They included T-4 Vernon Boswell, who was promoted to technician third grade, T-5 Bernard E. Newby, to sergeant, and Pfcs. George E. Allen, Carlton Perryman, Roy Smith, Ellis Thigpen and Robert M. Wheeler, to technician fifth grade.

'Spud' Murphy, Retired Pugilist, Assigned Here

Competing in 188 bouts during which time he captured army boxing crowns from the welterweight through the light-heavyweight divisions in seven years in the "squared circle," is the story of the pugilistic career of 1st Sgt. William H. "Spud" Murphy of Ninth company, Student Training regiment.

Donning the gloves at Fort Benning in 1930 as a member of the post boxing team, Sergeant Murphy reached the finals of the southeastern boxing tourney in Atlanta, but finished on the short end of a split decision. It was during the same period that the Fort Benning squad presented a series of exhibition matches at Warm Springs, Ga., for the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was then governor of New York.

Undaunted by his loss in the finals of the southeastern matches, "Spud" Murphy went on to win later the middleweight and light-heavyweight professional titles during tours of duty in Panama and Hawaii. In Panama he defended his title successfully seven times, administering six kayos and one decision. While in Panama he was a roommate of the famed Alabama welterweight, Sgt. Sammy Baker, who in his brilliant career defeated seven world's champions and scored the only kayo ever suffered by Ace Hudkins, one-time world's welterweight champ.

"Spud" retired from boxing in 1937 with an impressive record of victories, closing seven years of fighting in the army to become one of the ablest pugilists the service has seen.

Hailing from Henderson, N. C., he enlisted here in July with the 29th Infantry. On two occasions he served both in Panama and Trinidad following the Pearl Harbor attack. He rerurned to the states, and after a short stay at Camp Shelby, Miss., he went to the southwest Pacific until January, 1946.

Queried concerning the current heavyweight boxing situation, Sergeant Murphy retorted that Joe Louis has been a worthy champion and a real credit to the sport. But in his opinion, the champ should retire, regardless of his outcome with Jersey Joe Wolcott in June. "Joe is getting along in age," he added. "He knows it and so do the boxing fans."

Army To Seek Ideas From ORC On Assignments

The Department of the Army announced today that a mail survey will be made of all reserve officers to obtain an expression of ideas and suggestions for the most effective assignment of each officer in the Organized Reserve Corps.

To obtain as complete coverage as possible, registered letters will be sent to all reserve officers not now on extended active duty, beginning about April 20.

This is the first such poll of opinion undertaken by the army, and is designed to elicit the frank and unbiased opinions of reserve officers relative to their participation in the ORC program.

In addition to a survey form, each reserve officer will receive a letter from General Omar N. Bradley, army chief of staff, emphasizing the need for the requested information.

The army pointed out that the primary interests of reservists lie in assignment, training, and a reserve career program, and that military activities of Reserve Corps members are in most cases superimposed upon their civilian occupations. The forthcoming survey is designed to utilize reservists in the most effective way consistent with their own suggestions and to maintain their military proficiency.

TAKE TOP HONORS—Bringing more honors to Fort Benning, M-Sgt. Freddie Teet, left, and Sgt. Hugh D. 'Bullseye' Champs Receive Trophies

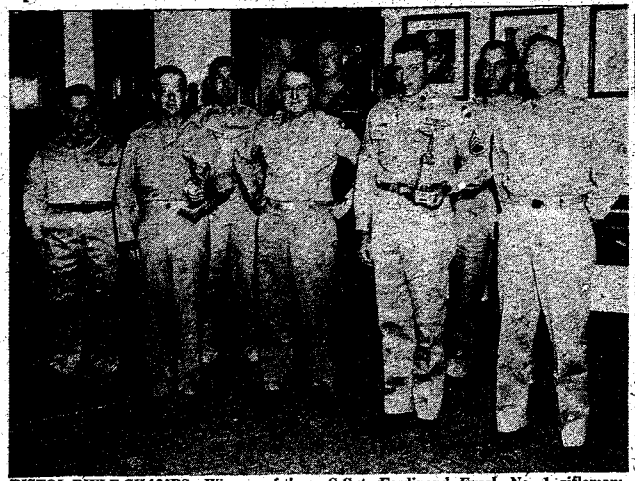
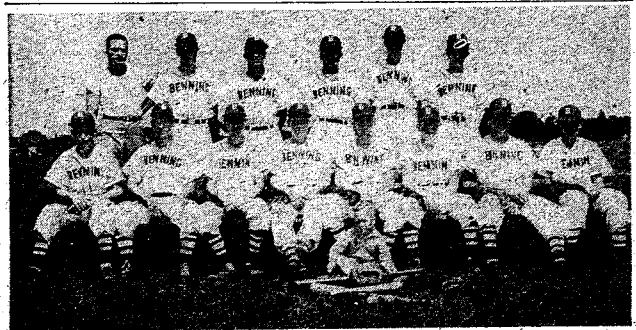
Winners of the Fort Benning pistol and rifle championship matches held last month were awarded trophies and medals by Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, Infantry Center commander, in a brief ceremony last Friday.

Col. Jesse C. Drain, chairman of the heavy weapons committee of the Infantry School, and S-Sgt. Ferdinand Eysel of Company A, 325th Infantry regiment, walked off with top honors as No. 1 pistol and rifle man respectively. Both were presented with trophies and medals.



Colonel Drain finished with a top score of 252 x 300 to cop the pistol crown among a field of 25 competitors, representing various units on the post. Sergeant Eysel had to ward off the stiff competition of 12 participants to win the rifle honors with a final tally of 175 x 200.—

Participants in the meet, supervised by Capt. Frank Palmer, assistant range officer, got their biggest share of competition, however, from the weather. Men at the firing line had to battle a steady downpour, coupled with a 25-mile per-hour wind throughout the shoot.



Finishing behind Colonel Drain in the pistol competition was Sgt. Joseph Gallo of Company A, Infantry School detachment. Gallo fired a 248 x 300 to annex second place honors. Sgt James W. Foster of the Weapons section, Academic department, garnered the No. 3 pistol spot with a 238 x 300 mark.

T-Sgt. Leo Kelly, Company D, 325th Infantry regiment, tallied a 198 x 200 score to capture second place in the rifle championship matches. Finishing third behind Sergeants Eysel and Kelley in the rifle competition, Chief Warant Officer Lloyd P. Jenkins of Headquarters, Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team, posted a 170 x 200 score.

Second and third place winners were along with the champions, awarded medals and officially became members of the Infantry Center pistol and rifle team which will carry the banner of the Infantry Center in future matches.

With a speeded up starting system and steadily narrowing time-trials, prospects for the midget car races at Idle Hour Park Friday night were classed as "faster and hotter" by promoter Alex P. Brewer.

Last week saw one of the fastest midget racing programs ever produced in the southeast when Woody Campbell ran away from a fast field in a sleek new racer "No. 1-B". Campbell did not get his delicate bundle of nickle-plated speed into exact adjustment until late in the evening, but then he gave the crowd a demonstration of power rarely seen on a quarter-mile track in this section.

Jimmy Reed, last year's runner-up and the winner of the 1948 Inaugural feature, turned in a competent performance last week, and was expected to return for another shot at first money this week.

The mighty midgets were scheduled to race again at Lakewood park speedway in Atlanta Thursday night. Brewer said he expected to recruit another fast string of hotrods for the Martin stadium contests at that time.

Two distinguished dirt-track leaders who came to Idle Hour by the same route last week were the winner, Woody Campbell, and a place-money veteran, Buzz Hodson, both of Indianapolis.

Time trials will start at 7:30 p.m., with heat racing to begin at 8:30 p.m.

Truckers Best ASU Team 6-1

Solving the mound wok of Lawrence Hall, burling ace of the 3440th Army Service unit, the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers pounded out a 6 to 1 triumph over the service unit at Gowdy field Friday night.

While Trucker batters were collecting 11 hits, Willie Love and Dean Lucas limited the ASU delegation to five hits.

After picking up a pair of tallies in the first, Charley Hubert, 204th third-sacker, smashed a three-run homer to deep center to give the host tam a 6 to 0 lead at the nd of the thirdstanza. The Truckers picked up another counter in the fourth when Lucky Bryant singled, and was brought in on a sharp bingle by second-baseman Wills.

The lone tally for the ASU squad came in the top of the fifth inning when an error by Lucas permitted a service team runner to cross the plate.

It was a party. The young man had just been introduced to her, and after a brief and awkward silence, he ventured, "You are from the West, I understand."

"Yes, from Indiana," she replied; "Hoosier girl."

He started and flushed deeply. "Why—er—really," he stammered; "I—I don't know—that is, I haven't quite decided yet."

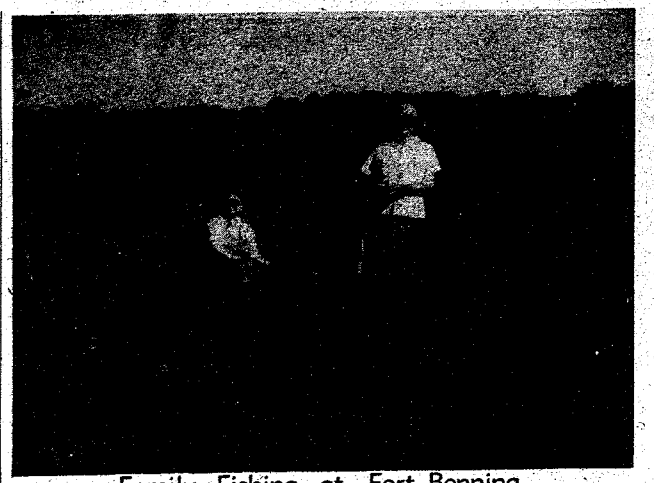
"Stuck in the mud?"

"No, my engine died here and I'm digging a grave to hury it in."

Medics Defeat Lawson Squad

Grabbing a three-run lead in the opening frame, the 3440th Army Service unit Medics handed the Lawson field Flyers a 6 to 3 setback, their sixth straight loss of the season, at Gowdy field Wednesday afternoon.

After giving up the three tallies in the first, Russ Sanders, Flyer hurler, settled down to blank the Medics for the next two innings. However, the home nine came back to score one each in the fourth, fifth and sixth stanzas.



The Flyers staged a rally in the top of the seventh, but the Medics nipped it after two Lawson runners had trotted across the plate. A double by Bobby Wilbanks, pinch-hitting for Pete Hargett, followed by a long three bagger to the scoreboard by Max Seirer, gave the Flyers their first counter. Seirer came home with the second tally of the inning on an infield error.

The game's big disappointment came in the Medics' half of the sixth when Otto Loroesh drove one over the head of Ed Hamel, Lawson center-fielder, and circled the sacks only to be ruled out at second for failure to toe the bag.

Arthur Botjer, going the route for the Medics, was credited with the win, while Sanders took the loss.

School Softball Tourney Slated

Fort Benning's school softball championship will be decided following a double elimination tournament which gets underway next Monday at 3:30 p.m. at the youth activities diamond next to the polo field.

The regular schedule of the four-team school circuit was concluded Monday afternoon with the seventh graders tightening their grasp on the top perth by winning a 17 to 8 tiff from the fifth grade ten. In the day's other contest, the sixth grade squad blasted the fourth graders to the tune of 20 to 7.

At the close of the tourney next week, the softballers will enjoy a month's respite before embarking on their summer schedule. All tilts on the summer agenda will be played on the local diamond.

Guatemalans Call U.S. Magnificent

Veterans of five and six years respectively, Lt. Cuellar and Lt. Grazioso, who began their classes Monday with Company G, Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment, are quite pleased with everything, including the hospitality of their newly acquired friends.

The two officers arrived in America by air on April 20, and expect to depart the first part of June, after becoming qualified parachutists.

"That's our objective", put in Lieutenant Grazioso. "We are determined that nothing shall stop us from finishing the airborne course".

"The Guatemalan Army", explained Lieutenant Cuellar, "recognizes the value of airborne training, and more officers and men will probably follow us to Fort Benning".

Asked if they had yet formed any opinions about the American military in the few days they had been at Fort Benning, both Lieutenant Grazioso and Lieutenant Cuellar observed that they have been greatly impressed by the discipline they had discovered in the American Army and the smart appearance of the American soldier.

Prof Nine Drops Parachutists 7-3

Virtually Clinch League Lead For Opening Half

The Airborne parachutists experienced their second diamond "streamer" of the 1948 season Sunday afternoon when the Infantry School detachment Profs virtually clinched the top spot in the post circuit's first half by dropping the Tropers 7 to 3 at Gowdy field.

Portsider Collis Lehner, performing on the mound for the ISD squad, scattered six Airborne hits where they could do the least damage, while his mates were collecting a like number from a trio of 'chutist hurlers.

Starter Ken Watts, ace Trooper southpaw, who was charged with the defeat in the season's first Airborne-ISD tilt, again took the loss Sunday. He was knocked from the box with none out in the fourth after he had given the Profs five of their tallies.

Troopers Score

The Troopers started the game's scoring by pushing across a counter in the opening half of the first inning. Paul Bonair reached first when Bill Hojnacki, Prof shortstop, lost a hard-hit grounder in his shirt and was forced down to second on a walk to Bob Griffin. Failing to advance as two outs were chalked up Bonair came in to score on pitcher Watts' sharply-spanked single to center.

After being blanked in the home half of the first, the ISD batsmen pounded the Airborne southpaw for four tallies in the second. After two colleagues had gone down, Hojnacki walked to start the scoring spree, during which the Profs collected three bingles, and batted through the complete roster.

Profs Increase Margin

The 'chutists afinexed another tally in the top of the third when a sharp single to right by Ralph Terry brought in Griffin, who had drawn a base on balls to start the inning.

Lehner started a three-run fourth stanza for the Profs by getting a free pass to first, but was forced out at second by Lauve. A moment later, Lauve scored from second on Burnett's second single of the day, the only hit of the inning. Burnett scored on an error by shortstop Bonair of the Troopers, and Joe Smith reached the bags when his grounder got through Bob Kinard at second. Successive walks to Woody Burt and Chick Shiver forced in Smith with the third run.

The final Airborne effort was made in the seventh inning when Griffin drew his third walk of the day with one out. After Jesse Budd had hoisted one to right-field, Kinard slammed a double to left-center to score Griffin. However, the threat ended when Watts rolled out from third to first.

BATTER'S NEMESIS—One of the stellar mound performers of the Infantry School detachment Profs is right-hander Bill Welton, who turned in a no-hitter against the Medics of the 3440th Army Service unit nine last week in his first pitching assignment of the 1948 season. In his next turn on the hill, Welton pitched five innings against the Student regiment, allowing only one safety as the ISD chalked up a top-heavy 30 to 1 triumph.

Truckers Lag; Medical Team Triumphs 10-9

Starting their second round of play in the post circuit, the 3440th Army Service unit Medics avenged their earlier loss to the 204th Transportation battalion team by overcoming a six-run defecit to win 10 to 9 at Gowdy field Sunday afternoon.

The win placed the Medic team in a tie for the league's third place with the Student Training regiment.

The Truckers' tallies all came during the initial three innings, and a six-run margin favored the visiting transportation team as play went into the last half of the fifth. The Trucker squad hit pay dirt twice in the first, four times in the second, and three more times in the third.

The Medics combined two singles, two free passes, and an outfield error for three runs in the last of the second.

With the deadlocked going into the seventh inning, John Graves, Medic pitcher, retired the entire Trucker lineup for the inning on strikes to boost his total for the game to 14.

The Medics' winning tally came with two out in the bottom of the last stanza as Jack Morel raced in from third when Bob Chandler dropped a throw from second base intended to catch Otto Loroesh for the final out.

Weapons Softball Team is Victorious In First Encounter

In their first engagement of the season, the power-laden Weapons section softball team completely overwhelmed the Infantry Center Defense committee ten by the lop-sided score of 11 to 2.

Apparently attempting to equal the record set by the Brooklyn Dodgers for the use of the most players in a single game, the Weapons section sent a total of 16 players to the diamond during the seven-inning tilt.

The winners collected 17 safeties from the offerings of John T. Evans and Henry Daniels, the former being shelled from the box after five innings.

The Defense committee ten was limited to a scant five blows by Weapons twirlers. Howard (Smoky) Balliett, who performed on the mound for three innings without yielding the losers any runs or hits, was the winning pitcher.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Following their triumph over the Airborne 'chutists last Sunday it appears to be clear sailing to a post pennant for the Infantry School detachment Profs. In order to make anything like a close race out of the circuit's first half, the parachutists would have to win all of their remaining games, and the ISD nine would have to experience two upsets.

Pre-season predictions had the Profs considerably weaker in mound talent than the Airborne champs of last year, but the ISD lads certainly have turned the tables on early guessers. While such twirlers as Ike Silcox, Bill Welton, Lefty Lehner, and Hal Grinols have figures only on the winning side of their records, Prof sluggers have succeeded in knocking the mound hope of the Troopers, Ken Watts, out of the box in his two starts against them, and have tagged him with the loss on both occasions.

From the way things look now, the Profs will have no more than three regulars taking the bench during the 1948 Doughboy season. Most of these gaps probably will be filled by the Airborne Troopers.

Steps have been taken by the International Olympic committee to avert a repetition of the incompetent and unfair officiating which made a farce of the boxing tournament in Berlin in 1936.

The chairman of the committe, James A. (Jimmy) Lee, has revealed that a jury of appeals has been organized to insure fair and impartial decisions when the Olympic games are held in London this year.

The jury, comprised of delegates from the US, Ireland, Finland, Argentina, Canada, France, Great Britain and Italy, will be empowered to reverse any decisions rendered by the officials during the fight tournament.

For those who recall the 1936 tournament, the odor of sour grapes still lingers when they recall the raw decisions given the highly-touted US ring team. Some of the decisions were so foul that Great Britain, South Africa, Canada, and New Zealand declared that they would support this country in any steps it might take to boycott future Olympic boxing events.

Although a previous suggestion was made to the effect that the nation sponsoring the Olympic games would furnish the officials for the events, Chairman Lee doesn't believe this plan will work. He advocates the policy of continuing to employ neutral officials, but believes that the jury of appeals will tend to prevent the officials from making such ridiculous decisons.

This may be another year for surprises in the majors, and we'll predict that one of them will be Ken Keltner, third-baseman for the Cleveland Indians. The hot - corner expert, who has been up to the majors since 1938, has belted an average of one four-bagger per game in his five games with the Indians.

And, speaking of surprises, the Indians themselves might prove to be the biggest one of the year. At present, they are perched atop the American league roster with five straight wins and no losses. As for the favorites, the Yankees and Red Sox, they could easily run across the same trouble the million-dollar Cardinals experienced in the National league last year, where a late start proved to be the factor that deprived them of a loop pennant.

The New York Giants are pulling a little surprise of their own in the senior loop by elbowing their way into the No. 1 spot despite a reported weakness in the pitching department. There can be no doubt that Giant sluggers top both leagues, but diamond sages had them running a poor first division race due to mound anemia.

Parachutists Outhit But Beat Ordnance

After giving up six runs during the first two inning of a Saturday afternoon diamond tilt at Gowdy field, the 328th Ordance battelion squad settled down to blank the second-place Airborne battalion for four innings, but lost the contest 6 to 1.

Despite dropping the game, Bob Glover, Ordnance hurler, yielded only seven safeties while hism ates were nicking Trooper hurler Orville Lawson for eight base knocks.

The Airborne team picked up four tallies in the first when Paul Bonair and Bob Griffin drew walks, Ralph Terry reached on an error, and Bob Kinard and Herb Myatt banged out singles. Successive bingles by Red Cothran and pitcher Lawson set the stage for two Trooper tallies in the second stanza. Both runners moved up when Bonair laid down a sacrifice, and scored when Terry lashe das inglein when Terry lashed a single into right.

Handcuffing the flame pot lads for six innings, Lawson yielded the 328th its only run in the top half of the seventh. Andy Boland, going in as a pinch-hitter, smacked out a single, stole second, and trotted acrossth e platter when another pinch-hitter, John Guth, lined a double to right.

The fact that the Ordnance bingles didn't come in the right places is borne out by having eight runners marooned on the bags.

Students Trim Lawson Flyer Diamond Team

Tossing three-hit ball and chalking up 14 strikeouts, Willie Weaver led the Student Training regiment diamond nine to a 5 to 2 win over the Lawson field Flyers in the initial tilt of a double program at Gowdy field Saturday afternoon.

The first-two STR runs came in the top half of the first with two out. Bill Church smacked out a single, and Major Carmichael worked Flyer hurler Dan English for a base on balls before Howard Thompson belted a triple down the left-field foul line.

A costly error by Flyer centerfielder Ed Hamel gave the students another tally in the first phase of the fifth, but the Lawson squad came back in its half of the inning to hang up two counters.

The students widened their margin by pushing two more runs across the plate in the initial half of the seventh.

NEWEST ADDITION—Bob Cronin, young right-hander of the Airborne battalion, is the newest addition to Fort Benning's ranks of no-hit twirlers. Cronin's 16 to 0 triumph over the 3440th Army Service unit Medics was the third hitless masterpiece of the 1948 intra-mural season. His two-won, none-lost record for the season makes him one of the circuit's leading moundsmen.

Chutists Score Early For Win Over Truckers

Picking up all their tallies during the first three innings, the Airborne battalion notches their fifth straight win last Tuesday afternoon by trimming the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers 6 to 1 at Gowdy Field.

Their record of five triumphs against one setback gave the Airborne lads the No. 2 spot on the league ladder by a comfortable margin as they prepared to meet the undefeated loop-leading Infantry School detachment Profs for a showdown tilt Sunday afternoon.

Right-hander Bob Cronin, who recently twirled a no-hit contest against the 3440th Army Service unit Medics, pitched the first four innings of the game, and was credited with the triumph. He gave up three safeties before turning mound chores over to Orvill Lawson, who allowed the Truckers their lone tally in the top of the sixth.

After four base blows and four miscues had given the parachutists six counters during the game's initial three innings, Pitcher Rusty Harris and his Trucker teammates settled down, and blanked the home nine for the remainder of the contest.

The loss by the transportation team dropped the Truckers into the league's seventh place with only one win in five starts.

Profs Set Record In Win Over STR

Setting at least four records for the 1948 Fort Benning intra-mural season, the Infantry School detachment Profs strengthened their hold on the circuit's top spot last Thursday night by swamping the Student Training regiment 30 to 1 at Gowdy field.

In addition to chalking up the most runs scored by a team in a single game this year, ISD clouters smashed out five round-trippers, gathered 24 safeties, and batted in 24 tallies.

During the tilt, the Student Training regiment used practically every pitcher on the roster, and, after the Profs had scored in each of six innings, agreed to having the game called.

Welton Shines

Although the ISD batting was the most spectacular phase of the contest, Bill Welton, Prof mound performer, gave the students only one single, a sharp single to left by third-sacker John Morgan in the fifth stanza.

Promoted Last Week

Cpl. Dennis G. McLampy, detachment headquarters, Infantry School detachment, was promoted to the grade of sergeant April 20, officials said today.

At the same time it was also announced that Pbt. Virgil L. Roots, Company H, had been promoted to the grade of private

Welton, who hurled a no-hitter against the 3440th Army Service unit Medics in his only other turn on the hill this season, gave way to a pinch-hitter in the top half of the sixth, and Lefty Lehner finished out the game by setting down the STR in order.

During his mound tour, Welton whiffed six STR batters, and gave up five free passes to the bags.

Shiver Gets Two

Batting star of the game for the Profs was catcher Chick Shiver, who blasted two circuit blows and a single in three official appearances at the plate. His first four-bagger, a drive to the base of the left-field fence, came in the second inning with one mate on board, and the second blast was a long clout to right-center in the fourth when the bags were empty.

Other Prof stick wielders contributing to the homerun parade were Bill Brooks, Blondie Burnett, and Woody Burt. Brooks' circuit was his second of the season, and the blasts by Burnett and Burt were their first.

ORDNANCE SQUAD ROMPS TO 114 VICTORY OVER STR

Staging a second-inning hitting spree good for six tallies, the 328th Ordnance battalion diamond delegation went on to take in 11 to 4 decision over the Student Training regiment at Gowdy field last Tuesday night.

The triumph was the third in the last four encounters for the Ordnance team, which has improved its hitting remarkably since the start of the 1948 post campaign.

During the tilt, flame pot lumber swingers pounded out five extra-base blows, three doubles and two triples, while Pitcher John Guth, in giving up eight safe knocks, allowed only one extra-bagger, a double by Bill Church, STR catcher.

The victorious nine picked up a two-run margin in the opening frame when Bob Glover reached first on an error, and scored when Stan Letonsky drove a three-bagger into deep center. Letonsky came home when the next batter, Ed Goode, lashed a sharp single to the center gardens.

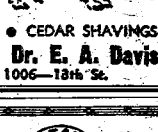
The STR nine scored its first two counters in the top half of the second, and added another pair in the initial phase of the third, fifth, and sixth innings.

A stellar plate performance was turned in by Letonsky, 328th first-sacker, who whacked out two doubles and a triple in his five appearances in the batters' box.

FIRST BENNINGITE GETS NEW OCCUPATION MEDAL

CWO Victor J. Kotnik, assistant Infantry Center personnel officer, last Friday became the first Fort Benning man to receive the Army Occupation medal from the adjutant general, it was reported here this week.

Mr. Kotnik, veteran of more than seven years army service, received the medal for occupation duty in Germany.



He entered the army as a private on March 4, 1941, when the 10th Cavalry regiment of the Ohio National Guard was called into Federal service, and was appointed a warrant office, junior grade, on Jan. 30, 1943 at the Desert Training Center, Camp Young, Calif.

Mr. Kotnik went to England on Feb. 12, 1944, as assistant G-4 with the automotive section of the 20th Corps, and in July, 1944, sailed for France as administrative assistant on the special staff.

Only In America

We have often argued with people about the relative merits of the various countries of the world, always maintaining a steadfast favoritism for the United States because of its many conditions which make possible the "good life", not the least of which is the absolute freedom. Probably the most outstanding recent example of this freedom is a strictly Southern holiday, observed on April 26, Confederate Memorial Day.

Where else on the face of the earth does a people enjoy the privilege of celebrating a similar holiday, a holiday commemorating the death of an idea, the death of a separate nation? Not only is it allowed but it is also given Federal recognition, perhaps not completely sanctioned by the Government but certainly not banned.

The United States Army is even permitted and encouraged to take part in this observance of the loss of a war by a part of the nation. In ourneighboring city of Columbus, an officer representing the commanding general placed a wreath on one of the South's great Civil War leaders, General Henry L. Benning, for whom the post is named.

It is indeed a tribute to the greatness of the United States when one section of the nation helps another section of the nation, its former enemy, celebrate the memory of those who fought for its defeated ideals.

Amercia's greatness of heart, greatness of character, and devotion to its for mof government reminds us Voltaire's famous words, "I don't agree with a thing you say, but I will fight to the death for your right to say it." So it is with the South's privilege of celebrating Confederate Memorial Day, a day set aside each year by those States below Mason and Dixon's Line to honor the fallen of the War Between the States, America's only serious internal disturbance in its more than 400 years existence.

But American freedom does not stop there. It goes on to include many more freedoms, the right to worship God as we see fit, the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, the right to live in any part of the country we desire, the right to complain about conditions we do not like, and so many more that it would impossible be to list them all. Suffice it to say that an American citizen's freedom is so fabulous that it is often difficult for people of other countries to believe what we say is true.

With this wondrous freedom we take for granted, it is incomprehensible to us why there should be in this country any persons who preach an "ism" foreign to America's concept of good government, foreign to the ideals which motivated the founding fathers to undergo such hardships to settle here in this land, the rights for which they and their descendents fought so unceasingly to obtain.

We can't help marveling at the foresightedness of the makers of the United States Constitution, the foresightedness which prevents any usupation of power on the part on any minority group, the foresightedness which provides Americans with so much freedom and which assures that it can not be taken away.

Being an American is about the most glorious thing in the world, and we are merely made more aware of it by reading the newspapers, by listening to the radio, by talking with people from other lands.

And when a nation, united as is America with one Federal Government yet having forty-eight other governments with powers of their own and freedoms of their own, can allow one part of the nation to commemorate the loss of their fight for a separate nation, we realize more fully what it means to be American.

Only in the United States of America, made up of descendents of all the oppresed people of the world, could such a thing happen. Only in America is the writen Constitution based on absolute Freedom.

Strictly Editorializing

WE VISITED THE 325th Infantry regiment last Friday morning in an effort to determine how the troops felt about being on manguvers during peace-time, and were rewarded with what we consider to be about the best answer we've heard in a long time to snooping editors. It came to us indirectly even before we had asked the question, making any other comment appear foolish.

IN SPEAKING TO Lt. Col. Harry M. Grizzard, unit executive officer, we learned that approximately 25 percent of the men had decided to remain in the training area during the weekend despite the fact they could, if they wanted, have weekend leave. This proves, to our way of thinking at any rate, that they are enjoying the rugged life out in an isolated part of the reservation.

TO THOSE WHO might have felt sorry for the 325th and the other units long with them, we say "Forget it—they certainly don't feel sorry for themselves. They like it out there."

LAST SATURDAY AFTERNOON we attended the baseball games at Gowdy field between the Student Training regiment, and Lawson field and between the Airborne battalion and the 328th Ordnance battalion, and we can assure you we had no trobule finding seats. The stands were about as empty as we've ever seen them. We cannot understand why Fort Benning troops don't atend those weekend games.

LAST SUMMER SOMEONE wrote a letter to the Public Information Office complaining about the short-lived intramural season, maintaining that he and his friends were unable to attend all the regular Infantry Center games since a number of them were played off the post.

WE WONDER WHAT difference it makes where the games are played. Only a few have any interest in their units' teams. Certainly a little support from the fans would go a long way toward improving the teams and making them feel that they are appreciated.

LOUD AND VULGAR talking on the busses that run between Columbus and Fort Benning has ishow na slight increase lately. The reason for it we'll never know. But we feel sorry for those people who, in order to be emphatic or make themselves known to others, must stoop so low as to use words unfit for human ears.

By Chaplain Henry L. Taylor

Recently the chaplain was asked, "How is the morale of the men down in your neck of the woods?" That brings up the question, "What is morale?"

Morale is easier to describe than to define. One is reminded of Professor Housman's remark in a lecture called, "The Name and Nature of Poetry."

"A year or two ago, in common with others, I received from America a request that I define poetry. I replied I could no more define poetry than a terrier could define a rat, but that I thought we both recognized the object by the symptoms which it provokes in us. Morale is the spirit of the soldier or his unit to advance against the obstacles toward the goals set by the individual or his unit."

Again someone has said, "Morale is when a soldier thinks his army is the best in the world; his regiment the best in the army, his company the best in the regiment, his squad the best in the company and he himself the best soldier man in the outfit."

So we see something of what is involved in building the spirit of the individual man and also his unit. Morale is difficult to measure. It depends on several things. It depends upon the individual involved; the kindling power of the leaders; the kindling power of the soldier.

From these elements we see that morale is a quality involving the whole man. That it is complete and absolute confidence on the part of the soldier in his army, his unit, his home, his commander, his country and his cause.

Just here it is the chaplain's function to stimulate or inspire men through the medium of religion to an idealism which finds its fruition in loyalty, courage, and contentment, the very essence of good morale. He should neglect no opportunity to help both officers and men to maintain a cheerful and courageous spirit with unshaken faith in the high cause which they serve through both the monotony of non-combat service and the trying ordeals of combat service.

With the above ideals and goals in mind we are building one of the greatest armies in the world, and with such spirit it shall never suffer defeat. For you cannot conquer a spirit of a people who are willing to sacrifice for Freedom and Justice.

The District Attorney was questioning a witness. The man was cooperative, but he addressed all of his answers directly to the attorney. "Speak to the jury," directed the Ass't D.A.

The witness looked the jury over, nodded pleasantly, and said, "Howdy."

P. X. Barber: "Okay, soldier, that's it. Want some tonic on your hair."

Provoked Private: "Yeah, squirt it on and sweep it up. There's all my hair on the floor."

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

A victim of a traffic accident. I suppose if I have heard one person mention his untimely death, I have had a dozen people say something about it in my presence. I,too, have missed him.

I am talking about the tremendously large gray squirrel that used to play along the road just inside the gate on the way from the traffic circle. How many of you used to look for him as I did when you came to work? How many of you have missed him during the past week?

As I said, he was the victim of a traffic accident, for there he lay last Wednesday morning over to the side of the road.

Many have talked about it, but what concerns your Red Cross is the number of accidents on the road and in the home. Last year 33,500 people were killed in home accidents. This was greater than those who were killed on the road. Nevertheless, 32,000 people were killed in automobile accidents. A huge accidental total, 100,000 killed and another 10,000,000 injured, is a major reason for continued demand for Red Cross first aid training which teaches emergency care of the injured.

Your Red Cross knows that people who have received first aid training recognize hazards. Therefore, they have fewer accidents than those who have not received training. Good intent at accident scenes is not enough. The chances are unfortunately high that before the year is out you will come upon a traffic accident, be involved in one, or be present at tragic accident in the home. Most of us instinctively want to help a person who has been injured.

RAINTREE COUNTY

An American author has at last written a stimulating novel which comes nearer being the Great American Epic than anything since Thomas Wolfe. Ross Lockridge, Jr., author of Raintree County, committed suicide shortly after he had seen his book published, but had lived long enough to see it acclaimed as one of the greatest novels of the century.

Told in flashbacks, the story revolves around a Typical American Youth who had hopes of becoming America's Young Hero. He is born and grows up in a Typical American County, Raintree county, which he never leaves until he marries a Southern Lady from New Orleans.

The Civil War comes and John Wickcliff Shawnessey, Life's Young, American, enlists, fighting under both Grant and Sherman. He returns to Raintree county, remains for a short time, goes to New York, then back to Raintree County.

His friends range all the way from a cynical, intelligent Jerusalem Webster Stiles, his profession at Pedee Academy to Flash Perkins, a boisterous, vulgar youth whom he bests in a footrace and who dies in his arms during the Civil War.

Ross Lockridge has truly written a masterpiece of satire, history, fiction, and down-to-earthness, never for a moment forsaking his desire to philosophize and campaign for a better employment of one's talents.

Raintree County makes a reviewer feel completely inadequate. Ross Lockridge's novel has surpassed any we've ever read.

AUBURN PLAYERS TO COME HERE—"Banned In Boston", the new production of the Auburn Players, will be presented April 30 at the Main theater at 8:30 p. m. It opened at Auburn on April 12 where it was an immediate hit. Admission will be free with no reserved seats.

'Banned In Boston' Scheduled For Main Theater Tomorrow

Infantry Center special services will present the Auburn players in "Banned In Boston" at the Main theater, April 30 at 8:30 p.m. Admission is free and there will be no reserved seats.

The play is a modern comedy in three acts. It was written by Winiford Logan, instructor in dramatic arts at Auburn, who also directed the production.

The play depicts the amusing experiences of a returned veteran whose wife has written a book about his heroic deeds during the war. The book has made her rich and famous, and for the husband to live up to his characterization makes for many humorous happenings.

Mr. Logan, who was an infantry major during the war, has considerable experience in playwriting and production. He received his master's degree from the University of North Carolina, and played in summer stock at Priscilla Beach, Mass. He also taught dramatics at the University of Virginia, and wrote and directed several one-act plays given at Hiram college, Hiram, Ohio, and the University of North Carolina, plus a musical production overseas called "Oh, My Back!" He was also a radio announcer over station WRAL in North Carolina. Writing is a pastime as he prefers teaching dramatics as a career.

"Banned In Boston" is proof of his directing ability as well as his writing ability. Lamar [illegible]ver of Elba, Ala. has the lead as Ed Walsh. Jane De Vore of Ozark Ala., portrays Bee Hill, the secretary. Betty Ramsey, Atlanta, plays Fran Walsh, the literary wife. Other members of the cast are Robert Blackburn, Robert Laney, Bill Ethridge, and Owen Munro.

"Banned In Boston" opened in Auburn April 12 and was a hit. The Auburn Players have a wide reputation for their successful productions which have played several other places after opening at the college. Now that Winiford Logan has joined the dramatic staff, the Players can boast actors, producers, directors and writers of their own.

"Wa'l I dunno, it might be alright," Si answered, "but I'm a mite doubtful. They's larnin' my boy to spell "taters" with a "p".

Benning Catholics Adopt Resolutions

Plans Under Way To Organize Knights Of Columbus Council

A ten-point group of resolutions, adopted by the executive council at a meeting April 21, will be presented to members of the Fort Benning Holy Name Society at their regular meeting May 9, it was announced today by Maj. Thomas J. Gendron, president.

Major Gendron also reported that plans are under way to organize a local council of Knights of Columbus, and urged that all members of the society attend the next meeting in order to express their views. He said that fifty men would be needed to organize a council here.

Among the resolutions adopted by the executive council were that the next regular communion Sunday would be at the 10 a.m. mass in chapel No. 4 May 9, and that benediction of the Blessed Sacrament would precede a short meeting of the society.

The council also approved a resolution that members have breakfast on the lawn of Chaplain John F. Rafferty's quarters, Infantry Center catholic chaplain, following the meeting.

Local Troops Set For Big Exercise

Warrant Officer Screening Center Established Here

A screening center for interviewing applicants for the grade of warrant officer was established here this week, officials have announced.

Members of the reviewing board include Lt. Col. Martin H. Burckes, president, Maj. Carl H. Cosby, Maj. Thomas J. Gendron, Maj. James L. McCrorey, Capt. John W. Tomlin, Capt. Jack G. Null, Capt. Charles H. Burgess and Lt. Ravnel V. Burgamey.

The local board, one of many being established at military installations, will process personnel from Fort Benning and surrounding territory who apply for appointment to the grade of warrant officer under the new army career plan, Infantry Center officials said.

All appointments made under the provisions of career guidance stipulations will be in the grade of warrant officer, junior grade. However, readjustment to four grades of warrant officer is planned under proposed legislation. All original premanant appointments as warrant officer, junior grade, will be probationary for a period of three years, it was pointed out.

According to the provisions of Circular No. 38, a person selected for appointment, who at the time of selection is holding a temporary commission or temporary warrant as chief warrant officer, will retain his grade until termination of active commissioned status under honorable conditions. This provision is subject to future strength and grade readjustment policies, officials further stated.

Haitian-Born Sergeant Says U.S. Ideal Nation

Although in his lifetime he has had the occasion, T-4 Wallace E. Stinson, Company F, Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment, is one who does not get excited about class or religion.

Born in Haiti of Negro parents, he realized very early that a man's life is pretty much what he is willing to make it, and a reasonably decent living, hard work, an eye always on the ultimate goal, can take a man wherever he wants to go.

So, feeling that the United States offered the greatest opportunities for an ambitious young man, Sergeant Stinson came to South Carolina where he graduated from Finley high school in Chester in 1939.

After a year at Friendship Junior college at Rock Hill, S. C., another year at Columbia university, Stinson returned to the South to attend North Carolina college.

Deciding that his country was more important than the completion of his education, Sergeant Stinson interrupted his second year at North Carolina college to enlist in the regular army.

Presently assigned to the 503rd Airborne battalion at Fort Bragg, N. C., and now undergoing parachute training here, Sergeant Stinson is a veteran of 22 months in the European and China - Burma - India theaters, where he participated in the Rome-Arno campaign, the invasion of southern France and other campaigns.

The Haitian-born sergeant has three and one-half years' work toward a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry which he hopes to complete some day.

She picked up the dime and said, "My mother always taught me to take the smallest piece," but picking up the dollar bill also, she added, "but so I won't lose this dime, I'll take this piece of paper to wrap it up in."

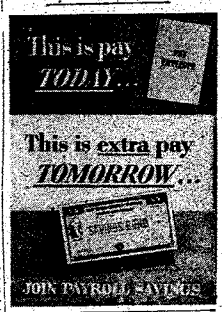
Reserve Medics to Get Chance For Active Duty

Authority has been granted the army's Medical department to place 300 additional medical service reserve officers on active dury immediately, it was announced recently by Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, the army's surgeon general.

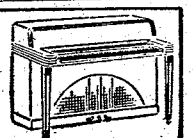
Reservists who volunteer will be assigned to duty in all four sections of the corps, according to their qualifications, General Bliss said. The greatest need is in the Medical Allied Science section which includes personnel trained in psychology, physiology, biochemistry, nutrition, serology and other related medical sciences needed in the army, he pointed out.

The other three sections of the Medical Service corps are the Pharmacy, Administrative and Supply sections, Optometry section and Sanitary Engineering section.



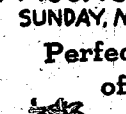
The recent formation of the Medical Service corps is one phase of a long-range program designed to provide the highest possible standard of medical care for the army with a minumum number of physicians required in administrative positions or performing duties properly belonging to medical allied sciences, the surgeon general further noted.

While specialists in fields embraced by the corps have always served in the army, authorities felt that the former administrative setup did not make for the fullest use of talent or the highest degree of individual satisfaction. The present group was inaugurated last year when officers in the former Sanitary corps, Pharmacy corps and Medical Administrative corps reserves were transferred to the newly organized Medical Service Reserve.



The aim is to have each man practicing in the field for which his training and inclination best fit him, and every effort is made to assign reserve personnel to a service paralleling their civilian pursuits, General Bliss said.

The Medical Service corps now has an authorized officer strength of 1,022, and vacancies in the regular corps will be filled through the medium of competitive tours of active duty for reservists, the surgeon general announced.



Plans are also being made to expand further the graduate training program for regular army Medical Service corps officers. The program currently includes training at a number of civilian institutions in a wide variety of subjects, including entomology, bacteriology, clinical psychology and public health Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Northwestern and Columbia are among the leading universities cooperating in the program.

Army EM Get Smaller Grade Insignia in July

New and smaller grade chevrons for noncommissioned officers, providing distinction between combat and non-combat personnel, were announced by the army today.

Effective in July, when the new combat chevrons are expected to be in general supply, enlisted men will be instructed to change their insignia of grade to conform with their positions under the army's career guidance program. After the changeover, it was announced, men in combat jobs will wear chevrons of dark blue on a gold-colored embroidered background, and non-combat soldiers will wear insignia of gold on a dark-blue background.

The new emblems will be one and three-quarters inches wide on backgrounds two inches wide, or about two-thirds the size of present insignia. In the case of first sergeant, an occupational title of the first enlisted grade, a lozenge or diamond such as is now worn by first sergeants will be worn inside the first-grade insigne.

In addition to the distinction of color between the chevrons of combat and non-combat men, those noncommissioned officers designated as combat leaders—such as squad sergeants and platoon sergeants—will wear a green cloth tab, one inch wide, on the middle of each shoulder loop. This tab will be relinquished, the army said, when the individual vacates his "combat command" position, though he may or may not retain his combat chevrons.

Basically, the chevrons to be worn by each grade will be similar to those now worn by the same grade. However, there will be no differentiation between technician and "line" personnel in a given grade except for the color of the insignia.

Chevrons to be worn will be prescribed on an individual, rather than a unit, basis. For instance, while a rifleman of Company A will wear the blue-on-gold insignia of a combat man, the company clerk of the same unit will wear the gold-on-blue of a non-combat soldier. If a man changes his job from combat to non-combat, he may be required to change his chevrons; it was explained. However, combat men on special types of duty, such as recruiting, National Guard training or reserve instruction, will continue to wear their combat chevrons. Men in the "pipeline" process of transfer to new assignments will not be required to change their chevrons as a result of temporary change of job.

Specific information as to which assignments carry the combat designation and which are listed as non-combat will be announced later in an army circular which will also designate the effective date of changeover.

Changes Announced

Capt. Henry Q. Bernard has assumed command of first company, Student Training regiment, replacing Capt. Clyde M. Davis, who is slated to attend the Intelligence School, Fort Riley, Kans.

In other changes announced by the Student Training regiment Capt. Warren H. Moulton, former commanding officer of the second company, has taken over command of the fifth company and Capt. George Tassey now heads second company.

THE ARMY LOST one of its greatest leaders Sunday when General Dwight David Eisenhower said his last farewell at Fort Myer, Va. Leaving the army quietly, he drove to New York where he will begin his new duties as president of Columbia university on June 1.

There are few men who have won their way into the hearts of so many people as did Ike Eisenhower. There are few men who exhibited such tact and diplomacy. There are few men in such places of honor who retain their kindness and home folks appeal. Indeed Ike Eisenhower to the peoples of Europe symbolized the greatness of the United States, its unselfishness, its warmth of heart.

So as the army loses a great soldier, Columbia gains a great president. We wish him the best of luck in his new post.

SPEAKING OF WARTIME leaders, Winston Churchill, Britain's prime minister during darkest days of the war, has published his memoirs of World War II. They are currently appearing Life magazine, but will soon be published in a regular cloth-bound edition. We don't believe that anyone who fought in the last war should miss reading these memoirs. If you ever wondered why the U. S. provided lend-lease to countries being threatened by Hitler's armies, you might find the answer in this great epic.

Written in pure Churchillian prose, you perhaps will also be able to understand just what made this man of "blood, sweat and tears" so beloved not only by his own people but by people all over the world.

THE 325TH INFANTRY regiment and its attached units left this week for maneuvers at Camp Campbell, Ky., following three weeks of intensive training exercises here which were climaxed by 'Operation California'. The officers and men of these units, who formerly composed School Troops, will be replaced by one of those famous Third Infantry division organizations, the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team.

As soon as the Seventh is brought to full strength, it will provide all Infantry School demonstrations, carried out until recently by the 325th. So this week we welcome the Seventh while we reluctantly say goodbye to the old School Troops outfits.

On Hemispheric Defense

Hemispheric defense received another shot in the arm recently with the agreements made between the United States and South American countries at conferences at Bogota, Colombia, for mutual asssitance should the need arise. This is in line with the good neighbor policy so long advocated by those far-seeing individuals who are interested in the protection of the American continent, militarily and economically.

The inter-American defense pact reminds us of the Monroe Doctrine of 1823. In many respects it is indeed similar. More than 100 years ago James Monroe, fifth President of the United States, issued this now famous statement, which came to be known in later years as the Monroe Doctrine, saying in effec to any would-be aggressors that the U. S. would look with disfavor upon any further colonization in the American nations by foreign powers and telling them to keep their "hands off."

We might say that this new defense treaty is another Monroe Doctrine in that the Americas have agreed to aid in preventing aggression from an outside source.

In extolling the merits of such a plan, we feel that a major portion of the credit for such an accomplishment is primarily due a former army man, Secretary of State George C. Marshall, one of the U. S.'s greatest chief's of staff who led the nation through its worst conflict. Marshall's keen mind and thorough understanding of diplomacy were certainly deciding factors in the success of the conferences. He has held two of the nation's highest posts and in both has proven himself well qualified.

Now that the inter-American defense plan is almost a reality, the U. S. has shown the world that friendship and understanding are far better than inntimidation. The U. S. has never had to resort to threats in order to gain friends or to keep them. Our past actions and our promises for the future are all that are necessary to maintain a friendly neighbor to the south.

On our northern boundary is Canada, another American nation which has always been friendly to the U. S. No treaty or pact has ever been necessary between the two nations, nor do we believe one will ever be necessary. Certainly Canada has no designs on the U. S., and the U. S. could have taken Canada long ago if she had imperialistic or expansionist ideas.

For some time now Latin Americans and Canadians have been crossing into the U. S. to attend service schools, to establish businesses, to trade, and to visit. As an example of the friendship among these American nations, no better example serves to prove our point than the presence now at Fort Benning of officers and men from South American and Canadian armies, men who are learning American techare exchanged, new fields explored, and the result is usually schools of their own along similar lines.

Officers and men from the U. S. also attend schools in Canada and other American countries. In that way ideas are exchanged, new fields explored, and the result is usually a better balanced military establishment for all concerned.

When the South American nations, the United States, and Canada can live harmoniously for so long as they have, when they can agree mutually, without any pressure being brought to bear by the stronger nations, to bind themselves together for their joint protection, then that should be proof enough that all is not lost. That should prove that it is not impossible for countries to live peaceably. That should prove that there is a solution to all the troubles which arise over inter-nation disputes.

And above all that should prove that America, by far the most powerful nation in the American sphere of influence, is not imperialistic.

BY MURRAY E. HILL

The column this week will be about Red Cross folks at Fort Benning. First, we would like to welcome to the Red Cross staff Miss Julia Nolen, social worker, who arrived April 29 to be attached to the Station Hospital. Miss Nolen, whose home is in Birmingham, Alabama, first joined the Red Cross in July, 1942. Since that time she has been a social worker in various military hospitals, including Camp Shelby, Northington General, and Welch Convalescent. We know that Miss Nolen will be happy at Fort Benning and we are indeed happy to have her here with us.

Another interesting personality coming to Fort Benning on May 3 was Hope P. Carpenter, special field representative of first aid and water safety of the American Red Cross. Mr. Carpenter had a most interesting experience during the three years in the navy. During that time he belonged to that mysterious and interesting group known as scouts and raiders. His specific duty during that teaching swimming, water safety and first aid to the scouts and raiders at their training base in Fort Pierce, Fla. Later he went to China and was attached to the Chinese Guerrilla Army in Japanese occupied territory.

Mr. Carpenter first attracted attention on the football field, for he was an outstanding player during his high school days going from high school to Magnolia A. & M. college in Magnolia, Ark. From Magnolia college he went to the University of Arkansas where he received his degree in Science degree in education. He also took post graduate work while serving in the Navy at Tulane university at New Orleans. On leaving the navy he became assistant football coach at the University of Arkansas, leaving there early in 1948 to become connected with the Red Cross.

Your own staff has just returned from Atlanta where they attended the disaster institute. Your Red Cross is not content to work on the theory that because one is connected with Red Cross he is thoroughly experienced in the procedure and policy during a disaster. These disaster Institutes are held yearly, and since new methods are discussed each year, it is essential that the Red Cross professional staff attend these schools and be brought up to date on all of the new methods so important in saving life and property during any type of disaster. While it is always hard to go off to school and spend hours in a class room, it was indeed a pleasure and a privilege for the Red Cross staff at Fort Benning to take part in this disaster institute.

A drunk tried several times to navigate a revolving door, but finally gave up the attempt in disgust and leaned despondently against a lamp post. A man came along the street and walked into the door. As it revolved, the other side revealed a pretty girl stepping from it. The drunk looked intently at her and remarked, "It's a good trick, but I still don't shee what the guy did with his clothes!"

FIRE

"Fire", a new novel by George R. Stewart, is a book equally fascinating and amazing as its predecessor "Storm." George Stewart, a graduate of Princeton university, is professor of English at the University of California at Berkeley. He did postgraduate work at the University of California and Columbia university, and was Resident Fellow in creative writing at Princeton for the year 1942-43.

In his writing he has always followed an unchartered course. His early books gave the first evidence of the independence and orginality of his roving mind and the novel "Storm" proved that he could make even the weather the hero of one of the most exciting novels of recent years.

"Fire" is the same type novel, with a tiny spark the hero of the book. The spark, born by a bolt of lightning in the California mountains, struggles smoulders, revives, and grows into a violent life of its own into a conflagration covering miles of fine timberland. To fight it, man must summon every resource of strength and strategy and gather an army of volunteers to bolster trained firefighters in this peace-time emergency.

Judith Godoy, the pretty new lookout at Cerro Gordo, is the first one to spot the fire, and the suspense which the book builds up for the reader before the fire is spotted, is a masterpiece of writing. Personalities among the characters in the book claim some interest but they are only important to the reader in relation to the fire, which claims constant interest as though it were a person, doing mad, evil things and never quite getting caught.

Mary had a little lamb,
Some salad and dessert;
Then gave the gob the wrong address——
The dirty little flirt!

WITNESSING

BY

CHAPLAIN R. O. KIRSCH

Ever and again in the Gospels we come to a saying of our Lord that is uttered with an assurance that brings a sense of profoundest reality and causes us to feel that here is the strength, authority, unchangeableness which belong to Deity. Here is one of those quiet assumptions of power which at once set Him apart from all other men:

"When the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father."

How sure He was of Himself and of His relationship with the Father. It is not self-assertion, but assertion of Being. It is a claim of power in which there is not a trace of egoism and pride; an utterance as unfaltering as it is unassuming; and begets in the listening heart the unwavering conviction that here is truth if ever truth were spoken. Its uniqueness stands out clear. The power He claims is truly power. He can send the Comforter to us.

This Comforter "shall testify of me," and "ye shall bear witness." His command is our privilege. As the Holy Spirit of God testifies, so shall we—so must we. What shall we testify? Open up your Bible to First John, Chapter 1, Verses 1-10, and find that we are to be witnesses concerning the Word of Life; concerning the fellowship; concerning the light; concerning the cleansing blood; concerning the forgiveness of sins; concerning life eternal.

Thus in thought and word and deed shall we, empowered by the Spirit He sends unto us, bear our witness of redemptive Incarnation. Are we doing this? Is our religion a passive conformity or is it dynamical witnessing?

Richard Hoggs, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Edgar O. Hobbs, is a junior in Columbus High, is vice president in charge of facilities at Brat Barracks, and plays on the Benning junior baseball team as shortstop. Baseball and swimming are both favorite sports.

Arden Chase, the only girl from Fort Benning honored this time, is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Chase. This is Arden's first year in Columbus high, although she is a senior. At Fayetteville high school she was a member of the Beta Club, which honors students for fine academic work, but is on a smaller scale than the National Honor Society. She enjoys horseback and tennis and plans to attend an Eastern college next year.

Miss Pat Bush, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Weaver Bush, will be valedictorian of the class this year, is also active in Post activities, and is a regular member of the Infantry Center chapel choir.

The Lawson Woman's club entertained with a farewell party last Wednesday afternoon honoring Mrs. Fred G. Henry and Mrs. Wilfred Hinman, liaison chairman and president, respectively, whose husbands have received overseas assignments.

Beautiful arrangements of spring flowers and candlelight formed the setting for the gathering which took place in the club's main lounge. An L-shaped serving table, placed at one end of the room, was overlaid with a white floor-length cloth and decorated with burning white tapers in crystal candelabra arranged around a unique centerpiece of spring flowers in a low, oblong yellow bowl. Crystal trays and compotes filled with party sandwiches, nuts and mints completed the table appointments.

The club presented talisman rose corsages to Mrs. Hinman and Mrs. Henry as they arrived.

Among the ladies present were Mrs. Gilbert T. Collar, Mrs. John C. Wretschko, Mrs. Alson Nolan, Mrs. D. Shorr, Mrs. DeAlbert Hoke, Mrs. Bryon E. Trent, Mrs. William Woodyard, Mrs. Harry Grover, Mrs. Jerome Schweickert, Mrs. Malcolm Sponenbergh, Mrs. Ivan L. Hale, Mrs. Louis Button, Mrs. Fred Gearhart, Mrs. Ben Fern, Mrs. Joseph Lewandoski, Mrs. Thomas Duffy, Mrs. Eugene E. Wanager, Mrs. Lyle Tarter, Miss Peggy Scott and the honorees.

Mrs. Henry, wife of Lt. Col. Fred G. Henry, executive officer, and Mrs. Hinman, wife of Capt. Wilfred Hinman, provost marshal, are scheduled to leave the base immediately.

Bowling Party Enos Activities

Members of the Fort Benning Women's club bowling group held a final spring bowling party with prizes awarded for several events. Each bowler was limited to winning one prize and the meet was arranged by Mrs. Athel Bangert, chairman of the group.

Winners of the high series were Mrs. Carrol McFalls, Jr., Mrs. E. V. Mead, Mrs. C. H. Hallden and Mrs. Sam Carter. Mrs. Mead and Mrs. Hallden tied for second. High game prizes went to Mrs. William K. Dieman, Mrs. Jack Dempsey and Mrs. James S. Turner.

Taking a two-game average, the most strikes were made by Mrs. H. L. Webster and Mrs. Frank Petruzel, the most spares by Mrs. Athel Bangert and Mrs. H.L. Duncan, and the most splits by Mrs. E. A. Krellick and Mrs. E. E. Enger.

Awards were also made to the top bowlers for April with Mrs. Athel Bangert winning in the advanced group and Mrs. H. L. Webster winning for the intermediate group.

MAIN LIBRARY RECEIVES PAINTING—Sheman H. Linton, Seventh Regimental combat team, is shown with his large oil seascape, which he presented to the main library as a gift last week. He also exhibited two other oils in the art exhibit held all last week to show art work by local talent.

Sherman H. Linton Presents Library With Oil Painting

Pfc. Sherman H. Linton, Jr., Seventh Regimental combat team, presented the Main library with a large, beautifully executed oil seascape last week during the Fort Benning exhibit of art work by local troops. Sherman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman H. Linton of Racine, Wisc.

The exhibit contained two other smaller oils, one a seascape and the other a landscape with beautiful sunset sky colorings which reflected in the waters of the swamp country depicted.

Sherman has studied art through school and in addition has had private lessons. He graduated from Racine high school in 1946, has persued an army career since then, but will be a civilian again shortly and plans to attend Drake university, Des Moines, Iowa, where he will be an art major. His mother is a designer-dressmaker and his sister also is following artistic lines. She graduated from the Vogue School of Fashion in Chicago and is at present attending the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts.

Sherman is tall and blonde with fresh, youthful enthusiasm for his hobby, which he hopes to turn into a profession. He exhibited in Racine at the Woman's club and spent three weeks of continous work on the fine painting now hanging in the library.

Other exhibitors last week were Mrs. David E. Milotta, whose landscapes and flower paintings in oil showed talent and real professional training; Mrs. James W. Stevens, who showed four beautifully-done pastel portraits, and Muray Hill, who has a definite flair for the Grant Wood type of picture with his water colors outstanding. The Main library made a fine background for the exhibited works with its large comfortable leather chairs in pleasing color combinations of yellow, aqua, beige and brown. Miss Frances Dozier and Miss Louise White are the librarians.

STR Ladies Meet At May Luncheon

Ladies of the Student Training regiment met on May 4 at the Officers' club for their final luncheon meeting of the 1947-48 season. Mrs. J. J. Hatch was in charge of arrangements assisted by Mrs. Walter J. Murphy and Mrs. J. M. Cole, ladies of the Airborne battalion as hostesses.

The decorations carried out the May Day theme. A May pole centered the table surrounded with pansies, and at each end were pastel gladioli. Places were marked with tiny cornucopias filled with pansies and name cards were made with a pansy on each. Bridge tallies were in pastels to carry out the colors and were trimmed with May baskets.

Mrs. Irvine C. Scudder made a farewell speech for the final spring meeting. Mrs. Walter L. Wright of Tallahassee, Florida, was a guest of Mrs. F. E. Griffin.

Twenty-three ladies attended and bridge was played following the luncheon.

Court Of Awards Event Of Friday

Fort Benning Girl Scouts held their annual Court of Awards on Friday, April 30, at the Girl Scout cabin when badges and honors for the year were awarded.

Mrs. George T. Colvin, Girl Scout commissioner, made a welcoming speech at 3:30 p.m. to open festivities. Leaders, Mrs. Dayton L. Warren and Mrs. Roy E. Doran, made the presentations for girls in Troops 6 and 7, including Morine Naudts, Sharon Smith, Catherine Lou Moore, Barbara Beasley, Ellen Mifflin, Ruth Brinkley, Patsy Young, Mary Katherine Merrill, Dorothy Rodenmayer, Elizabeth Colvin, Barbara Joiner, Arlene Overton, Georgia Ann Lee and Betty Meadors.

Mrs. M. J. Mastalir presented "fly-up" pins to members of the Brownie troop, who graduated to Girl Scouts. They were Laura Green, Margaret Culp, Josette Outlaw, Judy Rodemeyer, Jean Follendore, Dorothy Shannon, Betty Lee Woodrow and Barbara Ann Bernard.

Gloria Ann Jackson and Miriam Ash received gifts for perfect attendance with only one exception, while Mary Ann Settles was honored for perfect attendance throughout the year.

Mrs. Scudder Accepts New Office With Inspiring Talk

The Fort Benning Woman's club May Breakfast, the final meeting of the year, was held in the main dining room of the Officers' club at noon Monday with the beautiful spring setting arranged by Mrs. Wallace M. Hale and members of the hospitality committee.

Minature maypoles centered the tables, and each place was marked with a corsage of spring flowers. Large baskets of flowers were arranged around the walls of the room.

Mrs. Robert B. Hill presided over the meeting. She presented Mrs. Richard Sandusky, chairman of the art and literature group, who in turn introduced Miss Mary LeBow, of Columbus, who completely won the audience with her voice. She was accompanied by Mrs. Kendrick-Kierce, of Columbus.

Mrs. Hill thanked members for their cooperation in making this an outstanding year in the history of the club's achievements. The community concert series was sponsored by the Women's club, making Fort Benning the first army post to provide its personnel with concerts of this caliber. Members assisted in the Red Cross drive, the Red Cross sewing rooms, and the sale of Christmas seals and poppies. The Women's club also sponsors the nursery school.

Mrs. Hill then presented the gavel to Mrs. Irvine C. Scudder, the new president, who gave an inspiring and challenging talk. She plans to continue the same groups in the club for the coming year, placing more emphasis on international and world affairs in the study groups. It is hoped to add a drama group to the long list of club activities.

The other new officers were then presented: Mrs. Charles Pence, first vice president, Mrs. David Schorr, second vice president, Mrs. Wallace M. Hale, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Albert C. Haley, secretary, Mrs. E. W. Duvall, treasurer, and Mrs. C. G. Simenson, auditor.

Mrs. Albert C Haley expressed the appreciation of the club to Mrs Hill for her untiring efforts, and the members gave her and the other retiring officers a rising vote of thanks.

Assassins Annex Army Track Title

Two New Records Set In 90-41 Bragg Victory

Fort Bragg's 82nd Airborne division track and field Assassins avenged their past three years losses to the Fort Benning Doughboys here last Wednesday afternoon by tacking a 90 to 41 defeat on the local cinder path delegation to cop the 1948 Third Army title.

In scoring their smashing triumph, the Assassins set two new Third Army field event records, and took first place in 10 of the agenda's 15 events.

Besting the previous record of 39 feet, six inches, the Bragg squad's William Parsley chalked up a distance of 42 feet, 3-4 inches for the shot put, and Kenneth Murphy surpassed the 12-foot, four-inch mark set last year by the Assassins' Halro Norman by hurling the discus 129 feet. The second-place winner in the disc event, Ralph Tolve of Benning, also went over Norman's mark with a distance of 12 feet, six inches.

Cundriff Wins Vault

The Doughboys got their only field event first in the pole-vaulting contest. Ellsworth Cundriff, a last-minute addition to the Benning squad, went over the uprights at 12 feet, three inches after the Assassins' Arnold Smith dropped out when the cane, pole was elevated above 12 feet.

One of the biggest dispapointments of the meet came when John Morgan, stellar Doughboy high-jumper, wrenched his knee after he, his brother, Joe, and the Assassins' Clyde Gaylord, had cleared the parallel bar at five feet, ten inches. During the preliminaries here last week, Morgan went over at six feet, two inches. The decision of the officials was that each contestant be given three points in the event.

The Assassins climaxed their field participation with grand-slam triumphs in the javelin event, Leroy Mitchell hurled the object 178 feet, and Robert Ross' leap of 21 feet, 11 1-2 inches accounted for Bragg's first in the broad jump contest.

Beyuka Shines

While Bragg's best showing was made in the field classics, the Doughboy squad, paced by by Ed Beyuka, stood out in the endurance races by taking firsts in the mile and two-mile runs, and the 440-yard dash.

Representing the Doughs in both the mile and two-mile contests, Beyuka finished the mile in a time of 4:45.2, and completed the two-mile stretch in 10:33-2. The 440-yard sprint was won by Douglas Lee of the Benningites, who chalked up a time of 52.5 seconds.

The only long-distance contest won by the Assassins was the 880-yard run, in which Dewey McGowan made the two laps in a time of 2:08.5.

Presentations Made

Bragg's team captain, James Law, was the whole works in the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes. He recorded a time of 9.9 seconds for the 100-yard race, and sped through the 220-yard contest in 22. seconds. He also ran the third lap of the mile relay, which the Assassins won with a time of 3:32.5.

First places in both hurdles races also went to the Bragg tracksters. Robert Reynolds completed the 120-yard, high-barrier event in 17 seconds, and Robert Hart won the low-hurdle contest by finishing the 220-yard course in 26.2 seconds.

Following the tourney, team and individual awards were presented by Col. Onto P. Bragan, post special services officer, who was assisted by Capt. James Williams, Third Army athletic officer.

In lieu of a trophy, the championship Fort Bragg team was presented with a certificate pending arrival of a new 20-year historical plaque being made up for yearly presentation to Third Army champions. The new award was initiated this year in view of the fact that the Fort Benning team won permanent possession of the former trophy last year by making it three in a row over teams of the Third Army area.

Gold, silver, and bronze medals were awarded first, second and third place individuals in each event of the tournament.

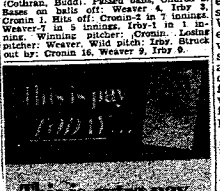
Silcox Pitches Three-Hit Win For ISD Profs

Winning their 10th straight game, the Infantry School detachment Profs blanked the Medics of the 3440th Army Service unit Sunday afternoon behind the three-hit pitching of right-handed ace Ike Silcox.

However, the Profs had their share of trouble in hitting Arthur Botjer, Medic twirler, as the powerful ISD nine collected only six blows in accumulating its 14 tallies. Nine walks off Botjer, and five Medic misplays helped the Prof cause.

In addition to his mound performance during which he struck out 11 Medic batters Silcox contributed to the ISD hitting by banging out a triple which brought in two tallies during the Prof half of the third.

Joe Smith reached first on an error to start a three-run second stanza for the Profs. Walks to Woody Burt and Bill Brooks filled the bags for the ISD nine with only one away. Smith then scored when John Seymour lifted a high one to center, and Burt came in when Silcox reached first on an error. The third tally was scored when Brooks raced for home when one of Botjer's pitches got by Catcher Griffin.



The Profs had their biggest inning in the third, when three bingles netted them six counters.

Included in the six-run spree was a two-bagger by Seymour, and Solcox's triple.

Bunching three hits with a series of walks and Medic miscues, of the sixth. A triple to left by the ISD aggregation wound up five more times n the last half its offensive attack by scoring Blondie Burnett with the sacks full was the highlight of the inning.

Two pretty girls were walking down the street. Two young soldiers whistled at them.

"The nerve of them," said one of the damsels, "whistling at us two days before pay day."

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Affee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Most of the noteworthy individual achievements in the Fort Benning intra-mural league this year have been recorded by pitchers—most of them members of the loop-leading Infantry School detachment Profs. However, Stan Letonsky, slugging first base-man with the third-place 328th Ordnance battalion team, completely stole the limelight in last week's circuit activity with his spectacular feats at the plate.

During the past week, big Stan has had 13 official trips to the batters' box, and has clouted nine safeties, six of which went for extra bases. In two tilts, the power-hitting infielder rapped in eight Ordnance tallies.

By getting four doubles, a triple, and a 400-foot homerun during the last week, Letonskyy grabbed the league lead for extra base hits, two-baggers, and runs batted in. At present, he is hitting at a .460 clip, which places him well among the circuit's ten leading batters.

And, Stan is far from a slouch in the fielding department. He started the season with the Ordnance as an outfielder, but, due to a weak throwing arm, was moved to the first sack after the first two tilts of the season. There, he has handled 18 chances without error, and has figured in on one of the few double plays of the 1948 campaign.

In winning the Kentucky Derby last Saturday afternoon, Citation proved he is capable of going on and on regardless of the footing, but horsemen, in their post-race gatherings, hesitated in biling him as another Man o' War or Whirlaway.

Citation's last quarter in the race was :27 2-5, while Whirlaway ran the final fourth in :24. However, Citation was in a position to coast in this year's Derby, whereas, in the 1941 classic, Whirlaway had to push up from behind to win 2:01 2-5. Citation's time over the slow track Saturday was 2:05 2-5.

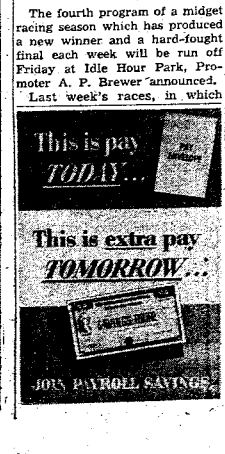
With both Citation and his stablemate Coaltown tentatively scheduled to run in the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, the other races comprising the "big three" for three-year-olds, the Calumet farms' chances of annexing the coveted triple crown this year are pretty good.

Should Citation go on to win the other two classics comprising the triple crown, he will be the eighth horse to win all three races since the Derby's inception in 1875. And, Eddie Arcaro, who rode Whirlaway to the trio of triumphs in 1941, will be the first jockey in history to push two triple-crown winners across the finish line.

After six years of sporting various shades and models of army toggery, Uncle Sam has decided that it's about time for me to supplement my endeavors on the typewriter with some knowledge of "shootin' irons," and this week marked the start of my rifle training.

During the first day, Idoubtless made an abundance of errors, some of which went unnoticed, but the majority of which were called to my attention in short order.

One of the most unpardonable faults of which I was guilty during the initial day of training was remarking that I had never bad a gun in my hands before. At the time I made this comment, a burly sergeant within earshot whirled and retorted that I still didn't have a gun in my hands.



Now, this fellow undoubtedly was more schooled in the art of firing than me, but the object which I was holding was either a gun or the spitting image of one. A few minutes later, I discovered that the object I held was either a piece, a rifle, or a weapon, but---never a gun.

Anyway, I'll wager that in a couple of weeks, I'll be able to shoot a piece, a rifle, a weapon, and a gun.

Blalock, Reed To Clash In Midget Races Friday

The fourth program of a midget racing season which has produced a new winner and a hard-fought final each week will be run off Friday at Idle Hour Park, Promoter A. P. Brewer announced.

Last week's races, in which the first dead heat in track history was recorded, was marked by spin-outs in every event and a four-car collision in the final feature.

Hank Blalock, last week's winner, is tied up even with Jimmy Reed, winner of the Inaugural, and the two hard-driving speedsters will be after new honors this week.

Eleven cars showed for Friday's program with No. 32 being driven for the first time by Cal Downing, a well-known local motorcycle rider. Downing failed to demonstrate his ability on four wheels, breaking an axle during time trials.

The crowd last week was larger than on the preceding week, and the races were run off with greater speed.

Friday's program will consist of seven events, beginning with time trials at 7:30 p.m., and heat racing starting at 8:30 p.m.

PHILLIPS RETURNS

S-Sgt. Bramwell G. Phillips, Company D, Airborne battalion, has returned to Fort Benning following gone week's recruiting duty in Jacksonville, Fla.

BENNING'S DAN ALLEN KAYOES MACON RIVAL

Nailing his opponent with a rapid body punch, Fort Benning's Dan Allen kayoed Gus Aldridge of Macon, Ga., in the fourth round of their scheduled 10-round welterwieght bout at Memorial stadium Monday night.

Allen waded into Aldridge from the opening gong, and kept up the steady flurry of blows until the Macon lad fell to the canvas in the fourth round to take the 10 count.

The Allen-Aldridge go, witnessed by just a handful of fans, topped the outdoor boxing card at the stadium. It was the first of a series of cards planned this summer in Columbus.

Allen had Aldridge down several times in the third, following a fast second round which saw the Macon leather-pusher groggy and bleary-eyed from continuous left hooks. The Fort Benning fighter continued the assault in the fourth round, knocking Aldridge to the canvas several times before the final blow came.

In the other bouts Bobby Morton, of Houston, Texas, decisioned David Ingram, of Columbus, in the opening four-rounder; Johnny Jones, Birmingham, Ala., kayoed Battling Norris, of Atlanta; and Johnny Wilder of Mercer university had little trouble in putting to sleep Red Parks, of Macon, in the third round of a slated six-round melee.

WARD CARDS HOLE-IN-ONE

The newest addition to the officers' golf club hole-in-one society is Col. Frank Ward, who chalked up the first ace of 1948 last Wednesday on the fourth hole of the local course.

Using a No. 8 iron, Col. Ward stroked a shot which lit on the front apron of the green, and rolled straight in the cup.

Among prizes awarded the colonel for his accomplishment were a certificate from Walter Hagen and 100 boxes of cereal.

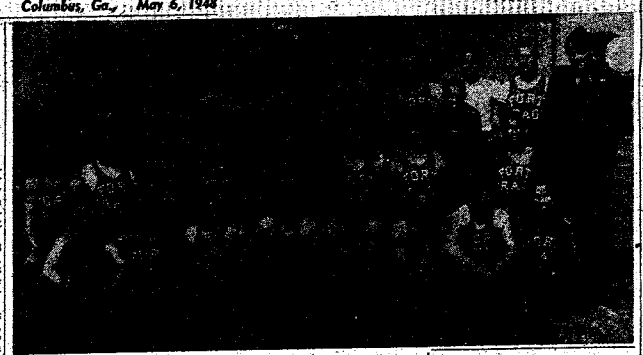
Truckers Edge Lawson Flyers In Extra Inning



The Lawson field Flyers barely missed moving out of their non-victorious slot Wednesday afternoon when it took the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers an extra inning to eke out a 9 to 8 decision at Gowdy field.

On the trailing end of a 6 to 3 count going into the final inning, the Flyers rolled up four scores to take a one-run margin as Pete Hargett popped out to the Trucker shortstop to end the rally.

The Truckers' tying run was scored when Emerson Studevan, with two outs, drove a single into right to score second-baseman Wills, who had led off with a single, stole second, and went to third on a passed ball by Flyer catcher Cox.

Pitcher Dan English of the Flyers romped across the plate with a tie-breaking run in Lawson's half of the eighth, but the Truckers combined a triple and two one-baggers in their half of the inning to ice the game.

During Lawson field's four-run seventh stanza, shortstop Max Sierer slammed a four-bagger over the center-fielder's head with two runners on the bags.

Weather Team Wins Pin Meet

Scoring a total of 43 out of 60 points, the 104th Weather Squadron detachment captured the Lawson Air Force base round robin bowling tournament sponsored by the base officers' bowling league recently.

Six teams battled in the meet, which got under way in January. Lt. Edwin McDonald, of the S-3 team, copped the single game high score with a 260, while Capt. Walter Gonske, of the championship Weather team, nailed down the individual high score for the series with a total of 720 pins.

Academy Officers See TIS Sections

Six officers from the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., were one-day visitors at Fort Benning last Thursday, stopping here on their return to Washington from Tyndall Air Force base, Fla.

TROOPERS STAGE SPREE TO SPANK STUDENTS

After putting up an almost air-tight defense for five innings, the Student Training regiment diamondmen committed a string of misplays which gave the Airborne battalion five tallies in the sixth inning, and an 8 to 2 league victory at Gowdy field last Wednesday afternoon, April 28.

Bob Cronin, young parachutist right-hander, won his third victory of the season by limiting the students to two bingles. He notched 16 strikeouts to run his total for the year to 43. Cronin has yet to lose a game in the 1948 campaign, and is one of three loop twirlers with a no-hitter to his credit.

In addition to an outstanding mound performance, Cronin chalked up the longest hit of Wednesday's game, a triple which drove in one of the Troopers' three earned runs.

The STR hurler, Willie Weaver, was relieved by Phillip Irby to start the sixth after he had given up seven safeties. Weaver also stood out in the strikeout department, chalking up nine whiffs in his five-inning performance.

The students started the game's scoring by hanging up a tally in the opening half of the first, but the 'chutists came back' in their half of the stanzza to push a run across the platter.

After the Airborne lads had counted again in the bottom of the fourth, the STR knotted the score with a lone run in the first of the fifth. The Airborne team took a 3 to 2 lead by scoring again in the last of the fifth, and, after holding the STR aggregation scoreless in the top of the sixth, came through in the home half of the inning to cross the plate five times.

Waiter: "That blonde just behind you, Sir."

Weapons Section Defeats Group C

Hanging up their second victory of the season, the weapons section softballers defeated the Group C Tactics aggregation 9-4 in a fray played last week.

Tallying three markers in the third frame, the winners took a sox-run lead to ice the tilt. The winners added three more in the sixth, while Group C tallied twice in the fifth and two more in the seventh to account for its total.

Several little delinquents were loitering outside one of the Broadway movie places, scheming a plan to get in without paying admission. Finally a bright-eyed youngster edged away from the group and half-way in the theater before the strong-armed ticket taker snatched him back, "Where d'ya thing you're goin'?"

WITH GREATEST OF EASE—The Doughboys' new Third Army pole vaulting champion, Ellsworth Cundriff, goes over at 12 feet, three inches with the greatest of ease. Cundriff, a late entry for the Doughs, copped the first place in the tournament with this leap last Wednesday when Arnold Smith of the Fort Bragg Assassins made three unsuccessful attempts at the 12-foot, three-inch height.

After Rufe Toomer's marriage to Louella Parsnip, they asked him if he felt something cold going up and down his back when he said, "I do."

"No," he said, "Her old man held the gun pretty steady."

Ordnance Bats Outslug Medics

Letonsky, Glover, Wyatt Star in 20-Blow Attack

Continuing a torrid batting pace, the 328th Ordance battalion diamond squad won its third straight league tilt at Gowdy field Thursday night by trouncing the Medics of the 3440th Army Service unit 20 to 8.

The triumph gave the flame pot lads an undisputed claim to the circuit's No. 3 berth.

Pitcher Arthur Botjer of the Medics ran into trouble early in the game when the Ordnance picked up a six-run margin by scoring seven runs in the last of the first, and was driven from the box when the host team scored three more tallies in the second.

Lewis Pounded

Robert Lewis took over mound chores for the Medics in the third, but was unable to hold the Ordnance stick delegation scoreless until he blanked them in their final plate appearance. During his turn on the hill, Lewis gave the 328th lads 11 of their 20 hits.

Starting the twirling for the Ordnance aggregation, John Guth ran into a touch of wildness in the first two innings, and after giving up four runs, relinquished the rubber to Andy Boland, ace right-hander of the flame pot team.

Botjer and Lewis became the latest additions to the ranks of twirlers who have been unable to figure out the plate weakness of big Stan Letonsky, slugging Ordnance first-sacker. During the tilt, he banged out two doubles and a pair of singles to drive in four runs. His achievements during the past three contests have put Letonsky at the head of the list on doubles as well as extra-base blows.

Goode Homers

Sharing batting laurels for the tilt with Letonsky were Bob Glover and Hank Wyatt, each collecting four safeties in five appearances.

Ed "Omar" Goode, hard-hitting 328th catcher, got the second out-of-the-park homerun for the Ordnance lads in as many games. His drive over the left-field fence came in the third stanza with one mate on the bags.

Shortstop Otto Loreesh clouted a four-bagger for the Medics in the first half of the sixth when the quadrangle was empty. His blow cleared the center-fielder's head, and rolled to the base of fence 425 feet away from the plate.

Jacksonville Links Squad Beaten Here

Benning Takes Seven Matches

Despite a defeat of its No. 1 team, the links delegation of the Fort Benning Officers' golf club won a smashing 53 1-4 to 18 1-2 triumph over the Jacksonville Naval Air station squad on the post layout last Saturday afternoon.

Representing Fort Benning in the first team match Lt. Col. W. R. Cole and Lt. Col. C. W. Davis took only one out of a possible nine points from Chief Joe McDonald, inter - service links champ, and Coach Jack Harvey of the Flyers.

The only other victory of the match for the Jacksonville delegation was a 7 1-2 to 1 1-2 win by William Whistler and E. Scott over Maj. A. J. Hoebeke and Lt. Col. Matt C. Bristol.

Other 9 to 0 matches were won for Benning by Col. Frank Ward and Col. Fay Ross, who downed A. L Berg and F. Lewis and Maj. J. M. Browning and Capt. C. B. Carroll, who swamped R. W. Mullane and T. Baranski.

Offsetting the post's loss in the first two matches, Maj. Mills Brown and Maj. James M. Hungate teamed to win an 8 to 1 triumph over R. N. Theil and R. A. Jackson of the Flyers.

The fifth match of the day saw the Benningites win another 8 to 1 decision when Maj. W. H. Wikoff and Col. W. Lewis outshot Jacksonville's B. M. Jones and H. H. Bush.

Also getting an 8 to 1 triumph for the host representation, Lt. Col. E. P. Eschenburg and Capt. Nelson Lindstrand turned back the Flyer team of R. W. Faller and D. Clark.

The Nassau scoring system, under which a total of 81 team points are possible, was used in tallying the meet.

Seven-Year Vet Heads Medical Collecting Unit

A veteran of seven years in the Army Medical Corps, Capt. Robert W. Chambers now heads the 375th Medical Collecting company of the 30th Medical group.

A native of Clinton, Ill., Captain Chambers entered the service in February, 1941, at Fort Sheridan, Ill. Sent to the Presidio at San Francisco to join the 30th Infantry regiment for basic training, he transferred to the 32nd Infantry regiment of the Seventh division at Fort Ord, Calif., for duty with the medical detachment.

He served in New Guinea from January, 1944, until June, 1945, when he was transferred to the Philippines, where he was on duty for approximately five months before returning to the states.

The 375th Collecting company commander re-entered the drug business following his separation in January, 1946, but was ordered back to active duty in September, 1946. Prior to his arrival at Fort Benning in March of this year, he was assigned to the 121st Evacuation hospital at Camp Polk, La.

The 375th, which Captain Chambers heads, was organized at Fort Benning in March, 1946. In May the unit started basic training, and began to provide ambulance service for the 25th Combat team dispensary.

The unit became a part of the 30th Medical group in February, 1947, in the Harmony Church area. At present it provides ambulance service for Infantry School problems.

ORDNANCE BATTERS BOMBARD ASU TEAM

Letonsky, Glover, Wyatt Star in 20-Blow Attack

Stick wielders of the 228th Ordnance battalion went all out at Gowdy field last Tuesday night, and rapped out a decisive 12 to 4 triumph over the 3440th Army Service unit to move up a rung on the post loop ladder as the second round of the circuit's first half got underway.

Stan Letonsky, towering Ordnance first-sacker, was the big gun in the flame pot lads' attack, slamming out a single, double, and a three-run homer in five plate appearances.

All of the 3440th's tallies came in the second inning as Andy Boland, Ordnance right-hander, cattered 12 hits where they could inflict the least damage. David Waits, ASU second-baseman, collected three singles in four trips to lead the hitting for the losers.

Harrison ran into trouble in the top half of the opening frame when he gave up five runs on a quintet of Ordnance safeties. Widening their margin in the second, the Ordnance lads trotted in four more tallies, two of them the result of a two-run, inside the park four-bagger by Left-fielder Bob Glover.

The ASU made a mild threat to the Ordnance's nine-run lead in the last of the second when they bunched six bingles to net four runs. The rally ended when George Thrailkill bounced out from third to first.

The Ordnancemen chalked up their final three counters in the initial phase of the seventh when Letonsky, with two mates on the bags, picked off one of Harrison's offerings, and smashed a 400-foot line-drive homerun over the left-centerfield fence.

Eleven of the 12 Ordnance runs were deserved while all four of the ASU counters were earned off Boland.

Behind the two-hit pitching of Russ Sanders, the Lawson Flyers broke the losing streak that has been plaguing them all season by beating St. Josephs, of Holy Trinity, Ala., 9-1.

For the first time this year the Flyers played errorless ball and had no trouble with the St. Jo club which previously had handed the Lawsonites a terrific shellacing.

Sparking the Flyers' attack at the plate was Max Seirer, who blasted a long triple through left center to score Hamel from third base. From that point in the ball game the local boys had the contest in the proverbial bag.

Totals for the game showed the Flyers with three runs, nine hits and no errors, and for St. Jo, one run, two hits and two errors.

Bayonet Staffer Caught, Accused Of 'Spying' By 'Friendly' Forces

BY JIM QUINN

To be captured by the enemy is a crushing blow to any soldier's pride, but to be captured as a spy by your own forces, is reaching a new low in morale—take it from one who knows.

The 325th Regimental combat team plunged into 'Operation California' with an esprit de corps seldom equalled by troops on maneuvers. If they maintain the same spirit during 'Operation Assembly' in the Kentucky wilderness the opposing force hasn't got a chance.

—my face is still a cherry red from the rude awakening I received that the 325th takes this maneuver business pretty seriously.

In the dual capacity of reporter and photographer, I was driven some 25 miles into a back woods section of Fort Benning in pursuit of the 325th RCT on maneuvers. My driver and I cussed the rough roads and the clouds of dust we raised in passing, and thought of innumerable other places we'd rather be.

A blizzard of white dust, wind driven along the narrow, winding dirt roads engulfed the once fresh green of the Georgia country-side and entombed the area in a shroud of gray. We came upon ghostly processions of men and vehicles moving through the fog of dust. There was just a muffled roar of straining motors—half-seen files of men—nothing more. We had reached the maneuver area and it didn't seem real.

The troops were moving against the aggressor force somewhere ahead. The enemy was wily and has forshaken the roads for the kets, and our troops had disappeared into the Georgia jungle.

The front is anywhere the enemy is found. Individual squads and scouting parties may suddenly charge out of the woods.—We knew this to be so, for we passed one such group a short while back. Fortunately for us, they had been captured by alert counter-patrols and were being held by grom kuards by the side of the dust obsecured road. They were still defiant as we left our carrto photograph them.

But our job was not concerned with a handful of Aggressors—we were out to photograph our men.

After traveling at a snal's pace because of the dust, we became aware that we were lost. Rather than retrace our route, we decided to continue until we found some of our forces who could direct us to our destination. A little later we found them—or rather, they found us.

Several armed figures appeared out of the dust in the road before us. Stepping out of the car, I walked forward.

"Hi!" I said in a friendly voice.

The man advanced silently, and formed a ring around me, while two approached the car with their weapons held in an unfriendly attitude. One of the men a staff sergeant, elected himself spokesman.

"What are you doing here?" he asked flatly.

"Looking for the boys. I want to take their picture, I'm a photographer."

If I had told him I was a Chinese laundry man he couldn't have reacted more unfavorably.

"Photographer? What boys do you want to take a picture of—us?" The ring closed a bit tighter around me.

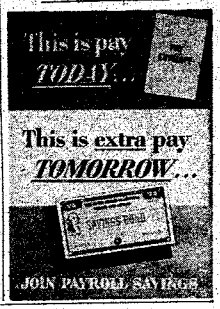
It was then I realized I was on "the spot". "Yeah," I said, "I'll take a picture of the group."

"Let's get back to 'the boys' you want to take a picture of—what 'boys' are they?"

"Just 'the boys', I said, and felt awfully stupid.

That did it. With expressionless faces the men fired question after question at me—none of which I could answer intelligently. I began to realize that, actually, I didn't know what I was doing out in this no-man's land. I just wanted to take pictures, and they wouldn't believe one man could be so ignorant. I showed them my special photographer's pass. It was era, and they stared at it, and outdated. I showed them my camme with blank faces.

Finally the staff sergeant escorted me to the car.



"You," he said; "go that way."

—Back the way I came.

In actual war I suppose I would have been summarily shot for a spy. But, even though they may have tempted, they let me go, believing, no doubt, that anyone as utterly stupid would be of more harm to whatever organization sent me out than $ would be to them.

"Phew!" my driver said, "They sure looked tough."

When I looked back, all I could see was a dense cloud of dust.

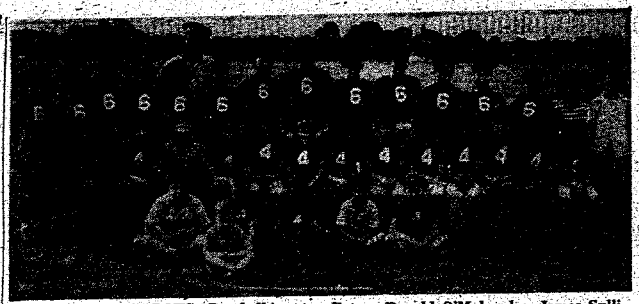
USAFI Courses Called Educational Inspiration

Vocational courses offered through USAFI not only keep a soldier on his toes in his studies, but also tend to inspire educational progress in the individual, according to Pfc. John J. Foreman, Service company, Student Training regiment, who has become quite an ardent student in his spare time.

A garage worker in his home town of Paducah, Ky., prior to his army enlistment, Foreman immediately saw the advantages offered by USAFI, and since he began taking basic radio last September has been hard at his studying since.

Foreman keeps busy all day long. At the first opportunity he drags out his books to brush up on his learning and if he tires of the rigors of studying, he takes out his alto saxophone or clarinet and practices a few tunes.

He first attended the vocational night school here last September and since then he has taken typing, algerbra and music with various instruments. Now he is enrolled in the auto mechanics course and elementary photography.



PFC. JOHN J. FOREMAN
USAFI advocate

The Service company soldier arrived at Fort Benning in December, 1946, being assigned to the 25th Infantry from Camp Stoneman, Calif., where he landed after returning from overseas.

With the opportunity for education at the beck and call of all military personnel, Foreman is one soldier who doesn't let any of these opportunities slip by. He doesn't put away those books of studies he has completed, he continues with brief daily brushing up, of each subject, including his saxophone and clarinet.

Here is one soldier who has found something to do in his liesure time. He's mighty sure it's going to pay off.

Eleven Prospective Attaches See Latest Infantry Tactics

Eleven prospective military attaches will wind up their four-day tour of the Infantry Center this morning with the firing of small arms weapons at Hook Range, and are scheduled to depart this afternoon for Fort Bragg, N. C.

COL ROY E. LINDQUIST
. . goes to Greece

During their visit here the prospective attaches have gone through an orientation study in preparation for assignments to the foreign embassies. They arrived last Sunday, and began their tour of the post Monday.

After conferring with Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shephard, assistant Infantry School commandant Monday morning the officers visited the coordinator of training, and attended an Infantry School class in the organization of the infantry regiment and division. Demonstrations of and instruction in infantry signal and sound location equipment was on the afternoon itinerary.

Tuesday morning the visitors were oriented on Task Forces William and Frigid, later viewing the latest trends of developments in vehicles and tanks. The afternoon was spent at Army Field Forces board No. 3, where the latest developments in equipment and its use were displayed, and Tuesday evening the group attended a night vision problem.

Following a demonstration of standard infantry weapons, this morning the officers will fire small arms in the climax of their orientation visit.

ENTERS FIFTH WEEK

Class 15A of the Airborne battalion's Company C entered its fifth week of training here last Monday, it has been announced.

Local Airborne Head Scheduled For Greek Post

Col. Roy E. Lindquist, president of the Airborne Requirements board and head of the Youth council, has been alerted for transfer to Greece, and is expected to leave Fort Benning in late June, it was announced this week.

Active in Fort Benning activities since his return from overseas in March, 1946, Colonel Lindquist was chosen to head the Youth council upon its organization a few months ago.

While an instructor and member of the Infantry board, he drafted Field Manual 22-5, better known as Infantry Drill Regulations. He also wrote Field Manual 23-5, the "bible" of the M-1 rifle, and regulations of formal guard mount.

Formerly assistant commandant of the Airborne School, Colonel Lindquist volunteered for the airborne during its infancy, and qualified as a jumper with the 501st Parachute regiment when it was activated here. He left the 501st in the spring of 1941 to become S-1 of the Provisional Parachute group, and later became G-1 of the Airborne Command at Fort Bragg, N. C.

When the 508th Parachute Infantry regiment was activated in 1942, Colonel Lindquist was named commanding officer, later leading the "Red Devils" from maneuvers in the Carolinas and Tennessee through Normandy, Holland and Belgium under the colors of the 82nd Airborne division.

An ardent sports enthusiast, he was captain of the ice hockey

Board Processes 26 Applications For W-O Grade

The warrant officer screening center established here last week has processed 26 out of a total of 315 applications received up to last Friday, it was revealed today.

The local board, which added six more members this week, plans to process at least 20 men daily, or 100 each week, with the program expected to take approximately three months.

Applications are forwarded to the local screening center by Third Army, and each applicant is notified to report here for processing and screening by the interviewing board. Each applicant will be notified by the Department of the Army or the Department of the Air Force regarding the results of the findings of the local board.

The interviewing board here, one of many being established at military installations, will process personnel from Fort Benning and surrounding territory who apply for the grade of warrant officer.

Added to the board last week, were Lt. Col. Charles Woodruf, Lt. Col. William A. Luther, Lt. Col. John R. Wright, Jr., Maj. Edwin A. Gehm, Maj. Hutson C. Stanton and Capt. Richard McClure. Other board members include Lt. Col. Martin H. Burckes, president, Maj. Carl H. Cosby, Maj. Thomas J. Gendron, Capt. Jack G. Null, Capt. Charles H. Burgess and Lt. Ravnel V. Burgamey.

All except the necessary duties will be suspended, according to the announcement, and both military and civilian personnel will be excused from work.

A special memorial program has been planned, officials said. The garrison flag will fly at half staff from reveille until noon, and the 72nd Army band

MID-WAY THIRD WEEK

The Airborne battalion's class B-16A is now mid-way its third week of training, officials have announced.

LT. COL. RALPH A. TOLVE

Col. R. A. Tolve Assigned Duty In New Mexico

Lt. Col. Ralph A Tolve, Infantry Center provost marshal, is scheduled to leave Fort Benning soon for Sandria Air Force base, N. M., where he will assume duties as provost marshal.

Colonel Tolve was called to active duty in September, 1940, and came to Fort Benning immediately. Following the outbreak of World War II in 1941 he was appointed provost marshal, serving in that capacity until December, 1942, when he went to Italy with Task Force A under Gen. George S. Patten, Jr.

He returned to Fort Benning in June, 1945, to resume his duties as provost marshal for a brief period prior to going back to Italy where he was appointed provost marshal at Naples. He later served as provost marshal at the Peninsula Base section, again returning to Fort Benning in August, 1946.

A graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., Colonel Tolve was active in athletics while at the Alabama College. He played three years of football, starred in track, and was southern collegiate boxing champion in 1924.

While at Fort Benning, the colonel won recognition as a pistolman, at one time captaining the Fort Benning pistol team. He also participated in the National Pistol and Rifle matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

A member of the Georgia Bar association, he was a lieutenant in the Georgia State Patrol before being called to active duty. He toured Europe in 1927, studying the French and Italian languages.

DOUBLE APPEAL--Since undergoing remodel-has been attracting an increasing number of ing and rearranging; the Main Post Exchange prospective purchasehs. Here two of them, Sgt. Benning Savings Bond Purchases At $24,00

Fort Benning military and civilian personnel purchased a total of $23,743 worth of United States Savings Bonds through the payroll savings plan during the month of April, with a vast increase expected in the concerted "Security Loan" drive which got under way here April 15, it has been revealed.

Preliminary reports for the month of May indicate a great boost in the bonds purchased through payroll savings and cash purchases.

A breakdown in the April figures show military personnel purchasing a total of $16,792.50 through payroll deductions and $3,028.25 in cash purchases. The civilian payroll savings total amounted to $6,952.50, with no cash purchases recorded for the month of April. All these figures will show a noticeable increase when the May report is recorded, according to officials.

Figures released reveal that six percent of the total eligible enlisted men secured $11,374.50 worth of bonds via payroll deductions in April, plus $684.50 in cash purchases, for an enlisted men's total of $12,059. Eight per cent of the total officers eligible bought procured bonds amounting to $5,418 through pay roll savings, and $2,343.75 in cash, totaling $7,761.75. Among the civilians on the post, 18 per cent have obtained bonds for the month of April.

Under the chairmanship of Lt. Col. Wesley U. Moran, Fort Benning is conducting a local drive between April 15 and June 30 in conjunction with the nation-wide United States Savings Bond campaign "Security Loan," wich has the dual purpose of strengthening national economic security savings, and obtaining relief from current inflationary pressure.

No dollar quotas have been set for Fort Benning.

Following are the savings representatives and their respective activities:

Exchanges Adopt Face-Lifting Plan

Something new has been added to Fort Benning's Main Post Exchange! Dressed up with a "new look" it has taken on the appearance of a downtown department store, complete with modern merchandise arrangement and display decorativeness.

Conforming to a new Third Army policy of modernization and improvement of exchanges, the Fort Benning exchange has the jump on other exchanges in the area since it was the first to adopt the policy of all-out beautification.

What has been done at the Main exchange will be carried out at the other exchanges on the reservation, officials announced. A total of 24 exchanges serve military personnel here with all the necessary items.

The new program calls for more modern and up-to-date exchanges, with an attempt to get away from the usual blank appearance. The Main exchange has become a complete department store, handling everything from the small necessary articles to sports wear and hardware supplies. All show cases and counters are dressed-up with display material used to give the merchandise a new shopper's appeal.

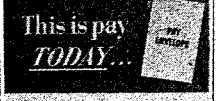
The Main exchange, largest of the local group, is managed by Grady L. Myrick, assisted by Hoyt Stubbs. Mrs. Harriet Weeks manages the Craft Shop, which carries a complete line of gift items for all occasions.

It was also revealed that within two weeks, the exchange will open its golf driving range, located between Carpenter and Ingersoll streets. The range has been prepared with the most modern equipment available, officials said.

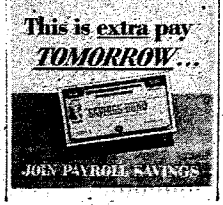
Under the direction of the exchange officer, Lt. Col. Clayton M. Ela, plans are being made for complete remodeling and rearranging of the other post exchanges. George J. Geiger, who recently joined the Fort Benning exchange as general manager, will assist Colonel Ela.

W. B. Bufkin, director of procurement and merchandising, is charged with the responsibility of carrying out this program.

Training Units Beautify Area



In a program to beautify the regimental area, the Student Training regiment has begun transplanting shrubbery and planting flowers around the grounds.



Headquarters and Headquarters company has placed chairs and tables on their lawns, while Service company has created a rock garden pattern in white for flower beds.

Surrounding Service company buildings, the flower beds have been ornamented with trellises around the front entrance to the company area.

The regimental headquarters area has also experienced a face lifting with new shrubs placed about the grounds and the regimental parking area.

Kentucky Battle Raging As Army Fights 'Enemy'

The "battle" is on as 30,000 troops jockey for positions in the joint Third Army-Ninth Air Force "Exercise Assembly," the largest training operation in the United States since World War II, which commenced last Saturday at Camp Campbell, Ky.

Grim parachutists and their supply-packed gliders dropped from the sky Saturday to rescue a surrounded force of U. S. soldiers cut off from the rest of the nation by a band of barbaric guerillas of an "enemy" maneuver force.

The guerilla force, commanded by Guerilla leader Sam Sloan, emerged from out of somewhere in the wooded, gullied vastness of the Kentucky-Tennessee border early last week. Re-enforced by the local fifth columnists, this band has confiscated guns, ammunition, trucks, jeeps, food—everything needed for a modern combat oranization.

Fort Benning troops, including the 325th regimental combat team and supporting units who left here last Saturday, are participating in the maneuver which will continue for approximately 30 days.

Although it is a "game" for the military, it is a "game" that will train U. S. soldiers and airmen how to handle themselves and their equipment under simulated combat conditions. The actual movement of a task force to asgelected area will be praticed as if the emergency really existed.

The 30,000 troops involved represent army (and air force units stationed at camps and bases from coast to coast. All are under the command of Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., commanding general of the Third Army.

The rescuing airborne group, known as "Task Force Lucky", is commanded by Maj. Gen. Leroy Irwin. This striking force is made up of elements of V Corps, the 82nd Airborne division and the Ninth Air Forge.

Lodger: "Without paying you! Never!"

PASS IN REVIEW--M-Sgt. Paul Kellam, student battalion commander, reviews the troops of Non-commissioned Officers class Nos. 3 and 4 as they pass in review during their parade at French feld last week. Enlisted men from all parts of the country, and members of the National Guard and Organized Reserve corps participated in the parade. Following completion of their course here, the NCOs will return to their respective units.

ADVENTURE IN THE AIR ATTRACTS BENNINGITES

Not since the Airborne Flying School at Dekker strip closed last spring has adventure in the skies beckoned more seductively than now to Fort Benning pilots and would-be-pilots.

Warm weather, long days and two first-rate flying schools in Columbus are producing a crop of flight certificates which are a credit to an air-minded army.

Rosters at the airport form a cross-section of the post. Among those military men and women who are taking to the air are Lt. Col. W. H. Blakefield of the Tactical section, who has recently soloed; Maj. Edmund L. Mueller, Third company, Student Training regiment, who has attained his private license and is working on a commercial course; Capt. Mary Shindlebower of the Station hospital, who has successfully completed her flying course; and S-Sgt. George E. Phlug, Airborne battalion, now taking a commercial flying course.

Others include Sgt. Clifford W. Rhoden, Airborne battalion, working on his private diploma; Sgt. Warren C. Carsten, Airborne battalion, who is well on his way toward acquiring a commercial license; Maj. William D. Wize, Weapons section; Capt. Ray B. Quinn, Infantry School detachment; Pvt. Arthur Sheffield, Lawson Air Force base; and Cpl. Emanuel W. Rother, Company H, Infantry School detachment.

Planes available for flight instructions are the Piper cub, Piper PA-11, Aeronca Champion, Luscombe Silvaire, Taylorcraft, Piper Super Cruised, Culver Cadet, Stcerman, Howard and the BT-13 (Vultee).

Both Jack King of King's School of Aviation and Julius M. Allen, of the Allen Flying Service believe that those who are training today will form the nucleus of the air patrols of tomorrow in case of another national emergency. The more "air-minded" the general public is, the better prepared it will be to face a new team at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., and coach of Fort Benning's baseball team during his duty at the Infantry School.

STR Enlisted Men Get Graduation Certificates

Colonel Lindquist first came to Fort Benning as a student in 1937. Later he was assigned to the 29th Infantry regiment. He also was on special duty with the Infantry board, subsequently becoming an instructor at the Infantry School.

Upon his return from Europe, he attended the Command and General Staff college at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., coming to Fort Benning upon his graduation in March, 1946.

4 Post Officers Judge Tuskegee Institute's ROTC

Four Fort Benning officers were among the board of judges that reviewed the ceremony during ROTC Day at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., April 29.

They were Capt. Julian E. Miles and Capt. Edward Waddy, 204th Transportation Truck battalion; Lt. John Suggs, 665th Transportation Truck Company, and Lt. Crawford Russell, 666th Truck company.

The board judged a squad drill, platoon, and individual competition to determine the best drilled cadet. The cadets displayed neat precision and appearance in their competitive drills, according to reports received here.

Highlighting the day's schedule of events was the presentation of awards. Scholarship awards, marksmanship, company and band were among the awards presented. A battalion parade late in the afternoon climaxed the day's activities.

ROTC Day is an annual event at Tuskegee Institute, dating back to the early history of the institution. Prior to the establishment of a senior ROTC unit, the demonstrations were called competitive drills.

They arrived at the fifth inning.

"What's the score, Jim?" he asked a fan.

"Nothing to nothing," was the fast reply.

"Oh, goody!" she exclaimed. "We haven't missed a thing.

'I Am An American Day'

The President has designated Sunday, May 16, as "I Am An American Day," a day set aside for stressing the worth and meaning of American citizenship. A day on which we Americans can offer thanks for the great heritage which is ours. A day on which we can marvel at the stature we have attained in the short span of a few hundred years.

One purpose behind the presidential proclamation is to honor and render special recognition to those who have been naturalized during the past year as well as those American youths who have reached their majority and are ready to assume full responsibility as citizens of the United States. This, to us, is an excellent method of forcefully impressing upon those who have recently become naturalized and those who have recently "come of age" the rights and privileges of American citizenship.

No country has had to fight harder to attain the high standards of life we enjoy than America, but, at the same time, no country has been more successful in its efforts. Although a peace loving nation, we have constantly been faced with the problem of whether or not to battle for the ideals we believe in. Our reluctance to fight and our efforts at keeping peace have often been interpreted by our enemies as a natural softness, a result of too much luxury. Fortunately, the people of our country have always believed in America to such an extent that we have been able to unite rapidly to defend what we believe right and just.

To the people who came here from an ism-inspired country, America must indeed be utopia. This country was settled by people who were escaping the tyrannies which their descendants are escaping today. They want to enjoy the God-given rights which they as humans have a right to enjoy. They seek freedom, and in America they can find it.

Those of us who are "old-line Americans" can do no better service to our country than to make those people who were naturalized within the past twelve months feel welcome, to make them feel a part of this great nation of ours.

Unfortunately, there are still some people who fail to realize that it took oppressed people from all the countries of the world to explore, settle and make the United States. There are those now who look with disgust against first generation Americans, those whose families were born in other countries. They forget that in the dim past their aitecedents were also first-generation Americans. We have no national culture, no national past, because our country is composed of the pasts and the cultures of many nations. In America we allow each person to decide which way of life best suits him. We allow him to worship God, the way he thinks best. We allow him to vote for the man he believes will represent him best either in his city, or his state, or his Federal governments.

So as Sunday, May 16, draws near, we might well thank God that there is such a nation as America, where every man can stand up and say, "It matters not where my ancestors hailed. It matters not in what manner I express my faith in God, nor how I earn my bread, nor how I vote, or speak or write. It matters only that I Am An American; that I personally believe in and stand ready to defend the ideals and principals that make this country the sanctuary of freedom — democracy.

"I Am An American!

"A proud pledge that aggression and oppression will not go unchallenged.

"I Am An American!

Among the peoples that permit polygymy — the system under which a man is married to several women at the same time—the large majority of men nevertheless live in monogamy. One reason is the added expense of multiple marriage.

Poker rewards a skillful player more than any other card game. Patience, rather than a "poker face", is a prime quality of the sucessful poker player, enabling him to drop out time after time until a good hand comes along. Even more important is the good player's insistence on receiving proper "odds" for every bet he makes.

In active theaters of World War II, the rate of psychiatric casualties was two or three times that of World War I. The chief cause of the increase appeared to lie in the fact that warfare was more terrifying in World War II than ever before and the mental hazards were considerably greater than those encountered in the trench warfare of 1918.

When half of the Plymouth colony of Pilgrims died during their first winter in America, the survivors levelled the graves and sowed them with grain in the spring to conceal their losses from the Indians.

The first known use of the direct primary in the United States was in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1868.

Strictly Editoralizing

WE HAVE ALWAYS admired the courage and stamina it takes to be an airborne soldier, and follow with interest, as we did during the war, his demonstrations of skill. Every year the paratroopers add more laurels to their colorful organizations, and we like to keep our readers informed on what they do to get these laurels.

Appearing on pages six and seven of this issue of The Bayonet is a picture story of a special demonstration of a group of Fort Benning paratroopers provided for air force men at March Air Force base, Calif., recently. These pictures and the accompanying story tell in a few words the local trooper's outstanding contributions to the building of a better coordinated, better trained armed forces.

The high calibre of training provided novices at Fort Benning has been acclaimed not only throughout the United States but throughout the world. Such groups as those who went to California to exhibit their talent are the rule rather than the exception, and since they are Benningites as well as infantrymen we feel pride in them.

THE OPENING OF the Fort Benning swimming pools has brought about the annual water safety courses provided by the American Red Cross, another of the many little-heard-of features which that worthy organization makes possible.

One thing which the Red Cross can't provide, however, is freedom from sunburn which seems to be plaguing at least one future Russ pool lifeguard. We were talking to Sgt. William T. Jesse, of Army Field Forces board No. 3 last Thursday night, who was complaining because his few hours in the sun was causing him a great deal of discomfort. After a winter without too much exposure to the sun, he was finding it a little difficult to acclimate himself and his skin

We told him our own remedy for sunburn, which although it isn't recognized by any medical authority, we have found to be quite helpful. After "cooking" ourself in the sun, we rub the burned spots with either cream from the top of a bottle of milk or with hand lotion. It has a cooling effect at least. And that is one thing which makes a sunburn so painful anyway.

PARABLE OF MOTHERS BY CHAPLAIN JOHN THOMPSON

The young mother set her foot on the path of life. "Is the way long?" she asked. And her guide said, "Yes, and the way is hard. But the end will be better than the beginning."

But the young mother was happy, and she would not believe that anything could be better. So she played with her children, and gathered flowers along the way; and the sun shone, and life was good, and the young mother cried, "Nothing will ever be lovelier than this."

The night came, and storm, and the path was dark, and the children shook with fear and cold; and the mother drew them close and covered them with her mantle; and the children said, "Mother, we are not afraid, for you are near, and no harm can come."

And the mother said, "This is better than the brightness of day, for I have taught my children courage."

And the morning came, and there was a hill ahead, and the children climbed and grew weary, and the mother was weary, but at all times she said to the children, "A little patience, and we are there."

So the children climbed, and when they had reached the top, they said, "We could not have done it without you, Mother."

And the mother, when she lay down, that night, looked up at the stars, and said to herself, "better day than the last, for my children have learned fortitude in the face of hardness."

And the next day came clouds which darkened the earth—clouds of hate and war and evil, and the children groped and stumbled, and the mother said, "Look up. Lift your eyes to the light." And the children looked and saw above the clouds an Everlasting Glory, and it guided them and brought them beyond the darkness. And that night the mother said, "This is the best day of all, for I have shown my children God."

Contrary to popular belief, migrating birds do not fly at great altitudes. Most migrant birds travel at less than 3,000 feet above the earth, and it is unusual to find them above 5,000 feet. In many instances birds pass at very moderate altitudes, particularly above the sea, where they may barely clear the waves.

STEP DOWN, ELDER BROTHER

Josephine Niggli's Step Down, Elder Brother, despite reviews to the contrary, is not a good book. This story of Mexican family life, although at times very pleasant, will definitely never reach any great heights from a literary standpoint—nor for that matter from a purely entertainment standpoint.

Miss Niggli, author of Mexican Village, is considered an authority on Mexico. Having never visited below the border and having never studied any Mexican history, it would be impossible to say how accurate are her observations; however, they sometimes make interesting reading in that one does get some sort of an idea about the Mexican way of life—vague though it may be.

The story centers around Domingo, member of the powerful and wealthy "above" family of Vazquez de Anda, and his efforts to play the role of elder brother. Since Miss Niggli attempts to make him the martyred hero, it would be unkind to say she failed. Suffice it to say that Domingo manages to make one more disgusted than any hero in a long time.

There is Margara who has a mysterious background (but not really very mysterious; you know who she is almost from the beginning); Sofia, Domingo's sister of the new generation who refuses to allow her uncle don Agapito, to domineer; Mateo, a man from "below" who gets what he seeks, a place "above"; Cardito, Domingo's younger brother who does not speak a word until the end of the book.

