'Only the best for the best'

This air burst device is used to throw a simulated gas into the air to teach soldiers how to operate in a chemical environment.

By Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Down range the rusted and shot-up Armored Personnel Carrier (APC) stands out against the horizon like a wounded animal waiting to be put out of its misery.

Suddenly flames and smoke erupt around the age-old victim of the firing range.

As the sound of the explosion makes its way to your ears and the smoke clears, the APC is no longer there.

Behind you, the gunner rises from behind the sights of the Viper weapon system and smiles.

"Only the best for the finest," he says.

Standing beside our Infantrymen like a guardian angel to make sure they are supplied with the best equipment any Army would want is the United States Army Infantry Board (USAIB).

Testing equipment

Formed 78 years ago at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the Infantry Board moved here in December 1919.

"Our mission is to test any equipment that the Army wants tested," said SSgt. Joseph Jones, plans sergeant for USAIB. "Which means we conduct tests on just about anything an Infantryman can shoot, wear, carry, ride in, eat or otherwise use.

"Most common use items in the Army's inventory are also tested by us," Jones said. "You will notice our unit is established as a board and not as a directorate.

"This is because the man on top, the president, doesn't make final decisions on a piece of equipment. He makes recommendations to a directorate based upon the results of a test," Jones said.

"This recommendation comes after the president and the rest of the board meet and study the test results," he said. "But just like them, he has only one vote."

Just the facts

The three test divisions and headquarters element is made up of 32 officers, 1 warrant officer, 89 enlisted men and 55 civilians, most of whom are retired military men. The board falls under the control of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, USAIB.

"We just report the facts," said Lt. Col. Ray Culp, USAIB board member. "The designing agency makes all of the decisions after the tests are completed and the results are in.

"Right now we aren't conducting any tests," he said.

"The last test we conducted on a new anti tank weapon, the 'Viper,' was suspended March 5 because of an equipment malfunction," he said. "Now we have to wait and see if corrective action can be taken on the equipment before we can begin again.

"Most of the other tests we are conducting are in a holding pattern," Culp said. "But this is due to the fact that most of these tests were concluded and we are just waiting for the board's findings.

"One of the recent tests was on a new training device," Culp said. "USAIB has tested two types of plastic bullets.

"We haven't completed these tests because the 50 caliber prototypes haven't arrived yet," he said.

"However, the M-16 rounds are working fine," he said. "The only difference was we had to change the bolt carrier to adapt it to the plastic casing and the bullet. We used it on a 25-meter target," said Culp, "and the target markings are the same as that of a real service round.

"This makes it great because a unit doesn't have to take their people all of the way out to a training range to fire. It will be possible to fire in a small building someplace closer," said Culp. "This makes it a lot cheaper to train on the M-16 or qualify with."

An improved M-16, the new TOW 2, a smoke generator, a new gas mask and combat boots are among the new items that will be tested by the Infantry Board beginning in the near future.

The tests will be conducted here and at other installations around the southeastern region of the United States such as Redstone Arsenal, Ala. and Fort A. P. Hill, Va. and will involve members of the National Guard and Reserves as well as active Army personnel.

Keep eye on kids

TSA, FORT LEE, VA.--Do you know where your children are — while you're shopping in the commissary?

Customers are urged to keep children with them and under control while shopping in any Army commissary. Small children must ride in shopping carts so that they won't be tempted to handle or damage merchandise.

The installation commander decides if dependent children should be allowed in Army commissaries. They usually are. However, those at least 1-year old must have an identification card. The commissary officer may exclude a child from the commissary for improper behavior.

To avoid embarrassing situations and to ensure that services are equally available to all shoppers, make sure your child is near you and behaving properly while you're shopping.

A soldier lands on Fryar Field during a jump with his chemical suit and mask. Parachuting in a gas mask was also tested by the board.

Welcome home hug

ORLANDO, Fla. -- Resident ambassador Shamu the killer whale, gives former American hostage Lt. Col. David Roeder, USAF, a whale-sized greeting during his family's recent visit to Sea World of Florida. Col. Roeder is among several of the 52 former hostages who took advantage of the City of Orlando's invitation to enjoy a week in the Central Florida sunshine. Coordinated in cooperation with the Orlando Area Chamber of Commerce, each family receives complimentary air fare via Eastern Airlines, free hotel rooms and car rental, in addition to passes to area attractions. Sea World is between Orlando and Walt Disney World at I-4 and the Bee Line Expressway in Central Florida.

AUSA liason office in Bldg. 35 on post and by unit sergeant majors.

The Open House will begin with a Rangers in action show followed by skydiving and a military police dog exhibition. Benning units will provide displays and rides for the children.

There will be music, games and prizes to go along with a meal. Each major unit will select a woman to compete for the title of picnic queen. The title is won by the woman who sells the most "queen tickets." Each ticket is considered a note for that woman. The money raised is combined with the picnic funds.

Free transportation will be available to take people to the open house and picnic location.

Air Force Band

The U.S. Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants will be performing at the Three Arts Theater Monday at 8 p.m.

The critically acclaimed band, conducted by Col. Arnald D. Gabriel, is known as America's International Musical Ambassadors. More than 35 million people have attended national and international concerts presented by the band.

Tickets to the concert are free, but limited to four tickets per request. For tickets write to:

Air Force Band

Columbus, Ga. 31902

Request for tickets must be received by April 1. There will be no reserved seats.

Car Wash to be held

A fund raising car wash will be held April 11 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Infantry Hall (Bldg. 4) East parking lot. It is sponsored by the members of Company A, 1/58th Infantry Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate).

The proceeds from the car wash will be donated to the Army Emergency Relief (AER) fund. Advance tickets are $1.50 ($2 the day of the car wash at the wash site) and can be obtained by calling 2nd Lt. Tollie Strode at 544-2468/3217.

It will be $1 extra to have a Car waxed.

OWC School of Music

Airborne 5000

The Airborne 5000 demonstration is held each Monday at 10:30 a.m. on Eubanks Field in the bleachers south of the towers. The demonstration gives an overview of basic Airborne training. The public is invited.

Uchee Creek

Like a place to get away from it all? Try the Uchee Creek Recreation Area behind Lawson Army Airfield. It is open Monday through Thursday from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. and Friday through Sunday from 7 a.m.-7 p.m.

The recreation area is a good place to go fishing, boating, canoeing, pick-nicking and camping. Canoes can be rented from Morale Support Activities Division. A bait and tackle shop near the boat ramp area sells refreshments, fishing licenses and bait.

A recreation hall can be rented for $25. Call the Morale Support Activities Division office at 545-7282, 10 days in advance for a reservation.

OWC Board

The Officers' Wives Club Board meeting will be held Monday at 9:15 a.m. in the Normandy Room of the Officers' Club.

'Running Chef'

The Fort Benning Post Exchange Food Branch will expand its mobile unit food branch in the near future. The 'Running Chef' will be establishing additional routes for any area or section desiring service. The basic menu will consist of sandwiches, snacks, pastries and soft drinks. For service call 682-0573.

Art Festival

The second annual Infantry Art Festival will be held tomorrow from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. inside the Officers' Wives Club Activities Center, Bldg. 1234 (located on Ingersoll Street and Yeager Street.) Admission is free.

'Grocery Bag'

The University of Georgia Extension Service is sponsoring a food shopping exhibit called the 'Grocery Bag.' The exhibit was developed to help people stretch their food dollars. The 'Grocery Bag' will be at Columbus Square Mall Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

Hunt Club

The Hunt Club, near Stonewall Road and Marne Road on Main Post, is open everyday except Wednesdays. The stable has 40 acres of riding trails.

The club offers lessons for children and adults. Children's lessons are given on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and adult lessons are taught on Thursday and Friday.

The trails that wind around the wooded areas between the Hunt Club and Martin Army Community Hospital are open to riders. The club has 13 horses that are rented out to non-members as available for $4.50 an hour.

To become a member there is a $17 fee. Members may rent horses for $3 per hour or may board their own horses at the stable.

Was Last 5-star General

Gen. Omar Bradley dies at 88

WASHINGTON — General of the Army (GA) Omar Bradley, who led a million U.S. soldiers in World War II and was the nation's last five-star general, died Wednesday at the age of 88, according to an announcement by Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. and Army Chief of Staff (CSA) Gen. E. C. Meyer in Washington.

According to a story that appeared in the Columbus ENQUIRER, he died at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York City with his wife, Kitty, at his side, said Secretary Marsh and CSA Meyer.

A hospital spokeswoman said, "Bradley was taken to the emergency room at 7:15 p.m. in a private car with his wife and three aides." Spokeswoman Anne Burton said Bradley was "essentially dead on arrival," and was pronounced dead after efforts to revive him failed.

According to an Army News Service (ARNews) release, he died from cardiac arrest.

GA Bradley, the nation's last surviving five-star general and one of five Army generals to achieve that rank during World War II, made his last public appearance at President Reagan's inauguration.

Tall, scholarly, soft-spoken, Bradley was regarded as one of the greatest field generals of World War II. Known as the "Doughboys' General" because he was thrifty with the blood and lives of his men, the master of military tactics was proud of his record of winning battles with minimum losses.

GA Bradley was commandant here from March 4, 1941 to Feb. 2, 1942. He served two other tours at Fort Benning; as a student in 1925 and an instructor in 1929.

According to a report in the Columbus LEDGER, President Reagan paid tribute to GA Bradley as a soldier of "courage, integrity, professionalism and, above all, honor." He said his "conspicuously brilliant leadership... thrust him to the top of the U.S. military command."

Secretary Marsh said, "General Bradley's passing is a loss not only for this nation but for all freedom-loving people of the world. His service exemplified our nation's highest standard of leadership. He takes his place in history as a great patriot, a peerless military leader and an individual dedicated to the cause of peace in the world."

CSA Meyer remarked, "Gen. Bradley was truly one of our greatest soldiers. With his passing, the Army and our nation have lost one of the most devoted and selfless men to ever wear the military uniform of the United States. Today's soldiers will miss him."

GA Bradley distinguished himself on many occasions during World War II. He led the U.S. Second Corps to victories in Tunisia and Sicily and was senior commander of American ground forces in the mid-1944 Anglo-American invasion of Europe.

Germany lost the battle of France when Bradley out-generaled the Nazis' best with a spectacular breakthrough west of St. Louis.

From leadership of the U.S. First Army, he went to command of the Twelfth Army Group — originally composed of the First, Third and Ninth Armies and later augmented by the Fifteenth — and had an outstanding part in pushing the Germans back into their homeland.

Bradley remained on active duty and had been in the Army almost 70 years, more than any other U.S. serviceman and spent the last 30 years as General of the Army.

To honor his memory, the national flag at all installations, activities and vessels of the Department of Defense will be flown at half-staff until retreat on the day of burial.

Fort Benning will honor GA Bradley today at noon with a 19-gun salute in front of Infantry Hall, Bldg. 4. Plans for a memorial service next week will be announced later.

Besides his widow, the former Kitty Buhler, Bradley is survived by one daughter, Elizabeth Bradley Dorsey of Washington, D.C.

Brave medics honored

Expert Field Medical Badge (EFMB) training was recently completed here to prepare soldiers for EFMB testing next week. Next week has also been proclaimed Field Medic Week by Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr.

In his proclamation Maj. Gen. Grange says that field medics have served with distinction from Concord to Vietnam. The following is only one example of the distinction with which field medics have served their country.

On June 2, 1969 Sp4 Joseph G. La Poine, Jr. was serving as a medical aidman with the 2nd Squadron, 17th Cavalry, 101st Airborne Division in Quang Tin Province, Republic of Vietnam.

As his patrol was advancing from the helicopter landing zone through a valley it encountered heavy automatic weapons fire from an enemy force entrenched in bunkers. Two soldiers were wounded by the initial burst of enemy fire.

La Poine ran forward through heavy fire to assist his fallen comrades. In order to reach them he was forced to crawl directly in view of an enemy bunker.

Members of his unit tried to provide covering fire as La Poine administered first aid to one man while shielding the other with his body. He was hit by fire from the bunker but continued to perform his lifesaving duties. Again he was hit and knocked to the ground.

With strenuous effort he moved back into position to continue first aid.

An exploding enemy grenade mortally wounded all three men.

La Poine was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his conspicuous gallantry, intrepidity and selflessness.

First sergeants are magicians

By Bernardina Barini

Public Affairs Office
Griffiss Air Force Base

WASHINGTON — Back in the "brown shoe days", the first sergeant was the baddest dude in the outfit. He ran the unit with an iron fist, and it wasn't unusual for him to give a satisfactory answer to an unsatisfactory question behind the barracks. He was usually feared, often respected and sometimes disliked.

Today the first sergeant, "top" or "first shirt" is the man or woman who is the commander's right hand.

First sergeants are magicians. They have to be in many places at the same time. If they're not in the orderly room or inspecting the barracks they might be down in the motor pool checking out their soldiers, at the NCO club making final plans for the unit party or in a staff meeting. They also can be found attending courts-martial as witnesses, checking morale in duty sections, consoling a sergeant who didn't get promoted, counseling a soldier on a traffic violation or answering a letter of indebtedness from an angry creditor.

They are engineers, able to fix barracks' washing machines, dryers, buffers, plugged commodes or urinals.

They are fire inspectors, garbage inspectors, monitors of pictures in barracks rooms and radio or television experts.

They must be interior decorators, able to make a 20-by-40 foot day room look like the lobby of an exclusive hotel.

They must be versatile speakers, able to speak gently to commanders, roughly to troublemakers and pleasantly to civilians. They must be even better listeners.

They must be able to work all day, all night, Saturdays, Sundays, and still keep a cheerful, highly motivated attitude.

They must set examples. At times, contributing generously to charities to buying rounds, yet still have 20 clean uniforms.

First sergeants are referral agencies, buyers, sellers, technicians, electricians, physicians, new dealers, old dealers, fast dealers, plumbers, carpenters and wizards at coaching any sport.

What really is a first sergeant? That's a secret known by every person wearing that diamond: a first sergeant is above all a professional.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

The BAYONET article provided some very good information about amateur radio and amateur radio operators (hams). I would like to present some additional information about amateur radio.

During the Hurtsboro disaster, the Columbus Amateur Radio Club provided immediate emergency communications to the area, as both power and telephone systems were knocked out.

The purpose of these communications was to provide emergency services, like Civil Defense, with reliable communications and to pass health and welfare information to and from individuals in the area. At the same time, hams were providing information about the weather, in case another tornado might develop. By providing additional eyes to the National Weather Service, better storm information was provided to the community.

A word of thanks should be given to the Columbus Amateur Radio Club and to all hams who provided vital communication services. These emergency services are free and, better yet, they are usually the only reliable communications available until power and telephone services are restored.

The club constantly extends an invitation to anyone who is interested in learning about amateur radio. Meetings are held the second and fourth Thursdays each month at 7:30 p.m. These meetings are held at the quonset hut next to the food stamp distribution center on Buena Vista Road.

The club also presents free classes for those interested in getting an amateur radio license.

More information about the Columbus Amateur Radio Club meetings or classes may be obtained by contacting the club at 561-5544 after 6 p.m.

Crew chiefs valued above diamonds

By Brian Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In Vietnam their talents were worth more than the value of a diamond, their life expectancy was less than three minutes.

Today their talent is still worth more than that of a diamond, and the pilots who fly with them are very grateful.

"They are something special," said Sgt. Ronaldo R. Moyer, 121st Aviation Company. "They" are U.S. Army crew chiefs.

"He knows basically everything about everything involved with the operation and maintenance of a helicopter," said Moyer.

A crew chief begins his career at Fort Rucker, Ala. "We go through an 10-week course, which basically teaches you about the aircraft," said Moyer.

"The classes that we attend go into avionics, electronics, prop and rotor, and everything else about a chopper," he commented. "We even work on a bird while we are there."

"These are just basics," he said. "If a helicopter needs to go in for major repairs, we send it, or the piece of equipment, to the shop that does that specific type of repair work."

As far as flying goes, chiefs fly about 90 percent of the time the helicopter flies.

"If the pilots are doing nap of the earth (NOE) or some other type of training flight, we have a choice as to whether or not we want to fly," said Moyer.

"We are also responsible to train the new crew chiefs as they come in," explained Moyer. "You see, we spend 90 days on the floor (working in the maintenance shop) before we can join a flight platoon. And we only get there if a slot opens for our type job."

Chiefs are responsible for more than just the maintenance and care of their birds. "We are also responsible for keeping an eye on things while the bird is in flight," he commented.

"We make sure that the area is clear of any and all obstacles that might bring a chopper down, when taking off and landing," said Moyer. "We also keep an eye on the instruments for the pilot and co-pilot if they are involved in something else, such as navigating or control of the plane."

"Sometimes they aren't able to maintain a watch on everything and fly too, so we help watch," he said.

The people that fly on the helicopter are part of the chief's responsibility too. "As a crew chief we make sure that all of the internal equipment and personnel are stowed properly," said Moyer. "A Huey UH-1H can lift an external load of 6,500 pounds, so we have to make sure that this external load is slung properly also."

Working long and irregular hours is part of a crew chief's job. Some may say that he gets over but a crew chief has got to be pretty good to make sure that the Army gets where it's going when the time comes. Ask any pilot.

Crew Chief Sgt. Ronaldo R. Moyer, 121st Aviation Company, makes a pre-flight check.

Sgt. Moyer puts an oil screen back on the front end of the engine as part of his maintenance.

Eufaula tours impressive

Story and photos by Bill Powell

USAIC Public Affairs Office

It stood as an example of the best there was. It was classic, graceful, trim, beautiful, and over $100,000 had been spent to make it that way.

The year was 1906 and the object of so much delight was the home of Eli Shorter and his wife, Wylena. Today it's referred to as the "Shorter Mansion" in the nearby city of Eufaula, Ala. Eufaula is the site of the annual Eufaula Pilgrimage. This event gives tourists as well as hometown folks a chance to see historic old homes such as the "Shorter Mansion."

Unusual furnishings and objects of great age are the rule as visitors progress through the homes graciously opened by their current owners. Some of the homes look as though they have been frozen in time and have very few reminders of the modern world of today. Others feature a blend of the old and new.

Usually members of the families now living in the historic homes describe its contents to their guests. They will explain the history of a home or when "great grandpa Billy" bought this piece of furniture or that many homes passed from generation to generation. The dishes, the chandeliers, the stained glass windows; all have a story behind them and the beauty of many were further enhanced by the Candlelight Tour which took place every night of the Pilgrimage.

However, homes with antiques and history aren't the only activities. After viewing the homes and all their antique objects, a visit to the antique show at the National Guard Armory seemed the perfect way to spend an hour or two. Looking at all the objects available for purchase was a temptation many can't resist.

Equally irresistible was the sidewalk art show featuring the works of many local artists and the many square dance, band and pottery exhibitions available throughout the pilgrimage.

James Clark of Eufaula demonstrates his ability with clay as he crafts pottery for display at one of the many exhibits of arts and crafts at the Eufaula Pilgrimage.

The elegance and style of the homes in Eufaula was captured in this look at the dining room of the Shorter Mansion, now home of the Eufaula Heritage Association.

Eufaula's Sabrie Graves wears a dress duplicating the elegant dresses of earlier times in the south. Although the dress looks heavy it is actually very light and is supported by lightweight hoops of wire sewn in a series to support the material of the skirt.

VA Q & A

Q — I am confined to a wheelchair and have been told I am probably eligible for a Veterans Administration clothing allowance. What is the clothing allowance?

A — The clothing allowance is provided to veterans who must use a prosthetic or orthopedic appliance, including a wheelchair, as a result of a service connected disability. Currently, this annual allowance is $274.

Q — I am now receiving social security and am covered by Medicare. Can I still maintain coverage under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Veterans Administration?

A — No. Any individual who is eligible for medical care under Medicare is not eligible for CHAMPVA benefits.

Q — How much will the Veterans Administration reimburse the family of a deceased veteran who purchases a headstone in lieu of a government issued headstone?

A — The VA currently pays $59 toward the cost of a non-government headstone for placement in any cemetery other than a national cemetery.

Library offers wide selection

The Main Post Library offers a wide range of academic, aesthetic, and recreational activities to soldiers and their families.

There is an extensive popular reading collection, fiction and nonfiction; a large general fiction collection, including short stories, westerns, science fiction and mysteries.

The library also offers comprehensive academic and reference collection with research capabilities for the aspiring student. It also has typewriters, recordings, stereo listening, a large children's collection, and a periodical collection embracing a variety of interests and representing all areas of the country.

"The Officers Wives" by Thomas Fleming, focuses on the lives of three West Point graduates and their wives as they are launched from a June graduation to the front lines in Korea.

"Tar Baby" by Toni Morrison, brings a stranger into the lives of five people living in a beautiful house on a Caribbean Island. It depicts how the conflicts and dramas wrought by social and cultural circumstances must ultimately be played out in the realm of the heart - interracial, powerful, fascinating, mysterious.

"Stephen King's Danse Macabre" is a combination of fantasy and autobiography. King talks about excursions into horror as exemplified in today's motion pictures, television and literature - as well as binding as a novel.

Women volunteer for community

By Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Judy Marciw and Karen Kennedy are two women who care about the military community in which they live.

Judy cares enough to take on the responsibility of being the community mayor of McGraw Manor and both women are Army Community Service volunteers concerned with the activities going on in their neighborhood.

Karen commented, "We have a hard time getting people more involved in the community. We definitely need more volunteers. Our upcoming community fair is a good example. We don't have enough people helping. The last community disco we had was for adults and kids both. Many adults came by but only to drop their children off and then leave. When the community has a disco or dance it's for all ages not just for the children. We want the parents to get involved too. According to regulation, we have to have so many adults present at these dances. It's something like one male adult for 15 children at a disco and one for every ten children at a dance."

It seems like there is always something that needs to be done at the community life center. Karen says, "Right now we could use another receptionist. We had one. She worked a couple of weeks, went on vacation and never came back. We're not asking people for a lot of their time. We're asking for help. Not five days a week. Maybe one afternoon a week or just a couple of days a month. The little time people can give really adds up. A lot of women want bingo to come back but we can't get it back because we only have one person willing to run it. This one person cannot run it every week because she has a job. People ask us why don't we do this or why don't we do that, but then they don't want to get out there and work for it."

There is a welcoming committee at McGraw Manor. It used to have six people. Now there's only four. Karen says, "There are 972 quarters in this area and the community is lucky if they can come up with twenty volunteers - and most of these are giving up three and four hours a day just to keep what we have in the community going."

The volunteer people who donate so much of their time are busy people too. Judy Marciw has two school age children to take care of plus she is a girl scout leader. Judy is also the one responsible for turning out the McGraw Manor newsletter informing residents about what's happening in their neighborhood. Saturday, McGraw Manor is having its 'Spring Fling', the community's annual spring fair. For Judy Marciw, Karen Kennedy and the other ACS volunteers who donate their time it's been a busy week.

Scholarships available to high school seniors

The Fort Benning Officers Wives Club is giving $7,000 in scholarships to college-bound seniors this spring. Applicants must be dependents of active duty military personnel. The application forms have been in all local high schools for several weeks and the OWC must receive them by today.

The top award of $1500 will go to the most outstanding candidate. There will also be five $1000 awards and a $500 award is available to an outstanding student wishing to attend a Vo-Tech institution.

Students will be judged on their high school grades, leadership abilities, extracurricular activities and SAT scores. For further information see your high school counselor and call 689-5710.

Gianelli gets nomination for assistant secretary position

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has announced he will nominate William R. Gianelli to be assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works).

Gianelli has been a consulting civil engineer in California since 1973. He served as chairman, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, in 1978-80, and California Director of the National Water Resources Association in 1967-73. In 1973-76 he served as a presidentially appointed member of the National Commission on Water Quality.

Gianelli was senior partner in the consulting-engineer firm of Gianelli and Murray from 1960 to 1967. For five years previously he worked for the California State Department of Water Resources, first as staff engineer and special assistant to the director and then as district engineer of the southern district. From 1941-45 he served in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Gianelli was born in Stockton, Calif., on Feb. 19, 1919. He graduated from the University of California in 1941. Married with two children, he lives with his family in Monterey, Calif. (ARNews)

Get clothing value for less

By Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There's a good reason to buy military clothing from the U.S. Army Clothing Sales Store here — to save money!

Since clothing sales has a low overhead, and buys in big volume they can help put some of that hard earned money you would have spent elsewhere back into your pocket.

Several bargains really stand out:

- The Army's new green shirt sells for as much as $10 elsewhere. At clothing sales the cost is $4.25.
- The long-sleeve shirt sells for $4.50.
- The price of permanent press fatigues is another example of substantial savings. Normally, they sell for approximately $19 a set at the post exchange, however, they sell for $12.60 a set at clothing sales.

Any clothing items the Army issues can be purchased at the store. There is also a limited amount of TA-50 issue items on hand. These can be bought to replace lost or damaged items the soldiers have previously been issued.

All active duty, retired military and their families are able to purchase items from clothing sales. Military foreign nationals may also buy personal items for themselves only. Also, reservists and national guardsmen, while on active duty, can buy from store. A set of orders showing they are on active duty is required.

The store also issues military clothing to 77 reserve and ROTC units across the country. Bill Lincoln, assistant manager, said, "We probably issue more than we sell. People wonder why we run out of certain items like the Army's new green shirts. They don't know that besides supplying them, we always have reserve units that come in here while on active duty who pick up a lot of the green shirts.

"The Army's new black raincoat is popular because it is a replacement for the overcoat and raincoat as well. It's water repellent and has a zip out liner. So your talking about a new item that a soldier can buy which serves both purposes, overcoat and raincoat," he added.

There are some approaching wear-out replacement dates of certain military uniform items soldiers should be aware of. The women's cord uniform will become outdated for wear after Sept. 30. It's replacement is the women's AG 388 uniform.

soldiers will be able to wear regular fatigues and fatigue caps until Sept. 30, 1985. However, their replacement, the camouflaged battledress uniform and matching cap is expected to be in the supply system by Oct. 1 of this year. Soldiers must have one battledress uniform on Oct. 1, 1982, two on Oct. 1, 1983, three on Oct. 1, 1984 and four on Oct. 1, 1985.

The men's tan uniform and poplin shirt being worn with the green uniform will be unauthorized after Sept. 30, 1985. The Army's new short sleeved and long sleeved green shirt now in supply are their replacement.

DON'T WAIT TILL YOU'RE OUT TO FIND OUT WHAT YOU'VE GOT.

A lot of good soldiers make the mistake of leaving the Army without realizing what they really had. One soldier who took the time to sit down and figure out what the Army had to offer was Sgt. Nancy Somerville, 591st MP Company, Fort Bliss, Texas.

"Being an Investigator is something I always wanted to do. As I came to the end of my first enlistment, I found out it would take 10 years to become a civilian Investigator. In the Army, I got what I wanted by reenlisting for it."

There are opportunities for advancement in the Army that can come a lot more quickly than in civilian life. Last year, in fact, over 5,000 soldiers who left the Army came back in. So before you make a decision to get out, have a talk with your Reenlistment NCO. It's the easy way to find out what you've got and how far you can go in the Army.

KEEP A GOOD SOLDIER IN THE ARMY. REENLIST.

Easter sunrise service to be held at Hite Bowl

The annual Easter Sunrise Service will be held April 19 at the Hite Bowl near Fryar Drop Zone. Chaplain (Col.) Charles J. McDonnell, a former post chaplain here, will give the Easter message.

McDonnell is presently a student at the War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa. and is staff chaplain designee for the U.S. Army Europe.

A combined choir from chapels on post and the 283rd Army Band will be participating in the service. The Follow Me dining facility will serve coffee, doughnuts and juice after the service.

All major commands are expected to participate or support the service with the exception of the Infantry Training Brigade which will hold its own services. The School Brigade and Airborne Department will provide ushers to highlight the historic significance of the Hite Bowl.

The bowl was reportedly used as a troop entertainment center during World War II and later for some airborne graduation ceremonies. Boy scouts have held camporees in the bowl and Easter Sunrise Services have been held there.

The bowl was renovated by the Airborne Department in 1976 for a graduation which also honored the original airborne test platoon. The test platoon gathered there for their first reunion.

Built in 1942, it didn't receive its name until 1943. It was named after Lt. Col. James C. Hite, one time commander of the 1st Battalion, 515th Parachute Infantry.

Dress for the service will be casual and fatigues may be worn. Bring lawn chairs if you wish. A ground cover will be provided for anyone who wants to sit on the ground.

In case of rain, the service will be held in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, at 7 a.m.

At 6:30 a.m. three buses will be leaving from the Infantry Center Chapel for those who wish a ride to the service. Directional signs will be placed along the route starting at the main gate and at the end of the by-pass and Dixie Road.

Statue missing from stadium?

Photomontage by Bill C. Walton

Missing statue?

Anybody seen a lost statue or a model thereof? This photomontage shows the entrance to Doughboy Stadium, as originally planned, with a bronze statue of an infantryman flanked by two men in athletic uniforms. As the dimensions of the proposed statue have not been found, the proportions of the statue and entrance gate are not necessarily correct.

By Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Lost- A model of a bronze statue that was designed for the entrance of Doughboy Stadium.

Last seen- Late 1934.

Reward- Increase the history of Fort Benning and benefit future generations.

Most people here are familiar with the history of Doughboy Stadium- that it was paid for by soldiers' donations, built by soldier labor and dedicated to soldiers' use. But how many are aware that the original design called for a bronze statue of an infantryman flanked by a football player and a trackman over the main entrance.

According to the Nov. 23, 1934 Benning Herald newspaper, the idea started with Lt. Col. Elemer F. Rice, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry. At his request, an officer designed a clay model for above the stadium entrance. A photograph of the model shows that the original idea was changed since the infantryman is flanked on his right by a baseball player instead of the trackman.

The clay model's designer is unknown. The only clue to his identity is the inscription "Designed by JRW" on the base of the model. The size of the clay model or the proposed bronze statue could not be determined.

Apparently, the project ran aground due to lack of funds and since after 1934 no further mention has been found of the statue or clay model.

The model of the statue could very well still exist with the owner unaware what an important piece of Fort Benning's history he has. It would be a valuable addition to the collection of the National Infantry Museum, according to Dick Grube, museum curator. Anyone having any information on the model or the proposed statue is asked to call the Fort Benning Public Affairs Office at 545-2236 or the National Infantry Museum at 545-2958.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,400 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,400 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits.

I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX.

I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve.

I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

New system improves service

The Directorate of Facilities Engineering (DFE) has found a new way to improve customer service. DFE's work reception branch recently installed a new system to monitor incoming phone calls.

The data entry system resembles a television screen and is called a terminal display unit. The unit lets each work order clerk get into the system and handle incoming calls from customers who need service or repairs.

The system processes and prints service orders for distribution to facilities engineering work crews.

"We're here to serve the customer," said Sally Enke, the chief of work order reception. "With this new equipment we can do that better."

Mary Reynolds explained, "We can answer more customer calls now because the units eliminate the need for hand-written service orders."

"The new service is better because it reminds us to ask questions," said Debra Myles, referring to the unit's ability to display questions that should be asked of customers.

Work order clerk Ruby Coate said, "During my twenty years of civil service I've never worked in an office where I've seen so much improvement in such a short time. We're pleased we can serve customers better."

DFE's incoming telephone lines have been increased from two to five. If lines are busy the equipment asks the customers to hold and plays music while they wait. "The music really helps. We don't have to ask people to hold," said work order clerk, Louise Simmons.

The work reception branch serves over 4,000 family housing units, 280 troop barracks and all the other facilities and buildings on post. The branch handles about 300 calls a day at 545-5181.

"The work reception branch is probably the single most important element in the directorate," said Col. John F. Hatch, the Director of Facilities Engineering. "It is the point of direct contact with our customers. It's important that the people who work here have pleasant working conditions and maintain a positive and friendly attitude toward the customers. We have improved their working conditions. It is my hope that the attitude and spirit of DFE are reflected in the responses received when customers dial 545-5181."

The new equipment was added to serve customers better but there are three things customers should do to improve the service they receive.

- Know the building number when calling for service.

- Attend a self-help school to know the proper work to request.

- Know the requestor identification code for troop area calls.

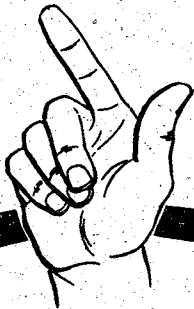

Louise Simmons, work order receptionist, DFAE, operates one of the new video display terminals that help speed up responses to work order requests telephoned in by any of the units or families on post.

Respect everyone's human dignity

Sexual harassment is defined as unwelcome, sexually-related, obscene or suggestive language, gestures, coercion, humiliation, embarrassment or physical contact directed towards a female. The term "unwelcome" is determined by the recipient of the harassment.

Sexual harassment is a form of misconduct that undermines the very integrity of relationships between soldiers. Therefore, All soldiers must be allowed to live and work in an environment free from unwanted and unsolicited sexual overtures.

Col. Ward
Provost Marshal

Sexual harassment can occur at almost any place on Fort Benning — PX, clubs, commissary, theaters, barracks, work areas, recreation facilities and dining halls. It can occur on a continuous basis, day and night, whenever female soldiers are present. All women can be targets of sexual harassment. It is likely to increase significantly if the woman is young, attractive or alone. Sexual harassment tends to escalate after duty hours when the chain of command isn't around.

There are several types of sexual harassment:

•Verbal Abuse. Sexual, verbal harassment is the most prevalent form of sexual harassment in the Army. It ranges from the less severe "Hey, Baby" and whistles, to the more vulgar "Jody" cadences, to the worst cases of outright filthy language yelled from the barracks windows or by small groups of soldiers standing by a corner or a barracks entrance.

Profanity is also a form of verbal abuse. Profanity used toward or in the vicinity of a large majority of soldiers who do not accept or condone it is embarrassing, humiliating and degrading. Some other commonly occurring forms of verbal sexual harassment: male soldiers calling females "Honey" or "Baby" rather than addressing them by their rank or last name; male soldiers questioning women about their personal (sexual) lives; male soldiers wearing T-shirts with sexual language or actions printed on them.

Airlines extend deadline

WASHINGTON — Seventeen airlines offering the 50-percent discount have extended the fare past March 31, 1981. In addition, two more airlines — Air Florida and Altair — have joined the program, say officials of the Military Traffic Management Command.

Only active duty Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard personnel on leave or pass, traveling at their own expense, are eligible for the discount. Personnel completing travel within seven days after date of discharge are also eligible. They must present separation orders to buy tickets.

Airlines taking part in the discount program, their expiration dates and routes on which the reduced fares are available are listed below:

AIRLINE	EXPIRATION DATE	ROUTES
Air Florida	Indefinite	All Domestic
Air Midwest	Indefinite	All Domestic
Air New England	Indefinite	All Domestic
Altair	June 16, 1981	All Domestic
American	Sept. 30, 1981	All Domestic
Aspen	Indefinite	All Domestic

Braniff	Indefinite	Selected
Continental	Sept. 30, 1981	Selected
Delta	Indefinite	All Domestic
Eastern	Indefinite	All Domestic
Northwest	Aug. 31, 1981	All Domestic
Ozark	Indefinite	All Domestic
Pan Am	Indefinite	All Domestic
Piedmont	Indefinite	All Domestic
Republic	Indefinite	All Domestic
TWA	Sept. 30, 1981	All Domestic
USAIR	Indefinite	All Domestic
United	Sept. 30, 1981	All Domestic
Western	Indefinite	Selected

Commanders, traffic managers and individual travelers should become familiar with how these fares apply to insure continuation of the program isn't jeopardized by either willful or accidental abuses.

MTMC officials also suggest that travelers shop around for the lowest fares. The furlough fares offer good savings, but there may be restrictions on length of stay and ticket-purchase deadlines, depending on the airline. (ARNews)

• Physical Abuse. That is, improper physical contact. Female soldiers must reduce the potential for sexual harassment by rebuking those who call them "Hon," put an arm on their shoulder, or proposition them. It may not be easy to tell one's boss, "Sir, I would rather be called Specialist Jones," or to reach up and take his hand from around one's waist. Female soldiers must assert themselves and insist upon the respect due them as soldiers and human beings. This will establish a firm understanding among co-workers and will readily be accepted by the majority of men.

• Improper Sexual Contact. Closely related to physical abuse, it includes: attempting to kiss a woman or pinching or patting her; grabbing a woman by the arm and pulling her close or into a sitting position on the male soldier's lap; and standing much closer when talking to a woman than would be normal when talking to a man.

• Indecent Actions And Gestures. Typical cases might include: men lowering their trousers to tuck in their shirts in the presence of women; men knocking on or trying to look through the windows of female billets; men "accidentally" walking into female rooms, latrines or showers.

• Coercion. Probably the most serious form of sexual harassment, it is the use of one's official position to demand sexual favors from a subordinate.

Sexual harassment can be stopped on the spot by setting the offender straight with words directly to the point. If this fails, a formal complaint should be surfaced with the chain of command. It may not be easy, but harassment will continue unless positive action is taken. Everyone must act as a competent, professional soldier at all times and treat their fellow soldiers (male or female) with the respect they are due.

The Army's policy demands respect for human dignity. It is the responsibility of every soldier and leader to insure that any instances of sexual harassment are dealt with swiftly and fairly, and to promote a climate within the Army that will not tolerate such conduct.

Airborne ROTC take refresher

By Don Rhodes

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Airborne qualified college students were here Friday to receive refresher jump training from the Airborne Department.

The training was a prelude to their participation in a 24-hour field training exercise at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. tomorrow and Sunday.

The 36 men and women, Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) Cadets from seven Georgia colleges and universities and also from Florida State University, have previously attended airborne school during summer vacations from their respective colleges. In order to take part in the training exercise they were required to refresh their basic airborne skills.

Included tower jumps

The training included jump commands, practicing parachute landing falls and jumping from the 34-foot tower.

Eight ROTC cadre members from the colleges were also receiving refresher training Friday. They will be jumpmasters for the training exercise.

Students and cadre from Georgia Tech, Atlanta University Center, Kennesaw College, Georgia Military College and Georgia State conducted a similar exercise last year and will be participating again this year.

Southern students

This is the first year for North Georgia College, Florida State and Columbus College.

Lt. Col. Robert A. Rasch, Professor of Military Science (PMS), Columbus College said he thought the exercise would make the ROTC students' morale soar.

"It takes a lot of coordination but it's good, dynamic training; it's exciting to the cadets," added Lt. Col. David B. Garvin, PMS at Georgia Tech.

Off to Eglin

The students will be flown to Eglin by Air Force aircraft from Dobbins Air Force Base. Georgia cadets will fly out of Dobbins while Florida State cadets will leave from Tallahassee.

year colleges are given a mber of quotas for their dents to attend airborne and urses. Seven of the male cadets here Friday from Georgia Tech were selected to attend Ranger school this summer. All are third-year cadets and are attending the Ranger School instead of going to thee normal ROTC summer camp.

The cadets must complete all the prerequisites for the training just as active duty soldiers do, said Garvin.

He went on to say, "Those cadets who go through the senior ROTC program and volunteer to attend airborne or ranger training are dedicated. They're a cut above the rest. They're probably career minded," he concluded.

A Reserve Officer Training Candidate from Georgia Tech makes an exit from the 34-foot mock tower, as part of a refresher course prior to a field problem in the Florida swamps.

End of the ride are other candidates who help the one candidate out of his and risers.

An airborne instructor checks the cadets' equipment prior to them going up the 34-foot tower.

Education programs help soldiers

By Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Jerry, an engineer, is having trouble reading and its affecting his job. He can't read his tech manuals and has problems working on his equipment. He is always asking people what to do and is worried about failing his Skill Qualification Test (SQT).

His supervisor calls the Education Center to ask if there is a class to help him improve. The counselor mentions the Basic Skill Education Program (BSEP II).

BSEP II is a three-week class designed for soldiers who score 90 or below on the Armed Forces Vocational Aptitude Battery (ASVAB) or their SQT score is not validated or are referred by their commanders or supervisors. Soldiers wanting to attend college and need a refresher in a certain area can also use this program.

Some people enter the Army without a high school diploma and often these same people have a low GT score. A high GT score and diploma help a soldier to advance in the Army and provide a better choice of jobs.

A soldier from Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, attending BSEP, explains why it is important to have a high GT score. "I have been recommended by the Department of the Army for the E-7 list and I have a low GT score. I decided to come back to school so I could be promoted.

"I haven't been to school in quite a while and I decided to improve my reading comprehension and writing. I found if a story was funny or interesting, I would read the article and know what it was about. But if the article was of no interest to me, I wouldn't read it. I came to this course to improve myself and later plan on going to college," he added.

Jerry met with a counselor at the Education Center, and she scheduled a diagnostic test for him to take. (A diagnostic test is a test to evaluate the person's weak areas, such as math or English.) If a soldier scores between sixth and ninth grade level in math, reading, or communication skills, for example, the counselor enrolls him in the program and gives him a form to be signed by his commander.

Each class is self-paced. The teacher gives each student a personalized program to improve his weak areas. After each group of lessons the student takes a test. If he fails, the teacher explains his mistakes. The student then takes another test. If he passes, he advances in the program.

The Army pays for the program. Classes are held during duty time in the morning or afternoon from 8-11:45 a.m. and 1-4:45 p.m., Monday through Friday.

BSEP teacher Edith Garrett explains how to tell if a soldier is having problems. "A person having problems with reading tries to avoid written materials. If you hand him a paper or ask him to do a procedure, he will frequently go to the supervisor and ask if he is doing it correctly."

Take first step in making friends

By William W. Erbach, Sr.
Chaplain, 36th Engineer Group

In these days of inflation, the value of the dollar is getting smaller and smaller. Just to talk about it is scary!

However, I know of another kind of dollar that is increasing in value just because they are hard to get — the sand dollar.

Have you ever stood on a seashore and tried to collect them? They are a creature of the sea but not on the Jersey shore where I grew up, so it wasn't until I was an adult that I finally got to even see one and that was at a chaplain friend's house.

He told me an interesting story of himself and a great lesson he had learned from the one sand dollar he had found. Tom, my chaplain friend, was on vacation in Texas and knew there were sand dollars to be found at the beach because he had seen some displayed by the lifeguards.

He wondered if they came in on the high or low tide. Well, I really didn't think it would matter because time was short and he had to make use of whatever tide was in at that moment.

He started by searching the loose sand far back from the water, but found nothing, not even a trace.

On the third day he stood at the water's edge and waited for one to wash up on his feet. Again, no luck. But another problem — time was running out and he would have to return to work.

He knew that they were right there for the taking and all he had to do was to take the courage to step in and find one, but the water was too cold. It was all frothy and wavy and, to come right down to it, he was a little afraid to even put his toe in the water.

If only one washed in, fine. Well, time again forced the issue and he knew that if he was to get one he would have to wade in. It turned out to be more shallow than he had expected and wasn't as scary as he had imagined.

The waves swirled around his knees but they receded and the water barely came to his ankles. Then he noticed something, when the waves went out it left a shallow pool where he was standing, and as he looked down into that clear water to the sand here it was, sure enough; a sand dollar.

He picked it up, washed it off on the next wave and still has it on his desk.

The message is that we all want friends but sometimes we are afraid to get our feet wet by going out of our way to meet people.

Whenever I feel that way I think about that shell. Friends won't rush in on the tide and lie at your feet. You have to plunge into the surf and go meet them.

However, if you take the first step, the rest will be easier because most people want friends as badly as you do. How about that?

Don't forget to pay state taxes

By John T. Phelps II

Chief, Legal Assistance

Paying taxes is never pleasant and for most soldiers paying income tax to their home state while living at Fort Benning is even less pleasant. This is particularly so when the soldier's check is a little less each month as the result of state income tax being withheld.

A Fort Benning soldier's military pay is not subject to Georgia tax while stationed at Fort Benning unless he is a "domiciliary" or legal resident of Georgia. Under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, a soldier's pay is deemed to have been earned in his "domicile" or legal residence. The "domicile" or "legal residence" of a soldier is that state from which he entered the service. Thus, a soldier who joins the Army in Ohio is deemed to be an Ohio resident for tax purposes and the state of Ohio can tax his military pay no matter where in the United States or the world he is stationed.

In order to collect this tax a number of states have entered into an agreement with the federal government to have the tax withheld from military pay. You should check your LES to make sure that the state of your "legal residence" is the one which is withholding tax. It is not uncommon for soldiers to indicate the wrong state of their legal residence when they inprocess. The result of which may be that the soldier has to file a return to get the money back and then turn around and file another return in the correct state.

Soldiers should be aware that even though they do not have state tax withheld from their pay they may still be liable to pay state income tax. A number of states tax military pay but do not have it withheld. A tax return must still be filed.

If state tax is withheld from a soldier's pay he should file a tax return. Not only is a tax return required to be filed but it will usually result in a partial or total refund of the tax. For example, the states of New Jersey and New York both have tax withheld from their soldier-residents pay. However, for those soldiers who do not maintain a residence in those states but maintain a residence elsewhere and who spend less than 30 days per year in the state no tax is due and the total amount withheld will be refunded. Thus, the advantages to filing a return if tax is withheld can be quite substantial.

It should be noted that if a return is never filed there is no statute of limitations on the state suing the servicemember for the tax. Thus a state could come after a soldier for twenty years or more of back taxes while he was in the military. Strange though it may seem, some states have done exactly that much to the surprise and shock of the soldier involved. With federal grants fast drying up more and more states will be looking to delinquent soldiers as a source for funds.

While the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act says that military pay is taxed in the state of "legal residence" it does not affect retired pay, the income of a non-servicemember spouse, income derived from off-post or off-duty employment, business income, rents and other financial and business related activities. Thus, a soldier who has an off-duty job in Georgia must pay Georgia income tax on that income. However, he need not pay tax on that income to his "legal residence." Likewise, if a soldier's spouse works in Georgia they must pay Georgia income tax. Their income will not be taxed by the soldier/spouse's home state nor by their home state if it is different than the soldier's.

If these situations exist it may require the filing of separate state tax returns by the servicemember and spouse. In some instances they will not be able to claim the benefit of filing in a joint status but will have to use the married filing separately status.

The deadline for most state tax returns is April 15th. If you need assistance in completing your form, consult your unit tax officer. If you are as to whether or not you are required to file tax call the Ft. Benning Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282. Forms and instruction booklets for most states may be obtained from the Legal Assistance Office, Bldg. 5.

High schools play on Benning links

High School golf teams from Georgia and many surrounding states recently were able to play despite flooded condition at the Bull Creek course in Columbus thanks to Fort Benning's Lakeside Golf Course.

The Columbus Invitational Golf Tournament was played Friday and Saturday under clear skies here. The high school teams played 36 holes of golf over two days.

This year, the tournament belonged to Aiken High School of Aiken, S.C. They lead the field with 617 to repeat as tournament champions.

Hardaway High School of Columbus, which dominated the invitational from 1976-1979 could only pull out a tie for third place with a score of 632.

"We have three players who lack tournament experience. We played well at times, but lacked consistency," said Larry Gaither of Columbus' Hardaway High School.

"It was a strong field, and we'll need to improve around the 310-mark to be competitive in this type tournament."

Scoring by Teams

1. Aiken (617) — Craig Beckwith 73-74—147, Chris Sipe 76-78—154, Frank Townsend 75-80—155, Bill Jones 80-81—161;

Free Braves tickets available

The USO will be giving away free tickets to upcoming Atlanta Braves games by drawings. Each winner will receive two tickets.

To be eligible for tickets, you must be on active duty.

One postcard is all that's needed to enter, but you may send as many postcards as you'd like. Winners will be notified by telephone the Monday before the scheduled game. The first game is tomorrow.

When sending postcards include your name, rank, duty station, duty and home phone number on the card. Mail postcards to USO Atlanta Braves Tickets, P.O. Box 20963, Hartsfield Int'l Airport, Atlanta, Ga. 30320.

The following is a list of game dates for which tickets can be won:

April 18 and 19; May 9, 10, 16, 17, 23, 24; June 6, 7, 20, 21; July 5, 25, 26; Aug. 8, 22, 23; Sept. 12, 13, 26 and 27.

Doughboys need players

The Fort Benning Doughboy football team has its coaches for their 1981 season, but players are still needed. According to head coach Ralph Santaliz,

"We're still looking for offensive and defensive linemen."

The team is currently practicing every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on Stillwell Field (across from Briant Wells Fieldhouse). Practice starts at 6 p.m.

Anyone interested in playing for the team should come out to practice or call Santaliz at 545-5777.

Swim team hosts olympics

The Fort Benning Barracuda swim team will be hosting the 1981 Georgia AAU Olympic Swim Meet at Briant Wells Fieldhouse tomorrow and Sunday. More than 600 swimmers are expected to participate and include ages eight to 18.

Briant Wells to close

The Briant Wells Indoor Pool will be closed starting at 1 p.m. today to prepare the pool area for the Barracuda Swim Team to host the Georgia AAU Short Course Junior Olympics.

The basketball court will also be closed starting at 1 p.m. today and will reopen for regular play at 11 a.m. Monday.

Volleyball action starts

Company level volleyball games are now being played to prepare for the USAIC Company Level Volleyball Championship to be held Tuesday through April 21 at Harmony Church Fieldhouse. The championship will be determined by double elimination play.

Major units desiring to enter their authorized number of teams in the championship should submit notification in writing to the Athletic Branch, Morale Support Activities Division, USAIC, Bldg. 229, no later than April 9, Thursday.

Boy Scouts clinic slated

The Fort Benning Bass Club will sponsor a Fishing Derby and Merit Badge Clinic (for Fishing and Motorboating Merit Badges) for Boy Scouts on April 25. The clinic will be held in the Uchee Creek Recreation Lodge starting at 8 a.m.

The clinic will be limited to 40 Boy Scouts from the Fort Benning District. For more information call 545-1806.

Hansel and Gretel find home with BAYONET

By Becky Bulgrin

USAIC Public Affairs Office

You've heard of a roving reporter? Well, you may soon be hearing of the "pedaling reporters."

If you happen to see someone zooming down the street on a bicycle with a camera slung over his shoulder, don't get in his way. He's only doing his job. You see, the BAYONET staff recently acquired two bicycles, named Hansel and Gretel, to go out on assignments around Main Post.

I don't know who named them, but I doubt if anyone riding on these bicycles will be mysteriously directed to a candy-covered house while looking for a "hot" story. Although I think the idea of using our office in an experiment to conserve energy by saving on gas with bikes is good, visions of my future experiences on Hansel or Gretel go more like this:

It's one of those swelteringly hot Georgia days and by the time I'm ready to go to Lawson Army Airfield for an interview, the temperature's up to 90 degrees. Huffing and puffing to get up a hill on the way, I start sweating profusely and the sweat soaks through my fatigues. Sure wish I had my summer greens on, but since it's a skirt, I don't think it would look too good. By the time I get to the airfield, my face is beet red and my hair's soaking wet. I'm also ten minutes late.

The person I'm going to interview takes one look at me and yells, "Quick, call an ambulance. This girl's on the verge of a heat stroke!"

I tell him I'm fine; that I just need to sit down. The interview goes great and I'm ready to go back and write the story. I then remember that Hansel's waiting outside for me and start sweating from the thought. But I have a deadline to meet, so I climb on and pedal away.

"What took you so long! You weren't sent out to cover a whole day's event, you know," say the other people in the office.

Sitting down to my typewriter, all I can think about are my aching feet. Oh, TMP vehicle, where were you when I needed you? I feel useless for what is left of the day.

Actually, I may be working myself up over nothing. After all, it's not that hot out — yet. And since I haven't had the chance to use Hansel or Gretel yet, and won't until I get back from three weeks TDY, I only know what other people in the office who've used them say.

Tim Boivin has gone to the airfield on one and said, "There's a big hill on the way there and by the time I got back, my !!!@#¢ was sore!"

"I almost got ran over by a two-ton truck," said Brian Adams. He was also making a trip to the airfield.

Listening to them is probably the reason I'm letting my imagination run wild. I'm sure I'll find that Hansel and Gretel aren't so bad — they'll be good company, you know, someone to talk to. And maybe I'll even be directed to a candy-covered house!

Well ... I may as well let my imagination work the better for me.

Army tops Marines in tourney

WASHINGTON — The All-Army men's basketball team won the interservice championship recently at Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

The Army defeated the Marines, 84-83, in the championship game. In overall competition, the Marines took second place, Navy third, and Air Force fourth.

Seven members of the All-Army team were selected to play on the Armed Forces team. They are Pvt. Alexander Scott, head coach, 8th U.S. Army, Korea; Sp5 Luther D. Jefferson, team member, U.S. Army, Europe (USAREUR); Sp4 Petty Fisher, team member, USAREUR; Sp4 Larry Warren, team member, Presidio of San Francisco (FORSCOM); Sp4 Thomas Blue, team member, Fort Bragg, N.C. (FORSCOM); Sgt. Ricky

Boynton, team member, Fort Riley, Kan. (FORSCOM); and Mr. Bobbie Cascom, team manager, Presidio of San Francisco (FORSCOM).

Other team members on the winning Army team were Sp4 Carl Gayle, USAREUR; Sp5 Samuel C. Berry, Fort Hood, Texas (FORSCOM); Sp4 Leon Williams, USAREUR; PFC Charles T. Bostic Jr., 8th U.S. Army, Korea; Sp4 Carlyle Ellis, Fort Bragg; Sp5 Jimmy Davis, Fort Polk, La. (FORSCOM); Sp4 Dennis Scot, Fort Bragg; and Sp4 Andrew D. Jones, USAREUR.

The Armed forces team competed in the Amateur Athletic Union championship in Del Ray Beach, Fla., through April 4. The team is also scheduled to play in the Amateur Basketball Association of the U.S. championships in Colorado Springs, Colo., April 9-13. (ARNews)

Women place third in basketball

WASHINGTON — The All-Army women's basketball team finished third in the 1981 Interservice Women's Basketball Championships recently at Chanute Air Force Base, Ill.

The Army placed four persons on the armed forces team selected after the interservice competition: PFC Cynthia Brown, U.S. Army, Europe (USAREUR); SP4 Deborah Johnson, USAREUR; Pvt. Evelyn Kimbrough, U.S. Army Forces Command (FORSCOM); and, SP4 Gail Sturup, U.S. Army, Korea.

Other team members on the army team were SP4

Henrietta Brown, Fort Bragg, N.C. (FORSCOM); Sgt. Dollie G. Faw, Fort Bliss, Texas, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC); PFC Donna L. Hamilton, Sierra Army Depot, Calif., U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM); SP4 Isobel Hunsaker, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, U.S. Army Western Command (WESTCOM); and, SP4 Donna L. Townsend, Fort Rucker, Ala. (FORSCOM).

The Armed Forces team is scheduled to compete in the National Amateur Athletic Union Tournament in Saint Joseph, Mo., April 7-11. (ARNews)

YA soccer dominated by tie games

By Martha E. Duncan
Youth Activities correspondent

Soccer action at the Youth Activities Gordon Field has been fast, exciting and amazingly close!

Last Saturday's game for the Termite Division had the Eagles close out the Chiefs 3-0. The Eagles big scorer was Daniel Chamberlain with 2 goals followed by Sam Luca with 1. Defensive standouts were Fullbacks Jason Vasquez and David Stone-man.

For the Chiefs, the score by no means indicated a lack of effort. Offensive standouts included Halfbacks Clifton Messer and Chuck Porter, and Forward Rebecca Messer. Defensive standouts were Halfbacks Bradley Bagshaw and Bradley Wright with Fullback Lisa Gerken contributing some good blocks.

Game two had super action where neither team could keep ahead of the score as the game between the Tornados and Bullets ended in a 3-3 tie. Tornados' Angelito Bernier whirled in all 3 goals. he was backed by such defensive standouts as Brent Williams, Geoff Martiny, Charlie Holloway and Becky Entlich.

A great example of soccer anyone can win, was soon during this game as the Tornados were down 3-0 at halftime, but rallied for three big points during the second half.

For the Bullets, Slade Vantine kicked in 2 and Joseph Allen added 1. Offensive standouts were the Wings Jeff Saliba and Gregg Genetti. Defensive standouts included Fullbacks Melanie Hallums and Chris Mayfield, with Halfback Keith Thomas contributing to the defense.

At the Pee Wee fields another tie situation resulted between the Demons and Red Devils. For the Demons, Mike Denkins kicked in 2 with Adam Helmbold and Jason Bargewell each contributing 1. Sam Byrd was the defensive standout for the Demons.

The Red Devils also had the horns up high. Carlos Benson contributed 3 goals and Jimmy Olsen added 1. Their Sweeper Chad Holter had a great day on both offense and defense with Sara Arellano a Halfback also contributing to great defense.

'Tie' was definitely the password as a 2-2 game resulted for the Bob Cats and Cougars. The Bob Cats Michael Wall scored both goals. he had some terrific defensive assistance from Sweeper Billy Eberhart, Wing Mike Wall was all over the field, and Elizabeth Elliot a Forward and Halfback.

The Cougars were also on the prowl. Ronald O'Neal and Terrance Kimball each had a goal. Defensive standouts included Justin Emmerton, Sweeper, Pete Jimenez, Fullback and Heather King, Halfback.

In the Midget Division, the Saints maintain their undefeated record as they swept the Demons 7-1. The Demons had their halfbacks Stephanie Stafford and Theresa Parker display great effort on the defensive end.

For the Saints, the well mechanized squadron had their top scorer in Tommy Langhorne as he contributed 3 big points. Jason Entlich added 2 to the score and Raymond King and Jim Walker each added 1.

A strong defensive post kept the Demons score down. Standouts included Center and Back Greg McCann, Right Defense, Kyle Abbot and Center Back Tim Perry.

Game two was another shutout as the Cosmos sealed a 4-0 victory over the Panthers Lance Culberth, for the Cosmos had a good day as he kicked in 1 goal and had 2 assists. Ann Cassidy, Mike Saliba and Mark Vogel each contributed 1 goal. Defensive standouts included Mike Saliba, Halfback, their Forward Lance Culberth and the Left Fullback, Jim Rexford.

For the Panthers Rod Brown, Timothy Sanders and Donald Rogan maintained good defense throughout the game.

The final game of the day was a 6-3 win by the Hustlers over the Rebels. Goalie Steve Genetti for the Rebels was a strong defender keeping the Rebels score down. Jeff Britton had 1 goal scored and Brant Bargewell kicked in 2.

For the Hustlers, Jim Connor was the high scorer with 3, Pat Riccinto scored twice and Kurt McLeod kicked in 1. Defensive standouts were Chris Bradford and Frankie Plummer.

Competition is getting tight as all the teams are looking toward the championship tournament April 21-25. Come out for more soccer action at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Drinking, driving deadly mixture

By Bill Powell

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The wind blows briskly in through the window, the radio is blaring and the windshield wipers are flapping rhythmically. The headlights seen unusually bright as he drives home. Suddenly, a curve appears. First comes the sound of screeching tires, a deafening crash and then only the sound of falling rain. Another statistic has been chalked up for drinking while driving. George thought one or two drinks wouldn't make any difference in his driving and he ended up being "dead" wrong. "Gambling with Death" is a program that will give a look at drinking and driving. See this program on WFBG-TV, Fort Benning's television station on Channel 13 on Alert Cable. "Gambling with Death" is but one of the many programs on WFBG-TV next week. Here are other programs highlighted on WFBG:

- "Big Picture - The Army's Music Men" takes you to Fort Myer, Va. for a look and listen to the U.S. Army Band and musical selections from World War I until the early 1960s.

- "The Benning Report" features an interview with Col. William Sims, post veterinarian, on how to adopt a pet and other things the veterinarian's office does on Fort Benning.

- "Sportsreel" brings you sports that took place in 1956. Such features include football, powerboats, women in the Olympics and National Tennis.

- "An Alliance of Neighbors" has a look at Latin America and what the United States was doing in 1967 to thwart the threat of communism.

- "You and Your Blood Pressure" gives you the dangers of high blood pressure and what to do if you think you have high blood pressure. Consult your BAYONET or Benning Bulletin for times and dates of scheduled programming.

Boating safety can save lives

Lining the walls of certain churches in port cities around the world are plaques with the names of men and women who have been lost at sea.

Whenever people set out on water, whether on lakes, rivers, streams or the oceans, there is an inherent danger of boating accidents or drowning.

Recently, a sergeant stationed here and five children were lost in the Chattahoochee River after a boating accident. Officials now presume them dead.

Unfortunately, most boating accidents can be prevented. The first thing anyone going out in a boat should do is make sure everything is in working order and serviceable. The motor and bilge pump should be in good working order. The lights, horns, anchor and line should be ready for use and in good condition. If a trip far from land is planned take a compass along and know how to use it.

The boat handler needs to know how to operate the equipment on the boat and know how to make emergency repairs. He should follow the manufacturer's instructions on the loading plate and not exceed the maximum load weights. Overloading a boat is an open invitation to disaster.

A tool box and necessary spare parts are always useful. A hammer, screwdrivers, pliers and a flashlight are some of the tools helpful in emergency situations.

A fully stocked first-aid kit should be on board before starting out.

All emergency equipment should be in working order. Make sure there is a Coast Guard approved flotation device for everyone on board. The operator of the boat should also make sure knows how to use them. Spare oars or paddles are also a must.

Sitting alone on a calm lake with a dead engine waiting for hours to drift to shore can be a very helpless feeling. A worse feeling is being carried downstream without an engine and not knowing if you're about to be dashed on the rocks, have the hull ripped open from stem to stern by a submerged snag or about to be carried over the falls with no way to avoid impending doom.

When boarding a boat, always board from the bow, never jump into a boat or step on the side of the boat. Don't try to board with your arms full. When loading the boat, even for an afternoon's fishing, distribute weight evenly in the boat, from side to side and from bow to stern.

Once out into the water be on the alert for other boats, swimmers and objects in the water. Keep away from swimming areas and moored small boats. Keep the speed under control, run slowly through congested areas. Unlike cars, boats do not have brakes.

Inspections improve maintenance

By Tom Sabel
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The MPs waved a military vehicle into the parking lot where the inspection team waited.

"I have no objections to the inspection," said SFC George Randale, 187th Infantry from Springfield, Mass. "This thing (the jeep) is 15 years old and I don't want anything to happen to my boss."

Approximately once a month the inspection team from the Material Readiness Office, Directorate of Industrial Operations hits the streets for surprise roadside inspections. According to Lt. Col. B.J. Maynard, DIO, the results of the inspections have been steadily improving.

"When we first started these surprise inspections only about 60 percent of the vehicles received a satisfactory or outstanding rating. In the last few months 80 to 85 percent passed." The results from this last inspection are even better. Ninety-three percent of the vehicles passed the inspection.

If there are no deficiencies then the driver gets a letter of commendation from the commanding general, said Maynard.

While inspecting the vehicles they check for what would normally be looked for. We are not going to pull any surprises, commented CWO4 "Flash" Gordon. "All we are looking for is what is listed in USAIC Regulation 750-II," he added.

During the inspection Messrs. Harold M. Hunter and Gene M. Day, DIO, checked the lights, horns, windshield wipers and oil levels. SSgt. Murphy Walker, NCOIC and Sp4 Benny Turner checked the dispatches to make sure they were in order.

Of the 43 vehicles inspected 17 were rated outstanding, 23 were rated satisfactory and only three were rated unsatisfactory.

While most of the vehicles pass the inspection there are some horror stories of the ones that don't pass, according to Gordon. One truck, which was hauling troops, had no brakes. Then there was the vehicle with oil so low that it didn't even register on the dip stick. In this last inspection one two-and-a-half ton truck pulled in with two flat tires.

CWO 4 "Flash" Gordon looks with dismay at a vehicle's flat tire.

Armed Forces Day

Fort Benning's annual Armed Forces Day Open House will be held May 16 from noon until 6 p.m. at Victory Pond.

The Open House is in conjunction with the annual picnic of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the Association of United States Army. Tickets for the picnic are $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children ages three to 12. Tickets will be on sale at banks in Columbus and Phenix City, the Chamber of Commerce, the AUSA liason office in Bldg. 35 on post and from unit sergeants major.

The Open House will begin with a Rangers in action show followed by skydiving and a military police dog exhibition.

Benning units will provide displays and rides for children. There will be music, games and prizes to go along with the meal. Each major unit will select a woman to compete for the title of picnic queen. The title is won by the woman who sells the most "queen tickets." Each ticket is considered a vote for that woman. The money raised is combined with the picnic funds.

Free transportation will be available to take people to the open house and picnic location.

Spring Fling

McGraw Manor's community fair will be held tomorrow from 11 a.m. — 5 p.m. Later a dance will be held at McGraw Manor's Community Center from 7-10 p.m.

There is a $17 fee to become a member. Members may rent horses for $3 per hour or may board their own horses at the stable.

The Hunt Club is open to all active duty, retired personnel and their families. One guest per person is allowed.

Morning matinee

The Plaza Theatre, in Cross Country Shopping Plaza, is sponsoring two Saturday Morning Matinees for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, tomorrow and April 18.

The price is $1 per person (all ages). Clowns and other entertainment will also be featured and the proceeds will be donated to the muscular dystrophy association.

OWC School of Music

Camp for handicapped

A weekend camp for physically handicapped children, Freedom Camporee, will be held May 1-3 in Jackson Gap, Ala. The camp is designed to challenge the capabilities of the handicapped through a variety of outdoor leisure activities.

It also offers the pleasures of the outdoors to children who might not otherwise get the chance to enjoy them. Activities include canoeing, boat rides, swimming, fishing, archery and riflery.

A series of workshops at the camporee will instruct the parent or adult sponsor with each child how leisure activities can help meet the needs of the child.

The weekend will be at Camp ASCCA, a residential camp facility owned and operated by the Alabama Society for Crippled Children and Adults. Located on Lake Martin, the camp is architecturally barrier free. Sponsors of Freedom Camporee

Adopt a friend

Animals need love too. People have been adopting cats and dogs from the post's veterinary clinic for $7 to cover the cost of vaccinations and blood tests. You could be saving a life while gaining a friend.

Up to date files help promotion

WASHINGTON - You just can't believe it. All your Army schooling and all that hard work and still not enough points to get promoted.

You take a deep breath and try to think clearly. You did just fine on your Skill Qualification Test. Your supervisor says that you're doing a great job. You've taken college courses and military correspondence courses. Last year you went to the Primary Leadership Course for two weeks. And just last month you graduated with honors from the Primary Non-commissioned Officers course.

Frustrated? You bet. The Army's out to get you, huh? Sometimes you just can't win? Maybe, you'd better think again. Graduating from a military school, for example, is only half the battle. That may give you a good feeling, but graduation counts for promotion points only if it's recorded in your Official Military Personnel File.

Oh, no. Is it possible... Well, you didn't really check your file before the promotion board.

Yes, it is quite possible that you didn't get promoted because your records weren't current.

It's important for you to see that your qualification record (DA Form 2) is correct. It is the record clerk's job to make sure your personnel records are accurate, but it's your career that will suffer if they're wrong.

Item 42 of the DA Form 2 is a good place to start checking. That block indicates your highest military educational level and code. That code should be one of the following:

- Course and Code
- USAMA Course Grad (SMA Grad) D
- Advanced NCO Grad (ANOC Grad) S
- Basic Technical Course W
- Basic NCO Grad (BNCOC Grad) W
- Primary NCO Grad (PNCOC Grad) Y
- Primary Technical Course Y

If you find something wrong with your personnel records, have it corrected. Your military personnel office can update your records to include any new information. It's important--your career may depend on it. (ARNEWS)

Quality of life improvements planned

WASHINGTON — The military quality of life proposals sent to Congress recently by the Department of Defense (DoD) "should contribute greatly to improved retention and morale among our service members," says Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

The DoD package, if improved, would give service members a 5.3 percent pay raise on July 1. This hike would be in addition to the 9.1 percent raise already pegged for October 1.

It would also mean major improvements in living and working conditions for service members and their families. These include:

- Quality of life improvements in family housing, barracks, commissaries and related military facilities. Army funds are earmarked for such projects as the construction of 19 new barracks, 486 new family housing units, one new hospital and one new clinic, renovation of two hospitals, design and construction of physical centers and child care centers.

- New construction of seven dependent schools located in Germany, Japan and Korea. This brings the total amount budgeted for dependent school construction for FY 81 and FY 82 to over $110 million, a sum slightly more than that funded for dependent school construction over the past five fiscal years.

- More money for service members to help pay costs incurred during PCS moves. New higher rates for PCS moves would take effect July 1, 1981, as part of this program.

- Cost of living allowances for single/unaccompanied members stationed overseas.

- Full funding of aviation continuation bonuses for flight officers in critical specialties. Also, special pays to add to bonuses in critical Army skills. (ARNews)

Rising prices hit PX gas stations

WASHINGTON — Gasoline prices, continuing an upward spiral, increased about 14 cents in many areas last month. Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) service station customers are paying higher prices too.

Price decontrol of all petroleum products on Jan. 28, as well as increasing crude oil costs, figure in the higher cost of gas, say AAFES officials.

Part of AAFES' problem is the large price difference paid in the market between major oil companies (including AAFES) and independent companies.

Independent gas outlets can undersell AAFES and the major companies because the independents are able to buy gas surpluses on the open (spot) market at a lower price. Since AAFES has to contract for its gas, it must honor its agreements with suppliers.

The exchange's gas prices are designed to pay for the gas as well as give its customers a discount and put money into military programs for morale, welfare and recreation.

The discount to AAFES customers can be as much as seven cents, depending on the difference between the cost of gas to AAFES and the average commercial price. No discount can be given if the cost to AAFES is more than the average commercial price. In that case, the exchange charges a break-even price so long as customers don't have to pay more than three cents above the commercial average. AAFES sells gas at a loss if the break-even price is more than three cents above the average.

To provide its customers with gas at the lowest price, AAFES is looking at other ways of getting gas. Meantime, it is expected that surplus gas from the spot market will be used up shortly. The price-and-supply advantage then is expected to return to the major companies. AAFES hopes to give customers a nominal savings in the future. (ARNews)

Basic now longer, tougher

By Conrad Busch, Jr.

Public Information Officer
TRADOC Public Affairs Office

There's something new in store for Army recruits this year—a longer and tougher basic training (BT) program.

The new program increases BT by 97 hours. Fort Knox, Ky., and Leonard Wood, Mo., started the program in January and plans call for the remaining five TRADOC BT centers to add the additional hours by October. The other five BT centers are Fort Dix, N.J., Gordon, Ga., Jackson, S.C., McClellan, Ala., and Sill, Okla.

To the recruit this means eight weeks of BT instead of seven and more hours of training each day.

Emphasis is being put on improving physical conditioning. But time is also being added to existing training in weapons familiarization, individual tactical training, marches and bivouacs, nuclear, chemical and biological defense training and rifle marksmanship. New blocks of instruction, including a course on the Soviet soldier, have also been introduced.

The program resulted from an extensive study TRADOC started about three years ago. Field commanders were asked what qualities they wanted in their soldiers and what TRADOC could do to deliver more physically conditioned, better trained and disciplined soldiers to the commanders' units.

In order to maintain and build on gains made in this first phase of initial entry training, the tougher physical demands will also be carried over into the second phase—advanced individual training.

And during FY82 recruits entering One Station Unit Training (OSUT) will also find a longer and tougher course.

OSUT is a single course combining BT and advanced individual training phases that was developed for those recruits entering combat arms. Under this program recruits receive early hands-on training in their specific MOS along with basic soldier training.

All five OSUT installations will increase their training programs by one week. Approximately 60 percent of this increase will be applied to MOS qualification skills because many of the new weapon systems scheduled to enter the Army's inventory in the 1980's require additional training the remainder of the increase will be devoted to basic soldier skills. (TRADOC News Service)

Family's problems faced

WASHINGTON — The issues and concerns of today's military family will be discussed during a USO international family conference to be held May 20-21 in Washington.

Among the issues to be covered are stress and the service family; problems of servicewomen and minorities; and the buying power of the service family.

The conference, entitled "USO: A Worldwide Family Affair," is part of the 40th anniversary celebration of the Worldwide Service Agency. The organization marked its 40th year of operation in February.

USO officials say the session on the military family will help draw attention to today's service families, the problems they face and the ways they cope with those problems.

The conference will feature well-known psychologist, author and radio/TV personality Dr. Joyce Brothers as the keynote speaker for the military family. After her presentation, Brothers will face a panel of young service families and USO volunteers.

As an independent service agency, USO is also known as the service member's "home away from home." It has 40,000 volunteers worldwide helping military members and their families with personal and financial problems.

Persons or organizations interested in attending the conference can get more details by writing: USO World Headquarters, Attn: Ms. A. Beller, 146 19th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. (ARNews)

Letters to the Editor

McGraw accident a tragedy

To the Editor:

I had the unfortunate luck to be at the McGraw Manor Community Center on the night of Friday, April 3.

That was the night of the wreck that killed one man and seriously injured another. I did not see the wreck happen but I did see what happened in just a matter of a few minutes afterwards — and I was both sickened and angered by what I saw! That is why I'm writing this letter.

In what seemed like seconds at least a couple of hundred people (maybe more) converged on the scene to gawk at the blood and destruction. I don't know who was worse — the children or the adults!

It looked as if a performance that people had waited for weeks to see was about to start. Everyone was running across Custer Rd. and pushing to get as close to the victims as possible. Believe me, it was not to help — it was just to get a cheap thrill at someone else's expense! It is a miracle no one else was hurt by running or being pushed in front of a car or pushed down and trampled!!!!

The MPs had arguments when they tried to keep some people from destroying evidence. There was even trouble getting people to make room for the ambulances.

Are we reverting to the days of the Gladiators and feeding Christians to the lions for a coliseum full of spectators?

In my opinion Friday night's behavior wasn't very far away from that!

In case you are wondering who I am to criticize, since I was there too, let me explain. I am assistant chairperson of McGraw Manor Tiny Tots and I'd gone up to the school to get a couple of pencils for the chaperone of the teen dance. When I realized how involved everything was I kept the school open in case the phone was needed (it was) and I stayed there until after the vehicles were towed away and the last investigating officer left the area.

Resident of McGraw Manor
& Army Community

Benning thanked

To the Editor,

I want to thank the Army Community at Fort Benning for their kindness and help since my husband died on April 4.

I don't think I could have managed without the support of my neighbors, members of my husband's unit, the chaplains, my children's school teachers, and many others too numerous to mention. As I prepared to leave Fort Benning, I found that the many agencies involved went out of their way to make my move as painless and easy as possible. My personal tragedy made me realize what a community the Army truly is, and I can honestly say the Army really does "take care of its own."

Again, thank you Fort Benning, I will always remember you in my thoughts and prayers as I make a new life for myself in New Mexico.

*Sincerely,

Certain soldiers get extra money

WASHINGTON — A reenlistment test program will offer qualified first-termers up to $8,100 in free education benefits within the next 60 days.

The test program, which will last through the end of the fiscal year, will also allow soldiers to transfer these benefits to their family members, say Army Department (DA) officials.

The new reenlistment test is one of several education tests now underway in the Army. They were authorized last year by Congress to measure the effect of education benefits on recruitment and retention. The reenlistment program will help determine the attractiveness of transferring education benefits to family members.

To be eligible, first-term soldiers must have a high school diploma or its equivalent and reenlist in one of 129 combat arms or technical skills. They also must reenlist for at least three years and for a European assignment.

The test is based on the current Veterans Education Assistance Program (VEAP), which replaced the GI Bill for education in 1977. Normally, under VEAP, service members contribute voluntarily into an education fund. For each dollar a member saves, up to a maximum of $2,700, the government adds $2. The maximum allowable benefit is usually $8,100. (Several VEAP bonuses are available for certain combat arms and technical skills.)

Under the reenlistment test, the government will pay the soldier's entire $8,100 VEAP benefit. A soldier who doesn't want to use the benefit may transfer the funds into an educational account for use by a spouse or dependent child.

Soldiers taking part in the test program will be required to drop out of the current VEAP. Those prior service soldier who are entitled to GI Bill benefits must waive those benefits to take advantage of the VEAP coverage.

VEAP is slated to run out Dec. 31, 1981, unless the president recommends to Congress before June 30 that the program be continued. Presently, about 12 education bills designed to replace VEAP are before Congress. (ARNews)

Major management changes announced

Programs stress long range planning

WASHINGTON — A major policy shift in departmental resource management has been announced by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger.

From now on Department of Defense (DoD) planning and programming efforts are expected to emphasize long-range strategic planning, assign greater responsibility to the military service departments, promote decentralization, foster cost-savings and efficiencies, and streamline the operation of the entire planning and programming process.

According to results of a DoD task force review of the way the department plans for funds, spends those funds and accounts for the spending, certain changes in the process were called for.

The department's managerial tool known as the Planning, Programming and Budgeting System (PPBS) has undergone critical review. In this appraisal the practicality of the system's "zero-based budgeting" concept was found marginal.

As the new angle on strategic planning, the Joint Chiefs of Staff will take the lead along with the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy. They're being charged with developing plans that are comprehensive enough to match requirements with resources budgeted.

Membership on the Defense Resource Board — the top DoD management group — will include each of the service secretaries. This is in keeping with the defense chief's intention to monitor "how well my personal staff and the services respond to the demands of the new system."

Eggs delivered

"Yes Virginia, there is an Easter Bunny." Prices, the weather and politicians all change. The one thing that remains constant is that on Easter, the Easter bunnies always show up to deliver eggs. Since Fort Benning is a big post, the Easter bunnies arrived early to be ready to "do their thing" and were observed delivering their goodies near Infantry Hall.

Lone MP helps soldiers downtown

By Tom Sabel
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There's a Fort Benning MP who hasn't pulled duty on post in 10 and a half months, yet five nights a week he goes out on patrol.

SSgt. James Gregory, 139th MP company, rides with the Columbus Police Department as a representative of Fort Benning and the Army.

His biggest job is keeping an eye out for soldiers when they are downtown. He helps the soldiers whenever he can, like the time a soldier was rolled by a carload of people.

The soldier was yelling hysterically and wanted to attack the people who rolled him. If he didn't calm down, he could go to jail.

Fortunately for the soldier, Gregory was riding with the Columbus Police at the time of the incident. Gregory told the soldier that if he didn't calm down he was going to jail. The soldier calmed down.

Gregory is the only MP who doesn't work on post.

"I try to keep an eye on them when they're walking down the street. I'll help them out if they need it, give advice, let them know what's off limits, what places to avoid and what to look out for," he said.

Gregory is an outgoing man, "I'll talk to anybody. All they have to do is stop and ask me. I'll tell them what they want to know. There are a lot of soldiers who probably don't even know I'm down here until they see me under unfortunate circumstances," he said.

"...and then their eyes get real big," added Jennifer "Sam" Dunford, Gregory's partner for the night from the Columbus Police Department.

Gregory is on duty five nights a week. He rides with a member of the Columbus Police in their squad car and, except for rare instances, he is only a passenger.

"I don't get physically involved unless whoever I'm riding with is overpowered or their life is endangered. Then I'd step in, in a minute, to help. I've stepped in on one occasion.

"There was a fight between two people about five-months ago. One guy got belligerent and the officer I was with placed him under arrest. The other guy started toward the officer so I just grabbed him and told him to stay back," he explained.

Since he doesn't have jurisdiction with civilian cases downtown he has no more authority to arrest them than does any citizen.

According to Gregory, this has been one of the most rewarding experiences he has had in his 12 and a half years as an MP.

"Working with the Columbus Police has been a very valuable experience. I've testified in the Recorder's court and in Superior Court. I've a better idea of how the court system works and from working down here I have a much better idea of how the police system works," he said. He thinks that it would be a good experience for other MPs to also work with the downtown police.

There are a few areas where Gregory has jurisdiction - uniform violations, off-limit violations and when picking up AWOLs and deserters. When handling uniform violations he makes on the spot corrections and writes the soldier up.

If corrections cannot be made on the spot, he will take the soldier back to post and turn him over to the MPs. The MPs on post will then take the soldier back to his company.

He also makes sure soldiers stay out of the off-limits areas.

"I normally check them out as time permits, usually one or three times a shift," he said.

After getting verification that a soldier is AWOL or on deserter status, he'll try and find the soldier, apprehend him and turn him over to the military police.

According to Gregory, Friday and Saturday nights are the busiest for him.

"This is because the training personnel at the Infantry Training Brigade can only go downtown on the weekend."

"They are the one I like to keep a close eye on because they are pretty much the target of prostitutes, con men, pimps and drug dealers. The training personnel are here for a short time and the prostitutes and con men know it.

"They'll take more advantage of the trainees than permanent party soldiers because of the time they're going to be here. Permanent party soldiers will be here for a while and if the case goes to Superior Court, they will be around long enough to testify," he said.

Gregory put his job in a nutshell, "My prime function is to assist any military people downtown and try to prevent them from getting involved in something that will later have the police involved.

"I try to stop them from raising Cain and I also try to calm them down and keep them out of trouble as much as I can, before they have a chance to get into trouble."

Sergeants major academy seeks reserve students

WASHINGTON — Senior non-commissioned officers of the Army Ready Reserve are encouraged to apply for the 1982 U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy's (USASMA) resident/non-resident courses.

According to Department of the Army officials, 12 Reservists will have an opportunity to attend the USASMA resident course at Fort Bliss, Texas, while a larger number will be selected for the non-resident course. The deadline for applying for either course is June 30.

The resident course aims to show students how to take part in solving command problems, offers tips on improving performance and presents insight into the division environment's tactics, administration and training. Students will also receive an update on contemporary Army problems and work on communication skills and analytical abilities.

Resident course attendance requires "active duty for training" for participants. About five months long, the course's first 1982 class begins on Feb. 15, 1982, and ends July 16, 1982. The second class is Aug. 9, 1982 through Jan. 22, 1983.

Prerequisites for both courses include:

- A maximum of 23 years' service, waivable if the person will have two years' service remaining in the Ready Reserve upon completion of the course.

- Valid security clearance and satisfactory physical condition as required by DA Pamphlet 351-4.

- Occupying the grade E-8 or E-9 (resident course) or grades E-7 through E-9 (non-resident course).

- Meeting Army weight control standards.

Besides completing a DA Form 145 or DA Form 1058, applicants must submit copies of their enlisted efficiency reports for the past five years along with a copy of the DA Forms 2 and 2-1, or DA Form 20. They also must include their current military photograph annotated to reflect height and weight.

Applications are to be submitted through command channels to Headquarters, DA, Attn: DAAR-OTI, Washington, D.C. 20310. The announcement of selectees is expected by Sept. 1981. (ARNews)

When to wear civilian clothes, chief of staff clears questions

WASHINGTON — In a message to his major Army commanders, Army Chief of Staff Gen. E.C. Meyer expressed his concern about Army uniform wear and clarified Army policy on the subject.

In the April 6 release, Meyer states, "I am concerned about the widespread wearing of civilian clothes on duty by soldiers, primarily in the Washington area, but also worldwide." He went on to acknowledge that some soldier jobs are done better by the wearing of civilian clothes, but said he believes "the majority can perform as well, or better, in the Army uniform."

"The basic Army policy is to wear the uniform on duty, to wear it correctly, and to wear it with pride."

Meyer notes that there may be, some exceptions where the duty of soldiers requires civilian clothing to accomplish the unit mission. These jobs include —

- Intelligence, security, or related duty clearly requiring civilian attire.
- In a country where wearing civilian clothing is required.
- Criminal investigation and military police investigation.

- Ordnance disposal unit with the mission of protecting the president or other high-ranking officials.

- White House duty when civilian clothing is deemed appropriate by the senior aide.

- Performing congressional escort duty when civilian clothing is deemed appropriate by the chief, legislative liaison.

- Army attache officers when deemed appropriate by the assistant chief of staff for intelligence.

- Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) activities when civilian clothing is deemed appropriate by the Chief of MAAG.

