in the last quarter of 1978 to zero percent during January and February of this year. During this time, there were four people working in the OER Section - GS4 Nancy Hanlon, OER supervisor (since has been promoted and is working in another job), Sp4 Fransis Brown, PFC Doris Howard and section NCOIC Urban.

"The people who work in the OER Section really deserve a lot of credit," said Claassen. Letters of appreciation have been prepared for all personnel who were involved in the OER transition. According to Claassen, now that the new OERs are in effect, the chances of an officer getting an unfair OER due to not knowing what his rater expected of him have been almost totally eliminated.

Scout-A-Rama

Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers, along with friends and relatives, gathered at the Municipal Auditorium and fairgrounds last Saturday to celebrate 70 years of Scouting.

Fort Benning was represented not only with its Scout troops but with Army demonstrations also. There was a free fall parachute demonstation by the Airborne Department's "Silver Wing," the Airborne's junior jump tower (where the children were able to get an idea of what airborne is like), and a UH-1 Huey helicopter from the Aviation Division (DPT) on the grounds for the kids to climb aboard and take a close look.

The Scout-A-Rama is the main fund raiser for the Chattahoochee Council of Boy Scouts and for the individual troops.

decided to call Europe one more time and talk to the unit on my orders. In less than five minutes time, I had not only confirmed my assignment but the information contained in my sponsor's letter. Armed with this information, I returned to the Overseas Levy Section and confronted them with the evidence. Being only a lowly E5, my word on the matter wasn't sufficient (understandably) and they promised a response after calling Europe themselves.

After one week of waiting, I asked a captain to call to see if he could bring any horsepower into play. He was assured that my problem would be taken care of posthaste. Another three days of inactivity continued and I finally resorted to my last weapon--that of requesting a colonel to use his influence in assisting me with my problem. Although his expressing an interest in my case caused a flurry of activity never before seen by AG personnel, the end result was the same--nothing.

It appears to me (if this is the type interest exhibited by support personnel) there exists a tremendous problem within the system. I was given varying excuses ranging from "the person I needed to talk with wasn't in" to "I haven't been able to call Europe because the circuits are busy--how did you get through?"

As an infantry soldier, I certainly appreciate the long, arduous hours necessary to shuffle paperwork in order to provide service to personnel. Oh, by the way, the information I requested from AG was never received; however, upon arrival here in Europe, I can tell you it was all true. And you want me to reenlist!?!

Barracks life

To the Editor:

Your article on barracks life missed the mark so far as identifying the real problems with barracks life. In the first place, I don't associate with the term 'bum', a now disgraced president once called me that and it sticks in my craw. Secondly, the barracks should not be considered a "home" environment. Surely, certain extra like bookcases, rugs, endtables and lamps make the non-homish barracks like somewhat more livable. Still, material objects that serve only to create the illusion of a hospitable terrain, yet do nothing to improve or secure the basic human needs, are just another reminder of our society's misplaced priorities. Some real problems in the barracks are noise control, smoke abatement (cigarettes as well as marijuana) and security from barracks thugs who wish to do absolutely as they please, irregardless of the other person's rights and privilege.

The basic issue here is that of the protection of minority rights, ie. the non-smoker, the dedicated soldier who wishes to sleep regularly, adequately and when he or she desires, not whenever the noise might permit, and the non-drinker, etc. The point is that the barracks is a very confined environment in which many different types of personalities must try to live, compromise and accomodate. But this does not mean pampering and using paternalistic philosophies, such as Capt. Gates' approach to off post privileges, suggests. If the soldier wants the army to play mommy and daddy then he should stay at home. Rather, a new command attitude should be instituted that strives to create a healthy, wholesome minimally adequate environment.

Sen. Russell B. Long, recently replied to the question, "Would you include defense spending in the (budget) cuts?" "I do not favor cutting spending for military hardware. But we could save money on personnel." Contrast this with Rep. John Anderson's, a Republican presidential candidate, answer to a similar question, "What matters most is what we buy not how much we spend. Personnel should be favored over weapons research."

The point is that the policies of the present, which have produced a military, especially the Army, that is viewed by prospective enlistees as a last resort, a place where losers wind up; class four personnel or even class three don't have the mental or the emotional maturity to comply with rules necessary for barracks life, nor do they make for a strong national defense. All the most advanced technologically superior weaponry is useless if the level of personnel education and intelligence is too low to operate the equipment effectively. That is what the Army is presently facing, as well as the Navy and Air Force. It is also a strong contributing factor in the barracks environment. Instead of the military catering to these marginally acceptable personnel, for national security's sake alone, the military should strive to upgrade the pay and environment to induct higher quality personnel to enlist. The point is, the person who can't control themselves in the barracks and conform to a few rules, is not going to be worth a damn if we should have to face up to the threat in the Mideast.

Finance clerk Worker of Year

A Fort Benning finance and accounting file clerk was named 1979 Goodwill Worker of the Year and Fort Benning was recognized as Employer of the Year for consistently employing handicapped individuals.

The 25-year-old Tyrone Hardy accepted his award at Goodwill's Harmony Club banquet March 17 in Columbus, Ga. and Col. Bobby Harris represented Fort Benning.

Hardy first went to Goodwill in 1974. He had nerve damage, poor vision, loss of hearing, impaired coordination and a speech defect. He was withdrawn and lacked self-confidence.

But following two years of assistance and counseling by Goodwill, he was ready for more responsibility. He went to work as a supply clerk at Benning where he earned a good reputation and later was transferred to finance in the records section.

His supervisors describe him as being "far above average" and he answers with "thanks for the chance to be self-sufficient."

Ad Valorem forms offered

Have you checked to see if you are exempt from paying the state Ad Valorem tax?

Servicemembers stationed here who are residents of another state may be exempt from the state Ad Valorem tax by obtaining a Fort Benning Form (SJA) 33 from the Legal Assistance Office, Bldg. 5, Rm. 16.

The final date for registration of motor vehicles in Georgia is March 31, 1980. If the servicemember is overseas and was stationed at Benning prior to departure, then the authorized dependent may register the vehicle by using Fort Benning Form (SJA) 34. For more information call Sp6 Walter Lawson, NCOIC Legal Assistance, 545-3281.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

524th shifts gears for field

Soldiers of the 524th PSC stand in tactical five-meter lines as Sp5 Danny Garner serves hot soup to SSgt. Sam M. Carson Jr.

By Matthew Boison

The 524th Personnel Services Company (PSC) recently packed their gear and went to the field to practice new skills and ensure combat readiness.

During field training, communications is very important. CEOI (Communications Electronics Operations Instruction) was stressed in one of the many classes the 524th PSC received while in the field. The CEOI contains secret documents entailing such items as challenge passwords, frequency calls and call signs. "If these documents were to fall into enemy hands it would cost us many lives," said 1st Lt. John S. Phillips, commander of the 524th PSC.

Processing paperwork and personnel is the basic function of the 524th PSC, but practicing those operations in the field is a different story. "Very few people on post realize our mission in the field," said Sp5 Stephen H. Keech, records clerk for the 524th PSC. "We are one of three deployable personnel services units in all of the stateside posts."

Basic tactical operations were practiced in the field and field readiness was tested. "We try to teach soldiers basic soldiering and help them adapt to a field environment," said SFC James R. McClurg, first sergeant for the 524th PSC. "We have had a 30 percent turnover of personnel in our unit and most of them are straight out of basic training or Advanced Individual Training."

The 524th PSC is the first personnel services company, Army-wide, to pass an Army Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP). "Everyone did the best they could do," said Phillips. "I am amazed by the amount of work we accomplished. Being out in the field is new to most of the soldiers and they performed very well."

Pioneers lead the way

By Rick Kiernan

On June 26, 1940, the first sergeant of Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry announced at reveille formation that volunteers were needed for a new concept — airborne. The challenge was accepted and 40 "Pioneers" became numbers of the 501st Parachute Company and the first airborne soldiers.

Challenges are nothing new for the soldiers of the battalion, as they have provided support for the Infantry School since 1919. Last year this support was vivid in more than 73,000 man-days being provided for more than 1,200 school problems or periods of instruction. The battalion is uniquely suited for its mission of supporting a variety of courses ranging from OCS to IOBC, and from NCO leadership courses to Airborne and Ranger instruction.

The distinction of being a TDA unit attached to the TOE 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) is unique to the Pioneers. It does provide the added benefit of participating in realistic training with the Brigade. To handle the entire spectrum, the battalion is organized into three units: Headquarters and Support with a Transportation and Maintenance Section; Company A, Mechanized with 38 M113 personnel carriers and a mortar platoon; and Company B, the Ranger unit which also has a TOW and ITV platoon.

The variety of men and equipment is astounding for a TDA unit. There are 22 MOS among the 415 soldiers of the unit. The motto of the Pioneers, "We Lead The Way," aptly describes the 1/29th. This pride spills over from the motor pool to the athletic field. In 1979, Company A won the post softball championship for the third consecutive year. The same unit followed up with the Fort Benning touch football crown.

Whether they are winning games at Fort Benning, driving APCs at Rowan Hill or walking the swamps at the Florida Ranger Camp, the Pioneers continue to "LEAD THE WAY."

Pvt. 2 Gaddis, new to the "Pioneers," comments, "I've been in the Army for about 10 months now. I have been a driver for the S-2/3 section for about a month now and I really enjoy my work and would like to continue my work throughout my Army career. I really like being a "Pioneer." My OIC and NCOIC have shown me that a soldier can be whatever he wants to be if he just has the desire."

History of the 29th Infantry

In the history of our country three regiments have proudly borne the designation "Twenty-Ninth." The first of these saw service in the War of 1812, but following the conflict, it was merged with the 6th Infantry. The second "Twenty-Ninth" served during the Civil War and in early 1901 Congress authorized a third Twenty-Ninth Regiment. With Col. W. M. Van Horn as commander, the Regiment formed on March 3, 1901 at Fort Sheridan, Ill.; it is this Regiment that has served in three wars and is still active today.

One year after its organization, the 29th went to the Philippines to assist in the suppression of the native insurrection and in 1903 Company E of the 1st Battalion succeeded in capturing the notorious bandit leader Adriano Concepcion.

The Regiment returned to the United States in 1904 and quietly spent the next decade performing garrison duty in Arizona, Utah and New York.

With the start of World War I in 1914, the Regiment undertook the important duty of guarding the Canal Zone in Panama.

In 1919 the 29th Infantry moved to Camp Shelby, Miss. and later in the year transferred to Fort Benning.

Founded at Fort Benning in 1919 for the purpose of teaching student officers, the U.S. Army Infantry School needed a unit to demonstrate realistically and correctly the doctrines and tactics taught at the school. The 29th Infantry assumed these new school support responsibilities. For the next 24 years, the Regiment continued its assignment as a demonstration unit and established its traditional home at Fort Benning.

Through participation in the development and demonstrations of new infantry tactics, organization and techniques, the 29th Infantry adopted the motto, "WE LEAD THE WAY."

When the United States entered World War II, the 29th Infantry left its home for Europe. It first defended the coasts of Iceland and then moved to England where it participated in "Operation Overload" — the stockpiling of supplies designed to maintain the effectiveness of the D-Day punch against Germany. In December 1944, the Regiment deployed to France where it provided security for the "Red Ball Express" — the famed supply route that kept Patton's tanks rolling towards Germany.

The Coat of Arms

The Coat of Arms is composed of three principal parts: The Crest — The Shield — and The Motto. Each symbol and color alludes to some historical event in the life of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Crest

On a wreath of the colars a lamp of knowledge or glamed gules.

Lamp — The lamp represents the "Lamp of Knowledge," a symbol that is universally used to denote education or teaching. It is thus explained, — as light dispels darkness, so does education dispel ignorance. We have adopted the "Lamp of Knowledge" as part of our coat of arms because as the Demonstration Troops of the U.S. Army Infantry School we materially assist in imparting to the infantry of the Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve Corps the approved infantry doctrines, method and standards.

Wreath — The twisted wreath between the lamp and shield bears the colars of the 29th Infantry — white and blue.

Shield

Per Fess argent and Azure, in chief on a mount issuant a mango tree proper, in base saltirewise a bayonet and a bolo of the first hilted or.

Tree — The tree represents the mango tree which is common to Philippine Islands. It signifies the Battalion's service in the Philippine Islands.

Crossed Bayonet and Bolo — The bolo is a weapon used by the Philippine Insurrectors. Bayonet and bolo crossed indicates combat. The weapon on the right is the victorious weapon. Thus, the crossed bayonet and bolo signifies the Battalion's victorious engagements with the Insurrectors.

White Background — The white background behind the mango tree is distinctive of our spotless history and signifies that the Battalion stands ready to win future glory.

Blue Background — The blue background behind the crossed bayonet and bolo signifies the color of "The Infantry." The Queen of Battles.

Motto

The motto of the Battalion is, "We Lead The Way." This was adopted because as The Demonstration Troops of The United States Army Infantry School, we lead the way for all the Infantry of the United States Army.

With the outbreak of "The Battle of the Bulge," the Regiment moved to the vicinity of Namur and Liege, Belgium and secured and defended river crossings along the Meuse River. In early 1945 the 29th participated in combat against numerically superior forces near Jemelle and Rochefore. In October 1946 while in Germany, the 29th Infantry was deactivated until May 1949 when it was reactivated at Camp Naunia, Okinawa.

When the violence of the Korean conflict broke out in July 1950, the 1st and 3rd Battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment transferred from Okinawa and immediately engaged in some of the heaviest fighting of the war near Chinju and Masan on the Nam River. On Sept. 5, 1950, the 29th returned to Okinawa where it remained as part of the security forces of the U.S. Army Forces Far East until its return to Fort Benning on Nov. 20, 1954.

Since November 1954, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry has served continuously at Fort Benning under various commands, but always as a demonstration unit for the Infantry School.

On March 21, 1973, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry was deactivated and redesignated the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade. Simultaneously, a new 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry was organized with the purpose of conducting all troop support missions for the Infantry School. On Oct. 1, 1973, the Battalion was attached to The School Brigade until Nov. 17, 1978 when it reorganized, and was attached to the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) where it proudly serves today by fulfilling missions in the tradition of the 29th Infantry Regiment as the sole demonstration and support unit for the U.S. Army Infantry School.

With a history of more than 42 years at Fort Benning, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry remains the "instructor" of the infantry of the United States — the Regular Army, the National Guard, the organized Reserves and ROTC units. Student officers come to the U.S. Army Infantry School from throughout the United States and the 29th Infantry shows them how things should be done. The students return to their stations to pass on to others the knowledge that they have gained. Thus, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry is and will continue to be a proud unit, performing a vital mission to both the infantry and the U.S. Army.

Professor Safety

Speedometers on 1980 model motor vehicles will only show speeds up to 85 miles per hour if a U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) proposal becomes law. The proposal was initiated to help maintain lower highway speeds which have reduced traffic fatalities and conserved fuel. DOT's National Highway Safety Transportation Administration estimates that half the 9,000 lives saved each year since enactment of the 55 mph speed limit are the result of lower, more uniform speeds.

Another benefit of speedometers showing a maximum of 85 mph, according to DOT, is that normal speed ranges would be easier to read. However, motor driven cycles that can reach a top speed in one mile of 30 mph or less, and vehicles used by law enforcement agencies would be exempt from the law.

Sgt. Jay Weldon 72nd Engineer Company aims the M18A1 Claymore Mine at a target to his front.

Engineers set off Claymores

By John W. Turner

The 72nd Engineer Company of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) recently conducted a field exercise on mine warfare at Brown Range, which included the setting out, arming and actual firing of the mines.

Approximately 25 soldiers from the third platoon were involved in the exercise. SSgt. Gary Secor and 1st Lt. David Ratliff conducted the classes on the different type mines and assisted the soldiers in the actual firing of the mines.

Each soldier was given a chance to fire an M18A1 Claymore mine, which included performing all stages of setting it up, arming and firing it.

A two-and-one-half-ton vehicle was the target for most of the mines. Most of the soldiers had never seen a live Claymore set off and really didn't know just what kind of effect the mine would have on a target. After seeing the holes the pellets from the mine made in the two-and-one-half ton, they definitely knew.

After a short break and another class on the M-15 anti-tank mine, the group proceeded to really put the vehicle out of commission. The M-15 anti-tank mine with a 22-pound charge of explosives was set under the rear wheels of the vehicle to show what would happen when the truck ran over the mine. The blast picked the truck up and blew out a portion of the rear, with debris falling some 200 meters away.

"The training was good for the soldiers," said Secor, "since most of them had never worked with a live mine before."

Sp4 Barry Reynolds, 72nd Engineer Company, inspects the damage inflicted on a two and one-half ton vehicle by an M18A1 Claymore mine.

Sgt. Charles Dodge, 72nd Engineer Company, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) arms the M-15 anti-tank mine for a live fire demonstration conducted recently at Brown Range.

1965 OCS time capsule found here

By Lester Albers

Last fall an unfortunate accident involving a truck and an archway brought to light an interesting aspect of the history of Officer Candidate School (OCS) here.

The driver of a tractor-trailer truck transporting wall lockers for 51st Company misjudged the space available to him inside the arches (which displayed the Noncommissioned School of Infantry sign) and caused the supports to crack and shatter. While cleaning up the debris, a black cardboard casing for a 4.2-inch mortar round bearing the inscription "CO (OC) 8-1965" was found. Rumors had circulated for years that time capsules had been left behind by attendees of infantry OCS but the exact locations remained a mystery.

The adjutant (also a former 51st Company TAC), 1st Lt. Jesse Heredia, delicately opened the capsule. Inside he found a roster of OC Class 8 dated July 21, 1965 which also listed their achievements: a Physical Combat Proficiency Test (PT Test) score of 459.3 and receipt of the General's Trophy.

There were originally two arches which spanned the cement walk adjacent to Buildings 2760 through 2762. These structures once housed the five OCS companies (50-54) before the reduction of the program in 1973 to its present two-company organization. The arches were dedicated on Aug. 25, 1965 at a ribbon cutting ceremony by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, then the commander of Fort Benning. The arches originally featured four lamps which symbolized the traits required of an officer candidate: desire, dedication, discipline and duty.

The remaining arch still proudly displays the OCS title and patch insignia — the symbols of hard work and professionalism. On the rear of the OCS insignia rests the gold bar of a second lieutenant — the constant goal of each candidate and a symbol of their responsibility.

54th Company graduated on Sept. 15, 1965. Most of the 174 new lieutenants were soon to find themselves in a place few had ever heard of — Vietnam. Those officers, the 30,000 subsequent graduates who walked beneath those arches, and the cadre have cherished the final thoughts those candidates left in their time capsule — "These archways are our donation to the men present and future who may pass under them while learning to lead our nation's fighting men — We pray these archways will always stand in peace."

ITV course here trains we

By Dave Bristow

There is a resemblance to the deadly cobra as it searches for enemy armor. With the push of a button, the track vehicle's dual launcher sends downrange a guided missile capable of destroying any armored vehicle which crosses its path, all while its crew remains completely hidden. Protected against enemy small arms fire and artillery fragmentation, this track gives its crew the high mobility and protection they've not known before.

The vehicle which makes all this possible is the Army's new Improved Tow Vehicle, known as the ITV.

So unique, the track is able to fire and reload from the inside, which gives its crew that rapid two-round hit capability before they have to reload.

Combining with the proven Tube-launched Optically-tracked Wire-guided missile (TOW), M113A1 armored personnel carrier and a powered cupola, the ITV forms a highly effective and survivable anti-armor weapons system.

Putting all this knowledge and weapon system together into a program for the soldier is a 15-day ITV Transition Trainer course taught at Fort Benning by NCO instructors from the Weapons, Gunnery and Maintenance Department of The School Brigade. Through hands-on training, the Heavy Anti-Armor Weapons Crewman (11H MOS) soldier is trained on everything he needs to know about the Army's ITV and its weapon system.

On way to Europe

SFC Mayceo Hall, NCOIC of the course, explains the program and its reason for being: "All these people are 11H MOS on their way to Europe. That is one of the prerequisites for coming to this course. They must be enroute to Europe to a unit that has or will soon have the ITV.

"The course starts off the first day with a pre-test. During the pre-test, we determine the level of proficiency these soldiers are at as far as operating the standard weapon system. We have found that just because a man has an MOS of 11H does not mean he is completely TOW qualified. Some of the students have been supply sergeants or cooks and some were just reclassified from another MOS. After we determine at what level these soldiers are, we go into qualification the second day. This is to qualify the soldier as an 11H on the standard TOW system, before we go into the ITV vehicle. Each soldier gets his chance to qualify as a first class gunner. The third day is set aside for TOW refresher training and then we are ready to start talking about the vehicle itself.

"We have 17 tasks we teach, which are basic squad tasks. These are jobs that everyone working on the ITV must know. We start off with an introduction to the ITV and then show them the characteristics of the vehicle, to include how the turret operates. Then we go into the communications.

"The innercommunications equipment is very important. This is because with the track running all the time, it's extremely important for the crew to hear what is going on. We put a lot of emphasis on this."

Rapid deployment

Hall continued, "Next we go into crew drills. This teaches the crew how to rapidly deploy the weapon system from the vehicle to the ground mounted mode of operation. There are times when the ITV will not be able to go where other vehicles can. We might not be able to place the ITV in a designated area the commander may want us to cover. If this is the case, we might end up having to ground mount the system.

"Additionally, we have 20 hours of turret operation and trouble shooting. The crew goes through this to determine whether the turret is operational prior to moving into combat. This is one of the tasks we find many people having trouble with. It should only take about 20 to 25 minutes for a well-trained crew to conduct. Another frequent task we have found soldiers having difficulty with is reloading. In all the tasks we teach, we put the soldier in the most critical type of situation that he can be found in. Reloading is one of these situations. We put the soldier in a situation where he is traveling with the launcher in the stow position. As he begins to cross an open area, a target appears on the other side of the wood line. He then has to stop, move from the stow position, traverse around and engage that target. Once he engages that target, he then must reload and engage another target. This is a very critical task. We are giving them one minute to traverse around, engage a target, reload and be prepared to engage another target.

"Every soldier must be able to do the job of the other crewmembers. He goes through the role of gunner, loader, squad leader and driver. He must pass each particular task," he added.

Units in Germany have already started receiving the ITVs. Training for these units is presented by mobile training teams that use the unit's vehicles. The idea behind this course is to not send a soldier from here to a unit where they have the ITV and have him go in there without knowing anything about the vehicle. This way the soldier is already ITV and trainer qualified.

Commenting on what he thinks of the course, Hall said, "I think the program is a wonderful idea. The soldier knows what he is expected to do when he arrives at an ITV unit. Also, a soldier who goes through this course goes to Europe with all the latest changes and literature we have available on the system. When these people leave Fort Benning they are ready to go out to a unit and advise that battalion commander or S-3 as to how to conduct training for the ITV."

Sp4 Don Gray came here to attend the ITV course. Like the other students, he too will be on his way to Germany once he leaves Benning. Commenting on the program, Gray said, "I was stationed at Fort Campbell when Department of the Army chose me to come here first, go through this course and then go on over to Germany. I've learned a lot about the ITV capabilities since I've been here. The instructors are very good. I've found the course to be very informative."

Backbone of the infantry

Another student, Sgt. Leonard Duenas, said, "I'm looking forward to being an instructor once I get over to Germany. This course is a very good one. It's made me confident in what I'm doing."

SSgt. Charles L. Reese, an instructor with the anti-armor missile division, said, "It is my opinion that the TOW weapon system with the ITV is the backbone of the infantry. I may be prejudiced but I believe without the TOW weapon system, the infantry would catch a lot more heck. Besides knocking out enemy armor, you can use it to engage concrete machinegun bunkers or any hardened area on the battlefield that can't be reached by any other weapon. This system can really make the infantryman's job easier."

Like the king cobra, this vehicle with its weapon system commands respect — and the hands-on training given by the trainer course teaches these soldiers just how good a friend they have in the ITV.

The ITV dual launcher traverses around in preparation of firing its wire-guided missile that is capable of knocking out any known armor vehicle in its path.

Redeye

2-man teams from 1/58th weapon experts

By Chip Koss

Keeping the skies clear in the event of hostile aircraft over the 1/58th Infantry Battalion (Patriots) is the job of the Redeye section of the Combat Support Company (CSC) of the 1/58th Infantry.

The Redeye is a ground to air, heat seeking, guided missile that is encased in its own launcher. The Redeye is operated by a single gunner and assisted by the team chief and they make up the two-man Redeye team.

The men who operate the Redeye have had extensive training at the Air Defense School at Fort Bliss, Texas and have the job skill of 16P (Redeye Missileman). Even though they are not infantry trained, by the time they have participated in one or two field exercises they are knowledgeable of infantry tactics.

Sp4 Wallace Terry and Pvt. 2 Raymond Roach work together making up one such experienced and tested team.

The team chief, Wallace Terry of Manchester, Ga., joined the Army after high school and has been with Redeye sections since then. His job as team chief makes him responsible for the maintenance, security and training of the gunner and himself. He must be sure that the Redeye will fire when it is rested on the gunner's shoulder, also insuring that there is enough clearance to the rear so the back blast from firing the weapon does not injure anyone.

He also must be able to distinguish enemy aircraft from friendly ones and communicate this information to his gunner in about three seconds. Terry knows how to recognize over two-hundred types of aircraft. He is also responsible for the welfare of his gunner. Terry said, "If my gunner is locked on the exhaust of an enemy aircraft and another enemy aircraft starts a gun run on us (attacks their position), my gunner may not be aware of the threat of the other aircraft. It's my job to get him under protective cover."

The gunner, Raymond Roach of Atlanta, Ga., joined the Army after high school and took Redeye training at Fort Bliss and has served in this field for 15 months. His job as gunner of the Redeye system is not just pulling the trigger. Roach must also know and be able to identify over two-hundred different types of aircraft, pull preventive maintenance and effectively lock on to an enemy aircraft. Roach said, "I can't fire at an aircraft coming toward me, only when the aircraft has gone past me or has later crossed my position. But when I do get his exhaust in my sights, I can flame his backside!"

Roach added, "If an enemy helicopter comes in range of my Redeye it makes no difference because I can shoot him down coming or going."

The Patriots employ their Redeye teams to cover and protect the skies over their men — from forward combat companies to the life line support elements to the rear.

Traffic tips

In accordance with USAIC Reg 190-5, Sec 4, para 14h and Georgia Traffic Code 68A 901A, any person operating a motor vehicle in a careless manner with willfull or wanton disregard for the safety of persons or property, without due caution, at an excessive speed under the circumstances, is guilty of reckless driving.

Under USAIC Reg 190-5, any person convicted of reckless driving will automatically be assessed six points on their driving record and commanders have the authority to take action of nonjudicial punishment.

Under Georgia law, any person convicted of reckless driving shall be punished upon first conviction by imprisonment for a period of not less than five days or more than 90 days, or by a fine of not less than $25 or more than $500, or both fine and imprisonment. The punishment for a second conviction within three years is imprisonment of not less than 10 days or more than six months, or a fine of not less than $50 or more than $1,000, or both fine and imprisonment.

From Feb. 24 to March 2 there was a total of 22 motor vehicle accidents reported with five injuries and $23,655 in damage. In six of the accidents, speed was a contributing factor. Other factors are inattentiveness, failure to yield the right of way, improper backing and following too closely. Be alert, drive defensively, prevent accidents.

Alert drivers anticipate actions of the other driver and are ready to react.

USAIC Reg 190-5 requires that all vehicles licensed and/or operated on the Fort Benning military reservation be inspected annually at an approved official inspection station of the state, on or off post. All vehicles licensed in states which require annual official state motor vehicle inspections and which bear an inspection sticker, approved by the issuing authority, are considered as meeting the requirements of the regulation.

Any vehicle displaying a red (1978-1979) Georgia state inspection sticker is in violation of USAIC Reg 190-5 and Georgia Code 68-1726. Current stickers are green in color.

Armchair Sports

By Tim Boivin

By day he works out of the operations office at the Main Post Provost Marshall. However, by night Capt. Ronald Stokes is a rabble rouser on the racquetball court.

Stokes is currently ranked 17th in the Men's C Division of the American Amatuer Racquetball Association (AARA) with 30 points. Most of the tournaments that Stokes plays in are in Georgia and Alabama.

Stokes is now preparing for the Dr. Pepper 1980 Racquetball Classic in Birmingham, Ala. He said, "I generally play in no more than two tournaments a month. This is one of the busier times of the year for me with two tournaments not only this month but next month also."

Stokes is also getting psyched up for the Fort Benning single elimination tournament April 28 through May 2. As Lt. Anthony Knight of the Physical Activities office said, "When you close the door that is it. You either have to do what you have to do or else you die."

Stokes hopes to make the Fort Benning TRADOC team in time for the championships May 17-22. There will be two players selected for the open team and two players selected for the senior team.

The two tournaments he plays in next month will be in Atlanta and in Columbus at the Court South Racquetball Club. Stokes is the only Georgian who is ranked by the AARA. He said, "The AARA grants points for the number of matches you have won and how well you do in the tournaments."

Stokes has been playing racquetball for two years now. He said, "I play the game of the aggressor, which is a power game in which you try to hit the ball hard. There is more running involved when I play in singles instead of when I am playing doubles with my partner, Jaimie Cernigia."

An opponent described Stokes' style of play as keeping the ball low and hard, with a low, "terrific" serve that is hard to see. Stokes said, "I try to keep the ball in a position that is hard for my opponent to get but easy for me to handle."

To keep in shape, Stokes said, "I usually play four or five times a week and do some running because you do run a lot in racquetball."

For those of you willing to get on the court with Stokes, he said, "I play at Audie Murphy and Santiago Gyms and at Court South in Columbus. I play with anybody I can get who wants to play."

If you are interested in joining the AARA and adding to the list of one Georgian currently nationally ranked, Stokes said, "In order to join you have to watch for the sanctioned tournaments. When you go to play in them you can join the AARA."

Be forewarned before you go, however. As one of Stokes opponents said, "You are scared when you get on the court with him because he hits the ball so hard." Just think, there are 16 players who hit the ball harder than him and Stokes' opponents are afraid of getting on the court with him!

Hunt Club to hold annual Spring Horse Show

By Tim Boivin

"A horse...

Horse – aye, better than man. With never a thought that is mean or low, never a base desire; that acts not a lie. Brave hearted, willing, unselfish in service. Bearer of fairy loads of laughing childhood, of ardent youth, of manhood's strength, of inert weight of weary age.

So, at the end then, with measured pace and slow, you bear us to the tomb, who shall better judge us than our horse? What better epitath than you – who men say have a soul – having rendered us the last service, shall sorrow that the cold earth lies heavy on the heart of a master you loved."

The Fort Benning Hunt Club is dedicated to that special relationship between a horse and his master that was the basis for that statement from the 1946 Spring Horse Show program. The Hunt Club will be holding their annual Spring Horse Show March 29 at the French Polo Field on First Division Road.

The Spring Horse Show gives riders the chance to exhibit the skills and relationships they have with their horses. The entry fee for the contestants is $3. Anyone who registers after midnight Monday must pay an additional $1 for each class they are competing in. Checks may be made payable to the Fort Benning Hunt Club.

Schooling will not be permitted in the show ring the day of the show. A schooling area will be provided and practice jumps will be available. Schooling will not be permitted in the hunt field after 8:30 a.m. Stalls will not be available for visiting contestants. A picket line will be provided in the vicinity of the area for trailer and van parking.

The show is not just for the participants. Anyone who wants to see the beauty of a horse going through a routine with its master will want to come to this show.

The best part about the show is its price. In the 1946 Spring Horse Show, anyone who wanted to just watch the show, not participate, would have to pay 25 cents¢. This year, the show is free. Food and refreshments will be available.

Supply clerk is triple jump Army superstar

By Matthew Boison

PFC William E. Loyd, supply clerk for Bravo Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat Heavy), is a superstar in his own right.

Born into a family of 10, Loyd rose to become one of the best triple jump athletes in the United States. All of his life Loyd had played basketball. In his senior year at Bloom Township High School in Chicago Heights, Ill., a perennial national power in high school track and field, Loyd's interests turned to track and field. Through rigorous training and a true desire to win, Loyd, by the end of his senior year, had become Illinois state champion, an All-American and held the record for both the indoor and outdoor triple jump.

News spread quickly and Loyd was swamped with scholarship offers from numerous colleges to compete in track and field. After accepting a scholarship to Fresno State College in California, Loyd began to build an outstanding record of victories. Having placed second and third in two major meets, Loyd won his way to the 1978 NCAA Track and Field Championships held in Macomb, Ill. He placed third there with a jump of 52' 10". However, that was only the beginning.

In 1979 Loyd brought his talents to the Army. Shortly after his induction, Loyd placed first in the AAU Invitational Track and Field competition with a 51' 11" jump. He also came in second in the Interservice Track and Field competition with an undaunted 51' 10". leap.

Loyd said, "I owe a lot to my high school coach. He taught me the good technique for my jumping. Without him I would probably have never been a good jumper."

The best was yet to come for Loyd's budding career. In July, 1979 Loyd was on his way to Algeria for the CISM World Games. Winning would not be easy for a healthy athlete among these world class athletes. For the injured Loyd, who pulled a muscle, it would be hard to even compete. He said, "My leg wasn't 100 percent but I wasn't scared."

After the measurements were recorded and the scores tallied, Loyd had placed fourth. Loyd wasn't disheartened by his performance, saying, "My coach told me to always keep an open mind. I knew I was hurting when I went to the World Games but I remembered what he said to me: 'If you lose today you will never get this day back again to do it over. So give it 100 percent' and I did.

Loyd is currently trying out for the All-Army Track and Field team. He also plans to receive a degree in Recreation Administration from Indiana University.

DYA soccer starts

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) soccer season got under way last Saturday under sunny skies at the Polo Field.

In the Intermediate Division four teams fought to ties while the Demons bedeviled the Blazers.

The Demons used a strong attack on their way to an 8-1 thrashing of the Blazers. Eddie Sprague sprung out of the season's starting blocks to knock in four goals while Mike Burke popped in three more. Demon goalie Darrin Tucker surprised everyone, especially the Blazers, by driving downfield to score the final goal. Ali Pena-Senas was outstanding at her fullback position for the Demons. Kevin Schnicker scored the Blazer's only goal.

The Razorbacks and Blue Knights fought to a 1-1 tie in a game dominated by the fine play of both team's goalies. The Razorbacks Raymond King did not allow a goal until the overtime period while the Blue Knight's Frank Wilson stopped seven point blank shots on goal. The goals were scored by the Razorback's Darryl Grogan and the Blue Knight's Ray Bradshaw on a penalty kick. Other standouts for the Razorbacks were fullbacks Sean Sanders, John Paul Wheatcroft and Patton McKinley.

The Chiefs and Cosmos also battled to a 1-1 tie. The Cosmo's Jim Butler and the Chief's Richard Lenig tallied goals in the contest. Halfback Mark Bell and goalie Jeff McClung were instrumental in the outcome of the game. Halfbacks Mike Saliba and Bob Augel were standouts on the Cosmos.

In the highest scoring game in the Juniors, the Panthers defeated the Bobcats 5-2. Panther forwards Bill Cassidy and Cyrus Howard both booted in two goals while Mike Wall scored one in the victory. Clay Van Meter and Benjie Burgess each scored a goal in the Bobcat's losing effort. Fullback Scott Jorgenson and halfback Shea Briscoe played an excellent game on defense.

"I've got it!" "No, I've got it!" "No, I've got it!" "No, I've got it!"

The Cosmos fell victim to the Blazers by the score of 3-0. The Blazer's Jeff Christianson scored two goals and Lance Sparrow finished off the scoring. Cosmo defenseman Mike Melson, halfback Mark Munson and fullback Ricky Gerding were recognized for their outstanding efforts. 'Tra' Johnson, John Chamberlin and goalies Jonathon King and Greg Copeland were selected by Blazer coach Jane Senecal as the defensive standouts.

