Beginning Sept. 1, separate battalions or regiments have authority to promote men to the fourth grade, even if there is no vacancy in the unit, if the man has served 12 months in grade five and has a total of 30 months in service. If there is a vacancy, however, promotions may be made without regard to time in grade. Promotions made without regard to unit position vacancies may be effected only when the soldier holds an MOS appropriate to grade four, which is corporal, has had that MOS designated as primary under Circular 202, and is properly assigned and not in a pipeline status.

Promotions to the first three grades may also be made by separate battalions and regiments only if there is a vacancy in the unit.

Time in grade is computed as all time spent in active federal service when that service has been continuous in the same grade or when there has been a break in service through honorable discharge provided the soldier reenlists within 90 days after the discharge. This does not include time lost under Article of War 107.

Strictly Editorializing

IN TALKING RECENTLY with Benningites who use the libraries here, we noted consternation over the failure of people who borrow books to return them on time. It seems, according to those with whom we spoke, that, despite the fact that books ar borrowed on a time limit many have the idea that these books may be kept for as long as the person desires. This prevents others from getting a chance to read the book, and is certainly unfair to other members of garrison.

One thing which makes such a practice so ungentlemanly is that, as a rule, the books which are kept out overtime are the new books. These new books have a time limit of seven days, which should be enough time. If a person knows he is not going to be able to complete the reading of a particular book, he shouldn't check it out. By the same token, if, after checking it out, he finds that he will be unable to read the book, he should immediately return the book, and wait until he does have time.

FUNDS ALLOTTED the libraries do not permit the purchase of unlimited copies of each new book. It is, therefore, necessary that fair play be exercised in checking books out. Those who make use of the libraries should be willing to cooperate with others in order to give those others an equal opportunity.

Let's be fair. Return borrowed books promptly and in good condition. No one likes to be kept waiting for an unwarranted length of time.

Good Advice

Last week The Bayonet's enquiring photographer asked a very timely question of a group of Fort Benning soldiers, regarding the best advice they could give to the new soldier, particularly the 18-year-olds. We found the advice quite sound, and, provided the recruit follows the advice of the old-timers, we feel sure that he will find the Army exceedingly compatible.

While the question posed was primarily asked to ascertain what the typical Benning veteran considered the best way for a recruit to get along as a soldier, we feel that the advice is equally sound for all soldiers, be they frist week recruits or thirty-year veterans.

Basically, all the answers were the same although the wording was slightly different for each person questioned. Simply, it was this: "Keep your nose clean." Or in more polite language, abide by all the rules and keep out of bad company.

Not one of us is infallible. At times—and this is true regardless of one's station in life—a person is bound to be lured by temptation; and the real test of his character comes when he is able to overcome this temptation. Perhaps, too, we have a tendency at times to resent authority from those above us in rank, but we must always remember that the person who outranks us got that rank because he was deemed capable and deserving by his commander. It is, therefore, obvious that we must respect his judgment as well as his rank; and since we must do this, it stands to reason that we must do as he says to avoid trouble.

Everyone, of course, has learned the comparison between taking orders in civilian life and taking orders in the Army. Some, unfortunately, have always taken this with a "yah, yah" attitude, and have warped it to such an extent that it is posible to believe that as a civilion one can do just as he pleases. Although there is no punishment, such as restrictions to post, as a civilian, there is certainly sufficient punishment in other ways.

In the first place, the least amount of insubordination as a civilion can result in the loss of one's job, not to be confused with being placed in another position as oftentimes happens in the Army under similar circumstances, but an outright discharge from the firm in which the individual is employed. Then comes the business of seeking other employment. Nor is this an easy task if onehas been discharged for an offense against his employer. As is known, each employer requires references from past employers; and if the individual is unable to produce such references, it is seldom he can be employed in a renumeratiy position.

Wearing of the uniform is another "complaint" often heard. Some say it is silly to be forced to wear only prescribed articles of clothing. Here again it is well to compare the wearing of the uniform with the wearing of civilian clothing. On the job, a civilian must also be neat and wear what could be termed a uniform—that is, dress as his employer thinks he should, which, except in the case of factory workers, mechanics and the like, includes a tie, sleeves rolled down, freshly pressed trousers, cleanshaven face and shiny shos. That is just as much a part of his job as his attention to duty. If he doesn't adibed by these basic tenets of good grooming, we doubt seriously, he could ever advance to a higher position. Fact is, he can be fired for failure to dress neatly.

So, in our opinion, the advice the old-timers give to the 18-year-olds is good advice to all soldiers. If we keep our noses clean, we are bound to have a happier and more successful Army career.

Chaplain's Corner..

OUR CITIZEN ARMY IN THE RELIGION FIELD

BY

Chaplain L. D. Elliott

Hailing from the Magnolia and Goldenrod states came the 31st Infantry division to encamp in the Harmony Church area of Fort Benning. Warbitten veterans, college graduates, high school students, mechanics and agriculturalists are resting side by side in their billets at night after the concentrated field training exercises of the day. The chaplains are mingling with them in their off-duty hours on the range and associating with the men in their living quarters to find out the latest "gripes" and personal problems.

The morale is high, according to the division chaplain, Lt. Col. E. D. Elliott who hails from Greenville, Mississippi. There are six chaplains on duty with the 31st division and because of the fine cooperation and helpfulness of the infantry Center chaplain, two comfortable chapels and chaplain's supplies are being utilized. The assistant division chaplain reports that religious coverage for all troops in the area is assured with 76 per cent of the command being Protestant and covered by four chaplains; 23 per cent covered by two Catholic chaplains; the remaining one per cent being Jewish. The last named group is furnished transportation on Friday evenings to attend Jewish services at the TIC Chapel.

Reports from the chaplains associated with the units indicate that the men are of high moral caliber, and attendance at all church services is excellent. The two Catholic chaplains, Chaplain Patrick Martin and Chaplain Owen Conaughton are conducting daily masses at 5 p.m., and last Wednesday 21 men came through the rain to prayer service at chapel No. 5.

In spite of the crowded training program of the 31st division, officers and men are taking time out to think about matters of a spiritual nature. The chaplains are all gratified at the response of the personnel to the religious side of their natures.

THE LOVE DONE

Evelyn Waugh, who is perhaps best known for his "Brideshead Revisited", goes to some trouble to warn his readers that his latest book, "The Loved One" which he describes as "a little nightmare produced by the unaccustomed high living of a brief visit to Hollywood" is not for the squeamish. Whether or not we are squeamish, we find the novel not so much horrifying or even gruesome, as just insanely boring.

"The Loved One", as we understand it, is a satire of America and Hollywood in general, of Hollywood morticians in particular. The author apparently thinks even less of Hollywoodians then he does of other Americans, which means that his opinion is something under zero. As a satirist Waugh has been compared to Swift, but the latter, even in his wildest extravaganzas, makes his characters, his Lilliputians and Yahoos, somehow believable. There probably isn't a situation in "The Loved One" that isn't possible, yet every individual is either ridiculous or phony.

As far as we can tell, "The Loved One" is supposed to be humorous. Perhaps we have a perverted sense of humor, but we find nothing particularly hilarious about the romance of Aimee Thanatogenos, the crematorium cosmetician (she fixes the hair, skin and nails of th e"loved ones" before the funeral) and Dennis Barlow, the British poet, who must waste his talent in a cat and dog cemetery. We don't laugh even when Mr. Joyboy, the head mortician, expresses his love for his assistant by changing the expression on the faces of the corpses he had just embalmed. Nor do we split our sides when Mr. Joyboy, following the advise of a fake lovelorn adviser, take cyanide in Mr. Joyboy's office, and is later cremated in the Happier Hunting Home crematorium, which is usually reserved for cats and dogs.

Americans do, no doubt, have over-elaborate funerals; they probably spend a great deal of money trying to make their "loved ones" look natural before burial. We've probably lived in America too long to see anything humorous about it.

"The Loved One" is easy to read, and is fortunately quite short. In spite of the author's warning, we doubt if any reader, unless he is unduly sensitive, will find his stomach upset by the novel's preoccupation with the cadaver. We do know that Waugh can write better books than this; we doubt if even he could write a worse one. And we can think of much better ways for the reader to waste his time than in reading "The Loved One".

"What kind of a guy is the new CO?"

"Oh, at first you don't like him much, but when you get to know him you hate him."

Your Red Cross

So much has been written about the Red Cross blood bank that I hesitate to write further about it. Yet, I have been interested quite recently in how little is known about the origin of the Red Cross blood program.

Actually, it is of great interest to know that the idea of the blood bank was born in Georgia.

In 1937 a 21-year-old mother literally bled to death in the University hospital in Augusta, Georgia, in spite of the scores of friends who were anxious to give transfusions, but their blood failed to match.

The next day the doctor in charge of this tragic case remarked to Pat H. Rice, chairman of the Augusta, Georgia Red Cross chapter, the great number of patients who died for lack of blood when somewhere, perhaps close by, there were many who would gladly give their blood if they only knew.

Mr. Rice immediately rallied a little group of doctors and laymen, and set up the world's first blood donor project.

From this group, a matter of ten years ago, grew the wartime plasma mission credited in World War I and the vast peace time blood program presently being operated by the Red Cross.

Dr. Ross M. McIntyre, retired surgeon general of the navy and President Roosevelt's personal physician and who now heads the national blood program, stated that the world owed a tremendous debt to Mr. Rice for what he started in 1937, as it has proved to be the greatest boon to health in history.

Mr. Rice felt that it was a terrible thing for patients needing blood to be required to pay $25-$50 a pint. He called for volunteers, and, within few days, 525 had registered. These files were turned over to the hospital. It was not long before the first call came, and Pat Rice set the example for the rest of the city by being the first volunteer.

Since that time hundreds of others in Augusta have given transfusions, and the Red Cross chapter in that city still has a big scrap book, clippings and letters praising its work back in days when it was the nation's only donor blood project.

And what about Pat Rice? Well, he has continued through the years to donate his blood. He cannot remember how many transfusions he has given over the years, for he quit counting after the 30th. He has not been without his personal tragedies, for it is ironical that of all the patients to whom he has given blood, only two have died. One was his brother, and the other was his own three-day-old baby.

Indeed, the whole world is indebted to this one man for having such a splendid, unselfish thought back in 1937.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

THE WALLS OF JERICHO (drama) with Cornel Wilde, Linda Darnell, Anne Baxter and Kirk Douglas. A woman, who is fed up with living in a small town, creates plenty of gossip and scandal as she schemes to get into high society in a big city. Recommended for adult.

FUEDIN', FUSSIN' AND A-FIGHTIN' (comedy) with Donald O'Connor, Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride. Donald O'Connor, a fleet-footed, fast-talkin patent medicine salesman, arrives in town in time to get caught in the annual footrace. Recommended for family.

RACHEL AND THE STRANGER (comedy-drama) with Loretta Young, William Holden and Robert Mitchum. This story moves from comedy to drama—wife-buying to Indian fighting—in its portrayal of life in early America. Recommended for family.

ARCH OF TRIUMPH (drama) with Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer and Charles Laughton. Paris of 1938 is the locale of this tale of love and vengeance as it influenced the lives of a girl of dubious past and a refugee surgeon of uncertain future. Recommended for adult.

SO THIS IS NEW YORK (comedy) with Henry Morgan, Rudy Vallee and Virginia Grey. When Henry Morgan takes his sister-in-law to New York to find her a rich husband, he stirs up plenty of trouble but little romance when shysters learn she has $30,000 Recommended for family.

Raymond Heads Truck Battalion

Maj. Frank Raymond, formerly executive officer of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, has assumed temporary command of the unit, officials said this week.

At the same time it was also announced that a new battalion commander is expected to arrive here shortly.

Major Raymond is a veteran of over 24 years service, dating back to 1924 when he entered the national guard as a private. In 1929, he was commissioned a second lieutenant, and in 1939 rose to the rank of captain.

During the war, he participated in several engagements as commanding officer of Company E, 132nd Infantry. Following the assaults on Mount Austin, Esparange and Guadalcanal, he returned to the U. S. for recuperation leave prior to assignment in Germany.

While in Germany, he took part in the battle for the Rhineland, and was later placed in command of the 106th Replacement depot. Meanwhile, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

Doughboys Seize Tiara For Tourney

Ike Silcox Chucks One-Hit Triumph Over Alabamans

Selection of the Fort Benning Doughboys as representatives for the Georgia-Alabama region in the National Semi-Pro baseball tourney at Wichita, Kans., came after they had edged the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, Ala., in last week's playoff series between the champ teams of the two states.

After shading the Millers 5-4 in Columbus' Golden park to open the three - ga.Doughboys by the Millers in a tilt on Siluria soil, but bounced back to take the rubber game of the series 4-0.

Suffering their first setback of the 1948 campaign in the middle game of the series with the Alabama champs, the Doughboys came unglued in the base-running department, a phase in which they had been unusually strong all season. The hapless Bennigites nicked pitcher Luke Smith of the Millers for 1 safeties, but were able to push across only two counters.

The hard-luck lad of the game was southpaw pitcher Watts of the Doughs, who had twirled almost flawless ball for five innings before being blasted off the slab by Miller uprisings in the sixth and seventh frames. During the first five stanas of the game, the Dough portsider gave up only two harless bingles, both in the initial frame.

Taking a brief fling at the lead, the Doughmen chalked up the first two tallies of the game in the top half of the sixth on singles by Bob Kinard, Woody Burt, Harold (Blondy) Burnett and Herb Lauve. However, the Millers promptly threw the contest into another deadlock by scoring twice in their half of the inning.

After the first Miller batter in the inning, shortstop Slick McGinnis, was hit by a pitched doubled to send him home with the first run of the game for the home squad. Second-sacker Tommy Cutcliff then rifled a single to right to bring Talley across the plate.

The Alabamans gained a decided advantage when, after blanking the Doughs in the first of the seventh, they scored three times before Dough relief twirler Ray Stem could put out the fire which two Benning misplays and a pair of base knocks had kindled.

The big blow of the game, however, came in the last of the eighth when Cutcliff, whose hitting in the first game of the tourney had not been very impressive, smacked a terrific double against the left - center field fence to unload the bags, and give the Millers another trio of counters.

Although he matched blows WITH Cutliff, McGinnis' two base knocks failed to net the youghful second-baseman's wallops batted in four.

In the series finale, however, the Doughboys regained some of their poise on the base paths as right-hander Ike Silcox dealt the Millers a 4-0 whitewashing to clinch the regional toga for Benning.

Turning in his most brilliant mound performance of the season in the close-out tiff of the playoff, Silcox yielded the Millers only one safe knock, a seventh-inning double by McGinnis, and whiffed six Alabama batsmen.

In a desperate effort to salvage the game and get to make the trek to Wichita, the Alabamans employed four hurlers with starter Guy Morton getting charged with the dereat. Other moundsmen used by Manager Hank Spires of th eMillers were Red Amos, Speed Davis and Ed Guy.

After going scoreless for the first two innings of the game, it appeared that two more Doughboys might be stranded in the third until Joe Smith came through with a long two-bagger which provided the Benning eam with its first two scores.

The first two Dough batters of the inning, catcher Tom Gallagher and pitcher Silcox, nicked Morton for singles, but the next two stickmen, Paul Bonair and Bob Kinard, went down in order before Smith cleared the sacks with his blast.

Many Respond To Bullet Grid Practice Drills

For the last two weeks, approximately 100 pigskin hopefuls have been going through daily rigorous training sessions in quest of a berth on the 1948 Bullet football eleven.

With Thomas L. Dalton, a former all-American wingman at Tuskegee Institute, at the helm, this year's array of husky youngsters show promise of being one of the best teams produced in the history of the 25th Infantry regiment.

From the huge crop of men, ranging in age from 18 to 25, Coach Delton is confident of picking at least two well -balanced, fast and aggressive elevens, which will be capable of waging a winning battle against their opponents. The majority of the candidates are fresh out of high school, and Coach Delton believes that prospects for a great season are surprisingly bright.

Members of last year's eleven, who have reported looking as great as ever, are Matthew Batie, Walt Brown, Jeff White, Adell Kennedy, Bill Beasley, Freddie Hamer, Horace Northcutt, Bill Whitney, Henry Sanderson, Bob Murphy, Hudie Langston, Leroy Garvin and Harry Arnett.

POST GOLFING FOURSOME DEPARTS FOR ARMY MEET

A quartet of Fort Benning's top-notch golfers left early this week for Fort Lewis, Wash., where they will represent the Third army in the forthcoming all-army links meet.

Only one of four, however, will be classed as a member of the Third army's four-man squad. He is John Henion, who advanced to the semi-finals of the recent army ares meet staged on the couse of Oliver General hospital in Augusta. His semi-finals loss was to Clyde (red) Boyd of the Georgia Military district, who is stationed in Augusta.

The trio of alternates includes local officer champion Devert Moore, who captured the first flight title in the Third army meet; Emil P. Eschenburg, who was beaten by Moore in the first-flight semi-finals of the Augusta tourney, and Matt C. C. Bristol, who got as far as the championship-bracket quarter-finals of the area classic.

The Third army delegation to the all-army tourney will include the four-man team, a foursome of alternates, a two-man senior flight squad and a pair of alternates for the division for golfers over 50 years old.

Should any of the Third army crew get through the all-army meet, they will be chosen to represent the army in the inter-service matches at Pebble Beach, Calif., during the latter part of August.

AQUATIC ASPIRANT . . . Emilio Cordon of Headquarters company, First battalion, 325th Infantry regiment, who placed first in three of the eight events comprising the post swimming meet at Russ pool recently, will be trying to duplicate his feats in the Third army pool meet, which starts Friday at Fort McPherson, Ga. In the local meet, Cordon captured firsts in the 100-yard backstroke, the 100-yard breaststroke and the 150-yard individual medley.

The first three major league batters to get 100 hits in this season, in order, were Stan Musial of the Cardinals, Richie Ashburn of the Phillies and Ted Williams of the Red Sox.

More deer were killed last year in Pennsylvania than in any other state.

The average player on the 1948 Cincinnati Red squad is six feet, one inch tall, weighs 188 pounds, and is 29 years old.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Although we don't believe in arguing too vigorously about the competency of umpires, some of the decisions rendered by a blue-clad official at Siluria, Ala., in the recent regional semi-pro playoff series between Fort Benning's Doughboys and the Buck Creek Millers have started us to thinking that the post's arbiters this year could have been much worse.

The oficial under discussion apparenty wasn't a rank beginner for he was reported to be the chief umpire of the Birmingham City league, but some of the plays he called made him look like a person who had never seen a ball game.

Before the wrong idea is conveyed, let us say that we're not trying to pin the fact that Fort Benning lost the game which the umpire worked on poor officiating. The gentleman was perfectly impartial. He called just as many stinkers for the Millers as he did for the Doughboys.

Both teams probably are grateful that his decisions were limited to the scope of balls and strikes, and delving into technical verdicts wasn't necessary.

During the post intra-mural baseball season, we heard several slams about the umpiring at Gowdy field, but we failed to see anything that could be compared to the job done by the Alabama arbiter last week. As a matter of fact, the entire season here produced only one umpiring task which we would classify as mediocre. And, even that job was excusable. The man who called the balls and strikes for the game was grabbed off in a pinch, and explained to the party drafting him for the job that he wasn't familiar with the latest changes in baseball regulations.

On the other hand, the decision on which the Benning umpire fouled up was one of a highly technical nature, and the poor verdicts handed down by the Alabama official comprised only balls and strikes. Apparently the criteria used by the arbiter in calling balls and strikes was that any pitch between the top of the batter's head and the ground was a strike so long as it came straight across the plate, but that any toss which failed to exactly split the platter was a ball.

The big question in the minds of followers of the Doughboy diamond nine has to do with how they will stack up against other regional semi-pro champs of the nation in the national tourney which begins Friday at Wichita, Kans.

Since the calibre of other teams in the meet is unknown to us, we can only surmise that it will take a better brand of ball than is produced in most of the Class B professional circuits of the country to blast the Doughboys from the running. In all of their tilts this season, the Doughs have played the kind of ball that is equal to, if not better than, typical Class B basehall.

One of the things that Manager Herb Bench and his charges will have to take into consideration is that the teams entered in the national meet have played more heads-up ball than any of the Doughboy opponents this season or they wouldn't be in Wichita for the tournament.

During the early stages of their 1948 season, the Doughs have been able to mop up on some daring base-running, much of which involved unnecessary chances. However, the stiffer competition they will run up against in the national tourney undoubtedly will make hazardous playing on the base paths impracticable.

On several occasions this year, the Doughs could have a more impressive showing by being more conservative in base-running, but the daring feats have all been against teams which offered the Benningites little competition. In the only case so far where the chips have been down, the Doughmen stuck to playing it safe, and they succeeded in blasting the Buck Creek mills team 4-0 for the regional toga.

Taking a gander at the Doughboy club as a whole, we submit that it is exceptionally well-balanced. The team's encounters so far this year have enabled Manager Bench and Assistant Manager James L. Walker to put the power in the batting lineup in the correct places, and the acquisition of Collis (Lefty) Lehner has added considerable strength to the pitching staff.

The mound crew which Bench selected for the Wichita trip includes two left - handed and two right - handed lief ptwirler. Lehner's colleague in the southpaw department is Ken Watts, and the right-handed starters are Ike Silcox and Bob Cronin. Ray Stem probably will be used exclusively for relief jobs.

Although he is a shortstop by trade, Paul Bonair also can double with the mask and mitt, and may be called upon during the tourney to relieve Tom Gallagher behind the plate. Should Bonair move to the receiving spot, his shortstop assignment will go to second-baseman Bob Kinard, and Harold (Blondy) Burnett will move over from third to fill up the gap at the keystone bag. Utility infielder Ralph Terry then will be sent to the hot corner to take over Burnett's regular assignment.

Local Swim Set Departs For Atlanta

Fort Benning's aspirants for a Third army swimming title left Monday morning for Atlanta, Ga., where they will participate in the two-day meet which gets under way Friday at Fort McPherson.

The Benning crew consists of 12 anksters, and is headed by Coach Dayton L. Warren, who will enter the free-style and medley swimming events of the tournament. Warren is to be assisted by Homer R. Pope, who is going as team trainer, but will not participate in any other events.

The contestants as well as the team pilot and trainer were chosen following the post meet in Russ pool last week.

Many of Fort Benning's hopes for team laurels in the Third army meet will be staked on Emilio Cordon, who captured three first places in the post tourney. In the local meet, Cordon won the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 1:35.2 minutes repeated in the 100-yard breaststroke with a clocking of 1:30 minutes, and recorded a time of 2:26 minutes to capture top honors in the 150-yard individual medley.

Warren also was a big winner in the post meet, capturing two firsts and a second. His time of 7:31 minutes for the 440-yard free-style set the pace in that event, and he captured the 100-yard free-style with a time of 1:02 minutes. He finished second to Cordon in the medley, which consisted of equal distances of breaststroke, backstroke and free-style swimming.

Also included on the team roster is another two-event winner in the Benning meet, William Dew. Displaying excellent springboard style, Dew tallied 110 points to walk away with the diving phase of the contest, and scored a first in the 50-yard free-style swim, which he finished in 29.2 seconds.

Edward Stiles, who swam the 200-yard free-style event of the local meet in 2:09 minutes to chalk up the other first in the eight - phase classic, will be among the delegates to the army area tourney.

Other swimmers who will compete in the meet at McPherson are Alphonse Aksterowicz, Edgar B. Valentine, Donald E. Hinckley, Jack F. Hood Sr., George Ruppich, Wallace Thompson and Robert A. Morton.

Although the program for the tourney hasn't been announced here, it was expected that it will comprise the same events which were staged in the post meet. Candidates will be vying for both individual and team honors.

Red Softball Crew Nips Paratroopers

Scoring seven times in their half of the first inning, the Infantry School detachment Reds copped an 11-1 decision from the Airborne battalion nine on the ISD diamond last Thursday.

Pitching a strikeout brand of ball throughout the game, Warren Paulk of the ISD was credited with the triumph.

The win over the parachute nine placed the Reds in a convenient spot to capture the second-half title for the post.

GORDON CUP REVIVED

Golf Handicap Tourney Slated For Post Layout

BAYONET EDITH HENRY ...

To only the oldest of Fort Benning's golfing oldtimers will the mention of the Gordon cup strike a familiar note.

No doubt many of the linksmen who remember the cup and the conditions under which it was awarded have been wondering what happened to it. And, members of the post Officers' club golfing committee also have been somewhat puzzled as to why the trophy suddenly went into retirement over 10 years ago.

Now, however, the award has been brought out of concealment, facts of the tradition surrounding its presentation have been unearthed, and the cup again will be the booty in a semi-annual handicap tourney to be played over the layout of the Officers' course during late August and early September.

Although documents containing the data about the award are believed to have been accidentally destroyed, some of the golfing oldsters of the post have recalled the facts, and the links committee has decided to revive the semi-annual handicap play for the trophy under exactly the same conditions which it was first instituted shortly after 1920.

The cup was contributed to the post Officers' club by a group of a representative of the golf committee pointed out, only officer and warrant officer personnel stationed at Fort Benning will be eligible for the forthcoming tournament.

Qualification rounds for the tourney will consist of 36 holes to be played on Aug. 28 and 29, and three days of match play will begin on Sept. 4. Prior to the qualification rounds, however, players will be required to turn in at least five 18-hole scores so that handicaps may be more accurately adjusted.

Should the candidates be unable to play five rounds before the outset of the meet, handicap adjustments will be made by Columbus business men in the early 1920's, and was named in honor of Maj. Gen. Walter H. Gordon, the third commandant of the Infantry school. In donating the trophy, the business men stipulated that it was to be presented to thw winner of a semi-annual handicap tourney for officers of the post only. Therefore, the tournament committee.

Following the qualifying rounds of the tourney, contestants will be arranged in flights of 16 golfers each for the match play. The Gordon cup will be awarded for a six-month tenure to the golfer winning the championship flight of the meet, but other flight victors also will receive awards.

During the qualifying period, the linksters will be given benefit of their full handicaps, but the stroke advantage will be decreased to three-fourths for the match play phase of the meet.

Henceforth, Lt. Col. Charles W. Davis, chairman of the tournament division of the golf committee, pointed out, it will be the policy of the club to conduct at least two minor tourneys each month except the months in which major meets are scheduled.

Jack Torrance, whose 14-year-old shot put record was broken by Michigan's Charley Fonville, weighed 57 pounds more than Fonville.

Although a trophy will be presented to the top team in the league at the close of the season, the campaign will have no effect on the post championship for 1948, which is held by the Infantry School detachment Profs.

League games will be played nightly on Gowdy field with the exception of Saturday and Sunday. All teams will be inactive on Saturday, and an afternoon tilt will be staged each Sunday at 2 p.m. Time for all night games will be 8 p. m.

Four of the six teams in the race will be kicking up the dust of Gowdy field for the first time this year, while two of the sextet of squads were in both halves of the scramble for the post championship.

New teams entered in the intra-mural campaign represent the First and Second battalions of the 325th Infantry regiment, the Second battalion of the 25th Infantry regiment, and the 756th Tank battalion. Teams which are coming back for another try at an intra-post title are from the 3440th Army Service unit and the 204th Transportation Truck battalion.

Slated to perform at Gowdy field tonight are the two battalions of the 325th Infantry regiment, and the 756th Tankers will clash with the army service unit nine under the lights Friday.

Sunday afternoon's fray will be between the Second battalion of the 325th and the Second battalion of the 25th Infantry regiment. A Monday night game will bring together the 325th Infantry's First battalion and the 204th Truckers, and the Second battalion of the 325th will stage a tussle with the 3440th lads on Tuesday night.

A tiff between the Tankers and the First battalion of the 325th will be waged on Wednesday night.

THANKS FELLOWS . . . Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry center commander, expresses his gratitude to catcher Tom Gallagher and pitcher Ike Silcox for helping the Fort Benning Doughboys capture the state and Georgia-Alabama regional semi-pro diamond titles. The regional trophy is being held by Gallagher, and Silcox is shown with the state semi-pro award. Silcox and Gallagher were the winning batteries in the decisive game of the regional playoff series with the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, Ala.

Bullets Shellac Artillery Squad

BY BOB PHILLIPS

After being washed out in four scheduled diamond outings earlier in the week, the rain-idled Bullets came near annihilating the 319th Field Artillery at Watson field Friday afternoon.

In the sixth inning of the game, the big bats of the Bulletmen blasted two artillery hurlers for eight hits and 13 runs, which resulted in a lop-sided 20-8 triumph. Led by Burke and Lemelle, who collected two hits each in the uproarious frame, every Bullet except Lew Davis paraded to the plate twice.

Reasonably sure of victory with their hefty lead, the Bullets strung the opposition along for the rest of the way.

After rationing three hits in five and one-half innings pitched the Bullets' ace hurler, Lefty Conerly, took over first - base chores, and Hardy went to the mound. The rangy converted outfielder faced three batters, and that was all for the artillerymen in the sixth.

The Bullets, apparently seized by a stroke of generosity, refused their bats in the seventh, and allowed the artillerymen to keep on swinging. This hospitality, however, did little good as Kittler singled and struggled home on consecutive errors by the Bullets to give the losers a lone run.

Two blazing triples by Gene Thomas, and a duo of two-basers by Nick Nichols highlighted the one-sided affair. Other Bulletmen starring with the willow were Willie Wise, who collected three for five, and Conerly, who aided his three-hit mound performance by blasting two hits in four trips to the plate, and scoring three of the Bullets' runs.

Byars, Daniels and Kittler scored for the 319th squad. Kittler also accounted for two of the losers' four hits. Mihok and Daniels teamed on the mound against the powerful Bullets, only to be bombarded for 14 safe blows.

A young man had been courting a young lady for some time, and desired to buy her a birthday present. He asked her what she most desired and she told him that she desired womething for her neck.

When it came to buying the present he took her advice and bought her a cake of soap.

DOUGHS WHITEWASH SILVERTOWN SQUAD

Playing their last game on home soil before embarking for the National Semi-Pro diamond tourney in Wichita, Kans., this week, the Fort Benning Doughboys, whitewashed the Silvertown Millers of Thomaston, Ga., 7-0 at Gowdy field Saturday night.

The fray with the Millers was a makeup game for the first of a two-tilt set slated for early in the season. Both games of the series were postponed because of inclement weather.

Collis (Lefty) Lehner, making his first start of the season for the Doughs, went the route on the hill, and was credited with handcuffing the Silvertown club on six hits. Right-hander Troy Duncan of the Millers hurled the complete game for the visitors, and was tagged with the loss.

The Doughs executed three double plays to make their defensive game the outstanding feature of the contest. One of the twin killings came within a hair's breadth of being a triple out as second-baseman Ernie Barrett of the Millers slid into third base just ahead of a throw from first-sacker Herb Lauve of the Doughs. Barrett, who had singled to start the fifth stanze for the visitors, went to second when catcher Penny Webb drew a base on balls, and circled third when shortstop Paul Bonair, second-baseman Bob Kinard and Lauve teamed to concoct a double-retirement plan for Webb and pitcher Duncan. Lauve then rifled a surprise throw to third-sacker Harold (Blondy) Burnett which forced Barrett to slide head first back into the bag.

The first tally of the game came in the initial canto when Bonair led off with a stroll to first, and was sacrificed to second by right-fielder Woody Burt. Kinard was credited with batting in the counter with a sharp single to left.

In the home half of the third, the Benningites bunched three successive base-knocks to notch another pair of runs. Bonair, who had singled to start the inning, advanced on a one-bagger by Burt, and scored when Kinard lined a double down the right-field foul line. Burt stopped at third on Kinard's blast, but came in when Duncan uncorked a wild toss.

The Benning squad was dormant at the plate in the fourth frame, but resumed its scoring with a trio of counters in the fifth. Burt drew a free pass to first to start the inning, and quickly moved around to third by stealing second and going to third on an overthrow by catcher Webb of the Millers. He trotted across the dish when Kinard lashed out another single.

A single by Joe Smith, Doughboy center-gardener, and a walk to Burnett filled the bags, and Kinard scored with the second run of the inning on a passed ball by Webb. Smith, who had taken third while Kinard was racing for home, then chalked up the third run when left-fielder Bill Brooks grunded out unassisted to Miller, first-baseman Mac Carter.

The final Doughboy counter came in the seventh inning when Smith walked, advanced to third on a hard-hit single to right by Burnett, and came home when Lauve hoisted a long fly to center-fielder Gus Peek of the Millers.

The most commendable stick performance of the evening was turned in by Kinard, who smacked out three singles and a double in five appearances to drive in three Benning runners. Barrett paced the losers with three singles in four trips to the plate.

Award

Pfc. Morris was a member of the 80th Infantry division.

Sergeant Wade will receive the Bronze Star for "heroic action on Corregiedor on May 4, 1942." According to the citation with the medal, he "left his place of shelter and aided and transported wounded persons to the hospital", following an air raid. He was a member of the 60th Construction Artillery Anti-aircraft regiment at the time.

Maj. Gen. Willis A. Bures, Infantry Center commander, is expected to make the presentations. Immediately following the ceremony, units of the 235th Infantry regiment will pass in review. Music will be furnished by the 72nd Army band.

The Saturday decoration ceremony marks the second time Mr. Morris has been honored by th army since the death of his son. During Memorial Day exercises here last May 30, he was selected as one of two parents in this area to receive a Gold Star pin, awarded by the army to the next-of-kin of those who lost their lives in World War II.

CRUMP INSPECTS

Lt. Col. William E. Crump Jr., Third army headquarters, visited Fort Benning Aug. 5-6 in connection with G-4 activities, it was learned last week.

Saturday Cycle Races Planned

With the national championship races in Atlanta finished, the riders have had a chance to change their motors for short track racing, and race officials believe the races this week will be much faster and will pack more thrills than the ones staged last week.

A larger field for this week's races has been promised officials of the race track. The number of entrants for last week's classic was much smaller than anticipated because the late time trials for the national championship classic curtailed the time allotted contestants to tune up their motors for the short speedway.

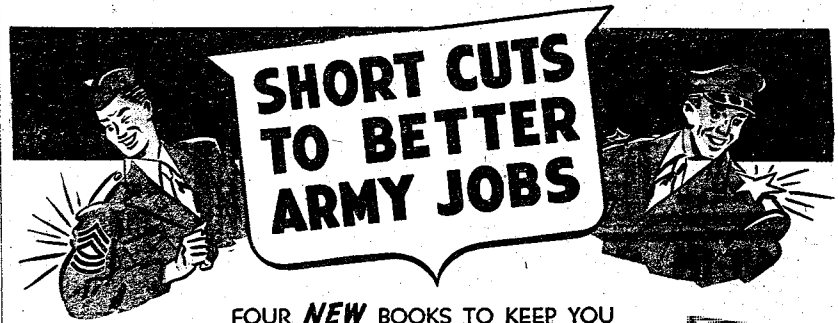
Sees Guard Activities

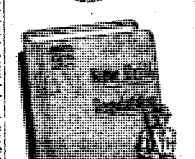
First Lt. Hugh E. Switzer, adjutant general's department, Third army, visited Fort Benning this week in connection with national guard activities.



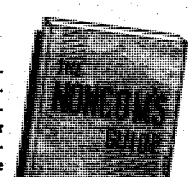
Following his inspection here, Lieutenant Switzer visited Camp Stewart, Ga.

Kramme Reports For Lawson Duty

Capt. Raymond W. Kramme, a fighter pilot formerly of March AFB, Calif., reported for duty at Lawson last Friday, and was assigned to the station adjutant's section, headquarters has announced.



A resident of St. Louis, Mo., and a former student at the university of that state, Captain Kramme received his pilot's wings at Lake Charles, La., in December, 1942. In April, 1943, he left for the Southwest Pacific where he served with the 35th Fighter group of the Fifth air force until January, 1945.



The captain's awards include the Air medal with two clusters.

Benning Twirlers Halt Soldier Team

For the second time during the 1948 diamond campaign, Fort McPherson found right-handers John Graves and Larry Hall of the Fort Benning Doughboys tough obstacles to get past.

The two Doughboy fire-ballers duplicated their performance of earlier in the season at Fort McPherson Friday night when they teamed to hold the Atlanta soldier nine to two safe blows in hurling a 12-2 decision for the Doughboys.

Graves, who twirled one-hit ball for the first six stanzas, and gave the McPherson team its first counter, was chalked up wit the victory, and Hall, after bolding the host squad hitless and scoreless for two innings, yielded the McPhersonites their other hit and their final run in the ninth canto.

Meanwhile, Doughboy hitters were busy tapping Bob Dowdy of the losers for 12 safeties.

Dowdy shackled Manager erb Bench's Doughs in the first inning, but the visiting aggrega- tHion turned on some fancy baserunning in the second frame to score twice on two walks, a single by third-sacker Harold (Blondy) Burnett, and a sacrifice hit by first-baseman Herb Lauve.

The Doughboys underwent three scoreless innings before exploding with four runs in the opening half of the sixth. Center-fielder Joe Smith led off for the Doughs with a single, and moved down to second when Len Carney drew a base on balls. After Lauve had sacrificed to advance both runners, Bill Brooks reached first via getting hit by a pitched ball to load the sacks.

Smith romped home when Ralph Terry was safe on a fielder's choice. Graves then forced Terry at second, but the Doughflinger went to second and Carney and Brooks scored when York's throw to first was bad.

Guardsmen Close Camp On Monday

Over 7,500 End Summer Training

The final group of national guardsmen, members of the 31st Infantry division of Alabama and Mississippi, left Fort Benning Monday morning following a two - week summer training camp at Harmony church.

Members of the Mississippi delegation were the first to leave. Their convoys began pulling out early Saturday morning, while the first of the Alabamans began to move out early Sunday.

Both groups of guardsmen received regular army pay for the 15-day encampment.

The division, composed of approximately 7,500 officers and men, began its training here Aug. 1. Primary object, according to officials of the division, was to provide basic and small unit training. More than half of the troops were recruits, it was pointed out, which resulted in a complete change of the program as originally scheduled in order to provide the rudiments of military science and tactics for the new men.

During the summer encampment, the division was inspected by Gen. J. Lawrn Collins, army deputy chief of staff, who came to Fort Benning for a rapid tour of the national guard training area. Other high ranking officials who inspected the 31st included Gov. Jim Folsom of Alabama and an official state delegation from Mississippi.

The area occupied by the division is slated to be used beginning Friday as the site of the provisional training battalion, which has been activated to provide basic training for regular army volunteers.

Camera Lost Here Sought By Cadet

The loss of a Mercury II camera with 3.5 lens sometime during the last week in July was reported this week to Mrs. Margaret Soule, chief hostess of Fort Benning's service clubs.

In the letter received by Mrs. Soule, William L. Fowler, a n ROTC student who attended the summer training camp h e r e, asked for information regarding the lost camera which contained one roll of exposed film.

Mr. Fowler said the film was almost as valuable as the camera since it contained undeveloped pictures intended for use in his college yearbook.

Anyone finding or knowing the whereabouts of the camera is asked to contact Mrs. Soule at Service club No. 1 or Mr. Fowler at 220 L street, Thomaston, Ga. A reward is offered.

Introducing The Recruit

First Volunteers Invade Post For Basic Training

When new men arrive at Fort Benning, they are hardly ever noticed by anyone except the first sergeant or the company commander, but when hundreds of men, in the army for the first time, begin arriving at once, they create quite a sensation.

Such was the case here last Friday afternoon when at 1:15 p.m. the first trainload of three year volunteers, scheduled for eight weeks' basic training here, arrived in Columbus.

In order to register the reactions of these young men, your reporter boarded the 12-coach train at 15th street in Columbus for the ride to the Sand hill area where the recruits will be stationed until they complete their processing tomorrow.

Unlike the wartime troop trains, this was an all-Pullman with white-jacketed porters to take care of the men. Although in some of the coaches the air conditioning was not functioning properly, as a whole the train was comfortable.

Each man interviewed—and at least five men in each coach were—expressed pleasure over being sent to Fort Benning. With the exception of one man, your reporter found them all in an expectant mood, mostly happy and eager to begin their new life as soldiers in the U.S. army. The one exception was a young man about 19 years old, who seemed nervous and unsettled. He claimed that he had just awakened, which was the reason for his unhappy expression.

As a rule, the men enlisted in pairs. That is, two hometown buddies got together, decided to enlist in the army, and did so.

First such a pair interviewed was Phillip Plaint, 20, and Robert Alger, 18, both of Worcester, Mass. Recruits Plaint and Alger entered the army Aug. 2 at Fort Dix, N. J. Another twosome was Donald Wagner, 20, and Wilfred Bonneau, 20, both of Northport, Long Island, N.Y. They also enlisted Aug. 2 at Fort Dix for three years of service.

From Clearfield, Mass., came Arthur Bowers, 20, who joined the army uniform on July 28, while from Cincinatti, Ohio, came Richard Brewer, 18. Also from Ohio are Thomas Armstrong, 19 and Clarence Cypheos , both hailing from Dayton.

Only one man was found from Washington, D. C. He was John Schuller, 18, who entered the army July 18, and had been taking pre-basic training since that time at Fort Dix.

There were others from West Virginia and Pennsylvania although a majority of those on the first train enlisted from Massachusetts, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Morale was high, the men all appeared intelligent, and it would seem as though Fort Benning has gained another group of high type men to swell the ranks of the regular army.

9 Detachment Men Earn Promotions

Nine enlisted members of the Infantry School detachment were promoted on Aug. 12, according to an announcement made this week.

A total of seven privates first class assigned to the detachment headquarters were promoted to the grade of corporal. They included Lawrence M. Gaetano, Frank A. Rutledge, Poche L. East, Albert Gregg, Omer L. Anderson, Archie L. Ball and Otho Quick.

Promoted from private to private first class were Bolton B. Barnett and Louie V. Yancey, also members of detachment headquarters.

New Executive Is Appointed

Maj. John C. Dickerson has been named executive officer of the 25th Infantry regiment's Second battalion to succeed Maj. George R. Couch, officials revealed this week.

Prior to entering the United States Military academy from which he graduated in 1939, Major Dickerson attended Duluth Junior college, Duluth, Minn.

A veteran of World War II, he left the U.S. for foreign service on Aug. 27, 1944, for duty with the 101st and 26th Infantry divisions in Europe. He participated in the campaigns in northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe. He has been awarded the Bronze Star medal.

SUPPLY EXPERT HERE

Russell C. Hodgson, property and supply representative, supply section of the Atlanta, Ga., General Distribution depot, arrived here this week for the purpose of reviewing and advising supply procedure.

Another 260 Recruits Due Here Today

New Soldiers Get Taste Of Army

The arrival today of an additional 260 recruits from Camp Kilmer, N. J., will swell the total number of men now taking basic training at Sand hill to 1,134 Infantry Center officials have announced.

The first group of 250 new men, all of whom were three - year volunteers, detrained here at 2 p. m. Friday afternoon. They were followed later in the afternoon by another contingent of 250, and that night by still another of 126 men.

The 72nd Army band piped the groups off the train and into the Sandhill area where they underwent final processing prior to beginning their basic training.

Following assigment to barracks, the recruits were served cold drinks and fruit at the company mess hall, and then were issued blankets, sheets, pillowcases and footlockers.

Saturday the volunteers were issued rifles and taught how to clean and care for them. They were also provided with the remainder of their army eqiupment needed for the eight-week basic training course.

Tomorrow, the entire provisional battalin is scheduled to move into the Harmony church area, vacated during last weekend by the 31st Infantry division, the Alabama - Mississippi national guard unit which has been undergoing a two - week summer training period here.

A training highlight in the recruits' schedule is a post tour which is planned for today and Friday. According to an announcement made Monday by battalion officials, the recruits will be conducted on a supervised tour of the main post. Harmony church and Sand hill, designed to familiarize them with the activities and facilities of greater Fort Benning.

The day's training program begins with reveille at 6:30 a.m. followed by breakfast and a second formation at 8a.m. Training continues until 11:50 a.m .when lunch is served. The afternoon's training begins at 1:10 p.m., with training continuing until 5 p.m. Retreat is at 5:30 p. m. and taps at 10 p.m.

The new troops will be off duty on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, but no passes will be issued until after the first two weeks of training have been completed.

Meanwhile, a recreational program has been established to provide the men with entertainment during their off-duty hours. This program inludes swiming in Russ pool, athletics, movies and transportation to baseball games.

The battalion has already organied eight companies, but only four are filled as of today. Those filled are Companies 1, 2, 3, and 4. Their commanders include Capt. Ruben H. Ciriacks, Capt. Norman C. McArdell, Capt. Charles F. Lindemore and Capt. Francis D. Lindemore.

What Are the Army's Plans?

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through Selective Service. We are indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for our information.

1. Is anything going to be done to try to get selectees to volunteer for the regular army?

Each selectee will be encouraged to enlist in the regular military establishment at any time after he has entered service by induction. The emphasis should be on securing the longest term possible. The Senate bill provides for a voluntary extension of service by induction to a total of 33 months, thereby fulfilling the obligations of transfer to a reserve component upon completion of the minimum service by induction.

2. Are selectees to be trained separately or mixed with regular outfits?

Selectees will not be trained separately, but will be trained with and in the same manner as volunteers.

3. How long will men be trained before being sent overseas?

It is anticipated that no enlisted personnel will be sent overseas without having a minimum of eight weeks basic training.

4. Will primary emphasis be placed on training for fighting or for occupation duty?

Fighting. The whole training doctrine of the army is to develop a trained soldier capable of performing efficiently his primary mission in combat. In this connection, "occupation duty" is just one of the many subjects in which he will receive instruction to make him a more efficient and well-rounded soldier.

5. Will selectees be trained in accordance with UMT or as regular army volunteers?

The selectee will be trained as a regular army volunteer. However, the present plan contemplates an eight-week basic training course temporarily until units of the army have been properly filled, after which the usual 12 or 13 weeks' program will be in effect. Furthermore, some of the principles developed in the experimental unit for Fort Knox, Ky., have been and will be incorporated in the regular army training program.

Army Undies Turn White

Future procurements of army underwear, towels and handkerchiefs will be of white materials instead of the war - time olive drab, the Department of the Army announced today.

Cotton undershirts and shorts, towels and handkerchiefs will be of bleached white under new Quartermaster corps invitations to bids, while wool underwear shirts and wool drawers will be of natural color.

The Quartermaster Corps announced that future procurements of cotton underwear shirts will be of the T-shirt design instead of the sleeveless type now used, and will be flat - knit. During the war and subsequently both flat - knit and ribbed - knit shirts were procured.

Decision to substitute the T-shirt, known technically as quarter-sleeve for the sleeveless shirt was reached after comparative tests of both types in which 10,000 soldiers participated.

TIC Establishes Rescue Team For Emergencies

A rescue squad composed of men from Company C of the the 307th Engineer battalion has been formed to be ready for dispatch to any area of Fort Benning or the surrounding communities to assist in emergency water rescues of personnel and equipment, it was announced this week.

The unit will be known as the Infantry Center resuce squad, and will consist of one officer, eight enlisted men and a driver from the 307th.

Present personnel of the squad re 1st Lt. Edward A. Cox, squad commander, Sgt. Charlie L. Mcand Calvin C. Stevens, and Pvts. Thomas G. O'Neel, Leonard P. Collier, William V. Knowles, Michael A. Eatman and Johnny W. Hammett. Driver is Pvt. Bennett L. Bowers.

Immediately upon notification of an alert status, the commander of the rescue squad has orders to report to the provost marshal for instructions. At the same time the Infantry Center light aviation officer is to be prepared to furnish, on call from Infantry Center headquarters, the provost marshal or the commander of the rescue squad, a light plane equipped with raido to assist in rescue operations.

Within 30 minutes after they have been notified they are on an alert status, the men of the swuad have orfers to be prepared to move from their area in nthe first cuartel with all necessary equipment. They will then be under command of the provost marshal. The squad will move by motor to the area of operations with a motorcycle escort provided by the provost marshal, who will also coordinate the movement of the squad with civilian authorities, designate the route the squad will take, and maintain liaison between the rescue squad and Infantry Center headquarters.

Equipment to be made available to the rescue squad includes one 18-foot utility power boat, at least two radios for boat-to-shore and air-to-ground communications, a shallow water diving suit, grappling hooks, pikes, spotlights, emergency rations and a squad demolition set.

The formation of the rescue squad follows on the heels of much work done recently by Fort Benning engineers because of heavy rains and consequent flood ig of the Chattahoochee river.

Post Dialogue

To determine how the much discussed inflationary trends in the cost of living are affecting Fort Benning personnel a representative group of married men who are forced to live off the post because of insufficient accommodations, were asked this question:

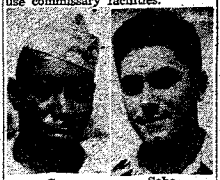
Cpl. Paul E. Hill, Section I, 3440th Army Service unit: "My income averages about $160 per month. Our monthly rent is $50, and food usually costs about $60. My apartment is very nice, but I consider myself lucky to have gotten it. We buy most of our groceries in town because prices are as cheap, or cheaper there."

Hill Kirby

Sergeant Roy M. Kirby, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 325 Infantry: "I don't think that I am any worse off than the rest of the fellows. We pay $60 per month for rent. My monthly income runs about $195. We have one baby and our food bill is always over $80 per month. I think my rent is high for the type quarters that I have, and would naturally be pleased to get post quarters when they become available."



Sgt. 1cl Cyrus H. Wheelock, Company B, Infantry School detachment: "I am buying my own home under the GI Bill. Payments run $50 per month and I am not able to completely furnish my home because of the high cost of furniture. We have three children, and this runs our food bill up to $120 per month. This means that we pay 40% of our income for food. Under normal conditions I would not have bought this house, as I think I am paying more than it is worth."

Wheelock Shenk

Capt. Frank L. Shenk Headquarters, company, First battalion 325th Infantry: "We have a three bedroom house, which is unfurnished and rents for $90 per month plus utilities. I would rather be quartered on the post as I consider my rent much too high. The house is located on an aunpaved road, which is another undesirable feature. We have one small boy and our food bill amounts to about one-third of my income."

M-Sgt. Arthur Cox, Headquarters company, Second battalion 25th Infantry: "We have no children, and my wife and I live in a furnished room which costs us $23 per month. However, we pay extra for heat. We eat out most of the time, and this makes our food bill about $90 per month. I hope post quarters will be available soon, which would save transportation expense and enable us to use commissary facilities."

Cox Sabo

M-Sgt. Carl E. Sabo, Headquarters company, First battalion 325th Infantry: "We have a duplex four-room apartment, located in Columbus, which is completely furnished. My army income averages about $325 per month. Considering housing conditions today, I am fortunate to pay only $55 per month rent. However, utilities are extra. Our apartment is well furnished and also kept in a good state of repair. We have three young children, and our monthly food cost is about $110. Of course, I would prefer to live on the post, but in the permanent type quarters only, and not the converted barracks."

Pfc. Joseph Jefferson, Section H, 3440th Army Service unit: "I earn around $170 per month. Our apartment costs us $24 monthly, which includes everything except fuel. Food runs about $65 per month as we have one small child. I am not satisfied with our apartment in town and have tried to find something better, but that is very difficult right now."

Jefferson Kilpatrick

Capt. C. W. Kilpatrick, information and education and public information officer, 325th Infantry: "We have a duplex apartment in town, and I estimate that the rent is about 15 per cent of my income. This can be further clarified by the fact that I have 19 years service. Food expenses are about 45 percent of my earnings."

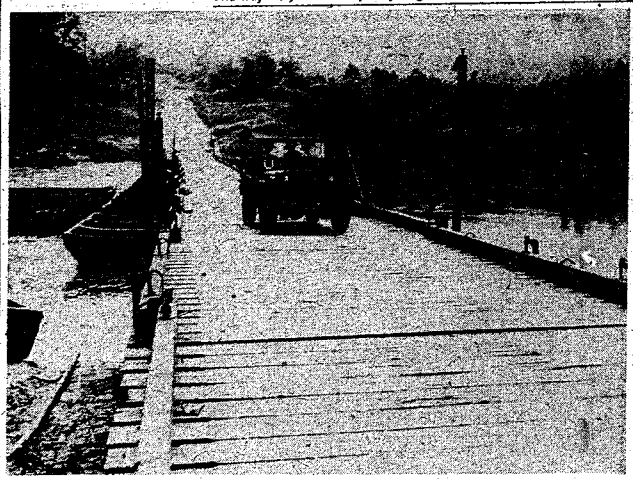
BAYONET EDITH HENRY ... HESS EXPECTED TODAY

R. D. Hess, fire truck and equipment inspector in Third army's Engineer section, is expected here around Aug. 12 to inspect and test fire trucks and conduct classes in their operation and maintenance, it was announced by Third army Tuesday.

The recruit on maneuvers was watching an experienced soldier bed down for the night.

"What are you going to use for a pillow?" he asked.

"My helmet," was the old soldier's reply.



"My, that'll be hard, won't it?"

Team Support

To say that the crowd of spectators drawn by post sports functions, particularly baseball games, this year has been disappointing is a mild understatement.

Of course, we realize that the Doughboys have played a very limited number of games at Gowdy field this season, but this fact could scarcely be deemed a reason for lack of support. Queries, however, will reveal that that is the excuse offered by a large number of Fort Benning personnel for not attending the games.

Are the Doughboys to be blamed for the sensational strides they have made in tournament play this season?

Instead of harping on the fact that the squad doesn't play enough home games, it seems that anybody who considers himself an ardent diamond fan should get behind the team 100 percent—see the home games, and keep up with the Doughboy activities on the road.

At the start of the season, more than half of the games on the Dough schedule were to be played at Gowdy Field. Only two tournaments, the Georgia State Semi-Pro meet at Thomaston, Ga., and the Third army tourney at Fort Bragg, N. C., were on tap for the Doughs. However, the success achieved by the local team in the Georgia meet made it possible for the boys to enter a playoff series with the Alabama state champions, and their triumph there put them in line for a try at the national title. Hence, cancellation of many home tilts.

Between the regional playoff and national tournament, the Doughboys did slate a game at home. Here was the local fans' chance to see the team which had won the regional championship, in action, but the turnout for the contest was smaller than one might expect for a pauper's funeral. At the time the game started, not more than 250 fans populated the grandstand, but drifters, who apparently had exhausted every effort to find entertainment, finally started filing haphazardly into the stands, and by the time the game was completed, an unbelieveable crowd of possibly 500 spectators had taken seats.

For those who still may maintain that lack of home games is an excellent reason for poor attendance, we might go back to the intra-mural season when six to nine games per week were played at Gowdy field.

Yet, during the period when almost nightly activity was taking place at the home park of the Doughboys, average attendance was even more miserable than it has been for the post-team games. A throng the size of the one which turned out for the Doughs' recent interim game would have been considered enormous for the average intra-post tilt.

There is a very good chance that the Doughs have waged their last game at Gowdy field this year, but, if another one should be played here before the season closes, the most fitting tribute which post personnel could pay the crack ball team would be to fill the grandstand.

Strictly Editorializing

WE HAVE NOTED with amazement that the army volunteers who began arriving at Fort Benning last Friday afternoon have about the highest morale of any similar group we've seen in a long time. As a rule, youngsters in the 17-20 age bracket with no previous military training are too bewildered at first to have any kind of morale. Not so with these volunteers. They all like the army, or what they've seen of it, and for the most part are determined to make a career in the military service.

Speaking of careers, we spoke with one 19-year-old, Dwight Tuvell, of Springfield, Ohio, who was so elated over being a soldier that he could hardly contain himself. He opened our conversation by asking us if we were taking testimonials. We said well, not exactly, but we told him we would like to know what he thought about the army. And here is what he answered:

"I HELD A great many jobs in civilian life, but never did I find one that I liked as much as I do the army. I've been in three weeks now, and the friends I've made have been better friends, the fun I've had has been better fun than anything in civilian life. I volunteered for the 82nd Airborne division, and when I complete my basic training, I hope to take jump training at Fort Benning."

We got all kinds of answers, but they all boiled down to one point on which everyone seems to agree: The army is a fine place. One volunteer provided the laugh of the day, when, with near-tears in his eyes, he answered the stock question with these words: "I like the army fine, but I miss my girl." You can't beat a bunch like that.

Chaplain's Corner..

LOVE OF GOD

BY

Chaplain J. F. Rafferty

One of the most serious obstacles to the pursuit of sanctity by the average man and woman is the fact that very few of our lay people have any emotional feeling one way or the other toward God. Because of this fact, they assume that the love of God is the monopolistic property of priests and ministers, that it is a gift from God rather than an obligation to God—that it is even incompatible with the layman's life.

As regards "the greatest and the first commandment," that they "love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart," they merely shrug their shoulders, hope for the best, and change the subject.

This is a tragic mistake.

It is not the layman's fault, either. It is the fault of the English language. In our language, the word "love" has been booted around, distorted, stretched, twisted, tortured and rent, until it has almost no meaning left whatever, except animal passion.

According to philosophers, the word "love" — at least in a religious sense — means nothing more nor less than to, "desire good" for someone.

Is there anything unreasonable abut "desiring good" for God, or for our neighbor? Is there any sentimentality, any starry-eyed quality about such love, to justify its repugnance to the hard mind of the most sophisticated businessman?

No, there is not.

As a matter of fact, every man of good-will loves God. The trouble is that he doesn't usually realize it. And all because of the degradation and confusion surrounding a simple, good English word.

Once lay men and women become acquainted with this odd, refreshing definition of the word "love," the development, in depth and sustained animation, of their love for the good will have hurled its first and most formidable obstacle.

NEHRU OF INDIA ..

With India so much in the headlines during the past year, it is surprising that the market has not been flooded with books about the head of the Indian government, Jawaharlal Nehru. For Nehru, who next to Gandhi perhaps did more than any other man to obtain his country's independence, is well worth writing about.

Cornelia Spencer wrote "Nehru of India" primarily for young people, "to show them the man as he was and is, and as he may be in the world tomorrow." The book, unfortunately, does not do justice to its subject, and is not particularly interesting. We have seen grocery bills that contained far more drama in them. But in spite of its dullness, or possibly because of it, the book has a sincerity that is lacking in many better written stories.

The author is frankly biased. She openly admires Nehru, pictures him as a great hero, and places the blame for most of India's troubles on one country only — England.

Whether or not she is entirely right, she believes she is, and says what she believes. She tells the story of this high caste Brahmin, who, although educated in England and feeling a certain kinship with the western country, sacrificed himself and his family, to defy England politically and to fight for India's freedom. Nehru, with Gandhi, led the struggle and founded the new government. He did not believe in war, only in a resistance that, although it was nonviolent, was yet so strong and unwavering that at least it was successful.

Since the days of the East India company, the English have, according to Miss Spencer —and she may be right— cruelly exploited the Hindus. They have shown almost no consideration for these four hundred million helpless people and have been concerned with getting all they could out of them. During Nehru's passive war for his country's independence, he was imprisoned nine times, and spent 16 years of his life in prison as a rebel. Every member of his family, including his mother and sisters, was at some time or other in jail, because they objected to the British rule.

"Nehru of India" is, in spite of its unnecessary dullness, worth reading, but it might be well to balance it with one of the "England-is-always-right" books. Readers with Anglophobia should avoid "Nehru of India" entirely.

Your Red Cross

BY RALPH GEORGE

Man servicemen at Fort Benning have neglected to give their families sufficient detailed identifying information to locate them quickly in case of emergency. Giving your family this information is most important immediately following a transfer from one organization to another on the post, or immediately after your arrival at a new station.

When everything is going smoothly at home this lack of information may seem unimportant. Letters from home reach the serviceman promptly through the efficient postal locator.

Let us suppose, however, that an emergency arises whereby a delay may be costly. We receive many incoming wires where the families are unable to furnish the chapter with sufficient information to enable us to identify the serviceman. Every serviceman should see to it at once that his family knows his rank, serial number and organization. As previously mentioned, this information should be supplied by the serviceman to his family each time he is transferred.

If the servicemen will attend to this, and his family will take the complete information to the local Red Cross chapter when reporting an emergency, it will insure the prompt location of the serviceman.

Plaintiff: "I did swear, but all he did was swear back and drive on."

Husband: "I've got tickets for the theater."

Wife: "Fine, I'll start dressing at once."

Ohio's National Guard Completes Organization

A third national guard infantry division—the 37th (Buckeye) of Ohio—has completed organization of all its component units, Major General Kenneth F. Ramer, chief, National Guard bureau, announced today.

Organization of the division reached 100 per cent with the federal recognition of Company B, 112th Medical battalion of Cincinnati.

The 43rd of onnecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont, and the 45th of Oklahoma are the other national guard infantry divisions to have organized all their 114 component units.

The new national guard has been allotted 25 infantry divisions which currently have approximately 89 per cent of their 2,850 units organized; and two armored divisions—the 50th and 49th of New Jersey and Texas, respectively,—with about 80 per cent of their componet 180 units federally recognized.

Organized in 1917, the 37th participated in all the major fighting from July 1918, until the armistice.

In World War II, the division continued its brilliant fighting record under the command of Major General Robert S. Beightler, facing the enemy almost continuously from 1943, when its men drove ashore at New Georgia, until two years later when they chased Yamshita and his puppet government from the hills of Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines.

In some of the most bitter hand-to-hand fightingof the war during the second bloody battle of Bougainville, the 37th slashed to shreds the sixth Japanese division, the Imperial army's best.

The outfit spearheaded General MacArthur's drive that liberated Luzon and Manila, hitting the beaches of Lingayen gulf on D-Day, January 9, 1945.

Inactivated in December, 1945, reorganized as part of the Ohio postwar national guard in August 1946.

CAMERAMEN NOW FILMING TROOP MOVEMENT BY AIR

Cameramen from the Signal corps' photographic center at Long Island, N. Y., began Monday their thrid week of filming Troop Movement by Air, a new army training movie designed to familiarize soldiers with air transportation of ground troops.

Up until last Friday a total of 160 Fort Benning troops had been employed as actors in the film, including members of Company I, 504th Parachute Infantry regiment; Battery C, 319th Field Artillery battalion; the Airborne section's Air Landing committee; the 313th Troop Carrier group and wing, and the 319th Air Force base unit.

Technical advisor to the cameramen is Capt. Stephen Cavanaugh, an instructor in the Air Landing committee.

The film, according to Captain Cavanangh, will serve primarily to familiarize students with aircraft, standard loading procedures and the theory of lashing and flight safety.

78th Division Plans Reunion

Annual reunion of the 78th "Lightning" Infantry division will be held at Fort Dix, New Jersey, August 13-15, according to an announcement by Mr. Alfred H. James, secretary, 78th division veterans association.

The division was originally activated at Camp Dix, New Jersey on August 27, 1917, and departed for overseas after nearly nine months training in this country. Among other offensives, it took part in the Meuse-Argonne campaign in France and was demobilized in June, 1919, at Camp Dix.

Shortly after the outbreak of World War II, the 78th was activated at Camp Butner, North Carolina. It participated in Second army maneuvers in Tennessee in January, 1944, and left for station overseas in October of that year.

First elements of the division entered combat on December 11, 1944, near Roetgen, Germany, and assisted in the cracking of the Siegfried line. It also participated in the capture of Schwammenaule dam, the crossing of the Rhine, and the reduction of the Ruhr pocket. Some units of the division were returned to this country for inactivation in May, 1946, but most of them were inactivated in Europe.

Red Diamond Plans Reunion

Veterans of the Fifth "Red Diamond" Infantry division will hold their 27th annual convention September 4-6 at Hotel Tuller in Detroit, Michigan, according to an announcement by William Romano, executive secretary, 31-26 West Eddy street, Chicago 18, Illinois.

Features of the meeting will be a memorial service for World War I and II dead, an annual banquet and election of officers.

The division was organized at Camp Logan, Texas, on December 1, 1917, and by June 14, 1918, joined with French troops for action in the Vosges in World War I. Later it took part in the attack in the St. Mihiel and Meuse operations. It returned to this country in July, 1919.

Prior to the outbreak of World War II, the "Red Diamond" Division was activated at Fort Custer, Michigan, in October, 1939. In September, 1941, the 10th regiment (reinforced) was sent to Iceland, and the remaining portion of the unit underwent maneuvers in Louisiana the same month.

Going overseas in April, 1942, the outfit was given advanced training in Northern Ireland where the 10th regiment joined the division. It entered combat shortly after D-Day, in July, 1944, and took part in the campaigns of Normandy, Northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes, and Central Europe.

The division returned to this country in July, 1945, was sent to Camp Campbell, Kentucky, for retraining, and was reorganized on March 4, 1946. In September the division was inactivated only to be reactivated on July 15, 1947, at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, as a regular army training division.

ENUNCIATION INDISTINCT

Machine Spouts Jargon Which Puzzles Salmeri

It may be a talking typewriter to the emcee of Columbia Broadcasting system's Hit the Jackpot show, but to Sgt. 1st Cl. Frank Salmeri of the post athletic office it's nothing but a stupid contraption, which, at its best, produces an unintelligible gibberish.

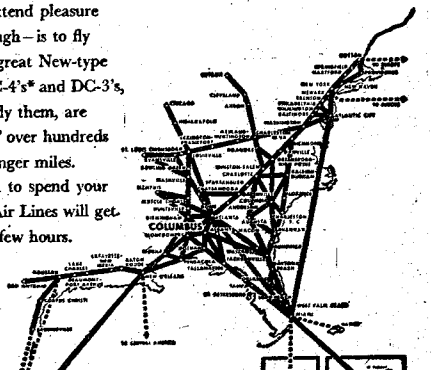
Urged by Mrs. Salmeri, the chief clerk and jack of all trades of the athletic office dropped a card to the radio show asking for a chance to crack a $20,000 jackpot by guessing the message typed out by a so-called "talking typewriter". After doing a bit of calculating, however, Sergeant Salmeri computed his chances of being called at one in 4,000,000, and promptly gave up the thought of receiving a telephone call.

Last Tuesday night, however, the phone at the Salmeri quarters rang, and a voice from New York informed the sergeant that he had exactly one hour to decipher the code before he would be called again.

Combining mental resourcefulness with speedy footwork and a few calls on friends, Sergeant Salmeri finally arrived at the conclusion that the typewriter was imploring young men to "join the army and see the world."

No. The answer was not correct.

Musing on letting the fortune slip through his fingers, Salmeri remarked: "Well, for a man who has spent as many years in the army as I have, it was a pretty sensible answer. Also, I'm sure that the recruiting service appreciates the plug I gave it."



Salmeri's efforts to track down the correct answer, however, weren't totally in vain since the sponsors of the program are sending him an expensive wrist watch for taking part in the show.

Valuable Satsuma Porcelain In Frisby Japanese Collection

COLLECTOR'S ITEMS. . .The little artist at Sengoiuhara put in the last delicate touches in the scene he was painting and looked at his work. Here was perfection, indeed. . .a plate of Satsuma porcelain, soft, warm ivory with a mazy crackled surface which gives a rich mellowness found in no other porcelain, with scenes of the Fujiyama pilgrimage trail faithfully reproduced in all their beauty. The artist could well be proud of his work, for today, after more than a hundred years, the scenes have lost none of their vivid color, none of their delicate charm.

This is just one of the many almost priceless items in the collection of Satsuma, Arita, and Kutani porcelain which Maj. and Mrs. Carl Frisby brought back from Japan. There are, for instance, the two gold-glazed bronze vases, which are inlaid with gold and silver flowers in an elaborate design. These were said to have been made in the early 19th century. Then there's a large Imari porcelain plate, and ceremonial tea cups of Kutani, which are used in formal ceremonies. The rice bowls of the same fine pottery come in two distinct sizes for men and women.

And, of course, the Frisbys brought back a pair of Makuras. This is the little pillow which is used in the well-to-do families of Japan, when milady does not wish to disarrange her elaborate hairdo. Mrs. Frisby says she has tried these pillows. "But that does not mean I could sleep on them," she admits. "They're somewhat harder than American pillows, you know. They're made of porcelain."

The Frisby collection of Japanese art contains everything from the tinkling Furin bells and the brass bells from the Shinto Shrine to Tama chan cats and Amida Buddhas. Mrs. Frisby, who was in the "Mayflower" contingent of army wives—they were the first wives to land in Japan—spent approximately 13 months overseas. And she made good use of her time.

"Our car was third off the boat and the first to be released," she says. Major Frisby had to report to duty and I had to drive about 47 miles. All along the way were Japanese shops—well, I just had to stop and see them. And after that I spent every spare moment poking into little curio shops and visiting displays and shrines all over the island."

"Of course", she adds, "most of the things I found were by hit or miss."

But if takes only one look at the Frisby collection to know there were for more hits than misses.

Doughs Win First Fracas In Wichita

Ike Silcox Rations Texans Four Hits

In a tight pitching duel, the Fort Benning Doughboys won their opening game in the National Semi-Pro tournament at Wichita, Kans., by defeating the Alpine, Tex., Cowboys 3-1 Sunday afternoon.

The Doughboys scored two runs in the fourth on a walk and two Cowboy errors, and one in the sixth on right fielder Woody Burt's single, a long fly by second baseman Bob Kinard, and another Texas team misplay.

The Texans threatened in the ninth with a single, a walk and a Benning error, which they combined for one tally. However, tight pitching by right-hander Ike Silcox of the Doughs killed the Cowpokes' rally.

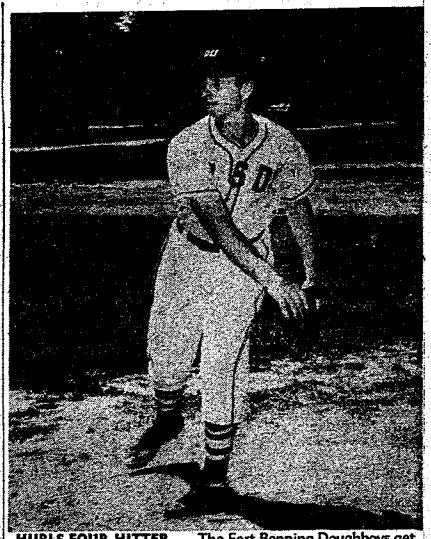
Silcox, who gave up only four hits was helped by three double plays although his teammates committed five errors, one more than the Cowboys, to put him in several holes.

The flashy Benning right-hander struck out seven and walked one, while Cowboy hurler Thorton fanned nine Doughboys and gave up only one base on balls. Relief hurler Miller of the Texans came on to pitch the final inning of the game, and fanned another pair of Dough batters.

Burt of the Doughs rapped out two singles, while Herb Lauve and Joe, Smith each notched one. For the Cowboys, Nutt singled three times and Wagner once. Lauve also stole a base.

Bad weather has hampered the tourney causing a one-day postponement of the opener, and showers an hour before Sunday's game time cut down the crowd, muddied the field, and made the pellet slippery to handle.

Following their win over the Texans, the Doughs eyed a second - round tilt with the Worland, Wyo., Indians, who fought their way through the opening round by blanking the Ipswich, Mass., club 6-0 on Monday night.



The Indians are billed as one of the toughest aggregations in the meet, and should prove an even more formidable barrier to hurdle than the Cowhands.

Although Manager Herb Bench did not name a starting hurler for his squad's tiff with the Redskins, the mound role probably will go to a southpaw either Ken Watts or Collis Lehner.

Watts, who boasts one of the staff's speediest deliveries, has a record of two triumphs and one setback for the Doughs this season. His sole defeat came during the soldier team's play-off series with the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, Ala., for the Georgia - Alabama regional championship. He was tagged with an 8-2 loss in the middle game of the three-game set.

Lehner, on the other hand, has yet to be charged with a loss during the 1948 campaign. He has chalked up two decisions, including a winning verdict in the opening game of the payoff set with the Alabama champs.

On deck as a relief hurler will be right-hander Ray Stem, who as won one and lost none this year.

HURLS FOUR-HITTER . . . The Fort Benning Doughboys get past the first round in the National Semi-Pro diamond tourney at Wichita, Kans., Sunday afternoon through the four-hit pitching of right-hander Ike Silcox. The four-blow masterpiece, which ended in a 3-1 decision for the soldier team, was chalked up against the Alpine, Tex., Cowboys.

Aspirants For Doughboy Gridiron Eleven Launch Practice Sessions

Punting, passing and instructions on playing various positions took up most of the period at French field Monday afternoon as candidates for the 1948 Doughboy grid eleven opened their pre-season drills.

The inaugural session was aimed primarily at promoting nimbleness, and didn't include the running off of any of the plays the Doughs expect to use during their fall campaign.

The intensive warm-ups will not begin, Head Coach Joe Shepherd said, until after the complete turnout of Dough squad aspirants has reported for practice. The chief mentor expected the full crop of candidates to be out about Wednesday afternoon.

Although only about 35 of the team potentials showed up for the first day of practice, those who were unable to report on Monday, but were expected to start training later this week probably will boost the total to about twice that number.

Pre - season drills are slated to continue until early October when the Doughboys open their schedule. At present, eight games, five at home and three away, are on tap for the local eleven this season. Two open dates also remain to be filled.

The monotony of pre-season drills for the Doughs will be broken on Sept. 11 when they journey over into Alabama to wage a scrimmage battle with the Troy state Teachers. Although efforts are being made to schedule a return engagement with the Teachers, it is doubtful that the plans will materializesince the Alabama college crop opens its regular schedule the following weekend. A possibility that his B squad might open the season the last week in September with a game with an airforce eleven from Florida was cited by Shepherd. The game was requested by the airmen, and the Dough mentor has replied suggesting Sept. 26, the first of the Benning squad's two unfilled gaps, as a possible date.

Should efforts to arrange the game with the Floridians fail, the Doughboys will open their slate on alien soil the following week. The marines of Parris Island, S. C., will be the host squad for the Oct. 2 conflict.

Following the fracas with the marines, the Doughs will enjoy a three-week home stand. On Oct. 10, they will entertain the naval flyers of Memphis, Tenn., the Eglin field Flyers will come here for a tussle on Oct. 17, and the Quantico, Va., marines will invade Doughboy stadium on Oct. 24.

The post eleven then will make a long trek to Kansas for a scrap with the Fort Riley team on Oct. 29, and will return to Benning for a tilt with the Fort Jackson, S. C., gridsters on Nov. 7. The final visiting game on tap will be played with the Jacksonville, Fla., navymen on Nov. 13.

The second open date on the Dough schedule is Nov. 21, just one week before the Doughs close their season with the Fort Bragg, N. C., squad in the post stadium.

Links Tryouts Planned Here

A foursome of post golfers to represent Fort Benning in the Southeastern Amateur links tourney at the Columbus golf and country club next Thursday will be selected following 36 holes of medal play at the post Officers' club course this weekend.

The aspirants for the squad, it was pointed out, may play the entire 36 holes on either Saturday or Sunday, or 18 holes on each of the two days set aside for the qualifying rounds.

During the medal play rounds of the tourney at the Columbus Golf and Country club, the foursome will compete as a team, but will be split up when the match play begins. The meet is expected to last four days.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

This week the entire sports world is paying tribute to George Herman (Babe) Ruth.

The Babe is dead. But, the legend of his playing days with the New York Yankees will live on for a century or more.

Long after most of the present diamond stars are forgotten, the name of Babe Ruth still will be held synonymous with baseball and good sportsmanship.

Worshipers of the Babe ranged in age from six to 60, and many kids who have never seen the sultan of swat in action acclaim him as their hero, solely on the strength of stories handed down by parents and relatives who had, at one time or other, seen the Babe clout out a homer.

Although his admirers among adults are many, the principal appeal made by the man who blasted more than 714 homeruns in a lifetime and a still record 60 during the 1927 season has been to the lads of the nation.

That the kids should naturally take a liking to the Babe is understandable for two reasons:

1. The Babe, although 53 years old at the time of his death, never liked to consider himself anything more than an oversized kid.

2. The story behind the Babe's career is typical of a youngster who started life on less than the proverbial shoestring, and won success and renown the hard way.

Young George Herman Ruth was probably a little more incorrigible than most lads his age, and, for that reason, he was committed to a semi-corrective institution, St. Mary's Industrial school in Baltimore, Md. It was at the institution that the Babe's genius was first recognized. While at school, Ruth was taken as a special charge by the late Brother Gilbert, who was instrumental in getting him his first job in baseball with the Baltimore Orioles.

The Babe was probably the most universally admired individual the United States has ever known.

Some of the most famous statesmen the nation has ever produced probably could seek tranquility some place at their heart's desire. But, not so with the Babe. Wherever he was, whatever he did, someone was certain to recognize him, and immediately droves of autograph-seeking youngsters would cluster about the king of swat.

But, this was the sort of life the Babe loved. He got a super thrill out of signing autograph books, listing to the troubles, joys and experiences of kids. And, there never was a wait too insignificant for the Babe to turn an ear to.

Since he realized that he was the idle of kids throughout the nation, the Babe adopted himself a morale code and philosophy of life which he though would be exemplary for his midget followers. It was.

Therefore, we join the entire baseball world in paying homage not only to the greatst ballplayer of all times, but to a grand guy, and a good sportsman.

Umpire Gene Harris of Fort Benning has been the target for a lot of squawking from post fans this year, but after reading what sports writer Cecil Darby of the Columbus Ledger has to offer in the way of a recommendation for Harris, we're beginning to think the multitude could be wrong.

Darby writes:

"More than 10 years ago, an umpire came out of Fort Benning with the picturesque monicker of Nicholas Ittner Jones (he was better known as Red for obvious reasons) and joined the Sally League staff of arbiters.

"Today America's most complete Army post has come up with another outstanding man in blue and it's not inconceivable that he too might go all the way, in the footsteps of Red Jones.

"The name is Gene Harris, who currently is filling in for Larry Carter in the Sally League. He has umpired the past two nights with Ed Boell, regular Sally official.

"It isn't just on the basis of his work the past two nights that we suddenly predict great things for Master Sergeant Harris.

"He worked behind the plate when the St. Louis Cardinals stopped off here back in April for an exhibition game with the local club and the parent Red Birds were loud in their praises of his work.

"One of the Cardinal 'higher-ups' even went so far as to tell Harris that he would see that he got a job in a good league when he gets out of the army.

"And he comes up for retirement in November. It is believed that Harris is desirous of following the career of a professional baseball umpire and the fellow is just good enough to umpire Class AAA ball right now.

Yow, Maloney Cop AF Golfing Honors

The smooth - stroking Lawsonites turned the scramble for individual honors in last week's Southern airforce golf tourney at Maxwell field, Ala., into an all-Lawson affair.

The pair, Gene Yow and Clement Maloney, finished the 72-hole medal play meet with identical 293's, and each gartered at least one first place in the special-feature events of the tourney.

Yow, who is Fort Benning's enlisted golfing champ for 1948, won medalist laurels with a 72, while his long-hitting teammate carded a 74 to establish himself as the runner-up. In the driving event, Maloney's 261 yards won first place, and he dropped three out of nine putts to place second in that feature.

In the 72-hole tournament feature, Maloney shot his best rounds during the first half of play, but Yow, after a weak start, came back with a pair of sizzling 18's to gain himself a tie with Maloney as the classic closed.

Maloney dropped from a 73 for his first round to a 72 for the second, but had 74 for both of his last two tours of the course. After compiling a total of 153 for the first 36 holes of play, Yow dipped to 70 in his third round, and fired an identical score for his final loop.

Despite the efforts of Maloney and Yow, the best the Lawsonites could do in team competition was fourth. They were topped by squads from Maxwell field, Greenville, S. C., Air force base and Tyndall field, Fla.

The host foursome took top place in the 36-hole team play with a 453-stroke total, 14 blows better than the second place South Carolinans. Tyndall field's 468 placed third, while the Lawson score of 473 was 20 strokes off the pace.

Teamed with Yow and Maloney for the inter-base competition were Gilbert Collar and John Burnisten, Collar, however, withdrew during the early stages of the meet.

Infantrymen Share Lead In Post Loop

Utilizing his fast-breaking curve to perfection, Walter Scott made the 25th Infantry team's debut to the current post baseball league a triumphant one as he pitched the Sand Hill fine to an 8-5 win over the highly-touted 3440th Army Service unit at Gowdy field Tuesday night.

Returning to the 25th lineup for the first time since pre-maneuver days, Scott made somewhat of a sensational comeback. During the seven innings he worked on the mound, the speedy curve-baller gave up only two hits, and whiffed 14 ASU batters.

The Sand Hill lads iced the game in the fifth inning when five base-runners crossed the plate. The losers set themselves up as a serious threat by leading the bases in the eighth, but could do no better than score two runs as Lefty Conerly came in to put a halt to the rally.

Gene Thomas stole the fielding show when, in the fifth inning, he thrilled the spectators by backing nearly to the center-field fence to rob Willie Banks of the losers of a hit that was labelled for extra bases. Batting highlights of the game included tremendous doubles by Coleman and Nichols of the 25th squad which rocked the center-field wall.

The win over the ASU lads put the 25th Infantrymen in a three-way tie for the circuit lead as the first week of play in the newly-formed intra-mural loop.

BULLETIN

The tournament, which begins on Saturday, Aug. 28, will include singles matches for men, women, juniors and girls; doubles contests for men, and a consolation round in men's singles.

CRACK PISTOL SHOT TAKING COURSE HERE

After a war - wrought interruption, Maj. Charles Askins, nationally famous pistol shot now taking jump training with the Airborne battalion here, is refocusing his attention on pistol marksmanship, and expects to enter team competition again soon.

Upon completion of his training at Fort Benning, Major Askins will join the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N.C., and expects to land a berth on the unit's pistol squad.

If Askins hasn't lost his prepar style, he shouldn't have much trouble in gaining himself a prominent spot on the airborne division's team. For, his accuracy already has netted him 537 medals and 117 trophies in competitions in the United States, Mexico, Canada and Cuba.

ISD Reds Take Softball Crown

Wyatt's Two-Hit Performance Nips Airborne Nine In Playoff

The Infantry School detachment Reds took over a reign as softball champs of Fort Benning Thursday as John Wyatt hurled a two-hit, 3-0 shutout over the runner-up Airborne battalion nine in the final game of a playoff series on the airborne diamond Monday evening.

In the opening game of the set on the ISD quadrangle Friday evening, the host squad chalked up a 6-3 decision over the paratrooper lads.

The two - for - three series was slated after each of the two crews had come out on top in one half of the two - phase 1948 campaign. The airborne team copped top honors for the first half of loop play, and the Reds finished in first place for the second phase.

In the decisive game of the series, pitcher Ed Weiss of the paratroopers matched Wyatt's two - blow performance, but the Reds employed some fancy base-running, and took advantage of two successive triples to notch themselves a trio of counters.

The first inning started off with shortstop Marshall O'Shaughnessy drawing a walk, and another free pass to Jack Hallett forced O'Shaughnessy down to second. After both runners had advanced, Warren Paulk lined a long fly to center field, and the Red shortstop scored easily after the catch.

To make their margin more secure, the ISD nine chalked up two more counters in the sixth. O'Shaughnessy led off with a triple to right - center field, and scored when Hallett slammed a blow good for an equal number of bases over the left fielder's head. After Hallett had scored on a fielder's choice, the next three ISD batters went out in succession to end the game's scoring.

The game was highlighted by remarkable fielding and infield pep on the part of both clubs. An infield error charged to the airborne nine was the only miscue of the game. It did not figure in the ISD scoring.

BONAIR PACES DOUGH PLATE WORK PARADE

Topmost on the mound roster was right - hander Ike Silcox, who boats an unparalelled record of three triumphs and no setbacks.

Bonair, however, could hardly be considered the leading slugger since only five of his 21 blows have been for extra bases, and his runs batted in total of 12 is topped by two other Dough stick swingers.

The fleet - footed short fielder was leading the pack in triples with three, and was deadlocked with center fielder Joe Smith for the No. 1 spot in the runs scored department with 16. He also drew eight bases on balls to take the lead for free passes to first, but had been whiffed 10 times, more than any other individual on the Doughboy squad.

Heading the list of long - ball hitters was Smith, whose blows had gone for extra bases totaled eight. He had knocked in 17 runs to tie with second-baseman Bob Kinard in that phase of the club hitting.

The only player on the Doughboy squad who has a figure in his homeruns column, Smith belted pitchers in the Georgia State Semi-Pro tourney for three round-trippers, and shares the top spot in doubles with first sacker Herb Lauve, who has three to his credit.

Smith also has been the most susceptible member of the club to misguided offerings of opposing pitchers, getting to first on three occasions via the hit by pitched ball route.

The largest number of hits chalked up by any individual member of the Benning squad was tallied by Kinard, who hit safely in 23 of his 58 official appearances at the platter. Kinard also is the only player who has seen service in all of the Doughs' 13 encounters this year.

Setting the pace for base thefts was right fielder Woody Burt who has stolen six bags. The flashy outfielder has climbed to the top in the fielding department by handling 19 chances without an error.

Silcox not only registered the highest number of games won, but proved to be the best hit-scatterer on the Doughboy crew. He allowed 22 hits in 29 innings pitched, more than any other member of the staff, but held opposing clubs to seven runs, only four of which were earned.

Southpaw Ken Watts, who has a record of two wins and one defeat, is tops in the strikeout department with 46. However, the veteran portsider seems to have had more control trouble than any other Benning pitcher, having given up 20 walks, hitting two opposing batters and having one wild pitch.

A total of 17 runs, 14 of which were earned, made Watts the most scored - on hurler on the Dough roster. He gave up 19 base hits to enemy batters.

The only Doughboy twirler who had not been tagged with an earned run was Collis (Lefty) Lehner, who performed only 12 innings to chalk up two triumphs.

Basketball Course Attended By Two Benning Officials

Lieutentants Irving Levine and Noah G. iKng recently returned to Fort Benning from an athletic coaching clinic at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill where they underwent one-week course in basketball tutelage.

One of the major subjects discussed, they pointed out, were changes in basketball rules formulated by the National Basketball committee at its annual meeting last March. The revised rules, they added, will govern play by the Fort Benning Doughboys during the 1948-49 season.

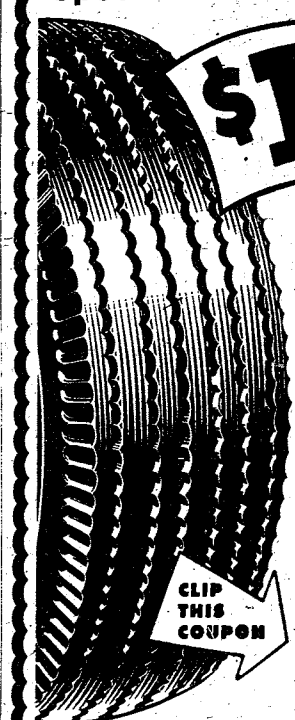
POST BULLETMEN SPLIT TWO SCHEDULED GAMES

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Splitting a two-game series, the post Bullets finished last week playing even .500 baseball.

Getting off to a winning start, the local team launched a 14-hit barrage to chalk up an overwhelming 11-2 victory over the Buena Vista Red Sox last Sunday. Behind the three-hit pitching of Amos Snowden, the Bullet aggregation tallied in all but one frame of the game which was called at the completion of the sixth inning.

After the third inning when the Red Sox bunched two hits for two runs, Snowden bore down to blank the losers the rest of the way. The Bullets scored most of their runs in the sixth stanza on successive singles by Nichols, Hardy, Davis and Hale.



Four-baggers! by Arthur Houston and Erskine Ware and a triple by Gene Thomas featured the batting power of the winners. Bill Lester, Perry and MsRainey hit safely for the Sox.

Despite a five-hit mound performance by right-hander Larry Hall loose defensive playing by the Bullet diamond nine brought a disappointing 8-4 defeat at the hands of the Opelika Blue Sox under the lights of Bullet field last Wednesday night.

Going into the ninth holding a 4-3 lead, the impregnable defense enjoyed earlier by the Bullets fell flat, and the visitors scored five times on as many Bullet errors, but collected only three hits.

Finding themselves behind from the start, the Bullets picked up one run in the third, two in the fifth, and one in the seventh.

Lawson Swim Squad Enters National Meet

Lawson field's third-ranking swimming team in the Southern Air Force area is at Scott Field, Ill., this week competing for honors in the nation-wide air force pool classic which got under way Friday.

The quartet of swimmers, who recently placed third in the Southern meet at Shaw Air Force Base, S. C., includes George McAnelly, William Dow, Donald Henckley and Howard Bates.

First place at Shaw AFB was taken by the host squad which chalked up a total of 54 1-2 points, and the Keesler field, Miss., contestants compiled 36 points to take second place. A total of 17 1-2 points were tallied by the Lawsonites to take third place. Other air force bases of the area which had teams entered in the meet were Tyndall field, Fla., and Maxwell field, Ala.

The best efforts made by Lawson in the individual events were two second places. In the 220-yard free style contest, Bates finished second, and Henckley, who finished behind Bates in the 220-yard swim, captured second spot for the 100-yard breast stroke. Bates chalked up a third in the 100-yard free style.

Participating as a four-man team, the Lawsonites finished third in the 320-yard relay.

McAnelly was fourth to cross the finish line in the 100-yard back stroke, and Dow was awarded fourth place in the three-meter dive.

The squad is being piloted by McAnelly.

'Cycle Fans See New Indian Arrow

Motorcycle enthusiasts who have been waiting a long time for their first look at the new Indian lightweight machines crowded into the Indian Sales and Service shop, 823 4th avenue, today and stared their fill at the "Arrow" a revolutionary single cylinder machine that weighs only 240 pounds or about half as much as the familiar Indian motorcycles of the past.

The machines are not only lighter; they are different in many ways from any motorcycles ever seen before — and they are almost completely silent in operation. For reasons of safety the controls have been relocated in such a way that every operation involved in starting, shifting and stopping is performed without removing the hands from the handlebars or the feet from the foot spuds. The gear shift mechanism on the side of the tank is gone, and in its place there is a hand clutch and a shift lever operated by a touch of the toe.

Other features of these machines include hydraulic front forks built like the landing gear of an aircraft, automatic spark, exceptionally large brakes, "cushion" sprockets, rubber mounted handlebars which absorb all vibration and shock, and the fact that they are fitted with magnetos as well as generators. Their balance is such that a child can ride them, and adults who have never ridden a motorcycle are usually sufficiently at home in the saddle after ten minutes' practice to drive off through city traffic.

'Operation Combine III' To Be Staged In Florida

Tactical Air command, with the assistance of the army, navy, and marines, will stage Operation Combine III, at Eglin Air Force base, Fla., between Sept. 27 and Nov. 3, Lawson Air Force base officials were informed this week.

TAC's Operation Combine I and II were held at Lawson in 1946 and 1947, but the necessity for increased facilities, newer-type airplanes and the increased size of the operation this year, made the Lawson area unsuitable it was announced.

The joint air-ground demonstrations as well as lectures and dramatized skits to explain the detailed staff planning necessary in joint operations.

The purpose of the operation, according to Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, TAC commanding general, will be to demonstrate air-ground planning and operations to the student officers of various schools in all branches of the armed services. Naval and marine participation has been coordinated under direction of Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet.

The exercise will be under the direction of Maj. Gen. William D. Old, Ninth air force commander. Praticipating units will be drawn from Tactical Air command and other air force commands, the army, navy and the Marine corps.

One group of about 100 navy planes from the Atlantic fleet forces and a group of approximately 100 marine planes from the Atlantic fleet marine forces will participate in the exercise. These two air groups will be supported by approximately 2,000 navy and marine personnel, who will be based at a field near Pensacola, Fla., under the command of Rear Admiral John W. Reeves, Jr., chief of naval air training.

SAND HILL UNIT CALLED 'SOLDIERINGEST' OUTFIT

BY BOB PHILLIPS

The 25th Infantry regiment's Company G is rapidly acquiring the name of the "soldieringest" unit in the Sand Hill area.

There are reasons: The desire to be selected as the most outstanding soldier of the week during Saturday's inspection and the possibility of being awarded a three-day pass. The men have something to look forward to and they work like Trojans to attain that goal.