Meyer allowed that in certain circumstances major Army commanders and staff agency heads may grant an exception for officers to wear civilian clothing and payment of civilian clothing monetary allowance must be sent to HQDA for civilian clothing for a specific occasion.

Gen. Meyer concluded that "this policy will be included in a forthcoming change to regulations." (ARNews)

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

There aren't many of you. Perhaps, one in a thousand who apply will have the desired mix of aptitude, skill and experience. You may be the bright, self-reliant, self-motivated person we need. If you are attracted to service with a small group of dedicated U.S. citizens doing a vital, meaningful job in the face of challenge and possible hardship, we'd like to talk to you. While a college degree and military experience are threshold requirements, we are equally interested in language skills or aptitude, a willingness to travel and work overseas, high moral integrity, physical fitness, and a strong desire to serve your country.

Fifth grader wins contest

Spelling is an art to Lisa Eno. Not only does she enjoy it but she's also good at it.

Last week the cool, collected 10-year-old won the right to represent Fort Benning in the National Spelling Bee Contest by beating out nine top spellers from schools all over post.

Lisa spelled such words as viaduct, verbose and stamina correctly to lead the way in the spelling bee.

"I studied a lot. My mom and dad pulled out different words each night and I spelled them correctly," she said.

During the post spelling bee Lisa would write down the word she was asked to spell first, and then give the proper spelling.

"Most of the words I had to write down two or three times, so I could look at them, just to be sure. The first one I wrote down was always the right one."

Lisa will compete with other children in district three on Thursday at the Claffin Center in Columbus. If she wins, she'll go to Decatur, Ga. for the statewide competition. Winning the state spelling bee contest would enable Lisa to represent the state of Georgia in the National Spelling Bee competition in Washington, D.C.

Lisa was one of two good spellers from Edward White School who made it to the post level contest. Lisa's schoolmate, Kim Sharff, came in third. Brian Hataway of Faith Jr. High gave Lisa a good fight, taking second place.

Tickets to tribute given by WDAK

By Tim Boivin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When Cuzzin Al, the legendary WDAK radio announcer of 36 years passed away last month, Columbus lost one of its institutions.

In his memory, WDAK is sponsoring a Grand Ole Opry Tribute to Cuzzin Al Tuesday at the Columbus Auditorium beginning at 6 p.m.

WDAK owner Allen M. Woodall, Jr. has given Fort Benning tickets to hand out to soldiers. They are available through Morale Support Activities Division (MSAD). There is only a limited number of the free tickets available so it would be wise to contact MSAD as soon as possible. Their number is 545-4155.

Appearing at the tribute will be Ronnie McDowell, Stonewall Jackson, Charlie Walker, Ernest Tubb, Mary Lou Turner, the Suggs Brothers, Southern Express, Heaven Bound, Gospel Groups and others. There will also be an autograph session the afternoon of the show beginning at 4:30 p.m. at the WDAK historic Wynnwood house at 1846 Buena Vista Road in Columbus.

A free record will be handed out to the first 5,400 people called "The Best of Cuzzin Al". It features excerpts from on-air broadcasts of some of Cuzzin Al's finest shows.

WDAK also donated 1,000 tickets to Fort Benning for their WDAK-Columbus Astros night Wednesday at Golden Park. Those tickets are also available through MSAD. The Astros play the Charlotte Orioles Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

EASTER SUNDAY APRIL 19

... and time to say good-bye

By William W. Erbach

36th Engineer Group (Combat)

The time has come, the Walrus said, to talk of many things; of shoes and ships and sealing wax, of cabbage and Kings.

Louis Carroll said those immortal words through the Walrus when he was writing the story Alice Through the Looking Glass. Shoes, boots, training and uniforms on ships that sail across the ocean.

The goods are all in sealing wax to protect them in shipment. Kings have castles and there probably are no more castles than in the country known for its cabbages.

The time has come, said the Army, to talk of many things; of moves and planes and shipping crates, of jobs both old and new. Bill Erbach wrote those words as he sat looking through the window glass of his office contemplating the heat and the rain and the spring flowers, confronted with the fact that the time has surely come.

It has been an all too brief time but one fraught with great memories, friendships, experiences and love. To be able to reach for just a little time into your thoughts each week has been my pleasure and privilege, and I hope that these stories have brought you pleasure and maybe a little to think about. But, alas, the time has come for me to stop meeting with you like this for when you read this I will already be in the Military Community of Bamberg, Federal Republic of Germany. How About That?

I hope for each of you continued prosperity and happiness. The stories that I have used are nothing more than what is revealed in real life. They are no further away from you than your neighbor, co-worker, child, parent or friend.

Look for them yourselves, share them with others and you too can find this an exciting and wonderful place to be. I will leave nothing of mine behind but I surely will be taking a lot with me, and you my audience and especially my parishioners will be with me wherever I go. God Bless You.

Free NCOA Easter eggs

Free Easter eggs will be given to the first 50 people who visit the Non-commissioned Officers Association's service center tomorrow. The center is located at 2414 South Lumpkin Rd. The service center will be open from 10:30 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Good Friday services to be held

A Good Friday devotional service will be held at the Infantry Center Chapel today from 12:15-12:45 p.m. The theme is "The Seven Last Words." All Fort Benning personnel are invited.

Sunrise service

The 1981 Fort Benning Easter sunrise service will be conducted in the Hite Bowl, located off 101st Airborne Division Road. Chaplain (Capt.) Mark Fritch, pastor of the Infantry Center chapel, surveys the site prior to the final preparations.

CG's Easter and Passover message

The Jewish celebration of Passover and the Christian festival of Easter coincide this year in the observance of these holy days. These two great world religions and their messages of liberty, deliverance and hope are the touchstones for religious and individual freedoms from which our national heritage has developed.

We are a people and a nation bound together to proclaim, defend and exercise the highly-prized sanctions that a free people hold so dear, and we protect our faith and freedom so that it will be preserved as a true hope and promise for future generations on earth.

As a means for God's purpose in fragile, yet challenging and opportune times, may this holy season be a time of remembrance, renewal and rededication to the quest of human dignity and freedom for our nation and for our Fort Benning community.

I extend my best wishes for this holy season.

Reservists training here for 15 days

Public Affairs Office
76th Infantry Division (Training)
U.S. Army Reserve

More than 500 members of New England's 76th Division, U.S. Army Reserve, are currently on two weeks annual training here, attached to the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

"We're here to prepare for our mobilization mission and to practice our training techniques," says Col. James LeClair, brigade commander. "Fort Benning is an ideal location for us because of the facilities and the top-notch people we associate with here."

The 76th is one of 12 reserve training divisions located throughout the nation. In case of mobilization, Division personnel would be assigned to Fort Campbell, Ky., with the job of training volunteers and/or draftees.

Nearly 600 drills sergeants comprise the bulk of the Division's three training brigades. In addition to the 4th Brigade in Rhode Island, the 2nd is in Connecticut while the 1st stretches across Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont. All are One Station Unit Training (OSUT) outfits capable of taking a recruit through a 12-week cycle, combining basic and advanced individual training. Lt. Col. John G. Pappas of Portsmouth, N.H., commander of 1/417, said, "Our state of readiness increases every day. It's amazing what we can accomplish when we're able to go all-out for 15 days."

Drill Sergeants and Infantry Training Group instructors may be the Division's most visible personnel, but numerous other skills are found among the 4,000 men and women who make up the 76th.

The Division prides itself on it sharp and highly-motivated drill sergeants. Many are college graduates (including at least one Ph. D) and most have been trained in the 76th's own Leadership Academy.

The Reservists are from the Division's 4th Brigade in Rhode Island augmented by an additional battalion — the 1st of the 417th Infantry — from New Hampshire and Division Training Command from Maine.

Cash received for suggestions

Five people here, three military and two civilian, received some extra money recently when Maj. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., post commander, presented each of them with a suggestion award check.

Maj. Allen R. Brinkman, Directorate of Plans and Training, received $480. His suggestion of proposing the acquisition and positioning of maintenance free buildings to permit on site storage of test equipment was adopted. This resulted in an estimated annual savings in manhours of $8,513.

1st Lt. Anthony C. Perry, Finance and Accounting Center, was awarded $595. He suggested use of the Joint Uniformed Military Pay Systems-Army automated supplemental system to process departing or separating military personnel from Fort Benning. This suggestion eliminated two positions and permitted interface with the locator desk's active file, resulting in an estimated annual savings in manhours of $11,730.

SFC Eugene J. Middleton, Airborne Department, was awarded $855 for his suggestion to replace the eight-inch flat rubber bumpers, used on the controlled rigged parachutes, with elastic cord. An estimated annual savings in manhours and materials of $30,464 resulted from this suggestion.

An award of $700 was granted to Lester H. Andrews, Photographic Branch, Directorate of Plans and Training. He proposed that the photo lab's color print processor be converted from a five-step to a two-step chemistry system and that the existing equipment be modified. The adoption of this suggestion resulted in an estimated savings in manhours and materials of $16,000.

The estimated annual savings in manhours and materials resulting from the adoption of a suggestion by Samuel C. Cooper, Directorate of Industrial Operations, is $26,511. His idea was to modify the feeder device belt on a machine-eliminated destruction of sheets in the laundry process. This increased production time while removing torn sheets and earned Cooper $835.

According to Maxine P. Wing, suggestions program coordinator, post civilians submitted 70 suggestions during the current fiscal year. Fourteen adopted, resulting in a savings to the Army of $67,763.76. Award checks totalling $2,195 were presented to the suggestors.

Wing urged all post personnel to fight inflation by participating in the Suggestions Program. By saving the government money, they can help cut down taxes as well as adding to their income if their suggestion is adopted.

Suggestions should be submitted on DA Form 1045 which may be obtained in room 133, building 35, or by calling 545-4483.

Nine soldiers max SQT

Nine Fort Benning soldiers maxed their Skill Qualification Test (SQTs) during the FY81 second quarter.

Those scoring 100 percent in 11B, infantryman, were: SFCs Rufus Jordan, Rodney A. Chomlack and David W. Karabelski; SSgts. James R. Rostollan and Norvel C. Turner; and Sgt. Robert P. Volkman, all from The School Brigade.

Sergeant First Class David L. Jones, Company D, 8th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, maxed the (94B) food service specialist test; SSgt. Eugene Rich, Company B, 1st Infantry Training Group, the (11C) indirect fire infantryman test; and Sgt. Kenneth Richards, Company C, 197th Support Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, the petroleum supply specialist (76W) test.

Vehicle accidents increasing

During the past couple of months, an alarming statistic has become evident. A staggering increase is evident in vehicle traffic accidents here.

To date this year there has been a grand total of 287 vehicle accidents on the post. When compared with the same time period for last year, it represents a sharp increase of 34 percent.

Col. Ward Provost Marshal

This is even worse when statistics indicate there were 49 percent more vehicle accidents in March than either January or February of this year. March accidents totalled 106—an average of more than three per day! This spiraling trend is continuing into this month; we have already experienced 42 accidents during the first ten days. Undoubtedly this will lead to further increases in accidents unless some very positive corrective actions are taken now.

What causes vehicle accidents? An analysis indicates that excessive speed, inattentive driving, bad weather, and alcohol are the primary culprits.

What can be done to reverse this unfortunate waste of lives and property? Use of common sense and defensive driving are a must. Also, slow down, pay attention, exercise more care, and never mix alcohol with driving.

Drive with the realization that driving is a full time job requiring full concentration. Treat all automobiles with respect and full consideration. When improperly handled, they become two-ton weapons on wheels with the potential for a disaster just looking for a place to happen.

What is the price of a traffic accident? So far this year vehicle accidents have resulted in 37 personal injuries and two fatalities.

Yes, there is even genuine misfortune in the most minor "fender-bender." Loss of time, money, and the inconveniences of being without a vehicle during the time for repairs all interfere with the conduct of personal and daily affairs. Personal off-duty time is also forfeited if a soldier is found to be at fault in the accident.

Current Fort Benning policy requires that individuals found at fault in motor vehicle accidents will attend a 10-hour remedial driver's training class during the evenings after duty hours.

The term "vehicle accident" is a misnomer in that they do not just happen—they are caused! However, they can be avoided with the exercise of good judgement, maturity and caution.

Learn to drive defensively and look out for others on the road as well as for yourself. Only you can reserve the trend; the choice is yours.

First aid skills needed to survive

Pvt. Robert Fuhler of Company A, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade allows his fellow soldier to test his first aid skill at protecting a burn.

Public Affairs Office
1st Infantry Training Brigade

First aid training at the 1st Infantry Training Brigade is a valuable asset as well as a necessity.

In order to survive in battle, first aid is especially important because the nearest hospital can often be miles (or hours) away. Even with the exceptional emergency rescues performed by the Medivac helicopter crews, an injured soldier's main hope for survival still rests with his fellow soldiers.

The care a well trained soldier can give an injured partner can often be the difference between life and death. With this in mind, first aid is taken very seriously here.

According to one sergeant in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, first Aid is necessary to make the soldiers trained here the best infantrymen in the world. They are taught everything from mouth-to-mouth resuscitation techniques to methods used to protect fractures.

Once the soldiers are trained to handle emergency first aid situations, they have become a more valuable asset to the Army, as well as themselves.

"At first, we don't really know why we should be taking first aid, but after seeing some of the situations they gave us, we know that the training is really important for us, in order to become well-rounded infantrymen," said one young student soldier.

Hero buried w at Arlington C

By Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, who died last week at the age of 88, was buried at Arlington National Cemetery Tuesday with full military honors.

He was the Army's last five-star general, having achieved this rank in 1950.

He served three tours at Fort Benning, as a student in 1924, as an instructor in 1929, and finally as the Commandant in 1941.

The general's military career was distinguished. He served four years as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS), the highest position an officer of the U.S. armed forces can attain. It was created in 1949, and General Bradley was the first to fill it.

During World War II, General Bradley commanded a division, a corps, an army and finally a group of armies. His last command in Europe, the 12th United States Army Group, numbered approximately 1,300,000 combat troops.

Known for keeping his command post close to the front lines, General Bradley was called "the finest Army group commander" by General of the Army George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff during World War II.

General Bradley was born at Clark, Mo., Feb. 12, 1893. His military career began in 1911 when he entered the U.S. Military Academy. He was graduated in the class of 1915 as an infantry officer and held the distinction of being the first member of that class to become a brigadier general.

During and after World War I, General Bradley served at several stateside Army posts in many capacities, including tactics instructor at his alma mater in West Point, N.Y.

rt Benning and the Infantry School, as did West t, played a prominent role in General Bradley's aration for duties at the highest military and gov- ental levels. It was in 1924 that he received orders West Point to Benning as a student in the Infantry er Advance Course. Still regretting that he never he opportunity to serve overseas in World War I, und that the subject matter — a mixture of weap- ourses and tactics of units up to brigade — was to king. Of more importance, the course consisted ly of fire and movement and how to coordinate and movement. There was very little material on rench warfare of World War I.

He later said: "I think e the end of the course, we all felt that not having n overseas was not a handicap. We found that a number of people who had been overseas were of 'locked-in' in the methods of trench warfare. It more difficult for them to foget and get into open are than it was for some of us who had not had attle experience."

sure, because . . . it would have taken them longer. And this way I was called to General Marshall's attention — in that I had given the whole thing myself."

In 1941, Omar N. Bradley, the first General in his class, returned to Benning for the third time, now as Commandant. With the rapid expansion of the Army, there was a critical need for offices. General Courtney Hodges, the previous commandant, told General Bradley that he could not "get another student into this reservation without a shoehorn."

About a month later General Bradley had to present a plan to the same General Hodges. General Bradley said, "Courtney, if you can give me some more classes, I can take six more classes of officer candidates without more instructors, and if you give me 106 more instructors, I can take on another 1,200 on top of that."

After explaining his plan, he found General Hodges "a little bit skeptical," but a week later he received a call: "Brad, when do you want the first class?"

The expansion, an historical fact, was tremendous. General Bradley's explanation made it look easy. "All you do is, for example, a class comes in on Monday and one group of instructors would take them through the schedule one week at a time. We had a group in charge of each week, and at the end of that week they would turn over their students to the next group and pick up the class that entered one week later. All I had to do was get an extra group of instructors — I believe it took 106 for all 12 weeks of instruction. You would take in another class on Tuesday and start them through, and another one on Wednesday, and finally we were taking in five classes a week, each one with 1,200 students."

Leads way in Normandy

General Bradley took command of the 82d Infantry Division, later redesignated the 82d Airborne Division, within two months after Pearl Harbor.

Then early in 1943, General Bradley was selected by the Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, as the latter's personal representative in the field in North Africa. Later he commanded II Corps in the Tunisian Campaign.

During the summer of 1943, General Bradley was selected to command the U.S. First Army in the Normandy invasion. On June 6, 1944, General Bradley landed in France with the First Army to break the Atlantic wall. At St. Lo on July 26, the First Army successfully broke through enemy lines.

By August, General Bradley had assumed command of the U.S. 12th Army Group, which eventually comprised the combat forces of the First, Third, Ninth and Fifteenth American Armies.

After the war, the general became administrator of Veterans' Affairs and assisted in the post-war demobilization of American Forces. He relinquished that post in December 1947 to become Army Chief of Staff effective Feb. 7, 1948. On Sept. 22, 1950, General Bradley was promoted to the rank of General of the Army.

In 1951, the general authored "A Soldier's Story," a book in which he related his World War II experiences. On June 18, 1951, commentator Edward R. Murrow said, "This is the best command book to emerge from the last war . . . It is an ven-handed, judicious and brilliant account. If I'm permitted to recommend a single book telling how the late war was fought and who fought it, this would be my choice — A Soldier's Story."

The "GI's General" continued to be concerned with the welfare of the men who served him and the country. General Bradley served as a member of the President's Committee for the Employment of the Physically Handicapped. He was a director for the United States Wheel Chair Sports Fund and a trustee for the Joseph Bulova School of Watchmaking. The latter is a privately endowed school designed for and dedicated to training the handicapped in watchmaking skills.

Picnic set for May 16

Come one, come all, see the 3,000-pound chicken. Well, not really one monstrous bird but a ton and a half of barbecued chicken. Plus over two tons of barbecued pork, hotdogs, hamburgers, beans, macaroni and potato salad, beverages and truckloads of ice cream, bread and buns.

All these taste treats will be prepared for the annual Armed Forces Day Open House/Association of the United States Army picnic on Saturday, May 16 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. at Fort Benning's Victory Pond.

Fourteen chow lines will be set up for fast service. Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children ages three through 12. Tickets may be purchased at local banks, the Chambers of Commerce, unit sergeants major or call 545-4432. Picnic tickets will also be sold at the entrance.

Free bus transportation will be provided from various locations on post to the open house and picnic location.

Don't miss any of the fun and food. Make plans now to attend the Armed Forces Day Open House and picnic on Saturday, May 16.

Adopt me

Animals need care too. People have been adopting dogs and cats from the post's veterinary clinic for $7 to cover the cost of vaccination and blood tests. Save a life and gain a friend.

Custer Terrace

- The second adult night will be held Friday in the community life room from 7:30 to 11 p.m. Card and board games will be just part of the fun. Since this is a chance for parents to get away out of the house, they are asked not to bring their children. There is a 25 cent admission fee.

- Women's exercise classes are still going on from 1 to 2 p.m. in the community life room Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

- The ladies softball team needs equipment like bats and gloves. If anyone has any extra softball equipment or knows where they can get some, call 687-4978 or 544-1332.

- At Custer Terrace, the Tiny Tots will be graduating on Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., at the Custer Terrace Chapel. Refreshments will be served.

Lavoie Manor

- The Lavoie Community Life Center is still looking for volunteers for their many programs.

Some of these programs include welcoming new residents, youth and adult activities.

- Chaplain (Capt.) Henry P. Harvey is the new chaplain at Lavoie. He was previously stationed in Germany.

- An easter egg hunt for the tiny tots is going on this morning from 9-11 a.m. There will also be an Easter egg hunt for older children immediately following the Easter service on Sunday at the Lavoie Chapel.

Moving needs early plans

All service members who receive reassignment orders are encouraged to make early preparations for the movement of their household goods and unaccompanied baggage. Early arrangements reduce possible last minute problems.

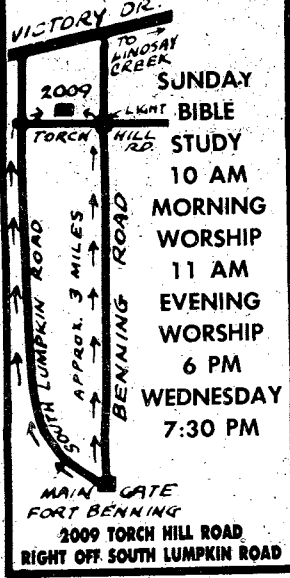

May through September are very busy months. Plans for moving should be made as soon as orders are received. A minimum of five working days notice is necessary to complete the pick up of property.

Call the Transportation Office to find out how many copies or orders are required for each type of shipment. Service members must furnish the correct number of orders at the time of counseling.

Spouses requesting shipment must provide a Power of Attorney or Letter of Authorization from the service members along with the correct number of orders. Counselors are available and appointments are encouraged.

For more information call 545-4857 (outbound), 545-5878 (inbound), or 545-4382 (non-temporary storage).

Tornado season follows winter

With winter finally gone and spring on the scene, Fort Benning is subject to its most violent weather.

The winter cold frontal passages combine with warm moist air from the gulf to produce severe thundershowers/thunderstorms with the potential for tornadoes.

Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron is an Air Force unit assigned to Fort Benning to provide weather support to the installation. The Director of Security issues warnings for weather that might be hazardous to life and property here.

However, the National Weather Service at Columbus Airport has responsibility for providing weather support to the Columbus area (excluding Fort Benning).

Types of advisories

First there are two types of advisories issued regarding tornadoes.

A tornado watch is issued whenever conditions are favorable to the formation of a tornado. A tornado warning is issued when conditions are favorable so that formation of a tornado is probable, or is already occurring.

The National Weather Service's tornado watch originates from Kansas City. These watches are usually for a several county, or perhaps a state area.

Tornado warnings are issued locally. Detachment 10, on the other hand, is primarily concerned only Fort Benning and both tornado watches and tornado warnings are generated locally here. Because the National Weather Service is interested in large areas (for watches) while Detachment 10, is specifically interested in Fort Benning, there are occasions when a tornado watch might be in effect for the Muscogee County area with no watch for Fort Benning.

Both Detachment 10 and the National Weather Service weather station maintain close cooperation and support each other during periods of bad weather. Both have storm detection radars and qualified operators.

Weather forecasters at Detachment 10 is under extreme pressure during periods of severe weather. Since weather forecasting is not an exact science, particularly for tornado forecasting, the forecaster must weigh many factors in order to decide whether to issue a warning or not.

The probability of a tornado-occurrence, and the possible consequences, must be evaluated against the disruption caused by issuing a "false alarm." The average life of a tornado is about 3 minutes (with an average ground path of 1.5 nautical miles.) Therefore, early detection of a tornado is extremely difficult.

Certain severe thunderstorms exhibit characteristics and radar signatures that indicate the probability of tornado formation. However, a storm that produced a tornado in Phenix City may pass over Fort Benning with no tornado activity.

While Fort Benning is not a major tornado area, they have occurred here and will again. Severe lightning, heavy rains, destructive winds and large heavy hail are often "advance men" for these most violent storms.

Safety procedures should be tested periodically and reviewed by all individuals, units and activities before the storm season, during tornado warnings and early on when severe storm advisories are in effect. To wait until the storm or tornado has arrived is much too late to determine what survival actions are needed.

"WHEN YOU'RE A CIVILIAN AGAIN, AN EXTRA $1,400 A YEAR SURE COMES IN HANDY."

"I got out of the Army in February of 1977, right when all the prices were going up. Food. Clothing. Gas. You name it and it went up.

"Fortunately, when I was out-processing, someone asked me if I wanted to make some extra money with a local Army Reserve unit, and I said yes.

"It's good I joined right away, because it took me a couple of months to find a good full-time job.

"Even with a regular job, the extra $1,400 I earned with the Reserve came in handy. It was the difference between barely making ends meet and being able to put a little money away.

"By going direct from Active into the Reserve, I was also able to keep my rank of E-4. I'm now an E-5, pulling in over $1,600 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

"I'm also taking advantage of some other benefits.

I buy a lot of my auto supplies at the PX. I carry low-cost government life insurance through the Reserve. I also think the retirement package is a good deal.

"A side benefit that's helped me is the additional training I've picked up in the Reserve. I was an MP on active duty but have become an Accounting Specialist in the Reserve. Right now, that's helping me with the business degree I'm working toward at a local college.

"So I can recommend the Army Reserve to anyone coming off active duty. The extra income is good, and it's nice being with people who can appreciate what you achieved in the service."

Astros dedicating season to soldiers

By Tim Boivin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Nothing to do in Columbus, you say? Like $*&?!%#@ there isn't! Just ask the Columbus Astros!

The Astros are back for another successful season and dedicating it to Fort Benning.

From the programs all the way to Team President B. Dayton Preston, the chord struck is the same. The high note of the Astro's support is the soldiers from Fort Benning who come out to cheer the Astros on.

Special nights

The Astros have declared every Friday and Saturday night 1st Infantry Training Brigade (ITB) night. Every soldier from ITB gets in to the park for free.

May 14, a Thursday, is Fort Benning Youth Activities night. Every YA ball player who wears a uniform gets to escort their entire family into the park free. The Astros play Birmingham that night. Before the game there will be contests between YA teams.

Last year I coached a YA tee-ball team. One of the high points of last year, besides watching each of the players progress on my team, was seeing a few of my kids playing on the Big League diamond at Golden Park. I was doubly proud when one of my players, Mike Wall, hit a home run.

That was possible through the generosity of the Astros. Oft-heard is the gripe soldiers aren't appreciated in the communities surrounding a military post. The Astros go a long way to disprove that theory.

Genuine concern

Five of the seven plaques on Preston's office wall are Army related. He takes pride in serving the Army community here, whether as second vice president of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) or president of the Astros. He is genuinely concerned with serving the Army.

The Astros are even going to play a game this summer at Fort Benning's Gowdy Field July 5 against Charlotte, the day before the Southern League All-Star game. Last Tuesday night was AUSA night at Golden Park and the tickets were flowing all around Fort Benning.

Sound like the Astros are doing something for soldiers? As the song goes, "You ain't seen nothing yet!" Preston wants other units interested in having a special night to contact him at 322-7706 to set it up. He'll provide the entertainment free; all the units have to do is get the soldiers down to Golden Park off Victory Drive behind the Confederate Naval Museum and the Municipal Auditorium. Airborne Department is already scheduling a night for their soldiers, and Preston is thinking something up for the engineers here too.

The old saying goes, "Every duty is what you make of it". It helps when organizations like the Astros and people like B. Dayton Preston help out with their support. The least the Fort Benning community can do is return the support with some of our own.

Baseball poem

As registration continues until April 30 for the upcoming Youth Activities baseball season, a very important reflection comes to mind. What is the real purpose of youth athletics?

Besides wholesome recreation and learning the values of cooperation, there is an important contribution to the development of the whole child. Keeping the total youth process in mind, I ran across a poem that serves some good advice to parents.

He stands at the plate with heart pounding fast
The bases are loaded the die has been cast Mom and Dad can't help him he stands all alone
A hit at this moment would send the team home
The ball meets the plate he swings and he misses There's a groan from the crowd with some boos and some hisses
A thoughtless voice cries
"Strike out da bum" Tears fill his eyes the game's no longer fun
So open your heart
For it's moments like this a man you can make Keep this in mind when you hear someone forget He's just a little boy and not a man yet*

Interested persons desiring to coach may contact the Youth Activities Sports Office at 545-3070/3713. Opening day will be May 23.

YA soccer

Gordon Field was again full of action of high-spirited Youth Activities soccer action this week.

In the Termite Division, the Tornadoes barely swept by the Chiefs 2-1. The Tornadoes Angelito Bernier and Mike Goddard each kicked in a goal. The action in the game for the Tornadoes was definitely 'second-half' as both their goals were scored during that time. Brad Wright scored the Chief's goal.

The Eagles slid past the Bullets 1-0. Sam Lucas scored the Eagle's winning goal.

In the Pee Wee Division, the Red Devils outscored the Bobcats 4-2. For the Red Devils Chad Hotter, Carlos Benson, Jason Andrade and Alfred Giavelli all scored. Robert Quinn and Jim Sutherland scored for the Bobcats.

The Cougars and the Demons tied 4-4. Ron O'Neal and Terence Kimball both scored two for the Cougars. Jason Bargewell kept the Demons abreast of the Cougars by popping in three and Adam Helmbold added one.

In the Midget League, the Demons routed the Panthers 8-1. Piet Hoebeke led the way with three goals, William Cassidy and Jeffrey Christenson had two each and Maxwell Ammons added one for the Demons. Timothy Sanders scored the lone Panther goal.

The Cosmos shut out the Hustlers 5-0, or to put it more bluntly, the score was Daryl Grogan five, Cosmos zip. Grogan scored all the Cosmo goals in an outstanding effort.

The Saints slid by the Rebels 4-2. The Saint's Jason Entlich scored three goals and Tom Longhorn added the other for the Saints.

Runner ready for Marathon

A Fort Benning soldier will be among those endurance runners who take off in the granddaddy of all marathons Monday in Bean Town.

Maj. Andrew Erickson, branch chief of the current program of instruction for the Directorate of Training and Development (DTD), qualified for the Boston Marathon by running a 2:45:48 in the WRBL Pepsi-Cola Marathon in Columbus. He finished third overall in the race but only had to run a 2:50 to qualify for the under 40 age group.

The WRBL marathon was only Erickson's second marathon, although he did say, "I've ran since I was a freshman in High school, all the way through college at Alfred University in New York. I ran cross country, the mile, the 880 and the two-mile relay."

Erickson runs 50 miles per week but is increasing to 60 miles in preparation for the marathon. He said, "I run mostly after work and on weekends. Running is 80 percent mental, just getting in the right frame of mind and pushing yourself."

Erickson, married to Debi and with two children, Andy and Anna, said, "My kids are into swimming but I harrassed my wife into running. She doesn't compete, but just runs to stay in shape."

Bunny Run

The 1981 Fort Benning Bunny Run will be held tomorrow, starting at Crain Hall, Bldg. 229, at 10 a.m.

Open to the general public, the Bunny Run will first feature a 2.5 mile race and then a five-mile race at 10:15 a.m. No entry fees are required and registration will begin at Crain Hall at 9:15 a.m.

First and second place finishers in each division will receive an award and each overall man and woman in each race will also receive an award. Each runner in the Bunny Run will receive a patch.

County roadrace

ELLAVILLE, Ga. — The five-mile Ellaville-Schley County Roadrace and Fun Run is scheduled to take place April 18 at 9 a.m. in Ellaville, Ga.

Sponsored by the Ellaville-Schley County Homecoming Celebration, the race starts and ends at the Courthouse in the center of town.

T-shirts will be given to all paid participants. Awards will be presented to the top three finishers in each age group of the five-mile run and to the top three male and female finishers overall in the Fun Run.

Pre-registration is $4 and ends April 17. Race day registration fee is $5 (until 9 a.m.). Make checks payable to the Ellaville-Schley County Roadrace and send entry forms to Tommy Barnes, Race Director, P.O. Box 427, Ellaville, Ga. 31806.

Marathon clinic

Physical and mental preparation are what it takes to make a successful marathon runner. A clinic for the beginning marathon runner will be held May 24 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 6262 Hamilton Road in Columbus.

The clinic is being sponsored by the physical fitness department of Rehabilitation Services of Columbus. The clinic provides marathoners with information to physically and mentally prepare for, start and finish a 26 mile, 385 yard jaunt.

Registration for the clinic closes Monday. The cost of the clinic is $60 and enrollment is limited to the first 20 who register. The course includes testing, materials and three months follow-up. For more information call 324-3558.

Marksmen shoot for medals in Mexico

Eleven members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit were part of the United States Team that recently competed in the 10th Benito Juarez Shooting Championships in Mexico City, Mexico, April 5th through April 11th.

A total of 51 personnel made up the U.S. contingent including some of the best men, women and junior competitors in the country. Thirty three nations with more than 400 participants competed in the annual championships. Some of the attending nations included: Sweden, Switzerland, South Korea, USSR, Australia, East Germany, Great Britian and most of the countries of South America to mention a few.

won the gold medal in International Skeet competition with 197 out of 200 to edge A. Torres of Cuba at 196. Dryke and Sgt. Dean Clark also picked up silver medals in team competition. Veteran shooter Lt. Col. Lones Wigger won two gold medals in 50 meters rifle, 300 meter prone and placed second in 50 meter prone and 300 meter position.

SFC's Erich Buljung and John Kailer placed first and second in the 25 meter Center Fire Pistol event with scores of 589 and 588. Kailer was forced into a shoot-off after being tied with B. Tili of Brazil, but won a 15 shot tie breaking event with 149 points to 143. Kailer also won the 25 meter rapid fire special event with 591 over M. Torres of Cuba at 584.

In the International Trap competition, SSgt. Ernest Neel placed second to M. Ellis of Australia after both had tied at 196 out of 200 birds. Neel lost the 25 bird shoot-off by one target, 24 birds to 25 by Ellis. Neel picked up a gold medal in team competition however, as he leads the U.S. to first place over Argentina with 439 to 421.

The final medal count by each of the top five countries are as follows:

	Gold	Silver	Bronze	total
United States	8	6	7	21
Soviet Union	8	3	6	17
Switzerland	3	3	3	9
Australia	2	1	0	3
Cuba	1	2	2	5

Squirrels bother part-time writer

By Don Rhodes
USMC Public Affairs Office

Our regular columnist is TDY in Indianapolis enjoying herself at a course of study given by the Defense Information School.

I thought I'd take this opportunity to help out around here. What the heck, it's Tuesday night and anything beats watching, "Laverne and Shirley."

I understand this column is about sports so I'm going to write about squirrel chasing. I could write about a lot of other sports like putt-putt golf for example, but when Boivin did that we got a nasty letter from the putt-putt people.

So I chose squirrel chasing.

I don't know much about squirrel chasing but the guy next door sure does. He has squirrels at his house all the time. They come to eat his tomatoes.

When I first saw the guy last summer, I thought he was a little bit strange because he was always running around with his arms up in the air yelling at the top of his lungs.

I hate to admit it but the last year we lost the battle to the resident tree rodents that inhabit our housing area. This year we've talked it over but we still don't know what to do.

We feel reasonably certain that running around waving our arms in the air and yelling at the top of our lungs isn't the best answer. We need something more scientific.

Like putting poison on some of the tomatoes.

We're afraid of poison, because the way our luck goes we would eat one of the poison tomatoes instead of the squirrels. Or a squirrel would phone the SPCA on us.

We thought about hiring Jack Swift to come out and hip-shoot some of the little critters with his B-B gun like he does tomato worms but we don't have enough money and discharging any type of fire arm on post is illegal. We sure want to remain legal!

It wouldn't be so bad if they all just congregated around and only ate one tomato, but they like to take three or four bites out of each tomato.

We were thinking about stuffing straw into our kid's ears and standing them out in the tomato patch like scarecrows but our problem isn't the crows, and since the squirrels in our neighborhood have been known to hi-jack bicycles while the kids are still on them we gave up on that idea.

We thought about tanks, air strikes, claymores, C-4 and a lot of other things but then we decided that those things would just be self-defeating because they would probably ruin all of the tomato plants as well as the squirrels.

We finally came up with two viable alternatives. One: Don't plant tomatoes and two: Run around with our arms up in the air screaming at the top of our lungs.

By golly, when those little critters come around this year they better be wearing their ear plugs and eye blinders 'cause we're gonna scare the tomato right out of them.

N. Hodges(front), Albany YMCA Blue Stingray's and M. Odum, Columbus Aquatic Club, are off and on their way in the 50 yard breaststroke.

'Cudas host 19 swim clubs

The biggest splash of the year at the Briant Wells Pool was seen last weekend as the Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team played host to 19 state swim clubs.

The occasion was the 1981 Georgia Short Course Junior Olympics. There were over 540 participants ranging in age from eight to 18. There were a total of 40 events and 288 heats run over Saturday and Sunday.

Helping make the two-day event a success were parents of the Barracuda Swim Team and 27 members of the newly graduating class from 50th Company, Basic Officer's Candidate School, Class 2-81.

In the individual swimming events, medals were awarded to the top six swimmers while in the relays medals were given to the top three teams. Roland White, 15, took fifth place for the Barracudas in the 200 yard free style for the 15-18 year old age group with a time of 1:59:9. He is the son of Maj. and Mrs. Roland White.

David Christensen, 13, took sixth place in the 200 yard free style for 13-14 year olds with a time of 2:05. He is the son of Col. Douglas Christensen.

The Barracudas are looking for more swimmers ranging in age from six to 18. If you are interested, call Youth Activities at 5445-3070.

Energy crisis for America?

By Bill Powell

USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's a beautiful night in the city. The neon lights blaze away, as do the street lights. Department stores and businesses are lit up like daylight and the sound of cash registers fill the night.

Movie theaters are doing a brisk business, people are going in and out as the hum of the projector and air conditioning systems join together. Then just as surely as the light and power were there they are gone. People are in the dark, powerless and afraid. The source of the confusion and fear is the loss of energy.

The power isn't off only for a little while, it's gone for good. Sound far-fetched? Maybe so, but if we don't take steps to conserve energy now we could be facing this sort of situation in the future.

"When the Circuit Breaks - America's Energy Crisis" details America's energy problems. It will be featured on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable. It's only one of the programs featured on WFBG-TV next week, others are:

- "Together Forever" tells the story of three couples with marital problems and how they try to solve them.

- "The Benning Report" features SSgt. Rick Saltzman and his unusual stamp collection.

- "Mirror, Mirror" looks at the story of a young, unhappy high school student with a poor self-image who tries to find himself.

- "Charlie, You Made the Night Too Long" deals with the subject of prejudice and how people try to hide it.

- "Fitness for Leadership" takes a look at the physical training and conditioning of future officers at West Point.

- "Big Picture - Partners in Progress" details the history of the Army Corps of Engineers from frontier days onward.

- "Spectrum" features music that is contemporary and popular from the soul program Forward Motion to the contemporary popular music program Contempo. Specials are also a part of this four-hour music program. Neil Diamond is the featured artist next week on Musicmakers. Some of Diamond's biggest hits will be heard as well as songs from his new movie "The Jazz Singer."

Remember, "Weather Warning Black" indicates a tornado or steady winds in excess of 55 knots (63 MPH) or gusts over 60 knots (69 MPH) are due to occur within 1 hour. The signal is the Civil Defense Siren System with a steady sound of 5 minutes duration.

When you hear this signal at any time (except on Mondays at noon or on clear days when the sirens are tested) be prepared to take prompt action for the protection of life and property.

Some key people-protecting measures are as follows:

- If outside, go inside immediately. Stay off the streets! Serious injuries often result from falling glass, signs and flying debris. Places of assembly such as theaters, churches, commissaries and post exchanges should be evacuated only if directed.
- If sufficient time exists, fasten down movable awnings, shutters and signs. Place inside or fasten down all loose material such as boxes, garbage cans and similar items which might be blown about, causing damage.

- Keep open one or more windows on the opposite side of the building from which the wind is blowing to equalize pressure.

- Go to the basement or the ground floor. Stay away from windows. Seek protection from reinforced portions of the building, i.e., door frames, bathrooms and the stairwells, use the floor next to a wall, under heavy furniture or between kitchen appliances.

- Avoid electrical wiring. Downed power lines and exposed wiring in damaged buildings are a grave menace. Instruct children about these.

DUNKIN' DONUTS HATCHES A SPECIAL KIND OF EASTER EGG.

ONLY $1.79
A DOZEN.
2 DOZEN FOR $3.29

We're talking about Dunkin' Donuts Easter Eggs, not your typical Easter eggs.

You've never seen anything like them before.

These new, delicious, egg-shaped, sprinkle-topped, chocolaty-covered donut pastries come in their own special egg carton.

Which means, this year, instead of having to hunt for eggs, you'll know just where to find them: at participating Dunkin' Donuts shops while supply lasts.

DUNKIN' DONUTS
It's worth the trip.

'Fun Fair' to feature valuable medical screening

Bean bags will be flying, paint brushes will be splattering and scores of pairs of little feet will be dancing to disco strains on April 25, 1981 at the Children's Fun Fair.

The Fun Fair is a special day for children in the Muscogee County area. Children are the focus of this annual event to be held at Columbus High School from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

In addition to various activities, an important feature of the fair is a free Health Screening Clinic for all pre-school children.

The Children's Fun Fair is a way of celebrating the Week of the Young Child. This is the week set aside each year to reflect on the needs and rights of children, to examine how well we care for them and how we educate them.

All children ages 10 and under who are accompanied by an adult are invited to participate in the Fun Fair activities. Some of the activities offered for fun and excitement are a petting zoo, painting, water play, planting, bean bag games, tow trucks, parachute play, face painting, disco dancing, puzzles, games and much more.

Hot dogs and drinks will be available at a nominal charge, so families can plan to come and have lunch and spend an entire day of fun together.

The Screening Clinic is to provide free eye, ear and dental screenings to four and five-year-old children who will enter Muscogee County and Fort Benning schools for the first time next fall. Sometimes vision, hearing or dental problems in young children may go unnoticed by parents.

If these problems can be recognized before the child enters school, they can often be treated before they have a chance to interfere with the child's learning development. Children entering kindergarten will still be required to have a physical exam and necessary immunizations before beginning school this fall.

This screening is just a check to spot vision, hearing or dental problems that may need attention.

The Fun Fair is sponsored by the Lower Chattahoochee Association on Young Children. This organization is composed of dedicated early childhood teachers, daycare workers and nursery school personnel.

The Screening Clinic is co-sponsored by the Auxiliary to the Muscogee County Medical Society, the Auxiliary to the Muscogee County Dental Society, and the Interns' and Residents' Wives Club.

In addition, teachers from the Speech, Language and Hearing Impaired Program of the Muscogee County School System participate in the health screening. Volunteers are devoting countless hours of planning and work to make this an exciting and valuable event for the children of our community.

Why not make this a special day for YOUR child? Get ready for a day of fun in the sun at the Children's Fun Fair. Do your pre-school child a favor at the same time by participating in the free Screening Clinic.

Callaway Gardens schedule

Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain, Ga. kicks off summer with the pre-season opening of Robin Lake Beach April 25.

The famous beach will be open from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. April 25 and from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. on April 26. The "Craftsmen and Springtime" program will highlight the festivities.

Admission to the beach is $4.25 for adults; $2.50 for children ages 6-11; children five and under and annual pass holders are admitted at no charge. Robin Lake Beach will be open to visitors each Friday through Sunday during the month of May.

For more information call (404) 663-221, extension 291.

OWC School of Music

The Officers' Wives School of Music offers classes in voice, piano, flute, guitar, electric guitar, banjo and other string instruments. Lessons are given at the OWC Activities Center. To enroll call Marlene Jorgensen at 687-6224.

Morning matinee

The Plaza Theatre, in Cross Country Shopping Plaza, is sponsoring two Saturday Morning Matinees for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, tomorrow and April 18.

The price is $1 per person (all ages). Clowns and other entertainment will also be featured and the proceeds will be donated to the muscular dystrophy association.

Dramatizers auditions

Auditions for the Fort Benning Dramatizers' next production, "The Love Suicide at Schofield Barracks," a courtroom drama by Romulus Linney, will be held Thursday until April 25 at the Benning Playhouse. Auditions start at 7:30 p.m. The Playhouse is located in Bldg. 72, at the corner of Anderson Street and Wold Avenue. Roles are available for 15 men and five women. One woman must be of Oriental descent.

Anyone interested in auditioning prepare a monologue from another show, drama or comedy, one to two minutes in length. However, if you do not have a prepared cutting and still wish to audition. The director will have you read scripts readily available at the playhouse.

The show is also in need of production crew members. If you don't have any experience in play production but do have the interest, come and try out. The Dramatizers weekly meetings are held Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m.

For more information call 545-5057.

Volunteers needed

The Army Community Service needs volunteers as financial advisors to assist soldiers and their families in making ends meet from payday to payday.

Budget volunteers select a period of two to three hours each week to schedule appointments for soldiers or family members who want assistance in household planning.

For an interview, call the Volunteer Supervisor at 545-1233/1169.

Hunt Club

The Hunt Club, near Stonewall and Marne Road on Main Post, is open everyday except Wednesdays. The stable has 40 acres of riding trails.

The club offers lessons for children and adults. Children's lessons are given on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and adult lessons are taught on Thursday and Friday. The trails that wind around the wooded areas between the Hunt Club and Martin Army Community Hospital are open to riders. The club has 13 horses that are rented out to non-members as available for $4.50 an hour.

There is a $17 fee to become a member. Members may rent horses for $3 per hour or may board their own horses at the stable.

The Hunt Club is open to all active duty, retired personnel and their families. One guest per person is allowed.

Kindergarten round-up

The Fort Benning Dependent Schools will sponsor a Kindergarten Round-Up May 6 through May 8 for the 1981-82 school year.

Registration will be held at post elementary schools from 9 a.m.-1:30 p.m. All children who will be five-years-old on or before Sept. 1 will be eligible to register.

Parents should bring their child to the assigned school to complete forms, tour the kindergarten facilities and receive a round-up packet of additional information.

Kindergarten pre-registration will be held at the following schools:

- Frank Lloyd School (544-3422), for children living in Davis Hills, north of Bouton Heights and including Roark Court.

- McBride School (544-2342), for children living in McGraw Manor.

- Wilbur School (544-1122), for children living in Custer Terrace, Battle Park, Upatoi Terrace and the Old Officer Capehart

- Edward White School (545-4623), for children living on Block 12 of Main Post north of Wold Avenue and Main Post north of Running Avenue, east of Lumpkin Road and south of Bouton Heights including Nash Court.

- Dexter School (545-3424) for children living on Block 9 of Main Post south of Running Avenue and west of Lumpkin Road, including the New Officer Capehart.

- Wilson School (545-5723) for children living in Lavoie Manor.

Beware late sleepers!

Sunday at 2 a.m. Fort Benning will make its annual jump forward to daylight savings time. This will allow one extra hour of daylight during the spring and summer months. So remember to set your clocks forward one hour when you retire for the night Sunday or you may find yourself running late Monday.

'Bull' to Army's critics

By Lou Beall

Chicago Branch, Office of the Chief of Public Affairs
Department of the Army

WASHINGTON—Have you noted some recent news media coverage of the American soldier? They seek to prove that you and I lack the savvy, intelligence and dedication to get the job done. I say, "bull."

Every time I hear this negative hoopla—those unqualified accusations that I cannot function effectively—my anger soars. Why? Because I'm fulfilling my responsibilities as a soldier and daily strive to become more professional. I refuse to shortchange fellow taxpayers, myself and the democracy I defend by slouching on the job.

At least Army leaders know the truth. Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, U. S. Army Europe's commander, recently stated, "The Army is well-trained. Individual soldiers, though often provided only with apprentice-level training before joining the command, are converted rapidly to combat readiness by a competent non-commissioned and commissioned officer corps." This is a clear example of how Army leadership views us, the individual soldier.

While reporting to the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Preparedness, Gen. Kroesen added, "Soldiers and their leaders generally reflect confidence in their ability to do their jobs . . . skill qualification tests, marksmanship and gunnery scores and the results of training-and-evaluation exercises provide indications that the force is trained to accomplish the mission." But this high-ranking leader isn't the only one to speak out on the soldier's behalf.

In a speech reported by the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Press, Gen. Robert Shoemaker, U. S. Army Forces Command's top officer, said, "Today's young soldiers are the same high caliber as past servicemen." However, as a member of the "new" Army, perhaps I shouldn't be compared with the World War II draftee. Remember, my environment is different, and Gen. Shoemaker agrees. "I think that young soldiers aren't brought up like those in my generation . . . they won't tolerate bad leadership."

Some negative newspaper articles even implied that today's soldiers barely possess enough brains to play electronic games. At least one high-ranking official balks at that allegation. A Washington Post reporter asked William J. Perry, former Undersecretary of Defense, if the American wonder weapons have become too complex for the ordinary soldier to operate. According to Perry, these critics confuse complexity with technology.

The former undersecretary used the new M-1 (Abrams) tank as his example. He pointed out that the Abrams is much easier to drive and operate than the tanks of World War II vintage. Perry also feels that a person could be trained to drive it and fire its gun in about five minutes. He attributes this ease to advanced technology but reiterates the Abrams' simplicity of operation.

Perry explained that the new tank's gunner views targets on a screen, then matches a dot of light to the target displayed, squeezes the trigger twice and proceeds to destroy the target. The computer does most of the work. It even figures out the windage and motions of the gunner's tank and the target.

All the soldier has to do is identify the target and it can be destroyed with deadly accuracy. To think the average soldier lacks the intelligence to recognize a target and pull a trigger twice is insulting.

Just how important am I—the individual soldier—in this age of advanced technology and electronic gadgetry? Well, I, teamed with the sister services, play a crucial role in checkmating Armageddon. Our presence safeguards peace. Steven L. Canby of the Christian Science Monitor writes: "... as well known from past experience, nuclear strategic forces alone cannot cope with the complexity of today's world. Strategic forces form the backdrop, but it is the conventional forces that are the operational tools of foreign policy."

And how do I keep this operational tool Canby writes about effective? Simply by knowing my job, that's how. This is my basic mission as a soldier and responsibility as an American.

Few of my fellow soldiers realize that our job is that important. However, it is in understanding this fact that causes my temper to flare when critics claim I'm lousy at protecting our freedoms. If I were half as inept as they say, we'd be only seconds away from nuclear holocaust. To those critics I say, "Bull:" (ARNews)

CG's AER message

The 1981 AER Fund Drive was an unqualified success! As of April 16, the closing date of the drive, the total amount donated and pledged was $128,311. This represents a significant increase over the amount raised in the 1980 AER Campaign.

All who participated — project officers, commanders, keypersons and donors — are to be commended on their individual efforts in support of AER. Such tremendous enthusiasm for the objective of AER, "helping the Army take care of its own," is indeed laudable. Your generous donations will be most appreciated by those who find it necessary to obtain AER funds.

Heartiest congratulations on a job well done!

Reader reassured with MPs patrolling area

To the Editor:

We are new arrivals to Fort Benning and live in Battle Park. It has been very reassuring to see the military police patrol cars that service the residential area. There are many jobs and circumstances that require high priority and ever so many that are too seldom praised in appreciation. I am sure that this patrol alone prevents many minor crimes that could snowball to larger crimes. It maintains order and is highly respected by the children growing up in the territory- children that will retain this respect as they mature. Respect of law and order that is so needed in all communities.

As a soldier, a mother and a citizen, I wish to express this "Thank You" to a fine force.

Patriots lead the way indeed. Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry of the 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) accomplished a first in the history of Fort Benning's Army Emergency Relief Drive participation by holding a fund raising car wash.

The car wash, held April 11 in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall, drew the support of many people here. The event was a success and allowed Company A to make a sizable donation to the AER.

The car wash was a different fund raising approach. Company A soldiers got involved with the community to come up with a donation for the relief fund, rather than having the soldiers make an allotment or cash contribution.

SSgt. Lincoln Walton of Company A summed up results of the car wash effort, "Not only did we raise money, we also set an example as a unit for other units to follow the next time AER rolls around. And we had fun doing it."

"The support we got from the community was great. Without all the people bringing in their cars for us to wash, we never could have done as good a job as we did," commented 2nd Lt. Tollie Strode, Company A's AER representative.

Van washing takes a little help from a friend, as Company A soldiers found out.

Enrollment falls 20 percent

More than 30 Army officers are reported missing and a search is underway to locate them.

Officials are certain the missing officers are hidden within the enlisted ranks, appearing to the casual observer as ordinary soldiers. However, certain tell-tale traits distinguish them from their peers: they have obvious leadership qualities and above-average academic skills.

The disappearance of these officers was noticed when, at the end of fiscal year 1980, 20 percent of the classroom slots at the Officer Candidate School remained vacant. The school regularly reserves 160 spaces for active duty soldiers, with the remaining 50 going to college graduates enlisted by Army recruiters.

The dropoff in enrollment means a loss of more than 30 junior officers, with the benefit of previous unit experience.

What accounts for the shortfall? It's definitely not a lack of qualified soldiers, says the Army Military Personnel Center. More than 13,000 active duty soldiers meet the age and education requirement for OCS attendance.

To qualify for OCS a soldier must:

- Be an enlisted person or warrant officer on active duty;
- Be at least 19-and-a-half-years-old but no more than 29 at the time of enrollment;
- Have completed at least two years of a four-year college degree program;
- Have a minimum GT score of 110 (males), 115 or higher on the Officer Candidate Test (OCT) and a minimum composite score of 200 on the OCT and Officer Qualification Inventory (OQI). OCT and OQI are not required for females; however, they must have a minimum GT score of 115;
- Meet medical fitness standards prescribed in AR 40-501 and weight standards prescribed in AR 600-9. An applicant must also score a minimum of 180 points on the new three-event Physical Fitness Test;
- Accept a three-year service obligation upon graduation.

Enlisted personnel can apply for OCS as soon as they completed advanced individual training, while warrant officers can apply at any time. Anyone who would have 10 or more years of service by the date of commissioning is not eligible.

Students in OCS receive, at the minimum, the pay of an E-5. Those in grade levels above E-5 continue to receive the pay of that higher grade.

The initial step soldiers should take in applying for OCS is to contact their unit commander—the first person in the chain of command who is involved in the selection process. At this point, an evaluation is made of leadership potential and overall desire to become an officer.

After the application has been processed, a notice is sent instructing the applicant to appear before a board of officers for an interview. During the interview, current events and topics of general interest are discussed. The applicant's reactions and behavior are evaluated, as well as the quality of the responses to the questions.

Shortly after the interview the applicant is told whether he or she has been accepted.

Acceptance to OCS opens the door to training that will move the soldier from enlisted to officer status. But that move can't be made until eligible soldiers recognize themselves as being among the Army's "missing officers." (TRADOC news release)

Grass cutting

Its grass cutting time again. We will have three lawnmowers to lend out to the residents of McGraw Manor. They are in for repairs right now but should be fixed soon. All you have to do to get a mower is come to the community center and hand receipt one out and follow the few requirements necessary to keep the mowers in running condition.

Exercise classes

Warm weather is upon us and since the community building isn't air conditioned the classes will end April 30 and begin again in September. However, the Santiago Gym in Sand Hill is open now to ladies on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7-9 p.m. Facilities available are the sauna, all gym equipment and just about everything you need to keep in shape.

Tiny Tots

The children have progressed very well this year.

They are enjoying their new crayons and finger-paints. They even have their own school song, "We're the kids of Tiny Tots."

Due to the severe weather we have in Georgia whenever there is a tornado warning announced over the radio or television the school will automatically be closed for that day.

Bowling

Anyone interested in forming a daytime or evening bowling league we will start a list at the trailer. We have not started one as yet. We are just trying to see if there are enough people interested to get one started. Call 544-2986 to get your name on the list.

Rappelling: ability to defy gravity

By Tom Sabel

UASIC Public Affairs Office

The language sounded rough but then rappelling down a clay cliff somewhere in the wilds of Fort Benning along the banks of the Upatoi is not what you would call a gentle moment.

"I've got a little cliff for those who don't have any confidence," SSgt. Leroy Sells tells his men as they crowd close to him. Some of the men of Company A, 3/7th Infantry take a cautious look down the 100-foot cliff. Others have rappelled before and are ready and excited about launching themselves down the side of the cliff on a strand of sturdy nylon rope.

"I'm glad I've done this before. Now I can look at the faces of the other soldiers," said Pvt. Thomas Wyatt.

A six-foot length of rope, the same OD color and weight of the rappelling rope, is wrapped around the waist, through the legs, and tied in the front, making a snug seat. The nylon rope binds tight against the body of soldiers. It's not an uncomfortable feeling, rather a feeling of security. The soldiers have to trust the ropes because when they're dangling over the edge of the cliff, it's the only thing that keeps them from crashing headlong onto the rocks below.

Wyatt positions himself at the bottom of the cliff. He's the belay, the one who acts as a safety brake should the soldier come down the cliff too quickly. "I'm your brake. So anybody who owes me money can pay me now or pay me later," he said jokingly.

Sells fastens the rappelling rope through the D-ring on the soldier's rope harness and yells, "Go. The enemy's coming. Go. You're going to get shot." The soldier is hesitant. It's the first time he has rappelled and isn't sure of either the rope or himself. When you're parallel to the bottom of the cliff, staring up at the sky and wondering what you're doing there, there's only one way down the cliff and no way back up.

Pvt. 2 Daniel Troup crosses the Upatoi on a rope.

The rest of the company is standing on top of the cliff shouting encouragement. Sells is talking the soldier through it. "Get in an L-shaped position, take a few steps to the right, now the left." The soldier knows he isn't going to fall and his confidence grows. "Now push off with your feet. Keep that brake hand behind your back, soldier." The soldier follows Sells' instructions and before he knows it, he's at the bottom of the cliff. He's made it and a grin of accomplishment almost splits his face in half. "I want to do that again," he hollers up the cliff.

Most of the company has already gone at least once and many of the soldiers have gone several times. Sells looks at me and says, "You want to go?" This desk jockey, with a camera around his neck, dressed in greens, says, "Sure." One of the soldiers gets a six-foot length of rope and helps me harness up. Another soldier loans me a helmet while still another hands me a pair of sweat-filled gloves.

All eyes are on me as I balance on the edge. I wish I was in fatigues. Slick soled low quarters are little good on the slippery clay cliff. I make a first, scared, tentative jump out into space. My form is nonexistent and I crash into the cliff, my right knee buried halfway into the face of the cliff. I reposition my feet against the cliff face. Sells tells me to lean back, lean farther. I'm at a 90-degree angle to the cliff and try again.

I jump out, and fall against the cliff face, this time with my buttocks. My feet are where my head should be. The weight of the helmet pulls my head back and I see Wyatt holding the rope. The next attempt is successful and I start to make my way down the cliff.

The rope sliding through my fingers warms the glove. I'd better slow down. Halfway down the cliff my confidence grows. The rest is easy. Now I know why the ones who made it down were grinning so broadly. I'm grinning too.

When, a bit later, Sells sees me again he comments on the shape of my uniform. One knee and the seat of my pants covered with clay, a rope burn on the shirt. I laugh and say that it looks like I'll be making a trip to the cleaners.

The day isn't over for the men of Company A. They still have to cross the Upatoi on a single strand rope bridge. This bridge, if the word can apply to a length of rope stretched two feet above the water, does little more than keep the soldiers from being washed downstream.

Pvt. Daniel Troup is the second one to cross. Troup is a small and determined soldier who looks like he weighs all of 100 pounds. He ties a line to his waist and the other end through a D-ring attached to the bridge, he hands his wallet to 2nd Lt. Macgaman. He jumps into the water, the Upatoi tries to take him downstream but he clings to the rope out of fear and determination. As he makes his way across, he is more under water than above it. He quickly makes it, using his hands and feet like a frightened monkey.

The rest of the company will soon cross the river. By the end of the day all the members of the company had made the big jump down the cliff and across the river, confident in their new ability to defy gravity.

Permanent parking permits issued to disabled drivers

ATLANTA—Legislation, approved by the 1981 Georgia General Assembly and signed into law by Governor George Busbee as Act 504, should benefit qualified persons using parking areas specially marked for "handicapped only."

Actually, the 1981 legislation is an amendment of a law passed by the 1980 General Assembly making it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine (up to $40) for anyone other than a qualified handicapped person to occupy a parking space which is designated "handicapped only."

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler said, "That law still stands; the main change is that now there will be no charge for the special handicapped-parking permits, and veterans who are qualified to display the special red, white and blue HV (handicapped veteran) or DV (disabled veteran) license tags will not have to obtain permits; their distinctive tags will serve as sufficient evidence that they are eligible to park in special designated areas for the handicapped."

In other instances, a permanent or temporary parking permit will be issued to a disabled person upon the presentation of a doctor's affidavit stating that such person is a permanently handicapped person or that the person has a handicap that is temporary.

Permanent permits, colored blue, are renewable every four years; the red temporary permits will carry various expiration dates depending upon the duration of the handicap, but not exceeding 180 days.

The permits are to be displayed on top of vehicle dashboards or suspended from the inside mirror. The Department of Public Safety will issue permits at its drivers' license examining stations.

China's gift thanked America

Private First Class Patrice Richardson (I) and Sp4 Armando Fernandez, a690th Medical Company (Amb), 34th Medical Battalion, examine the Chinese Gateway on Morrison Avenue. It was presented to the 15th Infantry Regiment by appreciative villager in Tienstin China, some 55 years ago.

By Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

On an elevated plot of ground in a little arbor, east of the Officers Club on Morrison Avenue, stands the Chinese Gateway. It was given to the Infantry School Oct. 13, 1939, by the 15th Infantry Regiment after its return from the orient. The gateway, made entirely of marble, is in the traditional square Chinese style, with lilies and lotus blossoms carved on the front of the uprights.

The 15th was sent to Tienstin, China, as part of the international forces that had been maintained there since the Boxer uprisings in the early 1900s. During 1924 and 1925, China was torn apart by civil war. To protect the people from marauding bands, the American forces, in the form of the 15th Infantry Regiment, patrolled the area around Tienstin. Through their efforts, the area inhabitants led a relatively happy and peaceful life during that period.

To show their appreciation and gratitude for protection afforded them during the civil wars, the Chinese villagers banded together and presented a marble gateway to the 15th at their Tienstin barracks. It was installed on the regimental parade ground and became the center for the 15th's ceremonial assemblies.

Present at that ceremony was one — Phillip E. Gallagher — the same Capt. Phillip E. Gallagher who was to present the same gate, some 14 years later, to the Infantry School on behalf of his regiment.

"Those of us," said Capt. Gallagher, "who were with the 15th at the time, remember well the ceremony on April 1925. The regiment was drawn up in a hollow square. Facing us stood the head men of the villages we had protected. Their spokesman presented the "Marble Gateway" in carefully chosen English. Maj. W.D. Conner, chief of the United States Army forces in China, was our spokesman. His acceptance was unique in that it was delivered in Chinese, without notes."

General Asa L. Singleton, commandant from 1936 to 1940, accepted the monument and the bronze plaque accompanying it, on behalf of the Infantry School.

The plaque reads, "Presented to the Infantry School by the 15th U.S. Infantry Regiment (The Can-Do Regiment) on its return to the United States on March 24, 1938, after over a quarter century of service in China." (This same expression, "Can Do", is, along with a picture of a golden dragon, part of the Coat of Arms of the 15th. "Can Do", their motto, is said to be taken from a characteristic 'Pidgin-English' phrase of the Chinese, "indicating the devotion to duty, a degree of loyalty and the superior efficiency which have characterized this regiment from civil war days on.")

The top of the gateway is inscribed in both Chinese and English. The monument shows the ravages of weather and time making the English inscription no longer legible, while the Chinese inscription is still in relatively good condition. The inscription read thus:

"A remembrance of the golden deeds done by Officers and Men of the United States Army Forces in China during civil strife, 1924."

*"All the militarists struggled for a piece of ground,
Thus the wheel of fate was made to turn 'round.
At Shanhaikuan, the battle furious was fought,
To Tienstin and Peking the danger was brought.
Soldiers defeated ran for their lives everywhere,*

But feat for robberies the folks could not bear.
O innocent creatures peaceful rulers of the country,
Many a time 'mid the nightly alarm had to stay.
The Sons of Uncle Sam so gallant in their deed,
Day and night to strict defense took the greatest heed.
And through their strenuous effort and suffering,
Peace among all was kept and maintained.
Honor to those whom honor is due,
For their good records were Destin: Shangrila for soldiers

By Tom Sabel
USAR Public Affairs Office

Why should Fort Benning's bit of paradise also be one of the post's best kept secrets?

The Destin Recreation Area at Destin, Fla. is 15-and-a-half acres of Fort Benning which offers a wide variety of summer-time fun for active duty soldiers, their families and retired soldiers.

Unfortunately, not everyone knows about this parcel of Shangrila. "I didn't even know the place existed until I received orders for here," said the new NCOIC SSgt. Don Boyd.

The term recreation area doesn't give an accurate description to the resort. The permanent cabins are as comfortable as some people's homes. Each is fully equipped for immediate occupancy. "All that people need to bring is their food, towels and clothing," said John Reynolds, director of Fort Benning's outdoor recreation.

When this reporter made a trip down to the resort, I was surprised at the completeness of the cabins. From a coffee pot and toaster to dishes and silverware, the kitchen was ready for anything from a quick breakfast before hitting the beach to a sitdown dinner with new-found friends or family after a day of fishing.

In the master bedroom the biggest shock was finding a folding baby crib in the closet. The freshly made beds and pictures on the wall made me feel like I was at a hotel rather than an Army-run facility.

"The recreation area is a place to relax, to get away from the day-to-day routine," commented Reynolds.

However, with the summer season coming on, the cabins are at a premium. The rates will remain far below those in the civilian community. According to Reynolds, the cabins will be rented for a maximum of five days. Reservations for the cabins are made two weeks in advance. In order for the reservations to be fair, a lottery is held two weeks before each booking period. For further information about reserving a cabin call the outdoor recreation office at 545-4155.

The 14 two or three bedroom cabins aren't the only place available for overnight stays. The resort also has 40 campsites for those with recreation vehicles or tents. "This is one of the best campgrounds in the country," said Lt. Col. Alford Goodfellow, a retired Air Force man. "And it took us three years to find the place."

Some of the campsites are equipped with sewage, electrical and water hook-ups while others are the primitive type, lacking these amenities.

For the fishing advocates the two large boats, the 38-foot "Follow-Me II" and the 22-foot boat give the chance for deep-sea fishing. Trolling, bottom fishing and sport fishing for sailfish and marlin are available on these boats. The "Follow Me II" has recently been outfitted with new navigational equipment and a new fathometer. With the new equipment the master of the boat, Marvin Jenkins, can pinpoint fishing spots in the gulf. With the fathometer he can spot the fish below.

"Marvin can take you to the fish, but it's up to you to bring them in," said Reynolds.

There are also 12 14-foot boats people can take out into the bay for more private fishing.

If sailing is more to taste, the recreation area has Sunfish sailboats and catamarans for use in the bay.

The beach at Destin is usually uncrowded. The clean stretch of white sand on the bay is a great place for lazing the day away while soaking up the rays. The shallow water makes it safe for children.

The snack bar has sandwiches and breakfast as well as stock of beach toys, some fishing tackle and sun-tan oil. "And of course plenty of sun-burn ointment," commented Reynolds.

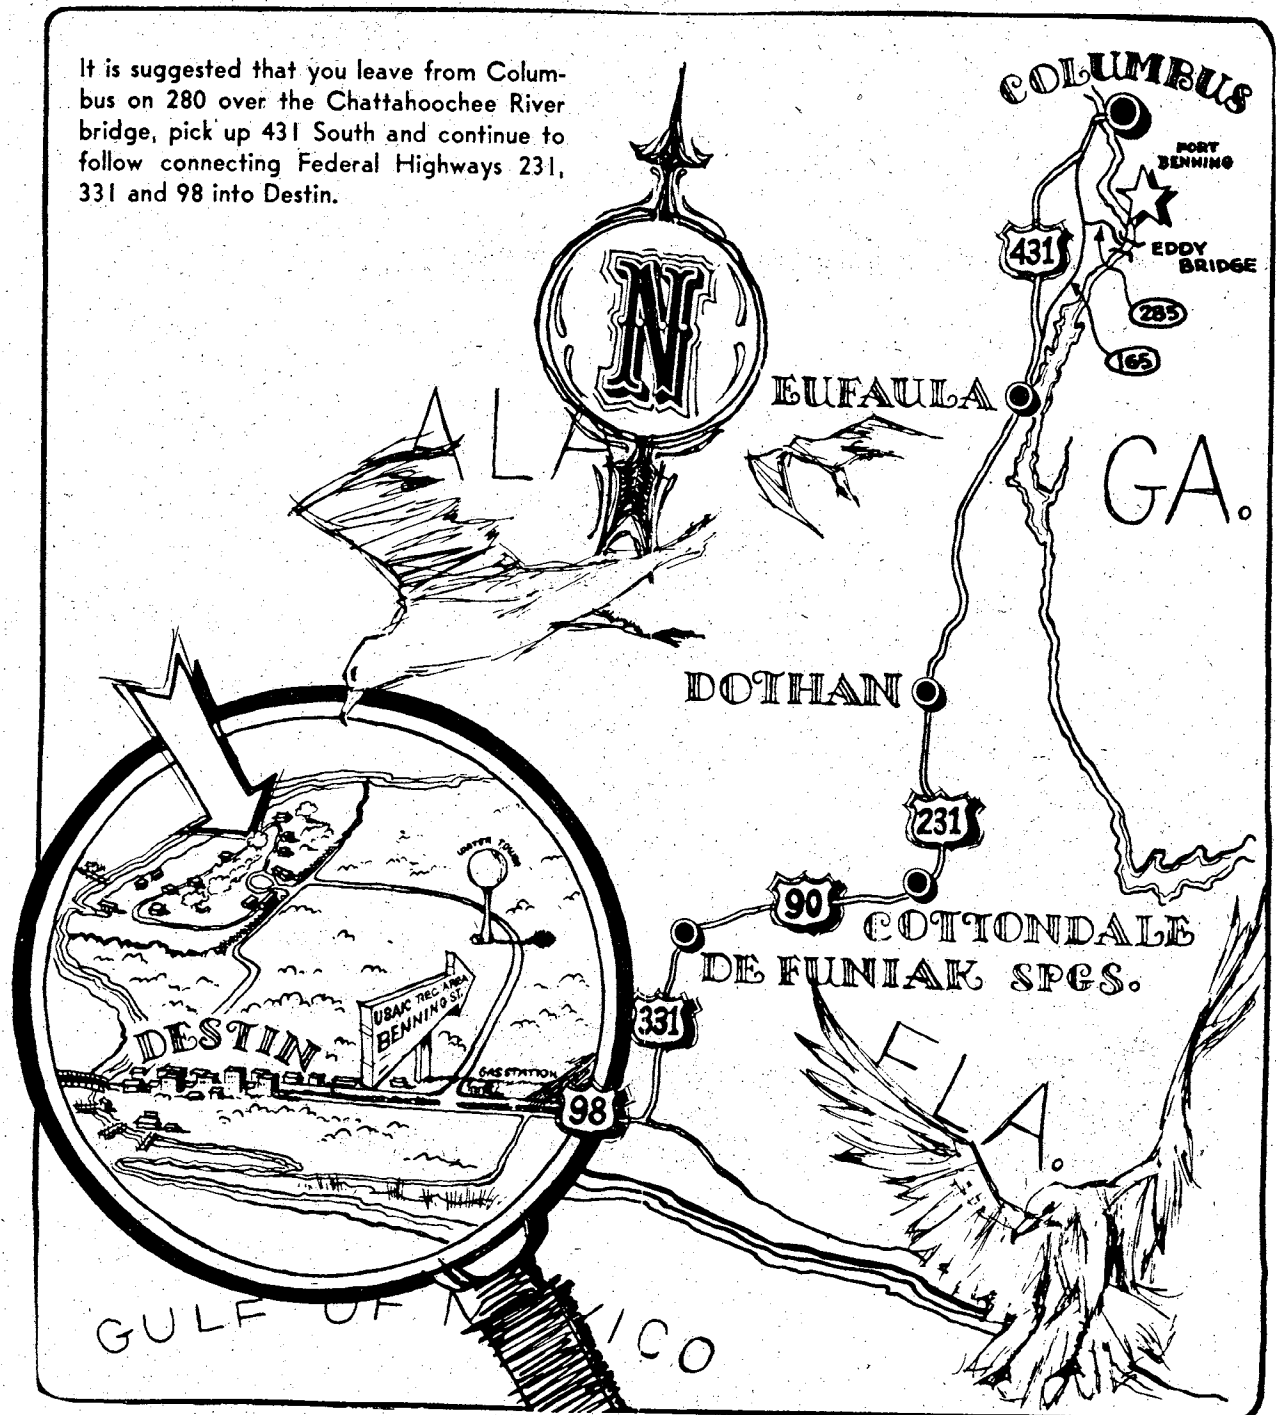

The resort is maintained by soldiers sent on special duty. Their duties run from keeping the boats in running order to cleaning up the cabins after the guests leave.

For those who would like to spend time dining out, "Miracle Strip", as highway 98 through Destin and Fort Walton is called, offers a full variety of restaurants. This reporter found a favorite; anyone else will surely be able to find one to their liking.

Within 30 days

Items may be returned

Fort Lee, Va. -- Army commissary customers may return merchandise purchased in the commissary. Some of the most frequent reasons for product returns are damage to the container or product or the customer, by mistake, selects the wrong size, flavor or brand.

All merchandise must be returned within 30 days and you must be able to prove that you purchased it in the commissary according to commissary officials at the Army Troop Support Agency.

There are some differences in the way a refund or replacement is determined when you return perishable or nonperishable merchandise.

When you return a nonperishable item, you may receive a credit slip which you can use in lieu of cash to purchase other commissary items; you may exchange an item for a like item or you may receive a cash refund if hidden defects obviously existed at the time of purchase.

A credit slip is usually issued for nonperishable merchandise returned for any reason other than a hidden defect, provided the item is intact, unopened, undamaged, has not exceeded its shelf life, is in salable condition and continues to be stocked in the store. It is returned to store stock.

Perishable items may only be returned for reasons of hidden defects which existed when you purchased them. Most customers usually are repaid by a credit slip or direct exchange. Defective perishable merchandise is not returned to store stock.

If you have any questions concerning merchandise returns, talk with the commissary officer or his staff.

Thumb wavers risk lives

A familiar sight along Fort Benning's roadways is a soldier walking along the shoulder of the road waving his thumb at every passing car.

The hitchhiker may unknowingly be gambling his possessions and even his life in accepting a ride from a stranger. By trying to save the amount of bus or taxi fare, the hitchhiker has placed himself in a position to lose something of far more value than money. Ask yourself if it's really worth it.

Col. Ward Provost Marshal

Crimes of violence are increasing daily and many of these crimes begin with a seemingly innocent hitchhiking incident. For instance, in the last three months, Fort Benning has experienced 11 of these crimes of violence, nine of which were directly related to hitchhiking or accepting rides from strangers. Of these nine incidents, five were armed robberies, and four were robberies.

AR 210-10 specifically prohibits hitchhiking on military reservations. This provision is for your protection. The government is not obligated to compensate you for any loss suffered while hitchhiking on post.

If you are approached by a motorist offering an unwanted ride, you should take the following steps:

- Decline the ride.
- Try to get a description of the person and the vehicle.
- Notice the license number.
- Report the incident to the military police as soon as possible.

Hitchhiking can be dangerous whether you are the hitchhiker or the motorist offering a ride to a stranger along the road. Once you pick up a hitchhiker you become prey to the same possible consequences as a hitchhiker. Remember, hitchhiking is a dangerous pastime—don't get involved with it.

Obey the law—protect yourself and your possessions. Again, I remind you that the military police are always here to assist you. Play it safe—don't hitchhike.

Day set for Vietnam Vets

WASHINGTON -- President Reagan has approved legislation to proclaim Sunday as "National Recognition Day for Veterans of the Vietnam Era."

During previous observances, this special occasion was known as "Vietnam Veterans Day." The result of a joint resolution approved by Congress on March 31, this year's acknowledgement is formally designated "Public Law 97-9." It carries the emphasis of a Congress and administration especially mindful of the sacrifice made by the thousands of military personnel called to serve their nation during the Vietnam conflict.

To renew the nation's tribute to those who served - as well as to those whose past service continues to take its toll - the new law authorizes and requeststhe president to establish a national day of recognition. It provides for observing the day "with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities, including a week of symposia hearings and conferences to be conducted in Washington, D.C., prior to Sunday, dedicated to those issues of concern to Vietnam veterans." (ARNews)

Sp4 Joe R. Murphy, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate), was tried on April 20 and found guilty of one count possession of marijuana and two counts transfer and sale of marijuana. He was sentenced to confinement at hard labor for four months, forfeiture of $334 for four months, reduction to E-1 and a Bad Conduct Discharge.

In his opening remarks to the graduates assembled to complete the Expert Field Medical Badge test, Post Commander Maj. George Grange Jr. said, "Some people say the military change over is over, but there are two Army medical units that have not and will not relax their standards."

"They are the Expert Infantry Medical Badge test and the Expert Medical Badge test. Medical technicians are perhaps the backbone of the combined arms. I find it appropriate that we are conducting the EFMB test at the home of the infantry."

His remarks concerning the standards of the EFMB test are true as only 59 soldiers of 112 who started the test were awarded the coveted badge the Friday afternoon ceremony.

Cleanliness is next to godliness, particularly for field medics. Sp4 Daniel Chambers, Headquarters Company, 3/7th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, scrubs his hands while preparing for simulated minor surgery during the emergency medical treatment part of the EFMB test.

The EFMB candidates included soldiers from Forts McClellan, Ala., Stewart, Ga., Leonardwood, Mo. and many Fort Benning units, including a large group from MEDDAC and DENTAC.

The five-day test, conducted by the 34th Medical Battalion, is physically tough and comprehensive, both medically and militarily. To further enhance the idea of the practice of field medicine, the candidates spent the week living in the field at the test site.

The testing criteria included the following events: written test, Army Physical Readiness Test, 12-mile forced road march in three hours or less while carrying individual field equipment, litter obstacle course and the day and night compass course.

 hygiene and sanitation, evacuation of the sick and wounded, emergency medical treatment, signal communications and military intelligence are some of the subjects tested.

According to several of the candidates, the litter obstacle course was the most physically demanding part of the EFMB test. This year's course was some 750-meters in length and had both manmade and natural obstacles, including a wall that was so high the shorter candidates required a boost from their buddies to get over it.

The course was designed so there were no easy sections throughout its length. In fact, with the finish line in sight, the candidates were required to safely cross a 50-foot gorge with their litter patient.

Bunny Run

Distance of 5-miler questioned

Story and photos
by Don Rhodes

Seventy-two runners of all ages jogged after the early leaders in the 2 and one-half-mile run as husbands, wives, children and friends cheered them on.

Fourteen minutes and 52 seconds later Steve Hoogland, an Infantry Officer Advanced Course student, breezed across the finish line sweating profusely but barely breathing hard.

"It was a good course," Hoogland said, "nice and flat."

Hoogland knows race courses. He enters many runs around the local area. Last weekend it was Americus and before that it was Dublin.

Robert Woodham finished second overall with a time of 14:43 and Richy Sutton was third at 14:50.

In the women's category, Kathy Papst was first overall with a time of 17:37, Kathy Manion was second with 18:19 and Kim Hall was third at 19:34.

The 5-mile Bunny Run ended in some small amount of controversy when the first 12 runners were sent in the wrong direction by the guides along the course. They actually ran closer to four miles than the intended five.

Regardless of the distance, Paul Hendry, who lives in Columbus and runs track for Troy State University, looked just as fresh when he crossed the finish line first with a time of 24:52 as he did when he started the race.

"I think it was a bit short," Hendry commented after the race, "but they say they measured it."

Bob Vandel finished second in 25:49 and John Whitwell was third in 26:05.

In the women's category Renee Jones was first overall with a time of 47:07, Christie Crossen was second with a 49:20 and Colleen Mundstock was third with 49:52.

There were no expressed hard feelings about the mistake.

Scott Valeen, age nine, son of 1st Sgt. and Mrs. Leonard Valeen, 3rd Ranger Company, said that he thought the race was "Fine."

With a smile on his face, Bob Kuwick, airborne department (and ever popular BAYONET running news correspondent), said, "Next year, next year."

Other comments were made as the runners gathered around the board showing the order of finish and the times. The consensus concerning the day was, "It was hot out there!"

"I could go so much faster if I'd just quit eating," said one young woman who had just finished the 5-miler.

The runners were there for a good time. Who won or who lost didn't seem to matter. The idea expressed by most of the runners was simply to participate and do the best one could.

There was pride in winning, of course, but there was also pride in just competing. This feeling was best illustrated by one happy father who said, "My 10-year-old beat me again."

Airborne wins volleyball title

The Airborne Department volleyball team capped off a near perfect season Tuesday with a tough win over the 1st Infantry Training Brigade team, (15-3, 10-15, 15-10) to claim the post championship.

Airborne finished 17-1 overall for the year and made an unblemished sweep through the championship playoffs.

Their only loss being at the hands of the Marines early in the season. Airborne avenged their early loss to the leathernecks in the championship match of The School Brigade tournament, in order to advance into post level play.

Airborne defeated the 1st ITB team in the first match of the championship tourney decisively. However, the 1st ITB team pulled together and fought back through the loser's bracket to earn another shot at Airborne in the championship.

Airborne was really up for the match and easily won the first game of the best two-out-of-three match but the 1st ITB team came alive in the second game.

Led by the powerful serves of Gene Hanratty and the jarring spikes of Pete Campisi, the 1st ITB team charged to an 11-4 lead early in the second game. "They rattled us for a while with their comeback," said James Kwasniewski of Airborne. Airborne quickly regained their composure and closed the gap to 14-11 before the 1st ITB team scored the final point.

The championship tie-breaker was an extremely long game with the lead see-sawing back and forth. First it was tied at 4-4, then 6-6, then 8-8, then 9-9 before Airborne finally managed to put together a brief scoring string to put them in the lead to stay. The 1st ITB team managed just one more point to bow to Airborne 15-10.

Airborne was the runner-up in last year's tourney and had almost all their starters back. "We were really up for the game and with the tremendous fan support we got from our unit, how could we lose?" Kwasniewski exclaimed.

"I don't think any of the teams in the post tournament came away losers," said Kwasniewski. "It was a big accomplishment just to make it this far. They were all winners."

Titles brought home to Benning

Fort Benning boxers are making a name for themselves. Recently at the Civic Center in Atlanta the Army team came away with three of their boxers becoming novice champions of Georgia.

Rex Walthall became the state's super heavyweight novice champion, with Henry McRa becoming junior middleweight champ and Charles Terry, bantam weight.

McRa, being known more and more as a knockout fighter, won his novice middleweight title with a knockout in the third round. Walthall and Terry won unanimous decisions in their title fights. Walthall commented, "For me, winning the super heavyweight championship and bringing the title to Benning was the greatest thing I could have done. Fighting and winning championships is what I want to do."

Four other boxers, in the open class, also fought in the Atlanta Civic Center. All lost by very close decisions, but were the runners up during their contest. They are the second best open class fighters in Georgia. They are Jr. middleweight Jeffrey Johnson, welterweight Kelvin Green, lightweights Larry Golden and Gregory Staten.

Green commented, "It is really beautiful getting to represent the Army with my fighting. The decisions were really close at the Civic Center even though we lost. We're still the four second best open class style boxers in Georgia." Green then added, Fort Benning boxers will be traveling to Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala. on May 16 for their next fights. It will be an all Armed Forces Day tournament.

Benning Barracudas looking for competitors

The Barracuda swim club is looking for children who are interested in learning to swim competitively this summer.

Roland White, the team coach is looking for youngsters between six and 18.

"I'm focusing on the younger kids," White said. Competition is by skill level according to White,

"It's hard to break into swimming when you're older. Nine is the ideal age.

"They don't have to be master swimmers," White continued, "this is a developmental program and the team is geared to work with all levels of experience. It is not, however, a learn to swim program, they do have to be able to at least swim."

novice against novice, intermediate against intermediate. There are three skill levels, A-best, B-intermediate and C-novice.

Swimmers in the A group win medals for placing in a meet. The other two groups win ribbons. The incentive is to improve and get the medals according to White. The training and the competition are in four basic strokes, the butterfly, the freestyle, the backstroke and the breaststroke.