Two goals by Jason Kelly and one by Pat Schooley led the Sounders to a 3-0 victory over the Red Devils. Despite the defensive heroics of Pieter Hoebeke, Steve Traub and Todd Barnes, the Red Devils were not able to silence the Sounder's offense.

Even in the Juniors there are masters of the one on one.

Tale of an ancient marathoner. . .

What Fred Dyer has done to establish the viability of life after 40, SGM (ret.) John LaVoie has done for life after 50. A prime illustration of this occurred in a marathon LaVoie ran on March 1 in Bethel, N.C.

Most people would be impressed by a man in his 50s who ran a marathon in less than 3.30 (that's about eight minutes per mile for over 26 consecutive miles). Even more would applaud the fact that he's never run one slower than that eight-minute per mile standard (though his 3.29:57 on March 1 was a close call). But the impressive thing in this race was what our ancient marathoner overcame: weather.

Snow began falling in Bethel, N.C. around 6 a.m. on March 1 and continued throughout the day. At the starting line, 100 plus runners faced 27 degree temperature and the prospect of 13.1 miles of a 15 miles per hour headwind on the out-and-back course. The temperature kept falling, reaching 22 degrees by the end of the race. It was so cold runners had to break the ice in aid station cups to get a drink. It's hard to believe there were 110 finishers under those conditions.

LaVoie braved the monstrous conditions in an outfit consisting of shoes, shorts, wool hat, turtle-neck shirt topped off with racing singlet and a nylon windbreaker, and a pair of standard G.I. OD glove liners. He complained only that his hands "were so cold and numb, I couldn't punch my stopwatch at the finish line," and that his wife had to untie and take off his shoes for him.

He also said that it took 30 minutes after the race for his ice coating to melt enough for him to begin picking it off every exposed hair. Brr!

Hats off to John LaVoie for just finishing, not to mention the time and age group honors.

Columbus Marathon

Weather provided little deterrence to the running of the third Columbus Marathon. Only at the end of the race did the temperature creep into the 70s, but the beginning in the mid 40s complemented by bright sunshine boosted spirits. The front runners sprinted off the line with determination, but life at the back of the pack was easy. Jokes and stories abounded.

After a few miles the camaraderie dwindled to a trickle. Even at the back folks began to remember what lay ahead. Twenty miles can be a very sobering thought, especially if you are the one facing running it.

Finally, all but a few of the social groups dissolved. Frontrunners Bruce Skiles and Jeff Keas ran together, but theirs was hardly a joking alliance; 'smoking' to be sure, but no stories and laughs. They were FLYING! Bruce was the better aviator this time, winning by 10 minutes with a 2.37:16, slow compared with his 2.21:47 Olympic Trials qualifying time three months ago in Huntsville, Ala.

The female lead featured Marilyn Hicks and Connie Cullifer. They apparently stayed right with each other for the entire race, even to the point of recording the same finishing times, but first went to Marilyn. She had better logistical support, coming from a lanky cyclist who shadowed her throughout the race as closely as Cullifer did.

Dragging up the rear were assorted oddities, notably the Col. William Shackelford consortium. They chatted and plugged along at a leisurely pace and also finished together, trailed by a couple of stragglers including one sheik.

Let no one deceive you, however. Anyone who has ever run a marathon knows that is is quite an accomplishment to finish, and quite remarkable to finish well. One always knows for several days afterward that the run was a taxing effort.

The minimarathon (13.1 miles) had nearly three times the finishers the full marathon produced. CTC runner Robert McDuffie won the Men's Division as convincingly as Bruce Skiles won his in the marathon, outpacing second place Paul Hendry by 3½ minutes.

Sixteen-year-old Tina Kroll won the Women's Division in 1.33:54, followed by Penny Kaiser, with 13-year-old Tanya Jenerette placing fourth with an impressive 1.37:53.

The 230 finishers of the two races seemed to enjoy themselves before and after the races, especially since the awards were presented inside the mall. (Temperatures were mild but sunburns abounded.) The awards were nice, the trophy for the marathon being sufficiently grand to convince marathon winner Skiles to switch from the mini to the full 26.2 miler at the last moment.

For any runner, though, support defines the quality of the race. The Pepsi folks, the multitude of volunteers, the police and ambulance service all contributed to make the event a success. CTC Race Director John Moore and Marathon Race Director Steve Wendell worked tirelessly to produce a run that all the participants and staffers could be proud of. Thank you all.

Coming attractions

Tomorrow is the Heart Run 10K. For you who did not register early, troop out to Columbus High School tomorrow. The proceeds go for a good cause.

Hawkinsville, Ga. produces a 10K and one mile fun run one week from tomorrow. That's about 100 miles due west from Columbus, but it is the only area race next week, except for Atlanta'a Avon 10 miler mentioned here last week.

Little occurs the weekend of Easter, but Morale Support will feature a repeat of the Valentine's Run format in its April 12 Bunny Run. More details as they become available.

Entry form

This week's clip job touts a five miler in the bucolic splendor of west central Georgia. Ellaville is less than 50 miles from here on Highway 26, so you can start planning a nice outing. Call 544-4177 for details on this or for other available race information.

Fort Benning sergeant trains winners

By Francis J. Amicucci

The drill sergeant is the first noncommissioned officer to welcome the new recruit when he first comes into the service. He was there when you first entered the Army and he is still there now.

Sgt. Venice D. Wood is one such person. He wears the hat that many people refer to as the "Smokey bear." He does his job everyday and he does it well.

Wood is a drill sergeant at Company C, 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. A native of Columbia, S.C., he was stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. before coming here.

Wood joined the Army in 1973, taking basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. It was there that he had the idea to become a drill instructor. "Those drill sergeants really impressed me and, believe it or not, I always wanted to be a drill sergeant since basic training. It took me up until two years ago to become one," said Wood.

Drill sergeants must go through a tough training school before they get to wear the hat. "Being a drill instructor is very demanding. If you really want to train the troops the correct way, it takes a lot of long hard hours. I really enjoy working with these young guys and training them, especially in One Station Unit Training, which is 12 weeks. I can make them what I want them to be. If I want them to be a bunch of duds, that is what they are going to be. If I give them all the effort I have, they are going to be professional soldiers."

When asked if there was a change in the types of soldiers coming in today, Wood replied, "There is a lot of difference in the quality of troops we are getting now. When I came in, in 1973, the training was a lot rougher compared to now. A lot of soldiers nowadays are immature. They really do not know what they want in life yet."

In order to achieve the desired results in initial entry soldiers, drill instructors must use various tactics on them to assure that they progress properly. Each drill sergeant has his own unique approach of dealing with new recruits. "I like to take an individual and treat him as a human being at first. Then, if I see that I am not getting anywhere with him, I use a different technique. The same technique just does not apply to the same individual. Everybody is different. I think the biggest problem that the majorities have is trying to get all these people from different parts of the world to work together as a team. I teach them from day one that it is teamwork. You have got to have teamwork and you have got to be disciplined. Without teamwork and without discipline there is nothing. I emphasize teamwork, discipline, but most of all — the will to win. You have got to have that will to win. That is the most important thing. Of course, you must be mentally prepared and physically fit," said Wood.

Since some trainees come to Fort Benning with wrong ideas, Wood has some advice for initial entry soldiers. "Go there with a positive attitude. You must have the will to win. You must think that nothing is going to stop you from winning. The ones who graduate from my platoon I know are mentally prepared, physically fit and they have that will to win. When they go to that T&E unit they are there; they are sharp. When they report there, their uniform is squared away. They have neat haircuts and they have discipline but, most of all — that will to win."

While Wood's senior drill sergeant was away attending drill sergeant school at Fort Jackson, Wood took charge of a 42-man platoon. As evidence of his fine work, Wood's platoon came out with an Advanced Physical Fitness Test (APFT) average score of 471 and 99 percent first time go's on the Performance Oriented Infantry Qualification Test (POIQT).

The platoon also had one soldier who maxed the PT test and another soldier who became the honor graduate of the company. All 42 soldiers graduated, and Wood was selected as the distinguished drill of the Two Station Training (TST) cycle.

Since Wood spends 72 to 80 hours a week working with future soldiers, he rarely has much time to himself. When he does have a few days off, it usually comes only between cycles. During this time, he likes to relax by fishing for crabs, dancing and listening to music.

Hometown recruiters wanted

Volunteers are needed to assist their local recruiters as hometown recruiters.

$13.3 million dollars has been allocated for the fiscal year 1980 Hometown Recruiter Assistance Program. (H-RAP)

The program, created to help the Army meet its required manpower level, is seeking personnel from within the ranks of the Army.

It is not the responsibility of the H-RAP volunteer to recruit people, but to contact old friends or aquaintances and them to talk to the recruiter. It then becomes the responsibility of the recruiter to 'sell' the Army to the referral.

The following list are qualifications necessary to volunteer for this program:

A. Not more than 23-years-old.

B. High school diploma or higher from the hometown to which ordered.

C. Rank—E-2 through E-5.

D. Preferably unmarried (married persons can be accepted).

E. No record of delinquent debt nor heavily indebted.

F. Must have valid civilian drivers license (waiverable).

G. No conviction record except minor traffic violations.

H. No disciplinary record.

I. Outstanding appearance and military bearing. Must be able to express himself to peers in a positive manner.

J. Must be a volunteer.

K. Previous volunteers are not eligible.

L. Personnel on PCS orders, pending compassionate reassignment or discharge are not eligible.

M. Approval of the unit commander.

Volunteers meeting the listed qualifications are nominated to the U.S. Army Recruiting Command, Fort Sheridan, Ill. Those accepted are sent to their hometowns on TDY orders for a 30-day period. This 30-day period can be extended another 30 days upon request for the recruiter.

Representatives are given an airplane ticket to their hometown, paid $16 a day per diem (in addition to their regular pay), 18.5 cents per mile in and around their hometown, and hotel/motel paid if not living at home.

Persons interested in the Hometown Recruiter Assistance Program should contact SFC Charles Knight or Sp4 Donald Baker at 544-6916.

SSgt. Charles A. Harris, Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) receives the Honor Graduate Award from CSM Carter, commandant of the Communications and Electronic Department, Fort Sill, Okla.

Benning soldier earns honor grad at Sill

SSgt. Charles A. Harris of Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) has successfully completed the Tactical Communications Chief Course, class number 2-80, of the U.S. Army Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., where he earned the recognition of being named as an honor graduate.

The course was conducted Oct. 28, 1979 to Jan. 23, 1980. Harris finished the school with a percentage grade of 94.78 percent.

He was cited for his energetic application, technical proficiency and sound judgement, which he exhibited throughout the course.

"I plan to use the knowledge and experience that I acquired in this school to further my Army career", said Harris, "and I am considering applying for OCS to become a signal officer.

Harris was cited for being a hard working and highly motivated NCO. He was recognized as an organizer in both the classroom and practical exercises.

Mr. W. Freeman, chief of accreditation, discusses the self-study manual with Col. Dwayne Cameron, chairman of the steering committee.

Infantry School accredited

By Sharon Calabrisi

In 1975, the Infantry School was accredited as a member of the Vocational Commission of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS).

This was a major step in the Army's comprehensive program of achieving recognition of the quality of military training by civilian industry, unions and educational associations.

Action for accreditation of Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) service schools was initiated by the commanding general, TRADOC, to enhance the credibility of Army training and to enhance the career of soldiering.

The Infantry School was accredited at the technical and vocational school level, because it is not a degree-granting institution such as West Point.

Acceptance by SACS means that courses taught in the Infantry School receive official recognition in the civilian academic world. In many cases, a soldier earning a degree will be able to apply training courses earned in an Army school toward credit hours earned in a cooperating civilian school.

The Infantry School was required to meet qualifications in a wide spectrum ranging from philosophy and purpose to physical facilities and student services.

The Infantry School was given an opportunity to analyze various phases of their operation against qualification standards to prepare for the final on-site evaluation upon which qualification is based.

Again, The Infantry School is scheduled to be reaccredited this year by SACS by means of a management review of how it operates, which culminates in a 1980 self-study. SACS officials will visit here for three days to observe and discuss operations in light of responses concerning SACS standards for competency of staff, faculty, equipment, facilities and educational programs outlined in the 1980 self-study.

Accreditation signifies that the institution's services are of sound quality. It also indicates that the institution, through its membership in the Commission on Occupational Education Institutions, is meeting its broader social responsibility of promoting the pursuit of quality performance in every aspect of acceptance training throughout the nation.

Reaffirmation of this accreditation requires that the institution reexamine and verify its procedures to see if it still meets eligibility requirements and standards of the Commission. It is not simply an update of the last self-study, but a new searching look at how the school does business.

Soldier pens poetry

By Tim Boivin

SSgt. Phillip Slinger takes his past experiences to heart by expressing them through poetry. Slinger has been writing off and on for 20 years and most of his work deals with the military.

Slinger is a veteran of the Vietnam War and writes not only of the well known experiences every one has heard about but also of the little known incidents.

Slinger said, "My writing is reflections of the events during that time, the people I met, and I take a bit of a poetic license to express myself."

Slinger was stationed in Vietnam for four years. He reflected, "Vietnam is now viewed as more of a historical event than a current issue that divided our nation. Readers are able to accept my work better instead of looking on it as a problem."

Slinger started writing poems in high school under rather unusual conditions. He explained, "I took a class that dealt with the works of the three poets I admire the most, all of them from the 18th century: Byron, Skelly and Keates. Our teacher would tell us to pick the poets' minds and try to explain their reasoning behind the poem. Instead of doing that I would write a poem in their style."

Although some of Slinger's poems were lost in a flood at his parents' home years ago, he is still proud of the work he has accomplished, both in his poems and in the Army. He expresses this in his poem "Honor Bright."

"Honor Bright"

What is your honor worth to you?
Is it enough just to be true,
To always answer duty's call
And for your Country give your all?
But can you go the second mile
And on your face still have a smile,
Or will you falter when it's rough
And when the going gets too tough?
There is one thing we'll keep in sight
For we must keep our honor bright.

How can be keep our honor bright?
By doing what we know is right,
By helping everyone to see
How much it's worth, just to be free.
By reaching out our helping hands
To needy folks in other lands.
To stand up for our fellow man
All these are parts of honor's plan.
To fight, die, on the side of right,
These things will keep our honor bright.

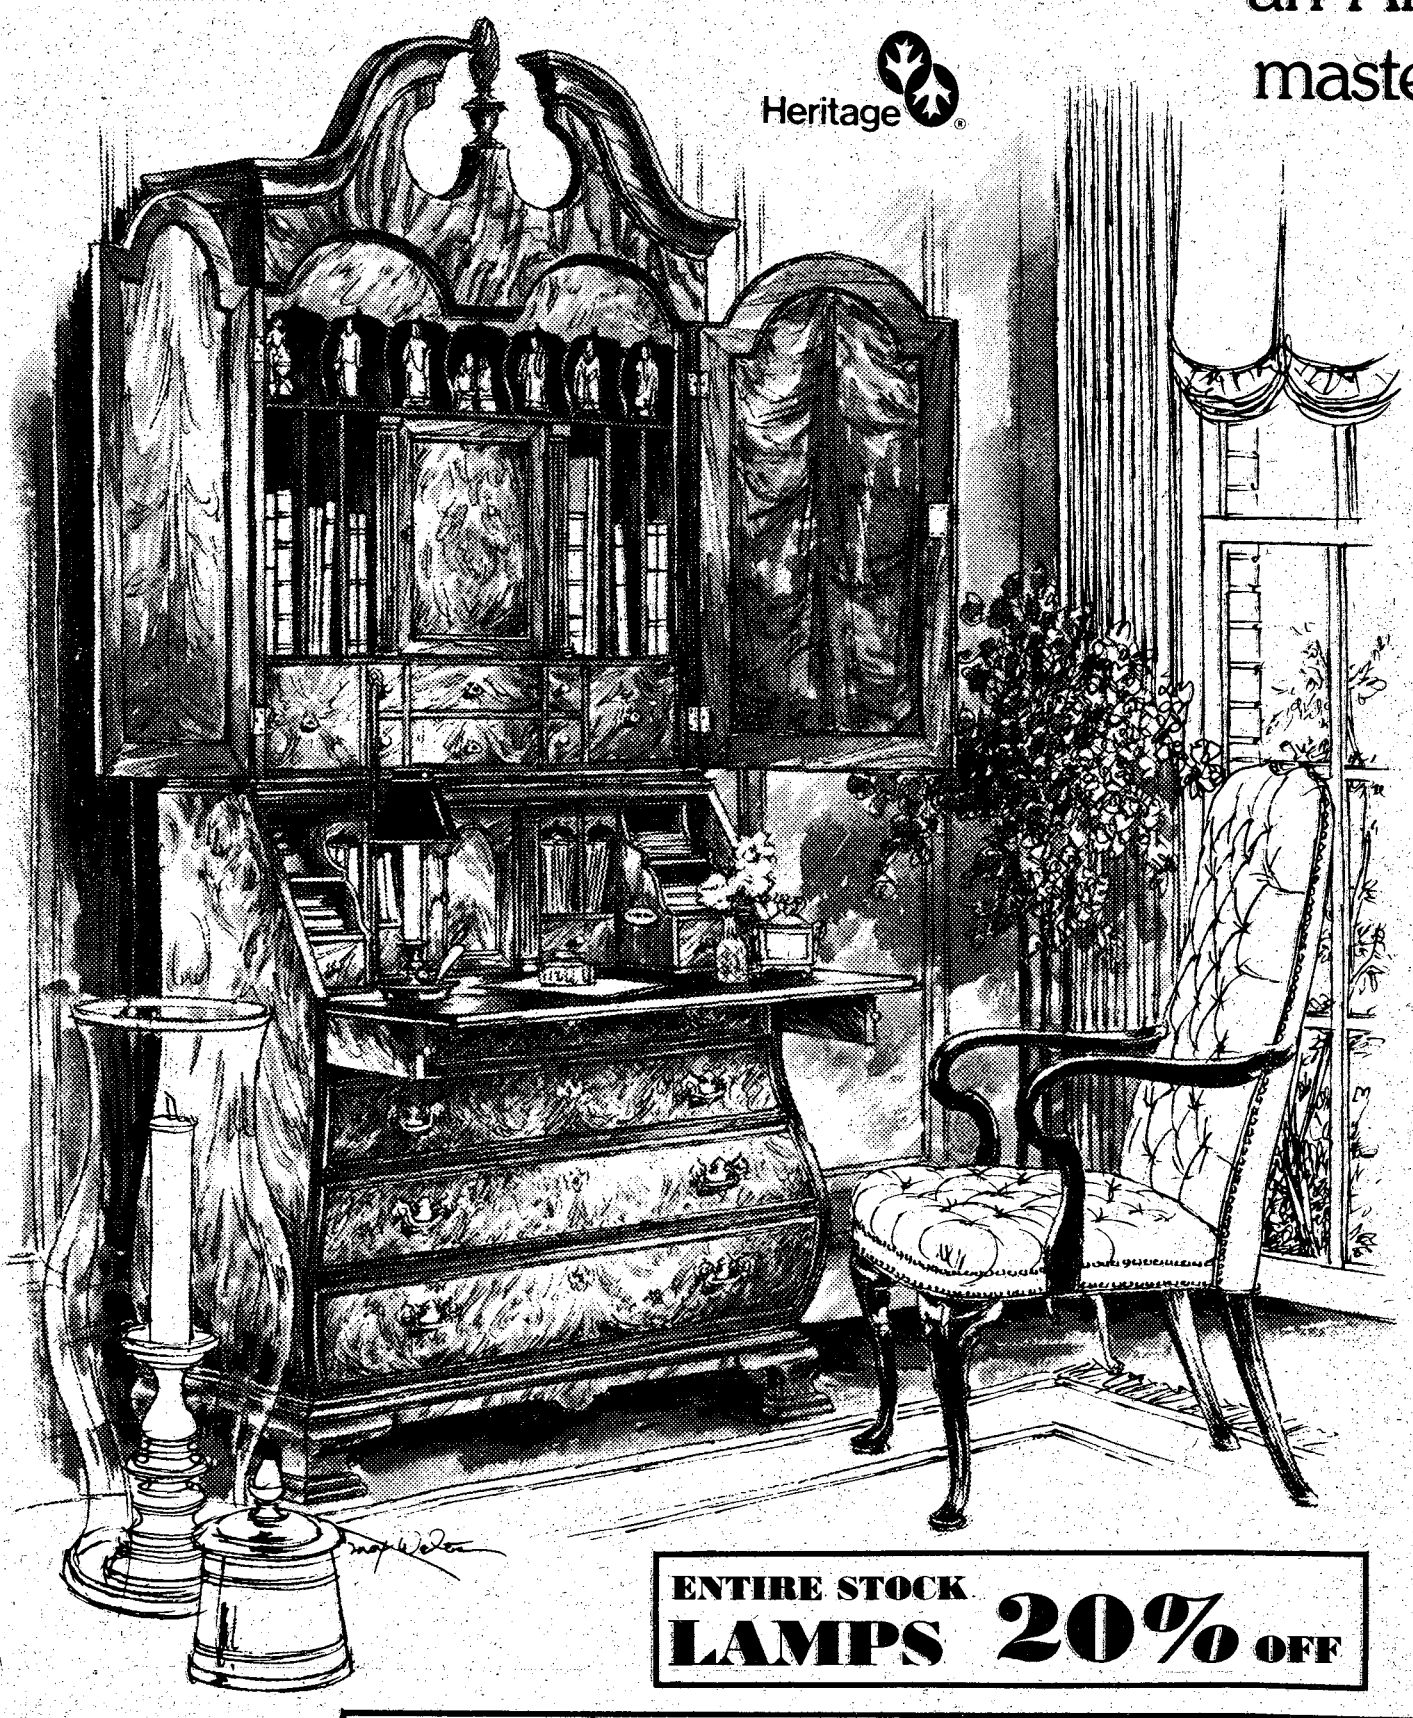
Presents Limited edition Heritage Heirloom:

SAVE 20% Our Chippendale secretary, an American masterpiece!

Heritage®



This Chippendale bombe secretary truly represents one of the great masterpieces of Eighteenth Century American styling. Heritage®, renowned for excellent craftsmanship, has been remarkably faithful to the original piece, created circa 1755 in Charlestown, Massachusetts.

To the strong and richly grained woods—Honduras mahogany solids and grafted California walnut veneers—Heritage has applied uncompromising standards. . .from the detail of the torch finial to the precise shaping of the ogee bracket feet. The delicate coloration and aged patina of the antique is recreated through an elaborate process involving thirty separate finishing steps. Hardware is solid brass. There are six working locks, outfitted with two keys. The Heritage name as well as the owner's registration number and the size of the edition (only 240 in all) . . .all are engraved on a brass plate in the gallery of each secretary.

Heritage—a famous name, a fine tradition, creating from the past for today and future generations.

Epilepsy

To a child, having epilepsy can mean growing up alone and friendless. See story on page 20.

Epilepsy is a sudden dizziness; a loud cry; a sudden fall; a body racking convulsion; a staring spell; a blackout or a short period of amnesia. It's coming to on a floor, a sidewalk or a street; it's cracked teeth, cut lips, burns from a hot stove or heater; it's the embarrassment of a rescue squad ambulance and the curious stares of onlookers; the dreaded wait for the next seizure with the sincere hope that no more will occur. It's always the question, "What have I done to deserve this?"

Abortion, pros and cons

Point

By Deb Hilgeman

When I enlisted in the Army about three years ago, I was assured I would be given full medical care whenever needed. Today that is no longer true.

When the Army decided to ban abortions for military women (unless in cases of rape, incest or the mother's life is endangered), I think it let the moral stand of a minority group of society influence the decision. Abortion should be a private matter decided by the individual, not by government policy. If one woman makes a private decision that abortion is wrong for her, fine. And if another woman decides that she wants an abortion, that should be equally acceptable. The point is, the decision whether or not to have a baby or an abortion is solely the woman's responsibility.

A recent newspaper article stated that 12 percent of women in uniform are with child. It is hard to imagine that these pregnant women are carrying the same work and duty load as their male counterparts. If I were asked to pick up the slack for a pregnant soldier who was pregnant and couldn't perform all her duties, I would certainly resent it. In my opinion, if a woman decides to have a child, she should leave the service to do it. Being in the Army means keeping physically fit and able to perform your job--pregnancy should not deter from this. Any soldier who says she can serve her country just as well while pregnant is only deluding herself and not putting the best interests of the Army first.

Many women soldiers are dedicated professionals who have no intention of compromising their professionalism by becoming pregnant. Unfortunately, medical science has not advanced to the point where it can guarantee its methods of contraception. Celibacy is the only 100 percent effective means of preventing pregnancy and very few women will opt for this unnatural state. If a soldier finds herself with an unwanted pregnancy, it seems only logical that the Army would help her and itself by offering abortion as an option.

There are no figures indicating how many Army women have abortions but you can be sure that it was an added hardship because they had to find a civilian doctor or clinic to perform the operation and pay for it out of a paycheck that barely lasts from one payday to the next. If the Army actually decided to ban abortions for financial reasons, then they missed the mark. An abortion is certainly much cheaper than financing a pregnancy and it also spares the woman the ordeal of having to make her own arrangements through a medical service she probably knows nothing about.

To some women, having an abortion is just as necessary as having a cyst removed and, as such, should be covered through Army medical treatment. The decision to have a baby is the most serious one a woman can make. It is probably the most physically demanding and mentally and emotionally taxing experience she will ever undergo. When a woman finds herself with an unwanted pregnancy, whether it happened because she was careless or because her birth control method was unreliable, she deserves the right to decide what will happen to her body and her life. If she decides on abortion, for whatever reason, her decision warrants respect. No outside moral decisions, please--every woman soldier is an adult capable of making that decision for herself.

Counterpoint

By Debbie Harrison

There have been cuts in the military budget that have affected all the medical services. No longer does the Army view abortions as necessary and now only performs them in extreme cases.

Why should the Army have to pay for abortions when birth control devices are less costly and very easy to obtain?

If the Army still performed abortions, then some women soldiers might be even more careless in using birth control methods. Some soldiers might even start thinking, "Why should I use birth control when it's a hassle? The Army will pay for an abortion if worse comes to worse." The Army's money can be better spent than on women who are looking for an easy answer to their problems.

The Army does have a tradition of supporting their soldiers but I can't see wasting money on every Jane Doe who feels an abortion is like removing a cyst.

In my opinion, life begins from the moment of conception. Why take away the life of an unborn child when the individual doesn't even have a choice in the matter?

With the shortage of doctors in the military, it is hard enough for them to do their regular duties, let alone unnecessary surgery such as abortions.

Before a woman decides to have sexual intercourse, she should know what she is getting into and be prepared to suffer the consequences.

Nowadays, with all the contraceptives on the market, there should be no need for unwanted pregnancy. Still, there are a few women who won't use contraceptives because they feel they are unsafe. Those are the women who are playing Russian roulette with an unborn life.

Every woman who finds herself with an unwanted pregnancy should be mature enough to take responsibility for her actions and not discard a human life like a piece of used paper.

Oh, Henry!

Car maker stopped too soon

By Dave Bristow

Henry Ford, will we ever be able to thank you enough for the automobile? You led us away from those horse-drawn buggy days to the sleek vehicles we drive today. But Henry, oh Henry, you never told us we'd be running out of gas.

Of course, Ford, who in 1908 unveiled the first Model "T" four-cylinder, 22-horsepower engine, never knew things would get so out of hand.

Driving and fuel costs were never much of a problem before. Remember when driving the latest model straight off the show room was quite the fashion? And if you could afford it, the car dealer could get exactly what you wanted, style and color too. The three big auto makers were turning out every kind of make and model you could imagine, and at an incredible rate.

It used to be that if you wanted to drive a pink Cadillac like Paul Newman did in the movie "Hud," chances were there was one around you could buy. After all, it was the 60s and the car industry was at its peak. You, too, could drive your late model Lincoln, Corvette or Caddy downtown on Main Street like Cool Hand Luke.

My, how times have changed. You never thought that sleek-looking machine would turn into the dinosaur it is today. No one knew gas prices would be what they are.

Now you're stuck with that beautiful piece of machinery and wondering if the gas supply for it will last. Your best girl Sally is sitting home more because you don't have the gas to take her out and things are getting worse.

In less than ten years, this country has seen gas prices soar from 27 cents a gallon to the predicted price of $1.50 this summer. We are caught up in the biggest energy crunch the country has ever experienced and it's hitting us where we are the most vulnerable — our pockets.

Can anyone save us? Certainly the government is trying to come up with the right answers and turn things around. But how soon and with what success? If fuel prices end up like the five-cent candy bar, they will never go down, only up. We must learn not to depend on gasoline and oil so much. We can't change the way things are overnight, certainly not the gas situation, but we can help.

One way is by carpooling. You can leave that Trans Am or Cadillac home once in a while and catch a ride with your ol' fishing buddy or work cohort. Your mean machine gets to sit this one out while you get to converse with a friend. Taking turns driving to and from work with each other is not a new idea. Many people are already enjoying the benefits. We all know how ridiculous it is for all of us to be going the same way but in different cars.

Another way to save on fuel is bicycling. Many soldiers are already living on post riding their bikes and enjoying the sunny weather. A lot of times a bike can just coast down the streets with no trouble at all and there's no gas involved.

Henry Ford had a great idea when he made that first old model "T." We just got too dependent on it.

Glad you asked

Instead of automatically receiving CHAMPUS coverage, do you think servicemembers should be allowed to select their own health care plan such as MEDICARE, Blue Cross or Blue Shield?

SSgt. Donald G. Woodard
Company A, 1st Battalion
1st Infantry Training Brigade

In my opinion, I think CHAMPUS is okay just the way it is. I used it overseas and everything worked out fine.

PFC Luanne Soles
2nd Combat Support Hospital

Some people don't like the way CHAMPUS is run, so if servicemembers want to pick their own health care plan, I think they should be allowed to.

* * *

SSgt. Carl Jefferson
Headquarters and Headquarters Company
Committee Group

I think people should be allowed to select their own health care plan. Some organizations offer different services that fit better into some people's lifestyles.

Sgt. Sammy K. Wallace
Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion
10th Field Artillery

I think a military man has the right to choose whatever type of health care he wants and I also agree with the proposed $3 per visit surcharge for servicemembers' visits to military doctors mentioned in a recent ARMY TIMES article.

Sp5 Deborah M. Bowers
283rd Army Band

Yes, I think so. Some people might think CHAMPUS works well for them but I believe servicemembers should have the option to choose which plan is right for them.

* * *

PFC Forse Hollis
Headquarters Company
36th Engineer Group (Combat)

Yes, because systems such as Blue Cross and Blue Shield provide better coverage than CHAMPUS does.

Sp4 Susan Secor
Headquarters Co. Headquarters Command

I strongly feel CHAMPUS isn't all that it should be. Before I came on active duty, (when I was still a dependant of my military father) CHAMPUS seemed to work better then it does now.

I know of many instances now where servicemembers are taken advantage of by CHAMPUS rather than helped. For example, a person having minor surgery that they plan to claim under CHAMPUS finds out later that they are not actually covered until the cost of the operation goes above a certain limit. Therefore, a servicemember/dependant is often charged for that amount which CHAMPUS considers to be too small to pay but in actuality can be finacially damaging for the individual.

Sp5 Hattie Y. Crankfield
139th Military Police Company

Yes, I think soldiers should have the right to choose because even though CHAMPUS has its good points, so do some of the other plans.

Letters to the Editor

Garbage problem

To the Editor:

I have observed why Fort Benning has filthy and unappreciated trash along its highways and streets. The garbage trucks that carry the disposal containers leave most of the trash trailing behind. The drivers are too lazy to close and secure the tops on the containers.

It takes a few seconds to secure the tops on disposal containers but it takes hours, gas and manpower to police our highways. We should be at our units learning how to be better professional soldiers.

Drivers, please take a little time to close the tops on these disposal containers and let the Army's fighting/support soldiers spend more time in their MOS libraries, training areas and units. Get with the program--trash pollution is ugly. It's easy to get a job with the sanitation department but I joined the Army.

Sp4 Alvin Thomas

Floor show

To the Editor:

The following is in response to comments made by Sp5 McConnel in your Letters to the Editor on March 14 regarding the Korean floor show at the Sand Hill NCO Club on March 9.

While FBNCOC's management agrees that it is improper and unprofessional for an entertainment group to discontinue a performance for those reasons stated, it is important that additional facts be pointed out surrounding this event. First, the Korean group was not on contract with FBNCOC; rather, it was procured by a military dependent (the show coordinator) and monetary agreements were arranged independent of club activities. This is not unusual, in that many party sponsors desire to select and procure their own entertainment. Secondly, FBNCOC entered a contractual agreement to provide the club to the dependent sponsor so the show could be presented. FBNCOC received no part of the admission fee and, therefore, cannot return money to anyone.

The show coordinator, however, has expressed regret over this unfortunate matter and is attempting to have at least part of the admission fee returned to those who attended. Fort further information, attendees should contact the individual from whom they purchases tickets.

MSgt. Jimmy L. Stewart
Assistant General Manager FBNCOC

Swimming fan

To the Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the personnel of the Main Post indoor swimming pool for their fine program. SFC Oldenburg and his people do an excellent job of running the pool and their service makes it a pleasure to visit them for a swim. The pool is well-kept and if you need any help with your swimming, Ron and the gang are more than willing to help you. I strongly recommend that you all take advantage of this facility. Running is great, but swimming is even better!

General's letter

Editor's note: Post Commander Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. received the following letter dated March 18 and wanted to share it with The BAYONET's readers:

Dear General Grange,

On behalf of the many people in the Columbus area suffering from Muscular Dystrophy, I'd like to thank you for your help in the ongoing combined federal campaign (CFC) at Fort Benning.

The service of the CFC allows your soldiers to designate their charitable contributions in our behalf, as well as certain other health care agencies.

Funds recently received will allow us to further service the patients in this area. The caring and help supplied by you and the U.S. Army will keep advancing the fight against the 40 neuromuscular disorders housed under the name of Muscular Dystrophy.

Thank you again ... and God bless you all.

With Kindest Regards,
Alan Kahn District Director
Muscular Dystrophy Association

Fire protection

To the Editor:

Some uniformed people believe that the only duty of fire protection personnel is to fight fires. It is also a common belief that when there are no fires for a long time, the fire department is just lucky. The average layman does not realize that those long periods without a fire are probably due to an efficient fire prevention program.

Fire protection organizations have, in the past, concentrated their major efforts on the extinguishment of fires. During recent years, however, these organizations have come to realize more fully the importance of preventing fires. The reason is obvious; fires that do not occur do not cost anything. The fire protection organization that never has to extinguish a fire is the organization that has a perfect fire inspection and prevention program. No organization, of course, has thus far achieved such a record but we can expect it to be more and more nearly approached as progress continues.

What is AER?

Maj. Gen. Grange

Fort Benning has a tradition of responding generously to the annual fund drive for Army Emergency Relief (AER). This is our way of saying we support AER's program of help to soldiers with true emergency needs.

What is AER?

The program was incorporated on Feb. 5, 1942 as a private, nonprofit organization designed to collect, hold and disburse funds to needy members of the Army and their dependents. From this beginning 38 years ago, AER has provided financial assistance to service personnel and their dependents. It has expanded its services to the retired community and provides funds to needy spouses and orphans of deceased Army members. And, as a secondary program, AER makes financial assistance available for dependents of Army personnel (active, retired or deceased) who need such assistance to pursue undergraduate college studies.

Here at Fort Benning, AER assistance is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Located with Army Community Service in Bldg. 83, nearly $200,000 in loans and grants was disbursed in 1979. We anticipate a greater demand for AER funds in 1980 as inflation and the cost of borrowing money continues to rise.