The characters are wooden and the writing full of cliches, such as "later, much later". Miss Niggli is wasting paper and time.

Your Red Cross

It seems kuite appropriate that your Red Cross went all out in remembering Mother's Day. Over at the hospital the Red Cross girls made arrangements to deliver either a white or a red flower to every bed patient. The girls also gave to eaqh patient in the hospital a Mother's Day card the patient fill out the card, and saw that it was mailed promptly so that it would reach the soldier's mother by Mother's Day. Open house was held in the Red Cross recreation hall Sunday afternoon on Mother's Day. One of the features was the recording of personal messages from the soldier to his mother on small disc records. These were mailed at a later date to the soldier's mothers by the Red Cross.

Except for the thoughtfullness of your Red Cros many a mother whose son was out on maneuvers would have failed to receive a Mother's Day card. But Mr. Shipp, who was the Red Cross field director atached to the troops on maneuvers, carried with him at all times Mother's Day cards which were given free to the soldiers for signing and eddessing right at that time. Then Mr. Shipp brought them back to the post and mailed them at Red Cross expense.

The troops on the Main post were not neglected either for a beautiful assortment of Mother's Day cards were displayed in the Main Red Cross building. Each soldier who came in with a problem during the entire week before Mother's Day was urged to select a card, sit down at a cinvenient desk, write his mother a brief note, address the envelope and give it to the Red Cross for mailing. This was all without expense to the soldier and seemed to be appreciated deeply by those receiving cards.

So you see, your Red Cross, the greatest mother of them all, helped to make literally hundreds of mothers happy with this little gesture of providing cards.

The tea table was laid with a point de venice cloth and was centered with a bowl of white flowers and silver candelabra held white tapers. The fireplace was banked with white and pale blue hydrangas and white magnolia blossoms were used effectively throughout the house.

Several Benning sub-debs assisted in serving. They were Misses Jennie Quin Redwine, Ann Bragan,Helen Wilbur and Harriet Grizzard.

The guests were received by Miss Graham, Mrs. Ottis Graham and the hostesses.

Army Daughters' Forty-Nine Tops Costume Events Friday

One of the best of the Army Daughters "49er" parties ever given at Benning was the yearly event which took place Friday club, May 7, at the Officers' club, with decorations turning the club into a real scene of the gold-rush era.

The "Gold Nugget Saloon" and 'Madame Buck's Scientific Skin-Games Parlor" were party settings, with background touches of candles in bottles on the "saloon" tables, old wagon wheels, picks and shovels, and the colorful and fascinating array of costumed guests.

Costumes for the most part matched the decor and old California-days theme. Col. Daniel P. Buckland won the costume prize for the men with his prospector's outfit. His bright plaid flannel shirt and dusty pants had pockets filled with the latest in authentic gear, a dusty black hat partly covered long unkept hair which looked very much like Spanish moss, his boots completed the rig—with one spur missing. Mrs. Harriet Weeks won the judges vote for the ladies with her "Annie Oakley" garb—flannel nightshirt with web belt, shotgun over the shoulder, black bonnet, high-button black shoes and corncob pipe.

Worthy of note was Col. Walter Johnson as the sheriff with his "horse". Dealers from "West of the Pecos" were working in their eyeshades, sleeve garters and bowties, while the variety of "Dance-hall girls" were much in evidence—Ann Blackburn in wine satin, Betty Connor in red and white satin, Muffie Olson in black and white satin. Mrs. Buckland, worthy of special mention for her games groundwork, wore a dance hall outfit of black and sequin-trimmed orchid satin with pale blue ostrich. Claire Humphrey, guest of the A. E. McCormicks, was attired in strapless purple with matching ostrich feathers and eyelet trim.

Benning Included In New Golf Bids

The current interest in ladies' golf will be given added impetus with the announcement by Mrs. D. P. Buckland, ladies' golf chairman, of events to come.

Play for the "Elebash Cup," the trophy for interclub matches each year between Fort Benning and Columbus ladies, will take place the second week in June.

In a letter recently received by Mrs. Buckland, Mrs. C. D. Fields, secretary-treasurer of the Georgia Women's Golf association, invited Benning women golfers to compete in the 19th annual Georgia tournament, which will be played over the course of the Brunswick County club starting June 21.

Quinnie Redwine Is Crowned May Queen By Bart Barracks

The May dance was a big success, and the Brat Barracks members transformed the Polo Hunt club into a bower of roses for the event. Gertrude Handley's orchestra provided music.

The queen, elected by popular vote of Brat Barracks mombers, was crowned by last year's queen, Susie Stillinger, and was gowned in aqua nylon marquisette with matching lace mitts. Her full skirt was held out with a hoop and she wore gardenias. Her crown was a garland of flowers.

Immediately following the coronation, Miss Redwine danced the lead-off with Major-General John W. O'Daniel, who attended the ceremonies with Mrs. O'Daniel.

The program included readings by Ann Bragan and Pat Bush, and songs by Ellen Garrett and Barbara Lewis, who were accompanied by Mrs. W. E. Howard.

A Board of Governors meeting will be held at Brat Barracks on Monday evening, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. All interested parents are invited.

Luncheon Shower For Mrs. Wilson And Mrs. Oliver

Honoring Mrs. George L. Oliver and Mrs. Roy Wilson on May 6, Mrs. Roland Anderson and Mrs. W. McIlhenney were hostesses at a lovely luncheon and stork shower at the quarters of Mrs. Anderson.

The pink and blue theme was carried out in the decorations. Twin parasols were trimmed with pink and blue under which gifts were displayed and a baby crib was placed in front of the fireplace, which had a collection of toys on the mantle. The table was covered with pink and blue crepe paper streamers, ruffled at the sides, and pink and blue booties and miniature cribs centered the table. Two cakes were placed on the table with pink and blue frosting.

The ladies enjoyed sherry before the luncheon, following which the honorees opened their gifts.

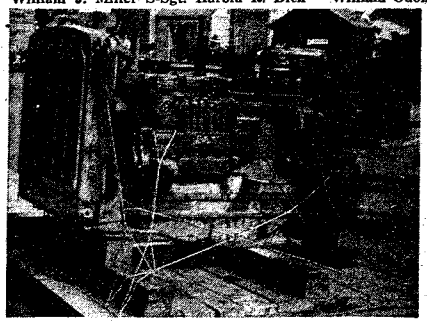
Airborne Team Conducts D

Teach Air Force Group Transportability Tactics

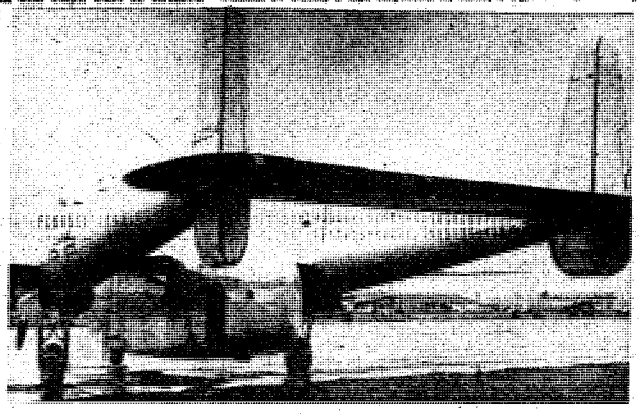
The type of training given a soldier at Fort Benning has no peer anywhere. It is evident no matter where military personnel gather and it was borne out again recently by a crack demonstration team from the Infantry School's Airborne section, during a demonstration at March Air Force base, Calif.

The seven-man team which won high praise for its exhibition of team work in loading and unloading heavy equipment for air transport in a demonstration conducted for personnel of the Twelfth Air Force's 817 Engineer Aviation battalion April 4-16.



Early in April, 22 enlisted men and two officers of the Twelfth Air Force's 817th Engineer Aviation battalion from the California base completed a special air transportation course at the Infantry School.

Following the completion of the course, the training team from the school's Airborne section was directed to go with the air force group home station at March field.



Led by Capt. Carl L. Ermert, a veteran of the 82nd and 17th Airborne divisions, the seven-man training team was composed of enlisted instructors from the air loading committee, including M-Sgt. William F. Odom, T-Sgt. Raymond A. Ashe, S-Sgt. Harold R. Dick,

CLAMSHELL CLOSED—Clamshell cargo doors in the rear of this C-82 have been closed in preparing plane for flight. The small doorway is one of the two parachute

emonstration In California

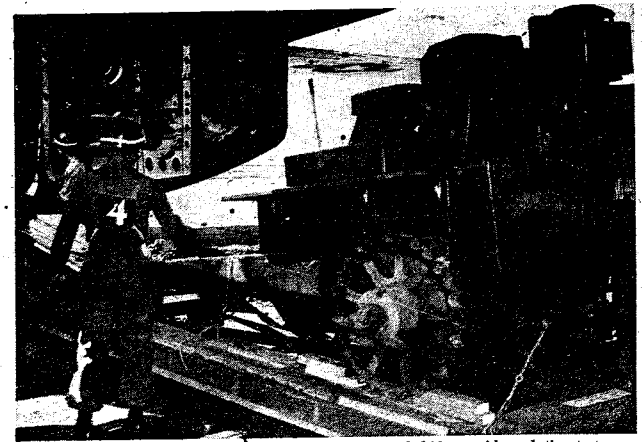
The group took off from Lawson Air Force base April 4 and the afternoon of the next day the C-47 landed at March field. Five days later the training program was underway.

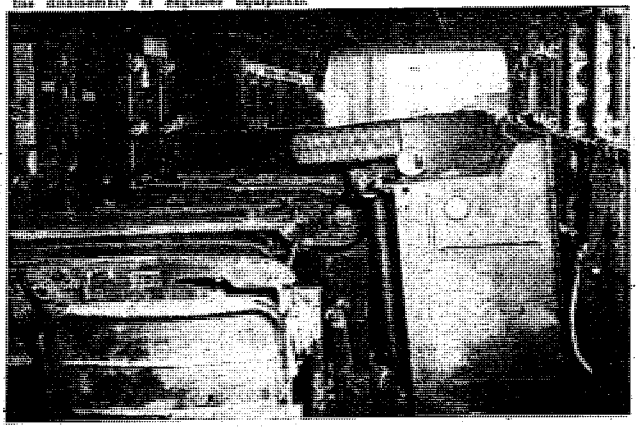


One C-82 packet and one C-54 were made available for the project and several mock-ups were constructed, consisting of full scale models of the cargo compartments of transport planes. Following an intrductory conference and lecture on the history of air ion, using a C-82 in the presentation. Other items covered in- movements, the local crew proceeded with the loading demonstra- cluded flight safety, theory of lashing, computation of loads, use of special cargo tie-down equipment and allied subjects.

Transporting by air of heavy earth mobile machinery has always been one of the toughest problems confronting the engineer battalion. Fort Benning's airborne personnel showed how such equipment could be disassembled into sections that were within weight lifting ability and dimension of the aircraft. Also shown were methods of using wooden skids to facilitate handling of heavy items, at the same time protecting the floors and sides of the aircraft. D-7 and D-6 bulldozers were among the pieces of equipment disassassembled and loaded by the team.

Not only was the high caliber of instruction conducted by Infantry School personnel commended at March field, but the Fort Benning representatives, with their neatness and conduct both on and off duty, created a favorable impression, reflecting much credit on themselves, their organization and Fort Benning, officials at the air force base reported.

EASY TO FOLLOW—Numbered aprons worn by the demonstration team help the trainees follow each man closely in the loading procedure.



TACKLING A BULLDOZER — March Field's engineer unit is being shown how the disassembly of earthmover equipment and use of skids provides solution to transport of these too heavy for available air-

A BIG LOAD—With canvas seats folded back and planks on the floor, the C-82 can accomodate a two-and one-half-ton truck. Two Benning sergeants guide the truck into the plane.

SOLUTION TO PARKING PROBLEM— Three jeeps and three one-quarter-ton trailers are made to fit into aC-82.

New Nines Enter Final Phase Race

Seventh RCT, 999th Set To Try For League Title

Diamond nines from the Seventht Regimental comba team and the 999th Field Artillery battalion will make their debut when the second half of the 1948 Fort Benning intra-mural circuit gets underway at Gowdy field on Sunday.

The addition of the two new squads will bring to 10 the number of teams scrambling for the top spot in the league's final phase of play.

Play in the loop's second half is scheduled to continue until Tuesday, July 6, after which the Doughboy post team will be selected. The second phase's winning team will clash with the Infantry School detachment nine in a two-for-three series at the close of the intra-mural season for the post crown unless the Profs clinch the title by repeating to grab the No. 1 berth in the final half.

Nine-Inning Games

Games during the second half will be of nine-innings duration instead of seven frames, as played during the opening half.

The schedule calls for each team to play only one game with each of the other nine teams entered in the last half race. In case of a tie betwen two teams for the No. 1 spot, a single nine-inning tilt will decide the team to play the ISD aggregation for the post tiara.

Saturdays have been designated as open dates throughout the second-half slate, and all games will be night contests with the exception of a single game to be played each Sunday at 2 p. m. Floodlight classics will begin at 8 p. m.

Under the plan formulated for the second half, any game may be called by mutual agreement of the coaches if one team has complied an overwhelming lead during the first six innings of play. This, however, will not apply to any playoff tilt.

During the first week of the final phase, the Medics of the 3440th Army Service unit and the 328th Ordnance battalion will be faced with the heaviest schedule, each being slated for two games.

In the second-half opener, the Medics will tangle with the Student Training regiment, and the 328th Ordnance lads will play Monday night's game with the Airborne battalion. The two teams will meet each other Friday night.

A complete compilation of team and individual batting and pitching averages for the first half of play in the Fort Benning intra-mural league will appear in next week's edition of the Bayonet.

Champs Play Seventh

Winners of the first-half of loop activity, the Infantry School Detachment's Profs will launch their second-half campaign Tuesday night by taking on one of the newcomer teams, the Seventh RCT.

The other new team in the intra-mural league, the 999th Field Artillery battalion, will see its first diamond action Wednesday night in a tilt with the Truckers of the 204th Transportation battalion.

The Lawson field Flyers, who made a surprise comeback at the close of the first division by winning two straight tilts, and holding the loop-leading ISD nine to a one-run margin in their final tussle, will play their first game of the final phase with the 3440th Army Service unit on Thursday night.

TOLVE TOSSES---Fort Benning's Ralph Tolve outbid the previous Third Army discus record of 126 feet, four inches with his heave of 126 feet, six inches during the recent army area meet here, but it was only yrood enough to get him a second place in the tourney. The event was won by Kenneth Murphy of Fort Bragg N. C. who chalked up a distance of 125 feet.

Roy Linquist, Jr. Baseball Candidate

The team will be coached by Nels Corey, former Bowdoin college ace athlete and mentor of MCI's Maine prep championship football eleven last fall.

FRIDAY IS DEADLINE FOR LINKS ENTRIES

All entries for the forthcoming enlisted golf tournament must be in the post special services office prior to 5 p.m. tomorrow, Capt. Bill Fannin, post athletic officer, has announced.

At present, approximately 100 Benning links enthusiasts have signed up for the tournament, which is slated to be played on the Officers' club layout during the latter part of this month.

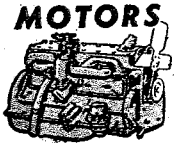
The athletic officer expressed satisfaction with the amount of interest shown in the tourney, the first of its kind at Fort Benning, but believed that the number of entries will be increased if enlisted golfing aspirants of the post are brought to realize that the meet is not solely for the expert linksmen.

Following a 36-hold qualifying round candidates will be placed in a flight comprised of golfers of similar ability. Therefore, improvement shown during the tournament will be the deciding factor rather than pre-tourney ability, Capt. Fannin explained.

Following the tournament, awards will be made to winners and runners-up in each flight.

The tournament is being jointly sponsored by the post special services office and the golfing committee of the Fort Benning Officers' club.

FLYERS, BREAK INTO WIN COLUMN OF LOOP ROSTER



Erasing the goose egg in their wins column, the Lawson field Flyers emerged with their first win of the 1948 intra-mural season last Tuesday night by taking a 7 to 3 contest from the 328th Ordnance team behind the two-hit twirling of Lew Button.

The Flyer picture began taking on a rather dismal aspect in the first half of the opening frame when Button issued a walk to Dick Whittaker, hit Horace Bassett with a pitched ball, and gave up a triple to Bob Glover. After knocking in his two mates, Glover scored himself when Stan Letonsky went out on an infield grounder.

By notching four tallies in the second, the Flyers took possession of a 5 to 3 lead, and retained their command throughout the remainder of the game. Only one hit, a single by Shortstop Tyrell, figured in the Flyers' second-inning scoring spree.

After giving up a hit in each of the first two innings, Ordnance starter John Guth was taken off the mound in favor of Bob Glover, who started in left field. Glover yielded a base blow to the Flyers in the top side of the third stanza, but settled down to toss four innings of hitless ball.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Lew Button, lanky righ-hander who joined the Lewson field Flyers midway through the first half of the intra-mural league's first half, seems to be the long-needed shot in the arm which has pulled te Flyers out of a diamond slump of season-long duration.

Button, whose initial assignment with the Lawson team was patrolling the grounds around first base, switched to the mound for a game with the 3:8th Ordance battalion last week, and pitched the Flyers right into the league's win column by twirling a two-hit, 7 to 3 triumph over the then third-place flame pot lads.

Not to be outdone by his hurling colleagues, Russ Sanders went to the mound for the Flyers in their next encounter with the 3440th Army Service unit, and came off with a win to his credit as the Lawson delegation edged the ASU team 4 to 3 in an eight-inning affair.

Probably the most noteworthy of the Flyers' achievements of the past week came when they played onnosite the loop-leading Infantry School detachment Profs in a Sunday afternoon classic on Gowdy field.

Going to the hill for the second time within a week, Button had the Profs' power-hitters baffled as the allegedly weak Flyers gave the top-notch ISD lads their closest race of the season. The home-team Profs had to take their bats in the bottom half of the seventh to notch a 5 to 4 win.

Although the Lawson nine lost the ISD tilt, Button cited the scrap as a definite moral victory for the Flyers, who had been trounced at least once by every team on the Fort Benning roster.

The fact that most units with teams in the post intra-mural league have ignored the pleas of the athletic office to furnish qualified scorekeepers when they are scheduled for the role of host team has made a definite impression on the league scorebook---and, not a very favorable one.

Upon scanning the official records for the games played in the league thus far, we find them filled with illegible hieroglyphics which would baffle even the most versatile of crytographic experts.

Last Saturday night's game between the Columbus Redbirds and the Augusta Tigers took on all of the aspects of a game in Ebbets field when Umpire Frank Prince was the target for a double-barrel concentration of fire power.

It appeared to the fans, as well as the Card players, that Prince had used a bit of hasty judgement in calling a play that proved to be the winning margin of the ball game for the Augusta team.

The fireworks broke loose in the top of the ninth when the Benals' Herbert attempted to score from second on Snider's single. Card catcher Bob Worthington took a perfect throw from Dick Burgett in left field, and put it on Herbert, who was sliding into the plate, but Prince declared the Tiger runner safe on the play that gave the Augusta team its winning margin.

From all outward appearances, it looked like Prince had called the play a couple of seconds before it had taken place.

The arbiter then proceeded to make himself some Tiger enemies when he tossed pitcher Joe Micich out of the game for using too much gusto in his argument over a close pitch that Prince had ruled a ball.

Ask Lou Boudreau, manager of the league-leading Cleveland Indians, and current top hitter for the American circuit, why he suddenly has become the plate terror of the baseball world, and he'll answer: "I guess it's just the extra weight I'm carrying."

Vice-President Hank Greenberg's explanation is just as terse, but considerably closer to the truth.

According to the club magnate, Boudreau "has everything, including fine coordination and perfect vision. Those things, "Greenberg declares, "are essential."

This may seem like a peculiar statement to those who have seen Boudreau's peculiar stance at the plate, but, closer observation will show that the clouting Indian manager straightens up the minute the ball is pitched.

Greenberg said that, even though Boudreau's fabulous stickwork it should not be regarded as merely a brief streak of good fortune. covers only a few weeks of the current American league camgaign. He believes that the slugging manager will be in there clippin them off at a steady pace throughout the season.

Anglers Land Fish Totaling 77 Lbs. During One Week

They may sometimes catch them bigger, but they won't catch the long ones as often as does S-Sgt. Gane Whitmire.

The ardent fisherman from company C, Airborne battalion handed four carp totaling 77 and one-half lbs last week and he didn't have to go far to pull in his prize catches, either. He caught the carp below the Airborne battalion area in the Chattahoochee river which runs through the reservation.

His first catch of the week was a 17 and one-half pounder. The next day he brought one back that weighted 10 pounds, and on his third trip, hauided in a beautiful 26 and one-half pounder. But that wasn't enough. Sergeant Whitmire parked himself on the banks of the Chattahoochee the next day, and, apparently taking a liking to his bait, another big one came up, this time a 23 and one-half pounder. Using cheese as bait, he thus hauled in what is considered to be a record here, four-fish on four separate occasions with a total weight of 77 and one-half pounds.

A native of Greer, S. C., he has been in the army for six years, three and a half years of that time in the airborne.

A fisherman for about 20 years. Whitmire takes great pleasure in catching the "big ones", and then giving them away.

Cpl: "The first Sgt. just hung himself."
Pfc: "Did you cut him down?"
Cpl: "Naw, he ain't dead yet."

Medical Squad Rallies To Win Over Students

BY GEORGE FRINK

In a thrill-packed game at Gowdy field last Tuesday night, the Medics of the 3440th Army Service unit staged a seventh-inning rally to trim the Student Training regiment squad 9 to 8.

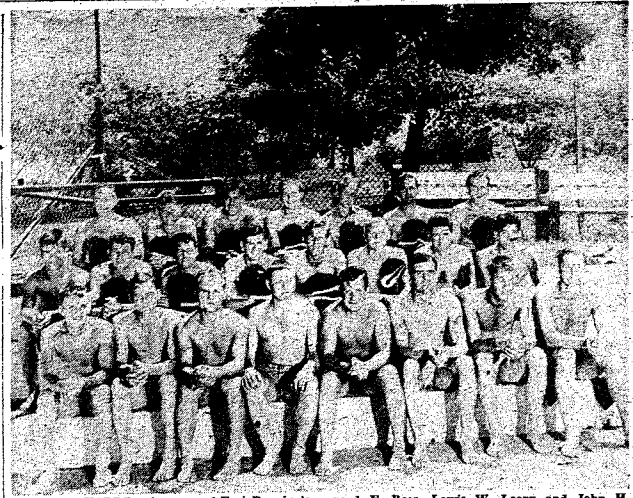
Trailing by two runs to open the seventh, the STR aggregation crossed the plate twice to knot the count.

Coming to bat in the last of the seventh, the first two Medic batters to face Ernest Stewart, the STR twirler, struck out, and it looked like the game was headed for extra innings, until Ted Thorsen slapped out a single, and went to third on a double by First-sacker Paul Lewish. Bob Lovell, entering the tilt as a pinch-hitter then singled sharply to right field to bring in Thorsen with the winning run.

John Graves, who went the mound route for the Medics, was credited with his fourth triumph of the season. He has yet to lose a game this season.

After giving up two runs in the first inning, Graves held the students scoreless for the next two innings. In the fourth frame, the stocky Medic twirler had to settle down to some serious pitching when the STR, with two runs already in, had runners on second and third with only one away. However, he ended the rally by whiffing the next two STR swingers.

Again in the sixth stanza, Graves ran into a bit of trouble. The STR squad manged for two runs before the Medic moundsman gained control of a wild streak to retire the side.



Chalking up a counter in the first inning, the Medics come to bat in the second, and pounded the apple all over the park to score five times on four hits. Getting two more tallies in the third, it appeared that the home nine had the game in the bag, but the STR comeback forced the Medics to use their seventh inning effort to ice the contest.

Farmer: "Fresh?" Three hours ago it was grass.

Doc: "Did the medicine I gave your wife straighten her out?"

Man: "I sure did . . . I buried her yesterday."

Seed Planting, Restocking Mapped For Autum Bird-Hunting Season

An extensive seed-planting program has been initiated by the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association to improve bird-hunting conditions for post gun enthusiasts next fall, Col. Douglas Sugg, management committee chairman, announced

The project, coasting a total of $1,480, includes the planting of 300 acres of sesbania seed, the sowing of 14,000 bi-color lespediza seed in choice plots throughout the reservation, and the setting up of a 10-acre lespediza seed bed.

Du to the extended period of seed production, the plant yield from the seeds now being planted on the reservation will provide food from August until April, after which time the plants grown in the seed bed this year should be ready for transplanting in selected plots of 1-4 acre each, Col. Sugg explained.

The seed bed, he added,should produce about 100,000 lespediza plants for resetting nxt spring.

Since the bi-color lespediza is a perenniel plant with a better output of seeds each year, it is anticipatd that the expenditure of the fish and game association will be reduced considerably next year.

In selecting the sties for planting the lespediza, the association has scattered the seed in plots which offer both water and color to the quail, but which are open enough to give the hunter a chance to get in a shot before the birds can get to heavy cover.

Plans are underway to draw up a game map to be issued with each unting permit showing the plot locations of both the sesbania and lespediza seed plantings, the committee chairman said.

In addition to the expenditure for seed, the fish and game association also has appropriated $435 for the purchase of a new plow now on hand.

Also slated is the restocking of the reservation with 120 pairs of quail to be shipped in from Birmingham next month. The birds, Col. Sugg pointed out, will be released upon arrival, and are expected to nest in selectd sits during th mating sason, and provide choice coveys of quail for the openin g ofthe fall bird season.

Citing vermin control as an important factor in providing better hunting facilities, Col. Sugg said that several traps for such animals as foxes, skunks, raccoons, and bobcats already have been ordered.

Placing emphasis on the destruction of foxes, the management committee chairman expressed hopes that some of the dens can be locatd befor th start of the hunting season

Troopers Start Late To Defeat Ordnance Nine

Overcoming a two-run defecit at the end of the first inning, the Airborne Troopers bounced back to win an 8 to 5 triumph over the 328th Ordnance battalion nine at Gowdy field last Monday night.

Scoring a run for the parachutists in the first inning, Paul Bonair drew a walk to start the frame, stole second, and came home when Ken Watts lashed out a single.

However, the Troopers' lead was short-lived. Singles by Henry Wyatt and Bob Giver set the stage for a three-run homerun by big Stan Letonsky, power-hitting Ordnance first sacker.

The Airborne nine picked up another tally in the second, but came through with a four-run outburst in the third which provided the winning margin.

In their big third stanza, the chutists combined three singles with three costly Ordnance errors to count four times. Contributing to the hitting attack were Watts, Carney and Griffin.

After being blanked for three innings, the Ordnance nine managed to nick Pitcher Stem for another tally when Bob Cannon walked to start the fifth, went to second on Andy Belandi's grounder, and scored on a sharply-hit single by Horace Bassett.

The Troopers made their advantage a little more secure by adding another duet to tallies in the opening half of the seventh stanza. Griffin reached first on an error by Cannon, and scored when Watts drove a triple to right - center. Watts trotted across the plate when Bob McCachren, 328th third - baseman, misfielded Red Cothran's grounder.

A walk, single, stolen base and passed ball accounted for the Ordnance's final tally, made by Pitcher Boland in the closing phase of the seventh inning.

Troopers Rally To Down ASU

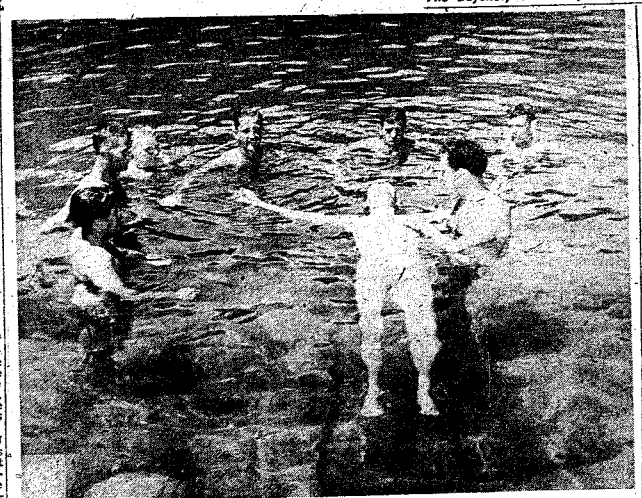
Although they were on the trailing end of a 4 to 3 count going into the sixth inning of a league contest at Gowdy field last Wednesday afternoon, the second-place Airborne battalion parachutists unleashed a four-run bombardment in their half of the inning to win a 7 to 4 decision over the 3440th Army Service unit.

Combined efforts of portsider Ken Watts and right-handed Bob Cronin, the two mound aces of the Troopers, produced 13 ASU strikeouts, and limited the home nine to seven safe blows.

Cronin, who was jerked in favor of Watts after the 3440th had come through with three runs in the bottom half of the fourth, was credited with the win, his fourth of the season, while Gerald Howard went the route for the ASU nine, and was tagged with the loss.

Willie Banks, hard-hitting ASU second-sacker, paced the tilt's plate efforts by banging out three singles in four appearances, while Paul Bonair led the Trooper attack with two one-baggers in three times at bat.

180 Troopers Enrolled In Basic Airborne Class



Six members of the Student Training regiment's Service company have been awarded certificates for successful completion of a nine-week course in supply administration at the Armed Forces Education center.

They were S-Sgt. Roy Parham, Sgt. Alvin Brown, Cpl. Bennie Whiting, T-5 James N. Brantley and Pfcs. John J. Foreman and Walter Davenport.

Close Tilt Goes To Prof Squad

Flyers Exhibit Surprising Power in 5-4 Mound Duel

The surprising Lawson field Flyers came within a hair's breadth of marring the unblemished record of the league-leading Infantry School detachment Profs last Sunday afternoon, but were edged 5 to 4 in the Gowdy field classic.

The Flyers, who had come up out of the circuit's cellar to chalk up wins in their preceding two games, went into Sunday afternoon's nightcap, and fought the Profs to their closest decision since they copped a 2 to 1 verdict from the second-place Airborne battalion Troopers to open the 1948 season.

The power shown by the unpredictable Flyers during the closing stages of the post loop's first half has established them as a definite threat for the forthcoming second phase of intramural activity.

Hill Homers

Lew Button started on the hill for the Flyers, and handcuffed the power-hitting ISD aggregation for two innings before running headlong into trouble in the bottom half of the fourth.

Pitcher Charlie Heistand led off with a single for the home team, and scored when lead-off man George Hill slammed out a four-bagger. The Profs got their third run of the inning when Herb Lauve walked, and scored on a double by Blondie Burnett.

Heistand had his share of trouble in the top of the fourth when Joe Tyrell slapped out a base knock to start a two-run inning for the Flyer nine.

Consecutive Singles

Tyrell stayed on first while Al Braum went down, but consecutive singles by Max Seirer, Fields Cox, and Dick Lee brought the Lawson diamond squad to within one-run of the Profs' lead.

The Profs counted again in the bottom side of the fifth when Lauve, who had lashed out a one-bagger to start the stanza, scored on a sharply-spanked single by Woody Burt.

Trailing by two runs to start the seventh, the Flyers forced the Profs to take their turn at the plate when walks to Ed Gravely and pinch-hitter Dan English, and a double by Jack Hunt pushed across two Lawson field tallies.

PROFS CLINCH LOOP LEAD BY DEFEATING TRUCKERS

The Infantry School detachment Profs made their league-leading berth absolutely certain by scoring a 9 to 6 win over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers in the last game of a twin program at Gowdy field last Wednesday afternoon.

The triumph made it 11 straight wins for the Profs, who have yet to taste defeat in the 1948 circuit race. They have only three remaining contests.

Getting off to an early start in the tilt Wednesday, the Profs scored seven times before the Truckers could push across a counter. They chalked up two runs in the first stanza when Burnett slammed a four-bagger over the left-field fence scoring Herb Lauve, who had walked, ahead of him.

After undergoing a scoreless second inning, the Profs staged a five-run outburst in the bottom half of the third to surge to a 7 to 0 lead. Singles by Lauve, Joe Smith, and Bill Brooks were the only safeties figuring in the five-run attack.

During their turn at the plate in the fourth, the Truckers came through with a lone tally, but made a minor threat to the Profs lead in the opening side of the sixth when four 204th players romped to pay dirt. Three singles and a trio of Prof errors accounted for the four Trucker tallies.

The ISD nine bolstered its margin with single counters in the fourth and sixth frames, and the Truckers added their final run in the top half of the seventh inning.

Pond Program Finished Here

The pond fertilization program of the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association has been completed at a cost of $1,425.25, Col. Douglas Sugg, management committee chairman, announced this week.

The project was undertaken upon recommendation of H. S. Swingle, fish culturist from the Alabama Polytechnic institute (Auburn), who examined specimens of the fish being hooked on the reservation earlier this spring.

Approximately 66 tons of fertilizer were used during the project, which called for three separate applications at the rate of one ton per acre. The applications of fertilizer were made to King's, Hedley's and Averett's ponds.

In the report of his examination, Mr. Swingle said that there was no necessity for restocking the reservation's lakes, but that he fish were under standard size for their age. He advocated fishing out the larger fish to allow the smaller ones to get the proper nutrition.

Funds expended for the fertilization program, Colonel Sugg explained, were taken from receipts of the sale of permits since last September.

LINDQUIST HAS SPECTACULAR SPORT RECORD

Colonel Roy Lindquist, who is leaving Fort Benning soon for an assignment in Greece, boasts an enviable athletic record dating back to his days in the United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

Although his attention during recent years has been focused on golf, he first gained prominence in Benning's sport circles in 1939 and 1940 when he coached the Doughboy baseball nine through two highly successful seasons.

Under the tutelage of Colonel Lindquist, then a major, the 1939 Doughboy nine won all of its season's games, and went through the following year with a record of 16 wins out of 21 starts.

In addition to piloting the successful Dough team in 1940, Colonel Lindquist led his 29th Infantry regiment team to a playoff for the post championship. His post team of 1940 won both ends of a two-game series with the Columbus Cardinals.

The following year, the colonel's duties with the 501st Parachute Infantry battalion absorbed so much of his time that he relinquished his post team coaching chores, and devoted his attention to laboring at the helm for his battalion team. At the time of his departure for an overseas assignment, the team had won all of its intra-mural games.

While on duty in Hawaii in 1935 and 1936, Colonel Lindquist piloted his regiment's diamond delegation, and won a divisional title.

During his time at West Point the colonel played four years in the outfield for the army nine, and turned in an outstanding performance in the 1928 army-navy clash. He graduated from the academy in 1930.

In addition to baseball, Colonel Lindquist starred on the ice at West Point, and was named to the all-American collegiate hockey second team in 1930. He had served as team captain for the year, and saw continuous activity during every game on the army's 1930 slate.

Lucy Monroe Wins Acclaim From Hospitalized Soldiers

Lucy Monroe, noted concert singer, better known as the "Star Spangled Banner Girl," won the fond acclaim of all the patients at the Station hospital and the plaudits if an evening crowd during her visit at Fort Benning Monday, May 3.

Miss Monroe's appearance here, made possible by the Veterans Hospital Camp Shows, was the highlight of National Music Week observed from May 2 through May 8.

The concert artist, who has become famous as the "Star Spangled Banner Girl," for her many renditions of the National Anthem at numerous sports and civic gatherings, rendered several vocal selections, accompanied by Budd Gregg at the piano. She toured two wards of the hospital in the afternoon and gave an evening performance at the Red Cross recreation hall.

Along with the musical varities offered at the evening show, hospital patients demonstrated their own talent in the performance. Winners in the talent contest were T-4 Champ Ogden, with his piano selections, and S—Sgt. Johnny L. Gray, comedian. Prizes were awarded by the Veterans Camp Shows, which has replaced the now defunct U. S. O.

Lawson Takes Eight-Inning Tilt By 4-3 Score

Winning their second straight intra-mural league contest, the Lawson field Flyers dropped the 3440th Army Service unit diamond delegation 4 to 3 in an eight-inning tilt at Gowdy field last Friday night.

During the final two innings of the game, the service unit nine tried every trick in its bag to push across the winning tally. However, the total of 14 players used by the 3440th aggregation included only one pitcher, its mound ace Lawrence Hall.

Despite the all-out effort made by the service unit team, the Lawson team backed twirler Russ Sanders up with some fancy fielding to retire the visitors after they had knotted the score in the top half of the seventh.

The rejuvenated Flyers jumped to an early lead in the initial stanza of the tilt when Jack Hunt walked to start the inning, stole his way around to third and scored ahead of Max Selrer on the latter's inside-the-park homerun over the right-fielder's head.

After the Flyers had scored another counter in the bottom of the third, three innings of scoreless ball were played before the 3440th came through with a duet of tallies in the seventh to deadlock the contest at 3 to 3.

In a desperate effort to pull his own ball game out of the fire, Pitcher Hall slammed out a triple with one away in the final inning, and scored when Gerald Howard, who came in as a pinch-hitter for David Waits, was safe on a fielder's choice.

Singles by George Thrailkill and Right-fielder Moon brought in Howard with the run which sent the tilt into extra innings.

Sloke Auditions Original Score For Tax Beneke

By Andrew H. Planey

At least part of a dream was realized by S-Sgt. Charles A. Sloke of company B, Infantry School detachment last week when he cornered Tex Beneke, nationally famous orchestra leader, long enough to listen to his first recorded musical composition, "Dreams in The Night".

Tex Beneke, who was appearing at the NCCS club in Columbus in a one-night stand, obligingly consented to hear Sergeant Sloke's composition just a few minutes before stepping out to lead his band for dancing.

The genial bandleader opined that the numebr, a semi-classical piece, has great potentiality. Although he expressed regret that the song does not fit his particularly style of play, Beneke advised Sloke to leave the song as it is, without trying to change it to fit the fast tempo of swing music. He suggested Sloke get in touch with Sammy Kaye, who easily could arrange the song to suit his style.

The affable orchestra leader, who was leading sax man and vocalist for the late Glenn Miller's orchestra, taking over the band when Miller was lost in a flight overseas during the war, claims that the country is going hog-wild over hill-billy music.

"Music is played to suit the times, and right now the trend seems to be toward folksy ballads, principally hill-billy tunes", he remarked. "If this keeps up much longer, I don't know what some of us orchestra leaders will do with our bands."

"Dreams in the night" is not the only song Sloke has composed, but has never publicly announced or recorded them. "Dreams in The Night" was his first recording.

A member of a family quite inclined musically, Sloke began writing and composing musical scores six years ago. He couldn't help but acquire the trend for song writing. He has five sisters who are musically proficient.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a veteran of 14 years army service, Sergeant Sloke is supply sergeant at Company B, Infantry School detachment.

REPORTER'S REPORT ON BENNING TRAFFIC

BY DICK BARKER

It is 6:30 a.m. and the early birds pass outpost No. I, headed to the kitchens, orderly rooms and offices. The day begins at Fort Benning.

By 7 a.m. the thin stream has widened to a river of automobiles which slow down as they approach the outpost for admittance. Officers' blue tags, enlisted men's cars bearing white tags with the black numerals, civilians' yellow and red plates as the citizens of Columbus drive to their work.

By 7:30 a.m. traffic is a tight line of cars that runs out to the traffic circle and up the old Fort Benning road. A military policeman stands at the intersection and halts one or the other stream of cars, controlling the waiting lines.

At 7:45 a.m. the lines wait the signal to resume their speed and pass the main gate on their way to the Main post, Lawson field, the cuartels and the airborne area.

At 8 a.m. the pressure eases off. Most of the cars are in now and only a few late arrivals pass the gate.

Over 1,600 officers' cars are registered at the provost marshal's office. Enlisted men own almost 2,000 vehicles, while over 1,275 automobiles, belonging to civilians, pass through the gate every day.

At 4:40 p.m. the stream of cars begins again, leaving Fort Benning for the day, going home to dinner and an evening with the kids in Baker Village. Home to read a book and eat dinner and spend a lazy evening around the house.

It's 5 p.m. and the cars pile up on Vibbert avenue and along Lumpkin road as they wait their opportinity to pass the Main gate.

At 5:30 p.m. they still wait, moving slowly ahead on the okay from the MP on duty where Vibbert and Lumpkin road meet above outpost No. I.

As 6 p.m. approaches, the heavy traffic slows and slowly disappears. The late workers leave their desks and jobs, clean up and enter their cars for the drive home or into town.

By 6:30 p.m. garrison soldiers drive into town for a show or some dancing. The rush is over for another day, and gate No. I. pauses to catch its breath. Tomorrow's another day!

Links Tournament Qualifying Started

Field of 100 Golfers Entered In Post's First Enlisted Meet

The first wave of candidates for the Fort Benning enlisted golfing title inaugurated the one-week qualifying period at the Officers' club course Monday morning by carding a series of unusually high scores.

Fifteen of the field of approximatley 100 links aspirants selected the opening day to fire their 18-hole qualification rounds.

With only three scores under 80 turned in, Edgar Powe led the opening-day field with an 81. Close behind was David Reed, who carded an 82, and W. D. Haralson was in third place with an 85.

The qualifying period will continue through next Monday, exclusive of Saturday and Sunday. Each entrant will be required to submit an 18-hole qualification score before being permitted to play any matches.

Links enthusiasts who already have indicated their intentions to play in the tourney, the first of its kind for Fort Benning, may obtain tee-off times by contacting the post athletic and recreation office, and stating the date and time they would like to play.

Golf bags, clubs and balls are available for contestants, and will be issued at the course if requested.

Following the qualification rounds, competitors will be placed in flights of 16 in accordance with their scores. Only the 64 lowest scorers will participate in the match play, scheduled to get underway next Thursday.

In the event of a tie in qualifying for any flight or medalist honors, a playoff match will be played Tuesday afternoon.

Pairings for first round matches will be published before noon Wednesday, and the initial match must be played prior to Thursday, June 3. Players were asked not to arrange to play their first matches on Monday, May 31, since it is a holiday,

Two High School Delegations See Infantry Center

Fort Benning played host to two groups of high school students last Thursday, May 13, as 50 members of the Opelika, Ala., ROTC unit and 38 students from Monroe, Ga., high school toured the Infantry Center.

The two delegations witnessed a weapons demonstration at Rook range Thursday morning, followed by a firepower display by the Infantry School's Academic department.

Led by Maj. Paul B. Schweiker, professor of military science and tactics at Cliff high school, Opelika, the 50 Opelika high school seniors were joined by the group, from Monroe, Ga., for the demonstration.

A visit in the afternoon to the Main exchange by the two delegations was followed by a tour of the Airborne section. At 4 p. m., the visitors inspected the Infantry School's Automotive section, after which they saw the training aids exhibit.

Arriving here from Opelika in private cars driven by citizens of the Alabama city, the cadets toured the post in army buses. They were the guests of Lt. Col. O. O. Wilson, Infantry School detachment commander, for lunch.

Accompanied by their principal, A. C. Searls, high school students from Monroe, Ga., viewed the same exhibits and demonstrations as the cadets. They had lunch at Section II, 3440 Army Service unit, as guests of Capt. Glenn N. Scarberry, commanding officer of the unit.

Citizens of Opelika who came with the ROTC students included:

250 Enrolled In Night School

This is 50 per cent of the original enrollment, officials said, and pointed out that this percentage is better than it has been in the past at mid-term.

The summer quarter of the education center is scheduled to begin between July 12-19 officials said.

General O'Daniel To Leave In June

MAJ. GEN. J. W. O'DANIEL

To Be Succeeded By Gen. Burress

Businessmen, Military Leaders Honor TIC Chief at Barbecue

Maj. Gen. John W. "Iron Mike" O'Daniel, Infantry Center comander, is slated to leave Fort Benning during the early part of June for a new assignment. He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress.

General Burress, wartime commander of the 100th division and more recently commander of the U.S. constabulary in Germany, arrived in the U. S. April 23 and is expected at Fort Benning next week.

Some 300 Columbus business men and Fort Benning military leaders gathered at a farewell barbecue last Monday night in the Fine Arts building at the Fair Grounds in Columbus to honor General O'Daniel.

In addressing the gathering, General O'Daniel declared that Fort Benning personnel will be tripled within the next year. Speaking on national security, the general, in his final public address here, called for adherence to the "policy already begun" of developing a strong national security.

He asserted that only three things can happen in America. These three possibilities, he asserted are: to wait and waste, to fiddle and fight, or to prepare and have peace. Ruling out the first two as unacceptable, the general declared that we should form a strong national security policy by retaining strong regular forces backed up by a strong reserve.

The wartime leader of the famed Third division assumed command of the Infantry Center June 11, 1946. Prior to that he was commandant of the Infantry School, a post he took over on July 25, 1945.

One of the outstanding military leaders of World War II, General O'Daniel's career dates back to July, 1916, when he was a corporal in the First Infantry, Delaware National Guard, during the Mexican border crisis. He was honorably discharged in February, 1917 and after serving as a cadet in the Reserve Officers Training camp at Fort Myers, Virginia, was commissioned a second lieutenant in August, 1917.

He went overseas with the 11th Infantry regiment to serve with the American Expeditionary Forces in France in the first world war. He participated in the St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne offensives and was later wounded at St. Mihiel.

1919, General O'Daniel was Returning to the United States with the 11th Infantry in May, transferred to the 25th Infantry at Camp Stephen D. Little, Nogales, Arizona.

After serving as instructor in the New Jersey National Guard, he came to Fort Benning in September, 1927, where he graduated from company officers' course in May, 1928. Upon his graduation, he was assigned to duty with the 21st Infantry regiment at Schofield Barrack Hawaii. He became commanding officer of the Military Police detachment of the Hawaiian department in January, 1930, returning to the states in October, 1931 for duty with the 12th Infantry at Fort Howard Maryland.

Prior to World War II he was commanding officer of the Second battalion, 24th Infantry, here and from December, 1941, to June 6, 1942, he was assistant chief of staff, G-3, of the Third Army.

New Group Named To Youth Council

A new group of officers and enlisted men were last week appointed members of the Infantry Center youth council, officials have announced.

The new appointments include Lt. Col. Ben Harrell, Lt. Col. Jesse F. Wheeler, Jr., Lt. Col. Wallace M. Hale, Capt. Alden E. Clifford, Capt. Francis E. Naughton, M-Sgt. Robert L. Short, M-Sgt. David V. McLemore and Sgt William Maurer.

103 Screened By W-O Board

A total of 103 warrant offices aspirants have been processed by the warrant officer screening center out of 416 applications received up to Monday, it was revealed today.

Applicants reporting here for screening receive their notification from Third Army headquarters, and each applicant will be notified by the Department of the Army or the Department of the Air Force regarding the results of the interviews.

The local board, which was established here two weeks ago, plans to process 100 men weekly in the program that is expected to run for approximately three months.

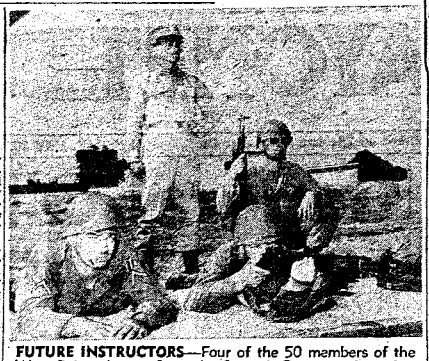
Iranians Depart After Two-Day Tour of Center

An Iranian military party, composed of four high-ranking officers and headed by Col. Mehdi Hashtroodi, left Fort Benning by plane Wednesday following a two-day study of infantry and airborne developments at the Infantry Center.

Accompanying Col. Mehdi-Hashtroodi were Col. Mahamad-Tachi-Majidi, Col. Afsharpur and Lt. Col. Abbas Farzanegan. The four Iranian officers, who arrived here Sunday, are on a 27-day tour of U. S. military installations to study the United States army school system, its methods of instructions and scope.

All four officers are key men in the Iranian military department. Colonal Hashtroodi is a graduate of the Iranian Staff college and has also studied in France. Colonel Mahamad-Tachi-Majidi is a graduate of St. Cyr and the Iranian Staff college.

Colonel Afsharpur also is a graduate of the Iranian Staff college, while Lt. Col. Farzanegan graduated from the American college at Teheran, the Military college, the Advanced Signal school, and has studied in England.



Following a conference with Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, Infantry Center commander, early Monday morning the delegation began its tour with a visit to the office of coordinator of training. Monday morning the visitors toured the Communication section, Advanced Officers' class No. 7, Automotive section, training aids exhibit, and witnessed a demonstration of rifles, hand grenades, rocket launchers, and flame throwers at Bickford range.

Tuesday morning the Iranians studied the latest airborne techniques and methods during a tour of the Airborne section, and in the afternoon they visited the Associate Basic class No. 6, viewed a demonstration of recoilless weapons at Patton range, and later observed the problem, "Conduct of Defense of a Front Line Battalion."

Accompanied by Lt. Col. Kenney T. Brunsvold, tour conductor, the group will stop next at New Orleans, La., proceeding from there to Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Riley, Kans., Fort Leavenworth, Kans., Fort Sill, Okla., and Washington, D. C.

Left to right, are, in prone position, Pfc. K. E. Quart and Pvt. T. J. Butts. In the rear, supervisiting the training is Lt. Kenneth Elliot, standing, assistont platoon leader, and T-Sgt. W. B. LOCAL PLATOON GOES TO ACADEMY IN JUNE

A group to fifty men of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team have been training here as a demonstration team which will go to West Point late in June to help train the future officers of the United States army.

The unit, organized and trained under the tutelage of Lt. Robert N. Ives assisted by 2nd Lt. Kenneth Elliot and T-Sgt. Homer D. Simpson, will make up a demonstration platoon known as the West Point platoon.

The platoon, which is slated to leave for West Point, N. Y., around June 23, will conduct training at the academy for approximately two months. At the academy the combat team members will demonstrate four phases of squad and platoon problems, including technique of fire, squad in attack and defense day and night, squad in advanced guard and actions of its leader, flank guards, routes of march, and attack of a fortified position.

POST EMERGENCY CREW DRAGS RIVER FOR BODY

Battling a rapid current and hazardous waters, an emergency crew from Fort Benning was foiled in its attempt to recover a drowned body recently from the Chattahoochee river near LaGrange, Ga.

Although the local crew, comprised of personnel from the post engineers and fire department, was unsuccessful in locating the body, the dyamite which they were forced to use after everything else failed, was believed to have been instrumental in bringing up the body which was found the next day some four miles downstream.

Marr Named Adjutant Of Airborne Battalion

Capt. John W. Marr, formerly commanding officer of the Airborne battalion's Company C, has been named battalion adjutant, according to an announcement made this week.

First Lt. Jones N. Epps, Sr., has replaced Captain Marr as company commander, and 2nd Lt. Maurice H. Schrepel has been appointed company executive officer.

Called upon in the emergency the Fort Benning detail labored throughout the day of May 7 and part of the night in probing for the body. Headed by Capt. Alden E. Clifford, executive officer of the post engineers, the party included M-Sgt. Eugene C. Crawford, S-Sgt. Clifton Lewey and Sgt. Augustin Mareno of the post engineers, and Cpl. Alvan B. Alford and Pfc. Joseph D. Chambliss of the post fire department.

Equipped with regular shallow water diving equipment, consisting of diving helmet and air compressor, plus a power boat, the crew encountered trouble in the rough stream with its jagged bottom. The swift moving current prevented use of the diving equipment, while the jagged rocks made navigation and dragging for the body doubly difficult.

Unable to gain much headway, the Fort Benning party resorted to the use of dynamite, but the body still failed to show. It was early the next morning that the drowned body was discovered downstream.

The man who had the honor of collecting arms from the Japanese when Maj. Yoshitsugu Akamatsu surrendered his troops on Tokashiki Shima in August, 1945, 1st Sgt. Jacob Harrison, retired last week after 30 years service.

Compiling a total of 26 years and three months with Company E, 24th Infantry regiment Sergeant Harrison served 17 months in France during World War I and 42 months in the Pacific during World War II.

He considers his presence at the surrender of the Japanese on Tokashiki Shima as the highlight of his more than 30 years in the army. (The commander of the Jap forces on the isle, Maj. Yoh Yoshitsugu Akamatsu, surrendered his troops to Lt. Col. H. A. N. Connolly, commanding officer of the Second battalion, 24th Infantry regiment on August 23, 1945).

A native of Charleston, S. C., Sergeant Harrison entered the service in January, 1918, and sailed with the 24th Infantry regiment for France two months later. He returned from the first world war in June, 1919, was discharged, and reenlisted after a short leave.

Reentering the army in 1919 he rejoined the 24th Infantry regiment at Camp Furlong, New Mexico. The regiment moved to Fort Benning in October, 1922, remaining here until it left for overseas duty in April, 1942.

Sergeant Harrison went overseas again in 1942 with the 24th, returning from the Pacific in October, 1945. The regiment is still in Japan.

Eighth Planning Texas Reunion

Veterans of the famed Eighth Infantry division are engaged in plans for the formation of a division association. Under the leadership of Major General William G. Weaver, retired, a group of eight men, "Golden Arrow" veterans of World War II, are planning a reunion at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, in the fall, when the association will be formally organized.

The history of the unit dates back to World War I, when it was activated at Camp Fremont, California, in January, 1918. Arriving in France after the cessation of hostilities, the "Pathfinder division," as it was known then, was returned to the United States and inactivated in January, 1919.

The Eighth, reactivated in July, 1940, has in its World War II record the bloody actions in Normandy, at Brest, the Hurtgen forest and the pursuit of the enemy across Germany. Establishing a bridgehead across the Elbe river, the Eighth's final action ended with the capture of 244,000 prisoners in a 25-mile drive that linked the division with the Russian forces.

During the combat period the division was commanded successively by Major General Donald A. Stroh, Major General William G. Weaver, and Major General Bryant E. Moore.

After its redeployment to the U. S. the division retrained at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, and was inactivated in November, 1945.

The Taylor Report

Since the release of the Taylor Report by the Department of the Army on May 6, there have been several newspaper columnists, of the Robert Ruark calibre, who have scorned and ridiculed the findings made public. This is in line with the policy of those people who constantly use their talents to belittle the army organization with or without provocation. Should those people spend as much time in constructive criticism as they do in stirring up disfavor and in attempting to bring discredit upon the armed forces, their observations would certainly be given more credulity.

As it is, however, those columnists and newspapermen who continue to hound the army and its sister services do the country an injustice. This is indeed regretable, for, taken as a whole, most of those peole who are guilty of ridiculing the army could be of great service in making the public understand what is meant by certain policies which the army enforces.

Of course, it is true that in many instances the columnists and newspapermen are giving the reading public what they want. There are, unfortunately, many people--some in influential positions--who would go to any lengths to accomplish their objective: poking fun at the army.

Frankly, we don't konw of a single organization so large as the army which is operated so efficiently as is the army.

Those people who have waxed so eloquent over what they term descrepancies in Orville J. Taylor's report to the army should stop to consider the magnitudinous task which faced the American military governor and then supervising that which had been established.

At the end of the war in Germany, there was no government of any kind. If ever there was chaos, Germany personified it. Yet, only a little more than three years later, there is a German government, which, although not diplomatically recognized, is administering the needs of the country, with the supervision and advice of the American army, in a commendable manner. Despite this obvious fact, there are some who maintain that again the "army has bungled". How can that be justified in the face of facts which belie such statements? We believe it to be just another case of finding a scrapegoat for things which are found to be unpleasant.

A leading newsmagazine made much fun of these statements in the Taylor report: "It would be disingenuous not to concede that such liasons (between Germans and Americans) do exist on a very broad scale. However, many of the persons involved are entirely capable of performing their professional duties, and that mush be the criterion for their employment."

If the author of the article had reported the entire statement regarding the conduct and demeanor of American personnel in Germany, we are confident he would not have found so much to laugh at. If he had used any intelligence in analyzing the report, he would have immediately realized that the statements to which we referred above are not stupid, nor or they funny.

In the first place Taylor was referring not to the ability of the American soldier to do his job but to the ability of the German civil servant. Now would he advocate the firing of employes who do not adhere to a strict moral code as interpreted by his magazine? After all, the private lives of persons, so long as they do not interfere with efficient operation of any organization, are not in themselves sufficient basis for dropping a person from the payroll. And Mr. Taylor went on to say, in the part we quoted, that liaison between Germans and Americans was not of such a nature to prevent the Germans from doing a satisfactory job.

Naturally, we are not condoning illicit liaisons; still, we think those who would fire such employes are going off "half-cocked."

It must be realized that the continental attitude toward such acts has always been somewhat different from our own.

Strictly Editorializing

THE WOMEN'S ARMY Corps celebrated its sixth anniversary last Friday, May 14, marking six years of devoted service to the United States. Although the WAC did not celebrate its birthday as a regular component of the army, according to Col. Mary Halloren, WAC director, there is still hope that it will be integrated into the regular military establishment.

From where we sit, this would be a wise step on the part of congress, and we have expressed our views to that effect many times on this page. We can't help thinking about the excellent job the women of the army performed during the war and the excellent job they are still performing wherever they happen to be.

Speaking of the WAC reminds us of the group we met in Birmingham, England, in 1946. They were passing through on their way to the continent, and to men who hadn't seen an American woman since mid-1943, they were a welcome sight indeed.

OF COURSE WE don't advocate making the WAC a part of the armed forces merely to provide the male soldiers something to ogle. On the contrary, the WAC wouldn't want to be a part of the army should that be the case. But there are jobs which can be handled better by a woman than by a man; and we, for one, would like to have them a permanent part of the army.

LAST THURSDAY AFTERNOON, May 13, the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team held its first regimental parade at Stilwell field. For all the former Third division men who are now on duty with the Seventh, it was quite an occasion since they have at last been able to acknowledge their presence. They looked like real infantry soldiers with their snap and precision drill.

Enlistments in the Seventh are still open to former Third division men, and to certain qualified veterans.

THE NAME OF GOD

By

CHAPLAIN J. F. RAFFERTY

When General Sherman died in New York it was announced that his remains would be brought to St. Louis by a special train. As the train was speeding through the Southern part of Illinois, the engineer looked out and saw in the dim light of morning a solitary soldier standing near the track; and as the engine whirled by the soldier presented arms The old soldier had learned that the body of the general who led him in battle would be brought on the special train. He donned his faded uniform of blue and, in the solemn stillness of night waited to pay a last tribute of reverence and respect to his old commander.

Soldiers of the 90th division, on their way to the front and possible death, stood in their trucks to cheer General George Patton as he passed them on the road at a critical period of the Ardennes fight.

All nations honor their great personages. I am not referring to generals only but to those who have walked the more quiet, yet not less useful, paths of life. The heart of man is greatful to those who have in a heroic degree benefited others by their life's work.

But, what is man compared with God? What are all men compared to God? What are all the gifts, favors and sacrifices of great men when compared to all that God has done for us? If we honor men should we not honor God?

All the nations thou has made shall come and adore thee, O Lord; and glorify thy name. (Ps 85, v 9).

What name under heaven can be compared to the sweet name of Jesus. If we would not dishonor the name of the great men, of Washington, of Lincoln, of soldiers such as Lee or Grant, why do we dishonor the name of God, the sacred name of Jesus? If we insult the president by malice aforethought and we are found out, we will be severely punished, for in dishonoring our leader we would have dishonored our country and proved ourselves traitors.

Do we think that God is less powerful than man? If man punishes us for acts of dishonor, will an all powerful fail to punish us for irreverence towards Him and His Holy Name? It is true God is patient, but He is jealous of His name. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord Thy God in vain is the second commandment. Those who break God's commandments will meet with a just punishment. "The man that sweareth much shall be filled with iniquity, and a scourge shall not depart from him." (Eccles. 32, v 12).

If we have contracted the evil habit of profanity, let us set to work to correct it. With God's Grace we can overcome and master ourselves, but with it we need determination. As soldiers we are expected, when circumstances demand, to act with determination and resolution to overcome the bad habit, we have contracted. If we do this, God will bless and forgive us for the past. If we are true soldiers of our country we can be also true soldiers of God, and, if true soldiers, will use with reverence the name of God our leader and our Commander-in-Chief.

THE IDES OF MARCH

Thorton Wilder's latest novel, The Ides of March, proves that all contemporary novels are not worthless; to the contrary, if all novels were as excellent as are those by Mr. Wilder, the publishing houses would do a landslide business.

Mr. Wilder uses the months just preceding the assassination of Ceasar as the theme for his historical novel. Most of the action takes place in the capital of the Roman goverment although occassionally the scene shifts slightly to some other part of Ceasar's realm.

The Ides of March is presented in the form of letters to and from Ceasar, friends and relatives of Ceasar. It moves rather rapidly and with a smoothness that proves Mr. Wilder's ability.

Although several passages become slightly involved at times, as a whole the presentation is excellent. The letters are masterpieces of style, and the characters are easily judged by what they write. Mr. Wilder has quite successfully caught the feeling of Ceasar's time and has artfully integrated the many persons who contributed to Ceasar's death into a delightful tale of intrigue.

The author makes all the characters come to life, and indeed The Ides of March reads as if t happened yesterday instead of hefore the birth of Christ. The prejudices, the hatreds, the loves of mankind are about the same today as they were in Ceasar's day, according to Mr. Wilder.

Gustavus Franklin Swift, founder of Swift & Company, left school when he was 14 years old to work for his brother, a butcher, for $1 a week, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. At 16 he entered the business world with $20 borrowed capital. When he died at 63, Swift was the head of the meat-packing firm which had a capitalization of $25,000,000.

BY

MURRAY E. HILL

The donating of blood has always been associated with Red Cross service, so when an interesting story develops about a blood donor one may always rest assured that your Red Cross was in the picture somewhere.

Our government does a wonderful job in giving medical care to servicemen, veterans and their dependents. If a transfusion is needed the patient will receive blood at the expense of the government.

Often times, though, it's not a case of the payment involved, or a cash transaction or even the difficulty of finding a free donor. More often it's a case of finding someone with a rare type o blood. Quite recently a dependent mother of a serviceman was scheduled for a major operation. She had type B blood. The hospital authorities were unable to locate blood donors whose blood would match that of the patient. A hurried call was made to Mrs. Margaret Strickland in charge of the Red Cross office at the hospital. Mrs. Strickland hastily conferred with Ralph George, assistant field director of the Red Cross at the post. Mr. George and Mrs. Strickland both realized the time was important and there would be difficulty.

Mr. George personally contacted 1st Sgt. Flutie Colfield of the Military Police dachment, Section II. The sergeant went into action, quickly found two soldiers who would act as donors, and they were rushed to the hospital in a jeep. I make no mention of the donors' names here for certain reasons, but you may rest assured that your Red Cross has written them letters of appreciation for their splendid humanitarian act.

Rainbows can be formed by moonlight just as they are formed by sunlight, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, but the colors are very faint and difficult to distinguish.

An announcement was made by Mrs. Ryder that Mrs. R. A. O'Brien will take the position of vice-president of the Benning chapter on June 1 to replace Mrs. Peggy Groneweg who is leaving. Softballers Vying For League Toga

Fourteen Games Scheduled For Opening Week of Play

Four twilight tilts Monday evening marked the opening of Fort Benning's 1948 softball season, and a total of 14 games were on tap for the league's first week of activity

Scoring shutouts in their first encounters, the Infantry School detachment and the red team of the 204th Transportation battalion copped the opening-day limelight. The ISD ten breezed past Company K of the Airborne Infantry regiment 10-0, and the Truckers' red team blanked the 999th Field Artillery battalion 11-0.

In another first-day clash, the 30th Medical group shaded the blue team of the Truckers 2-5, and the day's other win was chalked up by the Airborne Troopers, who blasted the Seventh Regimental Combat team to the tune of 10-4.

During the first-half schedule, which is slated to continue until June 25, each squad entered in the race will have two contests, one as host and one as visitor, with each other team in the campaign.

All games will be played on the home team's unit diamond, and will be of seven-inning duration. With the exception of 1:30 p. m. games each Wednesday, the games will begin at 6 p. m. Saturday, and Sunday games have not been slated.

By contesting the tilts at 6 p. m., spectators and players will be finished in time to witness the intra-mural baseball games at Gowdy field each night, it was pointed out.

The opening phase will be followed by a second half of competition, slated to start on July 1 and continue through Aug. 15. Winning teams of each half will clash for a three-game post series following the completion of the second phase of activity.

In case of a tie for the No. 1 spot in either half, the winner will be decided by a two-for-three game series.

Following the championship series, a rotating trophy will be presented to the post champs, who will retain it until next year's top team is decided. By copping the post title for three consecutive years, a team will be awarded permanent possession of the trophy. Individual awards also will be made to members of the Benning championship squad.

Youthful Shortstop Will Depart Soon From Midget Nine

A key infielder will be lost to the Fort Benning Midgets when shortstop Robert Lindquist leaves with his father, Col. Roy Lindquist, who has received an army assignment in Greece.

Young Lindquist, who has seen service in all of the Midgets' 1948 tilts, was hailed by Manager Richard VanBuskirk as a talented fielder and a better than average base-runner. As yet, no replacement for his spot in the lineup has been found.

With a baseball-minded family to stimulate his interest in the sport, young Robert should be headed for a promising diamond career. His father was a member of the West Point Cadets' baseball teams of the late 1920's and coached the Fort Benning Doughboys through two successful seasons in 1939 and 1940. His sently is a candidate for the varbrother, Roy Lindquist Jr., presity diamond nine at the Maine Central institute.

LOOP-LEADING TWIRLER—Bob Cronin, lanky right-handed ace of the Airborne Trooper pitching staff, took over the top spot on the Fort Benning intra-mural loop's mound roster by pitching a 5 to 4 win over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers in the first half's close-out game at Gowdy field last Wednesday afternoon. Boasting a record of six wins and no losses, Cronin is one of three post pitchers with a no-hitter to his credit this season.

7 Food Service School Enlisted Men Promoted

Seven enlisted men of the Food Service School were among Fort Benning troops who received promotions during the past week.

They include Louis S. Wallace, Warren H. Olsen, Walter F. Dannel, Clarence E. Barks, Walter F. E. Haynes and William L. Perkins, who were promoted to the grade of technical sergeant, and Jay C. Olsen, who was promoted to the grade of sergeant.

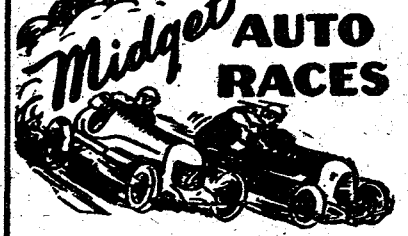
Post Medics Blast Student Nine 12-4

The post's Medic diamond delegation continued the streak which brought them from fifth to third place at the close of the Fort Benning league's first half by pounding out a 12 to 4 triumph over the Student Training regiment nine in the second-phase opener at Gowdy field Sunday afternoon.

After getting off to a slow start, starter Arthur Botjer of the Medics, who was credited with the triumph, settled down to blank the students for five straight innings.

Botjer's trouble started in the second inning when Harold Brown, STR right-fielder, powerdrove a four-bagger over the right field fence to lead off. However, the young side went out when Joe Morgan and pitcher Willie Weaver whiffed, and pitcher Ard Thompson popped to the third-baseman.

The Medics' first tally came on a costly error by Thompson, STR receiver, who was charged with a total of seven miscues for the game. Otto Loroesh drew a base on balls to start the inning, stole second, and went to third on Paul Lewish's single to left. It was then that Thompson let one of Weaver's pitches get throug him to score Loroesh and send Lewish all the way to third.



In his next appearance at the plate in the visiting half of the fourth, Brown again started some STR fireworks. He blasted another long one over the right-gardener's head which hit a compact spot in the field and bounced out of the park. However, local ground rules limit the batter to two bases on such an occasion.

Brown scored when Ernest Stewart lashed a single into center. Advancing to second when his blow got through the Medic center-fielder, Stewart came home when Thompson, the hapless STR catcher, got his only hit of the day, a one-bagger to left. He scored the third run of the inning on a fielder's choice.

Although they crossed the plate twice in their half of the fourth, the Medics still were on the short end of a 4 to 3 court as they came through with a three-run outburst in the last of the fifth.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

After observing some of the upsets and near upsets which occured during the closing stages of activity in the post intra-mural league's first half, we'll predict a much closer race for the loop's final phase.

Of course, the Infantry School detachment Profs still loom as the team to beat during the second half, largely due to the fact that they combined powerful hitting and spectacular pitching to go through the league's first half undefeated.

The Profs will go into the second phase of the campaign with their team virtually unchanged, but some of the weaker aggregations of the first half have plugged some gaps that should put them well into the running for this period.

Another factor to be considered in this phase of the league is the addition of two new squads, neither of which have seen action at Gowdy field. The recent additions to the circuit are the Seventh Regimental combat team and the 999th Field Artillery battalion.

Although no publicly-known steps have been taken toward the formation of the 1948 Doughboy team, we feel that there are several players on comparatively obscure teams which should not be overlooked.

First, we might mention big Stan Letonsky, hard-hitting first -sacker with the fifth-place 328th Ordance team, who, for all practical purposes, was the loop's leading hitter at the first half.

Several batters outdid Letonsky insofar as batting average goes, but the .459 mark registered by the husky infielder topped that of any player who saw service in all of his team's scheduled games.

In addition to his high plate average, Letonsky led the league in hits, doubles, extra-base blows and runs batted in. He also is tied for the lead in triples and homeruns. Stan is the only batter in the league with two over-the-fence homeruns to his credit.

There is little doubt that the contributions of right-hander John Graves of the Medics to the Doughboy pitching staff would be a big help in the 1948 campaign.

Although Graves has no firsts to his credit in the league hurling department, he holds second spot on the roster with five victories and no defeats, and is directly behind the STR's Wilie Weaver on the strikeout list wth a total of 59.

Besides being a nemesis for the league's heavy lumber swingers, Graves is the leading hitter on the Medic team, clouting at a .382 pace at the close of the first half.

Every now and then there are homeruns in the sandlots or bush leagues, but there also have been instances where balls have been lost in the big, wide-open, modern stadia.

Sam Payne, the Phillies' groundskeeper some 30 years ago, had a small locker in right-center field where he kept his tools. One day, the door to the locker was left open and went unnoticed until a visiting player socked a long drive which skipped right through the opening. Dode Paskert, playing center field for the Phils, reached into the locker and began throwing out buckets, shovels, crow bars, and miscellaneous implements. Still no ball. Finally, he rammed his hand into a bucket of mortar, fished around for a moment, and came up with a thoroughly plastered baseball. This he threw, mortar and all, toward the infield but after the batter already had crossed the plate.

Dom DiMaggii of the Red Sox once hit a fly which was fair by inches in right field, and it bounced over into the Boston bullpen. Wally Moses swooped over to recover the ball, and held Dom to what he deserved--a double. In frantic haste, Wally groped and scratched and pawed. DiMaggio finished the circuit before Moses found the ball nested at the end of a bench in the bullpen. Edgar Smith, performing on the hill for the White Sox, lost the game by a 1-0 count—all because of the homer by DiMaggio.

Win Over ASU Moves Medics To Third Place

BY GEORGE FRINK

In their last game of the Fort Benning league's first half, the post Medics trounced the 3440th Army Service unit 11-2 to move into third place on the loop roster.

Winning his fifth game of the season, John Graves, Medic moundsman, allowed the ASU only seven hits. The stocky right-hander has yet to lose a game this season, and is one of the post's leading pitchers. He also is one of the batting mainstays of the Medic team, having an average of .382 at the half-way mark.

The 3440th squad chalked up a run in the first on a walk, a single, and some fancy base-running. In the third inning, Lawrence Hall, ASU twirler, tripled to right and scored on a Medic misplay.

The Medics got three of their runs in the first inning when Otto Lovoesh got a walk, stole second, and scored on a single by catcher Willie Griffin. Graves then drove a single into center, and Hector Pachico tripled also scoring both Griffin and Graves. With one already away, the next two Medic batters struck out to retire the side.

Continuing their hitting spree, the Medics got three more tallies in the second and another trio of runs in the fourth. Two more runners crossed the plate in the fifth to end the scoring streak.

Their triumph over the ASU aggregation brought the Medics' wins total for the season to seven, including a 9-0 forfeit by the Lawson field Flyers. Charged with seven defeats, the Medics wound up the loop's first half with an even .500 average.

Troopers Drub Ordnance Nine In Circuit Game

The Airborne battalion Troopers chalked up their initial victory of the Fort Benning league's second phase Tuesday night when they got off to an early start, and pounded out an 11-3 win over the 328th Ordnance battalion nine.

Ten Trooper batters went to the plate in the last of the first as the host squad jumped to a 5-0 lead.

Leading off for the airborne delegation, Paul Bonair nicked ordnance twirler Bob Glover for a double, and scored when Ralph Terry, the next batter, drove out a one-bagger.

Bob Kinard, who has been out of the Trooper lineup for the past several games with an injury, lashed out a single in his first plate appearance. After Ken Watts had walked to load the bags, Griffin reached on a fielder's choice as a run scored. Another airborne tally romped across the plate when Herb Myatt reached first on an error, and Tom Gallagher drove in the fourth and fifth runs of the inning with a base knock.

The flame got nine picked up its first tally in the top of the second when Stan Letonsky belted a drive which bounced over the left-center field fence, and got a double under local ground rules. He scored when Charles Jones got to first on an error.

A three-run third inning for the Troopers was sparked by pitcher Ray Stem, who slammed out a two-bagger to drive in a pair of counters. Stem scored with the final tally of the frame when Bonair banged a single his second hit of the tilt.

After the visiting ordnance team picked up one tallies in the fifth and eighth stanzas, the Troopers counted three times in the home half of the eighth on successive doubles by Kinard and Terry, and a one-bagger by Len Carney.

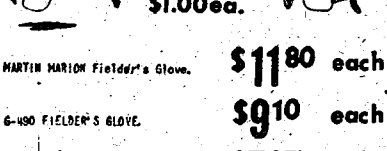
Going the route for the Trooper team, Stem limited the flame pot lads to seven safe blows while Glover, the losing moundsman gave up 11 safeties.

Fast Midget Field Slated To Race At Idle Hour Friday

A fast field of racers is expected to spark the midget auto program at Idle Hour park Friday night, promoter A. P. Brewer announced.

The line-up is expected to include at least four previous winners of the 20-lap final feature which last week went to Jimmy Reed.

Last week's races were marked by prompt starting and minimum delays, which resulted in the final checkered flag's dropping at 10:05 p. m., following an 8:30 p. m. start on the first heat.



Enlivening the proceedings were Bud Swinson, returning to Martin stadium for the first time this season. Swanson pushed his U-2 racer with the laminated chromium grill around the track at a fast clip, and picked up a good number of points, winning the first heat and nosed out Johnny Suggs for show-position in the final.

After the races, rewer announced that five spectators had correctly named the five front-runner in order for the final feature. He said they will be notified during the week and introduced from the judge's stand Friday.

Time trials start at 7:30 p. m., and heat-racing will begin at 8:30 p. m., with the cars which have been qualified by that time, Brewer announced.

FENCE-BUSTER—Stan Letonsky, power-hitting Ordnance first-baseman, has proved the most dangerous hitter to pitch to during the first half of the post intro-mural league. Hitting at a .451 clip, big Stan's loop-leading honors include hits, two-baggers, extra-base blows, and runs batted in. He also is tied for the circuit's top spot in triples and homeruns. Army Is 'Miniaturizing' Signal Corps Equipment

The pack-horse aspect of Signal corps soldiering is passing into history, thanks to the ingenuity of science and the persistence of army research.

Today vest-pocket type signal equipment, candy-bar size batteries and all manner of portable radar, radio and radiosonde outfits lend a degree of streamlining to communications which was unknown even as late as the end of World War II.

"Miniaturization" is the official description of the Signal corps program designed to fit the task of communications into an army geared for speed and mobility and in which much of the signal equipment used in the late war is becoming obsolete.

Two main purposes are served in the constant search for smaller, lighter and more efficient signal equipment, Colonel E. R. Petzing, Chief of the Engineering and Technical Division of the Signal Corps, said here today.

First, he said, the defense needs of the nation require signal equipment which is lighter in weight and can be handled with greater facility and with less personnel. It must also be more durable to withstand the rigors of swift mobility and the wide climatic range to which it may be subjected.

Second is a means of providing greater protection to soldiers under battle conditions, a factor which was not always present in days when signal equipment was cumbersome and conspicuous, he added.

"Today we strive constantly to compress the size of equipment and even now we are not prepared to say that because, for example, a sending and receiving set the size of a package of cigarettes has been constructed, we have reached the floor of miniaturization," Colonel Petzing said.

"Some of the achievements include a radar set which once required five two-and-a-half ton trucks to transport, reduced to the size of a standard office desk and easily transported in a single truck; midget storage batteries weighing only five and a half ounces able to produce enough electrical energy when used, four to pack, to operate a transmitter up to 100,000 feet above the earth's surface; a complete telephone switchboard weighing only 2 1-2 pounds which can replace the army's standard 60-pound instrument; radio tubes a fraction of an inch in length, and many other units of signal equipment.

"Miniaturization," Colonel Petzing explained, "is not the sole objective of army research. Global operations in World War II were complex and abundant and posed many serious problems. The difficulties of weight and bulk were augmented by those of climate both extremes and such factors as fungus growth which in tropical and sub tropical areas contributed much to rapid deterioration. All these have since gone under the probing light of scientific research and one by one they are being solved.

"Signal corps research," Colonel Petzing said, "is, in effect, the long range view in constant operation, and change is the dominant factor to be considered."

First Lt. William L. Baker has been appointed commanding officer of the Airborne battalion's Company E, succeeding Capt. Raymond H. Nielson, who has left Fort Benning for duty with the 11th Airborne division in Japan, it was announced this week.

The First Sgt. and his wife had just had a love spat and were driving along a country road without speaking until a mule brayed.

"Yes," said his wife, by marriage."

Troopers Edge Truckers Squad

Sixth Consecutive Triumph Chalked Up by Bob Cronin

The Airborne battalion Troopers concluded their first half activity in the post intra-mural diamond league by shading the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers 5 to 4 in last Wednesday afternoon's Gowdy field nightcap.

Bob Cronin, who twirls from the starboard side of the mound, allowed the Trucker nine only five base blows in chalking up his sixth straight victory of the season. The speedy right-hander's 6-0 record heads the opening phase's pitching roster.

Collecting seven safeties in as many innings, the Troopers tagged Willie Love, Trucker hurler, with his first loss of the season. Although Love has seen service in seven tilts, he has yet to be credited with a win.

Aiding Cronin in turning back the transportation team, Len Carney, hard-hitting Trooper second baseman, collected three-for-three for a perfect day at the plate. Carney accounted for three Airborne tallies, by scoring twice and batting in a run.

The second-place Troopers got their first run in the visiting half of the second when Carney, with one down, banged a three-bagger into right field, and scored when first-sacker Herb Myatt drove a single into center.

Hanging up a tally in their half of the second stanza on two successive blows, the Truckers had a fling at the lead when they blanked the Troopers in the third, and counted twice in the last half of the inning.

In chalking up their two tallies in the third, the Truckers took advantage of three Troopers errors, two by pitcher Cronin, and one by shortstop Paul Bonair. Bob Chandler got the only 204th bingle of the inning, and batted in a run.

Coming to bat in the fourth, the Troopers closed the gap by scoring twice on two timely singles and a base on balls. Bob Griffin walked to start the inning, went to second on Ralph Terry's infield out, and romped across the plate when Ken Watts drove a single to center. Watts came in from second when Carney notched his second hit of the game, a single to left.

The Truckers had another brief fling at the lead in the east of the fourth when Emerson Studevan walked, went to third when pitcher Love doubled to right, and scored on a wild pitch.

The contest was again thrown into a deadlock in the top of the fifth when Cronin drew a walk after two mates had gone out, made a theft of second, and romped to pay dirt when Bonair lashed a single to right.

The Troopers chalked up their winning margin in the top half of the sixth when Carney, with two mates down, got his third hit of the game, a triple to deep left, and scored on a sharply-spanked one-bagger by catcher Spike Gallagher.

It looked like the game might be headed for extra innings when Bob Chandler, leading off for the Truckers in their half of the seventh, reached on an error, and stole his way around to third base. However Cronin set Lucky Bryant down on strikes, Wills popped to Gallagher, and Hubert went out from Cronin to Myatt to end the threat.

The word corselet, which now means a tight undergarment, originally referred to a case of armor, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Corselets were worn by infantry during the 17th century.

ISD Nine Beats East Thomaston

Continuing their winning streak outside league competition, the Infantry School detachment Profs soundly trounced East Thomaston, Ga., 19-7, before a capacity crowd Monday night at Thomaston.

Trailing until the fifth inning, the Profs rallied to knot the count at six all and went ahead in the next frame with a big eight-run rally which was topped off by Chick Shiver's home run.

In the big sixth, the Profs banged out seven hits, six of them for extra bases. Shiver started the rally with a long four-base knock, followed by Silcox's double, Basso's single and Lauve's triple. Burnette and Smith followed suit with two rapid doubles and tallied on a triple by Brooks.

Coasting the rest of the way in, the Benningites tallied two runs in each of the remaining three innings. East Thomaston added their other tally in the ninth canto.

The Profs chalked up 19 runs on 21 hits, while the losing semi-pro club sent seven runs across on six bingles.

Local Game Rules Undergo Changes

Two revisions in Fort Benning current hunting and fishing regulations have been announced by Maj. John C. Wretschko, secretary of the Fish and Game Maintenance association.

The changes permit seining for live bait in all reservation streams and in Victory pond, and authorize the use of bait containers and minnow traps.

Seining in Victory pond, it was pointed out, will be permitted only from the shore, and the use of seines in other ponds will be prohibited. Any edible fish caught in a seine must not be handled, but emptied back into the stream after minnows have been removed from the net.

10,000 Expected To Enroll At TIS

Fifteen Courses To Be Offered Students During Academic Year

Approximately 10,000 officers and enlisted men from the United States and foreign nations are expected to study at the Infantry School during the 1948-49 academic year, Infantry Center officials announced this week.

A total of 15 courses will be divided into 29 classes, with eight courses for officers and seven for enlisted men.

Officials said that there would be fewer classes this year, and that the emphasis would be placed on less time and more students in each class.

The foreign students will come from European and Latin American countries, representing about 28 different nations. A majority, officials said, will come from the Latin American countries.

Beginning with the July 20 classes, the scholl will operate on a five-day-week basis, with Wednesday afternoons devoted to athletics under the supervision of the Student Training regiment. Only 36 hours weekly will be spent in classes.

Among the courses scheduled for officers are basic infantry, 22 weeks, associate basic, 13 weeks, advanced infantry, 39 weeks, associate advanced, 13 weeks, communications, 19 weeks, and motors, 12 weeks.

Two joint courses for both officers and enlisted men will also be on the curriculum. They are the basic airborne, five and one-half weeks, and the pathfinder, 10 weeks.

Enlisted men's courses include the infantry non-commissioned officers' course, 18 and one-half weeks, communications chief, 20 weeks, radio repair, 20 and one-half weeks, motors, 15 weeks and parachute rigger, six weeks.

National Guard and Organized Reserve Corps officers and enlisted men will attend some of the classes, officials said.

Ferris Assumes PM Duties Here

Lt. Col. Edwin Ferris, formerly provost marshal at Sandia base, N. M., has arrived at Fort Benning to assume his duties as Infantry Center provost marshal, succeeding Lt. Col. Ralph A. Tolve, who will take over the post vacated by Colonel Ferris.

Provost marshal for seven months at Sandia base prior to his arrival here, Colonel Ferris was previously connected with the special weapons project at the Alburquerque station.

A graduate of West Point with the class of 1931, Colonel Ferris received his initial assignment with the First Infantry divison at Fort Wadsworth, N. Y., before gong overseas in 1937 to Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, where he served for two years with the 27th Infantry and the 11th Tank company.

The new provost marshal attended the company officers' course at the Infantry School in 1940, later going to Fort Lewis, Wash. He returned to Fort Benning in July, 1940, when the activation of the Second Armored division was begun. After transferring to the 14th Armored division, he left for a year at the Command and General Staff school, Fort Leavenworth, Kans. and subsequent duty with the X Corps at Camp Sherman, Texas, returning to the 14th Armored in the fall of 1943.

While serving with the 14th, Colonel Ferris was wounded during the drive through the Vosges

General Burress Arrives On Post

Saturday Review Honors New Chief

Visits Activities During Week Prior To Assuming Command

A background of cannonfire and martial music heralded the arrival here Saturday morning of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, wartime commander of the 100th Infantry division, who is scheduled to succeed Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel as commanding general of the Infantry Center in early June.

General Burress, who arrived in the U. S. on April 23 from Germany where he commanded the American constabulary, inspected a guard of honor, composed of elements of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team and 999th Field Artillery battalion, during the brief welcoming ceremonies. The honor guard was commanded by Lt. Col. Jack M. Duncan, of the Seventh.

Immediately afterwards, Generals Buress and O'Daniel went into conference in the outgoing commander's office.

Tuesday he visited the meat cutting plant, ration breakdown section, Food Service School and bakery. Later he visited the Seventh RCT, the Infantry School detachment and the 3440th Army Service unit.

At 10:15 a.m. he inspected the motor pool, followed by a visit to Army Field Forces board No. 3 and the Armed Forces Education Center. Before lunch he also visited Biglerville mess and the Station hospital.

His Wednesday's itinerary included a tour of the Airborne section and a visit to an enlisted motor class. During the morning he also inspected the 30th Medical group and the 999th Field Artillery battalion and toured the Sand Hill area.

General Burress, a native of Richmond, Va., and a graduate of Virginia Military Institute in 1914, has served two previous tours of duty here. He was assistant commandant of the Infantry School in 1941-42 and on the faculty of the old Engineer department in 1920-22.

He was assigned to the Puerto Rican department when he left Benning in 1942. Later he assumed command of the 100th division then at Fort Bragg, N.C., and continued in that capacity all through the campaigns in France and Germany.

General O'Daniel, who has been Infantry School commandant and Infantry Center commander for the past three years, will get a new assignment in June.

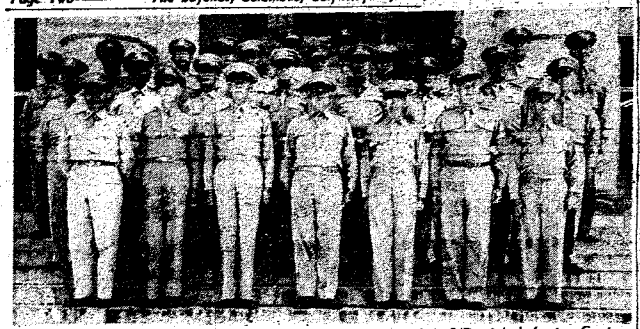
EM Personnel Section Moves

The career guidance plan got another shot in the arm last Saturday when service and pay records of men of the Infantry School Detachment, the Student Training Regiment and the 3440th Army Service unit were returned to their detachment and group headquarters.



According to Capt. Ottis M. Plant, in charge of the enlisted men's personnel division in the absence of Lt. Col. Joe C. Lambert, the return of the records will simplify administrative procedures in advising soldiers concerning the army as a career since each man's records will be more available.

Movement of the records will not result in an end of the work in the headquarters annex, Captain Plant said. The military personnel division, consisting of the classification and assignment branch and personal actions branch will continue to function in the annex with the balance of the adjutant general's administrative functions.

7 ISD Men Promoted To Private First Class

ARMY PLANS TO TRAIN MEN FOR PIO WORK

Public information will become one of the army's career fields when a joint career and practical working plan under consideration in Washington is put into effect, the Department of the Army announced today.

Sponsored jointly by the army's career planning, recruiting and public information agencies, the plan calls for three-year enlistment of highly qualified men direct from civilian life for training in all phases of journalistic, radio and public information work. It is expected that 100 men will be sought this summer under quotas to be established for each army area. The program will probably begin late this year.

Men accepted under the program will, after basic training, receive a two-week orientation course, and then will undergo a three-month period of on-the-job training with newspaper editors, radio station managers and television station operators. During this training period the men will receive full monetary allowances for off-post maintenance and will work as employes of the station or newspaper to which they are assigned.

After the total period of training, about seven months, the soldiers will be selected for public information jobs throughout the world provided their work while in training shows them suitable for the tasks to which they will be assigned.

Depending on the success of the first training cycle, other recruiting drives will be made for public information specialists.

the service there, and served with the 317th Medical battalion of the 80th division, a part of the Third army. He died September 15, 1944. One of three brothers in service, Morris was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart, the Silver Star and the EID ribbon.

Benning Thoroughfares Bear Illustrious Names

Carrying on the traditions of the infantry, the streets, roads and avenues of the world's most complete army post bear proud names of men and units that distinguished themselves in the army's past.

Counting out the honor roll of infantry divisions, serving amid the battles of two great wars, the streets bear the names that history remembers:

Arrowhead road, the 36th or Texas division; Blue Ridge road, the 80th; Buckeye, the 37th; Eighth division road; Sightseeing road, the Sixth division; First Division road; Hourglass road, the famed Seventh division; Indianhead road, the Second division; and the Ivy, the Keystone, the Marne, Red Arrow and Red Diamond.

Rainbow avenue, its quarters still painted the colors of the spectrum, commemorates the history-making 42nd Infantry division.

The courage of the U. S. army is marked with the roll of streets whose names were battles.

Three other streets bear names of men who served the infantry well.

Col. George F. Baltzell received the Distinguished Service medal for service with the AEF. He served as Director of the Infantry board at Fort Benning for many years and Baltzell avenue now bears his name.

Eames avenue wears the name of a commandant of the School of Musketry and of the Infantry School of Arms, historical forerunners of the Infantry School. Col. Henry E. Eames headed the early infantry schools at the Presidio, in California, and at Fort Sill, Okla., until March, 1918.

George W. McIver, brigadier general, served as commandant at the School of Musketry at the Presidio in Monterey from November, 1907, until May, 1911. McIver street now insures his memory in the hearts of infantrymen.

Bushnell road, Collins loop, Bryant street, Dulaney road, Connell street and Dickop street. Loughlin road marks a DSC winner, as do Dublinsy street and Gillespie loop. Legan, Marchant, Yeager, Zuckerman, and Ollrich are also here with their comrades.

Two of the post's most important thoroughfares, Ingersoll street and Vibbert avenue, are also named for Distinguished Service cross winners.

Following his release in April, 1947 he was transferred to the provost marshal general's office, and after a short tour of duty there, attended the Radiological Safety School at Treasure island navy base, Calif.

Recruiting Station Ready To Process Local Men

Enlistments extended or renewed while you wait. Fort Benning personnel can reenlist now for either overseas duty or service here in the states.

A brand-new United States army recruiting station opened the end of last month in Doughboy stadium to serve Fort Benning personnel.

Headed by Major Llewellyn Shaw of the 3440th ASU, the recruiting program receives assistance from T-Sgt Charles E. Turner and S-Sgt. Thomas B. Birdsong.

With the closing of the Central Examining Board April 21, 1948, the Infantry center's recruiting station officially opened its doors at the corner of Vibbert avenue and Ingersol street in the north tower of Doughboy stadium.

Since we are equipped to handle only reenlistments in the regular army," Major Shaw stated, "we can not process civilians for enlistment. All such men must report to the Columbus recruiting station.

"The office is staffed by capable and experienced recruiting personnel who will gladly answer questions for all personnel on reenlistment. We want the men of Fort Benning to feel free to drop in at any time and discuss their reenlistment problem. We are open during the noon hour as well as during the rest of the day," he said.

Catholic Society Planning Picnic

Catholic families here are to be entertained at a picnic at Victory lodge following communion service Sunday, June 13, Holy Name Society officials announced today.

In a short meeting following Mass and Holy Communion recently, plans for the picnic were formulated by the members of the Fort Benning society during breakfast on the lawn of the quarters of Father John F. Rafferty, Catholic chaplain.

After receiving the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and renewing the Holy Name pledge in a body, the society elected Lt. Col. Meade J. Dugas and S-Sgt. Richard K. Williams co-chairman of the picnic committee, and named Maj. Joseph B. Missal, Capt. Harry D. Balyeat, Capt. James K. O'Brien, Lt. William L. Cooper, M Sgt James Reilley, Cpl. Joseph J. Stachniak and Pfc. Robert J. Twilley committee members.

The picnic, to be held for all Catholic families on the post, their friends and house guests, will feature boating, fishing, basketball, volleyball, croquet and dancing. Free bus service will be provided from chapel No. 4 to Victory lodge.

Jackson Group At Food School

Thirty enlisted men and three officers of the Fifth Infantry division from Fort Jackson, S. C., all qualified messmen, are now undergoing a comprehensive instructors' training course at the Food Service school here.

The Fort Jackson men, who began their three-week course Monday, will be trained in a program designed and patterned by the quartermaster general. Following completion of the course here, the men will form the nucleus of the staff which is slated to operate a school, similar to the local Food Service school, at Fort Jackson.

During the first week the future instructors are studing methods of presenting lecture demonstrations and conducting classes in classroom activity. Methods of instructions among the group itself under supervision of Food Service school instructors, will be covered in the second and third weeks.

During the three weeks that they will study methods of training, the Fort Jackson men will be given individual instructions in their specific jobs.

Are We Aiding War?

We have been reading with a great deal of interest since 1946 a magazine called The Society for the prevention of World War III, now a slick paper periodical which is easily recognizable by its flashy red, white and blue cover. Although we agree heartily with the primary purpose of the society--in so far it is known to us--there seems to be a slightly inadequate list of potential enemies of the United States provided for readers of the society's magazine.

The only person whom, according to the magazine, we have to fear is Germany. The editors attribute all our wars, all our uncertainties, all our war scares to the defeated German nation, and blames U. S. administrators, U. S. capital, even Gen. Lucius Clay, U. S. military governor, for abetting German industrial interests in obtaining another strong hold over the country for the purpose of starting another global war.

Since the war crimes trials recently completed in Nuremburg have resulted in the exoneration of a number of Germany's big industrialists, we must go along with the legal minds of those who represented the United States at the trials. After all, they were chosen to perform their jobs as judges and lawyers because of their particular suitability for the important task they faced. And since we are willing to allow those people whom we have elected to the highest offices in the land perform their constituted rights to appoint other persons to high offices, and since there has never been a time when a high official in the United States has been suspected, accused or convicted of treason, we are content to allow them to continue to do their jobs. The prosecutors, the defending lawyers and the judges were appointed to their jobs in good faith and until proved guilty of laxity in the performance of their duties, we will continue to have the utmost confidence in their integrity.

The society maintains that it agrees with the basic issues of the European Recovery Act, but that there are many ways in which it can be administered incorrectly. We agree with that point; but then how could anyone disagree since anything, no matter what, can be fouled up with inefficient handling.

The society further maintains, however, that if Germany is allowed to rebuild her industries, she will become a threat to world peace. Possibly. We will allow the society the benefit of the doubt. Still if the U. S., and we firmly believe she will, administers the ERA program in the manner which Secretary George C. Marshall intends it to be administered, there will be no danger. And if ever want to be free of debt in this country, if we ever want to stop feeding the peoples of Europe, we will certainly not deplore the rebuilding of German industry on a peacetime scale.

Before World War I and World War II Germany's resources did much to alleviate the shortages in the other European countries. Her vast mining interests, her abundance of water power, and her numerous minerals can not be overlooked just to satisfy the whims of a self-styled group of individuals who have organized a society to save the world. On the contrary, it is necessary that America have some of the burden lifted off her shoulders. We can't continue indefinitely feeding the world.

We do not want another war. We do not want another Hitler to rise out of the ruins of Germany to lead them to another war. We do not want Germany to rearm. We do not want Germany ever again to become a threat to freedom. But we can't see how rebuilding Germany on the basis of a sound economy can contribute to the breaking out of another war.

Certainly such a program has been advocated by leading militarists, economists and government officials, either officially or otherwise. Do they seek another war?

The society claims that it is the only organization in existence today which is fighting for freedom from war by going to the source of the trouble. As we say, we agree with the primary purpose of the society, the prevention of war, but we believe the society has missed the boat.

Strictly Editorializing

THE ARMY'S ANNOUNCEMENT last week that it was contemplating the inauguration of a recruiting drive for qualified public information men has met with varying degrees of approval of most of those with whom we have spoken during the past few days. Some claim that public information is hardly worthwhile, while others claimed not enough interest has yet been shown. So far as we are concerned, the latter opinion corresponds with our way of thinking.

We have noticed, especially in reading other camp newspapers, a complete lack of professional training among a majority of those who fill public information jobs. This is certainly not in keeping with the other high standards of the army's training. Here at Fort Benning, fortunately, everyone connected with the public information office, including both newspaper writing and radio broadcasting, is a highly trained professional.

Under the plan now being considered by the army, specially qualified men will be recruited directly from civilian life. Following basic training, they will be placed on duty with civilian newspapers and radio and television stations for periods of from three to six months. After completion of the on-the-job-training they will be assigned to public information posts throughout the world according to their abilities.

We hope sincerely that the plan is approved because every camp newspaper, indeed every public information office, could certainly use a few more professionals.

DURING MEMORIAL DAY exercises next Monday, a war widow and the father of a son who gave his life in combat will be honored at Stilwell field. The Infantry Center commander will at that time present Gold Stars to Mrs. Thelma McKibben, Baker Village, widow of Capt. Thomas C. McKibben, and to James S. Morris, Phenix City, father of the late Haywood Morris.

These token awards, which will be given to others throughout the country on Memorial Day, are a nation's tribute to its gallant men who fought that we might remain free. In still another way, the U. S. is showing its citizens that it does not forget.

BY MURRAY E. HILL

The column this week will be just this and that about your Red Cross, items picked up here and there. Most important perhaps is reminding you that May 20, just passed, was the 67th birthday of your American National Red Cross. On a Saturday night in 1881 Clara Barton organized in her home the "American Association of the Red Cross."

The little group that met that night has grown to more than 37,000,000 adult and junior members serving in 3,751 chapters. Conceived as a voluntary organization for the alleviation of suffering in time of war and natural disaster, it remains today essentially a framework through which individuals offer their talent, their services, their financial aid to fellow Americans. During the past year Red Cross volunteers gave more than 25,000,000 recorded hours of service, the equivalent of 12,000 persons working 40 hours a year.

The above services to others in a week without vacation for a volve a lot of travel. For instance volunteer drivers of the Red Cross Motor Service traveled more than 8,800,000 miles of "humanitarian errands" in the past year---and that is equivalent to 352 trips around the world.

And here is an interesting item about Red Cross. You probably thought the making of surgical dressings by Red Cross volunteers was strictly a wartime project. Not so, for from the records during the past year more than 17,000,000 dressings were made by the Red Cross volunteers in civilian and veterans hospitals, as well as for hospitals serving the armed forces.

Your Red Cross believes in lending a helping hand to other agencies. Lending a helping hand to a neighbor is part of the American tradition, and last year your Red Cross volunteer staff aides proved themselves good neighbors by giving clerical assistance to 223 other welfare organizations.

During the past year the Junior Red Cross certainly hasn't been idle. Some of the things they have done for youngsters in foreign lands include quilting and hemming 70,000 hand towels for fellow students in Poland, 100,000 bars of toilet soap, 2,000 first aid kits, 200,000 tooth brushes, 200,000 combs and 1,200 Junior Red Cross educational kits containing school supplies.

In closing, here is an instance that points out the queer quirks in verifying emergency furlough needs. Recently, a commanding officer called and said, "Would you please verify the death of John Brown's grandmother." We wired Brown's home town and the chapter quickly sent the following wire: "Grandmother in question dead, as claimed. Died in 1926."

Peersburg Waitress: "Anything else?"

Lee GI: "Yes, bring me another cup of coffee and this time, while you're away, it might be nice if you'd drop me a post card now and then."

Chaplain's Corner..

SPIRITUAL FOUNDATIONS

Chaplain Wallace M. Hale

Many times we have forgotten that there is no amount of physical power or substance that can take the place of a comrade lost in battle. When one pays his final respects at the graveside of one who has meant much to him, he becomes aware of the need for spiritual strength and stability that surpass the might of one's hand, the wisdom of one's mind, or the total amount of "things" he possesses. He feels a tugging at his heart and realizes that only God can strengthen a man at this point of life's experience.

Too long have we minimized the part that God can have in our daily lives. We have breathed His fresh air and removed the coal and oil from the ground and harvested the crops from the soil without ever knowing that the emptiness within our hearts and souls was a vacuum that would some day destroy all that we had tried to build. Modern man (and that means modern soldiers) has thought that as long as he possessed "things" he was bound to be victorious.

We have stressed confidence in weapons and in training methods, and yet the number of men who have failed to go into combat because of the disease as a consequence of disregard for the law of God amounts to many divisions.

LUCINDA BRAYFORD

Recommended for light summer reading is "Lucinda Brayford", the new novel by Martin Boyd, long, leisurely, well-told and well-written. It is fascinating story telling, holding the attention of the reader throughout.

"Lucinda Brayford" covers four generations of a wealthy English family, giving a picture of upper-class life in England from 1800 to the early 1940's. Starting with word pictures of the charm and loveliness of young Lucinda of Melbourne, Australia, it carries the reader along through the life of this beautiful woman—of the men she loved and of the sorrow and happiness they brought her.

Almost as interesting are the minor characters who influence Lucinda's life: rich, vulger Fred Vane, her father; Hugo Brayford who carries Lucinda off to his ancestral home in England, Lord Arthur Brayford, trying to uphold his ideals of aristocracy; younger brother Paul who lives only for pleasure; Pat Lanfranc, Lucinda's ideal of an English officer and gentleman; and her son Stephen, sensitive and idealistic, living in his own world.

It is refreshing to read a novel about recognizable human beings, and Martin Boyd has written this tale with backgrounds which he knows thoroughly. He lived in Australia until he was 21, served in the first world war and has since lived in England. Lucinda Brayford is his first novel to win universal recognition. Among his earlier books, are "The Lemon Farm", "A Single Flame", and "Nuns in Jeopardy."

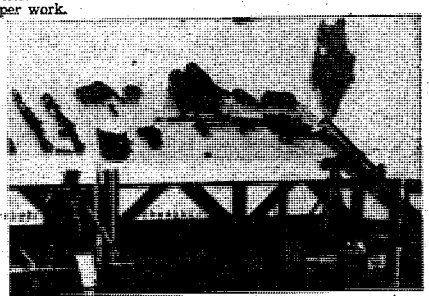
TESTING AREA—Cradle of many of the infantry's weapons which undergo testing and research, Sandy Patch testing area, in under constant guard.

TEST FIRING—S-Sgt. Milton Banister and M Sgt. Carlton Manley put a 75 mm recoilless rifle through its paces at the local testing grounds.

HOT AND COLD OF IT—The works behind the hot and cold plant of the board shows the condenser which lowers the temperature to below zero or raises it to subtropical heat during tests.

Specialists Seek All-Out Equipment Superiority

How much thought have you given to the boots you are wearing, to the rifle you carry, or to the helmet that protects your head? Did you ever stop to think how much research and experimenting is involved before all army equipment is issued?



These and many other items of importance to the soldier have been put through the experimental stage right here at Fort Benning. In the organization known as Army Field Forces board No. 3, 26 officers and 142 enlisted men carry on a lions share of testing of infantry equipment.

Known for some time as the Infantry board, the organization assumed the name Army Ground Forces board No. 3 until recently when it was redesignated to its present identity. Since its inception it has expanded beyond a small group of ramshackle sheds to the large, highly developed workshop for progress.

In the Sandy Patch test area, home of the board's shop and maintenance groups, some of the best minds in the infantry today are constantly at work on new developments. Tests may be running simultaneously on such diverse subjects as a better insect repellant or a new type prepellant for mortars. Any item for which the Infantry might have a need, from vehicles to mess trays, from tents to telescopes, is likely to pass through its testing stage here at board No. 3.

The Directorate and Test sections of the board are made up of highly qualified officers who represent nearly all branches of the services. Close liaison is maintained at all times with other boards throughout the country and with civilian research units. Capable and well trained specialists carry on the enlisted part of the testing program. The men, NCOs for the most part, simulate actual conditions in which the equipment will be used, in an effort to detect any flaws before it is released for general use.

A staff of expert mechanics keeps the large group of vehicles in tip-top shape. A well equipped weapons shop carries a large stock of standard and newly developed arms for test purposes. A complete carpenter shop is at the disposal of testing officers, and a trio of trained technicians keep the communications section running smoothly. Extensively, well guarded files contain complete date on all tests, and an efficient office force insures an uninterrupted flow of vital paper work.

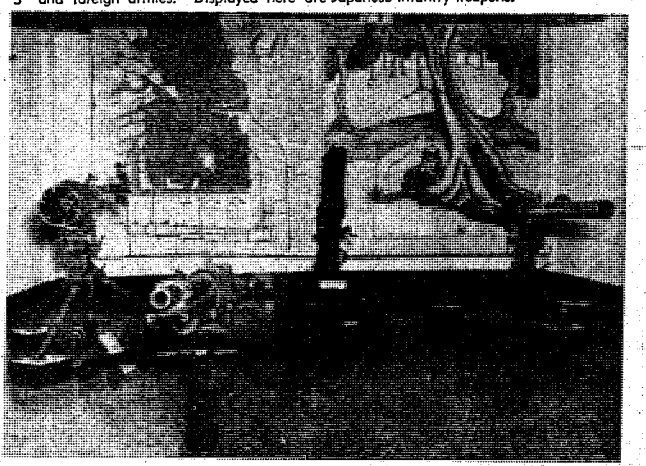
FINAL CONSIDERATION—In spite of all new developments the infantryman still gets there on his own two feet. T-Sgt. Joe Farrell demonstrates a new method for transporting the infantryman's load.

VARIOUS TESTS—Not only weapons are of concern to the board, but the infantryman must have a roof over his head. Board members are at work on one of the many tentage tests conducted.



HANDY VEHICLE—The weasel, the all-purpose amphibious craft, is equally efficient on land, over snow or in the water.

Markland Wrests Links Medal Title

Match Schedule Begins At Local Course Today

Firing a one-over-par 73 over the post Officers' club layout, Paul Markland annexed medalist honors for the first annual Fort Benning enlisted men's golf tournament as the qualifying rounds closed Monday afternoon.

With the conclusion of the qualification period, tourney officials began arranging the 52 candidates who carded 18 - hole scores into four flights in preparation for the match play scheduled to start today.

Elfedy Ivy, smooth-stroking pro of the Sand Hill course, toured the back nine in even par after he had gone two over on the shorter front nine. Ivy's 74 was followed by a 76 shot by Gene Yow, and a 78 carded by Claude English.

During his qualification round, Markland picked up four birdies. Getting down in three on the par 4 third and fifth holes, the medalist took bogeys on the first and eighth holes to wind up the front nine in even par.

Markland took his one stroke over old man par on the back nine when he registered three bogeys and a pair of birdies. Going one over on the third, fourth, and eighth greens, he chalked up birdies on the par 5 sixth and ninth holes.

English ran into trouble on the longer home nine by taking a six-over-par 42 after he had gone out with the regulation 36 strokes.

The championship division will consist of 16 linksmen, four more than the number slated to compete in the three numbered flights, and is expected to take in all players who completed the layout in less than 90 strokes.

Matches in all flights will be played on dates and at times designated by the post athletic office, and a one-week period will be allotted for the contesting of a complete round of matches in each flight.

Finals in all numbered brackets will be played prior to June 25, and the championship division finalists will battle it out on Sunday, June 27.

Trophies will be presneted to the post champion, medalist, and the winner of each flight during a ceremony to follow the championship flight finals.

Will be Notified

Contestants in all flights will be notified by telephone of the dates and times scheduled for their matches, and failure of any golfer to report at the scheduled tee-off time will result in forfeiture of his match, Second Lt. Jack Williams, tourney coordinator said in explaining that arrangements will be made to get every contestant excused from duty to play his match.

The tournament, the first of its kind for Fort Benning enlisted golfers, is being conducted under the joint sponsorship of the Officers' club golf committee and the post special services office.

Seventh Graders Cop Post Softball Title With 9-1 Win

Seventh grade softballers of the Fort Benning Children's school copped the school season diamond title Monday afternoon by trouncing the sixth grade delegation 9-1 in a seven-inning playoff tilt.

Following Mogday's championship contest, the school softballers entered a two-week rest period to prepare for their summer schedule, which is slated to start about June 1 on the playground diamond near the post polo field.

Teams for the summer schedule, it was pointed out, will be taken from school-age lads of the post, but will not necessarily consist of youths from any one class of the school.

Second Lt. Jack Williams, post youth activities officer, said that there still is a shortage of players for the summer schedule, and advised enlisted men and officers whose sons are interested in the sport to call 2176.

Officers Slate Court Tourney

Post officer-courtmen will make their bids for berths on Fort Benning's Third army tennis squad when a week-long elimination tournament gets under way Saturday, June 5, at the Officers' club courts.

The tourney will include championship matches in both singles and doubles, and consolation contests for singles and doubles teams eliminated during the first two rounds of play.

In addition to being used to determine the officer-candidates for the post tennis team, the court matches also will serve for the formation of a club challenge ladder, similar to the one now in progress at the club golf course.

Entries for the tournament must be made with Chuck Everett at the tennis shop prior to next Thursday.

Following the club tourney, six players will be selected from the contestants to compete with winners of the forthcoming enlisted men's court meet for spots on the squad to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army meet, scheduled for June 29 on the Benning courts.

Airborne Fighters Start Ring Activity

BY VINCENT GIARRATANO

The Airborne battalion initiated its summer boxing program with a card of eight three-round bouts in the outdoor ring across from the battalion gymnasium last Friday night.

Some fast action came during the opening bout of the program when lightweight Harry Robinson scored a TKO over Tony Cunha in the middle of the final round. Although he boxed well and tried hard to make a comeback, Cunha failed to recover completely after a nine-count knockdown.

The only welterweight battle of the card went to Ray Parsons of Company F, who decisioned Carl Stapp of Headquarters and Service company.

Middleweight Jim Kelly, a smart counter-puncher, drew blood early in his bout with hard-hitting Ambrous Goins, and went to win by decision. Despite the nose-bleed caused by Kelly's fast jabs Goins stayed on the offensive, but failed to rack up enough points to keep Kelly from taking the nod.