First of all, deeply imbedded in the hearts of each member of the unit is an untiring and ever-present spirit of devotion, loyalty and pride in the company. The resulting factor of this individual competition has been the development of unit pride and loyalty. No man wants to be the "Snafu" of the company, and each considers himself an individual competitor with grim determination to win.

Strangely enough, the men are actually pleased with the Saturday morning inspections. They are always neatly dressed, which results in headaches for the inspecting officer since neatness and soldierly appearance are two of the main factors to be considered in choosing the outstanding soldier.

One week prior to each inspection, one of the five barracks in the company is picked as the model for the following Saturday.

3rd Army Plans To Offer Prizes In Song Contest

Third army headquarters announced this week the opening of the Third Army song contest, in collaboration with the army-wide contest to select a suitable number for all branches.

Winning entries of the Third army contest will be forwarded to the chief of special service, Washington, D. C., for consideration in the final selection, officials said.

The army is looking for a song—not about the infantree, artilleree or the "boys from the radio shop No. 3", but an over-all army song worthy of being adopted officially.

Cash prizes are being offered in the Third army contest as follows:

a. First prize - $100.00
b. Second prize - 50.00
c. Third prize - 25.00

Entries must be submitted to the Special Services section, Headquarters, Third army, Fort McPherson, Ga., not later than Nov. 20, 1948. Winners will be announced on or about Jan. 1, 1949. National winners will be announced on Army Day, 1949.

The competition is open to all who desire to participate, including civilians not connected with the military service. Entries must be original in title, words and music, and of approximately standard length. The music will be of military character, written in a rhythm and range which can be easily used for marching and singing, and will include a piano part (treble and bass clef). Lead sheets will be accepted only if complete with chords.

CAREER MAN . . . Dwight Tuvell, 19, Springfield, O., one of the recently arrived recruits, says the Army is the best job he ever had, and intends to make it his career. He has enlisted for the 82nd Airborne division, and following basic training at Harmony church, expects to enter the Infantry school for airborne training.

Our Post Philosopher says: "If you want to see how important you are, stick your finger in a bucket of water and see the big hole it leaves when you pull it out.

WAC Recruiter Due

Capt. Juanita F. Biddle, Wac recruiting officer for the Third army, will arrive at Fort Benning Aug. 20 for a two-day visit for the purpose of interviewing potential Wac recruiters, it was announced Monday by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third army commander.

Normandy Invasion Story To Be Published Aug. 23

A story of the Normandy invasion, the army Historical division's latest volume in its series of World Warr II battle narratives, will be published August 23.

The 14th in the "American Forces in Action" series, 'Utah Beach to Cherbourg" covers the landings in Normandy by the VII corps under General J. Lawton Collins, now deputy chief of staff of the army, and the subsequent operations leading to the capture of Cherbourg. A previous volume on the First army's invasions, entitled "Omaha Beachhead", was published in 1946 as the first of the series.

Author of the new history is Roland G. Ruppenthal, who accompanied the VII corps as a combat historian in the D-Day landings. Coverage of World War II campaigns for historical purposes was undertaken at the direction of General George C. Marshall, then army chief of staff.

Participating in the action described in "Utah Beach to Cherbourg" were the 82nd and 101st Airborne divisions and the Fourth, Ninth, 90th and 79th Infantry divisions. The story of the campaign is of particular interest in that it describes an amphibious assault on an enemy-held coast combined with supporting airborne operation carried out several miles inland. The first use of large bomber and fighter-bomber forces in support of ground troops was another feature of the campaign.

Reveal Reason For Cost Rise Of Cigarettes

The increase of one-cent in cost of cigarettes at post exchanges is the result of an increase by major cigarette manufacturers in the wholesale prices, it was announced this week by the army exchange service in New York.

Exchange officials said that, contrary to beliefs, the exchange has no special privilege in the market, and must pay the same prices for merchandise as any retailer. The small profit on cigarettes, however, as on all post exchange profit, is added to the welfare funds for the entertainment and recreation of troops, they said.

Four New RCTs Being Readied For Selectees

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall announced today that four new replacement training centers located in widely separated sections of the country are being readied to receive an increasing flow of enlistees and inductees who will be brought into the army under selective service. This will increase the number of such installations to eight.

Georgraphical locations, existing facilities and operational economies were considered in selecting the sites to be used for processing and training the new soldiers in the basic elements of their military duties. As far as practicable, men will be sent to traning center closest to their homes, a factor considered of morale value in the early months of army life.

The locations chosen, in addition to above factors, will permit the movement of incoming soldiers with the least possible impact on public transportation facilities. Those now in operation are Fort Knox, Kentucky; Fort Ord., California; Fort Jackson, South Carolina and Fort Dix, New Jersey. The new training centers to be opened will be at Fort Riley, Kansas; Camp Chaffee, Arkansas; Camp Pickett, Virginia, and Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky. The trainee capacities of the camps range from 9,000 at Fort Riley to 14,000 at Camp Chaffee.

Under the expansion of the army program, Camp Breckinridge will receive the first increments about August 20. After October 1, trainees will be sent to the other new training centers.

It is anticipated that the new soldiers will spend about ten weeks at the training centers, eight of which will be devoted to basic training and the other two to processing, classifying and reassignment.

Because the training at all centers will be basic, the fact that an inductee is sent to a training division designated as airborne or armored, for example, will not indicate that he is receiving jump training or instruction in tank tactics. Names of the training divisions were chosen in keeping with the army's policy of designating training units by the names of active World War II divisions. The training at the 17th Airborne division at Camp Pickett, for instance, will be identical with that at the Ninth Infantry division at Fort Dix.

The other six training divisions are the Third Armored at Fort and the 101st Airborne at Camp Chaffee, Fourth Infantry at Fort Ord, Fifth Infantry at Fort Jackson, 10th Infantry at Fort Riley and the 101st Airborne at Camp Breckinridge.

After basic training, the soldiers will be assigned as needed to active units in the field.

45th Infantry Division Sets November Reunion

The 45th Infantry Division association has scheduled its annual reunion on November 12, 13 and 14 in New York City, with headquarters at the Hotel New Yorker.

All members and former members of the division are invited to attend. Further information may be obtained by contacting Alton M. Moore, 113 1-2 West Broadway, Okemah, Oklahoma.

Airborne Vets To Hold Third Annual Meet

Veterans of the 101st Airborne division will hold their third annual reunion September 3 and 4 in Chicago, Illinois, according to an announcement by the division association.

Beginning with registration Friday morning, September 3, the reunion will feature informal parties and business meetings, climaxed at a banquet the following night.

The 101st was activated on August 5, 1942, and served with distinction throughout the entire European campaign. It made its initial jump on D-Day in France and in six days fought its way to Carentan, a vital German stronghold.

Although it took part in the largest airborne operation of World War II, when it dropped in Holland, September 17, 1944, the division is best known for its defense of Bastogne. It was there that Major General (then Brigadier General) Anthony C. McAuliffe, acting commanding general, made his historic reply to the Germans' ultimatum to surrender, 'Nuts!'

At the cessation of hostilities, the 101st division had reached Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat. It was inactivated on December 17, 1945, in Europe.

Successive commanding generals in combat were: Major General M. C. Taylor, March 31, 1944, to September, 1944; Brigadier General William N. Gillmore during September, 1945, and Brigadier General Stewart Cutler to December, 1945. General McAuliffe commanded the division only at Bastogne.

2 Local Officers Cited For Service

In recognition of outstanding services performed overseas, two members of the 325th Regimental combat team, Lt. Neal R. Smith and Maj. Tom S. Phair, were presented with awards in a simple ceremony last Saturday morning by Col. James F. Torrence, 325th commanding officer.

Lieutenant Smith was awarded the Army Commendation ribbon "for meritorious and superior performance as an investigator with the legal section" in the Pacific, while Major Phair was presented with the Italian Cross of War Merit for outstanding achievemnts in Italy.

As an investigator with the legal section, General Headquarters, Supreme Commander for the Allied powers, Lieutenant Smith displayed "outstanding ability in the preparation of medical and hospital cases for prosecution before military commissions."

The 325th lieutenant gathered information to "prove that the negiect, poisoning and failure to provide sanitation by the Japanese medical staffs caused the death of more than 1,100 American prisoners of war." Conducting a "particularly difficult and painstaking "investigation of the Japanese Army Medical Experimental warfare plans, he provided valuable research for the Military Intelligence."

A veteran of both the Pacific and European theaters, Major Phair served with the famous Sixth division in the Aleutian campaigns, then moved over to the other side where he participated in the campaigns at Ardennes and Central Germany.

Benning Demonstration Team Back From Riley

A 14-man airborne demonstration team has returned to Fort Benning following more than a week of special duty at Fort Riley, Kans.

Composed of members of the Airborne section's Air Landing committee, the team provided courses of instruction in and demonstrations of transporting troops by air for the 34th Infantry division of the Iowa-Nebraska national guard, 84th Reserve Airborne division and 104th Reserve Airborne division.

Courses of instruction were given in tying ropes and knots, special tie - down devices, computation of loads and lashing strength, flight rules and safety precautions and use of the load adjuster. They also provided demonstrations of loading and lashing and practical exercises on the C-82 troop transport.

Sunday, Aug. 15, the second group of Benningites arrived, and Monday began instructing a course in aircraft familiarization.

Tuesday, the local team prepared the national guardsmen for a training flight with heavy equipment, while on Wednesday the 102nd received the same

Life-Size Traffic 'Targets' Installed

STREET SCENE . . . An interested onlooker, while Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, and MP Cpl. Waylen Lamb talk over the placing of the new type traffic sign, is Joe Raney. Idea behind the traffic "target" is to force drivers to slow down by placing the sign in the middle of the street during daylight hours.

Placed In Areas Where Children Play In Streets

A novel method of preventing traffic accidents involving children in residential areas of Fort Benning went into effect this week with the placing of six child-size traffic "targets" in areas on the post where children play in the streets.

Two of the lifelike signs have been put up on Rainbow avenue between Baltzell st. and Stonewall, two on Running avenue between Baltzell and First Division road, and two on Bicksop street between Madden avenue and Running. According to Norman Evans, Infantry Center safety director, they will be shifted to other areas as the need arises.

Last year, Mr. Evans said, 4,000 children were killed in traffic accidents throughout the nation. At the same time, no children at Fort Beninng were casualties. However, excessively high speeds maintained by some drivers on the post, especially in the residential areas, despite severe panalties extracted for this type of traffic violation, have caused concern among parents, the Infantry Center safety council and the provost marshal's office.

The move to place the new signs in the streets came as a idents of Rainbow avenue and members of the safety council. The details were then worked out between the householders,

Exchange Opens 'All-Night Eatery' In Main Cafeteria

How many times have you wished you could have that little "midnight snack" just before hitting the sack?

It will be possible now with the opening of an all-night snack bar located in building 1600, the south wing of the main cafeteria on the main post.

Operated by the post exchange for the convenience of all personnel, the concession held its official opening Monday night. The snack bar will be open from 10 p.m. until 2 a. m. each night Monday through Saturday.

Hot sandwiches, beer and soft drinks will be served. Beer will be served until midnight.

It's just the ticket for those getting off the last bus from Columbus, those driving onto the post, or those leaving the Main theater after the last show.

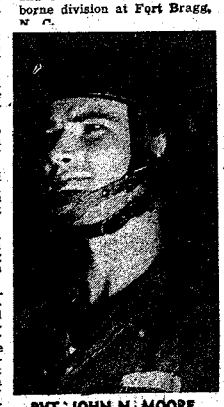
Immigrant Finds British, U.S. Airborne Similar

There's not a great deal of difference between the British and American airborne armies according to Pvt. John N. Moore, an English immigrant who is now a member of the Airborne battalion's Compaay A.

Moore, who is in his third week of training, says that the major difference is in the physical training.



"In England, we get two weeks of PT before we begin to jump. Then we jump for two weeks," he said.

Jumping in England would seem to be more hazardous, too, since British paratroopers make the leap from aircraft without a reserve 'chute.

The British airborne student, Moore pointed out, spends a total of four weeks in training as opposed to five weeks in the U. S.

The young soldier, nicknamed "Limey" by his fellow students, speaks with a typical cockney accent. Born in London, the 23-year-old trooper served three years with the British Sixth Airborne division. He made, during that time, 15 jumps, two of them in combat — the Normandy and Rhine airborne campaigns.

Moore immigrated to this country in November, 1947, and enlisted in the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Signal Officers Recall Forecast

The army Signal corps will have to recall 471 reserve officers, the majority in company grades, before the end of September if it is to meet expanding training requirements, the chief signal officer announced today.

Authority to establish the recall quota was granted by the Secretary of the Army in the light of a serious shortage of officer personnel. The quota permits the recall of nine lieutenant colonels, 85 majors, and the balance in company grades.

The normal tour for officers returning to extended active duty is three years. Early application by interested reservists was urged by the chief signal officer, with emphasis placed on the growing need for officers to train inductees and lead units in the expanded army.

Information and forms for making application may be obtained from Organized Reserve corps or national guard unit instructors.

Unit Aims For All-Time High In Soldier Deposits

An all-time high in soldier deposits is the goal aimed at by men of Company I, 504th Airborne Infantry regiment, the Infantry School's parachute demonstration unit.

In striving for their goal of $2,000 ,the personnel of Company I had a total collection of $1,980 for the month of July. The unit also purchased $157.50 worth of U.S. savings bonds during last month, with 91 out of 168 eligible personnel participating in the drive.

What Are The Army's Plans

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the second in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1. Will women be drafted?

No. Only male citizens and other male persons residing in the United States between the prescribed ages are required to register and are liable for service by induction.

2. How will selectees be allocated to the army, navy and air force.

Through the selective service system.

3. Will army draftees be able to transfer to the airforce or navy if they want to?

No, and vice versa.

4. To what extent will the army utilize men of limited intelligence or limited physical capabilities? Will they be given jobs commensurate with their abilities? Will they have any chance for promotion?

Under the law the armed forces are prohibited from inducting men in these categories.

5. Will we have a "broomstick" army?

No. Adequate material is available to train new personnel.

Colonel Torrence Named to Head 325th Infantry

Formerly atached to the general staff of the Department of the Army where he served for the past three years, Colonel James Frederick Torrence, Jr., has now assumed command of the 325th Regimental combat team.

Colonel Torrence replaces Col. Charles H. Royce who has been transferred to Fort Riley, Kans. to become chief of staff of the 10th Mountain division.

The new 325th head served with Allied Force headquarters in the Mediterannean theater during the war. He joined Allied headquarters in London in September, 1942, then went with the unit to Gibraletr, Algiers and finally to Casserta, Italy.

A graduate of West Point, class of 1923, Colonel Torrence was tank tactics instructor at the Infantry School from 1937-1940. He previously had attended the regular officers course at the Infantry School in 1934, and served for one year here with the 29th Infantry before enrolling for the tank course in 1937.

Following his graduation from West Point, the new 325th chief received his first assignment with the 11th Infantry at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Later he went overseas to serve with the 27th Infantry at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

Colonel Torrence was an instructor at the military academy from 1928 to 1934.

September 6 To Be Holiday

Fort Benning's military and civilian personnel will observe Labor Day, Sept. 6, as a holiday it was announced Saturday by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

All except the necessary duties will be suspended.

Sgt. 1st cl. Robert L. Jenkins, Headquarters and Headquarters, company. 325th Infantry regiment, last week took his first three-day pass in 21 years.

Sergeant Jenkins said he had never wanted a three day pass before since he had always been able to attend his business with an overnight or weekend pass. Now, however, he is close enough to his home in John-City, Tenn., to make the trip home in 72 hours-which accounts for his first three-day pass last week.

The sergeant entered the service on July 11, 1927, at Johnson city, and has served in Hawaii, Panama, Africa, Italy, France, Germany, Austria, Korea and Japan.

Two Lawsonites Leave For Texas

Sgt. Elmer W. Lee and Pvt. Harold E. Pollard left Lawson air force base this week for Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Texas, where they will serve as food instructor and medical instructor respectively, it was announced today.

Both airmen are natives of Chattanooga, Tenn., and veterans of 18 months in the CBI theater, where Lee served with the 124th Cavalry and Pollard with the 54th Air service group.

The two men served at Lawson for approximately one year, Lee as a cook and Pollard assigned to the base dispensary.

BIG GAME HUNTER . . . Sgt. 1st cl. Spurgeon Peters, supply sergeant of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, holds the huge rattler he killed last week at Brush pond. He was fishing in the Fort Benning pond at the time he killed the monster. It had nine rattlers and one button.

the council and the provost marshal's office, and the post engineers were given the signal to construct the six "targets."

About four feet high, the signs will be placed in the middle of the street during daylight hours. At night they will be removed so that they will not create an additional traffic hazard.

It has been decided that for the time being no more than six of the signs will be used since it is believed that a few, strategically located, will be more effective than a great many. Instead, they will be shifted about from time to time. Placed in the center of the street, they will necessarily force drivers to slow the speed of their vehicles in order to pass them.

Post Dialogue

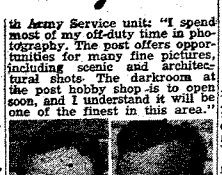
To help us relax in our off-duty hours most of us have hobbies. Some collect stamps, others like wood carving or perhaps painting. Many people even plan to develop their hobbies into future professions. Of 15 people queried this week eight gave replies to the following questions:

What is your hobby? Are local facilities adequate for you to pursue your hobby?

Sgt. Clifford G. Caldwell, Company B, Infantry School detachment: "I am a married man and own my own home in Columbus. In my spare time I like to work in my garden, landscaping and planting grass. I am transplanting 18 rose bushes, and intend to make a little rose garden alongside my house."

Caldwell G.K.P. Anderson

Sgt. 1cl George K. P. Anderson, Company H, 25th Infantry: "I am interested in choral singing, and have joined the Philharmonic Choral Ensemble under the direction of Sgt. Willis Brown. At present my duties as platoon sergeant take up much of my time, but I spend Tuesday and Thursday evenings rehearsing. When we have a concert to give, we rehearse nightly for a week prior to the performance. The group will give a concert at St. James Methodist church in September."



Cpl. Edward L. Anderson, 27th Car company: "My hobby is golf. I usually plan on playing Saturday and Sunday and sometimes on Wednesday afternoon when we can get transportation to Sand Hill. The course is pretty rough, but that is because it is comparatively new. I suppose in time they will get the rough spots worked out."

E. L. Anderson Stultz

Pvt. Robert S. Stultz, Battery A, 319th Field Artillery battalion: "Radio is my hobby, and will be my profession when I leave the army. I am a radio operator in the battery, and have been studying it for several years. There is a nice hobby shop in the hospital where one can work on repairing radios. I believe radio has a future and would like to be in it."

1st Lt. Howard E. Smith, 3440th Army Service unit: "I spend most of my off-duty time in photography. The post offers opportunities for many fine pictures, including scenic and architectural shots. The darkroom at the post hobby shop is to open soon, and I understand it will be one of the finest in this area."

Smith Hoisinger

Pfc. Orange C. Hoisinger, Battery A, 319th Field Artillery battalion: I like photography, and would be pleased to attend an army school offering this type of course. Most of my spare time is spent taking pictures. I have inquired at the hobby shop, but I understand the darkroom is not yet completed. However, as I will be leaving the post soon, I don't think I will be able to take advanatage of the equipment here."

Pvt. Simons S. Sanders, Service company, First battalion, Student Training regiment: "Ball games are what I like best, especially baseball. I enjoy seeing the Doughboys play, and watch their record with interest. They certainly have a fine team this year, and I will be sorry to see the season end."

Sanders Crowell

1st Lt George B. Crowell, Second company, Student Training regiment: "Golf and photography are my major pastimes. I have played on the local course, and find the facilities adequate. I understand that a new darkroom is being set up and I am glad to hear this since I intend to make full use of its facilities. I think it would be an excellent idea to have local photography contests, featuring the "Picture of the Week," published in the Bayonet"

Trainees Begin 1st Phase Of 8-Week Basic Course

Under the watchful and anxious eyes of the nation, young America began to buckle down this week to the task of becoming soldiers, as the first group of three-year volunteers, who arrived at Fort Benning two weeks ago, entered the first training phase of an eight-week basic training course.

Now settled in their home at Harmony church, the 1,117 trainees of the 325th Provisional Training battalion were officially welcomed to Fort Benning in an address delivered Monday by the Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress.

Col. James F. Torrence, commanding officer of the 325th Regimental combat team, and Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, commanding officer of the trainee battalion, also spoke to the recruits.

In welcoming the young group to Fort Benning, General Burress stressed the interest being taken in their welfare and training. He also pointed to the extensive training program here instruction.

A demonstration of loaded C-82's was thrown open to the public on Wednesday afternoon, and officials estimated that approximately 1,500 persons visited the demonstration site during the afternoon. The airforce sent in two helicopters to provide aerial entertainment, they said.

Highlight of the afternoon's demonstration, however, came with a parachute jump by the Fort Benning troopers.

The men returned to Fort Benning last Thursday.

Included in the group were Capt. James B. Hewette, 1st. Lt. Orval H. Sheppard, Sgt. 1st. cl. William E. Wade, Sgts. Robert H. Weaver, Leslie M. Kothe, William J. Miler, Jack W. Lovan, Newton B. Tidwell and Charles G. Muller, Cpls. Stewart C. Manning, Charles H. Crapps, Clyde M. Dickerson and Lynn L. Mortimore and Pfc. Frank Lewotsky.

in which the volunteers have a great opportunity to prepare for advanced training, thus enabling them to enter any phase of the army well equipped.

Following orientation, the young doughboys embarked upon the first real phases of army training. This week they get their preliminary training on the rifle, dismounted drill and interior guard duty. They also attended lectures, took part in discussions and demonstrations in sanitation, first-aid, army policy and regulations.

A novel training phase has been added as the trainees will attend lectures and demonstrations of the "trainee court" patterned after the one used in the universary military training experiment at Fort Knox, Ky. It will be the first observance and demonstration of its kind ever held at Fort Benning.

The trainees who witness the "court" proceedings will be all "eyes" and "ears" for upon their shoulders will fall similar responsibilities when later from amongst them will be appointed men to form their own "trainee court", officials said. The personnel who serve will provide their own prosecution and defense councils.

The "trainee court", first inaugurated under UMT, proved to be a huge success and the army is going ahead with its policy of experimenting with the idea under the current expansion program, authorities declared.

During the week the group listened to the Articles of War. Explanation and closer defining of the articles were presented while they were read to the men for the first time.

Next week emphasis will be placed on preliminary rifle marksmanship and the continuance of lectures and demonstrations.

Concentration will be speeded on dismounted drill, in preparation for the trainees' first parade, which will be held Saturday, Sept. 4, at Stilwell field.

Strictly Editorializing

FOR SEVERAL WEEKS now we have been in the process of taking pictures of and compiling data on the basic airborne course with a view toward using them as our picture story in some future edition of The Bayonet. During this time, we have come to know—not intimately, we'll admit—a great many airborne soldiers. And we think now we understand why they are such good soldiers and why their esprit de corps is so high.

First of all, their training is about as rough as any we've seen. We know for sure that if there is a muscle anywhere in the student's body, it's bound to show up after a few days of the physical training he undergoes. Secondly, there is strict discipline—not harsh or unfair—but soldierly discipline. This is true for all the students, whether colonels or privates, since so far as the instructors are concerned, there is no such thing as rank as long as the man is a student.

WE ALSO believe those silver wings which come at graduation time have a great deal to do with the high morale and almost worshipful pride the airborne soldier has. He must feel that he can endure the tough physical training provided he is rewarded with the coveted wings of a full-fledged trooper.

Watching the airborne soldier train reminds us of the story of two paratroopers who were touring France. Their guide pointed out the tomb of Napolean, and said, "Here is the tomb of the greatest soldier who ever lived." One of the paratroopers looked up and said, "Yeah? Where did he jump?" We would call that real pride.

Recruit Training

According to the army's chief of staff, General Omar N. Bradley, "the petty annoyances that sent many World War II veterans away hating the army must be removed."

General Bradley made this point clear recently in announcing the policy for the treatment of recruits soon to be taken into the army under the Selective Service Act.

He further pointed out that young men coming into the army will be better clothed, better outfitted and will present a better appearance than their prototype of 1940-41.

Of course, during the war years, it was not always possible to make each soldier entering the army looke like Beau Brummel—simply because there was not enough time. There was a job to be done, and America was forced to give up her civilian pursuits long enough to accomplish that job. Now, however, in our first peacetime draft it is encouraging to know that the new soldier will not look like a fish out of water because of ill-fitting uniforms.

Further along in his statement, General Bradley also emphasized that the new techniques learned by the army during the experiment in universal military training carried out at Fort Knox, Kentucky, will be used to improve the type training deemed necessary to prepare young men for careers in the armed forces. No one can deny that the experimental unit at Fort Knox afforded the army its greatest opportunity to study personnel problems. The trainees were young, they served more or less as guinea pigs, they proved that military training is not harmful to the youth of America as so many of the anti-military would have us believe.

There can be more saying "Mine is not to question why; mine is but to do or die." Under the present plan, all draftees will know exactly why they must do certain things in certain ways. They will also be told how long they can expect to be at their basic camp, they will be told where they are going when they leave basic camp, they will know why they are going to a new installation. Above all, they will know what they are going to do at a new post when transferred—not several weeks after arrival but before or upon receipt of orders transferring them to a new station.

It is also planned to use the merit and demerit system, inaugurated at Fort Knox. Under this system, a man would, for example, lose his week-end pass privilege should he be "gigged" three times during a week for infraction of regulations. However, it would not preclude his going away for the weekend since he would still be allowed to work the demerits off by volunttering for extra duty in off-duty hours. We don't agree with some who say that this will encourage infractions because the man knows he can work off his demerits. We remember the days of basic training we had, how exhausted we were at the end of the day, and how all we wanted to do was go to bed—then we realize that extra duty will not be sought by many as a means of working off demerits. And after a few weeks of restriction, we don't imagine there will be many demerits.

A final item we noted in the announcement by General Bradley is the plan to encourage commanders to select a "best soldier of the week." But it won't end there. The commander will be encouraged to write a letter to the man's parents, telling them what the man is doing and complimenting them on the soldierly qualities of their son. The idea behind this is not only to give the individual pride in himself. It is also designed to give the individual pride in his outfit, one of the greatest asets an organization can have. With pride and high morale, there can hardly be anything other than an efficent unit.

We believe that General Bradley has done a great piece of work in providing this new policy, and we believe that it will cause many men to realize the advantages of an army career and perhaps become thirty-year men. At any rate, it can do no harm. Recruits will at least return to civilian life with a friendly feeling toward the army.

Chaplain's Corner...

ARE YOU EVER AFRAID?

by

Chaplain James H. Goewey

Are you ever afraid? If you are, you have plenty of company, for no one of us has been successful in passing through his length of years without having a haunting sense of fear come upon him at least once during his lifetime.

Sometimes we are tempted to say that fear is a sign of weakness in a person. But we need to remember that all fear is not bad. Fear, when it is held under control, can act as an internal alarm clock. But with all too many of us fear becomes a definite menace in our life. It becomes our master and we its slave. Once a person becomes the slave of fear, darkness descends upon him and he is caused to live under a dark cloud. In such a condition one can never hope to live a successful and victorious life—be it in the mental, physical or spiritual sphere. In other words, when fear grips our souls, we are kept from being our best selves.

"But," someone says, "how can I so overcome fear that I become its master rather than its slave?"

There is only one answer to that: by the power of an indwelling Christ and a loving God. Alone man is powerless, but with the power that comes through a confident trust in Jesus Christ it can be done.

A visitor on a Wyoming ranch asked a cowboy on nightwatch over the cattle why he sang so much. "Well," replied the cowboy, "my songs ain't grand opera exactly, but they quiet the steers when they get restless. They tell them I'm still on the range with them and keep them from stampedin' maybe when it thunders, or a gunshot bangs somewhere."

Then he hesitated before he added: "You know,stranger, you'll think it's funny, but sometimes the stars are like those songs to me. . .you know what I mean—as if a Greater Cowboy somewhere herdin' people instead of cattle, was singing through the dark so that people won't be so restless and afraid."

Are you ever afraid? Then remember God's assuring promise, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee."

"I'm no prohibitionist," says the first sergeant, "but I can't see the kind of patriotism that requires a fifth to celebrate the Fourth."

Policeman: "How far were you from the spot where the man was shot?"

Jones: "Thirty - six feet, eleven and a half inches."

Policeman: "How come you know it so exactly?"

Jones: "I figured some dope would ask me so I measured it."

WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT

The reader's reaction to "What the People Want" will, we imagine, be approximately the same as his reaction to its author. Those who admire Ellis Arnall will no doubt enjoy his book; those who don't like him will find much to criticize in it—that is, if they bother to read it at all. Mr. Arnall's writing, although adequate, is not particularly inspiring. It may gain a few converts to the Arnall faction or lose a few followers; it will hardly cause any great political upheaval.

We see little in the book to offend anyone, except possibly a few monopolists, a Republican or two, and what the author speaks of as the "Boston Brahmins", those proper Bostonians who have behaved improperly toward Mr. Arnall's Georgia and the rest of the south. The former governor is clear and plain spoken in his views on housing, taxes, education, freight rates, monopolies, Henry Wallace, and everything else that he and his secretaries could think of. He says what he thinks, but he manages to keep his temper while he's doing it. In his book, as in his private and public life, he is always a gentleman, always the master of the situation, calm, even-tempered, polite — sometimes uncomfortably so. We almost wish he would stumble a little, lose some of his self assurance, some of his smugness.

"What the People Want" is a report on the state of our nation made by Georgia's ex-governor, who polled 75,000 miles and interviewed citizens of 47 states in order to get his material. It begins with his fight with Herman Talmadge for the governorship—in our opinion the best part of the book and goes on to record his observations during his 47-state lecture tour. We wish Mr. Arnall had spent more time on Herman and the governship fight which he knew about from personal experience, and much less time on Wyoming and Maine and Iowa and Pennsylvania, which he apparently learned about from Chamber of Commerce literature. Much of his book sound like a bulletin prepared especially by the city fathers. We don't doubt that Arnall did speak to a great many people in his 75,000-mile tour, but we wonder if the kind of men and women he would meet at his lectures are representative of the people in their states. In the items about his own state, and most of the south, there is an authority that is lacking from the rest of the book.

What do the people want? Peace and national security, says Arnall. They want jobs and a stabilized cost-of-living, a health program and a program of education; they want more and better homes and lower taxes. This is all ture of course, but is there anything new, anything we didn't already know. That is, we think, the principal criticism of the Arnall book.

Your Red Cross

By MURRAY E. HILL

For the past ten years or more, newspapers and magazines have been filled with news items and articles on youth movements throughout the world.

Early in the decade we read with horror of Hitler's Youth goose stepping hither and yon across Germany, and perhaps we read with equal horror of similar movements throughout other nations in Europe and the Far East.

Quietly and without fanfare, and on a strictly voluntary basis, during that same period of time, there was a youth group growing in this country, devoted to betterment of human relationships on a three-dimensional scale - local, national and inter-national a group whose theme was "above all nations is humanity."

I am speaking of the American Junior Red Cross, nineteen million strong—nineteen million, a greater number than the combined youth movements of all other nations.

This vast number, and the mere mention of American Junior Red Cross, will mean little to you unless you know something of the organization. The membership consists entirely of boys and girls in grade school and high schools. After they graduate from high school, they are no longer eligible for membership in the Junior Red Cross. Their humanitarian achievements during the past few years have been monumental, but to me this is not as important as the seriousness with which they take their responsibilities.

Last month, 600 of these boys and girls met in a convention in San Francisco, and in a manner which would have done justice to adult thinking, they laid plans for greater years to come - local, national and international.

And while I am writing this, 200 boys and girls from 13 Southern states, representing over 125 different communities are encamped for ten days at Pine Mountain. This is not merely a recreational camp for boys and girls, for their day from 7 in the morning until 9 at night, is packed full of study hours.

It is true they are taking water safety, life saving, first aid and accident prevention, and other familiar subjects known to adult Red Cross workers, but it is equally true they are spending long hours in serious discussions for world peace, world relief, local welware, better government and many other things that will make them better citizens, when within a few short years they will be adult leaders in their communities.

Juvenile delinquency is an ugly expression. What better way to combat this locally, nationally, or internationally than by the youths controlling it themselves?

I say, thank God that we have an American Junior Red Cross.

9-Man Engineer Crew Drags River For Body

A nine-man crew from Company C, 307th Engineer battalion, has been dragging the Chattahoochee river for four days for the body of a Columbus veteran, Benjamin K. Hendricks, 43, 2001 First avenue.

Hendricks is believed to have drowned when the boat in which he was fishing along with another fishrman sank in the river.

The engineers have been using a helicopter in an attempt to locate the body, and Tuesday they began blasting in an effort to shake it loose. Hendrick's body had not been found up till noon Tuesday.

The 307th engineers were called out by Columbus police when Joe Bagley, who was with Hendricks, reported to city police that he and Hendricks were fishing near the Alabama side of the river when the rear of the 14-foot motor-power launch began to go under water. Bagley, who was sitting midship, leaped from the boat and swam to shore. He reported he heard Hendricks shouting as the boat went down.

The cause of the sinking is believed to be the oversized motor carried by the boat.

Led by Capt. Frank Martinez, the crew from the 307th included Sgt. Charles S. Ferber, Cpl. Kenneth M. Scott, Pfc. Darwin Miller, Pvt. Kenneth A. Gunter, Pvt. Paul J. Malloy, Pfc. Albert G. Hewitt Pfc. Leonard P. Collier, Pvt. Gene H. Fitzgerald, Pfc. Louis C. Gomez and Pfc. Clarence Bivins.

To Accept More W-O's, Officers

Maj. Gen. Ernest F. Cuneo, chief of the national guard bureau, has announced that applications for appointment as warrant officers, regular army and national guard, may now be filed by members of the national guard and air national guard regularly in recognition of service and strength ceiling.

The action was made in order to remove any hindrance to the already critical shortage of officer procurement inherent in the budgetary ceiling for the fiscal year 1949.

The ceiling of 291,000 guardsmen for June 30, 1949, announced by the national guard bureau, was the equivalent figure of assigned men and officers.

Under the revised policy, the normal strength of a unit will be the full table of organization strength. Unit procurement will be limited solely by requirements necessary to federally recognized units and by authorized personnel strength ceiling.

General Cuneo explained that the hiring of funds on officer procurement would not in any way increase the number of officers the states could maintain during the current fiscal year. Actually, more enlisted men may have the opportunity to join the guard as officers will no longer be released until they are promoted.

Separate enlisted ceiling for the states were established by the army on June 30, 1948, an increase of 20,000 men over the previous ceiling. Full utilization strength of the enlisted ceiling is expected by approximately 1950.

Along with the enlisted strength ceiling was the new quotas which increase the army unit to approximately 90 per cent of its authorized table of organization.

Schedules Eight Scraps Friday

Pugilists of the Airborne battalion will stage their bi-weekly boxing show in the outdoor arena across the street from the unit gymnasium Friday night. The card for the evening will include eight bouts.

Fight promoters hesitated to predict that the bouts this week will be as close as the ones in the last program when all eight contests were won by decisions.

Probably the most closely-fought battle on the last card was the fifth of the evening. In a heavyweight go, hard-hitting John Stanton, 174-pounder of Company A, carried his opponent, 176-pound John Ford of Company G, through all three rounds to take the nod in a split decision.

Two middleweights, Mike Corsalo of Company C and Floyd Gladney of Company G, put up a good scrap in the sixth bout of the evening. The decision in favor of the 155-pound Corsalo was unanimous. He weighed in five pounds heavier than Gladney.

Guard To Enlist Aerial Engineers

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau, today announced that the light bombardment squadrons of the air national guard have been authorized to enlist aerial engineers, bringing them to full combat flying strength.

These specialists, although included in the ultimate light bombardment squadron organization were left out of the immediately active troop basis when the postwar air national guard was reorganized in 1946.

"The added importance of the air national guard to the nation's defense under changing conditions motivated their activation at the earliest possible me," General Cramer said.

As members of the regular bomber flying crews they will hold the rank of Technical sergeant and double as gunners. Sixteen aerial engineers are authorized or each squadron.

Of the 12 light bombardment squadrons allotted the air national guard, ten have been completely organzed and had a strength of approximately 2,-900 men on June 30. Approximately 350 of their allotted 530 A-26 bombers now are in operation.

The change raises authorized strength of the squadrons to 356, or 18 groundmen short of full war footing.

Strength of the air national guard on July 15, 1948, was 29,-511 officers and men. Ultimate strength will be 58,138.

BRIDE AND GROOM OF SATURDAY: Sgt. and Mrs. Lon S. Hurt leave the Catholic chapel following the ceremony Saturday morning. Mrs. Hurt is the former Miss Margaret Lindemann, daughter of Mrs. Carolyn Lindemann of St. Louis, Mo. Sergeant Hurt is with the Infantry School detochment.

Miss Lindemann, Sgt. Hurt Wed At Chapel Ceremony

An impressive double ring ceremony marked the wedding of Miss Margaret Mary Lindemann, daughter of Mrs. Carolyn Lindemann of St. Louis Mo., and Sgt. Lon Hurt, which was solemnized Saturday morning at the Catholic chapel with Chaplain (Maj.) John F. Rafferty officiating.

The maid of honor, Miss Jeanne Lindemann, another sister of the bride, was gowned in gold taffeta, and Mrs. Margaret Berry, the bridesmaid wore green taffeta. Both ladies carried nosegays and wore coronets of pink roses.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Raymond Lindemann, was lovely in a gown of white satin, made in colonial style. She carried a nosegay of white gardenias and red roses.

Sgt. John Spehar served as best man, and Sgt. Charles Berry was usher.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Pine Lodge NCO club.

Mrs. Hurt is a graduate of St. Alphonsus high school and St. Louis university, St. Louis, Mo. During the war she was a member of the Women's Army corps, and served overseas in Heidelburg and Bamburg.

Sergeant Hurt, the son of Mrs. Margaret Hurt of Fitgerald, Ga., is a graduate of Fitzgerald high school. He has served with the First Airborne and the 29th Infantry division, and is at present with the Infantry School detachment at Fort Benning.

A farmer watched with amazement as his soldier-guest put away portion after portion of chicken. After dinner they were sitting on the porch when a rooster strutted by.

"My," exclaimed the military man, "that's a mighty proud looking rooster."

"He should be," said the farmer. "He's a Marine."

French Cadets Tour America

A party of ten French cadets from the Ecole Polytechnique Paris, are visiting the United States at the invitation of the Department of the Army as a return exchange visit for a group of West Point cadets who toured France during June and July.

The cadets arrived in Washington on Sunday, Aug. 22. Following an inspection of the Pentagon on Monday, they were presented to Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, General Omar N. Bradley, chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. A. R. Bolling, director of the army's Intelligence division. In the afternoon they met with Lt. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, chief of engineers.

After a three - day stay in Washington, the cadets were slated to visit West Point and other army installations as well as industrial plants and outstanding engineering projects. They will return to France by air from New York City on Sept. 13.

40 Youngsters Can't Upset Nursery 'Mothers' Serenity

"Forty children aren't much more trouble than one or two." That's the opinion of Mrs. Ethel McDonald, and she ought to know what she's talking about, for she quite often has that many youngsters to look out for at the Block 12 NCO club's nursery.

"The main thing about children" says Mrs. McDonald, who has raised one of her own and several grandchildren and countless nieces and nephews and cousins, "is to understand each child's personality and to love him. After that you don't have any trouble."

Well, not so much trouble. Of course, Mrs. Mc. admits, there are times when the nursery gets a littly noisy. And some of the older boys of seven or eight are inclined to play a little rough, but she manages to calm them down. That's one of the things Mrs. McDonald is rather proud of. In her year with the nursery none of the children has ever been hurt.

Mrs. Robert Forsyth, who takes care of the "crib" set, has her share of troubles, though things are much better now than they were when there were only three cribs for about three times as many babies.

The nursery is operated in connection with the Block 12 NCO club. Wednesday and Saturday are big nights for the club, with games and dancing. And on Sunday afternoon there are games too, and a special supper. Lots of parents wanted to come over and enjoy the club activities, but there was always the problem of what to do with Junior. Baby sitters aren't always easy to find and the cost runs up, too. So lots of parents just stayed home, until someone thought up the idea of the nursery. And then they found Mrs. McDonald, who loves every baby on Block 12, and a lot of other blocks too, and their troubles were over.

The club provides toys of all kinds — even a record player — and for the older children, from about two on up to ten, there are refreshments — popsickles and chunkies and soft drinks and bubble gum. The babies—some as young as six months — have their private quarters, with walls decorated with nursery figures. The only charge is 25 cents for an entire afternoon or evening.

Some days there are more children than others, but usually there are at least 15 or 20 and quite often there are 40 or more, with about eight or ten babies, and most of the others from two to six years old. The two ladies admit that they have their hands full, but they insist it's easy enough to manage them "if you just love them enough." Or, we might add, if the kids love you enough. And it takes only one visit to the Block 12 nursery to know that the kids, all 40 of them, think a mighty heap of their nursery mothers.

Sgt. Pyland Rejoins Unit

M-Sgt. Joe M. Pyland, one-time sergeant major for the 97th Infantry and more recently an ROTC instructor at the University of Florida, Gainesville, has joined the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team as sergeant major of Head quarters and Headquarters company, officials said this week.

Sergeant Pyland entered the army of Dec 29, 1936 and served with the Fifth Armored division and 772nd Training battalion.

And then there was the calvary-man who wore arrows in his socks to go with his bow legs.

Arkansas Victory Eliminates Locals

Doughs Drop 12-Inning Tilt; Plan To Defend Army Title

Fort Benning's drive for the national semi-pro baseball pennant came to an abrupt end in Wichita, Kans., last Saturday afternoon when a scrappy nine from Camden, Ark., eked out a 12-inning, 5-4 decision to drop the Doughboys out of the race for the national title.

With their elimination at Wichita, the Doughs started making plans to return to Fort Benning and getting ready for the annual Third army diamond tourney at Fort Bragg, N.C., on Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2.

The Doughs, who are the defending Third army champions, will be highly favored to carry off the trophy at Fort Bragg again this year. The toughest competition is expected from the host North Carolinians.

Probable Entries

Although team entries for the Third army classic haven't been made known here, it was generally conceded that teams representing Fort Bragg, Fort McPherson, Ga. and Fort Jackson, S. C., would be in the scramble.

The only one of the teams which the Doughboys have met this season is Fort McPherson. The local squad has staged two tussles with the Atlanta army nine this year, and has taken both ends of the series, winning a July game at Gowdy field 23-3, and blasted the McPhersonites 8-3 earlier this month on Atlanta sod.

Originally the army meet had been scheduled for last Tuesday, but tourney officials decided to delay the meet a week to permit the Doughboys to participate in the national semi-pro tournament.

Silcox Loser

Right-hander Ike Silcox, who has been the Dough mound mainstay this season, was dealt his first loss of the season by the Arkansas team last Saturday. Coming to the hill for a relief role in eighth, Silcox blanked the Kraftsmen for four stanzas, but was tagged with the defeat when he was scored on in the 12th.

The tilt was a crucial one for both squads since both had been beaten once in the tourney, and the loser of the game was destined for the showers under the meet's double elimination plan.

The Arkansas lads had to come from behind to snatch the game out of the fire after the Doughboys had gotten off to a good start by scoring once in the first and twice in the second to take a three-run lead.

Comeback Staged

The first Doughboy counter came when Woody Burt doubled, and was batted across the plate on Joe Smith's single. In the second canto, Ralph Terry walked, pitcher Lefty Lehner, playing first base, singled. Tom Gallagher advanced both runners with a sacrifice bunt, and Ken Watts, who started on the hill, singled them both in.

However, the Arkansas team started its trek up the comeback trail in the last half of the second by scoring twice, and knotted the count at 3-3 with another tally in the home half of the third.

C. Bell singled to start the Kraftsmen's second, Churchill reached on a bad throw, E. Bell singled and Thompson banged out a long fly to score C. Bell. The second run crossed the dish when starter Watts uncorked a wild pitch to permit E. Bell to score from third.

Doughs Lead Again

The tying tally for the Camden aggregation was scored when Albright walked, went to second on a sacrifice by A. Schaufele, and scored when C. Bell lashed out another single.

Benning went ahead again in the fifth on Burt's single, a sacrifice by Bob Kinard and another single off the bat of Smith. The Kraftsmen tied it up again in their half of the sixth, and the score remained deadlocked until the lads from Arkansas broke it up in the 12th after both teams had threatened on several occasions.

Silcox found himself in hot water early in the fatal 12th frame when substitute catcher Dossey, the first batter for the Arkansans in their half of the inning, slapped out a double. Thompson then tried a sacrifice, but was safe himself when the play was made to third. An intentional pass to Coleman filled the bases, but Dossey was out at the plate on Evans' grounder. A clean bunt by Albright, however, brought Thompson scampering across the plate with the decisive tally for the Arkansas nine.

Three Pitchers

In trying to salvage the game and keep in the running, the Doughboys used three flingers. After going five innings, Watts was jerked in favor of right-hander Ray Som, who performed two innings before yielding the slab chores to Silcox. Thompson went all the way for the Camden crew.

Thompson gave the Doughboys 13 safe blows, walked four and struck out seven, while his teammates were busy nicking the trio of Benning hurlers for 14 base knocks.

Burt, Smith, Harold (Blondy) Burnett, Lehner, Gallagher and Watts headed the Doughboy hitting roster with two blows each. C. Bell slammed out three singles for the Camdenites, and Evans, Albright, Purifoy and E. Bell each chalked up two safe hits.

BULLETIN

Col. Walden S. Lewis of Fort Benning won the senior flight of the all-army golf tournament at Fort Lewis, Wash., this week, and probably will head the army's senior squad in the forthcoming inter-service matches at Pebble Beach, Calif. The post stroker, who entered the meet in the capacity of an individual contestant, won his finals match from K. G. Fielder, 1-up on 19 holes. Although the match was all even at the end of the scheduled 18 holes, Lewis stroked in a birdie on the 19th green to oust his finals opponent.

Hurlers Get Resin

The resin bag was first allowed pitchers in the Sally League in 1926 after considerable discussion by Judge William M. Bramham, then president of the circuit.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Recently an enthusiastic baseball fan dropped into the office much disgruntled over the weather and various other conditions which had curtailed diamond activity at Gowdy field this year. He pointed out that his attendance at the home of the Fort Benning Doughboys this year had been almost nightly, and would have been more consistent had there been more games.

However, this gentleman backed his complaint about the weather with a proposal to do something about it.

He wanted it made clear that his idea wouldn't completely foil old man weather, but that it would get the jump on him in numerous instances where excessive moisture would otherwise cause a postponement of a ball game.

It has to do with a substance used by the Signal Corps in packing small sensitive mechanics to keep them from absorbing moisture during transit. The substance, according to John Q. Fan, is similar to sawdust or excelsior, but its absorbent qualities are much higher.

Citing an instance in which the material was used to "waterproof" a unit ball diamond overseas, the diamond enthusiast explained that the entire infield was excavated and then a layer of stuff placed about a foot under the ground before the soil was replaced and rolled out. He pointed out that, on several occasions, the field was ready for play within an hour following a moderately heavy rain.

Since the idea sounded full of logic to us, we thought we might pass it on in hopes that it will be picked up by post athletic officials in an effort to provide Fort Benning fans with a heavier schedule of games next year.

Sharing this column this week is Merrill S. Harrison, Bayonet Staff writer, who accompanied the Fort Benning Doughboys on their trek to Wichita, Kans., for the national semi-pro baseball tournament. Harrison's report on the journey follows.

* * * *

The Doughboys may not have won many ball games during the national semi-pro tourney in Wichita but they did win a lot of friends. Up against some of the best semi-pro clubs in the country, all of them regional champs, they had a hard row to hoe, and their activities both on and off the diamond had the crowd pulling for them. A not unusual comment, even among sportswriters covering the meet, was "I'd like to see the soldiers knock that club off." Many spectators from Wichita, who nowadays don't see too many in uniform, turned out in large numbers to pull for the Benning squad, and there was more than a little disappointment when the local lads were eliminated last Saturday.

* * * *

Wichita is as friendly a city as many soldiers will ever see. From the time of the team's arrival until its departure Sunday the representatives from Benning were awarded more than the usual courtesies. It wasn't merely being friendly as a matter of course. The locals went out of their way to be hospitable. Much of the credit for this should by all means go to Ray Dumont, president of the National Baseball council and general factotum of the meet. It was he who arranged the many little things that helped the boys have a better time than they might ordinarily have had. This included more than sufficient numbers of free passes to the best local movies, complimentary ducats to the ball park for readily-made friends of some of the players, and an all-around general willingness to cooperate and keep everybody in a good mood.

* * * *

Prior to the Wyoming Indians' game Dumont told this writer that he had heard the "general down there at your camp seems to be really behind your boys and I'd like to see them win a few for him." That, from the president of the NBC, which had 32 squads participating, seemed a rather nice thing to say.

* * * *

One of the outstanding figures at the meet was Texas cattleman Herb Kokernot who sponsored the Dough's victims, the Alpine, Tex., Cowboys. When his team was eliminated he immediately "adopted" an impecunious nine from New Jersey because, as he said, he " came to see some baseball and he wanted to have a team playing." His original squad wasn't hurting however, for he shipped them off to Colorado Springs for a few days' vacation after he took over the Glen Ridge, N. J., outfit, installed them in the best hotel in town, and told them not to worry about expenses. Kokernot, incidentally, is worth only 43 million dollars.

Fall Court Tournament Begins Here Saturday

Five Divisions Established For Various Age Groups

Entries for the annual fall tennis tournament of the Officers' club close at 6 p. m. today, and first round matches are scheduled to start Saturday afternoon on the en-tout-cas courts adjacent to the club swimming pool.

Play in the meet will continue until Sept. 12, and feature matches will be staged on Saturday and Sunday of each week.

Five divisions have been set up to accomodate players of all age groups. They are men's, women's, junior boys' and girls' singles, and men's doubles. A consolation rounds of men's singles matches also will be contested for players who are dropped out during the first two rounds of the tourney.

Pairings and starting times for first round matches will be posted in the pro shop on Friday.

Competition in the men's divisions of the tourney was expected to be close since both of Fort Benning's tech cup team members, Sanford H. Webster and Charles Daniel have indicated that they will enter the meet.

With Webster and Daniel out of the contests, eight entrants for the men's singles have been highly seeded. The list of favorites includes Dale Balliett, winner of the post singles crown in 1946; John Booge, runner-up to Balliett in 1946; George Beatty, captain of the Presbyterian college squad in 1938; Lee Weeks, a member of the University of Mississippi team this year, who is taking training here as a reserve officer; John Baumgartner, a member of the doubles runner-up team in the Third army tournament this year; Dave Silver, a member of the West Point squad in 1944; Art Hyman, runner-up in the consolation matches of the club tournament last spring, and W. D. McDowell, former University of Kansas court star.

The top-seeded berth in the women's singles goes to Mrs. Charles Johnson, winner of the tourney division last year, who will be defending her title in the forthcoming matches. Mrs. Johnson's most formidable competition probably will be provided by Mrs. Sue Millsapps, who is a ranking court star in Kansas.

Since Sinclair Hitchings, last year's champ in the junior boys' division, has left the post, the nod in that bracket has been given to Dick Burman with a strong bid for the title expected from Meryl Griffiths.

Tournament committee chairman Chuck Evert hesitated to make any predictions as to the outcome of the girls' division since this is the first year it has been included on the agenda for the annual classic.

Approximately 70 players are expected to sign up for the competition before this evening's deadline, and the largest field is anticipated for the men's event.

Evert believes, however, that the number of participants in the young people's divisions this fall will be unusually large due to the free tennis clinic, which has been conducted throughout the summer months. About 45 youngsters of the post have attended the instruction periods this summer, and most of them have shown amazing improvement, Evert said.

Shortly after the meet, the club's pro shop will close for the winter months. The courts, however, will remain open throughout the year.

12th Armored Vets To Meet In Windy City

Plans are nearing completion for the second annual convention of the 12th "Hellcat" Armored division at the hotel Stevens in Chicago, Ill., Sept. 4 and 5, according to an announcement by the association's convention committee.

Tentatively scheduled for the meeting are unit gatherings, business sessions and a dinner-dance. Further information can be obtained by contacting W.R. Comfort, 3179 Chadbourne road, Shaker Heights 20, Ohio.

The 12th Armored division was activated on Sept. 15, 1942 at Camp Campbell, Ky., under the Fourth Armored corps, and after extensive training in the United States, including the Tennessee maneuvers, left for overseas on Sept. 20, 1944.

Entering combat early in Dec. 1944, the "Hellcat" division fought the Germans during their last offensive defending the small Alsatian town of Herrlisheim near Strasbourg. In five months of constant fighting, it snapped the steel trap on the Colmar pocket, roared across the Saar Palatinate to the Rhine and later captured a bridge intact across the Danube, which still is considered one of the most strategic feats of World War II.

MORTON FLIPS, WILLIAMS SNAGS . . . Expected to click off some counters for the Doughboy grid eleven this season is the passing combination of Bob Morton, left, to J. F. Williams. Morton, who surpasses anything in the pass flinging deportment seen here for several years, has come up as one of the favorites for the main-string quarterback position, while Williams is one of the brightest end prospects to don a Dough practice suit this year.

Workouts Begin For Fight Crew

Bolstered bytwo current Third army chapions, light-heavyweight Richard Donaldson and lightweight Norman Clark, plus four veterans, middleweight Harold Murphy and welterweights Bob Rogers, Bob Reno and Walter Mason, a group of 17 mitt men reported Wednesday to John H. Maddox as preparations for the 999th Field Artillery boxing season swung into action.

The present season will mark a revival of the 999th's boxing program, the last team coming out during the 25th Combat teams 1946-47 program when the triple nine won three individual crowns and placed second in the five-team circuit.

Trainer Maddox said that, due to current hot weather, road work and light conditioning exercises will prevail for the next two weeks, but it will gradually expand with the coming on of fall weather.

Lawsonites Falter In National Golfing

Gene Yow and Clement Maloney, two Lawson field golfers who finished one-two in the recent Southern air force tournament at Maxwell field, Ala., returned to their home base Monday night after making an ineffectual effort to garner a berth on the all-air force squad at Hamilton field, Calif.

The local linksmen were trying to earn themselves the right to represent the airforce in the forthcoming inter-service tournament at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Although he finished far ahead of Maloney at Hamilton field, Yow still was too deep on the scoring roster to go to Pebble Beach as an airforce team member.

One of the reasons for the high scores carded by the two Lawsonites was the high wind, an obstackle which the local linksters failed to encounter during their play here and at Maxwell field. According to Yow, however, the hard 72-par course was in excellent condition for tournament play.

The Lawson stroker, who holds the Fort Benning enlisted golfing title, said that the course over which the tournament was played was one of the longest and most difficult par 72 layouts he has ever seen.

After firing rounds of 80-82 for the first two rounds of the tourney, Yow began to get the knack of playing in the wind, and cut his last two tours of the course down to 77-75. Maloney, after plunging far down on the list following his first two rounds, withdrew from the medal-play classic.

Competing as a team entry, the Southern airforce squad, headed by Yow, finished sixth in the meet.

Yow was named to head the meet after he had nudged out teammate Maloney in a playoff round following the recent tournament at Maxwell field. After both had finished the Alabama tourney with identical 293's for 72 holes, Yow fired a par 72 over the course to take the No. 1 spot from Maloney, who stroked a 74.

The Lawsonites also made their mark in the special events phase of the Maxwell tourney. Yow won the long-driving contest, and Maloney finished first in the putting event.

In the driving special, Yow chalked up an average of 261 1-3 yards on three wallops, and Maloney took honors in the putting classic by sinking three out of nine tries.

BY AL WISE

Folowing an 8-4 setback administered them in the first game, the Fort Benning Bullets, sustained by right-hander Lawrence Hall's six-inning no-hitter in the nightcap, barraged nine hits for an 8-0 win to split last Sunday's doubleheader against the Columbus Crusaders in Golden park.

An enthusiastic gathering, numbering some 1,000 fans, witnessed the twin treat which consisted of a nine-inning opener, and an abbreviated nightcap. Although the close-out tilt was scheduled for seven frames, it was called at the end of six due to a Sunday law.

In the first game, righthander John Graves started on the mound for the locals, and was nicked for a brace of hits which gave the city squad four runs. Several errors by his teammates turned out to be the speedy righthander's undoing. He was relieved with two out in the fourth by Alva (Speedball) Ellis with two waay in the fourth, Ellis finished the game.

The post aggregation went hitless until their portion of the fourth when shortstop Gordon Burke opened the inning with a single to center. In the fifth, the Bullets entered the scoring column via a single by left-fielder Tony Hardy and a terrific base-clearing four-bagger to center by first sacker Hirron (Lefty)—Collier.

Burke's single, Coleman's hard drive through the second-baseman's legs and Hardy's drive off the shortstop were responsible for the locals' final two tallies.

A run in the first, five in the fourth and one in the sixth highlighted the Crusaders' win in the opener.

The lone tally scored by Hardy in the first stanza of the second game might easily have decided the second game in favor of the Bullets, but the post crew came back to score seven times in the fifth.

The Benning team scored its seven runs on a single by Hardy, Boyd's walk, a one-bagger by Burke and a mile-driving 400-foo triple off the center-field fence by Erskine Ware. Thomas then tripled to left to score Ware, and came home on a relay error Ulus Hale then scored Nick Nichols with a sharp line drive to left to conclude the Bullet counting in the fifth.

Hall, in turning in his pitching gem, was ably supported by his mates during the six cantos o play. Only two opposing batters reached first, and that was the only base occupied by Crusaders during the contest.

The first Crusader batter to reach first came as the result of a walk in the fourth. However the runner was doubled off first by third-sacker Burke of the Bullets after he had snagged the batter's sharp line drive. Burke errored in the sixth allowing the second city squad batter to reach the pathways, but two consecutive catches by left-fielder Hardy closed the festivities for the day.

Thunderbolt Vets Set Indiana Meet

Veterans of the 83rd Infantry division will meet in Indianapolis, Indiana, at the Claypool hotel August 20 and 21, in the second post-war reunion of the "Thunderbolt" Division, sponsored by the 83rd Infantry Division Association.

President James C. Hanrahan former lieutenant colonel in charge of military government for the division, said more than 1,500 veterans of the 83rd are expected to attend. Mr. Hanrahan is now vice-president and general manager of Scripps Howard Radio, in Cleveland.

Originally an Ohio division in World War I, the 83rd was composed of men from every state in the union during World War II. Since the division returned from Austria, where it was on occupation duty following the end of hostilities, it has been designated a reserve division for Ohio and Indiana with headquarters in Cleveland. The division, which trained at Camp Atterbury, Indiana, and Camp, Breckinridge, Kentucky, before it was sent overseas in April of 1944, participated in five campaigns in the European theater, which began in Normandy and ended 50 miles from Berlin.

All 83rd veterans who plan to attend are requested to contact the Claypool hotel for reservations.

Assigned Duty At Fort Bragg

Since his arrival in March, 1946, Colonel Moran has been appointed several times to head numerous fund - raising campaigns. He headed the 1948 Red Cross fund raising drive, and was chief of the war bond drive held in conjunction with the U. S Security Loan campaign which ended June 30.

Over $69,000 worth of War Bonds was purchased by post military and civilian personnel during that drive.

Long On Blows; Short On Scores; Doughs Beaten By Wyoming Tribe

WICHITA, Kans. — The Fort Benning Doughboys made more hits, but the Worland, Wyo. Indians made more runs. Thus the Doughs went down to their first loss in the National SemiPro Baseball tournament Tuesday night by the not-too-imposing score of 6-4.

It looked for a few innings as though the Benning nine had a pretty good chance of garnering their second straight in Wichita, but the Indian sign was on them, and, when starter "Lefty" Lehner faltered at the beginning of the fifth, the Wyoming aggregation took advantage of his weakness, and before reliefer Ken Watts could retire the side two runs were in and the Wyoming team was one run to the good.

In the Benning half of the third, Burt poked the ball out on the ground to right field, and would have been out on the grounder except that first sacker Bloom failed to touch the base on the throw in. He then stole second and took third on a bad throw. Joe Smith then doubled, and Burt scored. Blondy Burnett singled to score Smith, and took second on the relay to the plate. Herb Lauve walked, but the scoring chance ended when Bill Brooks grounded out.

Miller and Mileski of the Indians walked to open the fifth, and both scored on Harkins' double. Then Bloom singled to score Harkins, and that was all for Lehner. Left-hander Watts came in, fanned Troseth and forced Dailey to ground out to the infield to retire the side.

The Doughboys came back to tie up the game in the last of the fifth as Burt singled and took second when Kinard laid down a bunt and was out at first on the sacrifice. Burnett then singled to lift scoring Burt, but Lauve flied out to end the canto.

The game was sewed up for Wyoming in the first half of the sixth when Pusheys walked and pitcher Abernathy's single sent him to third from where he scored as Miller made first on a fielder's choice that got Abernathy out at second. The Indians got their final run in the ninth when Troseth made it to first, went to second on Heron's single, and came home on Dailey's double.

Things looked brighter for the Doughboys in the ninth when, after Kinard whiffed, Smith and Burnett hit successive singles. But Stine relieved Abernathy and the game ended with both Lauve and Ralph Terry, who batted for Brooks, striking out.

Contest Tonight For Doughboys

Probably Last Home Tussle For Post Squad This Year

The Fort Benning Doughboys have scheduled a diamond tilt—probably their last of the year at home—with the Columbus Sports shop nine under the lights of Gowdy field tonight.

Although playing as representatives of the city sporting goods concern, the team is a hand-picked group of all-star players of the best Columbus and Phenix City crews, and the lads are expected to give the regional champion Doughboys a good scrap.

The probable mound performer for Manager Herb Bench's Doughs tonight will be Bob Cronin, ex-Airborne battalion Trooper, who topped the list of pitchers during the regular intramural activity. Cronin, a right-hander, is being strongly considered for the assignment since he was inactive throughout the recent national semi-pro meet in Wichita, Kans.

The tussle with the sports shop nine will climax almost a week of idleness for the Doughs, who were eliminated from the national semi-pro running last Saturday afternoon. The Benningites returned to the post late Monday evening, and immediately started preparations for the last lap of their 1948 campaign.

To conclude their activity for this year, the Doughboy squad will journey to Fort Bragg, N. C. to wage a defense of the Third army championship which they copped at Gowdy field last year by downing the Bragg aggregation.

Manager Bench and his charges are expected to leave sometime Friday for the meet, which gets under way Saturday.

Although no games have been placed on schedule for the period following the Third army tournament, there is a scant possibility that one or two extra-curricular contests will be played on Gowdy field prior to the outset of the football season.

Aid Is Promised Troops Attending University Center

Seventy-five per cent of the tuition fee for Fort Benning personnel attending the University of Georgia off-campus center in Columbus, which begins its fall term Sept. 27, will be paid for by the army, it was revealed by troop information and education officials this week.

Sept. 24 and 25 have been designated as registration dates for the fall term which gets underway Monday night, Sept. 27, at Jordan high school, scene of the off-campus center.

Fort Benning personnel who desire to enroll at the university should consult the Infantry Center information and education office before registering. Military personnel must secure a transcript from the last school attended, and submit it to the University of Georgia off-campus center.

Under the provision of Department of Army circular No. 146, regular army personnel with less than two years college education, may register for the off-campus classes. Before registering, however, they must report to the local information and education office.

Foreign Officers Plan TIS Courses

Another 18 foreign officers and one enlisted man are expected to join other foreign students already scheduled for classes at U. S. army service schools during the 1948-49 academic year; it was announced by the army in Washington last Friday.

Among those slated to attend the Infantry School are 2 Chinese officers, two from Sweden; one from the Union of South Africa and one from Canada.

The Chinese group includes, Lt. Col. Siang Lin and 1st Lt. Lu-Sin Wang.

Two Swedish officers are also expected at the Infantry School for courses. They are Capt. Mills I. Carlborg and Lt. Tor S. Backland.

Maj. Stefanus F. Dutoit will represent the Union of South Africa, and Lt. Albert G. M. Angus the Canadian army.

China's Colonel Lin will take the officer's advanced course which begins Aug. 28 and ends June 25, 1949, while Lieutenant Wang is enrolled for the officer's basic course, which begins Jan. 3, 1949 and ends June 12.

Captain Carlborg, Lieutenant Backland and Major Dutoit are already enrolled in the basic airborne course. They are expected to graduate on Oct. 15.

Lieutenant Angus, who began the communications course Aug 31, will graduate from the Infantry School on Feb. 3, 1949.

A total of 14 Chinese officers, including the two at the Infantry School, will be in the U. S. during the academic year. Some will attend the Command and General Staff college, while others are expected at the Artillery School and the Finance School.

Line Talent Still Sought By Mentor

A critical shortage of capable linemen existed as Head Coach Joe Shepherd started candidates for the 1948 grid version of the Fort Benning Doughboys through their second week of pre-season drills.

The outlook for tackle probably is brighter than any other line position, but is lacking in depth. Talent at guard, center and end, Shepherd said, is extremely short.

The Dough mentor now is conducting his practice sessions on a full-time scale. The first hour of each morning and afternoon is taken up with blackboard drills, and the remainder of the time is used for actual workouts on Blue field.

In issuing a call for more players particularly linemen, Coach Shepherd expressed hopes that some aspirants who are unable to get a full-time release from their duties would report for the afternoon warm-up periods. He also said that night sessions will be instituted if the free-time turnout is large enough.

Although the prospects for a strong backfield have been good since the start of pre-season work outs, the Dough tutor has made some shifts behind the line which he expects will add more power to the ball handling department.

Steve Prielozny, who originally was listed as a fullback, is being switched over to give more depth to the quarterback position. Other outstanding candidates for quarterback are Bob Morton and George McCall. Morton, who has shown a lot of talent in passflinging, may, however, wind up in the fullback slot.

Robert Easley, a triple-threat back, recently joined the squad in its workouts and is showing signs of being a definite asset to the team.

High on the list of prospects for fullback is Eugene Viera, who has been turning in some fancy feats of punting.

Undoubtedly the strongest department in the backfield—and on the entire squad—is halfback. Two veterans of the Doughboys' 1947 squad, Harry Sloan and Gale Sult, have improved considerably in ball-carrying and shiftiness, and top the roster of prospects for halfback.

On the line, Jim Murphy, 298-pound tackle, has made some long strides in picking up speed, and is now being rated by Coach Shepherd as one of the foremost candidates for the position. When he first started coming out, Murphy tipped the scales at 320, but the big lineman already has reduced his waistline by more than 20 pounds, and expects to trim off even more avoirdupoids before the season opens.

A spark of hope for strengthening the end positions looms on the harizon for the Dough pilot, who hapes to acquire Bob Cronin for one o fthe outside spots shortly after Sept. 1. At present Cronin is tossing the horsehide for the Doughboy baseball team, but will be available for football following the Third army diamond tourney at Fort Bragg, N.C., on Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2.

The first activity by the Doughs this year will be staged on Sept. 11 when they motor over into Alabama for a scrimmage game with the Troy State Teachers' college.

Arrangements to schedule a game for the Doughboy B squad with the Tyndall field Flyers still have not been completed, but an invitation for the Florida air-force eleven to visit Doughboy stadium on Sept. 26 has been extended.

The eight definitely slated tilts this year will include five conflicts in Doughboy stadium and three on the road.

Air NG To Get Jet Fighters

Beginning the conversion of the air national guard to jet fighters, Lockheed F-80C "Shooting Star" jet fighters have been delivered to two squadrons in California and Nebraska, Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Gurad bureau, announced today.

Ten jets went to the 196th Fighter squadron at San Bernardino, Calif., while five were delivered to the 178th Fighter squadron at Lincoln, Neb. In addition, two jets are enroute to the 132nd Fighter squadron, Bangor, Me. A total of 107 "Shooting Stars" are scheduled for delivery to ANG squadrons by Dec. 30, 1948.

"Over a period of years, all of the 72 fighter squadrons alloted the air national guard will be converted to or equipped with these powerful new aerial weapons," General Cramer said.

The 61 federally recognized fighter squadrons now in operation are ecuipped with F-47 "Thunderbolts" and F-51 "Mustangs."

A selected group of air national guard pilots and ground crewmen have been trained at tion School in order to utilize the U.S. air force Jet Transition the jet fighters as they are made available to the guard. These men in turn will train other air guardsmen in the special skills required for the servicing and operation of the jet ships.

Lawson Field Unit Renamed Monday

Lawson's 319th Air Force Base unit became the 4408th Air Base squadron last Monday when its parent organization, Tactical Air Command, Langley air force base, Va., inaugurated a new redesignation program for its wings and bases, Lawson officials announced this week.

The switch from a base unit to a base squadron which went into effect at 1 a.m. Aug. 23, will completely reorganize the base set-up, but will not involve change in personnel, equipment or mission, officials stated.

Lawson activities were placed under the 319th Air Force Base unit early in 1946 when they changed over from the 311th Army Air Base unit, which was the field's wartime designation.

4TH DIVISION SETS MEET

Gordon Cup Meet To Start Saturday

BY MERRILL HARRISON
Bayonet Staff Writer

Only two days remain for oficer linksmen to turn in cards for handicap adjustments for the semi-annual Gordon Cup tournament which begins Saturday at the Officers' club course.

It has been requested by the club's tournament committee that at least five 18-hole scores be turned in prior to the outset of the journey so that handicap adjustment may be made. However, in cases where golfers interested in participating in the tourney have been unable to play five rounds before the opening date for the meet, adjustments will be made by the committee.

Qualification rounds for the tournament will consist of 36 holes to be played on Aug. 28 and 29, and three days of match play will begin on Sept. 4.

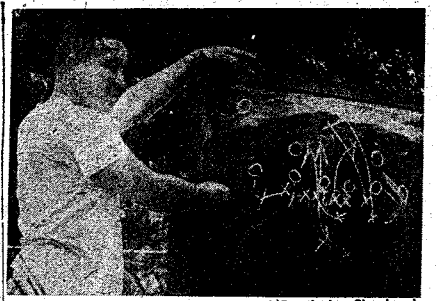
During the qualification play, candidates for the trophy will be given benifit of their full abndicaps, but the stroke advantage will be decreased to three-fourths for the match play phase of the meet.

Following the medal - play rounds, contestants will be arranged in flights of 16 golfers each for the matches, and sufficient flights will be established to accommodate all aspirants. The Gordon cup will be presented to the winner of the championship bracket, but other flight victors also will receive awards.

The championship division winner will have custody of the cup for a six-month tenure, after which the award again will be put up as the stake in a similar meet.

The origin of the Gordon Cup tournaments dates back to the early 1920's when the award was furnished by a group of Columbus business men for the officer golfer of Fort Benning who established himself as the champion handicap player.

The tournaments were semi-annual affairs until the late 1930's when the cup, for some reason unknown to present committee members, went into retirement.



The forthcoming meet will be the first since the trophy was retired, and the same conditions will prevail under which it was first instituted.

Although annals concerning the Gordon Cup matches have either been destroyed or misplaced, several oldtimers among the post's golfers have recalled that the meet was limited to officer personnel of Fort Benning. Therefore, only officer personnel will be eligible to compete in the forthcoming classic.

OUSTED . . . Hopes faded for Devert Moore, who was considered one of Fort Benning's leading candidates for a spot on the army golf team, when he was ousted 4-3 by John Laxton of Brooke General hospital, Tex., in the second round of the all-army links meet at Fort Lewis, Wash. Moore represented the Third army while Laxton is a member of the Fourth army delegation.

Guard Officers Sought By Army

There is an increasing need for reserve and national guard officers to volunteer for return to the army for extended active duty tours in order that vacancies caused by the current expansion program can be filled by experienced personnel, the Department of the Army announced today.

A total of approximately 37,000 additional officers will be needed between now and the end of June, 1949. The immediate requirement is for 6,000 reserve and national guard officers who held the grade of lieutenant or captain prior to their release from active duty at the end of the war. While vacancies exist in all arms and services, infantry, medical corps, Dental corps Medical Service corps, field and coast artillery, and Signal corps officers are in the greatest demand. Nurses are also urgently needed. At present there are 542 vacancies in the Army Nurse corps, and this number will be considerably magnified when 30,000 young men are added each month to the expanding strength of the army.

How's your memory for names and nicknames? Can you match the following and name the sport in which they starred? ANSWERS

Baseball fans should recognize "Big and Little Poison" as the Waner Brothers, Paul and Lloyd; "High Pockets" is another name for "Long George" Kelly; Billy Southworth has been tagged "Billy The Kid," and Frankie Frisch, now a sportscaster, gets his monicker of the "Fordham Flash" from his college days.

Racing fans wouldn't call Man O'War the "Galloping Ghost" which was Red Grange's handle during his gridiron days, but "Big Red" as the great racing stallion was known. "Mr. Inside," a footballer of recent days, is Lt. Felix (Doc) Blanchard.

Ed Lewis, as his ring name of "Strangler" would indicate was a wrestler; "The Emperor," Bobby Jones, earned that title while heading the world's amateur golfers; Willie Hoppe, the billiard expert, won world-wide recognition early in his youth, hence the "Boy Wonder"; while Phil Scott, because of his dubious boxing ability and numerous losses via the knock-out route, was called "Fainting Phil."

Long-Range Promotion Plan For ORC Is Told

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall today announced a new long-range promotion plan for officers in the Organized Reserve corps.

This new policy prescribes the procedures and requirements for the promotion of reserve officers while assigned in the active reserve. Officers while assigned in the inactive reserve or the honorary reserve are not eligible for promotion.

Assignment of reserve officers to these three groups is based upon the individual's professional, physical and other qualifications. Age - in - grade, together with ability or willingness to participate in reserve activities, are alsodetermining factors in the also determining factors to these three groups.

The Department of the Army pointed out that beginning Jan. 1, 1949, a reserve officer must obtain in each calendar year 30 hours of credit in order to remain in the active reserve, and thereby retain eligibility for inactive duty training pay, promotion, assignment to an active reserve unit or mobilization position and credits toward retirement.

In December, 1947, the procedure whereby a reserve officer may accrue credit hours was outlined in consider detail by the Department of the Army. Participation in classes or school either as a student or instructor, completion of extension study courses, administrative work with reserve units or a court or board, and tours of active duty are some of the methods provided for the procurement of these credit hours by active reservists.

Officer promotions in the active reserve will be made to fill available positions within grade authorizations established by the army to meet procurement objectives for any possible mobilization. Such authorization includes TO & E and T-D units as well as percentage allocations by section for those active officers unassigned to units.

Selective procedures for promotion will be followed in order to secure the best qualified officers reasonably available to fill these position vacancies. For this purpose reserve selection boards will be appointed by area commanders. Reserve officers will be represented on the selection boards.

In addition to physical qualifications, an officer must fulfill the requirements provided by minimum and maximum age-in-grade limitations, minimum time-in-grade, and specific minimum training standards established for the various promotion grades. In general, the training standards are sufficiently flexible to make possible the participation of almost any active officer desiring to accomplish this phase of eligibility for promotion.

Turkey Ford Is Renamed to Honor General Lee, 'Father of Airborne'

Turkey Ford, the parachute drop zone, has been named Lee field in honor of the late Maj. Gen. William C. Lee, commanding general of the 101st Airborne division from Aug. 5, 1942, until March 30, 1944 and often called "father of the airborne", it was announced Monday by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

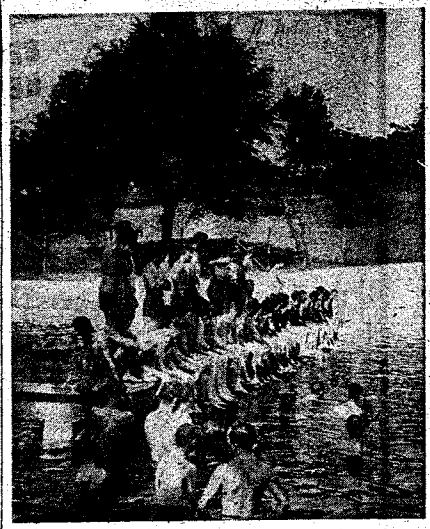
General Lee first became interested in warfare with airborne troops during a tour of duty in Washington in 1940, and it was largely through his efforts that in September, 1940, a group of picked men from the old 29th Infantry at Fort Benning became the test platoon for the army parachute regiments that were formed here under the command of Lt. Col. W. M. Miley, now major general.

General Lee remained in Washington until March, 1941, when he was made commander of the Provosional Parachute group, and in March, 1942, the airborne command was activated and General Lee placed in command.

The airborne pioneer had a background as an experimenter. As far back as 1930, as an infantry captain, he was a member of the staff for the first American armored force, a tank unit organized at Fort Eustis, Va.

He studied the use of parachutes made by the Department of Agriculture's forest service in fighting forest fires out of Missoula, Mont., before he began to have developed the army parachute. Later he studied the parachute tower used at the World's Fair and ordered towers from the company which built it.

MAJ. GEN. W. C. LEE . . . Honored



General Lee was born at Dunn, N. C., on March 12, 1895, and attended the University of North Carolina, where he won letters in both football and basketball.

His military service began on Aug. 15, 1917, when he received a commission as second lieutenant, reserve, infantry, and soon afterward he was commissioned in the regular army. He saw service in World War I as a company commander and remained in Germany until 1919 with the American army of occupation.

In 1922 he was graduated from the company officer's course at the Infantry School and then served three years in Panama. In 1930 he graduated from the Tank School, and three years later from the advanced course at the Infantry School.

General Lee went to France in 1933 as an observer, and while there attended and graduated from the French Tank School, returning to the U. S. in 1935. For the next four years he was an instructor in the Tank School. At the end of that time he was ordered to the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth Kans. Following graduation, he went to Washington for duty with the Office of the Chief of Infantry.

He died at his home in North Carolina on June 25, 1948, of a heart ailment.

RELAXATION FOR THE RECRUIT . . . This group of recruits, assigned to the provisional training battalion here, finds Russ pool o refreshing spot following a full day of basic training at Harmony church. Officials said swimming is the most popular pastime among the new soldiers.

Volunteers Sought For School Duties

Qualified enlisted personnel are being offered an opportunity to volunteer for transfer to an asignment within the staff and faculty of the Infantry School, later to be given an opportunity for further training and schooling, it was announced today by Maj. Ron N. Cameron, assistant secretary.

The need is urgent for enlisted men who are willing and able to learn a speciality usable in the Academic department, he said. The men will be trained in the specialities required by special courses and on-the-job training.

Due to the expected expansion within the next few months, plus the anticipated release from the army of good portion of the men whose terms expire soon, some 250 more vacancies will have to be filled.

Presently there are approximately 733 men in the Academic department of the school, with the need for more instructors and men to fill other positions growing each day. Instructors will be needed in the airborne, automotive and communications sections, in addition to clerks, typists, printers, artists, draftsmen, librarians and writers.

Current Department of the Army policies in some cases permit deferment from overseas service for one year of men assigned to the Academic department.

Enlisted men who volunteer must possess certain qualifications and capable of becoming an instructor, Major Cameron emphasized. The requirements as listed show that men must:

Volunteer; be capable of becoming an instructor; have an AGCT of at least 100 or three years service and be in grade four or higher; be grade five or higher; 20 years old, and have completed ninth grade education or three years service and presently grade four or higher.

Men selected will be given an opportunity for further training and schooling as airborne automotive and communications instructors and in other phases.

Attendance at the regular basic airborne course will cover five weeks. Selected men will attend parachute riggers' and pathfinder courses in addition. The extra 50 dollars per month will be drawn during the airborne training period.

Those qualifying as automotive instructors will attend special courses comparable to the regular motor mechanics course, while the communications instructor volunteers will attend special communication chief, radio repairman or radio operator courses comparable to the regular courses.

Interested men can contact M-Sgt. W. F. Thomason or Sgt. 1st. Cl. J. A. Dowdle in 203 at the Infantry School or phone 2950, 3867 or 2675.

TIC Hobby Shop Open In Stadium

An opportunity for Fort Benning military personnel and their dependents to create useful and worthwhile projects during their leisure time has been offered with the establishment of a Hobby shop, located on the south side of Doughboy stadium.

Equipped at present with facilities for carpentry, lapidary, plastics, metal foil, etching, modelcraft, knotting and braiding and silkscreen, several more facilities will be added in the near future.

Expected to be on hand soon will be equipment and material for leathercraft, photography, weaving and shellcraft.

Qualified personnel are employed to aid those who are in need of guidance in any stage. Persons desiring to use the facilities of the Hobby shop, but in doubt as to particular projects, can consult the personnel in charge of each section.

The activity will be open on Tuesday and Thursday from 4 to 10 p. m. and Saturday, Sundays and holidays from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. It will be closed Mondays.

Publication Postponed

Because of technical difficulties, publication date for the army's historical division's latest battle narrative, "Utah Beach to Cherbourg," has been postponed. It was previously announced that the volume would be available to the public on August 23.

Non-Com Housing Plan Is Approved

80 Apartments To Be Erected

Progress in the construction here of 80 sets of quarters for enlisted men's families moved forward this week with the approval by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, of the type of architectural style of the proposed buildings. Detailed plans for the housing units are now being drawn by the Southeastern district engineers.

Each apartment will house eight families, it was revealed by Col. Thomas M. Brinkley, G-4 of the Infantry Center, and the 10 structures to be erected will be located in what was formerly a cantonment area between Ingersoll and Edwards avenues, west of the golf driving range.

The apartments will consist of a living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms, bathroom and basement storage room. The family units will be two stories high, and the individual apartments will occupy both floors, the bedrooms and bath being upstairs.

A recent Department of the Army release announced that nearly $1,500,000 has been authorized and appropriated by the 80th Congress for this construction at Fort Benning. The appropriation for Fort Benning for family quarters is exceeded only by money advanced for quarters at the U.S. Military academy at West Point, N.Y., Camp Hood, Tex., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Plans call for the new Benning units to be occupied by non-commissioned officers and their families only, according to a decision made recently by General Burress. The new units will alleviate to some extent the present difficult housing situation for these families, officials said.

Present facilities at Benning, according to late figures from billeting office personnel, are sufficient to house only seven per cent of the married first three graders assigned here and 13 per cent of the officers. The 80 new units will, therefore, ease in some degree the housing shortage, they pointed out.

The present program of construction for both the army and the air force calls for the expenditure of $151,000,000. Of this total $54,000,000 will be used for family housing.

Both the army and the air force have pointed out that the lack of suitable housing has been a major cause for the low percentages of reenlistments for military service. The planned program for both departments calls for the construction of housing units for about 3,500 families.

Construction will be carried on only at a relatively small number of important permanent posts and installations, it was announced recently by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall.

To Begin Work Soon On $76,000 Book Department

Construction will start near the end of this month on the new $76,000 book department building, it was announced this week by Col. Thomas M. Brinkley, G-4 of the Infantry Center.

Erection of the structure, which is to be built by the Williams Construction company of Columbus, is expected to be completed early next spring.

Originally planned more than two years ago, the project has been delayed until now by shortages of building material and high price, Colonel Brinkley said.

The new building will be located on Morrison road between the field printing plant and the officers' club. It will be of the same Spanish-type architecture as these buildings.

The location of the new edifice will require a rerouting of Pearman street which, Colonel Brinkley said, will alleviate some of the traffic problems in that area since the sharp angles will be removed and the street will extend perpendicularly from the post exchange gas station between the new book building and the printing plant.

Maj. Andrew W. Petroskey, in charge of the book department, said that the new building will enable him to consolidate much of the work of his department.

Advanced Course Begun on Tuesday

It is not enough to learn how to lead troops in combat and train troops for combat, it is also necessary that the training given those troops be palatable to the men, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center, told the students of the advanced officers' course No. 1 at opening exercises Tuesday in the Infantry School building.

"This is," he went on, "a challenge," for he emphasized the importance of making the training program attractive as an important phase in the building of the army with new men.

The 168 American and foreign officers were told by the commandant that they will find on the Benning facuity a wider range of combat experience than can be found anywhere in the world. He also welcomed them to the Fort Benning community and invited them and their families to participate in all the activities and social life of the post.

Referring to the foreign officers attending the school, General Burress declared that he was glad to see them here, stating that "one of the great things about the school is the opportunity the officers will have to meet men from other nations and to exchange ideas and information."

Col. Bernard A. Byrne, assistant coordinator of training, told the assemblage that they will find the next 39 weeks full ones. During that time, he said, they will learn subjects that will be new to many of them, but there will be practically no overlapping of material with which they are already familiar since it is expected they will have a sound knowledge of basic subjects.

"The course here," he told them, "is predicated on the idea that the staff officer must also be an able commander and the commander, in turn must be thoroughly familiar with staff duties."

While at Benning, he explained they will be trained to serve as commanders of larger units,

Full Recreational, Athletic Program Organized For Benning's New GI's

All work and no play, as the saying goes, makes Jack a dull boy In order that the recruits of the 325th Training battalion won't find army life dull a full program of recreational and athletic activities is being set up for them in the Harmony church area where they are quartered.

A service club for the new soldiers was opened by Maj. Gen Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, Sunday afternoon. In a brief address to the men he told them that he hoped they would enjoy the club and he then expressed his appreciation for the work done by special services personnel in setting it up. He also thanked approximately 75 girls from the Columbus area for coming out to dance with the men.

Also attending the club opening were Col. John C. Blizzard, chief of staff; Col. Joseph A. Nichols, deputy chief of staff; Col. James F. Torrence, commander of the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, provisional battalion commander, and the battalion officers.

Entertainers from Columbus performed in a floor show and two of the recruits also participated. They were a singing master of ceremonies, Pct. Herbert K. Baron, and a guitar player who also sang, Pct. Don Priori. The 72nd Army band provided the music for dancing. The service club is open nightly from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. except Mondays and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

Also over the week end, the Rev. C. R. Campbell of Trinity Episcopal church in Columbus held open house for the men of the battalion on Saturday and Sunday afternoons and evenings. More than 175 men accepted the invitation for the reception in the parish house of the church.

What Are The Army's Plans

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the third in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second Army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1. Is adequate housing available?

Mobilization-type-World War II buildings will be utilized to house trainees. There are few funds with which to dress them up, but by concentrating expenditures on the essentials, the army will be able to provide year-round basic comfort. Luxury is out of the question. Local ingenuity and cooperation, as in the past, can do much to supplement the bare minimum which the army will be able to furnish from appropriated funds.

2. Will training be modern?

Yes.

3. Will the soldier know why he is in the army?

The Troop Information and Education division is initiating an expanded troop discussion program focusing on the reasons for an individual's service, his responsibilities as a citizen, etc. The subjects for the weekly discussion period are being reslanted to take into account the special interests of the selective service group, though not without due regard to the volunteer.

4. Will he be kept informed as to what is going on?

Through the facilities of the Troop Information and Education division—radio, newspapers, motion pictures, posters and discussion pamphlets—military personnel will be kept informed concerning pertinent national and international issues.

5. Will he be given a job commensurate with his abilities? Will the selectee be able to continue his civilian occupation in the army?

In instances where he has a skill readily convertible to an army job and assuming he is sufficiently well qualified therein,, normally he will be selected for that type of assignment. In this respect, however, the needs of the service must govern. There are many skills which have only limited utilization in the army. For example, painters and lithographers are required only in limited numbers. Therefore, beyond a certain point, no matter how well qualified an individual might be in those lines, he must be trained where his services can be used profitably. Likewise, considerable attention will be given physical qualifications in relation to physical demands of jobs in the army. In some instances, this consideration must override the civilian occupation background of the individual.

Raymond Alerted For Foreign Tour

Maj. Frank Raymond, commanding officer of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, has been alerted for transfer to Europe some time in December, it was learned today.

A veteran of 24 years service, including the assault landings at Guadalcanal and the campaign of Central Europe, Major Raymond is alos a graduate of the Infantry School.

He was assigned to the 204th in October, 1946, first as executive officer and as commander since the transfer in June of Lt. Col. Jesse F. Wheeler to the Command and General Staff college at Fort Leavenworth Kans.

as regiments and combat commands, and as division general staff officers. This training will prepare them for attendance at even more advanced schools, he declared.

Secretary Speaks

Colonel Byrne was followed by Lt. Col. Charles E. Johnson, secretary of the Academic department, who explained in greater detail to the students functions and operation of the department and the Infantry School.

Included in the 163 students of class No. 1 are 12 lieutenant colonels, 34 majors, 78 captains, 26 first lieutenants and 13 guest officers from six foreign countries. In this latter group are six officers from Korea, the first to attend here since the end of the war, three from Turkey and one each from Switzerland, Canada, Great Britain and China.

Next Tuesday the adademic year will be opened for 163 students of advanced officers' class No. 2 when they will hear an address by Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant commandant of the Infantry School. Included in this class are one colonel, 13 lieutenant colonels, 31 majors, 80 captains and 21 lieutenants from the U.S. army and 17 guest officers. This group is represented by two Peruvians, two Mexicans, two Ecuadorans, five Filipinos and one officer each from Venezuela, Chile, Argentina, Honduras, Bolivia and Brazil.

Three other courses at the Infantry School opened this week in addition to the advanced class. They are the pathfinder class, which started Monday with 20 students, officers' communication class No. 1, which opened this morning with an attendance of 58 students, and enlisted radio repair class No. 1, which also opened today and has 34 students enrolled.

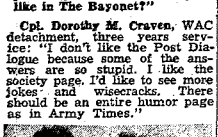
Post Dialogue

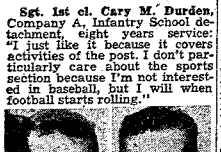


People who read fine print will note that on the masthead of The Bayonet, found in the left hand corner of the editorial page, the statement that the paper is published in the interest of the officer and enlisted personnel of Fort Benning.

In recent weeks, Post Dialogue has included the opinions of many of the officers and enlisted men concerning activities and attitudes at Fort Benning. This week the enquiring reporter asked eight Benning soldiers questions concerning The Bayonet. The Bayonet, being the soldier's own newspaper here, the editors decided to try and find out something about what its readers think of it. So the enquiring reporter asked three questions: "What features do you like about The Bayonet? What features don't you like about The Bayonet? What would you like to see incorporated or expanded in The Bayonet?"

Some of the answers were of the type that could be anticipated; others revealed that personnel on the post read parts of the paper that most civilian papers ignore or decide they can't do anything about; still others suggested improvements that had not been thought of. Best of all, as far as the editorial staff of The Bayonet is concerned, the answers proved that the paper is read.

"What do you like; what don't you like, and what would you like in The Bayonet?"



Cpl. Dorothy M. Craven, WAC detachment, three years service: "I don't like the Post Dialogue because some of the answers are so stupid. I like the society page. I'd like to see more jokes and wisecracks. There should be an entire humor page as in Army Times."

Craven McKanna

Pfc. Donald E. McKanna, Company C, 325th Infantry regiment, eight years service: "The best part of The Bayonet is the way the sports section is written. There's nothing I don't like except that I don't read the society section. I think the GI Humor could be expressed better; there should be a few more jokes; sometimes a man could use them at parties."

Sgt. 1st cl. Cary M. Durden, Company A, Infantry School detachment, eight years service: "I just like it because it covers activities of the post. I don't particularly care about the sports section because I'm not interested in baseball, but I will when football starts rolling."

Durden Helmick

Cpl. David M. Helmick, Company A, 325th Infantry regiment, eight years service: "The sports section is good, especially the photos and baseball coverage. I like it all except the social news. There's too much in it about the dependents; there should be more social news about the soldiers. That's the only improvement I could recommend."

