One of the movies playing tonight here at Theater No. 1, called, "And Justice For All," starring Al Pacino, Jack Warden and John Forsythe. This movie is the story of a young lawyer (Pacino) who tries to work by the system, but finds the system has a lot of loopholes in it. Pacino, has starred in such movies as, "The Godfather," Godfather Part II, "Serpico," and "Dog Day Afternoon," gave one of the best performances of his career. I give this one three stars.

Also, playing Sunday is "Seems Like Old Times," starring Goldie Hawn, Chevy Chase and Charles Grodin. This movie is the story of another young lawyer (Goldie Hawn) whose ex-husband (Chevy Chase) is being framed for bank robbery. Her current husband (Charles Grodin) is the district attorney, who would like nothing better than to put Chevy Chase behind bars. "Seems Like Old Times," is the second movie Chase and Hawn have starred in together, and they seem to be a perfect combination. This movie also gets three stars.

Bill Murray, like most of the original "Saturday Night Live" cast, has done well in the movie business. Murray has starred in movies like "Meatballs," "Caddyshack," "Where the Buffalo Roam," and now, "Stripes." In this flick Murray plays a guy whose luck has run out. So what does he do? He joins the Army. The film shows Murray going through basic training on a post that looks alot like Fort Knox. Warren Oates portrays SFC Hulka, Murray's Drill Sergeant. Hulka is a combination of every hardcore drill sergeant that ever put on a brown hat. Murray, as usual is very funny and very sarcastic. And he plays this one to the hilt. I give this one four stars.

If you get a chance to check out some of the theaters off post, go see "Raiders of the Lost Ark," or "Halloween 2". There are both good movies. Have a good weekend!

YA football season winding down

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Youth Activities football players and cheerleaders saw the usual fast action Saturday which kept the cold weather from penetrating their spirit.

In the Grasshopper Division, the Eagle defeated the Tri-city Raiders 13-0. The Eagle first touchdown came on an 20-yard run by quarterback Jack Goode. The extra point was good on a pass from Goode to Jay Carpenter.

The second touchdown was scored by Carpenter behind the blocking of Christopher Downs, David Alford and John Bruntlett. The defensive standouts were Scott Meyers, Goode and Chris Monds.

In other action, the Tri-city Cowboys defeated the Seahawks 18-10. James Thornton of the Cowboys scored two touchdowns — one from a kickoff return and the other from a 40-yard run in the second half.

The Cowboys other score came from a run by Travis Miller. This scoring was made possible by good blocking by Laddell Bryant, Jamie Hammill, Bryant Powell and J.J. Blackwell. Defensive standouts for the Cowboys were Johnnie Manson, Eddie McKinney, Myron Burton and Styrom Traylor.

The Seahawks scored on a kickoff return and extra point attempt by Shawn Gentry during the first half and on a safety in the closing second of the game by Andre Williams.

In the Pee Wee Division, the Mean Green Machine slipped by the Rams 20-18. Early in the game quarterback Timmy McIntosh hit Lenwill Majors for the Jets' first touchdown. The conversion was good by Ron McIver to make the score 8-0.

The Rams then scored on a fantastic run downfield, but the Jets held on the extra point. Timmy McIntosh then connected with John MacFadden for the Jets second touchdown. The Rams scored again to close the gap to two points 14-12. The Rams then scored once more before the half to take an 18-14 lead.

However, the Jets came back to score their third and final touchdown of the game. It proved to be all they needed as they won the game 20-18.

In the Junior Division, a very exciting game was played at Doughboy Stadium between the Chargers and Panthers with the Chargers coming out on top 18-14.

On the Chargers first series of the game, Curtis Allen carried the ball over the end zone to give the Chargers a 6-0 lead.

During the remainder of the first half, the Panthers scored two touchdowns to take a 14-6 halftime lead. However, in the second half the Chargers scored two touchdowns on their own, one by Allen and the other by Robert Cullifer to make the final margin four at 18-14.

The Senior Division fans saw Fort Benning's Wolverines take the field against the Red Knights from Annewokee Institute in Carrabelle, Fla. The game was full of excitement as well as scoring as the Wolverines fell by a 38-30 score.

The Wolverines had key injuries to some key players affecting the outcome. The Wolverines will play the Red Knights in a rematch tomorrow at Carrabelle.

After Youth Activities conducted the preliminaries for their Punt, Pass and Kick competition in the various housing areas, the finals were held Sunday at Blue Field. Finalists for each age group from the four housing areas competed. Winners and runners-up will receive the awards during halftime activities of the Doughboys football game on Nov. 8.

Aviation pay adjusted

WASHINGTON — Adjusted rates for aviation career incentive pay (ACIP) and flight related hazardous duty incentive pay (HDIP) are part of the new law on military pay and allowances. The law, signed by President Reagan Oct. 14, includes selected increases in ACIP and HDIP as well as several other ACIP changes, say Army personnel officials.

The maximum ACIP rate increases from $306 to $400 per month for commissioned officers with over six years of aviation service. Commissioned officers with over 18 years of service will receive $370 monthly decreasing to $250 monthly at the 25-year-of-service mark.

The law allows for payment of monthly ACIP to commissioned officer aviators (D-6 and below) with over 25-years-of-service who perform operational flying duty.

An Army-sponsored incentive increases warrant officer ACIP to that of commissioned officers. As in the past, eligible warrant officers will receive continuous ACIP at the maximum rate after six years of aviation service.

The new rates payable as of Oct. 1, 1981, are listed below:

Commissioned Officers
Years of aviation service including (flight training) as an officer:	Monthly rate
2 or less	$125
over 2	156
over 3	188
Years of aviation service including flight training) as an officer:
Years of service as an officer:	Monthly rate

over 6	400
over 18	$370
over 20	340
over 22	310
over 24	280
over 25	250

Warrant Officers
Years of aviation service as an officer:	Monthly rate
2 or less	$125
over 2	156
over 3	188
over 4	206
over 6	400

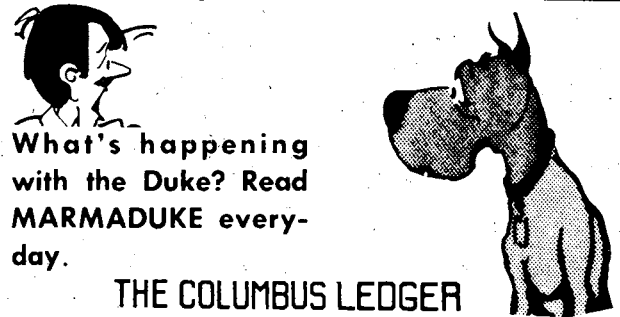

The new law also increases the minimum enlisted crew member HDIP rate to $83 per month. Other enlisted crew member rates remain the same.

In Flanders' Fields

In Flanders' Fields
the poppies blow
Between the crosses
That mark our place and in the sky
The larks bravely singing fly, Scarce heard amidst the guns below.

We are the dead Short days ago we lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved,
And now we lie in Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe
To you from failing hands we throw the torch
Be yours to hold it high
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep
though poppies grow
In Flanders' Fields.

Reflecting on war and those who serve

By Paul Timm

Assistant to executive editor L-E newspapers

The 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month...

Some may not recognize that phrase, but its impact will never be lost upon America — or Americans young and old whether they recognize it or not.

The year was 1918... nations and people were reeling from the first truly world war... the time was ripe for drama at its highest — hence the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

Some wars are remembered for their ending — World War I on Nov. 11, 1918. Others by their beginnings — World War II for the United States on Dec. 7 (Pearl Harbor Day) 1941. Some by their causes — The Spanish American War's "Remember the Maine" in 1898. Many by incidents whose date is lost in time — Pork Chop Hill in Korea in the early '50s. Occasionally by some special words as the Gettysburg Address in 1863. Or, more tragically, incidents at home like Kent State during the Vietnam era.

A few are not remembered — the Boxer Rebellion in 1900?

There are other reminders — The Shot Heard 'Round the World; Remember the Alamo; The Battle of New Orleans as recorded in song by Johnny Horton; A War to Make the World Safe for Democracy; The War to End all Wars. The list goes on and on.

The United States has come a long way since the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. What had been celebrated as Armistice Day began to lose its appeal — if such description can be tolerated — with the advent of World War II and our eventual and destined victory, one of the last of the honest-to-God victories of armed conflict, if there ever were any at all.

Armistice Day became Veterans Day — a time to honor all veterans of all wars. It was an appropriate change — appropriate until the politicians decided that Veterans Day could best be used to create one more three-day weekend. The veterans were forgotten.

But pressure upon the Congress from the veterans themselves — with and without the help of their formal organizations corrected that wrong and Veterans Day was returned from the artificial Monday to the 11th of November, no matter day it happened upon.

Today, Veterans' Day is exactly what it is to be — a day to honor all veterans of all past wars and present service, living and dead.

The almanac lists more than 30,000,000 living veterans of our armed forces — none before the Spanish American War, and only a mere handful of them left. Nearly 3,000,000 have been killed or wounded in defense of this nation.

The almanac can in no way humanize the stark numbers of those who made the necessary sacrifices.

One did not have to serve as 30,000,000 did; one did not have to sacrifice as the row upon row of crosses around the world attest; one did not have to forgo life's anticipated amenities as our disabled are forced to do.

Yea, those whom we honor Wednesday are, in effect, all Americans who still enjoy the freedom that is unique in this world — "for they also serve who only stand and wait".

Take time on Wednesday, Nov. 11, to thank your God for a nation beyond compare — and for the men and women who made and make the day one of incomparable significance.

Chaplain's Comments

Spiritual radar capability in everyone

By David W. Campbell

43rd Engineer Battalion Chaplain

Radar is a way of using radio signals to locate an object, determine its speed, and find its distance from an observer.

The name was invented by the United States Navy and is an abbreviation for RAdio Direction And Range.

During World War II many enemy planes were shot down by anti-aircraft guns controlled by radar, even when the planes could not be seen from the ground. Today, radar is used to guide ships and planes.

As Alabama State Trooper Chaplain, I have experienced first-hand another use of radar. At that point, the speeder wishes that radar had never been invented. However, many lives are saved because the motorist knows that a law enforcement officer may be "taking a picture." I have found and caught many fish in the Gulf of Mexico because my boat is equipped with radar in the form of a fathometer (depth finder).

There is also a spiritual radar capability in you and me. Listen to the words of the writer of Hebrews, "What is faith? It is the confident assurance that something we want is going to happen. It is the certainty that what we hope for is waiting for us, even though we cannot see it up ahead. Men of God in days of old were famous for their faith. By faith — believing God — we know that the world and the stars — in fact, all things — were made at God's command; and that they were all made from things that can't be seen." (Hebrews 11:1-3, the Living Bible.)

William James said, "Often enough our faith beforehand in an uncertified result is the only thing that makes the result come true." I agree; don't you! I'm sure the Dodgers had faith they could come back to beat the Yankees. I doubt that New York thought L.A. could do that, especially after the Yanks had won the first two games. Who would have ever thought L.A. would come back to win the World Series 4 games to 2! L.A. — that's who. They had some radar, some faith that they could do it.

Faith is crucial. All of us have it, whether we like it or not. If I ask you whether or not you believe in God, you will probably say, "Of course I believe in

Vetran to pass on mementos

Story by Griff Godwin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

World War I veteran Richard F. Pittman will present some of his war mementos to the 58th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, Nov. 10, at 11 a.m. during a parade in his honor on Fort Benning's York Field. In case of inclement weather the ceremony will be moved to the Kelley Hill gym.

The 81-year-old Smith, Ala. grocer saw action in France during World War I as a member of the 58th Infantry Regiment, 4th Division, and was wounded during that conflict.

Lt. Col. H. T. Fincher, commander of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, says Pittman wants to donate several items dating back to that war including his overseas cap, WWI Victory Medal, a wound certificate signed by President Woodrow Wilson, and his old round aluminum dog tags.

Fincher says plans are for the Regiment to establish a museum with the Pittman mementos providing its foundation. They will be placed in a glass case and displayed. According to the colonel, the unit's history goes back to WWI.

Earlier this year Pittman received the Purple Heart for his wound suffered Aug. 4, 1918 while on patrol near Chateau Thierry, France. An artillery burst wounded him in the left leg and killed the other eight members of the patrol. He was hospitalized in Europe and the United States and discharged in January 1920.

For some unknown reason action was never taken for the Purple Heart, until recently, when Pittman decided to pursue the issue. He contacted government officials who put the administration paper work in motion, and on Jan. 12 of this year he finally received the overdue medal during ceremonies at Smith's High School.

He still operates Pittman's Grocery in the Smith Community.

Combat pictures by noted military photographer display at museum

A David Douglas Duncan photograph.

Story by Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In 1972, master photographer David Douglas Duncan gave a collection of 101 of his combat photographs to the U.S. Marine Corps.

A part of that collection, covering Korea in the summer and winter of 1950 and Vietnam in the fall of 1967 and winter of 1968 is being exhibited by the National Infantry Museum through January 1982.

Duncan, a retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, covered the Marines throughout the Pacific during World War II, Korea and in Vietnam. He also photographed the British in Palestine, the Red Army's takeover of Bulgaria and the communist efforts to conquer Greece.

He won the U.S. Camera Gold Medal and Overseas Press Club Award for his photographs of the Korean conflict and the Robert Capa Gold Medal, presented by the Overseas Press Club, for his coverage of Vietnam. The American Society of Magazine Photographers named him Photographer of The Year in 1968.

Although noted for his photographs of military operations, Duncan also distinguished himself with other subjects as well. He spent five years photographing and writing about the private world of Pablo Picasso, the Kremlin, and Picasso's Pi-scassos.

The collection of combat photographs, all black and white, is being exhibited in the Gallery of Military Arts at the museum. Upon entering the room the visitor is surrounded by poster size combat and combat related photographs.

It is a powerful display with great visual impact, strongly related to combat, because so much is happening at one time. A burning C-130 with a sad faced Marine next to it, Marines moving through rice paddies, wounded soldiers being treated by medics, two GIs in a foggy mountaintop position — it is all there.

None of the pictures are titled or captioned and viewers must decide for themselves what the scenes represent, and the thoughts of subjects when Duncan took the pictures.

A quotation from him accompanying the exhibit reads in part, "Believing that the look in a man's eyes tell clearly what he feels, I am presenting these photographs to you without a single caption, for any caption that I might write would mirror what I was feeling or thought I felt."

Gunny Smith explains the proper push-up position. The Marine PT test does not include push-ups but uses pull-ups as an indicator of upper body strength instead.

Marines selected for Airborne School await their turn to do the required 45 push-ups during the PT test.

Story and photos by Don Rhodes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Marines take advantage of schools here

They advertise saying they are looking for a few good men. After they find them, a few of the few end up here.
The few are United States Marines.

Some of them, about a thousand a year, are here to attend the schools Fort Benning has to offer. Five are here for three year tours, much the same as the Army's permanent party personnel are.

Four of the five are here to take care of all the Marine and Navy students. Headed by Lt. Col. William D. Major, they are the Marine Corps Representatives to the Infantry School. The other three Marines who help take care of the students' administration, such as cutting orders and paying them on payday, are Major John Bruntlett, Capt. Phil D. Tracy and Gunnery Sergeant "Gunny" Smith.

The fifth Marine stationed here, Major Mike Williams, is the Marine Corps Liaison Officer. He is the Army's link to the Marine Corps for combat developments.

Marine captains are selected to attend the Officer Advance Course here instead of their own equivalent Amphibious Warfare School. One reason, according to Major Bruntlett, is because the Marine Corps has a policy that each of their battalions has a Marine who has graduated from the Army advanced course assigned to it.

"That's because the Amphibious Warfare School teaches very little on mechanized tactics. We're just getting into mechanized and we need what the captains learn here," said Bruntlett.

"As for the other schools," he continued, "the Ranger School is a fine school and we'd be crazy not to use it. Our Airborne School graduates will be assigned to our recon outfits or one of our Air Naval Gunfire Liaison Companies (ANGLICO) whose mission is to provide expertise in the control of Naval air and gunfire in amphibious operations to the Army and our allies.

"There are different considerations and priorities of fires in an amphibious operation, plus we have different communication procedures and the terminology is different. Some of those amphibious operations could include airborne assaults. Our men from ANGLICO could jump in right along with yours."

The Marine representatives also present an eight hour block of instruction on amphibious operations and the organization of the Fleet Marine Force to Army Advanced Course students.

Benning Marines plan birthday ball

On Nov. 10, 1775, a Corps of Marines was created by a resolution of the Continental Congress.

To mark that occasion Marines all over the globe will celebrate the 206th Birthday of the United States Marine Corps on Tuesday, Nov. 10, 1981. Wherever Marines are stationed, this tradition-laden event will occur.

The Marines assigned to Fort Benning are no different as they are finalizing the arrangement to celebrate their birthday at the Fort Benning Officer's Club Tuesday evening.

Supported by the 283d Army Band, the handful of Marines and their ladies, along with several hundred invited guests, will don their evening dress uniforms and recall the glories of the long and illustrious history of the Corps.

From the Revolutionary War to Vietnam, in declared wars, banana wars, and police action, Marines have been there, proud of their accomplishments.

The Corps of today stands ready to add new names to its long line of hard fought battles, determined to uphold the traditions of Espirit de Corps, success in battle, and yesterday's Marines.

Smith encourages a student to do his best during the test.

Tanks shuffle

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The tank scramble was on. Before I knew it I was surrounded by tanks.

Where were they going and what were they doing? The curiosity of it after hearing all the noise these big monsters made is what led me into the new motor pool of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor on Kelley Hill anyway.

Dust was flying everywhere. (Tanks have a way of letting you know they are in the area.) In minutes the place was wall to wall with moving tanks.

Company A's tanks were shuffling. SSgt. Casanova Chappell, smiling, explained, "We've only had our tanks here for about two weeks. Before we just had them lined up. Now we're rearranging them and putting them in line the way we want them to be."

Moving 18 tanks and repositioning them isn't like moving around pieces of furniture. It's good to know what you're doing. But these soldiers are good at what they do - handling tanks.

Ground guides led the way - as tankers moved their tanks into new position. When it was over, they were all in line, side by side, and looking good. The dust was still settling.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Loading, unloading and delivering supplies and equipment to various shops on post, Eddie Miles, this month's "Employee of the Month" winner, has an impeccable safety and job performance record.

Miles, who has held the position of Motor Vehicle Operator since 1966, has not had a single accident. As a matter of fact, Miles did not use any sick leave until two years ago in an emergency situation.

Delivering automotive, electrical and other types of parts to different units on post, Miles is considered a capable and energetic employee by his supervisor, William Armor. "He uses his knowledge of repair parts procedures to inspect them. He handles the responsibility very well."

Miles, who has been employed by the government 35 years, was surprised when he heard that he had won the award. "I was the first employee to win the award. There's no situation I can't handle," said Miles with a confident smile.

Miles enjoys fishing and sports in general. The Columbus resident says he will stick with his job for a while.

For winning the award, Miles will receive a plaque, a certificate, $100 and a letter of commendation from Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel.

The awards program, which became effective this last month, was started to recognize the talents, abilities and faithful service of Fort Benning's civilian work force.

Commissary subject of womens council

The Fort Benning Womens Advisory Council met last Thursday, with Major General Sam Wetzel presiding.

The council reviewed old business, hearing responses from the various departments on post to the questions received at last month's meeting.

A new system for the selection of teenage baggers was instituted Nov. 1, according to Jose Fantauzzi, Commissary Officer. The present ledger of baggers and applicants is no longer valid, requiring that all interested teenagers reapply, including baggers currently working at the commissary.

New baggers will be required to undergo a four-hour training period, without pay. There will be 84 permanent baggers and 68 part-time baggers.

After school hours, the part-time baggers will supplement the permanent baggers, half of them working three days per week and half working two days each week. There will also be a substitute list from which baggers will be called to fill in on Saturdays.

Mr. Fantauzzi emphasized that the baggers are not employees of the commissary saying, "They work for the customer." DA regulations prohibit the commissary officer from employing baggers.

The Commissary is also taking steps to assure that the selection, quality, quantities and packaging of products offered for sale at the commissary meet the needs of the military community.

In response to concern about commissary prices, a price comparison survey was conducted during the month of September by the commissary staff, which compared prices at two local supermarkets with commissary prices. The survey showed that shoppers who consistently buy at the commissary save 37.10 cents on every dollar spent.

It was announced that the PX has been selected as a test gift store by the Southeast Exchange Region. For the consumer this means the selection of gifts in the gift department should become more varied in the near future.

"Winnie" Torain, Manager of the Federal Women's Program, gave a presentation on that program. The purpose of the program is to advise the commander on matters affecting the employment of women and minorities at Fort Benning.

Torain defined her role as one of a partner of the Equal Employment Opportunity Management Team, consultant to the commander on all aspects of employment, and advisor to managers. Her role as advisor is to educate and assist managers who are providing career counseling, training and career enhancing advice to women and minorities.

She stressed the need to inform women of the avenues available to assist them in attaining career goals, and the need to keep managers aware of policy changes as they occur. Anyone interested in obtaining career counseling or advice should contact Torain at 545-1872.

Noel Burr reported on the Army Family Symposium she attended Oct. 10-11 in Washington, D.C. The goal of the symposium is to create an improved way of life for the military family, and in this way aid in career retention. There will be a Family Action Workshop Nov. 12 at the Family Life Center, Main Post Chapel Annex from 9:30 to 12 noon. The workshop's purpose is to recommend an action plan for Fort Benning to improve the life of the military family. These recommendations will be presented to the commander for further action.

General Wetzel stated that he wanted to develop a Volunteer Recognition program at Fort Benning, similar to ones he has observed at other posts. The program would include a special award for "Super Volunteers", to give them tangible recognition of their volunteer skills which could be used in employment resumes. Gen. Wetzel suggested the awards could be presented at an annual dinner dance or volunteer ball, and asked the Council to make recommendations at the next

Woman wins award

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

What happens when a military policeman stops a number of cars on post to see if the drivers have their seat belts fastened?

Strange and varied expressions of fear and shock, that's what! This was the case when post safety manager Fred Young and PFC James Dains, a military policeman, set out to find out how many people buckle-up and present them a small award.

The first car stopped and had no registration decal. Before the safety officer could say a word, the driver explained that he had just bought the car and was wondering where he could get it registered.

Dains explained the procedure to him and began waving another vehicle into the parking lot.

This one was driven by a woman. She had her seat belt fastened and was immediately given the safety offices's award - a baseball cap.

One car was driven by a man whose wife and small baby were riding with him. The baby's was lying asleep in the mother's lap. No seat belts were in use. Safety test show that the baby could be crushed between the mother and the dashboard in an accident.

All in all, after stopping about 20 cars, only one driver had her seat belt fastened. In a crash, according to safety officials, a seat belt difference between life and death.

Tawny Gilbert receives a safety award.

Four-ball scramble results

Donnie "Slats" Henderson headed up the winning team in last Saturday's four-ball scramble at the Follow Me golf course, posting a nine-under 63 over the Pine Side golf course. He was joined by teammates Frank Ellis, Bob Gunn and D. R. Sanders.

Second place went to the team of Blalock, Tom Dellinger, Ed Davis and Bill Roark, which also posted a nine-under par 63 but lost in a best hole backup on score cards.

Third place went to the team of Bob Knight, Jim Schoonover, John Gause and Bruce Morgan. They also posted a 63 on a course which played difficult because of emerging winter greens and gusty winds.

Other winners:

Fourth place — Comer, McAllister, Bailey, Hearn.

Fifth place — Beamer, Wetzel, Smothers, Matthews.

Golf pro George Cliff announced that the next big tournament event is scheduled for Wednesday when all active duty and retirees get together for a Veterans Day shootout.

No waiting at clothing issue

The infantry training brigade soldiers line up at the door of the building. Filing through one by one, they present their clothing forms to the civilian behind the counter.

By the time they leave the building through the exit at the other end of the counter, they will have been issued all the uniforms they are entitled to.

The soldiers, in training here, arrive from their reception stations with fatigues, shorts, t-shirts and boots. In their sixth week of training they go through the Initial Clothing Issue Point where Mr. Walter E. Barker and his personnel issue the soldiers their remaining items of clothing.

It's a one stop process according to Barker. Some posts require the soldiers to return two or three days later to pick up their clothes after alterations are done. But not here. Barker said that the necessary alterations are all done while the soldiers wait so they don't have to return and their training isn't further interrupted.

As the men move from station to station along the counter, pants and blouses are measured, marked, and hung on a conveyer. They move slowly through the air and disappear into the sewing room.

They are cut and altered and sent to the pressing room where they are steam pressed and given to the soldiers.

The soldiers try on the uniforms and are inspected by their drill sergeant. According to Barker, if the drill says the uniform doesn't fit right it's remeasured and realtered.

During their eleventh week of training some of these soldiers will line up at the door of the building one more time. This time it's for refitting. The training they go through changes them physically, sometimes as much as five or six inches around the waist.

They file through the door one by one and by the time they leave the building, they have a completely new, measured and altered issue of clothing.

Pvt. 2 Gordon Prue collects his new issue of clothing. Prue, assigned to Company A, 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade was refitted for new uniforms because he went from a 38 to a 32 inch waist during training here.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE. REENLIST.

Masked soldiers fire rifles

Story and photos by Dave Bristow

The lone ranger never let his mask interfere with his shooting. A soldier shouldn't either.

The masked man's mask was simple. Lightweight, and most of the time, hardly noticeable by its wearer.

Troops in infantry training are trying to do as well with their masks. The Army's Nuclear, Biological and Chemical (NBC) protective mask.

The protective mask is a far cry from the simple one the lone ranger wore. But then, he never had to be prepared to deal with an NBC attack.

2nd platoon, Company D, 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, explains why the young soldier is taught to fire with his mask. "By getting them used to firing this way they get an idea of what it would be like if ever they had to wear one in a real life NBC situation. They won't be surprised."

Talking about the difference of shooting with a mask than without Arrington adds, "It's impossible to obtain a normal sight picture with the protective mask on. So we teach them to turn their rifle to the left or to the right to get a correct sight picture."

If the soldier doesn't learn to shoot with his mask on it could be his last ride.

Infantry birthday ball Nov. 21

WASHINGTON -- The annual Infantry Ball, commemorating the 206th anniversary of the Infantry, will be held at the Bolling Air Force Base Officers' Club, Nov. 21. Secretary of the Army, John O. Marsh, Jr., will be the guest speaker.

The event will be hosted by Maj. Gen. Robert L. Wetzel, commandant, U.S. Army Infantry School starting at 6:30 p.m. Guests will include several general officers, both active and retired, and members of Congress and government who served as Infantrymen in previous wars and conflicts.

Invitations were extended to members of the Infantry Hall of Fame (Fort Benning) and the Legion of Valor, a semi-official organization of persons who have been awarded the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross.

The Infantry, which is the oldest branch of the U.S. Army, evolved from pre-Revolutionary War militia units. Formal organization of what was to become the Continental Army took place when Congress, on June 15, 1775, authorized the recruiting of ten Infantry companies from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. The next day, George Washington was appointed the Commander-in-Chief.

The Infantry Ball is open to all Infantry officers, active and retired, and their guests. Activities will include the key-note address by Secretary Marsh, a concert presented by the U.S. Army Band, and a presentation of the poem "I am The Infantry" by members of the Old Guard. Dance music will be provided by the "Summer Wind" orchestra.

Back to basics— Map reading

"Learning to read a map is so basic to an infantryman that he can really never get enough of it, says a primary instructor of map reading and the compass, SFC Charles Hall.

Hall, along with five other instructors, all from Company A of the Infantry Training Group, teach land navigation to all the new soldiers going through infantry training at the two training brigades.

"I just wish we had more time to spend with them. We have one day. I wish we had two at the minimum. An infantry soldier must have a lot more map reading under his belt," adds a concerned Hall.

Land Navigation is taught to the new soldiers at Harmony Church. Their eight hour day there is a full one. There's lots to learn.

The first thing a soldier learns about a map are the five basic colors on a map. Blue, green, brown, red and black. And the five basic terrain features. Hilltop, ridge, valley, saddle and depression.

Soldiers have the most trouble distinguishing between a valley and a ridge. A valley's contour lines form U's and V's going TOWARDS higher ground. In a ridge, the U's and V's point AWAY from higher ground," explains Hall.

After learning the colors and terrain features on a map the soldier is taught a four digit grid coordinate to locate a 1000 meter grid square. The next hour he spends learning a six digit coordinate, which brings the soldier to within one hundred meters of the point he's trying to locate. He will receive a test on this and the five terrain features before he leaves Land Navigation.

"Some people have problems reading right and up on a map," Hall adds. They will read it differently and they're wrong. You must read a map right and up. The six digit grid coordinate also gives some soldiers problems along with the two letter identifier."

The Compass

Land navigation instructors hit this instrument well. Troops learn the components of one, how to read it, how to determine an azimuth in degrees and the way to properly hold one. There is the center hold technique and the eye sighting technique. "We let him use whichever technique he feels best with to determine the azimuth," adds Hall.

After the soldiers are finished with classroom instruction they go the Deese Range where they are broken down into small groups. There they determine what azimuth will take them from one point to another known point. Soldiers go on terrain association exercise where they see what the actual terrain feature looks like and compared to what it is on a map.

"When they leave here they have only the very basics of map reading," Hall emphasizes. Its up to his unit, once he gets there, to improve on the basics. I cannot stress enough the importance of map reading for the infantryman. I wish we had another day to spend with them."

Him; someone had to make this Universe." But that is only one meaning of the word "believe." When a man says, "I believe in my wife," he is saying something different from "I believe that I have a wife." The latter is a verifiable fact, whether he is at home or not (thanks to the good offices of the telephone company). His first statement represents an act of faith. He is saying that he puts his trust in her, he has cast his lot with her. So when a man says, "I believe in God," he is saying, "I have bet my life on Him." I wonder — do you have that kind of belief in God?

Faith is always a way of seeing life possibilities where others cannot see or only see death. As people grope around in the mists and fogs of daily living, we know that a realistic faith can be a direction-finder or radar for us . . . to carry us through to a victory or goal we cannot see at the moment. Yet, it's o.k. to have faith; in fact, it's intelligent to have faith — in God, in The Bible, in eternity, in the Lord Jesus Christ! God bless you as you trust Him!

Land navigation instructor, SFC Charles Hall, insures soldiers know how to read a compass. These soldiers are members of Company D, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Every day, thousands of people pass through the Fort Benning Reservation. Some work here, some are traveling on vacation or business; and others are just looking around, wasting time or looking for trouble.

Since the beginning of time, it's been a known fact that you don't have to look far to become a possible victim, and if you take absolutely no precautionary measures against it, you may become a definite victim. One of the most frequently occurring crimes on Fort Benning that amplifies this thought is the crime of robbery.

From January, 1981 up to Nov. 3, 1981, there have been a total of 40 robberies committed on this installation, five of which occurred between Oct. 30 and Nov. 1. Many of these incidents were due primarily to the lack of precautions taken by the victims to prevent the occurrences.

It is also a fact that many people believe that all robbers look the part portrayed in old movies. That's not so!

In recent years, of course, "the long-haired type" seemed to have replaced the old Al Capone version of the typical crook, but today, with many of the most upstanding citizens in the country taking on a similar appearance, this too can no longer be considered the stereotype for the dishonest.

Col. Earp Provost Marshal

Realizing the fact that many of us feel absolutely safe to a degree on the military installation, we still cannot disregard the fact that we are still subjected to the same wrong doings as the citizens of any other community.

What can we do to solve this problem? There is no 100 percent sure solution; however, there are precautionary measures that can be taken to lessen the possibility of you becoming the next victim. Some of these precautions are:

- Report suspicious personnel and activities to the M.P.'s immediately.
- Don't accept rides or give rides to strangers.
- Avoid walking in dark/unpopulated areas.
- Don't carry large sums of money.
- When in public, never display more money than you anticipate spending.
- Don't display items of high dollar value (jewelry).

Criminals can be very clever in obtaining information about you and your daily routines. Their motto is, "Where there is a will, there is a way". You need to be equally smart in thinking of ways to prevent yourself from becoming a victim. Watch what you say and do; be careful who you talk to; and above all, be particular about where you go.

The military police are here to help you, but we cannot do our job unless you help us, too. Take a bite out of crime.

Veterans day

Story by Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"The combat infantryman ...knows better than anyone the carnage of the battlefield and the tragedies of war."

Caspar W. Weinberger
July 27, 1981

In the 11th hour on the 11th day of the 11th month 1918, two opposing powers came together in a railroad car in the dense forrest of Compaigne, France.

On the one side sat the victorious Allied Powers and on the other sat was the defeated Central Powers. Their quest was the same -- Peace.

The Armistice they would sign that day would mean many things to many people and nations, but the headstones in the silent cemeteries of foreign countries would remain a bitter reminder of war and its tragedies.

Thirty-six years later, in 1954, following another world war and a "Police Action" in Korea, Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States, asked congress that this day be renamed Vetrans Day in memory of all U.S. servicemembers who have fought in all wars.

There was another change to the date of the event that makes its mark upon our countries history. That it be celebrated on the last Sunday of October was tossed about the halls of Congress and was even initiated, but that also changed and the original date was set as the day it would be celebrated.

The United States is not the only country to celebrate this day either. In England and in Canada the day is known as 'Rememberence Day' and it is celebrated on the last Sunday of October.

Vietnam, November 1969

If you love our fried chicken, you'll love, love, love our new chicken sandwich.

You won't find a chicken sandwich like this at a burger place. It's something brand-new from Kentucky Fried Chicken®

The Colonel uses a real breast filet in his chicken sandwich, all white meat. Nothing chopped, rolled or processed. And it's cooked with the Colonel's secret blend of 11 herbs and spices, the same secret that makes our fried chicken the nation's favorite.

So come on in to the Colonel's. You'll love it.

We Do Chicken Right.

'Contact' line aired

By Sean Ford
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Once again WFBG-TV takes you back into the battlefields and playing fields of the past and gives you a look at the Army of today, and tomorrow.

This week on Benning Magazine your host J.C. Hope talks with Susan Stanton about the Fort Benning "Contact" line and what services it offers.

In sports we'll be discussing the Doughboys 30-6 victory over the Alabama State J.V. team and some upcoming events.

The Big Picture, this week looks at the history of the Eighth Army, from World War II to Korea. It will also be looking back on the career of General Douglas MacArthur.

The I&E Sportsreels this week take you back to the years 1957 and 1959, with Winter and Spring sports features and a look at the "Ladies of the Courts".

Enjoy this Veterans' Day with WFBG-TV.

Doughboys trounce Hornets 30-6

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team coming off a tough loss to Auburn bounced back with true Army spirit to thrash the Alabama State University Junior Varsity Hornets 30-6 Sunday.

The game, which boosts the Doughboys record to 3-5 with three games left, was a positive factor for the injury riddled team. "We definitely needed this win under our belt," said Head Coach Ralph Santaliz following his team's surprise victory. "We cut down on our mental mistakes and played aggressive, sound football for four quarters."

It was the Doughboy's game all the way as they pounded out 126 yards on the ground and passed for a healthy 262 yards. Fort Benning raced out to a 30-0 lead before the Hornets managed to get on the scoreboard.

The Doughboys started their scoring in the first quarter when quarterback Leamon Hall hit Elyon Zeigler for a 12-yard touchdown. Kicker Renee Garcia converted all four of Benning's extra point chances. The first quarter ended with the Doughboys on top 7-0.

In the second quarter both teams had trouble effectively moving the ball with the defenses taking over. The Doughboys had a number of defensive standouts, showing their overall defensive capability, while shutting down the Hornet offense. The score still stood at 7-0 at the halftime intermission.

The third quarter saw the Doughboys blow the game wide open with two touchdowns and a safety. Fort Benning's second touchdown of the day came when Hall once again hit steady Elyon Zeigler with a 74-yard strike, putting the Doughboys up 14-0. After an exchange of punts, the Doughboys marched down to Alabama States one-yard line before Hall punched it in. This pushed Benning to a 21-0 lead. The defense once again proved it could score as well as the offense when they tackled the Hornet punter in the end zone for a safety, giving the Doughboys a commanding 23-0 lead going into the fourth quarter.

In the fourth quarter a rare situation turned to gold for the Doughboys when after marching down to the Hornet's three-yard line, Fort Benning fumbled the ball into the end zone when Doughboy offensive tackle Robert Hudlow recovered to score the Doughboy's fourth and final TD on the day. Alabama State, struggling not to be blanked, scored on a 25-yard sideline pattern late in the fourth quarter to make the final score 30-6.

The Doughboy's next game will be against The Citadel Junior Varsity team Sunday at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Under the watchful eyes of the referee, tailback Anthony Hayes carries for short yardage.

Basketball season-will fans be there?

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For all you basketball fans, behold, tis the season to shoot baskets approaching us very quickly. The men's and women's basketball teams have all started their practice sessions at Briant Wells gym.

Personally, basketball has always been one of my favorite sports. It's really nice to be sitting at a game on a chilly winter afternoon watching two teams battle to the ultimate end. One thing about basketball is the fast-paced scoring action. The game can change in a matter of seconds. It's with this enthusiasm that I look forward to covering the Fort Benning post basketball team's.

As a matter of fact, the season gets underway late this month. I'm not sure how much support the basketball team's get on this post, but I hope it draws a number of fans. Old fans, new fans. We need them all.

Speaking of fan support, the Doughboys football team has been playing before some pretty sparse crowds lately. It seems that once the rough times around, the fans abandon the team they should love and support.

In last week's win over Alabama State, the number of people in the bleachers was atrocious. I really couldn't believe that there were more soldiers in uniforms than civilians coming out to watch.

The Doughboys played one of their best games of the season against Alabama State. Defensively and offensively, the team looked like a "bowl" contender. While the offense was pouring on the points from every direction, the defense was nailing down a coffin lid on the Hornets offensive opportunities. It was a real pleasure to watch Fort Benning maul someone for a change.

What do you fans think of a homecoming for the Doughboys? Maybe not this year, mind you, but sometime next year. The Alabama State game would have been perfect. I've asked around and as far as anyone knows, there has never been a homecoming. I think it would not only provide some special moments for some military ladies here, but it would also draw a large crowd to at least one Doughboy game.

Fall horse show set for Sunday

By Edwin L. Kennedy Jr.
Command & Tactics Division

The 59th Annual Fall Horse show will be held on Sunday.

The show will be a Combined Dressage/Hunter Jumper show on French Polo Field, main post adjacent to First Cavalion Road.

French Polo Field is one of the two traditional show sites for the Fort Benning Hunt Club.

The other site, Campbell King Bowl, was built during the early 1920s and named for a former commandant of the Infantry School and reknown horseman, General Campbell King.

The bowl was used many years by the Army to train soldiers in riding skills as well as shows. The area encompassed by the show bowl now lies virtually unused except for the Hunt Club. It remains one of the more beautiful wooded areas on post and was once the location of Easter sunrise services.

French Polo Field and the adjacent Blue Polo Field were used primarily during the 1920s and 1930s by the polo teams of the 24th and 29th Infantry Regiments as well as the 83rd Field Artillery. During the 1940s it also became the site of horse shows held on post.

Surprising enough, even though Fort Benning has been primarily an Infantry post, over 250 horses were once stabled near the end of the regimental quartels where now stands a motor pool and maintenance area. The horses belonged to the transportation school and the units stationed on post.

Officers and first sergeants of infantry units were mounted for many years until the 1930s and their horses were kept in these stables. Mules to pull the carts of the machine gun companies were kept in the stables also.

In 1948 the Army decided to completely motorize and all horses, regrettably for the many soldiers whose companions they were, were sold or destroyed.

One of the few men around who can remember those times is still with the horses he loved so much.

MSG (ret) James Williams still teaches riding to both children and adults at the Hunt Club. As a young soldier in the 24th Infantry Regiment during the 1930s, sergeant Williams taught riding and polo to such people as George S. Patton III. An accomplished rider, sergeant Williams frequently entered horse shows on Regimental Organization Days. During WWII he was sent overseas but returned afterwards to see the last of the horses at Fort Benning.

Today the only vestiges of the horses once the mainstay of the Army's transportation system and backbone of the cavalry and horse drawn field artillery, are those privately owned mounts at the Fort Benning Hunt Club.

Most Army posts have a traditional link to the horse that did so much work and provided the recreation for the soldiers in the units. The Fort Benning Hunt Club, located on Marne Road, provides that traditional link to the horse once so commonplace on Army posts.

The show on French Polo Field is open to the public free of admission. The show begins at 8:30 a.m. and will end approximately 5 p.m. Programs will be available at the Secretary's stand.

Seems as though "Habib Sadig Sazin" (dear friend) knows the hand who feeds him as he smooches up to owner Phyllis Stevenson for another one of her apples. Habib will be one of many horses entered in the horse show on Sunday. (Photo by Dave Bristow)

Back in the 1930s horses were plentiful on post.

Football bowl approaching

By Martha Duncan
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Youth Activities football program is two weeks away from the grand finale and determining the two representatives from each four divisions that will participate in the Mini Bowls later on.

In the Grasshopper Division, the Seahawks defeated the Lavoie Raiders 24-6. The Seahawks' quarterback, Shawn Gentry, scored four touchdowns including a late second quarter kickoff return of 48 yards to pick up the momentum for the Seahawks. The Seahawks' defense was led by Jimmy Mullins, Frankie Figueroa and Kevin Scott. All played a great second half to hold off the Raiders.

The second Grasshopper Division game saw the Eagles play their best game of the season defeating the Raiders 46-22. Jack Goode, Jay Carpenter and Scott Meyers scored the Eagles' combined seven touchdowns. Goode alone ran for four and passed for another. The offense was led by Todd Walker, Scott Meyer, Chris Downs, Oliver Ward and David Allard.

The Eagles' defense was led by Nicholas Hobbs, John Bruntlett, Rodney Cole, Todd Walker, Chris Monds and David Meyers.

In the Termite Division, the Stampeders blanked the Lavoie Cowboys 30-0. Kevin Bailey scored two touchdowns on short runs. Ned Moultrie and George Bailey also scored. There was some outstanding blocking by Chris Weatherford, Richard Mangham, David Galumalemana, Robert Sanders and Spencer Curtis. The defense was led by Ron O'Neal, Michael Obleton, Rivera Williams, Joe Barron and George Smith.

In the Pee Wee Division, the Jets stretched their unbeaten string to 7-0 with a close win over the Outlaws. The game was a defensive struggle with the Jet defense allowing one score, a 70-yard kickoff return in the second half.

The Jets scored when MacIver caught a 23-yard pass from McIntosh and took it to the one-yard line. On the next play, Chris Howard crashed through the middle for the score. The extra points were scored by Robert Smith with off-tackle runs. Kevin Price, Greg Allman, Clarence Catchings and Lenville Majors added their strong talents for the game shut-out.

In the Junior Division, the Panthers suffered a loss to the Atlanta Red Devils.

Youth Activities football action continues tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. at Blue Field.

Atlanta Falcons picked to fall again

Rita Marchetti - "My congratulations to Larry Harrison on his successful picks last week - a job well done.

Don't you all agree that one of the best parts of watching football games are the beer commercials? Where else could you find a gathering of famous folks like John Madden, Buba Smith, Mickey Spillane, Billy Martin and Deacon Jones just to mention a few - all this excitement in 60 seconds.

I can think of only one person who's missing on there. From one beer lover to another HOOOOO!"

Sean Ford - "Well folks, a disappointing week nine for me but no retirement announcements this week either. So let's take a look at this week's interesting games.

Atlanta needs a win this week, but the enthusiasm in the 49er secondary corps, not to mention Fred Dean, should have a notable effect on Bartkowski's passing game. I expect an upset in San Diego. The Bengals should put a distinct downward curve in the Chargers up and down season.

The Bills need it and Ferguson's throwing well so look for Buffalo pride to drive the Cowboys to the Alamo."

Larry Harrison - "Many people are still wondering if San Francisco is for real. It's a must situation for Atlanta, so let's see if the 49ers are actually for real. San Francisco should win due to their homefield advantage.

You can believe what I say, sports fans, because look what we did last week - 13 and one."

Don Rhodes - "Oakland and Cleveland will probably sink out of the playoff picture this weekend. San Francisco should take Atlanta by at least a touchdown."

Tony Adams - "Hi everybody. This week look for Miami and Philadelphia to better their win columns with blowouts over their upstart opponents. Houston should put an oil slick to the defending world champion Raiders hopes for another crown. San Francisco should hurt the Falcons chances for a playoff berth Sunday and Seattle always loses home - right Pittsburgh. Dallas should keep pace with the Eagles with a tight win over the Bills."

Youth Activities soccer drawing to close

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

The soccer season is drawing to a close at Fort Benning. Regular season action ended Saturday, and the quarter finals begin tomorrow at 10:30 a.m.

Last week's Junior Division action saw the Hustlers I team defeat the Titans' Blue Shirts 8-3.

Last week's action in the Grasshopper Division saw the Bulldogs and Chiefs battle to a tie. Playing their defensive positions well were Brian Heard, Sam Lucas, Timmy Langler, Michael Beghtol and David Rittenhouse.

Another defensive match took place between the Rockets and Black Knights with the Rockets edging them by a score of 1-0.

In the Termite Division, the Rowdies bettered the Goldiggers 2-1. Vince Pruitt scored both Rowdies' goals with offensive assistance by Bobby Lenz and Jory Eissinger. Defensive players Robert Quinn, Andy Erickson and Steven Del'Orto were standouts for the Rowdies.

The Stings beat the Warriors 2-1 with Jason Entlich scoring for the Stings as well as a "team" goal. Fine offensive performances were turned in by Alfred Giavelli, Donald Baker, James England and Chris Hazelrigs. Defensive players Sean Thompson, Ryan Valentine, Timothy Melvin, Justin Winter and Dustin Duvall all played well.

In the Junior Division, the Hustlers I team defeated the Titans' Blue Shirts 8-3. The Titans' goals were made by Frank Latorre, Todd Valentine and Denise Kiernan. Tom Langhorne and Jeff Gersh led the defense.

The Hustlers II team outscored the Titans' White Shirts in the second half and won 7-5. Titans' Mark Weems scored three goals, with Jim Connor and Raymond King scoring the other two. Defensive standouts were Mike Saliba, Chris Basilio and Raymond King.

Harmon wins two championships

By Tommy Pool
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won five major shooting championships and established a new national record recently in regional marksmanship competition.

Bonnie Harmon scored back to back victories in the Music City Pistol Championship held in Nashville, Tenn., with an excellent 2,669 out of a possible 2,700 points and claimed the Texas-State Pistol Championship the following week in Fort Worth with 2,668 points. Along the way Harmon scored a 300-24x in .22 caliber competition to erase the old record of 300-23x held by former USAMU shooting great, Hershel Anderson.

Harmon's winning streak was stopped, however, by teammate Roger Willis at the Texas State Fair Championships in Dallas when Willis totaled 2,655-153x to edge Max Barrington at 2,655-140x, while Harmon finished third at 2,654-149x. It was a personal high for both Willis and Barrington in breaking the coveted 2,650 barrier.

In other competition, Jim Reiber posted a 568 to win the Atlantic Southeast Running Target Championship held in Quantico, Va. The same weekend, Greg Strom defeated a field of more than forty competitors that included the top high power rifle shooters in the country during the Mini-Interservice Rifle Championships held in Camp Robinson, Arkansas. Strom gained the lead after a strong finish scoring 198 out of a possible 200 points in the 600-yard event to-total an aggregate of 788 out of 800 possible points. Army Reservist Bruce Woodford placed second at 786 followed by another reservist, Tobias Benton at 785 in third position.

In coming events, eight members of USAMU will compete with the United States Shooting Team during this year's Championship of the Americas to be held in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil from Nov. 5-14. Members of USAMU on the squad are: Rifle — Lones Wigger; Pistol — Erich Buljung, John Kailer; Running Target — Randy Stewart; Shotgun — Alger Mullins, Earnest Neel, Matt Dryke and Dean Clark.

FINANCING-SELLING-INSURING

We can sell, finance and insure a car for you with payments you can afford.
 You must be 18 years old and you must have a good clean credit record (NO CREDIT QUALIFIES). You must also have a valid drivers license and a good service record. At least 15% down is required.

Example: a car priced at $2000 you would need a least $300 DOWN (15%).
 Down payments may vary with rank and/or credit experience. Officers, Officer Candidates & senior NCOs NO MONEY DOWN!

You will be able to check out the car of your choice and test drive it to your satisfaction. All vehicles sold have a current Georgia inspection Sticker.

You will receive FREE of charge a 30 DAY LIMITED WARRANTY! Longer warranties are available at extra cost.

Financing will be arranged thru the following institutions...

Soldiers pay tribute to WWI veteran

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

A World War I Doughboy was honored Tuesday at the Kelley Hill Gymnasium when he served as the reviewing officer for the 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) honors ceremony.

Richard F. Pittman, a Smiths, Ala. resident, reviewed the soldiers of Lt. Col. H. T. Fincher's Infantry battalion, and then presented the battalion with mementoes from his World War I combat service in France.

The "Patriots" ceremony honored the WWI veteran and recalled his duty as an Infantryman in the 58th Infantry of the 4th Division in France in 1918. Then Private Pittman was wounded by enemy artillery shrapnel on Aug. 4, 1918, and was evacuated from the battlefield. Mr. Pittman finally received his Purple Heart from that wound last Jan. 12.

The battalion review was originally scheduled for York Field, but due to the rain, the ceremony was moved to the gymnasium where soldiers and Mr. Pittman's family and friends joined him for the review.

As Mr. Pittman and Lt. Col. Fincher trooped the line inspecting the Patriot soldiers, the 283rd Army Band played "Over There," a WWI tune.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel then presented Mr. Pittman with a letter commemorating this occasion and recalling his service to his country during wartime.

The audience broke into applause when Mr. Pittman accepted the letter from the commanding general.

Command Sgt. Major Walter Pearson then presented Mr. Pittman with a plaque designating the veteran as an honorary sergeant in the regiment.

The battalion commander, Lt. Col. Fincher, made the final presentations to Mr. Pittman. They were a list of all of the fellow soldiers of Mr. Pittman in his regiment who were killed, wounded or missing in action in France. Fincher gave Mr. Pittman a plaque that signified Mr. Pittman being made an honorary "Patriot."

Mr. Pittman then presented the 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry with his WWI mess kit, canteen cup, wound bandage cloth that covered his leg

Incentive to strive for rank arrives

When the United States shifted from the use of the draft to man the Army and to provide an incentive to join the other services it was decided that the newly enlisted soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines should be paid at something more than the bare subsistence rates in effect for recruits at that time.

The lower grades of service people received one-time, large increases in pay while their more experienced noncommissioned officer leaders saw only cost-of-living raises.

As a result, the compensation gap between junior and senior narrowed to the point at which there was barely a $100 difference between the base pay of a private first class and that of a sergeant.

This was not much of an incentive to do the hard work and accept the responsibility that goes with entry into the leadership ranks.

Needless to say, this was a disincentive to stay in uniform and, when it was added to the long hours, family separations and frequent overseas tours being encountered in all the services, was a force toward a too-frequent decision to jump to the civilian world. All the services have been experiencing a hemorrhage of trained NCOs and technicians, most often among those whose military duties had ready civilian application.

The Defense Department and Congress have both recognized this problem but have differed on the way it should be solved.

Now, however, with the help of some suggestions from the Secretary of Defense, Congress has passed a new military pay bill and the President has signed it into law. The agreed solution gives junior enlisted people a raise ranging from ten percent to 13 percent to get them back to a level of comparability with civilian-sector pay.

It then raises the pay of careerists from between 16.5 and 17 percent, thereby creating a truly significant incentive to strive for rank and responsibility.

Although this legislation was formulated with little fanfare, the ease with which the two houses of Congress came to agreement is the best evidence of the concern our lawmakers felt for the most valuable asset our national defense establishment possesses — its devoted career people.

We now must make sure that compensation for valued military service never again falls below comparability with pay in the civilian sector. (AUSA Commentary)

Chaplains seen for wrong reasons

By Richard J. Stiliha
2nd ITB Chaplain

What is the Chaplain for? To make people feel good or guilty? To perform administrative miracles; jumping chain of command? A good luck charm to prevent injury? To provide magic weather for field problems and training?

Chaplains are clergymen in uniform, endorsed by the various churches and faiths to minister to personnel of the armed services, dependents, and other related persons. They have the same training, vocation and background as your clergyman at home. Why do you visit your pastor or priest or rabbi? What kind of help or support do you expect?

Can you imagine an employee of TWA asking his priest to intercede with the president of the company to get him off the San Francisco to London hop because he has a date or doesn't like the chow, or the plane Captain doesn't like him? Contracts between corporations and employees are not negotiated with benefit of clergy. Nor are restricting contracts.

There are contracts with which your chaplains can be expected to help you to help yourself. One is your contract with yourself. This contract has to do with values. What do you revere, admire, respect, hold dear? What worth do you place on yourself and your actions? Is God important to you, or other people, or church, or home, or community, or country? How about honesty and trust. We each have a system of values. We make contracts with ourselves, with our parents, with each other and with God. The chaplain can be expected to help you look at those contracts.

The marriage contract is a most important one. People enter it for many reasons and with many expectations. Sooner or later these must be examined very seriously. For two people to share a room or even a car, or a love, or a family, requires much communication and a lot of understanding. The chaplain is trained in both of these resources.

You will receive the most benefit from the chaplain if you remember who they are and why they are here. Forget about using him to buck the chain of command. Think more about mending or understanding some of your contracts - then you can expect your chaplain to be of maximum assistance.

Unlucky Friday 13th returns

Story by Rick Kiernan
Infantry Magazine

Get out those rabbit feet! Fix that broken mirror (Good luck)! Watch out for that black cat under that ladder! Today's your day if you're superstitious! mortal fear of the arrival of the 13th day of any month falling on a Friday.

The reasons for this superstition are many. First, it must be considered that it is a "double" superstition. This means that historically, Friday is not the luckiest day of the week, and numerically speaking, you can do a lot better than choosing "13" for your battle cry! So it seems reasonable to cringe when the phenomena cross on the calendar.

The Number 13

Let's look first at the intrigue which surrounds the number "13" since historically it pre-dates the impact that Friday has had on significant events and omens of bad luck.

The fears of the number is at least 2000 years old. The common theory to explain the origin of the superstition is that there were thirteen present at the Last Supper, Judas being the "odd man out." H. G. Wells takes it back to the New Stone Age, when man, beginning to count, noted the triangularity of the three, the squareness of four and the fact that some quantities could be easily divided so easily, came to look upon 13 as an incorrigible number. Dislike grew into fear, and fear became frozen in superstition. Wells may have had a point but the origin of this, as with most customs, goes far back into historical obscurity. That it is older than Christianity, is suggested by several facts.

Fear of the figure is found in Norse mythology. It stems from the fable about a banquet held in Valhalla, to which 12 gods had been invited. But Loki, the spirit of strife and evil, gate-crashed, making the number 13 and as a result Balder, the favorite of the gods was killed.

Additionally, the Turks so dislike and fear the number, that the word has been eliminated from their vocabulary. In France you can never live in a house of that number. It just does not exist. Italian lotteries never use the number either. Even in America, many office buildings skip the number when designating floors and apartments. After No. 12 follows "12a" or no floor designation and then immediately No. 14. (How many athletes have you seen the number "13" on their backs? Or how many race cars sport those digits for that matter?)

Man, alone among all animals, is able to count. Every circus boasts of its educated animals (ever see Trigger use his hoof?) but this too is only possible through a human trainer. There is really nothing mysterious about numbers.

They are only arbitrary symbols whereby we are able to express certain actions and make discriminations in counting and measuring.

Our ancestors made general use of both fingers and toes in working out their arithmetic problems -- usually in blocks of five or ten. This might account for their present popularity in binary and decimal systems.

There is less superstitious and more rational explanation which says that statistical surveys show insurance companies that of any random group of thirteen persons, one will die within less than twelve months.

Evidently, our own forefathers were not impressed nor inhibited by the "13" mystique. On the Great Seal of the United States there are 13 stars and 13 bars; an eagle, with 13 feathers in its tail, hold in its left claw 13 arrows, and its right an olive branch bearing 13 leaves and 13 olives; and the motto, of 13 letters -- "E Pluribus Unum."

What About Friday?

Paganism considered Friday the luckiest day of the week. It was ruled by the planet Venus, whose influence was thought to be most fortunate.

Originally named in honor of Freya, Goddess of Love, it was a lucky day for newlyweds. But for Christians, the day has always had gloomy implications according to Old and New Testament references.

It was on a Friday that Adam and Eve were said to have eaten of the forbidden fruit, thus bringing sin into the world. They also died on a Friday. Jesus was crucified on a Friday and since that time, every Friday has become a memorial of that "first" Good Friday.