Al Davis had to put up a hard struggle to win by decision over Dave Lord, and Jim Clevenger outpointed Jim Jeter in a pair of mid-program bouts.

The semi-final contest featured two rugged, hard-hitting middleweights, Aurélio Rodriguez and Art Casiano, who put up one of the most aggressive fights of the card. Rodriguez gained a narrow point edge to take the decision.

The main event, in which Oscar Pedrazas yielded by TKO to Willie Hunter, proved to be the climax of the evening's card. Hunter, a speedy scrapper representing Company A, dropped his Company F opponent for a nine-count in the first round, and floored him again in the second before the referee awarded him the scrap.

The second card of the summer program will be an eight-bouter in the outdoor ring Friday night.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Lefty McGowan, who compiled a noteworthy record of diamond feats as a patroller of first base for the Fort Benning Doughboys last year, has broken back into local baseball circles, this time as first-sacker for the Student Training regiment.

Mac, who did a stint of army duty at Fort Riley, Kansas, during the winter and early spring months, saw his service during the 1947 intra-mural campaign with the post-champion Airborne aggregation, and was named to the Dough team following the post circuit playoffs.

At the conclusion of the 1947 season, Lefty was clouting at a .450 clip, and was one of the speediest base runners on the post. He led in stolen bases for last season's second half, and was among the leaders in runs scored for both halves,

Although he didn't shape up too well in his first appearance in STR flannel, getting only a single in four trips to the plate against the post Medics, the hard-hitting McGowan came through with four for five when the STR blasted the Seventh RCT Monday night to the tune of 24-3. Mac's bingles included a pair of three-baggers, a double, and a single.

An accomplishment seldom seen at Gowdy field was turned out by Harold Brown, slugging STR right-fielder, who bats in the clean-up spot, in his team's clash with the Medics last week.

Brown drove three of Arthur Botjer's pitches over the right-field fence, but only one of the blows went for a four-master. He greeted the Medics right-hander in the second inning by slapping his first offering over the barrier for a round-tripper. Again batting first in the fourth stanza, Brown picked off another one, and drove it over the right-fielder's head. This time, however, the pellet went over the fence on the bounce, and the hard-hitting outfielder was held to two bases under a local ground rule. Brown found the range again in the fifth frame, and drove another liner over the fence only to have it curve foul by a foot.

After Alva Ellis had finished pitching a six-hit, 6-3 win for the newly-organized 999th Field Artillery team over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers last Wednesday night, a spectator wanted to know: "Where did they get that pitcher?"

If the "local boys" succeed in leaving 16 batters on an experienced team waving in the breeze, we would like to see how some of the imported stuff behaves on the diamond.

Following the release of such players as Charley Frey and Sid Langston by the Columbus Cardinals, Kemp Wicker's response to questions concerning the farming out of two of the most impressive stick weilders on the Redbird squad was to make room for a long-ball hitter.

Now, it looks like he might have come up with said slugger.

Although his stint with the Cards still is in its embryo stage, Ted Herder has convinced at least the Jacksonville Tars and Savannah Indians that he can slam them out. Coming back from a road trip with the Cards, Herder spoiled a win for the Indians by clouting a ninth-inning four-hagger with a mate on base to tie the score. The Columbusites went on to win the game in the tenth frame.

Monday night at Golden park, Herder again upset an apple cart, this time belonging to the Jacksonville Tars, who had given the Redbirds four merciless beatings to make a clean sweep of a road-trip series. The clouting center-fielder hit a grand-slam homer in the first inning to provide the Cards with the margin that won the game.

DIAMOND TWINS—John Graves, left, mound wonder of the post Medics' baseball nine, who has a record of six wins and no losses for the 1948 season, congratulates twirler John Johnson of the 30th Medical group softball squad following the latter's third triumph of the young softball season. Johnson has yet to be tagged with a loss for the 1948 compaign.

Artillery Team Scores Victory In Circuit Debut

The 999th Field Artillery battalion made its debut in the intra-mural diamond league last Wednesday night by dumping the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers 6-3 behind the six-hit slab work of Alva Ellis.

In his initial mound assignment, Ellis whiffed 16 Trucker batters, and gave up only two walks.

Center-fielder Arthur Houston was the big stick man for the artillery delegation nicking Trucker twirler Willie Love for three safeties, one of them a long triple to right, in four official appearances.

The Truckers had a momentary fling at the lead in the bottom half of the first when two runners trotted across the plate. Leading off for the visitors, shortstop O'Brien got a free ticket to first when he was hit by one of Ellis' offerings. After stealing second, O'Brien went to third when Lucky Bryant reached on an error, and scored when James Wills drove a single into right field.

Bryant, who had gone to third on Wills' bingle, scored when Houston dropped Charlie Hubert's fly to center.

The artillerymen got their winning margin in the home half of the third by scoring four times. Bob Rogers, who drew a base on balls to start the frame, came home with the first tally on an error by Trucker pitcher Love. Ellis then singled, and went to third when Charles Boyd reached second on another misplay by Love.

The final counter of the inning came when Houston crossed the plate after Edgar Powe was safe on an infield error.

Putting together a three-bagger by Houston, a two-base error by the Trucker's Bryant on Powe's fly to right, and a single by Ware, the artillery nine posted another pair of tallies in the first of the seventh.

Ellis yielded to the Truckers their final counter in the bottom part of the seventh when Bryant, who had singled with two out, completed the circuit on a rapid trio of artillery errors.

Post Skeet Teams Win Range Match From McPherson

Motoring to Atlanta Sunday, two five-man squads from the Fort Benning Officers' club skeet range, outshot a pair of Fort McPherson gun quintets 449 to 415.

Pacing the local shooting Capt. O. B. Hyle chalked up a 24-25 for a total of 49 out of a possible 50 birds. Capt. P. R. heinmiller was second place individual on the Benning team with 48 hits out of 50 attempts.

Other members of the local delegation and their scores were as follows: Lt. Col. D. E. Hoffmeister, 23-24; Maj. E. B. Kitchens, 22-24; Capt. M. A. Pullman, 23-21; Lt. Col. C. E. Woodrow, 21-24; Lt. Col. W. G. Dolvin, 22-22; Capt. A. F. Weist, 23-21; Maj. W. F. Ahern, 22-20; and Capt. L. W. Engelland, 21-17.

Graves Whiffs 19 As Squad Takes Over Loop Command

Setting an early pace for strikeouts in the Fort Benning league's second half, John Graves, right-handed curve-baller, struck out 19 Ordnance batsmen Friday night in pitching the post Medics to a 12-4 triumph.

The win,-their second of the recently-started phase of loop activity, placed the Medics atop the post ladder, while the Ordnance team, with no victories in two starts, dropped into the cellar.

Led by Graves and second-baseman Harold Newman, the Medics nicked twirler Andy Boland of the Ordnance for 15 safeties, while the flame pot lads collected seven bingles from the Medic mound sensation of the second when the flame post lads scored once, and had the bags loaded twice.

Horace Bassett reached on an error, Jones got to first on a fielder's choice, and Dick Whittaker singled to fill the bases with none out. After Henry Wyatt had gone down swinging, Louis Glodich rolled back to the pitcher to force Bassett at the plate, but Jones came in to score when Graves issued a pass to Glover. With the sacks full, Letonsky struck out to end the threat.

Singles by Hector Pachico, Ted Graves even put the manacles on big Stan Letonsky, slugging Ordnance first-sacker, who established himself a reputation as being one of the league's most dangerous stick-wielders during the first half, by limiting him to one single. In five trips, Letonsky fanned the breeze three times.

Although he was in constant trouble during the early stages of the game, the Medic slab performer wound up the initial triad of innings with a 3-1 advantage.

With two down in the top half of the first, Bob Glover and Letonsky smacked successive singles into right field, and pitcher Boland walked to fill the bases.

4 Tennessee Midget Racers To Enter Idle Hour Heats

Four Knoxville, Tenn., drivers are slated to participate in Idle Hour Park midget car races Friday night, Promotor A. P. Brewer has announced.

The promotor said entry of the four Knoxville racers is expected to provide an even more thrilling evening than that experienced by track enthusiasts last Friday night when Jimmy Reed took the final feature after having been threatened by Hank Bialock and Leroy Hicks.

Reed was driving a new entry from the D. B. Bradson racing team of Knoxville, Tenn. Bialock, driving the second Brabson entry had won the first heat and made an impressive start in the final before his wide riding on the turns gave Hicks a chance to slash past into second place.

The final feature was dedicated to Ralph Hepburn, veteran racing driver who was killed recently while attempting to qualify for the Indianapolis 500 mile classic.

Hicks won the second heat Friday night and Johnny Suggs of Columbus took the third eight-lapper. Reed won the Australian pursuit after having moved all the way from last-starting position. Several laps of the speedy elimination race were featured by a duel between Reed and Bialock, who frequently rounded turns hub-by-hub.

Eleven cars were qualified for the races, which duplicated the previous week's record of being run by the clock, starting the final flag at 10 p. m. Time trials this Friday will start at 7:30 p. m., with heat racing at 8:30.

Hall Handcuffs Lawson Flyers

Recovering from a generalized slump which brought on a string of defeats at the close of the post circuit's first half, the 3440th Army Service unit diamond nine snapped the success streak of Lawson field by handing the Flyers an 11-6 trouncing at Gowdy field Thursday night.

The Flyers, who closed out the league's initial phase by winning two of their last three starts, were completely handcuffed by Lawrence Hall, ASU speedball artist, who struck out 13 and gave up eight safe hits.

Paced by right-fielder Tom Lamb, who slapped out four base knocks in six trips, the ASU aggregation pounded starter Dan English of the Flyers for 14 hits.

The service unit squad jumped to a 5-0 lead early in the game by scoring once in the first, and crossing the plate four times in the first half of the second. Pitcher Hall contributed to the second-canto hitting spree by lashing out a double and driving in two runs.

English held the ASU lads scoreless during the visiting half of the third, and his mates had their first fling at scoring in the last phase of the inning when they counted three times. Base knocks by Max Seirer and Lew Button, an ASU error, and two free passes to first figured in the Flyer rally.

Both teams added another marker in the fifth frame, but the ASU lads secured their lead by notching three in the eighth and another pair in the ninth.

Following its win over the blue team of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion last Monday evening, the 30th Medical group softball squad continued its winning streak by defeating the Trucker red team on Tuesday and downing the 999th Field Artillery Thursday evening.

John Erb, rangy first-baseman, sparked the Medic softballers' onslaught as they trounced the Trucker red team 11-3 on the 204th diamond. In the first inning, Erb accounted for three Medic runs by slamming a homerun with two on base. Continuing his batting spree, the first-sacker got another four-bagger, a triple, and a single in five trips to the plate.

After getting off to a three-run lead in the initial inning, the Medics pounded the apple all over the field to notch another five tallies in the second. Seven hits figured in the second-frame scoring spree.

To start the inning, catcher George Frink singled, moved to third on Trucker errors, and scored when Louis Cantoni singled to center. Cantoni was forced at second when Bill Roach reached on a fielder's choice. Roach was thrown out at home when he tried to complete the circuit on Angelo Borelli's hit to left field.

After Erb had singled to put men on first and second, pitcher Johnnie Johnson lashed out a triple to account for two tallies. Billy Cash tripled and scored the fifth run of the inning on a one-bagger by Jeff Reese.

The Medics put the finishing touches to their scoring by adding two more runs in the third, and a lone tally in the sixth.

The first home team tally came in the third inning, and two more were added in the sixth.

Assuming the role of visiting team again Thursday evening, the Medic aggregation blasted out a 12-4 triumph over the Field Artillery delegation.

All of the Medic runs came during the first three innings. The visitors chalked up three in the first, another trio in the second, and wound it up by scoring a half-dozen times in the third. The artillerymen scored one each in the first and second stanzas, and posted their final pair of markers in the fifth.

DRIVING RANGE OPENS FOR GOLFING ADDICTS

Golf enthusiasts who get a kick out of swatting the ball, but don't like the idea of chasing the little round pill over acres of green turf, can now hit 'em to their heart's content at the new golf driving range which opened here Wednesday.

The most satisfying aspect of the new activity is the fact that one needn't be a professional golfer. In fact you don't even have to know how to play the game—plunk down a small fee and tee off.

Located on Gordon field between Carpenter and Ingersoll streets, near the Student Training regiment area, the range, operated by the Fort Benning exchange, is available to all personnel on the post.

The new driving range, on the docket for sometime before finally becoming a reality, gives military and civilian personnel here another in a long list of recreational diversions. Believed to be the first of its kind on any army post, the range, complete with clubhouse, boasts the latest equipment, including an automatic ball-retriever, 20 driving positions, modern arc-lights for night activity, and comfortable benches for spectators. Confections and soft drinks are also available at the clubhouse.

Expected to be one of the most popular spots on the post, the golf driving range will be open six days each week, with Roy Dodson in charge of the operations.

The activity will be open from 8 to 10 p. m. on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, and from 6 to 10 p. m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. It will be closed all day on Mondays.

Bullseye Artists Urged To Enter Regional Contest

Qualified and trial-tested rifle and pistol men at Fort Benning who are interested in trying out for Olympic competition have less than a month to prepare for the regional matches to be conducted at Gainesville, Ga., on June 20, according to Capt. Frank Palmer, post rifle and pistol team coach.

Personnel interested in competing should get in touch with Captain Palmer by calling 2944 or 3805 by noon Friday May 28.

If the local aspirants meet the necessary qualifications and gain a spot on the regional team they will be invited to participate in the final trials at Quantico, Va., early in July.

Reports from the Olympic committee indicate that these teams are necessarily small and that shots who have not already gained national recognition through competition will encounter stiff opposition. The Olympic finals will be extremely competitive, officials said.

STR Balances Circuit Record With 24-3 Win

Offsetting their loss to the post Medics in their opening tilt of the Fort Benning league's second half, the Student Training regiment diamondmen went on a rampage Monday night, and smothered the newly formed Seventh Regimental combat team 24-3.

The scheduled nine-inning tilt was called at the end of the eighth canto by mutual agreement of the managers after the students had pushed across 10 tallies in the visiting half of the inning.

The RCT, victim of a 36-0 Infantry School detachment scoring orgy last week, broke into the scoring column in the home half of the third stanza when, with runners on second and third, shortstop Meierjyck drove in two runs with a sharply-spanked single to center.

The other RCT counter came in the last of the eighth when Bob Armstrong lashed a two-bagger to right scoring Bill O'Barr who had started the inning by working STR hurler Willie Weaver for a walk.

Lefty McGowan, who recently took ove rhte initial sack for the STR, was the hitting star of the tilt. In five appearances at the plate, McGowan collected two triples, a double, and a single to bat in three runs.

The victorious STR aggregation chalked up tallies in six of the game's eight innings. The students started off by scoring a pair in the first, notched five more in the second, added one each in the fourth and sixth, counted five times in the seventh and concluded their efforts with a ten-run eighth frame.

Ernest Stewart, who took the first turn on the hill for the STR, was credited with the win, his fifth of the year, while starter Jimm of the RCT was tagged with the defeat.

Fort Benning's Cub Scouts are planning a cub circus to be held at Blue Polo field Saturday, June 5, at 3 p.m., it was announced this week by Sgt. Harry Duffield, scoutmaster.

A series of acts are scheduled for the circus, including such old-time favorites as Indians, pirates, strong men and acrobats. There will also be covered wagons and a cub band.

An ideal camp site will be on display at the field during the circus as well as an activities yard, composed of rope work. Other displays will include tin can cookery.

An animal arena is also on the program, and will boast a milk goat with her two kids and a pair of golden hamsters from Syria in addition to pets belonging to the cub scouts.

Sergeant Duffield also announced that there would be a reptile arena where several types of non-poisonous snakes and an alligator would be on display.

One of the highlights of the circus will be the sideshow where the "world's smallest midget" will perform for the visitors.

Display tents are also to be erected for the purpose of showing the work done during the past year by the cub packs.

Booths will be set up for the sale of soda, hot dogs and peanuts, Sergeant Duffield said.

There will be no admission charge.

Colonel Smith and Major Sexton represent the infantry, while the airborne is represented by Colonel Erickson.

The associate members will serve on the committee in addition to their other duties, officials said, and if transferred from Fort Benning will be replaced by their parent units with officers of the same branch or service.

All permanent and associate members who are not graduates of the air transportability course at the Infantry School will be required to complete that course as soon as possible, it was pointed out.

The mission of the new committee to assist the Infantry Center commander in carrying out his function as an agency of army field forces in the development and perfection of infantry and airborne tactics and techniques. Officials said that the committee would conduct studies and perform projects approved or directed by the Infantry Center commander.

3 LOCAL TROOPERS GET BRONZE STARS

Three paratroopers from Company K, 504th Airborne Infantry regiment, were presented the Bronze Star medal "for exemplary conduct in ground combat against the armed enemy" by Maj. Gen. John W. Units participating in the parade, reviewed by General O'Daniel, included Headquarters, Service, A and E companies, of the Seventh combat team, and company K of the 504th. The 72nd Army band provided music for the parade.

Sergeant Reames was awarded the Bronze Star for exemplary conduct in ground combat "against the Japanese during the Luzon campaign in the Pacific" while with the 185th Glider Infantry regiment. Sergeant Fritts won his award for combat "against the enemy on December 18, 1944 with the 504th in the European theater of operations," while Corporal Reep received his award for "combat during the Ardennes campaign in Europe" while with the 120th Infantry regiment.

A veteran of six years army service and a native of Newberry, S. C., Sergeant Reames served with the Ninth and 78th Infantry divisions, and the 11th and 82nd Airborne divisions. For his services in the Pacific he wears the Combat Infantry badge, Purple Heart, Philippine Liberation ribbon, and the Asiatic-Pacific theater ribbon with battle stars.

Since entering the army in January, 1943, at St. Charles, Mo., Sergeant Fritts has served with the 86th Infantry division, and was with the 504th Parachute Infantry regiment of the 82nd Airborne division in Europe. A veteran of more than four years service, Corporal Reep is from Chicago, Ill.

'Iron Mike' Is Assigned To Moscow

To Leave U.S. During August

Major General John W. O'Daniel left Fort Benning Tuesday on the first leg of his trip to Moscow where he has been assigned as military attache. He will assume his duties there in August.

Following a month's leave at his home in Newark, Del., he will report to the State Department in Washington for a month's briefing, and will then depart with Mrs. O'Daniel for his new post.

"I only hope that you will enjoy yourself one half as much here as I did," he told Mrs. Withers A. Burress, wife of the new commander of the Infantry Center during farewell ceremonies Tuesday at outpost No. 1.

"It will be wonderful," he concluded.

Staff officers of the Infantry Center and Infantry School were grouped at the outpost to say goodbye to "Iron Mike" as he ended his three-year tour at Benning. Troopers of the 504th Airborne Infantry regiment lined the road from the commandant's quarters to the outpost and a guard of honor composed of men of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team stood their final inspection for the departing commander.

As General O'Daniel left his car at the outpost, guns of Battery A, 999th Field Artillery battalion, boomed out a 13-gun salute. Following a brief inspection of the guard, commanded by Lt. Col. Jack M. Duncan of the Seventh, General O'Daniel talked a few minutes with his successor, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress and then said goodbye to everyone in the vicinity, shaking hands with staff officers, wives,

Officer Group Visits Board 3

A combined group of 16 officers, including members of the U. S., British and Canadian armies departed by plane Wednesday following a whirlwind one-day tour of activities at Army Field Forces board No. 3.

During their tour here the officers were oriented on the activities of the local board, visited various sections of the unit and the Infantry center.

Following a conference with board No. 3 officials, Tuesday morning the delegation toured the Sandy Patch testing area where they witnessed part of the testing program of the board. In the afternoon they saw demonstrations at Hook range.

Arriving here from Camp Bliss, Texas, the group will proceed to Fort Bragg, N.C., in the next stop of their extensive tour of military installations.

Special Ceremonies Mark Memorial Day Observance

Gold Star pins, awarded next-of-kin of those who laid down their lives for their country were presented to a Columbus, Ga., woman and a Phenix City, Ala., man in one of the several ceremonies marking the observance of Memorial Day at Fort Benning Sunday.

Mrs. McKibben accepted the Gold Star pin in honor of her late husband, Capt. Thomas C. McKibben, killed on a reconnaisance mission in the battle of St. Lo July 4, 1944, while serving with the 358th Infantry regiment, 90th division.

In honor of his son, Pfc. Haywod J. Morriss, who died Sept. 15, 1944, of wounds received near Nancy, France, Mr. Morris received the second of the first two Gold Stars presented in this area. Pfc. Morris, who was serving with the 317th Medical battalion, 80th division at the time had previously been awarded the Silver Star and the Purple Heart posthumously.

In his short talk, before making the presentations, General O'Daniel said, "Today we not only pause to honor our dead, but we also pause to honor and pay homage to those still living whose close kin were killed.

Nothing we can do today can undo what has been done yesterday, but we can remember, and through this token of remembrance, may we all be better Americans."

Joining the rest of the nation in observing Memorial Day, Fort Benning honored the war dead with ceremonies throughout the day. With the flag flying at half staff from revielle until noon Sunday, the day's ceremonies at the flag staff got under way with the 72nd Army band rendering appropriate martial airs from 11:45 a.m. until noon. Following the national salute of 21 guns, the flag was hoisted to full staff.

Reveal Classes Set For Year

An increase in civilian army components is expected at the Infantry School during the 1948-49 academic year, according to a report released this week by Infantry Center officials.

Approximately 25 per cent of the 10,000 students scheduled to study at the Infantry School this year will be members of National Guard and Organized Reserve corps units, it was announced.

Officials said that the sharp increase in civilian components was probably due to the planned expansion of the army. Quotas for class attendance are established by the chief of the army field forces.

Among the courses scheduled for the 1948-49 year are two basic officers' classes with an expected attendance of 140 regular army and 10 foreign officers. One associate basic officers' course will also be offered to 200 regular army, 60 National Guard and 115 reserve officers.

The advanced officer's course will be of two classes with 352 regular army and 36 foreign students expected. Also scheduled is one associate advanced officers' class to include 76 National Guardsmen, 108 reservists, 50 regulars and 16 foreign officers.

One communications class and one motors class will be offered by the Infantry School. Of the 58 officers expected to attend the communications course 30 will be regulars, 10 National Guardsmen, 11 reservists and seven foreign. Slated for the motors course are 46 regular, 25 National Guard, 11 reserve and four foreign officers.

The basic airborne course will consist of six classes for 394 regular army officers, 40 reserve officers and 16 foreign officers. A total of 6,920 regular army enlisted men will attend the enlisted classes along with 120 enlisted reserves, 30 National

GI Ingenuity Eliminates Another Labor Problem

BY ANDREW H. PLANEY

Leave it up to the G. I. to think of a way to alleviate the burdens of manual operations.

Here outside the main post area, about 10 miles inside the vast expanse of the reservation, an improvision has been made that gives even the best of farmers quite a chuckle.

M-Sgt. Barnette Ates, chief range guard, has improvised a way to plant small seeds that not only make the job easier for the man, but aid in the manpower problem as well as doing a neat and comparatively fast job of it.

When confronted with planting bi-color lespediza seeds, Sergeant Ates knew that for his men to push the hand-operated seed planter over 10 acres of plowed field would be quite a job. He solved the problem with a rope, a rope over his shoulders tied to the planter.

Sergeant Ates' idea works this way. One man handles the harrow, which is pulled by the mule, Bumps by name. To the rear of the man with the harrow is the second man who handles the seed planter. A rope is tied to the front of the planter and slung over the shoulder and under the arms of the first man behind the harrow. When the mule moves forward, the pull is transferred to the first man holding the harrow, and although there is a slight pressure from the ropes around his shoulder, any backward pull is thus picked up by the mule, who ends up doing all the work.

The planting of the bi-color lespedeza seeds is part of the vast program undertaken here by the Fish and Game Maintenance association, headed by Col. Robert B. Hill, with the planting under the direct supervision of Col. Douglas Sugg.

The bi-color lespedeza, which is considered one of the best known quail feeds available, will be transplanted in the spring to various locations throughout the reservation.

The range guards, whose duty it is to carry out the program of the Fish and Game Maintenance association, are not in the process of planting 300 acres of artificial seeds throughout the reservation. Under Sergeant Ates, who has been at Fort Benning for 20 years and who knows practically every nook and corner of the reservation, the range guards enforce hunting and fishing regulations while providing outpost security. They also carry out the wild life and game reservation program under the direction of the Fish Game Maintenance association.

2 Troopers Promoted

T-4 Jewel H. Eaglebarger, Headquarters and Service company, Airborne battalion, was promoted last week to the grade of staff sergeant, and Sgt. Levis Stancil, Company G, Airborne battalion, was advanced to the grade of staff sergeant, officials have announced.

Local Enlisted Group Is Cited

Six Fort Benning enlisted men were commended by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third army commander, in a recent letter from the Third army headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga., for their outstanding performances during "Operations Combine," the joint Third army-Ninth air force exercise held here last April.

Cited were S-Sgts. Raymond W. Bost, James D. Shirlong, William D. Laird and R. W. Gray, Sgt. Troy G. Smith and Cpl. Albert B. Riley, all of Company H, Infantry School detachment.

The letter states in part, "for outstanding performance of duty during "Operations Combine," they "efficiently, cheerfully and promptly carried out their tasks to make possible the air transportability demonstration presented during the exercise at Fort Benning the first part of April".

General Gillem further commended the men as "models of military discipline and bearing."

Detachment Announces Week's Promotion List

Three enlisted members of the Infantry School detachment were among Fort Benning troops awarded promotions during the past week.

MOVING DAY—This is what the area in front of Headquarters annex on Vibbert avenue looked like Saturday morning, May 22, when the enlisted personnel division returned pay and service records of men of the Infantry School detachment. Student Training regiment and 3440th Army Service unit to detachment, regimental and group headquarters.

CLASSES SET RECORD IN PHYSICAL FITNESS

Members of the Infantry School's non-commissioned officer's classes No. 3 and 4 broke all physical fitness records during tests held here recently, according to a report released this week by 1st Lt. Raymond C. Hite, physical training instructor.

Four students from the 82nd Airborne division and a National Guardsman from Hawaii, taking the physical achievements tests to qualify for the expert infantry badge, broke all existing marks in pullups, situps, pushups, the 300-yard relay and squat jumps. All are attached to the Student Training regiment's Eighth company commanded by Capt. Jack Herndon.

Assigned to the 82nd Airborne division, S-Sgt. Cornelius Squalls set a new record by executing 20 pullups. Scoring an aggregate total of 471 of a possible 500 points, he is a student in class No. 3.

S-Sgt. Edward Medlin, also a member of the 82nd, set a record in situps with a total of 84 in two minutes. He is a student in class No. 4.

Sgt. Ambler Winstead completed 155 pushups to set a new record, while Sgt. Theodore Saunders set the 300-yard relay mark by completing the distance in 46 seconds. Both are members of the 82nd Airborne division and assigned here to class No. 3.

S-Sgt. Angel Valera, of the 298th Infantry regiment, Honolulu National Guard unit, set a squat jump record when he completed 100. He is also a member of class No. 3.

DSM Holder Now Airborne Student

M-Sgt. Vernon J. Baker, a student in the Airborne battalion's Company F, is one of the few wearers of the Distinguished Service cross still in the army.

Sergeant Baker, who entered the army at Cheyenne, Wyo., in June, 1941, was a first lieutenant with the 370th Infantry regiment's Company C at the time he was awarded the metal. He had been successful, during the Rome-Arno campaign, in knocking out three enemy machine-gun nests and an observation post and in killing three German soldiers. For this action, Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, commander of the Fifth army, awarded him the Distinguished Service cross.

The sergeant's other decorations include the Purple Heart, Bronze Star, Polish Honor of Valor, Italian Honor of Valor, Combat Infantry badge, Good Conduct medal and ETO and ATO ribbons.

On Recruiting Duty

S-Sgt. Earnest I. Rollins, company D, Airborne battalion, has left Fort Benning with a recruiting caravan for Daytona Beach, Fla., where he will participate in a one-week exhibition.

Army To Admit Eligible Lawyers

Regular army commissions and duty in the Judge Advocate General's department are being offered to physically qualified lawyers between the ages of 21 and 32, the Department of the Army announced today.

Direct commissions from civilian life as first lieutenants or captains will be tendered those who qualify and who have served with creditable records as commissioned officers on active Federal service in any of the armed forces for at least one year, and to those who have demonstrated an aptitude for the military service by having been designated an honor or distinguished military graduate of the senior division of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Qualified Reserve officers, now on extended active duty, also may apply for regular army commissions.

Applicants with no prior commissioned service or outstanding ROTC records will be given an opportunity to compete in the Judge Advocate General's department qualification tour. This embraces a one-year period of closely observed active duty as a reserve officer. During this time candidates will have an opportunity to demonstrate their qualifications for appointment in the regular army. Part of the tour will consist of a short course in basic military training.

At the end of the tour those whose appointments as commissioned officers in the regular army are not favorably considered will be relieved from active duty. The others will be offered permanent commissions as either first lieutenants or captains, depending upon the total length of their active military service.

Applicants will be considered from physically qualified citizens of the United States from 21 to 32 years of age who have graduated from an approved law school with a professional degree and who have been admitted to practice before the highest court of a state, territory or the District of Columbia. Detailed information and application forms may be obtained by writing the adjutant general, Washington 25, D. C. Applications forms may also be secured at army posts and recruiting offices.

Soldier Prima Donnas

We have on several occasions recently come in contact with soldier prima donnas, people who firmly believe that only they are qualified to carry out missions of importance and who at the same time refuse to cooperate unless their every whim is satisfied. These people have the mistaken idea that without them the army, or at least the activity to which they are assigned, would cease operation immediately should they in some way be incapacitated. Not only are they disturbing elements within an organization, they succeed in making that organization's efficiency less than satisfactory.

In the army, or for that matter in civilian life, there is no place for a prima donna. The army should be a place for absolute cooperation among all elements. There should be a concerted effort on the part of all to perform the tasks assigned to them in a manner commensurate with the uniform they wear. There should be every effort made on the part of each soldier to carry out his mission in a commendable manner without attempting to upset the routine necessary to the accomplishment of a day's work. There should be a desire on the part of all to maintain high standards, as all prima donnas believe they do maintain, but there should also be no refusal to carry out a job merely because they believe they have something to do they consider more important.

Organizations such as the army need the full cooperation of every soldier if they are to be successful. In the words of Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, an army exists for one purpose: to be successful on the battlefield. Yet, if we have prima donnas, how can we be successful even in peacetime to say nothing of during a war?

Many prima donnas wearing kahki think that they are doing the army a great favor by joining. We maintain these people do the army a great injustice, a great disservice. There is no place for them. They should be culled out as the wheat is from the chaff. They should not be allowed to clap the hand that feeds them.

We have said in these columns on another occasion that the army would be far better off without the prima donna, and since that time nothing has happened to alter our views. On the contrary, if anything has happened to our opinion since that time, is is to convince us even more that we were right.

We appreciate the fact that the army has some excellent technicians representing practically every type of human endeavor; for that we are grateful. In addition, at Fort Benning we are more than blessed with, what we consider, more than a fair proportion of highly trained individuals. On the whole these people are ordinary folk, lacking in that worst of all human characteristics' egoism.

We grant that a certain amount of self-pride is commendable. We grant that everyone should feel that his job is being performed well--otherwise he would be relieved. But we do not feel that anyone should feel his abilities to be greater than those of anyone else. We do not feel that anyone should feel that he can do not only his job better than any one else but also the job of the others with whom he works. This type of individual creates an unpleasant atmosphere among his associates and is certainly not conducive to the best of relations.

There should be in the army, and on the whole we believe there is, a feeling of good fellowship, a feeling that everyone is a part of a great team, on which every member does the best he can and at the same time gives aid, where needed, to his co-workers. However, if there is a constant effort on the part of some, or even one man, to stifle that feeling, if there is a constant effort to brew animosity, if there is anyone who insists on wearing a chip on his shoulder and maintaining that he is being persecuted, then how can anything be accomplished?

We believe that people who fall in the prima donna category should be removed from the technical positions they hold and placed in line outfits for a little basic training. Perhaps then they will strive to unite rather than divide.

Strictly Editorializing

WE HAVE BEEN asked several times why we do not publish individual unit news under a unit head as is done by so many camp newspapers. Each time we have answered giving our reasons, and each time no one has understood why we take such a stand.

MOST UNIT REPORTERS, unfortunately, seem to think that their organigation's news would be more widely read if it were in a regular column. We can not agree.

SO FAR AS reader interest is concerned, the unit news column is not the answer. In the first place, the only people who would read unit news would be members of that unit who want to see if their names are mentioned in the column. No one else would bother.

IF THERE IS a story about a member of an organization under a separate head, many people will read it. Most of those in the individual's organization already know about his accomplishments; consequently The Bayonet tries to reach those who do not know the man.

WE BELIEVE IN letting a story stand on its merit. If we consider an item newsworthy, we give it a prominent place in The Bayonet. If we do not consider it newsworthy, we usually will not omit it, but we will "play it down." Too often a good story is buried away in a unit news column when it should be on the front page. By not having unit news columns, we eliminate much of this.

IT WOULD CERTAINLY make things easier for The Bayonet staff should we publish unit news columns. The only thing required of us would be copyreading to eliminate libelous statements or unfair criticism. But "getting out of work" is not our intention as editor of The Bayonet. What we try to do is give Fort Benning a better newspaper.

BY MURRY E. HILL

We often see the phrase, "when disaster strikes." We invariably associate such a phrase with floods, tornadoes or explosions where literally hundreds of families are affected.

But disasters can strike at the heart of an individual family, and when it does, it is just as real and just as tragic to that family as to anyone of the many families that might be affected by a major disaster.

When disaster strikes the individual family their first reaction is to contact those dear to them. This becomes difficult if, in attempting to locate the soldier, the family finds he is on maneuvers or in transient from one area to another by convoy or individually.

This Red Cross has played a most important part during the recent maneuver of the troops on this post. There has never been a time when we were out of touch with the troops enroute to the maneuvered area, while there, or when returning to the post. It was a simple procedure to contact these troops, but to many, who were endeavoring to contact individuals it would seem to be insurmountable problem. Even the Western Union turned to the Red Cross when trying to deliver individual messages, and if they were other than of emergency nature, we saw that that the serviceman received them promptly.

How was this handled and why so simple, not because we had two-way radio communications with the maneuver area of troops enroute both ways and it was not because owe used official communication system through the military to deliver these wires. It was because of the friendly neighborly spirit shown by the 53 counties through which the troops passed. Since we had the itinerary of the troops coming and going and knew the counties through which they would pass and approximately the time they would pass through that county, it was a simple matter to wire the Red Cross office in that county and ask them to deliver the message.

Not once did these Red Cross chapters fail us. They all somehow managed to deliver the message sometime it necessitated driving at night long distances or driving 20 miles to catch up with the convoy after it had passed the town, but the good ladies in a lthese Red Cross chapters, and volunteers mind you most of them, helped to keep an unbroken cbain between the serviceman in the field and his family back home.

OPENMINDEDNESS

—BY—

CHAPLAIN L. A. ELLIS

In an age of confusion, prejudice, and fear we would do well to remember the words of the Lord. Dewar when he says that "Minds are like parachutes. They function only when they are open." If we do not keep open our minds, we are likely to met the fate of an unfortunate parachute jumper whose paraphernalia refuses to function - a fate of oblivion at the worst, or hurt at the best.

A really great person is usually a tolerant one. And tolerance is not trying to force your ideas on others. If one has an open mind, one is willing and ready to consider all sides of the issue or question. When we honestly consider the other fellow's side of the matter, we are likely to really hate him or blame him, though we may not agree with him. At least, we will sympatize.

Some people, it seems, are born with suspicions and fears and keep them tightly locked in closed minds. They never open their minds enough to let in even one new fact that might light the darkness and change the fear or hate attitude into tolerant one.

As in the case of the trooper, so in life the jumps we must take are many. Keep that mind open!

CRY, THE BELOVED COUNTRY

Unlike most books concerned with the racial problem, Alan Paton's Cry, the Beloved Country, approaches the controversial question with understanding and without that "blood and thunder" attitude assumed by so many of today's reformers. Mr. Paton deserves a great deal of credit for his excellent presentation of a deplorable situation.

The setting of the book is in South Africa, with most of the action taking place Johnnesburg, a city for Europeans in which the non-European has little chance of survival. The story concerns the heart-breaking search by a native priest for his sister and brother who have left their tribe to make their way in the city. The reader follows the priest from time he leaves his humble home in a once productive valley to his return to the simple people whom he watches over as a father.

Cry, the Beloved Country is the most tragic novel of this century. Mr. Paton has a knack for describing unfortunate and unhappy people and situations. The climax in pathos is reached when the priest meets his son in prison shortly after sentence has been passed on the son for murder of a white man who had devoted his life to bettering conditions for the native.

Mr. Paton's characters are perhaps the most vivid a contemporary author has been able to produce, and he draws from his experience in South Africa to make them come to life on the pages of Cry, the Beloved Country. This is a quiet little novel which we rank among the foremost of the century.

Sapphires, rubies, and emeralds are essentially the same mineral, corundum, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Fire Department Men Well-Trained For Duty

Fires due to earelessness have caused property loss of $82,980 and the loss of one life at Fort Benning in the past six months.

There have been 37 structural fires on the post since November, 1947, and an average of one fire every five days. Carelessness has caused approximately 90 per cent of these fires, according to an official report.

Much of the loss could have been prevented by removal of fire hazards from buildings and areas and more careful adherence to the simple rules of instructions as laid down in the garrison fire regulations, officials maintain.

Always on hand to combat any emergency is the Fort Benning fire department, which, through it speed and systematic operation, has cout down tremendously on the extensiveness of fires and damages.

Five fire stations, under control of the post engineers, with a total crew of 46 enlisted men and 13 civilians, are strategically scattered on the post. Under Fire Marshal Colonel H. A. Stewart, post engineer, and Fire Chief Gilbert A. Ward the fire department is kept on it toes with constant training and study of most effective means of fire-fighting.

Military personnel undergo training continuously, and the 13 civilian members of the fire department have vast experience in firefighting, with several of them having over 20 years of firefighting duty.

Automatic coded alarm system protects Benning Park housing area, Station hospital, laundries dry cleaning plants and ordnance automotive shops. In addition to these there are fire reporting telephones located throughout the post with direct connection to the central switchboard at the fire department and in the fire chief's ofice.

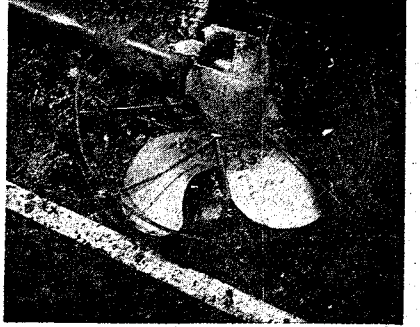
War I Occupation Same As Today's

"The American soldier fraternized with German girls on one side and flirted with French lassies on the other with the same enthusiasm in World War I as they have been accused of doing in Europe now", remarked Frank Clemons, a retired former infantry sergeant, during his visit to the Station hospital last week for a yearly check-up.

The former infantryman, who was retired at Fort McPherson, Ga., in 1939 after 20 years service, in recalling old occupation days, chuckled, "We had our furloughs at the Riviere and Paris, and it is no different today than it was during the first war".



While serving in the first world war with the 309th Infantry, he became familiar with such places in France as the besieged towns of Rheims and Chateau-Thierry.

NECESSARY MAINTENANCE—Two soldier-firemen, Cpl. Vernon Mann and Pfc. Paul Smith, are recharging fire extinguishers. This should be done at the nearest fire station at least once a year or immediately after use.

DOUBLE DUTY—In addition to fire preventtion and firefighting soldier-firemen must also be a soldier. Saturday means inspection to them as well as other units. Copt. Alden E. Clifford and 1st Sgt. Harley B. Harmon conduct a weekly inspection of quarters at fire house No. 1.

CAUSE OF FIRE—Defective wiring of this fan was the cause of a fire resulting in costly damage to property here. Fires due to carelessness such as this have caused a property loss of $82,980 and the loss of one life at Fort Benning in the past six months.

Tennis Tourneys Slated For Month

Shortstop Gets Four-Run Blast In STR Victory

After being baffled by the offerings of Lawrence Hall, right-handed speedballer of the 3440th Army Service unit, for five innings, stick wielders of the Student Training regiment solved the mound enigma for seven runs in the sixth stanza to notch a 13-12 win at Gowdy field Monday night.

Ernie Stewart, going all the way on the hill for the STR lads, chalked up his second triumph of the Fort Benning league's final phase, and remained unbeaten for the 1948 season. He won four games for the students during the league's opening half.

Hall's loss evened his record for the second half with one victory and one defeat. His first half record included one win and four losses.

David Waits and Willie Banks crossed the plate for the losers in the top of the first to give them a two-run advantage. The ASU scored another tally in the visiting half of the third after the students had pushed a lone marker across in the bottom half of the second.

The service unit team notched another duet of scores in the first of the fifth to make the with a pair in the host team's turn at bat to boost its total to count 5-1, but the STR came back three.

Stewart gave up three more runs to the ASU in the start of the sixth, but the home nine took a 10-8 lead by virtue of the big half inning.

Three runs already were in and two out when walks to Bill Church, Lefty McGowan and Harold Brown set the stage for Carmichael's four-run blast over the left-field barrier. Stewart then went down swinging to end the inning.

Scoring two in the seventh and one each in the eighth and ninth cantos, the ASU team came to within one run of catching the students after the winners had hung up their final trio of tallies in the closing half of the seventh.

Officer, EM, Third Army Meets Scheduled Locally

Two post tennis tournaments, one for officers and the other for enlisted men, have been scheduled for local courts during the early part of this month, and will be used to select courtmen to represent Fort Benning in the annual Third Army tourney, which opens here June 29.

First on the agenda will be the officers' classic, which will get under way at the Officers' club courts on Saturday. The enlisted tourney has been slated for the courts across from the Infantry Schol building on June 14, 15 and 16.

Following the two post meets, singles and doubles winners in each will be matched in playoffs to select players on the post's Third army delegation. The team to compete in the army classic probably will consist of six players.

Deadlines Set

Although the entry deadline for the post officer tourney originally was set for today, the sign-up period has been extended one day. Entries placed with Chuck Everet in the club pro shop prior to 6 p. m. tomorrow will be honored, it was pointed out.

Registrations for the enlisted men's tournament must be submitted to the post special services office before 5 p.m., next Tuesday.

Although the primary purpose of the tournaments is to pick the Third army team delegates, trophies will be presented also singles and doubles winners and runners-up in both classics.

Favored in the post officers' tourney as well as the Third army meet will be Lt. Col. S. J. Webster, who walked away with both the Benning and army singles championships last year. He also teamed with Capt. S. J. Adams to cop the 1947 doubles honor in both events.

Webster's court background includes four years as a key man on the West Point tennis team. After playing on the squad in 1937-38-39, Webster was selected to captain the Army team in 1940.

Capt. Charles Daniels, No. 1 man and captain of the West Point court edition of 1944, is expected to be the chief contender for Webster's post laurels. Other formidable competition is expected from Capt. Don Driscoll, member of the West Point teams of 1940-41; Lt. Cl. Howard Balliett, post officers' club champion of 1946; and Maj. Gerge Beatty, captain of the famed Presbyterian college team of 1939.

Softball teams in the post and Columbus city leagues hope that last week's intermittent rains have cooled the Infantry School detachment Reds off a bit.

The ISD softballers, who have been benched since their 16-4 win over the 999th Field Artillery battalion in a post league game last week because of too much liquid sunshine are setting the pace in both the Benning and city circuits with only one defeat in 15 starts.

Hurler John Wyatt has been the sparkplug of the ISD's diamond attack. His string of mound victories include three no-hitters and a trio of contests in which he allowed only a single safety. Wyatt's hitless performances were turned in against the Columbus Merchants, the Phenix City Merchants, and Company K of the 504th Parachute Infantry regiment, all city-league tilts.

In post-loop encounters, the right-handed fireball expert has hung up one-hit wins over both the red and blue teams of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, and has registered a one-hitter against the parachute infantrymen of the Columbus league.

In addition to holding down the No. 1 spot on the Reds' mound delegation, Wyatt has been one of the big guns in the ISD plate attack. Batting in the clean-up spot, he is crowding the .500 mark in hitting, and has banged out three homeruns so far this season.

Wyatt's batterymate Jack Hallett, a veteran of the ISD softball squad of 1947, also has turned in a bit of fancy stick work. He has four round-trippers to his credit this year.

Three of the Red infielders are back from last year, and Jim Henchy, a newcomer who has been given the ISD's third-base assignment, is keeping in step with the trio of oldsters. The veteran inner-gardners, averaging better than .400 in stick work, includes first-baseman Hiram Duncan, second-baseman Bill Welton, and shortstop Paul Markland.

Chuck Evert, pro at the Officers' club tennis courts, has returned from Evanston, Ill., where he spent the winter months studying for a law degree at Northwestern university, and is again ready to give out helpful hints in racquet manipulation.

Evert is anything but a novice on the court. Coming from a tennis-minded family, his familiarity with a racquet dates back almost as far as his ability to walk.

Breaking into Fort Benning tennis circles while he was a tactical officer at Harmony Church in 1944-45, Evert is a former post champion in both singles and doubles competition. After a tour of duty in Japan, Evert was released from active duty in 1946, and was signed as tennis coach of a northern college.

The club pro is a former national-ranking amateur, and was Midwest inter-collegiate champion for two years. After completing college, he was inked as tennis pro at the Tam O'Shanter Country club of Chicago.

Evert's family background in tennis includes three brothers, who, with him, were nationally-ranked courtmen. Brother Jimmy was No. 1 man on the Notre Dame team last year, and another brother, Jerry, held down the college's No. 2 spot. The third brother, Jack, lost his life while serving with the 508th Paratroopers in Normandy. Prior to entering the service, he was Illinois inter-collegiate champion.

The former infantryman has specialized in teaching junior-age boys and girls, and has coached several players to national championships.

Profs Cop 5-2 Tilt From ASU

Come From Behind To Stay Unbeaten in 1948 Campaign

The Infantry School detachment Profs remained in the post intra-mural diamond league's ranks of undefeated teams by shading the 3440th Army Service unit squad 5-2 at Gowdy field last Tuesday night.

The win for the Profs boosted their record for the second half to two victories and no defeats. During the circuit's first half, the ISD aggregation notched 14 consecutive triumphs, including no-hit shutouts by right-hander Bill Welton and portsider Collis Lehner.

In Tuesday night's tilt, shades of Flatbush prevailed as the quadrangle performers and officials provided the spectators with discussions, conferences, protests, and almost everything except the old heave-ho.

ASU Grabs Lead

The ASU nine had a momentary fling at the lead in the first inning when right-fielder Lamb was hit by one of pitcher Welton's offerings, went to third on a single to left by Willie Banks, and scored when Holt scratched an infield hit down the first-base path.

After going out in order in the initial frame, the Profs took command in the home half of the second by walking up a trio of tallies. With one down, Woody Burt drove a single to left, stole second, and went to third on Bill Brooks' bingle to center. However, he was thrown out at the plate attempting to score on a squeeze play engineered by Bill Hojnacki.

Brooks and Hojnacki both scored when catcher John Seymour lashed a long double to left, and Seymour came in with the third run of the inning when Welton's blow to left-center went for two bases.

Simpson Injured

The Profs widened their margin by scoring again in the fourth. Burt led off with a two-bagger to left, went to third when Earl Simpson, mound starter for the ASU squad, pitched wild, and scored when catcher Lee Saucier let an offering from the hill slip by him.

Simpson was forced to retire from the game during the visiting half of the fifth stanza when, after slapping out a single to start the inning, he chipped an ankle bone trying to reach third on David Waits' single to left. After being ruled out on the play, Simpson was carried from the diamond.

Medical officers' reports on the right-handed twirler's condition indicate that it is not serious, and he is expected to be back in the ASU lineup within a few days.

Hall Relieves

When Simpson left the ball game, he was replaced on the mound by right-handed fire-baller Lawrence Hall, who gave up only one run and three hits during the remainder of the contest.

The final ISD tally came in the bottom half of the fifth when Herb Lauve, Prof first-sacker, led off with his only hit of the evening, a single to right. After stealing second, Lauve went to third when Joe Smith bounced out, third to first, and scored on a passed ball.

The ASU squad made its final

Post Captain Cops Two Jump Prizes

Capt. M. E. Bullock of Fort Benning jumped his prize thoroughbred Blue Point to two triumphs in the Al Oula Shrine's three-day horse show at the Columbus fairgrounds last weekend.

On Saturday, the captain took his horse through five difficult leaps to take first place in the show's lightweight hunter class, and came back Sunday to win over seven other horses in the hunter $250 championship stake.

For Blue Point's performance on Saturday, the post captain was awarded the $20 prize money and a blue ribbon by little Judy Livingston, daughter of Muscogee County Commisioner Cliff Livingston.

Following Sunday's exhibition, Captain Bullock was presented the $75 first prize money, a tropky, and a ribbon when the judges named Blue Point the best jumper in the field.

Climaxing the final 10 exhibitions of the three-day show, Captain Bullock's thoroughbred cleared eight difficult jumps to the cheers of more than 300 horse admirers who witnessed the closing-day performances.

Enlisted Links Tourney Goes Into Final Stages

The process of elimination had ousted all but five aspirants for the Fort Benning enlisted golfing crown as play in the first annual tourney went into the semi-final round this week.

Medalist Paul Markland had the championship flight's toughest schedule of the week with a possibility of having to play two matches. Should Markland, who won a 5-and-4 decision over Eugene Ross in his first match, win his quarter-finals contest from J. L. Logan, he will have to play his semi-finals opponent, Gene Yow, before the start of next week.

Yow, who qualified with a four-over-par 76, has turned out to be the dark horse of the tournament. After scoring a one-sided victory over Charlie Hubert in his first match, Yow went on to wrest his quarter -finals match from Edgar Powe 5-and-4 last Friday. In both of his match-play rounds, the Lawson field hotshot has carded sub-par scores.

19-Hole Triumph

In the lower bracket of the championship flight, Elfedy Ivy, sharp-shooter from the Sand Hill course, had to go 19 holes to score a 1-up triumph over Bill Haralson, who toured the course in 85 strokes during the qualifying period. Ivy turned in a 74, one stroke behind Markland, for his qualifying round.

Claude English set a blistering pace on the front line in Friday's rain to win a 5-and-4 decision over his quarter-finals opponent, G. A. Hollenbeck, and enter the semi-finals against Ivy.

Although semi-finals matches have been slated for the latter part of this week, no date has been set for the playing of the finals matches. The finals will be followed by a ceremony at which trophies will be presented to the tourney medalist and winners and runners up of each flight.

First Flight Rounds

Only two first-flight matches were played during the drenching rain Friday. In the upper bracket, Arden Smith eliminated J. Ray 9-and-8 to enter the semi-finals against the winner of the match to be played between E. W. Echols and L. Weiczorek. Lewis McAfee, who won a 5-and-5 decision over Harry Arnold, will play either F. T. Canady or L. Harmon in his semi-finals round.

All quarter-finals matches still were to be played in the second flight. In the upper bracket, John Wyatt will be matched opposite Gerald Vital, and T. B. Birdsong will play E. Sprinkle. The lower bracket will feature matches between Bob Williams and Louis Cantoni, and R. Orton and J. J. Felber.

Angelo Borelli will meet H. J. Tucker in the only remaining quarter-finals match in the third division. The winner of the match will be paired with Bill O'Barr in the flight's lower-bracket semi-finals match. George Frink won a 2-up decision from O. U. Williamson to enter the upper-bracket semi-finals against John Burniston, who defeated William Robertson 4-and-3.

'Chutists Blank Artillery Squad

The 'chutists' triumph gave them a record of two wins and no defeats for the post league's second half, and deadlocked them with the Medics for the No. 1 spot in the circuit standings.

Alvallis, who fanned 16 batters in pitching the artillerymen to a 6-3 victory over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers last Wednesday night, started on the hill for the losers, and was charged with the defeat.

Third - baseman Ralph Terry was the Airborne batting star, collecting four singles in five official times at bat. He also scored three of the Troopers' runs.

The parachutists got off to a one-run lead in the first inning when Paul Bonair, after drawing a base on balls, attempted to steal second, and came all the way around to score when artillery catcher Ulus Hale threw wild into center field.

The Airborne lads made their margin more secure in the third frame by batting through the entire lineup to count four times. Singles by Terry and Tom Gallagher were the only base knocks chalked up by the Troopers during the four-run stanza.

After scoring a pair in the seventh and one in the eighth, the Troopers came through with another big blast in the top of the ninth, and romped across the home slab four times.

Successive singles were hit by Bonair, Len Carney and Terry to start the final frame. Bonair was out when he tried to score from second on Terry's blow, but the play was followed by walks to Bob Kinard and Watts, and a single by Herb Myatt.

Pitcher Gaines, who had come on to relieve Ellis during the fifth stanza, faced a total of 10 Trooper batters during the Troopers' late scoring spree.

Midgets Race Again Friday After Rain-Out Last Week

At last report Brewer was dickering with the owners of a string of fast out-of-town cars in regard to entry in this week's events.

The last race featured two speedy newcomers from the D. B. Babson racing team of Knoxville, Tenn. One of the pair took the final feature at Atlanta two weeks in a row, then captured the 20-lap main event at Martin stadium.

Another fast "foreign entry," Woody Campbell, ran away with the third program final last month.

Time trials start at 7:30 p.m. with heat racing scheduled at 8:30 p.m. The last two racing programs have been completed by 10:05 p.m., after adhering strictly to the time schedule.

Benning Troops Begin Arriving From Maneuver

With the advanced detail already returned, the first march of remaining elements of the 325th Regimental combat team and supporting units began streaming back to the post shortly after noon Tuesday following participation in the joint Third army-Ninth air force training maneuver, "Exercise Assembly" staged at Camp Campbell, Ky., and Fort Bragg, N. C., during May.

Approximately 5,000 Fort Benning troops, under the command of Col. Charles H. Royce, commanding officer of the 325th, were among the 30,000 soldiers who took part in the simulated rugged warfare that started early in May and concluded last week-end.

Included in the returning maneuver force, along with the 325th were the 516th Ordnance MAM company, 332rd Transportation Truck company, 651st Motor Ambulance company and the 666th Transportation Truck company.

Seven southeastern states were set aside as the Southeastern Theater of Operations, and the simulated battle for the most part took place along the Tennessee-Kentucky border.

In "Exercise Assembly" the 30,000 troops were tackling a problem of licking a power-packed guerilla force backed by a strong fifth column. It was assumed that an enemy had established bases in the Caribbean and secretly landed a modern, mobile guerilla band. Re-inforced by local "fifth columnists," the band confiscated guns, ammunition, jeeps, food and everything needed for a modern combat organization. The problem of wiping out the "enemy" was successfully carried out.

The troops who participated in the maneuver, the largest training operation since World War II, represented army and air force units stationed at camp and bases from coast to coast. All were under the command of Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third army commanding general.

The simulated battle was staged to train U. S. soldiers and airmen how to handle themselves and thier equipment under simulated combat conditions.

The rescuing airborne group, known as "Task Force Lucky," was commanded by Maj. Gen. Leroy Irwin. This striking force was made up of elements of V Corps, the 82nd Airborne division and the Ninth air force.

VICTORY LEAP—Blue Point, a thoroughbred belonging to Capt. M. E. Bullock, jumps to victory in the lightweight hunter's class in the Al Debs Shrine club's annual horse show at Columbus' Muscogee fair grounds last Saturday afternoon. In winning the class, Captain Bullock executed five difficult leaps.

MEDICS TALLY THIRD SUCCESSIVE VICTORY

The post Medics retained their spot among the Fort Benning diamond league's ranks of unbeaten teams for the second half last Thursday night by overcoming a three-run deficit to shade the Seventh Regimental Combat team 6-4 behind the two-hit pitching of right-hander Arthur Botjer.

The filt was somewhat of an oddity in that both teams scored more runs than hits.

A triple and a single comprised the RCT's output of bingles while the Medics collected four one-baggers from the offerings of Bill O'Barr, chunky right-hander who did the first seven innings of mound work for the visitors.

Three and one-half innings of hitless ball were played before Ted Thorson, Medic third-sacker, broke the jinx with a Texas-league single to right in the home half of the fourth. However, the medical delegation took advantage of a momentary touch of wildness on the part of O'Barr to cross the plate once in the initial stanza.

Otto Loroesh walked to start the first inning, and stole second. Bases on balls to Willie Griffin and Harold Newman, loaded the bags and Loroesh scored when Paul Lewish rolled to short forcing Newman at second.

Botjer, who had twirled four innings of hitless ball allowing only two RCP men to reach the bags, had trouble finding the plate in the fifth, and yielded one tally by passing four visiting batsmen and committing a wild pitch.

Coming to bat in the sixth, the RCT piled up a three-run margin on two succesive errors by Medic second-baseman Newman, a triple by Pete Gority, and a passed ball by catcher Griffin of the Medics.

The Medics took possession of a one-run lead by notching a quartet of tallies in their half of the seventh. Pitcher Botjer walked, went to second on a single by Loroesh, and moved to third when O'Barr threw into center-field trying to catch him off the sack. After Griffin had worked the RCT right-hander for his third walk of the game, Newman lashed a sharp single to center scoring Botjer and Loroesh.

Newman's theft of second set the stage for two more Medic runs and be scored behind Griffin when Lewish drove a one-bagger through the hole in left field.

The pace-setting Medics added their final counter in the home half of the eigbth on three free tickets to first and a balk by pitcher Wilkinson, who had come in for the RCT to finish the seventh after O'Barr gave the host team its trio of base knocks.

Botjer's triumph placed him at the head of the circuit, pitching roster with two wins and no losses for the second phase of league activity.

MIDGETS TAKE FIRST WIN FOR DEPARTING MANAGER

Members of the Fort Benning Midgets baseball squad wrapped up a 16-11 win over Columbus' Elks club here Sunday afternoon as a going-away present for Manager Richard Van Buskirk and his ball playing son Flynn.

The Midgets, who had been beaten in every start of the season, pledged an all-out effort to chalk up a win for their pilot before his departure for a new assignmnt with the military police at Fort Monroe, Va., this week.

The departure of the Van Buskirk family not only will open up a gap in the Midgets' managerial department, but will deprive them of the services of their first-string receiver, Flynn Van Buskirk, who has seen action in all of the diminutive Doughs' 1948 tilts.

The Midgets had their pledge well on the way to fulfillment after they had compiled a 13-4 advantage during the first trio of innings.

A five-run attack in the opening half of the first was sparked by a homerun off the bat of Woodrow Jones with Maurice McQuinn on base. A four-master by pitcher Ronald Peoples with Jones and McQuinn on board accounted for three more Benning tallies in the second, and Peoples' brother, Kenneth, slammed out another round-tripper to score his brother and Jones ahead of him during a third-frame hitting spree which netted five local tallies.

The Midgets secured their margin by adding three more counters in the top half of the fifth.

Scoring a pair each in the first and third stnazas, the Elks club delegation was on the long end of the scoring throughout the final three frames. The city squad scored one in the fourth, and three each in the fifth and sixth innings.

Peoples, going the route for the post nine, yielded only two safeties to the Elks clubbers as wildness accounted for most of the city group's scoring. He gave up 14 walks, and struck out seven during the six-inning contest.

The local lads nicked Pete Turner, Elks club starter, for 13 base knocks and 11 free passes during his stint on the mound. The visiting twirler was credited with three strikeouts.

The honor students were Peggy Edris and Jimmy Mayberry. Peggy, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Edwin N. Sever to Head Base Squadron

Capt. James E. Sever, wartime member of the First Air Commando group and veteran of the Burma invasion, has been appointed commanding officer of Squadron A, 819th Air Force Base Unit, at Lawson field, officials announced today.

A pilot of both gliders and powered aircraft, Captain Sever reported to Lawson in December of 1946, and was assigned to the flight section which carries out the field's airborne and glider training program. Prior to taking command of Squadron A from Maj. Willard Woodyard, who is now attending the University of Missouri, Captain Sever served as recruiting officer.

Originally from Norfolk, Va., the captain entered the air force in June, 1942, and one month later began glider pilot's training at Fort Morgan, Colo. He received his commission and glider wings at Victorville Air Force Base, Calif., in December, 1942.

In October, 1943, he volunteered for special overseas duty in the China-Burma-India area, where he participated in the first large scale glider operation in Burma.

Renovated Service Club Provides New Features

At the gala reopening of Service club No. 1 last week, Fort Benning personnel were treated to an innovation of special rooms for various club activities as well as to the many new club furnishings.

From the canopy awning over the entrance to the shining refinished floors of the interior, the club presents a "new look" to its visitors.

Drink room, writing room, card room, game room and billiard room, and a room for musical activity, serve the off-duty G.I. with almost every variety of indoor recreation. The main lounge and central room provide generous space for dances and variety entertainments.

With almost every kind of instrument, the music room has soundproof wall and ceiling to permit amateur Goodmans and Dorseys to practice and jam their duty-free hours away. Booths for record playing and an extensive record library give the music lover all the room he needs for an afternoon of pleasure.

Spotlighting the card room, a large oil painting, called "Ben's Boat House", by Sherman H. Linton, of the 3440th Army Service unit, draws continued attention. Presented to the club at opening ceremonies, the artist has announced that he is now preparing another canvas for the recreation room of the building.

Behind her great new desk in the main lounge, Miss Frances Gladden, hostess and program director, receives visitors and dispenses advice during her strenuous day.

"With all these new drapes and furnishing, I hardly know where to begin talking about them," she told a reporter last week. "But everything we have is either new or refinished, and we are certainly very proud of our club's appearance.

"Perhaps I had better just say we're glad to be able to give Fort Benning the best service club possible, and that the men here on the post have done wonders in helping us," Miss Gladden stated.

Service club No. 1 was officially reopened Sunday afternoon, May 23, with a large-scale variety show and enteriainment.

Graduation Exercises Held Here on May 24

Graduation exercises were held Monday, May 24, for 147 members of class No. 16 of the Airborne battalion's Company D. It was announced this week.

Of the total number of graduates, seven were officers and the remainder enlisted men. Thirteen of the enlisted men are scheduled to join the 11th Airborne division in Japan, while the others will be transferred to the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Three Cent Postage Stamp Issued May 28 Honoring Chaplain Heroes

A new three-cent postage stamp was issued by the government Friday, May 28, to commemorate the death of four army chaplains who lost their lives when the S. S. Dorchester sank off the coast of Greenland in February, 1943.

The four chaplains who were aboard the transport Dorchester when it was sunk in the north Atlantic represented the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths. They gave up their lifebelts to men who had none and, according to reports, joined hands in prayer to a common God as the ship sank beneath the cold, grey waters.

The Chaplain's corps, almost as old as the army itself, was established on July 29, 1775, when Congress fixed the pay for the men of cloth at 20 dollars a month. The Rev. John Hurt of Virginia became the first official regular army chaplain on March 3, 1791.

During World War II, a total of 77 chaplains were killed in battle or died of wounds received while administering church rites to combat soldiers, and a total of 2,653 decorations were awarded 1,714 chaplains.

These decorations include 16 Distinguished Service crosses, three Distinguished Service medals, 104 Legions of Merit 167 Silver Stars and 13 oak leaf clusters, 26 Soldier's medals, 1,201 Bronze Stars and 114 oak leaf clusters, 10 Air medals, 339 Purple Hearts and 38 oak leaf clusters and 50 foreign decorations.

Fort Benning's Chaplain's corps has grown from three chaplains and one chapel in 1941 to nine chaplains and eight chapels in 1948.

Lt. Col. Wallace M. Hale, Infantry Center chaplain, Baptist by faith is assisted by Capt. Russell O. Kirsch, assistant Infantry Center chaplain, who represents the Episcopal faith. Both Chaplains Hale and Kirsch conduct services at the picturesque Infantry Center chapel.

Catholic services are conducted at chapel No. 4 by Maj. John F. Rafferty, while at the Station hospital, both Catholic and Protestant services are held in the hospital chapel. Capt. Robert P. Canis, Lutheran, is hospital chaplain.

Protestant services are conducted in the airborne chapel by Capt. Homer J. Fussell, Baptist, and at the Lawson field chapel by Capt. Chester H Pelt Baptist.

The Sand Hill chapel is under the leadership of Capt. Gerald L. Hayden, Methodist, while at chapel No. 3 services are conducted by Capt. Leonard A. Ellis, Presbyterian, for the men of the 3440th Army Service unit.

Today, there are approximately 1,100 chaplains on active duty with the army. They will be honored on Thursday, July 29, when the Chaplain's corps celebrates its 173rd anniversary.

Post Swimming Pools Offer Cool Sanctuary

Offering cool wet sanctuary from the heat from a Georgia summer Fort Bennings two swimming pools for enlisted men serve as another instruction medium at the home of the Infantry School.

Enlisted men's classes in swimming are to begin at both Russ and Young's pools within the next few weeks, Capt. William Fannin, post athletic officer, has announced.

Classes in life saving have been held since the pools opened on Wednesday, May 5, he said. A swimming class for Girl Scouts began Saturday, May 29, and will last for approximately one week.

Soon after the Infantry School moved to Fort Benning construction of Russ pool was begun on a hill overlooking Upatoi creek.

In 1921, engineers threw up a dam across the rivulet which flowed through a hollow to the creek below. The resulting pond was the start of Russ pool.

Piecemeal filling in of the walls and floor of the pond with concrete went on for the next three years, with a time out called every time the bathing season began.

Built entirely with local labor, the project was directed by 35 key men under the auspices of the recreation center board, a special Fort Benning committee.

Today, Russ pool is the largest artiicial pool in the state, approximately 150 yards long and 50 yards wide. On Sunday, May 23, a total of 665 swimmers jammed the pool, S-Sgt. Homer R. Pope, chief lifeguard stated.

Young's pool, located in the Bradley area beyond the third cuartel, has a capacity for one million gallons of water. Lifeguards under the direction of S-Sgt. Theodore R. Powers keep careful watch over the top crowd of 450 swimmers jams the pool.

Both pools are open from 5 to 8 p. m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. on Saturdays. While Russ pool remains open from 1 to 8 p. m. on Saturday afternoon, Young's pool closes for supper between 4 and 5 p. m.

Wednesday and Sunday afternoons, the pools are open at 1 p. m. Again closing from 4 to 5 p. m., Young's pool joins Russ in providing swimming and cooling recreation for troops of the Infantry Center.

Legion Is Open To Benningites

The Charles S. Harrison post of the American Legion, located at 1400 Third avenue, Columbus, this week extended an invitation to all military personnel at Fort Benning to use it's lounge and recreational facilities.

The Columbus post is open from noon to midnight on Wednesday and Saturday, noon to 8 p.m. on Sunday, and 3-11:30 p.m. other days, John Minter, adjutant, said. Game night is held each Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Meetings are at 8 p.m. on the first Monday of each month, and veterans and servicemen and women, whether members or not are welcome, Mr. Minter said. Those with wartime service are eligible to join the post.

Mr. Minter pointed out that membership is transferable in case of reassignment to another military installation.

ISD Lists Promotions

Promotions in the Infantry School detachment during the past week included Cpl. Richard C. Ordonez, Company A, to technician fourth grade; Pfc. Andrew P. Medina, Company C, to corporal; and Pvt. Edmond B. Hickman, Company A, to private first class.

Only Reserves Having Special Skills Recalled

Only air reserve officers possessing special skills in such fields as communications, electronics, civil engineering, and weather are being accepted for voluntary return to active duty with the air force, Lawson Air Force base procurement officials learned today.

The USAF's present recall rate is lower than 50 men weekly.

Applicants are being recalled only to replace normal personnel losses and to fill vacancies in technical categories. During 1947 approximately 2,700 reserve officers returned to active duty.

All through the number of applicants for recall has increased sharply during the last several weeks, the air force's requirements have not. Several thousand applications are on file at USAF headquarters from officers fully qualified for active duty except that they do not possess special skills which the air force needs and vacancies do not exist for the skills they do possess, officials said.

Sergeant Williams Earns Promotion

S-Sgt. Richard K. Williams, supply sergeant of the Armed Forces Education Center, has been promoted to the grade of technical sergeant, Infantry School detachment officials have announced.

Entering the service in 1944 from Streator, Ill., Sergeant Williams was battalion supply sergeant at Camp Wheeler and Camp Gordon, Ga., before coming to Fort Benning.

As supply sergeant of the education center here, he has the supply responsibility of 37 classrooms and the Infantry Center's typing and adminstration classes, which graduate an average of 40 students every 10 weeks.

The imperial State crown, made for Queen Victoria in 1838, is the most valuable crown in the world, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Court Eliminations Start For Netters

Plans Progress For Annual Third Army Net Tournament

The scramble for berths on Fort Benning's Third Army tennis delegation got under way with weekend elimination sets on the post Officers' club courts, and probably will continue for at least two weeks.

Meanwhile plans were going ahead for the enlisted men's tournament to be held on the courts across from the Infantry School Building next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Following the two local tourneys top officer and enlisted courtmen will be paired in playoffs to determine the post's representation when it plays host to other tennis teams of the Third Army area here on June 29.

All matches in the Third Army classic will be played on the top-notch courts of the Officers' club and Church Evert, pro at the local officers' courts, will be the head official for the meet.

All though the primary purpose of the local tourneys is to pick the Third Army delegation, both the officers' and enlisted men's meets will yield trophies to winners and runners-up in both singles and doubles competition.

Following the tourney for officers, a challenge ladder, similar to the one now in progress at the post golf course, will be set up. The ladder, Evert pointed out, will tend to improve the calibre of tennis on the post in that it will provide constant completion for aspirants to the top rung.

Yang Back

Only one enlisted member of the 1947 Doughboy team will be back for the meets this year. He is Sung Chai A. Yang, a singless representative on last year's edition.

Yang, who took up tennis seven years prior to his entry into the army in 1945; was one-time island champion of Maui, Hawaii where he was attending school. Last year was the first time he had gone in for army court competition.

In addition to Yang, the post team will be strengthened through the services of Lt. Col. S. H. Webster, who walked away with both the Fort Benning and Third Army singles championships last year. He also was a member of the winning doubles squad in the Third Army classic.

The 1949 class of cadets from the United States Military academy, 581 strong, will invade Fort Benning next Wednesday, June 16, for their annual training tour at the Infantry Center, which this year will be crowded into two days.

The cadets are the first group of some 9,000 troops, including reservists and National Guardsmen, who are expected to train at Fort Benning during the summer.

The West Pointers will observe airborne instructions and highlights of training in their tour of the Airborne section Friday morning, June 18. Friday afternoon a demonstration of an infantry-artillery tank team in attack will be staged for their benefit.

Aside from the academic training schedule, social and recreational activities have been planned for the West Pointers during their visit here.

An official reception, given by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Withers A. Burress Thursday evening at the Officers' club, will highlight the social program.

The evening of their arrival and Friday evening have been declared "open" for the cadets, who may choose to take advantage of any of the recreational facilities offered at Fort Benning.

Accompanying the cadets will be Lt. Col. R. H. Tucker, Lt. Col. D. V. Bennett and Lt. Col. G. T. Kimbrell.

Scheduled to depart from Lawson Air Force base Saturday morning, June 19, the academy men will go to Fort Knox, Ky., in the next leg of their training tour.

More than 800 ROTC students from colleges and universities in the Third army area will arrive on June 19. This group, which will train here for six weeks, will conduct their own training under supervision of their own instructors.

Throughout the summer, thousands of reservists and National Guardsmen will be streaming into Fort Benning for training. The largest delegation will be 7,500 officers and enlisted men from the Alabama-Mississippi National Guard unit, the 31st Infantry division.

Various groups of reservists from Georgia, South Carolina, Florida and Alabama are slated to conduct training camps here at intervals within the next few months.

The reserve and National Guard components will be housed in the Harmony Church area during their training tour.

Wartime Pals Reunited Here In Combat Team

BY MERRILL HARRISON
Bayonet Staff Writer

A tip from a recruiting sergeant in Cincinnati and a chance meeting with a former mess sergeant in Washington combined to bring two wartime comrades to Fort Benning and the recently reactivated Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team.

Spending a delay en route to Europe in Washington while his baggage was already at Camp Kilmer, N. J., Pfc De-Witt W. Caldwell bumped into the mess sergeant who mentioned that the Seventh was recruiting former men of the Third Infantry division. Caldwell, a former member of the doivision's battle patrol, but at the time assigned to the Army Security agency, immediately went to the Pentagon building to see what he could do to get to Fort Benning.

Remembering that Col. Lionel C. McGarr, a former commander of the Third's 30th Infantry regiment was in G-2 in Washington, he hotfooted it to the colonel and within 10 minutes was in the office of the adjutant general, orders were cut and he was in the Seventh.

Meanwhile, stopping in a recruiting office in Cincinnati on April 25 to pass the time of day, Robert V. Layton learned about the unit's reactivation. Five days later he was at Benning where he met Caldwell, his former squad leader in the battle patrol in which he was a BAR man.

Privates first class today, Caldwell and Layton have army careers that are almost parallel. When the battle patrol was organized on the Anzio beachhead in March, 1943, Cadwell volunteered for the unit from the Ninth Field Artiller battalion, Layton from the 30th Infantry regiment. Organized as a special force to work behind enemy lines as well as to separhead division attacks, the two men remained with the unit from it activation until after V-E day.

Both wear the ETO ribbon with seven battle stars and invasion arrowhead, Creix de Guerre with palm, Distinguished Unit Citation badge, French fourragere and occupation medal while Layton also has a Bronze Star, Purple Heart and Combat Infantry badge. Caldwell, despites the fact he usually worked well ahead of the infantry, ruefully stated that he is not entitled to wear the badge.

Caldwell is now regimental mail clerk with the Seventh, and Layton is a rifleman with Company E mornings and pitcher with the baseball team afternoons.

Maneuvers Over, Units Come Home

The last contingent of approximately 4,000 Fort Benning troops who participated in the joint Third army—Ninth air force training maneuver, "Exercise Assembly," returned last Friday after a month-long simulated battle against the "enemy" at Camp Campbell, Ky., and Fort Bragg, N. C.

They included the First and Second battalion of the 325th Infantry, the Second battalion of the 25th Infantry, which acted as the Third battalion of the 325th during the maneuver, the 319th Field artillery battalion 666th Truck company, 651st Ambulance company, 516th Ordnance company, 758th Tank Company, 307th Airborne Engineer battalion and the 322nd Transportation Truck company.

With headquarters now at Sand Hill and the First battalion in the first quartet on the main post, the 325th will resume its duties as School troops for Infantry School.

The local troops, under the command of Col Charles H. Royce, commanding officer of the 325th, were among the 30,000 army and air force personnel who took part in the simulated warfare which started in early May.

The group which reached here last Friday was the last of a huge 622-truck convoy dispatched for the exercise. The tracked vehicles, including tanks and half-tracks, traveled by rail.

Troops who took part in "Exercise Assembly, the largest training maneuver since the end of the war, represented army and air force units stationed throughout the nation. Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr, Third army commander was in command of the operation.

BENNING SCOUTS SLATE SUMMER CAMP IN JUNE

Plans for the Boy Scout summer camp to be held during mid-June at the scout camp, located at the junction of Red Arrow and Second Armorored division roads, were announced last week by Sgt. Harry Duffield, Fort Benning scoutmaster.

The cubs will use the camp site from June 14-19 inclusive, while the Boy Scouts will be encamped from June 21-26, Sergeant Duffield said.

A complete scouting program will be carried out for both camps, he pointed out, including supervised swimming, hikes, camp fires, athletics, individual cooking and scout craft.

During the two sessions, an officer-parent will be assigned to the camp at all times to serve as field officer-of-the-day, Sergeant Duffield revealed. Sergeant Duffield will be camp director assisted by five senior scout counsellors from Columbus

Parents of scouts are invited to visit the camp site on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each period.

Cost of the camp will be ten dollars for each scout or cub, and money is payable to Lt. Col. Robert E. Cole, Room 354, Infantry School building.

Transportation will be provided, Sergeant Duffield announced. Cub Scouts will leave from the Children's school at 8 a.m. June 8, and Boy Scouts from the same place at 8 a.m. June 21.

Pyramidal tents will be set up for sleeping purposes.

The scoutmaster has just returned from a one-week camping administration course, and reported that this camp will be one of the best ever held at Fort Benning.

Scores 205-Point Total on M-1 Rifle

Making 37 bullseyes and five fours the first time he ever fired the M-1 rifle, Pfc. Almas J. Marcelle last Friday racked up the highest score in the Infantry School detachment with a 205 out of a possible 210.

A member of Company A, Marcelle is an old hand at shooting high scores, although he had never handled the M-1 previously. He has been in the Army 12 years and eight months. After taking a discharge in 1939, he tried civilian life until last September.

During 1936 and 1937 he was a member of the Camp Perry rifle team. He also served on the 29th Infantry regiment rifle team here and the 27th Infantry regiment team in Hawaii.

Now working as a range maintenance man under Lt. Col. Walden J. Alexander, range officer, Marcelle, who comes from Louisiana, said that he had made "expert" each time he fired. In his firing last Friday he shot at 200 and 300 yards from prone, standing, kneeling and sitting positions.

Airman Enlists In First Grade

First Lt. Glen H. Padgett, formerly of Ford Ord, Calif., reported to Lawson Air Force base recently to reenlist in the grade of master sergeant.

Sergeant Padgett joined the Army at Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo., in 1928 and plans to retire from the service this summer after more than 20 years duty with the ground and air forces. He received his commission in 1942 at Fort Benning.

Originally of Wyoming, he has served in all sections of the country except the north and north east. He has two tours of duty overseas, including two years in Panama and 30 months in the Fiffi islands and the Philippines.

The sergeant has purchased a 60-acre stock farm in Florida where he plans to live when he leaves the service.

CLASS IN FINAL WEEK

Class 17-A of the Airborne battalion's Company E is now in its final week of training here, officials announced today.

The sergeant barged into the barracks and shouted "O. K. you lazy, goldbricking eightballs, hop to and fall in."

The soldiers grabbed their hats and lined up . . . all except one who lay on his bunk blowing smoke rings.

"Well?" growled the sergeant.

"Well," said the soldier, tapping the ashes off his cigar, "there certainly were a lot of them, weren't there?"

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

A SHORT TIME ago we were talking to some officials of the Armed Forces Educational Center, regarding the reason for the change in name from the Infantry Center vocational school. The name-changing was general throughout the army, and what we were told was certainly a good reason for change.

Out in Hawaii, the army's information and educational section established an installation for furthering the education of the off-duty GI, dubbing it the University of Hawaii. One GI, upon his discharge from the army, applied for admission to a bona-fide college giving as his educational background his years spent at the "University of Hawaii."

LOGICALLY, THE UNIVERSITY to which he applied for admission believed that he had actually attended the real university, and did not realize just what institution he had attended until it received his transcript of records.

Other names given to army education schools by information and education sections included The Little Red School House and the University of Hard Knox.

ONE CAN IMMEDIATELY see that these names, athough unintentionally, give the schools a farcial air, thus causing them to be taken ligtly instead of seriously. The fine work they do can not be overemphasized, and the schools themselves should never be subjected to levity. The army's education organization is one of the finest organizations in the armed forces today. It should be kept that way!

Long Live The Queen!

Each June Fort Benning dusts off the old welcome mat in preparation for the arrival of the usual contingent of United States Military academy cadets and civilian army components. Each June Fort Benning gets ready to show the summer visitors what is meant by "southern hospitality."

But even more important than the grand welcome extended our visitors is the pride we feel in being slected as the site for this summer training, the pride we feel in knowing that the instruction provided by the Infantry School is of such high calibre that the army entrusts the training of so many thousands to us.

Our greatest pride, however, is in knowing that the infantry, that grand old lady of battle, is still the leading contender for first place in the armed forces.

Out of the doors of the Infantry School have walked the all-time greats of military history. Out of the doors of the Infantry School have walked the men whose feats have made possible the winning of the most devasting war the world has ever known. Without the infantry, we sometimes wonder what the outcome of the last war would have been.

Next Tuesday, June 15, this queen of battle celebrates her 173rd birthday, and she is still going strong. Indeed she improves with each passing year. As her fame grows, so does the stature of the Infantry School, the stature of the United States armed forces, the stature of the United States.

With each passing year, the number of men who enlist in the infantry, the number of commissioned officers who select the infantry grows increasingly greater. Men in the army want to feel proud of the units to which they belong, and more and more are coming to realize that the greatest pride is in belonging to an infantry unit.

The exploits of infantrymen have made the word infantry almost synomous with the word barvery. Always when the going was toughest, the queen herself was there with her court. When an objective was needed, the queen volunteered to take it. She might have returned from battle with a few more scars and with some of her court dead, wounded or missing, but she never complained. And when another objective was needed, she again volunteered. Naturally, she lost some battles, but she never gave up hope of eventual victory, knowing full well that her ability was great enough to cope with any situation.

Her passing years have made her more invulerable. Although some say she has lost her power, that her day as ruler of the military might of the nation are over, she can smile to herself because she knows that those same people will some day call on her for help. And, as always, she will give it and gladly. Her one motive is to serve and serve well.

The high ranking members of her court strive constantly to keep her record one of improvement. And all these over whom she wields her power help her to prove that she can keep abreast of the changing times.

When the queen discovered that airborne troops were needed to strike swiftly during battle, she immediately trained men to be paratroopers. When the queen discovered that airplanes could be used to great advantage on reconnoissance missions, she immediately trained men to pilot planes.

So, today the infantry still stands at the top of the list in training men to meet any emergency. She still stands at the top of the list in esprit de corps. She still stands at the top of the list in the number of famous outfits, whose courage and stamina and fighting spirit have made her feared and respected.

We, of course, don't believe that the infantry is the only branch of the armed forces needed to protect our country, but we do believe that her importance has yet been overshadowed. We don't belive that the day will ever come--at least not in the foreseeable future--when the infantry will be obsolete. She is still a part of the team, and her importance has not diminished. She is still needed as much as she was when George Washington recruited the Continental army in 1776. Without her, the efficiency of the United States' fighting forces would be irretrievably impaired.

Chaplain's Corner..

WORLD BROTHERHOOD

by

Chaplain Homer J. Fussell

We are living in a new age - the Atomic Age. We possess a power which will will either bring our world together in designed progress or blast it into shackles of disintegration. Man is the determining force. The forces for peace and war are rooted in human character. The struggle which ended in 1945 set the stage for peace.

No one doubts that science has performed a major operation in our world. The sciences have made it a neighborhood. We have reached the stage in history when we can no longer say to any part of the world, "I have no need of you." The day has passed when a people can long survive without the assistance of others. We must live as world citizens. What we do with this larger citizenship will determine our future destiny.

While the sciences have made our world a neighborhood, it remains for men of good will and faith to make it a brotherhood. There can be no real brotherhood unless it is built upon confidence, mutual respect, equality, and justice.

There was a time in the history of society when brotherhood was at a low ebb, but society's tools of war were also dull. When knowledge outruns brotherly love, civilization stands in danger of committing sucide.

Atomic power and other energies, if rightly used may become the determining forces for bringing about the brotherhood of man. Our inventions and discoveries and the ideas formed in the mind will either lend themselves to misunderstandings, suspicion, hatred, and distrust, or to good will, understanding, love and brotherhood. To insure the proper use of society's tools we must acquire an understanding of the earth's peoples. Emerson said, " I hate that man because I do not know him." An understanding of other peoples and their problems is the key to lasting peace. But knowledge must be accompanied by active concern.

This world brotherhood must begin with individuals. As long as we harbor in our hearts hatred toward any class, creed or color, we prevent the coming of that world brotherhood. If any generation is to see the light of a lasting peace, the dawning must begin as we let the light of brotherhood shine in our own hearts.

EAGLE IN THE SKY

F. Van Wyck Mason has again written in Eagle in the Sky an aborbing novel of the Revolutionary period of American history. He has woven his story around the lives of three young doctors, Asa Peabody, Peter Burnham and Lucius Devoe, who, although going separate ways after receiving certificates as Bachelors of Medicine, had strangely interwoven lives.

Eagle in the Sky carries the reader through a series of strange adventures; yet the fact that author Mason has kept his book completely authentic in speech, dress and customs of the period makes it informative as well as fascinating reading.

Asa Peabody lived a life somewhat less exciting that of his two contemporaries, but the author does not release his reader's interest in narrating a life strained by disappointment before happiness enters. Peter Burnham, ship's doctor of the privateer, Grand Turk, meets Trina Vaagas, loses her, and finds her on the Island of Saint Jan. His rescue of her from her prison home is the high point of romantic interest in a novel studded with affairs of the heart. Lucius Devoe, cynical, suave Jamaican, with an inferiority complex and a bitter determination to best his betters, woos and jilts lovely Sabra Stanton, secures an appointment to the Cointinental army to give his life at the battle of Yorktown for a cause he had taken with tongue in cheek.

For a lusty tale, told in colorful fashion, Eagle in the Sky is excellent reading. The main library has this Literary Guild selection available among its new novels.

An Englishman and an American were crossing the ocean on the same boat. While chatting on deck one day, the Englishman asked about the American's occupation.

"I'm a magician," the latter replied.

"Really! What's your specialty?"

"I make things disappear. . ."

At which time a torpedo scored a direct hit and the two voyagers found themselves in the water clinging to a piece of wreckage. Shaking the water from his eyes, the Englishman sputtered angrily:

"I suppose you think that's funny!"

The big cruiser was in port and visitors were being shown around A seaman was exhibiting a bronze tablet set in the deck.

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

Wanta learn to swim?

"Nope," you say, "I already know how to swim.

Well then, would you like to improve your swimming or be issued a certificate to prove that you are an expert swimmer?

Maybe you are already an expert swimmer and would like to be a life guard. How about that? Well, we have the answer to all of those questions. our Red Cross early this spring qualified 25 outstanding instructors to teach you anything that you want to know about swimming, diving and water safety.

An outstanding swimming program for soldiers, civilians and soldiers' dependents was suggested to the commanding general and the recreation office. It has met with their approval.

Perhaps you would like to know how you can receive instructions. Well lets takethe Officers' club pool first. There are two outstanding Red Cross water safety instructors at this pool, Jack A. Seybold and James L. Oeffler. They are there for the purpose of acting both as life guards and instructors. Any officer or his dependent who would like to increase their knowledge of swimming should make it known to one of these instructors or to Colonel R. E. Tibbets, club officer, and arrangements will be made to give you the instruction.

Of course, down at Russ pool everyone knows Sgt. Homer Pope, who is one of the most outstanding instructors in theU.S. Sergeant Pope has on his staff the following Red Cross swimming instructors: Robert W. Fraser, John H. Gumm, Donald E. Hinckley, Ernest Kern, Jr., Lewis W. Leahy, James M. Lewis and Calvin E. Newsome. With all of these instructors and Sergeant Pope at Russ pool every day, it should be an easy matter for you to find some class or some time to improve your knowledge of swimming and water safety.

Among the men who made the high grades in the recent water safety instructors course is Sgt. James E. Mays at Youngs pool.

Therefore, at Fort Benning we have the pools and the instructors. So, it's up to you if you want to become proficient in swimming. See one of these instructors at your earliest opportunity if you would like to receive a Red Cross certificate in swimming There are many certificates issued without the necessary of regular hours or regular scheduled classes.

Infantry, Queen of Battles 173 Years Old On Tuesday

Although the Declaration of Independence was not signed until July 4, 1776, General George Washington had assumed command of the army on July 3, 1775, a job tendered him on June 16 of that year. His "army" consisted largely of militia from New England, then besieging Boston, was unorganized and ill-armed, but already had one heartening victory under its belt. It had whipped the redcoats at Lexington. Within a year the grandfathers, several times removed from today's doughboys, had cleared all of New England for the infant nation except Boston itself.

By the time the Declartion of Independence was signed, Washington had already started making good his promise to reorganize the army on a permanent basis. That was a tough job in those days. The bulk of the army was infantry, with a few artillery pieces in support, practically no engineers, no quartermaster as it is known today, and little else that the modern army has perfected—no planes, tanks, atom bombs.

Untill the final surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown there was also no AWOL. Men joined the army—actually the infantry for the most part—when the spring plowing was finished, soldiered during the summer, and went home to bring in the harvest. Washington had fewer than 2,000 regulars at Valley Forge, but they proved to be the nucleus of the professional army of today.

Ordinance of the early doughfeet was a fairly simple problem at least as far as initial issue was concerned. For after he finished his plowing and planted his corn, the militiaman just picked up his M-1 of 1775, his powder horn and bullet pouch, packed a piece of bacon and a few pounds of corn to keep him going, and took off.

The smoothbore muskets of those days packed a terrific wallop. Not nearly as accurate as our present M-1's, '03's, or carbines, at short range their slugs that measured up to 75 caliber tore an awful hole in their tragets. Sometimes when lead was scarce they were used as shotguns, the barrels being filled with shot, rusty nails, old bolts or other lethal material. Heavy, clumsy and inaccurate as they were, they were the weapons that brought the country freedom, for artillery was scarce, mortars were non-existant and automatic weapons were undreamed of. But Washington's doughboys had somethat's still in use in today's army —bayonets.

The b---net of the revolution —— not the smooth, tempered steel of today. But it was used in that war just as it was used in the last war. Stick a piece of meat on the end, and it came in handy for cooking. (They didn't have C rations to open in those days.) Long, three edged, and often rusty, they were also pretty handy for jabbing Hessians.

Henry Knox, artillery chief of the Revolution, had pretty clumsy guns to use as supporting weapons. They were actually tubes in which a charge of powder was ignited and then a round shot. Often, instead of the round shot, the tube was jammed with small balls, the cannister of the time, or scrap iron, chains, rocks or any available junk. Range was short, a couple of thousand yards, and there was no such thing as indirect firing. Gunners lined up their guns close together and when they saw the whites of the enemies' eyes let loose.

For rations and other quartermaster equipment the infantry of that day lived off the country. Congress either didn't have any money or wouldn't appropriate it. Instead of C's or K's or 10-in-one's the men existed, and fought, on a handful of corn and a piece of jerky. Uniforms were for the most part, the homespun clothes in which they had left home. When shoes wore out (remember, they walked in those days) the men made mocassins or wrapped their feet in rags. It was rough in the winter. They had no dubbin.

The war over, the people and the politicans immediately began to clamor to "bring Daddy back," and the army was practically disbanded, despite the protests of men like Washington and Greene and Lee. Still, a step forward had been made and the infantry of today can still look back to a nearly unbroken existance of units like the First Infantry division and the Third and Seventh Infantry regiments.

Since those early days there has been continual talk that infantry was no longer needed. In the War of 1812 proponents of naval power said that a few good, big, fast ships could replace the infantry. But in 1815 the Seventh Infantry, the same unit that's stationed at Fort Benning today, slaughtered the British army of Gen. Packenham at the Battle of New Orleans—two weeks after the Treaty of Ghent was signed. The British lost a thousand men. From behind their cotton bales the Yankees lost three. They couldn't help it if the communications were poor. There was no Signal corps to radio the news that the war was over.

In the early 19th century the backers of cavalry said that the horse troops were enough. But doughfeet stormed the heights of Chapultapec in the Mexican war after walking from Vera Cruz. Grant and Lee had their cavalry, balloons and artillery in the Civil war, but it was the infantry that ended the war. Bull Run, Gettysburg, Antietam were all infantry engagements.

Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders stormed up San Juan hill, but the infantry had been there first in the Spanish-American war. Admirals Schley, Simpson and Dewey, with their ships, wiped out the Spanish navy, but it was infantry that did the dirty work in Cuba and the Philippines.

World War I was a wor of walking, fighting and dying infantry. By this time it was agreed by most that the other arms and services, important as they were and are, are still supporting troops has to take ground by killing the for the footslogging dough, who enemy dough. World War II with its tanks and chemical mortars, planes and gliders and all the fancy paraphanelia that modern civilization could invent, perfect and manufacture, was still a war of infantry for the most part. There were more new weapons and tools of war, but never has this nation used so many infantry in one war. Allkinds of infantry. Walking infantry, motorized infantry, airborne infantry.

It was infantry that cleared North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Gualaicanal, New Guinea, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, the Philippines and all the other islands of the Pacific. The navy took them there after the air force softened the targets, but the doughboys did it the hard way, with their hands and feet and the weapons they carried.

Today, 173 years old, the Queen of Battles is still in there. Just look around Fort Benning. Ask Ike or Brad what the army needs most today.

Scientists can't produce a perfect vacuum, but they now have learned to make one that is 99.999999 per cent perfect.

gets commission

Associate Producer John H. Auer signed a group of South Americans for jungle sequences in "Drums Along The Amazon." On the first day of shooting he explained, in halting Spanish, what he wanted them to do. All got the idea except one, who said:

"I'm sorry, but I understand only English."

"Aren't you a native?" demanded Auer.

"Sure—a native of Brooklyn," the extra replied.

Recreation Spot Opens Near Post

The Legion Memorial Park at Richland, Ga., 28 miles south of Columbus, is now open for the summer season, according to Legion officials.

The park and pool, officially opened last Sunday, have undergone extensive improvements in recent weeks. According to James P. Goare, commander of American Legion Post 128, to construct such an expansive place as Legion park at the present under the prevailing labor and material costs, would be out of the question.

The grounds have been improved the dance pavilion has been enclosed and a modern hardwood dance floor has been installed. The swimming pool has been completely repaired and renovated.

With many parties, outings, and business meetings already scheduled during the summer months, the park is expected to enjoy another season of popularity. A cordial invitation has been extended to all Fort Benning personnel to spend their liesure time at the park at Richland.

Newspapers are like women. They have forms, back numbers are not in demand, they always have the last word, they are worth looking over, they have a grea tdeal of influence, you can't believe everything they say, there's small demand for the boldfaced type, they're much thinner than before, every man should have one and not borrow his neighbor's.

OFFICERS REGISTER FOR NEW PROGRAM

Fort Benning's participation in the comprehensive program to assist all regular officers in completing two years of college or its equivalent, as laid down in circular 146, got its initial start with the release of a memorandum this week directing all organizations to prepare a roster of all regular officers affected.

A roster of local officers who come within the scope of the circular, will be forwarded to the information and education office here, and definite dates of appointment will be set for interviews.

The army announced recently that it desires that regular officers who do not have at least two years of college, or its equivalent raise their education level to that standard.

The program is directed at the thousands of officers who will find themselves competing for specialized duties and promotions with the college-trained officers. The educational facilities offered in the army through USAFI, university extension courses and other programs, will be made available for the officers to match the college-trained group.

Although the program itself is voluntary, registration is mandatory. All regular offices who do not have the two years college, or its equivalent, must register.

Registrations will be forwarded to the coordinator of training of the Department of the Army who will in turn send recommendations for courses of study.

The information and education office will administer the course, and a progress chart for each individual will be forwarded to the coodinator of training office, where a digest is kept on each officer.

Profs Cop Finale From Paratroops

Employ Ninth-Inning Rally To Squeeze Out 8-7 Win

Rallying in the last half of the ninth inning, the Infantry School detachment Profs made a clean sweep of their 1948 three-game schedule with the Airborne Troopers by shading the 'chutists 8-7 before a record crowd of 4,000 fans.

The ISD win strengthened its chances of going through the 1948 season undefeated in the Fort Benning circuit, and bolstered its prospects of grabbing off the post championship without having to go through a play-off series.

The only formidable barrier between the Profs and an uncontested post title is the post Medic team which has an unblemished record in four starts for the post loop's second half. The Prof-Medic clash is slated for June 25.

Grinols Gets Win

Veteran Hal Grinols came in to replace ISD starter Ike Silcox when the ace right-hander suffered a touch of wildness in the first half of the sixth, and turned in a bang-up job of relief hurling. Holding the Troopers scoreless during the tilt's final three innings, Grinols was credited with the win.

Young Bob Cronin started on the hill for the 'chutists, but was blasted from the slab after he had given up five runs and four hits during the first pair of innings. Southpaw Ken watts, who was Cronin's mound replacement, was charged with the loss.

It looked for a moment like the Airborne team might get the upper hand in the affair when they got to Silcox for three tallies in the visiting half of the intiial inning.

Error is Costly

Paul Bonair led off for the Airborne team by drawing a base on balls, and pulling a steal of second. A sharp single to center brought Bonair home, and Bob Kinard walked to put Trooper runners on base.

Herb Myatt followed with a line single t oright, and Prof fielder Bill Brooks, trying fo handle the play rapidly to cut Terry off at the plate, let the ball get through ,him to score both base runners and permit Myatt to get to third.

The Trooper half of the inning was ended when Watts, who started the game in center field for the Airborne, struck out, and Len Carney was thrown out at first on a roller to Prof second-sacker Harold Burnett.

The advantage held by the Troopers, however, was short-lived, the Profs managing to get the first trio of hitters in the lineup across the plate in the home half of the first.

Getting to first on a walk, George Hill moved down to second when Herb Lauve was hit by a pitched ball, and scored when Burnett slammed a base hit into the right gardens. Lauve followed him across when Carney let the blow roll through him for an error.

Burnett, after going to second on Carney's misplay, romped home when Clyde (Woody) Burt lashed a single through the hole into left field, and went to third on an error by Airborne left-fielder Ray Stem. Burt was out at the plate on an attempted squeeze play laid down by Bill Brooks, and Bill Hojnacki whiffed for the third Prof out.

ISD Adds Two

After retiring the Troopers in order in the top of the second, the ISD nine came through with two more counters in the home half of the stanza. Chick Shiver started the scoring by reaching on an error by Myatt, and going to second on a well-bunted sacrifice by pitcher Silcox.

A single by Hill brought Shiver home, and Lauve followed with a one-bagger which sent Hill to third base. A well-engineered squeeze play by Burnett brought Hill in with the second Prof tally.

Both teams went through the third frame scoreless, but the Troopers picked up a run in the fourth on a single by Myatt and a two-base blow down the third-base line by pitcher Watts.

Another Deadlock

Another Trooper run in the opening half of the fifth again knotted the score, Bonair worked Silox for another walk and moved around to third when Hojnacki was charged with an error on a throw by catcher Shiver to catch the runner stealing second.

Budd, who had come in to play third when Terry got involved in an argument with Lauve which resulted in both players being ordered off the field by Umpire Harris, laid down a sacrifice which scored Bonair.

The Profs again took command in the bottom side of the fifth when singles by Brooks and Collins (Lefty) Lehman, who had taken over Lauve's first-sack chores and an error accounted for two tallies.

Four-Hit Ninth

The tie which stood until the ninth inning came as the result of a duet of Trooper tallies in the first of the sixth. Myatt's third single of the night, a long double over first base and three bases on balls figured in the scoring.

After Silcox had yielded three straight walks with two outs, Grinols came to the hill for the Profs, and retired the 'chutists by setting Budd down on strikes.

Prof batters solved Watts' pitching to the tune of four bingles to push across the winning tally in the ninth. Blows by Burnett, Burt, and Joe Smith filled the bags with none out.

Watts then whiffed Brooks and Hojnacki, but Shiver slammed a single to deep short to bring in Burnett with the winning run.

ISD Reds Secure Softball Command With 4-0 Triumph

The Infantry School detachment Reds dropped the parachutists of the Airborne battalion from a first place tie in the Fort Benning softball circuit last Wednesday afternoon when Red mound ace John Wyatt hurled a 4-0, one-hit shutout.

The classic was the fourth of the season in which Wyatt has limited opposing lumber swingers to one safety. He also has three hitless triumphs to his credit, all of them coming in Columbus city league games.

Although the Reds got runners on base in both the second and third innings, they failed to score. Hiram Duncan and Warren Paulk poled singles in the second frame, and Jack Hallett died on third after slamming out a double in the third inning.

The bell started ringing for the Reds in the fourth. After pitcher Wyatt had doubled and Duncan had banged out a safe hit, Paulk, a newcomer to the ISD lineup, cleared the bases with a smashing homerun.

An error accounted for the final Red tally in the fifth inning. Jim Henchy and Wyatt walked, and the former scored when Duncan reached the bags on an Airborne misplay.

Ulysses S. Grant, 18th President of the United States, took so little interest in politics for many years that he only voted for one Presidential candidate before he was 45 years old, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. When he was 46 he was elected President on the Republican ticket.

THRILLING FINISH . . . Harold "Blondy" Burnett, ISD second sacker is shown crossing the plate with the winning run on Chick Shiver's ninth inning bingle as Airborne catcher, Tom Gallagher looks on. It was a thrilling climax in the crucial second-half tussle won by the ISD, 8-7.

Harrison Hurls Win Over RCT For ASU Nine

Diamond representatives of the 3440th Army Service unit balanced their record for the Fort Benning league's second half at two wins and two losses last Thursday night by tacking a 14-6 defeat on the pit-dwelling Seventh Regimental combat team.

The RCT's loss was its fourth in as many encounters during the loop's final phase.

During the early stages of the game it appeared that one-man margin might decide the victor, but the ASU lads came through with a six-run blast in the home half of the fifth to knock starter Clyde Wilkinson of the visitors from the mound.

Second-baseman Willie Banks of the victors shared plate laurels with Stan Maciejczyk, RCT shortstop, both having perfect nights at bat. Banks collected five singles in as many trips, and Maciejczyk hit for a single, a double, and a pair of three-baggers in four appearances.

Going the route for the ASU, "Cuz" Harrison, right-handed oldster, gave up eight bingles, fanned nine, and hung up a zero in his walks column. The win was his first of the 1948 season.

David Waits touched off a two-run first inning for the ASU nine by slamming a line triple through the hole in right-center, and scoring when right-fielder, Lamb reached on an error by hurler Wilkinson of the RCT. Going to second on an infield out, Lamb scored on Banks' first bingle of the game, a sharply-hit liner to center.

The combat team knotted the count in the visiting half of the second on Maciejozyk's single, and ASU miscue allowing catcher Martin to reach the bags, and a long double into the right-field corner by Wilkinson.

In the ASU half of the second, Mike Thrailkill reached on a fielder's choice, stole his way around to third, and scored on a left-field single by pitcher Harrison to give the host squad a one-run margin.

A single RCT run in the invaders' half of the fourth again deadlocked the tilt. With two down, Waits, ASU shortstop, over threw first on Martin's grounder permitting Maciejozyk, who had doubled, to score from second.

The ASU pulled away from the combat team lads for keeps by putting together two safeties and five RCT misplays for six runs in the bottom of the fifth.

COURT CLINIC SLATED FOR NEXT THURSDAY

A seven-lesson tennis clinic for junior members of the Fort Benning Officers' club will start next Thursday morning under the tutelage of Chuck Evert, nationally-known pro at the club here.

The clinic will be open to all sons and daughters of club members between the ages of nine and 17, and all lessons will be given on the courts next to the Officers' club.

The first lesson of the clinic, Evert said, will be devoted to orientation to the game and its rules, and advice as to needed equipment for the clinic and subsequent practice and play.

A demonstration of various shots and strokes by the pro, and a short movie of the 1947 Davis Cup matches (United States vs. Australia) will follow the first period of instruction.

Subsequent lessons during the clinic will be devoted to familiarization with the various strokes of the racquet. Probably only one of the several strokes used will be taken up at each of the two-hour sessions.

One of the primary purposes of the clinic, Evert said, is to stimulate interest for either a father-son or senior-junior tour-

Ordnance Wins Shutout Contest

The 328th Ordnance battalion made its debut to the win column of the Fort Benning league Friday night as right-hander Bob Glover pitched a 15-0, three-hit shutout over the Lawson field players.

In chalking up the triumph, the Ordnance team, which has previous losses to the post Medics and the Airborne Troopers, dropped the Lawson squad into seventh place in the loop standings with no wins in three starts.

Jack Hunt, doing the twirling for the Flyers, held the Ordnance lads scoreless for the first two frames, but the flame pot delegation took advantage of five visitor misplays in the third to score six times on one bingle, a single to center by Bob McCachren.

Flyer errors also figured in a four-run fourth canto for the host Ordiancenine. Louis Glodich, leading off for the 328th reached on a mishap, and scored on a two-bagger by Horace Bassett. Stan Letonsky then slammed out a single to score Bassett, went to third when a blow by Glover was mishandled, and scored when Bob Cannon got a base knock.

After failing to count in the fifth inning, the Ordnance team picked up its final five tallies in the sixth and last inning of the abbreviated tilt.

McCachren reached first when catcher Cox of the Flyers dropped a third strike, and advanced to second when Charley Jones drew a base on balls. Singles by Cannon and Henry Wyatt brought both runners in, and Cannon scored when Cox picked off Wyatt at second on Glodich's infield roller.

Glodich scored when Bassett was safe on a fielder's choice, and the fifth score was chalked up by Bassett, who came in when Letonsky reached on an error.

First-baseman Braun was credited with two of the Flyers' three bingles. He rapped out one-baggers in the first and third innings, and Max Seirer, Flyer shortstop, got the final safe blow for the Flyers, a single to right in the fifth.

At the end of the sixth inning, managers of the two teams decided to call it a night due to the margin piled up by the Ordnance nine.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

If Marshall O'Shaughnessy, jumpee at the Airborne battalion, had arrived at Fort Benning in time to get his paraphernalia together, the going in the current enlisted men's golf tournament might have been a little tougher.

Although he hasn't done much whacking away at a golf ball since he entered the army five months ago, Marshall still is pretty certain that he can go out and crack 80 without much difficulty.

The 19-year-old Keego Harbor, Mich., lad was virtually raised with a golf club in his hand, and, by the time he was 15, he had established himself quite a name on the links in and around his hometown.

His introduction to tournament golf came during his 15th year in 1944 when he teamed with J. Law to beat the now famous Ed Furgol and Joe Bergoff in the Silver Lake Country club's best ball tournament in Pontiac, Mich.

Later the same year, young O'Shaughnessy came through to win the Oakland county, Mich., junior open tournament for golfers under 21 years of age.

Marshall took a fling at qualfying for the National Open tournament in 1946, but his medal rounds at the Plum Hollow course near Detroit failed to dip below the maximum score permissable to get him in the big-time meet.

One prediction we don't hesitate to make is that Stan Maciejczyk, shortstop for the Seventh Regimental Combat team, is going to furnish a lot of headaches for post league pitchers during what remains of the loop's second half schedule.

Although his team dropped a 14-6 decision to the 3440th Army Service unit last Thursday night, it wasn't big Mack's fault.

The husky short-fielder turned in a 1.000 performance at the plate, getting a single, double, and two triples in four trips. He batted in one run, and scored every time he reached the sacks.

The speedy southpaw's 24 whiffs set an all-time record for Fort Benning.

Before Lehner came along, the post strikeout record was shared by Ken Watts of the Airborne battalion, who chalked up 19 in a game last year, and the post Medics' John Graves, who whiffed a like number of Ordance batters a couple of weeks ago.

The strikeout record is not the only noteworthy accomplishment of the veteran portsider this year. He chalked up this season's first no-hit masterpiece against the 3440th ASU early in the season, and his hurling record stands at four wins and no defeats.

Lehner also is one of the most versatile diamondmen on the post, being able to play almost any position on the team.

The famous No. 3 which Babe Ruth wore as a Yankee and is now carried by Cliff Mapes will be retired June 13, and never again will be worn by a New York player.

When Lou Gehrig retired from the Yankee scene under such tragic circumstances, his No. 4 was retired, and his locker in the stadium was padlocked.

Honoring Ruth in a similarly simple way long had been contemplated. Now its to be done during the 25th anniversary celebration of Yankee stadium before the Bombers tackle the Cleveland Indians.

That same afternoon, as many members of the Yankee world champions of 1923, the year the stadium was dedicated, as can be assembled will play a short game against players of other title-winning clubs of stadium history.

On the eve of this festival, there will be a stadium anniversary dinner at the Ruppert brewery in which those baseball writers who covered the Yankees 25 years ago will make their bow, along with the veterans of the 1923 club.

The June 13 old-timers' game will find Ruth managing the 1923 heroes, and Ed Barrow running their opposition.

That afternoon, all the pennants won by the Yankees since 1921 will be on display.

'Chutists Continue Pugilistic Contests

Nine fast-moving bouts were featured on the second semi-monthly boxing program of the Airborne battalion in the unit's outdoor ring across from the Airborne gymn last Friday night.

The main event, a welterweight battle between Willie Hunter of Company A and Everett Hadix of Company C provided a grand climax to the show. Hunter took the three-round bout by decision.

Two knockouts, four technical knockouts, and three decisions were scored during the evening.

Initiating the card, 138-pound Fernando Aguilar of Company C stopped Mel Blackburn, Company B welterweight, by a TKO after one minute and 15 seconds of the second round.

The crowd barely had time to settle back in their seats before lightweight Wilson Tohnika scored a knockout over Jim Hart, 138-pounder from Company F, in one minute and 15 seconds of the opening round. Tohnika represented Company C.

In another action-packed bout, Joe Zamyslowski of Company C went through 55 seconds of the third and final round to score a TKO over Bob Golden, a Company F boxer. Golden fought back hard throughout the contest, but Zamyslowski put him to the mat for a short count in the second, and dropped him again in the third before the referee called a halt. Both lads weighed in at 151 pounds.

Little Tony Cunha, 127-pounder from Company F, a fast-learner in the boxing game, was awarded a fast win by TKO over Jim Holt, Company C featherweight. The bout went to Cunha when Holt failed to answer the gong for the second round.

A Headquarters and Service company welterweight Larry Jenratte rung up a win by decision over Milton Maxwell of Company D in the first battle of the evening in that weight.

Back in the lightweight class, Jim Bierman, 134-pounder of Company F, eked out a close decision over Lowe Akins of Company D. The two lads carried on a bell-to-bell exchange of right hooks and round-houses, both refusing to give ground. In the third round, Bierman employed counter-punching tactics to get the judges' nod.

The second knockout of the evening came in the seventh bout of the card when Bob Soper, Company C light-heavyweight, dropped Bob Collins, 170-pounder of Company B, for keeps after 55 seconds of the second period. Soper floored his opponent for the nine-count in both the first and second rounds before sending him down for the full count.

Company E fans were on edge all evening waiting for their prize entry, middleweight Larry Whiteyes, to come out and win, and the rugged Indian didn't let them down. Although he found some tough competition in Bob Schlosser of Company C, Whiteyes opened up a cut on his opponent's lip which resulted in a TKO win for the Company E fighter.