M - Sgt. Edwin A. McPhail, Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th 12 years' service: "I like the jokes; it's like picking up a newspaper and reading the funnies. I think the whole paper is interesting. There ought to be a column explaining, in plain English, what these new laws they're passing mean to the soldiers."

McPhail Levin

First Lt. Irving Levine, Special service office, eight years service: "I don't like the pictures; they aren't clear enough in reproduction, and the features can't be recognized. I like the adequate coverage of post activities, especially sports. With all these new men coming in there should be more about the points of interest on the post and especially the new additions—and hours of activities to help them fill their off duty hours."

Capt. Gerald J. Mulrine, Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion. Seven years service: "I like The Bayonet in its entirety. I especially like the center page spreads of organizational activities which are fine for the morale of the men. I like the editorials. I would like to see comments from staff officers and visitors on the things and activities they see on their trips around the post so the men could have an idea what they think."

Mulrine Walton

Sgt. Robert E. Walton, Company A, Infantry School detachment, two and one half years service: "I like the overall coverage of the post—What's happening, what's going on. In the recent recruit story it was interesting to compare the training they get with what I got. I find some of the editorial page articles dull although some of the editorials are good. I'd like to see more articles about new equipment in the army such as I read in Army Times."

till Sunday, to all the men of the battalion. Representatives from the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Y.M.C.A. and churches invited them to partake of all the recreational and social facilities in the nearby community.

The battalion commander stated that before very long he expects that the men will have formed their own 40 or 50 piece marching band. They now have the instruments, and many of them have shown a desire to play. It is also expected that weekly dances, with hostesses from Columbus, will be held at the service club and this band will provide music.

First Lt. Robert E. Monteith, athletic and recreation officer of the unit, is lining up a full sports program for the men. This is in addition to the one hour's physical training they receive daily, which Colonel Yancey said, is designed to build them up. Swimming at Russ pool is one of the biggest attractions for the new Benningites sor far, and by the time every man finishes his training he will be able to swim at least 50 yards. The Red Cross is furnishing instructors, and this, according to the battalion commander, is an integral part of the training program.

Army to Place Greater Emphasis On Moral, Spiritual Values---Royal

Gratified by "the success that has been attained by all commanders in stressing moral and spiritual values in the fight against promiscuity and venereal disease," Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall has directed that even greater emphasis be placed on these problems.

Encompassing this army-wide effort is a new term, "character guidance," pertaining to all acts which tend to encourage the development of moral responsibility, spiritual values and self-discipline.

Mr. Royall pointed out that the success of the program under which emphasis has been placed on education and the moral aspects of the social problems "can be measured only in part by the steady decline in the incidence of venereal infections."

Encourage Morality

"Of much more significance," he said, "is the fact that through continuing, positive measures to encourage morality, a new realization has been born—that the army has an obligation, especially as parent of the youthful soldier, to continue insofar as possible under the conditions of military service, the wholesome influences of the home, the family and the community. The reward is rich: better citizens and better soldiers."

Commanders have been directed to carry out Character Guidance through a definite program, outlined as follows:

1. Instill in officers and noncommissioned officers an appreciation of their part in character guidance and an understanding of its purposes.

Supervise Recreation

2. Emphasize and take personal interest in athletics and all forms of supervised recreation. Facilities for such purposes will be installed as conveniently as possible to unit areas to make them more accessible to the soldier than the unsupervised attractions of towns.

3. Cooperate with local health and law enforcement agencies in the repression of vice. Integration of civil health and law enforcement programs with the character guidance program is to be primarily the function of commanders of the numbered armies within the United States and of the senior area commander in overseas areas.

4. Restrict pass privileges of irresponsible individuals who habitually conduct themselves in a manner which brings discredit to the service and is prejudicial to the aims of character guidance. A pass is a privilege, not a right, and will not be issued to those who abuse the privilege, it was pointed out.

5. Give consideration to the elimination of officers and noncommissioned officers who through personal example undermine discipline and respect for command.

Qualified technical advisors within the army organization will have certain obligations for successful execution of the character guidance program.

Commanders are expected to rely most heavily on the chaplain by virtue of his special responsibility for the moral and spiritual welfare of troops, his extensive experience and background, and his relationship with the individual soldier.

Urge Cooperation

The special service officer will cooperate through the army and of army-air-force troop information service, and provide maximum facilities for recreation and entertainment, including voluntary athletics, library service, musical programs, handicraft and manual arts, soldier sight-seeing tours, service clubs and professional and amateur theatrical productions.

The provost marshal will assist unit commanders and enforcement personnel in carrying out Department of the Army policy on suppression of prostitution and allied vice conditions affecting service personnel, call to the attention of the armed forces disciplinary control boards conditions inimical to morals and welfare, supervise the enforcement of "off limits" orders issued by army commanders on recommendation of local commanders and armed forces disciplinary control boards, and work with civilian law enforcement agencies charged with enforcing local ordinances affecting the suppression of prostitution and allied vice conditions.

The surgeon will give necessary instruction in sex hygiene, coordinate with the chaplain instructions of the value of continence and the responsibility of the individual for his own health, recommend measures designed to prevent the occurrence of venereal disease, and emphasize strongly that medical prophylaxis is directed purely at those men who, despite the teachings of home and church and awareness of the dangers, persist in illicit sexual relations.

Learning Is Continuous

Learning is a continuing process: It never ceases. When we are younger we are forced to go to school, when we grow older we want to go to school.

The army, through its information and education centers, helps the soldier to complete his education. The army, through its service schools, gives the soldier the opportunity to do graduate work in his chosen field.

As an example of the institutions for graduate work, we can start right at Fort Benning with the Infantry School which has already begun its 1948-49 academic year. During the next nine months, thousands of soldiers will further their professional education here. They will graduate to better positions and with more chance for advancement. All this because the army realizes that education is of primary importance if there is to be efficiency.

As an example of army schools designed to help the soldier complete his education, we can again use a Fort Benning school: the Army Education Center which ends its summer quarter September 20. Here again is proof that the army realizes that the well-informed soldier is the best soldier.

It behooves the Fort Benning soldier to make use of his educational opportunities. Education might begin with the cradle, but it ends with the grave and not before.

Good Friends

The people of Columbus have proved themselves good friends of the army during the past few days, and The Bayonet would like to thank them for what they have done, are doing, and plan to do.

It all began last Saturday when Mr. Clayton D. McLendon, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, came out to the Harmony church area to welcome the recruits to Columbus. It was a fine gesture on the part of one of Columbus' officials, and from the applause he received, we can't help but believe that those who heard his address felt the same way. We know from experience that the personal touch is one of the most important factors toward good relations between the military and the civilian populations.

Not to be outdone by the Chamber of Commerce, all the theater owners and managers decided that it would be appropriate to welcome the recruits in an even more tangible way. The result was the donation of 1,500 theater tickets which may be used through Sunday. Since everyone likes a good movie—to say nothing of the relief from the heat found in an air conditioned theater—we doubt there will be any tickets to go unused.

The third gesture of friendliness came from the Rev. Mr. Colin Campbell, rector of the Trinity Episcopal church and one of Columbus' leading and most respected citizens. Mr. Campbell invited the entire training battalion to be his guests at a party at the parish house on Sunday afternoon. Of course, not all accepted his invitations, but enough did —175 in all—to make the gathering a success.

With Columbus displaying such friendship and such interest as that, we are sure the recruits will leave Fort Benning with a great deal of respect for the South.

Strictly Editorializing

We more or less stuck our necks out this week when the inquiring photographer was sent out to ask people what they thought about The Bayonet. Heretofore, we haven't had the courage to ask that question for fear the results would be too humiliating even for a newspaperman to bear. We can report, however, that we are slightly more than pleased with the answers received. Of course, we wish those interviewed had been a little more critical than they were.

Although we don't put too much faith in polls of any kind, the one conducted this week is the only way we have of actually learning what is liked and what is disliked in The Bayonet. We plan to take the suggestions for improvement under advisement and attempt to work out a suitable compromise.

The general concensus seems to be that we do not have an adequate humor page. Just how we can work out this problem to the satisfaction of everyone is still somewhat of a problem. First of all, we do not have a humor editor. Second, jokes are very hard to come by. Third, we have no cartoonist. Still, we will strive to meet the demand, at least partially.

Naturally, we welcome criticism. Only by the reader's comment are we able to improve. Only by the reader's comment are we able to bring you what you want to read.

Chaplain's Corner..

"I HAVEN'T TIME"

By Chaplain Victor E. Walter

It is evident that few of us have enough to do.

Make this statement in an army crowd, and then listen to the screaming. The loss to life and personality through the wasting of time can never be stated. Things, possessions and money are included in that statement. Few of us ever learn to live the full life because the golden moments, crowded in between the crass of things of life which should be used for self-betterment are never utilized. We learn to live richly in our spare time, or using that same time, we commit suicide. The following is quoted from an unknown writer's, "Take Time to Live":

"Take time to live, for that is what time is for; killing time is the price of success. Take time to think; it is the source of power. Take time to play; it is the fountain of wisdom. Take time to be friendly; it is the road to happiness. Take time to dream; it is hitching your wagon to a star. Take time to look around; it is too short a day to be selfish. Take time to laugh; it is the music of the soul. Take time to play with children; it is the joy of joys. Take time to be courteous; it is the mark of a gentleman."

To this quotation I would add: "Take time to discover and know God—in Christ. Know Him as the Lover of my soul, the One Who forgives my sins, the Giver of all good and perfect gifts, the Source of all joy and happiness, the Giver of eternal life—yes, as 'my Father Which are in Heaven'. Take some of the precious moments you waste each day, and use them to come to know God, for only as we truly know Him do we come to live."

"Jack, dear," said the bride, "let's try to make people think we've been married a long time."

"All right, honey," came the reply, "but do you think you can carry both suitcases?"

Mrs. Sgt.: "Well, what excuse can you offer for coming home this hour of the night?"

Sgt: "Well, I was playing golf with some friends and . . ."

Mrs. Sgt.: "At 2 a. m.?"

Sgt: "Sure. We used night clubs."

Lady: "Doctor, is it true that sleeping outdoors will cure insomnia?"

Doctor: "Perfectly true. But sleeping indoors will do the same thing."

Officer: Have you swabbed the deck and polished the brightwork?"

Sailor: "Yes sir, and I've swept the horizon with my binoculars."

Bill owned a bill board. Bill also owed a board bill. The board bill bored Bill: so Bill sold his bill board to pay his board bill. After Bill sold his bill board to pay his board bill the board bill no longer bored Bill.

FAITHFUL COMPANY

Although "Faithful Company" was written by Frank Swinnerton and concerns London of the twentieth century, it might well have been done by Charles Dickens and could just as easily have been set in the nineteenth century. Perhaps we should say, more easily. Tom Goodleby and his son George "Horrible" Goodleby, owners of the English publishing company "Faithful House" are definitely Victorian tyrants. Faithful House itself, with its hordes of underpaid employees, accepting the abuses of their mastus, living in constant fear of their jobs, is just what Dickens loved to write about.

Don't misunderstand us. We admit that we are admirers ful Company" a great relief from our modern novels. But we did have to check constantly to see that it was 1930 we were reading about and not 1830.

There are in the Swinnerton book, as in all Dickens novels, dozens of characters, all complete. The characters are a bit confusing at first, but gradually they become real. Swinnerton can create characters. Perhaps he does exaggerate, make his evil characters too evil, his good ones too good, but at least we know whom we should hate and whom we should cheer for.

The story is not particularly complex. The Goodlebys, father and son, run a publishing house turning out semi-religious tracts. Their favorite occupation is browbeating their hired help. Barry Fowler, editor of various Faithful House magazines; "The Christian Wife," "Faithful Boys" and "Faithful Days" — the titles will give some idea of the magazines themselves — did not browbeat easily. Strangely enough he won the admiration of old Goodleby—probably because the papers he edited made money. Even George or "Horrible" as he was known off the record to all the people at Faithful House, respected Barry and showed him a certain amount of deference. Unfortunately, Barry's secretary, Laura Kingsbody, shower a decided preference for her immediate boss rather than for the less attractive George. That Barry happened to have a wife, Hester, to whom he was apparently devoted, made little difference.

The time of the novel is 1930, a period of great unemployment, which possibly explains why the various people showed so little independence. The ending is quite melodramatic and unbelievable, but it will probably delight all romanticists. The book, of course, has a moral or two which shouldn't be taken too seriously.

The chief objection to the book is its long-windedness. It won't appeal to those readers who prefer their novels in Reader's Digest form. But for anyone who has plenty of time for leisurely reading, it should have a definite appeal.

BY MURRAY E. HILL

The American Red Cross
Fort Benning, Georgia
August 26, 1948

Attention: Mr. Hill, Field Director

Dear Mr. Hill:

My husband and I want to take this opportunity to express our thanks and appreciation for the untiring efforts of the American Red Cross and the many courtesies shown to us by the Fort Benning chapter and the Columbus chapter in our hour of need.

As you recall, we first asked your assistance in securing data from overseas of my husband's first wife's death. This information was needed to facilitate claim for allotment. Your agency came to our rescue, and in the process of securing the above information it was necessary to make six direct contacts overseas. This was done with no expense to me through the Red Cross and its international chapter.

In January, 1947, after our twins were taken ill with pneumonia, it was through your efforts we were able to get aid for them at the hospital. Then, too, our rent went up, and with letters from your organization we were able to get our rent established at a rate we were able to pay as my husband was only a corporal.

In May, 1947, the judge advocate asked for more proof in the above stated case of family allotment. The Red Cross again followed through helping untiringly.

On top of this my husband's father developed a serious illness and wasn't expected to live. Again by wiring and phoning and many contacts, he was granted an emergency furlough and an extension of leave to help his father settle his affairs.

The last of our troubles began a few days ago with my husband being transferred to a distant army post. Knowing we would suffer because of insufficient income through no fault of his own and not receiving my allotment, we again asked the aid of the Red Cross who succeeded in placing information through proper authorities for his retention here.

We want to say we are proud of and appreciate with all our hearts your organization which helps the helpless in their hour of need. Again, we say thanks and may God continue to bless this fruitful organization.

A soldier and his wife.

I would like to add here that it has indeed been a pleasure to deal with this serviceman and his wife. Their problems have been severe and their situation at times acute. But never has he or his wife complained.

Another thing that makes me proud of this couple is the way they stand on their own two feet, not seeking outside financial aid, although they have sorely needed it from time to time.

SARONG QUEENS . . . Sixteen-year-old Kasma Booty, left, a Sumatran beauty, has become the first movie queen of the South Seas. Her starring role in a Malay language picture, "Chempaka," brought her acclaim from the critics and the audiences who flocked to see her and her costume—a sarong. She has her eyes on Hollywood and if she goes there, she will meet an American beauty of the sarong—Dorothy Lamour, right. But Miss Booty doesn't think anyone there, not even Dottie, has had as much experience wearing sarongs as she has.

A "combat commander's insignia" has been authorized for enlisted men who actually exercise this command in combat units, it was revealed this week.

The insignia will be a green cloth tab one and five-eighths inches wide, worn in the middle of both shoulder straps.

This distinctive insignia will be worn by assigned enlisted personnel of the fourth pay grade or higher who occupy command positions in the chain of command in the following combat units:

1. Infantry, armored and airborne divisions and their component units. This also includes the First Cavalry division.

3. Artillery battalions to include 75, 105, 155, 240 millimeter and eight-inch howitzers, 155 and 240 millimeter and eight inch guns, and field artillery observation battalions.

4. Engineer special brigades and their component units.

5. Engineer combat battalions.

6. Chemical mortar battalions.

7. Constabulary brigades, regiments and squadrons and their component units.

Gaylord Returns To Jump Status

Like the old adage "you can take the boy out of the country but you can't take the country out of the boy" the principle is the same with Sgt. 1st Cl. Ernest L. Gaylord who is transferring to Company H, Infantry School detachment, to return to jump status.

Since February he has been assigned to the Communication section.

After attending Cavalry class No. 3, Sergeant Gaylord went to OCS at Fort Riley, Kans., graduating in 1942. He completed Parachute School in 1943, and served with the 505th Parachute Infantry of the 82nd Airborne division in the campaigns of Normandy, Belgium, Ardennes, Holland and Rhineland, making combat jumps in both Normandy and Holland.

He is now assigned as an assistant instructor of the Pathfinder group.

Pre-game prices for reserved seats for the 1947 Southern Cal-Notre Dame football game were priced at $20 each. . .in cocktail lounges equipped with Television.

Styles for that first day at school, or the 21st. Raincoats for those days when the weather plays tricks on us. Coats for cooler days, and plaids for all year round. Sleepers and robe for the young gentleman to wear after a hard at Kindergarten. Dresses for the teen - ager's after school dates. The Fort Benning school youngsters modeled them all at their style show Thursday afternoon at the Polo Hunt club.

In a special setting which might have represented the Benning School, but which the members of the Parent - Teacher's association, who sponsored the show, assure us was merely a caricature, the young models, from four to fourteen, displayed the latest school styles with a poise that experienced models would envy. The clothes were provided by Wee Moderns, J.C. Penney company, the Kiddie Shop, Kirven's, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and Tots and Teens.

Mrs. Herbert "Candy" Eitt handled the commentary, and the decorations were arranged under the supervision of Mrs. J. C. Bryer. The setting was a schoolroom, complete with a school bell, a stern teacher and a dunce, played by Robbie McCormick, who chewed bubble gum and blew the biggest bubbles ever seen at the Benning school.

Following the style show, delicious refreshments of ice cream, cake, punch and cookies were served on the porch at the club.

Members of the committee were Mrs. A. E. McCormick, chairman; Mrs. D. C. Landon, publicity; Mrs. J. C. Bryer, decorations; Mrs. Albert C. Haley, tickets; Mrs. R. R. Boyd, models; Mr. Patrick F. Cassidy, wardrobe; Mrs. John Cole, music, and Mrs. Lee Wallace, refreshments.

Doughboys Defend Third Army Title

Four Teams Entered In Meet Now In Progress At Bragg

Competing in their third consecutive tournament, this time in the role of title defender, the Fort Benning baseballers loomed as heavy favorites to cop the Third army baseball meet now under way at Fort Bragg, N. C.

With two defeats necessary for elimination, the Doughs will have to stave off three other entries in retaining the Third army crown. Entered along with the champion Doughs are Fort Bragg, Fort McPherson, Ga., and Fort Jackson, S. C.

WOODY BURT
. . . Dough Outfielder

Pairings for the tourney were held late Tuesday morning with the first game scheduled to be played Tuesday afternoon. No reports on the outcome of the pairings were available at press time.

The comparable strength of the Third army entries could hardly be established since none of the teams has met each other during the season, with the exception of Fort Benning and Fort McPherson. The Doughs won handily in their two meetings with the Atlantians this season.

Both Fort Bragg and Fort Jackson have been riding along on a weak schedule, and on the strength of their showing against top notch clubs the Doughs must be considered as top heavy favorites to win their second straight Third army toga. Manager Herb Bench's lads downed Fort Bragg in the finals of last year's meet staged here at Gowdy field.

The locals enter the meet minus the services of one of the mainstays and veterans, versatile Paul Bonair who has been discharged. "Boney," as he affectionately has been dubbed by his mates of the past two seasons, performed in the infield, mostly at second and short, and donned the mask and mitt when the occasion demanded. He was superb at all positions.

The Third army meet may be the final activity of the Benning nine, but there still may be a possibility that they will continue with a few more frays before football gets into swing. However, no games have been scheduled following the tourney at Fort Bragg.

New Sport Thrill

Midget auto racing is becoming one of the nation's fastest growing sports. It attracted more than 30,000,000 at 250 tracks scattered throughout the country in 1948.

NEWCOMER WINS FLIGHT HONORS

A newcomer to the area, Capt. George G. Hardgrove of Fort Benning, wasted no time displaying his golfing prowess as he captured the first flight consolation championship of the recent Southeastern Amateur tourney held at the Columbus country club.

Hardgrove, 5-4 with the 325th Training battalion, defeated Hal Spears of Atlanta, one-up.

Winning golf honors is nothing new to Hardgrove. He has fought his way to the top of other imporiant matches since 1936 when he won the Cook county tournament in Illinois.

In 1946 he captured the Illinois Valley finals and was medalist at the National Public Links tournament in 1947.

Sand Hill Squad Meets Columbus In Night Fray

Making their first appearance before local baseball fans in the past two weeks, the Fort Benning, Bullets will see action tonight against the powerful Columbus Black Cardinals in a contest starting at 8 p. m. on Sand Hill's Bullet feild.

Comprised of outstanding diamond talent representing the Second battalion, 25th Infantry; 999th Field Artillery; Section 11, 3449 ASU; 375th Medical Collecting company, the Bullets have been enjoying a successful season.

Chases Home Winners

The all-time record for riding winners is held by jockey Steve Heapy of Belgium who romped home ahead 2,260 times.

TENNIS TOURNEY ENTERS QUARTER FINAL ROUND

Only one upset was posted as racket wielders advanced to the quarterfinal round of the annual fall Officers' club singles tennis tournament now under way here.

Unseeded Henry Hester upset eighth-seeded Art Hyman in the first round of play in a drawn out match that lasted over two hours. Hester finally came out on top 6-2, 4-6, and 6-4.

Top seeded George Beatty and Dale Balliet advanced with little trouble, setting down their opponents with ease.

Feature quarterfinal and semi-final men's singles matches will be played over the week-end. Time of the matches will be posted adjacent to the officers club tenned on the draw sheets at the shop nis courts, according to Chuck Evert, tennis pro at the club.

Losers in the first two rounds of men's singles will compete in a consolation tourney to begin today. Play in men's doubles, women's singles, and girl's singles will get underway this week.

The junior singles title aspirant advanced into the semi-final round. Dick Burman will meet Dick Halliden in one semi-final match, while Meryl Griffiths takes on Dick Suggs in the other. The winners will battle for the crown. The results to date:

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee Bayonet Sports Editor

During the absence of Lewis McAfee, Bayonet Sports Editor, who is on leave, his column is being written by Andy Planey, Bayonet Staff Writer

No sooner do they get through with one tournament, then it's right into another one. That's the story of the 1948 edition of the Fort Benning Doughboy baseball nine. It's also the story of a winning ball club.

Tournament play, which began with the Georgia state semi-pro meet at Thomaston, has taken up most of the Doughobys' time, knocking a huge hole in the proposed season's schedule.

With Herb Bench at the helm, the locals captured the Georgia state semi-pro crown, then proceeded to dispose of the Buck Creek Millers of Saluria, Ala., for the right to represent this region in the National Semi-Pro Congress tourney at Wichita, Kans. It was a little tougher sledding at Wichita, competing against the nation's best, but the Doughs made quite a creditable showing. After winning the initial encounter, the Bechman drppped the next two to be eliminated, but not until they put up a stubborn battle.

Now the Doughs are at Fort Bragg, N. C., to defend their Third army championship, and from all appearances, there's nothing prohibiting keeping the title here at Fort Benning . . . Nothing, except winning a few ball games, which should be a matter of formality in this particular instance.

It's been announced that the Doughboys will hang up their spikes following the Third army meet. As mentioned previously, the locals have played little of their schedule here because of the tournaments, leaving a great many fans on the post who still have not had a chance to see the Doughs in action . . . If it is at all posible, a few more games should be played here before the first football game, and even during the football season at night, since the weather here permits play sometimes until mid-October . . . Too, quite a few of the fellows would like to keep on playing.

We've been waiting all these weeks during baseball season to see in writing, a compliment, or words to that effect, on the great job of sports broadcasting being done by genial John MacLean, the WSAC baseball announcer, who does the play by play accounts of the Columbus Cardinals' games . . . But somehow no one seemed to get around to it. Here's where we put in our inflationary nickel's worth about MacLean.

He is in our opinion, the best baseball announcer in the South, barring none. And before you go flying off the handle, Bub, we've heard them all. None can give that smooth flow of continuity and clear diction as WSAC's MacLean. MacLean, who is a New Englander, formerly with WGST in Atlanta, has one thing in his favor. He has played the game, has followed it closely and thoroughly. His knowledge of the game is uncanny. He has been around so to speak . . . There isn't very much, if anything, that you can tell John about baseball.

MacLean's greatest virtue is his impartiality. One thing that irks a listener of sports events is the continuous crying and hegging and moaning of an announcer when things go wrong and the very evident, noticeable "home town" emphasis of voice when the team is winning. Not so MacLean. His reporting is factual, without getting to the point of boredom. This is a fine virtue of a sports announcer—very few of them possess it.

John has won many friends and listeners for the Columbus Cardinals . . . There are many who say they would rather stay home and hear MacLean broadcast the game, rather than go see the Cards play, because then they don't seem so bad. That's no reflection on the Cards, who have had tough luck, but it speaks well of MacLean's handling of the game.

Unlike the newspaper men others who were all Cardinal lovers at the outset, but fell into the category of "knockers" and catcallers when the Cards began to falter, MacLean has steadfastly remained unruffled . . . His broadcast of the games now are just as good as they were at the beginning . . . We have never heard the genial announcer moan, or pan, the Cards while they were losing. That, brethern and sistern, is being an asset to baseball in the most gracious way.

* * * *

SPORTING NOTES . . . Baseball moguls are verbally blasting football promoters for rushing the season. The cry is that the football teams should wait until the end of baseball season to begin play, as it is now, the two are running into each other, with conflicting dates, use and lease of stadia . . . Night baseball is here to stay. The very men who were dead set against so many night games, are now the very ones who are advocating more and more . . .

Shepherd's Gridders Prep Hard For Opener With Orlando AFB

With their eyes set on the Sept. 26 opener against Orlando, Fla. air base, Coach Joe Shepherd's Doughboy gridders are still faced with the shortage of good lineman as they enter their third week of toiling under the hot Georgia sun.

The outlook for the first eleven men or so is bright, but from there on, talent is extremely short. Several positions are being capably filled, but the reserves needed to spell the starters are lacking in experience.

Practice sessions are now being conducted on a full time scale. Coach Shepherd opens each day with a "skull session" and the rest of the day is devoted to fundamentals and practice.

Two veterans from last year's powerful squad, Harry Sloan and Don Sult, are looked upon to shoulder most of the ball carrying burdens in the coming campaign. The backfield, much lighter than in previous seasons, is, however, shiftier, faster and more versatile. Steve Prielozny, has looked good at the quarterback berth since switching over from fullback. Bob Morton, passing and kicking specialist, and George McCall, are other outstanding candidates for the quarterback slot.

Robert Easly and Eugene Vicara, both triple threats, are keeping pace with the other backfield candidates with their fine exhibitions during the sessions.

The Doughs get their first taste of competition next Wednesday when they trek over to Alabama to tangle with the Troy State Teachers in a scrimmage affair.

The Sept. 26 open date has been filled, and the Doughboys will open their campaign on that date against the Orlando, Fla. airbase, here at Doughboy stadium.

Nine games, six at home and three away, have been scheduled with an open date Nov. 21 yet to be filled.

Stock Drivers Return Sunday To Speedway

Crack drivers of the stock car circuit return to thrill local fans this Sunday afternoon at the fast half-mile Columbus Speedway in the third stock car race of the season.

Time trials will be held at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon in order to speed up the Sunday racing program. The Sunday program, sanctioned by the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, will get under way at 2:30 p. m. with the first of three 10-lap heat races, followed by a 10-lap consolation and a 40-lap feature.

With cooler weather also anticipated, the early September race is expected to attract a record crowd at the Columbus Speedway, rated as one of the fastest in the country.

In the last thrilling event here, Billy Carden of Mapleton came out victorious, and reports indicate that Carden will be back to attempt his luck again over the speedy oval.

Bill Snowden, another speedster from St. Augustine, Fla., who finished second in the last race here, is also due back, and early indications are that Bob Flock, winner of the first race held over this track, will be on hand to offer keen competition. Bob finished third in the last event here.

Some 20 of the nation's leading drivers are expected to compete in this speed classic.

Power Packed Bullets Await Grid Campaign

Locals Hold Daily Grinds In Prepping For Big Slate

BY AL WISE

With well over 100 hopefuls vying for first string berths, plus the return of 20 of last season's regulars, optimism runs high in the camp of the Fort Benning Bullet gridders, now in their second week of training, at Sand Hill.

One of the main reasons for the spirit and high morale of the Bullets contingent this season comes through the hard discipline and driving of efforts of the new head coach, Lt. Thomas L. Delton, and his staff which includes Sgts. Stacey Huffman, backfield, and Jesse R. Owens, line mentor. This season marks the third consecutive one for Huffman and Owens in coaching capacities with the locals.

Coach Delton, former Tuskegee Institute grid luminary, came to Fort Benning's 25th Infantry in June 1947. As a yearling aspirant for the Golden Tigers varsity eleven in 1933, he held down the left end position and at the close of that season was named honorable mention on several All-American teams. From the '33 through the '36 seasons, his brilliant all-around performance as a left wingman brought him gridiron honors.

The Bullets' line-up is representative of 25th Infantry, 999th Field Artillery, 204th Truck company, Service company and Airborne Battalion, STR, 375th Medical Collecting company, 3440 ASU, Section II, Medics, 30th Medical group, 396th, 665th and 666th Transportation companies.

Since '46 the Bullets' seasonal sports team have been honorary members of the Southeastern Inter-collegiate Athletic conference which embraces outstanding colleges of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Louisiana. The current schedule lists 12 contests consisting of five home appearances.

Huge Sports Program Carded For Trainees

Now that they have settled down in their "home" bivouac, members of the 325th Provisional Training battalion this week embarked upon a huge athletic and recreation program which calls for full participation by the entire compliment of 1,150 men.

Currently the "trainees" are conducting a preliminary softball tournament among the various companies to decide the ultimate company representative in the proposed battalion softball league.

Twenty platoons are battling it out in inter-company competition to determine the top squad in each company, with the five top teams formed into a battalion league, the schedule for which will be announced later.

Boxing, volleyball and swimming are on the sports agenda, with more phases to be added as the program progresses.

A boxing ring is now under construction, and ambitious leather slingers have begun training. The fighters are expected to be in fine fettle by the time the ring is completed.

Formation of a battalion swimming team is also in the process. Training at Russ pool on the main post, the swimmers are vying for berths on special events squads to compete against other units on the post. Many are attending the life saving instruction class under the supervision of Red Cross instructors.

Lucky Seventh Plans Reunion

The second annual reunion of the Seventh "Lucky Seventh" Armored division association will be held Sept. 25 and 26 at Pittsburgh, Pa., according to an announcement today by John P. Oliver, executive secretary, with headquarters in Washington, D. C.

The "Lucky Seventh" which has also been called the "Ghost division", "Stonewall Seventh," signed to Camp Polk, La., under activated March 1, 1942, and assigned to Camp olk, La., under the Second Armored corps.

Following extensive training in this country, the division left for overseas duty on June 7, 1944, and trained further at Tidworth barracks, Wiltshire, England, until it went into combat in Northern France, the Rhineland, Ardenes and Central Europe.

Successive commanding generals in combat were Maj. Gen. Lindsay McD. Silvester, to November 1944; Maj. Gen. Robert W. Hasbrouck, to August 1945, and Brig. Gen. Truman E. Boudinet until the division inactivation on Oct 9, 1945, at Camp Patrick Henry, Va.

COUNTRY CLUB . . . The new terrace and two new wings which have been added to the former Fort Benning Golf club are only a few steps from the 18th hole. The Country club will be formally opened Labor day, Sept. 6, with an open house for all Officers' club members and their guests. The terrace, shown here between the two wings, is expected to be a popular place for viewing the endings of golf matches and also for dancing and informal entertaining.

New Country Club Opens Labor Day

Labor Day, Sept. 6, has been set as the date for the formal opening of the Fort Benning Country club, it was announced this week.

An open house will be held for all members of the Officers' club and their guests from 4 until 11 p. m. during which time they are invited to visit the recently remodeled and enlarged club and inspect its facilities.

A brief dedication ceremony has been scheduled for 5:30 p.m. to include an address by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Senter commander, and to be followed by presentation of the Golden cup, symbolic of the golf championship of the Officers Club. Preceding this the 72nd Army band will play for an hour. During the evening an orchestra will play for dancing from 8:30 until 11.

The extensive program of remodeling the former golf club to its present size was begun with the drawing of plans in 1946, but was held up because of a shortage of materials. The approximately doubled - in - size Country club follows the same architectural appearance as the original building, being made of concrete with a stucco exterior.

Major additions to the building include a large enclosed terrace which, according to Col. Ralph E. Tibbets, is large enough to accomodate about 150 couples for dancing without crowding. This terrace is connected with the main ball room of the club, and the two can be used simultaneously for dancing by about 300 couples. The ball room comprises the new west wing of the building, while in the new east wing all golf facilities, including pro shop, lockers, and showers have been combined.

The center section of the building includes a general lounge, the ladies' lounge which has been enlarged, and the ladies' locker room. Other attractions include grill facilities, a tap room, patio and catering service from the main Officers' club, according to Colonel Tibbets. A kitchen has been included to keep food from the Officers' club hot until served at the Country club. Meals will be served for private parties.

The Country club is expected to be the seat of many of the informal gatherings and much of the light entertaining on the post. The extension program was sponsored entirely by funds from the Officers' club.

All Fort Benning troops interested in chess are invited to join the club, Mr. Kelly said.

A room at the YMCA will be set aside for the meetings, and it is planned to have inter-club and inter-post tournaments as soon as the membership is large enough.

Mr. Kelly also said that club officers would be elected. Any further information may be had by contacting the Eleventh street YMCA.

Ends Career In Ring

Lightweight immortal Benny Leonard met and defeated all comers for his crown from 1917 to 1924. Leonard returned undefeated, went into business, but was wiped out in the crash of 1929.

Leonard tried a comeback, failed, and later became one of the nation's top-notch boxing referees. He died while refereeing a bout in Madison Square Garden.

Local Golfers Vie In Holiday Classic

After a week of qualifying play, some 50 officer-golfers will tee off Saturday morning in the revival of the Gordon Cup tournament slated at the Officers' club course, Saturday Sunday and Monday.

Qualifying play which commenced last Saturday ended Wednesday, and pairings for the week-end tourney will be posted at the club house Thursday evening.

It will be a tough row to hoe for the eventual winner who must win six matches in the three-day meet.

Handicap adjustments have been made from 18-hole scores turned in during the qualifying rounds. In cases where golfers who wish to participate in the tourney who have been unable to play five rounds, adjustments will be made by the committee.

During the qualification play, candidates were given benefit of their full handicaps, but the stroke advantage will be decreased to three-fourths for the match play.

Arranged in flights of 16 golfers each, sufficient flights have been established to take care of all contestants. The Gordon Cup goes to the winner of the championship bracket, but it has also been announced that winners of each flight will receive awards.

The champion will have custody of the Gordon Cup for six months, after which time he must defend his title in another similar tournament.

Inaugurated back in the early 1920's, the tourney was cut off later when the cup went into retirement. When it was originated the award was furnished by a group of Columbus business men for the officer golfer of Fort Benning who proved himself the championship handicap player.

The meet, being revived after all these years, will be the first since the cup went into retirement. Only officer personnel will be eligible to compete in the Gordon Cup classic.

Carter Kayos Onifer In First Round Of Feature Airborne Conflict Friday

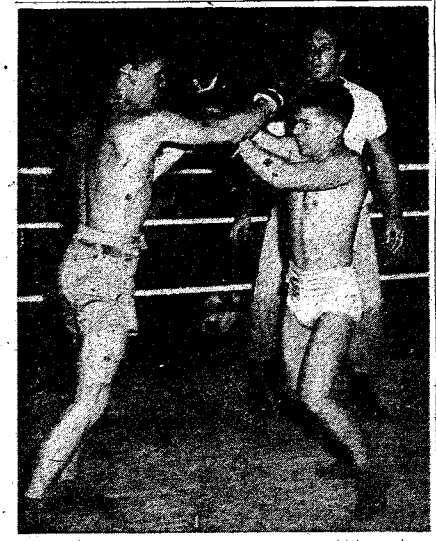
Slugging Joe Carter found the range in short time to kayo Andy Onifer in one minute and nine seconds of the first round in the only knockout registered on the eight-bout boxing card staged last Friday night at the airborne area.

Waiting momentarily, Carter, of Company G and Philadelphia, Pa., cornered Onifer, shifted neatly into position and rained lefts and rights to the head to send Onifer to the canvas for the full ten count. Both were welterweights.

Although Carter's knockout provided the quickest conclusion, the biggest thrills were supplied by junior welters Fred Byrd and Leon Weiner who slugged it out toe to toe for most of the three rounds. Byrd, Company F, burst forth with a flurry of hard knocks in the late minutes to get the nod over Weiner, who was representing Company I, 504th.

A featherweight melee involving Ray Hughes of Company D and Earl Linch of Company F opened the night's activities with Hughes pummeling his opponent frequently to take a unanimous decision.

Showing the ability to take punishment as well as dish it out, Company G's Charley Ridenhour and Company E's Robert Sheridan belted each other around the ring in three rounds of fast action. Sheridan slowed down a little in the waning moments to allow Ridenhour to rally for a split decision.



Hard-hitting Ray Rhone of Company F had things his own way in taking a unanimous triumph from Bob Williams of Company E, while James Hinton, Company I, 504th, proved too much for D. N. Kirkland of Company F.

Racking up his second straight triumph, shifty Mike Corsale, Company C's ranking welterweight, wasted few punches in raining telling blows on Johnny Copeland, Company F, in a fast-moving bout.

An unintentional foul by Bob Prock of Company E against Ray Alvarado of Company I, 504th, brought the card to an abrupt end.

Leon Weiner, who finished on the short end of his fight with Fred Byrd, nevertheless salvaged some honors by being adjudged the fighter displaying the best sportsmanship and heart during the evening. He was presented a gold trophy for his efforts.

Winners were awarded pullover sweaters following the final bout.

WHOSE HOLDING WHO? . . . If looks could hurt, then Ray Hughes, right, is about to cause a little damage. But he threw more than a mean look at his opponent Earl Linch to cop the decision in a three-round featherweight go.

Benning Linksmen Fair Well In Meet

Winning three berths in the championship division of the Southeastern Amateur golf tournament staged at the Columbus Country club last week, Fort Benning's link representatives faltered in the stretch, but salvaged some honors by finishing in the runner-up spot in the team title competition.

Press Thorton, smooth stroking Dothan, Ala., golfer, won the 13th Annual Southeastern Amateur crown by defeating Sonny Swift, of Columbus 6 and 5.

Playing independently Matt C. Bristol, also of Fort Benning, was defeated for the championship Consolation title by Dupont Kirven, Jr., 3 and 2.

Defeated by Sonny Swift, 5 and 4, in his first match, George Hardgrove recovered remarkably to down Fred Mitchell in the first flight, then went on to win the first flight championship 1-up over Harold Spears, Jr., of Atlanta.

Charles Davis won from Billy Young, 1-up, in the first round, defeated Walter K. Johnson in the championship consolation match, but fell before Ralph Harrison 2-up in the second round.

Turgeon, who posted an 80, in his first day's play was eliminated in the second flight by Dick Cherry, Jr., of Albany, 3 and 2. Paul Markland dropped his first flight match, 4 and 3, to Fred Mitchell, and was eliminated by Sam Morgan in the first flight consolation.

Ohio's National Guard Division At Full Strength

A third national guard infantry division—the 37th (Buckeye) of Ohio—has completed organization of all its component units, Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of national guard bureau, announced today.

Organization of the division reached 100 per cent with the federal recognition of Company B, 112th Medical battalion of Cincinnati.

The 43rd of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont, and the 45th of Oklahoma are the other national guard infantry divisions to be organized of all their 114 component units.

The new national guard has been alloted 25 infantry divisions which currently have approximately 88 per cent of their 2,850 units organized; and two armored division—the 50th Texas, respectively — with about 80 per cent of their component 180 units federally recognized.

Organized in 1917, the 37th participated in all the major fighting from July, 1918, until the armistice.

In World War II, the division continued to fight under the S. Beightler, facing the enemy almost continously from 1943, when its men drove ashore at New Georgia, until two years later when they chased Yamashita and his puppet government from the hills of Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines.

The outfit spearheaded General MacArthur's drive that liberated Luzon and Manila, hitting the beaches of Lingayen gulf on D-Day, Jan. 9, 1945.

Inactivated in December, 1945, the 37th Infantry division was reorganized as part of the Ohio postwar national guard.

Rally Nets 5-3 Win For Locals

In their first appearance since returning from the National Semi-Pro tournament held at Wichita, Kans., the Fort Benning Doughboys took a 5-3 verdict over the Columbus Sports Shop under the lights last Thursday night at Gowdy field.

The strain of the long trip from Wichita was in clear evidence as the Doughs took the field against the Columbus nine, but timely hitting and sensational reflief hurling by Lefty Ken Watts were enough to set back the invaders.

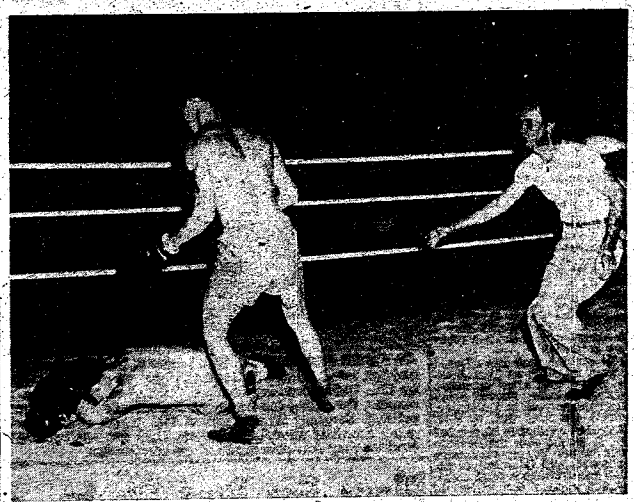
Comprised of all-stars from the sandlots of Columbus and Phenix City, playing under the banner of the Columbus Sports shop, the neighboring opponents got off to a fast start. They wasted no time in climbing on starter Bob Cronin, who had trouble finding the plate, for three big runs in the initial frame.

Watts Comes In

Watts came in to put out the fire. In the eight and one-third innings he toiled, Watts allowed but one bingle, while setting down the Columbusites with a series of goose eggs the rest of the way in.

The hefty portsider added to his own cause with three lusty singles in the four trips to the plate.

It was an uphill battle all the way for the Doughs, who had to play cautious ball to emerge with the two-run margin of victory. After the Sports Shop lads tallied three markers in the opening stanzas, Herb Benett's crew narrowed the margin with two quick runs in their half of the frame. Kinard and Terry reached base on successive errors, and after Burt went out, Kinard and Terry scampered home on Fuller's error of Burnett's drive.



In the fourth, Brooks got life on Casey's miscue, promptly stole second, and dashed home on Watts hot shot past short, to knot the count at 3-3.

Doughs Take Lead

The Doughs went ahead for the first time in the fray in the fifth when Smith, who reached first on a fielder's choice, was pushed around the paths on successive singles by Burnett and Lauve.

While Watts was handcuffing the foe in neat style, his mates kept pecking away, tallying their final marker in the seventh canto. Brooks slashed a sizzler over second, then pilfered second. Bonair, batting for Carney and making his final appearance in a Doughboy uniform, came through with a looping single to score Brooks.

Watts with three hits and Brooks with a pair of swats, paced the Doughboy stickers who collected a total of eight hits off the offerings of Turnage. Broughton, Franklin and Casey were the only foes able to collect hits for the losers. Casey, second-sacker, was the only Sports Shop wielder able to solve the offering of Watts.

DOWN AND OUT! . . . It was a looping hoymaker that Welterweight Joe Carter tossed to fell Andrew Onifer for the full ten count in one-minute and nine seconds of the first round. The referee is John Wilson.

Eliminations Set For Badminton, Volleyoall Titles

With the ultimate winners gaining the right to compete in the Third army championships, volleyhall and badminton enthusiasts have ample time to prep for the post elimination tournaments to be held this month.

The badminton tourney is scheduled for Sept. 14-15-16, while the double-elimination volleyball tournament will get under way Sept. 29.

Conducted on battalion level, or less, the volleyball meet will continue until the eventual winner is decided, with two defeats necessary for elimination. Three games will constitute a match.

The winning team will represent Fort Benning in the Third army tournament to be held in October. Badminton singles champion and doubles winners will also win the right to battle for the Third army crown.

Entries for the badminton tourney, open to all post personnel, must be in the office of the athletic officer of the Infantry Center by Sept. 10.

The post gym is now available for those who wish to get in a few practice sessions before the actual elimination tournaments begin, athletic officials said.

Versatile Performer

Charley Grimm, jolly manager of the Chicago Cubs, ranked as one of the best first basemen of all time, can coax a tune out of a banjo, mandolin, fiddle, guitar or piano.

Grimm has had innumerable offers for a stage career, including one from Olsen and Johnson to join "Hellzapoppin", but turned them all down.

Said Charlie, "I'd rather go up to hit with the bases full than face a theater audience.

Babe Ruth Records

In the 1928 World Series, Babe Ruth, in four games, collected 10 hits in 16 tries, including three home runs, for an all-time record average of .625.

Century Division Sets Convention September 10-12

The second annual grand national reunion of the 100th "Century" Infantry division will be held in Baltimore, Md., Sept. 10-12, it has been announced by Roland Guiduz, of Norfolk, Virginia, president pro-tem of the division association.

History of the division dates back to its organization by Brig. Gen. W. B. Cochran at Camp Bowie, Tex., in Oct, 1918. One month after organization was underway at Camp Bowie the armistice ending World War I was signed, and activation plans were cancelled

The division was re-activated on Nov. 15, 1942, at Fort Jackson, S. C., and after extensive training, including Second army winter maneuvers in Tennessee, it went overseas Oct. 6, 1944.

Entering combat in November 1944, it fought with the Seventh army in the Vosges mountains of France, and later helped repulse the German's final offensive and capture the cities of Bitche, Heilbronn, Stuttgart and Ludwigshaven on the Rhine river.

The "Century" division returned to the United States on Jan. 10, 1946, after serving on occupation duty and was inactivated on Jan. 26 at Camp Kilmer, N. J. Successive commanding generals were: Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, November, 1942, to September, 1945, and Brig. Gen. Andrew C. Tychson, September, 1945, to January, 1946.

Plans For Post Photo Contest Are Announced

Cash prizes are being offered in a Fort Benning photography contest to be staged under the auspices of the special services officer, it has been announced.

Veterans of the 88th "Blue Devil" Infantry division, the first selective service division to see combat in World War II, will hold their first annual convention August 19, 20 and 21, at the Commodore hotel in New York City according to an announcement from the convention committee headed by Arthur Kahn of New York City.

Features of the convention will be a memorable service, the adoption of a constitution, election of officers and a banquet on the last night of the meeting. Details of the sessions may be obtained by writing Mr. Kahn, Box 328, Cooper Station, New York City.

The 88th division was organized at Camp Gruber, Oklahoma, on July 15, 1942, and landed in Africa in December, 1943, where it trained for two months. It first saw combat along the Garigliano river in Italy in March, 1944, and took part in the following campaigns: Rome-Arno, North Appenines and Po valley. It was the first unit to reach the Brenner pass from Italy.

Following the end of the war the division was given the prisoner of war command in Italy and administered and repatriated more than 300,000 German prisoners. In October, 1945, the division moved to Gorizia in Northern Italy and became the occupation force in the disputed territory of Venezia-Guilia. When the Free Territory of Trieste was established, troops for the American contingent of the allied forces were drawn from the 88th division and the division returned home for deactivation.

The contest is being held in conjunction with the Army-wide photography contest, as outlined in the Circular 144, Department of the Army, May 18, 1948. All entries will be submitted to the special services officer, by Nov. 1 on entry blank DA AGO, form R-5556, May 1, 1948. These entry blanks are available in the post special services office.

Entries will be judged by a qualified committee of photographers and suitable prizes awarded. Winning entries will be entered in the Third army contest, the winners of which will go to Washington for the all-service photography contest sponsored by the chief of special services, Department of the Army. Appropriate prizes will be awarded winners in the Third army contest, and in addition honorable mention certificates will be given to all entries selected for the all-service photography contest.

School Children Register Today

Registration of pupils for Children's school No. 1 is being conducted today and tomorrow from 9 a.m. through 3 p.m. according to Gleney Boner, school principal. The school takes pupils from kindergarten through the seventh grade.

Enrollment in the school, Mr. Bonner said, is limited to children of Fort Benning personnel who actually live on the post. This ruling was made last year because of the crowded conditions here. An attendance of about 350 students is expected for the fall term that opens next Tuesday, Sept. 7, he stated.

Registration for school No. 2 will be next Tuesday from 8:30 a.m. through 3 p.m., the first day of classes there. An attendance of about 20 pupils is expected in this school.

Children under five years old are not permitted to attend the kindergarten unless their fifth birthday is on or before Dec. 1. Children under six years of age cannot be enrolled for the first grade unless their sixth birthday comes before Jan. 1, 1949. Children enrolling in these grades are required to take an aptitude test to assist in proper placing. A registration fee of three dollars is the only charge the school makes.

Registration for Columbus high schools will be held Sept. 6 to 10. For the Cusseta school, which starts Sept. 3, registration will be the same day.

Miss Stallings Guest Speaker

The Fort Benning Service Men's Christian league will present as its guest speaker Tuesday evening, Sept. 7, Miss Carolyn Stallings of Columbus.

Miss Stallings will speak on the World Christian Youth conference which she attended in July 1947 in Oslo, Norway. Her report will be illustrated by a film strip of scenes highlighting the conference proceedings.

Miss Stallings is a student of sociology at the Mary Washington college of the University of Virginia, and plans to do Christian youth work upon completion of her youth training.

The meeting will be held in the Fellowship room of the hospital Protestant chapel. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Local Recruit Trainers To Learn UMT Policy

A Third Armored division indoctrination team from Fort Knox, Ky., is expected to be at Fort Benning Sept. 7-9 for the purpose of instructing officers and enlisted men of the 325th Provisional Training battalion in the policies and procedures of troop handling which have been adopted by the division for the training of new enlistees.

This group will advise unit commanders, staff sections and enlisted personnel on the method employed by the Universal Military Training Experimental unit at Fort Knox which has been training recruits since the end of the war.

The team's primary mission is to insure that all officers and enlisted men who are to train recruits are thoroughly familiar with all details relating to the metohods and principals used by UMTEU.

Some of the methods used by the experimental unit have already been put into practice at Fort Benning, officials of the training battalion said this week.

They have already visited Fort Riley, Kans, Fort Lewis, Wash., Fort Worden, Wash., Fort Lawton, Wash., and Camp Stoneman, Calif.

Today the team leaves Fort Bliss, Tex., for Camp Hood, Tex. and will come to Fort Benning from Hood.

Following their two-day visit here, they will go to Fort Eustis, Va., Fort Meade, Md., Fort Devens, Mass., Camp Pickett, Va., and Camp Chaffee, Ark.

6,292 Schedule GED Tests Here

A total of 6,292 men at Fort Benning will be required to take the high school level general educational development test, it was announced this week by Capt. Edward F. Grady, information and education officer.

This total came as the result of a survey made following recent orders by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, that all personnel at Benning who do not already have a high school diploma or certificate of equivalency will be required to take the G.E.D. test.

More than 430 tests were completed last month, and are now being given at the rate of about 80 every two days, Captain Grady said. He added that men who fail the test the first time they take it "will be expected" to enroll in United States Armed Forces Institute courses in the subjects in which they were weak on the test.

Following at least 30 days of study and upon prsentation of a statement from their commanding officers that they have studied, the men will be permitted to take the test a second time. They will be required, however, in taking the test the second time, to take the entire test. Appointments for the tests, given at the information - eduation center, are made through unit I and E officers.

This week the post I and E office is conducting a special 40-hour school for the training of Benning officers and enlisted men as troop I and E personnel. The students are being especially trained to lead troop information program discussions and to handle varied A and E duties.

Curriculum for the school consists of classes on the mission of I and E personnel, training wof I and E personnel, training discussion leaders, training of discusiong leaders, training of motion picture projectionists.

Instructors at the school are Captain Grady, Capt. Wisdom H. Stewart, 1st. Lts. Max. H. Sinofeld, Noah G. King and Otis A. Admason. Should the school be continued after this week, Captain Grady declared that men who wish to attend may apply through their units.

Warrant Officer Screening Center CeasesOperation

Established the early part of May, the local board processed more than 50 men weekly from Fort Benning and surrounding territory, including Alabama, Florida and Mississippi.

Applicants who were screened and interviewed by the interviewing board, will be notified by the Department of the Army or the Department of the Air Force regarding the results of the findings of the local board. Those screened for warrant officer will have a wait of at least 30 days before the final decisions are handed down from Washington, according to screening center officials.

Included in the toal number of 683 applicants processed were 63 transferes of applications to other posts.

With the completion of the warrant officer program, a screening center for the integration of officers into the Women's Army corps has been established here.

The center will begin processing applicants for comissions in the WAC, regular army. Finals selections will be made in the Department of the Army by a board of officers designated by the Secretary of the Army.

The WAC center is one of the many set up in various army areas. Others in the Third army are located at Fort Bragg, N. C., Greenville, S. C.; Eglin air force base, Fla.; Orlando air force base, Fla.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; and Maxwell field, Ala.

Camera Crew Films Training

An advanced party from the Signal corps photographic center, Long Island, N. Y., arrived at Fort Benning last Monday to initiate preliminary plans for the filming of "Aerial Delivery Containers."

Included in the first group to arrive here were Capt. Raymond Miller, unit manager, Broder Peterson, director, and Harry C. Kreider, camerman. The rest of the Signal corps party was scheduled to arrive Wednesday.

Working in close cooperation with the pathfinder aerial delivery committee, Airborne section, Infantry School, the Long Island crew will begin actual shooting of the film Friday afternoon.

With the project expected to take at least 30 days, the scope of the film will deal primarily with parachute supply and aerial delivery via various containers.

COUNTING CAVATIES . . . He opened his mouth but didn't have a chance to say a word. Rct. Joseph Lopsey of the 325th Infantry Training battalion looked a bit fearful while Maj. Stanley A. Wynn was checking his molars.

OFFICER GROUP HEARS ADDRESS BY BURRESS

One hundred and sixty-one students of advanced officers' class No. 2 this week heard Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commandant of the Infantry School, reiterate his belief that the general challenge facing the army today is to make training attractive enough so that the soldiers, especially the new men coming in today, will make a career of military service.

Speaking Tuesday morning at the opening session of the 39 weeks' course for future regimental commanders and division general staff officers, General Burress emphasized the fact that while the army is today getting thousands of young men in its ranks, it is not keeping them. The turnover in infantry divisions, he stated, is too great and results in impairment of efficiency, an impairment that is even greater when trained cadres must be taken from these divisions.

Comparing today's training of infantrymen with that of war time, General Burress reminded the class that times have changed. There is a need for a different incentive, he told his audience. The war time incentive no longer exists, nor can a man take a training manual and use that alone. The entire problem, as he summed it up, is to make the training of the infantryman so attractive that the young men entering service today will like the army and wish to make it their career..

The class of advanced officers was the second to start the new academic year in that category. Advanced class No. 1 with 163 officers heard the post commander Aug. 31. Last Thursday, Sept. infantry officers' communications class No. 1. Included in this class are seven reserve officers and one each from Canada, the Philippines, Mexico, Turkey and Argentina.

Tuesday morning 151 enlisted men and 17 officers opened basic airborne class No. 1. Also starting their academic work the same day this week were 23 men signed up for parachute riggers' class No. 1. Next Tuesday an estimated class of 27 officers will start associate advanced officers' class No. 1, while the same day it is expected that 113 students will be on hand for the opening of associate basic officers' class No. 1.

Gen. O'Daniel Now In Russia

Maj. Gen. John W O'Daniel, who relinquished command of the Infantry Center to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress June 1, arrived in Moscow Sunday, Sept. 5, to take up his duties as military attache, the United Press reported in a dispatch from the Soviet capital.

He will succeeed Maj. Gen. Robert S. Macon as American military attache in Moscow.

General O'Daniel served as Fort Benning commander for three years. During the war he was commanding general of the famed Third Infantry division in Europe.

Following his departure from Fort Benning last June 1, General O'Daniel took a 30-day leave. A month's briefing in Washington preceded his assignment to Moscow.

Formal Opening Attracts Throng At Country Club

Approximately 1,500 well-wishers attended open house festivities for all members of the Officers' club and their guests during the formal opening of the re-modeled Fort Benning Country club Monday.

Highlighted by the presentation of the Gordan cup by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, to Lt. John Henion who won the holiday golf tournament at the club, the day's festivities got under way at 4 p. m. when members, and their guests began streaming through the club for an inspection of its new facilities.

Lieutenant Henion defeated Maj. A. J. Hoebeke 2 and 1 in the finals Monday afternoon of the Gordon cup tournament which began Saturday and ran through the week-end.

A brief dedication ceremony, which included an address by General Burress preceded the presentation of the golf awards.

Afternoon music was provided by the 72nd Army band, while an orchestra played for dancing from 8:30 until 11 p. m. in the new ballroom and open terrace.

A new terrace and two new wings have been added to the Country club which has undergone an extensive program of remodeling. The drawing of plans was initiated in 1946, but construction was held up due to shortage of materials.

Now doubled in size, the remodeled club includes an enclosed terrace, large enough to accomadate 150 couples. With the terrace connected with the main ball room, the two can be used simultaneously for dancing. The ball room is in the new west wing of the building, while all golf facilities are housed in the new east wing.

In the center of the building is a general lounge, which also has been enlarged, and the ladies locker room. Grill facilties, a tap room, patio and catering service from the main Officer's club are added attractions fo the club. Meals will also be served for private parties.

Lt. Col. Patrick F. Cassidy has assumed duties here as chief of the Infantry School's Airborne section to succeed Lt. Col. David P. Schorr, Jr., who is now a student at the Armed Forces Staff college.

The new airborne chief participated in the first company and battalion jumps and field maneuvers in this country in 1941 and the first airborne division airlift and drop with the 101st Airborne division in 1942.

He served overseas with the 502nd Parachute infantry battalion of the 101st in Normandy, Holland, Belgium and Germany.

From December, 1945, until June, 1946, he was a committee chairman at the Airborne School, and later commanding officer of the 501st. Since November, 1946, he has been committee chairman and executive officer of the Airborne section.

Colonel Cassidy is a graduate of the Air Corps Technical School, Command and General Staff college, and senior officers' course at the airforce's school of Applied Tactics. He wears the Distinguished Service cross, Silver Star, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, French Croix de Guerre, Belgian Croix de Guerre with four-ragere and Dutch lanyard.

New Class Begins Airborne Training

A new group of 274 enlisted men and two officers, attached to Company F of the Airborne battalion, has entered its second week of training after having passed the rigorous phases of the initial week.

In addition to the physical training program during the first week, the future paratroopers also received instructions in familiarization of aircraft, lashing and loading and load computation.

An orientation glider ride at Lawson field has been scheduled for Friday in the highlight of this week's training.

Post Dialogue

Love at first sight is said to be a wonderful thing. But like all other first impressions, love at first sight doesn't always last very long. So when the Congress decided that the army would be greatly increased in strength, and men began pouring in, voluntarily, the army decided that it would be of great importance that the new recruits get a good and lasting impression of the army, one they'd remember pleasantly after discharge. The army also realized that if the new men coming in liked the army at the beginning they might take advantage of the career opportunities offered.

To find out what these new men, who have been in the army only a few weeks, thing of the army, army life and Fort Benning, this week the coquiring reporter asked eight of them what they would say if they were writing a brief letter home to their parents, brothers, girl friend or other friends.

Pct. Ralph Applebaum, Fifth company, of Boston, Mass., to his mother: "Having a wonderful time. We have a big beautiful camp here with nice barracks. The beds are fairly comfortable, but not like those at home. Chow is pretty good, but not like yours. We have very good officers and non-coms, and they treat us fair. Nobody uses a whip on us here. It's a great thing, and I've written some of the boys and told them to join."

Applebaum Jordan

Pct. Roy A. Jordan, Fifth company, of Buffalo, N.Y., writing to his father: "Here I am in Fort Benning. The army is a good life and it treats me good. The chow isn't so bad but once in a while you don't get enough. (Ed. note: They only get a ration and a half!) I made a couple of buddies here, and I hang around with them quite often.

"This Fort Benning is a good army camp. They have everything from a drug store to a dance hall. I like the army, and hope to stay here and take training in mechanics or possibly airborne."

Pct. Robert C. Poland, Second company, of Piedmont, W. Va., to his girl: "The drilling is rather tough, but the army is all right. It's just what any man makes it. Fort Benning is a fine place. It has beautiful scenery, and the Main post is beautiful. I think it's run by a fine bunch of officers. I think the army is a lot easier than I expected."

Poland Johns

Pct. Ray E. Johns Second company, of Tuscarawas, O., lets his two brothers, both army veterans, know what he thinks:

"In general, I like the army. I knew it wasn't going to be a picnic, but in a way it's easier than I thought it'd be. After what you told me I've been pleasantly surprised at the way the officers and non-coms treat us. They don't pick on us, but I'm not being babied. I like Fort Benning. There's plenty of it, plenty of entertainment and plenty of transportation to all parts."

Pct. Charles B. Border, Third company of Millfield, O., to his mother and father: "I think the army is all right, but I don't like being away from home. I miss you and Donna (the girl friend). If you keep your mouth shut and listen, you get along all right. It's hot here, out Fort Benning is pretty nice. They have plenty of recreation here. I'm on KP today, and I can't say that I like it too much."

Border Bloomberg

Pct. Melvin Bloomberg, third company, of Boston, Mass., to his mother: "Army life in Fort Benning is ok. Of course, basic training means just that but the recreational facilities, sports programs, theaters, etc., keep things on the light side. Time moves very fast, in fact, so fast there is something to be done every minute. So far, army life seems to be a good deal."

Pct. Howard E. Reopelle, Second company, of Hartland, Me., to his mother: "I think it's pretty nice here. They've got PX's, movies and all recreational facilities here, and we can also use those on the Main post. The officers and non-coms are strict, but they help us in every way. I find the army better than most people told me it would be. They've got about everything here that I want."

Reopelle Christino

Pct. Joseph V. Christino Second company, whose home is in Utica, N.Y., writes a friend: "I like the spirit and morale of the officers and non-commissioned officers in my unit. When I feel in the dumps, it perks me up. So far, the army life I've seen has been better and easier than I thought it would be. And Fort Benning has all the recreational facilities that you have at home."

Control Board Nerve Center Of Auto Shop

A "nerve center" to swiftly coordinate complex and continuous operations that facilitate efficient automobile serving is an ultra-modern feature of Strickland Motors' new autoforium.

On the main floor of the streamlined structure, is the service control room where expediter Lemar Delvin, a Navy veteran, directs the activity of other departments to gain maximum efficiency.

By means of three-way electronic communication, Mr. Delvin assigns specific operations to mechanics in the second-floor major servicing department and never seeing them.

After incoming cars are registered on a large record board by Mr. Delvin, he sends a duplicate servicing order to the parts department through a vacuum tube. The parts department swiftly sends needed parts to the mechanic via a small elevator and then sends the servicing order back to Mr. Delvin by way of the same vacuum tube in which they arrived. Footwork is held down to a minimum to cut down wasted time.

Mr. Delvin can reach any member of the parts department or any mechanic at a moment's notice and they in turn can contact him—through sending and receiving radio sets in their departments.

CMH Winner, Navy Gunner Included Among Last Week's Airborne Grads

A navy gunner and a wearer of the Medal of Honor were among the members of a class of airborne students who received their parachutist wings at ceremonies last Friday.

The former sailor is Sgt Robert G. McMillen, winner of the Navy and Marine corps medal, while the soldier is M-Sgt. Jake W. Lindsay, 100th infantryman to receive the nation's highest award for heroism in action.

A veteran of eight years in the navy, McMillan spent four years as a submariner and four as a diver. It was in the latter capacity that he received his medal for his actions in the Philippines in 1945.

According to the citation, he "distinguished himself by heroism in the performance of duty as a diver engaged in salvage operations in the U.S.S. LaVallette, which was in immediate danger of sinking as a result of battle damage sustained in support of the assault on Corregidor.

"During the period from Feb 15 to 19, in an anchorage exposed to air attack, he voluntarily and at constant risk to his life entered the flooded compartment of the LaVallette through holes blown in the bottom of the ship and other congested, extensively damaged and unfamiliar accessopenins. As a result of his efforts watertight integrity was restored, bodies of the dead trapped below were recovered, and the La Vallette was prevented from sinking, to be eventually repaired and returned to active and offensive oprations against the enemy. This heroic performance of duty far exceeded the normal expectation common to diving operations of this type."

When the war started Sergeant McMillen was on duty with submarine S-37 which won the Army's Distinguished Unit citation for hauling badly needed supplies and ammunition to the beleaguered troops at Corregidor. After serving in the South Pacific during the first phase of the war, he returned to Pearl Harbor where he attended the navy diving school. He then saw service in the same theater and received the navy's Commendation ribbon for making continued dives under air attack to repair battle damage. His longest dive was three hours and 20 minutes in 90 feet of water.

After 72 months of overseas duty McMillen, a gunner's mate second class, was discharged from the navy, and 30 days later enlisted in the regular army for five years because he "wanted to be in the airborne and be able to spend more time with my wife and child."

Awarded the Medal of Honor on May 30, 1945, Sergeant Lindsay won the decoration for his action during an attack of an enemy position near Hamich Germany, on Nov. 16, 1944. Then a technical sergeant in Company A, 16th Infantry regiment of the First Infantry division, Lindsay's men had captured their objective and were digging in when counterattacked by a German infantry company supported by five tanks.

"Armed with a rifle and grenades, Sergeant Lindsay took position on the left and in advance of the remnant of his platoon, and though exposed to heavy rifle, machine gun and tank fire, beat off repeated enemy attacks. Tanks moved to within 50 yards of him but were forced to withdraw because of his accurate rifle grenade fire," according to the citation.

"After driving off the tanks he knocked out two machine guns to his front. Though painfully wounded, Sergeant Lindsay continued firing and throwing his grenades until his ammunition was expended. An enemy squad attempted to set up a machine gun in front of him. Unmindful of his wounds and enemy fire, he rushed these eight German soldiers, single-handedly closed with them, killed three with his bayonet and captured three; the other two escaped. In his fearlessness, inspiring courage and superb leadership, Sergeant Lindsay carried on a brilliant defense of his platoon's hard-won ground, securing the position and inflicting heavy casualties on the numerically superior enemy."

This was the first Congressional Medal of Honor awarded by President Truman and the 100th awarded an infantrymen. By a strange quirk of fate, the same general order announcing Lindsay's award also carried the announcement of the award of a Medal of Honor, posthumously, to Lindsay's cousin, a pilot killed in a flight over France. Married and the father of one child, Lindsay has eight years in the army already, and has decided to remain in at least 12 more years.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Lindsay is authorized to wear the Silver Star, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman's badge, ETO ribbon with eight campaign stars and invasion arrowhead, American Defense medal, American Theater medal, World War II Victory medal and the Distinguished Unit badge with three oak leaf clusters.

What Are The Army's Plans?

This is the fourth in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1. Will the selectee have a chance for promotion?

The selectee will have an excellent chance for promotion as well as for advancement and education—a better chance than ever before in a peacetime army. Many schools and training courses are offered now to further the soldier's training and increase his chances of promotion.

2. What are his chances of becoming an officer?

Properly qualified enlisted men or civilians may apply for Officer Candidate School, and may attend if recommended by commanding officers. Upon successful completion of the course appointment is made in the Army of the United States. The upper ten per cent of OCS graduates are designated distinguished graduates, and are eligible for direct appointment as second lieutenant in the regular army. Other successful OCS graduates, who are not in the upper ten percent, may apply for selection to enter on a competitive tour which affords an opportunity to be selected for appointment as a lieutenant in the regular army.

3. Has leadership in the army improved?

Yes, it has, largely as a result of the army's World War II experience. The keynote now is to explain and lead ,rather than to drive. When an individual knows why he does certain things, more cheerful and efficient performance results.

4. What steps are being taken to utilize newly trained men after they finish their 21 months of service?

The bill provides for the transfer of each individual to a reserve component upon completion of a normal tour of service by induction.

5. Why can't the army get enuogh volunteer enlistments?

The competition with the other services and with civilian life is too keen. Despite this, the army has succeeded in creating the largest volunteer force of any of the services, and the largest of any army in the history of any country.

6. Will the selectee come under the career guidance program? Will he have opportunities to attend technical schools?

The career guidance program for enlisted personnel will operate to the same extent for selectees as for enlistees. They will be processed, trained, assigned and employed in the same manner as a regular army enlistee insofar as is consistent with their expected term of service. A substantial proportion of selectees will have an opportunity to attend technical schools with shorter term courses for which the individual is qualified.

7. Will selectees have any freedom in choosing their branch of service, their jobs, their place of assignment?

Only to a limited degree. Every effort will be made to place the selectee in the job and assignment for which he is best suited. Service requirements must govern.

CARGO VESSELS NAMED FOR WINNERS OF CMH

Three cargo vessels of the Transportation corps fleet have been redesignated in honor of Medal of Honor winners who lost their lives in World War II. The redesignation ceremony will take place at the home ports of the vessels.

The Acron Knot has been redesignated the Sgt. George D. Keathley in honor of a rifleman of the 85th Infantry division who lost his life on Mt. Altuzzo Italy, on Sept. 14, 1944. Sergeant Keathley forced back three enemy counterattacks in which all commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the second and third platoons of his company had become casualties. Sergeant Keathley is survived by his widow, Mrs. Geneve Keathley, 502 Miller street Lameesa, Tex.

The Check Knot has been redesignated the Sgt. Joseph E. Muller, a squad leader of Company B, 305th Infantry regiment, who lost his life near Ishimmi Okinawa, on May 16, 1945, in an attack against a Japanese machine gun nest. Next-of-kin is his mother, Mrs. Mary St. Germain, 26 High street, Taunton Mass.

The Coastal Guide has been redesignated the Sgt. George Peterson, a platoon sergeant of Company K, 18th Infantry regiment, First Infantry division, who lost his life while making a flanking attack on the enemy near Eisern, Germany, on March 30, 1945. Next-of-kin is his father, John Peterson, 533 41st street, Brooklyn, New York.

These three vessels have an average length of 338 feet, eight inches, 50-foot beam, 21-foot draft, a deadweight tonnage of 5,610 tons and diesel-powered engines. The Acron Knot and the Check Knot are assigned to the San Francisco port of embarkation and the Coastal Guide is assigned to the New Orleans port of embarkation.

700 Reservists Ordered to Duty

In accordance with a provision of the Selective Service Act of 1948, the Department of the Army has directed that approximately 700 recent graduates of the Reserve Officer Training corps be ordered to active duty for a period not to exceed 21 months.

The executive for reserve and ROTC affairs explained that those ROTC graduates affected hold reserve commissions as second lieutenants and have had less than 90 days of continuous active service. Most of these reserve officers will be ordered to report for duty with the army on or about Oct. 15.

Reserve officers falling within this category will be alerted by letters of instruction in the near future. If the officer is a student of medicine or dentistry he will be allowed to complete his schooling before being called to duty.

Any junior reserve officer subject to service under this new directive may volunteer for active duty without waiting for the Oct. 15 date, if he so desires.

Strictly Editorializing

We don't know any finer place for non-commissioned officers at Fort Benning to spend their leisure hours than the post NCO club. We became convinced of this following our first visit there last week. Never having seen the inside of the club, we decided that it was about time we became acquainted with the facilities offered there; consequently, we asked a friend who is a member to invite us to be his guest.

It's the largest, most complete, most luxuious NCO club we've ever seen—and we've seen them all over this country and in Europe. A large and adequate bar, complete game room, huge lounge, screened porches, powder room, rest rooms, kitchen, et cetera certainly make it a desirable place to entertain and be entertained.

We were especially amazed at the size of the main lounge, with its raised bandstand, countless tables and chairs and newly installed leather booths. According to club officials, the kitchen is now providing complete dinners, with the emphasis placed on steak, juicy steaks cooked just as the customer desires.

Floor shows and music by orchestras provide the entertainment highlights for those who are lucky enough to be members. And the club is proud of its record of engaging 'name bands." Yes, non-commissioned officers at Fort Benning are indeed fortunate in having such a club, and the officials of the club are to be commended for maintaining such an excellent establishment.

'Civic' Pride

Fort Benning has always been an attractive post for officers. Hardly any man of commissioned grade objects to being sent here. Fact is, most officers covet assignments at the Infantry Center. This has sometimes not been the case with enlisted men. Although most have enjoyed being here, there is, in a number of cases, no real desire to return even for a visit as is the rule with most officers.

This is not due to a lack of good administration, a lack of comfort, or a lack of any other thing which makes a soldier happy and contented. On the contrary, the soldier at Fort Benning has all these things. But, despite this, some have not felt any real "ties" with the post. In other words, no "civic" pride.

Now, however, under the guidance of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Fort Benning officials are attempting in every way possible to make the post attractive for an enlisted man. Through their efforts, they hope to turn Fort Benning into a big community, comparable to a city of the same size.

There are of course, thousands of Benningites among the enlisted men who like Fort Benning just as it is. Still, merely because they are in a majority, is no reason why the desires of the minority should not be compensated for in some way. As a result, there are under way several concrete programs to alleviate this condition.

Foremost among the proposed plans is an increase in recreational facilities on the post for enlisted men and their families. For some time, Fort Benning has been adding to its off-duty recreational program, such things as non-commissioned officers' clubs, a wider variety of activities at service clubs, an all-night snack bar, a more complete intra-mural and inter-post athletic schedule. Other things will be added as the need arises and as appropriations warrant. The main point is, they are taking place here, with the primary purpose of making the social life for the Fort Benning soldier fuller and happier and at little or no cost to him.

Shortly after his arrival here last May, General Burress cited the need for remedying the condition which caused some enlisted men to leave Fort Benning without regret and with no desire even to come back on a visit. He believes, and so, we are sure, will everyone else, that Benningites should feel as a civilian feels about the city in which he lives: always glad to come "back home."

Most Benningites have a great deal of pride in their community, but there are still some to be reached, and it is hoped that they can be reached.

Benningites, who don't already, should want to see improvements made, and work for those improvements. They should feel that Fort Benning is the best post in the army.

The Bayonet frankly believes that Fort Benning is the best post. We agree with a majority of the Benningites who say that there is here almost everything an enlisted man could wish for in the way of off-duty entertainment, and those things not provided at present are gradually being added. Certainly no post can compare with Fort Benning in natural beauty or man-made beauty; living conditions are way above average, food is as good or better than at any other post.

All enlisted men stationed here should feel as though Fort Benning is their "home." All should have that "civic" pride which makes for a better community for everyone.

Chaplain's Corner..

THE GOLDEN RULE

By

Chaplain R. P. Oanis

There was a time not so many years ago when the Golden Rule was a very familiar text on the lips of Christian peoples. "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." That philosophy has reverted to the old philosophy, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life." Overcome evil with evil, rather than overcome evil with good. And the reason so many people give for deserting the Golden Rule is that it is a one-way street. There is no guarantee of reciprocation.

To such reasoning there is just one thing to be said. To do good merely to receive good is not what Jesus meant when He gave us this rule to live by. To live according to the Golden Rule means to live sacrificially. It means to subdue all materialistic motives within us which seek everything for selfish gains and personal happiness. In order to live by the Golden Rule we must learn to lose our lives in others so that we might be able to understand, appreciate, and help those who cross our path along life's way.

This sacrificial life which helps us to do good to one another is the way to oneness with God and people. It is the way through which we learn how to get along with others. It is the basis for the successful operation of the Golden Rule. And we know it will work because Christ Himself lived just that way. He practiced it so completely in His day that its light still lightens a world in darkness even after more than nineteen hundred years.

There is a tendency in these days to believe that the Golden Rule has become tarnished and even buried under the rubble and debris of a post-war world. But there are times when its radiance shines shines through the gloom; and when it does it shines with a lustrous light.

During the war, a hospital in France printed a weekly paper which carried a column entitled "G. I. of the Week." In one issue of that paper the G. I. of the week was selected for the simple and very ordinary reason that he most perfectly practiced the Golden Rule in his daily contacts with his fellow buddies. There we have concrete evidence that this Golden Rule is not spurned by the world; and when it pours itself out in good works, its light does not go undetected by those upon whom it shines.

What we need in this post-war world is more of that Golden Rule practiced by more people. If friends, and enemies, too, if christians the world over, would exercise this rule of love; and, by God's grace, live by it, these very days could usher in the golden era of friendship and lasting peace which our sad world so sorely needs.

Book Shelf

THE DEVIL'S STRONGHOLD

If you're looking for an "escape" from sky-high prices, pigeonish bosses, and hundred-degree temperatures, then Leslie Ford's latest who - dunit may be just the thing for you. That depends on how you like your murders, mysteries, and how much it takes to make you forget your troubles. We escaped all right; we went to sleep. Perhaps we've had too much Hammett and Fischer, but we found this book, to say the least, tame. Only two murders, and very unimpressive murders at that.

There's one thing we'll have to say for author Leslie Ford. She gets around, and doesn't confine all of her stories to Washington, although they usually start from there. The last we heard she was writing about criminals in the Curtis Publishing company in Philadelphia, and before that she was down in Natchez fooling around haunted houses. Or was that Charleston? Then there was Honolulu and various other points. For this story she has chosen Hollywood with its usual collection of erratic producer and more erratic ex-movie stars.

The narrator is Mrs. Grace Latham, wealthy Georgetown widow, whose son, Bill, is in Los Angeles, ostensibly working on a degree at UCLA. Mrs. Latham receives an air mail special delivery from Lucille Gannon in Hollywood, which says: "Darling, you must come out here. Your firstborn is making a complete and utter ass of himself, and over the worst little trollop that ever hit Hollywood and Vine." Mrs. Latham, being worried, and wealthy enough to do something about it, takes the first plane to Hollywood, and the adventure begins. Crashing rocks, threatening notes, mysterious phone calls, terrible tempwered young ladies telling her in no uncertain terms to get out of town!

The "trollop" is Molly McShane, and of course you know right away that she isn't really a "trollop", but has some secret in her past which you will probably guess before you're half through the book. Son Bill and his buddy Sheep Clark are backers of Miss McShane in her film career, and one of the most disagreeable characters imaginable, Eustace "Stinky" Stipe is her agent. It takes about 70 pages to get to the first murder, and the woman killed has very little to do with the story. (We think there ought to be a law against detective story writers murdering inoffensive characters. There probably is, but Mrs. Ford doesn't pay attention to it.).

As you know, the mystery is solved by Mrs. Latham's boy friend, Colonel John Primrose (92nd Engineers, U. S. Army, Retired), who has followed her to Hollywood. Fortunately he leaves his self-styled "functotum," Sergeant-Phineas T. Buck (likewise) back in Washington. Sergeant Buck's absence helps the book a great deal.

The book is easy enough to read if you can stay awake. (We couldn't). It differs very little from other stories of Hollywood, and might be called a run of the mill detective story except that it is not quite so gory as the average.

BY MURRAY . HILL

I am sure that you would be interested in knowing the part your Red Cross recently played in the dreaded polio epidemic. Early this summer, in dozens of cities across the country, the Red Cross began rallying for one of the most significant services of the organization — recruitment of nurses for infantile paralysis duty. Quietly, without alarming their communities, chapter nurse committees supplied nurses for near or distant cities as the need increased. By August 8, the Red Cross had assigned 840 nurses to communities whose normal nursing resources had been depleted by the disease.

In North Carolina alone, where the polio outbreak was the worst to hit a state in four years, the Red Cross had provided 400 nurses by August 8. Participating in this one recruitment operation were Red Cross chapters in 78 communities throughout eight southeastern states.

Behind the current Red Cross assistance to polio-afflicted communities is a long story of continuous cooperation between the Red Cross and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Your American Red Cross, as the recognized agency for recruiting nurses for disasters including epidemics, was asked by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to recruit nurses for the polio epidemic. At the foundation's request, the program continues to serve those areas in which nursing personnel in hospitals is not sufficient to meet the needs.

In 1946, when the worst polio epidemic in 12 years struck the country, your Red Cross recruited 2,564 nurses. Red Cross chapters throughout the nation are busy surveying the nurses within their jrisdiction to ascertain their availability for disaster service.

It is interesting to note how quickly these nurses respond to a Red Cross request. Two young nurses in St. Louis, Mo., gave up their Christmas holidays last year in respond to a Red Cross distress call to in Boise, Idaho. These same two nurses will be working this year through the Labor day vacation at Corpus Christi, Tex., where polio struck again.

Red Cross volunteers, other than chapter nurse chairmen for disasters, often serve in polio epidemics. Motor service members transport recruited nurses to and from planes, trains and lodgings. Canteen service members provide snack facilities for nurses assigned to hospitals not equipped to serve all meals. Red Cross nurse's aides and Gray Ladies perform their usual varied hospital services.

I am sure all are moved to compassion by the plight of polio stricken children. None would refuse to volunteer to help these sufferers. Yet it is impossible for all of us to be at the scene of an epidemic. Yet, you are there. For your Red Cross is always at the scene of any disaster, representing you.

Open House At Lawson To Mark Airforce Day

The annual "Airforce Day" open house will be held at Lawson airforce base this year on Saturday, Sept. 18, from 1 to 4 p.m., and will feature a tactical aerial demonstration, it was announced this week by Col. Gilbert T. Collar, base commander.

"Air Force Day, 1948," will commemorate a double aniversary —the first birthday of the autonomous branch of the armed forces and the 41st anniversary of the establishment of the nation's air arm, which took place in 1907.

The occasion will be observed by all air force stations in the United States and overseas with special ceremonies designed to keep the public informed on the strength and accomplishments of the eight major commands of the United States airforce, official in Washington have announced. Using the motto, "Air Power is Peace Power," as the theme for the afternoon-long program, Lawson will stage an air show utilizing fighters, troop carrier planes, gliders and paratroopers.

In addition to the aerial exhibition, open house guests will witness weather observation procedures, aircraft control tower demonstrations and aircraft crash rescue work.

Visitors will be permitted to board aircraft for close-up inspections, with base personnel acting as escorts and commentators. Static displays of aircraft engines and apparatus, ammunition and various types of paratroop equipment will be arranged on the flight line along with airforce information and recruiting booths.

A serviceman friend of ours likes this approach: At a recent party, he was stumped as to how to break the ice with a sweet, young beauty until he came up with this: "pardon me, Miss," he said, "I'm with the Federal Government. Whom are you with?"

A veteran received an eviction notice from his landlord and replied with a letter that set some kind of a record for brevity. It read:

"Dear Sir:

"I remain,

"Yours very truly."

Doughboys Retain Army Ball Crown

Dump Fort Jackson Nine To Reclaim Championship

Fort Benning's Doughboys threw their Third army baseball toga in the ring at Fort Bragg, N. C., last week, but took it back out again after they had trimmed the Fort Jackson, S. C., squad 7-4 in the nightcap of a twin bill Saturday afternoon.

The Jacksonites, a tourney darkhorse, turned the closing day program into a double feature when ex-Benningite Andy Boland hurled a 7-1 triumph over the Doughboys early in the day, and made a third tussle between the locals and the South Carolinians necessary. The finals loss was the only setback in four tournament encounters for the Doughs.

Starting their title march last Tuesday against the 82nd Airborne division assassins of Fort Bragg, the Doughs had compiled an early 6-0 advantage over the parachutists, but rain washed the margin down the drain before sufficient innings had been played for the fray to be considered official.

The Georgia soldiers, however, took the diamond against the Assassins on Wednesday, and southpaw Collis Lehner whitewashed the Bragg team 4-0 on four hits to inscribe Fort Benning's name on the winning side of the bracket for the second-round contests.

Preston Long, doing the twirling for the North Carolina squad, held the Doughmen scoreless for the first three innings of the tilt, but singls by Harold (Blondy) Burnett and Bill Brooks and an error by Assassin shortstop Stephen Mash on Herb Lauve's roller provided the Benningites with two tallies in the fourth.

The Doughs penetrated the two tallies of the inning came when Ralph Terry singled, and Brooks reached on a Jackson misplay. Another pair of errors on blows by Gallagher and Watts permitted both runners to scores.

To set the stage for Smith's boundary belt, Bob Kinard and Lauve walked, and Burt reached on a fielder's choice. After Burnett had rolled to third baseman for the second out, Smith came through with his baseclearing smash to deep left.

The Doughs increased their scoring column again in the eighth when Tom Gallagher slammed out a double, and scored on Woody Burt's single. The final Doughboy counter came in the ninth canto when Burnett singled with one out and completed the circuit of the sacks when Lauve doubled and Brooks notched another one-bagger.

Veteran Lehner pitched a steady brand of ball for the Doughs, and allowed only three Assassin base-runners to get as far as the keystone bag. The speedy portsider whiffed seven opposing batters and issued only one free pass to first.

Th local crew went undefeated into the third round of the tourney on Thursday night when it staged a 14-hit attack to down the Jacksonites 14-3. Another southpaw, Ken Watts, went the route for the Doughboys, and rationed the South Carolina squad six safeties.

Coach Herb Bench's Doughmen jumped on a quartet of Jackson pitchers for their brace of blows with starter Dan Roper getting tagged with the setback. Other hurlers used by the Jacksonites in an effort to squelch Dough rallies were Clarence Hubbard, Jim Parker and Billingham.

Six-Run Splurge

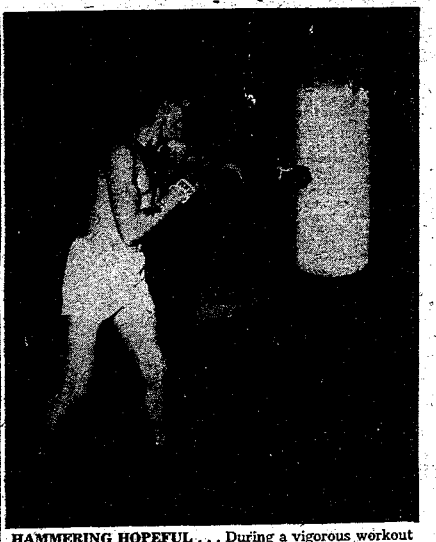
After failing to crash the scoring roster in the first two frames, the Doughs came through in the last of the third with a six-run barrage sparked by a grand slam homerun out of the park by centerfielder Joe Smith. The first margin with three each in the fifth and sixth stanzas, and a pair in the eighth. Fort Jackson scored a lone tally in the sixth, and annexed their final two counters in the top half of the ninth.

Righthander Boland, showing some of the stuff which made him a favorite among Gowdy field performers last year, gave the Jacksonites a new lige in the tourney on Saturday when he set down his ex-teammates on six blows behind errorless ball. The South Carolina clan advanced to the tournament finals by dumping the host Bragg squad on Friday night.

Ike Silcox, ace righthander of the Dough mound staff, started the fray, and was tagged with the loss, his second of the year. He was relieved in the late innings of the tilt by Watts. Boland, who started this season as the ace of the 328th Ordnance battalion in the Fort Benning intramural league, went the route for the Jacksonites.

The Jackson nine leaped to a 3-0 lead in the first when it coupled two one-baggers with a pair of Benning errors to enter the scoring column early in the tiff. Singles by Jim David and Bob Kinsley and a double by Hubert Callis provided the South Carolina aggregation with two more runs in the fourth, and lone counters in the sixth and seventh frames gave the Jacksonites their total of seven before the Doughs could hang up a tally.

"Lefty" Again



The Doughs finally crossed the platter against the Carolinians in the eighth stanza on a single by relief catcher Red Cothran and a long two-base blast by Kinard.

In the decisive game of the tourney, Lehner was responsible for dampening the title hopes of the Jacksonites by limiting them to four hits as his lumber wielding mates worked up an early margin to smash the runners-up 7-4. Although they played errorless ball in the first half of the doubleheader, the Jacksonites' defenses faltered in the finale, and they committeed four misplays.

While the Doughboys were busy nicking pitchers Boland and Donald Hemphill for six of their seven tallies during the first six frames, Lehner was completely silencing the guns of the Jacksonites. The South Carolinians eradicated their goose egg in the seventh with three counters, and added their final run in the ninth.

In addition to getting a one-year extension on their tenure of the Third army's baseball plaque, individual trophies were presented to each member of the regla Benning crew. The individual awards are permanent but the plaque will again be the booty in next year's Third army classic.

The triumph over the Third army area teams made it three for four in tournament play for the Doughs this year. They are holders of the Georgia semi-pro toga and the regional championship for the Georgia-Alabama semi-pro circuit.

Trainees Begin Softball Classic

The fourth and second platoon teams of the Fourth company of the 325th Training battalion (Provisional) jumped into the lead with one triumph each as play in the unit's softball circuit got under way last week.

Moving to the top of the roster on Tuesday the fourth platoon got behind the pitching of Dan Zontek to pound out a 18-6 verdict over the first platoon nine in a twilight tiff. Tagged with the loss was Bob Hallman, who went the route for the first platoon squad.

The second platoon aggregation worked its way into a deadlock with the fourth platoon crew on Thursday evening when Ernest Ralliber hurled a 13-8 triumph over the third platoon team. Tony Franchi chucked the whole game for the losers, and was charged with the setback.

A playoff tilt between the two victorious platoon teams is being mapped to decide the championship for the Fourth company, the first of the battalion's company to start its softball eliminations. Following the title fray the company champs will be idle until other company champions have been decided. The battalion pennant then will be thrown in the ring to go to the winning series between the company champs.

Little doubt can remain that the Fort Benning Doughboys are the best army baseballers in the nation. The local lads finished out their 1948 tournament play last Saturday by dusting off the Third army trophy for another one-year tenure.

The 7-4 decision over Fort Jackson, S. C., in the Third army finale at Fort Bragg, N. C., Saturday made it 17 wins and four setbacks for the Doughs this season. Three of the four lickings, however, were to teams which were champions in their own right, and none of the losses came in regularly scheduled tilts.

The Doughboys also have swept three of the four titles for which they have competed this year: the Georgia state, the Georgia-Alabama regional and the Third army. togas.

The first Benning defeat came after the post squad had marched unbeaten to the semi-pro championship for Georgia when they dropped the middle game of the regional playof series to the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, the Alabama state champs.

However, Coach Herb Bench's Doughmen came back to take the rubber contest of the series, and clinch themselves a spot in the national semi-pro tourney.

After getting past the first round of play in the national meet by roping the Alpine, Tex., Cowboys 3-1, the soldier squad was shaded in two succesive beartbreakers, and was compelled to withdraw from the tournament. The first decision over the Doughs was a 6-4 contest chalked up by the Worland, Wyo., Indians, and the Camden, Ark., Kraftsmen went 12 innings to eke out a 5-4 verdict over the Doughs.

Incidentally, the Doughboys were the only army team, and one of two service crews, vying for honors in the national tourney.

The other service team, the Maxwell field, Ala., Flyers, garnered its spot in the nation-wide classic at Wichita, Kans., by copping the national airforce title, while the Benningites had to play through some well-seasoned semi-pro diamondmen to snatch their berth among the top non-organized ball teams of the United States.

The fourth and final licking given the Doughs was their only setback at the hands of a serviceman squad. The Fort Jackson clan, struggling to stay in the race for the Third army championship, turned in a brilliant brand of ball at Fort Bragg Saturday, and forced the tournament into a decisive second game of the day by registering a 7-1 triumph over the Doughs.