White thinks the swimming program in America is very advanced. "We're the best in swimming," he says, "because we have these types of programs. They're adaptive, run by volunteers. It's a pride thing. Nobody gets a job with the state for helping."

"The carryover value of swimming is great," commented White. "People can swim all their lives. It's therapeutic. A number of doctors recommend swimming."

Parents are very important to the program. "A lot of people are needed to put on a swim meet, it's not like just a few referees for a football game," White added.

Workouts are everyday and team membership is $5 per month. "That's cheap as swim team membership goes," concluded White.

For more information about the swim team contact Roland White at 687-3634 or Douglas Christensen at 689-5710.

Soccer slated tomorrow

By Martha E. Duncan
Youth Activities Correspondent

An exciting soccer season for Youth Activities ends tomorrow with three championship games. Game time for the Termites, Midgets and Pee Wee Divisions is 10 a.m. at Gordon Field.

The tournament began Tuesday and was seeded according to final league standings. Awards ceremonies will take place at approximately 12:15 p.m.

Two tie games occurred in the Termite Division. The Eagles and Tornados locked on one goal a piece. Defensive standouts such as Jason Vasquez and Frankie Figueroa prevented the Tornados from gathering too much gust. The score for the Eagles was made by Johnny Latorre.

For the Tornados, Stacie Stafford assisted by Angelito Bernier kicked in the goal. Defensive standouts included goalie, Chris Monds, forwards Eric Vogel and Charlie Hallaway.

The second game between the Bullets and Chiefs was a tough defensive game as neither side managed to score. Defensive strength for the Bullets included goalie Todd Walker, fullback Anthony Colon and halfback Cindy Jansco.

The Chiefs also had a hard working offense which included forwards Brad Bagshaw, Ryan Yates and Brad Wright. Their defensive standouts included goalie, Aaron Fricke and fullback Tim Hendon.

In the Pee Wee Division, the Demons outscored the Bobcats 4-2. Scorers for the Demons included Jason Bargewell, Mike Denkins, Chris Rily and Mark Munson with one goal a piece. Defending the fort were George Bailey, Pat Riley and Thad McDonald.

The Bobcats had a tougher time keeping the Demons away. Billy Eberhart scored both goals for the Bobcats. He had good defensive support from halfback Cheryl Sutherland, fullback Jimmy Busha and goalie Jeff Guild.

Game two for the Pee Wees had the Red Devils take another victory from the Cougers for a 5-2 score. The Red Devils' Carlos Benson contributed three goals with Alfred Giavelli adding one. Defensive standouts included sweeper Chad Holter.

For the Cougers Jason Sparrow kicked in a goal followed by Ronald O'Neal with one. Defensive standouts included Justin Winter, Patrick O'Donnill and Peter Jimeney.

Henry Fonda narrates

Law Day program slated

By Bill Powell
USMC Public Affairs Office

Everyone has heard of Perry Mason. He's one of the few lawyers who has ever won every court case. Unfortunately, Perry Mason is only a fictional character. There are lawyers who try to live up to the Perry Mason standard of never losing a case but that just isn't possible. Justice demands a fair and impartial trial and lawyers do the best they can.

"In Search of Justice" looks at the job lawyers and other related law enforcement officials perform. The program, narrated by Henry Fonda, will be seen on WFBG-TV, channel 13 on Alert Cable, in observance of Law Day, May 1. The program can be seen next week as will "The Benning Report" featuring an interview with Capt. John Phelps, Legal Assistance Office. Phelps will talk about the activities planned for Law Day.

Highlights of other programs for next week include:

- "A Day in the Life of Johnathan Mole" explains the causes and effects of prejudice, with particular emphasis on discriminatory hiring practices.
- "Take Ten-Rape Prevention" examines the crime of rape and what a woman can do to protect herself.
- "Green Scene #20" takes you to Fort Drum for Green Beret training and maneuvers.
- "Missionary to Walker's Garage" tells the story of a boy who decides to pursue a career in engineering instead of the ministry. It shows how each person serves God as his talents allow.

- "Sportsreel" takes you back to the year 1957 for a look at the Hambletonian, AAU Divers, and boy's baseball.
- "Spectrum" features music and information four hours a day Monday through Friday. The music covers a broad range of tastes and several music specials are on tap for next week. The rock group Blondie will be performing, as will country western artist C.W. McCall. Both are hour specials and produced by the Army Information Radio Service in Washington, D.C. Consult your BAYONET or Benning Bulletin for times and dates of scheduled programming.

Skipping breakfast causes accidents

By John C. Griffiths
RAAF Aerospace Safety Magazine

Are you one of the estimated three out of four people who skipped breakfast this morning? If you did, you could be a candidate for an accident, says Dr. J. E. Monagle of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Canada.

He points out that your blood sugar after an overnight fast may be at a reduced level when you wake up. This condition, known as hypoglycemia, may cause morning headache, irritability, irrational emotional responses, grogginess and confusion.

Add to these the effect of sudden stress or emotional reaction, such as a last-minute glitch in your routine. This stimulates a sudden release of adrenalin, which raises blood sugar, and causes other disturbing symptoms such as fear, anxiety, headache, shakiness, weakness, dizziness, shortness of breath and palpitations of the heart.

The preoccupation and distraction from these symptoms may increase your chances of an accident. The anxiety may cause hyperventilation, producing additional disconcerting symptoms such as numbness, tingling, warmth and dizziness, with or without respiratory symptoms.

Dr. Monagle cautions that when you're in this state, it's unwise to do things requiring alertness, concentration and mental and physical responses.

Studies at a university add to these facts. Students who didn't have breakfast showed markedly poorer classroom performance. In London, police have noted that traffic accidents happening around 10 or 11 a.m. frequently involve persons who haven't eaten, or at least not properly.

Certain people, especially those with emotional problems, will develop hypoglycemic symptoms two to three hours after ingesting a meal rich in carbohydrates. To be mentally and physically alert, says Dr. Monagle, the breakfast should contain some protein — an egg, glass of milk, or even a sausage or some bacon before you take on a busy day. The buddy seat takes its riders to the top of the tower and allows them to come down in a controlled drop, simulating an actual jump.

Airborne's visitors fall from tower in buddy seats

The Airborne Department welcomed the first of the Infantry Center directorates to its Airborne 5,000 demonstration Monday.

Under the department's new program all the directorates will be individually invited to watch the demonstration in order to get an idea of what the Airborne Department does. "That hopefully will give them a better idea of what the training they're supporting here is all about," according to SFC Alex Boykin from the Airborne Department's operations section.

According to Boykin, "Our demonstration for the Directorate of Industrial Operations personnel was a big success. I think they all really enjoyed it!"

The comments of one DIO employee, Myron Nickerson, CITA office of DIO, seemed to really agree with Boykin. "It was sensational!"

Following his ride on the Airborne "buddy seat" Nickerson said, "I've never experienced anything like that before. If I was young enough, it sure would have convinced me to go to Airborne School."

Sp4 David Munn, small arms specialist with the maintenance division of DIO, also enjoyed it but, unlike Nickerson, wasn't inspired enough to apply for the school. "I think the demonstration was great and it certainly is a good school but I ain't crazy, that tower is awful high."

The Airborne 5,000 demonstration is conducted every Monday at 10:30 a.m. on Euhanks Field (except during four-day holiday weeks, in which case it's cancelled). The show lasts about one hour and is free to the public.

Ed Compton and Marika Parker bounce to a stop at the end of their ride on the buddy seat. They both work in the Maintenance Division of DIO.

. . . a day to honor the worker

Monday is Labor Day, a day off for most people. It signals the end of summer, the beginning of school and autumn hiding just around the corner.

Labor Day is a time for families and friends to gather for picnics and other festivities. However, the meaning of Labor Day is often lost in all the celebrating.

Labor Day was first suggested by Peter McGuire, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in 1882. He called for a day to be set aside to honor labor.

McGuire submitted a proposal to the Central Labor Union of New York for a parade to "show the strength and the esprit de corps of the trade and labor organization." He also suggested the parade to be followed by a picnic or festival. To support his proposal he argued there were other holidays representing the religious, civil and military spirit but there were none "representative of the industrial spirit, the great vital force of the nation."

McGuire thought the first Monday in September was a good date because it came about halfway between Independence Day and Thanksgiving. The Central Labor Union adopted his proposal and the first Labor Day celebration took place on Sept. 5, 1882, with a parade in the New York city streets. The General Assembly of the Knights of Labor voted in favor of an annual celebration shortly after the parade.

Before the middle of 1894, Labor Day was a legal holiday in 30 states. On June 28 of that year Congress passed an act declaring Labor Day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and in the territories.

The American Federation of Labor adopted a resolution in 1910 making the Sunday before the first Monday in September as Labor Sunday and requested American churches to devote some part of the day honoring American labor.

In recognizing labor we are recognizing one of the strongest, most vital links in the chain of America's progress. From the workers in the colonial woolen mills to the garment workers in present day New York; from the Chinese and Irish immigrants building the continental railroad, to today's construction workers balancing on the steel skeletons of unfinished skyscrapers, American workers have been responsible for taking the theory and blueprints of designers and managers and making them concrete realities.

So as we take the time to enjoy our three-day weekend, we need to take the time to remember those workers who made the roads we drive on, the cars we drive and the coolers carrying picnics - the workers of our nation.

New approach to drug abuse looked at

By Jack Brinkley
U.S. Representative, Georgia

We are all alarmed over the epidemic proportions which the drug abuse problem has assumed in our country, and a conference committee on which I'm serving is considering an approach which hasn't been tried for more than 100 years as a way to combat those who are illegally bringing drugs into the United States.

The legal term for the approach we're studying is posse comitatus, which literally means "power to call out able-bodied men to go after suspected criminals." It's the same procedure used by sheriffs in the old west to round up posses when the need arose.

In the drug control effort, posse comitatus would mean making military equipment, facilities, expertise and perhaps even limited personnel available to civilian law enforcement officials in their efforts to combat drug-related violations of the law.

Close military involvement in civilian law enforcement activities is presently prohibited by statutes adopted in 1878. Those laws were enacted to curb the abuse of reconstruction troops stationed in the South after the Civil War. However, if problems in the 1870's were caused by too great a connection between military and civilian authorities, today's drug problems could be substantially alleviated by greater cooperation than is now allowed.

At this writing, posse comitatus seems sure to pass both Houses in some form, even though the exact framework will not be drafted until Congress reconvenes in a few weeks.

For instance, both House and Senate versions of the Defense Authorization Bill would give civilian officials access to military information, equipment (such as helicopters and ships when available), and training in the fight against drug smugglers.

The differences between the two bodies regard the direct involvement of military personnel in civilian drug enforcement. The House Armed Services Committee, on which I serve, voted to allow military personnel to make arrests and seizures on both the land and sea in drug cases. However, the House Judiciary Committee had reservations, and the full House adopted a compromise plan permitting military personnel to engage the drug arrests and seizures at sea, but not on land. The Senate bill would not allow military personnel to make arrests or seizures in civilian drug violations on either land or sea.

Naturally, as a conferee on this important subject, I'll be doing everything I can to encourage the fullest possible military cooperation in the war against drug abuse. Furthermore, even though we don't know yet precisely which alternative will be adopted, it does seem certain that posse comitatus will make a major contribution to civilian drug control efforts in the future, and that's good news for all Americans.

Free course leads to staff diploma

 A three-year course which will lead to a Command and General Staff College (C&GSC) diploma will be offered to eligible officers in the Columbus area beginning Oct. 5.

The classes will be taught in 24 four-hour weekly sessions, and will be held on either Monday or Tuesday evenings from 7 until 11 p.m. All instruction will be conducted by members of the 3294th United States Army Reserve (USAR) school located at 3001 Macon Rd. in Columbus.

Criteria for enrollment are: Be a graduate of branch advanced course, have a minimum of seven years commissioned service, have not reached 42 years of age, and not completed 17 years of commissioned service. There is no monetary charge or obligation to attend this course of instruction.

In addition to weekly sessions, the student will be required to attend a two-week summer course at the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg following each of the first two years of instruction.

Should an officer be selected to attend the Fort

Leavenworth C&GSC after enrolling in the USAR program, he will be better prepared for the in-resident course than his contemporaries. The instruction is also compatible with the C&GSC's correspondence program should the student be transferred to an area in which a USAR school is not available.

Deadline for registration is Oct. 1. For additional information contact Lt. Col. (USAR) William M. Pickard at 571-2357.

CG's message

Since Labor Day was first celebrated in 1882, it has been set aside to honor the skill and industry of the American wage earner. Ironically, many of our own skilled military and Department of Defense personnel will die on the day they are being honored. With the growth of automobile traffic and the increased popularity of water sports, the Labor Day holiday, in recent years, has been marred with needless, disabling injuries and death-producing accidents.

Your safety is important to you, to me, to your loved ones, the United States Army and to your country. I ask in everything you do, both on and off duty, to always remember the cardinal rule of safety — no task or activity is so urgent that it cannot be performed safely. Don't let an accident spoil your holiday. Obey all safety rules and take every precaution to avoid obvious and hidden hazards.

Have a good holiday and return safely.

Airline discount extended

WASHINGTON — The 50 percent airline fare discount for active duty soldiers traveling on leave or pass has been extended by Trans World Airlines (TWA). The discount, due to expire the end of September, is now effective until March 30, 1982.

TWA was the first airline to offer the 50 percent discount when the program began last year. There are currently 21 airlines offering the lower fare to soldiers. The Military Traffic Management Command sent letters to the other participating airlines asking them to extend their discount fare offer as well.

The furlough fare is good on all of TWA's domestic routes. The discount may not be used for travel on Dec. 17-20, 23, 24, 27, 28, 30, 1981 and Jan. 2-5, and 10, 1982. However, TWA will accept standby passengers on the blackout dates.

The 50 percent reserved seat discount is available to active duty Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard personnel on leave or pass traveling at their own expense. It's also available to personnel who have been discharged from active duty whose travel is completed within seven days after date of discharge.

Travelers are urged to shop around for other fares which may be as low or lower than the furlough fare, say Army officials. However, most super-savers and excursion fares contain restrictions on length of stay and ticket purchase deadlines depending on the airline. The 50 percent furlough fare is unrestricted except for the blackout periods indicated above. (ARNews)

Nine-digit zip code not for post use yet

Military organizations on Fort Benning using the new nine-digit (zip plus four) zip code are not supposed to be doing so, according to a recent message from the installation postal officer.

The message says that the Department of Defense position is that all military organizations are not to use the nine-digit zip codes until further directed.

Flyers have been sent to various military organizations and other DoD components advising them of their official zip plus four code assignments and encouraging their use. However, this is in keeping with the United States Postal Service's authority to prepare for the implementation of the expanded nine-digit zip code system, but is not directive in nature.

608th Ordnance joins in REFORGER

One hundred members of the 608th Ordnance Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, will be gone from Fort Benning for the next 45 to 60 days to participate in this year's REFORGER exercise.

They left Sunday night from Lawson Army Airfield by C-141 aircraft from the 437th Military Airlift Command.

For some of the soldiers this will be their first trip to Germany and their first time as part of a REFORGER exercise, for others this will be a return engagement.

The unit started their deployment exercise at 7:30 p.m. and didn't complete the outprocessing and customs check until midnight. The aircraft left the ground at 1 a.m. for Manchester, England, the soldiers' first stop.

Sp4 Reid Basilius sits patiently waiting for his turn to process. To get relief from the heat, Basilius fans himself with his shot records.

Sp4 Kevin Raabe passes a duffel bag to another member of the REFORGER team prior to the customs and boarding check.

Sp4 Brian Fallant gives the "V" for victory sign as he and his fellow soldiers prepare to deploy on the REFORGER exercise from Lawson Army Airfield.

Sp4 David Wyffles (c) talks with a couple of friends while waiting to go through the outprocessing steps.

Soldiers make the final check of a pallet which will be loaded onto the C-141 for the trip to Germany. The pallets were loaded with tool boxes and duffel bags.

Duffle bags and other personal items are checked at Lawson Army Airfield prior to boarding the plane for the REFORGER.

The band plays some music for the departing troops before the unit boards the plane.

SEPARATING PHYSICIANS

If you are returning to civilian practice, but would like to retain your commission and affiliation with the Army Medical Department, consider the Army Reserve. We have units located throughout the country, or you can participate in a non-unit program. By joining, you can retain many of the same benefits you are now enjoying as an active duty officer. In addition, there is an attractive retirement program which enables you to take full advantage of your active duty years. If you would

Marshal's Viewpoint

Hunting safety rules given

Hunting season on Fort Benning is here. Dove season, along with squirrel, opossum, raccoon, bobcat and rabbit seasons will soon be opening on the Georgia and Alabama portions of the reservation. The exact dates and bag limits of each season are outlined in USAIC Circular 210-4.

Hunting here will prove to be a rewarding experience for all hunters if safety rules and hunting regulations and laws are followed. Remember, hunting regulations and safety rules are designed to protect the hunter and assist in managing our wildlife resources.

Lt. Col. Earp

Safety procedures that must be followed while hunting on Fort Benning are:

- Check the range clearance maps before going into a hunting area.
- Loaded weapons of any kind will not be transported in vehicles.

• The possession or use of alcoholic beverages while hunting is prohibited.

People planning to hunt here are reminded of the requirement to have in their possession the appropriate state hunting license, installation hunting permit, weapon registration card and a military identification card at all times.

To assist the regularly assigned Military Police game wardens in enforcing hunting regulations this year, four deputy game wardens have been appointed by the provost marshal. Additionally, federally deputized Georgia and Alabama game wardens will be assisting the military police with the commander's full authority to enforce all hunting regulations on Fort Benning.

Everyone is encouraged to help in the wildlife enforcement program by reporting any violations observed to the military police. Let's all pitch in and help to make this hunting season the best one ever on Fort Benning. Remember, safety first!

Community involvement

Chaplain's comments

Break the worry habit

By Joseph Lusk
Chaplain, Sightseeing Road Chapel

News commentators, government officials, and business leaders have spent much time recently discussing high interest rates in our country. Experts have spoken and world leaders have expressed concern. Elevated rates displease most people and bring about economic uncertainty for many Americans.

Another kind of interest exists, but it does not attract international concern. Individuals often pay this interest in silence, and it frequently causes health problems. Those who continue to pay high rates find that their lives become unhappy and unfulfilled. It seems that the more one pays, the more one owes.

I am referring to worry. Someone has defined worry as the interest we pay on trouble before it comes. We all need the strength we possess in order to live well in the present. If we waste precious resources in worrying about the future, or the past, serious problems result. Excessive irritation, fatigue, and discontent stem from worry.

Why do we worry? Worry comes from fear about what may happen. One worry leads to another and a fully developed habit emerges. The habit of negative thinking feeds on itself and assumes a prominent place in the person's life.

Since worry is a bad habit, we can fight it the same way we combat other harmful habits: substituting good habits. This is not easy, however, it requires hard work and determination. Faith in God gives us the courage to put forth the effort. If we sincerely try, replacing worry thoughts with healthy thoughts can become a habit. Trust and hope can take the place of fear and despair. A bright outlook can supercede a gloomy perspective.

Excellent advice comes from the Proverbs: "Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding." Following this teaching will enable us to obey our Lord's command not to "worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own." Have a good day; full of faith and free from worry.

Soldier serves with same unit in Vietnam

By Vance L. Vara
 ROTC cadet, Florida Institute of Technology

Nowadays when SSgt. Monte Wright reports to work at the 444th Transportation Company he doesn't have to worry about ambushes or snipers. It was not that long ago, though, that he did have to worry about those very situations.

Wright, a squad leader in the first platoon of the 444th Transportation Company, 67th Maintenance Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, has had the opportunity to also serve with the 444th in a wartime situation in Vietnam.

Wright held the rank of PFC in Vietnam and his job was that of truck driver. He recalled that the operation of the 444th Transportation Company, commonly called the "Triple 4," in Vietnam "is the same as it is now at Fort Benning."

"The 'Triple 4' still has a lot of long, hard hours, has tons of supplies to be delivered and many miles to be traveled, as it did in Vietnam," said Wright.

The main difference Wright found in the present "Triple 4" is that it now consists primarily of two and a half ton trucks, whereas in Vietnam the company was composed of tractor trailers. He also recalled that in Vietnam the "Triple 4" had a night maintenance crew to insure that all vehicles would be ready for the next day's mission.

"The driving environment was also very different, for it wasn't uncommon for the convoys to run into ambushes, as well as the drivers having to fire their weapons through their windows as they continued driving," mentioned Wright.

When asked about the troops of the "Triple 4" in Vietnam, Wright replied,

"The men were a very tight-knit group, hard workers, and greatly respected the chain of command." He added that even though the men were located in a war zone, the troops' overall morale was high.

Wright feels that the troops of the "Triple 4" today would easily react in the same manner "especially when they hit the war zone and their lives were at stake."

Wright was born in Cottonwood, Idaho and graduated from high school in Tacoma, Wash. He joined the Army in January of 1967 and volunteered for his Vietnam assignment while stationed in Okinawa. He was only married a short seven days before he left for Vietnam.

Wright was not the only person from his family who served in the Army in Vietnam. Stationed close by to him were his twin brother Melvin C. Wright, who also volunteered, and his brother-in-law, Richard Johnson Jr.

It's soldiers like Wright who keep the "Triple 4" strong and prepared for any mission that it is assigned, no matter how great or small.

Big guns blaze at Buchanan

"Sometimes it feels like it's turning you every which way but loose — you pull back the bolt and let 'er rip . . . when you've finished the ground just smokes."

These words were spoken by an infantry soldier going through training with Company D, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

Sitting behind a 50-caliber machine gun mounted on an armored personnel carrier can be experience all by itself — but it's when you open up and begin to fire that action really begins. The gun can spit out more than 200 rounds per minute with rounds that are five inches in size.

Pvt. 2 Jimmie Sutterfield is a 31-year-old prior service soldier from Oregon who commented on the 50 caliber and the training he received at Buchanan.

"The training was very precise and good for the short time we had to do it; the Infantry Training Group instructors there gave us lots of encouragement," he said. "The weapon is extremely accurate and it gives you a sense of power when you're firing it."

Pvt. 2 Ricardo Morales, a 20-year-old from Puerto Rico added, "With the 50 you have to really pull back hard and really hold on to it; it can hit you hard in the shoulders. The instructors really helped us up there on the firing line."

Pvt. 1 Walter Price concentrates on his targets and the way he fires this heavy piece of equipment.

Pvt. 1 Victor Johnson fires away at downrange targets as smoke billows up from his weapon. His next stop will be the track-mounted machine gun which is why extra rounds are on the sandbags.

Pvt. 1 Johnny Harris gets his chance to fire the track-mounted 50-caliber machine gun.

Blackhawks to carry infantry

By David W. Swank
121st Aviation Company

A welcoming ceremony was held Tuesday on York Field in honor of the first Blackhawks to be assigned to Fort Benning.

This aircraft, the most sophisticated utility helicopter to date, is being fielded by the 121st Aviation Company (CS), 34th Medical Battalion. The 121st is in the process of turning in 21 UH-1H "Huey" aircraft in return for 15 UH-60A Blackhawks. The pilots of the 121st have the pleasure to pick up the new aircraft at Sikorsky Aircraft Plant (manufacturer of the Blackhawk) in Stratford, Conn. and fly the aircraft here.

This aircraft is the Army's new firstline utility-assault helicopter that will provide increased crashworthiness, and extended range, speed and payload for increased logistic and mobility capabilities. The Blackhawk will be used primarily in the main battle area as a squad-carrying and logistics aircraft. It will be organic to combat support aviation companies and air cavalry troops and will replace the UH-1 Huey.

Other units that are fielding the Blackhawk are the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash. and the 24th Infantry Division at Fort Stewart, Ga.

With the Blackhawk capable of carrying twice the load of a "Huey" and cruising at least 140 knots (161 miles per hour), the ground commander will find that his tactical mobility has been increased tremendously.

In terms of combat support, the Blackhawk can lift a fully combat-equipped squad. One combat support aviation company (15 Blackhawks) can lift 200 troops at one time.

In terms of combat service support, the Blackhawk has a special litter kit that greatly enhances the medical evacuation of casualties. With an external load capability (cargo hook) of 8,000 pounds, the Blackhawk can lift light artillery and TOW mounted vehicles. Certainly the Blackhawk will soon be the backbone of air mobility.

New captain list to correct old

WASHINGTON — Some officers on the promotion list to captain will soon receive a new sequence number, according to DA personnel officials.

The current list which was distributed in May contains faulty sequence numbers for about half of the first lieutenants.

The problem began three years ago when the active federal commissioned service data for the 1978 West Point graduating class was entered into the office master file. Half the class was given the correct date of rank and the other half was erroneously assigned a second date. The error was only recently detected after the promotion board released the results.

The computer mistake affects most first lieutenants with a date of rank of June 7, 1980. Those assigned sequence numbers 2073 through 4163 on the current list will have their numbers changed by the revised list.

The corrected list will mean a few months longer wait for as many as 800 to 900 officers. However, officials note, sequence numbers on the revised list are adjusted so that first lieutenants will be promoted at the proper time. So far, no one has been promoted based on the erroneous list.

Under the Army's old promotion policy, sequence numbers were not important in determining promotions to captain. First lieutenants were promoted after completing a specific period of time-in-grade.

The Army recently began a floating point to captain and these officers are now promoted based on the needs of the Army. This procedure parallels the one currently used to promote field grade officers. (ARNews)

Headlights ignored

During the past few weeks, many Fort Benning drivers have been observed operating their vehicles during periods of limited visibility without turning on their headlights. If you are one of these drivers consider the following facts:

- USAIC Regulation 190-5 requires that "Headlamps on all vehicles will be on from one-half hour after sunset to one-half after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise and whenever it is raining or fog exists and at any other time when there is not sufficient visibility."

- Headlights not only help you see hazards in your path; they also help other motorists and pedestrians to see you!

Since school is back in session, you as a driver, must take special care to assure you are able to see children walking to school during the early morning hours. You must also be prepared to meet units using the roads for road marches or other physical training at any time of the day or night.

Please give our children, service members, and other motorists a chance; use your headlights.

Ambush team retreats from tanks

"Let's get out of here!" screamed the Dragon gunner as he and his two-man security team rushed down the trail.

The tanks kept coming, covering the area with withering fire from the machine guns and main weapon, as the small ambush team retreated toward its rendezvous point via concealed routes of withdrawal.

It was a suicide mission from the start, team members said, as they laid out their ambush site.

The team, 2nd Platoon, Company A, 1st Battalion, 78th Infantry, was given the task of delaying enemy armor advancement using the ambush techniques.

They selected their point well and were provided with the use of the latest in anti-armor, the Dragon and VIPER, giving them somewhat of an advantage. But it was to no avail.

The tanks were too much for the soldiers to stop and now they were running for their lives trying to make it to the next delaying position...

"Lieutenant, bring your people back here," commanded the instructor.

As the young officers gathered at the ambush point, so did the three tanks belonging to the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

The action just described was a scenario at a training area here in which the Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 6-81 students were involved.

"How well do you think you did?" asked the instructor. "Taking a look at the way in which you set up the ambush, do you think that there could have been any changes?"

After a brief question and answer period in which the student exercise was critiqued, the students moved out toward a road and waited for the truck to pick them up and take them back to the classroom area. The tanks moved on toward the next objective, another ambush, to see what was in store there.

197th Infantry Brigade comes home

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

After maneuvering in the Mojave Desert for a month, 2,500 soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade returned to Fort Benning this week from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"It was invaluable training for the brigade," said Col. Carmen J. Cavezza, brigade commander. "The experience built the soldiers' confidence in themselves and their equipment."

The 197th was the first unit to train at the Fort Irwin facility since the active Army assumed responsibility for the National Training Center on July 1.

The "Forever Forward" brigade conducted battalion-sized operations in the desert using its assigned firepower capabilities as well as attached elements.

"We were able to maneuver the entire Task Force and have close air and tactical air support in a live fire environment," said Maj. Craiger C. Parker, brigade operations officer. "The artillery firing in support of the maneuver force added realism. We had no canned firing from the artillery battalion (2nd Battalion, 10th Field Artillery)."

The returning soldiers' morale was high as evidenced by the "thumbs up" gestures and the grins on their tanned faces as they stepped down from the Air Force's C-141 Starlifters.

Many troops were greeted by their families at Lawson Army Airfield, the Kelley Hill Recreation Center or the unit area. Others waited at home preparing favorite meals and having the showers or bath water ready.

The brigade is scheduled to return to Fort Irwin in 18 months for more desert training. The next trip, however, will be for two weeks instead of four, and the opposing forces will be those soldiers permanently assigned to the National Training Center.

According to Parker, there was no element of training that was singularly beneficial.

"Each portion of training benefited a unit to a different degree," he said. "It really was an invaluable experience."

Col. Cavezza was surprised that the equipment operated as well as it did.

"The equipment held up much better than I thought it would," he said. "We pulled more maintenance than usual, but then, maintenance is part of training."

"When we return to the National Training Center in 18 months, we'll have to hit it running and maintain the equipment because, with only two weeks to train, we won't have extra time for maintenance."

The 197th is back at Kelley Hill and Harmony Church, but plans are already underway for three weeks of winter training at Fort Drum, N.Y. in February.

One soldier gets a warm reception from his wife, who he hasn't seen for the past 30 days.

Cleaning up

The day coming off bivouac is probably the most peaceful one for a soldier training at one of the Infantry Training Brigade's. That day is usually used for cleaning weapons, footwear and other assorted equipment used in the infantryman's everyday life.

The equipment must be brought to its top form in case it is needed in the future. The soldiers all realize this and perform this small but essential mission set upon them. After all, a man's tools, as well as his weapon, is his most valuable possession in combat.

Four choppers from the 121st Aviation Company approach Ledo LZ to drop off soldiers.

A chopper from the 121st brings in a load of IOBC students to Ledo LZ.

Assignment: Ledo LZ

Story and photos by Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

We met the choppers at Lawson Army Airfield for the flight out to Ledo Landing Zone (LZ). It was Tony Adams', our newest reporter, first flight and in the end it would prove to be a memorable one.

The mission was a simple one: take pictures of an air assault mission being conducted by the Infantry Officer Basic Course 3-81 from the 24th Company, The School Brigade.

The assault would start at Letye LZ, with four choppers from the 121st Aviation Company (Soc Trang Tigers) picking up the 70 infantry officers and depositing them at the woodline on the edge of Ledo.

We clipped along at about 90 knots with our feet hanging out the doors watching skids of the chopper pass above the tops of the pine trees.

A few minutes later, the chopper began to slow down and we settled into the LZ. Off in the woodline, a jeep sat waiting as if it was purposely parked there to meet us.

The choppers left us at Ledo and we proceeded to match up with the officer that was controlling the mission. As we talked with the major, the flight of choppers took off and headed toward the pick-up point.

We watched the first wave come in, drop off the soldiers and leave for the next sorty. We moved into the middle of the LZ to get a better position in which to photograph the next wave.

The assault completed in true military fashion, we boarded the waiting chopper and returned to Lawson Field.

As it turned out, it wasn't just Tony's first flight but also the crew chief's first flight with the unit. We don't know how the crew chief felt, but Tony's still talking about it.

Three soldiers hustle to get away from the helicopter that just brought them in from Letye LZ.

A soldier of IOBC class 3-81, 24th Company the School Brigade rushes away from the helicopter.

Eight ways to keep GI benefits coming

If you are leaving active service and are planning to enroll in school this fall under the GI Bill, the Veterans Administration has a useful check list to help keep those VA education benefits coming regularly:

- File for your GI Bill benefits as early as possible.
- Double check your choice of courses to be certain they will count toward your educational objective.
- Register early. VA and your school need time to process your registration so that GI Bill checks can be started your way promptly.
- Avoid dropping classes after registration.

- If you have to interrupt your education, notify VA promptly and advise the date you expect to return to classes.

- If you change addresses, notify VA promptly. Of course, you'll want to notify the school and the post office, also.

- Submit transcripts to the college admissions and records office immediately after application is made. This will speed up the school's certification to the Veterans Administration.

- If you have any questions about the GI Bill or eligibility for it, contact the nearest VA regional office or a service officer from one of the national veterans organizations.

GI Bill running out

WASHINGTON — Time is running out for approximately 900,000 veterans to use educational benefits of the GI Bill.

About one-fifth of the 4.3 million eligible veterans will lose their eligibility for benefits this year, according to the Veterans Administration. The law permits a veteran to use the education benefits within 10 years following discharge from service, or by Dec. 31, 1989, whichever is earlier.

When the first measure was signed by President Roosevelt June 22, 1944, through June 30, 1981, 18 million veterans received assistance under the GI Bill at a cost of $51 billion. About 35 percent of all trainees have been Vietnam era veterans. This year the GI Bill will assist the education of more than 800,000 Vietnam era veterans.

More than 7.8 million World War II veterans were trained under the original measure, about one-half of all those eligible. Another 2.4 million, or 43.4 percent of those eligible, studied under the Korean Plan, and nearly 7.8 million Vietnam era and post-Korean veterans and service personnel have thus far participated in the current program. Some 65 percent of the Vietnam era veterans eligible have received training.

A new program, which requires financial participation by service personnel, is available for those who entered the military after Dec. 31, 1976.

Veterans who want more information on GI Bill eligibility should contact the nearest VA regional office. (ARNews)

Is your child a U.S. citizen?

If you have had a child born overseas during the time you have been in the service, you probably think you have done everything necessary for that child to prove he or she is a United States citizen. Unless you obtained a Certificate of Citizenship for that child, you have not.

You probably have one or several State Department forms reporting the child's birth, or authorizing the child's admission to the U.S. These forms are not enough, however, to prove American citizenship.

With certain unusual exceptions, if either of the parents of the child is an American citizen at the time of the birth overseas, the child will be a full-fledged American citizen. Without a certificate of birth in the U.S., however, that child may be unable to prove his citizenship unless an extensive check is made. That's why the Certificate of Citizenship is needed. This certificate is the legal proof that the person named on it is a citizen.

To obtain this Certificate of Citizenship, it is necessary to file an application form, No. N-600, with the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service Office and pay the necessary fee. There are immigration offices in almost every country in the world.

An immigration officer will then make the necessary inquiries to insure that your child is a citizen. If all is in order, the Certificate of Citizenship will be forthcoming.

Some of the purposes for which the Certificate of Citizenship may be used are: to prove citizenship to get a passport, to enter a child in school in some states, to receive a commission in the Armed Forces, to secure a government job, to speed up a security clearance and for Social Security purposes.

If you have any question regarding Certificate of Citizenship, make an appointment with the Fort Benning Judge Advocate General's office at 545-3281 to discuss the matter with an attorney. You may also obtain information by contacting your local Immigration and Naturalization Service office or write: Immigration and Naturalization, Central Office, 425 Eye St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20536.

Field day

Team competition promotes spirit

Story and photos by Brian Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Training shouldn't always be hard, so in order to promote esprit de corps, teamwork and the spirit of competition, the 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade held a field day last Saturday.

Conducted at Stroup Field, the field day consisted of 20 events focusing on sports that were physically demanding and teamwork oriented.

Beginning with a formation at the battalion area at 6 a.m., the unit marched to Stroup Field for the opening ceremonies which included a speech by the battalion commander and the invocation.

The first event was the 100-meter dash which the soldiers ran in fatigues and boots. This event was followed by the egg-throwing contest and the two-man tent assembly.

Other competition included a five-mile run, M16 assembly and disassembly, the combat run and volleyball.

All of the events had two participants or more, and one in particular had three participants. This was the three-quarter race which had four teams of three men tied together running 100 meters in a straight line.

The soldiers weren't the only ones who enjoyed the spirit of competition. Company C sponsored children's events which pitted the sons and daughters of the cadre and other permanent party personnel against each other. The events included a football toss and potato sack and balloon races.

The end product the units were competing for was the coveted battalion field day trophy. The trophy is given to the unit which accumulates the most points during the day.

In the end, Company A came out the winner as they have for the last three such field day competitions.

Company B was second and Company D was third, followed by Company E in last place. Because Company C was sponsoring the children's events and the unit was not in training, the soldiers didn't participate but were there in spirit.

Chattanooga provides adventure

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Once again summer vacation time is heading into the final stretch before the Labor Day climax. Many people aren't vacationing, or haven't vacationed yet, for possibly one reason — very little money to travel with.

Enjoying adventures of Rock City

Of course, gasoline for travelling is as expensive as ever. Motel fees haven't gone down and restaurants go up right along with the price of food. The answer to vacation woes doesn't lie in giving up your hard-earned time off, but in picking locations where the family can vacation close by.

There are many destinations that a family can choose within four hours of Columbus for vacationing — Atlanta, Eufaula and Savannah, to name a few. I decided that for my time off I'd take my family to Chattanooga, Tenn.

Chattanooga is easily accessible by interstate highway and is only four hours away. Total mileage round trip was approximately 460 miles. Not surprisingly, Chattanooga has many points of interest that will keep the family happy and enthusiastic about where they are. While maintaining the image of a growing metropolis, the city is full of history and has a certain charm. Chattanooga and Lookout Mountain together provide a complement of services and attractions.

Lookout Mountain is the site of the Civil War's "Battle Above the Clouds" — a battle in which the Southern Forces of the Confederacy in control of Lookout Mountain were overrun by forces of the Union Army and quite a military feat. At a place called Lookout Park there are numerous plaques, memorials, cannons and a museum to tell the story of what happened in the "Battle Above the Clouds".

The park and some other houses and memorials further down the mountain are run by the National Park Service. The Park Service provides interesting and informative talks about that time in our nation's history.

Probably one of the most famous attractions on Lookout Mountain is Rock City. Known around the south for the picturesque birdhouses and barns painted with the simple legend "Visit Rock City." Millions of visitors over the years since the park opened have done just as the barns and birdhouses have said and visited Rock City. My family and I were no exception, as anxious to see the "View of Seven States" as anybody else.

The Chattanooga Choo Choo is one of the best known features of the city. At one time the train traveled between Chicago and Chattanooga carrying many passengers and became so well known there's a song about it. Here it sits in honored retirement in downtown Chattanooga.

For more than two hours my wife, daughter and I looked at all the natural wonders that make up Rock City. My two-year-old daughter, who is usually tough to keep interested in anything for very long, remained excited about Rock City for the entire two-hour period. And why not? There are many unusual, natural features such as the balanced 1000-ton stone, Lover's Leap which provides an unparalleled view of hundreds of miles of land and the "Seven States View", the waterfall that cascades hundreds of feet to a pool of water below.

Man-made wonders such as the swinging bridge, Mother Goose Village and Fairyland delight young and old alike. Admission prices are reasonable considering the things that can be seen.

Ruby Falls is another natural wonder of Lookout Mountain. It's a combination cavern and underground waterfall inside the mountain. An elevator takes visitors down 200 feet to the cavern level. There the story of the cavern and falls is told and then visitors proceed back a half mile through all kinds of natural stone formations that have formed over millions of years. The trip takes you to the foot of an underground waterfall hundreds of feet high. The view is beautiful of this mysterious waterfall — mysterious in that no one knows where the water comes from and where it goes. The 58-degree temperature year round is treat in the hot summer and the cold winter.

The Incline Railway located at the top and bottom of Lookout Mountain provides a trip worth taking. The view as the cable car descends the mountain is panoramic Chattanooga stretches out below as the car goes down the mountain at a 45-degree angle. The car has slanted seats especially designed to make the ride comfortable. If camera buffs made the trip they'd be amply rewarded by excellent photographic opportunities. At the bottom of Lookout Mountain at the station for the Incline Railway are many shops and stores for visitors' pleasure. The "Hall of Presidents" Wax Museum is also there with wax statues and authentic clothes of the period. Every president of the United States from George Washington to Ronald Reagan is represented in the hall. Each president looks remarkably lifelike and a placard beside each presidential figure tells the story of each president's term of office.

Of course, no visit to Chattanooga would be complete without seeing the Chattanooga Choo Choo. The train made famous by the song is on display in the middle of a complex of shops and stores built around the "Choo Choo". As a matter of fact, a well-known hotel chain has built a hotel by refurbishing a bunch of old pullman cars for their guests to use as rooms. The cars are fixed up just as they were when the "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" was still running. Among the shops and features is an attraction tucked away up an elevator on the second floor. It is the Chattanooga Model Railroad Museum. Here, the whole family can marvel at a working model railroad built completely to scale the size of four rather large rooms. The trains run continuously and the scenery duplicates many features around Chattanooga. Motels in the area are as cheap or expensive as the budget you're working with. From the small, individually-owned motels to the large chain motels. If you're trying for a unique vacation you might consider trying a smaller motel. Many have a certain charm and hominess the chain motels don't. Restaurants from fast food to excellent fancy sit-down meals can be had in Chattanooga. The choice is yours depending on the budget and what you have to work with.

So you can use that vacation time and enjoy yourself.

Doughboys look ready for opener

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Our defense will have to keep us in the game until the offense comes around," is how Doughboy Head Coach Ralph Santaliz described his teams chances for the 1981 football season.

Not that the offense is lacking. It has a strong passing arm in Leamon Hall, former West Point star. "Leamon's starting," said Santaliz optimistically, "but he's not as strong at this point as he should be, just coming back from Irwin." Hall's backup, Harry Vaughn, may be playing second fiddle, but according to Santaliz, he could become a major asset very quickly after he gets more experience under his belt.

The offensive line, under Coordinator John Ross, looks ready for action. They have to be. "If the line breaks down, we can't do much of anything on offense, commented Santaliz. Depth is a problem for the offense as well as the remainder of the team. This could hurt in the long run. Roger Brown and Otis Grigs are just two backs expecting to see action this season.

On the defensive side of the coin, the Doughboys look steady. Defensive Coordinator John Pate has drilled his squad well. "The defense has 11 good men starting," said Santaliz with caution, "but after that we get into the depth problem again." John Marks, Ernest Scott and Skip Swackhamer are just a few who will be playing in the trenches this fall.

The kicking game looks as strong as ever. "We can kick with any of the major colleges this year," said Santaliz. The two kickers are Renee Garcia and Quarterback Leamon Hall gets set for the snap as his receiver awaits to sprint downfield.

Lee Bryant. The punters are Louie Gohnert and Steve Prunier.

"We're just looking to take one game at a time," commented Santaliz with a grin. "Our first two games will be tough, but we can definitely play with UT-Chattanooga, our first opponent. The key is to not give anything away and remain optimistic throughout the season."

The team overall, is better than last year. "We have better receivers, linebackers, defensive secondary and linemen. It's just up to us to go out and give it our best shot while keeping our mental mistakes down." It should definitely shape up to be an interesting season.

The Doughboys first game against the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga will start tomorrow night at Doughboy Stadium beginning at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1.50 adults and $1 for children at the gate.

Hall hands off to his running back in a scrimmage held at Gowdy Field.

Softball tourney exciting

Exciting action was on hand this past weekend as the first 36th Engineer Group All-Star Softball Tournament was held at Gowdy Field.

In the quarterfinal games, 36th Engineers defeated MEDDAC 11-1, and Golden Acres trounced 524th PSC 26-3.

In the semi-final action, Golden Acres then defeated the host 36th Engineers 19-9. In the other game, the WGMD Knights squeaked past Golden Acres 7-6.

In the championship game, Fort Benning's own Doughboys softball team easily claimed victory over WGMD 18-4.

Homerun champion for the tournament was Golden Acres's Sidney Cooper with a total of seven homeruns.

The tournament was under the direction of Joe Paciencia. Thanks goes to the Board of Directors Carson Suber, James Spencer and William Lin. The tournament was a success.

"Safe" is the call at the plate after a WGMD player scores.

Rifle club needs members

The post Junior Rifle Club is looking for new members. If you are interested in learning to shoot competitively or in learning the basics of rifle marksmanship and safety, then the rifle club is for you. To join, you must be at least 12 years of age and attend a basic rifle marksmanship course. The next course begins on Sept. 22 and runs for six weeks. Classes are held every Tuesday from 4:30 p.m. until 6:30 p.m. at the post indoor range on Bergen Street behind the Infantry Museum. Dues are $25, which includes the cost of the course and the annual membership. If you are interested in joining, be at the indoor range on Sept. 22 at 4:30 p.m. or call 545-2343 for more information.

Selecting the 1981 super bowl winner

Beginning this issue, five members of the Public Affairs Office will be picking their winners of the professional football games played each sunny Sunday afternoon. This is basically to create more interest in the coming football season. While the husbands out there will read this every week, we're sure the wives will be looking the other way, at least until December anyway.

To give you a quick view on each pickers opinion on the upcoming races, they were asked to do just that.

Carl Crump—"Picking a super bowl winner this year is no easy task. The days of domination are over for Dallas and Pittsburgh. A small form of parity is beginning to exist.

Dallas and Pittsburgh are obvious contenders, but that is all. Chicago and Cleveland both have a chance. No team from the AFC East has a prayer. Los Angeles and Atlanta are winners through the regular season (and this year New Orleans will have something to say about that) but they can't win the big one.

Oakland, possibly, if they ever find out where home is. Last but not least there's Philadelphia and San Diego. I pick Philadelphia over San Diego in the super bowl."

Larry Harrison—"This football season sports fans can look forward to a change. The days of Dallas and Pittsburgh are coming to an end. Neither of these teams will make it to the big one.

So who will? Not Oakland. They can't find their way home. The Rams and Falcons can't find their way out of the cellar.

This years NFC super bowl team won't be an easy pick, but NFC fans can keep an eye on Tampa Bay if Doug Williams' receivers can hold on to the ball.

The AFC super bowl team will be San Diego without a doubt. They'll bomb you from the air and they'll drill you on the ground. Defensively, they have that 110 percent punch."

Don Rhodes—"Another pro football season is here. I'm ready since it's my favorite armchair sport. Judging by some of the old pros who been cut, there must be an abundance of new talent this year.

Regardless, the Steelers are the team to watch. I think they'll take the trophy and rings home for the fifth time. However, should Steeler injuries continue, watch out for Cleveland."

Tony Adams—"This year's race looks tight as ever. I see 22 of the 28 teams with a chance of grabbing all the marbles.

In the AFC, the top three teams to beat are Buffalo, Pittsburgh and San Diego. Houston could go high if Ken 'Snake' Stabler decides he truly wants to play football. Oakland, obviously, has the edge, being last year's super bowl champs. However, I think they were simply a fluke. The possible surprise team of the season--Miami.

In the NFC, the top three teams at the helm are Philadelphia, Chicago and Atlanta. The Rams are always contenders, but as of this season, they're only pretenders. Minnesota, under Coach Bud Grant and quarterback Tommy Kramer, may still have enough gas for one last run for the crown, while St. Louis is a season or two away from a possible championship. The possible surprise team here looks like New Orleans. Watch 'em.

I pick a San Diego-Philadelphia shootout in January."

Doughboys thrive on fan support

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Guess what? The Doughboys are about to come out of hibernation for yet another year of crushing tackles, triple reverses and on-side kicks. If you didn't know that, then you've probably been stationed somewhere in the far reaches of Siberia with only a polar bear for company. Or better yet, with a crazed baby seal yelling for its mommy.

No, this is not Johnny Carson's monologue, it's just my own weekly column coming at you in full print stereo.

The season is right upon us. The Doughboys aren't exactly the Atlanta Falcons, but they are as of this edition of the BAYONET, undefeated. You say "no kidding." Actually, I am. But I hope they remain undefeated.

Since I've never even watched a Doughboys game, I'm eagerly awaiting the opener against the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga to be played tomorrow night at Doughboy Stadium at 7:30 p.m.

Needless to say, I'm not sure how the fan support will be for the Doughboys. I assume since they are Fort Benning's own, there will be a capacity crowd there tomorrow to watch the team tangle with those upstarts from Chattanooga. But right now, I'll just say that everyone out there will have to show me how much they enjoy supporting the guys on the team.

Let's face it. These guys have been spending some tiring afternoons out on the field practicing, drilling and getting into tip-top shape for you.

If they have half as much hustle tomorrow as they've had every day I've seen them, then UT-Chattanooga had better stay home or they may be unpleasantly surprised.

The coaching staff has really been doing an outstanding job in preparing the team for the rigors of the upcoming season. They've been patient but they've also been demanding, expecting the players to put out 110 percent. I think they have. I also think the coaches will agree, but only actual game experience will tell if the guys have gelled into a strongly competitive team.

If you've supported the Doughboys in the past, then I expect to see you out at the stadium tomorrow night. If you haven't watched them play before, then I hope you'll join the rest of us for the season, as well as the first game.

Like I said before, it's not the professional ranks, but I think everyone will find some hot football action in the games to be played. The 1981 Doughboys football team is counting on it.

Tickets for the game will be sold at the gate only. They will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for children. That's a small price to pay for all the thrills and spills to be seen in the upcoming season. See ya at the game.

The defense rests

YA football and soccer begin soon

By Martha E. Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Soccer registration for the fall season concluded this week and 13 teams will line up for the opening kicks on Sept. 26.

Youth Activities is still looking for assistants to help with the team. The program is only as successful as its' volunteers. Please call 545-3070 or

The Youth Activities flag and tackle football season kicked off with the first practices this week.

Seventeen teams began picking up their practice jerseys and equipment in preparation for the grand opening on Sept. 19.

I'd like to share two pieces of advice for the coaches and players. Every sport is part of the formative stage of it's participant.

Coaches:

As the Twig Is Bent

I took a piece of plastic clay and gently fashioned it one day, and as my fingers pressed it still it shaped and yielded to my will.

I returned when days were passed, that piece of clay was hard and fast.

It still that early imprint wore, and I could change it nevermore.

I took a piece of living clay and gently formed it day by day.

I molded with all my power and art a young child's soft and yielding heart.

I returned again when days were gone, he was a man I looked upon.

He still that early imprint wore, and I could change it.....nevermore.

Players:

Talent is God made be grateful,

Fame is man-made be thankful,

Conceit is self-made be careful.

MEDDAC wins softball title

By Monte Aerni
MEDDAC

Timely hitting and an all-around team defense brought the Post Softball Championship to MEDDAC on Aug. 12 when they finished off Airborne's team by the lopsided score of 14-2. This outstanding win brought the most coveted trophy on Fort Benning to MEDDAC.

The new post champions went undefeated during the week-long tournament and collected wins of 19-2 over HHC 3/7 197th, 13-2 over the MPs, 7-5 over 3rd Battalion, 1st ITB and 6-4 over Company A Support, 197th Infantry Brigade. These preliminary wins led up to the championship game.

MEDDAC, showing exceptional ability, soundly defeated Airborne in the final game to make sure our own Col. Joseph Baugh, MEDDAC commander, was on the field to accept only one trophy. That trophy reads: MEDDAC "1981 USAIC SOFTBALL TEAM CHAMPIONS."

Family life line to start

WASHINGTON — The Army Chief of Staff has approved a 24-hour communications system for family members in CONUS to confer with the Department of the Army.

Family Life Communications Line (FLCL), located in the Pentagon, will become operational on Tuesday. It will enable callers to obtain information on programs affecting family life.

The system will serve family members of active duty personnel, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, retirees and DA civilians. FLCL will allow family members to request information and assistance, to comment on current Army plans and programs, and to communicate with DA on matters of concern and interest.

Toll-free service will be provided for family members in CONUS, Hawaii, Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico: CONUS, 800 336-5467; Alaska, Hawaii, Virgin Island and Puerto Rico, 800 336-5480; Virginia, 800 572-5439.

FLCL will respond to questions on DA policies. Callers who have a question that can be answered at the local level will be referred to the command or appropriate local agency. (ARNews)

Club helps ease culture shock

By Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For some foreign-born wives who come to the United States with their husbands for the first time, it can be a scary experience.

But there's an organization here to help ease the culture shock. The International Wives Club is an independent group of foreign-born wives of military personnel stationed at Fort Benning. The club helps its members by providing social and other activities so they can better adjust to the American community and culture.

The club got started in 1975. "The Army Community Service had an idea of getting some foreign-born wives together for a coffee to form a club," said Olga Davis, the club's president. "We started with 20 members, and now have a 100."

"Most of them (the women) don't have a driver's license or they need to know where the commissary is located" continued Davis. "We have meetings the first Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. and the women are helped with these things.

"This is one place where they can speak to women in their own language and make friends," she added.

Each month the members show different things about their country. They also have guest speakers who talk about subjects from how to do cake decorating to the Military Police showing films about burglary.

"Some of the women are interpreters for the battered wives shelter", continued Davis. "Also, a lot of clubs, nursing homes and schools contact us to learn about cultures and customs of different countries."

Although the group is mainly a social group, the International Wives Club sponsors free GED classes and English classes. Qualified teachers and instructional material are provided by the Muscogee County Adult Education Department. The classes will be held at bldg. 4. More information on the classes will be announced in an upcoming BAYONET.

Social activities include family picnics, halloween parties for children, garden parties, luncheons, fashion shows, baby showers and an annual anniversary dinner dance. "This year the Spanish, Puerto Rican and Panamanian women got together to put on the anniversary dance and showed dances for their countries," mentioed Davis. "Each of the women has a special talent to contribute to the club," she added.

Since the International Wives Club is an independent club they are self-supporting and hold fundraising activities such as yard sales and Christmas bazaars.

"I think the club helps break the barrier for women coming here from overseas," said Davis.

For more information on the club call Olga Davis at 687-6417.

Schools announce meal policy

The Fort Benning Dependent Schools has announced its policy for free and reduced price meals for children served under the National School Lunch and Breakfast Program.

The School Board has adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

Family Size	Family Eligibility Scale for Free Meals			Family Size	Family Eligibility Scale for Reduced Price Meals
	Per Year	Per Month	Per Week		Per Year	Per Month	Per Week
1	$ 5,600	$ 467	$108	1	$ 7,970	664	$153

Each Additional Family Member:	1,790	149	34	Each Additional Family Member:	2,550	213	49

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals.

Application forms have been sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility.

Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certificate by the parent or guardian that the information is correct.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If you have foster children living with you and wish to apply for such meals for them, you should contact the school.

If a family member becomes unemployed, or if the family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals or for additional benefits such as free meals if the family income falls at or below the levels shown in the eligibility scale.

In the operation of the child nutrition programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color or national origin.

Under the provisions of the policy, the school principal will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the principal, he/she may wish to discuss the decision with the principal on an informal basis.

If the parent wishes to make a formal appeal, he/she may make a request either orally or in writing to Calvin T. Roush, Building 880-A, Fort Benning, Ga. or phone 545-4512 for a hearing to appeal the decision. During the appeal and hearing, the child will continue to receive free or reduced meals.

Applications now require the name and Social Security number of all adult family members. Adults without a Social Security number must indicate that they do not have one.

Schools may verify the source and amount of family income as well as household composition. Each school office and the office of the Schools Officer has a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by any interested party during business hours.

Three dining facilities win honors

Three dining facilities on post were recognized for outstanding food and service last week and presented best dining facility awards.

They are the 7th Battalion dining facility of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, and Companies A and B of the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

The cooks at the 7th Battalion won the best dining facility for the third quarter in the large dining facility category. It was the second consecutive quarter in which the cooks there won the award. Over the last two years they have been honored six times. Their manager is MSgt. Carlton Adkinson. One of his cooks, Sp5 Kurk Simmons, won chef of the quarter for the second time in a row.

Under the guidance of their head cook and manager, SFC Charles Hambrick, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, won the dining award in the small unit category for the year 1980. Hambrick and his staff won this award three quarters during 1980.

At Company B's dining facility, in the 2nd Battalion, SFC Roy Cooke and his staff won the best small unit dining facility award for the second quarter of 1981. This was the first win for the 34-year-old manager and his staff.

Col. Jack Harron hands SFC Roy Cooke, Company B facility, his first best dining facility award.

Sp4 Harold Kelly, SFC Charles Hambrick, Sp4 Samuel Baker, and Sp4 Jose Llanos of Company A.

Schweitzer in Africa featured on WFBG

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

He was called a humanitarian. He worked tirelessly to wipe out disease and make life better. Countless time and money were spent by this man to continue his work. His name was Albert Schweitzer, doctor, explorer and caring person. His efforts to make French Equatorial Africa a better place are legend.

The program "Africa and Schweitzer" chronicles what Dr. Schweitzer did in Africa and why many called him a humanitarian. The program is narrated by broadcast pioneer Lowell Thomas. "Africa and Schweitzer" will be seen next week on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable. Consult the BAYONET, Benning Bulletin or the Ledger-Enquirer TV Book (listed under cable) for dates and times. Other programs highlighted include:

- "Big Picture - The Battle of St.

Vith" — Parts 1 & 2 - Features a look at Hitler's Ardennes offensive and the attack on St. Vith.

- "Benning Report" - SFC Joe Wright discusses the Individual Ready Reserve program and what his duties have included on his tour of duty. BAYONET running columnist Bob Kuwik stops by to talk about running.

- "Green Scene" is a television magazine program that covers many different subjects of general interest to military people and their families alike. Two different "Green Scenes" are featured on WFBG next week and some of the subjects included are the Berlin Wall Patrol, Army Reserve training in Germany, the enlisted management system and skill qualification testing.

- "Big Picture - Tigers on the Loose" - Parts 1 & 2 - Examines the story of the 10th Armored Division during World War II and their battles from Bastogne to Brenner Pass.

Waste and fraud attacked

The Army has asked military and civilian personnel to take immediate steps to make sure resources are used in the most efficient way. Under attack are waste, fraud and abuse.

General E.C. Meyer, Army Chief of Staff, declared, "We must use these resources in the most efficient manner possible, both to gain the maximum degree of combat readiness and to do everything degree of combat readiness and to do everything possible to build public confidence in our execution of Army programs."

The Chief of Staff looks to the chain of command to make the program succeed. Using resources efficiently must become "a way of life." Areas on which attention is being focused include:

- using soldiers' time more productively.
- improving the use of training equipment.
- increasing energy conservation.
- improving maintenance.
- eliminating excess spare parts.

Kitchen fire hits Officers Club

By Dave Bristow

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Rella Floris was doing what she normally does at the Officers Club last Saturday evening — issuing storeroom items to employees — when she smelled smoke. (The storeroom is adjacent to the club's kitchen.)

A broiler had flared up and sent flames shooting into the kitchen's exhaust vents. A terrible kitchen fire was happening — one that would cause preliminary estimates by post engineers of at least $460,000 damage to the club, $300,000 structural damage and $160,000 damage to its equipment and furnishings.

"I saw two of our people looking at a broiler in our kitchen and saw a fire. Flames were blazing high and fire was dripping down the kitchen walls," said Floris, a petite woman who friends and customers call "Sam."

"When you've worked here as long as I have (13 years), this place is like a second home," she added. "Naturally, this hurts."

The club suffered both smoke and water damage, mainly to the carpeting and floors. The Lexington Room, where many guests dine, had extensive water damage. Its red carpeting is ruined.

But it's in the kitchen, where the fire began, where the heavy damage was done. Chunks of ceiling and roof have fallen into the kitchen, with charred remains everywhere. It will be a while before chefs can cook another meal there.

At the onset of the fire, the executive chef and other employees tried to extinguish the flames themselves but their efforts proved futile. Once the flames got between the ceiling and roof of the club it was too late.

Floris added, "We had to practically pull our chef off the roof. (He had climbed onto the roof of the kitchen to try to extinguish the fire.) I was afraid that he might catch on fire."

Both Fort Benning and Columbus firemen worked at containing the blaze. Some firemen were overcome by smoke but there were no other injuries.

The Officers Club is open; however, there are no kitchen facilities.

This is where the fire started. The fire extinguisher was used by the executive chef but it wasn't enough. See related photos page 12. (Photos by Dave Bristow)

Greyhounds coming to post

Many Fort Benning personnel will be happy to hear that they can now "leave the driving to someone else."

Greyhound Line, Inc. began scheduled service to Fort Benning Wednesday. The service will include routes from Fort Benning through the Columbus terminal, the Atlanta airport, to the downtown Atlanta terminal.

The return route will be from downtown Atlanta terminal through the Atlanta airport, the Columbus terminal, to Fort Benning. Connections to points west through Montgomery, Ala. can be made at the Columbus terminal. The Fort Benning terminal will be at the Main Mall at the shuttle bus stand in front of the Main PX entrance.

Fares to and from Atlanta will be $8.64 and $11.50 to and from Montgomery. Fares will be collected by the bus driver and/or at the Columbus terminal as the bus passes through the terminal.

Personnel are encouraged to use the post shuttle bus system to get to and from the Main Mall terminal. The schedule is:

Departures from Atlanta: 11:15 a.m., 5:15 p.m., 11:30 p.m.

Departures from Fort Benning: 4 a.m., 6:40 a.m., 2:40 p.m., 5:25 p.m., 10 p.m.

Arrivals at Fort Benning: 2:30 a.m., 6:35 a.m., 2:25 p.m., 5:20 p.m., 9 p.m.

Arrivals in Atlanta: 1:25 a.m., 6:40 a.m., 10:15 a.m., 5:45 p.m., 8:55 p.m.

Departures from Columbus terminal to Montgomery and points west: 5:30 a.m., 4:15 p.m., 8:55 p.m.

Letters to the Editor

Commissary shopping: privilege or hindrance?

Upon receiving my ID card I was finally permitted to shop in the commissary. As I took notice to the more than reasonable prices for food, my feelings toward the Army changed quite a bit. It was wonderful to see that the Army was looking after its people.

However, as I was exiting the commissary after purchasing groceries, I was surprised. I was forbidden from using the shopping carts to carry my groceries from the commissary to my car. The baggers told me that I wasn't allowed to remove the carts, and that the baggers (non-government personnel) would take my groceries to the car. To top it off, though, the bagger had an enormous button on his jacket which read: "I work for tips only." What was I supposed to do? Not tip him? Any decent human being, if not out of pure guilt or pity, would tip him. So I did.

Imagine that, a person goes to buy groceries at the commissary to SAVE money, and yet they still end up paying for something which they don't really need. I'm sure that there are many families with teenagers, who don't want or need to pay for these "baggers" to cart their groceries out for them, when other family members can do it for free.

On one occasion, when I was carrying one package from the commissary to my car, I was the subject of an unkindly remark rendered by one of the baggers — a bagger who, I might add, had the unmistakable, overbearing smell of alcohol on his breath.

Army personnel and their family members shouldn't have to tolerate such service. I thought that the Army was truly watching out for its soldiers and their families. It isn't even a matter of having to tip Army or other government personnel, but to tip a civilian who is trying to make money off of the humane, altruistic qualities of every Army family? It should be a crime! I honestly can't believe that there is such goings on at the commissary!

Having your groceries brought out to the car for you should be an option and not something to worry about. And I think that the shopping carts should be available for the consumer to borrow for transporting their groceries from the commissary to their car.

I'd rather make four trips to the car, than pay someone else for a service that I can do myself!

Denise E. Moroz Army wife

Commissary reply

Carry-out policy misunderstood

The commissary staff and package carrier personnel would like to thank Mrs. Moroz for writing about the incident in the commissary, and say that we sincerely regret that she encountered problems with the package carrier personnel.

Signs are posted on the front of each cash register stand stating: "Customer: If you want a package carrier, please tell the cashier," and "Package carriers are not government employees, they work for tips only." Customers are not required to utilize these services, and certainly should not be subjected to any unkind remarks when they desire to carry out their groceries.

Shopping carts are not designed for outside environment, and are not utilized for the purpose of taking groceries to the parking area; however, heavy duty carry-out carts are loaned to the customer upon request.

Not employees

Package carriers are not commissary employees. They are present because the majority of commissary patrons demand that their service be provided. The head bagger and assistant are elected by bagger personnel for a period of one year, and have jurisdiction over bagger operations. The majority of these carriers are military dependents and/or retired military personnel. They are not under the supervision, direction or control of any employee of the commissary; however, permission for individuals to perform bagging/carry-out services may be suspended at any time at the discretion of the commissary officer and terminated by the head bagger for failure to comply with the rules or conditions set forth in a licensee agreement established for bagger/carry-out personnel.

Report incidents

Incidents such as those described by Mrs. Moroz can be better controlled if they are reported directly to commissary management personnel at the time they happen so that positive action can be taken against offending personnel.

The commissary staff is dedicated to providing the best possible service to our customers. The commissary officer is available to any customer who wishes to voice a complaint, make a suggestion, or just discuss commissary service in general. Customers are urged to come by or call 544-3965.

Another forum for airing complaints is the Commissary Advisory Council. The council is made up of representatives from all major commands and club organizations such as officer and NCO wives. The council meets quarterly solely for the purpose of discussing commissary operations and making recommendations to the commissary officer. Customers are encouraged to notify their unit representative of any dissatisfaction with the commissary or to attend a council meeting in person.

The next scheduled Commissary Advisory Council meeting will be in Room 133A, bldg. 35, at 10 a.m. on Sept. 22.

Note: All major units' dining facilities are having a Hispanic meal during the week.

CG to present civilian awards

A new concept for presentation of awards to civilian employees who work at Fort Benning will begin this month.

The civilian awards program will be geared to highlighting the contributions of the civilian work force in the achievement and maintenance of a high level of readiness. All civilian awards earned during a particular month will be presented by the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, at the monthly awards luncheon.

Such awards as the Meritorious Civilian Service Award, the Commander's Award, Certificate of Achievement, Exceptional Performance Rating, Quality Step Increases, Sustained Superior Performance Award, Suggestion Cash Award, Length of Service Award and other significant accomplishment awards will be presented.

Also included will be the presentation of an award to the "Employee of the Month." The concept for this award is presently being developed and will be announced soon. The first such award will probably not be made until the October luncheon.

The monthly luncheon and awards program will follow a specific program theme of emphasis. The luncheon will be "Dutch Treat" and will be held at various selected locations throughout the post. Award recipients are encouraged to bring guests such as family members to participate in the celebrating of their receipt of an award. Managers/supervisors and fellow employees of the recipient's office or work facility are encouraged to attend.

The Civilian Personnel Office (CPO) will be the overall coordinator of the program. The CPO will host the luncheons for September and October. Thereafter, various organizations will host the luncheon and be responsible for selecting the luncheon theme.

The theme for the September program is "Make It Happen." The program will be held Sept. 24 at 11:30 a.m. in the Main NCO Club.

Soldiers indulge in hand to hand

By Dave Bristow

USAIC Public Affairs Office

You have to get down into the sawdust pit if you want to learn hand-to-hand combat. Sometimes in combat your hands are all you've got.

"Hand to hand is another means of taking on an enemy in combat. It teaches soldiers to protect themselves and not be injured," said SFC David E. Robinson, drill sergeant for Company C, 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, and principal instructor of hand-to-hand combat. "It also helps install an aggressive spirit.

"We start with the very basics," continued Robinson. "The soldiers start with learning how to face their opponent."

He explained, "There are three facing positions — left guard, right guard and front guard. The students must learn how to fall correctly, especially the rear fall position. It's extremely important for the soldier to know how to fall or he could really get hurt. He learns to protect his body."

Company C makes sure the students get more than the eight hours of hand-to-hand training required in a cycle. Whenever they can, hand-to-hand is incorporated with physical training. Instead of doing what they call their "daily dozen" exercises, sometimes the soldiers will indulge in some good ol' hand to hand.

"Again, we just teach them the basics here," added Robinson. "We don't want someone to go downtown, get into a fight, and try to use this on anyone. The person they try to use this on might know more than they do. So you have to be careful."

While hand-to-hand training is rough, tough and very aggressive, the soldiers seem to like it. A drill corporal for Company C, Mike Nevarez, said, "The fundamentals of hand to hand should come naturally to a person. Some people stiffen up when they do it instead of relaxing. That's when you have to be careful or you could get hurt."

He added, "Hand to hand makes people aggressive. I think every company should have its own sawdust pit. It would make soldiers more aggressive."

OCS celebrates special day

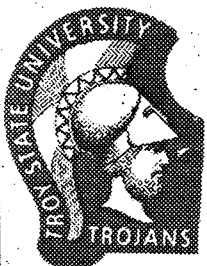

The Army's Officer Candidate School (OCS) will hold its Second Annual Commemoration Day celebration on Sept. 26 to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the school.

The purpose of the event is to heighten the feeling of pride in OCS among officer candidates by focusing on the heritage they are joining. It is also an opportunity for former graduates to renew friendships and make new acquaintances.

Activities planned for the Commemoration Day include a tour of the OCS area and Infantry Museum — an opportunity to observe officer candidate training and to see some of the Army's newest equipment. The day's events will be capped by a formal dinner at 6:30 p.m. at which Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. is scheduled to give the keynote address. Secretary Marsh is an OCS graduate and a member of the OCS Hall of Fame.

Interested graduates should contact the Adjutant, 5th Student Battalion, The School Brigade, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905 or call (404) 545-4510/4292, or AUTOVON 835-4510 as soon as possible. Reservations are limited.

Bayonet training makes comeback

Bayonet training, dropped from initial entry training at Fort Benning in 1972, is back. The training has been reinstated to foster aggressiveness, develop esprit-de-corps and help build confidence.

Instructors from the 9th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, conducted the first period of the reinstated training for initial entry soldiers of the battalion's Company A on Saturday morning.

Training consists of six one-hour periods, ranging from the very basics of bayonet fighting to the seventh period — three hours on the assault course. Assault courses are presently under construction for both brigades and are expected to be completed by Oct. 1.

According to the company commander, Capt. Eugene A. Glasser, the soldiers who received the bayonet training Saturday were highly motivated and enjoyed the training.

Army crime watch slated

The Department of the Army has designated the period from Sept. 7-21 as the Army Crime Watch Campaign. During this period, all military installations will be stressing community awareness and involvement in crime prevention; neighborhood watches; security of barracks, bachelor quarters and family residences; and the marking and recording of personal property.

Readers of this column will recall that Fort Benning has been actively involved in all of these initiatives since last fall. To date, community involvement in crime prevention has paid great dividends in terms of better reporting, increased likelihood of recovery of stolen property, and a reduced crime rate. The support of the entire community is needed to continue this trend.

Crime can be defined as any act which is inconsistent with either the expected or acceptable behavior of society. Its two major components are desire and opportunity. The desire of a criminal to commit a crime is contingent largely upon his or her view of the likelihood of apprehension and punishment. Failure of the police or the courts in serving as a deterrent impacts greatly on desire, but there is little that the general public can do to influence these two agencies.

On the other hand, the community has a direct impact on criminal opportunity; its reduction is the responsibility of every citizen. Security of property, marking valuables for identification, and maintaining a watchful eye on neighborhood activities are areas in which each of us must become and remain involved.

During the coming weeks, the military police will be initiating several new programs to increase police awareness and involvement in crime prevention.

Operation Crime Stop will deal with observation and reporting procedures; the Crime Hazard Identification Program with methods to increase security; and the Ride-Along Program with improvement in understanding between the military police and the community.

The Commanding General's proclamation of Sept. 7-21, 1981 as Fort Benning's Army Crime Watch Campaign encourages community involvement in crime prevention. Let's join forces and continue to decrease crime opportunity.

CG's proclamation

I, Maj. Gen. R. L. Wetzel, commander, U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, Ga., do hereby proclaim the period Sept. 7-21, 1981 as the Army Crime Watch Campaign and encourage all personnel, military and civilian, to actively participate in the crime watch programs being initiated throughout Department of the Army military communities during this period.

Remember ... crime prevention is everyone's business.

Staying alive taught at mine range

Story and photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With smoke in their eyes and blast simulators exploding all around them, soldiers in training are taught how to find enemy mines wherever they may lie.

Last week soldiers of Company A, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, underwent land mine warfare training here.

SSgt. Richard Strudivant, an instructor on the land mine warfare range, said, "On this range soldiers are taught about all types of mines. They are shown how to put them into operation, and find and disarm enemy mines.

"The primary mine instruction given on this range is the claymore antipersonnel mine," he added.

The soldiers also learn about the M21 antitank mine. "The mine is nicknamed 'Killer,'" said SSgt. Robert Dupler, another instructor. "This is the only mine that will kill a tank. It explodes under the tank causing secondary explosions inside the tank."

The students' day on the range began at 8 a.m. with two hours of instruction on the claymore mine. The next six hours were spent going through different stations and the soldiers looked like sunworshippers as they went through methods to find trip wires. They spent their last hour being tested on everything they were taught during the day.

Pvt. Jeff Gavin, 22, of Spokane, Wash. said, "Learning about mines is one of the most important classes I've had. It keeps my attention and I stay awake because I don't want to blow myself and my buddies up one day."

Platoon guide Pvt. Scott Licini said, "This is what we needed. Our people are more motivated now since we've been in the field. Before it was mostly working in classrooms." The soldiers are in their fifth week of training.

SSgt. Anthony A. Lee tells soldiers if they are a Go or No Go during the mine emplacement test.

Pvt. David Parker returns after aiming the claymore mine.

You don't have to be able to fly to be a ranger, but it helps. Under the careful direction of ranger instructor SFC Demitrus Brown a ranger student steps off the bank at Victory Pond to complete the 15 meter swim test.

Rangers work on confidence

Story and photos by Bill C. Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The culmination of the Benning phase of ranger training is the log walk, rope drop, traverse suspension confidence test at Victory Pond.

Prior to undertaking the confidence course, each ranger student must complete a 15-meter swim test to show he is prepared for the rigorous training ahead in the mountains of north Georgia and the swamps of Florida. Those who pass the test receive a classification of swimmer or weak swimmer. To aid the future instructors, the weak swimmers are identified by an additional tab on the back of their caps.

Upon completion of the swim test the students climb a pole and walk across a log 42 feet above the water. This leads them to a rope which they must negotiate by "monkey crawling" to enable them to touch a ranger sign. Then, after receiving permission, they drop the 35 feet or so into Victory Pond.

By this time, aided by several pushups, most of the students are thoroughly warmed up and they scamper up the 75-foot tower supporting the suspension traverse. The ranger students slide down the 175-meter-long cable hanging onto a pulley and, on command, drop into the water at about 40 mph.

If all this activity sounds exciting and a bit tiring, consider that just prior to this confidence test these ranger students spent two hours going through the bayonet assault course.

Sooner or later all good things come to an end. A ranger student prepares to hit the water at about 40 mph at the end of the suspension traverse.

You can't drop until you get permission. A ranger student requests permission to drop into the water from the 40-foot high rope drop.

Rangers do it the hard way. A ranger student who couldn't remember all the words to the final report does ranger-style pushups while refreshing his memory.

After completion of the confidence test and several sets of pushups, a ranger student renders the final report, "Sergeant, Ranger Poku reports successful completion of the log walk, rope drop, suspension traverse confidence test. Sergeant, rangers lead the way!"

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun."

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE. REENLIST.

Hispanic involvement in defense honored

The true test of a soldier, it has been said, is on the battlefields. This is where all the training, discipline and skills are put to use toward the accomplishment of the mission; the reaching of the objective.

Throughout the various wars that we, as a nation, have participated in, the Hispanic soldier has served gallantly and with honor.

The Hispanics' involvement in our national defense dates back to the early 1800s during the battle of the Alamo. Two Medal of Honor winners of the Civil War were Hispanics: Seaman John Ortega of the U.S. Ship Saratoga and Ordinary Seaman Philip Bazaar of the U.S. Ship Santiago De Cuba. Since those days many more Hispanics have contributed to our national defense, both individually and as units. More samples of such contributions are other Hispanic Medal of Honor winners. Many Hispanics have earned this highest national award. These are just a few of them:

First Lt. Baldomero Lopez was born in Tampa, Fla. He earned his award while serving with the 1st Marine Division during the Inchon invasion in Korea in September 1950. Lopez and his platoon were engaged in the reduction of immediate enemy beach defenses after landing with the assault waves. During the course of the attack, Lopez sacrificed himself by cradling a hand grenade and receiving its full impact, thereby sparing the lives of many of his men.

Sgt. Joseph C. Rodriguez, from San Bernardino, Calif., earned his award while serving with the 17th Infantry Regiment near Munye-Ri, Korea, in May 1951. Under heavy fire, Rodriguez wiped out five enemy automatic-fire emplacements that had halted the friendly attack. He moved from one pillbox to the other, which were covering the front and both flanks, dropping hand grenades in them. Rodriguez's courageous actions exacted a toll of 15 enemy dead, broke the opposition's defense, and the strategic strong point was secured.

Cpl. Rodolfo P. Hernandez, born in Colton, Calif., earned his award while serving with the 187th

CG's message

Fort Benning will celebrate Hispanic Heritage Week during Sept 13-19. This year's theme is "Hispanic Americans: Heritage of Valor."

The Hispanic Americans have played a long and distinguished role in the history of our nation. They founded settlements in Florida and Georgia half a century before the settlers landed at Jamestown, and were homesteading in New Mexico more than 150 years before the War of Independence.

The names of scores of American cities and towns are reminders that many of the explorers and early settlers who opened our frontiers were of Hispanic origin. Hispanic Americans have contributed gallantly to the defense of our nation, and many have received the highest decoration our Country can bestow - the Congressional Medal of Honor.

It is proper and fitting that we take time to recognize this part of our heritage. Therefore, I proclaim the week of September 13-19, 1981 as "Hispanic Heritage Week" at Fort Benning. I cordially invite all military personnel, their dependents and all civilian personnel to observe and participate in the scheduled events during the week.

Airborne Regimental Combat Team, near Wontong-Ni, Korea, in May 1951. While his platoon was in a defensive position on Hill 420, it came under ruthless attack by a numerically superior and fanatical hostile force. Using heavy artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire, the enemy inflicted numerous casualties on the platoon. His comrades were forced to withdraw but Hernandez, although wounded, continued to deliver deadly fire into the ranks of the onrushing enemy until his rifle jammed. He then left his position and engaged the enemy in hand-to-hand combat with his rifle and bayonet, killing six of the enemy before falling unconscious from his wounds.

Hernandez's heroic action momentarily halted the enemy's advance and enabled his unit to counterattack and retake the lost ground.

Sgt. Jose M. Lopez — Place of birth: Mission, Texas. Lopez earned the Medal of Honor while serving with the 2nd Infantry Division in Belgium in December 1944. He prevented his unit, Company K, 23rd Infantry, from being enveloped and destroyed by covering their retreat with the use of a heavy machine gun which he moved to different positions to cover both flanks. Under heavy enemy fire from enemy tanks and infantry, he prevented the enemy's advance. When his ammunition was exhausted he had killed at least 100 of the enemy and his unit had withdrawn successfully.

PFC Manuel Perez Jr., born in Oklahoma City, Okla., earned his award while serving with the 11th Airborne Division in the Philippines, February 1945. Perez single-handedly killed 18 enemy soldiers, neutralized an emplacement which contained two twin-mounted 50-caliber dual-purpose machine guns, and made possible the successful advance of his unit toward a valuable objective.

PFC Cleto Rodriguez — Place of birth: San Marcos, Texas. Rodriguez earned his award while serving with the 37th Infantry Division in the Philippines in February 1945. On two separate occasions Rodriguez destroyed enemy gun emplacements, single-handedly killing 13 enemy soldiers. Also, accompanied by a comrade, Rodriguez aided his platoon's advancement by killing more than 75 enemy soldiers who were holding his platoon at bay.

PFC Carlos J. Lozada, born in Caguas, Puerto Rico, earned his award while serving with the 173rd Airborne Brigade (Separate) at Dak To, Republic of Vietnam (RVN) in November 1967. While manning an early warning outpost, Lozada observed a North Vietnamese army company. After alerting his comrades, Lozada commenced firing at the enemy with accurate machine gun fire, killing at least 20 North Vietnamese soldiers. The enemy continued their assault and the unit was ordered to withdraw. Lozada remained at his post to provide cover for the unit's retreat, thus preventing their encirclement. He continued to deliver a heavy, accurate volume of suppressive fire against the enemy until he was mortally wounded.

Sp4 Hector Santiago-Colon — Place of birth: Salinas, Puerto Rico. Santiago earned his award while serving with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) at Quan Tri Province, RVN, in June 1968. While serving as a night perimeter sentry, Santiago detected enemy presence and alerted his comrades to move into their foxholes and remain alert for enemy-probing forces. The enemy opened fire from the area around Santiago's position. Santiago and his comrades began to repel the attack with grenades and small arms fire. A North Vietnamese soldier was able to crawl undetected to the platoon's position and toss a grenade in Santiago's foxhole. Realizing that there was no time to throw the grenade out of his position, Santiago retrieved the grenade, tucked it into his stomach and, turning away from his comrades, absorbed the full impact of the blast. His heroic self-sacrifice provided his comrades with the inspiration to continue fighting until the enemy was forced to retreat. The gymnasium located in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade area was named in memory of Santiago.

Lance Cpl. Jose F. Jimenez, born in Mexico City, Mexico, earned his award while serving with the 1st Marine Division at Quang Nam Province, RVN, in August 1969. While serving as a fire team leader, Jimenez's unit came under heavy attack by North Vietnamese army soldiers concealed in well-camouflaged emplacements. Jimenez plunged forward toward the enemy positions and personally destroyed several enemy personnel and silenced an anti-aircraft weapon. Shouting encouragement to his comrades, he then approached and destroyed another enemy position in the face of their vicious automatic fire. Now the target of enemy fire, Jimenez continued to press forward and was mortally wounded as he moved to attack another enemy soldier.

Training brigade battalion celeb

Story and photos by Tony Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Roush Barracks, more commonly known as 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, celebrated its fourth birthday Monday.

According to 6th Battalion CSM Winfred Crowe, the battalion was activated in August of 1977, but was not occupied until September of 1977. Since that time, 6th Battalion has been continually turning out approximately 200 soldiers from each company during each cycle.

"The event took a lot of organization and planning," commented Crowe.

The organization day seemed more like a family day as soldiers and their family members were on hand for the numerous activities and a noon barbeque.

Lt. Col. Richard Taylor, battalion commander, presented the Charlie Company Cougars with the overall winners' trophy following the athletic competition between the companies - Alpha Company, the Bravo Bulldogs, the Charlie Cougars, the Delta Dragons and Evil Echo.

In the various events, the winners were broken down into companies: volleyball-Alpha, tennis-Delta, pushups-Charlie, situps-Delta, squat thrust-Alpha, horizontal ladder-Charlie, fireman's carry-Alpha, M16 assembly-Alpha, air mattress blow-Charlie, guidon relay-Delta, PT platform race-Alpha and the cadre run - won by Echo company.

The competition was close, but Charlie Company came through.

One of the day's winners was Pvt. Harold Ingram. After giving it all he had in the combat run, he breathlessly replied that he thought he was going to die.

Bobby Lanz tries to nail down a win for his team in the nail driving contest.

Doughboys fall; offense sputters

Doughboy tailback Bobby Simmons (34) carries for a short gain against the Moccasin defense.

Tailback Elijah Brown (45) gets good blocking as he turns downfield for yardage.

The Doughboys football team, in their first game of the season, took it on the chin 24-0 to a well-organized University of Tennessee at Chattanooga J. V. team.

The game, played before a near capacity crowd, was riddled with offensive turnovers and errors for the Doughboys. Quarterback Leamon Hall started the game. However, after failing to rally the offense through the first three quarters, the former West Point star was replaced by Harry Vaughn. Vaughn, who is said by Head Coach Ralph Santaliz as simply needing experience also had little success with the Moccasin's defense as he failed to complete a pass. As a result of the Doughboys' offensive troubles, Doughboy punter Steve Prunier was kept busy throughout the game. This hurt when Prunier had a punt blocked in the end zone causing another UT-Chattanooga score.

It was obvious that the defense kept the Doughboys in the game throughout the first half as UT-Chattanooga held a narrow 6-0 half-time lead, capitalizing on two field goals. The Doughboys went into the locker room hoping to come up with some offensive firepower in the second half. However, with 10:40 remaining in the third quarter, the defense was bent when UT-Chattanooga running back Bill Wade scored on a two-yard run through the middle.

The Doughboys then started their best drive of the night, marching 61 yards to the Moccasin 5-yard line before UT-Chattanooga linebacker Don Robinson stripped a Doughboy back of the ball and ran 95 yards for the touchdown.