The third card on the summer ring program will be presented in the outdoor ring on Friday night, June 18.

Graves Pitches, Hits in 15-6 Win

BY GEORGE FRINK

The post Medics trounced the 399th Field Artillery nine 15 to 6 at Cowdy field Wednesday night to stay in the race for the No. 1 spot on the Fort Benning intra-mural diamond league roster.

The win was the fourth straight against no defeats for the Medics since the start of the loop's second half.

Contributing his hitting power to the Medic victory, pitcher John Graves helped win his own ball game by collecting three safeties in five trips to the plate. His bingles included a single and a pair of triples, which drove in three tallies.

Winning his second game for the final phase of activity in the intra-mural league, Graves gave up only five hits and struck out 15 enemy batters in seven innings of play.

Powe Homers

Two bases on balls, a wild pitch, and a passed ball brought 399th outfielder James Hardmon home with the first home team tally in the bottom of the first. Four walks and a sharp single by second-baseman Edgar Powe accounted for three more artillery counters in the last of the third.

The final two artillery scores came in the home half of the fourth when Powe slammed a terrific four-bagger to center with pitcher Griffin resting on second.

The Medics started things off with a bang in the first inning by getting eight runs. With the bases loaded, Graves singled to right scoring Otto Lonoesh, who had walked to Start the inning, and Ted thorsen, who had scratched out an infield single with the first two runs.

Game Called

Harold Newman, Medic second-baseman, walked to load the bases again, and catcher Willie Griffin came in when Paul Lewish drew a base on balls. Right-fielder John Adams was hit by a pitched ball to force in Graves and Newman scored when center-fielder Hector Pachico reached on an error. With the bases still full, Jackie Morel was hit by a pitched ball, and Lewish tallied.

Starting at the top of the batting order again with the bags full and no outs, Loroesh walked to force in Adams, Thorsen flied out, and Griffin singled to center to bring in Pachico with the final tally. The side was retired when Graves hoisted to center and Newman went down on strikes.

Putting the concluding touches to their scoring, the Medics got three runs in the second inning, and a pair each in the fifth and sixth stanzas.

With the Medics leading by nine runs, the game was called in the seventh by mutual agreement.

Lawson Sergeant Named Recruiter

S-Sgt. Randolph Christopher, recently reassigned to the Lawson recruiting office as a contact canvasser, has worked in the motor pool for the past nine months as transportation noncom.

Sergeant Christopher re-enlisted at Lawson Air Force base last September with eight years prior service, four of which were spent overseas. He is credited with three years in Europe and one in the Pacific.

The sergeant was awarded five battle stars, one arrowhead and the presidential citation.

Sgt. Rollins Returns

S-Sgt. Ernest I. Rollins, Company D, Airborne battalion, returned to Fort Benning last week from Daytonna Beach, Fla., where he was on duty with a recruiting caravan.

Profs Defeat Truckers As Southpaw Fans 24

Collis Lehner, Infantry School detachment southpaw, set a new mark for strickout wizards of the Fort Benning league to shoot at last Tuesday night when he whiffed 24 lumber swingers in chalking up an 8-4 triumph over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers.

Trucker batters, however, managed to nick the speedy portsider for six safeties.

In winning the tilt, the ISD Profs stretched their winning streak to 17 games, making it three straight for the circuit's final phase after going through the first half of play undefeated in 14 starts.

The Profs iced the game in the first half of the opening stanza when they got to Trucker starter Willie Love for five runs.

After George Hill had rolled out to start the inning, Herb Lauve slammed a long three-bagger against the right-field fence. Blondie Burnett followed with a walk, and stole second. Prof third - sacker Joe Smith brought in the first pair of tallies with a sharp single to left, and came all the way from first to score when Bill Brooks banged one against the left-field scoreboard for two bases.

Working Love for a walk, Bill Hojnacki stole second after Brooks had scampered to third on a bad throw by Trucker catcher Potter. A left-field single by Chick Shiver brought in Brooks and Hojnacki with the last two counters of the inning.

Grouping three of their sextet of singles in the second-inning home stand, the transportation team scored twice.

Leading off for the Truckers, James Wills drove a single into center, and went to second when Shiver let one of Lehner's fast ones get past him, and scored when Potter lashed a base-knock into the right garden.

A double and two triples gave the Profs two more runs in the visiting half of the third. Hojnacki chalked up the two-bagger, which was followed by succes sive three-base blows by Shiver and Lehner.

Another Trucker tally came across in the last of the fourth as the result of two rapid miscues by Prof receiver Shiver. Charlie Hubert singled and stole second before the ISD backstop mishandled Lehner's next two offerings to let the Truker runner slide safely into the plate.

The 204th aggregation collected another counter in the sixth when Lucky Bryant whacked out a single, stole both second and third, and came home when Hubert went out at first on a roller to short.

Shiver came in with the Profs' eighth tally after getting a two-bagger to start the ISD half of the eighth. He went to third on Lehner's single to left, and scored when Love was charged with a balk.

Truckers Blast STR Nine 17-4

The Truckers of the 204th Transportation battalion finally got their machines whipped into shape, and rolled over the Student Training regiment 17-4 at Gowdy field Sunday afternoon.

The triumph was the first of the post league's second half for the Truckers who have been defeats by the Infantry School detachment and the 999th Field Artillery battalion.

Getting to four STR twirlers for 15 hits, the Truckers handed Ernest Stewart, right - handed starter for the visitors, his first loss of the 1948 season. Going into Sunday's game, the CAP mound ace had a record of four straight wins for the first half, and had hurled one triumph in the second base campaign.

Dean Lucas, who notched himself a win by going the route for the transportation team, allowed nine safeties, struck out two, and issued 10 walks.

First to score in the tilt was the STR. Fred Davis led off in the opening stanza for the students, and drew a walk. After stealing second and going to third on a passed ball, the STR left-fielder crossed the plate when Bill Church lashed a double into left-center.

The Truckers, however, copped themselves a comfortable margin in the last of the second by scoring four runs, two of them the result of a long four-base blast over the right - field fence by shortstop Herb O'Brien.

O'Brien also started a big fourth inning for the transportation lads when, with two mates down, he drove a triple into right field. Doubles by James Wills and Charlie Hubert and a single by Lucky Bryant followed to net the Truckers five runs.

Adding another trio of counters in the fifth, the Truckers wound up their scoring by chalking up a pair of runs each in the seventh and eighth stanzas.

Two runs in the first and a lone tally in the ninth gave the students their total of four.

Linwood Cards Defeat Midgets

Motoring to Columbus Sunday afternoon, Fort Benning's Midget Doughboys managed only two safeties as the American Legian's second-place Linwood Cards pounded out an 18-0 diamond decision over the local youths.

Ronald Peoples, who was named manager of the Midgets shortly before Sunday's contest to succeed Richard Van Buskirk, went to the mound for the Benning nine, and was tagged with the loss. Right-hander Frank Hart, who went the route for the Linwood team received credit for the win.

The Cards jumped to a 4-0 lead by scoring three in the first, and another in the second. However, the big blast by the citians came in the third stanza when they got to Peoples for 11 tallies.

During the big third, Harvel Johnson went to the slab for the losers, and three new names will speck the local team roster for Sunday's tilt.

Two games remain on the docket for the cellar-dwelling Midgets. Sunday, they will encounter the Metcalf's Sport shop squad at Rose Hill in Columbus, and the following Sunday, they will be host to the top-leading Columbus Sport shop nine.

Manager Peoples said that he is recruiting new prospects for the Midget team, and expressed hopes that three new names will speck the local team roster for Sunday's tilt.

Links Tourney Finals Sunday

An enlisted links champion of Fort Benning will be crowned following Sunday's finals matches in the first annual enlisted men's golf tournament at the Officers club layout.

Slated to put up a 36-hole battle for the links tiara are Gene Yow, Lawson field hotshot, and Claude English, the Food Service school's aspirant to the title.

The morning round of the championship match has been scheduled for 8:30 a. m., and the afternoon 18 will start about 1 p. m. The finals matches for other flights of the tournament will include only one 18-hole round, to be played in the morning.

It was expected that Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, will present the awards following the afternoon round of the championship flight match.

In addition to trophies for winners and runners-up of each flight, a medalist trophy which was won by Paul Markland with an 18-hole score of 73, also will be presented at the post-match ceremony.

Markland was eliminated in the semi-finals last week by Yow, who had the tourney medalist five down at the end of the fourteenth hole. Other victims of Yow's stick work were Charlie Hubert and Edgar Powe.

The string of achievements compiled by English include wins over W. Everett, T. A. Hollenbeck and Elfedy Ivy.

A smooth-stroking representative of the Sand Hill course, F. T. Canady gained the finals of the first flight against Arden Smith last week by dropping Lewis McAfee 2-up in his semi-finals match. In earlier matches, Canady downed J. B. Renfro and L. Harmon.

Smith's semi-finals triumph was a decision over E. W. Echols. After drawing a bye for the first round of matches, Smith scored a smashing 9-and-8 victory over J. Ray.

In the second-flight finals, John Wyatt, who won his last two matches by default, will play J. J. Felber, who ousted Bob Williams in his most recent match. Wyatt's scheduled matches with Gerald Vital and T. B. Birdsong were defaulted.

Another Lawson field linksman, John Burniston, will be in the third-flight finals. His opponent will be H. J. Tacker, who won his semi-finals contest by default from Bill O'Barr. Burniston scored a 3-and-2 triumph over George Frink to gain the finals.

Although no definite plans have been made the top enlisted golfers of Fort Benning probably will meet the crack officer golfers during the early part of the summer for an elimination tourney.

It is expected that the top six golfers will be picked from the officer-enlisted man tourney to represent the post in the forthcoming Third army tournament, tentatively slated for the Oliver General hospital course later this summer.

Dehydrates Wall Air Conditioner

—Benjamin N. Banks, operator of a Philadelphia Haberdashery, was given the air in common pleas court yesterday—and Benjamin was well pleased.

Banks filed suit, claiming that the air conditioning apparatus of a chain restaurant next door to his haberdashery was dehydrating his third floor.

Judge Frank Smith decided he'd better investigate. After a visit to the Banks establishment, he reported the inside wall in Banks' building nearest the air conditioner was "covered with multitudinous tiny cracks" and that the wall paper was breaking up.

The jurist gave the restaurant 30 days to correct the condition or file exceptions.

PAULK HURLS HITLESS TILT FOR ISD REDS

Hits off under-hand twirlers of the Infantry School detachment Reds are getting as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

Warren Paulk, who recently broke into the ISD lineup, chalked up the most recent hitless triumph for the Reds last Friday afternoon when he pitched a 16-0 softball league win over the Lawson field Flyers.

Before Paulk came along, right-hander John Wyatt had turned in four no-hit masterpieces, and had notched himself one-hit triumphs on three occasions.

In Friday's tilt, Paulk demonstrated his versatility by rapping a homerun, his fourth circuit blow in as may games. Also contributing to the homer parade were Bill Welton, who collected himself a pair of four-masters, and Wyatt, who hit for one round-tripper.

Special Service School Instructor Sees Benning

Miss Lee Early, instructor at the Special Services school, Fort Monmouth, N. J., was at Fort Benning this week on a field trip to army posts in the eastern United States.

Arriving here last Sunday morning, Miss Early spent the next two days visiting recreational facilities on the post and observing Fort Benning's special service units. Information gathered will be used in teaching a course at Fort Monmouth, she said.

"In my capacity as an instructor on the administration of service clubs, it is important that I know the actual conditions of service club operations in the United States. So, I am making this trip to observe club activities in the First, Second and Third army areas."

During her 18-day trip, Miss Early expects to visit many army posts including Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Benning, Fort MacPherson, Ga.; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Monroe, Va., and Fort Eustace, Va.

The trip could not be termed an official inspection tour, Miss Early pointed out.

"I make no reports, no suggestions. The only purpose of the trip is to get information to strengthen my background for teaching."

Previous experience in service club administration lies in her service as a club hostess and supervisor overseas. She acted as command hostess of the Bremen area and assistant directing hostess of the theater.

"In our courses at the Special Service school, we are interested in teaching officers how to administer good special service programs. Such training includes the procedure followed in setting a club up, how to select personnel, what to expect from the club, and the like.

"It is my opinion," she continued, "that the service club belongs at the hub of the post special services activities.

"Since arriving here. I have managed to see the service clubs, the swimming pools, the baseball fields and other athletic facilities, and the libraries. I think your post is a wonderful place."

Sgt. Ouzts Is Assigned Communications Duty

First Sgt. Cyrus C. Ouzts, formerly administrative non-commissioned officer at Oliver General hospital, was recently assigned to the Infantry school detachment's Comapny B for duty with the Communications section.

Sergeant Ouzts entered the army in 1929 from his home in Tifton, Ga., and during the war served with the 82nd Signal battalion of the 10th army as first sergeant of a signal construction company.

He is now assigned to the tactical committee.

Cameramen Plan To Film Training

A camera crew and technical advisors from the Signal corps Photographic Center, Long Island, N. Y., will use Fort Benning and its personnel in compiling a training film, "Troop Movement By Air", in July.

Preliminary production work on the film is being done at the Signal Corps Photographic Center, and actual filming will begin on or about July 12.

Detailed plans for the use of Fort Benning personnel and equipment, and the selection of necessary locations will be discussed upon the arrival of representatives, who will confer with technical advisors here.

Base Unit Redesignated 152nd AACS Squadron

With the merger of the army and navy in the Miliary Air Transport service, the 108th AACCS detachment at Lawson Air Force base, has been redesignated as the 152nd AACS squadron, Military Air Transport service, with headquarters at Warner Robbins Air Force base.

The redesignation was effective June 2, 1948.

An elderly lady driving along, nonchalantly turned a corner and ran over a poor inebriate crossing the street. Without a change of emotion, she stopped the car, rolled down the window and called, "You had better watch out there, young man."

Rising on one elbow, the drunk replied, "Gosh, lady, don't tell me you're gonna back up."

Dorothy: "Anna! ! !"

Soldier: "Don't interrupt. I said you are a dear sweet girl . . anna love you with all my heart."

PRECEDENT ESTABLISHED, NON-COMS TO RATE MEN

For the first time in the history of the army non-commissioned officers will rate the efficiency of the men immediately under their direction, according to an article in the June 5 issue of Army Times.

According to the news item, the new and simple efficiency report will be used first when the food service field is introduced as the first step in the operation of the army's career plan.

The one-sheet efficiency report will permit a soldier's immediate duty supervisor to indicate how well he is doing his job and whether his performance merits promotion. The indorser of the rating will be an officer or warrant officer immediately superior to the rater.

These ratings will be part of the required criteria for comparison and selection, and when used will be of aid in determining whether a soldier has the proper assignment or is unsatisfactory for retention in the service. The ratings will also serve as an aid in furnishing a measure of efficiency of soldiers' performances in general.

As each new field is instituted under the career plan the report will be adopted for use. There will be one uniform, graphic form and it will be used for all enlisted personnel through grade six.

15-Year Vet Promoted To Technical Sergeant

S-Sgt. Harold R. Burnette, Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been promoted to the grade of technical sergeant, Third army headquarters has announced.

Veteran of almost 15 years, Sergeant Burnette was assigned to the 106th Infantry division's 423rd Infantry regiment during World War II. He was taken prisoner by the Germans near St. Vith and interned in Stalag B. The prison camp was liberated in early April, 1945, by the 89th division.

FORT BENNING PIRATES—Cub scouts, who assumed roles as pirates in the annual cub scout circus last Saturday, eat ice cream and rest between acts. Gala Cub Scout Circus Held Here On Saturday

BY PEGGY WARD

Fort Benning cub scouts held their annual parade and circus on Saturday, June 5, starting the afternoon festivities with a cavacade of floats from Doughboy stadium at 3 p.m.

The 72nd Army band, led by CWO R. E. Valesco, provided the martial music and marched with the participants. Leading the parade were three scouts with the flag, followed by the dens in costumes. Several dens also had floats marked with den and pack numbers. Outstanding were the Indian float and the covered wagon float belonging to Den 2, Pack 1, and Den 1, Pack 1, respectively.

The line of march from Doughboy stadium was down First Division road to the corner of Blue Polo field. From there, the parade cut across the field to the circus area arranged near the bleachers.

The circus area consisted of the arena for the acts, presented by the dens in front of the bleachers, and the tent shows. There were also refreshment stands for soft drinks and ice cream.

The tent shows featured work by the cub scouts done throughout the year and animals in cages. In addition there was a pen for Sgt. Harry Duffield's goats. The animal tent had on display a Golden Hamster, pigeons and doves, a baby alligator and a bashful raccoon. Rabbits were penned between the animal tent the and goat arena. The exhibit tent showed excellent work in knot-tying, fine woodwork, and models of planes, trucks and ships.

Topping the events of the afternoon was the presentation of acts by the dens. Lt. Col. Sanford Webster was the ringmaster complete with black handlebar mustache, big black felt hat, white shirt, riding breeches and brown boots. Colonel Webster introduced the events which included Covered-wagon act by Den 1, Pack 1; tumbling act by Den 2, Pack 1; Indian act by Den 3, Pack 2; donkey act by Den 4, Pack 1; strong man act by Den 5, Pack 2; clown act by Den 8, Pack 2, and pirate act by Den 2, Pack 3. All acts received a round of applause from the crowd in the bleachers. Musical accompaniment was provided by the 72nd Army band.

Concluding the show was the announcement by Lt. Col. R. H. Cole of the winning dens with the most points for the year. Points have been awarded for parent participation and cub advancement. Den 2, Pack 1, took first place with 88 1-2 point Den 3, Pack 1, was second, and Den 2, Pack 3 came in third.

Fast Midget Racers Slated

Grinning Johnny Suggs, the 31-year old motorcycle mechanic who won the final midget race at Idle Hour park Friday night, will be pushed to stay out front this week, according to promoter A. P. Brewer.

The sturdy Columbus driver who used to have trouble keeping his car on the track, not to mention in the money, took a clean-cut five-length victory from Leroy Hicks and kept the big Decatur cop from winning a record four-in-one-night string.

Hicks had won his heat, the Australian pursuit, and the consolation; and forced Suggs to extend himself to stay ahead in the final.

Dick Osborne did well for himself in his first appearance on the dirt-track, taking a heat, and using a good deal of the experience collected in several seasons on asphalt ovals in other sections of the country.

Warrant Officer Board Processes 206 Candidates

The Warrant Officer Screening Center, which was established here May 3, has processed 206 out of a total of 515 applications received up to Friday, June 4, it was revealed today.

The local board, serving personnel at Fort Benning and in the surrounding territory, including Alabama, Florida and Mississippi, has processed more than 50 men weekly. The program is expected to be in operation for approximately three months.

Of the total number of applications received, 235 include officers and warrant officers now on active duty. The remainder are enlisted men.

As soon as the circular is published in this area, a 30-day delay will be declared to allow for full coverage of the territory, and a waiver of 15 days will be allowed by the six-man board here for local applicants upon request.

A blackboard and chalk will be available to applicants at the screening point. It will be applicants' responsibility to secure such other instructional aids as they may desire. The following list of suggested general topics will serve as a guide to the applicant in selecting a subject for presentation:

(a) Organization, mission, and function of any squad, platoon, company or comparable unit; (b) A phase of first aid or field sanitation; (c) A phase of any technical speciality; (d) Capabilities and mechanics of a basic or special weapon.

Jap Language Course Offered Army Enlistees

Opportunity for assignment of enlisted men to the Army Language School for a course of study in Japanese is being offered to qualified enlistees in the regular army and to those reenlisting from within the service, the Department of the army announced today. Enlistments and reenlistments for this course must be for a period of three, four, five or six years, depending upon the preference of the individual.

Selected applicants will receive an intensive course in the Japanese language and training in certain technical subjects required for specialized duties in the occupation forces. The course will run from three to 12 months, background knowledge of the language. Graduates will acquire a working knowledge of Japanese oral, and written, as well as a general background knowledge of Japanese history, geography, racial characteristics, customs, and social institutions.

Applicants from civil life and from within the service must be fluent in the English language and must have sufficient familiarity with both spoken and written Japanese to warrant additional training and subsequent assignment to linguistic duties. They must also attain a score of 100 or higher in the standard intelligence tests used in the army.

Civilians who desire to enlist for assignment to the Japanese class must submit an application to the Commandant, Army Language School, Presidio of Monterey, California, on a form provided by local recruiting offices. In addition to the special qualifications needed for entrance to the school, applicants must meet the physical and other provisions required for enlistment in the regular army. Their enlistment will not be completed, however, until they receive notice of their acceptability from the school.

Men now in the army who desire to reenlist with the object of attending the Japanese classes should make application through the recruiting officers of their units.

While the first three months of attendance at the school will constitute a probationary period, those retained in the classes will receive an automatic promotion to the fifth grade upon satisfactory completion of one half of the academic training. Upon graduation, they will receive another promotion to the fourth grade. Graduates classified as superior interpreters and translators may be promoted to the third grade. Unless already holding a higher rating, soldiers reporting to the school will be made privates, first class, upon enrollment.

Wives Told How To Aid Mates' Army Careers

The 76 graduating officers of basic infantry course No. 1 were not the only ones who received advice from Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, during ceremonies Saturday morning—wives, sitting in the audience, were also the recipients of some remarks on how to help their husbands further their army careers.

In his brief address, General Shepard impressed the graduates with the fact that for almost their entire army career they will be either students or instructors, but cautioned them never to forget that they are "doughboys" with a lot to live up to.

They were sent here, he reminded them, to learn to do things a certain way, to be indoctrinated in proper teaching. They were told that upon leaving the Infantry School, others might tell them that what they do is wrong, but, the general said, if you do it the way you were taught here you'll do it the right way.

"Am I where I ought to be? Am I doing what I ought to be doing?" A yes to both of these questions, and you will have nothing to worry about, declared the assistant commandant. "Don't worry about leadership so much," he told them, "for if the answer to both those questions is "yes" the leadership will take care of itself."

Wives in the audience were told that their husbands were all bigamists, "for they married the army and then you came along." The job of the army wife is to help her husband, he told them, to put up double harness and to remember that duty to the army comes first.

"If you want to go on a picnic or to the movies, and hubby has to be on duty, well, that's that, and don't say anything about it, he told them. "Just leave him alone when he has duties to perform."

General Shepard commended the class for its attitude while at the Infantry School. "I concur," he said, "in the report which stated your attitude was superior.

Following the address he presented diplomas to the graduates, most of whom will be reporting almost immediately for assignments in Germany, Japan and Korea. Among the graduates were nine National Guard and eight foreign officers.

Welcome

Wednesday evening the cadets enjoyed an "open" night, taking advantage of the many recreational facilities on the post. Friday evening has also been set aside as "open" for the cadets.

Traveling in an armada of ten C-54s and seven C-82s, the West Pointers will depart from Lawson Air Force base Saturday morning for Fort Knox, Ky., the next stop on their 15-day tour of U. S. military installations.

During the combined arms trip, a regular part of the broad military education given West Pointers, the cadets have already visited Wright Air Force base, Ohio, Fort Bliss, Tex. Following the stop at Fort Knox, Ky., they will return to West Point on June 23.

COLUMBUS DRIVER . . . To drive a car owned by Harold W. Hill of Columbus in the opening-day stock car races at the new speedway northeast of the city Sunday afternoon will be Marshall Teague of Daytona Beach, Fla. Teague won the Eastern States 100-mile crown last year.

SENIOR SCOUTS PLAN VISIT TO NEW MEXICO

Seven members of the senior division of Fort Benning's Boy Scout troops will be selected for a 25-day trip in July to Philemont ranch, N. Mex., which is owned and operated by the Boy Scouts of America, it was announced this week by Sgt. Harry Duffield, local scoutmaster.

The huge ranch, used for senior scout unit activity, covers approximately 27,000 acres, Sergeant Duffield said.

The local group is expected to leave Benning July 22 for La-Grange, Ga., to join another contingent of senior scouts for the trip to New Mexico.

First stop on the itinerary will be Tupelo, Miss., where they will spend one night in the scout camp. The final stop before reaching their destination will be at Memphis, Tenn., for a visit to the zoo.

The scouts will spend 10 days at Philemont. The program at the ranch will include horseback riding and travel by covered wagon and pack burros.

On their return trip the scouts will visit Carlsbad caverns and a pueblo Indian village. They also plan a one-day trip into Mexico, where they eat a Mexican meal.

A scenic boat trip at New Orleans will be their final stop before returning to Fort Benning.

Sergeant Duffield will accompany the Benning scouts. Names of those going will be announced at a later date.

Air Force Plans To Offer More RA Commissions

A new program inaugurated in May by the United States air force will provide regular commissions for up to five percent of the men completing aviation cadet training in the future. The Lawson Aviation Cadet Examining board announced today.

Some 440 cadets, exclusive of commissioned officers receiving flying training, will be graduated during the remainder of 1948. Of these 250 will complete training in June and 190 in October.

Normally, cadets graduate with a second lieutenant's commission in the air force reserve, and are placed on extended active duty. During that time they may qualify for a regular air force commission.

The new program makes it possible for distinguished cadets to obtain a regular commission immediately upon graduation.

A distinguished cadet is a graduate, designated by the commanding general of Air Training command, who possesses outstanding qualities of military leadership, high moral character, and definite aptitude for the military service and has distinguished himself either academically or by demonstrated leadership through his accomplishments while participating in recognized cadet activities. He must also have a current standing among the upper third of his class in flying, academic and military performance.

To Command Lawson Base

Major John C. Wretschko assumed temporary command of Lawson Air Force base last Monday to serve during the month and a half absence of the base commander, Col Gilbert T. Collar, officials announced today.

The major reported for his second tour of duty at Lawson in February, 1946, and since that time has served as S-3. Last month he was appointed to serve as acting base executive officer.

An air force pilot since 1940, Major Wretschko served in the Asiatic-Pacific area with the Seventh air force during the war.

He is a native of Toledo, Ohio, and prior to joining the air force was a student at Ohio State college.

Competitive Exam For TIC Typists, Stenos Now Open

An open competitive examination for all stenographers and typists employed by the Infantry Center, who are eligible for appointment to permanent status, will be given Aug. 7 and 21 at the Army Education center on Indianhead road, the local civil service board has announced.

Eligible applicants include those employees who received an ineligible rating on the examination given last March and April and those employees who were not examined in the same examinations.

Applications for stenographers who attained eligibility as typist on the examination subsequent to February 1946, may take only the stenographic portion of the test but such applicants should indicate stenographer only on their application, officials said.

All nonstatus employees serving in stenographer, typist or teletype positions, who meet the eligibility, and who desire to take the examination here, must file application form 5000 AB with the Civilian Personel division not later than Friday, June 18.

Additional information and application forms may be secured from employee utilization representative; phone 3442, or the executive secretary of the board of U.S. Civil Service Examiners, Civilian Personnel, phone 2129.

Venezuelan Scheduled To Enroll in TIS Class

Maj. Jose Victorino Zambrano, Venezuelan army, is expected to arrive at Fort Benning around Aug. 28 to enroll in the Infantry School's advanced officers' course, the secretary of the army announced this week.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning, Major Zambrano will take the Command and General Staff college's two-month orientation course will end around July 25, 1949.

FORT BENNING'S 67 MAIL BOXES GET FACE-LIFTING

Any "wet paint" signs that may be seen during the next few days on local mail boxes wont be there long, because according to the new postal officer, 2nd Lt. Leonard F. Morgan, the paint is a special quick-drying type used by the Post Office department.

Work of renovating the 67 drops on the post began last week, and is expected to be completed this week.

It was feared by many that with the abolition of free mailing privileges for servicemen last Dec. 31, there would be a big drop in the amount of outgoing mail.

Instead, Robert P. Richardson superintendant of the Fort Benning post office, said that there has been no decrease in the amount of personal mail. Each day the post office cancels from eight to 10 thousand personal letters and about 300 parcels also leave here. Mondays, he said, are the big days as far as cancelltions are concerned, with an average of 10 to 12 thousand letters.

The reduction in price of air mail stamps and the ending of free mailing privileges are the reasons for the huge increase in air mail letters processed by the Benning post office, Mr. Richardson believes. He said that this combination has resulted in tripling of air mail since the cost was reduced to a nickel.

Guatemalan Lieutenant Expected To Attend TIS

Second Lt. Cesar Augusto Orantes A., of the Guatemala army is expected to attend the Infantry School's basic officer's course which begins around Jan. 3, 1949, it was reported here this week.

Prior to reporting to Fort Benning, Lieutenant Orantes A. will attend the Command and General Staff college's orientation course and the Ground General school's basic course. He has been on duty with the Guatemalan military attache in Washington.

Hospital Picnic Is Set Tuesday

Life in the army can be a picnic—sometimes. For 25 or 30 patients at the Station hospital that's just exactly what it's going to be next Tuesday June 22 from 2 till about 8 p.m.—a picnic at Yuchi reservation, according to Miss Hazel Turnage of the Red Cross recreational staff.

Because of the morale and therapeutic value of outings for men whose doctors approve, Miss Turnage said, picnics have become a part of the summer medically approved recreation program for patients able to go, she said.

So, on the invitation of Claude Yarbrough, of Columbus and with the cooperation of the local Red Cross chapter, the patients and a hospital Red Cross worker will spend the day picnicking on the reservation.

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

WE UNDERSTAND THE army has decided to allow non-commissioned officers to rate the men who work for them, a policy which we feel will go a long way toward arriving at a more accurate check on a man's efficiency. We have often thought that some better method of rating enlisted men's abilities could be employed, and this new step in the army career guidance program seems to be the answer.

It is only logical that the non-commissioned in charge of a section is qualified to rate his men since every day he sees evidence of the man's attention to detail, work and his capabilities. He inspects the work of the men assigned to his section, and before it is passed along to the officer in charge for final checking, all corrections have been made and the officer never knows the real calibre of work done by the various men. This new method of rating will certainly lead to a better appraisal.

ONE NIGHT LAST week as we were riding the inter-post bus from the Howard bus station to the Army Education center on Indianhead road, a deplorable incident occured—an incident which puts the army "in a bad light."

The driver of the bus was following the route prescribed by the education center, but one of the passengers thought he knew more about it than the driver. As a result, the passenger, who outranked the driver, created an uncalled-for scene by screaming out at the driver to get to the education center immediately, using unnecessary epithets and threatening to report the driver to his commanding officer.

SUCH SCENES AS that are not for the good of the service. Had there been any justification for the outburst, no one would have objected; however, it was just a case of one man feeling he knew more than another man.

Let's Keep Informed

The latest Armed Forces Talk, successor to Army Talk, is based on a subject which is extremely important to every American, and is in line with the Army's expanded emphasis on soldier education. Entitled "What's the Score?" the pamphlet deals with keeping abreast of the news and the media through which a soldier may keep himself well-informed.

There are, according to the Armed Forces Talk, five main sources of information: newspapers, news magazines, radio, general magazines and books, and discussion.

A Fort Benning unit public information officer recently informed us that he conducted a survey in which he discovered that less than one per cent of the men in his organization ever read a newspaper. This information was indeed shocking, and was made even more shocking when we stopped to realize that here in America everyone is free to read any type newspaper he desires, whether it expound a democratic, a communistic or socialistic theory. Not taking advantage of the opportunity to keep oneself informed on detailed, up-to-the-minute news, as provided by newspapers, is to us almost inexcusable.

People who fail to read newspapers remind us of ostriches who put their heads in the ground to keep from seeing what is happening. They refuse to keep themselves informed, refuse to face facts; and then when something world-shattering occurs, they wonder how it passed them by without their being forewarned.

Some claim they do not have time to read newspapers every day; they say their work keeps them too busy or the new baby prevents their getting any free moments to devote to the day's news. We can't believe, however, that this is completely true. Surely they could find ten minuts a day to read one or two items on the front page. We imagine they find time to read the comics or the sports page.

Provided a person's work does keep him so busy that he is too tired at night to spend any time reading a newspaper, there are news magazines which are published weekly and which serve to give the public news summarmies, background of the news and comment on the news. Surely on Saturday afternoon or Sunday, the average soldier can find at least an hour to devote to a news magazine. This will at least let him know what has happened during the past week.

We'll even go so far as to grant that a man's work and home obligations keep him so occupied that he honestly does not have time for reading. But even in case that is true, there is always the radio with a summary of the news. All radio stations have at least four news broadeasts during the day, some lasting only five minutes. Certainly, no one can say he can't spare five minutes a day.

These three news media are to our way of thinking the most important although we do believe that general magazines, books and discussion have a place in the news world. Newspapers, news magazines and the radio, however, give one a better rounded idea of the news of the day, allowing a person to make up his own mind. Despite the fact that most newspapers and news magazines do tend to shape a person's thinking on the editorial pages, only a few unprincipled newspapers and news magazines allow this biased thinking to creep into the straight news columns. The news, as a rule, is reported just as it happens regardless of whether the editor agrees with it.

It is definitely a man's responsibility to keep himself well-informed, just as it is his responsibility to keep himself clothed, fed and in good health. With so many newspapers, with so many radio programs, with so many news magazines, there can be no legitimate excuse for not knowing what is happening every day.

We wonder how many people know where the presidential nomination conventions take place, when they begin, who the prospective candidates are, and what their platforms are. If a person can't answer these questions, then he should immediately take measures which will enable him to do so. If he doesn't listen to all shades of opinion, then he is not availing himself of his privilege as an American citizen, a privilege not shared by his counterpart in some countries.

Chaplain's Corner..

NO GREATER LOVE

BY

CHAPLAIN VIRGIL N. MOORE

Almost everyone knows something about love. The small child learns of it early from parents. Boys and girls soon begin to look at each other with a peculiar gleam in their eyes and desire each other's company. "Puppy love," marital love paternal love, maternal love conjugal love, filial love, and brotherly love. The greatest of these is the love of a mother.

But Jesus of Nazareth spoke of another kind of love when he said, "Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Jesus did this very thing; yes, even for his enemies.

"When we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son." (Rom. 5:10) "For God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Then the beloved Apostle John goes a little deeper in his concept of love when he writes:

"There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear" (I John 4:18). Jesus is our example of this: no fear of the mob, the road to Calvary, the nails in His hands, the death on the Cross and the sealed tomb! His Vital contact with the divine Love of God cast out all fear!

Listen to the voice of the "Unknown Soldier" who fell in battle: "I'm sure glad God, I met you today. I guess the "Zero Hour" will soon be here, but I am not afraid since I know you are here! . . . I wish I had known you these many years! Well, I have to go now, God, Goodbye. Strange, since I met you I am not afraid to die." Contact with the great love of God in Christ Jesus will make a difference in our loving, in our living, in our giving, and in our dying!

The poet has well expressed the greatness and boundlessness of the "Love of God," when he said, "It is greater far. . . Than tongue or pen can tell. . . Could we with ink the ocean fill; and were the skies of parchment were every stalk on earth a quill. And every man a scribe by trade. To write the Love of God Above, Would drain the ocean dry; Nor could the scroll contain the whole, Tho' stretched from sky to sky! Oh, Love of God, how rich and pure! How measureless and Strong! It shall forever-more endure! The saints' and angels' song! Amen!

If an individual has found this greater love of God in our Lord Jesus Christ, he will know what he is living for and what he is willing to die for! When love comes in, sin and fear go out! This change will make a better officer, a better soldier, a better citizen, a better home, a better church, a better state, a better nation, and a better world in which to live! Accept Him today!

PARRIS MITCHELL OF KING'S ROW

Parris Mitchell of King's Row, was completed by Katherine Bellamann after the death of her husband, Henry Bellamann. Mr. Bellamann originally planned his best selling novel, King's Row, as the first of three books to tell the tale of the town of King's Row, but his death occured before his second tale was completed His wife has done a splendid job, completing this second book from her husband's notes and from her knowledge of his plans for character depictions.

This is the story of the town just before World War I and the various reactions to the shock impact of war on the small community. As the story of the town unfolds, so does the story of the young doctor, Parris Mitchell, who has returned to his native home after studying medicine and psychiraty abroad.

Afflicted with a complex nature, in which his past life and inviornment have laid strong hold, Dr. Mitchell, through his work as a psychiatrist, has done much to contribute to better living conditions in the little town in which he was born. The authors have carefully blended into their deliniation several characters, who, each in his own way, have an effect, good or bad, on the doctor.

Every Amerncan who lived in a small town will recognize someone in his community who strongly resembles Randy McHugh, Dick Foley, Fulmer Green or many of the others. He will perhaps discover that the undercurrent of the book will make his exclaim, "This could have been written about my town!"

Based upon the success with which Katherine Bellemann completed Parris Mitchell, we may hope that she will continue her husband's plan and present the third book in the trilogy to the reading public.

The snow was on the ground, the winds were cold and blustery. A little snail started to inch his way up a cherry tree. Laboriously he worked his way along the smooth bark. Suddenly, a bright-eyed bug popped his head out of a crack.

"Hey, silly. Don't you know you're knocking yourself out for nothing? It's still winter—there ain't no cherries up in this tree."

"Don't worry, pal," snapped the snail. "When I get there, there will be."

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

While you have read much in the newspapers concerning the flood situation in the Pacific Northwest, I am sure you would be interested in the action by your Red Cross in caring for these flood refugees.

more than 80 per cent of the 10,719 families affected by the floods are expected to require Red Cross emergency and rehabilitation assistance.

Vanport, a government housing project near Portland, the hardest hit area, will not be rebuilt. Therefore, the slow, difficult process of relocating the 4,000 families of that flooded city must be undertaken. At this moment your Red Cross is caring for 2,000 Vanport victims by sheltering and feeding them. A total of 26,000 Vanport families have registered for rehabilitation assistance.

In Washington, 4,800 families suffered loss in the flood and 1,600 families need Red Cross aid; 869 persons are in shelters, and 2,851 persons are being fed.

In Idaho, 1,323 families suffered disaster losses, and 600 families will need further rehabilitation assistance. In Montana, 200 families were hit by the same flood, and 41 of these families will need help.

Although the crest of the flood has passed, there is small hope of complete recession of flood waters in several areas within the next few weeks.

Red Cross headquarters in Portland has received more than 7,000 welfare inquiries from persons all over the country, inquiring about relatives and friends. Replies are being sent by a staff of trained personnel supplemented by volunteers.

Complicating the disaster situation in the Portland area is a current outbreak of measles. Your Red Cross recently sent 1,000 vials of immune serum globulin, used in the modification and prevention of measles.

Spokane, Wash., is the headquarters of the Red Cross relief operation with two operational bases there under the direction of national disaster staff experts. Relief and rehabilitation work is being carried on by 80 disaster-trained staff workers from the four Northwest states.

Your Red Cross has been constantly on the job during this year of 1948 on disasters throughout the nation, starting with the terrible tornado of December 31 in Louisiana and continuing through the floods in the Northwest.

When your local community calls for volunteers to prepare disaster preparedness plans, be sure to offer your services because your community might need Red Cross aid in time to come.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST (Southern period drama) with Frederic March, Dan Duryea and Ann Blyth. A story of warped and decadent people, and of pettiness, family jealousies, envy and conspiracy. An earlier chapter in the life of the Hubbard family than that portrayed in the picture, The Little Foxes. Recommended for adult.

I WOULDN'T BE IN YOUR SHOES (melodrama) with Don Castle and Elyse Knox. It is surprising what can result from an impulsive act—like throwing your shoe at a cat on the back fence. Recommended for adult.

YOU WERE MEANT FOR ME (musical) with Jeanne Crain, Dan Daily and Oscar Levant. Dan Daily portrays a band leader of the turbulent twenties who cannot escape the odilzing attentions of Jeanne Crain. If you liked Margie, you should enjoy this one. Recommended for family.

RETURN OF THE BADMEN (western) with Randolph Scott, Robert Ryan and Anne Jeffreys. The struggle between the outlaws and law-abiding citizens for control of the Oklahoma territory is the basis for another action-packed story of the early wild and wooly West.

THE DEAD DON'T DREAM (western) with William Boyd and Andy Clyde. Hopalong and his sidekick, California, start out for a wedding but end up fighting claim-jumpers. Recommended for family.

KING OF THE GAMBLERS (melodrama) with William Wright and Janet Martin. Framing an innocent man is all in the day's work for the easy money boys operating a sports fixing racket. Recommended for family.

222 To Complete TIS Refresher Course Saturday

A total of 222 officers from civilian army components will graduate Saturday, June 19 from the Infantry School's officers' indoctrination course, it was announced this week.

Of the total attending the two-week refresher course, 216 are members of the organized reserve and one a member of the National Guard. In addition, five of the graduates are regulars who are instructors in the reserve progrm.

According to Lt. Col. Charles E. Johnson, secretary of the Academic department of the Infantry School, the course was designed to orient National Guardsmen and reserves in current army subjects. They were brought up-to-date on policies and proposed organization of the army.

They were also oriented in the latest trends of the army concerning orgaization, equipment, weapons and doctrines. They were also given refresher instruction in leadership and command and staff functions.

"The course was designed to tell them what the army is like today and the projected future for the National Guard and Reserves— to show them where they will fit in," Colonel Johnson said.

During the past academic year, he said, more than 1,000 officers from civilian components attended the short courses. Enthuisasm and interest in the work was high, according to comments the students made to Infantry School officials.

Sixth Division Plans Reunion During August

Present and former members of the Sixth Infantry division will hold their annual reunion in St. Louis, August 12 to 15. Inquiries regarding the reunion schedule and requests for accommodations should be addressed to Gerald F. Kelleher, 709 Limit avenue, University City 5, Missouri.

The Sixth Infantry division, regular army, saw service in both world wars, and presently is on occupation duty in Korea, commanded by Major General Orlando Ward. The three infantry regiments of the division are the 1st, 20th and 63rd. The 1st Infantry regiment stems from a unit organized in 1791 and which participated in campaigns against the Federated Indian tribes and the Miami nation. It explored the west in 1806, took part in the war of 1812 and the Black Hawk war, the Seminole war and the Mexican and Civil wars. The 20th Infantry regiment goes back to a unit organized in 1861, which fought in the Civil war, the Spanish-American war and in 1899 went to the Philippine islands where it saw action against the insurgent army. The 63rd Infantry regiment was organized as a part of the 11th Infantry division in 1917.

The division patch is a six-pointed red star signifying its numerical designation. Its wearers during World War II departed for foreign duty in July, 1943, where they took over defense of Oahu. In January, 1944, the sixth sailed for New Guinea and first plunged into combat in the Toem-Wakde area of Dutch New Guinea in June, 1944, defeating the Japanese in the bloody battle of Lone Tree hill and securing the Maffin Bay area in a major American victory. The sixth then jumped into combat again in an amphibious landing at Sansapor on the Vogelkop peninsula in the Netherlands East Indies.

On January 9, 1945, the division landed as part of the assault troops in Lingayen gulf and began the capture of Luzon. Encountering much hill fighting, the sixth hacked away at the Japs in the mountains, moving from peak to peak and killed 5,000 Japs in the first month.

During the fierce fight around Munoz, it knocked out 57 tanks and wrecked numerous artillery pieces. It fought in the Cagayan valley campaign, dug the Japs of the Cordillera mountains and participated in the landing at Mariveles harbor. Later, the sixth took part in clearing remaining enemy forces at the Marakina watershed east of Manila and cracked the strong Jap defense positions on the Antipolo-Wara line.

This colorful and distinguished combat division pressed on against the remaining Jap forces and by July 26, 1945, had contacted Philippine forces near Bonaue on Luzon. Following the cessation of combat action, it sailed for its present occupation duty in Korea.

Overnight Camp Trip Seen As Success By Senior Troop

BY HELEN WILBUR

Monday morning came with dark skies and a little rain, but this didn't stop Barbara Boyd, Ann Bragan, Shirley Burke, Nancy Bush, Mickie Cardona, Jean and Joan Goss, Anne Hamilton, Mary Joiner, Babs Lewis, Marie Raymond, Quinnie Redwine, Shirley Stevens, Susie Stillinger, Betty Thompson and Helen Wilbur from being on time to board the truck taking them for an overnight stay at the Scout Camp on the Upatoi. After a dusty twelve-mile ride, it was "choose your own punks, girls" and on with the swim suits for an hour of bathing—both water and sun.

After lunch each girl was free to spend the afternoon as she liked, but it was noticeable that each of us had worked up a good appetite for the delicious dinner prepared by the cooks sent out by special services. The evening was spent in roasting marshmallows before a huge open fireplace until the mosquitoes drove us into the cabin. We played bridge and other games until the light went out, and then we settled down to what we thought would be a good night's rest. However, after the telling of a few creepy ghost stories, sleep did not come easily.

When morning came, most of us were reluctant to answer chow call, but we managed to eat a hearty breakfast. Then once again, the program was swim suits and bathing. The sun was bright, as several of the girls can testify, and we hated to leave the water and come out for a lunch of sandwiches and fruit juices. We then made a thorough police of the cabin, and packed our few belongings for the trip home. The time was short, but we made the most of it. We all voted it one of the happiest and shortest 24 hours in our existence.

To Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, who has done so much for the Girl Scouts and who planned all the details for this trip, we Girl Scouts extend our most grateful thanks. Mrs. Frisby had as assisting chaperones Mrs. Carl V. Burke and Mrs. Harry Wilbur.

Mrs. A. E. McCormick was hostess on Tuesday, June 8, at a dessert bridge at her quarters, honoring Mrs. F. S. Balliett, mother of Lt. Col. H. D. Balliett, and Miss Martha Beall, niece of Maj. Invited to meet the visitors were Mrs. Paul Cooper, Mrs. Alan Strock, Mrs. C. R. Meyer, Mrs. Lee Wallace, Mrs. Murray Cheston, Mrs. W. H. Blakefield, Mrs. H. B. Ayers, Mrs. John R. Kelly, Mrs. H. D Balliett, Mrs O. A. Leahy, Mrs. Fred Harris, Mrs H. C. Brown, Mrs. George S. Beatty, and Mrs. F. B. Jacobs and Mrs. W. E. Walters.

Credit Shared By Leaders And Scouts For Year's Work

Girl Scouts of senior troop No. 8 have completed a successful year and will spend a leisurely summer with no weekly activities planned. Activities of interest to the girls in the troop will continue from time to time during the summer months. but for the most part the girls will rest on their laurels.

Leaders for the troop at the start of the year were Mrs. O. C. Thompson, Mrs. Corston Green and Mrs. Carl E. Frisby. Under their supervision, the girls undertook the Red Cross first-aid course of ten weeks under the direction of R. L. George of the Fort Benning Red Cross field office.

Highlights of the course were a buffet supper given in January at the girl scout cabin and the graduation program which was worked out by the girls with the assistance of Mrs. J. C. Thomason, Mrs. Dayton L. Warren, Mrs. Carl E. Frisby and Mrs. Roy E. Doran. This program was very well worked-out and presented, and was enthusiatiscally received by the audience of parents and friends at the Children's school auditorium on April 8. The introduction was given by Murray Hill of the Red Cross field office, and judges for the various demonstrations were Lt. Col. Walden J. Alexander, Maj. Julia Martin and Lt. Ted Hines. Mr. George presented certificates to the girls.

Immediately following this course, the girls took an automotive course supervised by Col. George Davis. The instructors were Capt. Waller Gaby, Capt. Joseph Miller, T-Sgt. L .Baker, E. E. Duty, Sgt. B. W. Williams, and Cpl. William Way. Upon completion of the course in May, plans were made for the Red Cross swimming and diving course given at Russ pool by Sgt. Homer R. Pope, whose assistants were T-Sgt. James Lewis, T-5 John H. Gunn, Cpl. Ernest J. Kern and Pfc. Robert W. Fraser.

Starting the course the end of May, the girls have now qualified for the Red Cross swimming certificate, and will receive the Red Cross emblem to wear on their swim suits. Some of the girls qualified in the junior life-saving course.

BENNING TO ENTERTAIN NETMEN

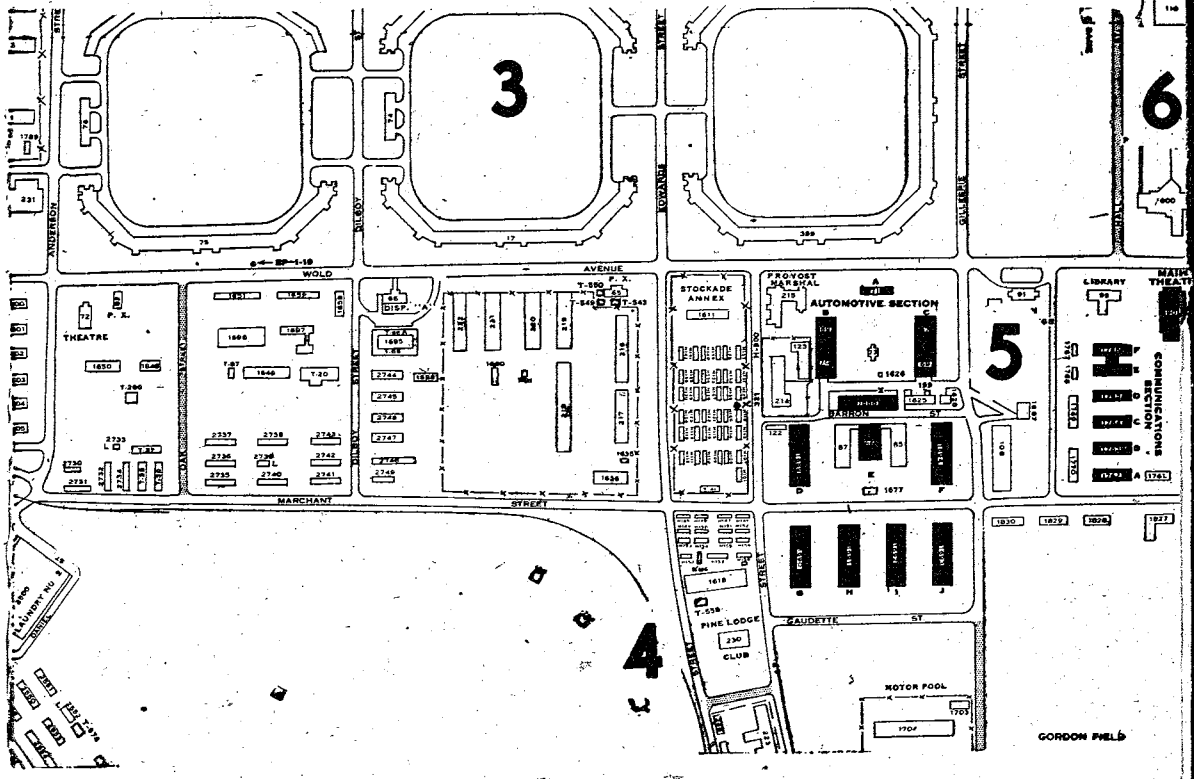
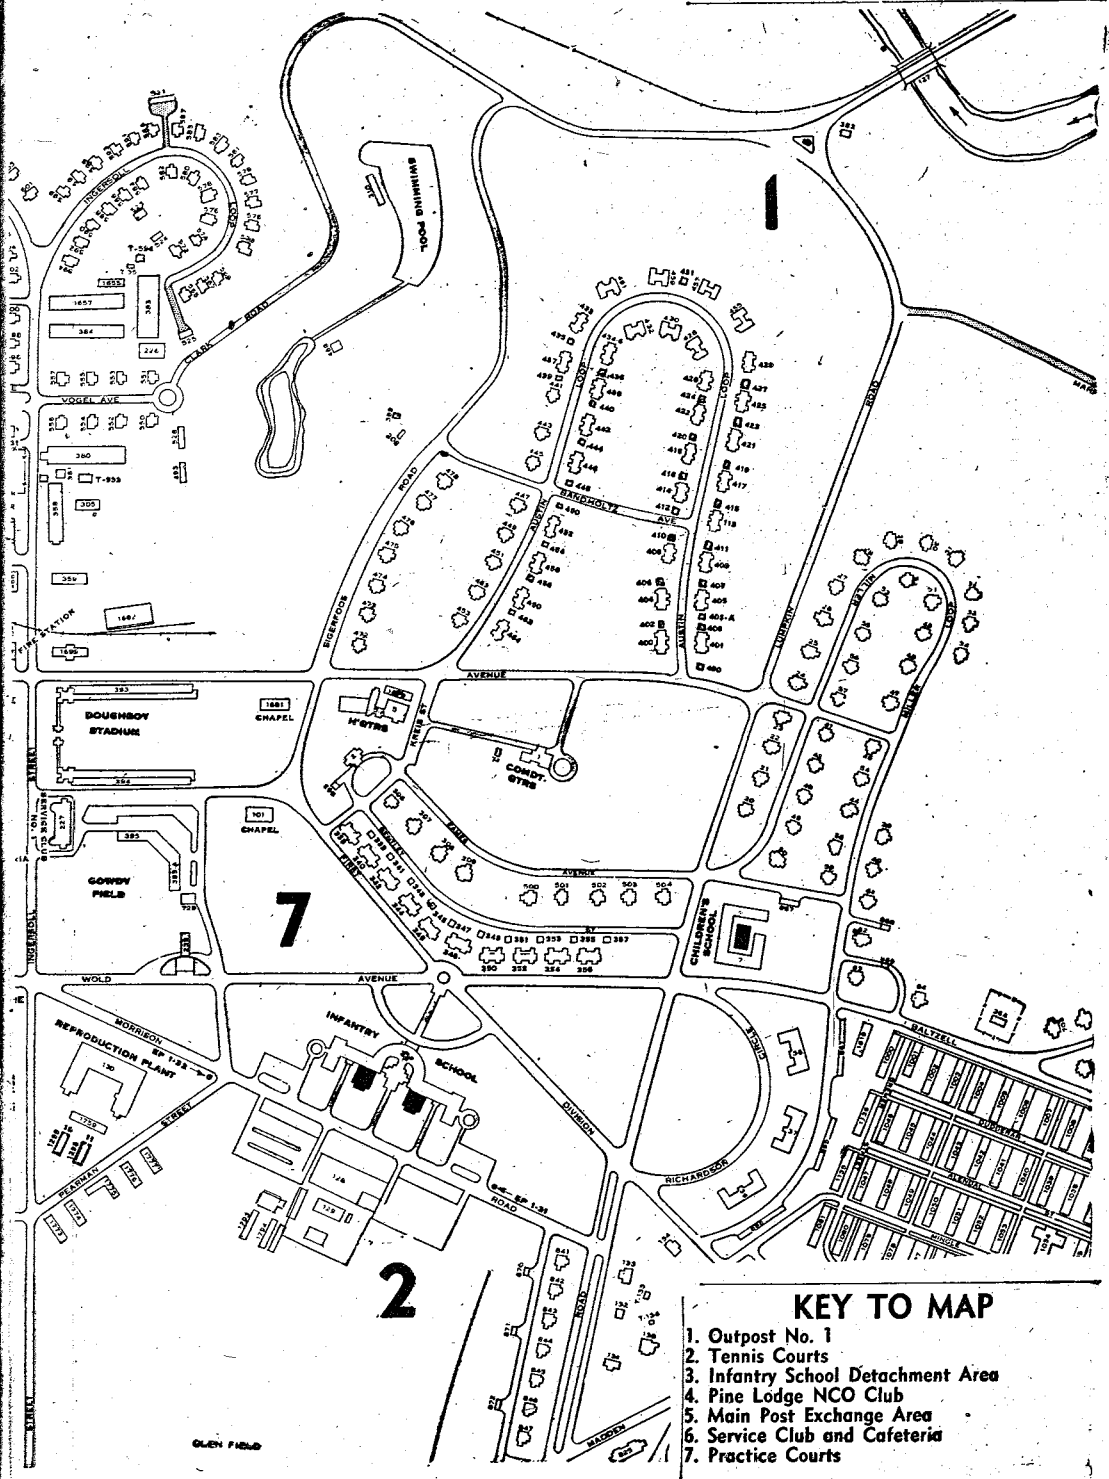
Fort Benning's tennis enthusiasts, with their eyes set on a possible berth on the Third Army tennis delegation, began eliminations this week in the officers and enlisted men's divisions with the eventual winners paired in playoffs to determine the post representatives in the Third Army tennis tournament to be staged here June 29.

Once the competitors get past the Third Army tournament, they will really have something to shoot at, although it will really be a long haul for the eventual winners. The Third army representatives will compete in the 1948 Army Tennis Championship at West Point, N. Y., July 16 to 24 and if successful there, will get a chance to compete in the Inter-Service Championship Tennis Turnament, known as the Leech Tennis Matches, to be played July 30 and 31, at Arlington, Va. From there, it's a possible shot at the Olympics.

The officers began their elimination last week end on the Officers club courts, while the enlisted men will battle it out on the courts across from the Infantry School.



The eliminations play, which should be completed in two weeks, will be followed by the post tourney, which will determine the singles and doubles representatives in the Third Army meet here June 29.



All matches in the Third Army meet will be played on the smooth-surfaced courts at the Officers' club with Chuck Evert, pro at the club, as head official of the meet.

Chief candidates for the Fort Benning tennis squad are Sung Chai A. Yang and Lt. Col. S. H. Wbster. Yang, a singles representative on last year's post team, is the only enlisted man of the 1947 edition who will be back for the meet this year.

Colonel Webster, who walked away with both the Fort Benning and Third Army singles championship last year, is expected to strengthen the post's chances in the Third Army classic. He was also a member of the winning doubles squad in the Third Army tourney.

Although the goal of the local tournaments is to select the best qualified men for the Third Army meet, all efforts will not be lost however as trophies will be awarded to winners and runner-ups in the singles and doubles competition in both the enlisted men's and officers tournament.

Gene Yow Takes Post Links Tiara

Sub-Par Round Explodes Title Hopes For English

Gene Yow, who entered the post enlisted men's golf tournament in the capacity of a darkhorse, proved that early predictions are poor scales to go by last Sunday afternoon when he scored a smashing 7-6 triumph over Claude English to cop Fort Benning's enlisted golf toga.

The new champ, who carries the banner of Lawson field, had a mediocre round in the morning, carding a 79 to hold a two-up margin over his finals opponent at the half-way mark, but set a blistering two-under-par pace in the afternoon round to take six out of 12 holes, and close out the match on the 30th green.

The sporty 6,224-yard layout of the Fort Benning Officers' club was the scene of the match.

English Up At Nine

English, who chalked up victories over W. W. Everett, G. A. Hollenbeck and Elfedy Ivy to reach the finals, wound up the first nine with a one-up margin over Yow, but dropped to two-down when the Lawson field hot-shot toured the back nine in 38.

In the afternoon round, it was Yow all the way. He stroked in a par to win the 19th hole, and got a half with his par on the 20th hole. English took his only hole on the front nine of the afternoon round when he knocked in a birdie on the 21st green.

Wins on the 24th, 25th, 26th, 28th and 29th holes gave Yow a five-up margin as the match went into the last lap. Yow won the 28th hole with a par and the 29th with a birdie, and a half on the 30th put English out of the running.

The Sand Hill golf course's only finalist hardhitting F. T. Canady, took possession of the first flight title when he scored an 18-hole, one-up triumph over the Airborne battalion's Arden Smith. The single-round finals match was played in the morning.

The only extra-hole match of the day came in the second flight finals when J. J. Felber, an Airborne battalion golfer, had to carry his opponent, John Wyatt, another Trooper linksman, 19 holes to snatch a one-up triumph.

Lawson field scored again in the third flight finals when John Burniston took a 2-2 match from H. J. Tacker of the Seventh Regimental combat team.

Trophy Presentation

Following the afternoon round of the championship flight finals, trophies were presented to winners, runners-up and the tournament medalist by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

The medalist trophy went to Paul Markland, who fired a qualifying round of 73. Markland was ousted 5-4 in the tourney semi-finals by Yow, who qualified with a 76.

In addition to individual awards, a plaque, to be engraved with the name of this year's post champion and kept in the archives of the Infantry School, was shown.

Assisting in the presentation ceremony, Col. Onto P. Bragan, post special services officer, expressed hopes that every possible effort will be made to provide Fort Benning's enlisted men with an 18-hole course. At present, the nine-hole Sand Hill layout is the only course on the reservation open to all enlisted golfers.

New Speedway Features Top Stock Car Jockeys

The nation's leading stock car auto race drivers will go to the post in the grand opening of the new $50,000 Columbus Speedway Sunday afternoon to battle for the $2,000 purse offered by Promoter Bill France.

The new speedway, owned by the Columbus Speedways, Inc., is located on the highway leading to Warm Springs, Ga., about eight miles north of Columbus. The new half-mile dirt track is considered to be one of the fastest in these parts with a seating capacity for 6,000 spectators.

The stock car daredevils, who officially open the new speedway, will battle it out in a six-event program that starts with time trials at 1 p. m. The first race will get under way at 3 p.m. Three 10-lap heats, a 15-lap consolation and a 40-lap feature are included on the thrill-packed car.

Heading the field of gas jockeys, will be Fonty Flock of Atlanta, 1947 national champion of the stock car circuit, who is still one of the leading contenders for this year's laurels.

Battling Flock for honors will be Red Byron of Anniston, Ala., Marshall Teague of Daytona Beach, Fla., winner of the Eastern states championship last season, Bill Snowden, rated one of Georgia's finest, and a host of other lead-footed drivers.

Promoter Bill France, head of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing and well known throughout the South, will personnally be on hand to supervise the races in Columbus.

EX-GRIDSTER HERE

Bill Tuminella, first-string center on the 1947 Doughboy football squad, who is a native of Columbus, visited former teammates at Fort Benning Monday. A student at the University of Alabama, Tuminella plans to spend the summer months at his home, reporting back for schooling and football next fall.

"My boy friend hates the sight of intoxicating liquor."

"Then why does he drink?"

"To get it out of sight."

Tourist (to Indian in heart of reservation): "White man glad to see Redman. White man glad to see Redman. White man hope big chief feel tip-top this morning."

PRE-WAR BUDDIES . . . Georgia's claimant to the world's strikeout title, Hugh Frank Radcliffe, a 19-year-old mound wizard from Thomaston's Robert E. Lee institute, visited Lawson field last week, but wasn't interested in demonstrating his skill with a baseball. Radcliffe is shown here chatting with a pre-war buddy, M-Sgt. Pete Hargett, before reporting to the Wilmington, Del., farm club of the Philadelphia Phillies. The youthful strikeout king has been signed by the Phillies for a reported $40,000.

Head Coach Joe Shepherd herded together approximately 50 aspirants for positions on the 1948 Doughboy football eleven at the first pre-season training session in Doughboy stadium Tuesday afternoon.

The first get-together was devoted largely to outfitting the team candidates with uniforms, but it was expected that Coch Shepherd will start his scrimmages in the near future.

Although most of the 1947 Dough edition has departed, Don Sult, one of the reliable backs on the undisputed all-army champions of last year, probably will be sporting Benning toggery again this season.

Shepherd announced an eight-game schedule for the Doughs this fall to get under way on Sept. 26. The inaugural date is one of two open dates remaining on the Benning slate.

In the first definitely-set tussle, the Doughs will journey to Parris Island, S. C., to take a crack at the Marines on Oct. 2. The first game in Doughboy stadium will be with the Memphis Naval Air station team on Oct. 10.

Five of the contests on tap for the Benningites this year will be home games, while the local lads will be the visitors in three of the clashes.

Things went along according to plan in the post intramural baseball activity last week until the Lawson field Flyers took the loop-leading Medics through an air pocket Sunday afternoon, and dropped them 7-6 in an extra inning.

Lew Button, rangy right-hander on the Flyers' mound staff, provided the fans with a one-man show as he did all of the heavy stickwork for the Flyers in addition to turning in a sparkling six-hit performance against the docs.

In four trips to the plate, Button banged out two singles a double, and a triple, and batted in three Flyer tallies. Lanky Lew won his own ball game with a right-field single in the tenth inning which brought Mac McBride home with the winning counter.

The ace right-hander, who recently returned to the Flyer lineup after a two-week illness, struck out 12 Medic batters, and gave up only one walk.

John Graves, Medic mound ace, was the game's hard-luck lad. Coming on for a relief job in the eighth, Graves chalked up four whiffs, and held the Flyers hitless until Button nicked him for his decisive tenth-inning blow.

Since the Medics knotted the score during Graves' stint on the mound, the flashy right-hander was charged with the loss, his first of the 1948 season. Graves' wins record for the 1948 activity stands at eight. Five of his triumphs came during the league's first half, and he has hung up three victories during the final phase.

After Tuesday night's game between the 204th Transportation Battalion Truckers and the 3440th Army Service unit, Larry Hall, speedy right-handed mound ace of the ASU nine, probably walked from the hill muttering "there isn't any justice."

And, he had ample reason, for it is usually a foregone conclusion that a one-hit slab performance yields a win for the pitcher turning in the feat. However, the Truckers, after putting on a daring display of base-running throughout the game, took advantage of four ninth-inning ASU misplays to score twice, and down Hall's delegation 6-5.

The only bingle given up by Hall was a scratch infield single by Trucker pitcher Willie Love in the seventh inning.

If the ASU had won the game it would have been all Hall's doing. Having a perfect night at the plate, he got four of the service unit's eight safeties, a single, a double, and two triples. He scored three of the four times he reached the bags, and drove in two more ASU tallies.

Lanky Larry also did all right in the strikeout department, whiffing 15 Trucker lumber swingers.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, the Infantry Center commander, gave spectators a chukle during last Sunday afternoon's presentation ceremony following the finals of the enlisted men's golf tournament.

After presenting John Burniston with the trophy for winning the third flight of the tourney, the general asked Burniston what kind of score he shot. When Burniston replied that he and his finals opponent, H. J. Tacker, hadn't kept score, General Burress said: "Hmmm, you must play the same type of game I do."

Ordnance Win Drops STR To Fourth Spot

Right-hander Bob Glover toppled the Student Training Regiment diamond nine from the Benning league ladder's third rung by pitching the 328th Ordnance battalion to a three-hit, 6 to 3 win at Gowdy field last Wednesday afternoon.

The loss by the students in their final tilt of the circuit's first half dropped them into fourth place, while the post Medics, by virtue of an 11 to 3 trouncing of the 3440th army Service unit Tuesday night, moved into the No. 3 spot behind the Infantry School detachment Profs and the Airborne batEven a loss would not have affected the final standing of the Ordnance team. The flame pot lads were a full two games ahead of the sixth place 204th Transportation battalion Truckers when they took the field Wednesday.

Glover's fine mound performance was offset by some fancy stickwork on the part of big Stan Letonsky, slugging Ordnance first-sacker, who banged out three base knocks in four appearances, and was credited with batting in five of the triumphant squad's six counters.

Henry Wyatt reached on an error and Louis Glodich walked to start the first inning, and both advanced on Glover's infield out. Letonsky then slammed a single to score both runners, and scored himself with the third tally of the inning when Charlie Jones nicked starter Copas of the STR for another bingle.

A two-bagger by Letonsky scored Glover, who had gone to first on a fielder's choice, with another flame pot counter in the top half of the second.

Big Stan climaxed his lumber performance in the first half of the fourth by slamming out a two-run triple. His blow came after both Wyatt and Glodich had hit for single bases.

The STR chalked up its first tally without the aid of a base hit in the home half of the first. Fred Davis led off with a base on balls, went to second on a passed ball by Ordnance catcher Glodich, advanced to third on an infield out by Joe Morgan, and scored when Bill Church grounded out, third to first.

In their part of the fourth, the students put together two singles and a walk for their final two tallies. With one out, Harold Brown lashed out a single, and Phillip Irby worked pitcher Glover for a walk. Both runners advanced on an error by Glodich, and scored when Major Carmichael singled to center.

SOFTBALL WIZARDS . . . The Infantry School detachment Reds have compiled an enviable record on softball diamonds both at Fort Benning and Columbus. The latest tally gives the Reds a tie for the No. 1 spot in both the post and Columbus city softball circuits. Pitching has been the Reds' strong point in the 1948 campaign, two hurlers, John Wyatt and Warren Paulk, having no-hitters to their credit.

Johnson Hurls Medics Victory

Yielding three hits while fanning 15 batters, fast hurling John Johnson held the opposition completely at bay as his 30th Medical group teammates pounded out a 9-3 triumph over the 999th Field Artillery battalion combine last Thursday.

In chalking up his seventh win in nine starts for the season, Johnson added to his mound performance by slamming out two home runs in four trips to the plate.

The Medics got going in the second frame when they tallied twice with some lusty batting. After John Burman walked and stole second, Frank Armstrong slashed out a single over second to score Burman. Armstrong came across on catcher James Allen's bit into right field.

Continuing their scoring, the Medics tallied one run in each of the third, fourth and fifth innings, and added four more big markers in the sixth to ice the tilt.

The 999th aggregation got one run in the second on Robinson's homer, scored one more in the third and completed their portion of scoring with one run in the sixth canto.

Lawson Upsets Medics By 7-6

Lew Button Stars As Flyers Notch Extra-Inning Triumph

Unpredictable in every sense of the word, the Lawson Field Flyers reached up from the Fort Benning league's No. 7 spot Sunday afternoon to topple the post Medics from the top rung of the circuit ladder with an extra-inning, 7-6 decision.

Prior to Sunday's game, the Medids had on all five of their secon-half starts, and shared the loop's top berth with the Infantry School detachment Profs.

Lanky Lew Button, ace right-hander of the Lawson field team, was the pitching as well as the hitting star of the tilt. Allowing the powerful Medics only six safe blows, Button whiffed 12 and yielded only one base on balls. Going to the plate five times in the game, the Flyer twirler banged out four safeties, and knocked in three tallies, including the tenth-inning score which iced the game for the Flyers.

Graves Tagged

Arthur Botjer worked the first eight innings on the slab for the Medics, but John Graves, who came on as a relief twirler in the eighth stanza, was tagged with the loss, his first defeat in either half of the post campaign. The right-handed ace had eight previous wins, five for the first phase and three during the second-half race.

After having set the Medics down in order in the top half of the first, the Flyers went into the lead by scoring once in their half of the inning. Jack Hunt crossed the plate on Max Seirer's infield roller after he had singled and gone to third on an error by left-fielder Jackie Morel of the Medics.

Medics Take Lead

Button got his first blow of the afternoon, a long triple to right, and drove in a run which gave the Flyers another fling at the lead in the bottom half of the second.

In the fifth inning, the Flyers scored again without hitting safely. "Tex" Ritter walked to start the inning, moved around to third on two successive Medic miscues and came home when Dick Lee rolled out from pitcher to first.

The losers had their first and only fling at the lead in the visiting half of the sixth when they scored three times to go ahead 4-3. After Otto Loroesh got to first on an error, Ted Thorsen slammed a single to center which got through Lee and permitted Loroesh to score. Thorsen was tagged out at third but Willie Griffin reached on an error, and Graves was safe on a fielder's choice to set the stage for two runs when Newman poled a triple to center.

Button Clutch Hits

The Flyers again took command in the last of the seventh by scoring twice on a double by catcher Cox, a single by Seirer, a misplay by Botjer, and a wild pitch. It appeared that the Flyer nine had the tilt iced when doubles by Mac McBride and Button accounted for another Lawson tally in the home half of the eighth.

However, the Medics threw the tilt into extra innings when Lorpesh saved the game momentarily with a three-bagger to right center, scoring Lewish and pinch-hitter John Johnson, both of worn had reached on Lawson misplays.

Button turned out to be the hitting star of the game when he singled to right in the home half of the tenth to score McBride wit the winning tally. McBride had walked to start the extra stanza.

PROFS BLAST ORDNANCE TO TIE FOR CIRCUIT LEAD

The Infantry School detachment Profs moved into a deadlock with the post Medics for the Fort Benning loop's No 1 spot Friday night by taking their fifth straight win of the second-half campaign, an 18-4 decision over the 328th Ordnance battalion.

Right-hander Bob Orton, going all the way for the Profs, whiffed 13 enemy batters during the abbreviated seven inning tilt, and tossed no-hit ball for the first four innings.

Bob Glover started on the hill for the Ordnancemen, and was charged with the defeat. However, a total of four moundsmen saw service for the 328th during the sixth and seventh stanzas.

George Hill, Prof lead-off batter, scored the first ISD tally in the top of the first when he walked, stole second and third, and scored when Joe Smith lifted a high fly to the left-fielder.

The loop leaders chalked up another trio of counters in the visiting half of the second when Bill Brooks singled to center, stole second and scored on Bill Hojnacki's right-field double. Another double by catcher John Seymour brought in Hojnacki, and Seymour scored when Hill lashed a single into center field.

Singles by Smith and Brooks and an error by Ordnance center-fielder Henry Wyatt gave the Profs another duet of counters in the tird.

Two fielder's choice and two singles figured in a two-run fourth for the ISD squad. Hill and first-sacker Herb Lauve both reached on fielder's choice, and Harold (biondy) Burnett and Smith tagged the one-baggers.

Continuing to post numerals in each square of the line score, the Profs counted again in the fifth on a single by Brooks and a deep center-field triple by Hojnacki.

The Ordnance chalked up its first tally of the game in the last half of the fifth when Gloves reached on an error, made a theft of second, and scored when Charlie Jones singled to right.

After giving the ISD lads two more runs on five singles in the opening half of the sixth, the flame pot squad came back in the bottom side of the inning to add another pair. A single by Wyatt and doubles by Dick White and Stan Letonsky accounted for the two home-teams tallies.

Seven more ISD tallies were chalked up during the seventh and final inning of the tilt during which the Ordnance nine employed pitchers John Guth, Stan Letonsky and Dick White. Only two base hits were needed by the Profs as six walks were issued by the trio of Ordnance hurlers during the inning.

The final Ordnance tally crossed the plate in the bottom of the seventh as the result of singles by Jones, Bob Cannon and Wyatt.

MacDill Wins AF Track Meet Here

Tracksters from MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., walked off with first-place honors in the first annual Southern air force meet, finals in which were held at Doughboy stadium Saturday afternoon. The cinder path delegation from Keesler field, Miss., placed second.

Lawson field, playing host in the tournament, did not enter a team, but placed its candidates on the Fort Benning squad, which won three track events, and got firsts in three of the field classes.

Since the meet was used to determine the Southern air force area team to compete in the National air force meet to be held at Lackland field, San Antonio, Tex., the Doughboy squad was not eligible for the team awards.

Luse Wins

Winning the only dash event for the Benningites, Jack Luse raced over the 100-yard stretch in 10.4 seconds, while both the mile and two-mile runs were won by Dough delegates. Gale Wilson posted a time of 4:41 minutes for the mile classic, and Bill Jenkins set the pace in the two-mile event with a time of 11:20 minutes.

Ellsworth Cundriff, holder of the Third army title for the pole vault, came through to get the Dough team firsts in both the pole vault and high jump. He catapulted over the cane pole at 11 feet, and took high jump honors by clearing the parallel bar at five feet, 10 inches.

Benning's other first in the field events came when Allen Scullen won the discus classic by heaving the object 119 feet, seven inches. The discus throw was the last event on the tourney agenda.

Salisbury Wins Javelin

MacDill field's George Salisbury, a strong candidate for an Olympic team berth, lived up to expectations when he took first place in the javelin throwing contest with a distance of 184 feet, three inches.

Gordon Galloway was responsible for two MacDill field firsts in the field division of the meet. His distance of 21 feet, three and one-half inches got the Florida Flyers a first, and he outdistanced the field in the shot put by chalking up 37 feet, four inches, with the pellet.

The cinder path delegation from Keesler field stepped into the picture when Dave Irvin won both hurdles contests. He went over the 220-yard low barriers in a time of 26.6 seconds, and posted a time of 16.6 seconds for the 120-yard high hurdles contest.

MacDill Wins Relay

MacDill wound up its track participation by winning the one-mile relay with a time of three minutes and 42 seconds.

In the 220-yard dash, Allen Boyer of Keesler field copped first-place honors with a time of 22.8 seconds, and Pete MacDonald of MacDill took first in the 440-yard race with a time of 53.4 seconds.

Teams from MacDill and Keesler fields left Tuesday for participation in the Lackland field tourney. Outstanding participants in the National air force meet will get a crack at competition for Olympic team berths.

Parachute Nine Beats ISD 4-3 In Softball Tilt

The Infantry School detachment softball team suffered its first league defeat of the season last week when Company K of the 504th Parachute Infantry regiment touched right-hander John Wyatt for a 4-3, extra-inning victory.

However, the infantrymen outhit the 504th team, nicking pitcher Herman Allen for seven blows, while Wyatt yielded only five safeties.

The visiting ISD Reds were the first team to score, getting two counters in the first inning. John Klish reached on an error to start the inning, and moved to second on a single by Jack Hallett. Two walks forced in the first tally, and Hallett scored when Dewey hit into a fielder's choice.

After getting one run in their half of the first, the paratroopers come back in the bottom of the second to push across two counters, and take a one-run lead.

Starting the second frame off for the Chutists, Bill Bellinger singled, and got to second when Arthur Smeland reached on a fielder's choice. Hits by Clyde Schaufel and pitcher Allen scored both runners.

The troopers retained the lead until the sixth inning when Wright blasted a four-bagger for the Reds to knot the score at 3-3.

In their half of the extra inning, the Reds staged a threat when Warren Paulk and Bill Welton hit safely, but Allen buckled down to retire the side before a run could score.

It appeared the game would go into the ninth inning when the first two 504th batters in the last of the eighth went out in order. However, Earl Wilkins played the hero by poling a circuit blow over the center-fielder's head to give the troopers their 4-3 decision.

Lawson Flyers Stage Uprising To Nip Artillery

The Lawson field Flyers climbed up out of a cellar - sharing berth in the post intra-mural league last Wednesday by outslugging the 999th Field Artillery battalion 16-14.

The slugging contest, the longest nine-inning game of the 1948 campaign, lasted three hours and 31 minutes.

Lew Button, who started the tilt at first base for the Flyers, came on to pitch in the eighth inning, and received credit for hurling the triumph. The loss was charged to Jack Robinson, the fourth twirler used by the artillerymen, who took over mound chores in the eighth frame.

The artillerymen touched off their big guns in the early stages of the game to heap up a 10-1 advantage at the end of the third inning, but remained practically idle while the Flyers romped across the platter 11 times in the sixth and seventh stanzas.

Scoring their only run of the first three innings in the initial frame, the Flyers failed to garner a safe hit from the offerings of Mac McClintock, 999th starter. Jack Hunt reached first on an error, stole second, went to third on a bad throw by artillery catcher Howard, and scored on a passed ball.

Starter Dan English suffered a touch of wildness in the second inning, and gave up eight runs on only three artillery blows, two of them four-base blasts over the left-field barrier.

First to hit for the circuit was first-sacker Ware, who drove one of English's pitches out of the park while two mates were on base. Catcher Edgar Powe repeated the feat later in the inning with one artilleryman on the basepaths.

After giving the 999th aggregation two more runs in the third, English was jerked for Speed Braun, who went to first when Button came to the hill in the eighth.

The Flyers staged their uprising in the last of the sixth, and needed only one base knock to count six times. Five walks and four passed balls figured in the six-run rampage.

Making their margin more secure, the Flyers touched another duet of artillery pitchers, Kelly and Colpatrick, for five more tallies in the home half of the seventh, and grabbed their winning margin by scoring lone counters in the eighth and ninth innings.

TROOPER NINE EYES HONORS IN SOFTBALL

BY KEN WATTS

With the first half of the post softball season at its half-way mark, the Airborne battalion team is battling it out with the Infantry School detachment and the 30th Medical group for top honors.

Both the Airborne and ISD teams have suffered one loss during the campaign, and the Medics have dropped two contests.

Jones Epps, Airborne team captain, expressed pleasure with the spirit and cooperation the squad has shown to date, and cited his team and individual records as "tops."

Voted "best players" for the season thus far are three of the big guns at the plate, Arden Smith, Gene Moore, and Bob Whitney. Smith, the Trooper right-fielder, is batting at a .500 clip; third-baseman Moore is hitting at a .480 pace, and Whitney, an outfielder, boasts a .400 average.

Other players in the lineup, who have been contributing to the Airborne success, are Jack Farmer, second baseman; Leroy Brassieaux, shortstop; Bob Liddell, catcher; Gale Sult, center fielder; Ralph Patton, outfielder; Dick Clinton, pitcher; James Spoone, pitcher, and Ed Luke, infielder.

Two newcomers, Jesse Budd and Enrique (Ohnie Ohnesorgen, are expected to bolster the Trooper nine.

"Ah, kind lady, fair woman, fate indeed has moved that you and I should meet on this wonderful spring day. My lady, forgive my boldness, but will you honor me by being my mate?"

Truckers Stage Seven-Run Rally To Win 14-7 Tilt

For a while it looked like the hapless Seventh Regimental combat team might come up with a post intra-mural league win Thursday night, but the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers came through with a sixth-inning rally which carried them to a 14-7 triumph.

The loss was the fifth straight for the RCT nine during the Benning circuit's second half, and it remained the only team without a win for the final-phase race.

During the first triad of innings the RCT diamondmen jumped to a 5-2 lead, but their defenses became unglued in the sixth inning when the visiting Truckers crossed the plate with seven runs.

In a two-run first stanza for the host team, Charles Maykrantz led off by getting a walk, was sacrificed to second, and scored when Bob Armstrong drove a single to right field. Having advanced to third when Trucker right gardener Jim Cowley let the blow get through him, Armstrong came in with the second run when Stan Maciejczyk hoisted a fly to right.

The Truckers knotted the count in their half of the second when Cowley walked and completed the circuit when right-fielder Musil of the RCT squad mishandled a base knock by Eldredge.

An RCT single, a balk and a two-base error by Trucker left-fielder DeBost gave the host aggregation another tally in its half of the second, and the combat team lads took advantage of two costly miscues by Trucker shortstop Herb O'Brien to notch another pair of counters in the third.

The tilt was thrown into a deadlock again in the first half of the fifth when Charlie Heert, Trucker third-sacker, slammed a three-bagger into right field with two mates on the bags. Hubert came home with the third tally of the inning when pitcher Willie Love flied out to center field.

Although they failed to hit in their half of the fifth, the RCT lads managed to cross the platter with another talley. Maciejczyk walked, went to second on an error by Trucker second-baseman Jim Wills, took third on a wild pitch, and scored on a squeeze play.

A series of walks and four base blows in the sixth inning gave the Truckers a six-run margin going into the final stanzas of the game. The seven-run rampage of the Truckers was climaxed with a homerun by Herb O'Brien, his second round-tripper of the campaign, with DeBost on base.

The final 204th scoring was done in the eighth inning when the Truckers banged out three one-baggers, and took advantage of a two-base misplay by RCT right-fielder Best. Putting forth their last effort in the home half of the ninth, the RCT diamondmen scored one on Maciejczyk's single and an outfield error which permitted Musil to get to second.

ROTC Students To Study Here For Six Weeks

Fort Benning's extensive training facilities and vast reservation will be made available to approximately 600 ROTC students from colleges and universities in the Third Army area who will arrive here Saturday for a six-week training period.

The huge throng of ROTC students, who will be undertaking their last year of advanced ROTC training, will study and train here until July 31. They will be housed in the Harmony Church area, and their training will be supervised by their own instructors.

Staff persomnel and instructors have been laboring all week, readying the camp and piecing together the vast six-week schedule. The course which is extensive and thorough, will cover all phases of infantry and airborne methods and techniques, orientation on present improvements, familiarization with all weapons, plus visits and tours of the Infantry Center.

The group will be organized into one field artillery battery, designated as Battery A, and three infantry companies, B, C and D. During the first week the infantrymen will receive instructions in the M-1 rifle after which they test their skill on the firing range. The artillerymen will be briefed on the service of the piece, followed by orientation in artillery. During the ensuing weeks, the students begin moving into the advanced phases of all training.

Col. Irvine C. Scudder, commanding officer of the Sutdent Training regiment, will command the ROTC camp, while Col. Theodore L. Futch, professor of Military Science and Tactics from The Citadel, S.C., will be executive officer.

Midget Races Scheduled Tuesday, Not Friday, Now

Promoter A. P. Brewer announced this week the Midget races at Idle Hour Park will be held on Tuesday evening each week, instead of the former date of Friday. He said the change was made to allow drivers to compete in more southern races and hence keep a high quality of competition in this locality.

The "Invincible One," Johnny Suggs' tractor-powered midget car which has won the last two features at Idle Hour Park, will try for "three straight" Tuesday against another fast field of local and foreign competition, Promoter A. P. Brewer announced.

Suggs finished ahead of a field of 14 racers, including entries from Miami, Grand Rapids, Tampa, Pensacola, Macon, and all over.

Heats were won by Lou Gauthier, George Reeves, and Bill Osbourne, all out-of-towners. Osbourne, who also won the Australian pursuit, was racing a dirt track for the second time in his life, having acquired his previous experience on asphalt.

A major thrill of last Friday's program was Red Richards' escape after a collision in which Leroy Hicks rode up over Richards' headrest after the latter had broadsided on the south turn. Richards said, "I saw him coming and ducked."

Time trials Tuesday will begin at 7:30 p.m., with heat-racing starting promptly at 8:30 p.m.

15 Knox Officers To See TIS, TIC

Fifteen faculty members of the Armored School, Fort Knox, Ky., are scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning Sunday, June 20, for a one-day orientation visit, it was learned here this week.

The tour, first of three monthly orientation and acquaintance visits, is designed to familiarize the Fort Knox officers with the Infantry Center and the Infantry School. The group is expected also to visit various other installations throughout the nation.

Headed by Col. Chester A. Carlsten, the Armored School delegation will go next to the Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

Band Positions Are Now Open

An opportunity to join the 72nd Army Band at Fort Benning is being offered musicians on the post, as well as men who are interested in learning to play a musical instrument and who possess musical aptitude.

Opening in the band are being offered men who have played in private or professional bands or orchestras, men who have studied music, wither privately or in a school, men who play any type of musical instrument as a hobby, and men who are interested in learning to play and have the aptitude.

Those selected for duty with the band will be placed on detached service for a month after which they will either be transferred of returned to their parent organizations.

Insurance School Established Here

A Government Life Insurance school, designed to keep insurance and savings officers abreast of the latest provisions and measures concerning government life insurance, is being conducted here under the leadership of Lt. Col. Joseph C. Lambert, assistant adjutant general of the Infantry Center.

The first class started Monday, June 14, and the course will continue through next Tuesday, June 24. Classes are conducted from 4 to 5 p.m. in room 15, Infantry Center annex.

Insurance and savings officers and two selected non-commissioned officers from each separate unit on the post are being oriented in government insurance problems.

The scope of instruction includes general provisions and benefits of government insurance, applications and effective dates of government insurance, beneficiaries and options, conversion of government insurance, change of insurance, lapse and reinstatement and waiver of premiums.

Lt. Rosemary O'Laughlin is assisting Col. Lambert in carrying out the program at the insurance school.

25 Local Youths Are Now Attending Cub Scout Camp

The cub scout summer camp opened here last Monday with a total of 25 boys reported registered for the one-week training period.

The week's program includes handicraft, scoutcraft, swimming, hiking and camp fire circles. Parents of the cub scouts have been invited to visit the camp Thursday evening.

The cub scout session will close Saturday, and the Boy Scout session will begin Monday, June 21, Sergeant Duffield said.

2 QM Specialists See Commissary

Two specialists from the office of the army's quartermaster general will observe actual operation of the Fort Benning sales commissary during a visit here today.

Purpose of the observation is to assist in solving commissary problems. Although officials said that two men would make no recommendations as to operation nor would they submit a report. They will be oriented regarding the difficulties common to most commissaries.

MEDICS NOTCH FIFTH SUCCESSIVE VICTORY

BY GEORGE FRINK

The post Medics continued their winning streak last week by shading the 3449th Army Service unit 4-1 in a Tuesday night tilt at Gowdy field. The triumph boosted the Medic record for the second half of the intra-mural league to five wins and no losses.

John Graves, curve-ball artist of the Medics pitching staff, was credited with the victory. He allowed the 2440th ASU nine only one bingle, and fanned 14 enemy batters. So far this season, Graves has an unblemished mound record of eight wins.

The ASU delegation got off to a one-run lead in their half of the first inning when the first man to face Graves, David Watts, walked, and reached second on a bad throw by Medic catcher Willie Griffin. With two away, Willie Banks, ASU second-baseman, reached on an error as Waits came in to score on the play.

The Medics remained scoreless until the fourth stanza when first-sacker Paul Lewish slammed out a hit to the left-field fence to drive in the tying run. Ordinarily the blow would have gone for three bases, but Lewish tripped on the initial bag, and an accurate peg by left-fielder Coleman of the ASU held him to a single.

Two more Medic tallies crossed the plate in the fifth inning. Jackie Morel, left-fielder for the docs, drew a base on balls, and moved to second when Hector Pachico hit a bingle into left field. Morel scored while ASU shortstop Waits was throwing out Otto Loroesh at first base. Another grounder by third-baseman Ted Thorsen brought Pachico in with the second run of the inning.

The fifth-inning spree was ended when Griffin bounded out from second to first.

The final Medic tally came in the sixth frame when Lewish hit safely a left field to score second-baseman Harold Newman, who had reached first on an error by Waits.

Lewish, rangy first-sacker for the Medics, copped the game's batting laurels by getting three singles in four trips, and driving in a run. The only bingle given up by Graves was a scratch infield single in the fourth inning by catcher Lee Saucier.

German Denazification Complete, Burress Says

In his first public appearance since assuming command of the Infantry Center, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress summarized his experiences as former commanding general of the U. S. Constabulary in Germany at last week's Columbus Kiwanis club meeting at the Ralston hotel.

In a short address General Burress stated that "the denazification of Germany is now complete, and a person is as safe there as he would be in Columbus."

Explaining that the security of occupation forces in Europe is the responsibility of the constabulary, he said that elimination of former Nazis from positions of power has been completed.

"At the end of the last war, the entire German government was composed of Nazis," he declared "This condition has now been broken up."

Difficult Task

He explained that security policing of the conquered Third Reich had been a difficult task during "the period of disintegration" following the war since American troops were redeployed "creating organizational difficulties"

"Besides this, we were faced with the problem of the establishment of a German police force that could be relied upon," he continued. "We were responsible for the policing of Germany."

Emphasizing the plight of displaced persons in greater Europe, General Burress declared that they constituted "one of the most difficult problems facing occupation forces today."

"These people are human beings," he reminded his listeners as he described the situtation of approximately 750,000 homeless persons in the U. S. zone of occupation.

Describes Housing

Describing the D. P.'s as "a heterogenous group, many of whom compare favorably with other immigrants of the past," he mentioned that in Heidelberg, in the American sector, the room density is two and a half persons to every room.

"Housing is our chief problem in Europe today," the new post commander stated.

A favorable aspect of the occupation of Europe, General Burress pointed out, was that "not one serious incident" had occured between neighboring U. S. and Soviet personnel. "This cooperation has existed despite the differences in structure of the American and Russian armies."

Having commanded youthful soldiers overseas, filling them with high morale and esprit de corps, the wartime commander of the 100th Infantry division declared that "the U. S. army overseas is as fine an army as this country has ever had."

Stationed Here In 1920

First stationed at Fort Benning in 1920 as a member of the faculty of the old ngineer department, he returned here to become assistant commandant of the Infantry School in 1941.

Assuming command of the 100th division at Fort Bragg, N. C., he continued in that capacity all through the campaigns of France and Germany.

Noting the improvements in both Fort Benning and Columbus he recalled the early days of the post, when the Infantry Center was still called "Camp Benning."

"A great many things have been done to improve and add to the Fort Benning and many more remain to be done," he stated. "I don't know of a better station or a more flattering assignment for an officer than Fort Benning."

Pvt. (the 30th of the month): "What's the matter with your finger?"

Pfc: "Oh, I was down at the PX getting some smokes and some clumsy corporal stepped on my hand."

Eight-ball "Why are you wearing that toothbrush in your lapel?"

Second ditto: "Oh, that's my class pin. I went to Colgate."

Approximately 500 men of the 325th's Second battalion and Battery C of the 319th will participate in the American Legion's parade Sunday afternoon, June 26. Also in the parade will be the 82nd Airborne division band from Fort Bragg, N. C.

Local Bond Sales Decrease In May

Although the percentage of purchases was higher, United States savings bonds purchased by Fort Benning military and civilian personnel during the month of May through the payroll savings plan showed a slight decrease from the total purchased during the previous month, bond drive officials reported this week.

The drop, which may be attributed to the lower number of eligible participants during the period of the last report, amounted to $2,549.50, as post personnel purchased $21,193.50 worth of bonds through the payroll savings plan in May as compared to $23,743 in April.

Now that the number of elegible participants is back to normal with the return of maneuver troops, the drive, in conjunction with the "Security Loan" campaign which got under way here April 15, is expected to show an increase in all phases before it closes June 30, officials declared.

A breakdown in the May figures shows military personnel purchasing a total of $13,014.75 through payroll deductions and $6,954.25 in cash purchases. The cash purchases showed a noted increase, almost doubling the previous month's. The civilian payroll savings total amounted to $8,178.75, with no total cash purchases included in the report.

A further breakdown of the figures for May reveals that 11 per cent of the total eligible enlisted men secured $10,190 worth of bonds through payroll deductions, plus $1,313.75 in cash purchase, for an enlisted men's total of $11,503.75. Thirteen per cent of the total officers eligible procured bonds amounting to $2,824.75 through deduction, and $5,640.50 is cash, totaling $8,465-25.

Of the total number eligible to buy bonds, the civilians hsowed the greatest percentage of procurers, amounting to 22 per cent.

With Lt. Col. Wesley U. Moran as chairman of the local drive, which is being conducted between April 15 and June 30, Fort Benning has joined the nation-wide United States Savings Bond campaign. No dollar quotas have been set for the drive here.

Atomic Energy Display Slated For NCCS Club

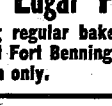
The mumbo-jumbo of information about atomic energy that has usually proved so confusing to the average soldier who doesn't have a detailed background of nuclear physics and probably wouldn't know an isotope from an old shoe is out the window, at least as far as the display on the atom that will open Saturday at the National Catholic Community Service club in Columbus is concerned.

The display, a series of large picture panels, was prepared by Life magazine with the cooperation of the United States Atomic Energy Commission. It is broken down into several sections, and traces the development of the atomic bomb from early scientific research to the Bikini operations, then shows present and future possibilities of peace and wartime use of atomic energy.

The idea behind the display is that science is truly international and that atomic energy is not only scientific, but also involves social and political questions. Atomic Energy, title of the display, is more concerned with the practical use of the energy than with nuclear physics. The photographs emphasize the importance of the layman's understanding the social and political aspects of the new source of energy.

The display opens with panels of the scientists whose peacetime research led to wartime development of atomic energy and were pons. Following this are panels of Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Bikini, experiments with animals, radiation sickness and mutation.

The second section is devoted to the post-war use and development of atomic power and continued research. There are pictures of a plutonium laboratory, the new California cyclotron, work on the production of radioactive isotopes at Ook Ridge and their new uses in medicine, industry and agriculture.



The last section develops the problem of control of atomic energy. This involves world sources of uranium ore, the mining of the ore, the Oak Ridge separation plant and the possible diversion of atomic energy for use as a weapon of war. The exhibit closes with panels describing the problem in education, statecraft and how it is manifest in the ways of the human spirit.

The text of Atomic Energy which accompanies the display is simply and clearly presented and is, in part, quotations from the famous "Report on the International Control of Atomic Energy" prepared for the Secretary of State.

The display, for which there is no admission charge, will be open to visitors every day until 10 p.m. through Sunday, June 26. The NCCS is at 100 Ninth street, one block from the Howard bus station.

A majority of the infantry and artillery students arrived Saturday and Sunday, and had by Monday completed processing.

The training schedule calls for a number of field exercises and work with weapons, employing the same facilities used by the thousands of officer candidates who went through Benning during the war years.

Infantrymen, who comprise the majority of the class, will fire every weapon employed by today's doughboy, from the pistol to the anti-tank gun, including carbines, rifles, BARs, machine guns and mortars. They will also see demonstrations of the attack of a fortified position and the use of flame-throwers and anti-tank grenades.

Army Announces New EM Promotion Policy

That first stripe will be a little longer in coming to the newer soldiers of Uncle Sam's army, officials declared this week.

With reduction in the length of basic training for any recruits on May 1 from 13 to eight weeks, promotion to private first class will take approximately four weeks longer. Formerly, successful graduates of basic training were promoted upon completion of their training period.

With the proposed expansion of the Army, basic training cycles have been decreased in length to increase the number of available cadres, Department of the Army officials revealed. By Nov. 1, 36,000 more troops are expected to be ready for assignment than would otherwise be available.

Graduating from their basic training cycles after eight weeks, enlisted men will normally be promoted now at the end of four months total service. Promotion to private first class will be by organizational commanders, who will be furnished their men's training division records. This will enable the unit to observe the performance of the new soldiers for an extra two months before awarding the increase in grade.

"For its service in war and peace, the Quartermaster corps deserves the fullest appreciation of the American people. Throughout the military establishment great responsibilities rest upon this splendid service. How ably those responsibilities have been met through the years is well known.

"The Quartermaster Corps is the army's link through which industry can contribute much toward the contentment of the individual soldier, it is one of the army elements through which industry can cooperate to mobilize the productive capacity of the nation for maximum use in any emergency that may occur and thus contribute to the national security".

French War Vets Praise American Airborne Division

James F. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, recently forwarded to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, army chief of staff, a letter of appreciation from French war veterans to the 101st Airborne division.

General Bradley directed the adjutant general to transmit the communication to Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, whose defiant reply of "Nuts!" to a German surrender demand at Bastogne in December, 1944, won a place in World War II history.

The letter sent to Mr. O'Neil by Eugene Felix, president of the Ardennes chapter of the French National Union of War Veterans, follows:

"The War Veterans of the Ardennes Francaises in meeting on May 23, 1948, at Charleville, France, after having heard the masterly discourse of their comrade Gustave Gobert on 'The Americans at Bastogne', address to the magnificent soldiers of the 101st American Airborne division and its chief, McAuliffe, their most hearty felicitations for their glorious defense of the 'Nuts city,' with the assurance of their profound gratitude for having been preserved from another enemy invasion. . .

"They ask the American Legion to transmit this direction to the interested parties with its fraternal greetings."

"Someday Bill Will Thank You . . ."

So said the Sun Life Agent when he delivered my son Bill's Junior Adjustable policy — but he didn't have to tell me that. I know what a help it would have been to me if, when I was twenty-one, I had been given a life assurance policy that could be continued as Whole Life, Life Paid-up at 65, or Endowment at the same age, for as much as five times the original amount without increasing the premium. Especially when that premium was based on rates for a child. I didn't have this great advantage, but I'm making sure my son has it. How about you?

The Post-War Soldier

We are extremely interested in the outcome of the new policy which has been introduced here governing the promotion of enlisted men under the army's guidance program. This new policy, designed to test through interviews a soldier's general knowledge of his own country's history and the history of other countries, as well as current events, will determine a man's eligibility for advancement in grade.

There have been varying shades of opinion, all the way from downright opposition to absolute agreement, among the enlisted men affected. Some maintain that a mechanic need not know anything about the formation of Congress or what type of government England has, so long as he knows how to replace spark plugs or recharge a battery, while others say that a knowledge of world affairs is as important as a knowledge of one's duty assignment.

We don't agree completely with either of these opinions since we believe a happy medium can be reached.

Obviously, a man should not be expected to know as much about world history as he does about his assigned duties. After all, he has probably spent several years specializing in his particular field.

But, on the other hand, we think each man expecting promotion to a higher grade should, by all means know something about his own country's history as well as something about the men who are making the headlines today.

Too often men become so absorbed in their jobs that they become one-sided. They are no longer capable of interesting conversations with anyone save those who are engaged in a similar vocation. Under this new policy it will be impossible for a man to be considered for one of the higher grades unless he has at least a general knowledge of world events, along with its technical knowledge.

We frankly can see no justification for a man wearing a master sergeant's stripes unless he is better informed, not only in his assignment but also in general knowledge, than those beneath him. Certainly, in the officer corps, this is true; so why shouldn't it be true among enlisted men?

One reason we believe it so important is from a morale standpoint. It was found in a great number of cases during the last war that enlisted men had no idea why we were fighting. Some knew that they were supposed to hate the enemy enough to win the war, but failed to understand why. The army did not always have sufficient time to explain to those who did not know the reasons for U. S. participation in the European war, so far from America's shores. Now that the war is over, many do not understand why the United States Department seeks funds to help Germany recover, especially since our bombers and our artillery pieces were employed to bring destruction to German industry.

Joseph Goebbels, according to his recently published diaries, registered amazement over the fact that so many American soldiers taken prisoner during the war were so poorly informed. He found it quite easy to influence the thinking of this type of man.

The army is making an earnest effort to overcome this defficiency through the presentation of the weekly Armed Forces Talk. But that is not enough. There must be an honest effort on the part of the individual to help himself. This can be achieved by the individual soldier spending a little more time educating himself. One cannot expect someone else to do it for him.

It is naturally not necessary that a soldier become a bookworm. It is not necessary that he spend all of his off-duty hours in libraries. But it is necessary that he attempt to pick up something new in the way of knowledge every day. Through knowledge only does man grow.

We deplore the fact that in America, where opportunity for advancement is so great, some people do not advance merely because they do not make full use of the facilities available for increasing their general knowledge. With so much happening in the world today, it is important that members of the armed forces know the meaning of what is happening.

With non-commissioned officers capable of understanding world events, it follows logically that the men under them will have a great deal more respect for the non-coms rank.

Strictly Editorializing

SOME MEN HERE probably think the ROTC cadets who began arriving for their summer training period over the weekend have a pretty easy time of it, but that is not the case. We spoke to a photographer Monday morning who witnessed their arrival and recorded it pictorially for The Bayonet, and he assured us that their officers and commissioned officers really put them through their paces.

He reported a somewhat amusing incident, which really proves our point. It seems that one of the cadets arrived a little later than most of the others. As soon as he locked his car—and, by the way, they must relinquish their car keys to the provost marshal for six weeks they are here—he was ordered to turn over his civilian clothing to the supply sergeant. All this occurred before he drew his army uniforms, leaving him with nothing more than his underwear and socks.

Naturally, he complained that he had nothing to wear, but his complaints fell on deaf ears. The photographer was not able to hang around long enough to find out what the cadet did about clothing. We imagine, however, that though he might have had to improvise for a few hours, he eventually was outfitted. This seems to be evidence enough, at least, that the cadets are not pampered. For the six weeks they are in training here, they are GIs just like everyone else.

WE ARE EXCEEDINGLY pleased that Congress has passed the draft law despite the many protests they undoubtedly received from their constituents. Although The Bayonet would like to have seen a universal military training bill enacted, we are, nevertheless, glad to have some sort of legislation to aid in building up the strength of the army.

We anticipate an increase in the number of troops at Fort Benning as a result of the draft legislation since Fort Benning is so obviously the logical site for basic training. We hope the army department will see fit to send us some of the draftees.

Chaplain's Corner...

THE SPIRITUAL ARMOR OF A CHRISTIAN SOLDIER

By CHAPLAIN H. B. VARNER

The great Apostle Paul advises us "to put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Ephesians 6:11.

Friends, I am convinced that there is an enemy in our midst against which we had best be fully armed. That enemy, according to both human experience and Holy Scripture, is crafty and invisible. He is the devil. Call him what you will, but this is certain: "It will be the devil to pay unless you arm yourself to do effective battle against him."

Many of us are not effective soldiers of the Cross for two reasons. First, we do not know how to wear the "whole armor of God" or we refuse to wear it. Secondly, we do not feel that there is any danger, and, consequently, we feel that there is no necessity to arm ourselves morally and spiritually to do effective battle against the tremendous forces of evil. Any such view leaves us wide open to the fiery darts of the crafty evil one.

Paul said of his day: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world." Unfortunately, we are having to wrestle against these same things now, and the battle will never be completely won, once and for all, until the Kingdom of God shall have come on earth.

God needs millions of recruits in His army, men and women, boys and girls, who are willing to wear and use the whole armor of God. Won't you join in the most glorious battle of all—the one for "God and Country," the one for righteousness and truth?

It seems the gate broke down between Heaven and Hell. St. Peter appeared at the broken part of the gate and called out to the devil, "Hey Satan. It's your turn to fix it this time."

"Sorry," replied the boss of the land below the Styx. "My men are too busy to worry about fixing a mere gate."

"Well then," scowled St. Peter, "I'll have to sue you for breaking our agreement."

"Oh yeah," yelled the devil; "where are you going to get a lawyer?"

SPEAKING FRANKLY

Of all the books written about the hierachy in Washington during World War II, James F. Byrnes' Speaking Frankly stands out as the leading contender for top honors. As its title implies, Speaking Frankly is a frank approach to the problems which faced the inner circle of governmental and diplomatic experts whose task it was to settle or compromise the differences that arose during negotiations among the three big allies: the U. S., Great Britain and Russia.

Jimmy Byrnes, as a career diplomat and former secretary of state, is probably one of the most uniquely qualified men to write such a book. During and immediately following the war, he attended all the Big Three meetings of the foreign ministers. These included those held at Yalta, Quebec, Paris, Moscow, and London.

Mr. Byrnes used his shorthand notes, which he recorded during the meetings, to compile the wealth of information he has crowded into the pages of Speaking Frankly. He tells the story of the stormy sessions, which took place at the meetings, in a language easily understood by the average reader. He gives a clear insight into the diplomatic jockeying necessary for a final agreement among the world powers. He reports the difficult tasks an American diplomat faces in attempting to arrive at some conciusive agreement. He takes the reader behind the scenes at the peace conferences, telling him exactly why most of them failed. He gives credit to those who deserve it; he denounces those whose attitudes made it impossible to reach an understanding.

Oftentimes using direct quotes of men who attended the parleys, Jimmy Byrnes causes his book to be fascinating reading, which isn't always the case in this type of work.

Speaking Frankly may be found in the Main library.

"Pilot to tower, pilot to tower: Plane out of gas, am one thousand feet and thirty miles over the ocean. What shall I do?"

"Tower to pilot, tower to pilot: Repeat after me . . . 'Our Father Who Art in Heaven.'"

Mother: "Well, my child, may-be its because men only get to

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

Recognizing the exuberance and excitability of Fort Benning base ball fans as a peculiar force with peculiar results, your Red Cross offers the following suggestions to make life safer for excited fans during this base ball season.

Of course, the first advice is to relax! Take it easy! Don't get excited! Sit down! However, since we realize this rule will be broken many, many times, here is what to do until the doctor comes:

Concussion: Benning fans have been seen pounding each other on the head during an exciting moment. If concussion of the brain results, lay victim down with head level, or slightly lowered. Keep him warm, call doctor. Do not give any stimulant, not even soda pop.

Fracture: If in the ninth inning rally, a fan knocks another fan off his seat and he breaks a forearm, lay him down with forearm resting across his chest. Call the doctor.

Dislocation: When Fort Benning mania takes its vocal form, a jaw is often dislocated in mid shout. Place your thumbs in victim's mouth on the back teeth, your fingers under his chin, press down and back with the thumbs and pull forward with the fingers. Tell the fan to shut up after that!

Bites: Being a good fan requires considerable concentration. Fans cannot always do two things at the same time, but they try. If a fan bites a hand instead of his hot dog in the excitement, apply a clean cloth over the wound until bleeding stops (note: remove mustard first).

Battery: Fans have been known to engage in fisticuffs. When a bloody nose results for the loser, set him up with his head thrown back, loosen clothing around the neck (he may have been grabbed by his cravat), apply cold, wet compress to the nose and bleeding nostrils.

Choking: Sometimes a dropped third strike causes a fan to choke on his sandwich. Don't try to dislodge stocking morsel with finger, but bend the disgruntled one's head and trunk toward the ground and slap him sharply on the back.

Fainting: When a Fort Benning batter breaks up a no-hit game and a fan faints dead away, lay him down with his head lowered, keep him warm, and sprinkle cold water (soda pop is sticky) on his face to bring him around.

While all of the above is written in fun, it is serious, good first aid advice, something you should remember at a base ball game, foot ball game, horse show, golf, or any other sports event.

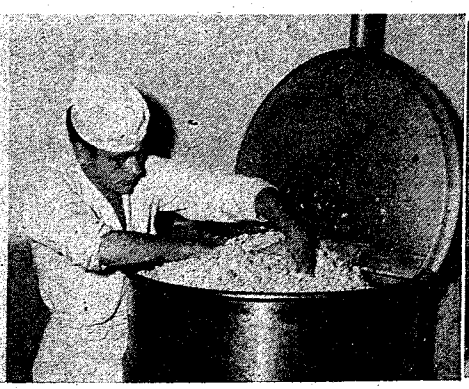
FOOD STOCKPILE . . . Stacking cases of canned milk is just one of the daily jobs of T-5 Robert B. Barabin at the post quartermaster warehouse. Counting the cases is S-Sgt. Arthur L. Lake. Accurate checks are important because rechecking it later is like counting the boxes in an army general classification test. This pile is just one of many at the warehouse.

HERE'S THE RECORD . . . Almost anything that anyone would ever want to know about food at Fort Benning can be found at a moment's notice on the master chart in the main office at the Infantry Center's ration breakdown building. How much did the food cost in July, 1947? How many meals were served in January of this

Ration Breakdown P



Take an average American city with a population of 25,000 say Champaign, Ill., and feed every man, woman, and child in that city three times a day with the finest food money can buy and at the same time waste practically nothing. That's the responsiblity charged to the ration breakdown section at Fort Benning.

Look at last week for example. According to Maj. A. Pfefer, post sales officer, these items went through the post quartermaster for issue to troops in various Benning units, the Station hospital and clubs: 25,085 dozen eggs 75,075 pounds of fresh meats, 52,000 pounds of potatoes, 3,000 dozen oranges, 80,000 half-pint bottles of milk and had last week been a normal week there would have been 11,000 pounds of chicken issued instead of only 5,640 pounds. But the rations of which these are only a "sample," aren't issued to the men or the kitchens or the hospital or any other unit. They go to ration breakdown, headed by Capt. Harry D. Balyeat.