Despite the finals loss to the Jacksonites, the Doughs convinced themselves that they were decidedly the best aggregation in the Third army area by taking two out of three encounters from the South Carolinians during the meet. The 82nd Airborne Assassins of Fort Bragg, who have been a nemesis to Fort Benning athletic groups all year, were the first victims of the Doughboys victory march. The Bragg team was shutout 4-0 by the Doughs. The only one of the four army teams entered in the meet which the Benchmen didn't get a chance to meet was the Fort McPherson nine. However, the outcome of such an encounter would dougtlessly have favored the Doughs since the post lads already have two lop-sided decisions over the Atlantans in regularly slated tiffs this year.

The Doughs diamond activity this year definitely has been a strong selling point for the army's athletic and recreation program. Not only have the post baseballers proved their prowess on the field, but have left a reputation for being good sports wherever they have been.

During their stay at Wichita, the Doughboys were cited by Ray Dumont, president of the National Baseball congress, as one of the finest soldier teams he had ever seen, and their actions both on and off the diamond drew many favorable comments on their sportsman-like attitude.

Just how many of this year's Doughboys will be sporting Benning colors again next year we wouldn't venture to guess, but local fans can wager that, if the tenets of clean, hard-fought baseball which were practiced by this year's crew are instilled into next season's newcomers, Fort Benning will again have a team which will serve as a top-notch advertisement for the army sports program.

Before any local football fans start registering disappointment over the difference in caliber of this year's Doughboy grid edition and the ones produced by Fort Benning during the past three year's some of the factors which will put the post team on a slightly lower strata should be recalled.

Football, of all sports, is a young man's game. And, many of the lads who were blazing trails of glory in army football were youths who had had their education interrupted by stints in the service. Most of these brilliant youngsters now have resumed their studies in colleges or universities throughout the country, and the crop of aspirants now includes older, regular army career soldiers.

Doughs, Loop All-Stars Schedule Clash Tonight

Post Nine Retires For Season After Tilt With Dream Squad

The pick of the crop of players in the current post intramural diamond league will have a chance to see how they stack up against the Third army champion Fort Benning Doughboys when they encounter the area titleholders under the lights of Gowdy field tonight. Game time is 8 p. m.

Tonight's fray is a post-season tilt for the Doughs, and will be their last before hanging up their spikes for the winter. For the intra-mural all-stars, however, the game will be just a breather between regularly-scheduled tilts. The close-out of the current six-team league is slated for Monday night.

To be on hand for the all-stars in tonight's contest will be 20 crack diamondmen selected by the coaches and managers of the teams in the circuit. The crew will be piloted and coached by Merlin F. Dean, manager of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion squad, and Charlie Tolliver of the 25th Infantry regiment's squad will act as assistant coach.

Minor Changes

A few minor changes have been made in Manager Herb Bench's Doughboy lineup, but the squad will be virtually the same one with which Fort Benning captured the Third army toga last week.

With ex-shortstop Paul Bonair separated from the service, Harold (Blondy) Burnett, who has patrolled all of the infield positions with the exception of first base since the Doughs embarked on their 1948 campaign, will be doing the shbrt - field chores. The gap at third base created by switching over Burnett will be filled by Len Carney, hard-hitting utilityman, who performed sensationally with the big stick during the Third army classic.

Completing the Dough infield will be second-sacker Bob Kinard and first - baseman Herb Lauve. The outfield lineup will not feature any revisions: Bill Brooks will be in left, Joe Smith will roam center and Woody Burt will patrol right.

Pitchers Uncertain

Although Tom Gallagher probably will get the nod over Red Cothran for the mask and mitt job, Bench hesitated to name a starting moundsman. He indicated, however, that he will give most of the members of the hill delegation a chance to chuck since it will be the last chance of the season for any of them to toss the pellet.

Manager Dean of the all-stars was equally undecided as to whom he will start on the slab. His pitching roster includes two southpaws and two right-handers, but Dean reserved his nomination for a starter until after the final squad workouts.

Capable hurlers from which the all-star pilot has to draw are portsiders Willie Conerly of the 25th Infantry regiment and string of service with the Truckers and right-handers Walter Scott of the 25th Infantry and Walter Warrick of the 325th Infantry regiment's First battalion aggregation.

Lineup Named

Named as possibilities to receive the offerings of the all-star twirlers are Ulus Hale of the 999th Field Artillery battalion, Nick Nichols of the 25th Infantry and Lonnie Potter of the 3440th Army Service unit. Potter, incidentally, pulled a stint as second-string catcher for the Doughs earlier in the season.

Three candidates are on tap for the initial - sack position. They are Anthony Hardy and Hirron Collier of the 25th Infantrymen and Bob Chandler, who has had an unusually long string of service with the truckers this year.

To round out the infield, second-baseman Jose Martinez of the 756th Heavy Tankers, shortstop Herb O'Brien of the Truckers and third-basemen Gordon Burke of the 25th Infantry and Yancy Holt of the 3440th ASU have been recruited.

Court Tourney Play Advances

Baumgartner Upsets Balliett To Enter Finals With Beatty

Through an upset triumph over second-seeded Dale Balliett, fourth-seeded John Baumgartner entered the finals of the annual fall officers tennis tourney now in progress on the Oficers' club courts. Opposing Baumgartner for the crown will be the pre-tourney favorite, George Beatty.

Baumgartner took an early lead of 5-0 over Balliett in the first set, but the second-seeded racquet wielder came back to tie up at five-all in a spectacular run of games. The effort, however, was too much for Balliett, who eventually succembed to the surprising Baumgartner 7-5 in the opening set.

The second set of the match was nip and tuck all the way, with Baumgartner finally emerging on the top side of a 7-5 tally.

In the women's bracket, Mrs. Betty Johnson, defending champion and first-seeded player, continued a winning streak to enter the finals.

On tap for Sunday will be the finals in men's doubles and men's consolation singles. The matches will start at 3 p.m. on the en-tout-cas courts of the Officers' club.

Bat In Seven Runs

The largest number of runs batted in by a player in two consecutive innings is held jointly by George Sisler and Tony Piet. Sisler knocked in seven runs by tripling with the bases loaded in the fourth inning and hitting a grand-slam homer in the fifth for St. Louis against Washington July 11, 1925.

Tony Pfet, palying for Pittsburgh, tied the mark o July 28, 1922, against the Giants. Piet pushed across his seven runs in the second and third innings, with a pair of homers, the first with two on and the second with the bases loaded.

Nation's Top Racing Drivers Expected For Coming Event

The fastest field of big cars and dare-devil race drivers ever assembled on a Georgia track were sending in new, lightning-fast Columbus speedway Sunday, Sept. 26.

Such names as Deb Snyder, Frankie Luptow, Al (Speed) Funderburk, Eddie Adams and Bobby Grim were expected to be among those entered when the lists are all received within the next few days. At least 15, and probably more, big, powerful speedsters are expected for this first classic of its kind on the new Columbus oval.

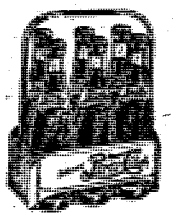
Snyder and Luptow are easily the class of the dirt track drivers of the nation today. Snyder, dapper little mechanical engineer from Kent, O., at present is leading the nation's speedway daredevils on points for the International Motor Contest association championship. Snyder has been knocking off one record after another in his big Offenhauser-powered race car. He has been beaten but four times this season, and Luptow was the victor in three of those races.

Luptow, from Detroit, who drives either an Offenhauser or a Hal, not only has been the scourge of the International Motor Contest association this year, but also has been a consistent winner in races against drivers not affiliated with IMCA. He recently set a record of 22.86 seconds for one turn around the fast Heidelberg raceway at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Funderburk and Adams, both of Tampa, Fla., are the South's outstanding candidates for national honors. Funderburk won the 1946 mid-south and Florida titles in 1946, and might have repeated last year but for an accident that kept him sidelined for several weeks.

Adams is one of the newer stars of the dirt speedways, and has been a winner all summer throughout the northwest, midwest, East and South. He is a hard-riding, daredevil type driver who makes it tough for any rider of the roaring road.

There will be seven events on the sprint-type program at the new track, including three heat races, a special match race, a consolation race and the feature event.



Two-Time Winner

The General Electric baseball team of Fort Wayne, Ind., winner of the National Semi-Pro tournament in Wichita, Kans., this year, became the second team in the tourney's 14-year history to win the title two years in a row. The Indiana squad shares this distinction with the Enid, Okla., Champlins, who took the championships in 1940 and 1941.

Players Return Gift

In the irony department — Before leaving for the East to scout the army-navy game in 1946, Coach Frank Wickhorst presented all of his University of California football players with automatic pencils as a Christmas present. During his absence the team gave Coach Wickhorst a present in return. Probably using his pencils, the boys voted to hire a new coach for 1947.

Benning Backstop Still Going Strong

BY AL WISE

"How old is Satchel Paige?" That's the query that has been high on the list of sports transcripts ever since the colorful pitcher was signed by the Cleveland Indians.

Satchel's mother, who lives in Birmingham, Ala., says he is 44 years old but according to Pvt. Ulus Hale of Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion Satch must be between 48 and 50 years old.

Hale, whose rise in baseball began here with Fort Benning's 24th Infantry in 1926, remembers a lanky individual by the name of Satchel Paige, who was then playing with the Birmingham Black Barons. During those years, top Negro major league teams trained at Fort Benning with the 24th diamondeers.

"Paige was a matured man when I first met and played against him," Hale said. "He certainly was at least five or six years older than myself then."

When asked about his own age, Hale smiled, "Oh, well, I expect to play a few years longer.

"After seeing Paige in 1927 and 1928 I don't see him anymore." Hale added, "until 1941 when the Kansas City Monarchs came here for a series with the 24th. Paige, however, didn't play in that series."

According to the 999th backstop, Satchel's most effective pitch was a burning submarine ball, and his control then wasn't anything to write home about. However, Hale went on to say Paige even then had the knack of upsetting the opposition.

"During the warm-up periods in the bull pen, Satch would purposely miss his catcher and throw speedballs at the board fence, breaking up plenty of timber as well as making plenty of noise. This feat had a remarkable effect against the opposing batters," continued Hale.

Hale himself is pushing towards Paige's record of continuous years in baseball. His name has become legend with fans along the local sports front. His throwing arm is still one of the most potent for base stealers to contend with. He gets around smartly and his stick work is usually there in a pinch.

The fact that it was a service team made it impossible for the 24th Infantry Eagles to engage in organized league baseball. The 24th Eagles, however, were known far and wide as one of the outstanding service teams in the country. Their opposition was always the best obtainable, and their team spirit was indomitable.

Artillerymen Map Diamond Schedule

Plans for finishing out the baseball season for the 999th Field artillery battalion with contests between the triple nine and some outstanding semi-pro crews were formulated at a squad meeting last Friday afternoon.

Ramrodding the close - out program are 1st Lt. John H. Maddox, unit athletic and recreation officer, and David R Reed, who recently took over the helm for the artillerymen after being associated with the team either actively or in an advisory capacity throughout the 1948 season.

Contests are being secured with outstanding semi-pro nines of the Georgia, Florida and Alabama circuits. Many of the games now being scheduled will be played on Bullet field in the Sand Hill area.

Auspicious Start

Wally Berger, who broke in with Boston Braves of the National league in 1930, hit 38 homers in his first big-league season.

BENNING'S 'OLD TIMER' . . . A legend in local sports circles, Ulus Hale, 999th Field Artillery battalion backstop, is still performing his chores behind the plate after these many years. Hale, who played against Satchel Paige, the great Negro hurler now with the Cleveland Indians, still expects to play a few years longer.

A point system will be used to determine the winning team and the champion in each weight. The winner of each bout will receive two points, while one point will be awarded for participation. The individual making the largest number of points will win the Infantry Center championship in his class, while the team winning the most points will be crowned Infantry Center champion.

The Infantry Center championship boxing plaque will be awarded the team champion and will be retained by the team for one year. The team that wins the trophy three times will retain it permanently.

Double Title Eyed By Infantry Crew

BY BOB PHILLIPS

In addition to pounding out a one-sided 12-5 win over the Red Devils at Cuthbert, Ga., last Sunday, the high-flying 25th Infantry regiment baseballers continued their strong bid for championship honors in the current post league by winning two games in as many trips to Gowdy field last week.

The hard-hitting infantry nine has now won six out of its last eight tilts, and the double-killing in league competition enabled the squad to come within striking distance of copping their second pennant this season.

With competition in the present circuit scheduled to end next Monday, the Sand Hill crew has hopes of winning its last three games and running up the post loop flag.

The first championship of the year for the Sand Hillers was clinched last Monday night when they romped over the 999th Field Artillery battalion 8-4 to notch the title for the recent 325th Infantry regiment circuit.

In Monday night's fray, the artillerymen took a one-run lead in the third when Echols crossed the plate. The lead, however, was short-lived as the surging 25th aggregation came bounding back to score four times in their half of the fourth.

With one out in the sixth frame a rally which netted the artillery clan two tallies was silenced when Walt Scott struck out Bill Brown and scooped up an easy roller to the mound to toss Al Ellis out at first.

Scott and Lefty Conerly did the flinging for the infantrymen while Ellis and John McClinic toed the mound for the 999th.

The artillerymen outhit their conquerors 5-2.

On Wednesday night, the Sand Hill lads strengthened their bid for post laurels at Gowdy field by unleashing a 14-hit attack on three hurlers of the Second battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment to win by the widely separated score of 18-3.

After the third stanza when Hammond scored the losers' third and last run, it was the 25th all they way as the Sand Hillers hammered out 12 of their 14 hits and turned in a spectacular performance on the base paths. Frequent miscues by the losers also helped matters.

In the sixth frame, eleven 25th batters went to the plate, and the squad scored eight times on as many hits. The big blows of the inning were a triple by diminutive third sacker Willie Wise and doubles by Leon Coleman and Nick Nichols.

Nichols distinguished himself as the game's top swatsman by banging out a triple, a double and a single in five trips to the plate. Other highlights of the game included a three-bagger to right by relief hurler Scott, and brilliant defensive playing by Zack Lemelle and Major Carmichael.

Although tilted in the eighth canto in favor of Scott, Murray Whiting pitched six-hit ball to take credit for the win. In a fruitless effort to quiet the big bats of the 25th, the losers sent Rodgers, Robinson and Vargo to the mound.

In a Sunday game the Red Devils of Cuthbert got off to a two-run lead in the second inning, but faltered before a merciless attack by the slugging soldier outfit in the fading innings of play, and went down to a 12-5 defeat, their worst of the season.

The visitors tied the count in the fourth when Hirron Collier doubled to score Anthony Hardy, and Nichols singled to send Collier across the plattier.

With the Red Devils leading 4-3 in the sixth, aging Amos (Cuz) Snowden received Larry Miles on the mound, and went on to register his fourth win of the season against one setback. The gangling right-hander pitched hitless ball the rest of the way.

The infantrymen ran wild in the eighth, scoring seven runs on four hits. Every batter on the roster paraded to the plate with Collier and Nichols coming up twice in the big stanza.

Collier starred at bat for the Benning crew by getting four safeties in five appearances. He was followed by Wise and Gene Thomas with two for four and two for five, respectively.

Army Offering Young Doctors Graduate Work

Young doctors were given another chance last week to take advantage of the army's graduate training program under which they may complete their internships and residencies in civilian hospitals with full first lieutenants pay and allowances.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, surgeon general of the army, announced that the closing date for applications from medical graduates had been extended to Nov. 1.

The closing date had been July 1, but wide interest in the program brought so many inquiries from young doctors that all of them could not be considered in time. Under the program, selected medical graduates may serve their internships and residencies in civilian hospitals of their own choice — the interns as first lieutenants in the Medical corps reserve and residents as first lieutenants or captains in the regular army Medical corps.

At the end of their year's training, interns must apply for regular army commissions, and may also apply for regular army training. Residents who meet hospital requirements may continue their residency training toward specialty qualification. Each is required to serve a year of active duty for each year of training at army expense.

The old concept of "general service" and "limited service" is out as far as th earmy is concerned, according to a dispatch in Army Times.

Instead of classifying soldiers in this manner, as has been done until now, the army will determine which defects in the incoming soldiers make them acceptable or unacceptable for service. If there are defects of the type that formerly classified a man generally as "limited service," the man can still be given a job, even in a combat unit, where that defect will make no difference.

The new regulation stresses that a man's assets are to be weighed against his defects. There will be a close relation between the medical officer and the classification officer so that intelligence, courage, motivation, special talents, experience and the like can be balanced against physical shortcomings.

In practice, the new method will work like:

An applicant for enlistment or an inductee examined by medical officers discloses no defects likely to be aggravated by military service or likely to make him a pensioner. At the same time he is hardly a good physical speciman, his PUHLES profile disclosing more than one "3", or minimum acceptable score.

The man is definitely not "general service," but his classification interview develops that in civilian life he helped his father run a small restaurant and had some experience as a short-order cook. The army needs cooks, the man's defects don't disqualify him as a cook, and he is physically able to perform the duties of a cook or a mess steward. So the man gets in the army because of his skills and abilities.

The new setup, which is generally something akin to enlisting men almost by MOS, has other advantages. For one, it makes available a large manpower pool that was passed over previously because so many men were rejected as physically unfit with little or no consideration given to special skills or aptitudes. Second, it may cause less shifting about in case it is necessary to take men physically desirable for combat from service units, especially from jobs where the problem of training replacements may be difficult. Under the new porfram, the less fit men will be assigned and trained for the jobs and units that require less rigorous men.

YOUNG GLOVES HOPEFULS INITIATE PRACTICE GRIND

Eighteen young leather pushers of the 325th Training battalion (Provisional) started going through their paces last weekend, and unit ring officials plan to state some intra-organization bouts soon.

Although the workouts are being staged in the battalion gymnasium, the scheduled matches will be contested in an outdoor ring. All of the scraps will be fought under lights which are being strung up in the amphitheater in the Harmony Church area.

It is expected that the schedule for the bouts will be announced within the next week.

Coaching the pugilistic hopefuls in their workouts are two veterans of the boxing wars, John Stulsky and James Revis. Both Stulsky and Rivis have semi-pro experience and the former has been prominent in Fort Benning gloves circles in the past.

Citing the prospects for some thrill-packed contests as excellent, the two trainers pointed out that talent in the lighter weight divisions is the most promising. At present, eight of the crop are within the range of flyweight and bantamweight, while no welterweight or featherweight hopefuls have reported. Four light-eights and an equal number of light heavies and heavy weights have joined the ranks of aspirants and two of the scrappers fall within the limits of the middle-weight bracket.

After the lads have chalked up a bit experience in the intra-organization fights, Coaches Stulsky and Revis plan to bring a few of their more talented gloves clingers to the Main post for some bouts with other Fort Benning boxers.

Bullet Gridiron Officials Meet With Coaches

Gridiron mentor Thomas L. Delton of the post Bullets and his two assistants, Jesse Owens and Stacey Hoffman, attended a meeting of the Southeastern Inter-collegiate Athletic conference held in Birmingham, Ala., last Saturday.

The meeting, which was held in the Smithfield courts, generally emphasized the athletic policies of the conference which concerned its members. However, much time was given over to the discussion of such football fundamentals as line and backfield play, passing, running and blocking. The conference schedule for the coming season also was discussed.

Schools which are members of the conference are Tuskegee, Morris Brown, Clark, Alabama Agriculture and Mechanical college, Morehouse, Benedict, Xavier, Fisk and Florida A. & M. college. The 25th Infantry regiment's athletic squads of Fort Benning have been honorary members of the collegiate conference since 1946.

THE BAYONET

Vol. 8—NO. 52 | Published by The Ledger-Enquirer Co. For America's Most Complete Post | THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1948 | 20 PAGES

THEN AND NOW . . . Great strides have been made since the Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur, successfully flew their "flying machine," top, in 1903 ot Kitty Hawk, N. C. The modern version, bottom, the Lockheed P-80B "Shooting Star," jet propelled fighter plane which zooms through space at speeds of 500-600 miles per hour, will take part in Lawson airforce base's celebration of "Airforce Day" Saturday.

Army Tells Plans For Career Tests

BAYONET OBSERVES 6TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

Six years isn't very old for a newspaper. That is, for an ordinary newspaper.

But The Bayonet isn't an ordinary newspaper. As a publication for a military post it's extraordinary in at least one respect: it's probably the only army newspaper that hasn't dwindled to a miniscule fragment of its wartime size. As other army publications have shrunk from once thick to puny four page tabloids, The Bayonet is just as big as it was when it first came out on Sept. 17, 1942. True, its page size has changed, but it's got more pages. Otherwise, it hasn't changed at all.

Since its first issue in 1942 it's been doing the same thing, telling the readers just what's going on here.

Going through the files of a newspaper can be a fascinating task. During the war years The Bayonet was a fascinating newspaper. In reading issue after issue it was almost possible to see the growth of America's armed strength spreading across the pages as thousands of officers graduated from OCS, as division after division and regiment after regiment were stationed at Benning, as the Infantry School grew and expanded, as airborne training became awe-inspiring in its magnitude.

Then, after a couple of years the tenor of the paper changed. Soon the "second johns" who left here in 1943 started coming back as majors and lieutenant colonels to serve on the faculties of the schools here.

Then, suddenly, the war changed and army life became routine. That's when it must have been tough work on The Bayonet. For then began what is sometimes a dreary routine of recording the visits of this and that "important" person, of the rounds of teas and cocktails parties, of new classes, of problems and maneuvers.

Yet, in looking over the issues of the past 18 months or so, a new fascination, of an entirely different type is born. This time the lessons of war are not being laid aside to gather dust. This is the story The Bayonet is telling today.

Mess-Personnel To Take Exams During November

Application forms for the first army-wide examinations for promotion of enlisted men in the food service career field will be made available soon to qualified Fort Benning personnel, it was announced today by Lt. Col. Lyle J. Fitzpatrick, food service supervisor.

Fort Benning cooks, bakers, meat cutters, mess stewards and other qualified personnel will compete in the examinations to be held here from Nov. 16 to 19. Applicants who acieve a promotion score in the examinations will be promoted to the next higher grade.

The announcement marks the inauguration of varied career guidance examinations, opening up a new era of promotions through competitive tests.

As a result of the forthcoming examinations, it will be possible for some food service personnel to receive double promotions, one as a result of the one-time adjustments and the other the result of the competitive examination. The adjustment promotions are designed to move men performing food service jobs to the grades appropriate to their work.

The examinations, which are of the multiple choice question type, asks a question and provides four answers from which the individual must select the right answer. There are no essay questions.

After the tests are scored, the

Open House Is Set For Airforce Day

A full-scale air show including a mass paratroop drop will be staged at Lawson air force base, Saturday, Sept. 18, as part of the annual "Airforce Day" open house which will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p. m.

Ceremonies will begin with a 30-minute organ recital at the base chapel, where Chaplain (Capt.) Victor Walker and other base officials will greet the visitors.

The aerial demonstration is scheduled to get under way on the flight line at approximately 1:30 p. m. with an exhibition by a group of instructors from the Airborne section, who will display their speed and skill in loading Boxcar" using heavy equipment and unloading a C-82 "Flying such as trucks, jeeps and 105 and 75 mm howitizers.

Following the airborne-ground demonstration approximately 50 veteran paratroopers will take to the skies in C-82s for a mass jump directly in front of the spectator's stands.

A running commentary over the public address system will keep the onlookers in close touch with each event.

The air show will continue with a flight formation of C-82s and C-47s. The 325th Troop Carrier squadron (reserve), of Columbus will participate in the air show using six AT-6 and six T-11 aircraft. After taking-off, the formation will circle the city and return to the field and land.

F-80 "Shooting Stars" and other highpowered Tactical Air command aircraft are expected to arrive at Lawson to participate in the air show.

A double glider tow by a C-82 will close the aerial phase of the show. The two motorless planes will be released over the exhibition area, and after quietly circling overhead will land in front of the viewing stands.

After the last aircraft is down, the ground demonstration will be taken over by the base fire department, whose personnel will ignite an obsolete aircraft hulk and then battle the flames to rescue the pilot and extinguish the fire.

ARTILLERY UNIT GETS RATING OF EXCELLENT

Recently awarded an "excellent" rating by the Third army inspector general's office, the 999th Field Artillery battalion has ample motive to feel justifiable pride in its personnel section which daily handles multitudinous chores with efficiency and dispatch.

Staffed by a group of combat veterans, the section is headed by CWO Milton E. Dodson, personnel officer. The myriad of details include preparing the monthly payrolls, recruiting and separating from the service and preparing various types of allotments for its 527 enlisted men and officers.

The artillery unit also has a personal affairs section, which handles the problems confronting the organization's personnel, down to the most minute detail.

It is often said that the work

Fall Quarter Opens Oct. 4

The fall term at the Army Education Center here will commence Oct. 4 and end Dec. 16, it was announced this week by Capt. Edward F. Grady, Infantry Center troop information and education officer. Closing date for the current summer term is Sept. 20.

It is expected that the curriculum for the next term will be ready by next week, Captain Grady stated.

A total of 50 Fort Benning soldiers, six officers and 44 enlisted men, graduated from the one-week course in troop information and education held recently at the I and E center. This school was operated to help prepare the students to function as unit discussion leaders, I and E non-coms and officers, Captain Grady said.

He added that while completion of the course did not certify that they were fully qualified I and E personnel, the work there plus the "on-the-job training" they could be considered getting now would help fill some of the gaps on the post, particularly in those units that did not have trained information and educational personnel.

82ND CHIEF CONFERS WITH POST OFFICIALS

Returning to Fort Benning for the first time since he went through the paces of airborne training last March, Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers, commanding general of the 82nd Airborne division, conferred with Infantry Center officials regarding future influx of airborne recruits during a visit to the Infantry Center last week.

Met by an honor guard upon his arrival Thursday afternoon, the airborne chief was tendered a 13-gun salute fired by the 319th Field Artillery battalion. Also included in the reception group were the Second battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment and the 72nd Army band.

General Byers along with Col. Justice Chambers, member of the Senate armed services committee, was honored at an official dinner given at the Officers' club that evening.

In his whirlwind tour he visited the 325th Infantry Regiment combat team headquarters, Company I of the 504th Airborne regiment, and Company C of the 307th Combat Engineers battalion. Company of the 307th Combat Engineer battalion. He spoke with the commanding officers of those outfits.

Former chief of staff of the Eighth army in Japan, General Byers returned to the U. S. in January of this year after 38 months overseas. He was ordered back to take command of the 82nd, replacing the youthful Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, who has become chief of staff of the Fifth army.

One of the outstanding military leaders of World War II, General Byers commanded the 32nd division in the Buna campaign, which played a major part in the New Guinea jungle struggle. He was wounded severely in the initial assault of this campaign, and was evacuated. He later took over chief of staff duties with the Eighth army in the Pacific.

What Are The Army's Plans?

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the fifth in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1--What kind of life will the selectee lead?

He will lead a normal, wholesome, busy and active life, though more carefully planned and supervised than he ever imagined, with a view to making him a trained and efficient soldier and a better citizen.

2--Will he be stationed near home?

In general, personnel being inducted from civil life will be ordered to the training division nearest his home. Personnel will be afforded the minimum amount of travel consistent with the capacity of the training division to process and-or train personnel becoming available within adjacent states. However, upon completion of basic training in either the training division or in units an enlisted man inducted under selective service will become available for army-wide assignment, and will be assigned to the army area where the greatest need for his services exists.

3--Will he have to serve overseas?

Personnel inducted under selective service will be available for world-wide assignment. This does not, of course, apply to 18-year-old volunteers.

4--How often can he come home?

He will be authorized the same leave as officers and enlisted men of the regular army—30 days a year. He probably will have little opportunity during his basic training to go home, but during the remainder of the year, within training requirements, furloughs up to 30 days each year are authorized.

This will depend to a large extent upon local conditions. The policy is that whenever possible a man will be allowed to leave the post during his off-duty time.

6--What facilities will be available to him in civilian communities near the post?

The regular local community recreational facilities usually will be available to him. The off-post service clubs, as maintained and financed by the United Service organizations during World War II and in the immediate post-war period, were closed with the phasing out of the USO program. In some instances these clubs have been taken over by civilian organizations, such as the Young Men's Christian association, National Catholic Community service and the National Jewish Welfare board, or by other civilian agencies. When selective service becomes operative, it is anticipated that, money permitting, other such centers to provide a "home away from home" for the soldier will be opend by civilian agencies, particularly in the larger cities. This whole matter of community recreation and welfare for the armed forces is under study at present by a newly organized civilian joint army and navy committee on welfare and recreation headed by Dr. Lindsley Kimball, president of the former USO.

7--How will he be kept out of trouble when he is away from the post?

Through proper indoctrination to encourage the inductee in the appreciation of his duties and responsibilities as a soldier and citizen. The army does not intend to restrain to the post any inductee in anticipation of off-post conduct nor to chaperone his off-post activities.

8--What will be the effect on him after being thrown together with all classes of people, especially the hard-bitten old army man?

A lot will depend on the individual himself and whom he chooses for associates. The people with whom he will be thrown will have been chosen under the same standards of intelligence and physical fitness as himself. There will not be of the regular army enlistee is 22 years. There will not be many hard-bitten army men among them, if we know what that means.

Post Dialogue

"What do you think Fort Benning needs most to become an even better post for enlisted men." The Bayonet's enquiring reporter asked eight men this week.

He was in for a surprise, for the enquiring reporter received a lot of head-shaking and replies of, "That's a tough question" or "You got me" or "Come to think of it, nothing that I can see." Of those who answered, some said and some implied, of course, that the housing situation for married enlisted men is No. 1 on the priority list of what's needed here.

Pvt. Jesse D. Winningham Airborne battalion's, Company B "I think one thing they need is more housing on the post for married enlisted men. They could use more post exchanges especially one more down in the airborne training area, and it should have a greater selection of merchandise. Otherwise, I can't find anything wrong with the...

Winningham Hatheway

Maj. Maurice Hatheway, Jr. Automotive section, the Infantry School: "I honestly think the biggest advance we'll make is when we get the 80 units built and open up Baker Village to enlisted men regardless of their incomes. There are plenty of facilities for single enlisted men, but the problem is taking care of the married enlisted men and their families."

Pfc. Norman B. Bruner, Company B, 756th Tank battalion: "I think they need more entertainment in the Sand hill area. We don't have a service club out at Sand Hill, and if we want club facilities we have to come to the main post or go to town. Our only entertainment out there is the movies. I also think there ought to be more "live shows" and dances."

Bruner Hall

First Lt. William F. Hall, Sand hill dental clinic: "One thing I think would help, as far as the men in the Sand hill area are concerned, is more transportation between Sand hill and the main post and Sand hill and town. They could very well use a cafeteria at Sand Hill where complete meals could be served and also a snack shop open till 2 a.m. like the one on the main post."

Cpl. Milton T. Spence, Military Police detachment, Section I: "For married personnel living on post I think there should be a good, large playground with plenty of slides, seesaws, etc., for the children. This would be a fine place for the mothers when they go to the PX or commissary to leave their children. Also, they wouldn't have to worry about them so much. There should also be a small playroom at the main PX and Commissary with someone to watch the kids while the parents shop. They should also have a better gymnasium with better equipment and a snack bar in the gym."

Platz Wins Promotion

Pfc. Robert M. Platz, Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been promoted to the grade of corporal, officials said today.

Spence Elkins

Sgt. Archie L. Elkins, Second company, 325th Infantry Regimental Training battalion (provisional) "I think they need more housing for married men and small inexpensive apartments to fit the soldier's income. There should be more and bigger service clubs and more dances for the younger men coming to the post."

Sgt. 1st cl. Cecil L. Seaman, Company A, Infantry School detachment: "It seems to me they ought to spend more money to convert some of these buildings into more comfortable quarters for the married enlisted men. A lot of these unused buildings could be be converted for the benefit of the married enlisted men who have to live in nearby towns and pay big rents. I also think there ought to be a check, and possible adjustment, on some of the prices in the post exchange, because I have an idea some of the items most commonly used are priced too high. The best way to do this would be to compare the prices here and in town. My wife says that some of the PX prices are outrageous."

Seaman Martins

M-Sgt. Antonio P. Martins, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section II, 196th Army band: "For one thing, we need more quarters for the married men. As a band leader, I also say we need more instruments for the musicians. What we do have is not sufficient and not in good shape. Entertainment could be improved and increased and there should be more activities at the service clubs, such as more dances and picnics."

To Build Pillboxes

As though the current spell isn't enough to contend with, men of the 307th Airborne Engineer battalion's Company C who have been building pill boxes on the reservation have also had to contend with rattlesnakes.

Three of the serpents, all more than five feet long and with 10 rattles each, have been killed on the construction site in the past two weeks.

The work of reconstructing and repairing the reinforced steel pillboxes at the problem 366 site, "Battalion in the Attack of a Fortified Position," began Aug. 16, and the platoon of engineers, directed by 1st. Lt. Edward A. Cox and Sgt. 1st cl. Robert E. McDaniel, has been living under canvas in the field since that time. A unique problem of their job was the transporting from the Main post of all the materials needed. This necessitated moving 90 tons of gravel, 45 tons of sand, 18 tons of cement, 3000 board feet of lumber and all miscellaneous materials. Water, being unavailable at the site, also had to be trucked in.

Leaves Fort Benning

Sgt. 1st cl. L. T. Stinnett has left Fort Benning for Fort Devens, Mass., where he will join the Seventh Regimental combat team. Sergeant Stinnett has been on special duty with the Weapons section for the past month.

Colonel Scudder Leaves Benning

Lt. Col. Charles E. Woodruff, formerly Infantry Center billeting officer, has assumed command of the regiment.

Named commander of the Student Training regiment in October, 1946, then known as the Third Student Training regiment, Colonel Scudder headed the unit during some of the most important phases in the history of the organization.

During his command, the unit annexed the First Student Training regiment and the Airborne battalion, after the Officer Candidate School was transferred from Fort Benning to Fort Riley, Kan., the regiment moved from Harmony church to the main post.

A combat veteran of both world wars, Colonel Scudder was serving in the Philippines at the outbreak of World War II. He commanded the Cebu forces consisting of the 82nd, 83rd, and 84th Infantry, the Bohol forces, and other troops of the Philippine army. The colonel's Cebu force carried on organized guerilla warfare after it was forced by superior numbers of Japanese troops to withdraw from the beaches.

On orders from Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, Colonel Scudder surrendered his Cebu forces on May 17, 9:4w esah IHC1, Jeipd oernsr 17, 1942. He was held prisoner until 1945.

For his distinguished service on Cebu, Colonel Scudder received the Silver Star medal. He also received the Silver Star in World War I where he served in France with the 34th Infantry of the Seventh division.

grades, together with the man's efficiency rating and length of service, will be given scoring weights prescribed by the army which will vary with each grade to be filled. The weight factors will be added to form a complete score.

Eligible to take the examinations are all military personnel whose primary MOS is one of the nine MOS's in the food service career field, who have the required total service, and who have their commander's approval to take the test. Non-competitive tests for "adjustment" promotions to grades three or two will be held simultaneously.

Some of the requirements for promotion include:

All individuals must be in a "promotable status;" all individuals must have a separate application for each test, with a maximum of three applications; applications must be approved by unit commander, and if disapproved, must be approved by next higher commander; applications also must be filed for adjustment promotions, but do not count in the total; men must stand test and attain a score, which when combined with efficiency and service credits shows a score above "passing" or above "cut-off" as the case may be.

The Bayonet is published by the Ledger-Enquirer Company as a civilian enterprise (in compliance with Par. 5, W. D. Circular 466, dated 9 Dec. 1944) in the interest of the officer and enlisted personnel of Fort Benning and distributed to all units that make up Greater Fort Benning.

Another Milestone

The Bayonet passes another milestone today. We celebrate the sixth anniversary of continuous publication.

During the past six years, The Bayonet has made an honest effort to provide Fort Benning troops with a weekly newspaper which presents the news of the week in clear, brief form.

As is the case with all publications, however--and we might say also as is the case with all people, without exception--we have not been perfect. We have made mistakes, some grave, some minor. But, we have intended no offense to any person or any organization, and we would like to take this opportunity to apologize for those errors. We hope our readers will remember the adage, "to err is human, to forgive divine."

Most readers have no idea how much goes into each week's edition. It's not just a simple matter of processing news stories submitted by units at Fort Benning. Far from it; we wish it were that easy. Ninety-nine percent of the stories submitted by units are rewritten to comply with Bayonet style. More than seventy-five percent of the stories appearing in print, however are originated by members of The Bayonet staff.

During our more than fourteen months as editor, we have heard complaints, but we have also heard some praise. Despite the complaints we still believe that we have the best army newspaper in existence today. We have the only truly family-type newspaper, one which is read as much by the wives of Fort Benning troops as by the men themselves. We have the largest sports section, devoted to accomplishments of Fort Benning athletes, of any camp paper. We use as many if not more, pictures than any camp newspaper.

All this sounds like back-patting, and we suppose it is. However, we are somewhat pround of the record established by The Bayonet. Not once in its entire six years of publication has an issue been postponed. On several occasions, the publication day was on Friday rather than on Thursday, but the fact remains that it was published. We believe that is somewhat of a record.

We have attempted to improve the makeup of the paper with each edition. Whether we have succeeded or not, we do not know. Sometimes, we think it looks good, other times we are dissatisfied. We have tried to give our readers the news they want. There again, we do not know if we have succeeded, mainly because some units hide their feature stories behind a cloak of secrecy, and no matter how hard we try to ferret out information, we are stymied.

As we celebrate the sixth anniversary of Fort Benning's leading newspaper, we want to say to our readers that we will continue to make improvements. We will continue to endeavor to be "the eyes and ears of Fort Benning."

Strictly Editorializing

To say we were surprised last Saturday morning when we saw the recruit parade at Stilwell field is a mild understatement. Amazed almost beyond belief would more adequately explain how we felt. Although Capt. Clinton L. Hopkins, public information officer, both told us that we would be amazed at the amount of progress made by the recruits, we didn't expect them to be so nearly perfect.

A large crowd was present at 11 a. m. when the 72nd Army band gave the signal for the parade to begin. There was, of course, more than a little interest being shown by Fort Benning troops in the parade: they wanted to see if those recruits were as good soldiers as they had heard

We noticed that they looked "sharp" when they walked through the archway of the first cuartel and out on to Stilwell field, but the big surprise was yet to come. When they passed in review, we didn't see a single man out of step, nor did we see any ranks too uneven to look good. It was almost a thrill to us to see those soldiers of only a few weeks put on a parade which would be a joy to any commanding officer.

We certainly think that a great deal of credit is due the non-commissioned officers charged with the responsibility of training the recruits. They did themselves proud. They have set an example for the older troops at Fort Benning.

Chaplain's Corner..

AN EAGLE IS NOT A CHICKEN

By Chaplain Racy L. Akins

Several years ago two hunters, searching for big game on a mountain top,came upon a great eagle's nest. The The parent eagle was absent, but in the nest was her young—a beautiful bird which the hunters proudly captured. Returning to their home in the valley, they cropped the young eagle's wings to prevent its flying, and put it in the chicken yard. There it was left to find company among the chickens. But very sadly was the company welcomed.

"I'm no chicken," said the eagle. "My home is not here; it's away up yonder on the mountain top. I belong there, not down here among you."

But his poor wings couldn't lift him from the ground. Sad days passed, sorrowful days, as the drooping eagle endured his miserable lot. But then,as time went on, he noticed something—his wing feathers were growing! Slowly —but surely—they grew. Came the morning when the eagle said, "I can fly today. And I'm going home!"

He tested his wings—Sure enough, they could bear him up! "Goodbye, chickens!" he called as he soared over the barn, across the meadow, above the hills, up to the lofy peaks, home. Never, never could a mountain eagle be satisfied down among chickens."

We are like that. God has so made us that nothing in this world can really satisfy our longing heart. We may try everything earth has to offer—the world, the flesh and the devil—but they must fail. Only when we're at peace with the God who made our soul are we at rest. Then are our inmost cravings fulfilled; then we have security and happiness. The soul cries, "Give me God, not sin!" A Cadillac was not made for a trash hauler; a fur for a dish-cloth; a mahogany chair for firewood; neither was the soul made to be marred and scarred by sin.

But some say, "I can't believe in God. I believe in a Creator, but to believe in a personal God who cares for me, I can't do it." How our heart pities these souls! That they might find Him who is Real, Who forgives sin! Dr. B. H. Carroll was once an infidel. He later wrote:

"I have witnessed a drought in Texas. The earth was iron and the heavens brass. Dust clouded the thoroughfares and choked the travelers. Watercourses ran dry; grass scorched and crackled; corn leaves twisted and wilted; stock died around the last water holes; the ground cracked in fissures; and the songs of birds died out in parched throats. Men despaired. The whole earth prayed: 'Rain, rain, rain! O Heaven, send rain! Suddenly a cloud rises above the horizon and floats into vision like an angel of hope. It spreads a cool shade over the burning and glowing earth.

GRANDFATER VS PERU

Travelogue, guide book, fiction, character study—"Grandfather vs. Peru", might be any of them. Or all of them. Frankly, we don't know just exactly what it is. For that matter, neither does Walter Beebe Wilder, who wrote, and ostensibly lived, the story. He had no intention, he says, of writing a guidebook of Peru. Yet he manages to give us all the number of statistics—and quite a number of statistics now quite so vital But a lot more interesting—about our South American neighbor. And he does it in a way that is absolutely painless and thoroughly enjoyable. He also introduces us to Grandfather Beebe a character—and we do mean "character"—who may remind you little of Clarence Day's "father" or possibly Ruth McKenny's "grandfather," but who has a personality all his own.

Young Wolder, who had an assignment from Collier's to take pictures in Peru, was not particularly enthusiastic about taking Grandfather along. The Andes were high and breathing was difficult; parts of the country were quite rough; there would be danger; it wouldn't be an easy trip, even for a young man. That was all Grandfather needed. A young man, indeed. His opinion of the younger generation was something less than mountain high. So grandfather, loaded down with camping equipment, pressure cookers and a tub of horseradish, joined the party, and the adventures began.

The travelers spent four months in Peru, and if there was ever a dull moment, it was certainly not the fault of Grandfather. He attracted adventure—and adventurers, including Carlos Murphy, a thoroughly charming and more than slightly unscrupulous gentleman, who was constantly involved in weird and semi-honest business deals in pursuit of the 'quick buck.' From the moment he first appeared on board ship with Lili, an embarazada (pregnant) giraffe, and quick-talked grandfather into buying her unborn offspring, Carlos didn't miss a chance at that "quick buck." His motto was "no profit too small — or too large" — especially not too large. His deals involved everything from ball point pens to Bolivian currency and Peruvian sub-divisions. And Grandfather was right along with him, or at least not too far behind.

Most of the action which takes place all over Peru—Lima, Puno, Cuzco, Arequipa, all the places you've ever heard about—revolves around Lili, the giraffe, and grandfather's efforts to protect his investment. Lili is a most elusive animal, and has no compunction at all about disappearing some 15,000 feet up in the Andes mountains. But Grandfather proves himself more than a match for Lili and almost a match for Carlos.

BY CHARLES P. PARKER,

We are writing today regarding a subject about which we have a number of letters and wires — family allowances. These benefits given to families of servicemen are extremely helpful. In fact, they "keep the wolf away from the door." Quite frequently, however, the family allowances for both wife and children and father and mother do not clear as quickly as they should. The causes for families not receiving the checks are varied.

Frequently we have a situation arise as follows:

The soldier was in the army during the war. He was discharged and was out as a civilian for a year or a year and a half, then reenlisted. After his reenlistment his wife receives a family allowance check in about two weeks. She thinks then that she will continue to draw her check, but for some reason the following month no check arrives. If the serviceman had an allowance for his wife during his first enlistment, it is sometimes not necessary to send in a copy of the marriage certificate and birth certificates for children provided all of these documents were sent in during his first enlistment.

We are finding, however, a great deal of trouble along this line. It seems that if the soldier was out of the army for more than two or three months between enlistments, the documentary evidence is not located readily. The family allowance is therefore held up. It is not too much trouble to get another copy of the marriage and birth certificates. In fact, not nearly as much trouble as the wife and children going without an allotment for a month or two. We are asking men who reenlisted about two months ago, or approximately that time, to check this matter closely if the wife or mother and father failed to receive their allotment checks We want to be sure that documentary evidence in the form of a marriage certificate for the wife, birth certificates for children and the 620 form for mothers or fathers are sent in through the personnel section. As we stated above, if the evidence is not sent in, frequently there is a delay of three months or more.

We should like now to place special emphasis on class B family allowances. They are for mother or father or sister or brother or any persons in the family other than wife and children. If your mother or father or dependent brothers and sisters urgently need financial help from you, or if no other resources are available, then a family allowance can be applied for. In making this application you will be given a 620 form for your family to complete. A financial data record is also needed. If your family needs any help in completing any of the forms in making an application for family allowance, you should ask them to talk to their local Red Cross chapter.

NEW P-TA MEMBER: . . . Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, center, is made an honorary member of the Benning Parent-Teachers association by Mrs. W. O. Blandford, right, membership chairman. Mrs. Lee M. Wallace, publicity chairman, looks on. The P-TA drive for new members begins today.

Parent-Teachers Association Membership Drive Today

BY BECKY PORTER

"Every mother and father a member. Active participation of all parents."

That's the goal of the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers association, which begins its membership drive today. It's a goal they should have no trouble reaching the first day—not if everyone stops to consider how much the Benning PTA has done in the past, and how much it plans to do in the future.

The Parent-Teachers association is a non-commercial, non-political, non-sectarian organization, and its sole purpose is to further the physical, moral, and mental well being of the child.

And what has the Benning organization done to accomplish this purpose? To answer that question we'd need at least a special edition, but we can mention a few things. During the past year it has provided playground equipment for the Fort Benning school; it has sponsored movies, both educational and feature, for the children; it has furnished first aid kits and kleenex for the class rooms and books for the school library; it has brought to the post special speakers who were qualified to talk on child welfare and were qualified to discuss the problems of parents, teachers and children. And it has worked in every way possible to bring about closer co-operation between the home and the school.

This afternoon at 3:30 the Benning association will have a tea at Brat Barracks, and all parents are urged to attend and meet the teachers, and to discuss plans for the year.

The membership drive also starts today, and Mrs. W. O. Blandford, membership chairman, and her committee, hope to have every mother and father signed up and actively participating as a member. We'd like to add, for the benefit of those who have no children, that membership is not limited to parents. The organization will welcome anyone who is interested in child welfare. And that should include almost everyone at Fort Benning.

Eastern Stars Have Barbecue

The Fort Benning chapter, O. E. S. served approximately 300 people at their barbecue Thursday afternoon and evening in the Fine Arts building at the fair gournds. Later in the vening a free movie was shown.

Mrs. Louella Zeigler was in charge of arrangements, and her coworkers were Mrs. Hazel Barrett and Mrs. Jeanne Hobbs. The regular O.E.S. meeting will be held tonight at 8, at which time four candidates will be initiated.

Far East Command Ladies Form New Organization

Were you one of that group of army wives in Kyota, or Hayama, or possibly Miyanoshita, or some other place in the Far East? And did you often wonder where the others in the group were now?

Mrs. W. A. Duncan, who was in Kyoto, got to wondering just that. And she made the discovery that quite a few of her friends from the Far East were right here at Fort Benning. There must be some way these army wives who had known each other or who had lived in the same places, could renew old friendships. She talked it over with Mrs. Carl Frisby, who was in Miyanoshita and Yokahama, and they decided to try to get their group together.

On Wednesday Mrs. Duncan and Mrs. Frisby were hostesses to the women of the Far East command at an informal "get-together" in the Palm room of the Officers' club. The decorations were, of course, oriental. There was a large blue Japanese dish filled with zinnias, flanked by Japanese Makuri and Japanese ceremonial dolls.

At this first meeting there were 15 ladies present from various parts of the Far East. From Sapporo there were Mrs. C. McConnell, Mrs. H. C. McConnell, Mrs. L. S. Falkner. Kyoto was represented by Mrs. Ernest Englehardt, Mrs. W. A. Duncan, and Mrs. James W. Strain. From Omiya there were Mrs. Thomas Maertens and Mrs. C. M. McQuarie. Mrs. Fred S. Wright Jr. was in Morioka, and Mrs. L. E. Lichtenwalter, Mrs. R. H. Pell, and Mrs. C. E. Frisby were in Yokahama, Mrs. A. T. Flum was in Hayama, Mrs. George Wallace was in Seoul, Korea, and, Mrs. L. D. Shaw was in Ascon City, Korea.

The ladies plan to have a regular luncheon every month and are anxious to hear from the wives of the Far East command —this includes Japan, Korea, Okinawa, China and Guam. The next luncheon will be Tuesday, Oct. 5, at the Officers' club, and reservations should be made by calling Mrs. Robert Pell at 2540 or Mrs. L. D. Shaw, at 3834, on or before Oct. 1.

Tactical Section Luncheon Has International Theme

The wives of officers in the Tactical section had their September luncheon Thursday afternoon at the new Country club, with Mrs. W. B. Yeager and Mrs. T. H. Hayes as hostesses.

Since a number of the ladies have in the past been stationed in other countries, the hostesses decided to use an international theme in their decorations. Each of the small tables, which was set for six people, had as a centerpiece an art piece from overseas. There were crystal trees from Korea, opium lights from China, and figurines from Europe. For table mats, colorful kites shaped like fish or dragons were used. The place cards were picture post cards of European points of interest, many of which are no longer in existence today.

Over 200 Enroll For TIS Courses

More than 200 Infantry School students heard Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant commandant, tell them that it wasn't the main purpose of the Infantry School to make them finished soldiers. Instead he said it was the task of the school to make them good instructors.

He warned those without previous experience in the infantry that they would find the courses at Benning tough, but told them also that while here they would get the latest and best information on how the infantry functions and what it fights with.

The two classes hearing the brief address were advanced associate No. 1 and basic associate No. 1. Following General Shepard's talk they were briefed by Col. Bernard A. Byrne, assistant coordinator of training, and Lt. Col. Charles . Johnson, secretary of the Academic department.

Attending the advanced associate class are 34 American officers and seven foreign officers. The latter come from Uruguay, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica and Greece. The basic class, with 178 students, exceeds the expected quota, Colonel Johnson said, while the advanced class is under the enrollment expected.

188 Taking Course

Of the total number enrolled, 178 are enlisted men and 10 are officers.

Play will be on a double-elimination basis with a squad being ousted from competition after losing two matches. Match winners will be decided through a best-two-out-of-three set.

Following the tourney, a team trophy will be presented to the post champion squad, and members of the winning and runner-up crews will receive individual awards.

In addition to the team and individual awards, the title-wining volleyballers will garner themselves the right to represent Fort Benning in the Third army meet, scheduled for Fort Jackson, S. C., on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2.

Brat Barracks Has Dance, Celebrates First Birthday

Brat Barracks has just had a birthday celebrating one year of successful operation since its reorganization.

That naturally called for a party, so the "brats" went formal for the occasion. The young ladies put on their most formal dresses, and the young men invested in corsage for them. Sgt. N. B. Sousa and his orchestra were on hand to furnish the music, and Mrs. Betty Jo Faye was there to sing.

The club room was decorated with red and white paper streamers and black silhouettes on the walls. On the tables were candles in painted bottles, and ginger ale and plenty of cake with one candle. There were refreshments of lime sherbert and ginge ale and plenty of cake.

Approximately 50 teen agers were present, in addition to the chaperones and parents. They all agreed that it was a most successful party — almost as succesful a the year jut completed by Brat Barracks.

Warrant Officer Experiment Begun

Experimental assignment of warrant officers to units of company size was begun here Sept. 1 when eight chief and one junior grade warrant officers were assigned to the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team.

They will work in conjunction with the company commanders commanders and first sergeants

Purpose of the experiment, officials said, is to give company commander and first sergeants more time to spend with troops in the field. It is also expected that the arrangement will allow the first sergeant and company commander to devote additional attention to the problems of the enlisted men in the company.

Four units of the 325th have been affected by the new policy. They include the Second battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment, the 319th Field Artillery battalion, the 307th Engineer battalion and the 204th Transportation Truck company.

The warrant officers assigned to these units include CWO Bruce D. Anderson, formerly with the 4307th Army Service unit, New Orleans, La., to Service battery, 319th Field Artillery battallion; CWO Clarence E. Burns, formerly with Headquarters, Third Armored division, Fort Knox, Ky., to Company G, 325th Infantry regiment's Second battalion; CWO Douglas E. Carter, formerly with Headquarters, Sixth army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., to Headquarters battery, 319th Field Artillery battalion.

Also CWO Joseph T. Collins, formerly with Headquarters, Fifth army, Chicago, Ill., to Company E, 325th Infantry regiment's Second battalion; WOJG Edwin A. Edwards, formerly with the 9238th TSU-Ordnance, Longhorn Ordnance works, Marshall, Tex., to Battery C, 319th Field Artillery battalion; CWO Jesse L. Fowler, formerly with the 2134th Army Service unit, Harbor Defense, Fort Story, Va., to Battery A 319th Field Artillery battalion; CWO Arthur T. Lavery, formerly with Headquarters company, First army, Governor's island, N. Y., to Headquarters, Second battalion, 325th Infantry regiment.

CWO Pearce Alford, formerly with the Infantry Center, to Company C, 307th Engineer battalion and CWO Dolzey Borel to Headquarters detachment, 204th Transportation Truck company.

According to Infantry Center officials, all the warrant officers assigned to these units have had all-round experience in administrative duties.

The experiment will continue until Jan. 1, 1949.

Dough Nine Ends Season With Win

Intra-Mural All-Stars Bow To Post Crew in 12-3 Fray

Climaxing one of the most successful seasons in Doughboy diamond history, the 1948 edition of post baseballers closed out their campaign last Thursday night by turning back the Benning intra-mural league all-stars 12-3 before one of the largest crowds of the year at Gowdy field.

Thursday night's victory boosted the Doughboy record for the season to 18 wins and four setbacks. The 1948 Doughs also have adorned their trophy case with top awards for three tournaments, the Georgia state and Georgia-Alabama regional semi-pro meets, and the Third army tourney.

All four of the Doughboy defeats this year were in tournament contests. Two of the trouncings, one by the Worland, Wyo., Indians and one by the Camden, Ark., nine, came during the national semi-pro meet at Wichita, Kans. Other setbacks were handed the Doughs by the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, Ala., during the regional playoff series, and by the Fort Jackson, S. C., soldier team in the recent Third army tourney.

Both the Doughs and the all-stars blossomed out with a fine crop of errors during Thursday night's fray. Of the total of 17 mistakes, 10 were charged to the intra-mural crew while the Doughmen were guilty of seven.

Doughboy right fielder Woody Burt marred a perfect fielding record for the season when he let two hits to the outer gardens by all-stars get through him for extra bases. The fleet-footed outfielder, however, offset his defensive deficiency by collecting two timely bingles for the post squad.

Frequent substitutions by both gangs permitted a total of 31 players to see service during the game. Manager Merlin Dean of the all-stars threw in a total of 17 players, while Manager Herb Bench of the Doughs called on 14 performers.

Although the Doughs were highly favored to win the tilt, it looked for a while as though the all-star crew might upset the dope sheet. The intra-mural delegates were in possession of a 1-0 lead at the end of the first after first baseman Anthony Hardy of the visitors scored on two Dough misplays and a scratch infield single by second baseman Gordon Burke.

In the second frame, however, the Doughs jumped into the lead for keeps when center fielder Joe Smith and left gardener Bill Brooks crossed the dish. Smith led off with a single, was sacrificed to second by Len Carney, but held second while Burke threw wide to first to let Brooks reach the bags. Starter Walter Scott of the all-stars then committed a balk to advance both runners, and Smith trotted home when catcher Tom Gallagher rolled out from second to first. A wild pitch by Scott permitted Brooks to tally.

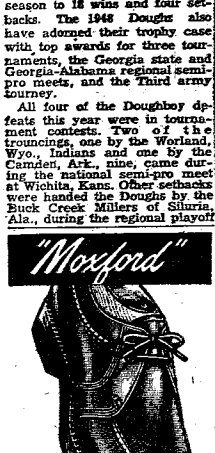
Brooks Homers



Four more markers in the last of the fifth widened the Dough margin to 7-1, and chased starter Scott from the hill in favor of Willie Love, a southpaw from the 204th transportation battalion Truckers.

In addition to singles by Burt, Gallagher and John Graves, who had come to the hill in a relief role for portsider Ken Watts to start the fifth, second baseman Bob Kinard slammed a long double, and the Doughs took advantage of three all-star misplays during the big stanza. A total of 10 post team swingers faced all-star hurling during the fifth, and the bags were full when the final out was chalked up.

Hale Stars

The all-stars broke back into the runs column in the top of the seventh on some daring baserdashing by aging catcher Ulus Hale, who whacked off offensive honors for the losers. The ancient receiver, a former teammate of pitcher Satchel Paige of the Cleveland Indians, smashed a line drive which ordinarily would have gone for a single into right field, but employed some speedy footwork to stretch it into a double. A moment later, Hale slid into third with a stolen base, and raced for home when one of right hander Bob Cronin's pitchers got past Gallagher momentarily.

Golf Committee Presents Ideas For Better Play

A list of recommendations has been drawn up by the golf committee of the post Officers' club which committeemen hope will tend to alleviate congestion on popular days and insure top-notch playing conditions at all times.

The action was prompted by the Infantry school's announcement that Wednesday afternoons normally will be devoted to athletics.

Topmost on the list of suggestions is a request that players make up foursomes prior to beginning play. A starter to prohibit play except in foursomes last Saturday morning by Col. has been authorized for days when congestion on the course is particularly bad.

Other recommendations made 1. Courtesy demands that all players endeavor to avoid delaying others. If a ball is lost, the following match should be invited through, and all members of the match in which a ball is lost should aid in searching for it. Excessive delay by taking practice swings and "waggling" for a long period of time should be avoided. If a match wishes refreshments between nines, the members should arrange to get them without causing any break in the continuity of play.

2. Many golfers are considerably disturbed by loud and unexpected noises which occur while they are making shots. All players, therefore, should be careful to avoid unnecessary shouting when others are playing in the vicinity.

3. To assist maintenance crews in the upkeep of the course, players should replace not only their own divots, but those made by preceding players.

4. Ball pits on greens should be smoothed out. This can best be done by sticking a knife blade or tee around the sides of the pit, and then stepping on the earth loosened by the process.

5. Impediments which might deflect a ball or damage a mowing machine should be tossed from the fairway into the rough. This applies particularly to pine cones, rocks and large sticks.

6. Players should be careful to avoid damaging the greens. Frequent causes of damage to greens include dropping golf bags, pulling caddy carts across the putting surface, and turning around on the greens with spiked shoes.

7. Golfers should not use the regular fairways, tees and greens for practice. An excellent putting green is available as well as a practice tee and green for pitching.

8. Tee markers should not be disturbed. They have been placed to facilitate maintenance of the tees by personnel responsible for the upkeep of the course.

Triple Niners Tie 25th Clan In Loop Sprint

Righthander John McClinic's three-hit, 3-0 shutout over the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment at Sand Hill Saturday, and the failure of the infantrymen to show up at Bullet field for Monday night's scheduled contest gave the 99th Field Artillery battalion a first place tie with the 25th Infantry regiment's Second battalion as the 325th circuit came to a close.

The two league leaders will enter a three game playoff series for the title starting this week.

Keystone sacker John Griffey's double and brace of singles for a perfect day at bat more than furnished the offensive power for the triple niners, who were baffled by pitcher. Warrick's curves on 13 separate occasions during the airtight contest.

During the initial pair of innings, the setto was tighter than the proverbial miser's purse. McClinic gave up lone singles in the first and second cantos, while Warrick was nicked for a single by Griffey in the first.

In their portion of the third, the artillerymen punched their initial score across via McClinic's walk and Griffey's sizzling double through the infield to center. Counting again in the fourth, the Sand Hill crew gang-ed up on the opposition on singles by Al Ellis, "Rabbit" Boyd and Lee Webb for run number two. The winners' final tally came in the sixth on singles by catcher Ulus Hale, Ellis and Boyd.

Toe Blake of the Montreal Canadians totalled 18 points on seven goals and 11 assists during the nine playoff games after the 1943-44 season, for the individual scoring record in National Hockey league Stanley cup playoffs.

KEATON ACES FOURTEENTH GREEN HERE

Capt. Earl Keaton became the third post golfer of the year to pull a hole-in-one out of his bag when he stroked an ace on the 180-yard, par-three 14th hole of the Officers' club course last Sunday.

Playng with Maj. Jack W. Ewley, who verified the accomplishment, Captain Keaton used a No. 2 iron in knocking his tee shot in the cup.

Other aces have been registered this year by Col. Frank Ward, now stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., who dropped one on the 120-yard No. 4 hole, and Capt. F. C. Thompson, who turned the trick on the 140-yard 16th hole.

According to Frank Goss, club pro, at least two other aces have been recorded on the 14th hole since the opening of the course. Goss boasts one of the two known holes-in-one, while Lt. Col. Hughes, who is no longer at Fort Benning, carded the other.

Keaton, a 12-handicap player, carded a pair of 40's for an 18-hole total of 80 strokes Sunday. He is assigned to the Preparations department of the Army Extension course.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

With autumn air bringing in scents of football activity, let's start focusing on various sections of the nation and see what the crystal ball has to say about the gridiron possibilities of some of the teams. Since we're nestled in the heart of Dixieland, it seems only fitting that the first direction in which we should take a gander is southeast, and, from pre-season reports, it looks like the camera will record a photo finish.

Within the Southeastern conference, material is plentiful and the only elevens which appear to be dealt out of the win-place-show honors are Florida and Auburn.

One thing is fairly certain, and that is that the teams picked to finish from No. 7 to No. 10 among the Dixie Dozen will be the most underrated college crews in the country. For, the actual differential between finishing in top spot and No. 9 or No. 10 in the Southeastern circuit is smaller than a molecule.

First of all, we might predict an end to the reign of Ole Miss as Dixie monarch, but the climb the Oxford lads made up the conference ladder last year indicate that this year's blueprints might shape into an architectural dream for Coach Johnny Vaught. However, Vaught will have to do his construction without the services of passing Charlie Conerly, who foiled the forecasts of experts with his aerial connections last year.

Conerly's graduation into the pro ranks has graduated Vaught into the ranks of T-formation users. The Mississippi coach is expected to merge the T-grouping with the Notre Dame box.

Although to predict a successor to the throne would be sheer folly at this time, the Georgia schools loom as likely candidates.

With only George Mathews lost from the 1947 backfield, Head Coach Booby Dodd of Georgia Tech is holding his favorite football hand for the first time since he accepted the helm from ancient and honored Bill Alexander. Dodd's 1948 edition will include offensive depth in all departments.

In addition to having most of the stellar performers of last year back for another season, Dodd has drawn a prize group of sophomores which may turn out to be important cogs in the Tech gridiron machine.

Georgia's hopes of bettering its so-so 1947 season are entwined about the shoulders of senior quarterback Johnny Rauch. Despite Rauch's top spot in passing yardage last year and his No. 2 rating in the number of overhead connections, the Bulldogs were kicked hard four times last year, but Head Coach Wally Butts is hoping that a better lineup of supporting backs will bolster Georgia's chances in their 1948 campaign.

If Georgia can come up with the personnel to implement its unexcelled pass patterns it could easily be on hand to take over the Southeastern diadem if Ole Miss was forced to discard it at the end of the season.

Despite a loss of 14 lettermen by the Crimson Tide of Alabama, a high pitch of optimism prevails on the Tuscaloosa campus. The reason for all the elated spirits is a bumper crop of B-stringers, reserves and freshmen, who will join an even dozen battle-tested varsiteers.

Picked as likely successor to Harry Gilmer is Ed Salem, sensational halfback at Birmingham's Ramsey high. Some of the coaching staff at 'Bama is convinced that Salem looks even better as a sophomore than Gilmer did.

General Bob Neyland's Tennessee Volunteers are coming up with 50 of last season's 65 players, and will be out to remedy what happened to them at the start of 1947 when they dropped five decisive contests during September and October. After the stretch of five defeats, the most disastrous in the general's coaching career, however, the Tennessee crew came back to close out the season with rousing triumphs over Boston College, Kentucky and Vanderbilt.

The big weapon in Tennessee's armory is the PP-48 passing combine of tailback J. B. Proctor to Captain Jim Powell, one of Dixie's finest offensive wingmen, who ranked ninth in the nation in pass-snatching last season.

Six-sevenths of Coach Bear Bryant's Kentucky Wildcat line is gone, but one of the finest accumulations of sophomores and first-year men ever to cleat the Bluegrass have put on Wildcat toggery, and are expected to fit right into the Kentucky T-formation.

To engineer the T for Kentucky is a senior, George Blanda, but he shares possible job-sharing or demotion with a promising and running fellow Pennsylvanian, Sophomore Carl Genito. Reserves are advancing to fill most of the line spots, but Kentucky's high hole-cards are genuine unknowns which may propel the Bluegrass lads to a first-division finish.

Close Win Over McPherson Gives Locals Championship

Fort Benning's Doughboy softballers backed some almost flawless pitching with timely hits to sweep the Third army diamond toga last Friday at Fort McPherson, Ga. The triumph which gave the Doughs the title was a 4-3 decision over the host McPherson nine.

To notch the area championship, the powerful Dough squad breezed undefeated past a field of five army installation entries.

Pitching chores throughout the tourney were split between John Wyatt, Warren Paulk and Jim Latterman with Wyatt, former Infantry School detachment ace, turning in one of his most brilliant performances of the year.

In the Doughs' opening encounter with the Atlanta, Ga., General depot last Tuesday, Wyatt and Latterman teamed to chuck a 16-3 no-hitter. Wyatt hurled the first five innings, while Latterman toed the slab during the final pair of frames.

In the other opening day contest, the McPherson crew edged the Fort Jackson, S. C., delegation 3-2.

The Doughboys registered the first triumph over the McPherson squad on Wednesday as Wyatt ran his string of hitless innings to 11. In the 4-1 fray, the speedy right-hander went six stanzas before giving the McPhersonites a scratch infield safety.

To stay in the running, the 82nd Airborne division Assassins from Fort Bragg, N. C., registered a 19-4 victory over the general depot goup from Atlanta on Wednesday, but were eliminated when they dropped a 10-5 verdict to the Jacksonites on Thursday.

The McPherson squad entered the finals against Fort Benning by dumping the South Carolinians 3-2 in Thursday's final tilt.

Credited with the win over McPherson which gave the Doughboys the Third army championship, Paulk held the Atlanta army nine to four blows during the first quartet of innings, but was driven from the hill when he was nicked for two counters in the fourth. Wyatt came on to put out the fire for the Doughs and finished out the game.

The Doughs' big gun at the plate was Paulk, who alternated his time between the mound and outer gardens. The versatile diamond star finished the tourney with better than a .500 everage at the plate. Stellar fielding honors went to Bill Welton, regular second-sacker, who donned catcher's paraphernalia for the tourney.

Managing the Doughs was John Klish, who pilote dthe ISD recently. Although most of the crew to the post championship Dough squad was picked from the ex-ISD nine, several members of the post runner-up Airborne battalion were acquired for the Third Army classic.

Following the touney, permanent individual trophies were presented members, and the squad was awarded a traveling plaque for one-year's possession by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Third army commander.

Third Recruit Company Judged Best in Battalion

At the review of the 325th Infantry regimental training battalion at Stilwell field last Saturday, the Third company was judged the best in the parade, it was announced by battalion officials this week.

In the weekly inspection of the recruit unit the Fifth company was selected the winner. Best mess in the battalion was won by Fourth company and the best barracks was that of the fourth platoon of the Second Company.

Post Gridiron Crew In Scrimmage Game

A controlled scrimmage session with the Troy State Teachers' college squad in Alabama last Friday afternoon confirmed the belief of Head Coach Joe Shepherd of the Doughboy gridsters that his team's strong link is the backfield while the forward wall shows need for more talent.

Immediately after the practice period with the Teachers, the Doughs returned to home soil for another two weeks of workouts prior to raising the curtain on their 1948 campaign by entertaining the Orlando, Fla., airforce eleven in Doughboy stadium on Sunday, Sept. 26.

During the scrimmage with the Trojans, Coach Shepherd threw in three full teams for a trio of 40-minute contests. Although no official tally was kept on the tiffs, the Benning crew failed to cross the double stripe, but permitted the Troy aggregations to rack up three touchdowns.

Ball-Handling Good

Observing the Doughboy candidates during the practice tussles, the Benning coaching staff noted that ball-handling was the outstanding phase while the line was lacking in speed as well as blocking and tackling procedure.

Stellar backfield performances were turned in by Harry (Hips) Sloan, light but shifty ball-toter, who is a returnee from one of the halfback posts of the 1947 Dough squad, and Robert Easly, a triple-threat back, who is making his debut in Benning grid circles this year.

Although the schedule for practice sessions on the post will remain the same until the Doughs pop the lid off their schedule, Coach Shepherd expects to throw in some intra-squad scrimmages during the final two weeks of drills.

Date Still Open

Nine frays, including six at home and three abroad, have been definitely set for Doughboys this season, but a Nov. 21 gap in the schedule still is to be filled. Several efforts have been made to slate a game for the open date in Doughboy stadium, but no satisfactory agreements have been reached.

Following the tussle with the Orlando Flyers here, the Doughmen will hit the road for an encounter with a tough crew of marines at the Parris Island, S. C., base on Oct. 2, but will return to Fort Benning for a contest with the naval flyers of Memphis, Tenn., on Oct. 10.

The Memphis game will be the first on tap for a three-week home stand. The following Sunday, Oct. 17, Coach Shepherd's lads will tangle with the Eglin Field, Fla., Flyers, and Oct. 24 will bring the power-laden Quantico, Va., marines to the local stadium. The uantico gang, many post grid fans will recall, crushed last year's strong edition of the Doughs after it appeared the Benning lads were well on their way to an undefeated season.

Finale Here

The Dough home activity will be snapped on Oct. 29 when the Benning gridsters take a long trek to Kansas for a game with the Fort Riley aggregation. However, the local pigskinners will be back in Doughboy stadium the following Sunday for a tilt with Fort Jackson, S. C.

Their schedule will take the Doughmen to Jacksonville, Fla., for a scrap with the naval Flyers on Nov. 13. The journey to Florida will come one week before the remaining open date for the local turfmen.

To pull the shades on their 1948 activity, the Doughboys will play host to a perennial foe, the 82nd Airborne division Assassins from Fort Bragg, N. C., on Nov. 28. The Jackson and Bragg crews are the only squads listed on the 1948 slate which hail from the Third army area.

Championship Races Slated For Columbus Speed Track

Veteran racing men today predicted a possible—if not probable—new world record for a semi-banked half-mile track when championship big car races are held for the first time on the new Columbus speedway Sunday, Sept. 26.

They made the prediction after surveying the list of cars and drivers expected for the inaugural of big car racing, and after comparing times made in stock car races already held on the new, lightning-fast oval.

The heavy, non-streamlined stock cars, not using racing motors, have turned the oval in 29 seconds.

Weather permitting, these experts of the roaring road feel that such daredevils as Deb Snyder, of Kent, O., Frank Luptow, of Detroit, Mich.; Speed Funderburk and Eddie Adams, of Tampa, Fla.; Fritz Tegtmier, of Elgin, Ill.; Al Fleming, of Norfolk, Va., and others who have indicated they will enter the Columbus races conceivably can achieve that 23.65 second goal.

All are established stars of the dirt tracks, and all will be driving Offenhausers, Rileys, or cars equipped with other well-known makes of racing motors.

Snyder, at present leading on points for the International Motor Contest association championship, will be the favorite to get under the old world mark. Snyder already holds several IMCA marks, from a mile to 50 miles and numerous track records.

Two years ago, the dapper little Kent machinist set a world record of 20.81 seconds for a high banked half-mile track at Owosso, Mich.

Any records established on the new Columbus oval will be officially recognized by the IMCA, governing body of dirt track racing which is sanctioning the championship races.

A field of about 20 drivers is expected to compete in the seven-event, sprint-type program, according to Harold H. Hill of Columbus speedways, Inc., co-sponsors of the event.

Parachute Rigger Class Opens Tuesday, Sept. 7

A total of 23 enlisted men and one officer were enrolled for the six-week course.

600 Transfer To Sill . .

More than 600 men of the 325th Regimental combat team left Fort Benning Tuesday morning for Fort Sill, Okla., to become the cadre for the newly formed 37th Regimental combat team, it was announced this week.

YOUNG OLDTIMER . . . Despite the number of years behind him, Jeff White, pint-sized guard, who is starting his third season as a member of the Fort Benning Bullet eleven, still patrols his line position with surprising agility. Jeff has been turning in top-notch performances on the gridiron for the past 14 years.

AGILE BULLET OLDSTER STARTS 15TH SEASON

BY AL WISE

Perchance some grid fans are looking for the opportunity to bestow honors on the post gridster with the most years of football under his belt. A candidate for these laureis is the Fort Benning Bullets' diminutive but husky guard, Jeff White of Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion.

Jeff, whose allotment of 185 pounds is powerfully distributed over five feet, six and one-half inches of height, is a native of Sandusky, O., and started playing junior hishschool football in his home town in 1929. As a yearling in 1930, he started his initial year of a three-season assignment on the Sandusky highschool varsity squad as a halfback under Ohio State university's famed Bob Whitaker.

Following the termination of his highschool grid activity, the Bullet guard joined the Simplex Radio semi-pro eleven, which impressively garnered 36 wins and five losses over a three-year period. The squad's record was chalked up against some of the outstanding teams in the Ohio circuit.

In addition to Whitaker, Jeff's former teammates include Ohio State's star halfback Johnny Bettridge, fullback London Gant of Cincinnati university and Morris Brown college's immortal "Big Train" Moody. He also played ball with backfield satellite Bob Ward of last year's edition of the Fort Benning Doughboys.

Enlisting in the army in 1940, the versatile gridster was shifted into the guard slot on several service teams with which he performed. He under went a 36-month respite from the game while serving overseas, but swung back into action when the post Bullets were activated in 1946.

Despite his size and weight, Jeff is both a coach's ideal and a 60-minute team player. His actions against the top elevens of the Southeastern Intercollegiate Athletic conference during the past two seasons have won him a generous amount of respect on all fronts.

When the Bullets open their slate on Saturday, Jeff will have donned the moleskins for the 15th season. He is expected to see a lot of service in the Bullet lid-lifter with the Tigers at Tuskegee institute, Ala.

Infantry Ring Men Undergoing Drills

Another sport stole its way into the Sand Hill limelight last week when 14 leather-pushing artists of the 25th infantry regiment buckled down to serious training in preparation for the post-wide boxing program which gets under way next month.

Led by middleweights Billy Williams and Clifford Wilburn and welterweight Wilbert Wilson, all members of the team which represented Fort Benning in the Third army tournament at Fort Bragg, N. C., early this year, the fighters have busied themselves daily with plenty of road-work, shadow boxing, rope skipping and bag punching.

Much of the success of the infantry regiments team rests upon the shoulders of the triple W's (Wilburn Wilson and Williams). The trio of pugilists are rated as top-fighters as well as seasonal vets of the squared-circle game.

Williams, a 160-pound ringwise giant packs loads of power in both fists, while granite-jawed Wilburn, who resorts to a stooping style of fighting and a crowd-pleasing fashion of bobbing and weaving, has witnessed the toll of many bells over the outstretched frames of victims of his hard, two-fisted attacks. Wilson, who tips the scales around the 150-pound mark, carries plenty of class into the ring. A cagey little scrapper, Wilson possesses lots of speed and a stinging right.

The record of the most dropkicked field goals in a single game is held by Paddy Driscoll. In a professional game against Columbus on November 23, 1925, he booted four of them.

Big Banquet Honors Post Diamondmen

One of the greatest versions of Doughboy diamondmen in post baseball history put the finishing touches to the season last Wednesday night with a steak banquet at the Polo Hunt club. The affair was sponsored by the Infantry center's athletic and recreation office.

Keynote speaker at the banquet was Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, the Infantry center commander, who lauded the efforts of the Dough diamondmen, and the trophies won by the the acclaim brought the post through the high calibre playing and sportsmanship of the baseballers this year.

In addition to the main address Manager Herb Bench and members of the Doughboy squad gave brief impromptu speeches.

A presentation of individual awards to all team members was made by General Burress, ant the trophies won by the squad this year were on display throughout the banquet.

Although their pre-season schedule was severely jolted by successes in tournaments, the Doughboys finished their schedule with 18 triumphs and four defeats. The post nads also copped championship laurels in three of the four tourneys in which they participated.

Making their tournament debut this year with the Georgia state semi-pro meet at Thomaston, the Doughs walked off with top honors by going through four pairings unbeaten, and won the right to play the Alabama champions for the regional title.

Although they dopped the middle game of the three-tilt regional playoff series to the Buck Creek Millers of Siluria, Ala., the soldier nine went on to take the rubber game of the set. By grabbing off the regional toga, the Benchmen garnered the nomination for regional representatives to the national semi-pro classics in Wichita, Kans.

The Doughs met their nemesis in tourney activity during the national meet at Wichita when they dropped two out of their first three frays to fade out of the picture in the double-elimination event.

Following the Kansas affair, the Doughs enjoyed only a brief respite before embarking on a successful defense of their Third army crown at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Among the special guests were attended the close-out banquet were pitchers Larry Hall, Ray Stem, Ike Silcox, Ken Watts, Bob Cronin and John Graves; catcher Tom Gallagher; infielders Herb Lauve, Harold (Blondy) Burnett, Bob Kinard and Ralph Terry, and outfielders Len Carney, Bill Brooks, Joe Smith, and Woody Burt. The attendance roster also included Manager Bench Assistant Manager James L. Walker and Equipment Manager Charles Heistand.

Chambers Ends Two-Day Tour

Crowding a comprehensive itinerary in a two-day tour of the Infantry Center last week, Col. Justice M. Chambers, staff member of the Senate armed services committee, obtained first hand information on the new recruits training here as well as conferring on Infantry School matters with Infantry Center officials.

The armed service committee staff member, who arrived here last Wednesday, spent a good part of his first day touring the encampment of the 325th Provisional Training battalion at Harmony church. There he witnessed the program being carried out for the trainees.

Thursday morning, Colonel Chambers toured the Infantry School, discussing organization of the advanced classes, he visited the Communication and the Airborne sections.

AGING HORSE WINS HONORS AT ATLANTA

It looks as if Blue Point, the 24-year-old legendary Fort Benning mare, will continue to win championships until she goes where all good animals go.

In a field of 30 horses, Blue Point proved that she was the classiest of them all, winning three first places and copping two other runner-up positions in the horseshow spnsored by the Cascade Civic club in Atlanta last week-end.

Ridden by Mrs. C. L. Jones, wife of Lt. Col. C. L. Jones of Fort Benning, Blue Point took firsts in the lightweight hunters class, working hunters and championship hunters, while finishing second in two other hunters class events.

Blue Point, who probably has won more championships and awards than any other horse alive in this part of the country, was awarded trophies for her first place honors and ribbons for second place positions at Atlanta.

The 24-year-old mare has been jumping in events since 1930. Since that time she has been owned and cared for by many people. She has responded brilliantly for every owner and rider she has worked with.

The great hunter and jumper won honors in her last competition, prior to Atlanta's meet, last May here in Columbus. Then ridden by Capt. M. E. Bullock, Blue Point came home with championships in two hunters classes and finished high in other events.

The old tuneful – adage of the "Old Gray Mare She Ain't What She Used To Be" certainly doesn't apply to Blue Point. This 24-year-old makes the youngsuns sit up and take notice.

Infantrymen Nip Trucker Squad

Two mound magicians, right-hander Walter Scott and Lefty Bill Conerly, proved too tough for the 204th Transportation battalion Truckers Monday night as they teamed to limit the truck nine to two hits in twirling the 25th Infantry regiment to a 9-4 victory at Gowdy field.

The win was the second straight over the 204th Truckers, who have found the going pretty roung against the infantrymen this year.

Scott, who started for the winners, was tagged for a safe blow in the second by Studevan. The hard-throwing right-hander had the Sand Hill team out in front 9-1 when he lost control, and walked three consecutive batters in the seventh. He was yanked in favor of Conerly, who was nicked for a hit by Flash Wilson. The Trucker blow, plus a 25th miscue, permitted three transportation team runners to cross the plate.

Led by the timely hitting of Willie Wise, Gordon Burke and Gene Thomas, the infantrymen put over two runs in the fourth, four in the fifth and three in the sixth to ice the game. Thomas registered the longest hit ball of the evening in the fourth when he teed off on one of White's fast ones and lined it deep against the centerfield fence.

Special Courses Set for Reserve, Guard Officers

Special command and staff training courses for national guard and reserve officers will be taught in each of the army areas, the army announced recently.

Developed by the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the courses are meant to provide a local means for guard and reserve officers to further their military education and prepare for staff and command assignments with divisions.

means for guard and reserve ficers may attend the regular courses of the Command and Staff college. Many, however, are unable to arrange the extended time off from their civilian pursuits to attend the school. The special courses are meant to fill this gap.

Under present plans, the program will consist of three progressive two-week courses conducted over a period of two years in one or more locations in each of the numbered army areas by the army commanders. The first of the three progressive courses will be given during the period Oct. 1, 1948, to March 1, 1949.

Quick-Thinking Recruits Take Escapee Prisoner

Because a man doesn't usually go around asking to borrow a toothbrush, a civilian escapee from the Phenix City jail is back behind bars and a private and two recruits of the 325th Infantry Regimental Training battalion have been commended by the unit commander, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, for their alertness in apprehending the fugitive.

The two recruits, William G. Herod and Joseph H. Rivard, both of the battalion's Fourth company, were awakened by the escaped prisoner about 7 a.m. Sunday morning, Sept. 5. He first approached Herod, sat on the side of his bunk and started asking questions.

"Could I borrow a razor?" Herod doesn't own one. "Who has the keys to the rifle rack?" "Do any officers live in the barracks?" "Could I borrow a uniform to wear to church?" "Who lives up stairs??"

He next turned his attention to Rivard, woke him, and asked if he was a "Yankee." By this time several other men were awake and the fugitive "bummed" a cigaret from one of them. But when he asked to borrow a toothbrush or something else with which to brush his teeth, Rivard became suspicious and then, when the stranger asked about the keys to the rifle rack the recruit became alarmed.

About this time the stranger, clad in dungarees and a T-shirt, adjusted his trousers and both Herod and Rivard noted the word "stockade" lettered on the waistband of the dungarees. Rivard Rivard quietly told some of the other men that he was going to notify the charge of quarters, Pvt. Ralph R. Tomich. Tomich hurried to the barracks and began to question the stranger who told him that he was a visitor, but couldn't show a visitor's permit, or name the person he was supposed to be visiting.

Detailing two men to watch the back door and two others to guard the front door of the barracks, Tomich returned to the orderly room, phoned the military police and then, following their orders took the fugitive to the orderly room, telling him he was wanted on the phone. He also told the escapee that this was routine with all visitors and that transportation would be provided him to the main post where he would get a pass. When the MP's arrived the man readily admitted that he was an escaped prisoner, and the military police took him in custody.

In his commendation to the three men, which he ordered to be posted on all bulletin boards and enclosed in the men's personal files, Colonel Yancey said that he "desires to commend them for their excellent judgment and initiative. . .which is an indication of good training and a high state of morale within the Fourth Training company. Such action on the part of Private Tomich, Recruit Rivard and Recruit Herod will serve as an inspiration to other members of this battalion and reflects great credit upon themselves and upon the army as well."

Carolina Scrapper Kayoes Dan Allen In Asheville Fights

Dan Allen, Fort Benning middleweight, who has broken into ring prominence throughout the South within the past year, was the victim of a third-round knockout at Asheville, N.C., last Friday night. The bout went to Joe Leonard of Charlotte, N. C., who dropped the Benning soldier in 41 seconds of the third period.

Allen's go with the Tar Heel scrapped was the last half of a double program in Ashville. In the card opener, "Sumpin" Joe Green, fast-traveling Negro middleweight, outpointed another Negro pugilist, Art Bethea of Washington, D. C., in a 15-round contest.

The victory for Green, whose home is in Asheville, was his 20th in 22 fights against some of the classiest middleweights in the South.

During the winter boxing season at Fort Benning this year, Allen assisted boxing coach John Wilson in training the post's boxing squad, and probably will assist in putting the soldier scrappers through their paces next winter. He was a member of the post's pre-war boxing crew.

Bullet Gridiron Eleven Plan Trek To Alabama School For Lid-Lifter

Putting in two practice sessions daily, Coach Thomas L. Delton has been leading his post Bullet gridiron charges through strenuous exercises for the past two weeks in preparation for their opening turf tussle against the Tigers at Tuskegee institute, Ala., on Saturday.

The contest will be the initial outing for both elevens, and each will be fighting to open the season with a triumphant note.

Despite the fact that the Bullets have encountered difficulty in defeating the Alabama gridsters in recent games, showings made in pre-season practice sessions have labeled the coming get-together as a probable nip-and-tuck affair from the opening whistle.

Standing close to three deep in every position, the Bullets' hopes of victory are centered in a power-packed, fast-charging forward wall of stalwarts backed by an array of speedy and shifty backs.

With baseball season over, the signal - calling post should be fortified with the return of quarterback Gordon Burke, and flankmen Andy Hardy, Lew Davis, Gene Thomas, Freddie Hamer and Leon Smith have turned their attention to grid activities which will bolster the outpost spots. Reinforcements at the two flanks have pleased Coach Delton highly since the Bullet Turfmen will be operating this season without the services of veteran wingmen Jimmie Green and Eddie Williams. Both of the vets have been lost to the squad via the transfer and separation route.

Among the vets are Mathew Batie, who turned in close to 60 minutes of play in each game; Bob the Tank) Murphy, a 215-pound harrassing agent to opposing backfields; Jeff White a devastating tackler, who is entering his third year of play with the Bullets; diminutive Odell Kennedy, an explosive pack of TNT at the central post; Leroy (Doc) Garvin, the 185-pound trouble-maker, and Walt Brown, who tips the scales at 194 pounds.

Newcomers who are putting plenty of talent on the line are 220-pound Al Blannon and 200-pound Bob Lindsay, both of whom have shown great promise of landing a starting berth on this year's eleven.

Backing up the line and showing even more class than last year are such speed merchants as "Jumpin' Cliff" Bradford, a crazy-legged, 180-pound broken field artist; fast-moving Bill Beasley; quarterback Hudie Lagston; orace Northcutt, high-stepping halfback, who came into his own the latter part of last season, and is expected to go places in a hurry this year, and elusive Phil Tindrell, who rounds out the brilliant array of backfield eturnees from the squad of 1947.

Added to the top-ranking heap of veteran backs are several lads who have been drawing considerable praise from the coaching staff. Among these are Ed Monroe, quarterback Ernest Sims, the Mr. five-by-five of the squad, and fullbacks Wilbert Avis and Windy Hammond, scaling 205 and 200 pounds, respectively.

Sporting such variety of football talent, and anticipating one of their most successful seasons, the Bullets will depend largely upon the power of a big, rugged and fast-charging line, and the brilliant play of an elusive and speedy backfield to carry them through the season well rep resented in the win column.

To Visit Benning

John E. Koruzo, engineer of Third army, is scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning around Sept. 22 to review water, sewage and refuse collection activities, Lt. Gen Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third army commander, has announced.

Thumbnail History of U. S. Airforce

Saturday, Sept. 18, is the 41st birthday of the United States airforce.

Since its last birthday the air force has grown from a total strength of 311,000 officers and enlisted men and women more than 390,000 with approximately 120,000 of that total overseas.

Next Saturday, in addition to the birthday anniversary, "Airforce day" will also mark the first year of autonomy as a co-equal member, with the army and navy, of the national military establishment.

During its first year of independence, the air force grew to 55 operational combat groups, 32 of them in this country and 23 in the overseas theaters. The last Congress authorized a 70-group air force, but because of limited current appropriations only 66 of those goups will be organized by the end of the present fiscal year next June 30. If funds are available, the other four groups will be formed during the following fiscal year.

In previous years air force day has been observed on Aug. 1, since the air division of the Signal corps, predecessor the U. S. air force, was created on Aug. 1, 1907. USAF history, its traditions and its experience were acquired as the airforce of World Wars I and II and during 40 years of military aviation in the United States army.

The United States airforce is divided into 14 major commands, five of them overseas and nine in the United States.

Air Defense command, Mitchel air force base, Hempstead, N.Y. commanded by Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer.

Headquarters command, Bolling air force base, Washington, D. C., Brig. Gen. Burton M. Hevey, commanding.

Norwegian, Swahili Speaking GI's Taking Basic Training At Benning

Some men join the army because they like to travel, others because they like excitement, but a couple of "recruits" in the 325th Infantry Regimental Training battalion, who came to the U. S. from Norway and Nairobi, have other reasons for preferring military service here.

Take, for example, Torquet Kellner of the Fourth company. Still under 20, the new recruit has lived in half a dozen countries, speaks fluent Swahili, and was taking British military training when he was only 12 years old.

Born in Belgium, Kellner next lived in Austria for five years, and later moved to Bulgaria where he remained two years. Then he went to Turkey for five years, and later moved to Bulgaria where he remained two years. Then he went to Turkey for four years, followed by a year in Palestine, all the time with his family. From Palestine, where they were until just before the Japs attacked the U. S., the Kellners moved to Nairobi, in British East Africa. That's where young Kellner learned the native Swahili tongue.

In 1941, Kellner, then 12 years old, started his military training as a cadet with the Officers' Training corps of the British army. At that time, he was still, of course, in school. He joined the home guard, and had the job of guarding Italian prisoners of war captured by the British in Ethiopia.

Not complaining about service with the British army, Kellner says that he likes the democratic policy of American training, especially the consideration shown the individual soldier. He came to the U. S. last January, and this summer joined the army for three years. He says that he hasn't decided definitely, but is considering the army as a career. Right now he's scheduled to go to the First Cavalry division in Japan upon completion of basic training.

On the day that Hitler's armies poured across the borders of Poland, Helge A. Faye-Schjoll was a seaman on the Norwegian motor ship Vigrid bound from Norway to the United States. That was the last time he saw his home or family in Oslo until June, 1945. In between he lived the kind of life that the movies often pass up as being "too fictional."

From the beginning of the war in September, 1939, until March, 1941, Faye-Schjoll saw most of the world as a merchant seaman on ships flying the Norwegian flag. While most of the time he plied the Atlantic between Canada, the United States and the British Isles, he still got around the other way. On one trip he went from Tacoma, Wash., to Vladivostok, important Siberian seaport of the Soviet Union. Sometimes the trips were "filled with a bit of excitement," he remarked, "like the time we were bombed 160 miles from Londonderry off the North Ireland coast."

In March, 1941, however, Faye-Schjoll left the sea to go to Toronto, Canada, to join the Royal Norwegian air force. After 13 months' training he went to England in April, 1942, as a trained armorer with an all-Norwegian fighter unit attached to the British royal air force. His squadron, he said, besides making numerous flights over the continent, helped cover the Normandy invasion.

At war's end Faye-Schjoll returned to Norway, but last February came back to America. He joined the army last month because, as he says, it offered him an opportunity to learn a trade and living conditions are good. Twenty-five years old, he plans on making a career of military service. Right now Faye-Schjoll is interested in taking airborne training when he finishes his basic. Also, like many of his compatriots, including his old friend, Torker Takle, famed skier killed in Italy, he'd like to get into a ski unit.

"There's a lot of similarity between the Norwegian and American armies," Faye-Schjoll said, "even in the basic training."

There's also a lot of the same attitude in the Norwegian army that there is in the American army between the officers and the enlisted men, he added. At present he's in the Fifth company of the training battalion.

GUARDSMEN ELIGIBLE TO ATTEND ACADEMY

Appointment to the United States Military academy at West Point, N. Y., is one of the many opportunities for advancement offered to members of the national guard of the United States, according to Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau.