For centuries, sailors refused to leave port on a Friday and the reluctance may be traced to origins within the British Admiralty. Determined to meet the superstition "head on", the keel of a new British vessel was laid on a Friday, and she was named H.M.S. Friday, she was launched on a Friday, and on her first voyage she was commanded by Captain James Friday. Everything went well to this point.

The ship sailed. Nothing has since been heard of her or her crew for over a hundred years!

To add insult to injury, any amateur historian need only look to some "other" Fridays not so long ago. Abraham Lincoln died on Good Friday 1865.

If you have any particular superstitions, do not feel embarrassed. You are not alone. Recently, a survey revealed that only 26 percent of the Harvard faculty could truthfully state that they were entirely without superstition about anything. As with any long-held custom or tradition, superstition is reinforced each time an event supports the folklore. Good luck!

CFC goal surpassed

As of Nov. 10, Combined Federal Campaign contributions have gone over $390,000 and are over the 100 percent mark of the $375,000.

"This is the earliest that we have reached our goal," commented Mr. Norm Williamson, spokesman for the CFC drive. "Also all of the results aren't in yet and won't be for a while to come."

"The final results of the contributions need to be tallied and audited and then in about a month or two we'll have the final count," he said.

All campaign personnel, commanders, project officers and key persons are urged to insure that all contributions are turned in and that all personnel have been afforded the opportunity to contribute.

Steady hands

If you look close you will see the face of the cat being administered the anesthesia. The delicate surgery is performed by Capt. Robert M. May, veterinarian, and assisted by animal care specialist Sp4 Rock A. Westfall.

Veterinary activity

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A box is dumped on the doorstep of the veterinary clinic. Its contents a mystery.

A note attached reads, "We are only four weeks old. Can you find us a home?" One of six animal care specialists at the clinic opens the cardboard box. Seven weary travelers inside scratch and whine, trying to get out.

The clinic's impounding facility has seven more mouths to feed. This time the orphans are bulldog-terrier mixed pups — puppies abandoned because someone did not care.

Dumped off

"Unfortunately puppies dumped off like this is not uncommon," says the NCOIC of the animal disease prevention and control section of the clinic, SSgt. Terrance Lamb. "Lots of times the MPs will find a box of puppies dumped at one of the ranges. It's tragic. If no one claims them or adopts them before the fourth working day we're the ones who have to put them to sleep. And many of these pups are healthy too, but putting them to sleep is a lot more human than letting them run wild."

Finding people to adopt animals is a continuing battle for the clinic. The percentage of dogs put to sleep at the impounding facility is high, as opposed to the number adopted or reclaimed by their owners.

"We probably put to sleep around 60 percent. That could be higher. The worst part of our job is having to put them to sleep. Especially the puppies," he sadly relates.

The variety of dogs at the impounding facility (behind the veterinary clinic) is endless. "We get in a lot of what I call Benji dogs," he smiles. "Really cute dogs. Then we also get in a lot of puppies and German shepherds. Some are really beautiful animals. Some so nice you would be surprised."

Adopting a dog or cat is easy. Just pick out the one you want and give it a good home. Adoption hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five days a week. The cost is around eight or nine dollars, depending upon the age of the animal and what shots are needed. The rabies shot is mandatory. A check for heart worms is done before the animal leaves.

The only surgery the veterinary clinic is authorized to perform is surgery on military working dogs. Stray animals can be neutered prior to adoption at the request of adopting persons. The cost of neutering is $15.00. It is possible to have your dog or cat examined by one of the animal care specialists but you must have an appointment. "If we can handle seeing your dog we will," Lamb adds. "We don't like turning people away. We do what we can for the animal. We don't have medical equipment to treat your dog if he gets hit by a car. We can look at him and stabilize him. If we can't do for the dog we will have to refer you to off post."

Vet food inspectors

The animal control branch is only part of what the veterinary agency does. They also provide food inspection specialists who inspect all the food on post.

SFC Micheal Teppig is the NCOIC of the food inspection branch of the Veterinary Agency. "We provide food inspectors for the Troop Issue Subsistence Activity and the commissary who have the job of randomly inspecting all the food which comes on Fort Benning.

"This includes not only the food the commissary gets in but the food that goes to all the dining facilities and AAFES as well." He is quick to point out that "the key here is food wholesomeness."

The food inspection specialists check for wholesomeness, contract requirements and sanitation. They weigh beef, check the fat requirements and insure dairy products are fresh.

Produce is checked, insuring insect infestation is not there. Teppig adds, "This is all done to protect the health and welfare of troops and also protect the financial interest of the government."

In addition to Benning requirements, veterinary food inspectors make sanitary inspections of egg plants, dairies and bakeries in their area of responsibility which covers 33 counties in West central and South Georgia and East central Alabama.

Candeling

Sp5 Barbara Nickerson, using a candeling light, checks the inside of an egg for possible spots. This is the way eggs are graded. She is the NCOIC of Cold Storage.

Sp4 Dick White holds a German Shepherd mixed dog so SSgt. Terrance Lamb can give him a distemper shot.

Pittman

wound, his Infantry campaign hat cord, several photos of him as a private in 1918, his overseas cap, the silver wound button, his dog tags, his 4th Division patch, his discharge certificate and his WWI Victory Medal. These mementoes will be known as the Pittman Collection, and will be the foundation for the Patriots' museum.

Lt. Col. Fincher assured Mr. Pittman that the collection will be displayed and safeguarded for future soldiers.

"After a lapse of more than six decades," said Fincher, "it gives us great pleasure to welcome you back to your regiment. Welcome home (to the 58th Infantry)."

Fincher went on to say that standing before Mr. Pittman was the ultimate weapon, the Infantryman was his rifle and bayonet.

Mr. Pittman's remarks were short but to the point. "Gen. Wetzel and men of the 58th Infantry. Today is a proud day for me," said Mr. Pittman. "I am happy to be back with my regiment. I was proud to serve my country as a soldier. Thank you all for joining me today."

Heat coming back on Heat is on the way.

Tuesday was the official opening of the 1982 heating season.

Jim Willis of the facility engineers said that it's a big job turning on the heat. "The engineers have begun starting up the numerous heating systems on post. This is a big job, and it will take a little while before all the heating units are turned on. We're asking folks to please be patient."

Willis added, You are reminded that thermostat are not to be set higher than 65 degrees farenheit in accordance with the United States Army Infantry Regulation 11-27.

"During weather below 30 degrees farenheit family housing occupants and troop units are requested to insulate faucets outside or open them up to a fast drip. This will prevent damage to the plumbing," he concluded.

Over the coming holidays unoccupied barracks will have thermostats set on the lowest temperature that will protect them from freeze damage.

Reminder to commanders

Before cold weather arrives, commanders and directors should consolidate space and winterize unoccupied buildings with a winterization request on DA Form 4283. They should also make full use of their energy conservation officers and conservation and training (CAT) teams to reduce consumption of energy.

Veterans honored Sunday

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

The men and women who served the United States in time of war and in time of peace were honored Sunday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center during its "Tribute to Veterans."

The Veterans Day program saluted the more than 36 million service members who wore the uniform of the Armed Forces of the United States during wartime since this century began.

Mrs. Mary Cunningham, Director of the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, welcomed the veterans and their families to the patriotic affair.

Guest speaker for the program was Pete Wheeler, Commissioner of Georgia Veterans Services in Atlanta. Wheeler remarked that the veterans served their government because "there was a job to be done."

He went on to say "the United States remains a free country this afternoon because of veterans who made the sacrifice. We pay tribute to all who defended our country in time of war."

Wheeler recalled the valor, bravery and sacrifices of those who served the United States beginning with the Revolutionary War.

"Our country fights to protect and preserve freedom," said Wheeler. "The people in uniform protect us against enemies' invasion."

In addition to the remarks by Wheeler, the Veterans Day program included a stirring patriotic medley by Cy Dietrich, Choirmaster of the Infantry Center Chapel.

The 283rd Army Band, under the direction of Sgt. 1st Class John Lewis, presented "Stars and Stripes Forever," "This is My Country" and "You're a Grand Old Flag."

Delivering the invocation and benediction was Chaplain (Col.) Charles Hill from the Infantry Center Chapel.

Command Sgt. Major Tommie L. Goggins from the 197th Infantry Brigade led the veterans, soldiers and families in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 197th provided the color guard.

Hitchhiking danger

A familiar sight along Fort Benning's roadways is a soldier walking along the shoulder of the road waving his thumb at every passing car.

The hitchhiker may unknowingly be gambling his possessions and even his life in accepting a ride from a stranger.

By trying to save the amount of bus or taxi fare, the hitchhiker has placed himself in a position to lose something of far more value than money. Ask yourself if it's really worth it.

Crimes of violence are increasing daily and many of these crimes being with a seemingly innocent hitchhiking incident. For instance, in the last three months, Fort Benning has experienced 19 of these crimes of violence, five of which were directly related to hitchhiking or accepting rides from strangers. Of these five incidents, three were armed robberies and two were robberies.

Col. Earp
Provost Marshal

AR 210-10 specifically prohibits hitchhiking on military reservations. This provision is for your protection. The government is not obligated to compensate you for any loss suffered while hitchhiking on post.

If you are approached by a motorist offering an unwanted ride, you should take the following steps:

- Decline the ride.
- Try to get a description of the person and the vehicle.
- Notice the license number.
- Report the incident to the military police as soon as possible.

Hitchhiking can be dangerous whether you are the hitchhiker or the motorist offering a ride to a stranger along the road. Once you pick up a hitchhiker you become prey to the same possible consequences as a hitchhiker. Remember, hitchhiking is a dangerous pastime — don't get involved with it.

Obey the law — protect yourself and your possessions. Again, I remind you that the military police are always here to assist you. Play it safe — don't hitchhike.

Firearms law Puerto Rico

Shipments of firearms to Puerto Rico

All servicemembers in receipt of assignment orders or anticipate assignment to Puerto Rico are advised that Puerto Rico has a "Weapons Law" which provides that the mere possession of a firearm without a license issued by the Chief of Police of Puerto Rico is a crime punishable as a misdemeanor.

Also, the bearing, carrying or transporting of a firearm without a second license issued by a Judge of a Superior Court of Puerto Rico is a crime punishable as a felony.

If a firearm is received in Puerto Rico in a shipment of unaccompanied baggage or household goods, the owner must immediately deposit the weapon at the nearest police station. The firearm cannot be retrieved until proper authorization to possess the weapon is granted.

To facilitate identification of shipments including firearms, the descriptive inventory and other shipping documents should list such items specifically. The servicemember must advise the personal property counselor at the time of application that a firearm will be included in the shipment.

Riders and their horses brought new life to French Field Sunday as they participated in equestrian competition during the Fall Horse Show here.

Entrants cantered, walked, and jumped with their horses while judges scored the riders horsemanship and the horses performance.

Included in one special class, the William's Class, and two divisions, the Dressage Division and the Hunter/Jumper Division, were 25 different categories of competition.

The Williams' class competition held at the Hunt Club, was for the club's students who use Hunt Club rental horses. The Dressage Division and the Hunter/Jumper Division were open to non-military riders and drew entrants from around Georgia and Alabama.

Boy Scouts hold fall camporee

Story and photos by Debbi Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning District Boy Scouts spent a fun-filled weekend learning different camping woodskills and found out that teamwork is all about during the Fall Camporee at Specker Stream Crossing near the Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

Seven Boy Scout Troops and three Cub Scout Packs spent three days in the wilderness camping.

"The camporee get us ready for summer camp and we get a chance to compete against each other," said Steve Latoree, patrol leader of Troop 27.

Each of the troops and packs at the Camporee were competing to be the honor patrol, by trying to win events like, making a log chopping block, knot tying, and wood chopping contest. Also, the boy's camps were inspected for cleanliness of the area, orderliness of their tent layout, food storage and preparation and cleanliness of their cooking utensils.

The winners were announced Sunday. The winners of the honor patrols are Danny Kruger, Don Rogan and Paul Nichols of Troop 27 and Kevin Smith, Carols Alexander, Thaddis Chapman and Andrea Bennett of Troop 238. And a special award was presented to Tim Walker, Danny Rinke and James Schulz of Leadership Corp Troop 27.

Saturday night, everyone got together around the campfire at the Amphitheater to perform different skits. One of the highlights were the Order of the Arrow, an Indian dance demonstration team, they put on a show and did various dances and competed against each other. The winners of the dance competition were Jay Howard of Troop 237 and Collins Martin of Troop 135.

The Arrow of Light was presented to Danny Donnellan, Kraig Shepard, Mike Ressack and Marcus Johnson. The Arrow Light is when a Webelo crosses over to the Boy Scouts.

The National Boy Scout Association Headquarters announced last month that Danny Kruger of Troop 27 Eagle award was approved. In recognition of the award, J.R. Addington, Fort Benning executive director of Boy Scouts, presented Kruger, with a Eagle bolo and Scoutmaster, Sgt. Rick Forlines presented him with a neckerchief.

"Information on Danny's Eagle Court of Order will be announced next week," said Addington.

Boy Scout Troop 27 and Cub Scout pack 27, afterwards had a party to celebrate Danny's award. They had a cake with a Boy Scout Association Eagle on it, that was made by the Fort Benning Cook School.

Last month Col. Bobby J. Harris, Fort Benning Chief of Staff, signed a paper granting the Boy Scout a camp at Specker Stream Crossing, an old training site by Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

Kraig Greenly (center) and James Jenkins of Troop 276 tie the finishing knots on the log chopping block. While, John Spaugle, Billy Edwards and Jeff Proffitt watch.

AAFES to take over Clothing Sales Store

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) will assume management responsibility for the Military Clothing Sales Store (MCSS) on Nov. 19, Mr. Jack E. Heagle, Fort Benning exchange manager, announced.

The action is part of a worldwide program which will see AAFES operating all Army and Air Force MCSS by late 1981.

Under the new concept, Fort Benning military personnel will be able to compare Defense Personnel Support Center (DPSC) "issue-type" clothing with commercially-procured items located in the AAFES Bookstore, building 285 and select those best for them.

"AAFES operation of the stores will not cause increased sell prices to the military customer," Mr. Heagle assured. The Army will reimburse AAFES the costs necessary to operate the clothing stores, similar to the fee paid AAFES by the Air Force to run their stores since 1976.

Clothing sales stores receive "issue-type" military clothing and selected items of organizational equipment such as canteens and pile caps through supply channels and issue or sell these at standard stock fund prices. This procedure will continue.

The DPSC, which provides these items, adjusts prices annually on Oct. 1, the start of their Fiscal Year. These price changes take place every year and have no connection with the AAFES management of the stores.

"We don't control the prices of DPSC merchandize," Mr. Heagle said.

"DDPSC tells us what we will sell their merchandise for and that's what the customer pays."

The one-stop military clothing sales store at Fort Benning is located in building 1698. Hours of operation will be:

Mon-Tues-Thurs-Fri..... 1000-1800
Wed..... 1200-2000

Soldiers receiving SQT training

Story and photos by Raymond Cauthen

197th Public Affairs Office

Soldiers from Company C, 3rd Battalion 7th Infantry of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate), are now receiving monthly SQT training with the M-60 machine gun that will increase the combat effectiveness of the "Cottonbalers."

"The soldiers were not getting this training before," said Co. C Commander, Capt. Walter Schrepel. "This is important training for infantry soldiers because the M-60 is one of the most important weapons for an infantry unit. The gunners must have their stuff together."

Schrepel has recently taken over the position of company commander.

The monthly training will consist of pre-operation checks, preparation range cards and range estimation and use of the Traversing and Elevation mechanism.

"The Traversing and Elevation mechanism gives the gunner more accuracy because it stabilizes the machine gun," said Schrepel. "The mechanism is attached to the butt of the M-60 as well as to the traversing bar of the tripod the M-60 is mounted on. This allows the machine gun to fire left or right while the barrel stays at the same elevation. The elevation is adjusted by turning an elevation knob on the mechanism. The Traversing and Elevation mechanism is most useful while visibility is limited, said Schrepel.

With a maximum effective range of 1,100 meters, the M-60 machine gun gives the infantry soldier the fire power needed to engage enemy soldiers at a great distance. "The T and E mechanism helps keep the machine gun on target," said Schrepel. "Each member of the three-man gun crew must be knowledgeable about the M-60, and that is what this training is all about."

A block of instruction before actual hands-on training.

Lt. Gen. Ross visits Benning

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

Lt. Gen. M. Collier Ross, Deputy Commander of the United States Army Forces Command, (FORSCOM) Fort McPherson, Ga., visited FORSCOM units on Fort Benning Tuesday.

The purpose of his one-day visit was to view training conducted by the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) and 36th Engineer Group.

Lt. Gen. Ross spent most of the day meeting soldiers conducting training in the field. The general's questions ranged from their personal history and quality of life for themselves and families to rifle marksmanship and map reading.

FORSCOM units on post have dual missions; one to be prepared for combat as well as support the Infantry Center.

Lt. Gen. Ross speaks with soldiers under a camouflage net.

Col. Carmen J. Cavezza, brigade commander, accompanied Lt. Gen. Ross on his tour of the brigade area.

It's easy to see why people love to browse or buy at the art boutique shop on Ingersoll Street. Items in the shop are not manufactured, but hand made. For this reason they have a personal touch.

The boutique shop is called "The Talent Tree" and is loaded with creative arts and crafts. It's a good place to find Christmas presents that are unique. Some are one of a kind.

Once you step inside the treat begins. A Christmas tree is decorated with creative ornaments that are truly different. A clothes pin is made into a reindeer, with a red nose and wide open eyes. There are also crocheted rocking horses hanging from the tree.

Debi Erickson, who teaches how to make soft sculptured dolls at Columbus College, has several of her sculptured dolls for sale, and another lady is selling her soft Teddy bears as well.

Jeanette Parish, manager for the Talent Tree, says, "A lot of people off post do not realize we are open to the public and they don't need a military I.D. card to purchase anything. You only need an I.D. card for consignments."

"I think more people from off post would come here if they knew this," She continued.

"Some soldiers have their work for sale here. They have talent and its a way for them to make extra money. Everything you see here is hand made. That's a requirement."

Some unusual items at the boutique shop are a bag of Idaho potatoes (with faces painted on them). Stained glass colored windows, (one with crossed infantry rifles) a brass fire extinguisher and a ceramic Georgia Bulldog.

The Talent Tree receives 15 percent of every item sold. Profits go to a welfare fund for different projects. Scholarships for soldiers is an example of how the money is used.

The shop is open on Tuesday and

Some of the most intriguing items are the porcelain dolls.

Thursday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Consignments are on Wednesdays only, 10 a.m. until 12 p.m. The Talent Tree will be open two more Saturdays this month. Tomorrow from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. and next Saturday, same hours.

In December it will be open two Saturdays, Dec. 5 and 12. The last day open for sales this year will be Dec. 17.

The Talent Tree is located to the right of the Class VI store on Ingersoll Street, Main Post.

Leave Earning Statement

WASHINGTON — Each soldier's leave and earnings statement (LES) for the end of October 1981 had a couple of informative attachments. Army finance officials say the attachments offer easy reference on the new pay changes.

The first, a wallet-sized card called USAFAC Label 28, lists the base pay tables for all grades, as well as the scales for Basic Allowance for Quarters and Basic Allowance for Subsistence.

The other attachment is a sheet detailing the extent of change in those and in other categories of pay. It also provides a formula for determining the degree of rate decrease in the federal withholding tax. (ARNews)

Beware of the unexpected from children.

I don't ride my bike...

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that over 400,000 persons suffer bicycle related injuries serious enough to require hospital emergency room treatment each year. About 1,100 persons die each year from these injuries. These injuries and deaths are not restricted to children; in fact, since the energy crisis has increased the number of adults on two wheels instead of four, the accidents occur as frequently to adults as children.

If you drive on or off post during rush hour you are certainly aware of the potential danger of mixing bicycles and automobiles. If you are an auto driver you probably feel that bicycles are a nuisance which should not be allowed on the road; if you are a bicyclist you probably feel auto drivers are dangerous and inconsiderate. Both of these viewpoints, unfortunately, are valid in many situations. Since it is not feasible or economically possible to build an entire separate network of bike paths to parallel all the roads, cyclists and motorists will continue to share the roadways and must make every effort to do so safely.

Let's first explore the motorist's reasons for feeling bicycles are a nuisance. Bicyclists are not licensed nor are they tested for ability and judgement as are auto drivers; they rarely receive traffic tickets for reckless driving nor do they have their driving privileges revoked for unsafe cycling. Many bicyclists run stop signs, ride on the wrong side of the road, dart out from driveways, fail to give signals and do many other things on the road which both break the laws and create a hazard to themselves and others. This problem is not restricted to children who ride bicycles, many adults who should know better seem to feel that when on a bicycle they are out of the reach of the law. Parents should set the example for children.

Combine disregard for traffic laws with the instability of bicycles and their low visibility and you have a combination almost certain to result in tragedy. In order to avoid this outcome, cyclists must obey all traffic laws; children who are unable to understand these laws should not be allowed to ride on the roads. Since bicycles are small in comparison to cars, cyclists should make themselves more visible through use of lights at night and a bright colored safety flag on a long pole during the day. All riders should practice off the road until they are confident on the bike in all situations, and are thoroughly familiar with traffic laws.

On the other side of the coin, even though 80 percent of auto-bicycle accidents are caused by bicycle riders disregarding traffic rules, much of the burden of protecting bicycle riders rests on the automobile driver. Most of the accidents could have been prevented if the motorist had been aware of the cyclist and knew his limitations, and had been prepared for the unexpected from the cyclist. As a motorist you must be prepared to yield the right of way to the cyclist even if he or she is not legally entitled to it.

Many car-bike accidents occur at intersec-

Crossing the street safely.

Safety: Everybody Everyone

Don't crowd bicycles.

tions due to low visibility, lack of signaling, or unsteady operations of the bicycle while signaling. Be extra cautious and give the cyclist all the room he or she needs. When turning right, make sure you don't catch a cyclist between your car and the curb. When passing a cyclist allow plenty of room to the side to compensate for the wobbly zigzag course which is frequently seen on Fort Benning's roads.

It doesn't take much to wipe out a cyclist, a slight bump or sideswipe can send one to the hospital. If you are still annoyed by cyclists, try riding a bicycle for a change. It should help make you an even safer motorist by showing you how the other half lives - how dangerous it can be for the cyclist out there on the other side of the bumper.

A fi

ly's business 's concern

Nighttime jogging can be a safety hazard.

..Or jog on your car--

Everyone who drives a vehicle on Fort Benning is aware of the hazard created when joggers and vehicles compete for the same roadway, especially during the time of limited visibility such as dawn, dusk and during inclement weather. This is not only a local problem, as evidenced by the deaths and injuries of 109,400 pedestrians, nationwide during 1980, many of who were runners, but it is a problem we can solve at the local level. The solution to this problem rests squarely on the shoulders of both the runners and the vehicle operators!

Runners must be aware of the hazards they create for themselves and for the motorists, and should take appropriate actions to reduce the chance of an accident. They should run on tracks or on the left shoulder of the road facing the flow of traffic when feasible and should always be aware of the traffic around them. They should wear bright clothing during the day and, during hours of limited visibility wear reflectorized clothing and carry a light. Joggers should always be prepared to yield the roadway to a vehicle if necessary, for the outcome of a vehicle/pedestrian accident can have only one result - injury to the pedestrian.

Motorists bear even more responsibility for prevention of jogger-vehicle accidents because the jogger is not encased in a metal shell to shield him from vehicles or the hard pavement; even a slight bump or sideswipe by a vehicle can send him to the hospital. As a driver you must expect the unexpected from joggers. Even if you don't see one, expect a jogger to appear anywhere, anytime. Drive with the assumption that the runner will violate your right of way, and you must be prepped to take evasive action to avoid a collision with one. Be especially cautious during the early morning and evening when large numbers of runners take to the roads and are frequently almost impossible to see until you are right on top of them. Don't play 'chicken' with joggers; if you have any doubt that the jogger will get off the roadway and out of your path in time - slow down and stop if necessary to avoid an accident. If you don't yield it may be true that you may walk away uninjured from the accident but you will walk away with a load of guilt to carry the rest of your life and with possible unpleasant legal consequences.

The conflict between joggers and vehicles on the roads at Fort Benning can be solved but it will require positive action by both motorists and joggers. Do your part, today and everyday.

Jog off to the side of the on-coming traffic lane.

Joggers sometimes fail to yield the right-of-way when they should.

Jogging in the street with the flow of traffic is dangerous.

Air Force General goes Airborne

When 217 members of Airborne Class 82-2 made their final graduation jump Oct. 29, their ranks included a general — a U.S. Air Force general.

Brigadier General William H. "Bill" Constantine, 47, was the first man out of the large C-141 jet transport as it made its first pass at 1,500 feet above Fort Benning's Fryar Field. In just a matter of minutes he was on the ground and after securing his parachute, joined his friend and fellow airborne student, Lt. Col. Rolf Halama, 46, the German Liaison Officer at Benning, for the long walk across the drop zone to the graduation site. Both men, being in their mid-forties, are well past the age of the average student taking airborne training.

Constantine's primary reason for attending airborne school was due to his association with the airlift business. He is Vice-Commander of the 22nd Air Force Military Airlift Command (MAC) at Travis AFB, Calif. He told reporters shortly after his jump that his unit does a lot of work with the airborne and he wanted to learn more about it. "When they (airborne students) see my wings," he said, "they'll know I know about their jobs."

Instructors Rufus Jordan and Jerome Loving, both sergeants first class, presented Constantine with his airborne wings and graduation certificate while Lt. Col. Halama's wife, Angelica, pinned him.

The Air Force general, on completing the course, termed it "... the most exciting experience I've ever had." And, he indicated he would be talking with his superiors in the not too distant future about attending Benning's Ranger Course.

Parachuting Hall of Fame opening

The formal opening of the Hall of Fame of Parachuting on Nov. 21 at Lake Elsinore, Calif. promises to be one of the major public spectacles in Southern California.

Mr. Jacques-Andre Istel, Chairman of the Board of Trustees reports that the United States Army, Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force have each formally committed a Band and an Honor Guard.

Senior American and foreign dignitaries will attend the ceremony. Permanent exhibits for the Hall of Fame have already been received from Austria, Australia, France, India, Jordan, Portugal, Singapore and Switzerland. Others are on the way from Great Britain, Greece and Yugoslavia.

The U.S. Army delegation will be led by the senior Army officer on the West Coast, Lt. General David E. Grange, USA, who commands the United States Sixth Army.

The invocation will be given by the Reverend George B. Wood who, as a chaplain of the 82nd Airborne, parachuted on D-Day in World War II.

The all-day festivities will culminate in a brief and moving formal ceremony at 4 p.m. when each of the Armed Forces Honor Guards and Bands will salute parachutists who died in the service of their country.

Parachutists of other countries will also be honored. Officers of countries who have contributed to the history of parachuting will present their countrymen and honor their memory.

A formal reception at Laguna Federal Savings will follow from 5-8 p.m., and a dance from 8 to midnight. Free entertainment will start at 11:00 a.m. with an Army Airborne Parachute Drop and will continue all day with four military band concerts, exhibition dancing and various displays. A Chamber of Commerce steak barbeque will feature drops every thirty minutes by champion parachutists. All California is invited to this one-time historic occasion.

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that contributions to the Hall of Fame of Parachuting are tax deductible.

Unemployment compensation not automatic

Soldiers leaving the Army are no longer automatically eligible to receive state unemployment compensation. Army officials say claims for benefits are now based on the reason for separation the type of discharge a soldier receives.

A law signed by the President in August disqualifies soldiers who resign, voluntarily leave the military after completing the service contract, or are released or discharged "for cause". It is retroactive to include soldiers separating since July 1.

States are now determining a soldier's eligibility for unemployment compensation on a case-by-case basis, if a question about eligibility exists. Some state agencies have been more lenient than others in awarding the benefits to former servicemembers, officials report.

Generally, under the new law, a soldier who is eligible to reenlist, but who leaves the military voluntarily after completing the service contract, no longer may receive unemployment compensation.

Officials suggest soldiers check with their state employment agencies to make sure of their eligibility for the benefits. Separation transfer points are also advising soldiers that they may continue to apply for unemployment benefits, but state agencies have the final determination on eligibility.

sorted sandwich cremes and carmel delites (formerly sumores).

In case you miss placing your pre-order, the troops will also have direct sales at cookie booths throughout the community, Jan. 15-31, 1982.

To launch the 'direct sales', the second annual "Cookie Fun Run '82" will be held Jan. 9, 1982, at Weracoba Park (Lakebottom) in Columbus, Ga. The 'Run' will consist of a 1.5 mile, 5 mile and a handicap participation race. Entry forms will be made available in December.

The cookie sale profits Girl Scouts with the opportunity to earn money for troop, council or national activities.

Book Fair

Dexter School will have a book fair Thursday from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m., as part of National Children's Book Week. The book fair will be located in the cafeteria. For more information call 545-3424.

Art contest and exhibition

The 13th annual Amateur Art Contest and Exhibition will be held at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Nov. 21 and 22 starting at noon. The public is invited to look at the artwork on display.

Puppet show

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center, building 9079, will present the Vagabond Marionettes performance of "Hansel and Gretel" Sunday at 2 p.m.

The Vagabond Marionettes is one of America's most outstanding puppet theaters; their presentations are loved by young and old.

Admission is free and seats are on a first come, first served basis.

Training holiday

Friday, Nov. 27, has been declared a training holiday for military personnel. However, mission personnel will remain on duty. A liberal leave approval policy should be applied in the event civilian employees desire to take annual leave on this day.

Fine Arts

COLUMBUS, Ga. - The Fine Arts Department of the W.C. Bradley Memorial Library has recently increased its schedule of movies presented weekly at the Library. The department has added a weekend showing to its list of events offered to the public. On alternate Saturdays and Sundays, they will be showing adult and child-oriented films. These films are being funded by the Georgia M. Wilkins Library Trust Fund.

The expanded film schedule will be in full swing by January, but the Fine Arts Department has already begun showing occasional weekend films, most recently "The Wiz" starring Diana Ross. Coming up this month, will be such classics as Disney's "Incredible Journey," "Mary Poppins" and "Kidnapped". In addition to the weekend specials, the Bradley Library will continue the Thursday classics at 1:30 and 7 p.m.

Outdoor Camping Program

COLUMBUS, Ga. - The Continuing Education Division and the Recreation Department at Columbus College is sponsoring a Southeastern Outdoor Camping Program. Skidway Island will be the setting of the Nov. 21 and 22 weekend escape.

Just south of Savannah, this beautiful island is rich with both fresh and saltwater marshes, a vast collection of tree varieties and an array of wildlife. A tour of Skidaway Institute of Oceanography will be featured. A meeting will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Turner Center. Carpools will be arranged to each camping area. Each participant will provide their own camping equipment; however, the College will rent an assortment of camping equipment on a limited basis. Cost is $10 per individual or $15 per family.

For a free brochure or further information about the camping program, call Jim Carmichael at Continuing Education at 568-2023.

Marching Band Festival

COLUMBUS, Ga. - The sixth annual Fountain City Marching Band Festival will be held tomorrow starting at 9:30 a.m. at the Memorial Stadium. Gates open at 9 a.m.

Admission is $3 per person and can be purchased at the stadium gate.

Doughboys lose 31-30 thriller

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team, despite the excellent passing of quarterback Leamon Hall, were shocked by The Citadel Bulldogs 31-30 Sunday at Doughboy Stadium.

The Doughboys and the Bulldogs both relied primarily on their passing attack as neither teams rushing game proved effective. The Doughboys garnered 346 passing yards while the Bulldogs stood steady at 198. Doughboy tailback Elyon Zeigler continued his amazing catches as he was Hall's primary receiver all day.

Citadel started the scoring on a long drive followed by a one yard touchdown run around the end. Fort Benning came right back with a long drive of their own with Hall carrying the ball over from the one to knot the score at 7-7.

Citadel's Lewis, on their second possession, took the handoff and ran 57 yards for the touchdown. Once again Benning countered with their own form of excitement when Hall hit Zeigler for a spectacu-

More than 1100 runners, some from as far away as Cocoa Beach, Florida, crowded up to the start line for the first National Infantry Museum Five Mile Race Saturday morning.

If those living around the museum were still sleeping when the race started, they were probably rudely awakened. Most races start with the tiny crack of the starters pistol; this race started with the thundering boom of a howitzer provided by the 2/10th Field Artillery. Twenty-two-hundred running shoes smacked and thudded on the street as the runners were off.

About 60 combat boots did the same as the 3rd Platoon, Company E, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, crossed the start line in platoon formation.

Guidons galore, representing the many different units from here that had entered teams or had people running individually, crossed the line. T-shirts identified some of the units. The blue-gray ones with "Forever Forward" on them, the red ones of the Infantry Officer Basic students from the 3rd Platoon, 23rd Company, the Officer Candidate T-Shirts of the entire 51st Company, and more crossed the line.

Twenty-four-minutes-and-twenty-

.... and....

Race raises $5,319.00 for museum renovation.

three-seconds later the first runner crossed the finish line. Theodis Abston, from Auburn, Alabama, running for a Birmingham track club, finished one-minute-and-forty-three seconds ahead of his closest competitor, Alex J. Cuzzo. The first woman to cross the finish line was Cindy Connally at 32:33. Next was Connie Cullifer at 33 minutes flat.

As one might expect, the more mature runners turned in the better times. But the youngsters were there and their times suggest that they will have to be reckoned with in another year or two.

William J. Pruet was first in the men's division for ages 14 and under with a time of 33:31. He was followed by Patrick McKenna and Jamie Griffis.

In the women's division for ages 14 and under, Terri McKenzie crossed the line first at 38:36 with Kelly McKenzie and Leslie Boynton close behind.

The trophy for the best overall military team went to 22nd Company, The School Brigade. The Staff Judge Advocate's Office won the best small unit detachment trophy.

The Staff Judge Advocate's office was the moving force behind organizing the race. The race was conducted by the Columbus Track Club. The 34th Medical Battalion provided ambulances, water trucks and tents while the Law Enforcement Command had MPs stationed at each major intersection to direct traffic and also provided a lead and trail car for the runners.

Fifty-first Company broke out the drums and a bagpipe and put on an impromptu show, complete with a men's chorus line, while the officials were figuring out who won what after the race.

People lined up for free refreshments to quench their thirsts while others stood in small groups verbally reliving the five mile run.

The Silver Wings dropped in, bringing the winners medals with them.

According to Mr. John Bohannon, president of the Columbus track club, this was the largest race in west Georgia. Mr. Bohannon also said that all the proceeds, $5,319.00, go to the Infantry Museum for renovation of the third floor.

Major General Sam Wetzel handed out the trophies and the medals. Here are the winners:

lar 76 yard touchdown strike. This ended the scoring in the first quarter, leaving the score at 14-14.

In the second quarter, the Bulldogs made another long march downfield before Hope took the ball over the goal line from 8 yards out. Following that Citadel added a 14 yard field goal to go on top 24-14 late in the quarter. However the Doughboys, using their two-minute drill, marched down to the Bulldog's 3 yard line before Hall hit Marvin Jones for the touchdown, making the score at the half 24-21.

The third quarter saw little action, with the only scoring coming from a safety by the Doughboys Arlis Hicks. This put the Doughboys behind by only one at 24-23.

In the fourth and final quarter, both teams defenses seemed to hold tight as late in the fourth quarter the score had not changed. However, Fort Benning on an exciting drive managed to shoot ahead on a 10 yard touchdown pass by Hall to Julius Harden. This put the Doughboys ahead 30-24 and made the fans ecstatic. With a buzz still going through the crowd, the Bulldogs then proceeded to march downfield and score on a 40 yard sweep play that tied the score at 30-30. The kick for the extra point was good sending the Citadel team jumping on the field. The Doughboys had lost a thriller with only 12 seconds to go making the heartbreaking score 31-30.

The Doughboys next game will be against the New River Marines Sunday at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Doughboys Romas Venckus (78) and Randy Wilson (75) zero in on a Citadel running back.

YA football concluding

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Coach Alvin Carter's "Mean Green Machine" is now 8-0 after defeating the Panthers 34-0.

In the first half quarterback Timmy McIntosh threw touchdown passes to Ron McIver and Linwell Majors. Kevin Price and John MacFadden caught the conversion passes to make the score 16-0.

Chris Howard scored the third touchdown to make the score 22-0. Kenny Johnson recovered a fumble on the 40-yard line and ran it all the way back to raise the score 28-0. In the final major play of the game, Linwell Majors made a ten-yard run over the goal line scoring once again to make it 34-0.

Brian Allman, David Lane and Mark Williams all contributed substantially to the Jets win over the Panthers 34-0.

Football action at Blue Field is in its' final week. Tomorrow's games will be the final determination of what top teams are going to the Mini-bowls on Nov. 21. The standings going into tomorrow's games are as follows:

Team	Grasshopper
Seahawks	6	1	0
Cowboys	6	1	0
Eagles	4	3	0
Raiders	1	5	0

Razzle-dazzle

Most of the time it's the football players who get all the attention at a youth activities football game. Last Friday night it was the cheerleaders who were the center of attention. It was cheerleaders night at the Youth Activity gymnasium. Sixteen cheerleading teams showed the coaches, moms and dads what they could do. Four year old Deedee Fornea (above) of the Raiders shakes her hips and cheers "How funky is your chicken, how loose is your goose, come on Rams, shake your caboose." (Photos by Dave Bristow)

Soccer season ends

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Youth Activities soccer league closes its season tomorrow with an awards ceremony set for 11:30 a.m. at Gordon Field. This season marked the first time soccer was held on post during the fall season.

In season playoff action, the Hustlers from the Junior Division outplayed the Titans and triumphed 5-1. Hustlers Pat Riccinto scored two goals this week, and lead last weeks scoring with five goals. Trey Stanford and John Rose each scored one. Jeffrey Christensen scored two goals during last Saturday's game.

Other scorers from last week were Eric Entlich with four goals, one of which was a head shot; Chris Bradford with two scores; Jim Humphrey and Trey Stanford with one each.

Raymod Jansco also scored for the Hustlers this week. It was his first goal of the season as was Rose's.

The Titans goal was a team effort with the shot being fired by Jim Connor. Chris Basilio and Jeff Gersh led the defense.

In the Grasshopper Division playoff on Saturday, the Chiefs beat the Rockets 2-1. The Rockets' score was by Steve Lorick with Jared Orlando and Mel Hallums playing well on offense. Defense standouts were Tony Taylor, Kalimba Corbin and Dick Stone-man.

Sunday's action saw the Rockets defeat the Bulldogs 4-3 with the game going into two overtimes, ad then the final shootout that pitted brother against brother as goalkeepers.

The Rockets offense was led by Steve Lorick, with scores made by Jason Legore, Mel Hallums, Jason Heard and Steve Lorick.

Tomorrow's closing ceremony ends the fall soccer league, but look for Sring soccer league news in the BAYONET.

Flying Club sponsoring spot landing contest

The Fort Benning Flying Club will sponsor a spot landing contest and fly-in on Sunday at 1 p.m. at Lawson Army Airfield.

Contestants from local area flying clubs, as well as other independent pilots, will compete to see who can land closest to a line drawn on the runway. A traveling trophy will be awarded to the team with the best record. The public is invited to attend.

The Fort Benning Flying Club will have personnel on hand with information on membership and the programs available at the club.

Christmas Seal Road Race

The LaGrange Track Club is sponsoring its' annual Christmas Seal Road Race Nov. 21 at 9:30 a.m. with a one mile run and a 10,000 meter run at 10 a.m.

The run, which begins at the LaGrange High School located at Granger Park, has several difficult hills with a one-half hill at the five-mile mark. The 10,000 meter run will also feature Craig Virgin, who is the three-time winner of the Peachtree Road L.Race in Atlanta. He is also the World Cup Cross Country champion and placed second in the 1981 Boston Marathon.

T-shirts will be given to all the 10,000 meter runners as well as awards presented to the top three finishers in each age group.

Registration fee is $5 for the 10,000 meter race and $1 for the novice race. Entry blanks are available at local running stores in Columbus.

Dexter Running Clinic

All Dexter third, fourth and fifth grade students who have registered to run in the Faith Christmas race to be held Dec. 5 will be offered a free running clinic Dec. 1.

The clinic, which will be held at the Dexter auditorium, is to be conducted by Bruce Skiles, a well-known local runner who holds the course record (24:40) in the five-mile Faith race.

Students interested in attending the clinic and entering the race should contact Diane Oliver in room six at Dexter School. The clinic will begin at 1:30 p.m. Students should be dressed in proper running attire.

The bomb

Doughboy quarterback Leamon Hall rares back and lets go of a 76 yard touchdown pass to Elyon Zeigler. Hall had an outstanding 346 yards on the day in Fort Benning's 31-30 loss to The Citadel Bulldogs Sunday at Doughboy Stadium. (Photo by Tony Adams)

One-stop processing opens at Crain Hall

Story by Betty Zimmerman

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Adjutant General Division, Directorate of Industrial Operations and Directorate of Facilities Engineering are putting the finishing touches on the post's new Central Processing Center in Crain Hall.

It opened Nov. 16 and anyone in- or out-processing after that date got a pleasant surprise.

The building itself has been completely refurbished with fresh paint, new beige desks and filing cabinets, orange fabric-covered partitions and a comfortable lounge with color television.

The workers have the latest equipment to use, including the Remote Automated Personnel Input Data System (RAPIDS) and other computers used in the automated personnel operation.

Maximum efficiency in a pleasant environment is the goal of Maj. Larry Hagan, deputy adjutant general and project officer for this undertaking.

The center is manned 24 hours a day with full processing taking place between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Personnel records in-processing is done by clerks like Ms. Linda Norris.

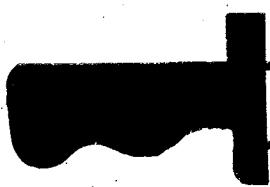

Newcomers are entered into Fort Benning's accountability system immediately by computer. Their company assignment will be verified, orders cut and duplicated on the spot and then they will process through all the necessary stations right there in the same building. If their family is with them, they may wait comfortably in the lounge and use the vending machine snack bar complete with microwave oven.

Don't close window on conventional war

President Reagan has made numerous references to what he calls "a window of vulnerability" existing today in any military comparison between the United States and its most likely major adversary, the Soviet Union.

The window, the President says, favors the USSR now and will continue to expand in its favor unless we begin to take positive action to redress some of the imbalances in comparative military power.

While he leaves little doubt that the unfavorable comparison extends almost completely across the military spectrum there is even less doubt that he considers our strategic shortcomings most crucial.

As the need to tighten the federal purse strings has deepened, the Administration has seemed to limit its concern over the apportionment of the reduced defense budget to the share to be allotted to any or all of several strategic weapons system.

Thus, we hear reports that the secretary of defense and the President are wrestling with decisions involving the MX missile system, the Trident missile-carrying submarine and a new, manned strategic bomber.

Little is said about what we see when we look through the "window of vulnerability" to view our conventional-warfare capabilities.

All we know at this moment is that while the MX/Trident/B-1 debate is in full flux the decisions have already been made to slow production of a badly needed new tank, to kill a promising battlefield air-defense system, to curtail procurement of ammunition, and to back off from mobility initiatives.

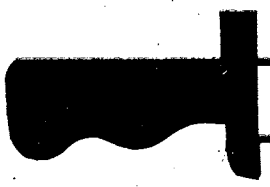

Dozens of other actions are being planned which will have immediate negative impact on our ability to meet conventional threats throughout the world.

Few seriously debate the basic premise that if the USSR decides on an openly aggressive course it has the conventional combat power, including the naval and the air and sealift power, needed to strike at multiple targets without resorting to nuclear weapons.

It is in these conventional-warfare comparisons that the United States is least ready to defend its far-flung national interests.

Before we lock ourselves into a crushingly expensive course of strategic modernization we must be sure that we can cope with the greater likelihood of conventional confrontation.

Chaplain's Comments

Freedom: A gift to treasure

Chaplain Joseph Lusk
Sightseeing Road Chapel

As I look out my office window on this beautiful fall afternoon, I see Old Glory waving in the brisk breeze. The sky behind her is covered with gray and white clouds with an occasional patch of blue.

Our flag reminds me of the privilege of living in a free land. The sky prompts me to consider the vastness of our country and the greatness of God's love to us.

A group of soldiers stand at attention below the flag as their commanding officer passes before them. They salute as the Stars and Stripes are lowered at the bugler's call.

This stirring scene brings to my mind such words as respect, loyalty, commitment and discipline. These military members know about these things. Some of them have fought for the privilege to stand here today.

I observe them folding the symbol of our country and presenting it to the commander. Now they march away to their respective companies.

Soon they will depart to their individual places of lodging. Some will be greeted by spouses and children.

This thought helps me remember that although they wear the same uniform, each uniform clothes a unique human being with gifts, abilities and needs. And because the flag still waves, each of them can proudly claim the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

I am thankful for the flag and what it represents, and for these and all sincere soldiers who love their country. I am also thankful to God for allowing me to live in America and worship Him as I choose.

Our priceless freedom brings sober responsibilities. With God's help, all of us can be faithful stewards of this freedom. Walk in freedom today.

Letters to the Editor

On behalf of our children, we would like to express our gratitude to Maj. Tom Lucas and Maj. Wayne Denhke, coaches of the DYA Bulldog Soccer Team.

These men epitomize the many devoted coaches who willingly give of their free time to provide wholesome fun for our children.

As parents we appreciate the many long hours they gave to the development of 'fair play', fun and teamwork in our youngsters.

These men are "winners" in every sense of the word.

Some of the services that are available are the AG's in- and out-processing section, finance, enlisted assignment branch, officer personnel management branch, Army Community Services, education and counseling and central clearance.

Family housing also has a representative there and a direct line telephone to transportation is available. The vehicle and weapon's registration office is in a trailer right outside Crain Hall.

Personnel clearing post on a reassignment also have an equally easy time. If the proper procedures are followed, an individual may clear post in two hours. If a person has no obligations at the auxillary services, such as the library, credit union, engineer property, or others, he won't have to visit them for clearance purposes. Of course, if he does, then he has to check out at these offices.

Their dental, finance and personnel records are sent to Crain Hall and everything except medical and education records will be ready for out-processing. Finance also has a cashier's cage to pay any advance travel or other monies due.

More detailed information on the center's operation will be available in a published letter of instruction that will be available in the various personnel administration centers.

People separating from the Army will have a slightly different procedure. They will still have to visit buildings 83 and 89 as well, since there isn't room to move the separation center into Crain Hall too.

PFC Deborah Lovelace greets incoming soldiers and gets them started through the center.

Pvt. 1 Rosita Manglona insures newly arrived soldiers are entered into the personnel system.

In the finance section, new arrivals are completely in-processed to include filing their travel vouchers.

NOTICE

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT (IRA)

Effective January 2, 1982, as a member of TIC Federal Credit Union, Fort Benning, you can deposit up to $2,000 a year as an individual, $4,000 with a working spouse or, $2,250 with a non working spouse, and deduct it from your taxable income. Then, in addition to deducting these deposits you will not have to pay taxes on the dividends earned on the IRA until retirement; a time when you're likely to be lower tax bracket. If you were to deposit $2,000 each year, the chart below will give you some idea of the approximate benefits of opening an IRA at 12% annual rate.

Years to Retirement	Total Contribution	Tax-Deferred Earnings	Cash at Retirement
10	$20,000	$15,097	$35,097
15	$30,000	$44,560	$74,560
25	$50,000	$216,666	$266,666

Auto crush

Fort Benning is getting tougher in the area of narcotic and drug enforcement and those who are inclined to transport marijuana, cocaine, heroin or illegal pills onto this installation in their vehicles should take heed! Effective immediately, through a cooperative agreement between the military police agencies and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, vehicles which are found to be transporting amounts of the previously named items are subject to seizure and forfeiture. Once a vehicle is forfeited, the disposition will most likely be destruction (crushing); however, it may be retained for permanent use by a federal law enforcement agency.

purpose in any amount subjects a conveyance to federal forfeiture; the transportation of drug-carrying passengers subjects the vehicle to forfeiture; even transporting or transferring drug money in a conveyance subjects it to federal forfeiture; and, negotiating details of a drug delivery in a conveyance subjects it to federal forfeiture.

These actions are applicable to ANY vehicle operated by ANYONE on the Fort Benning reservation. The military police will be increasing their use of narcotics/marijuana detector dogs in parking areas and plainclothes investigators' activity in the drug-related interest area will intensify. All of the actions highlighted by this article are a part of the command's continuing effort to make Fort Benning a community that is a pleasant and safe place in which to work and live.

Remember, if you have a desire to see your car, truck or motorcycle converted to a package the size of a milk crate, use the vehicle for transport of illegal drugs on Fort Benning!!

This car was not confiscated. This is a demonstration of what could happen to your car if you transport illegal drugs on post.

CANCER Answer- line

A feature prepared by the American Cancer Society, to help save your life from cancer.

Question: "What is smoker's tongue? Is it cancer?"

ANSWERline: "Smoker's tongue" is a disease common among smokers. Its correct name is leukoplakia. This can become cancerous if continually irritated by tobacco smoke, illfitting dentures, or jagged teeth. Leukoplakia appears as thickened white patches on the mucous membranes of the lips, gums or other areas of the mouth. It is very important to have your dentist examine this condition and treat it. The condition may be removed with an electric needle or by surgery. This may require either local or general anesthetic.

Question: "Does inhaling asbestos cause lung cancer?"

ANSWERline: The inhalation of asbestos fibers has been implicated in mesothelioma, a cancer of the lining of the chest cavity. Asbestos workers who also smoke have been found to be greater risks for lung cancer. Asbestos is a chronic lung disease that affects many workers in asbestos-related industries.

Question: "Can colon cancer be caused by a soft diet?"

ANSWERline: Although the cause of colorectal cancer, like that of most cancer, is unknown, statistical evidence indicates that dietary patterns do play a key role. Some scientists believe that a diet high in fat or low in fiber content may be a significant causative factor. However, more research is needed to confirm their observations.

Baggers depend on tips

By Betty Zimmerman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Bagging groceries at the Fort Benning commissary gives 164 industrious adults and teenagers an opportunity to supplement their family income or to earn some spending money.

Jimmy Epps has worked at the Fort Benning commissary for more than 12 years. He uses his tip money to supplement a civil service disability retirement check.

Shirley Carrol is the wife of a staff sergeant. For 10 months she's carried out groceries for tips only to help buy groceries for her five children.

Ben Smith says he's only been at it for four weeks, but it was the only job he could find. His highest day has netted him $27 while his lowest full day paid $17.

Regular baggers average five days a week and any adult is eligible for these 84 positions. Teenagers who are high school dropouts are also allowed to apply for these permanent slots if they have parental consent.

There are also 80 part-time slots available for teenagers, aged 14-17, with military ID cards who go to school. These boys and girls average three days a week - two after school and Saturdays.

Although these baggers work for tips only and are not commissary employees, they have duties other than bagging and carrying out groceries. They must clean the area around the registers and doors every day. They pull 30-minute tours of taking the carts and hand baskets back to the entrance area and they must fill the bag bins at the end of each day. These jobs are divided equally by a duty roster run by the head bagger.

James Hankins is the head bagger. He or his assistant, Charlie Ford, are also the ones to see about a job. There is a waiting list and to be added to it, you just go to the commissary during its regular hours and sign up. If you applied before Nov. 1, go back and sign up again because a new list has been started.

Those hired must buy their own uniforms which are white shirts or blouses, black or navy pants, and a black bowtie.

Customers are not required to tip and some don't. The baggers' idea of a fair tip ranges from 75 cents to a dollar. They all look forward to Tuesdays and hope they are on the right register to catch the "five dollar lady." This regular customer always tips the unloader $1, the packer $1 and the carry-out packer $3.

Kenny Hull and Betsy Anderson (r) bag commissary patron's groceries while a third bagger is unloading the customer's cart. Then Hull, who is in the number three position, will take them out.

Commissary baggers, such as Zack Butler filling these sacks, rotate positions at each cash register so that each will have an equal chance at the carry-out tips. (Photos by Brian Adams)

Fireman finds baby

Life is back to normal for Fort Benning fire captain Sidney Martin. But the baby's life he rescued a few days ago that was named after him, he will always remember.

Call it what you will, but it was probably an act of fate more than anything else that caused the fireman to drive his pick-up truck into a roadside motor park to look for aluminum cans. Cans he never found. What he did find was a newborn baby abandoned, lying facedown in a brown grocery bag, on top of a 55 gallon drum.

As it occurred

It was 8:15 the morning of Nov. 6 when Martin drove his pick-up by the South Lumpkin Road Motor Park. He was on his way to the recycling station at Fourth Avenue.

"I had just passed the park when I noticed the 55 gallon drums," he explained. "Normally I don't look for aluminum cans at a place like that. I get most of my cans from a dumpster near the fire station. It was the first time I had ever been to that park. I guess you could say it was fate which brought me there."

Martin was looking in one of the drums when he stumbled upon the grocery bag. It lay near the top of the refuse.

"When I picked the bag up something fell out of it onto the pile of garbage," he continued. At first I thought it was an animal of some sort. A cat or a possum. I turned it over thinking it might be a doll."

It was not. He had stumbled upon a newborn baby, motionless but still alive. It began to cry when he picked it up. The baby was cold and shaking. Its color turning purple. The fire captain ran with the infant to his pickup and wrapped the child in his hunting vest. Dumping his running gear he placed the baby in his athletic bag. "If I had not found him when I did he would have died."

Instincts took over. The fire captain knew he had to get the baby to the nearest medical facility. That facility was Martin Army Community Hospital.

He stopped at the MP gate long enough to tell the MP's to notify the hospital that he was coming with the baby. On the way he stopped at the fire station where he works to request an emergency vehicle. The station rescue truck was gone. Martin used the station supply truck instead. A firefighter joined Martin, holding the infant, as they rushed down Ingersoll Street, down Dixie Road to the emergency room at Martin Army. The baby was given to a doctor who clipped the baby's umbilical cord and admitted the infant. Except for the low body temperature the baby was fine. The newborn was placed in an incubator for warmth.

Martin does not think of himself as a hero.

"I only did my job. Its something thats drilled into a fireman — to save lives. Our primary mission is to protect lives."

At the hospital the baby's doctor asked Martin what he wanted to name the child. He was surprised. He was told that right now the baby was John Doe. "OK name him Jimmy," beamed Martin. He then signed the birth certificate as the finder.

Martin loves children. He has five of his own. He also loves his job. He's been with the Fort Benning fire department for 12 years. As the station captain for fire station number one he supervisors 10 fire-fighters.

Baby's status

Little "Jimmy Doe" has been turned over to foster parents. Their names have not been released. Adoption officials here in Columbus think it is possible the baby can be placed in a permanent home within three months. According to Mrs. Miriam Kent of the local adoption agency the baby is doing fine. People have already began asking about adopting him. Some people have been curious about the child's race. Authorities do not know for sure because the baby is so young his history is a blank.

Planning trips for the holidays

WASHINGTON--If you're planning to travel over the Christmas holidays, you should plan early, say Military Traffic Management Command officials.

The Christmas holiday season always brings lots of congestion at air, bus and train terminals, and this season it will be worse than ever.

Because of the current shortage of air traffic controllers, air carriers will reduce their scheduled service by 77 percent beginning Dec. 1, 1981, say officials. Because of this situation, along with the expected rise in furlough-fare travel, it's important that military members plan their trips carefully and make reservations as soon as possible.

Why plan early? The main reason is to take advantage of the discount fares available to military personnel.

Nineteen airlines (American, Air Florida, Air Midwest, Continental, Ozark, Braniff, USAir, Empire, Aspen Piedmont, TWA, Texas International, Eastern, United, Altair, Northwest, Western and Delta) are offering a 50 percent discount furlough fare. With all reserved seating, all active duty personnel may take advantage of the discounts.

Service academy cadets and personnel traveling within seven days after their date of discharge from the military are also eligible. This 50 percent discount program for servicemembers does not include their family members.

All airlines above, with the exception of Texas International, offer the special fare over all of their domestic routes.

Pan American airlines has discontinued its military furlough fare as of Nov. 16, 1981, because of major changes in its conus fare structure.

Also, TWA has lifted blackout dates previously imposed on holiday travel. Military members may now take advantage of the furlough fare on TWA any day during the holiday season.

The 25 percent furlough fare discounts are available on both one-way and round-trip coach tickets year-round. However, military furlough fares do not apply on the metroliner.

To ensure a happy holiday, make your travel plans now.

Remembering POWs

Forty-four German soldiers died in prison camps at or around Fort Benning. The soldiers are from all ranks to include a lieutenant general.

Memorial services commemorating these prisoners of war was held Sunday at the post cemetery.

German liaison officer, Lt. Col. Rolf H. Halama, placed a wreath given by the people of the Federal Republic of Germany on the graves.