To get back to Champaign, Ill. It took a lot more than 48 men to see that every kitchen in Champaign got enough food in the proper quantities last week. Authorized 58 men, ration breakdown has only 54, of whom only 48 were present for duty last week, according to 1st. Sgt. Thomas H. Kirkman, chief clerk. But everyone at Fort Benning ate last week. The difference between Champaign, Ill., and Fort Benning is that Fort Benning stresses efficiency and economy of o and treat cider er u Ini the issue for f comp the son the Th loade go b Here requ figur each of th at th the requi put DIVIDING RATIONS . . . Preparing the proper amount of food for each unit on the post is one of the jobs of Pvt. Charles W. Hall. Each unit has its own bin, thus eliminating mixups in delivery. Each unit also has its own compartment on the ration breakdown truck.

ECONOMY MEASURE . . . Waste nothing is the motto of the men who work in the Infantry Center's ration breakdown. Here Pfc. Harold E. Emery renders fat which will be used later to make lard in the meat plant.

tially the rations come in to uartermaster which in turn s them to ration breakdown urther issue to the various panies and detachments on entire post, including Law- Air Force base. Let's take oranges.

e crates of oranges are un- d at the quartermaster and truck to ration breakdown. clerks, who have the ration sts from all the companies e how many oranges go to company, say Company A e Seventh. After unloading e ration breakdown plant, crates are opened and the red number of oranges are nto baskets. These baskets are then put into a bin which has been designated for Company A. The next step is to load them into a specially compartmentalized truck, which delivers them to the mess sergeant of Company A. Sounds simple doesn't it? It is, except that oranges are just one very small item, at least as far as the 48 men who worked last week are concerned. But that's the principle.

As the large picture in the center on the top of the page shows, there is a chain of command above, just like there is all over the army. Responsibility above Captain Balyeat involves on Lt. Col. Lyle J. Fitzpatrick, food service supervisor, who in turn is responsible to Col. Thomas M. Brinkley, G-4, and so on up through the chief of staff to the commanding general.

FOR COOLING DRINKS . . . Hot weather calls for plenty of citrus fruits for cold drinks, and this ration breakdown truck has plenty—at least T-4 Albert Floyd thinks so. The truck has special compartments, and when loaded for delivery, each unit's rations are put in separate compartments to avoid mistakes.

BENNING BUTCHERS . . . A big job at the ration breakdown meat plant is paring the cuts so that each organization gets its proper rations. Here T-5 Edward W. Martin is cutting the pork roast shown below as Pvt. Andrew J. Alexander hands Pfc. Aaron Rentie, center, another one to pass along to the cutter.

S . . . From a mass of dough in the hands of Sgt. Clayton E. Pier- oaves almost ready for baking is a matter of a few seconds with this he quartermaster bakery. Using the scales to make sure the loaves r weight is Pfc. Oscar R. Lewis, back to camera.

Net Meet Playoff Slated This Week

Court Sextet To Be Chosen For Annual Army Tourney

Selection of Fort Benning's tennis delegation to the Third army tournament which gets under way on the local officers' club courts next Tuesday swung into the final round this week with the slating of officer-enlisted men eliminations.

Although the date for the playoffs has not been set, it was expected that the top six enlisted courtmen of the post will meet a crack sextet of officer players on the composition courts of the officer's club later this week. The exact date for the elimination will be posted on the officers' club bulletin board as soon as it has been definitely established.

Following the officer - enlisted elimination matches, six court men will be selected to defend Fort Benning's 1947 title when Sanford H. Webster, who walked the army meet opens here Tuesday last Sunday afternoon by edging

In the role of contender for the post singles crown, Daniels very nearly upset pre-match predictions Sunday when he held an advantage of two match points at the 5-3 game of the third and final set.

On the top-side of a 40-30 count that would have netted him the title, Daniels succumbed to a long rally by Webster which deuced the score, and permitted him to go on to win four games in a row.

Doubles Sunday

In the doubles finals, which are slated for the officers' courts at 2 p.m. Sunday, Webster will team with George Beatty to battle it out with Daniels and Don Driscoll. Consolation sets between players who were eliminated during the first two-rounds of play in the tournament will precede the doubles matches.

Although it has been definitely established that Webster, Daniels, Driscoll and Beatty will be four of the six officer netmen to enter the playoffs with the enlisted players, a playoff will be staged to determine the remaining members of the sextet. Slated to contest for the No. 5 and No. 6 berths on the officer delegation are J. W. Baumgartner, Dale Balliett, John Booge, and David Silver.

Despite the fact that finals in both doubles and singles competition in the enlisted eliminations still are to be played, the six-man delegation to play off with the officers already has been named.

Yang Loses

In addition to the singles finalists, Richard Collins and Charley Hubert, the four men who got past the semi-finals also will compete with the officer courtmen. They are Sung Chai Yang, Robert Livingstan, Fred Blair, and Joe Thompson.

Yang, a member of Benning's Third army squad last year, bowed out in the semi-finals of the enlisted tourney to Collins Monday.

Following the Hubert-Collins championship sets, the enlisted men's doubles will be staged on the courts across from the Infantry School building.

Although complete entries have not been received by the post special services office, it was expected that three, and possibly four, army installations of the Third army area will send representations to the meet.

All matches in the Third Army classic will be played on the tenout-cas courts of the Benning Officers' club, and Churk Evert, pro at the club, will be the meet's chief official.

Medics Nip Truck Nine With Spree

Tally Seven Runs In Seventh Inning

The post Medics bounced back from last week's upset loss to the Lawson field Flyers Sunday afternoon by staging a seven-run splurge in the seventh inning to dump the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers 11-7 and strengthen their hold on second place in the league standings.

Although the Truckers held a 6-4 advantage going into the lucky inning, Medic batsmen nicked pitcher Willie Love for seven bingles, and sent 11 swingers to the batters' box during the eventful seventh.

The Truckers managed for a total of 15 hits off right-hander Arthur Boljer of the Medics, but didn't get them in the proper sequence as their best effort in any one inning came during the second frame when they scored twice.

Three-Run Lead

The Medics jumped to a 3-1 lead in their half of the first when after singles by Bob Chandler and Charley Hubert had given the Truckers a run to open the first, they scored a trio of counters on singles by Harold Newman and John Graves, and a walk to lead-off man Otto Loroesh.

Tw oerrors by the docs and a pair of stolen bases put Lucky Bryant on third and Chandler on second in the Trucker half of the third. Herb O'Brien then drove a single into center to score both runners and knot the score at 3-3.

However, the Medics went ahead again in the last half of the inning by virtue of a two-bagger by Loroesh and a single by Graves.

Truckers Go Ahead

A pair of stolen bases by second-baseman Flash Wilson of the Truckers permitted the visiting nine to deadlock the tilt again in the first of the fourth. After poking a single with one down, Wilson stole his way around to third, and came home when pitcher Love singled to left, Love, however, was thrown out at second trying to stretch his blow into a double.

While the Medics remained idle during the fifth and sixth frames, the Truckers pushed across tallies in each of the cantos to take a brief two-run margin. The fifth-inning counter came as the result of a single by Hubert and a double by Potter, the Truckers' only extra-base hit of the game, and one-baggers by Emerson Studevan and Wilson provided the 204th with another counter in the sixth.

Pinch-hitter Weiczorek and first-baseman Paul Lewish were the big guns in the Medics' seventh-inning attack, each driving in two runs. Batting for left fielder John Adams, Weiczorek doubled to bring in Bridges and Lewish after the latter had singled to score Ted Thorsen and Newman.

Kerr Correct

New York—Buddy Kerr, Giants shortstop, set two major league marks in 1947, playing 68 errorless games and handling 383 consecutives chances safely.

Hall's One-Hit Exhibition Falls Short, ASU Loses

Larry Hall, willowy right-handed workhorse of the 3440th Army Service unit mound staff, still can't figure out why a one-hit slab performance, featuring 15 strikeouts and only five walks, plus a four-for-four plate demonstration doesn't equal victory.

The speedy starboard twirler, who has played tough-luck ball all season, brought along his bag of tricks, but apparently forgot his rabbit's foot last Tuesday night as he was shaded 6-5 by the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers whose only hit of the game was a scratch infield single by pitcher Willie Love.

Hall's Tuesday night disappointment probably was his biggest since he dropped a 2-1 heart-breaker to the powerful Infantry School detachment Profs at the outset of the Benning league's first half. In that game, as in the one with the Truckers, the rangy hurler was nicked for the winning tally in the home half of the last stanza.

Although lanky Larry gave up only five bases on balls and whiffed an average of one and two-thirds Truckers per inning, his fielding mates committed eight errors at crucial moments, four of which figured in the winning ninth-inning scoring.

When the flashy ASU moundsmen sensed that a bang-up pitching job wasn't going to be enough to notch a triumph, he contributed his best clubbing efforts to the ASU plate attack. In four trips, Hall hit a single, a double, and two triplets to figure in every tally chalked up by the ASU nine. He scored three of the times he reached the bags, and batted in the other two service unit counters.

The probable answer to the Truckers' success was their daring exhibition of base-running. The sprinting Truckers practically made a race track out of the base-paths as they stole eight bases to the ASU's two.

Although his performance was overshadowed by Hall's efforts, Truckers turned in a fine job of pressure pitching. Faced with occupied bags throughout most of the game, the chunky Trucker southpaw fanned 10 ASU swingers at advantageous times to leave nine opposing runners stranded.

The Truck team, without getting a hit, took a 2-0 lead in the last of the fourth when Charlie Hubert walked, catcher Potter reached on an error by ASU receiver Lee Saucier, and Emerson Studevan was safe on a fielder's choice to load the bags. Hubert was forced in when Ernest Eldredge walked, and Potter came home after Flash Wilson had hoisted out to left.

A long triple by Hall was instrumental in knotting the score for the ASU lads in the top of the fifth. The lanky twirler's blow brought in first-baseman Bridges, who had walked with two out, and he scored on a wild pitch by Love.

Almost the same setting prevailed in the seventh when two ASU tallies gave the visitors a 4-2 margin. Hitting his second three-base blow of the game to center, Hall drove in Bridges, who had walked, from first, but he held third until shortstop David Waits banged a single to right center.

Love's bingle, which came in the seventh frame, accounted for another Trucker run. After stealing second, the galloping pitcher came all the way in to score when catcher Saucier let one of Hall's pitches get through him and roll back to the screen.

The Truckers made it a 4-4 ball game in the home half of the eighth when Saucier committed a two-base error on Bob Chandler's bunt by throwing wild into right field. Stealing third, Chandler came in when Herb O'Brien rolled out from second to first.

Profs Trounce Artillery Squad

Wares Two Round-Trippers Fail To Overcome ISD Leads

The Infantry School detachment Profs breezed into command of the Fort Benning intra-mural league last Wednesday night by blasting the 999th Field Artillery battalion 20-7 for their sixth straight triumph of the second half.

The Profs' win followed a 7-6 upset triumph by the Lawson field Flyers which dropped the post Medics from a deadlock for the top berth last Sunday afternoon, and left the ISD clan the only undefeated team in the post race.

Ware Homers Twice

Right-bander Bill Welton, who supplemented his fifth mound triumph of the year with a three-for-four record at the plate, shared ISD batting laurels with Harold (Blondy) Burnett, second-sacker, who hit safely in four of his six appearances. Burnett's quartet of one-baggers drove in three Prof tallies.

Towering Erskine Ware, artillery first-sacker, starred at the plate for the host nine by poling two of Welton's offerings over the left-field scoreboard to bat in four runs. Ware's two homers put him in the league lead in that department with three for the circuit's second phase. It was the first time during the 1948 campaign that a Fort Benning player has been able to clear the barrier twice in a single game.

The lanky artillery slugger's first round-tripper came in the second frame when the bags were empty, and his second blow came in the third with two mates on board.

Pitcher Ejected

McClintock, who started the game for the artillerymen, was ejected from the game by Umpire Claude Harris after facing two Prof batters in the second inning. The dispute between McClintock and the officials took place when Harris ruled that the artillery pitcher had committed a balk.

When the artillery starter was bounced, Pat Young came to the hill for the host team, and gave the 17 runs on 16 safeties during the game's remaining six stanzas.

After scoring once in the first on a walk to George Hill, a sacrifice by Herb Lauve, and a single by Burnett, the ISD squad went on a rampage in the second to score seven times on five base blows. The big second was climaxed with a long triple to left by Lauve with two Profs on base.

Profs Score Four

Young held the ISD bunch scoreless in the third canto, but had trouble finding the plate in the fourth when the visiting Profs pushed across four tallies on only two safe hits.

In addition to giving up two walks during the fourth frame, Young was charged with a wild pitch which permitted Clyde (Woody) Burt, who had reached on an error, to score from third. Bill Brooks and Bill Hojnacki drew the two passes while base hits were chalked up by Joe Smith and pitcher Welton.

Seventh-Stanza Uprising Gives STR Close Tilt

The Student Training regiment moved into the first division of the Fort Benning League last Friday night by staging a seventh-inning uprising to down the 328th Ordnance battalion 6-5.

Two strikeout wizards, Willie Weaver of the STR and Bob Glover of the Ordnance, put on a display of whiffing technique for the spectators as a total of 31 batters went down on strikes during the game. Weaver, the winner, chalked up 17, and Glover left 14 students fanning the breeze.

Fred Davis, Frank (Lefty) McGowan and Bill Church led the STR batting attack, each getting three safe blows. Big Stan Letonsky, who paced the league in practically every department on the hitting roster during the league's first half, was the only ordnance swinger to get more than one base knock. In four appearances, Letonsky collected two singles and a double.

The STR scored its first tally in the opening stanza when Davis singled, stole second, and scored when McGowan slammed a one-bagger to center.

A costly error by ordnance right-fielder Giles put the STR a two-run margin in the third. Davis, who had led off with a single, scored when Giles fumbled, and McGowan, who blasted the blow to right, was safe at third. A single to right by Brown scored McGowan.

Crossing the plate once each in the fourth and fifth innings, the ordnance again knotted the score. Letonsky singled to start the fourth, moved to second when Bob McCachren drew a base on balls, and scored when Bob Cannon lashed a base hit into center field. The ordnance's fifth-inning counter came when Henry Wyatt singled to left, stole second, and reached the plate when STR first-sacker McGowan committed an error on Bassett's infield roller.

The ordnance team picked up a two-run lead by scoring lose tallies in the sixth and seventh innings. A triple by pitcher Glover and a single by McCachren put the visitors one run ahead in the sixth, and a walk to Bassett, a double by Letonsky, and an infield error on Glover's grounder added another in the seventh.

With two down and a runner on third, the STR launched its seventh - stanza attack, scoring the three runs which gave the students their winning margin. After pitcher Weaver had struck out, Davis slammed a long three-bagger to right, and held base while Gibbs went out on strikes. McGowan then singled to score Davis, and went to second on a passed ball. The STR first-baseman came on around to score when Brown got to second on an infield error. Brown scored the third run of the inning when Church doubled to center.

Zamyslowski Gets TKO On Airborne Ring Card

BY VINCENT GIARRATANO

A huge crowd of fight fans enjoyed a thrilling card highlighted by a technical knockout as the Airborne battalion presented its third summer boxing show in the open - air arena last Friday night.

The big thrill of the evening came when Joe Zamyslowski of Company C scored a middleweight bout TKO over Harry Vance of Company D.

Although he was outpointed in the first and staggered in the second, Vance gamely answered the bell after each round to face Zamyslowski's onslaught. Vance went down in one minute of the third for the count of nine, and Referee Marsh decided that he was unable to continue the fight, and awarded a TKO to Zamyslowski.

In the lightweight class, Tony Cunha of Company F, in a return match with Jim Holt of Company D, again defeated his opponent by unanimous decision. Jim Bierman, also a Company F lightweight, who has shown marked improvement during his last few fights, outpointed Bill Johnson, a clever Company D boxer, to win by unanimous verdict.

In one of the fastest bouts of the evening, Wilson Tohnika of Company C and Raymond Martinez of Company A stubbornly crowded each other through three hard-fought rounds which ended with a decision in Tonika's favor.

Jim Hart, another Company F scrapper, made up for his loss two weeks ago by taking a decision from hard-hitting Richard Diaz of Company G.

In addition to the Vance-Zamyslowski fracas, two other middleweight contests brought excitement to a boiling point. John Meyer of Company D started off the middleweight division by outpointing Bob Schlosser of Company C, and Bob Carter, using a fast in-and-out style, outfought Roy Henry of Company F to a three-round decision.

Heavyweights Herman Hasbrouck and Ken Manley concluded the evening with a typical sledge hammer blow fest, which Manley won by decision.

Army Needs More Medics

Major General Raymond W. Bliss, surgeon general of the Army, today called on reserve officers of all sections of the Medical department to undertake extended active duty tours.

In June, General Bliss said, 1,411 captains and lieutenants are required. All service is on a voluntary basis, he explained.

More than half the requirement is in the Army Nurse corps where there are 820 vacancies, General Bliss said. The Medical Service corps requires 265 officers, Medical corps 203, Women's Medical Service corps 75, Veterinary corps 29 and Dental corps 19.

Applications for active duty tours may be forwarded to the Surgeon General of the Army, Washington 25, D. C. Necessary forms may be obtained from the office of the surgeon general or from any army or air force recruiting station.

Prof-Medic Tilt To Climax Slate For Circuit Play

Friday night's clash between the Infantry School detachment Profs and the post Medics will be the feature tilt on this week's slate in the post intra-mural diamond league.

In the significant game, the ISD team will be trying to make it 21 straight wins for the 1948 campaign, while the docs, who have dropped only one till during the circuit's second-half activity, will be endeavoring to throw the second-half race into a deadlock and go into a playoff with the Profs.

At present, the Medics have a comfortable margin over the third-place Airborne Troopers. Although the 'chutists have lost only one game this half, they ave played only four contests, while the Medics have won six out of seven.

Manager John Erb of the Medics probably will stake his title hopes on right-hander John Graves, who has an eight-won, one-lost record for the season. However a change may find Arthur Bottjer, another right hander, who has won all three of his second-half starts, performing on te mound, and Graves holding down an outfield post.

Either Collis (Lefty) Lehner or right-hander Hal Grinols, both unbeaten in the 1948 season, probably will get the startet's nod from manager James Walker of the Profs. Ace Ike Silcox of the ISD mound staff is an unlikely choice for the Medic assignment since he pitched Wednesday's game against the Lawson field Flyers.

No change in the batting or fielding lineups of either team is anticipated for Friday night's game.

Should the Medics get past the powerful Profs, they still have the Airborne team to dispose of. The Trooper-Medic clash is slated for next Thursday night.

Tonight's tilt, the cellar-dwelling Seventh Regimental combat team again will be trying to crash into the league roster's win column when they tangle with another lowly team, the 328th Ordnance battalion.

The ordnance team will appear on Sunday afternoon's program opposite the 3440th Army Service unit, and the fifth-place 204th Transportation battalion Truckers will get a crack at the Airborne Troopers on Monday night.

Herb Bench, who steered the Fort Benning Doughboys to the Third army diamond championship last year, has been named to pilot the post nine in its 1948 campaign.

Bench, who has coached the Airborne batallion Troopers during the intra-mural race this year, came to Fort Benning near the end of the 1947 intra-mural schedule, and worked with James L. Walker for the duration of the season. The 1947 Trooper edition, under the tutelage of Walker and Bench, won the post championship.

A veteran of more than 12 years of diamond experience, Bench has had a smattering of college, semi-professional, professional, and army baseball. His coaching and skipper-ship duties have been with army and high school teams.

After playing four years with the Springfield, Mo., State Teachers' college nine, Bench was inked to a pact with the Springfield Cardinals of the Western association in 1939. The majority of his playing with the two teams was at third base.

Following his stand with the Springfield pro team, Bench coached high school athletics for two years prior to entering the army in 1941.

Although his asignments with the army didn't allow him time to participate in diamond activities during the war years, Bench resumed his baseball in 1945 by breaking into the lineup as second baseman with the Baker field, Calif., air base delegation. His team won the Western Flying Training command championship that year.

In 1946, Bench held down second base for the Mather Field, Calif., team. The Mather field team, which was not a member of any conference, had a successful season that year, winning approximately 20 out of their 25 games.

Several teams in the post intra-mural league's second-half race have been at least partially inactive during the last 10 days because of the weather man's pranks. From the period June 13 to June 20, three of the scheduled tilts were postponed.

Hardest hit during the off-week were the Airborne battalion Troopers, whose inactivity during the period allowed the post Medics to get a firm hold on the loop's No. 2 spot.

Although the meteorologist didn't have anything to do with the postponement of their game on Monday, June 13, rain did prevent the Troopers from getting a crack at the last-place Seventh Regimental combat team last Thursday night. The June 13 game between the 'chutists and the Student Training regiment was delayed for military reasons.

Rain and wet grounds deferred a significant tilt between the Lawson field Flyers and the Infantry School detachment Profs Monday night. The Flyers, who already had upset the second-place Medics, were geared to snap the Profs' winning streak at 20 games when old man weather stepped in and called a halt.

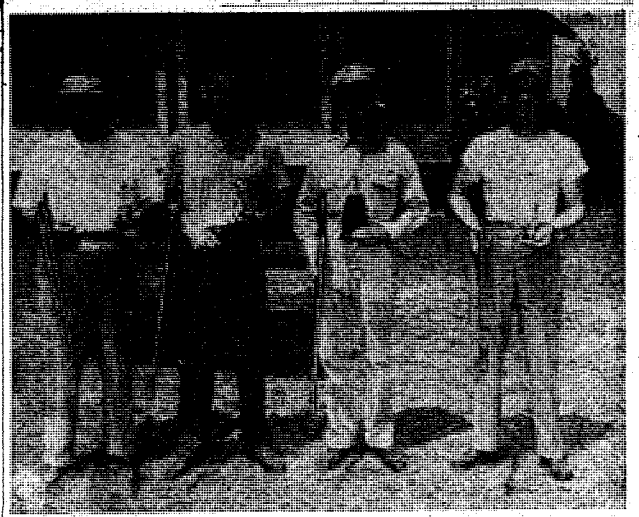
Most people go to ball games with one purpose in mind—to watch the sport. However, cases have gone on record where fans have given up their positions in the stands and have gone out on the playing field to do something about the way things were going.



One of the most recent incidents where a spectator has gone to the field to try and help his favorite team out occured when a New York Yankee fan, disappointed with the showing made by the Bronx Bombers, stepped out on the field and tried to give Joe DiMaggio a bit of fatherly advice.

The officials, however, didn't think so much of this fan's idea for putting a little more spirit into the Yankee team, and tried to get him off the diamond. After leading the arbiters a merry chase around Yankee stadium, one of the men in blue finally tagged the energetic enthusiast out as he was demonstrating a slide into second base. Apparently this convinced the gentleman that he had better stick to pop bottles, peanuts and scorecards, for he returned to his seat and let the Yanks continue playing their brand of ball.

Another occasion on which a spectator got into the thick of things happened during the Michigan-Southern California Rose Bowl classic of 1940.

The immortal Tommy Harmon of Michigan's backfield already had made three terrific runs for touchdowns, and was headed for a fourth when he met his nemesis—a USC enthusiast in a hat and overcoat.

The spectator who had left his seat in the stands when he saw Harmon streaking for another touchdown with clear sailing, dumped the all-American short of the double stripe. Asked by law-enforcement officers to explain his actions, the fan replied: "Well, somebody has to stop him, don't they."

Loomis Is Winner Of Benning Skeet Shooting Tourney

Cracking 92 out of 100 birds during the regular firing, Loomis tied Maj. E. B. Kitchens of the Benning squad to necessitate a 25-bird shoot-off. At the end of the first shoot-off, both gunmen dropped three birds to remain deadlocked, but the Greenville shooter splattered 23 in the next shoot-off to edge Kitchens, who only chalked up 20.

Winner of Class B was Lt. Col. W. G. Dolvin of Fort Benning, who splattered 87 out of 100 birds, and C. A. Peacock, Jr., of Columbus took Class C honors with 91. Capt. W. M. Douglas of Fort Benning bagged 84 out of 100 to take first in Class D competition.

In the two-man team event, Lt. Col. D. E. Hoffmeister and Capt. R. E. Carey won the Class A shoot, Dolvin and Dr. C. A. Peacock, Sr., captured Class B, Lt. Col. C. E. Woodrow and Peacock, Jr., outshot their Class C opponents, and Class D team honors went to Douglas and Dr. J. H. McDuffie.

Following the shoot, trophies were awarded to Loomis for high gun, and to the winner of each class. Each member of a winning two-man team was presented a brassard.

Troopers Top Softball Loop

With the softball season nearing the end of the first half, the Airborne battalion softball team continued its winning streak last Monday afternoon with a 5-2 win over the 30th Medical group.

The game was highlighted by the stellar playing of the Trooper outfielders as they went through their fifth straight errorless tilt. The fielding gem of the game was a difficult catch of a deep fly by Enrique (Ohnie) Ohnesorgen to stave off a possible rally by the Medics.

Jesse Budd, playing his first game for the Airborne team, banged out two hits in three tries, and Nick Spoon was credited for the win by twirling a neat three-hitter.

By virtue of a forfiet by Lawson field Monday night, the Airborne team stepped into the top position in the post league through a precentage-point average based on games played and won, their record being ten wins and one loss.

Closely following the Troopers is the Infantry School detachment nine. Their record of eight wins and one loss puts the ISD Reds behind in percentage points only.

"Where to, sir?" asked the chauffeur respectfully.

Lifeguard Finds Army Has Many Advantages

Young men have been known to work their way through school by taking jobs as camp counselors and lifeguards in the summertime, but Pfc. Lewis W. Leary has a permanent job as lifeguard at Russ pool and has already been credited with two years of college although he never finished high school.

Hailing from Charlotte, N. C., Leary decided in 1940 that the army had advantages for him that school didn't. So he left at the end of his sophomore year at H. P. Harding high to take advantage of the Travel, Education and Career program. He got travel, education and career, all right—plenty of it.

The fall of 1942 found him at Camp Pickett, Va., assigned to the 10th Engineer battalion (Combat) of the Third Infantry division. November 8, 1942 found him hitting the beach in North Africa, the first of many for him. In fact, by the time he left Germany on March 31, 1945, he not only had hit four beaches but had gone through 10 campaigns. He'd had travel, had risen to private first class on his career, and while he'd learned a lot, his formal education hadn't benefitted too much.

Home on temporary duty for 45 days, he was discharged instead in June, 1945. He then went to work as a civilian employe of the Charlotte Quartermaster depot as a repairman of electric and standard typewriters. That was education, too, but not all he wanted. Then, last February he heard that the Seventh Infantry combat team was being reactivated so he reenlisted for more travel, education and career.

Well, he travelled to Fort Benning, he has his private first class rating, but this time he went to work on his education. In May, 1947, he took a general education development (G.E.D.) test at Burton Junior high school in Charlotte. That gave him the equivalent of his high school education. On June 14 he took his college level G.E.D. test at the information - education center here at Benning. Having passed that, he is credited with two years of college. And he actually only finished two years of formal high schooling.

Next on the schedule for the ambitious lifeguard are USAFI courses. Having been in the combat engineers, Leary decided that perhaps a real engineering degree might be more than worthwhile in civilian life. So he has decided to map out a program to get as many credits toward a degree as possible by taking the L and E courses.

No-Hit Tiff Gives Bullet Team Split

BY BOB PHILLIPS

In games played since returning from maneuvers, the Bullet diamondmen have split even, losing one to the Tuskegee Tigers, and winning a no - hitter from the Alabama Blues.

Tangling with the Blues at Bullet field Thursday night, southpaw Willie Conerly handcuffed the opposition for nine innings to pitch the Bullets to a 6-0 no-hit triumph.

In chalking up his masterpiece Conerly struck out 15 Blues batters, issued two walks, and allowed only two runners to reach first base. The only ball hit beyond the infield, a short fly to right, was successfully gathered in by Harry Dandridge.

Aiding his own cause, Conerly collected two hits to top the Bullet stickmen in that department.

Guardsmen Get Okay To Attend Service Schools

Approximately 1,500 enlisted guardsmen have been authorized to attend regular army service schools to acquire the specialized technical skills needed to operate and maintain the modern equipment assigned to the new National Guard.

"It is anticipated that many more men will apply for this instruction during the coming months, and they will be trained in every school needed to keep approximately a billion dollars worth of equipment in combat serviceable condition, Major General Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, stated.

National Guard training follows the pattern established for the regular services, and all service specialist schools are open to guardsmen. The courses of instruction last from six to 30 weeks.

Equipment repair and maintenance courses are being given at the Armored School, Fort Knox, Kentucky; the Artillery School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma and Fort Bliss, Texas; the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia; the Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Virginia; the Ordnance School, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland; Ordnance Automotive School, Atlanta, Georgia; Signal Corps School, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey; Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Virginia; Anti-Aircraft Artillery and Guided Missile School, Fort Bliss, Texas.

The guardsmen are taking such courses as combined welder, light anti - aircraft control equipment, radio and radar repair, auto mechanic, armor and artillery mechanic, motor mechanic, machinist, instrument repair and many others.

The 250,000 guardsmen expected to participate in field training exercises this summer will not lack expert attention. Guard medics," studying at the Medical Field Service, School, Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, have perfected their techniques through such courses as dental mechanic, medical equipment, X-Ray Procedure, medical technician, medical laboratory technician, surgical technician, and pharmacy procedures.

Third Division Society Holds First Meeting

Plans for a banquet, discussion of possibilities of sending delegates to the national convention in Pittsburgh, Pa., and appointment of new committee members occupied most of the business of the last meeting of the newly formed Outpost 31 of the Society of the Third Infantry division.

With the appointment of a social committee, it was tentatively decided to plan a banquet for early in July for all present members of the outpost and former members of the Third Infantry division, in either World War I or II, stationed at Fort Benning or living in nearby communities. Working with S-Sgt. Gregory Barwick on the social committee are Pfc. George J. Frost, Capt. Clander Keough and T-3 Merrill Harrison.

Enthusiasm for making the trip to Pittsburgh for the annual reunion July 22 through July 24 was high with many members stating that they would be able to assist in furnishing transportation. The convention will be held at the Hotel William Penn. It is expected that official delegates from the Seventh Regimental outpost will be chosen as soon as possible from among members able to attend the convention.

Added to the membership committee at the meeting of June 15 were S-Sgt. Barwick, Sgt. Rudolph Jantz and 1st Lt. Howard L. Patterson.

BOB FLOCK WINS FEATURE IN FIRST STOCK CAR RACE

Averaging better than 60 miles per hour, Bob Flock, oldest of the famous Atlanta racing trio, set the pace for the 40-lap feature event at the inaugural races on Columbus' new half-mile speedway Sunday afternoon.

Despite the fact that arrangements to cover the grandstand had not been completed for Sunday's classics, approximately 2,500 racing enthusiasts withstood blistering heat to see the opening day races.

Only one spill occured during the afternoon's program. Dugo Wells of Atlanta turned his vehicle over trying to make the turn on the northeast turn on the dirt track during the feature race, but escaped without injury.

A race between two women drivers, Sara Christian and Mildred Williams, both of Atlanta, concluded the day's program. Ethel Flock, sister of Bob, also was scheduled to enter the feminine contest, but all other machines had been withdrawn due to overheated motors and need of minor repairs.

Marshall Teague, driving for the Hill Mootr company of Columbus, placed fourth in the feature event after not being able to get his car in shape for any of the preliminary heats.

The first heat was won by Doug Cox of Greenville, S. C., the pace for the second preliminary race was set by Flock, and won the third heat. Racing against drivers, Sara Christian placed second in the first heat, and Mildred Williams came in third in the last preliminary race.

EM Recalled To Active Duty

Former S-Sgt. Albert L. Bridges, of Lawson Air Force base, exchanged his stripes for second lieutenant's bars at base headquarters last Saturday morning and departed for Keesler Air Force base, Miss., where he will undergo 20-weeks training as a chemical warfare officer.

Originally from Albany, Ga., he entered service in December, 1942, and earned his commission and pilots' wings at Turner Air Force base, La., in September, 1944. During his tour of duty in the ETO in 1945 he served as a B-25 pilot.

He left the service as a second lieutenant in the fall of 1945 and rejoined the air force at Lawson in July, 1947.

While stationed at Lawson he served with the adjutant section in base headquarters and later on the staff of the S-3 section.

Final Tests Set For 150 Night School Students

The Army Education center's spring quarter will end for approximately 150 soldier-students Thursday night, June 24, when examinations will be given in some 21 courses.

School officials said the spring session, which opened April 15, offered fewer courses and had fewer students than any previous quarter because a large number of Fort Benning troops were away from the post a part of the time participating in the joint Third army-Ninth air force maneuvers at Camp Campbell, Ky.

With the beginning of the summer quarter on July 12, it was announced, the education center will resume its normal scale of activities since the local population has increased with the return of the maneuver troops and the building up of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team.

Although curricula plans have not been completed, practically the same courses will be given during the summer as were given during the last quarter, Lt. John E. Cunningham, Infantry Center education officer reported this week. He further pointed out that several new courses will be added.

Four college courses will be offered, including college algebra, American history, college freshman English and psychology. These courses are primarily for regular army officers who have not completed two years of college work, Lieutenant Cunningham said, but added that they are also open to all persons who are high school graduates or who have successfully completed a high school level general education development test.

Also included among the new classes scheduled for the summer session is one in Americanism which is designed to prepare dependents of military personnel for American citizenship.

Post Links Squad Raps Jacksonville

Fort Benning's officer golfers, entertaining the Jacksonville Naval Air station links representatives for the second time this year Saturday afternoon, stroked out a 52-11 point advantage under the Nassau system of scoring.

Tentative plans have been made between the two links teams for a return match on the Jacksonville layout during September.

The post's 14-man team for Saturday's matches was taken from the top golfers on the Fort Benning Officers' Club course ladder. However, several of the first 14 were not present for the matches, and it was necessary to select golfers occupying a lower rung to fill out the team. The Jacksonville team was virtually the same one which played here early in May.

No. 1 Team Splits

The match between the No. 1 delegations of the two installations resulted in a split of the three possible points. Maj. James Hungate took one and one-half points from Chief Joe McDonald, inter-service links champion last year, and Lt. Col. W. R. Cole divided three points with the navy's Grego.

In the second match of the day, E. Scott of Jacksonville took all three points from Maj. Mills Brown, but Maj. A. J. Hoebeke took two and one-half points from Brush of the Flyers to get a split on the team points for Benning.

From that point on, the Benning delegation took all three points in every team match, and the only navy tallies taken during the latter part of the program came when Col. W. Lewis dropped one and one-half points to Jacksonville's Daun.

Bristol-Maloney Wins

The team of Lt. Col. Matt C.C. Bristol and Lt. Clement Maloney won a grand-slam decision over R. W. Faller and A. L. Berg, and Capt. Phillip Grant and Lt. Col. E. P. Eschenburg tamed to take all nine points from the Henderson-Jackson team of the Flyers

Although Col. Lewis lost one and one-half points to his navy opponent on an individual basis, his teammate, Capt. Nelsn Lindstrand, took three points from Piva of the navy to capture three counters in the team competition.

The last two Benning teams to tour the course took all nine possible tallies in their matches. Col. Frank Ward and Lt. Col. Robert J. Rosa triumphed over H. H. Bush and B. M. Jones, and Lt. Col. Shields Warren and Lt. Turgeon blasted R. W. Miller and T Baranski for the final army win.

Ewing Appointed Automotive Head

Replacing Col. George M. Dayis who has been transferred to the adjutant general's office in Washington, Lt. Col. John T. Ewing has assumed his duties as chief of the Automotive section of the Infantry School, officials have announced.

Prior to his new assignment, Colonel Ewing was committee chief of the operations committee of the Automotive section in which capacity he had served since his arrival at Fort Benning in July 1947.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy with the class of 1938, Colonel Ewing commanded the 720th Amphibious Tractor battalion in the Pacific during the war.

Following his graduation from West Point, the new Automotive section head received his first assignment with the 25th Infantry at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. After a short tour in the air corps where he was a student flying officer, he joined the Ninth Infantry regiment at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where he remained for three years.

In 1942 he joined the 706th Tank Destroyer battalion at Camp Chaffee, Ark., later taking over as commander of the unit with which he served until 1944. When the 706th later was converted into three separate amphibious tractor battalions, Col. Ewing assumed command of one of the units, the 720th.

A native of Yuma, Ariz., he was assistant G-4 with the XXIV corps in Korea for 18 months before returning to the states.

Explosion, Blaze Wrecks Building

Ordnance Structure Razed By Series Of Tank Blasts

Fort Benning experienced its biggest fire since the Post Exchange grocery conflagration in 1943 as flames set off by an acetylene tank explosion last Thursday completely gutted a motor vehicle repair shop of the 516th ordnance battalion at Harmony Church area. Damage was estimated at approximately $89,000.

Located on the back side of the Harmony Church area, part of the section now being used by ROTC for training, the building, occupied by the 516th Ordnance battalion, housed personnel, vehicles and equipment. The building burned completely to the ground and along with its contents, was a complete loss.

Gas escaping from a leak in one of the acetylene welding units stored in the building was believed to have ignited and exploded, setting off a series of other explosions, setting the entire structure ablaze. The blasts caused by the exploding acetylene units blew the roof completely off and it was a matter of a few minutes until the entire building was a complete shambles. Approximately eleven welding units were stored in the repair shop.

Flames set off by the series of blasts kept firemen fighting the blaze, at bay. Estimated damage to the building was $29,000 and $60,000 to the equipment, including approximately 10 vehicles, according to Fire Chief Gilbert Ward.

In fighting the blaze, five firemen were overcome with heat exhaustion and sent to the Station hospital for treatment. Treated were Herman A. Hall,

General Burress Addresses Grads In Initial Talk

"One of the great unsolved problems we infantrymen have is to get men to come into the infantry," Major General Withers A. Burress, Fort Benning commander, stated in his address to graduates of Advanced Officers Class No. 2 at exercises in the Main Theater Tuesday morning.

"We can do this," he continued, "by making life in the infantry more attractive through additional recreational and other activities."

In his first major address to a graduating class since he assumed command of the Infantry Center last month, General Burress attributed much of the success of the infantry, which he called the most modern in World War II, to efforts of the Infantry School in the interim between World Wars.

Throughout his entire talk, the post commander stressed one theme which he considers characteristic of the infantry. That is, he pointed out, that the infantry pays more attention to the human element than any other branch of service. "In the infantry," he emphasized, "the machine serves the man, not the man the machine."

The future regimental commanders and division general staff officers were told, "You are dealing with the human element." The difference between a professional soldier and an amateur he had explained to his audience, is that ability to recognize the intangibles of war, a recognition that comes from association with troops and which, in his opinion, is the real art of war.

"An infantry division, an airborne division, an armored division, any division with infantrymen in it is not a machine," he told his listeners. "It has a heart and soul and mind and body. We must approach it as such. That results in leadership."

Large Guard Unit Arrives In August

Two Week Session For 31st Division

7,500 Troops To Encamp At Harmony Church Area

The 31st Infantry Division, Alabama-Mississippi National Guard, the largest single unit to train at Fort Benning this year, will "invade" the reservation August 1, for its second annual post-war summer training encampment, it was announced this week.

An exceptionally full two-week's training schedule, planned to include night operations, has been planned for the "Dixie" Division, which will number at least 7,500 men. There is also a possibility that this figure may be increased due to the recent influx of recruits to the National Guard.

The 88 hours scheduled for training include rifle marksmanship, artillery fire and service practice, night marches and bivouacs, and unit training. The latter will include training on company, battalion and regimental levels with field problems. There is also expected to be a division problem during the encampment.

During the encampment the division will be able to operate as it normally is not able, since during the rest of the year training consists of "armory" work, inasmuch as the organization is necessarily composed of small units scattered throughout the two states. According to t ire

Post Observes Fourth of July

Commemorating the nation's 172nd anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Fort Benning personnel will observe Independence day with ceremonies and celebrations here during the coming holiday weekend.

Since Independence day falls on a Sunday this year, the United States army has designated Monday, July 5, as a legal holiday. Post officials have declared that only the necessary fatique, guard and administrative personnel will perform duty on that day.

Appropriate selections by the 72nd army band will be rendered near the flag pole shortly before noon. The 319 th Field Artillery battalion will fire the salute to the union, one gun for each state, from a position adjacent to the flag pole at noon.

Playing of the National Anthem by the band will conclude the ceremonies.

Fireworks on the post will be permitted at Doughboy stadium and on the Blue Polo field, Infantry Center authorities have announced.

Weather Outlook

Thursday—Partly cloudy. Maximum temperature 94, minimum 69.

Friday—Clear and warm. Maximum 97, minimum 72.

Saturday — Clear with little change in temperature. Maximum 96, minimum 72.

College Classes On AEC School Summer Term

Registration for the summer term of the Army Education Center night school here began Wednesday, with the enrollment expected to reach it's highest peak before the session commences Monday July 12.

In accordance with the Army's desire for a two-year college level, or its equivalent, for all regular officers, the center has added four new college level classes. The new features include College Algebra, American history, college composition, and Phychology.

The new courses are not, however, restricted to officers seeking the two-year college level. They are opened to all Fort Benning personnel.

Army supply administration on company level and small business management will be retimed to the curriculum by popular demand. Several other new classes have been added to the curriculum, including intermediate high school English, intermediate Russian, and an Americanism course which is designed to prepare foreign born soldiers and dependents for their American Citizenship examinations.

Two classes will be held on Monday and Thursday nights, with the first class beginning at 6 p.m. and the second commencing at 8 p.m.

Registrations will be taken at the Army Education Center's registration office, located on the school grounds.

SPORTS DOINGS ON RADIO SHOW

Sports announcers Andy Piercy and Lewis McAtee begin a new series of informal sports discussions on activities at Fort Benning and elsewhere this Saturday morning over radio station WDAK at 7:45.

The 10-minute "whirl in the world of sports" will bring to the "mike" from time to time outstanding sports personnel at Fort Benning and surrounding vicinity.

Individual members of the 1948 Doughboy baseball squad will be introduced to the fans before the season gets under way and throughout the campaign. Outstanding visitors will also appear.

Saturday's session will have an outstanding baseball personality, who will join the staff in ports "chit-chat".

BSM Awarded To Combat Vet

Veteran of ten years service, T-Sgt. James N. Logue of Headquarters company, first battalion, Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team, received official recognition for outstanding wartime service last week when he was awarded the Bronze star in a ceremony at Stillwell field.

Cited for his service during three campaigns with the 91st Infantry division, Sgt. Logue was presented the medal by Lt. Col. Everett W. Duval, commanding officer of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team, as troops of the Seventh paraded in his honor.

Participant in the Italian campaigns at Arno, the Gothic line and the Po Valley, the 31-year-old sergeant served in the European Theater from April 12, 1944 until, August 25, 1945 and with the 362nd Infantry regiment.

Aside from the Bronze star, Sergeant Logue also wears the Combat Infantry Badge, ETO ribbon with three battle stars, Pre-Pearl Harbor and American theater ribbons and the Victory and Occupation medals.

Guard Units

training schedule published by the division, the objective of the encampment is to complete the training of individuals and units of company level and below, in subjects that cannot be easily accomplished during armory drill periods.

While at Fort Benning the division will be quartered in the Harmony Church area. Each unit is expected to bring to Benning the available essential training equipment required by the units training program.

A veteran division of the Pacific War, the 31st was part of the Sixth and Eighth Armies. Its 124th Infantry Regiment first saw action at Aitape in the South Pacific in March, 1941. In its first major engagement the regiment killed 3,000 Japs and helped trap an additional 30,000.

The division hit the beaches of Morotai Sept. 15, 1944, captured the airport and cut off 20,000 Japs besides giving the U. S. control of Halmahera Sea. April, 1945 saw the division in the Philippines, on Mindanao Island, where it cleaned out the last major Japanese resistance in the Philippines.

Twice Monthly Pay Being Considered

Expect to draw your money across the board twice a month in the future. That is the plan that the Office of the Army's Chief of Finance, charged with the responsibility of paying the Army, is now working on.

The proposed plan if approven is scheduled to go into effect about the first of next year, but in the meantime. Army finance experts want to make sure that the innovation will work efficiently. Detailed explanations with requests for suggestions have been sent to Finance Officers throughout the Army.

Under the new system each officer and enlisted man will have a basic pay card that will be transferred with him, when he changes his station. It will replace the old vouchers and pay-roll and list all pertinent details such as transfer, promotion, court martial, or any other matters which would affect his pay.

The Personnel Office will no longer be required to prepare the enlisted payrolls. All personnel work will be done in the Finance Office, where the Disbursing Officer will twice a month list the amount due each individual. It is not mandatory that all pay due be drawn at each pay period.

Through this pay plan, a man may take all his pay, or let all of it ride, if he is feeling flush, or draw any part of it and allow the remainder to accumulate.

Twice a year, June 30 and December 31, the pay card will be balanced by the Army's Central Accounting Office in St. Louis and a new card set up. Pay will be given only in even dollars except when the accounts are settled in June and December.

Further information on this bi-monthly pay plan is forthcoming, and will be puslished when the details of the plan have been completed.

Laundry Worries Mount Due To Oppressive Heat

Amelioration of the laundry situation at Fort Benning for the remaining hot months, while hoped for, cannot be promised, according to Major A. Pfefer, Quartermaster Laundry Officer.

At present the delivery of the laundry is running behind and will probably continue to do so because of the additional work load caused by the hot weather and the lack of corresponding additional working personnel, he declared. Delivery will average about two days late until the troops again revert to woolen uniforms.

The first break in the normal schedule came, Major Pfefer said, with the visit of nearly 600 West Point cadets early in the month, all with soiled clothes. The cadets had top priority since they had to leave within three days for Fort Knox, Ky.

The cadets' laundry, however, cannot be entirely blamed for the lag. The laundry is now handling about 5,000 bundles each week from men living in barracks, plus 900 bundles from officers and men of the first three grades living in separate quarters. With each man authorized 25 pieces, including three khaki shirts and three khaki trousers, it is impossible for the laundry to wash and press all the clothes without delay. The khakis alone, Major Pfefer said, come to 30,000 pieces each week.

Another problem to contend with he said, is the vast amount of linen and white clothing required by the hospital and by kitchen personnel in the summer. In addition to this, it is necessary to give the hospital one-day service because of their requirements of surgical robes, linens, aprons, white uniforms and pajamas.

Nation Observes 172nd Birthday Of Declaration of Independence

Eight score and 12 years ago the Continental Congress met in a red brick building is what is now downtown Philadelphia in order to seek a more solid union of all the 13 colonies.

Philadelphia was hot and sticky that summer day in July as 56 delegates unanimously voted and passed an a resolution that was to be the beginning of these great United States.

On July 4, 1776 adopted, by the Continental Congress, the Declaration of Independence had officially severed the bonds of government held on the 13 colonies by a British government.

On June 10, a committee of five men had been named to draw up a resolution uniting the colonies. Thomas Jefferson led John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston in creating the legislation.

Primarily the work of Thomas Jefferson, the Declaration stated the grievances of the American people. It rightfully accused the British government and the king of England of persecution and tyranny. The people of the colonies had had enough. They wanted their freedom.

The vote was taken and the resolution was unanimously adopted. Outside, the people of the new United Colonies of America acclaimed the bill with cheers. The ringing of church bells was surmounted with the deep, sonorous pealing of the Liberty Bell—still whole and uncracked at this time.

Throughout the land there was joy and celebration. And a pride in the new found personal confidence of a united people.

Throughout the long bitter years of the war which followed, Valley Forge and Saratoga, when there was no money to supply troops of the colonial armies, people remembered July 4, and observed it as the birthday of their country whenever they could.

Finally, the Revolution was over and the United States was an actuality. And since then the people have remembered and over, and the United States was celebrated the Fourth.

Politicians made speeches to their constituent, parades were held, veterans revered as, they donned their faded and patched uniforms. Gala community picnics were held as small boys whooped it up dodging between the feet of men reeling in the whisky barrel exuburation of freedom. Independence day became a legal holiday.

Fireworks became the symbol for the "grand and glorious fourth" and the day since then has become one where the younger generation has its chance to join in with the rest with ardent fervor and antics.

Parades, marching bands, celebrations, ceremonies, long-winded speeches,—are all a part of the jubilation of the Fourth of July, Independence Day.

This Sunday, July 4, will be no exception as the nation gratefully observes the 172nd anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

LAWSON SGT. ATTENDING STAFF SCHOOL AT CRAIG

Along with 200 other airmen from air force bases throughout the world, M-Sgt. William B. Gilmer of the Lawson Air Force Base Air Inspector's office is attending the Air Special Staff School at Craig Air Force base, Ala.

Gilmer will attend the Maintenance course of the assistant air inspector's school, recently inaugurated by the Air Force for enlisted personnel. Students at the school receive the same instructions, use the same facilities as those provided for the officers air inspector's course. The curriculum is divided into phases to insure intensified training in individual classifications.

Sergeant Gilmer entered the service here at Fort Benning in 1933, with the 83rd field artillery and transferred to the air force in 1934. His first tour of duty at Lawson began in 1939 when he served with the 97th Observation squadron. The unit departed for Miami, Fla. to maintain coastal patrolin 1941.

Gilmer then joinedthe Third Air Commando group,an outgrown of the 97th squadron, and served in the southwest Pacific for nine months. He returned to Lawson in 1935 when he was assigned to Task Force Crossroad, which later moved to the Marshall Islands in the Pacific.

Upon completion of Operations Crossroads, sergeant Gilmer returned to Lawson to be assigned with the base air inspector's section.

Cadet's Letter To TIC Chief Lauds Benning

That the recent all-out effort made by the command and personnel of Fort Benning to inform the Military Academy class of 1949, during its visit here, concerning the latest developments and techniques in the infantry was appreciated, was made evident in a letter received this week by Major General Withers A. Burress, post commander. The letter, which follows, was written by the Cadet Battalion Commander, John E. Sutton.

Dear General Burress,

For the class of 1949 I would like to express our appreciation to you and to all the personnel of your command for the many courtesies extended to us during our stay at Fort Benning. We are indeed grateful for the unselfish way in which you granted us use of all available facilities on the post. I know the class enjoyed itself greatly on the golf course, in the swimming pool and at the Officers Club.

Perhaps what we noticed even more was the impressiveness of the instruction given to us at Fort Benning, the quality of the instruction undoubtedly being the best encountered on our entire trip. We were also well pleased with the precise, complete, detailed organization and administration of our visit.

We shall remember our visit to Fort Benning as instructive, enjoyable, and most worthwhile. We hope that you will convey our thanks to all concerned with the success of our stay.

Sincerely,
John E. Sutton
Student Battalion Commander

Greatly elated, some of the Students recounted their experiences in airborne jargon such as "that '47 has some prop blast" or "I pulled my reserve before getting that opening shock."

Students are required to complete a total of five jumps in order to qualify for their wings.

Foreign Officers Continuing Study

The steady flow of foreign military officers passing through the Infantry Center for courses of instructions will continue with the scheduled arrival in August and September of officers from the Costa Rican, Mexican and Chilean armies.

Their period of training at Fort Benning is just one phase of the various courses of orientation and study the foreign officers will undertake at various United States Service Schools.

Momentous Decision

Shades of 1940-41. I'll be back in a year! Remember? But it never turned out that way.

The world situation was tense then, and although we have just gone through another World War, it has reached the critical stage again. The international situation is even more threatening than in the summer of 1939.

The drive to mobilize manpower in order to discourage Russian expansion finally gathered pace in a race against time with the passage of the peacetime draft bill, which was signed by President Harry S. Truman June 24. The first group of men from the ages of 18 through 25 will be drafted beginning September 22. It is a blind fool who fails to realize that this is not a phony crisis.

Just what effect will the new draft bill have upon the American people. About a year ago, according to polls taken, the public generally was against any type of peacetime conscription. Six months later, UMT was being boomed and it gained medicore favor as an "essential measure under present circumstances." Recent developments have awakened the public, and now they sense trouble, and from experience we have learned it is best we be prepared.

The detailed picture of world developments have not been fully presented to the American people, who sense rather than know world conditions. We are more involved now than at any time in our history. The climax could come at any moment. Just take a look at what is happening in Berlin today!

Our military leaders, and representatives of the armed forces, who realize more than anyone else the situations and problems have been pleading for a passage of some sort of legislation to get more men into our armed forces to successfully carry out our European Recovery Plan and to meet all the demands for help to countries in Europe and Asia which are determined to fight for their independence. For a while it looked very much like such legislation would become a political football. Mighty dangerous in times like these.

Representatives of our armed forces, who have a better knowledge of conditions than the general public, have been speaking with utmost frankness and without pulling puches. They not only better realize the situation, but are fully aware of the huge holes in our armor. Even the most bitter isolationist realizes that the defense of the United States in this age of long-range bombers, atom bombs and bacteriological warfare cannot be assured by mere protection of the American continent alone.

Fifteen hundred or 2,000 miles was safe enough as a defensive zone for any country 15 or 20 years ago. Today when bombers have a reported radius of at least 8,000 miles with a full load, no place can be considered as safe from attack. Time has moved fast, but still there is no one with an understanding of modern war methods that believes that we have entered the "pushbutton" era. But then again, no one believes either, that a country militarily unprepared can recover from devastation that can be wrought with the first blow.

War need not be inevitable. Enemies of democracy may hesitate to risk war with the U. S. if they realize that America is getting ready for a showdown. We must be prepared to make a show of strength. The United States tried the appeasement policy, but it brought us to the brink of a precipice. In the past we have been too soft. We can better initiate our recovery program and help the democratic seeking people of the world to recover only if we show a determination to meet force with force.

Time is running out. The ground forces, the Navy and the Air Force need men able to carry out the requirements of modern fighting. And that can be achieved only by intensive training and a sufficient number of men for the three services. The next few months will write momentous history, not only for this country, but for the whole world. This is sensed by the country at large.

We must be determined to meet the emergency and not shirk it. Two years have shown us that voluntary enlistment will not give us the kind or the numbers of men that are needed. Selective service is essential.

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

THE FIREWORKS OF ONE POLITICAL convention has just subsided and now we can look forward soon to another hectic week of the same. Just what makes a man want to become president? That's the ambition of every politician in the nation, but of course not everyone is a politician. It is the ambition of every young man to become president. That is until he reads his first comic book, then it's Superman, Secret Agent X-9 or Dick Tracy.

Those of us who nurtured the desire to become another George Washington lost all ambition usually after our first report cards in grade school. We just knew we couldn't make the grade, so we set our goal as second baseman for the New York Yankees, Silly Boy! The job of president of these United States requires outstanding ability and deep thinking . . . To Us deep thinking is unpopular because it is so humiliating. When we think hard, we admit we do not understand the problem.

CONTRARY TO THE OPINION of some we don't think statesmanship in this country is on the decline. We haven't noticed any of our statesmen deciding anything worth while, including the nomination for the presidency . . . Most of the country's great men spring from a life of drudgery—and generally as far from it as possible. As for becoming president, we'll leave that to the politicians. As for us, we'd love to idle by the sea and spend the day in reverie, and dream of the glories yet to come—and so would every other bum.

The modern American Soldier is no dummy, that's why he's in the Army. The answers returned to the question "What in your opinion is the best way to get young men to volunteer for the Army without raising pay," are straight forward intelligent answers. In fact the answers given by men here on the post are some of the most intelligent we have seen or heard anywhere.

IT WOULD DO WELL FOR the recruiting forces to consult the soldier on why he's in the Army, and why he has chosen it as his career. Words directly from the lips of these men is where you will find the wisest strategy to a good recruiting campaign . . . You can print all the pamphlets and data available, but the best selling point is the American soldier himself.

"YANKEE PASHA"

YANKEE PASHA, another tale of stirring adventure by Edison Marshall, is good reading. It is fast-moving and imaginatively written, and another best seller to Marshall's list of top books.

Jason Starbuck, buckskin-clad young Lochinvar from the Adirondacks, rides East in 1794 to encounter Roxana Reil, bold, proud and beautiful. Their destiny was to wed, but before their marriage is accomplished, five year's search from the harbors of Salem to the harems of Tartary are encompassed.

Starting with the supposed death of Roxanna while on her way to France in the hands of the Barbary pirates, the tale takes Jason on a journey following dim footprints to Algiers, Constantinople and then across Tartar lands to the court of the deposed Cham of Tartary.

Becoming, of necessity, a Christian renegade in the Moslem court, donning turban and Scimitar, Jason proves his boyhood training with the long rifles to win fame and acclaim among people whose only measure of respect for another is the ability to kill, to loot and to lust. Lilith, a blue-eyed Circeserian slave girl, affords a sharp contrast to the proud Roxana and meets an end which surpasses her wildest dreams.

Edison Marshall has created this tale of magnificant adventure in the romantic tradition of his other well-known books - Benjamin Blake (the movie, Sons of Fury), The Upstart and Greatsmith.

"FRIEND OR FOE?"

By

Chaplain Racy L. Akins

He is deathless. He cannot be killed or banished. His companionship is ever-present at all times, in all places, in all activities. He never tires nor feels the need of rest. Every hour of the day and night his voice is heard in admonition, rebuke, counsel, and encouragement. He will not be denied. His motive is to gain for people eternal life, but if resisted he has the power to consign to eternal degradation.

His name is Conscience!

Men untouched by preachments finally cringe under his incessant demands. His sway upon the human soul is more conquering than sermon or warning, more powerful than entreaty or persuasion, more dominant than love or honor. With his two barbs, memory and remorse, he pursues every violator of right and eventually becomes his worst foe and greatest embarrassment. He may be silences, but not forever! He may be resisted, but he cannot be put away! His ministry perishes not with fleeting years nor dissolves as time melts into eternity. For he will have the final word and he will speak it fully—even to eternity. Tragic it will be when he sets up his pulpit in eternity and preaches to the unrepentant: "Son, remember"

What a friend he is when benevolently treated, when his promptings are accepted as blessed, his pronouncements as binding. It is thus that,—with Divine guidance, the individual yields to the God of whom Conscience speaks— he dispenses peace to the human heart, stability to the life, and a true motive for living.

For Conscience is a medium through which God touches the soul.

Guard: "Ten prisoners have broken out, sir."

Provost Marshall: "Did you give the alarm?"

Guard: "No, I called the Medics. It looked like the measles to me."

"Bill (the barber): "You say you've been here before? I don't remember your face."

Airman: "Probably not, it's healed up now."

"I had sworn to be a bachelor. She had sworn to be a bride; I guess you know the answer— She had nature on her side."

Two girls were being followed by a lone male on a beautiful spring day. Finally one of them, in apparent indignation turned to the young man and exclaimed, "Either you quit following us or go get a friend."

Your Red Cross

By MURRAY E. HILL

If you have served in Germany you will be interested in knowing that the most active civilian group in Germany working to lift their countrymen from the mass of physical, mental and morale depression left tiret by Nazism, then by defeat, is the reconstructed local German Red Cross Societies in the American Occupation zone.

Organized basically like the American Red Cross but with typical continental emphasis upon medical and hospital services, these Red Cross Societies claim a total of 274,000 volunteer workers. Typical of these societies is the Bavarian. Working under painful conditions, but with the American people pretty solidly behind it, the Bavarian Red Cross operates centers for released German war prisoners, homes for the aged, orphans homes, disabled veterans centers, refugee camps, recreation camps, tuberculosis sanatoriums and homes for the blind. This is all over Germany.

Helping these German Red Cross Societies today to meet their tremendous needs are the other Red Cross Societies such as Swiss, Swedish, British, Canadian, Autralian, and American. The greatest single contribution made since the wars of was the American Red Cross' gift of tons of surplus articles, including such items as comfort supplies, sports equipment, craft shop materials, clothing, medical and hospital supplies. These of course were made possible by your donations.

It is interesting to know that the staff today has attracted to it's rolls men and women with records of courageous struggle against and persecution by, the Nazis which read like thrillers. Truly the German Red Cross with it's present staff and police and the backing of the Red Cross Societies of the democratic nations will have a tremendous influence on shaping the future of the German nation.

He was sitting at a restaurant table sawing away at the tiresome seed leg of chicken. Finally he put down his knife and fork, leaned over to the next table, pointed to the bottle of A-1 sauce, and said loudly to the lady sitting at the table: "Pardon me, madam, would you please pass the liniment? This crow has rheumatism."

"Sure, I did."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, if yez think I'm a liar, g'wan and put her out yerself!"

Varied Program Sooths Patients

BY MERRILL HARRISON

Clara Barton may never have heard of such things as psychosomatic medicine, but it's a sure bet that she has used many of the same methods of alleviating the mental misery of the soldiers of her day that modern medical men find so successful today in helping to effect cures for their patients.

The picnic that Red Cross recreational workers had for 35 patients of the Station hospital last week was boating, eating and games out at the beautiful Yuchi Reservation, at least as far as the soldiers were concerned. But that picnic, first of several outings and trips scheduled, was planned with the approval and attention of medical officers at the hospital, who realize the therapeutic values of such entertainment for men who would otherwise be forced to lie in idleness if entertainment was not provided by such agencies as the Red Cross. And idleness is not conducive to recuperation.

Morale Builders

Working hand-in-hand with the medical personnel, the Red Cross has asembled a program of entertainment and recreation that helps the patients while away many otherwise dreary hours, pick them up and give them the feeling that someone cares about them. For those patients who can walk there is almost constant entertainment in the recreation hall; for patients confined to their beds, the three recreation workers, Misses Hazel Turnage, Patsy Sparks and Dorothy Soley, visit the wards, usually daily, and thus help the hours go faster.

A partial list of entertainment scheduled in the recreation hall includes movies, (the same as shown in post theaters) jam sesions with the victrola, card parties with girls, ping pong, badminton, clasical records, reading and just talking.

Difficult task for the three workers is entertaining the men in the wards. On their frequent trips through the wards, the workers bring the patients games, cards, books, magazines and newspapers. For those patients who are unable to read normally, a book projector has been acquired. With this machine, the pages are projected on the ceiling and the patient, usually flat on his back, is thus able to read.

Frequent Tours

Movies are often shown in the wards and occasional parties are held for the benefit of the bedridden patients. In addition, the workers themselves often spend as much as entire afternoon with one patient, playing cards, cribbage or other games.

In another effort to relieve the often monotonous time spent in bed and to cheer the patient a bit, the workers have been able to get flowers for the men from greenhouses on the post and private individuals. These are put in the mess halls and in the private rooms of seriously ill men.

With the approval of attending physicians who carefully check each case, the workers also arrange outside entertainment. The men are frequently taken to athletic events on the post and such affairs as last week's picnics. Next month for example, a watermelon feast is scheduled, as well as a treasure hunt. In addition, there have been several invitations from nearby persons and business concerns to bring the patients who are able, to parties and trips on private estates and through local plants.

Working with Special Services and the Veterans Hospitals Camp Sbows, the post Red Cross workers also schedule available touring shows and other entertainment. Last month for example, Miss Josephine Stein, well-known portrait artist, did 36 individual drawings of patients at the hospital.

PLUTOCRAT . . . The luxurious rustic lounge at Yuchi Reservation appealed to Cpl. Clifton M. Carr who loafed comfortahly while most of the other picnickers were boating. The picnic was arranged by Red Cross personnel at the hospital with the help of the Columbus chapter. The private grounds were made available by Claude Yarbrough of Columbus.

FOR THE FUTURE . . . Brigadier General Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant commandant of the Infantry School gives the graduates of Advanced Officers Class No. 1 some ideas on what they can expect after they leave Fort Benning, plus advice on how to use the information they gained here.

SOUND ADVICE GIVEN TO TIS GRADUATES

Advice and warnings keynoted the address of Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant Infantry School commandant, to graduates of Advanced Officers Class No. 1 at the Main Theater Saturday morning, June 19. "The Army," he told the 116 officers, "is different from other professions.

Lawyers can reach for a book, or a doctor can refer to an X-ray during an operation, but an Army officer has to have his knowledge in his head because the book was probably left behind at the port of embarkation. You either know it or you don't know it."

The speaker also warned his audience that, besides knowing their profession they must also be able to get along with their fellow-workers. As the first class ever to have instruction in staff work on a division level at the Infantry School, the graduates were told that they must be team-workers. He also informed them that once they put on the star of the General Staff Corps, an honor they should consider highly, they will have to realize that in addition to their professional ability, their character will be judged every time they sign or initial a plan or an order.

"All the advice I can give you," he stated, "is, 'Know your job. Be the best major or lieutenant colonel possible.'" As Benning graduates the men were advised that they would eventually hold many jobs and would be expected to do them all well.

In a slightly informal vein, General Shepard however, slipped in some pungent remarks. A hard worker himself, he reminded the graduates that "more people are killed annually recreating, than working."

Awarded Promotion

Promotion of Pfc. Albert O. Huff, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 325th Infantry Regiment to the grade of T-5 has been recently announced. Corporal Huff is assigned to the Publications Section.

A native of St. Petersburg, Fla., where he attended St. Petersburg High School, Corporal Huff served with the 88th Infantry Division in Italy.

NEW RETIREMENT BILL PASSED BY CONGRESS

Members of the armed forces will now be able to retire at the highest grade they held during the national emergency, Army Times reported this week.

With the passage of the regular-reserve retirement bill, Congress has made it possible for regular army personnel to retire at the highest grade held between Sept. 9, 1940 and June 30, 1946. The legislation also provides for a system to allow nonregulars of all services to earn retirement pay based upon the amount of work they performed in civilian components, and sets up a new system for eliminating below-average army and air force officers.

After four years of attempted legislation, only President Truman's signature is now required to complete the act, which will become effective when necessary machinery is set up by the armed forces. This may be as late as Jan. 1, 1949, officials have declared.

Text of the 54-paragraph statement bill includes:

". . .each enlisted man of the regular army or the regular air force. . .upon completion of thirty years of service, to include his active service and his service on the retired list; be advanced to the highest temporary commission, warrant or enlisted grade satisfactorily held by him while on active duty. . . during the period Sept. 9, 1940, to June 30, 1946, and shall receive retirement pay for his length of service at time of retirement based upon such higher temporary rank."

Personnel retired with disability allowances will be accorded allowances with the highest grade held during this period, as well, the Times story said.

Third Division Society Meets

Adoption of a constitution, naming of committees and members and discussion of a social program featured the meeting of "Cotton Bailers" Outpost 31, of the Society of the Third Infantry division Tuesday evening, June 15.

The local's constitution was voted on and approved at the meeting orans of the Third Infantry division, and will be forwarded to national offices in Washington, D. C.

Plans for a vigorous social program were discussed, and a social committee, consisting of S-Sgt. Gregory Barwick, Pfc. George J. Frost, Capt. Clander Keough and T-3 Merrill Harrison, was appointed.

Added to the membership committee were Barwick, 1st. Lt. Howard L. Patterson and Sgt. Rudolph Jantz. The group also elaborated on its plans for attending the national convention of the society in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 22-24.

Loop Pilots Make Dough Selections

Thirty Games, Two Tourneys On 1948 Post Diamond Slate

BY LEWIS MCAFEE

Final selection of candidates to try out for the 1948 Doughboy squad has been made, and a schedule of approximately 30 games, exclusive of tournaments, has been virtually worked out for the post baseballers.

According to the poll of managers, Tom (Spike) Gallagher is topmost among the favorites for the catcher's position. Gallagher, who received 10 votes, will be assisted behind the plate by Willie Griffin of the Medics.

Herb Lauve, whose fielding record as a first-baseman with the ISD Profs this season has been unsurpassable, will try out for the initial-bag assignment along with big Stan Letsonky of the 328th Ordnance, who has been the league standout in long-ball hitting this year.

In a dead heat for the second-base spot as far as balloting goes are Bob Kinard of the Airborne line and Harold (Blondy) Burnett of the Profs. The records indicate, however, that Burnett has played a slightly better game at the keystone bag than his adversary even though Kinard has handled more than twice the number of chances accepted by the ISD infielder.

The team tryouts probably will have little or no effect on the outfield since only four candidates have been accepted, and manager Bench undoubtedly will carry one utility fielder on his squad throughout the season. Chosen for the outer gardens were Bill Brooks and Clyde (Woody) Burt of the ISD, Len Carney of the Troopers, and Harold Brown of the Student Training regiment.

Ralph Terry of the 'chutists who is high on the circuit's list of hitters with a .440 average, will be battling it out for first-string thrid-baseman with Joe Smith of the Profs, whose average of .395 at the close of the first half has dropped to .333 during a second-phase hitting slump.

Although the selectees represent the only palyers on intra-mural league teams which Bench and Walker are interested in giving tryouts for the post delegation, diamondmen who have not had an opportunity to play during the local schedule were encouraged to report for next week's drills.

TWO TOURNEYS

The 1948 Doughs will have only four days of practice before their first game of the season with the Marchester Millers on July 11 at Gowdy field.

Although Bench is trying to shuffle his schedule a little to close of some of the long idle gaps now left on the slate, approximately 30 tilts, to include games with both service and semi-pro teams, will be on tap for the Benningties this year.

In addition to the regular schedule, the Doughs will participate in both the Third army and Georgia state semi-pro tourneys. The state classic will be from July 21-26 at Thomaston, Ga., and the army tournament will be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., during the latter part of August.

Airborne Edges ISD Reds By 3-1

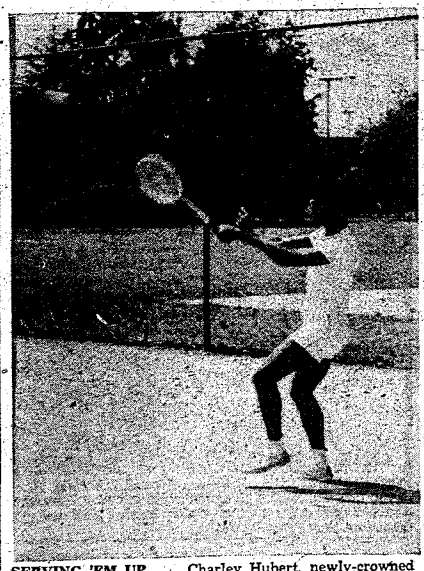
BY VINCENT GIARRATANO

In the long-awaited tilt between the two leading teams in the scramble for first place in the post softball loop, the Airborne battalion took a 3-1 victory from the Infantry School detachment Reds to move into the top spot with a one-game lead last Wednesday afternoon.

Showing a lot of hustle and determination, the Airborne lads overcame a one-run lead secured by the ISD in the first inning when, with one away, Bob Liddell walked, stole second, and advanced to third on a passed ball. He finally was driven home on a sharp single by pitcher Nick Spoone.

The Troopers pushed their winning tallies across in the sixth frame when Jesse Budd, after hitting a double, scored ahead of enrique (Ohnie) Ohnesorgen on the latter's homerun.

Spoone, who holds a fine all-around record for the season, added another feather to his cap by pitching a tight four-hitter, and coming through with two hits in three times at bat.



Troopers Slate Boxing Program Friday Night

The next card of the Airborne battalion's summer boxing program will be staged at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the outdoor arena across the street from the battalion gymnasium. Eight fast-moving bouts have been slated for the evening.

Pointing out that there still is plenty of opportunity for newcomers to get into future scraps, Vincent Giarratano, trainer and coach of the Airborne pugilists urged potential ringmen to contact the battalion athletic and recreation office for details.

250 Men Train

With three officers and 247 enlisted men, class 19 A of Company "D", Airborne Battalion has commenced its third week of Basic Airborne Training. T-5 Kenneth A. Chancey, a former cadreman of the organization, was recently discharged.

SERVING 'EM UP . . . Charley Hubert, newly-crowned post enlisted singles champ, gets off a serve during his final sets with Richard Collins. In ousting Collins, Hubert took straight sets of 6-2 and 6-3. A playoff with the post's officer courtmen will decide whether or not the enlisted champ will get a berth on Fort Benning's Third Army squad.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Now that candidates for the 1948 Doughboy diamond squad have been selected, let's take a look at the intra-mural league records, and point out some of the reasons behind their being chosen.

Starting off with the catcher's position, we find Tom Gallagher of the Airborne Troopers, who polled 10 votes in the coaches' balloting, more than any other individual candidate. Favored largely because of his fielding ability, Tom has been a nemesis to opposing base-runners through his accurate pegs to second and third. His batting average for the season has been .340, while his fielding mean is .950.

Another candidate for the receiving spot is Willie Griffin of the Medics. Although neither his fielding or batting record compares with that of Gallagher, Griffin has pulled the Does through many a tight spot by holding opposition bag-stealing to a minimum. He has muffed only 12 out of 107 chances this year for a fielding average of .888, and is clouting at a .300 pace.

Herb Lauve of the Infantry School Detachment Profs, who received nine votes for the first-base position is generally conceded the honor of being the snappiest fielder to come out of intra-mural baseball. The fancy first-sacker has handled 76 chances without error, more than any of the other candidates who are fielding 1.000. Herb also has been somewhat of an offensive standout, batting .359, leading the pack in triples with four, and having 10 base thefts to his credit.

The other choice for first base, big Stan Letonsky of the 39?th Ordnance battalion, was selected chiefly for his hitting ability. A long-ball hitter, who has been the iron horse of the ordnance team this year, big Stan is leading the intra-mural loop in three departments, two-base hits, extra-base blows and runs batted in. The hefty first-sacker has slammed out 11 doubles, three triples, and two home runs, and has driven in 25 tallies for his squad. His season's batting average of .443 tops that of all other Doughboy team aspirants. His fielding stands at .906.

Although he tied at eight votes with Bob Kinard of the Airborne battalion in the eyes of the coaches, Harold (Blondy) Burnett of the Infantry School Detachment sports a slightly better season's record than his opponent. Blondy, one of the intra-mural league's best clutch hitters, is clipping them out at .381, and has handled 25 chances without a miscue for a 1.000 average in the field. Kinard, who is considered a better base-runner than Burnett, is clouting .326, and fielding .962. Bob has accepted 53 chances this year, and has errored ofily twice.

A four-way scramble is in progress for No. 1 shortstop with Paul Bonair of the Troopers pacing the contestants. Boney, who got the nod on eight ballots during the candidate selections, has hit safely in 19 times in 58 trips for a .328 average at the plate, and has fumbled nine out of 59 chances for a fielding average of .847.

The best power-hitting shortston in the scramble is Stan Maciejozik, who made his circuit debut with the Seventh Regimental combat team during the second half. During his short time in the league, Stan has banged out six safeties, including three extra-base knocks, in 15 appearances for a .400 batting average. His fielding average of .731, however, trails the other three hopefuls for the shortfield spot.

A dependable hitter, who is faster than greased lightening on the bases is Otto Loroesh of the Medics, one of the other candidates for shortston. Otto's main shortcoming is fielding, a department in which he has compiled only a scant .776 average. With 12 stolen bases, the youthful Medic is tied for the league lead in pilferages, and his 19 runs batted in place him high on the list in that department.

The fourth aspirant to the short-field position is Herb O'Brien of the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers, who started the season a bit late, but has turned out to be a very capable infielder. He has handled 46 chances with five miscues for a .891 average. His batting average is .289, most of which has been compiled during the circuit's second phase.

Ralph Terry of the Airborne team polled nine votes to take the initial lead in the tussle for the third base position. His .440 batting average places him high on the league hitting roster, and he has committed only two errors in 21 chances for a fielding mean of .905.

Joe Smith of the Infantry School detachment, the other third-base possibility, has been in a batting slump since the outset of the second half, but still is sporting a neat .333 average. His three misplays in 22 opportunities give him an .864 fielding average.

The ISD's Clyde (Woody) Burt is the only one of four outfield selectees who is fielding 1.000. Burt, who along with his teammate Bill Brooks polled seven votes, is hitting at a .369 clip. Although Brooks is hitting at .409, he has misfielded one out of 12 chances for an average of .929 in the field.

Bullet Lads Break Even In Ball Tilt

BY BOB PHILLIPS

In their four diamond contests played last week, the Fort Benning Bullets broke even by winning two and losing two.

On Monday night at Bullet field, the powerful Bullets almost annihilated the hapless special units nine of the 325th Infantry regiment, beating the visitors by the widely-separated score of 21-2.

Receiving his first mound assignment of the season, Frank Shell of the Bullets gave up eight hits as he worked his fast balls to perfection.

In the fourth frame, the slugging Bulletmen crossed the plate 12 times on nine hits which included a towering homerun by Lew Davis. The blast travelled all the way to the super highway.

On Tuesday night, the Bullets fell victim to the Columbus Red Sox, and came off the field on the trailing end of a 6-3 count. Although the visitors never scored more than one run an inning, they managed to keep well ahead of the Bullets, who picked up their three runs in the seventh.

Singles by Andy Hardy and Hirron Collier, a sizzling double to right by Leon Coleman, and a Red Sox error gave the Bullets their three tallies.

Horace Smith started on the hill for the locals, but was yanked in favor of Lonnie Miles in the seventh. The two hurlers gave up eight hits, while their mates collected five off the twirling of Jimmie Dunham.

The Columbus Black Cardinals took advantage of nine costly Bullet miscues at Bullet field Thursday night to down the host nine 10-2.

In the sixth inning, the Bullet infield seemingly collapsed, and seven Cardinals crossed the plate on one hit and six misplays committed by the losers.

Despite the loss, it was the Bullets' Billy (Pee Wee) Humphrey, who came through with the most spectacular catch of the evening. In the third inning, the pint-sized shortstop robbed Paul Leonard of a sure hit when running at top speed, he went far to his right to perfect a one-handed stab of a steaming grounder and nip Leonard inches before he reached first base.

Miles gave up eight hits, including triples by Leonard and Jimmie Neil. Nathan Davis limited the Bullets to three safeties which included doubles by Andy Hardy and Lew Davis.

Miles gave up eight hits, including triples by Leonard and Jimmie Neil. Nathan Davis limited the Bullets to three safeties which included doubles by Andy Hardy and Lew Davis.

In a free-scoring, eight-inning game which was marred by frequent errors, the Bullet nine finally outscored the First battalion on team of the 325th Infantry regiment 11-10.

Scheduled as a seven-inning contest, the game went into extra frames following the Bullet half of the seventh, in which Gordon Burke celebrated his return to the team by smashing a four-bagger to deep left field with Hardy on base. His blow tied up the wild-scoring free-for-all at 9-9. Runs scored by Davis and Coles in the eighth provided the Bullets with their winning margin.

A short-lived rally by the losers was halted in their half of the eighth when, with one out, one run in, and the bases loaded, Burke gathered in Weaver's pop-up, and tossed to Hardy to catch Woody Woodard off first.

Lefty Conerly and Horace Smith did the chucking for the Bullets, while Thomas and Silat Marion did the pitching for the losers.

A precocious 3-year-old floored his parents the other day with this remark: "I'm getting t-i-r-e-d as h-e-l-l of your spelling around me all the time."

GRID SESSIONS CONTINUE WITH BERTHS WIDE OPEN

Although approximately 50 aspirants to the Doughboy football team for 1948 are undergoing drills four days per week, all spots for the post grid delegation still are wide open, Head Coach Joe Shepherd pointed out.

Six of last year's Doughs still are at Fort Benning, and have been going through the practice sessions with Coach Shepherd. They are Leonard Pfeifer, 225-pound tackle; Frank Tatum, 220-pound tackle; George Crimmel, 225-pound tackle; John Judd, 206-pound guard; Harry Sloan, 165-pound right halfback; and Don Sult, 165-pound left halfback.

In addition to those trying out for team positions, several of the 1947 Doughs have been employed as coaches during the pre-season drills this year. They are Arthur Hyman, coaching at end; Carl Meier, tackle instructor; Jack Seybold, who is working with the guards; and Bill Turninella and Bill Curran, who are coaching the potential centers.

Instruction for the backfield men has been turned over to Charles Knudsen, who was one of the stars on last year's all-eastern service team game between the 11th Airborne division and the First Cavalry division.

Also assisting in shaping up the Doughboy squad is Bill Harrell, former Alabama university and Great Lakes Naval air station star, who worked with the Doughboy eleven in 1947.

Holding practice sessions each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday from 6 p.m. until 7:15 p.m., Coach Shepherd is presently taking his potentials through basic drills and fundamentals with building up speed as his object. The drills include running signals, pass defense, pass receiving, kicking, form blocking, and line positions.

The coach has secured a tutor for each position on the team in order to single out and provide adequate instruction for all promising gridsters on the post.

Lehner Blanks Medical Squad

Profs Count Five In Third As Medic Defenses Falter

A hapless third inning in the field cost the post Medics their chances of slipping into a deadlock for the lead in the post intra-mural diamond circuit last Friday night as the Infantry School detachment Profs scored all of their runs in one inning to whitewash the Does, 5-0.

Unless the Profs are the victims of an upset in their Friday night game with the fourth place Student Training regiment, the ISD clan will clinch the post title by winning both halves of play in the intra-mural league. A win over the STR will give the Profs an unblemished record of 23 victories for the 1948 season.

Collis (Lefty) Lehner did the twirling for the Profs, and turned in a five-hit performance. The big Prof portsider, who recently set a new all-time strikeout record for the post by whiffing 24 batters of the 204th Transportation battalion, left 14 Medic lumbermen swinging, and walked only five.

Graves Again

Although he was tagged with the defeat, right-hander John Graves of the Medics was practically a one-man team. In addition to limiting the powerful ISD clan to four safeties, the flashy curve-baller got three of the Medics' five bingles and stole two bases.

Graves found himself in hot water during the first two innings of the game when he had the bags loaded with two out in the initial frame, and was facing a Prof runner on third with none down in the second.

However, it took big Bill Brooks, Prof rightfielder, to untie the 0-0 knot inthe last half of the third. Harold (Blondy) Burnett, who had reached on a fielder's choice, was on third, and Joe Smith, who had drawn a base on balls, was on second when big Bill lashed a single to center to score both runners.

Defenses Crack

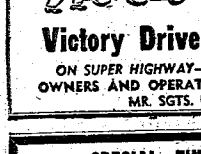
After the Profs had crossed the plate with their first two runs, the Medic defenses became momentarily unglued, and the loop-leaders scored Brooks, Bill Hojnacki, and John Seymour without the benefit of a hit. Three walks by Graves, and errors by Medic shortstop Otto Loroesh and Paul Lewish helped the ISD stage its rally.

The closest the Medics came to scoring was in the top half of the fourth frame when Graves got his second hit of the night, stole second, went to third on an infield out, but was thrown out at the plate attempting to score on catcher Willie Griffin's roller to short.

Loroesh put on the most daring display of base-running of the tilt in the Medic half of the seventh when he walked with two out, and stole his way around to third. Lehner, however, put down the scoring threat when he struck out Ted Thorsen for the Docs' final out.

Following the Prof scoring in the third stanza, Graves settled down and hurled six innings of no-hit ball the ISD failed to get a frames, the ISD failed to get a runner pas tsecond base.

A lawyer was questioning a farmer about the truthfulness of a neighbor.



"Wal," said the farmer, "I wouldn't exactly say he was a liar, but I tell ye, when it comes time to feed his hogs, he has to git somebody else to call 'em."

Ordnance Rally Fails To Catch ASU Delegation

Larry Hall, rangy right-handed hurling ace of the 3440th Army Service unit mound staff, erased the stigma of losing well-pitched games Sunday afternoon when he twirled a 9-5 victory for the ASU over the 328th Ordnance battalion.

Although Hall's performance wasn't quite so spectacular as the one-hitter he dropped to the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers last week, the lanky speedballer limited the Ordnance team to eight hits, had given up only one run before the host squad staged a ninth-inning rally.

The ASU picked up its first tally in the opening half of the first inning when third-sacker Holt singled to center, and travelled completely around the bags on an error by center-fielder Bob Glover of the Ordnance.

The home nine knotted the count in the bottom of the first when Glover reached on an error by Holt, and scored front first when Stan Hensley bagged out his 14th two-bagger of the year to right field.

Single tallies in the third, fourth, and fifth frames gave the ASU a three-run command before starter John Guth of the Ordnance was replaced on the hill by Jiles Guth, a southpaw, was charged with the defeat.

After nicking the relief twirler for another counter in the seventh the ASU lads tallied three in the eighth when Joe Coleman lashed out a two-run double, and scored on a single by Lee Saucier. The final ASU counter came in the visiting half of the ninth.

A triple by Dick Whittaker started a four-run rally for the Ordnance squad in the game's final stage. After Whittaker had slammed out his blow to right-center, right-fielder Shackelford reached on an error, and utility second - baseman Nunnamacher singled to right to score both runners. Bob Cannon smacked a single to score Nunnamacher from second, and came home with the final run on a pair of ASU misplays.

Trooper Squad Belts Truckers

The second - place Airborne battalion Troopers added another to their string of lop-sided victories for the intra-mural diamond league's second half Monday night when they blasted the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers 16-7.

By winning the tilt, the Troopers kept within range of the loop-leading Infantry School detachment Profs, but were not given much of a chance to unseat the pace-setters, whose only remaining game is with the fourth - place Student Training regiment.

The only loss by the Troopers this half has been a close 8-7 decision dropped to the Profs three weeks ago.

Although Lefty Ken Watts started the hurling chores for the Troopers, and got credit for the triumph, Ray Stem, a right-hander, came to the mound for the 'chutists in the seventh and finished the game. A total of 15 Truckers went down swinging at the offerings of Watts and Stem. The starter notched 10 of the strikeouts, while Stem got credit for five whiffs.

The Airborne team blasted starter Dean Lucas of the Truckers off the hill in the fourth stanza after he had given up 10 runs, and had failed to hold the home nine scoreless in any one inning. The last six Airborne tallies came from the pitching of portsider Willie Love.

During the first triad of innings, Watts held the Truckers utless, and whiffed six of the first nine men to face him. The best Trucker effort came in the visiting half of the fifth frame when the 204th bunch got its first two bingles of the game to score three times.

Qualifying Rounds Start For Local Links Squad

Qualification rounds for Fort Benning's delegation to the Third army golf tournament, scheduled for July 26-31 at Oliver General hospital in Augusta, Ga., will start Saturday at the local officers' club layout.

The playoffs here will consist of 72 holes of medal play, to include 18-hole rounds on Saturday and Sunday, and a 36-hole tour of the course on Monday.

Both officers and enlisted men will be trying out for berths on the Benning team, and the candidates for the squad are not necessarily golfers who made the best showings in the tourney's held on the local course this year.

Fort Benning's delegation to the army classic will consist of 16 linksmen. The total number of participants will include a four-man team, and eight individual contestants. A feature of the Third army tourney will be a senior flight for golfers who are over 50 years old.

To date, 22 post linksmen have signed up for the 72-hole playoffs. However, it was expected that several other last-minute entries would boost the total to more than 30.

Although he hasn't registered for the medal play rounds, it was expected that TWO Deverly Moore, post officer links champion, would get one of the topmost spots on the post representation, and probably will be one of the favorites in the army meet. The short, narrow fairways of the Augusta course will place at an advantage since he is a consistent straight-ball hitter.

There still is some doubt as to whether or not Gene Yow, the post enlisted champion, will be eligible for the army tournament. Since the tourney rules state that air force personnel will not be permitted to participate unless they are members of units attached to Third army, local authorities are trying to determine whether or not the Lawson field stroker could be considered eligible.

Although the enlisted tournament medalist, Paul Markland, will be in the scramble for a team position, Lt. Col. W. R. Cole, who carded the low qualifying round in the officers' tourney, expects to be absent at the time of the army meet, and has not signed up for the pre-tourney qualification here.

Silcox Hurls Four Hitter To Shade Lawson Field

The Infantry School detachment Profs hurdled another formidable barrier along the route to an undefeated season last Wednesday afternoon when they edged the Lawson field Flyers 4-1 behind the four-bit twirling of Ike Silcox.

Wednesday afternoon's tiff was a make-up game for one between the Flyers and Profs originally slated for Monday night. Rain and wet grounds forced a postponement of Monday's activity.

Although they lost their first three starts of the second half, the Flyers loomed as one of the most likely teams in the league to snap the Prof winning streak. To climax a rapid climb up the loop ladder during the past three weeks, the Lawson team pulled the surprise of the year when they toppled the then undefeated post Medics from the circuit's top spot two weeks ago.

Stellar Fielding

Stellar fielding exhibitions were turned in by both teams in Wednesday's tilt as four double plays, two by the Flyers and a pair by the Profs, went on record.

Probably the most sensational play of the game was a double killing staged by the Flyers in the fifth frame. Max Seirer, Lawson shortstop, sprinted all the way into short right field to take what normally would have been a Texas leaguer off the bat of Harold (Blondy) Burnett, and, still on the run, fired the pellet to Al Braun at first in time to double up Herb Lauve who had taken his lead off the bag.

Braun turned in an unassisted double play for the Flyers in top of the second when he took a liner hit by pitcher Silcox near first base, and beat Prof runner John Seymour back to the sack. Bill Hojacki, Prof shortstop, teamed with Lauve to engineer a snappy double play in the second inning. Hojnacki took Braun's roller near second base, raced across the bag, and whipped the ball to Lauve to nip the hitter. The Profs chalked up their final double killing in the sixth with a play which went from Joe Smith at third to Burnett at second to Lauve at first.

Profs Score

The first tally of the game came in the Prof half of the second when Burt got his first hit of the day, a single to left, went to third when Hojnacki lashed a one-bagger to right center, and raced in when Seymour reached on an error by Flyer third-baseman Dan English.

Burnett scored for the ISD team in the second when he singled with one out, got to second on a faulty throw by English, and came home on Burt's line single to right.

The Flyers squeezed across their sole counter in the home half of the fourth when Frank Ritter singled to center, went to second on a passed ball, advanced to third on an error by Prof shortstop Hojnacki, and scored when the ISD infield made an unsuccessful attempt to turn Seirer's grounder into a double play.

Threat Put Down

The Profs staged a threat in their half of the sixth which ended when Seirer tagged Burt out on the base line between third and the plate after the ISD outfielder had slammed a triple to right with one out.

Putting together two singles and a sacrifice, the ISD clan scored another tally in the visiting half of the seventh. Seymour led off with a one-bagger to left, went to second on Silcox's sacrifice, and scored on a single to right by Lauve.

Chutist Nine Blasts ASU Team 20-4

Win First Game Since ISD Tiff

After two weeks of inactivity, the Airborne battalion Troopers crashed back into the post intramural diamond scene last Tuesday night with a victory by pounding two 3440th Army Service unit pitchers for a 20-4 decision.

The game was the first for the parachutists since their heart-breaking 8-7 loss to the still unbeaten Infantry School detachment Profs on June 7. Their two scheduled tilts last week were postponed because of inclement weather.

Although he was relieved at the start of the seventh inning by Bob Cronin, Ray Stem, big right-hander, started twirling for the 'chutists, and was credited with the win, his fourth of the 1948 season. During his turn on the mound, Stem whiffed 11 service unit batters, and yielded only two walks.

The contest passed two scoreless innings before the Trooper nine bunched three safe knocks to tally twice in the top half of the third. Tom Gallagher led off in the third by drawing a walk, went to third on Paul Bonair's single to left, and scored on Ralph Terry's one-bagger to left. Bonair scored when Herb Myatt smashed a line-drive single into center field.

During the Trooper half of the fourth, the ASU infield was shuffled after DiCicco, who started the game at shortstop, muffed two rollers to permit airborne runners to reach the bags. DiCicco and Evans, who had drawn the second-base assignment at the start of the game, were jerked, and Holt and Willie Banks broke into the ASU lineup. Banks went in at second base while Holt went to third, and David Waits, whose initial duty had been at third, moved over to shortstop.

Despite the ASU shift, the Troopers went on to score four times in the fourth. Pitcher Stem was hit by a pitched ball to load the bases after Len Carney and Red Cothran had reached on errors. Carney scored from third on Gallagher's fly to center field, Cothran came in when Bonair drove a single into left, and Myatt drove a double deep down the left-field foul line to score Stem and Bonair.

After retiring the Troopers in order in the first half of the inning, the ASU delegation scored its first two runs in the last of the fifth. Pitcher Gerald Howard walked and scored when Holt slammed a three-bagger high over Carney's head in center field. A single to center by Lamb scored Holt from third.

Howard's turn on the mound for the ASU team came to an end after he had permitted the first three airborne stickmen to face him in the sixth inning to reach the bags. Sam Harrison came to the hill for the service unit, but failed to put down the Trooper thrust before all three runners had scored.

Two Trooper misplays, two base knocks and a passed ball permitted the ASU lads to score their final two runs in the last of the sixth.

After chalking up two more counters in the first of the seventh, the 'chutists came through with an eight-run outburst in the eighth, and concluded their scoring by adding one in the ninth.

Injured Trooper Gets Second Try

In January of this year, an airborne student making his first jump, suffered a broken ankle. Today, that same student, Lt. Roger W. Smith, Company C Airborne Battalion, has reentered his training class, determined to qualify for his wings.

While recuperating from his injury, Lieutenant Smith, served as executive officer of "C" Company, Airborne Battalion, assisting Captain Val S. Pierson company commander.

The Greenville Spinners dominate the first annual Bayonet Sally league all-star selections, but the league-leading South Carolinians will be relegated to the honorary status as they have won the honor to play host to the all-stars in the annual contest next Wednesday.

The all-star team is selected at this time each year to be pitted against the team leading the league at the time; in this case, it happens to be the Greenville Spinners. The all-star selections, however, include members of all eight clubs. Thus, three Greenville luminaries honored on the first team must make way for outstanding replacements from other clubs.

Third-baseman Dan O'Connel, First - baseman Benny Taylor and Catcher Bob Wellman are the three Greenville representatives who won berths on the Bayonet's all-star squad.

O'Connel, who plays the outfield just as well as he does third base, is considered to be the outstanding performer in the Sally league. Currently batting a little over the .300 mark, O'Connel is head and shoulders above the other third basemen of the league.

Taylor is a close choice over Chuck Abernathy, smoth-fieling Macon initial sacker. Taylor's heavy hitting gives him the edge in the first base selection.

Although not the bitter that second choice Doc Greene of Macon is, Wellman nevertheless is a steadier receiver, and hits the ball well enough to satisfy any manager.

So, dismounting the members of the Greenville Spinners, the host ball club in Wednesday's all star fracas the all-star combine that the Bayonet would place against the league leaders is pretty well bananced with fine fielders, heavy hitters, and top-notch hurlers.

Picked to carry on the back-stopping duties is hard-hitting Doc Greene of the Macon Peaches, who recently came into the Sally league. Greene hits the long ball, and gets a slight nod over Manager Herb Crompton of the Charleston Rebels, who is one of the peppiest players in the league. The two could easily share the receiving chores.

At first base is smooth-fielding Chuck Abernathy of the Peaches. Hitting the apple at a .359 pace Abernathy is the type of a first sacker that managers look for. He bats and throws left handed, handles himself like a major leaguer afield, and hits a long ball. As a replacement to Abernathy, we submit another long-ball hitter, Bill Adcock of the Columbia Reds.

Roy Marion, brother of the St. Louis Cardinals' Slats Marion, is a unanimous choice for the second-base slot. Although not a flashy fielder, Marion seems to have a steadying influence on the infield of the Rebs. He is one of the league's deadliest hitters, currently clouting .344.

The race for the shortstop position is wide open. Here we see shades of old Mike Gonzales' immortal remark: "good field, no hit". Here there is not much of a choice with a close race between Bobby Carson of Columbia, Dolph Regelski of Macon, and Bobby Wilkins of Charleston. Carson seems to be the steadiest of the trio.

At the hot - corner position young Bill Gardner of Jacksonville reigns as the number on choice by a slight margin over Don Rossetti of Savannah and Bob Eggert of Columbia.

The outfield of Hal Summers of Augusta in left, Dick Burgett of Columbus in center, and Frank Dunlap of Macon in right is about as good an outfield as any team could want. Each is a terrific hitter, and each can hold his own as far as fielding is concerned. All three are among the loop's leading stickers. Summers, leading homerun slugger, was pacing the circuit in batting as of the last report with a healthy .389. Burgett is swatting the sphere at around .340, while Dunlap, one of the league's most dangerous batters, has been near the top of the heap, keeping his average well over .350 for most of the season.

To back us this array of sluggers is fast, speedy Lloyd Merriman of Columbia, and Chuck Cooper of Savannah, one of the heroes of last year's all-star fray.

Counted upon to whiz their offerings by the league - leading Spinners will be Don Osborne of Macon, Bob Hooper of Jacksonville, Frank Smith of Columbia, and Lee Hollaman of Macon.

Held in reserve in case of trouble would be Kellner of Savannah and Al Sima of Jacksonville.

So the all-star selection, in the final analysis, would read something like this with the following batting order: Bill Gardner, third base; Roy Marion, second base; Dick Burgett, center field; Hal Summers, left field; Frank Dunlap, right field; Bobby Carson, shortstop; Chuck Abernathy, first base; Doc Greene, catcher; and Bob Hooper, pitcher.

The selections are based strictly on the performances of the season so far. Past experience in other leagues has not been considered in making the all-star choices.

Selected to guide the destinies of the all-star aggregation, the staff has chosen Herb Crompton fiery Rebel manager-catcher o Charleston, who is to be assisted by Gee Walker of the Columbia Reds.

Artillery Yields Margin; Students Take Close Tilt

In a battle of strikeouts at Gowdy field last Wednesday night, the Student Training regiment moved into fourth place in the post diamond league by coming from behind to trim the 999th Field Artillery battalion 5-3.

The combined efforts of Willie Weaver and Lefty Noll struck out 16 artillery batters, and John McClinic and Patyoung team-ed to whiff 10 STR men. McClinic paced the fireballers by fanning 11 during his five and one-third innings on the hill.

Although he gave the artillerymen three of their four hits during his four stanzas of slab work, Weaver, a big right-hander, set 10 opposing batsmen down on strikes.

Going into the sixth inning of the tilt, the artillerymen from Sand Hill held a 3-1 advantage despite the fact that starter Noll had given up only one safe tally. However, the students collected a trio of bingles in their half count into a deadlock.

The STR team was the first to score when Harold brown smashed a terrific homerun over the head of artillery center-fielder Leon Webb in the home half of the second frame with the sacks empty.

The first duet of 999th counters came in the fourth canto when catcher Ulus Hale walked, stole second, and came in to score when STR catcher Willie Garn let two of Noll's pitches get past him. Walks to Jojo Hughes and Erskine Ware, and a single by Arthur Houston brought in the other artillery counter.

Jim Hardmon walked to start the artillerymen's half of the fifth, and went to second on a passed ball. He scored when second-baseman Edgar Powe slapped a single into left field.

Then there was the freshman who thought a drydock was a thirsty physician.

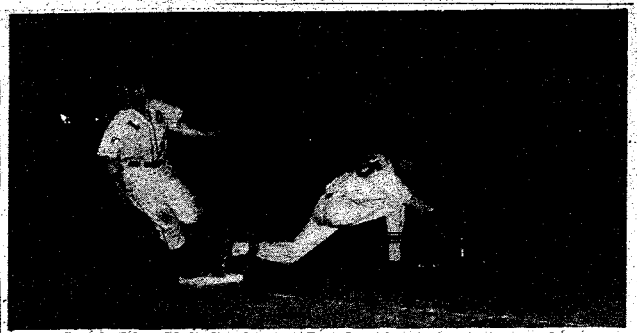
10th Field Artillery Reactivated Here

With the reactivation last week of the 10th Field Artillery Battalion as part of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team, one of the great units in the army's field artillery resumes a distinguished career made famous in two world wars.



First unit to be activated was Battery A, which now has three officers and 41 enlisted men. The other two firing batteries, service battery and headquarters battery have been ordered reactivated but shortage of personnel has prevented this. Commanding Battery A is Capt. Bernard Sapp, with 1st Lt. Frank R. Parent as executive officer and James T. Ledford as first sergeant.

During World War I the 10th was a field artillery regiment. It participated in five major campaigns and won the nickname, "The Rock's Support," on the Marne River where the Third Infantry Division was first called "The Rock of the Marne."

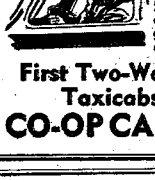
In 1939-40 the Third was made a triangular division and the 10th was broken into three light artillery battalions, the 10th, 39th and 41st. Training at Fort Lewis, Wash., was halted soon after war broke out and the battalion moved south for amphibious training in California in 1942.

The first operation of the 10th in World War was participation in the invasion of North Africa when, on Nov. 8, 1942, the Third Division, as part of General Patton's Western Task Force, struck at the coast of French Morocco. The battalion had guns in position on Cape Fedala, near Casablanca, and was firing by nine o'clock the morning of D-Day.

After the Moroccan campaign the 10th participated in nine other campaigns in Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Germany and Austria and in the invasions of Sicily, Italy and Southern France to win 10 battle stars. During the war it was the supporting battalion for the Seventh Infantry Regiment.

STRETCH DID IT . . . Medic first-baseman Paul Lewish stretches far out to take a throw from his second baseman, Harold Newman, which nipped Joe Smith of the Infantry School detachment Profs at the initial bag during last Friday night's tiff at Gowdy Field. The ISD bunch shutout the Medics 5-0 for their 22nd straight win of the year.

PERSONAL CONSIDERATION FOR FUTURE INDUCTEES



Army Chief of Staff, General Omar N. Bradley, stated last week that the peacetime draft, recently signed by the President and scheduled to go into effect this fall, called for new viewpoints on the part of the service toward its personnel, notably in the direction of enlightened liberalism and democratic individualism.

Otherwise, he declared, men called into service would "stumble in confusion and eventually come to resent their service," with jeopardy to the entire program.

Speaking in Los Angeles, General Bradley declared that the army and the American people had a joint responsibility in indoctrinating soldiers of the future on their responsibilities and their dignity as citizens in a democracy, he added. "The soldier of today is a thinking man, and his nature balks at lack of understanding, unnecessary or harsh discipline, and at inconsiderate assumptions of privileges by his seniors."

Calling for "the most liberal exercise of troops' personal freedoms within the limits of authority required for the performance of their duties," the general said that before the peacetime draftees reach camps he would "talk personally to as many of their commanding officers as possible, and my subordinates will talk to others in addition to what we will put out in writing."

Reserve Units End Hospital Training

Reservists from units in Florida and South Carolina completed a two-week period of active duty training with the 121st Evacuation hospital at Fort Benning last Saturday with a "country fair" demonstration of the composition and functions of sections of an evacuation hospital, held at the Harmony Church field house.

The group included men from the 469th Hospital Ship platoon Lake City, Fla., 489th Hospital Ship platoon, West Palm Beach, Fla., and the 396th Evacuation hospital, Columbia, S.C.

The 121st Evacuation hospital, commanded by Maj. Hillias B. Brockett, arranged and conducted the display of field medical equipment. The demonstration was the last of many given the reserve officers during their training period which commenced June 13.

In their tour of training here, the reservists attended several Infantry School problems, conferences on new trends in the Medical department, conducted tours of the Food Service installations and underwent a full week of professional training and conferences at the Station Hospital.

During the first week, the group toured various installations on the post, following a general orientation, and in the second week, the Florida and South Carolina components were put through an "on-the-job-training" program.

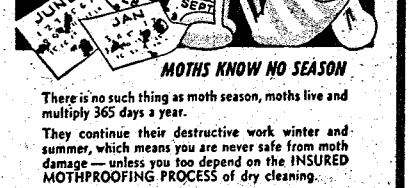
The largest single group included the contingent from the 396th Evacuation hospital, Columbia, S.C., comprising 15 officers, headed by Col. Harry F. Wilson. Others in the 396th were Lt. Col. Clarence L. Guton, Lt. Col. Nathan Rosenberg, Maj. Aubrey E. Brooks, Maj. Robert E. Brown Jr., Maj. William R. Jones Jr., Maj. Harold H. Lowenstein, Maj. Arthur, E. Shaw, Maj. James G. Shaw, Capt. Preston B. Bobo, Capt. Robert B. Burrows, Capt. Lloyd D. Frutchey Jr., Capt. Charles B. Whitaker, Capt. W. Wood and Lt. R. Defayette Hicks.

Along with the 396th were the regular unit instructors, Capt. P. Czaja and 1st Sgt. Murray R. Lobel.

Representing the 469th Hospital Ship platoon from Lake City, Fla., were Capt. Samuel L. Aspis, commanding officer of the unit, and Cpl. Allen A. Daniel, T-5 Clarence H. Lloyd, Pfc. Earl J. North and Pfc. Albert B. Herb.

The 489th Hospital Ship platoon was commanded by Capt. William A. Wooten Jr.

The regular instructors for the two Florida units, Maj. Adam McDonald and S-Sgt. Robert L. Floyd were also here for the training program.



Local Veteran Ends Long Stint

Stationed at Fort Benning for the past 26 years, M-Sgt. Grady E. Telle was honored with a farewell dinner on his retirement recently by the men of Army Field Forces Board No. 3. Among the speakers at the dinner were Col. Burton L. Lucas, president of the board, Lt. Col. William B. Moore and M-Sgt. Douglas Reichert.

In charge of the test section of the board, Sgt. Telle entered service in June, 1922 and served first with the 29th Infantry Regiment and then with the board at Benning. He has been awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon, Good Conduct Medal with two loops, American Campaign and World War II Victory Medals.

QM Specialists Laud Local Unit In Recent Visit

In conjunction with the new army program to standardize post commissaries, two quartermaster sales specialists from Washington D. C. visited the sales commissary here recently, officials announced this week.

Making an unoffical visit for the purposes of observation, Mr. Robert W. Hughes and Mr. Maurice F. O'Shea studied policies of the post commissary, much as has been done at other army posts throughout the country throughout the country.

The two reserve officers, both of whom hold commissions as lieutenant colonels in organized Reserve Corps, considered the commissary service at Fort Benning to be excellent, Major Abraham Pfefer, Infantry Center Sales officer, reported.

"They seemed to feel that we had a very fine commissary here at Fort Benning," he stated", and they told us so. Although there was no official report on the visit, we are very proud of the high opinion our commissary has earned with these visitors."

Sand Hill Plans For Aquacade

A holiday picnic on Monday and an Aqua Review scheduled late in the month have been listed as top events for Sand Hill troops during the month of July, according to Kate L. Trent recreation hostess.

The picnic Monday, which will be an all day affair, will include swimming, tennis, badminton, and croquet, along with numerous other outdoor activities.

The Aqua Review, slated for July 30, will be staged at the swimming pool. Topped off with a bathing beauty contest, with each battery of the 999th field artillery and each company of the 25th Infantry, the review has been tabbed as the biggest event of the year at Sand Hill.

New Assignment For Lt. Repach

Lt. George Repach, an air force officer on detached duty with the Infantry at Fort Benning for the past 16 months, has reenlisted at Lawson Air Force base with the rank of master sergeant and left immediately for his new assignment to Keesler Air Force base, Miss.

A wartime bombardier and a veteran of more than seven years service, he spent 12 months in the Pacific. Wearer of the Air Medal with three clusters and four battle stars, he is credited with 400 combat flying hours and 67 combat missions.

WAC Applicants To Be Screened At Local Center

A screening center for the integration of women into the Women's Army Corps, Regular Army, and into the United States Air Force will be established here at Fort Benning, following the completion of the Warrant Officer Screening program now in progress.

Applications for appointment forms W.M.E.-8, which must be submitted to the Adjutant Generals office, Washington, D. C. by August 15, are now available at the screening center here.

Processing and interviewing of applicants for the WAC and WAF will begin immediately following the completion of processing of Warrant Officer applicants, which will take at least another month, according to Capt. Charles H. Burgess, Adjutant of the Warrant Officer screening board, which now numbers six center.

The present interviewing members, may be subject to change in th perocessing of female personnel from surrounding territory into the WAC.

The warrant officer screening center has now processed 482 out of a total of 663 applications received up Tuesday, it was revealed.

The interviewing board here, one of the many established at military installations, is expected to process at least 550 warrant officer applicants before it concludes its program around the first week in August.

The screening center staff headed by Lt. Col. Martin H. Burckes, includes Capt. Charles H. Burgess, adjutant, Lts. David T. Simmons and William O. Sanders, testing officers.

Enlistment into the Women's Army Corps is authorized for applicants not less than 18 years of age who have not reached their thirty fifth birthday. An applicant who is 18 years of age but has not reached her 21st birthday will be required to furnish certified written consent of parents or guardian.

Six Regular Units To Be Enlarged

First Inductions Scheduled To Begin On September 22

Fort Benning has been selected as the headquarters of one of the six regular Army divisions to be included in the new program resulting from the newly enacted draft act which President Truman signed June 24, it was revealed this week.

The Third Infantry division will be completely reorganized and enlarged here at Fort Benning under the newly passed Selective Service act, under which men between the ages of 18 and 25 will be drafted beginning in September.

The regular army divisions in the United States to be included in this new force and their locations are: Second Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.; Third Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga.; Eighth Infantry Division, (less one combat team to be stationed at Camp Campbell, Ky.) Fort Devens, Mass.; 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N. C., and the Second Armored Division, Camp Hood Tex. There will be a sixth division in the United States, an airborne division, whose identity and station have not yet been determined.

Active-duty elements of this striking force in this country plus the necessary administrative and supply troops will require 550,000 men. The remainder of the army forces will consist of occupation troops in Europe and the Far East and garrison units in Panama, Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico and other overseas stations.

Uner the terms of the Selective Act inductions can be started on Sept. 22 and it is expected that the first inductions will probably be about that time. The army will, however, continue its recruiting campaign before and after that date to secure the maximum numbers of volunteers.

When brought up to authorized strength the army will consist of 12 regular army divi-

Gen. Burress Initiated Into Third Division

Major General Withers A. Burress has been named an honorary member of the Society of the Third Division and will recive his membership card at a banquet at the Ralston Hotel in Columbus, Saturday evening.

The extended membership in the Society will not be the first "joining" of the post commander with the Third. As commanding general of the 1000th Infantry Division in World War II General Burress led his division into combat in France alongside the Third which was then commanded by Ma. Gen. John W. 'Daniel,' whom General Burress has replaced as commander of Fort Benning.

Among the other invited guests of honor are Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistand commandant of the Infantry School and a former assistant division commander of the third; Walter A. Richard, mayor of Columbus; Homer D. Cobb, mayor of Phenix City; T. G. Reeves, chairman of the Muscogee County Board of Commissioners; T. Hicks Fort, judge of the Superior Court of Columbus; James Woodruff, Jr., President of the Chamber of Commerce of Columbus.

'Union Salute' Tops Ceremony

A "Salute To The Union," one gun for each state, fired by the 319th Field Artillery battalion, highlighted the ceremonies Monday July 5, marking the observance of Independence Day.