The types of emergency situations which could qualify one for AER assistance run the gamut from loss of rent money to loss of home by fire. In recent weeks, AER has provided funds to a soldier who did not have the money necessary to rent an apartment for his family and buy their food. One case involved a soldier who needed money to pay the funeral expenses for his child. In another instance, AER advanced funds to prevent a soldier from being evicted from his home. There are many others, of course. Not all of these disbursements were in the form of loans which must be repaid. If circumstances dictate that repayment would cause undue hardship to the service member, a grant — no repayment required — is made.

Should you feel that you qualify for AER funds, see your unit commander and/or first sergeant. They have the necessary forms which you must use and are aware of the documentation you will need at the AER Office where you must go to apply for AER funds.

AER's slogan is "Help the Army Take Care of Its Own!" I urge each of you in uniform to support this most worthwhile fund raising effort and to add meaning to the AER slogan by a generous contribution when solicited.

Panama training to start

By John W. Turner

The 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) will conduct jungle training exercises this year at Fort Sherman in Panama. Having conducted cold weather training exercises in Alaska last year, the emphasis shifted this year to tropical training in the jungles of Panama.

The soldiers of the advance party departed Tuesday using two C-141 aircraft to fly to Howard Air Force Base in Panama. They will prepare to receive the main body of the battalion which will depart tomorrow. They will then travel to Fort Sherman where three weeks of training will begin.

In preparation for the Panama training, the soldiers have attended many different classes on jungle training. They went through a rigorous physical training program with special emphasis placed on upper body strength.

Other areas of training covered were drown proofing and aid for victims of water accidents. Individuals were broken down into three groups — strong, weak and non-swimmers. They were taught water survival with special instruction given to the weak and non-swimmers.

Individuals were also given classes on foot care, heat injuries and first aid. Special emphasis was placed on snake and insect bites. Classes were also given on land navigation and map reading which is essential to not only jungle training but to all other training as well.

The soldiers learned patrol techniques and how to apply proper camouflage. They were also taught airmobile techniques. Two classes on air loading were conducted by individuals from Pope Air Base, Fort Bragg, N.C.

The first week of training in Panama will consist of classes and practical application on such areas as: jungle living, survival, plant and animal life, waterborne operations, rappelling, airmobile operations, day and night land navigation, mechanical ambushes and mine warfare. They will also have classes on squad and platoon combat techniques.

The second week they will conduct exercises in platoon patrols and company reconnaissance in force.

The final week the battalion will conduct an FTX, which will combine everything taught and practiced during the first two weeks.

Presentation

Mrs. Dixie Heath, representing the Fort Benning Noncommissioed Officers Wives Club (NCOWC), presents a check for $1000 to Post Commander Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. last Friday for the post AER fund drive. Mrs. Heath said the NCOWC wanted to contribute to AER because it is one of the organizations that is established to help the entire Army family, active and retired, in time of emergency. The fund drive continues through April 17. For information on the AER fund drive call 1st Lt. Beckstrom at 545-4043.

Golden Knights plan performance

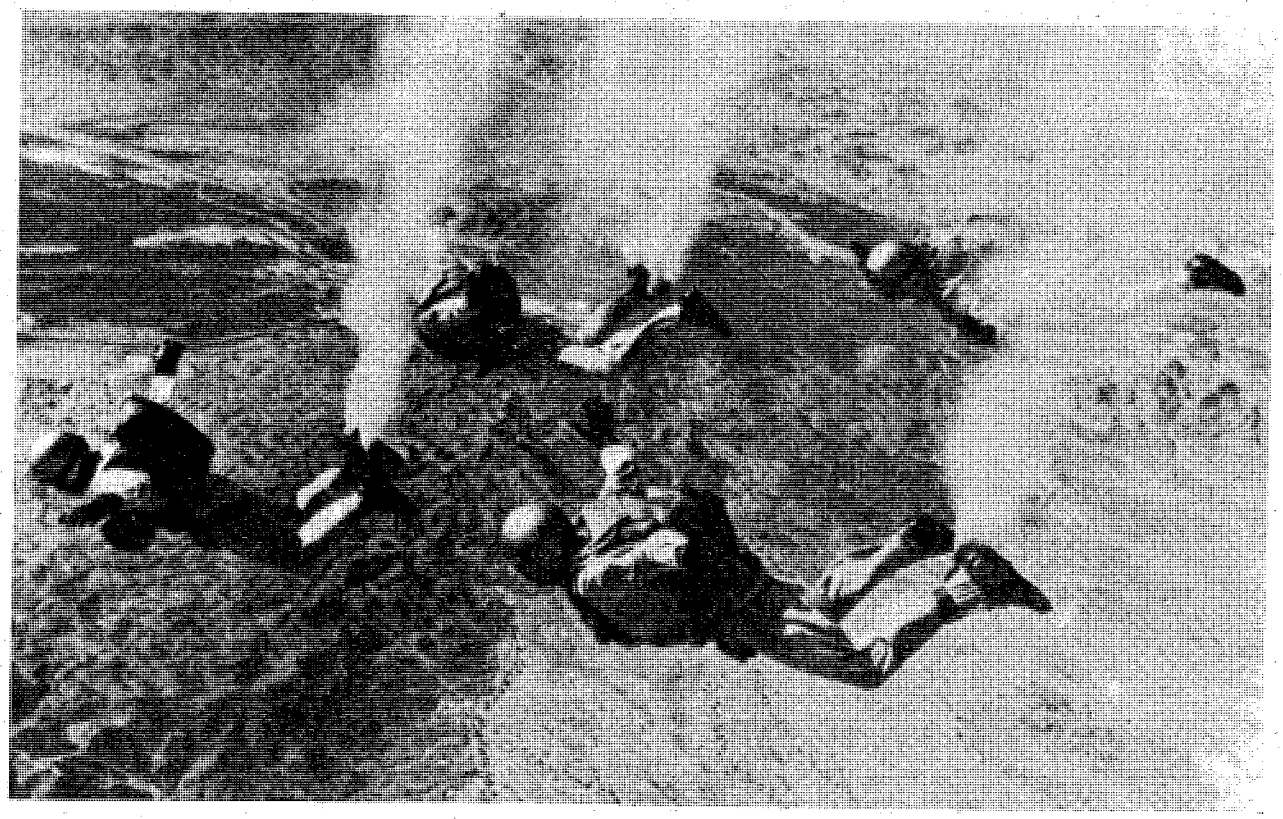
Members of the world-famous U.S. Army Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights," will perform an aerial free-fall demonstration on April 18 at 11:30 a.m. on York Field.

Plunging earthward at speeds over 160 miles per hour, the Knights sketch red patterns in the sky with smoke emitted from grenades attached to their boots.

After landing their black and gold canopies, the Knights will demonstrate how to pack a parachute and answer questions about skydiving and the Army.

The Knights, who have won more national and international honors than any other parachute team in the sport, have entertained more than 100 million spectators at demonstrations in all 50 states and 29 foreign countries.

The event is free of charge and open to the public.



The Army's Golden Knights are known for their spectacular air shows.

Professor Safety

The Insurance Information Institute and the National Association of Mutual Insurance Companies say green wood should not be used in your wood-burning stoves. Wood should be aged not less than six months, preferably a year to 18 months. Wood burners who ignore this advice are likely to have dirty chimneys and inadequate heat from their stoves. Burning green wood can lead to the buildup of creosote on the lining of the chimney flue. A spark can ignite creossote ad cause what can be an extremely hot and dangerous fire. Dry and seasoned wood will not only minimize the chance of creosote on the lining of the chimney flu, but will provide the most efficient fire.

Rangers awed by Marauders

By Brian Adams

The Ranger instructors sat silent, intently listening to the exploits of two former members of the famed Merrill's Marauders, the first American unit to confront the Japanese Army on the Asian Continent during World War II.

Thomas Martini, president of the Merrill's Marauders Association, and Robert Barrett, both traveled to CAmp Frank D. Merrill, Ga. on March 17 at their own exspense to relate their experiences and to donate some memorabelia to the Ranger Museum.

MSgt. (Ret) Robert Barrett, contemplates a question from the Ranger cadre who attended the "living history" presentation given by he and Tom Martini at the Dahlonga, Ga. Ranger Camp.

"The Merrill's Marauders came into existence as a result of the Quebec Conference in August 1943," said Martini.

"Their goal would be the destruction of Japanese communications and supply lines and generally play havoc with the enemy forces while an attempt was made to reopen the Burma Road... a vital link between India and Burma," he explained.

A presidential call went out to all theaters of the Pacific for volunteers to take part in "a dangerous and hazardous mission."

Twenty-nine hundred men from all walks of life responded to the call for volunteers. The contingent was filled out to 3,000 men during later training in India.

"In the book 'Galahad' written by the Regimental executive officer, Col. Charles N. Hunter," explained Martini, "he wrote... 'the Galahad force was the most beat upon, most misunderstood, most mishandled, most written about, most heroic and yet the most unrewarded regimental-sized unit that participated in World War II. That it was expendable was understood from its inception."

In late January 1944, under the auspices of Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill, the Galahad force began its long trek.

"There was no march in all world military history which quite compares with that of the Marauders," said Martini. About 80 percent of the force never reached the objective, Myitkima, the only all-weather airfield in Northern Burma. Some died and others fell prey to the different diseases that infested the jungle.

Those who were wounded or fell to disease were evacuated out by air to rear echelon hospitals, explained Martini. "This in itself was a feat of great magnitude," he noted.

By the time they reached their objective, the 3,000-man force was numbering less than 100 men, they had covered over 1,000 miles and had accomplished their mission in less than 100 days. "Despite heavy casualties," said Barrett, "not one member of the Merrill's Marauders was captured, left to die or left unburied if dead."

When the Marauders had completed their mission they had been involved in five major and thirty minor engagements. They had met and defeated the veteran soldiers of the Japanese 18th Division, the conquerors of Singapore and Malaya.

The nickname 'Merrill's Marauders' was coined by James Shepley, a war correspondent with Time/Life Magazine, who had followed them on their trek through the jungle.

The Ranger camp at Dahlonega was named for the leader of this famous group of men, Frank D. Merrill.

"There is no question in the minds of 'old' Marauders, military experts and others who have been privileged to observe this unique Ranger unit, 2nd Battalion, 75th Infantry Ranger Regiment (Merrill's Marauders) in action," said Martini, "that these 'new' Marauders are the toughest, best trained, most motivated and the most dedicated troops in the world, and as long as the defense of our beloved America is entrusted to troops of this caliber there should be no cause for alarm.

"Unquestionably," he continued, "they are the fitting inheritors of the Marauder motto, 'Sua Sponte' meaning 'of their own accord', and the faith that Gen. Merrill instilled by his example in all Marauders, that no matter what, they could always be depended on to ... walk another mile, climb another hill, fight another fight.

"Rangers, I salute you," concluded Martini.

Martini and Barrett were introduced to the instructor by the camp commander, Lt. Col. Eugene Hawkins, who described his guests as "living history for us to learn from."

Museum gets treasures of Maj. Gen. Merrill

Tom Martini, former member of the famed Merrill's Marauders, visited the post last week and presented Dick Grube, curator of the National Infantry Museum, a World War II service cap and "Ike" jacket worn by Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill.

By Brian Adams

Fort Benning's National Infantry Museum added yet another piece of nostalgia to their continually growing collection of history.

After visiting with the Rangers at Camp Frank D. Merrill, former Marauder Thomas Martini visited Fort Benning, at which time he presented them with some memorabelia.

Included in the items presented were a series of articles written about the famous group, a World War II bayonet and two treasures of Maj. Gen. Merrill, a service cap and 'Ike' jacket with rank insignia and ribbons.

The jacket includes insignia and Maj. Gen. Merrill's ribbons. The items were donated by Mrs. Merrill, window of Maj. Gen. Merrill, for display in the museum.

According to Dick Grube, museum curator, the hat and jacket will be displayed in the Airborne/Ranger section and "adds yet another intriging page to the history of those special soldiers of yesterday and today."

Census counting on you

Census time is here. You remember, that's when they take a count every ten years in this country to determine how many we number.

Well, the slogan for the 1980 census is "We're counting on you. Answer the census." It will be the largest census conducted in the nation's history. It will yield facts and figures necessary to the well-being of our country.

Military personnel at Fort Benning will be required to fill out a Military Census Report (MCR) next week at their unit. Unit commanders will have designated representatives who will give the questionnaire to their soldiers.

The MCR the soldier fills out should not be confused with the regular questionnaire which comes in the mail. This is an additional requirement for military personnel to fill out, separate from the other.

The answers you give on the census questionnaire arriving in the mail and the Military Census Report, both, are strictly confidential. The questions are simple. Many people will be able to answer the short form in 15 to 20 minutes; the long form will typically take 45 minutes to complete.

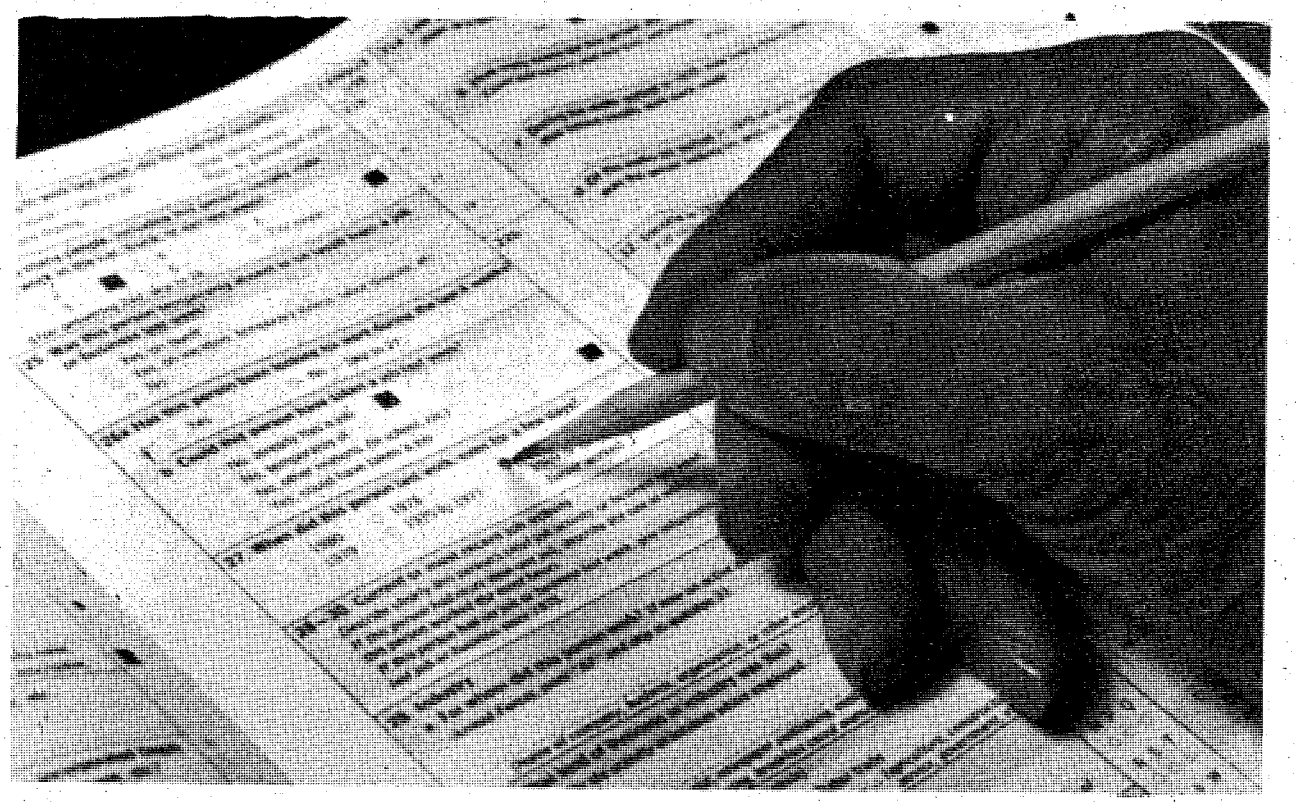
Census statistics are used to determine political representation at the national, state and local levels. Federal, state and local government agencies also use census figures to help allocate more than $50 billion each year for all kinds of needed services such as:

- Jobs
- Job training
- Low-cost housing
- Adult education
- Day care centers
- Health care
- Clinics and hospitals
- Legal services
- Police and fire protection
- Senior citizen centers
- Aid to the handicapped
- Better transportation

The value of census is great. Here are a few examples:

- In Albany, Ga., officials used census figures to help prove the need for expanding the Palmyra Nursing Home.
- In many states, census statistics help Boy Scout leaders project how many boys might be joining the Scouts and how many camps would be needed to accommodate them.
- In Maryland, church leaders studied census population figures before deciding to establish a new Presbyterian church in Edgewood.
- In Dallas, a local business owner studied census information while trying to decide whether to open an expensive private restaurant and club in the Red Bird Shopping Center.

The 1980 census benefits you. To function productively as a society we must know about ourselves, our locations, conditions, problems and needs. Make sure you're counted!



The 1980 census is counting on you!

MAH command changes hands

Col. Frank F. Ledford Jr. replaces Col. Albert L. Gore as Martin Army Hospital and Medical Department Activity Commander in a change of command ceremony today.

Gore is retiring to Montrose, Ala. following 37 years service.

Ledford comes to Benning from Fort Riley, Kan. where he was commander of their Medical Department Activity and Irwin Army Hospital.

He is an orthopedic surgeon having received his doctorate degree from the University of Cincinnati in 1959. His Army career began in 1960 at Brooke Army Medical Center, Texas.

Since then he has served at Fort Bragg, N.C.; Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.; Vietnam; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Landstuhl, Germany; Office of the Surgeon General, Washington, D.C.; and Fort Sam Houston, Texas. He completed the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in 1977.

Got a complaint?

Any complaints about Field Manuals 21-13, 22-5 and 22-6? Now's your chance to possibly bring about changes in them.

The manuals, dealing with drill and ceremonies, guard duty and soldiers' guide, are now being revised by the Conditioning and Drill Branch, U.S. Army Infantry School, Airborne Department.

Suggestions and recommendations regarding changes are being sought from the field. They should be outlined on a DA Form 2028 (Recommended Changes to Publications) and mailed to Commandant, The Infantry School, ATTN: ATSH-A (SFC Resch), Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

The current manuals have been in use Army-wide since 1971.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Who were those guys?

Military policemen from the 118th MP Company (Airborne) from Fort Bragg, N.C. stand tall as they display their "strac" appearance before Benning's assistant operations officer, Capt. Ronald Stokes, before they report for duty. The policemen were here last week for ten days in support of their fellow policemen, the 988th MP Company, away in the field on an ARTEP exercise.

Reserved seat lost if late reporting

Military members and dependents assigned overseas have been reporting late to aerial port of embarkation for port call. This causes delays which result in personal inconvenience and creates additional problems at the terminal.

Extra seats on the aircraft and billets are extremely limited. When members report late to the passenger counter, they no longer have a seat reservation. They must sign up as a duty standby and wait at the terminal until a seat becomes available. This could involve waiting 72 hours or longer which could be chargeable as leave, or grounds for disciplinary action as AWOL. It is important that all personnel comply with port call instructions and report to the overseas APOE at the time and date specified.

The outdoor festival will be held on April 26 from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. and April 27 from noon-5 p.m. Categories ae: paintings, crafts, pottery, sculpture, photograhy, macrame, tole painting and leather crafts. The public is invited to attend. Call M.E. Maxwell at 687-0061 for more information.

Red Cross month ends

By Brian Adams

On the silent battlefield of Solferino, Italy in 1859, thousands of soldiers lay dying, their wounds steaming in the sun as the heat of their bodies escaped into the air causing a sickening stench.

In the nearby town of Castiglione, a wealthy young businessman named Henri Dunant put aside his plans to do business with the Emperor of France to help the citizens of Solferino attend to the wounded and bury the dead.

Appalled by the atrocity of war, this young man returned to his homeland, Switzerland, with a desire to do something about the never ending slaughter and inhumane treatment of men in time of war.

Through his book 'A Memory of Solferino', and the efforts of influencial leaders of Europe, an international committee was established in 1863. This international committee was later to become the International Red Cross.

At the same time the heads of Europe were meeting in Geneva, the United States was involved in its own Civil War, a war which pitted brother against brother, father against son and is considered to be the bloodiest war of our history.

A young lady named Clara Barton, with no knowledge of the meeting or of who Dunant was or what he did, was doing the same thing on the battlefields of the United States that he had done on the battlefield of Solferino. She recognized the necessity of showing humane treatment of soldiers during times of war, so with no preference to side or right or wrong, Clara Barton treated soldiers of the Confederacy as well as soldiers of the Union Armies with equal care and consideration.

Clara Barton carried on her work in the United States until she died at her home in Echo Glen, Md. in 1912. During her crusade for humane treatment of people in war or peace, Barton convinced the leaders of this country to ratify the Geneva Conventions and aided in the establishment of the American Chapter of the Red Cross in 1881, at Danesville, N.Y.

The Red Cross now has chapters in every county of the United States, but that portion of the Red Cross most important to the soldiers is the individual field offices established on selected military installations throughout the world.

These offices are established as a service to the armed forces and are the places many soldiers frequently turn to for help. The offies are made up of a professional staff that man the main office, but, said Mr. J.C. Jackson, Fort Benning's Red Cross field director, "The mainstay, or backbone, of our operation is the volunteer people. They are the ones who keep our mission going. They are the ones who really deserve the credit, for they are the ones who don't get paid.

"There are 125 volunteers who come to work for us every month," he continued, "and they put in about 25,000 hours a year." The volunteers work in places such as Martin Army Hospital, the veterinary clinic and at the main office. They also work in uncommon places such as the Main Post library, as lifeguards at the swimming pools, and in the schools on post.

The Red Cross offers classes in CPR and first aid and also runs a nursing program which operates from the hospital. The volunteer force falls under the watchful eye of Mrs. Genevieve Harvey, chairman of the volunteers at Fort Benning.

The month of March has been declared National Red Cross month. It is during this month that the soldiers and dependents of Fort Benning are asked to recognize the efforts of those who initiatd the program and those who still carry on the never ending job.

Endangered specie protected

PFC David Weaver uses a stereoscope to study aerial photos that will help locate areas where the Red-cockaded woodpecker may live.

An endangered wildlife specie which lives here, the Red-cockaded woodpecker (RCW), recently received some help from Fort Benning.

Because of the bird's endangered status, Fort Benning is required, by law, to protect the RCW and its habitat. The first step in protecting the bird is knowing where it lives. The RCW is a small bird, about six inches from head to tail, and it prefers old pine trees (60-100 years old) to live in. The post Environmental Management Office (EMO) asked the Imagery Interpretation Section, 179th Military Intelligence Detachment, 197th Infantry Brigade, to help locate all areas of suitable habitat for RCWs within a 15,000-acre area so that the EMO, in turn, could locate RCW colonies within these areas.

Since the RCW prefers only a certain type of habitat, the 179th was able to find this type of habitat by comparing known locations of RCW colonies with similar areas on aerial photos. Once all likely areas were identified, an aerial survey was flown to verify the 179th's work. Approximately 90 percent of the areas picked out by the 179th met the requirements for "suitable habitat" and several previously unrecorded cavity (nest) trees were observed in these areas during the aerial survey.

The accuracy of the 179th's Imagery Interpretation Section enabled EMO personnel to begin their search for RCW colonies more quickly and thereby saved many hours of time and effort on the ground just looking for the right kind of habitat. "The 179th accomplished in a few hours what would have taken the EMO several days to do," said Tim Mullen, environmental technician for the EMO.

Epilepsy is a person who is called "crazy," a person who is avoided; a pretty little girl who cannot go to regular school, or any school; a small boy who cannot ride a bicycle or roller skate; a young woman whose husband has left her because she has "fits"; a teenage boy who cannot play football, basketball or drive a car; a young man who becomes a janitor instead of an engineer; or a young lady who becomes a maid instead of a teacher, yet they both have the ability to do either. Epilepsy is "something that happens to someone else."

Epilepsy

That 'someone else' could be you

Epileptic children don't understand ...

. If you bump your head today, you might wake up tomorrow and find that you are one of four million Americans afflicted with epilepsy. As an epileptic, you will probably experience job discrimination and find that some of your friends want nothing to do with you. The question "Why me?" will haunt your thoughts and you may even refuse to accept the fact that you have epilepsy.

There is no question that epilepsy is a very serious disorder; an epileptic seizure can last up to three days and can turn a person's skin from white to black. Yet the biggest handicap an epileptic faces is not his disability--it is the fear and ignorance of society. The fact is that 80 percent of epileptics can control their seizures with medications and no one, other than the individual's doctor, even has to know of the condition. Some doctors advise their epileptic patients to keep their condition secret to protect the person from public reaction but the public needs to become informed and learn the truth about epilepsy to free its sufferers from the stigma and shame often attached to the affliction.

That is the goal of the Epilepsy Association of Georgia, Inc. which recently reorganized its Columbus chapter. The association is a non-profit organization consisting solely of volunteer workers whose purpose is assisting epileptics and their families. The five-member board includes a neurologist from Martin Army Hospital as medical advisor, a youth director and a chaplain's advisor.

The president of the board, Mrs. Annamarie Barrentine, became personnally interested in epilepsy a few months ago when her three-year-old grandson, who she is raising, suddenly went into an epileptic seizure. "I hope I can raise the baby so he won't mind admitting he is an epileptic. I hope he won't have to face discrimination," she said quietly.

The key to changing public attitude toward epilepsy is information. The association is attempting to do this through a number of programs. They offer free literature detailing the latest finds in epilepsy from the medical field. They also have lecturers and movies which they make available to any organization, school or club. "We're also involved with educating employers," Mrs. Barrentine added. "We're explaining that epileptics who take medication can be just as worthwhile as anyone else. Maybe they can't climb a ladder but there are plenty of other jobs available."

The association has a special interest in getting the word out to schools. As Mrs. Barrentine explained, "It is so important for teachers and children to understand what epilepsy is and what you should or shouldn't do. Epileptic children are often excluded from sports and other activities that are vital for children. Or else a teacher will think an epileptic student doesn't pay attention or is hard to get along with but that is just not true."

Very few epileptics are uncontrollable if they take medication and the association also stresses this in their education program. "We emphasize that at all times an epileptic must take the medication needed. We also want the epileptic to admit his condition and learn to deal with it. You're not afraid to admit you have a cold and you shouldn't be afraid to admit you have epilepsy," Mrs. Barrentine said.

The association even aids epileptics who are facing financial problems. For nonemployable epileptics, the association offers help in getting Social Security benefits. And if an epileptic can't afford to buy medication, the association will pay for it. "We check out requests to pay for medication and we don't take all day to do it," Mrs. Barrentine said. "The chapter is ready to pay if anyone is in true need."

Mrs. Barrentine recalled an incident where a man was in a hospital for a routine checkup when he suddenly went into an epileptic seizure. Two nurses present immediately took action--the wrong action. While one nurse held the man down, the other nurse forced a metal spoon in his mouth. When the seizure ended, the man's teeth had been broken out and his jaw was broken in two places. To add insult to injury, the hospital sent the man a bill for the treatment rendered during his seizure.

This incident illustrates the ignorance shared by many people in dealing with someone having a seizure. The chances are high that someday you will find yourself in a position where you are the only help available for an epileptic experiencing a seizure and your action could mean the difference between lif death, injury or well-being.

Even more important than what you should what you should NOT do. DON'T attempt to for object in the person's mouth. Contrary to po belief, a person cannot swallow his tongue. A biting off part of the tongue during a seizure, Barrentine pointed out that if the end of the ton bitten off, it will grow back. That option, she s better than breaking teeth or jaws. Also, I restrain the person. During a seizure, the pe muscles are extremely rigid and will not relax un seizure is over. Any attempt to hold the person do force their mouth open will only cause them fi harm.

What you SHOULD do is loosen clothing, try the person on their side and support the he choking doesn't occur and move any objects tha get in the person's way. A seizure usually lasts ten minutes and a doctor should be called only seizure lasts ten minutes or more.

The treatment of epilepsy has come a long way the days when an epileptic was thought to be pos by devils. At times, they were imprisoned, quara or even tortured because of their condition. B facts on epilepsy are still veiled with public misc tion. Epilepsy is a miniature brainstorm that is c when stimuli to the brain exceed a person's conv threshhold. It is not hereditary, does not ca change in personality, does not affect intellige reduce life expectancy.

Epilepsy can be controlled and epileptics, in cases, can function as well as their non-ep counterparts. "Epilepsy is not something people get," Mrs. Barrentine concluded. "It do stop with race, color, a lot of money or no m might be one tomorrow, you might be one or w is reading this article. We want the chapter to v epileptics can enjoy the same rights we wa ourselves."

The chapter has a 24-hour answering ser 323-2144 or 323-3777. Volunteers are needed an mation may be obtained by calling the n listed.

Passover to begin

By Chaplain Martin J. Applebaum

Passover, the festival of freedom, begins on the eve of the 15th day of the Jewish month of Nisan, corresponding to March 31, 1980, at sunset and ends eight days later after sundown.

The theme of Passover is a great and eternal one, namely 'liberty.' The ancient rabbis understood how vital that theme was. They made mention of the deliverance from Egypt in the Kuddush (sanctification) ceremony for every sabbath and holy day. They inserted this thought also into our daily services and taught us that "in every generation one must look upon himself as if he personally had come forth from Egypt." What they implied is quite clear; they wanted us to understand that though liberty was won by Israel from Pharoah many centuries ago, it had to be rewon by succeeding generations time and time again. Each man, therefore, in his own generation must keep himself free or rewin his freedom so as to become a true servant of God. This truth applies not only to individuals, but to nations as well. Hard-won liberty and independence in national life are often lost through indifference, lack of knowledge, lack of patriotism or the rise of tyrants.

The festival of Passover is observed for eight days. Throughout this period Jews refrain from eating leaven (hometz) in any form. Thus, matzoh (unleavened bread) takes the place of the bread normally eaten. Passover is also a time of rest and refreshment of the spirit. Work is forbidden on its most important days which are the first and the last two.

Passover has become for all peoples a symbol of humanity's first festival of freedom. It marks the rise of mankind to a level where it is understood that all men are created equal and no one group has a moral right to subjugate another. To our people, however, it is more than a lesson. Rich in symbolism, it provides a unique method of identification with the faith and eternity of the Jewish people. It is the holiday that gives stress to our role as guardians of our young for they have a special part in its celebration. It is the holiday that attempts in a most picturesque way to convey to its celebrants the joy, beauty and feeling of our heritage of which it is part.

SRB expires in September

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — The current bonus legislation or the Selective Reenlistment Bonus Program (SRB) expires on Sept. 30, 1980. This program gives cash bonuses of up to $12,000 to eligible soldiers reenlisting in certain critical skills MOSs.

In an effort to retain the bonus program, the Department of Defense has staffed legislation which will be submitted to Congress. This legislation would:

- provide the services with permanent authority to award reenlistment bonuses.
- allow the payment of a reenlistment bonus to career soldiers who reenlist between their tenth and fourteenth years of active duty.
- raise the maximum reenlistment bonus from $12,000 to $15,000 in most skills and from $15,000 to $20,000 for nuclear trained specialists.

For Fiscal Year 1980, the Army has programmed $103.6 million to pay reenlistment bonuses. If you feel that your MOS qualifies you for SRB, talk to your reenlistment NCO.

Army begins re-up option

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — In November 1979, after an initial 16-month test, the Army implemented the CONUS-to-CONUS Station of Choice Reenlistment Option.

This program permits first term soldiers, stationed in CONUS, to reenlist for a vacancy in their grade and specialty at another CONUS station of choice. The soldier is guaranteed at least 12 months in the new assignment.

During the test period it was apparent this would be a popular reenlistment option. Actual reenlistments under this option "far exceeded our projection for the first three months," stated a DA official who monitors the program. These test results further indicated that about 69 percent of soldiers who reenlist under this program would have left the Army if this option had not been available.

If you are considering this reenlistment option, let your reenlistment NCO give you advice and help.

Spirit is nearby

By William W. Erbach Sr.
6th Engineer Group Chaplain

Some years ago when oil was first discovered in Oklahoma, a reporter was sent out to cover the story. In his investigations he visited the site of the most productive well.

It appeared that the farm had been owned by an elderly couple who had years before moved out to the territory from Carolina. They had worked the land hard to scratch out a meager existence, raised their kids and sent them off. One day some men visited their property and asked the woman for a drink of water. Much to her surprise they put the water in bottles.

A week or so later the men came back and offered the farmer a price far in excess of what he thought the land was worth. He sold it and moved into town. A well was sunk just between the house and the barn and it started pumping gallons of oil daily.

At the time of the visit the reporter found this elderly couple leaning on the fence to watch the operation of the pump. He overheard the woman say to her husband, "And to think that all that was at our doorstep and we never guessed it." How about that!!!

You know, God in many ways is like that oil and we are often like the elderly couple. He is never really very far from us and yet men and women die as orphans just because they never realized He was so close.

of a fire protection organization, is to prevent the destruction of lives and property by fire--thus, the prevention of fires. How can this best be accomplished? By a fire prevention program that includes both education and inspection. Fire protection personnel cannot accomplish the important job of fire prevention alone. We must have the cooperation of ALL post personnel. This cooperation will make each individual fire conscious. Therefore, our efforts will be aided by hundreds of post personnel, all on the lookout for fire hazards. # Soviet weapons study

Story and photos by Rick Kiernan

Ever wonder how many rubles a private in the Soviet Army earns per month? How about the weight of his weapon that he takes on his 12-mile road march?

Thanks to 2nd Lt. Dale Firman, the answers to these and many other questions were provided for the soldiers of the 1/29th Infantry recently. Firman organized a 12-hour block of instruction that covered vehicle identification, characteristics and capabilities of Soviet weapons and basic training of the Soviet soldier. The classes were the latest in a series of presentations that round off the required SQT instruction.

Did the soldiers learn anything new? "We sure did," according to Sp4 Cabib Mutter. "Their basic training included a lot of what I'd call 'propaganda' and political seminars. The physical training and discipline were different, too. Ours is a lot tougher!"

2nd Lt. Dale Firman explains the fuze and firing device for the Soviet land mines to Pvt. 2 Robert Gaddis, Headquarters Support Company, 1/29th Infantry.

Sgt. Jose Morale, Company B, 1/29th Infantry, tries his hand at disassembling a Soviet rifle.

Floors to be fixed

The Savannah District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, in response to an ENQUIRER article on faulty tile on operating room floors at Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital, states that plans to remedy the problem have already been underway for some time.

Col. Tilford C. Creel, Savannah District engineer, said that the district expects to award a contract before the end of this month to install new tile in the operating rooms.

"We have been aware of the problem for some time and feel confident we have come up with a solution," Creel said. At the request of the district, the U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratory recently investigated the problem and recommended several corrective options.

Savannah District will replace the present tile with larger tile and weld the seams to provide a watertight floor, as well as install other preventive measures.

The problem of loose tiles in the operating rooms had been caused by seepage of germicidal agent under the tiles when the chemical is poured on the floors several times a day for disinfecting purposes.

The district expects to complete installation of the north side operating rooms by June 1 with funds already available.

Work on floors in the south side operating rooms has been scheduled to begin June 15, with completion in one month. The district, however, must request additional funding to complete this work, as well as the floors in the labor and delivery areas, which would be completed the latter part of August.

Armchair Sports

By Tim Boivin

While watching the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) basketball championships Sunday, I realized how far women sports has come and yet, how far it has to go.

In an exciting game, Old Dominion defeated Tennessee by the score of 68-53. Old Dominion dived after loose balls right to the final horn even though they knew they had the game in hand. The gallant Tennessee Volunteers never did give up and, despite the outcome, played a pretty decent game.

Old Dominion was ahead by 15 with 20 seconds left in the game when they threw a ball that looked like it was going out of bounds. Even though victory was at hand one of their players, without hesitating at all, dived into the stands after the ball. Very rarely do you see a man jump in the stands after a loose ball with less than 20 seconds left and his team up by 15. That was impressive!