A second wreath was placed on the graves by the president of the German club Heimatland of Columbus, Inge Wills.

In his speech Halama said, "Today, Germany remembers the dead of both World Wars, soldiers as well as civilians and the victims of the National Socialism.

Roughly ten million Germans lost their lives as soldiers, as casualties of bombings, while being banished or deported or in prisoner of war camps and internment camps.

"All of these soldiers did their duty for their country, believing in a legitimate and righteous cause," said Halama. "As those soldiers of other countries did who are buried here."

German casualties of WW I and WW II are buried on all five continents and in 80 nations around the world.

Christmas partial pay not authorized

The JUMPS-Army pay system as implemented by AR 37-104-3 does not provide for the payment of a Christmas partial to military personnel.

This is due primarily to the availability of mid-month pay option.

The Finance and Accounting Division is not staffed to undertake the project of manually preparing Christmas partial payments in addition to the normal JUMPS-Army requirements.

Fort Benning has not paid a Christmas partial payment since the implementation of JUMPS in 1971. Emergency partials will be paid upon verification by the commander.

Medical Personnel

Doctors Hospital is a 252-bed facility offering acute medical/surgical care. Benefits include, but are not limited to:

- * A week's paid vacation each six months of employment.
- * A generous tuition reimbursement plan.
- * Transfer ability to other H.C.A. hospitals (there are 190 plus of them in the U.S.) This would be of particular interest to military spouses.

We are Currently Accepting Applications For:

1. Operating Room Techs
2. X-Ray Techs
3. RN's
4. LPN's

Company to stay together

Story and photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's first complete company training under the COHORT concept graduated Nov. 12 from the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

The title "COHORT" is derived from the Latin word cohort that originally meant a Roman military unit of 300 to 600 men who lived and fought together for most of their lives.

This unit, D Company, 7th Battalion, began their training Aug. 27 and they will spend their entire Army commitment together.

Under the COHORT plan, soldiers and their cadre are expected to remain with the same unit for three to four years. Soldiers will take basic, advanced and unit training together and then upon graduation will all be assigned to the same unit. At the present time the Army is training units at Fort Benning, Fort Knox, Ky. and Fort Sill, Okla.

The soldiers themselves are quite happy about being assigned together. Pvt. Jeff Beets, 19, of Pretty Village, Kan. said, "I'm glad we are going to be assigned to the same unit. I know all these guys and I can trust them. I would feel bad going through all this training with them and then having to split up. I made a lot of good friends here."

SFC Robert San Agustin, senior drill sergeant of Company D, said, "The whole battalion is going through this deal. What's really good about all this is all these guys know each other. They know how to work and perform as a team together.

"I think it's great for them," continued San Agustin with a smile. "Here they had the chance to train together, and really get to know each other, and now they are going to serve their enlistments together. The 16th Infantry Brigade can be proud of the soldiers they are getting because they are well trained and a good company."

Their company commander here, Capt. Clayton James, said the company had extremely high morale and esprit. He also commended them for being the first company to pass the Performance Oriented Infantry Qualification Test (POIQT) in entirety on the first try. Seventy-seven members maxed the POIQT and the unit broke the brigade record by scoring 98.3 percent on the efficiency portion of the POIQT.

Pvt. Jurgen Becker, 22, of Pensacola, Miss. said, "I feel that the training we got here really built my character. Now I don't fly off the handle like I use to. My most unforgettable moment was when we got our weapons for the first time. Right then I knew it was time for the real thing. Now all the playing was over. We were really going to get some real training."

Pvt. Walter E. Hare from Vancouver, Wash. was the distinguished graduate. He maxed the POIQT, received the maximum score with the automatic rifle and was awarded the light weapons skill award.

Their new company commander, first sergeant and platoon sergeant from Fort Riley spent the last week of their training here with them which gave them the unique experience of getting to know each other in advance.

Col. Edward W. Newell, 2nd Brigade commander, 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, also came here to preside over the unit's graduation ceremony.

These men will be part of the same team for four years. They have finished initial entry training here and are on their way to Fort Riley for a year. From there they will go to Europe together.

Attention to detail on an individual level, such as cleaning weapons, is what helps the team survive.

Don't be a Thanksgiving turkey

By Randy Fritz
Fort Benning Environmental Office

Thanksgiving holidays are for family gatherings, football, fun and giving thanks for the good things from last year.

Many Thanksgivings are ruined by food-borne illness.

If you and your family seem to suffer from the flu or a virus on the big holidays (4th of July, Thanksgiving and Christmas) maybe you should look at your food handling practices.

Do you—

- Cook your turkey the night before Thanksgiving?
- Thaw the turkey in the sink or on the counter?
- Bake the stuffing in the turkey?
- Reheat turkey leftovers?
- Serve turkey gravy and meat for the week following Thanksgiving?
- Trim and stuff the raw bird on the same surfaces you carve the cooked bird?
- Keep the turkey on the counter or table hours after the meal?

If you can answer yes to any of these questions, your family members are potential food poisoning victims.

Food contaminated by bacteria causes food-borne illness. The most common types of food-borne illness are caused by Staphylococcus, Clostridium Perfringens and Salmonellosis bacteria.

These bacterium are introduced into the food by food handlers who fail to wash their hands after visits to the toilet, after smoking, or during the production, processing, storage and preparation of the food.

Most of the food we eat contains some type of bacteria or microorganisms. Most of these bacterium are not harmful by nature or not harmful due to their small population.

Foods with acidic or basic properties (commercial salad dressings, tomatoes, pickles) will not grow harmful bacterium and may even kill them. Meats, poultry, eggs, milk and shellfish not only are contaminated when you receive them but also these foods readily grow harmful bacterium.

All is not as bad as it seems. Use these preventive

Cold weather one of soldier's enemies

Weather has always been one of the soldier's worst enemies. The soldiers at Valley Forge, Napoleon's soldiers retreating from Moscow and the soldiers fighting through European winters during the world wars faced this bitter enemy.

More than 90,000 cases of cold weather injury took soldiers from their duty during World War II.

Cold weather injuries are unnecessary. With a little know-how and preparation injury can be avoided.

Frostbite and hypothermia are the worst predators in winter.

Frostbite

Frostbite occurs when part of the body freezes in temperatures less than 32 degrees. The first symptom is usually an uncomfortable aching sensation, tingling or stinging. Numbness follows if this condition goes untreated. The skin begins to turn red and will later turn pale gray or waxy white.

Frostbite attacks in two stages-superficial and deep. Treatment depends on the degree of injury. If the frostbitten part has been numb for only a short time then it's probably superficial. Otherwise, it is best to assume that the injury is deep and serious.

The best treatment for superficial frostbite is to go inside where it's warm. If that can't be done, cover the cheeks, nose or ears with the hands until pain returns. Place frostbitten hands under the armpits, next to bare skin. Don't rewarm frostbitten areas by massages, exposure to open fires, exhaust pipes, cold water soaks or rubbing with snow.

In case of deep frostbite, don't try to treat it in the field. Get to a hospital or field station as quickly as possible. Be prepared for pain when the area thaws out.

Wear sufficient clothing. Avoid clothes which interfere with the blood's circulation. Tight fitting shoes, socks and gloves are especially dangerous. Keep dry. Exercise face, fingers and toes to keep them warm.

Hypothermia

Hypothermia is the medical term for lowered body temperatures, caused by exposure to the cold. Hypothermia can be aggravated by wetness, wind and exhaustion. When hypothermia strikes, the body cannot produce heat as quickly as it is lost. If a person's internal body temperature drops below 78.6 degrees the person will die.

As the body temperature drops, the body shows symptoms of hypothermia. The first symptom is intense and uncontrollable shivering. Simple tasks become difficult. As the body temperature continues to drop the violent shivering continues. Speech becomes difficult, thinking sluggish and amnesia begins to set in.

When the body temperature falls between 90 and 86 degrees shivering stops and the muscles become rigid. Muscle coordination is affected, producing erratic jerky movements. Thinking becomes less clear making comprehension of the situation dull. Amnesia may be total at this point.

If the body temperature continues to fall, the victim becomes irrational, loses contact with the environment and drifts into a stupor. Pulse and breathing slow. Further drops in body temperature brings on unconsciousness, erratic heartbeat, failure of cardiac and respiratory control and ultimately erratic jerky movements. Thinking become less clear making comprehension of the situation dull. Amnesia may be total at this point.

If body temperature continues to fall, the victim becomes irrational, loses contact with the environment and drifts into stupor. Pulse and breathing slow. Further drops in body temperature brings on unconsciousness, erratic heartbeat, failure of cardiac and respiratory control and ultimately death.

Treatment for hypothermia is getting the victim warm to reduce the body's heat loss. Get the victim to a sheltered area. Replace the wet clothes with dry ones. Put the victim in a pre-warmed sleeping bag along with hot stones, canteens of hot water or with another person. As the victim regains consciousness hot, non-alcoholic drinks.

Like frostbite, hypothermia can easily be prevented. Staying dry in cold weather is important. Wet clothes lose 90 percent of their insulating value. Cover the head, neck, body and legs with clothes proven effective against wind-driven rain.

Beware of the wind, even the slightest breeze carries heat away from bare skin much faster than still air. Wind drives cold air under and through clothing. Wind also refrigerates wet clothes by evaporating moisture from the surface.

While frostbite strikes when the temperature falls below freezing, hypothermia can strike anytime when the temperature is between 30 and 50 degrees.

The Ledger-Enquirer invites you to join in Great American Family Night

A Celebration of Family Living-Mon., Nov. 23
During National Family Week-Mon. 22-28

Remember last week when you said you'd spend more time with your children? It's next week. But it isn't too late to replace your good intentions with a good plan of action. Set aside one night, Monday, November 23, and take part in Great American Family Night.

As part of National Family Week, Nov. 22-28, the Columbus Family Week Committee and The Ledger-Enquirer are encouraging families throughout the valley area to spend this time together, become more aware of each other, and generally celebrate being a family.

To help you do that, we'll be publishing family activity ideas in our daily and Sunday newspapers you can use with your own family on Great American Family Night. Idea sheets are also being distributed to area schools and churches. Family Week has been endorsed by the General Federation of Women's Club, by the Phenix City PTA Council and by the Muscogee Council of PTA. Plan now to take part.

IRS trying to locate residents

The Internal Revenue Service is trying to locate some Georgia residents who are due a tax refund from their 1980 Federal Income Tax Returns.

According to Michael Murphy, IRS District Director in Atlanta, 1,340 refund checks worth $396,383.74 and ranging from as little as $2.00 to as much as $9,000 were returned by the Postal Service as undeliverable in this area. The refund checks are for both individuals and businesses, and some are for prior years.

Murphy says the taxpayers may have moved or changed their last names during the year and failed to notify the IRS, or that the handwriting of the name and address on the return simply has been illegible.

When a refund is returned by the Postal Service, the IRS attempts to find the taxpayer and deliver the checks, but there are always some who cannot be found. If you think you may be due a refund and have moved or changed your name during the year, contact the IRS at the taxpayer information number listed in your telephone directory.

A taxpayer may claim an undelivered refund by establishing his or her identity and right to receive a check.

According to the Director, this can be done by addressing a letter to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Refund Inquiry Unit, Atlanta, Georgia 31101 which contains the following information:

- the name and address exactly as shown on the tax return;
- the present name and address if different from that shown on the return;
- the tax year for which refund is believed due;
- the social security number;
- the amount of refund claimed, and any other pertinent information needed to verify the claim; and,
- the signature (not printed), if it is a joint return, both should sign.

(EDITORS NOTE: Here are the names of persons the IRS is trying to return refund checks to. If any reader knows a person whose name is on the list, tell the person to contact the IRS.)

Wood fires can be safe

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that each year over 6,000 people receive hospital emergency room treatment for injuries associated with fireplaces. Most of these injuries are cuts and bruises caused by handling wood, andirons and other equipment. But the most serious injuries are burns, and most of the victims are children.

- Five-year-old Steve was standing too close to the fireplace and his clothing ignited. He received serious burns over 80% of his body.
- A spark from an unguarded fireplace ignited a small carpet. The fire spread to a nearby sofa and soon engulfed the entire room. Two people died in the fire.
- Mr. Allen used gasoline to "stoke" a smoldering fire in the fireplace. The flammable vapors exploded, and he was burned severely.
- After starting a fire in a poorly ventilated fireplace, Lois threw in some wrapping and polystyrene which had been used as packaging. The polystyrene produced so much carbon monoxide that Lois fell unconscious and died from the poisonous gas.

The typical accident patterns associated with fireplaces include:

- Clothing ignition from the open flames.
- Sparks from the fire landing on nearby flamma-

Students learn anatomy

By Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fourth graders at Wilbur Elementary School made paper mache bodies as a science project to learn where the different body parts are located and how they function.

Mrs. Charma Brian, a fourth grade teacher at Wilbur Elementary, showed the students a model of the body.

"We sat down on the floor and each of the children chose one of the students to trace the outline of their body. The children then drew the body parts from their health book," she said.

"What made this a chore is we have 30 students and didn't have enough room in the classroom, so we went outdoors to do it. Everyone looked at us kind of strange and asked us what we were doing," she said.

Bill Boone Jr. said. "It was noisy when we were cutting out the bodies. The paper rattles, making cutting out the parts of the body hard. Mrs. Brian helped us with some of it, but most of it she let us do ourselves. I thought it was interesting because I never knew the intestines were part of the liver before,"

"I was trying not to just teach the body parts and where the placements of the body parts are...but as a body awareness. I think this is important because most of them don't know where their parts are located," Explained, Mrs. Brian.

Dentists need help in caring for y

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Taking care of your teeth is important. Unfortunately, due to the lack of knowledge or desire, many people fail to take good care of their choppers.

This post has six dental clinics scattered throughout the various clusters of units. The newest addition to the family is Dental Clinic No. 1 located on Sante Fe Road near the Main Mall. The clinic, which was officially opened on Jan. 7 of this year, was a welcome sight because of its new equipment and capabilities.

The clinic has numerous sections, in which the work done ranges from putting in ordinary fillings to oral surgery to fixing braces. The sections that all active duty soldiers see once a year on their birthday check-up are the examination station (which includes x-rays) and the general dentistry section.

"Every soldier has to come in on his birthday so that we can check him. After that we can't force him to come in," says MSgt. Henry Reisig, NCOIC of the clinic.

If it is determined by the dentist that the soldier has cavities they are filled. If he needs oral surgery, he is scheduled for a future day to have it performed.

One of the more interesting and also more commonly used portions of the clinic is the porcelain laboratory. This is where false teeth, if needed for an individual, are made. The whole process of fitting a person's mouth, shaping and actually putting each tooth in place, can take up to one or two weeks. In emergency situations, the process can be speeded up to a few days.

When a patient has decided to have dentures put in, an impression is made of the patient's teeth and mouth. Once this is done, the impression is used to form the porcelain shape of the person's mouth. The teeth are then fitted into the porcelain, which is by now looking like actual gums.

The porcelain is then baked, polished and then ready for fitting into the patient's mouth. If the dentures do not fit, they are then taken back to the laboratory to try again.

Other stations at the clinic that many people see are the Pedodontics and Endodontics. Small children are taken care of in the Pedodontic section while in the Endodontic section root canals are performed.

Root canals are performed when a patient needs a nerve taken out. "It's basically similar to a filling," explained LTC John Chamberlin while beginning a root canal on a civilian patient.

The administration section of the clinic is sometimes overlooked but is always considered important to all of the workers at the clinic. The section takes care of 38,000 records for active duty, retired and their family members. "It's a job and a half," said SSgt Linda McCowan, the first floor NCOIC.

All active duty personnel use the clinic. Family members and retired personnel also have full use of the clinic. However, family members of retired personnel can only be seen in emergency situations.

LTC John Chamberlin performs a root canal on Malcolm Brogdon. The operation is a painless procedure.

The administration section handles up to 38,000 records.

All Communities

• It's time to bring your Christmas Spirit out of the closet and get it ready for the Christmas season. You can practice by helping Army Community Service kick off their Toy Drive. The Toy Program provides toys for needy active duty and retired military families in and around the Fort Benning area.

New, used and handmade toys are welcome, as well as wrapping paper, ribbons and name tags. Volunteers are also needed to repair and wrap the toys.

• Collection points are:

McGraw Manor Community Life Center on Custer Road, Highway 27 (Custer Road off the by-pass).

Lavoie Manor Community Life Center on Lavoie Road, Bldg. 8.

Custer Terrace Community Life Center on Kessler (on the side of the Main PX building).

Bouton Heights/Davis Hill Community Life Center at the Round House.

Army Community Service Bldg. 229, Crain Hall.

The deadline for toy donations will be Nov. 30 for used toys and Dec. 10 for new toys and wrapping materials.

For more information or if you know a needy family, contact Army community Service during duty hours at 545-5516. After duty hours and on the weekends contact SSgt James Quintal, project coordinator at 689-1769.

• Army Community Service invites retired personnel, service widows, and unaccompanied military servicemen and their families to the post for a Thanksgiving dinner at the Follow-Me Dining Facility, Building 73, on November 26 from 11:30 to 2:30. Cost of the dinner is $3.40 for adults and $2.30 for children under 12 years of age. Tickets must be purchased at the Army Community Service Center, Bldg 229. No tickets will be sold after November 20.

Custer Terrace

• There will be a Town Meeting on December 8. This is to plan the community Christmas party. If you have any ideas, please let us know by contacting Debby Derby at 544-1332. We also need volunteers to make this function a little more festive and brighter.

Important! There is an inspection in our community every Thursday.

McGraw Manor

• Exercise classes are now being held at the Santiago Gym on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 until 9 p.m. For more information call Diane Sims at 689-5049.

• Tiny Tots has openings in the McGraw Manor for nine children. For information call Mrs. Queen at 544-1608.

Bouton Hgts/Davis Hill

• Game nights for the adults are held every Friday from 9 p.m. until. Exercise classes are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited.

• Auditions are being held for a Children Talent show. If you are interested, contact Ms. L. Farley at the Round House at 544-1195.

Chapel

The chapel programs of McGraw Manor and Custer Terrace have been merged into one. The new program which uses the chaplains in training in Clinical Pastoral Education, is based in Bldg. 1045, Custer Terrace Chapel.

Sunday school for all ages is offered Sundays from 9:45 until 10:45 a.m.. Morning worship is at 11 a.m..

A Childrens Good News Bible club meets Tuesdays at 3 p.m. Choir rehearsal is Wednesday evenings at 7 p.m. and a Women's Bible Study is held Thursdays at 10 a.m.. A Spanish-language Pentecostal service is Thursday at 7 p.m..

A complete program of pastoral care, including counseling is available. For more information call 544-3305 or 544-3179.

Quail season rated fair

This year's extensive drought has decreased the local quail population considerably giving the 1981-82 season a fair prospect rating only.

Ronald Simpson, senior wildlife biologist for the Department of National Resources in Albany, Ga., explained further by saying the lack of free water, which includes dew and rain, inhibits the reproduction capabilities of quail. The dry weather also compounds the problem by preventing many eggs that are laid from hatching.

The quail season in Georgia and Alabama runs from Nov. 20, 1981 to Feb. 28, 1982.

measures to reduce the chance of food-borne illness:

- Wash hands each time you visit the restroom or smoke.
- Eliminate the recontamination of cooked foods by sanitizing all equipment, utensils and hands that contact raw food.
- Cook all meats, poultry, custards, etc. to 165°F internal temperatures. Reheat all leftovers to 165°F.
- Cool foods rapidly to 45° or less.
- Serve food above 140° or below 45°.
- Thaw frozen foods as part of the cooking process whenever possible or under refrigeration.
- Bake dressing separately to 165° internal temperatures.

The important thing to remember is that heat kills bacteria — cold only slows the reproduction process. Cool leftovers as fast as possible. Several small pans of meat or gravy cool much faster in the refrigerator than one large pan. Holding meats, milk, etc. at temperatures between 45° and 140° helps bacteria multiply.

Don't you be the turkey this Thanksgiving. Use safe food handling practices and enjoy your holiday.

Women in the Army

By J. C. Hope
USAIC Public Affairs

This week on WFBG-TV you'll have a chance to see a film on women in the Army and some of the non traditional jobs that they hold. The Big Picture will feature a biography on General "Blackjack" Pershing, the actions of the Allied Forces in Paris in 1944 and the Army's role in defending USAREUR. On the "Benning Magazine" I'll be talking to Sgt. Brian Adams, editor of the Fort Benning newspaper THE BAYONET.

The best of today's popular music is featured on SPECTRUM along with command information and the latest news on Fort Benning. If you have any comments or suggestions on WFBG-TV, write to: J. C. Hope, WFBG, Rm 601 Bldg 4 USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga 31905.

Wood fires

- Using flammable liquids to kindle or rekindle the fire. It is hazardous to use flammable liquids anywhere near the fire because the vapors can travel to the flames and be ignited.
- Carbon monoxide poisoning caused by inadequate ventilation.
- The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission offers the following suggestions for the safer use of fireplaces:
 - Check to make sure the fireplace was constructed to be used as a fireplace, not just for decoration. Have it inspected to determine whether it has all necessary linings and clearances.
 - Don't use gasoline or other flammable liquids to kindle or rekindle a fire because the flammable vapors can explode. Never use fuels near a fire; explosive vapors can travel the length of a room.
 - Always keep the damper open while the fuel is burning to provide for efficient burning and to prevent the accumulation of poisonous or explosive gases.
 - Don't use coal, charcoal, or polystyrene packaging in a fireplace unless the fireplace is well-ventilated.
 - Don't treat artificial logs (made from sawdust and wax) the same way you treat real wood logs.

Use only one at a time — if you use more, they can produce too much heat for some fireplaces to withstand.

- Always use a screen that completely covers the opening around a firelance to keep sparks from flying out. Don't put combustible materials, such as carpets or furniture, near a fireplace.

- Keep children away from the fire because their clothing can easily ignite. Warn the entire family about this hazard.

- Check fireplaces regularly (at least once each year) to determine that all vents and chimneys are operating properly.

- Be sure that all ashes have thoroughly cooled before you dispose of them.

- Make sure the fire is out completely before retiring for the evening.
- Use chimney guards. Squirrel and bird nests can stop up chimneys.

Wind ensemble

The Columbus College Symphonic Wind Ensemble, under the direction of Hal Gibson, will present a special dedicatory concert Sunday, at 3 p.m. in the Fine Arts Hall on campus.

This first performance of the Wind Ensemble for the 1981-82 season is being presented in honor of the College's two new vice presidents, Drs. Sue A. Dezenolet and Frank D. Brown.

The program will include works by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Joaquin Turina, Leonard Bernstein, Malcolm Arnold and John Philip Sousa.

The concert is free to the public, and a reception follows the concert in the foyer of the Fine Arts Hall.

West Point Society

The West Point Society of Fort Benning and Columbus, Ga. will sponsor a "Beat Navy" annual meeting at the Utchee Creek Recreation Area Sunday.

The activities will begin at 1:30 p.m., in time to watch the Sunday NFL football game on TV at the picnic.

An open bar, drinks and snacks will be provided at no cost. The picnic is open to all graduates of the U.S. Military Academy.

Membership in the local West Point society is not required. Wives and dates are encouraged to attend, but no children, please!

The event will also serve as an information session for local students and soldiers seeking admission to West Point.

This is an ideal opportunity for graduates to rally for the Army team and recruit local prospects for the academy. A good deal at a good price—free!! Come join in the fun, food, drinks and old friendships Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Questions concerning the picnic or membership in the local West Point Society of Fort Benning and Columbus should direct them to Maj. Carl Linke, Room 448, Bldg. 4 or call 545-1488 or 545-4426.

Reception station

By Betty Zimmerman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Construction of Fort Benning's long awaited reception station has begun with L.B. Samford, Inc. of Columbus, Ga., the contractor.

The local firm was awarded the nearly $6 million contract on Sept. 28 and received notice to proceed on Oct. 30. Six of the 10 subcontractors are also Columbus firms. Timber is now being cleared and the projected completion date is March 24, 1983.

The steel-framed, two-story brick structure of approximately 114,600 square feet will be built in the Sand Hill area immediately northwest of the corner of Fourth Street and Bourg Avenue.

It will house work areas for all the functions required to receive and inprocess the Army enlistees who will be Infantry soldiers and therefore trained at Fort Benning.

The bottom floor of 56,600 square feet will be used for bulk storage of clothing issue items and the facilities relating to clothing issue. These are administrative areas such as fitting, pressing and alternations, name tag issue, shoe fitting and a disrobing area.

The upper floor will include an assembly area for 300 people, a barber shop, dental clinic, chapel area, offices for all personnel functions, a testing area and a vast array of medical facilities.

It will take approximately 130 military and 62 civilians three days to inprocess the new soldier with everything but his sleeping and eating needs being taken care of right in the reception station.

Doughboys blast Marines 55-8

Story by Tony Adams

197th Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys' football team combined a staunch defense with a potent offense Sunday to shell the New River Marines 55-8.

The Doughboys, who had a total offense of 370 yards, were never challenged after their second quarter 27 point outburst. Quarterback Leamon Hall passed well hitting 11 out of 21 passes. Benning had one of their best rushing games (196 yards) against the hapless Marines.

Defensively, the Doughboys were impressive holding the Marines to an amazing 68 yards total offense. However, another dominating stat was the Marines' lowly eight first downs.

Fort Benning, however, did not play to the best of their abilities, letting penalties and fumbles hinder them throughout the contest. But it really didn't matter with the Marines' only score coming late in the game.

The Doughboys started their scoring spree early in the first quarter when Hall hit tailback Elyon Zeigler for a 25-yard touchdown strike. That was the only scoring in the quarter making it 7-0.

Fort Benning, driving late in the first quarter, scored with a half-minute gone in the second on a one-yard Bobby Simons run. The following touchdown came after Roderick Smith intercepted the Marines. Hall led the team to the 14-yard line before hitting Marvin Jones for the TD, upping the score to 21-0.

Continuing to move the ball with ease, the Doughboys once again scored on a five-yard touchdown pass from Hall to his standby receiver, Zeigler. However, the extra point attempt was missed leaving the score 27-0. After that scoring drive, the Doughboys regained the ball and managed one last score before the half when Hall threw a one-yard touchdown pass to Simons. The halftime score stood at 34-0.

Fort Benning came out in the second half with no intentions of letting the air out of the ball and sitting on a comfortable lead. Early in the quarter, linebacker John Mark intercepted another Marine pass. Following the interception, Hall marched the Doughboys down to the eight-yard line before dropping the ball softly into Zeigler's hands for the touchdown. Benning scored once more in the quarter on a 40-yard touchdown pass from Hall to none other than Zeigler. After the extra point was converted, the Doughboys held a 48-0 lead going into the final quarter.

Fort Benning finished up their scoring for the day with 13:09 left in the game when Reginald Walker scampered 21 yards for the touchdown.

The Marines finally managed to erase the "goose-egg" from the board when John Daughtry blocked a Doughboy punt late in the game. With a two-point conversion successful, the final score stood at 55-8.

The Doughboys' season record is now 4-6 going into Sunday's game against the Georgia Southern University Junior Varsity team at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Tailback Elyon Zeigler leaves the defenders scattered as he makes another long catch.

Doughboy running back Reginald Walker carries the ball for 21 yards and a touchdown.

Doughboys season up and down

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With the Doughboys about to finish their rebuilding season, it is only fitting that we go back and take a look at their season.

The Doughboy's first game proved to be a rough start for Hall and Company as they fell solidly to the UT-Chattanooga J.V. team 24-0. The Doughboy's defense played as well as could be expected. However, the offense sputtered through the entire four quarters. Benning was still close at the half, giving up only two field goals to make it 6-0. In the second half, the Moccasins scored quickly and decisively to take the victory and give the Doughboys a sour start.

After a week-long layoff, the Doughboys got back into action with a positive note with a 35-0 shutout of the Carson-Newman Eagles. Fort Benning held a 14-0 lead at the half and blew it wide open in the third quarter to route the Eagles back to Tennessee and even their record at 1-1.

Crush Campbell! Those were the words on the players lips going into their third game against the Fort Campbell Eagles. And crush is exactly what they did, bombing the hapless Airborne soldiers 57-14. Tailback Anthony Hayes showed his flying colors as he ripped four touchdowns off of the Campbell defense. The game was never really in doubt as Fort Benning pounded out to touchdowns in the opening quarter and followed with one more and a safety before the half. The Doughboy defense played well with the line holding tight giving up only 75 yards on the ground. This put the Doughboy's record over the top at 2-1.

Quarterback Leamon Hall scramble out of the pocket.

Awesome is how the Doughboy's could describe the Alabama Crimson Tide J.V. team after they rolled right through and over Fort Benning 44-27. The Doughboys tried their best to keep the game close, but the Bama depth proved too much for them on that day as Alabama rolled up over 500 yards in total offense. This setback moved Benning's record back down to even level at 2-2.

Turnovers. The key word in the Doughboy's 29-21 loss to the Auburn J.V. team was definitely turnovers - seven big ones. Despite being down 15-7 at the half, Benning came back and matched the Tigers TD for TD until the final gun sounded and the Doughboys had recorded their third loss.

Following their disappointing loss, the Doughboys bounced back with an impressive 30-6 win over the Alabama State J.V. Hornets to once again even their record at 3-3. The game was still up for grabs at the halftime intermission with Benning holding a small 7-0 lead. However, in the third quarter the Doughboys sensed and kill and finished off the Hornets with a 16 point outburst. The defense played impressive, holding the Hornet offense to 163 yards in total offense.

The Doughboys then ventured down into Gator country to tangle with the Florida J.V. team. Quarterback Leamon Hall suffered a minor injury in the Doughboys 31-13 loss. Trailing 14-0 at the half, the Doughboys could never put any real scoring drives together. The loss dropped the Doughboys to 3-4 on the year with arch rival Fort Bragg coming to town the following weekend.

Despite having a strong passing game, Fort Benning fell to the Bragg Dragons 29-12. Benning trailed 9-0 at the half and came out in the second half with nothing but scoring still on their mind. However, the fourth quarter was the deciding period with Bragg scoring two touchdowns to outdistance the Doughboy defense.

A shocker is what a fan could call the Doughboys contest against The Citadel Bulldogs J.V. team as the Doughboys lost a thriller in the waning moments 31-30. With both teams moving the ball almost at will, scoring was abundant throughout the first half with the Bulldogs holding a slim 24-21 lead at the half. The Doughboys drew within one point on a safety and finally managed to take the lead when Hall hit receiver Julius Harden for a 10-yard touchdown pass with 40 seconds remaining. The Bulldogs not to be outdone, made their own drive and with 12 seconds remaining The Citadel scored on a 40-yard touchdown run.

Needing a good game, Fort Benning blew away the New River Marines 55-8 to take the interservice honors and up their record to 4-6 before going into this week's Georgia Southern game. There was no doubt from the beginning that the contest was going to be a runaway with both the offense and defense playing well. This should serve to help the Doughboys mentally going into Sunday's game. With the support of the surrounding community fans, there is only one possible outcome - victory!

Fort Benning to battle with Ga. Southern

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team will end their season Sunday at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium against the Georgia Southern College Eagles.

The Doughboys are coming off of an easy win over the New River Marines 55-8.

GSC, under the direction of former Georgia Bulldog defensive coordinator Erk Russell, has played only one game in the last 40 years. That was a recent 30-20 loss to the Florida State J.V. team.

That may sound strange, but it's not. GSC doesn't have a stadium or scholarships since this is the first year they have had a football program in so many years.

Admission to the game is $1.50 adults and $1 for children. Come out and support the Doughboys.

Clip the Eagles' wings!

Marksman set world records

By Tommy Pool
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Sparkplugged with record setting performances by members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, it was a landslide of gold medals and new world records for the United States team during the Tournament of the Americas Shooting Championships held in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, November 5-14.

Six new world records were established and three more equalled as the U.S. team garnered fourteen individual gold medals out of fourteen open events. The U.S. squad also captured twelve more gold medals in team events for a total of twenty-six gold won by the United States.

Standout individual performances were turned in by Lones Wigger, Earnest Vande Zande, Phil Whitworth (rifle), Matt Dryke, Earnest Neel, Alger Mullins, Dean Clark (shotgun), Erich Buljung, John Kailer (pistol) and Randy Stewart (running target).

In the rifle phase, Lones Wigger had one of the best tournaments ever, winning three gold and two silver in individual competition including setting one new world record and tying two more. He also picked up five more gold medals as a member of the winning U.S. teams.

His individual victories came in 50 meter small-bore rifle after scoring 1,164 out of 1,200 points to tie teammate Phil Whitworth and then win the event in the tiebreaking procedure with nineteen center shots to Whitworth's eleven. His total of 1,160 in the 300 meter rifle event tied his own world record set in 1978 in Seoul, Korea. The final gold also came with a new world record as he scored a total of 580 points out of 600 in the 300 meter standard rifle, beating the old mark by three points.

Not to be outdone, young Matt Dryke of USAMU startled the field as he scored a perfect 200 out of 200 targets for a new record in International Skeet competition and erase the old standard of 199 held by former USAMU member Bill Clemmons. The U.S. squad of Dryke, Dean Clark, Alger Mullins and civilian Neal Cumminsky teamed together to establish yet another new world record with a total of 593 out of 600, breaking the old mark by three birds. In International Trap, Earnest Neel of USAMU was an easy winner with 197 out of 200 and paced the U.S. squad to the gold medal in team competition.

Former USAMU members Ernest Vande Zande and Phil Whitworth came away with gold medals and world records as well. Vande Zande fired a perfect winning score of 600 out of 600 in the 50 meter English match event, while Phil Whitworth tied the existing record of 592 out of 600 in the 300

Two-time Olympic gold medal winner Lones Wigger of USAMU turned in one of the finest performances of his career during the Tournament of the Americas Shooting Championships last week.

Benning swimmers begin competition

The Fort Benning Barracudas Swim Team was paced by Desiree Weems with three first place finishes at the fourth annual Halloween A.A.U. Invitational Swim Meet held at Columbus College recently. Desiree placed first in the 200-yard individual medley, 100-yard breaststroke and 50-yard freestyle. She also achieved two AA time standards and placed second in the 100-yard freestyle, fourth in 200-yard freestyle and 100-yard butterfly, and sixth in 100-yard backstroke.

Other swimmers that placed in the meet were:
8 & Under Girls: Ann McConnell — third in 25-yard breaststroke and 25-yard freestyle and fifth in 25-yard butterfly.

9 & 10 Girls: Tami Cullifer — fifth in 50-yard backstroke.

13-14 Boys: David Christensen — second in 100-yard backstroke and third in 100-yard butterfly.

15-18 Boys: John Bogue — fourth in 100-yard breaststroke and Roland White second in 100-yard butterfly.

The eight & under Girls' Medley and Freestyle relay teams provided a lot of excitement and had two close second place finishes. The teams consisted of Erin Erndl, Kristen Erndl, Ann McConnell, Judy McConnell and Sheri Rogan.

Coach Roland White said that all the Barracudas performed well in this early season meet. The young Barracudas were in action again Nov. 14 in Atlanta and the senior swimmers traveled to Huntsville Nov. 13-15 for the Jack Frost Classic.

Christmas Seal Road Race

The LaGrange Track Club is sponsoring its annual Christmas Seal Road Race Nov. 21 at 9:30 a.m. with a one-mile run and a 10,000-meter run at 10 a.m.

The run, which begins at the LaGrange High School located at Granger Park, has several difficult hills with a one-half-mile hill at the five-mile mark. The 10,000-meter run will also feature Craig Virgin, who is the three-time winner of the Peachtree Road Race in Atlanta. He is also the World Cup Cross Country champion and placed second in the 1981 Boston Marathon.

T-shirts will be given to all the 10,000-meter runners as well as awards presented to the top three finishers in each age group.

Registration fee is $5 for the 10,000-meter race and $1 for the novice race. Entry blanks are available at local running stores in Columbus.

Dexter Running Clinic

All third, fourth and fifth grade students who have registered to run in the Faith Christmas Race to be held Dec. 5 will be offered a free running clinic Dec. 1.

The clinic, which will be held at the Dexter auditorium, is to be conducted by Bruce Skiles, a well-known local runner who holds the course record (24:40) in the five-mile Faith race.

Students interested in attending the clinic and entering the race should contact Diane Oliver in room six at Dexter School. The clinic will begin at 1:30 p.m. Students should be dressed in proper running attire.

Faith Christmas Road Race

Faith School will sponsor a Christmas Road Race Dec. 5. The course is flat, so all you runners who are just recuperating from the Infantry five-mile run have some relief.

The one-mile run for 14 years old and under gets underway at 9 a.m. The two-mile run will begin at 9:15 a.m. and the five-mile run is to begin at 9:45 a.m.

T-shirts will be given to all participants. Trophies and medallions will be awarded to the top overall and age group finishers. Entry fees are $4.25 (under 20 years of age) and $3.25 prior to race day. For ages over 20, the fee is $5.25 and $4.25 prior to the race. Send all entries to: Race Director, Faith School, 98 Running Ave., Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Bonne Bell Race

The Atlanta Track Club will again direct the Bonne Bell 10,000-meter race for all women Dec. 6 at 9 a.m. The start and finish will be at the Piedmont Park, 14th Street and Piedmont in Atlanta.

The course is hilly with a 6.2-mile loop through a residential area, plus all participants receive a race T-shirt and Bonne Bell cosmetic gifts and trophies go to the top five finishers in each age division.

Early registration is $5 by mail only and must be postmarked prior to Nov. 28. Late registration is $6 in person only by Dec. 5 from noon until 5 p.m. at the Hyatt Riviera, 1630 Peachtree St.

For registration forms write to the Atlanta Track Club, 3097 East Shadowlawn, Atlanta, Ga. 30305. For further information call Bob Kuwik at 545-2252.

meter prone match. In pistol competition, Erich Buljung won a gold, silver and bronze medal in the free, standard and centerfire pistol events. He also added three more gold medals to his total as a member of the winning U.S. teams. Teammate John Kailer won two gold as a member of the Standard and Centerfire pistol squads.

The final event of the championship ended with the gold medal being won by USAMU's Randy Stewart in the 50 meter running target championships. Stewart's score of 575 out of 600 outdistanced former world champion H. Bellingroth of Colombia by eight points. The U.S. squad of Stewart, Bob Partridge, Charles Davis and Todd Bensley finished second to Colombia in team competition with 2,232 points to 2,254.

The old pot-bellied stove is on the way back in the U.S.

As petroleum fuels become more expensive, more and more Americans are turning to heating their homes with wood- or coal-burning stoves.

There were fewer than a dozen stove manufacturers left in the U.S. in 1973, but today the stove business has become a multi-million dollar industry.

Wood has become one of the favorite alternative fuels since it is a renewable resource.

As with any type of heating system, there are restrictions and problems.

A wood stove is not like a conventional oil or gas heating system. You just can't set it and forget it. The wood-burning stove needs periodic attention.

If you enjoy stoking, poking, and tending, though, then the change to the old pot-bellied stove may be for you.

One of the first things to do—before you even think about getting a stove—is to check the local housing code. There are some areas where prohibitions against burning wood or coal have been put into effect to combat air pollution. And, every locality has its fire safety requirements.

In addition, check out the home insurance policy to see if it has any clauses which will limit coverage if you install a stove.

If all checks out and you do get a stove, then you have to learn how to build a fire.

Nothing can be so frustrat-

Wood Burning Stoves...

They're Back As Petroleum Gets Scarce

ing to a beginner as failing to start a fire on the first try—to say nothing of failing on the second, third, etc., tries.

There are basically three essentials in starting a fire—fuel, oxygen, and temperature.

To start a fire the first time around you need dry fuel, plenty of oxygen, and high temperatures.

To get the proper combination you:

—open the damper and air inlets on the stove all the way, —crumple or shred newspapers and place them in the bottom of the stove; these will provide the high temperatures needed to ignite the wood,

—stack small pieces of very dry kindling on the paper "teepee" style, —light the paper, then wait until the fire is blazing before adding larger pieces of fuel.

After ten minutes, close down the air controls and you will have a blazing, long-burning fire.

Every chimney will need cleaning eventually.

You can hire someone to do it or do it yourself. The easiest way to do this dirty job is with a brush and extension handles, a method which permits one person to do the entire job from below.

Or, if your roof is accessible, get one person on the roof and put yourself in the room where the stove is. The one on the roof passes a rope down which is attached to a wire chimney brush. Between you pulling and your helper pulling, the brush can be used to scour the entire chimney in minutes.

It's dirty work, but the alternative may be a chimney fire which can occur when large deposits of creosote—a wood-burning by-product—in the chimney are exposed to high temperatures.

If you do have a chimney fire, close off the damper and air inlets in the stove to aid in controlling it, then call the fire department immediately.

After the chimney fire is brought under control, don't start another fire in the stove until the entire chimney is checked carefully.

If you think you might be interested in putting in a stove there are two publications available which you should get. Both are free. They are:

—"Stove Installation and Safety" from the National Solar Heating & Cooling Information Center, P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, Md. 20850, and —"Heating With Wood" (EDM-1150) from the DOE Technical Information Center, P.O. Box 62, Oak Ridge, Tenn. 37830.

FOR WOOD BURNERS

SAVINGS HINTS

If you're going to burn wood in your stove, make certain that it is as dry as possible.

Well-seasoned wood gives off more heat and reduces the creosote deposits in the chimney.

Your best bet is to buy this winter for burning next winter.

The chart below will give you an idea of the effects of seasoning of hardwoods on moisture and heat. The drier the wood, the more the heat it gives off.

Relative Heat Value (% of value for air dry)	Moisture Content (% of oven-dried weight)
85	Green in fall, winter, or spring	80
93	Green in summer	65
	Trees leaf-felled in summer
96	after 2 weeks	45
97	Spring wood seasoned 3 months	35
98	Spring wood seasoned 6 months	30
100	Dry wood seasoned 12 months	25

FORT BENNING NATIONAL BANK Shareholder's Meeting
Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to call of its directors, a special meeting of the shareholders of Fort Benning National Bank will be held at its banking house in the City of Fort Benning, State of Georgia, on Friday, December 4, 1981 at 3:00 p.m., for the purpose of considering and determining by vote whether an agreement to merge the said bank and The First National Bank of Columbus, Georgia, located in the City of Columbus, State of Georgia, under the provisions of the laws of the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed, subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D.C., and for the purpose of voting upon any other matters, incidental to the proposed merger of the two banks. A copy of the aforesaid agreement, executed by a majority of the directors of each of the two banks, providing for the merger, is on file at the bank and may be inspected during business hours.
William A. Lyman,
President

Freedom, Soldiers and Thanksgiving

By Russell W. Andrews
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Holidays provide all of us an opportunity for reflection. As the coming Thanksgiving season suggests, it is a time to count our blessings and to give thanks.

But what have we to be thankful for? I'm certain if each one of us takes but a moment we can come up with ten good reasons to give thanks--good health, family, prosperity, winning football teams in Georgia, two cars, no cavities, southern sunshine, good neighbors, and others. The list seldom includes two things that have become very dear to me over the years.

The first is the wonderful freedom we enjoy in this great nation. Yes, I know it sounds a bit corny. Several years ago my wife and I had the opportunity to travel to the Soviet Union. We were impressed only by the vastness of the country, its great art and the military strength evident almost everywhere.

However, individual freedoms were sorely lacking and the oppression was so thick you could cut it with a knife. It was obvious, even to the most casual visitors, that the average Soviet citizen is always looking over his shoulder to see who's in charge. The trip was an experience in Civics 101 and we became extraordinarily grateful for the freedoms we enjoy routinely. These freedoms are not enjoyed by many people throughout the world.

In a round-about way, I'll get to the second point. Please bear with me.

Our nation also maintains a strong defense, which is getting stronger because of the substantial threat to our various interests and to our freedoms. Modern technology and a renewed national will are providing new means for a strong defense. However, even technology must take notice that the finest, most essential and important weapon on the battlefield is the soldier. Without the soldier's discipline, willingness to serve and to endure hardship, patience, stamina, savvy and general good humor, this great nation will cease being great. By the way, you should know and take comfort that the best Infantry Soldiers in the world are trained right here at Fort Benning, Ga.

It must be obvious by now that my list of things to be thankful for includes both our marvelous freedoms and the dedicated young soldiers who make them possible. Perhaps freedom and the soldiers who insure the freedom could be added to your "thanks" list this Thanksgiving. (Courtesy of the Rote-A-Bit)

Chaplain's Comments

Words, the base of strength or downfall

Chaplain Joseph Lusk

Sightseeing Road Chapel

Have you ever thought about the power that proceeds from your mouth? Although the human tongue is quite small, it has the ability to generate high voltage.

Words are powerful. They carry with them the potential to hurt or heal. They can produce confusion or they can bring clarification to an unclear situation. Since words are so strong, we must strive to choose them carefully. A proper word from us may be the exact therapy another person needs.

One of the strongest and most helpful words is a word of praise. A word of praise can cheer a discouraged person and bring hope to one who sees no reason to hope. Appropriate words of praise and encouragement often provide the strength an individual needs to overcome in the midst of trying circumstances.

A few years ago, during a difficult time in my life, I received an appreciative letter from a close friend. That meaningful letter was just the medicine I needed to keep going. I still have that letter.

Rare, or non-existent, is the person who does not need and appreciate words of praise. Obviously, praise must be genuine in order to have the proper effect. If shared sincerely, praise acts as sunshine to a darkened room and as cool water to a parched mouth.

The Bible tells us that wholesome praise brings honor to God. The psalmist declares, "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." If you're reading these words, I assume you are breathing. As fellow-breathers, I'm glad we can accept the challenge to praise the God and bring healing to the lives of others.

About the cover:

The cover is an ensemble of thoughts and ideas. The soldier is taken from a 2nd Infantry Division greeting card.

The words are those of Abraham Lincoln, and were extracted from the Retired Officer magazine.

The artwork was accomplished through the efforts of Charlotte Londot, Creative Design Office, The LEDGER-ENQUIRER.

Prayer breakfast slated for Dec. 4

The annual Community Prayer Breakfast for Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning is scheduled Friday, Dec. 4, at the Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

Sponsored by the Exchange Club of Columbus, this yearly event is the cornerstone of the club's One Nation Under God program.

Keynote speaker this year will be Max Cleland, an Army veteran who lost both legs and one arm in Vietnam. Upon his return he was elected state senator in Georgia and more recently was administrator of the Veterans Administration under President Jimmy Carter.

Featured will be the music of the 283rd Army

Band from Fort Benning and the voice of Sarah Dowis, featured at Pinehurst Baptist Church. Mrs. Dowis, well known in tri-city circles, will present a medley of religious, patriotic and inspirational songs and lead in group singing.

Leaders of Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County are expected to attend.

Jack Carter, president of the Exchange Club of Columbus, cited the national and local objective of the club's One Nation Under God program:

"To make America truly One Nation Under God, its citizens, deeply conscious of the transcendence of religious faith in the nation's heritage and future; aware that we have always been and must always be a religious nation, trusting firmly in God as our Protector, Guide and source of strength; acknowledging Him as the Author of freedom and Architect of the Republic; and fully realizing that only as one nation under God can we preserve liberty and justice for all."

A continental breakfast will be augmented with sausage and biscuits.

Tickets, available from banks and S&Ls in the area as well as from Exchange Club members, are $4.

Thanksgiving was originated by the Pilgrims as a way of celebrating their survival in a harsh environment filled with hazards. Successive generations have continued the tradition, for hazards are always present in our everyday lives.

I would like to extend my best wishes to each of you for a pleasurable and safe Thanksgiving holiday. I emphasize a "safe holiday" since safety can never be overstressed.

Unfortunately, tragedy strikes many times during each holiday period in the form of highway accidents and accidents during recreational pursuits. Most of the deaths and injuries sustained in these accidents could have been easily prevented.

I hope each of you will exercise both common sense and basic safety measures in all your holiday endeavors and activities. It's only through a concerted effort by everyone that we can all enjoy an accident-free Thanksgiving holiday. Let's make this our goal for Thanksgiving and everyday.

Happy Thanksgiving.

Pvt. 1 Bernie Shepherd (l) helps get another airborne student ready to ride before it's his turn.

Free tower

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Hit the hole, pole man, hit the hole," airborne students chant as they cheer the "pole man" on to spear the center of the steel ring.

Soldiers then gather around under the ring to rig a canopy before another one of them can ride up the 250-foot free tower and make a jump. Sgt. Roy Fleshman, the tower button sergeant, who controls the ups and downs at the tower, tells them to "enjoy your ride."

It was tower week for airborne class 5-82, week two of airborne training. Two 250-foot towers enable the students to practice canopy control and parachute landing falls.

SFC James A. Clark, NCOIC of tower branch, says, "With the exception of the "prop blast" and "opening shock", a drop from the free tower is very similar to jumping from an aircraft. The rate of descent is virtually the same."

Airborne students must successfully demonstrate control of their parachute during their descent. They must also execute "the prepare to land" attitude and make a proper parachute landing fall. Additionally they must show their ability to take commands by responding correctly to directions given them from the ground.

The student must get a rating of 50 percent on his or her jumps (minimum of two jumps, maximum of four) off the Free Tower before going forward to the final week of airborne training, jump week.

Going up

A ride on the 250 foot free tower is the next best thing to parachuting from a plane.

A pole man (l) gets ready to spear the next steel ring that will come down.

Airborne student Mark Anderson is the pole man running with the next canopy so he can "hit the hole."

Pvt. 1 David Szeszycki (l) helps straighten out the parachute lines of an airborne student. SSgt. Shelton Hall (r) observes.

Ground breaking for the largest applied solar facility in the United States took place Nov. 12, on Fort Benning's Indian-head Road. When completed the $4 million facility will heat water for a number of barracks and the post laundry at a savings of about $35,000 a month in fuel costs. Handling the shovels during the recent ceremony were: (l-r) area engineer Ron Sibold, contractor Frank Baxley, industrial technologist Dick Parsons, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, Columbus Chamber of Commerce president Jim Blanchard and Jim Carmody of the planning branch.

Secretary of Army will speak at AUSA meeting

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh, Jr., will speak at the annual Fall General Membership Meeting of the Association of the United States Army Dec. 2 at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

Secretary Marsh The meeting will open with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner, a business meeting and Secretary Marsh's address. The Fort Benning Combo will provide entertainment during the evening.

A guest at the meeting will be Joe Rogers of Augusta, Ga., president of the third Region of the AUSA. Secretary Marsh, who graduated from Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning in 1944, has served in the active Army, Army Reserves and the Virginia National Guard. He retired in 1976 as a lieutenant colonel.

He is a former Virginia congressman and assistant secretary of defense for legislative affairs. He was Vice President Ford's assistant for national security affairs in 1974, and became counsellor, with cabinet rank, to President Ford when he became president in August 1974.

Tickets for the meeting will cost $12.50 per person and may be obtained at local banks and Chambers of Commerce, and from the Public Affairs Office, Protocol Office and Sergeants Major at Fort Benning.

Reservists train with infantry

Story and photos by Cecelia K. Ellis

2nd Battalion, 70th Regt., 4th Brigade (Inf), 70th Division (Trng), USARC

With all of the usual vigor, training in the skills of the infantryman continued here as 96 members of a Reserve Infantry Training unit reported to the 1st Infantry Training Brigade to train and be trained.

Military courtesies with a touch of Southern hospitality were extended by members of the 3rd Battalion, 1st ITB to the members of the 2nd of the 70th, 4th Brigade (Inf), 70th Division (Trng), USAR, from Bloomington, Ind. as the reservists began their two-weeks of Annual Training (AT).

"We are very glad to have you with us, your presence certainly helps us and we hope we help you as well," said Lt. Col. John M. Herold, 3rd Battalion Commander.

During the AT cycle it was the responsibility of the reserve unit to assist their active Army counterparts in the performance of daily duties. In turn it was the responsibility of the active Army personnel to keep the reservists informed of any new training techniques and skills.

Officers, NCO's and enlisted men alike must take a dip before leaving the confidence source. Here Capt. David G. Dicus, 2nd of the 70th Reserves, is deposited by the men he helped to train.

Dining facilities ready for Thanksgiving meal

By J. C. Hope
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you go up to someone on the street and ask them, "What do you remember the most about last Thanksgiving?" the answer you would probably get is, "Thanksgiving dinner."

For many years it's been a tradition to top off Thanksgiving Day with a carefully prepared feast consisting of all sorts of delectable foods. For those of us who won't be able to go home for Thanksgiving, the Food Services Division is getting ready to put together a holiday meal that rivals Mom's.

In order to prepare this meal, Food Services has brought in 6,900 lbs. of turkey, 2,500 lbs. of cranberry sauce, 3,600 lbs. of smoked ham, 1,800 lbs. of shrimp, 1,600 pumpkin pies, 1,200 mince meat pies and over 20,700 lbs. of fruits, nuts and hard candies.

Now, decorations in the assorted mess halls is up to the discretion of the mess sergeant. But from what I've seen so far, some of the mess halls will be decorated to the maximum. According to SFC Harvey Blackie, Food Service Supervisor, "The rates for soldiers who receive separate rations, but want to eat in the mess hall, are:

Enlisted, $2.15; Children under 12, $2.30; Civilian guests, $3.40; Officers $3.40."

Even though you may say "Nobody can cook like my Mom!," Fort Benning's mess halls are going to do their best to come close. Have a Happy Thanksgiving!

Cadet Major Richard Leibl and his mother Elaine Leibl.

Captain of drill team earns Legion of Valor

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A seventeen-year-old senior at Spencer High School has been awarded the Legion of Valor with Bronze Cross for his academic excellence and proven leadership.

The award was given to Richard Leibl by a member of the "Legion of Valor of The United States of America," an elite society of 2,000 members who themselves have earned medals for valor. Its members have won medals of valor such as the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, the Navy Cross and the Air Force Cross.

The legion awards the valor medal to only a few outstanding ROTC cadets nationwide.

Cadet Major Leibl has been Spencer High School's drill commander for the past two years. He has also acted as the school's Junior Reserve Officer Training Corp battlegroup commander. He is a member of the National Honor Society, an explorer scout, and was nominated for the Georgia State Governor's Honors Program. He also lettered in tennis and has a 3.9 grade-point average.

Principal Franklin Douglas said of him, "He believes in the principles that to be a good leader one must know how to follow and leading must be by example. He is a highly intellectual and mature young man for his age."

His geometry teacher, Pamela Coffield, says, "His many positive attributes and his love for the military make him a natural for the award."

Spencer tennis coach, Fenton L. Dixon, says, "He is the type of person students look to for support and guidance."

Richard Leibl has been accepted at North Georgia College, which is a military college.

Thanksgiving

We send our wishes, hopes and prayers that next year, on this day and everyday, we can be thankful for the blessings showered on those less fortunate...
 .the presence of the dignity of man among the poor...
 .the return of love, decency and morality into the hearts of the powerful...
 .the enlightening of the minds of those who oppress...
 .and the returning of peace to this currently troubled world.

598th Support Company ready for combat

Story and photos by Tony Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Support - an important word. Without the support units located on post, the line units could be in deep trouble. One such support unit is the 598th Maintenance Company.

The 598th supports all units on post except the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 43rd Engineers in the engineering portion of their unit. "That's really a pretty big job when you think of how large the post is," says SFC Daniel Conner, NCOIC of the maintenance shop.

The 598th, which works on an average of 75 vehicles a week, has four basic shops - automotive maintenance, fuel and electric, electronic maintenance and the engineering shop. The jobs that are performed range from fixing tires to overhauling engines.

The automotive shop performs all maintenance on all wheeled vehicles while the electronic maintenance shop repairs unclassified communication equipment. The fuel and electric shop repairs brake shoes, carburetors, distributors, alternators and generators. The engineering shop repairs heavy equipment such as tracked vehicles.

The 598th goes on local exercises every quarter-year to keep on their toes to be combat ready. Says Conner, "It's a must that the support units, such as the 598th, be as ready as the infantry."

In the fuel and electric shop a soldier repairs a brakeshoe.

Spec.4 Ronnie Johnson gets ready to overhaul an engine.

Pvt. Timmy Miller gets down to take a close look at the troubled engine.

Checking a gasket before taking the engine out.

A soldier inspects brake-shoes in the fuel and electric shop.

A Thanksgiving Message

Today, the traditional day of counting blessings taken for granted throughout the year, we give our thanks for the blessings we enjoy as citizens of a free democracy.

We are grateful for the freedoms which we often take for granted, the right to choose our religious faith . . . to elect those who govern and the obligations of the governed to guide . . . to criticize and even condemn those who misuse their official responsibilities.

As a nation and a people, we're grateful for the beautifully rich soil we are blessed with and the means to produce food to feed not only ourselves and our allies, but also the hungry throughout the world.