Appropriate selections by the 72nd Army band opened the day's proce dings at the flag pole just before noon. Following the firing of the "Salute To The Union," from a position adjacent to the flag pole at noon sharp, playing of the National Anthem closed the ceremonies.

Fireworks at special locations on the post, as permitted by Infantry Center officials, were fired by post personnel.

Future Inductees Slated To Receive Better Training Than Predecessors

With the passage and signing of the new Selective Service Act, a miniscule repetition of the activity of late 1940 and early 1941 seems indicated, according to information released this week by the Public Information Division of the Department of the Army.

Practically all the selectees during the first few months of Selective Service will go to the army, it was agreed by the Secretaries of Defense, Army, Air Force and Navy. The new act permits increasing the strength of the army from its present 542,000 men to 837,000 by means of voluntary enlistments and inductions. However, 1949 appropriations limit the total number to 790,000 between now and July 1, 1949. Inducted men will serve 21 months, but in addition to the 837,000 specified by the act the army is authorized to accept 110,000 18 year old volunteers for one year's active training and service.

Whether soldiers enter the army by volunteer enlistment or through Selective Service they will first be sent to recruiting or induction stations near their homes. There they will be given a physical examination and preliminary interview.

In the next step they will normally go to one of eight training centers where they will be occupied the first few days with processing, inoculations and assignments to appropriate training units. Some, particularly those with prior military service, will then be assigned directly to units for training while the remainder will remain at the centers to complete basic training.

At each training center there will be stationed a training division, charged with providing basic training for all assigned recruits. The schedules will include first aid and personal hygiene, physical conditioning, tactical training, signal communications, infelligence training, map and aerial photo reading, maintenance and field firing of weapons and vehicles maintenance and operation.

The training divisions now in operation are the Fourth Infantry Division at Fort Ord, Cal.; Fifth Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S. C.; Ninth Infantry Division at Fort Dix, N. J., and Third Armored Division at Fort Knox, Ky.

The new training divisions will be the 10th Infantry (Mountain) Division at Fort Riley, Kans.; Fifth Armored Division at Camp Chaffee, Ark.; 101st Airborn eDivision at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., and 17th Airborne Division at Camp Pickett, Va.

(In an Associated Press dispatch last week it was announced by the army that Maj. Gen. Lester J. Whitlock will command the 10th Mountain Division; Maj. Robert S. Beightler the Fifth Armored Division; Maj. Gen. William R. Schmidt the 101st Airborne Division and

'SAVAGE AND BRUTAL'

Trying Days As Prisoner Related By RCT Member

Experiences as a Japanese prisoner of war for 1,206 harrowing days were unfolded by T-Sgt. Judson Simpson, now assigned to the 7th Regimental Combat Team, here at Fort Benning.

The 27-year-old technical sergeant whose home is in Harrodsburg, Ky., enlisted on August 25th 1939. Being assigned to Company "D" of the 192nd Tank Battalion, he departed with his unit for the Far East in October 1941, arriving in Manila eighteen days before Pearl Harbor. The unit moved to Fort Stotsenberg, approximately 100 miles south of Manila.

Sergeant Simpson relates that while eating a noon meal on December 8th, 1941, a group of approximately 50 planes swarmed overhead. He did not realize that they were Japanese planes, until the bombs started falling, inflicting heavy damage on the Fort and adjacent Clark Field. A few days later his company was ordered to move out to repulse expected landings on the beaches at Linguan Gulf.

The unit was heavily outnumbered, and after an intense engagement on the beach, began to withdraw through the jungle toward the Bataan peninsula. Sergeant Simpson participated in the now historic saga of the defense of Bataan, and escaped capture on April 9th, 1941, by swimming 2 miles out in Manila Bay until picked up and taken by boat to Fort Drum, Corregidor.

Three weeks later, after being wounded in the battle for Corregidor, Sergeant Simpson was taken prisoner with the surrender of the fort. This began the nightmare of 1,206 days of privation, abuses and beatings.

For the first three days and nights as a prisoner, Sergeant Simpson was forced to perform manual labor, repairing docks, without food. Three Americans who attempted to escape were shot to death. He remained in the Philippines nearly three months before being sent to Manchuria. There, he was forced to work in a leather tannery, under conditions of great hardship. He contracted beri-beri, a disease caused by malnutrition, and his weight dropped from 180 lbs to 98 lbs.

British Officers Conduct Tour

Five British Army officers left Fort Benning this morning following a two-day orientation and observation tour of Infantry center installations and activities.

Included in the party, which arrived here late Monday afternoon were Brigadier E. P. Sewell, Brigadier J. C. D'A Dalton, Lt. Col. W. S. King, Maj. K. J. McIntyre and Maj. K. J. Coulthard.

After conferring with the Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, early Tuesday morning, the British officers began their tour with a visit to the Coordinator of Training, Col. Lloyd D. Brown, thence to the Training Aids exhibit before witnessing a special demonstration of recoiless weapons at Patton range.

Tuesday afternoon the Britishers sat in on a demonstration of an Infantry combat platoon in attack at Bush Hill.

A tour of the airborne section, where they were oriented in the highlights of airborne training and techniques, topped off Wednesday morning's tour, which also included visits to the Automotive Section, Communication Section and also special demonstration of rifle and hand grenades and flame throwers at Bickfor range.

The latest equipment and other developments were viewed by the British contingent Wednesday afternoon in a visit to Army Field Forces Board No. 3.

Education Center Begins New Term

With four college level classes added to its enlarged circuriculum, the Army Education Center night school begins its summer session Monday July 12 with an expected increase in enrollment over the spring term.

The new college level courses are in answer to the Army's request that it's Regular Officers have a two year college education, or its equivalent. However school officials have announced that the new advanced courses are not restricted to officers. All qualified Fort Benning personnel, both civilian and military, may enroll in any of the classes.

Lawson Air Force Base Observes 17th. Year of Recognition Tuesday

Although it's history dates back to 1919 when it was established to provide weather data for the Infantry School, Lawson Air Force base, where hundreds of thousands of paratroopers and Air Force personnel received wartime training and now noted as the scene of the yearly ground forces-aerial maneuver "Operations Combine", celebrated it's 17th birthday as an Air Force base Tuesday July 6.

Located two miles southwest of the Main Post of Fort Benning, bordering the chattahoochee river, the field originally was established to house the Infantry Schools lighter-than-air ships, but abandoned in the late 20s.

The airfield was reactivated in March 1931 with the landing of a first flight of the 16th Observation Squadron from Fort Riley, Kansas. The field remained nameless until on July 6, 1931 when the War Department named the small airdrome Lawson Field, in honor of a Georgian, Capt. Walter R. Lawson.

An outstanding pilot during World War I and winner of the DSC for extraordinary heroism in action while serving with the 91st Aero Squadron in France, Captain Lawson, who also served with the 41st French Escadrille, was killed in an aircraft accident at McCook field (now Wright Air Force base), Ohio in 1923.

When the field was abandoned the buildings in the "balloon area", as it was then known, were taken over as living quarters by civilian workers on the post and the field began drawing air support for its training from Maxwell field, Ala.

Five officers and 35 enlisted men and three O-25 planes, comprised the 16th Observation Squadron when the field was reactivated a far cry from the thousands stationed here during the war and hundreds of thousands who have trained here.

Lawson, as did most of the fields throughout the nation, became an important part of the Air Forces training program, and after it was placed under the directions of the commanding general of the U. S. Air forces Sept. 1940, reconstruction got under way to handle it's enlarging program.

With more runways built, hangars and adminstrative buildings constructed, the field finally began taking shape as one of the finest in the country. In the early part of 1941 it was placed under the command of the Third Air Force and in April 1942 Lawson was selected as a Troop Carrier Command training base, chiefly responsible for training combat air force personnel and paratroopers.

During the war years the field contributed greatly to the Air Forces training program as well as supplying training and transportation air power for the accelerated infantry training program at Fort Benning.

Except for its smaller complement of personnel and aircraft, Lawson Air Force base still retains its ranking as an integral part of the Air Forces and Infantry training program. It's mission today remains similar to its wartime training program, but it is carried out with newer and bigger aircraft, improved training tactics amoond combat-wise instructors.

Since the end of hostilities Lawson has operated a a troop carrier base under IX Troop Carrier Command, Third Air Force base, Va., as itw parent organization.

Commanded by Col. Gilbert T. Collar, a command pilot and a veteran of 30 years with the Air Forces, the base today is the home station of the 319th Air Force base unit, 104th Weather Squadron detachment, 1 2nd Squadron of the Airways and Air Communications Service and the 325th Troop Carrier Squadron.

Napy blimps and other aircraft with permanent bases along the Florida and Georgia coasts have found refuge at Lawson during raging storms. The base is equipped with special apparatus to serve as a storm evacuation center.

Some of the world's outstanding military and civilian personages and the nation's outstanding figures have visited the field or have passed through it. President Roosevelt who visited the base in April 1943, was among the many who stopped at the base, including Secretary of State George C. Marshall, (then) General Marshall), Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime chief of the Air Forces; Lord Mountbatten, Anhony Eden of Great Britain; Gen. Henri Giraud of France; Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and many others.

In addition to carrying out its normal heavy training schedule, during the past two years Lawson Air Force has been the sight of special air-ground training operations presented by the Ninth Air Force and the Infantry Center for the benefit of service schools throughout the nation. "Operations Combine II", staged in the spring of this year, was the most recent of these maneuvers.

ROTC Field Artillery Men Concentrating On Targets

Field artillery Battery A of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, here for the annual summer's encampment will have something to shoot at Saturday and next Tuesday whtn the artillerymen lead their carbines and let fly at MacAndrew range. For they'll be up against some high scorers from the infantry companies who during their three days on the range, performed the kind of shooting that helped win the war.

Tied for first place in their initial range firing with the M-1 rifle were Cadet Charles B. Doyle and Cadet Charls C. Winn with scores of 198 out of a possible 210. Shooting 194 was Cadet William H. Leggett. The three top men all have extensive backgrounds of rifle training, however, since Doyle served with the 310th Infantry Regiment of the 78th Division, Winn was with the First Marine Division, and Leggett belonged to the 29th Infantry Regiment.

As far as the entire corps is concerned, the scores were considered high, an expected result since about 60 per cent of the trainees are veterans of the late war. Oddly enough, a large proportion are former air force personnel. The cadtes have been able to keep in practice by firing 22 caliber rifles on indoor ranges during the scholastic year.

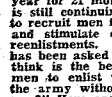
STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

"WHEN IN THE COURSE OF HUMAN EVENTS it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another" . . . Those are the first words of the Declaration of Independence. Yet how many of us know them.

We have just celebrated the Fourth of July. A few of the older citizenry know why the Fourth of July is significant. As for our youngsters—here is where we have failed. To them it's a day of firecrackers and hoopla. Who's to blame. Just for your own curiosity, ask your friend for the first few lines of the Declaration of Independence! Seven out of ten could not even begin it!

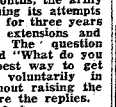
THE MAN WHO FIRST CONCEIVED the idea of American Independence is forgotten, too, in its celebration. He was claimed as a "literary maniac" who deserved to be hung. His name—Thomas Paine, revolutionary patriot, whose writings was the source and inspiration of the idea of Independence and who penned these immortal words, THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Thomas Paine was condemned by influential colonial leaders as a political crackpot. It was none other than the great George Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and Hamilton who went on record deploring the growing political separation from England. Such men believed that our only hope was in the reconciliation with the "mother country."



YET THEY SAW the power and sincerity in Paine's writings and were very much influenced by his followers. Yet who dares to rank Paine along with Washington, Jefferson or Hamilton . . . Patriots are made, not born.

Post Dialogue



Prior to the passage of the new Selective Service Act, a great many persons, both civilians and soldiers, agreed that the army and other interested agencies should make an "all-out effort" to stimulate men to volunteer for service. Although the act was finally passed requiring about a quarter million young men to enter military service each year for 21 months, the army is still continuing its attempts to recruit men for three years and stimulate extensions and reenlistments. The question has been asked "What do you think is the best way to get men to enlist voluntarily in the army without raising the pay?" Here are the replies.

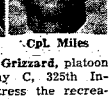
* * *

Cpl. Lawrence Miles, Sr., Hq. 2nd. Bn., 25th Infantry: "Let them be allowed to go where they'd like to be assigned if that is at all possible. Also, make it easier for men to go to specialists' schools providing they are qualified."

Lt. Grizzard

Cpl. Miles

Lt. Lewis M. Grizzard, platoon leader, Company C, 325th Infantry: "I'd stress the recreational and athletic facilities in the army. Also, every man should be taught to fire every weapon in the army and be permitted to fire them more often. They'd like that."



* * *

Capt. Alexander Pavlak, G-4 section:—"For young, single men, appeal to their sense of adventure and their desire to travel. Emphasize the fact that here's adventure for them if they can take it. As far as the married men are concerned, I'd say stress the security end."

* * *

Capt. Pavlack

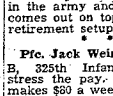
Pfc. Henry G. Moler, STR:—"Brief them thoroughly on all features of the army and tell 'em what they do that's good. Tell them about the outfits that have great histories and give them a chance to join one of these units. I've been in 10 years and just reenlisted. There's no place else where a man can make as much money, have as many opportunities and also get 30 days off every year."

* * *

T-Sgt. Hardy D. Moody, Hq. 1st. Bn., Seventh Infantry: "Give them more choice of station. Everything taken into consideration, give them a preference of the camp where they would be stationed during their enlistment. Give them more choice of the branch and unit they'd like. I picked my branch, unit and location and I'm satisfied."

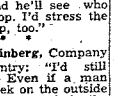
* * *

T-Sgt. Moody



Pfc. Sanders

Pfc. James O. Sanders, 319th A.F.S.U., Lawson Field: — "I'd tell them all the advantages, like free medical attention and hospitalization. Another thing, in the army you don't have to worry about strikes or depressions or being laid off; I was on strike when I reenlisted. Then, too, you can ask a man to figure up his expenses in civilian life and compare them with those in the army and he'll see who comes out on top. I'd stress the retirement setup, too."



* * *

Pfc. Jack Weinberg, Company B, 325th Infantry: "I'd still stress the pay. Even if a man makes $80 a week on the outside and I make $80 a month in the army, in the long run I make more. Also, prices outside are pretty high; I know, because I just came off furlough. There's also a better retirement setup. A soldier knows exactly when he can retire and he's still able to go out and work while a civilian usually has to wait till he's about 65 before he draws a pension. And I can always go to the Old Soldiers' Home."

* * *

Pfc. Weinberg

M-Sgt. Camyer

M-Sgt. William L. Camper, an R. O. T. C. instructor at North Carolina State College in Raleigh and here for the summer encampment. "Keep stressing the security angles. I've been in the service nine years, am married and have one child and I feel secure."

JUSTICE, MERCY, HUMILITY

By
Chaplain S. R. Bright

"He hath shewed thee, O doth the Lord require of thee, man, what is good; and what but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with the God?" (Micah 6:8)

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land." (2 Chronicles 7:14)

The first passage of Scripture reflects the prophet Micah's spiritual and enduring admonition to a people who would bypass the hora of repentance for their sins, in favor of futile ritualistic offerings. The second passage of Scripture above quotes God's specific requirements in support of any request for relief from the damning penalties of sin, and the resultant human entanglements in this world of impenatrable darkness.

The world today is punctuated on every side, in every corridor, in each level and category of life—with destructive and deteriorating attitudes and ideals. These attitudes and ideals are entrenched in the very souls of human beings, to the extent that the human race of today is wallowing deep in mucky and miry valleys of doubt and distrust, and helplessness.

Deep down in the souls of most people is a desire for relief from this chaotic world of distrust, doubt, and seeming perpetual moral and social destruction. Deep in many of our hearts is the desire for a really finer and higher plane of living, and the finer things of life; many desire to live on the high hills and mountains of trusting peace, and loving mercy, the unbounded and limitless regions of neighborly justice and Godlike humility.

The prophet Micah says, in substance, our purchasing power is in doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with our God. This challenge we must face, individually, collectively. This challenge supersedes any type of human pride.

We should bypass every evil that doth so easily beset, and consign us to God's guardhouse. We should walk daily, in a Christlike manner, doing justly, loving mercy, and marching humbling with our God.

A kiss is a peculiar proposition, of no use to one, absolutely bliss for two. The small boy gets it for nothing, the young man has, to steal it, it is the babys right, the lovers' mask. To a young girl it means faith, to a married woman hope, and to an old maid, Charity.

THE BISHOP'S MANTLE

"THE BISHOP'S MANTLE," Agnes Sligh Turnbull's novel of the young rector of a fashionable Episcopal church in the years just preceding Pearl Harbor, is a simple, quiet book, but an unusually moving one. Perhaps it is its very simplicity that has held it so long on the best seller lists.

The story opens with the death of the old Bishop, which comes at a time when his grandson, Hilary, who has just been called to his first church, the large exclusive St. Matthews, needs him most, but the old man continues, through his scrapbook, to guide the younger one. When Hilary's problems— and he has many of them— become too great, he turns to the books of the Bishop and usually finds a solution.

The young rector has problems in both his personal and his professional life. He marries Alexa McCully, beautiful, rich, spoiled, and thoroughly unsuited for a minister's wife, and it requires sacrifices from both Hilary and Alexa before their lives are finally adjusted. He runs into trouble with hypocritical vestrymen who get their income from brothels and condemned tenements or from unsavory alcohol; he struggles to tear down the social barriers that exist in his parish, to wipe out the long-standing feuds of his congregation, to eliminate the slums that surround the Church. In his refusal to compromise with his conscience, he sometimes says and does things that make him unpopular with the influential members of his parish, the ones who foot the bills. But for every enemy he makes he gains ten friends. And though there are times when he has dizzy strikes, and other times when he almost loses his faith, he always finds the consolation and inspiration he needs in the Bishop's scrapbooks.

"The Bishop's Mantle" is well written and easy to read. It is a new novel now available at the main post library.

A pretty girl and a handsome farm lad were walking along a country lane in the early evening. The lad was carrying a large pail on his back, holding a chicken in one hand, a pitchfork in the other, and leading a goat. They came to a dark forested stretch.

Said the girl: "I'm afraid to walk with you. You might try to kiss me."

The farm lad gave her a funny look in the half darkness and said: "How could I with these things I'm carring?"

"Well," said the girl, "you might stick the pitchfork in the ground, tie the goat to it, and put the chicken under the pail."

Your Red Cross

(Editor's Note: Murray E. Hill, regular contributor of Your Red Cross is away for a short while and during his absence this column will be written by various Red Cross workers.)

BY CHARLES P. PARKER

One of the largest jobs Red Cross has on an Army post is assistance with requests for emergency furloughs. There is something about sickness or death in our immediate families that we just don't like to think about. That's perfectly natural, but such things do occur and we want something done right away when it touches our own families.

We went to discuss the way in which you can help the Red Cross and in turn help yourself and family. While your folks are now well and things are going all right, drop them a line and let them know what to do if they should need you immediately. If there is a sudden illness, accident or death, tell them to, first, get in touch with you direct by wire or whatever method is quicker. Then be sure to have them notify the Red Cross in your home town, or the Red Cross nearest to your home. If they will give the Red Cross the physician's name in case of something critical or serious, action can be taken much faster. We sometimes have requests to verify emergencies and when our call or wire gets to your local Red Cross Chapter, the doctor is out on a case and time is lost in getting a reply.

Another thing we would like to point out is the "immediate family." This consists of mother, father, wife, brother, sister or child. If an uncle, aunt, grandmother or grandfather actually acted as a father or mother, they are considered immediate family.

The question of finances always comes up with emergency furloughs. The Red Cross does help men who have serious illness or death in immediate families. If a man can put aside some funds from his pay he can much more easily handle situations of illness or other emergencies outside of the immediate family.

Sometimes you have sickness or trouble at home which you don't know just how serious and would rather not interrupt your training if the family can handle the situation. In such conditions it is, of course, best to try to get the facts direct, but if not successful you can feel free to ask help from your Red Cross field director.

The Red Cross gets a number of requests for financial help on passes and regular furloughs. Such situations are of personal nature and Red Cross is not permitted to lend funds.

As previously mentioned, we do not like to think of serious emergencies with our own folks but it is much better to be sure our families know to get in touch with the doctor and Red Cross at home if the condition demands it.

Benning Captures Army Court Toga

Two Post Players Placed On Area Tennis Delegation

Courtmen of Fort Benning scored a sweeping triumph over delegations of other posts of the Third army area on the en-tout-cas courts of the local officers' club last week to retain the Third Army tennis trophy for another year.

In the all-Benning finals of the army meet, defending singles champion Sanford H. Webster ousted Charles Daniels in sets of 6-1 and 6-3 to recapture his title, and the two singles finalists teamed to down another Benning team of Don Driscoll and John Baumgartner 6-0 and 6-3 for the doubles crown.

During the three-day tourney, the post netmen compiled a total of 21 points, 14 more than the second - place team from Fort McPherson, Ga. Coming in third with only six team counters was Fort Bragg, N. C., and the Fort Jackson, S. C., squad was last with two points. Three of the tournament's possible 39 points were taken by independent players of the army area.

Team Named

Following the tourney, a five-man team, comprised of players who had made the best showings in the local meet, was named to represent the Third army in the all-army tournament which gets under way later this month on the courts of the US Military academy at West Point, N. Y.

Should the Third army team or any of its members get past the competition in the West Point tourney, they will get a chance to compete in the inter-service matches (Leech Cup matches) to be played July 30 and 31 at Arlington, Va. Successful netmen in the inter-service matches will get a crack at the Olympics.

The Third army team will be piloted by Webster, and will include one other Benning player, Daniel, who bowed out to the champ in the last-day matches here.

Illustrious Background

Webster, who has been active on the courts since 1930, has an illustrious background dating back to 1935 when he was a quarter-finalist in the national junior indoor tournament. By 1938, he was the sixth - ranking tennis player in the northeastern sector of the United States.

Entering West Point in 1937, Webster immediately went out for and made the academy team. In 1940, his last year in USMA, he was chosen to captain the squad. Last year, the area singles champ was a semi-finalist in the all-army meet.

An advance to the semi-finals in the Wimbledon Plate matches of England in 1946 is among Webster's civilian tennis accomplishments.

Daniel No. 2

The No. 2 spot on the Third army team went to Daniel, also a former member of the US Military academy team. Active in tennis since 1938, Daniel played on the military school team in 1943 and 1944.

The two losing semi-finalists in the Third Army meet Robert A. Reade of Fort McPherson and Edwin Y. Arnold of Fort Bragg, also earned berths on the all-army representation.

Reade, who was ousted by Daniel in the semi-finals, was rated as one of the pre-tourney favorites here since he was a member of the Leech Cup team in 1947, and was consolation singles runner-up in the all-army tourney last year. He is a brother of Edwin G. Reade Jr., a member of the Connecticut Junior Davis Cup team.

Kunkel Places

Arnold, who recently won the singles championship for Fort Bragg, was beaten out in the semi - finals by Webster. In 1946, Arnold was a member of the US Forces Austria tennis delegation, and was affiliated with the Second army squad last year.

Although he wasn't a semi-finalist, the fifth berth on the army team went to William M. Kunkel Jr., an independent player carrying the colors of Oliver General Hospital in Augusta, Ga. The independent courtman earned himself a spot on the squad by beating Fort Benning's Don Driscoll in a playoff match between the two quarter - finalists.

Kunkel, whose tennis-playing began at the age of eight, was a member of varsity teams at Franklin and Marshall college at Lancaster, Pa., and was a court standout while attending medical school at Johns Hopkins university.

BULLETS EYE CONTINUED LAURELS AFTER RESPITE

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Athletic activities for sportsmen of the 25th Infantry regiment were suspended for an entire week when the troops left the area on Monday morning for a week's firing on the rifle range.

Both the baseball and softball teams of the Bullets were slated for two contests in the current 325th Infantry regiment's diamond league. Having won two straight games before being interrupted by the suspension, both nines were undefeated in league competition. The teams' victories were registered over opponents from the same area, the Special units nine, and the First battalion of the 325th.

With unmarred slates, the two clubs will swing into action again next week. Determined to maintain their undefeated records, both teams will be out to make it three in a row.

In their previous outings, the Bullet baseballers scored a smashing 21-2 victory over the Special units team, and a close 11-10 extra-inning decision over the 325th squad.

Following in the footsteps of their hard-ball colleagues, the softballers annexed wins over the same units' softball representatives by scores of 11-5 and 5-1, respectively.

With the return of Gordon Burke, the Bullets' classy shortstop, the Sand Hill diamond-men's chances of landing a top berth, or possibly walking off with league championship honors soared to a new high last week.

Burke, who has been spending a leave in his hometown of Waterbury, Conn., appeared in uniform last Friday for the first time in three weeks.

Batting at .349 clip last season and committing only seven errors in 45 games, Burke is expected to be a big help to the Bullets in their pennant drive.

Playing his first game against the 325th Infantry lads last Friday, Burke collected two hits in four official trips to the plate, one of which was a scorching four-bagger to deep left field scoring Andy Hardy ahead of him. The hefty poke came in the seventh frame, tying up the game and sending it into extra innings.

During the game, Burke also was a standout in the fielding department, making a sensational catch which nipped a potential rally by the losers.

Summer Rules Apply At Local Golf Course

Also discussed at the committee meeting were plans for changing the layout of the course slightly so as to offer more portection on certain fairways, tees, and greens.

Profs Shutout STR To Conclude Slate

The Infantry School detachment Profs finished out their intra-mural participation in a blaze of glory last Friday night by chalking up their 23rd straight win of the campaign, a 4-0 shutout over the Student Training regiment.

By going through both phases of the intra-mural schedule undefeated, the Profs annexed the post diamond title without having to go through a playoff.

Manager James L. Walker staked his hopes for an unbeaten season on Ike Silcox, and the ace right-hander of the ISD mound staff turned in a neat six-hitter against the fourth-place students.

Going the route for the STR was strikeout wizard Willie Weaver, who whiffed 10 of the powerful Profs, and issued only three bases on balls. However, the strong array of ISD lumbermen nicked Weaver for 11 safe blows.

The Profs started their run-getting in the top half of the first when Bill Welton reached first on an error by Weaver, and stole second. Herb Lauve followed by reaching on an infield error, and advancer behind Welton who scored when the STR twirler uncorked a wild pitch. A single by Woody Burt brought home Lauve with the second tally of the inning.

The big STR right-hander held the Prof's scoreless for the next four frames, but Bill Hojnacki led off in the sixth with a triple, and came in when STR receiver William Church let a third strike to John Seymour get past him.

Big Bill Brooks scored the other Prof run in the visiting half of the seventh after he had tripled to left-center with one out. The ISD outfielder romped home after shortstop Major Carmichael of the STR had made a catch of Hojnacki's fly to short right field.

One of the most spectacular fielding plays of the season was executed by Wes Westbrook of the students in the top half of the ninth inning when he pulled the old hidden ball trick to catch Joe Smith of the Profs off second base.

In addition to chalking up a fine mound performance, Silcox also contributed to the ISD plate attack by getting a single and a double in four trips.

DOUGH TUTOR . . . Joe Shepherd, who assisted Butch Kendrick with the Doughboy coaching duties last year, has been named to take over the helm for the 1948 Benning gridsters, and is putting his charges through daily workouts in preparation for the coming season.

Medic Softball Nine Nips ISD

BY GEORGE FRINK

In a post circuit softball tilt last Monday evening on the Medic diamond, the host 30th Medical group shaded the Infantry School detachment nine 7-6 behind the pitching of John Johnson.

Trailing 2-0, the Medics came back in their half of the first inning to score four runs. John Burman, rightfielder, walked and scored when first-baseman John Johnson then slapped out a home run to bring two more tallies across the plate. The final counter of the inning came when Tom Brown, third-basemen, drew a base on balls, and scored on catcher Bernard Hart's right-field double.

The ISD tied the game in their half of the second inning when third-basemen Bill Welton stole home, and shortstop Johnson came in on an error by the Medic catcher.

Getting two runs in the second and one in the third, the Medics went ahead by a three-run margin which held until the sixth when the ISD threatened to even up the game again. Warren Paulk, ISD left-fieder, hit a four-bagger with one male on before the Medics settled down to retire the side.

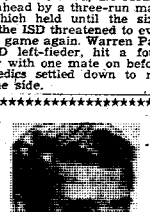
Lightweight KO Climaxes Card For Paratroops

A ten-bout card, including one knockout and three technical kayoes, was featured in the fourth summer boxing program in the open-air arena across the Airborne battalion gymnasium last Friday night.

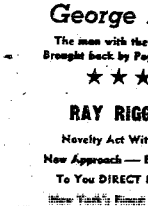
The thriller of the evening was the third battle on the program in which lightweight Reynold Martinez, after fighting hard for an opening through two tough rounds, went on to kayo his opponent, Tommy Hobbs.

The evening's starter was a lightweight fracas which went to Jim Holt of Company D, who outpointed Lewis Mackie, 130-pounder from Company A.

In the welterweight division, Walt Ellison of Company G countered the aggressiveness of Carlos Rios, 147-pounder from Company A, to take a decision. Lorin Garside of Headquarters and Service company employed similar counter-punching tactis to take a point advantage over 142-pound Richard Diaz of Company G.



A TKO in the welterweight class went to Fernando Aguilar, a fast, hard-hitting lad, when his opponent, Larry Jenratte, 138-pound Company D boxer, was declared unable to carry on after one minute of the second round. Another welterweight TKO was chalked up by Bob Carter, 147-pounder from Company A, who was awarded the victory after flooring Al Franco of Company E.



Two lightheavies, Ray Rojas of Company A and Joe Klock of Company B, brought the fans to their feet with a hard-hitting slugfest which hinted of a knockout in both the second and third rounds. After cornering Rojas on the ropes and delivering a barrage of lefts and rights during the two rounds, Klock received the unanimous nod.

Light heavyweight Jim Domse of Company B fought hard to win a decision over rugged Willie Williams of Company A in another power-packed slugfest.

A thrilling main event rounded out the evening when two lightening - fast, hard-hitting lightweights exchanged leather with almost no let up until the bout ended by TKO at the end of the second period. Wilson Tohnika, the pride of Company C, got the win after he had dealt out enough punishment to keep Mas Nakajo from answering the third round gong.

SMOOTH-STROKING CHAMP . . . Making a back-hand return of a serve during his finals match with Charles Daniel on the oficers' club courts here last Thursday morning is Sanford H. Webster, Third army singles champ, who carried the banner of Fort Benning. After taking sets of 6-1 and 6-3 from Daniel, the champ teamed with his finals opponent to cop the doubles championship from another Benning team of Don Driscoll and John Baumgartner by winning sets of 6-0 and 6-3.

Doughboy Diamond Team Launches 1948 Schedule Here Sunday Night

With only four days of diamond drills under their belts, Manager Herb Bench's 1948 edition of the Fort Benning Doughboys will open a 22-game schedule at 8 p.m. Sunday by staging a tussle with the Manchester, Ga., Millers at Gowdy fied.

In addition to the 22 its on tap for the local lads this season, the Doughboys will enter two, and possibly three, tournaments.

The initial practice session for the Doughboy team candidates got under way at Gowdy field yesterday morning, and daily workouts will be held until Sunday.

Although 26 top players have been singled out of teams which participated in the post intramural campaign this year as Doughboy potentials, Manager Bench expects to have his squad whittled down to no more than 20 men by the time the season slate is inaugurated.

Starters Indefinite

Bench said that he will make no effort to name a starting lineup for Sunday night's game until he has put his hopefuls through at least a couple of days' paces, but indicated that either right-hander Ike Silcox or portsider Ken Watts are the most likely mound possibilities. Just which of the two will get the starter's nod probably will depend on the number of left-handed hitters in the Manchester lineup.

In addition to Silcox and Watts six right-handers and one southpaw will be on the Doughboy mound staff this season. The left-hander is Collis Lehner, who performed for the Infantry School detachment Profs during the intra-mural campaign, turning in a no-hit performance, and setting a new post strikeout record with 24 whiffs in a nine-inning game. The array of right-handed twirlers includes Bob cronin, Ray Stem, Bob Glover, Larry Hall, John Graves, and Lou Button.

Team Candidates

Team candidates who are being considered for starting positions with the post squad are catchers Tom Gallagher and Willie Griffin, first - baseman Herb Lative and Stan Letonsky second-sackers Harold (Blondy) Burnett and Bob Kinard, and third-base patrollers Joe Smith and Ralph Terry.

Four shortstops are scrambling for the shortfield position, and may see service in the starting lineup. They are Paul Bonair, Otto Loroesh, Herb O'Brien and Stan Maciejczyk.

To roam the outer gardens for the Doughboy team this year will be Bill Brooks and Clyde (Woody) Burt, both ex-ISD players; Len Carney, who finished the post league season with the Airborne Troopers; and Harold Brown, late of the Student Training regiment diamond nine.

One Twin Bill

The only two-game program on the Doughboy slate this year will come on August 21 when the marines of Parris Island, S. C., and the flyers from Tyndall field, Fla., invade Gowdy field.

Following Sunday night's tilt the Doughs will have three games in a row, two away and one at Gowdy field. On Monday night, the local delegation will travel to Thomanston, Ga., for a game with the Sivertown Miller, and the Millers will return the visit on Tuesday night. On Wednesday, the Manchester team will play host to the Doughs.

Although Thursday and Friday nights still are listed as open dates, Manager Bench said that arrangements are under way for games on these nights to round out the first week of the 1948 schedule.

Sports Quiz

1. Which player, in either of the two major leagues, won honors for the highest batting average the most years in a row?
2. Which players in each of the major leagues have won the Most Valuable Player Awards the greatest number of times?
3. The recent Louis - Walcott fight kept intact an old hex. What is that hex?

ANSWERS

1. The Immortal Rogers Hornsby has that distinction. He copped the bathing champion ship six years in a row, 1920 through 1925. He hit successively .370, 397, .401, .384, .424, and .403. He is also the only hitter to bat over the .400 mark two years in a row, and also the only one to hit over that mark three times. George Sisler is the only other player ever to top that mark twice, in 1920 and again in 1922.
2. In the National league Rogers Hornsby and Carl Hubbell each took the award twice. In the American league Jimmy Foxx and Joe DiMaggio have each won the honor three times.
3. In every bout that he faced a man who had previously fought him for the title, Joe Louis has won by a K. O., just as he did over Jersey Joe.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

The array of twirlers listed on Manager Herb Bench's Doughboy pitching roster this year should prove equally as effective, if not more so, than the lineup carried by the Benningites last year when they won the Third Army diamond championship.

Whereas Dick Gearhardt, a bang-up slab worker from the Airborne battalion, is the only top-notch hurler lost to the post team this year, several brilliant right-handers have been added to the staff who should prove instrumental in making the 1948 campaign a successful one.

Topmost among the new mound additions is Bob Cronin, who did his intra-mural performing with the Airborne Troopers. Bob, who puts plenty of steam on his pitches, and has one of the most effective curve balls seen this season, boasts a record of eight wins and no defeats to put him at the top of the intra-mural hurling roster. The young right-hander also has one of the season's three no-hit masterpieces to his credit.

Another newcomer, who, despite the fact that he was working with a second-division club all season, has baffled some of the league's heaviest lumber swingers, is lanky Lou Button of the Lawson field Flyers. The rangy right-hander, whose record for the season stands at three wins and two losses, relies largely on a lightening fast ball and excellent control. With the fielding support the Doughs will be able to furnish, lanky Lou should establish himself a noteworthy record for the post team season.

Chunky John Graves, who won eight and lost two with the third-place post Medics, led the post in strikeouts during the intra-mural campaign, and should prove virtually infallible with a stronger lineup of fielders. One of the best hitting pitchers on the post, Graves is flirting with the .400 mark, and has hit safely in practically every game in which he has seen service. A frequent victim of wildness, John seems to hit his stride past the half-way mark of every game, but has a curve which has puzzled some of the post's most consistent hitters.

The hard-luck lad of the intra-mural campaign has been Larry Hall, who had a none-too-fashionable record of two wins and seven losses during the post race. Contrary to what the records may indicate, the willowy right-hander is unquestionably one of the better hurlers to come out of intra-mural baseball, and has a bag of tricks which includes almost every known type of pitch. One of Larry's big problems this year has been finding a capable receiver for his burnt offerings.

Right-hander Bob Glover, who has done his pitching with the 328th Ordnance battalion, a second-division team in the intra-mural circuit, has had to turn in some outstanding slab work to wind up the season with an even .500 average with four triumphs and four setbacks. Bob, like some of the other candidates for mound berths, often was the victim of inadequate fielding and hitting of teammates rather than poor pitching. The smooth-operating fast-baller also is recognized as a dangerous timber wielder.

In addition to the lads who have broken into the Benning diamond scene this year, three of the luminaries of the 1947 mound staff will be back performing for the Doughs. They are southpaws Ken Watts of the Airborne Troopers and Collis Lehner of the Infantry School detachment Profs, and right-hander Ike Silcox, who was credited with pitching the win over Fort Bragg, N. C., last year which gave the Doughboys claim to the Third Army title.

Both Silcox and Lehner have unblemished records for the intramural season. Silcox has tossed six triumphs for the Profs while the portsider has chucked four victories, including a no-hitter over the 3440th Army Service unit early in the year.

Watts' record doesn't read quite as well as the ones chalked up by Silcox and Lehner; however, all three of the speedy southpaw's losses have been to the ISD team which glided through its slate unbeaten. To balance his record, Watts has notched three wins during the post campaign.

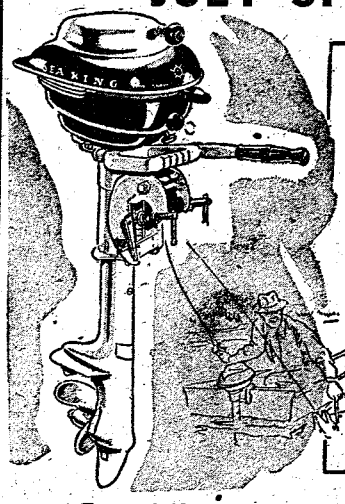
Insurance Cash For War II Vets

By unanimous decision, the Supreme Court has handed down a ruling authorizing national service life insurance dividend payments to some 16 million veterans of World War II. This reverses a previous ruling by a lower court. The ratio of payment to individual veterans is not known at this time.

Owing to the voluminous clerical work involved in computing the individual payments, many months will be required before actual distribution of dividends is begun. It is estimated that payments may reach the staggering sum of two billion dollars.



The exact status of the National Service Life Insurance surplus fund cannot be determined at the present time, but the official estimate of the over-all value of the NSLI fund is 6,735,000,000 dollars. However, not all these funds are surplus, it was pointed out.

Craig Named I. G. To Replace Wyche

New Inspector General of the Army is Maj. Gen. Louis A. Craig who replaces Maj. Gen. Ira T. Wyche who is slated for retirement shortly. During the last war General Craig commanded the 18th Field Artillery at Fort Sill and later the 97th Infantry Division. Overseas he was in command of the Ninth Infantry Division and finally the Twentieth Corps. Prior to his new assignment he was inspector general of the European Command.

Troopers Blank Medics; Secure Second Position

The Airborne battalion Troopers clinched second place in the post intra-mural diamond standings at Gowdy field last Thursday night by blasting the post Medics 15-0 behind the two-hit twirling of right-hander Bob Cronin.

Although he whiffed 11 Trooper batters and got one of his team's two bingles, chunky John Graves right-handed ace of the Medic mound staff, was the victim of wildness throughout the game. He gave up 13 free passes to first, and hit one opposing batter with a pitched ball.

An error by second-baseman Harold Newman of the docs gave the paratroopers their first duet of runs in the opening half of the first. Bob Kinard and Herb Myatt had walked before Bob Griffin, with two out, lashed out a grounder which Newman bobbled permitting Kinard to come in from third, and Myatt to score from second.

The Troopers had a field day in the second stanza, combining five base knocks with three walks and two Medic errors for a six-run total. Len Carney collected two of his team's five bingles, while Paul Bonair, Ralph Terry, and Tom Gallagher each chipped in with one.

Although Graves held the 'chutists scoreless for the next three frames, the Troopers bounced back in the fifth with another quartet of counter on safe bltws zy wuginard and pitcher Cronin, a wild pitch, and an error by Medic center-fielder Hector Pachico.

After three Medic misplays and singles by Terry and Myatt had yielded three more tallies for the visiting Airborne lads in the seventh, the tilt was called by mutual agreement of the managers.

Outside of Graves' scratch single, the only other safety landed by the Medics was a line single to left-center in the fifth stanza by first-sacker Paul Lewish.

IN SECOND WEEK

Having completed their first week of training, the students of basic airborne class No. 20, company G, Airborne battalion, Students Training regiment, go into their second week with a loss of only nine men.

LANGUAGE STUDY PLEA BEING ANSWERED HERE

Fort Benning is cooperating to the fullest possible extent with the recent plea of Gen. Jacob L. Devers for more extensive training in foreign languages for army personnel.

In response to the urgent need for army linguists, the Infantry Center's Army Education Center is now offering courses in elementary French, Spanish, German and Russian, as well as intermediate courses in Spanish and French.

In a recent address, General Devers, commander of the Army Field Forces, declared that colleges and universities can make a contribution to national security by placing more emphasis upon language courses.

Indicating that troops familiar with the language of their enimies are much better equipped to "deal intelligently" with them, he reminded his listeners that knowledge of another language besides English would be of value in dealing with foreign allies, captured prisoners and the civilian population of conquered territories.

Many of the difficulties of World War II could have been eased if more U. S. soldiers had been able to speak foreign languages, the general stated.

The number of language courses available at the school here can be increased and any language may be studied, provided there are sufficiant demands for it, according to officials of the vocational training program.

New Uniform Fit Planned by Army After Q. M. Study

So your pants don't fit when you draw them from the supply sergeant? Well, that's a complaint that the army is doing something about. Or at least the Army's Quartermaster' Corps which is responsible for seeing that you have pants, whether or not they fit.

For the QM has just finished studying the measurements of 17,341 men ranging in age from 17 through 26, the young ones entering service and the older ones leaving. From the mass of data derived from this measurement study, the QM is revising its clothing tariffs to reduce surpluses of unwanted sizes and prolong the wearing life of clothing through better fitting.

So now maybe your pants will fit when you draw them from the supply sergeant. He won't have to toss you a pair and tell you to grow into them.

Fair Treatment To Be Given All

Better protection for the American soldier is in the offing with the drafting of a new system of Army justice, on which the Army has been working for some time.

In an effort to assure completely fair treatment under Army law for officers and enlisted men, the Army has been striving to change the old system of justice.

Probably the most revolutionary change allows the enlisted man to sit as a member of general and special courts martial. The principle difference between general and special courts martial is that the special is limited in the sentence it may impose.

Under the new system an enlisted man defendant is permitted to have enlisted men on the bench up to at least one third of the total number selected for the bench.

These new provisions however, will not become effective for eight months.

LEAVES POST . . . Col. Frank Ward who has been chief of the General section of the Infantry School, leaves today for Fort McPherson, Ga., where he will assume his new duties as Deputy Post commander.

HEROE'S REWARD . . . Lt. Col. Jesse F. Wheeler, commanding officer of the 204th Transportation Truck Battalion, pins the Bronze Star on S-Sgt. Marcellus Odums of the 666th Company at ceremonies last week.

UNDER REORGANIZATION AIR DEFENSE COMMAND

The U. S. Air Force's Air Defense Command has begun its organization, reducing its six air forces to four, with the First Air Force absorbing the area now comprising the 11th, and the 14th Air Forces scheduled expand to include the present 10th Air Force area.

The 10th Air Force will be transferred to the present Second Air Force area. The 11th and Second Air Forces will cease to exist. The Fourth Air Force, embracing the eight far western states, will not be affected by the reorganization.

The primary objective of the reorganization is to establish the most effective air defense possible for the continental United States, according to Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding general of Air Defense Command.

Originally the Air Defense Command's present six air forces and their areas of control were established to coincide with those of the six army areas of in the United States.

sions, six national guard divisions and supporting combat and service troops of the regular army, national guard and fully organized units of the organized reserves. The divisions will be completely organized, maintained at full strength, and will have sufficient priority in training and supply to make them immediately available for use. The guard and organized reserve units will not be on active duty in federal service but will be as ready as possible by means of training and sufficient equipment to permit their immediate use on call of the president.

In addition to the divisions, the force will include anti-aircraft artillery and other supporting combat and service troops to enable it to function as a balanced D-Day force.

Under the provisions of the act, men who serve less than three years on active duty (32 months in the case of extended terms of inductees) will be transferred to the reserve components at the end of their active service. This will make it possible to increase substantially the effective strength of the reserve components and will be a material contribution to national security.

The initial call for inductions will be relatively small and the size of subsequent calls will be controlled by the rate of voluntary enlistments in the regular army. Men called by Selective Service will be only those needed to make up the difference between voluntary recruitment and scheduled requirements. It is expected that 30,000 inductions will be required monthly and that these monthly increments will bring the army up to its full authorized strength by July 1, 1949.

To provide for the expanded army about 20,000 additional officers will be required, mostly captains and lieutenants. These will include reserve and national guard officers who volunteer for extended active duty.

Future Inductees

Brig. Gen. Wayne C. Zimmerman the 17th Airborne Division.)

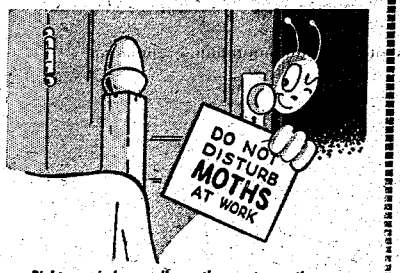
In addition, there will be combat units of less than division size, as well as service and supporting troops training at Fort Bliss, Tex.; Camp Carson, Colo.; Fort Meade, Md.; Camp Cooke, Cal.; Fort Devens, Mass., and Fort Worden, Wash.

After completion of eight weeks of basic individual training, which is the same for all recruits, the soldiers will either be continued on duty in the United States or sent overseas. However, no 18-year-olds, volunteering for one year, will be sent outside the United States. Following basic some men will be given advanced technical training while others will be sent to technical schools. Those men who asre assigned to units will be given advanced individual and unit training in the branches to which they are assigned.

War II and at the Universal Military Training Experimental Center at Fort Knox, Ky. have been incorporated into basic and advanced training. The objective of the training will be to produce a well-coordinated, physically conditioned, mentally alert, thoroughly trained soldier capable of efficiently performing any task to which he may be assigned. The training will seek to promote the individual initiative and resourcefulness of the soldier, and it is the intention of the army that these qualities not be handicapped or restricted by harsh or unnecessary discipline.

Best Of Everything

There will be opportunities for the qualified soldier, whether he enters the army as a volunteer or through Selective Service, to earn promotion to any non-commissioned grade and to be considered for an Officers' Candidate School. Successful completion of an Officers' Candidate Course will lead to a commission in the active reserve and officers so commissioned will serve for the same periods of active duty and in the reserve as other inductees. Up to 10 per cent of those completing OCS training may be designated as distinguished graduates and will be eligible for direct appointment as second lieutenants in the regular army.



The military equipment for training will be largely that used or developed in the recent war, but many of the latest types of weapons will not be immediately available in sufficient quantities. However, limited funds will be utilized for rehabilitation of weapons and other equipment. There will be ample in quantity and quality for training a modern army in methods and techniques, using the lessons learned in the last war and the most up-to-date concepts of the nature of warfare in the immediate future. The training doctrine is flexible and its application will be geared to the foreseeable progress of scientific developments of new weapons and other equipment.

The 18 year old volunteers for one year's training and service, like other recruits and selectees, will be sent to present training centers for processing. The first groups of these trainees will then go to major combat units for eight weeks of basic training. Insofar as possible they will remain with these combat units during their term of active service.

At the earliest practicable date, when facilities for this purpose become available, subsequent groups will receive their basic training at the regular training centers to be set up, after which they will go to selected combat, supporting and service units for the remainder of their year of active service.

They will be given the same training and opportunities as other members of the army except that they will not be sent overseas. At the end of their year of active service these volunteers will be transferred to the organized reserves for six years.

June Bond Sales Exceed $ 31,000

Fort Benning military and civilian personnel purchased a total of $31,395.05 worth of United States savings bonds through the payroll savings plan during June in the conclusion of the local drive held in conjunction with the nationwide "Security Loan" campaign which ended June 30.

During the drive, a total of $89,381.05 was purchased by post personnel through the savings plan and another $17,623.75 in cash purchases for a grand total of $87,004.80.

Although the amount in June was higher than any preceding month, the percentage of purchases was slightly lower in both military and civilian brackets. Twenty-one per cent of the eligible civilian workers secured a total of $10,400 through payroll deductions. Ten per cent of the eligible enlisted personnel procured bonds totaling $17,595 via deductions and $3,996.50 through cash purchases, while a total of $3,639.25 by way of pay deductions was secured by six per cent of the officers during June, and $3,643.75 in cash purchases.

The reports for June show a reversal of final tabulations in that the total for June show a increase but the percentage dropped considerably, while the percentage of purchases was higher than the preceding month. The drop during May may be attributed to the lower number of eligible participants with a good many of the personnel participating in the maneuver "Exercise Assembly", officials said.

A recapitulation of figures for the "Security Loan" drive period between April 15 and June 30 shows a total of $23,743 worth of bonds secured through payroll savings for April; $21,193.50 in May and $31,395.05 in June, with cash purchases totaling $3,028 for April $6,954.25 for May and $7,640.25 last month. Payroll deduction totals include both military and civilian personnel, while cash procurements listed report only those of military personnel as no records of civilian cash purchase are available.

Of the total number eligible to buy bonds, the civilians showed the greatest percentage of procurers, amounting to an average of 21 per cent during the campaign.

No dollar quotas were set for Fort Benning during the loan drive, which was under the chairmanship of Lt. Col. Wesley U. Moran.

Trading Post Will Sell All Your Unwanted Items

You name it and they've probably got it at the trading post located in Doughboy stadium next to the hobby shop. And if you've got it and don't want it, they'll take it off your hands and try and sell it for you.

When someone says they've got it at the trading post, that's just what is meant. Everything from baby buggies at one dollar up to a West Point cadet's uniform at $10. Clothing, furniture, antiques, toys, radios, nursery equipment, rugs, all the paraphanelia from scores of attics and the backs of growing children through uniforms and knick-knacks.

Founded about a year and a half ago, the trading post has more than doubled in size as Benning bargain hunters swarm in looking for what they need that someone else doesn't need. According to Mrs. Luttie M. Sheppard, manager, if you've got something that you don't want, the trading post will take it off your hands, on consignment, sell it and give you the money — minus 20 per cent which is given to the Community Chest.

Big demand right now, Mrs. Sheppard says, is for nursery equipment and the Post has plenty of baby buggies from one dollar up, as well as other needed items. Or, how about a bed, any kind of bed, single bed, twin beds, big beds or little beds? The trading post even has a pair of German twin beds for sale.

Radios are five dollars and up and there are all kinds of other electrical equipment including vacuum cleaners, heaters and lamps of every type and variety. Would you like a six-piece living room set? The post has them. Or just a sofa or an occasional or easy chair. Rugs, carpets, kitchen furniture. They've got them there.

A red tiger fur coat from Italy at $75 is available, along with all other types of clothing from formal dresses to dress uniforms, including the cadet grays. There's even a cap to go with the West Point uniform — at $1.50.

... new signal chief

Ross Appointed Signal Officer

Maj. Thomas P. Ross, former instructor at the Air university, Maxwell field, Ala., has assumed his new duties as Infantry Center signal officer, replacing Capt. John T. Etheridge, who has been acting signal officer.

During the war the new signal head served with the 440th Signal Construction battalion in the southwest Pacific. He went overseas with the unit as commander of Company A, and later became commander of the battalion.

He participated in the campaigns of New Guinea, Dutch East Indies, Papua, Southern Philippines and the Phillippines. Returning to the states in 1945, he was hospitalized before being assigned as base executive and later base commander at the Air Force Ground Training Center, Fresno, Calif.

A native of Gillespie, Ill., Major Jones received his reserve commission in 1933 at the University of Illinois. He entered active duty in February, 1941, at the old Northwest Air District, Spokane Wash., which later became the Second air force.

Prior to his arrival at Fort Benning Major Jones was an instructor in the communications division of the Air university for two years.

Benning Orders New Telephone Directory

Education Center Sets New Record

Approximately 600 Fort Benning troops and their dependents have enrolled for the summer quarter of the Army Education Center which opened here last Monday night, it was announced today by Capt. Edward F. Grady, information and education officer.

Registration will remain open for another week, Captain Grady said, to allow those who still wish to take courses sufficient time to enroll.

Meanwhile, information and education officials also revealed that 37.2 per cent of the students who enrolled during the spring quarter graduated. This is the highest percentage ever attained by any armed forces education center, they said.

During the summer quarter, a total of 29 separate courses are being offered, with a total of 18 instructors. Seventeen of the instructors are civilian, and one is military. The 29 courses are divided into 34 classes.

Officials reported that typing is still the most popular course, with 80 students enrolled. English grammar continues to be one of the leading popularity contenders, it was pointed out, while the several new college courses added to the curriculum have exceeded xpectations in enrollment.

Among the new courses available this quarter are high school English, intermediate Russian, Americanism, college algebra, college American history, college English composition and college psychology.

The college courses were introduced primarily for officers who had not completed two years college work, but approximately two-thirds of the enrollment in these classes are enlisted men.

The course in Americanism is primarily for foreign-born wives of Fort Benning soldiers. It is designed to aid them in preparing for citizenship.

Two courses have returned to the schedule by popular demand, officials said. They include army supply administration on the company level and small business management.

The term will last for 10 weeks with class meetings each Monday and Thursday night from 6-8 p.m. and from 8-10 p.m. Each student is allowed to carry a maximum load of two subjects.

The summer quarter will end Sept. 20, school officials announced.

BENNING RESCUERS . . . This Fort Benning engineer trio rescued one Columbus man and three boys last Sunday morning from the swollen Chattahoochee river when civilian efforts to bring the marooned group to safety failed. They are, left to right, S-Sgt. C. L. Lewey, Capt. A. E. Clifford and M-Sgt. E. C. Crawford.

4 CIVILIANS RESCUED BY POST ENGINEERS

After being marooned in a small boat for nine hours in the raging Chattahoochee River Saturday a Columbus man, three boys and six dogs were rescued by three Fort Benning engineers.

After all efforts by civilian would-be-rescuers had failed, the three engineers, Capt. Alden E. Clifford, S-Sgt. Clifton L. Lewey and M-Sgt. Eugene Crawford, set out and brought in the castaways who had started out earlier on a camping trip.

Notified a few minutes before 2 a.m. Sunday morning that aid was needed, the engineers launched their power boat and within an hour the man, boys and dogs were safe. The actual rescue took only about 15 minutes according to Captain Clifford.

The operation, said Captain Clifford, was extremely risky by the time they were called out. It was pitch dark and raining, and the river with a current already running up to 15 miles an hour, was still rising. In addition, the rescue took place only 150 yards above treacherous falls in the Chattahoochee. The engineers' 18-feet utility inboard boat, however, was able to buck the currents, something that civilian rescuers' boats could not do.

Monday the engineers played "river cowboy," bringing in about 150 head of dairy cattle that had been swept downstream when the waters of the swollen river inundated their pastures.

Religious services at Chapel No. 3 will be conducted for the next two weeks by Chaplain (Maj) Sylvester R. Bright, Officer's Reserve Corps. Chaplain Bright, who is currently doing a 30 days tour of duty, is serving during the absence of Chaplain (Capt) Gerald L. Hayden, who is on leave.

During World War II, Chaplain Bright served in Yokohama with the Eighth Army's Second and Eleventh major ports. Returning to the states in October 1946, he served as assistant Post Chaplain of the Port of Embarkation at Charleston, S. C.

In civilian life Chaplain Bright is pastor of the Bulah First Baptist Church at Quitman, Ga. and the Bethel First Church at Odel, Ga. He will remain at Ft. Benning during his tour of duty.

An eagle-eyed mountaineer led his lanky, overgrown son into a school house. "This here boy's after larnin' ", he said to the school's superintendent. "What can you larn him?"

"Our curriculum, sir," replied the educator, "consists of geography, arithmetic, trigonometry."

"That's fine," interrupted the hillbilly, "fix him up with trigernometry, cause he's the worst shot in the family."

Post Dialogue

In order to help fill the need for men with educational background in the vastly technical modern post-war army, a great educational program is being carry out. At Fort Benning the information and education office, in its vocational school, has one of the largest and most complete off-duty educational systems in the army. To find out in what way soldiers are taking advantage of educational opportunities offered at Fort Benning, this week the Inquiring Reporter asked eight men the question, "Have you tried to advance your education while in the service, and, if so, how?"

T-4 John P. Leonard, Company B, 325th infantry regiment: Well, yes. I learned how to take care of myself during the 31 months I was overseas, and in all ways, as a soldier. As far as education is concerned, I did a lot of travelling and saw a lot of places and things I would never have seen otherwise that didn't cost me a thing. I've been in Guam, Guadalcanal, Kwajalein, Okinawa and the Philippines. I've been in the army 13 years."

Leonard McDonald

S-Sgt. Earl W. McDonald, Headquarters, Seventh Infantry regiment: "Since I've been back, I've been studying every manual I can get my hands on concerning army correspondence and administration. I've been in the air force eight years and during the war I was in the Pacific theater. I'm studying now so that I can get a T-O job as an administrative NCO. I put in about four or five hours a week at home on my studying."

Pvt. Charles L. Travis, Company I, 504th Airborne Infantry regiment: "I only completed the 10th grade in high school so I just took the high school level G. E. D. test so that I can get the equivalent of a high school education. I think I did pretty well. I've got two years to go on this enlistment, and if I passed the test, I'm going to go on and take USAFI courses."

Travis Carson

Second Lt. Eugene T. Carson, Company I, 504th Airborne Infantry regiment: "I'm going to get a regular army commission so I just took the college level G.E.D. test so that I will be eligible to apply for a competitive tour. I've already taken USAFI courses in psychology and English and now I'm going to take some U. S.—AFI college extension courses.

I've been in the army five one half years and have been an officer for six months. During the war I was a flight engineer with the Eighth air force."

S-Sgt. Carl L. Swanson, Service company, Seventh Infantry regiment: "I took a course in arithmetic which didn't hurt me at all. But I got married since then and don't have any time anymore. Anyway, I'm getting plenty of education from my wife. I've had four and one half years of ervice in the air force, where I was a mail clerk with the 359th Fighter group.

Swanson Jayson

Sgt. Francis L. Jayson, Squadron A. 319th A.F.B.U., Lawson field: "I've taken a course in shorthand and the college level GE.D. examination. This present term I'm taking college level American history and psychology. I've been in service four and one half years. I was in college when I joined the cadets, and was a pilot during the war with the Eastern Flying Training command as a basic flying instructor. Now I want to finish college and prepare myself for better positions in the air force or on the outside."

T-Sgt. Jason Richardson, Service company, 325th Infantry regiment: "In my more than 12 years in service I've had a lot of schooling of the army type in order to better myself in the army. I've gone to gunnery school, the army seamanship school, saddler school, the amphibious engineer school and noncom schools. I've got a lot of satisfaction out of attending these schools and it has helped me advance in the army."

Richardson Campbell

Capt. Hubert S. Campbell, Headquarters, Seventh Infantry regiment: "Right now I'm taking an extension course in accounting from the University of Georgia. About five years ago, I took an extension course in bridge engineering. Now I'm working on a college education, and am going to try to get my degree by taking extension courses. I've had six years in the army, and was overseas 37 months in the Pacific with the 33rd Infantry division.

ROTC Students Pass Half-Way Training Mark

Having passed the halfway mark in their six-week's summer session of training, the 532 ROTC cadets at Fort Benning are now beginning work in offensive combat.

For the field artillery battery, which has completed small arms practice, service of the piece, extensive work on unobserved fire, map and aerial photo reading signal communications practice and air observation, next week's schedule calls for actual artillery firing and an infantry-tank-artillery demonstration.

This week the three rifle companies, which have already completed small arms and mortar firing, are woking on offensive combat. They are also receiving instruction with rocket launchers, rifle grenades, flame throwers and recilles weapons. Next week's activities call for instruction in defensive combat and mechanical training with automatic rifles and machine guns.

Col. Torrence To Command Benning Unit

Col. James F. Torrence, formerly of the operations and training division, Department of the Army, will assume command of the 325th Regimental combat team, it was announced this week.

Colonel Torrence is a graduate of the United States military academy and also graduated from the infantry School regular course and the Infantry School's tank course. He is replacing Col. Charles H. Royce who will become chief of staff of the 10th Mountain division at Fort Riley, Kans., next month.

Ex-Wacs Given Active Service

The Army has disclosed this week that pending the officer integration into the Regular Army of the initial group of 500 women authorized by the law establishing a permanent Women's Army Corps, WAC officers will continue on active duty with the Army.

Former WAC officers may now apply for return to active duty and those officers now on active duty must apply for a commission in the WAC section of the Officers Reserve Corps or to be separated by October 1, 1948. Acceptance in the ORC for active duty will be based on the needs of the service and qualifications as proven by past record of service, plus the recommendations of current immediate supervisors.

Any Ex-WAC officer desiring recall to active duty in the WAC, Army United States, must write to the Adjutant General, Attention, AGPR, Washington, 25, D.C. requesting standard from WD GO 160, for return to active duty.

A second choice offered the former WAC officer is to apply directly for a Reserve commission by going to the nearest Recruiting Station or Army installation and filling out Form 170-1. If active duty is desired at the time of such application, Form 160 and 170 should be submitted simultaneously.

PREVIEWS OF PROGRESS TO OPEN HERE TONIGHT

Benningites will get an opportunity to see some of the latest scientific developments of the century when General Motors present its previews of Progress in an elaborate stage production at the Main theater tonight and Friday at 9 p.m.

Under the auspices of special services, the non-commercial demonstration is designed to stress the greatness of America, officials report. The production has been prepared for easy understanding.

Included on the program will be a demonstration of jet propulsion with a miniature jet engine in actual operation and models of jet propelled planes and a buzz-bomb propelled by tiny but powful jets of compressed gas.

Spectators will see synthetic rubber manufactured on the stage, while a lecturer will explain what synthetci manufacture means in the atomic age.

Another highlight of the display will be the demonstration of the progress made in lighting, from Edison's first incandescent bulb to the mercury vapor lamp. This mercury vapor lamp is smaller than a cigarette, but gives a light one-fifth as brilliant as sunlight.

Also slated for demonstration are the development of sound-recording, bgeinning with Edison's phonograph; induction heating; and beam music.

The show will last approximately 55 minutes and admission is free.

Bad Ethics

The Bayonet has been slightly amazed at the recent misreporting of facts by newspapers regarding the coming to Fort Benning of additional infantry divisions. We believe firmly in the army cooperating to the fullest extent with civilian news sources, but we deplore civilian news sources "jumping the gun," so to speak, in order to blazon some sensational headline across their front pages. To us that is definitely not good 'journalistic" ethics, for, as so often is the case, it usually leads to a complete distortion of the true facts.

This has been borne out on two different occasions during the past few days, when it was erroneously revealed that the Third Infantry division would be brought to full strength and moved to Fort Benning. This was later changed to the Eighth division when it was discovered that the Third would not be transferred here.

We do not know who has been responsible for this misinformation, but we do know that it has been widespread—not only was it reported in the vicinity but in newspapers hundreds of miles away. Certainly, it would have been more logical to check the facts with local authorities before publication instead of taking a chance that those facts were correct. Some reporters are obviously more interested in submitting a "big story" than they are in reporting facts; or, perhaps, the reporters' informants are more interested in releasing a "big story" than they are in releasing the facts.

Whoever is to blame for these mistakes should be reprimanded. It's not a very important item, really, but such reporting could lead to chaotic conditions since newspapers do mould public opinion, and since most peole still do believe what they read in newspapers.

Welcome, WAC

The campaign for admission of the Women's Army corps to the regular establishment has been a long and arduous task, but we are happy to note that it has finally been approved. Since becoming editor of The Bayonet we have strongly advocated such a move, believing that women, who served their country so well during the war, should be compensated by integration into the regular peacetime army.

There are doubtlessly many "die-hards" who disapprove of such a measure, maintaining that the army is no place for a woman. We find this a little unfair in view of the excellent job done by the WAC during the war years. As was discovered after the invasion of Europe got under way, the U. S. had underestimated its minimum needs for engaging in all-out warfare. Too many able bodied men,it was learned, had been placed in service jobs which could easily have been handled by women. It was then necessary to begin shifting these troops from their jobs in the zone of the interior to the battle theaters and to relpace them with women in khaki.

These women did man-size jobs. some of them fell in love with army life, and some wanted to become regulars. It looked hopeless for a while.

They should be admired for their perseverance. Instead of returning to civilian life, they remained in uniform and endeavored to carry out their appointed duties with as much enthusiasm as they did when they were being praised by the people at home as well as by the army.

The Bayonet welcomes the WAC to the regular establishment. It has been in the past, and will be in the future, a distinct honor to serve with these women who have decided to show man that they can do a man-size job. We are happy to know that there is no longer any substantial opposition to equal rights for women.

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

WE HAVE JUST returned from a 15-day leave in Miami, Fla., America's lush vacation paradise. This was our first trip to tropical America since early 1943 when we spent four days ogling the beautiful sights and getting our full of that wonderful sun with which South Florida seems to be blessed.

There is one point regarding Florida, especially Miami, which we want to clarify so that there will be no mistaken idea that we have plenty of money to throw away. In the summer, Miami is no more expensive than any other resort town; in fact, everything considered, the cost involved is low indeed. Another point we'd like to make concerns the weather, which some think is too hot during the summer. During our 15 days in Miami, the temperature never rose above 83! Further north, if we can believe the Miami newspapers, the temperatures rose to as high as 99 degrees.

ROOMS IN HOTELS on the beach can be had for as low as fifteen dollars weekly, while tourist court, lodges, and small hotels on the outskirts of Miami cost as little as ten dollars weekly. We frankly don't know of any resort with rates so low as these.

Food is high on the beach although not unreasonable. It costs less in Miami. But the food is really a gourmet's delight. There is no place in America, perhaps no place in the world, where such excellent cuisines are so prevalent. The charcoal broiled steaks alone would make the trip worthwhile. Fruit pies were the only items we found under par.

THERE ARE MANY things open to the public which cost absolutely nothing. Foremost among these, of course, is the beach. There are miles and miles of beautiful, white sandy beaches with stately royal palm trees providing shade for those with tender skin. Fishing from any of the bridges connecting Miami beach with the mainland is also free, and there is almost nightly entertainment at Biscayne park.

Naturally there are many superb nightclubs both in Miami and on the beach. Entertainers are direct from the best known nightspots in the U. S., Cuba, and South America.

IF PLANNING a trip somewhere this summer, we suggest Miami for the time of your life. Two words of caution: Stock up on cigarettes because they are mighty expensive there; don't stay in the sun too long because it burns outrageously rapid. We know these things because we found them out the hard way!

Chaplain's Corner..

FREE MEN

BY

Chaplain Elwood L. Temple

It is natural for a man to want to be free. For this very reason some men avoid religious faith since it seems to them to take away a part of their cherished freedom. Such an attitude reflects both a mistaken idea of religious faith and a mistaken opinion of what freedom really is.

Actually, the only truly free man is the sincerely religious man. To be free, a man must be at liberty to do what he wants to do. When our desires are selfish or evil, that is, non-religious, we are not free to do what we want to do because we cannot express our desires without coming into conflict with rules, regulations and controls of various kinds, some in our own hearts and some outside ourselves. These restraints have been set up to keep us from harming themselves and others. Laws against stealing are intended to keep dishonest desires from becoming dishonest actions. God's voice in your conscience restrains wrong impulses. So the truth is that a man with selfish and evil desires is not free to do what he wants to do. His life is a constant conflict between the things he wants to do and the restraints which prevent the doing of them.

Religious faith is not just another restraint. It has to do not so much with the expression of desires as with the desires themselves.

Faith is the foundation of a fellowship with God through which we become personally acquainted with the things out of which a free life is built. There are no restraints on truth, love, reverence, honesty, purity, helpfulness, mercy, courtesy, self-control, or any other of the Christian attitudes. To the extent that a man's life, through faith in God, is in harmony with these Christian qualities, he is truly free to do what he wants to do, simply because this faith will lead him to want to do only those things which are approved of by God. Only such a man can begin to know freedom.

The Scripture says: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Read Galatians 5:16-24.

Your Red Cross

By R. L. GEORGE

Fear is a powerful motivating force in our lives. We fear the unknown. We fear the disapproval of our friends and associates. This fact has a decided influence on our mode of dress and many other factors in our lives. In order to fit into the social patterns of our lives we learn to play bridge. How much, if any, time have you spent in learning first aid? Are you, as a mother or father, capable of giving first aid to your children? In this modern day of daily automobile accidents, could you prevent a victim from bleeding to death? Could you provide proper transportation?

The following questions were used in a recent first aid examination. How many can you answer?

1. What is the definition of first aid?
2. Name three symptoms of shock?
3. Three words cover the first aid treatment for shock. What are they?
4. What is a dressing? What is a bandage and what is it used for?
5. What are the four kinds of wounds?
6. What are the two dangers in wounds?
7. Name five symptons of infection.
8. Artificial respiration logically divides into three phases. What are they?
9. What is the first aid treatment for poisons?
10. What is a strain? What is the first aid treatment?
11. What are the degrees of burns? Define each.
12. What are the first aider's three duties in the care of burns?
13. What is a sprain? What is the first aid treatment?
14. Describe the cause, symptoms and first aid of sunstroke.
15. Describe the cause, symptoms, and first aid of heat exhaustion.
16. There are two chief dangers from burns. Name them.
17. In examining an unconscious person what are the first three important things to look for? Name them in their order of importance. Describe briefly the first aid for each.
18. What preventative measures can you take against fainting?
19. If a victim of an accident cannot open and close his fingers, or grasp your hand firmly, his ——— is probably broken. What is an important thing to remember in giving first aid?
20. If he can move his fingers but not his feet or toes, his ——— is probably broken. What is the first aid?

The American National Red Cross has an eighteen - hour course in first aid (nine two-hour classes) which you will be proud to have completed. Classes can be arranged. Contact the field office by letter or by phoning 3531.

THE SAXON CHARM

"The Saxon Charm", Frederic Wakeman attempts to do for the theatre what he did for radio in "The Hucksters", but he succeeds only in writing a rather confused sketch of a fantastic and utterly unappealing character.

Matt Saxon, the New York producer in "The Saxon Charm", will inevitably be compared to Evan Llewellyn Evans, the soap magnate and billion-dollar advertiser of "The Hucksters". They are both "characters" and possibly caricatures, but we can at least laugh at Evans. Saxon, on the other hand, produces no emotion but disgust. He is completely selfish, and if the "charm" of the title exists in him, it is well hidden from the reader. It is hard to understand the man's overwhelming fascination for such women as Rhea Birkani, or the actress, Alma Wragge, or his ex-wife, Vivian, or any of the dozens of others he plays around with until he gets tired and then kicks out. Just as unbelievable is his hypnotic influence over such men as the apparently sensible young novelist, Eric Busch, who, with no other excuse than that he wants to have his play produced on Broadway, almost sacrifices his entire career and his personal happiness.

The action of the story—what little there is—concerns the fate of Busch's play. The young man, a very successful novelist who could have had his choice of any producer on Broadway, for some obscure reason chooses Saxon, now almost bankrupt from his extravagance and his three successive flops. Then Saxon proceeds to make over not only the play, but the author's life as well, with almost disastrous results.

Written almost entirely in dialogue, with no long descriptive passages, "The Saxon Charm" makes easy, if monotonous, reading. It has its full quota of bedroom scenes, off color conversations, and "different" characters, and although it will hardly be as popular as "The Hucksters", it will probably appeal to a number of readers.

"The Saxon Charm" is now available at the Main library.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

SO EVIL MY LOVE (melodrama) with Ray Milland, Ann Todd and Geraldine Fitzgerald. The story of a bitterly inhibited widow of a missionary who, returning home to England, meets and is captivated by the charms of a ne'er-do-well artist who is not above theft, forgery and murder. Recommended for adult.

MELODY TIME (Disney cartoon feature in technicolor). The magic Disney touch with the musical assistance of Buddy Clark, Dennis Day, Andrews sisters, Ethel Smith, Fred Warring's Pennsylvanians, Roy Rogers and Freddy Martin's orchestra, produce many novel scenes and amusing cartoon characters. Recommended for family.

THE EMPEROR WALTZ (musical comedy technicolor) with Bing Crosby, Joan Fontaine and Roland Culver. In 1900, an ambitious talking machine salesman attempts to sell the new gadget to the Austrian emporer, meets a countess, and the result is a colorful story of fun and nonsense. Recommended for adult.

BIG TOWN SCANDAL (crooks and sports) with Philip Reed and Hillary Brooke. The Big Town newspaper sponsors a basketball team and has a fight on its hands when crooks try to use the players to win some "easy money."

JINX MONEY (melodrama) with Leo Gorcey and Huntz Hall. The Bowery Boys learn that "finder is keeper" is not such a good rule when the loser happens to be a gangster trying to regain $50,000 they found. Recommended for family.

CORONER CREEK (western in cinecolor) with Randolph Scott, Marguerite Chapman and George MacReady. The producers advertise this as "rough and rugged." They are not fooling. It has all the slam-bang action required for a top-notch western, plus color photography. Recommended for family.

ABBOTT AND COSTELLO MEET FRANKENSTEIN (comedy) with Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. The chills and laughs come thick and fast as Abbott and Costello find themselves in the clutches of Dracula, the Wolfman and Frankenstein. Recommended for family.

KEY LARGO (melodrama) with Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall and Edwin G. Robinson. When tough Bogart, scheming Robinson and sultry Bacall team up, the result is sure to be a double-dealing and strong-arm stuff. Recommended for adult.

TAYLOR PROMOTED

Pfc. Charles A. Taylor, Company C, Infantry School detachment, has been promoted to the grade of corporal, officials have announced.

NOW IN FOURTH WEEK

The Airborne battalion's Company G is now in its fourth week of training, it was reported this week.

Guard: "Ten prisoners have broken out, sir."
Provost Marshal: "Did you give the alarm?"
Guard: "No, I called the medics. It looked like measles to me."

P-X Identification Cards Issued To Benningites

In an effort to protect the privileges of buying of items more cheaply in post exchanges by military and other authorized personnel, the post exchanges are now issuing special cards for identification purposes.

The A card is issued to all dependents of military personnel over 16 years of age, while card B is issued to exchange employees, civilians living on the post and those persons authorized commissary privileges. Civilians employed, but not residing on the post, are permitted to buy only food and drinks which must be eaten on the premises and one ipack of cigarets, on which they must pay the state tax.

Military personnel and holders of A and B cards are permitted to purchase anything in the post exchanges as well as special items, according to Lt. Col. Clayton M. Ela, exchange officer.

According to Colonel Ela, the reason behind the tightened restrictions is to forestall any complaints from civilian businessmen that the Px's, operated for the benefit of troops and their dependents, are competing unfairly, due to lower prices, by selling to non-military personnel.

Today is the last day that cards will be issued in the Main PX. After today they may be obtained in the exchange office over the cafeteria. Officers requesting cards for their dependents may use their AGO cards as identification, while enlisted men can use their class A passes.

Colonel Ela said that soldiers in civilian clothes may now purchase items in post exchanges provided they show either their AGO card or Class A pass. Under the old setup this was not permitted.

The A and B cards issued at this time are effective until next January. They will then be issued yearly, Colonel Ela said.

Graduates Await Orders

Graduates of the Airborne battalion's Company F are awaiting orders which will assign them duties with the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C. the 11th Airborne division in Japan and the 325th Infantry at Fort Benning, officials said today.

Fiction Rates High On Readers' List

BY SGT. MERRILL HARRISON

Of the 30,000 books on the shelves of the four libraries at Fort Benning, the most popular in demand are the popular "sex" novels of the "Forever Amber" type and narrations of World War II. That is the resulting observation of Miss Louise White, librarian at the Main Library.

The Main Library has about 15,000 volumes, while each of the other three libraries, located on the Main Post, in Sand Hill and in the Station Hospital each have about 5,000 books. The reading habits of Benningites, according to Miss White's observation, are just like those of civilians in any other community.

Turnover of books each month is something that most civilian libraries could be proud of, however. During June, an average month, 5,755 books were withdrawn from the four libraries. Readers checked out 3,458 books from the Main Library, 1,205 from the Sand Hill branch, 645 from the smaller branch on the Main Post and 449 from the Hospital Library.

First choice in requests is popular fiction of the type mentioned above. Among the most popular of these books are Yerbe's "Foxes of Harrow" and "The Vixens," the novels of James M. Cain, James T. Farrell and Erskine Caldwell, and Miss Winsor's lusty "Forever Amber." Requests for books of this type are followed by calls for the latest books on the war and the current international political situation. The late Generals George S. Patton's and Joseph W. Stilwell's diaries and Colonel Robert S. Allen's "Lucky Forward" have been in greatest demand recently along with new books by former Secretaries Byrnes and Stinson.

Foreign language grammars, especially French, Spanish and German, books on psychology and serious works by such writers as Dostoievski, Tolstoi and other classicists are also in great demand. In addition, persons "shipping" overseas are voracious readers of books about the countries of their destination. There has been a great demand for information on Korea. Along with books on sports, especially those of the Ben Hogan advice to golfers type, there is the usual terrific demand for westerns and mysteries. "I don't think people will ever quit reading Zane Grey," Miss White remarked.

NO DISTINCTION

According to requests, the younger readers prefer the lighter material and the older ones check out the more difficult and serious tomes. As far as any suggested difference in reading habits because of rank, it appears that there is none. Officers, enlisted men and families of soldiers read the same books and show the same preferences.

Despite the great outlet of books each month, influx, too, is heavy. Last month the library acquired 419 new books, 377 in May and 398 in April. None of the books are purchased just because they are those that "people ought to read." The buying lists are made up from the books that people want to read as shown by lists of best sellers and requests from individuals. Most titles purchased are, of course, fiction, which is what the readers want.

Getting the books back into the libraries once they are checked out is not too difficult a problem. About a third of the readers keep their books a bit long, but overdue notices are sent out and they are rapidly brought in. Just in case a reader ignores the overdue notice; however, the libraries crack down with a letter through channels. Then the books are returned, or if lost, paid for. But not many are lost.

In addition to circulating books each library has about 900 to 400 standard reference volumes which do not circulate. These range from encydopedias to language dictionaries and are often used, in addition to their intended purposes, for settling bets.

Magazine subscriptions to the tune of 130 are also a big part of the libraries, extending alphabetically from "American Home" te "United Nations World." The Main Library has about 60 of these subscriptions with the other 70 divided among the other three libraries.

VARIETY OF MATERIAL

Eight newspapers are received daily by the Main Library. These include The New York Times, PM (now the New York Star,) the Christian Science Monitor, Washington Post, San Francisco Chronicle, Chicago Tribune, Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta constitution and Columbus Ledger.

Besides books, magazines, newspapers and other standard library fare, the Main Library also boasts a record library of about 100 albums. Contained in a separate music room where they may be played are over 500 records, most of which, while classic and semi-classic are considered very popular. Most often played are works by Kern Ravel, Khatchaturian (he wrote "Saber Dance) Beethoven and Tschaikovsky.

For persons studying foreign languages, the library also has record sets which can be checked out. In German, French, Spanish and Italian, they are the same type provided by the Information-Education Division for Army language classes.

A smaller, separate library of children's books has also been set up in the Main Library. Situated in the music room, this library has about 400 books for children from nursery school age to 12 or 13. The children take out "stacks" of these books and never seem to get tired of reading over and over again. They bring them back, too, and on time.

Despite the fact that there are four libraries handling all these books, papers, magazines and records, along with the necessary paper work, only nine people work in the libraries. There are five civilian librarians, headed by Miss Frances Dozier, and four soldiers assigned to work added. Despite the fact that in the libraries.

Practically all the repair work on books is done by regular library personnel, Miss White added. Despite the fact that the books are so frequently handled, not much damage results. What deterioration there is, is mostly the result of poor workmanship by publishers.

Lt. Fernbough Reports Here

Lt. Richard M. Fernbough reported to Lawson Air Force base for duty last week, and will assume the duties of training officer. He was previously stationed at Barksdale Air Force base, Louisana, with the Air Training command.

The lieutenant served with the 10th and 14th air forces in the China-Burma-India theater during the past war as a navigator-bombardier. He holds the DFC, Air medal, Presidantial citation with one cluster and the Aisatic-Pacific theater ribbon with four battle stars.

Fernbough is a native of Fargo, North Dakota, and attended the North Dakota State University.

During his air force career, the lieutenant has successfully completed celestial navigation, bombardier, weather forecaster and pilot training schools.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fernbough of Detroit, Mich.

PLANTING THE BAIT . . . Miss Louise White is shown building a special display within trying to lure an eye or ear "customer" who may want some assistance. All the displays of this type in each library are created by regular library personnel.

SERIOUS CONTEMPLATION . . . Caught by the photographer in a studious mood in the Main Library were Pvt. Clifford E. Davis, Company A., 325th Infantry and Capt. Jess A. McNish, a reserve officer taking airborne training with the STR. Capt. McNish seems to be keeping in touch with latest developments in technique of warfare with the copy of the latest periodical.

KID STUFF . . . Cool spot on a hot afternoon was found by Neida Lamb, sprawled on the couch with Marie Scott, curled up in the chair, when they were photographed in the children's library. Neida is the daughter of M-Sgt. and Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, while Marie's parents are M-Sgt. and Mrs. Wallace S. Scott.

Third Division Plans Reunion

The third annual post - war convention of the Third "Marne" Infantry division will be be held July 22-24 at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, according to an announcement today by Kenneth B. Potter, national president of the Society of the Third Infantry division, World War I and II.

Robert E. Woodside, formerly of the 38th Infantry of the Third division and a past national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will welcome all division men and serve as general chairman of the reunion.

Included on the agenda of the three-day meeting will be the annual banquet, regimental dinners, a jamboree, annual meeting of "The Last Man's club", and a number of other events for society members and their families.

The Third Infantry division was organized in November, 1917, at Camp Green North Carolina, as a regular army unit, and during World War I distinguished itself at Chateau-Thierry and Champagn Marne, and in the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives. Following the armistice it became part of the occupation army of Germany, returning to the United States in August, 1919.

At the outbreak of World War II in September, 1939, the Third division was one of only three regular army divisions in existence in this country. It left the United States on October 27, 1942, and took part in four amphibious assaults. in North Africa, Sicily, Anzio and Southern France.

VE day found the Marne division in the vicinity of Salzburg, Germany, and it remained on occupation duty in Germany until the latter part of August, 1946. Upon its return to this country, the Third was assigned to Camp Campbell, Kentucky, where it was reduced to zero strength. It will, however, be filled to full strength at Fort Benning in the coming expansion of the army.

Officers Alerted For New Duties

A total of 14 officers from the 25th Infantry have been alerted for foreign duty, with thirteen of the officers assigned duties to Bremerhaven, Germany while the other will be stationed in Korea.

Listed among those alerted for the oversees assignments are Captains John C. Robinson, William R. Royston, Emmett E. Abels and Reginald G. Watkins and lieutenants Christian M. Georgs, Theophilus A. Lt. Paul H. Bouchard is alerted for duty to Korea.

Of the remaining 20 teams, sixteen are more than 80 per cent organized and overall orthis week to the effect that if if ceilings have been exceeded, there should be no further National Guard recruiting until normal attrition has reduced the strength below the ceiling.

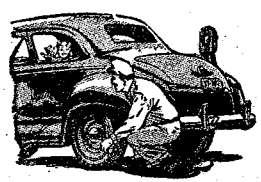
Corporal Hill saw action in the Pacific, where he spent 21 months with the navy. His home is Mount Pleasant, Tenn., and he reported to Lawson in August, 1947.



Pfc. Vasko a native of youngstown, Ohio, has been a member of the Lawson fire department for nearly two years.

Post Golfers Plan Tournament Trek

Sixteen Locals To Compete In Third Army Links Meet

Sixteen Fort Benning linksmen, who earned themselves berths on the post's delegation to the Third Army tournament in the recent 72-hole medal playoffs at the local officer's club course, are tentatively scheduled to leave for Augusta, Ga., Friday, July 23.

The army tourney, to be staged on the layout of Oliver General hospital during the latter part of this month, will serve as a yardstick to determine golfers to represent the Third army area in the all-army links meet at Fort Lewis, Wash., in August.

The Fort Benning delegation to the army tourney will be headed by Matt C. C. Bristol, who completed his tour of the 72 holes here in a 10-over-par 298, one stroke better than club champion Devert Moore, who carded a 299 for the three-day playoffs.

Team Members

The other two members of the post's four-man squad are William Wikoff, who turned in a 72-hole score of 30 and James Hungate, who needed 312 strokes to finish out the four 18-hole rounds.

In addition to the four-man team, Benning will send eight individuals, who also will be in the scramble for berths on the Third army representation. The group includes Roberta Rosa, who fired a 314; John Henion and Charles Davis, both with 315; Paul Markland, who stroked out a 319; Philip S. Grant, who carded a 320; Emil P. Eschenberg, who finished the playoff with 321, and Guy Hollenbeck and Claude English, a pair of 322 shooters.

The post also will send a team of four golfers who are over 50 years old as a senior-flight entry. The aspirants to the senior delegation, who played only 36 holes during the qualifying period here, are Fay Ross, who chalked up a 166; Daniel P. Buckland, who shot a 174; Logan Boyd, who toured the layout in 175, and Waine Archer, whose 36-hole score was 176.

Tourney Set-up

The first two days of the Oliver General hospital tourney will be devoted to the playing of qualifying rounds and the arrangement of the candidates into flights.

Golfers carding the 32 lowest will be placed in the tourney's top flight, and first-round match results will determine which 16 of the 32 remain in the championship bracket. Those who drop their first-round matches will be placed in the first flight.

Players who fail to place among the first 32 during the qualifying period will be assigned to numerical flights with each division taking in 16 golfers of approximately equal ability. It was expected that the senior flight also will be comprised of 16 players.

Army Team

Following the meet at Augusta, the semi-finalists in the championship flight only will be selected to represent the Third army at the all-army tournament at Fort Lewis. Alternates, however, will be chosen, and may get to make the trip to Washington.

The senior-flight team which will go to Fort Lewis, however, will consist of only two players, the finalists in the Third army classic.

Should Third army golf officials be able to obtain authorized air transportation to the all-army tourney, the size of both delegations will be doubled. If the travel to Washington is performed by air, all quarter-finalist of the championship flight and semi-finalists of tbe senior division will accompany the team.

Team entries for the Third army tourney are expected from Fort Benning; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; Fort McPherson, Ga.,; Oliver Genral hospital; and the Atlanta, Ga., General Distribution depot. Several independent entries from the army area's military districts also are expected.

Should any of the Third army team delegates to the all-army meet get past the competition in the tourney at Fort Lewis, they will be chosen to represent the army in the inter-service matches, slated for Pebble Beach, Calif., later this year.

Local Courtmen Depart For Net Meet At USMA

Fort Benning's two delegates on the Third army tennis squad, Sanford H. Webster and Charles Daniel, left last weekend for West Point, N. Y., to participate in the all-army court matches, which open on the U.S. Military academy courts tomorrow.

At West Point, Webster and Daniel will be joined by Robert A. Reade of Fort McPherson, Ga., William M. Kunkel of Oliver General hospital, Augusta, Ga., and Edwin Y. Arnold of Fort Bragg, N. C., the other three members of the Third army squad.

The quintet will be piloted by Webster, who captured the area singles crown here recently by defeating teammate Daniel in the finals. Daniel, who attained the Third Army finals by ousting Reade, will be No. 2 man on the area team.

Should any of the Third army delegates get past the competition in the all-army meet, they will be assigned a berth on the army's representation to the inter-service (Leech Cup) matches, scheduled for the latter part of this month in Arlington, Va. if successful in the inter-service tourney, the army players will get a shot at the Olympics.

Both Webster and Daniel are former members of U. S. Military academy court crews. The singles champ played with the West Pointers from 1937 until 1940, and served as team captain during his last season at the academy. Daniel served with the cadets in 1943 and 1944.

Two members of the Third army fivesome, Webster and Reade, played in the all-army tournament last year. Webster got as far as the simi-finals while Reade was runner-up for the consolation championship, and a member of the Leech Cup team.

BATTERY A LEADS

By winning their first game of the league schedule, softballers of Battery A of the Reserve Officers' Training corps camp moved into command of the pack with one triumph and no setbacks. Scheduled games will be played throughout the remainder of this week.

Following a forthcoming tournament, individual trophies will be presented to members of the winning team.

Tanksters of Fort Benning will be vying for berths on the local Third army pool delegation when the annual two-day post swimming meet opens on July 27 at Russ pool.

All male personnel of Benning are eligible to participate in the post meet, and entries must be submitted in writing to the post athletic officer in the special services office not later than this afternoon. No contestant will be permitted to enter more than two events.

Events to be included on the post meet program are the 50-yard free style, the 100-yard back stroke, the 220-yard free style, the 100-yard breast stroke, the 100-yard free style, the 440-yard free style, diving events and the 100-yard individual medley. The individual medley will consist of the breast stroke, back stroke, and free style swimming.

Rained Out Dough Tilt Re-Scheduled

Rain washed the Fort Benning Doughboys out of getting to open their 1948 diamond campaign on schedule Sunday night, but Manager Herb Bench and his charges hope for better behavior on the part of the weather man for the re-scheduled tilt with the Manchester, Ga., Millers here tomorrow night.

The rains Sunday afternoon forced a turnabout in the order of playing the rescheduled two-game series with the Millers. Originally, the Manchester nine was slated to invade Gowdy field Sunday night, and the Doughs were to repay the visit by motoring to Manchester Wednesday night. However, Manager Bench took advantage of an open date Friday to re-slate the rained out Dough-Miller tiff on Benning soil.

For a while it looked as if the Doughs might have to play the season's opener away, but Monday night's game with the Silvertown Millers in Thomaston, Ga., also was postponed due to moisture. The postponement came, however, after the Doughs had made the journey to Thomaston, and shortly before game time when a torrential downpour hit the Silvertown park.

Although the Dough-Silvertown tilt probably will be re-scheduled for a later date, the exact time the tiff will take place has not been decided.

Tomorrow night's make-up game will mark the inauguration of a three-day home stand for the Doughs. With all frays slated for 8 p. m. under the lights of Gowdy field, the Benningites will stage a tussle with the Maxwell field Flyers of Montgomery, Ala., Saturday night, and will entertain the Fort McPherson, Ga., nine Sunday night.

Following Sunday's game, the Doughs will have a three-day respite before leaving for Thomaston to compete in the six-day Georgia State semi-pro tournament. In the semi-pro meet, the Doughs will have to drop two classics before being ousted from the tourney.

Although some changes in the lineup may be indicated for the Maxwell field and Fort McPherson tussles, the probable starters Manager Bench will throw in against the Manchester team include shortstop Bob Kinard, third-baseman Ralph Terry, second-baseman Harold (Blondy) Burnett, right-fielder Clyde Burt, first baseman, Herb Lauve, center-fielder Joe Smith, left-fielder Bill Brooks, and catcher Tom Gallagher. The Benning pilot had not made any decision as to a starting moundsman.

WASHOUT . . . The pontoon bridge over the Chattahoochee river opposite Lawson field was another casualty of the week-end cloudburst. The swollen river, its current rising to as high as 15 miles an hour, swept the structure downriver over the week-end. An indication of the relative immensity of the flood can be gained from an examination of the position of telephone poles, cables and small buildings. Rebuilding of the bridge will be another task of the hard-pressed engineers who have rescued people, dogs and cattle from the rampaging Chattahoochee.

ASU Takes Win In Circuit Finale

Paced by the booming bat of Willie Banks, the 3440th Army Service unit diamond squad pounded out an 11-6 triumph over the 999th Field Artillery battalion in the game which brought down the curtain on Fort Benning's 1948 infra-mural season last Tuesday night.

Making five official appearances in the batters' box, Banks slammed out three singles and a triple to drive in four ASU tallies.

The ASU lads jumped to a nine-run lead during the first three innings while the artillerymen were having trouble finding the offerings of lanky Larry Hall, the ASU's right-handed mound ace.

The victors picked up three corners in the home half of the first when Banks lashed out a triple to right center to score George Henry and David Waits. A balk by pitcher Pat Young of the artillerymen permitted Banks to come home with another score.

Mike Thrailkill, ASU center fielder came in for another tally for the service unit nine in the last of the second on a single to left by pitcher Hall. Thrailkill had reached second on an error by artillery second-sacker John Griffey.

In the third, the ASU lads broke loose to score five times on three hits and a pair of misplays by Erskine Ware, first-baseman of the artillery nine. During the big frame, shortstop David Waits banged out a two-bagger for the ASU.

The first pair of artillery counters came in the visiting half of the fourth when Arthur Houston led off with a single over second base, and completed the circuit on three successive passed balls by ASU catcher Lang. Third-sacker Echols scored for the artillerymen from third base with the second run of the inning when Ulus Hale laid down a squeeze-play bunt.

Although they failed to hit in the stanza, the artillerymen scored again in the eighth when David Reed walked, went to second on a passed ball, and got gratis passes to third and home when Hall was charged with a pair of balks.

The ASU scoring was concluded in the eighth canto when the host squad managed for two tallies on singles by Lamb and Banks, and a walk to Waits.

In the top side of the ninth frame, the artillerymen staged a rally which netted them a trio of counters. With Jim Hardmon and pitcher Young on base, first-baseman Holmes blasted a triple down the right field to score two after Hardmon's single to left had brought in left fielder Duke with the first counter of the inning.

Ordnance Cops One-Sided Tiff From Truckers

After being plagued by ill fortune throughout the post intra-mural diamond league's second half, the 328th Ordnance battalion snapped back last Monday night to close out its schedule with a 12-6 triumph over the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers.

Right-hander Bob Glover, who has been the Ordance team's mound mainstay of the league's final phase, was both pitching and hitting star for the flame.

Although he gave up eight safe blows to the Truckers, Glover whiffed 15 opposing batters, and issued only four walks. In three plate appearances, the speedy right-hander banged out three singles, and knocked in two ordnance runs.

Dean Lucas started the twirling for Truckers, but was taken out in favor of southpaw Willie Love after he had given up four runs and walked four successive ordnancemen in the top half of the first. The Trucker starter finished the game in the center gardens where Love had started.

The Truckers threatened the ordnance lead in their half of the first when the first two swingers to face Gidver completed the circuit of the bases. After reaching first on an error, Love went to third on a passed ball by ordnance catcher Ed Goode, and scored when Glover uncorked a wild throw. Bob Chandler walked, stole his way around to third, and scored when catcher Potter singled to left.

A trio of passed balls by Goode, following one-baggers by Charlie Hubert and Merlin Dean in the fourth stanza, knotted the score for the Truckers.

The ordnance team again surged into the lead in the fifth frame when Glvover, who had worked Love for a walk, scored from second when Bob McCachren slapped out a left field single.

Big Stan Letonsky, the post league leader in the doubles department, got his 13th two-bagger of the year in the visiting half of the seventh, and scored when Glover singled to right.

LINKS EXPERT . . . One of the links experts to represent Fort Benning in the annual Third army golf tourney at Oliver General hospital in Augusta, Ga., later this month is Lt. Col. C. W. Davis. Although his 72-hole score fell short of those posted by the quartet to represent Benning as a four-man team, Davis will enter the Third army classic as an individual competitor.

Main Gym Skating Rink Closes; Floor Renovations Begin

Saturday night brought down the curtain on roller-skating activity in the Main gymnasium, and a renovaiton project has been started in order to make the floor suitable for basketball playing later this year.

Although cage drills by the Dough quintet will not get under way for several weeks, the immensity of the project has brought about an early closing of the rink.

All of last season's regulars will have left Fort Benning by the time the hardwood campaign gets under way this year, and all spots on the squad will be wide open, the athletic office pointed out. Interested players who are reasonably certain of being here for any part of the 1948-49 season were urged to submit their names to the post athletic office.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

We'll wager that Joe Smith is one of the happiest players in the Doughboy lineup. Reason: He is back in his old spot, the outfield.

At the time Joe joined the Infantry School detachment Profs for the intra-mural diamond campaign, there was a yawning gap in the vicinity of third base, and Manager James L. Walker turned the assignment over to Joe, who did a good job of handling the hot corner as well as chipping in with some timely stick work for the Profs.

When the intra-mural team managers started making their selections for the Dough squad, Joe compiled a sufficient number of votes to make him one of the leading candidates for the third base position, and it was in that capacity that he started working out with the post team.

However, Manager Herb Bench took into consideration some of Joe's past pro and semi-pro experience, and is giving him a crack at center field. From the way things look now, he probably will get the steady assignment, and, with Bill Brooks and Clyde (Woody) Burt, will provide the Doughs with a fleet-footed array of outer gardeners.

With Smith in the outfield, Ralph Terry, who did a bang-up job of base-patrolling for the Airborne Troopers during the intra-mural season, undoubtedly will get the steady nod for the third-sack area.

* * *

When a baseball manager is faced with two candidates for one spot whose abilities are approximately equal, the sensible thing to do is try and convert one of the two into a top contender for another position. That is exactly what Manager Bench has done in switching ex-second baseman Bob Kinard over to shortstop in order to make room for Harold (Blondy) Burnett around the keystone bag.

Although he filled in at short on a couple of occasions for the Airborne Troopers during the intra-mural race, Kinard's regular assignment with the 'chutists was at second. Bob turned in outstanding performances for both positions, but his post league record didn't quite stack up with the one piled up by Burnett, erstwhile second baseman for the ISD Profs.

During the intra-mural season, Blondy's stickwork mounted to the .381 mark, and he went errorless at second in 22 games.

The only other infield berth on the Dough squad, first base, is pretty well settled in favor of Herb Lauve, ex-Prof, after the withdrawal of big Stan Letonsky, who did his intra-mural performing with the 328th Ordnance battalion.

Despite the fact that Bench has given out his initial assignments in both the infield and outfield, several scrappy players are pushing the potential regular pretty hard, and may still break into the Dough lineup in the near future.

Among the candidates who are trying to crash the infield ranks are Herb O'Brien, ex-204th Transportation Trucker; Otto Loroesh, who handled the short-field spot for the post Medics; and Paul Bonair, who played shortstop for the Troopers.

Outfielders still being carried on the Doughboy roster are Len Carney, former Airborne outer gardener, and Harold Brown, who roamed right field for the Student Training regiment.

* * *

Although three receivers are listed with the Doughs, Manager Bench's weak link is in the catching department. Although young Gallagher is a top-notch performer with the mask and mitt, Bench is trying to avoid making the ex-Trooper a work horse behind the plate.

* * *

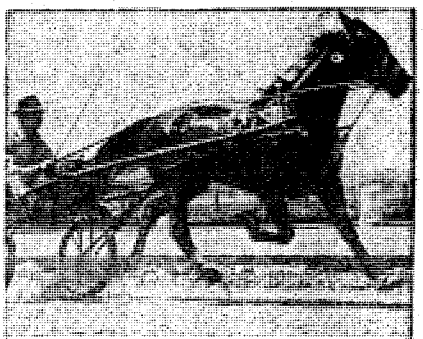
One of the Doughs' potential moundsmen already has been lost to the squad because of military necessity, and there is a possibility that another may be stricken from the list for the same reason before the season progresses very far.

Right-hander Bob Glover of the 328th Ordnance, after being voted in as a squad member by the managers, was taken off the list last week because of the importance of his assignment with his unit, and Collis Lehner, ace southpaw of the ISD Profs during the intra-mural race, may not be able to get his release to play with the post squad.

Outside of Ken Watts, Lehner was the only portsider listed on the Benning roster, and Bench said that his absence definitely would be felt during the forthcoming Georgia state semi-pro tournament. However, the inability of Glover to play with the Doughs will not amount to quite such a serious matter since the local team pilot still has six flingers who make their offerings from the starboard side of the hill.

Big Harness Event Slated Wednesday In Columbus Park

Approximately 100 of the finest harness racing horses in the South will be featured in one of the oldest sports in the United States next Wednesday afternoon on the track between Columbus and Fort Benning on the super highway.

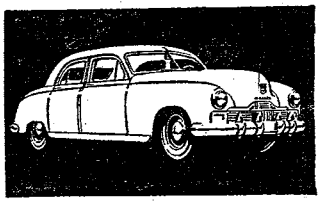


The races, which start at 3:30 p.m., will be conducted under the auspices of the Riverside Driving club.

A $1,000 purse will be at stake during the meet, one of the biggest one-day classics ever staged in the South.

Ten heats will be run off during the afternoon, and participating horses will come from Carolina, South Carolina, Florida and Illinois. Some of the animals being entered in the harness contests have recorded times as low as 2:01 minutes for a mile race.

It was Farmer Brown's first visit to the big city. In the window of a large department store he saw a sign: "Ladies Ready-to-Wear Clothing."



"Gosh!" he said, "It's about time."

Non RAs Eligible For Foreign Duty

Civilian component officers recalled to extended active duty as a result of the expansion program will be placed, insofar as possible, in their proper listing on rosters for overseas posts along with regular and non-regular army officers now on duty, Infantry Center officials have announced.

Civilian component officers who served less than 12 months overseas since Dec. 7, 1941, will be immediately eligible and available for overseas assignment.

Officers of civilian components who served from 12 to 24 months overseas since Dec. 7, 1941, are liable for assignment either to the zone of interior or overseas at the discretion of the branch concerned. The proper listing on rosters for overseas service is a function of the branch concerned. If, however, the officer is initially assigned for duty in the zone of interior, he will not be eligible for overseas assignment for 12 months.

These officers with more than 24 months overseas service since Dec. 7, 1941, will be assigned to the zone of interior for a period of one year prior to any overseas assignment.

Also revealed in the memorandum issued this week is the stipulation that civilian officers component officers requested by a specific agency for a specific assignment for which they are especially qualified may be assigned to that activity without regard for overseas credit. However, such personnel will be eligible for overseas duty after 12 months service in the zone of the interior.

An exception to this stipulation is that officers assigned to the general staff U. S. army and special staff U. S. army.

Except where special deferments have already been granted, officers with less than 24 months overseas credit will serve a minimum of two years in this assignment. After this period they will be released upon request of their branches for overseas assignment.

The division first tasted combat in Tunisia, at Oran, capturing the city intact in early November, 1942. It soon became famous for outstanding engagements, and the following spring, after shifting across Algeria, joined up with the Eighth British army. It participated in the operations at Kasserine pass, Maknassy, El Guettar, at Mateur. In the African campign it helped to establish and develop the tank - infantry teamwork that was to play an important role in the war.

After a brief appearance before Cassino, the division was switched to the Anzio beachhead where for four months it became a highly mobile defense unit. It then entered the breakthrough drive on the Italian peninsula of May 23, 1944, and claimed to be the first reconnaissance troops inside Rome. Five days later it streaked 200 bitter fighting of the Apennines ensued, and before Bologna the whole division fought as doughboys. Milan surrendered to the First Armored which cracked northern Italy by pushing to the Swiss border to Como.

They may enlist for three, four, five or six years with assurance of being assigned to anti-aircraft artillery duties.

They will be given refresher training at Fort Bliss before receiving more permanent assignments.

11th Armored Sets Reunion During August

The second annual convention of the 11th (Thunderbolt) Armored division will be held August 12-14 in New York City, according to an announcement by Colonel Willard A. Holbrook (retired), of the division association.

One of the principal questions to be considered at the session will be that of the group's lending support to the erection of a school at Bastogne, Belgium.

The division first saw World War II action in the Battle of the Bulge when it defended the highway linking Bastogne to Neufchateau, Belgium. Subsequent to the Battle of the Bluge, the 11th Armored distinguished itself in the Third army drive across Germany to the Alps. VE day found the division near the city of Linz, Austria, with a record of having captured more than 76,000 prisoners during its relatively brief period of combat. After a few months of occupational duty the division was inactivated in Austria, August 31, 1945.

Further information on the convention can be obtained by contacting the association's national headquarters, 1719 K street, N. W., Washington 6, D.

WAC Officers Only Processed At Local Center

The WAC screening center to be established at Fort Benning will carry out an integration program for officers only, and does not apply to the appointment of enlisted personnel in the Women's Army corps as was reported last week.

The screening center here will begin processing applicants for commissions in the Women's Army corps, regular army, following the completion of the warrant officer screening program now in progress.

Application forms N.M.E.—8 which must be submitted to the adjutant general, Washington, D C., by Aug. 15, are now available at the screening center. Former officers will send the completed forms directly to the adjutant general, while women on active duty will send the forms through their commanding officers. Applicants will receive notification when to appear at the screening center.

Some 500 officers are expected to receive regular army status in the Women's Army corps under the integration program. Appointments will be made in four increments, the first of 40 per cent, followed by three increments of 20 per cent, at approximately six-month intervals. Eligibility is set by the law to cover their 21st but not their 46th birthday on June 12, 1948.

Applicants for commission must have performed honorable active service sometime between July 1, 1943, and June 12 1948, as temporary commissioned officers of the Women's Army corps.

No person will be appointed who has a dependent or dependents under 18 years of age or a child or children under 18 years of age. The fact that the applicant does not have legal custody of the child or children will not remove the disqualification.

Successful completion of a general survey test by applicants is also required. Final selection will be made in the department of the army by a board of officers designated by the secretary of the army.

The WAC screening center here is one of the many set up in the various army areas. Others in the Third army are located at Fort Bragg, N. C.; Greenville Air Force base, South Carolina Eglin Air Force base, Fla.; Orlando Air Force base, Fla.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; and Maxwell Field, Ala.

Former Airborne Unit Head Returns As First Sergeant

First Sgt. Richard F. Morgan, former commanding officer of Company K, Airborne regiment, has returned to Fort Benning as first sergeant of the Airborne battalion's Company F, it was announced this week.

During this time he was awarded the Pacific theater ribbon with three battle stars, Bronze star and Combat Infantry badge.

Enrolling in the Infantry School for airborne training in early 1946, the then first lieutenant was retained in Company K as a company officer. He later took over command of the unit, holding that position until he joined the occupation forces in Korea in November, 1947. Last June, he was discharged and immediately reenlisted as first sergeant.

Sixteen Lockheed F-80A jet fighter aircraft of the U. S. Air Force's 56th Fighter Group, stationed at Selfridge Air Force base, Mount Clemens, Mich., left yesterday on the first overseas training flight of Air Force jet planes, flying a North Atlantic route to England and Germany.

The flight, under direction of Lt. Col. David C. Schilling, is being conducted to determine the feasibility of ferrying jet-propelled combat aircraft over the route, study the logistical and operational problems involved, and perform limited training activities overseas.

Other aircraft participating in the flight besides the fighters are two C-54 transports, one C-47 transport, A B-17 rescue plane, and a B-29 weather and navigational reconnaissance plane.

The first trans - Atlantic flight of jet planes, Royal Air Force vampire jet fighters, arrived in the United States last week end from their RAF base at Odiham, England.

The USAF F 80 jets left Selfridge Air Force Base for the first stop at Dow Air Force Base, Bangor, Maine. After refueling, the planes fly to Goose Bay, Labrador, and then to a base in Greenland to remain overnight. The next leg will be made to Iceland and then to Storneway, England.

After visiting the RAF base at Odiham, England, the planes will proceed to Furstenfeldbruck, Germany for training in the occupied area under command of U. S. Air Forces in Europe. The 16 planes will remain in Europe for about two weeks.

Local WAC Group Become Regulars

Four Enlisted Women Sworn In Army By General Burress

Regular army status was granted to four members of the Fort Benning WAC detachment when they were sworn in by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, in a brief ceremony last Friday.

The first members of the Women's Army corps to be thus honored at Fort Benning, the local group became eligible for the regular army under the Women's Armed Services Integration Act of 1948.

Becoming regulars at last Friday's ceremony were M-Sgt. Ethel P. Foster, Sgt. Dorothy Hochstetler, Cpl. Louise Van Kleek and T- 5Mary C. Hubbell. Cpl. Eleanor P. Fisher, also eligible for membership in the regular army, was unable to attend the ceremony and will be sworn in separately, officials said.

The WACs successfully completed the R-test with high scores. Men are required to attain a grade of only 70 on the AGCT, but applicants in the Women's Army corps must make a grade of 90 for eligibility.

A native of Louisville, Ky., Sergeant Foster was one of the first women to enlist in the original WAAC. Entering the service in August, 1942, she has served at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Daytona Beach, Fla., Camp Atterbury, Ind., Des Moines, Iowa, and several other installations.

Sergeant Hochstetler served under General Burress at the U. S. Constabulary in Germany before coming to Fort Benning in February of this year. She entered the service in June, 1945, at Hammond, Ind., and went overseas in August, 1946.

Corporal Van Kleek, Albany, N. Y., is a veteran of almost four years of service, entering Women's Army corps in November, 1944.

Coming to Fort Benning in December, 1945, T-5 Hubbell received her first assignment at Camp Gordon, Ga., after joining the service in November, 1944. She is from Northumberland, Pa.

Col. Woodruff Appointed TIC Billeting Officer

Replacing Lt. Col. William R. Cole who has been transferred to the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Lt. Col. Charles E. Woodruff, former assistant G-1, has been named Infantry Center billeting officer.

Before coming to Fort Benning in April, 1947, Colonel Woodruff was acting inspecting general of the Third Constabulary brigade at Stuttgart, Germany.

During the war he served with the 102nd Infantry division in the campaigns of Central Germany and the Rhineland. The 102nd, better known as the "Ozark Division" overran 86 towns and cities in its dash to the Rhine.

A graduate of the United States Military academy with the class of 1923, Colonel Woodruff received his first assignment with the old Tank School at Fort Meade, Md. Subsequently he served with the 35 division in Hawaii and the 26th division at Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., before coming to the Infantry School in 1934.

Prior to joining the 405th Infantry of the 102nd Infantry division, with which he went overseas in 1944, he saw service in Panama with the 14th Infantry division and the Fifth division at Fort Williams, Me., later transferring to Fort Niagara, N. Y., with the 28 division and then to Fort Jackson, S. C. where the Eighth division was being prepared for action.