During the game there were long shots and fancy passes that Larry Bird would have been proud of. The low score was because the teams both played defense nose-to-nose without fouling. Only one player fouled out, All-American Nancy Lieberman of Old Dominion.

The Fort Benning Doughgirls just completed a heartbreaking, yet successful, season. They went through the entire season without suffering any major injuries and then sufferred two injuries in their first game of the TRADOC tournament. They finished the season 24-4.

Much of the credit for the Doughgirls' success has to go to Coach Hezzie Baines. Unfortunately, Baines is leaving to accept a college football coaching job in Washington.

Coach Baines used all his powers of persuasion to coax, coerce and, best of all, coach the Doughgirls to a successful season. Not only could he be a dynamite coach, he was also a friend to the players, other coaches, newspaper reporters and anyone else associated with the team.

Best of all Baines understood the differences between men's and women's basketball. In response to a question from this reporter about why he didn't play one of his standouts, he said, "What many people, mostly men, don't realize is that women are different biologically than men. Therefore, women aren't always capable of playing basketball."

It's understanding like this that really shows Baines doesn't always care about winning but cares about his players the most. He is a fierce proponent of the need for women to participate in sports and the need for society to accept them as athletes. Now that he is leaving he will leave some pretty tall shoes for the next coach to fill.

With supporters of women's sports like Coach Baines, dedicated players like those on the Fort Benning Doughgirls, Old Dominion and Tennessee, women's athletics may have a long road ahead of them but they will make the traveling easier for those who follow in their footsteps.

Stable's past rides on

With the Hunt Club's annual Spring Show tomorrow it seems timely to profile two of the key people working in Fort Benning's stables. They are SFC (ret.) James R. Williams and MSgt. (ret.) Leonard Martin.

How many people around here remember when the stables were located on the south end of the quartels or when the regimental polo teams of the 24th Infantry, 29th Infantry and 83rd Field Artillery played their games on Sunday mornings? SFC (ret.) Williams does.

Williams was a member of the 24th Infantry Regiment from 1935-42 when it was billeted in the quartel across from Theater #2. During his tour with the 24th Infantry, Williams rode many of the horses his unit took care of. He said, "I volunteered to work with the horses because of my experiences from back on the farm. I first learned how to ride on mules."

He was assigned to Service Company, which was responsible for the 250 horses stabled at the Fort Benning Infantry School stables. Williams has shown several times during his career that he is an accomplished rider. He reflected, "During the fall of each year, the 24th would have a horse show on Organization Day and I rode in those shows."

William's friendly face is now a familiar sight around the stables. He still instructs both youths and adults on their riding and techniques. Asked about his success in horsemanship, Williams attributes it to, "... good soft hands and the proper use of legs on the horse."

MSgt. (ret.) Martin has been the stables manager of the Fort Benning Hunt Club since the early 1960's. However, his association with horses extends back to the 1930s when he was assigned to the 83rd Field Artillery. At that time the 83rd was still a horse drawn unit and all the soldiers had to know how to ride.

Each field piece was drawn by a team of six horses. The horses were paired in the harness with the near side horses being ridden. The off side horses were not ridden but still had saddles to carry each soldier's gear. Three of the six members in the gun crew rode on the caisson.

Martin reflects about a particularly interesting occasion, "My battery, Battery C, 83rd Field Artillery, lined up three teams inside Campbell-King show ring on post and raced a figure eight course. The only other place I can remember this being done was in Madison Square Garden by one other horse drawn artillery unit."

The difficulty of the feat becomes readily apparent when considering the fact that the show ring was smaller than a football field. Martin said, "Once a guidon horse stumbled and this caused the guidon bearer to fall and kill a horse with his pole."

The 1939 Annual Horse Show program attests to Martin's riding abilities. As a young corporal he entered several jumping events which might cause some of today's riders to flinch. The program proudly shows that he negotiated several courses with jumps up to 3'9" in height.

Two men with the ability and desire to help horseback riders to learn; that's what Williams and Martin are. Their dedication is one reason why the Fort Benning Hunt Club continues to flourish after all these years.

Post's Pony Club hosts 'B' meet

The Benning Pony Club recently sponsored a "B" rating meet for the Southern Region. As a means of measuring progress and the achievement level of its members, Pony Club has established four standards of efficiency: D, C, B and A. D is the first standard and A is the highest. These ratings are not merely passing tests, but rather a state of being. When a member reaches a certain age and sense of responsibility, he or she is qualified to be tested for upgrading.

B testings are given only by National Examiners. A "B" rated member is responsible, an active rider and horsemaster with enough maturity, knowledge and sound judgement to maintain another person's horse.

Examiners for the testing were Margaret Lashua of Hartford, Conn., and Penny Greer of New Hope, Pa. They flew in the night before the test and met with the candidates at the Pony Club Hut the night before the testing. The test began the next morning at 8 a.m. with an oral exam. The candidates were formally inspected at 12:30 p.m. and their riding was critiqued from 1:30 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. The riding competition began with the dressage, then went on to the stadium jumping and finished with the cross country jumping.

The candidates who passed the "B" testing from Fort Benning were Holly Grange, Denise Shachnow and Dawn Stevenson. The candidates passing from Midland and Columbus, Ga., were Diane Martin, Chris Carol and Tony Borman.

DYA baseball registration starts

Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) will begin holding registration for DYA baseball, softball and T-ball on Monday from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Registration will be open on Mondays through Fridays in Bldg. 1054 for boys and girls ages six-17. The registration fee is $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second child and $5 for the third child. Any other children will be registered free of charge.

Proof of age such as a birth certificate, passport or a military identification card is required at the time of the registration. Coaches and assistant coaches are in great demand so for further information call Don Plottner at 545-3070.

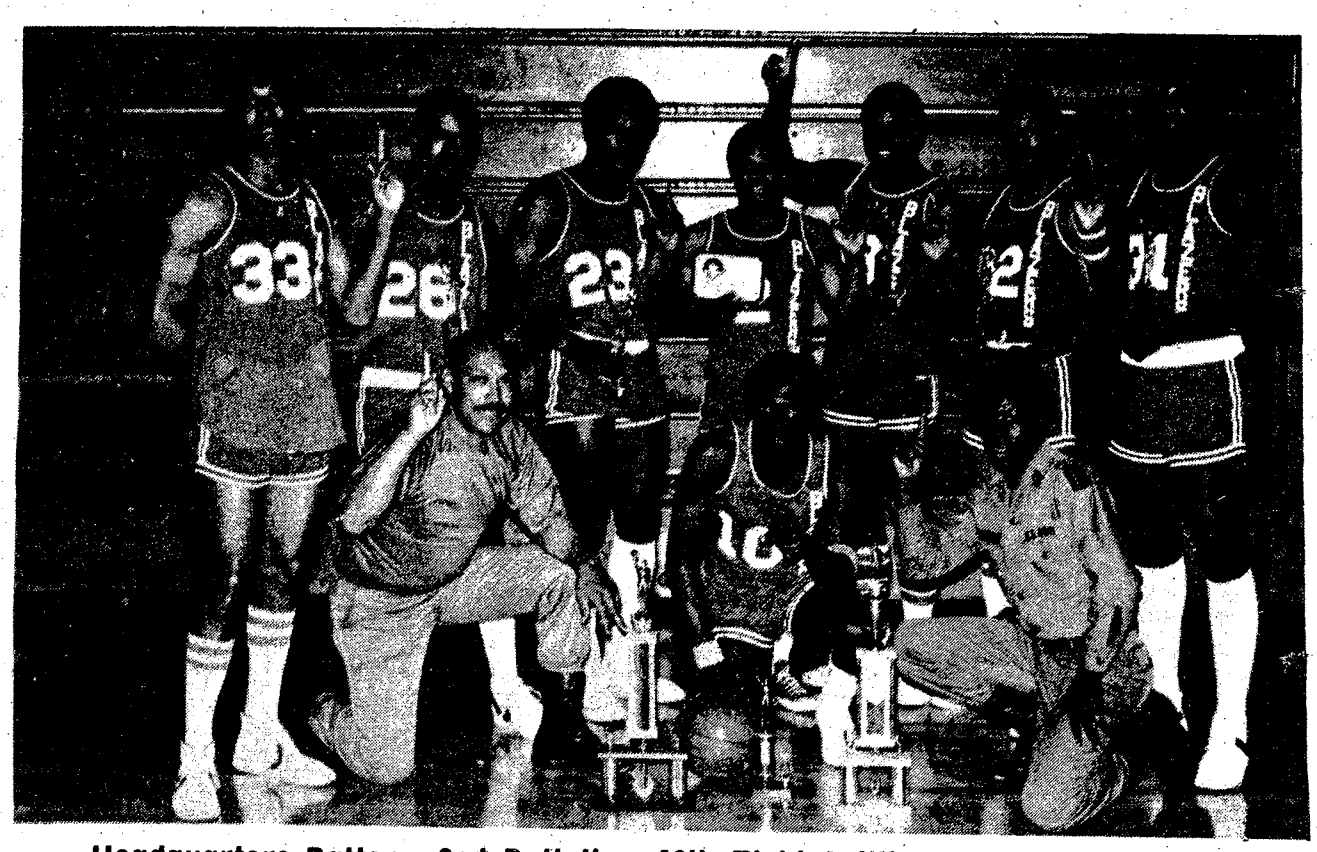
A softball clinic will be held for officials and coaches on Wednesday and Thursday from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. in Briant Wells Fieldhouse.

Major units are encouraged to send a minimum of one representative from each company-sized unit to the clinic.

The clinic will be conducted to train coaches and officials in the technique of coaching and officiating softball to promote better company level competition on Fort Benning. Anyone attending the clinic should be dressed in athletic type clothing with gym shoes and a baseball glove.

Names of individuals selected to attend the clinic will be submitted in writing by major units to the Physical Activity Office, Bldg. 394, no later than 4 p.m. Monday.

The softball season starts April 15. Don't be the only team not to know the rules. Send a representative to the clinic Wednesday and Thursday.



Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery were crowned post champions after defeating the 586th Engineer Company in the finals, 54-50.

Bad call mars Golden Gloves

Benning hit hard!

By Tim Boivin

Fort Benning's finest boxers did not receive the treatment they were worthy of when they visited Knoxville, Tenn., for the Golden Gloves Southern United States finals.

One Fort Benning boxer lost on a split decision to the eventual champion in his weight and another, in the words of the president of the Georgia Amateur Athletic Union (AAU), received the worst call of the tournament.

Anibal (Wally) Peniero lost on a 3-2 decision to eventual champion Darryl Doughty of South Carolina on the first night of boxing.

The real heartbreaker of the tournament came when Sean Pruitt, son of Lt. Col. Ken Pruitt, lost on a 3-2 split decision to Darrel Audia of Knoxville, Tenn. In his newsletter, the president of the Georgia AAU said, "Sean Pruitt was given the WORST CALL OF THE TOURNAMENT. Sean looked good and there was no doubt that he should have won the championship. Unfortunately, some of the judges were looking at a hometown favorite and a newcomer rather than two boxers. Sean did an excellent job. We know he's the champion and we'll just have to live with that---for the moment."

A president is not quickly given to such harsh criticism of a national official unless he is absolutely sure that it was warranted. Audia was from Knoxville and yet 3,000 fans booed the decision. As Lt. Col. Pruitt said, "It was the worst decision I have seen in 30 years of boxing."

Before Pruitt faced Audia in the finals he had to face two other boxers, both of which he decisioned by the score of 5-0. In the first fight he defeated Charles Myers of Chattanooga, Tenn., and in the second bout he decisioned Billy Ray Collins of Nashville, Tenn.

Although the fight was hotly disputed (The president of the Georgia AAU filed an official protest.), Sean will just have to fight his way through the AAU system for a berth on the still questionable Olympic team. Incidentally, Sean was rated 10th in the nation in his weight class among amateurs in the April issue of Ring Magazine while Audia continues to be unrated.

Although these two fine boxers from Fort Benning were laid by the wayside in their hopes for the Golden Gloves championship, they can still make the Olympic team, if there is one, by going through the AAU channels of competition. Georgia will hold its AAU championships in Atlanta at the World Congress Center April 2-5.

The regionals will be hold April 16-18 in Miami. Fla. The regionals will consist of boxers from Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida and the Florida Gold Coast around Florida's southern bend. The Nationals will be held in Las Vegas, Nev., May 4-10. From there the survivors will advance to the Olympic trials in Atlanta at the Omni beginning June 15. For ticket information contact Lt. Col. Pruitt at 545-7685.

TRADOC bowling team selected

The team that will represent Fort Benning at the TRADOC bowling tournament next month was selected in a rolloff last weekend at the Main Mall Bowling Center.

Two men and two women were selected from 60 hopefuls to participate in the tournament at Fort McClellan, Ala., on April 12-18. The two women were SSgt. Bertha Ashworth of the 524th Personnel Service Company and Sp5 Alice Pomeroy of the 15th Finance Company. The two men selected were CWO4 Kenneth Jacobsen of the 498th Medical Company and SFC Bennie J. Harris of HHC, 1st Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade. The men's alternate was SSgt. Peter Monteleone Jr., of A Company, NCOSI.

Juniors top DYA soccer action

Hooray! Hooray! There weren't any ties in Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) soccer action last Saturday.

In the Junior Division there were three outstanding games. The Red Devils slipped by the Blazers 3-2. The Blazers' Lance Sparrow and Jeff Christensen kept the Red Devils honest by booting in goals. However, the Red Devils' Susan Casey celebrated her birthday (we won't mention her age) with two goals and Pieter Hoebeke scored once for the victory. Todd Barnes, Steve Traub, Dan Bradshaw, Mike Chamberlin, Ben Senecal and Adam Hembold all played an excellent game.

The Sounders' second victory of the season did not come easy. The Bobcats' Clay Van Meter scored while Justin Emmerton and the rest of the Bobcats kept up the attack throughout the game. Jay Sneed scored the first goal for the Sounders, Patrick Schooley added another and Jason Kelley finished the scoring during the 3-1 win. Jim Sutherland, Scott Taylor and Garrett Bishop played superb defense throughout the game.

The Panthers displayed an awesome offense in their 7-2 thrashing of the Cosmos. Bill Cassidy hit for the hat trick while Shea Briscoe and Kenny Sienicki each knocked in two goals. Jimmy Allen and Jay Entlich scored the Cosmos goals. Scott Jorgenson, Victor Maas and Alex McKindra sparked the Panthers while Henry Byrd, Bryant Sneed and Ricky Gerding were standouts for the Cosmos.

In the Intermediate Division the Demons shut out the Cosmos 3-0, the Blazers outlasted the Blue Knights in a high scoring game, 8-7 and the Razorbacks slid by the Chiefs, 3-2.

The Blazers made a complete turnabout in their game after losing 8-1 last week. The Blue Knights made a spectacular comeback after being down by four goals at the half. Pat Riccinto scored a hat trick for the Blazers and Kevin Schnicker contributed two more in the victory. Other goal scorers for the Blazers were Randy Traub, Jim Humphrey and James Bouldin.

Todd Richardson and Richard Montalvo both scored hat tricks for the Blue Knights while Ray Bradshaw scored one goal and set up others with centering passes from his wing position. The Blue Knights' defensive standout was Terri Parker at right halfback. Standouts for the Blazers were Karene Harron, Toby Sneed and Goalie Jim Walker.

Coach Butch Tames' Demons won their second straight game by shutting out the Cosmos. Eddie Sprague scored two goals while Darin Tucker knocked in the other in the victory. Fullback Aly Pena Senas and halfback Chris Bradford were defensive standouts for the Demons. Fullback Jan Smith, halfbacks Vince Pruitt and Jeff Huckaby were defensive stars for the Cosmos.

An outstanding performance by goalie Raymond King sparked the Razorbacks to a 3-2 defeat of the Chiefs. Daryl Grogan had a hat trick for the 'Hogs' and Chris Mainville played an excellent game at both halfback and fullback. Razorback fullbacks Patton McKinley and Jeff Britton also played excellent defense.

The Blazers' Randy Traub prepares to pass the ball over to teammate Pat Ricciato in Saturday's game against the Blue Knights.

Mark Bell and Stacey Danielski scored for the Cosmos. Mark Bell was also cited for outstanding defensive play at center halfback by Coach Richard Lenig.

Spring horse show slated tomorrow

Fort Benning's Hunt Club will hold their annual Spring Horse Show tomorrow at the French Polo Field on First Division Road.

The Spring Horse Show gives riders the chance to exhibit the skills and relationships they have developed with their horses. The entry fee for the contestants is a base $3 and an additional $1 for each class they are entered in. Checks may be made payable to the Fort Benning Hunt Club.

Schooling will not be permitted in the show ring the day of the show. A schooling area will be provided and practice jumps are available. Schooling will not be allowed in the hunt field after 8:30 a.m. Stalls will not be available for visiting contestants. However, a picket line will be provided in the vicinity of the area for trailer and van parking.

The show is not just for the participants. Anyone who wants to see the beauty of a horse going through a routine with its master will want to come to this show.

A ceremony honoring special and long standing members of the Hunt Club will precede the show. The best part of the show is its price. In the 1946 Spring Horse Show an admission fee for spectators of 25¢ was charged. This year the show is free. Food and refreshments are available.

Capt. Ronald Stokes of Fort Benning displays the form that led him to a first and a second place in last weekends' Dr. Pepper 1980 Racquetball Classic in Birmingham, Ala. Stokes took first place in the singles and second in doubles with his partner, Jaime Cernigia. The Classic was sanctioned by the American Amateur Racquetball Association, of which Stokes was ranked 17th in their last standings.

Bunny Fun Run largest ever

By Tom Breeding

Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities Division is sponsoring a Bunny Fun Run April 12 starting at 8 a.m. at Crain Hall on Ingersoll Street.

This fun run will be the largest of the year on Fort Benning. A total of 240 awards will be handed out. There will be 35 different age groups and each first, second and third place finisher in each event in each category will receive an award.

The top three winners in each particular race will also receive awards. The mini-marathon will be 13.1 miles long and everyone who finishes will receive a trophy. T-shirts will be on sale commemorating the race and patches will also be handed out. There is no entry fee for any of the events. Live entertainment will be on hand to entertain spectators and competitors alike. Refreshments such as hot dogs, beer and soft drinks will also be on sale.

Other races on the day's agenda are a 2.5 miler, a five-miler and four five-mile team runs.

The team runs are broken up like this: There will be a five mile squad run. Each squad will consist of five servicemembers and will wear combat boots, fatigues and T-shirts. There will also be a five mile run in the same format but open to any takers. Regular running attire may be worn in this run and it is open to military and civilians, such as high school squads.

There will be a five mile military platoon run consisting of 16 servicemembers running in formation. They also must wear combat boots, fatigues and T-shirts. There will also be an open five mile platoon run that anyone can run in in regular running attire.

For any other information, comments, suggestions, complaints or compliments call 544-4177.

Kudos

I've not obtained the results from last Saturday's Heart Run, but it was a triumph worth mentioning nevertheless. To quote CTC president and local running guru Dave Fields, it was "probably the best organized race I've been in." And that's saying some.

Fields singled out the Columbus police for effectively controlling the intersections and directing traffic. Many thanks to those responsible for organizing and putting on a good show, especially Earl Jones, Bill Etchison and John Bohannon.

Egg-in-face

Or if you prefer, hoof-in-mouth. During part of the awards ceremony for the Columbus Marathon I guess I fell asleep. Maybe that was when I went off to buy a heating pad for my aching knees. Regardless, I stated that Connie Cullifer and Marilyn Hicks recorded identical times but that Marilyn was awarded first.

OOPS!

What I should have said was that they tied for first and that Connie got the trophy and Marilyn got the plaque. In the interest of fairness, Pepsi decided to make another first place trophy for Marilyn. (Marilyn, John Moore has your trophy.)

I also failed to note that the Ellaville-Schley 5-miler is being held at 9 a.m. on April 19.

It was a bad week.

Columbus Track Club meeting

Last night, Fort Benning's Chief of Clinical Dietetics, Capt. Karen Hobson, spoke to the monthly CTC meeting. Many of the questions runners ask concerning proper diet for athletes apply to everyone and her talk proved illuminating, covering many of the common nutrition questions we all ask.

First there is a question of calories: how many do we need? As with most comprehensive questions, there are no formula answers. The amount of calories required to maintain a given weight varies with each individual, and varies for that individual depending upon amount of activity.

One requires roughly two calories per minute to fuel minimal walking activity. That's 100-120 calories per hour just to sit around. A runner, however, burns approximately 19.4 calories per minute while running (other studies indicate that there is surprisingly little difference in number of calories consumed running at a five minute per mile pace compared with a nine minute per mile pace).

Once we determine our requisite intake of calories and what level of activity we need to burn off the excess or train for the personally desired level of fitness, how should we obtain these calories? Hobson stated that there was no difference in the dietary requirements for athletic versus sedentary persons EXCEPT in the amount of calories taken in. Optimum distribution of calories is 15 percent protein, 30-35 percent fats and 50-55 percent carbohydrates.

Proteins contain about four calories per gram, fats about nine calories per gram and carbohydrates four calories per gram. Therefore, if we assume a requirement of 1500 calories per day, the diet should comprise 56.25 grams of protein, 50-58.33 grams of fat and 187.5-206.25 grams of carbohydrates.

Hobson further cautioned against fad diets. For example, higher protein intake has no demonstrable effect on athletic performance. Proteins are not a source of energy as long as the body contains carbohydrates or fats. Fats, in turn, are fairly ineffecient sources of energy, making carbohydrates the body's most efficient source of fuel. A balance of the three is required for good nutrition and health.

To lose weight at the rate of one pound per week, all that is necessary is that one take in 500 calories a day less than he needs to "break even."

The daily diet should contain two to four servings from the milk group, two from the meat group, four or five from the fruit and vegetable group and four or five from the grain and cereal group. Calorie requirement determines serving size.

Other requirements include vitamins, minerals and water. Dehydration is a danger encountered by anyone participating in strenuous exercise, especially in hot weather. Waters and minerals are lost in heavy exercise, but Hobson believes that the effect of the latter is overemphasized.

The two principal minerals lost in exercise are sodium and potassium. However, 10 and five milliequivalents of sodium and potassium, respectively, are the recommended amounts of supplement per quart of replacement water. This amounts to ⅛ teaspoon of table salt in one quart of water to replace the sodium lost. Minerals are usually replaced by balanced diet.

Vitamins are also supplied by a balanced diet, but who eats a balanced diet? The primary thing to remember about vitamins is that they come in two categories, water soluble and fat soluble. B and C vitamins are water soluble and are excreted when consumed in quantities greater than required by the body. Vitamins A, D, E and K, however, are fat soluble and stored in the body, therefore can be taken excessively. To avoid toxic reaction, take care when taking vitamins.

The ultimate question in any discussion of nutrition and diet is weight. What is the ideal weight? Dr. George Sheehan has postulated the ideal weight for a long distance runner based on his long career of observation of runners. For him, the ideal distance man weighs two times his height in inches, or 144 pounds for a six foot tall runner.

Hobson posits a different formula. The ideal weight for men is 106 for a five footer, adding six pounds for each additional inch in height. For women, the standard is 100 pounds for a five footer, adding five pounds per each additional inch in height. These figures assure a medium frame so add or subtract 10 percent for heavy or light builds.

Summarizing then, she urges what philosophers have prescribed for centuries: moderation and balance.

Form of the week

The Chattahoochee Valley Regional Library System sponsors this week's clip out item. It is a 5,000 meter (3.1 mile) race beginning and ending at the Bradley Library at 1120 Bradley Drive in Columbus. The moderately hilly course goes from the library around Lakebottom Park, affording nice surroundings for the laboring runners.

Since the race falls on a Sunday afternoon (April 13 at 2 p.m.), it should at least conflict with no other running events. T-shirts for the first 300 finishers, and $4 preregistration ($2 for 13 and under) before April 9 make the price seem right. Now if the weather will cooperate...

Other events

Young Life presents a half marathon, 7 and 2 mile runs on Saturday, April 12 in Marietta, Ga., and offers T-shirts to all finishers. The course is a bit hilly, but the race flyer describes a well-organized event with all the basic amenities.

The Valley Jaycees and Chattahoochee Chasers Running Club feature a hike/bike/run for retarded citizens on April 19. This is a specialized series of events with detailed instructions, so call me for information on this one especially.

Tanya's real champ

By Bob Kuwik

Tanya Jenerette is winning races when most girls her age are just becoming involved in sports. Tanya, the daughter of Capt. Vandon and Mrs. Yong Cha Jenerette, is only 13 years old but has come in first place in her age group in six different runs.

In October, 1979, she came in first in her age group in the 5,000 meters race at the Realtors Run. In November, 1979, she came in first in her age group in the Plains Peanut Run five mile race. In December, 1979, she came in first place in her age group in the Faith Christmas Run five mile race. In February, 1980, she came in first in her age group in the Fort Benning Valentine Fun Run five mile and the YMCA Run 10 mile. This month she has come in first in the Auburn-Opelika 7.7 race. In those last three races she was the second place women finisher in each. Not bad for a girl in her first teenage year.

The first run Tanya entered was at Fort Riley, Kan., in 1978 in the mile run. within one month she had set the Kansas Region X one mile record for 11 year-old girls with a mark of 6:39. She has been competing ever since.

Tanya doesn't only excel at running. She is currently in eighth grade at Fort Junior High School and is on the honor roll. She received a first place ribbon for a science research paper in the 1980 science fair.

Tanya Jenerette, a true champion, both on the track and in school.

Tanya Jenerette is a champion whether she is running or hitting the books in school.

Follow Me golfing opens

Fort Benning's Follow Me Golf Course opened its tournament season last Saturday with 72 players shooting for prize money in a four-ball scramble.

Winners in the competition are:

First place with a net score of 60; Everett Urech, Jeff Benchich, Ray Crooke and Howard Miller.

Second place with a net score of 61; Doug Babcock, Marvin Black, Les Cox and Archie Wampler.

Third place wuth a net score of 62; Jim McGrone, Bill Pullum, Alton Crooke and Don Curry.

Sunday a man-woman scotch foursome tourney will be played over the Pineside Course and a four-man scramble is scheduled for April 26.

Job changes now available

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — Do you feel that you will have to change your MOS in order to move up in your military career? There is a way for soldiers in overstrength MOS to qualify for MOS in less crowded fields.

Soldiers may submit a request, through channels, to the appropriate reclassifying authority (AR 600-200). Soldiers below E6 may change their MOS by reenlisting for formal training at Army service schools. School spaces are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. Your local reenlistment NCO will assist you with application procedures. If, however, you are requesting formal training not in conjunction with reenlistment, a formal request, through channels, to MILPERCEN, must be submitted. Here again, your reenlistment NCO can help.

There are certain conditions whereby a request for an MOS change would not generally be considered:

- During the period for which a bonus was received or when enlisted under the Stripes for Skill Program.
- Within one year after receiving a new specialty obtained by completing training at an Army service school.
- During the suspension of favorable personnel actions ("flagging").

Are you beginning to get the feeling that it's almost impossible to get a new MOS? Not true. The Army wants the right soldier in the right job. If you feel that you qualify — give it a try. You have nothing to lose and possibly a whole new career to gain.

Civilian clerk wins award

The control and maintenance of records on approximately 1,250 vehicles at the Transportation Motor Pool is handled by Mrs. Phyllis A. Bill, vehicle control clerk.

The records she handles include those vehicles used at the Ranger camps in Dahlonega and Eglin Air Force Base and USAR/ROTC units in a three-state area as well.

Not only does Mrs. Bill handle records but she is also the vehicle accident investigator for the TMP. This covers all areas of safety to include conducting monthly safety meetings with the vehicle drivers.

Mrs. Bill was recently presented a Presidential Suggestion Award for the TMP automatic wash facility.

Thermost can save money

Many furnace technicians put the adjustment of the bonnet or plenum thermostat on oil and gas-fired heaters at the top of their list of cost-effective energy-saving measures. This thermostat turns off the fan that forces warm air up through the duct system into the house. On most heaters, the thermostat is set at 120 degrees or higher, resulting in a loss of furnace efficiency. It can be reset to just five degrees above room temperature for a savings of $9 a year.

If you are unsure about the location of your bonnet thermostat, or how to adjust it, ask your furnace service person during the annual maintenance check.

Proper furnace maintenance, by the way, is another great way to save money. Oil furnaces, especially, can waste a lot of costly fuel if they are not kept clean and in tune. Because of excess soot and/or maladjusted burners, furnace efficiency can drop from 75 percent to below 60 percent, increasing fuel bills by more than one quarter. A furnace technician can do a series of simple stack and burner tests to tell you just what your furnace's efficiency is and advise you on how to improve that efficiency.

One part of the maintenance work you can do yourself. Clean filters are important to both furnaces and to air-conditioners. Clean or change them regularly.

The best furnace energy-saving adjustment is still at the thermostat. Every degree that the house is artificially held above or below outdoor temperatures adds to the fuel bill. A 10 degree night setback is a great way to achieve a 10 to 25 percent savings on heating bills while you sleep. (If you have a heat pump, the savings will be from five to 15 percent.) The no-cost way to get the setback savings is to manually turn down the thermostat at night and then turn it up again in the morning. There are also various thermostats on the market that do the job automatically.

Caution: Some older people may require higher indoor temperatures — above 65 degrees Fahrenheit at all times — to avoid accidental hypothermia, a possibly fatal drop in body temperature. People with circulatory problems or those taking certain types of drugs (e.g., phenothiazines, commonly used to treat anxiety and nausea) may also be vulnerable. In such instances, follow a physician's counsel on both winter and summer thermostat settings in your home.

Shortage MOSs eligible for SRB

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — Are you holding a "critical skill" MOS? If the answer is yes, you may be eligible for the Selective Reenlistment Bonus Program (SRB).

The SRB program gives cash bonuses of up to $12,000 to eligible soldiers who reenlist in certain critical skills MOS — and this bonus can be paid in a lump sum.

The program is currently divided into two zones — A and B. Zone A is designed for soldiers with 21 months to six years of active service. Zone B is for those with six to ten years of active service.

Within these zones there are additional requirements which must be met before a SRB can be awarded. A soldier must:

- Be qualified in an MOS designed for an award of a SRB. Approximately 109 MOS are so designated; however, this figure varies month-to-month.
- Be serving on active duty in pay grade E3 or above.
- Extend the enlistment or reenlist within three months of ETS for at least three years.

Since the start of the SRB program on Oct. 1, 1974 more than 70,000 soldiers have received a SRB. To find out if you're eligible for this extra cash, visit your reenlistment NCO.

Army Reserves offer nice option

FORT MONROE, Va. (TNS) — If a career in the Army is not in your future, think seriously about joining the U.S. Army Reserve (USAR) or the Army National Guard (ARNG).

As a member of the Reserve Components you can hold a full-time job and fulfill your reserve obligation on specified weekends and two weeks during the summer. What's more, not only can you remain proficient in your Army skills, but you get paid for it.

A lot of young men and women are continuing to serve their country in the Reserves. Check into it and see what it has to offer you. Information on the USAR and ARNG is available during your out-processing, through Army recruiters or by contacting Reserve or Guard units in your community.

SUCCESS STORIES WANTED

More than 1,400 different TEC lessons have been developed and fielded within the past 5 years. They are designed by Army schools to increase individual and unit proficiency, improve job performance and produce higher SQT scores. The Training Extension Course (TEC) emphasizes performance-oriented training. There are printed lessons, lessons on audio tape and TEC lessons on tape and film combined. NCOs can use TEC to train one soldier or a small group. The Army Research Institute discovered that TEC-trained soldiers learn skills better and retain them longer than other soldiers do.

Thousands of soldiers have taken TEC lessons and profited from the experience. Thousands more deserve to know how much TEC can do for them. If you have a story worth repeating about how TEC helped you or someone you know, send the details to: US Army Training Support Center, Attn: ATTSC-ET-TECPD/Bldg. 1522, Fort Eustis, VA 23604 or call Autovon: 927-4603 or Commercial: (804) 878-4603.

THE BAYONET

Vol. 38, No. 27 | Published in the interest of Fort Benning personnel | April 4, 1980

They make up a group roughly the size of a division. In an average company there are about three of them. Male and female, they are the Army's single parents.

Glad you asked

What do you think the Army should do to help sole parents in the military?

1st Lt. Kenneth L. Burkes, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit
Assignments should be stable for a longer period of time. More activities should be provided for the kids during working hours and in the summer, day camps should be scheduled.

SFC Bordie Drake, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, 5th Army Corps USAEUR
I think the commanders should let the parents know what to do for the care of the child and they shouldn't be sent overseas.

Pvt. Theresa Gibson, IRP, Infantry Training Brigade
A 24-hour nursery should be provided. I plan on bringing my child down here in six weeks and I'm worried about finding someone trustworthy to watch them.

Capt. David Sykora, 10th Company, 1st Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade
I think that better baby-sitting or child care should be established. For the single parents on duty child care should be improved.

SSgt. Lemward F. Weaver, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, 197th Infantry
I don't think they should be treated any differently. But I think they should be recognized as having two commitments, one to the Army and the other to their children.

Sgt. Maj. G. H. Wheeler, Headquarters Company, Headquarters Command, USAIC
Leave them in longer, more stable assignments. And except in emergencies they shouldn't be sent overseas while the children are small.

Daniel K. Nazworth, 283rd Army Band
I think there should be more child care services on post and they should improve the ones they already have.

Sgt. Anita Gilliland, Company E, 3rd Brigade Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade
I think they should provide nurseries on call for whenever they are needed for the soldiers on flexible hours.

BAYONET commentary

Parents need growth

By Betty Zimmerman

Much has been written about sole parents in the Army, particularly women soldiers.

The opponents say women cannot do their jobs properly or handle their company responsibilities because of their dependent's needs.

I believe this is just as big a problem or bigger with many married men as it is with single parents, men or women.

Right here in my office, I have had occasion to witness one woman soldier sole parent with three young children. She never asked to be off for the children's sake — she had hired a capable babysitter. She competently met all her missions including CQ.

I have also witnessed male soldiers — not sole parents — who are always getting time off for family reasons.

They either need to chauffer their wives to the doctors or the commissary because they don't drive or because they have only one car. Or else they need to watch the children so the wives can go. They have and use many built-in excuses.

Whatever happened to the independent Army wife? I was a junior enlisted man's wife once with four children. I learned to drive. If I needed the car, I took my husband to work and kept it for the day. I either used the nursery for my children, took them with me, or swapped babysitting chores with neighbors. I learned to handle business matters so my husband was free to do his job without interruptions.

I, and others like me, could survive and even manage nicely when our husbands pulled field duty or unaccompanied tours. But what do the husbands of these other, totally dependent, wives think will happen when they ship out for a short tour overseas?

I say it's time for them both to grow up. The men should realize having a capable, independent wife will not take away from their manhood, and the wives can only benefit from learning to handle life's day to day activities.

$15 million construction to begin

Wright Associates, Inc., of Columbus, Ga., has been awarded a $15,523,690 contract to construct a trainee barracks facility at Fort Benning, according to the Savannah District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The contract calls for construction of one permanent barracks to house 1,120 trainees and 50 cadre personnel.

The facility will also contain a dining area, administrative offices, classrooms, supply areas and a post office.

Work under the Corps of Engineers contract will also include construction of a two-bay addition to an existing central energy plant to provide heating and cooling for the barracks, as well as furnishings for the dining facility and road construction.

Initial construction has already begun on the project, according to Ronald Sibold, engineer of the West Georgia Area, Savannah District Corps of Engineers. He added that the project is expected to be completed by the fall of 1981.

New program

NCO to be chosen

A new program has been established to recognize the most outstanding junior non-commissioned officer at Fort Benning.

On April 15 the first NCO of the Quarter (which will ultimately lead to the selecting of the NCO of the Year) will be chosen by a USAIC board made up of sergeants major.