We send our wishes, hopes and prayers that next year, on this day and everyday, we can be thankful for the blessings showered on those less fortunate . . . the presence of the dignity of man among the poor . . . the return of love, decency and morality into the hearts of the powerful . . . the enlightening of the minds of those who oppress . . . and the returning of peace to this currently troubled world.

On this day of family unity, as we relax from the food and drink which has filled our bodies, we offer a prayer to the god of every faith for unity, love and blessings in the world, such as those felt within our homes this day.

Environmentalist wins employee of month

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"My job is to keep the post in compliance with preservation laws," says Tim Mullen, this month's Civilian Employee of the Month.

Mullen, an environmental specialist with the post's Environmental Management Office, deals with air, water and noise pollution control, endangered species and toxic waste materials. "I go out and look at what is going to be built and assess what impact it will have on the environment," says Mullen.

Mullen was surprised when he received the award. "I knew I was being considered, but I wasn't sure about it." Mullen, who is now setting up a historic and archaeological program, received the award primarily because he reorganized and revitalized the Installation Historic Preservation Committee. Mullen also helped the Boy Scouts build a nature trail behind Lloyd School recently. He gives occasional Audobon Society lectures as well.

"The big problem our office has," says Mullen, a Columbus resident for two years, "is that people don't know about the environment, so we have to guide them."

Mullen, who worked for the Corps of Engineers in Illinois before coming here, enjoys outdoor sports such as canoing, hunting and woodwork in his off time.

New insurance program takes effect Dec. 1

WASHINGTON—New maximum insurance coverage for all active duty soldiers, reservists and veterans under the government's Group Life Insurance Program takes effect Dec. 1, 1981.

According to Army officials, the Servicemember's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) and the Veterans Group Life Insurance (VGLI) will increase from $20,000 to $35,000 for all soldiers covered under the program.

Active duty members automatically will be enrolled for the maximum coverage under SGLI. This includes those members who had previously elected to reduce coverage or no coverage in the program.

The blanket enrollment is taking place, officials say, to assure that everyone who wants the coverage will have it. Soldiers still may elect to waive or reduce their participation in SGLI, but those wishing to do so must submit new waiver or change forms to their local Finance and Accounting offices. If the new waiver or reduction is desired effective in December, the necessary forms (DD-93 and VA 29-8286) must be completed before Nov. 30.

SGLI may be secured in increments of $5,000 for 75 cents. Under the new coverage, members will pay $5.25 monthly for the full $35,000 maximum coverage.

The VGLI is a five-year insurance plan available only to SGLI holders who leave the military. The new higher rates will affect those soldiers separating from the Army on or after Dec. 1. Those who leave the service earlier will be eligible for a maximum of $20,000 coverage.

Monthly premiums for the VGLI renewal program remain unchanged at $5.95 for the maximum $35,000 coverage for veterans under 35 years of age and $11.90 monthly for those 35 and older. (ARNews)

Remembering all ...with thanks!

Thanksgiving ... a traditional day of thankfulness for the blessings of a bountiful harvest. And, in the day to day working relationship in our lives, we here at Fort Benning National Bank have many things to be thankful for. One is our pleasant business associations with you, the people and the business community in which we exist. We hope that our association will continue in that same beneficent atmosphere for many Thanksgivings to come. We will transact no business on Thursday, November 26th, in observance of this day of Thanksgiving.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Burglary is a very ancient profession. Men have practiced this trade in every age. The English writer, G.K. Chesterton, disputed the notion that thieves have no respect for the property of others. He once wrote, "Thieves do respect property. They merely wish that property to become their property so that they may more respect it."

Some statistics will show just how much thieves do respect the property of others:

Burglaries--

- Rates up 14 percent from 1980 to 1981.
- 64 percent of burglaries were residential.
- Night-time burglaries decreased 10 percent.
- 4,416 burglaries/housebreakings in 1980 on Army installations.

According to the Criminal Investigation Division (CID), nearly half of the burglaries and housebreakings they investigated occurred in the barracks. Nearly half the burglaries and 13 percent of the housebreakings occurred in family quarters. More than half of all larcenies occurred in the troop billeting areas.

Col. Earp

Last year, the Army settled more than 11,000 claims for personal property losses that occurred in government quarters or other government facilities. The cost--almost three million dollars. Call them what you will-- thieves, burglars or housebreakers; they get as much satisfaction from their work as you may get from yours. People who steal count on human weaknesses. They know how careless or complacent most people are. One thief was heard to say, "People ask for trouble. We only oblige them."

There is no way you can make your home 100 percent burglar prove, but there are certain things you can do to make it less likely that a burglar will pick your home as his target, or protect yourself in case he does.

Make it tough

- All your outside doors should have locks that resist picking and force. Most experts recommend either a deadbolt lock that must be opened with a key, or a pin tumbler cylinder lock.
- Never put your house keys under a doormat or in the mailbox. Don't leave them hanging on a nail outside.

- Keep shrubbery trimmed around doors and windows so as not to give a thief a convenient place to hide.

Make him think your home

- Leave lights on while you're away.
- If you're going to be gone for a long period, invest in a timer that turns lights on and off at designated times.
- Leave outside lights on whether you're at home or not, since they remove the would-be thief's cover of darkness.
- Don't allow mail or newspapers to accumulate.
- Stop delivery of mail or papers.
- Have a neighbor remove mail or papers daily.
- Have your lawn mowed regularly so your house looks lived in.

Install a burglar alarm

- A burglar alarm system is a good investment.
- See MARSHAL'S, page 26

Services available

WASHINGTON--Now that travel plans are all firmed up, let's take a look at some of the services available to you travelers, say Military Traffic Management Command officials.

The United Services Organization (USO) Inc., has major courtesy lounges located around the country for servicemembers moving through airports. These airports are located in Atlanta, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Oh., Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis and Washington D. C.. Overseas lounges are also available in Honolulu, Hi. and Frankfurt, West Germany.

Some lounges offer babysitting, nursery and interpretation services. The Honolulu lounge also provides sleeping facilities for stranded travelers.

Information desks, operated by the USO, are available at airports in Colorado Springs, Colo., Los Angeles International Airport, Oakland, Calif., Orlando, Fla., Andrews Air Force Base and Kimpo International Airport, Seoul, South Korea. Hours of operation vary from center to center, but most are open during heavy traffic hours.

Servicemembers traveling by air through Minneapolis-St. Paul can take advantage of the servicemember's center, Inc. of Minneapolis. This facility, located on the ticketing concourse at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport, is open 24-hours a day, year-round. The servicemember's center provides several free services including refreshments, game room and sleeping area.

Personnel with problems on scheduling local transportation, shortage of funds, or expiration of leave time may obtain help at Military Information desks located in most of the major U.S. ari terminals. Distressed members may also seek assistance from the nearest Military Installation, regardless of branch of service.

The American Red Cross, traveler's aid and various other USO centers listed in local telephone directories are available to assist military travelers.

Servicemembers are urged to report excellent service or any travel deficiencies to the Military Traffic Management Command, Attn:MT-PTF, Washington, D.C. 20314, on DD Form 1341 (Report of Commercial Service). The form may be obtained from local Military Installation Transportation Offices.

To insure military members continue to receive nothing less than high quality service, MTMC officials encourage the filing of these pre-addressed, pre-paid forms with the cited office. (ARNews)

Shop 4, keeps them flying

Story and photos by Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army aviation, like everything else, is an increasingly expensive operation. Aircraft that are down for extended maintenance further increase the operational cost and reduce the cost effectiveness of the equipment. Keeping the aircraft down-time to a minimum is the mission of the Aircraft Branch, Maintenance Division, Directorate of Industrial Operations, (Shop 4).

Shop 4 provides aviation intermediate maintenance and back-up aviation maintenance to Army and U.S. Army Reserve units in a four state area (Ala., Ga., Miss., and Fla.) and provides aircraft recovery in those four states as well as in Tennessee and southwest Kentucky. This task involves 286 rotary wing and 43 fixed wing aircraft.

The normal level of maintenance provided by Shop 4 is mid level, between unit and depot, and is accomplished by combining four different branches of the Maintenance Division. These are the aircraft branch with its seven shops and maintenance section, the quality control section, belonging to the quality control chief, the test pilot CWO2 Tommy Brewer, who works for the installation maintenance officer, and the avionics shop, belonging to Shop 5.

One of the biggest factors in accomplishing the mission is the extensive maintenance experience accumulated over the years, according to aircraft mechanic general foreman George Ennis. He says the average aircraft maintenance level is 24 years, with the most experienced individual having worked in this field for 35 years.

All aircraft coming in for maintenance are initially inspected by the quality control section to determine the nature and extent of maintenance required. After consultation, the aircraft, or aircraft parts, are work-ordered to one of the eight shops of the aircraft maintenance section. They are: Sheet metal repair, prop and rotor, hydraulic, instrument, electronic, engine, avionics and welding and repair.

The aircraft maintenance section performs all aircraft maintenance, including engine and transmission changes. When finished with an aircraft, the quality control section completes a final inspection on it and if a test flight is required, it is accomplished by the test pilot, Brewer. Following a successful test flight, the aircraft is released to its unit.

A maintenance program of this size can't be supported out of a mechanic's tool box. The tool room contains some 2,000 separate items, including 200 of the type that require periodic calibration.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Test pilot CWO2 Tommy Brewer fills out a worksheet on a helicopter after the successful completion of a test flight.

Richard Lebaron, engine shop, works on a turbine engine. This type of engine is used to power the Army's OH-58A helicopter.

Jessie Floyd, maintenance section, works on the aileron of an aircraft.

Charles Blalock, instrument shop, checks newly repaired aircraft altimeter for accuracy before releasing it.

Aircraft recovery plays an important part in the mission of Shop 4. All Army and Army Reserve units aircraft being ferried through the six state area go on the shop for recovery in the event an aircraft goes down for maintenance problems. The most recent recovery, in recent times, involved changing an engine on a Chinook helicopter in Nashville, Tenn.

Shop 4 has watched the Army change from the piston engine powered aircraft of the 1950s to today's mostly turbine engine fleet. Some aircraft are easier to work on and have a better reputation among maintenance folks than others. In Shop 4 the expression, "Now that was a great helicopter," often refers to the Choctaw. It last saw active Army service in the early 1970s.

Aircraft maintenance is an ever-changing field, and new aircraft require the learning of new skills and procedures. Recently added to the Fort Benning aircraft fleet are 15 Black Hawk helicopters assigned to the 121st Aviation Company.

To prepare themselves for handling maintenance on this aircraft, six personnel from Shop 4 attended a two week New Equipment Training Team course for the "bird" prior to its arrival on post. They will pass on to their fellow workers what they have learned about the Black Hawk.

Although aircraft maintenance is the prime responsibility, the facilities of Shop 4 are often used for other purposes.

The magnetic flaw detection test equipment in the electric shop has been used to test, among other things, a steering modification on Gamma Goats, and engine cylinder heads and machine gun barrels for cracks that otherwise would be invisible and might lead to malfunction.

A direct exchange program on aircraft parts is another service provided by the personnel of Shop 4. Thirteen items including batteries, inverters, starter-generators, generators, clocks and landing lights are available for immediate exchange by the supported units.

DON'T LET YOUR BUDDIES MAKE THE WRONG DECISION FOR YOU.

There are two sides to every story, including reenlistment. If you're getting pressure from your "buddies" to get out, take a tip from Sgt. David Berrios.

"When someone starts telling me I should get out, I always consider the source. The Army's not for everyone. But as far as I'm concerned, it's my life. I've got to do what's right for me and my family.

If more people took the time to find out about the opportunities of reenlisting, they might start talking differently."

The Army needs good soldiers to stay in. But making the right decision involves talking to someone who deals in facts, not opinions.

So have a talk with your Reenlistment NCO. And make up your own mind about reenlisting.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE. REENLIST.

Crime on post does not pay

Valuable items

- Keep valuables in a safe deposit box at the bank.
- Mark selected items with your identification.
- High value items like televisions and stereos should be marked.
- If they're stolen, the markings that you have had put on the items can be an aid to the police in tracing the lost articles.

• Keep records of all your items that have serial numbers.

Above all, don't confront a burglar if you happen to surprise one in your home. Don't pull a gun or other weapon on him. He may take it away from you or use a weapon of his own. Chances are, if you don't provoke him, he won't harm you. Try to remember how he looks--approximate height, weight, how he's dressed-- to help police identify him later. Remember, burglars consider themselves professionals, so it is up to you to make yourself as unattractive a target as possible for them. Help your military police make Fort Benning a safe and pleasant place to live.

Plan early for holidays

WASHINGTON--If you're planning to travel over the Christmas holidays, you should plan early, say Military Traffic Management Command officials.

The Christmas holiday season always brings lots of congestion at air, bus and train terminals, and this season it will be worse than ever.

Because of the current shortage of air traffic controllers, air carriers will reduce their scheduled service by 77 percent beginning Dec. 1, 1981, say officials. Because of this situation, along with the expected rise in furlough fare travel, it's important that military members plan their trips carefully and make reservations as soon as possible.

Why plan early? The main reason is to take advantage of the discount fares available to military personnel.

Several airlines (American, Air Florida, Air Midwest, Continental, Ozark, Braniff, US Air, Empire, Aspen Piedmont, TWA, Texas International, Eastern, United, Altair, Northwest, Western and Delta) are offering a 50 percent discount furlough fare. With all reserved seating, all active duty personnel may take advantage of the discounts.

Service academy cadets and personnel traveling within seven days after their date of discharge from the military are also eligible. This 50 percent discount program for servicemembers does not include their family members.

All airlines above, with the exception of Texas International, offer the special fare over all of their domestic routes.

Pan American airlines has discontinued its military furlough fare as of Nov. 16, 1981, because of major changes in its CONUS fare structure.

Also, TWA has lifted blackout dates previously imposed on holiday travel. Military members may now take advantage of the furlough fare on TWA any day during the holiday season.

The 25 percent furlough fare discounts are available on both one-way and round-trip coach tickets year-round. However, military furlough fares do not apply on the metro-liner.

To ensure a happy holiday, make your travel plans now.

Masonic Club to give food baskets

Thanksgiving is a holiday on which people give thanks for their many blessings.

The members of the Prince Hall Masonic Study Club take the thought one step further by preparing food baskets for two needy families.

"We try to make it our business to do something to help the needy around Fort Benning and Columbus," said Sgt. Lenn Washington, the member in charge of preparing and distributing the food baskets. "At every meeting the members brought in a few canned goods, and we are buying turkeys to go in the baskets," said Washington.

The basket for Fort Benning will be turned over to Mrs. Quintel at the ACS, and she will select the needy family. The Welfare Office downtown will be presented with the second basket and will select a family in the city who needs it.

The Study Club is sponsored by the Sons of King Solomon Lodge #358.

Insure your Christmas mail gets there on time

By Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There is no feeling quite like the excitement of opening presents from family on Christmas morning, even if you are opening them thousands of miles from home.

To insure that your Christmas cards and packages are delivered on time, don't wait until the last minute to mail them. If for some reason you must mail at the last minute, the post office provides express and special delivery mail, at extra cost, which deliver up to and even on Christmas day.

The post office does not hire extra help during the busy holiday season, but the regular employees work a lot of overtime, according to Ron Fisher, the customer service representative at the downtown post office. He said ad campaigns of the last few years have solved the problem of last minute mailing but postal workers still have plenty of work to do because the volume of mail increases to between 500,000 and 600,000 pieces of mail per day.

Fisher said that one of Santa's elves has been working at the post office for the last four or five years to help handle all of Santa's mail. He said as long as the volume of mail doesn't get out of hand that Santa's mail would continue to be answered. For the last three years the first letter to Santa has arrived in August he said.

"If you are mailing fragile articles you can't get enough packing," said Fisher.

When preparing packages for mailing, use strong cardboard boxes and reinforced tape, and enclose the address inside the package in case of damage to the exterior wrappings. If the gift is fragile, it is a good idea to put it in a box and pack that box inside another box with packing materials.

Insurance is available for the value of the gift, but Fisher suggests that people not overinsure. In case of loss or damage, the post office will pay the actual value of the item, not the value of the insurance coverage. The post office does not open packages to check on the insurable value of the contents, they take the customer's word for it.

"Most people are pretty doggone honest," stated Fisher.

All post offices will keep regular operating hours during the holiday season, which are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

AFRTS to carry Army-Navy game

WASHINGTON—When the Army mule meets the Navy goat at Veteran's Stadium in Philadelphia Dec. 5, American Forces Radio and Television Service (AFRTS) will broadcast live accounts of the action.

The Army-Navy game will be carried on AFRTS radio, including shortwave frequencies, and television via satellite to defense personnel overseas.

Radio broadcasts are scheduled to start at 3:45 p.m. CONUS Eastern Standard Time (EST). Television broadcasts will begin at 3:30 p.m. CONUS EST.

Although Navy won the first Army-Navy game in 1890, Army came back to win the second year and it has been neck and neck ever since. Navy has won 38 games and Army 37, with 6 games tied.

The game will be aired in CONUS by ABC Television, its affiliates and the Mutual Radio Network at the above times.

AER can offer quick help

Story by Don Rhodes
Photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A soldier is awakened by an incessant pounding at his billets door. He looks at the clock. One-thirty. He looks out the window. It's still dark. He sighs in relief; at least he hasn't overslept.

He gets up and pads barefooted and sleepily to the door. Opening it, he sees the CQ looking back at him.

"Top and the old man are down in the orderly room," the CQ says. "They want to see you right away."

"What for, man? It's one-thirty in the morning."

"I don't know, they didn't tell me. But if I were you I'd hurry. They wouldn't both be here at this hour if it wasn't important."

"Right, right. Tell 'em I'll be there in a minute."

The soldier pads across the room to the chair where he hung up his jeans the night before. He slips them on and pulls on a pair of boots. He wonders why he's been called downstairs at this hour of the morning.

When he gets to the orderly room he's offered a seat. He lights a cigarette and looks questioningly at his CO.

"I'm sorry to have to tell you this, but your grandfather has passed away. The Red Cross has verified it," the commander says.

At first he's stunned. Then the soldier's mind starts reeling with thoughts of his family. He had been raised by his grandparents since shortly after he had been born.

"I've got to go home," he says. "Top is working on your leave form now," the commander tells him. "How will you get there?" the CO asks.

"Ah... I don't know," the soldier answers. "Payday isn't until next week. I don't have any money." He looks at his CO. "What can I do?" he asks.

Lt. Parker stocks the shelves of the food locker.

The CO knows the answer is the Army Emergency Relief (AER) fund, from which the soldier will be able to quickly get a loan that will get him home to help out during this emergency.

AER can help

This and many other situations in which soldiers find themselves short of funds fall into the category which allows the AER office to help with monetary loans.

About a hundred soldiers each month visit the AER office here for financial relief, according to 2nd Lt. Octavia L. Parker, the AER officer.

Lt. Parker said soldiers may need money for food for the family, rent or utilities because of a mistake in their finance records that puts them in a no pay due status at the end of the month. Sometimes the no pay due might be because the soldier received a partial pay the month before because of a family emergency, she said. "We can help in those types of cases," Parker said.

"But," she continued, "when the no pay due is because of an Article 15 or some such action that is the soldier's own fault, we rarely help out. Once in a while, however, the emergency is so great that we might help but it's very rare," she said.

"Another thing we won't do is lend money to a soldier to cover bad checks. Nor can we assist a single soldier who lives off post and can't budget his money for food and rent.

"In the case of a single parent we can help out, but this is dealt with on a case by case basis. If a person comes back a second time though, it is pretty obvious that there is a mismanagement of funds involved and that person will be referred to the Army Community Services (ACS) budgeting counseling personnel.

Food locker

"AER can also help provide food for families, especially around payday," Lt. Parker said.

In addition to running the Army Emergency Relief Fund she also runs the emergency food locker. From this stock of frozen meats and canned food she can help a soldier's family for as much as three to five days before payday.

The food is collected by the major units on post. What the units don't provide, Lt. Parker can stock with the modest budget she has each month for that purpose.

"Twenty to twenty-five soldiers each month come into the office for help with food," she said. "If they come in more than once, they have to go through their commander and bring a DF signed by the commander with them verifying that they have been counseled on their family responsibilities. If they come in more than twice," she said, "it's an indicator that they are in deep financial trouble and need more help than just food. They need to learn how to manage their money and they are referred to the ACS budget counselors for help."

According to Lt. Parker, situations in which AER can help soldiers are non-receipt of pay or allotment; lost or stolen funds (the soldiers must have an MP report with them); rent or utilities, if the soldiers have received notice of eviction or notice that the utilities will be turned off; travel in an emergency situation, if Red Cross verification is received; fire or some other disaster; or car expenses when a car is essential for duty. The soldiers commander must verify that the car is essential for duty.

"Normally," she said, "when we give a soldier money for food, it will be a check made out to the soldier and the commissary. In the case of rent, it will be a check made out to the soldier and the landlord; the same for car repair bills or utilities."

Lt. Parker also said that in some medical cases, for instance when a soldier's family must seek civilian doctor care because they don't live close to a military hospital and the civilian doctor does not accept CHAMPUS, AER can help by lending the soldier money to pay for the doctor's bill.

Some restrictions

Lt. Parker cautions that there are some situations in which AER cannot help.

Some of these, according to Lt. Parker, are marriages, ordinary leaves, business ventures, consolidation of loans, divorces, items of convenience, abortion, and supplement to income lost through punishment or negligence. She also said that soldiers receiving full pay and allowances are not eligible for an AER loan. This includes legal fees, income taxes, fines, liens, bail and court fees.

"When soldiers come here for help," Lt. Parker said, "they should bring documentation showing what their problems are. They should bring their last leave and earnings statement, a bill for car repairs, an eviction notice, written notice that the utilities are going to be shut off, an approved emergency leave form or an MP report on loss of stolen funds. They also need a loan application form (DA Form 1103) with a recommendation from either their CO, XO, or 1st Sgt.

The biggest problem with the application form is that the units don't type the signature block of the person making the recommendation on the form.

"It must be typed not printed," she said, "Commanders should check AR 930-4 for help in completing the form properly. They should also review the regulation to be sure the soldier is eligible for an AER loan."

"We're here for the benefit of the soldier; when they have a problem, we'll do everything we can to help," she concluded.

Soldiers are sometimes referred to Mr. Olan Brooks for budget counseling.

Five steps to a budget

Do you spend the last days of each month waiting for payday because you've used up all your monthly income? You might avoid this by simply making out a monthly budget.

The first step in making up your budget is to find out your actual income. Consider, for example, military pay, 'moonlighting' pay and investments. List every source of income.

The second step is to figure what you spend on regular, fixed items. These items include things like rent, telephone and utility bills, contributions, major items of clothing, insurance premiums, loan repayments, and taxes. Since some of these items aren't due every month, you should set aside a certain amount to be sure that funds are available when the payments are due.

Your third step is to start an emergency fund. It doesn't need to be a large amount - simply enough to fall back on for unexpected expenses.

Step four of your budget is to note your day-to-day items - food, transportation, entertainment, clothing and household expenses.

Your fifth and last step is to know what's left. Add your day-to-day and fixed items, then subtract the total from your total income. The remaining dollars could be used for additional savings, investments or a special goal.

To make sure your budget is working, have all family members keep a daily total of all the money they spend for one month.

Don't be discouraged if your budget doesn't work right the first time. It will probably take a few changes to make it easy for you to live with. Remember, a budget is a guide, not a rigid way of life. If you need assistance with your budget, Army Community provides free financial planning.

AAFES takes over Clothing Sales Stores

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) assumed management responsibility for the Military Clothing Sales Store (MCSS) on Nov. 19, Mr. Jack E. Heagle, Fort Benning exchange manager, announced.

The action is part of a worldwide program which will see AAFES operating all Army and Air Force MCSS by late 1981.

Under the new concept, Fort Benning military personnel will be able to compare Defense Personnel Support Center (DPSC) "issue-type" clothing with commercially-procured items located in the AAFES Bookstore, building 285 and select those best for them.

"AAFES operation of the stores will not cause increased sell prices to the military customer," Mr. Heagle assured. The Army will reimburse AAFES the costs necessary to operate the clothing stores, similar to the fee paid AAFES by the Air Force to run their stores since 1976.

Clothing sales stores receive "issue-type" military clothing and selected items of organizational equipment such as canteens and pile caps through supply channels and issue or sell these at standard stock fund prices. This procedure will continue.

The DPSC, which provides these items, adjusts prices annually on Oct. 1, the start of their Fiscal Year. These price changes take place every year and have no connection with the AAFES management of the stores.

"We don't control the prices of DPSC merchandise," Mr. Heagle said. "DDPSC tells us what we will sell their merchandise for and that's what the customer pays."

The one-stop military clothing sales store at Fort Benning is located in building 1698. Hours of operation will be:

ITG offers wives tours

Tammy Beck had the chance to do something very few women in or out of the Army get the chance to do.

In fact she's probably still talking about it. Tammy had the chance to test her skills at tracking with the TOW weapon system on Lee Field, during a tour conducted by Capt. Marshal Hernandez for 15 wives of Infantry Training Group (ITG) officers.

The tour offered the wives a chance to see their husbands area of work, and see just what their husbands do for a living.

Upon arrival at Infantry Training Group at ITG Headquarters they were briefed on ITG's function by Col. Sidney Shachnow, Infantry Training Group commander. After Col. Shachnow's briefing the ladies sat down to brunch served by the ITG dining facility.

The first stop on the tour was Lee Field training area for TOW, and Dragon Gunnery. SFC. Fredrick White senior instructor for the TOW ground mount committee gave them a ten minute block of instruction on the two anti-armor weapon systems, and then let them work with the systems.

At Malone 11, SFC. David L. Wynn explained how to zero the M-16 rifle. Marsha Butler and Adele Hernandez then took the opportunity to fire the Weaponeer Training System that is used to aid soldiers that have problems zeroing their weapons.

VA Q & A

Q - I understand that there has been a change in the Veterans Administration burial allowance benefit. Please provide an explanation of the current allowance.

A - A burial allowance was previously available to all wartime veterans. The new regulations provide an allowance of $300 payable toward the burial of only those veterans in receipt of Veterans Administration pension or disability compensation at the time of death or for those who die in VA medical facilities.

Q - Are my Veterans Administration benefits subject to taxation?

A - No. Under federal law, all benefits administered by the VA are exempt from taxation.

Q - I have started school and I need a loan to cover living expenses until my Veterans Administration benefits are received. How do I apply?

A - The VA does not have a program of personal loans. However, you should contact your nearest VA benefits counselor who may be able to refer you to a state or local agency for help.

Checking account advice

Pvt. Smith has just arrived at his first permanent duty station. He's concerned about how best to handle his paycheck. He wants to protect his hard-earned money and, at the same time, be able to get to it easily. He has to make car payments and pay off the loan for his new stereo system.

He decides to talk to his team leader, SSgt. Brown, who suggests a checking account. Smith isn't sure how to go about it; their conversation follows:

S: Why should I use checks and not use cash?

B: Well, with a checking account you can pay your bills by check. You can send a check by mail to the store or any place you want. That way you won't need to carry large amounts of money around. Also, a cancelled check is the same as a receipt. It shows that you actually paid that money to the person or company named on the check.

S: Sounds pretty good! How do I start a checking account?

B: Before you open a checking account you should understand that a check is not money. It is only good if you have money in your checking account.

S: I see, a checking account is a place to put money and then I can spend it when I need it.

B: Yes. Now, to open an account you must go to the bank and:

- decide which type of checking account is best for you.
- fill out the forms.
- deposit money into the account.

S: That sounds simple enough. How do I know what type of account is best for me?

B: There are several basic types.

- An individual account is often most convenient for single soldiers. You are the only one who can write checks against this type account.

- A joint account, on the other hand, allows an account to be shared, perhaps by husband and wife, father and son, and so on. The biggest advantage of this type of account is that it gives your family access to money in case of an emergency.

- A special account is cheapest if your usual balance is small and you only write a few checks each month. They have a special rate that will save you money if you don't write a lot of checks. For example, some special accounts charge you one amount for each check you write. If you don't write any checks one month, you don't pay anything. If you write ten, you are charged for ten.

- If you plan to make use of several other bank services, you should consider an additional services checking account. These accounts vary from bank to bank. You should talk it over with a representative of the bank in which you are interested.

S: Are all banks the same?

B: All banks offer the same basic services but before you decide on any type checking account, you will want to shop around for the right bank. Go to several different banks. See what each one will charge you to keep your account. Some charge a small amount each time you write a check. Others have what is called a monthly service charge. They charge you the same amount no matter how many checks you write. Some banks offer both types but charge less than other banks. Pick a bank you can get to easily and pick the one that will charge you the least.

S: So, I want a bank that is convenient and offers the services I need at the least cost to me. It makes sense.

B: Right, now you are ready to open the account.

the ITG operation. We had a hands on look at what our husbands are in charge of. I think all wives should see where their husbands work, its a great experience."

Vera Royal of Richland Ga., visiting Capt. and Mrs. Remo butler said "I had a very good time here. I wish more people could see what I've seen here today. You don't have to be married to come out here and enjoy what was shown to us. It was really great."

'Big Pictures' features soldiers

By J.C. Hope
SAIC Public Affairs Office

On WFBG-TV this week, you'll see "Ice Cap", a film about US Armed Forces research and accomplishments on the Greenland Icecap during the 1950's. Also featured will be "Beyond the Call", this "Big Picture" cites the acts of valor performed by American servicemen from the Revolutionary War to the present. "A Personal Affair" reminds servicemen to review their affairs, plan their estates and make provisions for their family in case something should happen to them. "Pride in Belonging" presents a glimpse into the lives of some young women working and training in specialized positions in today's Armed Forces.

Be sure to watch "Benning Magazine" to find out what's going on at Fort Benning. Today's hit sounds are featured on SPECTRUM, WEEK-DAYS 1 to 5 p.m. So tune in to WFBG-TV because we're in tune with you.

"Home Remedies"

Dr. Calvin Thrash, who served at Martin Army Hospital when he was stationed at Fort Benning, and his wife, Dr. Agatha Thrash, a Columbus pathologist, have just finished writing a book called "Home Remedies." Through the years Doctors Calvin and Agatha Thrash have had a variety of programs at Fort Benning on preventive medicine. They have conducted numerous five-day plans to stop smoking, seminars in healthful living, physical conditioning programs and healthful cookery, at times presenting demonstrations in how to make healthful substitutes for foods that can injure the body.

Photo exhibit

On Dec. 8, 9 and 10, from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. there will be an exhibition of photographs by Shari Burghart at Patch School.

Her subject matter for this exhibit will be 96 talented children of the Fort Benning Dependent School System's Artist in Residence Program.

For the last 18 weeks these children have been taken to Patch School to a special textile design studio, where they have been instructed in the fine art of Dying, Batik, fabric painting, printing in all medium and other related values for Fort Benning's first ever Artist in Residence, Wini McQueen.

Wini McQueen is a nationally known artist from Macon, Georgia, who is being funded by the Georgia Counsel of the Arts and Humanities and the Fort Benning Dependent School System to instruct for 18 weeks some of the more promising of Fort Benning's young artists. Ms. McQueen is a highly skilled fabric designer-printer who is completing her third Artist in Residence Program for the Georgia Arts Council. She has exhibited her work in some of America's most prestigious galleries to include showing at the Smithsonian Institute=National Park Service Festival of American Folklife, Washington, D.C. fabric hand-printer demonstrator for African Diaspora.

Ms. McQueen will exhibit her own work as well as the work of the children. This promises to be a most enjoyable exhibit. All of the Tri-County and surrounding communities are cordially invited to attend this important event on Dec. 8, 9, and 10 from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. daily. Patch School is located at the corner of Lumpkin Road and Baltzell Avenue.

For further details contact: Jean Harron, Community Co-ordinator for the Artist in Residence Program at 687-5307 or the Fort Benning Schools Office at: 545-3500.

Doughboys lose as season ends

Story by Tony Adams
 Photos by J. C. Hope
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

Going against an excited Erk Russell and Company, the Fort Benning Doughboys football team was dumped by the Georgia Southern College Eagles 33-26 Sunday at Doughboy Stadium.

It was obvious from the outset of the game that with the feeling of intensity running through the Eagles' bench it was going to be a tough game for the Doughboys. However, the Doughboys practically threw their chances away with six interceptions and three fumbles on the day.

Fort Benning began fumbling on their first possession when they fumbled on their own 15-yard line.

After failing to move the ball, however, the Eagles attempted a field goal which fell short. On the next play, the Doughboys' Nate Rivers took the handoff from quarterback Leamon Hall and raced 80 yards down the sideline for the touchdown.

Georgia Southern came right back when quarterback Rob Allen connected with Wade Britt on a 19-yard touchdown pass to tie the score at 7-7. Following a fumble by the Doughboys on their own 18-yard line, the Eagles capitalized when David Barras scampered 16 yards for the touchdown. Missing the extra point, the Eagles led 13-7.

Late in the first quarter, the Doughboys marched down to the 10-yard line before Hall hit Elyon Zeigler with a touchdown pass. Kicker Renee Garcia added the extra point to put the Doughboys ahead 14-13 at the end of the quarter.

Georgia Southern padded their lead in the second quarter when they marched down to the Doughboy three-yard line before Barras scored on a run up the middle. The two-point conversion failed, putting the Eagles on top 19-14. Then with only 26 seconds remaining in the half, Allen threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Jay Powers. The two-point conversion this time was good to give the Eagles a 27-14 half-time lead.

With the defenses taking over in the third quarter, the only scoring came when Allen hit Scott Conner with a seven-yard touchdown pass to put the Eagles up 33-14 at the end of the quarter.

That finished Georgia Southern's scoring for the day. However, the Doughboys were not through as with 6:31 remaining in the game Benning marched downfield with Rivers taking the ball over the line from the one. The two-point conversion failed leaving the Doughboys trailing 33-20. Then with another drive going, the Doughboys took the ball to the Eagles' one-yard line before Hall scored on a keeper. The kick failed making the final score 33-26.

The loss ended the Doughboys' season making their record 4-7. Thanks go out for all who supported the team. We'll see you next year.

Doughboy Nate Rivers rushes around the end for one of his two touchdowns.

Excitement found at Mini-Bowls

By Martha Duncan
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Under sunny, crisp skies, eight teams met at Doughboy Stadium last Saturday to determine their league's Mini-Bowl champion.

Every game offered the excitement found in good caliber football play. There was an upset in the Grasshopper League as the Tri-City Cowboys defeated the Bouten-Davis Seahawks 20-14.

In the Termite League, an overtime thriller was seen between the Tri-City Falcons and the Bouten-Davis Stampeders. Both teams displayed tremendous aggressiveness in their defense. At the end of regulation play, the score was 0-0 and the teams went to their 10 yard line and were each given four plays. The Falcons offense managed to break the Stampeders' defensive line to win the game 8-0.

Another great game was seen between the Main Post Jets and the Bouten-Davis Outlaws with the Jets slipping by the Outlaws 12-8.

The first Jet touchdown came at 3:29 of the second quarter and again with only 16 seconds remaining in the quarter.

The third quarter showed great defense by both teams with neither team scoring. In the fourth quarter with 2:36 on the clock, the Stampeders scored closing the gap to four. With plenty of time for another Stampeders touchdown, the Jets maintained a tough defense to hold onto the victory.

The days final game had another upset as the Junior League's Chargers and the Tri-City Panthers met with the Panthers blasting the Chargers 24-6. In the game two Panther players were seriously injured, one with a broken arm and the other with a jammed spine.

The Panthers, despite their win, had a smaller team in number and size. However, Saturday the Panthers grew with determination. The Panthers, moving hard and fast, scored early in the first quarter. The Panthers then scored once again with 9:53 remaining in the first. In this attempt, the two extra points were good for a 16-0 lead.

In the second quarter, the Chargers scored their first and last touchdown late in the quarter.

Coming out in the final period, the Panthers scored once more to take a 22-6 lead. A safety in the end zone gave the Panthers two more points and a 24-6 victory.

Individual runners-up and champion awards were given immediately following the games. Awards were presented by Ms. "Tommy" Thomas (YA Director) and Talmage Glover, the League Commissioner.

Soccer tournament and awards held

In the Grasshopper League, the Rockets who lost the first game of the tournament had to win three straight games to earn the championship title over the Chiefs 2-1.

The Rockets offense was led by Steve Lorick, Mel Hallums, Larry Suggs, Janson LeGore and Geoffrey Marting.

The Rockets, who were led by Kalimba Corbin, Dick Stonemon, Jared Orlando and Jason Heard, put up a stubborn fight to ward off a late threat by the strong Chief offense. Rocket scores were made by Steve Lorick and Jason LeGore.

In the Termite League, another thrilling game was seen. The Stings had lost their "if" game but came back to take the championship against the Rowdies 3-1.

High scorer for the Stings was Jason Entlich with two goals. Timmy Melvin kicked in one. Their defensive standouts were Justin Winter, Sean Thompson, Matt Burk, Ryan Valentine, George Walsh and James England. Offensive standouts were Alfred Giabelli, Mike Dinkins, Donnie Baker and Dustin Duvall.

For the Rowdies, Vince Pruitt was their scorer. Offensive support came from Bobby Lenz, their midfielder, who offered support to his forwards. Keeping a tighter defense were fullbacks Terri Stiliika, Jory Eissinger and goalkeeper Johnathan King.

The Junior League did not have to go to a third game since the Hustlers won the first two games giving them the championship.

At the award ceremony, Maj. Jerome Zamora, Chief of Morale Support Activities Division, introduced Col. Robert B. Simpson, Chief of Army Training Center Coordination Office and this year's Fall Soccer Commissioner who made the awards presentation.

'Triple T' wins women's softball tourney

Women's fall season softball is over and Triple "T" are the champions.

League play ended with tie records of 8-2 for Triple "T" and the OC's. Saturday's playoff game resulted in Triple "T" coming from behind to take the OC's 10-9 in the bottom of the seventh inning.

The OC's finished their seventh inning bat with a 9-8 lead and went to the field hoping for a one, two, three-out situation. But it did not go that way. The "Ts" managed to load up the bases with only one out and first baseman Wanda Donnelly smashed a clean single over second base, giving her team the necessary two runs to win.

The remaining four teams were completely outclassed by the top two but they deserve kudos for effort.

Country Palace came in third with a 5-5 record. Their team was a mixture of military wives, civilian employees and active duty military.

'Cudas travel to Huntsville

In November the Baracuda Gold Team traveled to Huntsville, Ala. to participate in the Jack Frost Invitational Swim Meet, while the Red and Blue team saw action at the Dynamo 'B-C' Meet in Atlanta.

Although competition was tough at the Huntsville meet, the Barracuda Gold Team scored 45 points and had three swimmers place in a number of events. The super performances were turned in by Roland White (AAA time for the 1000-yard free), David Christensen (AA time in the 500 and 1000-yard free) and Desiree Weems (AA times in the 100 and 200-yard breastroke).

At the Dynamo Atlanta meet the following swimmers placed:

Girls 8 and under:	Boys 10 and under:
Ann McConnell (7th place--25-yard freestyle)	Jonathan King (8th place--100-yard freestyle)
Girls 10 and under:	Girls 13 and 14:
Sarah Anderson (3rd place--100-yard freestyle, 4th place--50-yard backstroke, 10th place--50-yard butterfly)	Audrey Burke (7th place--50-yard freestyle)
Tami Cullifer (5th place--100-yard freestyle, 6th place--50-yard freestyle, 4th place--50-yard backstroke)	Courtney Schnieder (8th place--50-yard freestyle)
Christy Rock (6th place--100-yard freestyle)	Michelle Millia (9th place--50-yard freestyle)

Backyard game interesting

By Jason Entlich
Special to the 197th Public Affairs Office

Here are the rules for Stoop-Ball. It is like a baseball game and requires only a batter, an outfielder and maybe a scorekeeper.

First, you find some steps (concrete is best) and a tennis ball. Usually the steps (or stoop) are just out your back or front door. You make a home run mark and some out-of-play lines.

The outfielder stands near the home run mark while the batter stands near the steps with the tennis ball. The batter throws the ball against the steps. Usually it will go toward the outfielder. If it doesn't and goes behind the steps, it is a strike.

If the ball goes to the outfielder and the outfielder catches it on any number of bounces, it is an out. A fly ball caught anywhere on the field is an out. When the ball goes to the outfielder and bounces any number of times and he tries catch it but misses it and it goes in front of him, it is a single.

If the ball stops anywhere before the home run mark, it is a single. If the ball goes to the outfielder and the outfielder touches it and it goes behind him, it is a triple. If the ball goes to the outfielder and he doesn't touch it at all and it goes behind him, it is a triple. If the ball goes in the air over the home run mark it's a home run.

The Stoop-Ball tip of the week: For a home run, hit the ball on the corner.

Editor's Note — This article was written by a nine-year-old soccer player who also plays a familiar back-yard game called stoop-ball. This is his version of how the game is played.

Groundbreaking ceremony today for Fort Benning reception station

By Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The public is invited to attend the groundbreaking ceremony for the new multi-million dollar reception station behind Kimbro Gym at Sand Hill today at 2:30 p.m.

After seven years of design, change, and congressional discussion, the first step toward the completion of the One-Station-Unit-Training (OSUT) reality is about to come true.

Initially programmed in October 1974 as Project Number 313 at a cost of $6,734,000, the reception station was slated to have its beginning in 1976, and to cover an area of 110,000 square feet.

Several other changes occurred between then and now.

In March 1977, Department of Army officials downgraded the size of the project to 99,500 square feet to bring down the cost because of inflation.

Congress appropriated Fiscal Year 1980 funds for the construction, but the project did not start because OSUT had not yet been approved.

Finally in 1980 the Secretary of the Army released the OSUT study recommending OSUT training at Fort Benning. Shortly after that, the Department of the Army issued their directive which asked for the complete final design of the reception station.

The final design was completed in August of this year by J. E. Serrine of Greenville, S.C.. The project was awarded to L. B. Samford, Inc. of Miami, Fla. in September.

The new design increased the size of the project from 99,500 square feet to 114,000 square feet and its estimated cost is $5,649,000.

The building will be brick, with steel frame and two stories high. It will be fully air-conditioned with the exception of the storage area, and will have a paging and control system as well as a complete television system for the soldiers to learn while they wait.

A ramp will connect the initial issue area with the main inprocessing area for the easy movement of platoon size elements.

The new station is estimated to be able to in-process about 660 men a week. The projected completion date for the new project is late June 1983.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander, will be joined by several distinguished guests for the ceremony. They will include Senator Matt Mattingly, Representative Jack Brinkley and Mayor Harry Jackson.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Shoplifting is reaching epidemic proportions! Nationwide, approximately $16 billion worth of merchandise is stolen annually.

The Christmas shopping season is the season of the greatest shoplifting activity. The National Coalition to Prevent Shoplifting says over 45 percent of all shoplifting takes place at this time.

A study completed by the Coalition disclosed the following facts about shoplifting:

- Consumers pay for shoplifting through higher prices — five to seven percent higher on the average.

- Among student-age shoplifters, girls outnumber boys (four to one).

(Girls go shopping more often and the items in which they are most interested, such as jewelry, cosmetics and clothing, are more accessible.)

- In more than 50 percent of shoplifting apprehensions, violators are 13 to 19 years old.

- Adult amateur shoplifters include housewives trying to stretch their budgets or obtain articles that are especially desirable. Senior citizens are part of the shoplifting problem, as are individuals from all age, social and economic classes.

- The most common items stolen are jewelry, clothes, perfume, tools, appliances, records, 8-track and cassette tapes, and beauty aids. The average item stolen is valued at $28 on the national level.

Col. Earp
Provost Marshal

- For the most part, items that are stolen could have been purchased by the shoplifter.

So far this year, there have been 169 cases of shoplifting reported to the military police by the Exchange system here. Of these, 100 incidents involved active duty military, 35 involved family members (17 of whom were juveniles under the age of 17!) and 34 cases involved retirees.

Most people who shoplift don't do it out of necessity. They shoplift for kicks, to beat the system, or to impress friends. Some people try to rationalize their shoplifting by thinking it doesn't hurt anyone. Actually, shoplifting hurts the most those who can afford it the least. Big stores and well-to-do customers don't suffer nearly as much from shoplifting and related costs as do small, independent stores and low-income shoppers.

In the past, stores often let shoplifters off with a lecture as long as the merchandise was returned to the shelf, but now that the shoplifting problem is so serious, they are prosecuting offenders. Today, stores use elaborate surveillance systems, more guards, plainclothes detectives, television scanners and electronic tags on merchandise. These methods work and more shoplifters are being caught redhanded.

Military shoplifters judged guilty by court-martial can receive a bad conduct discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and up to six months confinement at hard labor.

Juveniles guilty of shoplifting are processed and then remanded to the Juvenile Court in Columbus. The judge usually sentences a juvenile to probation from one to three years. During this probation period the juvenile cannot enter a retail outlet without being accompanied by a parent or guardian. If probation is violated or a second shoplifting incident occurs, the juvenile will be taken back into Juvenile Court.

The loss of exchange or commissary privileges is automatic for all individuals caught shoplifting. The chances of the privileges being reinstated are minimal. Think about it; is it really worth it?

Help stop the shoplifting epidemic. SHOP-LIFTING IS A CRIME. It takes your money and everyone else's. It's going to take individual and community concern to put an end to shoplifting.

- If you see it, report it. You and other shoppers end up paying for what the shoplifter takes.

- Explain to your children that shoplifting is against the law . . . not a game or a joke.

- Know where your children are and what they are doing.

- Know what they bring into the house and where it came from.

- Set an example. Your children look up to you. Obey the law yourself.

For more information or assistance, please call the Crime Prevention Section, Provost Marshal Office, telephone 545-7115/4164.

Chaplain's Comments

By David W. Campbell
43rd Engineer Battalion Chaplain

What's so great about the church? I guess the most put-down institution in the world is the local church. There are all kinds of excuses as to why we don't attend church. One of the most-used excuses is that, "There are hypocrites in the church." To that I say, "true; but you go everywhere else with hypocrites. They are at the commissary, ball game, school, work; why, someday you may be fighting along side one on the battlefield. But, go to church with one? Are you kidding! "Church is a place to go to become closer to God by worshipping Him."

The favorite news commentator of many of us is Paul Harvey...he really seems to "know his stuff."

Following is an article he ran in the Los Angeles Times newspaper. I want you to read it so you can see what really IS so great about the church. And remember who wrote this-not a minister, but Paul Harvey.

Because of copyright restrictions this article must be reproduced in whole. I'm NOT asking you to send money to the church, but only to read the article to see what Paul Harvey says ABOUT the church.

You who do not go to church, please send money.

Pastors plead with you to show up in person to save your soul; that's their business.

I'm urging you to send money if only to save your skin.

As is, you are locked behind bolted doors and shuttered windows and with automatic night lights you try to hold back the dark...

While out there in the streets people are being killed, raped, beaten, robbed at a rate that's increasing seven times faster than our population is increasing.

You pay higher insurance premiums every day to try to shelter your wife, your life, your possessions, your property, your car...

I ask for an investment at least to equal to your car insurance.

The best cure for drugs and the best preventive for crime that any amount of money can buy -- is the discipline imposed by religion.

Problems with new uniforms

WASHINGTON — Soldiers who have camouflage battle dress uniforms (BDU) which have been rendered unusable because of excessive shrinkage may have them replaced on an item for item basis without charge to the individual, says Army logistics officials.

The exchange will be accomplished in accordance with procedures outlined in paragraph 5-14C of Interim Change 101, AR 700-84.

Complaints about excessive shrinking of the camouflage BDU after washing prompted Army logistics officials to issue guidelines for its care and maintenance, along with the exchange procedures.

Officials in the Troop Support Division at Department of the Army say reports of shrinkage began to surface shortly after the initial issue of the new uniform in October.

Efforts are underway to identify the cause of the shrinkage so corrective action can be taken. However, officials note, those efforts may take several weeks and soldiers who have the BDU should take the following actions to minimize shrinkage:

- During the washing, drying and finishing cycles, the lowest possible temperature settings should be used. Officials say that at no time should the garment be exposed to temperatures greater than 130 degrees (Fahrenheit).

• When buying the new uniform item, soldiers should ensure the uniform fits loosely to allow for some shrinkage without rendering the garment unusable. Logistics officials say current tariffs (sizes) are designed to allow a loose fit.

A shrinkage factor of up to two percent is considered normal and was anticipated for the new uniform, officials say. However, varying degrees above that figure have been experienced during the first laundering and this has led officials to start efforts to identify the cause. (ARNews)

Unattended children at Martin Army Community Hospital

PLEASE do not bring your healthy children to the hospital. Children in the clinic areas prevent us from providing good health care. This will also prevent your healthy children from being exposed to communicable diseases. We do not have the personnel to babysit your children while you are being treated. The post and PX nurseries are available at a very reasonable charge to watch your children.

Letter to the Editor

Please accept this as an open letter praising the 67th Maintenance Battalion dining facility for an excellent and outstanding Thanksgiving Dinner.

These lovely people invited several military widows who had no families here in the area to be their guests for Thanksgiving. To these widows, this means an awful lot.

We, the widows, would like to say a "Heartfelt thank-you" for the courteous and warm friendship shown us.

To Col. McQuint, Specialist Gordon, the Dining Facility manager and all of the guys preparing the dinner, a "Great Big Thanks" for food so deliciously prepared.

May god richly bless you all now and forever.

Happy and safe holidays to you all.

In loving friendship
Myrtle Dennis

Chaplains comments

Why am I coming to you?

Because inside that church too many two-dollar bettors are reaping more than they're sowing.

So please, if you can't or won't go—send help!

Inflation is escalating the costs of running a church, also. The church down the street from you is hurting and may be dying.

There is no church which could not give more young people more things better to do than mischief—except that many churches can't keep up with heat and light bills.

There's never been a time you've walked down that street and not been silently thankful that the church is there.

You don't know what it looks like inside, but nonetheless — midst so many dirty movies, taverns and porno shops — the church makes your community look good.

Your daily paper is all smeared with blood, corruption and busted Commandments...

Cops are handcuffed, schoolteachers can't paddle and parents won't...

The Church — alone now — seeks to catch the criminal before the crime.

I'm asking you for money because somebody has to and it's unbecoming for church pastors to...

The high and mighty televisionary clergy has no compunction about pleading for money with all sorts of gimmickery — and thus such resources get sent elsewhere to the neglect of the neighborhood.

You don't have to be a believer to be an under-stander.

You have a stake in the strength or weakness of your corner church as surely as you have a stake in keeping traffic lights lit.

You are also entitled to criticize the people inside that church who pray for and get a lot more blessings than they pay for.

We've a lot of people singing "God Bless America" without giving Him any good reason why he should.

I've heard you say that some of the best people don't even go to church. Prove it. Thank you.

What do you think? Makes sense, doesn't it! Doesn't it, also make sense for you to attend chapel or church! We would like very much to have you worship with us at Sightseeing Road Chapel, Way Street at Sightseeing Road, Sundays at 11 a.m. By all means, check into a church somewhere. I believe God is pleased with us when we worship and, you know, there's a family of believers waiting to welcome you this Sunday.

The 1st section, Battery B, 2/10 Artillery secures all loose ends and tie downs on their ammunition bag prior to the helicopter's arrival.

Guided by a member of the 187th Inf. Det. Pathfinders, a Black Hawk approaches a 105mm howitzer.

Blackhawks deliver

Story and photos by Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For about the last 2½ years, since the demise of the 478th Aviation Company (Skycranes), there was no helicopter on Fort Benning that could externally carry the howitzers of the 2/10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade. When the unit went to the field it used unit vehicles to tow the guns.

However, since September, when the 121st Aviation Company, 34th Medical Battalion turned in its Hueys and received Black Hawks, field training exercises for the artillery have changed dramatically. This was demonstrated in a field training exercise (FTX) conducted by Battery B, 2/10th Artillery last Friday.

Battery B is in the midst of preparing to take its annual Army Readiness Training Evaluation Program (ARTEP) Dec. 7-10 and this was the third FTX this month for the artillerymen.

Their six 105mm howitzers were prepositioned at the combined arms team field at Kelley Hill, with 20 rounds for each weapon in an ammunition bag attached to the gun.

A half dozen Black Hawks of the 121st landed at the appointed time and loaded the gun section crews aboard the appropriate aircraft. Then, guided by 187th Inf. Det. Pathfinders, they hovered over the howitzers, picked them and the attached ammunition bags up and departed at 90-second intervals for firing point 13, near Buena Vista Road.

This was a live fire FTX and after setting up and firing 10 rounds per tube at the firing point the unit moved, by vehicle, to two other firing points, set up the weapons and conducted additional firing exercises.

Battery Commander Capt. Richard Nastroll was very pleased with the conduct of the FTX. He said, "It was a good FTX and the helicopters made it more realistic. We are training to exceed the ARTEP standards and we accomplished what we set out to do."

As the hook-up man stands ready on the howitzer, the Black Hawk inches forward so the sling load connection can be made.

With the gun section crew members aboard the helicopter, it picks up the 1st section's howitzer.

The approximately 5,500-pound combined weight of the howitzer and the loaded ammunition bag presents no problem for the Black Hawk, with its 8,000-pound sling load capability.

Boy Scout Troop 27 holds Court of Honor to award Life Scout

A Court of Honor was held Monday night for the Boy Scouts of Troop 27 at their scout hut located by Russ Pond. Seventeen year old James Schulz was honored by achieving the rank of Life Scout. He is the holder of many scout badges that include ones for lifesaving, swimming, music, emergency preparedness, camping, stamp collecting, coin collecting, and citizen in the world.

It was a proud and smiling James Schulz who pinned a scout pin on his mother to show she is now the mother of a Life Scout.

Also during the Court of Honor merit badges were awarded to scouts Louis Acosta, for swimming and canoeing; Bill Herald for fishing and motorboating; Danny Krueger for lifesaving; Derrick Orlando for swimming and lifesaving; and Patrick Riccinto for swimming.

New scouts introduced were Kevin Blake, Robert Gilstrap, Maurice Joshua, John Rose and Michael Sanford.

Owning restaurant cooks dream

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Ever wanted to own your own restaurant? Maybe not, but to Sp.4 Rudy Ayala, the Chef of the Quarter from 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, the idea of owning his own restaurant is a dream.

Ayala, who received the award Tuesday, explained that the only formal training in the area of cooking that he has had was when he was stationed at Fort Jackson, S.C. "I was never at a cooking school, just Jackson," explained Ayala.

As to the difficulty of his job, Ayala explained while the aroma of bread floated throughout the kitchen, "People think we have an easy job, but if you get a chance to be back here (kitchen) you would know the difference."

Ayala, a Custer Terrace resident, enjoys running sports along with his wife and two-year-old son.

Enlisted soldiers who are going to leadership schools on post such as PLC, BNOC, ANOC don't have to worry about not eating good meals while they are at school these days.

The dining facility these soldiers eat in, 51st Company, The School Brigade, which also caters to the OCS candidates, has won the best dining facility award for the large facility category. The facility manager, SFC Allen Foster, makes sure the soldiers who eat there eat well.

Sp4 Pat Lavilary, 444th Transportation Company, is attending the Primary Leadership Course and he says, "The food has always been good since I started eating here and attending the school. I think I can always count on a good meal."

Sp5 Malveen Smith, commented while working on her second cup of coffee, "The food is well prepared. The ribs and fried chicken are especially good. Smith is also attending the Primary Leadership Course."

While food couldn't be better there, another dining facility is proud of what they do. The Infantry Training Group dining facility also took top honors, but they capitalized on being the best small dining facility on post. Manager, SSgt. Alvin Glenn, lets his cooks come up with some nifty ideas.

Two cooks at the facility, Sp4 Ronald M. Richard and Charles St. Like Jr. are proud of their Turkey nuggets. They are golden brown nuggets of turkey made with eggs, milk, salt and peppered bread crumbs which are then deep fried to perfection.

If all of this is making you hungry, imagine how good the home made apple pie is at these two facilities.

PLC student Sp5 Cathleen Orton serves up a tossed salad.

Know what to say in an emergency

A candy factory employee falls into a vat of hot chocolate and yells: "Fire!"

After he's saved, one of his rescuers asks: "Why did you yell 'Fire'?"

His reply: "Would you have come if I yelled 'Chocolate'?"

That joke (courtesy of the Smothers Brothers) proves there's an art to calling for help.

Do you really know how to make an emergency phone call? A lot of people don't — no joke!

In an emergency, you obviously waste precious time fumbling through a telephone directory. So be prepared by posting these numbers near your phone:

Fire Department:

From Fort Benning Number — Dial 117.

From Columbus Number — Dial 687-8117.

Military Police — 545-5222.

Local Poison Control Center — 571-1080 (Columbus).

Martin Army Community Hospital Emergency Room — 544-3102/1502/3911.

Ambulance Service — 544-3911.