Following the deactivation of the 102nd division in Germany, Colonel Woodruff was assigned to the constabulary.

Royce Named To Post At Fort Riley, Kansas

Col. Charles H. Royce, commander of the 325th Infantry regiment since August, 1947, has been named chief of staff of the 10th Mountain division at Fort Riley, Kansas, it has been announced.

Replacing Colonel Royce is Col. James F. Torrence, formerly assigned to operations and training, Department of the Army in Washington, D. C. Colonel Torrence is scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning Aug. 1.

Seventh Readying For Devens Move

Guard Units Slate Summer Training

31st Infantry Division's Advance Party Arrives Next Wednesday

The advance detail of the 31st Infantry division, the Alabama-Mississippi National Guard, which will begin training here August 1, will arrive next Wednesday, it was learned this week.

Units composing the advance party include troops from Companies C, D, I and L of the 200 Infantry regiment and from the Medical detachment of the 200th's First Battalion.

In addition to the organic units of the division, which will train at Benning for two weeks, four attached units will also attend the annual summer encampment. They are the 169th Engineer group, 131st Tank battalion, 107th Transportation Truck company and 109th Ordnance company.

The 8,006 men who will receive field training here will find an exceptionally full schedule awaiting them. The 88 hours of scheduled training will include unit training on company, battalion and regimental levels. There is also expected to be at least one division problem during the encampment.

In this, the second summer's field training for the division, principles that were studied during armory training will be put into actual practice in the field. The summer encampment is the only time during the year that larger units can work as an entity because the division is normally scattered in throughout the two states.

While here the 31st will be quartered in the Harmony Church area. Each unit is expected to bring available essential equipment required by the unit training program. This will include weapons and vehicles.

The 31st is a veteran division of the Pacific where it fought in several campaigns as part of the Sixth and Eighth armies. It participated in several amphibious operations in campaigns from New Guinea to the Philippines.

3rd Division Unit To Be Attached To First Army

With the departure of an advance detail Saturday, July 24, the Seventh Infantry Regiment combat team will take its first the Seventh Infantry Regiment from Fort Benning to Fort Devens, Massachusetts.

The remainder of the organization will leave Benning on or about next Wednesday, according to Lt. Col. Everett W. Duvall, regimental commander. Units of the Seventh combat team, all of which are moving to Fort Devens, include the Seventh Infantry regiment, 10th Field Artillery battalion, Company A of the 10th Engineer battalion and the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion.

Upon its arrival at Fort Devens the combat team will be relieved from attachment to the Infantry Center and Third army, and will be attached to the First army and assigned to the Third Infantry division, of which the Seventh RCT is a component.

Check Mission, Housing

A reconnaissance team of five officers is presently at Fort Devens to ascertain the mission of the unit at the new post and to check on housing and billeting facilities. The advance party leaving Saturday consists of 125 officers and enlisted men from Company E and selected administrative and medical personnel.

The entire combat team, moving by rail, is taking with it only minimum essential equipment. Heavy equipment of the artillery, engineer and armored units is remaining at Fort Benning. Colonel Duvall said that the organization will draw new equipment at Devens. Current strength of the Seventh Infantry and its units is slightly more than 700 men, according to Colonel Duvall.

Second oldest regiment in the army, having been organized at the end of the 18th century, this is the first occasion in modern times that the Seventh has been stationed permanently on the east coast. For many years after World War I its home station was Vancouver Barracks, Wash., and while there it was part of the brigade commanded by General George C. Marshall.

Served With Third

As part of the Third Infantry division in World War II, the Seventh participated in 10 campaigns from Casablanca to Berchtesgaden. It was in the initial assault landings in North Africa, Sicily, Anzio and Southern France, and was a followup unit at Saerno. Among its memora-

Third Army Delegation Visits Ordnance Section

Maj. Leonard Stump, Capt. Theodore Giamario and Eugene C. Burckhalter, along with Lt. Col. Frank Grebe of the G-4 section, comprise the Third army delegation.

'OPERATION RECOVERY' . . . An engineer group "rescue party" sets out for the recovery of Bradley's landing pontoon bridge which was swept away by heavy rains July 15. In the boat, on the left, are T-Sgt. James A. McPherson and S-Sgt. Durward A. Vicker. In the forefront are, left to right, M-Sgt. Eugene Crawford, Ford Goodman, and S-Sgt. Clifton Lewey. Piloting the launch on the right is S-Sgt. Raymond Glenn.

KRUEGER TO ADDRESS TIC OFFICERS TODAY

One of the world's outstanding military leaders, Gen. Walter Krueger, war-time commander of the Sixth army, will deliver an address to all officers of the Infantry Center this afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Main theater.

The four-star general, now retired, is visiting here as the guest of his son-in-law and daughter Col. and Mrs. Aubrey D. Smith.

His speech will be "off the record" and informal.

Considered one of the greatest military leaders this country has ever had, the rugged former Sixth army commander directed the most extensive amphibious operations in history, which included 21 major engagements and the final occupation of Japan. General MacArthur in citing Krueger declared that "no army in military history ever had a greater leader."

General Krueger was once an instructor at the Infantry School Following his return from Germany after the first world war, he came to Fort Benning, and while here served with Maj. Gen. Asa L. Singleton, former commandant, and Gen. George C. Marshall, when all three were lieutenants.

The famous war-time leader plans to remain at Fort Benning for about ten days, and after a few other short visits, he plans to resume work on the history of the Sixth army, which he has already begun.

General Krueger emphasized that the history of the Sixth army will not be his "memoirs". He describes it as his "most precious recollection of 49 years in active military service." He feels that he owes it to the hundreds of thousands of men who served in it.

A stickler for careful training and planning, his operations in the Pacific, especially in the "unexplored" jungles of New Guinea, are considered a military marvel.

'Lost' Ponton Bridge Recovered

After evacuating cattle for about three days and rescuing a group of campers from a tiny island in the Chattahoochee river, Fort Benning's engineer "rescue party" returned for a "home" expedition to recover a ponton bridge which was torn from its mooring at Bradley's landing July 11 during the heavy rainstorm which swept through the area.

The 300-foot ponton bridge, which is the only passageway across the Chattahoochee linking the Georgia side with the Alabama side of the reservation, was swept down the river during the storm, and was found about six miles downstream, lodged on a sand bar. A plane from the light aircraft section of the infantry school had a few hours previously spotted the bridge.

Included in the party dispatched to recover the bridge and tow it back to its site were M-Sgt. Eugene C. Crawford, T-Sgt. James A. McPherson, S-Sgt. Clifton Lewey, S-Sgt. Raymond T. Glenn, S-Sgt. Durward Vicker and Ford A. Goodman, mechanical equipment technician from the post engineers.

Too huge to tow back all at one time, the bridge was returned in sections by a new twin-screw 25-foot motor launch. The crew set out on its expedition about noon Wednesday and brought back the first portion of the span that same afternoon. The operation had taken three days before the entire structure was back at Bradley's landing.

The structure, which might have suffered more damage had it not been lodged on a sand bar, was found to be in good shape. One ponton was damaged, but still was intact. Further repairs must be made before the bridge is safe enough for traffic, officials said. The span has been in use here for the past four years.

The crew from the engineer section here does wish the gratitude and appreciation of farmers in this district for their fine work done in evacuating about 10 cattle to higher ground during the first few days of the storm when the Chattahoochee river reached its highest level in 30 years.

Capt. A. E. Clifford, Sergeant Lewey and Sergeant Crawford set out in their launch Saturday to rescue a camping party from possible drowning. The Fort Benning trio brought to safety John Fretwell of Columbus, his two sons, Jerry, 14, and Mike, 8, and Roy King, a fishing companion, and six dogs. The Columbus party clung to tree timbers for nine hours before the Fort Benning rescue party pulled them in to safety against the rising waters of the Chattahoochee. The Fort Benning rescuers were the same group that has been called several times in the past to aid in water rescues in the vicinity.

Six-and-one half inches of rain fell during the first four days of the downpour. Some farmers in the area were benefited by the rain while others suffered large crop losses.

Dairyman A. C. Wells, expressed gratitude to the Fort Benning soldiers who evacuated his cattle to higher ground Sunday. Without their help, he said, he would have lost all his cattle in the Woolfolk bend pasture section from flooding Upatoi creek.

Post Dialogue

During the war the State of Georgia passed a law permitting 18-year-olds to vote in state elections. At the Democratic convention in Philadelphia last week one of the delegates from Georgia was an 18-year-old college student.

When the well-publicized law in Georgia went into effect during the war there was a great deal of comment, favorable and unfavorable, both in the United States and among soldiers overseas. Many soldiers delivered themselves of the opinion that if "a man's old enough to fight he's old enough to vote."

This week the newspapers carried a great deal of publicity, pro and con, concerning the 18 year old delegate to the Democratic convention from Georgia. The enquiring reporter of The Bayonet, therefore, asked eight Fort Benning soldiers a question on the subject. The question was: "Do you think that servicemen 18-years-old should be allowed to vote in state and national elections regardless of what state they come from, and why?"

Cpl. Harly N. Andersen, Headquarters, First Battalion, 325th Infantry regiment, 18, and in the army 13 months: "Yes, I do. If they're old enough to be in the army they're old enough to vote. A soldier 18-years-old pays more attention to national and international affairs than the ordinary civilian 18-years-old.

Anderson

Windon

Pvt. Warren H. Windom, Headquarters company, 325th Infantry regiment, 19, and in the army two years: "Yes. Young people today are better informed than young people 20 years ago because of better educational opportunities. They are also less prejudiced because they are better informed."

Lt. Col. William C. Coulbourn, staff judge advocate of the Infantry Center: "Yes, I'm in favor of it. Youngsters mature so much more rapidly, and are able to form judgments at an earlier age, than formerly with the educational advantages they get plus what they learn in the army, R. O. T. C. and so forth."

Coulbourn

Kiggen

T-Sgt. Thomas E. Kiggen, Company D. 325th Infantry regiment, 22, and in the army five years: "Yes. If a man's old enough to fight for his country he's old enough to vote. If he's going to defend something, he should take an active part in its affairs."

Cpl. James L. Milner, Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion, 23, five years in the army: "I think so. I think he should have the same rights as older folks. He has as much education and is as well informed as 21-year-olds. As a soldier he should be given the right to vote at 18. It would benefit him greatly because the laws effect him, and he should have something to say about them."

Reynolds

Milner

S-Sgt. Roy Reynolds, Medical company, 325th Infantry regiment, 22, and four and one-half years in the army: "Yes. If a man is old enough to be in the army he's old enough to vote. He has as much right to vote for the president as anyone else because he is old enough to serve his country. I think it would be good for 18-year-old soldiers to vote because they are well enough informed."

T-Sgt. Charles H. Mintle, Headquarters, Second battalion, 25th Infantry regiment, 25, and seven years in the army: "If men are old enough to be drafted, they are old enough to vote. If a man can serve his country, he should know whom he wants in office and be allowed to choose him. But the draft age, which is now 19, should be the voting age."

First Lt. Bernard U. Porter, Headquarters, Student Training regiment, 29, and nine years service: "No. They are too unsettled. I think they should be 21 before they can vote. They still have too many flighty ideas, and would vote more on inherited lines rather than on their own thinking."

Schremp Recalled As 1st Lieutenant

Former S-Sgt. Richard A. Schremp, of Lawson Air Force base operations office, who was recently recalled to active duty, was sworn in as a first lieutenant at headquarters last Saturday morning, and left immediately for his new assignment at Scott Air Force base, Ill.

A B-25 and C-47 transport pilot during the war, Lieutenant Schremp was separated from the service in December, 1946, after completing two tours of duty in the ETO. He haas a total of eight years service and is credited with approximately 1,000 flying hours.

He reenlisted at Lawson in the summer of 1947 with the rank of staff sergeant.

MAJ. BYRON E. TRENT
... To Attend School

Lawson Pilot To Attend AU

The latest Lawson pilot to receive an appointment to the Air university's Command and Staff school at Maxwell Air Force base, Ala., is Maj. Byron E. Trent, who has served as base S-4 since November, 1946.

Major Trent will enter the school this week, and is scheduled to return to his Lawson assignment after 22 weeks of training.

An air force officer since 1940, Major Trent served with the Eighth air force in the ETO, and reported to Lawson in May, 1946, shortly after returning from overseas.

A resident of Bloomington, Ind., he earned his BS degree at Parks Air college in 1939, prior to joining the air force.

Catholic Group Elects Officers

Lt. Col. A. E. McCormick was elected president of the Holy Name society at a meeting held July 13 at Wharton hall.

Other officers elected to serve with Colonel McCormick include Cpl. Joseph Stachniak, vice-president and S-Sgt. John Spiekar, secretary.

The program, membership, sick and vigil and charities committees appointed during the tenure of Maj. Thomas J. Gendron, outgoing president, will continue under the presidency of Colonel McCormick, it was announced.

Communion Sunday was changed from the second to the last Sunday of the month during a discussion held following election of officers.

At the close of the meeting Father John F. Rafferty, Infantry Center Catholic chaplain and spiritual director of the society, paid tribute to the work accomplished by the society during its six months of operation. Following administering of the Holy Name pledge, Father Rafferty led the group in prayer.

The outgoing officers include, in addition to Major Gendron, T-Sgt. R. K. Williams as vice-president and Lt. Col. L. Bernard as secretary.

Three Benning WACs Training Center Cadre

Three members of the Fort Benning WAC detachment will leave here late this month to asist in establishing the WAC training center which will operate at Camp Lee, Va., it was revealed today.

Departing for the training center which is expected to begin operation sometime in October are M-Sgt. Ethel P. Foster, T-Sgt. Mira P. Barnaby and T-Sgt. Ethel V. Gant.

U.S. Airmen Train Turks

United States air force personnel stationed in Turkey are helping to train hundreds of Turkish air force officers and enlisted men in a series of more than 40 technical courses ranging from pilot training to weather forecasting, Maj. Gen. Earl S. Hoag, chief of the USAF group of the American Mission for Aid to Turkey, announced today.

The Turkish airmen are "eager to learn about new equipment and show great aptitude in both formal classes and on-the-job training," General Hoag said.

The USAF trains selected groups of Turks in such courses as automotive maintenance, radio repair and runway construction, and later these groups provide a nucleus of instructors for subsequent classes.

In addition to the training in Turkey, 45 Turkish air force officers came to the United States in March for technical and staff training at USAF bases throughout the country.

Miss Julia Nolen To Head Hospital Red Cross Staff

Maj. and Mrs. E. A. Kreilick were hosts last Wednesday evening at a farewell dinner at the Officers' club honoring Col. and Mrs. Richard Sandusky, Lt. Col. and Mrs. William D. Cavness, Maj. and Mrs. Billy B. Salter and Capt. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, all of whom expect to leave the post shortly.

An attractive arrangement of summer flowers was used in the table decorations.

The guests included, in addition to the honorees, Maj. and Mrs. Fred R. Ulrich, Capt. Thomas G. Morehead, Lt. and Mrs. Joseph P. Nee and W-O and Mrs. William H. Seeger.

Army Seeking More Nurses

Expansion of the strength of the army and air force, authorized by the 80th Congress, has resulted in an acute need for nurses to minister to the health needs of the 947,000-man army and the 502,000-man air force authorized under the Selective Service act.

Estimated army nurse strength by June 30, 1949, on duty, to keep up with minimum requirements, has been set by the surgeon general's office at 7,600. Now on duty are 4,200 nurses, at stations around the world, a strength already 1,500 short of present needs and 3,400 in arrears of requirements a year hence. About 400 more are estimated to be lost in that time by attrition.

Civilian and army nurses were requested this year to join the Army Nurse Reserve corps, and reserve appointments to July 8, 1948, totalled 7,421. During June, 1,638 were appointed.

Questionnaires are being prepared in the surgeon general's office to be mailed to all holders of reserve commissions asking whether they would accept active duty of one, two or three years. Forms for making applications will accompany the questionnaire.

In addition to the reserve component, which is attempting to get up to a strength of 29,000 in fiscal year 1949, there remain some 800 vacancies in the regular Army Nurse corps as yet to be filled.

Nurse losses due to completion of tours of active duty since Jan. 1, 1948, numbered 1,100, while only 500 have been recalled to duty during the same period.

In order to make the army's needs possible of fulfillment without endangering the health of the civilian populace by shortage of civilian nurses, the army has been assisting the American Hospital association in a drive to get some 50,000 young women who graduated from high school this spring to enter nurses' training.

"When Congress passed the recent draft law," Surgeon General Raymond W. Bliss stated, "medical care and precautions for soldier health were made a mandatory part of the law. These can only be assured by competent medical staffing of which the nurse procurement program is a vital part."

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

ACORDING TO THE plan outlined by the Army for training draftees taken into the service under recently enacted legislation, more emphasis will be placed on personal freedoms than was the custom during selective service in World War II. So says, General Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff.

This is certainly a much-needed change because, as a rule, during the last war a majority of the men in the army did not fully understand the real reason, other than the fact that Japan bombed Pearl Harbor, why we joined the side of the Allies. This was not true of men in uniform alone, for those at home were equally as uninformed.

THE ARMY'S INFORMATION and education program, which has grown increasingly better since 1941, can and has done much to make the U. S. soldier more aware of his heritage. The soldier, and this is particularly true at Fort Benning, has taken to this as a duck takes to water, as is evidenced by the number of students presently enrolled in a course in American history at the Army Education Center here. This course stresses American political and social foundations, the institutions which have made this country so great.

For the draftee, however, the study of American history will not be voluntary, but included in the training schedule. We are glad to know that it will be handled in this way, for we believe that a man will be a better soldier if he understands the American ideology.

Taps For 'Black Jack'

Last Thursday America's highest ranking soldier, General John J. Pershing died quietly at Walter Reed General hospital in Washington.

The commander of the famed American Expeditionary Force of World War I, called by the men he led into battle, "Black Jack," had ended a 66-year- military career which had encompassed more than a third of the United States' history as a nation.

Throughout the U. S., citizens this week paid tribute to the man whose name had become synomous with World War I. They paid tribute to one of America's most colorful military figures, whose stern countenance belied a warm heart and a kind personality.

Here at Fort Benning a period of mourning for the nation's only general of the armies was declared, and although there was no suspension of duties, there were many who mourned his death as the passing of an era.

Black Jack was the first of the "soldier's generals." He won the respect and admiration of the men who fought under him by his courage and his humaness. He looked upon all his soldiers as his "boys." Every year until his health prevented it, General Pershing returned to Europe to visit the graves of those who fell in battle during World War I. This was done, not out of a sense of duty, but because of real affection for those men who had paid the supreme sacrifice that America's way of life might continue.

Probably the thing for which he is most remembered is the way he built the American Expeditionary Force into a well-disciplined army, a separate entity which he steadfastly refused to allow to be "recruited" into the French and English armies. He proved to the countries of Europe that not only was America a great nation from a production standpoint, but also a great nation militarily when the need arose to defend the principles which we believed right.

His warnings to the nation that we would fight another war against Germany in a few years if we did not demand unconditional surrender and then back it up with an occupation force fell on deaf ears. He also warned against rapid demobilization as a dangerous policy. The outbreak of World War II proved he was right, and the Allies finally heeded his advice by demanding Germany's unconditional surrender, following it up with occupation forces. We did not carry out his suggestions completely, however, in that we did demobolize rapidly, too rapidly we are beginning to realize now.

As taps are played for General Pershing, The Bayonet joins with the rest of the nation in a final salute to this great American. His name will never be forgotten.

"FIRE"

It is hard to believe that George R. Stewart's novel "Fire" is really fiction and that all the characters, including the Spitcat, are imaginary. The story might well be an on-the-spot report of an actual forest fire—vivid and terrifying.

We can almost see the column of smoke as it rises above Howell mountain, can almost hear the crackling flames as the fire crashes ahead, roaring on before the pressure of a dry east wind. Sometimes the fire seems so close that we can feel its intense heat shriveling, searing our lungs, sucking the oxygen from the air. Yes the story seems real — sometimes uncomfortably so.

"Fire" is a day by day account of a forest fire which threatens to destroy the great Ponderosa National forest which is "somewhat smaller than Delaware, but comfortably larger than Rhode Island." The fire, called by the rangers "the spitcat" (for just as the men names its typhoons, so the forest men name their fires), is born at the base of a Jeffrey pine in an isolated spot on Howell mountain. A lightning spark, left when lightening strikes, itsmoulders, then almost dies out. After three days it is still so small that the dispatcher, flying a few hundred feet above it, can detect no sign of smoke. But suddenly it revives and begins to burn slowly and steadily.

In the beginning, the breaks are with the fire. Judith Godoy, the young lookout on the top of Cerro Gordo, fails to detect it when the haze from another fire destroy her visibility. Even after the fire starts "going places" it might have been stopped, if everything hadn't lined up against the fire fighters. Slugger O'Neal and his suppression crew are slowed down by an accident, and arrive just a few minutes too late. The wind suddenly changes and sweeps down from the northeast. A cat skinner runs off a cliff and puts his machine out of order. The fighters on Reverse ridge become panicky and desert their lines. And Bart, the fire boss, loves each tree so much that by running his fire lines too close, he almost sacrifices the entire forest.

"Fire" is as thrilling as any war story, for that is what it is—the story of a war with two thousand men and women fighting one of their most ruthless enemies. The romance of Judith and Dave Halliday, the problems of Bart and his supervisor, everything else is subordinated to the one battle, the suppression of the "Spitcat".

This novel may not appeal to all readers, but it is doubtful if anyone can read it without gaing a better understanding of the devastating effect of a forest fire and a greater respect for the national forestry service.

"Fire" is a novel now available at the Main library.

Your Red Cross

BY
DANIEL T. SHIPP

Each summer for the past several years there has been an outbreak of one of the most dreaded children's diseases the country has ever known — polio.

As yet, medical science has been able to do very little in determining the cause of this dreaded malady, and much emphasis has been placed on quick treatment when the disease strikes.

Your Red Cross believes whole heartedly in the old slogan, "An ounce of preparedness is worth a pound of cure." With that in mind, the Red Cross nursing service is cooperating with other groups in formulating preparedness plans for use in the event of polio outbreaks in this area.

In the Southeastern area headquarters in Atlanta, the nursing service of the American Red Cross maintains a list of all nurses who have had experience with polio. This information is gathered by the local chapters as a safeguard in the event of an epidemic.

The American Red Cross nursing service has also held several conferences with officials of the National Foundation and the medical advisors in order to learn more about this disease and the best methods of treatment.

Warnings go out daily through newspapers, radio and other means, offering suggestions and advice to parents on the proper care of their children during the summer months.

All parents should heed these warnings and be sure that their children are receiving the best of care. Then, if the disease should come into your home, there will be no doubt that, as parents, you used every precaution known.

Chaplain's Corner..

THE CHURCH BELL
BY
CHAPLAIN C. A. GOSNELL

In the heart of this historic post stands the Church. It is the center of our religious life as an active army training center. It expresses itself in terms of unity. It is not uniformity of worship or creed that it offers, but an awareness of the fundamentals of righteous living, social betterment and faith in one beneficient God. It helps us to understand each other and to work together in harmony and love. It aims to make brotherhood a reality on this post. It helps us grow morally strong and spiritually courageous. Through worship the existence of God becomes a matter of personal reality, religious convictions are given proper spiritual foundations, and the individual is challenged to develop his divine possibilities.

From the heart of the post chapel bell peals out its friendly invitation "Come unto me, ... and I will give you rest." Here is the opportunity to relax and to rest the body and mind. Here is strength and courage to face the future of life unafraid.

The chapel bell calls to us to come and hear the Word of God. His wonderful Word is free for all, and this without exception. Here is the summons to practical and positive living on behalf of God's will for all humanity. Men learn that they must serve God by being wholly devoted to unselfish service on behalf of all His people. Such service is based upon cooperation, justice and love. Its end is the establishment of God's kingdom on earth.

GI HUMOR

A woman got on a street car and, finding that she had no change, handed the conductor a ten-dollar bill.

"I'M sorry," she said, "but I haven't a nickel."

"Don't worry lady," said the conductor, "you'll have 199 of 'em in a minute."

She: "So you want to kiss me. I didn't know you were that kind."

"Noise? Rabbits don't make noise."

"Sure," asserted Jose positively. "Go 'Meow, meow'."

Mrs. Vanderham was giving a bridge party when the patter of tiny feet was heard from the head of the stairs.

"Hush," she said, softly. "The children are going to give their goodnight message. It always gives me such a sentimental feeling to hear them."

There was a moment of tense silence then, shrilly: "Mama, Percy found a bedbug."

Post Exchanges to See 53rd Birthday July 25

Fort Benning post exchange activities, including the grocery and cafeteria, will join with other post exchanges throughout the world next Sunday, July 25, in observing the 53rd anniversary of the founding of the army's method of supplying the soldier with his luxury items, notions and sundries.

Established in 1895 by general order No. 46, signed by Daniel S. Lamont, then secretary of war, post exchange have grown to outtanding proportions since that day a half century ago. They haev built a tradition best typified in the slogan adopted by the army exchange service in connection with this anniversary, "To better serve the army and air force."

The first P-x regulations bear an amazing resemblance to the mission of today's army and air force exchanges. It read: "The post exchange will combine the features of reading and recreation rooms, a cooperative store and restaurant. It sprimary purpose is to supply the troops, at reasonable prices, with the articles of ordinary use, wear and consumption not supplied by the government, and to afford them means of rational recreation and amusement."

Post exchanges were preceded by a number of other methods of serving troops—all of which were unsuccessful. From the Revolutionary war in 1776 until 80 years later rovinig traders, called sutlers, visited milieray installations with wagonloads of tobacco, whiskey, knives and other sundries. They charged exorbitant prices provided inadequate service. and loaned money at usurious rates of interest, according to army records. Complaints by troops were so frequent that in 1866 Congress abolished the practice of allowing sutlers on military reservations.

Recognizing the continual need for some sales to troops, post traders to replace sutlers. Post traders were permitted to sell to military personnel those ordinary items not ireated. According to reports, this was an improvement over the sutlers, but it was still a patchwork operation without standards of supervision or adequate control.

About this time, officers in outlying posts, not serviced by post traders, banded together and formed cooperative canteens. They financed these canteens with their own funds, and sold articles of common use to members and their families without profit. This scheme became popular and gradually spread.

Son Of Benning Soldier Will Be Honored Today

Johnny Joe Coleman is going to have the biggest birthday party this afternoon a four year old kid ever had. Not only is every kid in town between the ages of three and seven going to be there, but among the guests will be Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry center commander where Jonnny's dad, Sgt John Coleman, is assigned.

Because this will probably be Johnny's last birthday, people on the post and in town are doing a lot of cooperating Richard Fisher executive secretary of the NCS, has decorated the club's auditorium, supplied the cake and all the trimmings and invited the guests. Besides the cake there will be the always hoped for ice cream and plenty of games.

Reason for the big blowout is that Johnny is suffering from a dread blood disease leukemia, and the doctors say that this will be his last party. What they are also hoping for is that Johnny will have his sight long enough to enjoy some of the many presents he is bound to receive this afternoon. He has tumors on both his eyes the sight of his left is gone, and the right is rapidly worsening.

But anyway this afternoon will be a big day for him. His father, mother and little sister and all the kids will be there, he'll meet a real general, and he'll have the ice cream and cake he's been wanting for a long time for his last birthday party.

Post Team Blasts McPherson Nine

Hall And Graves Shackle Atlantans In 23-3 Contest

A pair of wild innings turned a diamond tilt earmarked for closeness into a Dough rampage last Sunday night. Playing on home soil., the Benningites scored 19 times in the fifth and sixth frames to pound out a 23-3 verdict over the Fort McPherson nine from Atlanta, Ga.

Two of the lesser luminaries of the Doughboy mound staff, right-handers Larry Hall and John Graves, held the visiting McPherson crew to two safe hits, and struck out 12 during the seven-inning contest.

Both of the McPherson hits came in the first stanza off Hall, who hurled the first five innings and was credited with the triumph.

The sparkling performance turned in by Hall, however, was overshadowed by that of Graves, who whiffed the opposing side during both of his innings on the hill. Faoing only seven McPherson swingers, Graves marred a perfect three-up three-down strikeout record by issuing a base on balls to Buck Morris in the sixth.

Gains Control

A trifle shaky during his first canto on the mound, Hall suffered a momentary lapse of control, and permitted the invaders to skyrocket to a 3-0 lead in the first. After walking lead-off batter Bill Jenkins of the McPherson squad, the Dough starter threw wild to first when Newt Casy attempted to sacrifice his teammate down to second. Another walk to York loaded the bases with none down.

Although Jenkins was forced at the plate, clean-up batter Warren Osborne reached on a fielder's choice, and the sacks were still full when Laurie Braddock lashed a single to center to score Casey and York. Osborne came in with the third run when Morris singled to left.

McPherson starter Bob Dowdy relied solely on a blooper ball to get the Doughs out in the first, and did very well, whiffing Bob Kinard and Herb O'Brien, and forcing Bill Terry to roll out to the second baseman.

Score Deadlocked

The Doughs, however, solved Dowdy's pitching in the second to the tune of three runs, which knotted the count with the visitors. After Woody Burt had led off with a walk, and Blondy Burnett had singled, Herb Lauve drove a long double into center field to bring in the first two Doughboy tallies. Lauve scored a moment later when the McPherson twirler uncorked a wild heave.

Both squads were idle at the plate in the third stanza, but the Doughboys came through with the tie-breaking run in their half of the fourth. Bill Brooks, who had beaten out a slow roller down the first-base line and stolen second, scored when first-sacker Casey dropped a throw from shortstop Osborne which would have nipped Kinard at first and retired the Benning nine.

After Hall had disposed of the McPherson team in order in the top half of the fifth, the Doughs broke loose to score six times in their phase of the inning.

Dowdy Out

After Dowdy had given up a base on balls to Lauve, a double by Burt, a single by Burnett for two Benning counters, Manager R. C. McCall pulled the McPherson starter, and sent Herb Craig to the hill in an effort to salvage the tilt.

Craig, however, had even more trouble with the Dough sluggers than his predecessor, and allowed two more quick runs on a single by Brooks and a three-bagger by Paul Bonair before getting any outs chalked up aganist the host team. Pinch-hitter Otto Loroesh scored the fifth tally of the inning for the locals when he walked, stole second, and reached the plate on a one-bagger to center by Terry.

The biggest uprising of the fray came in the Doughs' sixth and final turn at bat when the Benchmen combined five base knocks with a host of McPherson misplays to score 13 counters.

Smith Steals Home

The grand climax to the Dough base-running, which had become somewhat more daring after the local had grabbed the lead in the fourth canto, came when Joe Smith pulled a clean steal of home while pitcher Craig was taking his windup.

Smith's run came after the Benning squad had batted completely through the lineup for seven runs with no outs.

Sharing batting laurels for the Doughs were Burnett and Brooks, each with three hits. The most timely-delivered blow of the game, however, was Lauve's double to center in the second frame.

In addition to their mound demonstrations, Hall and Graves both joined in the Benning hitting parade. The Dough starter slammed a clean single into left center in the second inning, and Graves came through with a two-base knock in the sixth.

Final Home Game

The tiff with the Atlanta army team was the final game for the Doughs on home soil before an extended road trip which is slated to take in the Georgia State Semi-Pro tourney, which opened Wednesday in Thomaston.

If the Doughs are triumphant in the Georgia tournament, they will be relegated to the honor of representing the district in from the state semi-pro meet, it which is scheduled for Wichita, Kans., early in September. Before the locals can be ousted from the state semi-pro meet, it will be necessary for them to drop two contests.

Following the semi-pro tournament, the Doughs will play games at Dunson Mills, Fort McPherson, and the Atlanta Ordnance depot before returning to Gowdy field for an encounter with Dunson Mills on July 31.

Benning Service Clubs Plan Gridiron Program

Steps are being taken to keep Fort Benning personnel who attend the post service clubs regularly well-informed on football happenings this fall, Mrs. Margaret Soule, chief hostess, has announced.

One of the plans being considered is that of providing a selection sheet, whereby post gridiron followers may test their skill at picking the winners of collegiate contests throughout the nation. Should the plan materialize, the selection sheets will be placed in popular spots in the service clubs, and ballot boxes will be provided to receive the sheets after they have been filled out. Weekly awards probably will be presented to those making the highest number of accurate selections.

Mrs. Soule also hopes that it will be possible to provide football enthusiasts with latest collegiate scores immediately following the games.

IT'S LIKE THIS ... Walker of the ISD team. Listening to the Prof skipper's explanation are Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Herb Lauve, Commanding Officer O. O. Wilson of the ISD, and team first-baseman Lauve. In the drawing, a trophy-laden parachute, symbolic of the Profs' perennial foe, the Airborne battalion, is being carried away by an ISD man.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Things took a definite turn for the better on the Doughboy gridiron squad this week as Head Coach Joe Shepherd was assured that several of the brightest prospects to don a practice suit this summer still will be at Fort Benning when the locals embark on their 1948 schedule.

The strong link in Shepherd's 1948 grid edition undoubtedly will be the backfield. Two members of the crack 1947 squad will be sporting Benning toggery again this season, and both lads have shown improvement in speed and ball-carrying over last year. The two returning backfield men are Don Sult and Harry Sloan. Another player who was out last year is Dick Taylor, who is showing consistent improvement and may fit into one of the backfield slots.

One of the new candidates for the backfield, Robert Morton, who came to Fort Benning last winter after having a good season with the Fort Sam Houston, Tex., eleven in 1947, is making an impressive showing in both the quarterback and fullback territory, and may shape into the Dough's pass flinging mainstay this year.

Topmost among the candidates for the center position is Bill Curran, who was one of the reserves on the 1947 squad. Wayne Ketchens, who has shown a lot of talent in the mid-line position during the summer workouts, is slated for transfer to an overseas station, and probably will not get to perform for the Doughs this fall.

Moving over to the guard position, we find a little better situation. Frank Baglioni, who worked out with the 1947 squad, but eventually was knocked out by a knee injury, is giving it another try this year, and has been developed into a promising candidate. Baglioni's injury has improved considerably, and Shepherd is hoping that it permits him to stay on the active roster.

Although he is one of the outstanding candidates for guard, Don Britt is being troubled with an old shoulder injury, and his value to the team depends largely upon getting the damage repaired enough to go in regularly.

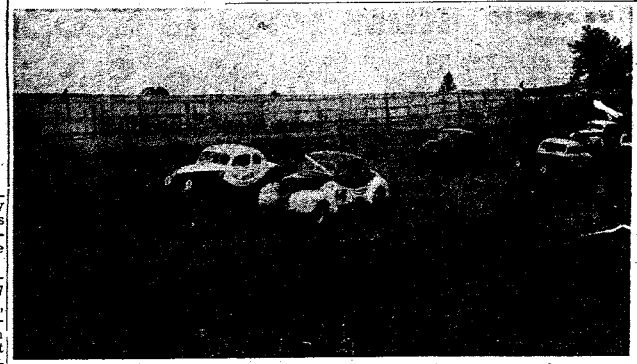
Back from last year, guard John Judd is expected to be one of the standouts on the squad this year. Clarence Schlafer, who has been changed from tackle to guard by Shepherd, probably will develop into one of the Dough's line standouts this year.

Two newcomers also are scrambling for guard posts. They are Marshall O'Shaunessey, who has a lot of hustle, but only 150 pounds of it, and Lee LeBlanc, who has the weight and speed to be an asset to the team, but has been working out only a few days.

Long on first-string talent, but short on reserves pretty well sums up the tackle situation. Leonard Pfeifer, who was a big help to the Doughs in their 1947 schedule, will be back brushing off the opposition again this year, and James C. Murphy will provide a 310-pound barrier for enemy linemen to penetrate.

Although Coach Shepherd considers the end position one of the weakest spots on his squad, several candidates are showing a lot of promise, and there is a possibility that it will be one of the team's stronger phases when the season opens.

Three of the best prospects for end are J. T. Williams, Francis (Lew) Lewotsky and Howard Lockwood. However, Gale Sult, a brother of Don, and Jim Slater are doing surprisingly well for their limited amount of experience.



Despite his optimistic attitude, Coach Shepherd declined to draw any comparison between the 1948 team candidates and the members of last year's Doughboys.

By this time it's pretty general knowledge that Branch Rickey did very little to keep Lippy Durocher from throwing in the towel at Brooklyn, and moving across the river to take over the helm of the New York Giants. As a matter of fact, most observers believe that Rickey even sanctioned the largest managerial shakeup to come out of major league baseball in its long history.

The reported dissension between Lippy Leo and Rickey began after a recent game when Rickey sent a request to Durocher, via Harold Parrott, executive secretary of the Dodgers, asking the Brooklyn pilot to resign.

It is our understanding that Rickey was ruffled when Durocher, who has been in hot water with the National League umpires almost all of his skippering career, failed to protest what the Dodger owner considered a raw decision. Apparently Rickey disregarded the fact that Durocher had been given orders to toe the line by practically every arbiter in the league, and that vigorous protest would probably have brought the same punishment for Leo as the one meted out to him last year, a year's suspension from organized baseball.

THEY'RE OFF . . . Coming up to the green flag are stock cars expected to appear in the races on the new Columbus speedway, located about eight miles north of the city, next Sunday afternoon. On the left is the Hill Motor company's car of Columbus, which will be driven Sunday either by Marshall Teague or Joe Allen. Car No. 14, driven by Bob Flock of Atlanta, was the feature race winner in the contests held on the city speedway last month.

Flock Brothers Rated Favorites For Stock Race

Local stock car race followers are willing to give tremendous odds that the feature winner of next Sunday's race on the Columbus Speedway will be Flock.

Just which Flock will cop top honors most track enthusiasts wouldn't venture to say, but present odds favor Fonty, the 1947 national stock car champion, over his brother Bob, who won the feature race in Columbus on June 20.

In an effort to spur attendance of Fort Benning personnel, manager Harold Hill has initiated the policy of admitting enlisted men in uniform to the track classics for generally reduced prices.

Hill also pointed out that will be no admission to the time trials on Saturday afternoon.

Transportation from Fort Benning to the speedway will be provided for military personnel who are interested in watching the trials Saturday afternoon, and will leave from Service Club No. 1 at 1 p. m.

Although Marshall Teague, regular driver of the Hill Motor company's car of Columbus, was injured in a crack-up last Sunday, the car still will be in the race, and will be driven by Joe Allen.

Several heats to be run throughout the afternoon Sunday will get under way at 3 p. m., and the program feature will be a 30-lap classic around the new half-mile track.

It is the opinion of local race officials that Sunday's races will be more interest - packed than the previous classic on the Columbus track since most of the drivers will have their cars geared for the fast, well-banked track this time.

Slated to participate in the Sunday track classics are Red Byron of Anniston, Ala.; Bob, Fonty and Tim Flock, Ed Sampler and Lee Morgan of Atlanta; Joe Allen of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Skump Hensley and Bill Snowden of St. Augustine, Fla., and Glynn Dunaway of Charlotte, N. C.

Russ Pool Is Reopened For Practice Sessions

Local Swim Meet Scheduled To Get Under Way Tuesday

Although they were hampered in the daily workouts during the period last week in which Russ pool was closed for a general cleaning, aspirants for post titles in swimming and diving resumed their drills with the re-filling of the bathing sanctuary Wednesday.

The temporary shut-down of the pool, site of the post meet next week, was brought about by the rain washing sediment from the nearby high areas into the pool, necessitating a thorough cleaning.

The two-day meet, which opens on Tuesday afternoon, will serve as a yardstick in selecting the team to represent Fort Benning in the Third army tank classics slated for early next month at Fort McPherson, Ga.

Although the deadline for entries in the post meet originally was set for last Thursday afternoon, the close-down of the pool prompted an extension of the period during which entries will be accepted. Athletic officicals said that any entries received before tomorrow afternoon now will be honored.

At the time the previously-set deadline expired only 11 post swimmers had filed their applications for the meet with the athletic office. Entrants, it was pointed out, may compete in not more than two of eight events comprising the tourney.

Those who have indicated their intention of vying for honors in the meet are Thomas Foster, Dayton Warren, Samuel Goldfarb, Stuart Corning, William Dew, Edgar Valentine, Patrick M. Sheley, Richard Shaw, Gale Copeland, Robert Longino and Ernest Eldredge.

The class divisions of the meet include the 50-yard free style, the 100-yard backstroke, the 100-yard free style the 100-yard breaststroke, the 220-yard free style, the 440-yard free style diving events, and a 100-yard individual medley to include breaststroke, backstroke and free style swimming.

Entries for the 50-yard free style event are Foster, Dew, Valentine, Sheley and Shaw; aspirants for the 100-yard free style title are Valentine, Sheley and Shaw; to compete in the 220-yard free style is Corning, who also will enter the 440-yard swim against Warren; Goldfarb and Foster intend to enter the backstroke race; Goldfarb is the only entrant for the medley, and Dew is the only contestant for the diving events so far.

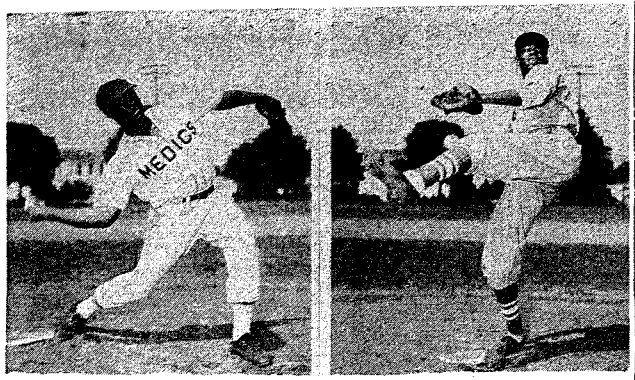
NEW AIRBORNE SOFTBALLERS CHALK UP TWO

In their first two games of the current softball circuit, Company I of the 504th Airborne Infantry ran roughshod over two of the favorites, winning by 1-0 shoutouts on both occasions.

The 30th Medical group met its nemesis on home soil last Tuesday when Dick Lattimore starred in blanking the Medics. Pitching one-hit ball, Lattimore also scored the winning run for the airborne team when a single by Davis drove him across the plate in the fourth inning.



Lattimore again hurled the airborne team to victory on Monday when the newly-assigned paratroopers blanked the powerful Airborne battalion of the Student Training regiment on a wet diamond.

The winning tally for the paratroopers was scored in the third inning as Rovaczynski came in from third when catcher O'Brien laid down a bunt. Although the opposing Reds were on the verge of scoring, they never quite managed to make it home.

MCPHERSON SHACKLERS . . . Two of the reasons why Fort McPherson's visit to Gowdy Field last Sunday night wos an unsuccessful one are John Graves, right, and Larry Hall. The two Doughboy right-handers teamed to limit the McPherson lads to two safe blows as the Benning squad pounded out a 23-3 decision over the Atlanta army nine. Hall, who started for the Doughs, was given credit for the win, but Graves, who came to the mound in the top of the sixth, whiffed the only six opposing batters to face him.

Benning Squad Sweeps Manchester Dough Set

Fort Benning Doughboys made it a clean sweep in their two-game series with the Manchester Millers by journeying to the Miller home diamond Monday night to hand the host squad an 8-1 setback.

Two right-handers, Lou Button and Ray Stem, held the Manchester nine to five safeties with the former, who did the Dough twirling for the first five innings, getting credit for the win.

The Doughboys scored their first run in the opening stanza when Bob Kinard led off by drawing a free pass to first and went to second on a wild pitch by Manchester starter Clyde Pace. Joe Smith then slammed a long two-bagger to left to bring Kinard across the plate.

It was the third inning before the Benning team scored again. Starting with the top of the batting order, Kinard singled to right, went to second on Ralph Terry's infield out, and completed the circuit when Clyde (Woody) Burt lined a single into center field.

Again in the fourth canto the Doughs broke into the scoring column. Herb Lauve reached second on an error by second-sacker Harry Barnes of the Millers, and was safe at home when Paul Bonair drove a single to left.

The biggest inning of the game for the Doughs came in the fifth when they combined three base blows with three Manchester errors to score a trio of tallies. Smith, leading off for the visiting Doughs, singled to center, and reached second on a miscue by Barnes. A single by Harold (Blondy) Brunett scored Smith, and Lauve lashed a long double to right to score Burnett. After reaching on a fielder's choice and stealing second, Burt scored the third run of the inning on another misplay by Barnes.

During the next three stanzas, Pace handcuffed the Benningites on two hits, but the Doughs came back in the ninth to score another pair of counters. Burt, who had reached the bags via a fielder's choice, stole second, and scored on Lauve's single to left. Burnett, who had walked and gone to third on Lauve's blow, raced home when Bill Brooks lined out a one-bagger to right-center.

A shutout for Button and Stem was marred by the Manchester lads in the eighth stanza when a base on balls to James Singleton and a single by Otis Chaplain provided the entertaining team with its lone tally.

Following the tiff at Manchester, the Doughboys rested Tuesday in preparation for their motor trip to Thomaston and the Georgia State Semi-Pro tournament Wednesday.

Five-Day Week Begins For 6,600

Two uninterrupted days of rest each week begins this week for almost half of Fort Benning's approximately 15,000 soldiers.

A change in the Infantry Center's working schedule has resulted in a new duty week of five days from Monday through Friday, with the affected troops to work Wednesday afternoons were off duty Wednesday afternoons and to be off duty Saturday afternoons. Under the old schedule the approximately 6,600 men noons, but worked Saturday mornings. The new program frees them from duty from retreat Friday until reveille Monday.

Units that will operate under the new schedule are Headquarters, the Infantry Center; the Academic Department of the Infantry School; Infantry School detachment; Student Training regiment, and 3440th Army Service unit.

Infantry Center officials pointed out that the new work schedule affects those personnel who work in close coordination with the post's nearly 1,800 civilian employes. Under present schedules the civilian employes work a five-day week, including Wednesday afternoons, and are off duty Saturday and Sunday.

The reason for the change was declared to be for the heightening of efficiency through the coordination of military and civilian duty hours.

Benning Linksmen Plan For Tourney

Fort Benning's delegation to the annual Third army links meet, slated to get under way at Augusta's Oliver General hospital next week, will leave the post tomorrow in an effort to get in a few practice rounds before the tourney qualifying begins.

Sixteen post golfers, who got in under the wire on their qualifying scores during the recent 72-hole playoff round on the post Officers' club golf course, will comprise the Benning delegation.

Slated to captain the four-man team from Benning is Matt C. C. Bristol, who copped medal honors for the playoff with a 298. Other members of the team entry are post officer champion Devert Moore, William Wikoff and James Hungate.

Local golfers who will compete as individuals in the meet are Robert Rosa, John Henion, Charles Davis, Paul Markland, Philip S. Grant, Emil P. Eschenburg, Guy Hollenbeck and Claude English.

Fort Benning also will send a four-man senior-flight entry, including only linksmen who have attained their 50th birthday, to the army meet. The team for the senior division will consist of Fay Ross, Daniel P. Buckland, Logan Boyd and Waine Archer.

In the Augusta tourney, all players will fire qualifying rounds to determine the flight into which they will be placed. The 32 strokers turning in the lowest qualifying cards will be placed in the top bracket, be split up into the championship and first flights following their first-round matches. Winners of the first-round contests will comprise the championship division, and their victims will be automatically placed in the first flight.

Although championship flight contestants will be the only ones eligible for positions on the Third army delegation to the all-army tournament, sufficient flights will be established to accommodate all entrants. The senior flight probably will include 16 players.

Following the tourney at Augusta, a team to represent the the Third army in the all-army meet at Fort Lewis, Wash. will he selected. Alternates also will be chosen, and may get to make the Washington trek with the squad.

Should any of the players representing the Third army get past the competition in the all-army tournament they will be eligible to compete in the inter-service matches slated for Pebble Beach, Calif., in August.

In addition to the local squad, team entries for the Third army tournament are expected from Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; Oliver General hospital, and the Atlanta General Distribution depot. Several independent competitors from outlying districts in the Third army area also are expected to vie for honors in the meet.

Phenix All-Star Squad Defeated By Dough Nine

After waiting four days for favorable weather, the Doughboy diamond nine finally gave up trying to open their 1948 campaign on a dry field, and waded through the mud of Gowdy field to chalk up an 11-1 triumph over the Phenix City All-Stars last Thursday night.

Although only four and one-half innings of the intended nine-inning contest were played before the two squad suspended their efforts, the game was official, and will be marked up as a triumph for the Doughs on their 1948 slate.

During the first two innings of the game, the Doughboys hit safely five times off pitcher Malloy of the All-Stars, but were able to cross the plate only once. A single by Tom Gallagher and a two-bagger to left by pitcher Ike Silcox in the second stanza gave the Doughboys their first counter.

The post squad sharpened up its batting eyes in the third inning, and crossed the platter eight times. Only four hits, all one-baggers, were chalked up by the Doughs during the big inning. Two of the safe hits were registered by Clyde (Woody) Burt, while Bob Kinard and Lonnie Potter each got one.

To conclude their scoring, the Benningites annexed another pair of tallies in the last half of the fourth. An error by shortstop Fuller on Watts' roller, a walk to Gallagher and a single by Potter loaded the bases. Watts scored on a wild pitch, and Gallagher came in when Kinard forced Potter at second.

PRETTY PLUNGERS . . . Zoe Ann Olsen, left, Victoria Graves, center, and Pat Elsener finished one-two-three in Olympic tryouts in Detroit. They will represent U. S. women in the three-meter springboard affair in London.

BULLETS DROP TWO DIAMOND CONTESTS

BY BOB PHILLIPS

In a pair of games played last week end, the Fort Benning Bullets failed to strike the win column, losing to the Americus Blue Sox and the Columbus Red Sox.

On Sunday at Bullet field, the Bullets tackled the Americus club, and came out on the trailing end of an 8-7 count.

The game was closely fought with each team getting a fling at the lead. It was not until the last period of the ninth inning that the Blue Sox put across the winning tally to break a 7-7 deadlock.

Leading by one run in the fourth, the Blues suddenly found themselves trailing by two when big Gene Thomas, the Bullets' roving center fielder, slammed a four-bagger out of the park which scored Andy Hardy and Leon Coleman ahead of him.

A three-run outburst in the sixth put the Blues out in front. Humphrey bunched three hits in the Bullet half of the sixth, but Americus defenses held them to one run.

One-basers by Spokie and Holloway, followed by Costell's two-bagger, gave winners three more tallies in the seventh. Gordon Burke, who gathered in three hits out of five trips to the plate, lined a single through short. Hardy walked, and both advanced a base by stealing. Coleman rifled a sharp single to left field which sent both Burke and Hardy scurrying across the plate.

The Bullets put over one run in the top of the ninth to tie up the game, but doubles by Spokie and Costell furnished the runs which won the game for the Blues.

Going all the way for the Blue Sox, Hose gave up 13 safeties, while Snowden and Miles teamed for the Bullets to issue 15 blows.

In their Monday night game in Phenix City, the Columbus Red Sox hammered the Bullets willfully, and won by a comfortable margin of 14-4.

The Bullets, trying to revenge their earlier defeat at the expense of the Sox, absorbed its worst defeat of the season. The Sand Hill lads collected nine hits off the chucking of Moore, and Gene Thomas registered his second round-tripper in as many days.

A Conerly-Smith combination on the mound for the Bullets failed to quiet the big bats of the Columbus club, which tagged the two local flingers for 16 safe blows.

Watts Hurls 24-5 Win Over Manchester Nine

Launching a 21-hit attack to back the four-hit twirling of southpaw Ken Watts, the Fort Benning Doughboys scored their second diamond victory of the season last Friday night by swamping the Manchester Millers 24-5 on Gowdy field.

The game might well have been considered the Dough opener since their only previous tilt was Thursday night's affair in which the local squad took an 11-1 decision from the Phenix City All-Stars in a non-scheduled five-inning fray.

Although the Dough-Manchester contest originally was slated for the post diamond last Sunday night, the managers of the two clubs re-slated the tiff after a downpour during the afternoon had washed away almost everything but the grandstand.

Gain Early Lead

After Watts had retired the visitors on strikes to open the initial stanza, the Doughboys got to Miller starter Tillman White for three runs on as many safeties in their half of the first. With one out, Herb O'Brien singled to center, and went to third when Ralph Terry doubled down the left-field foul line. Herb Myatt followed with a walk to load the bases, and O'Brien scored when catcher Tex Edmondson dropped a throw from Horace Denney following Bob Kinard's infield roller.

Utility shortstop Otto Loroesh, who drew the right-field assignment for the Miller game, then unloaded a two-bagger into the right-field corner to score Terry and Myatt with two more Dough tallies.

In the second frame, the Doughs banged out four more safe knocks to score four times, and jump to a 7-0 lead. A lead-off three - bagger against the right-center field fence by pitcher Watts was the big blow of the inning.

Millers Score

The Doughboy defenses slacked up a bit in the top of the third, and the Millers crossed the plate with their first run without getting a hit. A bad throw by shortstop Paul Bonair put Rufus Braddy on first with one out. Dough catcher Willie Griffin then let one of Watts' offerings get past him, permitting Braddy to go to second. The local receiver then tried to catch Braddy playing off the base, and threw wild into center field to let the Miller runner complete the base circuit.

A misjudged fly to right off the bat of Bonair, which went for two bases, brought in the first of two Doughboy runs in the last of the third. After Lorcda,hs,Wtwot mwahs,he onwrod roesh, who came in on Bonair's blow, had scored, Watts, who had beaten out a slow single down the first-base line, went to third, and scored on a fly to deep left by O'Brien.

After White had given up another Doughboy run in the fourth, he was replaced on the hill by Harry Barnes, who completely handcuffed the host squad in the fifth frame.

The Doughmen, however, solved Barnes' pitching for another tally in the sixth, and staged a five-run uprising in the seventh. Two triples, one by Watts, his second of the game, and one by O'Brien, figured in the stretch-inning splurge.

Fund Transfer Jeopardizes Game Association's Improvement Project

An unforseen decision of higher headquarters regarding the funds of the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association has curtailed the pond fertilization and seed planting programs of the organization, it was announced.

The decision, which calls for the transfer of all funds collected by the association for hunting and fishing privileges on the Fort Benning military reservation to the United States treasury, was handed down before the fertilization and planting projects, which were initiated last spring, had been completed.

Unless the restocking, fertilization and planting efforts of the association can be perpetuated through replacement of the transferred funds, the fish and game population of the reservation may be expected to decrease and eventually become extinct, association officials pointed out in making an appeal for voluntary contribution by the post's sportsmen.

At present, the military reservation offers more than 200,000 acres of the best hunting and fishing terrain in the nation, and association officials believe that the cooperative effort of interested field and stream sportsmen on the post can convert the local area into a game and fish preserve without equal.

Because there are more hunters and fishermen per acre on the Fort Benning military reservation than any comparable area in the United States, a major feeding and restocking program is necessitated to keep the production of game and fish approximately equal with the take, an association spokesman pointed out.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, a fishing and hunting enthusiast of long standing, has announced the voluntary organization of the fish and game maintenance association per orders, and has selected a group of local field and stream enthusiasts to serve as the board of directors.

The first step toward the replenishment of funds were taken last week when memberships in the association went on sale at the office of the provost marshal. The memberships, which will be sold to all personnel of the post in possession of a hunting and fishing license, cost a minimum of $1.25.

Upon joining the association, sportsmen will be issued membership cards, which later will be replaced by a distinctive badge to denote their affiliation with the organization.

Association officials urged local hunters and fishermen who are contemplating tak ing advantage of the facilities on the reservation next fall to purchase their membership at the earliest possible date. Funds taken in now will be put to early use to provide better conditions for rod and gun enthusiasts when the fall season opens.

The association's board of directors also is considering the scheduling of organized hunts, turkey shoots, fishing marathons and other hunting and fishing events as a means of increasing the size of the funds. In addition to bolstering the association's treasury, the board believes that these events will tend to popularize outdoor sports with Benning personnel.

Courts-Martial Board To Include Enlisted Men

After nearly three years of work the Department of the Army has revised the Articles of War to permit enlisted men to sit as members of general and special courts-martial, it has been announced by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall.

In a statement reviewing the important changes in court-martial procedures resulting from revisions of the Articles of War under the Selective Service Act of 1948, Secretary Royall pointed out the following salient points of the statute:

1. Enlisted men have been authorized to sit as members of general and special courts-martial upon the written request of the accused enlisted man.

2. The authority of commanding officers to impose disciplinary punishment under the 104th Article of War as to officers and warrant officers has been extended, but not as to enlisted men. Under this article commanders who are authorized to appoint general courts-martial may impose a forfeiture of one-half pay per month for three months upon officers (both field and company grade and warrant officers in peacetime or in war.

3. Officers are subject to trial by special courts-martial.

4. Qualified lawyers are required as law members of general courts-martial; if the prosecutor is a lawyer the defense counsel must also be a lawyer.

5. An accused, if he so desires, may have counsel at the pre-trial investigation which is in general parallel to pre-trial procedure in civil courts.

6. A bad-conduct discharge, which is less onerous than a dishonorable discharge, may be adjudged by general and special courts-martial.

7. Automatic appellate review has been strengthened.

8. Heretofore, a sentence to death or imprisonment for life was mandatory for murder or rape. A lesser punishment will now be authorized for unpremeditated murder and rape.

9. Specific provisions have been made to prevent officers appointing courts-martial from exercising any coercion or undue influence upon the members of the court in their consideration of a case.

The committee which recommended the revisions was headed by Arthur T. Vanderbilt, now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey. Secretary Royall declared that the committee found that "the army system of justice in general and as written in the books is a good one; that it is excellent in theory and designed to secure swift and sure justice; and that the innocent are almost invariably acquitted and the guilty seldom acquitted."

Following the report of the Vanderbilt committee, the Department of the Army prepared a draft of proposed legislation which incorporated many of the committee's recommendations and transmitted it to Congress for consideration in March, 1947. The proposed bill, with additional amendments introduced in Congress, has been incorporated in the revision new enacted. It will become effective throughout the army on Feb. 1, 1949.

LSU Cadets Take Top Honors Here

Reserve Officers Training corps cadets from Louisiana State university emerged this week as candidates for the Warrior of the Pacific trophy awarded each year to the senior R.O.T.C. unit making the highest team average score in qualification firing with the rifle. Average of the 27-man team was 172.7.

Eligibility requirements for the trophy demand that 20 cadets participate in the qualification firing, and if the unit has more than 20 men, the scores of all are counted in the averages. Winning units are determined by each army commander. The winning team retains possession of the cup for one year, or until the next competitive firing.

The L.S.U. students who compiled the top score were Cadets H. J. Picard, . A. Kuehne, J. D. Weis, C. Ekkar, D. Diball, H. M. Gainer, J. . A. Lindsay, R. Lindsley, R. Slay, J. K. Patrick, C. Stampley, J. L. Brown, O. Barrett, H. D. Strother, R. J. Wilson, J. D. Kilgore, G. E. Dickinson, S. J. Museau, J. W. Ryan, D. E. Simon, W. E. Person, M. B. Vass, L. S. Geismar, E. C. Marquette, T. P. Harless, B. Talbot, and W. E. Green.

Meanwhile, the three infantry companies and field artillery battery of the unit go into the final phase of their six-week training schedule which ends a week from Saturday. Tomorrow the cadets visit Army Field Forces board No. 3 where they will be given an opportunity to view some of the latest equipment developed for the combat arms.

Monday the infantry companies continue offensive combat training, and participate in a night problem. They tour the airborne area Wednesday and Thursday continue training on mines, booby traps, field fort pioneering and camouflage. Most of the work for the artillerymen next week consists of the night exercise Monday and practicing river crossings during the middle of the week. Friday the unit will march in its last parade and final exercises will be held.

Post Ceremony Honors Pershing

Guns of Battery A of the 319th Field Artillery battalion boomed out the final 19-gun salute for General of the Armies John J. Pershing as the World War I commander of the A. E. F. was laid to rest in Arlington national cemetery Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A ceremony at Fort Benning in his honor was held at Stilwell field, near the post flag, which flew at half staff and was timed to coincide with the ceremonies at Arlington which were attended by the nation's top-ranking civilian and military chiefs.

In orders published by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, it was announced that until sunset of Aug. 14 the flag will be flown at half staff as a sign of mourning. Last Saturday the 319th's Battery A fired one gun each half-hour from 7 a. m. until 5:30 p. m.

Bernard Named To School Post

Lt. Col. Lyle W. Bernard has been named acting chief of the General Subjects section of the Infantry School, succeeding Col. Frank Ward who has been named deputy post commander at Fort McPherson, Ga.

The new section chief is one of the army's experts on amphibious warfare, having participated in and commanded some of the most spectacular operations of this type in the European and Mediterranean theaters during the war.

A battalion commander in the 30th Infantry regiment of the Third Infantry division, he participated in the invasion of North Africa at Casablanca and at Licata, Sicily.

Commanding a battalion combat team he twice landed behind the German lines at San Agata and Brolo on the north coast of Sicily in August, 1943. These two operations helped convince the Germans that Sicily was untenable, and made the fall of the island easier. From Sicily Colonel Bernard moved to Italy, landing at Paestum, south of Salerno, and fought to Cassine. He was with the initial assault troops at Anzio and remained on the beachhead until February, 1944.

Woman Sergeant Smells Trouble, Finds 'Intruder'

When 1st. Sgt. Ruth Crawford of the WAC detachment called the MP's last Friday night to come down and help route an invader from the WAC barracks, she really smelled trouble.

And it took the combined efforts of a dozen men and several WACs to rout the stinker that caused the trouble, a little polecat that had crawled into the clothes of WAC Cpl. Dorothy L. Pennington.

First noticed about 11:30 p.m. nobody knew what to do about the skunk, so Sergeant Crawford called the MP's but they didn't know what to do either. Finally help was asked of the medics and the medical and dental OD's came, with ether and chloroform.

Meanwhile, a barricade of tables was thrown up in the hall to keep the intruder penned in Cpl. Pennington's room which is the last in the barracks. In a combined operation, an MP poked a wad of cotton saturated with ether at the skunk while the medical OD hung in the window with an ethyl-chloride bomb.

After two hours of maneuvering, the skunk, either disgusted or drunk, wandered out. But the first WAC to see it, and pet it, thinking it was a cat that had wandered in by mistake, will know better next time. This time she was lucky the little stinker didn't let his (or her) perfume loose.

Third Division

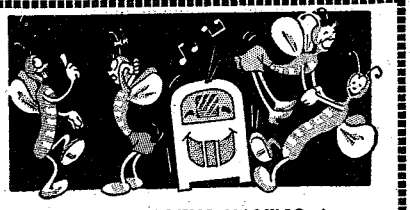
ble "firsts" were its entries into Casablanca, Agrigento, Palermo, Messina, Strasbourg and Berchtesgaden.



Upon its return to the United States after the war the Third was practically entirely deactivated, merely maintaining a skeleton headquarters at Camp Campbell, Ky. Then early last winter the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team was reactivated, and Fort Benning was designated its home station.

During recent weeks, especially since the passage of the Selective Service act, there has been a great deal of conjecture concerning the employment of the Seventh, and the rest of the Third Division, in the expanding army. Present plans, according to information released by the Public Information division of the Department of the Army, call for the building up of the rest of the division at Camp Campbell, Ky., with the Seventh remaining at Fort Devens.

Recently announcements were made that the Third division in its entirety would be stationed at Fort Benning.

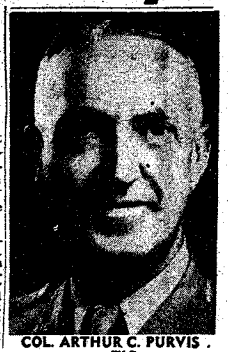
Enlisted Men Get New Grade Titles

The long discussed army career plan goes into effect at Fort Benning at midnight Sunday. August 1, according to orders issued by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, is the day on which the new pay grade titles are authorized.

In instructions issued recently, General Burress ordered that, commencing August 1:

1. "Old pay grade titles will be shown on supplemental payrolls for the month of July, 1948."

2. "New pay grade titles. . . will be shown on payrolls and vouchers covering pay accruing on and after 1 August, 1948."



3. "In all cases where pay has accrued for periods both prior to and subsequent to 1 August 1948 (example— 1 July to 31 August 1948) the new pay grade title will be used, and in addition the following remark will be shown under remarks of individual concerned—'Pay grade title changed fr to eff 1 Aug 48 per Da Cir 202-48.'"

Circular 202 is a 79-page publication entitled "Implementation of Career Guidance Plan for Warrant Officers and Enlisted Personnel." It was issued July 7, 1948, to provide implementing instructions to Circular 1, Department of the Army, 1948, which established for planning plan for enlisted men and warrant officers. This new circular places into effect the several features of the career guidance plan effective August 1, 1948.

This circular makes clearer the career part of the plan insofar as it pertains to job fields. This latest circular breaks down army jobs into 50 groups. Assignment to th egroups is by MOS. For example, a man will not be assigned to a signal unit because he is in the Signal corps but will be assigned to a signal unit because he is qualified for the job by MOS despite the fact that his branch may be armored corps, according to the circular.

A man who wants to transfer to another job may do so if there is a vacancy and the transfer is approved by Department of the Army. He can then transfer in his pay grade. If the transfer from one job to another means that the man is going into something for which he is not qualified by MOS, he will take a reduction, according to information explained by Chief Warrant Officer Edward W. Zlotkowski, assistant classification and assignment officer of the Infantry Center. Mr. Zlotkowski explain-

COL. ARTHUR C. PURVIS . . . gets TIC post

Purvis Appointed Center Adjutant; Boineau Retires

Col. Arthur C. Purvis this week assumed duties as adjutant general of the Infantry Center, succeeding Col. Leon C. Boineau who is retiring from the service, it has been announced.

A graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y., with the class of 1917, Colonel Purvis' first assignment was with the 11th Infantry division in World War I, which, as he said, arrived in France too late to fight, although he was with the advance detail. He remained in Europe with the army of occupation until the summer of 1921, reporting then to Fort Dix, N. J.

The new adjutant general was at the Infantry School in 1922-23 as a student in what was then known as the company officers' class. After completion of the Fort Benning course, Colonel Purvis reported to the 18th Infantry Regiment at Fort Slocum, N.Y. He was next assigned as an R.O.T.C. instructor at Rutgers university, and at the end of this assignment he went to Hawaii as plans and training officer for the 21st brigade of the Hawaiian division.

Following service in Hawaii, Colonel Purvis returned to the United States and was named adjutant of the 16th Infantry regiment and also post adjutant at Fort Jay, N.Y., where he remained until 1934 when he was again assigned to duty with the R.O.T.C., this time at Syracuse university. He remained there until 1939 when he returned to West Point as assistant adjutant of the military academy. In 1941 he became the adjutant general of the academy, which post he held until August, 1942.

Medics Celebrate Sixth Anniversary

Organization day, commemorating the sixth year of activation of the 30th Medical Group, was observed last Monday, July 26, and featured addresses by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, and Maj. Spurgeon H. Neel, Jr., commanding officer of the group.

Following an impressive review, Infantry Center Achievement awards were presented to Cpt. Philip L LaManche, "for superior performance of duty and outstanding leadership as commanding officer of the 651st Motor Ambulance Company from May 29, 1946, to Nov. 18, 1947," and to Sgt. Bernard E. Newby, 651st Motor Ambulance company "for outstanding achievement and devotion to duty while acting as platoon commander while participating in "Exercise Assembly," Camp Campbell, Ky., during the period from May 8, 1948 to May 31, 1948."

In his address General Burress stressed the necessity of the medical aid man in combat, and the respect and affection that he had won in the hearts of the infantry. The oldest member of the 30th Medical group, M-Sgt. Edward J. Morrissey, sergeant major, read the unit history, describing the part the unit played in the European campaign.

The 30th Medical group was organized in June, 1934, and called to active service in July, 1942. After rigorous training in the U. S., the unit departed for England in October, 1944. During the "Battle of the Bulge," the 30th supplied various companies and personnel to support the 134th Medical group, at that time handling a large portion of the medical support of that now famous battle. The group also operated and supervised the hospitalization of repatriated Allied military personnel, prisoners of war and displaced persons.

Army Styles Get New Look

The new look is coming to the Army.

A new semi-dress winter uniform is now being tested at Fort Dix, New Jersey, with the view of army-wide issuance this fall.

Featuring a full length blouse, the new uniform closely resembles the officers' blouse in every detail, with the exception of the sleeve braid being omitted. The material will be shade 33 OD, but will be somewhat closer knit and smoother looking than the old uniform.

Improved cut and styling in addition to the new material will help maintain the American standard of having "the best dressed soldier in the world." To assure perfect fittings the new uniform is being manufactured in 96 different blouse sizes, and 105 different waist and crotch sizes for trousers.

Reserve Officials Pick Honor Grads

Ranking cadets of the Reserve Officers Training corps who have been at Fort Benning the past six weeks for the annual summer encampment were announced this week by ROTC officials.

They are Cadets John W. Mueller, Jr., of the field artillery battery; James W. Ryan, Infantry Company B; Thomas B. Blake, Infantry Company C; Thomas B. Blake, Infantry Company C, and Walter N. Stone, Jr., Infantry Company D.

Cadet Mueller is from the University of Florida and has had no prior military service. Ryan was formerly with the Marine detachment of the U. S. Topeka, and served nine months in the Asiatic-Pacific theater. A student at Louisiana State university, he has been awarded the American and Asiatic - Pacific theater ribbons and Victory medal.

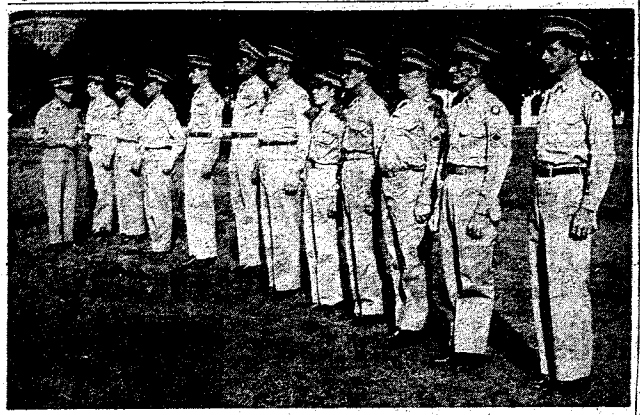
Cadet Blake, from the University of Alabama, is also a former marine with three years prior service. He served overseas for nearly 17 months in the Asiatic-Pacific theater, and has been awarded the expert rifleman's badge, and the Asiatic-Pacific theater ribbon with three campaign stars.

Cadet Stone, from the University of Georgia, served 33 months overseas with Company 1, 23rd Infantry regiment of the Second Infantry division. He has the Bronze Star, Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster, combat infantry b adge, ETO ribbon and Victory medal.

The top men were chosen by their instructors and fellow cadets. The aptitude ratings were obtained as follows:

Each cadet in the platoon rated each other cadet in the platoon, and each officer in the company, or battery, rated each cadet in the company or battery.

The cadet's disciplinary record was evaluated as was his camp activity, other than his military training. Camp activity included participation in athletics and other "extra-curricular activities."



Points were evaluated for each cadet, and the rating of each of the cadets was based on the overall scores of the instructors and other cadets. The final ratings, it was announced, will be forwarded to the professors of military science and tactics of the various colleges universities and military schools from which the cadets came to the encampment.

SAND HILL PLANNING AQUA REVIEW FRIDAY

Gigantic floats sponsored by various business organizations, civic clubs and military units will participate in the huge parade that will precede the "Aqua Review" to be staged at Sand Hill Friday.

The selection of a queen to reign over the proceedings at the Sand Hill affair will top the day's activities planned by units at Sand Hill. "Miss Sand Hill" will be chosen from a number of candidates from Columbus and vicinity.

Approximately 15 Columbus business concerns and civic clubs will sponsor floats in the parade. It is planned that the floats from Columbus will be met at the traffic circle on the super highway by the army floats, after which they will proceed to the service club area at Sand Hill.

Organizations sponsoring floats include the Red Bird Cab company, B & H Radio shop, Colored Cab company, Community Cleaners, Bryant's Drug Store, Club 13, Brown's Drug Store, the Nightingale Herald, Stanback Funeral Home, and the North Carolina Mutual and Atlanta Life Insurance companies.

Outstanding swimmers and acquatic experts will perform at the Sand Hill pool, the scene of the "Aqua Review." Heading the list of performers are Misses Stafford and McCoo of Columbus.

Miss Martha Matthews, star of the play "Miss Cherry Blossom" held at Theater NO. 1 last summer, will appear as an Indian maiden with S-Sgt. Bill Thompson of the 999th field Artillery battalion as chief of the reservation in another highlight of the show.

The day's activities will be climaxed by a dance to be held in the recreation room of the Service club No. 2.

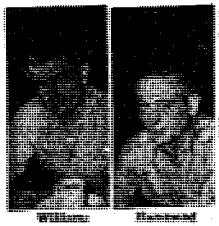
Post Dialogue

WITH MERRILL HARRISON

When World War II ended in 1945, the predominantly civilian army of the war years began to change to a better than post-World War I professional organization. Now, three years after the collapse of the Italian, German and Japanese regimes, America is once again building up another civilian army through the induction of young men by Selective Service and voluntary enlistments of 18-year olds for 12 months.

* * *

This week the Inquiring Reporter asked eight men in active military service at Fort Benning what they meant by the term "military discipline." They were asked to give, in their own words, a definition of the term as though they were talking to the mother of a 19-year-old boy who had just been drafted.

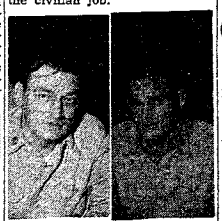


Maj. Nick M. Emig, a student in Company D of the Airborne battalion who won a reserve commission as second lieutenant in the R. O. T. C., has six years service and has been integrated in the regular army: "My definition is the same as the one in the book: a cheerful and willing obedience to authorized orders. The training of men under intelligent leadership precludes any unusual problems in connection with military discipline."

Emig — Oliver

Pfc. Wilton E. Oliver, Company A, Infantry School detachment, in the army seven years: "Military discipline is the something in a soldier that makes him perform his duties in a military manner. It helps him keep the high standards of army courtesy and politeness of officers, enlisted men and civilians toward each other while on duty or on pass."

Second Lt. Jack Williams, Company E, Seventh Infantry regiment, who started as a private eight and one-half years ago: "Military discipline is a prompt willing, obedient manner a soldier displays when executing a lawfully given order. It's a firm but understanding hand that guides a group of individuals together for the purpose of attaining a common goal. That goal, to quote Ralph Ingersoll, is 'The Battle is the Payoff'."

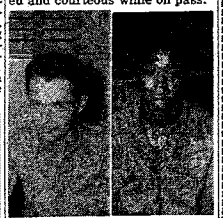


Williams — Hammond

M-Sgt. John M. Hammond, Company B, Infantry School detachment, with more than 20 years service and a former warrant officer, junior grade. "Military discipline is a combination of many things. Morale is one of the biggest factors. It is cheerful, willing, but not blind, obedience to lawful orders. Morale is built on athletics and recreation, and recreational facilities play a big part in building discipline. An outfit with high morale is a well-disciplined outfit."

In the period immediately following the end of the war there was a great spate of material written about military discipline, especially as it related to and concerned "civilian soldiers." Military discipline was a term that was hurled about in newspapers, magazines and radio. It was criticized, lauded and complained about. It was seldom, if ever, defined by the commentators.

* * *



First Sgt. George Macik, Company A, Infantry School detachment, on duty with G-1, and in the army 14 years: "Military discipline is learning to do the right thing by doing what one is told. It's the implanting of the idea in the man that if he does his job well, he will get more out of it. For one thing, when a boy gets out of the army, he will be better qualified to get a job in civilian life. He will have been trained to take orders which will more or less fit into the civilian job."

Macik — Bass

S-Sgt. Warren G. Bass, Headquarters detachment section, 1, 3440th Army Service unit, in the army five years: Military discipline is more or less the same type of discipline one finds in the home. It is obedience to authority, learning how to follow rules and regulations. It is the method of one's conducting oneself with different types of people. It is cooperating with the group, working as a team."

Cpl. James R. Boyd, Company A, Infantry School detachment, five years service including three years in the Marine corps: Military discipline is obedience to superior officers and non-commissioned officers. It is living within army regulations which correspond to laws in civilian life. It is being at all times a credit to the military service through neatness in appearance and being well-behaved and courteous while on pass."

Boyd — Stanley

Pfc. William J. Stanley, 65th Motor Ambulance company, in the army 13 months: Military discipline is the training that helps a man conduct himself as a soldier so that he is recognized as a gentleman, through his being expected to obey orders and do the things he has to do quickly, efficiently, correctly, cheerfully and with pride in his work."

She: "You deceived me before our marriage. You told me you were well off."

He: "I was, but I didn't know it."

* * *

Mother: "Didn't I tell you not to go out with perfect strangers?"

Daughter: "But Mother, he isn't perfect."

Meaders Gets San Juan Post

Maj. George E. Meaders, S-4 of the 325th Infantry regiment, has been transferred to San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he will continue his supply activities at Losey field, officials have announced.

He has been replaced by Maj. Harold W. Rodenmayer, former assistant S-4 of the Infantry Center.

School Troops supply officer for the past two-and-one-half years, Major Meaders accompanied the 325th Infantry regiment as supply officer during the recent maneuver "Exercise Assembly," held in Tennessee and North Carolina.

Major Maders' replacement, Major Rodenmayer, was with the 133rd Infantry, 34th division, in Europe prior to his assignment as Infantry Center assistant S-4.

Then there's the story about the traveling salesman who married the farmer's daughter because he was in love with her.

1ST ARMY WIFE TO LIVE ON ATTU AT BENNING

There's a woman, 'tis said, behind every bush and tree on Attu island in the Aleutians. But the soldiers who have been there say there isn't a tree or bush on the island.

They do, however, have williwaws. A williwaw is a wind that comes from all directions and blows in all directions at the same time, or, at least, so the Aleut natives say. But they hit up to over 100 miles an hour.

Besides the non-presence of female company and the presence of williwaws there can be as many changes in weather in one day as may be found in a year in the States. First it's hot, then it's cold, then it rains, then the sun shines, next is a williwaw, and then a gentle zephyr—all in one day.

Mrs. Arlene Smith, wife of Lt. Roger Smith now stationed at Fort Benning, knows all about this. For she was the first, and for a long time, the only woman living on Attu. As such she was literally "Queen of Attu." It was quite a relief, she said, when other dependents started arriving. That helped take care of such things as wondering what to do with No. 10 cans of fruit and whole hams.

Life in Fort Benning can be unique, too, Mrs. Smith has discovered. Instead of the frame buildings and quonset huts of Attu, Lieutenant and Mrs. Smith are living in a converted hospital ward, consisting mainly of two rooms each 75 feet long. And Mrs. Smith beats the ads that show tiled bathrooms with washbasin apiece for husband and wife. She has a whole row of them. And she also has a loudspeaker attachment with the hospital radio network which is something she didn't have on Attu.

Pfc.: "I used to be a plumber in a tobacco shop."

Cpl.: "What did you do?"

Pfc.: "I fixed the pipes."

STRICTLY EDITORIALIZING

WE HAVE ALWAYS believed that friends were the greatest asset a person could have, and our belief was more or less proved this week when we learned that through the efforts of friends, a Fort Benning sergeant would be able to entertain his four-year-old son victim of incurable leukemia, with a final birthday party, the likes of which we doubt have ever been seen before.

It seems that when Sgt. John Coleman told a few friends about the illness of his son, Johnny Joe, those friends, all members of Coleman's unit, Company H, Airborne battalion, decided that they would like to help. The word was passed around among his buddies, they dug into their pockets for donations, and the result was a big birthday party at the National Catholic Community Service club on Ninth street in Columbus.

THE MONEY COLLECTED, however, was not used to buy the 250-pound birthday cake which greeted Johnny Joe on his arrival at the Ninth street club. The cooks and mess steward in Company H thought they, too, should do something for this final birthday party, so they baked the cake and decorated it. The money then was turned over to Johnny Joe's dad to be used for Johnny Joe in some other way. Then the Food Service School heard about Johnny Joe, and, not to be outdone, baked yet another cake for the party.

So, because his father had friends, Johnny Joe had the grandest time of his life. Our hat is off to Sergeant Coleman because he has friends and to Company H of the Airborne battalion and the Food Service School because they proved beyond doubt that they know what friendship is.

Salute To The Chaplain

Armed only with a GI Bibile, faith in God and the zeal of patriots, 18 men won the Distinguished Service cross, an other 157 earned the Silver Star for gallantry in action in World War II.

These men were members of the Corps of Chaplains, now dwindled from a high of 8,171 during the war to 1,097, who. today, will represent a corps 172 years old—within a few days of being as old as the United States army itself.

Relatively unsung from the days of the Revolutionary war's Rev. John Hurt, who was the army's first legal chaplain, and before him, the Rev. Capt. John Steel, who lies buried in Carlisle, Pa., (site of the present Chaplains' school) these men of God have shared in the ordeals and the casualities of soldiers in all wars. Sixty-three were killed in action in the last war, and 19 died in Japanese prison camps and in non-battle status.

Already honored this year have been the four chaplains who lost their lives on Feb. 3, 1943, when the S. S. Dorchester was torpedoed off Greenland. They became the subject of a special postage stamp issued last May in commemoration of their heroism in handing their lifebelts to others, and dying together in icy waters in one of the bravest and most inspirational deeds of the war.

The extreme duress of mortal struggle has made men turn to a Higher Power throughout history. A full sixteen centuries before the Christian era, the forerunners of the Polings, Washingtons, Goodes and Foxes went into the historic, bloody clashes of the middle east with the soldiers of Egypt, the priests of the Egyptian god, Ammon-Re. The Hebrews, led by seven priests under Joshua, marched around the walls of Jericho, and no declaration of war could be made in ancient Rome without first consulting the priests of the College of Augurs. Christianity provided for chaplains in its ecclesiastical law at the Council of Ratisbon, April 21, 742 A. D.

The chaplain throughout history has been the man most sought in times of trouble in the life of the soldier. The most successful have been the most human, as witness Capt. John Verret, of Putney, Vt., who was assigned to the 507th Parachute Infantry, and on the day of his first jump, cast his eyes skyward and said with all humility: "I hope the Boss isn't mad at me today!" He jumped, and won an everlasting place in the hearts of the other men of the regiment, eventually giving his life at their side in the Battle of the Bulge in January, 1945.

It was yet another chaplain, who, after Bataan, uttered the immortal statement:

"There are no atheists in foxholes."

Even that famous first chaplain, John Hurt, was plagued with difficulties seemingly above and beyond the power—such as being done out of a horse and his paybook, about which he complained to General Washington—but he never stopped praying, and finally, both horse and paybook were his.

The exploits of these officers sound incredible for men who had no weapons other than a sixth sense for danger and invincible courage. All were exploits of men whose preparation for the horrors of war was the preaching of meekness, humility and peace in pastorates and parishes of their homeland.

The Bayonet presents elsewhere in this issue a picture story, which we hope will show in some small way the variety of services rendered by the chaplains at Fort Benning. Without their guidance, their understanding and their cheerful willingness to help the man in need, many soldiers would probably have taken the path to moral and spiritual degradation. But so long as the American army continues to have chaplains of the calibre now on duty, the American soldier will never go down the road from which there is no returning without a guide.

Chaplain's Corner..

AMERICAN COMMUNITY

BY

Chaplain Wallace M. Hale

The first American communities that had any permanency were founded by settlers who intended to stay. They were not the usual adventurers who came to "get rich quick" and then return to their heath to build a castle. They were plain ordinary people who came to build homes and live in a country that was of their own making. Many of them had tired of the dull demanding State Church, and they came here to worship their God in the manner they wished. Others came because they wanted the freedom a new land could give them; but, whenever they came, they brought the Bible and the nucleus of a Church.

We would be so foolish as to believe that every man who came to New America was a firm believer in God nor would we say that there were none who disbelieved. We do know that the heart of the community and the determining factor of community life was the Church and its theology. The Church set up the first schools and exerted its influence in seeing that the future citizens be properly trained to accept their responsibilities. The first colleges and universities of America were established by the Church. The first real democracy was sponsored by a certain Roger Williams who believed that all men should be allowed to worship as they pleased.

The American communities began to thrive because of the people who made up the epitzenry. Others' lands had had just as good earth, natural resources and possibilities for commerce, but they lacked men who had ambition to live as God had intended them to live and whose only handicaps were those they imposed upon themselves. The cities began to grow, the farms became more prosperous and more plentiful, industry began to thrive, and American ingenuity and originality began to rear its head in the midst of what less heroic men had described as a veritable wilderness.

The Professor's Umbrella

"The Professor's Umbrella" is undoubtedly a novel with a purpose — that of showing up the evils in our universities. The author, Mary Jane Ward, who did a rather effective job of exposing insane asylums in "the Snake Pit," might have repeated her success in her later book if she'd been willing to stick to one theme. There is probably quite enough wrong with our educational system to fill ten volumes without dragging in other social evils. But Miss Ward could not limit her novel to the political, economic, and academic difficulties of her university; she must also include a dissertation against racial prejudice —a subject that certainly rates a book of its own.

The story is entirely too slight for its multiple objectives, which actually counteract each other. It concerns Gregory Kitner, and English instructor at a mid-western university, who is fired from his job, ostensibly for moral turpitude. The trumped up charges seem rather unnecessary, since Kitner, who is nobody's plaster saint, provides the university with sufficient legitimate excuses for his dismissal. The author tries to make us believe that the real reason is the anti-semitism of the president. This might be more believable if Kit were the only Jew on the faculty. He is, however, one among a dozen or more who still hold their jobs.

Whatever the cause, Kitner is fired, and has to decide between two jobs offered him—one in the teaching profession, one in a more lucrative field. His decision, and his reasons for the decision, make up the biggest portion of the story. These reasons are just about as believable as the romance between the 47-year-old professor and the young botany instructor which starts in the next to the last chapter. The professor's umbrella is a symbol of something which the author doesn't bother to mention, or perhaps it was added as an afterthought (also in the next to the last chapter) to provide a title for the novel.

The vague disjointed, stream-of-consciousness writing was well suited to the schizophrenic character of "The Snake Pit." In "The Professor's Umbrella" it is merely annoying. The author has some rather interesting ideas on prejudice, snobbery, bootlicking and life in general, which she puts, without discrimination, into the mouths of her characters. Consequently, these characters, when they can be identified, seem constantly to contradict themselves. The book is far more confusing than amusing.

CHARLES P. PARKER

About a century ago a man watched a battle rage for several days. Occasionally, there would be a lull for each side to bury the dead and care for the wounded. For the most part the wounded could only lay and wait. Their own troops were too busy fighting and the enemy cared only for his own. Out of this spectacle of gloom, suffering and barbarism a man conceived the idea of establishing a great neutral force, an organization whose mission would be to render help to the sick and wounded in battle on both sides.

This idea—the first Red Cross—was considered too flimsy for popular support at first, but soon proved its worth—also the broader principle of the human spirit; that of something deep in the heart of all men, a compassion for those who suffer honorably.

One wonders these days when various "isms" cry out for popular support, when suspicion and distrust confront us on every side both in our foreign and domestic relations, where one can find a gleam of hope or evidence of something big enough for modern man to embrace with full loyalty and confidence of ultimate victory with true peace and lasting security.

The idea—which later became Red Cross—conceived in the mind of Henri Dunant on the battlefield grew with expanding services to the needy. Letters and packages to men in enemy prison camps was one result. Relief to sufferers from disasters, fires, floods and tornados is another. Blood and blood plasma to bring life and hope to wounded is another.

Now in peace this same spirit, the Red Cross, is beginning a program to see that sufferers in peacetime disasters are never without a supply of blood and blood plasma. The number of services could go on, if we had time to mention them, in the ever expanding principle of Red Cross.

It may appear very dim at times, but gains of mankind in "deeds of mercy" give us a ray of hope that the common faith is something men attain when they are willing to do unselfish acts of kindness for those who need help.

Johnny Joe's Big Cake, Big Party Top 'Em All

BY BECKY PORTER

That's what Johnny Joe Coleman wanted for his fourth birthday, and that's what his daddy and mother, Sgt. and Mrs. John Coleman, were determined he was going to have. It might be his last birthday, though they tried not to think about that, and it was certainly going to be the biggest party a kid ever had around here.

The men in Sergeant Coleman's company — that's Company H, Airborne battalion—wanted to have apart in that celebration. After all, Sergeant Coleman was their buddy, and Johnny Joe—well, he was their buddy too.

Last Thursday Johnny Joe had his party in the NCCS auditorium. And he had not one, but two "big old cakes". One of them—the smaller one, though it was as big as ten regular sized cakes—was made at the Food Service School. The other one, all 250 pounds of it, was made in the Infantry School detachment mess. The men in Company H ordered it specially for Johnny Joe, and the bakers stayed up nearly all night getting it decorated.

Johnny Joe's mother and father were afraid he might not be able to enjoy the party, but on Thursday afternoon he was right there, getting a big kick out of every minute of it. He joined in the games there in the NCCS auditorium. Then the band started, and Johnny Joe got in his new little green auto and led the grand march round and round the hall. Then he drove right up on the stage, and there, surrounded by the great big yellow bunnies and red balloons, he was crowned "King of the Birthday Party" by his playmate, little Gwendolyn Fuller. Gwen got a little excited and put the crown on upside down, but Johnny Joe waited patiently until she could straighten it up.

Then came the opening of the presents. And there were gifts from just about everybody—the kids who were there at the paty—over a hundred of them—and others too. There was just about everything a fellow of four could wish for—whistles and tops and a scooter, even a great big basket of peaches. And a box of cigars, which Johnny Joe said he was going to let his daddy smoke, even if they were chocolate.

After all the presents were opened, Johnny Joe cut the big birthday cake. He didn't want to at first—it was just too pretty to cut, and he didn't want to "mess it all up", but, after all, cakes, even birthday cakes, are made to be eaten. There was enough cake for the 103 little guests and lots more too. And there was ice cream and cold drinks for everybody.

The Company H boys wanted like everything to be there, but it was Thursday and not Saturday so most of them had to work. Only seven of them could get off, but they were right there, getting about as big a kick out of watching as Johnny Joe himself.

Two Chinese Officers Slated to Attend TIS

Two Chinese army officers are scheduled to attend classes at the Infantry School during the 1948-49 academic year, officials have announced.

They are Col. Siang Lin and Capt. Lu Shu Wang. Colonel Lin will take the advanced course which begins Aug. 28 and ends June 25, 1949, and Captain Wang will take the basic course which begins Jan. 3, 1949, and ends June 12.

'THAT GREAT BIG OLD BIRTHDAY CAKE' . . . Johnny Joe Coleman, son of Sgt. and Mrs. John Coleman, gets the first slice of that "great big old birthday cake" which the men in his daddy's outfit (Co. H., Airborne battalion) had made especially for Johnny Joe's birthday party last Thursday.

A young married woman wanted her new maid to be pleased with her position. "You'll have it very easy here, because you have no children to annoy you," she explained sweetly.

"Oh," exclaimed the girl generously, "I'm very fond of children, so don't go restricting yourself on my account."

Lawson Librarian Reports on Talk By Noted Novelist

The folowing is taken from a report made by Mrs. Donna I. Stillinger, Lawson Air Force base librarian, who recently returned from Atlantic City, N. J., where she attended the annual meeting of the American Library association. One of the many interesting speakers presented at the gathering was the distinguished writer, Pearl Buck.

"'While men have wit to read and the will to know, the door to learning is an open book.' This sentence was the theme of Pearl Buck's lecture at the American Library association's annual meeting.

"Mrs. Buck is a handsome, charming woman who speaks with sincerity and feeling. She says that reading skill is basic to the democratic process, and that if people do not read, they do not learn to think, and thus do not perceive the gathering darkness. Her qualifications of 'gathering darkness' was such threats as dictators and other aspirants. She went on to say that libraries are an inegraal part of adult education and that the learning process should be continued from the cradle to the grave. Books are healing and they help us understand ourselves, she added.

"In closing, she made a plea for people to read for fun—a valid reason in itself."

Lanham Named Bradley Aide

Brig. Gen. Charles T. Lanham, former chief of the army's Troop Information and Education division, was today named a special assistant to General Omar Bradley, army chief of staff. General Lanham will serve as Bradley's personal representative in his association with educational, labor, management, veteran and other civilian organizations.

The appointment was made to assist the chief of staff in seeking the opinion and advice of citizen groups in problems resulting from the draft and expansion of the army. General Lanham will be assned to the office of Lt. Gen. Raymond S. McLain, army chief of information.

A graduate of the United States Military academy in 1924, General Lanham commanded a regiment of the Fourth Infantry division on the invasion of Normady and throughout the battle for Europe. In March, 1945, he was made a brigadier general and assigned as assistant division commander of the 104th Infantry division. Shortly after V-E day, General Lanham was recalled to the United States to take over the army's vast troop education program.

Fewer Officers Expected at TIC

There will be a decrease of about 25 per cent in the number of students attending the advanced officers courses at the Infantry School, next year, according to Lt. Col. Charles E. Johnson, secretary of the Academic department. Enrollment has been cut, he said, from 388 planned for the 1948-49 academic year to 335.

Expansion of the army and the activation and reactivation of several new and old divisions is the reason for the change in enrollment figures, Colonel Johnson declared. Because of the shortage of regular army officers with adequate training and experience, many who would otherwise be students here or at other advanced army schools have been reassigned to serve as commanding and staff officers of the expanding units. The situation at the Infantry School, he stated, is paralleled at other schools such as the Armored and Artillery Schools.

While officer attendance will be decreased, Colonel Johnson said that enrollment of enlisted men at the Infantry School will show an increase, especially after the first of next year. The jump in enrollment among noncommissioned officers attending classes here will be greatest in the enlisted motor, communications and airborne classes, he said.

Career

ed that the reduction will be because the man, though of a higher original grade, is going into a job where he has to serve some apprenticeship.

One point that has aroused many queries among the new career-minded enlisted men is when the new chevrons will be issued. The answer to that, according to quartermaster and property officers is, simply, "We don't know."

According to Maj. George M. Pollock, Infantry Center quartermaster property officer, the only information available on the issuance of the new chevrons is contained in a supply bulletin issued last May 14 by the Atlanta General Distribution depot. According to this bulletin, the army will not change its chevrons until the air force issues its new "upside down" chevrons.

The supply officer at Lawson Air Force base, Capt. Meryl K. Finefrock, when asked when the air force would issue its new chevrons stated that he could be quoted to the effect that it would be "quite some time."

Major Pollock declared that when the air force issues its new chevrons and the army then follows suit with its new insignia of non-commissioned rank not all army personnel will receive the new chevrons. First to get them will be members of the combat units. Non-combatants in the army, Major Pollock said, quoting information he had, will not be issued the new chevrons until all existing stocks in depots have been exhausted. "That," he added, "may take some time."

According to information received from G-1 officials, members of the combat units at Fort Benning, such as infantry regiments and artillery battalions, will be considered combat men and will wear the chevrons when they are issued. Others entitled to wear the combat chevrons, according to circular 202, are personnel once assigned to combat units who are now on recruiting duty, civilian component duty or in duties in connection with instruction in basic training, or in infantry, artillery, armored, engineer, signal, or chemical branch training, or in the infantry, artillery, armored, ground general, engineer, chemical or signal schools.

In addition to the usual combat units at Fort Benning mentioned above, such as infantry regiments, artillery battalions, tank battalions, certain other soldiers here, not assigned to those units will be authorized to wear the combat chevrons. These, according to both G-1 and G-3 offials, are personnel assigned to duty with the Academic department of the Infantry School in an instructional capacity and personnel in pipeline status who are as yet unassigned but whose last unit comes under the categories of combat units.

Combat personnel, as defined by Circular 202, are the following:

1. Infantry, armored and airborne divisions (including First Cavalry division) and component units thereof.
2. Infantry and armored-cavalry units.
3. Artillery units and field artillery observation battalions.
4. Engineer special brigades and component units thereof.
5. Engineer combat battalions.
6. Chemical mortar battalions.
7. Constabulary brigades, regiments and squadrons and component units thereof.

As to what a man will wear in the way of chevrons and what he will be called, G-1 officials at Benning said that that problem has been solved as far as this post is concerned. Since the new titles go into effect Sunday and because chevrons cannot be issued, there will be no change in the number of chevrons a man will wear.

In the case of a buck sergeant or technician fourth grade, ranks that have been abolished under the career plan, the men wearing the three stripes with or without the "T" will wear the same stripes. They will however, no longer be called "sergeant." They will be called "corporal". Men will therefore, continue to wear the same stripes they have been wearing, but will be designated by the new titles. Technicians will continue to wear technician chevrons for those three grades, officials said.

Benningites Must Have High School Education

Every soldier at Fort Benning who does not have a high school diploma or certificate of equivalency will be required to take the General Educational Development test, according to orders issued last week by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

Unit information and education officers will list all men who are not high school graduates or do not have the equivalency certificate, and submit the lists to the Infantry Center I and E officer in order to schedule times when the men may take the tests, according to Capt. Edward F. Grady, post I and E officer. Tests are being given from 1-5 p.m. daily and 6:15-10 p.m. on Thursday evenings.

Following orders first issued on this subject 18 months ago, about 6,000 troops at Benning took the high school G.E.D. tests in three months. That was more than half the tests issued throughout the entire army during that period.

Present policy of the army, according to Captain Grady, is to stress the need of education because of the technical necessities of the modern army. Many technical subjects required for the running of the army call for a broader academic base than was formerly necessary. An example of this is in the case of artillerymen who must be familiar with higher mathematics.

Captain Grady stated that men who take the tests prove that they have the mental ability of high school graduates plus a better understanding of the weak parts of their education. These then can be filled in by taking Armed Force Institute courses, he said.

It is not only in the case of enlisted men that the entire army is carrying on its educational drive since officers also are being urged to further their educations. In fact, according to Circular 146, 1948, Department of the Army, officers who have not completed two years of college and who are regular army are required to register through the Infantry Center I and E officer to the Coordinator, Career Management Group, Personnel and Administration Division, General Staff, U. S. Army, to have an official record of their complete educational background filed. They will be given an opportunity to state whether they wish to take the college sophomore level cooperative general culture test which carries the weight of two years of college as far as the army is concerned. It is then recommended that they advance their education to obtain a degree from a civilian college.

SCOUT GROUP ON WAY TO PHILMONT RANCH

Four senior Boy Scouts from Fort Benning's troop No. 195 are enroute to Philmont scout ranch at Cimarron, N. Mex., for a 15-day training period, local scout officials announced this week.

Those attending the camping session include Bob Rosebaum, Dick Sugg, Hugo Hathaway and Bill Maurer. Accompanied by Sgt. Harry P. Duffield, Fort Benning scoutmaster, they will be away for 25 days.

The trip to New Mexico will be made by way of Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, and the return trip will be made by way of Arizona, Texas, Mexico, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

The scouts will spend most of one day in New Orleans, and will take a trip up the Mississippi river in a paddle wheeler.

Philmont ranch covers a total of 32,000 acres, donated by former owner to the Boy Scouts of America as a training and pleasure spot for senior scouts 15 years old and up.

Playtime at the ranch will include sports, hunting, fishing, horseback riding and sightseeing trips to many places of historical interest.

Training will include hiking with pack-train burros, wagon train treks; hiking with equipment necessary to be self-sustaining for a period of three days and nights in the mountains. On these trips all cooking will be done by the scouts, either individually or in groups of two to four.

They will study wildlife, woodcraft, special first aid measures, erection of outdoor shelters and other scouting essentials, officials said.

The scouts are under the supervision of paid professional scout workers or local volunteers. There are never more then seven scouts assigned to one supervisor, it was pointed out.

Arrangements for the trip at Fort Benning were made by Scoutmaster Duffield and Sgt. Bill Mauer, scout committee worker. They were assisted by the Columbus and LaGrange, Ga., scout executives.

Both the local scout officials expressed appreciation for the interest and cooperation shown by the parents of the boys.

Revision of Grade Title Is Ordered For August 1

A complete revision of grade titles for enlisted men, ordered by General Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff, in line with the army's growing career guidance program, has been announced by personnel officials.

The new titles, which will go into effect Aug. 1, abolish the distinction between "line" and "technician" grades, and reflect accurately the relative status of men up and down the enlisted rank structure.

The rejuggling of the grade structure for enlisted persons was necessitated in part by a new promotion system which places the newly-enlisted soldier in recruit status for the first four months of his service, with automatic advancement to the sixth pay grade assured on completion of basic training. Mandatory promotion to the fifth pay grade is also guaranteed upon completion of a stated period of satisfactory service, regardless of local unit vacancies.

In place of the present grade of private for the lowest enlisted pay bracket, the new program establishes the title "recruit." Privates as a rank will be assigned to the sixth pay grade which at present is known as private first class. Titles of technicians, fifth, fourth and third grade are abolished, as are those of technical and staff sergeants. The first pay grade will be that of master sergeant, eliminating first sergeant as a rank title but retaining it as an occupational designation.

Chaplains Conduct Various Activities

The work of an army chaplain means more than holding a church service or performing the ritual required by the individual religious belief.

Under the leadership of Infantry Center chaplain, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, Fort Benning chaplains have set as their goal a full religious service for all military personnel, assuming a vital interest in the religious, spiritual and moral welfare of each officer and enlisted man and their families, and helping them achieve the security, peace of mind and happiness that can only come to people who are religiously grounded.

The chaplains at Fort Benning work together as a team. Their chief responsibility is to better the spiritual life of men in their own unit. There is also an overall responsibility for the welfare of the entire Infantry Center, maintained on a cooperative basis under the supervision and coordination of the Infantry Center chaplain.

Varied and many are the activities conducted, supervised and sponsored by the chaplains. Aside from conducting the services at churches and Sunday school, they personally participate in activities at Brat Barracks, (Teen Age club), the service Men's Christian League, Senior Boy Scout troops, and other tained with special services, Red Cross and Army Emergency Relief, and with other special staff officers when their work complements that of the chaplain, especially the hospital surgeon, inspecting general and the judge advocate.

Doughs Eye State Semi-Pro Crown

Enter Semi-Finals Unbeaten In Two Tourney Encounters

Daring feats of base-running coupled with control lapses of opposing moundsmen gave the fort Benning Doughboys the foremost spot among contenders for the Georgia state semi-pro baseball title as play in the annual tournament at Thomaston swing into the semi-finals.

With seven games of the classic already played, the Doughboys had a two chalked up in the wins side of their record, and were the only undefeated squad remaining in the tourney.

As the annual semi-pro tournament drew to a close, the Fort Benning diamondmen were eyeing the prospects of representing Georgia in the national semi-pro meet, scheduled for the early part of September in Wichita, Kans.

Dough Victims

Victims of the Doughboy nine so far are the Dunson Millers of LaGrange and the host Thomaston club. On Friday night, the local squad pounded out a seven-inning 13-3 triumph over the LaGrange aggregation, and the Benningites broke a deadlock to score an 11-7 decision over the mill team from Thomaston on Monday night.

In their semi-finals tilt, the Doughs were slated to meet another LaGrange team representing the Dixie mills, and if victorious, will stage a tussle with one of their opening two game opponents for the title. The other semi-finals contest will match the Thomaston nine with the Dunson Millers.

Teams which already have been ousted by virtue of dropping two clashes are the Willingham Millers of Macon and a team flying the colors of Dundee mills.

Silcox Wins

In the game with the Dunson nine, ace right-hander Ike Silcox of the Doughboys had himself a shutout until the seventh and final inning when the LaGrange lumber swingers broke loose with a rally which netted them three runs.

However, the Dunson spree fell short since the fleet - footed Doughs had managed to score steadily throughout the game, and had compiled a 13 - run total by the time they took the field in the seventh.

The Benningites launched their scoring attack on the Dunson squad in the first inning when Paul Bonair drew a walk, and scored on a triple against the right-center field fence by Joe Smith. Bob Kinard's fly to deep center brought Smith home with the second run of the stanza.

Blanked Only Twice

After the Doughs had scored two more times in the second on an error by Dunson shortstop Ed Burnett, a passed ball by catcher Dan Ware, and a single by Bill Brooks, the local squad under went two scoreless frames, the only two of the game in which southpaw Pug Mullinax of the Millers was able to keep the Doughs from hitting and scoring.

To start off the fifth canto for the Benning team, Bonair singled to left, stole second, and scampered home on Smith's single to right-center. After Smith had been sacrificed to second, e romped home with the third run of the inning when Herb Lauve lashed a one-bagger to center.

Brooks drew a walk to start off the sixth for the Doughs, and went to second on Tom Gallagher's sacrifice. Pitcher Silcox then joined the hitting parade to belt a single to center scoring Brooks.

Ware Stars

To open the seventh and final frame, the Doughs tied in four safeties with a pair of Miller errors to score five times. Hitting safely for the Benning squad were Bonair. Kinard, Clyde (Woody) Burt and Lauve.

The Dunson team opened its scoring in the last half of the final frame when Jamie Singleton walked and scored on a two-base knock to left by Ray Chastine. A single by Joe Johnson, on which center-fielder Smith of the Doughs committed a one-base error, scored Chastine, and Johnson came in when pitcher Mullinax lined a single to center.

Leading the stick parade for the game was catcher Dan Ware of the Millers. In three appearances, the husky mask and mitt performer slammed out a triple, a double and a single. Bonair, Smith and Lauve each got two safeties to pace the Benning batting.

Thomaston Bows

In their game with the host Thomaston squad, the Doughs found the going a little rougher than with the Dunson nine, but capitalized on pitcher Houston Flowers' wild streak to score 11 times on eight bingles.

The Benning win came in the last of the seventh when the Doughs, assuming the role of home team, crossed the plate four times to conclude the games scoring.

Although his stint on the mound consisted of facing only four Thomaston batters, relief er Ray Stem was chalked up with the win, while starter Flowers of the Millers was charged with the loss. Starter Ken Watts of the Doughs, after yeilding only two safeties during the first six innings, was phased from the hill in the top of the seventh when the Dunson team staged a five-hit barrage to score a quintet of tallies.

After Stem, a huge right-hander, had come on to put the Thomaston squad out in the seventh, he went out in favor of Ike Silcox, who was credited with Friday night's triumph over the LaGrange team. The speedy right-hander finished out the game for the Doughs.

Thomaston's Flowers suffered one of his frequent wild streaks in the last of the stretch inning, and gave way to Don Whatley, who chucked the last two innings. The relief hurler, however, didn't figure in the ultimate decision since Flowers had put the potential winning run on base.

BIG BAT BOOMS . . . Big Joe Smith, who patrols the center gardens for the Doughboy diamond nine, was one of the hitting stars in the Benningites' 13-3 shellacking of the Dunson Millers from LaGrange in the Georgia State Semi-Pro tournament at Thomaston. In five strips to the plate in the initial tilt of the meet for the Doughs, Smith banged out a triple and o single to bat in two runs.

The practice of retiring uniform numbers of outstanding major league baseball players after they have been stricken from the national sport's active roster is getting to be more or less habit. However, we're inclined to agree with New York Giant officials that erstwhile Manager Mel Ott is as much deserving of the honor of having his duds packed in mothballs as are ex-New York Yankees Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

Ott's No. 4 is the second such number to be retired. The Yankee "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, also sported No. 4, while the king of swat put the No. 3 into retirement insofar as the Yankee ball club is concerned.

Maybe the reason the Giant officials decided to stow away master Mel's No. 4 is because of the many records he shattered in the National league. (During the last two years of his career as a player, practically every time Ott stepped up to the plate, he broke a record he himself had previously set.) However, a more likely thought is that they regarded his untiring devotion to the Giants as deserving of recognition.

Mel first joined the New York Nationals in 1926, and, in 22 years in the big-time circuit, never donned the uniform of another club. Since coming to the Giants, Ott has served the team in three active capacities, and now is holding down a front-office job. His first assignment was behind the plate, but skipper John McGraw foresaw a future in the outfield for young Ott, and promptly switched him to the outer gardens. When master Mel was named to succeed Bill Terry as pilot of the club, it didn't put an end to his outfield career; he played regularly until 1945, and saw some service as late as last year.

Some of the oustanding records compiled by Ott during his playing career include: most homeruns in a lifetime, 511; most runs scored 1,859; runs batted in, 1,860; total bases, 5,041; bases on balls, 1,708; extra-base hits, 1,071, and most extra bases on long hits, 2,165.

His lifetime batting average was .304, and he fielded at a .974 average.

From the way things are shaping up, it looks like the Columbus Cardinals are headed for a permanent claim to the Sally league cellar this year. It will be quite a tumble for the Redbirds, who last year were proudly perched atop the loop roster.

A pretty good indication that the officials of the Columbus club underestimated the abilities of some of their in-and-out players this season is the fact that only one present Columbus player, Pitcher Ross Grimsley, is being considered for prepping by the parent St. Louis Cards.

However, several of the players released by the Columbus Cards to clubs in the deep minors are being labeled as "Cardinals of the future." Among them are catcher Dave Abramson, now with the Allentown, Pa., organization; third baseman Dick Loeser, who was demoted to the Albany, Ga., squad; Franny Haus, former Columbus utility second-sacker now performing for Allentown; and outfielders Charley Frey, now with Lynchburg, Va., and Sid Langston, presently with St. Joseph, Mo.

Of course, to pin all of the blame on the Columbus club officials for not having any diamondmen being strongly considered for the St. Louis fold would be an injustice since the policy of player-swapping is partly dictated by the parent club. Nevertheless, from where we stand, it looks like the Columbus Redbird organization has gotten rid of several scrappy youngsters, who might have helped the club win a first-division berth, where such action could have been avoided.

Old Satchel Paige waited quite a while for his chance to invade organized baseball, but he couldn't have asked for a more theatrical setting than the one provided him when he shuffled to the mound in Cleveland stadium before 34,780 spectators on the night of July 9.

In his debut, the ageless Alabaman put on quite a show for Tribe followers. He came into the game at the start of the fifth inning, succeeding Bob Lemon, who had made way for a pinch-hitter. Sometimes he wound his arm in six revolutions, sometimes only in two. He threw overhand, sidearm and underhand. He threw a blooper, and he threw his "hesitation" pitch, an amazing delivery on which he practically completes his follow-through before releasing the ball. Manager Zack of Taylor of the Browns protested when he saw that one, but Umpire McGowan assured him that the delivery is perfectly legal.