MSgt. John Schafer from the office of the USAIC command sergeant major, said, "It was decided by the USAIC sergeants major, including the post sergeant major, that a need existed to personally recognize the NCO who excelled, just as we do in the Soldier of the Year program. There is a need to single out outstanding NCOs. The way this will work is, all the major commands will have their soldiers compete at the unit level as they do for the Soldier of the Year competition. The winning NCOs selected by the major commands will then appear before the board of sergeants major USAIC level, Infantry Hall. The board members will determine who will be the non-commissioned officer of the quarter. The winners will then compete for Soldier of the Year. Specialist fives and sixes are eligible the same as sergeants."

NCO of the Quarter will receive a:

- USAIC Certificate of Achievement
- Three-day pass
- Exemption from detail roster for 90 days
- Luncheon with USAIC sergeant major
- Bayonet letter opener
- $50 Savings Bond
- Certificate from post sergeant major
- A one-year membership and watch from AUSA

NCO of the Year will receive a:

- Army Commendation Medal
- Three-day pass
- Exemption from detail roster for six months
- Luncheon with USAIC sergeant major
- Bayonet letter opener
- $50 Savings Bond
- Certificate from post sergeant major
- $50 Savings Bond (CB&T)
- A three-year membership and a set of dress blues from AUSA.

Letters to the Editor

Target recognized

To the Editor:

The Engineer Instruction Team, CTD, USAIS, was delighted to read about the fine quality engineer unit training featured in your article title "Engineers set off Claymores." As primary users of Brown Range where the training took place, we have demonstrated the Molotov Cocktail against the two-and-a-half ton truck mentioned in your story.

The last time we visited the range our two-and-a-half ton training aid was missing. As a result of your fine investigative reporting, we have pieced the puzzle together. The missing training aid caper has been solved. We wish to express our gratitude for providing us with the solution to our missing training aid, and the last known picture of our former truck which was so skillfully demolished by several land mines. # Pets: Clinic hours to change, treatment still provided

The Animal Disease Prevention and Control Facility of Fort Benning's Veterinary Activity will operate under new hours beginning April 14.

Facility chief, Capt. Gwendolyn McCormick, DVM, explained, "The major change is that the clinic will be open on Friday afternoon and closed on Wednesdays."

The animal clinic will be open from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1-4 p.m. each weekday except Wednesday. Appointments are needed for most services and they may be made by calling 545-4444 between 8 a.m. and noon.

Animal care services needing appointments are: rabies and distemper vaccinations for dogs and cats; rabies and encephalitis vaccinations for horses; skin tests for mange and ringworms; checks for ear mites; heartworm tests for dogs; and Coggins tests for horses. Physical examinations for health certificates needed for interstate or overseas travel also require an appointment.

Registration of dogs and cats must be on appointment if vaccinations are needed too. But if these are up to date, then a pet can be registered on a walk-in basis.

Walk-in service is available up to one-half hour before closing for the following only: the turn-in of an animal for adoption; the turn-in of an animal for euthanasia; adoption of a pet; and the turn-in of an animal for quarantine following a bite case. You may also walk-in to purchase products for control of fleas, ticks and heartworm preventive medicine.

Owners of healthy unwanted pets may turn them in for adoption. The pets will be held for three working days and if they are not adopted, they will be euthanized.

Pets picked up as strays and unclaimed within three working days are also available for adoption if they are in good health. The adoptive family must pay for vaccinations and tests — normally around $7. If these stray pets are not claimed or adopted, they are also humanely put to sleep.

The animal care personnel also provide full medical treatment for the post's military dogs, currently numbering 20.

This service includes semi-annual complete physical examinations, dental hygiene care, routine medical problems, x-ray service and surgical service.

The care of military dogs has priority over any other function of the animal care clinic.

Benning personnel desiring to stable horses at the post's Hunt Club facility must make prior arrangements with the Hunt Club and the animal care clinic. Incoming horses must be quarantined at the veterinary facility for 21 days before they can be stabled at the Hunt Club.

Although the animal clinic does blood tests and sells preventive medication for heartworms, it does not provide treatment for these parasites if they are present. Owners must take their pet to a civilian veterinarian for this service.

Only limited emergency cae is provided for injured animals. Emergencies that require x-rays, intensive care or fracture repair must be taken to a civilian animal hospital.

The small number of veterinary personnel and the amount of required duties does not leave sufficient time for full services to pets of the active and retired military community.

Heat to be turned off Wednesday

It's time to smell the flowers and turn off the heat. Beginning Wednesday, facility engineers will begin the process (which usually takes two weeks) of turning off the heat at Fort Benning. Nonessential places will be first, followed by troop and family housing.

Mr. G.F. Schladensky, Utilities Division chief, said, "There are some 3000 government family quarters where the occupants themselves control the thermostat. We are asking for their cooperation with the rest of the post in turning back the heat.

Families who are not tuned in with energy conservation will inadvertently open the windows to let in the warm weather and forget to turn off the heat. If we all cooperate a lot of energy can be saved. We know there will still be a few chilly nights ahead but we don't want people to leave their thermostat on all day when it's not necessary.

The key here is, use only what you need and don't abuse it."

Hang 'em high

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Part of the competition involved jumping over a series of obstacles like this one.

Horse show a win

Story and Photos by Tim Boivin

It was a crisp misty day Saturday, not the ideal conditions for a horse show. However ,the Fort Benning Hunt Club, despite the adversity of the weather, put on a well organized and enjoyable show for 500 spectators throughout the day.

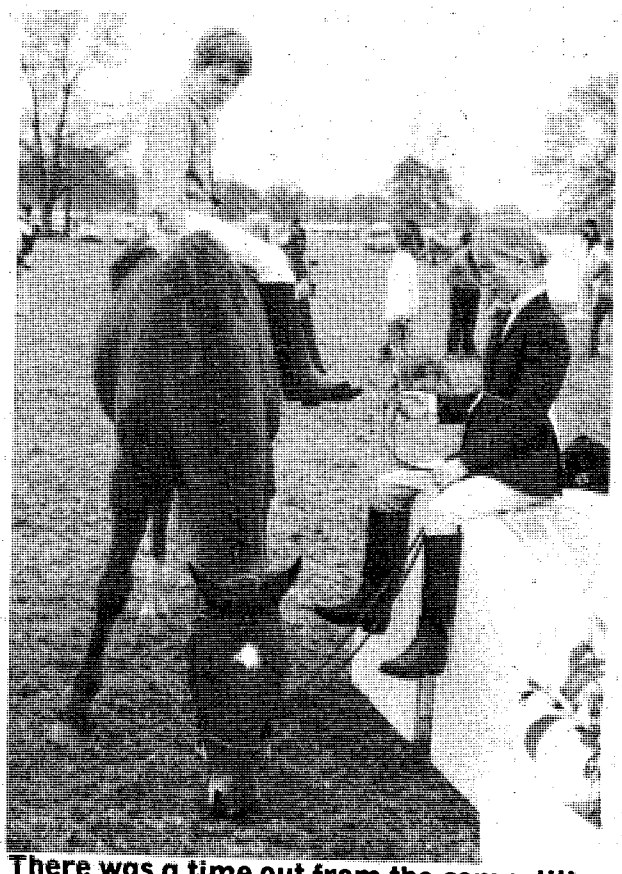
Rain hit Fort Benning for two full days prior to the show. This made the jumping difficult for both horse and rider. Many times it was observed that a horse would go up to jump an obstacle and rear back at the last moment and go around it. Every rider whose horse did this would continue to try until told by the dapper English accented announcer that they may be excused from the course.

Hot Dogs, hamburgers and sausages were available all day long so spectators and competitors could both mingle and enjoy a picnic atmosphere. There were more than 35 different classes competing and awards were given to the top five finishers in each class. Horses and riders were judged on equitation and dressage.

Youngsters from the nearby soccer fields joined the crowd after their games and got a big kick out of the jumping competition. Visitors came from all over Alabama and Georgia to watch and participate in the show.

Overall this Spring Horse Show was a rousing success for the Hunt Club, the competitors and the spectators alike.

Horse shows aren't just for the older types.



There was a time out from the competition at noon for lunch. A hot dog and sausage stand provided food for the people while the horses made do with what they could find laying around.

Utility bill can be cut

Lightbulbs are the symbols of conservation, but there are other things you can also turn off to save money. One example is the anti-sweat heater in refrigerators. These heaters keep moisture from appearing on the sides of the appliance. On large refrigerators, they add nearly $10 to the annual electric bill. They can be regulated with a switch inside the refrigerator compartment. The switch may have settings that say "dry/humid" or it may be called "power miser switch" or "energy-saver switch." If your switch says "dry/humid," make sure it is set on "dry." If it says "power miser" or "energy-saver," turn the switch on to turn the heaters off.

The heaters are unnecessary, except in humid climates where a house is not air-conditioned. If moisture ever does appear, turn on the heaters for short intervals and turn them off again when the humid weather is over.

Other good turn-offs are as follows: (1) pilot lights on gas furnaces during the non-winter months; savings $10 a year. (2) If you have a second refrigerator and use it only to store marginal items, unplug it for a savings of $20 to $40 a year. (3) Central air-conditioners can be turned off when the house will be unoccupied for four hours or more. (4) Room air-conditioners can be turned off during an absence of one hour or more. (5) Water heaters can be turned off when you leave the house for a weekend or longer. (6) Furnace or heating system thermostats can be set back when you are gone for more than four hours.

These measures will help your bank account and enable you to keep up with rising prices. They may also benefit you and your neighbors in a more general way. If all homeowners carry out these suggestions, the nation would save an equivalent of one fourth of the oil now imported into this country, or two million barrels per day. Reducing oil imports can ease the balance of payments deficit and the inflationary spiral it creates.

Soldiers get AER benefits

For 12 days last October, the Defense Department was without congressional authority to use any funds in the defense budget — including funds for soldiers' pay. During that time, more than 1,600 soldiers, unable to receive their normal TDY, PCS, separation and new enlistee entitlements, drew $148,000 in emergency financial aid from the Army Emergency Relief (AER).

AER sections on U.S. Army installations throughout the world stood ready to respond to soldiers' emergency needs if the crisis continued and their mid-month pay was delayed.

Two days before the October 15th payday, Congress approved the defense budget, and AER organizations relaxed when the larger emergency failed to materialize.

AER is a private non-profit corporation with a board of managers that establishes policies for administering and operating it. Its mission is to help the Army "take care of its own." It is, in effect, the Army's emergency financial organization.

Since 1942, when AER was incorporated to collect and hold funds for servicemembers and dependents in distress, more than 1,147,000 persons have received an average of $127 apiece in emergency help through AER. Almost $7 million of the $146 million total went to soldiers who sought help in 1978, AER's biggest year since 1944.

AER emergency financial assistance is oriented to the needs of soldiers and their families, and persons requesting it need only demonstrate a valid need. Support AER through the yearly fund drive which is in progress.

Don't panic during fire

By Bill Thornton

FORT MONROE, VA. (TNS) — Each year fires cause loss of valuable timber land, wildlife, homes and lives. The startling fact about these fires is that 90 percent of them are due to human carelessness, negligence or arson.

The conditions in the spring and fall are most favorable to the start and spread of ground cover fires. These fires have no favorite place to start. They can happen anywhere, anytime. One TRADOC installation recently suffered a grass fire that resulted in the destruction of Army vehicles, injury to several personnel and damage to over 1,200 acres of land.

What makes grass fires so dangerous? First, this type of fire spreads rapidly and destroys whatever is in it's path. Second, people trapped by a fast moving fire through tall grass, underbrush or crops can rarely move fast enough to outrun the pursuing flames.

Fires in ground cover occur when a source of heat for ignition of a fuel, such as grass or leaves, mixes with sufficient quantities of air. Since we cannot eliminate the air, we must try to remove the source of ignition or fuel.

Careless smoking during range operations can be the source of ignition of hundreds of acres of dried grass, brush, trees or anything it touches. Immediate reporting of any fire, even during maneuvers, may prevent an unnecessary spreading of the fire. Vehicles with catalytic converters should not be operated in tall grass or brush, or in areas of flammable liquid spills or vapors.

Around quarters it is especially important to remove any dead grass, leaves, etc., in an effort to eliminate fuel that could act as a fuse should a fire occur.

Above all, in a fire DON'T PANIC. Keeping your head might be the first step towards keeping your life.

Careless smoking, campfires, motorized equipment, debris burning, and arson are the greatest causes of outdoor fires. A small amount of carelessness, coupled with a large amount of dry grass, can be the elements needed to cause a major disaster.

WO slots opening

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Retired Army warrant officers in some specialties can now apply for return to active duty, MILPERCEN officials announced recently.

Applications will be accepted from retired warrant officers wishing to return to active duty who have held any of the following MOS: 100B (utility observation helicopter pilot), 100C (cargo helicopter pilot), 100E (attack helicopter pilot), 100Q (combat service support fixed wing pilot), 100R (combat surveillance fixed wing pilot), 011A (military physician assistant), 214E (pershing system technician), 221B (nike assembly technician) and 260A (nuclear weapons technician).

Applicants must not be more than 55-years-old as of the last day of the fiscal year in which they apply. Active duty tours will be for four years.

According to a MILPERCEN spokesman, along with the retiree recall, MILPERCEN is also actively recruiting warrant officers who separated before retirement. The Army is limited in its training capability and can't train as many warrant officers as are needed, the spokesman said.

Applications should be sent to the U.S. Army Reserve Components Personnel and Administration Center, ATTN: AGUZ-RCA-AD, 9700 Page Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo. 63132. DA form 1-60 (application for active duty) should be used.

Details on application procedures are in appendix E to DA circular 601-92. For more information write to MILPERCEN, ATTN: DAPC-OPW-P, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332.

Pennsylvania NG unit presents gifts to post

Representatives of the 28th Infantry Division, Pennsylvania Army National Guard, presented Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander, with several momentoes of the Division during ceremonies March 27 in Infantry Hall.

The 28th has a proud history of service to the nation and as Capt. Norman L. Wolf, 28th Infantry Division, explained, "We are an infantry division and with Fort Benning being the Army's Infantry Center, we felt it was only fitting that we present these awards."

The roots of the 28th Division are set in the earliest days of the colonial militia. The men of Pennsylvania were a portion of the vast Army of the Union during the Civil War and the colors of Pennsylvania units were carried into the battles at Fredericksburg, Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg.

The 28th Division came into being on March 12, 1879, with the Keystone Symbol of Pennsylvania as the designated emblem of the Division.

Units of the 28th fought in the Spanish-American War, the Mexican Border War and World War I. During World War II the Division fought against a total of 45 of the 90 German divisions on the Western Front in Europe. Gen. Omar Bradley commanded the Division for six months and attested to the Division's bravery and valor.

The 28th Division is one of the two Reserve Components Divisions to monetarily contribute to the National Infantry Museum. It is fitting that these commemoratives (a molded metal memorial plate, a metal coin and three historical books) be added to the display of 28th Infantry Division artifacts now in the National Infantry Museum here.

Books will be placed in the Infantry School Library for use as reference books by resident students.

Hardbacked copies of "The First Century", an illustrated history of the 28th Infantry Division's first 100 years is available by writing to the Letterkenny Army Depot, Chambersburg, PA. 17201, Attn: SDSLEAY.

Golden Knights to perform here

Members of the world famous United States Army Parachute Team, better known as the Golden Knights, will perform an aerial free-fall demonstration on April 18 at 11:30 a.m. on York Field.

The Golden Knights sketch red patterns in the sky with smoke released from grenades attached to their boots while plunging towards the ground at speeds in excess of 160 miles per hour.

After the aerial demonstration the Knights will show how to pack a parachute and answer questions about skydiving and the Army.

The Golden Knights have won more national and international honors than any other parachute team in history. They have entertained more than 100 million spectators at demonstrations in every state in the United States and 29 foreign countries.

The event is free of charge and open to the public.

SUCCESS STORIES WANTED

More than 1,400 different TEC lessons have been developed and fielded within the past 5 years. They are designed by Army schools to increase individual and unit proficiency, improve job performance and produce higher SQT scores. The Training Extension Course (TEC) emphasizes performance-oriented training. There are printed lessons, lessons on audio tape and TEC lessons on tape and film combined. NCOs can use TEC to train one soldier or a small group. The Army Research Institute discovered that TEC-trained soldiers learn skills better and retain them longer than other soldiers do.

Thousands of soldiers have taken TEC lessons and profited from the experience. Thousands more deserve to know how much TEC can do for them. If you have a story worth repeating about how TEC helped you or someone you know, send the details to: US Army Training Support Center, Attn: ATTSC-ET-TECPD/Bldg. 1522, Fort Eustis, VA 23604 or call Autovon: 927-4603 or Commercial: (804) 878-4603.

Enlisted re-up option opens

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Soldiers in grades of E-1 through E-6 can now reenlist for a gluaranteed assignment to the U.S. Army Inteligence and Security Command (INSCOM), DA officials announced recently.

A change to AR 601-208 (Army reenlistment program) includes the revised INSCOM and electronic warfare/cryptologic units and training activities reenlistment option.

E-6 and below, regardless of years of service, can reenlist for:

- School training in any MOS needed by INSCOM.
- Guaranteed assignment to INSCOM or an EW/Crypto activity.
- A 16-month stabilized tour in all but overseas short tour areas.

Soldiers may elect this option based on a preliminary security clearance by the ;local installation security officer. In the past, a final security clearance was required before a soldier could enter a military inteligence MOS.

For more information see your re-up NCO.

First salute earns cash

The U.S. Army, like many other long standing organizations has developed many customs and courtesies over the years. Some of these customs have changed with the times but many are still with today's 'All Volunteer Force'.

One long standing Army custom that can be very profitable for some well informed enlisted servicemember is that of saluting a newly commissioed officer. Many an old soldier has cashed in on his knowledge of his tradition by posting himself strategically near the graduation ceremony of an Officer Candidate School and picking up several fast bucks.

Another ancient and almost forgotten custom in the Army is the 'no thanks policy'. This policy being that "you don't thank a superior when he does something for you in the course of his official duties." For example, you should not thank the commanding officer for approving your leave request. When a soldier receives his pay, he does not thank the paying officer for it. A company commander would not thank an inspecting officer for giving his company a favorable report. However, in purely social relationships — as opposed to the official ones just cited — the normal "civilian" courtesies, of course, apply. The point is that official relationships are supposed to be above considerations of "persoı al feelings" (favoritism or hostility); thanking a superior for an official action could imply that he was showing you favoritism.

"It's tough being a single parent anywhere in society but it is especially difficult in the Army."

Single pa

By Gary Jones

It is 2:30 a.m. on a Wednesday, a school day. The bedside phone rings and a disoriented, groggy soldier picks it up.

"Hello," the sleepy soldier answers.

"Specialist Taylor?"

"Yeah, what do you want?...What time is it anyway?" he asks.

"This is SFC Grant. We're on alert, be at the company in 20 minutes with full field gear."

"Sarge, there's no way I can...My son...I can't think of anywhere to take him this early...I..."

"We move out at 0300, the choice is yours Taylor. Be here or pay the price," explains Grant.

Taylor hangs up the phone and faces his first big decision as a single parent since divorcing his wife. He really loves his son and can't bear the thought of not having him with him but now the world seems to have turned upsidedown and he just doesn't know which way to turn.

Making this type of decision is a problem that faces many soldiers in the Army today. What it boils down to is that military single parents have many choices to make, with perhaps the biggest being "Should I get out or stay in?"

Who are single parents?

Soldiers who are separated from their spouses, or who have spouses unable to care for themselves and still have children to care for are considered single parents by the Army.

These soldiers were not single parents when they entered the Army because single parents are not eligible to enlist. They acquired either the dependents or the marital status after enlisting.

The responsibilities and difficulties of single parents do not change their obligations to the Army. Like other servicemembers, they must carry their full load, and must take their share of hardship assignments and inconvenient working hours.

"It's tough being a single parent anywhere in society but it is especially difficult in the Army," explained Fleda R. Glenn, post school counselor. Glenn, along with her co-worker Bill Abrahamson (also a post school counselor), have encountered various situations of children who come from single parent homes.

Both Glenn and Abrahamson agree that the biggest problem facing military single parents is the lack of time they have to spend with their children due to job requirements. "Usually, we find that the children of military single parents have their physical needs taken care of but due to the lack of time the parents have to spend with them, emotional needs some time are neglected," explained Glenn.

According to Glenn, the children of single parents, especially in the Army, often come home to an empty house after they reach their early teens. While by the regulations there is nothing wrong with this practice, once the child is over the age of 12, it can often lead to problems for parent and child.

One case Glenn and Abrahamson recently dealt with turned out to have a tragic ending for the ld child who was tempted into making the ecisions while left unsupervised by her listed mother. The young girl (who we will bara) was a pretty girl who looked much an her 13 years but, according to Glenn, was y young emotionally.

Barbara's mother divorced her husband, she the Army as a means of supporting herself child. During the day Barbara was in school th her mother's duty hours conflicting ne time she arrived home from school, a often found herself alone. Without parental sion and guidance at home, Barbara began ut on her own at night. In order to make xtra spending money, she took up babysit-

However, her mother saying she didn't want to be responsible for child. Barbara's mother threw all the bility back on Barbara. With all the prob- t come up trying to care for a newborn arbara was forced into dropping out of explained that Barbara's situation is an but it does illustrate what can happen when leave their children alone. However, leaving ren alone isn't always harmful as another rent, Maj. 'J' explains - "There have been few times when I have had to leave for a riod of time on TDY and left my son at his leaves him unsupervised which some- s caused him to give in to the temptations to that I perhaps wouldn't let him do. But he experience he has gained has been good has learned to be independent and to stand n two feet. He even told me that he enjoys his own once in a while."

st way to deal with the problem of time, to Maj. 'J', is to devote all of your attention to your child once you do get home. "Before I think about going out for the evening, I try to make sure my son's lifestyle is as set and normal as possible," explained Maj. 'J'. "I always come straight home from work and enjoy a relaxed meal with my son. After he is settled down for the evening, either watching TV or visiting friends, then I feel free to go out and have some fun myself.

"In my opinion, there are three main things a person should consider before making the decision to join the ranks of the single parents and keep their child...(1)Is the person willing to make the moral commitment to the child (especially to love him)? (2)Is the person financially able to take care of the child? (3) And is the person able to raise the child in an impartial mannor so as not to turn the child against the other parent? It is important to think of the child first!" he explained.

The Army's opinion

When dealing with the problems of single parents, if a commander is to be fair to other soldiers in the company, he cannot allow a single parent to threaten unit readiness by being late for duty, or missing work entirely, each time a child is ill or a babysitter is unavailable. Neither can he tolerate a soldier's bringing children to the unit during an alert.

Until recently, commanders had few options in dealing with the problems of the estimated 13,000 enlisted soldiers and 1,800 officers who are single parents. Their guidance was simple: If a soldier's family responsibilities interfere with his military ones, separate that soldier.

Army policy now gives commanders more flexibility in handling such situations and gives single parents time to make arrangements for meeting family needs.

The new policy has three key provisions:

Required counseling for all enlisted single parents and for officer single parents with less than three years of service. Enlisted counseling must include initiation of a dependent care plan. (Before, only enlisted soldiers with less than three years of service were counseled.)

A commander's bar to reenlistment for any soldier whose personal or family problems significantly affect his ability to perform duty (for example, a soldier who cannot find a babysitter and takes his child to work).

A regulatory bar to reenlistment for a single parent who fails to provide an approved dependent care plan.

However, a commander still has the right to initiate involuntary separation in extraordinary cases where it appears that a soldier cannot perform his duties or isn't available for worldwide assignment. Documented evidence of cause for separation (AWOLs or repeated failures to report for duty, for instance) would be necessary for this action.

What is a dependent care plan?

A dependent care plan is a signed statement that a soldier has made provisions for child care in each of several circumstances: no-notice alerts, FTX, TDY, CQ, overseas deployment to a dependent-restricted area, overseas deployment on short notice, and evacuation of dependents from hostile-fire areas.

The plan requires the signature of all persons designated to provide that care and it documents a soldier's understanding of his responsibility to report for duty, without dependents, whenever necessary during duty hours and beyond.

During counseling, the unit commander informs an enlisted single parent that within approximately three months, he should submit a completed dependent care plan. This commander recommends approval or disapproval of the plan and forwards it to the commander with special court-martial authority, who must approve it or recommend disapproval within six months of the date of counseling.

To avoid a bar to reenlistment, a soldier must submit the plan early enough to assure processing by the end of the six-month period.

Only an officer with general court martial authority can disapprove a dependent care plan. But if any commander in the chain recommends disapproval of the plan, the soldier must be given a chance to submit additional documentation within the six-month period.

An approved dependent care plan is forwarded to the soldier's servicing military personnel office for filing in his Military Personnel Records Jacket.

Any time dependent care arrangements change, the soldier must revise the dependent care plan. When he is reassigned, the gaining command must verify the plan.

Sp4 Taylor found out the hard way that the Army means business when dealing with single parents under it's new policy. After trying to decide what to do with his son, Taylor decided to take him with him to the company so that he wouldn't be late for the move out. His company commander had already counseled him about his new responsibilities as a single parent in the Army and his need to submit a dependant care plan for approval. He had continued to put it off until now he was in a jam. When he arrived at the company he found the commander unsympathetic to his situation and soon found himself facing a bar to reenlistment.

Not all single parent soldiers fall into the same trap as Sp4 Taylor because they had carefully planned out a dependent care plan before they were forced into making a tough decision. Just because a person is in the Army doesn't mean that they can't have a rewarding life with their child in a single parent/child relationship but the parent must be willing to make the sacrifice of their time and personal freedom, according to Maj. 'J'. "My son and I have had a terrific life together and I wouldn't change a thing," he concluded.

Are you a Daniel Boone?

By Tim Boivin

There is a little of the Daniel Boone adventuresome type in most soldiers. The problem is how to find an outlet for those needs. A new kind of competition has arisen in the last year for those needs: Orienteering.

Orienteering is a sport that combines physical prowess, mental coordination and a little luck. Orienteer races are held on one to three mile courses. There are ten points that an orienteer has to get to. When he gets to a point there is a puncher that he punches his card with to prove he has been there. The orienteer has to reach all ten points before he finishes the race.

Hold on to that compass

An orienteer must have the proper equipment. They need long pants and long sleeved shirts to protect them from branches and other natural obstacles that may come across his path on the hilly course. They must wear cleated orienteering shoes and they are given a compass and a map just before the race to find their way.

If an orienteer loses his compass he might as well hang it up and quit because he can't find his way without it. Some of the obstacles they might run into are ditches, heavy brush, wild animals and wait a minute branches. Wait a minute branches are the one that knock him in the head while they are looking at their map or compass. It makes them stop and think 'Wait a minute', hence the name.

An orienteer plots the route they want to take that will be the quickest before the race. In other sports the athletes get to see the field they are playing on beforehand. Orienteers do not. When planning their route it is just hit and miss whether they are doing it right.

Fort Benning and Pine Mountain will be the host of the first TRADOC orienteering championships April 22-23. They are looking for members on their three person team. Notice the word person. Ladies may try out also. The first practice on Fort Benning will take place the day before the championships.

TRADOC championship

Ten teams are expected to take part in the championship including Fort Dix and Fort Leavenworth. Fort Leavenworth has already informed the sports office here that they are going to win the championship. However, Fort Benning is the home of the Infantry and there should be no doubt who the champions will be: Fort Benning.

If you would like to try out for this exciting sport contact the sports office at 545-2332.

USAMU takes first

By Tommy Pool

Sgt. Joe Clemmons of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit held on to win the 1980 Interservice Skeet Championship by a one bird margin in competition held last weekend at Fort Benning, March 27-30.

Over 40 competitors were on hand for the championships as the 300 bird event came down to the final 25 birds between Clemmons and teammate PFC Dean Clark for the individual title. Scoring a final 294 out of 300, Clemmons finished one bird ahead of Clark at 293. SP4 Jonathon Cantiello picked up third place after a 75 bird shoot-off with Lt. Col. John Torbush, when both competitors tied at 290 in the regulation event.

In team competition, the U.S. Army squad won both two man and four man Interservice team title. Sgt. Clemmon and SP6 Alger Mullins combined for the two man title scoring 293 out of 300.

Clemmons, Mullins, Clark and SSgt. Alan Leverett made up the four man squad with a 579 out of 600 total.

In other international shooting competition, the 80 member United States Shooting Team returned victorious from the IX Benito Juarez Shooting Championships held in Mexico City, Mexico, last March 24-30.

The squad included 19 personnel from USAMU, who gathered a total of nine gold, one silver and one bronze in the overall U.S. effort of 25 gold, 10 silver and six bronze medals.

Members of USAMU winning gold medals in individual and team competition were Lt. Wanda Jewell (Air Rifle), Capt. Earnest Vande Zande (English Match), SP5 Kathy Kelly (Air Rifle), SFC Charles McCowan (Air and Standard Pistol), SP5 Karen Monez (50 Meter Rifle), Lt. Col. Loes Wigger (300 Meter Rifle) and SSgt. Jimmy McCoy (Standard Pistol).

Silver and bronze medal winners were Capt. Randy Stewart and Sgt. Robert George (Running Target), SFC McCowan and Sgt. McCoy (Center Fire Pistol).

A total of 30 countries competed in the championships including most of the South American countries and several from Europe. Entries from Russia, East Germany, Sweden, Switzerland, Australia and Korea were also present. Nearly 500 individuals competed in the week long championships.

This weekend, Fort Benning will host the Interservice Running Target Championship at USAMU's Hibbs Range. The matches will run from April 8-13 with competition beginning at 0800 hours daily. The genefral public is cordially invited to observe the matches which will include the top service teams and individuals with several former national champions competing.

Fishing tournament

Soldiers finish strong

Col. Addison Davis III, the post chief of staff, caught the biggest fish in the recent 1980 Superbowl Bass fishing tournament. Although he was not on hand as part of any of the clubs involved, as an observer Davis pulled in a six pound, eight ounce bass.

Sonny Osborne of the Phenix City Bass Club caught the limit, ten fish, that weighed a total of 13 pounds, 13 ounces. The largest string of six fish was caught by Verland Best Jr. of the Georgia-Alabama Bass Club and weighed a total of six pounds, eight ounces.

The Dolphin Bass Club was the champion club at the tournament as Fort Benning pulled up just a little short and had to settle for second place. The Georgia-Alabama Bass Club came in third, Phenix City's finest came in fourth and Oswego came in fifth.

After Davis, the top fish catchers, by weight, were all military related fishers. Tim Billman, son of SFC (ret.) Robert Billman, caught an 11 pound, 11 ounce baby. Davis caught another one that weighed seven pounds, 11 ounces. Capt. Fred Sunstrom, the commanding officer of 11th Company, The School Brigade, drew in one that weighed five pounds, 11 ounces. Maj. (ret.) Neil Messerly snatched a four pound, 12 ounce prize. Capt. John Kelley of the United States Army Infantry Board rounded out the top five with a catch of four pounds, eight ounces.

Overall, 85 fish were caught, and as is the policy of the tournament, 85 bass were released.

On April 18-20 the 17th Annual Alabama Freshwater Fishing Rodep will be held in Eufala, Ala. It is being sponsored by the Eufala Jaycees. For further information contact Billy Jackson, Route four, Eufala, Ala., 36027.

On March 12 John Giles of Abbeville, Ala. broke that record by catching a 16½ pound black bass. Like Dollar's fish, the female was loaded with roe. It had a girth of 29¾ inches and a length of 29½ inches. The 1980 spring season is one of the best on record for Eufala and is not too far for fishermen on Fort Benning to spend a lazy afternoon of fun and fishing. Within a two week period seven bass in the 13 pound category have been taken and all but one has been taken on the south end of the lake. Strings from 25 to 40 pounds have been reported.

Georgia fishermen will have to measure largemouth bass before they throw the fish in a frying pan. The state Department of Natural Resources has issued new limits for largemouth bass. The board decided that to be kept, bass caught in all lakes except Blue Ridge, Burton and Lake Oconee must be 12 inches long. Any bass over six inches long is legal is legal in Blue Ridge and Burton Lakes.

For Lake Oconee, a slot limit has been put into effect. Under it, fish between 11 and 14 inches long must be returned. Fish between six and 11 inches are legal, as are any fish longer than 14 inches.

If you have any news concerning fishing that you would like to shar with reeaders of THE BAYONET, contact the sports editor at 545-4622.

DYA soccer teams battling

Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) soccer headed into its third week as hard fought defensive battles were showcased in the Junior Division and the Demons continued to lead the Intermediate Division.

In the Junior Division, the Sounders displayed an excellent offense led by Patrick Schooley with four goals as they thrashed the Cosmos 6-2. Jason Kelley and Brian Richardson also scored for the Sounders while the Cosmos goals were scored by Jay Entlich and Mike Melson.

The Blazers and the Panthers dueled to the tune of a scoreless tie. Dan Bradshaw, Jeff Christensen, John Chamberlin and Greg Copeland made key plays for the Blazers. Chad Holter, Chuck Briscoe, Mike Wall and Alex McKindra were the standouts for the Panthers.

The Bobcats made a valiant try for their first win of the season but came up one goal short in a 1-1 thriller with the Red Devils. Jay Glass scored the Red Devils only goal while Clay Van Meter scored for the Bobcats.

The Demons continued to lead the Intermediate Division as they outscored the Chiefs 4-1. The game was close until the last quarter when Darrin Tucker scored twice to ice the game for the Demons. Eddie Sprague and Ronnie Lawrence scored the other goals in the victory. Richard Lenig scored the Chiefs' only goal.

Despite the outstanding play of Blazer 'Supergoalie' Jim Walker, goals by Razorback strikers Daryl Grogan and Chris Spigelmire were all that the Hogs needed to claim victory by the score of 2-0.

Jim Butler banged in three goals to lead the Cosmos over the Blue Knights 6-2 for their first victory of the season. Jeff Urbano scored twice and Steve Genetti added another in the victory. Todd Richardson and David Allison scored in a losing effort for the Blue Knights.

Second looks

Looking once again to the authors and finishers of the March 22 Heart Run, who for the joy of competition ran briskly, despising the pain, and are now sitting on their pr's waiting for another chance at greater glories. Last week was the authors' plug. Now for the finishers.

No wonder Dave Fields liked this one so much! Our CTC President ran a 33:36 over the 6.2 mile distance, capturing fourth place a mere 36 seconds off the winning pace. That, in turn, was the prize of a Fort Benning ace, George Gilkes. Leonard Horning copped second with a 33:13, and George Reynolds sixth with 35:32.

Then came James Cambron with a 17th place 38:03; CTC Race Director John Moore set a pr (personal record) with a 40:09 (not bad for a member of the 'over-the-hill' gang!), and 11B sportswriter Bob Kuwik with a 40:36. And I have it on good authority that the Fort Benning cadres were even more numerous, including Van Jenerette, the one with the famous daughter.

While daughter Tanya beat Dad (43:46 to 44:27), she couldn't quite top Tina Kroll in the Women's Division. Tina registered a 42:05 to run away from the rest of the field. Susan Papst took third, reinforcing the subversive precedent of whipping up on Dad (45:31 to 46:53).

For all you timid souls who fear ridicule or just the indignity of coming in last, consider this last thought on the Heart Run. The conditions for the race were good, and the course was flat to light hills. Still, there were finishers who ran 10 minute miles, the last recorded finisher posting an 89:30. So even if you run 14 minute miles, you may not come in last, and it's good for you. (And eat all your brussel sprouts.) End of commercial. End of sermon.

Avon 10-miler

We suspected 13-year-old Tanya Jenerette was a real comer, but now there is irrefutable proof. Last weekend she scored big in this topflight event against national and international caliber competition. In a field of nearly 400 entrants from all over the country, little Tanya clicked off seven-minute miles over the rugged, hilly Stone Mountain course for a 30th place finish.

CTC runners Barbara Flournoy and Susan Emerson made the trip and did well also. Barbara finished a couple of places and a few seconds behind Tanya, and our Faith School flash was well into the top half of race finishers. (And now I'll probably never be able to beat her again.)