Office and home numbers of your family doctor, pharmacist; taxi company, and one or more reliable neighbors.

When you make an emergency phone call, here are four points you should cover clearly and quickly:

- Tell WHERE it happened. Give the street number, the name of the street and, if you live in an apartment, the floor and number of your apartment.

Then repeat them. A brief description of the house or apartment building will also be helpful, especially at night.

- Tell WHAT has happened. Is your home on fire? Is someone bleeding badly? Has someone had a heart attack? Has someone accidentally swallowed a poison or drug overdose?

- Tell WHO you are. That's important when the emergency isn't obvious from the outside, especially if a multi-family dwelling is involved. A neighbor, asked for directions, will be more likely to recognize your name than your house number.

- Tell WHAT KIND of help is needed. Explain what kind of equipment you think will be necessary.

A lot to remember? No it takes about 10 seconds.

After you cover those important points, don't hand up immediately. Give the person you're talking to a chance to ask questions.

What if it's at night and the lights won't work?

All you have to do is dial "0" for Operator. Just feel for the finger right below the finger-stop, then pull the dial all the way around in the usual manner. If you have a pushbutton phone, simply feel for the middle button in the bottom row. (Smart idea: practice with your eyes closed.)

Help in an emergency is as close as the nearest telephone — if you know how to give vital information quickly and clearly.

So make sure you and everyone else in your home knows how — including children and baby sitters!

Tips for Christmas mailing

With the Christmas mailing season just ahead, Columbus Postmaster Amos B. Rogers is offering tips for customers to assure that their cards and packages arrive on time and in good shape.

In addition to shopping and mailing early, customers are urged to properly address cards and packages with the name, street number and name (or post office box number), and the city, state and ZIP Code reserved for the last line.

"It is also a good idea to put a slip of paper with the recipient's name and address and your return address inside parcels, and be sure the addressing on the outside of the parcel includes your return address and ZIP Code," Rogers says.

The Postal Service is also asking customers to put an ounce of extra care into preparing parcel post and other packages for mailing. Parcels will arrive at their intended destination in good shape if mailers will follow a few simple suggestions:

- CUSHION: Make sure contents are well-cushioned and there is no empty space in the box. Use crumpled newspaper around the item — including all sides, top and bottom.

- DON'T overwrap: Just use your carton. Brown paper and twine cord are not necessary. Paper can rip, and twine can become entangled with processing equipment.

- SEAL properly. Close your parcel with one of the three recommended types of tape: pressure sensitive, nylon-reinforced kraft paper, or glass-reinforced pressure sensitive.

- AVOID smudges: Use smudge-proof ink for your addressing.

- LOCATE addresses properly: Put the recipient's address in the lower right portion of the container. Put your return address in the upper left hand corner.

- USE ZIP Codes: Be sure to include the ZIP Code in both the recipient's and your return address.

- USE THE right service: Irreplaceable items, cash and other valuables should be sent by registered mail.

- IF YOU run out of time: Priority Mail affords First-Class handling for packages weighing over 12 ounces and up to 70 pounds. Priority Mail can be sent from any post office, station or branch or through rural carriers to any address in the U.S. Priority Mail can even be used for foreign mailings.

Christmas Mailing Tip

ends and insert one over the other as shown. Be sure to shred some newspaper (if you can't find excelsior or the styrofoam pellets) to surround the item being shipped. Post Office records indicate it's the corners of boxes that are most often crushed. Tape as shown in step four and put your address label on one side only.

Can't find a box with a lid for that Christmas mailing? Then take two boxes (see your commissary trash bin) with cut

Keeping home safe is most important

All of us talk and think a great deal about accidents at work. We want to do all we can to make our workplace safe, but probably every one of us is more interested in keeping his home safe. At work, part of the responsibility belongs to the company, the supervisor, the safety department, the other people we work with. At home it is all our. We should work and plan for safety at home.

There are many good books and lists of rules for home safety. It is a good idea to get one or more of them to study carefully. One of the first things when you make a study for safety is to find out what kinds of accidents are most likely to happen.

We don't have as much information as we would like about accidents that cause injuries, but we do have the information about deaths from home accidents. Nearly half of the deaths from home accidents occur to people over 65, most of them from falls; 13 per cent are from fires or burns. Such figures tell us that a special safety effort is needed to protect older persons.

Here's the information about youngsters, under five, who are perhaps our biggest responsibility. Thirteen percent of all home accident deaths occur to them. Two kinds of accidents account for half the deaths. One is fires or burns, the other is suffocation. There are a couple of lessons in child care that may of the books overlook.

Now let's take a look at the group that most of us are in, ages 15-64. About one-fourth of the home accident deaths are in this group. Four out of 10 of the accidental deaths in this group are from fire and burns. The next largest group is falls (20 percent), and the next 13 percent) is firearms, closely followed by poisons.

When inspecting for fire you need to think of two important matters, how to prevent fires and how to get people out if there is a fire. There are check lists and books on these. Get hold of them. Don't just take a quick look, and decide that everything is OK.

Falls occur on stairs and from ladders and substitutes for ladders. They occur on slippery floors and icy steps. They can be prevented by nonslip surfaces, by care in climbing and by providing handrails the full length of the stairs and plenty of light. That's a quick rundown, but it will cover a big part of precautions against falls.

The main thing is for you, the head of the family, to become fully responsible for accident prevent at home and work at it as hard as we do here at the plant.

Stay alive during winter driving

"Drivers, especially those who recently downsized to smaller cars, should adjust their driving habits to fit winter road conditions," advises Gilbert N. Drake, training consultant-motor vehicle safety at Liberty Mutual Insurance Company.

Driving accidents increase dramatically during the winter months. Ice slicks, pounding sleet and heavy snow are just some of the hazards which confront a driver in cold weather.

To conquer these hazards, Drake suggests the following tips for both large and small vehicles. In addition to employing these tips, Drake stresses that small car drivers should also be "super cautious and alert" in their winter driving.

For instance, one of the biggest dangers of driving on icy patches is the possibility of skidding. This is especially true for cars with front wheel drive, since the weight distribution gives the rear end a tendency to sway. To avoid this, drivers should be sure not to brake hard or suddenly, which could lock the wheels. Instead, if you do hit a icy spot, ease up on the gas, steady the steering wheel and drive through. If you're stopped on the ice, take off slowly so the wheels don't lose traction and spin.

If your car does begin to skid, don't panic. Keep your foot off the brake and gas pedals, and if the car begins to spin, immediately turn the steering wheel in the direction you want to go. When the wheels regain traction, lightly pump the brakes.

Another problem of winter driving, Liberty Mutual's Drake points out, is poor visibility. Since small cars tend to have shorter sight distances on hills and curves, bad weather can make driving very dangerous. That's why it's important to make sure windshield, rear and side windows are free of dirt, snow or ice. Brush snow off the car hood and roof so it doesn't fly back on the windshield or rear window.

Don't forget that small cars aren't seen by other drivers as easily as large vehicles. To compensate, turn on your low beams at dusk and in bad weather.

Keep your steering clear and even. Make turns slowly, particularly on ice and wet areas. Never brake while taking a curve, since this could lock the wheels. And allow extra space between you and the car ahead of you, since snow and ice increase the car's stopping distance.

Make sure your car is "winterized." Battery should be fully charged, brakes working properly, and exhaust systems checked for dangerous leaks. The car should also be equipped with snow or all-purpose tires.

Finally, always use your seatbelts. This is a good habit to get into year-round, and gives you extra protection should an accident occur.

By keeping your car in good shape and following these tips, you'll increase your chances of having an accident-free winter.

Think twice before driving with pills

When you have a headache you gulp down a couple of aspirins. Got a cold? You take an antihistamine or a decongestant. You feel down in the dumps and you reach for a tranquilizer. There are pills to help you go to sleep and pills that'll help you stay awake. You've probably got a supply of some of these in your medicine cabinet right now.

They say we're a country that moves on wheels and keeps healthy with pills. That's just fine except that under some conditions when the two of them get together there's trouble.

The pills do a good job of curing what they're supposed to, but while they may give you this relief, they also can affect your driving ability.

Let's talk about some of the different kinds of drugs, what they do, and how they can affect you and your driving.

Pep pills

We know some drivers use them. These pills are supposed to relieve the symptoms of fatigue. This they do. Maybe that's why some drivers who don't know the whole story use them.

Pep pills tend to increase mental alertness and they help you to think a little better. They may keep you awake for awhile. But — and this is the kicker — they do these things at the expense of concentration. Sometimes a false sense of self confidence and well-being takes over. Sort of like a driver who's just beginning to feel the effects of a few drinks he's had a short time ago.

Actually, these so-called pep pills merely stall off sleep. Under normal conditions a person usually is aware of becoming drowsy. Nature's warning system gives you a chance to do something about it — like pulling off and napping.

When you're under the influence of pep pills you aren't subject to the warning system. When sleep hits — and it will, regardless of how many pills you take — the effect is immediate. The records of run-off-the-road accidents substantiate this deadly feature of pep pills.

Tranquilizers

They affect the attitude and outlook and reduce tension. But they can make you dizzy, drowsy and cause you to lose track of what you're doing. Not very helpful to a guy behind a steering wheel.

Antihistamines

They do a good job as cold-symptom fighters and as allergy fighters, but they can cause inattention, confusion and drowsiness — all dangerous to a driver. Read and heed the warning on the label.

Pain relievers and sedatives

They'll calm you down and relax you all right, but they'll also slow your reaction time and dull your senses. Some of them may even make you feel so good that you'll forget all about driving.

Wonder drugs

These infection-fighting medications — streptomycin, for example — can bring on nausea, temporary deafness and, in some people, a loss of sense of balance. You can guess what that would do to your driving ability.

I'm not knocking these medications. They do a wonderful job. They've saved a lot of lives and relieved untold suffering, but we're still faced with the fact that they can have a dangerous side effect on your driving.

If your doctor prescribes a drug for you, tell him you drive for a living and you want to know what the side effects are. He'll be glad to tell you. If you get pills over the counter in the drug store ask the pharmacist about them.

Find out how long it takes the effects of any drug you're taking to wear off. Some of these side effects that influence your driving can hang on for surprisingly long period of time.

Many people don't realize the danger of combining certain drugs with other drugs or with alcohol. The reaction can be swift, potent and sometimes deadly. If there's any doubt ask your doctor.

There are many other types of drugs that can have dangerous side effects. Know what you're taking, what's in it and what its contents can do to you.

Marijuana findings frightening

New evidence, factual and frightening, reveals that marijuana smokers can undergo devastating and irreversible personality changes — including permanent intoxication from as few as two joints a week.

Gathering evidence for the first time from a number of eminent sources — physicians, neurologists, psychiatrists, psychologists and other experts — the Reader's Digest reports in the December issue that even in small quantities, pot has "dramatically impairing effects on cells and . . . can damage man's most precious possessions: the mind, the personality, the spirit."

Psychiatrist-neurologist Robert Heath is one of the specialists consulted in the Reader's Digest report. In a recent Rhesus-monkey study he conducted, the monkeys were exposed to the smoke of three-fourths of a marijuana cigarette five days a week, for six months. Structural cell changes occurred in all the brain sites and particularly in the sites directly related to typical pot symptoms of apathy, emotional flatness, irritability and fear.

Dr. Harold Voth of the Menninger Foundation's School of Psychiatry has studied the psychopathology of marijuana for the past eight years. He points out in the article that "It takes years of heavy drinking to reach the same point of psychological impairment that marijuana can induce in a matter of months, particularly in the case of the very young user."

Evidence of a growing awareness to a problem of epidemic proportions with dramatic implications can be seen in the response to previous marijuana articles. The Digest report, written by Peggy Mann, is the third of a series. Her first article dealt with pot-induced impairment of the brain and reproductive system. The second, with the drug's effect on the lungs, heart and immune system.

Pot smokers start out as a diverse group, but Mann points out that when they become chronic users, they "tend to gel into a startling sameness, with a distinct pot-induced profile." The symptoms of this profile are alarmingly similar to senility. Chronic users of pot become psychologically, physiologically and socially disabled — depression, an unreasonable preoccupation with how one's body feels, obsessive-compulsive tendencies and inflexibility were similar symptoms found in a July 1981 study of teen-age pot smokers and elderly, senile adults.

Dr. Mitchell Rosenthal, director of Phoenix House in New York City, the nation's largest residential drug-treatment facility, predicts: "A sizable number of our young people will not mature as they should. Instead, we can look forward to a growing population of immature, underqualified adults, many of whom will be unable to live without economic, social or clinical support."

Q—I am a World War II veteran who had Veterans Administration insurance at one time. I recently received a pamphlet saying I can receive a special insurance dividend on this cancelled insurance if I send $10.00. Is this legitimate?

A—No. This is just another version of an old insurance hoax that has been circulating for years. The only dividends being paid by VA are to veterans who were issued participating policies and who have maintained the policies in a premium paying status.

Q—I am an honorably discharged veteran of World War II and have never applied for any benefits from the Veterans Administration. Will the VA pay any benefit for burial expenses when I die?

A—Yes. VA will pay $150 for the purchase of a burial plot for any eligible wartime veteran not buried in a national cemetery. As of Oct. 1, 1981, an allowance of $300 is available to all veterans who at time of death were receiving, or entitled to receive disability compensation, and to all veterans receiving, or entitled to receive pension.

Q—Is it possible for me to pay my Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan before it becomes due?

A—Yes. A VA guaranteed loan may be partially or fully paid at any time without penalty.

Canadians extend thanks for a memorable visit

The Canadian Land Forces Command and Staff College, its Commandant Brig. Gen. P.H.C. Carew, the Directing Staff, students and the Canadian Forces Liaison Officer to the United States Army Infantry Center would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank MG Robert L. Wetzel and all of the personnel of Fort Benning who have contributed in making our visit to the Home of the Infantry very rewarding and memorable.

The Airborne and Ranger demonstrations were indicative of the highly professional and motivated soldiers trained by the Infantry. The briefings received were informative and given by outstanding instructors.

We also want to give special mention to the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) who not only provided troops for the field firing, but allowed us to have a close-up look at unit training Thursday, Nov. 19.

The skeet demonstration conducted by the United States Army Marksmanship Unit was superb and we "tip our hats" to Sgt. Matt Dryke and his remarkable abilities. We viewed with great interest two of the latest pieces of equipment coming into the U.S. inventory. The Bradley Fighting Vehicle and the Black Hawk helicopter are both most impressive pieces of kit and we owe special thanks to the 121st Aviation Squadron for the opportunity to experience the helicopter's capabilities.

Fort Benning, its people, its efficiency, its friendliness and its professionalism are most impressive. To all who supported this Canadian visit and made it a success, our heartfelt thanks.

Brig. Gen. P.H.C. Carew, Royal Canadian Army, presents Col. Eugene Hawkins, Ranger department director with a photograph.

Canadian visitors check out M-60 tank, while others observe other types of training.

Drinking during pregnancy may be the number one cause of mental retardation in the United States today.

A major health problem attributed to drinking mothers is called Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS). FAS has been considered responsible for nervous system disorders ranging from mental retardation to hyperactivity.

Some of the symptoms of FAS include shorter and lighter than average babies. These children also often have smaller heads with folds in the corner of their eyelids and shortened eyelid openings. Some reports indicate heart and urinary tract defects may occur. The location and movement of fingers or toes are also affected by FAS. Many FAS pregnancies end in miscarriage or stillbirth. In addition to these physical defects FAS children often develop a variety of social and behavioral disorders.

All women who drink heavily during pregnancy do not have FAS children. Statistics show that at least 40 percent do. Although the severity of FAS seems to be related to the amount and timing of alcohol consumed during pregnancy.

To date no established safe level of maternal alcohol consumption has been determined. The Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) has issued its strongest warning concerning drinking and pregnancy. DHHS advises all expectant women and those considering pregnancy to completely abstain from alcohol.

Although the early months of a pregnancy are the most critical, getting "on the wagon" for the last few months may limit damage to the unborn baby.

Unfortunately there are no guarantees that will insure your baby will be free from abnormalities. Complete prenatal care as prescribed by a medical doctor greatly increases the chance for the safe delivery of your baby.

The sounds of clubs striking golf balls, balls hitting trees and disgruntled golfers muttering to themselves have been replaced by the more military sounds of thudding boots, growling and grunting soldiers and cold steel and rifle butts hitting targets at the former Sand Hill Golf Course.

What used to be the first two holes of the golf course is now Fort Benning's Rifle Bayonet Assault Course for the soldiers of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

Prior to September this year, bayonet training during basic training was last conducted by the Army at Fort Polk, La. in the mid-1970s. It was stopped because there were too many injuries resulting from the training as it was conducted at that time.

When the Infantry One-Station-Unit-Training program of instruction was being revised, a thorough study was made of the skills needed by the infantry soldier. After a careful analysis, it was decided that bayonet training was needed.

All new infantry soldiers at Fort Benning now receive nine hours of bayonet training, six hours devoted to the basic movements and three hours on the bayonet assault course.

"Cold Steel Charlie" soldiers, of Company C, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, "attacked" the 460-meter long course last week. Let's take a look at what is involved in this training exercise.

The course shows its character right at the start, with a six-foot wall to be scaled followed by two log hurdles. Then comes the first set of bayonet targets that the soldiers must parry left or right before thrusting their bayonets into the target. There are a total of eight such targets included in the 18-obstacle course.

This is no time for timidity! The troops of Company C clear the concertina filled ditch, without breaking stride.

Next in line is the log balance and horizontal ladder that tests the soldiers' coordination. This is followed by another set of bayonet targets that require the soldiers to deliver a butt stroke to the "head" of the target.

To break the monotony, a three-foot-wide ditch filled with concertina wire is the next obstacle that the soldiers encounter.

Following more bayonet targets, the first of two trenches in the assault course makes its appearance. The bayonet targets in this case are simulated enemy soldiers occupying the trenches.

After another set of targets comes a 15-foot-high dirt hill which the soldiers have to low-crawl over. From here on the assault course is all up hill. Next in line is the barbed wire tunnel crawl, 10 individual tunnels, one for each soldier.

Then, more bayonet targets followed by the second trench of simulated enemy soldiers. The next set of bayonet targets require a different type of attack, a butt stroke to the "groin" of the target.

One more log hurdle must be cleared before the final obstacle of the course, a double apron barbed wire entanglement, is reached. The soldiers must negotiate this obstacle on their backs.

If all this reads like a lot happens in a short time, it certainly does. The average time for completing the assault course is about 5½ minutes. After completing the course, the soldiers double time back to the start, get in line and go through the course a second time.

When asked how he felt after completing the course, Pvt. George Kimsey said, "It is a tough course, particularly that last 100 yards or so uphill. But it sure does build up your confidence, knowing that you have the capability and skill to use the bayonet, if it ever comes to that."

Company C soldiers negotiate the last obstacle of the course on their backs and under the watchful eye of a drill

Hoo-ooo-ooo. Does a five minute break feel good!! Pvt. Junior Jones takes a welcome break after he and other members of his squad completed the bayonet assault course.

Dancers raise Olympic funds

Story and photos by Don Rhodes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was called a chance to dance for physical fitness to give the mentally retarded a chance to participate in the Special Olympics.

In Danceathon '81, Aerobic dance students and instructors from around the area recently participated with approximately 120,000 dancers nationwide to raise money for the Special Olympics, the largest international sports competition for the mentally retarded, according to Mrs. Georjeann Plack.

Mrs. Plack, a Fort Benning family member and Aerobic dance instructor who participated in the dancing, said the danceathon raised more than $13,000 in pledges and donations.

She said that Columbus was chosen as one of only 100 places throughout the nation to participate in the danceathon because of the large number of people in this area enrolled in Aerobic dancing classes.

There were 50 dances during the four hour danceathon. Students se-

Fort Benning elementary school faculties were represented by teachers from Dexter, Faith, Wilbur, McBride, and Loyd schools. They danced for all the post schools and raised approximately $600 from the faculties and other groups on post who sponsored them.

Mrs. Plack and Mrs. Kimberly Hall, also the wife of a Fort Benning serviceman and a participant in the danceathon, have taught Aerobic dancing at Kelley Hill, Martin Army Community Hospital and several other places on post.

The teachers who danced were Donna Luca, Marsha St. John, Suzanne Williams, Kathleen Tall, Diane Oliver and Tommye Wentland.

Aerobic Dancing by Jacki Sorensen, Inc. sponsored the danceathon to celebrate its tenth anniversary and in an effort to get communities interested and involved in Special Olympics Mrs. Plack said.

Babysitting roster sought

The Women's Advisory Sub-Council at Martin Army Community Hospital is trying to establish a roster of people who would like to babysit on a temporary basis.

The purpose of establishing this list is to provide active duty personnel who are PCS'ing into Fort Benning a quick referral for baby sitters while they process into the MEDDAC.

There have been several instances recently where active duty single parents have not been able to report for duty initially because of not knowing anyone in the area to stay with their children until other arrangements could be made.

This is a particular hardship when duty hours do not coincide with Tot Town hours.

It is not the intent of this Sub-Council to initiate or maintain a babysitting service as such.

We wish to merely provide a list of people who will be willing to baby sit on a temporary basis.

All arrangements such as charges, time, transportation, etc. will be entirely between the two parties involved and neither the Women's Advisory Sub-

Council nor the MEDDAC will assume any responsibility beyond providing the names and telephone numbers.

While most of the calls for baby sitters have been on post, we are not limiting the roster to those living in government quarters. Many times active duty personnel live in the civilian community and prefer baby sitters who live in their neighborhoods.

Again, let us emphasize that we are not attempting to establish any day care centers or run a baby sitting service. All baby sitting will be done in the home of the child. State law, as well as post regulations, prohibit operating baby sitting services in government quarters. All responsibility for payment, etc., will rest with the two parties involved.

Point of contact for this project is Mrs. Brenda Gilkey, Logistics Division, Martin Army Community Hospital, phone 544-2268. If anyone would like his/her name added to this list of baby sitters, please contact Mrs. Gilkey at the above number.

Soldiers to get 'early outs'

WASHINGTON — Soldiers scheduled for active-duty separation from Dec. 14, 1981, through Jan. 9, 1982, will be eligible for "early outs," according to Department of the Army (DA) officials.

Eligible soldiers will be separated between Dec. 10-18 or as soon as possible, if they don't want to wait until their normal release date.

Soldiers are scheduled to be released as follows:

Current ESA/ETS Date	Target Separation Date
Dec. 14-18, 1981	Dec. 10, 1981
Dec. 19-22, 1981	Dec. 11, 1981
Dec. 23-26, 1981	Dec. 14, 1981
Dec. 27-28, 1981	Dec. 15, 1981
Dec. 29, 1981-Jan. 2, 1982	Dec. 16, 1981
Jan. 3-6, 1982	Dec. 17, 1981
Jan. 7-9, 1982	Dec. 18, 1981

To prevent early or late arrivals at separation/transfer points, overseas commanders are asked to make sure members being separated under this program be returned in time to meet this schedule.

Officers eligible for early release under this program may be kept on active duty until their normal release date if necessary for unit operations.

Not eligible for early release are:

- Reserve component personnel (officer and enlisted) on active duty for training under special training.

- Officers who have a DA-approved release from active duty or resignation dates.

- Officers being involuntarily relieved from active duty on a specific date as directed by DA, other than early release.

- Personnel scheduled for retirement.

- Personnel to whom the provisions of AR 600-31 apply.

- Personnel whose normal ETS or release date does not fall between Dec. 14, 1981, and Jan. 9, 1982.

Permanent residence aliens wishing to fulfill naturalization requirements through military service will not be required to get out before their normal ETS. Those who enlisted in the Regular Army for three or more years wanting to be separated under the early release program will be counseled concerning the results of an early release.

For more information on the "Early Out" program, check DA Circular 3612-81-1, July 15, 1981. (ARNews)

Tribute to soldiers

Array of movies this week

By J. C. Hope
USAIC, Public Affairs Office

This week on WFBG-TV, you'll see a vast array of Motion Pictures to choose from, starting with our Big Picture series. Some of the films included in the series are "Tradition and Achievements," a story of the valor and determination of the citizen soldier from the revolution to the Korean War. "Seek and Strike" is a film about the development of Armor in the U.S. Army and it examines the training of a tanker as he learns to load, fire and reload his weaponry on the move.

"Prelude to Taps" is a tribute to American soldiers in the form of Army drills performed by the 3rd U.S. Infantry Division at Ft. McNair, Washington, D.C. "The Red Diamond" tells the story of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), nicknamed "The Red Diamond."

WFBG-TV will also show the Green Scene to let you know what's going on Army wide. Soldiers TV Magazine presents up-to-date information on the IFV and the BFV. Don't forget, for what's going on at Fort Benning, watch the Benning Magazine.

Graduation ceremony

The Infantry Officers Basic Course, 8-81, 22nd Company, 2nd Battalion, The School Brigade, will graduate today at 11 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium. Brig. Gen. John M. Kirk, assistant division commander (maneuvers), 5th Infantry Division (NMEchanized), Fort Polk, La. will be the guest speaker. The public is cordially invited to attend and is asked to be seated prior to the start of the ceremony.

Christmas/New Year

Fort Benning holiday period begins at 7 a.m., Dec. 18 and lasts until 6 p.m. Jan. 4, 1982. Attention is invited to the requirements of Letter, ATZB-AG-A dated Nov. 19, subject; Operating Schedule for Post Activities During Christmas/New Year Holidays 1981. Operating schedules are to be submitted no-later-than 30 Nov.

Christmas lighting policy

Exterior lighting for Christmas decorations is limited to Infantry Hall, Martin Army Hospital, outside selected chapels and Community Life Program Centers, and each major unit may have one lighted tree. All other billeting and housing areas must use UNLIGHTED exterior decorations. Interior lighting should be reasonable and limited to a minimum of displays. Interior lighting and authorized exterior lighting will be confined to the hours of 1800 to 2200 hours except on Christmas Eve till 0200 hours on Dec. 25. Lighted (wax) candles will not be used under any circumstances.

Graduation ceremony

The Infantry Officers Advanced Course 4-81, 13th Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, will graduate Dec. 11, at 10:30 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium. Maj. Gen. Guy S. Maloy, III, director of training, chief of staff for operations, U.S. Army, Washington, D.C. will be the guest speaker.

Hunter's safety class

Hunter safety classes will be conducted from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the Follow Me Golf Course ballroom, on Dec. 19. Classes will be limited to 30 persons per class. Those persons born prior to Jan. 1, 1961 or thereafter and wanting to attain a Georgia state hunting license are required to attend a Hunters Safety class. To pre-register, call or come by the reservation and ticket office, or call 545-4155/7535 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m..

Infantry conference

The United States Army Infantry School will host the Infantry Instructor/Reserve Component (RC) Update conference from Dec. 8 through Dec. 10.

Approximately 400 infantry instructors from other service schools, active component advisors and branch assistance teams who work directly with RC Infantry units are expected to attend.

The conference will consist of three days of current instruction on subjects that deal with infantry doctrine, tactics, weapons, and training developments for service school instructors.

Information for RC Infantry Battalion and Divisional Brigade commanders and selected members of their staff will also be put out to the visitors.

The conference will be conducted in Marshall Auditorium. There will also be one display room and an administrative control center with access to AUTOVON.

Displays will be set up in the hallways of Bldg 4 close to the conference area.

The attendees are expected to arrive in the Fort Benning area Dec. 7 and will be billeted in Henry Hall. They will be fed at the "Follow Me" dining facility or the officers club, and a welcome desk will be available at Olson Hall.

'Feelings' poster wins state honors

Lloyd school principal Spurgeon Glenn presents poster award to Machelle Bailey.

By Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A poster depicting the importance of the school counselor in today's elementary schools has won 1st prize in the state for 10 year old Machelle Bailey, a fifth grader at Loyd School on post.

Machelle entered the contest through her teacher Owen Ditchfield. The theme was "What Does Counseling Mean to the Student".

Machelle let her feelings about counselors be known by the poster she drew of a counselor understanding other people's feelings. The poster shows the feelings of people and a counselor telling children about the different type feelings people have.

The state-wide contest was sponsored by the Georgia School Counselor's Association. Machelle is the daughter of SSgt. and Mrs. James Craig of Fort Benning.

All Communities:

• We are still organizing the tours for the in-coming personnel. If you or your family members would like to learn about Fort Benning and its historic values, please come to the ACS building or sign up at the in-processing office. This is something that can help you and your family enjoy your stay at Fort Benning, Ga.

The toy drive needs support

• Christmas is getting closer day by day and so is the end of our toy drive. We need your support and your old toys to help someone that is less fortunate. This drive is to help the needy active duty and the retired families in and around the Fort Benning area.

New, used, and handmade toys are welcome, as well as wrapping paper, ribbons and name tags. Volunteers are almost always needed to repair and wrap the toys.

The collection points are as follows:

• The McGraw Manor Community Life Program Center on Custer Road, Highway 27 at the Custer road bypass exit.

- The Lavoie Manor Community Life Center on Lavoie Road, Bldg. 8.
- The Custer Road Community Life Center on Kessler (on the side of the Main PX building)
- The Bouton Heights/Davis Hill Community Center at the Roundhouse.
- The Army Community Service, Bldg. 229, Crain Hall.

The deadline for the toy donations is November 30 for the used toys and December 10 for new and handmade toys and wrapping accessories. For more information, contact Army Community Services duty hours schedule at 545-5516. After duty hours and on weekends contact SSgt James Quintal, Project Coordinator at 689-1769. If you also know a needy family, please contact ACS.

Commanders and First Sergeants are asked to please submit the names of servicemembers and families that may need our assistance for toys.

VA Q&A

Q—What is the difference between disability compensation and disability pension?

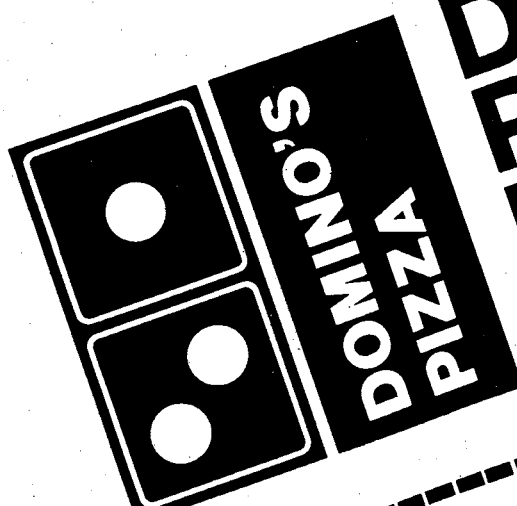

A—Compensation is paid to veterans with disability rated 10 percent or more disabling, which was incurred in or aggravated during active military service. Pension is paid to needy war veterans who are permanently and totally disabled prior to age 65 or who have reached age 65.

Q—I bought a home recently with a GI guaranteed home loan. I have now discovered some defects which the seller refused to fix. Can the VA help me?

A—The Veterans Administration cannot compel a seller to remedy defects or to fulfill a contract on an existing home. However, there is a one-year guarantee on a newly constructed home. Contact the nearest VA office for details.

Q—I am rated 10 percent disabled due to service connected disabilities. Am I eligible for preference in civil service jobs?

A—Yes. Veterans rated as having service connected disabilities receive 10 preference points.

Counseling

The Family Life Center, bldg. 101, behind the Infantry Chapel, has received two additional staff members who are available for counseling with soldiers and family members any weekday afternoon. They are Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Francis L. Fly Jr., Doctor of Ministry degree and Association member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors, and Rona Michelson, Master of Arts in Counseling. For more information or appointments call 545-2050/2359.

Disaster in streets

At this time of year darkness comes early. There is also more traffic on the roads because of shopping for the Christmas holidays. There are also a lot of small children playing in the streets instead of on the playgrounds.

Traffic + darkness + children in the streets = disaster.

Children don't realize the danger. Only parents can keep their holidays safe and happy.

Keep the children where they belong, safe and well and off the streets.

Santa is coming

Post organizations and your local exchange are teaming up together to offer the military community a handicraft, giftware Bazaar in Hanger 2403, Lawson Air Field.

The Bazaar will be open to all military personnel and their dependents, retirees and civilian personnel employed by Fort Benning.

The dates for this event are today through Sunday. Hours of operation 10 a.m. 'til 6 p.m. today and tomorrow, and 12 p.m. 'til 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Santa Claus will officially arrive on tomorrow at 10 a.m. and will visit with the children until 4 p.m. and again on Sunday from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Another attraction for the children, under 12 years of age, will be a coloring contest, which will be judged by Dunebuggy the Clown who will be there all 3 days. A 1st, 2nd and 3rd place prize will be awarded by age group. The special picture to color and all the rules of the game can be picked up at the convenience store on main post and from your friendly ID checker at the mall.

International fashions shown at luncheon

Story and photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Jamilah Mehsen wore a princess dress. It was gold chiffon with gold trim. The dress was a four-hundred-year-old design. In Jamilah's native country of Lebanon it is worn on special occasions.

Dressed in their native formal and social attire, allied officers, wives and children were featured in an International Fashion Show at the Fort Benning Officers Club recently. They gave the ladies of the Fort Benning Officers Wives Club a chance to see how they dress in their native countries.

Hosted by the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade Ladies Group, the fashion show was the highlight of the Officers Wives Club November Luncheon.

Also featured in the show was Chang Cha Lem of Korea. She wore a traditional Korean dress made from chiffon. The dress is worn on special holidays, such as New Year's Eve.

The husband and wife team of Maj. Francis Akpovevwe of Nigeria wore their native everyday casual wear. Maj. Akpovevwe wore Nigeria's national dress called an Agbada. His wife Faustina wore a dress called a Madraw. It is just wrapped and tucked in, there are no zippers or buttons. The dress usually comes with a head-dress.

Little Alia Azhar, one of the children in the show from Pakistan, wore a two-piece outfit. The top is called a Camise and the bottom a Kherara. Most ladies in Pakistan get married in this dress. It is often copied for little girls such as Alia. The dress also comes with a headdress called a Dupata.

The fashion show was a very colorful event. It was a great opportunity for our allies to show us a bit of their culture. The show also gave them the chance to feel at home knowing that the people of other nations are very impressed at seeing a little of their way of life.

Rana Moumtaz wearing a "Galabeya" dress that is worn by woman in all Arabic Countries.

Black Dragons take 23 trophies

By James McCall
Special to the BAYONET

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Chinese Goju Black Dragon Family returned from Savannah, Ga. with 23 trophies, to include 11 first places.

The Dragon Family showed superior Chinese arts in fighting, weapons and kata. The females completely dominated their events while the children won virtually every kata and fighting event. The Dragon men placed in every event they entered.

The youngest Dragon to compete was Michelle Brown (four years) who took second place in the under-six-years-old kata. The oldest was Sensei McCall (40 years) who took first in the senior division Black Belt fighting. Last week Sensei competed in Cullman, Ala. and won first place in the senior Black Belt fighting and third in regular Black Belt fighting. McCall claims he still competes only to show his students Chinese Goju is still alive and well at 40 years of age.

Results

1. Denise McCall — Placed first in white and black kata; third in black and white kumite.
2. Jimmy Skanes — Placed first in white and black kata.
3. Viet Luu — Placed third in white and black kumite.
4. Kim Tran — Placed third in white and black kata.
5. Cathy Cook — Placed second in white and black kata.
6. Laverne MaGee — Placed first in white and black kumite; second in black kata.
7. Juan Carmoega — Placed first in white and black kumite.

13. Regina Jackson — Placed first in green hand kata; first in brown and under weapon kata.
14. David L. Wynn — Placed second in kumite and third in kata.
15. Cheryl Davis — Placed first in brown and black kumite.
16. Keith Reynolds — Placed first in brown kumite and first in brown kata.
17. Sensei McCall — Placed first in senior division kumite.

Tae Kwon Do Club doing well under Clark

Airborne Department Tower Branch chief instructor SFC James A. Clark is a busy man. During the day he's kept busy making sure everything is going right with the airborne students as they go through tower week of airborne training. But at night Clark sheds his Army fatigue uniform to put on his black belt. The 33-year-old former 1st Infantry Training Brigade Drill Sergeant of the Year is also an instructor of Martial Arts. He is also the post's Grand Martial Arts champion.

Clark runs the Fort Benning Airborne Department sponsored Tae Kwon Do Club. And the club seems to be going quite well. On Nov. 14 at Cullman, Ala. it was the YMCA 2nd Annual Championship. Clark took 3rd place black belt sparring (fighting) in the light heavyweight division. Another member, Gilbert Perez, took 1st place in the blue belt division for form. On Nov. 21 in Savannah, Ga., Clark took 2nd place black belt sparring in the light heavyweight division. Tae Kwon Do Club member John Johnson came in 2nd place in the yellow belt division for sparring and form. While in Savannah, Clark was given a trophy for his team entering the tournament.

Presently the Tae Kwon Do Club instructor has 15 students, ranging in ages from nine years old to adults.

On Feb. 20 Clark and six of his students will be entering the Columbia Pro Am Karate Championship in Columbia, S.C.

Eleven-year-old William Sarnecky shows he has power in his legs besides his hands.

Practicing hunting safety is good way to avoid tragedies

With the hunting season in full swing, Post hunters are encouraged to make the 1981 hunting season accident-free. Each year tragedies and injuries occur in the woods from hunting accidents. If hunters are careful, there will be no deaths or injuries from hunting.

The major cause of hunting accidents is the shooter failing to make certain of his target. Wearing reflective clothing (vest and cap) reduce the possibility of hunters being mistaken for game.

Safety measures relating to fence, tree climbing or ditch jumping with a loaded gun should be remembered by all hunters. Remove the magazine, clear the cartridge from the chamber, and apply the safety lock. By exercising gun safety measures, a gun firing accidentally is unlikely.

CARDINAL RULES OF HUNTING SAFETY

- Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the first rule of gun safety.
- Never climb a tree or fence, jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
- Guns carried into camp, home and automobiles must be unloaded and the chamber cleared of ammunition. Guns should be carried in cases to the shooting area.
- Be absolutely sure of your target before you pull the trigger. Know the identifying features of the game you intend to hunt.
- Never point a gun at anything you do not intend to shoot. Avoid horseplay when handling guns.
- Always carry your weapon so you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble. Keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.
- Assure that barrel and chamber is clear of obstructions. Use only the ammunition of proper size for the weapon used.
- Never shoot a bullet at a hard surface or the surface of water. Be sure backstops are adequate.

Up, up and away

Men's and Women's post basketball teams will begin competition in January. However you can still be on the team. For more information call 545-2332. (Photo by Becky Bulgrin)

- Unattended guns should be stored beyond the reach of children and irresponsible adults.
 - Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting, and leave "quick-draw" gun play to experts.
- Many areas on Post reserved for hunting have previously been used as firing ranges or training sites. Therefore, sportsmen must exercise caution in these areas. Never kick, move, or pick up duds or unfamiliar objects. Poisonous snakes infest many hunting areas. Wear protective clothing such as mid-calf boots and long, heavy woven trousers. Make the hunting season safe and enjoyable by obeying the rules for safe hunting.

Secretary Marsh recalls history

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh recalled the history of the infantryman as he spoke before a crowd of approximately 500 persons last Wednesday night at the Annual Fall Membership Meeting of the local Association of the United States Army chapter.

He traced the history of the Queen of Battle from the Roman Legions, to Napoleon's Old Guard, to the French Foreign Legion, to the United States' Big Red One—the 1st Division—the oldest in the Army. He talked briefly of the Division's service in WWI, WWII, and Viet Nam.

Sec. Marsh talked of the lessons to be discerned from the history of these units. He said, "First, they are all infantry. They confirm the statement of General Sherman who said, 'All great wars, as heretofore, will depend chiefly upon the infantry.'"

He also said there is a commonality among the soldiers from the legions to the 1st Division.

"These include," he said, "the proficiency of the soldier in the use of his weapons; the combat skills of the soldiers in tactics, teamwork, and survival; discipline on the march and under fire; stamina for sustained long marches and to still be able to take the field in pitched combat; and these great units all had elan and esprit-de-corps."

He concluded his speech by saying, "The American Infantryman has fought for and defended the values and liberties of this great Republic for more than two centuries.

"The only command he needs to be given has been 'Follow me' and he went on to victory and marched into history."

During the business meeting that followed the secretary's address, the new officers for the chapter were named.

They are: President, Mr. James W. Key; 1st Vice President, Mr. B. Dayton Preston; 2nd Vice President, Mr. Joe Smith; Secretary/Treasurer, Col. Dennis J. Harron; and Assistant Secretary/Treasurer, Lt. Col. Russell W. Andrews.

Members of the Board of Directors for the next three years are: Retired Lt. Col. Robert L. Bechdolt, Mr. Denton Cole, Mr. Richard Ford, Mr. Sam Franklin, Mr. Bob Hahn, Mr. Boyd Horn, Mr. Charles McClure, Mr. Bob Prater, and Mrs. Lenora Smith.

Retired Col. Charles Thebaud received a plaque for being co-chairman of the Operation Holiday Committee and a certificate for his work on the board of directors for the past three years.

Col. Richard W. Simpson was presented a plaque for his work as chairman of the membership committee and a certificate for loyal service.

Holiday fever can cause accidents

In conjunction with the Christmas-New Year holiday season, I hereby declare the week of Dec. 13-19 as Fort Benning Safety Week.

During fiscal year 1981, the Fort Benning community recorded 473 non-fatal military and civilian injuries and 13 military fatalities. Many accidents and injuries go unrecorded, but the actual number of accidents is much higher.

During safety week, which precedes the beginning of the holiday season, I urge all of you in the Fort Benning community to make a concerted effort to work and play safely without accidents or injuries.

Eight of the past year's fatalities were traffic related, and speed and/or alcohol was a factor. When you get behind the wheel of your automobile or on your motorcycle, be sure you are capable of driving safely. If you plan to drink, make arrangements to have someone drive you home. According to the National Safety Council, alcohol is a factor in at least 50 percent of all fatal automobile accidents. Be courteous on the highways and expect the unexpected.

Last year, nationwide, there were 105,000 accidental deaths; 23,000 occurred in the home. During this holiday season we must be on guard to prevent accidents in the home.

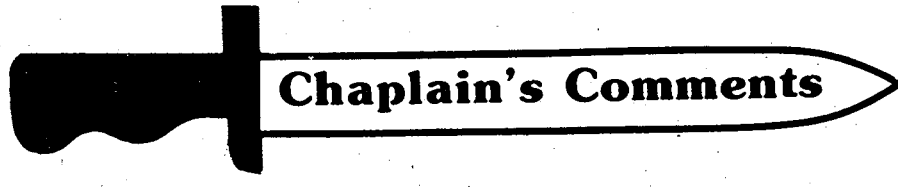

Decorate your home with safety in mind, and never leave your tree lights on when you retire for the night or when you leave home.

When you select gifts for the small ones, be sure they are appropriate for the age and safe. Many children are injured each year playing with unsafe toys.

I am personally concerned for the safety of every one of you in the Fort Benning community, not only during this safety week and the Christmas-New Year season, but all the days that follow. As a community we must work and play together safely without accidents and injuries. Continue these safe practices into the new year.

Make your gift this year, the gift of life. Do so by having a safe Christmas-New Year holiday season.

Chaplain's Comments

God loves us during tragedies

As an Army Chaplain, I enjoy any pleasant and fulfilling benefits. To worship in a chapel with soldiers and their families is rewarding. To see young soldiers meeting for Bible study on week nights certainly is inspiring.

This week, however, it fell my lot to perform the most difficult task I face. You guessed it... a funeral. As I shared with the family and friends of the infant whose body had died after only eight days of life, "this bud which had promised beautiful bloom has not faded, but has merely been transplanted in the garden of God."

I believe God makes special provisions for infants and children who die prematurely. Sure, there is pain; of course, grief will follow. It is a hurtful experience to go through.

But, we are promised in the Bible that God loves us during these tragedies, which are sure to come to us all. "Cast your cares on Him; for he cares for you," the scripture says.

Following is an anonymous story of God's love. Read it and believe it. Allow God to love you — He really does care about you!

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SAND

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. For each scene, he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand: one belonging to him, and the other to the Lord.

When the last scene flashed before him, he looked back at the footprints and noticed that many times along the path there was only one set of footprints in the sand. He also noticed that this happened during the lowest and saddest times in his life.

This really bothered him, so he questioned the Lord. "Lord, you said that once I decided to

The Adjutant General sending recall-to-active-duty orders

WASHINGTON -- The Army's Adjutant General last month began sending recall-to-active-duty orders to about 85,000 Regular Army (RA) retirees for use only in the event of mobilization, report officials at the U.S. Army Reserve Components Personnel and Administration Center (RCPAC).

The preassigned orders designate the post where the retiree will report, but does not cite a specific unit. Generally, retirees are being preassigned to posts within 300 miles of their home, provided they can be used there. However, any post in the Continental United States (CONUS) may be named, based on its needs as matched with the retiree's known skills or experience.

The decision now to issue the peacetime preassignment orders to RA retirees comes after testing of a successful pilot program last year, say RCPAC officials. About 900 retirees were issued the preassignment orders to garrisons and hospitals at Fort Benning, GA., Fort Carson, Colo., Fort Lewis, Wash. and Fort Riley, Kan.

The retiree recall and preassignment program allows the Army to specify the assignments telling retired soldiers when and where to report if they are needed during wartime or in a congressionally declared national emergency. By law, the Secretary of the Army may order these retirees to active duty at any time.

Those selected have the skills and experience necessary to fill numerous mobilization positions at Army posts within CONUS. Soldiers already on active duty can then be released for deployment and jobs for which the retirees would not be suited.

Preassignment orders come with a cover letter and an information paper that should answer many potential questions. The package stresses that the recipient need take no immediate action. The retiree will report for duty only if and when full mobilization is announced by the president on TV, radio or other news media.

Instructions in the preassignment order tells the retiree to report to the designated mobilization station within seven days after full mobilization is announced. Travel by private automobile at the retiree's expense is requested. However, reimbursement will be made for expenses. If the retiree has no available funds, transportation can be arranged at the nearest military installation. Uniform allowances will be paid to officers after they report. Uniforms will be issued to enlisted retirees.

Medical examinations are not required for those who now receive the preassignment orders. Examinations would be conducted after reporting in the event of full mobilization.

The retiree mobilization division at RCPAC will perform personnel management services for all preassigned retirees. Also, RCPAC will make periodic contacts with the preassigned retiree to assure the correctness of all information on the automated personnel master file maintained by RCPAC.

Twice yearly, the preassignment orders will be mailed to retirees as required to continue meeting the requirements for mobilization.

Officials say the preassignment of large numbers of Army retirees will reduce the reaction time in the event a full mobilization becomes necessary.

Questions about the program should be directed to HQDA, Attn: DAPE-PSM, Washington, D.C. Telephone Autovon 227-1357, commercial (202) 697-1357. (ARNews)

Reception station groundbreaking

Story by Brian Adams
 Photos by Bill Walton
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

"We have come down a long road to arrive at this point..." proclaimed Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander, in his speech to the people present at the groundbreaking ceremony last Friday.

"With the completion of this reception station, true One Station Unit Training (OSUT) will be a reality at Fort Benning," he said.

Last week Maj. Gen. Wetzel, Congressman Jack T. Brinkley, the mayors of Columbus and Phoenix City, representatives of the L.B. Samford construction company shoveled the first portion of dirt that would eventually become the reality of Fort Benning's long awaited dream. The Reception Station and true OSUT.

Slated to be finished in 1983, the station will cover an area of 114,500 square feet and will cost an estimated $5,649,000. "From the day a young soldier puts on his first pair of combat boots until he stands proudly at graduation as qualified infantryman, every hour of his improcessing and training will be conducted by Fort Benning's superb officers and N.C.O.'s," explained Wetzel.

Wetzel also stated that the cost of transporting 27,800 of the new soldier from places like Fort Jackson cost approximately $770,000 and that both the amount of soldiers as well as monetary cost are expected to rise.

Eliminating these costs when the reception station is completed and opened will mean a real savings for us all, declared Wetzel.

There are a few advantages to the building itself, commented Wetzel. One the quality of training will benefit because we will no longer be dependent on outside installations, like Fort Jackson, for support with the initial entry process.

Another will be that the building will contain everything that's necessary to improcess up to 660 new soldiers a week, Wetzel further explained. In addition to his initial clothing issue and that first pair of boots, the soldier will be tested, counselled, be able to attend religious services, get his hair cut and have the other little items accomplished for him, all while he stays in this one building.

The soldier will also be able to train while he waits to complete his improcessing, simply by watching the television monitors that will be part of this new reception station, commented the general. And in case of need for someone in particular there will be a special paging and control system operating throughout the center which will provide an easier way of locating the servicemember, platoon or even the cadre.

"The completion of this facility, for which we break ground today, will represent another significant step forward in the process of better fulfilling our training mission—that of producing the finest infantrymen in the world," said Wetzel. "Thank you for joining us today."

Following Maj Gen. Wetzel's speech, Col. Bobby J. Harris, chief of staff for Fort Benning, introduced Congressman Brinkley, who following Wetzel's line of thought commended the idea of One Station Unit Training and also extended a little more on the subject by dealing out a surprise to the audience and guests. "...The reception station is quite enough to assure the excellence of this day," he commented. "But, there is more good news!"

Earlier in the year it had been reported that the reception station might be jeopardized should an additional Barracks Project also be sought. "As Chairman of the operative Armed Services Subcommittee, I was determined to also advance the Barracks Project as a matter of equity, and as a modest catch-up to offset the unfair delay to which we have been subjected," Brinkley commented.

I am happy to report that these fears were unfounded.

To back up his words, Dec. 7, in the House of Representatives, he filed a conference report from the Armed Services Committee on Worldwide Military Construction. In that report is the funding authority of $19,850,000 for a barracks complex which is being moved up from its original date of 1986.

All together now! The actual ground breaking was a joint civil-military operation. Participants were (l to r) contractors representative Frank Baxley Jr., Mayor of Phenix City Jane Gullatt, Mayor of Columbus Harry Jackson, Georgia State Senator from the 15th District Floyd Hudgins, Congressman Jack T. Brinkley and Post Commander Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel.

"By advancing the timetable, we reduce the cost form $26,337,000 and effect a savings of $6,487,000.," the congressman said.

Following both speeches the participants in the event left the platform, picked up the shovels and hardhats and moved to an area designed for the first breaking of the earth.

Col. Bobby J. Harris, introduced both speakers and acted as the Master of Ceremony for the event. Also attending the groundbreaking were the 1st and 2nd Infantry Training Brigade Commanders, for whom the whole thing is designed and the commander of the Infantry Training Group. Mayor Harry Jackson, Columbus and Mayor Jane Gulatt, Phenix City as well as Mr. Frank Baxley, Jr., vice president of L.B. Samford, Inc., were also in attendance.

School children learn fabric design

Photos by Shari Burghart

Story by Dave Bristow

The studio of fabric designer Wini McQueen has been buzzing. Children of Fort Benning's Dependents' Schools have learned to appreciate art a little bit more because of her teachings there.

For 18 weeks Ms. McQueen has been an artist-in-residence at Patch Elementary School teaching children how to make handprinted fabric designs. She teaches 15 different types of printing.

More than 100 children, chosen because of their artistic talent and teacher recommendations, attended five to 10 one-hour classes from Ms. McQueen. They learned batiking, block printing, photogramming, stenciling, heat transfer printing, and more.

"I'm sure we missed many talented students in selecting people from the schools we thought would benefit most from this program," explained Ms. McQueen. "I wish we would have had more time. Some of the children were not exposed to as many types of processing as others."

With most of the fabric art, children learned to work with different colors of dye. In batiking, a design is put on a fabric by covering the fabric with melted wax over the portions which form the pattern and dyeing the uncovered portions. When the wax is removed the fabric has its design.

Another interesting process the children learn is photogramming. Children paint the fabric with dye, place scissors and other objects on top of it, and expose the fabric to the sun. From this they get a silhouette-like photograph of the item they are photogramming.

McQueen's art students had their handprinted fabrics on display at Patch School for the past three days with an open house showing.

Ms. McQueen was sent here by the Georgia Council for the Arts. The project was funded by the National Endowment for the Arts, Artists-in-Education, Georgia Council for the Arts and the Fort Benning Dependents' Schools. She is a professional free-lance fabric designer who graduated from Howard University and attended Haystack Mountain School of Arts in Maine. This was her third 18-week residence in Georgia. She has put on many demonstrations in fabric design including one for the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

Records clerk could be Mrs. Georgia

Story by Becky Winters
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"I wanted to show that a woman in the Army could serve her country while running a household and maintaining her femininity." So says Sp4 Wanda Clark, explaining why she entered the Mrs. Georgia Pageant.

Clark is concerned with the image of women in the Army, and hopes her participation in the pageant will help. "Most people don't think of women in the Army as being attractive," said Clark.

She has been in the Army for four years, and plans to reenlist for three more years in January. Clark is assigned to A Company, Headquarters Command, and presently works as a records specialist at the Infantry Training Brigade Military Personnel Office.

The soft-spoken Clark is five feet two and one-half inches tall, weighs 115 and is 22 years old. She is originally from Tampa, Fla. where she attended the Barbizon School of Modeling. She did some modeling while stationed in Germany, which led to her interest in the pageant. One of the possible benefits of participating in such a pageant is that contestants may be discovered by producers, for work in commercials.

Georgia Productions in Atlanta is in charge of the pageant and selected Clark to be one of 50 finalists, based on the photograph portfolio and written application she submitted. Judging at the pageant will be based on evening gown, swim suit and personal interviews with contestants.

The pageant is scheduled for Feb. 13 at Stouffers Pine Isle near Atlanta. The winner will represent Georgia at the Mrs. America Pageant in Las Vegas next year, and the prizes for the Mrs. Georgia pageant include an all expense paid trip to Las Vegas.

In preparation for the pageant, Clark is looking for a sponsor to pay the $295 registration fee. The deadline for submitting the name of her sponsor is Dec. 23. She has had interviews with several local businesses, but to date no one has made a firm commitment.

If it is Clark's first pageant, and she is excited about it. "I am working out every day at the gym to prepare for it," said Clark.

Clark is married to Stephen Clark, a civilian employee of AAFES. In her spare time she enjoys cooking, aerobic dancing and bowling.

Choosing That "Special" Toy

By Alfreta Gibson, RN
Preventive Medicine Activity

It's that time again! How do you decide what toys to purchase for your children? Do clever advertisements, nostalgia, or your own childhood needs provide the basis for your choices? What ever the reasons you have for buying toys for your children consider toy safety first. Don't buy the trauma and hysteria that occur with unsafe toys.

Here are a few hints to protect your child from toy inflicted injuries:

- Teach your child to play safely with their toys. Be sure they understand "you don't throw trucks".

- Have children pick up toys after play. This way avoid a parent accident, too.

- Sharp edges: Toys of brittle plastic or glass can be broken easily leaving dangerous sharp, cutting edges. Wooden, metal, and plastic toys sometimes have sharp edges due to poor construction.

- Small parts: Tiny toys and toys with small removable parts can be swallowed or become lodged in a child's windpipe, ears or nose. The squeakers in some squeeze toys can be removed and swallowed. The seams of poorly constructed stuffed dolls or animals can break open and release small pellets that can be swallowed or inhaled.

- Sharp points Broken toys can expose dangerous prongs and knife-like sharp points. Pins and staples on dolls' clothes, hair and accessories can easily puncture an unsuspecting child. Even a teddy bear or stuffed toy can have barbed eyes or wired limbs which can cut or stab.

- Loud noises: Toy caps and some noise-making guns and other toys can produce sounds at noise levels that can damage hearing. The Federal Hazardous Substances Act regulations require the following label on boxes of caps producing noises above a certain level: "WARNING DO NOT FIRE CLOSER THAN 1 FOOT TO THE EAR. DO NOT USE INDOORS".

• Propelled objects: Projectiles-guided missiles and similar flying toys can be turned into weapons and can injure eyes in particular. Children should never be permitted to play with adult lawn darts or other hobby or sporting equipment that have sharp points. Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective tips intended to prevent injury.

• Electric toys: Electric toys that are improperly constructed, wired, or used can shock or burn. Electric toys must meet mandatory Federal safety requirements for maximum surface temperatures, electrical construction and prominent warning labels. Electric toys with heating elements are only recommended for children over eight years old. Children should be taught to use electric toys cautiously and under adult supervisions.

• Wrong toy for the wrong age: Toys that may be safe for older children like a chemistry or hobby set can be extremely dangerous in the hands of little ones.

The average American parent will spend a sizable portion of the family budget for birthday and Christmas toys. Practice toy safety and you won't "get more than you pay for".

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE. REENLIST.

'Operation Holiday' gearing up

The local chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) continues to gear up for its annual "Operation Holiday" push to provide activities for Fort Benning soldiers during the Christmas and New Year period.