Old Satchmo gave an even better performance on the night of July 14 when he pitched two brilliant innings of relief against the Brooklyn Dodgers in an exhibition game that drew an attendance of 84,987 in Cleveland stadium.

Area Netmen Take Honors In West Point

The Third army net squad, piloted by Sanford H. Webster of Fort Benning, copped team honors in the recent all-army court meet at West Point, N. Y., by edging the Sixth army delegation 12-11.

Webster, who also was the No. 1 singles player on the area team as well as holder of the Third army singles title, advanced as far as the finals of the all-army classic, but was beaten in straight sets of 6-0, 6-0 and 6-3 for the championship by Frank Mehner, a representative of the European command.

Following his finals triumph over the Fort Benning courtmaster, Mehner probably will be chosen to act as skipper of the Leech Cup team to compete in the forthcoming inter-service matches in Arlington, Va.

In the doubles phase of the all-army tournament, the all Benning team of Webster and Charles Daniel copped the laurels for the Third army by dumping a Sixth army duet in straight sets.

Both Webster and Daniel were selected to play for the army in the Leech Cup matches. No reports, however, have been received as to the outcome of the matches involving other members of the Third army quintet, Edwin Y. Arnold of Fort Bragg, N. C.; Robert A. Reade Jr., of Fort McPherson, Ga., and William M. Kunkel of Oliver General Hospital, Augusta, Ga.

The courtmen to represent the army area in the all-army classics were chosen following a recent tournament on the courts of the Fort Benning Officers' club, which resulted in a one-sided triumph for the host squad.

After Webster had captured the singles crown here, he teamed with Daniel to sweep the honors or Benning by winning the doubles event.

Should Webster and Daniel get past the competition in the inter-service sets, there is a possibility that they will be given a chance at Olympic game competition.

FORMER POST ATHLETES IN OLYMPIC PENTATHLON

Three former Fort Benning athletes, Lt. Col. Fritz Weber, Lt. Dick Gruenther and Lt. Hale Baugh, are on the United States delegation to the Olympic games which opened today at huge Wimbley stadium in London, England.

The trio will represent the army in the modern pentathlon, a recently - revived Olympic event which includes distance running, 3,000-meter swimming, 5,000-timber topping, epee or dueling sword bouts and pistol duel shooting.

Although Weber chalked up frequent local successes as a competitive pistol shooter and in cross-country jumping while a member of Fort Benning's airborne training units, he is best remembered for his triumph in the epee fencing competition in the Berlin Olympic games of 1936.

Baugh, who passed a remarkable physical efficiency test here with a score of 495, has been said to be developing into a brilliant swordsman.

Since completing jump training here in 1947, both Gruenther and Baugh have been going through intensive training for the five-event Olympic sport. In order to prepare themselves for the pentathlon, the two ex-Benningites have undergone training at West Point; Stockholm, Sweden; New York and Berne, Switzerland.

Other members of the army's modern pentathlon team are Maj. Georges B. Moore and the alternate Capt. John Donaldson. Weber is listed as a non-competitive captain-manager of the team.

Competition in the four-day classic is slated to open today at the Aldershot Cavalry area near London, and an international field of approximately 50 contestants are expected to compete in the sport. The Swedes and Hungarians have been cited as the strongest threats in the pentathlon events.

United States representatives in the five-event game are hoping that they can again repeat the success they had in the classic in the Berlin games of 1936 by winning three high places. The late General George S. Patton, Jr., also won the pentathlon event for the U. S. Stockholm in 1912.

Third Army Linksmen Start Bid For Laurel

Benning Places Sixteen Entries In Annual Event

Sixteen of Fort Benning's top-notch strokemasters are entered in the annual Third army links tournament, play which got under way with qualifying rounds at Oliver General hospital Monday.

Following the qualifying rounds, aspirants to the Third army title were placed in flights with the lowest 32 qualifiers to be assigned to the top division. After first-round matches have been played, the 16 winners will enter championship-flight competition, and their victims will go into the first flight.

Finals matches for all flights are expected to be contested Friday.

Heading the Fort Benning delegation to the meet is Matt C. C. Bristol, who carded a 298, the lowest score from a field of approximately 40 post hopefuls, during recent playoff rounds on the local Officers' club course. To join forces with Bristol and form Benning's four-man team are post officer champ Devert Moore, William Wikoff and James Hungate.

Benning's individual golfers who are entered in the scramble for Third army laurels are Robert Rosa, Charles Davis, Paul Markland, Phillip S. Grant, John Henion, Emil P. Eschenburg, Claude English and Guy A. Hallenbeck. The post's senior flight team consists of Fay Roso, Daniel P. Buckland, Logan Boyd and Wayne Archer.

Linksmen getting past the competition in the Third army tourney will be given the honor of representing the army area in the forthcoming all-army matches at Fort Lewis, Wash. From there successful club wielders will get a crack at the Forrestal cup, to be at stake in the inter-service meet at Pebble Beach, Calif., later this year.

The trophy will be presented to the service placing the winning 12-man team in competition, and will be retained by the service until captured by another service is a subsequent tourney. Scheduled to place team entries in the tournament are the army, navy, and air force.

BULLETIN

Fort Bragg took an initial lead in the annual Third Army golf tournament at Oliver General hospital in Augusta Tuesday when Lt. Col. Robert C. Hunter and Lt. Col. Lynn Fargo each fired three-over-par 75's to tie for medalist honors. An aggregate of 311 gave the four-man Fort Bragg team a commanding lead at the half-way mark of a 36-hole qualifying round.

One stroke off the pace was T-Sgt. Clyde Boyd of the Atlanta Military district.

Fort Benning's best efforts in the qualifying rounds were chalked up by Maj. James Hungate and Lt. John Henion, who tied for third place in medalist play with 78 strokes each.

Volleyballers Prolong Game-Winning Streak

A week-long layoff due to range firing had no ill effects on the undefeated volleyball team of Company G of the 25th Infantry regiment.

On Thursday afternoon, the Company G lads scored a convincing 2-0 victory over the Company H. squad, and extended their winning streak to six on Friday afternoon when they took a forfeiture from Company E.

Augusta Layout In Prime Shape For Contestants

BY WILLIS IRVIN

Over 105 entries have been received for the Third army golf tournament being played at Oliver General hospital this week.

Qualifying rounds for the tourney will be played Monday with match play beginning Tuesday. The finals are slated for Friday.

The tourney will be played on a team - score basis as well as individual scores.

For two weeks, the hospital course, under the supervision of professional Mickey Gallagher, has been having its face lifted, and is in top shape for the tourney. Not since the days when millionaires paid $30 per day to register at the famous Forest Hills hotel (now Oliver General hospital), has the course been in such perfect condition.

The narrow fairways of the course should prove difficult for the tournament golfers. Designed by the late Donald J. Ross, noted links architect, the course is considered to be one of the most difficult layouts in the country, the 15th and 18th holes usually prove to be the hardest to play, while hole No. 7, often called the "giant killer", although only 185 yards long, is not often parred, even by championship linksmen.

Since little is known about the calibre of the players entering the meet, practically no pre-tourney predictions are being made.

Military installations sending teams and individual players to the tournament are Oliver General hospital, Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort Benning, Ga., Fort McPherson, Ga.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; Camp Gordon, Ga., Charlotte, N. C., Quartermaster depot; South Carolina Military sub-district, Columbia, S. C.; Birmingham, Ala., Military sub-district, and Headquarters, Georgia Military district, Atlanta.

Hitting, Fielding Phases Led By Champion Nine

Running true to form, the Infantry School detachment Profs, winners of the Fort Benning intra-mural baseball title for 1948, led the parade in both the hitting and fielding departments.

The powerful Profs batted through their 1948 schedule with a plate average of .346, and reached the .945 mark in their fielding endeavors.

In addition to their average the Profs led the 10-team circuit in runs, hits, three-base hits, homeruns and runs batted in. The only offensive phases yielded by the Profs to other squads were two-base blows, honors in which went to the second-place Airborne battalion troopers with 30, and stolen-base laurels, which went to the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers with 76.

To notch fielding honors, the ISD nine committed only 28 errors in handling 508 chances.

At the bottom of the roster in hitting wes the 999th Field Artillery battalion, which could muster only a .197 average. Occupying the cellar in the fielding phase was the Seventh Regimental combat team, which handled the ball at an anemic .783 clip.

Husky Stan Letonsky, leading batter at the close of the first half of circuit play, still held the hitting limelight at the time the curtain came down on the 1948 campaign. The towering first-sacker for the 328th Ordnance battalion ranked second in individual plate averages with a healthy .443, led in hits with 35, paced the two-bagger parade with 13, and drove in 28 runs to take top honors in that department.

The highest average of the season, however, was compiled by catcher Chick Shiver of the Infantry School detachment, who hit safely in 18 of his 37 appearances at the plate for a .486 average. The erstwhile Prof receiver saw service in only 11 games this year.

Chief run-getter of the post wes first-baseman Herb Lauve of the ISD Prof completed the circuit 34 times. Inscond-place was another Prof, third-baseman Joe Smith, who touched all four sacks on 29 occasions.

Next to Letonsky in the number of hits registered was Bill Brooks, Prof outfielder, who chalked up 30 bingles for the season.

Chunky Bill Church, former Student Training regiment catcher, trailed the Ordance first-baseman in the two-base hit department by whacking out eight during his intramural stint.

An unusual feature of the post league champain was that a pitcher, hefty John Graves of the post Medic, led the loop in three-base knocks. The fabulous right-hander, in addition to slamming out five triples, placed fourth on the hitting roster with a seasonal average of .414.

Bullet Spree Nets Four Recent Wins

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Refusing to succumb to defeat the high-flying Bulletmen ran triumphantly over four opposing nines during last week's diamond competition.

Playing a superior brand of ball all the way, the Bullets have now run their winning streak to six games played against all opponents, and seven straight in league competition. The Sand Hill diamond men have yet to taste defeat in the current 325th Infantry regiment's baseball league.

Ageless Amos (Cuz) Snowden, working on the mound for the Bullets in Monday's encounter with the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment, gave up only three weakly-hit singles as the Bullets copped a 5-1 decision from the opposition.

After yielding a single in the top half of the initial frame, Snowden came on strong, holding the losers hitless and scoreless until the sixth inning when Camp and Weaver banged out successive one-baggers to account for the visitors' lone tally.

Putting over three runs in the first on a walk to Coles, a double to right by Burke, a single by Coleman and a towering triple to the scoreboard by big Gene Thomas, the rampaging Bullet men pushed across two more runs in the fourth to strenghthen their lead. Thomas and Coleman topped the stickmen with two hits each.

In another Bullet field tilt Tuesday night, Murray D. Whiting turned in a sensational three hit performance against the Columbus Crusaders to give the Bullets an 8-3 victory over the city club.

Striking out seven batters during his five-inning tour of duty on the hill, Whiting, who recently donned a Bullet uniform, made his debut with the Sand Hill club nothing short of superb.

A free-scoring outburst in the first frame netted the Bullets a comfortable 6-0 lead. Hirron Collier, who performed flawlessly at the initial sack, topped the field at bat with two hits in four trips to the plate.

Horace Smith, who came on for Whiting in the sixth, let the Columbusites down with one hit for the rest of the way.

On Bullet field Thursday afternoon, the hard-driving Bulletmen had to come up from behind to eke out a close 7-6 decision over the 756th Tank battalion.

When the Tankers went ahead 5-1 in the first inning, starting hurler Dean was yanked in favor of Snowden. The gangling right-hander was nicked for two hits before he got started good, but after that, he served up no-hit ball until the sixth and seventh frames, in which he was tagged for one blow each.

After Miller had homered for the Tankers in the seventh, Lefty Conerly took over mound chores for the Bullets, and spoiled the Tank nine's hopes of victory by striking out the next two batters.

Burke Hardy and Collier came through with two hits each for the Bullets.

On Friday afternoon, the traditional rivalry flared up between the 25th Infantry lads and the 999th Field artillery squad, but when the dust of Bullet field had settled, the Bullets were in possession of a 1-0 margin.

Highlighting the game was a pitching duel between Conerly of the Bullets, and Alva Ellis and John McClinic of the artillerymen. Despite the fact that the artillery nine had to resort to the use of two hurlers, neither of the two teams could do better than garner one hit. Hitting safely for the Bullets was Hirron Collier, while Arthur Houston maced safely for the 999th team.

Three Lawson Golfers Enter Southern Meet

Three Lawson field golfers will represent the local air force base in the annual Southern air force tournament, slated for Aug. 8 on the course at Maxwell field, Ala.

Lawson competitors will be Gene Yow, John Burniston and Gilbert T. Collar.

Yow is expected to rank as one of the top favorites in the meet since he captured the enlisted golfing championship of Fort Benning earlier this year. His status with the air force, however, made him eligible to represent Benning in the Third army tournament. Burniston was third-flight winner in the same tourney.

The route to the inter-service matches to be taken by Lawson field personnel will differ from that to be taken by Fort Benning golfers in that the Lawson linksmen will have to get past the Southern and National Air force meets, while the Benning golfers must establish wins in the Third army and all-army matches.

Bullets Advance Winning Streak

By BOB PHILLIPS

Coming from behind to take a convincing 12-8 decision from the 319th Field Artillery battalion, and winning another game by forfeit from the special units nine, the seemingly unbeatable Bullets extended their winning streak to four straight in the current 325th Infantry regiment baseball league last week.

In a Bullet field game last Monday, the host squad initiated a rally in the fifth inning which netted five runs, and erased an 8-7 deficit. The Bullets then went on to win the game 12-8.

The artillerymen had gone ahead in the first frame 3-1 as Watson, Don McCullum and Daniels crossed the plate for the visitors, while Bob Coles was the only Bullet to come home.

Although the Bullets outscored the field artillery squad 3-2 in the second, the visitors still held a one-run lead. After yielding three runs on two hits in the third inning, starting hurler Larry Miles of the Bullets was lifted in favor of southpaw Willie Conerly.

Thereafter, the hard-throwing portsider allowed only three hits struck out six, and held the artillerymen scoreless the rest of the game.

The highlight of the game came in the fourth stanza when diminutive shortstop Hank Bond of the 319th made a spectacular catch to rob Andy Hardy of the Bullets of a hit which might have gone for extra bases.

Jack Lemelle and Coles led the hitting parade for the Bullets with three and two hits, respectively, while Henry Tillery, who collected three for three including a double, starred for the losers.

Tillery and McCullum teamed on the hill for the 319th to allow the Bullets eight safeties.

The next Bullet triumph came via the forfeit route on Friday when the special units nine failed to appear for a tussle slated for 2 p.m. on Bullet field.

Letters From Ex-GI's Result In Willys-Overland's Jeepster

The story behind the Jeepster, Willys-Overland's new "sun car built for fun," is the story of thousands of letters written to the company during the past two years by former G. I's, suggesting how the Jeep could be adapted to passenger car use.

According to Jack Briscoe, of Jack - Briscoe, Inc., the "fan mail" was terrific. With the conversion of war to peace, he said, Willys-Overland improved the Jeep so that it could take its place as a tractor in agriculdustry. These improvements inture and as a work car in included a stronger clutch, different gear ratio, and softer seats, with the outward appearance remaining essentially the same.

"One of the phenomena of the Jeep during the war," Mr. Briscoe said, "was the number of men and women as to how they could individually improve the car."

"The majority of the letters," Mr. Briscoe stated, "reached a pattern descriptive of what Willys-Overland actually produced in the car—a combination passenger Jeep and convertible, an open sports car within the price reach of a majority of buyers."

"In the evolution of the Jeep from a military vehicle to the sporty passenger Jeepster, some noteworthy changes have taken place. Wheelbase has been lengthened 30 per cent, center of gravity has been lowered, and springing and weight distribution has been altered to assure traditional passenger car riding comfort," Briscoe declared.

"Convertibles and station wagons have always cost more than the average sedan because of the extra work involved in their construction. When we introduced our Jeep station wagon in 1946 as the main passenger vehicle in our line, we found that people were more anxious to buy a vehicle of this type, provided the price was right. For example, in 1941, only 33,000 station wagons. In the entire auto industry built 1947, the industry produced 76,516, of which Willys-Overland built 33,265 or 41 per cent.

"What we did with the Jeep station wagon," Mr. Briscoe concluded, "we expect to do with the Jeepster. It will be a main production unit, with our schedule calling for 15,000 of them by the end of 1948, and we believe that it will quickly become one of the most popular of sports cars."

bagger hitting were three players, two of which were pitchers. Tied with four triples each were Ken Watts of the Airborne battalion Troopers, Larry Hall of the 3440th Army Service unit and initial-sacker Lauve of the Profs.

Leading the league in home-runs was big Erskine Ware, ex-first-baseman of the 999th Field Artillery battalion, who clouted three boundary belts during his half-season performance in the circuit. Although topping the list in homeruns, Ware was far down the batting roster with a scant 235 average for six games.

Eight players shared second place in the round-tripper department with two each. They were Shiver of the Profs, Edgar Powe of the 999th, Letonsky, Brooks, Harold (Blondy) Burnett of the ISD nine, Max Seirer of the Lawson field Flyers, Harold Brown of the STR, and Herb O'Brien of the 204th Truckers.

Top performers in base-thievery were Bob Chandler of the Truckers, who swiped 16 sacks, and Otto Loroesh of the Medics and Fred Davis of the STR, who copped 15 each.

Willie: "That's one of them triangles where somebody gets shot."

Guard: "This man was lurking near my post."

Sarge (frowning): "Hmm. What was he lurkin at?"

"What's that soldier doing over there near the highway?"

"He's reconnoitering."

"Well, tell him to go further into the woods."

Captain Settles served with the 29th Infantry regiment and the 501st and 502nd Parachute battalions prior to his call to active duty as a reserve second lieutenant in the air force. He was on duty with the Ninth air force during his tour of duty overseas.

The new regular captain was separated from the service on Jan. 15, 1947, as a lieutenant colonel, and reenlisted immediately for duty with the 37th Infantry regiment here as sergeant major. The 325th was formerly the 37th.

SIXTY EM COMPLETE TIS NON COM COURSE

The 60-odd members of the regular army, National Guard and Enlisted Reserve corps who completed the Infantry School's NCO class No. 4 last Saturday have returned to their homebases after learning the latest infantry methods and techniques during the 19-week course.

Students from units all over the country and foreign islands, including representatives from Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Haiti, were enrolled in the class which completed its schedule last Saturday.

Four Puerto Rican first sergeants were among the top students in the class of 60. First Sgts. Jose A. Collazo, Azer Hara, Hector Merly and Ceasar Peralta, all from Headquarters, Puerto Rico military district, finished with top honors.

Sergeant Collazo, a veteran of 12 years in the army, served overseas three years with the 2920th Engineer company in the Pacific. He is a native of Lares, Puerto Rico.

A native of Caguas, Puerto Rico, Sergeant Hara entered the service in February, 1940, at Henry Barracks. He was on duty with the Antilles department during the War.

Entering the service in December, 1943, at Fort Buchanan, Sgt. Merly saw service with Company K of the 295th Infantry of the Puerto Rican department for 24 months. He is from Aibonito.

Stationed at Fort Brook, San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sergeant Peralta is a veteran of 42 months overseas. After entering the service shortly before the war, he was assigned to the 65th Infantry regiment with which he saw combat in Africa, Italy, France and Germany.

Education Center Ends Registration

A total of 715 students were enrolled at the Army Education Center at the close of registration last Thursday night, it was announced this week by Lt. John E. Cunningham, Infantry Center education officer.

At the same time Lieutenant Cunningham also announced that 106 of an original enrollment of 821 had been forced to drop courses because of transfers. They were all members of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team which is scheduled to leave next month for their new station at Fort Devens, Mass.

Officials said that the education center, a night school operated on a voluntary basis, has finally been stabilized, with a more compact curriculum.

Enrollment in college courses is extremely satisfactory, according to Lieutenant Cunningham. He also said that the students presently enrolled are showing more interest than those in any previous quarter.

Hotel Clerk: "Did you call that soldier in 105 at 7 o'clock?"

Maid: "I do now."

Walker To Head Army In Japan

Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, wartime commander of the XX corps and commanding general of the Fifth army with headquarters at Chicago since June, 1946, will succeed Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger as commanding general of the Eighth army in Japan, the Department of the Army announced today. A successor to General Walker has not yet been selected.

General Eichelberger will return to the United States for retirement, with Geneal Walker scheduled to leave for Japan early in September.

General Eichelberger has commanded the Eighth army since September, 1944, leading it through the final phases of the New Guinea campaigns, during the Philippines operations, and throughout the occupation of Japan. He reported for duty with General of the Army Douglas MacArthur in Australia in August, 1942, and was assigned to command the I corps, army which he led throgh the New Guinea campaigns until he assumed command of the Eighth army.

General Walker was given command of the Third Armored division at Camp Polk, Louisiana, in February, 1942, and six months later became commanding general of the IV Armored corps at Camp Young, California. He moved to Camp Campbell, Kentucky, in the same capacity, in April, 1943. In September, 1944, he was announced as commanding general of the XX corps, Third army in France.

The war in Europe over, he was named commanding general of the Eighth Sevice command, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas, in May 1945. From the Eighth Service command General Walker went to the Sixth Service command in May, 1946.

BENNING'S NEW UNIT HANGS OUT SIGN . . . The 504th Parachute Infantry regiment's Company I, which arrived here June 18, became a part of Fort Benning in a big way when they put up a freshly painted sign at their headquarters in the Airborne battalion area.

Nation-Wide Contest Set For Picking Army Song

In the Revolution it was "Yankee Doodle"; soldiers of the Civil war sang "Dixie" and "John Brown's Body"; they had a "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" during the war with Spain, and it was "Over There" and "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning" during World War I. But song writers weren't turning them out for World War II, and the big GI hit was a "captured" Kraut number called "Lili Marlene".

Some of the branches have had their own favorite songs, though. Every artilleryman knows the "Caissons", and the Air Force is "Off We Go in the Wild Blue Yonder," but the army is still looking, as it has been for the last 1 73 years, for an army-wide song of its own, something for all the branches to sing. So the army has started a contest.

In order to discover a song worthy of becoming an over-all army song as differentiated from songs of the various arms or services, such as infantry or artillery, a nationwide contest will be conducted under the auspices of the chief of special services, Department of the Army. The contest is open to all soldiers and also to civilians.

Winners will be selected by a group of prominent judges, and will be announced on Army Day next year. The first five winning songs will be published in the hope that an official army song may be selected and announced on Army Day, 1950. The winning songs will be played on army radio shows and recorded on discs for army HitKits.

Entries for the song contest will be screened at each army headquarters by a committee appointed by the commanding general of each army. The chief of special services will provide prizes for the winners. The final date for the army-wide contest is Dec. 15, 1948, but termination dates in each army will be sooner so that the songs may be screened prior to being sent to the music section of special services.

Following are rules that have been set up to govern the contest.

1. All United States military personnel and civilians are eligible.

2. Each entrant will fill out DA AGO form R-8564 (Entry Blank, Army Song Contest) and forward it with the song to the Chief of Special Services, Washington, 25, D. C. Local reproduction on 8-by 5 1-4 inch paper is authorized. Each reproduced copy will contain number, title and date (Entry blanks at Fort Benning will be available at the Infantry center special services office.)

3. No more than one entry may be submitted by any one participant. A song written by more than one individual will be considered as a single entry.

4. Composers and authors of all winning entries will grant to the government of the United States, as represented by the Secretary of the Army, a non-exclusive royalty-free license to the unlimited performing playing, recording, publishing and motion picture rights of their entries.

5. No liability or responsibility is assumed by the army for any infringement of copyright and or any suit whatsoever involving any entry submitted in the contest.

6. No liability or responsibility is assumed by the army for any loss or damage to any entry submitted. Entries received by the chief of special services will not be returned.

7. Entries submitted will be original in title, words and music and of approximately standard length. The music will be of military character, written in a rhythm and range which can be easily used for marching and singing, and will include a piano part (treble and bass clef). Lead sheets will be accepted only if complete with chords.

8. Songs will be judged on the basis of originality, melodic and rhythmic appeal, fitness of words and over-all suitability of the song for general army use.

Guard Strength Shows Increase

The strength of the National Guard of the United States reached 319,663 officers and enlisted men, as reports from the adjutants general of the several states showed a net gain of 66,422 men during the two-week period ending June 30, 1948, Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau, announced today.

"The National Guard has made the remarkable record of increasing its strength by 222,848 men during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1948, and its strength today is greatly in excess of 300,034 who were inducted into federal service through the National Guard prior to World War II," General Cramer said.

The stength of the National Guard on June 30, 1947, was 96,815 men.

"Despite the great impetus in enlistments as a result of the enactment of the Selective Service Act of 1948, there is still an opportunity for men to join the National Guard," General Cramer said.

Congressional appropriations for the fiscal year 1949 are sufficient for the growth to a strength of 341,000 men by June 30, 1949, of which 300,000 are authorized for army units and 41,000 for air units. On June 30, 1948, there were 290,383 officers and enlisted men in army units, and 29,300 officers and men in air units.

"This allows a balance of some 20,000 men who can still be enlisted in the National Guard," General Cramer said. "In addition to which other vacancies will occur as the result of normal attrition resulting from transfers in residence enlistment in the regular services, and other reasons."

General Cramer specifically called this opportunity to the attention of those men who have not reached the age of 18 years and six months, and to those veterans who served at least 90 days but less than 12 months in the armed forces prior to Pearl Harbor and subsequent to V-J day. Men in these two groups may fulfill their obligation of service by enlisting in the National Guard rather than serving in the regular forces unde the povisions of the Selective Service Act.

New York increased its strength by nearly 10,000 men during the two-week period ending June 30, 1948 and leads all of the states in strength with a total of 25,381 men. Seven other states have a strength exceeding 10,000 men.

The Cavalry sergeant reported to the infirmary with three gashed fingers.

"It was like this, Doc. I put my hand in this mule's mouth to see how many teeth he had. Then he closed his mouth to see how many fingers I had."

Brearley Touring Food Installations At Infantry Center

Maj. Joseph W. Brearley, Office of the Quartermaster general, arrived here last Monday for the purpose of conducting an eight-day inspection tour of food service activities.

Installations being visited are the Food Service School, ration breakdown and the various unit messes. The food service program is being studied from stages of quartermaster procurement to final consumption, officials said.

Accompanying Major Brearley during the tour is Lt. Col. William J. B. Cline, Third army food service supervisor.

WASH-DAY AID . . . Clothes washed while you wait is the way it's done now at the new automatic laundry recently opened here. Edmond B. McInstry, manager of the concession, puts a family wash through its 40-minute process.

AUTOMATIC LAUNDRY INSTALLED ON POST

A never-ceasing effort to provide military personnel of Fort Benning and their dependents with the best and most modern type of services has resulted in the establishment of an automatic laundry here.

Located just behind the Howard bus station, near the post exchange grocery, the new concession of the Fort Benning exchange opened its doors last week, operating from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The automatic laundry goes the others one better—clothes may be left for washing and called for later. Customers bring in their wash, proceed with their shopping or other errands, and trained personnel do the work. Under the managership of Edmond B. McInstry, a former army major, the clothes are carefully weighed and sorted, and each customer's wash is processed individually to insure sanitation.

The 20 automatic machines complete the cycle of washing to triple rinsing in about 40 minutes. A commercial dryer with a 30-pound capacity will be added and ready for operation within the next month, it was announced.

Manager McInstry at one time was an instructor at the Infantry School. A one-time school teacher in his native Nashville, Tenn., Mr. McInstry served with the 32nd (red Arrow) division in the Pacific during the war.

The group includes Capt. John A. Meads, Jr., Capt. Jack L. Smith and Capt. George A. Murray Jr. They left Manila aboard the army transport, General Brewster, on June 28.

Captain Meads, prior to his assignment here, had been on duty with the special services section of the Phillippine-Ryukyus command's headquarters in Manila for 21 months. Captain Smith had been assigned to the 45th Infantry regiment's First battalion at Nichols field, located a few miles outside Manila, and Captain Murray had served with the U. S. Military Advisory group to the Philippines in Manila.

Former Jap Prisoner Tells War Experiences

Bayoneted when he broke ranks to get a drink of water at a passing stream during the infamous "Bataan Death March" and starved until he became a mere skeleton of 75 pounds while a prisoner of the Japanese, Sgt. Vance H. Horn of Company B, Infantry School detachment, has come a long way in his recuperating battle.

It's been almost three years since he was liberated, but the memory of the horrid and brutal experience of those trying days is just as vivid to Sergeant Horn as if it happened yesterday.

Taken prisoner by the Japs on Bataan in April, 1942, Sergeant Horn, during the ensuing months, survived the savagery of the fanatical Japanese soldiers which has now become legend.

Following their capture, the Americans started their brutal "Bataan" march, which lasted for days, without food or water. In a desperate attempt to quench his driving thirst, Sergeant Horn tore out of the marching file, and broke for a little stream for a drink of water. As he did so, he was halted with a thrust of a Japanese bayonet, adding more misery to the wounds he had received previously in the defense of Bataan.

Immediately after his capture, the Japs wasted no time in making use of Horn and his comrades. They constructed and repaired damaged airfields all over the Philippine islands, built gun emplacements, and worked in the rice paddies. The living conditions during this time bordered on the barbaric, Sergeant Horn said.

Later he was transferred to Omori prison in Tokyo. A total of 1,030 Americans were crowded into a small hold of a cattle boat, the Moto Maru, during the trip to Japan.

Unwillingly he was forced to aid in the fight against his country by being put to work in steel mills, tin plate mills, electrical carbon furnaces and many other installations. Treatment at Omori prison for a while was improved, but gradually it began to get worse, according to Sergeant Horn. "Of course, the damage coming" on Nov. 1, 1945, was a wrought by the B-29s had a lot to do with it," he remarked.

In May, 1945, the Talladega, Ala., soldier was sent to northern Honshu province to the city of Wakesenin, about 100 miles from the seaport city of Sendai. He stayed there until the end of the war, forced day and night to work in various mills scattered throughout Japan.

Sept. 16, 1945, will live forever in the memory of the local infantryman. It was on this day that he and the rest of his comrades freed themselves.

Before he was captured, Horn weighed about 160 pounds. The day he was liberated he hit the scales at a mere 75 pounds.

Along with the hundreds of other Americans, Horn boarded an American hospital ship at Lindai harbor, sailed to Yokohama, and then home. Upon his arrival he was sent to Oliver General hospital at Augusta, Ga., where he spent three months. His "homecoming" was truly happy one, being the first time he had seen his family in eight years.

The Infantry School detachment member, who arrived from Fort Jackson, S. C., three months ago, when asked how he felt when he was liberated exclaimed, "One can't even begin to explain in words the emotions of such a feeling It's just like being dead for a long time, and then coming back to life."

Roush Is Assigned Lawson S-4 Post

Maj. Raymond O. Roush reported to Lawson Air Force base for duty last week, and has been named S-4, replacing Maj. Byron E. Trent who has departed for the Command and Staff College, it has been announced.

The major was previously stationed with the 315th Troop Carrier group at Bergstrom AFB, Texas.

A veteran airman with 21 months in the ETO during the war, he wears the Air medal with one cluster, the Purple Heart and the Army Commendation ribbon.

He is a native of Biglake, Texas, but at present calls Hobbs, New Mexico, his home. Before entering service he attended the Uni-

Pacific Veteran Takes Command Of Artillery Unit

Lt. Col. Todd H. Slade, formerly assigned to the G-2 section of General headquarters, Far East command in Tokyo, has been named commanding officer of the 999th Field Artillery battalion, it was announced this week.

Colonel Slade replaces Maj. Carey A. Clark, who has been transferred to the Armored school at Fort Knox, Ky.

The new head of the Sand Hill unit arrived here from Fort Sill, Okla., where he completed a 13-week refresher course at the Artillery School.

A Spanish language instructor at the United States Military academy during the war, Colonel Slade also assisted in coaching the West Point track and field squad. Immediately after his return from overseas, he was transferred to the academy where he helped train the modern Pentathlon squad which is now in London to compete in the 1948 Olympic games.

A graduate of West Point with the class of 1932, Colonel Slade received his first assignment with the Field artillery school at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., before going to Schofield Barracks Hawaii where he served until 1937 with the 13th Field Artillery.

Following his graduation from the Field artillery schoo at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1938 he was assigned to the 61st Field Artillery at Fort Hoyle Md. Duty with the 21st Field Artillery of the Fifth infantry division and the First Armored division at Fort Knox, Ky., preceded his assignment to the University of Mexico in 1941, where he attended language school in preparation for instructing at West Point.

During his language study at the university, he was attached to the military attache's office in Mexico City for duty. He returned to West Point in 1942.

Center Preparing For 18-Year-Olds

Provisional Battalion Set Up To Provide Basic Training

In anticipation of the arrival of several hundred 18-year-old youths who have enlisted for one year's Army service, the Infantry Center has set up a provisional training battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, to provide up to 1,600 men an eight-week basic training course.

According to Infantry Center officials, not more than this number will be training at any one time. The program has been divided into two cycles for each eight-week training period, with 800 young men scheduled for each session.

Original expectations were that the first group of the one year enlistees would arrive last week end. Now, no definite date has been scheduled for their arrival, but it is believed that the first will be here within a few weeks. In the meantime, a better than 150-man cadre of enlisted men from the 305th Infantry regiment has been organized, and nearly 30 officers have been assigned for the staff and command of the training battalion.

Because of the arrival last weekend of the 31st Infantry division for a two weeks' training course, it was decided that the recruits would be quartered at Sand Hill until the division leaves on Aug. 15, when the permanent battalion area would be moved to Harmony Church. Once the program gets under way, groups of 800 are expected to arrive every four weeks.

Named as battalion executive officer is Maj. Sam Carter. Other battalion staff officers include: 1st. Lt. Frank E. Marconi, S-1; 1st. Lt. Jack H. Johnson, assistant S-1; Capt. William E. Waltz, S-3; Capt. John H. Hoye, assistant S-3; 1st John S. Howland, assistant S-3.

Capt. Robert L. Vogt, S-4; 1st Lt. George E. Hardgrove, assistant S-4; 1st. Lt. David T. Simmons, assistant S-4; Capt. Rufus L. Salter, special services officer; Chaplain (Capt.) Roy L. Akins, and Capt. Frank Monroe, troop information and education officer.

Capt Norman C. McArdell is commander of Training company 1, with 1st Lt. George H. Craft as executive officer and 1st Lts. Harry C. Hammer and Alfred T. McCay as other company officers.

The Fourth Training company is headed by Capt. Francis D. Linse with his executive officer 1st. Lt. Donald E. Gross and assisted by 1st. Lts. Robert V. Rideneur and Daniel C. Williams.

Each company also has an enlisted cadre from the 325th of 34 specially picked and trained cadre. This regiment also was the source of the enlisted personnel who will be on duty at battalion headquarters.

Legion Is Open To Guardsmen

Officials of the American Legion's Charles S. Harrison post in Columbus announced this week that the facilities of the post are open to all members of the national guard now in summer training here.

It is not necessary to be a Legionaire in order to visit the club rooms, authorities pointed out.

The post, located at 1400 Third-avenue, maintains a lounge and game room in the club building. The lounge is open from 3 p.m. until midnight, and guardsmen are invited to bring their wives or girl friends.

Airborne Company F In 3rd Training Week

Company F of the Airborne battalion is now in its third week of training here, it was reported today.

Last Wednesday, July 28, the students took part in an airborne demonstration for the ROTC cadets, who ended their summer camp here last Saturday.

OVER 530 STUDENTS COMPLETE TRAINING

More than 530 Reserve Officer Training corps cadets, representing 20 colleges and universities in the southeast, left Fort Benning last weekend after completing their annual six weeks' summer encampment.

During their training period here the men were divided into three companies of infantry and one battery of field artillry, and underwent a period of intensive more important parts of the program that will eventually fit them for army reserve commissions.

Commissions are offere the cadets upon successful completion of academic studies and military training, the latter being carried on during the school year under the supervision of army officers and noncommissioned officers at the schools. After graduation from college a small number of the cadets are also offered commissions in the regular army.

Ranking cadets of the summer training period were John W. Mueller, Jr., James W. Ryan, Thomas B. Blake and Walter F. Stone. They were chosen on the basis of their all around military ability as demonstrated at Benning and their qualities of leadership. Judges were the cadets and instructors.

Colleges and universities represented at the encampment were Alabama Polytechnic institute, Clemson college, Creighton university, Davidson college, Georgia Military academy, Georgia Tech, Gordon Military college, Louisiana State university, Marion institute, Mercer university, Mississippi State college, orth Georgia college.

Presbyterian college, The Citadel, University of Alabama, University of Florida, University of Mississippi, Wofford college and Yale university.

Guard Unit Begins Summer Training

CONFER ON NATIONAL GUARD MATTERS . . . Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army deputy chief of staff, right, talks with Maj. Gen. Alexander G. Paxton, commander of the national guard's 31st Infantry division, during a conference here Monday. The 31st arrived last week-end for a two-week summer training period.

'Lightning Joe' Collins Inspects Dixie Division

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army deputy chief of staff, and wartime commander in both the Pacific and European theaters, confirmed earlier reports that Fort Benning's garrison will be more than doubled as a result of army's expansion program, during an inspection of the Alabama-Mississippi national guard's 31st Infantry division training camp at Harmony Church, Monday and Tuesday.

The deputy chief of staff cited Fort Benning as an important cog in the Army's plan for expansion army's plans for expansion and and a key institution of the entire army. The Infantry Center will still remain as the No. 1 infantry post, and, just as in World War II, will be the provider of ttop infantrymen and a developer of infantry tactical doctrines according to General Collins.

Dubbed "Lightning Joe" on Guadacanal in 1943 when his 25th division drove the Japs off teh island in bitter jjungle fighting, General Collins inspected the national guard encampment, looking over the training and equipment needs of the 31st division which arrived here Sunday for a two-week summer training camp.

He conferred with Maj. Gen. Alexander G. Paxon, the 31st's commander, on present national guard problems, and also talked with Infantry Center officials before he left Wednesday by plane from Lawson Air Force base.

The wartime commander of the famous 25th also confirmed the report of the shift of the Eighth Infantry division from Camp Campbell, Ky., to Fort enning. The exact date of the movement was not indicated, but he advised that the peak of Fort Benning's garrison strength would not be reached until the summer of 1949.

It was a sort of anomecoming for the strapping, good-looking general who was at Fort Benning in 1927, serving four years under such military notables as Secretary of State George C. Marshall, Generals Courtney Hodges, Omar Bradley and the late "Vinegar Joe" Stillwell.

After leading the famous 25th "Tropic Lightning" division through some of the bitterest fighting of the war on Guadalcenal, he moved over to the European theater to aid in the defeat of the German army. Using the sanie "lightning" tactics that won him praise in the Pacific General Collins sealed off the Cherbourg penninsula and trapped more than 30,000 German troops, including German army and navy commanders.

His troops broke the German counter-attack which virtually bottled the entire Seventh army for 30 days after the fall of Cherbourg.

Over 7500 At 2-Week Encampment

The 31st Infantry Division, national guard unit, from Mississippi, and Alabama, opened its annual two weeks' summer encampment at Fort Benning Monday, with an inspection by Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army deputy chief of staff, amid torrential downpours.

The rain, plus an influx of new men in recent weeks, has caused drastic changes in the proposed training previously scheduled for the organization, 31st officials revealed.

Originally about 7,000 men were expected to train with the division, but by Monday a total of 584 officers and 7,236 enlisted men had reported to the division area in Harmony Church, according to division G-1 officials.

Training, for the most part they said, will consist of familiarization and firing of basic weapons by all troops. Organic weapons will also be fired by division artillery and armored units. Engineers, besides their usual training in bridge building and other pioneer activities, will practice demolitions.

CONCENTRATION

While it was formerly hoped that there would be regimental field problems and, possibly, one division field problem, these plans have been changed so that the concentration will be on small unit, especially company, training, officials declared. This is primarily because the new enlistees have not had the experience necessary for the conduct of larger problems it was pointed out.

Basic training has been set up to some extent within the various regiments to teach the newest men the fundamentals of field soldiering. Because of the change in plans, the primary mission of the division, according to one headquarters spokesman, is to enable the men to familiarize themselves with their basic weapons and care for themselves in the field.

In anticipation of the possibil ity of bad weather, which is already plaguing the division, a large stock of training and com-

Appointment of a new Infantry School faculty board was announced this week by Fort Benning officials.

The new members of the board include Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander; Brig. Gen. Whitfield Shepard, assistant commandant of the Infantry School; Col. Raymond C. Hamilton, Col. Bernard A. Byrne, Col. Oscar B. Beasley, Lt. Col. Paul Hamilton, Lt. Col. Lyle W. Bernard, Lt. Col. David P. Schorr, Jr., Lt. Col. John T. Ewing, Lt. Col. Charles E. Johnson and Maj. Harris T. ENTERS THIRD WEEK

Class No. 22-A of the Airborne battalion's Company C has entered its third week of training, officials announced this week.

7th RCT Leaves For Fort Devens

The main body of the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team, which has served as Infantry Center School Troops since its organization here last February departed Wednesday for its new "home" at Fort Devens, Mass.

Comprising a complement of approximately 800 men, the Seventh, will be completely evacuated from the post by Friday morning. The movement to Fort Devens will be largely one of personnel, as all equipment used here by the combat team will be left behind.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Everett Duvall, the Seventh Infantry Regimental combat team includes the Seventh Infantry of the Third division, Company A of the 10th Engineer Combat battalion, 10th Field Artillery battalion and the 73rd Tank battalion.

With the departure of the Seventh, the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team will take over as School Troops, returning to duties which the unit held prior to the activation of the Seventh combat team. Housed in Harmony Church, the 325th has already begun movement back to the main post.

Organized here in February under the command of Col. Hamilton Thorn, the Seventh is the only outfit to be composed of men who saw service during the past war.

The Seventh Infantry regiment, the basic unit of the Seventh, is one of the oldest fighting units in U. S. military history. One of the most decorated units in the European theater, the Seventh won its honors in a long string of engagemets beginning with the invasion of North Africa and concluding with the march into Munich in April 1945.

Now a part of the 82nd Airborne division, whose home headquarters are at Fort Bragg, N. C., the 325th is presently commanded by Lt. Col. Arden C. Brill. It comprises units of the 325th Infantry regiment, including Headquarters and Headquarters company, service company, a heavy tank company, Companies A, B, C and D, Headquarters company, First battalion, Headquarters, second battalion, and Companies E; F, G and H. Also included are units of the 319th Field Artillery battalion, consiting of Headquarters and Headquartes battery, Batteries A, B, C, Service battery and a medical company.

Company C of the 30th Airborne Engineer battalion is also a part of the 325th combat team as are the 756th Tank battalion which has companies A and B and Headquarters and Service companies and the 25th Hantry, which includes companies E, F, G, and H.

A heavy mortar company of the 325th and Company I of the 504th Parachute battalion completes the 325th roster.

End Airborne Talks

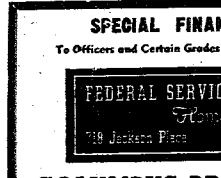
Post Dialogue

With the influx of thousands of 18-year-old soldiers into the army in the next few months, and the fact that some of them are already at Fort Benning, there seems to be a good possibility that the reservation may take on the appearance, or at least the sound, of a "Quiz Kids'" show.

One thing is sure: many of these men who have never left home before are sure to button-hole some of the older men here and ask questions ranging from "Where do I go from here." to "Why do we have to do this, that or the other thing?" Some of them are even liable to ask for information as to how they can better get along in the army during their one-year tour.

Putting himself in the role of an 18-year-old boy, just inducted into the army and away from home and mother for the first time in his life, The Bayonet's enquiring reporter queried eight Benningites on the question for this weeks Post Dialogue: "As an old soldier, briefly, what is the best advice you can give to a new soldier?"



Sgt. Harvie M. Hunter, Company A, Infantry School detachment, with two years in the army; "Keep your nose clean. Don't open your mouth all the time. Do as you are told to do. Don't be overbearing or otherwise make yourself obnoxious to your officers and non-commissioned officers."

Hunter Desguin

M-Sgt. Paul E. Desguin, Company B, Infantry School detachment, 19 years and eight months in the army: "If you're doing a job, keep your eyes and ears open and your mouth shut. Stay out of bad company. This is the first time many of you new soldiers have ever been away from home, and what this year means to you will depend largely on your own efforts. You will have to learn to live and get along with all kinds of people. Take advantage of all the opportunities the army offers, especially the educational advantages."

Chief Warrant Officer Coleman Shepperson, Third Student Training regiment and 18 years in the army: "Do as you are told. My number one advice to you is to work hard and study hard. Remember that you are in the army, that you're not home anymore. Stay out of the non-commissioned officers' hair. Don't give up too easily, stick it out because others have done it and so can you."

Shepperson Jefferson

Cpl. Walter Jefferson, 665th Transportation Truck company, who has just finished his eighth year of service: "My advice is for the new men to obey all army regulations. Carry out the orders given you by your officers and non-coms. Be sure you have a pass when you take off, and always be in proper uniform. Don't argue with your non-coms. When they tell you to do something, they have a reason for it. Always be prompt in your duties."

Lt.-Col. Sherman B. Anderson, state staff, Mississippi national guard, 31st Infantry division, who has 18 years of service: "Do as you are told. Be a soldier. There are two attitudes you can take: You can get the maximum out of what the army has to offer if you will take full advantage of what the army offers you in the way of service schools and recreational advantages. Then you will get along. On the other hand, you can get in and stay in the army to evade normal civilian responsibilities. If you only put in two bits worth, that's all you'll get out of the army. You will get out of the army just exactly what you put in it."

Anderson Bass

Pfc. David C. Bass, Company G, Airborne battalion, a former sailor who has four months in the army: "Do what you are told. Use common sense. If you haven't got any, you'll soon learn some. Don't ever mess up in any way because you'll just mess yourself up. Take advantage of the opportunities the army has to offer you, it's an education in itself."

T-Sgt. Fidel H. Sanchez, Headquarters company, Seventh infantry regiment, who has five years army service: "Get to know the army way. Keep your eyes open. Ask questions. You'll hear a lot of good and a lot of bad about the army, but use your common sense and compare the two sides and balance the content of what you hear. You'll get discouraged, but remember that there have been others in tougher situations than you will find yourselves. If they could take it you're a cinch."

Sanchez Spann

S-Sgt. Newton Spann, Service battery, 933rd Field Artillery battalion, 31st Infantry division, who has five years service: "Do what you're told to do. Keep your nose clean. Learn as much about your job as you can, for the more you learn the better light poles about ten feet high.

Medics Needed To Fill Positions

Medical service reserve officers were invited today by Major General Raymond W. Bliss, surgeon general of the army, to fill 700 openings for active tours of duty.

Regulations governing the assignment of reservists to active duty have been relaxed in order to bring in officers to fulfill the Medical department's aim of relieving army doctors of non-professional administrative work and to provide specialists in the allied medical sciences, such as pharmacists, biochemists, entomologists and others.

General Bliss expects to maintain a ratio of one administrative officer to every three doctors, thus allowing doctors to continue in strictly professional work. Prior to World War II, this ratio was only one administrative type officer for each 12 doctors.

New regulations permit reservists to be called for voluntary three-year tours in the highest grade they held prior to processing for separation, up to lieutenant colonel. Age-in-grade restrictions have been removed, so that officers beyond the usual age maximum for their rank are eligible for active duty.

Under the new Reserve Retirement act, reserve officers will receive credits giving them retirement pay of two and one-half per cent of the base pay of their highest rank for each year of active service and one-half per cent for each year of inactive service.

Qualified optometrists, sanitary engineers, psychologists, physiologists, biochemists, nutritionists and serologists are most needed. Those under 30 years of age may apply for competitive tours of duty for commissioning in the regular army.

Plans also have been developed to extend further the graduate training program for regular army Medical Service corps officers. The program includes training at army and civilian institutions in a wide variety of fields including entomology, bacteriology, clinical psychology and public health. Some of leading universities are cooperating in this program; including Harvard, Columbia, Johns Hopkins Northwestern and others.

Air Force Plans To Stage Glider Snatch Pick-Up

Glider snatch pick-up—an air evacuation technique used by airborne commandos in Burma on rescue missions in mountainous New Guiea and for secret missions behind Nazi battle lines in World War II — will be demonstrated daily by United States air force teams at the International Air Exposition, New York International airport, Idlewild, August 1—8.

The operation in which a transport plane swoops close to the ground and snatches a glider into the air was generally used to evacuate wounded and pick up supplies during wartime airborne operations.

Principal advantage of the technique that is to be demonstrated by Ninth air force pilots and crews from the Tactical Air command, is that the glider can be snatched from a small area in which a powered aircraft could neither land nor take-off. The glider with its pilot and cargo or passenger can usually be taken off from small clearings provided a cleared stretch about 800 feet long is available.

At the International Air Exposition, the glider pick-up demonstration will be staged each day at a scheduled time for a position a few hundred feet in front of the main grandstand.

The nylon two rope which is attached to the nose of the glider is strung between two

TRANSPORTATION CORPS OBSERVES 6TH BIRTHDAY

The sixth anniversary of the army Transportation corps as a separate technical service was observed Saturday, July 31. All major phases of military transportation were grouped under the corps command on that date in 1942.

Pointing to the organization's record during World War II, Major General Frank A. Helleman, chief of transportation, said:

"We are proud of the achievements of the Transportation corps. We transported men, supplies and equipment for an army of eight million men and contributed to the victory in a

In this post-war era, in support of national policy we are still transporting supplies, equipment and food worldwide to the needy peoples in war devastated areas, and we are transporting the logistical support required by our overseas forces."

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J day, the Transportation corp June, the Transportation corps moved approximately 126,788,000 tons of supplies and embarked 7,293,354 passengers for overseas destinations. Every ton carried during this period averaged an 800-mile haul to ports before loading was accomplished.

From V-J day to the end of June, th eTransportation corps moved overseas nearly 36,000,000 tons of cargo and embarked 1,-800,000 persons.

Most of the trans-oceanic passengers are carried aboard the 64-United States army passenger transports crewed and operated by the Transportation corps, while cargo is carried largely aboard commercial vessels.

This is the second summer the "Dixie division" has held its annual encampment since the end of the war. It has been selected by the Department of the Army as one of the nation's guard divisions to form the "ready force" in case of necessity.

During the remainder of the year the division, scattered into small units throughout Alabama and Mississippi, conducts training on a small unit basis. The summer encampment is designed to put into practice in the field, in larger units, the principles studied throughout the rest of the year, according to division officials.

Troops of the 31st arrived at Fort Benning over the weekend and actual operations began early Monday morning. On Monday and Tuesday the entire division area was inspected by General Collins, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, and Maj. Gen. Alexander G. Paxton, division commander.

FRANKLY, WE ARE slightly mixed up. Perhaps, we should say we are in a quandary since that is a more suitable word to describe the situation we are in. And it's all because August 1 brought about the change in army grade titles.

To be more specific: We begin gathering and writing newstories each Thursday prior to publication the following Thursday. Last Thursday was July 29, three days before the career plan went into effect; consequently, no changes had been made in grade titles. Corporals still wore two stripes and were promoted the grade of sergeant, and "buck" sergeants were promoted to the grade of staff sergeant. There was no such thing as recruit, or, that is, no such grade title.

ONE CAN EASILY understand what a situation faced us. Were we to promote a man to corporal, who at the time of promotion, was already a corporal? Could we demote a man from corporal to private first class in order to promote him again to the grade of corporal? Could we promote a man from corporal?

The promotions we reported this week in The Bayonet all took place before C-Day, August. 1. The Bayonet is not delivered until Thursday August 5. Some articles use the new grade title, while those pertaining to promotions prior to August 1, use the old grade title. If it is confusing to you, you can imagine how confusing it is to us.

It Shall Be Done

For the frst time in its history, Fort Benning is providing training facilities for an entire national guard division, thus giving added emphasis to the gigantic role which national guard organizations are earmarked to play in the defense of the nation.

The 31st Infantry division, composed of units of the Alabama-Mississippi national guard, is now undergoing an intensive two-week training period in the Harmony Church area, designed to keep the "old hands" abreast of changing military science and tactics and at the same time designed to "orient" the recruits in the ways of army life and provide them a background for future study.

The national guard, which might be said to spring from the colonial militia which had its first test in defending the nation at the Battle of Lexington and Concord, has a distinguished record of faithful and courageous service to America. In those early days before the United States was born as a nation, the state militias bound themselves together in a loose confederation for the purpose of defending their homes and their families. And even during the Revolutionary War, when the Continental army was a disunited and often disgruntled organization, the state militias were charged with the responsibility of protecting their own states from the Red Coats.

With the growth of America, there came naturally a state guard whose duty it was to provide the necessary protection from rioting among those who would overthrow the American way of life or from internal strife. From this evolved the national guard and federal recognition as a civilian component of the Army of the United States.

World War II produced some of the most brilliant fighting units from among the national guard that this nation has ever known. Their war records speak for themselves. They have notched a place in military history which would be difficult to surpass.

Consider such in fantry divisions as the 26th, or Yankee division, made up of New England national guard troops, with its success at Bastogne and its success in spearheading the drive of the Third army to link with the Seventh army; or the 27th, nicknamed the New York division, with its island hopping tactics, which succeeded in wiping out the Japs on Makin and Eniwetok and its later campaigns in the Marshalls, Saipan and Kume.

Consider also the 28th, or Keystone division, the Pennsylvania national guard unit, with its furious assaults launched on Normandy beach on July 22, 1944, and its successes in France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany; or the 29th, also called the Blue and Gray division, which saw action from D-Day through the mopping up campaign in the Ruhr area and Klotze forest in Germany.

There was also the 30th, or Old Hickory division, spearheading the St. Lo breakthrough and remaining in the forefront of the fighting all the way to Paris and into Germany. Troops of the 30th, sometimes called the Heroes of the Bulge because they helped stop Von Rundstedt's attempt to drive the Allies back to the sea, were the first to enter Belgium and among the first to fan out from the Rhine and aid in circling the Ruhr.

Then, of course, the 31st, or Dixie division, which saw action first at Aitape in March, 1944, and in bloody fighting along the Druinimor river, killed 3,000 Japs and helped to trap 30,000 more. The 31st also fought in the Wakde-Samni area, on Morotai, Mapia and Mindanao.

Others include the 32nd, credited with 600 combat days in the Pacific; the 33rd, or Illinois division, which began its Pacific fighting on New Guinea; the 34th, or Red Bull division, with its brilliant victory in Tunisia.

We could name more, such as the 35th, 36th, 37th, 38th, 40th, 41st, 42nd, 43rd, 44th and 45th, but their records could be no more enhanced. They proved themselves worthy of the American uniform and proved to the nation that they were capable of defending her against an enemy.

To the 31st division, our guest for two weeks, we say division will say, in the words of its slogan, "It Shall Be Done."

Chaplain's Corner..

CROOKED PATHS

By

Chaplain John Dvorovy

A friend once said to me: "Back of my home is a crooked little path wh ch people often use as a shortcut. . . . I often wonder why? It's a crooked, stony path that leads in and out among the weeds and brush, down into a small gully, across a narrow brook, up a steep bank and onto the road beyond. Actually, it does not save time or distance. It is much easier to walk along the paved road to the corner and around the block to get to the next street."

Someone, at some time or other, started this path across that empty field, someone who perhaps may have been in a hurry, who may have thought to save time and distance by cutting across. Others followed the example. Result: a crooked little path across an empty field.

It is comparatively easy, by way of poor examole, to start a crooked path in life. People observe each other. They like to imitate others. A trifling gesture, an ill-spoken word, a small and seemingly insignificant act may be the example someone is eagerly waiting to, pick up and follow. Always in our associations, at home or in public, someone is observing us. We unconsciously influence others by our lives and our habits.

Friend, it is you who, by your personal conduct, sets the example for a well-chosen, open road of life, or a crooked little path that leads off the main highway into the brush where life's bruises too often scar the soul and leave upon it irresponsible damage.

GI HUMOR

The recruits on the rifle range were being told how important it was to be able to call their shots. Leaning over a novice shooter, the range non-com inquired: "Can you call your next one, soldier?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"That's hard to believe," retorted the sarge, "but if you can, I'll put you in for a three-day pass."

"Easy," said the recruit as he carefully squeezed off the next round: "That, sarge, was a miss, and I'll take my pass next week."

"He's bald."

SON OF THE MOON

No matter what we think of "Son of the Moon" as a novel, we must admit that the author, Joseph George Hitrec, has a thorough knowledge of his subject—India. He gives us an authentic account of a high caste Hindu family in the late 1930's—a period when the struggle between old and new India was at its height, when self-government was becoming something more than a vague dream for the far distant future. In contrast to the asceticism of Uday and the conventionalism and semi-purdahism (veiled seclusion) of Kandubai is the feminism of Rana Prashad and the violent nationalism of Tara, follower of the "Party" and its adored leader, Gandhi.

Hitrec describes in minute detail many of the ancient superstitions and customs—the festivals of Nine Nights, of Dasari and Divali, the weird funeral rites, the elaborate wedding rituals, and the legends of the country, particularly those of the Rajputs, legendary descendants of the moon.

"Son of the Moon" is the story of Vijay Ramsingh young Hindu of the Rajput caste, who after making the first solo flight from India to England and spending several years absorbing western ideas returns to his native land. He is full of schemes to modernize India, but meets discouragement at every turn. Frankly, Vijay seems considerably less interested in improving his country than in studying female anatomy, and the casualess of his love affair and Eurasian women do little to increase our respect for the young Hindu on the race in general. The many "bedroom scenes" give the book a "forever-amberish" flavor which will help its popularity rather than its quality.

The story is a little slow at the start and may seem a bit confusing, but it picks up speed as it goes along, and the reader will have little difficulty in following it as soon as he learns to distinguish the many characters. The author manages to retain clarity without sacrificing any of the Hindu flavor.

As a novel, "Son of the Moon" leaves much to be desired, though little to be imagined. As a study of the economic, political, social and religious life of a much discussed but little known country, it is well worth any reader's time.

"Son of the Moon" is available at the Main library.

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

The response to people in need is indeed an interesting thing, and I am glad to be able to write about a case, right here at Fort Benning, in my first column since returning from leave.

There is more to this case, though, than just the interest of individuals in aiding their friends. It establishes the fact that quite often your Red Cross is on the job without the knowledge of the general public. Anyway, the story goes something like this.

We had a veteran working on the post. He is now confined to Emory hospital in Atlanta. The unfortunate fellow had undergone an operation for a cancer and wrote some of his friends back here that he would need six transfusions. That is the way the interpreters interpreted his letter. They immediately called this office, said they had any number of volunteers in their department, and wanted to know where they could donate their blood.

To secure all of the details I called the Red Cross office serving Emory hospital and found that they had misinterpreted his letter, for he had already been given six transfusions. He was requesting that they repay the blood he used to the Emory blood bank. But I found that prior to his transfusions a contact had been made with the Red Cross, and two pints of blood had been secured from that source. Because of an emergency in giving transfusions at a later date, four pints from the Emory private bank had been used. Through the efforts of the Red Cross, it was arranged for his friends to go at their convenience to replenish the blood in the Emory blood bank which had been used for this veteran. Your Red Cross had already made arrangements to continue to give blood to this veteran whenever he needed it.

I think this is a very typical case of how friends and neighbors can all work together through one organization such as the Red Cross to see that blood, when so badly needed, is always available; and how easy it is to replenish so that the reservoir may always be at peak capacity for emergencies.

It is not possible yet to donate blood in Columbus, but any time you are going to be in Atlanta and would like to donate a pint of blood we would be glad to advise you whom to contact, where, and other things of interest about this magnificient program.

Tiny Electronics Device To Revolutionize Radio

Possible revolutionary changes in army communications equipment were foreseen today by Major General S. B. Akin, chief signal officer, following announcement by Bell laboratories of the development of a tiny electronics device called a transistor.

General Akin ordered immediate test of the transistor which Bell laboratories say, will do most of the things that a vacuum tube will do and some that vacuum tubes do not do.

The transistor is important to the army because, having no filament, it requires no heating current to do its job of amplifying voltages. In portable communications equipment, such as the walkie-talkie and the handi-talkie, a large part of the weight and bulk consists of batteries used to heat tubefilaments. The transistor could take a great load off the ground soldier's back.

Col. Edwin R. Petzing, head of the Engineering and Technical division of the office of the chief signal officer, declared that the transistor holds "promise of having great military value, and the Signal corps has already made plans to investigate thoroughly its possibilities."

The device was demonstrated to representatives of the armed services before public announcment of its development.

Colonel Petzing added:

"One of the most difficult problems in the development of small portable radio sets is that of the dry cell power supply. Present standard handie-talkie and walkie-talkie radio sets have respectively, 29 per cent and 39 per cent of their weight and 46 per cent and 57 per cent of their volume taken up by the dry batteries to heat the cathodes and substituts a low curren drain biasing battery with a resulant over-all saving of 25 per cent or more in both battery weight and volume. This is only one example of many applications which will be investigated."

Signal corps engineers cautioned, however, that there is as yet very little conclusive data on the performance of the transistor. They believe it will be useful where relatively low power is involved. They expect to have to continue to rely on the vacuum tube for high power equipment.

"The immediate need," Colonel Petzing observed, "is for thorough and exhaustive tests to gather complete data on the transistor's characteristics and its reaction to shock, vibration and extremes of climate. These investigations will require a considerable period of time. Therefore, it is not expected that new items of military equipment using transistors instead of vacuum tubes will be offered for service test in the near future.

315 Retired EM Get Pay Raises

The Department of the Army has notified 315 retired enlisted men that their retired pay will be increased in accordance with the provisions of a bill passed by the second session of the 80th Congress.

A section of this law permits the advancement on the appropriate retired list of both regular and non regular male and female officers, warrant officers and enlisted personnel to the highest grade held by them durig the period from Sept. 9, 1940 to June 30, 1946, and provides increased pay computed on the higher grade.

The records of approximately 29,000 individuals on the army retired lists are being reviewed, and it is estimated that a total of about 2,000 will be eligible for increases, including many enlisted men who held temporary wartime warrant and commissioned grades.

No application for advancement on the retired list is to be submitted to the Department of the Army by retired personnel. The Secretary of the Army will determine the eligibility of individuals for advancement and orders announcing the changes affecting qualified personnel who held temporary AUS commissions during the prescribed period will be published at the earliest practicable date.

Eighteen-Year-Old Enlistment Quotas Set In Territories

The army has authorized the one-year enlistment, within fixed quotas, of qualified male individuals in the 18-year-old group in Hawaii, Alsaka, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Quotas set for the period extending to June 30, 1949 are: Alaska, 50; Hawaii, 450; and Puerto Rico and the Virgin islands combined, 500.

Enlistment, processing, training and utilization of the individuals will be accomplished by the respective army commanders within their commands. Each commander is authorized to enlist any number, up to the quota, at such times and in such numbers as he may determine in order that effective training and utilization can be accomplished.

Individuals will be accepted only if the one-year's training will fit them for further reserve training in a type of reserve unit available within the command.

Doughs Crowned Diamond Champs

Wage Undefeated Campaign For State Semi-Pro Diadem

BY LEWIS MCAFEE

Equipped with the best flinging staff of any squad in the Georgia semi-pro baseball meet, the Fort Benning Doughboys breezed undefeated to a state title at Thomaston last Thursday night, and immediately began eyeing prospects of representing the Georgia-Alabama district in the national tourney at Wichita, Kans., next month.

Following their triumph over the Dunson Millers of LaGrange, Ga., for the state crown last Thursday night, the Doughboys began making plans to open a three-game set with the Buck Creek team of Siluria, the Alabama state champs, at Golden park in Columbus Sunday.

To clinch the state toga, the Doughs registered four straight victories, two over the Dunson nine, one over the host Thomaston club, and one over another LaGrange squad representing the Dixie mills.

Watts Wins Finale

Lefty Ken Watts, who was the victim of an off-night in his other tourney starts against the Thomaston club early last week, was credited with hurling the Doughs to the championship Thursday night when he yielded Dunson only two safe blows in the vital contest.

Making his first start of the tourney against the Dixie Millers of LaGrange in the semi-final tilt on Tuesday night, right-hander Bob Cronin pitched the Doughs into the finals by registering a 9-4 triumph. Both Cronin and Watts, however, needed help from relief twirler Ray Stem.

Stem, who was employed by Manager Herb Bench in a relief capacity throughout the tourney, came on to replace Cronin after six and two-thirds innings of the fray with Dixie mills, and went to the hill for Watts with one Dunson Miller out in the ninth.

The clouting star of the tourney for the Doughs was center-fielder Joe Smith, who nicked opposing twirlers for three circuit smashes during the week-long classic. All three of the hard-hitting Benning outfielder's boundary belts came during the last two encounters of the tourney. Two of Smith's blasts came off Harold Cottle of the Dixie squad, and the Dough slugger's final wallop came off Leroy Wiggins of the Dunson squad.

In the game with the Dixie Millers, the Doughs took a three-run command in the first frame. Two of the tallies came as the result of a 350-foot drive over the left-field wall by Smith with lead-off man Paul Bonair on base.

The soldier team added two more counters in the second on a double by Bill Brooks, and singles by Bonair and Bob Kinard. A single by Dough first-sacker Herb Lauve brought home Harold (Blondy) Burnett with another Benning counter in the third. Burnett had reached on a single, and went to second on a misplay by Miller shortstop Murray.

As the Benning squad concluded its scoring with a single marker in the fifth, and a pair of runs in the sixth, the LaGrange lads launched the scoring attack with one in the sixth, and three in the seventh.

The Doughs needed only two errors by the Miller shortstop to cross the plate with a counter in the fifth, and Smith's second round - tripper of the game, another wallop over the left-field barrier with Bonair on board accounted for the two tallies in the sixth.

A spectacular bit of base-running gave the Dixie team its first run in the sixth, and singles by R. Woodruff and E. Woodruff, a double by rightfielder Beall, and a walk to Ocky Walls gave the Millers another trio of counters in the seventh. Following the Millers' three-run outburst, starter Cronin of the Doughs was relieved in favor of Stem, who held the LaGrange nine scoreless for the remainder of the tilt.

Watts Whiffs 15

Putting on the most brilliant mound display of the entire tourney, Watts, the Benning squad's No. 1 portsider, took the hill against the Dunson team in the tourney finale, and sailed the third strike past 15 Miller batters in his mound stint of eight and one-third innings.

The first of the two safe knocks yielded by Watts in the game was a freak inside - the park homerun by first-baseman Pug Mullinax with none on in the top half of the fourth. On the hit, which ordinarily would have been a blooper single to left, Mullinax completed the tour of the bases after Bill Brooks, trying to make a shoe-string catch, allowed the pellet to get past him and roll all the way to the fence.

The Doughs again went on the offensive early in the game, chalking up three counters in the initial stanza. Singles by Kinard and Lauve were the only two Benning hits registered during the opening canto.

Another Homer

Pitcher Wiggins of the Millers then settled down to hold the Doughs scoreless until the last half of the seventh when a long triple by Kinard and an infield out tallied another run for the Benchmen.

The army nine touched Wiggins for a trio of safe blows in the home half of the eighth to chalk up their final three counters. A single by Lauve, an error by the Miller pitcher on Brook's grounder, and catcher Tom Gallagher getting hit on the head by a pitched ball filled the sacks with none out. Pitcher Watts then helped secure his margin by lashing a one-bagger to score Lauve and Brooks, and came in with the third tally of the inning when Stem, running for Gallagher, was forced at third on Bonair's infield roller.

Control Lapse

The Dunson squad capitalized on Watts' control lapse in the top of the ninth, and scored their final tally after the veteran Doughboy southpaw had given up four bases on balls. Stem then came to the rescue, and succeeded in whiffing the next two Miller batters to step in the box.

Two of the squads entered in the tourney, the Willingham Millers of Macon and the Dundee Millers, failed to get a chance to snap the Dough winning streak because of two successive losses during the early stages of the meet. Each of the two squads took one defeat via the forfeit route.

LINKS SEMI-FINALISTS . . . A Fort Benning darkhorse who reached the semi-finals of the Third army golf tourney at Oliver General hospital in Augusto, Ga., lost week before being outsed by runner-up Clyde (Red) Boyd of the Georgia Military district is long-knocking John Henion. The post linksman staged a long rally to even the match up at the end of the 17th hole and carry his semi-finals opponent to the 20th hole before yielding a one-up verdict to Boyd, an ROTC instructor at the University of Georgia school of medicine in Augusto.

Foreign Officers Set TIS Courses

Seven foreign officers, representing the British, Turkish and Brazilian armies, are scheduled to attend Infantry School classes beginning in September, it was learned here this week.

Maj. J. Scott, of the British army's Royal Warwickshire regiment, is expected to take the advanced course which begins Sept. 3 and ends June 30, 1949, according to an announcement by the War department.

The largest single group will come from Turkey. They are Capt. Aiparslan Turkes, 1st Lts. Kenan Surgit and Fatih Ozsu and 2nd Lt. Mehmet Ali Tokatili.

Captain Turkes and Lieutenants Surgit and Ozsu will also take the advanced course, while Lieutenant Tokatili will attend the communications course, which commences Aug. 31 and ends Feb. 3, 1949.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning the four Turkish officers, who left Istanbul June 28, will attend the orientation and refresher language course at the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the American Mission for Aid to Turkey has revealed.

The Brazilian delegation will include Capt. Joao Lanes da Silva Leal and 1st Lt. Luiz Jose Torres Marques. Captain Lanes is slated to enroll in the advanced course, and Lieutenant Torres in the basic course, which does not get under way until Jan. 3, 1949 and end June 12, 1949.

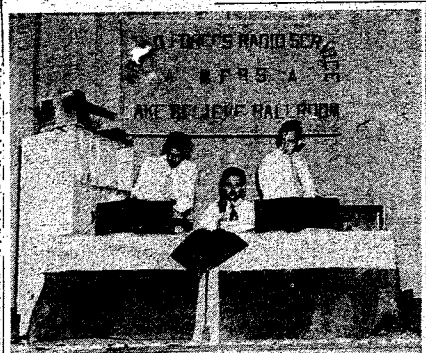
PROMOTED TO SERGEANT

Cpl. Lewis A. Evans, Company B, Infantry School detachment, was promoted on July 30 to the grade of sergeant, officials have reported.

Army To Establish Centralized Office For AG Records

Plans for the establishment of a centralized Adjutant General Records office to be located in Kansas City were announced today by the Department of the Army.

The adjutant general now operates five regional records offices at widely separated points in the United States. For reasons of efficiency of operation and economy, as well as to provide urgently needed space, the army will centralize the activities of the five offices at one location, taking over the present Kansas City quartermaster depot for the purpose.



Kansas City was selected as the site of the new office because of its centralized geographical location and its proximity to the Adjutant General Records Administration Center in St. Louis. In addition the quatermaster depot is well suitedfrom the standpoint of space and layout for the new office.

Quartermaster supply and maintenance activities at the depot are being relocated at other quartermaster installations with a minimum disruption to the administrative and supply functions. Present plans, however, do not contemplate removal of the Personal Effects bureau nor the graves registration activity.

It is anticipated that the adjutant general will maintain a larger working force at the centralized office than is presently employed by the quartermaster.

179 STUDENTS GRADUATE

The 179 students in class No. 21 of the Airborne battalion's Company E were scheduled to graduate last Friday, July 30, officials announced. Of the total number enrolled for airborne training, 150 were enlisted men and 29 were officers.

'Make Believe Ballroom Dance Held At Hospital

Th dancing party, held by the medics of the 3440th Army Service unit at the old Red Cross building in the hospital area, was was the first of its kind ever held here.

Patterned afer the disc show originated by Martin Block, one of the nation's most popular disc jockeys, "Make Believe Ballroom" was presided over by the staff of the Armed Forces Radio Service station WFBS of the Station hospital including Sgt. Don Latorre, station manager and master of ceremonies, Pfc Jimmie Costello and Pfc. Bob Collins. The novel affair was a decided hit as couples danced to any orchestra, or tune they requested, or could sit one out while listening to their favorite vocalist.

Featured entertainers, and jitterbug, waltz and fox trot contests, plus door prizes were also included in the evening's festivities.

Vocalist Vinnie Marraro who sang "Linda," headed the parade of entertainers. Comedian Don Haynes, who treed the audience with his humorous jibes and antics, was followed by Wash Shepherd who gave an exhibition in the art of legerdemain.

Some good old fashioned "Hoe Downs" along with many favorite folk ballads were rendered by the "Alabama Jubilee Boys," Willie Kernop and Willie Griffis.

Pfc. James Oeffler and Pfc. Dorothy Pennington showed how jitterbugging should be done as they walked off with top honors in the jitterbug contest. Prizes were also awarded to couples in the fox trot and waltz classes. All winners were selected by the audience.

The idea of a "Make Believe Ballroom" is not a new one. It was first conceived by the noted radio celebrity Martin Block in New York City, in which he featured a four-hour program. His recorded "Make Believe Ballroom" was the forerunner of the present day disc jocky shows. There are only two others like it. One is use by the Dorsey brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, at Santa Monica Beach, Calif., and the other by Al Jarvis in Hollywood.

Sergeant Latorre, manager of WFBS, who was master of ceremonies for last week's program here, also used the idea in Panama City, Fla. Latorre, one of the original "Dead End Kids," starred in many movies, among which was "Boys' Town." During the war he was commended for his many radio and stage presentations overseas.

A radio announcer in Florida before coming to Fort Benning, Sergeant Latorre reenlisted in the army because he was "tired of living out of suitcases."

Cpls. Carl S. Harlow and Walter S. Duzinski, Company H, also were included among those advanced to the grade of sergeant.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

After gallerying the match between John Henion of Fort Benning and Clyde (Red) Boyd of the Georgia Military district over the golf layout of Oliver General hospital in Augusta last week, we had all we needed in the way of an explanation for the high qualifying scores carded for the Third army links tournament.

Several local followers of the tourney were amazed to discover that qualifying rounds in the 80's were good enough to garner a championship-flight berth for some of the aspirants. It was generally rumored that the Oliver General course was plenty rugged, but it took an actual squint at the layout to make us realize that it really is as tough as it was cracked up to be.

Golfers, who, on the Fort Benning Officers' club course, had been getting slight hooks and slices without any serious damage resulting, found that they had to really thread the needle to keep from winding up in deep rough on the Augusta course.

The fairways appeared to have been chopped out of a dense forest, and were extremely narrow. Pine trees as thick as a picket fence lined both sides of most of the fairways, and a slight deviation in accuracy often resulted in a player taking an eight or nine on a par four hole.

In addition to being none too generous in width, the fact that the strips were hardly in top-notch condition for summer rules will be attested by post golfers who had an active part in the meet. Lies too close for wood shots were plentiful, and the long-knockers were the only ones who didn't suffer from this factor.

Although the greens of the course were velvety in appearance, they were somewhat unpredictable, and it took a couple of rounds for the golfers to know which ones were fast and which ones were slow.

In short, an entirely different style of playing was required for the linksmen who had become accustomed to playing the local course.

Early this season, we made a prediction that the race between major league all clubs this year would be plenty close. And, it looks like the forecast has come to pass, especially in the junior circuit where a scant margin of .008 divides the first four teams.

With such a small number of percentage points between the first-division clubs, a team could easily drop from first to fourth place by losing a single game.

In the senior loop, however, the first-place Boston Braves have a more comfortable margin, but none of the other first-division clubs are quite ready to concede the race. At present, the beantown crew is five games ahead of the second-place New York Giants, but the Polo Grounds club has made amazing strides since Lippy Leo Durocher took over the helm, and can't be counted out yet.

With identical records, the Brooklyn Dodgers, last year's pennant winners, and the St. Louis Cardinals are tied for third place in the National league with only .022 between them and the Giants.

In making guesses as to the outcome of the race in the American league, we overlooked the abilities of the Philadelphia Athletics. But, that doesn't make us feel too bad because even the Mackmen's fans didn't figure them as one of the top contenders for the pennant this year. Right now, the A's are heading the roster with a margin of .005 between them and the second-place Cleveland Indians. Only .002 behind the Tribe are the New York Yankees, 1947 world champs and the Boston Red Sox, who were atop the standings prior to dropping a twin bill to the Indians on Sunday, trail the Yanks by .001.

We missed a first-division club in each league. In the National circuit, we figured that the Cincinnati Reds would be in the first-half scramble because of a potentially strong pitching staff. However, present standings find the hapless Reds just above the cellar-occupying Chicago Cubs. Our American league predictions had the Detroit Tigers high on the list, but the Bengals are all but out of the race now with a wide span between them and the fourth-place Bosox.

The advantage a healthy mound staff gives to a ball club was borne out in the recent Georgia State Semi-Pro baseball tournament at Thomaston. Most of the teams entered in the meet carried only two pitchers on the roster, and some of them relied on one man to twirl them through the tournament.

A pitcher can't be right every time he toes the slab, and, for that reason, the club which is well armed with relief hurlers, in this case the Fort Benning Doughboys, is bound to come out on top in the long run.

ARMY LINKS TEAM . . . Members of the Third army links team slated to compete in the all-army golf matches at Fort Lewis, Wash., this month are shown following the semi-finals matches of the army area tourney at Oliver General hospital in Augusta, Ga., last Friday. The two senior team members, W. G. Skelton of Fort McPherson, Ga., and W. C. Moore, a patient at Oliver General hospital, are shown on the extreme left. The four-man squad, from left to right, includes John Henion of Fort Benning; Robert Hunter of Fort Bragg, N. C; Clyde (Red) Boyd of the Georgia Military district, and S. L. Mantooth of Fort Bragg.

Twenty Service Athletes Paced On Olympic Set

The 1948 Olympic games in England, July 29 to August 14, will have 17 United States army athletes and three United States air force athletes participating as the result of competitive efforts of the two services in the past several months, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, chief of army special services, and a member of the United States Olympic association Executive committee, announced today.

These top athletes among army and air force personnel who have survived preliminary contests since the army Olympic effort got under way early in 1947, have arrived in London. They will represent the United States men who went into the Olympic in boxing, equestrian, track and field, swimming, modern pentathlon, and pistol and rifle competition.

Of the nine army and air force boxing finals at Boston, Mass., three made the United States team. They include Edward Johnson of Kansas City, stationed with the 839th Aviation battalion in the Philippines, 125-pound class; Ross Virgo of Rochester, N. Y. stationed with the 16th United States Constabulary regiment in Germany, 147-pound class; and Washington Jones of Lovejoy, Illinois, 520th Air Transport group, Westover Field, Mass., 160—pound class.

TO WALK MY POST IN A . . . Dripping downpour could have been the next couple of words as far as Pvt. Donald R. Vines of Company B, 167th Infantry, was concerned, for rain and more rain was definitely the order of the day as soon as the 31st hit Fort Benning.

FIRST DAY, TOO . . . Nabbed for this all too familiar job, and on the first day, too, was Pfc. Melvin D. Turner, Company D, 167th Infantry regiment of the 31st. Turner got wet in his "on-the-job training," but not as wet as some of his buddies who were welcomed to Benning by some really wet weather.

Emilio Cordon Annexes Three Swimming Titles

Team Potentials Start Drills For Third Army Pool Meet

Heavy winner in last week's post swimming meet at Russ pool was Emilio Cordon of Headquarters company, 325th Infantry regiment, who strolled away with first-place laurels in the three events in which he was entered.

Cordon, along with first, second and third-place winners in each of the eight events comprising the meet, will be eligible to represent Fort Benning in the annual Third army tournament which is slated to get under way at Fort McPherson, Ga., on Aug 13.

The first of Cordon's three triumphs came in the 100-yard backstroke which he finished in 1:35.2 minutes. He then repeated in the 100-yard breaststroke by chalking up a time of 1:30 minutes, and his clocking of 2:26 minutes for the 150-yard medley led the field in that event.

Awards Given

Although the primary purpose of the post meet was to select representatives for the Third army classic, each first-place contestants received bronze awards.

Despite the fact that the post meet has been completed, berths on Fort Benning's Third army tank delegation still are open to interested individuals who can prove that they are capable of better times than those chosen through last week's eliminations. Interested swimmers who were unable to enter competition in the local tourney were advised to report for daily drills being held at Russ pool.

Considering the limited time in which the team aspirants have been able to go through their paces, the outlook for the Benning squad was cited as fairly good. But, the post athletic section believes that some intensive practice between now and the inaugural date of the Third army meet will enable the hopefuls to step up their times to some extent.

Team Pilot

Although a pilot for the Fort Benning tanksters is yet to be selected, the most likely candidate for the position is Dayton L. Warren of the 319th Field Artillery battalion, who copped two firsts and one second in the post meet. Warren took top honors in the 100-yard free style with a time of 7:31 minutes. He placed second in the 150-yard medley behind Cordon.

Another big winner in the post events was William Dew of Lawson Field, who displayed top-notch springboard style in wrapping up 110 points and a first-place in the diving contests. The air force swimmer also copped the No. 1 spot in the 50-yard free style classic with a time of 29.2 second.

Dew, who hails from Wilmington, N. C., also is well known in tank circles throughout his home estate. His pool achievements were climaxed with the winning of the free-style and diving events in the North Carolina Junior tournament of the Young Men's Chirstian association in 1943.

Eligibility Questionable

Since Dew is assigned to Lawson field, however, his eligibility to participate with the Fort Benning swimmers at Fort McPherson is questionable. Heretofore, air force personnel have been excluded from participation in Third army tourneys.

The other first-place winner was Edward Stiles of Company H, Infantry School detachment, who recorded a time of 3:09 minutes for the 200-yard free style. Stiles also chalked up a second when he finished the 440-yard free style in 7:34 minutes, only three seconds behind Warren.

The last two events of the Benning meet, the diving contests and the 150-yard medley, which included equal lengths of breaststroke, backstroke and free-style swimming, were staged during a heavy rain.

The group will include Majs. Felix S. Maniego, Ceferino R. Calvez, Lucas V. Cauton and Maherto A. Bautista, Capts. Roman Gelveson, Salvador T. Piccio and Aristotles Olayvar and 1st Lt. Jose M. Artiaga, Jr. say good-morning."

Paulk Churcks One-Blow Win For ISD Reds

Warren Paulk starred in all departments as the Infantry School detachment Reds pounded out a 10-0 verdict over the Airborne battalion Troopers in a Columbus city league softball tilt at Rose Hill park last Wednesday night.

Going the route on the slab for the ISD nine, Paulk yielded only one infield safety in chucking the Reds into command of the city circuit. Although the loss was the first of the second half for the Airborne squad, the ISD lads, who also have been tagged with one setback, took the lead in percentage points.

The ISD twirler also joined the slugging parade by blasting one of the Reds' quartet of four-baggers.

Leading off in the initial frame Marshall O'Shaughnessy, Red shortstop, touched off the fireworks by nicking Airborne pitcher Mick Spoon for a circuit smash. His blow was followed at intervals by boundary belts by Joe Wright and John Wyatt. The Reds also hold the No. 1 spot in the Fort Benning softball loop for this half. The first-half campaign was taken over by the Airborne Troopers.

Medical Team Rallies To Win

In a post circuit tilt last Friday evening on the Airborne battalion diamond, the 30th Medical group softballers staged a fifth-inning rally to beat the Trooper nine 8-5.

The airborne aggregation got off to a two-run lead in in the second inning when center-fielder Arden Smith and right-fielder Gale Sult scored on a bingle by second-baseman William Thompson. The host nine then added a run in the third, one in the fourth and another in the fifth stanza for its total of five runs.

After getting one run in the fourth frame, the Medics staged a seven-run rally in the fifth to lead the game 8-4.

Leading off with a single for the Medics, left-fielder Sam Payne moved to third on a double by right-fielder Ralph McIntosh. Third-baseman Ed Monroe then hit a single to score both Payne and McIntosh. Gerald Vital also hit for one base, and scored behind Montor when center-fielder Vernon Boswell lined out a double. After Tom Brown, Medic shortstop, reached on an error, first-sacker John Erb smacked a double to bat in two more runs. Pitcher John Johnson flied out, moving Erb to third, and catcher Bernard Hart sacrificed to bring in the first-baseman with the final Medic tally.

The medical group team then iced the game by holding the airborne lads to one run in their half of the fifth.

He was saying to his gal, "Must I say good night?" when her father's voice piped up, "No wait a few minutes and you can

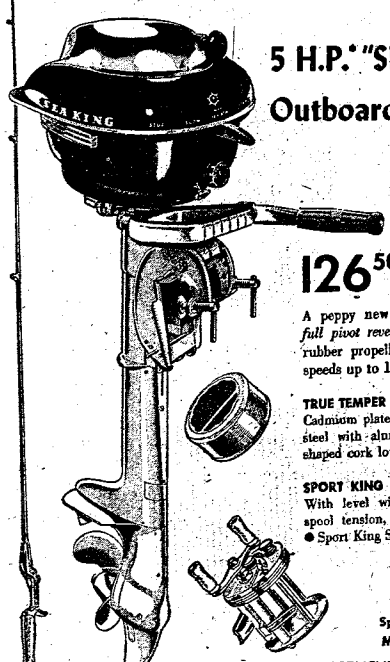
The present three minute round was adopted in England and the United Sttaes during the 1890's.



2. Jesse Ownes.

3. The record time for nine innings was set at 51 minutes by the National League Phillies and Giants on Sept. 28, 1919. On September 26, 1926, the Yanks and Browns of the American League, came close with a 55-minute game.

Doughs Take Regional Opener

DISTANCE SWIMMER . . . Relaxing in what he considers natural surroundings is Edward Stiles of Company H. Infantry School detachment, who was one of the top contestants in the distance events of the post swimming meet at Russ pool last week. Stiles won the 200-yard free style classic with a clocking of 3:09 minutes, and chalked up a second in the 440-yard swim.

Kinard's Single Edges Alabama Diamond Squad

Bob Kinard, whose renown as a clutch-hitter dates back to Third army tournament days last year, again turned the trick at Columbus' Golden park Saturday afternoon by slamming out a timely ninth-inning single to give the Doughboy diamond squad a 5-4 victory over the Buck Creek Millers in the first game of the Georgia-Alabama regional semi-pro playoff.

The game was the first of a three-game series to determine the regional representative to the national semi-pro classic in Wichita, Kans., early next month.

The Buck Creek team, which hails from Siluria, Ala., fought its way through a field of 19 entries to cop the Alabama semi-pro title, while the Fort Benning squad captured the Georgia toga last week by blasting the Dunson mills team of LaGrange 8-2 in the Thomaston ball park.

Other Games

Saturday afternoon's fray was the only one of the set scheduled for the vicinity of Fort Benning. As many other games as are necessary to decide the regional championship will be played on the Buck Creek diamond.

Collis (Lefty) Lehner, who came to the hill replacing starter Ike Silcox in the seventh frame of the series opener, turned in a great job of relief twirling for the Doughs, and was credited with the win. Right-hander Ed Guy, the last of three pitchers used by the Buck Creek team, was tagged with the defeat.

Lehner also was one of the big guns at the plate for the Doughs, getting a single and a double in two appearances. It was the relief chucker who crossed the plate with the winning tally after Kinard's sharp one-bagger to center.

Gallagher Stars

The Doughboys initiated the tilt's scoring in the home half of the second when Tom Gallagher, who turned in a bang-up defensive job with the mask and mitt, singled to center scoring Harold (Blondy) Burnett, who had previously doubled against the wall in right-center field.

Joe Smith, who was the sensation of the Georgia semi-pro tourney by blasting three homers during the last two games of the meet, came through with a double against the boards in left field to score Kinard with the second Doughboy tally in the bottom half of the third.

Although his ninth-inning bingle saved the day for the Doughs, Kinard committed the only Benning error of the game, a misplay at second which started the Buck Creek lads off on a two-run rally which knotted the score in the top of the fourth.

Talley Hits

With one out, Dugan Johnson, Alahama left-fielder, hit a high pop fly which Kinard dropped after he apparently had lost it in the sun. Shortstop Slick McGinnis then got the first hit of the game for the Millers, a sharp single to right, and both runners scored when right-fielder Jim Talley, who was poison at the plate for the Doughs, rattled the boards in right-center field for three bases.

A spectacular throw to Gallagher from left-fielder Bill Brooks prevented Talley from scoring with the third run of the stanza after Tommy Cutcliff, Buck Creek second-sacker, had hit a deep fly to the outfield.

The Doughboys moved into the lead again in the home half of the sixth when a double to the left-field signs by first-baseman Herb Lauve brought in two more Benning counters. Lauve's blow scored Smith who had led off with a single, and Woody Burt, who was safe on first when Dugan Johnson muffed his high fly to left field. Lauve was thrown out by Johnson, however, when he tried to score from second on Bill Brooks' line-drive single.

Again Deadlocked

The score was again deadlocked in the seventh frame when a flurry of hits drove starter Silcox of the Doughs from the slab, and netted the visiting Alabamans two runs. Talley hit to right-center for two bases, and scored on a single by pinch-hitter Henry before Lehner came in to start his relief performance. Henry then went to second on a passed ball, and scored when George Powell singled sharply to right.

Things started to look as if the contest would go into extra innings when the first two Dough batters in the ninth, Brooks and Gallagher, went out in order. However, pitcher Lehner promptly smacked one of Guy's offerings down the left-field foul line for a double, and, after Paul Bonair had drawn an intentional pass to first, Kinard hit his crucial single to center.

The Buck Creek squad collected a total of nine safeties from the combined offerings of Silcox and Lehner, while the Doughs nicked twirler Guy, starter Red Amos and Guy Morton of the Alabamans for 12 base blows.

Henion Garner's Berth On Army Golf Quartet

Post Linksmen Capture Two Flight Titles in Augusta Meet

Only one Fort Benning stroker, John Henion, who was regarded as a Third army tournament darkhorse by even his own colleagues, is sure of going to Fort Lewis, Wash., as a member of the Third army links delegation to the forthcoming all-army tourney.

Henion secured a spot on the army area squad by advancing to the semi-finals of last week's Third army meet at Oliver General hospital in Augusta, Ga. before dropping a close decision to Clyde (Red) Boyd of the Georgia Military district.

The long-knocking post linksman missed placing on Fort Benning's four-man squad for the Third army meet by doing no better than getting a tie for sixth place in the post's recent 72-hole medal playoff on the local officers' club course, but was awarded a spot as an individual competitor for the army area championship.

20-Hole Defeat

In the semi-finals match, Henion lost a heart-breaking 20-hole one-up verdict to Boyd after staging a long rally to even the contest up on the 17th hole.

Boyd, whose assignment is with the University of Georgia school of medicine in Augusta, held a one-up advantage over the Fort Benning golfer at the end of the ninth hole, and had increased his margin to three holes as the match left the 13th green.

Henion then took three out of the next four holes to even the match up. After the Fort Benning representative had taken the 14th and 15th holes with a birdie and a bogey, respectively, the two halved the 16th hole before Henion squared the game off by knocking in a par on No. 17.

A sensational approach saved Boyd from bowing out to Henion on the 18th hole. After the Augusta shooter had faded his tee shot into a sand trap on the 415-yard last hole, he pulled a nice recovery shot with a long iron, but the effort fell about 35 yards short of the green. Henion, who had poked out a long straight drive, plunked his second shot right on the carpet about 35 feet from the cup, but the Augusta golfer pitched his third shot up to within two feet of the hole to get a half with a par four.

After the two semi-finalists had both missed short putts for bogeys on the par four first hole, Henion muffed a drive into the rough on the second hole which proved to be the turning point of the match. Boyd, who had poled two fine shots to reach the apron of the green on the 426-yard hole, had a definite advantage over Henion whose dub ped drive left him too much distance to reach the green on his second shot. The military district delegate then got down in two to close out the match.

Going into the finals Saturday, Boyd was ousted by Robert Hunter of Fort Bragg, N.C., 7-6 in the 36-hole closeout match. Hunter also was one of the tourney's co-medalists with a qualifying round of 75.

Should air transportaton be arranged for the all-army tournament, however, four alternates will get to make the Washington trip, three of which will be from Fort Benning. The three local alternates, who attained the quarter-finals of the Third army meet, will be Matt C. C. Bristol, Claude English and Paul Markland.

Of the Benning players who reached the advanced stages of the tournament, Bristol was the only one who placed on the post's four-man team. All others were either dropped into the first flight following the first-round matches, or were eliminated during the opening round of play in the championship bracket.

One of the post's chief title hopes, local officers' club champion Devert Moore, was placed in the first flight following his upset during the first round of play, but went on to cop his finals match and the title for the division from Maurice Deckle of the Georgia Military district.

Benning's only other winner was Logan Boyd, who scored a triumph in the first flight of the senior division for golfers over 50 years old.

Alabamans Oust Lawson Flyers From AF Meet

After taking a 7-5 decision from the host squad to get past the first round of the Southern Air Force diamond tourney at the Orlando, Fla., air force base Friday, the Lawson field Flyers dropped an 8-1 decision to the Maxwell field, Ala., team Saturday, and were eliminated from the meet.

In the game that inaugurated the tourney Friday, Catcher Fields Cox of the Flyers got behind the pitching of lanky Lou Button with some timely hits to pace the Lawson victory over the Orlando team. Cox, whose plate endeavors included a double and two singles, was responsible for driving in four Flyer tallies.

Although right-hander Dan English and Button teamed on the mound to ration four safe blows to the Maxwell field team on Saturday, the Alabama flyers took advantage of English's wild streak to score eight times. Button was recalled to the mound in the fifth inning, but the Lawson lads couldn't bunch enough singles to overcome the Maxwell lead.

In the Orlando meet, the Flyers were entered in a field of 16 teams of the Southern air force area, the winner in which will go to the all-air force tournament which opens Friday at the Denver, Colo., air force base. The winning team in Denver will represent the air force in the national semi-pro tourney in Wichita, Kans., on Sept. 1.

Favored to cop top honors in the Southern meet were the MacDill field Flyers of Tampa, Fla. However, Keesler field, Miss., and Maxwell field were cited as possibilities to snap the MacDill win streak.

YOUTH SUCCUMBS TO AGE

Old-Timers Trim Bullets In Annual Diamond Tiff

BY BOB PHILLIPS

In the second annual Old-Timers versus Bullets baseball game on Bullet field last Thursday afternoon, age triumphed over youth to the tune of 7-4.

The only trace of victory for the Bullets came during the pre-game ceremonies when the agile youngstrs out - scampered the oldsters to retrieve an introductory ball thrown out on the diamond by Maj. George R. Couch, the battalion commander.

In the course of the game, the oldsters appeared to be anything but ancient as they streaked around the base paths with the swiftness of yearlings.

The opening innings of the game saw both teams battle on even terms with the score tied at 2-2 in the second, 3-3 in the third and 4-4 in the fifth.

Level-headedness and experience marked the margin of victory for the Old-Timers in the seventh. They scored three runs while the youngsters were going to pieces on the field.

Old-Timer Leon Coleman started the Bullets on the road to defeat with a clean-hit single to center field. Bulging Lee Graves, who boasts 10 years of top-notch baseball with the 10th Cavalry, laid down a perfectly-hit bunt that rolled slowly toward the mound. Graves snail-paced it down the first-base line, but was safe when Nick Nichols uncorked a wild throw to first.

At that point, the Bullet defenses fell apart, and they began throwing the ball all over the lot, none of the players being able to hold the pellet. In the confusion, Coleman struggled around to third, and scored when Nichols dropped Hirron Collier's throw to the plate. Hale had worked moundsman Horace Smith for a walk. Graves ambled on to third, and Hale took second during the same bedlam that sent Coleman across the plate. Fulton played the role of hero with a line single to left to score Graves and Hale.

Despite the fact that Gene Thomas led off in the Bullet half of the seventh with a double, the youngsters failed to scor, and the second annual contest ended in a victory for the old men.

Graduation Exersices Held Here On July 23

Graduation exercises were held July 3 for 213 enlisted men and four officers who successfully completed the five-week airborne training course as members of class No. 20-A of the Airborne battalion's Company A, according to an announcement made this week.

The 217 graduates were evenly divided between the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C., and the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team here.

Gridiron Squad To Resume Drill

A last call for aspirants for the 1948 Doughboy football eleven has been sounded by Head Coach Joe Shepherd.

Candidates for the team may sign up in the coaches' section of the post athletic and recreation office any time between now and the opening of the fall practice sessions on Aug. 16

Coach Shepherd said that none of the positions for this year has been definitely settled, and that there is still plenty of room both on the line and in the backfield for talented gridsters.

By starting their fall drills on Aug. 6, the Doughs will have more than a month to get their plays down pat before they open the 1948 season against the Parris Island Marines in South Carolina on Oct. 2.

The tussle with the Marines will be the first of eight games on tap for Shepherd's Doughs this year. One open date remains on the schedule.

300 Expected To Begin Airborne Course Aug. 2

A total of 300 students are expected to begin airborne training with class No. 23-A of the Airborne battalion's Company G on Aug. 2, officials have announced.

According to the announcement, 172 students are enlisted men from the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C., while 125 are enlisted men from the Airborne battalion's Headquarters and Service company. To date only three officers are enrolled for the five-week training course. They are all member of the 82nd.

ALL-TOURNEY SQUAD PICKS EIGHT LOCALS

Fort Benning's Doughboys extended their achievements a little beyond winning the Georgia State Semi Pro title at Thomaston last week by placing the majority of their first-string players on the tournament squad.

A total of eight Doughboys were given berths on the "dream" squad made up of outstanding players of the six teams entered in the meet.

The all-star selections were made by tourney officials for the sole purpose of honoring diamond-men who had made the best showings during the week-long meet, and the team will not be used as a squad in contesting any tilts.

Two members of the Benning mound staff, right-hander Ike Silcox ad portsider Ken Watts, were among the five pitchers chosen. Although Silcox's early-tournament performances had garnered him a spot on the mound delegation long before the close-out of the meet, the selection of Watts came only after he had chalked up a brilliant two-hit masterpiece against the Dunson Millers of LaGrange in the finals game.

Spectacular defensive playing gave Tom Gallagher of the Benningites the nod for the mask and mitt position.

With the exception of second-baseman Raymond King of Willingham mills of Macon, the all-star infield consists of Doughboys. Herb Lauve, who was cited as head and shoulders above all other first-sackers to perform on the Thomaston diamond, was chosen for the initial-bag assignment. Paul Bonair was named for the shortstop job, and Harold (Blondy) Burnett was selected as the outstanding third-base performer.

Two of the three outfielders nominated sported Doubboy toggery during the meet. They were Clyde (Woody) Burt, fleet-footed Benning rightfielder, and Joe Smith soldier centerfielder, who was the hitting sensation of the entire tourney.

Others chosen for the all-tourney squad were catcher Ocky Walls of Dixie mills; pitchers Don Watle of Thomaston, Leroy Wiggins of Dunson mills and Harold Cottle of Dixie mills; outfielder Joe Johnson of Dunson, and utilitymen Arthur Thomason of Dundee mills and Ed Turner of Thomaston.

Columbus Softball Squad Drops 10-2 Fray To ISD Nine

Last Thursday night proved to be a miserable one for the ColumbusAdvertisers, who dropped a 10 -2 Columbus city softball league tilt to Fort Benning's Infantry School detachment nine.

John Wyatt of the ISD team throughout the game, allowing the city squad only tw hits.

The evening's biggest thrill came in the last half of the fifth when, with catcher LeBlanc on second and shortstop Marshall O'Shaughnessy on first, second-sacker Saddler stepped into the batters' box and clouted the first ball pitched deep into right field for a four-bagger.

In their next effort to retain supremacy in the city softball league, the ISD lads will encounter the hot and cold Phenix City Merchants.

Locals Get Crack At Semi-Pro Title

Sixteen Squadman Make Pilgrimage

With a tenure as king of the Georgia and Alabama semi-Pro baseball circles secured for at least a year, Fort Benning Doughboys focused their attention on the achievement of nation-wide recognition by leaving Wednesday morning for the National Semi-Pro congress meet in Wichita, Kans.

Although they expect to arrive in Wichita, the capital of semi-pro baseball, today, the first encounter of the tourney for the Doughboys will come Saturday night. The official opening date for the tournament is Friday.

A total of 32 teams, each a champion of one of the regions designated by the semi-pro congress, will participate in the tourney, which is expected to continue until about Aug. 25. It is believed that the Doughboys will be th eonly soldier team entered in the meet. Two setbacks are necessary before any of the teams can be ousted from the classic.

Player Shuffle

In order to meet eligibility requirements, Manager Herb Bench of the Doubhboys has had to revise his team roster slightly.

Originally the Dough pilot had planned to bolster his pitching staff through the services of right-handers John Graves and Larry Hall, who were ruled ineligible for the Georgia state and Georgia-Alabama regional tourneys. However, the national congress rules require all players on the active list for the Wichita meet to have been on simliar status during the state and regional playoffs.

A stipulation which Bench is trying to take advantage of is that not more than five players on active lists of other teams during the state and egional play offs may be used by champion-ship teams. He is using this provision in trying to get the services f pitcher Harold Cottle, of LaGrange's Dixie mills, who turned in a bang-up job of relief chucking against the Benning squad during the Georgia tournament.

Button Stricken

Should Cottle be obtained for he national tourney, utility outfielder Len Carney, who was carried on the active list during the Georgia meet, but didn't get suited up because of injuries sustained in an automobile accident, probably will be taken off the roster until after the tournament.

Another player, pitcher Lou Button, also will be stricken from the Doughboy roster in order to comply with the 16-player maximum imposed by congress officials.

If the Cottle - Carney switch goes into effect, the mound staff for the Doughboys will include four right-handers and two south paws. The starboard twirlers are Ike Silcox, Ray Stem, Bob Cronin and Cottle, and the port-Watts.

Award Ceremony Slated Saturday

A posthumous Silver Star, an Italian Cross of War Merit and a Bronze Star medal will be awarded three soldiers at special ceremonies scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Saturday at Stilwell field.

The Silver Star will be awarded to Pfc. Haywood Morris, who lost his life in combat during September, 1944, and will be received by his father, James S. Morris, Phenix City.

The Bronze Star will be presented to Sgt. Dumont Wade, Company F, 325th Infantry regiment, while the Italian award will go to Maj. Tom. S. Phair, S-2, 325 th Infantry regiment.

According to the citation accompanying the medal, Pfc. Morris "displayed exceptional heroism and disregard for his own life to evacuate the injured and wounded. . and later forfeited his life in that campaign."

The action referred to in the citation occurred in the Moselle river sector in France from Sept. 7, 1944-Sept. 15, 1944, while

Building Program Gets Green Light

An appropriation of nearly $1,-500,000 has been authorized by the 80th Congress for the construction of permanent housing at Fort Benning, it has been announced by the Department of the Army.

According to Col. Thomas M. Brinkley, G-4 of the Infantry Center, the $1,466,050 appropriation will be used to erect 80 housing units for non-commissioned officers. The buildings will be "row type," and will accomodate from six to eight families each. Size of each building will depend on the architectural design and the ground allotted, Colonel Brinkley said.

Plans for the buildings will be drawn up by the Southeastern district engineers at Mobile, Ala., and they will also let the contracts as soon as they receive directions from the Department of the Army.

The new housing units, which will shelter 80 families, will be located between Ingersoll and Edwards avenues, west of the golf driving range. The cantonment buildings in this area are now being torn down, Colonel Brinkley declared.

Plans call for the units to be occupied by non-commissioned officers and their families only, according to a decision made recently by Maj Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander. The new units will alleviate to some extent the present difficult housing situation for these families.

An indication of the need for additional permanent housing of all types at Fort Benning can be garnered from figures issued by personnel of the billeting office recently. Present facilities at Fort Benning are sufficient to house only approximately 7 per cent of the married first three graders assigned here and approximately 13 per cent of the officers. The 80 new units will, therefore, alleviate in a small degree the housing shortage.

The shortage at Benning is typical of that throughout the army, according to reports. In a recent address, this was emphasized by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall. At that time he stated that "we cannot expect poeple to continue to live under wartime conditions at our army posts. Men were willing to be separated from their families during an emergency. They were willing to live in quarters far below the civilian standard for their relative scale of life. But it is too much to expect that to continue indefinitely."

The present program of construction for both the army and air force calls for the spending of $151,000,000 of this total $54,000,000 will be used for family housing. This, Mr. Royall said, will be less than two-fifths of one per cent of civilian housing construction planned for the next year. He pointed out that every unit built for service personnel will be another unit available for civilians. Also under th efamily housing phase of the program, conversion of temporary structures into living quarters will be conducted on a limited scale to meet part of needs.

Both the army and the air force have pointed out that the lack of suitable housing has been a major cause for the low percentages of reenlistments for military service. The planned program for both departments calls for the construction of housing units for about 3,500 families. Construction will be carried on only at a relatively small number of important permanent posts and installations, Mr. Royall added.

Benning Scheduled To Get Helicopters

Six helicopters soon will be added to the fleet of flying machines at Fort Benning, according to information received by the Light Aviation section of the Infantry Center.

The Model YR-13s, manufactured by Bell Aircraft, are scheduled for delivery here at the end of this month or the first few days of September.

The still novel planes will be used for observation and liaison purposes as are the cub planes now at Benning. They have advantages over the standard planes in that they are more maneuverable and require less space for landings and take offs. They are capable of rising straight up in the air on a takeoff, hovering almost stationary over an area and then landing on a very small plot of ground.

Pilots of the "flying mixmasters" will be present pilots of the cub planes. Several of them are now at San Marcus, Texas, taking training at the school there as helicopter pilots.

Post Dialogue

Can a man learn anything in one year in the army that will be of benefit to him in later life, let alone be of benefit to the army. That's a question that has been posed in the minds of many of the older soldiers at Fort Benning since legislation was recently enacted that 18-year-old men could enlist for one year.

The question of whether in one year they can learn anything that will be of benefit to the army has, of course, already been decided; the youths will definitely be a valuable adjunct to the service, for, otherwise, they wouldn't have been accepted for the short term.

Of what value one year's training will be to them later on in life is a question that can and does arouse discussion, however. To find out what some of the older and more experienced men on the post think about the subject, this week The Bayonet's enquiring reporter asked eight Benningites the following question: "In view of your own tour of duty, what experience will an 18-year-old boy in for one year get out of the army that will be of most benefit to him from now on."

* * *

Lawson Thrasher

1st. Sgt. Billie C. Lawson, Company E, Airborne battalion, with eight years service: "Personally, I don't think he'll get any experience that will do him any good in later years. He'll get an overall picture of the army, but it won't be of any value to him. That's because he won't have enough time. But if he'll keep at the task long enough he'll learn to adjust and get a special-

Sgt. Willard D. Thrasher, Company E, Airborne battalion, with eight years service "He'll learn discipline. In one year's time he will learn that in 90 per cent of the cases throughout life he will have to learn how to take orders instead of giving them. He'll have an outlook that will help him to get along and hold a job in civilian life. But in one year he'll not have time to learn a trade or specialty."

Cpl. Billy T. McGough, Company C., Infantry School detachment, with six years service: "About the most important thing he'll get in the one year tour will be the development of a sense of responsibility. He'll also learn to be more tolerant and more patient. He'll learn not to fly off the handle, but to take a little time and think things over a bit, to take things in due course. And he will learn how to get along with people."

McGough Vann

Pvt. Elbert L. Vann, Squadron A, 319 Air Force Base unit, Lawson field, with two and one-half year'sservice: "He'll learn how to get along with other people and how they live in other places. That will go for soldiers as well as the civilians he will meet away from home. He'll learn how to work with people and that will help him in his civilian job. He'll learn how to take care of himself from a physical and hygienic point of view. He'll learn something about self-responsibility."

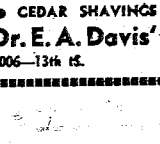
1st. Lt. James E. Wheeless, signal office with 14 year's service: "The experience of associating with strangers will teach him to get along in later life in whatever undertaking he chooses for his career. The discipline he'll receive will help him greatly as he grows older in that it will help him develop his sense of resonsibility. He will know that he must do any job that he is assigned to do."

Wheeless Pinckney

Maj. Jerome E. Pinckney, ordnance office, Headquarters, 31st Infantry division, with 11 year's serice: "Most of all, he'll learn to act on his own initiative. He'll mature and begin to get an idea of what he wants to do, what type of work, generally, he wants to get into. The associations and contacts he'll get from being in various sections of the country will be very beneficial. He'll learn something about the U.S. as a whole. He'll get as much from the associations he'll make as he might get in two years of college, for he won't be quite as sheltered."

Cpl. Earl J. Farnham, 3440th Army Service unit, with seven year's service: "He'll learn to take orders and develop a sense of self - discipline. He should learn more than the average 18-year - old about how to handle money. He'll learn how to make friends and how to get along with people he might normally never contact or associate with in civilian life. He'll develop himself physically from the field work he'll be doing. He should develop a sense of independence so that he won't have to depend so much on his parents when he gets out of the army."

A private was counting his pay by wetting his fingers and leafing through the bills.



"Hey, that money is full of germs," buddy shouted.

"Nuts," replied a private. "No germ could live on my salary."

Why worry about getting old? you are dead.

Unit Commanders Now Have More Authority To Promote Enlisted Men

Modification in th army's career guidance plan has given more promoting authority than before to company and detachment commanders, according to interpretations of Department of the army circular 202 whcih gives the latest information on the plan.

Although the food service career field is the only one actually in effect at present, promotions throughout the army are now based on the above mentioned circular and army regulation 615-5.

Training division commanders and company commanders may promote recruits to the grade of private after they complete 13 weeks of basic training. Men whose basic training time is less than that will have to wait until they have been in service at least four months. Promotion, however, is in no case, "automatic." The company or similar commander must be satisfied that the soldier is qualified for promotion to the sixth pay grade, and is in a promotable status. The latter means that the individual is carried on the morning report as present for duty, present but not for duty when sick in quarters, absent sick, absent with leave or absent on temporary duty or detached service.

Company or similar commanders may promote a man to grade five, private first class, after the man has satisfactorily served 12 months in grade six even if there is no vacancy in the unit. Promotions to this grade may be made at any time to fill a unit vacancy without regard to the man's time in grade. Promotion to private first class may also be made after the soldier has served a total of 16 months even if he has not served a full year as a private. The present authority granted company commanders to make promitions to the fifth grade is a recent change in the original promotional setup as announced more than a year ago. At that time he was not authorized to promote men to this rank.