Finally, in the fourth quarter, UT-Chattanooga finished up their scoring for the night when left end Mark Helm blocked the Steve Prunier punt in the end zone. Offensively, the Moccasin's played well racking up 247 yards to the Doughboys 76. The game raised some obvious questions about the Doughboys offense.

The Doughboys will have a two-week layoff before returning to the turf on Sept. 19 against Carson-Newman Junior College. The game will be played at Doughboy Stadium. Gametime is at 7:30 p.m.

KC picked to surprise Tampa

Week one of our weekly professional football selection column proved to be a shaky one. Many teams expected to win bowed to the underdogs. It made for exciting action across the nation, setting up this week's crucial games.

Carl Crump — "I guess you could call last week a rough start. But those of you who didn't believe in San Diego are obvious believers now. That gives me a season starter of six and eight."

Larry Harrison — "Now that the crying is over, sports fans, let's take a look at week number two. Hopefully, you'll learn to go along with my picks."

Don Rhodes — "In week one I got sacked a few times on my picks. I'll hang in there, though."

Tony Adams — "Upsets, upsets and more upsets. What can I say? Last week was definitely the week for the underdog. Powerhouses such as Pittsburgh, Oakland, Los Angeles and Cleveland were beaten in their all-important season openers. Let's see if they can recuperate and claim victory in the second week of this 1981 NFL season."

Motorcycle safety

Driving a motorcycle at night is particularly hazardous because of the reduced visibility. During daylight, obstacles in the road such as a muffler or an animal can usually be seen in plenty of time to permit evasive action. Obstacles at night, however, present a particularly dangerous hazard to the motorcyclist because of the combination of reduced visibility, a single headlight and the element of balance required. The consequences can be fatal.

Recently, this nightmare became a reality for a motorcyclist on a Georgia highway at night. The victim's motorcycle struck a piece of furniture that had apparently fallen off a truck onto the highway. The motorcyclist lost control and slammed head-on into an oncoming car. The results, a macabre ending; the fault, certainly not the motorcyclist.

In order to minimize your chances for an accident, plan your trips for daylight hours. If you must drive at night, reduce your speed to give yourself time to avoid an unexpected obstacle. Stay constantly alert for obstacles. There may be one out there with your name on it.

Marksmanship unit wins in Egypt

By Tommy Poole

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit sparked the United States team to this year's overall CISM Shooting Championship held in Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 1-8.

Seventeen of the top military teams in the world were on hand for the 22nd CISM Championships as the U.S. squad reclaimed the team trophy for the first time since 1978. With a score of 9,082 out of 10,000 total possible points, the Americans outdistanced second place Switzerland at 9,058 and Finland finishing third with 9,041.

In the individual championships, Erich Buljung and John Kailer established a new CISM record in the Military Rapid Pistol event after each fired 597 out of 600 points. Buljung won the individual gold medal after winning in the shootoff; however, both will be credited with the record.

The U.S. Pistol team won both the CISM Center Fire and Military Rapid Fire events while the U.S. Rifle squad placed second by one point in the 300-Meter Standard Rifle event and third in the Military Rapid Fire event.

Members of the winning United States team included Stanley Parmentier, Cmdr., USAMU, team captain and chief of the U.S. Delegation.

Kids leave 'Sesame Street' behind

Ann shows signs of first-day jitters during orientation at Patch School.

Tuesday marked the graduation from "Sesame Street" for about 190 children who officially began their formal education when they entered Patch School, Fort Benning's pre-kindergarten.

"We hope to make this year the best year yet," said school director Jean Clemmons in her opening day remarks to the students and their parents.

Patch School is sponsored by the Fort Benning Pre-kindergarten Association and is designed to teach socialization skills to the young students.

"We want them to learn to work with other children," said Clemmons. "We want them to learn to play and to cooperate with the other students. If they know their ABCs and know pre-reading and pre-math, then we'll work with them on their academics."

The pre-kindergarten school offers two, three and five-day sessions per week. The fee is $24, $32 and $42.50 each month for the respective classes. The school day runs from 9 a.m. until 11:15 in the morning. For further information call Patch School at 687-2404.

Ben, age 4, walks cheerfully on his way to his first day of school.

Lt. Col. (Ret.) Woodrow W. Millsap, billeting officer for the Reserve Component here, was recently given an award citation from the Alabama National Guard.

"The National Guard has been down here for three or four years," said Millsap. "They said I helped make their stay here comfortable."

The Guard made Millsap an honorary aide-de-camp. The citation was signed by Fob James, the governor of Alabama.

Col. Donald J. Marnon, chief of the Directorate of Industrial Operations, presented the award to Millsap Tuesday morning.

Millsap has been in civil service for 15 years, and has worked for the Reserve Component for three years.

Millsap retired from the Army in 1957. He was with the 82nd Airborne during World War II, and was involved in the invasion of France and Holland. He then served with the 1st Battalion, 8th Airborne Regiment in Korea.

Millsap's last unit was the 3rd Airborne Infantry Division at Fort Benning.

Col. Marnon reads the citation prior to presenting it to Millsap.

Problems Hispanics face aired

By Bill Powell
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

Hispanic Heritage Week comes up next week and is dedicated to showing the pride, as well as the problems of being Hispanic in today's society. "The Voice of La Raza" is a program that shows the problems of employment and education Hispanics face as well as some of the solutions to these problems. "The Benning Report" will also feature a guest telling about the events of Hispanic Heritage Week. Both programs are featured on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable.

For times and dates of scheduled programs consult the BAYONET, the Benning Bulletin or the Ledger-Enquirer TV Book (listed under cable). Other programs highlighted on next week's schedule include:

- "Hello Partner - Danke Schon" - People being assigned to Germany will find information about problems and pleasures of being assigned there. Ideas of how to overcome some problems are offered as well as advice on how to make the best of any overseas tour.
- "Sportsreel" offers the chance to take a close-up look at how Americans looked, lived, and played in the '50s. Both editions are different but each features sports action of note from that time including the 1957 World Series, the Army vs. Notre Dame football game and national tennis.

- "The Ready Americans" offers a view of the Army Reservists - who they are, what they do and how and why they train.

Zorro movie for comedy fans

By Bill Powell
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

From out of the dark of the night with a flashing sword and a desire for truth comes Zorro. Many may remember the Zorro of old in just this way. His sons, however, make the legend different in the new movie "Zorro, the Gay Blade."

George Hamilton of "Love at First Bite" fame trades in his vampire fangs for a sword and a whip as he plays two roles in his newest movie. One part he plays is that of Don Diego, Zorro's son who gets to California first. It is under Spanish control and the town where he goes is run by an old friend turned tyrant (played by Ron Leibman), the Alcalde. The Alcalde cruelly taxes and punishes the people and Zorro's offsprings about to correct the wrongs done.

Don Diego is brought the cape, sword and mask of his father and he takes on the role of Zorro. In one of his escapes from the Alcalde's men he injures his ankle which takes him out of action. Fortunately, Don Diego's brother Bunny Wigglesworth, also played by Hamilton, is there in California on leave from the British Navy and he takes over as Zorro from Don Diego.

The movie is played for laughs and the audience gets them. There is a small problem with the dialogue in that Hamilton can't be well understood with his spanish accent. For lots of laughs "Zorro, the Gay Blade" is one of the best from the current crop of Hollywood productions. The mark of the "Z" has never been in better hands. I give "Zorro, the Gay Blade" three stars.

President proclaims Constitution Week

The National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), reminds everyone that Sept. 17-23 has been proclaimed by the President of the United States as Constitution Week.

If our nation is to remain vital, it must maintain the spirit of liberty expressed in our constitution. If we fail to guard the spirit and become indifferent to the worth of our freedom, we will have lost the right to freedom. We urge all to read their constitution.

The DAR's believe in a patriotism which loves one's country as the dearest and best in the world and does not refuse to defend it.

An artist's conception of how the new MOUT village will look when completed.

German village being built

An area at McKenna Airstrip off Hourglass Road will take on a German look within the next two years.

That's where the 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, is building a replica of a German village to be used for Military Operations on Urban Terrain (MOUT) training.

Cost of materials, depreciation and rental of equipment, plus the cost of fuel to be used during the construction will be approximately $5 million. Gen. Wetzel, who spoke briefly at the groundbreaking ceremony, pointed out that in Germany cities are expanding so rapidly that the tactical doctrine which dictates that built-up areas be isolated and bypassed is becoming increasingly difficult to apply as the urban terrain expansion changes battle plans.

The new MOUT city will "provide realistic training for the battlefield of tomorrow," he said, adding, "I am pleased to get the ball rolling" on the mock village, which will consist of 13 concrete and masonry structures designed and positioned to resemble a typical German village.

The present MOUT area on post consist of antiquated and rapidly deteriorating wooden World War II vintage troop billets and is considered inadequate for innovations in doctrine, training and projected usage here.

The new facility will add maneuver area, and allow the integration of mechanized, armor and helicopter operations as part of combined arms training in a MOUT environment. The use of smoke, pyrotechnics and chemical agents normally associated with combat in cities will round out the training capabilities.

The Directorate of Facilities Engineers designed the facility and will control the funding and procurement of construction materials. The 36th Group will maintain overall control of construction and quality assurance.

Col. Bittl said the construction will provide "excellent training for the battalion's carpenters, masons, electricians, structures specialists and heavy equipment operators."

Bulldozers move dirt within minutes after a groundbreaking ceremony for the new MOUT facility.

Officer career change

ATTENTION: All Company Grade Officers

There has been a recent change to all company grade officers' career development ladder: A new rung has been added which has been named "Combined Arms Services and Staff School," short title CAS-3.

If anyone is interested, briefings will be presented Thursday and Sept. 25 by Lt. Col. John Stillman, CAS-3 instructor, from Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Stillman will present one briefing Thursday from 4-5 p.m. at the NCO Club in Sand Hill. On Sept. 25, he will brief from 11:10 a.m.-12:10 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium, bldg. 4, and from 1:30-2:30 p.m. in the Kelley Hill Theater.

Water outage

All steam and hot water will be shut off in all buildings in Sand Hill served by the central energy plant. The shut off will start at 8 a.m. on Oct. 5 and will be off until 8 a.m. on Oct. 9 at which time the lines will start being refilled with high temperature water.

This will impact on mess halls, washing and showering facilities in the barracks, gyms, etc., as well as clothes washers. Plans should be made as soon as possible to compensate for this situation.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel and Col. Frederick E. Bittl combine to turn the first shovel of dirt at the new MOUT site.

Hispanic soldiers' jobs focused here

Hispanics have been major contributors to our nation's defense in every major war that our country has been involved in, as well as during peacetime operations. They have contributed both as soldiers in the many branches of our military force, and as civilians employed by the military. In both of these areas they have served loyally, honorably and with distinction.

This week has been dedicated to the recognition of Hispanics as a vital asset to our nation. In this regard, the BAYONET wishes to focus its attention on some of the contributions that Hispanics have made toward our defense as well as to the accomplishment of our local mission.

Hispanic personnel have been, and continue to be, a great asset to Fort Benning's operation. They have contributed to the accomplishment of our training missions directly or indirectly, as support personnel. They have participated at all levels and phases of operation from squad to directorate: from planning to execution.

Fort Benning offers many challenges in leadership and some of these challenges are being met by Hispanics.

First Sgt. Victor Montanez is "Top" for 51st Company, 5th Student Battalion (OCS). Along with this job, he is also Battalion Sergeant Major to the 5th Student Battalion. During his 23 years of service he saw action in the Republic of Vietnam (RVN) where he earned, among other awards, the Air Medal. Although he considers all of his past assignments of equal importance, he states that his assignment as drill sergeant was the most challenging. "It is a very rewarding experience," he says, "to be able to turn civilians into soldiers." Montanez is now in the business of turning enlisted soldiers into officers.

Maj. Luis A. Juarbe-Cruz is the logistical officer for the 197th Infantry Brigade. He has been in the service for 14 years, during which he spent 30 months in the Republic of Vietnam. Juarbe has occupied many challenging positions, such as test pilot (he is a dual-rated pilot), aviation safety officer, and aviation material manager, but he considers the command of a company "without a doubt, the most challenging assignment an officer can have." Juarbe's advice to young soldiers is to develop themselves technically and intellectually. Personal development, he says, "is the key to success."

SSgt. Rafael La Guerre is currently attending the Cadre Training Center here and will be assigned to the 1st Infantry Training Brigade upon completion. LaGuerre has earned many awards for heroism. As a member of Company E, 2nd Battalion (Airmobile), 5th Cavalry in Vietnam, on Jan. 5 and Feb. 13-16, 1970 he earned the Commendation Medal with "V" device. On those dates he courageously exposed himself to a dangerous combat environment as he directed his efforts toward neutralizing the enemy. Also in 1970, on June 22, he earned the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device when his unit became engaged with a determined enemy force. LaGuerre, with complete disregard for his own safety, moved forward under intense hostile fire to the point of heaviest contact and began placing a volume of heavy suppressive fire upon the enemy. The same year he also received the Air Medal for Meritorious Achievement in flight, in support of ground forces in the Republic of Vietnam.

SFC Richard L. Guerrero is currently assigned to Company E, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade as senior drill sergeant. He earned a Bronze Star with "V" device for heroism in connection with ground operation in the Republic of Vietnam. The then private first class Guerrero was a passenger in a helicopter that had the mission of assisting the extraction of several friendly casualties. When the aircraft was making its approach to the landing zone it came under intense enemy fire which severely wounded several of his fellow soldiers. Exposing himself to the enemy fire, he immediately seized the wounded personnel to prevent them from falling from the aircraft. He then administered first aid to the seriously wounded men as the helicopter flew to the nearest hospital. His efforts were instrumental in saving the lives of his comrades.

Maj. Jerome Zamora is the executive officer for 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade. He has served 15 years in the Army, two of which were in the Republic of Vietnam. While there, he served as a company commander for a unit of the 9th Infantry Division. Outside of leading in combat, he considers his present assignment as the most challenging of his career. He is concerned with "insuring that the soldiers who are training receive the best possible support without regard to what time it is, or (what) day of the week."

MSgt. Felix Jose Miranda is with Company A, Headquarters Command. He is presently working for Morale Support. After 20 years of service in our country's defense, Miranda will retire at the end of this September. As many other NCOs, he considers proper motivation of the young soldier to be a key factor in NCO leadership. "Essential for proper motivation is understanding the young soldiers as individuals."

CSM P. D. Rosaod is the commander of the Non-commissioned Officer School of Infantry. He is one of the few NCOs in the U.S. Army that holds a command position. He has been in the Army for 28 years, served one tour in the Korean War, and two tours in Vietnam. His highest award is the Soldier's Medal, which he received for saving a drowning victim in California. He emphasizes the importance of strong NCOs in the Army.

Hispanic employment program emphasized

By Maria Rodriguez Rock
Hispanic Employment Program manager

The Hispanic Employment Program manager, together with the Equal Employment Opportunity officer, civilian personnel staff, and management officials, are striving to emphasize the Hispanic Employment Program at Fort Benning.

The objective of the program is to assure equal employment opportunity for Hispanics in all aspects of federal government.

According to the 1970 labor market report, the Hispanic population in the tri-city area made up one percent of the available workforce. The 1980 report is expected to show an increase in the Hispanic population.

Currently the Fort Benning civilian workforce is composed of 1.5 percent Hispanic personnel. This should compare favorably to the 1980 report.

Available civilian positions here are open to qualified Hispanic Americans. Hispanics have the same career goals and motivation as anybody else in this nation.

Fort Benning's Hispanic Employment Program is here to assist Hispanic personnel in obtaining equal opportunities in employment.

For more information on the program call 545-5019/1719.

Combined campaign begins Tuesday

This year's Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) begins Tuesday morning at 7 a.m. with a commander's breakfast at the Officers Supper Club.

The CFC is one of two fund raising drives authorized to be held on federal installations, the other is the Army Emergency Relief Campaign which is conducted each spring.

The CFC will solicit voluntary contributions from all military and civilian employees here and in the surrounding civilian community. This year's goal is to raise $375,000.

Typical agencies supported by funds raised in this campaign include the American Red Cross, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, Boy's and Girl's Clubs, county health and legal associations, the Cancer Society and Project Hope.

In the last three years, Fort Benning received $324,500 from funds derived from the CFC. The funds were used in support of the installation's youth, recreational and welfare activities as well as other programs.

If the goal here is reached this year Fort Benning should receive $114,374 for use in support of activities and programs.

Finance can cash checks for personnel on emergency leave

Effective immediately, the Fort Benning Finance and Accounting Office is authorized to cash personal checks drawn on overseas Military Banking Facilities (MBF) for personnel on emergency or convalescent leave from overseas.

When presenting personal checks to be cashed, a copy of the approved emergency or convalescent leave document is required. Checks for personnel in this status will be cashed only at the disbursing cage in bldg. 89 or the Central Processing Facility (Crain Hall) when it begins operation (tentatively scheduled for late October).

Casual payments will be approved for personnel who have their checks deposited to a savings account in an overseas MBF.

These changes are being made to support the needs of the soldier and also reinforce the check to financial organization pay option. For more information call 545-7664/5875.

Seven states hold elections

The following election information concerning Kentucky, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington is announced to Fort Benning personnel and other individuals voting in these jurisdictions:

Kentucky voters will be selecting candidates to fill the 100 offices of state representative, 19 state senators, all state district judges and commonwealth attorney for Kentucky districts that include more than one county. Kentucky residents planning to vote should complete a Federal post card application (FPCA) and submit it to the county clerk, county of voting residence, in September, requesting an absentee ballot for the November general election. Residents who need to register for this election must do so prior to the close of registration 30 days before the election.

Maine will hold a general election to decide six bond issues and two Constitutional amendments. Voters will also be deciding an initiative question concerning the creation of an energy commission. Residents of Maine planning to vote should complete an FPCA and mail it to the municipal clerk in their town of voting residence requesting a ballot. Maineresidents who must register should send their FPCA to either the registrar of voters if residents of a town of less than 4,000 people or to the board of registration if from a town of more than 4,000. A separate request must then be sent to the municipal clerk to receive an absentee ballot. Persons needing to register should complete the FPCA and submit the form immediately.

New Jersey voters will be selecting candidates to the office of governor, 40 state senators and 80 members of the general assembly. New Jersey residents wanting to vote in this election should also take immediate action by completing an FPCA and mailing it to the county clerk, county of voting residence, requesting an absentee ballot. Registration closes on Oct. 3.

New York will hold elections for 19 positions of justices of the state supreme court. New York military voters should complete and send an FPCA to the Division of Servicemen's Voting, 99 Washington Avenue, Albany, N.Y. 12210. Overseas citizens can request a ballot by sending their FPCA to their county board of elections in the county of their voting residence. Registration in New York closes Oct. 5.

Pennsylvania residents will elect statewide, state supreme court and commonwealth court judges. In addition, 52 county judgeships will also be on the ballot. Pennsylvanians' desiring to vote should take immediate action to request an absentee ballot by completing an FPCA and mailing it to the County Board of Elections, County of Voting Residence. Registration books close on Oct. 5.

Virginia will be selecting candidates to fill the office of governor, Lt. governor, attorney general and seats in the house of delegates. Virginians wanting a ballot for this election should immediately request an absentee ballot by completing and mailing an FPCA to the general registrar of the county or city of voting residence. Registration books will close on Oct. 3.

Washington will hold an election to fill one seat on the State Supreme Court. Residents should request their ballot by sending an FPCA to the county auditor of their county of voting residence. Residents of Kings County should send their FPCA to the County Department of Records and Elections for their ballot. Registration in Washington closes Oct. 3.

All voters must insure they allow adequate mailing time to register, if necessary, and to apply for their absentee ballot.

Voters are encouraged to seek further assistance from their unit voting assistance officer.

Detailed information on registering and voting absentee in any of these states is contained in the 1980 voting assistance guide (DA Pam 360-503).

Questions pertaining to these elections can be answered by telephone at 545-3881.

These soldiers perform curve exercises during log drills.

Overhead exercises are not easy.

It's not hard to make ugly faces when you're working with the logs.

Log drills tough

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you think doing pushups and situps is a strain, try lifting logs.

That's what soldiers in the 2nd platoon of Company C, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade do to help them stay in shape. They're called log drills and when the soldiers do them, the sweat just pours!

"Those logs get heavy, especially if one of the guys doesn't hold up his end," said one member of the platoon. "But this training makes us strong."

First Sgt. Melvin Shaw said, "The log drills develop upper body strength, aid in conditioning and build teamwork and esprit de corps. Later on in the cycle we have competition between the platoons."

Shaw added, "The drills help us get better scores on the physical training test because when they develop upper body strength, we do better pushups."

The soldiers do a variety of exercises with all this lumber. They call them curls and overheads. The curls are lifting the logs, like weights, off the ground, and then moving them about. The overheads are killers too. Soldiers lift them high over their heads, and then move them right.

So next time you think all those pushups and situps are getting you down, try logging it!

Getting the log up and bringing it forward can be tricky.

Sometimes log drills can get the best of anyone.

New post record set

A new post record for the Army's new physical training test (Army Physical Readiness Test) by a company was set Monday when soldiers from Company D, 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade scored an average of 271.

"We had 174 soldiers take the physical training test and only two of those failed," said company executive officer, 1st Lt. Richard Scott. "One failed by a pushup, the other by five situps. We beat the old post record by some six points and had 13 soldiers who maxed the test."

What made these guys so good? Scott added, "The guys were really motivated and worked on a lot of grass drills."

Squad leader Pvt. 1 Richard Brinkley added, "It took lots of hard work, with lots of time spent on physical training. Our drill sergeants and company commander motivated us and it helped us to pass the PT test so well."

Fast pace

Pvt. 1 Floyd Freeman at AO Eagle. The soldier ran two miles in 13 minutes earlier this week for his PT test.

Officers can apply for legal program

Officers who want to apply for the Funded Legal Education Program must get their applications to the Office of The Judge Advocate General by Nov. 1, the JAG's Professional Recruiting Office advises.

The program allows 25 selected officers a year to attend law school at government expense while on active duty. Officers who will have between two and six years' active service at the time legal training begin are eligible to apply under the provisions of AR 351-22. This is an outstanding opportunity for officers who wish to become military lawyers and who have excellent academic and military records.

Further information is available by calling the Professional Recruiting Office, AUTOVON 289-1792 or Toll Free 800-336-3315 or the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate on post, 545-4611.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Positive identification needed on your valuables

With the growing problem of criminal activity Army-wide and the rising larceny rate, it becomes very evident that precautionary measures must be taken to prevent crime. However, taking these measures will not preclude the possibility that an individual could still become a victim of a larceny.

The question most commonly asked is, "What can I do to assist the police in their investigation and recovering the stolen property?" The best thing you can do is be able to identify your property. In order to recover your property, the military police must be able to positively identify this property. If the property is not marked with a recorded serial number or an engraved number that you choose, the identification and recovery of the property by the military police is highly unlikely. During the previous quarter, 78 percent of the larcenies which occurred involved property which was either not marked or the markings/serial numbers were not recorded.

If you live in the barracks, you are required by USAIC Regulation 190-31 to have your property marked and logged on two copies of FB Form 20. One copy is to be kept by your company and should be updated whenever you acquire a new piece of property. The second copy is to be kept by the individual and updated as necessary, also.

Lt. Col. Earp

Individuals who reside in post quarters are urged to mark and record identification numbers of their property, also. How can you get the engraver to mark your property? Each company at Fort Benning is required to have engravers for use by company personnel. In the event your unit does not have engravers, active duty and dependent personnel living on post or in the Columbus area may hand-receipt an engraver from the military police for a two-week period by coming to the Crime Prevention section in the provost marshal's office, bldg. 215.

When marking your property, you should use an easily identifiable number. Your driver's license number with your initials at the end of the number is a good method. One number which is not suggested for use is your social security number. The reason for this is that your social security number comes under the Privacy Act and if another police department recovers your property, they may not give the identification because it is a social security number.

Once all property has been marked, make a record of all the items and numbers used. Keep this record in a secured place away from the property so that if you become a victim of a larceny or burglary, you will still be able to identify your property. You may want to go one step further on extremely high dollar value items by taking a picture of the item and keeping it with the property record. This not only gives law enforcement officials more to go on in their attempts to recover the property but will also provide added proof as to the condition of the item and ownership.

The effort to stop crime is an on-going process that law enforcement officials cannot solve or achieve by themselves. Your help is drastically needed. Join the campaign to help stop crime. See a crime-drop a dime. Call the military police at 545-5222.

AO Eagle dry run helps soldiers

Capt. Glenn Williams wants his soldiers to do well at AO Eagle - the testing site where infantry training soldiers must qualify with the Performance Orientated Infantry Qualification Test (POIQT) before they can become infantrymen.

The commander of Company D, 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, Williams believes that using Eagles testing site as a dry run, helps his soldiers better prepare themselves before they take the actual POIQT there.

"We've been doing this since last May," said Williams. "Whenever we can get the O.K. to use the testing site to train, we do. We feel the soldiers are more comfortable if they've been here before. They become familiar with the different test stations."

Actually, the POIQT is administered by the testing and evaluation people on post, but Williams said, "It works well for us when we come out here first and practice. Something else we do is have some of our drill sergeants and drill corporals observe the testers beforehand. They become familiar with what the soldiers will have to do the day of the test."

Drill corporal Dale Perry gives Pvt. 1 Dennis Stuttman two minutes to disassemble his rifle.

Service burial benefits change Oct. 1

ATLANTA — New legislation, recently approved by the President, will affect several areas of veterans' benefits and services significantly beginning Oct. 1, according to Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler.

The one area affecting the most veterans is in burial benefits. The payment of the $300 burial and funeral expense allowance will be payable only in the cases of deceased veterans who were in receipt of, or were entitled to receive, VA compensation or pension at the time of death. The $150 plot allowance would not be affected. Heretofore, the burial allowance was payable to all wartime veterans with other than dishonorable discharges.

The time allowed for newly discharged veterans to apply for outpatient dental benefits is being reduced. Effective Oct. 1, application for such benefits must be made within three months of the date of discharge. The old time limit was one year. Wheeler said that under the new regulation, the secretary of the particular branch of service is required to provide the service member, at the time of discharge from a period of active duty of at least 180 days, with actual written notice of the new three-month time limit.

Other areas in which reductions are being imposed involve education and training. For example, Wheeler said that flight training has been eliminated as far as new enrollments are concerned. "Only those already enrolled in approved vocational flight training courses as of Aug. 31, 1981, will be allowed to continue to use their benefits for the purpose of such programs so long as they remain continuously enrolled," he said.

Another area of training being substantially cut back involves correspondence courses. The VA is reducing the portion of the cost it pays for such training from the present 70 percent to 55 percent. Wheeler said that the 70 percent rate would still apply, however, to correspondence lessons that are completed and submitted (postmarked) before Oct. 1, 1981.

Columbus reserves nuked in woods

Story and photos by Becky Bulgrin

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A high school teacher spends the night in the woods of Fort Benning awaiting an atomic blast that will light up the early morning sky. He is not alone.

With him are nearly 140 other men, including a stockbroker, a policeman and a reverend. At precisely 7 a.m., a gigantic boom echoes through the sky and the men must react quickly in order to save their lives.

While this was only a simulated atomic blast, the men were actually at McKenna Air Strip last weekend undergoing the "Black Dagger" field training exercise — preparation for nuclear warfare. And they knew just what to do if the blast would have been real.

The men are members of the 11th Special Forces Group from reserve units in Columbus, Ga., Fort Stewart, Ga. and Fort Dix, N.J.

They spent last weekend here training in aspects of Nuclear, Biological and Chemical(NBC) warfare.

Early Saturday morning the "berets" from Forts Dix and Stewart jumped onto Fryar Drop Zone to join the Columbus unit, which consists of the headquarters and two teams, to begin their training at the post's NBC school. There they went over the operation of the protective mask, went into the gas chamber, did individual contamination and the use of installation protection kits.

This would prepare them for the more intense training that night and the next day. Although they have diversified jobs during their normal work days, when these men get together, they work and train as a team just like all soldiers.

Saturday evening the soldiers moved to McKenna Air Strip in full MOP 4 gear. The gear protected them from a CS gas attack by a helicopter that sprayed the gas over their heads as they moved through the darkness.

While some of the soldiers said they didn't get exposed to much of the CS, one said it hit him and the men around him "like falling snow."

Stenched with the smell of the gas, the Special Forces soldiers' training was not over yet. They spent the night spread out in different areas of the woods, waiting for the "operation in a nuclear environment" exercise — which included the setting off of the atomic bomb.

As the blast sounded, the soldiers practiced the proper method of protecting themselves, after which they went through individual critiques.

Mission complete, they came out of the woods group by group to take off their gear and go through group critiques. And then it was time to pack up and go home.

After it was all over, one soldier commented, "I feel like I lost five pounds."

Sp4 Cole Bricker helps SFC Larry Schmidt adjust his gear.

First Lt. Eddie Hall operates the communications line while Sp4 Joe Masterson (I) and other Special Forces soldiers guard the perimeter.

Boy Scouts learn as well as have fun

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison

USAIC Public Affairs Office

There's a place on post where boys ages 11 through 17 can get together and have a good time while learning.

Boy Scout Troop 27, located at Russ Pond, meets every Monday at 7 p.m.

Last week the scouts had a lesson on how to properly pack their backpacks. Then Monday night each scout showed assistant senior patrol leader, James Schulz, items they are bringing for an outing, to make sure they are packed correctly. This weekend they are going camping at the Fort Benning District Scout Camp at Uchee Creek.

"Scouting mostly prepares them (the boys) for the future. It teaches them responsibility, leadership and teamwork," said Schulz.

"Then there are the fun things like camping, going

Scouts Mike Williams Jr., (l) and Louis Acosta prove that Boy Scouting isn't always hard work. The boys took a break from the meeting to play a game called Bullfrog.

YOUR BEST MOVE COULD BE NO MOVE AT ALL.

Some people spend all their lives looking for a job they'll like but never find it. You might have found yours already — in the Army. Listen to what Sgt. John Jackiewicz has to say about staying in.

"The Army's just like any other career — if you like it, you stick with it. A lot of guys get out and within a year they're right back in. They just don't realize all the benefits they had until they start paying for them.

If you've got something good going, stick with it?"

You don't have to leave the Army to get ahead.

Your Reenlistment NCO has all the facts on how you can advance in your present MOS or cross over into something you've always wanted to do.

If you're going to make any move at all, make it a walk to the office of your Reenlistment NCO.

Local student wins $300

Michael Gubert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gubert of Columbus, was the recipient of a $300 scholarship given by the Society of American Military Engineers Wednesday at the NCO Club.

Gubert, a 1981 Columbus High School graduate, is attending Georgia Tech University and majoring in engineering.

Among Gubert's previous awards and accomplishments are the 1980 winner of the Governor's Honors Program, winner of the National Math Contest in his sophomore year, a University of Georgia Merit Scholar and a member of the 1981 All-City Orchestra.

The scholarship given by the Society of American Military Engineers is the first in what is to be an annual award. The society's primary function is to promote the engineering profession.

Michael Gubert receives a $300 scholarship from George Perdue at the Society of American Military Engineers Wednesday.

on trips and many other scouting activities," he added. "Once a year we have a Scout-a-rama where different troops in the area compete in an exhibition showing all facets of scouting."

"At the Scout-a-rama the boys show different crafts they have made and demonstrate to the public how to tie different knots," said SSgt. Rick Forlines, scoutmaster.

"They learn a lot about nature and wildlife. We try to teach them to respect nature and learn about wildlife survival," mentioned Schulz.

Some of the activities they have planned are a trip to Six Flags in Atlanta and Pensacola Beach, Fla.

"Boys interested in joining don't need a uniform if they can't afford one," explained Maj. Don Rogan, boy scout committee chairman.

There are currently three boy scout troops here: Troop 27, 237 and 127.

If your son would like to join the Boy Scouts. Call Rick Forlines, Troop 27, at 682-1123 after 5 p.m. Troop 127 meets each Monday at 6 p.m. at McGraw Manor; call Bob Clayton at 689-3380 or 545-1806. Troop 237 meets at the Scout Center on Dixie Road, Mondays at 7 p.m. Call 545-1806 for more information. The boys can join whichever troop they like.

Troop 237 is going to have a disco dance on Oct. 16 and a Haunted House on Oct. 30 and 31 at the McGraw Manor Community Life Center.

Boy Scout adult volunteers are needed to form a troop for the Lavoie and Bouton Heights/Davis Hill housing areas. If interested contact Bob Clayton at 545-1806. Volunteers are also needed to help out at the Scout Center.

On Oct. 24, Scout Day will be held at Six Flags from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. for scouts, their families and friends. Tickets bought in advance are $5.50 and $6.50 at the gate.

Boy Scout Raymond King, from Troop 27, bends down to untie the strings on his backpack.

Jan and Dean draw overcapacity crowd

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The California sounds of the 60s - sounds of the surf and fast cars - were relived last Thursday night when rock duo Jan and Dean performed in front of an overcapacity crowd at Gowdy Field.

Before Jan and Dean arrived, the audience was set in the mood by listening to Beatles and Beach Boys music. The backup band, consisting of part of the group, Papa Doo Run Run, a keyboard player from the Beach Boys and Beach Boy Mike Love's special project band called "Celebration," began the concert with "Surfin' U.S.A."

The audience went wild when Jan and Dean were introduced. The duo first sang "The New Girl In School" and "Honolulu Lulu," two songs about girls they idolize. Jan then asked everyone in the audience to join in and sing harmony to "Jenny Lee," the number one song that started their career in 1958.

During the concert it seemed everyone was having a fantastic time. Jan and Dean believe in audience participation. They got the people out of their seats, dancing and singing along with them.

One of the highlights of the show was Jan singing the Beatles' "You've Got To Hide Your Love Away" a special dedication to the late John Lennon. The band played, "Back In the U.S.S.R." to end the Beatles medley.

Jan sang "Deadman's Curve," the song that tells about the car accident he had when he was 26-years-old. In 1966, Jan Berry was two months from becoming a doctor when he had the accident. He had to learn how to read, write, talk and walk again - just like starting over.

After singing "Surf City," "Help Me Rhonda" and "Barbara Ann," Jan and Dean left the stage. But when the audience started yelling "We want more," they came back on stage. The audience gave them a standing ovation after they finished the concert with "Good Vibrations," a song that seemed to describe how everyone felt.

Afterwards I asked Dean Torrence, the spokesman for the group, "Did you ever think your music would last so long?" He replied, "When we first started playing, all I ever cared about was that it lasted until the end of summer. If not, I had to work at the gas station."

Even though the duo was one of the hottest groups of the 60s they still found time to go to college and post graduate school.

Jan and Dean started singing together in Jan's garage when they were high school students at University High School in Los Angeles, Calif. They would sing and record from the radio on their tape recorder.

Their first song "Jenny Lee" was recorded on the same tape recorder. While Jan was trying to get the song released to a record producer, Dean was serving a stint in the California Army Reserves as a mechanic. When he was working in the motor pool one day, he heard "Jenny Lee." He told one of his buddies, but they didn't believe him because the song gave credit to Jan Berry.

After they got back together and recorded "Baby Talk," Jan and Dean had 23 more national chart records, for a total of 25 consecutive records on the charts from 1958 to 1966. During their career, the duo sold more than 20 million records worldwide.

"We used to gig along with the Beach Boys back in the 60's and became good friends," mentioned Dean.

As to why people continue listening to 'beach' music, Dean replied, "The music is simple and different. It's not like your run of the mill stuff.

"I don't think the music is a trend, it always runs in peaks and valleys," he continued. "Right now, it's at a peak again, although the music has never really left us. "The music is rediscovered by the next generation. If the music is not regenerated then it's a trend."

Dean said he liked performing at Fort Benning because the audience "really got into it and participated." "I only wish the people could have been closer to the stage."

He explained, "Tonight was the hardest, because the people were so far away. In past military concerts, we were able to shake hands with the crowd."

Jan and Dean started performing again with the Beach Boys in 1978, but, what really got people to respond to the group again was the release of the movie, "Deadman's Curve." The movie tells the events of their career and Jan's tragedy. Dean worked closely with the writer of the screen play to make sure it was as true to life as possible.

Now, a whole new generation has come to know the Jan and Dean sound.

MPs come through

By John Trohoske
Law Enforcement Command

On Sept. 3 the Fort Benning Military Police again gave an object lesson in what the motto "Of the Troops and for the Troops" really means to individuals assigned to the Law Enforcement Command's 988th and 139th Military Police Companies.

Early that day, an urgent call for O-positive blood was put out by Martin Army Community Hospital. Each major command was reportedly contacted and asked to provide sufficient donors and whole blood to support anticipated hospital requirements over the Labor Day weekend. This request was passed to the command's unit first sergeants, and they swung into action.

By 2 p.m., the hospital was turning donors from other units away. The reason—they had plenty of blood and donors, many of whom were from the Law Enforcement Command.

Such response is not unusual for the military police. Traditionally, the MPs support such functions exceptionally well, for two main reasons. First, they often see first-hand through their law enforcement mission why there is a critical need for blood, especially during holiday periods. Second, there alwaysseems to be plenty of MPs present and willing to give of themselves for others.

It is only coincidence, but September is the month that the military police celebrate their 40th anniversary as a Corps. Since Sept. 26, 1941, they have served our soldiers and their nation with dedication and distinction in peace and war. The MPs, however, don't wait for others to recognize their accomplishments. Day in and day out, weekdays and weekends, they recognize each other and those they support with pride, integrity, guts and service.

Singing sergeant to record album

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Did you ever think you had a hidden talent? Well, 31-year-old SSgt. Ervin Carpenter discovered seven years ago that he could be both a songwriter and singer.

Carpenter, from Madison, Wisc., got interested in music when he was in the high school band. But, it wasn't until later in life that he was really influenced. "I wanted to write a song and have it published and commercially produced. I told myself if other people could write a song so could I, if I tried hard enough," said Carpenter. He then started to teach himself how to play the guitar and read and write music.

Carpenter began sending two or three songs on cassette or reel-to-reel tape to various song publishers. "I would send a letter saying I'm a new songwriter, please consider my songs for publishing. I was turned down by two publishing companies in Nashville, Tenn.," he said.

"It took two years before anyone liked my material and it was quite discouraging," added Carpenter. "I would rewrite and rerecord the songs to enhance them."

But, when he was just about to give up hope, Dan Miller, a professional manager for Apple Glass Music from Madison, Wis. liked two of his songs -

"You're In My Memory" and "Wine and Beer."

"I signed a recording contract and in December I'll be recording them," said Carpenter.

Before coming to Fort Benning, Carpenter was stationed in Germany where he met an all-military band called "Stagedust." "They are well known and play in NCO Clubs and at beer fests," Carpenter related. "SFC Gary Stewart, one of the band's members who is now stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C. mentioned that the group might be interested in recording."

"Stewart is now putting together piano arrangements for the upcoming album," continued Carpenter. "We're going to try to get together during the Christmas break and record together."

The album will be recorded on the Cuca label at the new Legend Recording Studios in Sauk City, Wisc. The label is best known for a country song called "Mule Skinner Blues."

"I hope the album is out by the first of the year."

During July 1980 Carpenter performed at the "Whiskey River" in Columbus. He stopped performing so he could concentrate more on writing songs. "As of today, I have a total of 51

Three captains selected young men of America

By Betty Zimmerman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Three Army captains attending the Infantry Officer Advanced Course here have been selected as Outstanding Young Men of America for 1981.

They are Grandvial Quick, Olin E. Saunders Jr. and Cranson A. Butler.

This selection is an honor that recognizes young men throughout the nation for professional achievement and community service.

Quick is from Willingsboro, N.J. and he graduated from Xavier University of Louisiana. He majored in political science and was commissioned through the ROTC program. He is an Armor officer and will report to Fort Knox, Ky. for his next assignment.

Saunders is also an Armor officer who received his commission through ROTC. He hails from Ringgold, Va. and studied international affairs and political science at Widener University in Chester, Pa. Because he is also a helicopter pilot, he will go to Fort Rucker, Ala. upon graduation.

Butler is a 1977 graduate of the United States Military Academy. The New Brunswick, N.J. native was commissioned in the Infantry branch. He will go to the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea following the Oct. 15 graduation.

All three captains intend to make a career of their chosen profession — the U.S. Army.

Retirement

Annie G. Welch is presented her retirement certificate by Lt. Col. James C. Brandon during her recent retirement luncheon. Mrs. Welch retired from the extension training section, Directorate of Training Development, after 30 years of government service. She was presented a plaque and a silver plate among other gifts.

Chaplain's comments

God is anything and everything good

By David W. Campbell
43d Engr Bn Chaplain

One of the most frequently-used words I hear is the word "God". What is God? Who is God? What is He like? We certainly hear much about Him.

I've heard that God is Love and is kind and is capable of anger and is forgiving. How can we really know the truth? His Word, the Bible, surely will not lie to us concerning this. I believe that God is all of the above, and more.

Some of the descriptions used in the Scriptures are: "living, before all things, eternal, merciful, mighty."

I believe that the way we see God is determined by some degree to the way we respond to His love. If we respond in a positive way, He is seen as our friend. If we try to ignore Him, He seems to be a terrible Judge. The choice is up to you and me. I hope you allow God to be your friend . . . that's what He really wants to be. As a Christian, I believe that there is one reason He sent Jesus to earth.

Following is a humorous, yet truthful, comparison of God to something with which we are all very familiar, commercial advertisements. Think about it!

- * God is like Tide
He gets out the stains that others leave behind.
- * God is like VO 5 hairspray
He holds through all kinds of weather.
- * God is like America
You expect more from Him; and you get it.
- * God is like Dial soap
Aren't you glad you know Him.
Don't you wish everybody did!
- * God is like Sears
He has everything.
- * God is like Alka-seltzer
Try Him - you'll like Him.

Music concert to be held

Dallas Holm & Praise, a popular contemporary Christian recording group, will perform at the Columbus Iron Works Trade and Convention Center Sept. 27 at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 in advance and $7 at the door. Tickets can be purchased at the Love Shop, Columbus Book and Bible Store and The Mustard Seed Christian Bookstore.

- * God is like Ford
He has a better idea.
- * God is like Coke
He's the real thing.
- * God is like Pan-Am
He makes the going great.
- * God is like Bayer aspirin

- He works wonders.
- * God is like General Electric
He lights your path.
- * God is like Pepsi
He's got a lot to give.
- * God is like Hallmark cards
He cared enough to send the very best.

Family Day

A learning experience

Story and photos by Dave Bristow

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A drill sergeant, home with his family, gets a call from his company at 2 a.m. Initial entry soldiers have arrived from Fort Jackson, S.C. The drill's unit needs him to be there to help bring the soldiers to their new home. It isn't unusual for new troops to come in late.

On another occasion a cook gets word he will be working late. The company he cooks for will be on a marksmanship range for required night firing. It's a cold night and the troops will need lots of coffee and hot chocolate. The cook will make sure they have it. Arms room people will also keep long hours; weapons must be turned in after the firing.

These soldiers work long, and what seems like, unending hours. The jobs they do will never be "eight till five." The hours are never the same. It all depends on what has to be done in their training company.

While all this goes on, wives wonder what the problems are. Why are their husbands always on the go; working when others are at home?

Family Day answers questions like this. It can't change the hours a drill sergeant works, or a cook, or a supply man — but it can inform wives of these soldiers as to why their husbands are called upon to do what they do.

SGM Earl Kelley, sergeant major of the 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, knows what these soldiers face with their jobs and the long hours they put in. He knows the value of having a Family Day in his battalion.

"It gives wives a better understanding of the hours and conditions their husbands work under, so they can give them better support during their tour as drill sergeants," said Kelley. "We have no established hours. If an arms room has to be opened at four in the morning then the armor people have to come in at 5 a.m. to take over for another drill sergeant, and not get off until 1 p.m."

He continued, "On Family Day we show the wife what her husband is involved in and what he is doing for the Army."

Last Saturday 5th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, had a Family Day. (They try to have one every three months.) Wives were shown some of the things their husbands are involved in; what they do. They were shown a film on One Station Unit Training so they could see the training their

Did you hear about the big one that got away? Well, that was about the size of the situation during last Sunday's Bass Club Fishing Tournament at the Uchee Creek boat docks.

Fishing was very slow during the entire tournament which began Saturday and finished Sunday followed by a fish fry.

According to Chuck Hardy, club vice-president, fishing usually slows down during the summer months. In the spring and fall, when the temperature ranges around 65 degrees, fishing picks up. "The fishing would also be better if the water level wasn't so low," said Hardy, "but that's just Mother Nature for you."

The Bass Club, which is open to all military (active and retired) and family members 16 years of age or older, is a very competitive club. The club participates in a tournament every month. They fish at Lake Harding, Lake Martin, Lake Sinclair and at West Point just to name a few.

Hardy said with a grin, "When you mention competition, there's always a group of fishermen ready to go." Competition is highlighted by bigger and better tournaments. If a member makes the top six on the club, he then goes to the state fishing tournament. From there, if they're really good, they get to fish in the regional tournament. Finally, if they are good enough, they get a chance to fish with the "big boys" in the annual professional fishing classic. This year's classic will be held in Montgomery, Ala.

Hardy feels that the reason for the increased popularity of bass fishing is that the fish present a challenge. "It's one of your moodier fish," said Hardy as he tossed his line back into the water. "If it doesn't want to eat, it won't. Only on occasion, will a bass strike at bait just out of reflex. The key to catching bass is presenting the right bait at the right time.

Pat Bennett and Ben McGuire try to catch the limit during last weekend's tournament.

"Also, remember that sunlight has a tendency to make bass go into deeper water, while on a cloudy day they remain closer to the top," he added.

Hardy, who uses artificial bait because it is more challenging, says having confidence in your bait is definitely important. "I won a tournament at Lake Seminole using the same bait all the time," said Hardy while fixing bait on the end of his line. "You also have to have patience. Many newcomers to the sport become discouraged when they sit for hours without catching anything. It takes a dedicated fisherman to be able to do that."

Hardy feels that there is a myth surrounding bass clubs and other fishing clubs. "People think we keep the fish or just throw them away when we're finished with them. Actually, after we weigh them, we simply release them back into the water. We know that unless we do that, the fish population will die out."

Club President Henry Ferris commented that the club is welcoming new members. If interested in becoming a member of the Bass Club, you can come to the meetings which are held every second and fourth Tuesday each month at Infantry Hall (bldg. 4) at 7:30 p.m.

Membership dues are $18 yearly or $1.50 a month. Said Hardy, "You don't have to own a bass boat to become a member. We have plenty of boats out here for every member to enjoy."

For more information on the club call 327-6 47.

Doughboys to battle Carson-Newman

The Doughboys football team has been practicing long hours for their upcoming game against Carson-Newman College. The team has been working on the errors that caused them to fall to the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga Moccasins by a score of 24-0.

According to Head Coach Ralph Santaliz, in last week's game the defense played well, giving up only 12 points. It was the offense that gave up yards and points and failed to score.

"We have to work things out on our offense," said Santaliz. "Hall (Leamon Hall) is still not at his peak performance, but he's getting there."

Commented Santaliz cautiously, "Carson-Newman is not that bad of a team. We have to take them seriously. Right now we're just trying to climb back up to five-hundred."

The Doughboys will take the field tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium. Admission is $1.50 adults and $1 children at the gate.

Cycle riding at night dangerous

Driving a motorcycle at night is particularly hazardous because of the reduced visibility. During daylight, obstacles in the road such as a muffler or an animal can usually be seen in plenty of time to permit evasive action. Obstacles at night, however, present a particularly dangerous hazard to the motorcyclist because of the combination of reduced visibility, a single headlight and the element of balance required. The consequences can be fatal.

Recently, this nightmare became a reality for a motorcyclist on a Georgia highway at night. The victim's motorcycle struck a piece of furniture that had apparently fallen off a truck onto the highway. The motorcyclist lost control and slammed head-on into an oncoming car. The results, a macabre ending; the fault, certainly not the motorcyclist.

In order to minimize your chances for an accident, plan your trips for daylight hours. If you must drive at night, reduce your speed to give yourself time to avoid an unexpected obstacle. Stay constantly alert for obstacles. There may be one out there with your name on it.

New hunting regulations this year

The new hunting season and bag limit (USAIC Circular 210-4) for the 1981-82 hunting season has been published and is available at Crain Hall (bldg. 229).

The purpose of this article is to highlight two major changes in this year's hunting regulation which concerns deer check stations and the use of rifles on the reservation.

Fort Benning will not be operating a deer check station during the 1981-82 season. Instead, hunters will keep a record of their kills and will be required to obtain, and have in their possession while hunting, Fort Benning Deer Permit (FB(ENG) FORM 48). Permits may be obtained at no cost from the permit issuing agency located in Crain Hall by presenting a valid Fort Benning Hunting Permit (FG FORM 603-1 or FB FORM 603-3). Permits must be filled out and returned within 15 days of close of deer season. Failure to return the deer permit may result in suspension of hunting privileges for one year.

Permits may be mailed to DFE, Natural Resources Branch, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, placed in a drop box located at bldg. 5883 or returned to the permit issuing agency. The information revealed on these permits will provide wildlife personnel with the necessary data they require to properly manage our deer population. Therefore, we request the fullest cooperation from all our hunters. A set of platform scales will be available at bldg. 5883 (the former deer check station) for hunters to weigh their deer.

Rifles have not been authorized for use on the reservation for many years. The limited use of rifles (calibers and authorized hunting areas) during the 1981-82 season, has been authorized for experimentation and data collection purposes. A detailed study will be conducted this year to determine if rifles will be authorized during future years and what control measures will be used. All rifle hunters should be extra careful this year so we can maintain our great safety record at Fort Benning.

Dragway welcomes military

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's nice to be back in the old armchair saddle again. I took a week of rest from the column trying to come up with some quality ideas for upcoming issues.

Now, I know and you all know that the Doughboys fell to UT-Chattanooga last week, but believe me, that game was not indicative of the type of game they can play. I think that against Carson-Newman College they'll do well and provide the fans with exciting football. So come out to Doughboy Stadium tomorrow night and support the team. After all, they're your team.

How many racing fans do we have out there in Benning land? I'm sure there are probably quite a few. I'm always hearing how there's really nothing to do on or near post. In both cases, this is not true. But I'd like to talk about something off-post that I think would provide some fun and exciting action — drag racing. To be specific, the Phenix Dragway, since it is the only one I know about in this area. Besides, it is not that far from post. Just a hop, skip and jump into Alabama.

When I talked to owner Chuck Heath recently, he expressed a desire to welcome the soldiers of Fort Benning to the track by giving them discount tickets to the races. Instead of the normal $5, the military is charged $3. This, hopefully, will get people who wanted to go but just couldn't afford it, an extra incentive to come out. However, Heath not only welcomes military spectators, but would also like to see some soldiers race in the competition.

Phenix Dragway's next afternoon of racing will be this Sunday. The gates will open at 10 a.m. Time trials will start at noon and race time is 2:30 p.m.

Sunday's race will consist of a Super 64 program, Heads-up Super Gas and Pro Comp Eliminator competition. The drivers will be competing for $3,000 in prize money. So, you can see, there will be a lot of revved up cars out there Sunday.

To get to the Phenix Dragway, follow Highway 80 to Woodland Drive. Turn left and go approximately three miles. The track is located at the corner of Woodland Drive and Sandfort Road. See ya at the finish line.

Fast cars and lots of fun

Running news correspondent

Fourth Annual Nut Run

The greater Albany, Ga. Runners Club will sponsor the Fourth Annual 10,000-meter Nut Run tomorrow at 8 a.m. with registration from 7:30-7:45 a.m.

The run will begin at the corner of Broad and Jackson Streets and run through the city of Albany ending at the courthouse on Pine Avenue.

Entry fee is $5 on race day. Pecan Festival Nut Run T-shirts will be given to the finishers. The top three finishers in each age group will receive trophies. Refreshments will be served at the finish line.

Cartersville Road Races

If you want to get away from the city traffic for a change, drive up to Cartersville, north of Atlanta, and run the beautiful countryside around the Etowah Indian Mounds on Sept. 26.

Scott Parmenter once again will direct the popular 20 and 25-kilometer races. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. The fun run is at 8:45 a.m. and the main feature races at 9 a.m.

To get there, take I-75 north to the Cartersville exit; follow main street to Etowah Drive; turn left on Etowah Pass at Cartersville Middle School and bear right at the Jack Dellinger Park. The first 450 entrants will receive free T-shirts.

Fountain City Splash Dash

The Fountain City Jaycees and Jaycettes will sponsor the Second Annual Splash Dash Oct. 3 at 11 a.m. at Cooper Creek Park off of Milgen Road. All proceeds will go toward the "I Care" project for the elderly.

Entry fee is $6 on the day of the race. Free T-shirts and refreshments will be given away. Medallions will be awarded to the top three finishers in each age group of the 3.1-mile run and T-shirts to the top 25 finishers in the one-mile fun run.

The fun run begins at 11 a.m. and the 3.1-mile road race begins immediately following the fun run. Entry blanks are available at local running stores.

Rifle competition

Fort Benning will be the site for this year's 300-meter National Rifle Championships and U.S. team tryouts to be held Sept. 23-27.

The 1981 championships, to be fired at Parks Range, will be conducted by the National Rifle Association. The matches will also be used to select members for this year's U.S. Shooting Team that will compete in the Championship of the Americas, to be held in Sao Paulo, Brazil this November.

The general public is cordially invited to observe some of the finest marksmen in the world and also watch the shooting events which are similar to those fired in the Olympics and world championships. Firing will normally begin at 8 a.m. daily and conclude at approximately 2 p.m. Parks Range is located on Dixie Road near the Hook Range complex.

People who fought WW II shown on WFBG

By Bill Powell
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

World historians might possibly consider World War II as one of the biggest wars ever. More men, equipment and hardware were committed to fighting the war than any war before or since. The invasion at Normandy Beach on D-Day was the biggest invasion force ever assembled. Generals were almost bigger than life with some of the best known names in military history leading. Names like MacArthur, Eisenhower, Bradley and Patton were in charge of large numbers of soldiers.

WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable, brings documentaries next week on the war and the people who fought in it. "Big Picture - D-Day," "Big Picture - Climb to Glory," "Battle for New Britain" and "Big Picture - Patton" are programs that feature a look at the struggle in World War II to defeat the Nazi and Japanese threat of world dominance. Consult the BAYO-

NET, Benning Bulletin or Ledger-Enquirer TV Book (listed under Cable TV) for times and dates of scheduled programming. Other programs highlighted next week include:

- "The Benning Rodeo" - brings the excitement and thrills of the rodeo held at Fort Benning recently.
- "Benning Report" - features an interview on financial home management and what to do if family finances need help or advice is needed.

- "Healers in Uniform" - shows the work that doctors do to keep health care in the military consistently good.

- "Koro of New Guinea" - looks at the job a native evangelist is doing in his own country to make it a better place.

Movie review

'Stripes' entertaining

By Bill Powell
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army recruiting is at an all time high. This either thanks to or in spite of some recent movies — "Private Benjamin" and the movie I saw recently, "Stripes."

"Stripes" features the incomparable comic talent Bill Murray, formerly of "Saturday Night Live." His character is one who's had a hard time making it in the outside world and turns to the secure existence of the Army. That's right, our man thinks he'll have it made in the military and he convinces his best friend to go in along with him.

To say the least, the Army isn't quite what he had in mind, with several different incidents of AWOL and trying to deck the crusty drill sergeant (played by veteran actor Warren Oates). The whole story is based on his adaptation to today's Army and how in spite of all odds he comes up okay in the end.

The screenplay is a little slow at first but delivers the view that our hero is in search of himself and not really a success at anything. Later incidents in the movie, including an inspired drill routine done by his platoon and a daring escape from behind enemy lines plus a wild mud wrestling segment, will have you bolted to your seat or rolling in the aisles with laughter. The acting is good, the story's a little improbable and the commanding officer of the unit is too much of a fool to be believed. But the laughs and enjoyment are worth the price of admission.

At the beginning I said that recruiting might be up either in spite of or because of these movies. By this I mean people are either going to get the idea that if these bumbling people can make it, it'll be a breeze for anyone else, or they'll get the idea that the Army is made up of klutzes and will want nothing to do with the military in general.

Neither is true, of course, and in watching you have to take the situations these fools get into as incidents (for the most part) that took place in the writer's imagination. However, I found "Stripes" a delight and give it three stars, generally entertaining (pun intended).

'World's largest yard sale'

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Columbus Square Mall will hold the "World's Largest Yard Sale" on Oct. 10 and 11. Reservations are being taken now for this open air sale held on the back parking lot of the mall. This event is open to individuals, civic clubs and organizations. You may sell any genuine garage or yard sale type merchandise. No food or drinks of any kind will be allowed.

The fee is $15. Call 561-6305 or come by the mall office now to make your reservations.

Mass celebration

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The 150th anniversary of the establishment of the Sisters of Mercy in Dublin, Ireland will be celebrated with a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Anne's Church in Columbus, Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Main service station being repaired

The Main Mall service station is currently under renovation. The service station will continue to operate under normal hours and four islands will be in service for your convenience.

Musical at Columbus College

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Columbus College Drama Department announces the opening of its 1981-82 season with the rollicking black musical "Purlie" based on the play "Purlie Victorious" by Ossie Davis.

Auditions are open to the public Monday and Tuesday from 3:30-5 p.m. and 7:30-10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Hall in Columbus College. People wanting to audition should bring a song to sing. The show will be performed Oct. 29, 30, 31 and Nov. 1, 6 and 7.

For more information call 568-2048.

Columbus community concerts

The Columbus Community Concert Association will have five performances for the 1981-82 season.

The concerts are: "The Merry Widow" on Nov. 5, New York Vocal Art Ensemble on Dec. 9, "Dear Mr. Ziegfeld" on Jan. 18, 1982, the Eastern Brass Quintet on March 1, 1982 and pianist Leonard Pennario on April 19, 1982. All performances will be held at the Three Arts Theatre at 8 p.m.

Prices for the concert series are (reserved section) — adults $25, students $12.50 and *family $62.50; (general) — adults $18, students $9 and *family $45.

* Family includes two adults and all students living at home.

Membership is open to the public. Tickets are available now through Sept. 26. For more information call Evelyn Crowley at 323-6074 or Marlene Jorgensen at 687-6224.

Art exhibit

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Fine Arts Department at the W. C. Bradley Memorial Library will host two art exhibits this month.

Antique dolls from the Chattahoochee Valley of Dolls Club can be seen throughout the library. The display consists of a very large variety of china, rag and specialized dolls.

Sidney Wilson, coordinator of the Fine Arts Cultural program in the Muscogee School System, is exhibiting a retrospective of her oil and watercolor art works.

Wilson's style demonstrates a skillful blend of modern art styles.

For more information call the library at 327-0211.

Columbus College registration

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Late registration for fall quarter classes at Columbus College will be held Monday from 6-7 p.m., and Tuesday from 6-7 p.m. A $5 late fee is charged for Monday registration, and a $10 late fee is charged on Tuesday.

Classes for the fall term begin Tuesday.

For more information call the registrar's office at 568-2237.

Volunteers are urgently needed! The American Red Cross will conduct its fall volunteer training class Oct. 5 at the Family Life Center at 8:45 a.m.

Many interesting and varied positions are open to include Martin Army Community Hospital, Red Cross Field Office, case aide assistants, post schools and the veterinary clinic.

Registration and interviews will be held Thursday, Sept. 25, Oct. 1 and 2.

For more information call 545-5159 during normal duty hours.

The Sound of Music

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Sound of Music will be performed at the Springer Theater in Columbus now through Oct. 3. Curtain time for evening performances is 8 p.m. Sunday matinees start at 2:30 p.m.

For more information call 324-1100.

AUSA Fish Fry

The Association of the United States Army Fish Fry will be held Thursday from 6-9:30 p.m. at the Columbus Fairgrounds (located behind the Municipal Auditorium). Admission is $6 per person.

The admission enables you to eat all the red snapper and catfish you want.

Tickets can be purchased at major units on post, Fort Benning National Bank and at banks in Columbus and Phenix City. Tickets are limited.

For more information call MSgt. Jesus Valenzules at 545-4432.

Youth Activities

The following activities will be held this month at Youth Activities bldg. 1054:

Chattahoochee Folk Festival

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Chattahoochee Promenade will spring to life Sept. 26 and 27 with the Chattahoochee Folk Festival, sponsored by the Columbus Museum of Arts and Sciences.

From noon until six both days, the river front park near the Columbus Historic District will light up with the foot-stomping sound of fiddle bands, the ringing of the blacksmith's hammer and the powerful wailing of blues singers. The aroma of foods traditional to the Chattahoochee region of Georgia and Alabama will fill the air along the river.

Down-home music will be offered continuously from two stages. Skillful craftsmen and folk artisans will demonstrate time-worn workways along the Promenade.

In the event of inclement weather, the festival will move into the North Hall and adjacent areas of the Columbus Iron Works Trade and Convention Center.

Why do your customers read The Ledger-Enquirer?

- # 1. For the news.
- # 2. For the advertising.

As part of a study, Belden Associates of Dallas, Texas, asked over 500 local citizens why they read the newspaper. The first reason people gave is "for the news" local and national. That makes sense. We're a newspaper, and that's our prime responsibility.

But right behind news, came "For the advertising." People read, and more importantly, people buy our newspapers every day to find out what's for sale, where the bargains are, and where to go to buy the things they need.

The Ledger-Enquirer reaches 190,000 people all over the Valley every day. In the metropolitan area, your ad reaches 7 out of 10 adults every week day. On Sunday, it jumps to 8 out of 10. Over a five day period, those numbers turn into saturation coverage. (Source: 1979 Belden CMS.)

Your customers want to know what you've got for sale. Let them know with the best advertising buy you can make. The Ledger-Enquirer.

Open house draws 300

MSgt. Jesus Valenzuela (l) waits to answer questions the day's guests might have.

Story and photos by Becky Bulgrin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Approximately 300 people showed up for the Retiree Open House held here last weekend at which the most frequent comment heard was, "They ought to have one of these every year."

The open house, which was designed to give retirees and their family members the opportunity to catch up on the latest developments and concepts of today's Army, as well as a chance to review their rights, benefits and privileges as retirees, turned out to be a "definite success," according to 2nd Lt. Barbara Lowery, project officer.

"Those who attended were impressed with the hospitality and caring attitude expressed by the soldiers and employees of Fort Benning," commented Lowery. "Those who did not attend really missed a treat."

Activities began Friday afternoon with a welcome ceremony in Infantry Hall. Afterward, the guests were bused to the infantry training brigade area to tour the new barracks, then to observe an Airborne "5000" demonstration on the way back. It came time to bring back old memories as everyone was invited to attend the monthly retirement ceremony on York Field. Get togethers at the Officers Club and NCO Club capped the day's events.

Infantry Hall looked like an indoor carnival the next day as the visitors made their way through the Combined Campaign underway

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was a cool September morning when the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) breakfast got underway at the Supper Club. The three-piece band made the gathering seem like a formal occasion, but the aroma of sausage and eggs filling the room gave away the fact that it was the day's first meal for the approximately 150 people attending the breakfast.

The actual meeting began with the first donation of the campaign ($1000) being given on behalf of the Fort Benning National Bank by Executive Vice-President Joy H. Burnham.

Following that, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel stepped to the podium to give words of encouragement to the campaign personnel.

"The people who operate and volunteer their services in the 70 agencies involved, and the thousands of people who are helped by these agencies, are counting on us," commented Gen. Wetzel sternly. The thing that most contributors do not realize, according to Gen. Wetzel, is that the funds contributed through the CFC help operate the Community Activities Association (CAA). If the 1981 goal is reached, then Fort Benning will receive $114,374 to support the 1982 CAA budget.

"This is the 31st consecutive year that we have joined forces with the community in contributing our share to worthwhile causes," said Gen. Wetzel, "and we are looking for all personnel to be as generous as they have been in the past." Last year approximately 50 percent of those stationed here contributed, exceeding last year's goal by $55,000.

"We want to conduct an aggressive campaign, quickly meet and exceed our goal and conclude this effort," added Gen. Wetzel. The goal for this year's campaign is set at $375,000. This should be easy for an installation with a monthly gross payroll in excess of 33 million dollars."

Gen. Wetzel then presented his contribution in the form of a payroll deduction to Col. Jack Harron, Fort Benning's CFC coordinator, and recommended use of the payroll deduction method for contributing.

CG's message

Sometimes it seems as if the world is in chaos. Terrorists attack, governments are overthrown, leaders are threatened, and violence seems to be the order of the day. At times like those we recall the Biblical assertion that the world was created by God — an assertion that became the basis of American independence — and that He is the King over all the earth. Our hearts are comforted and our faith in the future is restored.

As you celebrate Rosh Hashanah and recall God's creation of the world and his Kingship, I join you in the prayer that the coming year will be one in which faith in the future will be rewarded and hope for the freedom of all men will be realized.

May you have a good new year.

Chaplain's comments

Life's barriers can be overcome

By Joseph Lusk
 Chaplain, Sightseeing Road Chapel

There she stood in her colorful swimsuit on the high diving board. She jumped first from the side near her instructor, but she quickly asked to try again. This time she gathered up her courage and jumped off the end.

For seven-year-old Suzanne this splash was special, not only because her daddy was watching, but it also represented a great victory. Swimming classes did not prove very successful last year for Suzanne. This year she conquered the high dive and showed marked improvement totally. As a result, she proudly displayed her patch on the last day of class. She refused to allow past disappointments to prevent her from accomplishing something worthwhile in the present.

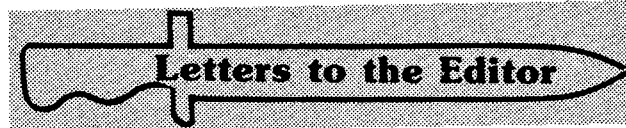

All of us have obstacles to overcome as we move through life. These roadblocks differ according to our limitations and our approach to life. For example, one person may experience distress just thinking about a physical fitness test, while another derives immense pleasure from the prospect of excelling physically. Likewise, while the extrovert has little difficulty meeting people, the introvert views the same exercise as an obstacle.

Life itself throws quite a few barriers in our pathway. This fact becomes clear to me as I watch my baby daughter learn to walk. Success comes only after many unsuccessful attempts and much persistence. Children, by their refusal to stay down when they fall, teach us a valuable lesson about life. They continually pull themselves back up and keep trying.

Although all of us have experienced failure, it remains one of our most difficult obstacles. The only good way to face failure is to learn from it. No successful person has ever achieved his goal without learning from painful mistakes. We cannot afford to grant ourselves the privilege of crying over spilled milk. Life goes on whether we choose to go along or not. We can learn to be more careful in the future.

The inspired words of the Apostle Paul speak well on this subject: "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark." With this overcoming attitude, we can face life squarely and, with God's help, refuse to quit.

Letters to the Editor

Employees seen; heard

Sometimes employees feel that they are seen and not heard. This is apparently untrue in the AG Division at Fort Benning. Recent actions taken to alleviate the conditions experienced by employees (both civilian and military) who were required to work in un-air-conditioned offices prove that supervisory personnel are concerned with the health and welfare of their employees.

Through the diligent efforts of Leo Lyons, president, AFGE Local 54; John Schultz, Employee Relations Branch, CPO; LTC G. Smith, AG; and Maj. W. Howard, Chief, COMPACT; air conditioners have been procured and installed in Bldg. 83.

I wish to personally thank those involved for their endeavors in this matter. Morale has been lifted and the job is much easier because of the excellent working conditions.

Reservation procedures to change

Effective Oct. 1 procedures for obtaining airline reservations will be modified to require the traveler to request reservation directly from Scheduled Airline Ticket Offices (SATO). Infantry Training Brigade and Infantry Training Group personnel will request reservations from SATO at bldg. 3001, Sand Hill, 682-0101, 681-0384. All other personnel will request reservations from SATO, bldg. 18, Main Post, 687-0164, 687-0179.

All Army travelers will, consistent with mission requirements, use the most cost-effective fare over a particular routing. SATO will determine the most cost-effective, discount or other available low-cost fare, and inform the traveler of the requirements for obtaining such fares. Discount/most cost-effective fares provide similar service to full fares. However, there are certain requirements which must be met. For example, one requirement for pure discount fares is advance ticket purchase. The traveler must obtain orders and make all arrangements promptly. Cooperation of supervisors in early identification of travel requirements and order issuing authorities for early receipt of orders is vital.

It is realized there are instances where discount or low-cost fares cannot be used, such as short notice travel and no discount air fare available. However, when applicable, the traveler must accept the most cost-effective fare or obtain a letter or DF from the order approving official stating why such fare is not to be used.

When the traveler obtains orders, he/she will visit the Transportation Office to obtain a Travel Document. The traveler then takes the Travel Document to the SATO where the airline ticket is issued.

Mechanized training at Bragg

Elements of Company A, 1st Battalion (Mechanized) 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, are at Fort Bragg, N.C., this week taking part in an exercise designed to develop and improve the Army's ability to deploy a mechanized task force.

They are among approximately 1,000 soldiers involved in the week-long Emergency Deployment Readiness Exercise (EDRE), called Dragon Team 6-81. Similar exercises are routinely conducted each month to test selected Army units in a variety of scenarios.

"Company A is one of the best and most extensively trained companies in the Army," according to Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher, commander of the 1/58th Infantry. "The men just returned from combined arms training at Fort Irwin, Calif., and have had extensive training in the mountains of North Georgia."

Troops of Company A, commanded by Capt. Carl E. Case, took 10 armored personnel carriers and two two-and-one-half-ton vehicles with them to the exercise. The unit is due to return Sunday night.

The vehicles were transported to Fort Bragg by flat bed trucks and the troops by bus.

The field training portion of the exercise started at 6 a.m. yesterday and will conclude Sunday morning.

The Army exercise is being conducted in conjunction with an Air Force operational readiness inspection. Approximately 30 C5A aircraft will be involved.

Soldiers wait their turn for the log walk-rope drop.

Company continues custom

Story and photos by Don Rhodes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Amidst the cry of this platoon or that platoon is the best, and the splash of young soldiers dropping from a rope or the slide-for-life into the water, Company D, 4th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, conducted their traditional "turning blue" celebration Saturday at Victory Pond.

According to the company commander, Capt. William J. Sitler, it was the seventh such traditional event to celebrate the soldiers moving into their seventh week of training, when they start their advanced training that will ultimately award them their occupational specialties.

The battalion commander, Lt. Col. Robert L. Brown, thinks the course helps build the soldiers' morale and confidence. Soldiers participating in the three events, rappelling, slide-for-life and the log walk-rope drop, consistently reinforced the battalion commander's opinion.

Pvt. 1 Scott Beach, admitted that rappelling had been a different feeling and that it was hard to explain but as soon as he had finished the other two events, he would be back to rappel again.

Pvt. 1 Daryl Skates said the slide-for-life was great and he wanted to go again while Pvt. 1 Melvin E. Champaign said the log walk-rope drop was scary until he got to the steps in the middle of the log, but he just kept on going.

As the soldiers completed each event, their arms were marked with different colored magic markers. The three different colored marks on their arms were their tickets for the barbecued chicken and ribs feast prepared by SSG. Tyrone Steward, the company's dining facility manager.

Lt. Col. Brown said that this was the only company he knew of in either training brigade that "turns blue" by running the Ranger Confidence Course.

The last time the company was at Victory Pond to "turn blue" a water moccasin decided to join in the festivities. He planted himself in the wooden wall right where the soldiers splashed down from the rope drop.

"We tried everything to scare him off," said Capt. Sitler, "to include grabbing him by the tail and throwing him out into the pond. But he kept coming back to the wall."

The snake finally met an untimely demise at the hands of some of the company's members.

Pvt. 1 Timothy P. Heckman wades for the boardwalk after completing the slide-for-life.

Pvt. 1 Timothy A. Bowman waits for permission to drop from the rope-crawl.

Drills get wet too. SSgt. Kurt Martin, Company D, 3rd Battalion, 1st Brigade, 70th Infantry Division, pours water from his boot after his turn on the slide-for-life. His unit was here for two-weeks active duty for training. Martin trained as a drill sergeant with D-4-1.

Dining facility manager, SSGT. Tyrone Steward, keeps the food cooking.

"It was scary . . . but I just kept on going," says Pvt. 1 Melvin E. Champaign after negotiating the log walk. He watches a buddy splash down from the slide-for-life.

Welcome

These men are part of the 173 that arrived at Company B, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade last week. After only twelve hours as student infantry soldiers, Cpl. Richard Augeri may seem an unforgiving taskmaster. But it's all necessary for them to become the best they possibly can be as soldiers. (Photo by Bill Powell)

New uniforms on way

WASHINGTON — You've been hearing about it for more than a year. Now, here's the final word.

Beginning Nov. 1, you can start wearing the new camouflage battledress uniform, say Department of the Army (DA) officials.

The new camouflage uniform for both garrison and field wear will be issued in sets of four (trousers and shirt) to new Army enlistees starting in November. Also, the uniform will be available for sale in clothing stores by that time.

Active duty soldiers not issued the four initial sets are required to have at least two sets of the camouflage battledress uniform by Oct. 1, 1982. By Oct. 1, 1984, soldiers are expected to have three camouflage uniforms. All soldiers will have four sets of the uniform by Oct. 1, 1985.

In an effort to reduce the financial burden of buying the required uniforms and, also, to provide the best possible uniformity for Army-wide wear of the new uniform, DA logistics officials say certain changes have been made in the regulation governing buying plans.

According to an official on the clothing and equipment staff, enlisted soldiers will be allowed to charge purchase under the regulation (AR 700-84), with payment prorated over a period of time. Previously, soldiers could charge purchase, but full payment was withheld from the soldier's next regular paycheck to cover costs.

The full battledress uniform (coat, trousers and cap) will cost $43.14 and can be worn upon availability in clothing sales stores. The same accoutrements worn on the current fatigues are to be worn on the new uniform with a couple of exceptions. The full-color rank insignia on officer's caps and full-color shoulder patches will not be worn.

The present wash and wear fatigues (06-507), which the new camouflage fatigues are replacing, can continue to be worn through Sept. 30, 1985.

For members of the Army National Guard (ARNG) and the U.S. Army Reserve (USAR), the fielding plan for the battledress uniform is somewhat different.

The present utility fatigue uniform will be replaced on an issue-in-kind basis, officials say. That is, the present uniform will be replaced with the camouflage battledress uniforms upon wearout.

Also, new soldiers of the ARNG and USAR entering active duty for training in November will be issued four sets of the new uniform. Prior service personnel entering on or after Nov. 1 will be authorized initial issue of three sets of the battledress uniform.

The new uniform includes a woodland camouflage pattern, wash and wear maintenance, and infrared reflective characteristics. Starching of the new fatigues is not authorized because that would reduce the infrared reflective qualities of the uniform.

DA officials feel the new camouflage battledress uniform is "a great improvement for our soldiers, will prove to be very popular, and will significantly enhance appearance, pride in the uniform, and combat readiness." (ARNews)

'Army 86' in development phase

WASHINGTON — "Army 86" — the Army's byword for its sweeping restructuring of divisions, corps, and echelons-above-corps — now is off the drawing board and into the development phase.

The new organizational concept began several years ago with a study by the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). The purpose of the study, say Department of the Army planning officials, was to find the best way for the Army to capitalize on the influx of new weaponry and field equipment with their associated technology.

Study results call for a transformation of armored and mechanized divisions (the so-called "heavy" divisions) as part of the "Division 86" plan for those forces oriented toward the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). Also to be affected are the light infantry divisions that, under "Infantry Division 86," might become involved in action in non-NATO areas. "Corps 86" plans include a heavy corps that can operate in the NATO environment and a contingency-type corps for operations elsewhere. Topping off the plans will be new echelons-above-corps organizations set up to support the new corps and divisions.

What does all the planning and diagramming mean to the soldier in the field? "For one thing," answered an official, "it means a more coherent, flexible mix of men and materiel. In a word, modernization. The challenge is obvious, the response both positive and imperative."

In less abstract terms, it means that for tomorrow's battlefield the Army will have its combat readiness keyed to maneuverability, sustained operations, air mobility integral to each division, and beefed-up support elements.

The doctrinal details and training requirements incident to implementation of this force-design program are still being developed by TRADOC officials. The DA-approved transition plan calls for some organizational changes to be made now with equipment currently on hand. It will take a few more years for full implementation, said an official.

Meanwhile, as the new equipment comes into the corps/division inventory, soldiers can expect personnel strengths to increase appropriately. For example, the new division for the Army of the late 80s will contain a combat electronic warfare intelligence battalion made up of about 500 soldiers.

As to comparative figures, the typical armored division's current strength of about 19,000 troops will approach 20,000. The new tank division will have three brigade headquarters, six armored battalions of 580 soldiers apiece, and four mechanized infantry battalions of 869 apiece. Instead of the current 11 maneuver battalions in the mechanized infantry divisions, there will be five battalions of tanks and five battalions of mechanized infantry; however, there will be an increase of two mechanized infantry companies. Tank population per battalion will increase from the current number of 54 to 58. Each mechanized battalion will contain seven cavalry fighting vehicles, 54 Infantry Fighting Vehicles, and 12 Improved TOW Vehicles. (ARNews)

Army needs stenos

WASHINGTON — The Army is looking for stenographers in pay grade E-5.

To reduce the present shortage of stenographers, the U.S. Army Military Personnel Center (MILPERCEN) is sending letters to some soldiers encouraging them to apply for the job.

Letters are being sent only to male soldiers in pay grade E-5 who are working in the administrative specialist (71L) MOS. That specialty was chosen because it currently has an excess of males, say MILPERCEN officials. But female 71Ls also may apply.

Soldiers in other non-shortage specialties meeting the basic qualifications may apply for reclassification into the stenography specialty.

To qualify, soldiers must:

- Type 30 words per minute;
- Have at least one year of high school English;
- Have a clerical aptitude score of 100 or above;
- Be eligible for a secret security clearance.

Upon completing the 18.5-week course, soldiers are awarded the stenographer (71C) MOS. A permanent change of station is required to attend the Stenography School, U.S. Army Institute of Administration, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

More information is available from military personnel offices and career counselors, or by writing: Commander, MILPERCEN, ATTN: DAPC-EPM-A, Alexandria, Va. 22311. (ARNews)

Bicycle accidents on rise

By Milton Carroll
Fort Benning Safety Office

Bicycles are gaining a great deal of popularity. More and more people are pedaling to work, to school and just for the fun of it.

Unfortunately, though, bike accidents are rising and approximately 1,000 bicyclists die yearly in bike related accidents. It is especially disturbing that children under the age of 14 account for 75 percent of all bicycle fatalities, and that four out of five of these deaths could be avoided if bicycle riders know and obey the rules of the road.

Bicycles share the roadways with automobiles. So one of the most important things to remember is that you must do what the smart motorcycle rider does — make yourself visible to motorists.

A bicycle used at night is required to be equipped with a suitable headlight and taillight or red reflector. A large taillight is advisable; it should be visible to overtaking traffic from at least 300 feet away. Reflective pressure-sensitive tape applied to pedals, backs of shoes, clothing, frame or handlebars is a good back-up safety device.

For daytime, a handy device is a bike pennant consisting of a flag of a high visibility color mounted on a light metal or fiberglass staff. The flag rides above the bike enabling the bike's presence to be recognized even when the bike itself is hidden. Reflectors which attach to the spokes enable the bike to be seen from the side. More tips to help bike riders are:

- A person riding a bicycle will comply with the signal requirements for motor vehicles when executing a turn while traveling on the roadway.

- Bicyclists are required to obey all traffic signals, signs and devices except when dismounted, at which time regulations pertaining to pedestrians apply.

- Always ride on the right side of the road with the flow of traffic. This reduces the difference in speed between your bicycle and the cars on the street.

- Ride single file and not in groups.

- Exercise caution when passing parked cars — a door suddenly opened from a parked car can send a biker sprawling into traffic.

- Drive defensively. Even if you have the right of way, make sure that no cars are coming or that the car drivers will see you and yield. Signal stops and turns using hand signals. Keep your eyes moving, get the whole traffic picture. Keep a check on traffic behind you. Defensive driving is a must — remember, there is no doubt as to the outcome when a bike tangles with a car.

Prep school briefings coming

Each year 170 of the Army's best young soldiers are given the chance of a lifetime. These soldiers are selected to attend the United States Military Academy Preparatory School which could lead to a chance to continue on the U.S. Military Academy (USMAPS) at West Point.

USMAPS prepares Regular Army soldiers for the demanding academic load carried by the cadets at West Point.

Soldiers here will soon have a first-hand opportunity to learn about USMAPS and the process to follow to apply for admission with the class of 1982-83. On Oct. 6 and 7, Maj. Charles Henning, USMAPS Admission Officer, will visit Fort Benning, he has scheduled briefings in several unit areas and in Infantry Hall. Soldiers, cadre and chain of command alike are welcome to attend. Check with your unit Adjutant/S1 for details of briefings in areas around Fort Benning.

The briefing for USAIS units and units billeted on Main Post will be given in Classroom 22, Infantry Hall, Oct. 7 at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Unit commanders/directors are asked to identify and encourage eligible and/or interested soldiers to attend. Criteria for applying are found in AR 351-12. Briefly, all applicants must:

- Be a U.S. citizen
- Unmarried
- Medically qualified
- Under 22 years of age upon entry to West Point
- Have leadership ability
- Good high school record
- Desire for military career

Details and literature concerning USMAPS will be available at the briefing.

many booths and displays set up. At each booth was a handful of pamphlets containing a wealth of current information and a representative to answer questions.

Martin Army Community Hospital offered free blood pressure and glaucoma checks and also had a CHAMPUS advisor available.

ID cards were issued to retirees, family members and survivors, along with DEERS counseling and registration.

A vehicle registration booth was set up by the Law Enforcement Command, as well as a crime prevention display.

Other booths included legal assistance, recreation (Morale Support Activities), Social Security, survivor assistance, Army Community Service, the Georgia Department of Veterans Service and the Georgia Department of Labor, Fort Benning Retiree Council, Education Center, commissary and post exchange, Association of the United States Army, Noncommissioned Officers Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion and more.

If the crowd seemed to dwindle a little later in the afternoon, it may have been because the commissary and main PX had a special check-out line for the visitors to use from 1-5 p.m.

For those who wanted a change of pace, all were welcome to attend briefings and see films on readiness, modern battlefield tactics, and related topics in the classrooms. Or they could get some fresh air and see the tanks, helicopter and other equipment on display in the parking lot.

Lillian M. Hollis, commander of the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary #56 in Columbus, Ga., whose husband was a retiree, said she talked two of her friends (also members of the auxiliary) into going to the open house with her. "It's helped me a lot," said Mrs. Hollis, and her friends added, "We're glad we came along."

Rita Lewis "got a kick out of" being introduced as "the person retired the longest." From Macon, Ga., the former second lieutenant was wounded in 1944 and granted a 100 percent disability. "There's so much I learned about the infantry that I had no idea about," she said. "I've enjoyed it tremendously." Her husband Ray, a retired sergeant major, added, "I think it's the best thing they've ever done; I just hope they have another one."

While retired CWO2 Manly C. Buxton and his wife Jeanette both said they "enjoyed it," Manly showed his approval of the open house when he said with a laugh, "I'm just sorry they waited so long."

SFCs (Ret) Solomon Crenshaw (back) and Sandy Mushaff watch as Sp5 Robert Parsley, A Troop, 15th Cavalry, explains something Mushaff said he didn't know about the tank.

SSgt. (Ret) Jack Keets gets his eyes checked for glaucoma by SFC Dean Christ, NCOIC of the ophthalmology clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Lillian Hollis (l), Joanna B. Warren (m) and Margie Threadgill join each other at one of the many booths at the open house.