The committee heading the AUSA's effort met earlier this year to improve on a program which last year earned the chapter national attention.

Present for the meeting were Dick Ford, co-chairman, along with Col. (ret.) Charles Thebaud, Ms Billie Smith and Maj. Bill Rader, representing Fort Benning and Dayton Preston, chapter vice president.

The "Operation Holiday" program is jointly sponsored by the chapter, Columbus merchants, businesses and churches for soldiers unable to go home during the holiday season.

This year's program begins Dec. 18 with a visit to the Columbus government center, plus a visit to one of the local television stations.

"Operation Appreciation", which normally marks the beginning of the festivities will be held on Saturday Dec. 20 at the First Baptist Church in Columbus. Other similar spiritual gatherings are also on the agenda for the installation bound troops during the rest of the season as well.

Tours of Tom's Food, the Confederate Cemetery at Andersonville, Swifts Textiles, Football games, Basketball games, other Radio and TV Stations as well as a visit to the Little White House are also planned for the soldiers.

The program will last until Jan. 2, when a trip to the Peach Bowl in Atlanta Stadium is set as the final note of the 15 days of Christmas.

Gen. RisCassi nominated for second star

The assistant commandant of the Infantry School, Brig. Gen. Robert RisCassi, has been nominated for promotion to the two-star rank of Major General.

Gen. RisCassi has been in his current job since May of this year when he succeeded Maj. Gen. Edward Trobaugh, who was named chief of the U.S. Army Military Assistance Group in Madrid, Spain.

The assistant commandant was promoted to Brigadier General in October of 1979 and has over 22 years of active commissioned service.

Air Force news

Maj. Thomas H. Lokey, local admissions counselor for the Air Force Academy, will host an orientation meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 21, at First Federal Savings and Loan Association's Bradley Park Office.

High school sophomores, juniors and seniors interested in attending the Academy should plan to attend; parents are also cordially invited.

"Commitment to Excellence," an outstanding film about Basic Cadet Training and other Academy programs, will be shown. Several cadets from Columbus will also be present to discuss Academy life and answer questions.

Students and parents desiring additional information should contact Maj. Lokey at his office, 322-5461, or at home, 327-9867.

Christmas basket program needs your support

Army Community Services (ACS) will coordinate the 1981 Christmas Basket Program this year.

This program is designed to provide traditional Christmas food for needy military families. It's voluntary and is dependent upon the goodwill of those who are willing and able to share.

Units desiring to contribute food to one or more needy families should contact ACS, informing them of the number of families they wish to sponsor. This information is needed by Dec. 14.

ACS must be given the names and addresses of families who should be recipients of this program. Any unit commander, chaplain or other responsible activity chief may provide names. This may be accomplished by a DF signed by the unit commander, chaplain or activity chief attesting to the need. DFs should be sent to ACS via sealed envelope. This information must be received in ACS by Dec. 16.

ACS will notify units of families they are to sponsor no later than Dec. 18. Units are responsible for delivery of food to families Dec. 23.

"TRULY, TRULY, I SAY TO YOU, UNLESS ONE IS BORN AGAIN, HE CANNOT SEE THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

Soldiers on TDY status to pay for all meals

WASHINGTON — Enlisted soldiers on temporary duty (TDY) are now required to pay food costs and surcharges for meals at government-controlled dining facilities.

Officials in the department of the Army's Troop Support Division say the change, which deals with per diem equity, was put into effect Nov. 1.

Because of the recently enacted military pay law for fiscal year 1982, enlisted personnel now retain the per diem portion of subsistence in addition to their normal basic allowance for subsistence (BAS) while in a TDY status. This will be the case even though meals are available in a military dining facility.

Accordingly, officials say, enlisted soldiers who consume food in a military dining facility while in a TDY status will be charged the food cost plus the per diem surcharge rate. Currently, the surcharge rate is $9.30 per ration per day.

Previously, enlisted soldiers forfeited their BAS entitlement while drawing subsistence per diem in a TDY status but were provided subsistence in kind for the period of TDY. (ARNews)

Post banks allowed to charge for cashing payroll checks

WASHINGTON — Soldiers and Army civilian employees who cash payroll checks at on-post banks may have to pay a check-cashing fee after Jan. 1, 1982, says Army Finance officials. A policy change by the office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) governing civilian banks operating on military installations will permit the banks to charge up to $1.00 for each treasury check cashed by non-account-holders.

The decision to charge a fee will be made by the banks but will be subject to negotiation between the bank and the local commander. However, the fee may not exceed the $1.00 limit established by OSD. If a bank chooses to charge a fee, the local commander may provide an alternative "free" check-cashing service (treasury payroll checks only) to both military and civilians through Military Finance and Accounting Offices.

Designed to permit the banks to recover the costs of processing treasury checks, the new policy will apply to all military installations in the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and U.S. Territories and Possessions. The only exceptions will be in overseas areas like Guam and Germany, where military banking service is provided by Department of Defense overseas military banking contracts. (ARNews)

ACS to give needy toys

Army Community Services (ACS) has announced the availability of toys for needy military families and will issue toys during the week of Dec. 21-25.

Commanders are encouraged to solicit information regarding families of their individual commands, who are in need of assistance for the Christmas season.

Information regarding the family in question should be provided to ACS prior to Dec. 16, outlining sex and ages of children.

As a matter of interest, sponsors of needy families should be interviewed by the unit Executive Officer or Commander and advised of the availability of toys for Christmas.

Information obtained to include the written documentation regarding these families should be handled on a closely-held basis. ACS will be handled on a closely-held basis. ACS will also conduct the issuance and control of correspondence on a closely-held basis.

The person to call at ACS is Mrs. Diane M. Quintal, ACS Volunteer Supervisor, or 2nd Lt. Vanetta M. Ratcliffe, Special Projects Officer, 545-1169/1233/5516.

The USAIC Safety Office is conducting a safety promotional campaign directed toward the recognition of Fort Benning personnel observed adhering to safe practices.

Examples of such acts are using seatbelts, wearing eye protection in hazardous locations, utilizing a guide while backing, etc.

These safety-conscious personnel will be awarded a gift in recognition of their safe performance. Be alert — be safe — you could BE A WINNER!

New lieutenant likes old bars

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"I don't know where my grandfather got them from, all I know is, they were given to him in 1938," said David M. Redden. "Fourteen-years-later they were passed on to my father and in 1978 my brother got them."

Redden's bars are pinned on by his father (r) and his brother.

Shortly before he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army National Guard, Redden talked of the history of two precious ornaments that were now his — a pair of 43-year-old second lieutenant's bars.

In a special swearing in ceremony held earlier the day of graduation, David was sworn in by his father

"After my father was promoted to first lieutenant my grandmother kept the bars in a box with some of my grandfathers other medals," said David. "When my brother was commissioned he got them and wore them to all his National Guard drills. I'm planning on doing the same thing when I get them," continued David with a smile.

Lt. Col. (Ret.) Thomas W. Redden. After graduation from the Officer Candidate Reserve Component Course 2-81, he had the 43-year-old bars pinned on by his father and brother.

He commented that his OCS training was based on a great deal of stress. They put us through as much stress as they possibly could, both mental and physical," said David. "I think the highlight of it all was when I was the student Company Commander. We had just come in from a 12 mile road march, everybody was tired but we all pulled through and really started working together. That really made me feel good."

The 22-year-old Howell, Tenn., native born at Martin Army Hospital, is slated to join the 279 Signal Corps in Huntsville, Ala. "When I get back I'm going to put in paperwork for Field Artillery," he said. "I think I'd like that a lot better than the Signal Corps." He also said in about eight months he's going to go active Army. After serving four years on active duty he'll decide if he'll make the Army a career.

Speeding neighbors

The Safety Office has recently received several inquiries asking, "What can be done to cut down the speeding in the housing areas."

Someone suggested that we put in speed bumps to slow the traffic; another said, "Let's put up more stop signs;" yet another wanted to stop thru traffic.

An analysis of the traffic citations given in the housing areas may come as a surprise to some, but not to all. Approximately 90 percent of all speeding tickets involve occupants of the housing areas where the citation is given.

CIVILIANS, TOO

Know how to stay safe before riding that bike

The holiday season is near, and many new motorcycles will appear under the Christmas tree.

In order to operate your motorcycle in cold weather, you must know how to survive.

The first thing to know is how to use your clothing to protect your body against the cold. The secret of your cold weather clothing is in the use of layers, not weight.

Dirty clothes are cold clothes. Dirt and grease clog the air spaces in clothing and reduce the insulation.

In cold weather it's better to be a little cool than run the risk of sweating. However, before you start to sweat, open one layer of clothing. If you are still too warm, open another layer. If you are still sweating, remove a layer of clothing.

There is good reason for your cold weather clothing to be loose fitting and worn in layers. Loose clothing allows your blood to circulate freely and that, in itself, helps to prevent frostbite. Remember — weight doesn't mean warmth, layers do.

You've got to keep your clothing dry from the outside as well as from the inside. Outside water resistant clothing such as a snowmobile suit will provide maximum protection from wind, cold, and rain.

The key to keeping warm while enjoying your motorcycle this winter is the word C-O-L-D.

Keep it — Clean

Avoid — Overheating

Wear it — Loose in layers

Keep it — Dry

Now we know the secret of survival in cold weather. Are we really safe? No! Not unless we use the following safety equipment:

• Helmet — Not only will the helmet keep your head warm, but will provide excellent protection against head injuries.

• Eye Protection — To ride safely, you must be able to see clearly. A second of blindness may be just long enough to set you up for an accident.

• Gloves — Leather gloves, preferably with cuffs to keep the cold wind from rushing up the rider's sleeves, will provide excellent hand protection. Most people instinctively throw out their hands when falling. Gloves will help prevent injuries.

• Boots — Common sense rules out riding in sandals, tennis shoes, or barefoot. Boots provide excellent protection for the ankles against fractures and burns.

• Reflective Tape — You must take extra care to make sure others see you. Bright colored clothing and reflective tape on helmet and clothing may help catch another driver's eye.

Observing the rules of the road and how to survive in critical situations may mean the difference between life or death. Let Post Safety show you the way. Join us at 9 a.m. tomorrow morning for our free Motorcycle Safety Foundation's Better Biking Program located at bldg. 4, classroom 33. The course will consist of three hours of formal classroom instruction followed by a three-hour road test.

Attendance is open to all military, civilian and family members of Fort Benning. Y'all come!

Boots, helmet, gloves and other gear might let away if his bike goes down.

Be considerate of your ears when you're around loud noises.

It's a proven fact that using seat belts saves lives.

Proper safety equipment on the job means less lost time from accidents. It also means the job will get done.

Have saw, will cut

By Bill Blakely
Safety Specialist

"Chestnuts roasting by the open fire." -----
Just the thought of a brisk blaze crackling in a fireplace gives us a feeling of warmth and security.

It's more than just memory, since most of us grew up in an age of central heat. Man's partnership with fire goes way back, and seems to be blended with our deepest emotions.

Now, however, we have another reason for turning to fire. Economy. Stoking that fireplace or stove helps us beat the ever rising cost of other heating methods.

A few people do it the easy way. Just write a check and let somebody else stack a big pile of split firewood in the backyard. Many of us, however, do the whole job ourselves.

Whether it's to save money, or just to enjoy a feeling of independence, we get a permit, break out our trusty chain saw and head for the forest. Unfortunately, all too many of us will harvest a load of pain and suffering.

More than 50,000 persons were treated in hospital emergency rooms last year for chain saw injuries. Probably even more went unrecorded. That handy little gadget, the chain saw, is the most dangerous tool most of us will ever use. It's such a fearsome little beast that the Motion Picture industry even starred it in a horror movie. But how quickly we forget, and then it's up to the doctors to try to repair the damage.

So, before you use your new saw, or even the one you've had for years, take a few minutes to review the rules. First and foremost, read the instruction booklet that came with the saw. Even if your saw is an old friend, go over the booklet again. Bad habits can sneak up on you. If you've been doing it right. The manufacturer has years of experience, and a real economic incentive, in safe chain saw operation. It's in the book, so study it closely.

Remember getting your trouser leg caught in your bicycle chain? The same thing can happen with a chain saw, but much worse. Don't wear loose, flapping clothing. This is no time for a long scarf, and certainly not a necktie. Do wear heavy duty gloves and sturdy, steeltoed shoes. Protect your eyes and ears with goggles, or better yet a face shield, and ear plugs or muffs. Having a chip of wood thrown into your eye can not only damage your vision, but can cause you to lose control of the saw. If you are felling trees, a hard hat is a must. Even when just cutting up felled logs, a good safety hat can save you some pain if your saw kicks back.

Kickback is where most of the trouble comes in. It occurs when that rapidly spinning chain hits a solid object (metal, cement, or other hard objects in or near the wood) and is stopped for just an instant.

Falls kill, paralyze

Check yourself before getting up

Suppose you've fallen down and you fell down more like a rock than a feather.

Do you smile, brush yourself off and get back up as soon as you can?

NO!

Before you move — test your hands and feet for feeling. If you have no feeling in one of these areas, you may have broken your neck or back.

A careless move by you or anyone else may paralyze you for life or cause your death. Relax, don't panic. It's too late to have prevented your fall. You must now make sure that you don't injure yourself any further.

You may only be stunned, and feeling may return

At that moment all the power the engine has been using to spin the chain is used to rotate the entire saw, with your hand as a pivot point. In many instances the direction of rotation is up and around into your face or shoulder. It happens in less than a second.

There are numerous things that cause or contribute to kickback. You must be aware of, and avoid, all of them. By very careful not to let the tip of the saw touch any object while the chain is moving. Have the saw running at full speed when you start to cut. Some saws come with a protective tip for the end of the saw which prevents kickback.

Keep the chain sharp and properly tensioned on the bar. Don't ever cut above shoulder height, and try to cut near waist level. Keep a firm, two handed grip on the saw, with fingers and thumb on opposite sides of the bar or grip. Be sure you have solid footing and are not overbalanced. Never cut with your head or shoulder in line with the saw, since kickbacks can occur despite all your precautions.

There are a lot of other safety measures involved with using your chain saw, most of which are in the instruction booklet.

Some of the most important are really common sense. Don't refuel a hot saw, and don't start a saw with gasoline spilled on it. Don't put a hot saw down on flammable grass or leaves. Trying to cut from an unstable surface, such as in a tree or on a ladder, is a real invitation to disaster.

Take frequent breaks, the vibration is more fatiguing than you might realize. When you are tired, you don't have the control over the saw that you need. Walking around with the saw engine running is like carrying a loaded gun with no safety. Shut it off when going from one cut to another.

Always have a firm surface to start the saw. Resting it on your knee, or holding it out in your hand, just isn't safe. It should go without saying that you don't touch the chain while it's moving. Bystanders and fellow workers must be kept a safe distance away, since a kickback or slip could injure them as well as you.

Perhaps the most important thing of all is to never cut alone. Always have a responsible person nearby who can get help if the worst happens.

There is a lot more to safe chain saw use than we have mentioned. Reading the instruction book is so important that we want to repeat it. Starting out with an experienced user is a good idea as well. You can get a lot of work and pleasure out of your saw, but you have to be very aware of its hazards.

The fire this winter is going to be real nice, and the wood is there for our harvesting. If we do it safely, it's going to be a fine winter. If we become careless, or overconfident, or don't take the time to learn about your saw, it will be a year of pain and sorrow. Do it safely.

Make sure your chain saw cuts only the wood and not you.

Two weeks before Christmas and . . .

By Anita Langford

USAIC Safety Office

Two weeks before Christmas and Tommy O'Dell
 Braved the traffic to the Mall with a story to tell
 He strode up to Santa — settled down on his knee
 Said "I've got a problem — please listen to me."
 That the people out there just keep getting harmed
 They're all real good people, but those crazy fools
 Just don't seem to remember the Post safety rule.
 And there is a list of some things they could use.

Sam is all shook, he was DUI on a journey
 He killed a pedestrian and wants an attorney.
 Tom had a wreck — he chose not to yield
 Wasn't wearing his seat belt and needs a windshield
 A new motorcycle for John, he still wears the scars
 One day in a hurry he tried to squeeze 'tween two cars.
 Sue needs some free time, she was racing her vehicle
 And now spends her evenings in a class called "Remedial"

A new bumper for Clyde who chose to decide
 He'd try backing his truck without a ground guide.

Ann needs a new hobby — she'll be jogging no more
 She finally discovered what road shoulders are for Jack looked like a deer and no needs aatoupee
 'Cause he didn't wear orange on a hunt yesterday
 The game got too physical so George needs a crutch
 He's learned not to play tackle when the sport is call touch
 Sally met with a car while out cycling one night
 Now she needs a new ten speed — one with a headlight
 Al took the guard off his saw while build a table
 Needs a glove with four fingers if such a thing is available.

Clara tried all alone to move a bookcase
 The load was too heavy — now she needs a back brace
 A new home for the Smiths who will finally learn
 Overloaded extension cords will eventually burn
 James was forgetful — left a toy on a stair

Now his papa has need of a first-class wheelchair.
 Some cabinet locks for a family named Tilden
 Who just learned the hard way about poisons and children
 Some safe cleaner for Ruda who had an unwise idea
 Nearly did herself in mixing bleach and ammonia.

Tommy squared up his shoulders, and paused for a breath
 Knew he had to do something 'fore there was a death
 "Santa these are our problems, if you'd give us a hand
 To prevent needless accidents it sure would be grand.
 Please help us Santa, you're bound to be heard
 To stop all these mishaps we must spread the word.
 Our folks just must learn to use common sense
 To think 'fore they act to prevent had consequence
 Have a grand Christmas Santa and never you fear
 We're going to do things a lot safer next year."

Tips when putting up the Christmas tree

Care in selecting decorations for Christmas is most important.

Christmas decorations are made of many materials under various brand names. Serious hazards result from the indiscriminate use of flammable decorations.

Decorations such as tinsel, streamers and cotton batting should be of flameproof or fire resistant material. These items should display labels from an approved testing laboratory such as Underwriters Laboratory.

Selection of an artificial Christmas tree should be based on safety as well as price and aesthetics. Artificial trees are normally made of plastic. Only the miniature Christmas lights are approved for these types of trees. Large lights are not recommended. Large size lights produce more heat which melts the plastic type trees and can result in their catching fire.

Never string lights on a metal tree; use an off the tree spotlight to avoid electrical shock. Inspect light cords for frayed cords or damaged sockets. Discard damaged light strings. Do not attempt to repair them.

Jury-rigged repairs increase the risk of an accident. Select the proper light for your decorations. Using indoor lights for outdoors, or outdoors for indoors, can cause a fire hazard. Purchase approved lights for the location they are to be used.

Many families use angel hair and/or spray snow on their Christmas trees. Never use glasswool (angel hair) in combination with spray on-snow; this combination can be highly combustible.

Natural decorations are traditionally preferred by many. However, they pose a very real threat of fire. Christmas trees and similar decorations require special care to prevent their drying out and becoming a blazing torch in your home. Follow the few simple suggestions.

- When purchasing a tree be sure it is fresh.
- Needles should not fall off when the trunk is struck against the ground, and limbs should not break when bent.

- Re-cut the trunk about an inch above the old cut and store the tree in a water container stand, and check water often.

- Position the tree away from the main traffic patterns in your home. Be sure the tree is secure to avoid tipping it over.

- Never place your tree near heaters or open flames.

- Remove and dispose of natural decorations before dryness or shedding needles become a fire hazard.

- Turn lights off when you leave home unattended and before sleeping.

Gaily decorated homes can set the scene for a fire. Be safe, and enjoy a happy holiday season.

No holidays scheduled for fires

With the advent of the Christmas and New Year holiday season, fire hazards are multiplied in many respects.

The traditional Christmas tree, decorations, the increased use of electrical appliances, decorative lighting and festive parties all contribute to the fire dangers of the season.

We do not want to put a damper on your holiday spirits, but we do want to remind you that "Fire never takes a holiday". It is unfortunately true that this year, just as in past years, thousands of happy holiday homes will be struck by tragic fires that could have been prevented with a little forethought.

If you are using a natural tree, leave it outside until just before the holiday to keep it fresh. Immediately prior to installing indoors, recut the butt end of the tree at a 45 degree angle. Brace the tree in a sturdy, well balanced container or stand. Fill the container with a sugar and water solution (one (1) cup of sugar to one (1) gallon of water). Replenish the solution daily.

Do not use flammable decorations on the tree. Use only Underwriters Laboratories approved electric tree lights. Make sure the light cords have good insulation and that they are free from splices.

Do not place the tree near a source of heat and make sure you do not block doors, exits and aisles.

Do not place the tree near a source of heat and make sure you do not block doors, exits and aisles.

Do dispose of the tree when the needles become dry and start falling off.

Do turn off Christmas lights when leaving and before retiring for the night. The heat build up from the lighted bulbs is tremendous and could cause a fire.

After you have had a party, check around all chairs and rugs for cigarettes that might have been dropped. Empty all ash trays in a container of water and then place the can outside for the night. Keep waste paper, decorations and wrapping from coming in contact with tree lights, candles and lighted center pieces.

Also think about children's gifts, are there any that could be hazardous if the children open or operate them before you get up Christmas Morning?

We, the Fort Benning Fire Department, wish you a happy holiday season but remember, "Fire Never Takes a Holiday".

● Community craft classes will begin Dec. 14 at the life center. Please call the Chaplains office at 545-3389 for further information. Chaplain Craft is the person to speak to.

Family life

● Beginning on Tuesday, Dec. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in Custer Terrace Chapel with an introductory session, there will be bi-weekly seminars on the important issues in family life. These sessions will be held the first and third Tuesdays of each month and are open to all participants.

A complete program of pastoral care, including counseling, is available. For more information call 544-3305 or 3179.

All Communities:

● We are still organizing the tours for the in-coming personnel. If you or your family members would like to learn about Fort Benning and its historic values, please come to the ACS building or sign up at the in-processing office. This is something that can help you and your family enjoy your stay at Fort Benning, Ga.

All Communities:

● Chaplain Craft invites you to participate in the services of the Lavoie Manor community in their Sunday services. Sunday School is at 10:00 a.m. and regular services are at 11:00. You are cordially invited.

● The McGraw Manor Community Life Center invites everyone to a symposium on family issues.

This will be the 1st and 3rd Tuesday of the month and it will start Dec. 1, 1981.

Bouton Hgts/ Davis Hill

● The Community Coordinator is asking for the residents of the community not to use the Roundhouse dumpster for their trash deposits. This is just for the community center garbage.

● Game night for the adults is held every Friday night from 9 p.m. until. There is a variety of card games and entertainment galore. Everyone is welcome.

● Exercise classes will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited.

McGraw Manor

● We are happy to announce that we now have a new adult activities chairperson. She is Robyn Fairclough. If you have any ideas or would care to volunteer for a future activity, contact her at 687-9779.

NOTICE

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT (IRA)

Effective January 2, 1982, as a member of TIC Federal Credit Union, Fort Benning, you can deposit up to $2,000 a year as an individual, $4,000 with a working spouse or, $2,250 with a non working spouse, and deduct it from your taxable income. Then, in addition to deducting these deposits you will not have to pay taxes on the dividends earned on the IRA until retirement; a time when you're likely to be lower tax bracket. If you were to deposit $2,000 each year, the chart below will give you some idea of the approximate benefits of opening an IRA at 12% annual rate.

Years to Retirement	Total Contribution	Tax-Deferred Earnings	Cash at Retirement
10	$20,000	$15,097	$35,097
15	$30,000	$44,560	$74,560
25	$50,000	$216,666	$266,666

Other rates and amounts will adjust these figures proportionately.

Marshal's Viewpoint

We are all familiar with the adage: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This is certainly true when applied to the problem of bicycle theft. If your bicycle is stolen and you have no record of a serial number or any identifying marks, the chances of recovery are slim.

This is a far reaching problem which involves our whole community. To begin with, any theft is an illegal act punishable by law. The fact that most bikes are stolen by juveniles does not change this law. We must impress upon our children by word and example a respect for the property of others.

Col. Earp

The Fort Benning Military Police will be conducting a post-wide drive during the Christmas season to reduce and, if possible, eliminate bicycle theft. However, we cannot do it by ourselves — we need your help. A concerted effort by each of you to register your family's bicycles with the Provost Marshal Office will help insure the success of this program.

Bicycle registration itself is a simple procedure. Just bring the serial number, color, and manufacturer's name of your bicycle to the registration office which is located in the trailer adjacent to Crane Hall, building 229. Bicycles can be registered between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. We also suggest that you keep a record of this information at home in case it's needed.

In addition, as a convenience to the military community, an engraving booth will be operated by the military police from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m., Dec. 17-24 in the Mall area of the Main Post Exchange. The Crime Prevention Section of the Provost Marshal Office will also visit each housing area of Fort Benning with tips on crime prevention as well as engravers for use by the Fort Benning community.

The Crime Prevention Section will visit the below listed areas at the designated times:

- Dec. 26 - Davis Hill 8 a.m. - 10 a.m.
Bouton Heights 10:10 a.m. - noon
- Dec. 29 - Lavoie 8 a.m. - 10 a.m.
Perkins Place 10:10 a.m. - noon
- Dec. 30 - Custer Terrace 8 a.m. - 10 a.m.
McGraw Manor 10:10 a.m. - noon

Take advantage of these opportunities. Assist the military police in making this holiday season a happy one.

Community involvement

As part of the installation-wide program to decrease crime and recover stolen property here on Fort Benning, a list of identifiable property will be published weekly in the BAYONET. Below are listed items that were stolen recently here. If you have any information on the following items, notify the Military Police immediately at 545-5222/5223.

New car registration program to begin

Effective Jan. 1, 1982, Fort Benning will initiate a new program which will require re-registration of ALL vehicles.

The new program will feature a new, smaller decal.

These decals will be displayed on the top center of the front windshield and lower left corner of the rear windshield. Vehicles with no rear windows or a louver-covered window will display the decal on the left side of the rear bumper.

Color coding of decals for officers (blue), enlisted (red), civilian (green), and commercial (black) vehicles will be the same as under the current system.

Another feature of the new program will be the requirement for the annual re-registration of vehicles during the month in which the state safety inspection is due. All vehicles registered here require a valid state safety inspection regardless of the state in which the vehicle is registered.

After Jan. 1, all vehicles currently registered with the Provost Marshal Office must be re-registered within five days of the date the state safety inspection is renewed. In addition to the new set of registration decals, each registrant will be issued a color-coded numeral to be affixed beside the registration decal on the rear window to indicate the month when re-registration (and state safety inspection) is to be accomplished each year. Under this system, all currently issued decals should be replaced over the first 12 months (through Dec. 31, 1982).

Vehicles being registered for the first time will be issued color-coded numerals for the month in which the current state safety inspection sticker expires. The numerals will then serve as a reminder for both state safety inspection and post re-registration.

Re-registration will be accomplished at the Provost Marshal Traffic Regulation Enforcement Office (located adjacent to the Installation Personnel Processing Center at Crain Hall). It will require presentation of evidence of satisfactory completion of a valid state safety and mechanical inspection and certification of possession of motor vehicle personal injury liability insurance ($10,000 per individual and $20,000 per accident), property liability insurance ($5,000) and no-fault insurance ($5,000).

This change will provide many benefits. Since proof of insurance and a safety inspection will be required for re-registration, we will be eliminating many unsafe or uninsured vehicles from the post.

With annual re-registration, the military police files will be "self-purging," and the replacement of all decals by Dec. 31, 1982 will help to identify those that have been left on vehicles which now belong to owners who have no legitimate reason to be on post.

'The Christmas Spirit' aired

By J. C. Hope
USAIC Public Affairs Office

This week WFBG-TV is bringing you five films to celebrate the Christmas season. Included in this lineup is "The Christmas Spirit", the story of a man who learns the spirit of brotherly love from a small child.

"A Time for Valor" tells the story and the meaning of Chanukah, history's first episode of man's struggle for religious freedom as it occurred in Judea 2100-years-ago. "Christmas in Hong Kong". A little Chinese refugee boy in Hong Kong learns the meaning of Christmas.

In our big picture series this week we feature "Song of the Soldier." Members of the U.S. Army band sing songs which have been identified with periods of crisis and conflict in our nation's history, from the Revolutionary War to Vietnam. "NATO." A salute

PX holiday hours

For the convenience of the patrons, the Main Store Mall will extend to the following hours of operation on the below listed dates, during the yuletide shopping season.

Dec. 15 7 p.m.
 Dec. 16 8 p.m.
 Dec. 17 7 p.m.
 Dec. 18 7 p.m.
 Dec. 24 5 p.m.
 Dec. 25 Closed

All other days will be regular scheduled hours.

Disaster in streets

At this time of year darkness comes early. There is also more traffic on the roads because of shopping for the Christmas holidays. There are also a lot of small children playing in the streets instead of on the playgrounds.

Traffic + darkness + children in the streets = disaster.

Children don't realize the danger. Only parents can keep their holidays safe and happy.

Keep the children where they belong, safe and well and off the streets.

Running and gunning

Doughboys win opener

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Using a run-and-gun offense, the Fort Benning Doughboys basketball team blasted the Athels of Christ Church 110-87 Saturday at Bryant Wells Field House.

The Doughboys, despite their seemingly easy win, could have fared better had they connected on more of their free throws. They only hit 38.7 percent on the day compared to Athels of Christ's 68 percent.

With both teams using running games, Benning managed to spurt out to an early 13-2 lead. The Doughboys pushed their lead to 26-13 with 11:38 on the clock. However, Athel's of Christ would not roll over and die drawing to within five at 39-34 with 3:15 remaining in the half.

Then, in just a matter of seconds, guard Bennie Shaw, who was high scorer for both teams with 42 points, scored three quick baskets to extend Benning's lead. The score at the half showed the Doughboys on top 53-37.

In the second half with the Doughboys sitting on a comfortable lead they fell into a 2-3 defense forcing Athels of Christ to shoot from long-range. With Benning leading 84-58 with 9:20 remaining, Athel's of Christ outscored the Doughboys 12-2 to cut the lead to 16 at 86-70.

That was as close as Athels of Christ could get. Fort Benning put its starters back in with 5:20 remaining and began stretching their lead once again. The Doughboys hit the century mark with 3:15 remaining in the game and scored 10 more to make the final score 110-87.

Scoring in double figures for the Doughboys were Bennie Shaw with 42 and Lewis with 30. For the Athels of Christ Ronnie Williams had 33 points and Ben Hicks 25.

Fort Benning's next game will be against Cascade Wines at Pop Austin Gym at 7:30 p.m. tonight. There is no admission charge. There is a tentatively scheduled game against the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer tomorrow at 3 p.m. at Bryant Wells Field House.

Christmas race gives faith to young and old

By Rick Kiernan
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Faith Christmas Race is aptly named. For the past three years more than 500 youngsters (and some oldsters) have "kept the faith," braved the cold, and left the starting line for a scenic tour of beautiful Fort Benning. The race is unique in many aspects. For starters, it is organized, planned and directed by the Physical Education Department of the Don C. Faith School as a means of supplementing extracurricular programs for the children. These include aerobic dancing instructor fees; bus transportation to local bowling alleys and swimming pools; and the purchase of equipment otherwise unfunded.

Secondly, the youngsters are the "primary" targets for the race organizers. The littlest ones have trained for the race as members of the Faith School Track Club. They meet twice a week during the school year and learn the principles of proper running and constructive training.

While nearby Columbus is one of the running capitol of the South, the Faith Race vies for turnout figures with a total of more than 500 each year. Proud parents share in the youngsters' accomplishments and sometimes join in the run themselves.

For this year's youngest runner (a three-year old) it was the first of many Faith races that are yet to come. The event makes a strong statement for a conscientious and concerned education program that goes beyond the classroom. It says a lot too for the Fort Benning Dependent School system as it recognizes the important value of a solid physical education department in the development of America's youth.

Gee Craft, the youngest runner, crosses the finish line.

Faith Christmas Race run on cold Saturday morning

By Don Rhodes

The sky was blue and the sun was out but the air was cold and the wind was colder as the 14 year old and under age group lined up to start their one-mile race Saturday morning in front of Faith School.

The first of the three event Faith Christmas Road Race was underway shortly after 9:30 a.m. and spectators barely had time to take a sip of coffee and move to the finish line before Jeremy Gause came streaking across to claim first place in 5 minutes and 37 seconds.

Sean Dacey (5:48), Charles Lawson (5:57), Christopher Howard (5:59), and Mike Dacey (6:00) completed the top five male finishers in the one-mile event.

The top five female finishers were Debbie Moore (6:43), Cassandra Hill (6:47), Deanna Harris (7:08), Barbie Metz (7:32), and Karen Fleming (7:32).

Winning times in the two mile event averaged just over five minutes.

John Stewart won first place with a time of 10:15. Robert Woodham (10:25), Terry Anderson (10:38), Paul Place (10:46), and Joel Reed (10:55) completed the top five male finishers.

The female top five were Sue Smith (11:52), Stacy Sawtelle (13:38), Brigitte Anderson (14:10), Susan Parker (14:18) and Lorna Dowlin (14:25).

In the five mile event, Bruce Skiles took first with a time of 25:21. Frank Kennedy was second in 26:40. Next was Guy Perrella in 26:57, Kenn Finlayson in 27:05 and rounding out the top five male competitors was George Cobb in 27:12.

Poor riding skills cause tragic accidents

Why are motorcycles accidents so deadly? The deciding factor may be the cyclist's poor riding skills, according to a recent University of Southern California study of 899 of these accidents.

According to the USC study, the typical motorcycle accident happens in a flash: riders have less than two seconds to make a quick turn, brake, or do both to avoid a sudden collision. Yet 32 percent of the riders involved in the accidents studied did nothing at all to evade the crash. Others made such frequent mistakes as overbraking at the rear wheel and underbraking at the front wheel. In only 17.1 percent of the accidents did the riders use both front and rear brakes.

The main reason for such poor evasive techniques, the study discovered, was because 92 percent of the cyclists lacked any formal or professional training. The best way to avoid such collisions or minimize their severity, is for cyclists to improve their riding skills through both formal training and frequent practice.

The USC study also offered this tip to cyclists who would like to improve their reaction time. In traffic experienced motorcyclists should ride with several fingers extended over the front brake level. In a high stress situation like the one just before a crash, these riders' natural reaction will be to brake. Inexperienced cyclists, on the other hand, typically grip the throttle more tightly in a panic situation. Ironically, the result is that they skid faster into the collision they sought to avoid.

The top five female racers were Kim Trupp (29:27), Tina Kroll (31:25), Connie Cullifer (33:01), Dawn Viveros (34:16), and Kathy Pabst (37:30).

Each of the top five male and female runners received a plaque for their efforts and the top three in each age category received a medal.

Gee Craft, 3 years old, Mark Sternberg, 71, Leigh Weatherman, 4, and Betty Cooper, 55, received awards for being the youngest and youngest at heart competitors in the road race.

Four-hundred-and-seventy-nine runners crossed the finish lines of the three events.

Bruce Skiles comes in in 25:21 to win the five-mile event.

Runners remember when John Roe goes by.

The first place plaque in the women's division goes to Kim Trupp.

Leigh Weatherman receives her award for being the youngest female runner.

Andy Erickson heads for the line.

Many trophies, plaques and medallions were given at the race, all special to each winner.

Sports briefs

Wigger goes for award

LTC Lones Wigger has been selected as a finalist for the James E. Sullivan Award, the highest award a U.S. amateur athlete can receive. Wigger is competing against nine other finalists from around the country.

Wigger was selected because of his recent marksmanship accomplishments with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit here on post. He is the first Sullivan nominee from the marksmanship sport.

Wigger set one new world record, tied two more and won four individual medals while helping the marksmanship unit win 26 gold medals at the Americas Shooting Championships last month.

Gymnastic Christmas show

The third annual OWC Gymnastic Christmas Show will be held on December 15 and 17 at 7 p.m. in the OWC Activity building. Both shows will include those youngsters between the ages of three and 14. Parents, family and friends are encouraged to attend. This year more than 80 boys and girls will perform on the vault, bars, beam and floor.

Follow Me golf tournament

A two-man best-ball tournament with full handicaps, honoring Freddie McKnight, is slated for the Follow Me golf course tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. with a shotgun start.

McKnight, 62, has been an employee at the golf course for 36 years and is now retiring. McKnight is married and has 10 children.

Entry fee is $15 per team or $7.50 per individual. Scoring will be by net ball of two players using full handicaps. Handicaps, according to golf pro George Cliff, must be certified at the club house or established by at least five rounds played in the Saturday morning dogfights. The tourney is limited to the first 60 two-man teams. Refreshments will follow play in the clubhouse.

Gymnastic meet held

Five youngsters from the OWC gymnastics team competed against the Gymnastics Plus team in Class IV routines for their first meet Saturday. Lisa Krueger placed second in each of four events and second overall for the day. Penny Lenz, Kelly O'Laughlin, Susan Fore and Tara Gray did exceptionally well against stiff competition.

Bringing back the GI bill?

Warfare Is Growing More Complex — The Army Must Have More Soldiers Who Can Deal With It

Each passing year sees the nature of warfare changing from what was once a simple matter of man against man to a contest between men paired with machines — with the machines growing steadily more complex. More than at any time in the two centuries it has existed, the U.S. Army needs a constant flow of very bright young men and women.

In 1975 almost a third of the Army's recruits were in the top three aptitude categories (I, II and IIIA). That number fell to 31.7 percent in 1976 and, by 1980, had bottomed out at 20.7 percent. The event that seems to have had the most to do with that decline was the end of the GI Bill education benefits on 31 December, 1976. Young people considering enlistment during 1976 were turned aside by a substantial upsurge in the number of education grants and loans made by the federal government with no accompanying obligation to serve the nation.

The Army is convinced that the promise of education is the most effective single weapon in its recruitment arsenal. With the consent of Congress, Army recruiters increased the total amount of education money a soldier can accumulate program and witnessed a climb in the number of high-quality recruits by almost 25 percent. When they doubled the education bonus for a six-year commitment to serve in the Army National Guard or Army Reserve the number of acceptances in the top three categories went up by an astounding 1,000 percent.

There are bills before both houses of Congress that would restore a GI Bill education incentive, but the Defense Department, speaking for the budget-conscious Reagan Administration, is opposing them primarily on the basis of cost. What the Administration, and others, have overlooked, however, is the fact that ongoing grant and loan programs operated by the Department of Education represent sufficient funds to operate a new GI Bill education plan. And by turning these funds in a new direction, the public investment would be repaid through service.

The evidence is undeniable. If our armed forces are to be prepared for the complexities of modern war, we must attract a larger share of college-bound recruits — and a good education incentive is our best recruiting tool.

Chaplain's Comments

By David Campbell
Chaplain, 43rd Engineer Battalion

The rain beat across the road, whipping furiously around the bus shelter. Inside, a small number of people huddled into overcoats and scarves.

Only a few days remained before Christmas, and shopping had still to be done. A tired-looking woman struggled up, clutching an overflowing shopping bag. A young child followed her. They tried unsuccessfully to squeeze into the shelter, out of the biting wind. The occupants near the entrance made no effort to move closer together, although there was a large gap farther along.

"I'm cold," whimpered the child. "Can't we go inside?"

"There's no room," replied the mother, wearily shifting her bag from one arm to the other.

The child looked up, her pinched face breaking into a smile, her high voice penetrating above the traffic.

"It's just like the Christmas story, isn't it, Mummy, when there was no room at the inn in Bethlehem for Mary and Joseph and baby Jesus?"

There was a moment of stunned silence, then an uneasy shuffling inside the shelter. Room was made for the mother and child.

Just one week ago today at Martin Army Community Hospital, my wife and I experienced the birth of our first-born, a boy. How fantastic. You can believe that we make plenty of room for him in our home and in our lives. I'm sure that you also make room in your life for those who are special to you. I wonder, though, do we make room for the One whose birth we now celebrate? A year from now, I will be excited about the birthday of my new son and will want to give him what I believe he wants. But, do I give the gift to Jesus on His birthday that He really wants? What is it that he desires from us? The Bible says that he wants our love, our life, and room for Him. Let's begin now to make more room for the Christ of Christmas. Merry Christmas!

Explosive items made safe by EOD soldiers

Story and photos by Dave Bristow

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Mommy I'm dead," cried a young Colorado Springs boy as he staggered into his parents home, his hands blown off and his body torn by grenade fragments. The 11-year-old died minutes later after he had pulled the pin on a grenade he thought was a toy....

The tragic reality of what can happen to the children of our country by those old war souvenirs or by the homemade explosives that they get their hands on is too often demonstrated.

A lot of people cry about these incidents, yet very few people realize that these war souvenirs can be rendered harmless. How? By Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) technicians.

Most people would cringe at the mere thought of doing what these people do, but for them, neutralizing hazardous items and eliminating their danger is a way of life; a way of preserving life.

However, the risk of one of these items detonating is always there, placing them in the same condition as the young boy-dead.

Sp5 Hinton S. Nelms monitors a simulated Nuclear projectile for contamination.

Sp4 James A. Poole and Sp4 Carin O'Brien check a chemical munition for leaking agent.

The soldiers must volunteer for duty as EOD technicians and all are told of the risks before the can be accepted for an EOD assignment.

Once accepted for the program, the soldier must complete EOD school. After completing the school, the soldier is assigned to an EOD unit where he'll become a member of a Two-man response team. The response team is made up of a team leader (E-6 or above) and an EOD technician. The two of them rely on school training and their on-the-job experience in handling of such hazardous items as dud grenades, rockets and artillery projectiles.

"If at all possible, we'll blow up the dud right where we find it, rather than take it elsewhere," explains Capt. Paul Nienaber, commander of the 89th Ordnance Detachment (EOD), here. "Why take the risk of disturbing a potentially hazardous item when you don't have to? Our render safe procedures are performed by a two-man team and they are also classified.

"If someone knows our procedures, he can change the internal workings of a fuzing system to defeat our procedures," Nienaber said.

EOD teams may also be called on to respond to an incident involving a homemade bomb. "It has been some time since there's been a homemade bomb found here, most of the time a suspicious item thought to be a bomb turns out to be a hoax or an innocent item," Nienaber commented. "The majority of the incidents the EOD teams respond to involve military ordnance ie. artillery projectiles, mortar rounds, mines grenades and rockets.

"We render the explosive items safe and either dispose of it on site or move it to a safe disposal area if possible," the detachment commander noted. "We have a demolition range on post for this purpose."

Why would someone want to become an EOD technician, knowing all the risks involved? SSgt. Gene Holland has been in the business for 10 years. He is the EOD supervisor for the detachment, which

Bikers learn ins and outs of safety

Story by Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

and James Ozley

"Survival is the name of the game," said the safety instructor.

This is what Pete Woodruff said to 24 soldiers at the free motorcycle safety class at bldg 4, last Saturday morning.

Woodruff and his assistant instructor Bob Veatch, both soldiers and both instructors with the National Motorcycle Safety Foundation, came to Fort Benning at the request of Mr. Fred Young to give motorcycle riders here an idea of safety and the need for it when it comes to riding.

"DDC stinks," said Woodruff at the beginning of the class. It is outdated as far as bike riding goes and the information that is put out is also a little beyond its time.

After his initial remarks, Woodruff began his class with a slide show and a verbal discussion on the aspects of the helmet. "Just because you wear one doesn't make you invincible," explained Woodruff.

After making this particular comment, he went on to explain the different safety inspections that each make of helmet goes through and that the helmets that make it without certain inspections aren't always safe.

Following two and one-half hours of classroom instruction, Bob and Pete moved the class outdoors for some on the bike experience. As a safety instructor, Pete showed the men the process he gives as required by the foundation before he issues the cards.

Taking into consideration that it had been raining most of the morning, he put the students through some of the obstacles that are part of his normal course.

The students warmed up their machines and proceeded to put the bikes through their paces by doing braking maneuvers, short and long curve maneuvers and countersteering maneuvers.

All in all, after it was all over some of the younger as well as some of the inexperienced bikers came away with the feeling that it was a good course and that they had definitely learned something from it.

At the end of the day the bikers climbed onto their machines and drove home, while Pete and Bob collected their equipment and headed back to Fort Rucker where they have been teaching the classes on their own accord for about the last six months.

Bikers learn some new things in the classroom and apply their new knowledge outside on the obstacle course.

Good security practices help cut down on crime

One of the most significant words in our daily lives is security. No matter what situation you find yourself in, security is vitally involved. If we routinely followed good security practices, many criminal acts would be foiled in the attempt.

In a larceny of private property, to cite a common crime, the first question that comes to mind is, "Was the property really secured?"

In seven out of 10 cases, the answer to this question would have to be, "No." Even in incidents where the property was secured, we should consider the extent of that security.

Example: Someone breaks into your home and removes a gold watch from the top of your dresser. The doors and windows of your house were all locked. But, could you not have stored your valuable jewelry in a safer, less conspicuous place?

Also, was the watch and/or other high value items marked with a serial number or your social security number? If so, did you remember to make a written record of it and keep it in another protected location for ready reference when needed.

There is no 100 percent foolproof method for securing your home or your valuables; however, the following tips can prove to be very helpful in reducing crimes around the home.

- Mark all property of value.
- Maintain a list of property serial numbers in a safe place.
- Insure doors and windows are secured prior to leaving home or retiring for the night.
- Check the perimeter of your home for security before the hours of darkness.
- Be a good observer.
- Report all unusual incidents to the Military Police at 545-5222.

The Military Police are here to help you. If you have a question or problem concerning the security of your home or property, call the Crime Prevention/Physical Security Office at 545-7115.

Won't you do your part to help make Fort Benning a safer place to live and work?

Crime does not pay

Capt. Harold N. Clark, 12th Company, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, was sentenced to dismissal from the service, total forfeiture of pay and allowances, and confinement at hard labor for one year for disobeying a lawful order, failure to repair, desertion, and conduct unbecoming an officer.

SSgt. Charlie J. Whitehead, Company B, 9th Battalion 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for two months and reduction to E-1 for operating a motor vehicle without a valid driver's license and failure to yield.

'Operation Holiday' begins today

By Griff Godwin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The second annual "Operation Holiday," sponsored by the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA), in cooperation with local merchants, businesses and churches, will kick-off today at 10 a.m. on the plaza level of the Columbus Government Center.

Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, Columbus Mayor Harry Jackson and Phenix City Mayor Jane Gullatt will preside at the official opening ceremony. The program, designed to provide activities for Fort Benning soldiers during the Christmas and New Year period, will include church services, entertainment, tours and attendance at sporting events.

On Dec. 20, 144 soldiers are expected to gather for spiritual fellowship and entertainment at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, St. Thomas Episcopal Church and Edgewood United Methodist Church. The same number will be attending Dec. 27 at Evangel Temple, Pinehurst Baptist and Wynnton Baptist Churches. Additional services for 90 soldiers will be held Dec. 23 at Edgewood Baptist Church.

Industrial tours include Tom's Foods, Dec. 22, 29; TRW, Dec. 29, 30; Swift Mills, Dec. 30, 31; and Dolly Madison, Dec. 23, 24. Forty-five soldiers will be touring.

A Columbus newspaper and three radio and TV stations are also slated for visits by the troops: WLTZ-TV, Dec. 18; WTVM-TV and WRBL-TV, Dec. 21; WRCG Radio, Dec. 22; WDAK/WEIZ-FM Radio, Dec. 23; and The Columbus Ledger and Enquirer Newspapers, Dec. 28. Forty-eight soldiers will visit the TV and radio stations and 90 will tour the papers.

On the list of historic sites are Andersonville Cemetery, Dec. 22, 23, 26 and 29, and The Little White House at Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 24, 25 and Jan. 2.

Not to be left out are the sports fans. For them there will be the Auburn-California State basketball game, Dec. 21; the Blue-Gray football game, Dec. 25; the Peachbowl football game, Dec. 31 and the Atlanta Hawks basketball game, Dec. 30 and Jan. 2.

Forty-eight soldiers have been invited to attend the Phenix City Rotary Club luncheon meeting Dec. 21.

Last year the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter AUSA earned national attention with the "Operation Holiday" program.

Making up this year's program committee are co-chairmen Dick Ford and Chuck Thebaud, and Col. Jack Harron, Maj. Bill Rader, John Gause, Carl Pickrin, Don Fabiani and Homer Chapman.

Exercise programs should start slow

By Sylvan Ruark

If you are over 40, and you're beginning an independent exercise program, there are some things that will place you in danger.

Chronic risk factors are heart, kidney or lung diseases, high blood pressure and known heart murmurs. Acute risk factors are mild colds, a bout of drinking, heat and humidity, vomiting, diarrhea and heavy smoking.

Warning signs

Warning signs are excessive shortness of breath, irregular heart beat, faintness, dizziness or heart pain. Heart pain is usually felt in the front of the chest on the left. It may also be felt in the neck, middle of the back, along the inside of the arms to the wrists or in the upper stomach area, heart pain usually comes with exercise and stops with rest.

Should any of these warning signs occur, you should stop exerting yourself and seek a medical evaluation.

Effective exercise

Exercise, to be effective, must be on a regular basis. Warm up exercises for 10 to 15 minutes should be done before physical training, and cool-down exercises should be done afterward.

An activity is to be started at a slow pace, then gradually increased to the desired rate over a period of several weeks. Alternating between heavy exercise one day and mild exercise the next day is recommended.

You cannot effectively lose weight by exercise alone. It is an important part of a weight loss or weight maintainance program, but to lose weight you must push yourself away from the table.

Losing weight

Even when attempting to lose weight, your meals must always include all the foods essential to good health, such as proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins. Crash dieting combined with diet pills or other medicine and exercise can be fatal.

Most of the weight lost during exercise is from the loss of water. A person frequently loses up to a quart of water an hour. This liquid comes directly from the blood stream. It's necessary to replace this water loss by drinking more fluids than are needed to satisfy thirst.

Heat problems

The body builds up heat when exercising. Drastic increases in the body's level of heat can present problems. Perspiring, in and of itself, doesn't cool itself. High humidity stops evaporation and it stops heat loss. Therefore, sweating becomes ineffective in ridding the body of excess heat if perspiration just drips off and does not evaporate.

Lack of evaporation also causes sauna suits to be ineffective and potentially dangerous.

Since many soldiers over 40 are in leadership positions, they frequently feel it is necessary to be better trained than their subordinates who are often younger.

Some feel group pressure because voluntary involvement in PT programs will be encouraged. Others will feel a strong sense of loyalty to their unit.

Despite group pressure, company loyalty and competition, exercise should be within one's own capability. The most dangerous thing to do is for a soldier who has been working at a desk to suddenly overexert himself.

(Col. Ruark is a preventive medicine consultant at U.S. Army Forces Command.)

is comprised of nine enlisted members and an officer.

"EOD's attraction to me is that it is one of the most elite fields in the Army and also one of the smallest and hardest fields to get into. They make sure you know what you're getting your self into when you apply," Holland said. "We are all like family here and I like that.

"As for the dangers involved in EOD duties, if you stay up on the latest in training you know what you're doing, you gain confidence in your ability and the job is not that dangerous," he said. "To me the job is always exciting and rewarding. Every time you go out it's different- never boring.

"When we get a call we don't know till we get there just exactly what we have," explained Holland. "It also takes a special person to be an EOD wife, due to the 24-hour on-call status and numerous TDY trips required of the sponsor."

"The 89th supports 53 counties(48 in Georgia and 5 in Alabama)," said Nienaber. "When a call comes in from the civilian community requesting support, police authorities know to call Fort Benning and the 89th.

"We will check it out and assume responsibility," the detachment commander explained. "If it's ordnance, it belongs to the Department of Defense and it must come with us.

"We will be the ones to remove it from the community or dispose of it," he commented. "The police departments do not have the trained personnel or equipment as we do to dispose of ordnance."

Of major concern to the detachment is the safety of children when they find explosive items. Children don't realize what they have, and many of these items turn out to be old war souvenirs that daddy or big brother might have brought home with him.

It is seen many times in newspapers and on television, child hurt, killed or maimed by explosive device found in the home. A four-year-old girl was killed in Great Falls, Mont. when she removed a mortar shell from a box which was in her home and dropped it on the floor. Police investigation disclosed that the shell had been in the home for many years and was thought to be empty.

Small children aren't the only ones that get hurt either. Another clipping from another paper-- In Westmont, Pa. a small bomb caused a 16-year-old to lose his left hand. The youth had found the bomb in the basement of his home, police reported that the bomb was a war trophy that was brought back after WWII.

Part of what the EOD detachment technicians do is go into the schools and teach the children not to pick up suspicious items that could hurt them. The program teaches them what military ordnance looks like and what to do if they discover one.

Capt. Nienaber is also quick to point out another job his technicians are tasked with. "We provide bomb disposal support to the Secret Service. We are the ones who search for possible explosive devices that might be used against a very important person they are protecting.

"Last month we sent four people to Miami in support of the Secret Service for the protection of Vice-President Bush while he was there," commented the EOD commander.

"There is a world wide need for EOD specialists(E-4 and below)," Nienaber says. "There are supposed to be around 800 of us and there are only about 600.

"The only way you can get in is through in service recruitment. One more of our missions is to recruit," said Nienaber. "Soldiers interested must be E-4 or below and have a GM score above 90. You must be able to get a security clearance and you must volunteer to perform EOD duties.

"Soldiers can't be on orders for overseas nor be in receipt of a relistment or enlistment bonus," he said. "The soldier must be accepted by an EOD officer. The EOD specialist does receive hazardous duty pay."

SSgt. Gene Holland and Sp5 Hinton S. Nelms approach a suspected car bomb.

Sp4 James A. Poole displays the portable x-ray unit. Just one of many specialized items of EOD equipment.

Sp5 Hinton S. Nelms and Sp5 Glen W. Gage monitor a simulated nuclear projectile for contamination.

Army undergoing reorganization

By Sp5 Phil Tegmeier
Public Affairs Office, U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

WASHINGTON — Unless you've been hiding under a rock or are new to the Army, you've probably heard talk that the Army is undergoing a major reorganization.

Well it's true. Since 1978, Army Training and Doctrine Command Combat Development staffers have been looking at ways to develop the most combat-effective organizations into which new and advanced equipment, operational concepts and human resources can be integrated.

Known as the "Army 86" studies, the effort calls for divisions, corps and echelon-above-corps organizations to be taken apart, looked at and redesigned. "Division 86" study results envision a transformation of armored and mechanized divisions (the so-called "heavy" divisions).

One of the ways those units are being upgraded is by the introduction of the Cavalry Brigade, Air Attack (CBAA).

In the CBAA concept, all a division's assets are brought under the control of a single commander. Instead of a three-brigade maneuver force, the division commander now will have four basic organizations that he can call on: three ground and one air.

Also to be reorganized are the light infantry divisions. Designed to be rapidly deployable, these divisions can be called into action around the world. They, too, will have a CBAA giving them a powerful answer to an armored threat.

One of the Army's light divisions is the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash. The first CBAA has been organized there. It will begin testing in early 1982.

The CBAA's for the light and heavy divisions will be roughly the same. The light division CBAA has more lift capability for moving troops' supplies around the battlefield.

As part of the overall "Army 86" concepts, the corps commander, too, will have an aviation unit under his command. The corps aviation brigade gives the corps commander a highly mobile and responsive combat multiplier.

The unit will be organized along the lines of the CBAA. It will have more attack helicopters than its divisional counterpart, and also will have medium-lift helicopters.

The corps commander will be able to use the corps aviation brigade to meet the threat as it arises on the battlefield. Threat forces in Europe, for example, are heavily oriented toward using armored thrusts to break through NATO's forward defense. The corps' response, using Army Aviation, would be swift and deadly.

Undergoing separate studies are the Airborne and Air Assault divisions. Those units have historically been called on to bring the battle to the enemy. They will have their own role in the Army of the future, according to Army planners.

By looking at new ways to use aviation, the Army is striving to field a more potent force. The CBAA concept is but one way of meeting that Army 86 goal of integrating new weapons and tactics into the Army. (ARNews)

VA Q & A

Q -- I understand that there has been a change in the Veterans Administration burial allowance benefit. Please provide an explanation of the current allowance.

A -- A burial allowance was previously available to all wartime veterans. The new regulations provide an allowance of $300 payable toward the burial of only those veterans in receipt of Veterans Administration pension or disability compensation at the time of death or for those who die in VA medical facilities.

Q -- It is possible for me to pay my Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan before it becomes due?

A -- Yes. A VA guaranteed loan may be partially or fully paid at any time without penalty.

Q -- Are my Veterans Administration benefits subject to taxation?

A -- No. Under federal law, all benefits administered by the VA are exempt from taxation.

Q -- I have started school and I need a loan to cover living expenses until my Veterans Administration benefits are received. How do I apply?

A -- The VA does not have a program of personal loans. However, you should contact your nearest VA benefits counselor who may be able to refer you to a state or local agency for help.