"Enlisted men of the national guard between the ages of 19 and 22 (or between 19 and 24 if they have completed one or more years active duty in any of the armed forces of the United States) and who will have served honorably as enlisted men in the national guard for one year as of July 1, 1949, are eligible to apply," General Cramer said.

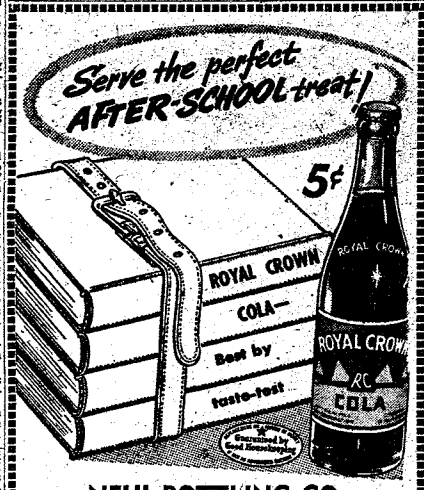
"In addition to the United States Military academy, all of the schools and specialist instruction courses of the regular army and air force are open to members of the guard," General Cramer said.

National guardsmen who entered West Point in July include: Technician Fifth Grade Paul A. Gray, 3666th Ordnance Medium Maintenance company, 2621 E. Pinchot street, Phoenix, Arizona; Private Robert S. McGowan, Headquarters company, Combat Command "A", 50th Armored division, 37 Eggerts road, Trenton, New Jersey; Technician Fourth Grade Leslie C. Parrish, Jr., 110th Ordnance Medium Maintenance company, 525 North Manhatan street, Kansas; Staff Sergeant Mahlon G. Weed, Company G, 137th Infantry, 1320 North 36th street, Kansas City, Kansas; Sergeant John T. Quinn, Company B, First Battalion; 102nd enfantry, 43rd Infantry division, 17 Judson avenue, New Haven, Connecticut, Technician Fifth Grade Kermit D. Swanson, Company D, 196th Infantry, Vermillion, South Dakota; Sergeant Robert H. Truax, Company B, 145th Tank Battalion, 49th Armored Division, 2408 Westbrook street, Fort Worth, Texas; Private Harry H. Wilt, Headquarters company, Second Battalion, 110th Infantry, 229 Church street, Lionier, Pennsylvania.

Two Recalled To Active Duty

Bars will soon be replacing chevrons on the uniforms of M-Sgt. Leslie Parker and Sgt. 1st. Cl. Theodore H. Peterson of the Infantry School detachment, both of whom have been notified by the Department of the Army of their reassignment as officers.

Following enlistment in the army in Colorado in 1942, Sergeant Parker attended the Signal School at Camp Crowder, Mo., and then the Officer Candidate School at Fort Monmouth, N. J. He served with 736th Signal Aircraft Warning company in the Aleutians, as a special services officer with the Ninth Infantry division in Germany and with the Augsburg, Germany, military post. Since reenlisting early this year he has been chief clerk of the personnel section of the Infantry School detachment.



A graduate of the University of North Dakota, Sergeant Peterson won a battlefield commission in Italy while with the 34th Infantry division. He participated in the Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, Anzio and Appenines campaigns with that organization. Upon reverting to enlisted rank he attended the Adjutant General School at Camp Lee, Va., and at Benning has been a personnel management technician with the classification and assignment section of the Infantry School detachment.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING . . . Work began this week on the new Book department building, located on Morrison avenue between the field printing plant and Officers' club. The $76,000 edifice is expected to be completed next spring.

Start Work Soon On Half-Million Dollar Structure

Erection of a more than half-million-dollar field house and gymnasium will begin here early next month, it was announced this week by Infantry Center engineer officials.

The building, to cost $513,500 will be located between the post office and Main cafeteria facing Stilwell field, and its completion is expected within one year. The site was chosen in order to have the edifice close to other major athletic facilities on the post. It will be similar in appearance to the Main theater.

The field house will be built of brick and tile, one story high. The overall dimensions will be 204 feet by 185 feet, and funds for construction were allocated by the army's central welfare fund in Washington, D. C., according to Lt. Col. Dennis M. Moore, custodian of the post central welfare fund and custodian of the special welfare fund (construction and renovation). According to Colonel Moore the greater portion of this fund is derived from post exchange profits throughout the army.

Among the facilities to be included in the structure will be a swimming pool, basketball courts, handball courts, exercise rooms, shower rooms, comfort rooms for civilian spectators, a balcony for spectators at athletic events, offices and storage rooms.

The swimming pool will be 75 feet long by 48 feet wide, according to the detailed plans and specifications. Included in the pool's plans are two diving boards, one three-meter board and a one-meter board.

The gymnasium floor will be 110 feet square. It can be divided into two floors for basketball games or combined into one large basketball floor. Overlooking the gymnasium will be the balcony for spectators.

The exercise rooms and handball courts will be located behind the Main gymnasium. Each handball court will be 46 feet long and 23 feet wide. The exercise rooms will be 40 by 46 feet.

Infantry Center and engineer officials have indicated that it will be necessary to move the guest house opposite Stilwell field and next to the post office. It is contemplated moving this building next to Red Cross headquarters on Vibbert avenue. There is also a possibility that the flag pole facing Stilwell field may be moved to the front of the Infantry School building.

Funds for the new field house were originally made available about a year and a half ago, according to Col. Moore. Con-

What Are The Army's Plans?

EDITORS'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of ten articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the Information section, Headquarters, Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1--What recreation facilities will be available to the selectee during his free time on the post?

Within the limits of its resources, army special services works constantly to improve the military environment, and provides facilities and programs for wholesome recreation and entertainment on the post. The young soldier will find opportunities for utilizing his free time in activities similar to those he has been accustomed to in civilian life--athletics, movies with three or four changes of program weekly, music, dramatics, library service.

All soldiers have an opportunity to participate in diverse athletic activities, and the young selectees will be encouraged to do so. Skilled athletes may win positions on teams for competition with civilian teams or teams in nearby military stations. Army-wide and airforce-wide championships in golf, tennis and boxing are conducted with all men having equal opportunity to reach top levels. The young soldier will be encouraged to self-entertainment through soldier-show activities, soldier dance orchestras and in other ways. Library facilities and good books will be available with army librarians in charge.

There will be service clubs operated by carefully selected women recreational directors of mature judgment and responsibility. These clubs are for the general use of enlisted men, there they can read, relax, enjoy musical programs, participate in games, and have a snack when they want it. Families and friends may be entertained at service clubs. Soldier dances will be held, and high-type girls obtained by the cooperation of churches, societies or clubs from nearby towns and cities. In general, the service club is the hub around which the life of the enlisted men revolves. In addition to the service clubs, unit day rooms or recreation rooms also furnish homelife surroundings, comfortable chairs, magazines and newspapers and often game tables, radios and other means of indoor entertainment. Hobby shops are in general use in the army today, and it is planned to operate as many of these as possible where selectees can engage in photography, wood-working, plastics, leathercraft, etc. Post exchanges will sell articles of convenience and necessity not normally provided by the government.

The army will strive to provide an environment for off-duty time reasonably comparable to civilian communities and to make on-post recreation programs as attractive as possible so that the soldier will seek his relaxation on the post, and be less inclined to find it elsewhere.

2--Will be get good medical care?

Adequate medical care and hospital accomdations will be provided.

3--Will be get good food?

The American soldier has always been the best fed in the world, and this record will be continued. Under the food service program, great stress has been placed on the importance of preparing food skillfully and appetizingly and serving it attractively. Skilled dieticians check menus constantly to insure adquate and balanced diets. Trained personnel are graduating from food service schools as cooks, bakers and supervisors. Improved new equipment and better layout of facilities are resulting from continuing experiments.

4--Will he get religious guidance?

The soldier will be given every possible encouragement to continue in close affiliation with the church of his choice. The chaplain wil be given a prominent role in the army's program, and close cooperation with religious groups in the community will be the rule. The army encourages worship by providing chapels and services for Catholics, Protestants and Jews.

5--What about his disrupted education?

The army has an education program now functioning which will enable the draftee to continue his formal studies on off-duty time. There will be educational courses available to him which fit directly into his educational plans for the future and which are, in general, accredited by civilian educational institutions.

Post Dialogue

Last week the enquiring reporter asked eight Fort Benning soldiers what they thought was needed to make this a better post. Practically without exception, they replied that there should be more entertainment.

This week the enquiring reporter started pinning down some other soldiers on the question of amusements. Their answers indicated that many would be willing to pay to have good, professional entertainment here. The question was: "Other than the movies, what type of entertainment and recreation would you prefer during the fall and winter?"

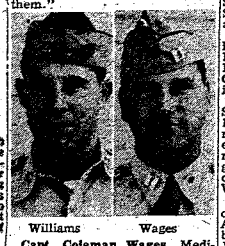
Sevier Sutton

First Lt. Harry E. Sutton, Headquarters company, 25th Infantry regiment: "I would like to see more concerts and musical affairs. I would also like to see some professional stage plays, not amateur shows. Otherwise, I'm satisfied."



Pfc. Charles L. Highbarger 152nd A.A.C.S. squadron, Lawson Air force base: "I enjoy watching football games. I'd like to see some stage shows and name bands. It would be nice if they had a concert series down here."

Highbarger Gunn

M-Sgt. William E. Gunn, Company A, Infantry School detachment: "I like hunting and fishing, and they've got the best in the world down here. It would be a big help if special services would make hunting and fishing equipment more available, especially to the new, younger men coming on the post. I'd also like to see more Bayonets coming to my outfit."

Sgt. David C. Williams, Headquarters and Service company, 756th Tank battalion: "I like bowling, and have an opportunity to bowl here. I also like football. I wish they would have a concert series here. I would also like to see some professional stage shows, musical and dramatic. I'd like these because both my wife and I could enjoy them."

Williams Wages

Capt. Coleman Wages, Medical company, 325th Infantry regiment: "I'd like to see some really good professional boxing matches down here, as would my wife, and she would like to see some wrestling matches. We would also like some big time bands like Vaughn Monroe and Tommy Dorsey for a show or dance for the whole post. I'd also like less of these amateur USO-type shows. I'd like to see some good professional variety shows on the stage. Band concerts are something else I'd like."

Sgt. 1st Cl. Theodore H. Martin, Company A, Infantry School detachment: I'd like more dance bands, either to put on a show or bands, either to put on a show in the theater or to dance to. I'm glad to see that they have a skeet range here, and I'll take advantage of that. It would be great entertainment if they could get some professional stage shows, either minstrel or musical comedies."

Martin Frost

Cpl. George M. Frost, Headquarters company, First battalion, 325th Infantry regiment: "I like the football setup. I look forward to the football season every year. I like an occasional concert of light classical music. They could use another band here to play for dances at the clubs because the one band they do have isn't enough. I like the Pine lodge NCO club very much.

188 Students Enrolled

Now in its fifth week of training, basic airborne class No. B-25 has a total of 188 students enrolled. Of the total strength, nine are officers and 179 enlisted men.

A Problem Is Solved

The Infantry Center billeting office has solved a tough problem in a most magnificent manner. Though their efforts, and working in conjunction with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, they have caused to be established in the Chamber's offices in the Ralston hotel a branch billeting office to serve incoming Fort Benning personnel and their families who are unable to find quarters on the reservation. This service, available to all the military, will do much toward alleviating the heartbreaking search for apartments and rooms.

The cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and property-owners in Columbus, of course, has done much to make the project a success. Without them, it is doubtful whether such a program could be carried out satisfactorily.

Heretofore, men reporting to Fort Benning who wanted to bring their families with them had either to take the first house or apartment they could find, regardless of cost, or spend many hours house-hunting. Now, however, it is possible, in many cases, to find a choice place to live immediately, and at a reasonable price.

From a morale standpoint, this is a tremendous accomplishment. It is only natural that a married man wants his family with him, and it is obvious that he will find both Fort Benning and Columbus a more pleasant place if he is able to live with his family. Not only will he be happier, but he will do a far better job if he has no worries about where his wife and children are living.

In some respects, Fort Benning personnel have been exceedingly fortunate in that they have usually been able, despite long waiting periods at times, to rent some sort of quarters. In some cities near army posts, this has not been true. And in some cities available quarters have been so miserably poor that the soldier would rather send his wife home than force her to live in such an environment. And at some places there have been none available at all.

Conditions such as those existing in some cities are beyond all belief. We have heard of actual cases, in other cities, where soldiers and their families were living in rooms or apartments without sanitary connections, even, in some cases, without running water. Such conditions are deplorable, and it is understandable why men who have to live in such a manner are disgusted and why they would want to transfer to some other post.

Since Columbus and Fort Benning are so much a part of each other and since their interests often overlap, there have been, so far as we have been able to find out, nothing here even approaching conditions like those we have mentioned. Obviously, there is some crowding, but not to an unbearable extent. Everyone knows that there is a housing shortage; consequently, it is to be assumed that every military family living in a civilian community is not as comfortable as it would like to be. Still, most Fort Benning families do have some place they can rightly call home.

We believe that Columbus citizens have been extremely cooperative in providing quarters for Benning families, and we believe that, on the whole, most of those families have few complaints. True, rents are high, but no higher for military personnel than for civilians. We can't expect the civilian apartment-or house-owner to lower rents just because we think they are higher than we would like to pay. After all, in this day of high prices, the average civilian is much worse off than the average soldier from a monetary standpoint. His cost of living index is several percentage points higher than that of the military.

We sincerely hope that the civilian community in Columbus will continue to cooperate in the future as it has in the past with Fort Benning, and the establishment of the branch billeting office seems adequate proof that it does intend to do just that.

Strictly Editorializing

Fort Benning is experiencing a building boom, the likes of which haven't been seen around these parts since the early days of World War II. First of all, the new Country club, behind the Station hospital, was dedicated on Labor day. This structure, not financed by the army but through proceeds from the Main Officers' club, was a much needed adition to the golfing facilities now available here, and is one of the most beautiful recreational buildings on the post.

The second construction to get under way was the Book department building, with ground-breaking ceremonies last Monday morning. This long, one-story building will dessiminate materials to the services at large, and will be another beautiful structure to enhance the attractiveness of the area around the officers' club, field printing plant and Infantry school.

The third proposed building, and to us one of the most important, is the new field house, construction of which is expected to begin this week or next. It will house a gymnasium and all-tile swimming pool among other things, and we are sure it will be one of the most popular spots on the reservation. It will be located between the post ofice and Main cafeteria.

Also planned, but not yet under way, is the construction of 80 sets of non-commissioned officers' quarters, slated to cost around one and one half million dollars. This is probably the most eagerly awaited building program at Fort Benning, as well as the most urgent.

At any rate, from where we sit it looks as if this Georgia post is going to be a beehive of building activity during the next twelve-month period.

Chaplain's Corner..

OUR DEMOCRATIC HERITAGE

by

Chaplain Harvey M. Hardin

There are several thoughts that came to my mind as I returned from overseas duty. First, it is a good feeling to be home and enjoy friendship with other members of my family and friends that I have not seen for a long time. Another thing, green grass and the trees look good after being in another country where you do not see them as much as you do here.

Your family and country give you a feeling of safety you do not have in a foreign land where people dress differently and speak a language you do not understand. However, there is no need to be tense or fearful in other lands. When a person keeps busy with his work and enjoys new friendships, time passes quickly, and it is not long before he is home again. The only time you feel that you are a hero overseas is when you read the headlines of home papers about the dangers of foreign service, many of which you are not aware as you do your daily work.

A person in the army today has a chance to travel and see many parts of the world. He can see things and places of beauty in any country. Also, he can see poverty, filth and disease. He can return to his homeland little and narrow with a Nazi pride: "I am better than they are." On the other hand, religious faith can help a man to live the Golden Rule and help him to keep the Ten Commandments at home and abroad. World travel can broaden his interests and deepen his sympathies for people in other lands who have not had the same chance for freedom, education and the other good things of life. False pride that lifts him above others so that he looks with contempt on them will defeat democracy any place in the world. Having a high regard for one's self and for others is the kind of pride he needs. Both of these are needed by men in the army if we are to succeed in our work.

I am loyal to my country which I love and serve. My country has responsibilities in other parts of the world, and it calls on me and you to help carry them out. Provincial knowledge and loyalties that do not go beyond the city limits of our birth places are inadequate for these world-wide tasks. We need to know more about countries and have attitudes that give consideration to people of other nations if we are to have peace, freedom, law and order in the world. Our Christian faith helps us to have the right attitudes toward others. We must develop those attitudes if democracy is to succeed.

PLUNDER

If you have any illusions about the honesty and integrity of the people who "run" your government, don't read Samuel Hopkins Adams' novel, "Plunder." We feel that the story is far-fetched, the characters overdrawn, and the situations greatly exaggerated. But there is a verisimilitude about the book that makes the reader wonder if there wasn't something more to our various congressional investigations and munitions scandals than the newspapers printed.

Mr. Adams is very careful to state that the characters and incidents in his novel are fictional. He goes further and sets his story in a Washington of 1950. The president of the United States, Cheerful Charlie Dennison, is identified with neither the Republican nor the Democratic party, but is a member of the Hands-Off League (Free Enterprise non-Political Coalition), which swamped the other two parties in the 1948 elections. But he seems to us to have a lot of the Harding-Hoover characteristics.

The "hero," the Hon Martin "Shoestring" Strabo is a power-mad, unscrupulous, conniving heel, who might be one of a dozen or a hundred industrialists who have made headlines in recent years. Most of the story concerns his promotion of Tozerite, a chemical which is supposed to offer protection against the atom bomb. That it is not only absolutely worthless but is actually harmful does not worry Strabo in the least. Nor does it worry the congressmen whom he controls, or the brass hats who can handle his army contracts, and get a cut of his profits (which amount to something like 3,000 percent.)

This picture of Washington and politics is not very pretty. There are money scandals, chiseled contracts, purchased "appointments," and a fairly well organized gestapo. Above all there is an indifferent public. The only thing that arouses the public is an attempt to "fix" the Army-Navy game. Minor things like troop ships breaking in two, and world wars, and ammunition goig bad, are not important. But Strabo and his cohorts went too far when they tried to bribe a West Point cadet.

There is a rather sordid "love" affair between Strabo's private secretary, who is also his mistress, and Philip Kimberley, a disillusioned ex-corporal.

The book is not particularly well written. As far as we're concerned there is entirely too much dialogue in it, and we found it difficult to tell just who was speaking. The situations and the chacters are, as we have said, far-fetched. But we still think there is enough truth in the book to make us worry a little. Who knows. Perhaps someone will try to fix our Army-Navy game.

Read this book if you want to. But don't blame us if it leaves a dirty taste in your mouth.

Your Red Cross

Editor's note: Murray E. Hill, regular contributor to this column, is away on business. During his absence Your Red Cross is being written by Ralph L. George.

In the first aid course prepared by the American Red Cross, one of the four major purposes of first aid training is to prevent accidents. Experience shows that people trained in first aid are safety conscious, and their accident rate is lower than that of untrained persons.

On a recent vacation trip covering some 2,000 miles, I had called to my attention repeated flagrant violations of some two or three basic fundamentals of safe driving, and inasmuch as your Red Cross is ever mindful of its accident prevention program let's review the following safety rules:

Speed — in 1947 speed was killer No. 1. Nearly 45 per cent of all fatalities attributed to mistakes by drivers were the direct result of driving too fast. Speed is premeditated. Many other traffic violations can be blamed on ignorance, lack of skill, but speeding is clearly a deliberate action. Accidents from over-speed are likely to occur when approaching an intersection, when going down hill, when driving after sun down, or when driving around curves.

According to recent statistics released by the travelers insurance companies in connection with the year 1947, out of 21,060 fatal accidents, 9,410 were caused by exceeding the speed limit.

Passing —unsafe passing likewise is the cause of many traffic fatalities. In driving a distance of 100 miles, you will following basic recognized safe observe many violations of the driving rules:

Never pass a car near the top of a hill.

Do not pass on a curve.

Do not pass when approaching a curve or intersection.

Do not pass on the right.

Always sound your horn when about to pass a car.

Do not cut back too soon after passing.

Night driving is three times as dangerous as driving in the daytime. During darkness there are only one third the number of drivers on the road. However, this is the time when two-thirds of all fatal accidents occur. With this fact firmly fixed in our minds, we can all take precautions that will sharply reduce fatal accidents.

The length of this column does not permit the covering of many other basic safe rules of driving. Common sense is a good antidote.

MISS AMERICA 1948 . . . Miss Beatrice (Bebe) Shopp, who competed as Miss Minnesota, sits on a springboard at Atlantic City with the trophy awarded her as queen of American beauties. The Hopkins, Minn., lass will make personal appearances in New York and other cities.

To Amuse You Today

"What happened when you were thrown out of the back exit?"

"I told the usher I belonged to a very important family."

"So what?"

"He begged my pardon, asked me in again and threw me out the front door."

"How old are you?" she asked.

"I'm twenty-four," he answered affably.

"Are you married?" she persisted.

"Not yet," he smilingly assured her.

At that moment the little girl's big sister approached; the little girl turned and said to her. "He's okay so far, Sis. Is there anything else you want to know?"

When they couldn't get girdles, the girls had to have them. Now that they can get them, they don't want them. Oh, well, that just shows you how things shape up.

Getting out this newspaper is no picnic.

If we print jokes, people say we are silly.

If we don't they say we are too serious.

If we stick close to the office all day

We ought to be around hunting material.

If we go out and try to hustle We ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't print contributions, We don't appreciate genius;

And if we do print them, the paper is filled with junk!

If we edit the other fellows' write-up we're too critical;

If we don't, we're asleep.

If we clip thingsfrom other papers,

We are too lazy to write them ourselves.

If we don't we are stuck on our own stuff.

Now, like as not, some guy will say.

We swiped this from some newspaper.

We did!

"This class," said the instructor at the Infantry School, "reminds me of Kee Hag—99 per cent of the active element has been removed from the bean."

Girl Scouts To Have Rally At Scout Cabin Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the big day for the Girl scouts. That's when they're to have their big rally. The time is 5 p.m., the place is the girl scout cabin.

There will be a bonfire ceremony, and the singing of scout songs, and a supper prepared by the Food Service School. All former scouts and all prospective scouts are invited. Parents are asked to call for their children at 7 p.m.

A meeting for training new leaders was held at the cabin last Friday. After viewing a training film, the ladies heard a brief talk by Mrs. E. J. Ricker on the aims and training of Girl Scout leaders. Mrs. Ricker has had extensive experience in Girl Scout work, and her address was enthusiastically received.

Those who have volunteered to work with the Brownies this year are Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Febure, Mrs. Van Vliet, Mrs. Mastalir, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Miller, and Mrs. Zinser.

The internediate leaders will be Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Dickerson, Mrs. Dobrosky, Mrs. Greene, Mrs. Colvin and Mrs. Joiner.

The leaders for the senior scouts have not yet been selected. There are still vacancies and volunteers will be welcome.

The girls will be assigned to troops upon registration at the rally, informed of dates of meetings, and introduced to their new leaders. Parents are urged to familiarize themselves with Girl Scout work, and to meet their children's leaders. The active participation of all parents will be appreciated.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Substituting midwest for west in Horace Greeley's famous bit of advice would be our admonition to those who are set on seeing the biggest and best gridiron battles of the 1948 season.

Out in the heart of football land, the monarchs of last year are teetering precariously on the brink of a downfall, but the question remains: "who will provide the push to topple the regal elevens of last year from their thrones."

From our seat along the sidelines, it looks like Notre Dame, even with the entrails of last year's backfield removed and two big forward motors missing, is a pretty good bet to extend its undefeated span of 18 games throughout another campaign, and the Wolverines of Michigan, deprived of last year's ball handling magicians, still outclass other teams on their schedule.

However, our seismograph records two major disturbances out Big Nine way.

The potentialities of Purdue as a Big Nine challenger are nothing to be sneered at. Starting his second fall along the Wabash, stubborn Stu Holcomb, who taught the remnants of a hapless 1946 squad how to gain an even split in six conference skirmishes last year, will take off with 17 lettermen of last year plus the best lineup of sophomore reserves in the Big Nine expanse.

The other tremors that might shake up the championship designs of the Irish and Wolverines are coming from up in the Northlands where Minnesota's mighty Gophers are expected to go on the victory march again this year. The Golden Gophers, who have been undergoing a state of somnolence for the past six years, appear to be strongest team in the Big Nine ranks in the line departments.

For championship purposes, however, Coach Bernie Bierman must beat the brush in an effort to back up his powerhouse line with a big, hard-blocking wingback and a smashing fullback. If Bierman can round up these backfield sparks, Minnesota might come out with a fiery aggregation comparable to those which enabled the Gophers to top the roster of Big Nine elevens six times in eight years.

Although they aren't being considered as strong as Minnesota and Purdue, the Badgers of Wisconsin top our list of darkhorses in the Big Nine race. And, their title-tilting possibilities lie largely in the untested abilities of a brilliant group of sophomores, Henry Stuhldreher, who is starting his 13th season as Badger boss, has at least one veteran for every position on the squad.

The Wildcats of Northwestern won't have their claws in the championship pie, but, by mid-November, we'll wager that every team in the conference will be painfully aware that young Robert Voigts' wearers of the purple are capable of upsetting some highly-touted apple carts. Just where will the Wildcats figure in the final conference standings? We would say no worse than fifth.

Out at Iowa City, Ia., Dr. Eddie Anderson still is carrying on a reconstruction program, and Hawkeye enthusiasts might as well prepare for a season no sweeter in victory plums than 1947 when two conference kilings went on record. Although the Hawkeyes are carrying some seasoned vets on their squad, Dr. Anderson might risk some sophomore stumbles and bumbles in his quest for that priceless ingredient---speed.

The prospects at Ohio State this year look very little, if any, brighter than last year when the Buckeyes finished a lone last in conference play for the first time in 35 years of Big Nine history. It seems rather strange to think of Ohio State in terms other than those of a first-division team, but it looks like Wesley Fesler is headed for another dismal season.

Despite a scant supply of coaching talent inherited from Uncle Bo McMillan, and the bequest of two great players, George Taliaferro and John Goldsberry, the cream and crimson pennants of Indiana are flying well below half-mast for the conference race.

A gruelling slate will be the big hitch in Michigan State plans to fly the green and white at the top of the conference colors. Last year, most of the Spartan damage was done on the ground, and spectators can expect to see very few aerial fireworks in recently enlarged Macklin field again this year. Should Coach Clarence Munn emerge from the slate which includes tiffs with Notre Dame, Penn State and Michigan with no worse than the seven-two record compiled by the Spartans last year, he undoubtedly will be voted East Lansing's No. 1 citizen.

Bullet Eleven Drops Thriller to Bengal

BY BOB PHILLIP

A 26-12 score, favoring the Golden Tigers of Tuskegee institute, Ala., was anything but indicative of the terrific pigskin battle waged by Coach Thomas L. Delton's high-spirited Benning Bullets on the gridiron of the Alabama school last Saturday.

For, 60 full minutes, the pregame underdogs gave the bewildered collegians the fight of their lives before a packed stadium of student, alumnt and soldier spectators.

The Tigers, who had high expectations of breezing past the Bullets with little difficulty, met with stiffer opposition than they had anticipated as the soldier eleven turned in brilliant performances in the blocking, tackling, passing and running departments.

Displaying an array of fleet-footed backs and a big, fast charging forward wall, the Bullet gridsters were a constant threat to the powerful collegiate aggregation, and forced Coach Cleve Abbot of the Bengals to draw from his reserve strength frequently.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Tigers struck pay dirt in the second period when hard - running Fred Dickerson reeled off a 25-yard run to score. The try for the extra point was good, and the Alabamans held a 7-0 margin.

A few minutes later, however, the Bullets' leaping fullback, Windy Hammond, flipped a pass to Floyd Knight, who gathered it in on his own 40-yard stripe, shook off three would-be tacklers and raced 60 yards to put the Bullets in the scoring column. Failure to convert left the soldier crew one point short of the Tigers.

With Dickerson and Sweeny alternating, the Tigers moved down to the five-yard marker in Bullet territory, but the soldier linemen braced themselves and became as impregnable as a stone wall. After four fruitless efforts to crack the Bullet defenses, the Bengals were forced to hand over the pigskin. Instrumental in holding the Tigers at bay were Jeff White, Odell Kennedy, Mat Batie, Doc Garvin, Bob Murphy, Roland Russell and Ben Ashford.

Holding a scant 7-6 lead at the half, the Tigers quickly picked up two more touchdowns in the third quarter when Danzy recovered a Bullet fumble on the goal line, and Bob Knight plunged over from the eight-yard marker after Jimmie Fulgham had engineered a 50-yard dash downfield.

The Bulletmen came to life again when pint - sized Ernest Sims, Horace Northcutt, Bill Beasley and Phil Tindrell pooled their resourses to move the oval down to the Tuskegee 45-yard stripe. A lateral pass from Hamond to Russell was finally tucked under the arms of high-stepping Northcutt, who fought his way to the 15-yard line before being dropped. Hudie Langston, a replacement for Sims, then took the ball and faded to pass. Changing his mind, the hard-driving ball-carrier squirmed through Tiger defenses to get down to within one yard of the double stripe from where line plunging Hammond ploughed through for the score. Again the try for an extra point went on the rocks, and the Bullets trailed the Bengals by 20-12.

The final Tuskegee scoring came in the fourth period with only seconds to play remaining. With the ball deep in Bullet territory, the Tigers clicked off a pass from Taylor to Sweeny to move down to the 20-yard mark. Sweeny then slipped over right tackle for a 12-yard gain. Dickerson hit the line hard for the remaining yardage, but the conversion attempt went wide as the final whistle sounded, ending one of the best Tiger-Bullet gridiron scraps in history.

Bullets to Meet Columbus Crew

Hoping to iron out some of the mistakes and weaknesses detected in last week's encounter with the Tuskegee, Ala., Tigers, Coach Thomas Delton has been putting his Bullet charges through explosive grid workouts in prepration for their engagement with the highly-touted Columbus Buffaloes at Memorial stadium Saturday night.

Stressing blocking, passing and both offensive and defensive flank work, the Bullet crew has shown considerable improvement since dropping their inaugural fray to the Alabama collegians last Saturday.

Veteran ends Freddie Hamer, Ben Ashford, and Floyd Knight have been shaping up well in their assignments, and the outposts have been reinforced with the addition of Andy Hardy and Gene Thomas, both of whom have made strides in flank coverage.

In three previous clashes of years past, the Buffaloes have failed to chalk up a victory over the soldier aggregation. But, with a line averaging about 190 pounds and a speedy crop of big backs, the Columbus eleven will be nursing high hopes of registering their first victory over the Bullet squad.

Among special events planned to enliven the half-time full Saturday night will be a drill demonstration staged by a hand-picked squad of soldiers from Company G of the 25th Infantry regiment.

World Series Veteran

Babe Ruth, the sultan of swat, played in the most world series. The Babe participated in ten of them. However, Frankie Frisch played in the most world series games, fifty. Ruth payed in only 41 games, because in two series he was used chiefly as a pitcher, and then in his last three series with the Yankees, he helped them win four straight.

Sightless Strokers

Two blind golfers, Clinton Russell of Duluth, Minn., and Charley Boswell of Birmingham Ala., broke 100 in the opening round of the international blind golfers' tournament at Detroit, Mich., recently. Russell, the defending champ, fired a 98, one stroke less than Boswell, a former Alabama football star.

Quintet of TKO's Tallied by Boxers

Fast action was the keynote of fights held in the Airborne battalion ring last Friday night with a seven-bout card resulting in five technical knockouts and two decisions.

In the card opener, Felix Redonde of Company C launched a two-fisted attack on Woodrow Wallace of Company G, and, after one minute and 20 seconds of the second round, forced Wallar to accept the towel.

The TKO route was taken again in the second contest of the evening by Ralph Duran of Company F when his opponent, George Elliott, failed to report for the second round's opening gong. Elliott's licking, however, was attributed largely to a strained ankle which started giving the game scrapper trouble at the outset of the fight.

Dale Woods came down from Company I of the 504th Parachute Infantry to try his hand at stopping Gene Spraggins of Company F, but his designs backfired. After being belted around for most of the first period, Woods took the towel from his second to bring the fracas to a close.

A trick knee kept Alan Casey of Company A from coming out for the third round of his battle with Bill Coles of Company G, and the TKO verdict went to Coles. Casey recently underwent a period of hospitilization and thought he was in condition to enter the ring. However, he tossed the bout over to Coles after his knee started swelling during the second round.

In the fifth contest, Bobby Lewis, the pride of Company C, started hammering on Company G's Francis Janik at the opening bell, and, after one minute and eight seconds of the second period, had wrapped himself up a TKO victory.

The next two bouts went three rounds each with Bob Prock from Company E outfighting Frank Hagey, another visitor from the 504th, and Joe Turner taking John Stanton down the line to win the feature event in the same fashion. At one time during the fight, Stanton was knocked through the ropes, but scrambled back into the ring to finish the fight and win the acclaim of the fans.

Following the program, a sportsmanship and ability trophy was awarded Turner by the judges and referee.

Medic Boxers Start Training

For the first time in intra-mural boxing history at Fort Benning the Station hospital will have a complete team entry when post leather-pushers launch their bids for laurels in October.

Training sessions for the gloves aspirants will be held in the hospital's physical reconditioning gymnasium, and will be under the supervision of Paul Pappas, former amateur ring warrior.

Present indications are that the hospital scrappers will be about two deep in each of the eight weight divisions, and the squad will include boxers from both sections of the 3440th Army Service unit supplying the medical installation with personnel.

In addition to his amateur experience as a golden glover in Canton, O. in 1946, Pappas tutored a boxing team at Fort Jackson, S. C., which won the championship for the 10th battalion of the Fifth Infantry regiment.

Smith Sparkles As Infantrymen Blank Baconton

Although his mound assignments usually consist of relief stints, Horace Smith proved his ability as a starter last Saturday by hurling five innings of hitless ball as the 25th Infantrymen scored a rousing 14-0 triumph over the Tigers of Baconton, Ga.

The win was the fifth against four losses for the hard-chucking right-hander, who allowed no Tiger runner to reach second during his five-stanza tour of duty.

To back up Smith's mound performance, the infantrymen tagged Tiger hurlers Jimmie Mormon and Fred Ross for 15 base blows.

The slugging 25th nine got off to a one-run lead in the first, and added four counters each in the third, fourth and fifth frames. The final soldier tally came in the seventh.

During the game, which was called at the end of eight innings because of darkness, infantry players toyed with the Bacontonians by frequent changing of positions.

Pounding out four hits in five trips to the plate, Hirron Collier copped batting laurels for the contest. He was followed in the lumber-swinging department by Wise with two for two, Carmichael and Miles with two for three and Jones with two for four.

After completely handcuffing the Tigers for the first five frames, Smith was replaced on the hill by Larry Miles, who yielded the losers three safeties.

POSTS ACE . . . Capt. Earl Keaton realized the golfer's fondest dream last week when he stroked a hole-in-one on on the No. 14 stretch of the Officers' club course, Keaton, who used a No. 2 iron in turning in the feat, is the third golfer this year to chalk up an ace at the local course. Other holes-in-one in 1948 have been recorded by Col. Frank Ward and Capt. F. C. Thompson.

ARM-CHAIR STRATEGISTS MAY MEASURE PROWESS

Self-styled football authorities of the post will have a chance to test their gridiron I. Q. when the service clubs launch a pick-the-winner program next week.

Present plans are to make the ballots available in the service clubs each Sunday, and to give the contestants four days to make their selections for the following Saturday's national collegiate grid contests. The deadline for submitting the filled-in blanks has been set for each Thursday noon.

Prizes for the top guessers each week will be provided by the clubs.

In making the selections, contestants will be required not only to name the winners, but must chance a guess at the scores compiled by each team. The week's winner will be decided by comparing the scores actually chalked up by the squads listed with those put down by the contestant.

Tallying of the ballots will be accomplished by a board of five judges, who will be given the blanks after boxes at the clubs have been cleaned out each Thursday. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be made.

Bowling Circuit Slated to Start Here in October

Post bowling enthusiasts have started brushing the summer's dust off their shoes in preparation for the 1948-49 battalion-level bowling league which gets underway on the main post alleys early in October.

Deadline for team entries in the circuit, which will continue until Jan. 15, has been set for Monday, and must be submitted to the post athletic officer. After all entries have been received, the schedule for the first round of matches will be drawn up and published.

In submitting entries, units are reminded that a team must consist of not less than five and not more than eight players. Team rosters, which are due in the athletic office prior to Sept. 24, are to include only players who are members of the organization they are to represent.

Play in the league will be under the round robin system with each team entered slated to bowl at least one match against each other squad. Matches will consist of three games.

At the close of the season, the team with the highest pin fall will be declared the post champion, and awards will be presented to members of the winner and runner up groups. Should the league result in a tie, a five-game match will be played to determine the championship.

In addition to the individual awards, the Infantry center bowling plaque will be presented for a one-year tenure to the team with the highest total of pins.

Daredevil Racers Invade Columbus Speedway Sunday

A field of about 20 of the nation's outstanding riders of the roaring road were assembling in Columbus today for the first annual big car championship auto races to be held in this section of Georgia.

The list of entrants was headed by Delbert (Deb) Snyder, dapper Kent, O., daredevil who at present is leading on points for the national dirt track championship awarded annually by the International Motor Contest association.

Frankie Luptow of Detroit in second place in the national standings also was entered. Luptow, who has beaten Snyder four times in 11 tarts this season, hoped to narrow the margin between the two in the races here.

Bobby Grim, at 24, the youngest of big time dirt track drivers, and Wayne (Pop) Wright, at 53, the oldest active driver, also were entered. Grim, of Indianapolis, holds two victories over Snyder and, with his Offenhauser, is rated as one of the top riders of the dirt speedways. Wright will be driving his Erma Special, named for his wife, with which he has been a front-runner most of the 1948 season.

There is a distinct possibility that a new world record for a semi-banked half-mile track might be established in the seven-event, sprint-type racing program.

The present world record is 23.65 seconds, held by Emory Collins of LeMars, Ia., and set on the Minnesota State fair oval at St. Paul in 1941. But no less an authority than Fonty Flock of Atlanta, national stock car driving champion of 1947, has said that a racing car can turn the track here in less than 24 seconds. Flock, in a stock car, has been clocked at a little more than 28 seconds on the lightning-fast oval.

The seven-event program gets underway with time trials at 1:30 p.m., and the first competitive event is scheduled for 2:30.

Third Platoon Squad Wins Volleyball Game

In an intra-battalion vollyball game last Thursday night, the Third platoon, Third company, 325th Training battalion (provisional) romped over the First platoon to the tune of 15-8.

Charles Moyer headed the Third platoon's scoring roster by chalking up five tallies, while David Carver notched four counters for the winners. The losers' scoring was paced by Grab, who accounted for three of his team's counters.

Joe Smith Tops Roster Of Doughboy Clubbers

Joe Smith, veteran outfielder who brought several seasons of major and minor league diamond experience with him to Fort Benning last spring, closed out the 1948 Doughboy season by heading the list of local stick experts with a healthy .361 average for the 20 tilts in which he saw service.

The fleet-footed center gardener, whose tour of duty with pro clubs includes Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, the Birmingham Barons of the Southern association and the Macon Peaches of the Sally League, also led the Dough nine in doubles, homeruns and runs batted in. Smith's column for these departments shows six two-baggers, four circuit clouts and 28 tallies knocked across the platter.

Smith, who started his ball-playing this year as third-base patroller for the post champion Infantry School detachment Profs of Benning's intra-mural league, was switched to his old spot in the outer expanses by Manager Herb Bench when the Doughboys embarked on their 1948 slate in July. Although his stint in the hot corner left its mark with intra-mural team managers, Smith's showing in the outfield far overshadowed his performance around the third sack.

Deadlocked with Smith for three-base-hit honors was his closest contender for the batting crown, infielder Paul Bonair, who was obliged to leave the Doughs before the close of the season because of separation from the service. Both Bonair and Smith chalked up three trip-les, while Bonair's macing mean for the season was .354 for 16 games.

Bob Kinard, secondsacker, who was the only Doughboy diamondman to see duty in all of the 22 Benning encounters this year, was tied with Smith for the most base hits with 30, and was the only other Dough who played in the majority of the team's contests to pass the .300 mark in batting. His seasonal mean has been computed at .323.

In the base-stealing department, the pace was set by Woody Burt, speedy rightfielder, who copped seven sacks for the campaign. Burt also narrowly missed completing a perfect season in the field by bobbing a couple of chances in the Dough curtain closer with the post league all-stars.

Burt also shared run-getting honors with his outfield colleague, Bill Brooks, by crossing the dish on 22 occasions.

Although Smith, Bonair and Kinard were the only three steady Dough players to breeze past the .300 mark in clubbing, several pitchers and part-time diamondmen inscribed their names on the rolls of the "300 club" this year.

At the very top of the hitting roster is pitcher Larry Hall, who got three safeties in five appearances to chalk up a .600 average. Others who crawled in under the wire were utility man Len Carney with .429, pitcher Ken Watts with .400 and pitcher Collis (Letty) Lehner with .316.

The largest number of putouts this year was recorded by flashy first-sacker Herb Lauve, who sent 170 opposing batsmen back to the dugout.

Twelve Recruits Learn, Earn All At Same Time

If the rifle is still considered a "soldier's best friend," 12 recruits of the 325th Infantry training battalion have yet another reason to fondle their shooting irons with loving caresses.

Most of the recruits had never seen, let alone fired, an M-1 rifle before they started their basic training here last month, but on their first trip to the range they set some records that a lot of old-timers might envy. But they not only picked up some good scores, they also picked up $220 in U. S. savings bonds for being the "hot shots" of the first four companies to fire.

Prizes of a $25 bond for the top man in each company, two $10 bonds for the second scorer and a $10 bond for the third man in each company were authorized.

In the First company, high man was Ernest Staub, with 187 out of a possible 200. In second place was Lyle W. Althouse with 185, and in third, with 180, was Richard F. Tatrone.

Richard R. Spence was high, with 180, in the Third company, followed by Billy Martin with 174 and Frank Maynard, Jr., with 173.

The Second company's Olie M. Erickson, with 185, took first place in his unit. He was trailed by Raymond Earl, with 180, and Daniel T. Murtha who fired 173.

Leading shot of Fourth company, with 179, was Robert R. Ivone. In second place was Jack DaSilva, with 176, and in third with 175, was Francis K. Kane.

After Fifth company fires this week, squad scores for the battalion will be totaled, and the highest squad in each company will get two free Saturdays off instead of only a half day. In case of a tie both squads will get the extra holiday. The best scoring platoon in each company will also be given an entire Saturday off.

Winter Uniforms Optional Off-Duty Through October

Winter uniforms may be worn by Fort Benning troops during off duty hours from Oct. 1-31, it has been announced by Infantry Center officials.

During duty hours, however the chief of staff will prescribe the uniform to be worn by personnel assigned to duty with headquarters of the Infantry Center. The assistant commandant will determine the uniform for soldiers assigned to the Academic department, and unit commanders will determine the duty hour uniforms for their organizations.

Beginning Nov. 1, the winter uniform, OD's, will be the only authorized uniform for Fort Benning personnel.

Assigned To Duty In Tank Battalion

Second Lt. Albert E. Lovington, recent Armor School graduate, has been assigned duty with the 756th Heavy Tank battalion.

With the Third Infantry division during the war, Lieutenant Lovington served with the division until February, 1945, when he transferred to SHAEF.

After being discharged in August, 1945, he entered the University of Arizona, receiving his commission upon graduation in January of this year. He returned to active duty last June, to attend the Armored School at Fort Knox, Ky.

Hallden Named Billeting Officer

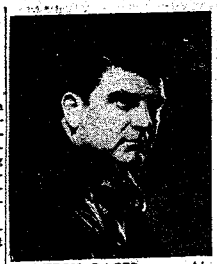
A veteran of Pacific warfare, he served with the 106th Infantry of the 27th division in the South Pacific. He joined the 106th, then a national guard unit, in October, 1940, at Albany, N. Y.



With the 106th throughout the war, Major Hallden participated in amphibious operations and beachhead landings at Kwajalien, Eniwetok, Saipan and Okinawa. He commanded a company during the landing on Kwajalien. During the battle on Saipan he wound up commanding a battalion executive officer on Okinawa, and later became commander of the Third battalion of the 106th.

After his return from overseas in September, 1945, he was assigned to Fort Sheridan, Ill.

STR Announces Four New Duty Assignments

Four new duty assignments in the Student Training regiment were announced last week.

They include Lt. Col. Roland E. Murphy, who succeeds Lt. Col. Shields Warren as executive officer and Maj. Elmer J. Ricker, who succeeds Maj. James S. Short as S-3. Maj. William C. Beachler was assigned to duties as S-3, and Maj. Ralph J. Rashid has taken Major Beachler's place as S-1.

Classes Begin At TIS

Colonel Woodruff is a graduate of the United States Military academy, West Point, N. Y., with the class of 1933. He served with tank destroyer units in 1942 and 1943, and went overseas in 1944 as commander of the 405th Infantry regiment. While in Europe, he participated in the Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns.

Following the end of the war, Colonel Woodruff was on occupation duty in Germany with the constabulary.

The colonel arrived at Fort Benning in April, 1947, and was appointed assistant G-1. Prior to taking command of the Student Training regiment, he was Infantry Center billeting officer.

He is a graduate of the Tank Destroyer School, Chemical Warfare School and Infantry School. His decorations include the Bronze Star medal with two oak leaf clusters, Russian Order of the Patriotic War, Combat Infantryman's badge, Distinguished Unit badge, World War II Victory medal, American Occupation ribbon with German clasp, ETO ribbon and American Defense ribbon.

Unit Awarded 4 Streamers

Four battle streamers, emblematic of battle participation in Europe, will be presented to the 999th Field Artillery battalion by Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, in a parade Saturday at 11:15 a. m. at Stilwell field.

Troops of the 999th and the Second battalion of the 25th Infantry regiment will combine forces in the formal ceremony.

One of the outstanding comat units of the war, the 999th which served most of its time with the 15th Corps Artillery in the European theater, was cited for the campaigns at Rhineland, Normandy, Central Europe and Northern France.

After 18 months overseas, the 999th was deactivated, and was reactivated ere in May 1946.

Training Unit's Second Company Wins Guidon

In the weekly formal parade and review of the 325th Infantry Training battalion last Saturday, a streamer for making the best showing was won by the Second company.

The award for the best mess in the battalion was won by the First company. There was no contest for the best platoon and company on the weekly inspection of quarters as the first four companies were firing on the range all week.

Europeans, Asiatics Rub Elbows

If there are times when the Infantry School building looks as if it might be the headquarters of a foreign legion, or sounds like a meeting of the United Nations, startled bystanders need only be reminded that it's probably a break between classes and that the strange looking officers are "guest" students from 21 foreign countries.

Attending eight different courses at the Infantry School this year are officers and enlisted men from foreign countries ranging from Korea to the Union of South Africa. Korea and the Philippines, with six students each, have the largest representation, followed by Argentina which sent seven top flight officers and enlisted men to Fort Benning for the fall session.

Other nations represented in the polyglot classes include Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, China, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Greece, Great Britain, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Peru, Switzerland, Turkey, Union of South Africa, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Most of the foreign students are enrolled in the advanced courses, with 16 in advanced officers' course No. 2, 12 in advanced officers' course No. 1 and six in associate advanced No. 1. There are five in associate basic officers course No. 1, one in associate basic officers' course No. 7, five in the infantry officers' communications couse No. 1 and one in basic airborne course No. 25-A. Enrolled in basic airborne course No. 1 are three officers and two enlisted men.

Six Korean officers are enrolled in advanced officers' course No. 1. They are Lt. Cols. Chang Kuk Chang, Tong Yung Kim, Han Lim Lee, Ki Sik Min and Sun Ha Yim and Col. Heung Koon Lee. Also in this class are Maj. Karl Erny, Switzerland; Lt. Col. Siang Lin, China; Maj. James Scott, Great Britain, and Capt. Alp Arslan Turckesh and Lts. Mehmet Fatih Ozsu and Kenan Surgit, Trukey.

The Philippines sent the largest delegation of foreign students enrolled in advanced officers' course No. 1. They are Majs. Mamerto Z. Hautista, Lucas V. Cauton, Ceferino R. Galvez and Felix S. Maniego and Capt. Salvador T. Piccio. From Mexico came Maj. Rodolfo A. Garcia and Lt. Jesus G. Castro. Ecuador is represented by Capt. Jaime A. Garcia and Capt. Felix F. Solis. Maj. Arthur H. Three Greeks are in associate advanced officers' course No. 1. They are Capts, Eleftherios E. Damvakakis, Oswald E. Fabrikezis and Constantin S. Golias. In this class also are Capt. Arturo R. Espaillat, the Dominican Republic; Capt. Antonio M. Kebreau, Haiti, and Capt. Raul H. Mernies, Uruguay.

Deltagram to Management:

HAVE YOU GOT YOUR FINGER ON THE PULSE OF YOUR MARKET?

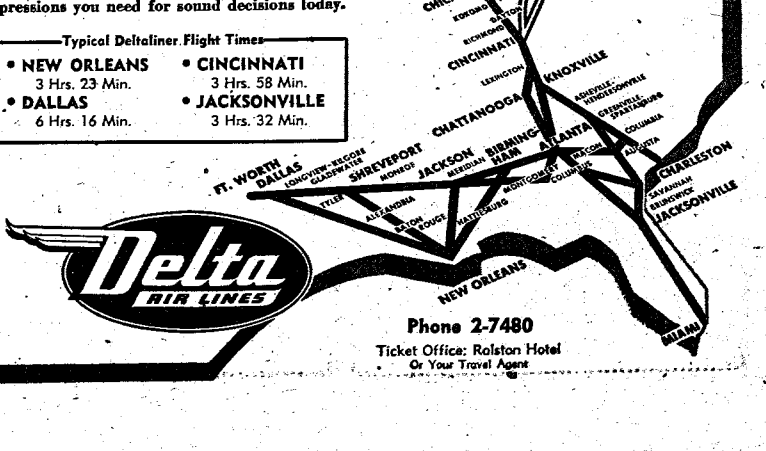
If you're the boss, how long has it been since you called on your customers 200 or 500 or 1,000 miles away?

Customers like to see the boss, no matter how often your salesmen call. Your men like to see you in the field, too.

Can't spare the time?

You can when you travel by air. Get away from office routine . . . gain a new perspective on sales . . . check the pulse of your market.

You can give your territory a thorough physical check-up quickly, easily and economically on Delta. A 200-mile trip takes only the time required for lunch; a 1,000-mile round trip in a day is neither unusual nor tiring.



By flying Delta, you can cover a state or the entire South with a minimum time away from home. And you'll return with the first-hand facts and fresh impressions you need for sound decisions today.

Typical Deltaliner Flight Times

• DALLAS 6 Hrs. 16 Min.	• JACKSONVILLE 3 Hrs. 32 Min.

TO SALES MANAGERS: Have you estimated how flying could expand your sales with no added personnel? You may have a far greater sales potential than you realize. If you have not considered this way to cut travel time and increase calls per man. Delta will be glad to help you study how flying might fit your sales program.

TO SALESMEN: If you have a big territory, ask your sales manager about covering it by air. You can make more calls in more cities than by using surface travel these days. Chart your distant prospects, call or write for Delta's latest flight schedules and outline to the boss how you could step up your calls.

FLOWER SHOP REOPENS IN MAIN POST EXCHANGE

After a two-month suspension of activity, the Flower shop, located in the soda shop at the Main exchange, has resumed activity; and now offers flowers for all occasions.

An activity of the post exchange, the Flower shop, managed by Mrs. Mary M. Spivey, is open daily, Monday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Although closed on Sundays, the shop will deliver flowers to NCO clubs, officers' clubs, chapels, or for private parties. Flowers will be arranged at all functions to suit the occasions.

With better service at lower prices to Fort Benning personnel as its aim, the Flower shop offers extra services for weddings. Flowers can also be telegraphed to almost any point desired.

Plans for any event which call for flowers can be discussed with the manager of the shop beforehand. If so desired Mrs. Spivey will plan, direct, decorate and handle all the details without extra charge.

Special rates are offered each week-end, at which time prices are greatly reduced, according to Mrs. Spivey.

Balloon Ascends To 112,800 Feet

The Air Weather Service detachment at Clinton county air force base, Wilmington, Ohio, has tracked a balloon carrying weather appratus (radiosonde) at a height of 112,800 feet.

Capt. Lawrence E. Robertson, of Negaunee, Mich., commanding officer of the Radiosonde section there, reported the crew assigned to the ascension had tracked the balloon on radar scopes and recorded its transmissions until it burst upon reaching an altitude of 112,800 feet. Captain Robertson said only one other higher weather balloon ascension had been recorded, that one being 120,000 feet at the White Sands, N. Mex., weather station.

Members of the crew on duty when the 112,800-foot ascension was made were Sergeant James S. Hutchinson, Wheeling, West Virginia, radar tracker; Sergeant Joseph P. Stefanowicz, Warren, Ohio, recorder; Sergeant Charles A. Pritchard, New Cumerland, West Virginia, and Corporal Clayton G. Bishoff, Lineville, Pennsylvania, plotters.

Weather balloon ascensions are made every four hours at every one of 20 air force weather stations, and the balloon carries aloft with it a radio transmitter which sends signals to a ground recorder. Temperature, humidity, and pressure readings are recorded at various heights. This information, sent in code, is mechanically entered in another piece of equipment on the ground which de-codes the information and automatically records it on paper. Wind directions are noted at various levels and recorded.

The A. W. S. detachment at the All-Weather Flying Center serves that entire area and transmits its report to weather stations throughout the United States. The nearest weather station of similar nature is at Chanute air force base, Ranoul, Ill.

M-Day Striking Force Posts Allotted to ORC

The organized reserve was given an important role by the army in plans announced today for further organization of an M-Day mobile striking force.

Many reserve officers are receiving mobilization assignments in organized reserve units in which they will be prepared to serve in the event of military emergency. Such units will be designated as elements of the proposed striking force.

In general, mobilization assignments will be given reservists in units supporting combat divisions of the M-Day force. In other instances, assignments will be made to training units especially organized to train officers according to their military specialties. Where assignments of this nature are prohibited by geographical residence of the individual officer, assignments may be made to authorized governmental agencies necessary for national defense, or to posts, camps and stations near their homes.

The plan will give the maximum possible number of reservists definite assignments in keeping with their military and civilian qualifications and will enable rapid mobilization of striking force units should the need arise.

Responsibility for mobilization assignments of all reserve officers on extended active duty and others whose assignments are controlled by the Department of the Army has been delegated to the director of personnel and administration. Commanding generals of area commands are engaged in giving mobilization assignments to members of the Officers Reserve corps not on extended active duty or otherwise not under Department of the Army control. These include reserve officers now holding enlisted grades or warrant officer appointments in the regular army.

Assignment vacancies exist in units of all branches of service, including armored, cavalry, coast artillery, field artillery, engineers, Medical department, Signal corps, Quartermaster corps, ordnance, and intelligence.

The army preparedness plan calls for mobilization assignments to be reviewed annually and for reassignments to be made if necessary, to maintain the program at top-level efficiency.

An active reserve officer entering on extended active duty will be relieved of any current mobilization assignment to accept that for which he is called to extended duty, and his old assignment will be filled by another appointment.

A reserve officer will be notified promptly upon being given a mobilization assignment. It was emphasized that such assignments for active reserve officers are in no way to be considered as active duty assignments except in the event of emergency mobilization of the armed forces.

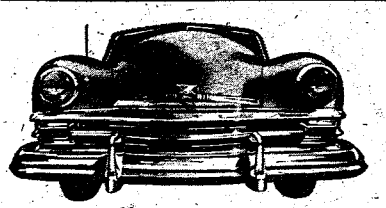
Dam Going Up On Upatoi Creek

Construction of the new dam on Upatoi creek, to be used in training troops in combat stream crossings, has been progressing rapidly, with the structure expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Located about one-half mile upstream from the filter plant, the new dam is on the same site that has been used in the past for training troops in stream crossings, but it now gives the Infantry Center a permanent training site.



Money for the dam was appropriated in June, 1940, at the request of the Tactical section of the Academic department. Construction of the dam, which began about three weeks ago, will cost approximately $42,000.

The new undertaking will not only provide a dam, but a paved highway over the dam as a connecting link for transportation.

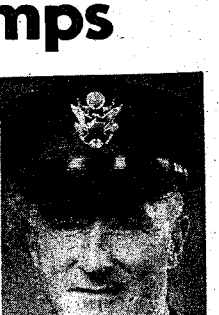
Benning to Open 2 Trailer Camps

Plan Rehabilitation Of Outlying Areas

Construction of two trailer camps to alleviate further the housing situation at Fort Benning began this week with the clearing of land in the Harmony church area, it was revealed Monday by Infantry School officials.

At the same time it was also announced that an approximately one million-dollar rebuilding and rehabilitation program in the Harmony church and Sand hill areas is under way.



Although work began Monday in the Harmony church area for the trailer camps, no date has been set for the completion of the project, nor has a definite rental fee been determined.

One of the camps will be for enlisted men, the other for officers, with the former receiving first priorities. It is contemplated that both areas can be expanded should the need for additional space arise. Occupants of the camps will be expected to supply their own trailers, but the post will arrange for the necessary utilities and facilities. This will include, water, electricity and other necessities. It is contemplated that each trailer will have its own plumbing and sewage disposal. A launderette is also contemplated for the new housing projects.

The trailer camp is to provide more housing at reasonable rentals for enlisted men and officers expected here with the possible expansion of the army and for those now stationed here who have been having a difficult time finding suitable quarters at reasonable rates.

The rebuilding and rehabilitation program at Sand Hill and Harmony church has been undertaken also to provide for troop quartering areas that may be needed because of the contemplated expansion of the army. Infantry Center officials said that this program not only includes repair and renovation of barracks, but calls for rehabilitation of roads, service clubs and the now-unused field house in the area.

Work in both areas is being done by personnel stationed at Fort Benning and is under the supervision of G-4 and post engineer officers. It was emphasized that both projects are still somewhat in the formative stages and definite information of completion of the projects cannot be available for some time. They said, however, that details will be made public as soon as possible.

War Games Begin For 510 Students

With the postponement of the scheduled opening of "Operations Combine III" slated Sept. 27 at Elgin field, Fla., the vast air-ground maneuver will begin its first phase here today with the Infantry School's demonstration for 510 Air university students from Maxwell field, Ala.

Postponed due to the recent hurricane and forecast of bad weather, the official opening of "Operations Combine III" at Eglin field has been pushed up to Oct. 4, but the first infantry phase of the maneuver scheduled today will go on as planned.

During the air-ground exercize, Fort Benning will play host to students from top schools of all branches of the service in four phases of infantry demonstrations staged in conjunction with Operations Combine.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m. the Air university students, who arrived here Wednesday, will witness a demonstration of infantry fire power until 11:30 a.m. From 2 p.m. until 4 p.m., the Maxwell field group will observe the problem of a battalion in defense. They leave the post shortly thereafter.

The airmen are the first of four groups slated to visit Fort Benning during the exercise. Approximately 175 Armed Forces Staff college students will arrive Oct. 6 for the next phase, followed by 500 students from the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

About 70 students from the Canadian Army Staff college will come here Nov. 6 to view the last Infantry School demonstration for Operations Combine.

Directed by the Ninth air force and the Infantry School, the realistic exercises are designed to school the 3,500 students from various schools in the latest techniques of air-ground combat.

Maj. Gen. William D. Old, commander of the Ninth air force and director of "Operations Combine III," has stated that the full scale rehearsals held at Eglin field the past two weeks have indicated that it was possible to condense the three afternoon fire power demonstrations originally planned into a concentrated one-half day exercise.

As presently planned, the fire power demonstrations, consisting of bombing runs, rockets and strafing attacks, a paratroop drop and tank attacks, will climax each Wednesdy fternoon at Eglin field.

In addition to the students, some 600 army, navy, marine and air force observers will witness the demonstrations.

Weapons Display Seen This Week In Memphis

Residents of the Mississippi river metropolis of Memphis who ordinarily wouldn't know a mukluk from a sack of cement are getting a chance this week to see some of the latest army equipment as demonstrated by 11 men from Fort Benning.

The mukluks and a lot of other strange and not-so-strange pieces of army equipment, as well as a huge display of weapons, are being exhibited by the Benning group as one of the feature attractions of the Mid-South Fair being held in Memphis this week.

According to Maj. Llewelyn D. Shaw, Benning recruiting officer who is in charge of the display which has been on exhibit all this week, the 78-by-18-foot steel-frame tent is filled with an exceptionally complete exhibit of the latest tools of war employed by the infantry of today's modern army.

Included in the exhibits are nearly every weapon used by the doughboys, from pistols and rifles and machine guns to 57 and 75 mm recoiless rifles. There are also displays of airborne, signal, quartermaster and other equipment.

One sure-fire drawing card is expected to be the dislay of Arctic equipment, including the mukluks. These are a type of boot originally developed by the eskimos for the sole purpose of keeping the feet warm in the far north. They are a cloth boot, rubbersoled, and worn over successive layers of socks. One part of the display is a dummy, fully-clothed in an Arctic uniform.

World War II veterans visiting the fair, especially those with memories of C and K rations, are getting their eyes filled with a display of much more appetizing fare. Part of the exhibit includes the new rations, K-2 and cacies as ham and lima beans, canned bread and other palatable foods.

The 11 Fort Benning soldiers are on duty both day and night, for the tent is floodlit during the evening hours. They are also showing the latest movies released by the Department of the Amy for civilian viewing.

105 Find Homes Through Branch Billeting Office

In the first 30 days of operation the downtown billeting office of Fort Benning, located in the Columbus Chamber of Commerce office in the Ralston hotel, placed 105 families in houses and apartments, according to Maj. Charles H. Hallden, Infantry Center billeting officer.

The office was established in Columbus as an additional aid in finding quarters for Fort Benning personnel unable to get housing on the post. The branch billeting office has coordinated in the downtown area, as much as possible the available property for rent in the Columbus area, Association of Columbus and who have houses, apartments or rooms to rent, Major Hallden said.

The listings are set up with detailed information on each place, and are further checked by Capt. Joseph Bierner of the branch billeting office for location, price and general condition.

Miss Vera Mullins interviews all army personnel in detail to assist them to the fullest extent. Consideration is given to their needs, ability to pay, transportation requirements, location of schools and the general benefit of listed houses, apartments and rooms.

Benning personnel interested in this service can call the office at Col. 3-3041, Major Hallden said.

What Are The Army's Plans?

1--Is the selectee going to be "kicked around?"

The army treats its members fairly and justly, and will not condone any form of mistreatment or injustice. Rather, the army endeavors to develop a trained and alert soldier who will be an asset to the army and to the community.

2--Will his morale suffer?

The army realizes that it has an obligation to the parents of the youthful soldier—as well as to the soldier himself—to provide wholesome influences. In carrying out this responsibility, the army plans to initiate a character guidance program which will require the establishment of a character guidance council at each installation for the purpose of assisting the commander in problems of a moral character. (Such a council has been established here under the chairmanship of Col. Daniel P. Buckland.)

3--Will the regimentation and discipline of army life affect him?

It can make him a better citizen. The army does not regiment initiative or court-martial bonest effort. It does require a man to live in harmony with those around him and to sublimate his personal desires for the good of the group. This normal, healthy individual coming into the army may, at first, find the discipline, which is necessary in a military organzation, restrictive and irritating. But the American, when he understands the necessity for such a thing, adapts himself readily, which is one of the reasons he makes the world's best soldier. Accepting a just and reasonable type of discipline will make him a more orderly, self-reliant and law-abiding citizen.

4--Will he become brutal and tough?

Army training is designed to build soldiers. The best soldiers are neither brutal nor tough. They are, however, able to take care of themselves and their comrades. They will become more self-confident and self-reliant as their physical prowess and all-round training increase. They become inured mentally and emotionally to performing certain difficult tasks, but they also become more considerate of others because the strong and capable man does not have to prove himself at the expense of those weaker than he. Rather they should become more tolerant and considérate of others and champions of the less strong.

5--Will parents of selectees be able to visit on the post where their son is stationed?

In the World War II program, the army provided guest houses operated by the post exchange for this purpose. These facilities will be reopened within the limits of resources at reactivated training centers, and will be available at nominal charges. Feeding facilities will be available at service club cafeterias. (At Fort Benning feeding facilities are available at the Main cafeteria which is located next door to the guest house).

Trooper Team Is Commended

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, has announced that he has received a letter of commendation from Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas, commander of the 34th Infantry division of the Iowa-Nebraska national guard, citing an Infantry School airborne team for an excellent job in providing instruction in air landing technique to members of his division.

According to the letter, the instructor personnel were outstanding in their "courtesy, military appearance and ability as instructors, and reflected high credit upon the Infantry Center."

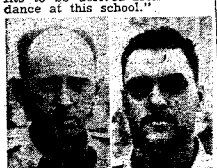
Post Dialogue

One of the most highly publicized features of the army career plan is, of course, the opportunities for schooling offered enlisted men. At the present time the army is making schooling, at service schools, available in scores of fields covering more scores of subjects, ranging from reporting news to repairing radios, from courses for non-coms at the Infantry School to courses for non-coms at the Medical School.

To find out what some of the men at Fort Benning think of service schooling, to find out if there is any interest in attending service schools, the inquiring reporter asked eight enlisted men a three-pronged question:



"What kind of service school would you like to attend? Why? If you haven't attended that school, why haven't you?

Pvt. Duane O. House, First company, 325th Infantry Training battalion: "I'd like to go to a service school where I could learn to be an amphibious truck driver. I always did like driving trucks, and I like the water as well as the land. From what I've seen of Dukws I like them. I haven't gone to school yet because I'm still taking basic training."

Cp. James E. McIntosh, Headquarters and Service company, 756th Tank battalion, six and a half years service: "I've attended the Military Police School. Now I'd like to go to the Adjutant General School at Camp Lee, Va. I'm interested in army administration and was good in that kind of work in civilian schools. Every time I've made up my mind to go, an assignment would come up or the unit I was with would be short of men. Now my enlistment is almost up. If I reenlist, it will be to go to that school."

M-Sgt. William M. Ham Headquarters detachment, 204th Transportation Truck battalion, 11 years service: "I'd like to attend the classification course at the Adjutant General School at Camp Lee, Va. I think it would help me more in my work as sergeant major as it would give me a better administrative background. I hadn't thought much about going to this school until recently, but I've talked to some men who've been there and learned the benefits to be derived from attendance at this school."

Pfc. Eugene M. Breaux, Sr., Medical detachment, 25th Infantry regiment, seven years service: "I'm going to the Medical School at Brooks General hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., next month. I've been in the Medical corps six years, but have never been to an army medics' school. I think the training I'll get there plus my experience will help me very much if I decide to attend medical college. I haven't gone as yet because the medical men under whom I've worked didn't think it was necessary at that time."

Sgt. 1st. cl. James C. Strickland, Company G, 325th Infantry regiment, 23 years service: "I'd like to go to the Food Supervisor's School right here at Fort Benning. It would be a continuation of my work in that it is a step up the ladder from cook and mess steward. I haven't attended it yet because I find it necessary to do a bit more study for the required background. Right now I'm a mess steward."

Sgt. Kenneth A. Robinson, Headquarters company, Airborne battalion, seven years service: "I'd like to go to the Cryptographic School at Fort Monmouth, N. J. I think it offers a pretty good opportunity to anybody who wants to advance in the army and continue in signal work. I haven't gone yet because I'm airborne, and being in the Pathfinder section, though I had better go to Pathfinder School first. On my next enlistment, in about a year, I'll go to Cryptographic School."

Pvt. Robert K. Leigh, Army Security Agency with the signal office, Infantry Center, one and a half years service: "I've been to the Signal School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and now I'd like to go to OCS or an advanced signal school to study radar. If I stay in the service, I'll get a better rating, and if I leave the service I'll get a better job. You have to know something to get ahead in the army nowadays. I haven't gone on to school because my assignments have kept me on the work I've been doing."

Sgt. Henry Williams, Sr., Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion, 17 years service: "I'd like to go to the Adjutant General School at Camp Lee, Va., and take a classification course. I'm an administrative NCO now and want to improve my efficiency. I feel that a well-rounded man can find advancement easier. I've finished the advanced administration course at the AG School and the NCO course at the Infantry School, class of 1947-48, and right now I feel that someone else should get a chance to go to school. But I'm definitely planning on going as soon as possible."

Battle Streamers Presented to Unit

The awarding of battle streamers to the 999th Field Artillery battalion and presentation of three decorations to men of the 25th Infantry regiment highlighted the parade and review of the two units at Stilwell field Saturday morning, Sept. 25.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burrese, commanding general of the Infantry Center, placed streamers for the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns on the colors of the 999th. He then awarded Bronze Stars to 1st. Sgt. James A. Barnes, Pfc. Robert L. Brunner and Pfc. Howard W. Grant, all of the Second battalion of the 25th.

Sergeant Barnes was awarded his medal for action in combat during the western Pacific campaign, and Brunner and Grant were decorated for action in Italy while members of the 370th Infantry.

The 999th was overseas 18 months, most of the time attached to the 15th corps. Deactivated soon after the end of the war, it was reorganized and reactivated in May, 1946, at Fort Benning.

NG Organization Completed In Iowa

Iowa has completed organization of its two allotted national guard infantry regiments, Maj. Gen. Keneth F. Cramer, chief, of the National Guard bureau, announced today.

Federal recognition of the Medical detachment, Des Moines, completed organization of the 168th Infantry regiment. Organization of the 133rd Infantry regiment was completed with the recognition of Company D, Independence. Both units are components of the 34th Infantry "Red Bull" division.

The eight national guard army units recognized during the week ending Sept. 20 brought unit organization to 4,296 army and 420 air units. A total of 4,716 or 75.6 per cent of the approximately 6,194 units allotted the several states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Hawaii now have been organized.

A Budget Cut?

Will the armed forces' budget be cut for the next fiscal year? We certainly hope it won't, but there are ominous rumors floating around that it might be. We don't believe, however, that in the view of the world situation any intelligent person would even think such a thing, and under no circumstances would he advocate it.

For the first time since the "grand" exodus from the service began in 1945, the military establishment can see a gleam of light in the future. Appropriations have been granted for research and development, for the building of aircraft, for the launching of ships and submarines and for the training of men. Should appropriations be reduced now, we can assume that all these would suffer immeasurably.

First to be hit, of course, would be research and development. In the past, this has always been the case, with the result that prior to the last war, U. S. army development was below par. Had it not been for the wholehearted cooperation between scientists and the army to produce weapons and equipment needed to win a war, it is entirely possible that we would not today be enjoying the fruits of democracy.

We have been warned, too, by military leaders not to allow our aircraft production to slump. We have been warned that to do so would be to invite attack from an aggressor nation. Should appropriations be cut, it would be out of the question to continue building planes and their equipment which has just really begun again. By the same token, the navy would be forced to curtail its building program.

And finally the training of men, which will soon begin under the Selective Service Act, would fall far short of expectations. It takes money to equip a recruit and it takes money to feed, clothe, house and care for him from a medical standpoint. Many probably remember the early days of the draft in 1940 and 1941 when soldiers were actually using wooden guns for drilling and wearing signs saying, in effect, "I am a tank." An appropriation cut could easily mean a return to such a ridiculous situation.

Keeping Him Healthy

Parents of the kids being called up for service under the new Selective Service Act have no cause for worry on at least one account; the army's health. It is better than ever, possibly the healthiest of all comparable environments in the nation. And that means the world, doesn't it?

According to statistics released recently by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., the improvement in army health since 1939 is not far short of amazing. Death rate among troops in the ZI last year was down 30 per cent from the 1939 rate. Death caused by disease was down 36 per cent, that by accident was reduced 24 per cent.

Improved medical techniques and new drugs account for much of the gain. But perhaps the army's reduction of the accident death toll by almost one-fourth—in an age of mechanized armies—is even more spectacular.

Is it possible that the service has its constructive side, as well as the aura of destruction necessarily linked to it by its mision? Certainly it has shown that prompt and adequate medical care and a determined safety campaign can save the lives of whole sections of the population.

Strictly Editorializing

The number of letters of commendation and appreciation received by Fort Benning units during the past few weeks indicates that the training and morale of the local troops is well above average. This, in our opinion, further indicates that the calibre of both the officers and non-commissioned officers here is of the highest degree, for without them to lead the way, it is doubtful such letters would be forthcoming.

We have always believed that the Fort Benning soldier is one of the most fortunate in the army, mainly because the facilities offered for his relaxation and entertainment, in addition to the training facilities, far surpass those at other installations. We don't know of any other army post either in the U. S. or abroad, which can claim the distinction of "America's Most Complete Army Post."

One of the best methods of measuring the morale of troops is to be with them during off-duty hours, during breaks, or just beore beginning work in the morning. We have noticed particularly, those men who come into the cafeteria around 7:30 a. m. for a cup of coffee before reporting to their jobs, and we have found them, almost without exception, a rather happy and carefree group. The same is true at other times during the day.

There are, of course, a few who complain. Most of these complaints are found to be baseless, but in the legitimate cases, there is usually someone who can and will clear up the misunderstanding. Those who do most of the complaining are the chronic type anyway.

For the most part, there is a complete lack of 'down-in-the-mouth" expression to be found on the faces of Benningites. On the contrary, there is much laughter and apparent happiness, all of which make us realize even more that Fort Benning is really tops among military posts.

BY

MURRAY E. HILL

So many times since the end of the war I have been asked why there is a need for volunteers to continue in Red Cross service. Since September has been set aside as volunteer service recruitment campaign month, it seems quite logical to give the where, when and how of volunteer need.

Volunteers were active before the war, and there is no reason to believe that they are needed any less in Veterans Administration hospitals, military installations and hospitals, institutions, clinics and in the homes of chronically ill and handicapped now that the war is over.

As to why more volunteers are needed now, some comparative figures will thoroughly illustrate this. In 1946, there were only 98 veteran hospitals. In 1948, there are 126, and there are present plans for the construction of 90 new veterans hospitals within the next few years.

In 1947, there were only approximately 1,500,000 soldiers in the armed forces, and now there is authorized 2,188,000. In general community programs, the expanding blood program, which cannot function without the efforts of a large number of volunteers, perhaps leads the list. There is the steady mounting demand for the use of Red Cross volunteers in civilian hospitals, institutions for the aged, orphans and handicapped. Requests come from community health and welfare organizations for Red Cross volunteers to assist in their program.

Because the American Red Cross is an agency chartered by Congress with the responsibility of taking care of the needs of people in times of disaster, it is necessary that each chapter maintain a prepared group of volunteers with specialized training to relieve the suffering. A vital part of such preparedness is having an adequate number of trained and experienced volunteers, and this is why they are so badly needed.

Now, for the how volunteers are needed. There are nine distinctive types of activities.

First are the grey ladies, friendly, cheerful volunteers especially trained to help in hospitals and clinics. Next come the nurses aids. No one can doubt the acute shortage of professional nurses, and many lives have been saved by this volunteer group. A spectacular service is the motor service, furnishing transportation at disaster scenes and under many other adverse circumstances.

The entertainment and instruction group of volunteers never lets up in its effort to provide a wide variety of entertainment and instructions for those many shut-ins.

IMPORTANT PEOPLE

The advertising blurbs say that Robert Van Gelder's "Important People" has an impact and penetration that will remind you of Aldous Huxley's "Point Counter Point." Don't let that frighten you away from it. "Important People" is more or less coherent in most parts, and at least has some semblance of chronological order. the average reader should not have too much difficulty in understanding it. Whether he will like what he understands is quite a different thing.

Van Gelder undoubtedly has a great many ideas he wants to air. Some of them we think need more than "airing"; they need fumigating. The "important people" of his book are almost without exception unpleasant people. There are, for instance, such characters as Liza Carter Grimm and her "kept" husband, Haley Grimm, who married his wife for her money and paid for every cent he got with his self respect. Liza spends her time belittling her husband, insulting her servants, and spoiling her son, who at sixteen spends all his time in hotel rooms with prostitutes.

The "hero" of the novel — we call him the hero because he is apparently the one who is supposed to have "ideals" though we aren't quite certain what they are—is young Dixon West, heir to the fabulous Carter West magazine dynasty, who returns from the army to take his place in high-echelon society, and society of "important people." Dixon West has little need to bother with professional prostitutes. He has Mig Holmes, war widow, who is trying to forget her sorrows with liquor and sex. Dixon finally marries Mig, thereby proving himself a very noble character, and, in our opinion, a very foolish one.

The real purpose of the novel seems to be to give the author's views on the race question. Whether it was Van Gelder's intention or not, he manages somehow to show the southerners in just a little better light than the Yankee brothers. He actually has the temerity to show the black people of Harlem as being capable of doing a little "persecuting" of the whites. The Negroes are, in short, fully as unpleasant as the other characters in the book, who are, we can assure you, quite unpleasant enough. Such an idea is a little unusual in modern literature; it probably will be very unpopular with some of our fanatics; and we doubt if it will do much to help race relations.

In a book of this sort, we probably shouldn't worry about minor things, but we were a little disconcerted by Van Gelder's mid-victorian use of dashes for unprintable words. As far as we can see, he very boldly uses every word, printable or unprintable, in or out of the dictionary. We can't

Chaplain's Corner..

JUDGING OTHERS

By Chaplain L. A. Ellis

"Judge not, that ye be not judged" are words taken from the New Testament, and were uttered more than two thousand years ago. Before and since that time, men have spoken similar quotations. Thomas A. Kempis has in more recent years given us in the following quotation, though differently put, the same thought:

"How seldom we weigh our neighbors in the same balance with ourselves."

It is a curious fact that our own offenses should seem less heinous than the offenses of others. The reason is, I believe, that we know all the circumstances surrounding our personal faults, and so manage to excuse in ourselves what we cannot excuse in another. We turn the search light of our attention away from our own defects, and when we are forced by untoward events to consider them, we find them rather easy to condone. Whether or not it is right or wrong for us to do this, does not make too much difference; they are part of us, and we must accept the good and bad in ourselves together.

When we come to judge others, it is not by ourselves that we judge them, but by an image that we have formed from which we have left out everything that offends our vanity or would discredit us in the eyes of the world. Bringing the matter closer home: how scornful we are when we catch someone in a lie: but who can say that he has told not one, but a hundred?

Considering all, there is not much to choose between men. Each of us is a hodge-podge of greatness and littleness, of virtue and advice, of nobility and baseness. Some have more strength of character, or more opportunity, and so in one direction or another give their abilities and instincts freer play, but potentially they are the same. For my part, I do not think I am any better or any worse than most people, but I know that if I set down every mean action in my life and every evil thought that has crossed my mind, the world would see me as a monster of depravity. The knowledge that these reveries are common not to me alone, but to all men, should inspire one with tolerance. It is well also if such reveries enable us to look upon our fellows, even the most eminent and respectable, with humor, and should perhaps lead each of us to take ourselves not too seriously, nor consider ourselves too highly.

THE WINNAH . . . Everybody was all smiles at the Pine Lodge NCO club Sunday night. Thelma Mears was happy because she won the orchid awarded the holder of the winning ticket, the orchid being a door prize. Sgt. Gail Vizzard, pinning it on, was smiling because he was Thelma's date. And in the background Betty Jo Fay, singer with the band, and M-Sgt. Elmo Chaves of the club's board of governors were smiling because everybody was having a good time. Door prizes of corsages are presented every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday nights at the club dances, popular rendezvous for Infantry Center non-coms and their friends.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

sion is sustained, and a sufficient amount of action makes the film an attractive crime thriller

ONE TOUCH OF VENUS (hilarious comedy) with Robert Walker, Ava Gardner and Dick Haymes. When a statue of Venus turns out to be beauteous Ava Gardner, not only Robert Walker becomes confused, but all those who see her. Recommended for family.

MOURNING BECOMES ELECTRA (tragedy) with Rosalind Russell, Michael Redgrave and Raymond Massey. In this production, Eugene O'Neil paraphrased the ancient Greek tragedies, which took as their theme man's inability to escape his fate. Vicious hatred, illicit love, suicide and murder help to make this story a violent epic. Recommended for adult.

FOR THE LOVE OF MARY (romantic comedy) with Deanna Durbin and Edmond O'Brien. When a switchboard operator's romances become so complicated that they require the attention of the President of the United States and several Supreme Court justices, there's sure to be considerable fun among all. Recommended for family.

Chili Supper, Cowboy Songs Planned For Brat Barracks

It's back to the west, pardner, tomorrow night for the Brat Barracks crowd.

They're to meet at the barracks promptly at eight, wearing their hiking clothes. If they can't lasso a horse—or a truck—they're going to hike to the picnic grounds, where they'll cook a chili supper—and eat it, of course—and listen to cowboy songs, and play western games.

Forty new members registered last week at the "back to school" and registration party in the barracks. The party was quite a success, particularly for the boys who won all the team sports, and two out of three of the games. They even came out first in the reading of tongue twisters. The girls won the charades.

'Recruit' Among First to Enter Nagasaki Following A-Bombing

To most of the recruits of the 325th Infantry Training battalion who witnessed the recent demonstration of infantry fire power at Hook range the artillery and tanks and other pieces seemed pretty impressive.

But to one "recruit", Cpl. Charles Italiano, it's doubtful if much of anything in the way of destructive power can be too impressive. For Italiano was in Nagasaki with the first survey team two weeks after an atomic bomb was dropped on that hapless Jap city.

A national welterweight Golden Gloves champion, Italiano had been a physical training and boxing instructor in his hometown of New Rochelle, N. Y., until he joined the navy in April, 1942. Fighting of any kind came naturally to him. He had won more than 75 amateur bouts prior to turning pro, but after a few fights for cash he decided against a ring career in favor of navy blue.

Looking for excitement in the navy, he found it, but quickly. His first assignment after boot training was as navy gunner on and Archangel, and on that run from New York to Murmansk and Archangel and on that run his ship was bombed but managed to make the Russian port. His next run was also to deliver supplies to the Soviets, but was the southern route from New York to Teheran.

Then came nine crossings of the Atlantic on a destroyer escort to England and North Ireland during the Battle of the Atlantic. On one of these crossings his ship sent a German sub to the bottom. Late in 1943 Italiano was assigned to a destroyer of the amphibious force in the Pacific part of Admiral Halsey's famous Task Force 58.

On one mission Italiano went in with a special assault force to liberate American prisoners of war incarcerated in a Japanese camp. Among these rescued was the famous marine flier, Maj. Gregory "Pappy" Boyington. The force went in small boats, swarmed into the surprised Jap force and spirited away the Americans. About 150 Americans were freed on that one raid.

As soon as the Japs capitulated Italiano's crew went into various PW camps to remove Americans interned there. These men were immediately transferred to hospital ships for return to this country and recuperation from the rigors of prison life.

Two weeks after the A-bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, Italiano was in the rubble of that once important manufacturing center. This time he was acting as part of the armed guard for the force of scientists and technicians the army sent in to study the effects of the new weapon. Soon after that experience he reenlisted in the navy for three more years and was assigned as a gunnery noncom working with everything from a .22 pistol to a five-inch gun.

Late this summer Italiano joined the army as a result of a bet with his brother, a master sergeant. He told his brother that he'd equal his rank quicker than his brother said he could. A "career" man, Italiano has been assigned to the Sixth company of the 325th for basic army training.

Army Publishes Final War Story

The last volume of the Army Historical division's American Beach to Cherbourg, originally scheduled to appear Aug. 28, went on sale Sept. 27.

Utah Beach to Cherbourg tells how the right wing of the allied forces that landed in Normandy isolated, and finally captured, the great deepwater port of Cherbourg.

The attack began with a parachute drop of more than 13,000 men on the night of June 6-7, 1944, followed by a three-division amphibious assault. These forces swept westward to cut off the Cotentin peninsula, and then attacked Cherbourg from the south. In the final assault on the city, they received the greatest amount of direct air support ever provided for American infantry up to that time. The main units participating in this action were the 82nd and 101st Airborne divisions and the Fourth, Ninth, 79th and 90th Infantry divisions.

Author of this volume is Maj. Roland G. Ruppenthal, who was historian of the VII corps, and came ashore at Utah beach on D-Day. Major Ruppenthal received a Bronze Star for his service as a combat historian, and is now a civilian employe of the Historical division.

Bi-Monthly Pay Setup Operating At Belvoir

For some months Finance department officials have been working on plans for a semi-monthly pay system to become effective on July 1, first day of the next fiscal year, according to Army Times.

A group of soldiers at Fort Belvoir, Va., will act as "guinea pigs" for the proposed plan and will receive their December or January pay in two semimonthly installments in the first actual operating test of the proposed new pay system.

Officials emphasized that no final decision has yet been reached on whether or not the new pay system will be adopted, or if it will go into effect July 1 even if approved.

Not only have the navy and Marine corps been on semi-monthly paydays which created pressure for the army and air force to follow suit, but the new proposed system appears to offer many advantages to the government over the machinery now in use, Army Times continued.

According to the new plan the army and air force men would be paid on the fifth and 20th of each month. They would be paid for the half month ending five days previously the 30th (or 31st) and the 15th respectively.

Pay would be drawn in even dollars, as much or as little as the individual wanted. The balance would be payable on request in whole or in part at any following payday.

Once a year due to appropriation machinery each person would be paid in full to the last cent so that after the fifth of each July no money earned before July 1 would be due.

Individual pay records from which pay would be computed will be made up anew each January and July. The soldier would take his card or have it sent ahead of him on any change of station. When a new paycard was made out the old one would join others in central finance files. In that way a running pay history would be available on any serviceman.

Some of the other advantages of the new plan are, according to Army Times:

Put officers and men on the same system.

Make it easier to collect withholding taxes if they are applied to service men.

Simplify paying men in transit or recently assigned.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION . . . The military police of Fort Benning had their day, or rather two of them, last week as they joined their brothers in ranks throughout the army in celebrating the seventh anniversary of the Military Police corps with a huge two-day barbecue last Saturday and Sunday. In photos 1 and 2, members of MP section No. 1 and their wives and guests "stack it up" in their get-together at the Polo Hunt club. Section No. 2 members, right, are caught in a relaxing mood during their celebration Saturday at the Horseshow bowl cabin. During the two-day affair, the celebrants really "stashed it away," consuming 1,150 pounds of meat, plus the supplements, including a 297-pound cake.

MP's Eat 1,150 Pounds Of Barbecue At Party

Consuming a total of 1,150 pounds of meat, plus the usual culinary supplements, Fort Benning's military police celebrated the seventh anniversary of the Military Police corps with a two-day barbecue last Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 25 and 26.

Topping the menu was a huge 297 - pound anniversary cake which was cut in a simple ceremony by Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Sunday evening at the Polo Hunt club.

Appropriate ceremonies, music, dancing and other entertainment were included in the program at both affairs. Doris Duke and her orchestra played for dancing at the Polo Hunt club gathering, while the 196th band held sway at the section No. 2 party at the Horseshow bowl cabin.

Arrangements for the Section No. 1 celebration were handled by Capt. William E. Joyce, detachment commander, M-Sgt. Emmett Marcum and 1st Sgt. Robert Maddox. Lt. Samuel P. Sweeney, detachment executive, assisted by 1st Sgt. Walter Jenkins, took care of the arrangements for Section No. 2.

The food for the two-day celebration was prepared by the mess detail of Section No. 1 under Sgt. Paul Hays, assisted by Sgt. Tony Sabino and Cpl. Eustis White.

Gen. Devers Cites School

A letter of commendation from Gen. Jacob L. Devers, army field forces commander, has been received by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, complimenting the staff and faculty of the Infantry School "on the excellent job turned out in the revision" of three field manuals.

The manuals included No. 7-10 "The Rifle Company," No. 7-15 "The Heavy Weapons Company" and No. 7-37 "The Mortar Company."

General Devers said that he had been informed by field forces officials that the first draft of the manuals submitted to his office for review "are outstanding in their excellence, and I have been assured that the end products will be much better texts then we have ever had in the past."

The letter further states that those concerned with the preparation of the manual "have exerted exceptional efforts in producing these excellent results, and I wish to convey my appreciation to all who have helped in the preparation of the first drafts of the manuals under discussion."

2-Place Helicopter Undergoing Tests

The U.S. air force's two-place manufactured by bell Aircraft liaison helicopter, the XH - 15 corporation, is undergoing flight tests at the contractor's Niagara Frontier plant.

The XH-15, whose bubble - like nose provides exceptional visibility is designed for use as an observation plane, for special photographic work, aerial inspection of power or communications lines, or regular liaison assignments.

The helicopter, which has a top speed of over 100 miles an hour, a service ceiling of 20,000 feet, and a combat radius of 100 miles, is powered by a Continental XO-476-275 horsepower engine. Its two-bladed rotor system has a diameter of 26 feet, 10 inches, and the overall length of the helicopter, including rotor, is 43 feet. The design gross weight is 2,700 pounds. Three of these experimental helicopters are on order.

Officials Confer On Training Film

Three officials from the Signal corps photographic center, Long Island, N. Y. arrived Wednesday for a conference regarding the proposed training film on the infantry rifle tank team.

Lt. Col. Bertram Kalisch, Maj. Edward Andrus, and Warren Murray of the photograph center will meet with officials of the Training Literature and Visual Aids section in order to gather pre-production material.

The group will be here for several days.

Coronet Relates Story

Dr. Amos Little, Jr., whose Little is one medico who really learned how to jump at Fort Benning, has adapted the army's "paradoctor" techniques to private practice.

The feature, "Jumping Doctor of the Rockies," which appears in the October issue of Coronet magazine, relates how Dr. Little and ten jumping companions made history, for they were the first doctors trained to parachute in line of duty.

The men went through two strenuous parachute courses—first at the Forest Service Jump School at Missoula, Montana, and then at Fort Benning. The youthful "paradoctor," who did not give up jumping when he was discharged, is the only medico who jumps to the scene—anywhere in the western mountains. Coronet reports that Dr. Little has made more than 50 mercy jumps. He has never been hurt, and he says that his unique practice has just begun. The 21-year-old Montanan weighs only 140 pounds, but when he is rigged up to jump, he looks like a "rocket man from Mars."

He wears a two-piece canvas suit with a back pack and a second emergency 'chute, plus football helmet and a wire face mask. His jumping shoes are heavy, and he wears ankle braces and an abdominal belt. He also carries 100 feet of coiled rope to let himself down from a tall tree—just in case. He drops his 85-pound medical kit by smaller parachute.

Coronet concludes that Dr. Am-

Outlook Improved For Grid Opener

Locals Start Trip To Carolina Base

When 55 candidates for the Doughboy gridiron edition of 1948 started their trek to Parris Island, S. C., this morning, Head Coach Joe Shepherd and his staff of grid lore teachers were looking at a much brighter horizon than they saw a week ago. And the Benning coaching staff held high hopes of seeing even more light in the distance after Saturday afternoon's lid-lifter with the South Carolina marines.

Things started developing a more brilliant hue after the candidates for this year's Benning eleven made a surprisingly fine showing in a realistic intra-squad scrimmage affair in Doughboy stadium last Saturday afternoon.

Although the plan of attack to be used by the marines in Saturday's fray is a big question mark, Coach Shepherd expects the South Carolinians to be one of the most formidable foes on the Dough slate this year. Scout Ralph Davis of the post went to Parris Island last weekend to have a look at the Doughs' opening game opponents, but his report had not been completed at the time the squad boarded the bus this morning.