Diet Pepsi

Here's a big one. The Diet Pepsi 10,000 meter series comes to our area on April 19. The Dothan, AL Runners host this 10K with 2K Fun Run, and it promises to be all a race could be, complete with flowering dogwood and azaleas along the gently rolling paved course. T-shirts are a part of the race packet; late registration lasts until April 16. I have entry forms.

Bunny Fun Run

Fort Benning's Morale Support Activities Division will be holding the largest fun run of the year April 12 beginning at 8 a.m. The Bunny Fun Run is the name of this extravaganza and over 340 awards and 3,000 patches will be handed out to the runners.

No entry fees or forms are required for the race. Commemorative T-shirts will be sold as well as refreshments. More detailed information will be available in next weeks MAKING TRACKS.

This weekend

For you compulsive competitors, this weekend is a toughie. The only thing I can find is the (get this!) Redding Rip Roaring Road Race in Lizella, Ga.

Seriously, folks, this might be an interesting one, and for you whose expertise does not run to Georgia georgraphy, Lizella is a few miles west of Macon on Hwy 80. There's a 5K and a 10K, so you even have a choice. Call 544-4177 for details.

Runner profile

Marine rep runs

By Bob Kuwik

Capt. Sam Brinkley is a 30-year-old Marine Corps representative of Fort Benning. Sam began running while in high school and specialized in the 440-yard run. He upped his mileage while in the Marine Corps due to the length of their runs.

Sam runs five miles a day when he is not preparing for a race but when he is in training he runs up to eight miles a day, averaging about 50 miles a week. The captain said he runs his first 30 minutes for physical fitness and "anything more than that is for mental relaxation."

Sam said the benefit of running is obtaining a high level of physical fitness. The only drawback, he said, is that, "It's hard to run during the day because of my work schedule. I do my best whenever I have a little extra time during the day to put on my shoes and go out running."

Sam enjoys competitive running and has participated in the Columbus Southern Open (42 minutes flat), the Chattahoochee River Run in West Point, Ga. (38 min. 50 sec.) and the Charlotte, N.C. marathon in three hours and 16 minutes. Sam said he prefers training alone since he has found he can keep a better training schedule by being able to run whenever he can find the time.

As for the future, Sam plans to continue running and hopes to improve his racing time.

Area Events

Westville festival

The 1850 village of Westville will celebrate the coming of spring from April 10 through April 13. The village is open daily from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sundays from 1-5 p.m. Westville is located in Lumpkin, Ga. at the intersection of U.S. 27 and Georgia 27. For more information call (912) 838-6310.

Bluegrass festival

Dahlonega, Ga. Mountain Music Park (Highway 60 south) will have a Bluegrass festival today from 6 p.m. to midnight and tomorrow from noon to midnight. For more information call (404) 864-3421.

OWC coffee

The Newcomers Coffee is scheduled Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the Officers Wives Club lounge. Newcomers are welcome.

NCOWC scholarships

The NCOWC will be presenting 10 scholarships and awards to area high school students in May. There will be four $1,000 scholarships and six $500 awards open to all high school seniors in the Columbus/Phenix City area who are dependents of enlisted military personnel, either active, retired or deceased. Students graduating from summer school this August are also eligible. Applications are available in the area high schools and may be obtained from the school's student counselor. Applications must be mailed in by April 15.

For more information or an application, contact Donna Hale at 687-9731.

OWC art show

The Officers Wives Club will hold an art show and outdoor art festival at the National Infantry Museum from April 25 through May 25.

The theme for this year's art show is "Faces of Fort Benning" and is open to any artist 18 years or older. Entries will be screened to select the art pieces for the display.

There will be a $200 Best of Show award plus four merit awards of $50 value and five purchase awards from $125 to $250. Categories for the entries are original paintings and drawings, all media, graphic and sculptures.

The outdoor festival will be held on April 26 from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. and April 27 from noon-5 p.m. The festival is open only to Fort Benning personnel: military, civilian, retired and dependents. The categories are: paintings, crafts, pottery, sculpture, photography, macrame, tole painting and leather crafts. The public is invited to attend. Call M. E. Maxwell at 687-0061 for more information.

Pool tournament

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) will have their annual Easter egg hunt Sunday at 1 p.m. adjacent to White School. The hunt is for dependent youth ages six-12. Prizes will be awarded. For more information call 545-3070.

Gong show

The Dependent Youth Activities (DYA) will have a gong show on April 19 from 7-9 p.m. If you think you have talent, this may be your big chance.

Children's fun fair

The "Week of the Young Child," Sunday through April 12, is a special week when attention is focused on the needs, rights and interests of the young child. In conjunction with the week's activities, the Lower Chattahoochee Association on the Young Child will sponsor a free children's fun fair on Saturday, April 12 behind Columbus High School from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

NCOWC meeting

A general membership meeting will be held Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. at the NCOWC Activities Center. Anyone interested in becoming a member is welcome to attend the meeting.

NCOWC open house

NCOWC is holding an open house on April 16 at 11:30 a.m.

A game brunch will be held on April 23 at 9 a.m. at the Top Five Club. Call Salu Galumalemana at 689-1348 for more information.

Flea market

There will be a flea market at the Fort Benning Thrift Shop, Furniture Barn and Talent Tree tomorrow from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

Health Services OWC luncheon

The April meeting of the HSCA OWC has been rescheduled for April 23 at 11 a.m. at the Bradley Museum.

It will be a "Share-a-Salad" potluck meal and will feature a guided tour of the museum and presentation of the slate of officers for next year. Members are asked to bring a salad (with the recipe) and bring coupons for the coupon exchange. For reservations call 687-5874/6068.

Library Week

National Library Week (April 13-19) will be observed at Fort Benning by having an open house at the Main Post library on April 12 at 2 p.m.

Barbershop quartet

The Fountain City Chorus is sponsoring their annual barbershop quartet, "An Evening with Irving Berlin," April 12 at 8 p.m. at Baker High School auditorium. For tickets call Jerry Schecher at 682-2111.

OWC luncheon

Officers Wives Club luncheon will be held on April 16 at the Supper Club with the theme "April Showers." Sherry will be at 11 a.m. and lunch at 11:30 a.m. The Benning Belles will perform their "Army Wife Show."

Living in roach land?

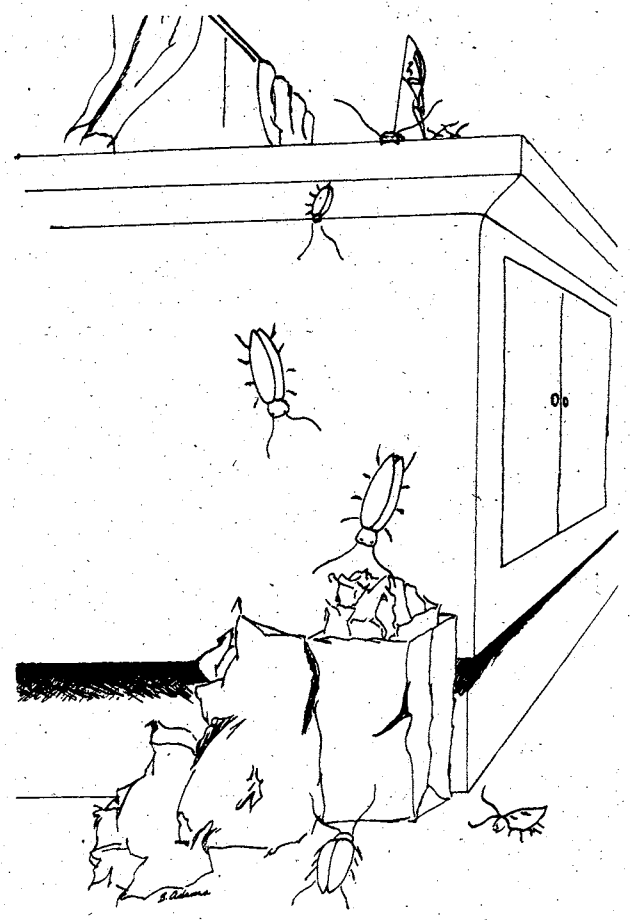
By Brian Adams

While you sleep, the silent enemy slowly advances, using the floors and walls in their attempt to take over your home.

Suddenly the dawn comes and the enemy scrambles in retreat, having lost the element of surprise.



Using all the acquired skills of a good infantryman, you search all day long for any trace of him, but to no avail. You realize that he has withdrawn to dark, yet not unknown, base camps.

With no other means of destroying the enemy you submit the proper requests for a counterattack. A timetable is established and the action begins.

Spearheading the counterattack is Fort Benning's civilian CBR team. Under the command of Willie Jackson, team supervisor, the eight-man unit strikes. They flush the enemy out of their hiding place (the motor of the refrigerator) and destroy them with such ominous chemicals as Pyrethrum, Baygon, Clordane and Diazinon.

According to the local expert, the enemy is broken down into five divisions, The German, The Brown Bandit, The Old Round, The American and Smokey Brown. This enemy, having no preference to culture or creed, is found all over the world, wreaking havoc wherever he travels.

The division most commonly confronted at Fort Benning, said Jackson, is The German. He is the one that invades dining facilities, pantries, kitchens and bedrooms of homes and barracks.

As you have probably surmised, the enemy is not human, rather he is a creature, he is a cockroach!

"Cockroaches are not seasonal," said Jackson. "They are, however, more prevalent during the summer months due to climate, which offers the creature a quicker breeding time. They can be found in December just as easily as in June."

This invasion is helped along by us, explained Jackson. We bring the roaches into our homes and barracks every time we go shopping.

The shopping bags that we transport our food home in, said a former professional exterminator, is the home of the roach. The roaches lay eggs in these bags, the exterminator said, which is why you won't always see a roach in the bag. These eggs hatch after a while to begin the invasion of your home.

This isn't the only way that the roaches enter our homes, he said, but it is the easiest way.

Bringing the roaches in isn't the problem, he said, letting the pest roam free to reproduce and infest is.

"Sanitation is the key to getting rid of the problem," explained Jackson. "The better a home is kept, the less chance there is of having a roach problem."

Once the pest control office has sprayed your home, explains the professional exterminator, additional spraying can be done by the homeowner, if necessary, to control those eggs that will start hatching. This will also help control any roaches that manage to survive the initial spraying.

It is best to get with your neighbors and work out a plan to have all of your homes done at the same time, explained both men. This will prevent the roaches from escaping to another home while the spraying is being done and returning after the chemical has lost its killing ability.

Arrangements for spraying can be made through the Roads and Pavements Branch of the Director of Facility Engineers. They can be contacted at 545-4017, or you can go their office located in Bldg. 330.

School celebrates birthday

"Camp Benning is the most suitable piece of ground that I have ever set my eyes upon for the location of an Infantry School of Arms . . .," wrote Lt. Gen. Robert L. Bullard in the March 20, 1920 issue of Infantry Journal.

At that time the soon to be named Fort Benning was still a temporary site for the Infantry School.

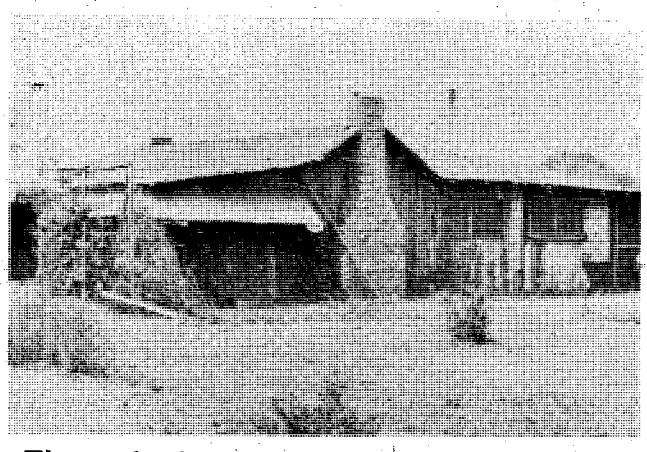
The first infantry school, the Infantry School of Practice, was established at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. The school's mission was to teach infantry officers. Due to the Indian Wars the school was discontinued.

In 1907 a new infantry school was established as the School of Musketry at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., to teach superior markmanship. Late in World War I two auxiliary schools came into being, the Small Arms Firing School at Camp Perry, Ohio and the Machinegun School at Camp Hancock, Ga.

The three schools were combined in 1918, renamed the Infantry School of Arms, and moved to a former cow pasture outside Columbus, Ga.

Lt. Gen. Robert L. Bullard's endorsement of Camp Benning names the "great variety of terrain, wooded spaces, farms, houses, creeks and streams" as well as the mild climate made the site more suitable for "the location of an Infantry School of Arms than any within the limits of the United States."

In 1920 the Infantry School of Arms was renamed the Infantry School and was opened to all three components of the Army, the regular Army, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves.



The only information on the old photograph was that officers designed, built and lived in the make-shift quarters.

Camp Benning had the appearance of a tent city, but in the 1920s a massive building program was begun to modernize the post. During that time permanent housing for officers, railroad shops, a gymnasium, Doughboy Stadium and Gowdy Field were built.

Gradually, instruction moved from the classroom to the field to new permanent ranges. By the close of 1930, the Infantry School had graduated 5,064 students.

In the Depression of the 1930s, training dropped while the construction of new quarters, the post Chapel, Building 35 and other important projects were finished as WPA and PWA workers swarmed over the camp.

Training grew quickly in the late 1930s as the threat of war grew on the world's horizon.

In April of 1940, a test platoon of paratroopers was organized at Fort Benning and in August made a successful jump at Lawson Field. During World War II the Parachute School, the forerunner of the Airborne Department, graduated an average of 4,000 men a month.

World War II was to be the most arduous test for the school. During the war the Officer Candidate Course turned out 50,000 second lieutenants. Activity reached its peak in February of 1943, after which the OCS courses lengthened and the number of students lessened.

In 1946 the school was opened to foreign students and the Allied Student Training Division began training 300-400 students a year.

During the Korean conflict the school was called upon to repeat its World War II record of training. By 1951, 14 Airborne Ranger companies had been trained and assigned to the Eighth Army in Korea.

Today the Infantry School handles the Officer Candidate School, the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, various NCO courses, the Ranger Department, the Airborne Department and many supporting departments working to train the best and most important member of the combined arms team, the infantryman.

Infantry Board: Birthday marks 77 years of testing for the soldier

Some of the stories heard through the soldier grapevine about peculiar happenings at the U.S. Army Infantry Board, which celebrated its 77th anniversary last Friday, are at least partly true.

The board once tested canvas leggings, pack saddles, an electric horseclipping machine and a folding bicycle. It also tested the jeep, the M14, M16A1, TOW, DRAGON, starlight scopes, infantry radios, wash and wear uniforms and many other items.

Since the beginning on March 31, 1903 at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the board has conducted well over 4,000 tests. During its first years the board consisted of two field grade officers of the 13th Infantry Regiment and two senior captains at the General Service and Staff College.

The board ceased to operate at Fort Leavenworth in March 1911 when the soldiers supporting the board were called away, due to the rising tensions along the Mexican border. During the later border crisis and the years of World War I, the Army again used special boards to carry out its infantry test needs.

It wasn't until 1919 that a significant step was taken toward establishing a permanent agency to study the ever-changing requirements of the infantry and the infantrymen. Eventually, on Dec. 15, 1919, the War Department made Camp Benning, Ga. the permanent station as the only agency whose sole function was to consider ways and means to improve the Army's infantry.

The commandant of the Infantry School was designated president ex-officio of the board. The School's assistant commandant, three infantry officers and one ordnance officer (to consider ordnance matters only) were the board's members.

The board operated under War Department direction until the Chief of Infantry was designated in 1920. During the 1930s, they tested a number of items that would be seen in large numbers by the Army's World War II soldiers — the light and medium tanks, the 57mm recoiless rifle, the light machine-gun, the M1 rifle and the khaki uniform.

A major organizational change occurred in 1975, when all branches' test boards were assigned to Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). With this switch, more emphasis was placed on testing doctrine, tactics, logistics and training than on material. The board is now one of TRADOC's nine testing activities and is assigned the mission of conducting operational tests of infantry related weapons and equipment, organizations, tactics and techniques.

One of the recent tests the Infantry Board has done is the Squad Automatic Weapon (SAW) test. They used 35 soldiers from Company A, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade to find out the performance of four candidate weapons which were being tested: the XM106 (U.S.), the XM248 (Ford), the XM249 (Fabrique Nationale) and the XM262 (Heckler and Koch).

Sgt. Wayne Daniel, Infantry Board, Heavy Weapons Test Division, performs operational testing on the Small Unit Transceiver.

The Mini Laser Rangefinder (MLR) was tested last year by zapping targets at different obstacle ranges. The rangefinder is currently being evaluated.

Another new item the Infantry Board is currently testing is the Small Unit Transceiver (SUT). It is a small, lightweight, battery-powered FM transceiver. The SUT is being tested at the Ranger Camp in Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

For the last 77 years, the board has been concerned with everything the infantryman shoots, carries, wears, rides in, eats or otherwise uses. The board's task is to give him superior arms, to lighten his load and to improve his fighting equipment to make the infantry soldier a more effective fighting machine . . .

Civilian earns new award

By Debbie Harrison

Carol Griffis, Enlisted Personnel Records Section at Bldg. 83, was selected as the first recipient of the Adjutant General's Civilian of the Month.

Carol is the crew chief in charge of one of the six records sections in Bldg. 83. She handles the enlisted records for the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 608th Ordnance Company, 988th Military Police Company and the Criminal Investigation Division (CID).

Carol enjoys her job, saying she gets a chance to help soldiers when they have a problem or need help with their personnel records. Being in charge of her section takes a lot of responsibility. She makes sure that everything gets out in a timely manner and checks to see if the paperwork is done correctly.

She began working at Fort Benning in 1968 in the Orders Section and transfered to the Enlisted Personnel Records Section as she moved up in grade.

When Carol is not working she likes keeping her hands busy by doing various handicrafts. She is a collector of cook books and enjoys culinary cooking. "I cook whatever I am in the mood for," Carol said. "Whenever I run across a recipe that's appealing I like to try it out."

Carol is married, has two children and resides in Columbus.

She said, "Civil Service is a very good profession for people who are just starting out, depending on the qualifications they may have." As the Adjutant General's Civilian of the Month she received a Certificate of Achievement.

Are you ready to change your life?

Fill out the Career Evaluation below and see if you're ready for a career change.

Career Evaluation

Read and score the following 10 statements: 1. strongly agree; 2. agree somewhat; 3. disagree.

1. I enjoy going to work each day ☐
2. My abilities are respected by my superiors. ☐
3. I feel a strong sense of personal satisfaction and achievement in my work. ☐
4. I feel I am being paid in direct proportion to my contributions. ☐
5. I feel proud telling people what I do and for whom I work. ☐
6. I feel good about the amount of money I will make next year. ☐
7. I feel that I have a reachable goal and a plan for investing my money for the future. ☐
8. I am able to express my goals and objectives to my superiors. ☐
9. I feel my superiors are helping me achieve my goals. ☐
10. I feel that I am in control of my personal destiny with regard to my work, income, and business growth. ☐

TOTAL SCORE _____

Are you ready to change your career?

At CENTURY 21, we think life is too short to be dissatisfying. If you score 15 points or more, maybe it's time you took a long look at what you're doing now and what you want to do in the future.

If you feel less than completely satisfied, a career in real estate may be your answer. Many people have changed their lives with CENTURY 21. Maybe you can, too.

MILITARY WIVES WE NEED YOU!

NEXT CLASS STARTS 4/21/80

The real estate profession is in dire need of people who can identify with and understand a traumatic situation of moving families. Those of us associated with CENTURY 21, whose primary concern is the relocation of transfering families, can really appreciate the special qualifications of militay wives for the real estate profession.

The military wife has always contributed her time, efforts, and sympathy to the needs of the military community. Why not consider doing it professionally, and consequently reap the financial rewards associated with the real estate profession? Call today for a confidential interview 324-6464, Bill Hodges. # Weight program too harsh?

Point

By Gary Jones

I think it is high time the Army changed its misguided emphasis on weight control. It seems that the Army has become a victim of the old Madison Avenue media push to brainwash society into thinking that 'thin is in'.

Thin is definitely in if you are striving to be one of the men or women who model for the various national magazines or advertisers, but is thin really in for soldiers who are supposed to be physically fit and combat ready? Contrary to popular belief, being thin is not synonomous with being physically fit in all cases. The Army's weight control standards, while possibly good for the many, greatly discriminate against the few.

During a recent PT test I observed two individuals - one was an average thin soldier and the other was about 10 pounds overweight for his height according to the Army's standards. The thin soldier huffed and puffed his way through the Army Proficiency Fitness Test scoring a 347 while the so called overweight soldier managed to score a 467 with relative ease. The following day, because the first sergeant considered the so called overweight soldier to be "chubby," he was put on a remedial PT program while the thin soldier received no extra training.

The point is that physical fitness, not a soldier's weight, determines how well he will be able to perform on the battlefield. If a soldier cannot meet the requirements set by the Army then he should be placed on a strict remedial PT program but if he can meet those requirements then he should not be discriminated against because he doesn't live up to the Madison Avenue image.

Granted, normally a person who is carrying a spare tire around his middle or is considered to be chunky or chubby won't perform as well on a PT test as his thin peers. However, the Army's weight cntrol standards should be flexible enough to accomodate not only the norm but the exception as well. This doesn't mean that soldiers should be allowed to become grossly overweight but it does mean that those borderline cases who can still meet or exceed their physical requirements should not be held back while their peers are promoted, and they should definitely not be barred from reenlistment.

A popular recruiting slogan is - "Keep a good soldier in the Army - Reenlist." With the Army's present weight control standard, many good soldiers are either forced into getting out or are harrased to the point where they don't want to stay in. Every time a good soldier gets out it costs the Army not only the money to go back out on the street and bring in another person to fill his shoes, but the knowledge and experience that the good soldier had gained over the years are also lost.

The Army is concernced with presenting a good image for the All-volunteer force but, once again, why does that image have to reflect the Madison Avenue ideal? As long as a soldier maintains properly fitting uniforms, a few extra pounds won't make him look like a walking whale. After all, the country pays its soldiers to fight, not to model the latest Paris fashions!

Counterpoint

By Deb Hilgeman

When you think of a soldier today, you think 'lean and mean'. But too many of today's soldiers can more aptly be described as 'nice and fat'. Only there is nothing 'nice' about a soldier who is popping the buttons off his fatigues and who gasps and wheezes through a three-mile run.

The Army's ultimate weapon is still the soldier. Just as an M16 must be kept in tip top shape, so must the soldiers. No fighting man would want to be burdened with a gun that wasn't functioning properly and no fighting man would want to be burdened with an overweight buddy who couldn't keep up with the program, be it training or actual mobilization.

One of the drawbacks of a peacetime Army is that there seems to be no real need to rush to do the things that should be done, whether it's pulling maintenance on a vehicle or going on a diet. There's always tomorrow to start that jogging program or cut down on the beer, right? Wrong. With the world situation as it is, we might be humping across a foreign land with very little notice and some of us would be falling like beached whales because we never had the willpower to get in shape while there was still time. Combat readiness is more than knowing your job; it is being 100 percent able to perform that job and all the other soldierly duties that make up being in the Army today.

Another drawback to tolerating overweight soldiers is the adverse effect it has on public opinion. In these days of trying to man a quality volunteer Army, it is important that we project an image of an Army that instills pride. Overweight soldiers are not what the Army is about and by tolerating their condition, the Army is cast in less than an attractive light. Again, carrying these overweight men and women is a luxury we can't afford.

The Army has set weight standards that are being enforced more strictly than ever before. These standards are based on recognized levels of fitness that were scientifically determined. Some individuals complain that they are "exceptions" to the policy that applies to everyone else. "Sure, I'm 20 pounds over the Army's weight limit for my height but it's all muscle. I can bench press 200 pounds and I scored 460 on my last PT test, yet the first sergeant had the nerve to tell me I look fat," is an argument I've heard before.

To this I say, the Army didn't recruit weightlifters, it recruited SOLDIERS. A lot of soldiers use the old "...but it's all muscle," excuse when it looks like blubber to everyone else. Being a soldier means meeting the standards set by the Army, not setting your own standards to accomodate your own personal interests.

What bothers me the most about overweight soldiers is when they also happen to be high ranking. Take a look at the field grade officers or senior non-commissioned officers run and it's shocking how many can barely run three miles. Yes, they often have desk jobs that limit their activity and, yes, they often put in long hours that leave little time for a fitness program but, NO, that is not an excuse. When a colonel or sergeant major is a walking advertisement for "Weightwatchers," how can you expect a private to take the Army's weight program seriously?

Losing weight is a very difficult undertaking for some people but it is not impossible. First, the officers and senior NCOs should make sure they are 'lean and mean' and they should insist their troops are in top shape or they should help them waddle out the front gate to a new job where 'fat is beautiful'.

What do you think of the Army's policy of barring overweight soldiers from re-enlisting?

Sp4 Cindy Dekling
608th Ordinance Company
36th Engineer Group (Combat)

If they have been on the overweight program and had sufficient time to lose the weight then I think they should be barred.

* * *

Sgt. James Hunter
HHD, 34th Medical Battalion

They should be a little more lenient because we have an awful lot of good soldiers getting out and the Army needs good soldiers.

Although these soldiers may be large, it doesn't necessarily mean they aren't in good shape.

SSgt. Howard Eady
Troop A, 15th Cavalry

I think it is a fair policy because if you're over in a combat zone and have to charge the enemy and you're carrying extra weight along with the equipment, you could become exhausted or collapse and hurt the mission.

* * *

2nd Lt. Douglas Burger
Company A, 2/69th

I believe that all soldiers, regardless of their job, should be physically fit and be able to perform the physical requirements of their MOS regardless of their weight.

If a soldier is a little overweight but at the same time he has been playing football and is really a horse who can handle any physical requirement you give him, then I think it would be unfair to bar him from re-enlistment.

If a soldier, for whatever reason, can't meet the physical requirements of his MOS then he should be barred from re-enlistment whether or not they have a weight problem.

Sp5 Rita Walker
Headquarters Company
Committee Group

If a soldier can meet the Army's physical requirements and the weight doesn't affect job performance, then he shouldn't be barred from re-enlistment.

Letters to the Editor

Something fishy?

To the Editor:

Could anyone at Fort Benning please explain to me why it costs so much to fish at the fort?

My dad would like to take my brother and me fishing but with the three of us buying fishing licenses and permits, it costs $51.75.

Dad is always telling my brother and me to stay out of trouble and to do something constructive and we sure like to fish, but my dad cannot afford to pay that much money for fishing. A person would have to catch 100 pounds of catfish to even break even.

Why don't the people who make the regulations take into consideration how many people in the family are fishing? Next year my sister will be going with us and the price goes even higher.

Another question, a Georgia license costs $3.25 and a permit on post costs $4. Why?

Boxing wanted

To the Editor;

I have read several BAYONET articels dealing with boxing at Fort Benning. I expected the people in charge to get the hint and get the program going. Apparently nobody wants to go to the trouble, which is a shame!

I recently observed a Georgia Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) tournament in Atlanta involving participants from all over the state. These included boxers from Fort Stewart near Savannah and Fort Gordon near Augusta. Both teams did exceedingly well. They presented an excellent example of a sports program in the Army that works well and this is good advertising for volunteers.

Three months ago I returned from a tour in Germany where boxing was the number one sport. Sure, they had basketball, flag football and all that, but where five-15 people would go to a basketball or football game, 500 to 1500 would be on hand at a Saturday night smoker.

Recently, I attended a boxing match

Fire victims receive aid

The often used phrase, "The Army Takes Care of Its Own," was very appropriate over the Easter weekend at Fort Benning.

Residents of four family housing units gutted by fire on April 5 received necessities ranging from housing, monetary grants, clothing and food to Easter baskets for the children in an outpouring of good neighborliness in the aftermath of the afternoon blaze.

Mrs. Karen Cockrell, wife of Sgt. Paul Cockrell and mayor of the Lavoie Manor housing area, praised firemen and service agency representatives for the quick action they took in providing assistance to victims of the fire.

"I called several friends the morning after the fire (Easter Sunday) and within minutes, among other items, we had 20 Easter baskets for the children involved," Mrs. Cockrell said. "The people of the community, as well as others from throughout the post, responded to fill the needs of the four families who were burned out."

The fire, which started in one of the middle units of the eight-unit complex, was reported to the Fort Benning fire department at 4:34 p.m. and tape recordings show that firemen were on the scene in three minutes and two seconds. One minute later, military police were on hand to control traffic and the crowd of spectators that gathered.

Three minutes later, other emergency vehicles arrived. One fireman was taken to Martin Army Hospital with a slight case of smoke inhalation.

While firemen were hindered somewhat by people congregating at the scene, Fire Chief Joe Alford said it was minimal. "Most of the people were gathered in the rear of the building," he said, adding that this probably led to some complaints that firemen were slow in responding.

"The people in the rear couldn't see what firemen were doing in front of the building," he said.

Only six military policemen were available for traffic and crowd control but they were quickly aided by airborne students who were summoned to the fire. "They cordoned off the area to secure the property of the residents," he said.

Alford also noted that the airborne students, several Rangers and "people in civilian clothing" helped man the hoses and clear the quarters. "Everybody assisted in every way they could — just like they always do on post," Alford said.

Capt. Matt Roberts, Directorate of Community Activities duty officer, noted that Maj. Gen. David E. Grange "came by to direct that all necessary agencies on post become involved in helping the fire victims."

Roberts made arrangements for briefings for the families involved and service agency representatives from Army Emergency Relief, Army Community Service, Red Cross, Housing, and the Staff Judge Advocate's office pointed out to the victims what assistance could be provided and how to obtain it.

Even the fire fighters were not forgotten. Residents of the area passed out coffee, hot soup and sandwiches to them until they left the scene at 1:30 Sunday morning.

Father, daughter rescue children

By Tom Sabel

"We were sitting in the living room watching television when we heard this loud pounding on the door. When I answered the door, the seven-year-old boy who lives next door was screaming, 'Our house is on fire!' " recalled Maureen Dewig, wife of SFC August Dewig, a recruiter here.

She rushed out of the house, grabbed a garden hose and went inside the next door apartment, thinking it may have been a small fire by the dryer. She was met with a hallway filled with a dense black smoke while flames curled against the ceiling.

A two-year-old girl was still in the hallway. Mrs. Dewig scooped up the child with one arm and held on to the hose with the other, attempting to douse some of the fire she knew was too big for her to handle.

Mrs. Dewig's 71-year-old father came in after her and wrestled the hose from her, yelling, "Call the fire department!" Clutching the child, she ran out of the burning apartment and made the call.

"Then I saw this kid rush past me back into the house and I followed him as far as I could, feeling along the floor for him and yelling, 'Get out! Get out! Is anyone else in there?' Then either the kid ran past me or I grabbed him and pushed him out. I can't remember which," said Mrs. Dewig's father, Harold F. Sheahan, a former World War II prisoner of war visiting from Augusta, Ga. That child, an eight-year-old boy, was safe.

Moments later a rush of smoke forced Sheahan out the door. "I got a few good whiffs of smoke," he said. He was later treated briefly at Martin Army Hospital for smoke inhalation.

"The only thing I could think of was making sure nobody was still in the fire," Sheahan later recalled while relaxing in his daughter's living room. The house was still littered with the debris of their rapid evacuation.

Damage to the building was $126,312, according to Alford. He also reported the cause of the fire was due to carelessness on the part of the children playing with fire.

Tornado alert to be held

So far this year there have been several tornado WATCHs in the Columbus/Fort Benning area. Fortunately, no tornadoes have actually formed over the area but would you know what to do if one did?

In order to insure that the tornado warning system works properly and that post personnel know what protective measures to take in the event of a tornado, Fort Benning will conduct a tornado alert drill Tuesday (in the event of bad weather, the drill will be on April 18). The practice tornado WATCH will be issued by telephone to the major commands and staff agencies at 10 a.m. The practice tornado WARNING will be sounded by siren at 10:30 a.m. with the all-clear being sounded at 11 a.m.

Detailed information on what post personnel and dependents are supposed to do and where they are supposed to go during the alert is spelled out in USAIC pamphlet 500-1 (with change two). This pamphlet is a valuable source of information on potential life saving tips for post families. This pamphlet is distributed to incoming personnel as they occupy their quarters. If you didn't receive a copy or if the copy you received wasn't complete with change two, then you can obtain another by contacting Mrs. Powell or Sgt. Tillery at 545-7093.

Change two to USAIC pamphlet 500-1 deals with the siren warning system. The new warning alarm for an approaching tornado will be a steady sounding of the sirens for a five-minute period. The new all-clear signal will be three steady two-minute sounds interupted by two silent periods of one minute each. The sirens are a vital part of the tornado alert system here. If you can't hear a siren during the tornado alert drill Tuesday, you are asked to contact Sgt. Maj. Simpson or MSgt. Brown at 545-1711/5860.

AER drive to end

When fire swept through a housing area on post last weekend, Army Community Services (ACS) was one of the agencies that stepped in to help the residents who had suffered losses.

The Army Emergency Relief (AER) program is another way that soldiers in need receive help. The annual AER fund drive is now underway and ends Thursday.

Clothing is needed for the children of the two families who lost everything when their homes burned. The children's ages and sizes are listed below. Clothing can be turned in to the Lavoie Community Center or to ACS.

| Age | Sex | Size |
|---|---|---|
| 9 | male | 10 |
| 12 | male | 12 |
| 7 | male | 7 to 8 |
| 8 | male | 8 to 10 |
| 2 | female | 5 toddler |

Signature card no longer needed

Personnel picking up blank forms from the AG publications office no longer are required to have in their possession a signature card (DD form 577). According to the installation publications officer, Eugene Hagewood, "The form was discontinued because it was felt that no one would be coming to get forms unless they really needed them."

The only requirement for personnel picking up blank forms now is they may not take over a 30-day supply. "We have the 30-day requirement so that we can keep enough of each type of form in stock to serve everyone on post," explained Hagewood.

Further information on the change may be obtained by checking suppliment two, change three to AR 310-2 or by calling the AG publications office at 545-1466.

Best mess awards given

Winners of the Best Small Mess and the Best Large Mess for Fort Benning were announced during presentations on March 17 and 18.

The trophies were presented by Post Commander Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. to the cooks of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, winners of the Best Small Mess Award, and to the 67th Maintenance Battalion Dining Facility, winners of the Best Large Mess Award.

In addition to the trophies, members of the facilities received letters of commendation from the post commander for their work leading to the awards. According to Gen. Grange, "A unit is only as good as their mess hall."

The dining facilities were judged on their sanitation and food preparation in one of the three categories: large, field, and small mess halls.

"Although the 67th Maintenance Battalion Dining Facility is a part of FORSCOM, the dining facility is on a TRADOC installation enabling them to compete in the competition," explained Capt. John F. Cunero, dining facilities officer of the 67th Dining Facility.

"These two awards express those who are a cut above the rest in the field of mess hall service on post. We need more people like these in the Army today," Gen. Grange concluded.

Vaccination required

WASHINGTON (ARNEW) — Because of recent rubeolan (measles) outbreaks, all new recruits will be vaccinated against measles, according to DA medical officials.

Also, when measles appear at any Army installation, the population "at risk" will be vaccinated. For example, if a few soldiers in a company get the measles, the remaining soldiers in that company would be immunized.

According to officals, the outbreaks were caused by a number of things, which included:

- Trainees who did not have measles as children
- Trainees who were immunized with a vaccine that did not provide lasting immunity.

1/58th gold

By Chip Koss

Once again the 1/58th Infantry brought home the gold. Sp5 John Barker, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1/58th Infantry (Patriots) won the Fort Benning Chef of the Quarter contest and was awarded the Gold Chief's Medal, along with a citation, presented by Col. Richard McKee.

Two weeks ago, Barker walked away with the gold trophy and the honor of being the best chef in the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep). Barker said, "I never did any cooking until I entered the Army. I really enjoy my job and working with the men at the dining facility. They are true professionals and their help enabled me to bring home the gold to the Patriots."