New car registration program to begin

Effective Jan. 1, 1982, Fort Benning will initiate a new program which will require re-registration of ALL vehicles.

The new program will feature a new, smaller decal.

These decals will be displayed on the top center of the front windshield and lower left corner of the rear windshield. Vehicles with no rear windows or a louver-covered window will display the decal on the left side of the rear bumper.

Color coding of decals for officers (blue), enlisted (red), civilian (green) and commercial (black) vehicles will be the same as under the current system.

Another feature of the new program will be the requirement for the annual re-registration of vehicles during the month in which the state safety inspection is due. All vehicles registered here require a valid state safety inspection regardless of the state in which the vehicle is registered.

After Jan. 1, all vehicles currently registered with the Provost Marshal Office must be re-registered within five days of the date the state safety inspection is renewed. In addition to the new set of registration decals, each registrant will be issued a color-coded numeral to be affixed beside the registration decal on the rear window to indicate the month when re-registration (and state safety inspection) is to be accomplished each year. Under this system, all currently issued decals should be replaced over the first 12 months (through Dec. 31, 1982).

Vehicles being registered for the first time will be issued color-coded numerals for the month in which the current state safety inspection sticker expires. The numerals will then serve as a reminder for both state safety inspection and post re-registration.

Re-registration will be accomplished at the Provost Marshal Traffic Regulation Enforcement Office (located adjacent to the Installation Personnel Processing Center at Crain Hall). It will require presentation of evidence of satisfactory completion of a valid state safety and mechanical inspection and certification of possession of motor vehicle personal injury liability insurance ($10,000 per individual and $20,000 per accident), property liability insurance ($5,000) and no-fault insurance ($5,000).

This change will provide many benefits. Since proof of insurance and a safety inspection will be required for re-registration, we will be eliminating many unsafe or uninsured vehicles from the post.

With annual re-registration, the military police files will be "self-purging," and the replacement of all decals by Dec. 31, 1982 will help to identify those that have been left on vehicles which now belong to owners who have no legitimate reason to be on post.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The weary eyed, hungry group of Infantry soldiers stood in the continuously growing line impatiently waiting to be served their meal.

Meanwhile behind the counter, PFC Mary Lee, patiently smiled and served.

Lee, like many other cooks, is one who loves her job.

She was given The Support Cadre of the Cycle

Mary Lee

Award on Nov. 18, by Sgt. Maj. Tildon E. Robinson. Capt. Steven Harnois, her company commander, complimented her when she went out to a recent field exercise and told her how much of an outstanding job she did. Lee, is assigned to Company A, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, and originally hails from Syracuse, New York. Her reaction upon receiving the award "I didn't think that I had a chance to win the award," she said "The award will also help me in the future for promotion purposes."

"My schedule is a rough one. If I'm not in the mess hall I'm out in the field serving food to hundreds of men," she said. "Back in the mess hall I would be working on pastries one day and meats the next. My schedule is on a rotating basis.

"My last comment of advice to new cooks," she said. "For the new comers in the service try to get as much out of it as you can and if you decide to make the Army a career make the best out of it."

PFC Jeanette East another cook was also awarded The Support Cadre of the Cycle. She is assigned to 3rd Battalion, 1st Infantry Brigade. A native of Pensicola, Fla., East, like Lee also enjoys her job, but she says "It can be very hectic at times. I put in a lot of work hours and my spare time is spent playing the flute, knitting and crocheting."

The award was presented by Sgt. Maj. Tildon E. Robinson of 1st Infantry Training Brigade also at the graduation for the Infantry Soldiers, Nov. 18. East is also being nominated for "The Best Chef of the Quarter." "I'm very happy to receive the award and would like to thank every who helped," she said.

"When I'm in the field I get up at 3 a.m. and by 5:30 chow is ready to be served, she said. The soldiers enjoy eating out in the field. Sometimes they get to eat twice. "I enjoy making Macaroni and Cheese for the troops," she said. She would like to cook her way at times but regulations state that cooks have to go by special Army recipe cards. "My final words? You have to enjoy what you are doing or otherwise you won't be happy."

2nd Lieutenants

Story and photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Sitting in the center of his platoon perimeter 2nd Lt. Caffery was keeping regular radio contact with his company commander. They were in a very intense situation because at any moment they were going to be attacked by Armor and ground troops.

Things were peaceful until the silence was suddenly broken by a burst of machine gun fire. The enemy was attacking his platoon on their right flank. Tanks began to attack his front and left flank. When his position was about to be overrun Lt. Caffery assembled his troops for withdrawal.

After withdrawing to the rear Lt. Caffery came under the direction of the platoon leader. Now it was his chance to lead during the simulated combat.

During a five-day field exercise, 2nd Lieutenants of the 23rd Company, 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry, were given their chance at being a leader.

IOBC is a 14-week course taught at Fort Benning to all newly commissioned second lieutenants that received the Infantry Branch. Here they are taught how to be Infantry platoon leaders. SFC Jose Torres, senior trainer of the 23rd Company, said, "They have a lot of tasks they have to go through here. They must pass all tasks before they can graduate."

"We teach them all they need to know about being Infantry officers," continued Torres. "They are taught about such things as the different Infantry weapons, land navigation, leadership and air mobile operations."

"Some of the instruction they receive is called Peer Instruction. Many of the students are Officer Candidate School graduates. These lieutenants already have some prior knowledge of Infantry tactics," Torres said. "They will teach such things as land mine warfare, light anti-armor weapons systems, nuclear biological warfare and some retraining subjects that were taught by the school's instructors."

"The school has a very low dropout rate," explained Torres. "If a student cannot pass a task he is retested. They are given two chances to pass any task they have trouble with. If they fail the two school-given chances they are sent before a board to determine whether they will be retested again or relieved from military service."

Throughout the day the lieutenants were conducting delay and withdrawal exercises. They were under constant attack by a tank platoon from A Troop 15 Cavalry and an Infantry platoon from the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

All through this phase of training the lieutenants were alternating their job position. Some would change from rifleman to machine gunner, others from automatic-rifleman to rifleman, but the biggest challenge went to those who got the chance to lead the whole platoon. When asked about their training 2nd Lt. Paul Estavillo of Los Angeles, Calif. said, "It's just like any other field problem to me. The course is graded on a 'go-no go' system. It's no problem to pass, but a person really doesn't know if he did bad or good. Overall it was a good course, and I liked it."

2nd Lt. Mark W. Harris of Columbus, Ga. said, "My platoon had most of the OCS graduates in it, so we had a lot more experience than the other platoons."

"Basically we knew what we were doing. We are out here to get a lot of practice in," continued Harris, "not to make perfect out of this, but to learn what could happen in a real combat situation."

"We're here to learn what mistakes we could make, how hard it is to keep control of our men if something like this was really going on," Harris stated.

"A lot of the guys were glad to be out in the field, because it was a break away from the classroom," he said. "Some of these guys will be going on a chopper for the first time today, too."

After making their final withdrawal and a long march through the woods the lieutenants were airlifted out of the combat area by three helicopters from the 121st Aviation Co. When they reached their landing zone they spent the rest of the daylight hours planning for patrols they were going to be conducting for night training.

Radiologist finds field exciting challenge

USAIC Public Affairs Office

After only three years as Chief of Radiology at Martin Army Hospital, Dr. Vicente Almario, Jr. is leaving for possible bigger or better things.

Dr. Almario, 34, who attended Santo Tomas University in the Philippines, will be practicing in the future at the Ohio Valley Medical Center in Wheeling, W. Va. The medical center is an affiliate of West Virginia University.

While here at Fort Benning, Dr. Almario, under his position in radiology, supervised the x-ray department and handled all lab work. "This field is exciting and challenging," says Dr. Almario. "I'm really going to miss Fort Benning."

Dr. Almario says a problem the radiology department has had in the past was a lack of personnel and some outdated equipment. However, the whole department is preparing to undergo renovation and bring in more personnel. "In the past we've had to send many patients downtown for treatments, but soon we'll be able to handle them right here."

One area the department is delving into is ultrasound. This is using sound waves. At Martin Army Hospital, ultrasound is used to tell the age, size and abnormalities of a pregnant woman's unborn child. It is also used in thyroid and gallbladder studies.

Among the equipment that the hospital hopes to receive for radiology is a nuclear medicine machine. The machine is used to detect cancer agents in the body. "What happens is we inject radioactive materials in the patient. Then a camera is put in front of the patient and we can more or less see in him."

Dr. Almario, a Columbus resident with a wife and two children, enjoys playing golf, reading books and working around the house. Replacing Dr. Almario will be Dr. Teofredo Aranas.

Slots open for volunteer divers

WASHINGTON -- Volunteers are urgently needed for diving assignments at Fort Belvoir and Eustis, VA., and Pohang, Korea, according to U.S. Army Corps of Engineer officials. If you're interested and meet the qualifications, the corps will send you to Panama City, Fla. for 12 weeks of deep-sea diving instruction. You'll also receive instruction in scuba and underwater cutting and welding. During your diving career, you'll also have the chance to attend the first class diving course in Panama City and the basic underwater construction technician course at Port Hueneme, Calif. In order to qualify, you must --

- Be under age 30;
- Be in pay grades E-2 to E-4;
- Have a minimum of 21 months service remaining upon graduation;
- Score 250 points or higher on the basic combat physical proficiency test;
- Have a GM score at least 100 and a GT score of at least 110.
- Pass the Navy swim test (one-half mile in 8 minutes, 30 seconds);
- Enclose a completed type B medical exam and meet medical fitness standards within one year before the course starting date;

• Make an indoctrination dive in the Mark V diving rig at an Army or Navy dive unit (a waiver may be requested in CONUS if no facilities are available).

Volunteers should contact their Personnel Activity Center (PAC) and fill out a DA Form 4187, requesting the second class diver course No. A-433-0022. (ARNews)

NOTICE

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT (IRA)

Effective January 2, 1982, as a member of TIC Federal Credit Union, Fort Benning, you can deposit up to $2,000 a year as an individual, $4,000 with a working spouse or, $2,250 with a non working spouse, and deduct it from your taxable income. The addition to deducting these deposits you will not have to pay taxes on the dividends earned on the IRA until retirement; a time when you're likely to be lower tax bracket. If you were to deposit $2,000 each year, the chart below will give you some idea of the approximate benefits of opening an IRA at 12% annual rate.

Years to Retirement	Total Contribution	Tax-Deferred Earnings	Cash at Retirement
10	$20,000	$5,097	$35,097
15	$30,000	$44,560	$74,560
25	$50,000	$216,666	$266,666

Other rates and amounts will adjust these figures proportionately. Check with the credit union and get:

- * Tax Deferred Earnings
- * Tax Deductible Deposits
- * High Annual Rate
- * Insured by NCUA, An Agency of US Government.

Vets Administration update

More than a million and a quarter veterans Administration pensioners are receiving reminders to report any changes in their number or status of their dependents. Also, pensioners must report any increase in their annual income by January 1, 1982.

• • •

Recent legislation now authorizes the Veterans Administration to provide certain health care services to any Vietnam era veteran who, while on duty in Vietnam, may have been exposed to dioxin, or to a toxic substance in a herbicide or defoliant used for military purposes.

• • •

Former servicemen and women should be aware of Veterans Administration burial benefits. This knowledge can often spare the family of a deceased veterans anxiety and financial hardship. All VA Regional Offices and National Cemeteries have the details.

• • •

The Veterans Administration is reminding veterans and their dependents that lost legal documents (birth or marriage certificates) should not prevent them from applying for VA benefits. VA now accepts certified statements from applicants in place of lost documents.

• • •

The Veterans Administration is trying to locate 57,000 former prisoners of war who are potentially eligible for important new medical benefits. POWs are being urged to contact the nearest VA Regional Office for all the details.

W2 Forms

WASHINGTON — The 1981 Internal Revenue Service Forms W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement) for active duty military and civilian personnel will be issued by the end of January 1982, say officials of the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center (USAFAC). Most reservists can expect the forms in February, USAFAC officials add.

Issuing W-2 forms in late January allows late 1981 taxable payments to be reflected on 1981 W-2 forms, thereby reducing the number of incorrect W-2 forms, say officials.

All W-2 forms for military personnel are issued by the center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Department of the Army civilians also can expect their W-2 forms by the end of January 1982 from their local Finance and Accounting Offices.

Officials advise that local Finance and Accounting Offices cannot issue W-2 forms to individuals wishing to file early income tax returns. (ARNews)

THE MERRILL LYNCH TAX DEFENSE — MAKING TAX DOLLARS WORK FOR YOUR RETIREMENT.

Effective January 1, 1982, anyone who has earned income will be eligible for his or her own Individual Retirement Account (IRA); even if you are already covered by another retirement plan.

You may set aside $2,000 each year and, if you are self-employed, you may also be able to set aside $15,000 in a Keogh Plan, for a total of $17,000 tax deferred each year.

That's a tremendous tax break. And a tremendous opportunity to build a substantial nest egg.

For example, if you begin your retirement planning at age 35, and the $2,000 you put into an IRA grows at an annual average rate of 12%, it becomes $400,000 at 65. The $15,000 you set aside in Keogh or Simplified Employee Pension Plan (SEP) becomes $3,000,000 in the same period. (These are hypothetical rates and amounts. Merrill Lynch believes that 12% is a reasonable growth rate, but, of course, no assurance can be given that this rate will be achieved. You may make less or more than the accumulation shown, depending on the investments you select.)

Don't wait until January 1st. These increases in tax deferrals start next year. But now is the time to make plans to capitalize on them.

If you already have an IRA, Keogh or SEP, let Merrill Lynch show you how you might improve it, right now. If you won't be eligible until January 1st, talk to us today so you can take full advantage of these new benefits as soon as they are available. And especially, if you are currently eligible but do not have an IRA, Keogh or SEP, we urge you to get in touch with us immediately so you can capitalize on the opportunity to save tax dollars this year.

A crucial question: which kind of IRA, Keogh or SEP Account should you open?

All IRA, Keogh and SEP Accounts are not alike. There are many variations, some quite limited in their investment options. Merrill Lynch opens up virtually the entire range of investment opportunities to your tax-deferred money.

They enable you to tailor a plan that best suits your investment needs. You can even select a mix. And you can change your investments anytime your goals change or new opportunities arise. Choose from:

Growth stocks • Speculative stocks • High-yield stocks • Blue chip stocks • Corporate bonds • Convertible bonds • Discount bonds • Lower grade bonds • Covered call options • Mutual funds • Government securities • Money market funds • Real estate limited partnerships • Corporate income funds • Government agencies • Treasury bills • Certificates of deposit • Passbook savings accounts • Annuities • And more.

This unique flexibility is part of the Merrill Lynch Tax Defense — your all-out offense against the high cost of retirement. Take advantage of it today. Mail the coupon or call for complete information.

MERRILL LYNCH CAN SHOW YOU HOW THE NEW TAX LAW MAKES IT POSSIBLE TO ACCUMULATE $400,000—$3,000,000—OR MORE, IN YOUR IRA OR KEOGH PLAN, AND SAVE ON TAXES, TOO.

Mail to: Merrill Lynch, P. O. Box 2507, 24 Twelfth St., Columbus, GA, 31902

Fatigues in town are unauthorized

USAIC Policy on the wear of these duty uniforms is published for information and compliance.

"Duty uniforms other than Army greens and tans may be worn off-post by personnel enroute to and from duty.

Convenience shopping stops are authorized, e.g., grocery stores, service stations, automobile repair to include warranty maintenance, and laundry/dry cleaning establishments.

These duty uniforms may also be worn to purchase at so called "Fast Food" eating establishments where food is picked up for consumption elsewhere, and at drive-in restaurants, so long as personnel remain in the vehicle. Under no conditions will motor fatigues or coveralls issued solely for motor pool use, and field uniforms worn with camouflage stick, or LBE, be worn off-post, except while enroute to and from duty.

Duty uniforms, other than Army greens and tans will not be worn off-post in places such as shopping centers and malls, theaters, bars, lounges, pool halls, billiard parlors, restaurants and eating establishments having dining rooms, municipal auditoriums, baseball parks and football stadiums."

Vets learn of benefits

DALTON — More than 2500 persons showed up at the Dalton Recreation Center Tuesday to take advantage of opportunities offered in a day-long program of information and service pertaining to benefits for veterans and their families.

The one-day event, often referred to as a "Supermarket of Veterans Benefits," was conducted by the Georgia Department of Veterans Service in cooperation with the Veterans Administration and some 25 state, federal and local agencies each of which is involved, in some respect, with veterans' affairs.

In a joint statement, Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler and Atlanta VA Regional Office Director Thomas R. Whire said, "We are pleased that so many veterans and their dependents came to us today for assistance. Many of these people will be receiving benefits for the first time; and some of them didn't even know they were eligible."

"It is unique", said Wheeler, "that we can assemble so many government agencies in one location at the same time and also file claims right on the spot." Some 1400 claims were handled Tuesday.

"The results of the one-day program could be beneficial to this area," Wheeler said, "for in a few weeks these people will begin receiving their benefits, and it is an established fact that money derived from such benefits generally flows directly into a community, thereby enhancing its economic growth."

This year marked the seventeenth time that the "Supermarket" has been held and it was the first time for Dalton. Previous one-day, one-stop sessions have been conducted in other Georgia cities including Columbus, Savannah, Albany, Macon, Augusta, Rome, Gainesville, Waycross and Atlanta.

Several other states have successfully adopted the program which was originated by the Georgia Department of Veterans Service in 1966.

Counting hazards

SP5 Gene Washington, assigned to the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, is one of the first to enter the Safety Office's contest to identify hazards. The display, in Bldg. 4, was set up by the post safety office to remind people of some of the more common hazards that can be found around the house during the Christmas season. Anyone can enter the contest by counting the number of hazards in the display, filling out a form and dropping it in the box. Those who find the correct number of hazards will be given a safety award. The contest will end Dec. 24 when the display is removed. (Photo by James Ozley)

Madrigal Dinner

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — A special treat for children and adults alike, a festive musical dinner in the tradition of medieval England is planned at Callaway Gardens.

The annual Madrigal Dinner/Concert, Monday, at 6:30 p.m., is a poetical musical feast modeled after similar celebrations in the 15th and 16th centuries, when family and friends took turns hosting the event in their castles and homes.

After the dinner, buses provide transportation to the Callaway Gardens Greenhouse Complex where guides will walk visitors through colorful poinsettia displays.

Reservations for the Madrigal Dinner/Concert are required, and can be made by calling Callaway Gardens, Pine Mountain, Ga. 31822, (404) 663-2281, ext. 222, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

National Bird Count

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Jan. 1 will mark the 27th year Callaway Gardens will serve as an official site for the National Audubon Society's Christmas Bird Count, giving New Year's Day a special meaning for bird lovers of the area.

Sponsored by the National Audubon Society, the Christmas Bird Count is held annually during a two-week period in December and January.

Callaway Gardens is one of over 1300 locations in the United States, Canada, Central America and the West Indies participating in the count. Bird watchers in the local area expect to record and identify some 85 bird species during the day.

For bird watching enthusiasts, the count itself is the biggest event of the year. For some, days and weeks of planning strategy culminate on this single day, when they attempt to amass the largest possible list of birds within a designated 15-mile radius.

The Callaway Gardens count lasts from dawn until dusk on New Year's Day and is coordinated by the Education Department. Interested persons are invited to write the Education Department, Callaway Gardens, Pine Mountain, Ga. 31822 or call (404) 663-2281, ext. 293.

First of kind coffee at ITG

By Sheila L. DuBois
Infantry Training Group

The Harmony Church Recreation Center was the site last Tuesday of the first Infantry Training Group officers wives and NCO wives coffee. The occasion was hosted for the NCO wives by the Group's officers wives. Guest of honor was Anne Parrish, wife of post Command Sergeant Major Harvey Parrish.

The Holiday atmosphere was the theme of this informal affair. The coffee provided the ladies an opportunity to meet and mingle with other ladies of the Group that they seldom see.

Jewel Jordon, wife of SFC Melvin Jordon, commented, "I enjoyed meeting the other ladies on a one-to-one basis." She also commented on how impressed she was with the setup which consisted of such traditional holiday delights as fruit cakes, homemade cookies, fudge, bread pudding and a specially decorated snowman cake.

Connie Johnson, wife of SFC James Johnson, said she thought that this type of social affair would help make the relationships between officers and NCOs much more cohesive.

Robin Rhemann, wife of Sgt. Ralph Rhemann; Nehwameda Washington, wife of SFC William Washington; and Connie Kuehl, wife of Major Steven Kuehl, all said that the coffee was a "good idea" and that more should be held in the future.

Anne Parrish commented as the coffee drew to a close that a tremendous effort had been put into the coffee.

"It's nice to see people respond so positively," she said.

Support for the coffee was provided by the Harmony Church Recreation Center.

Attending the coffee are (l to r) Brenda Lynem, Connie Johnson, Sheila DuBois, Connie Kuehl, Gloria Hughs and Jewel Jordon.

NCOs learn re-up business

Lt. Col. Kelly G. Weems presents a certificate of graduation to Sgt. James Van Hooser, U.S. Army Communications Command. (Photo by Bill Walton)

Last Friday 155 reenlistment NCOs graduated from a week long course on the Army reenlistment program taught here by the mobile training team from the US Army Reenlistment NCO School.

The NCOs, some of whom are full time reenlistment NCOs and some of whom have the job as an additional duty, were able to re-familiarize themselves with the Army reenlistment program.

They studied reenlistment options such as overseas areas and service schools, bars to reenlistment, the overweight program, the bonus extension re-training program, and the selective reenlistment bonus program.

The graduation certificates were presented to the NCOs by Lt. Col. Kelly G. Weems, post Adjutant General.

The mobile training team is from the US Army Reenlistment NCO School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Special pay for extensions overseas

Service members in some specialties experience more frequent overseas assignments than the overall Army average. This shorter turn around time (TAT) in Conus between overseas assignments has an adverse affect on both retention and readiness. Shorter TAT can lead to low morale, which frequently results in lower reenlistment, migration to other specialties, or early retirement. Unit readiness is also affected because of the personnel turbulence caused by frequent rotation of personnel.

Qualified service members can extend their period of duty overseas, thereby providing a longer TAT. Those who extend may receive special pay and rest and recuperative absence.

An enlisted member of the Army is entitled to special pay during the period of extension at a rate of $50 per month if he/she:

- Is entitled to base pay.
- Has a specialty that is designated by the Secretary of the Army for purposes of this program.
- Has completed a tour of duty as defined in AR 614-30 at a location outside the 48 contiguous states and the District of Columbia that is designated by the Secretary of the Army for purposes of this program.

- Executes an agreement of extend that tour for a period of not less than one year.

An enlisted member meeting the qualifications of above may, in lieu of receiving special pay, elect to receive one of the following benefits:

- A period of rest and recuperative absence for not more than 30 days; or
- A period of rest and recuperative absence for not more than 15 days; and round trip transportation at government expense from the location of the extended tour of duty to the nearest port in the 48 contiguous states and return.

Traffic accidents greatest threat

What is the greatest threat of your life? Firearms? No! Disease? No! Drowning? No! It is the traffic accident.

You are far more likely to become a casualty of a traffic accident than of the combined perils of disease, firearms or drowning.

The good driver and the professional soldier have much in common. Each must be cool and bold in the face of peril. Each must make plans and modify the plans with instant decisions, upon which his life and the mission depend. Each must know when to take cover.

Good soldiering and good driving can be successful when risks are minimized. Lack of knowledge may lead to costly mistakes.

Most people drive vehicles and most drive safely, because they know and heed the basic rules of driving. Some, however, learn the hard way in traffic accidents.

Because of poor driving by some persons, the motor vehicle is regarded as one of the most dangerous of man's creations. In 1980, 52,600 Americans died in traffic accidents. In addition to these deaths, two million Americans were permanently disabled or injured.

About one in every three vehicles was involved in some sort of traffic accident, and there are more than 164 million vehicles in this country.

According to the National Safety Council, alcohol is a factor in at least 50 percent of all fatal automobile accidents. Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death among persons under the age of 35.

Closer to home, last year, in Fiscal Year 81, eight Fort Benning soldiers lost their lives in traffic accidents. Common to most traffic accidents, alcohol and/or speed was a factor.

Statistics are never interesting and only become meaningful when we are directly involved in an accident or we know someone very close who was.

Let someone become a victim of a drunken driver and you will hear the cry, "charge him with murder," yet those same people will get behind the wheel of their automobile and drive after having been drinking.

If you live on post and have one too many drinks at a party during the Christmas-New Year season, you don't have to drive. Simply contact the Military Police at 545-2222/2223, and they will see that you get home safely. This service is free and your safety and the safety of other motorists are their only concern.

Don't be a willing participant in causing or contributing to an accident. Watch out for the other driver and drive defensively. The defensive driver is not concerned with who is right. Instead he or she is eternally alert for the unsafe acts of others, and is constantly prepared for evasive actions against situations which otherwise could result in an accident situation, regardless of cause.

If you are planning a trip north over the holidays plan carefully and be prepared for winter driving. Snow and ice are treacherous even to the most experienced driver. Snow chains may be in order - don't leave without them.

Be a partner to safe driving over the holiday season and next year. Be courteous, be careful and we in the Fort Benning Community wish you Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. We expect to see you in 82.

Carbon monoxide poison can be silent killer

Talk of poor ventilation brings to mind thoughts of a stuffy closet or a spare room or attic that has been sealed up tightly for a long period of time. We think of the stale air and of how difficult it is to breathe. When we hear about someone being poisoned, a lot of us think of snake bite, insecticides, or spoiled food.

There's a poison, however, that is far more common, more dangerous than the ones we think of, and its effectiveness is closely concerned with ventilation. It's carbon monoxide, and if you own a car, it travels with you wherever you drive. CO is a gas you cannot see, taste, or smell. It won't tickle your throat or make your eyes smart, or in any other way make its presence known.

CO is produced by the incomplete burning of a solid, liquid, or gaseous fuel. When a person is exposed to the gas in a place which does not have enough ventilation, poisoning occurs, sometimes very quickly.

Why CO Is Dangerous

Carbon monoxide is dangerous because it sickens and kills by cutting off the oxygen supply from the body's tissues. Ordinarily the oxygen you breathe is carried from your lungs by the red cells of your blood to all parts of your body. This combination with the red cells is very important, for just breathing oxygen into one's lungs is not enough to maintain life. The oxygen must combine with the blood's red cells and circulate through the blood stream and be carried to all parts of the body. If it does not, your life will be threatened.

CO can combine with red cells 200 times easier than oxygen. When oxygen and sizable amounts of CO are breathed in together, the CO displaces the oxygen. Then you become ill and if oxygen is completely cut off, you may even die.

Carbon monoxide, the silent killer, causes more deaths than any other poison. It can kill within minutes depending upon the concentration in the air. If a victim remains unconscious in the CO poisoned air for some time, the after-effects may be lasting, resulting in permanent brain damage. Even a mild dose of CO poisoning may dull the reflexes of a mechanic, making it risky for him to work with machines or even simple handtools.

Symptoms

The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are: tightness across the forehead, followed or accompanied by throbbing in the temples, headache, weariness, weakness, dizziness, nausea, loss of muscular control and increased pulse and respiration. If the concentration of carbon monoxide in the air is great enough, the victim may fall unconscious without any warning signals.

If you're driving at night and the darkness seems blacker than usual, the glare of oncoming lights brighter than usual, carbon monoxide might well be the cause.

Air Circulation vs Carbon Monoxide

Although there is little indication that a major problem of carbon monoxide contamination exists in modern automobiles, it is necessary to realize that the danger is latent and real. No matter how small the danger may be, it is essential that all motorists be encouraged to reduce the risk even further.

There are three important factors that lead to the build-up of carbon monoxide in a vehicle: 1) that amount of CO produced by the engine; 2) the manner of ventilating and amount of fresh air brought into the car, and 3) the leakage of CO into the passenger compartment.

Carbon monoxide content of the engine exhaust varies with the efficiency of the engine and the load under which the engine is operating. An out-of-tune engine and a stuck choke can produce higher CO concentrations than normally expected.

Ventilation of a car to provide a continuous flow of fresh air is generally inadequate when only front vent windows are opened slightly. If side windows are opened a little, along with the vent windows, there is less hazard of a CO build-up. This is also true when the vents at the front of the car or the fresh air inlets for the heater are kept open. The reason that slightly open vent windows do not provide adequate air circulation is that the car's movement tends to draw out the air from the passenger compartment and may draw in exhaust fumes through any point at which leakage may occur.

Leakage into the passenger compartment of a car can be a major hazard if it occurs where exhaust fumes are concentrated. This often occurs at rust holes in the floor pan or at holes in the bulkhead in the front seat area under the dashboard. In combination with a defective exhaust system, body leakage is probably a very hazardous condition that should be taken care of quickly.

There are two other circumstances in which CO is brought into a car that are not normally considered hazardous by the motoring public. These are driving with a trunk lid open and driving with the back window of a station wagon open. Tests have shown that the exhaust fumes of a vehicle tend to follow the vehicle as if glued to it. The exhaust cloud can easily rise to the level of the rear window of a station wagon and enter it or the open trunk. In both cases, CO can be drawn into the passenger compartment with ease if vent windows cause the drawing or aspirating action mentioned previously.

How To Prevent a CO Accident

- Check automobile exhaust systems regularly, especially for blown-out gaskets, leaking pipe connections and holes in mufflers and tailpipes.
- Keep the engine tuned up properly to keep CO content of exhaust low.
- Never drive with all the windows closed. Open vent windows far enough to scoop in fresh air or keep them closed so air is not drawn out of the car.
- Shut off the engine when sitting in a parked car for more than a few minutes
- If you find yourself sleepy while driving, the cause may be CO. Stop at once, get out of the car and breathe fresh air. Then drive with the windows more than usual.

- If it is not possible to close your trunk lid or keep the rear window of a station wagon closed, make sure you bring in lots of fresh air through the front of the car.

- Be sure garage doors are open when an automobile motor is running inside. Do not allow the engine to run more than a few minutes, even when the garage door is open, unless positive ventilation is provided.

First Aid for CO Poisoning

Knowing what to do and acting quickly can save a life. This is especially true in acute cases of CO poisoning where time is of the utmost importance. These are the steps to take:

- Remove the victim to fresh air immediately. If he is not breathing, or is breathing irregularly, begin artificial respiration AT ONCE!
- Call, or have someone else CALL A DOCTOR immediately. Also send for an ambulance service or rescue squad, fire or police department for special equipment to help revive the victim. However, do not wait for this help to arrive; start your first aid without delay.
- Continue artificial respiration when the emergency equipment arrives, providing both kinds of treatment at the same time until natural breathing returns, unless otherwise directed by a physician. Continue artificial respiration for two hours or more, if natural breathing is not restored.
- Keep the victim warm with blankets or other covering.
- Continue application of oxygen as provided through the emergency equipment, for 15 to 30 minutes after natural breathing returns. This will assist in quickly ridding the blood of carbon monoxide.
- After the victim begins to breathe again, keep him warm and quiet to stave off any danger of shock.
- Avoid use of stimulants such as coffee or tea, since these may strain the heart.
- Aid victim's circulation by rubbing the arms and legs.
- Urge the patient to rest and recover slowly to avoid any strain on the heart.

Tips on how to save energy

Skyrocketing fuel costs and the fear of shortages in the future have convinced many Americans that now is the time to use energy more efficiently and wisely.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) is interested in a variety of products related to energy saving, including space heaters, coal and wood burning heating stoves, vent dampers and other energy conserving devices, thermal insulation, and temperature reduction of water heaters. All these are potential energy savers, but consumers should recognize and avoid the hazards that may accompany the use of these products. Gasoline storage containers are other consumer products related to energy use that pose safety hazards.

CPSC suggests you consult building code officials in your area for local safety requirements and recommendations before installing space heaters, heating stoves, and insulation.

Space Heaters

Electric or fuel-fired space heaters provide an alternative or additional method for heating a room.

- To prevent fires, don't place a heater near drapes, furniture, or other flammable materials or near where people walk frequently.

- Teach children to keep away from space heaters.

Coal and Wood-Burning Heating Stoves

Improperly installed wood and coal-burning stoves can be dangerous. As a result, CPSC is developing a rule to require instructions on safe installation and maintenance practices for these stoves.

Stoves and exhaust flues can become extremely hot and start fires on nearby walls, floors and furnishings. Therefore, it is important to have a 3-foot clearance on all sides of the stove, unless specifically stated otherwise in instructions with stoves listed with a nationally recognized laboratory. Fireproofing materials, such as fireproof stoveboard or a brick platform (with mortar between the bricks to prevent cinders from falling through), must be properly installed underneath stoves and, in some cases, on nearby walls. Adequate clearances must be maintained after installation.

Some of the same safety rules apply to stoves as to space heaters, such as: 1) keeping them away from drapes and other flammable materials, or where people walk; 2) providing sufficient ventilation in the room; 3) checking flues for blockage; 4) not storing or using flammable liquids in the same room or to start a fire; and 5) teaching children to keep away from hot surfaces. See the previous section on space heaters for more details.

In addition, remember the following when selecting, installing, and using your stove:

- For your safety, the stove should only be installed by a qualified person.

- Carefully read the manufacturer's instructions.

- Have your heating stove and chimney inspected once a year to ensure that all linings and chimneys are intact and that the stove is properly adjusted and clean. Keep the chimneys free of soot and blockage.

For Electric Space Heaters:

- Never use a portable electric heater in the bathroom. To prevent an electrical shock, don't touch an electric heater if you are wet.

Gas, Oil, and Kerosene Space Heaters:

The Commission will soon be considering a safety standard for unvented gas space heaters requiring the use of an oxygen depletion sensor (ODS) to detect reduced levels of oxygen in the living area where it is located and to shut off the heater before hazardous levels of carbon monoxide accumulate.

- New space heaters have devices, such as safety shut-off valves, to stop the flow of gas, and automatic ignition to make lighting easier and safer.

- Check with your state and local building officials for rules on the installation and ventilation of heaters.

- To prevent possible carbon monoxide poisoning, keep a window or door in the room slightly open to provide fresh air when using the heater. Even vented heaters need ventilation. Insulation, caulking and other measures taken to make homes more air-tight may decrease the air flow and cause more carbon monoxide and other combustion gases to build up in the home.

- Check the flu to be sure it is not stopped up.
- To avoid gas explosions, don't turn on the gas until a match is lit.

- Never use flammable liquids (such as gasoline) in the same room with a space heater.

Water Heaters

Lowering the thermostat setting on water heaters can serve the triple function of saving energy, lowering costs, and preventing serious tap water scald injuries.

Most water heaters in use are set at 140° F and higher, which is hot enough to cause serious scalding burns, especially to children under the age of 5 and persons over the age of 65 who cannot escape quickly enough.

The Commission is cooperating with voluntary standards organizations in setting back temperatures. The American National Standards Institute is revising its voluntary standard for gas water heaters so that manufacturers will pre-set the thermostats at a safer temperature at the factory; gas water heaters will carry a warning label and instructions to caution consumers about scalds. Underwriters Laboratories has directed manufacturers to pre-set new electric water heaters at 140° F and requires a similar label and instructions. CPSC is encouraging voluntary efforts to reduce temperatures even further.

Consumers should set back their water heaters to the lowest temperature which will still serve household hot water needs. This will reduce fuel bills while helping to prevent serious scalding accidents within the home.

Doughboys give Lakers 134-122 whipping

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys basketball team upped their record to 3-0 last weekend with two easy victories over Cascade Wines and the Ledger-Enquirer respectively.

In the first game last Friday night, the Doughboys dumped Cascade Wines 134-122 in a high scoring affair. Scoring in double figures for the Doughboys were Shaw with 34, Malowe with 27, Taylor with 22, Lewis with 21 and Moody with 14.

For cascade Wines, Wilson had 24, Lawrence 24, Tree 20, Hill 16, Mitchell 14 and Mitchell with 13.

In the second game on Saturday, the Doughboys bombed the Ledger-Enquirer 90-70. Fort Benning players scored in double figures. Shaw had 32, Lewis 16, Taylor 14 and Malowe had 10. For the Ledger-Enquirer, Jones had 13, Miles 12, Moore 12, Buford 11 and Blair 10.

The Doughboys participated in a tournament at Pacelli High School yesterday. As of press time the results were not in. Look for more coverage in next week's BAYONET sports section.

The Fort Benning Doughgirls basketball team opened their season last weekend with 34-17 a win over the Albert McGrueder All-Stars. The game was cut short due to a following game.

For Benning, Veronica Kearsse had eight points,

Vivian Gleason had four (she also collected 13 rebounds), Marva Henderson had two, Jennie Gleason two, Vivian Williams six, Geneva Waler had four and Moffett had six points.

For MGrueder, Marther Shumtert scored 2 points, Linda Phillips 2, Jackie McKenzie 2, Gayle Carter 7, and Joyce Donaldson 4.

The score at halftime saw the Doughgirls with 8-7 edge. In the second half, Benning went to a man-to-man full court press to take command of the game. Fort Benning had 17 fouls and McGrueder had 18.

The doughgirls will resume action following the Christmas break.

'Swim For Your Life'

Swimming program to help military

Swimming for your life. No, it's not an actual situation, it's a program for swimmers at the Bryant Welss Field House indoor pool as well as the other various pools on post.

The "Swim For Your Life Program" is an extension of the "Swim and Stay Fit" program sponsored by the American Red Cross. "Swim For Your Life" is used to encourage military members and their dependents to swim regularly until 50 or more miles are reached. It is hoped that when finished, the swimmer will continue to strive for more advanced goals.

The objective of the program is to help the physical and well-being of the individual by providing an opportunity to participate in a meaningful and enjoyable activity over a long period of time.

The values of swimming are numerous. Swimming can be beneficial to those with athletic ability as well as those with lesser ability. It is not reserved for the select few, but rather, everyone physically capable. Swimming can improve circulation and control of the body movements, promote deeper breathing strengthening abdominal muscles, develop or maintain organic strength and vigor, increase movement within the joints and release tension.

Program's three phases

Preparatory phase- The preparatory phase should be initiated by swimmers who have recently led an inactive life. Individuals who do not swim or exercise regularly should start in this phase. It is important for swimmers to condition themselves carefully before undertaking a long distance swim. For the initial three miles, the only requirement is that the swimmer complete each 440 yards (quarter-mile) of swimming during a one day period. The 440 yard swim does not need to be continuous; the swimmer may stop and rest as often as necessary. For a person who does not swim during the winter months, this procedure may be followed at the beginning of each new summer season in order that the swimmer will have the opportunity to condition himself. Record keeping will not commence until the participant is able to complete the 440 yards of swimming in one day.

Sustaining phase- This phase is for conditioned swimmers who can swim a minimum of 440 yards (quarter mile) without stopping. Any stroke or combination of strokes may be used. Each 440 yard swim is counted as one segment. Two hundred segments are required to complete the 50 mile swim. This phase should be conducted on a regular schedule. It is recommended that a goal of one three miles be achieved one week.

Advanced phase- This phase is for swimmers who have reached the 50 mile goal. During this phase the swimmer must swim a minimum of 880 yard (one-half-mile) without stopping in each segment. The goal is to swim a total of 500 miles.

Where and when to swim

All active duty and retired military and their dependents are invited to participate in the program. As for a place to swim, during the winter season (Sept. to May.), Briant Wells indoor pool will be reserved for "Swim For Your Life" swimming from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., Monday thru Friday.

During the summer season (June-Aug.), outdoor pools are available at Main Post, Kelly Hill, South Harmony Church, Sand Hill and Custer Terrace areas. Hours for the "Swim For Your Life" program will be announced upon opening of the outdoor pools for the summer swimming season in the Benning Bulletin and the BAYONET.

How to enter

All participants must officially enter the "Swim For Your Life" program to be eligible for awards.

Complete the entry form (obtain at the Sports office) and send it to the Sports & Athletic Training Branch, Building 394 (Doughboy Stadium) ATTN: "Swim For Your Life."

A record of mileage will be recored on an individual wallet-size progress cards and kept by the Recreation Services swimming pool. The cards are available at the participating swimming posts on post. It is thr responsibility of each participant to keep a record of his or her own progress using the honor system.

Certificates and awards

Mileage certificates and patches will be awarded to the swimmer upon completion of the 10-500 miles of swimming in the program.

Participants should warm up before swimming. Warm up excercises that require bending, twisting and streaching will increase the benefits derived from the program and reduce bodily stress.

- Learn to swim first.
- Never swim alone.
- Do not swim when tired.
- Swim only in supervised areas.

The "Swim For Your Life" program is designed to improve physical fitness and general health. Because of its strenuous nature, we suggest swimmers consult their physicians before beginning the program. All persons 30 years of age or older are strongly encouraged not to begin the program before a medical examination is given. Things that should be checked are blood pressure, weight, chest x-ray and electrocardiograph (EKG).

It is important that the "Swim For Your Life" program is not a marathon, nor anendurance contest. It is for healthful, regular swimming.

YA basketball starting

Youth Activities basketball will begin their seasons with opening day ceremonies at the Youth Acitivities gym (Bldg. 1055) on Jan. 9 from 10 a.m. until 11 a.m. For more information call 545-3070/3913.

Practice hunting safety

- Never shoot at objects indistinctly seen through trees or brushes. They might be human.
- Do not fire at game when there is a house, barn or road behind it.
- Do not carry a loaded gun in a motor vehicle. Keep it unloaded until you start hunting.
- Keep the safety lock on at all times except just before firing.
- Inspect your gun before going hunting. Make sure barrels are clear and it is mechanically safe.
- Never lay a loaded gun down in a boat or on the ground. Another person or even a dog may cause it to discharge.
- Never lift a loaded gun by the barrel or pull it through a fence. Carry it over with you or hand it to a companion on the other side.

- Don't leave your gun or shells near a fire, fireplace, or stove.
- If you are drinking, stay out of the woods. Alcohol, even in small amounts, may impair your judgment and cause a tragic accident.
- Familiarize yourself with the boundaries and landmarks of the area in which you hunt so you don't get lost. Carry a small compass if possible.

Briant Wells gym—area's best

One of the area's best. That is the Briant Wells Field House's claim to fame these days.

According to the field house supervisor Hazel Henry, Briant Well's indoor pool, basketball courts, sauna and weightroom, not to mention the many racquetball courts, is the reason for their popularity. "Not only is Briant Wells the best in the area, it was the first gymnasium built on post," said Henry. The gym was built right after World War II.

The field house features a full-size basketball court with four side goals. The weightroom is filled with tons and tons of objects for the muscle-bound fan or the newbie just getting into the sport.

If racquetball is your bag, then there are six courts at Briant Wells, two in the field house and four in the annex located just off Ingersoll Street behind the TIC Credit Union.

One of the more commonly used portions of the gym is the indoor pool.

The pool is used for more than just the occasional swimmer. Training also plays a big part in the pool. The pool is used for drown proofing classes, special forces and Ranger swim tests, the Barracuda swim team and the "Swim For Your Life" program. "Perhaps the biggest thing going right now," says pool supervisor George Dorer, "are the Barracudas." After all, they are the post team.

One of the additional programs that the gym is promoting now is the women's organized intramurals program. The program is featuring softball, which has just been completed, volleyball and basketball, which begins Jan. 9 Other year-round sports are in the works.

Another new program being implemented into the field house's schedule is the new hours for women. The women now have their own (women only!) times set aside for their use of the gym. The hours are from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays.

Racquetball, a growing sport around the world, is played by many people on post. There are six courts at Briant Wells.

Swimming at Briant Wells always draws a number of participants. There are many swimming programs at the gym.

Captain develops wash system

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Often, when the Army procures a new piece of equipment, the users discover or invent procedures to offset shortcomings in the utilization or maintenance of it. Such is the case with the UH60A Black Hawk helicopter, assigned to the 121st Aviation Company (CS), 34th Medical Battalion.

After receiving the helicopters and working with them for a short time, the 121st maintenance section found a problem area. For proper operation, after the aircraft operates in a high dust or salt water environment or when an engine fails a minimum power check. However, the Army has not yet procured a system to use in conjunction with the internal wash provisions on the engine, which is practical in a field environment.

Captain James L. Brooke, 121st Service Platoon leader, has developed a prototype wash system that can fill the need for such a field system in the very near future, at very little cost to the Army. His system uses the basic tank group from a back-pack M2AI-7 flamethrower, later used in the M3 riot control dispenser. It consists of two agent tanks, a pressure tank and the combining hardware. The units are presently stored in depots and are available for issue.

In practice, the system is simple to use. After the aircraft mechanic mixes the cleaning agent, B&B 3100 solvent and water at a 1-4 ratio in the agent tanks, he attaches a hose from the system to internal wash connection on the helicopter engine. While a pilot motors the engine at maximum starter speed, for one minute, the mechanic dispenses the cleaning formula into the engine by use of the system's pressure tank. After a 20 to 30 minute wait to allow the cleaning formula to take effect, the procedure is repeated using only water while motoring the engine for two minutes.

To change the flamethrower unit, originally costing $710.00, to an engine wash unit, requires only some locally produced hardware, costing about $30.00. The nitrogen, for servicing the pressure tank from 1,700 to 2,000 pounds per square inch, is available in all Black Hawk units since it is used for servicing the tires, struts, rotor blades and auxillary power units accumulator on the aircraft. There are no special tools required for operation of the wash units.

The normal engine washing unit, as listed in the technical manual, requires a water hose for operation. This means that in the field, a pump must be used which cuts down on the unit's portability.

Brooke's connection with the flamethrowers goes back to his childhood days when his father, Retired Colonel Stafford R. Brooke Jr., was a chemical battalion commander and young Brooke played with the tanks. Remembering how easy the system was to operate, and believing it was exactly what he needed, he contacted the item manager and procured two units for experimentation.

The system isn't limited to washing engines, says Brooke. Other possible uses are decontamination and deicing of aircraft. He will get a chance to try the latter when the 121st conducts a field training exercise in Fort McCoy, Wis. next February.

The General Electric Corporation has developed its own prototype field wash system and it is being tested at Fort Bragg, N.C., Brooke says if approved and procured, it is expected to cost the Army more than his system.

Brooke presented his prototype wash system, along with a video tape of its operation, at the Integrated Logistics Systems Management Conference at St. Louis, Mo. on Dec. 1.

Seasons greetings!

Nineteen hundred years ago the Prince of Peace came with the message, "Peace on Earth, good will toward men." Each Christmas season, that message brings good will into our homes and joy into our social relations. It fills our hearts with cheer, and we feel the warm glow of human love. Prejudice and discrimination give way to sympathy and tolerance. Hard habits of everyday routine are set aside for the moment, and we express what is deep down in our soul.

Such is the miracle and mystery of Christmas!

At this Holiday Season, Mrs. Wetzel and I extend our best wishes for a joyous Christmas and a Happy New Year to all members of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning and their families.

Happy Hanukkah

On the occasion of the festival of Hanukkah, I extend greetings to all Jewish personnel of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning.

Hanukkah is a festival that can be appreciated by all Americans, and indeed all freedom-loving men and women everywhere. It commemorates an occasion when men fought, not for material possessions or for land, but for an ideal, for human liberty, for freedom to worship God in their own way.

This ideal is a foundation stone of the United States of America. As the story of this Day of Dedication has inspired you, may it also inspire all Americans in the cause of freedom.

Chaplain's Comments

Christmas Day — an exciting time

by Dave Campbell, Chaplain
43rd Engr Bn

In the Bible, Colossians 3: 12-15, we are told;

"As God's own chosen, then, as consecrate and beloved, be clothed with compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, and good temper — forbear and forgive each other in any case of complaint; as Christ forgave you, so must you forgive. And above all you must be loving, for love is the link of the perfect life. Also, let the peace of Christ be supreme within your hearts — that is why you have been called as members of the one Body."

Christmas Day! What an exciting time for Christians as we celebrate Emmanuel — God with us. This holy day commemorates the redemptive love of God coming as a person to live among us.

But Christmas is also a time for remembering that God's reaching out to us, begun in Jesus Christ, continues even today through the Holy Spirit. God lives with us!

Have you ever wondered how Fort Benning and the world are different than they might be otherwise, because God is living in it?

Today's verses from Colossians give an important clue — we make the difference. Christians are to give expression to God's transforming love, alive and active in the world.

Take a few moments to think about the characteristics of God's people given in these verses. Even the words — compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, good temper, love — have a soothing effect on us. We seem to be drawn naturally to persons who live out these qualities; we feel good just being in their presence.

Think about persons you meet every day — family members, friends, neighbors, teachers, fellow soldiers. Where do you see evidence of God living with us through the lives of other people?

Again, take a few moments to reflect upon one person in whose life you see kindness, compassion, gentleness, good temper, or love. How does this person make a difference in your life?

Now think about your own life. What characteristics from the above Scripture verses do you see evident in your own life? In what area do you personally want to grow in the coming year?

God, whose coming we celebrate in Christmas, lives with us still. We not only celebrate God's continuing presence with us. As soldiers in the U.S. Army, we need to have Him with us to help us everyday.

Perhaps the peace that abounds when these qualities are evident in the lives of God's people is the peace of which the angels sang long ago in Bethlehem: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will to men."

God bless you and yours during this special time of year; and, have a very Merry Christmas.

Best wishes from the top

WASHINGTON (ARNEWS) — Following is text of message from President Ronald Reagan: "To the members of the armed forces:

Nancy and I are especially delighted to send our warmest holiday greetings to the members of our armed forces who serve our nation around the world. In this joyous season of giving and sharing warm moments with family and friends, we owe a special debt of gratitude to those in distant parts of the globe.

From the struggle at Valley Forge to the challenges of today, the dedicated efforts and dutiful service of the men and women of our armed forces have preserved our nation's freedom, independence and security. While Christmas is a poignant time of year to bear these many responsibilities, you can be sure that our nation is deeply grateful for your continued vigilance.

You have our best wishes for a very Merry Christmas for you and your families and a most rewarding New Year."

New uniform exchange policy

"Since the initial transition to the Battle Dress Uniforms several complaints have been received regarding excessive shrinkage.

NATICK Laboratories is currently performing tests to isolate the problem and produce both short and long term solutions.

To minimize the shrinkage problem the following action should be taken:

- During the washing, drying and finishing cycles, use the lowest possible temperature settings not to exceed 130° F.

- In fitting these garments, the item selected should be fitted loosely to allow for some shrinkage without rendering the garment unusable.

Current tariffs (sizes) are designed to afford a loose fit. Starching is prohibited.

In instances where a garment has been rendered unusable because of excessive shrinkage, it will be replaced without charge to the individual.

- This exchange will be accomplished in accordance with procedures outlined in paragraph 5-14c, AR 700-84.

- Direct exchange of items issued from Clothing Initial Issue Point (CIIP) or purchased from the Clothing Sales Store will be completed using DA

Form 3078 with unit commander's statement specified in paragraph 5-10c, AR 700-84 and reporting to the CIIP with the DA Form 3078 and clothing to be exchanged.

- Qualified fitters at the CIIP will make the final decision concerning the determination of unserviceable uniforms versus alterations."

The 40 foot snowman.

Pvt. John A. Gravedoni (L) and PFC Pat Jones, soldiers in training at 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, admire 'Frosty'.

Christmas spirit on post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning may not see a white christmas this year but that did not stop Martin Army Community Hospital personnel from putting up their own snowman anyway.

A forty-foot smiling 'Frosty the Snowman' was erected by facility engineers who work at the hospital who wanted to bring a little bit of cheer to people visiting the Army community hospital. 'Frosty' is made of wire and rolled up shredded plastic - and the small bulbs inside him provide light so he can be seen at night.

Credit for the snowman also belongs to the hospital's Logistics Division whose personnel of the Chief Services Branch ordered the happy snowman for Martin Army.

'Frosty' was not the only familiar person seen this time of the year on post. Santa Claus was also here. Besides being seen at various offices where people work that jolly old man dressed in red was also seen at the dependents schools on post. At Edward White School Santa and one of his helpers walked through the hallways of that school shaking hands with children and wishing them a merry christmas. He paused to ask some of the children sitting in class that all important question. What would you like for Santa to bring you for Christmas this year?

With a little help from the Fort Benning Fire Department Santa was driven to places on post in a fire truck. One of his stops was at a christmas party being thrown for the children whose mother or father works at the Staff Judge Advocate Office. He also visited at some of the company christmas parties held for soldiers and their families on post. At the dayroom of Company C, 43rd Engineer, Santa held children on his knee, asked them what they wanted for christmas, and gave each child a christmas gift. The families of that battalion enjoyed not only the entertaining of Santa Claus, but also the tasty cookies and baked cakes as well.

Chris Frederick of the 43rd Engineer Battalion gives presents to children from Santa.

Kindergarten children from Mrs. Thompson's class at Edward White.

Children whose father or mother work at the Staff Judge Advocate Office hop aboard a fire truck to ride with Santa.

Pauline Gonzales gets a surprise visit The visit happened in Mrs. Laura Hale's second grade classroom.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Don't give a car thief an even break

Every day some drivers on Fort Benning make it easy for thieves to steal their cars. Let me quote a car thief with more than 25 years experience: "Any car I see on a dimly lighted street, with the door unlocked or a window open, belongs to me if I want it." Another veteran thief remarks, "You'd be amazed how easy people make it for me. I've stolen — really, been given is a better term — cars with keys in the switch, and even some with titles and gasoline credit cards in the glove compartment."

These old pros in the car theft business offer some hints to help keep you from making a gift of your car to anyone who wants it.

- LOCK YOUR CAR. This is no absolute guarantee against theft, but at least by locking your car and taking the keys, you'll slow the thief down and complicate his work.

- PARK ON A WELL LIGHTED STREET. A well lighted street in a busy section will often discourage a thief.

- AVOID PARKING LOTS WHICH REQUIRE KEYS TO BE LEFT IN THE VEHICLE. These lots are great favorites of car thieves. Avoid them whenever you can — even if it means walking an extra block or two. If you do park in one of these lots, leave only your ignition key. Take time to remove your house or office keys. It's a simple process to have duplicates made and burglars can obtain your address through your license plates.

- PLACE ITEMS OF VALUE IN CAR TRUNK. There are thieves who specialize in stealing items from your car rather than taking the car itself. In the auto theft business, these people are called "car boosters." At restaurants along interstate highways or turnpikes, they wait for you to come along with your car loaded with luggage.

When you go inside to eat, the thief goes right to work, confident he'll have half an hour or more to do his job. He simply applies a tire iron to your car window and before you know it, the luggage and anything else inside is gone — sometimes before the waitress in the restaurant has even taken your order! The "booster" generally steals only what he can see; if your valuables are out of sight in your car trunk, he may pass you by.

- KNOW YOUR LICENSE PLATE NUMBER. Thieves also steal license plates to use on stolen cars. Sometimes, they swap "hot" license plates from a stolen car for your good, clean plates. A few drops of solder on your car tag bolts will help safeguard them.

If a professional car thief really wants your car, he'll probably get it. However, only a relatively small percentage of stolen cars are taken by real pros — most go to "joy-riders," one-timers, or amateurs. Don't make it easier for them.

Statistics show that from Oct. 1st, 1980 to Oct. 1st, 1981, a total of 42 privately owned vehicles were stolen on the installation. Included in this figure are vehicles which were loaned out and not returned on time as well as the ever popular UNSECURED Auto.

In order for the military police to help insure you don't become a victim of auto theft, we urge you to take a bite out of crime by securing your vehicle.

Boy Scouts

As the Fort Benning Scout coordinator I would like to wish everyone a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

And with these wishes I also would like to make some announcements concerning the scout program here.

First of all, the office of the Scout coordinator will be located in the Youth Activities Center as of this Christmas. The new phone number is 545-3070 or 545-3913.

The Boy Scout District office will remain in Bldg. 2620, and the phone number is 545-1806. The Girl Scout service unit director remains Mrs. Rosie Schnicker and she can be reached at 689-0982.

This move is for a couple of reasons, one to concentrate on the Scout units on post and second is to bring the job back into military perspectives.

All-in-all this will allow better service to the on post Scouting community.

Again I wish you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

VA Q&A

Q — My Veterans Administration check goes to my bank on direct deposit. I am moving and want to change banks. How do I get my check deposited directly to my new account?

A — Go to the bank and complete the proper form to start direct deposit to the new facility. Do not close out your old account until the checks arrive at the new facility, since the procedure to change direct deposit from one bank to another takes about 60 days to complete.

Q — Can a veteran purchase a condominium or townhouse with a GI home loan?

A — Yes, as long as it meets VA appraisal requirements and is going to be occupied by the borrower as his/her permanent primary residence.

Q — If a veteran dies before a home loan guaranteed by the Veterans Administration is repaid, will the VA pay off the balance?

A — No, the surviving spouse or other co-borrower must continue making payments.