Giving blood helps others ; provides training

Sp4 Kimberly Cooper, a medic with the 546th Medical Company prepares to take blood from PFC Ricky Williams, 690th Medical Company. (Photo by Bill Walton)

After a month-long campaign within the battalion to emphasize the importance of blood donations to the U.S. Army blood bank system, the 34th Medical Battalion sponsored its Second Annual Blood Donor Day Sept. 17. The project was jointly planned and executed with the Martin Army Community Hospital blood bank, a division of the Department of Pathology.

In addition to providing the much needed "life-giving liquid", the event provided an opportunity for medical personnel of the battalion to practice medical screening techniques such as taking temperature, pulse, respiration and blood pressures. Many personnel also received "hands on" experience in intravenous infusion techniques while "drawing" the blood.

The battalion commander, Lt. Col. G.O. Bowen, termed the project a "total success" with more than 240 units of whole blood being donated. All of the blood will go to the Martin Army Community Hospital blood bank where it will be stored for use by patients at the hospital.

The blood bank system relies heavily on donations from military personnel to maintain a stock of whole blood. Without these donations they would be required to buy blood on the civilian market at the cost of approximately $30 per unit. It is the response of military personnel and dependents here that keeps the blood bank system working and insures a ready supply of whole blood for patients at Martin Army.

Individuals interested in donating blood, a relatively painless experience, may contact the blood bank, Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-2780.

The gift of life you can give to another human being could be a gift to yourself.

Consider benefits and security before separation

By J.R. Howell

Minor AFB, N.D.

If you have made the decision to separate from your service, or if you are "on the fence and don't know which way to leap, consider the following questions before you make your final decision.

If you cannot answer "yes" to at least half of these questions about a very important aspect of life after you leave service, could be you have overlooked some pretty positive factors right where you are.

Will your new employer —

- Guarantee continued employment if you meet his standards? (This includes no layoffs in favor of senior people.)

- Give you a tax-free allowance for quarters, or furnish quarters free?
- Furnish free health and accident insurance and provide full pay if you are unable to work — regardless of the length of your illness?
- Provide free dental care for you?
- Give you 30 days paid vacation a year, with meal allowance, starting with your first day of employment?
- Give you low-cost life insurance that requires no physical examination?
- Provide an interest-free loan in case of an emergency?
- Provide free legal advice?

- Help you pay in advance for college or trade school?
- Provide a pension for life in case you are disabled?
- Provide free survivor benefits to your family if you are killed on the job?
- Provide low-cost recreational facilities or, even better, free swimming pools and gyms?
- Operate for your convenience a discount grocery, drug store, service station, cafeteria, barber shop, beauty parlor, dry cleaners, tailor shop?
- Guarantee retirement pay for life after 20 years of service with the company, regardless of your age at the time?

Soldiers show families Army training

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Many wives and children whose husbands and fathers are in the Army don't understand what an army job is all about. Last Saturday, 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade, had their first Organization and Family Day as an effort to show the wives and children just what their men do.

The day's activities began with a film on One Station Unit Training so the families could see the training that drill sergeants teach new soldiers. SSgt. Paul D. Paradis acted as tour guide, and showed the families different facilities in the battalion including the orderly room, barracks, supply room, and arms room. Along the tour, Paradis answered any questions the wives and children asked.

Everyone took a break from the tour and had lunch inside the Company A dining facility to try out the food soldiers who train in 8th Battalion eat.

Wives and children were then driven by bus to Dickman Field to find out what infantrymen do. The crowd watched an infantry squad maneuver down the field, throwing smoke grenades, assaulting an enemy position. They also watched demonstrations of hand-to-hand combat and bayonet training, saw displays on the Dragon, M-16 rifle and M-60 machinegun.

"We are very pleased that we had a lot of wives and children attend. That

CIVILIAN LIFE MADE $1,475 EASIER.

If you've made up your mind to go back to civilian life, there's a way to make the financial transition easier.

Join your local Army Reserve part-time. It can really pay off for you. For instance, a former E-4 with 3 years experience now makes over $1,475 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

And don't forget the PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, retirement points and all the other Army Reserve benefits.

Look into it. Contact your in-service recruiter listed below, or your unit reenlistment NCO.

ARMY RESERVE. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

is who we are aiming at," said Maj. Jim Hallums, battalion executive officer.

The families were then driven to the brigade chapel where Chaplain (Capt.) Richard J. Stiliha, gave out packets on referral agencies in case the families or someone they know needs help or information.

Stiliha told the people, "I serve the soldiers in training and the cadre. I provide them with spiritual and emotional support in the field." He said that the first two to three weeks for a new infantry soldier is a difficult time because it takes a lot to adjust from being a civilian to a soldier.

"I try to lift them up and spur them on," he said. "I also try to give encouragement to the cadre.

Afterward everyone celebrated the battalion's birthday with a cake.

The infantrymen maneuver down the field to demonstrate a squad assault.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Police protect and assist community

This is the week in which your Law Enforcement Command recognizes and celebrates the 40th anniversary of the United States Army Military Police Corps. The Marshal's Viewpoint this week presents some thoughts on the mission, duties, philosophy, and potential of the police in today's society.

In the past, the average law-abiding citizen has barely acknowledged the importance of his local police forces and given even less thought to his county, state or federal enforcement agencies. When this average citizen needed police services, the police were wonderful people. When this average citizen did not need them, the police were just an omnipresent aggravation to be tolerated.

Also, to many citizens, the police seem not to be doing their job. One U.S. study shows that an amazing number of people do not call the police even when an incident involves a crime or an act in which they have been the victims. The study reveals that of those who do not report the incident or call the police, 55 percent do not think the police can do anything about it, that the police will not catch the offender, or that the police will not want to be bothered.

Lt. Col. Earp

The police find themselves today in the unenviable position of being, to some groups, symbols of oppression even though the police do not cause poverty or social problems. Often, when police are the objects of hostile feelings, they have to protect those who reject them.

We now live in a period when homicide, rape, burglary, robbery, arson, and civil disobedience take a heavy toll of life and property and constitute a menace in every community. The citizen counts on the police to protect life and property, to prevent lawlessness, and to apprehend the law breaker. The citizen expects the police to have the strength, skill, and courage to deal with the criminal offender no matter how desperate and dangerous he may be.

It is the police who are first to feel the increasingly quickened tempos of social change. The police are aware that this increased rate of change, which brings new problems as quickly as it takes some away, only adds to the total amount of complexity already involved in policing. The social sciences, for the most part, have not been able to devise ways to cope with these ever-increasing problems. Instead of positive solutions we see the rush to new hardware improvements to fill the void created by the gap between the demand for solutions and the lack of solutions. And while new hardware improvements do often act as a stopgap solution, they are often involved in worsening the problems. We cannot afford to risk presenting the public we serve with space-age equipment and stone-age brains.

We may expect to see that the race for new technology and hardware will slowly die down and a more urgent race begun to create a new body of knowledge relating to policing. Instead of improving police hardware, we will be concerned with improving the police officer. To fail to recognize the police as what might be called the cutting edge of society is to fail to recognize what the police job is and the important place the police hold in society.

There probably will never be a better time than now for all police professionals to rededicate ourselves to the majesty of the law under which we live, and have a duty to enforce and uphold as practitioners in the criminal justice field.

We would all probably agree that for a country to prosper, its populace must be assured that law and order will be maintained. It is, therefore, a duty of our country's policy.

Police do more than just PROTECT the community. The police also must ASSIST THE community for two reasons:

1. The police have the manpower, organization, equipment, training, skills, communications and mobility to provide a massive 24 hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week community service which actually supplements existing social and welfare services.

2. Police MUST become involved in this type of police helpfulness in order to gain and secure the support of the citizenry.

Bear in mind, on weekends when the social workers and lawyers are away and the social agencies are locked tight, it is the police who are called. And when everyone takes a holiday, whether it be a Christmas or new year, or Easter, police work never ends. The police must be information sources, lawyers, social workers, mediators, medical experts, and psychiatrists. They must use authority with effectiveness, restraint, and impartiality. No other group is expected to perform such a variety of services.

The police operate from a unique position in that they function in four separate but closely related roles, that is: social, political, administrative and tactical. The social role of law enforcement involves the police function as a basic social institution; an agency of social control. The political role involves the police as a government institution; that which exercises the governments' legitimate right of control. Here the police stand as the enforcement arm of governmental operation by virtue of their security mission. The administrative role bridges the gap between the local and national government and the towns and people of the rural as well as the urban areas.

The tactical role involves offensive type operations such as raids on organized crime operations, terrorist groups, or illegal drug operations necessary to maintain the public peace.

Not only the general stability, as I have indicated, but the very security of a sovereign state depends to a large degree upon the establishment and maintenance of law and order. The police are, or should be, the "frontline" forces which secure law and order and provide the atmosphere of stability within which the government can carry out new and on-going social, economic, and political programs.

In today's dynamic environment of change and dissent, could not the support of a government by its populace very well be directly proportional to the professionalism, efficiency, and effectiveness of the police forces in the handling of criminal threats and in the performance of their normal duties?

Can the challenges to our future that I mentioned earlier be met? I, for one, have no doubt.

Hark to the words of President Abraham Lincoln: "Let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor; let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the character of his own and his children's liberty."

Crime is not just a police problem. The crime rate is not due to police inadequacy. Crime is the result of inadequate family life, poor schools, evil forces in neighborhood life, and the distortions of human personality, discrimination, and violations of basic human needs. Police are only one factor in what must be a multipronged program for crime control and crime prevention. Police not only can play a vital role in the public protection area, but in others as well, for we are citizens as well as practitioners of criminal justice.

As fellow practitioners in the law enforcement field, we in the military police realize the sensitive importance of inter-agency cooperation, communication and coordination necessary to insure effectiveness and uniformity of police services throughout the country. Our provost marshals, or police chiefs in civil terms, work very closely with their civil and military counterparts at the local and national levels. Our incorporation of, and participation in, communication networks, police intelligence networks, and local police emergency contingency plans help insure that the criminal finds no haven. You may be assured that the Military Police Corps is a competent, professional and capable law enforcement agency that can be relied upon as a sturdy cog in the wheel of criminal justice that can play an effective role in crime prevention, suppression, and detection.

Your military police will strive to continuously improve in the ability to provide the finest in service and play a key role in your peace of mind at Fort Benning.

Aviation company trains in Florida

Want some excitement? Take 5,000 gallons of jet fuel and three helicopters with the engines running. Stir in some rangers and flight students for spice. Let it all simmer in the hot Florida sun and you have a recipe guaranteed to keep the adrenalin flowing.

Personnel from Lawson Army Airfield were recently tasked on short notice to set up and operate a hot refueling site in support of the Ranger Department here and the aviation center at Fort Rucker, Ala.

The operation took place Sept. 9 at the Florida Ranger Camp located just north of Eglin Air Force Base. SSgt. Charles Faust Jr. of the 121st Aviation Company was NCOIC for the operation. He was assisted by Sgt. Jerome Anderson, Sp4 Willie Jenkins and PFC Dennis Daniels from Lawson Army Airfield's alert section.

The operation enabled personnel from Fort Benning and Fort Rucker to receive the most realistic training available because they got to work directly with ranger and flight students - something they normally don't do.

Hot refueling is the process of refueling aircraft, in this case Huey helicopters with the engines running and a minimum time on the ground. Some of the hazards of hot refueling are possible fire, whirling rotor blades, gusty winds caused by rotor blades, high noise levels and the aircraft operating extremely close to one another and to the source of fuel.

This type of mission can only be safely completed with highly trained professionals such as those at Lawson Field.

PFC Dennis Daniels refuels a chopper.

SSgt. Charles Faust (l) stands fire guard as Sp4 Willie Jenkins (far right) attaches grounding cables to the helicopter.

SSgt. Charles Faust (r) checks a fuel sample while PFC Dennis Daniels recycles fuel into a 5,000-gallon tanker.

Soldier wins Achievement Medal

A former Fort Benning soldier was recently awarded the Army Achievement Medal when he overcame bad weather conditions and imminent danger in the recovery of a slain soldier from a minefield near the Demilitarized Zone of the Republic of Korea.

SSgt. Napoleon Woods, a utility helicopter crew-chief with B Troop, 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, 2nd Infantry Division, earned the medal last month for his actions.

Woods has been stationed here twice with the 121st Aviation Company. He is the son of Rebecca Thomas of Columbus.

MPs—responding to needs

Sgt. Willie Ivory (r) briefs Sp4 Rodney Parks on operations at the post's detention facility. They are members of the 139th MP Company.

Story by Patricia Nephew
Law Enforcement Command

USAIC Public Affairs Office

What comes to mind when someone mentions the military police? Is it good, bad or indifferent? Is it the crossing guard at the elementary school, or the traffic units that "hassle" people because they stop cars for broken headlights and safe driving violations? Perhaps it's the patrol who responded to the larceny at the unit billets last week, the guard at the main gate who gives directions to new arrivals, or the game warden who picks up the stray animals running around post.

This is the week in which the Law Enforcement Command recognizes and celebrates the 40th anniversary of the United States Army Military Police Corps. During this week, more than any other, stop and take a good, hard look at the people dedicated to protecting and assisting the Fort Benning community. Think about the men and women behind the scenes as well as those patrolling the roads. Whether it's weekday or weekend, midnight or high noon, the military police stand ready to respond to your needs.

So, take a look - and next time the military police are mentioned, think of the desk crew, the confinement facility, and the traffic, AWOL apprehension and military police investigation sections. Think of the physical security and crime prevention operations, the dog platoons and records and administration. Think of 139th and 988th Military Police Companies and the 197th Military Police Platoon: All of the people who are trying to make Fort Benning a better place to work and live. The military police are here to protect and to serve.

Brothers reunited after 19 years

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Brothers and sisters. They grow up together, go through good and bad times, fight with each other and share the kind of love siblings have for each other.

Royce and Isaiah Anderson grew up in a small town called Lufkin, Texas. Royce, the eldest of five children, graduated from G. W. Carver High School in Groveton in 1959. He had a scholarship to play football but injured himself. At that point he decided to join the Army. Brother Isaiah decided maybe Royce had the right idea and in 1962 he joined the Army.

During the 19 years both have been in the Army, they were never assigned to the same post. As a matter of fact, the only times they saw each other were in cases of family emergencies. However, all that changed recently when Isaiah, who was stationed in Frankfurt, Germany, got orders for Fort Benning, where he knew his brother was stationed.

They've now been stationed together since July and both are enthusiastic about being able to call each other and get together whenever their jobs allow them to.

Royce is 1st Sgt. Anderson to the hundreds of young men who pass through Company A, 1st Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade. Isaiah is better known as SFC Anderson, Brigade Reenlistment NCO for the 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

Is it better to have a brother or sister stationed nearby? Both feel it is. "You can relate problems to a brother or sister that you might not tell someone else," said Royce. Isaiah added, "I think I'm more into the job with him here."

Brothers and sisters being competitive by nature, each tries harder to be better "because neither wants to be outdone," explained Isaiah.

When asked if the Army should consider assigning siblings closer throughout their Army careers, the answer was yes — except in combat situations.

Knowing mail policies helps

WASHINGTON — If you're sending or receiving mail through the Army post office (APO) in Europe, here are some facts that can help you.

Certain things can't be sent through the mail, say postal officials. Two obvious items are ammunition and explosives. Other banned items are rationed items, alcoholic beverages, plants, magnetic items and poisons. If you aren't sure what you can send through the mail, ask your local APO personnel.

Packing parcels correctly cuts down on having them arrive damaged, officials say. Styrofoam, shredded newspaper and even popcorn make good packing material. It also helps to enforce all seams of the package.

If you're sending money through the mail, the safest way is to use either a money order or a check. There is now a $500 money order available at APO's for 25 cents.

All APO's have appointed claims representatives to help customers fill out the right forms if an item is lost in the mail. Only the mailer can file a claim against the postal service when there is a complete loss of the item. Either mailer or addressee may file a claim for partial loss or damage of a package.

There's also a free answer book with easy-to-read information about the APO system. The book is available at all Army post offices and has helpful hints on using the APO in Europe.

The community postal officer can answer any questions customers may have and even provide a briefing on how the European postal system works. (ARNews)

Communication system provides information

In connection with the Army's newest policy to establish a communications system for Army family members, Fort Benning officials announced recently that the final link to the Pentagon has been established here. The system is designed to provide up-to-date information on Army policies and programs which affect service members and their families.

The system provides for family members of active duty personnel, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, retirees and DA civilians, to call direct toll-free one of three major headquarters to obtain information on Army policies and programs. This system is not a "crisis hot line," but is designed to provide answers to family-related questions.

The system here has been integrated into the commanding general's hot line, 545-5555. At TRADOC Headquarters dial 1-800-466-1069 and at the Department of the Army dial 1-800-336-5467.

Fort Benning officials would like to make clear that policies affecting families living here can be best addressed at the local level. However, this does not prevent a family member from calling the next higher headquarters. Calls received at higher headquarters will be filtered back to the local headquarters for appropriate answers.

The system here will be manned 24 hours a day, while only eight hours per day at higher headquarters. After normal duty hours and on weekends, the systems will revert to a code-a-phone service and calls will be recorded and replies processed on the next workday. Officials state that this new system is in line with the Army Chief of Staff's latest directives to involve family members in policies which affect their lives.

Doughboys blank Carson-Newman

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A whole different game is how the fans and the Fort Benning Doughboys football team could describe their 35-0 blanking of Carson-Newman Saturday night.

The Doughboys, whose offense in last week's 24-0 loss to UT-Chattanooga was poor, pounded out 325 yards. The rushing game, led by Robert Jackson and Stafford Brown, combined with an improved Leamon Hall at quarterback, proved too much for the Eagles from Tennessee. The Doughboys scored two touchdowns rushing and three passing.

Defensively, the Doughboys gave up only 154 yards in the shut out.

The Doughboys first score came with 1:36 remaining in the first quarter when Jackson scored on a two-yard up-the-middle run. Renee Garcia added the conversion.

Doughboy Quarterback Leamon Hall saw many of his passes slip through his receivers hands during most of the first half. However, with 8:43 left before the half, Hall connected with Herman Jones for a 25-yard touchdown toss. Garcia once again converted. The Eagles seemed to have a drive going just before the half, but an interception by the Doughboys ended the threat. Fort Benning led 14-0 at the half.

When the Doughboys came back on the field, they must have smelled blood as their solid rushing continued and they began grinding out yardage and eating up the clock.

Jackson scored for his second TD on a nine-yard run around the end with 7:07 left in the third quarter. Garcia kicked his third extra point. A minute later, Gregory Haynes recovered an Eagle fumble giving Defensive end Gregory Haynes (89) and linebacker Jim McCollum (43) move to take down a Carson-Newman running back. (Photo by R.C. Maehr)

Benning the ball on the Eagles' 26. After moving down to the 10-yard line, Hall threw a TD pass to Arthur Hogue. Garcia made good on his fourth extra point of the night.

Hall marched the Doughboys to the Eagles 39-yard line and with 12:12 remaining in the game, he passed to Ziegler for the touchdown. Garcia added the extra point for the final point of the game.

A possible Doughboys touchdown was called back as the clock ran out when the Benning team was penalized for motion.

Doughboys Head Coach Ralph Santaliz commented that he was pleased with his team's play. "We played well, but without Maj. Gen. Wetzel letting us practice at 12 everyday, we wouldn't be as improved as this."

The Doughboys are now 1-1. Their next game is against the Fort Campbell Eagles next Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Atlanta game picked close

Week three saw more of the undefeated go down the tubes. Now there are only five undefeated teams left in the league.

This week looks to be the week of the road teams, with most of the powerhouses playing away. It should be an interesting week for the underdog, however.

Larry Harrison—"Well, sports fans, week four is upon us. Some of you still haven't learned yet, but for those of you that have, let's do it again.

Don Rhodes—"Groan!"

Sean Ford—"I'll second that groan. 8-6! What a way to start! I continue to stick my neck out this week, but I've got to love the Dolphins and Cincinnati's 'Cardiac Cats'. New England's record can't stay unblemished forever and Cleveland's ready for the Falcons. The Packers are in for a surprise as Kramer's arm is back and winning for Minnesota again. I know the Rams have had their problems, but Rutledge is playing well at quarterback and the bears are traditional losers at home against L.A."

Tony Adams—"Here goes one more week of biting my nails in hopes of having a good picking week. I feel that the teams playing at home this week will be crying as well."

We're number one!

Boat classes coming

A class on the safe operation of powerboats will be conducted here during the month of October providing there is sufficient interest.

Attendance is open to all local powerboats owners and interested persons. There will be a nominal cost of not more than $10 per student to defray the cost of material that is provided each student.

The class will consist of eight lessons, to be taught two nights a week for two weeks. Classes have been tentatively scheduled for Monday and Thursday nights and will last about two and one-half hours. Time and dates will be announced later.

Subjects covered will include boat terminology, rules of the road, legal requirements, weather, basic navigation, lighting for boats, and procedures for navigating through locks and dams.

The course will be conducted by a qualified instructor from the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary. A certificate of completion will be issued to each student who completes the course.

Many insurance companies in the Fort Benning, Columbus; Phenix City area offer rate discounts on boat insurance to those persons completing the course. More than 50 percent of those companies surveyed offer from five to 15 percent discounts.

If interested in attending this course, please notify the USAIC Safety Office at 545-3267. Watch the Benning Bulletin for further information.

Triathlons become grueling events

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Three. That was the magic number at the Second Annual "Aluminum Man" Triathlon held Sept. 12 at Callaway Gardens.

Three members of Infantry Officer Basic Course 7-81, 21st Company, 2nd Student Battalion, traveled to Callaway Gardens to compete in the event and did quite well. They are Scott Owen, Steve Pelicano and Paul Beuchner.

The event consists of a quarter-mile swim, a 12-mile bicycle race and a five-kilometer run, in that order. The clock starts with the swim and does not stop until the athlete finishes the run.

Owen came away with first place honors in a field of 130 participants with a time of 59 minutes and 27 seconds. Pelicano finished with 64 minutes and 52 seconds to take 10th place overall and second place in the military category. Paul Beuchner was off to a blazing start until a flat tire dashed his hopes of finishing among the leaders.

Owen and Pelicano are training partners and have been training together for two years. Their training program consists of three or more hours of training per day as well as participation in numerous foot races and bicycle races in the local area. The long hours of training are designed to prepare them for their ultimate challenge, the International "Iron Man" Triathlon in Hawaii. Owen is a veteran of this supreme endurance test (2.5-mile swim, 112-mile bicycle race and 26.2-mile run) and, barring injuries, both Owen and Pelicano hope to be competitive in the 1982 version of this international event.

Triathlons involving swimming, biking and running are becoming popular throughout the country. The combination of distances in each event varies, enabling participants to choose the triathlon they feel best prepared for. Triathlons can be intense, competitive challenges, as well as social events.

Steve Pelicano watches Scott Owen fix a flat tire, something they say happens often in a bicycle race.

Pelicano and Owen placed tenth and first respectively in the triathlon.

Learning rugby made simple

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Scrum. Have you ever heard of such a word? It really makes you think. Could it be a strange tropical disease? Or a fish swimming in the muddy waters of Mississippi? Actually, scrum is a term used to describe a play in rugby. But I'll explain more about that later.

Few people, it seems, know very much about the sport of rugby. But even our post has a team. They've been practicing during the last few weeks for upcoming competition.

But back to the problem at hand. You say that you don't know anything about rugby except that it looks disorganized. As disorganized as it looks, it is really a fun and simple game. As a matter of fact, if you can follow a football game then you can follow rugby. There aren't as many rules to know and the play is continuous, only stopping when someone scores or a rule has been broken. There's no chance to get in a huddle and prepare for the next play. Instead, players have to be efficient on both offense and defense.

Okay, now let's start with the basics. Each team consists of eight forwards and seven backs. Each man on the field is a threat because he can run the ball and score with it.

The forwards usually secure possession of the ball. The ball can be advanced in three ways. It can be carried downfield, passed laterally or backward or kicked as in soccer.

Defensively, of course, the object is to halt the offense in its tracks. However, blocking is not permitted and the only person who can be tackled is the guy with the ball. When he is tackled to the ground, he has to let go of the ball.

To prevent the runner from passing off the ball, a ferocious tackle has to be made. So you can see, rugby presents the spectator with all the excitement of a Cowboy-Eagle game.

Now for the important part--scoring. You thought I'd never get around to it, didn't you? There are three ways to score in rugby. The first way is to touch the ball to the turf in the end zone. This is worth four points. However, just crossing the goal line is not a score. The ball literally has to be touched to the turf. Let's say the goal try is successful. Once the try is made, then a conversion kick is attempted from the 22-meter line. This is worth two more points. The second way to score is to dropkick the ball (anytime) through the uprights. This is worth three points. The third way is when a referee awards a penalty kick due to an infraction. A place-kick from the point of the infraction is worth three points.

It's now time to explain about scrum. If you haven't figured it out by now, then I believe I'd better let you know. A forward fumble (called knock-on) results in a scrum. The players all lock arms and what-have-you and form a circle. Another player rolls the ball in the middle of the pack and they fight for possession. Once the ball is recovered, play continues.

Well folks, there you go. Everything you ever wanted to know about rugby but didn't care to ask. Actually, this is a basic synopsis of the game. The best way to learn is to go out to a rugby game and watch the action being played. After all, we do have a team on post. As soon as I can come up with a schedule, (that's how unknown the sport is) it'll be published in the BAYONET. Until next week, keep on scrumming.

YA football season opens with bang

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities Sports Director

Doughboy Stadium was the site for the opening of the 1981 Youth Activities football season Saturday.

Brig. Gen. Richard RisCassi was the guest speaker who offered inspirational words to the players, parents and spectators.

The music was provided by the Colonial Band from Fort Benning Post 76 with the color guard from the 2/69th also on hand.

Approximately 337 youth representing 16 teams lined up in their uniforms anxiously awaiting the 11 a.m. kick-off at Blue Field.

Grasshopper League

The Eagles defeated the Raiders 24-8 to tie for first place with the Seahawks in this week's football action. Eagle quarterback Jack Goode scored a touchdown on the first play of the game as well as three more touchdowns following that for an outstanding offensive effort.

Todd Walker led the Eagles' defense with eight tackles.

The Seahawks squeaked by the Cowboys 13-12 when Shawn Gentry scored a late fourth quarter touchdown to force the game into overtime.

Following that, the defense, led by James Lawcwell and Lee Patton took charge of the game.

Termite League

The Falcons held the Rams scoreless during their 6-0 shutout Saturday. It was a battle of the defenses most of the game with the only score coming in the first quarter on a 20 yard G. Wyche to Perez pass. The Falcon offense dominated with ball control the entire game moving into scoring position twice but unable to take it in for the score. The Falcons rolled up nine sacks.

The Stampeders blanked the Cowboys 32-0 Saturday. George Dailey scored two touchdowns from 65 yards and 8 yards respectively. New Molurtic scored on a 25 yard sweep and also had one interception. Offensively the Stampeders gained over 300 yards on the ground. Defensively, the Stampeders did not allow a first down.

Pee Wee League

In a close game, Jet quarterback Timmy McIntosh hit running back Chris Howard for two touchdowns in their 14-6 win over the Outlaws. Kenny Johnson blocked a punt resulting in a safety.

Junior Division

In the only game of the Junior Division, the Chargers slipped by the Panthers by a score of 14-6.

Highlights

What's a clown?

By Bill Powell

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Laugh and the world laughs with you, cry and you cry alone . . ." If any phrase characterized what job a clown does it would be this one. Sgt. Leo Sogioian, an Army reservist from Detroit, is at Fort Benning to do his part for his country. Leo also performs as a clown with the Shrine Circus every time it comes to town.

What's it like entertaining people? What sort of training should you have to "clown around", at least professionally? Do clowns have individual faces in makeup that are considered their trademarks?

For the answer to these and other questions tune in the "Benning Report" on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable. For the dates and times of scheduled programming consult the BAYONET, the Benning Bulletin or the Ledger-Enquirer Sunday TV Book (listed under cable). The following are other programs highlighted next week on WFBG-TV:

- "All Systems Go" goes to the planet "Euphoria" with two brave astronauts to discover if Euphoria is a state of well-being or a false sense of security.

- "Youth Drug Scene" exposes the problems a young drug abuser faces in his drug experimentation from family concern to the scorn of friends. The program also details if he kicks his habit or not.

- "Army Community Service in Action" details programs that are available to help soldiers and their families and how they help.

- "Make It Yourself — The DITY Program" looks at moving household goods yourself that are usually trusted to commercial movers, as well as financial rewards available to those who move themselves at government expense.

Sp4 Richard Mays, Alabama National Guard, files pay records during weekend training.

Capt. Jessie Loving (I), Alabama National Guard, and Capt. Robert Chilton, Fort Benning finance office, discuss the day's training.

Helps finance office

Guard unit trains here

Story and photos by Don Rhodes

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The best thing to do when you have 665 pay transactions and 1,600 filing actions backlogged that you or your staff can't find time to complete is to invite Company A, 31st Support Battalion of the Alabama National Guard to come here and put in their weekend training time, according to Capt. Robert Chilton and MSgt. Bernard Barger of the infantry training brigades' finance office.

That's the number of actions the Guard unit was able to complete in an eight-hour period last month when they spent their first weekend here helping the infantry training brigades' finance office. Both Chilton and Barger praised the Guard unit highly.

Typically, they spend the first day in classroom instruction and the second day performing hands-on functions that benefit not only Chilton, Barger and their shop, but also the soldiers going through training here.

"We spent our two-week summer camp here in late June and early July," said Maj. Jerry Ware, the finance officer for 31st Support Battalion. "It's a good morale booster to come here. It keeps us busy. After the two-week summer camp, we worked out a deal to come here for some of our weekend training."

Last weekend was the second weekend they spent here and, according to Chilton, they were again an enormous help and completed a large number of actions.

"MSgt. Barger and his folks have been real good to us," continued Ware. "They come out here on Saturdays and Sundays and give up their own time to help us."

SSgt. Lloyd Parsons, a 14-year Guard veteran who works for the Alabama soil conservation service, quickly added his own praise for the Fort Benning finance office.

"We need the experience of hands-on work and Fort Benning gives us the opportunity to get it. These people are terrific to us each time we come here."

Sp4 Willie Thomas added, "If we had to mobilize a unit, we could send them off with records exactly like the active Army expects."

According to Ware, the hands-on training the Guard unit gets here is much better than simply conducting classes in a classroom on weekends in Montgomery, Ala., the unit's home.

"They don't mind the work," he said, referring to his soldiers, "they put their minds to it and really get into it."

According to Barger, expanding the unit's training to include working in the permanent party shop in bldg. 85 is being considered.

"They could get even more experience in the pay transactions they complete," he said. "In bldg. 85 they would get to work with such things as specialty pay, jump pay, flight pay and medical pay. Instead of doing a large volume of one type of transaction, they would get more of a variety."

Barger emphasized that he has worked with Guard units for 17 years at places like Fort Dix, N.J., and Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and that Company A, 31st Support Battalion is the best he has ever worked with.

SSgt. Seth R. Knox, Fort Benning finance office, helps SFC Barnes K. Golden, a guardsman, with a pay transaction.

Bill Crosson, a staff sergeant with the Guard, completes another separation transaction on a reserve soldier returning to his civilian job.

SFCs Barnes K. Golden (I) and W.H. Hall, both guardsmen, review an action.

Superman II better than first

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Superman II" is one of those rare movies that excels and is better than the original. "Superman I," starring Christopher Reeve as Superman and Margot Kidder as Lois Lane, is a well-told story with thrills, excitement and fun for the whole family.

Superman is shown more as we all know him from the TV program and in comic books. Character-

'World's largest yard sale'

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Columbus Square Mall will hold the "World's Largest Yard Sale" on Oct. 10 and 11. Reservations are now being taken for this open air sale held in the back parking lot of the mall. This event is open to individuals, civic clubs and organizations. You may sell any genuine garage or yard sale type merchandise. No food or drinks of any kind will be allowed.

The fee is $15. Call 561-6305 or come by the mall office to make your reservations.

Columbus community concerts

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Columbus Community Concert Association will have five performances for the 1981-82 season.

The concerts are: "The Merry Widow" on Nov. 5, New York Vocal Art Ensemble on Dec. 9, "Dear Mr. Ziegfeld" on Jan. 18, the Eastern Brass Quintet on March 1, and pianist Leonard Pennario on April 19. All performances will be held at the Three Arts Theatre at 8 p.m.

Prices for the concert series are (reserved section) — adults $25, students $12.50 and *family $62.50; (general) - adults $18, students $9 and *family $45.

*Family includes two adults and all students living at home.

Membership is open to the public. Tickets are available today and tomorrow. For more information call Evelyn Crowley at 323-6074 or Marlene Jorgensen at 687-6224.

Art exhibit

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Fine Arts Department at the W.C. Bradley Memorial Library will host two art exhibits this month.

Antique dolls from the Chattahoochee Valley of Dolls Club can be seen throughout the library. The display consists of a very large variety of china, rag and specialized dolls.

Sidney Wilson, coordinator of the Fine Arts Cultural program in the Muscogee School System, is exhibiting a retrospective of her oil and watercolor art works.

Wilson's style demonstrates a skillful blend of modern art styles.

For more information call the library at 327-0211.

ter development of both Superman and his alter ego Clark Kent is more sharply defined than it was in "Superman I" as I'll refer to it here. The relationship between Lois Lane and Superman is developed much more. In one scene Lois and Superman are seen in bed together, and you aren't going to see that in comic books. "Superman II" quite simply was not stuck telling the story of how Superman got to Earth which most of us knew anyway.

Once again the Earth is in peril and it's up to Superman to take care of the three arch criminals from his home planet of Krypton who are freed by an atomic blast in space. They are also endowed with the same powers as our hero. Just how does he defeat them? Watch the movie and see.

The special effects of Superman's flying, plus the aerial battle in the neon signs over Times Square, is superior and will delight the younger family members. There are a few small problems with the story but they don't detract from the story with but one exception. Superman gives up his powers for Lois. How does he get them back? This wasn't explained and the audience is left to guess.

It is an excellent movie and one that you and the family can have a "super" time seeing. I give "Superman II" four stars. * * * *

'Year of Progress' theme in '82

By Don Rhodes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fiscal year 1982 at Fort Benning has been given the theme "Year of Progress" by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, the post commander.

In announcing the theme, Gen. Wetzel said he thinks "Fort Benning has a lot of good things happening that we don't really take time to put down on paper." He said that "when it's not put down on paper it's hard to look back and see what has been accomplished."

"When we do a program like this year of progress, when we actually do document the innovations or the new developments; the construction or the new ways of doing things, new programs for instance or new training, it's amazing what we can look back and see," he said.

Gen. Wetzel explained that during FY 82 a cumulative list of the progress made here will be kept. The list, he said is "to provide feedback to our employees, our military personnel and their family members as to just how well we are doing."

Gen. Wetzel said, "Information concerning unique ways of doing things, ways to improve Fort Benning and contribute to the overall mission of developing the world's finest infantryman needs to be shared."

He said, "The list is not just an in-house or internal evidence of progress but it's also to keep people outside of Fort Benning informed of our progress."

A letter was recently distributed to each activity on post encouraging the activities to report each item of progress to the Chief of Staff.

The general said that this list of items will include obvious things like new ranges or ground breakings as well as the less visible marks of progress such as the new employee of the month program beginning in October, the women's advisory council that held its first meeting Monday, and facilities improvement projects.

Community issues topic of first meeting

People involved in the Fort Benning community, military or civilian, whether they live here or work here, face the same issues as people in any community.

They have questions ranging from those concerning living conditions, transportation services, recreational and educational opportunities to those involving services provided by the commissary, the post exchange or other stores.

To help identify and answer such questions, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel formed the Women's Advisory Council. According to Gen. Wetzel, he has had great success with the same type of program in the past.

Women from all segments of the post's population were present at the first meeting of the council Monday. Those present included wives of Benning's commanders, who make up the steering committee, representatives from each major unit on post, community representatives such as the mayor of Custer Terrace, post school representatives, members of different clubs including the Officer's Wives and NCO Wives Clubs, and members of the Red Cross, Army Community Service and Equal Opportunity.

Also present were the post exchange and commissary managers along with representatives from some of the post's staff sections, such as the Directorate of Industrial Operations.

Post exchange facilities and the commissary were major topics of discussion from which Gen. Wetzel recorded comments and suggestions on a large sheet of paper in front of the council. Comments included high prices, adding merchandise not presently stocked or deleting unneeded merchandise, changing hours to better meet people's needs and long waiting lines.

After lists were compiled, the PX manager and commissary manager took turns going through the list before the council. At this time, problems were

Need fire drills to avoid tragedy

By James Floyd
Chief, Fire Prevention

Fires in the home do more than destroy property, they can destroy lives and sometimes entire families. This is an easily avoided tragedy; avoided if the family knows how to get out of the house quickly and automatically should a fire strike.

It is important that you carefully tell your family that this is not play-acting. The compliance with this guidance to the letter will determine whether you and your family will survive the fire.

Very few people die from flame. Most deaths result from asphyxiation caused by oxygen depletion, super heated gases and smoke. Fire requires oxygen, so does the human. The first affected organs are the lungs. Heated gases and smoke sear and block the smaller blood vessels in the lungs that carry oxygen to the vital organs, thus reducing the oxygen flow to the brain. The lack of oxygen reduces normal reflexes and the thinking ability, causes unconsciousness and finally death.

Remember that heated gases and smoke rise. Keep close to the floor and protect your mouth and nostrils with a wet cloth to filter the smoke and gases.

It is important for every family to have a prearranged meeting place. Many parents have perished by running into the house to rescue children who were not there. Once out of the burning building, go directly to an area you have pre-selected. Here persons may be accounted for quickly and accurately. Arriving firefighters can be advised of any missing persons and where they normally may be found.

Another important rule is to close the bedroom doors before retiring. It is important to have a barricade between you and fire. At nighttime this barricade is the bedroom door. It keeps both flame, deadly fumes and smoke away from you.

Teach your children to stay inside their rooms if they hear you shout to them that there is a fire. If they suspect fire and haven't heard you shout, they should stay inside, shout to you and follow these rules:

- Go to the door, do not open it, and touch it with your hand. If it is hot, go over to the window and carefully open it. Sit down beside the open window and scream for help. Stay there shouting until someone answers or comes to help you. With the door closed and while breathing cool, fresh air, you are reasonably safe until help comes.
- Be certain that your children can open the window. It may be necessary to break the window with a chair, stool, toy or some other item.

• When you give the children these instructions, do so from inside their bedrooms. Make sure they understand that this is not a game, but something even more serious than the fire drills at school.

• Of the greatest importance is practice. Conduct a family drill periodically. Discuss the mistakes or make improvement changes.

• Another good rule: If you are able to use your stairway or stairs to get out, impress everyone with the necessity of closing doors behind them. This will bottle up the blaze in the room of origin, at least for the time required to evacuate the building. In other rooms, it will cut down the draft which would otherwise fan the fire to spread throughout the house.

- Never waste time trying to dress.
- Never waste time trying to save material goods or pets.
- Never waste time trying to use the telephone (depend on the use of a neighbor's phone for summoning the fire department).
- Never attempt to extinguish a fire of any size yourself. Leave it for the professionals. A common garden hose with water applied from the exterior, through a window or door, can help confine the fire or protect exposures.

Firefighters risk lives for community

By Joseph C. Alford
Fort Benning Fire Chief

During our observation of Fire Prevention Week, Sunday through Oct. 10, I want to pay tribute to an important group of unsung heroes, the firefighters of Fort Benning.

As men and women of the military and civilian population, we understand and share many of the same challenges and risks faced by our firefighters. We share a similar purpose, for each of us is trained to accomplish a mission.

However, the firefighters' job is different from other jobs. Most of the people living and working here, from clerks to MPs, from soldiers to civilians, know they can return home after a day of hard work the same way they left, on their feet.

Firefighters are never sure. When a firefighter kisses his wife and children when he leaves for work the family makes a conscious wish that he will return to them. His wife hopes she will not have to make fast, desperate arrangements for a babysitter so she can visit him in the hospital. Each time there is a knock at the door she hopes that the fire chief, chaplain or other official will not be there to say kind words about how good a firefighter he was and how brave and dedicated he had been.

Last night while you and your family slept a firefighter stood a lonely watch. Silent alarm bells, dim lights and a quiet telephone were his only companions as he waited for the alarm to sound. Had the alarm sounded, firefighters only a few feet away would have immediately gone into action, prepared to risk their lives for you and your property.

They are so reliable that we take them for granted. If you pick up your phone you may or may not get a dial tone. If you get on a bus you may or may not get stuck in a traffic jam. The electric wall outlet may or may not have current. But you know the firefighters and their trucks will come when you dial 117.

We count on them to risk their lives for us. We count on them to put out a small trash fire at two o'clock in the morning. We entrust our lives and our children's lives to them.

This week we should let them know they can count on us to recognize the importance of year round fire prevention and that we will do all we can to prevent death, damage and destruction by fire in the upcoming year.

'Dream sheets' to be computerized

WASHINGTON — "Dream sheets" for officers managed by the officer personnel management directorate will soon be stored in the Army's computerized officer master file (OMF), announced military personnel center (MILPERCEN) officials recently.

The new career management tool will aid the Army when making assignment choices for its commissioned and warrant officers. Once the preference data is loaded into the OMF, assignment officers will be able to automatically compare officers' preferences with Army requirements.

Officials say assignment officers now routinely review paper copies of officer preference statements when deciding career moves for officers. However, the lack of an automated interface between the preference statement and other management tools has hampered the decision-making process.

The automated data will allow for the storage of three CONUS preferences, two overseas long tour preferences, one overseas short tour preference, three duty preferences, and the date of the last preference. Volunteer status for overseas areas can also be stored.

Although the capability for storing the data becomes available in October, the Army won't begin feeding the information into the OMF until January. This will allow officers time to review their current preference statements and submit updated ones, if necessary, before Dec. 1.

"Dream sheets" may be updated whenever an officer so desires; however, guidelines in AR 614-100 encourage updating preference statements:

—about 12 months before completing an overseas tour, —about one year after reporting to a CONUS station, and —within 60 days of beginning a course at a CONUS service school during a permanent change of station move, a civilian school, or training with industry.

As part of the new automated process, the Army is also studying the feasibility of applying source data automation to the preference process. This could involve the development of a mark sense preference form with room for narrative comment for inclusion in the career management file. The form may be field-tested during next spring. (ARNews)

NBC training useful for students

Story and photos by Tony Adams
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

"The Soviets are better trained in nuclear, biological and chemical warfare, but with courses like we have here, we're catching up," commented Lt. Gerald Sharpless, Company D, 7th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, a student in the two-week NBC course given here.

The course, which consists of 80 hours of training, is conducted by the NBC Branch, Plans & Operations Division (DPT). At one time, small emphasis was placed on NBC training, but with today's possible threat, more training has been put into the program. "I thoroughly enjoyed the course," said Sharpless. "We learned a lot even though it was very fast paced. Everything we learned here we'll have a definite use for in the future."

And learn the students did. After completing the two-week course, the students had to pass a performance exam. The exam consisted of eight hands-on training situations. They were: (1) chemical detection, (2) the use of decontamination equipment, (3) individual decontamination procedures, (4) determining a radiological dose rate, (5) charging and reading a dosimeter, (6) operating and servicing an automatic alarm system, (7) preparing an observers report, (8) and preparing a detailed fallout prediction report. This is certainly a lot to digest in a two-week period. "If you don't take notes," said Sgt. Mike Rank, "there's no way you can pass."

Sgt. Mike Rank checks the seal on his protective mask.

According to Rank, the hardest portion of the training was using the automatic alarm system because of its sensitivity. "You have to be very careful when using it. But I thought it was a good course. It's an ever-changing field. I learned a lot from the instructors."

Perhaps the effectiveness of the course is spotlighted by the fact that the five instructors all did well on their recent SQT's. Their scores were: SSgt. Jeffrey McWilliams (97), SSgt. Stewart Olson (100), SSgt. James Johnson (87), SSgt. Kent Kroese (97) and Sgt. Derrick Johnson (91).

Commented one student on the course, "We don't take this course lightly. We know that someday we may be using our knowledge to its fullest extent."

PFC Luis Rodriguez and Pvt. Debra Lovelace employ the automatic chemical agent alarm.

Korea's first liaison here

By Betty Zimmerman

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Several allied nations send liaison officers to the United States Army Infantry School here to study, compare and exchange information relevant to training doctrine.

The latest country to adopt this plan is the Republic of Korea (ROK), and Lt. Col. Young Ha Choi is their first liaison officer here.

He is one of three ROK Army officers serving tours in the United States as liaison officers. A colonel is stationed at Headquarters, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va., and another lieutenant colonel is at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Their purpose is to enhance the mutual understanding between the armies of the two countries. They are expected to acquire first-hand knowledge of the U.S. Army's infantry organization, training, training methods, tactical concepts and doctrine. They compare methods and seek ways to improve each country's capabilities. They also make suggestions whenever applicable. The ROK has been associated with the U.S. Army for nearly 30 years.

Choi was commissioned in 1966 as a graduate of the Korean Military Academy. He served in Vietnam as a platoon commander and then up the ladder in progressively more responsible positions. His latest assignment was as deputy secretary of the combined staff in ROK-US Combined Forces Command.

He has been on the job here since July and spends most of his time reading — field manuals, training manuals, skill qualification manuals, training doctrines, and anything else that will give him the complete picture of the Infantry School's scope. He also audits Infantry Officer Advanced Course classes to ascertain the Korean student's capabilities to learn, retain and use the programmed criteria. As time permits, he hopes to visit other branch schools as well.

Choi's family, including his wife, his mother and two daughters, have accompanied him on his first stateside tour that will last for two years.

Savings instead of credit cards

DALLAS — A recent survey conducted by Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) officials revealed that most customers were willing to give up their credit cards for lower gasoline prices. The result will mean not less than 2 cents a gallon savings for customers at AAFES service stations in the United States when credit card service is terminated.

The survey, which was conducted at 66 of the 165 installations served by AAFES, indicated that only 32 percent of AAFES customers used credit cards for purchases at service stations. Tests have shown where credit card service was eliminated and prices reduced, sales increased.

By eliminating the necessity for credit cards, AAFES was able, for the first time, to include many independent refiners and suppliers in its solicitation for new contracts on gasoline. More than 75 firms received solicitations during the negotiations conducted earlier this year. The resultant contracts benefit all AAFES gasoline purchasers with lower prices at the pump.

While prices vary by location, customers will see from two to four cents price reductions per gallon when the contracts go into effect in September and October.

Medic wins Soldier of Year award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

After several competitions, a 20-year-old Army medical specialist was named Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year.

Sp4 Ronald Eller, a member of the 546th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion, had the honor of winning the prestigious award. Last Thursday, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, pinned an Army Commendation Medal on Eller, in front of his wife, Doris, their son, Ron III, and some of the higher ranking officers on post.

Maj. Gen. Wetzel, noted that Eller, "out of 25,000 active duty soldiers at Fort Benning, is most special because what he has done."

Eller, said about his accomplishments, "This is the proudest moment of my military career. Some two-and-a-half years ago when I joined the Army to serve my country, I had no idea that I would achieve such a distinguished honor."

His wife said, "I thought it was great he won. I had no doubt in my mind that he would win. So it wasn't a shock to me."

Eller and his wife will be going to Hawaii, toward the beginning of the year. "It will be a nice time for my wife and I to relax and get away from it all," said Eller.

For being named Fort Benning's "Soldier of the Year" Eller has received along with the trip to Hawaii, $225 for expenses, an Army Commendation Medal, a four-day pass, an infantryman statue (from the Sergeants Major Association), $100 (from the Ledger-Enquirer newspapers), a trip to the AUSA Convention this month, six months exemption from the duty roster, a set of dress blues from the Association of the United States Army's "Follow Me" Chapter.

Eller is an emergency medical technician with the 546th. "I always carry a first aid kit in my car. I feel everyone should have one. Anyone can apply a pressure dressing to help prevent shock. These are things, all soldiers are taught in the military, which could be beneficial in saving someone's life.

Eller plans on making the Army a career and is applying for the Physician Assistant course to become a warrant officer.

Maj. Gen. Wetzel presents Sp.4 Ronald Eller his award.

explained and ideas were brought up to alleviate them.

Gen. Wetzel then asked representatives present to talk about their unit or organization and problems they had, if any. All comments and suggestions were recorded during the meeting so they could be looked into for possible action.

After one representative brought up the subject of sexual harassment, Gen. Wetzel emphatically stressed that he would not tolerate any form of sexual harassment here.

Other discussions centered on living conditions in some barracks, mess hall food and lack of activities for teenagers on post.

The next Women's Advisory Council meeting is scheduled for Oct. 29 at which time topics of discussion and actions resulting from this first meeting will be reviewed and new topics presented.

Reservists reinforce active military

By Robert C. Hairston

108th Training Division

The success of an infantry unit in combat hinges on how well the individual soldier has been trained. To help meet this training requirement reservists from the 108th Division Training Command took over the responsibility of instructing initial entry soldiers as part of their two-weeks annual training here.

"Our main purpose for being here is to strengthen our teaching ability as instructors and to refamiliarize ourselves with the active Army environment," according to Col. Robert R. Jeter, commander of the Training Command.

The 108th Training Command Headquarters is located in Columbia, S.C. and is part of the 108th Division (Trng) which is headquartered in Charlotte, N.C. The division is commanded by Maj. Gen. Berlyn K. Sutton.

Training Command is composed of more than 500 instructors who teach either infantry, TOW and Dragon, 81mm or 107mm skills. The unit is comparable to Fort Benning's Infantry Training Group.

According to Maj. Michael C. Jordan, S-3 for Training Command, the unit's mission is taken seriously.

"We have been training for 11 Bravo (infantry) skills all year long," he said. "We actually rehearse for annual training two to three months during monthly drill meetings prior to arriving here.

"I think our instructors do a professional job and would be an effective force in the areas of training if mobilized," commented Jordan when asked about the calibre of instructors in Training Command.

During the two weeks here, members of the Training Command will be satelliting with the Infantry Training Group. "Our mission is to support One Station Unit Training (OSUT)," Jeter said. "Our instructors actually go out and take over the jobs of the active Army instructors and teach infantry tactics and weapons skills," he continued.

Jeter went on to explain the make-up of Training Command. "We are broken down into five committees. Our General Subjects Committee deals with areas such as first-aid and map reading. The second committee — Tactics Basic — covers individual and squad tactics.

Tactics Special deals with methods of patrolling and the different types of armored vehicles. Our last two committees are responsible for weapons such as the M-60 and the 50 caliber machine guns and the M-16A1 rifle," he finished.

While here, Training Command's activities will also include qualification with the M-16A1 rifle, hands on training for individual Skill Qualification Test (SQT), and a mandatory four-mile road march. The unit will be returning to its home base Saturday.

Off limit postings will be enforced

As a safeguard to the health and welfare of Armed Forces personnel, Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Boards (AFDCB) are established wherever military are present in significant numbers. AFDCB are responsible for monitoring commercial establishments to identify those involved in illicit activities or questionable business practices and initiating action to resolve the problems identified. When this cannot be accomplished through direct coordination with the particular commercial establishment, the AFDCB may recommend the responsible commanding general place the establishment off limits.

The term "off limits," when identified with an area, establishment, business, bar, lounge or firm, means that military personnel are prohibited from visiting or patronizing that facility by direction of the commander. Listings of off limits establishments are routinely published in the BENNING BULLETIN and as a supplement to

AR 190-24, a copy of which is required to be posted on every unit bulletin board. Despite this publicity, military police surveillance activities indicate widespread noncompliance with the off limits policy.

In order for the off limits policy to be an effective tool for insuring the health and welfare of military personnel, your cooperation is required. The military police are launching an active campaign to enforce the off limits restrictions which have been imposed on local establishments. Identification of violators will be accomplished in coordination with civilian law enforcement agents. Military personnel found in violation of an off limits sanction are subject to being charged under Article 92 of the UCMJ for failure to obey a lawful general regulation.

For your convenience and information, the off limits establishments in the Columbus area are listed below.

Civilian awards presentations held

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The first Monthly Employees Civilian Awards presentation was held last Thursday at the NCO Club.

Col. Bobby J. Harris, Fort Benning's Chief of Staff, opened the awards presentation saying, "I am very pleased to join everyone here today. This kick-off luncheon is proclaimed 'Year of Progress — Make It Happen' . . . Soldiers and civilians working together."

The audience watched a video tape of Mr. Bill Curry, head football coach for Georgia Tech, giving a speech for the CIF kick-off. In his speech, Curry talked on how teamwork and motivation is important. "In the huddle or when you are throwing a pass you have to follow the person next to you to succeed."

Col. Harris commented, "The points he made we can use for any goal or cause to progress."

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel and Maxiene Wing, suggestion program coordinator for the Civilian Personnel Office, handed out awards to the civilian employees for Quality Step Increases, Sustained Superior Performance and Length of Service Awards.

Afterward, Gen. Wetzel commented, "This is the first of many. I would like to compliment you for your loyal and dedicated service to our country."

Gen. Wetzel pinned a 50-year civil service pin on Mr. Jose Fantauzzi, the post's commissary officer.

"I'd like to thank Mr. Fantauzzi," continued Gen. Wetzel. "He started out as an infantryman the same year I was born. I'd like to recognize him as part of the team. I asked Mr. Fantauzzi, how do you stay so young? He commented, 'I eat lots of honey, vitamins and put witchhazel on my face.'"

Gen. Wetzel exclaimed, "Fifty years is a fantastic accomplishment."

He ended his speech with, "I'd like to thank the employees and their families who have supported them through the years. Sincere congratulations to the civilian awardees."

"I thought it was real nice. I really enjoyed the speech the general gave on togetherness and what Bill Curry said about teamwork. It (the award presentation) will be a real incentive for the whole post," said Tommy Holston, construction general maintenance supervisor for Directorate of Facilities Engineers.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel congratulates Mr. Jose Fantauzzi, commissary officer, for 50 years of service.

"Gen. Wetzel began the new civilian award luncheon making personal contact with all the employees and personally recognized them," mentioned Wing.

She went on to say, "I think it is a good thing. They will think they are more appreciated and part of the team."

Fantauzzi commented, "I think it was wonderful. It was a great honor to be presented an award by the commanding general and to have so many friends at the luncheon here to watch. It is a beautiful way to present the people with awards."

"I feel this is an excellent program because of the personal involvement by Gen. Wetzel. It will enhance employees' morale and bring more of a feeling of togetherness by the total workforce," said Sidney Watson, incentive award presentation administrator for the Civilian Personnel Office.

The Civilian Personnel Office will host the next program at the Main NCO Club Oct. 29 at 11:30 a.m. In November, various organizations will host the program.

"The 'civilian employee of the month' is still in the planning stages. The award will be given at the Oct. 29 luncheon at the NCO Club," said Watson.

The awardees were: Sustained Superior Performance — Gloria L. Hughley, MEDDAC. Quality Step

Increase — Dorothy M. Barnes, MEDDAC. Length of Service Award, thirty-five years — Roberto Almdares, USACC; Elbert Arrowood, DFE; Robert Barbrow, DIO; Johnnie O. Former OCS graduates observe a squad of soldiers after a demonstration at Red Cloud Range.

Former graduates visit OCS celebrates birthday

The second annual Officer Candidate School (OCS) Commemoration Day celebration held here Saturday drew 129 former graduates from as far away as California and Fort Worth, Texas.

The event, which marked the 40th anniversary of the school, was held to heighten the feeling of pride in OCS among officer candidates by focusing on the heritage they are joining. It also gave former graduates an opportunity to renew friendships and make new acquaintances.

The day's activities included a tour and briefing of the infantry training brigades (ITB) and a live-fire demonstration. The visitors also toured the OCS area and the Infantry Museum — an opportunity to observe officer candidate training and to see some of the Army's newest equipment.

James B. Haisten, who graduated from OCS in 1952 then served with the 179th Infantry Division in Korea, said that the day "made him feel better about today's Army than what the media sometimes presents."

"There was a pretty clean-cut bunch of recruits out there," commented Haisten, "and it looks like the cadre are doing a good job." He added that he liked the ITB presentation and the live-fire demonstration the best.

Highlighting the day was a formal dinner at the Officers Club at which Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. gave the keynote address. Secretary Marsh is an OCS graduate and a member of the OCS Hall of Fame.

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. (l) is greeted by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Sam Wetzel.

Civilian soldiers accept challenge

108th Division Training Command

Making the transition from civilian life to the military way of doing things pits the reservists against a number of challenges.

Thanks to the S-4 Section of the 108th Training Command all the basics necessary for survival during their two weeks of annual training were provided.

According to Maj. Nick Milasnovich, OIC of the S-4 Shop, the job of moving more than 393 division people and equipment from 108th Division Training Command units from Charlotte, N.C. and Columbia, S.C. was accomplished through the teamwork of the S-4 Section.

"We do a lot of preplanning", he said. "The vehicles that we use had to be obtained from three different sources. Some came from as far away as the 120th Army Command (ARCOM) in Fort Jackson to Atlanta's Fort Gillam. We also acquisitioned some vehicles from another reserve unit already here.

Moving the people here is only the beginning of the job, however. "While here," Milasnovich continued, "Our operation includes securing equipment necessary to conduct Hands of Component and Job on Site training through resources here.

"We also conduct annual qualification with the M-16A1 Rifle for more than 200 people. This includes drawing weapons from the weapons pool for each soldier, providing them with the ammunition and transportation to go to the range. In addition to that we also had to provide transportation to the airport for a brigade of reserve from the 70th Infantry Division (Trng) who were leaving Saturday."

Sp4 Alvis S. Bethea, balances the books.

Billeting the soldiers also rested on the hands of the S-4. "You have to make sure the billets available equal the number of people we must house," Malasnovich finished.

CWO4 Jay Grist, property book officer and Sgt. Chris Ingersol, make adjustments on the unit property book.

Leadership word badge course

Boy Scouts teach adults to be boys

By Don Rogan

Back to Gil-All, happy land; I'm going to work my ticket if I can. With the chorus echoing off the hills of Camp Callaway, some 25 or so adults move to training in the Boy Scouts of America Adult Leadership Wood Badge Course. The course is designed to more effectively train quality leadership for the Boy Scout program.

Starting with the smallest element of Boy Scout Troop, the boy himself, the Wood Badge Course begins with each adult being placed into a patrol. Those things a new troop would do to "get organized" had to happen for the adults. After being placed in a patrol, we had to elect our patrol leader, move to our patrol site, set up camp, organize the details and duties, cook, wash dishes, chop wood, and so on. All the things the boys would do we did.

Management plays a big part in the Wood Badge Course as well as the outdoor skills already mentioned. Oh yes, there is a daily inspection. The goal—do better each time you are inspected based on a score chosen by the patrol leader (who changes every day). All information is passed on by the scout chain of command — scoutmaster, senior patrol leader, patrol leader, scout and back — two-way communication; when have I heard that before?

Phil Richards, the staff assistant scoutmaster for the course, summed it up when he said, "To be a good Boy Scout leader, you must be able to see and think as a boy. If you can do this, you can be a good leader."

The rest of the staff not only echoed his comments but acted it out. They showed up for a reveille formation totally unorganized (some of us think that's normal for most of them). Learn for example — a point often mentioned and demonstrated.

The staff has a wide and varied background in scouting and all have previously completed the Wood Badge Course. The students were varied also; military, students, scouting professionals, and others.

Two weekends down, one to go. On the last weekend we submit our ticket, which is basically a contract for accomplishments during the application phase of the Wood Badge experience. In other words, what we will do when we get back to our scout job to improve scouting.

When we finish the course and complete our ticket, we'll be awarded the coveted Wood Badge, a leather card with two chips of wood. This will tell other scouts, we've done it. For someone who has been out of scouting for almost 30 years, the course design will truly help me recall or relearn the necessary skills and tools I'll need to better assist the troop scoutmaster.

Maj. Don Rogan is currently assigned as the deputy commander, the School Brigade. he serves as the Committee Chairman, Boy Scout Troop 27. For more information on the Boy Scout Program, call him at 687-6034 evenings or stop by Troop 27 Scout Hut located near Russ Pond Monday evenings from 7-8:30.

"TRULY, TRULY, I SAY TO YOU, HE WHO HEARS MY WORD, AND BELIEVES HIM WHO SENT ME, HAS ETERNAL LIFE."

Aggressors add spice to road marches

Story and photos by Raymond Cauthen
197th Public Affairs Office

Marching 12 miles with full field gear through the heat and woods of Fort Benning is usually not a relished event. The miles linger on and the march becomes tiring and monotonous.

However, road marches have taken on a new look these days, at least for Company A, 197th Support Battalion, anyway.

"Enticements have been added to the marches to keep the soldiers aware of their surroundings and the events going on around them," said company commander, Capt. Karl Bombaugh. "These enticements are aggressors who fire upon the soldiers with machine guns and throw CS gas and smoke grenades."

Aggressors spent the day and night before the road march Monday, planning when and where to ambush the company. The first ambush went well for the aggressors as they captured the company guidon. "It was fairly easy to capture the guidon because the guidon bearer was so far from the rest of the company," said aggressor Sp4 Clifford Anderson.

As the march went on, the company struck a blow of their own when they captured one of the five aggressors.

"The main objective behind the road march with aggressors is two-fold," said Bombaugh. "The 12 miles is a post requirement, and the rest is taking advantage of training opportunity. We (the company) combine excitement with our training to give a realistic effect to the marches."

Although the extra training given during the marches helps the soldiers to better understand tactical situations, there is still room for improvement, according to Bombaugh. "If the Army could somehow arrange for administration companies to use the MILES equipment for training, the Army would be taking a great leap forward in training," Bombaugh added.

It is widely agreed upon by the soldiers of Alpha Company that, although the road marches are not a picnic, the soldiers are now getting much more out of them since the aggressors are being used.

Sp4 Cliff Anderson fires an M60 machine gun.

ITG soldier

Soldiers and their families of the Infantry Training Group (ITG) celebrated their sixth Organization Day Saturday with a day filled with activities at the ITG picnic area.

The day began with the 283rd Army Combo Band called "Crosswind" playing top 40 songs. All day children were given rides inside an Armor Personnel Carrier and they had a chance to get up on a tank and walk inside one. One person commenting on the picnic said, "It's an alright place. The area is 12 miles away from everything and I like to get out and meet everyone. The band is really outrageous. I was really surprised that they are so talented. This is the time to enjoy yourself and forget about work."

In the first sergeant Chariot race, soldiers from each of the companies pushed a first sergeant in a quarter-ton truck trailer around an oval obstacle course full of ditches and hills. Pushing the trailer up the hill was the real test to see who was going to win. Company A won with a time of 2:14, Company B 2:47, Company C 2:59 and Headquarters Company 3:23.

In other events, the winners were broken down into companies: Tug-of-War-Charlie, M16 Assembly/Disassembly Relay Race-Alpha, Tire Rotation Relay Race-Charlie, and Pie Eating-Alpha.

Headquarters Company's team tries to push 1st. Sgt. Columbus Merriweather's chariot out of a ditch during the first sergeants' chariot race.

In the sack race competition, children hop along the field trying to go as fast as they can to win.

Sp4 Philip McCoy and PFC Mike Walker from Headquarters Company, prepare hamburgers and hot dogs for the Infantry Training Group Organization Day picnic.

Nine-year-old Delmar Abmos, son of SFC Freddie and Ann Abmos, throws a softball at the dunking booth to knock Capt. Richard Schnar, commander of Headquarters Company, into the water.

s and families celebrate birth

One of the winners from the husband and wife check race were 2nd Lt. Robert and Patricia Smith.

He responded that, "It was real nice for everyone to get together and let out their frustrations. The only time we get together is on special occasions. The picnic is great to socialize. It gives me an opportunity to meet the families and get to know them better."

In the children's sack race the winners were: Freddie Colon, Sidney Hodge, Tyrone Brooks and Chris and Tim Filbert.

The day ended with a greased rope climbing contest. This contest proved who was strong enough to get a good grip and make it to the top. The winners were: PFC Edward Pickney, PFC Wilfredo Torres and Sp4 Wayne Snow, all from Headquarters Company; Sp4 Dennison Miller, Sp4 Anthony Sparo, from Company B; and PFC Therman Barnes and PFC Timothy Shea from Company C.

"I really enjoyed it. I have been out here for three years and this is the best one I have ever seen. There are a lot more events and activities. The tug-of-war is the event I liked, because of the action and the suspense of who was going to fall in," said Carol Tullis, civilian SIDPERS clerk for S-1 ITG.

The Infantry Training Group, formerly known as The Committee Group, was activated in September 1975. The group was attached to the 1st Advanced Infantry Training Brigade on Jan. 7, 1976. The Advanced Infantry Training Brigade was phased out in 1976, when it was renamed The 1st Infantry Training Brigade. The 1st ITB was responsible for teaching One Station and Two Station Initial Entry Soldiers bearing the Infantry MOS skill identifier.

On July 22, 1978, Committee Group was separated from the Infantry Training Brigade and it was redesignated as Committee Group, USAIC, becoming a major subordinate command under the Infantry Center.

The Committee Group was renamed in October 1980 to the Infantry Training Group.

According to SFC James Johnson, operations sergeant for S-3, "Basically ITG is responsible for training all Infantry Training Brigade soldiers under One Station Unit Training (OSUT). We teach all instruction for soldiers to obtain an MOS in infantry, mortar and Tubular Launched Optically Tracked Wire guided missile (TOW).

ITG is made up of four companies. Headquarters Company is administrative, Company A teaches all general and tactical training, Company B teaches special weapons and Company C is responsible for basic advanced rifle marksmanship and machine-gun training.

"All the tactical training the infantry training brigade soldiers receive is taught in the classroom, and the practical exercises are taught in the field," mentioned Johnson.

The Company C team celebrates its victory by throwing Capt. Remo Butler, company commander, and SFC William Washington into the water.

Try as he may, PFC Kenneth Andrade, from Company C, doesn't make it all the way to the top in the grease rope competition.

Sgt. Gene Ayala, from Company B, races against the clock to try to win the pie eating contest.

PFC Edward Pickney, from Headquarters Company, makes it to the top in the grease rope competition.

Post construction alive and well

Story and photos by Bill Walton
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Engineer construction projects are alive and well at Fort Benning.

The armored battalion tactical equipment shop at Kelley Hill is complete and awaiting occupancy. The grand opening of the engineer tactical vehicle shop on Dixie Road is expected at the end of this month, the small arms repair and storage facility is scheduled for completion in October 1982 and the new troop barracks in the Sand Hill area is expected to be ready for occupancy next May.

The armored battalion tactical equipment shop is one of the most modern tactical vehicle shops anywhere in the Army. It cost $2.7 million to build, encompasses 24,600 square feet and is the first solar energy project on the post. A solar panel on the roof will heat the water that the occupants will use for washing their hands.

Mr. Jim Carmody, chief of the master planning office, Directorate of Facilities Engineers, said, "This shop is the 'cadillac' of tactical vehicle shops and something that Fort Benning can be very proud of." The 2/69th Armored Battalion, 197th Infantry Brigade, is scheduled to move into this new facility in the near future.

The engineer tactical vehicle shop will permit consolidation at one point of all maintenance for the tactical vehicles of the 43rd Engineer Battalion. The unit presently stores and maintains its vehicles in two widely separated motor pools. The $4.3 million shop is scheduled for its grand opening the latter part of October.

51,280 square foot large small arms repair and storage facility. When this facility, at an estimated cost of $3 million, is completed in October 1982, it will provide repair and storage space for small arms and crew served weapons at Fort Benning.

The new battalion-size barracks in Sand Hill is 88 percent complete. It is the fifth barracks of a total of nine to be built. The cost, since the first barracks was started some five years ago, has doubled from $7.5 to $15 million. It contains 250,000 square feet of space, including facilities and housing for five companies plus offices for a battalion headquarters.

Workmen fit a section of a preformed wall of the small arms repair and storage facility into place.

Aviator earns safety award

By Kathy Wilkinson
197th Public Affairs Office

A 197th Infantry Brigade aviator earned the Army's Broken Wing Aviation Safety Award for his skill in recovering his aircraft from an inflight malfunction that resulted in an emergency landing.

CWO2 Noel T. Cowart was presented the safety award by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel in ceremonies at brigade headquarters.

Cowart was piloting his OH-58 observation helicopter last June when his chopper developed engine problems.

"There was an explosion from the engine and the helicopter's nose jerked about 30 to 40 degrees," said Cowart. "From the time the engine failed until the time I landed was only about 10 to 12 seconds."

Cowart shut off the fuel flow at the same time he regained control of the helicopter. He transmitted his May Day (emergency) call to the Shelby (Ala.) County Airport. He spotted the area where he would land the chopper — a golf course's green.

"I evacuated the helicopter," said Cowart. "I looked back after I was a safe distance away. When I saw it was okay, I went back and again called the airport and told them I landed safely."

To be eligible for the Broken Wing award, pilots or crewmembers must show individual skill, judgement and techniques in recovering from the emergency situation. Nominations are sent to the Broken Wing Safety Award Committee at Fort Rucker, Ala. where they are evaluated.

197th Infantry Brigade aviators routinely practice emergency procedures, but according to Cowart, practice is different than actually experiencing engine failure.

The 197th Infantry Brigade chef-of-the-quarter contest was won recently by PFC Carl Zeyen of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry.

Each of the seven contestants was judged on overall table appearance, chef's appearance, item flavor and appearance, originality and display.

The contest was judged by Brigade Commander Col. and Mrs. Carmen Cavezza, and Deputy Brigade commander Lt. Col. and Mrs. Douglas Allman. Also on the panel of judges was Debbie Salter from the Georgia Extension Service.

Trophies were awarded to the first, second and third place winners. The second place trophy went to Sp5 John Glover of Company D, 197th Support Battalion While third place was captured by Sp4 Christopher Morgen of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

After the judging, the cooks were praised by the brigade commander.

"There were no losers in this contest," said Col. Cavezza. "All of these tables were done really well."

Contestants in the chef-of-the-quarter competition had to be E-5 or below, and had to prepare the meals on their own time.

The 197th Brigade chef of the quarter winner, PFC Carl Zeyen, has his exhibit looked over carefully by judges Col. Carmen Cavezza, brigade commander, and Debbie Salter of the Georgia Extension Service.

The brothers and sisters of the new infant are the only children allowed on the ward. They must be accompanied by an adult and may visit for 30 minutes during the regular visiting hours. Two children only are allowed at the bedside at any one time.

Happiness is—a summer hayride

Story and photos by Sandra Ellis

Army Community Service

What better way to end the summer than with a hayride? Fort Benning's Special Children's Committee and Freedom for the Handicapped of Columbus, got one together at the Hunt Club recently for the special kids to enjoy.

Provided by the Hunt Club, the hay-filled wagon was driven by SFC (Ret) Lenis Ingram, Hunt Club manager.

Volunteers from Headquarters, Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade; 444th Transportation Company; Headquarters, Infantry

Training Group; the Directorate of Plans and Training and the Hunt Club made sure the ride was fun and safe for all the participants. It was hard to tell who was enjoying the ride more!

Afterward, Freedom for the Handicapped had a picnic with lots of food.

The afternoon's events were coordinated by Sp5 David Fleming from Army Community Service, Myra Mills and Johnny Eason from the Special Children's Committee and Gus Luckett from Freedom for the Handicapped.

Doughboys crush Campbell 57-14

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Doughboy tailback Anthony Hayes was the man of the night as he rushed for four touchdowns during Fort Benning's 57-14 trouncing of the Fort Campbell Eagles Saturday night.

The Doughboys launched a balanced running and passing attack, combined with another solid defensive performance, to give them a 2-1 record for the season.

However, the Eagles got on the scoreboard first following a Doughboy fumble on Benning's own 20-yard line. With 14:41 remaining in the first quarter Norman Covington hit Charles Johnson for a 20 yard touchdown pass.

The Doughboys then came right back with a 57 yard drive, capping it with an Anthony Hayes touchdown from three-yards out. Kicker Renee Garcia converted all but one of Benning's extra points. Following a bad snap by the Eagles on a punt, the Doughboys scored on a 12 yard run by Hayes with 5:39 left in the first quarter.

With only 45 seconds gone in the second quarter, Benning scored their third TD of the night with a two-yard run by Hayes. It seemed as if the Doughboys had nothing but scoring on their minds when they scored a safety after intentional grounding was called on the Eagles. That ended the scoring for the first half with the Doughboys out front 23-7.

Trying to get back into the game, the Eagles' quarterback Covington passed to Delaviasia Hardin for a 41-yard touchdown strike with 10:53 left in the third quarter. Fort Benning then proceeded to march down to the Eagles' 13-yard line when they fumbled the ball. However, defensive tackle Calvin Hill recovered a fumble by the Eagle quarterback in the end zone for the Doughboy's fourth TD. Benning's fifth touchdown came with 4:13 remaining in the third quarter when quarterback Leamon Hall used a double-reverse flea flicker to score a 57 yard touchdown pass to Marvin Jones.

The Doughboys, however, were not through. With 13:05 left in the game, Hall launched a 19-yard TD pass to Elyon Zeigler for their sixth score of the game. The Eagles' only serious "drive" came early in the fourth quarter. However, the defense snuffed out the threat causing a missed field goal. Hayes scored his fourth and final touchdown when he went in from four-yards out with 6:58 remaining in the game.

Late in the game, Hall was replaced by backup quarterback Harry Vaughn. Vaughn then decided he wanted to get into the action when he threw a 38 yard touchdown pass to Zeigler.

Doughboy Head Coach Ralph Santaliz commented that his team played well, but in their upcoming game against Alabama, they will have to cut down on their fumbles and all mental errors.

Santaliz commented on tonight's game with Alabama, "They have depth going for them. We usually stay with them for three quarters, but in the fourth their depth is too much for us. Let's face it, we're playing the number one football program in the country. It's going to be a difficult game. Our players are looking forward to it. As far as how well we'll do. We'll just have to wait until we get out there on the field."

The Doughboy's next game will be against the Alabama Crimson Tide J.V. team tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

YA football proves exciting

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Youth Activities football got into full swing last Saturday at Blue Field as the spectators were treated to six exciting games.

Highlights

In the Grasshopper League, the Seahawks (2-0) defeated the T.C. Raiders (0-1) 36-12. The game was highlighted by a 35 yard punt return for a touchdown by Bryan Sharkey, a 45 yard pass interception for a

TD by Lee Patton, a 38 yard pass reception TD by Sharkey and a 53 yard touchdown run by Shawn Gentry.

The Eagles (2-0) defeated the Raiders (0-2) by a score of 34-20. Offensive standouts for the Eagles were Jay Carpenter and Jack Goode.

In the Termite Division, the Stampeders (2-0) blanked the Falcons (1-1) 20-0. George Bailey scored two touchdowns and Ron O'Neal one in the Stampeders victory. Outstanding defensive players of the game were James Moses, Kevin Bailey, Joe Barron and Rivera Williams.

The Rams (1-1) defeated the Cowboys (0-2) 22-6. The Rams moved the ball almost at will but collected 195 yards in penalties to keep the Cowboys in the game. The game was highlighted by long touchdowns runs by Allen Burgess and Keith Oliphant. Robby Gilstrap, playing at quarterback for the Rams, completed 9 of 11 passes for 95 yards.

In the Junior Division, the Chargers (2-0) squeaked by the Panthers (0-2) 8-0. The Chargers only touchdown was scored by Todd Gonzales in the first quarter. It was an outstanding defensive game by both teams.

Fall soccer season starts

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

The Fall Soccer League of Youth Activities kicked off its season Saturday morning with opening ceremonies at Gordon Field.

Saturday's games marked the first time youth soccer has been conducted on post in the Fall.

Directing the ceremonies was Martha Duncan, Youth Activities Sports Director. Guest speaker was Col. Robert S. Simpson, Fall Soccer League Commissioner. Col. Simpson reminded the players and their families that the goal of the youth soccer league was to develop skills, instill the spirit of teamwork in the youngsters and most of all, have fun.

Pvt. Lee Austin, Company A, 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, has been fascinated with bodybuilding for years.

Infantry training soldier sports heavy hobby

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Ever since he was a kid Lee Austin has been fascinated with comic books. But it wasn't the funnies inside them that intrigued him as much as advertisements.

"You too can have the body of Mr. Universe or Mr. America. Charles Atlas shows you how. Enter the world of bodybuilding."

Austin, an 18-year-old in his 10th week of infantry training with Company A, 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade is also a bodybuilder.

"Ever since I was 10 years old I've been fascinated with strength through bodybuilding," said Austin. I started out with power lifting to see how much I could lift. I did bench presses well by the time I was in the 10th grade. My goal is to become Mr. Universe and have my own gym."

While in the Army, Austin hopes to someday get into the special services branch of the military where he can teach people the art of bodybuilding. "Besides making a person feel good about their body, and adding strength, bodybuilding keeps people from bad habits like smoking and drinking beams a smiling Austin. Exercises become easier and maxing a physical training test not all that hard. I can run two miles in under 13 minutes and do 100 pushups in a minute and 45 seconds."

Austin has already been recognized as an amateur bodybuilder which he hopes one day will turn professional. Last Saturday he won the Mr. Teenage Northern Florida title. Austin, at 165 pounds and 5 feet 8 inches in height entered the short class of free style bodybuilders. However, he competed in both the small and tall classes and won the title. He won the most muscular teenage bodybuilder, best chest, best arms and named best overall in competition.

He doesn't let all that strength go to his head," said drill corporal Ferdinand Rodriguez, who accompanied Austin to Florida for the contest. "He has a lot of self discipline for his age, and is very modest about his strength. He doesn't go around telling everyone how strong he is. Many times he's embarrassed if someone makes too much of it."

Austin comes from Thomasville, Ga., where earlier this year he was named Mr. Teenage Thomasville. The Georgia native can bench press 405, lift 525 pounds with his legs, and 505 pounds dead lift, using the lower part of his body.

Austin works out as often as he can, even while going through infantry training.

Souped up

Fort Benning's PFC Jim Gardavalia of 72nd Engineers lends a helping hand to Carrollton, Ga.'s Larry Doggett and his "Mad Dog" Camaro last Sunday. Doggett won the $500 runner-up money. Jim said the $3 military discount admission was a great deal.

Soccer

The honor guard for the event was composed of members of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Music was provided by Fort Benning Explorer Post 76's Colonial Band.

The first ball was put in play by representatives of the youngest soccer division (Grasshoppers) after Col. Simpson gave them a "drop ball."

In the Grasshopper League, the Bulldogs outscored the Black Knights in a defensive battle 2-0. The Black Knights threatened, but could not score. In other action, the Chiefs and the Rockets were scoreless in their match. Defensive standouts for the Chiefs were Marc Gonyea and Thaddeus McDonald. Ryan Dillion and Stuart Burton also excelled in their forward positions.

Termite League action saw Goldiggers tie the Warriors, 2-2. High scorer for the contest was Peter Dargle with two goals. Dargle was also the defensive standout of the game from his center halfback position. Donald Rogan and Drew Peterson both scored goals for the Warriors. Chelton Scott and Crookston Christ lead the defense in their game.

The Rowdies scored four goals in their win over the Stings. Johnathan King lead his team with two scores followed by Steven Del'Orto and Carlos Benson with one each. Their defense was highlighted by the play of Rob RisCassi, Sara Arellano and Terra Stiliba.

Junior League's Hustlers defeated the Titan 3-2. Hustler players Eric Entlich, Jeff Christensen and Jim Humphery each scored one goal. Defensive standouts were Pat Riccinto as goalkeeper, Chris Bradford, Karen Harron and Greg McCaan. Titan goals were scored by Mark Weems and Tom Langhorne. Mike Saliba in his sweeper position highlighted the Titans defense. Brandy Legore played her first game in organized soccer and did a commendable job.

Doughboys eyeing Alabama

By Tony Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

What can I say about those Doughboys? They were pretty impressive in their 57-14 lashing of the Fort Campbell Screaming Eagles. Their yell could be heard all the way back to Kentucky. Can you imagine holding the Eagles to minus 75 yards rushing? That's not a misprint either. Let's hear it for the defense. The offense played exceptionally well also. It was the case of a well-tuned offense mixing with a fine-tuned defense to come away with a sound victory.

Now Santaliz and Company are looking ahead to tonight's game against the Alabama J.V. Sure, you see the letters J.V. But anybody who knows anything about college football can tell you that any team from the University of Alabama, whether it's a crochet team or a badminton team, is tough. That's why tonight, when the Doughboys enter the stadium, they're going to need your undivided support to pull off an upset victory.

So far this season, I've been pleased with the number of fans who have come out to watch the team win. But I still think that with a post numbering 25,000 active duty military, not to mention civilian retirees and family members, much work is needed to increase the support shown these gladiators of the gridiron. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Last week I wrote about the do's and don'ts of playing rugby. I mentioned that the post had a team called the Flyers. Well, they still have a team and even though the season has started the coaches are still looking for a few good players.

Practice is held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m. at Stillwell Field. If you are interested in playing for the team, either come to the practices or call 689-5272 or 687-5136.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Lones Wigger of the US Army Marksmanship Unit came from behind to catch the early leaders and win both the National 300 Meter Position and Standard Rifle Championships in competition held here Sept. 26-29.

Trailing Malcom Cooper of Great Britain through the first two days of competition, Wigger equaled the national record of 1,167 out of 1,200 points on the final day for a grand aggregate of 3,458 points out of 3,600 to catch Cooper and win the 300 Meter Position title on the tie breaking procedure.

It was almost a repeat performance in the 300 Meter Standard Rifle event, as he caught Webster Wright, USN, in the final stage to end the championship in a tie and win the title in the tie breaking procedure. (Ties are broken by the highest number of tens or center shots, in the final 10 shot series of the match.)

The two victories gave the two-time Olympic gold medal winner in rifle shooting his fourth U.S. National Championship for 1981, as he had previously won both the 50 Meter Prone and Position Championships in matches held earlier this year in Phoenix, Ariz.

In the 60 shot 300 Meter Prone Championship, Earnest Vande Zande, an Army Reservist from Columbus, Ga., posted consistent rounds of 596-596-597 for a total of 1,789 points out of a possible 1,800 to win the national championship. His aggregate score also established a new national record for the event. Another new national record was also set by David Boyd, USMC, in the individual 60 shot event with a score of 599 out of 600 possible points.

In team competition, the three championships were split between the US Army, US Army Reserve and the USMC squads. The Marine "Gold" team won the 60 shot 300 Meter Prone event with 2,363 points out of 2,400, while the US Army garnered the 300 Meter Position Championship with 4,539 points out of 4,800. The final 300 Meter Standard Rifle event went to the USAR with 2,264 points out of 2,400. Team members of the winning US Army "Blue" squad in the 300 Meter Position championship were: Wigger, Boyd Goldsby, James Meredith and William Kovaric of the US Army Marksmanship Unit.

This year's nationals were also used as tryouts for the U.S. Shooting Team that will compete this November in the Championship of the Americas to be held in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Those individuals selected to the squad were Wigger, US Army; Earnest Vande Zande, USAR; David Boyd, USMC; Webster Wright, USN; and Phillip Whitworth, USAR.

Bengals picked to stop Oilers

Ford- "Well, I'm getting better. 9-5! Could this be the start of an upcoming superstar football predictor? I doubt it, but those 'Cardiac Cats' in Cincinnati are doing me proud. They came from to beat Buffalo in overtime last week and I anticipate more of that in the Astrodome. New England can't keep losing forever. The Rams are getting it together offensively and their secondary is capable of handling Brian Sipe's passing attack. Philadelphia will have Wilbert Montgomery healthy for their game against the Falcons and though I hate picking Tampa Bay's games due to their inconsistent nature, I think the Lions are consistent enough to allow me a fairly safe pick this week."