Friday Scrimmage

Expecting to arrive at the South Carolina base late tonight, the Doughs will rest up Friday morning, and stage a heavy scrimmage in the afternoon. The pre-game preps will be concluded Doughboy crew will head back to the post and start making preparations for an encounter with the Memphis, Tenn., naval flyers in Doughboy stadium on Oct. 10.

Boss Man Shepherd hopes that his chances for making the Benning debut successful will be bolstered by the return of several outstanding players who have spent the past few weeks on the injured list.

Sult to Play

Don Sult, one of the backfield sparks in this season's campaign, who suffered a neck injury during last Saturday's scrimmage, definitely will be back in the lineup for the tussle with the marines, Shepherd said Wednesday. The flashy halfback, who went through the 1947 grid wars with Butch Kendrick's Doughs, was hospitalized immediately after Saturday's mishap, but medical officers released him after failing to detect any serious damage on an X-ray.

The victim of another scrimmage injury, Harold (Hipe) Sloan also a veteran halfback, was merely shaken up, and should be in top-notch condition for the fracas with the South Carolinians.

Although the Doughboy mentor hasn't named his starting lineup, one of the foremost candidates for the tackle slot, 200-pound Frank Tatum, who has been relatively inactive for the past few weeks because of severe muscular soreness, is expected to be ready to take the field by Saturday, and probably will see service against the marines.

Two Uncertainties

Two victims of the injury toll, however, still are on the roster of uncertainties. They are passflinger Bob Morton and kicking-expert Lawrence Brennan.

Morton, who played against the Benning aggregation as a member of the Fort Sam Houston, Tex., team last year, has been suffering from a trick knee all season, and his activity may be confined to instances where a strong aerial attack is called for. Most of Brennan's trouble has been caused by ankle injuries.

Another addition to the tackle roster has made it unquestionably the strongest link along the Dough forward wall. The newcomer, Leonard Pinkey, a six foot, one-inch, 210 pound former member of West Point's Army Cadets, played a bang-up defensive game Saturday after being in Benning toggery for less than a week.

Pile-driving Bob Hollingsworth virtually clinched a startling berth at fullback last Saturday afternoon by turning in a sensational offensive performance in the deep backfield slot. The 185-pound ball toter chalked up both touchdowns for the Blue eleven during the practice affair. During the first period, Hollingsworth reeled off a 52-yard run for pay dirt, and struck again in the third quarter from five yards out.

One of the squad's lesser luminaries who stood out in the scrimmage battle was John Hawkins, who carried the pigskin for steady gains throughout the second half. Although he fumbled on several occasions, halfback Bob Easly also chipped in with some fine offensive work.

In the defensive department, several players shared the limelight with tackles on both squads nipping a lot of ball handling activity in the bud. Among the defensive stars of the skirmish were tackles George McCall, Leonard Pfeifer, George Crimmel and Tex Dexter, guard Walt Dejung, and center John Dobbs.

Unit Ring Card Features TKO, Exhibition Bout

A technical knockout and seven decisions marked the card at the Airborne battalion arena during the weekly boxing program last Friday night.

The action started with Bobby Lewis of Company C squaring off against Alan Casey of Company A, and fighting him to a split decision for his third straight victory.

In the second bout, Jeff Sudds, a visitor from the 25th Infantry, outslugged Bill Flagg of Company G, and took a unanimous decision.

A real slugfest then took place with Harry Venetian of Headquarters and Service company hammering out a unanimous verdict over George Watson of Company F.

In the fourth bout, Dale Woods of the 504th Airborne battalion, who lost by a TKO last week, made a comeback and took a decision from Andy Zimmer of Company G.

Bill Coles of Company G then stepped into the ring with Henry McCollogh, another 25th Infantry boy, and gained a unanimous verdict.

The sixth bout was moving fast when Woodrow Wallace opened an ugly scar over the eye of Jack Williams and forced him to retire. The incident gave Wallace a TKO, the only one of the evening.

Next on the card was a no-decision exhibition bout which pitted Bill Williams of the 25th Infantry, the post middleweight champion, against Ralph Dunan of Company F. Both boys gave and took a great deal of punishment, and the crowd gave them a big ovation for the show they staged.

The last bout of the evening featured Norman Clark of the 999th Field Artillery battalion, Third army lightweight champion, and A. J. Cox of Company A. The veteran Clark pounded out a decision over his less experienced foe.

Cox, Zimmer and Venetian were selected as candidates for the sportsmanship trophy, and Cox was the recipient of the award by popular acclaim of the spectators.

The award was presented to him by a representative of the Airborne battalion special services office.

Sand Hill Tutor At New Station

Although the 1948 season was his first as mentor of the Bullet grid squad, Coach Delton is considered one of the most capable tutors ever to take over the Sand Hill helm. Before his departure, Delton had put his Bullet charges through their pre-season drills, and stayed with the crew long enought to see it compile a .500 record for the first two encounters of the year.

In assuming his duties at the Alabama school, Delton will be returning as an instructor to the school where he once posted an enviable record as a star athlete.

In addition to his grid tutoring at Sand hill, Delton was battalion supply officer for the Second battalion, 25th Infantry regiment.

FORMER POST EXPERT SETS SKEET MARK

Buck's 217 birds broke a record of 138 targets set more than a year ago by A. B. Miller.

The ex-Benningite, who is destined to receive a chevron for his record-breaking feat, was observed during the shoot by Emmett Wright, a representative of the Winchester Arms company, who is slated to make the presentation.

Following the shoot, Buck said that he missed the 218th bird because of carelessness, and not due to any nervous tension.

The skeet expert, who was assigned to Fort Benning in 1946, now is on duty with the regular army instructor of the 121st Infantry regiment of the Georgia national guard in Macon.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

For this week's look in on the national collegiate football picture, let's take a jaunt over South by West, and see what's in the offing where cactus, ranches, cowhands and gridiron upsets flourish.

The Southwestern conference has long been considered by football strategists to be the most unpredictable circuit in the country, and, from early season appearances 1948 won't be any exception. A half-dozen or so elevens from the Lone Star state and its environs are out to rope last year's champs, the Southern Methodist Mustangs, and indications are that it's going to be quite a task.

Prognosticators have gotten out their dope sheets, added up psychological factors, reserve strength and Texas university's prejudice against defending conference champs, and have figured out a mediocre mid-way finish for the Mustangs. Hunches, even though time-tested, don't always pay off, and this is one case where we don't think they will.

To our way of figuring, the SMU crew is still the team to trample in the Southwestern conference. And with all-American Doak Walker, who can do everything on the gridiron but carry the downs marker, would-be dethroning factions had better tackle the enormous chore with kid gloves.

In the way of backfield support for Walker, five more backfield stars who helped write football history at Dallas last year are back, and the line is as well laden with power at it was last year.

What then has prompted the statisticians to pick the SMU gang to finish so far down the roster?

The answer is that the Mustang lineup of reserves is entirely too thin for its cumbersome and travelsome schedule this year. The ends also might present somewhat of a problem unless Bob Folsom, Carl Wallace and Raleigh Blakely reveal some concealed talents.

Some strategists pick Texas to take over the Southwestern scepter, that is if SMU is forced to discard it, and their choice is not too unwise despite the last week shellacking by North Carolina's Tar Heels.

Blair Cherry definitely has the makings of a strong team at Austin, but his machine is likely to crumble unless willowy Paul Campbell can adequately fill the shoes of Bobby Layne. Campbell already is well-trained in ball-hiding skill and passing, but the big question has to do with whether or not he can deliver in the cluthes as Master Bobby did.

Rice's Owls have had the cards stacked against them for the past few campaigns, but, for some indefinable reason, we'll say the tide will turn down at Houston this year.

Ordinarily, a team which has lost nine starters isn't considered too strong a championship threat, but we'll base our reasoning on the fact that Coach Jess Neely has husky boys racked deep at all points and quality in the places where it counts the most. Add to this the fact that the Rice slate is favorable, and you might visualize the Owls flying high this year.

With their spirits elated by two non-conference verdicts already, the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian might forget to stop driving when they come up against some conference favorites later along.

Dutch Meyer's hopes are that the conference favorites will become so absorbed in throat-cutting that he can sneak his Purple and White through to the top.

Passing's the big rub at Fort Worth, and the powerful offense and defense of the TCU bunch may crumble unless Coach Meyer can depend on someone to open up the air-lanes.

Over in Razorback country, the Arkansawyers have a long-standing reputation for making or breaking the conference leaders late along in the season. Although we don't figure the Porkers to smash their way to the top of the conference ladder, they'll probably be up to their old tricks again this season.

There is no shortage of players in Fayetteville this year—the defensive power is there, there is plenty of breakaway speed, and it's up to the Razorbacks to say if it's boom or bust for them.

A mere will - to - win attitude probably won't provide enough of a jet-propulsion boost to get the Texas Aggies to the top of the Lone Star circuit, but it may be strong enough to show some of the powerhouse elevens of the loop that they didn't come along just to see some sights.

A building process is going to be the biggest drawback for the Green and Gold Bears of Baylor this year. However, from the job the Waco boys did on a reportedly strong bunch of Oklahomans from Tulsa last week, it looks as if Bob Woodruff's machine is nearing completion.

No More Sleeping In Barrack Rooms For Guest Athletes

There will be no more sleeping in barracks for visiting athletic teams at Fort Benning. When they arrive here as guests, that is exactly what they will be, and comfortable ones at that.

No longer will visiting athletic teams have to feel out of place, for now they have a home of their own. The second and third floors of the Northwest tower of Doughboy Stadium has been converted to dormitories for the visitors.

All visiting teams will be quartered in the building which has a capacity of approximately 55 beds. The interior of the tower has been repainted, decorated, and given a genuine "homey" atmosphere.

Moments of relaxation will be offered to visiting players who will have at their disposal the latest editions of magazines, newspapers and stationary. To add to that "at ease" feeling, radios have been installed in each room.

All this, plus beds with starched linen and warm clean blankets, is expected to look good to travel-weary teams coming to Fort Benning for athletic contests.

READY FOR ACTION . . . These slick top-notch bowling alleys greeted the rush of ten-pin enthusiasts who flocked to the opening of the Main bowling alleys Monday, Sept. 27. The alleys, hub of activity for officers and enlisted men during this time of the year, have undergone a complete face-lifting.

Softball Squad Is Commended By Gen. Gillem

Fort Benning's Doughboy softball squad, which recently captured the Third army championship at Fort McPherson, Ga. was commended for its sportsmanship and high-caliber ball playing by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Third army commander.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, the Infantry center commander, General Gillem wrote:

"I would like to extend my congratulations to the members of the Fort Benning softball team who added another Third army tournament victory to Fort Benning's already outstanding record by their championship performance in the Third army softball tournament recently held at Fort McPherson, Georgia.

"The sportsmanship displayed by the members of the Fort Benning team, both on and off the playing field, deeply impressed the great number of spectators who attended the games each night. Such sportsmanship reflects great credit upon the station which they represented.

"Fort Benning has always been noted for its athletic teams of championship caliber, and I know your latest victory in this tournament will tend to increase your efforts toward future championships."

Plans Formulated For Post Keglers

All categories of post bowling enthusiasts will have ample opportunity to use the main post alleys under a priority system set up by the athletic office to govern play on the lanes this season.

The alleys, which reopened Monday after a summer-long shutdown, will be open seven days per week, and special hours have been designated for women and children. Several minor improvements were made in the bowling center during the hot-weather shutdown.

From 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, female keglers will have top priority on the lanes. Children have been given the period from 9 a.m. until 11 a.m. each Saturday, and male bowlers, both commissioned and enlisted, may use the alleys from 6 p.m. until 10 p.m. every night. In addition to the evening sessions, male pins scatterers may take advantage of the center's facilities between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. each Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Exception to the schedule will be made in case organized unit teams want to reserve the alleys for special games, it was pointed out.

Meanwhile, local athletic officials announced that the deadline for unit entries in the intra-mural bowling league has been extended until 4 p.m., Friday.

At least 10 organizations have entered teams in the circuit, and it was expected that last-minute entries would boost the total to between 12 and 15 squads. League play was expected to start about Oct. 6 and continue until Jan. 15.

One of the first entries was placed by the Infantry School detachment, which copped the bowling toga for 1947. Other units which have filed their intentions of fielding a squad are Headquarters, 30th Medical group, 121st Evacuation hospital, Student Training regiment; Army Field Forces board No. 3; Station hospital; Special units, 325th Infantry regiment; First battalion, 325th Infantry regiment; Food Service school and the Airborne battalion.

Play in the loop will be on a round-robin basis with each team entered getting at least one crack at each opposing squad. Each crew of keglers will consist of not less than five and not more than eight members.

Ordnance Grid Squad Formed

With seven veterans of last year's squad back to form a nucleus for the 1948 team, pigskin candidates for the 328th Ordnance battalion eleven started skull drills and scrimmages recently, and expect to embark on a schedule next month.

The schedule for the ordnance unit, the only small organization on the Main post to field a grid crew last year, probably will include games with other flame pot installations of the Third army area. Plans now are being mapped to stage a tussle with the Atlanta Ordnance depot early in October.

After watching his charges go through their pre-schedule workouts, Head Coach William Dunham cited his team prospects for the 1948 season as better than last year. In addition to the several returning standouts from the 1947 aggregation, Dunham has some new material to draw from.

Jack W. Shackelford, a 165-pound center on last year's ordnance eleven, will be back in the mid-line slot again this year. His reinforcements probably will be hefty John Gumm and Charles Harvey, another 165-pounder.

A burly quartet of linesmen will receive the squad's tackle assignments this year. A couple of heavier lads, 210-pound Andrew Anderson and 25-pound Elliott Pasis, have been picked to assist last season's squadmen, 180-pound Bob Campfield and 200-pound Buck Loflin.

Strong in numbers but short in poundage sizes up the situation at the outposts, where nine light but speedy flankmen, including two veterans, are scrambling for starting berths. The crop of pass-chasers includes Roy Monroe, Edward Bigbie, Jim Fowler, Claude Douthitt, Gene Gill, Glon Gale, Gerald Moody, Don Hinckley and Don Rupel. Gill and Rupel played for the ordnance eleven last season.

Another position where a little more weight wouldn't do much damage is guard where a 160-pound man is chalked up. Coach Dunham hopes that veteran Bob Longtime will act as a steadying influence for newcomers Lyle Amonson, Howard Greene, Gudmund Kronstad and Francis Sternanko.

To assist Dunham in the tutoring chores will be Robert J. Agrelius, and William Bailey and Tommy More will serve as team managers.

Grid Lore Veteran

The "Connie Mack" fo the gridiron is aged Amos Alonzo Stagg, who has been teaching football lore for a span of 57 years. Stagg, coach at Springfield College of the Pacific, was tutor at Chicago university when the maroon was the power of the midway.

Buff Eleven Trampled By Sand Hill Bulletmen

Tindrell, Bradford Scamper As Herd's Passing Falters

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Paced by wing-footed Phil Tindrell and piston-legged Cliff Bradford, the power-charged post Bullets chalked up their first win of the season in defeating the Columbus Buffaloes 19-0 Saturday night in Columbus' Memorial stadium. The Bullets had suffered one previous setback at the hands of the Tigers of Tuskegee, Ala., institute.

Displaying a spectacular performance of open-field running, the two backfield aces proved unstoppable as the outclassed Buffalo crew just couldn't catch up with them.

While Hank Sanderson, Odell Kennedy, Walt Brown, Bill Whitney, Jeff White and Floyd Knight were consistently breaking through the Bison defenses to drop their backs for enormous losses, Bradford, Tindrell and Vern Boswell were busy waltzing up and down the turf on jaunts of 80, 55 and 47 yards, respectively.

Score Early

By the time the opening stanza was five minutes old, the rampaging Bullets dented the scoring column. Rugged Sanderson broke through to block Jimmie Carter's attempted kick on the 12-yard mark. On the first play following the blocked punt, Tindrell started off quickly to his left, cut back over left tackle, and elusively knifed his way over the goal line. The score stood at 6-0 when Flash Wilson's attempt to convert went wide.

Bradford, the swivel-hipped Arkansas traveler, set up the Bullets second touchdown when, in the latter stages of the second period, he shook himself loose for 45 yards to the Buffs 15-yard stripe.

The drive bogged down for the Bullets, however, and the ball went over to the Buffaloes. But again, Sanderson sneaked through the city club's defenses to nail Allen Slocum on his own eight-yard line. Attempting to kick his team out of danger, Carter was met with disappointment when the fast-charging Bullet forewall crashed through to block the punt and take possession of the oval on the Buff 10-yard stripe.

Bradford Goes Over

On the following play, Hudie Langston took the ball and picked up five yards after which Bradford ploughed through for the score. Again, however, the kick for an extra counter went wide.

Hard-running Tindrell stole the show again in the third quarter on the longest run of the game. On the first play after the kick-off, Tindrell sliced off right tackle, neatly eluded the entire Buffalo secondary, and raced 80 yards to pay dirt. Wilson's placement kick for the extra point this time split the goal posts and boosted the Bullet lead to 13-0, the score which stood for the remainder of the tilt.

Led by "Pitching" Jimmie Carter, the desperate Buffs took to the air during the fourth period, but shook himself loose for the Columbus ends to hold on to, and the pass combination was altered slightly with G. Turpin doing the tossing and Carter trying his hand at receiving.

Bullets Intercept

Using Carter, Channing and Slocum as receivers, Turpin threw four completed passes which moved the pigskin down to the Bullets' 45-yard stripe before the Bullets decided to take a hand in matters.

At this point, scatback Vern Boswell added his bit to the Bullets' spectacular running game by intercepting one of Turpin's aerials and scampering downfield to the Buff 23 before being hauled down from behind. A clipping penalty, however, nullified the play, and the ball was again in possession of the Bisons.

After passing their way down to the Bullet 25-yard marker, a Turpin-fired pass went amiss and landed in the hands of Bradford, who raced 45 yards before being brought down. The game ended with the Bullets holding the ball on the mid-field stripe after Boswell again intercepted a Bison pass.

The Bullets picked up 14 first downs to eight for the Buffaloes, and gained 312 yards rushing while holding the Buffs to a scant 103. In yards gained by passing, however the Columbus lads got past the Bullets by a 97-34 tally.

Bullet Grid Squad Picks Field Pilots

Guard Mathew Batie was named captain and Center Odell Kennedy was selected co-captain last Saturday when members of the Bullet football squad got together to elect their field generals for the 1948 grid campaign.

The two players, both members of the 1947 Bullet eleven, were the unanimous choice of their teammates.

The two veteran linemen, who have garnered themselves a high degree of popularity from their grid colleagues, were cited by team officials as outstanding leaders, and were commended for their knowledge of the sport.

BATIE NAMED BULLET STANDOUT FOR WEEK

Highly praised for 60 minutes of outstanding play against the Golden Tigers of Tuskegee, Ala., last week, Mathew Batie, the post Bullet eleven's stellar guard, was selected as the Sand Hill crew's lineman of the week.

Packing 180 pounds on a sturdy 5' 8 1-2" frame, Batie made himself a fifth man in the Tiger backfield often, a position totally unwelcomed by the collegians. A workhorse on both offense and defense, he constantly came through with some bone crushing blocks and tackles which gummed up the Alabamans' running game.

Batie's pigskin exploits got under way back in 1939 as a dashing halfback at Freemont highschool in Freemont, Ohio. A flashy little speed merchant, the mention of his name spelled terror during those years he dashed against some of the high school squads from that section of the Buckeye state.

For three years he played first - rate football under brilliant tutelage of Bob Oldfather, a graduate and star athlete of Heidelberg college. Tiffin, Ohio. For his accomplishments as a highschool athlete, Batie holds a letter in football and one in track for his prolonged cross-country jaunts.

Local Scribes Make Gridiron Predictions

North Carolina Over Georgia; Tech To Stop Tulane's Wave

BY LEWIS McAFEE

and

ANDY PLANEY

After several collegiate elevens in various sectors of the nation succeeded in drop-kicking the dope bucket between the uprights last Saurday, our position might be a little safer if we tried to predict the end of the world.

The East

Army vs. Lafayette: The Leopards really went to town at Fordham last Saturday, but they are just a little out of their class when they tangle with the Cadets. Army by two touchdowns.

Boston College vs. Georgetown: The Beantown boys should take this one by at least one touchdown.

Brown vs. Princetown: A single point may decide it. Just to get away from straddling the fence, we'll say Princeton.

Bucknell vs. Penn State: The Nittany Lions didn't play last Saturday, but, from all appearances they will be almost as potent as last year. It should be an easy romp for Penn State.

Rutgers vs. Colgate: The final verdict probably will favor Rutgers, but the Scarlet's bench power may be strained almost to the breaking point.

Columbia vs. Harvard: This will prove one of the traditional Ivy league battles where anything might happen. Columbia by a hair's breadth.

Navy vs. Cornell: If the Middies can boot an extra point or kick one from the field, they might get back to the surface this week.

Dartmouth vs. Pennsylvania: The perennial Ivy league champs make their debut this week, and should have no trouble in mowing down the Big Green of Dartmouth. Penn by no less than 14

Holy Cross vs. Syracuse: After brushing aside Georgetown last week, the Crusaders appear to be on the march again, and should be about two touchdowns better than the Salt City boys.

Notre Dame vs. Pitt: If the Irish don't take this one by at least two touchdowns, we'll lose our shirts again.

Villanova vs. Duquesne: After being trampled by the Cadets from West Point last Saturday, the Wildcats should claw themselves out an easy triumph over the Duquesne lads.

The Mid West

Wisconsin vs. Illinois: Here is one case where Saturday's tipped over dope bucket prompted us to change our forecast. Now, we'll take the Illini on a close verdict.

Iowa vs. Indiana: The Hoosiers toppled Wisconsin from a top contending spot in the Big Nine conference last week while the Iowans were having a hard time edging the lowly Marquette Hilltoppers 14-12. Indiana will win this one handily.

Iowa State vs. Kansas State: It looks like the 28th consecutive trampling for the Wildcats from Kansas State.

Kansas vs. Colorado: From our seat along the sidelines, it looks like the Jayhawks are about ready to take off again, and the Rocky mountains seem to be as good a place to start as anywhere. Kansas in a breeze.

Michigan vs. Oregon: The Wolverines have long spelled out defeat for West Coast elevens, and there is no reason why they shouldn't this time. Michigan by two or more touchdowns.

Michigan State vs. Hawaii: Five thousand miles is a long way to travel just to get your ears pinned back. After last week's showing against the Wolverines, we would cast all of our ballots for the Michigan Sate crew.

Minnesota vs. Nebraska: The Gophers reportedly have the best line in the Big Nine environs, and we don't expect it to buckle under the drive of the Cornhuskers. Minnesota by at least two touchdowns and as many extra points.

Missouri vs. St. Louis: Ole Mizzou is anticipating a string of figures in the black side of its ledger this year, and the St. Louisans won't be able to do much in the way of foiling the Tiger plans. Missouri in a romp.

Northwestern vs. Purdue: On this one we'll let you flip a coin. If it stands on end, we'll take Northwestern -- or let you take Northwestern and we'll take Purdue. Might even be a tie.

Ohio State vs. Southern California: Neither team has its fireworks of ages past, but we'll give our nod to Ohio State on a close decision.

Oklahoma vs. Texas A &M: The Sooners should revive the run of '89 in this one after being upset by Santa Clara last week. Two or more touchdowns difference in the score should favor the Oklahomans.

Oklahomo A & M vs. Denver: This one may go to Cowboy fans what the Georgia - Chattanooga game was to Bulldog enthusiasts. However, a close verdict should favor the Aggies.

Tulsa vs. Florida: The Golden Hurricane of Tulsa will blow over the heart of grapefruit Land, and the Floridians had better start digging in. Unless the gators pull a surprise, the storm will carry at least a one-touchdown margin back up Oklahoma way.

The South

Vanderbilt vs. Alabama: Here's where we cast our ballots for an upset. Last week, the Black and Gold Ministrels of Vandy made Georgia Tech throw in everything but the towel while Tulane was pushing back the highly - touted Crimson Tide. Vandy by a touchdown.

Tennessee vs. Duke: Both Duke and Tennessee were victims of miscalculations last Saturday, and what might happen this weekend is anybody's guess. Ours, however, is that Duke's Blue Devils will be about one touchdown richer in scores than the Vols.

Georgia vs. North Carolina: Arm - chair strategists who had picked the Bulldogs to breeze through an undefeated season will be able to go to work on a few set of blueprints after this one. Between Johnny Rauch of the Bulldogs and Charley "Choo Choo" Justice of the Tar Heels, there will be plenty of backfield fireworks in this one, but we look for the Chapel Hill lads to be about a pair of touchdowns better than the Crackers when the smoke has cleared away.

Georgia Tech vs. Tulane: Our pick of a team to top the Southeastern conference this year is Tech, and we wouldn't be very consistent to say that Tulane will win this one. Bobby Dodd, however, will have to hit his Ramblin' Wreck reserves hard to stop the surprising Tulane Green Wave.

Kentucky and Mississippi: To save the trouble of flipping a coin, we'll just call this one a tie.

LSU vs. Rice: The Tigers of Baton Rouge are in for a tough grind this season, and Rice is high on their list of formidable barriers. Although the Owls' results of recent campaigns has been too gratifying, Head Man Jess Neely of the nocturnals should feel a little better after this contest. Our guess: Rice by a single touchdown or less.

Mississippi State vs. Baylor: We can hardly disregard the fact that the Maroons turned Gen. Neyland's Tennessee Volunteers every way but loose last Saturday in giving the boys from the river bottom a slight edge over the Bears.

The Southwest

TCU vs. Arkansas: The Texas Christians, after trampling two gon - conference foes, will start their stampede toward the championship against the Razorbacks. The Arkansawyers, who have pushed several would - be Southwestern champs off their thrones in years past, might pull this one out of the fire, but we doubt it.

SMU vs. Texas Tech: The high-powered Mustangs should have no trouble in running roughshod over the boys from Tech.

Texas vs. New Mexico: Easy pickings for the Longhorns after the blow dealt them by North Carolina's Tar Heels last Saturday. Texas by any score the Longhorns want to make it.

The Far West

California vs. St. Mary's: The Bears already have a string of triumphs started for this year, and they won't let the Gaels stand in their way. The Bears in a romp.

UCLA vs. Idaho: The Uclans won't have any trouble with this one.

Oregon State vs. Washington: After holding the Minnesota Gophers scoreless for three periods last week, we wouldn't hesitate to cast our vote for Washington. However, don't write this one off as a cinch.

Stanford vs. Washington State: Last year practically every type of mishap victimized the Redshirts of Stanford, and it doesn't look like they'll be able to do much in the way of improving their status this year. It should be an easy win for the Washington State Cougars.

Battalion's5thCompany Wins Guidon Streamer

In the formal parade of the 325th Infantry Training battalion held last Saturday, Fifth company won the guidon streamer for being the best in the weekly competition among the companies.

Third company won the plaque for presenting the best appearance at the weekly inspection, Sixth company had the best mess, and the fourth platoon of Second company had the best barracks.

DOUBLE-BARRELED . . . When Johnny Crush --- what a name for a football player --- injured his right arm throwing the javelin, he spent an entire summer to toss a football left-handed. Now a freshman at Rensselaer Polytechnic institute at Troy, N. Y., the quarterback, who was outstanding at Trenton, N. J., Catholic high school, flings the pigskin from both sides with equal facility. Too bad the rules restrict a team to one football.

SAND HILL SULTANS . . . Recently accepted challenge of the post intra-mural diamond league, the 25th Infantry combat team leader's season's record of eight wins and one setback. The Sand Hill aggregation, however, had to be content with runner-up honors in the league when they had dropped two games of a three-tilt playoff with the 25th Infantry regiment team after they had dropped two games of a three-tilt playoff series to the powerful 78th Field Artillery battalion squad. Team members include, first row, left to right, William Brabham, Zack Lemelle, Willie Wise, Hirron Collier, Willie Conerly, Walter Scott, Horace Smith, Charlie Nichols, Amos Lige, William Humphrey, Gordon Burke and James Bryant. Second row, left to right, are Robert Burns, Willie Weaver, Amos Snowden, Eugene Thomas, Lawrence Miles, Charlie Toliver, Anthony Hardy, Leon Coleman, Lewis Davis, Murray D. Whiting and Charles Johnson.

25th's Company F Gets New Topkick

One of the most versatile athletes in the 25th Infantry regiment, 1st Sgt. Charles Nichols, has been made temporary first sergeant of Company F.

In the army since October, 1942, Sergeant Nichols landed in Liverpool, England, in May, 1943.

He served approximately 38 months in Europe as first sergeant of Company B, 383rd Military Police battalion, and of Company B, 1679th Engineer battalion.

Sergeant Nichols, who also served with the 614th Tank battalion, participated in the campaigns of Normandy, Northern France Rhineland and Central Germany.

He reenlisted in Germany in May, 1946, with the Ninth division military police, and remained with the unit until his return to the states in October, 1946.

USE OF MARGARINE

In 1941 the average person used 16 pounds of butter and three pounds of margarine. In 1947 the average use of butter was 11 pounds to five pounds of margarine and this rise in the use of margarine is reported continuing this year.

100th Reenlistee During Month Takes Oath Here

A veteran of 13 years service, Sgt. 1st cl. Arthur E. Lardon of Company C, Infantry School detachment, became the 100th man to re-enlist at Fort Benning during September, taking the oath for his next enlistment here last Friday.

A member of the recoilless committee of the Weapons section, of the Infantry School, Sergeant Lardon came to Fort Benning late in 1945 after re-enlisting at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

Entering the service in January, 1936, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., Sergeant Lardon first served with the Fifth Infantry division at that post until 1940, except for a span of nine months during which time he participated in maneuvers at Fort McClellan, Ala.

He went to Iceland with the Fifth division in 1942, serving as platoon sergeant there until his transfer to Ireland a year and a half later. After his return to the states, Sergeant Lardon went overseas once more, this time to Hawaii with the 98th Infantry division.

He returned from the Pacific in October, 1945.

Britain's General C. B. Fairbanks Spending Five Days At Center

Maj. Gen. C. B. Fairbanks, director of Infantry of the British army, now in the midst of a week's tour of the Infantry Center, is observing methods of U. S. infantry instruction and training.

Upon his arrival by plane at Lawson air force base Monday afternoon, the British infantry director was greeted by a guard of honor and a 13-gun salute, after which he paid an official call on the Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress.

The British army representative, who was honored at an official dinner the night of his arrival here, began his tour of the post Tuesday morning after a conference with General Burress and Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, assistant Infantry School commandant.

Accompanied by Maj. I. W. Gore-Langton of the Coldstream Guards, General Fairbanks started his tour at the airborne section, where he viewed the latest airborne developments. Tuesday afternoon he visited the Academic department and the training aids exhibit before going to Buckeye road to witness the infantry demonstration by Army Field Forces board No. 3 was presented Wednesday morning for the Briton. He viewed types of artillery fire at Bush hill late in the afternoon.

This morning General Fairbanks is scheduled to witness an infantry fire power demonstration at Hook range and a battalion in defense this afternoon at 2 p.m. at Buffalo road.

Friday he will meet with Col. B. L. Lucas, president of Army Field Forces board No. 3, and will attend a selected conference with members of the Infantry School staff and faculty. He will depart by air from Lawson early Saturday morning.

The recently appointed director of British infantry is a graduate of Sandhurst, equivalent of the U.S. Military academy. He once served with the Sherwood Forresters, one of the Empire's crack regiments, in the United Kingdom and the West Indies.

During the early part of the war, General Fairbanks was assigned as a general staff officer with the British staff in Washington, D. C., which was then headed by Sir John Dill. The unit was part of the Anglo-American combined chiefs of staff.

The British infantryman served under Field Marshals Wavel and Auchinleck in the Middle East and commanded a brigade that fought in the Middle East, Italy, Belgium and Germany during the last war.

Furlough Rates Being Considered

Special furlough rates for enlisted men are being considered by the Association of American Railroads according to a statement by W. J. Kelly, association traffic officer, as reported this week in Army Times.

The railroads whose big wartime profits have been followed by a period of little or no dividends may be a little reluctant to restore the wartime furlough rates, the statement said.

In addition to their loss of revenue the railroads would also be faced with the question of whether the special rates will be given to the comparatively small number of draftees in the army or if it will be extended to include the career personnel of all the armed forces.

The special rates were discontinued by the railroads early in 1947. An earlier attempt to drop the furlough rates occured in the later part of 1946 but was delayed by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the plea of army officials.

2 New Chaplains Arrive At Benning

The chaplain force here received two new additions last week with the arrival of Chaplain (Maj.) Ralph Pugh, who has been assigned to the 3440th Army Service unit, and Chaplain (Capt.) Harvey M. Hardin, who has been assigned to the Station hospital.

Chaplain Pugh (Protestant) comes here directly from the West Point Military academy where he had served as chaplain of the 1802nd Special regiment for the past two years. The only army chaplain at the academy, Chaplain Pugh previously had served with the 94th Infantry division in Europe.

A native of Williamstown, West Va., Chaplain Pugh held the pastorate of the Immanuel Baptist church in Chester, Pa., before entering the army in 1941. The new 3440th chaplain will hold his first service Sunday, Oct. 3, at 10 a. m. in the chapel which has been set up in the third cuartel for units living in that area.

Replacing Chaplain Robert Canis, who has been transferred to the Infantry Center chaplain's office, Chaplain Hardin has taken over duties at the Station hospital. He has just returned from two years with the Third medium port in Korea.

This is his second tour at Fort Benning, having served previously at the Officer Candidate School and as the assistant post chaplain until 1946.

His first assignment after entering the service in 1942 was with the 334th Special Service Engineer regiment with which he served for more than two years in the Persian gulf command. He pioneered religious work as his regiment built docks, camps and roads in the deserts and mountains of Iran.

A graduate of Florida Southern college and Duke univeristy, Chaplain Hardin's home is Chester, S. C. He was a state Sunday School pastor with the Methodist church in Florida for four years, and has served as pastor of churches in Lakeland, Orlando, and St. Petersburg, Fla.

Book To Honor CMH Winners

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall announced today that a book honoring those men who have received the Medal of Honor will be released about Oct. 15, 1948. It is entitled The Medal of Honor of the United States Army.

With a foreword by President Truman, the volume will tell the story of the Congressional Medal of Honor as it pertains to the army from the time of its inception, when President Abraham Lincoln signed the resolution making it law on July 12, 1862, through World War II.

Here for the first time will be found all 2,116 winners of the army Medal of Honor.

TIC Character Guiding Council Is Established

In compliance with President Truman's announcement Sept. 17 of a new civilian commission to supervise "religious and moral welfare and character guidance in the armed forces,.. the newly formed 14-man Infantry Center Character Guidance council met for the first time last Thursday, Sept. 23, stressing the importance of character as standard equipment for the soldier.

An implementation of the idea as stressed by President Truman and more recently by Chief of Staff Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the local guidance council was briefed in its first meeting by the Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, on its important mission:

The council recalled General Bradley's statement that through continuing positive measures to "encourage morality, a new realization has been born that the army has an obligation, especially to the parents of the youthful soldier, to continue, as far as possible under conditions of military service, the wholesome influence of the home, family, and community."

Discussed were such problems as AWOL, venereal disease, treatment of men in confinement, expansion of special service facilities and the implementation of the chaplains' program. Improvement of day rooms and conduct of officers and enlisted men also were on the discussion list.

In announcing plans for the setting up of a new civilian commission, President Truman said, "the spiritual and moral health of the armed forces is a vital element in our national security."

The members of the national advisory commission will be named later.

Today's Infantry Packs Greater Power Wallop

BY MERRILL S. HARRISON

If the recent announcement about the two new weapons courses to be offered at the Infantry School for enlisted men and the list of weapons they will work with caused any raising of eyebrows in other branches and arms of the services it is merely an indication that the infantry is doughboys of World Wars I and II never possessed.

packing a wallop today that

The airforce may have its glamorous jet jobs, the navy its flattops and subs, but the infantry is now getting its share of the new weapons that make the powe of the one-time footslogger something such old time gents as Baron von Steuben never dreamed of. He's still hanging on to his traditional rifle, machine gun and mortar, but under the quietly adopted new setup he's getting a lot of punch that makes him a soldier able to stand up and smack down anything afoot or awheel.

Take the new style rifle company for example. It still consists of three rifle platoons and a weapons platoon. But what weapons! Each rifle platoon in addition to its M-1's has a weapons squad armed with a light .30 caliber machine gun and a 2.36 rocket launcher, the deadly bazooka of World War II. This isn't all, however. Each rifle company's weapons platoon has a section with three 60 mm mortars and a section of three 57 mm rifles, the recoilless model.

The heavy weapons company of each infantry battalion still has its mortars—four 81 mm pieces. In addition it has eight machine guns, four light .30 calibers and four heavy .30 calibers. To give it even more firepower it also now possesses four of the new recoilles model 75 mm rifles.

The men attending the Infantry School's new weapons courses will be trained in all these weapons plus such numbers as the flame thrower and riot stick. Prerequisites for attendance are AGCT scores of 90 or higher non-com rating and demonstrated qualities of leadership requisite for promotion to the third pay grade.

Post AG to Handle Efficiency Rating

The wheels of the long-awaited program of enlisted efficiency reports began turning here this week with the announcement by Col. Arthur C. Purvis, Infantry Center adjutant general, that Fort Benning has been designated a Central Computing and Examining Agency for the efficiency reports.

The adjutant general's office will, he said, be required to set up a new section involving the use of business machines and other computing apparatus. In addition to Fort Benning personnel, the agency will also service other installations in the area, Colonel Purvis declared.

The agency will be responsible for the following activities:

1. Adminstering and scoring of job proficiency examinations.

2. Scoring and evaluating enlisted efficiency reports for every man in the first six pay grades.

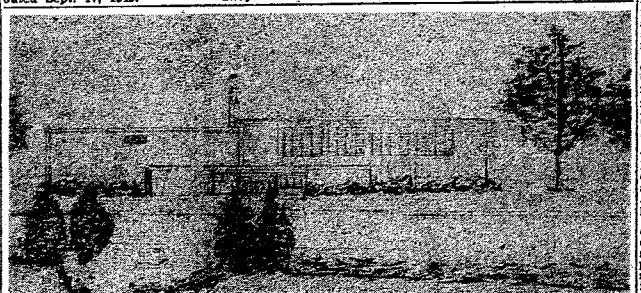
4. Transmitting composite scores to higher headquarters for promotions. (As part of the career plan, promotions to the higher pay grades will be made on army and theater-wide bases.

5. Stocking and accounting for examinations.

6. Completing section 5 of the applications for promotion.

7. Issuing promotion orders when directed by higher headquarters.

In addition to Fort Benning, the Central Computing and Examining Agency will service the following units:



3301 A.SU. at Alabama Polytechnic institute; 3140 A.A.S.U. and U.S.A.F. recruiting main station, Columbus, Ga.; 3221 A.S.U., Columbus high school R.O.T.C.; 3810 Station Medical group at Maxwell airforce base, Montgomery, Ala.

The 3140 A.S.U.-U.S.A.F. recruiting main station, Montgomery, Ala.; 3204 A.S.U. Sidney Lanier High School R.O.T.C., Montgomery, and 3366 A.S.U. Alabama National guard instructors, also at Montgomery, Ala.

The procedure for rendering enlisted reports has been published in army Regulation 600-150, dated Sept. 17, 1948.

Dough-Navy Game To Be Broadcast

A play by play account of Sunday afternoon's football game between the Fort Benning Doughboys and the Memphis naval Flyers will be broadcast by Nat Albright over radio station WGBA in Columbus at 2 p.m. The broadcasts have been made a regular feature of the city radio station, and all home games will be on the air this year. Plans also are being mapped for broadcasting the Doughboy's two remaining games away.

FIELD HOUSE . . . This architect's drawing shows the new half-million dollar field house to be erected at Fort Benning. To be located between the main post office and the cafeteria, it will face Stilwell field. Within the field house will be a swimming pool, two basketball courts, two handball courts, exercise rooms, showers, storage rooms and offices. A balcony for spectators will also be built. Completion of the structure is expected within a year.

Record Number Of Fort Benning Troops Reenlist

Nearly half of all men eligible for discharge at Fort Benning during September reenlisted, Col. Arthur C. Purvis, adjutant general of the Infantry center, reported yesterday.

Reenlistment figures and percentages, which also include extensions on current enlistments, for the month of September, by units, follows:

Army Field Forces Board 3, with four men eligible, reenlisted four for 100 percent. August percentage for this unit was zero and July figure 100 percent.

The 3440 A.S.U., with 65 men discharged, reenlisted 58 for a 73 percent score. The percentage in this unit reenlisting in August was 15 and in July it was 10.

The Student Training Regiment reenlisted 19, or 76 percent of the 25 eligible men discharged in September. Its August percentage was 25 and in July it scored 11 percent.

With 188 men discharged last month the 325th Infantry regiment reenlisted 39 for a 20 per cent figure. This compares to a figure of nine percent in August and four percent in July.

The Infantry School detachment more than doubled its August rate of reenlistment in September with 57 per cent or 36 of its 63 eligible dischargees returning to service. In August the figure was 26 percent and in July it was only nine.

The 999th Field Artillery battalion's perfect figure for September of four men discharged and four reenlisting beats its August figure of no reenlistments and its July percentage of 33.

Also last month the Station Hospital discharged eight men and reenlisted five for a 62 percent figure. The 2044th Transportation Truck battalion last month discharged 27 men, of whom 18 signed up for a percentage of 44.

While figures for the rest of the posts in the Third Army area for September are not yet available, Fort Benning rated highly during July and August with the major posts in the area.

Percentages for August in posts of the Third Army were: Oliver General Hospital, 21; Fort Benning, 14; Fort Bragg, 14; Fort Jackson, 8; Fort MacPherson 8; Huntsville Arsenal, 0; Atlanta General Distribution Depot, 9; and others, 0.

During July the percentages were: Fort McPherson, 85; Fort Bragg 9; Fort Benning, 8; Oliver General Hospital, 7; Fort Jackson, 6; Huntsville Arsenal, 0, and Atlanta General Distribution Depot, 0.

(The figures given here on reenlistment pertain only to men eligible for reenlistment. They do not include men discharged for physical, mental or moral reasons; or "for the good of the service."

Among the reasons given for the great increase in reenlistment at the Infantry Center, according to Col. Purvis, were the chances for promotion resulting from the expansion of the army and also the great efforts being made by this post to improve housing conditions and other facilities for the enlisted men.

What Are The Army's Plans?

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth in a series of articles dealing with the expansion of the army through selective service. The Bayonet is indebted to the information section, Headquarters Second army, Fort George G. Meade, Md., for the information presented here.

1—WILL COMMUNISTS BE DRAFTED?

There is no provision in the law for excluding Communists.

2—WILL THE DRAFTEE BE EXPOSED TO SUBVERSIVE ELEMENTS?

It cannot be assumed that the inductee can be guaranteed against subversive propaganda. There is no such guarantee in civil life. The means presently taken throughout the army to combat subversive influences will afford much protection to the inductee. Troop information programs and the instruction and examples of their officers and non-commissioned officers will afford the inductee the broadest possible training in loyal American citizenship.

3—WHAT ABOUT THE COURTS-MARTIAL SYSTEM?

There is no peculiar courts-martial system applicable to the inductees. They will be subject to the Articles of War as are all other members of the military establishment. However, the army has taken the lead in attempting to improve administration of military justice. As a result of the experience gained in the last war, the War Department appointed an advisory committee, nominated by the American Bar association, in March, 1946, to study the administration of military justice and make recommendations as to necessary changes in the existing laws and the administration thereof. This committee recommended a number of revisions in the Articles of War and in the procedures. Based upon this, a courts-martial bill was suggested to the Congress by the War Department, and this bill, with some changes, is now incorporated in the Selective Service Act. However, this feature of the act does not become effective until eight months after approval by the President.

4—WILL SELECTEES BE ENTITLED TO VETERANS' BENEFITS AND BENEFITS UNDER THE GI BILL PROVIDED FOR WORLD II VETERANS?

The GI Bill does not apply to those entering the army after July 25, 1947. Under present legislation, the selectee who has completed his term of service in a satisfactory manner will be entitled to very liberal reemployment benefits.

5—WHAT ABOUT RACE SEGREGATION?

The army's policy must continue to be the employment of Negro troop units of appropriate size and conformation in the best interests of overall efficiency. There will be equality and lack of discrimination between races.

6—WHAT ABOUT THE CASTE SYSTEM?

There are always individuals in public and private life who are prone to overestimate their own importance and underestimate their responsibilities. Frequently, through insistent reiteration, isolated instances are blown up in the public eye to an extent out of all proportion to the facts. The army has no caste system in any true sense, for every soldier is afforded the opportunity to get to the top of his profession. The only obstacle is himself. Because of the nature of war, commanders are vested with authority commensurate with their responsibilities. Abuse of authority should never be tolerated anywhere. The cry of "caste system" is usually heard in time of war when millions of men from all walks of life are drafted into the army and suddenly find themselves bereft of civil security and position inherited or acquired over a period of years. They also find themselves in keen competition with those around them and subject to orders of individuals they may consider as their social inferiors. It is then that they raise the question, "What has he got that I haven't got?" And they find satisfaction in deriding the "system." This unfortunate attitude of a relative few has at times tended to undermine confidence in authority and responsibility.

NG 1, Reservists Get Command, Staff Training

Qualified officers of the civilian components of the army will be given an opportunity to participate in a course of instruction at the command and staff level to be initiated on a local basis this winter in 16 locations over the nation, General Jacob L. Devers, chief, army field forces, announced today.

This "Special Course, Command and Staff" is based on resident courses at the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and is designed to further the military education of officers of the Organized Reserve corps and the national guard who cannot spare time from their civilian pursuits to attend the resident course at Fort Leavenworth.

The announcement emphasized that the special course is not the equivalent of the resident courses but when supplemented by army extension courses provides a means of maintaining a high state of training. The entire course will consist of three two-week phases approximately one year apart. The first phase will be conducted this year on a trial basis to determine the practicability of similar instruction based on courses in other service schools.

Instructors will be obtained from the regular army, the organized reserve and the national guard, and they will receive a short course of training at Fort Leavenworth.

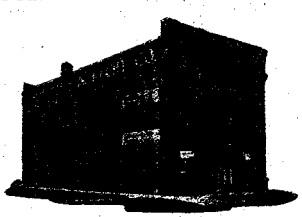
Sgt. James Smith, 21 Years Service, Honored at Parade



Twenty one years of service with the 25th Infantry regiment ended for M-Sgt. James W. Smith last Thursday with a parade and review in his honor.

The retirement ceremony, during which Col. James F. Torrence of the 325th Infantry regimental combat team, presented him with a commendatory letter from Lt. Gen. Alvan G. Gillem, Third army commander, was held at Stilwell field.

It was noted on the record of Sergeant Smith that during his 21 years service he had never lost a day under Article of War 107 and that he had spent his entire career with the 25th Infantry.

Participating in the parade in honor of the retiring non-commissioned officer were the 999th Field Artillery battalion, the 758th Tank battalion and the 72nd Army band.

Captain Ver Hey Post WAC Head

Formerly with the chief of staff's office in Nanking, China, Capt. Hazel Ver Hey has assumed command of the local WAC detachment, replacing Lt. Rosemary O'Loughlin who has been transferred to Camp Lee, Va.

During her two years in Nanking, Captain Ver Hey also worked with the U. S. army advisory board.

The new War detachment commander entered the service in 1942 at Holland, Mich., taking her basic training at Des Moines, Ia. She was commissioned in 1943 after graduation from Officer Candidate School at Des Moines.

Captain Ver Hey was appointed assistant classification and assignment officer at Des Moines following graduation, serving there until March, 1943, when she moved to Camp Monticello, Ark.

After a short tour of duty at Camp Monticello, she was transferred to Fort George Meade, Md., where she remained as assistant classification and assignment officer until the middle of 1944 when she became adjutant of the Reception center there.

In April, 1946, Captain Ver Hey went overseas to begin her two-year tour in Nanking.

END OF THHE TRAIL . . . Retiring after 21 years service, M/Sgt. James F. Smith is congratulated by Col. James F. Torrence, commander of the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team. Indoctrination in the tactics of airborne operations will be given key national guard officers by the Tactical Air command in cooperation with army field forces, in courses to be conducted during October at Eglin air force base, Fla., Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau, announced today.

Approximately 50 national guard officers of army units of the command and staff level, preferably division and combat team commanders and training officers, are expected to attend the special three-day air indoctrination courses. The courses will be given Oct. 10-13, 17-20 and 24-27.

"Training in airborne operations will be emphasized increasingly since the national guard as a first phase M-Day force must be prepared for immediate air-ground operations," General Cramer said.

A Worthy Campaign

It's not often that we appeal to Fort Benning troops to contribute to fund-raising campaigns, but the Community Chest drive, which gets under way here next Monday, is deserving of the support of everyone on the post. We don't know of any organization which serves the youth of this country so well, but in order to continue its program it must have funds to operate. And that's how we can all help—by giving freely as much as we feel we can afford to give.

Sometimes, many of us feel that there are entirely too many campaigns of this sort conducted. That may be true, but we believe that even though one is able to donate to only one activity during the year, the Community Chest should be that activity.

This is the one real community project, one that serves the entire Fort Benning family in some way. Among the organizations to be benefitted by contributions are the Boy and Girl Scouts, both of which are among the greatest character building organizations the world has ever known. There are few indeed who have not at some time been affiliated with the scout movement. Those who have been already know the great work done by these fine organizations, and those who haven't at least know the purpose of scouting and should realize how important it is that scouting continue to flourish.

Another organization helped by the Community Chest is the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. The Foundation's great humanitarian work depends largely upon the support of the public. Without adequate subscription, it would not be possible to care for those stricken with paralysis, who, through the Foundation, are made useful citizens again. Of course, not all operating expenses come from the Community Chest, but every dollar received means that much more to spend in rehabilitating those who seek relief from polio.

Fort Benning also maintains a teen-age club, Brat Barracks, which serves both the children of officers and enlisted men and which benefits directly from Community Chest contributions. This, too, is a character building organization. Under the guidance of Chaplain Wallace M. Hale, Brat Barracks provides a wholesome club where all Fort Benning boys and girls may spend their evenings and weekends.

The enlisted man benefits from the Community Chest through the Joint Army Emergency Relief and the Airforce Aid society. These two societies give aid to the soldier and his family when there is real need, and their value cannot be denied. They, too, will receive a portion of the funds collected through the Community Chest drive.

Those married men who are looking forward to completion of the trailer camp should by all means be among the first to contribute since the trailer camp will be among those activities to derive some of their operating expenses from the chest.

Other Fort Benning activities whose continued operation will depend to some extent on monies contributed Fort Benning's Children schools and the Fort Benning to the Community Chest include Army Relief society, Christmas party.

Surely, at least one of these organizations has helped everyone at Fort Benning in some way. If not, there may be a day in the future when you will call upon one of them to help you or some member of your family. In the meantime, it behooves us all to support the Community Chest fund-raising drive by giving as much as we can.

Strictly Editorializing

We sometimes wonder why it should be necessary to remind people that fires are destructive. Yet, each year, we are asked to observe Fire Prevention Week, and during that week to take added precautions to see that we do nothing that might result in the outbreak of a conflagration.

Still, despite the time spent in urging everyone to be careful, fire losses at Fort Benning during fiscal year 1948 "were excessive. A majority have been traced to carelessness and were caused largely by discarded cigarette butts, lighted matches, placing of hot ashes in inflammable containers, placing pennies behind fuses or bridging fuses in some manner, and careless handling of inflammable liquids." All this came out in a message Oct. 1 signed by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

The report further stated, however, that during the first quarter of the current fiscal year, fire losses amounted to only $148. This is an enviable record, but one which could still be improved provided everyone follows the few simple rules of fire preventions which fire department and engineer officials have compiled.

Every week should be fire prevention week, and everyone at Fort Benning should be a self-appointed fire marshal. Remember that fires cause not only loss of property, but loss of life which can not be measured in terms of dollars and cents.

Chaplain's Corner..

THE CHRISTIAN CHALLENGE
By Chaplain Ralph H. Pugh

Many years ago a man in the patent office at Washington quit his job because he thought there wasn't any future to it. Surely everything had been invented that was possible. If he is still alive, I wonder how he feels?

Now this business of Christianity is like the incident mentioned above. Many people think that Christ settled everything, and we can simply accept that fact and quit. As a matter of fact, Christ not only settled something. He also started something even greater. He made it possible for all men for all time to know God, and He opened up a whole new frontier of spiritual realties.

Our task is to go forth and proclaim the good news that God wants men to serve Him. Christianity will never be on the defensive. It is an offensive religion. As one coach said about basketball: "Your best defense is a good offense." Certainly evil will score a few goals, but righteousness will ultimately win, and that's what counts. As the old saying goes, "They pay off in points."

Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "A man is a fagot of thunderbolts." How true that is. We have unlimited possibilities. We are creatures of choice. We choose to be good, or we choose to be evil. And mind you this, there is no middle ground. It is either right or it's wrong. Many people in our world are living on half-truths. We should welcome any clear-cut, inspired thinking that sets us straight. Truth always hurts, but so did Pearl Harbor. At last we knew where we stood, so we pitched in to win a war.

The gauntlet has been thrown to Christianity and, like the generations that have bone before, we must pick it up and carry the Cross. It is not easy, but neither was it easy to die in the emperor's gardens or to be thrown to the lions in the arena. Little do we know of the impending sacrifice that we may be called upon to make for our faith.

Christianity makes men want to do good things. If a handful of men inspired by Christ could turn the world upside-down, what can we do with the unlimited resources at our command? Communism knows its strength and is continually flexing its muscles. We have its strength and is continually flexing its muscles. We have strength; let's show it. How?? By living and teaching the truth in such fashion that half truth and muddled thought will be put in their true tattle-gray pglace. Men have always responded to a message that was from God, as witness both the Old and New Testament heroes. Today men are looking for leadership and guidance in matters not only of politics and international affairs, but in their souls. Can they find it in the Church and the men who represent the Church?

THE HUSBAND WHO RAN AWAY

If you're looking for a book to improve your mind, we suggest that you stay clear of Hildegard Dolson's "The Husband Who Ran Away". On the other hand if your spirits are dragging, or you feel that your disposition needs working over, you could do a lot worse than have the post librarian reserve the book for you.

"The Husband Who Ran Away" may not help you; but it certainly won't hurt you. It may, of course, give you a few ideas, especially if you're a husband like Addison Stubbs—age 35, height 120 lbs., assistant manager of the Bracklin, Pa., Western Union, married nine years to Hilaria, who could manage a golf match or a husband with equal facility. It will undoubtedly give you ideas if you have a mother-in-law like Mrs. Bancruffet. Hilaria's mother was the kind of woman who went on the honeymoon with her daughter and son-in-law. Addison Stubbs was the kind of husband who would let her go with them. Hilaria and her mother ran Addison's life quite beautifully for every one but Addison for nine years and would probably have continued to run it for nineteen more if his head and Mrs. Bancruffet's favorite antique clock hadn't had a slight mix-up which led to complications which led to Addison's hitching a ride on a New York - bound truck.

We don't ask you to believe that things happen to people on the loose in New York as they did to Addison Stubbs. We don't believe them ourselves. But life would be a lot more interesting if they did. You may remember how Ruth McKenny's sister Eileen always met so many unusual people in New York. Well, that's the way it was with Addison, only considerably more so. There was, for instance Avis Newcomb, the young lady who worked for Travelers' Help, who loved emergencies, and managed to make a few of her own. There was the countess, Marla, who discovered Addison's talent for making scarecrows and turned him into the designing "find" of the season. There were other people, hundreds of them, who had a big part in the transformation of the "husband who ran away".

As you've probably discovered if you read her previous book, "We Shook the Family Tree", Hildegarde Dolson knows how to write about these odd characters. We particularly enjoyed her description of Mrs. Agnes Huskand, the recent graduate of the Success School. We've seen her counterpart staring at us from advertisments in all the charm magazines. Of course, some of these people may be exaggerated — slightly — but we think you'll be able to recognize them.

We recommend this book for all actual and potential husbands and wives and also for all those who have no intention of being husbands or wives. We should add however, that you won't like the book if you're at all inclined to be like Mrs. Bancruff.

Your Red Cross

In going over a group of that the problems of men in this troubled world are many. One soldier received a wire his grandfather died. Under ordinary circumstances that doesn't warrant a furlough, but this soldier's grandfather raised him. So we were able to get him a furlough and away he went.

The next soldier had a telegram from his sister-in-law stating that his brother was in the hospital, and could not be discharged until the bill was paid. Of course, we eased the soldier's mind at once by telling him that no hospital could hold a patient against his will. Then since he was going to be paid on the first of the month, we had the Red Cross in his home town advise the hospital the soldier would pay on a monthly basis. So his brother was allowed to go home.

The soldier who came in next wasn't stationed at Fort Benning, but was at home in Columbus on a delay enroute to another camp. How about transportation? It was an easy matter for us to arrange with the military to furnish him transportation to his other camp.

As so frequently happens, the next case was a letter from a soldier's mother wanting to know how her son was getting along because he wasn't writing as he should. The soldier was contacted, and it was arranged that he would write his mother. In the meantime we wired the Red Cross in his home town that he was getting along all right. So both the soldier and his mother were happy.

Frequently, hospital and medical bills mount amazingly fast and in huge amounts. Our next case was one of a soldier who owed five or six hundred dollars in hospital and medical hills in his home town, in a case like that, he advised, the chapter of the conditions. They, in turn, contacted the Red Cross in Atlanta who works out a joint arrangement between the AER in Atlanta and the Red Cross in Atlanta to help the soldier out with such a heavy burden.

So these are, some of the troubles and problems that occur each day and every hour and most unexpectedly. If you have a problem similar to these, in fact, if you have any problem that is causing you worry and discomfort, come in and talk it over.

A character of the type that ties cans to dogs' tails smeared limberger cheese on the upper lip of a prostrate drunk. The drunk came to life. He sniffed. He headed for the door. Outside he sniffed again. He returned to the bar and confidentially informed the bartender—"The whole damn world stinks!"

Woman's Club Silver Anniversary Year Opened Monday With Meeting and Tea

With approximately 600 ladies present, the Fort Benning Woman's club opened its silver anniversary year with a general meeting, reception and tea in the Main lounge of the Officers' club Monday afternoon. Maj Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general, was principal speaker, and Mrs. Irvine C. Scudder, president, conducted the meeting.

Mrs. Scudder presented a brief introductory talk, outlining the history of the organization which was formed in 1923 from a study club nucleus and admitted to the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs in 1924. The club was reorganized along departmental lines in 1925, and its peak year came in 1944 when its membership numbered 700.

The club theme for 1948-49 will be "Live and Think", and its purpose a twofold one—"to help others and to help ourselves."

General Burress, who was introduced by Mrs. Scudder, pointed out to club members some of the problems of life at the post, principally housing, and challenged the group to furnish ideas to help in overcoming these. He stressed the importance of the women's work, both in the community and in the army, and assured them they had the backing of his entire staff.

Mrs. Allen Peck, chairman of the program committee, outlined the program for the year, and then introduced Mrs. Henry Hester, vocalist, who presented a brief musical program. Mrs. Hester's selections were "Voi Che Sapete", "They Call Me Mimi" and "L'Amour". She was accompanied by Miss Ruth Schuessler.

The meeting was then adjourned for the reception and tea. In the receiving line were the officers of the club.

The tea table, which was arranged by Mrs. John C. Blizzard, Jr., Mrs. Gilbert Collar and Mrs. William Beachler, was laid with a lace cloth and decorated with arrangements of white gladioli and baby chrysanthemums. The silver anniversary theme was carried out in other appointments. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Robert Hill, Mrs. Burton Lucas, Mrs. Arthur Purvis, Mrs. Lloyd Brown, Mrs. Richard Sandusky. Serving tea were Mrs. J. A. Nichols, Mrs. Arden Brill, Mrs. H. E. Beine, Mrs. Frank Lee, Mrs. Charles E. Woodruff and Mrs. John Frederick.

During the meeting, minutes were read by Mrs. Albert C. Haley, and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. John H. Van Vliet, Jr. Committee reports were given as follows:

The literature and art committee, Mrs. Herbert Ellis, chairman, Mrs. Horace Gibson, co-chairman, and Mrs. O. A. Leahy, announced that the group will meet Monday at 2:30 p.m. at the Country club. They are particularly interested in music, painting, literature and art, and will perhaps feature literary contests and musical programs.

The bowling committee, Mrs. E. A. Krellick, chairman, Mrs. Athel Bangert, co-chairman, Mrs. Edgar Enger, Mrs. C. E. Frisby, and Mrs. Richard Mays, says the first meeting will be Wednesday, at 9 a.m. in the post bowling alleys.

The bridge group will meet the second and fourth Tuesdays at 1:30 p.m. at the Country club, and beginners, intermediate, and advanced groups will be formed. The committee includes Mrs. Charles W. Pence, chairman, Mrs. Robert Bull, Mrs. Frank Lee, Mrs. Leon Lichenwalter, Mrs. Earle Johnson, Mrs. Andrew Petrosky and Mrs. Patrick Watson.

Home and Garden committee, Mrs. Carl V. Burke, chairman, Mrs. John McIndoe and Mrs. Robert A. O'Brien, co-chairmen, will meet the fourth Monday at the Country club at 2:30 p.m. and the Spanish group, Mrs. E. J. Curtiss, chairman, and Mrs. Fred Bockhoven, co-chairman, will meet Thursday to decide upon regular meeting dates.

A membership drive will be conducted by the Community Concerts committee, Mrs. Robert B. Hill, chairman, and Mrs. Allen Peck, co-chairman, the week of November 1, with membership open to all post personnel, enlisted men, civilians and officers.

The membership committee of the club is composed of Mrs. Paul Hamilton, chairman, Mrs. Ben Harrell, co-chairman, Mrs. Beeckman Budd, Mrs. Bernard Byrne, Mrs. James H. Cash, Mrs. William A. Cavness, Mrs. Murray D. Cheston, Mrs. Harold Greer, Mrs. William Grover, Mrs. Charles E. Johnson, Mrs. George L. Mabry, Mrs. Samuel McDowell, Mrs. Elvy Roberts, Mrs. Shields Warren and Mrs. O. O. Post Sunday School Class Has Fix-it-Yourself Picnic

The Senior Sunday school class had an informal picnic supper Sunday evening at the ISD rest camp. Each member of the class invited another high school student, and the members of the group rode out to camp in a school bus which was furnished by the Transportation section.

At the lodge a number of games were played and dancing was enojoyed. Then a "fix-it-yourself" lunch was spread out. The only requirement on the "Dagwood Special" sandwiches was that the makers had to eat what they put together. One member of the party actually ate a mustard-on-pickle-with peanut butter-and beans- sandwich —and lived to tell about it.

Col. and Mrs. Harry S. Wilbur, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Paul Hamilton, and Chaplain Wallace Hale handled the refreshments and other arrangements. The Food Service school made the baked beans and cakes.

Telephone Book Distribution Set For This Week

The first edition of the new type Fort Benning telephone directory is being distributed this week throughout the post.

The new official directory will be complete in every detail with several added features. Included will be the classified section which carries business subscribers from Columbus, Phenix City, Ala., and surrounding territory, plus a map of Fort Benning and Columbus.

Divided into different sections of the major areas of the post, the new directory will be distributed twice a year: in the spring and fall. Books for quarters on the post can be secured at the signal office upon payment of bills, while those going to troop units and activities will be distributed in bulk.

The directory will be in two standard colors, blue for the spring and green for fall, to enable the subscriber to tell whether or not he has the latest edition.

Opening Dates Set for New NCO Courses

The opening dates of two new weapons courses at the Infantry School for non-commissioned officers has been scheduled for mid-February and early March, it has been announced by officials of the office of the co-ordinator of training.

Reporting date for students enrolling for the 14-week light weapons course No. 1 is Feb. 9 and instruction is slated to start Feb. 14, Lt. Col. Kenneth A. Ward, assistant coordinator of Training stated.

Students for heavy weapons class No. 1 are scheduled to report at the Infantry School March 2, and classes for this 14-weekcourse will begin March 7. The quota for the number of students for these courses has been set at 100 each, he said.

To be emphasized in the light weapons course are the carbine, .30 caliber rifle, flame thrower, riot stick, 60 mm mortar, 57 mm rifle, .30 caliber light machine gun and 2.36 rocket launcher.

5 Sergeants Promoted Under Career Program

Last week five sergeants of the 32?th Infantry regiment were promoted to the grade of sergeant first class by Col. James F. Torrence, regimental commander, under the provision of the career plan which states that men may be promoted to that grade if a vacancy exists within the unit and the men selected for promotion meet the requirements for the job.

According to regimental officials, the promotion of these men is one phase of the career plan that the unit is putting into effect at this time. Although these are the first promotions to be made in this grade and the first under the career plan since Colonel Torrence assumed command of the regiment last summer, the regiment is stressing career guidance and attendant promotions and assignments for qualified men, they pointed out. An example of this phase of the program was the promotion last Friday of 105 men to the grade of corporal.

Weapons Team Is Commended

A letter has been received from the Florida military district by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, praising a Fort Benning demonstration group for the "dignified, military, and very efficient manner" in which a weapons demonstration and static display were presented at a contact camp at Jacksonville Sept. 25-26.

The letter, signed by Col. R. G. Howie of the Florida district, further praised the group for its performance despite the fact it was "handicapped by a severe rainstorm during the exhibition."

Colonel Howie said in the letter that "much praise was voluntarily raised from the reservists as to the soldierly conduct and efficient manner in which the enlisted personnel performed their duties."

He continued by writing that "we feel that the camp was a great success, that the weapons demonstration was especially outstanding, and that the reserve program has been materially enhanced by the presence and fine showing of the team."

Army Redoubles Efforts to Keep Accidents Down

Gen. Omar N. Bradley army chief of staff, today pledged that despite the fact that a man serving in the army is three times safer from accidents than one in civilian life, the army "will redouble its efforts to cut down on accidental injuries."

General Bradley's message was delivered at the opening of the army's new course in safety program administration at New York university by Brig. eGn. J. J. O'Hare, chief of personnel, Department of the Army management group, principle speaker for the occasion.

General Bradley's message said: "Safety studies show that a man of army age is three times safer in the army than his friends in civilian life. To keep this record and better it for the benefit of our new draftees, the army must redouble its efforts to cut down on accidental injuries and the consequent waste of time and the talent of these young men. Accidents result from carelessness, and carelessness is evidence of faulty command.

"While these men are in the army, the army is responsible for their health, their welfare and safety. And it is you gentlemen to whom we shall look for guidance and results in the safety program. The army will cooperate with New York university in making good use of the techniques you learn while there."

Genral O'Hare told officer-students that their selection "is evidence that we consider this course important to the accomplishment of our mission. Our field manuals, instruction materials and operating procedures are being studied constantly to incorporate safe practices and eliminate the chance of our men learning how to do their jobs incrrectly—unsafely. We have a trained safety director in the headquarters of each major command; we have engineers to assist commanders at every echelon, and we have a safety officer in every battalion."

A notable result of the army's intensive accident prevention program is seen in the 1947 rate of 2,656 accidents per 100,000 military personnel, as compared to 7,888 persons injured or killed by accidents per 100,000 of the civilian population. The army accident rate is one accident per 38 persons, while the civilian rate is one accident per 13 persons, enGeral O'Hare pointed out.

In the New York university course, 25 selected officers representing continental armies and technical services will receive special instruction in the fundamentals of accident prevention and establishment and operation and establishment and operation of safety programs in the field. For several years the army has conducted such courses for its safety engineers and specialist officers, but this course is the first of its kind to develop for staff officers, the application of theories of safety engineering to practical standard operating procedures.

TIS Students See Air-Ground Show

Approximately 313 Infantry School students, 27 faculty members and two members of Army Field Forces board No. 3 will witness the second showing of "Operations Combine III" Oct. 11-13 at Eglin airforce base, Florida.

Combine III, staged by Ninth airforce, with Maj. Gen. William B. Old directing the exercise, is designed to indoctrinate officer-students of U.S. service-schools in the technique of air-ground cooperation.

The 82nd Airborne division will spearhead the attack during the maneuver. Naval and Marine corps units will join with the 82nd to portray the role of tactical air power.

Originally scheduled to start Sept. 27, the two-month maneuver did not get under way until last Monday, Oct. 4, because of the Florida hurricane. The next showing which starts Monday, Oct. 11, is the second of six demonstrations.

Students will see the first mass flight of jet-propelled aircraft in a tactical maneuver. Besides the F-80 and F-84 jets, such aircraft as the F-82, the H-5D helicopter, the navy's workhorse F-4U and the F-7F Tigercat, B-29 bombers of the Strategic Air command and B-26s of Tactical Air command will also be used.

Students from the following service schools will witness five remaining scheduled demonstrations at Elgin field: Armed Forces Staff college, Norfolk, Va.; Ground General School, Fort Riley, Kans; Infantry School, Fort Benning,; Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va; Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Bliss, Texas; Armored School, Fort Knox, Ky.; Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Va. Quartermaster School, Camp Lee, Va.; Adjutant General School, Camp Lee, Va.; Ordnance School, Aberdeen, Md., and Canadian Staff college, Toronto, Canada.

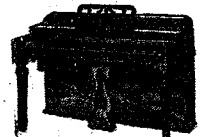
Top army, airforce, navy and marine commanders will also witness the exercise.

Railway Officials Tour Fort Benning Activities

Tremendously impressed by Fort Benning and all its many installations, about 40 officials from the Seaboard Airline Railroad company were conducted on a whirlwind tour of the post Monday.

Accompanied by Infantry Center commander, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, the railroad officials, including Henry W. Anderson, chairman of the board, and Leigh R. Powell, president, visited Columbus and Fort Benning, leaving with high praises of both.

Promoted to Corporal



Pfc. Herman W. Plock, Food Service School, has been promoted to the grade of corporal, efficials have announced.

An Evening At Benn
Non-Commissioned

While one great parental problem of today is finding a baby sitter to take care of the kids while the older folk go out dining and dancing, members of the Pine lodge NCO club worry not a whit about who's going to sit with Junior. If, and it is true, the club is becoming more and more one of the most popular places on the post for non-coms, their wives, families and friends, the reasons are simple: the club offers everything in the way of facilities that are needed for an evening's enjoyment—including baby sitters on the spot for parents who want an evening out. The picture on the upper right shows a typical scene in the well-furnished nursery on the second floor of the club. There are also two capable attendants to see that the little "members" get not only looking after, but their bottles on time, and warm.

Middle picture left shows a typical group at the club on a recent evening. From left to right are Mrs. James F. Hin-

Locals Drop Grid Fray to Marines

Begin Preps For Contest With Navy Eleven Sunday

A husky crew of marines cashed in a weight advantage at Parris Island, S. C., last Saturday afternoon to trample the Fort Benning Doughboys 12-0 on a water-logged gridiron. Victory was sweet for the leathernecks who avenged a 20-0 loss to the Doughboys during the 1947 campaign.

The skirmish was the season's opener for the Doughmen, and was the second of the year for the Parris Islanders. On the Saturday preceding their clash with the Benning eleven, the marines turned back the Fort Jackson, S. C., gridiron delegation 20-0. The Jacksonites are slated to come to Doughboy stadium for an encounter on Nov. 5.

Outweighed 16 pounds per man the Doughs had little success in cracking the forward wall of the marines, and ankle-deep mud prevented the array of fleet-footed Benning backs from showing their usual amount of speed.

Few Fumbles

Despite the slick surface of the pigskin, there were surprisingly few fumbles in the game. Not once during the contest did the visiting Doughs lose possession of the ball on a bobble, but marine ball-carriers twice juggled the oval to permit the Benningites to switch over to the offensive.

There was a pronounced scarcity of long passes, but each squad made several short aerial efforts, one of which went for a leatherneck touchdown.

The marines, who had put in more than a month's practice on the turbid field, went on the offensive shortly after the initial kickoff, but the Doughboy defenses tightened to keep the host eleven from striking pay dirt during the first period.

Picton Goes Over

The first six-pointer for the leathernecks came soon after play was resumed during the second quarter. After making three fruitless efforts to penetrate the ponderous marine front line, the Doughs were forced to kick out from their own 25-yard stripe. The punt was taken on the Parris Island 48-yard marker by quarterback R. R. Picton, who eluded the entire secondary defense of the Benning squad and raced across the double stripe standing up.

A quartet of marine penalties, totaling 50 yards, pulled the Doughs out of several holes during the late stages of the first half, but practically all of their ground-gaining endeavors bogged down.

The hapless soldier eleven was the victim of some bad breaks during the opening seconds of the third period. To start the last half, the Doughs were tagged with a 15-yard deficit for taking too much time during the half-time recess. The kickoff by the marines from the Dough 45-yard stripe went down the 20-yard marker where the army gridmen drew another 15-yard penalty.

Score on Pass

The Benningites took the punt route to come out of the deep hole unscathed, and strengthened their defenses to hold the hard-driving leathernecks scoreless during the entire third period.

After several punts had been exchanged during the final stanza, the marine eleven struck again —this time through the air. A pass interception on the 30-yard line gave the Parris Island red and gold possession of the ball on the Dough 30-yard stripe. The Dough forewall held as the marines tried two plunges, and the host eleven then drew a five-yard penalty for being off sides. With the ball resting midway between the goal line and the 10-yard marker, Picton took the snap from center, heaved a short pass to Chief Hammond in the end zone, and the leathernecks went ahead 12-0.

In trying for their points after touchdowns, the marines steered clear of kicking but the modes chosen for conversion went amiss in both instances. After Picton had reeled off his 52-yard sprint, the South Carolinians tried to plunge the ball over, but the oval-toter was stopped at the line of scrimmage, and the pass effort made after the final-quarter touchdown failed to find a receiver.

Memphis Next

The Doughmen will be trying to balance their ledger at Doughboy stadium next Sunday afternoon when they play host to the naval flyers of Memphis, Tenn. The kickoff is scheduled for 2 p.m.

Returning from Parris Island Sunday evening, Head Coach Joe Shepherd said that his most rigorous preps for the clash with the naval eleven would be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday. The local gridmen underwent a light workout Monday afternoon before going into the two-day intensive drill, and the training grind was slated to start tapering off today.

The potency of the Memphisites is virtually unknown here since Sunday's tiff with the Doughs will inaugurate their 1948 slate. Lack of transportation made it impossible for Dough scouts to observe the Flyers during an all-out scrimmage in Memphis Monday night.

BULLET GRID STARS NAMED

Phil (Hips) Tindrell and Hank (Salt Fork) Sanderson were ranked the Bullet "Gridiron Heroes of the Week" as the result of their brilliant performances in leading the Bullets to a 19-0 win over the Columbus Buffaloes recently.

Tindrell, a snake-hipped backfield artist from the corn state of Iowa, barely got the nod of his teammate "Jumpin" Cliff Bradford. Tindrell scored two touchdowns during the fracas, while Bradford crossed the double line once. In other backfield departments, however, the two ball-carriers performed on even terms, both shaking themselves loose from Buffalo tacklers for sensationally long runs.

The fleet-footed Iowan first scooted over from the 12-yard stripe, and registered his other six-pointer on a spectacular burst of speed which covered 80 yards.

A burly tackler, Sanderson, who acquired his nickname by hailing from a small village in West Virginia called Salt Fork, stood out both on offense and defense. Besides breaking through and tackling the Buffs' Jimmie Carter for a loss on his own 12-yard line to set up the first Bullet touchdown, the strapping lineman made himself an unwelcome fifth player in the Columbus backfield throughout the game.

MOVING IN . . . Danny Knox, junior welterweight from Company E, cautiously moves in for the kill in his battle with Bill Flagg of Company G at the Airborne battalion arena last Friday night. Knox's tactics proved a trifle too much for Flagg to cope with, and the Company E scrapper was awarded a technical knockout in 1:17 minutes of the third round.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Trying to better our mediocre record of 28 hits and 11 misses last week, we have bought ourselves a new crystal ball, taken out another stack of chips, and now are about ready to go into a seance over Saturday's collegiate gridiron offerings.

After a brief sojourn in our trance, here's what we have to offer:

THE EAST

Army over Illinois: The Illini just don't seem to have it this year. The Cadets by two touchdowns.

Columbia over Yale: This one should restore order on the Columbia campus after Harvard uncorked a humiliating upset over the Morningside Heights bunch last week.

Cornell over Harvard: Both were upset winners last week, but don't forget that Cornell kicked over their dope bucket at Annapolis. A close one, but the Big Red holds the winning hand.

Holy Cross over Dartmouth: The third in as many tries for the Crusaders this year. A sizeable margin should separate the two scores.

Duke over Navy: Your prognosticators can't seem to get together on this on. So, make it the other way around if you like.

Penn over Princeton: The perennial Ivy league champs should annex their second conference victory handily.

Penn State over Syracuse: The Orangemen from Syracuse appear headed for a miserable season, and the Nittany Lions have started off by showing a carry-over on power from last year. Penn State easily.

West Virginia over Pitt: The Panthers aren't the predatory monsters they were a few seasons past, and the Mountaineers have a rugged crew this year. Old Blue and Gold on a close verdict.

THE MIDWEST

Indiana and TCU: We just couldn't let this week go by without predicting a tie, and this looks like it.

Ohio State over Iowa: The Buckeyes give every indication of pulling themselves out of the Big Nine cellar this year, and the Hawkeyes won't be able to do much in the way of keeping them from tasting the sweets of victory this weekend. The Ohioans by two touchdowns or more.

Kansas over Iowa State: Right here, the Jayhawks start their bid for another top berth in the Big Seven conference, and it should be a successful one. A three to four touchdown difference favoring the Kansans.

Michigan over Purdue: The sensation created by the Boilermakers at South Bend a couple of Saturdays ago will fade even farther into oblivion after they tackle the Wolverines.

Notre Dame over Michigan State: The Fighting Irish are on the march again, but the Spartans won't be a gravy train. A margin of less than two touchdowns for the Leahy gang.

Northwestern over Minnesota: After two weeks of the 1948 campaign, the Wildcats have established themselves as the ebon-hued team of the Big Nine conference. However, neither eleven has been scored on this year, and the Golden Gophers of Minnesota boast the most powerful array of linemen in the Big Nine environs. Frankly, we would just as soon have let someone else do the picking on this one.

Texas over Oklahoma: If the Sooners win this one, it will break a jinx that has haunted the Oklahomans down through the years. Texas by a six-pointer.

California over Wisconsin: The Golden Bears of California have their sights set on the Far West championship this year, but they should muster a little outside prestige by hemming in the Badgers.

THE SOUTH

Alabama over Duquesne: Unless the dope sheets become even more snarled, the Crimson Tide should break into the win column this weekend. We would say the 'Bamans will take this one handily.

Florida over Auburn: The boys from grapefruit land can't be regarded as a serious threat to the Southeastern conference championship yet, but they won't be on rock bottom if they can top the Tigers. Florida in a close one.

Georgia over Kentucky: Rauch in German means smoke. And master Johnny should put out plenty of it against the boys from the blue grass country. Three touchdowns to favor Georgia's Bulldogs.

Georgia Tech over Washington and Lee: The Ramblin' Wreck can make it by almost any score they want.

Vanderbilt over Mississippi: Ole Miss, minus chuckin' Charley Conerly, is just another Southeastern conference squad, and the Vanderbilt lads are out to create plenty of havoc in the loop this year. Vandy by 10 points.

North Carolina over Wake Forest: The Demon Deacons came through with a staggering upset over the Tribe of Williamsburg last weekend, but they're still not in a class with the Tar Heels. North Carolina by at least five touchdowns.

Intra-Mural Net Classic In Progress

As the first week of play in the current intra-mural volleyball tourney ended Tuesday, nine teams still were fighting for a chance to represent Fort Benning in the Third army net classics at Fort Jackson, S. C., on Nov 30 and Dec. 1 and 2.

Losers in the first-round matches still were in the running since a double-elimination is required to oust a team from the tournament. However, four teams withdrew before playing their first round matches, and will not be given another crack at the title.

Tournament matches are being played at a three-per-night clip each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday at the Main post gymnasium. All programs start at 6:30 p.m.

Only two teams failed to get in their first-round match during the first week, and were slated to meet each other this week. They are Company H, 25th Infantry regiment and the 204th Transportation Truck battalion.

The defending post champion squad from Company C (Reproduction plant) of the Infantry School detachment took the bye route to stay in the top bracket for the second round matches, and probably will wage its next battle against Company I of the 504th Parachute Infantry regiment. The paratroopers defeated the 756th Heavy Tank battalion to stay among the winning delegations for the second round.

Another ISD crew representing Company A defeated the 121st Evacuation hospital last week, and probably will go against the Station hospital medics, who drew a bye, this week.

Another likely pairing will pit the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment against the 999th Field Artillery battalion. Both squads got past the first round by virtue of forfeitures.

Company G of the 25th Infantry regiment, which won a forfeited match last week, will have a chance to slip into the third round unbeaten when they meet the winner of the match between the blue team of Company H, 25th Infantry regiment, and the 204th Truckers.

Aged Boss Man

Bill Klem, the 74-year-old boss man of National league umpires, has been active as an arbiter for 47 seasons. Klem, who is considering retiring after this season because of poor health, started his career as an official in 1902, and has been affiliated with the senior circuit since 1905.

Local Gridmen To Play Prison

Ordnance Eleven Launches Slate With Alabama Contest

Gridders of the 328th Ordnance battalion were polishing up their football machine this week in preparation for their season's opener against the Draper prison eleven in Spegial, Ala., Sunday afternoon.

The tiff with the prisoners will open a slate which Head Coach William Dunham hopes will include games with other unit teams of the Third army area as well as some with other organizational elevens in and around Fort Benning. To date, however, the ordnance battalion is the only small unit on the Main post to build up a grid aggregation.

In addition to the improved returnees, Coach Dunham has some talented new timber to draw from, and he entertains high hopes of being able to better the hapless season of 1947.

One backfield vet, 170-pound William Dew, probably will see service during the game with the Alabama prison eleven, and may be regarded as a stabilizing influence for a vitality-laden group of newcomers. The backfield candidates include George Hoffman, Leonard Zanowicz, William Kantak, Herbert Ornellas, Richard Weymouth, Ralph Nonnemacher, Horace Bassett and Donald Oelherts.

The most poundage along the forward wall is found in the two tackle slots where an average weight of approximately 210 pounds. The huskies to whom the tackle assignments have been given are Andrew Anderson, Elliott Pasis, Bob Campfield and Buck Loflin.

SAND HILL DIAMONDMEN BOAST 31 WINS FOR YEAR

Rounding out his third straight year as head diamond coach, veteran Charlie Toliver, masterfully led his team of Bullet youngsters through a grand season in which they scored 31 wins, lost 15 and tied one.

The Bullets copped the 1948 post intra-mural baseball championship by gaining eight triumphs against one defeat. They were also runner-up to the champion 999th Field Artillery battalion in the 325th Infantry regiment's intramural baseball league.

The record may be contributed to the effectiveness of a crop of fine hurlers, supported by an array of dangerous stickmen, who specialized in clouting a long ball.

Heading the pitching staff was lefty Willie Conerly, who, in addition to an 8-2 record for the season, boasts a no-hit, no-run game and a one-hitter. Also to his credit is the fact that he has pitched and won more games than any other pitcher on the staff.

Walter Scott, the curve-ball artist from Columbus, has a hitless game and a one-hitter to his credit; Murray Whiting, with a 3-1 record, can boast of a five-hit shutout over the Columbus Crusaders; Amos Snowden, with a 5-2 record, possesses a three-hitter, and Horace Smith, owner of a 5-4 record for the season, registered a brilliant 14-0, no-hit win over Baconton, Ga.

Gordon Burke, a flashy shortstop and veteran of three years with the Bullets, finished atop the batting heap with a neat average of .415. Running a dead heat for second place honors were Hirron Collier, the chattering first baseman, and catcher Nick Nichols, both batting at an even .400 clip. Three of the pitchers held their own among the .400 club.

The deadline for entries is Oct 20.

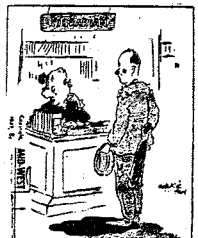
Successful singles and doubles competitors will be selected to represent Fort Benning in the Third army tourney to be staged locally on Nov. 16, 17 and 18. The winners and runners-up in both singles and doubles will also receive individual awards.

Play in the tournament will be on a single elimination basis with each team or individual being ousted after one setback. Matches in both phases of the post meet will consist of the best two out of three games.

Weekly Boxing Matches Staged By Paratroops

Three technical knockouts and four decisions highlighted the Airborne battalion's weekly boxing card last Friday night.

In the curtain-raiser, Leroy White of Company A took a split decision from Woodrow Wallace of Company G. Wallace, who had won his bout the preceding week by a TKO, just couldn't seem to get started, and lost the decision after a hard-fought bout.



In the second bout, Frank Hagey, of the 504th Airborne Infantry regiment, hammered Nick Cassara from Company G to take a unanimous decision.

The third bout of the evening featured George Watson of Company F and Hosea Coxsom of Company A. Watson lost the decision to Coxsom by a unanimious verdict.

The fourth bout started slowly with Clarence Strong of Company A finally unleasing a hard, fast right to end things with a TKO in the third round. His victim was Ralph Roton of Company E.

The fifth bout was a fast-moving affair which brought the crowd to its feet several times. Lyle Green of Company A took a unanimous verdict over Lesse Black of Company E. Green who has a lengthy ring history, will appear on several more cards before he finishes his training at the Airborne battalion.

The sixth bout of the evening also ended in a TKO as Danny Knox of Company E stepped into the ring with Bill Flagg of Company G, and finished him off in the third round.

Pilot Chosen For Badminton

Lt. Col. L.B. Ramsey, badminton singles champion of Fort Benning, has been named to pilot the post's delegation to the first annual Third army badminton classic to begin on Oct. 12 at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Ramsey recently won the post singles crown by dumping M-Sgt. C. E. Shipman in straight games of 21-11 and 21-5. He then teamed with Maj. Weldon E. Laiche to take the doubles title from Capt. Bill Fannin and M-Sgt. Robert Short. The team of Ramsey-Laiche also won its contest in straight games of 21-19 and 21-7.

The seven-man team which will leave Benning on Oct. 10 for Fort Jackson includes Ramsey, Fannin, Capt. A.P. Hackett, 1st. Lt. John Maddox, Shipman, M-Sgt John H. Lockamy and Pfc. R. E. Broughton.

Three Technical Kayoes Inaugurate Ring Season For Harmony Church

Pugilists of the 325th Infantry Training battalion (Provisional) launched a fall boxing program in the recently renovated arena in the Harmony Church area last Wednesday night with an eight-bout card.

Three technical knockouts, four decisions and one draw were chalked up during the program, which featured mostly scraps in the lighter weight divisions.

In the only heavyweight battle of the evening, Albert Woldyka and Alexander Marshall, a couple of husky 190-pounders, slugged it out through two round until Woldyka took the towel after one minute of the third and final period. Marshall, winner by a TKO, hails from Buffalo, N. Y., while Woldyka is a native of Ludlow, Mass.

Another TKO victory was racked up in the last bout of the evening by 120-pound Robert Keppley of Reading, Pa., who belted 126-pound Charles Martinez of Hayward, Cal., with hard blows for two and one-half rounds before the referee stepped in to stop the fight.

Charles Boner, an Allentown, Pa., middleweight, also took the TKO route to win the fifth bout of the evening. His victim was 150-pound Tony Musetti of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was forced to lay aside his gloves after the fight had been carried through 1:56 minutes of the final period.

In the inaugural battle of the card, Raymond Boswell, 140-pound scrapper from Springfield, Ohio, pounded out a hard-fought decision over heavier John Spice of Baltimore, Md. Before entering the ring, Spicer tipped the scales at 150 pounds.

The second classic on the program resulted in a dead heat between James Cheeseman, a 155-pound Lancaster, Ohio, lad, and Darrell Mondaugh, a 150 pounder who calls Rutland, Ohio, his home.

Another decision came in the third contest when 150-pound George Tzamentakis of Lowell Mass., got the nod over a Pittsburgh, Pa., fighter, Robert Mallory, who weighed in at 148 pounds.

Bantamweight Leo Garvin of Fall River, Mass., snatched a verdict from Charles Dawson of Philadelphia, Pa., in the ensuing tiff. Both leather pushers scaled 118 pounds.

The last decision of the evening was chalked up in the sixth contest when John Lodilo of Upper Nyack, N. Y., a 131-pounder, took the measure of 118-pound Walter Knyra of Washington, N. J.

Giarratano Named A and R Non-Com

The 325th Infantry Regimental combat team has acquired a new athletic and recreation NCO, Cpl. Vincent F. Giarratano, but he's no stranger in Fort Benning athletic and recreation circles.

Recently returned from Fort Bragg, N.C., Corporal Giarratano, was formerly public information representative with the Airborne battalion.

Active in the promotion of sports events while with the airborne unit, Corporal Giarratano is expected to carry out the same program with the 325th.

The new 325th athletic and recreation NCO has begun work in organizing the unit's boxing program and other activities.

KEGLING LOOP DRAWS TOTAL OF 18 ENTRIES

Eighteen bowling squads will be in the scramble for Fort Benning's championship when the intra-mural kegling league gets under way on the Main post alleys next Monday night.

Although the schedule for first round matches will not be announced until later this week, activity throughout the season will start at 7 p. m.

Play in the league will be on a round-robin basis with each squad entered getting at least one crack at each opposing team. Squads are to include from five to eight players.

Following completion of the league schedule—about Jan. 15—the champ aggregation will be presented with the Infantry Center bowling plaque, and members of the winning and runner-up teams will receive individual trophies.

In entering the circuit, unit squads will be out to dethrone the keglers of the Infantry School detachment, who took possession of the bowling plaque after sweeping the title for the 1947-48 season. However, the task doubtlessly will prove arduous since all members of last year's championship squad are returning for the forthcoming season. Collis (Lefty) Lehner and George Hill are expected to be the big guns in paving the way to another tenure on the plaque.

Post units which have entered teams in the league are the Food Service school; Headquarters company, 325th Infantry regiment; First battalion, 325th Infantry regiment; 756th Heavy Tank battalion; Company G, 25th Infantry regiment, Company H, 25th Infantry regiment; Station hospital; 204th Transportation Truck battalion; 121st Evacuation hospital; 30th Medical group; Army Field Forces board No. 3; Lawson airforce base; ISD; Student Training regiment; Airborne battalion, Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Army Service unit, and 999th Field Artillery battalion which has placed two teams on the loop roster.

Smith Assumes Coaching Duties For Bullet Clan

Walter H. Smith of Headquarters company, 25th Infantry regiment, has been named head mentor of the post Bullet football team to replace Thomas L. Delton, who was recently transferred to Tuskegee, Ala., institute as a Reserve Officers' training corps instructor.

A graduate and former star athlete at Wilberforce university at Xenia, Ohio, Smith, who took over the coaching helm last Monday, has a reputation of being a top-notch pigskin strategist.

For outstanding performances in various sports during his high school and college career, the newly appointed Bullet tutor holds about 15 athletic letters. As a prep star in Scranton, Pa., high school, he played four years of varsity football, captained the ice hockey team for two years, and had a one-year stint as pilot of the school's track squad.

At Wilberforce university, Smith held down an end berth on the varsity eleven for three years. A crack distance runner, he served as captain of the school's track delegation for three seasons, during which time he reigned as record-holder of the mid-west quarter and half mile cinder path events.

After one year of semi-professional football with the Scranton Orioles, his gridiron exploits gained him army renown when he played with the 369th Infantry regiment of the 93rd division during the early years of the war. He also served as assistant coach of the infantry team.