Tree lighting ceremony

"If I had one wish for Christmas it would be for world peace," said Fort Benning Commander, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, at the post Christmas tree lighting ceremony. He added, "I think most Fort Benning personnel would make the same wish. But while we may hope for peace, we must look at the world realistically. And this is why our mission at Fort Benning is so important." Included in the Christmas tree lighting ceremony this year were OCS students who sang songs such as Siler Night, Little Drummer Boy and Jingle Bells. The 283rd Army Band supplies the Christmas music.

197th Infantry Brigade Public Affairs Office

The Meteorological Section from Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, hosted about 50 Faith Middle School students recently at the "metro" site.

The seventh graders from Mrs. Patti Jones' and Mrs. Tina Russell's social studies and science classes were on a field trip to learn what the meteorological section does, and to see them in operation.

Chief Warrant Officer Ron

Parker and SSgt. Charles R. Crain explained metro's mission of giving the artillery guns the atmospheric conditions (temperature, humidity, density and wind speed and direction) in order for them to calculate the correct firing data.

The highlight of the field trip for the students was the weather balloon taking a radiosonde aloft and having the radar track its ascent.

Twelve-year-old student Jim Connor summed up his field trip in two words — "pretty neat!"

67th Maint combat ready

Story by Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

After four long days of intense military operations, physically and mentally exhausted soldiers of the 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group (Cbt), returned home from the field.

Now the only thing to do, besides cleaning up their equipment, was to wait patiently for the results of their arduous Army Readiness Training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP).

It had begun for the five separate units within the 67th, Nov. 16 with the arrival of the chief evaluator from Fort Riley, Kan., Lt. Col. Chuck Beegle, executive officer of the 1st Division DISCOM.

"The actual Artep scenario used was designed to evaluate the units ability to react to combat and mission related situations under wartime conditions," commented Lt. Col. Rocco McGurk, 67th Maintenance Battalion commander. "However, the diversity of the units within the 67th added a complexity to an ARTEP of this type that is seldom realized in conventional combat units."

The diversity that McGurk talked about is the five separate units within the battalion are just that—separate.

"The 67th is made up of an Headquarters, Headquarters Detachment, a light medium transportation company, the 444th Transportation Company, the 533rd Transportation Company, the 598th Maintenance Company and the 608th Ordnance Company," said McGurk.

"The exercise subjected the whole battalion to ground attacks, which included the use of chemical agents, while in convoy and also included defensive position attacks," he said. "But, what it also amounted to was that this one ARTEP translated into five different ARTEPs with a total of 600 tasks that needed to be performed with a high level of proficiency."

"How did the units perform?" "Well, here's how it all worked out," explained McGurk.

"The 444th Transportation Company did not falter in providing its daily transportation support of the Infantry School.

"The unit averaged 40 truck commitments a day and successfully demonstrated their ability to shift into a warime footing with minimal disruption of normal requirements," he said.

"The 598th Maintenance Company which supports 32 units performed its mission very successfully from the field location," commented the battalion commander. "Aside from the support that the unit provided to others, it also performed direct support maintenance missions at their field location which included the changing of major assemblies and component rebuild.

"The 533rd Transportation Company actually dispatched convoys to supply points as far away as Atlanta, Macon and Birmingham as part of their simulated wartime mission requirements," explained McGurk. "Theirs was a mission of providing vital supplies of food and ammunition to units operating under war conditions.

"One of the units that they provided to was the 608th Ordnance Company, who was required to establish an Amunition Supply Point (ASP)," explained the battalion commander.

"The 608th not only established the ASP, but they also received, stored and issued this dummy ammunition on a daily basis," McGurk said. "They issued approximately 640 short tons and the whole process was established in a 24 hour period, which demonstrated the ability of a well trained unit to operate in a critical supply mission."

The field problem over, the results in, Chief Evaluator Beegle summed it up with his overall finding "The 67th Maintenance Battalion could go to war today."

"I find that the cornerstone of my previous statement was the total involvement of the noncommissioned officer corps of the battalion," said Beegle. "Their aggressive, take charge attitude and professionalism was demonstrated throughout the ARTEP

Volunteers make programs work

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Myra Mills is an Army Community Service (ACS) volunteer. Like all ACS volunteers she gives her free time to help other people and believes strongly in the work she does.

She works with Fort Benning handicapped children. As chairwoman for the ACS committee for handicapped children, she sets up recreational programs for these youngsters who live either on or off post. This includes special children of retired military.

In August Myra, with the help of other volunteers, got what she wanted most for these children. A building they could use to conduct their activities. One they could call their own.

"We wanted to have our own place where we could set up our own programs," explained the petite 28-year-old Mrs. Mills, who understands as well as anyone the needs for these special kids. Her seven-year-old son Rex is confined to a wheelchair.

"Right now we have 17 children signed up for our program which runs from 10 a.m. till 12:30 p.m. each Saturday," continued Myra. "We show movies, work with arts and crafts, take them bowling, go swimming at Briant Wells Gymnasium and take them off post on field trips. However, we try to use the post facilities as much as we can."

Myra was involved with a four week summer camp that was held for the children in June. Thirty-three children were able to take advantage of that camp.

She is trying to get the winter program for these children going as good as the one they had this summer. Parents interested in signing up their child for this program should call the ACS office and talk to SP5 David Fleming, director of the handicapped dependent program At 545-1233.

Variety of Work

ACS volunteers do a variety of volunteer work. At the McGraw Community Life Center volunteer Karen Kennedy is the Mayor of McGraw Manor and has her hands full trying to help people with problems and promote community involvement at the same time.

The job of getting people involved in what's going on in their neighborhood sounds easier than it is according to Karen. A lot of parents will not participate in an activity if that activity does not interest their child. However if the activity is one in which their child is interested in, the child asks to go to it and the parents end up getting involved.

Karen says, "This January McGraw Manor will be supporting Boy Scout Troop 127. This will be good for us as well as the scouts. The scouts can help us with some of our activities like our community fair, and we can let them utilize our activity building. Also we will be able to refer people interested in the boy scouts to them."

Each month Karen publishes a community newsletter called "The Manor". This lets residents know what is going on in their community. When she is not working on the newsletter or sending in McGraw Manor community news for the post newspaper's Community News page, she is kept busy helping Service battery gets 'new commander'

197th Infantry Brigade Public Affairs Office

In many educational institutions throughout the United States, it is common to have a "Student Government Day," in which the students take over key positions for the day.

Not to be outdone, Service Battery of the 2nd Battalion 10th Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep) conducted a similar change of command recently, in which the lower ranking soldiers of the battery took over key positions from battery commander all the way down to squad leader.

Service Battery Commander, Capt. John Compton said, "The idea was suggested to me several times, so we decided to give it a try. Everyone in the battery will have a chance to be at least a squad leader."

Compton gave several reasons why he elected to have his juniors run his battery. "To start, we have super soldiers. I would not have attempted it if I did not have confidence in them.

"We wanted these soldiers to have a chance to prove themselves," he said "It helps in the development of leadership and we also wanted the soldiers to find out what it is really like to have the responsibilities."

"Of course, the concept would not work if the entire battery did not cooperate," said SFC Charlie L. Pallett, service battery's first sergeant. "Everyone is taking it seriously," said Pallett.

PFC Clifford Coleman took over the position of first sergeant and found things not very easy. "Everyone should be put in this position at least once. It would allow them to better understand why things run the way they do," said Coleman.

Taking over the helm of the battery, PFC Carvin Williams said, "It is one of my best learning experiences. . . it's hard to get acquainted with being around so many officers." Williams had to attend a battalion officer conference as one of his duties as battery commander.

The lower enlisted ranks were in charge of the battery throughout the entire week. "As a result of this, everyone in the battery will understand how the battery operates and the battery will be more organized than before," said Williams.

"They are doing such a good job," said Compton. "They have exceeded my expectations." As an after thought, Compton added, "I might be out of a job next week."

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT (IRA)

Effective January 2, 1982, as a member of TIC Federal Credit Union, Fort Benning, you can deposit up to $2,000 a year as an individual, $4,000 with a working spouse or, $2,250 with a non working spouse, and deduct it from your taxable income. Then, in addition to deducting these deposits you will not have to pay taxes on the dividends earned on the IRA until retirement, a time when you're likely to be lower tax bracket. If you were to deposit $2,000 each year, the chart below will give you some idea of the approximate benefits of opening an IRA at 12% annual rate.

Years to Retirement	Total Contribution	Tax-Deferred Earnings	Cash at Retirement
10	$20,000	$15,097	$35,097
15	$30,000	$44,560	$74,560
25	$50,000	$216,666	$266,666

Other rates and amounts will adjust these figures proportionately.

People at McGraw. The McGraw Manor community center, also has a chaplain available right at the center itself.

Karen adds, "We try to offer activities for everyone, and not just for the children. We need adult participation. We especially try to offer something for the wives who have very little at home to do except watch television. We offer them activities they can get involved in. It all takes place right here. There is no car requirement. They don't have to get up early in the morning and go someplace else on main post. Our activity centers around family type of involvement."

Karen Kennedy can be reached at 545-2986.

Another group of dedicated volunteers are the 11 women who make up the ACS CARE Committee.

Women volunteers who come to the aid of battered wives and offer them a refuge (The Battered Wives Shelter) where they will be safe from their enraged husbands. The volunteers are hand selected for the job by Fort Benning social worker and CARE Committee chairwoman Mary Behrend.

Georgianne Dunn is one of these volunteers a woman in distress can turn to for help when she has been beaten or frightened half to death by her husband. In the evening Dunn, like the other CARE volunteers, carries a beeper with her when she is off duty so she will not miss a distress call.

"It's a brave thing for these women to even call," she explains. "They are reaching out and saying, 'I need help.'" Battered wives who cry out for help are not only scared to death, but many have already received several beatings from their husbands before they seek help, according to Dunn. "We're not talking about a little fight," She adds, "wife beating is a serious problem."

Mrs. Dunn never knows where she will meet one of these women who have been assaulted. Some of them she meets at the military police gate, some at the emergency room at the hospital, and some off post where a wife has been dumped out of the family car by her spouse. "Sometimes she is still in her night clothes," adds Dunn.

She talks to these women, insures they get medical attention if they need it, and informs them of the wives shelter. For volunteers like Georgianne Dunn, her reward is knowing she has helped another wife from being beaten up again. Women who have this problem are encouraged to call an ACS CARE volunteer at the ACS home office, Crain Hall, on post. The telephone number is 545-1233 or 1169.

Vehicle Registration System

Effective Jan. 1, 1982, Fort Benning will initiate a new program which will require re-registration of ALL vehicles.

The new program will feature a new, smaller decal.

These decals will be displayed on the top center of the front windshield and lower left corner of the rear windshield. Vehicles with no rear windows or a louver-covered window will display the decal on the left side of the rear bumper.

Color coding of decals for officers (blue), enlisted (red), civilian (green) and commercial (black) vehicles will be the same as under the current system.

Another feature of the new program will be the requirement for the annual re-registration of vehicles during the month in which the state safety inspection is due. All vehicles registered here require a valid state safety inspection regardless of the state in which the vehicle is registered.

After Jan. 1, all vehicles currently registered with the Provost Marshal Office must be re-registered within five days of the date the state safety inspection is renewed. In addition to the new set of registration decals, each registrant will be issued a color-coded numeral to be affixed beside the registration decal on the rear window to indicate the month when re-registration (and state safety inspection) is to be accomplished each year. Under this system, all currently issued decals should be replaced over the first 12 months (through Dec. 31, 1982).

Vehicles being registered for the first time will be issued color-coded numerals for the month in which the current state safety inspection sticker expires. The numerals will then serve as a reminder for both state safety inspection and post re-registration.

This change will provide many benefits. Since proof of insurance and a safety inspection will be required for re-registration, we will be eliminating many unsafe or uninsured vehicles from the post.

The NBC Support Division took first place in the annual Command, Tactics and Doctrine Department Christmas door decorating contest held Dec. 17, in Bldg. 4.

Their door, which is on the third floor, had a nuclear explosion made out of cotton, created by 2nd. Lt. Moore and SSgt. Thompson.

Command and Tactics Directory on the fourth floor took second place. Their door was decorated with fine Christmas paper and a beautiful hand drawing.

The Engineer Team, which is also located on the third floor, placed third. Their door was decorated with a war mine. The warm message read "Have a blast of a Christmas and a dynamite New Years."

PINE MOUNTAIN, GA.—Callaway Gardens is offering guests who attend their New Year's Eve Dinner/Dance, December 31, a safe and enjoyable way to "ring in '82".

In addition to the gala dinner, dancing and beverage set ups for two, a special price of $82.82 will include a room overnight for two in the Callaway Gardens Inn.

The evening's festivities begin with "High Tea and Crumpets", at 5:30 p.m. - 6:30 p.m. in the Vineyard Green Lounge. The grand buffet dinner, beginning at 8:00 p.m. in the Callaway Gardens Ballrooms, will feature seafoods, meats, vegetables and a variety of luscious desserts. The big, bold sound of the Ted Howe Orchestra, a lively 11-piece band from Atlanta, provides great musical selections from every era.

"We have designed this special New Year's package to offer area residents a safe and leisurely way to celebrate the holiday," said Bill Worsham, general manager for the resort.

This special rate, good for one room, double occupancy, applies to the night of December 31 only. Only couples attending the dinner/dance may participate. It does not apply to package plan participants.

Brownies good deed

Brownie troops 289, 12, 177, and 67 have been very busy. These four troops got together on Dec. 12, at Camp Hideaway and stuffed stockings for Omaha, Georgia.

The home is for mentally retarded and handicapped children and adults, and is sponsored by the 1st Battalion 29th Infantry. They will be taking the stockings to the home on the 18th of December for the annual Christmas party.

The brownies recieved donations from some of our local merchants and companies. They have worked very hard on this project and deserve a great deal of thanks.

Troop 289 also collected and donated a Thanksgiving basket to the Department of Welfare. The basket included a 10 pound turkey and a pumpkin pie along with assorted can goods.

Pharmacy closed

The Outpatient Prescription Pharmacy on the first floor of Martin Army Community Hospital will be closed all day Christmas and New Year's Day, Jan. 1, 1982. Small quantities of emergency medications will be available from the Hospital Emergency Room.

Comedy play arriving soon

Is Amerigo Vespucci an alias? Did George Washington always tell Martha the truth? Was Napoleon Bonaparte really a farmer from Iowa? What do Thomas Jefferson and pelicans have in common? And what about Trixie???

These and other burning questions will be answered in "Heroes and Hard Cases," the hilarious "American Comedy" revue, produced and performed on national tour by the Alpha-Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America.

The show will be performed at the Fort Benning Officers Club Jan. 31 at 8 p.m. Prior to the show dinner will be served from 6 until 7:30 p.m.

Tickets will go on sale in the catering office, room 9 on Jan. 28, for $12.50. Tickets will be limited to 250 people so make your reservations early.

Safety measures

Army Community Hospital

PLEASE do not bring your healthy children to the hospital. Children in the clinic areas prevent us from providing good health care. This will also prevent your healthy children from being exposed to communicable diseases. We do not have the personnel to babysit your children while you are being treated. The post and PX nurseries are available at a very reasonable charge to watch your children.

Speeding neighbors

The Safety Office has recently received several inquiries asking, "What can be done to cut down the speeding in the housing areas?"

Someone suggested that we put in speed bumps to slow the traffic; another said, "Let's put up more stop signs;" yet another wanted to stop thru traffic.

An analysis of the traffic citations given in the housing areas may come as a surprise to some, but not to all. Approximately 90 percent of all speeding tickets involve occupants of the housing areas where the citation is given.

How about talking to your neighbor!

A first for the Second

The ladies of the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade held a coffee and cookie exchange on Dec. 7 in the 2nd ITB conference room.

Female cadre civilians and employees cadre wives were invited. There was an excellent turnout with 55 women in attendance.

Each lady brought five dozen cookies. One dozen was used for the evening's refreshments and everyone was able to take a different four dozen cookies home.

The guest speakers were Joan Clark, Col. Howard Clark and CSM Herbert Trimble. The cookie exchange was organized by Mrs. Clark, assisted by the Battalion Commanders' wives, and is the first event of many that the 2nd ITB plans to hold for the ladies of the brigade.

These events will be held in order to allow all women of the brigade to meet, exchange information and create a family atmosphere within the Brigade.

Check charge

Effective Jan. 1st, 1982, on-post banks are authorized to collect up to $1.00 for cashing of non-customer treasury checks. This applies to both civilian and military members. There will be no charge for cashing treasury checks if the member has an account with the bank.

YA Basketball to kick off season on Jan. 9

The Fort Benning Youth Activities Basketball league will conduct their opening ceremony at the Youth Activities Gym, Bldg. 1055, on Jan. 9, 1982 beginning at 9:45 a.m.

The festivities will start off with all of the teams lining up on the court and a color guard presentation shortly thereafter.

The National Anthem will be played and then the colors will be retired as preparations for the rest of the ceremony begin.

Maj. Jerome C. Zamora, chief of Morale Support Division, will introduce the honored guests, teams and head coaches and then turn the microphone over to Col. Ammons, league commissioner. Col. Ammons will give the opening remarks and then toss up the first ball to officially open the 1982 season.

At 11 a.m. the first game of the season will start.

Featured as honored guests will be Col. Ammons, league commissioner, the Basketball Commissioner, Mrs. Mary Marshall, Tri-City area president, Maj. Raney Price, main post area president and SFC Don Armstrong, Lavoie Manor president and others.

Basketball league for 35 and older

The sports office is forming a 35 and older Basketball League for military personnel only.

The league, can be company or command level and registration starts today and lasts until Jan. 15, 1982.

For registration forms or any information about the new league contact Mr. Austin at the sports office at 545-2332 or 545-7519.

Letting children play develops awareness

Mark Twain once said that play consists of whatever a body is not obligated to do. But for children, play is a way of learning.

Play surrounds a child with wonder, leading him or her on, testing body and mind. Play lets a child try out roles and learn about things, people, skills, language and concepts.

Awareness

The more freedom a child has in play development, the more his or her awareness of the world will grow, according to a new Department of Health and Human Services booklet entitled "The Importance of Play." If too many expectations are thrust upon the child or demands made, motivation may be thwarted.

The child needs the opportunity to try out skills. A parent's role is similar to that of a gardener preparing the soil, making sure that the right ingredients are there and that the soil is tilled to help the plant grow straight and strong.

Parents should structure the environment, but not the play itself. They can stop an activity for safety's sake or help a child shift to other activities. But parental interference should be only when necessary.

Play changes as a child grows older. At about age 3 the issues of power arrive in play. Children practice such power tactics on each other as threats, pushes, kicks, screams and fights.

They try to exclude others in order to get what they want, or they try to work their way into a group by smiling, bribing, or making someone else the target of ridicule and shame. Four-year-olds may even try to keep group life intact by scapegoating an innocent person.

Around the ages of 4 and 5, children enjoy order and like to create ritual by doing the same thing over and over. They have answers for where babies come from and for everything else of interest. What they don't know, they invent.

By 5 years old, the child is more selective in choosing playmates; play becomes more complex and lasts for longer periods of time. A 5-year-old enjoys not only playing with friends but also playing alone near them.

Children 5 to 7 years old like to get through a game without a mistake, but they also delight in limited disorder, like whirling around until they fall down with dizziness. Between 5 and 7, a child begins forming his or her own opinion of the balance between work and play.

By the time they reach 8 to 12, children enjoy learning how to use adult tools like sewing machines, potter's wheels, and motor-driven implements. They also like to play games with adults, make models, and play musical instruments.

Teens

Teens are attracted to adult forms of play. Young teenagers are not happy with toy versions of anything. They want community recognition for sports and hobbies. They love to dance and sing and tend to put more energy into play than into work.

Whatever your child's age, remember that play is a creative time — a time for sharing once in a while for the sheer fun of it. (AFIS)

VA attempting to locate former POWs

Veterans service organizations and some 500 military unit associations are being asked to help the Veterans Administration locate 57,000 very special veterans.

The 57,000 are part of the 100,000 living American former prisoners of war who became potentially eligible for benefits as the result of recent legislation.

VA already has the names of 43,000 former prisoners who have already qualified for compensation or pension.

VA's concern with the special health problems of former prisoners of war stems from a joint study with the Department of Defense in 1980 which found POWs whose confinement was characterized by starvation diets, lack of medical care and inhumane treatment have a higher incidence of physical and psychological disabilities.

Former prisoners of war may have had difficulties establishing claims for benefits based upon service connected disabilities due to inadequate repatriation examinations, the study points out.

The largest group of former POWs is from World War II — 93,128. There are 3,844 ex-POWs from the Korean conflict, 800 from World War I, 642 from the Vietnam Era fighting and 80 from the USS Pueblo.

Organizations cooperating with VA are being asked to provide all pertinent information on their POW members. The military serial number or VA claim number is especially important.

VA plans to contact all veterans identified in this manner to inform them of the details of the legislation and answer any questions they may have.

VA is also asking members of the public to advise any veteran they know who is a former POW of the new legislation.

Veterans' benefits counselors at all VA Regional Offices have details of the law and will be happy to assist anyone having questions about it. Telephone directories list the numbers for VA offices, and toll-free telephone service to them is available in each state. (Courtesy of the Veterans Administration)

New Scout program at Benning

Story by Bea Cappas
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There's a new program coming to post that's being sponsored by the Boy Scouts of America.

Called an Explorer Post, the new program is all about young people and adults and what the two might have in common.

"Although the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines Corps are involved in the sponsoring of the Explorer Post, there is no recruitment or commitment of or by the young adults," said Maj. Rogan, executive officer of the School Brigade.

"This is an exceptionally good program, because it allows the individual male or female between the ages of 15 and 20 to examine the types of careers that are available to them," Rogan further detailed.

"An example of this is getting the individual familiarized with the military," he said. "There are many Explorer Posts in which the individual can also participate in such clubs as drama, police work, search and rescue and so on.

"There's also traveling involved," explained the major. "The individual might go out for a weekend to a base or on an outing which teaches him the basic skills of survival, rescue techniques and other adventurous things like that.

"Along with fact that, there are numerous posts throughout the United States, and there's also an Explorer Olympics which comes around every two years," commented Rogan.

"There are six outcomes of the Explorer Post Program," explained Rogan.

- Vocational-- a better understanding of America's social, economic and governmental system.
- Personal fitness--Improvement of mental and emotional fitness.
- Citizenship--Preparation to give leadership and fulfill their responsibility to the American society and the forums of the world.
- Social--Personal and stable values based on religious concepts.
- Service--Encourage the skill and desire to help others.

• Outdoor--A degree of self-reliance based on courage, initiative and resourcefulness.

Maj. Rogan has been appointed by the School Brigade as the advisor for the new program. Along with his previous statements about the program, Rogan had some other comments to make.

"We have many parents on this post who won't get involved in youth activities, and we really need a lot of adult involvement," he said. "We need this involvement in order for us to make Fort Benning an Explorer Post."

For any youth in Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City, who might be interested in this program please contact Maj. Rogan at 545-4301 or 545-3121. Mr. J. R. Alington, the Fort Benning district executive is also a Point of Contact for any information about the program. He can be reached at 545-7067 or 545-1806.

"The program, all-in-all is a very good one in which a teenager could get a broader look into the future," Rogan said. "It will also help them in getting a more challenging and rewarding job in the years to come."

Challenge: Sacrifice of today energy for the future

The Actions that those of us here take in the months and years to come will have an extreme effect on the economy of our nation, our jobs and even our national security.

I put the challenge to you as the people serving your country to include the actions of energy conservation. This is a part of the total service to your country idea.

We all gave the oath for service to "one nation under God." We have all enjoyed the fruits of happiness and freedom provided by what we call democracy. Think about that for a moment. You are free to do as you please. Free to plan your life, goals and advance in any direction. This is all provided for by the Constitution of the United States.

My point is simple: the government is now asking for your support as a soldier and citizen to help keep America's standards high, to help keep dependence on other countries to a minimum and to help conserve America's energy resources.

Perhaps the late John F. Kennedy said it best ... "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country." My answer is a lot.

Start by turning down the thermostat in your house and quarters. Wear that sweater or housecoat inside the house and even wash those clothes in cold water; they will get clean that way. Establish a shower routine that takes 10 minutes max (relax with a good book, not a hot shower).

Grandma used a solar dryer and didn't know it-she called it a clothes line, easy to install and efficient to use. Turn that dryer off!

Plastic coating comes in rolls and serves to block off cold winds when placed in screens. It is very inexpensive, saves heat and is easy to install takes about one Saturday.

The use of devices that pay for themselves also help the effort. A thermal blanket for you and your hot water bottle is one way. Closing off unused rooms, i.e. the bathroom, the kitchen and others is another. If an electric blanket costs $25 and saves $20 a year it will pay for itself in one-and-a-half-years. ($25 divided by 20 equals one and one-quarter-years. simple.)

Park your car and walk to the post office and lunch if in the main post area, or bring your lunch this saves you money and gas (not to mention that it's also good exercise). Sure it's a little inconvenient, but the name of the game is sacrifice. Self-sufficiency is an American standard. Conserving means using less energy.

Find the solution that you would like to practice (I have listed a few), and speak up for the cause toward energy conservation.

You can do a lot for your country. We can all start right here which is our community where we work and live. We can establish the standards here for other installations and communities to follow.

I put forth the challenge to you as soldiers and civilians to make our home the leader in

Insulating Basement Walls

STEP 1; install framework of furring strips or studs to masonry walls, either 16 in. or 24 in. on center. STEP 2; install insulation between furring strips or studs. Staple flange on insulation facing to framing member. STEP 3; cut pieces of insulation to fit in band joist between top plate and sub floor. STEP 4; cover installed insulation with desired wall finish. Do not leave faced insulation exposed.

another area, that of energy conservation. This is our community let's make it the most efficient in the nation!

You can, I can we all can. Don't be a spectator participate in energy conservation.

Let's make Fort Benning lean and mean, lean on the use of energy and mean toward waste. I put this challenge to youstart today.

U.S. to train Salvadoran troops

By Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Approximately 500 to 600 El Salvadoran Officer Candidates will be arriving here sometime next month for approximately four months of training.

Tentatively scheduled to begin training Jan 25, the candidates are merely a part of the whole contingent that is to be trained at United States installations.

In a recent announcement by the Department of Defense, the U.S.

will train approximately 1600 Salvadoran soldiers at two U. S. military installations.

Defense officials said the Army will train an infantry battalion of approximately one thousand soldiers in basic and advanced individual and unit training at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The Salvadoran soldiers that arrive at Fort Benning will be trained in leadership, tactics, maintenance and troop leading procedures, said Defense officials.

According to these officials, all of the training will be conducted under the auspices of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, and will cost approximately $15 million.

The training, though being conducted 'out of country', is being conducted as a mutual agreement between the government of El Salvador and the U.S. government, commented officials. This is to take advantage of the multiple training facilities available and the immediate need of training requirements in the shortest period of time.

These training programs are the only ones presently planned, explained officials. And El Salvador is the only Latin American country scheduled to undergo this type of training.

The U.S. Army Forces Command through Fort Bragg and the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command through Fort Benning will be the major U.S. Army commands given the mission to train the Salvadoran soldiers.

Impact of Christ felt everywhere

By Dave Campbell, Chaplain
43rd Engineer Battalion

Well it's over, Christmas 1981. What a happy time of year for families who reunited and for children who received the happiness that Santa brings and for those who loved the one whose birth we celebrated.

Last week I got a glimpse of the document which indicated the Doctor of Philosophy degree earned recently by my battalion commander. In showing the date, it stated, "In The Year Of Our Lord."

It struck me once again that this baby Jesus, who was born so humbly a couple-thousand-years-ago, was more than we can comprehend. Even those who do not follow him surely are amazed at the impact his life has made in the history of the world.

It has been said that history is in fact his story. Who is this one whose birth touches and stops so much of the world?

The following article is a brief account of the irony of the life of this Jesus Christ. God bless you in '82' as you celebrate him! I believe the most astounding fact is that this king loves you and me individually! Happy New Year! Make it the best yetwith him.

One solitary life

How do you explain the greatness of the man whose birthday we celebrated Christmas?

He was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he was 30 and then for three years was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held office. He never owned a home. He never travelled 200 miles from the place where he was born. He never did one of the things that usually accompanies greatness. He had no credentials but himself.

Although he walked the land over, curing the sick, giving sight to the blind, healing the lame and raising people from the dead, the top religious leaders turned against him. His friends ran away. He was turned over to enemies. He went through a mockery of a trial. He was spat upon, flogged and ridiculed. He was nailed to a cross between two thieves. While he was dying, the executioners gambled for the only piece of property he had on earth, and that was his robe. When he was dead, He was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone, and today he is the central figure of the human race and the leader of the column of progress.

All the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that were ever built, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man upon this earth as has that One Solitary Life.

Job Site Component portion of Skill Qualification Test most important

By Scott Leishman
USAIC SQT Branch

The new year is around the corner and the Skill Qualification Test (SQT) branch is also around the corner with the new 1982 Calendar Year SQT tests.

Units and personnel should check for their MOS so that individual training can be planned to prepare the soldiers for their test.

Soldiers and supervisors should pay particular attention to the Job Site Component area, as it can be taken anytime in the one year time period prior to the SQT.

Breaking it up and completing it piecemeal is more favorable than trying to do it all right before the SQT testing period.

The SQT branch must have a JSC before any soldier can be given the written component. In the case of soldiers who are working out of their MOS or in a position where equipment required to administer the JSC is not available, some parts of the test will have to be marked up "not taken."

It is important to administer as much of the JSC as possible as soldiers usually do well on it. If a soldier cannot be rated on any portion of the JSC, send the record sheet forward with the block "JSC not taken" filled in.

SQT notices for the new Common Task SQT to be given in January are presently being distributed. This test will be for training only and is not to be used for personnel management purposes.

How to get score

All SQT's are graded at Fort Eustis, Va. and are computed as follows.

The total number of units taken is divided into 100 to come up with the weight per unit. This is multiplied by the total number of units that the individual receives a "GO" to get the score.

Simply, if a soldier receives 25 units on a test, he would divide that into 100 and come up with a 4 points per unit.

SQT attached.

Now let's say he got 21 "Go's". Multiply 21 times four and the total points would end up at 84.

To find the total number of promotion points, check the table on the promotion point worksheet or Army Regulation 600-200, The Enlisted Personnel Management System.

No JSC rating

Many questions have been raised about the JSC rating and the biggest one is "What happens if I don't get rated on the JSC?"

If the JSC is not rated, the score will be computed on the basis of the Hands On and the Written Component, and historically, most soldiers have a hard time with the Written Component.

If a soldier took an SQT with 10 tasks per component, each unit would be worth 100/30 or 3.3 points per unit. If the soldier is not rated on the JSC then the scoring would come out as 100/20 or 5 points.

With the JSC the total scoring, if the soldier should miss three units on the Written Component, would be 27 times 3.3 or 90. Without the JSC the score would be 17 times 5 or 85.

In an instance like this, not having the JSC would be detrimental to the soldier not beneficial. Therefore it is necessary for the soldier and his supervisor to make every effort to get the JSC completed.

For any further information on SQT and when your particular test might be coming up, call Capt. Leishman, SQT Branch at 544-7114.

Branch bank going up

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Dec. 17, at the corner of Fort Benning's Gaudette and Ingersoll Streets, for a new branch bank building that will house the Columbus Bank and Trust Company offices.

The new building will cost just over $400,000 and will replace the old branch office that is presently located in with the First National Bank and the United States Army Communications Command office.

Re-registration of all vehicles required in 1982

Effective Jan. 1, 1982, Fort Benning will initiate a new program which will require re-registration of ALL vehicles.

The new program will feature a new, smaller decal.

These decals will be displayed on the top center of the front windshield and lower left corner of the rear windshield. Vehicles with no rear windows or a louver-covered window will display the decal on the left side of the rear bumper.

Color coding of decals for officers

(blue), enlisted (red), civilian (green) and commercial (black) vehicles will be the same as under the current system.

Another feature of the new program will be the requirement for the annual re-registration of vehicles during the month in which the state safety inspection is due. All vehicles registered here require a valid state safety inspection regardless of the state in which the vehicle is registered.

After Jan. 1, all vehicles currently registered with the Provost Marshal Office must be re-registered within five days of the date the state safety inspection is renewed. In addition to the new set of registration decals, each registrant will be issued a color-coded numeral to be affixed beside the registration decal on the rear window to indicate the month when re-registration (and state safety inspection) is to be accomplished each year. Under this system, all currently issued decals should be replaced over the first 12 months (through Dec. 31, 1982).

Vehicles being registered for the first time will be issued color-coded numerals for the month in which the current state safety inspection sticker expires. The numerals will then serve as a reminder for both state safety inspection and post re-registration.

This change will provide many benefits. Since proof of insurance and a safety inspection will be required for re-registration, we will be eliminating many unsafe or uninsured vehicles from the post.

1/29th Infantry helps needy during holidays

Story and photos by Raymond Cauthen
197th Infantry Brigade Public Affairs Office

The 1st Battalion 29th Infantry of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Sep), continued an on going Christmas tradition as they helped the truly needy to have a better holiday season.

For the ninth consecutive year, the 1/29th held a Christmas party for the mentally handicapped at the Stewart Quitman Chattahoochee Service Center in Omaha, Ga. Friday.

Helping

A combined effort on the part of the officer's wives and the soldiers in the battalion, made the party a success. "Almost every soldier in the battalion contributed some money," said Company B commander, Capt. Christopher E. Jenkins. Some of the soldiers even spent an entire week in Omaha at the center in preparation for the party, Jenkins added. One soldier who helped was Spec.4 Johnny Smith who said he enjoyed seeing the progress of the handicapped as the counselors worked with them.

The wives provided the refreshments for the party and Gail Jenkins picked each of the 45 presents given by the battalion.

The highlight of the party was the arrival of Santa Claus, played by Sgt. Edward Dalton of HSC. "I really enjoy playing Santa Claus and cutting up with the kids," said Dalton. "I have been the battalion Santa Claus for the past three years."

There was a great deal of compassion between "Santa" and the handicapped at the center. "You have to put something into it to get something out of it," said Dalton.

A special vote of thanks for the Pioneer Battalion goes out to Brownie Scout troops 289, 12, 177, and 67 for the Christmas stockings they made for the handicapped.

Jenkins, the ranger company commander said the experience was "humbling."

Marshal's Viewpoint

The holidays are here! It is a time of good cheer, parties, fellowship, sharing and giving. However, it is also a time when our exposure to potential problems is increased.

The Christmas and New Year's holidays are traditionally celebrated at parties and other activities where a variety of alcoholic beverages are consumed.

While there is no problem with their use in moderation, all too often the spirit of fellowship and good cheer at parties encourages overindulgence. It is easy to lose track of how much you've had to drink when you are having a good time. You may be less careful about spreading the drinks out over an appropriate period of time for them to be safely absorbed by your body.

Following are some tips on being a good host when serving liquor at parties during the holidays.

• OFFER ALTERNATIVES: One-third of the adult population chooses not to drink alcohol at all and many others sometime prefer not to.

• KEEP THEM NIBBLING: Eating while drinking slows down the rate at which alcohol is absorbed into the bloodstream. Nibbling also slows down the rate at which people drink.

• GIVE MORE THAN A DRINK: Introduce two people who don't know each other. Get a conversation started. Give a compliment or a laugh. You have more to give than just drinks.

• DON'T RUSH REFILLS: Wait until the glass is empty before you offer another drink. When someone says, "No thanks," don't insist.

• SAFETY FIRST: If someone drinks too much at your house, you are responsible. See that he/she gets home safely but don't let them drive. It takes approximately one hour for every drink taken to sober up. Coffee and a cold shower won't help. If necessary, suggest sleeping overnight.

• REMEMBER: The alcohol content in a 12-ounce beer is equal to four ounces of wine or one and one-half ounces of whiskey.

Drinking impairs the ability to drive in that it slows physical and mental reflexes and reactions. Did you know that between January 1981 and today, there have been in excess of 287 cases of Driving Under the Influence on Fort Benning? Are you also aware that 13 of these 287 cases occurred between Dec. 1 and 15, 1981? So do yourself a favor by planning ahead to take a taxi, the post shuttle bus or riding home with a friend who has had less or preferably nothing to drink.

Be honest with yourself. If you know you have drunk too much to be in control of your mind and body, STOP. Drinking and driving is dangerous. Be smart and be sober. Know your limit. Remember, "Friends don't let friends drive drunk."

From the military police to you, drive safely and have a Happy New Year.

Soldiers take a step back into history

Stories and photos by Dave Bristow and Bea Cappas
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

Since the kick-off date, 'Operation Holiday' has seen soldiers from Fort Benning traveling about the Georgia and Alabama countryside visiting factories, football games, radio and television stations, and just recently Andersonville and the Little White House.

Last week on their visit to Andersonville and the Little White House, reporters from the BAYONET went along also to find out what the soldier was being shown.

Andersonville

Nine miles north east of Americus, Ga. amidst a densely growing forest is Andersonville prison.

Andersonville got its name during the Civil War from the small town that lies just to the west, and is known best for the tragedy that was suffered there during the most vicious war our country has fought.

For many of the 45,000 prisoners held within its compound during its 13 months of existence, Andersonville would be the last place they would ever see alive.

As the present day soldiers partaking in 'Operation Holiday' stepped from the military bus, they were greeted by National Parks Services representative, Sarah Langston, who escorted the young men around the prison site and the cemetery that now rests there.

"This prison was for enlisted soldiers only," Sarah explained. "Most of them were privates just like many of you." She told the visitors, that besides the inadequate shelter and food problems, prisoners had to contend with cutthroats and murderers as well.

The "Anderson Raiders" as they were known, robbed and murdered people daily for four months until the prison Commandant, Capt Henry Wirz, permitted the prisoners to group together to capture the six ringleaders of the Raiders. After a speedy trial the six were hung by their fellow inmates and buried away from the rest of the dead in order to dishonor them. Even today there are no graves near the six, whose ringleader was hung twice after he had survived the first one.

More than 12,000 men died here, from exposure, malnutrition, overcrowding and so on, and the headstones, like the union prisoners of war, are placed one next to another row upon row.

Little White House

It was a cold and rainy Christmas Eve as the soldiers boarded buses at Fort Benning for a tour of the Dolly Madison cakes factory and the Little White House.

But the weather didn't stop this 'Operation Holiday' trip from being a successful as well as an enjoyable one.

At the Dolly Madison factory the soldiers were shown how donuts, cakes and other sweets are made into yummy delights. While they were there the soldiers were given free cakes or donuts and were talked to by many of the factory workers, who just happened to be celebrating Christmas in their own fashion.

Following the Dolly tour, the young travellers boarded the busses again for the trip upstate, to

Protective measure

National Parks Service guide Sarah Langston informs Fort Benning soldiers of what measures confederate guards used to guard against escapes by union prisoners. Here she explains the use of the cannon used outside walls of the prison.

Warm Springs, Ga for a tour of the Little White House.

To get into the spirit themselves, the soldiers sang Christmas carols on the way up to visit former President Franklin D. Roosevelt's summer white house.

"It was very interesting," commented Pvt. 2 Manuel Maldonado, 298th Signal Detachment. "People have a chance to get out of duty and have some fun. I got the chance to meet other people and enjoy myself with them."

Another soldier, Pvt. Samuel Ornelas, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, said. "It was a learning and somewhat exciting experience for me. I wouldn't have experienced it if I wasn't in the Army."

"I feel real good that they are showing us around and taking us on all of these tours,"he said. "Not only do we get to see new things, but we also get to meet different classes of people. I enjoyed the Little White House very much."

While the soldiers were at the Little White House, they were shown slides and a movie about FDR, his troubles, the reason behind the house and its location and the time period in which it all happened.

2nd Lt. Carlos Castro, D Company, 4th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade and Drill Sergeant Guadelope Cazares, also from the 4th Battalion, accompanied the soldiers on the two tours. Other soldiers that went came from the different major elements on post. Involved were soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade, the 36th Engineer group, The School Brigade, Headquarters Command, Law Enforcement Command, 34th Medical Battalion, the 498th Medical Company and the 298th Signal Detachment.

Providence Spring, created by lightning striking the ground, is one of the sites soldiers visited.

DIO helps family at Christmas

Christmas is a season for giving and sharing, a time for helping those less fortunate than ourselves.

Maj. John A. Battcher, chief of services and support division, Directorate of Industrial Operations promoted this idea which was enthusiastically supported by all branches of the division.

Through the Valley Rescue Mission a needy family in Columbus was located and sponsored by Services and Support Division. Several boxes of food, two boxes of clothings, and gift-wrapped toys for the family (four children ages 10 through 13) were collected.

One branch, Troop Issue Subsistence Activity, donated a $25.00 check to help the family toward the high cost of winter utility bills.

An additional collection of money was made just before the items were delivered to purchase a turkey and all the trimmings for Christmas dinner. This was another indication of the response and enthusiasm this project elicited from the employees of Services and Support Division.

Maj. William C. Thomas, deputy chief of the division, Barbara Halaby and Karen Waters, members of the division staff delivered the items to the family on Dec. 22.

This effort helped to bring enjoyment to what would have been a dismal Christmas for this needy family and made Christmas for the personnel of Services and Support Division a happy and personally rewarding experience.

MP unit returns from Fort Chaffee

The 988th Military Police Company has returned to Fort Benning after having been deployed to Ft. Chaffee, AK for over two months in support of the Cuban Refugee Resettlement Task Force. Upon arrival at Ft. Chaffee on Oct. 26, 81, the 988th and the 555th Military Police Company from Fort Lee, Va., functioned as the primary response forces in the event of escapes of refugees from the enclave. In the event of a disturbance inside the enclave which the Federal Protective Service could not effectively quell, the response force also reacted. The units remained in an alert status for four days at a time, and were capable of responding to any of the above situations within five minutes.

During the alert phase, the unit trained for such response by practicing civil disturbance, riot control procedures, cordon and search operations, and encirclement of the Fort Chaffee cantonment area with other military police units to intercept refugees who had breached the enclave barriers and were attempting to escape from the reservation.

On only one occasion did the unit have the occasion to respond to a "real life" situation, and this was on Nov. 7 when 11 refugees cut their way through the enclave fence and escaped. All were subsequently apprehended.

The deployment of the 988th MP Company to Fort Chaffee proved to be an extremely worthwhile venture for the unit. Mandatory type training for the unit was easily dispensed with. Physical training was conducted normally and the required monthly 12 mile road marches were made.

Due to the nature of MP shift work and varied commitments at Fort Benning, many personnel in the unit had not been forced to live in close confines or work together as closely as they had to at Fort Chaffee. Additionally, for the first time many of the company leaders, from squad leaders on up, had the opportunity of working with their assigned personnel on a "round-the-clock" basis. As a result the 988th Military Police Company has returned to Fort Benning a well trained and more cohesive unit.

1981: The year that was for For

January

Sgt. Philip G. Johnston of Company D, 197th Support Battalion, was named Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year. Johnston and his wife spent six free nights in Hawaii after he won the prestigious title.

Three members of Fort Benning's Junior Rifle Club broke national records shooting a standard rifle as a three-man team. William Haracourt, Ronald Wigger and David Cannella received certificates from the National Rifle Association with the title "National Records."

Thirty-six new members were inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame, including Col. Dennis J. Harron, assistant post commander and Col. Eugene Hawkins, then Airborne Department director.

Congressman Ike Skelton (D) from Missouri visited Fort Benning and said he was "very impressed" with the post. "I think that . . . the training you give here is first rate. There's none better in the world and I think the American people should know this."

Eddie Alexander, Fort Benning firefighter, was selected from 71 other firemen in the U.S. to receive the Heroism Award and a $100 check from Firehouse Magazine. He earned the award after saving a smoke inhalation victim from a burning apartment in Lavoie Manor.

The first Emergency Medical Technician course sponsored by the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, 34th Medical Battalion, ended and was so successful that Lt. Col. James Weiss, commander of the 2nd Combat Support Hospital, said it would continue for other medical personnel here.

More than 60 Army Community Services volunteers were honored at ceremonies held here.

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit began their 1981 shooting season on a winning note after taking seven victories in pistol matches here.

The Doughboys basketball team started its season with six straight wins.

February

Three soldiers from Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry (Mechanized), became the first to fire a new weapon system developed for today's Army. PFC Michael Miller, Pvt. David Wright and Pvt. Wendall Perry were the first to test fire the Viper.

Second Lt. John S. Emmerson was selected to receive the 29th Annual Robert P. Patterson Award.

The Doughgirls basketball team pulled out a 57-56 win over the Fort Rucker Flyerettes, who had defeated Benning earlier in the season. Although the Flyerettes came back to defeat Benning the next day, Coach Perry Graves said, "It's the best game the girls (Doughgirls) have played yet."

The Fort Benning Rugby Flyers started their season with one win and one loss against Georgia Tech.

Approximately 1,500 soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade participated in an Army Readiness Test Evaluation Program (ARTEP) in an area off Buena Vista Road. During the one-week ARTEP, traffic in the area had to be monitored by military police.

Nate Harris led the Doughboys basketball team with 35 points to help them take a 108-103 overtime win from the Moody Air Force Base team.

The 36th Engineer Group held its first group-level retreat ceremony. It gave the Group's soldiers a chance to honor Col. Michael F. Spiegelmir, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, before he departed Fort Benning in appreciation of what he's done for the Engineer Group.

The game billed as "the premier of Benning's football season" was played at Doughboy Stadium where the Rangers battled the Airborne for the Bronzed Beret. The near-capacity crowd watched the Airborne pull out a 12-6 victory over the Rangers in Fort Benning's first Beret Bowl.

Headquarters, Headquarters Battery, 2/10th Field Artillery, won the 197th Brigade basketball championship against the 72nd Engineers 61-45.

Fort Benning's boxing team came home from its first-ever FORSCOM tournament placing seventh out of 23 teams. Jeffrey Johnson and Rodrick Williams were selected to attend the All-Army boxing camp.

Sean Pruitt, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ken Pruitt, took the Georgia State Golden Gloves title in Atlanta.

Nearly 400 local Girl Scouts celebrated "Girl Scout International Day" at the Main NCO Club.

One of the few assault airstrips in the country was officially dedicated at Dekkar Air Assault Strip here by Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., then post commander. Members of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, built the dirt runway.

March

The U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit celebrated its 25th Organizational Anniversary here.

Sp4 Douglas Riemer, Headquarters Company, 2/69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, was named Post Soldier of the Quarter.

Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. reviews soldiers at change of command ceremony.

Hazards of clerk/ typist job

by Helen Butterfield, R.N.
Occupational Health Services

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) has been evaluating the occupational health problems related to typing and video display terminals (VDT) since 1975.

The NIOSH survey personnel expected to find radiation to be the major occupational hazard associated with VDTs.

What they found were tired employees with headaches, backaches, muscle pains and blurred vision. In short, employees were less efficient due to their physical ailments.

Here are a few tips to relieve the occupational problem associated with the VDT:

- Eliminate glare on the screen by drawing the curtains, pulling blinds, etc. This will minimize eye strain.
- Keep the screen free from dust and follow the manufacturers maintenance instructions.
- Give your eyes a rest. Don't read the newspaper or a romance novel during breaks.
- Have an annual eye exam. Some operators may need corrective lens for close viewing.

- Use a chair that can be adjusted up and down with an adjusted back support. Set the chair height so you look slightly down at the display terminal. The back support should keep the back straight.

If you can't sleep at night, feel irritable, nervous, tired with muscle pains, burning eyes, blurred vision and headaches, see if these five hints can help you feel better and work more efficiently.

Danny Krueger earns Eagle badge

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Danny Krueger are you ready to receive the charge I am going to give you," asked Maj. Donald Rogan, executive officer for the School Brigade?

"Yes," came Danny's reply from in front of the softly lit altar.

For Danny, this moment had actually begun six-years-ago on a train somewhere in Germany on his way home.

"I didn't join the Boy Scouts to become an Eagle initially," commented Danny. "When I first joined it was really for the fun and excitement that Scouting had to offer.

"Later on in my Scouting career, I reevaluated my own life and my goals," he said. "It was then that I wanted to become an Eagle Scout."

Late last year Danny, with a little help from some friends, began his Eagle project. He completed it earlier this year, but without the encouragement from his mother Danny wouldn't have seen his dream come true so soon. "Mom made me send in the paperwork," Danny said. "I was slow about it, but she put it to me this way, 'If you don't submit the application, you won't go on summer vacation this year,' I submitted the paperwork."

Danny was awarded his Eagle Scout at a presentation ceremony in the Sightseeing Chapel, Dec. 20, by Addison D. Davis, former chief of staff for Fort Benning.

Maj. Rogan, also a member of the Boy Scouts of America, was given the honor (duty) of charging Danny with his future responsibilities in life.

"I charge you Danny, to love your God, your country, your family and friends. I charge you to be your own person, and to be different," emphasized Rogan.

"But most of all, I charge you to be the master of your own fate Danny," Rogan said. "You decide—you choose."

Daniel S. Krueger resides with his mother Maryann (Micki) Krueger, and his step-father Capt. Anthony F. Krueger, S-4 officer, HHD 67th Maintenance Battalion, at 112 Zuckerman Ave., Fort Benning, Ga.

Maryann Krueger pins on her son's Eagle badge.

Using his father's sword, Danny cuts the first slice of cake.

Safety measures

The Safety Office has recently received several inquiries asking, "What can be done to cut down the speeding in the housing areas?"

Someone suggested that we put in speed bumps to slow the traffic; another said, "Let's put up more stop signs;" yet another wanted to stop thru traffic.

An analysis of the traffic citations given in the housing areas may come as a surprise to some, but not to all. Approximately 90 percent of all speeding tickets involve occupants of the housing areas where the citation is given.

Fatigues in town are unauthorized

USAIC Policy on the wear of these duty uniforms is published for information and compliance.

"Duty uniforms other than Army greens and tans may be worn off-post by personnel enroute to and from duty.

Convenience shopping stops are authorized, e.g., grocery stores, service stations, automobile repair to include warranty maintenance, and laundry/dry cleaning establishments.

These duty uniforms may also be worn to purchase at so called "Fast Food" eating establishments where food is picked up for consumption elsewhere, and at drive-in restaurants, so long as personnel remain in the vehicle. Under no conditions will motor fatigues or coveralls issued solely for motor pool use, and field uniforms worn with camouflage stick, or LBE, be worn off-post, except while enroute to and from duty.

Duty uniforms, other than Army greens and tans will not be worn off-post in places such as shopping centers and malls, theaters, bars, lounges, pool halls, billiard parlors, restaurants and eating establishments having dining rooms, municipal auditoriums, baseball parks and football stadiums."

Cyclists riding skills improve with training

Why are motorcycles accidents so deadly? The deciding factor may be the cyclist's poor riding skills, according to a recent University of Southern California study of 899 of these accidents.

According to the USC study, the typical motorcycle accident happens in a flash: riders have less than two seconds to make a quick turn, brake, or do both to avoid a sudden collision. Yet 32 percent of the riders involved in the accidents studied did nothing at all to evade the crash. Others made such frequent mistakes as overbraking at the rear wheel and underbraking at the front wheel. In only 17.1 percent of the accidents did the riders use both front and rear brakes.

The main reason for such poor evasive techniques, the study discovered, was because 92 percent of the cyclists lacked any formal or professional training. The best way to avoid such collisions or minimize their severity, is for cyclists to improve their riding skills through both formal training and frequent practice.

The USC study also offered this tip to cyclists who would like to improve their reaction time. In traffic experienced motorcyclists should ride with several fingers extended over the front brake level. In a high stress situation like the one just before a crash, these riders' natural reaction will be to brake. Inexperienced cyclists, on the other hand, typically grip the throttle more tightly in a panic situation. Ironically, the result is that they skid faster into the collision they sought to avoid.

Comedy play arriving soon

Is Amerigo Vespucci an alias? Did George Washington always tell Martha the truth? Was Napoleon Bonaparte really a farmer from Iowa? What do Thomas Jefferson and pelicans have in common? And what about Trixie???

These and other burning questions will be answered in "Heroes and Hard Cases," the hilarious "American Comedy" revue, produced and performed on national tour by the Alpha-Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America.

The show will be performed at the Fort Benning Officers Club Jan. 31 at 8 p.m. Prior to the show dinner will be served from 6 until 7:30 p.m.

Tickets will go on sale in the catering office, room 9 on Jan. 28, for $12.50. Tickets will be limited to 250 people so make your reservations early.

Holiday greetings

Radio station WDAK (K-Country) welcomes Fort Benning soldiers with gifts, songs, a buffet, and even the K-Country duck at Christmas! It was open house for the soldiers who were honored by the station as part of the "operation holiday" activities. The Hardaway High School string band played music for them. Inside the station soldiers were able to see how a radio show program is put together.

Veteran reminder

The Veterans Administration today reminded men and women recently discharged from military service that they must present carbon copy number four of their discharge certificate — not the original — when applying for VA benefits.

In general, eligibility for VA benefits requires discharge or release from military service under other than dishonorable conditions. This information is shown on the carbon copy.

VA said presentation of copy number four by the veteran will assure prompt processing of benefit applications. The agency receives another copy of the discharge certificate from the armed services, but this copy normally is not received within the time many veterans apply for benefits.

Soldiers earn Expert Field Medical Badges

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Expert Field Medical Badge (EFMB) test has the reputation as being tough and demanding both physically and mentally.

The EFMB test recently conducted by Plans, Operations and Training, Martin Army Community Hospital, upheld this reputation as only slightly over 50 percent (16 of 31) of the candidates who started the test were awarded the Expert Field Medical Badge.

The EFMB recognizes Army medical personnel for obtaining a high state of technical skill in field medical functions. To qualify for the badge the candidates successfully completed the rigorous requirements of the EFMB test which included among other things; a forced road march, written test, day and night compass course, litter obstacle test, field hygiene, military intelligence and evacuation of the sick and wounded.

The following personnel were awarded the Expert Field Medical Badge by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander:

- Lt. Col. Thomas W. Stanford, Jr.DC
- Capt. James J. JeromeMSC
- Capt. Alberto LugoDC
- Capt. Howard C. FroelichDC
- Capt. Larry S. BrannonDC

Members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, began building a replica of a man village to be used for military operations on an terrain (MOUT) training.

October

Byrone Hardy was selected as Fort Benning's Disabled Employee of the Year.

A nine-member squad from Fort Benning participated in the christening ceremony for the Infantry Cavalry Fighting vehicle at Fort Lee, Va. The vehicle was renamed the Bradley Fighting Vehicle after former General of the Army Omar N. Bradley.

The 608th Ordnance Company returned from a tour of Forces to Germany exercise.

Soldiers here learned to use a new missile system called TOW (Tubular-launched Optically-tracked Wire-guided Anti-armor missile).

The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, underwent an Emergency Deployment Readiness Exercise (EDRE).

The USAIC Safety Office conducted a safety promotional campaign directed toward the recognition of Fort Benning personnel who are observed adhering to safe practices.

A rifle-bayonet fighting course started at One Station Unit Training here.

The Youth Activities football league started with the Grasshopper League (6-8 years old), Termite League (9-10 years old) and the Pee Wee League (11-12 years old).

The largest applied solar facility in the United States is to be built at Fort Benning.

First Lt. Gary L. Miller was inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame and Bldg. 241 was named in his honor.

Thirty-nine soldiers here were selected by their units to tour Washington D.C. and to attend the opening of the 27th annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander, declared Fiscal Year '82 as the "Year-of-Progress" for Fort Benning.

November

World War I veteran Richard F. Pittman presented war mementos to the 58th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, during an honor parade for him. Pittman was also given the Purple Heart.

Lt. Gen. M. Collier Ross, deputy commander of the United States Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), Fort McPherson, Ga., visited FORSCOM units here.

More than 1100 runners, some from as far away as Cocoa Beach, Fla., crowded up to the starting line for the first National Infantry Museum five-mile race.

COHORT training starts at Fort Benning.

The fall women's softball season came to a finish when the Triple T's defeated the OC's by a close 10-9.

December

A ground-breaking ceremony was held here for the new multi-million dollar reception station behind Kimbro Gym at Sand Hill.

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. visited Fort Benning and recalled the history of the infantry soldier.

The Faith Christmas Run was held for the fourth consecutive year. A three-year-old was the youngest to attend.

The second annual "Operation Holiday," sponsored by the local chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA), in cooperation with local merchants, businesses and churches, was kicked off on the plaza level of the Columbus Government Center.

Editor's Note: All of the pictures shown have been collected over the entire last year. Some have appeared in the paper, while others didn't. The story was compiled from articles that have appeared in The BAYONET and prepared for this issue. The photos were taken by various members of The BAYONET staff, some who are already gone, and by photographers from the Ledger-Enquirer.

Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigades learn an art that finds another home in the Army's training manual, Bayonet training.

Fort Benning hosts the first National Infantry Museum race, which they hope to make an annual event.