Harrison- "Last week was a week of upsets, sports fans, but we're not going to let that hold us back. Just look under my name in the win column this week. The sports fans shall rise again!"

Adams- "I can't believe it. I can't believe it. That seems to be what I kept saying to myself during last Sunday's weekly NFL roundup. What seemed to be sure fire picks turned out to be sour grapes. I mean, how often do the world champions lose 16-0 to a mediocre team, especially since they haven't been shut out since 1966. Well, here goes another roller-coaster week."

Don Rhodes- "I think Miami is in for a shock this weekend. Atlanta held up better last week than I thought they would, but I don't think they can take the Eagles on their home turf."

'Soldier of Year' spotlighted on WFBG

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A lot of hard work goes into preparing for it. The competition is tough. The rewards are achievement and self-satisfaction. The competition is for one goal. The goal is to become Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year.

Sp4 Ronald Eller, a medic with the 546th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion, has achieved that goal through a series of contests leading up to the finals. What did he do to prepare for the Soldier of the Year competition? What did he win for his efforts besides a trip to Hawaii. Tune in the "Benning Report" on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable, and find out. For times and dates of scheduled programming consult the BAYONET, the Benning Bulletin and the Ledger-Enquirer TV Book, listed under cable. Other programs highlighted include:

- "Not for Ourselves Alone" takes an historic look at four major crisis periods in our history and shows how the people of America dealt with the associated hardships.
- "Big Picture-Tigers on the Loose-Parts I & II" gives a close-up view of the 10th Armored Division and the work it did in World War II from Metz to the Brenner Pass.
- "West Point" shows the traditions and routines of this institution where civilians become officers.
- "Africa and Schweitzer" details the work Dr. Schweitzer did to relieve pain and suffering in Africa. He chose to live in Africa ministering medically to the needs of the natives for much of his life.
- "Big Picture-Soldier's Heritage"-The sacrifice and courage of American soldiers throughout U.S. military history has been great. This program serves as a reminder of what others gave up so that America can be free today.

Mel Brooks film in bad taste

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Comedian and movie producer Mel Brooks has had quite a few hits in the world of movies. He started out with a movie called "The Producers," which was his first, and went on to make "Silent Movie," "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein." "Young Frankenstein" being my own personal favorite Mel Brooks film.

When I saw the title "History of the World Part 1" and saw it was Mel Brooks, I went based on the enjoyment I've had at other Brooks' film. It was only then that I realized that everyone can have a bad day. Mel Brooks' bad day was when he was writing the script for this movie.

Other films have had a unified, clear script with lots of funny lines and witty comebacks, plus some outrageous situations. These characteristics are practically Mel Brooks' trademark in film. Unfortunately, "History of the World Part 1" missed the mark by a country mile. Succeeding placing some of the grossest and most religiously offensive things on film I've ever seen. The script had a few funny moments but these were greatly overshadowed by the offensiveness and lack of taste in the rest of the movie.

The story line, what there was, took us back to the stone age for a look at "our forbears" and the first critic. For those of you who will inevitably show up to see the movie my response to this movie is the same as his to that first chalk drawing on the cave wall. From there the movie continues to Roman be held tomorrow from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. at the Municipal Auditorium (located at 4th Avenue and Victory Drive.) It will be on a cash basis.

times and progresses on to the Spanish Inquisition and other delightful(?) looks at the world's history.

My advice to Mel Brooks who starred in and produced this movie is if you ever get the impulse to make another movie like this one do it closer to November and then stuff it and put it in the oven for Thanksgiving. Because that's where this turkey belongs. I give "History of the World Part 1" ZERO Stars.

Volunteers are urgently needed! The American Red Cross will conduct its fall volunteer training class Monday at the Family Life Center at 8:45 a.m.

Many interesting and varied positions are open to include Martin Army Hospital, Red Cross Field Office, case aide assistants, post schools and the veterinary clinic.

Registration and interviews will be held today.

Why do your customers read The Ledger-Enquirer?

- # 1. For the news.
- # 2. For the advertising.

As part of a study, Belden Associates of Dallas, Texas, asked over 500 local citizens why they read the newspaper. The first reason people gave is "for the news" local and national. That makes sense. We're a newspaper, and that's our prime responsibility.

But right behind news, came "For the advertising." People read, and more importantly, people buy our newspapers every day to find out what's for sale, where the bargains are, and where to go to buy the things they need.

The Ledger-Enquirer reaches 190,000 people all over the Valley every day. In the metropolitan area, your ad reaches 7 out of 10 adults every week day. On Sunday, it jumps to 8 out of 10. Over a five day period, those numbers turn into saturation coverage. (Source: 1979 Belden CMS.)

Your customers want to know what you've got for sale. Let them know with the best advertising buy you can make. The Ledger-Enquirer.

Yorktown—last major battle of Revolution

By Bill Highlander

Staff Action Officer, CI Div.
Chief of Public Affairs, HQDA

Preparations are underway for the last major celebration in the nation's Bicentennial — the victory at Yorktown. In that small village on the York River in Virginia on Oct. 19, 1781, Cornwallis' surrender to George Washington broke the spine of Britain's effort to maintain control over the American colonies. Sporadic fighting continued for nearly two years before a treaty was signed, but Yorktown was the decisive battle which has represented for Americans ever since, the spirit of victory through perseverance, dedication, and ingenuity.

The United States Army has chosen for its theme this year "The Army at Yorktown: Spirit of Victory." It is well that we reaffirm our commitment to the principles for which the soldiers and citizenry fought so gallantly and which the Army is still bound to protect and preserve. History recounts the sacrifices of soldiers, often ill-equipped, ill-trained and ill-paid, who withstood bitter winters, long marches, and countless hardships before winning. The stories of leadership and heroics of individual soldiers continue to inspire through examples of Americans putting fortitude above comfort and honor above ambition.

The celebration at Yorktown should not be thought of as an event important only to Virginians or the original States, for Yorktown is a symbol to the entire United States and to the world wherever ideals of freedom are maintained or sought.

At the same time, we should not overlook the parallels in problems facing that original Army and the Army of today. It would be folly to focus only on the victory and rely on the heroics of individuals in future conflicts. Indeed, Washington alluded to "Divine Providence" as a critical factor at Yorktown. Surely Clinton's failure to reinforce, a successful deception allowing the massing of troops, and the fortunate availability of a French fleet created a situation for American victory. Planning, intelligence, and seizing opportunity through personal leadership are as important today as they were 200 years ago.

Allied support was paramount then and remains so today. Even though the United States is a superpower, much of our commitment to freedom would be ineffectual without host-country support and reciprocal defense treaties. Just as French monetary and military support was crucial to victory at Yorktown, the United States and its allies must forge strong bonds against potential adversaries. Within the military itself, the necessity for cooperation in combined and joint operations remains key to winning on the modern battlefield.

The problems of raising and training an effective Army then, are not unlike today's hurdles. Washington spent countless hours appealing to the Congress for more soldiers, more equipment, more supplies, and more money to support the Army. Not everyone flocked to the call of the bugle, and those who did expected a war of short duration and adequate recompense for service. The ideals of the cause did not prevent threats of mutiny and desertion because of wartime conditions and low or no pay. Generous bonuses did not encourage the needed number of volunteers, and the need for a draft to fill the ranks for the duration of the conflict became obvious. A system for integrating the militia into the Regular Army was sorely needed. Baron Von Steuben earned his historic laurels by bringing discipline to the Army and insisting on standardization in training.

The modern Army faces similar struggles in manning a force capable of meeting defense commitments, modernizing and equipping the units to a competitive edge, and training to rigorous, challenging standards. Dedication, patriotism, and pride are still prized by soldiers, and examples of professionalism can be readily found in units wherever soldiers live and work. But even those ideals can be frustrated when soldiers feel that their service is unappreciated by military and civilian leaders and that this is evidence by low pay, inadequate quality of life, and fewer opportunities for realistic, demanding training.

The ideals of freedom, fought for and won through sacrifice and dedication in our first war, must be protected. Vigilance through readiness is the imperative. A strong Army, ably led, well-trained, well-equipped, and imbued with the spirit of Yorktown, is needed more today than ever before. We cannot count on "Divine Providence" in future conflicts. We will not have the time to mobilize the Army and the Nation as was done in World War II. We should not send inadequately prepared soldiers into battle as was done in Korea. We must be fully supported by the government and the American people during commitment of troops to the battlefield.

We will learn much by reflecting on the victory at Yorktown — by drawing on the examples that inspire leaders and soldiers to overcome adversity, and by examining the problems that could recur to threaten the strength of the Army now.

I am Yorktown

By David R. Kiernan

Editor, INFANTRY Magazine

I am Yorktown — Spirit of Victory! Two centuries ago I moved with Washington and Rochambeau across the York River and seized victory for a young nation. As the band played at Surrender Field, I took confident steps that had faltered only six years before at Concord Bridge. I am Yorktown.

As the rag-tag Continental Line, I was the bridge between the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. I redeemed the pledge made in ink at Philadelphia on July Fourth . . . with my blood which was redeemed at Valley Forge, Saratoga, Brandywine, Kings Mountain and Cowpens. I am Yorktown.

With Count de Grasse and my French comrades, I pulled the lanyard on the artillery piece that would silence the British. When the smoke cleared, in gallant gratitude, I accepted the sword of Cornwallis and vowed that no aggressor would ever again draw a saber in anger upon American soil. I am Yorktown.

Today, my Spirit lives on in the hearts of soldiers who still come from a nation whose fabric is woven in many colors and creeds. Soldiers whose blood will not be shed in vain, but who willingly accept my pledge etched in their Army's seal — "This we'll defend." I am Yorktown.

Then, now and forever brave soldiers — men and women — young and old draw strength from my memory and are ever vigilant to the threat and yet ever confident of the Spirit of Victory! I am Yorktown!

About the cover

Yorktown, a sleepy Virginia town on the banks of the York River, won an honored place in American history in 1781.

On Aug. 1 of that year the army of British Lt. Gen. Cornwallis occupied Yorktown as a base for operations in the Chesapeake Bay. American regulars and militiamen under Maj. Gen. Lafayette lacked the numbers to oppose it, but within a few weeks the tide began to turn.

The allied forces reached Yorktown on Sept. 28 and started using traditional European siege warfare procedures. The operations demonstrated both the growing professionalism of the Continental Army and the spirit of cooperation between the allies.

The siege reached a climax on Oct. 14. Two small earthworks protected the main British defensive line from close-range bombardment. Washington and Rochambeau decided to capture them in a nighttime bayonet assault. Within 15 minutes the Continentals overran their objective without firing a shot. Casualties amounted to only nine killed and 32 wounded.

The painting of Redoubt 10 was done by Howard Pyle, and is reproduced with the gracious permission of National Geographic magazine.

No raise to be given in mid-month checks

At this time the military pay raise issue has not been resolved by Congress. Therefore, the mid-month October payment was computed using the FY 81 pay rates. The five percent tax reduction effective Oct. 1, 1981, will not be reflected in the October mid-month payment. The full tax decrease for the month of October will be reflected in the end of month payment.

Special ceremony to be held here

Complete with a color guard wearing Revolutionary War uniforms and carrying muskets, a special retreat ceremony will be held Oct. 16 at 4:30 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall.

The ceremony is being held in celebration of our country's last major battle that led to our independence 200 years ago - the Battle for Yorktown.

Throughout the day, the flag in front of Infantry Hall will be a replica of the one that flew at Redoubt 10 (one of the major battles before victory). Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander, will present the flag to the Infantry Museum at the ceremony.

Music will be provided by the 283rd Army Band. The public is invited.

Clinic hours to change for prescriptions and refills

Effective Nov. 1, prescription and prescription refills will be written at one designated time daily in the OB-GYN Clinic. In order to serve the community more efficiently and effectively, the following times have been designated for writing prescriptions: Monday through Wednesday 1-2 p.m., Thursday through Friday 9-10 a.m.

Commissary to be closed

The Fort Benning Commissary will be closed Tuesday, October 13, 1981, to observe Columbus Day.

Future Benning COHORT unit to be sworn in at Yorktown

By Betty Zimmerman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A special company of initial entry soldiers that will begin training here Oct. 22 will first be sworn in at Yorktown, Va. Oct. 19. President Ronald Reagan will be attending the occasion, which is in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the last major battle of the American Revolution.

The Benning unit (infantry) is one of two companies with new soldiers recruited from the 50 states and four territories, who are to be members of a COHORT unit. The other unit (artillery) will train at Fort Sill, Okla.

The title COHORT is derived from the Latin word cohort that originally meant a Roman military unit of 300 to 600 men who lived and fought together for most of their lives. In Army terms, COHORT stands for cohesion, operational readiness and training.

The new infantry unit will be sworn in together, will train together and will be assigned to the same unit. The unit will receive their initial entry training with the 1st Infantry Brigade's 7th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Michael J. Connor.

They will be assigned to Company B under the direction of Capt. Wentworth "Sonny" Durkee. He and two drill sergeants, SFC Samuel Wright and Sgt. John B. Wood, will also take part in the Yorktown swearing-in ceremony.

Connor explained the COHORT concept as one that will enhance the combat readiness of a unit because the stability of personnel will improve the spirit, teamwork and proficiency of such a unit. He pointed out that normally one-third to one-half the men of a battalion will change faces every year, while most of these men will serve their entire four years together.

His company will all be assigned to Fort Riley, Kan., after their January graduation. They will serve a 15-month tour with the 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division and then will be reassigned to Germany with the 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry and/or the 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry of the 1st Infantry Division.

There are three other COHORT units already training here. They are Company D, 7th Battalion, and Company B, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade and Company C, 4th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

Soldiers must get flu shot

The 1981-82 Flu Immunization Program kicked off Monday and will continue through Oct. 30. All military service members are required by regulation to receive the flu vaccine. This year the vaccine will be administered for all active duty service members through the local servicing troop medical clinic (TMC) or medical treatment facility. The TMCs will provide flu immunizations for their supported organizations. Commanders of units are responsible for coordinating dates and times with their supporting TMCs.

Initial entry soldiers will receive their flu shots, along with their regularly scheduled immunizations.

Immunization for Department of the Army civilians, (DACs), dependents and retirees is voluntary. Dependent upon receipt of sufficient vaccine, DACs may receive their flu immunization at the TMC supporting the organizational element for which they work. DACs not assigned to a unit supported by a TMC, dependents, and retirees may receive their flu shots at the Immunization Clinic of Martin Army Community Hospital. As now scheduled the flu vaccine will be administered in the Immunization Clinic now through Oct. 30 from 1-4 p.m.

Any change to this schedule will be announced through the daily bulletins and other media.

Miss Indian America gets good insight on Army

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

At 22 years of age Jerilyn LaBeau is an ambassador. She's ambassador to a nation of people many Americans know very little of — the Indian nation.

LeBeau is a Cheyenne River Sioux, from an Indian tribe in Eagle Butte, S.D. She is also Miss Indian America, an honor bestowed upon her by other Indians from all over America whom she now represents.

LeBeau is the 27th Miss Indian America, chosen at this year's Indian Pageant held in Sheridan, Wyo.

Last week, dressed in traditional Indian costume, buckskin dress, with Indian moccasins beaded by her grandmother, she visited soldiers here. With her were her chaperone, Carol Anderson, a Sioux Indian from Sheridan, Wyo., Carl and Mary Gorman, Navajo Indians from Arizona and Billy Mills, a former Olympic winner and Sioux Indian.

At Malone 27, an Individual Tactical Training range, LeBeau and her group watched a fire and movement exercise, where one soldier moves out and then another, taking turns and using the "buddy system." The group was then introduced to two Native Indians who are now soldiers going through infantry training with the 1st Infantry Training Brigade, Pvs. Gerald Ltalgo, Apache Indian, and Eric Tso, Navajo, of Company D, 7th Battalion.

Miss Indian American got very emotional saying, "It wasn't that long ago when the Indians were at war. I know this is a big commitment for our boys to make when they decide to serve in the armed forces.

"I can see they really keep you busy," she said to the two soldiers. "I'm very proud of both of you and will be praying for you."

When told by a range instructor that the soldiers would be staying together and going to the same unit after they leave here, LeBeau said, "I can see where it would be good for morale for soldiers to stay together in the same unit. What I've seen here gives me good insight into what goes on in the Army."

Talking about the job that lies ahead of her she added, "My purpose is to be ambassador for all the Indian tribes throughout the nation and to share my knowledge of Indian history, tradition and culture with people who do not know. There are many people that the only thing they know about the Indian is what they see on television. This is sad because they should know more. We are the Native Americans."

Mary Gorman, Navajo Indian, chats with Jerilyn LaBeau at Lee Field.

Pvts. 1 Jackie Cook (I) and Joe Wynn explain to Jerilyn LaBeau how the "buddy system" works during their individual tactical portion of their infantry training.

File clerk selected as 'Employee of Year'

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Tyrone Hardy is a great kidder. Nothing pleases him more than to make another person laugh or smile to break up a person's boredom. On a good day he'll crack several jokes. People who work with Hardy say that without his sense of humor their job would get dull.

Hardy is a file clerk for the Military Pay Branch, Control Section, in bldg. 85. He is everything the Finance and Accounting Division people could want from one of their file clerks. Besides having a good sense of humor, he's fast, reliable and a hard worker, but Hardy is something else too. He's handicapped, a speech coordination problem since birth.

This week he was selected as Fort Benning's Handicapped Employee of the Year, an award given to identify, recognize and publicize achievements of outstanding handicapped employees.

Hardy's co-workers say the guy really deserves the recognition. They smile and say he's an alright guy when asked what they think of him being selected as the top handicapped employee.

"The job he does here is a real important one," said SFC H.L. Cypert, supervisor of the Control Section where Hardy handles and sorts hundreds of soldiers' pay records daily. "He pulls records, re-files them and locates records for pay inquiries. He's glad to be working here and we're glad to have him.

"He's always on time. If he were to be late it would bother him," added Cypert. "Tyrone has a positive attitude. He never complains about his work and I wish we had 10 more like him."

All managers and supervisors at Fort Benning have the opportunity to nominate employees. Managers interested in obtaining more information concerning the handicapped program should contact the Civilian Personnel Office at 545-7653.

Tyrone Hardy files soldiers' pay records where he works.

Peggy Hawkins of the Civilian Personnel Office, congratulates Tyrone Hardy on his being selected Fort Benning's "Handicapped Employee of the Year." Col. Bobby J. Harris observes.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun?"

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.

BE ALL YOU CAN BE. REENLIST.

The 'Spirit of Victory'

Editor's Note: Two hundred years ago, in October of 1781, an Army of ill-equipped, poorly-trained and underpaid Continental soldiers engaged the British near a small village in Virginia. Although they didn't know it at the time, this was to be the final victory of the Revolutionary War, the culmination of more than six years of bloodshed that earned America her freedom. Beginning Oct. 16 and lasting through Oct. 19, our country will celebrate the final victory as the last major celebration of our Bicentennial. It is with this in mind that The BAYONET dedicates part of this issue and the next issue to that victory—a tribute to the Spirit of Victory born at Yorktown and carried by those American soldiers who for more than 200 years have put country above comfort, honor above ambition and freedom above all.

A Place Called York(town)

By Gordon T. Bratz
Editor in Chief, SOLDIERS Magazine

You wouldn't know it by looking at it today. But over 200 years ago, the townsfolk in this place thought it would become important. And indeed it did become famous 200 years ago this October.

Back in those days they called it York. Established in 1691, it was a town of some 300 buildings, including a smart red brick courthouse and several churches.

Shortly after its establishment, a battery was built on the waterfront to protect the settlement. The battery complemented a similar position about a mile distant, across the York River in the even smaller settlement of Gloucester.

In 1710-1711, a fort mounting cannon was added to the battery at York. And in late 1775, the defense of the area was expanded with the addition of forts at the mouth of the James River and where Fort Monroe is today. This network of forts was designed to protect the shipping of Virginia's tobacco.

None of these defensive works saw action against either enemies or pirates. However, the defenses in York and Gloucester would assume great importance in the cause of American liberty during the Revolutionary War.

With such a history behind these towns, folk in York, a quiet port in southern Virginia, undoubtedly sensed the growing importance of their location even before York and Gloucester were taken over in early August 1781.

Months before, in April, York was raided and, in June, it was surveyed to become a major defensive position of the British army.

The Redcoats under Maj. Gen. Cornwallis permanently occupied York on Aug. 1, 1781, without worrying much about Maj. Gen. Lafayette's American force which operated west of the town. Nor were they bothered by the token garrison of some 300 vastly outgunned militia stationed there; they withdrew without firing a shot at the British. Further, the civilians didn't put up a fight either. A German soldier with the Redcoats wrote, "They had mostly come with bag and baggage into the country beyond."

Unaware of the Franco-American army closing in by land and sea from New York, Cornwallis seemed almost casual about the task of fortifying the two towns. Undoubtedly the weather had something to do with it; everyone adopted a slow pace as a result of the very hot, humid climate. Even Cornwallis didn't seem concerned. He casually dispatched a message to Gen. Clinton asking for hundreds of shovels and an assortment of carpenter supplies to build the fieldworks.

But American scouts and spies reported nearly every move the enemy made. They said at least 3,000 slaves joined the British seeking food, shelter and freedom. And a staff officer with Lafayette wrote, "Lord Cornwallis neither pushes his work with rapidity on the land or waterside. Like some of the heroes in romance, he appears to despise armor and to confide in his own natural strength." Heat and humidity were the enemies of the British. Slaves did much of the work. And although the troops weren't overly worked, desertions began almost immediately.

During the third week of August the last of the Redcoat troops arrived. Cornwallis now had a combined force of more than 7,000: seven line regiments, the two largest of about 600 men and five of some 200 men each (five consisted of English soldiers, one of Welsh troops and one of all Scottish soldiers); a brigade of the elite foot guards totalling 467 men; about 600 light infantry; 500 cavalymen; 200 artillerymen; 1,700 Germans (two battalions from the Anspach-Bayreuth regiments, two Hesse-Kassel regiments and a company of Jagers, or expert riflemen, also from Hesse); and nine different loyalist units numbering some 1,700 men.

Once the troops arrived, Cornwallis estimated it would take six weeks to properly prepare York as a land-sea defensive base. The British did not expect an attack, but wanted only to hold open a port for the British fleet which would support Cornwallis. He planned to remain at York and Gloucester until the hot weather passed. Then he planned offensives into Richmond, Fredericksburg, Annapolis and Baltimore. Cornwallis explained his plans in a message carried by his 28-gun ship Guadeloupe dispatched to Clinton on Aug. 29.

The ship left York that morning with its sister ship, the Loyalist, and headed for open waters of Parents should watch children while shopping

Anyone who shops in the commissary knows that it can get very crowded at times. And children running around the store unattended by their parents don't help the situation.

According to Jose Fantauzzi, commissary officer, children are allowed in the commissary only when accompanied by their parents and kept under control.

"Problems can be created because of the heavy shopping traffic and limited floor space if parents don't keep their children under control in the commissary," stressed Fantauzzi. "Keeping a close watch on them prevents the children from bumping into other customers and carts, breaking things or eating things."

Fantauzzi added that unattended children also get lost sometimes and he re-emphasized the need for control to keep this from happening.

The store's policy is that children above 10 years of age can walk through the commissary, but children below that age are to be seated in the shopping carts, according to Fantauzzi.

"We realize that sometimes young children are too big to be kept in a cart, so they don't have to be in one," said Fantauzzi, "but, again, parents must keep good control over them."

CFC goal reaches 17 percent

As of noon Tuesday, 671 Fort Benning personnel have contributed $64,900 to this year's Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). This represents 17 percent of the campaign goal of $375,000.

CFC supports the local United Way, international service agencies, national health agencies and national services agencies.

One objective of the CFC is to provide each soldier and civilian employee the opportunity to contribute to agencies dedicated to improving the quality of life for many people in many ways.

926th assists in 'Bold Eagle 82'

When units perform a mission, there is one underlying factor that poses an important threat to all forces, a factor that in some situations may determine if units can be made mission capable at all. This element is the "health and environment" of the soldiers, seamen, marines and airmen.

To insure that this threat is controlled, the 926th Preventive Medicine Detachment LB Team, of the 34th Medical Battalion, is providing field preventive medicine support for all Army divisional and non-divisional units, plus Marine and Air Force components involved in "Bold Eagle 82." The exercise began Monday at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. and will continue through Nov. 25.

"Bold Eagle 82" is a large-scale joint readiness exercise sponsored by the United States Readiness Command. It involves various active and reserve units from across the Continental United States.

The 926th Preventive Medicine Detachment is the only unit from Fort Benning participating in the exercise. Troop strength for the exercise is slotted for 20,000-plus which will produce disease hazardous conditions spread out over a large area of operations. There will be numerous areas where the 926th will stress unit command emphasis on field preventive medicine. These areas include field water and food sanitation, venereal disease control, prevention of heat injuries and solid waste disposal.

Previous joint training exercises have taught our leaders that an average of 35 percent of the forces involved have become less than mission effective due to disease without proper preventive medicine practices. To make "Bold Eagle 82" a total tactical and medical success, the 926th will "conserve the fighting strength" through preventive medicine efforts.

Yorktown

Chesapeake Bay. Both ships were taken by surprise. They ran into enemy ships which shot away the masts of the Loyalist. The Guadeloupe reversed course and returned to York on the 30th with chilling news: "There were 30 or 40 French ships in the Bay, some of them very large."

Work on the two positions began in earnest. A German corporal wrote, "We hardly had time for eating. Often we had to eat raw meat."

The British ships were turned back by the French fleet under Admiral de Grasse. He sealed nearby rivers, put troops ashore and sent scouts throughout the bay area. On Sept. 1, four of his ships sailed up the York River and anchored about two miles below York and Gloucester.

Three days later, Lafayette's force occupied Williamsburg, about eight miles northwest of York. Williamsburg soon became the site of the Franco-American encampment from which Washington unleashed his army at the British.

By mid-September, the British positions on the York River grew more and more untenable. The defeat at sea was bad enough. But now Cornwallis was receiving increasing reports of the changing disposition of Lafayette's troops. He sent his cavalry to reconnoiter Lafayette. They returned urging an immediate attack to escape the closing noose of the American forces. Instead, Cornwallis waited, hoping that the British navy could somehow bring more troops or rescue his force by breaking the French blockade. Finally, Cornwallis decided to attack Lafayette. If he fell back, Cornwallis could have enough room to fight towards Richmond and beyond.

Militiaman's Fowler

Cornwallis considered two plans of attack. One was to march his army under cover of darkness and strike Lafayette at dawn. The other was to send 2,500 men in small boats up the York River to Queen's Creek and surprise Lafayette from the rear.

On Sept. 14, Cornwallis decided his course of action. He also found out on this date that Washington and Rochambeau would arrive soon in the area. And finally, on this day he received a dispatch from Clinton dated eight days earlier. Cornwallis postponed his offensive. The message said the British navy would be off the coast of York "any day" with 4,000 men to effect the relief of Cornwallis.

But "any day" didn't mean soon. On Sept. 17, Cornwallis sent this message to Clinton: "The place is in no state of defense. If you cannot relieve me very soon, you must be prepared to hear the worst."

On Sept. 22, in a last-ditch effort to break the French stranglehold by sea, Cornwallis launched a night attack by sending several hastily improvised boats against the French fleet. Loaded down with sulphur, tar and other combustibles, the skeleton British crews sailed the boats toward the French at anchor. As they approached, they set the small craft on fire, went overboard to safety and let the blazing boats drift toward the fleet.

French drummers saw the "fireships" and beat to quarters. The British flotilla found itself among alert French sailors. As the boats came closer to the ships, the French cut their cables and sailed out of harm's way.

Later, on Sept. 24, a small American detail which had come from the Franco-American forces then massing at Williamsburg crept upon a few German pickets near York in an early morning raid. Every one of the enemy was captured.

The Allies March to Yorktown

Throughout the encampment, barely visible rays of the rising sun streak through tall pines and mix with the sounds of drums. Light and noise conspire to wake you.

French Musket

Packing your haversack, belly aching for breakfast, there isn't much talk among your buddies. All of you know you are about to march to battle.

At daybreak, you and about 15,000 French and American soldiers march from Williamsburg, where you've been camped several days since your march of some three months and 600 miles from Rhode Island and New York. All but about 200 soldiers who remain behind to mind the hospital and the stores (supplies) join you on the road to a place called York (Yorktown, today). It is Sept. 28, 1781.

Leading the combined Franco-American force is the Virginia Corps of militia riflemen, then come the light dragons (cavalry), and then the infantry with attached artillery. With you too is the French Advanced Guard consisting of grenadiers and chasseurs (light infantry). Then come the main forces — the American Continentals and the French line units. They are followed by the remaining militia, in reserve, who escort the wagons filled with provisions and the tools to conduct siege warfare.

Progress is slow and tiring. The road is sandy and dusty. The bright rising sun is hot; sweat and dust mix to cover your face and neck, and your shirt and trousers stick to your body. Only when you pass through the dense pine and cedar stands do you feel much comfort.

Artillery pieces are scattered throughout the long column to be ready in case of an ambush by the British.

The column halts twice, much to your relief. At noon, during a halt of more than two hours, you and your messmates cook dinner. It consists of meat boiled in an iron kettle or roasted on a spit, flour-and-water-based bread called "firecake" and a little rum.

Shortly afterward, you're on the move again. About a mile from a place called Halfway House, the American and French units take separate routes. You and the Americans move to the right along a road that goes to Mumford's Bridge to the south. The French continue along the route both armies were on. It's the most direct road to Yorktown, about four miles away.

The French arrive within two miles of Yorktown at about 3:30 p.m. They fan out left and right to take positions west and south of Yorktown in their portion of the battle area.

As they approach, the French mount a reconnaissance of the ravines along York Creek. They meet pickets of the British and are greeted by grapeshot from a distant battery. French Lt. Gen. Rochambeau answers the Redcoats with four-pound artillery pieces, grenadiers and chasseurs of the Advance Guard and fifty mounted hussars.

This action disperses the British, killing several as they withdraw to the protection of their Pigeon Hill redoubts about one-half mile in front of the town.

The French keep up light artillery fire throughout the afternoon. Far to their left, along the York River, they outflank the Redcoats and move toward, but do not directly attack, a key British position known as the Fusiliers' Redoubt. The British suffer several killed in these outerworks, but the French lose no one on this first day of battle.

Meanwhile, you and the remainder of Washington's army arrive at the battle area a short time later — about the time the French drive Cornwallis' pickets back to the British Redoubts.

But, because the British have destroyed a bridge over a swamp at Beaverdam Creek, the American wing of the combined army must halt. While "laying on your arms" (waiting), you see British forces parading on the open plain to the north. Rumor among your fellows is that you are about to occupy that ground.

Some artillery pieces are ordered forward to join the advance pickets. Together, fire from the artillery and sharpshooting infantry engage the British cavalry. By late evening they are driven from the field.

While the bridge is being repaired and others are being constructed, Gen. Washington and Lt. Gen. Rochambeau conduct a detailed reconnaissance of the British works. During the inspection, the two generals draw enemy fire. "The shots," an observer says, "seeming rather to have been in their honor than to interfere with their operation." Neither general is injured in the barrage.

You spend the night sleeping under the stars. The morning of Sept. 29, you and the Americans march across the bridges to establish a line from Beaverdam Creek on the west over to and behind Wormley Creek on the east. There the American line links up with the French forces.

Now the combined Franco-American army has Yorktown encircled. From the York River and Wormley Creek on the east around to the York River on the northwest, the disposition of forces is: Maj. Gen. Lincoln's Division and Maj. Gen. Lafayette's Division in the center, Maj. Gen. Von Steuben's Division near Beaverdam Creek, and adjacent to the French Brigade Bourbonnois, then their Brigade Soissonnais in the center, and their Brigade Agenois near the York River on the northwest. Generals Washington and Rochambeau set up their headquarters near the center of this line about one-half mile apart and two and a half miles from the British outer works.

In his evening orders of the 29th, Gen. Washington calls for a detail of 1,200 men to work with the engineers. He also directs the quartermaster general to supply troops with 500 spades, 100 pickaxes and 400 axes, hatchets or bill hooks. You and others know this means work.

But morale remains high. A general feeling of impending victory is felt by soldiers in the combined army. One soldier writes: "Unbounded confidence is reposed in our illustrious commander, the spirit of emulation and military ardor universally prevail, and we are sanguine in our expectations that a surrender of the royal army must be his Lordship's fate."

This air of good feeling arises even before a startling discovery about the British is made on the night of Sept. 29.

Noting a lack of movement by the British in two of their redoubts at Pigeon Hill, some French grenadiers and chasseurs march forward to inspect. They report both positions empty. Further inspection during the night reveals that all redoubts, batteries and redans, except the Fusiliers' Redoubt on the far left have been abandoned by the British.

The allies react quickly. Lt. Gen. Rochambeau orders some of his forces to occupy the Pigeon Hill Redoubts, and the Americans occupy the battery on Hampton Road forward of their line during the night.

This unexplained withdrawal by Cornwallis gives the allies several advantages. Washington's Adjutant General, Brig. Gen. Hand, says the withdrawal "will save us much time and trouble, as it at once gives us ground which . . . greatly shortens our approaches . . . Other benefits include being able to get at York Creek for drinking water, the opportunity to further restrict Cornwallis with the borders of his main works in Yorktown, and the chance to move allied artillery closer to the British in the town.

Prompted by this event, the allies step up their reconnaissance activities and their preparations for the siege on Yorktown. On Oct. 1, you and 1,999 American soldiers and scores of your French allies

Christians- books in God's library

By Will Ghere
Infantry School Chaplain

I visited the library the other day. You have been there, haven't you? Books, books, books-story books, history books, poetical books-everywhere books! What do you want with so many books? Oh, to read and learn.

Did you ever notice how we read a book? It is something like this: We pick out one by the title. If that suits us, we leaf through the pages, looking at the pictures. Did you ever do that? Then, if we like the pictures, we look at the print to see if we can read it easily. Then if all these things suit us, we may read the book. Funny, isn't it?

Did you know that God has a lot of libraries? Oh, we call them churches, but they are libraries, and the members are the books. Yes, you and I. II Corinthians 3:2 'Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, know and read of all men.'

People come in and look around until they see some of us with a title 'Christian.' They take our life down and look it through for the pictures - yes, the scenes that portray us; it may be our tempers, or our snobbiness, or our coarseness, or it may be our cheer, our friendliness or our trust-worthiness. If they do not like these scenes, they put us to one side just as we do a book whose pictures we do not like. But if they do like them, they begin to look at other things, such as habits and speech, manners and ideals. If these are clear-cut, they may take time to really know us.

What are your outstanding traits and habits? Would they draw folks to you, or would they make folks shun you? Do folks know what you stand for? We do not like blurred pages in a book; we do not like smeared principals in folks any better.

The all important thing about a book is this: It must have in it what the title says it has. What do you expect to find in a math book? In a spelling book? In a story-book?

Paul said that christians are books in God's library, 'know and read of all men.' Now, then, if our title says 'Christian,' folks have a right to expect our lives to teach and explain Christ. They will be disappointed to find history in a math book or poems in a spelling book. What kind of book are you?

Help prevent crime in community

A community is a group of people living in close association in the same locality and sharing similar interests and backgrounds. One of the common ties within a community is the desire to have a safe and secure place to live. For the most part, the community tends to leave this job to the police and related groups.

The major task of protecting all life and property through the entire community has been designated as a service of the police.

However, the police must usually function as a reactionary force responding to crimes which have already been committed. Following the initial response, the police get busy writing reports, conducting investigations, seeking to recover stolen property, and sometimes going to court. You may say that this is the policeman's job—not so! The primary job of the police is to protect life and property; this cannot be accomplished while working on crimes that have already happened.

What can be done to turn this situation around? This is where community action comes in. We, the residents of the Fort Benning community, can take steps to prevent crime in our own homes and neighborhoods. The most important step in fulfilling the goal of protecting life and property is for all members of the community to get involved in reporting suspicious activity and strangers in their area. When this is done, your military police are able to react quickly and prevent or stop the crime while it is in progress rather than deal with it after the fact.

Col. Earp

Each of us must become involved and interested in our community if we are to have a truly safe place in which to live. Because the military is a very transient way of life, we often find ourselves being relocated to a different installations. Being a new neighbor and meeting new neighbors are frequent experiences for all of us. We should each make a positive effort to establish supportive relationships with our neighbors and get involved in community life. Remember—it pays to be a good neighbor.

Crime prevention is everybody's business—not just that of the military police. While the Fort Benning community is doing a good job participating in the crime prevention effort in many respects, there is still room for improvement. I challenge every individual at Fort Benning to become involved and help the military police get on with their primary function of protecting life and property on the reservation. Only you can make this happen.

Additional information on this and related subjects can be obtained from the Crime Prevention Section of the Provost Marshal's Office at 545-7115.

Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts

Energetic young men who are trustworthy enough to take the ideals of scouting, loyal enough to stand by their family, God and country, and brave enough to stand up for all of these when and where ever questioned or confronted.

If you meet these qualifications and are interested in camping, hiking, swimming, fishing, canoeing, mountain climbing, bicycling, archery, rifle or shotgun and many other areas of scouting we offer, then the Scouts may be for you.

To become a Cub Scout you should be eight-years-old or older, or seven-and-half-years-old and completed the second grade. To become a Boy Scout you must be 11-years-old or older or 10-and-a-half-years-old and completed the 5th grade. Also, there is a program for both young men and women, 14-years-old or older call Explorer Scouts.

For more information contact the unit in your area.

Men of the Revolution: American soldiers of 1776

Editor's Note: Reprinted by courtesy of Harvey V. Fondiller. Copyright (C) 1976 by Harvey V. Fondiller. Reprinted by courtesy of the author.

"Every American desires to know all that can be known of the surviving soldiers of the Revolution. It was in this desire that the following work originated, and with a view to its gratification that it has been prepared." With these words, Rev. E. B. Hillard introduced The Last Men of the Revolution, a 64-page book containing six mounted photographs of the last surviving veterans of the American Revolution. Published in 1864 at Hartford, Ct., by N.A. and R.A. Moore, the book includes biographical sketches of the men and hand-colored lithographs of their homes.

Hillard wrote: "Of these venerable and now sacred men but seven remain." Four lived in New York State, one each in Maine and Ohio, and one veteran could not be located. One of the men was 100 years old, another was 101, two were 102, and two reached the age of 104.

"Their extreme age...forbids the hope they can continue much longer among the living," stated Hillard. "Soon they too must answer the final challenge and go to join the full ranks of those who have preceded them to the invisible world. The present is the last generation that will be connected by a living link with the great period in which our national independence was achieved.

"Our own are the last eyes that will look on men who looked on Washington; our ears the last will hear the living voices of those who heard his words. Henceforth the American Revolution will be known among men by the silent record of history alone. It was thus a happy thought of the artists who projected this work to secure such memorials as they might of these last survivors of our great national conflict, before they should forever have passed away."

The author noted: "Possible now, it will soon be impossible forever, and now neglected it would be forever regretted. What would not the modern student of history give for the privilege of looking on the faces of the men who fought for Grecian liberty at Marathon, or stood with Leonidas at Thermopylae...How precious a collection to every true American...would be the portraits of the seven men who fell, on the morning of the nineteenth of April, 1775, on Lexington Green!..."

"In the memorials of such men...the past seems still to live. The connection with it of their personal history gives it reality. Ever, it is only through association with the men who were actors in them that the periods of history seem real.

"History lives only in the persons who created it. The vital words in its record are the names of men. Thus everything of personal narrative gives reality to the past. This these memorials of the last living men of the Revolution will do for that great period of our history. As we look upon their faces, as we learn the story of their lives, it will live again before us, and we shall stand as witnesses of its great action."

The author, Elias Brewster Hillard, was a Congregational clergyman, the grandfather of Archibald MacLeish, noted poet and former Librarian of Congress. He was apparently approached by the Hartford publishers with the suggestion that he interview the surviving veterans of '76. In July, 1864 — toward the end of the Civil War—Hillard embarked on a pilgrimage to their homes. The first was that of Samuel Downing in Edinburg, Saratoga County, N.Y.

"It was about noon when I reached there," he wrote. "As I drove up I observed...seated between two beehives, bending over, leaning upon his cane and looking at the ground, an old man...On entering the yard I at once recognized him from his photograph...On telling him that I had come a long way to see an old soldier of the Revolution, he invited me to walk into the house...Seated (there), he soon entered upon the story of his life..."

Hillard recognized that "the chief interest of this work lies, of course, in the pictorial representations of the men." Unknowningly, he made photographic history, for the portraits and reminiscences in his book are the world's first photo-interviews.

The six photographs are 2 1/16 X 3 1/4 albumen prints, slightly smaller than a carte-de-viste image. Each print is mounted within a printed gilt border topped by an eagle and shield.

All the subjects are seated, as might be expected of centenarians. The photographers are unidentified; possibly some were itinerant "sun artists" who set up temporary studios or visited subjects at home. One of the old men — Adam Link — refused to be photographed, and his portrait was "secured without his knowledge; the family fearing the proposal would provoke him, and thus defeat the attempt."

The negatives were made on wet collodion plates; exposure was probably about two seconds. To prepare the emulsion, the photographer mixed collodion with a solobule iodide and poured it over the plate, which was then sensitized by a solution of silver nitrate. After development in a solution of iron sulfate, acetic acid, and alcohol, the negative was fixed in a dilute solution of potassium cyanide or hypo. The albumen contact prints were made by exposure to sunlight.

Fourscore and seven years before Hillard's book was published, our nation was engaged in a conflict to which these six men were eyewitnesses. As the author foresaw, seeing their faces makes the Spirit of '76 "live again before us." Thus has photography spanned two centuries of American history.

Adam Link

At 16, Adam Link enlisted in Wheeling, Va., for frontier service. During his five years as a soldier, his father was killed by Indians in his own house.

Link participated in no important battles during the war. Seven years after being mustered out, he married a distant relative, age 17. He lived in a number of places and, at 60, walked from his home in Pennsylvania to Ohio—a distance of 141 miles—in three days.

At 70, he cleared land for a farm, while living in a house the main wall of which was formed by the flat roots of an upturned tree. "Although always a hard worker, he was always poor," wrote Hillard. "Part may be set down to the score of that ill luck which seems to dog the steps of some men through life."

The old soldier finally moved to the home of his son-in-law in Sulphur Springs, Crawford County, Oh., where he lived until his death on August 15, 1864.

Lemuel Cook

Lemuel Cook enlisted at the age of 16 at Cheshire, Ct., and was mustered in at Northampton, Ma., in the 2nd Regiment, Light Dragoons. He served until his discharge in Danbury, Ct., June 12, 1784.

"When I applied to enlist, Captain Halibud told me I was so small he couldn't take me unless I would enlist for the war. The first time I smelt gunpowder was at Valentine's Hill (West Chester, New York). A troop of British horses were coming. 'Mount your horses in a minute,' cried the colonel. I was on mine as quick as a squirrel. There were two fires—crash! Up came Darrow, good old soul! and said, 'Lem, what do you think of gunpowder? Smell good to you?'"

"The first time I was ordered on sentry was at Dobbs' Ferry. A man came out of a barn and leveled his piece and fired. I felt the wind of the ball. A soldier near me said, 'Lem, they mean you' go on the other side of the road.' So I went over; and pretty soon another man came out of the barn and aimed and fired. He didn't come near me. Soon another came out and fired. His ball lodged in my hat. By this time the firing had roused the camp; and a company of our troops came on one side, and a party of the French on the other; and they took the men in the barn prisoners, and brought them in. They were Cow Boys. This was the first time I saw the French in operation. They stepped as though on edge. They were a dreadful proud nation.

"When they brought the men in, one of them had the impudence to ask, 'Is the man here we fired at just now?' 'Yes,' said Major Tallmudge, 'there he is, that boy.' Then he told how they had each laid out a crown, and agreed that the one who brought me down should have the three. When he got through with his story, I stepped to my holster and took out my pistol, and walked up to him and said, 'If I've been a mark to you for money, I'll take my turn now. So, deliver your money, or your life!' He handed over four crowns, and I got three more from the other two."

Cook gave the following account of the events leading to the surrender of General Cornwallis:

"It was reported Washington was going to storm New York. We had made a bylaw in our regiment that every man should stick to his horse: if his horse went, he should go with him. I was waiter for the quarter-master; and so had a chance to keep my horse in good condition. Baron Steuben was muster-master. He had us called out to select men and horses fit for service. When he came to me, he said, 'Young man, how old are you?' I told him. 'Be on the ground to-morrow morning at nine o'clock,' said he.

"My colonel didn't like to have me go. 'You'll see,' said he, 'they'll call for him to-morrow morning.' But they said if we had a law, we must abide by it. Next morning, old Steuben had got my name. There were eighteen out of the regiment. 'Be on the ground,' said he, 'to-morrow morning with two days' provisions.' 'You're a fool,' said the rest; 'they're going to storm New York.' No more idea of it than of Next morning I was the second on parade. We ched off toward White Plains. Then 'left wheel,' across into the Jerseys. That night I stood with ter the war, Cook married and lived near shire, Ct., then moved to Utica, N.Y., where he frequent encounters with the Indians that still ppied the region. At 104, he was described as ws: "His frame is large, his presence com-njoys life as much as could be expected at his t age. . . Altogether, he is a noble old man."

Samuel Downing

When Samuel Downing was a boy, he ran away from home and apprenticed himself to a spinning wheel maker. For six years, he lived with his master, Thomas Aiken, in Antrim, Ma., "working at wheels during the day and splitting out spokes at night."

According to Downing, Aiken "didn't do by me as he agreed to. He agreed to give me so much education, and the end of my time an outfit of clothes, or the like, and a kit of tools. So I tells aunt, (I used to call Mr. Aiken 'uncle' and his wife aunt') 'Aunty, Uncle don't do by me as he agreed to. He agreed to send me to school, and he hasn't sent me a day'; and I threatened to run away. She told me if I did they'd handcuff me and give me a whipping. 'But', said I 'you'll catch me first, won't you, Aunty?' 'O', she said, 'they'd advertise me.'

"Well, the war broke out. Mr. Aiken was a militia captain; and they used to be in his shop talking about it. I had ears, and I had eyes in them days. They was enlisting three years men and for-the-war men. I heard say that Hopkinton was the enlisting place. . .

'The recruiting officer, when I told him what I'd come for, said I was too small. I told him just what I'd done. 'Well,' said he, 'you stay here and I'll give you a letter to Col. Fifield over in Charlestown and perhaps he'll take you.'

"So I staid with him; and when uncle and aunt came home that night they had no Sam. The next day I went and carried the letter to Col. Fifield, and he accepted me. But he wasn't quite ready to go: he had his haying to do; so I staid with him and helped him through it, and then I started for the war.

"The first duty I ever did was to guard wagons from Exeter to Springfield. We played the British a trick; I can remember what I said as well as can be. We all started off on a run, and as I couldn't see anything, I said, 'I don't see what the devil we're running after or running away from; for I can't see anything.' One of the officers behind me said, 'Run, you little dog, or I'll spontoon you.' 'Well,' I answered, 'I guess I can run as fast as you can and as far.'

"Pretty soon I found they were going to surprise a British train. We captured it; and among the stores were some hogsheads of rum. So when we got back to camp that night the officers had a great time drinking and gambling; but none for the poor soldiers. Says one of the sergeants to me, 'We'll have some of that rum.' It fell to my lot to be on sentry that night; so I couldn't let 'em in at the door. But they waited till the officers got boozy; then they went in at the windows and drew a pailful, and brought it out and we filled our canteens, and then they went in and drew another. So we had some of the rum; all we wanted was to live with the officers, not any better.

"Afterwards we were stationed in the Mohawk valley. (Gen. Benedict) Arnold was our fighting general, and a bloody fellow he was. He didn't care for nothing; he ride right in. It was 'come on, boys!' 'twasn't Go, boys!'. He was as brave a man as ever lived. He was dark-skinned, with black hair, of middling height. There wasn't any waste timber in him. He was a stern looking man, but kind to his soldiers. They didn't treat him right: he ought to have had Burgoyne's sword. But he ought to have been true. We have true men then; 'twasn't as it is now. . .

"We heard Burgoyne was coming. The Tories began to feel triumphant. One of them came in one morning and said to his wife, 'Ty (Ticonderoga) is taken, my dear.' But they soon changed their tune. The first day at Bemis Heights both claimed the victory. But by and by we got Burgoyne where he wanted him, and he gave up. He saw there was no use in fighting it out. There's where I call 'em gentlemen. Bless your body, we had gentlemen to fight with in those days. When they was whipped they gave up. It isn't so now.

"Gate was an 'old granny' looking fellow. When Burgoyne came up to surrender his sword, he said to Gates, 'Are you a general? You look more like a granny than you do like a general.' 'I be a granny,' said Gates, 'and I delivered you of ten thousand men to-day.'

"By and by they began to talk about going to take New York. There's always policy, you know, in war. We made the British think we were coming to take the city. We drew up in line of battle; the British drew up. . . They looked very handsome. But Washington went south to Yorkstown. La Fayette laid down the white sticks, and we threw up entrenchments by them. We were right opposite Washington's headquarters. I saw him every day."

How would Washington treat traitors if he caught them? "Hang 'em to the first tree!"

"When peace was declared," said Downing, "we burnt thirteen candles in every hut, one for each State."

At the close of the war, "too big for Aunty to whip," Downing returned to Antrim. He married and had 13 children, three whom were still living on his 100th birthday.

Downing

On that occasion, 1,000 people gathered on his son's farm in Saratoga County, N.Y.; a hundred guns were fired, and the old man cut down a hemlock tree five feet in circumference.

At the age of 102, Downing was "the most vigorous in body and mind of the survivors", according to Hillard, who noted that he "hoes corn and potatoes, and works just as well as anybody."

Alexander Milliner

His father, an Englishman who served in the British army, died at the Battle of Quebec in 1759. Alexander Milliner was born the following spring, and later his mother moved to New York State.

Too young in 1776 for service in the ranks, he was enlisted at Lake George, N.Y., as a drummer boy. He served four years in Washington's Life Guard, and by his own account was a favorite of the commander-in-chief. Washington often patted him on the head after the drum-beating at reveille, and on one occasion- "a bitter cold morning," Milliner recalled-gave him a drink from his flask.

He remembered Washington as "a good man, a beautiful man. He was always pleasant; never changed countenance, but wore the same in defeat Martha Washington was "a short, thick woman; very pleasant and kind. She used to visit the hospitals, was kind-hearted, and had a motherly care.

"One day the General had been out some time. When he came in, his wife asked him where he had been. He answered laughing, 'To look at my boys.' 'Well,' said she, 'I will go and see my children.' When she returned, the General inquired, 'What do you think of them?' 'I think,' answered she, 'that there are a good many.'

"They took a great notion to me. One day the General sent for me to come up to headquarters. 'Tell him,' he sent word, 'that he needn't fetch his drum with him.' I was glad of that.

"The Life Guard came out and paraded, and the roll was called. There was one Englishman, Bill Dorchester; the General said to him, 'Come, Bill, play up this 'ere Yorkshire tune.' When he got through, the General told me to play. So I took the drum, overhauled her, braced her up, and played a tune. The General put his hand in his pocket and gave me three dollars; then one and another gave me more-so I made out well; in all, I got fifteen dollars. I was glad of it: my mother wanted some tea, and I got the poor woman some." (Milliner's mother accompanied the army as a washerwoman so that she could be near her son).

Milliner was at the battle of White Plains, Brandywine, Saratoga, Monmouth, and Yorktown. The first of these he describes as "a nasty battle." At Monmouth he received a flesh wound in his thigh.

"One of the officers came along, and looking at me, said, 'What's the matter with you, boy?' 'Nothing,' I answered. 'Poor fellow,' exclaimed he, are ordered into the forests to collect materials for making fascines, gabions and saucissons — the ingredients to build earthworks to protect soldiers and artillery pieces during siege warfare.

Away from the nearly treeless and hot rolling plain surrounding Yorktown, you and hundreds of other soldiers spend several days in the cool forest feverishly making siege materials. Despite the constant details and continual work, you frequently look toward the plain. The anticipation of meeting and defeating the British — and finally ending this

'you are bleeding to death.' I looked down; the blood was gushing out of me."

At General Burgoyne's surrender: "The British soldiers looked down-hearted. When the order came to 'ground arms,' one of them exclaimed with an oath, 'You are not going to have my gun!' and threw it violently on the ground, and smashed it."

The encampment at Valley Forge: "Lady Washington visited the army. She used thorns instead of pins on her clothes. The poor soldiers had bloody feet."

Milliner served 6½ years in the army, then 5½ years in the U.S. Navy. At 39, he married and settled in Cortlandt County, New York. He and his wife lived together 62 years; they had nine children, 43 grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. Milliner had a jovial, carefree temperament. Hillard relates: "At the time his photograph was taken he could still handle his drum, playing for the artist, with excellent time and flourishes which showed him to have been a master of the art."

On his 104th birthday a veterans organization, the Pioneers of Monroe County, marched to his house and greeted him with cheers. Then the procession marched to the church, where "after the singing of Washington's Funeral Hymn by the Pioneers and a short historical address, Mr. Milliner stood up on a seat where all could see him, and thanking them for their kind attention, appealed to them all to be true to their country..."

Daniel Waldo

A distant relation of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, Daniel Waldo was drafted for a month's military service at New London, Conn., when he was 16. He subsequently enlisted for eight months and in March 1779 was taken prisoner.

The circumstances of his capture were related by him to the "artist who took his photograph," as follows:

"One of the guards, on leaving his beat one stormy night, failed to give him warning, and thus the Tories surprised him. One of them snapped a musket at him, but it only flashed in the pan; whereupon he laid down his own musket and made signs of surrender. But one of the enemy, on pretense that he was about to pick it up again, made a thrust at him with his bayonet, which failed to pierce him. He thereupon demanded to be treated as a prisoner of war; and lying down, the attacking party passed over him into the house which he was guarding, capturing the whole company (thirty-seven in number) which it contained."

With his fellow prisoners, Waldo was taken to New York, where he was confined for two months; he received short rations but was otherwise well treated.

At 20, he entered Yale and graduated with honors in 1788. After studying theology for a year with a minister, as was then the custom, he was licensed to preach. Ordained in 1792 as pastor of the church at West Suffield, Ct., Waldo remained there 18 years. He married and had five children, but in 1805 his war after nearly six years — mixes with some natural fear. But your fears are momentary. You're a soldier; you know your job and believe in the cause for independence. You will set the Army on a course of victory, and the spirit of that victory will be your watchword forevermore. Thus, you return to your duties with determination and excitement for the coming days.

Editor's Note: Remember to look in next week's edition for the concluding article about the battle for Yorktown.

Waldo

wife became insane. "I lived 50 years with a crazy wife," he recalled.

Employed by the Missionary Society of Connecticut, he made tours to the states of New York and Pennsylvania, then the "Far West." Later he went to live with his son's family in Syracuse, N.Y.

Waldo died July 30, 1864. A friend wrote of him: "His spirit was eminently kind and genial. . . Though he experienced many severe afflictions, and had always (been burdened by) domestic sorrow. . . his calm confidence in God never forsook him. . . At the close of a life of more than a hundred years, there is no passage in his history which those who loved him would wish to have erased."

Need volunteers

Army Community Service is looking for volunteers. Before you say no, consider the benefits of joining the ACS volunteer staff.
 Through ACS, you will meet other people who are working to improve community life and assist other military families. You'll find people who share your problems but now take an active part in trying to overcome them. You'll also learn about the programs the Army has to offer, and how they can help you.

If you think you have no skills to offer, think again. ACS has jobs that require special training which they provide. Others need people who can organize, with creativity, or just a sympathetic ear. All positions work with other people. Everyone has a skill or talent that ACS can use.

Finally, for volunteers with children, ACS provides free child care while working for ACS. For many mothers, this is an opportunity to get out of the house and become a working part of their community without worrying about paying a babysitter.

Here are some of the areas volunteers are needed in: Budget Counseling, Special Children's Committee, Loan Closet, Teachers for Tiny Tots, Action Line, and Publicity.

Benefits of volunteering are not one-sided at all. If you have time on your hands, call Diane Quintal at Army Community Service at 545-1233, and see what you can do for each other.

Special children's program coming

The Special Children's Committee will have a free Saturday recreation program starting Oct. 24 for handicapped children. The program will operate every Saturday from 9 a.m.-1 p.m., except Thanksgiving. It will be held in bldg. 2088, located by Lawson Army Airfield.

The goal of the program is to provide organized recreational opportunities for handicapped children. Saturday projects will include arts and crafts, bowling, indoor and outdoor sports. Special activities are also planned such as Halloween and Christmas parties and a trip to the circus. Parents will be notified of upcoming special events.

Refreshments will be served but children should also bring a sack lunch.

Myra Mills is the project coordinator. For more information on the Saturday Recreation Program, contact Sp5 David Fleming at 545-1233, at the Army Community Service.

'Tide' J.V. rolls by Doughboys 44-27

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys watched the Alabama Crimson Tide J.V. come rolling through Doughboy Stadium last Friday night in their 44-27 loss to Bama.

The Doughboys kept it fairly close through most of the game, but watched their hopes slip away when Alabama scored their sixth and final touchdown late in the fourth quarter. However, Benning had chances at winning the game with some good quarterbacking by Leamon Hall who was 23 out of 43 for 301 yards and no interceptions. The only problem was Hall's receivers dropped at least three certain touchdown passes.

Alabama started the scoring on their second play of the game when Craig Turner took the handoff and scampered 62 yards for the touchdown.

Hall came right back with an 11 yard touchdown strike to tight end Marvin Jones. "Hall played probably his best game ever," said Doughboy Head Coach Ralph Santaliz optimistically. "The offense is finally getting to where we want it. Of course, we could still make some improvements, but I'm pleased with it at this point."

After a Paul Trodd field goal, Bama scored their second TD with a Donald Horstead two yard run. The Doughboys then cut Alabama's lead to three, 16-13 when Hall hit Elyon Zeigler with a 26 yard pass. However, Bama managed one more touchdown before the half when Andy Martin ran one yard for the score. Alabama held a precarious 23-13 lead at the half.

Coming out in the second half, Alabama began to take command of the game when Craig Turner scored on a 14 yard touchdown run to put Bama on top 30-13. However, Hall once again with his improving passing attack, hit Zeigler for another touchdown, this one for nine yards. Zeigler caught three of Hall's four touchdown tosses.

Following another Alabama score by James Shaw, Hall passed once more to Zeigler for a 27 yard TD cutting the lead to 37-27. That's when Alabama scored their final touchdown, putting the Doughboy's away and putting Fort Benning at 2-2 on the season.

"All I can say," said Santaliz on his team performance, "is that we played our best. Offensively, we played a good game. Defensively, we had seven starters out, so we were playing a lot of young, inexperienced players." As far as the upcoming Florida game goes, Santaliz said he will be playing the same defense as he used against Alabama. "Last year, we beat them easily, so this year they'll be gunning for us."

The Doughboys next game will be played in Gainesville, Fla. against the University of Florida J.V. Sunday at 2 p.m.

Punt, Pass, Kick

Now that the YA football season is in its fourth week, tremendous improvement has been noted in the youth's playing ability.

The punt, pass and kick competition that in the past was hosted by TRADOC, has been cancelled. The Youth Activities sports office, however, will host this year's post competition.

The four housing areas will be conducting the preliminary trials beginning Tuesday. Any youth (ages 6-18) interested in the competition must notify their football or cheerleading coach or their respective area president. Bouten Heights and Davis Hill youth will play at Blue Field, Tri-city youth at Weatherby Field, Lavoie youth at the Lavoie baseball field #2 and Main Post youth at Blue Field.

Winners in each age group will then compete in the Fort Benning finals on October 25 beginning at 1 p.m. at Blue Field. Awards for the competition will be given at the Doughboys game during the half-time activities on November 8.

All kinds of sports on post

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Who says there's nothing to do here on post? That's simply not true. Whether you're a spectator or participant, there's all kinds of events and sports leagues for people here to get involved in.

With the numerous gyms, tennis courts, playing fields and swimming pools located on post, there's no excuse for not having lighthearted, challenging and exciting fun. It's all there for the taking.

If you enjoy football or basketball, the post has a major sports program for you guys or girls. The teams compete against top-notch competition. An example is the Doughboy's recent game against the University of Alabama J.V. No team to scolf at for sure.

Then there's Youth Activities football, soccer and baseball for the youngsters. The football and soccer programs have already began their seasons providing exciting action for the parents and spectators.

For those who are into swimming, there is a swimming team on post, as well as various outdoor pools and one indoor pool located at Briant Wells gym.

If getting all wet isn't your bag, then maybe you would like to try the rough and tough sports of rugby or soccer. Once again, we have post teams in both of these sports. Rugby is now in full swing and the post soccer team called Liverpool went to the state tournament this year. So, as you can see, playing on a team here can take you to far-away, exotic places.....like Atlanta! You can't get much more exotic than that.

Now if you're a softball buff, there are so many softball leagues and seasons that it's hard to keep up with them. Currently, there is the women's fall softball league going on. However, there is also a summer league for both men and women. There's also post teams for both sexes.

If I haven't caught your favorite sport yet, then never fear, it's probably played on post anyway. There's tennis, polo matches, karate and..... So, as you can see, the variety never ends. And to think that there are also alot of intramural programs.

I truthfully think that instead of the world going to the dogs, it's going to sports. Isn't it great?

YA football well underway

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Grasshopper League (6-8 year olds)

In the first game the Seahawks downed the Raiders 48-22. Scorers for the Seahawks were Shawn Gentry with two pass interceptions and Lee Patton with a 25 yard touchdown run and an interception TD. Defensive standouts were Chris Turner and James Laceywell.

In other action, the Tri-city Cowboys blanked the Tri-city Raiders 22-0. Styrom Traylor scored the first touchdown of the game on a 30 yard run. The other two touchdowns came as a result of a 60 yard kickoff return an a 20 yard pass play, both by James Thornton. Defensive standouts for the game were Jamie Hammill, David Gage, Chris Grice and Bobby Gypson.

Termite League (9-10 year olds)

A rare scoreless game was played by the Rams and Stampedeers showing both teams strength on defense. The Rams were held to 102 total yards while holding the Stampedeers to 7 yards. Defensive standouts were Scott Taylor, Lance Sparrow and Carey Riley. The most notable plays were made in the fourth quarter when the Rams fumbled on the Stampedeers four yard line. The Stampedeers then moved the ball to midfield before turning the ball over. The Rams moved the ball to the nine yard line as time ran out.

Pee Wee League (11-12 year olds)

In a close game, the Jets managed to slip by the Rams 16-14. The Jets gathered momentum in the fourth quarter for two touchdowns. The Jets were trailing 8-0 at the half with Jets moving the ball well. The Rams then scored again and the Jets went to a passing strategy. Timmy McIntosh connected with tight end John McFadden for three receptions and Chris Howard for a 20 yarder. McIntosh capped the drive for an 8 yard rollout for the TD.

On the second Jet drive, McIntosh mixed the running of Ronnie McIver and short passes that ended with McIver going up-the-middle for the touchdown. The winning play for the Jets was a misdirection rollout by McIntosh for the extra points.

Senior team

The Wolverines travelled to Maxwell A.F.B. for a return match. However, the Wolverines lost to the Red Knights 42-8.

Women's softball

The post women's fall softball league began play Oct. 2 at Gowdy Field.

The Triple T's whipped the OC's 17-3 and the Lady Angels came from behind to nip the Country Palace Pros 11-9 in Friday nights action. On Saturday morning, the 197th Infantry Brigade stomped the 34th Medical Battalion 19-6 and the OC's crushed the Country Palace Pros 11-1.

Kids get kick out of soccer

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

The second week of Youth Activities Soccer saw improved individual skills of the players as well as better team work.

In the Grasshopper Division, the Bulldogs and the Rockets tied 2-2. Mathew Bearden and Sean Del'Orto scored for the Bulldogs. The team's defensive standouts were Brian Heard and Ashley Pierce. The Rockets' scorers were Steve Lorick and Melanie Hallums, and both were also the defensive standouts.

The Chiefs blanked the Black Knights 6-0. Stuart Burton scored three goals followed by Ryan Yates with two goals, and Ryan Dillon with one. The Chiefs were lead on defense by Etan Hazelrias and Andrew Small.

Black Knight defensive players Ellyn Langhorne, Rich Comer and David Sorrell played well in their positions.

Termite Division action saw the Goldiggers defeat the Stings 3-2. Christy Sorrell, Mike Wall and Alex Brown each scored a goal for the Gol-diggers. Scott Jorgensen and Peter Dargle lead the defense.

The Rowdies beat the Warriors 5-1 in their match. Scoring for the Rowdies were Johnathan King, Vince Pruitt, Rob RisCassi, Carlos Benson and Andy Erikson. Defensive standouts werer Bobby Lenz, Vince Pruitt and Lyman King.

Tom Williams scored the Warriors only goal. Playing well for defense were Christ Crookston and Scott Shelton.

The Hustlers defeated the Titans 3-2 in the Junior Division game. Jim Humphrey, Eric Entlich and Tray Stamperd each scored for the Hustlers. Defense was highlighted by plays by Barry Allman, John Rhodes and Stacey Crookston and Pat Riccinto, one of last week's defensive standouts, was out of the lineup due to an appendectomy.

The Titans' goals were made by Raymond King and Jim Connors. Mike Saliba continued to do well in his sweeper position. Other defensive standouts were Tom Langhorne and Jeff Gersh. Felix Gonzales did well in his second game in organized soccer.

Reservist says body requires maintenance

By Darryl Earley
108th Training Command

There are those of us who may wonder exactly what kind of a person it takes to become a bodybuilder, and why they dedicate so much time and sweat to developing such statuesque physiques.

Well Sp5 Fred Bray, a supply and unit arms clerk with the 108th Training Command, William A. McWhorter Army Reserve Training Center, Fort Jackson, S.C., knows exactly the kind of person it takes, because he is one of those special people.

Bray, who is here for a two-week annual training session, is also the 1980 winner of Mr. University of South Carolina Bodybuilding Classic.

The human body, like most prized possessions, requires a certain amount of upkeep. In case of a bodybuilder, body maintenance is all the more important.

"As well as having the right physique, any potential bodybuilder should also be well disciplined," said Bray. "It takes a lot of work to bring out those muscles. You have to work out when you don't want to, and you have to eat the right foods. And that," he added, "means cutting back on the junk food. You have to be dedicated to grooming a healthy as well as an attractive body."

Bray has been into bodybuilding for about two years now and as he says, he loves it.

"I've been interested in weight lifting since I was in the sixth grade. I would read magazines and everything, but there was no place to train in my area (Columbia, S.C.) until a local gym opened up about two years ago."

According to the 24-year-old Georgia native, when he first went to the gym, it was only to lift weights. "The owner looked in on me one day and recommended that I try bodybuilding," said Bray, "and I've been at it everything since."

Although he does not agree with the notion that bodybuilders are a bit masochistic, Bray feels that, "It's just what you have to go through to build your body. You have to work hard and keep at it."

As a serious bodybuilder, Bray's grueling and rigorous training schedule demands spending from at least one and a half to two hours a day, and at least four days a week at the gym. Bodybuilding requires an extensive program designed specifically to exercise every muscle group. And by just looking at him you can easily tell that Fred Bray has indeed paid his dues in the workout room. But as Bray puts it, "That's what it takes to be a winner."

"Bodybuilding is just like any other sport, you do as well as you want to, and then competition shows just how hard you trained."

Another reason that the 5'8", 162

Reservist Fred Bray, a supply and unit arms clerk with the 108th Training Command, watches closely to monitor his daily development as he works out with a "curling" exercise.

pound supply clerk enjoys his sport is for the relaxation it affords. "Bodybuilding clears the mind. It gives you a pretty good feeling after a work out. It's sort of like a sedative."

"Believe it or not, it's good for morale. At one time I doubted myself," said the soft spoken Bray, "now I feel that I'm good enough to compete with anyone."

Staff welcomes lady predictor

This week, our weekly professional football picks column welcomes a new and final member to our weekly bouts with the odds. Rita Marchetti will be representing the women out there and showing that she's not just a pretty face. Sean Ford, who is on vacation, will be back next week to complete our group of predictors.

Rita Marchetti - "So glad to be joining the team of Ford, Harrison, Adams and Rhodes (sounds like a firm of sports consultants)."

Rita Marchetti makes her first weekly picks.

Seriously though, I wonder if Jimmy the Greek got his start this way. Now it's time for an Italian to make some predictions. Thanks guys for giving me a chance to prognosticate."

Larry Harrison - "Here's looking at week number six. This week we have a new member to our group. Don't worry sports fans, we'll still be number one in the win column."

Don Rhodes - "This week Philadelphia gets a walk at New Orleans. They should only send the second string and save some of their travel money for a party. Cleveland at Pittsburgh should be a real shootout. I wonder how many of the players will be able to play next week. The edge goes to the Steelers because they're playing at Three Rivers."

Tony Adams - "First things first. I would like to say 'welcome aboard' to Rita Marchetti, our new member. I agreed that we needed some female representation every Sunday

As far as this weeks picks go, I think this should be a week without upsets. The home teams will win in most stadiums. Probably the best game should be Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Their rivalry goes on and on. It's really too bad that one team has to lose (ties are rare nowadays). Atlanta looks to have the homefield edge over the Rams and Buffalo should come one game closer to Miami. Wish me luck."

'Soldier of Year' to be on next week's show

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Last week my column and the WFBG-TV schedule reflected the fact that Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year was to be a guest on this weeks Benning Report. Anyone who tuned in was probably surprised to see members of the 121st Aviation Company in a rerun of a previous Benning Report. Due to technical difficulties and production scheduling problems we were unable to record this weeks program. Hopefully we'll be a little luckier next week and Sp4 Ronald Eller will be our guest and tell the story of how he achieved the title of Soldier of the Year. Consult the BAYONET, Benning Bulletin or the Ledger-Enquirer

TV Book (listed under cable) for times and dates of scheduled programs. Highlighted programs include:

- "Their Choice was Freedom" tells the story of three Communist defectors who chose to risk their lives and possessions to become members of a free society, ours.
- "The Chaplain's Assistant" is a program detailing the work a chaplain's assistant does and the importance of it.
- "Big Picture-Battle of San Pietro" is a documentary on what has been called one of the most dramatic battles in World War II.
- "Big Picture-D-Day" replays all of the action of the invasion that marked the turning point in the war in Europe during World War II.

VA Q&A

Q — I keep hearing about a special National Service Life Insurance divided payable to veterans whether or not they kept their insurance in force. Am I entitled to this dividend?

A — No. The story is a hoax that keeps appearing periodically. There are no dividends available on policies that have lapsed.

Horrible but funny. Read Hagar the Horrible every day in THE COLUMBUS LEDGER

Danceathon '81

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Aerobic dancers from the entire area are invited to kick up their heels to raise money for Special Olympics. The local Danceathon will be held Nov. 21 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

Benning Garden Club

The Fort Benning Garden Club is inviting anyone interested to come to our monthly meeting. Mr. Dick Collier from the Georgia Extension Service will be talking about houseplants.

The meeting will be held Oct. 19 at 9:15 a.m., upstairs in the OWC Activity bldg. on Ingersoll Street. A yearly membership is available for $5 (activity fee or OWC activity card).

For more information call 689-2347.

Parents Anonymous

Parents Anonymous meetings are held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. For more information call 687-3487.

'Old Airborne' picnic

The fourth annual "Old Airborne Department" picnic will be held at the Uchee Creek recreation area Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Everyone is asked to bring a covered dish to share. Cups, plates, napkins, ice, utensils and coffee will be available.

For more information call 545-1118.

Auditions being held

The Fort Benning Dramatizers announce auditions for their Christmas show called "How the Animals Celebrate Christmas." The auditions will be held at the Fort Benning Playhouse, Bldg. 72, today and tomorrow at 3 p.m.

One must be eight years old or above to audition and children under the age of 12 must be accompanied by an adult. Only active duty military and their families need audition. It is not necessary to prepare an audition piece.

The show will be presented Dec. 3-5, 10-12.

For more information call 545-7686 or 687-6014.

Book sale

COLUMBUS, Ga. — The Bradley Library is planning a book sale for Oct. 24. The sale is to raise money to replace old and worn out books, and to help increase the collection of books and materials housed at the library. For sale will be extra copies of books, records, and magazines which the library has purchased over the years and now has marked for discarding. The sale begins at 9 a.m. on Saturday and lasts until 5 p.m. All materials will be selling at very low prices (under a dollar), so there will be bargains galore.

MEDDAC Health Fair

The annual MEDDAC Health Fair will be held Oct. 24 from 7:30 a.m.-6 p.m. at the Main PX. The theme for this year's fair is "Your Health is Your Responsibility." MEDDAC personnel will be available to answer questions about health care and to provide health information.

For more information call 545-1144.

George II, George III, and also under George Washington, and was ready to serve under Madison. In 1768 he moved with his family from New York to Penobscot, Me., when William was just four years old.

The region was a wilderness, Hitchings Sr. being one of the earliest settlers. He cleared a farm and established a home under the harsh conditions of pioneer life. His son recalled those childhood experiences; at times, he said, they were scarcely able to get enough food. The family was finally beginning to live comfortably when the British drove his father from his home. He fled with his family to Newcastle and lived there until the war ended, while his son remained to fight the enemy.

Soon after the war ended, Hitchings married. He had 15 children, all but one of whom lived to be married. Throughout his life he was an early riser and hard worker.

"He is deeply interested in the present conflict," wrote Hillard, "his whole soul being enlisted in the cause of his country. Speaking of General Grant and his prospects of success in his campaign against Richmond, he concluded by saying, 'Well, I know two old folks up here in Maine who are praying for him.' He had lost four or five grandchildren in the war. On the subject of slavery, he declared: 'God will never suffer it to exist in this country.'"

Revolutionary War soldier buried here

Buried in a small, well-shaded cemetery located off Red Diamond Road in the northeast section of Fort Benning reservation are the remains of John O'Quinn and his wife Rhoda.

O'Quinn was a soldier — an infantry soldier.

The only significance between his grave and the many others on post is, his is the only documented burial site containing the remains of a Revolutionary War soldier.

Beginning Oct. 16 and lasting through Oct. 19, Fort Benning will be celebrating the final victory of the Revolutionary War — the Battle for Yorktown.

The theme for the festivities, which has lasted this whole past year has been the "Spirit of Victory", the spirit of the men who fought, defeated the British and established a nation.

John O'Quinn was one of those men, a fitting tribute to himself the Spirit of Victory and by being buried here, a tribute to those that have followed during the last 200 years of freedom.

IFV christening Tuesday

A nine-member squad from Fort Benning will participate in the christening ceremony for the new Bradley Infantry/Cavalry Fighting Vehicle Tuesday at Fort Myers, Va.

Squad members of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command's Infantry Fighting Vehicle Systems Task Force at Fort Benning agree that it is one of the finest vehicles the Army has today.

Captain Spurgeon A. Moore, project officer for the Task Force, called the new Infantry Fighting Vehicles Systems "far superior to the Army's present-day armored Personnel Carrier (M113), especially in firepower and mobility."

"The vehicle is definitely an asset and greatly enhances the capability of the mechanized infantry and the combined arms team," said Moore.

Moore will accompany the squad to Fort Myers.

SFC Notley P. Reavis III, one of the higher ranking noncommissioned officers who is a member of the christening squad, notes that the vehicle is "easy to maintain, and the vehicle gives the infantry a feeling of greater security because of its armor protection."

SFC Warren T. Miller Jr. cites the vehicle's track system and suspension as greatly superior to the M113. "I liked it because every man in the vehicle can fight from inside when it is buttoned up," Miller said.

SSgt. Paul Roberson is impressed with the vehicle's turret system and weapons systems, calling them "simple to use and maintain and they are very accurate."

Sgt. Mark Vought is impressed with the vehicle because "it is easy to learn to operate and maintain it." He added that the vehicle is "the most comfortable tactical vehicle I have ever driven."

For Sp4 Rex Bridges, the communications system between crew members "is one of the outstanding features."

Their sentiments voice the feelings of the other members of the nine-man squad making the trip,

Sp4 Tracy Liston, SSgt. Craig S. Wilkinson, Sp4 Jeffery A. Jones and SFC Harold Thumma.

The crew members have been drawn from two post units, 10th Co., 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade. They are attached to the Fighting Vehicles Systems Task Force at Benning, which has the primary mission of managing all Fighting Vehicle requirements for which The Infantry School is the proponent. This includes all the training requirements involved.

The Bradley Infantry/Cavalry Fighting Vehicle will be named in honor of the late General of the Army, Omar Nelson Bradley. The ceremony is being held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the National Association of the U.S. Army in Washington, D.C., Oct. 19-21.

Dry weather causing fires

By Becky Bulgrin
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There are plenty of woods covering this post and, recently, a lot of man-hours have been spent fighting fires in them.

Fifteen forest fires burnt 65 acres of Fort Benning in the first three days of October. Another 12 fires caused damage to 31 acres Oct. 4-10.

According to Chris Dunn, chief, Natural Resources Branch, Directorate of Facilities Engineers, the rash of fires is most likely due to the extremely dry weather conditions we've been having.

"The rain this past weekend helped," said Dunn,

"but if we don't get more we'll be back in the same situation pretty quick."

Dunn reported that most of the fires occurred on or around range, bivouac and patrol areas.

"Those involved in military training should be particularly careful when using incendiary training aids such as flares, simulators, and smoke grenades," advised Dunn. "Even blank ammunition will cause some fires."

He added that while training on bivouac sites, people should keep a close eye on camp fires, be Where's recognition for the IFM?

By Rick Kiernan
Editor, INFANTRY Magazine

As the Administration's fiscal ax falls, Department of Defense budget managers scrutinize each project and Pentagon planners prioritize systems that will ensure the nation's defense for the coming decade. IFV, M1, B1, and MX head the list of systems that will provide a vital niche in the military arsenal of the 80s. However, the IFM, one of the most important weapons, goes virtually unnoticed and receives very little media play.

The IFM prototype was established years ago and the production models now come off the line for less than $50,000 each. They are produced at sites in New Jersey, Georgia, South Carolina, and other places around the country. Few changes have been made in the production process that transforms the raw material into the finely honed weapon that is adaptable Army-wide.

Maintenance has been the biggest problem with the IFM in order to ensure a life cycle of at least twenty years. Repair parts have not been a major area of concern as the system has been incredibly durable even in combat situations.

The maintenance factors have included sustaining fuel and a suitable facility to house the IFM.

Supporters of the IFM patiently await the day when technology finally recognizes the IFM for what it is — the finest weapon on the battlefield. Tested in training and proven in combat the Infantry Fighting Man is the ultimate weapon — THEN, NOW AND FOREVER!

Army and Marine Corps need a new GI Bill

When GI Bill education benefits were conceived during World War II they were considered to be both a reward for service to the nation and a device to ease the transition from the rigors of service back into civilian life.

That concept continued until the advent of the All Volunteer Force, when recruiters began using the availability of educational benefits as another selling device. When congress allowed that benefit to die at the end of 1976 both the recruiters and the nation lost a valuable program.

Throughout the years of volunteerism the Air Force and the Navy have had a clear edge over the Army and Marine Corps in the competition for the best of the recruits because the first two services could offer more opportunities for training in civilian-related skills. The Army and Marine Corps have relatively few jobs that train a man or woman to go to work for a civilian airline or a nuclear power company. Skills with a rifle or in an artillery or tank crew don't translate easily into a civilian job list.

There is no question that it would be best if a new GI Bill could have the same broad applicability as the old one, and if we were still drafting most of our new service members that is the way it would have to be. But in the volunteer environment we must use whatever tools are at hand to keep the ranks filled with the best possible people.

So the new GI Bill is being thought of, pure and simply, as a recruiting and retention tool.

Statistics show clearly that the Air Force and Navy are attracting far more people in the higher aptitude categories than are the Army and Marines and therefore do not need the same recruiting tools.

The Department of Defense has announced that it will propose legislation early next year to give the Army and Marine Corps, "... a competitive edge" in the quest for young people who might otherwise be going to college. The Air Force and Navy are understandably opposing this plan. But as long as a program as expensive as a GI Bill is to be a recruiting and retention incentive the bulk of its efforts should be focused on the places it is most needed — The Army and the Marine Corps. Whatever one may do, everybody is a somebody

Chaplain

Whatever one's position in life may be, it is always important to remember that nobody is a nobody, that everybody is a somebody. In fact, even though a person may not fit where they are, there really is no need for anyone to be misfit, because everyone has a purpose in life.

First Lt. Bert Kessel tells this story about one of his men in his Marine company when it was preparing for an assault on Iwo Jima. This man, who was deeply devout in the practice of his religious faith, appeared to be a misfit in the unit. His name was Pvt. Forrest, but because of his high-pitched voice he soon became known as "Squeaky". Forrest was awkward and frail looking, and it was evident that he would never make a very good rifleman, so he was given a job in supply. But that didn't seem to work out very well and he was shunted to several other positions, trying to place this misfit in a useful position.

Finally the day came when Kessel's men stormed the beaches and began to fight for the white sands that would go down in history as one of the bloodiest battles in Marine Corps history. The casualties were high, and Kassel's first glimpse of Forrest amid the bloodshed was when he hurried by as a stretcher bearer. Forrest was a cook, but he jumped at every chance to take the place of a wounded bearer. Those who had scorned Forrest during training now looked at him with admiration. He had real courage, and he was determined in his work. Forrest was a real hero. How about that?

Whenever you meet someone that seems to be a misfit be careful that you never be hasty or unkind in passing judgement on them. True they might not fit where they are, but everyone has a place and a purpose in the scheme of things, and he or she might be the very person that you will come to depend on when you find yourself in a place where you don't fit.

Infantryman to be honored in formal ceremony here

In order to properly acknowledge a gallant infantryman who gave his life for his fellow soldiers and his country, the Weapons, Gunnery and Maintenance Department is holding a formal dedication and memorialization ceremony at 11 a.m., Oct. 23.

Bldg. 241, designated Miller Hall earlier this year, will be dedicated in honor of 1st Lt. Gary L. Miller who received the Medal of Honor (posthumously) for his brave actions on Feb. 16, 1969 in the Republic of Vietnam. Oct. 23 has also been proclaimed Miller Day by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel.

Prior to the dedication ceremony on the front lawn of bldg. 241, Miller will be inducted in the OCS Hall of Fame. That ceremony will be held at Wigle Hall at 10 a.m. Miller graduated from Officer Candidate School in December 1967.

Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Miller of Covington, Va. are scheduled to attend the ceremonies honoring their son.

Miller Hall is located in the old hospital area near the Infantry Museum.

Department of Defense proclaims Energy Week

The Department of Defense has proclaimed the week of Oct. 25-31 as Army Energy Week. In the interest of emphasizing the need for energy conservation, officials here are presently planning activities for post personnel to participate in during the week. The schedule of activities will be announced in the BAYONET'S next edition.

Ultra VEAP benefits soldiers

WASHINGTON — Up to $21,100 in educational funds became available to all qualified enlistees under the Army's Ultra Veterans Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) beginning Oct. 1.

The program began last year as a recruiting test for persons enlisting in selected parts of the country. Now, all those enlisting worldwide in certain critical skills may earn these educational benefits during their Army service.

Army officials say Ultra VEAP will attract highly qualified people who are interested in earning funds for continuing education. It will also help the Army fill its needs in the critical skills.

Ultra VEAP is a supplement to basic VEAP which replaced the services' old GI Bill for education in 1977. Under basic VEAP, for every dollar a soldier contributes to an educational fund, the government adds $2. The maximum amount payable under VEAP is $8,100.