Barker added, "I am going to go on to take the Chef of the Year at Fort Benning and then go to the All-Army competition. I'll win by studying, working and practicing because I've got gold fever."

SFC Ernest Jackson, dining facility manager at the 1/58th, said there is no secret to running a top dining facility. "I cater to the soldiers with meal cards. They live in the barracks and eat in the dining facility; it's one big home and they get the best," he explained.

Pvt. Mark Morris, another member of the 1/58th dining facility staff, said, "You see a lot of soldiers who are not from our battalion eating here instead of in their own dining facility, but what can you do, they know a good thing when they see it."

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

Safety workshop to be held

The Infantry Center will host the TRADOC/FORSCOM Safety Workshop on April 22-24.

Safety directors and managers representing TRADOC and FORSCOM installations, TRADOC schools, CONUS, ROTC regions, and TRADOC test boards and other test activities will be attending along with personnel from the Department of Defense and Department of the Army.

"The theme of this year's workshop is 'Safety Support for Training and Readiness'," commented Fred Young, senior safety specialist. The primary purpose of the workshop is to assemble the key safety officials from the different installations to update them and exchange ideas on the latest techniques, concepts and methods for accident prevention.

The workshop is held periodically at different installations. The last one was held in 1978 at Fort Bragg, N.C. This will be the second joint workshop held for both TRADOC and FORSCOM installations.

Among the speakers for the workshop will be Dr. Frank McGlade, Dept. of the Army safety director; Brig. Gen. Joseph G. Lutz, director of human resources DESPER, Dept. of the Army; retired Rear Admiral Stuart Nelson, director of Safety and Occupational Health Policy, office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense; and John Nash, deputy for Environment and Occupational Health, office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army.

Recycling pays off

Oil discovered at Benning

The hidden oil reserves at Fort Benning save the post an estimated $45,000 a year. These hidden reserves are found in every crankcase on each tank, truck, automobile and any other internal combustion engine on post.

The oil is recycled at the Main Post boiler plant, according to Tim Mullen, environmental technician with the post Environmental Management Office. The oil comes from major units on post as well as the auto craft shops and PX service stations.

"The oil is taken to the main boiler plant where it is put into storage tanks to let the sludge and other grit settle out," said Mullen. "Once the dirt has settled the oil is mixed with No. 2 diesel fuel and burned in the boilers used to heat the buildings on Main Post."

Most individual units bring in their own oil but there are provisions for the 43rd Engineers to bring in oil from units which do not have the equipment to bring in their own oil, said the environmental technician.

"There is a problem in recycling in that when the publicity wears off, people stop participating," he said. "We want to make sure everyone is working together."

For those who change oil in their own back yards, they can bring their dirty oil to the Main Post Auto Craft Shop for recycling.

DON'T LOSE OUT WHEN YOU GET OUT.
If you've decided to leave the Army before retirement, you don't have to leave behind all of those valuable benefits. Just serve part-time with your local Army Reserve unit.
You'll earn a good extra income based on your present rank and service time, for serving only 16 hours a month (usually one weekend) and two full weeks a year.
And you can still take advantage of part of your Army benefits. Like low-cost life insurance. As a Reservist, you'll continue to earn PX privileges (a day for each eight hours of unit training attended) and credits toward retirement pay.
Most of all, by your becoming an Army Reservist, your country benefits. By your training. Your experience. Your dedication.
So don't lose out when you get out. Join today's Army Reserve. It's well worth your time.

C.G.'s message

Those who have come from Asian and Pacific countries have long added a special quality to our nation and our armed forces. During the week of May 7-13, we at Fort Benning, along with the rest of our great nation, will reflect on the accomplishments of our Asian and Pacific Americans.

Out of all proportion to their numbers, Asian and Pacific Americans have contributed to our nation's progress in a wide range of fields — science, the arts, literature, agriculture, industry, commerce, and the armed forces. Bringing with them the strong and varied traditions of their Asian and Pacific homelands — China, Japan, the Philippines, the Pacific Islands and Southeast Asia — they have greatly enriched our cultural heritage and institutions.

Those who have come from Asian and Pacific countries have shed blood in the struggle for America's nationhood and in the quest for freedom and opportunity. With these accomplishments in mind, and with pride and gratitude, Fort Benning salutes Asian and Pacific American Heritage Week.

Soldiers keep jackets

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — How many times have you had to tear off an old name tag to put your name on a field jacket? Makes you kind of wonder who 'Reynolds' or 'Jones' was, doesn't it?

Starting Oct. 1, soldiers will get their very own field jacket to have and to hold. The field jacket will become a personal clothing bag item instead of an organizational item.

Enlisted soldiers joining the active Army, Army National Guard or Reservists coming on active duty for training after that date will be issued two field jackets.

Enlisted soldiers already on active duty will be issued one field jacket. Many soldiers have field jackets that were issued as organizational items. In these cases, DA officials explained, the field jacket will simply be removed from the DA form 3645 (organizational clothing and equipment record) and be transferred to the soldier's DA form 3078 (personal clothing request).

An increase clothing maintenance allowance to cover the field jacket is being programmed, officials say, but the exact amount has not yet been set. The extra money should be saved, officials added, because by Oct. 1, 1983 all soldiers must have two field jackets. Those who don't get two upon entering the service must buy the second one.

Since the field jacket will no longer be issued as an organizational or CTA 50-900 item, officers will have to turn in field jackets issued to them by Oct. 1, 1980 and buy their own, officials said.

Energy items

VA offers loan

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Soldiers and veterans can now add the cost of installing energy-saving items to their basic loan amount when purchasing a home with a Veterans Administration (VA) guaranteed loan.

Improvements may include the installation of a more efficient heating or cooling system and the addition of insulation, storm windows, or any other qualifying energy-saving device.

The purchaser should have a cost estimate for the proposed energy-saving improvements when applying for the loan. The total amount of the loan will be the cost of the house, less the down-payment, plus the cost of the energy-saving items. This total can be financed for up to 30 years.

More information on the new program is available at your nearest VA regional office or local lending institution.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

Legal Notes

Law Day

On May 1, Fort Benning will celebrate 'Law Day', a national observance that takes place in both civilian and military communities.

The purpose is to recognize the role that the law and the legal process plays in our society. The theme for this year's Law Day is "Law and Lawyers Working for You."

"It is an educational process for the public covering various aspects of the law, services lawyers provide and how law works for the people," explained Capt. Daniel J. Dell 'Orto, military justice.

"We are trying to make people aware of the services available to them on post and the role of Army lawyers," added Capt. William D. Levasseur, administrative law. "We are trying to show people we are not to be stereotyped as bad guys."

Various activities will take place on Law Day around post. An essay contest has been organized for various dependent schools for grades three and up. The topics for the essay must be related to the theme of Law Day. The best essay from each grade at each of the schools will be awarded a certificate by visiting speakers.

There will also be a display in Infantry Hall of posters and information to help make people more aware of the available services.

A luncheon will be held at the Officer's Club and lawyers from the Columbus Lawyers Club will also be attending. The guest speaker will be Brig. Gen. Lloyd K. Rector, commander U.S. Army Legal Services Agency and chief judge of the U.S. Army Court of Military Review.

After the luncheon, the courtroom in Bldg. 5 will be dedicated in memory of Col. Robert M. Lathrop, Fort Benning's staff judge advocate from 1968-1972 and military judge from 1974-1977.

Operation crime stop

Army music, history told to diffe

Music, as much a part of American history as the battles in which she fought and won to maintain her freedom, now has a home here to tell its story.

The National Infantry Museum has added to its inventory a special display which depicts the history of military music and instruments ranging from the Revolutionary War to the present.

"...Music has been very important from the time of the Romans," said Dick Grube, museum curator. "It was used to set the pace soldiers would march to, or something for him to rally around in battle.

"In several cases throughout the museum we had one or two musical instruments," said Grube, "but this is the first time we have had enough instruments that we have been able to pull them together in one exhibit. Actually, we have three large display cases plus a fourth one, of a little smaller type, all containing musical instruments now at the museum.

"We've been collecting these instruments as we find them for about seven years here at the museum," commented Grube, "with the idea that one day we would have enough of them to put together a good display."

The most interesting piece of equipment, said Grube, is the 'over the shoulder horn'. The horns, on loan from a college in California, are two of the rarest brass instruments in the collection. In the early days of band music, the period of 1850 to 1870, the band marched in front of the infantry instead of behind them, said Grube. "The music was there not so much for the entertainment of the crowd, but for the entertainment and purpose of the soldiers, so that they could hear the ryhthm and march better," the curator explained. "These over the shoulder horns sent the music back of the band and to the soldiers."

Included in the instrument display is a bandmaster's baton that belonged to the English Regiment, 122nd Regiment Affoot (infantry), a bugle from 1840 and a violin carved from an ammunition packing crate during the Vietnam War by an infantryman.

"I think the thing that really prompted us to go ahead with the project at this time," said Grube, "was the fact that the 82nd Infantry Division Association, a group of World War I veterans, donated a large collection of about 50 to 60 pieces of World War I patriotic sheet music. The sheets have such intriguing titles as 'Tell Mother Not To Worry', 'How Are You Going To Keep Them Down On The Farm After They Have Seen Paris', 'Good-Bye Ma Good-Bye Pa, Good-Bye Mule', plus 'A Little Girl's Prayer For Her Daddy in The Trenches'.

"These are really very sentimental,very patriotic songs," he explained. "They have very interesting, heartrending covers on this sheet music and it's really a very complete and very important collection.

"The collection was donated by the Division Association to the museum, knowing that we would take good care of the pieces," he said.

The museum neatly framed the sheet music display and mounted them on the walls which surround the instrument cases.

The display is located on the first floor, to the right of the main entrance and next to the General of the Army Omar Bradley display.

Heroes a thing of past?

By David R. Kiernan

John Wayne is dead. With his death, America lost yet another hero. What is an American hero? Is he a truck driver who becomes a "rock and roll" heart throb? — Yes. Is he a black athlete like Jesse Owens whom ghetto sandlot players can emulate? — Yes. Is he a young, Irish-Catholic President whose death left a national numbness that would not quit? — Yes, again.

Heroes come in all sizes and colors. In America, they have the opportunity to ride the wave of the media tide and sweep into our hearts for a time. They become symbols of what we yearn to be. They sing better, jump higher, run faster, and look like we'd like to look when we gaze into the mirror.

Currently, there is a tremendous interest in nostalgia. Television ratings reflect the popularity of shows based upon characters and situations of the 1950's. Supposedly, the "Eisenhower" years were mellower and less complicated than the "Stressful Seventies." What caused this shift of interest to the seemingly blissful era of a generation ago?

Following the 1963 Dallas tragedy, there was a feeling of national resentment and hurt that quickly became cynicism. One of our Olympian gods had been toppled and his "feet of clay" revealed in sudden tragedy. With that moment in Dallas began a traumatic seven-year period that carried Americans through a civil right's revolution, a music and literary upheaval, a major and very unpopular war, a lunar landing, and the revitalized women's equality movement.

The events flashed by in a heady fashion. John Kennedy's appeal to the younger generation and challenging words produced a tremendous national energy that emanated from Camelot on the New Frontier. His untimely death shook many social fundations and left the youth of the Sixties with growing instability and unfulfilled promises. Since those turbulent Sixties, there have been few heroes for American to idolize or even acknowledge.

Hero versus celebrity

Some heroes are famous because of their accomplishments. They have achieved fame through hard working, record-setting performances. Others are famous because of their power or position. They may or may not require accomplishment of any kind. The majority of today's famous people are celebrities rather than heroes. Celebrities are made in Hollywood, distributed on Madison Avenue, and retire as boring guests on nighttime television "talk shows." Short-lived and superficial, this is the celebrity of the Seventies.

With the advent of television in the late 1950's, the emphasis on the plot and script remained positive. The happy ending, the good guy in the white hat, the marriage before the honeymoon — remained intact. Slowly though, television overcame the popularity of the cinema, and more Americans would rather stay in the living room than venture out to the movie house.

Two major elements, however, grew with the popularity of the TV set in America. First was commercial advertising. Products and brand names became household favorites. Celebrities singing jingles and contests with boxtops drew the family to

Jesse Owens

By Rick Kiernan

It is ironic that Jesse Owens, the former track and field star, should die at a time when politics threaten the 1980 Olympic games at Moscow. Politics, too, overshadowed the 1936 games at Berlin when Owens destroyed Hitler's myth of Aryan supremacy within a race of "super" human beings.

During those pre-World War II games, the 22-year-old athlete won four gold medals—100 and 200 meter runs, 800 meter relay and the broad jump. He was the star of the Olympics until 1948. (The 1940 and 1944 games were cancelled because of the war). This feat was previewed on another day earlier that year at Ann Arbor, Mich. when Owens broke or tied world records in the same events. Some say he was ahead of this time due to the fact that his broad (long) jump record of 26 feet, eight and a half inches, was set in 1936 but not broken until Ralph Boston did it at Mexico City in 1968 — an incredible 25 years later.

Owens was a graduate of Ohio State and spent his recent years touring American cities with the Jesse Owens track and field games for boys and girls nine to 12-years-old. The competition was financed by a petrochemical company and held in 12 American cities from Fairbanks, Al. to Baltimore, Md. Games opened in each city just like the real Olympic games; with a color guard, national anthem, parade of athletes and remarks by Jesse Owens to competitors and parents. In these remarks, he would always state the simple philosophy he lived by: "Our purpose is to have fun through competition. We recognize each other as fellow competitors — boys and girls, black and white, big and small. Some of you will win medals and some will not. But we are all winners when we can come out this morning, watch our flag rise above us, hear the national anthem and go home tired after competing."

Simple words from a simple black man who rose to be one of the greatest athletes in Olympic history. But I choose to think he was more than a black man, he was a colored man who wanted us all to be "colored" — red, white and blue.

Heroes like Jesse Owens can still be found.

Baseball

Dependent Youth Activities(DYA) is holding registration for baseball, softball and T-ball from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays in Bldg. 1054. The registration fee is $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second child and $5 for the third child. Any other children from the same family will be registered free of charge.

In the baseball and T-ball divisions, the age groups will be as follow;

6-8 years old Pee Wee
9-10 years old Minor
11-12 years old Junior
13-14 years old Major
15-17 years old Senior

In the softball division the age groups will be as follows;

9-12 years old Ponytail
13-15 years old Junior

Proof of age such as a birth certificate, passport or a military identification card is required at the time of registration. Coaches and assistant coaches are in great demand so for further information call Don Plotner at 545-3070.

Bowlers

Fort Benning's bowling team is off to the TRADOC tournament tomorrow at Fort McClellan, Ala., and it will last through next Friday.

Two men, two women and one alternate were selected last month in an 18-game rolloff to determine who would represent Fort Benning at the tournament. The two women were SSgt. Bertha Ashworth of the 524th Personnel Service Company and Sp5 Alice Pomeroy of the 15th Finance Company.

The two men selected were CWO4 Kenneth Jacobsen of the 498th Medical Company and SFC Bennie J. Harris of HHC, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

The men's alternate was SSgt. Peter Monteleone, Jr., of A Company, NCOSI.

Championships

Tis the season of the championships and we have two coming up here.

Tuesday the Fort Benning company level volleyball championship will begin. The tournament will culminate with the championship game April 22 at Harmony Church Fieldhouse. There will be an awards ceremony after the last game, beginning at 6 p.m.

The 1980 TRADOC Orienteering Championship will be conducted on Pine Mountain near Columbus April 19-25. Fort Benning will be the host post for this event, which will determine the 1980 TRADOC Command Orienteering Championship Team. For more information contact the Sports Office at 545-2332.

Benning boxers split decisions, coach angry at post's inaction

By Tim Boivin

Two Fort Benning boxers travelled to the Georgia Amateur Athletic Union(AAU) finals in Atlanta at the World Congress Center last week. One advanced to the regionals while the other lost a tough split decision to a formidable opponent.

Sean Pruitt, the son of Lt. Col. Ken Pruitt, was voted the outstanding boxer of the tournament. He won his title fight by a 5-0 decision over the former Georgia Golden Gloves and AAU champion, Jakey Winters.

Wally Peniero, however, lost a tough 3-2 decision to Maxell Taylor of Fort Gordon. Before returning to the United States, Taylor was the United States Army-Europe(USAEUR) champion for three straight years. Lt. Col. Pruitt, the coach of the Columbus boxing team that the Fort Benning natives fight on, said, "Wally fought an outstanding match. He was tremendous throughout the bout and just looked great against such classy competition. He seems to lose a lot of those tough, close decisions but he has a lot to be proud of."

Another boxer who did well from the Columbus boxing team was former service member Darrish (Sweet Pea) Brumbige. He knocked out both of his first two opponents in the first round and then decisioned Johnny Lummas of Rockdale County by the score of 4-1.

Donnie Belflower of the Columbus team also won the state championship in the 119 pound division and will also advance to the AAU regionals April 16-18 in Miami, Fla.

Pruitt said, "Now that our regional season is winding down I would like to ask that all of those shadow boxers on post come out of the darkness and train with us at the Columbus boxing team. They can contact me at 545-7685."

But what about a Fort Benning team, Ken? "I wish like hell that we had a team to offer them on post. I can't figure out the reasoning for not having one but there is some damn good reasoning for having one. I would be willing to coach. There is too much talent at this post to be wasting it because they are discouraged when they find out they have to travel to the other side of the city to train with the Columbus boxing team."

To prove what he said, Pruitt pointed out, "Fort Gordon had 22 representatives, including dependents, soldiers and civilians, boxing on their behalf. They ended up with four in the finals, two state champions and as a team came in second. Fort Stewart had 15 boxers competing on their behalf. They had three in the finals and as a team came in third."

Pruitt reasoned, "With the number of soldiers on this post, not to mention the fact that they are in the United States Infantry, the best trained fighting men in the world, Fort Gordon and Fort Stewart would not be able to stay in the ring with us if we had an organized team. It's just a damn shame!"

Ken Pruitt, his son Sean and Wally Peneiro are fighters and they won't let a little bureaucratic red tape get in the way of their love for the sport of boxing. They will continue to box as long as they can find the proper facilities and equipment. However, it seems that they aren't going to find those at Fort Benning and, like Pruitt said, it is a damn shame!

Armchair Sports

Athletic scholarships

By Tim Boivin

People join the Army for a variety of reasons. Some join to make it a career, others join to straighten their lives out and get some job experience and the rest probably join for the educational benefits.

Those who join for the educational benefits can go about it in three ways. They can go to school while in the service with the Army paying three-fourths of the tuition. They can save up to $75 a month for education after they get out and the Army will add an additional $150 per month for each month they saved. The smallest group is those who parlay their athletic skills that they exhibit in service competition into a college scholarship.

With the current investigations and expose's concerning some of the colleges that grant scholarships, a warning must be sounded to these student-athletes. The key idea to remember is that colleges are for learning. Sure, there is the old saying, "You learn by your mistakes." However, telling someone they don't have to go to class to compete in sports isn't just a mistake, it is a grave injustice.

Junior colleges as well as major colleges are involved. Supposedly, they take athletes who don't have a high enough grade point average to be admitted in a major college and improve them scholasticly. However, it has been uncovered that some junior colleges conspire with the major college coaches to just be a front for these students so they can meet the needed eligibility requirements without going to class.

Anyone who earns scholarships to college must keep an eye on the lookout for these 'win at all costs' coaches. They have to realize that they will not be making their living through sports for the rest of their life. A person like Gordie Howe, who plays past the age of 50, is a one in a half billion shot. He is the exception, not the rule, in today's athletic world.

I once knew someone who went to college with everything provided to her by her father. He bought her a car. Even though the school was only 45 minutes away she stayed in a sorority house. The school was expensive but since it wasn't her money that she was spending she had a grand old time partying. As a matter of fact, she partied so much that she partied herself right out of school. She didn't really have a stake in the end result except for the chance to get a college degree, something nobody in her family had ever done.

Some of these people competing in college sports are the only ones in their neighborhood who have the chance to earn a college degree. Too often, as it has been uncovered in the last few months, they never even come close to getting the degree.

It is the hope expressed in this column that those few service members who do receive scholarships don't make the same mistakes as others before them have. The education that the scholarship provides for is going to be their light at the end of a winding tunnel. The athletic ability is just the force that gets them around the bend so they can see the light

The world record setting Golden Knights will showcase their parachuting skills next Friday on York Field in front of Bldg. 4 beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Golden Knights to jump here after setting record

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS)———The U.S. Army parachuting team, the Golden Knights, recently broke five out of eight world parachuting records that were held by the Soviet Union in jumps in Yuma, Az. The aerial acrobats will perform a free-fall demonstration next Friday at 11:30 a.m. on York Field in front of Bldg. 4.

The record attempts were certified by judges accredited with the Federacion Aeronautic Internationale. Records that were broken included the women's day accuracy record, the four—man team night accuracy record and the eight—man team night accuracy record.

The women's overall world parachuting champion, Sgt. Cheryl Stearns, took the women's day accuracy record with 27 dead center landings. She then missed by one centimeter on her 28th attempt. The previous record was 25 dead centers.

In the women's night accuracy event, Stearns demolished the Soviet record of three dead centers and a two centimeter miss. She made 12 dead center landings with a four centimeter miss on her unlucky 13th attempt.

The men's individual night accuracy record fell twice when brothers Sp5 Mark Jones and Sp4 Cliff Jones each went after the Soviet record of nine dead centers. Mark initially captured the record with 23 dead centers with a one centimeter miss. His record lasted only one day as brother Cliff scored 26 dead centers with a five centimeter miss to take the men's individual night accuracy record.

In their demonstration on York Field next Friday, the Golden Knights will plunge earthward at speeds over 160 miles per hour while sketching red patterns in the sky with smoke released from grenades attached to their boots.

After landing their black and white canopies they will demonstrate how to pack a parachute and answer questions about skydiving and the Army.

The Golden Knights, who have won more national and international honors than any other parachute team in the sport, have entertained over 100 million spectators at demonstrations in every state and 29 foreign countries. The event is free of charge and open to the public.

Bunny Fun Run

Come on out tomorrow and enjoy a gala morning of fun at the Morale Support Activities Division's Bunny Fun Run at Crain Hall.

Besides the usual running events there will be a live pop band performing along with aerobic dancers. Refreshments and commemorative T-shirts will be on sale also.

This fun run will be the largest ever at Fort Benning with thousands of people expected to come out and enjoy the festive occasion. It will also be the largest in another way; over 340 awards and 3,000 patches will be given out to the runners along with trophies for the first three finishers in the 13.1 mile mini-marathon.

Each contestant in the Bunny Fun Run will receive this commemorative patch.

There will be 35 different age groups and each first, second and third place finisher in each event in each category will receive an award.

The top three winners in each race will also receive awards, regardless of how they finish in their age group.

The pop band that will provide the entertainment will be Gallery, who appears every Sunday in the Hidden Door Club.

There will also be a dunking machine. Anyone interested in volunteering to sit in the dunking machine should contact Maj. Michael Goodman at 545-2281. VIP's would be appreciated, you know, something for the troops to really take aim at.

The aerobic dancers will participate in the five mile nonmilitary squad run to provide a little added incentive for the other runners. There will be a total of four five-mile team runs in all.

There is no entrance fee for any of the runs. All that is needed is for people to show up if they want to run.

The schedule shapes up like this:

8 a.m. 13.1 mile mini-marathon
9 a.m. Five mile squad run(military-5 members*)
9:45 a.m. Five mile platoon run(military-16 members*)
10:30 a.m. Five mile open squad run(5 members)
11:15 a.m. Five mile open platoon run(16 members)
12:00 a.m. 2.5 mile run(individuals and families)
12:30 a.m. Five mile run(individuals and families)

The military runs with the asterisk denote that they are open to military personnel only and they have to wear boots, T-shirts and fatigues. A family run consists of two or more members of the family and when the whole family finishes is their recorded time.

Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. will start off this year's Bunny Fun Run with a bang!

Library Run

Sunday is the Library Run 5K. That should make a good weekend of workout for area racing junkies.

Every weekend from now through the summer should present some area challenge for the T-shirt collector and the steely-eyed, would-be Olympian alike. Bob Kuwik and I will try to keep you advised of all the pertinent area action and, of course, feel free to call for other suggestions or further details on the ones we publish.

Bob Kuwik will have this space next week: I'll be out of town. If anyone has any information for him, contact him through The BAYONET office.

Runner's profile

Runners education works two ways

By Bob Kuwik

Runner's profile goes to school this week as they take a look at a teacher and a student. The teacher is Sue Emmerson and the student is Tony Wydra.

Sue Emmerson is a 39-year-old physical education teacher at Faith School on post. One of her former students returned from college three years ago and convinced her to start running.

Due to her schedule Sue can only run every other day. When she does run she goes for seven miles, averaging 28 miles a week. Sue said, "I benefit from running by getting better body tones, added energy, self confidence, a feeling of achievement and a runner's high."

Sue says her only drawback is finding the time to run. She said, "During any slack period of the day I put on my running shoes and do my seven miles."

Sue has participated in many local races. She also ran in the Bonne Bell and the Peachtree Road Race in Atlanta.

Sue hopes to run a marathon and is also waiting to turn forty so she can compete on a level better suited for her. She also plans to run for the rest of her life.

Sue Emmerson

Tony Wydra

By Bob Kuwik

Tony Wydra is a 12-year-old dependent who is on his way to running circles around his father and running partner, SFC Jerry Wydra, an instructor with the Airborne Department.

Tony is a student at Faith School who says he started running to get in better shape and become involved in the sport. He is running about five miles a day for a total of about 35 miles every week.

The main benefit of running for Tony has been controlling his weight. He explained he used to have a weight problem but he now carries 105 pounds on a 5'4" frame and is working toward a stable 98 pounds.

The only drawback Tony recalls is the sore legs and muscles he had when he began running. "When I first started, I could barely run one mile but it gets easier," he said. As the pain diminished, Tony began running longer distances and improved his speed.

Tony has participated in the Faith School Run and placed second in his age group with a time of 34:33 for five miles and he also completed the Fiesta Race 5-mile in 43 minutes. He added that he hopes to run a 10-k race and eventually a marathon.

Heroes

the "tube" every night at the same time. Geographically, sectional differences were worn down with network coverage that crossed time zones and gave coast-to-coast programming.

The second major contribution of television was the leveling of the hero from his pinnacle. On-the-scene cameras made "live" television subjects even more credible. Characters on the various popular shows took on an "Everyman" or Charlie Brown quality. (Certainly, "Ozzie and Harriet" and "Father Knows Best" testify to the way we thought every wholesome family faced daily situations.)

Still no heroes

The changing attitude of American society in the Seventies was reflected in the music and dress of its younger generation. The hard, acid rock sounds of the Sixties that screamed lyrics of sex and drugs were replaced with the mellow ballads of groups that sprang from the West Coast. Denim jeans and the "pauper look" replaced the glitter and satin costumes of a previous decade. America seemed to be growing conservative and apathetic in many of its attitudes. The political arena did little to provide the heroes that might replace the fallen martyrs of another time. Watergate replaced Vietnam in the living rooms each night and on the front page in the morning. The heroes of that investigation were the media personalities who struck a blow for investigative reporting.

There are heroes

As bleak as the trend may seem, heroes do exist in America. They are around us in every walk of life. For every athlete who is "on the take," there are ten who sign autographs in children's hospitals on weekends. For every politician who lives "off the pork barrel," there are ten who provided their constituents with vital programs that produce security and employment. Each June, graduates of high schools across the nation are asked to list the ten men and women they admire the most. The results are gratifying. Nominees cross sexual as well as occupational barriers. O.J. Simpson, Betty Ford, John Wayne and others continue to give credence to the belief that young people do look in-depth and carefully at the generation ahead of them. Heroes are made by their audience. They only reach the pedestal upon which we place them if they represent the qualities that we admire.

The need for heroes today is greater than it has ever been in our history. America has been through troubled times and needs to believe in itself again. This belief can only come when we reach down and select from our populace those men and women who epitomize the traits that we admire in ourselves. Finally, heroes serve as inspirations for the younger Americans who will replace today's leaders.

Would there have been a Leon Spinks if Joe Louis had not been "The Brown Bomber?" Maybe.

Did Bruce Jenner think about Jesse Owens as he finished the 1,500 meter run? I'd like to think so.

Wishing well.

Holiday hunters

Rabid racoon infects man, son

It was to be an exciting hunting excursion for the two of them, father and son. However, it would not turn out that way. Both of them are now being treated for rabies at Martin Army Hospital after they handled a rabid racoon which their dogs had killed.

They were hunting when the dogs chased the racoon and killed it. Both handled the animal in the process of taking it home. The racoon was turned over to the veterinary clinic at Benning were pathology examinations were performed. The clinic confirmed the worst, that the animal did indeed have rabies. The clinic contacted officials at Martin Army Hospital and the man and his son were told to come in for treatment. Also, their hunting dogs were revaccinated and quarantined for 90 days.

Additionally, the Webster County Health Department officials in Preston, Ga., (35 miles south of Columbus) where the racoon was killed, and the public health veterinary officials of the Georgia Department of Human Resources in Atlanta were notified.

Those people who often go into the woods for hunting or whatever the reason need to be aware of this case. Wild animals can be just that, wild. Beware of these animals. This incident could happen to anyone. It could happen to you.

Cheaper flights now offered

United Airlines is offering a new "Super Value" discount fare with seven-day advance reservation and ticketing restriction. The fare is applicable between 10 major city pairs in the United States and can be used one-way or round-trip with no length of stay requirements. However, if the passenger is booked round-trip and wants to change the return, it would have to be rebooked and ticketed at least seven days prior to return date. There are night coach and children's discounts on some routes.

The fares (tax included) are: Chicago-Los Angeles $186; Chicago-San Diego $207; Chicago-San Francisco $119; Denver-New York City $122 ($144 weekends); Hawaii-Los Angeles $163.05 ($173.05 weekends); Hawaii-San Diego $188.07 ($198.08 weekends); Los Angeles-New York $180; Los Angeles-Seattle $96; New York-San Francisco $194, and Seattle-San Francisco $85. Hawaii fares apply to unofficial travel only.

at Fort Stewart and, along with about 800 soldiers and family members, enjoyed some fine Army boxing.

As The BAYONET reported, the Army has produced some outstanding boxers. Several were mentioned in an earlier article but one Army boxer who is now stationed at Fort Benning made it all the way to the top. CSM Eddie Crook won a Gold Medal in the 1960 Olympics.

I have a son in amateur boxing here in Columbus. He has won the Georgia Golden Gloves, AAU and was the runner-up in the Southern Regional Golden Gloves. He will be competing April 14-19 in Miami, Fla. for the Southern Regional AAU crown. He has competed along with several soldiers from Fort Benning.

I have talked with several officers and NCOs here that served under Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. in South Korea and they claim he went to every boxing smoker they had.

I am pointing all of this out becuse when I first arrived at Fort Benning I asked who headed up the boxing program. I was told Fort Benning didn't have boxing because nobody was interested in it. To that I say baloney! The truth is that nobody wants to get off their duffs to get it started. After all, only the soldiers benefit.

I hope Tim Boivin has a hard head because the stone wall isn't crumbling.

Hit and run

To the Editor:

To the driver of the car who sideswiped my 1980 tan Rabbit in front of the Officers' Club on Easter Sunday between 12:30 p.m. and 1:15 p.m. (you know who you are):

You might be interested to know that your irresponsibile conduct will cost me $385 and will take three days to fix. That's three days without my car.

That would make a decent person feel guilty. Since you drove away from the accident without even leaving a note, however, it probably won't bother you at all.

Hospital praised

To the Editor:

Sitting here in Martin Army Hospital, Ward 3—A, on this Easter Sunday with my six-year-old son is the last thing I'd prefer doing. It would be much more enjoyable to be camping, fishing, hiking or a multitude of other things than sitting here. However, being a visitor here in MAH has made me more appreciative of the this facility and the staff. It is humanly impossible for me to express my gratitude for the way my son was treated since his injury. Possibly the best way is to retrace the steps.

On April 2 at 10 a.m. my son broke his arm. At 10:30 a.m. my wife brought him into the Emergency Room. When I reached the Emergency Room the personnel at the desk were polite and said Jason was in the treatment area. Upon checking the treatment area and not seeing him I asked a major if she knew where Jason Oakland was located. She informed me, very politely, that my son had been moved to the orthopedic clinic. I later found that in a one-and-a-half hour period my son had his arm resplinted and went through several series of X-rays.

At noon I reached the Orthopedic Clinic. There were several emergency and semi-emergency cases as well as the normal appointments. The attending physician and entire staff found time to be not only professional but courteous as well.

On April 3 it was discovered that my son had muscle damage to his right arm and the doctor immediately suggested and prepared for surgery. My son was brought to Ward 3-A where he was prepared for surgery and then taken to the second floor for the operation. At 9:30 p.m. the doctor, after a very long, hard and tiring day, still found time to talk to my wife and myself to explain and assure us that everything would probably turn out okay. At 11 p.m. my son was brought back to Ward 3-A where he was very gently placed in his bed.

From the time my son first entered the hospital in the Emergency Room up to this moment I have witnessed nothing but a professional, competent, efficient and courteous staff regardless of rank or position, enlisted, officer or civilian.

My son still has another operation to undergo prior to his arm being set and put into a cast. However, regardless of the outcome, I have the confidence that my son is in the best of hands and everything that can be done will be done for his complete recovery.

It may very well be unfair to name a name in this letter so this time I will just say the doctors, nurses, medics and other staff members are the most professional I have ever experienced in or out of the military in my entire life. Also, the doctor treating Jason Oakland is definitely a doctor's doctor.

To all people concerned, thank you.

SFC Patrick J. Oakland

197th soldier 1st to max SQT

By John W. Turner

Sp4 Patricia A. Karr, a medic with Company B, Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep), recently completed the annual SQT in the 91B MOS and scored a perfect mark of 100 percent.

The test was taken in two parts: a hands-on component and the written portion. She successfully completed the thirty-six required tasks on the two components combined, with a perfect score of 100 percent. Army-wide, less than one percent of all 91B personnel score 100 percent on their SQT. She is the only individual to score a perfect score on the 91B SQT in the history of Fort Benning.

"Sp4 Karr is the highest quality of soldier, and is a credit to herself and everyone that works around her," said Capt. Michael Ball, commander, Company B, Support Battalion.

Ball continued, "If everyone in the military were as conscientious and dedicated as Sp4 Karr, every company commander's job would be extremely easy."

When asked what she thought was the hardest portion of the SQT, Karr said, "There was not one particular thing on the test that was hard. The test covered all the basic tasks that each soldier should know and be able to perform every day in their job."

Karr, who is from Charlotte, N.C., joined the military service in May 1978. Since being in the Army she has had very little time to devote to the medical side of her training. Being in a medical company requires all personnel to work in various jobs to run the company and are rotated around so they are able to work in their original MOS and not be tied down in a job that is not related to their medical MOS.

Karr now works in the motor pool for the company and she is well trained and performs her duty in an outstanding manner in this field also. She has attended two schools since working in the motor pool; PLL and TAMMS school and finished number one in both of them.

To better her skills, she is now enrolled in the Emergency Medical Treatment (EMT) course which meets two nights a week and is taught by 2nd Lt. R. Keith Bailey, Medical Supply, Bravo Company, Support Battalion. According to Bailey, this is a six-month course, and is accredited by the state of Georgia. After Karr completes this course she will be eligible to take the state exam to become an Emergency Medical Treatment Technician.

To top off this last quarter, Karr was selected as the company Soldier of the Quarter for January-March 1980.

Road march?

The 36th Engineer Group, HHC, took to the field for a challenging two-day FTX ending with a 12-mile road march. Morale was high as the soldiers from the 36th conducted a river crossing two-and-a-half miles into their road march. Using 15-man pneumatic assault boats supplied by the 586th Engineer Company, the exercise quickly turned into a high spirited race across the Chattahoochee River.