Traveling Shortstop

Lou Boudreau, who covers a lot of ground as shortstop for the Cleveland Indians, ranged as far as home plate to make a putout against the New York Yankees in Cleveland on Sept. 14.

Irprove Your Batting

Bill Goodman, rookie first-sacker for the Boston Red Sox, credits a lot of his batting ability to a system he used in his younger days because he couldn't find anybody to play ball with. He suspended a ball on a string from an apple tree in his back yard and batted the ball around in pendulum fashion.

How's That Again?

In 1916, Leo Schlick, playing for St. Viator against Lane, rolled up a total of 100 points—all in one gridiron contest. His scoring roster showed 12 toughdowns and 28 points after touchdown.

Sand Hill Gridmen to Face Collegiate Eleven Saturday

BY BOB PHILLIPS

With two weeks of hard training behind them, the high-spirited post Bullet eleven will take to the highway this afternoon enroute to Daytona Beach, Fla., where they will match wits with the up-and-coming Tigers of Bethune-Cookman college on Saturday.

Sporting a one-won, one - lost record for the season, the Bullets will invade the campus of the Florida college with high hopes of staging a repeat performance of their decisive 19-0 victory over the Columbus Buffaloes on their most recent outing. The meeting Saturday will be the first of the two teams.

Although they were heavily hit by injuries in the game with the Buffaloes, most of the victims have been eradicated from the ailing list, and the Sand hill gridmen are reported to be in top physical condition for Saturday's encounter.

Weaknesses in pass defense and blocking in previous games have inspired the Bullet coaching staff to devote much time and attention to those departments during the practice drills of the past two weeks. Sand hill grid tutors believe that the emphasis placed on pass defense and blocking has improved the outlook for the two phases, and hope that it will yield dividends in Saturday's tilt.

A little more trickery also has been added to the backfield with the development of talents possessed by ball-handling magicians Ernest Sims, Hudie Langston and Gordon Burke.

Ends Freddie Hamer, Roland Russell, Floyd Knight, Leon Smith and Ben Ashford are living up to pre-season expectations at the flanks, and should prove trouble-makers to the Florida collegians as well as to other teams on The Sand hill slate.

The lineup of impregnable stalwarts along the Bullet forward wall have been looking particularly good during the preps for the game with the Bethune-Cookman crew. Forewall reliables who probably will be called upon for extensive service during Saturday's fracas include Jeff White, Bob Murphy, Hank Sanderson, Matt Batle, Walt Brown, Leroy (Doc Garvin, Harry Arnett, Bill Whitney, Al Blannon, Odell Kennedy, Eddie Brown and Arthur Robertson.

The backfield talent has kept in step with the line improvements by making rapid strides in trail-blazing. Pigskin handlers who have shown progress in the backfield include Bill Beasley, Edward Monroe, Vern Boswell, Phil Tindrell, Cliff Bradford, Wilbert Avis and Windy Hammond.

Despite the fact that some of the Bullets have been sidelined by injuries, capable replacements still rate them as a dangerous and explosive eleven. Newcomers Murray D. Whiting and Herbert Sexton are looking great in the backfield, while huge Roy Whitehurst, a 205 - pounder, is expected to develop into a front-line terror.

Rescue Squad Recovers Two Bodies From Lake

Fort Benning's rescue squad from Company C, 307th Combat Airborne Engineers, along with a civilian rescue crew succeeded in recovering the bodies of two women drowned as a result of a collision of a motor-power skiff and a motorboat last Saturday at the lake in Idle Hour Park.

The local squad was called into the search early Sunday morning to assist the civilian crew which had been dragging the lake for 24 hours. After a day of dragging, the body of Miss Mabel Chapman, 20, of 1425 Third avenue, Columbus, was located at 10:15 p.m. Sunday. The body of Mrs. Ideil Keith, 36, of La-Grange Ga., was recovered Monday afternoon at 1:30.

Using drag hooks and sending divers some 50 and 60 feet down to search for the bodies the civilian crew snagged Miss Chapman's body 150 feet from the bank and about 50 feet from where the collision occured.

The rescue squad from the 307th dragged the lake all Sunday night and Monday morning finally resorting to dynamite in an effort to bring the body of Mrs. Keith t the surface.

The two women were the only fatalities among 16 people involved in the two-boat collision at the park.

3 Philippine Army Men Enrolled in Radio Class

Intra-Post Ring Bouts Deferred Until November

Local leather pushers have been given a little more time to brush up on their ring tactics, Infantry center athletic officials have announced. Originally slated to start last Monday, the intra-mural boxing campaign has been postponed until Nov. 12.

The delay in opening the gloves season, it was pointed out, was brought about by the heavy schedule of minor sports on tap for the Main post gymnasium during the remainder of this month.

One post unit, the Station hospital, already has entered a complete eight-man team, and it was expected that several other organizations would field delegates in each weight division before the schedule gets underway. A total of about 10 team entries is anticipated.

Post athletic officials are sponsoring the intra - mural scraps in an effort to select top-notch pugilists to represent Benning in contests with other service teams, and in the Third army tournament early next year.

In determining individual and team champions of the post, a point system will be used with a team getting two points for each bout won by one of its fighters and one point merely for participation. At the close of the season on Feb. 1, the squad tallying the most points will receive the Infantry center boxing plaque for a one-year tenure, and individual scrappers who score the highest in their weight divisions will be awarded individual trophies.

Both first and second place contestants in each weight bracket will be assigned berths on the Fort Benning ring team.

Weight classes in which bouts will be staged will be flyweight, bantamweight, featherweight, featherweight, lightweight, welterweight, middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight.

Diamond Team Is Commended By Gen. Gillem

Another Third army championship team from Fort Benning, the Doughboy diamond squad, has been commended by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Third army commander, for outstanding sportsmanship and ability.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, the Infantry center commander, General Gillem wrote:

"I wish to extend my congratulations to you and the members of the Fort Benning baseball team who climaxed a brilliant season by winning the Third army championship baseball tournament held at Fort Bragg, N.C. This victory was accomplished only after hard, well-earned victories over the finest teams in the area, indicating that the team representing Fort Benning is a true Third army champion.

"Although the remarkable record of the Fort Benning baseball team this year includes victories in civilian, state and regional tournaments, I know the members of the team achieved the most personal satisfaction by winning the Third army tournament.

"The athletic ability and sportsmanship displayed by the Fort Benning team throughout the entire tournament was a credit to the station which they so ably represented."

General Gillem Praises Recruits At Inspection

Speaking to the men and officers of the 325th Infantry Training battalion last Friday, Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Third army commander, praised them for excellence of their appearance and their soldierly qualities.

He singled out the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, for the superior manner in which the recruits of the unit had been trained and the way in which they had responded to the training in the short time they had been in service.

The army commander told the men also that theirs was an important responsibility in this period of what he termed "high blood pressure" in the world, and reminded them that the security of this nation may some day depend on them.

Following his brief talk, General Gillem, accompanied by Maj. Gen. Leland S. Hobbs, deputy commander of the Third army; Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commander of the Infantry center, and Maj. Gen. E. H. Fairbanks, British army director of infantry, inspected the battalion in ranks.

After the inspection General Gillem reviewed the troops who paraded past a stand that included high ranking Infantry Center officials and local civilian officials. The parade was led by the 40-piece band formed recently by men of the battalion.

Prior to the parade and review the unit had laid out a full field inspection for General Gillem in Blue Pole Field. Upon his arrival he questioned many soldiers individually concerning the way in which they had been treated while at Fort Benning, showed a great interest in their answers to questions concerning their officers, non-commissioned officers, food and quarters. He also evinced pleasure on learning that they had formed their own marching band and complimented the musicians on their skill.

After the full field inspection the battalion crossed the road to French field for the parade. In addition to the military and civilian dignitaries, a large throng of visitors filled the temporary bleachers.

Training Units On 'Maneuvers'

Life in the field, punctuated by scouting and patrolling and infantry tactics, has been the scheduled this week for the men of First, Second, Third and Fourth companies of the 325th Infantry Training battalion, training in the field for the first time.

The long-anticipated "maneuvers" began early Monday morning when they hiked 16 miles to the bivouac area, arriving one hour ahead of schedule. They had their first taste of the army in the field when they were issued C rations for dinner on the march. During the week they have had the novel experience, for them, of eating from mess-kits.

The march was led by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey. They return tonight to their barracks.

The troops have trained in camouflage and concealment and small unit infantry tactics as well as scouting and patrolling while in the field.

Basic training for the four companies on bivouac ends next week, but Fifth and Sixth companies, which started their training after the organization of the battalion, will continue until their cycle is completed.

280 Begin Training

Mail Yuletide Parcels Early, Army Advises

Christmas packages for army and air force personnel and Department of Army and Airforce civilian employes stationed overseas should be mailed between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15, Major General Edward F. Witsell, adjutant general, who operates the army's postal system, announced today.

If the suggested mailing period is used, there is more definite assurance that Christmas packages will arrive just before or during the holiday season, he said.

Gifts should be packed securely General Witsell advised, in box materials of metal, wood, or very strong fiberboards. He also recommended that the addressee's name together with a list of the contents be written on a slip of paper inside the box. This will enable delivery to be made if the outside address should be obliterated by handling.

The address should be placed directly on the box of wrapped and not on gummed labels which may become moist and lost from the package.

The weight limit is 70 pounds and maximum measurement 100 inches, length and girth combined. This is approximately the size of a footlocker.

Greeting cards send first class (three cents) also should be mailed within the suggested period. Air mail deliveries are expected to be handled on normal schedules, and greeting cards sent by air may be posted as late as Dec. 1.

Origin of 'Satchel'

Although the common belief is that Leroy (Satchel) Paige got his nickname from the size of his feet and the heavy suitcase which the Cleveland Indian pitcher carries in his travels, he actually acquired the monicker long before he gained prominence as a hurler. The origin of "Satchel" dates back to the days when Paige was a baggage smasher in Mobile, Ala.

"Pa, what's a necessary evil?"
"That, son, is one we like so much we don't care to abolish it."

Recruits Graduate Saturday Morning

Four companies of the 325th Infantry Training battalion will end an eight-week basic training cycle Saturday in a manner reminiscent of graduation week at West Point, complete with speeches, parades, a dinner dance and beautiful girls.

Graduation ceremonies start at 9 a.m. Saturday morning in Theater No. 11 with the presentation of certificates by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, to the outstanding men of each of the companies. He will also award prizes at this time to the top three marksmen of each company. Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, battalion commander, will also address the men.

Immediately following the ceremonies, the battalion will be reviewed at Stroup field by General Burress. For this parade the outstanding men in the battalion have been selected to act as battalion and company officers and first sergeants. They will conduct the entire parade as do the cadets at the military academy.

This week each company commander selected six outstanding trainees in his company to represent the unit in competition designed to choose the outstanding trainees in the battalion. While the basis for the selection of trainees in the companies was left to the discretion of the commanders, it was recommended that they be chosen for their soldierly appearance, degree of overall training, marksmanship and disciplinary record.

The trainees selected by companies were then tested by officers of battalion headquarters in all phases of basic training and a relative order of merit established in order to appoint officers for the graduation parade. Slections were made for the opsitions of battalion commander, company commander for each company, battalion adjutant, battalion training officer, battalion supply officer, three platoon leaders for each company and first sergeant for each company.

At 5 p.m. Saturday afternoon the battalion will hold its formal graduation dinner dance in Service club No. 3 in the Harmony Church area.

'Chest' Council Meets Monday

At the opening meeting of the Community Chest council Monday morning, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, post commander, expressed his appreciation to unit representatives for the work they were about to do in the nex t two months to reach a goal of $13,500, the Fort Benning targel.

The commanding general emphasized to the nearly 30 representatives of Benning and Lawson field units how important it is to "organize an opportunity for people to give something to charity. it is a good thing," he continued, "for everyone to give something to charity."

The general also reminded the military and civilian workers that the Community Chest drive is the only charitable fund-raising progra mheld on the post except for the annual Red Cross drive in the spring, and exhorted them to raise the needed funds, most of which will support Benning programs.

Also speaking at the meeting was Col. Gilbert T. Collar, commander of Lawson Air Force base. He expressed his appreciation for the invitation extended his unit to join in the campaign and help carry it on as one unit.

Lt. Col. Napoleon Rainbolt, heading the Benning drive, explained to the workers the methods by which money would be collected, reminding them that the two months' campaign includes the October and November pay days and outlining the manner in which collected funds would be turned in.

Local Troops To Be Truman Honor Guard

A group of Fort Benning troops will leave Sunday by air for Miami where they will serve as an honor guard for President Truman, who is expected to arrive in the Florida city Monday for a series of speeches.

Fort Benning's 40-piece 72nd Army band will also accompany the select group, which will total 420 enlisted men and 20 officers from the 325th Infantry regiment.

They will meet the President when he alights from his plane at the Miami airport, and will be on hand again when he delivers an address later in the day.

Eighty-One 'Re-Up' During Past Week

Most Prefer Fort Benning

Last week was the biggest in the history of the Fort Benning recruiting office, with a total of 81 men reenlisting, according to Maj. Llewelyn D. Shaw, Infantry Center recruiting officer.

With one exception, all reenlisted for Fort Benning.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were the busiest days for the local recruiters last week, with 27 reenlisting Monday, 25 Tuesday and 22 Wednesday. Thursday and Friday accounted for another seven, Major Shaw said.

The about-to-begin career guidance program was one of the big factors in convincing so many men that continued service in the Army is to their advantage, the recruiting chief declared.

Col. Arthur C. Purvis, Infantry Center adjutant general, indicated that other reasons given for reenlisting at Fort Benning were the effor st htep stosi making to improve housing and other facilities for enlisted men.

Other men state they are reenlisting her because of the increased facilities for recreation and the expected expansion for the army with the resultant promotions.

Extend Deadline For Registration

Registration for the Army Education Center's night school, which opened its fall term Monday, Oct. 4, with a total of 540 students enrolled, has been extended until Friday, Oct. 15.

Three new courses have been added to the curricula, which now boasts 26 courses taught by a staff of 17 instructors.

Classes are held every Monday and Thursday evening from 6:15 to 8 p.m. and 8:15 to 10 p.m. The fall term will end Dec. 16.

Field House Work To Get Underway In About 2 Weeks

Work on the new half-million dollar Fort Benning field house will begin within two weeks with the moving of the guest house and flag pole facing Stilwell field to new locations, according to Col. Harold A. Stewart, post engineer.

The guest hous weill be moved in two sections on either dollies or rollers to its new locato infacing Vibbert avenue next to Red Cross headquarters, he said, and the flag pole will be placed in front of the Infantry School building. It is expected that the guest house will be ready for reoccupancy within 30 days, he added.

Upon completion of the movement of these two installations work on the new field house, to be erected between the post office and cafeteria facing Stilwell field, will commence, Colonel Stewart said.

Hunting Season Plans Mapped

Plans to provide Fort Benning field and stream enthusiasts with improved hunting conditions this fall have been mapped by the Fish and Game association, and a new set of regulations has been drawn up to govern hunting on the reservation during the coming season.

Local gunners this year will be required to keep an accurate record of their take in order to provide a basis for long-range planning for game propogation and planting. The account is to include the specie, number and area from which the game is taken, and will be sumbitted to the provost marshal at the close of the season or at the time the hunter leaves Fort Benning.

Shotguns no larger than 12-guage are the only authorized firearms, and the use of shot larger than 00 Buck is prohibited. Hunting with dogs will be permitted.

Although the association's new set of regulations took effect Oct. 1, only vermin may be hunted this month. Classified as vermin are great horned owls, wild domestic cats, cotton and other rats, skunks, crows, goshawks sharpshinned hawks, Cooper's hawks, foxes, wildcats, raccoons chicken snakes, coach whip snakes, black snakes, copperhead snakes, coral snakes, water snakes snapping turtles and opossums.

Only one shotgun, to be used for killing tree coons and opossums, may be carried on night vermin hunts.

Seasons on four species of game, squirrels, rabbits, wild turkeys and quail, open in November with a three-month squirrel hunting period slated to begin on the first of the month. Turkeys come into season on Nov. 15, and the period for hunting quail and rabbits opens on Nov. 25.

Other season openings are as follows: dove, Dec. 1; duck, Dec. 10; goose, Dec. 10, and deer, Dec. 24. The deer season lasts only three days and the bag limit has been set at one. The season for snipes, woodcocks, beavers and otters is closed.

A special permit will be required for hunting wild pigs, and they may not be taken with firearms. The Officers' club dog pack has been made available has been made available for for organized pig hunts, and permission to use the pack may be obtained from Lt. Col. W. B. Moore, deputy chairman of the game commission.

The hunting of migatory birds is governed by federal law and regulations, and the purchase of a federal duck stamp is required for hunting aquatic fowl.

Blinds for hunting ducks and turkeys have been authorized, but owners must report their location in writing to the provost marshal. No hunter will be permitted to construct a turkey blind within 400 yards of one already built, marked and properly registered.

Except for range guards, hunting will be permitted from sunrise to sunset on Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and holidays. Tuesday and Friday have been set aside for hunting by range guards.

Higher Scores Made By Post Grid Guessers

Arm-chair strategists who have been trying to pick national collegiate football winners at the post service clubs upped their percentage a little last week when the four individual contest winners averaged 10 hits out of 12 selections.

The contest at Service club No. 1 was won by Pvt. George C. Ferris of Battery A, 319th Field Artillery Battalion, who made 10 correct guesses, and Pvt. Ellis Bell of the 666th Transportation Truck company picked an equal number of winners to pace the balloting at Service club No. 4. By picking nine out of 12, Pfc. Edgar Peoples of Company F, 25th Infantry regiment, won the contest at Service club No. 2.

Prizes for the winners will be presented at the Friday night dances at the clubs.

Included on this week's ballot are games between Cornell and Syrcuse, Princeton and Rutgers, Vanderbilt and Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee, Georgia and LSU, Navy and Missouri, Georgia Teck and Auburn, Tulane and Mississippi, Minnesota and Illinois, Michigan and Northwestern, SMU and Rice and Stanford and UCLA.

CHUTIST RINGMASTER HAS VERSATILE PAST

One of the main factors responsible for the success of the boxing shows held at the Airborne battalion arena every Friday night is the capable coach and referee, Hewett C. Tippins, whose association with the pugilistic sport has taken in both fighting and officiating.

Better known as "Tip" in local fight circles, the versatile ringman broke into leather-pushing prominence more than a decade ago in his home town of Brunswick, Ga. By 1939, he had scrapped his way to the Southeastern Golden Gloves lightweight crown.

Shortly after his enlistment in the army in 1940, "Tip" took possession of the Eighth Infantry division's lightweight title and added to his laurels by winning the Fort Benning championship in that weight bracket while a member of the 502nd Parachute Infantry regiment in 1942. This achievement was followed by the capture of the 101st Airborne division's lightweight toga.

Continuing his Golden Gloves career while the 101st was stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., he repeated with top honors in the lightweight bracket, and annexed the unit's "Best boxing" trophy.

At Charlotte, N. C., he turned in outstanding performances in 39 battles to take the 135-pound class at the Southeastern Amateur Athletic union meet.

Jumping with the first assault wave at Normandy, "Tip" was wounded in the chest and side, and was compelled to lay aside his gloves while recuperating in an army hospital in England. However, he resumed his ring career by fighting in England's Red Cross tournament in 1945.

Following his discharge from the army, the colorful pugilist compiled a record of six straight pro wins in Miami, Fla., before deciding that he had absorbed too much enemy lead to wage an active ring campaign. Therefore he set his sights on a regular army career, and reenlisted last March. He has been stationed at Ft. Benning since re-entering the service.

Eleven Benning Truckers Cited

Eleven drivers of the 666th Transportation Truck company were praised last week for the manner in which they conducted themselves during a trip to Jacksonville, Fla.

In a letter to Capt. Milan E. Elott, Maj. John I. Pray, of the Weapons section who was in charge of the convoy, said that the drivers "displayed a degree of training and attention to duty which reflects great credit to their organization and to the army."

He further stated that "their outstanding convoy discipline made the traffic control simple. They were conscientious about driver checks and maintenance, and this was reflected in the excellent condition of the vehicles. In addition they assisted with work not normally included in driving, but which was required by the existing situation."

The 666th men transported a group of Weapons section men and equipment to the Florida city for a weapons demonstration and static display during a reserve contact camp Sept. 25-26.

The drivers were Cpl. Clarence Nelson, who was in charge of the group, and Pfcs. Ples Neal, Willie Morgan, Emerson T. Sudevan, Robie Adkins, Robert L. Johnson, Zachery Turner, James Hayden Edward L. Fields, Fitz H. Sealy and Floyd Hardy.

Careless Drivers Hit Traffic Signs

It could have been somebody's child!

That's the thought expressed by those who saw the remains of two of the life-size silhouette traffic markers after they were hit by post vehicle drivers last week.

Placed recently on busy thoroughfares throughout the post as a warning to drivers to beware of children crossing streets, two of the silhouettes took a beating, with one showing both arms knocked off.

The Second company of the 325th Infantry Training battalion had an end-of-cycle party Tuesday night at the 11th Street Y. M. C. A. in Columbus. Officers, cadre and trainees of the company attended the affair that was featured by dancing, a talent show and several professional acts.

FRANCIS WILLIAMS . . . . Dough of the week

WILLIAMS IS CHOSEN DOUGHBOY OF WEEK

If any one player could be labeled outstanding during the Doughboys' 27-0 loss to the Hellcats of the Memphis, Tenn., naval air base, it would be left end Francis Williams, who played heads - up ball both offensively and defensively.

Williams was on the receiving end of the majority of the Doughboys' nine pass connections, and the aerial combination of Don Suit to Williams accounted for two of the Benning first downs and no less than two - thirds of the home team yardage.

One of the range flankman's most flamboyant exhibitions of the game came during the second period when he made a difficult catch of a 35 - yard heave by Suit, and would have had clear sailing to pay dirt had he been able to stay on his feet after taking the ball high over his head.

And pass - snatching wasn't the only department in which Williams stood out. On several occasions he sneaked through the Memphis line to drop Hellcat ball - toters for sizeable losses, and the Memphisites finally all but gave up trying to take the oval around their right end.

Williams could hardly be called a veteran of the gridiron wars since his activity on the field has been limited. He played one year of highschool ball in his home town of Pitcairn, Pa., before doing a three-year hitch with the marines during the war. Following his stint with the leathernecks, Williams enlisted in the army, and still has 18 months to serve on his present enlistment.

He started out last year's grid season by playing tackle with the 187th Glider Infantry regiment of the 11th Airborne division in Japan, but was unable to finish out the season because of injuries sustained in pre-season scrimmage.

Although football is the six-foot, 180 - pound end's first love, he also participates in boxing and basketball.

30,000 See Benning Exhibition at Memphis

More than 30,000 visitors to the Memphis Fair viewed the exhibit displayed by Fort Benning during the week the soldiers were at the expositoin, it was reported this week by Maj. Llewellyn D. Shaw, post recruiting officer who was in charge of the exhibit there.

The Benning exhibit is scheduled to leave this Sunday for the Waycross Fair at Waycross, Ga., Maj. Shaw said

SURE I WISECRACK...

Annual Elebash Cup Meet Won By Mrs. Goss

Women golfers of Fort Benning's Golf and Country club made it a grandslam victory in the 11th annual Elebash Cup tournament with female strokers of the Columbus Golf and Country club recently.

The newly-crowned inter-club links queen is Mrs. Frank Goss, wife of the Benning club pro, who took her finals match 1-up from Mrs. Martha Brown of the Columbus delegation.

Mrs. Goss' triumph added the grand climax to the tourney after Mrs. Irene Curtis of Fort Benning had taken medalist honors, and Mrs. Onto P. Bragan, another post representative, had come out on top in first-flight competition. Mrs. Bragan's 5-4 finals triumph was over Mrs. J. D. Cone, also a member of the Benning squad.

Following the final matches at at the Columbus club, members of the two teams were honored was alternated between the Columbus and Benning courses.

Play throughout the tourney with a cocktail party during which trophies were presented by Mrs. D. P. Buckland of Fort Benning and Mrs. Frank Lumpkin of Columbus, presidents of the two women's clubs.

The cup won by Mrs. Goss is currently on display at the Fort Benning Golf and Country club.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

THEY LIVE BY NIGHT (crime drama) with Cathy O'Donnel and Farley Granger. This narrative story dwells unremittingly and powerfully upon the sordid lives of murderers and their intimates. Romance is contrasted along with everything else in the picture to hold one's interest. Recommended for adult.

TRIPLE THREAT (football story) with Richard Crane, Gloria Henry and Harry Wismer. Great football stars, such as Bob Waterfield, Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman, perform in the gridiron sequences of this picture about two fictional pigskin stars whose personal rivalry on the field and in the realm of romance activates the script. Recommended for family.

A SONG IS BORN (musical comedy in technicolor) with Danny Kaye and Virginia Mayo. This story tells of a group of professors working on an encyclopedia of music, trying to determine the origin of "hot jazz." With Danny Kaye as one of the professors and Virginia Mayo as a beautiful temptress to his professional eye, you can imagine how far he gets. Recommended for family.

MISS TATLOCK'S MILLIONS (melodrama) with Wandra Hendrix, John Lund and Barry Fitzgerald. This is a fine, nonsensical comedy, utterly devoid of any sophistication, that ought to be received with favor by an entertainment-hungry public. Recommended for family.

JUNE BRIDE (comedy drama) with Bette Davis, Robert Montgomery and Fay Bainter. Editing a home life magazine becomes complicated for Bette Davis when Robert Montgomery, a former foreign correspondent, is assigned as her assistant and has his own ideas about home life. Recommended for adult.

To Amuse You Today

Flying through the corridors of the Pentagon Building, the little pigeon sat down on a window sill to rest. Close behind came another pigeon and said "Where are you bound?"

"Over to Section M to deliver an order," panted the first bird, "I'm just taking ten."

"What order is that?"

"Number X-1234."

"Well get a move on," chirped the second bird. "I've got the order that rescinds it."

In the first round of a bout between Tex Guillory and a 501st Battalion fighter, Tex was knocked down and the referee counted ten. Tex was obviously unhurt and didn't budge. The referee slyly continued counting, 11, 12, 13, 14. When he had reached 19 Tex rolled over and said, "Mr. Referee, you are very fair, but I am through for the evening."

* * *

A new technique of collection was practiced by the private who demanded immediate payment for an account that had been long outstanding.

"I can't give it to you now," was the reply as usual from his buddy.

"Give it to me now," quickly replied the ingenious creditor, "or I'll tell all the other guys that you've paid me."

It was a very hot day and the sergeant was having plenty of trouble with an awkward squad. At his wits end he called them to a halt, and wiped his sweating brow.

"I'm darned if I know what to do with the lot of youse, he growled.

"There's some big, shady trees over there, sergeant," remarked one of the recruits hopefully.

"Yeah, I know," came back the non-com, "but I haven't any rope."

'Dad, what are diplomatic relations??"

"My boy, there are no such people."

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Taking into consideration the fact that some jolting upsets were chalked up during last Saturday's national collegiate gridiron warfare, we're prepared to match cards with the experts. And we're ready to tip our hats to those who can top a .727 batting average (16 hits and six misses).

Since we got zeroed in pretty well last week, we'll take another dip into the dope bucket and see what we can pull out in the way of tips on this week's pigskin offerings.

THE EAST

Army over Harvard: The way Harvard looked against Cornell last week, this one should be a cinch for the Cadets.

Villanova over Boston college: By about two touchdowns.

Brown over Holy Cross: It may be close, but we'll predict a two touchdown margin for Brown.

Dartmouth over Colgate: The big Red by three six-pointers.

Penn over Columbia: Until they show otherwise, the Quakers are still the Ivy league champs. Penn by 14 points.

Cornell over Syracuse: Any questions on this one after Cornell's game with Harvard last Saturday?

Missouri over Navy: After masterfully roping the Mustangs of SMU last Saturday, the Tigers should be able to do what they please with Middies.

Penn State over West Virginia: The Nittany Lions by three touchdowns and a couple of extra points.

Marquette over Pitt: In a close inter-sectional battle.

Rutgers over Princeton: Another close one, but the odds favor Rutgers slightly.

THE MIDWEST

Wisconsin over Yale: The Elis are getting a little out of their class.

Minnesota over Illinois: The Illini will have a hard time penerating that Rock-of-Gibralter wal of the Gophers. Minnesota by a touchdown.

Ohio State over Indiana: The Buckeyes will bounce back after last week's upset loss to the Iowans.

Purdue over Iowa: In spite of their poor showing against Michigan's Wolverines.

Iowa State over Colorado: This one could be decided by an extra point.

Oklahoma over Kansas State: It looks like Kansas State's brief fling in the black will come to a halt. The Sooners by any score they want to make it.

Michigan over Northwestern: This one could turn out to be a ticket to the Rose Boyl for Bobby Voigts' Wildcats, but our vote, after much deliberation, goes to the defending champs.

Michigan State over Nebraska: Frank Leahy's string still will be unbroken when he and his Irishmen pull out of Cornhusker territory.

Oklahoma A & M over San Francisco: Without much trouble.

THE SOUTH

Alabama over Tennessee: The Red Elephants to finally crash the SEC win column on a close verdict.

Georgia Tech over Auburn: Bobby Dodd has his steam roller cranked up, and should flatten the Tigers easily.

Duke over Maryland: The Blue Devils by a pair of touchdowns.

LSU over Georgia: Gayneil Tinsley is out to make a name for himself in his first year at Baton Rouge, and this will be his chance to do some heavy bidding.

Vanderbilt over Kentucky: Vandy by two or more touchdowns.

Mississippi over Tulane: Here's another case where we'll stick with the champs.

Mississippi State over Cincinnati: Not as easily as it may appear.

North Carolina over North Carolina State: Despite strong rivalry, the Tar Heels will take this one in a breeze.

Wake Forest over Duquesne: About three touchdowns difference.

THE SOUTHWEST

Texas over Arkansas: We had to flip a coin on this one.

Baylor over Texas Tech: The underrated Bears have foiled preseason forecasters, and seem to have enough power to win this one handily.

SMU over Rice: The Mustangs to bounce back after their humiliation by the Missouri Tigers last week.

TCU over Texas A & M: The Aggies seem headed for a season utterly devoid of any glory.

THE FAR WEST

California over Oregon State: This one could easily decide this year's Rose bowl host.

Oregon over Southern California: In one that could easily go either way.

Ordnance Gridders Battle Alabama Prisoner Squad To 6-6 Deadlock

START WORKOUTS FOR GAME WITH ATLANTANS HERE FRIDAY

Things took on a brighter hue for Coach Robert J. Agrelius and his 328th Ordnance battalion grid crew after the post flame pot eleven fought a rugged Draper prison squad to a 6-6 deadlock in Speigner, Ala., last Sunday afternoon.

Since Sunday's fray launched the ordenarcemen's 1948 schedule, the lads will be trying to chalk up the first digit in their win column Friday night when they tangle with the Atlanta Ordnance depot eleven in Doughboy stdium. The kickoff is slated for 8 p.m.

Coach Agrelius has been using this week to prime his charges for the tilt with the Atlantans, and workouts were scheduled to continue until Friday.

At the Alabama prison Sunday, the 328th gridders were forced to come from behind to knot the count after a pass interception by a prison back had given the host squad a six - pointer early in the first period. After the 20 - yard streak to pay dirt, however, the prisoners' attempt for the point after touchdown went amiss, and the Alabamans had a 6-0 advantage at the half.

With approximately three minutes left to play in the third quarter, the local ordnance eleven moved the ball down to the Draper 10-yard stripe before losign it on downs. Offensive efforts of the Alabamans then got the ball back nearly to the midfield marker the 328th took over again.

The ordnancemen crashed the scoring column, when Dick Weymouth, soldier quarterback, who turned in an outstanding offensive performance, slipped a 25-yard pass to halfback Ed Gravely, who gathered in on the Draper 20 and dashed into the end zone. tackle Buck Loflen attempted to add the extra point but his placement kick went amiss.

Although Weymouth's performance overshadowed that of his teammates, several other ordnance players also turned in outstanding feats.

One of the offensive gems of the contest came when halfback Don Oehlerts snagged an Alabama pass deep in Benning territory, and ran the ball back 50 yards before being hauled down from behind.

A pile - driving fullback in person of Leonard Zanowiez was uncovered on the prison field Sunday. Not only did the ordnance tailback hit the Draper line hard throughout the game, but his defensive exhibitions were second to none.

High on the list of interference runners was Bob Longtime ordnance guard, who impressed the 328th coaching staff with his blocking and tackling.

Other players who saw service in the game with the Alabamans were backs Ralph Nonenmacher and Ed Gravely, centers Jack Shackleford and Charles Harvey; guards Lyle Amonson and Gudmund Kromstad; tackles Andy Anderson and Leo Dunn, and ends Gene Gill, Bion gale, Edward Bigbie and Flash Monroe.

Golf Prizes Given At Club Luncheon

The monthly luncheon for women golfing members of the Fort Benning Golf and Country club last Wednesday was highlighted by a brief business discussion and the presentation of prizes for the preceding week's tournament.

Recipients of the 18-hole match awards were Mrs. A. D. Smith and Mrs. D. C. Landon, while the nine-hole tourney prizes went to Mrs. R. K. Boyd and Mrs. Camp, a guest from Columbus.

An enthusiastic group of ladies met at the home of Mrs. Withers A. Burress last Tuesday afternoon to discuss the possibilities of forming a Red Cross auxiliary on the post.

Murray Hill, Red Cross field director, explained why an auxiliary is needed. The two benefits mentioned were service to troops at Fort Benning and in adjacent areas and benefits to the auxiliary members themselves in serving others.

Mrs. Ruth Bruce, executive secretary of the Muscogee chapter, outlined the steps necessary to form an auxiliary, and Mrs. Wayne Patterson, chairman of volunteer service of Muscogee county, explained the different services which include arts and skills, canteen, entertainment and instruction, Gray Ladies, motor corps, nurses aid, production and supply, social welfare aid and staff aid.

In the informal discussion which followed, Miss Hazel Turnage, head recreational worker at the Station hospital, stressed the need for better ward coverage for Grey ladies to write letters and for ladies to act as hostesses for ward parties. Other services and their value to Fort Benning were also discussed. P-T A Plans Hallowe'en Party; All Post Children Are Invited

Ghosts, gouls, and other gleeful surprises will feature the monster Hallowe'en party to be held October 29 by the Parent Teachers' association for the children of the post.

All children are welcome whether or not they are pupils at the Benning school, and from present indications, the affair will rival the banner carnival which the P.T.A. held for the youngsters last year.

Because of the tremendous advance sale of tickets, it will be necessary to hold the party in the post gymnasium instead of in the Polo Hunt club as originally announced. The "tickets" here in the form of scrip, feature a "5,000 worth of fun for 50 cents." A book of scrip is the child's admission and also his means of purchasing refreshments and participating in the activities of the party. Parents accompanying children will not need scrip for admission. Since only scrip can be used at the different booths and concessions it may be necessary to reopen the sale at a time and place to be announced later.

The celebration will start with a costume parade which will assemble at the post school at 6:15 p.m. with the children taking part arranged in grade groups. Children attending school off the post may march with their comparable age group or with particular playmates, as they desire. Music will be by the 72nd Army band, and military police will furnish the escort. Mrs. William B. Moore, assisted by the room representatives, is in charge of arrangements.

Prizes will be awarded for the best boy and girl costumes, featuring originality and appropriateness. Similar contests will be held among the pre - school and first grade group.

The post gymnasium will be transformed into a gala Hallowe'en festival site, with decorations being set up by a committee headed by Mrs. Roy F. Zinser. Refreshment booths will be established under the supervision of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles L. Jackson. M-Sgt. and Mrs. Robert E. Lamb will operate the "Bank of Hallowe'en" to make "change" and to arrange for last minute purchases of scrip. A group headed by Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert A. O'Brien will act as an interior police force, operating, among other things, a "Lost and Found" bureau. In this they will be assisted by M-Sgt. Robert L. Short, who will also be master of ceremonies.

Many other organizations are contributing to the party by conducting special activities which should make a big hit with the youngsters. Among these are a "Haunted House of Horrors" which the Boy Scouts are conducting under the supervision of Capt. James L. Walker, Jr. The Girl Scouts will have a "fish pond" and "fortune telling tent," with Mrs. C. A. Greene, Girl Scout program director, in charge. Lt. Col. William A. McNutly's Cub Scouts will entice everyone to try his skill in their "shooting gallery."

A special attraction will be the marionnette show of Mrs. W. H. Curley of Columbus. Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles E. Woodruff are handling the arrangements for this activity.

Air Sailors Down Doughs By 28-0

Eglin Field Crew To Invade Local Stadium Next Sunday

Unleashing a furious running attack, the Hellcats of the Memphis, Tenn., naval air station dealt Fort Benning's Doughboys their second defeat in as many grid outings this year by chalking up a 27-0 verdict in Doughboy stadium Sunday afternoon.

Upwards of 8,000 fans turned out in made-to-order weather to see the Memphis eleven roll up 3 yards by striking along the ground in the first game of the season in the post stadium.

Sparking the Hellcats' drive was Chuck Worblewski, pile-driving fullback, who turned in the offensive gem of the afternoon in the second period when he shook off several Benning players and dashed 81 yards for a touchdown.

The Memphis crew crashed the scoring column during the fading seconds of the opening quarter by blocking a punt and falling on the ball in the Doughboy end zone.

The six-point play was set up when halfback Hulsey booted a perfect coffin-corner punt out of bounds on the Doughboy two-yard line. Taking over the ball in the shadow of their own goal post, the Benningites sent halfback Don Sult deep back to kick the ball out of the danger zone. The fast-charging Memphis line, however, ripped the Dough forward wall to shreds as left end Ray Sears came through to block the attempt. Right end Flip Richards then flopped on the oval to rack up the first six-pointer of the game.

Paul Striedel then split the uprights with his placement kick to make it 7-0 as the first quarter ended.

Pass Pays Off

Early in the second period, Worblewski took the ball over the center of the line, eluded the entire Doughboy secondary and sprinted 14 yards to cross the Benning double stripe standing up. An effort to add the point after touchdown failed when Striedel's kick was wide, and the score stood at 13-0.

The Flyers moved the oval across the Dough goal line again during the second period when Paul Wallbank, offensive left half hit off right tackle for 10 yards and six points shortly before intermission. Stedel's effort to convert was good, and the Hellcats were in possession of a 20-0 lead at the half.

After going scoreless throughout the third stanza, the Memphisites picked up an eleventh-hour touchdown on a 40-yard pass from John Soho to Al Cichon, a couple of third-stringers. Although the game-ending gun was fired while the pass play was being engineered, quarterback Ed Deasor got a crack at kicking the extra point and make it good.

Dough Surprise

Spectators who had guessed that the Doughs would try to cash in on their running game were in for somewhat of a surprise when the army eleven took to the air for most of their substantial ground gains against the Hellcats. Dough aerial efforts netted them 155 yards while their rushing total was 111 yards.

Out of nine pass attempts, the toss from Soho to Cichon was the only Hellcat completion of the game. Thirty heaves were tried by the Doughboys with nine finding a receiver.

Dough offensive stars were half back Don Sult and left end Franci T. Williams. With Sult doing most of the army team chucking, Wliiams was reponsible for grabbing a majority of the completed passes.

Flyers Here Sunday

The post eleven's next effort to break into the black will come on Sunday when the Flyers of Eglin field, Fla., zoom into the local stadium with a record of one win and two losses for the season. The kickoff is slated for 2 p.m.

Last Sunday afternoon, the Eglin field crew bounced back after two earlier defeats to blast the airmen of Correy Naval air station 28-0.

Benning scouts who witnessed Sunday's tiff at the Florida air base report that weight odds will be fairly even in the Dough-Flyer fracas, and that the airmen looked good in all offensive departments.

Three Flyer players, two backfield men and an end, particularly impressed the Dough scouting party. They are halfback James Blankenship, who tips 'em; end Clifton Light, who receives 'em, and fullback C. B. Mason, who runs 'em. Blankenship, a six-foot four-inch 220-pounder, is report to be lightening of foot as well as being a glue-figured pass snatcher.

Drill Schedule

Head Coach Joe Shepard was expected to follow the same drill routine this week as he did for the period between the clashes with the Parris Island marines and the Memphis air gobs with the workouts coming during the middle of the week.

After being idle on Monday, the squad started heavy - duty scrimmaging on Tuesday and continued it through Wednesday. The tapering off process was slated to begin today and continue until Sunday.

Chutist Fighters Present Weekly Pugilistic Bouts

An eight - bout card at the Airborne battalion boxing area last Friday night resulted in one knockout, a split decision and six unanimous verdicts.

The kayo was scored in the second bout of the evening when Alan Casey of Company A needed one minute and 20 records of the second round to send Ralph Roton of Company B to the canvas for the full count.

Despite the knockout chalked up by Casey, a bout between Hosea Coxsum of Company A and Danny Knotts of Company E was adjudged the best bout of the evening. Coxsum was the winner of the bout on a split decision.

A Company E pugilist, Emmet Bordeaux took the unanimous decision route to win his battle with N.C. Casasara of company G, and Carl Bobier from Company E took his fight Clarence Strong of Company A on similar balloting by the officials.

Frank Rivera, a visitor from the 504th Parachute Infantry, slugged it out with Bob Graham of Company A for another unanimous verdict.

In the sixth bout of the evening, Jack Williams, who lost by technical knockout last week stepped into the ring to pound out a unanimous decision over Earl Linch of Company D.

Another 504th visitor, Frank Hagey, wasn't so fortunate at his gloves colleague, and dropped his scrap on a unanimous ballot to Dick Brickett of Company E.

To close out the card, Joe Turner of company C outfought Sid Peele of Company B.

Following the fight program the winner of each bout was, presented with miniature golden gloves charms.

Several promising scraps already have been lined up for next Friday night's card, and it was expected that a full eight-fight program will be made up before the show. The first bout is slated to get underway at, 8 p.m.

Literature and Arts Group Hears Rev. Colin Campbell

At the first meeting of the Woman's club Literature and Arts group, held Monday afternoon at the Polo Hunt club, approximately 90 ladies heard Rev. Colin Campbell, rector of Trinity Episcopal church in Columbus and auxiliary chaplan at Fort Benning, make an inspiring talk on his impressions of western Europe.

Dr. Campbell, who was introduced by Mrs. Herbert Eitt, chairman of the Literature and Arts group, complimented the army on its handling of the occupational troops in Europe, of whom he said: "I feel that the men over there are holding the peace of the world in ther hands and carrying it as if it is a very precious thing."

He particularly praised the American Youth association which now has over a million German children in it. This organizaton has no American appropriation, but is entirely supported by G.I.'s who are interested in teaching the German youngsters how to play ball—literally and figuratively—the American way. He saiy that he is sincerely hopeful about the outcome.

Following the meeting, Dr. Campbell spent some time answering the questions of the group about post-war Europe.

The program for the next meeting, which will be held November 8 at the Country club, will be varied. There will be a short discussion on international relations and several musical selection. The feature of the afternoon will be a talk by Miss Latimer Watson, fashion editor of the Ledger Enquirer, on "short cuts and tricks in regard to women's clothes and the new look."

Mrs. O. A. Leahy, co-chairman of the group, announced that there will be a short story and writing contest, for any type of short tories or articles from 3,000 to 7,000 words. Details will be announced later. There will also be an amateur artist' contest which will be open to both members of the group and their husbands.

Camera Follows Grid Action

A Job Well Done

Saturday marks the beginning of a new era for the Army and for Fort Benning. At that time some 900 recruits will graduate as full-fledged members of the U. S. Army team. These recruits, however, will have a great deal more to remember than those those men who trained before them. They came into the "new" Army, and as members of that new Army received training slightly different from that employed in the past.

The methods and technique used by the 325th Infantry Training battalion to provide the rudiments of an Army education for these young soldiers were the result of much hard work, long investigations and innumerable suggestions, both from the military and the civilian. These methods and technique were the better recommendations received from the Universal Military Training Experiment at Fort Knox, Kentucky, and those advocated by Infantry Center officials.

It proves that young men can be trained, and trained effectively, despite the departure from the old doctrine. It proves that the Army is always willing to listen to and experiment with new ideas. It proves that the Army is not a backward institution, filled with a lot of so-called "die-hards" who would rather resign than make any change, as has been charged by some people since the outbreak of World War II.

Too much praise can never be heaped on the shoulders of the officers and men responsible for carrying out the basic training program here. Not knowing at first exactly the kind of men they would train, not knowing fully all the ramifications of the training program as designed by UMT and Fort Benning, these few men tackled their job with enthusiasm. And it has paid off in tremendous dividends.

Here is the record:

Out of four companies only eight men have been absent without leave, a majority merely late in returning from pass. Only five delinquencies were reported because of intoxication, and only three men reported by military police for infraction of Army regulations. These three were all minor, mostly for improper wearing of the uniform.

At the end of seven weeks, these four companies bivouacked for six days as a part of their training. On a sixteen-mile hike, during the bivouac period, only one man "dropped out," and that was due to boils.

During range firing, ninety-seven per cent of one company qualified on the known-distance class A course with the M-1 rifle. One man made a score of 197 out of a possible 210. The Fort Benning record is 205, fired by a soldier in the Infantry School detachment who had been a member of the Camp Perry, Ohio, rifle teams.

At an inspection by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., the recruits were commended highly for the progress they had made. During this inspection, the recruits were required to "pitch" tents and lay-out for inspection all their field equipment. To pass an inspection such as this is difficult even for "old" soldiers, to say nothing of men who had been in the Army such a short time.

These recruits organized a forty-two piece marching band and a sixteen-piece dance orchestra. They organized a special dance class to provide instruction for those men unable to dance. They produced amateur shows and entertained civic clubs in Columbus.

They organized a boxing team, softball teams, and volleyball teams, always showing a high degree of sportsmanship and enthusiasm.

All these entertainment and athletic programs were strictly extra-curricula. They did not interfere with the training program.

In conclusion, we would like to point to Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, who commands the training battalion. His belief in the recruits, his determination to make the program a success have made him admired and respected, not only by the soldiers in his unit, but by all those who visited the battalion to see the results of the training.

In the words of General Gillem, Colonel Yancey is "to be congratulated on the superior job he has done."

Strictly Editorializing

Despite complaints about this and that, it would seem as though a large number of Fort Benning soldiers do like it here, as evidenced by the large number of re-enlistments during October. To date, according to reports released this week by Maj. L. D. Shaw, recruiting officer, a total of 135 men have already reenlisted here this month, with the staggering total of 81 taking the oath in one week.

As we pointed out in these columns previously, Fort Benning offers many recreational facilities for off-duty hours which make a soldier's tour of duty here indeed pleasant. Our contention was more or less proved when we heard from Col. Arthur C. Purvis, adjutant general, that among the reasons given by men for reenlisting here were the many advantages for entertainment provided.

We were frankly surprised that so many men did indicate a preference for Fort Benning, especially in view of the fact that unmarried men usually have the urge to travel. After three or more years in one place, everyone usually sees "greener pastures" somewhere else. Apparently, only one man believed this last week, however, and he chose Alaska.

Of course, the recruiting office will get a great deal of credit for reenlisting these men, and we do not intend to take any of the credit away from them. But, we might point out, too, that it takes more than just a competent recruiting staff to acomplish such an outstanding percentage of reenlistments. It shows that the oficers and noncommissioned officers at Fort Benning should not be overlooked when the praise is being handed out. Were it not for their ability to make Fort Benning attractive in fact as well as in theory, no amount of talk by recruiting officials could entice men to reenlist.

Chaplain's Corner..

PROPER USE OF WINGS
BY CHAPLAIN H. B. YANE

"And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove For then would I fly away and be at rest." (Psalm 55:6)

Some time ago I saw a movie I can't forget. It was about the development of the atomic bomb. Its title was "The Beginning of the End." Whatever may be the faults and the virtures of that movie, is served to do one thing: that is, to dramatically remind us that we are living in a critical age in which God's unlimited power can be used by man for unimaginable destruction. Facing such a fact, and possibility, we may feel like the troubled and quite human psalmist who wanted to "get away from it all," and thus prayed his fearful prayer, "Oh that I had wings like a dove. For, then would I fly away and be at rest."

It is right that we should pray when troubled, but God does not answer a prayer like that of the psalmist—nor will He give us wings so we can fly to some other planet to escape atomic warfare. God has done better by man, for there is a spirit in man, and in that spirit is our defeat or victory.

Spiritual readiness is essential to life's successful defense. It is this realm in which the peoples of the world need their greatest preparation. We need to experience more the power and presence of Almighty God, and the salvation of His Holy Son.

Wings we sometimes need—but not "wings like a dove" that we may "fly away and take our rest." A better expression of the use of wings is that of the great prophet of Isaiah who confidently declared: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk; and not faint.

Yes, we need wings that will "lift us" into the confidence and strength of renewed character. We need to be lifted into a renewed confidence of the ultimate triumph of righteousness. We need wings that will lift us by the strength of this great purpose—that a new humanity shall be born from the present travail of this sin-cursed, war-scarred, and war-scared world.

"Passionately fierce the voice of God is pleading,
"Pleading with men to arm them for the fight,
See how those hands, majestically bleeding,
Call us to rout the armies of the night. . .
Peace does not mean the end of all our striving,
Joy does not mean the drying of our tears,

THE HUSBAND WHO RAN AWAY

If we seem a little vague about Max Miller's "The Town with the Funny Name". The can blame it on the book itself. Nor is it an essay in the old school day form of essays. It might be a series of anecdotes, but most of them have no point. It starts nowhere in particular and goes no where; there is almost no action. And yet, (strangely enough, it is one of the most fascinating pieces of literature—and we use the word "literature" advisedly—we have had the pleasure of reading since we left Ruskin's "Modern Painters."

The "town with the funny name" is La Jolla, a small fishing village in Southern California, not far—physically—from San Diego. But San Delego a hustling, modern, ambitious city, which uses its history and tradition to attract tourists, to build itself into another San Francisco, or New York, or some other place with a population for the the Chamber of Commerce to brag about. La Jolla does not particularly desire change. The tourists who flock there —as tourists always do to any place that offers scenery and climate — remain outsiders. They try to become a part of the community. They clutter up the ocean with their surf fishing tackle; they shoot cormorants with arrows; they rob the lobster traps; they paint their homes grapejuice purple and throw big cocktail parties. And they puzzle over the name "La Jolla". The poetically-minded think it means "the jewel" in Spanish. It doesn't. Nor is it necessarily a distorted Indian word meaning "the hole".

The natives probably don't know what the name means. If they did, they wouldn't bother to tell the others. They do not mingle with the tourists, but remain in the shadows. As the author says, they are "the people who everlastingly remain on the edge—looking."

Max Miller is back from the war—or we should say the wars. For, as he says, he fought in two world wars and saw the third one making up. And he is tired of fighting Europe's battles. As he expresses it, "I am as wornout and as sick of hearing of those countries—and how we must do something for them again —as they are sick of us." Miller is undoubtedly one of the "isolationists", who are, at the mament, the most unpoplar of people. But after two wars he has reason.

If you want excitement and action and a definite climax, if you want broad, forced humor that hits you in the eye, don't bother with "The Town with the Funny Name". The book is gentle—in spots, but extremely penetrating. It will probably remind you of Ernie Pyle's "Home Country" though it is much more static and contains far less "news". As we said before, nothing much happens. And yet we don't think you will forget this book very easily.

BY R. L. GEORGE

As a result of a survey we have found that there is widespread misunderstanding and confusion in the minds of servicemen and their families in regard to the most expeditious method to be used when an emergency furlough or furlough extension is desired. The proper method can best be illustrated by taking common methods and discussing them separately as examples No. and 12.

EXAMPLE No. 1: In this case we will assume the soldier's mother becomes suddenly ill and the family decides that the serviceman should come home as quickly as possible. They send the serviceman a wire, which says "Come home at once. Mother is sick." If the wire is received by the soldier during the day he contacts his commanding officer and if the wire is received at night or during a holiday he contacts his officer of the day. In either case the officer usually gets in touch with the field director's office who must in turn send a wire to the Red Cross chapter in the city in which the mother resides. The chapter then contacts the family, learns the name of the doctor, and contacts him for the medical information. The chapter then sends a wire to the field director's office, the field director reports the wire to the commanding officer, and if the facts warrant, a furlough is given the soldier. As you have already guessed there is a better method for handling this situation which we will call example No. 2.

EAXMPLE No. 2: In this case the family, in addition to sending a wire to the serviceman, immediately contacts the local American Red Cross chapter and gives them all the facts which, of course, includes the serviceman's name, rank, serial number and organization plus the name of the doctor on the case. The chapter is then in a position to make an immediate investigation, send a wire to the field director's office who in turn relays the information to the serviceman's commanding officer or the officer of the day, and a furlough is granted.

By comparison of the two examples it is obvious that the method employed in example No. 2 is better. It eliminates much unnecessary loss of time.

After comparison, it is so obvious that example No. 2 is better that one naturally concludes that everyone uses the second method. However, a rough estimate of our daily activity indicates that approximately 50 per cent of the families still use the method illustrated under example No. 1.

Every soldier reading this article should make sure that his family understands the proper procedure to follow in case an emergency furlough is necessary.

Brown, Whitehurst Are Named Gridiron Heroes

A a result of top - notch offensive and defensive performances against the Bethune-Cookman college Wildcats of Daytona Beach, Fla., last Saturday, tackle Eddie Brown and tackle Roy Whitehurst have been selected by the Sand Hill coaching taff as the "Bullet Gridiron Heroes of the Week."

Tae chores turned in against the Wildcats by the two forewall huskies far overshadowed their earlier season demonstrations.

Disregarding the prowess of their heavier opponents, the two bone - crushing stalwarts worked all over the lot, slamming the hard - running Wildcat back to the ground with vicious tackles, and making their stint on the gridiron generally unpleasant for the collegiate ball -carriers.

Whitehurst, a bulky 205-pounder who stands well over six feet tall, was playing his first game of the season for the Bullet eleven. His stellar accomplishments however, erased all doubt that he will be cast in a starting role for the remainder of the year.

His efforts were crowned in the third stanza when he crashed through the Cat line to recover a Florida fumble on the Bullet 20 - yard marker to put an end to a drive seemingly labeled a Bethune - Cookman touchdown.

Brown, who has been with the Bullets since the season's opening, came into his own by taking advantage of his bulk to drive through to the Wildcat backfield to repeatedly bottle up their running plays. The 210-pound tackle plans to enter Tennessee State college at Nashville on a scholarship when he completes his present hitch with the Army.

When he joins the Tennessee Tiger eleven, Brown will be suited up with the squad which won a national championship last, year.

30th Medical CO Honored by Group On Leaving Army

Honoring Maj. Spurgeon H. Neel, Jr., former commanding officer, the 30th Medical group held a retreat parade last Friday. Major Neel is returning to private medical practice in northern Georgia after five years in the army.

A 1942 graduate of the University of Tennessee, he entered the army in October, 1943, and went overseas as commanding officer of a medical collecting company with the 69th Infantry division in December. 1944. Following the end of the war he came back to this country briefly, returning to Germany in the spring of 1946 to serve with the 57th Field hospital.

From March, 1947, until last August, he was a surgeon with the First Constabulary brigade. He then came to Fort Benning as commander of the 30th Medical group.

College Eleven Dumps Bullets

By BOB PHILLIPS

Almost two weeks of inactivity revealed damaging effects upon the usually smooth-working gridiron machine of the Fort Benning Bullets as they were pasted with a 25-0 shellacking by the Bethune-Cookman college Wildcats in Welch Memorial stadium at Daytona Beach, Fla., last Saturday.

The scrappy Bullet eleven, which rose close to its peak of pigskin efficiency three weeks ago against the Columbus Buffaloes, appeared unexpectedly stale during the first quarter, and had a hard time getting started. It was during this quarter that the alert and power-charged collegians struck in thunderbolt fashion to ram over two touchdowns to set the not-yet-ready soldier aggregation back on their heels.

A 78 - yard march, engineered by mercury - footed Archie Allen, who proved to be unstoppable all evening, advanced the oval to the Bullet two - yard marker. On the next play, Hank Sanderson and Roy Whitehurst broke through the collegian' line to dump Joe Anderson for a three - yard loss, but Allen then took the ball and slipped over tackle for the score.

Allen Again

After several exchanges of punts, between which Allen continued to thrill the crowd with sensational break - away jaunts, the gazelle-like ball-carrier added to the Bullets' misery by taking Cliff Bradford's punt on the Bullet 24-yard stripe and twisting his way over the goal line for another Wildcat touchdown.

Both first - period tries for the extra point failed, and the game went into the second quarter at 12-0.

At this point, the powerful running attack of the collegians came to a dead halt, and the game which had started out as a rout for the Bethune-Cookman crew turned into a terrific battle between the two forward walls. Led by 205-pound Whitehurst, Ed Brown and Ted McDonald, the Bullets braced themselves with the steadiness of a fortress and refused to yield an inch during the remainder of the first half. Also figuring in the gallant line stand were Dave Van, Bob Murphy, Walt Brown, Matt Batie, Bill Whitney, Odell Kennedy and Al Blannon.

Rally Threatened

A Bullet rally was threatened during the third period as the Sand Hill eleven made several dents in the collegians' forewall. However, the Cats struck again —this time through the air — during the late stages of the quarter.

A pass by Andy Anderson moved the ball down to the Bullet 42 - yard stripe where a tossing combination of Anderson to Jenkins to Young clicked for the remaining yardage and another six points for the Floridians. To supplement the passing feats, Anderson booted the ball between the uprights for the extra point.

The final Wildcat score came in the closing seconds of the fourth period when wing-footed Anderson took a pass, ran into the outstretched arms of five would-be Bullet tacklers, twisted himself free and scooted 28 yards for the score.

A 83 - yard punt return by quarterback Hudie Langston and a 17-yard sprint by Gordon Burke highlighted the offensive playing of the Bullets. The soldier eleven racked up only five first downs while the Wildcats had 12

Career Plan Goes Into Effect on Post

Following rapidly on the heels of information received last week that Fort Benning had been designated a Central Computing and Examining agency for enlisted men's efficiency reports was the further announcement this week that the long-awaited career plan has begun here in the food service field.

Instructions were received late Monday that applications for promotion in the food service field were to be filed prior to Oct. 20 and examinations were to be taken in mid-November. Efficiency reports must be turned in prior to Nov. 1.

In order that applicants for promotion may take the steps required under the plan, an emergency requisition was placed with higher headquarters for the needed forms, efficiency report blanks and examinations. The promotion applications will be distributed to organizations upon their receipt for further distribution to food service personnel requesting them.

Efficiency reports on the applicants, according to officials in the adjutant general's office, will be completed for the applicants and forwarded at the same time as the applications. Examinations will be held Nov. 16 through Nov. 19, it was revealed.

The following examination schedule has been set up for these first applicants:

For men desiring promotion to the fourth pay grade: Cooks, MOS 060, Nov. 16 at 9 a.m. Bakers, MOS 017, Nov. 16, 2 p.m. Pastry bakers, MOS 1017, Nov. 17, 9 a.m. Meat cutters, MOS 037, Nov. 17, 2 p.m.

Examinations for men desiring promotion to the third pay grade: Cooks, MOS 060, Nov. 16, 9 a.m. Mess stewards, MOS 824, Nov. 18, 9 a.m. Master bakers, MOS 2017, Nov. 18, 2 p.m. Master meat cutters, MOS 1037, Nov. 19, 9 a.m.

Scheduled examinations for the second pay grade are: Mess stewards, MOS 824, Nov. 18, 9 a.m. Master bakers, MOS 2017, Nov. 18, 2 p.m. Master meat cutters, MOS 1037, Nov. 19, 9 a.m. First grade examinations: Food service technicians, MOS 1824, Nov. 19, 2 p.m.

The efficiency reports, according to Col. Arthur C. Purvis, Infantry Center adjutant general, are similar to the present officers' efficiency reports. These have been studied by the Truscott commission since the end of the war, and streamlined in an effort to make them more clearly understood by raters in the interest of greater fairness to the persons rated, officials said.

Reports on efficiency will be submitted, according to Army Regulation 600-180, dated Sept. 17, 1948, on all enlisted personnel of the first six grades who are classified in a career field. Although the food service field is the only career field now set up it is expected that the army-wide program will go into effect soon.

Reports on efficiency will normally be turned in on the enlisted man by his immediate duty supervisor who has been defined as "an officer, warrant officer or non-commissioned officer who normally has daily contact with the person being rated with respect to duty assignment." The indorser will be a commissioned officer who is the immediate superior of the rater in the chain of command. This officer will be the individual who is most familiar with the duty assignment of the individual being rated.

Among the examples of appropriate raters and indorsers on the enlisted efficiency report as shown in the regulation are:

ard. The indorsing offier would be either the mess officer or the

A first cook in a unit will normally be rated by the mess stewunit commander.

A personnel management technician (MOS 280) in the classification office of an army headquarters will normally be rated by the enlisted chief of the section MOS 280). The indorsing officer would normally be the classification officer in charge of the section.

A squad leader in an infantry rifle company will normally be rated by the platoon sergeant. The indorsing officer would normally be the platoon leader or unit commander.

A battalion sergeant major in an infantry battalion will normally be rated by the battalion adjutant and the indorsing officer would be the battalion commander.

A first sergeant in a field artillery battery will normally be rated by the battery commander and the indorsing officer would be the battalion commander.

New CO Of Benning Unit Commanded Post-War Jap Whaling Expedition

A five-month Japanese whaling expedition in the Antarctic Circle which produced 45,000 tons of whale products and a cargo valued at approximately $22,000,000, the richest catch ever recorded in Japanese history, amy have been just the first post-war expedition to most, but it will long be remembered by one Fort Benning soldier.

The expedition was commanded in part by Lt. Col. Waldon C. Winston, new commanding officer of the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, who was sent by Gen. Douglas McArthur to accompany the Japanese on the 1947-48 expedition. Purpose of the trip was to alleviate the critical shortage of fats and oils in Japan.

Needing two American representives to make sure the Japanese complied with international whaling laws, the general called for volunteers.

Of the two volunteers, one was a civilian, William A. Terry, from Wilmington, Del., and the other was Colonel Winston, who, at that time, was liaison officer between Eighth army military government section at Yokahoma, and general headquarters at Tokyo.

The whaling expedition consisted of two separate fleets, one of which was supervised by Mr. Terry, the other by Colonel Winston. The fleet totaled 27 ships, of which 12 were under the command of Colonel Winston. There was a total of over 1,200 Japanese workmen and crewmen on board the ships, plus two allied observers whose duties were to see what went on during the expedition. Colonel Winston was also provided with an official interpreter who spoke excellent English, a Japanese photographer, and a special cook for all Allied personnel.

The cook, a Japanese who had seen service on passenger liners before the war, brought in the first morning's breakfast cold, Colonel Winston recalled. When reminded that Americans like their breakfasts hot, the cook really took it to heart. The following morning, Colonel Winston found that everything was hot . . . even his orange juice.

The operational phase began on November 6, 1947, and ended on the April 1, 1948. During the five-month-trip, the ships covered a total of 18,000 miles without touching land.

To insure the success of the expedition, many new and improved methods were introduced especially in the lines of the operation ship, where the whales were cut up and boiled for oil.

The outcome was that the fleet commanded by Colonel Winston recorded the highest in the history of Japanese whaling, and exceeded the world average for the trip.

Another reason for the exceptionally high yield of fats and oils was the result of a change in the plan of processing, which was instigated by Colonel Winston. The process that the Japanese had been using for ten years was found to be extremely wasteful, and with the colonel's suggestion of a change, an average of 40 barrels was saved on each whale killed.

Before leaving port, Colonel Winston asked the Japanese why whales weren't weighed. He found out that in the entire history of whaling, only four whales had weighed . . . . the first one about 40 years ago. While on the expedition, the fleet commanded by Colonel Winston weighed the biggest whale ever recorded. It was some 9 feet long, and weighed a total of 127 1-2 metric tons. It took 80 Japanese four hours to weigh the mammal. The heart of the whale weighed over 900 pounds. The value was estimated at approximately $30,000.

There were a total of 27 whales weighed on the trip, or seven times as many as were previously recorded.

Although much of the operation took place around the Antarctic circle, the weather was fine, and only once did the ships run into a heavy sea. On that occasion, the waves rose to a height of more than 40 feet in many instances. The coldest weather recorded on the trip was 20 degrees Farenheit.

The expedition was highly successful with a total of 1,321 whales killed and stripped. Approximately half were killed by Colonel Winston's fleet.

The expedition produced 45,000 tons of whale products, including meat, fats and oils, and the cargo was valued at approximately $22,000,000, the richest catch ever recorded by the Japanese.

STAR BULLET FLANKMAN BOSTON COLLEGE BOUND

BY AL WISE

Fort Benning lost one of its outstanding athletes last Saturday when Freddie Hamer of Headquarters battery, 999th Field Artillery battalion, was separated from the service.

A veteran of 30 months service in the European theater during World War II, Hamer reenlisted late in 1945, and was assigned to the 999th early in 1946.

A participant on several of the battalion's sports teams, his all-around ability came to the attention of the grid lore staff of the 25th Regimental combat team, and he garnered an initial assignment at end on the 1946 Bullet football eleven.

At the close of the 1946 football season, Hamer turned his attention to the hardwood courts, and was selected for guard on the 25th RCT basketball quintet. He capably filled his assignment with the club which became a two-tournament winner, and ended the season atop the Southeastern Inter-collegiate Athletic conference roster.

During the 1947 season, he again went back to his chores as a "regular" on the Bullet football and basketball squads.

HOME OF THE DOUGHBOYS . . . Mecca for Benning grid fans during the autumn months is Doughboy stadium which seats more than 10,000 spectators. The edifice was built by Infantrymen as a memorial to their fallen comrades of World War I. Infantrymen from all over the world sent cash contributions to pay for the materials, and soldiers at Fort Benning did the actual construction.

Doughboy Stadium Built As Infantry Memorial

Although a comparatively new army post when compared with some of the "old timers" that have long, historical records, Fort Benning has many famous landmarks, one of which is Doughboy stadium, built by infantrymen as a memorial stadium to their dead comrades of World War I.

Plans to build the stadium as a memorial to the dead of World War I were instigated by the U.S. Infantry association.

Since they could not use any money appropriated by Congress the association realize that the responsibility would rest largely on the individual infanry soldier. Each unit in the United States army at that time was asked to contribute what it could wit hthe money to be sent to the association secretary who kept records of the contributions by the unit and individual.

Many large contributions were made by top infantry officers, including General of the Army Douglas McArthur, who, at that time, was a brigadier general.

Although originally planned that all money received would come from infantry units, contributions were received from other branches of the service, and many universiles and colleges also helped with donations.

Besides contributing money to the fund, infantry soldiers gave willing support during off-duty hours to the actual construcion of the stadium. Construction was the responsibility of the Recreation Center board, and the planning and building of the stadium was carried out by U. S. army engineers.

Work on the stadium began in November, 1924, and was completed in October, 1925. Dedication ceremonies on Oct. 17, 1925, preceded the first football game on the new gridiron, with the Infantry School defeating Oglethorpe university, champions of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association.

Doughboy stadium, with a seating capacity of over 10,000, has been the scene of many thrilling gridiron battles. Performing on the Fort Benning greensward, as opponents or members of the Doughboys, were such football notables as Johnny Lujack, former All-American from Notre Dame, Mike Gussie, former end for the Brooklyn Dodgers; George Poschner, All-American from Georgia; Hamp Poole, former end for the Chicago Bears; Ollie Cline, one-time Ohio State fullback; Marion Motley, Cleveland Browns fullback, Chuck Bray, Chicago Bears lineman; Johnny Green, one-time All-American guard; Herman Rohrig All-American halfback from Nebraska; Billy Hillenbrand; All-American back from Indiana, and a host of other All-Americans and lesser lights too numerous to mention.

Upon completion of the stadium, a fund was set aside for the installation of bronze plaques around the stadium to commemorate the tank corps, which had also contributed to the fund. Since there was not enough room to accommodate all the tank units, special permission was given to use a plaque representing the entire tank corps.

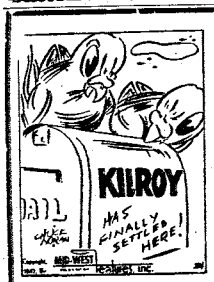
Sgt. Basnight Re-Ups In Field

When a soldier knows what he wants, he doesn't hesitate in taking advantage of the opportunities at hand.

At least, one Fort Benning man, Sgt. Jarvis Basnight, of Battery B, 999th Field Artillery battalion, knows what he wants. He wasted no time in reenlisting, taking the oath right out in the field.

Approached by Lt. James E. Nichols, unit recruiting officer, Basnight was interviewed for reenlistment while on duty in the field and "reupped" to fill his own vacancy.



A native of Creswell, N. C., Sergeant Basnight entered the army in April, 1941, at Fort Bragg, N. C. With the 188th Field Artillery during the war, he participated in North Africa, Italy, Southern France, and Germany campaigns. He was assigned to the 999th Field Artillery here in October, 1945, and has been motor sergeant for the past 27 months.

Originator Of Combat Infantry Badge Retires

The man who originated the idea of the Combat Infantry badge, symbol of the Doughboy's exampiary conduct in battle, is leaving the army.

After 31 years of outstanding service, Col. Waine Archer, director of the army extension courses of the Infantry School, bid farewell Friday to a long and illustrious army career that began Nov. 27, 1917.

As head of the Special Information section, Army Ground Forces, in Washington during 1943-44, Colonel Archer in addition to originating the idea of the Combat Infantry badge, also was instrumental in conceiving other awards in honor of the infantryman, including the Bronze star. As head of a section whose duty it was to build up the prestige of the infantry, the retiring Fort Benning officer did much in promoting higher recognition of the infantrymen who had ploughed their way through one war and were slushing through another without much recognition.

COL. WAINE ARCHER
. . . leaves army

Colonel Archer came to Fort Benning the last time in December, 1945, from Pacific headquarters, Manila. He had been here in 1926 as a student at the Infantry School and again in 1939 as an instructor, later becoming coordinator of training.

A veteran of both world wars, Colonel Archer served on the Mexican border during the first world war and with the Twelfth Army group in Europe in World War II, transferring to the Philippines in 1945.

Entering the service in August, 1917, at Leon Springs, Tex., the retiring officer was commissioned in Novmeber of the same year. After duty on the Mexican Border, he moved to the Canadian border for two years before sailing for the Philippines in 1922. He returned to the states for duty at Fort Moultrie, S. C., and Fort Benning before going overseas again to Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

In 1934 he became assistant professor of military science and tactics at Clemson college. S. C., where he remained a year before transferring to the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Prior to assuming duties as an instructor at the Infantry school in 1939 Colonel Archer served at Fort George Wright, Wash., and was a student at the Army War college, Fort Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D. C.

After 31 years in the army, Colonel Archer plans to visit the northwest and "take things easy". As far as the army is concerned he said. "It can't be long up a pin fall of 2 41 in the too bad if a man can stay in 31 years."

Men With Wives Banned From Army Enlistment

The original enlistment of men with wives or other dependents has been banned by the army since Oct. 1, it has been disclosed this week in a story in the Army Times.

This has been done in an effort to reduce demand on the army and on local communities for housing of service personnel, Army Times reported.

The ban does not affect anyone already enlisted or prevent his reenlisting, provided he either does so within the usual 90 days, or comes back under one of the policies entitling him to grade three or higher, the story continued. Similar provisions already have been in effect for the airforce.

Colonel Jackson, Air University, Praises School

A letter of appreciation was received last week by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center, from Col. Waverly H. Jackson, president of the Air university's associate course No. 48-B who was among 510 airmen attending a series of demonstrations here Sept. 29-30.

Colonel Jackson expressed appreciation "for a most enjoyable and instructive visit to the Infantry School, and went on to say that "it is especially desired to make appreciative mention of the friendly courtesy and hospitality extended by officers and men of the Infantry Center to our class while we were their guests.

He further pointed out that the demonstrations, which were presented for the students, "constituted a most impressive and convincing climax to the effective instruction in army matters as presented here by resident instructors."

Maj. Gen. Earl W. Barnes, commandant of the university, added an indorsement to Colonel Jackson's letter in which he said he wanted to "add my personal appreciation for the outstanding demonstration presented and the exceptional treatment extended to our students during the period they were present at Fort Benning."

General Barnes called the demonstrations "realistic, effective and superbly executed. The students gained a source comprehension of infantry fire powers and tactics. It was a very definite contribution to our curriculum."

United Nations Day

In a troubled and frightened world, it is heartening to know that there are still people who are not only talking peace, but actually working, and working hard, toward achieving that peace. Those people make up that outstanding organization known simply as the United Nations.

There are, unfortunately, too many people who have little faith in the United Nations, prefering to believe that their efforts toward building a lasting peace are fruitless and that the monies expended toward maintaining the organization are just so many dollars thrown away. We, however, do not belong to that group, but are among those who believe that so long as nations sit around conference tables, regardless of how wide the breach between them, there is hope of peaceful solutions to all problems.

It is somewhat reassuring, then, that the United Nations General Assembly, at least, is confident enough that all differences among members will be settled to set aside next Sunday, October 24, as United Nations Day.

October 24 was chosen because it was on this day that the United Nations came into being, bringing with it a feeling of hope for a weary world. It was on this day that not only the great powers in world politics, but the smaller nations as well, decided to join hands to outlaw warfare and to prevent a more powerful nation from enslaving his neighbors. In other words, the founders of the United Nations really meant to put into effect a world-wide Monroe Doctrine.

To set the pace and to show to the rest of the world that the U. S. army is not pereparing for war but working for peace, Fort Benning will observe United Nations Day with a unique celebration. Sunday afternoon, all the foreign students at the Infantry School--and they represent nations from every corner of the world--will be honor guests at the football game in Doughboy stadium. Flags representing all countries which are members of the United Nations will be paraded before the spectators, and every Fort Benning unit will be represented by their unit colors.

How better can the army disprove the theories today being advanced by anti-military groups that were it not for the government being top-heavy with "brass," there would not be so much fear of war than by an open show of its trust in the United Nations?

We hope that some day the world will be free from fear. We hope that some day each nation will be able to trust implicity all his neighbors. We hope that some day the world will settle down to enjoy the fruits which come from friendship. We hope that some day there will be no world barriers and that each nation of the world will extend his hand in friendship to all other nations. But until that day we must, as good Americans, believe in the United Nations and in its grim determination, despite handicaps, to attain that goal of lasting peace.

Strictly Editorializing

We saw something last Saturday morning which everyone at Fort Benning should have seen. We refer to the graduation parade of four companies of the 325th Infantry Training battalion in which the trainees acted as unit officers. As long as we have been associated with the army, it has never been our experience to witness a more soldierly display of discipline and pride. Indeed it is difficult to explain exactly the feeling which seemed to envelop the crowd when the band struck its first note and the voices of the trainee officers sounded off. The spectators could feel the pride felt by the trainees. They knew the trainees were conscious of their abilities to carry out the parade in a creditable manner, and the trainees knew the spectators knew it and were proud of the confidence the spectators had in them.

Probably even prouder than the trainees, however, was the cadre. This cadre, which had been brother, father, friend and teacher to the companies for eight weeks, couldn't help exhibiting their pride. We heard some of their comments to the visitors which proved that they were proud of these men. Such things as, "That's my boy. . .listen to him sound off" showed that the cadre had as much interest in the trainees as the trainees had in showing to the visitors what they had learned during their eight weeks in Harmony church.

There were many funny incidents reported about these young men during their training period, but the funniest to our way of thinking took place at the football game last Friday night at Memorial stadium in Columbus. The recruits were guests of Baker Village and Jordan high schools for their annual gridiron classic, and after the game was over, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, battalion commander, told the men to stand fast. As soon as he turned around, he heard one of the recruits remark, "For crying out loud, they're going to make us police the stadium."

Chaplain's Corner..

OBEDIENCE TO ORDERS

By Chaplain John Dvorovy

There is a story in First Kings, chapter 13, where the narrative speaks of a man who had known victory, but who was careless concerning the rules which gave him that victory.

In a survey of the circumstances surrounding chapter 13 we see how God, endeavoring to build, moved the life of a nation. At that time, Jeroboam, who ruled over the nation, decided to set up a new religion according to his own tastes and ambitions. He had erected two golden idols, one at Dan and the other at Bethel, and established a new order of priests whose duties involved worship of these golden images.

On the opening feast day and at the moment the King himself was about to offer incense, a young prophet arose and denounced the false worship. As he spoke, the altar was torn apart and ashes poured out. The King thrust forward to seize the young man, and as he did so, his hand withered and fell useless at his side. Healed by the prophet, he humbly invited him to the palace.

The young prophet refused the invitation, stating that his orders were not to stop in any house "nor eat bread nor drink water, while in the land of the idols." Consequently he set out on his homeward journey.

The news soon reached the ears of an older prophet in Bethel, who set out to find the younger one. He found him sitting under an oak tree.

"Come home with me and eat bread," invited the older prophet. But the young man referred to his divine orders. When, however, the older man argued that he, too, was a prophet, the young man yielded. Thus he who was unafraid to face a king and denounce his false worship went down in defeat to a lone man by the roadside. Here was a soldier of God, assigned by divine command to carry out a mission, who failed to take heed of the details of his orders.

Shortly after he left the house in Bethel, news came back to the old prophet that a man had been killed by a lion on the highway. Investigating he found that "it was the man of God who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord."

As Christians, we are faced with the duty of carrying out a sacred mission for our Lord. Our orders are clearly defined in His Holy Word. By word and deed we are to testify against evil and wickedness and by Christian life and conduct point the way to joy, happiness, peace for the soul.

THE CASE OF THE LAZY LOVER

In "The Case of the Lazy Lover," Erle Stanley Gardner who apparently writes a whodun-it every day and three on Sunday, has given us another run of the mill detective story, with little to distinguish it from his thousand and one Perry Mason "cases," except perhaps, the title. There's no doubt about it, Gardner has an amazing faculty for choosing interesting, if slightly irrelevant, titles. We've had cases of lucky legs and crooked candles as well as drowning ducks and perjured parrots. And now we have a lazy lover. Of course, he isn't lazy; nor is he exactly a lover, but aside from that the title fits perfectly.

Perry Mason, that indefatigable lawyer who out - detects all the detectives in fiction, is very much in evidence, still saving his clients by his legal tricks, and in between times tricks, and in between times getting in lieutenant Flagg's hair. (Someday some author will tective who gets along beautifully with the police force, but we doubt if that author will be Erle Stanley Gardner). For those who have never read one of the Gardner who-dun-its—such people do exist, we understand—let us say that Perry Mason is the kind of man who loves to move bodies, break into places he has no business in, and park in front of fire plugs. How he manages to do this and keep strictly within the law is one of the two mysteries in this and all the other Perry Mason stories. The other mystery is, of course," when is Mason going to marry his pluperfect secretary Della Street?" We wish he'd hurry up so we can stop reading these "cases" and catch up on our comic books, which are a little less "escapist."

In "The Case of the Lazy Lover," Della Street has been pushed a little into the background, but she does manage to start things going by opening the envelop with nothing in it but a $2,500 check payable to Perry Mason (as if that weren't enough). Another check arrives in the noon mail for the same amount and still without explanation. These things always happen to Perry Mason, or other fiction detectives, but never to anyone we know. Of course, Perry is a little curious about the checks, starts investigating, and is immediately involved in a mystery which concerns such people as Bertrand C. Allred, a slick operator, Lola Faxon Allred, his wife, a woman of considerable beauty and wealth, who has apparently just run off with Robert Fleetwood, a man fifteen years her junior. He is, as you probably suspect, the "lazy lover."

By MURRAY HILL

Often I am asked, "On what basis is Red Cross money available to me."

The answer to this well might be the often - used phrase "when the need and purpose has been thoroughly established and the money is not available from any other source." One can then be given serious consideration on a case work basis for financial assistance.

Perhaps the phrase used above needs further explanation. For instance, what is meant by the phrase, "when the need and purpose has been thoroughly established." The most simple explanation means verification of your needs, but it is more than that. It is a complete discussion with you or your dependents concerning your request for financial aid, a discussion of your plans, budgets and the use for which you need the money.

It might be a simple verification such as a wire concerning illness in your home for an emergency furlough, or it might require many days of consultation with chaplains and others relative to large medical and hospital bills due to continued illness of your dependents. Nevertheless, after the need and purpose has been thoroughly established, before the money can be advanced, it is then necessary to see if that money is available from any other source.

Perhaps you might have back pay coming to you. Perhaps we can secure medical attention at an army hospital and save you the expense of a civilian hospital. There might be any number of untapped sources for money within your own home which you had not thought about. From this you can see the necessity when applying to the Red Cross for financial assistance of cooperating with the worker, for it will be easier and more pleasant for both you and the Red Cross worker.

Red Cross money is available for emergency needs only and is not advanced as a matter of convenience. An emergency is thought of as that which might happen to an individual unexpectedly and because of no fault of the family involved, such as sudden illness, death or other tragic situations. The mere fact that a family has drawn both the soldier's pay and the wife's allotment and has spent that amount does not constitute an emergency.

The Red Cross advances many hundreds of dollars at Fort Benning every month, and in Red Cross chapters throughout the United States many thousands of dollars are advanced to soldiers' dependents each month. We can not cover all requests, but we do urge that if you have a financial problem confronting you to come in and discuss it with us.

ACCENT ON FEMINITY . . . Margaret Walker, left, models the very latest in WAC underclothes, while Pat Hall shows off the newest in in unmentionables for the WAVEs. That's about all that can be said except to mention that Juel Park, Beverly Hills lingerie stylist, designed the latest underthings for the services.

Sergeants Reenlist For Indefinite Time

First man to reenlist at Fort Benning under the new indefinite enlistment plan was 1st. Sgt. Edward P. Hitaffer, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit, who reenlisted to fill his own vacancy last Monday.

The same day, M-Sgt. Gilmore E. Currier, Headquarters and Headquarters battery, 319th Field Artillery battalion, told recruiting personnel that he, too, wanted to reenlist under the new setup.

According to recruiting personnel, the men must remain in the service for a normal three-year enlistment, but after that may either stay in the army indefinitely or be discharged at any time.

To Amuse You Today

Two black crows were flying across country when a P-80 went zooming past, its jet propulsion spurting flames from its exhaust. "Boy," exclaimed one crow, "is that bird in a hurry."

"Yes," said the other crow, "and I bet you'd be too, if your tail was on fire."

Snarled the policeman, surveying the wrecks: "You must have been the lady driving toward you. Why didn't you give her half of the road?"

Explained the motorist: "I was going to as soon as I discovered which half she wanted."

"How was the wedding?" asked the chaplain's wife.

It was fine until I asked the bride if she would obey, and she said: "Do you think I'm crazy?" Just about that time, the groom, who was in sort of a daze, said, 'I do.' And that's when things really began to happen."

Pfc "Aren't you engaged to Susan?"

M-Sgt "Not any longer."

Pfc "That's smart of you. Never could see what you saw in her. She's fat, dumb and homely. How'd you get out of the engagement?"

M-Sgt. "We were married last month."

District Attorney: "You say that when you visited the nudist camp on the night of the murder you didn't do a thing. Do you realize you are under oath?"

Old Man (witness) "Yes, and do you realize I'm over 80?"

Teacher: "Now, Frankie, if I lay two eggs over here and three over here, how many will there be altogether?"

Frankie: "Personally, I don't think you can do it."

Girl: "And if I refuse you, will you kill yourself?"

Sergeant: "That has been my usual custom."

Farmer: "You can't go wrong on this mare. She's sound, gentle, a good worker and a fine saddle horse."

Restaurant Owner. "What I want to know is, is she tender?"

Joe: "Where'd ya get th' black eye?"

Blow: "It's a birthmark."

Joe: "Waddayamean, a birthmark?"

Blow: "I sarted into the wrong one on the train last night."

Prizes For Best Costumes At Big Hallowe'en Carnival

There's still time to buy your ticket for the Parent - Teachers Association Hallowe'en carnival. So if you're looking for $5,000 worth of fun for fifty cents —and who isn't — just get in touch with the school secretary during school hours and get your scrip.

If you're a parent accompanying your children you won't need scrip for admission. But if you want to purchase refreshments or take part in the many varied activities at the carnival, you'll need the "play money", which will be the only legal tender at the party.

The carnival will be held on Friday evening, October 29, at the Post gym. Assembly for the big costume parade will be at the Post school at 6:00, and the parade will begin at 6:30 and will proceed along Wold avenue to Ingersoll to the Post gymnasium. All youngsters participating in the parade will form by grade groups in the Post school classrooms under the direction of the room representatives. A prize will be awarded for the best boy and the best girl costume, with special prizes for the pre-school and first and second grade group.

The party promies to be the biggest affair conducted for the children on the post this year. All youngsters are welcome whether they are attending the Post school or not. Many committees and organizations are combining under the chairmanship of Mrs. Leo W. H. Shaughnessey to make the party a success. Among the attractions will be the Girl Scouts' Fish Pond and Fortune Telling tent, the Cubs' Shooting gallery, and the Boy Scouts' Haunted House of Horrors. A special feature will be a marionnette show which is being staged by Mrs. W. H. Curley of Columbus.

AWest Point June hop in all its glory had nothing on the graduation dance trainees of the 325th Infantry Training battalion held Saturday evening at Service club No. 3.

The boys were there, trim and trig, as smart looking as they had been a few hours before when they passed in review at their graduation parade. And the girls were there, too— some of the prettiest girls in two states—from Columbus, Phenix City, and from the Polytechnic Institue at Auburn. There were 49 coeds from Auburn, as well as other young ladies from the NCCS and other service organizations. Special buses, sent by the battalion, provided transportation.

As each young lady arrived she was presented with a corsage. The dance was formal, and the lovely evening gowns were every color of the rainbow, with a few colors the rainbow didn't know about.

The club was decorated with autumn leaves, and during the evening special lighting effects were used to enhance the beauty of the scene.

The battalion's own orchestra, which was formed from their band, furnished the music. The only non-battalion member was Miss Ruth Schuesler of Columbus who played the piano.

Each of the four graduating had its own refreshment set-up, and each company tried to outdo the others, both in quantity and quality of food served. On the menu there were assorted cold cuts, potato salad, frankfurters, buns, pickles, ice-cream, cake, and punch. The dinner was served buffet style and the guests could eat with any one— or all four —of the companies.

During the evening Lt. Col. Thomas Yancey, commander of the 325th, made a very brief talk, and then presented three ladies who had a great deal to do with the success of the party: Miss Ruth Wilson, assistant dean of women, who chaperoned the Auburn girls; Miss Dorothy Knox, and Mrs. Elizabeth McPherson, who were in charge of the girls from Columbus and Phenix City.

Among those from Columbus and Phenix City were Misses Elizabeth Carter, Jewel Trexler, Belle Hardwick, Allene Ledden, Barbara Klemon, Frances Farmer, Betty Danielly, Ruth Feagin, Vivian Smith, Boncilla Key, Martha Barnes, Betty Jenkins, Dorothy Hulen, Billie Graham, Margaret Fowler, and Mrs. McPherson, Miss Knox, and Mrs. Ellen Worrall.

Doughboys Shade Eglin Field Eagles

7,500 See First Benning Triumph

Changing their tactics from the air to the ground, the Fort Benning Doughboys dented the win column for the first time this season by rolling up a 20-6 victory over the Eglin Field, Fla., Eagles before an estimated 7,500 spectators in Doughboy stadium Sunday afternoon.

Paced by an array of ball-carriers, who showed a manifold increase in output of zip over last Sunday, the Doughboys struck along the surface for a total of 35 yards which netted them 13 first downs.

The terrific ground attack came as somewhat of a surprise to most of the enthusiasts, who last week saw the Benning eleven make extensive use of the air lanes in an effort to subdue the Hellcats of the Memphis, Tenn., Naval Air Technical training command. The aerial efforts, however, were fruitless, and the soldier crew went down 2-0.

EASLY SCORES

The Doughboys launched their hard-driving ground maneuvers shortly after they had taken the opening kickoff, and, on a series of first downs, moved the oval down to the Eagle 15-yard stripe where left halfback Don Sult flipped a pass to Bob Easly in the end zone for the score. Easly, formerly a substitute for Sult, was named by Coach Joe Sheberd as a starter at right halfback to replace Harold Sloan in a pre-game shakeup.

Tackle Ted Hoover, a relative newcomer to the Doughboy lineup who looms as this season's toe expert, then came in to kick the extra point and give the Bennigites a 7-0 margin at the end of the first period.

Although the Eagles tightened their defenses to hold the Doughs scoreless during the second quarter, the thundering Benning herd hit pay dirt again in the third stanza when fullback Bob Hollingsworth intercepted a pass thrown by quarterback Gus Sonnenberg of the Eagles and ran it back 40 yards for a touchdown. Hoover's try for the point after touchdown again split the uprights to put the Doughs out in front 1-0 going into the final period.

SULT THROUGH CENTER

The Doughs made it 20-0 in the last stanza when Sult twisted his way straight through the center of the line and dashed 25 yards to cross the goal line standing up. Hoover's attempt to convert, however, was blocked.

The Eagles came into the scoring picture in the fading moments of the game after a series of completed passes and penalties against the Doughs moved the ball into the shadow of the Benning goal post. The payoff came when halfback Kay Campbell, who turned out to be the leading Eglin field ground-gainer in the game, crashed over from the two-yard stripe. An effort by end Cliff Light to add the point after touchdown went under the parallel bar, and the Eagle tally remained six.

A big disappointment came for Hollingsworth and his Doughboy colleagues shortly before the game-ending whistle. The hard-driving fullback pulled a misaimed Eagle pass out of the air and ran it back 85 yards across the double stripe only to have the score nullified by a penalty.

HISKER INJURED

The only injury victim of the game was Ed Hisker, offensive left halfback of the Eglin field crew, who had to be helped from the field by his teammates during the final period. Although the extent of Hisker's injuries was not known, they were not believed to be serious.

Probably the outstanding Doughboy player of the game was Hollingsworth, who stood out in both offensive and defensive departments. However, his two ball-carrying mates, Easly and Sult, were equally outstanding offensively.

Their loss to the Doughboys gave the Eagles a season's record of one triumph and three setbacks, while the Benning slate now reads one victory and two defeats. The week before the Hellcats of Memphis clawed out a 27-0 win over the Doughs, the post eleven was dealt a 12-0 defeat by the Parris Island, S.C., marines.

QUANTICO NEXT

Next on the Doughboy slate is the Quantico, Va., marines, who will invade Doughboy stadium next Sunday afternoon in an effort to maintain an unblemished record which dates back two seasons.

In the opinion of Coach Shepherd, the marines will be the toughest aggregation on the Benning schedule this year. The Virginians, it may be recalled, were responsible for snapping a 17-game winning streak of the Doughs with a humiliating 56-0 triumph at Quantico last year. And 22 leatherneck players of last season are suited up with the team again this fall.

The Benning mentor expects more than a little trouble from two marine backs, Joe Bartos and Dick Ambrogie, who were offensive sensations in last year's romp at Quantico. Ambrogie is a former star of Penn and Navy.

WEIGHT ADVANTAGE

The Marine Eleven, coached by Harold Harwood, an expro player who also was assistant coach to Tom Hamilton at Navy during the war years, will have a decided weight advantage over the Doughboys, and are doped as the favorites for Sunday's tussle.

Seasoned leatherneck gridders, who are expected to see service against the Doughs, include center Bill Jesse, former substitution for Navy's all - American Dick Scott; quarterback Jesus Flores; halfbacks Ray Schuett and Bob Scott, and ends Ernest Hargett and Bob Smith.

Quantico's string of victories for this season included wins over Fort Belvoir, Va., Camp LeJeune, N.C., Wayne university and Bolling field, Washington, D. C. Following their fracas with the Doughs, the marine crew will meet Xavier college of Cincinnati, O.