A soldier who enlists under Ultra VEAP for two years may earn an additional educational benefit of $8,000. Those enlisting for three or four years may earn an additional $12,000 benefit. The added benefit is then added to the amount of savings accumulated in basic VEAP. This could mean maximum benefits totaling from $15,200 to $21,100 depending on the length of the enlistment.

To qualify for Ultra VEAP, a soldier must:

- Be a non-prior servicemember.
- Be a high school diploma graduate.
- Have an armed forces qualification test score of 50 or more.
- Enlist in one of 72 selected MOS.
- Enroll in the basic VEAP for a minimum of 12 months.

Also, to qualify for the maximum Ultra VEAP incentive, the soldier must successfully complete training in the skill and complete the obligated tour of duty.

VEAP funds may be used for all education programs approved for payment of VA benefits, including college, university, vocational and technical training programs.

Funds may be used anytime after completing the initial obligated tour or six years of service, whichever comes sooner. Those who do not enroll in an educational program may recover only the funds personally contributed to the program. (ARNews)

From Atlanta to Columbus

Delta to reinstate late flight

Like to spend at least a few more hours at home with the family before rushing off to catch an afternoon flight back to Fort Benning, but thought you had no choice?

Well, now you may. Effective Oct. 25, Delta Air Lines will reinstate its previously discontinued last evening flight from Atlanta to Columbus.

Flight 1693 will fly out of Atlanta at 9:07 and arrive in Columbus at 9:38 p.m. It will provide the same service provided by former Flight 859, connecting from the entire bank of Atlanta arriving flights, according to David C. Garrett Jr., president of Delta Air Lines, Inc.

Garrett mentioned, however, that the Federal Aviation Administration recently issued revised winter season operating rules resulting from the PATCO labor action and that there is a slight possibility that these revised operating restrictions could affect the restored late evening flight.

Anyone who would like to take the late evening flight starting Oct. 25 should first check with Delta to make sure Flight 1693 is not affected by the revised operating rules.

Soldiers learn to use missile system

Story and photos by Larry Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Lee Field, basically known as the training area for Improved TOW Vehicle students, serves yet another role. The soldiers are taught to fire a missile from a ground-mounted weapon at targets 3,000 meters down range.

Recently, soldiers from the 1st and 2nd Infantry Training Brigades underwent TOW gunnery and the gunners' test.

The TOW (Tubular-launched Optically-tracked Wire-guided anti-armor missile) will kill any known armor at a distance of 3000 meters, with a 99 percent first round hit probability. At 3000 meters, a TOW gunner must be well trained and very proficient in his job.

On Lee Field, TOW gunnery is taught with the system outside of the vehicle mounted on a tripod. Powered by two .50, and one 24-volt battery, the ground mount system doesn't require vehicle power.

Sgt. Edwin Rivera, an instructor on Lee Field, said, "Here, the soldiers learn the nine basic tasks of TOW gunnery from assembling the launcher to explaining TOW firing limitations, and characteristics such as loading, arming and unloading the missile, to preparing an anti-armor range card.

"They must also know limitations such as when, where, and how to engage targets like aircraft or boats," he continued.

With the aid of the M-70 trainer, soldiers learn tracking procedures. The trainer grades the soldiers on a 100 point "must system." When the gunner fires a simulated missile, he has 15 seconds to keep sight crosshairs on a moving target 2000 meters down range. A set of crosshairs on the trainer shows the gunner's sight picture in the viewing window. The longer the gunner stays on target, the higher the gunner's points will be.

The soldier must pass the tracking phase with at least 649 points, anything below 550 is a no-go. A soldier must receive a go on all nine basic tasks before he can complete the course. He has four chances to make up any task that he had received a no-go on. If he cannot pass the nine tasks, he is then dropped from the course. At the completion of the course, the gunner with the highest scores will get a chance to fire a live missile.

Pvt. Felix Esposito, a 17-year-old soldier born at Benning's Martin Army Community Hospital and who is assigned to Company E, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Brigade, said, "I was worried about qualifying. We had a day to practice, and I did poorly but, luckily, on qualification day I qualified.

"I feel this was the best training I've had since I've been here," he continued. "But when it comes to this type of training, and having to take a test afterward, I wish we had more time to practice."

"A soldier will spend one week on Lee Field. His day is from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. except on Tuesdays, when he's here from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m." said Sp4 James Gresham, another instructor on Lee Field. "Monday is introduction day, Tuesday night the soldiers are here for night firing and Wednesday is a day of hands-on training. Thursday is spent practicing for the TOW gunnery test that is given on Fridays," continued Gresham.

Many feel that artillery will be the deciding factor in the battle of the future. The TOW guided missile will also be a part of that factor. The training that a soldier receives on Lee Field will help him, and his fellow soldiers, win the first battle of the next war — the battle that is the most important of all battles.

The gunner's view through a TOW sight.

Fires

careful while smoking and beware of dropping cigarette butts and matches.

The main problem with the fires, according to Dunn, is that people aren't reporting them promptly. "A lot of times we don't get a report of a fire until it's pretty big," he explained. "A fire has to be caused from something and someone had to be there when it started. Fires must be reported as soon as possible."

Dunn added, "We want people to know that they won't get arrested or anything; there is no penalty for reporting fires."

"The fire problem needs to be stopped," stressed Dunn, "especially with hunting season starting, when there will be more people out in the woods."

If a fire starts, it should be reported immediately to the Fire Department at 117, the Forrestry Department at 544-6304 or Ranger Control at 545-5186.

Fun show teaches kids fire safety

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It was all for show and the kids loved it. Super Fireman comes charging to the rescue of a trapped motorist pinned inside his car. With him is Lady Linda and the fireman's favorite dog "Sparky." Super Fireman rips off parts of the crashed vehicle. Metal doors don't have a chance. He pulls the passenger out, throws him across his shoulder and delivers him to a waiting ambulance. Never has there been such a rescue in the department as this one.

Last week the Fort Benning Fire Department put on a rescue show for the kids. Not the serious kind, but one for fun and entertainment. Besides the automobile rescue show, a simulated airplane fire was put out. Black smoke billowed into the air as post fire trucks and ambulances roared to the scene.

Fire prevention official, James Floyd, said, "Normally we put on a serious fire demonstration for people. But this time we wanted the school children to enjoy themselves and be entertained by the fire department. This is the first one we've ever done that wasn't a serious demonstration. We did this for the kids and they really seemed to like it.

The children were from Wilbur School on post.

Lady Linda (firefighter Linda Deppe) rides to the accident with Super Fireman.

Assistant Fire Chief Perry helps other firemen rescue a simulated plane crash victim.

Free motorcycle safety course to be offered

By Fred W. Young Safety Manager

The Fort Benning Safety Office is offering a motorcycle safety course to improve your motorcycle driving skills.

The program is designed to minimize your chances of having an accident and may reduce your insurance premiums to 10 percent. Attendance is open to all military, civilian and dependents of Fort Benning. The advanced motorcycle course is being offered free of charge by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation's Better Biking Program.

The course will consist of three and one-half hours of formal classroom instruction followed by a three-hour road test. Students are required to provide their own motorcycle and safety equipment.

Safety equipment will consist of helmet with transparent shield or goggles, gloves, shoes or boots (cover ankles), jacket or long sleeve shirt, and long pants.

The advanced motorcycle course will be conducted on the second and fourth Saturday of each month, providing there is sufficient interest. Remember, this course is designed to enhance your motorcycle driving skills, and it may save your life in addition to saving on your insurance premium.

If you are interested in attending this course, please notify the USAIC Safety Office, 545-3267. Watch the Benning Bulletin for further information.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Many homeowners actually make it easier for burglars to break in and steal their valuables. Sounds crazy, but they don't even realize they're doing it. If you're not doing everything you can to make it hard for a burglar to get in, or if you're making your house too tempting a target, you might as well be the thief's accomplice.

To find out if you're a potential accomplice — some night turn off all of the lights in your house, walk across the street, and look at your home with a burglar's eyes. In other words, case the joint!

Start across the street. Check for shadows or shrubbery that would provide cover to a thief trying to get inside. Is there a car parked close enough to be used as cover or as a ladder to get in a window or onto the roof?

Now walk around to the back of the house. Would your basement door or windows provide easy entry?

Is there evidence of some kind of burglar alarm? Are the hinges on the outside of the door? If so, they could be removed and the door lifted out. Is there a glass panel on the door the burglar could break, reach inside and unlock it?

Since these are the things a would-be burglar looks for, you have to be aware of them, too, unless you want to be an accomplice.

Here are four steps you can take to put the potential burglar "out of business:"

—Make your home uninviting. Good lighting, inside and outside, is probably the single most effective and inexpensive deterrent to burglary. Lighting destroys the cover of darkness thieves prefer to work in. Outside lights should cover all points of entry, alleys and passageways, especially those in the back. If you have a burglar alarm system, make it obvious — put a decal on the door or window. Don't provide other kinds of cover such as a car parked close to the house or ladders that are easily accessible.

—Make it hard to get inside. Outside doors should be heavy and solid — not hollow. Wooden doors should be metal lined to resist sawing and drilling. Hinges should be inside so a thief can't remove them. A deadbolt lock is best for doors. Avoid springlatch locks that a thief can open with a knife, a thin piece of metal or a plastic strip.

—Make it hard to find valuables. Never keep large amounts of cash in the house — keep it in the bank. If you are fortunate enough to have very valuable jewelry, rent a safe deposit box and keep the items in there. Keep a list of serial numbers on items such as televisions, stereos, cameras and so on. This list would help the police identify your valuables should they be stolen.

—Make it likely the thief will be caught. Consider installing a burglar alarm system. It can be a simple, inexpensive kind that merely makes a noise in the house or a complex, expensive and silent type that's tied to a police station.

Here are some points to remember to help make a burglar's job harder:

Most unlawful entries into living quarters are not "forced entry." And, the number of daytime house-break-ins is about equal to the number that occur at night — but the daytime break-ins are increasing at a faster rate.

Most burglaries are "crimes of opportunity." Amateurs looking for easy targets commit most of them. You just can't make your living quarters 100 percent burglar-proof. But remember — most intruders are looking for opportunities, not challenges.

Time is a burglar's enemy. The longer it takes to enter your home, the greater risk of being caught. You can increase his risk by having secure locks on doors, windows and other possible entrances, and using them. Help the Military Police to help you.

EDRE: Emergency deployment exercise shows battalion ready for oversea movement

Story and photos by Raymond Cauthen

197th Public Affairs Office

The 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry of the 197th Infantry Brigade underwent an Emergency Deployment Readiness Exercise (EDRE) last week, once again showing that the Patriots are combat-ready and capable of deployment anywhere in the world.

The EDRE, an unannounced alert testing a unit's capability to deploy under emergency conditions, was administered by the Infantry Center's Directorate of Plans and Training (DPT).

According to Capt. Robert A. Porter, EDRE Team Chief from DPT, during this type of exercise a unit's plans, procedures and preparation for deployment are evaluated.

"The objective is to insure a combat unit can deploy with minimum notice," said Porter. "The 1/58th Infantry conducted one of the better EDREs the team has seen."

An annual EDRE is required for all Forces Command units. The alert procedures and assembly of the soldiers are checked. An inspector of the unit's complete preparation for movement overseas is conducted.

All EDRE requirements must be completed within 96 hours from the start of the exercise.

When the alert is called, many things happen simultaneously around the battalion area. All soldiers are mustered together with full field gear, weapons and protective masks. Security briefings are given to the troops. The battalion area and

Special retreat to be held today

Complete with a color guard wearing Revolutionary War uniforms and carrying muskets, a special retreat ceremony will be held today at 4:30 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall.

The ceremony is being held in celebration of our country's last major battle that led to our independence 200 years ago - the Battle for Yorktown.

Throughout the day, the flag in front of Infantry Hall will be a replica of the one that flew at Redoubt 10 (one of the major battles before victory). Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commander, will present the flag to the Infantry Museum at the ceremony.

Music will be provided by the 283rd Army Band. The public is invited.

Disposal office to hold bid sale

The Defense Property Disposal Office-Benning announced a local spot bid sale will be held at Fort Benning, Ga., Oct. 22, 1981.

Bidder registration begins at 8 a.m., with the sale commencing at 9 a.m. at the Property Disposal Office in Bldg. 467. The general public is invited to attend.

The items offered for sale may be inspected starting Oct. 15 and daily thereafter, during normal workdays, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., excluding lunch.

Items include but not limited to office furniture and machines, household furniture and appliances, televisions, dental and medical equipment, vehicular parts and equipment, kitchen equipment, one 1972 truck, and aluminum iron scrap.

For further information, call A/C 404-545-7214 or visit the disposal facility located on Mitchell Avenue and 10th Division Road, Fort Benning, Ga.

motor pool are sealed off and guards are posted. I.D. cards and tags are checked along with medical and dental records. Immunizations are also given to the soldiers. Postal cards are updated and wills and powers of attorney are initiated. Vehicles and NBC equipment are expected.

The Emergency Operations Center (EOC), the "nerve" center for the 1/58th EDRE, has representatives from all battalion staff sections and remains active 24 hours per day during the EDRE. The EOC must remain ready to relay any messages sent from USAIC about possible deployment.

Although the entire battalion was readied for deployment, only Company A was required to load their vehicles (tracked and wheeled) on railcars at Sand Hill.

1/58th Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. H. T. Fincher, said, "The EDRE is a much needed exercise which enabled us to review our deployment plans. As a result, I feel confident the battalion could deploy anywhere in the world and accomplish the mission."

At the Emergency Operations Center, SSgt. Carl Jones and Capt. Robert Moran react to a radio call.

Soldiers of Company A tie-down vehicles during EDRE.

While one Company A soldier nails a wood chock into place, another prepares a cable for tie-down.

Even the drivers of the tracks help in the tie-down process.

Rabies considered contagious and fatal

By Robert E. Southall Jr.
Veterinary Activity

Rabies is a highly contagious and for all practical purpose a fatal viral disease.

This disease infects all mammals but is most frequently seen in wild mammals, e.g., skunks, foxes, coyotes, raccoons, and bats.

Infected animals shed the rabies virus from the salivary glands and transmission of rabies to man and animals is almost always through bites. When an animal has been bitten by a rabid animal, it usually takes twenty to sixty days for the bitten animal to show signs of being infected.

Rabies is usually seen in one of two forms:

- The furious type in which the animal may appear restless and aggressive. Associated signs are depraved appetite, wandering, excessive salivation, staggering, and paralysis.

- The dumb form, usually characterized by a short period of excitement followed by paralysis, dehydration, and loss of physical condition.

The Post Veterinarian suggests that all wild animals and strange dogs be avoided, especially those exhibiting unusual behavior. The Fish and Game Section of the Provost Marshal's Office should be informed their animals vaccinated against rabies to protect themselves and their pets. For information and appointments call the Veterinary Activity, Fort Benning, 545-4444.

The 'Spirit of Victory'

During the first week of October the American and French soldiers collect wood and other raw materials (from which they make siege materials), conduct patrols, move artillery pieces forward and stand picket (guard) duties at night.

On the evening of Oct. 6, trenching operations begin with Gen. George Washington digging the first piece of ground.

By dawn the first parallel (trench) is in such good shape that it provides enough safety from British artillery fire. Both the American and French units immediately begin constructing redoubts (emplacements) for their artillery, communication trenches and improving their defenses.

On Oct. 10, 10 days after beginning this almost impossible task, it is complete and the remaining American and French artillery batteries are in place. At 9 a.m. the siege of Yorktown begins in earnest as the 10 batteries begin a thunderous bombardment of the British defenses.

Cornwallis is surprised when he surveys the battlefield on the morning of Oct. 12, for before him is another trench 750 yards long and so well done that all of the allied soldiers on line are fully under cover and very well protected from British fire.

From Oct. 12 through Oct. 14, the allied guns fire round after round of cannonball at the British, especially the fusiliers' redoubt in front of the French and at redoubts 9 and 10 facing the Americans.

In response to this, the British step up their return fire, but with little effect. It becomes clear to the allies, however, that the second parallel and the defeat of the British cannot happen unless redoubts 9 and 10 are taken from the Redcoats.

On the afternoon of Oct. 14, allied engineers report to Gen. Washington that the continuous pounding of allied artillery fire has sufficiently damaged the two redoubts to enable the assault they need.

As the sun drops below the horizon on Oct. 14, the French and American batteries begin to slow their fire. At the same time, the allies initiate two diversionary attacks to draw the British attention away from the real targets - redoubts 9 and 10.

The attack begins with the sound of a lone shot fired from one of the French artillery pieces. Within 15 minutes of starting the attack, redoubt 10 is overrun and secured. Redoubt 9 is secured some 20 minutes later by the French, who had run into a few problems during their attack.

The gallant nighttime bayonet assault on the evening of Oct. 14 is over in minutes, and it is with the fall of these two redoubts that the fall of Yorktown comes even closer.

After the redoubts are secured and it is determined that the British won't counterattack, work begins on the completion of the second parallel and tributaries that run between the first trench and the newly occupied redoubts.

At 10 a.m. the following day Maj. Gen. Cornwallis sends a lone drummer to the top of a parapet that surrounds Yorktown. Standing rigid in full dress,

The young soldier begins to beat a chameleon on his drum. Shortly afterward a British officer with a white flag joins the drummer and the two approach the allied lines.

On Oct. 19, at 3 p.m., after four more days of talk and further confrontation, Maj. Gen. Cornwallis surrenders his soldiers and the city of York(town). On a field facing the two redoubts that were the key to his victory, Gen. Washington accepts Cornwallis' sword which symbolises that victory.

Officially, the war for America's independence did not end until the signing of the Peace of Paris on Sept. 3, 1783, a little more than eight years after the first shot at the Concord Bridge.

Yet the victory at Yorktown marked the end. There was joy, gratitude, sadness and prayer among those who had won freedom for America. This ill-equipped, ill-fed, and underpaid soldier had not only suffered at the hands of the British, but had met with neglect and disdain at the hands of some of their own countrymen and still survived. They had endured out of loyalty to their fellow soldier and because of dedication to a cause and country.

Though they couldn't erase the suffering, they did feel the chest-swelling pride that comes from the fact that they generated the spark of the "Spirit of Victory."

Early in the war, Thomas Paine, author of "Common Sense," wrote: "It is not a field of a few acres of ground, but a cause, that we are defending." Americans understood this two centuries ago when they stood upon battle grounds of the Revolutionary War and so they must do so today as well.

As we mark the bicentennial of the Army's victory at Yorktown, let us together renew the pledge of the Declaration of Independence and resolve to defend liberty, opportunity, justice and equality by maintaining a ready, trained, well equipped and mobile military force and a strong national purpose.

Editor's Note: In the last two issues, the BAYONET has dedicated part of its pages to the Spirit of Victory and the defeat of the British at Yorktown. Beginning today and lasting until Oct. 19, our country will celebrate this final victory as the last major celebration of our bicentennial. This final story as well as the others about the 'Spirit of Victory' were written by Gordon Bratz, Editor, SOLDIERS Magazine.

Maj. Gen. Wetzel opens modern motor pool

197th Public Affairs Office

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel officially accepted the new $2.85 million tactical equipment shop for the 197th Infantry Brigade's 2nd Battalion 69th Armor Tuesday.

The ceremonies were held at Munsan Field where the new shop is located on Kelley Hill. Representing the 197th during the ceremony was Brigade Commander Col. Carmen Cavezza and 2/69th Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Donald Volta.

The new motor pool is one of the most modern of its kind anywhere in the Army. Covering an area of 24,625 square feet, the facility provides room for 87 traced vehicles and 116 wheeled vehicles and trailers.

Construction of the building began April 2, 1980 with T. H. Taylor, Inc. of Montgomery, Ala. being the prime construction contractor. The project was designed by the J. E. Sirrinc Company of Greenville, S.C. through the Savannah District Engineers Office.

The facility contains administrative areas, a welding shop, a battery room, tool rooms, parts rooms, and 12 maintenance bays complete with heat, overhead cranes, and carbon monoxide exhaust systems. Also included are a dispatch office, storage building, fueling point, washrack and parking areas.

To support the heavy tanks, 22,959 square yards of concrete for pavement was laid, making a 10-inch thick driving area. 1,222 square yards of asphalt was put down for the smaller sized automobiles.

An added feature to the facility not found anywhere else on Fort Benning is the solar heating unit for domestic hot water, which saves 9.8 million BTUs per year in energy.

During the ribbon cutting ceremony, Maj. Gen. Wetzel said, "If my troops in Europe could see this facility, they would cry." He also charged the incoming unit (2/69th) to keep the facility in the same condition as they received it.

The 2/69th Armor will soon be using the new building on a regular basis and it is just one example of Maj. Gen. Wetzel's theme, "A year of progress," for Fort Benning.

Energy tip

As energy costs continue to soar, the popularity of wood and coal burning stoves is skyrocketing. While these stoves may substantially reduce your heating bills, they can have tragic results if installed or used improperly.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CSPC) estimates that there were 1,465 burn injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms last year involving these stoves and free standing fireplaces.

CSPC case histories show the following accidents involving stoves:

- An individual installed a stoveboard he thought to be nonflammable against the wall about 14 inches behind his wood burning stove after he noticed the wall was getting hot. That night, he awoke to smoke and saw that the stoveboard was bulging and glowing red. He threw it outside in time to escape injury.

- A 65-year-old woman had opened the door of her wood burning stove to add wood to the fire when flames ignited her nightgown. She died from the burns she received.

If you choose to have one of these stoves in your home, take care with the purchase and installation. Before you buy, ask your local building inspector or fire department for any requirements for heating stoves. Look for a stove that has been approved by a nationally recognized testing agency. Stoves must be vented to the outside to protect you from escape of deadly gases. Be aware that an older stove may be cracked for cast iron can become brittle with age.

The stove should be installed by a qualified person. If you must install it yourself, carefully read and follow the manufacturer's instructions. To prevent overheating and ignition of floors and wall coverings, the stove should be placed on a brick platform, fireproof stoveboard or other noncombustible material at least 36 inches from side walls. If you need to install a stove closer to a wall, check the building code for approved types of fireproofing to be installed on nearby walls. Don't use a pipe labeled "vent" as a chimney since it can get very hot (vent pipes are only a single thickness of metal). Use instead an all masonry chimney or one certified by a nationally recognized testing agency as an "all-fuel" chimney.

When you are ready to use your stove, it is imperative that you employ certain safeguards:

- Keep a window slightly open to provide enough oxygen for proper combustion and to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning.

- Use the proper fuel. Make sure all the wood used is dry. Green wood or soft woods such as pine can cause corrosive or flammable deposits to build up in the stove or flue.

- Keep the stove door closed or use a metal screen while the fire is burning to keep sparks from flying.

- Try to keep the fire at a moderate heat. If the fire is too low, flammable gases may explode when the door is opened, and residue, such as creosote, may build up in the chimney causing a fire. In addition, a low flame may cause moisture to condense in the flue and lead to corrosion of metal parts. A glowing red stovepipe is dangerous! Never stoke up the fire so hot that it changes the color of the stovepipe. Cool the fire quickly by closing the stove's dampers and partially closing the stovepipe damper. If that doesn't cool it fast enough, put a few shovels full of cool ashes on top of the burning wood or coal. Don't dispose of paper, polystyrene or trash in the stove. These can cause extremely hot fires and may give off dangerous gases.

To maintain your stove properly, have it inspected once a year to insure that all linings and chimneys are intact, and that the stove is properly adjusted and clean. Keep the chimney free of soot and blockage and have it inspected and cleaned at least once a year.

Col. Hawkins new Ranger director

Col. Eugene D. Hawkins became the Ranger Department director yesterday, replacing Col. Dewey Cameron who is retiring after 27 years of service.

Hawkins has been the Airborne Department director since April 1980. He was the commander of Camp Frank D. Merrill, Benning's Ranger Division at Dahlonega, Ga., in 1978.

He served with the 173rd Airborne Brigade and the 4th Republic of Vietnam Ranger Group in Vietnam.

His decorations include the Soldier's Medal, Bronze Star with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Defense Meritorious service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal - five awards, Army Commendation Medal with one Oak leaf Clusters, Air Force Commendation Medal, Combat Infantry Badge, Senior Parachutist Badge, Ranger Tab and various foreign awards.

Hawkins' replacement as Airborne Department director is Lieutenant Colonel Jerry K. Wall. He has been the deputy director since 1979. His other assignments include two tours in Vietnam, one in Korea and Fort Bragg, N.C., and several tours at Fort Benning.

He received his commission through the ROTC program at Arizona State University where he earned his bachelor's degree in 1962. His master's degree in political science was earned at Appalachian State University at Boone, N.C., in 1978.

VA Q&A

Q — Can a veteran get an extension of his 10-year delimiting date for education benefits from the Veterans Administration?

A — If a veteran was physically or mentally disabled during the period of his eligibility, he may apply for an extension by submitting medical evidence for consideration.

Q — What is the maximum amount I can borrow on a Veterans Administration guaranteed home loans?

A — There is no legal maximum. The VA will guarantee 60 percent of the loan or $27,500, whichever is less. The total amount of the loan is determined by the policy of lending institution and by your ability to repay the loan.

Pathfinder Division instructors teach it a

By Becky Bulgrin

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Talking practically nonstop from early morning to late at night might sound like a strange job to some. But, according to SSgt. Terry Kegerreis, that's just what the instructors from the Pathfinder Division of the Infantry School here do as part of their job.

"You'd really have to see the cadre (instructors) in action to realize what they do," said Kegerreis, a member of the Pathfinder Division. "They act as team leaders to their students and must be able to show them every job a Pathfinder does."

In order to teach the students, the Pathfinder instructors must know their job well. However, they do a lot more than talk.

The Pathfinder Division consists of three sections — 36 students broken down into three 12-man teams. There are four instructors per section and all must be jumpmaster qualified. They teach a three-week course of instruction to students who come from active Army units all over, as well as National Guard and Reserve units.

One of the major blocks of instruction taught is air traffic controlling. The students learn what it is, the purposes of it and communication skills. The instructor then plays pilot while the students act as GTAs (ground-to-air operators). With headphones on and maps in front of them, the students are given four aircraft situations that they must learn to perfection.

According to Kegerreis, the most difficult situation is locating lost aircraft. "The instructor teaches one thing after another, and insists the students learn how to talk on the radio," said Kegerreis.

Another major block of instruction is drop zone techniques. "The cadre teach the students how to set up a DZ from beginning to end," said Kegerreis,

"and he must teach every man his particular job — that means he teaches 12 different jobs."

Students learn how to control aircraft over the drop zone, whether it contains bundles or personnel, and they must know how many jumpers or bundles they can take on the DZ. They also learn the fastest way to get the aircraft in and out of the drop zone. Kegerreis mentioned that this ties in with the air traffic controlling instruction.

Other blocks of instruction include setting up helicopter landing zones, sling loading, airborne refresher course and rappelling. During the final week of the course, the future Pathfinders go on a two-day field training exercise where they are tested on everything they've been taught.

Even while teaching all of this to the students, the instructors must still find time to train new instructors, according to Kegerreis.

The first Pathfinder School was founded in North Witham, England in 1944. The students were volunteers from the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, who were preparing for the 1944 invasion of Normandy. The school closed at the end of World War II, then in 1946 it was reopened here.

Classes continued here until 1951 when the U.S. Air Force combat control teams assumed the mission of providing navigational assistance to Air Force aircraft. But during the Korean War, more Army aircraft were being used so the Department of the Army directed the U.S. Army Infantry School to reopen the Pathfinder School.

In keeping with their motto, "First in, last out," Kegerreis says the Pathfinders get to their appointed sight "whether they have to jump, rappel, truck, or, if they don't have anything — they just walk."

SFC Edward Irby grades students' performance Airborne refresher course.

Rapelling an important job for Pathfinders

By Tony Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"After doing it for so long, rapelling gets to where it's routine," says SSgt. John Bolen of the 187th Infantry Platoon (Pathfinders), 34th Medical Battalion.

Considering the fact that this reporter made two trips off the 50-foot tower and one trip off simulated helicopter skids, this was hard to believe.

Looking down as you're about to go off the skid is a shaky sight, although there is really no danger whatsoever. If the rapeller follows the proper techniques then everything is fine. However, if for some reason he should happen to lose his coordination, the belay man (a safety man holding the free end of the rope) has everything under control. Once the belay man pulls taut on the line, the rapeller's descent slows, leaving him practically floating in the air. Said Bolen with a smile, "The rapeller has to hope the belay man likes him."

The Pathfinders, who are airborne qualified at a minimum, are basically air traffic controllers. They are taken into an area (usually by helicopter) which is to have aircraft landing in it. They rapell 60-100 feet to the ground from the chopper where they immediately clear land and prepare a suitable landing zone. "Aircraft are our Lives," said Bolen. "They're our primary source of transportation to a designated mission sight."

Bolen states one problem surrounding the Pathfinders is their numbers. "There's just not enough of us. We need more people in this field. It would really help our overall readiness."

Gators pound Doughboys 31-13

By Tony Adams

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys traveled South this past weekend only to be sent back home with a 31-13 lashing by the University of Florida J.V. team. The Doughboys' ailing defense continued to play 100 percent. However, it was not enough against a prepared Florida J.V.

The loss might not be the worst to come from the game. Quarterback Leamon Hall suffered a pulled hamstring and a bruised shoulder and had to be replaced in the third quarter by backup Harry Vaughn. If Hall can't return this week, that leaves Vaughn with the starting position Sunday against Fort Bragg. However, Vaughn is leaving for Germany after this game and the third string quarterback is also out until the end of October. "This leaves us in a real bind," commented Head Coach Ralph Santaliz. "All we can hope for is that Hall can make it back."

Florida started the scoring in the first quarter when their quarterback hit his receiver for a 72-yard touchdown pass. This made it 7-0 after the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Florida scored once again as a 17-yard touchdown strike was thrown to put them up 14-0. The Doughboys, who moved the ball but just couldn't seem to punch it in, almost managed a score before the half when Hall tried a quarterback sneak from the one-inch line. However, the Florida defense held, leaving the Gators on top 14-0 at the half.

Coming out in the second half, Hall marched down to the Gators' five-yard line before throwing a TD strike to Robert Jackson to cut the lead to 14-7. That was as close as the Doughboys could come as Florida scored on a 26-yard field goal and a one-yard run. That put the score at 24-7 at the end of the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter, the Gators scored once more on a 44-yard touchdown run. Fort Benning managed one more score when replacement Vaughn hit wingback Julian Harden for a 14-yard touchdown pass. The conversion failed, leaving the score at 31-13.

The Doughboys' next game will be against the Fort Bragg Dragons Sunday at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium. The Doughboys and Dragons have developed an exciting rivalry over the years. In last year's meeting, Fort Bragg defeated Fort Benning 23-12. Fort Benning's record now stands at 2-3.

Benning provides marshalls

Snead wins Open

By Dennis Saylor
 15th Finance Company

The Southern Open Golf Tournament was held last weekend at the Green Island Country Club.

Fort Benning Assistant Golf Pro Ray Wells was a participant in the tournament. Wells took up the game in Tomaston, Ga. and attended Georgia Southern University where he played on the golf team. The team was nationally ranked his junior and senior year.

Ray also played in the 1979 Southern Open. He said excitedly, "It was a big thrill to play in the Southern Open, even though the score was nothing to brag about. Just playing with the 'big boys' is something. You get an idea of what pressure they are under."

He said the greens are what makes the course tough because of their slope. He shot scores of 77 and 81 and had problems putting and in fact three putted four times the first day. He was very appreciative of all the Fort Benning people that came to see him play and was concerned that he not let the people down.

Fort Benning was well represented as a number of people were volunteer marshalls for the tournament. Although the crowds were small due to the bad weather these people were influential in keeping order during play. Benning provided marshalls on hole number 11 as well as marshalls to follow the leaders. Additionally the marshalls on number 11 were responsible for measuring the distance of the drives off the tee. The longest drive was about 285 but the average was around 250.

Southern

Earl Brown of the 36th Engineer Group was one marshall on hole number 11. He had these comments, "It is tremendous that a city of this size can have such an event and the people involved should be commended. Golf is a unique sport because it allows the spectator to get elbow to elbow within the participants." He also considers himself very fortunate to have been given the opportunity to participate. The marshalls were a very important part of the tournament because if they don't do their job the players can't do theirs. There were many people that worked as marshalls and they should all be commended for the job they did.

Four-ball results in Spectacular putting gave Fred Wadsworth's team a 10-under par first place victory in the Columbus Day four-ball scramble held at the Follow Me Golf Club last weekend.

Joining Wadsworth on the winning team were McCamy, Dishman and Mellillo.

Club Pro George Cliff said 76 golfers participated in the scramble. The next event will be held Oct. 31, Cliff announced.

Second place went to the team of Roger Garrity, Parrish, Martin and Sowers. They posted an 8-under 64.

Other winners included: Third Place — Smith, Langlen, McNeill, Charpentier. Fourth Place — Morin, Levette, Porter, Morgan. Fifth Place — Hood, Powell, Brinkman, Murphy.

Closest to the hole prizes were awarded to Jim Schoonover, Charlie Dove, Fred Wadsworth and Rod Rodriguez.

Foreign marksmen compete here

By Tommy Pool
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

More than sixty competitors representing a dozen foreign nations were on hand last weekend here to participate in the Gulf Coast Trap matches and the Running Target Grand Prix Championships.

In the running target events, Randy Stewart of USAMU established a new national record as he scored 389 points out of a possible 400 in Mixed Runs competition breaking the old mark by two points. Todd Bensley, a ROTC cadet from Lordsburg, N.M., placed second with 382, which also set a new civilian record. John Anderson, Phoenix, Ariz., finished third with 380.

Army Reservist Fritz Allen of Colorado Springs, Colo., defeated Randy Stewart in the Olympic Runs event when both scored 573 out of 600 points, with Allen winning in the tie-breaking procedure.

This year's Gulf Coast Trap Championship was won by Billy Cole of Trinity University, Tex., with 197 targets out of 200, followed by George Leary of Canada at 196. USAMU's Dan Carlisle, last week's Gulf Coast Skeet champion, finished third at 194.

Five members of the US Army Marksmanship Unit will depart Fort Benning this weekend to compete with the United States Shooting Team in the 1981 World Moving Target Championships to be held in Buenos Aires and Tucuman, Argentina.

Events to be fired include International Skeet, Trap and Running Target. USAMU members that were selected to the U.S. team include: (skeet) Matt Dryke, Dean Clark, Alger Mullins; (trap) Earnest Neel; and (running target) Randy Stewart.

More than thirty of the top teams in the world are expected for the matches to be held today through Nov. 3. Watch for complete scores and final results in future issues of the BAYONET.

Rita Marchetti - "As we enter week number 'lucky seven', I'd just like to say how proud I am of the Pittsburgh Steelers. The 'family' is on their way to the top again. Some folks say they're getting older. I say they're getting better.

On the local front - good luck to Ralph and all the Doughboys this Sunday. Your new gold and black uniforms look as forceful as the boys from the Steel City."

Sean Ford - "I missed last week's fun, thank heavens! I'd like to welcome Rita to the madness and mayhem of this season. I hope she has as much fun as I'm not.

Back to football. After two wins over the Steelers last year I can't bet against the 'Cardiac Cats'. The Rams got a big win over the Falcons last week and should be ready for Dallas. Finally folks, I promise that New England is better than 1-5."

Larry Harrison - "Last week was a nine and five week for us sports fans. This week we should do even better. Los Angeles had a big win over Atlanta last week, but as I said the first week of the season, they can't find their way out of the cellar long enough to keep a good string going. Some of you may be mad at that statement, but remember, we're still number one in the win column."

Don Rhodes - "Out on a limb - the Jets are going to take the Bills. One - because they're at home. Two - because the Bills had to play Monday night. The rest of the games shouldn't hold too many surprises."

Tony Adams - "Things can't get worse, they can only get better. Patience is the name of the game."

Armchair Sports

Summer sport in fall weather?

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With autumn about to nestle its leaves upon us, it's hard to believe that there's a primarily summer sport still going strong. What! How absurd you say! Well, frankly, it seems to be a pretty good start on a good program. The sport is women's softball and the program is the women's sports program, newly arrived to posts around this man's Army.

What happened was DA decided it was time to promote more women's sports around the various commands. This message has apparently been received by the Sports Office here on post as women's softball has been started and other sports such as basketball and volleyball (not to mention intramurals) are in the works. As for my personal opinion, I think it's about time. I mean, sure we can't forget about the men's sports because they too are an integral part of the morale and happiness of the surrounding military community. But the women have to be recognized. I'm not a hard-line women's libber, but they too deserve support both financially and through the fans, if they are going to survive.

And survival is the name of the game for any sport on any post. Women's sports, elsewhere in the country, are supported heartily by booster clubs, crowd support, and organizations in the community.

That leads to the question of a possible booster club on this post, to provide support for both women and men. I've more or less been toying with the idea. I think that with the aid of a booster club, people on post could be provided with things like discount tickets, special trips to games and other additional benefits for the true sports fan on Fort Benning.

I think this wouldn't be a bad idea. How about you? Without you, it's definitely not possible. That's why if you are interested in forming some type of club like this, write the old sports ed and tell me what you think about it. Also, if you have any other questions about any other sports, write me here at the BAYONET, Building 4, Room 601, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. Your letters will be appreciated in getting feedback from the public on sports issues.

Soccer proves to be slippery sporting event

Girls are also making their run at playing soccer.

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

Despite an already wet playing field and more rain, the Youth Activities soccer teams enjoyed another Saturday morning.

Grasshopper Division action saw the Bulldogs defeat the Chiefs 2-1. Mathew Bearden scored both goals for the Bulldogs with Jason Grebe, Jason Gorman and Jason Vasquez leading the defense.

Ryan Dillon scored the only Chief goal. Andrew Small and Sloan Simpson excelled on defense.

The Rockets beat the Black Knights 4-1, with Steven Lorier and Jason LeGore each scoring two goals for the Rockets. Melanie Hallums and Geoffrey Martin were defensive standouts.

The Black Knights' sole goal was made by David Sorrell. Defensive standouts were Charlie Holloway and Kelly Dillon.

In the Termite Division, the Stings, led by Jason Entlich, defeated the Warriors 10-0. Entlich scored six times and Donald Baker made two goals. Other goals were made by Alfred Giavelli and Ryan Valentine. Mike Dinkins, Chris Hazelup and James England also turned in five offensive performances.

Sting defenders Sean Thompson, George Walsh, Matt Buck, Dustin Duvall and Justin Winter prevented the opposition from scoring.

The Goldiggers beat the Rowdies 1-0 with Peter Dargle scoring the game's only goal. Scott Jorgensen, Chris Johns and Peter Dargle led the defense.

Rowdies Rob RisCassi, Sara Arellano and Terri Stiliha excelled in defense.

Junior Division action saw the Titans and Hustlers battle to a 2-2 tie. Titan Jeff Gersh scored first in the match. Raymond King made the Titans' second goal. Other offensive standouts were Todd Valentine, Jim Connor and Terri Parker. Chris Basilio, Mike Saliba and Frank Latorre led the much-improved defense. Mark Akers was out of the lineup due to a broken finger.

The Hustlers' goals were scored by Jim Walker and Darin Myrick. Stephanie Stafford and the fullbacks did a commendable job on defense.

Symposium stresses family life

By Brenda H. Hayes

There is a renewal of pride in the air because of the recognition of the importance of the family.

Fort Benning was represented by three delegates at the second annual Army Symposium held in Washington, D.C., last weekend. Those delegates were Noel Burr, Thelma Davis, and Brenda Hayes. Sally Entlich represented Fort Benning as a delegate-at-large.

The symposium was filled to the brim with "basic training." Since the previous year's symposium dealt with surfacing issues and concerns, this year's symposium consisted of many workshops designed to teach improved communications and "how to" leadership skills.

There is now in existence an Army Family Life Communication Line in Washington, D.C.-- a 24-hour toll-free telephone line for family members of the active Army, Reserve Components, and the Department of the Army civilians.

Its purpose is to let family members talk directly with the Department of the Army and to obtain information regarding programs that affect family life. Family members are encouraged to seek information from their local command prior to calling this number, 1-800-336-5467.

Fort Benning's local Family Life Communication Line is 545-5555. We are fortunate here to have a commanding general who is aware of the frequent frustrations that are inherent in Army life, and is open to "charge for the better," if needed (i.e., commissary and PX hours, and so forth).

Gen. Edward C. Meyer's statement from the previous year's symposium is still echoing down the chain of command -- "We recruit soldiers, but we retain families."

Fort Benning can be proud of the input of its delegation to the Army Family Symposium. The delegation returned with a mandate to go forward to work in the Fort Benning family community. The second mini-symposium for Fort Benning will be held Nov. 12 from 9:30 a.m. until noon at the Family Life Center on Main Post. Interested and concerned members of the community are encouraged to attend. For more information call Sally Entlich at 689-3401.

Boy Scout troop holds open house

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The oldest Boy Scout Troop in the state of Georgia celebrated their first parents open house last Thursday night at Russ Pond.

Maj. Don Rogan, the committee chairman for Boy Scout Troop 27, began the open house by introducing the scouting committee. Rogan also introduced Danny Krueger. Krueger is 17-years-old and attends Pacelli High School in Columbus. He recently went before the Eagle Board last Tuesday night and is awaiting final approval from the National Boy Scout Headquarters in Washington, D.C. on his Eagle award.

Back in February, Krueger, earned part of his eagle award by helping build an amphitheater behind Loyd Elementary School.

Krueger plans on staying affiliated with scouting and wants to major in biological science in college.

The scouts had a candlelight ceremony and said the scout oath, scout law and pledge of allegiance to the flag.

"We decided to have the parents open house, because we thought it would be a terrific way to help the scout program," said Cindy Forlines, publicity and historian chairman.

"The boys have been preparing for this night by refurbishing the hut," she added. The scouts built a model camping site for the parents to see what the boys do on a typical camping trip. Warren Crotty and James Schultz, served apple crisp, that they had prepared over a campfire, to the families.

Later all the Boy Scouts and perspective scouts

Toy program begins here

It's time to bring your Christmas Spirit out of the closet and get it ready for the Christmas Season. You can practice by helping with the Army Community Service Annual Toy Program. The Toy Program provides Toys for needy active duty and retired military families in and around Fort Benning.

New, used and handmade toys are welcome, as well as wrapping paper, ribbons and name tags. Volunteers are also needed to repair and wrap the toys.

Collection points are:

McGraw Manor Community Life Center on Custer Road, highway 27 (Custer Road off of by-pass).

Lavoie Manor Community Life Center on Lavoie Road, bldg. 8.

Custer Terrace Community Life Center on Kessler (on the side of the Main PX building).

Bouton Heights/Davis Hills Community Life Center at the Round House.

Army Community Service, bldg. 229, Crain Hall.

The deadline for toy donations is Nov. 30 for used toys and Dec. 10 for new and handmade toys and wrapping materials.

For more information or if you know a needy family, contact Army Community Service during duty hours at 545-1233. After duty hours and on weekends contact SSgt. James Quintal, Project Coordinator at 689-1769.

Former SMA visits 197th

The 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate) played the fair host to retired SMA Leon Van Autrieve recently.

Van Autrieve, who began his military career in 1941 and retired in 1975, is now the public relations representative for the Non-Commissioned Officers Association.

While at the 197th, he spoke to soldiers from the Retired SMA Leon VanAutrieve speaks to soldiers from the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry, during a recent visit.

3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry about the many benefits the Army has to offer. The retired Sergeant Major of the Army has received many decorations in his 32-year career including the Belgian Fourragere, the Parachutists Badge and three awards of the Air Medal.

"I had a chance to see the 197th in a realistic battle situation at Fort Irwin," said the veteran from World War II, Van Autrieve. "I was most impressed by the NCOs of the brigade."

Van Autrieve also served two years in Vietnam as sergeant major of the 20th Engineer Brigade.

Promoted to command sergeant major in 1968, Van Autrieve said, "I have a tremendous feeling that today's Army is a really good Army if the rest of the Army is as good as the 197th."

Awarded the Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters, the Bronze Star, the Soldier's Medal, and the Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Van Autrieve served three years as the sergeant major, U.S. Army, Alaska. He was also awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Although Van Autrieve was never stationed at Fort Benning, he said, "I am anxious to come back for another visit."

Pamela Devine, 964-H Norton Ct., was presented a letter of appreciation from Lt. Col. James R.M. Bouldin, commander, 1st Battalion, The School Brigade, for being selected as having the yard of the month. The Devine's won this honor an unprecedented three times. In addition to the letter, the Devine's name was placed on the yard of the month plaque which is in 1st Battalion Headquarters.

got together around the campfire to sing songs and perform skits.

Scoutmaster Rick Forline said, "I am pretty pleased with the turnout. Everyone enjoyed themselves and got a chance to see what scouting is all about."

Troop 27 was founded in January 1923 and is the oldest troop in the state of Georgia. Through the years it has been known by different numbers, Troop 1, 7, 11 and 127.

The troop is currently planning a reunion for people who were affiliated with the troop during its long history.

Persons wanting to get involved in scouting should call Maj. Rogan at 687-6034 evenings or stop by Troop 27 Scout Hut located near Russ Pond Monday evenings from 7-8:30 p.m.

Tim Walker (l) and Dan Reinke perform a skit called "Pencils for Sale" at the Boy Scout Parent Open House.

Disney movie provides fun entertainment for all

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For those who are fans of the "G" rated movie that the whole family can go to there hasn't been too much to cheer about recently. But with the arrival of the Walt Disney Studio's newest animated feature everyone can take heart.

The newest full length animated movie from Disney is called "The Fox and the Hound." It is every bit as delightful as any of the Disney animated features that Walt himself used to supervise the production of. And if that's thought of as an accomplishment, it is. Anyone that has seen some of the rather dubious results without Walt Disney would have no doubt. "The Black Hole," Disney Studio's most recent attempt at entertainment, coincidentally it's first "PG" movie in Disney history, was a disaster without comparison. It's nice to see someone has gone back and straightened the Disney image out and presented a movie equal to the heritage of the Disney name.

The story line of "Fox and Hound" is simple. It tells the story of a fox and a hound who meet when they're young and don't realize they are natural enemies. As they grow up they discover they, like everything else, must change.

The story is touching and should prove very interesting to adults and children alike. The movie stars the voices of Mickey Rooney and Pearl Bailey as well as other stars. Of course, there is that "G" label that usually goes with Disney movies. To some people, to be going into a "G" movie is as bad as going into an "X" movie. However, don't get the feeling that because it's "G" it's kid stuff. "The Fox and the Hound," while tame compared to the majority of today movies is good entertainment.

So take the family without fear of embarrassment and enjoy. If there are no children in the family see it for yourself. Any movie that can hold my daughter Kelly's attention for close to two hours could entertain anyone. I give "The Fox and the Hound" four stars.

Flying Club to be featured

By Bill Powell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

On the "Benning Report" a member of the Benning Flying Club will discuss his organization. The "Benning Report" is featured on WFBG-TV, Channel 13 on Alert Cable. Consult the BAYONET, the Benning Bulletin or the Ledger-Enquirer TV Book (listed under cable) for times and dates of scheduled programming. Other programs highlighted include:

- "New Man on the Team" takes a look at the physician's assistant and the work he does to make the doctor's job a little easier.

- "Chaplain in Combat" gives a closeup view of chaplains doing their jobs under the toughest of circumstances.
- "World Champion Hater" shows what prejudice and hate can do to people who are subjected to it as well as the bad effects it has on these prejudiced people who hate because others are different.
- "Big Picture — Ranger" goes to Ranger training and shows what each Ranger candidate must do to pass the rigorous requirements.

Choking on food can cause death

A person choking on food cannot speak or breathe and may even become panic-stricken and run from the room. Death can result. Dr. Heimlich, originator of the "Heimlich Maneuver" for ejecting food lodged in the throat, recommends a universal signal be used by persons choking. By grasping his neck between thumb and index finger of one hand, a victim would signal that he is choking. The emergency would not be mistaken for a heart attack and appropriate action can be taken. (Courtesy of Family Safety Magazine)

Soldiers back from Europe

By Becky Bulgrin

"I survived Reforger 1981, Germany."

That may have been what his T-shirt said, but PFC Charles Gaston made it known that he'd be the first to volunteer if the 608th Ordnance Company attends another Reforger next year. He added, "It was an experience I'll never forget."

Gaston was one of 100 soldiers from the 608th Ordnance Company (Ammo), 67th Maintenance Battalion, who returned Oct. 12 after spending 42 days away from home on a Return of Forces to Germany exercise. The 608th went to support the 15th Ordnance Battalion, 3rd Support Command, headquartered in Babenhausen, Germany.

According to Capt. John Cunero, 608th's company commander, the unit did outstanding in what was a "real world mission."

"We traveled approximately 100,000 miles by various means of transportation and had no accidents," said Cunero. "We put more than three to 4,000 miles on some of the vehicles, but the equipment held up." "We tested our unit's ability to move overseas from Fort Benning, draw equipment out of storage, load it, move it by any means available, perform our wartime mission and get back home," added Cunero. "And we showed that we could work well together in assisting another battalion."

According to Gaston, what he and many of the troops enjoyed most was the traveling, especially the variety of it. They started out by flying to England where they drew 42 trunks, jeeps, fork lifts and ammo loaders from the Burtonwood Army Depot, near Liverpool.

"The British treated us very well," said Sp4 Alvin Johnson. "They are very polite people and I especially liked the way they talked (their accent)."

The 608th then convoyed 142 miles in less than four hours to load the vehicles onto a ferryboat. They ferried across the English Channel to Bel Zeebrugge, Belgium, a 14-hour trip. There the cargo was loaded onto railroad cars for the transport to Germany.

"We had to work fast," related Gaston, "but everybody knew what their job was and what we had to do. We loaded all the equipment onto the train in one day."

The train ride to Babenhausen lasted 16 and one-half hours. After they arrived, the troops off-loaded the equipment and convoyed six miles to Munster where they spent approximately 30 days in a field environment.

"We had to secure it (ammo), segregate it, inventory, load and ship it," said Cunero. "We also had to do all the paperwork necessary for the ammunition should it ever come to war." Besides working with ammunition, the 608th also provided maintenance assistance for one of the subordinate units.

Living in "tent city," as the field environment was known to the soldiers, was quite an experience, according to 1st Lt. Molly Dorsey. "I can go to the field at Fort Benning now with no problem; this warm weather is a blessing compared to the cold and rainy weather we had there."

And Dorsey got her chance just one week after they came back home. The 608th is ending a week-long field exercise here today. And they will soon be going on an ARTEP to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

Energy resources running out

By Joe Wright
US Army Reserve Center, St. Louis

Our Commander-in-Chief is concerned about energy. In July 1981 he issued the National Energy Plan. In his plan, President Ronald Regan stated "The Federal Government has one overriding concern in energy during the years ahead. That is to establish sound, stable public policies that will encourage individuals and groups in the private and public sector to produce and use energy resources wisely and efficiently."

Securing America's energy future will require everyone to get involved. We import 40 percent of our petroleum resources from other nations. They've got us in their hands.

We need to keep a watchful eye on the Middle East. This is where most of our foreign oil comes from. A disruption in overseas supply lines would make us extremely vulnerable to enemy attack.

Our fossil fuels are running out. All three—oil, coal, a gas—Unfortunately it is difficult and costly to mine.

Conservation can help keep us going. It will provide research and development experts more time to develop solutions to complex energy needs facing our nation.

To get us going, we can tackle one conservation step at a time. This way, we can tell exactly how much we saved. Riding a bicycle or walking to work may seem like a little things. If enough of us did it we could save thousands of gallons of gasoline. This simple step would also effect our pocket books. Each of us could save 10-20 dollars per week.

Here are some simple but effective ways to save energy:

- Make windows and other openings air tight. Caulking windows and installing storm windows costs very little but can save a lot.

- Turn down hot water thermostats and make sure no faucets are leaking.

- Reduce outdoor lighting and indoor night lighting.

- Keep automobiles, lawn mowers, bicycles and other equipment clean and in good working order.

- Reduce driving to necessary trips. Walk, ride bicycles, motorcycles and buses.

- Drive fuel efficient cars and car pool whenever possible. Army soldiers and their families can play key roles in helping use energy more efficiently. A lot has already been done. Fort Benning had an Energy Day on July 15, 1981. The results were very impressive. Jim Willis, Energy Management Branch Chief at Fort Benning, reported, "Conservation efforts on Energy Day saved $3,000. If we did this for one month we could save $100,000."

The Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, and the Chief of Staff, Col. Bobby Jack Harris, are very serious about energy. They have appointed an Energy Conservation Board. It meets once a quarter to discuss and design programs for improving energy efficiency. Jim Willis serves as Secretary of the Board. "Command support requires everyone to get involved. There's no way I could manage the program alone," he said.

Jim Willis is very concerned about energy costs. "We are spending 17 million dollars a year at Fort Benning for energy," he said during a recent visit to his office.

"To help reduce these costs and plan for our future energy needs at Fort Benning, a number of innovative and exciting projects are planned. The Solar Pond is an example of one of the projects. It involves using a renewable resource, the sun. This project will provide hot water for the Quartermaster laundry, and the dining facilities and barracks in the 2700 and 2800 blocks," he said.

"If the Solar Pond has been constructed two years ago it would have cost $2,850,000. It is estimated to cost $4,474,000. Inflation is eating us up," he added.

Another impressive program is the Energy Monitoring and Control System (EMCS). "Through EMCS we will be able to control and manage energy usage effectively in most buildings. During hot and cold months we can establish acceptable and yet economical temperature conditions by utilizing the EMCS. The computer is being installed right now. It is an exciting program which has tremendous pay offs," he reported.

Other plans include providing storm windows and doors, weatherstripping and caulking in family housing. To help prevent energy loss through windows, insulated panels and thermo-pane windows have been ordered for many of the barracks. Mr. Willis described five more programs to help reduce costs and conserve energy.

"Good conservation practices will save each of us lots of money. The days of cheap energy are gone forever. It will take the efforts of everyone on Fort Benning to make our program successful. I hope by now that everyone is beginning to realize we are running out of energy resources," he said as he completed his morning briefing.

Hospital subsistence charge questioned

I was outraged and shocked to see an announcement in the Sept. 18, BAYONET, informing the Enlisted personnel only that starting September 15, 1981, they would have to pay a subsistence rate of $3.70 upon admission to Martin Army Community Hospital or other military medical treatment facilities.

Part of the benefits of the army is to have free medical and hospitalization for military personnel. It's bad enough dependents pay for hospitalization.

Now, we'll have to pay for sickness when we can't get a decent raise and our families are on food stamps and W.I.C coupons, just to eat.

There was once a comfort in knowing if one gets sick, it'll be free, no longer true! Again, the soldier suffers, only the enlisted soldier.

Officers, who can afford to pay medical, and most go to civilian facilities proving this, are not charged. Please tell me why the government punishes the small income earner and rewards the higher earner. Even taxes are paid this way, the lower and middle classes taking the bulk of payments and upperclass hiding theirs in taxshelters and paying only minimal taxes.

Soldiers train for final testing

Scale model tanks lie on a table top where Pvt. 1 Erwin Porter, a National Guardsman from New Jersey, is asked to identify each tank as being friendly or unfriendly, and what identification marks on the tanks tell him so. The new soldier will be asked other pertinent questions infantrymen are expected to know before he moves on to another practice station at AO Eaglett.

Porter and the rest of his company have good reason for having their infantry knowledge practiced at Eaglett. The company is one day away from being tested at AO Eagle where they must pass their Performance Orientated Individual Qualification Test before graduating a infantrymen. At Eaglett drill sergeants and cadre of Company A, 6th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade work hard to insure the troops are ready for Eagle. The soldiers are serious about what they are doing. When your one day away from Eagle you give it all you've got. Weak areas are exploited. Drill sergeants go over everything. There's no tomorrow.

Capt. David Maxwell, company commander, is proud of this cycle of soldiers. He's quick to point out that his 4th platoon soldiers, the "All American-

Pvt. 1 Erwin Porter explains to Pvt. 1 Douglas Perkey the difference between our tanks and the enemies.

Nine seconds to mask.

by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Airborne platoon," has really helped the morale of his company. The platoon is so named because the 32 soldiers in it were all sworn in together at Fort Bragg, N.C. All will become members of the 82nd airborne division once they leave here. Maxwell explains, "Not only did they enlist together, but all are from the same state. They will graduate together, attend airborne school together, and stay together as a platoon when they join the division at Fort Bragg. When they leave here to go to Fort Bragg they will all parachute together into the division."

Maxwell adds, "The platoon really helped us score high at Eagle. Eleven of the 32 soldiers maxed the test. Our company had 100 percent first time goes. We won the AO Eagle streamer.

Company A also set a record on the new physical training test. The company's average of 274 is the highest recorded in the Brigade.

Pvt. 1 Robert Lampman makes sure he knows Nuclear, Biological, and Chemical warfare before he is tested.

Pvt. 1 Charles McGee asks questions about the function check of his rifle.

Pvt. 1 Douglas Dukes scrambles to place his claymore mine into operation. He has two minutes.

Pvt. 1 Danny Smith practices the low crawl, for the last time, before AO Eagle testing.

Looks like Pvt. 1 Bradley Shiery really has his hands full. Actually the young private is digging a hole to place a landmine, known as the "killer".

Shiery then blows dirt off the top and the mine is ready to go.

Ailing personnel should take shots

Every year in the United States influenza virus infections can be expected to occur.

In the past several years the predominant influenza viruses circulating were A Brazil and A Bangkok.

Health officials are unable to predict which strain will predominate this year. However, the flu vaccine for 1981-1982 contains both these viruses as well as the B Singapore strain.

The annual influenza shot is mandatory for all military personnel unless exempted by a medical waiver. The influenza vaccine will be available to civilian employees, dependents over 13 and retirees on a voluntary basis. Employees in an "essential service category," e.g., firemen, DFAE maintenance workers, com-electronics workers, airfield key personnel, hospital personnel, are especially urged to obtain the flu shot. This is so that in the event of a widespread flu epidemic, these essential services will not have to be curtailed.

The following categories of personnel are encouraged to receive flu immunizations to prevent serious complications from the flu:

- Over the age of 65
- Chronic heart disease
- Chronic lung disease
- Diabetes
- Chronic severe anemia
- Conditions which impair the immune system
- Chronic kidney disease

Pregnant women may receive influenza immunization if desired since there is no evidence that the flu shot is harmful to the fetus. If there is any doubt, they should check with their physician.

Children under the age of 13 should be immunized only if they suffer from one of the chronic diseases above or it is recommended by their physician. All civilians must sign a consent form prior to receiving the flu shot.

With the improvement of the influenza vaccine, mild side effects such as fever, and sore arm has been significantly reduced.

The shots will be given at the Troop Medical Clinics until Oct. 30.

Chaplain's Comments

What if God quit?

Have you been inconvenienced by the PATCO air traffic controller strike?

I guess one of the most important things in the world is faithfulness whether it's an athlete being faithful to his task or a weapon in combat being faithful to fire properly.

It's exciting to me to share with folks that, according to the scripture "when we confess our sins, God is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." As I conducted a memorial service this week for two young soldiers who died only days apart, I was thankful for the fact that God is a just God, that he has made provisions for life after death.

As a Christian chaplain, I thank God that he didn't go on strike when faced with allowing His son, Jesus, to die for us. He loves us, he really does. With our lives, let's show him that we're thankful he never goes on strike!

I think you'll like this poem printed recently in the Birmingham News.

IF GOD SHOULD GO ON STRIKE?

*How good it is that God above has never gone on strike,
Because He was not treated fair in things He didn't like.
If only once He'd given up and said, "That's it, I'm through!
"I've had enough of those on earth, so this is what I'll do:
"I'll give my orders to the sun — cut off the heat supply!
"And to the moon — give no more light, and run the oceans dry.
"Then just to make things really tough and put the pressure on,
"Turn off the vital oxygen till every breath is gone!"
You know, He would be justified, if fairness was the game,
For no one has been more abused or met with more disdain,
Than God, and yet He carries on, supplying you and me,
With all the favor of His grace, and everything for free.
Men say they want a better deal, and so on strike they go,
But what a deal we've given God to whom all things we owe.
We don't care whom we hurt to gain the things we like;
But what a mess we'd all be in, if God should go on strike.*

God Bless You!

H&R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN COLUMBUS AND PHENIX CITY

Thousands of people are earning money in their spare time as income tax preparers.

H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting November 2 with morning and evening classes available.

During the 12 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications. Courses are ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or persons wanting to increase their tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment with H & R Block.

The modest course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. The course is licensed by the Georgia and Alabama Boards of Education.

Registration forms and brochures for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H & R Block office at 2505 Airport Thruway in Simons Plaza, telephone 324-5603.

CFC goal nears halfway

As of noon Tuesday, Fort Benning personnel have contributed $180,000 to this year's Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). This represents 48 percent of the campaign goal of $375,000.

CFC supports the Local United Way, international service agencies, national health agencies and others.

One objective of the CFC is to provide each soldier and civilian employee the opportunity to contribute to agencies dedicated to improving the quality of life for many people in many ways.

Platoon guide takes on responsibilities

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Besides the drill sergeant and corporal there is another person who plays an important role in the life of the new soldier — the platoon guide. He is the drill sergeant's assistant while being a soldier in training himself.

His job is mainly making sure the platoon is set up in the morning (4:30 is their wake up time), their area is cleaned, and getting those soldiers to sick call who need to go. He keeps a total count, and knows where they are at all times. The platoon guide is the soldier who keeps control on the platoon in the absence of the drill sergeant.

Most of the time a platoon guide is picked over his peers, because of prior military service, or because of time spent in a high school ROTC program. Neither is the case of Pvt. Darrel E. Body, 18, of Corpus Christi, Texas.

Pvt. Body, a five-foot-ten, 160-pound platoon guide assigned to E Company, 5th Battalion, 1st Infantry Training Brigade, said, "I was chosen by the drill sergeant because I was aggressive, willing to learn and lead. There were two other platoon guides before me. They were fired because they either did not or couldn't do the job," continued Body.

Along with motivation and maturity, he became a well respected platoon guide.

During the time I spent with Company E, many of the soldiers spoke out about Body.

Pvt. Balvin Right, a 22-year-old soldier from Jamaica, said, "I've been to five different countries and I've never met anyone like him. If you got a problem, no matter what it is he'll help you. If the Army was full of soldiers like him we'd have one hell of a force. He's a dynamic guy."

Pvt. Russel Dickson, 22, of Orange, Texas, a squad leader in Body's platoon, said, "He helped me get this job. I guess he watched me for a few days and liked what he saw. He's four years younger than me, and I feel great working under him. He really knows what he's doing. He's fair, and treats us all with the same amount of respect."

The only special treatment Body receives by being the platoon guide is not having to pull kitchen police or guard duty. "I do have to pull charge of quarters," said Body. "When the platoon has to drop for push-ups, I drop too. Even when the drill sergeant tells me I don't have to," continued Body.

The platoon's day will begin at 4:30 a.m. After getting the sick calls off, Body assigns his four squad leaders their jobs for the morning clean-up. One squad has the outside area of their World War II vintage barracks.

One has the top floor, another the bottom floor and the fourth the latrine. He changes their jobs every other week to keep the soldiers from complaining about doing the same job.

After the evening supper, Body will spend most of his time helping soldiers study for their upcoming training. He also talks with his troops about problems or whatever else they might want to bring up. Sometimes they will talk till 9 p.m. (lights out time).

Body says, "The Army is serious business. They don't play here. When a person joins, he has to come here with military on his mind and leave the civilian stuff behind. I plan to make a career out of it," he said with a smile. Body and his platoon will graduate Oct. 20.

Platoon guide Pvt. 1 Darrel E. Body marches along with his platoon to the rifle ranges.

Air assault never dull

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Up, up and away . . . Normally when you hear those words, you think of the famed Superman. However, in the case of a recent field training exercise, it was the distant hum of helicopter blades that could be heard.

The mission-to transport 135 Infantry Officer basic course students (IOBC) to Ledo drop zone during a tactical field training exercise. The pilots warmed up their chopper's engines in preparation for the flight, one pilot, WO3 Paul Wilson talked to his co-pilot, WO1 Mary Koester, this was her first trip since flight school. Whether she was nervous or not made no difference once the choppers left at 2:50 p.m. on their two-and-one-half hour mission.

The trip to the landing zone was uneventful, the mission going as planned.

Once there, the choppers were flagged in by two IOBC officers. The main pilot left his helicopter to give the instructors and squad leaders a safety briefing, telling them the do's and don'ts of loading and unloading the chopper.

After the briefing, the choppers were loaded, seven men to each one. Most of the students had never been on a helicopter very often if ever, so war whoops were heard as they skimmed the trees on takeoff.

After a five minute flight, the DZ was sighted, the choppers swooped in and the students were landed.

After seven trips to and from the landing and drop zones, the air assault was complete. On the way back to Lawson Army Airfield, the new co-pilot practiced formation flying, getting used to what will be routine in the future.

The students are transported by chopper to Ledo landing zone.

Once off the choppers, the students disperse into the woods.

Loss of energy possible

What will you do when you're sitting watching television and suddenly you're in the dark? No electricity at all, and when you look out the window there aren't even any street lights on.

You stumble toward the doorway, banging your shins on a foot locker and running into the wall on the way. The lights in the hallway are out, so you know better than to try to find the stairs just to go down and complain to the CQ. So you just call it a night and go to bed.

The next morning there is still no electricity. But at least you can see now because the sun is up. There's no use trying to use your electric razor, and using the blow dryer on your hair is also out of the question, but you can't go to work without doing either. And there isn't even any hot water in the showers.

Does it sound like a bad dream? You bet it does. Is it impossible that something like this could happen to you? You bet it's not impossible.

This post spends $17 million per year on energy. Energy may be one of our most wasted assets.

In order to emphasize the need for energy conservation to help keep the impossible from happening, the Army has declared next week as Army Energy Week and officials here have planned several activities to help support emphasizing energy conservation.

Energy conservation posters will be displayed on bulletin boards all over post. Five posters have been made, a different one for each day of energy week. The slogans come from the energy day slogan contest held in July.

Battalion commanders will talk to their soldiers about energy conservation and lights in barracks will be turned out at 10:30 p.m. during the week. Company commanders will inspect their billets to insure lights, T.V. sets, radios and stereos aren't left on when soldiers aren't in the rooms.

Dining facilities will serve meals on Friday that cause as little energy as possible to be used in their preparation. Paper plates and cups and plastic utensils will be used to save heating of water. The evening meal will be cooked out on a bar-b-que grill.

An energy conservation display will be placed in the building 4 display room.

The hopes of officials here are, that by supporting this Army-wide energy week, Fort Benning personnel will realize the importance of conserving energy and the things learned during the week will be a basis for a program by commanders to eliminate abuse of energy in the future.

Military taxis need riders

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Taxi lingo is something else. Enough to make anyone curious.

"Car three, you have a pickup at building 83 for a signal eight. (Signal eight means a round tripper) I can't tell you where at 83 he's at, he doesn't know himself. You'll have to look for this one. If he doesn't show in 10 minutes forget it and come on home. He'll have to call back if he wants the ride."

It all makes a lot of sense to Don Rawlinson. The 23-year-old taxi dispatcher makes a living out of talking taxi. What makes his job different from other taxi dispatching jobs is who he dispatches for. Rawlinson, a civilian government employee, dispatches taxis for the Army. Military taxis if you please.

The military taxi on post isn't something new. It's been available for a few years now. Yet many people know little about the service. Many do not know there is one.

The taxi people are quick to point out that the military taxis are for 'Official use only'. Not a means of getting a person to the burger bar or to go and see a friend. Taxi supervisor John Mollett says "Our taxis are to send people from office to office on official business. This cuts down the number of times people use their own cars for official business. If it's for government business why use your car when you can call us? We're trying to build up business."

Presently there are eight vehicles at the Transportation Motor Pool being used as taxis. Six Army sedans and two vans. Their taxi drivers are averaging a call every 15 minutes. They'd like to cut that to five. Taxi driver Francis Bialoncik, sitting in his taxi waiting another call says, "We'd like to have more passengers and increase business. That way I'd always be busy. The way it is now, calls come in spurts. Sometimes I'm real busy other times I'm not. When we're not we may sit for 15 or 20 minutes waiting to give someone a ride."

Military taxi rides cover main post, Lawson Army Airfield, Dental Clinic No. 1 and Martin Army Community hospital. Rides to outlying areas on post are not permitted without special permission from the military taxi folks. "We don't have enough taxis to cover places like Sand Hill, Kelley Hill and the Harmony church area, adds taxi supervisor Mollett. "Maybe someday we will. Without more taxis given us we can go no further. The most we've ever had was 10. We have 27 vehicles assigned to us, but, we have to furnish them to Protocol, reserve units during the summer and for funeral details."

Pvt. 1 Jesus Zayas asks Kay Ortiz, an "English as a Second Language" teacher, how to pronounce a word.

The taxi section is doing its best to get more business. Its drivers hand out business cards to passengers, hoping they will be passed along to future passengers. The cards read, 'Established to transport persons on official business, short trips. Reaction time, six minutes for main post, 15 minutes for Martin Army Community Hospital. Hours are 7:30 a.m. till 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Call 545-5156.'

"We get some ridiculous requests, grins dispatcher Don Rawlinson. "One lady called up and she needed a ride from building 75 to building 83. Which is just across the street. It had been raining and she didn't want to get her feet wet. I couldn't believe it! Another person called us and said he needed a ride. I asked him where he was going and he said, I don't know. I said what's the name of the place your at now? He replied, "I don't know that either."

Sometimes people will ask for a taxi and then not be there when it arrives. The taxi sits for 10 minutes waiting when it could be somewhere else providing service. Military taxis are only allowed to wait on a passenger for 10 minutes. After that they leave and the passenger has to call again and request another if they still want a ride.

Calls must come from an E-6 or above, or an officer. However supervisors can call a taxi for one of their employes if they need a ride. Additionally, Department of the Army civilians, grade GS 6, equivalent and above may request a taxi.

The military taxi does not compete with the installation shuttle buses on established routes, also a free service for the personnel of Fort Benning as an on duty or after duty means of transportation.

A soldier shouldn't have to walk around in the rain while on military business, not as long as military taxi is available.

Military taxi driver Francis Bialoncik receives another taxi call.

Education program helps

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

New infantry soldiers coming into the Army may need a little help to be able to complete their training.

There is a program at Sand Hill called the Basic Skill Education Program (BSEP I) for those who do.

"The program was started in 1979. It was noticed that some people couldn't complete their training due to high school deficiencies or language barriers," said 1st Lt. Jose L. Sanchez, officer in charge for BSEP I.

Every initial entry soldier who arrives at Fort Benning takes a SELECT-ABLE Test. The test shows whether the soldier has a serious problem in English or math.

If the soldier fails the SELECT-ABLE Test, he then is given another series of tests called ABLE I-A, which further test the individual's comprehension.

If the soldier fails the ABLE I-A Test and he's in the Regular Army the soldier is required to take BSEP. National Guard and Reserves are counseled by the enlisted reserve or National Guard liaison.

The soldiers are assigned to BSEP Headquarters, 1st Infantry Training Brigade for six weeks. They attend school Monday through Friday from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Afterwards they practice drill and ceremony and physical training. While in school they also learn basic military subjects like, nuclear, biological and chemical warfare and the chain-of-command.

"The purpose of the ESL program is to reorient the soldiers to an English-speaking environment," said ESL teacher Kay Ortiz. Two hours are spent in English lab listening to and repeating verbs. The students then come downstairs and reinforce the skills they learn in the classroom."

"We may spend part of the day on a certain subject like the bank or post office and military subjects. So when they return to their units, it won't be entirely "Greek," said Milton Ortiz, substitute teacher for ESL.

Pvt. 1 Theodore Dagg a student from BSEP I and senior platoon leader commented, "The classes have helped me to improve my reading, spelling and math: There is alot of stuff on the military, so when I go out to the field I'll be prepared and I'll be a little more advanced than the other soldiers coming in."

The course is voluntary for them. The counselor explains the importance of going through the program and their scores. The reserve or national guard soldier has the decision whether he wants to go to school or not. If they decide not to, they are either recycled or sent home where the National Guard and Reserves decide further action.

"Basically, the reason for the counseling is that many of the National Guard and reservists have jobs in civilian life," said Sanchez. "Once they attend BSEP, they have to return to their first week of One Station Unit Training."

Soldiers in the BSEP program are broken down into two groups - one group for those with a low level of basic skills and a group for those who are learning English as a Second Language (ESL).

"The program is designed to teach the ESL soldiers technical military language," said Charles R. Maffett, education service specialist. "The ESL soldier is deficient in English, but not Spanish. The military terminology he will be learning the words he'll be hearing from the drill sergeant."

Budget class offered

The Financial/Home Management Section of the Army Community Service is offering classes at unit level aimed toward assisting service members in establishing sound financial practices. The class is of one hour duration. It will provide information on opening checking and savings accounts, handling of checking accounts, budget planning, applying for credit and credit buying.

All commanders are urged to request this class. For more information contact Mr. Olan Brooks at 545-1169.

Soldiers observe how to do an about face from drill corporal Russell Lara.

Does anybody know where they're going? No, but no one said doing a counter column would be easy. Especially when it's your first week in the Army.

Troops arrive in battle dress

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There was something noticeably different about these men coming in from Fort Jackson, S.C. You knew it from the time they stepped off the bus here to take their infantry training. It was their clothes.

Every one of them had on the Army's new work uniform, the battle dress. One new arrival asked a drill sergeant if he knew where one could purchase a set of fatigues like the drill had on. The drill just smiled. He knew the battle dress is the coming thing. The new soldier just didn't know. The uniform is brand new out at the infantry training brigades. Company C, 9th Battalion, is the first unit to get soldiers from Fort Jackson wearing the camouflaged fatigues.

The next day the troops were already learning drill and ceremonies, being taught when, why and how to salute. Facing movements were practiced, but it was when they tried to go get a little fancy and do a counter column that the soldiers got confused. Some of them didn't know which way to turn. "I gave them the counter column just to see what they could do," smiled SSgt. Edwin Booth. He and drill corporal Russell Lara spent the day teaching the soldiers drill and ceremonies.

Drill Corporal Russell Lara straightens the arm of PFC Kippert Cress.

Safety Office starts new campaign

The USAIC Safety Office is conducting a safety promotional campaign directed toward the recognition of Fort Benning personnel observed adhering to safe practices.

Examples of such acts are using seat belts, wearing eye protection in hazardous locations, utilizing a guide while backing, etc.

These safety-conscious personnel will be awarded a gift to remind them of their safe performance. Be alert — be safe — you can be a winner!

Marshal's Viewpoint

Several weeks ago, this column addressed the problem of abuse of cable TV equipment by Fort Benning residents. The article emphasized that unauthorized connections were in fact a theft of services and warned that the Alert Cable TV Company (in self defense and in an effort to hold down costs to legitimate subscribers) was making a concerted effort to identify those involved.

Apparently many Fort Benning residents have disregarded the warning and dismissed it as a "scare tactic," for the abuse continues. Why the savings of a few dollars each month seems worth the risk involved is hard to imagine. Consider the case of the commissioned officer who recently received nonjudicial punishment by the Commanding General for theft of cable TV service — who can estimate the potential cost of his offense? There are no "shades" of larceny; a thief is a thief; whose presence should not and will not be tolerated in the military community.

Col. Earp

In addition to increased efforts to identify unauthorized connections, a recent audit was conducted by Alert Cable TV to identify individuals that have departed the installation without properly turning in equipment and clearing their accounts. Approximately 150 individuals were identified in this category; many having violations of sufficient gravity to warrant charges of larceny and appropriate follow-up through military police channels.

All legitimate customers of the cable TV service appreciate their efforts in identifying and prosecuting abusers of the laws regarding its use. Those who would jeopardize their privilege of living in on-post quarters and even their career by stealing cable TV service should seriously weigh the consequences. Your cooperation is essential and appreciated in keeping Fort Benning a community that is a genuine pleasure to live in.

CIVILIAN LIFE MADE $1,475 EASIER.

If you've made up your mind to go back to civilian life, there's a way to make the financial transition easier.

Join your local Army Reserve part-time. It can really pay off for you. For instance, a former E-4 with 3 years experience now makes over $1,475 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

And don't forget the PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, retirement points and all the other Army Reserve benefits.

Look into it. Contact your in-service recruiter listed below, or your unit reenlistment NCO.

Rangers tackle assault course

The bayonet assault course is a great place to work off life's little frustrations in addition to practicing a valuable military skill.

Two hundred years ago last week, Washington's troops fought the last hand-to-hand battle of the Revolutionary War when they stormed and captured Redoubt 10 at Yorktown.

Hand-to-hand combat and use of the bayonet are still among the important skills that are taught today's soldiers.

On their 18th day of training the Ranger students get a chance to demonstrate bayonet proficiency skills by running through the bayonet assault course.

First thing on the days schedule is a five-mile run to get everyone in the proper frame of mind. Then bayonets are issued and the students perform a half-hour of bayonet drill at Todd Field to warm them up for the task ahead.

The bayonet assault course, off Old Cusseta Road, is hilly and about a quarter mile long. There are a total of 22 obstacles on the course, eight of them containing bayonet targets that require the students to practice what they have learned in the previous six hours of bayonet instruction.

The other obstacles that the Rangers must maneuver through, around, over and under include barbed wire filled ditches, log walls, concrete culverts and barbed wire entanglements.

Each bayonet target is hit twice, with a long and a short thrust, before the Ranger moves on to the next obstacle. Ranger instructors stand nearby to insure that each student derives the maximum benefit for the exercise. Smoke grenades, artillery simulators and battle sounds from strategically placed loudspeakers add to the realism of the operation.

All Ranger students go through the course twice, and it seems to the casual observer that there is more animosity towards the bayonet targets on the second run.

Following the bayonet assault course the class moves to Victory Pond to tackle the log walk, rope drop and suspension traverse confidence test.

Bayonet: New course for infantry training to open soon

Story and photos by Dave Bristow
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The course is impressive. You can sense the electricity the place radiates. One thing's certain. After the soldier goes through this assault course he'll need a breather.

A rifle-bayonet fighting course is coming to One Station Unit Training. The 18 obstacles which make up the new course will insure that soldiers in the infantry training brigades get in their licks at bayonet fighting. There hasn't been a course like this one before. That's fixing to change.

Since September, engineers from the 2nd Platoon, Company C, 43rd Engineers, have been constructing an assault course that is something to see. First the soldier will have to encounter a six-foot-high log wall and then a set of log hurdles. It's after this that the soldier, with fixed bayonets, takes on his first bayonet target. The soldier will parry right or left and thrust his bayonet into the target. He will do this seven more times as he goes through the course. Next he will balance himself across the logged balance and horizontal ladder. This will test the soldier's coordination. Then he comes upon another set of bayonet targets. More parry and thrusts. A ditch jump that's three feet deep with concertina wire along its sides is next before coming to a trench. The trench has simulated enemy soldiers in it. Each soldier will encounter one of these targets. More bayonet targets come again before a 15-foot dirt hill, which the soldiers will have to low-crawl over.

Soldiers will have to crawl under this barbed wire tunnel.

The barbed wire tunnel crawl is next. Ten individual tunnels, one for each soldier after they come over the dirt hill. Then more bayonet targets appear again. More rifle-bayonet thrusting.

The last obstacle is the double apron barbed wire fence. Soldiers will low-crawl under the wire.

If this all sounds like much, it is — but bayonet training has always been rough. For this reason there is only one hour of training per day for rifle-bayonet fighting training.

navigation plays an important part in the ranger school and even more so when you are on your back completing a low crawl under a barbed wire obstacle.

rrr-rr. Prior to bayonet assault the ranger class gets a half hour of drill warm-up period.

Engineers prepare the ditch jump obstacle.

SSgt. Irvin Neighoff starts across the log balance and horizontal ladder he had a hand in constructing for the new bayonet course. Before long the first soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigades will be coming across the same logs in November.

Infantry soldiers in training will have to parry left or right to bayonet targets like this one, eight different times, before they've finished the course.

Bragg topples Doughboys

Story and photos by Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team hosted the Dragons of Fort Bragg on a wet Sunday afternoon, only to fall by a score of 29-12.

The Doughboys garnered over 300 yards in total offense. However, most of that was from the air and most of the yardage was thrown right into the Fort Bragg receivers hands. Neither team seemed to be able to hang onto the wet, slippery football as drive after drive stalled due to a fumble or interception.

Doughboy quarterback Harry Vaughn played his last game for Benning. Without protection in the pocket, it made things rough for the second-string quarterback. Quarterback Leamon Hall played some in the third and fourth quarters, directing Benning to their only touchdowns of the game.

Bragg started the scoring when Doughboy Anthony Hayes was tackled in the end zone, putting the Dragons on top 2-0 after the first quarter.

In the second quarter the ball see-sawed back and fourth. It looked like the teams would go in at the half with a two point difference. However, that was not to be when the Bragg quarterback hit a receiver for 32 yards, putting them on the Doughboys two-yard line. With 18 seconds left in the half, Howard carried the ball over and Manning added the extra point to put Fort Bragg ahead 9-0 at the

The Doughboys came out in the second half in hopes of erasing the damage that had been done. However, when Steve Prunier had a punt blocked, Bragg recovered and ran 43 yards for the touchdown, upping the lead to 16-0. Late in the quarter, the Doughboys began a drive which ended in a Robert Jackson touchdown. The extra point attempt failed leaving the score at 16-6.

The game was all but over when early in the fourth quarter, a Bragg player intercepted the ball and ran 20 yards for the TD making it 23-6. The Doughboys came right back 37 seconds later when hall connected with Elyon Zeigler for a 22-yard touchdown pass. The Dragons scored once more late in the game on a nine-yard run by Howard.

Doughboy quarterback Leamon Hall entered the game in the third quarter and proceeded to lead the team to a touchdown.

Vaughn once again entered the game and threw two interceptions in a vain attempt to make the game respectable, leaving the final score at 29-12.

The Doughboys next game will be against the Auburn University J.V. team in Auburn Sunday at 1:30 p.m. Fort Benning's record now stands at 2-4.

Women's softball continues

A new sports program for women has been initiated at Fort Benning.

Morale Support Activities has always supported military women's teams for TRADOC competitions. But many servicewomen, not able to compete at that level, still wanted to take part in competition of the various sports.

However, there never seemed to be enough military women interested to form an intramural league.

Therefore, beginning this summer, a softball league was organized allowing servicemen's wives, retired military wives and daughters over 18, and Fort Benning civilian employees to play as well.

The summer program provided more than 180 women an opportunity to compete. The ongoing fall softball league has 90 participants.

Basketball and volleyball leagues are also planned, according to the physical activities branch. There will be problems, since indoor facilities are limited and in great demand during these seasons. But Lt. Col. Richard M. Szabo, deputy director of Directorate of Personnel and Community Activities, said every effort would be made to satisfactorily provide the Fort Benning women these additional recreational outlets.

In fact, personnel interested in coaching basketball, and women interested in playing, may sign up now at the sports office located in Building 394, Doughboy Stadium. The season is scheduled to start Jan. 5, so let's get organized now and have the opportunity to practice before the games begin.

YA football continues with action

By Martha Duncan
Youth Activities sports director

Action at Blue Field last weekend was fast and exciting. In the Grasshopper Division, the Tri-city Cowboys stunned the Main Post Eagles with a 14-0 shutout. The two touchdowns of the game came on a 12-yard run by Travis Miller and on a pass to James Thornton. Travis Miller also scored the game's only extra point on a run up the middle.

The Cowboys' defense played remarkably well by containing both the running and passing attack of the Eagles. Key defensive players for the Cowboys were Chris Price, Johnny Manson, Styrome Traylor, Jason Grooves, Eddie McKinney, Ladell Bryant and David Gage.