Ranger changes

DAHLONEGA, Ga. — Lt. Col. H. Paul Blount Jr. (R) accepts congratulations from Col. Elliott P. Syndor, (C), director of the U.S. Army Ranger Department following change of command ceremonies at Camp Frank D. Merrill. Blount assumed command of the Mountain Ranger Training Camp from Lt. Col. Eugene D. Hawkins (L) who will head up the Airborne Department at the U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning. Blount comes to Camp Merrill from assignment with the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Research for Development in Washington, D.C. and is a 1961 graduate of NGC.

ARCOM awarded

First Sergeant William J. Johnson received an Army Commendation Medal in an awards day ceremony held by the 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, on March 27. Col. Richard Simpson, director of the Infantry School's Command and Tactics Directorate, presented the award. Johnson served as an instructor under the directorate before being first sergeant in the 10th Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade. Johnson left recently for an assignment with the 8th Infantry Division in Germany.

The Sport Model that's got it all. . .

The ultimate value in sports cars today. Standard equipment includes: AM/FM stereo radio. Steel-belted radial tires. Front stabilizer bar. 4-speed transmission. (3-speed automatic & 5 speed optional)

Mazda's rotary engine licensed by NSU-WANKEL.

17 ESTIMATED MPG 28 EST HWY. MPG

*Remember, compare this EPA estimate to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions, and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway mileage.

Don't buy a bootleg RX7 from an unauthorized dealer. Buy at the right price from your warranted and authorized dealer.

RX7's now available at the dealer that's got it all.

Drills to train here

Fort Benning's first school for drill sergeants will begin classes April 28, according to MSgt. Jesus Chavas, chief instructor at the Cadre Training Center.

Prospective drill sergeants will be soldiers already stationed here, said Chavas. After finishing the cycle, the drill sergeants will be stationed here at the 1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB), he added.

The eight-week cycle for sergeants will teach communication techniques, counselling, stress management and performance management as well as the traditional subjects like drill and ceremony, basic rifle marksmanship and physical training, according to SFC Darrell Coots, assistant chief instructor. The three-week course for commanders, executive officers and others in command situations at ITB will give an overview of the classes.

The eight-week cycle is expected to have an average of 15 students and the three-week cycle is expected to have an average of 10 students, according to Chavas.

BAYONET commentary

Cultural differences American asset

By Jimmie Jakes

The U.S. Army and Fort Benning are composed of soldiers and civilians who share several common areas of concern. Similar concerns that are often overlooked. Most of us at Fort Benning and in the surrounding community, as well as throughout our country, hold values such as honesty, respect for others, being respected by others, being accepted by others at the work area and, yes, being accepted socially. Too often our many similiarities are left unnoticed, unanalyzed. We, as human beings, share more interests and needs which are similar than we have or share differences. However, we do have our differences. Differences which are unique, and important enough to address here.

In keeping with the ideals and spirit of the observances of International Cultural Heritage Week (April 21-27) and Asian-Pacific American Week (May 7-13), let's further examine cultural heritage and its impact on effective people-to-people communication . . . those cultural traits, and individual differences due to one's background or heritage which do not conflict with the accomplishment of the organization's mission. Those specific differences; such as religion, taste for clothing or dress (after the normal duty day), appreciation for certain kinds of music, the display of heritage symbols such as the "Confederate Flag" or the "Black Liberation Flag" to list a few, should not be discouraged. Instead, "WE," all of us, should take the time and communicate to others the meaning and importance of these cultural traits and symbols to us.

What then are some of these displays in heritage symbolically saying? There are many interpretations of heritage or culturally oriented symbols and sometimes negative perceptions result from them. However, most are simply sending a message that says something like the following: "Confederate Flag" . . . "I'm from Alabama or the University of Alabama and I'm proud of it." "Black Liberation Flag" . . . "I, too, have a heritage and it goes back to Africa." Taste in dress, e.g., cowboy boots, big hats, dashikis, etc. . . . "This is the way most people dress back in my geographical region and I am who I am, to a large degree, because of where I came from." . . . OFTEN TIMES, NO MORE, NO LESS!

There are ethnic differences in our community between German Americans, Korean Americans, and so on. In general, Germans will look at a stranger a little longer than the average person from another of America's cultural or ethnic groups. It's a cultural thing. It's culturally okay. Koreans and some other Far East Asian males are more apt to hold hands while walking together than others from a different background. Again, cultural upbringing. Cultural okayness. Puerto Ricans are more apt to not look you in the eyes while conversing with you, especially if you are an older person or hold a position of authority. It's a sign of respect. A result of cultural programming; a part of their heritage. Blacks and Hispanics are more apt to be touchers when communicating with another person. Again, it is heritage, cultural programming. Many Native Americans (American Indians) and Appalachian "hill" people are programmed culturally as "nonscheduled" in their living. For instance instead of the watch dictating when it's time to do a certain thing, the place of the sun in the sky dictates the scheduling of events.

Even the U.S. Army has its culture. Our Army's culture is spelled out via customs, traditions, regulations and the like. Much of the Army's culture should not be tampered with, such as, "The country's flag will be respected," "Uniform regulations will be enforced," "The welfare of soldiers and civilian workers will be taken care of," "Command will be enhanced," etc.

The intent of this article is not to suggest that one cultural group is somehow superior to another but, rather, to highlight a few of our important differences. Also, to suggest that we be more tolerant and accepting of one another, for you see, we don't have to be dictated to by history. We can make history, positive history, today! Once we begin to accept one anothers' legitimate differences, we will be well on the way of accomplishing one of the major goals of the Equal Opportunity Program; ethnic, racial and gender-related harmony. When we do that, we will finally be free to give one hundred and ten percent to our ultimate mission at Fort Benning—training soldiers for the defense of OUR nation and way of life.

Letters to the Editor

Dress code

To the Editor:

This letter is in reference to the dress code when wearing civilian clothes and using PX facilities, clubs and so forth. I am a male soldier and I think that the codes for women should be as close as possible to that of men. For example, the Main PX sells sleeveless shirts and sweaters for men, but when we buy them we can't wear them back into the PX unless we have a shirt on in 100 degree weather.

Men have to be almost fully dressed just to buy a six-pack. The women in our community can go anywhere almost with only half their breasts hidden, no sleeves, shorts that leave half their buttocks hanging from underneath. Sometimes you can even see pubic parts when they are seated.

A vast majority of these women are dependents, but it seems that their husbands and fathers don't care, until some poor male soldier compliments their body and then all of Fort Benning is trying to get you out of Georgia to a new post before you get killed.

As for hats, I understand that it's courtesy to remove your hat when entering a building. But when men wear hats for part of their dress for the night out at one of the on post clubs, I, as well as many others, think we should be able to wear it. After all, we support the club.

We did it

To the Editor:

The 3rd Platoon, 72nd Engineer Company (Combat) was delighted to read Capt. Etsell's (Engineer Instruction Team Chief) compliments on our fine quality engineer unit training that was featured in your article titled "Engineers set off claymores". As primary assistant instructors at Brown Demolition Range, where the training took place, we were glad to go beyond demonstrating Molotov Cocktails and conduct real combat engineer training.

We hope that we will have the opportunity to exercise our demolition skills on the two new training aids (which we provided to replace the missing one) and will be more than happy to provide Etsell, and the Engineer Instruction Team with several other pictures of his former truck, which was skillfully demolished by three land mines, as well as any other pictures he may desire of combat engineers in action.

Fish answer

Editors note: This letter is in response to the Letter to the Editor by Tom Feeney appearing in the April 11 BAYONET entitled, "Something Fishy."

In reading the letter it is assumed that Tom and his brother are 16 years of age or older; thus, requiring licenses or permits. His arithmetic is absolutely correct with respect to the cost of State and Fort Benning fishing licenses and permits for him, his brother and father. Tom stated that

Mobilization a prime concern

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Being prepared in peacetime to mobilize forces in wartime is of primary concern to the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. E. C. Meyer, in his plan for the Army of the 80's.

The nation's ability to mobilize quickly and support Army forces in combat for as long as necessary is critical to overall deterrence, Meyer explains.

Although the Army chief sees prospects for strength increases in the total force during the 1980's, he sees the lack of adequate pre-trained manpower as a continuing problem. "This issue is directly related to the president's decision to register people with the Selective Service as a step toward improving our mobilization capability".

Army training centers must be ready to train enough personnel to meet the needs of forces committed to wartime missions, comments the general. Plans are being developed to increase early trainee capacity at training centers during mobilization and make the training period shorter.

Not only must military forces and government-owned industries be able to mobilize quickly, Meyer explains, but so must the privately-owned industrial base. Planning and other agreements are needed to make sure wartime items can be produced as quickly as possible.

"Once mobilized, forces in combat must be sustained." The Army Chief of Staff stresses that the Army must continue to evaluate stocks of equipment, ammunition and supplies to ensure there is enough to sustain forces until industry can reach full production.

"The decade of the eighties. . .looks to be a time of challenge, a time of continuing potential crisis", summarizes Gen. Meyer. "Such situations pose great dangers. The U. S. Army — by its preparations toward a real and visible military capability — seeks to see the nation and its values sustained through the critical decade of the 80's."

Retirees called up?

Fort Benning is one of the posts that 900 regular Army retirees will be getting "pre-assignment" orders to, DoD officials announced last week.

These soldiers will also be given assignments to garrisons and hospitals at Fort Carson, Colo.; Fort Lewis, Wash. and Fort Riley, Kan. as part of a retiree recall and reassignment program.

The Army has developed a program to recall certain retired soldiers if they are needed in time of war or if a national emergency is declared by Congress. This will release younger soldiers for deployment overseas, officials explained.

Under this program, no retirees are being recalled to active duty at the present time, officials stressed.

Selected retirees living in CONUS will be given orders during peacetime telling them when and where to report following a decision to mobilize, officials said.

So far, about 82,000 soldiers who retired within the last five years have been identified by the Reserve Components Personnel and Administrative Center (RCPAC) at St. Louis. RCPAC has gathered information needed to order these soldiers to active duty. Plans call for expanding this 'data base' to include another 130,000 soldiers who have been retired for five years or more.

As the pilot phase of the program begins, U. S Army Forces Command, major headquarters for Forts Carson and Riley, will seek volunteers for pre-assignment orders to those installations.

After the pilot phase is evaluated, officials say the program will be expanded in early 1981 to include all Army installations in CONUS.

Retirees are broken down into three categories:

- Category I includes those who meet grade and age requirements, were not retired for permanent disability and have been retired less than five years.
- Category II includes those meeting the same criteria for Category I but who have been retired for five years or more.
- Category III includes all other retirees.

Grade requirements include commissioned officers who are at least O-2s, enlisted soldiers who are at least E-5s and all warrant officers.

General officers under age 64, warrant officers under 62 and all other soldiers under 60 are subject to recall, officials said.

General officer assignments will be determined on a case by case basis by the Army Chief of Staff. Certain general officers 64 or older may be invited to volunteer for active duty.

ID rules changed in reg

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — "Does this mean every time I have to get a new ID card for my wife or kids I have to dig out my marriage certificate and their birth certificates?"

This is one of the questions soldiers are asking about the new ID card rules included in a change to AR 606-5.

An official at the Adjutant General Office says, "Both officers and enlisted soldiers will only need to show proof of dependency the first time they apply for a new ID card for their dependents."

Once proof is shown, the soldier's record will be noted and the next time an ID card is needed for that dependent, proof will not be required, officials said.

For example, Capt. Sam's wife has lost or mutilated her ID card. To get another, Sam will have to bring his marriage certificate to prove she's his dependent. When this card expires, Sam will not have to bring the marriage certificate again.

"Is a passport enough proof?" soldiers ask. 'No fee' passports issued to dependents may be used to verifty and issue ID cards to 'primary' dependents, officials said. These would be the wife or husband, and eligible children, officials added.

A passport is not sufficient proof, however, for issuing ID cards to such dependents as a mother or father, officials said. In this case, if proof is not readily available, a 90-day temporary ID card may be issued to give the soldier enough time to get the needed documents.

Lathrop to be honored

FORT BENNING, Ga. — In conjunction with Law )ay will be the dedication of the courtroom in Bldg. . It will be named in honor of the late, retired Col. Robert M. Lathrop with retired Col. Reid Kennedy )fficiating.

Lathrop was initially assigned to Fort Benning as Staff Judge Advocate of the 2nd Infantry Division. When the division was deactivated in early 1965, he vas reassigned as Deputy Staff Judge Advocate of he Infantry Center at which time he also served as Acting Staff Judge Advocate during the Dominican risis.

After a tour in Korea, Lathrop was again assigned o Fort Benning in 1968 as the Deputy Staff Judge dvocate, shortly afterwards being designated the taff Judge Advocate, a position he served in until 972.

His tenure from 1968 to 1972 was marked by heavy ase loads, such as those manifested by the U.S. v. alley trial.

Upon return from a tour in Berlin (1972-1974), athrop assumed the role as Military Judge of the II udicial Circuit at Fort Benning until his retirement n July 1977.

Col. Robert M. Lathrop passed away in May 978.

ıe total cost for the three of them to njoy this privelage at Fort Benning ould amoutn to a total of $51.75 per ear. For those not familiar with how om arrived at this figure, this is the ay it adds up. State license- $3.25, ost fishing permit- $4 and catfish ond permit- $10, which totals to $17.25 er fisheman, times three fishermanqualing $51.75.

Fort Benning has 18 ponds totaling pproximately 320 acres that are manged to various degrees of intensity rimarily for bass, bluegill, crappie ıd catfish. In addition, numerous eaver ponds and streams scattered ırough the reservation also provide xcellent fishing for the angler. Only vo of these ponds, Twilight and ictory, require the $10 annual catfish ınd permit. This is necessary to fset the cost for feeding the catfish a escribed diet of 32 percent protein ıring the periods when the water temperature is between 60 and 90 degrees. The prescribed feeding rate is three percent body weight of fish per day, six days a week during the period water temperature iswithin feeding range. The cost of floating catfish food for Twilight and Victory Ponds is presently $330 per ton adnd we use approximately 25 tons per year. We barely broke even last year. Other fish management supplies include fish pond fertilizer, basic slag and occasionally EPA approved herbicides for aquatic weed control. Last yeat we also stocked 61 thousand channel catfish, 51 thousand bluegill and five thousand largemouth bass. All this requires labor and equipment which has to be added.

On the wildlife management side, costs include labor, supplies and equipment for planting food strips to a variety of seed producers, grasses and other favorite foods of the species under management. Permanent forest openings are created by close coordination between forestry and wildlife personnel. Cross-country disking is also an important technique which disturbs mineral soils; thus, allowing dormant seeds of grasses and legumes to germinate. Control burning of the woodland is another important management practice both for wildlife and forestry management.

The monies received for all post hunting and fishing permits are laced in a secial account and by law are required to be used in the fish and wildlife management program on the installation from which the fees were collected. Last year the fees collected from post permits represented 20 percent of the total fish and wildlife management costs. The cold facts are that the sportmen are getting off cheap.

The fish and wildlife program at Fort Benning is thriving. We have good populations of deer, dove, turkey, duck, quail, squirrel, rabbit and fish that common to this geographical area. With a small staff of six dedicated permanent employees we accomplish an awfully lot to perpetuate the fish and wildlife on this reservation for the enjoyment of the soldiers, civilians and their families. Yes, it costs money, but so does food and gas. The inflation spiral continues upward. This reminds me of the old cliche, "If you dance, you must pay the fiddler."

Tom, if you care to, please contact me. Or better still, come and visit with me and I'll be glad to go more in depth on one of my favorite subjects, hunting and fishing at Fort Benning.

The mild electric current is run through the back muscles to relax them, making therapy easier.

Bad backs no problem at MAH

By T. A. Sabel

Back pain, anything from an uncomfortable feeeling to a chronic debilitating pain, hits many patients at Martin Army Hospital (MAH).

"I would say a good pecentage of our patients are here for back pains," said Capt. Thomas Davenport, physical therapist at MAH. He added that he did not have the exact figures.

According to Davenport, the people most prone to back problems are those who are overweight, in poor general condition and practice poor body mechanics. "Body mechanics is how a person walks, sits and moves," he explained.

Most back pains do not come on suddenly, said Davenport. "My own theory is that back problems build up over several years. It is an accumulative thing."

When a patient comes to the Physical Therapy Clinic at MAH he is given an examination to pinpoint the problem. While many musculoskelatal injuries are ruled out, most of the patient's problems are of a musculoskeletal nature, he said, referring to problems of bones and muscles.

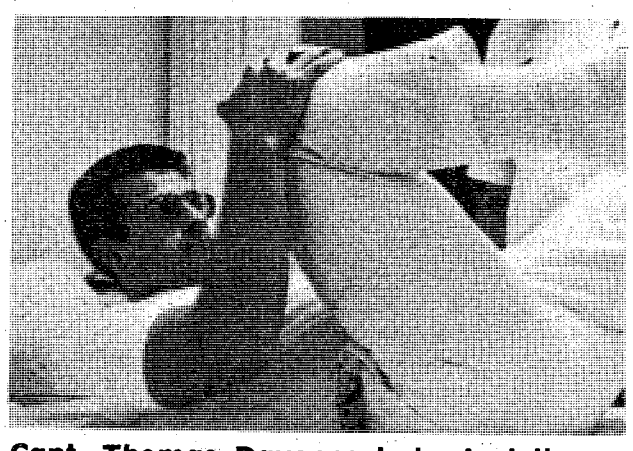
Through observations and the patient's medical history, a therapy program is designed to fit the patient. Frequently the program is designed to strengthen the abdomen, buttocks and lower back muscles as well as to increase flexibility. Davenport explained that the weak muscles in the abdomen, buttocks and lower back are the most frequent trouble areas for the back.

Therapy for back pain includes heat and ice packs, William's Flexon Excercises ("WIFFIES" as they are called by the physical therapy staff), as well as ultrasound and mild electrical stimulation. According to Davenport, heat may be prescribed for chronic cases and ice for acute cases. "However, this is adapted to fit the patient's needs," he added.

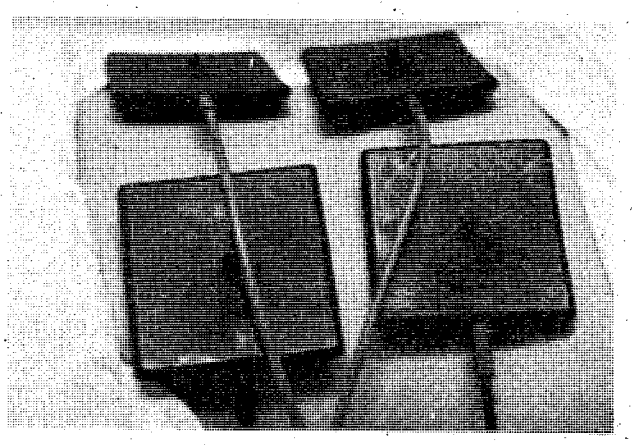
The patient's attitude is extremely important in gaining a cure, explained Davenport. He said that some patients are not wanting a cure or do not have the drive to get better for various reasons. "A proper attitude is essential for recovery," commented the physical therapist.

While jogging is beneficial for those of normal health, it is not recommended for those with a lower back condition due to the stress on the spine it causes. "Don't run unless you have a clean bill of health from the doctor for any ongoing back problems," advises Davenport.

As well as working as a physical therapist, Davenport also conducts classes in the different departments of MAH in body mechanics and back care as part of the hospital's health care and safety program.



Capt. Thomas Davenport, physical therapist, demonstrates one of the Williams Flexor Exercises used as therapy to ease back pain.



Small electric pads deliver a mild electric current through the muscles in the back.

Sp4 Steve Burnett, physical therapist, uses an ultrasound machine on one of the patients. The ultra sound acts to warm the back muscles.

Census forms still accepted

It's not too late to be counted in the 1980 census, the U.S. Bureau of the Census announced recently.

Questionnaires were mailed to every household on March 28, and most people were instructed to mail back a completed questionnaire on Census Day, April 1. Millions did so, but the Bureau reports that a number of households have not yet been heard from.

People not counted in the census will in effect be "invisible" when census statistics are used to reapportion seats in the House of Representatives and to guide the distribution of federal funds — their tax dollars — for programs in communities across the nation.

There is no penalty for a late return of the census questinnaire, but census answers should be given as of the April 1 date regarding births, deaths, changes of address, and other facts.

To be sure everyone is counted, after April 16 census takers will contact those households that were asked to mail back a completed questionnaire but have not done so. The Bureau emphasizes that this follow-up work increases the cost of the census. It is estimated for every one percent of the households that mail back a fully answered form as asked, $2 million in follow-up costs will be avoided.

Every person's answers to the 1980 census are confidential by law and cannot be obtained even by other government agencies, whatever their purpose. Census answers are seen only by census workers, sworn to secrecy, who are liable to a jail term of up to five years and/or a fine up to $5,000 for violting that law. Not once in the history of the modern confidentiality law, which dates back to the 1930 census, has any census worker even been prosecuted for breaking census confidentiality. Census answers become public after 72 years for historical purposes.

Often there is uncertainty about whether to list household members away at college, for instance, or serving in the military. Students living at or near the college away from home are enumerated at the school but students living at home should be counted with the household. Military barracks personnel and others in group quarters are considered residents of the area in which they are stationed and are enumerated there, and military personnel on ships are also enumerated.

Anyone temporarily away from home, such as an overseas traveler, who has reason to think he or she was not included on a census form at home should at this time call the U.S. census district office to notify them.

Earth Day set

By Tim Mullen

Earth Day, a celebration intended to show people the need to protect the environment, will be recognized Tuesday as proclaimed by President Carter.

Carter, in the Jan. 1 proclamation, said we, as a nation, "must achieve another decade of environmental progress." And that we should ". . . rededicate ourselves to our great goal — freeing the people of this earth from disease, pollution and the spread of toxic chemicals; from the lack of basic necessities and from the destruction of our common natural and cultural heritage."

Environmentalists say that an era of activism and progress has begun in fighting pollution, preserving natural resources and safeguarding public health. In the last ten years Congress has enacted many major environmental protection laws dealing with air, water, noise and dangerous materials pollution.

Some businessmen and industrialists have complained that the laws are too strict and costly. However, it is difficult to put a dollar figure on a clean environment and good health.

Earth Day 80 is a day in which we should again dedicate ourselves to protect the world we live in. Our planet is not a resource to be exploited for short term gain. We need to remember that we have a grave responsibility to the future generations, a responsibility to insure that they have a place to enjoy life as we do today.

Camellia is an apartment motel. We don't rent rooms, we rent furnished apartments with all the features of a regular motel plus added conveniences that cannot be provided with just a single room - and all at the same, or most times lower rates than the single-room motel. For example, our "standard" unit is comprised of two bedrooms, combination living room-dining room, bathroom and fully furnished kitchen including refrigerator, stove, cooking utensils, and table service for six people. These are some of the "extras" but at no extra cost. Our 100 units are in separate buildings with usually four apartments in each building, which adds to a person's or family's privacy.

One-week-old William Bristow is held by Fort Benning firefighter Rod Baker, as paramedic and ambulance dispatcher Richard Weeks and mother look on.

Baby makes grand entrance

by Dave Bristow

Six-year-old David Nathan holds his new baby brother, William Matthew Bristow, for the first time.

My bedroom looked like an episode out of the television show "Emergency". My wife was about to deliver our baby at home, with no time to get to the hospital. The birth of our baby was now in the hands of a paramedic and fire fighter from Fort Benning's Fire Station Number One on Vibbert Avenue.

Paramedic Richard Weeks, assisted by firefighter Rod Baker, made the birth of my second son at home the success story it was. It was not suppose to be time for my wife to deliver. At least not just yet. But as I walked through the back door, home from an appointment , the ambulance outside our front door said different. It was time.

It began when my wife started having strong contractions. My neighbor next door, Ann Pittman, a licensed practical nurse, rushed over to aid my wife. She picked up the phone and asked for assistance from Martin Army Hospital. In seconds MAH alerted emergency ambulance dispatcher Richard Weeks about the emergency situation. Realizing the plea for help was coming from nearby Harris Circle, Weeks got permission to jump in the ambulance himself and take fireman Rod Baker with him to my house.

"When I ran into the house Mrs. Bristow was laying on the bed ready to deliver," exclaimed Weeks. "The baby's head was already starting to show. I knew there was no time to make it to the hospital. I sent Rod back to the ambulance to get the OB kit and oxygen bottle in case the mother had any trouble breathing. The nurse who sent the call for help was helping Mrs. Briwtow with controlling her breathing and pushing on the contractions.

Mrs. Pittman told us she had worked with labor and delivery for a couple of years. The baby appeared to be coming out all right. When the head was delivered I noticed the baby was real blue, bluer that he should have been. The umbilical cord was around his neck so I took my fingers and loosened the cord. Then I told Mrs. Briwtow, let's push and get this baby out all the way. She did and the baby was out. I got the cord free from around the rest of the baby's neck. I took the bulb syringe and suctioned out the baby's nose and mouth, made sure the little guy was breathing on his own and he started crying. I lifted him up and said, "It's a boy!".

Baker sumed up the feelings of both when he said, "It thrills us to no end when we can do something like this and bring a little baby into the world. You always feel a part of it all when you deliver someone's baby. You never forget it. This was not the first baby Weeks and myself had delivered, but one we will never forget. I feel real good about the medical service at Benning. The fire department is good and extremely qualified."

Weeks, the paramedic, went on to say, "I've delivered seven or eight babies before but this is the first at Fort Benning. The next day after the delivery I called to see how mother and baby were doing. I'm always concerned. Hospital officials told me they were both doing well and that the little boy was eating like a horse."

Besides being a paramedic and ambulance dispatcher, Weeks is also a cardiac technicial who is trained to handle any kind of emergency.

Weeks and Baker are old friends, having worked alongside each other before. Their jobs have brought both of then together before in emergency situations. Both say they feel more comfortable when they know the other is coming to answer the same emergency call. This happened numerous times in Columbus when one was at an emergency site, the other would get there too.

I will always be grateful for the safe delivery of my child to this Batman and Robin duo. They did a remarkable job in a short amount of time. The eight pound, 10 ounce baby was delivered in less than seven minutes from the time they arrived.

Citizenship class ends

Fort Benning's Army Community Service (ACS) holds classes twice a year for foreign dependents who want to become naturalized citizens of the United States.

These classes, preparing the students for the Federal Examiner Board, are held in the spring and fall on six consecutive Saturday's

There are five instructors from the civilian community RSVP club, which is a retired seniors volunteer program. Four of the five instructors are retired school teachers from the Muscogee Co. school system. They have been with the program since it's beginning in 1973.

A pot luck luncheon marked the completion of the spring classes on Saturday at the post's ACS building.

Twenty eight people representing Thailand, Vietnam, Korea, Japan, England, France, Germany, Italy, Panama, and Barbados in the West Indies were enrolled.

"Some of the subjects taught are American History, the founding and organization of the government, all aspects of federal and state government, the operation of Congress, voting, and how bills are introduced and passed," according to Donald A. Drach, ACS volunteer.

ACS volunteer teachers are: (L to R) Celestia Allen, Lucille David, Ruth Jones, Ailene David and Marie Pitt.

Women get recognition

By Debbie Harrison

The fifth annual Federal Women's Program Week will be held here April 21-25, to highlight the contributions and accomplishments women have brought to the work force.

"For such a long time women have maintained stereotype positions," mentioned Gloria Hughley, Federal Women's coordinator.

The first real attention paid to the federal employment of women was through a 1954 task force of the Federal Personnel Council composed of directors of personnel. Their job was to look at increasing part-time jobs and recruit women who were not working. Nothing much happened until 1961 when President Kennedy appointed the first Commission on the Status of Women, headed by Eleanor Roosevelt, to study federal employment.

At the request of this commission in 1962, the Civil Service Commission began asking agencies to submit reasons when a male or female only was recruited for a job. This resulted in the practice being eliminated. Attorney General Robert Kennedy strengthened this and the commission's position the same year by ruling invalid an 1870 law which had been interpreted to read that federally appointed officers had an unlimited right to choose a man or a woman.

President Kennedy established an Interdepartmental Committee on the Status of Women in 1963 to continue the emphasis on women's employment begun by the expired 1961 commission. One of the Civil Service Commission's tasks was to make the federal sector a model employer for both race and sex. Evelyn Harrison, deputy director of the Bureau of Programs and Standards, was asked to coordinate the women's program. The Federal Women's Program was born in late 1963 as a result.

When the 1964 Civil Rights Act was passed, prohibiting sex and other dicrimination in employment, it worked to no avail to apply the same standards to the federal sector. The Committee on the Status of Women worked to get sex discrimination included in the executive order, again to no avail. In September 1965, Executive Order 11246 was signed but sex discrimination was ommitted. It was amended in October 1967 by President Johnson and sex discrimination was added to other prohibitions in federal employment.

The Civil Service Commission responded to this new order by establishing the Federal Women's Program to enhance the employment and advancement opportunities for women. In August 1969, President Nixon signed another order integrating the Federal Women's program into the overall Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Program and raised the focus of attention to the program by placing it under the stewardship of the directors of EEO.

In March 1972, the Equal Employment Opportunity Act, Public Law 92-261, brought federal employees and agencies under the equal employment opportunity provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for the first time and gave the Civil Service Commission additional enforcement powers to insure that all personnel actions in the government were free from discrimination. In 1976, Fort Benning formed the Federal Women's Program Committee.

In conjunction with Federal Women's Program Week, there will be five workshops dealing with women and their changing roles in the work force.All employees both military and civilian, are invited to attend these workshops.

The keynote speaker is slated to be the Honorable Rufe E. McCombs, judge of the state court of Muscogee County. She obtained her B.S. degree at Duke University and her J.D. degree from the University of Georgia's Lumpkin School of Law.

Since being admitted to the State Bar of Georgia in 1941, Judge McCombs has served in many positions locally, both appointed and elected.

Her message, to be given at 1:30 p.m. on Apr. 21, will address the challenge of change in the community. She will talk about the effects of tax reforms and oher changes necessitated by current crime problems.

The Columbus College Continuing Education Department is providing the program and furnishing the speakers for the daily sessions.

Continuing education units will be awarded to participants for attendance at each session.

Training never forgotten

By William W. Erbach Sr.
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

One Sunday night at a chapel a service was going on. In stumbled an intoxicated corporal and, lunging his way to the altar, let loose with a loud, comic song. The congregation was distrubed and wanted him removed. "Leave him alone, men," said the chaplain, "Let's see what he will do".

The corporal staggered to the platform. "I can sing a well as any of you, better even, and I can preach, too".

"Alright," said the chaplain, "Let's see what you can do."

With a silly grin the poor fellow weaved his way to the pulpit and with a bit of bravado said, "What will it be, chaplain, a song, a sermon, or a prayer?"

"You'd better pray, son."

The soldier seemed to become sober for a minute and then shut his eyes. "Let us pray." Controlling his speech, although drunk, was difficult, but he started. "O God," and there was a pause. Then, "O God," again, and again there was a pause. Then came the sob that literally tore out the heart of all those present. Instantly the chaplain was holding the boy in his arms. "I had a good mother, sir,. . . . she taught me once. . . . ."

"Raise the child up in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." This from Proverbs. A promise to the good parent that all the effort on those children will not be wasted if the example and lessons are taught. And a challenge to young men and women that sooner or later you will have to come face to face with your maker. Why not make it when you want to rather than wait till you have to.

How about that?

Why metric?

By Rick Kiernan

Remember that hit song, "I Love You A Bushel and A Peck?" Well, it's back on the charts by a group called The Metrics and the new title is, "I Love You A Kilo and A Gram!" A joke? You bet — however, the fact that there is a national program of metric conversion is not. While the changes have been subtle, they are evident as you go through your daily routine.

Why convert to metrics?

The reasons for the change are many. Simply speaking, metric measurement is more accurate. That is why the system has had universal use in hospitals and laboratories for years. In the military the distance on a map (kilometers) is metric, as is the caliber (millimeter) of the weapons system. Secondly, there is no further need for inordinate memorization of unrelated terms such as: rods, yards, pecks, bushels, pints and fathoms. Gone forever are the marble black and white composition notebooks with the complicated conversion tables on the back cover. Finally, the metric system is uniform. Conversion is based on a system of "100" and equal parts thereof.

History

Thomas Jefferson proposed a system similar to the metric system even before it was first created in France. When John Quincy Adams was Secretary of State in 1821, he studied the measurements in the United States and concluded that the metric system would be the most advantageous system to use.

Ever since, there have been scores of bills introduced in one house of Congress or the other suggesting conversion, but none ever got out of committee — until 1975, when President Ford signed a bill that authorized all government agencies to convert to the metric system. There was a clause in the original bill that called for complete conversion of the United States in ten years, but that clause was rooted out of the bill somewhere in committee and was not signed into law.

To completely change to the metric system, cookbooks will have to be rewritten. Every highway sign will have to be replaced. Even the nuts and bolts in the hardware stores will be replaced. The dial on your bathroom scale will have to be changed, too.

Yes, it will be costly. But the advantages outweigh the cost.

The United States is the last of the world powers to convert to the metric system. As of March 1975, the only countries in the world not using the metric system were Brunei, Burma, Liberia, the Yemen Arab Republic, the Yemen People's Democratic Republic and the United States.

And yet we are trading with England, Russia, France and all the other major powers. This means converting every measure of wheat, oil, textiles and any other product from one measurement to the other. Officials estimate once the conversion is complete, $500 to $700 million could be added to the nation's exports and foreign firms could increase sales $300 to $500 million in the United States.

Change underway

The race throughout industry to replace feet, quarts and pounds with meters, liters and kilograms is entering the home stretch.

Dozens of major corporations announced 10-year metrification programs and Congress is about to legislate this nation's intention to switch. After years of debate the questions surrounding conversion from the English to the metric system are no longer why or whether it should happen, but how and when it will commence.

Seventeen state boards of education and seven legislatures have adopted go-metric educational resolutions that will prepare the younger generation for the use of the system.

The conversion will not happen all at once, like lightning striking. It is taking place slowly, so we can get used to it a little at a time.

Children are now learning the metric system in schools. That takes care of the next generation. But those of us who grew up on the customary system are finding it hard to comprehend the new weights and measures. By the time the customary system bites the dust, though, we will all be so used to the liters and kilometers and the like, we will hardly miss the gallons and miles.

How about sports?

Sports diehards will be happy to note that some familiar terms will stay because of their integral part in the game. For instance, football fields will continue to be marked in "yards" and furlongs will remain at your local racetrack. Of particular interest is the area of track and field. In the past, American athletes had trained and competed at linear distances (yards and miles) only to have to adjust every four years when the Olympic competition came due. Milers who were used to holding their final "kick" for the last 200 yards found the 1,500 meter race over at that point in the stretch. Dash men and sprinters who were to "hit the tape" at the 100-yard mark found that there were another nine yards beyond the finish line in the 100-meter run!

All in all, the athletes will probably make the transition better than most Americans.

Inevitable

Like so many other gradual changes in our everyday life, the metric system is slowly making itself "at home" on your grocer's shelves, on your cigarette packages, your wine bottles and even on the popular soda pop cans. The transition is more psychological than real. Shoppers will buy the like amounts of a product regardless of the size of the container. A family of four will eat the same size beef roast whether it's measured in grams or ounces.

So prepare for the Metric System. Remember an "ounce" (oops!) or rather, gram of prevention is worth 2.2 kilograms of cure.

Clubs selected for slot machines

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Army clubs in the Frankfurt and Kaiserslautern military communities in Germany have been selected as the first sites for the return of slot machines, according to a DA club management official.

As announced earlier, a total of 200 machines will be put in 17 clubs at the two USAREUR locations six to eight months from now.

In addition to the Army clubs, five air bases overseas will also have slot machines during this period, the official added. They include Ramstein, Rhein-main and Sembach in Germany, Kadena in Japan, and Clark Air Base in the Philippines.