The Eagles' defense was tight during the second and third quarters, but they had a difficult time moving the offense. Defensive standouts were Todd Walker, Jay Carpenter and Rodney Cole.

In the Termite Division, the Stampeders defeated the Tri-city Falcons 12-0, keeping them undefeated at 4-0-1.

George Bailey and Ron O'Neal each scored a touchdown.

The offense had 250 yards rushing while the defense was led by Joe Barron, George Bailey, Rivera Williams, Kevin Bailey, Spencer Curtis and James Davis. The defense has not allowed a touchdown all season.

Joggers risk life and limb

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Well, following the Doughboys 29-12 loss to Fort Bragg, I feel it's only appropriate that we not talk about it. Actually, it was a tough loss for a team that really does have heart. Right now they're taking some tough lumps, but I'm sure that they're going to make the season a success.

Following that interesting tidbit, I'd like to point out something that I see going on everyday. Have you ever noticed while driving late at night how all of sudden you come upon a lone jogger just on the edge of the road? It kind of shakes you when you realize you almost hit another human being. But one has some solace in the fact that if it happened, it probably wouldn't be totally your fault. Too many people can be found running at all times of the day and night roads that have fairly heavy traffic.

Considering that the post has all kinds of tracks to run on, there is really no good reason for it. Some people claim that for them to have fun running, they have to have a change of scenery instead of a round track. All that can be said about that is that it's better to run around a boring track than to get struck by an automobile on a scenic roadway.

The worst part about the situation is that the runners (and this has happened to me) run right in front of the vehicle and refuse to yield. Also, most night runners don't carry any type of light or wear reflective clothing.

Running is a growing sport in America and it's very popular here on post, but if joggers begin getting hit by cars the running population isn't going to get any bigger. So let's have a safe and sensible running post. It's the only way to jog.

Soccer teams take new look

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

Youth Activities soccer had a new look Saturday when the Junior League Hustlers and Titans squared off for six-player soccer instead of eleven-on-a-side.

The two teams also divided their squads in half and will play with four teams until the playoffs begin Nov. 7.

The Hustlers' number one team solidly defeated the Titans' white team 9-2. Leading his team with five goals was Jim Humphrey. Eric Entlich followed with three scores and Chris Bradford made a single goal.

Their defense was highlighted by action by Greg McCann, Stacie Crookston and Jim Walker.

Darin Myrick was hurt in the third quarter and was forced to sit out the game with an injured knee. Trey Stanford was unable to play in the game due to an injured foot.

Titans' Jim Connon and Raymond King each scored one goal for the white shirts.

Chris Basilio, Brandy Legore and Mike Saliba played well on defense.

The Titans' blue shirts fell to the Hustlers' number two team in the second match. The Hustlers scored four goals and held the opposition to only one score.

Hustler Jeffery Christian made two goals and Mike Bouldin and Barry Allman each scored once. John Rose, Karene Harron, Stephanie Stafford, Raymond Jansco and Peter Diebold played their defensive positions well.

Tom Langhorne made the blue shirts' only goal of the game for the Titans, but Todd Valentine played an excellent game on offense.

Defensive standouts for the Titans were Mike Gersh, Jeff Gersh and Tom Langhorne.

Termite Division action saw the Warriors and Goldiggers battle to a 1-1 tie. Mike Wall made the Goldiggers' sole goal, while defenders Scott Jorgensen, Chris Johns and Peter Dargle led the defense.

The Warriors' goal was made by Wendy Roussin. Scott Shelton, Karl Mueller and Chris Crookston were defensive standouts.

The Rowdies edged the Stings in their match 2-1. Johnathan King and Sara Arellano both scored goals for the Rowdies. Robert Quinn, Paula Benson and Carlos Benson played their defensive positions well.

Donald Baker made the single Stings' goal. Fine performances on offense were turned in by Mike Dinkins, Jason Entlich, Dustin Duvall, Alfred Giavelli and Don Baker.

Goal keeper Justin Winter, fullback Matt Burk and George Walsh, and halfback Ryan Valentine led the defense.

In the Grasshopper Division, the Rockets beat the Chiefs 2-1. Scorers for the Rockets were Christopher Davis and Steve Louck. Kalimba Cobbin and Jason Heard were defensive standouts.

Ryan Yates made the Chiefs' goal. Leading the defensive unit were Thaddeus McDonald, Sloan Simpson and Andrew Small.

The Bulldogs shut out the Black Knights 1-0. Matthew Bearden made the game's only goal, while Sara Lucas, Peter Rounsaville and David Rittenhouse played their defensive positions well.

Though not scoring any goals, the Black Knights' Buddy Lewis, T. J. Foley, Elliot Dennis and Jennifer Peterson played a good game.

Powerhouses predicted to roll this weekend

Rita Marchetti - "Detroit certainly has a winner in rookie quarterback Eric Hipple, not to mention his winning good looks. Beards must be in for quarterbacks this fall, as we shall see this Monday night with Terry Bradshaw and Ken Stabler. Ladies, this is a sport worth watching.

The Miami-Dallas game may be close, but I think the Cowboys will make calm, cool and collected Coach Tom Landry proud at home. What a fine individual.

Fuzz, we've all had just about enough of your expertise. Why don't you take up duck painting?"

Sean Ford - "Are the 49ers for real? We'll find when the Rams roll into town Sunday! It'll be an interesting match-up. The 'Cardiac Cats' remain numero uno in my book. Sorry about last week R. I'm sure Pittsburgh will redeem itself again Houston Monday night."

Larry Harrison - "This week most of the games will be well-balanced. There's not much to be said about what's going to happen. Let's just set back and see what our picks do for us, sports fans."

Don Rhodes - "This week looks pretty cut and dried. Don't look for upsets."

Tony Adams - "Last week, as usual, upsets riddled the NFL. What a season for us to start this column but I have to grin and bear it.

This week the hometown favorite Atlanta Falcons should edge the Giants while San Francisco should extend their division lead over L.A. Kansas City and Cincinnati, both surprises this year, should pull off some tough victories on the road. This should prove to be an interesting week."

give the Jets a 6-0 lead. Shortly thereafter, MacFadden intercepted a Panther pass and returned it all the way for a touchdown making the score 14-0.

Kevin Price later intercepted a pass, keeping the Jets in gear. The Jets continued to march when a pass from Chris Howard to Kenny Johnson for a 10-yard completion was intercepted. The Jets proceeded to march down the field for a Chris Howard 8-yard touchdown run.

This past July Bill Powell hosted a Benning Report special on Energy Day. The show featured Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Bobby J. Harris and Mr. Jim Willis. The show pointed out the importance of saving energy on Fort Benning.

This week on the Benning Report Col. Harris and Mr. Willis will return to talk about Energy Week, an Army-wide attack against energy wasters. The difference between this show and this summer's special is its host. Bill Powell, who also wrote this column, is off to his new assignment in Turkey and J. C. Hope will be taking over as permanent host of the Benning Report. His discussion with Col. Harris will try, once again, to point out the importance of saving energy.

In sports I'll be going over the Doughboys' loss to Fort Bragg and some upcoming sports events here on post.

Keep your ears tuned to Spectrum this week as we feature a Halloween special including some ghostly tales and haunting sounds as well as the radio broadcast that shook the nation; the original CBS broadcast of H. G. Wells' classic "The War of the Worlds," aired on Oct. 31, 1938 and starring the incomparable Orson Welles.

Enjoy this week's shows and have a happy and haunted Halloween!

Leopard Fitness Event

The chance to test your fitness level, benefit the metro United Way campaign and have a good time while you're doing it, will be the order of the day at the Leopard Fitness Event to be held Oct. 31 at Weracoba Park.

The event, held in cooperation with Columbus College and the city's Department of Recreation, is a timed competition on the Par Course, Columbus' newest recreational facility.

The Par Course is a one-mile jogging loop which has 15 different exercise stations spaced along the route. "The course contains stations for sit-ups, chin-ups, jumping jacks and several other exercises that most people would be familiar with," said Dr. Michael Taylor, head of the college's department of physical education and recreation and a coordinator for the event.

The event features competition in three different categories which are based on times to beat, with men's and women's divisions in each group.

The yellow group has a starting par with 12 minutes as the time to beat and begins competition at 9 a.m. The beige group, with a sporting par of 14 minutes, begins at 11 a.m. The blue group, with a championship par of 20 minutes, will get underway at 1 p.m. The categories are also based on the number of repetitions required at each exercise station.

The pre-registration fee is $5 and on-site registration is $6.50 with all proceeds going to the United Way. The entry fee includes a T-shirt and a party for the competitors from 3 p.m. until 7 p.m. at the Speakeasy Pub. The registration point will be set up on 17th Street in Weracoba Park. Entry forms are available at the city's Department of Recreation and other various sites in Columbus. For further information contact the city's Department of Recreation at 323-7334.

Basketball practice begins

The post women's and men's basketball practices will begin this month for any military personnel interested in playing on the 1981-82 team.

Women will begin Monday at the Briant Wells Field House. Practice begins at 7 p.m.

Men's practice will begin Oct. 31 at the Briant Wells Field House from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Other men's practice dates are Nov. 1, Nov. 7 and Nov. 8, all at the Santiago Gym from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Armed Forces dart tournament

The second Armed Forces Invitational Dart Classic will be held Nov. 6-8 at Fort Monroe, Va.

The tournament will be conducted by the Tidewater Area Darting Association and sanctioned by the American Darts Organization. Participation is open to all active duty and retired personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Reservists on active duty are also invited. ID cards will be required.

The tournament will take place at the Quality Inn/Lake Wright Motel in Norfolk, Va. For reservations call toll free, 1-800-228-5151 or call direct at 1-804-461-6251.

On Nov. 6 the competition will begin at 8 p.m. The following day competition will begin at 9 a.m. and Sunday the competition will conclude beginning at 9 a.m. The categories will be men's singles (closed), ladies' singles (closed), open doubles, four person team and open singles crickets.

The entry fee for the event is $40 per person. Tournament registration should be made in advance. When sending in your registration, be sure to include the following: full name, sex, military address, military phone number, Social Security number and your branch of service. Mail the registration to Headquarters, Fort Monroe, Morale Support Division, Attn: Dart Tournament, Bldg. T-183, Fort Monroe, Va. 23651.

There will be a $5,000 prize structure. Winners in each event will be awarded trophies through fourth place. For additional information, call Jerry Compton at 804-727-2712.

Cooks offer dietary lunch

Story and photos by Sharron Calibrisi

36th Engineer Public Affairs Office

"Top! Me, on the Weight Control Program? You're joking, what will I be able to eat?"

Does this sound familiar? You are just going along eating your regular three meals a day and snacks and all of a sudden, zap, you're overweight.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion Dining Facility has come up with a solution for the overweight soldier. They offer low calorie plates at the noon meal. There are two different plates to choose from, the chef salad plate and the tuna/macaroni plate.

The chef salad plate consists of lettuce, tomatoes, cheese, ham, carrots, celery, a boiled egg, and a black olive. The tuna/macaroni plate consists of tuna, macaroni, lettuce, radishes, olive, carrots & celery. The chef salad plate has 215 calories, and the tuna/macaroni plate has 375 calories.

There are also four types of dressing to choose from. The salad dressing has 200 calories, the French dressing has 115 calories the Italian dressing has 155 calories and the 1000 Island dressing has 120 calories.

SFC Woodie Tate, Co D, 43rd Engr Bn and PFC Carl Fisher, Co C, 43rd Engr Bn, are the creators of the low calorie plates.

"The men and women of the battalion have commented that they like to eat them to help maintain their present weight," Tate added. "I'm on a 1,500 calorie a day diet and I eat them."

The other meals could run up to 800 calories. "If a person is on a 1,200 to 1,500 calories a day diet, they could run into trouble," Tate mentioned.

These low calorie plates have been offered in the dining facility for about a month and a half. Lt. Col.

Just a small sampling of what the overweight soldier gets for lunch.

Stephen Draper, battalion commander, came up with the idea. It is something to help the soldier who is on the weight control program and wants to lose weight so he can stay in the Army.

Ten of these plates are made a day and usually only one is left after lunch.

There is also a yogurt cup offered at 290 calories.

If you start seeing some thin soldiers walking around the 43rd Engineer Battalion area, it must be the low calorie plates they have been eating.

PFC Fisher prepares a Tuna plate as SFC Tate watches to make sure it's done right.

Ghosts, creatures take over

House gets haunted

By Dave Bristow

USAIC Public Affairs Office

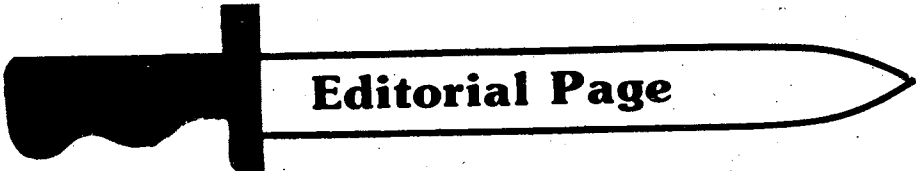

Hidden down a lonely dirt road, amidst a forest, stands a weathered single story dwelling. Normally Boy Scout troop 127s' hut, the dwelling is now haunted.

Sp5 Bob Clayton directs the inhabitants in the house. A mad scientist, his assistant Egor, the count Dracula, four mummies (three alive, one dead) and the creature Frankenstein.

"What makes this place so great is its location, says Clayton a member of Company A, Headquarters Command with a gleam in his eye. "A perfect setting for our haunted house."

Energy second to personnel

The Army depends on many resources to accomplish its mission, but, with the exception of its personnel, I do not believe that there is any resource more important than energy. Without it we could not move or communicate, or for that matter, produce the materials, weapons and equipment necessary to defend our country. We could not cook our food, light our offices and billets or heat and cool our quarters. Our great country has always been so blessed with an abundance of energy that we take this important resource for granted.

Unfortunately, that situation has changed. The abundance has disappeared, the reserves are rapidly being depleted and for the first time in most of our lives, there is a shortage of energy. This has had a two-fold effect on us. We can no longer do some of the things we like to do and the price of doing the things we must do has skyrocketed. In 1970 we paid less than $2.00 a barrel for crude oil. Today we are paying between $35.00 and $40.00 a barrel.

This shortage and high cost combination is especially devastating to the Army. Our mission requires huge quantities of energy and at the same time, budget restrictions are at their worst. What is the answer? One of the best answers is energy conservation. I am sure that the native genius of this great country will solve the energy crisis, but it will take time. In the meantime, we must conserve what we have and use it prudently and sparingly.

Each of you can help this Post, the Army, your country and, yes, your children and even your grandchildren by joining me in a concerted and continuing effort to conserve energy. October 25-31 has been designated as Army Energy Conservation Week and I cannot think of a better time to firm our resolve and redouble our efforts toward conserving energy. It cannot be done by one or two persons, or even a few hundred. It must be done by each and everyone of us, soldier and civilian alike. As your commander, fellow soldier and fellow American, I charge each of you with the task to everyday, in at least one way, do something to conserve energy. Turn out an unneeded light, keep the thermostats set properly, wash clothes in cold rather than hot water. Little things, but when done by a lot of people, they can have their rewards. With your dedicated commitment to this task, we can conserve this resource so vital to the accomplishment of our task — the defense of our country.

Letters to the Editor

Reader says flashing light hazardous

Editor BAYONET:

This letter is written about a traffic light at Ingersoll Street and Vibert Avenue, that has been downgraded from the job that it was put up for and designed to do — directing cars and people at an intersection, cut down on automobile accidents, helping people from getting hurt or killed and to keep the traffic running smoothly.

This traffic light blinks caution both ways creating a situation that promotes traffic hazards for cars and people.

Whoever is responsible, a civilian, sergeant, private, or a full colonel, Please upgrade the traffic light at Ingersoll Street and Vibert Avenue, to do what it was designed to do.

This upgrading might prevent a serious accident or save a human life.

CHARLES T. HARDY

Engineer's answer

Subject traffic signal light does not meet the traffic volume or other warrants for signalization per the Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD). The MUTCD also suggests removal for lights not meeting these warrants.

The signal head flashes red to Ingersoll and yellow to Vibbert, not yellow to all four. A flashing red light has the same meaning in traffic ordinances as the stop sign. To reinforce this intent, stop signs have been installed on both sides for Ingersoll. This is preparatory to removal of the signal head.

Good traffic engineering is dedicated to the safe, swift movement of traffic. Hazards, which cause accidents, impede traffic flow. The accidents themselves are also temporary hazards which impede traffic.

This signal was an antiquated fixed time control-

Year of Progress

The "Year of Progress" announced by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel is 30 days old.

Many items have already been nominated for inclusion on the progress list.

"The list," Gen. Wetzel said at the beginning of October, "is to provide feedback to our employees, our military personnel and their family members as Item to just how well we are doing."

He said that the list is not just for internal evidence of progress but also to keep people outside of Fort Benning informed of progress here.

This newspaper will publish monthly consolidated list of these items of progress.

These are the October items.

ler. It impeded traffic to the extent that Vibbert experienced lines extending several hundred feet east in the mornings and west in the evenings. This jam condition and its high potential for rear end type collisions has been eliminated. Traffic flow now moves swiftly from Edwards to Lumpkin and vice versa. Turning movements from Vibbert to Ingersoll are much easier since there is now no opposing line of cars.

Those few persons who feel constrained to approach Vibbert along Ingersoll during peak hours must necessarily expect difficulty in crossing or turning. The largest volume is on Vibbert and is being best served by the stop condition to Ingersoll.

Three accidents have been recorded this calendar year at this intersection. In two cases, vehicles ignored the signal entirely. In the third case, a vehicle went straight from a left turn lane. These accidents cannot be attributed directly to the type of signal.

A stop condition for Ingersoll at Vibbert is proper, efficient and safe.

CG's message

Every year with the onset of the hunting season there is a marked increase in theft and vandalism to the bleachers, storage sheds and range complexes throughout the reservation.

There are thousands of dollars lost due to this theft and damage of government property.

Unfortunately, hunters appear to be the ones responsible for many of these acts, because of the noticeable increase in incidents during the hunting season. If this trend continues it will become necessary to establish control measures which will make hunting at Fort Benning more restrictive and less convenient for all of us.

Therefore, you, as sportsmen, are requested to help by being on the lookout for those who are jeopardizing your hunting privileges.

I would ask that you be observant while out hunting and taking the initiative to report vandalism, violations of regulations and any other incidents that are counter to good hunter ethics, such as littering and indiscriminate shooting.

Be watchful for suspicious vehicles and take the time to write down description, license number, time and location.

Make reports by calling the military police desk at 545-5222 as soon as possible.

CFC drive

As of noon Tuesday, Fort Benning personnel have contributed $261,532.93 to this year's Combined Federal Campaign (CFC). This represents 69.7 percent of the campaign goal of $375,000.

CFC supports the Local United Way, international service agencies, national health agencies and others.

One objective of the CFC is to provide each soldier and civilian employee the opportunity to contribute to agencies dedicated to improving the quality of life for many people in many ways.

The campaign is scheduled to end on Nov. 6. Soldiers don't have to wait until pay day to contribute. They can use the payroll deduction plan.

Toy recall

WASHINGTON — The Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) has removed certain children's toys from the shelf because of potential health hazards.

Sleepy bear, a nine-inch stuffed toy manufactured by the Knickerbocker Co., was found to have a plastic nose and eyes that could easily break off and be swallowed by children.

Other items being removed from exchange shelves are Barbie doll delux cosmetics, Barbie nail polish assortments and Barbie beauty sets — all manufactured by the Mattel Co.

Testing of the Mattel products revealed there may be contaminated bacteria in the nail polish. Tests also showed that the polish doesn't have enough bacterial control agents to prevent the growth of certain types of germs.

The exchange service urges customers who bought these toys to return them to their local exchange for a full refund. (ARNews)

Road closing

Marne Road will be closed, from 1st Cavalry Division Road to Martin Army Community Hospital until further notice.

For any further information call Directorate of Facilities Engineer at 545-2618.

Soldiers hit Appalachian Trail

By David R. Preast
15th Finance Company

Ask most soldiers their impression of the role of a finance clerk, and invariably you'll receive an answer like, "Oh, all they do is sit behind a desk and pay people."

That evaluation is far from true, as was evidence by members of the 15th Finance Section recently.

Forty members of the unit traveled to the mountains of Dahlonega, Ga., and participated in what was, for many of them, a "once in a lifetime experience." Traveling over and through the same terrain used by students undergoing U.S. Army Ranger Training, the group of finance soldiers embarked on and completed the first 30 miles of the Appalachian Trail. An added factor to the exercise was that the soldiers lived out of their rucksacks for the entire four days.

"We had two objectives to accomplish," stated Cpt David preast, company commander. "One, to acquaint our soldiers with the jobs being performed by the individual who comes into our office with a pay problem. And the other, to show each soldier that they can go for an extended time without having everything provided for them."

The forty finance soldiers, 12 of which were female, departed Springer Mountain carrying food, water, and personal equipment to last the entire four days. Springer Mountain is the official starting for the Appalachian Trail, a wilderness pathway extending some 2100 miles from Georgia to Maine.

Due to the extreme variation in terrain (2000 to 4000 feet) and the reality of no resupply, each soldier had to carefully insure he had adequate clothing, rations, sleeping gear and water, yet not overland himself to the extent the load could not be carried up the near vertical trails winding through the Blue Ridge Mountains. Weight was a deciding factor, as many learned.

Walking the Applachian Trail.

"The scenery was beautiful. I've never seen anything like it before," commented Sp5 Alice Green, finance customer inquiry section. "It was very backbreaking, but it also showed me that with determination I can accomplish any mission I'm given."

Four days and thirty miles later, each member that started completed the exercise with a multitude of new experiences, and a better understanding for the job of the infantry soldier.

Largest solar facility to be built

The largest applied solar facility in the United States is to be built at Fort Benning.

A contract for 80 solar ponds covering six acres has been awarded to Construction Management Engineers of Florida, Inc. of South Miami, Fla.

This project to heat hot water will save Fort Benning $35,000 a month in fuel oil costs and pay for its near $4 million cost in about 10 years.

It is designed to conserve 67 billion BTUs of energy per year or 455,000 gallons of fuel oil at a current market price of $420,000.

There will be 80 shallow ponds, each measuring 16 feet by 200 feet. The water is held in rubberized bags that are each 7 and one-half by 200 feet. The project includes a pumping station and an insulated storage tank that will hold 500,000 gallons of the heated water.

The project will heat one-half million gallons of water a day. It will then be piped from its Heath Circle location, just off Indianhead Road, to the barracks in the 2700 and 2800 blocks and to the post laundry.

The sun heats the water in the ponds to approximately 160 degrees in the summer and 90 degrees in the winter.

Therefore the water will have to be cooled some for domestic use in the summer. And in the winter, current hot water heating systems will only have to heat it another 20 to 30 degrees to make it the desired temperature.

The project will use the batch process. Each morning the 80 ponds will be filled and every night the heated water will be drained into the 500,000 gallon insulated storage tank. The users will draw their needed supply from this tank and every day the process will be repeated.

According to Jim Carmody at the Directorate of Facilities Engineering, it will take about 14 months to build the system so January 1983 should be an appropriate completion date.

Medical activity holds health fair

A health fair was put on by the medical activity on post Saturday, at the main mall, to inform people living in the military community as to what medical services are available on post.

Blood pressure checks were made by the cardiology clinic, dangers of smoking were pointed out by the preventive medicine and community health sections and Mr. Bones (a skeleton dressed as a jogger from the physical therapy section) was used to point out the do's and don'ts of good jogging.

Other health services represented at this year's fair included emergency medical technicians demonstrating how they treat serious wounds and a dental health and good nutrition display by the dental activity. There was also a hearing conservation display from the audiology clinic, and people from the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System program were available to answer questions about DEERS.

Mike Barron, emergency medical technician for the hospital, answers questions for eight-year-old Mindy Carter about a simulated victims wounds. Mindy asks about the air splint on his arm.

Octopuff (PFC Bonny Adams) discusses the hazards of smoking with community health nurses Johnnie M. Smith (I) and 1st Lt. Dianne Clayton.

Overseas move hard on children

Jan had always been a good student ... high grades, president of the Student Council, active Girl Scout. All that had now changed. Jan was used to moving — or so her parents thought — it's a part of military life. But sometimes a move to a foreign country is more than just another move.

Children of military families react differently to living overseas. For some, the experience is exciting and adventurous. Others, like Jan, may withdraw, become sullen, refuse to make new friends or start fights with her classmates.

Frustration

Helping your child handle feelings of anger, frustration or aggression resulting from an overseas move can be draining and distressing. Parents, too, may have mixed feelings about their new home.

However, anger is often a defense to avoid painful feelings. It may be associated with low self-esteem, feelings of isolation or anxiety about being in a situation over which the child has no control.

An overseas move doesn't have to be an occasion for your children or you to come apart. You can make the move easier for everyone by taking some positive action.

As soon as you know your family's being transferred overseas, get out the books and maps and read up on your new homeland. Make sure your kids understand they're going to a place where the language, customs, food and people will be different from that in the United States. Unless they have a fairly good idea of what "overseas" is, your youngsters may be "culture shocked" to find out that "overseas" is not just another stateside assignment.

Talk over any fears and complaints your children express about going overseas, especially if they seem very upset about the move. They may like living where they are and don't want to leave for an unknown place. Show them you are concerned with their feelings. Parents can listen to and accept their kids' feelings, yet remain firm about the move.

Settling in

Once you arrive overseas, get settled in new quarters as quickly as possible. This isn't always possible in those areas where the waiting list for permanent housing is long. However, try to make your temporary quarters as "homey" as possible. If playing cards on Saturday is an important family pastime in the states, keep up the habit overseas.

Don't be alarmed if the kids don't feel "right at home" as soon as you get overseas. Most people feel homesick in unfamiliar surroundings. Get your children out with the family to see the local community. You may find their adjustment to your new "home" will be a little easier.

Language helps

Being able to say a few basic phrases in your host country's language helps make kids feel more a part of the country, too. Try the foods and drinks native to the country. The sooner you become involved in the activities of the new country, the more easily your kids will accept being there.

Encourage your children to become active in dependent youth activities on the post where you are stationed. Most posts sponsor sports and recreational events for family members. This can be particularly helpful for children whose families live out on the "economy." Sometimes culture and language difference impact hardest on children who live away from the American military community.

Try to make your living quarters as "homey" as possible. Most places, on and off posts, aren't like homes in the U.S. Many children are bothered by the "stairwell living" offered on posts. Others must learn to live in smaller, less modern quarters on the local economy. If possible, let your children have their own private space in the house. Try to let them have some time alone to sort out their thoughts.

Homesick first

Finally, let the kids know there's nothing wrong with being homesick at first. Even if you like your new way of life overseas, there's still no place like

Haunted

The haunted house is a joint project between Boy Scout troop 127 and the McGraw Community. It's located on a dirt road that runs off Custer Road, near McBride elementary school. The house will be open today and Saturday from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Guests will walk through the graveyard gate, pay a 50 cent admission charge (under two free), and walk through the graveyard before they get to the haunted house. Don't be surprised if you see a skeleton rise up from his grave while you make your way to the dwelling.

The mad scientist, along with his assistant, will take you on the guided tour. Eight dark rooms ensure your visit will not be forgotten.

There's the living room, witch's room, torture chamber, monsters cage, mummy's room, crypt room, laboratory and the dark room.

Fourteen-year-old Andrew Bell, freshman from Spencer High school, says, "Everyone who comes will have a good time. We plan to scare the wits out of a lot of people. And beware of the mummy."

Once guests exit the haunted house they will be able to enjoy a troop campfire, have refreshments and have their children participate in an apple bob. There will also be a host of baked goods on sale and Halloween cake to be given away each night.

But you have to get through the haunted house first — if you dare.

Community News

All Communities

- A HAUNTED house is coming to the McGraw Manor. It will be sponsored by the McGraw Manor and the Boy Scouts Pack 127. The event will be held at the Boy Scout Hut today and tomorrow from 7-10 p.m. The admission is 50 cents. Other exciting events will also take place. Volunteers are needed in the event as monsters. For more information contact Bob Clayton at 545-1806.

- A TEEN dance will be held at the Lavoie Gym tomorrow for youths ages 13 through 18-years-old at 7 p.m. Admission is free. The dance is a costume party.

Special Kids

- A HALLOWEEN costume party will be held tomorrow from 7:30-9 p.m. Scheduled activities include a parade of costumes, games, and refreshments.

Volunteers are needed to work with the special kids committee.

Custer Terrace

- ALL RESIDENTS of this community are urged to mark your trash cans. They must be marked!

There is an inspection every Thursday.

- WE HAVE two positions opened in our community at this time. They are the Vice Mayor and the Treasurer. If you are interested, please come to the Community Life Program office or call 545-1332.

- WE ALSO are in need of volunteers to fill positions in the committees in our communities.

Bouton Heights/Davis Hill

- EXERCISE CLASSES are in progress in our community. There is still room for other participants. The classes will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6:30 p.m.-7:30 p.m.

- NOTICE: TRASH cans should be put out on the morning of pickup and removed from the sidewalks or yards after pickup. If pickup falls on a holiday then pickup will be next pick up day.

- GAME NIGHT is every Friday night. Friday games will be at 9:15 p.m. because of the late meeting.

McGraw Manor

- AN ADULT Halloween costume party will be held at the Log Cabin tomorrow starting at 9 p.m. The admission is $1 per person or $1.50 per couple. There will be a prize given for the most original costume. The late start will enable the parents to take their children to their activities.

- A COMMUNITY fair will be held tomorrow from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the McGraw Manor Community Center. There will be games and excitement galore.

Girl Scouts

- The Girl Scouts celebrate Juliet Gordon Low (known by the Girl Scouts as "Daisy") birthday tomorrow. Low was born on Oct. 31, 1860 in Savannah, Ga.

All 28 Girl Scout troops here are celebrating "Daisy's" birthday in their own way.

Troop 263 went to McDonalds recently where they had a cater birthday party with all the trimmings. Other troops are celebrating with troop meeting parties and slumber parties. Happy Birthday Daisy!

International Wives

- The location of the International Wives meeting place has been changed from Crain Hall, building 229 to building 2888, near Bradshaw and Belt Roads.

The meeting schedule for Tuesday has been canceled. Instead the International Wives will have an open house Nov. 8 at 1:30 p.m.

For more information call 687-6471 or 687-5738.

Boy Scouts keep active schedule

Troop 27 needs camping items

- Do you have some old items of camping equipment you are thinking of discarding?

If so, please think about donating them to Boy Scout Troop 27.

Pots, pans, tupperware type plastics, tea kettles, frying pans, tents, dining flies (covers), folding chairs, folding tables, lanterns, coolers, brooms, mops, lumber, large pieces of plywood, pegboard, plastic table cloths, any type or shape canvas and other items are needed.

Troop 27 will pickup the items on post or you can bring them to the Scout Hut located at Russ Pond off Vogel Street behind the main post fire station any Monday night between 7 and 8:30 p.m.

For pickup or directions to the Troop 27 Scout Hut, please call Don Rogan at 687-6034 or Ben Burgess at 689-5018.

For more information about Troop 27, call the Scoutmaster Rick Forlines at 682-1123 or 545-2335.

Merit badge counselors needed

- Are you interested in helping coach a boy scout in his pursuit of a merit badge? Adult volunteers are needed to assist the scouts. There are numerous areas of Scouting that you may well have the background needed. If you are interested and willing to volunteer, at your convenience, call the Troop 27 Scoutmaster, Rick Forlines at 682-1123 or the Advancement Chairman Tom Walker at 687-8432.

Troop 27 announces leaders

- The Boy Scouts of America, Troop 27 recently held their elections for the Boy Scout Leaders of the Troop. Star Scout James Schultz was elected Senior Patrol Leader and Life Scout Edward Schipul was elected assistant Senior Patrol Leader. James is the son of CWO2 and Mrs. John Schultz and is a senior at Pacelli High School. Ed is the son of Doctor (Maj.) and Mrs. Arthur Schipul and is a freshmen at Pacelli High School.

Elected as Patrol Leaders were John Herold, Danny Krueger and Steve Latorre. John is a Life Scout and is a freshman at Spencer High School. He is the son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. John Herold.

Danny Krueger is an Eagle Scout candidate and a senior at Pacelli High School. Danny is the son of Dr. (Capt.) and Mrs. Latorre. Assistant Patrol Leaders are Mike Williams, Jim Walker, and Lou Acosta. Tim Walker was appointed Troop Quartermaster.

Troop 27 camps at McKenzie

- Boy Scouts of America, Troop 27 camped out at Camp McKenzie last weekend.

Activities conducted were rifle and shotgun shooting, canoeing and wilderness exploration.

Support in transporting the troop and equipment was accomplished by the troop's sponsor unit, 2/10 Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Saturday night, the troop was treated to a special stew prepared by the leaders.

All in all, the troop had a good campout and is looking forward to the future troop activities. For more information on Troop 27, call the Scoutmaster Rick Forlines at 682-1123 or 545-2335.

Fall camporee coming

Plans are being made for Fort Benning District Scout troops and Webelo Scouts to take part in a fall camporee to be held at Specker Stream Crossing Site on Uchee Creek near Uchee Creek recreation area and boat ramp on Nov. 6, 7 and 8.

What is a camporee?

It is camping fun for boys. It's the thumping of hundreds of feet on the way to an evening campfire. It's the blue smoke from many campfires cooking hamburg mulligan or spaghetti or ham and eggs or French toast.

It's the air-splitting shout of young voices giving the scout cheer. It can be the patter of rain on many tents at night. It's the ripple of windblown flags in the morning sun. It's catching the idea of teamwork in a patrol.

It's the spirit that says, "Our gang is as good as anybody." It's "Young America" learning self-reliance first-hand.

The theme for this year's camporee is "Scouting Skills," an interpatrol and troop camping demonstration of campcraft skills.

PEACHTREE MALL, COLUMBUS

Community program valuable for future

By Sandra Ellis
ACS volunteer

Fort Benning has many programs designed to make life on post as enjoyable as possible for service members and their families.

The most important one is the Community Life Program. Its goal is for the continuous enhancement of the quality of life for service members and their families residing here.

Each of the four major communities — McGraw

Manor, Custer Terrace, Lavoie Manor and Bouton Heights/Davis Hill — has its own Community Life Program (CLP). All CLPs come under the direction of Army Community Service (ACS). SFC Paul Coyle, NCOIC of ACS and CLP Coordinator, provided a little background about the CLP.

Each CLP has a governing body elected by community residents. Positions include Mayor, Vice-Mayor, Treasurer and Secretary. There are also various committees to support the community in its effort to enhance itself.

These governing bodies could be compared to a city government. Except for one active duty Community Coordinator for each CLP, all staff members are volunteers.

The purpose of the Community Life Program is to augment the existing chain of command of every soldier on Fort Benning by creating programs for families residing in government quarters.

ACS provides $300 annually to each community to promote functions and activities for the purpose of generating more funds for themselves. The overall goal of the money is to provide equipment and material for special projects desired by the community.

"The most important part of the CLP," related SFC Coyle, "is the dedication of the volunteers who staff the program, and their desire to improve their communities. They organize flea markets, community dances, martial arts classes, sewing classes, special youth activities and the widely acclaimed Tiny Tots Program.

"Unfortunately," SFC Coyle continued, "there are problem areas too. Basically, no program can exist without participation from those for which it is intended. Apathy on the part of many residents within the various communities is the major problem and has placed a question mark in my mind about the future of the program here. When only 10 people out of a community of nearly 3,000 show up for a well publicized town meeting, there is an indication of a serious lack of interest, not only in the program but their communities as well."

SFC Coyle concluded by saying, "The Community Life Program is for the benefit of community residents. If the program is not utilized by enough people, it may meet the same fate as other discarded community programs."

Dart tourney coming

The second Armed Forces Invitational Dart Classic will be held Nov. 6-8 at Fort Monroe, Va.

The tournament will take place at the Quality Inn/Lake Wright Motel in Norfolk, Va. For reservations call toll free, 1-800-228-5151 or call direct at 1-804-461-6251.

The entry fee for the event is $40 per person. Tournament registration should be made in advance. When sending in your registration, be sure to include the following: full name, sex, military address, military phone number, Social Security number and your branch of service. Mail the registration to Headquarters, Fort Monroe, Morale Support Division, Attn: Dart Tournament, Bldg. T-183, Fort Monroe, Va. 23651.

Infantry Fighting Vehicle Renamed

WASHINGTON — The new armored vehicle for infantry and armored cavalry soldiers was officially dedicated as the "Bradley Fighting Vehicle" during Fort Myer, Va., ceremonies Oct. 20.

The vehicle — the M2 infantry fighting vehicle and the M3 cavalry fighting vehicle — was named to honor the late General of the Army Omar N. Bradley. Mrs. Omar (Kitty) Bradley and Army Chief of Staff Gen. E.C. Meyer highlighted the historic event at Summerall Field.

Remarking that the Bradley "is not a tank, but a fighting vehicle designed to operate with the Abrams", Meyer commented the army must "Fashion Our Doctrine and Tactics to take advantage of the unique fighting capabilities" of the vehicle.

Brig. Gen. Donald P. Whalen, fighting vehicle systems program manager, offered that "The Bradley Fighting Vehicle is the finest vehicle of its type in the world. No other can match its combination of firepower, mobility and armored protection.

"For the first time infantry and armored cavalry can keep pace cross-country with our main battle tanks," he continued. "The vehicle's design permits the main armament to fire with pinpoint accuracy day or night — while stationary or on the move. The crew members can provide continuous suppressive fires, and the integral tow missile system can destroy tanks at a distance in excess of 3,000 meters."

The vehicle is designed to be as mobile as the M1 Abrams main battle tank, according to army officials. The turret-mounted 25mm cannon can destroy enemy fighting vehicles and is gyro-stabilized to permit accurate firing while on the move.

Each vehicle is equipped with a two missile launcher and a coaxial machine gun, in addition to the 25mm cannon. Also, the infantry vehicle has six firing port weapons for soldiers' use. The weapons systems can be used effectively both day and night, officials say. "The amount of firepower on this vehicle and the accuracy obtained, especially while moving, is phenomenal," noted Gen. Whalen.

The M2 Bradley carries a nine-man infantry squad, while the M3 Bradley adds firepower for the five-man scout team performing reconnaissance missions.

Presently, four of the new Bradley fighting vehicles have been delivered to the army. Officials say that, by mid-1983, the army will field its first operational battalion equipped with the new vehicle. (ARNews)

Soldier who gave his life honored

By Debbie Harrison
USAIC Public Affairs Office

An infantryman who gave his life for his fellow soldiers and country in the Republic of Vietnam was inducted into the Officers' Candidate School (OCS) Hall of Fame last Friday.

1st Lt. Gary L. Miller, a native of Covington, Va., graduated from OCS here in December 1967. After receiving his commission as a second lieutenant, he was assigned as a platoon leader at Fort Campbell, Ky.

He joined Company A, 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam as a platoon leader on Jan. 4, 1969.

Six weeks later, on the night of Feb. 16, Miller's company was attacked in Binh Duong Province by hostile forces. After a short, violent exchange of fire, he led a reconnaissance patrol in search of enemy casualties. As the patrol advanced, they were suddenly attacked. Miller was seriously wounded; despite this, he and his men fought back.

As the fire fight continued, an enemy grenade was thrown and landed in the midst of the patrol, and the men dived for cover not sure of the grenade's location. Miller saw the grenade in the dim light and threw himself on it, saving members of his patrol from almost certain serious wounds or possibly death. He received the Medal of Honor (posthumously) for his brave actions on Feb. 16, 1969.

At the Hall of Fame ceremony, Col. Robert S. Rose, commander of The School Brigade, said in front of a group of OCS candidates and Lieutenant Miller's parents, "Today is an honor and privilege for, particularly, Lieutenant Miller. He exemplifies the highest standards for you candidates . . . He represents over 116,000 graduates of OCS who have made a contribution to the leadership of this country and the Army.

"It is most fitting we acknowledge the achievements of such an officer," he said.

Miller's parents were here for the ceremonies honoring their son.

Mr. Miller was presented an Infantry Officer Candidate Hall of Fame Certificate by Col. Rose.

"It makes me proud that he did what he had to do," said Mrs. Miller.

"We are proud that they thought enough of our son to do this for us. We feel greatly honored that our son, Gary, has been chosen for this (induction into the OCS Hall of Fame).

Later, at a second ceremony, the Weapons, Gunnery and Maintenance Department building was dedicated as Miller Hall.

Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel, post commanding general, proclaimed last Friday as Miller Day. Gen. Wetzel spoke at the dedication.

"Thousands of young men served this country in Vietnam. Many served in the infantry with distinction but few, very few, did so with the degree of selflessness and courage displayed by 1st Lt. Gary L. Miller," he said.

"This selfless dedication and extraordinary courage was an inspiration to his comrades at arms," added Gen. Wetzel.

Mr. Miller said in a short speech, "We would like to thank you for this dedication. Let us remember our men and women in uniform so we can have a free country forever."

While the large crowd on hand for the dedication ceremony watched, Mr. and Mrs. Miller unveiled two brass plaques at the entrance of Miller Hall. The plaques are inscribed with Lieutenant Miller's name and the account of his actions that led to his being awarded the Medal of Honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred A. Miller stand beside the bronze plaque which tells of their son's heroism. Bldg. 241 was named Miller Hall in his honor.

Maintenance shop moves

The maintenance section and the S-4 shop of the 36th Engineer Group moved to a new location recently and had a ribbon cutting ceremony to mark the occasion.

"This new location is better for the Maintenance Section because we are closer to the motor pools," commented MSgt. Major Smith. Col. Frederick E. Bittl, Group commander, and Lt. Col. James I. Spencer, group executive officer, were present at the ceremony along with representatives for DIO, DPT and the 283rd Army Band.

The Maintenance Section and S-4 shop will not occupy Bldg. 1819.

Lt. Col. James I. Spencer, group executive officer, cuts the ribbon to the new S-4 Shop as Maj. John Fisher looks on.

Understanding—part of parenthood

The newborn just won't stop crying, even though you've dried, fed and cuddled her ... the two-year-old smears jelly on the wall ... the school principal calls to tell you your 10-year-old was caught smoking in the bathroom.

Parenthood is often a mixed blessing ... the joy and satisfaction you feel when John-John first learns to hold his spoon fade the very next minute when he throws his bowl of oatmeal on the floor.

Parents learn early that being a parent isn't easy. The everyday routine and directing children can produce stress and tension in even the most loving parent.

When nothing seems to go right, it's important for parents to remember they're not alone. Other people have found parenthood equally demanding and frustrating.

Some tips to help you make it through parenthood without losing your cool are:

- Count to 10. Put the child in a safe place (crib, playpen, etc.) and leave the area for a few minutes.

- Go somewhere in the house where you can be alone. Scream or cry if that makes you feel better. Then do something relaxing (reading, knitting, etc.) for about 10 minutes.

- Lie down flat and elevate your feet. Cover your face with a cool wash cloth and imagine a peaceful scene. Remain in this position for about five minutes.

- Talk to your child. Explain why you are angry and how you expect him or her to act to keep you from getting angry.

- Select a "time-out" area where you can go when you feel yourself getting angry. Give your child a separate area. It allows both of you a place to cool off. It also lets the other person know you are getting angry.

- Try to understand your relationship with your children. When you feel yourself growing tense over something happening in your home, ask yourself these questions:

How important is it for my children to always do things my way?

Do I listen to my children and really understand what they are saying?

What do my children really want and need from me?

Do I make myself clear when I tell my children to do something?

Do I spend enough time listening to my children talk about their friends, school and other things important to them?

Am I taking my problems out on my children?

Do I treat my children like I want to be treated?

Don't forget to reward your children when things are going well at home. Let them know when you are pleased with the way they are acting.

When a parent knows how to take care of an immediate situation, the stressful moment passes and calm returns ... until the next crisis.

Parents will always have stress because being a parent is hard. But stress can be controlled when parents learn ways to release tension.

New committee to study weapons costs

WASHINGTON — The Army is bringing new management emphasis to the problem of cost growth in major weapon systems. The Secretary of the Army announced a major cost discipline program as part of this effort.

As part of a program to get a firmer hold on cost growth in materiel acquisition, the Secretary of the Army is establishing a blue ribbon group — the Cost Discipline Advisory Committee.

The committee is made up of industrial financial-management and systems-acquisition authorities who are not connected with the Department of Defense. Their charter calls for them to assess how well the Army's management processes will control cost growth. In so doing, the committee is empowered by the Secretary of the Army to recommend appropriate changes in managerial policy and practices.

The cost awareness that led to formation of the committee follows the completion of an internal Army program that will:

- Install a formal program cost control system in the acquisition process. The system will oversee the changes proposed in weapon system requirements, schedules, cost and configuration.
- Improve the way program costs are estimated by the Army, with the aim of more realistic estimates for budgeting purposes.
- Bring the decision process on individual weapon systems into the overall picture of program affordability. The result of this merging would insure a balanced effort and higher program stability.
- In performing its role for the Army secretary, the committee can advise on corective actions to improve organization processes and control mechanisms for assuring adequate Army-wide cost discipline.

• The committee's studies, deliberations, and recommendations are expected to help sustain cost discipline through all activities of financial management and materiel acquisition. The ultimate goal is to know the legislative and executive requirements and to respond to them properly — all the while assuring adequate planning, information flow, and execution review.

Designated committee members are as follows:

- Robert E. Gilmore (Peoria, Ill.), president and chief operating officer and director of Caterpillar Tractor Co.
- Hadlai A. Hull (Washington, D.C.), a former assistant secretary of the Army (financial management) and the former chief financial officer and director of the Dayton Hudson Corp., Minneapolis, Minn. He is currently director of finance for the nature conservancy, Arlington, Va.
- Retired Army Gen. Henry A. Miley Jr. (Lusby, Md.), president of the American Defense Preparedness Association, Arlington, Va., and a former commander of the Army's Materiel Development and Readiness Command.
- Paul J. Miller Jr. (Devon, Pa.), a former vice president-controller for Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. He currently is a private consultant on management and financial controls.
- John D. Nichols (Winnetka, Ill.), president and chief operating officer of Illinois Toll works, Inc., Chicago. (ARNews)

Safety tips

Motorcycle accidents continue

Fort Benning began FY 81 with the death of a 20 year old motorcyclist and ended tragically with the death of another 20 year old motorcyclist.

Ironically, FY 82 began with the death of a 22 year old motorcyclist. Question, does this mean history is repeating itself?

It might, if motorcyclists continue:

- Driving at excessively high speeds.
- Weaving in and out of the traffic streams.
- Entering the traffic at places other than intersections.
- Riding side by side in one lane.
- Not performing proper maintenance.
- Following too close.
- Overdriving headlight.
- Riding in sandals, tennis shoes or barefoot.
- Operating without headlight on at all times.
- Not wearing bright colored clothing with reflective tape on clothing and helmet.
- Not wearing transparent face shield or goggles.
- Not using hand signals whatever possible.
- Misjudging capabilities of the motorcycle.

The rider who has had expert training has a much greater chance of survival. Let Post Safety show you the way.

Jogging safety observed

Recently, units and individual runners have been observed running on heavily trafficked roadways at all hours without proper clothing and equipment.

The roads on and around the Fort Benning area are extremely dangerous, especially during hours of limited visibility and darkness.

The following precautions must be taken during these periods:

- Units shall carry enough flashlights to illuminate all corners of the formation.
- Road guards shall wear reflective vest, carry a flashlight and maintain approximately 50 meters to the front and rear to slow or stop oncoming or passing vehicles.
- Individual runners are encouraged to make maximum use of areas designated for physical training: Bright colors should be worn during all periods of limited visibility, and runners should be facing traffic at all times.

VA Q & A

Q — I keep hearing about a special National Service Life Insurance divided payable to veterans whether or not they kept their insurance in force. Am I entitled to this dividend?

A — No. The story is a hoax that keeps appearing periodically. There are no dividends available on policies that have lapsed.

Q — If a military retiree is rated 100 percent disabled by his branch of service but has never applied for a service connected disability rating from the Veterans Administration, will his surviving spouse receive VA Dependency and Indemnity Compensation benefits upon his death?

A — Application for DIC must be made. The surviving spouse is not.

Q — I was previously granted a Veterans Administration education loan. Can I apply for another loan, since I am still in pursuit of a standard college degree?

A — Yes. You may apply for another VA education loan based on your current enrollment, provided you have not defaulted on a prior loan that remains outstanding and you do not have an education overpayment.

Q — My father was killed on active duty. I am 19 years old and would like to know if I am eligible for educational benefits from the Veterans Administration?

A — You are probably eligible for benefits for survivors and dependents of veterans. Contact the nearest VA office for assistance.

Q — What is the work-study program for veterans?

A — The work-study program is an arrangement for veteran students drawing Veterans Administration educational benefits and attending school on a full-time basis, whereby they can work in VA facilities to supplement those benefits.

Q — I am buying a house with a Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan and have been told the closing costs will be relatively high. Can I include them in the amount of the loan?

A — No. All closing must be paid by the veteran from his own resources without borrowing.

Q — Does the insurance of a Veterans Administration Certificate of Eligibility guarantee approval of a GI home loan?

A — No. In addition to being declared eligible for a GI home loan based on his period of service, the veteran must apply for a loan from a bank or other lender and meet the qualifications of that lender.

Marshal's Viewpoint

Halloween-haunting but safe fun

Once again Halloween is upon us all. This night of monsters, ghosts and goblins has been a tradition in the United States since Colonial times.

Young children receive an opportunity to enjoy themselves by "trick or treating" throughout their neighborhoods. They usually receive a handsome prize of assorted candies for their labors.

Adults of all ages enjoy themselves by handing out candies to the youngsters and by reflecting on the joyous times experienced on this occasion when they were younger.

In order to maintain Halloween as a joyous and happy occasion for all, certain restrictions have been established for activities at Fort Benning. The hours of Halloween "trick or treating" will be from 6-9 p.m. Only preteenage children (12 years old and younger) are expected to participate, and must be accompanied and supervised by their parents.

Parents are reminded to instruct children to:

- Stay out of the street; cross street at designated crossing areas; and use the sidewalks.
- Not to eat any candy until parents have inspected it.
- Know their home telephone number and address should they get lost.
- Not to accept any perishable items (fruit, unwrapped candy, etc.).

Crime does not pay home. Keep American traditions like the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving alive in your home. Don't forget to keep in touch with friends and relatives living in the states.

If your children still have problems adjusting to the move, consult your Family Life Center, chaplain, doctor or Army Community Services (ACS) for professional help. Kids are adaptable and most of them do learn to cope with the fears they first felt about moving overseas.

Parents make the biggest difference between a "good" overseas move and a "bad" one. Most children return to the U.S. with a whole new perception of another part of the world. Remember, your attitude about your way of life overseas is reflected by your children.

Live missile firing rare

Soldiers from the 1st Battalion 58th Infantry (Mech) combined with soldiers from Alpha Troop 15th Cavalry in a live fire exercise here at Brann Range recently.

The TOW and the Dragon, two wire-guided missile weapons, were used for the live fire exercises. The TOW, has an effective range of 3,000 while the Dragon has an effective range of 1,000 meters.

Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. H.T. Fincher said "It's a rare opportunity to fire live missiles. The soldiers normally only get to fire trainers." A trainer uses a laser to determine if the soldier hit the target or not. For many of the soldiers, it was their first time firing a live missile.

Pvt. 2 Hilton Jones of Combat Support Company, 1/58th said "It was the first live missile I have ever fired. It took a lot of concentration and it built my confidence up."

Sp4 John Mellen of 15th Cavalry said, after he blasted a target 2,900 meters away, "The TOW is an excellent weapon, it was kind of scary at first." PFC Richard Jernigan also from the 15th Cavalry gave his approval of the TOW. "I lost it for a second but with 16 seconds to impact, I got it back on track." Jernigan hit his target at 3,000 meters.

Pvt. 2 Steve Schwietzers also with the 15th Cavalry fired the Dragon from a tripod, instead of the normal practice of firing it from a bi-pod. "I thought it was dynamite," said Schwietzers. "It was real stable."

The two weapons systems proved to be very effective during the live fire exercise. Both weapons

Dragon live firing help soldiers apply tracking procedures.

"This training gave us a great opportunity to actually apply the tracking procedures we learned at Fort Irwin," said Fincher.

The live fire produced eight hits with the Dragon, three hits for the TOW with no misses by the firers of either weapon. The following soldiers also had hits with the TOW and the Dragon. On the Dragon, Pvt. 2 Robert Weaver, Co. C 1/58th; Spec.4 Terry Rhodes, Co. C 1/58th; Spec.4 Bruce Sistrunk, CSC 1/58th; Pvt. 1 Eleuterio Colonvargas Jr., Co. A 1/58th; Spec.4 Morris Pearson, Co. aa 1/58th; 1Lt. Raymond Childress, CSC 1/58th; and PFC Vancliffe Hammond, Co. B 1/58th.

Hunter's news

All deer stands constructed on the Fort Benning reservation must be numbered and registered with the provost marshal office.

Cards on file for previously registered stands need only be updated with new post permit number. Stands must be marked with individuals' name, telephone number, post permit number and year.

Duck hunting on Alabama side of the reservation? Alabama requires a state duck stamp in addition to the Federal stamp. Alabama duck stamps may be obtained at Probate Judges' office in Alabama (Court House).

Deer hunters are required to obtain, and have in their possession while hunting, Fort Benning Deer Permit (FB(ENG) (FORM 48).

Permits may be obtained at no cost from the permit issuing agency located in Crain Hall (Building 229) by presenting a valid Fort Benning Hunting Permit (FB Form 602-1 or FM Form 603-3)."

How to get credit straight booklet out

Your credit rating is your reputation. What's on file about you can be looked at not only by lending institutions and merchants, but also by insurance companies and prospective employers. And it may not be limited just to areas like how promptly you pay your bills. It can include the opinions of your friends and neighbors on your character, general reputation, and manner of living.

What if the information is in error? And what if it hurts your chance to get a loan or a job?

A booklet by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation tells how to set matters straight. The booklet's title is the same as the law it explains — the Fair Credit Reporting Act. For a free copy, write the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 608J, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

How do you know if unfavorable information is in your file? Under the law, anyone who denies you credit or employment or raises your insurance rates on the basis of an unfavorable credit report is required to tell you that this was the reason for the decision, and to provide you with the name and address of the credit agency that prepared the report.

You should contact the reporting agency as soon as possible and tell them you want to review your file. Provided you make this request within 30 days of finding out about your problem, the reporting company can't charge you for the service.

If you find inaccurate or incomplete information in your file, point it out to the credit agency. Unless your objections are obviously frivolous or irrelevant, they're required to reinvestigate. And if this second check fails to verify the information, they're legally bound to remove it from your file. Not only that, but they must notify people who have received erroneous reports that this correction has been made.

And even if the reinvestigation doesn't result in the removal or correction of the objectionable information, you have the right to include your own version of the dispute, where it will be part of all future reports.

In dealing with the credit reporting agency, it's also important to know what rights you don't have under the law. You can't, for instance, demand for free the kind of report on yourself that a business gets when it pays for the reporting company's services. Nor are you legally entitled to a copy of your file, although some credit agencies will give you one voluntarily. And regardless of what you resolve with the credit reporting agency, the law does not compel anyone to do business with you.

Omaha Beach hero never looked the part by Ralph Peters

He doesn't look like a hero. In his official photograph, 2nd Lt. Jimmie W. Monteith Jr. does not look dashing or glamorously handsome. He's smiling. His face is chubby and his hair is unevenly combed. He looks more like the hero's sidekick - the nice guy who always get a laugh but never the girl.

Still, Monteith was a hero. Not in the movies, but in reality. In the desperate confusion of Omaha Beach, on June 6, 1944, he carried out a series of courageous actions that earned him the third Congressional Medal of Honor awarded to an Infantry Officer Candidate School graduate.

Monteith was born on the first of July, 1917, in Law Moor, Va. At the outset of World War II, he answered his nation's call to arms and, in the spring of 1942, attended OCS class number 23, a 17-week course held at Harmony Church, Fort Benning. He left no special mark. Sparse records indicate that he was an average candidate, one of 67,000 officers graduated by infantry OCS during World War II. Eventually, he was assigned to the 16th Regiment, 1st Division. His unit was one of many preparing for the greatly Allied invasion of France.

Early in the morning of June 6, 1944, Monteith found himself aboard a landing craft full of infantrymen, slapping through rough water toward a gray, Normandy Beach. When the German guns opened up on that first assault wave, landing craft were torn out of the water while others capsized, drowning hundreds of equipment-laden soldiers. Monteith made it ashore. But "Bloody Omaha" beach, just below the village of Colleville-Sur-Mer, began to look like a potential disaster for the American forces.

German artillery fire and fortified machine gun positions in the cliffs above the beach pinned down those soldiers lucky enough to make it up out of the surf. Landing craft pilots had become disoriented, and troops were off-loaded up to two miles from their planned landing sites. Monteith's company was fragmented. The entire beach was in confusion and huddled troops were being slaughtered in German crossfires.

Ignoring the enemy, Monteith moved up and down the beach, rallying his men. In the best "Follow Me" tradition, he led his soldiers up the beach, across a protective wall and over a stretch of flat "kill zone" terrain to the foot of a cliff. Leaving his men to regroup under cover, Monteith ran back toward the waterline to where two American tanks had just come ashore. The tanks were drawing intense fire, but Monteith led them - on foot - through a minefield to safe firing positions. Under his direction, several enemy positions were destroyed by the tank fire.

Monteith rejoined his company and led them off the beach onto the heights.

The Germans, seeing defeat, renewed their efforts to push the Americans back into the sea. Undeterred, Monteith's men captured a key high-ground position. The Germans counterattacked. Monteith's men were spread over about 300 yards of open terrain, ranks thinned from the morning's furious fighting. But the Germans could not drive them back. Meanwhile, follow-up assault waves were landing, and it began to look as though the Allied invasion of northern Europe just might get the toe-hold it needed.

Monteith crossed back and forth between the exposed positions where his men had hastily dug in, struggling to improve his defenses with the few assets available to him. Finally, the Germans mustered an overwhelming force and surrounded Monteith's position. Never losing the "Follow Me" spirit, Monteith led his men in a fierce break-out attack in an attempt to link up with the American troops pouring ashore on the beach his valor had done so much to secure.

In his final assault, Monteith was killed by enemy fire.

"Jimmie W. Monteith Jr., first lieutenant, Infantry, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. . . ." The citation speaks further of courage and bold leadership. Monteith WAS a hero, in the noblest traditions of the U.S. Army. He just didn't look like one.

"TRULY, TRULY, I SAY TO YOU, UNLESS ONE IS BORN AGAIN, HE CANNOT SEE THE KINGDOM OF GOD."

Army reserve asks for $1.6 billion

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Army Reserve (USAR) is asking for $1.6 billion for fiscal year (FY) 1982 to man, equip and train the more than 400,000 men and women of the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) and USAR Troop Program units.

Chief of the Army Reserve, Maj. Gen. William R. Berkman, testified before a subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee March 11. He explained that the FY 82 request should improve the ability of the Army Reserve to mobilize as part of the Total Army.

According to Berkman, more USAR units have been given a high priority because of the combat and logistic support needed upon mobilization and deployment. Berkman pointed out that there is a need for added funding to make sure these units are properly equipped to perform their wartime mission.

Spouse benefits

ATLANTA — Surviving spouses of certain disabled veterans should check into their possible eligibility for receiving valuable education benefits from the Veterans Administration.

That advice came from Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler who said that widows, or widowers of veterans who died from service-connected causes, or who are totally and permanently disabled due to military service, are eligible to receive up to 45 months of schooling.

Wheeler said that an eligible spouse must use these benefits within 10 years of the date that the veteran was "found to have a total and permanent disability, or within 10 years of the veteran's service-connected death."

Eligible spouses planning to take apprenticeship or on-the-job training have the 10-year period, or until Oct. 24, 1982, whichever date is later.

More information may be obtained at any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Medical Personnel

Doctors Hospital is a 252-bed facility offering acute medical/surgical care. Benefits include, but are not limited to:

- * A week's paid vacation each six months of employment.
- * A generous tuition reimbursement plan.
- * Transfer ability to other H.C.A. hospitals (there are 190 plus of them in the U.S.) This would be of particular interest to military spouses.

We are Currently Accepting Applications For:

1. Operating Room Techs
2. X-Ray Techs
3. RN's

Figures presented to the Congress show that $44 million worth of equipment was issued to the USAR in FY 80 giving the Army Reserve 37 percent of its wartime equipment requirements, as expressed in dollar values.

Vital Army Reserve structure and force modernization changes will cost the Army $7.0 million in FY 82. Five-year plans call for the activation of about 270 units, including engineer, medical, quartermaster, transportation and intelligence elements.

To man the force, funding is asked for an end strength of 227,283 reservists. This is a large increase from FY 76, when USAR strength stood at 185,800.

Reenlistment and enlistment bonuses have been requested to help meet the manpower needs. Legislation has been drafted for congressional approval of an enlistment bonus for prior-service personnel beginning in FY 82. The bonus program, covering enlistments in selected skills and certain units, would require a 6-year enlistment.

Full-time manning (FTM) will increase under the proposed budget. Under this program, both full-time reservists and active duty military personnel are assigned to key positions in Army Reserve units. Experience has shown that such support is one of the quickest ways to increase unit readiness.

Overseas deployment training should increase in FY 82 to more than 100 units, up from 55 in FY 80. Under this training, reserve units actually deploy and perform their expected wartime missions within the command structure. According to Berkman, the program should be expanded so that one-third of all USAR high-priority units take part in deployment training every year.

The Reserve also plans to expand USAR unit participation in major joint training and readiness exercises.

In addition, long-range plans call for expanding and updating Reserve centers and maintenance facilities. (ARNews)

Pvt. 2 David L. King worked as fast as he would allow. He was desperately trying to save the life of a soldier who had had his arm blown off. Other wounded soldiers lay about the area in pain.

While King and other medics administered first aid to the wounded soldiers they were also being evaluated.

The situation was as realistic as possible, but it was only training. The Army called it Army Readiness training and Evaluation Program (ARTEP). The units' everyday operation depended on how they operated in a simulated combat environment.

However, some tests are common to all units, such as how to handle prisoners, and what to do during a Nuclear or Biological attack.

Last week soldiers of the 34th Medical Battalion participated in an ARTEP exercise. Despite the chilly weather Sp4 Michael Walker, 23, of Detroit said, he was happy to be in the field. "We need to go to the field more often, because there is a lot that can be learned out here. Staying in garrison all the time a person can forget a lot," continued Walker.

PFC Donna Moerch, 19, from Warren, Ohio said, "I'm assigned to MEDDAC, this is my first time in the field. We work in the hospital normally, but we're out here to get the feel of field training to see what our job would be like in a combat zone."

The 34th medical Battalion was basically tested on treating wounded soldiers in a combat environment. Attached units like the 690th Medical Company, a mobile ambulance company, conducted a mass casualty evacuation exercise under heavy enemy fire. At the same time they were required to process prisoners captured during the simulated fighting.

Soldiers from the 2nd Squadron 69th Armor Battalion 197th Infantry Brigade acted as prisoners and casualties.

The 2nd Combat Support Hospital was kept busy during the night with ground attacks by soldiers from the 187th Pathfinder Detachment which provided most of the aggressor support during the ARTEP.

...ce from 498th Medical Company lifts off with wounded soldiers.

Some soldiers of the 34th Medical Battalion perform jobs other than medic. The unit includes cooks, mechanics, and radio telephone operators.

These soldiers were also called upon to show their skills. Some were picked to be casualties, while others were required to perform first aid on them.

Sp4 Sheraly Barksdale, 21, from New Castle, Delaware, a radio telephone operator said, "I had to act as if I had received a nerve agent."

"I was glad to see that my supervisors knew what to do. It made me feel happy to know that they knew something about NBC, because if something like that really happen to me I know that I can rely on them."

Medical support units on the modern battlefield must effectively support combat forces. They must anticipate and prepare to operate under any condition, and it is critical that the support be available when personnel, equipment, and supplies are limited.

PFC Federick Simpson, 690th Medical Company, defends his units perimeter.

New magazine emphasizes training

WASHINGTON — A trained soldier is a prepared soldier. No less does this maxim apply in today's age of specialization than it did in the days of America's Revolutionary War soldier.

While the trainees and the trainers have changed over the centuries, the purpose remains the same: "preparation for proficient team performance in war." And of course the methods and devices used for modern training far surpass, in complexity and effectiveness, anything imaginable by the nation's founding fathers.

With that perspective, the people of the major Army command charged with assuring that today's American soldier is the world's best-trained of all time have begun a new medium for their message.

It's a quarterly magazine titled "Army Trainer." The first issue, Fall 1981, is highly illustrated with those people/places/actions that figure prominently in the training scene monitored by the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command. The magazine's purpose is "to provide timely, factual information on training plans, policies, developments, and other relevant data of interest to active Army, National Guard, Reserve Component and DA civilian personnel responsible for training." As with similar command-information media, the "Army Trainer" invites contributions of publishable material from its audience.

Distributed automatically to the various "TEC account" holders, the new magazine also is available at most Army installation libraries. Its mailing address is "Army Trainer," P.O. Drawer A, Fort Eustis, Va. 23604. Readers may phone in questions or comments to AUTOVON 927-5475 or Commercial No. (804) 878-5475. (ARNews)

Taking care of troops vital

WASHINGTON — "Young people today think differently than they did 20 years ago, but they are looking to the senior leadership for guidance," John W. Shannon, deputy under secretary of the Army.

Shannon began his duties at the Pentagon this summer as the principal civilian aid and advisor to the Army's secretary and under secretary. Shannon directs the Army in formulating overall policy, procedures and programs.

An Army veteran of more than 23 years, Shannon served military service as a regular Army infantry sergeant and lieutenant. His active duty service included tours in Vietnam as an advisor and an infantry platoon commander before retiring from active duty in 1978.

"Taking care of the troops" is how Shannon views his new role. He is quick to define "troops" as including not only soldiers, but their family members as well.

"The quality of life of the troops is vital to the betterment of the Army," he said. "When the troops are happy and harmonious with the leadership and their personal affairs, they tell the story of a good Army. In essence, they are the Army's best public relations people."

Shannon sees modernization as the greatest challenge facing today's Army.

"We need to modernize our equipment, barracks and tactics," he said, "but we also need to modernize our thinking about the ability of soldiers to perform on the battlefield. Troops have a desire to win, as long as they know somebody cares about them."

Shannon's previous experience in the area of military manpower policy and congressional affairs activities included working as a congressional liaison officer in the office of the secretary of the Army; deputy director for manpower and reserve affairs, office of the assistant secretary of defense for legislative affairs; and special assistant for manpower, reserve affairs and logistics to the assistant secretary of defense for legislative affairs.

His military awards include the Combat Infantry Badge, Parachutist Wings and the Ranger Tab. He is also the recipient of the Legion of Merit, Defense Superior Service Medal, Defense Meritorious Civilian Service Medal, Bronze Star, and a number of other military medals. (ARNews)

Benning soldiers visit Washington D.C.

Story and photos by Debbie Harrison
 USAIC Public Affairs Office

Thirty-nine soldiers from here were selected by their units to tour Washington, D.C. and attend the opening of the 27th annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army, Oct. 16-20.

The soldiers rode a chartered bus from here to Fort Myer, Va. where they stayed during the trip.

Tour guide, Gloria Sullivan, showed the soldiers various sites of the city and explained the background. On the first day we went to the Washington Monument and went inside and took an elevator up to the 550 foot level of the building. There were observation windows for viewing different parts of the city.

Washington monument

"We stopped at the monument and looked down at the beauty of the mall. The flags blew in the breeze giving a perfect setting of tranquility and the feeling of pleasure in being an American," said Sp4 Stanley Williams, a field medic with 546th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion.

Construction on the monument was started in 1848. All work on the monument was stopped for 24 years due to lack of money caused by the Civil War.

Jefferson memorial

We then visited Jefferson Memorial. The memorial overlooks Washington Tidal Basin. In the back of the statue are three distinct symbols; a sheath of tobacco, ears of corn and three books. The symbols represent that everyone has the right to prosper in a free land. Afterwards, we went directly to the Lincoln Memorial. Two years after Lincoln's death in 1867, Congress organized the Lincoln Memorial Association to plan a monument to his memory. Work finally started on Feb. 12, 1914. Henry Bacon was the architect, and Daniel Chester sculptured the marble statue of Lincoln. Carved on the marble walls are Lincoln's Gettysburg and Second Inaugural Addresses.

"I like the monuments and their dedication to the persons named. They represent justice and equality for all, which is the theme of the city," said SSgt. Jeff Clester, training NCO, 298th Signal, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Arlington cemetery

Besides Arlington National Cemetery being a burial place for American servicemembers, it also has many significant places to visit. One of the places is the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. It is located in the plaza of the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater. This hallowed place of remembrance is guarded 24-hours-a-day by specially chosen members of the 1st Battalion (Reinforced), 3rd Infantry (The Old Guard) from Fort Myer, Va. Other places we saw were President John F. Kennedy's grave and Eternal Flame, heavyweight boxer Joe Louis' grave and the Mansion of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Mount Vernon

We then visited Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington.

On Sunday, we visited the bronze statue of the Marines raising the American flag on Iwo Jima. The statue, known as the Marine Corps Memorial, was dedicated to the Marine Corps' involvement in World War II.

The Capitol

We went to see the U.S. Capitol building. In the Rotunda, in the museum part of the building, there are 98 statues that were donated by different states in the United States. King Kamea Nena was the first statue sent by Hawaii. Afterwards, we went upstairs and went inside the House of Representatives auditorium.

"I liked the detailed Pewter artwork at the doorway entrance of the Capitol building that tells the history of Columbus," said Pvt. 2 Debbie Lowery, post reenlistment processing clerk from Company A, Headquarters Command.

"I am an artist and was impressed with Burmudi's Frescoed Canopy on the inside of the dome in the U.S. Capitol building," said SFC Mark S. Cabellero, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

Most of the morning and afternoon was devoted to visiting the Smithsonian Institute. Everyone got a chance to see what they wanted to see at the institute and have lunch.

"I liked the tour the best when we had the chance to be on our own Sunday to go to the Smithsonian Institute. The National Air and Space and American History Museums were my favorites. I enjoyed the Armed Forces history exhibit where it explained about all four services," said PFC Michael Dobbins, a cook from 2nd Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

"I liked the tour guide because she explained the background about the things we saw on the tour. It made it more enjoyable. I liked the Smithsonian building called the National Archives in the mall, that told the history and showed the layout and design of the city," said Lowery.

We ended our tour by seeing the Washington Cathedral. Construction on the cathedral began in 1907. The first chapel built on the lower floor of the cathedral is called the Bethlem. The other two cathedrals are called the Resurrection and the Cave. Construction is still continuing on the cathedral and should be finished some time in the '80s.

Monday we attended the opening session of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) national meeting at the Washington-Sheraton Hotel. Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Robert F. Cocklin, Executive Vice President of AUSA, opened the meeting.

The national colors were presented by the 3rd Infantry Regiment (The Old Guard) and the U.S. Army Band (Pershing's Own). Sgt. Eugene Johnson, announcer for the Old Guard, narrated the two groups performing the history of the U.S. Army, from its beginning to Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. Cocklin presented Fort Benning an award for being runner-up for the largest membership. Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year, Sp4 Ron Eller, accepted an award for the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter's outstanding service to soldiers.

Tour guide, Gloria Sullivan, explains to the soldiers about the night President Abraham Lincoln was assassinated in Fords Theater. The balcony with the U.S. Flags is where Lincoln sat.

Awards luncheon

One-hundred-and-thirty-six awards including quality step increases, cash awards for sustained superior performances, and years of service pins were awarded to civilian employees of Fort Benning by Maj. Gen. Sam Wetzel at the monthly awards luncheon yesterday.

At press time the name of the civilian employee of the month had not yet been released.

Leopard Fitness Event

The chance to test your fitness level, benefit the metro United Way campaign and have a good time while you're doing it, will be the order of the day at the Leopard Fitness Event to be held tomorrow at Weracoba Park.

The event, held in cooperation with Columbus College and the city's Department of Recreation, is a timed competition on the Par Course, Columbus' newest recreational facility.

The Par Course is a one-mile jogging loop which has 15 different exercise stations spaced along the route. "The course contains stations for sit-ups, chin-ups, jumping jacks and several other exercises that most people would be familiar with," said Dr. Michael Taylor, head of the college's department of physical education and recreation and a coordinator for the event.

The event features competition in three different categories which are based on times to beat, with men's and women's divisions in each group.

The pre-registration fee is $5 and on-site registration is $6.50 with all proceeds going to the United Way. The entry fee includes a T-shirt and a party for the competitors from 3 p.m. until 7 p.m. at the Speakeasy Pub. The registration point will be set up on 17th Street in Weracoba Park. Entry forms are available at the city's Department of Recreation and other various sites in Columbus. For further information contact the city's Department of Recreation at 323-7334.

Tigers slip by Doughboys

By Tony Adams
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Doughboys football team fell short against the Auburn University Junior Varsity Tigers 29-21 at Jordan-Hare Stadium Sunday.

The game pitted the Doughboys passing attack against the Tigers rushing with Benning's seven turnovers being the difference in the game.

Doughboy quarterback Leamon Hall passing to split end Elyon Zeigler was a popular combination as Zeigler caught seven passes for 173 yards. However, Auburn countered with a 126 yard performance by Ed Graham combined with a 118 yard outing by Casey Neel. The Doughboys Elijah Brown also had a good day rushing, garnering 102 yards.

The Tigers drew first blood when Doughboy punter Leroy Manuel decided to run for the first down instead of risking a blocked punt. However, he was stopped short at the Doughboys 26-yard line where the Tigers marched to the four-yard line before Graham went in for the touchdown. The score stood at 7-0 at the end of the quarter.

In the second quarter Auburn scored again due to another Doughboy error when a punt return by George Fields was fumbled and the Tigers recovered at the Doughboy 16-yard line. Auburn moved the ball to the one before Casey Neel scored on a one-yard run stretching the score to 14-0.

The Doughboys managed to get on the board when Hall hit Zeigler for a 71-yard touchdown strike just before the half. Renee Garcia booted the extra point to make the score 15-7 at the intermission.

In the third quarter, Fort Benning pulled to within two points at 15-13 when Hall hit Zeigler for another spectacular 49-yard touchdown play. Auburn then countered with an 80-yard scoring drive that resulted in Graham scampering 22-yards for the TD.

Not to be outdone, Hall then marched the Doughboys 85-yards before Elijah Brown went over the line from three-yards out. Hall ran for the two point conversion to cut the lead to 22-21.

Auburn finished up the scoring when Graham rushed for his third touchdown on a four-yard sweep to make the final score 29-21.

The Doughboy's next game will be against the Alabama State University Junior Varsity team Sunday at 2 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium. Fort Benning's record now stands at 2-5.

Rain does not slow YA soccer

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Youth Activities Soccer League continues to attract spectators, even though the weather does not always cooperate. Players and fans both suffered through the rain and chill Saturday morning.

In the Junior Division, the Titans' Blue Shirts broke open the fourth quarter and defeated the Titans' White Shirts 7-4. Blue Shirts' goals were made by Tom Langhorne, Denise Kiernan and Frank Latorre; all had two scores each. Todd Valentine also put a ball into the net.

Titan White Shirts players Missy Arellano and Raymond King scored two goals each.

The two undefeated Hustlers teams played each other in an outstanding defensive game. According to their coach, all players performed to their utmost. Goalies Jim Walker, John Rose, Greg McCann and Barry Allman excelled.

Goals were made by Darin Myrick, Jim Walker, Jim Humphrey and Chris Bradford for the Hustlers I team. Jim Walker led his team with two scores.

Pat Riccinto made two goals and Jeffery Christianson made one goal for the Hustlers II team.

Action in the Termite Division saw the Goldiggers stung by the Stings 4-1. Timmy Melvin made three scores and Jason Entlich one for the win. On defense for the Stings, Matt Burk, Dustin Duvall and Donny Baker did well.

Mike Wall made the Goldiggers' sole goal, with Peter Dargle playing defense outstandingly. The Goldiggers were hampered because they only fielded ten players instead of eleven.

Infantry run coming soon

By Bob Kuwik
Running news correspondent

The first National Infantry Museum 5-Mile Run, sponsored by the Dixie Beer Company and conducted by the Columbus Track Club, is scheduled for Nov. 7 at 9 a.m.

The starting point and finish will be at the museum on Baltzell Avenue on post.

All proceeds will go to the support of the museum which is one of the finest facilities of its kind presently in existence and is a source of pride not only for the military community but for the tri-cities area as well.

The course will consist of all paved roads, single loop, flat and fast. Splits will be called at each mile with fluids being available at the 2½-mile point as well as at the finish line where refreshments will also be served and each participant will receive a T-shirt.

Age groups: Men — 14 and under, 15-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50-54, 55 and over. Women — 14 and under, 15-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50 and over.

Teams, consisting of up to seven runners, may also enter. The first five finishers will make up the team score. Members of the teams will not be eligible for individual awards.

Individual awards will be presented to the overall male and female, three deep in age groups. Team awards will consist of the Rotating Fort Benning Award (this award will stay with the winning Fort

Brigade football presents fun

By Don Gersh
197th Public Affairs Office

Gimme a "B," gimme an "O," gimme an "F," gimme an "L." What do you have? BOFL!

No, it's not a new word game. BOFL, Brigade Officers' Football League, is the 197th Infantry Brigade's version of Monday Night Football.

Actually, BOFL is played on Kelley Hill every Thursday morning at 6:30 (that's "00" dark thirty). The flag football league is almost midway through its first season.

Commissioner (also Brigade Commander) Carmen J. Cavezza came up with the idea in late August. He tasked Maj. Chuck "Pop Warner" Skeehan, Brigade Adjutant General, with organizing the league. The league, eight teams strong, is made up of warrant and commissioned officers from the various units on Kelley Hill.

"The idea was to improve the individual's physical fitness," said Skeehan. "We also wanted to contribute to the units' morale and their esprit de corps."

Maj. Craig Parker, Brigade Operations Officer, agrees that the morale of the units has increased. "BOFL also allows all of the officers to interface on the athletic field. It's interesting, and it's a lot of fun," said Parker.

Capt. Tom Krupenevich, defensive end for HHC Brigade's team, compares BOFL with the Fort Benning Flyers Rugby Club of which he is a member. "BOFL is not as physically tiring, but it is just as intense. We have fun."

BOFL is not without injuries. So far, there have been broken fingers, bruised muscles, torn ligaments as well as the normal bumps and bruises associated with a contact sport.

"Injuries are due primarily to overenthusiastic play," said HHC Brigade coach Capt. Jim Newton. "It's been a tremendous season. There is a lot of camaraderie among the officers." Newton said it was fantastic to get together to have fun playing BOFL.

"The brigade commander, deputy commander and executive officer are all out there and play very well," said Maj. Alex "Major Chaos" Green. "I would like to see all of the battalion commanders and XO's on the field too." Asked how he feels about the early morning gridiron battles, Green said, "My bones don't work well at 6:30 in the morning."

Even though Dandy Don, Howard and Frank may never broadcast live from Presidential Field, the dedication to the sport of football by the officers of the Forever Forward Brigade is as strong and as intense as in any professional game.

It was close. But close only counts in horseshoes or hand grenades. That was about the size of things for the Doughboys last Sunday against the Auburn J.V. team in their 29-21 defeat.

It's hard to really blame the Doughboys performance because they have been putting forth all they've got. It's just a case of the breaks going against them, not to mention the tough competition they've had to face. Let's face it, Alabama J.V., Florida J.V. and the Auburn J.V. are pretty stiff competitors, even if they are the junior varsity teams.

At the beginning of the season, the offense was a suspect weakness of the Doughboys. However, with quarterback Leamon Hall's big-play passing and Elyon Zeigler's receiving combined with some solid rushing by Elijah Brown and Anthony Hayes, the team has fared fairly well while in possession of the pigskin.

The defense (and nothing can be taken away from them) has had injury problems hampering them nearly the entire season. But looking at some of the opposing linemen they've had to face one can only wonder why the defense is still intact. After all, the Doughboys being the soldiers they are, have to maintain a certain weight level, while state colleges and universities encourage their boys to put every solid pound on that they can.

But putting all problems aside, the Doughboys really haven't played atrocious or anything near it. As a matter of fact, they've given all the teams they have played a rough time of it or at least let them know they have been in a game. Against Auburn, the Doughboys were in the game until the final gun went off, trailing only by one at the end of the third quarter.

The Doughboys persistence to stay in game is indicative of the program and support the team receives. After the Fort Campbell game, in which Benning trounced the Eagles 35-0, I read in the Campbell post newspaper and learned their thoughts on our program. They were looking at our program as an ideal achievement. According to the writer, Campbell hoped oneday to have as good a program as the Doughboys. This complement the team well deserves after playing in the rain, fog, humidity and heat.

However, there is still work to be done and Head Coach Ralph Santaliz will agree. The team is still lacking in experience due to the PCS turnover rate. But that can't be blamed on the coaches or the players. It's just part of the Army.

Gang tackling

During YA football action last weekend the Senior Division team Wolverines were outscored by the Red Knights of Carabelle, Fla. 38-0.

In the Grasshopper Division, the Bulldogs and Rockets played to a scoreless conclusion. Playing well for the Bulldogs were Chris Kiernan, Brian Heard, Jason Greze, Tony Denhke and David Rit-tenhouse.

The Chiefs outscored the Black Knights 3-1 in their match. Ryan Dillon made two goals with Stuart Burton scoring the other. Wesley Lockard, Sloan Simpson and Shawn Clayborn were the Chiefs' leading defenders.

The Black Knights' goal was made by Dax Aer-rera. Defenders Ryan Crookston, Chuck Porter, Christiana Diana and Tyson Winter played ex-tremely well.

Eagles picked to handle Cowboys

Rita Marchetti - "As we begin the second half of the season, it looks like showdown time in the Eastern Division. Dallas was outstanding last week in the last four minutes against Miami. They'll come through again this week to beat Philadelphia which will tie these two powerful teams in their division. Besides, if you had cheerleaders that looked like Dallas', wouldn't you perform well.

At Three Rivers Stadium the Pittsburgh Steelers will beat the 49'ers. I'd like to see Houston win over Cincinnati which would give Pittsburgh the lead in the Central Division where they rightly belong.

You all have a haunting happy Halloween!"
Sean Ford - "A tough week for me last week, but I'll save the retirement announcements for Larry and Muhammad Ali. Hopefully NBC will have the good sense to televise the Kansas City-San Diego game. I expect this to be the four-star fun game this week. If the Chiefs can make the turn (7-2) they could be tough to stop. I also expect to see the Bengals (with help from the 49'ers) retake the lead in the AFC Central.

Enjoy this Halloween football weekend. It should be haunting!"

Larry Harrison - "No comment this week."

Don Rhodes - "This looks to be a tough week for picking. There are too many games that can go either way."

Tony Adams - "Wow! Last week had some extra surprising upsets to fill any football forecaster's nightmares. You know everyone had a bad week when I tied for the best predictions of the week in our snug little group of columnists. Oh well, let's trudge on.

This week Pittsburgh and Cincinnati should maintain their tie in their division with close victories over their foes. The Dallas-Philadelphia game should be tough and close, but I think Philadelphia has just a bit too much for Dallas to handle. In Monday night's game, Denver should make it two losses in a row for Kramer and Company, but it'll be tough taking it from them.

And last but not least - the Atlanta vs. New Orleans game. Believe it or not, Maria, I'm picking the Falcons in this one. I love ya!

Happy Halloween everybody! (Heck, I'm ready for turkey day now.)"