DRILLS TO CONTINUE

Doughboy drills were resumed Tuesday after Coach Shepherd had granted his charges a day of rest on Monday, and were slated to continue through Saturday. Workouts for the end of the week, however, were expected to be much lighter than those staged on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Unless scrimmages this week result in some injuries, the Dough mishap list will be practically nil for Sunday's game. The biggest question mark in the lineup is left end Francis Williams, who banged up his knee slightly during Sunday's tiff with the Eagles.

The encounter with Quantico will be the finale of a three-game home stand for the Doughboys. Following the game, Coach Shepherd and his charges will start making preparations for a long trek to Kansas and a tilt with the Fort Riley eleven.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Lady luck gave us a smile again last week, and we raised our batting average on national collegiate gridiron contests to .800 by pulling out 28 winners for 35 of the major games. However, even our misfires were in games that the nation's top dopesters probably would have been just as far off on.

For instance, Tennessee-Alabama, Villanova-Boston college, Wisconsin-Yale and Washington-Washington State: We missed all of those. But, then, so did hundreds of other sports writers in all parts of the country.

Enough for post mortems on last week's guesses. Let's get along with the grid offerings for the coming weekend.

THE EAST

Army over Cornell: The Cadets to continue their march.

Mississippi over Boston College: Despite the powerful showing made by the Beantown club last wek, we'll take Ole Miss by a touchdown.

Holy Cross over Colgate: The Crusaders haven't looked too good on recent outings, but Colgate has looked even worse. Holy Cross by 13 points.

Columbia over Princeton: By a pair of six-pointers.

Dartmouth over Harvard: Dartmouth's Indians are on the warpath this season, and w elook for them to scalp the crimson to the tune of thre touchdowns.

Penn over Navy: The Quakers all the way with about a three touchdown difference.

Penn State over Michigan State: This one could be an upset—at any rate, it won't be a gravy train for the Nittany Lions.

Indiana over Pitt: The Hoosiers by a brace of six-pointers.

Northwestern over Syracuse: If you'll spot us 60 points we might take the Orangemen.

Vanderbilt over Yale: We're disregarding Yale's upset over Wisconsin last week to pick Vandy by no less than 19 points.

THE MIDWEST

Purdue over Illinois: Here's one where a point after touchdown may swing the verdict.

Notre Dame over Iowa: The Hawkeyes have been known to pull upsets under similar circumstances, but we don't figure them to do it this week. The Irish in a romp.

Missouri over Iowa State: By about three touchdowns.

Kansas over Nebraska: If the Kansas State Wildcats would pull out of the Big Seven, the Cornhuskers would undoubtedly take over their place this year. The Jayhawkers easily.

Colorado over Kansas State: In a close inter-sectional battle betwen two weak teams.

Kentucky over Marquette: The Wildcats to move out the Southland to topple the Hilltoppers handily.

Michigan over Minnesota: The Gelden Gophers have a lot of power, but they also have a schedule that's a corker. In their toughest game on the slate, the Gophers to succumb to the Wolverines by a pair of touchdowns.

Ohio State over Wisconsin: If the Buckeyes can get past the Badgers they probably will not be occupying the Big Nine cellar again this year.

Oklahoma over TCU: The Sooners have been regarded altogether too lightly since their early season upset at the hands of the Santa Clara Tribe. We look for them to edge out the Horned Frogs.

THE SOUTH

Mississippi State over Alabama: In a close Southeastern conference skirmish.

Tulane over Auburn: We'd be willing to give the Tigers about four touchdowns for this one.

Clemson over South Carolina: Clemson is loaded this year, and they probably will do a lot of unloading in their Thursday night fray.

Georgia Tech over Florida: Any questions?

Georgia over Miami: Any more questions?

North Carolina over LSU: The "Choo-Choo" will be right on time Saturday. An easy romp for the Tar Heels.

THE SOUTHWEST

Baylor over Texas A & M: If the Aggies win a conference game, we'll be as surprised as Coach Harry Stiteler.

Rice over Texas: In what might be close enough to result in a deadlock.

SMU over Santa Clara: The Mustangs to trample the Tribe to the tune of about three touchdowns.

THE FAR WEST

California over Washington: From where we're sitting, it looks like the Golden Bears are bowl-bound.

Oregon State over UCLA: The Bruins can't even seem to growl right this year.

Oregon over Washington State: The Ducks are still very much in this league.

Southern California over Stanford: A not very powerful Trojan crew will just about be able to write their own ticket on this one.

Bowling Titlists Of 1947 Again Command Loop

With the first week of competition in the post intra-mural bowling league completed, the defending champion squad from Company A, Infantry School detachment, held a choice spot to do some high bidding for the 1948 kegling laurels.

Although the Company A crew was in a five-way tie for the league lead with the 121st Evacuation hospital, the Airborne battalion, the Station hospital medics and Army Field Forces heard No. 3, it registered the highest team score of the week by chalking up a pin fall of 2,481 in the series with the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment on Monday night.

The high team score run up by the ISD squad was paced by Robert H. Weaver, who copped high-game and high-set honors for the week. Weaver's top game was 226, and his three-g a m e score as 601.

Runner-up to Weaver in individual honors was Norbert Szymerek, who led the 3440th Area Service unit team to a victory over the Student Training regiment on Thursday night. Szymarek had a three-game total of 592 with a high game score of 214.

Four forfeitures went on record during the first week of activity with the 121st Evacuation hospital winning by forfeit from Company H of the 25th Infantry regiment, and the 204th Transportation Truck battalion failing to show up for a match with the Station hospital medics. For a contest slated to feature teams from the 30th Medical group and the 999th Field Artillery battalion, both squads failed to appear, and both were tagged with a four-point loss.

Only one of the 17 teams entered in the campaign, the STR, played two matches during the first week. The training regiment keglers took four points from Headquarters company of the 325th Infantry regiment in their opening encounter b u t dropped three out of four counters to the 3440th ASU on Thursday.

In the league, three series are scheduled for ea ch Monday, Wednesday and Thursday night at the Main post bowling alleys. The feature match this week will be the middle portion of tonight's program when the team representing Company A, ISD, bowls against the Airborne battalion.

A point system is being used to determine the league champion with one point being awarded for the winner of each of the three games of the set, and one point going to the team with the high total pinfall.

Classy Ringmen Boasted By Unit For Post Bouts

BY VINCENT GIARRATANO

As the Nov. 15 opening date of the intra-mural boxing tournament approaches, units of the 325th Regimental combat team have screened their rosters and are coming up with some classy looking teams which show plenty of promise as the hopefuls' pre-tourney training gets under way at the Main post gym.

The teams are made up chiefly of newcomers, but are built around a nucleus of 1947 Doughboy alumni.

Among the oldtimers are such notables as Cliff Wilburn, hard-hitting middleweight from the Second battalion, 25th Infantry regiment, who boasts a colorful record of fast knockouts and easy wins. Also from the 25th, Lester Holt, a scrappy lightweight, again dons the gladiator armor in another strong bid for a berth on the Doughboy squad.

In the light heavies, the 319th Field Artillery battalion steps into the limelight with John Salzillo, who earned a reputation last year as being a formidable competitor in his weight class.

The 999th Field Artillery battalion bases its hopes on the abilities of Richard Donaldson, who carried the Third army light heavyweight crown to the Olympic tryouts in Chicago last year. A loss by a close decision brought his efforts to a halt.

The welterweight class this year will witness the debut of a classy little 147-pounder, Fernando Aguilar, representing the 325th Infantry regiment. Aguilar's name is still mentioned around the airborne gym when the highlights of the Airborne battalion's summer fight program are discussed.

The intra-mural tournament will be preceded by a series of warmups and exhibition battalion cards at the airborne and Main post gyms.

Banquet Honors Champ Artillery Diamond Squad

For copping top honors in a hotly contested 325th regimental combat team baseball intra-mural league, members of the 999th field artillery battalion baseball club were honored at a banquet given by the John W. Brown NCO club last Friday at Sand Hill.

The 999th won the intra-mural championship by defeating the second battalion 25th infantry in a playoff series.

The champs were cited for outstanding achievements on the athletic field and the beneficial results derived from a morale standpoint by Lt. Col. Arden C. Brill, executive officer of the 325th regimental combat team. Colonel Brill presented fifteen members of the team with individually engraved trophies, and a huge team trophy to Lt. Col. Todd Slade 999th battalion commander. Colonel Slade was also presented with the championship baseball inscribed with the team members.

Short talks were also delivered by Chaplain (Capt.) Leonard A. Ellis, Capt. James W. Stevens, Capt. Deward W. Sims, baseball coach, 1st Sgt. David R. Reed, 1st Sgt. John R. Griffey and Pfc. Ira Hughes.

Guests included Lt. Col. Arden C. Brill, 325th battalion executive; Capt. James W. Stevens, assistant adjutant of the battalion; Capt. Clarence M. Bryant and Lt. Samuel Smith.

Atlanta Soldiers Wallop Ordnance Eleven 20-0

Reserve Depth Deemed Vital Factor in Surface Onslaught

Depth in reserves paid off for the Atlanta General depot grid eleven which invaded Doughboy stadium last Friday night to trounce the 328th Ordnance battalion pigskinners 20-0 in the local squad's second game of the season.

Although a slight weight advantage favored Coach Pete St. Pierre's Atlanta Flames, the big factor in the depot victory was the possession of two squads one schooled in defense and the other in offense. The entire line-up was changed each time the flames took possession of the ball.

The victory over the local ordnancemen gave the Flames a season's record of three wins and one loss, while the 328th record for the year now reads one lost and one tied. In their only previous game, the Benning ordnance crew held the Draper prisoners of Speigner, Ala., to a 6-6 tie.

Although the majority of the first period of Friday night's tilt was played deep in 328th territory, the Atlantans failed to cross over the double stripe until the second stanza. The drive toward the ordnance goal line was started during the fading momens of the opening quarter when R. H. Rigby intercepted a pass tossed by halfback Dick Weymouth of the 328th on the ordnance 30-yard line.

The tally was chalked up shortly after the start of the second period when James Fitzgibbons went over left tackle from the two yard line. Charles Fisher came in to kick the extra point and give the Flames a 7-0 lead.

The Flames went ahead 14-0 in the late stages of the first half when an offensive drive sparked by fullback F. B. Butterworth moved the oval down to the shadow of the 328th goal post. Quarterback Mac McCartney then took the ball eight yards off of right guard for the touchdown and Fisher kicked the extra point.

In the third period, the Benning ordnance eleven defenses held, and the local griders even threatened to rally when an aerial from Weymouth to Horace Bassett was good for 28 yards and put the general depot 18-yard stripe. Attempting to move on to pay dirt, however the 328th tried four passes unsuccessfully and the visitors again took the offensive.

What appeared to be another Flame touchdown in the third period when Midget White picked up a 328th fumble and dashed into the end zone was nullified when the officials rule that the runner had gone down to his knees soon after picking up the bobble.

Still on the top side of a 14-0 count going into the final period, the Atlanta eleven rocked up another six-pointed midway through the stanza when Butterworth covered 20 yards on two successive running plays. After taking the oval through the center of the line for 14 yards and a first down, the hard-driving fullback then went six yards around right end for the touchdown. This time Fisher's attempt to annex the point after touchdown failed.

The biggest 328h rally of he game came during the closing minutes of the game after Gene Gill had blocked an Atlanta punt on the visitors' 30-yard line. Bassett then crashed hrough the center of the Atlanta line for 14 yards, and a long pass connection from Weymouth to Gill made it first and goal to go for the local ordnance crew. The threat ended, however, when Rigby intercepted a pass from Weymouth in the end zone.

The Flames used their running attack to pick up 19 first downs while their defenses held the post ordnancemen to three.

Wynn Selected To Pilot Boxers

Selection of Merritt L. Wynn as coach and trainer of the 999th Field Artillery battalion boxing team was announced Monday by 1st Lt. John H. Maddox, battalion athletic and recreation officer.

Possessing a wide and varied background as a pugilist, Wynn competed in the Chicago Golden Gloves tournaments from 1937 through 1940, fighting as a bantamweight, featherweight and lightweight.

While attending high school in Centralia, Ill., Wynn was a classmate of Dewright Elidermann, who, as a representative of Illinois university, later made the U.S. Olympic boxing team. He also was associated with Willie Joyce and Jimmy Bivins, nationally known professional boxers.

During March, 1946, Wynn was assigned to the 25th infantry regiment at Sand hill, and it was under his tutelage that the Fourth battalion of the Unit ran up an impressive string of wins during the 25th Regimental combat team boxing tourney that year.

He is a graduate of the Army Athletic and Recreation school at Camp Lee, Va.

LAWSON CAGE LOOP STARTS

Cagemen of Lawson airforce base were given another two days to prepare themselves for the base's intra-mural basketball league, and the circuit will get underway at 7:30 p.m. tonight with a two-game program.

The two games slated to launch play in the circuit, originally scheduled to start Tuesday night, will be between the S-1 and S-2 teams and the officers' section and S-4 quintets. Other team entries are from the S-3 section, the engineer department and the base detachments and the special staff.

Capt. W. W. Smith, loop director, has scheduled twin bills for each Tuesday night throughout the season, and the opening-day program is the only exception to the slate. The initial contests were moved up in order that the remodeling project at the base gymnasium might be completed.

All military personnel, their families and guests have been invited to attend the games.

At the close of the intra-mural season, the winning team will be presented with a trophy, and outstanding players from each squad will be selected to play on the Lawson Flyers, who will represent the local base in outside competition.

Hollingsworth Is Chosen Doughboy Of The Week

Following last Sunday's 20-0 triumph over the Eglin Field, Fla., Eagles in Doughboy stadium, little doubt remained that the hard-running fullback, Bob Hollingsworth, would be chosen by the Benning staff of grid tutors as "Doughboy of the Week."

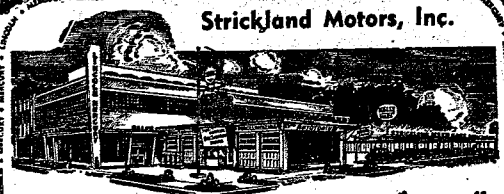
Hollingsworth's output of vim, vigor and vitality Sunday touched off a Dough running game which had been relatively dormant during the first two frays of the season.

After setting the pace for a powerful surface attack throughout the first half, the pile-driving tailback garnered his share of the glory in the third period when he gathered in a satisfied Eagle pass, and ran it back 40 yards for the second Dough touchdown of the game.

He repeated in the pass interception department in the final quarter when he took an Eglin field heave on the 35-yard stripe and ran it into the Eagle end zone. However, his second dash to pay dirt was called back to the Eagle eight-yard line where a 15-yard penalty was stepped off against the Doughs.

In addition to his pass defense and hard-running, Hollinsworth also turned in a brilliant job of line backing.

Hollingsworth's performance Sunday was a matter of putting into a real game what he had already done in a pre-season intra squad scrimmage, I the earlier practice tiff, Hollingsworth carried the ball on the only two touchdown plays of the game.



The flashy fullback, who is five feet, 11 inches tall and weighs 175 pounds, hails from Dunlop, Ill., where he played high school football. Following his graduation, Hollingsworth played one year with Western Illinois State college.

Eight Bouts Are Fought In Unit Gym

A knockout, five unanimous verdicts and two split decisions were the results of the weekly boxing card at the Airborne battalion arena last Friday night. Minature golden gloves were awarded to the winners of each bout.

The first bout of the evening turned out to look more like a wrestling match than a boxing bout with Andy Zimmer of Company G winning on a split decision over Clarence Strong of Company A.

Despite being knocked down once in the second round by William Walters of Headquarters and Service company, met Bordeaux of Company E, bounced back to take a unanimous decision in the second battle of the evening.

Hosea Coxsum of Company A then slugged it out for three rounds with Charles Fuller, a visitor from Service company of the Student Training regiment, to take a unanimous verdict in the card's third feature.

The Coxsum-Fuller bout was followed by one of the best fights of the evening which saw Gene Spraggins of Company D chalk up his third triumph in as many trips to the ring. His victim on a unanimous ballot was Manuel Armstrong of Company F.

After a slow first-round start, during which he was twiced knocked to the canvas, Vidal Aguilar of Company G rallied to take a split decision from Gene Vitanza of Company G.

Carl Bobier of Company E then mixed it up with John Wedgeworth of Company G in the sixth bout of the program, and came out after a bloody battle with another unanimous win.

Bout No. 7 was over almost as soon as the two contestants had entered the ring. Sid Peele of Company B needed only 40 seconds of the first period to kayo Prentice Chandler of Headquarters and Service company.

The card final was a fast-moving slugfest between Bob Reno of Headquarters and Service company and Ben Parks, another visitor from the STR. Parks won the scrap by unanimous decision.

HERO OR GOAT . . . James Henderson, right, might have been dubbed a goat when he misjudged a fly ball in right field during the recent championship series between his 999th Field Artillery battalion club and the Second battalion nine of the 25th Infantry regiment. However, his sensational ninth-inning catch of a terrific drive to right when the sacks were loaded with infantrymen nullified his earlier error, and won the 325th Regimental combat team loop title for the artillery squad. He is shown here presenting a ball inscribed with the names of the team members to Lt. Col. Todd H. Slade, the battalion commander.

Bullets Prep Hard For Sunday Game

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Although idle last weekend, the Bullet eleven took no time off from practice drills in preparation for their game next Sunday with the semi-pro Pittsburg Tigers in Atlanta, Ga.

Anxious to avoid a recurrence of the staleness which plagued them during the first period of the game with Bethune-Cookman college at Daytona Beach, Fla., two weeks ago, Coach Walter Smith and his capable assistants, Stacey Hoffman and Jesse Owens, have kept their charges going full-speed throughout the past week.

Pass defense, blocking and tackling were given top priority during the drills for the forthcoming Tiger grid encounter. When they tangle with the Tigers the Bullets will be out trying to equalize a season's record which now reads one triumph and two losses.

Including their showing in a scrimmage with the Doughboy eleven last Wednesday, the Bullets have looked impressive on both offense and defense in readying themselves for Sunday's tussle. The engagement will be the first between the two squads, and pre-game dope has it that the clash will be savagely fought from beginning to end.

Sparking the Bullets' offensive drive will be Raymond Rogers, pass-snatching artist, whose performance highlighted the scrimmage with the Doughboys. The other flank will be strongly fortified by rugged Roy Whitehurst.

The return of Ernest (Mr. five-by-five) Sims has added a spark to the backfield, while the recovery of big Bob Willis, who had been sidelined with a cracked rib, should make the pivot spot almost impregnable.

With plunging Windy Hammond, Phil Tindrell, Vern Boswell and hard-running Cliff Bradford acting brilliantly lately, the backfield should prove unstoppable. Mainstays on the line include Odell Kennedy, Ed Brown, Dave Van, Matt Batie, Ted McDonald, Bob (Tank) Murphy and Leroy (Doc) Garvin.

Recruit Company Will End Training

While formal graduation exercise for basic trainees is considered an innovation by the army, it's practiced at the 325th Infantry training battalion at Fort Benning.

When the Fifth company of the provisional unit has its concluding ceremonies Saturday morning another experiment will be tried. At this time one of the trainees will be selected to give a brief valedictory address on what he thinks of the training he had during his first eight weeks in the army at Fort Benning.

Starting its cycle one week after the first four companies of the battalion began their basic work, the 247 men, commanded by 1st. Lt. Robert M. Patterson, have compiled the best record on the rifle range of any of the trainee companies, with 98 percent qualifying. The high scorer was Rct. James L. Thomas, with a score of 197 out of a possible 210. The unit also had the lowest AWOL rate in the battalion, only one man failing to show up for duty during the entire cycle.

Graduation exercises are scheduled to start in Theater No. 11 in the Harmony church area Saturday morning at 9 a.m. Following the exercises, there will be a parade and review at Stroup field in the Harmony church area.

The outstanding trainee of the company will be selected as trainee battalion commander for the review in which the first four companies that graduated last week will also participate. The battalion staff will also be selected from the Fifth company.

Saturday evening the company will have a formal dinner dance, closed to all but trainees and cadre of the Fifth company, at Service club No. 3 in Harmony church.

Command, Staff College Chief Praises Board 3

Army Field Forces board No. 3 was among the four boards commended recently by Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, Command and General Staff college commandant, for conferences conducted for the regular class at the college.

Board No. 3 representatives who were guest speakers at the Staff college were Col. Dwight A. Rosebaum, Lt. Col. William B. Teavis and Sgt. Eldredge Sonnier.

Other army field forces boards and their representatives honored for their performance at the confefences included Army field Forces Board No. 1, Col. Ralph R. Mace; Army Field Forces board No. 2, Lt. Col. Camden W. McConnell, and Army Field Forces board No. 4, Maj. Jack J. Sweek.

General Eddy's letter reads in part:

"The very instructive period conducted by Col. Rosebaum and Lt. Col. Travis of board No. 3, Fort Benning, was made extremely interesting by the great variety of sample equipment which was so effectively displayed with the assistance of Sergeant Sonnier. Colonel Rosebaum and Colonel Travis exhibited intimate knowledge of these developments by their ability to answer the many questions which were asked by the students. The faculty as well as the students of the regular class derived great benefit from their presentation.

"As a result of these conferences, and a special conference between the Department of Analysis and Research and the board representatives, we feel that much closer and more effective coordination exists between the boards and this college."

Council Appointee

Lt. Col. Edward J. Burke has been appointed to the local Character Guidance council, it was announced last Friday by Maj. Gen Withers A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center.

LEGENDARY ATHLETE RETURNS TO BENNING

SAM PROPHET

Sam Prophet is back.

To relative newcomers to Fort Benning, that statement bears little significance, but to old-timers in sports circles, it spells tougher competition in almost a half dozen sundry sports.

As a matter of fact, Sam's sports repertoire is so extensive he can't even put his finger on the one which he considers his mainstay.

Probably the most remarkable thing about the legendary sports figure is his agelessness. Sam at 39, is still proficient in sports which most men of his age would have given up at least 10 years ago. His theory: "Life begins at 40."

When most of the members of Doughboy teams of today were putting on their first pair of long pants, colorful Sam was writing sports history right here at Fort Benning. And he still considers himself capable enough to get out and compete with the best of them.

The relentless march of time, however, is forcing Sam to the sidelines more and more each year, but it is not keeping him away from competitive sports which mean so much to him. To give younger men the benefit of his many years of experience, Prophet has started coaching more and playing less.

The versatile athlete embarked on a sports career at Fort Benning almost 20 years ago, which includes baseball, football, basketball, swimming, track, tennis and golf. His name has been associated with some of the most remarkable feats in the annals of post sports.

Prophet's athletic career was uninterrupted until October, 1944, when he was ordered overseas, and later taken prisoner by the Germans in the "Battle of the Bulge." Released by the Russians after four months internment, Prophet was reassigned to Fort Benning, and immediately resumed his sports activities. The second break in his sojourn at the post came in January, 1947, when he was assigned to a Reserve Officers' Training corps unit at the Santa Barbara, Calif. high school, an assignment which he held until returning to Benning recently.

Oldtimers still recall his swivel - hipped performance at quarterback with the great post football elevens of the late 1920's. During that period, the soldier gridders twice rolled over Auburn, then the monarch of the Southeastern conference with two all - Americans Ed Shirling and "Barleycorn" Shirley, in its lineup.

Probably the gem of Prophet's grid achievements is what might be called a singlehanded triumph in a championship game in 1928. In a tilt between the 29th Infantry regiment team and the Tanks for the post crown, Prophet took a spiral punt with less than five minutes left to play and ran it back 65 yards for a touchdown. He then kicked the extra point to give the infantrymen a 7-2 victory.

In baseball, the aging sportsman was long a fixture around first base for the 29th Infantry and the Infantry School detachment. His batting average of .485 chalked up before he went overseas, probably is an all-time record for the post.

His track record includes an intra - mural championship in javelin throwing, and numerous accomplishments in pole vaulting, broad jumping and mile and half - mile running. A guard in basketball and a noted swimmer, Prophet also has put in his appearance on the post tennis courts and golf links.

Sam is expected to step into the sports scene again when intra - mural basketball starts on the post. However, he probably will choose a spot on the ISD coaching staff instead of engaging in active playing.

His plans for next spring and summer include one thing, and only one thing — baseball.

HAVE YOU GOT YOUR FINGER ON THE PULSE OF YOUR MARKET?

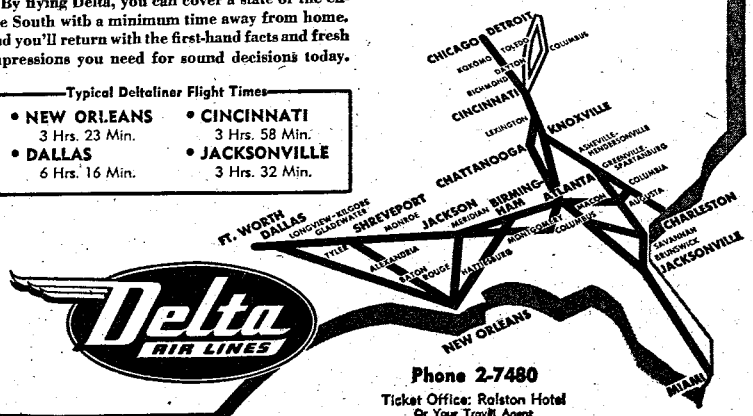
If you're the boss, how long has it been since you called on your customers 200 or 500 or 1,000 miles away?

Customers like to see the boss, no matter how often your salesmen call. Your men like to see you in the field, too.

Can't spare the time?

You can when you travel by air. Get away from office routine . . . gain a new perspective on sales . . . check the pulse of your market.

You can give your territory a thorough physical check-up quickly, easily and economically on Delta. A 200-mile trip takes only the time required for lunch; a 1,000-mile round trip in a day is neither unusual nor tiring.



By flying Delta, you can cover a state or the entire South with a minimum time away from home. And you'll return with the first-hand facts and fresh impressions you need for sound decisions today.

TO SALES MANAGERS: Have you estimated how flying could expand your sales with no added personnel? You may have a far greater sales potential than you realize. If you have not considered this way to cut travel time and increase calls per man, Delta will be glad to help you study how flying might fit your sales program.

TO SALESMEN: If you have a big territory, ask your sales manager about covering it by air. You can make more calls in more cities than by using surface travel these days. Chart your distant prospects, call or write for Delta's latest flight schedules and outline to the boss how you could step up your calls.

Chest Drive Nets Total Of $1,700

With $1,700 already collected, the Community Chest next week heads into its main effort to raise the Fort Benning Lawson airforce base goal of $13,500, it was announced this week by Lt. Col. Napoleon Rainbolt, drive chairman.

The greater part of the money now on hand, according to Colonel Rainbolt, was received through the sale of tickets to Sunday's football game between the Fort Benning Doughboys and the Quantico Marines. One other for which admission will be charged is the game between the Doughboys and the 82nd Airborne division Assassins on Nov. 28. Tickets will be 50 cents for reserved seats and 25 cents for general admission.

It is expected that a large part of the chest funds will be taken in next week since payday is Monday, Nov. 1. The drive will continue through November.

Ten charitable and service agencies will receive funds from the joint Benning-Lawson campaign. These agencies include the Community Chest of America, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, the joint Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief and Airforce Aid Society, the Fort Benning Children's schools.

The Boy Scouts of America and Cub Scouts, the Girl Scouts of America and Brownies, the Teen-Age Children at Fort Benning, the proposed Fort Benning trailer camp, the Fort Benning children's Christmas party and the contemplated social welfare worker for Fort Benning.

It was pointed out that all these activities directly or indirectly affect Fort Benning personnel. Money turned over to the national Community Chest is used to operate service clubs in Columbus and will be used for the soon - to - be - reactivated USO.

A large portion of the money collected in the Columbus Community Chest drive will also be used to support the USO.

Early Opening Set For Trailer Camp

The proposed enlisted men's trailer camp will open before the first of the year, according to Maj. Charles H. Hallden, Infantry Center assistant billeting officer.

The camp, which will initially accomodate 78 trailers, will be located in the Harmony church area in the vicinity of Eighth Division and Wood roads. Major Hallden added that it can be rapidly expanded in any direction as the need arises.

Facilities include a site 40 by 50 feet for each trailer, giving each family 2,000 square feet of space which is considerably larger than allotted in most commercial trailer camps, Major Hallden declared.

Among the utilities available for each trailer household will be water and sewage connections to each trailer, electric outlets to each trailer site and ice delivery.

A class C and pay telephone will be available for each 20 trailers. An automatic laundry will also be set up with central clothes lines nearby. A store with necessary food items and sundries, operated by the post exchange, will also be opened.

There will be a community bath house for the settlement with toilet facilities, showers and wash basins, separate for men and women.

In addition, there will be community playground areas and a recreational building.

Bus service will be provided from the trailer camp to all parts of the main post.

Applications for trailer sites are now available at the billeting office and in room 110 of the adjutant generals office in the Infantry School building, Major Hallden said.

Form 63. The physical examination can be taken at any army medical installation or from a private physician at no cost to the government.

Upon acceptance and commission in the reserve corps the applicant immediately draws an allowance of $250 for clothing and proceeds to his branch school where he is enrolled for 12 weeks. During his schooling, as a second lieutenant he draws the pay and allowances of that rank. He draws this pay all the time he is in school and if it stops only if he is dropped from the course, at which time his reserve commission is terminated and he returns to civilian life.

Upon completion of schooling the second lieutenant goes on immediate active duty for the minimum two years. He is also eligible, however, to take a competitive tour of duty for a permanent commission in the regular army. Also, it was revealed that promotions will be open for officers who enter the service under this program.

The plan was projected to develop a method by which sufficient second lieutenants could be procured and placed on extended active duty in the rapidly expanding army. Eligible for appointment are men between the ages of 19 and 32 but who have not yet reached their 33nd birthday and civilians who meet the already mentioned requirements provided they are not at present attending a school. Airforce, marine, navy and coast guard personnel are not eligible.

Benning's Yuletide Spirit Is Rekindled As Toyland Opens

Although Christmas is still about two months off, the Christmas spirit arrived at Fort Benning last Saturday with the opening of Toyland at the building adjoining the Main post exchange.

The kiddies were not the only ones attending the opening day display since Momma and Poppa were also there to run through the expansive selection of toys.

With eyes as big as saucers kiddies pleaded with "I want this and I want that."

The climax of toyland activities, will come with the visit of Santa Claus who will be there on Nov. 20.

Toyland will be open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The varied selection of toys includes bride, baby and teen-age dolls, cowboy suits, holsters and guns, tool kits, erector sets, wagons, scooters, tricycles, games and many other selections.

sonnel in need of funds in emergency and hardship cases. Fort Benning's Children's schools are open to the children of all personnel living on the post, and membership in the Boy and Girl Scouts, Cubs and Brownies is open to all children of Benning soldiers.

Better known as the "Brat Barracks" is the teen-age children's organization. This is a club for the children of all Benning personnel and is under the direction of the Infantry Center chaplain. Its mission is to provide recreational activities for younger dependents of all Benning soldiers. The Christmas party is a yearly event for all Benning children.

Both the trailer camp and social welfare worker allocations are still in the planning stage although it was announced this week that the first 76-unit camp will be ready for occupancy by the first of next year. The aid of the proposed social welfare worker will be available to all personnel assigned to the post.

Living Together

One of the most pleasant things about being an American is the way we defend each other to representatives of foreign nations. We are like the two brothers who fight constantly, but when some "outsider" muscles in on the argument and begins to take sides, forget their differences and unite to defeat the intruder. Still we have a lot to learn about living together.

We have heard comments from men about the relative merits of their hometowns as compared with the "demerits" of another part of the nation. To hear these people berate one section while praising another, a foreigner would think that we are a country of small nations, greatly disunited. Of course, this is not the case at all. Since it isn't true, then, why do we find fault so easily with people from other sections of the country? Why do we ridicule their customs?

We usually try to explain this by saying that it is a peculiar trait of the American way of life, that it is a result of freedom of speech. We know of many more valid reasons for deriding people who come from a section of America other than our own, but there is one reason which stands head and shoulders above all others: we simply don't understand fully all the ramifications of our democracy. We don"t understand how it was achieved, how it has expanded or why we embrace it today with almost religious fervor.

Last week Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, in speaking to the Parent-Teacher's Association, stated in effect that parents and teachers are responsible for teaching patriotism to their children and pupils. When they grow up they will then be free from prejudices which prevent them from being as patriotic as they should be, the general implied. That is the crux of the problem of patriotism. To understand we must know.

We ridicule certain American customs because we don't understand them. If we stopped long enough to look at ourselves, we could probably find one of our own customs just as ridiculous to someone else.

We, as Americans, belong to the same great social, economic and political culture. We, naturally, because of our size and because of the many nationalities which make the American nation, have many different customs and mores. But instead of detracting from the overall greatness, these customs and mores should make us more aware of the wonder of democracy. When people, whose customs can vary so greatly from one section to another, can live under the same roof, so to speak, and live there in harmony, it should prove that there is something about democracy greater than any other political ideology the world has ever known. This, then, should make us more tolerant of our neighbors, for once we learn the greatness of democracy, we become patriotic. And becoming patriotic means that we love the entire United States, not just one section. We must remember that it takes forty-eight states, plus the District of Columbia, to make the United States. Take just one of these forty-eight states away from the whole, and there is a missing link. A missing link means we are no longer bound together. It means we are not united. Disunity spreads distrust. Distrust spreads misunderstanding.

Strictly Editorializing

Benningites who claim to like classical and operatic music and who have been complaining about the lack of it on the post will have a chance to prove whether their claims are valid. The Community Concert series, to be sponsored again this year by the Fort Benning Woman's club, will get under way here on November 20 when the Don Gossack chorus appears for a program at the Main theater. Other artists will be selected later, but it must be understood that the length and the calibre of the series will depend entirely upon Fort Benning personnel. The more tickets sold, the better will be the concerts.

During a survey conducted recently, it was found that a number of troops here preferred concert - type entertainment to any other. Those who did deplored the fact that there was seldom an occasion to fulfill their desire for it. Now, the Woman's club has provided an outlet, and it will be interesting to see just what the outcome will be.

We hope that other types of entertainment including dance bands, popular vocalists and stage plays, all of which were listed at the top of the preferred entertainment list will be forthcoming. We realize that there are many people who, under no circumstances, would ever attend the Community Concert series, but would like one or more of the lighter types of entertainment. Still, at least one group, those who prefer concert music, will have no reason to complain.

GOING TO THE DOGS

BY CHAPLAIN C. A. GOSNELL

"Going to the dogs" in our language means we are headed for ruin, either morally or physically.

Now the dog is known as man's best friend, and one quality found in every dog is faithfulness. The traditional name "Fido" means "faithful." Since many soldiers feel they are leading a "dog's life," it might be well for us to turn to the dog and learn this important lesson of fidelity.

A soldier must be faithful to his God. The Almighty has entrusted us with a mortal body and immortal soul. He has equipped us with an intelligence and free will in order to wisely care for both. He has placed us in a beautiful world, the work of His creative hand. All of it is for His faithful servants to use. It is only the unfaithful that abuse God's gifts.

A soldier must be faithful to his country. Our glorious nation turns to its young manhood in a time of crisis. The nation looks to the soldier as a protector and defender of its sacred honor. It is the soldier's responsibility to uphold faithfully the government which, under the Constitution, gives all citizens these privileges and rights we hold sacred and dear. An unreliable and unfaithful soldier to these trusts is none but a traitor.

A soldier must be faithful to womanhood. He must be faithful to his wife, or sweetheart, as the case may be. A soldier husband who has pledged his troth and undying love and then violates his most sacred obligations is lower than a dog who bites his own master. The soldier that is unfaithful to the Christian ethic regarding womanhood turns as a whipped dog and licks his wounds of disease, disgrace and immorality.

A soldier must be faithful to himself. It is a tragic thing when a man cannot trust himself, when his character and morals are so weak that he cannot pass up a temptation without bringing great harm to himself and his associates. Even a dog knows better than to bite his own tail.

Fidelity is a necessary virtue in this "dogged existence" of military service. If you, as a soldier, are not faithful to God, your country, your family and yourself, you will really "go to the dogs" and with howling success

OF FLIGHT AND LIFE

We're going to stick our necks out this week and recommend —with very slight reservations —a little book, "Of Flight and Life", written by one of the most controversial men of our time — Charles A. Lindberg. Twenty years ago Lindberg was worshipped by the millions; ten years later he was damned by as many—either as a dangerous traitor, or, at best a misguided pacifist or foolish isolationist. Even those who still recognized his scientific genius, who considered his aviation success as something more than a fluke, said that he should stick to flying and leave governments and international policy making alone.

"Of Flight and Life" is a strange little book—as strange, perhaps, as its author. The 56 pages are extremely easy to read, but not quite so easy to forget. We do not ask you to agree with the ideas; we're not even sure that we agree with them ourselves. Certainly we're not qualified — and we doubt if Lindberg is—to say that we would have been in a better position today if we had let Russia and Germany fight the war out themselves. Our cities were not bombed. They could very easily have been. On the other hand, can we view the world today and say that we actually "won" the war? Isn't it true that in order to defeat our enemies we have developed weapons which threaten all that remains of civilization, and the very existence of mankind? As Lindberg expresses it, "Security through atomic bombs was the greatest end of war-time science. Security from atomic bombs is now our greatest peace-time end."

Lindberg sees little help for the future from such organizations as United Nations. He points out the dangers of "equal representation", which, he says, would give such nations as Japan, China and India nearly four times the influence of the United States, Great Britain and France. But if our American way of life cannot exist in a world ruled entirely by force, nor under a world government based on numerical equality of men, how can it exist? Lindberg probably does not have the right answer, but he at least does put the problem before us. By what higher moral force may we control the science that now threatens to destroy us?

No matter what we think of the author, we cannot deny that the problem does exist. And we could spend our time in much worse ways than reading this book. Even if it makes us mad enough to spit fire, it at least has accomplished something. And if we remain indifferent — well, we were indifferent before, so we're back where we started.

We find it a little difficult to accept Lindberg as a student of Laotzu, and we strongly suspect Ann Morrow Lindberg of having more than a little to do with the actual writing of this book. "Bunched cumulus clouds latticed off the heat of a blazing tropical sky." Does that sound like Lindberg, the flier, or Ann Morrow, the poet? But all that matters little. The book presents a problem and suggests a solution.

BY MURRAY E. HILL

It was pleasant on the lake that Monday, the fifth of July. The sun overhead was hot, but a cool breeze wandered over the water. The woman in the rowboat headed for shore and slowly pulled in to the beach. Stepping out of the boat, she dropped down on the sand. She thought of the things she must do tomorrow...there was the usual housework, the marketing, the letters she'd been meaning to write, her appointment to donate a pint of blood at the Red Cross mobile unit center....

Just then gunshots rang out. She clutched her stomach, doubling up as searing pain tore through her abdomen. Nearby, three boys, amusing themselves at target practice during the Fourth of July holiday, were horror-struck at what happened.

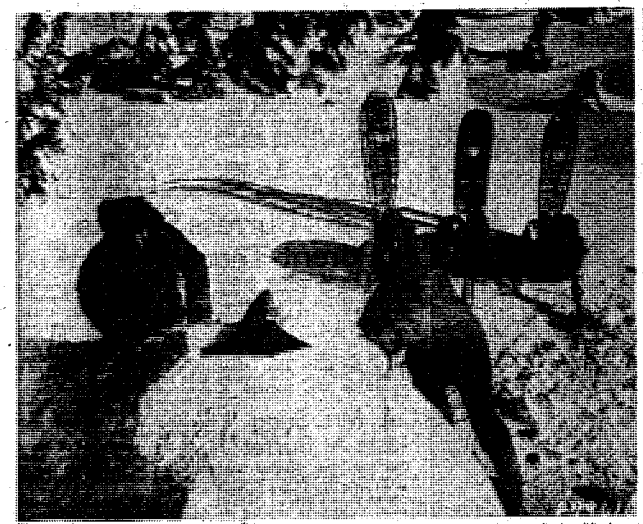
The woman was rushed to the Corning, New York, hospital. Arriving in a semi-conscious condition, she seemed deeply concerned over something. As trained hands began ministering to her, she turned her head from side to side.

"Nurse, nurse," she murmured. "Have appointment tomorrow. A Red Cross bloodmobile coming to Corning. They'll be expecting me. Please tell them I can't be there. I hate to disappoint them."

The nurse soothed the woman. "It's all right. I'll tell them you can't make it. Some other time..."

Next day in the aseptic hospital room, the woman lay stretched on a high white bed. A needle pierced the veins of one outstretched arm. Close by the bed, suspended from a stand, was a bottle with two small red crosses marked on the label. Rich, dark red fluid trickled slowly down the tube, through the needle into the woman's arm. Blood, life-giving blood.

The woman's head moved on the pillow. She opened her eyes, and gazed at the bottle from which she was receiving a transfusion of Red Cross blood. Slowly she turned her head, looked at her wrist-watch. A faint smile touched her lips.



"Funny," she mumured to the nurse. "I had an appointment today just at this time to give a pint of blood to the Red Cross. Instead, here I am on the receiving end."

She was quiet a moment. "But they knew I wasn't coming, didn't they?" she asked anxiously.

The nurse nodded.

"I wouldn't want them to think I promised, then forgot or wanted to do something else instead." she said.

She knew then that a doctor can't transfuse a promise when it's blood he needs.

ESKIMOS . . . U. S. Army personnel training in the sub-zero weather of the Hudson bay country have adopted the habitat of Eskimos to living facilities. With a minimum of effort and at no expense, the men have set to work constructing igloos, with knives for tools, and completing a satisfactory job in less than three hours. Here an infantryman, inside the igloo, pulls the last block into the remaining gap and slices it into position. A little more chinking and the igloo is ready for use. It will house from three to five men.

Motorist: Which?"

Small Boy: "Hey, mister, you got a flat!"

Captain: "Now suppose you are on duty one dark night. Suddenly a person appears from behind and wraps two arms around you so that you can't use your rifle. What would you say?"

Private: "Let go, honey."

"How was the wedding?" asked the chaplain's wife.

"It was fine until I asked the bride if she would 'obey' and she said 'Do you think I'm crazy?' Just about that time the groom, who was in sort of a daze, said 'I do.' And that's when things really began to happen."

Top Jr. was careless about his personal effects. When his mother saw his clothing strewn on the floor she inquired, "Who didn't hang up his clothes when he went to bed?"

A muffled voice came from under the cover, "Adam."

1st Pvt.: "What's an operetta?"

Armistice Day Set As Holiday

Armistice Day, Thursday, Nov. 11, will be observed as a holiday at Fort Benning by civilian and military personnel with all except the necessary duties to be suspended.

The flag will be displayed at half-staff from revielle until noon, in memory of those who gave their lives in the service of their country during World War I. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the flag will be hoisted to full staff.

Million to One Odds, But It Did Happen!

The odds against the possibility of the last four numbers in two army serial numbers being the same are somewhere around a million to one.

Yet this rarity was found to exist in Company C of the 325th Infantry regiment.

Finding the two fellows with the same last four numbers is an oddity in itself, but when the two men are on the same post, in the same company, that's something else.

Pfc. John T. Watson is tagged with serial number 13232098 and Pvt. Junior A. Hogg holds serial number 16262008.

Pity the laundry marker if these lads had last names beginning with the same letter, since according to regulations all clothing is stamped with the first letter of the last name and the last four digits of the serial number.

Radio Style Forum Copied by Locals For Own Program

Credit for one of the most successful troop information programs presented by the 204th Transportation Truck battalion has been laid to the novel methods used.

A discussion on the electoral college was handled in a manner similar to that employed on the radio program, "American Town Meeting of the Air."

With 1st Lt. Frank W. Pew, information-education officer, as moderator, four men debated the subject. They were Sgt. Frank W. Harden, 396th Transportation Truck company; Pvt. Samuel G. Perry, 665th Transportation Truck company; M-Sgt. Chester J. Lenoe, 396th Transportation Truck company, and Sgt. Harry H. Williams, Jr., 666th Transportation Truck company.

After the four speakers presented their views on the electoral college, the audience participated in a general discussion of the subject.

Mary E. Fortune Gets Red Cross Post at Hospital

Miss Mary Evelyn Fortune has been named head recreation worker of the Red Cross at the Station hospital, replacing Miss Hazel Turnage who has been transferred to Fort Bragg, N. C.

Formerly assigned at the U. S. Naval hospital, Charleston, S. C., Miss Fortune has been doing recreation work for four years with army and navy hospitals.

She entered Red Cross service in 1944 with the U. S. General hospital at Camp Butner, N. C. where she remained for two years. From North Carolina she was assigned to Pratt General hospital, Coral Gables, Fla.

Following the closing of Pratt General, Miss Fortune was sent to Oliver General hospital at Augusta, Ga., before going to the navy hospital at Charleston.

Miss Turnage, who served here as head recreational worker at the hospital for the past two years, will assume similar duties at her new station at Fort Bragg.

Higher Ratings Made Available To Lawson Men

Promotions to master sergeant and technical sergeant, frozen for the past 12 months in the U.S. Air Force, will be reopened in December when approximately 2,205 airmen are scheduled to begin receiving additional stripes.

Tactical Air command, Lawson's parent organization, has been alloted 75 master sergeant and 150 technical sergeant ratings.

The promotions are part of an air force plan to authorize periodic selection of top grades as an interim program pending publication of the airman career plan which will establish standard promotion procedures. The new promotions will be available in equal increments during December, 1948, and February, 1949. At present there are approximately 25,000 airmen in the first enlisted grade and 20,500 in the second grade. The new promotions will add approximately 750 master sergeants and 1,500 technical sergeants.

Lawson has not received its quota of new ratings from TAC as yet, but base personnel officials announced that Ninth air force, Lawson's immediate higher headquarters, recently alloted the base four additional technical sergeant and nine staff sergeant ratings. The new openings will be taken under consideration for the first time by the base promotion board during its October meeting.

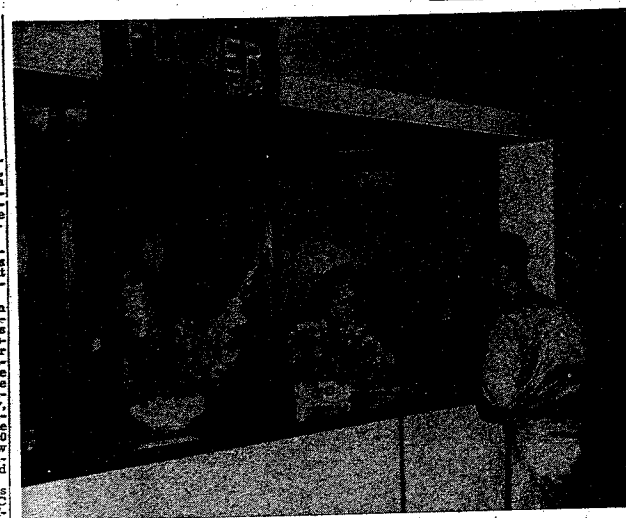
'Home' Training Set for Guard Staff Officers

National guard staff officers will be able to advance their professional training at home with a minimum loss of time from their civilian pursuits through special staff taining programs being developed by the army, it was announced today by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau.

The program is meant as a supplement to the army school system, not as a substitute, General Cramer said.

Whenever possible national guard officers will continue to take advantage of the specialized and advanced professional training available to them through the widespread system of army schools, he further declared.

The army field forces, which is responsible for supervising the training of army units of the national guard, already has developed a "home-training" command and staff course for division staffs. The course is being sent to each division commander of the national guard in sufficient quantity to conduct training of his staff. It is a modification of the regular courses given at the Command and General Staff college.



Ians now are to develop similar staff training programs for all echelons of the national guard.

Announcement will be made of staff programs for brigade, regimental and battalion level training as they are developed.

Also available to selected national guard officers are two-week command and staff special courses, developed by the Command and General Staff college, which will be given at schools established in the various army areas by the army commanders.

Assigned To 325th

First Lt. Cecil R. Jones, now on duty with the European command, will be assigned to the 325th Infantry regiment here following his return to the U. S. in December, the Department of the Army has announced.

Fifth Recruit Unit Ends Basic Cycle

At graduation exercises of the Fifth Company, 325th Infantry Training battalion, last Saturday, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Fort Benning commander, stated that he "would put the record of that company up against that of any military school in the United States."

Col. James Torrence, commander of the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team, congratulated and commended the men for their response to basic training, and added his congratulations to the cadre for the work they had done in training the recruits.

Later, General Burress told the cadre that the record of the trainees while at Fort Benning proved that the army of today can handle and train young men in a practical manner and still make army life attractive.

The company, commanded by 1st. Lt. Robert M. Patterson, qualified 96 percent of its men on the range with the M-1 rifle, and only one man was reported absent without leave during the entire training cycle.

Following graduation exercises in theater No. 11 in the Harmony church area, at which Lt. Col. Thomas R. Yancey also spoke briefly, five companies of the battalion paraded and were reviewed by General Burress. Trainees commanded the battalion, and the trainee band provided music.

The entire battalion staff for this parade consisted of men from the Fifth company. It included 19 - year - old Rct. William Hathaway as battalion commander; Rct. Anthony S. Valtri, 19, as adjutant; Rct. Daniel G. Grow, 18, S-3, and Rct. John L. Denton, 18, S-4.

Fifth company commander was Rct. Robert E. Borton, 18. The three platoon leaders of this company were Rcts. Garland E. Buck, 20; John E. Thomann, 19, and George A. Firth, 20. The first sergeant was Rct. Joseph R. Negri, 19.

Saturday night the company had a formal dinner dance in Service club No. 3 to which girls from Columbus and Phenix City were invited. They danced to the music of the trainee orchestra.

Flag Ceremony Honors Nations

Flags of the United Nations were paraded at Doughboy stadium Sunday afternoon between halves of the Benning-Quantico football game in honor of United Nations Day. Following this part of the ceremony the American flag, followed by the banners of the seven major units at Fort Benning, was carried into the center of the stadium and the band played the National Anthem.

Marines Trample Doughboys, 64-0

Start Journey To Fort Riley

The Fort Benning grid Doughboys suffered their worst setback in history Sunday afternoon when the powerful pigskin machine of the Quantico, Va., marines stampeded into Doughboy stadium and landed on the outclassed soldier crew to the tune of 64-0.

A record United Nations day crowd of 9,500 spectators watched what started out to be a close contest turn into a leatherneck massacre when the gyrenes carried the oval into the Benning end zone 10 times during the last three periods.

Although the high score run up against them was slightly more than the Doughs had bargained for, it could hardly be classed an upset since the sensational marines had been ruled a four to six touchdown favorite over the local squad from the outset of season.

String Extended

By trampling the Doughs, the Devil Dog marines made it five straight for the 1948 campaign, and stretched their string of consecutive victories to 17. The impressive record of the leathernecks, which dates back to the late stages of the 1946 season, has garnered them a No. 47 spot in the national Thomson grid ratings, and they are generally conceded the No. 1 spot among service elevens of the country.

In their appearance in Doughboy stadium, the Devil Dogs failed to cut loose with a much-talked about pass attack, but capitalized on speed and an extensive repertoire of tricky reverses.

Although the entire marine backfield had damaging effects on the Doughboys, the big flies in the ointment were Dick Ambrogi, an outstanding ball-carrier at the Annapolis Naval academy last year, and Joe Bartos, another former Navy star.

Dough Drive

Ground gains during the first period of the game were fairly evenly divided with neither team being able to push across the goal line. The Doughboys, however, missed their best chance of the day to dent the scoring column midway through the opening stanza when they moved the leather to within eight yards of pay dirt. Four attempts by halfback Don Sult to find a pass receiver failed, however, and the gyrenes again went on the offensive.

The scoreless deadlock lasted for only two minutes of the second period. Using an intercepted pass on the Doughboy 40-yard stripe to move the oval into the shadow of the Benning goal post, Bartos went 10 yards around right end for the score.

With six minutes remaining in the first half, the Devil Dogs again took possession of the pigskin on their own 20-yard marker after a quick kick from Sult on the Doughboy 30 - yard line had rolled all the way into the marine end zone. The leathernecks backs then took the oval far a pair of first downs up to the 40 - yard line where Ambrogi twisted his way through the Dough defenses and sprinted 60 yards for a touchdown.

Blocked Kick

After enjoying a brief possession of the ball, the Doughs kicked out from their end zone, the Devil Dogs taking over on the Benning 40 - yard stripe, and marching down to the 22 before George Mullaney took the pigskin around left end for the score.

Only seconds after Mullaney's touchdown, the Virginians struck for another six points. Sult's effort to boot the ball out of the danger zone was blocked, and tackle Chuck Abrahams chased it all the way into the Benning zone and fell on it for a touchdown.

Abrahams, who muffed three attempts to add the point after touchdown during the period, then booted one straight between the uprights to give the visiting eleven a 25-0 margin at the half.

Resume Offensive

Trotting back onto the playing field after the half - time respite, the marines received the kick from the Doughboys and marched straight down the turf to pay dirt. The payoff play came on a 25 - yard pass from Jesus Flores to Bartos. Abrahams' try for the extra point again was good.

Quarterback Flores, whose sling - shot arm was another outstanding feature of the leatherneck offensive, kept the air lanes buzzing with activity until he found Earnest Hargett waiting for one of his tosses in the Benning end zone midway through the third period.

The final third - quarter touchdown for the marines came when Bob Scott went over on a center plunge from the Doughboy one - yard line.

Three More

The leatherneck tally soared above the half - century mark early in the fourth quarter when they took the leather on the Doughboy 30-yard stripe and carried it down to the one - yard line from where Ed Turnipseed crashed over.

The Doughboys' next clain to the pigskin was brief, and, when the leathernecks took over on their own 45-yard line, they immediately started the drive deep into Benning territory which had become a familiar sight during the afternoon. The six-pointer which made the tally 58-0 was credited to George Greco, who scrampered for the final seven yards.

In the fading moments of the game, Scott uncorked a long pass to Mullaney which went for 42 yards and a touchdown.

Trek To Kansas

The humiliation of Sunday's defeat, however, was quick to wear off, and Coach Joe Sheppard and his Doughboy charges were reported to be in good spirits at the time they started a long trek to Kansas for a game with Fort Riley's soldiers Tuesday morning.

At Fort Riley, the Doughs, whose wont this season has been using sunlight, will play under the arc lights on Friday night, and were expected to start their journey home on Saturday.

The afair with the Kansans will be a single-game visiting stand for the Doughs. They will return to Doughboy stadium to entertain the Fort Jackson, S.C., eleven on Sunday, Nov. 7, in another fray to benefit the community chest fund.

Local Fighters On Card With Champ Joe Louis

A boxing team, composed of top-flight pugilists from the Second battalion, 25th Infantry regiment and the 999th Field Artillery battalion, will share the spotlight with world's heavyweight champion Joe Louis on an exhibition fight card tonight at Herndon stadium, Morris Brown college, in Atlanta, Ga.

The invitation for the Sand Hill beak-busters to appear on the program was extended by public relations officials of the school.

Although Louis will bring along his own sparring mates, one of the highlights of the show will come when Merritt L. Wynn, one of the co-managers of the Sand Hill scrappers, steps into the ring to match his professional experience with that of the champ. Wynn will enter the ring weighing 202 pounds.

Before entering the service, Wynn, a stocky scrapper who stands far below the six-foot mark, amassed himself an enviable fight record. He has kept himself in trim by boxing for the 25th Infantry at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and at Fort Benning.

Fighting out of his home town of Centralia, Ill., in the Chicago Golden Gloves tournaments of the late 1930's, Wynn copped the bantamweight title in 1937, the featherweight title in 1938 and the lightweight title in 1939.

Appearing in the Tournament of Champions in Chicago in 1940, he was runner-up for lightweight honors, meeting such outstanding fistic figures as Willie Joyce, former lightweight king, and Roy Lewis, Golden Gloves champ, Illinois in 1940.

Each bout on tonight's exhibition card will go three two-minute rounds, and will feature the following matches: Walter Mason vs. Al Ellis, Williams vs. Lester Holt, Clifford Wilburn vs. Wilbert Wilson, Hank Crowell vs. Ernest Brown, Jimmie Brown vs. Tiles Chatman and Bill Clark vs. John Cunningham.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Panning a losing team is one of the easiest and most natural things in the world.

But to stick with a squad through its ups and downs comes a little harder: it requires not only a lot of patience and thorough familiarity with the sport, but the knowledge that a fair to middling team can be made look awfully slouchy by a better squad.

What we're getting at is just this. While watching the Doughboys take a thorough shellacking in Doughboy stadium Sunday afternoon, our ears caught the strains—more than once—of an olive drab-clad spectator mouthing all sorts of crude criticisms and witticisms. And it was obvious that these remarks were all aimed at the playing ability of the Doughboys.

An instance which particularly diverted our attention came when a Benning player, apparently injured or shaken up, took a little longer to get back on his feet than the other squad members. At the sight of this, the irked fan bellowed out something to this effect: "If you can't stay on your feet, get of the playing field. Don't just lie there."

From the reports we have heard since the game, the individual under discussion was only one of several throughout the stands who couldn't keep his disgust at the way things were going to himself.

Apparently this type of individual believes he is capable of doing a better job of engineering plays than is being done on the playing field. However, doing blocking, tackling, passing, punting, ball-carrying and a host of other little gridiron trickeries are accomplished much easier from a seat high in the stands than they are on the field of action.

No doubt men with as much ability and knowledge of the game as some of these individuals claim to possess would be a welcome addition to Coach Joe Shepherd's fold.

Why then is it that they all seem to balk at the suggestion of going out for the team?

It would be well for some of the cat-callers to remember that the players on the Doughboy and other service squads are out there simply because they like the game, and are putting forth their best efforts to give Fort Benning a grid crew it can be proud of. In return for their efforts, the most any of them would ask would be loyalty on the part of post spectators.

Also, anybody prone to voice harsh criticisms should be sure that they are justified before sounding off.

Let's remember that the majority of the Doughboy team members this year are vastly inexperienced, and could hardly be expected to stack up with an aggregation boasting no less than a dozen former stars with some of the best collegiate elevens of the nation. Even the most generous of odds-givers had the Quantico powerhouse rated at least five touchdowns better than the Doughs long before game time.

We just can't bring ourselves to agree with anybody who is inclined to blame the outcome off the game on sluggish playing on the part of the Doughs. It was just a matter of being over-matched, outclassed and outplayed. The leathernecks had a fine team, and we're looking for them to stretch their string of consecutive triumphs on through the 1948 season.

While we're discussing the merits, or lack thereof, it might be well for us to jump over to the other side of the fence and command some of the loyal Dough enthusiasts who have carried their colors high even in the quagmire of defeat.

Since we're now throwing bouquets, we might mention the name of a person whom we consider one of the most ardent Doughboy rooters in existence—Miss Mary Merritt, a civilian employee of the post cafeteria.

A Sunday afternoon crowd at Doughboy stadium wouldn't be complete without the presence of Mary, whose attendance at post athletic events isn't limited to football, but takes in all other seasonal sports.

Mary is the type of fan who can't foresee a Fort Benning defeat even in the face of overwhelming odds. She always clings to the outside possibility the Doughboys, when rated underdogs, might pull an upset, and is quick to quote instances where underrated teams have reached up to snatch some glory from the hands of their favored opponents.

The feeling between Mary and her idols of the playing field is mutual. Members of present and past Doughboy teams have held her in high esteem for her unwavering devotion to any athlete who sported the colors of Fort Benning.

JOHNNY DOBBS ..... Dough of the Week.

LINEMAN CHOSEN

Johnny Dobbs Is Named Doughboy of The Week

It's very seldom that one of the unsung heroes of the line sneaks into the gridiron limelight, but the selection as "Dough of the Week" this time goes hands down to young Johnny Dobbs, who did an outstanding job of plugging up the center of the line in Sunday's massacre by the top-ranking marines of Quantico, Va.

When the bone-crushing forward wall of the leathernecks succeeded in turning Doughboy offensive efforts into a stalemate, it became obvious that a lineman would be the recipient of this week's honor, but to name an outstanding player in the wake of a 64-0 defeat is no easy task.

One of the principal factors taken into consideration in bestowing this week's honor on the scrappy 165-pound center was the arduousness of his assignment. Playing opposite Dobbs on the gyrene line was Bill Jesse, a 190-pounder whose gridiron experience could fill a volume.

Jesse, a 22-year-old, six-footer who hails from Missoula, Mont., last year was the principal substitute center for all-American Dick Scott at the Annapolis Naval academy, and some Middie fans have cited his abilities as equal to those of his former all-American teammate.

Despite the weight and experience odds favoring Jesse, the light but spirited Dobbs pitched in to keep appreciable gains through the center of the Dough forward wall at a minimum. After sevreal futile attempts to pick up yardage through the middle of the line, the leathernecks finally resorted to speed to get their ball-toters around end, and all but gave up trying straight plunges.

Dobbs, who received the nod for first-string center early in the season, calls Dawson, Ala., his home, and played football at Fyffe highschool before entering the service. His assignment at Fort Benning is with Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit.

Hospital Appointee

First Lt. Helen E. Moode, Army Nurse corps, has received orders to report to Fort Benning for assignment to the station hospital following the termination of her present tour of foreign duty in the Far East, it was learned here this week.

Linksmen Will Use Golf Clubs To Hunt Fowl

The remainder of this week has been set aside by the tournament committee of the Fort Benning Golf and Country club for qualifying for the annual "turkey" tournament. Matches, as well as qualifying rounds, will be played on the club course.

Turkeys will be awarded the winner of each flight, and the runner-up in each bracket will receive a chicken. Two chickens, one for low gross and one for low net, will be awarded tourney medalists.

Enlisted men, who have been granted playing privileges by the club, also are eligible for participation in the tourney, it was pointed out.

Gridiron Forecasts For Weekend Frays

By LEWIS McAFEE

Most of the big grid teams passed the halfway mark in their schedule last wekend, and the long unbeaten elevens of Michigan, Notre Dame and North Carolina still reign as monarchs of the playing turf.

Now, we'll go into our trance, and, just so we won't change our mind, jot down our forecasts while we're still under the spell.

THE EAST

Army over VPI: The Cadets to toy around with the Virginians.

Clemson over Boston College: Clemson has been obscured by some of the bigger boys, but, don't forget, it has yet to be beaten this year.

Rutgers over Brown: It might be close.

Penn State over Colgate: The Nittany Lions to roar again after being held to a 13-13 deadlock by Michigan State last Saturday.

Cornell over Columbia: But we wouldn't bet our shirts on it.

Dartmouth over Yale: Outside of their upset triumph over Wisconsin's Badgers, the Elis have shown next to nothing this season.

Holy Cross over Harvard: If this one results in a tie we're going to chalk ourselves up a winner.

Notre Dame over Navy: The Irish by a brace of touchdowns.

Pitt over Western Reserve: We'll have to admit we were surprised when the Panthers rolled over Indiana last weekend.

THE MIDWEST

Michigan over Illinois: To the tune of about 25 points.

Minnesota over Indiana: Since the Golden Gophers have added a nifty passing attack to that power - packed forward wall, they're a pretty safe wager for the rest of the season.

Iowa over Wisconsin: From our seat along the sidelines, it looks like the Badgers are doomed to the Gig Nine earlar this season.

Oklahoma over Iowa State: The Sooners loom as the team to beat in the Big Seven, but wait until ole Mizzou comes along

Kansas over Oklahoma A & M: The Jayhawkers can't be omitted from the list of top teams of the nation, and the Aggies' record this season includes triumphs only over smaller colleges.

Missouri over Kansas State: Say a prayer for the boys from State U. This one should be a massacre.

Purdue over Marquette: The Boilermakers seem to be doing alright in extra - conference tilts.

Michigan State over Oregon State: C'est la Guerre. The pint-sized Spartan backfield star, whose named in French means war, really cut loose on the Nittany Lions of Penn State last week, and he should meet with even less resistance out in Beaver country.

UCLA over Nebraska: By a pair of touchdowns.

Northwestern over Ohio State: But don't be too surprised if this one turns out to be an upset.

THE SOUTH

Georgia over Alabama: The Tidesmen to lag in this one after turning the tables on Mississippi State last week.

Vanderbilt over Auburn: It looks like the Plainsmen are doomed to another season - long sojurn in the Dixie Dozen cellar.

Georgia Tech over Duke: This one could be an upset, but we'll stick with the odds and say the Engineers.

Kentucky over Cincinnati: Without much trouble.

Mississippi over LSU: Another conference disappointment for Gaynell Tinsley's lads from Baton Rouge.

Tulane over Mississippi State: Only after flipping a coin.

North Carolina over Tennessee: If the Tar Heels are to be stopped this year, it will have to be by the Vols.

North Carolina over Wake Forest: The Wolfpack cant be regarded too lightly this season.

SMU over Texas: This one will undoubtedly solve the Southwestern conference puzzle, and our prediction is that the Mustangs will reign again.

Rice over Texas Tech: The Owls by three touchdowns.

POST VOLLEYBALL CREW TO DEFEND ARMY CROWN

The task of defending Fort Benning's Third army volleyball title this year has been delegated to netmen of Company C, Infantry School detachment, who recently captured the post championship by taking two straight games from Company I of the 504th Parachute Infantry regiment.

The post champs will make their bid for another one-year claim to the Third army trophy at Fort Jackson, S. C., on Nov. 30, Dec. 1 and 2 with virtually the same squad which took the championship at Oliver General hospital, Augusta, Ga., last year.

Selected to pilot the post net representatives was Collis (Lefty) Lehner, and Harvey Allen has been designated team manager. Other squad members who are expected to make the trip to Fort Jackson are George Hill, Bill Taylor, Lenwood Greene, John Goodin, Truman Ledlow and Tom Holmes.

Although the number of entries for the Third army tourney could not be ascertained it was expected that most of the permanent installations in the army area would be represented.

In addition to winning the right to represent Benning in the army tournament, the Company C volleyballers also took possession of the Infantry Center's permanent trophy, and each player received an individual award.

The toughest opposition encountered by the ISD sextet in battling its way to the post toga came in the first round set when they barely eked out a 19-17 win over Company I of the 504th Parachute Infantry to take the set in two straight games.

After dropping the paratroopers into the lower bracket, Company C then took two more contests from the Infantry School detachment's Company A squad. Their semi-finals victory came over the red team of the 25th Infantry regiment, which had wrested decisions from the 999th Field Artillery battalion and the 04th Transportation Truck battalion.

The 504th parachutists gained the lower bracket finals by scoring triumphs over the 204th transportation lads and Company A, ISD.

Identical socres of 15-7 gave the ISD netmen the championship in straight games.

Local Linksters Play Lions Club Nassau Contest

A 16-man team of golfers from The Fort Benning Golf and Country club played host to a links delegation from the Columbus Lions club in a nassau-system match last Thursday afternoon.

Although outpointed 39 1-2 to 32 1-2, the local delegation loaned the services of club champion Devert Moore to the Lions club linksters. Moore, who changed colors after one of the civic club representatives failed to show up, was responsible for registering seven and one-half points in the Lions club scoring column.

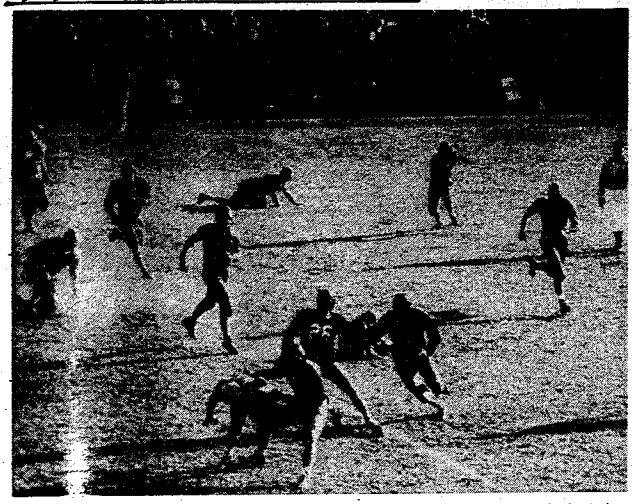
Playing in the first foursome off the tee, Moore teamed with M. W. Jackson of Columbus to limit Claude English and Paul Markland of Fort Benning to one and one-half of the possible nine points.

In the second match, Roy Turgeon and Robert J. Rosa, representing the post club, took seven points from P. B. Austin and E. L. Foster of the city, and six and one-half more points went up in the Benning scoring column when Emil P. Eschenburg and P.C. Rawlins took the third match from G. H. Bickerstaff and Frank Hardy.

The fourth match, however, went to the Lions club in grand-slam fashion as H. T. Harden and W. M. Farnbrough took all nine counters from R. L. Short and R. E. Connor.

J. J. Sullivan and C. O. Calhoun of Columbus credited their team with eight more tallies by taking the next contest from E. B. Cheston and James L. Walker, and D. D. Walton and C. M. Calhoun racked up six and one-half more Lions club points by outplaying S. A. Satterfield and W. C. Winston.

In the closest battle of the day, J. E. Cowley and Lewis McAfee of the post country club took five of the nine points at stake from E. Cogdell and Ed Murrah, and J. W. Haley and W. G. Springer finished out the agenda with a 9-0 Benning victory over K. C. Brandenburg and V. Bergquist.



Plans are under consideration to make the inter-club matches a regular periodic affair with play to be alternated between the post layout and the Lions club course in Columbus.

DOWN YOU GO . . . Back George Greco of the Quantico marines apparently had designs on the open field ahead during last Sunday's tussle in Doughboy stadium, but Benning quarterback Earl Martin changed his mind by dragging him to the turf after a short gain.

GOAL POST PUSH . . George Greco, line-plunging Quantico marine back, drives into the shadow of the Benning goal post during Sunday's 64-0 walloping of the post eleven in Doughboy stadium. Although Greco failed to make the necessary yardage on this play, he went over for six gyrene tallies on the following one.

Eleventh-Hour Uprising Fails; Bullets Beaten

BY BOB PHILLIPS

A fourth-period Bullet drive which penetrated enemy territory down to the five-yard stripe wasn't enough as the Atlanta Panthers dug in to halt the rapidly-advancing Sand Hill eleven short of pay dirt, and narrowly escaped with a 6-0 verdict Sunday afternoon on the capital city's Harper's field.

Two Bullet speedsters, pistol-legged Phil Tindrell and "jumpin' " Cliff Bradford added their talents to those of quarterback Hudie Langston, Vern Boswell, and petite Ed Monroe to rip through the Panther lines for spectacular open-field performances and enormous gains.

The Panthers' lone tally was registered during the opening minutes of the initial period when Claude Holt, starting from his own five-yard line, swung wide around right end and went the length of the field to score standing up. A fast-charging Bullet forward wall for convesion.

During the second stanza, assistant coach Stacey Hoffman inserted his quartet of midget-sized backs, Ernest Sims, Monroe, Vern Stephens and Gene Bush, and the foursome of swift-moving aces immediately went to work on the Panther defenses. To start an offensive threat, Boswell went through the line for 12 yards, and speed-demon Monroe shook himself loose for 14 yards which carried the oval to the Panthers' 35-yard line.

The remainder of the second period and the whole of the third saw the two elevens engage in a vicious defensive battle with Holt and Yelder furnishing the spark for the Panthers, and Jeff White, Ben Ashford, Bob Murphy, Odell Kennedy, Raymond Smith and Thomas Brookins leading the defensive attack for the Bullets.

An exciting fourth quarter saw the rampaging Bulletmen initiate a ferocious running attack which went all the way to the Panhter five-yard stripe before being stopped. Phil Tindrell opened the show when he leaped hight o snag an enemy pitch and move 27 yards before being hauled down from behind by Holt. A five-yard gain by Bradord and a pass that traveled from Langston to Hammond moved the oval to the 25-yard line. But here the drive bogged down and the Panthers took over.

Led by Kennedy and Walt Brown, the Panther running game was stopped cold, and the Atlanta aggregation was forced to kick.

After the Bullets had regained possession of the ball, Bradford reeled off eight yards, Langston heaved an aerial to Bradford for 20 yards up the the 38. The speedy, crazy-legged Bradford then took the leather on two successive plays and moved it down to the Panther 33-yard marker where Tindrell took over, and raced down to the 20-yard stripe.

Langston then made an unsuccessful attempt to find a pass receiver, but, on the next play, Tindrell came back into the picture, and skipped his way down to within five yards of the Panther end zone. With only seconds left to play, the Panthers braced themselves, took the ball on downs, and waited out the final gun.

The Bullets, however, will get another crack at dumping the Panthers on Saturday night when the two elevens clash in Columbus' Memorial stadium.

Dough Midgets Open Saturday

A scrappy, high-spirited crew of Doughboy midgets will open their 1948 grid campaign here Saturday morning against a heavier Baker Village junior high school eleven. Whether the tilt will be played in Doughboy stadium or Blue pole field has not been definitely decided.

Weight odds of from 15 to 20 pounds per man favor the Baker Village lads, who already have two contests under their belts this season. But Coach Don Britt of the Midgets is relying on the speed and determination shown by his charges during workout sessions to run up a digit in his win column.

As a nucleus for his forward wall, the Midget mentor has four members of last season's grid edition suited up again this fall. They are centers Jimmy Dunn and Don Thornhill, guard Robert Blandford and end Ernest Gilmore.

School Grid Gate Lower For Benning

Henceforth military personnel of Fort Benning in uniform will be admitted to city highschool football games played in Memorial stadium at student price, it was announced here this week.

Plans to admit military personnel to the game for the reduced price were worked out by Floyd Francisco of the Columbus Young Men's Christian association and the principals of the city schools.

Emphasis was placed on the fact that personnel desiring to attend the contests must be in complete military uniform. Identification tags, AGO cards or any other form of identification, it was pointed out, will not be sufficient.

Concurrent with the announcement of reduced prices for military personnel, Infantry center officials urged Benningites who plan to attend the games to conduct themselves in an exemplary manner. This privilege, it was explained, may be withdrawn at any time.

The first chance for Benningites to take advantage of the lowered admission rates will come on Thursday night when the Central high Red Devils of Phenix City clash with the Jordan high crew in the Memorial stadium feature of the week.

More activity is on tap for the Columbus stadium on Friday night when Columbus high plays host to an unbeaten eleven from Savannah high. Baker Village, the other local squad, journeys to Atlanta this weekend for a tussel with Bass high on Saturday afternoon.

Odds for the Jordan-Central fray are pretty evenly divided even though the lads from across the Chattahoochie do sport a better season's record than the Jackets. Jordan has only one triumph in six starts this year, but their slate has been somewhat more gruelling than that of the Red Imps, who boast a 3-2 count.

ISD Keglers Take Two More Circuit Bowling Matches

Keglers from Company A, Infantry School detachment, the defending post alleys champs, took over undisputed command of the current intra-mural bowling circuit by chalking up grand-slam triumphs in their only two outings during the second week of play.

The defending champs activity of the week was paced by R. L. Short, who annexed high individual game honors with his pinfall of 213, and was runner-up in the three-game set bracket with a tally of 564. Just below Short on the single-game list with 209 was Norbert Szymarek of the 3440th Area Service unit, who topped the individual bowling roster last week.

Szymarek's efforts on the main post lanes during the past two weeks also have netted him the foremost spot in the "Big Ten" standings with a game average of 187.3 for the season. The ASU kegler is credited with knocking over 1,124 pins in six games.

Only two of the 17 teams entered in the loop, the Company A group and a squad representing Company B of the Infantry School detachment, had bowled three matches at the close of the second week's activity. All 12 of the points at stake in the Company A matches have been rung up in the defending champs' win column, and the Company B pins scatterers have taken 10 of their 12 points.

The loop leaders started the ball rolling on Monday night when they downed the Food Service School crew 2,338 to 2,111 to snatch four counters for the black side of their ledger, and chalked up another quartet of tallies on Thursday night by blasting the Airborne battalion 2,442 to 2,105.

Following Monday night's opening contest between Company A and the Food Service School, Company B took to the alleys and grabbed off three counters by chalking up a 2,434 to 2,108 triumph over Headquarters company of the 325th Infantry regiment. The other Company B victory was a grand-slam affair over the 3440th Area Service unit. The ISD bowlers tallied 2,528 while the ASU lads could manage for only 2,276.

The finale Monday night found the keglers from the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment taking a four-point, 2,193 to 1,928 decision from the 121st Evacuation hsospital.

To open Wednesday night's slate, Company G of the 25th Infantry regiment accepted a forfeit from the 204th Transportation Truck battalion, and the 30th Medical group picked up four easy counters when Company H of the 25th Infantry regiment failed to appear.

In the nightcap Wednesday, bowlers of Army Field Forces board No. 3 waylaid 2,224 pins to take three of four counters from the 756th Heavy Tank battalion keglers, whose pinfall totaled 2,176.

Station hospital alleymen rolltheir only match of the week on Thursday night, and walked away from the lanes with a 3-1 reckoning over the 999th Field Artillery battalion. The medics knocked over 1,992 pins to 1,800 for the artillerymen.

City Papers Print Eisenhower Story

General Dwight D. Eisenhower's personal story of victory in World War II, "Crusade in Europe, will be published in serial form in the Columbus Enquirer and Columbus Ledger beginning Sunday, Nov. 7.

Enlivening the narrative with his own thoughts at moments of crucial importance, the former Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces will tell the story in 36 installments.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN. . . And into the fire goes Joe Bartos, high-stepping ball-carrier for the Quantico marines, in Doughboy stadium last Sunday afternoon. Bartos has just shaken off a couple of Doughboy tacklers, but is running straight into the clutches of guard Walt Dejung (No. 29) and Lawrence Brennan (No. 40). Bartos shared the limelight with his teammate Dick Ambrogi in the leathernecks' 64-0 triumph over the Bennington.

Education Opportunities Fulfilled For 25th Men

"To be educated is to be well informed," seems to be the adopted slogan of the men of the 25th Infantry regiment.

The desire to further their education by taking advantage of the many opportunities offered by the army continues at a high peak with approximately 50 25th regiment men enrolled in the Army Education Center's night school here.

The present enrollment however, revealed a slight drop as compared with that of the spring session which is perhaps due to the large number of USAFI enrollees in the regiment, as well as others whose time in service will expire before the completion of the ten-week course, officials reported.

The present registration was greatly accelerated by enrollment of those men whose education was interrupted because of recent enlistments in the service.

Among those registered for the Army Education Center's school are Headquarter company: M- Sgt. James Barnes Sgt. Andrew Thomas, Cpl. Marcus Mooring, Cpl. Amos Lige, Cpl. Ellison Anderson, and Rct. Alfred Kelley.

Company E: Sgt. Lewis Chatman, Cpl. Otis Pettigew, Pvt James Duvall, Pvt. George, Sands and Pvt. Milton Bration.

Brig. Perowne Expected Here

The deputy chief of staff for combined operations of the British War Office, Brigadier E. C. M. Perowne, will arrive at Fort Benning Monday for a three-day visit, it has been announced.

Brigadier Perowne, who served with the late Maj. Gen. Orde Wingate in Burma during the war, will be accompanied by Col. B. W. Leicester of the British Royal Marines.

While here, Brigadier Perowne and Colonel Leicester will view several infantry school demonstrations. He will also confer with Infantry School and Infantry Center officials.

ENLISTED EFFICIENCY REPORT—Pictured here is a copy of the new efficiency report that will be submitted periodically on all enlisted men as one of the aspects of the career plan.

National Guard Divisions To Increase Fire Power

Organizational changes which will increase materially the fire power and mobility of the national guard's infantry and armored divisions were announced recently by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau.

The change parallels reorganization of regular army divisions which was announced two years ago.

They are based on revised tables of organization and equipment which utilize the battle experience of World War II.

Major revisions are:

Each of the 25 infantry divisions in the national guard will add a self-propelled anti-aircraft artillery (automatic weapons) battalion and a heavy tank battalion.

Each of the two national guard armored divisions will add a self-propelled 155-mm howitzer field artillery battalion and a self-propelled anti-aircraft artillery (automatic weapons) battalion.

The 96 infantry regiments in divisions and regimental combat teams in the national guard troop basis will heavily increase fire power by adding a heavy tank company and a heavy mortar company in place of an anti-tank company and a cannon company.

National guard strength of the infantry divisions will be increased to approximately 14,000 officers and men, of the armored divisions to some 12,000. The old peace or reduction strengths were approximately 13,000 and 9,000, respectively or 80 per cent of full combat strength.

Full strength of infantry divisions is expanded to about 19,000, of armored divisions to about 16,000. The old figures were approximately 16,000 and 11,000 respectively.

Other changes include the addition of various service troops to the divisional basis, including additional medical and mess personnel.

Reorganization, which started Oct. 1 and is expected to be completed by the early part of the next calendar year, will become effective for all organizations of a given type in the national guard, such as separate companies, battalions and regiments, until complete divisional reorganization is accomplished. Effective dates for the reorganization of the various types of national guard organizations will be announced from time to time by the national guard bureau as the new tables of organization and equipment are printed and distributed to the field.

Reorganization will be carried out first by the infantry divisions followed approximately a month later by the armored divisions.

SOLDIER VOTE COUNTED VIA ABSENTEE BALLOTS

With election day drawing near, thousands of Fort Benning personnel have already mailed Official Election Absentee Ballots while still others have time to get off their ballots before the date of the Presidential election, next Tuesday, Nov. 2.

Deadlines for soldier's application for absentee ballots in some states has already passed, but there are some states who will receive soldier's applications or state absentee ballots at any time, including Albama and New Mexico.

The date on or before which soldier's executed absentee ballot must be received by appropriate officials within the state in order to be eligible to be counted varies. One state, Nebraska, has extended its deadline date for receipt of absentee ballots to Nov. 11.

Absentee votes are not permitted in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. The absentee voting in Pennsylvania have been repealed, while War Voters commission in Virginia terminated July 1, 1948.

Post personnel have been briefed by unit commanders on soldier voting. Provisions of Department of Army Circular No. 300, containing information relative to state and reneral elections, have been brought to the attention of all military personnel. Post card applications are available at all units.

The men promoted were Lee B. Philmon, James W. Hibbs and Office Adkins, all of the 33rd Transportation Truck company, and David L. Brooks of Headquarters detachment, 204th.

Promoted in the 396th Transportation Truck company were Robert A. Coleman, Fred R. White, Foster Barnes, James H. Sanders, John L. Hudson, Chinee Edwards, Stephen Johnson, William Fisher and John A. Connor.

Two men of the 665th Transportation Truck company also promoted were Robert Ferell and Lee C. Tolbert.

241 Seek Promotions

A total of 24 applications for promotion has been received from men in the food service career guidance program, it was revealed this week. These applications are the first submitted at Fort Benning under the career plan since this is the only program that has already gone into effect.

An Analysis of Enlisted Efficiency Rating Report

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following information on enlisted men's efficiency reports was taken directly from one of the first copies of the blanks received at Fort Benning. It is published in this way because it is believed that all enlsted men are interested in how they will be rated. A copy of the report blank itself is also published in this week's Bayonet, but the points and questions listed here are identical with those on the official blank.

The enlisted efficiency rating report, an integral part of the career guidance program, consists of eight sections that take into consideration 45 points on the enlisted man being rated. The first ratings actually submitted at Fort Benning are for men in the food service career field, the first to go into operation. It is expected, however, that all the army career fields will be in operation by December, 1949.

Section I of the efficiency report is purely administrative in that it merely contains the rated man's name, rank, serial number, months in grade, duty MOS, reason for report, period covered by report, the unit, organization and station and the report date.

It is expected that enlisted men will be most interested in the second and third sections of the report since they contain the information that will most likely determine the rated man's opportunities for promotion. These two sections are filled in by the enlisted man's immediate duty supervisor, who may be either an officer, warrant officer or non-commissioned officer.

There are 25 points covered in Section II of the report by the rater. They are:

1. Takes proper action in absence of orders.
2. Takes an interest in his work.
3. Is a good supervisor or would make one.
4. Maintains military bearing and demeanor.
5. Adds to morale of the unit.
6. Persistent in overcoming obstacles.
7. Shows common sense and good judgment.
8. Requires very little supervison.
9. Knows how to handle men.
10. Commands respect of his fellow workers.
11. Likes being in the army.
12. Strives for more knowledge and ideas.
13. Cooperates well with fellow workers.
14. Well grounded in all phases of army life.
15. Is able to lead.
16. azy on the job.
17. Does not accept criticism.
18. Oversteps his authority.
19. Gets moody and irritable.
20. Gripes too much without reason.
21. Alibis his mistakes.
22. Gives up easily when faced with difficulties.
23. Overestimates his abilities.
24. Resents army discipline.
25. Loses his temper.

The second major section for the rater is a series of 10 questions about the man being rated. They are:

1. How well does he understand what to do without detailed instructions?
2. How well does he get along with the other men in off duty situations?
3. How well satisfied are you with his work?
4. How well would he do "on his own?"
5. How well would you like to the next higher grade?
6. How well would you like to work in close personal contact with him?
7. How well would he be able to do his job under combat conditions?
8. How well could he take over for you in your absence?
9. How well do you like having him work for you?
10. How careful is he about the small details of his job?

Section IV is a short section filled out by the rater and has to do one part with the length of time the rater has known the person being rated. The second part of this section concerns how well the rater knows the man on whose efficiency he is passing judgment. In this part the rater signifies one of forr points on the man:

1. Work in close association with him.
2. Observe his work several times a week.
3. Observe him at work about once a week.
4. Seldom see him in a work situation.

In section V the rater certifies that he has read Army Regulation 600-180 within the past six months and has personally filled out Sections II, III and IV of the report according to directions laid down n the reuglation.

Section VI is the first of two major sections completed by the endorser. The indorser is to be a commissioned officer who is immediately superior in the chain of command to the rater. In Seeton vi he rates both the rater and the man beng rated, completing the latter first. In the first part of the section, devoted to knowledge of the man being rated, he checks one of four points on the man being rated:

1. Work in close association with him.
2. Observe his work several times a week.
3. Observe him at work about once a week.
4. Seldom see him in a work situation.

In the second part of Section VI the indorser judges the rater on five points, choosing one point to describe, or rate, the rater. The points are:

1. Tough rater. Has high standards for his subordinates.
2. Tougher than many. Expects much of his subordinates.
3. Easier than most. Tends to overlook men's shortcomings.
4. Impartial rater.
5. Soft rator. Gives everyone a high rating.

In Section VII also filled out by the indorser who here also rates the enlisted man who has already been rated by the original rater. He answers 10 questions in this section. They are:

1. How well does he fit into army life?
2. How well do you like having him work for you?
3. How well would he be able to do his job under combat conditions?
4. How well could he take over for the rater in his absence?
5. How easy is he to handle.
6. How well would he do at the next higher grade?
7. How well does be take care of his personal equipment?
8. How well are you satisfied with his work?
9. How well does he meet unusual situations without emotional upset?
10. How well qualified is he to be a leader?

The last part of the report, Section VIII, is also filled in by the indorser and is an authentication. The indorser certifies that, like the rater, he has read AR 600-180 within the past six months and has personally accomplished Sections VI and VII of the report in accordance with the regulation.

General Fleming To Head Guard Army Division

Appointment of Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, commanding general of the 39th Infantry division of the national guard in Louisiana and Arkansas, to head the newly established army division within the National Guard bureau was announced today by Maj. Gen. Jennet F. Cramer, chief of the bureau.

General Fleming, who has also been serving as an assistant to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, was adjutant general of Louisiana for 20 years.

He will retain command of the 39th Infantry Division while serving with the National Guard bureau in Washington.

The National Security Act specifies that "the National Guard bureau shall, in addition to the functions and duties performed by it for the Department of the Army, be charged with similar functions and duties for the Department of the Airforce, and shall be the channel of communication between the airforce and the several states on all matters pertaining to the air national guard.

General Fleming was born in Waxahachie, Tex., July 5, 1889, and was graduated from Trinity university in 1915.

Starting his military career by enlisting as a private in the Louisiana national guard in 1916, General Fleming first served in the Mexican border dispute. During World War I he was commissioned and commanded a battery of the 141st Field Artillery overseas. General Fleming organized and commanded the first unit of the Louisiana national guard after the first world war.

In 1928, he was appointed adjutant general of Louisiana, a post he held for 20 years. Named a brigadier general of the line in 1940, General Fleming was placed in command of the 55th Cavalry brigade of the 23rd Cavalry division.

Later in 1940, General Fleming was ordered to federal duty as state director of selective service for Louisiana, continuing to serve as state adjutant general. He was appointed to his present post as assistant to the director of selective service on Sept. 1. of this year.

Thunderbirds Set New York Meet

The Hotel New Yorker in New York City will be the scene of the annual national convention of the 45th "Thunderbird" division Nov. 12-14.

Jack Eleford, chairman of the reunion, reported that the eastern chapter expects more than 1,000 to attend the three-day celebration, and that the association has spent more than $5,000 to insure the success of the reunion.

Former Thunderbirds and their wives will not have to worry about entertainment, as the eastern chapter is sponsoring the second annual fall dance on Friday, Nov. 12. Music will be furnished by Charles Peterson and his orchestra.

Other entertainment planned by the eastern chapter is a fashion show for the ladies on Saturday afternoon. The eastern chapter will also furnish dinner and dancing music for the banquet on Saturday night. They have also planned a program to be given during the banquet.

The Hotel New Yorker, the convention bureau of New York and the eastern chapter, is also arranging tours of the city for delegates and their guests. Those attending the reunion will also be able to get reservations for sporting events, theaters and night clubs at the registration desk.

Among those attending the reunion will be Capt. Jack Treadwell, CMH winner and one of the most decorated members of the division. Now, executive officer of the Seventh Infantry regiment of the Third division at Fort Devens, Mass., he was also awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Legion of Merit, the Silver Star, the Bronze Star and the Purple heart, all while a member of the 45th division.

Airforce Set to Recall 10,000 to Active Duty

Ten thousand air reserve and air national guard officers are being offered an opportunity to return to extended active duty with the United States airforce, Lawson airforce base officials announced today.

The requirements of an expanding airforce call for an additional 5,000 officers by the end of the year, and another 5,000 next July. These vacancies will be filled on a voluntary basis, base officials emphasized, pointing out that the USAF is recalling no reserve officers to duty without their consent.

Vacancies exist in a wide range of professional, technical and administrative fields for officers under the age of 45 in all grades up through colonel. Sufficient applications from rated officers are on hand to meet immediate requirements, and only a limited number of technical positions are available for colonels.

Most needed are second lieutenants who are college graduates, such as graduated from air ROTC. These men, base officials said, will have an exceptional opportunity to obtain regular airforce commissions during their tours of active duty.

Those whose applications are accepted for three years of active duty will be called to duty. Only officers commissioned in the highest grade held prior to relief from wartime active duty. Only officers commissioned in the airforce reserve or the air national guard of the United States are eligible to apply.

Classical Concert Series Begins at Main Library

A new series of recorded classical and semi - classical concerts will begin at the Main library Monday, Nov. 1, at 7:30 p.m., it was announced this week by Mrs. Theodosia Williams, librarian.

Mrs. Williams also announced the acquisition of a new type record player, capable of providing a total of 22 and one-half minutes of uninterrupted music without a change of disc. This, she pointed out, is an entire concerto or short symphony. The discs, known as the L -P type, are made of unbreakable vinylite.

Already purchased by the library are the Gershwin "Rhapsody in Blue" with Oscar Levant and the Philadelphia orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy. The other side of this disc is Gershwin's "An American in Paris," recorded by Artur Rodzinski and the New York Philharmonic.

The Beethoven Sonata No. 14 in C-sharp minor, the Moonlight," fills one side of another record, and the reverse side is the Beethoven Sonata No. 8 in C-sharp minor, the "Pathetique." Both of these piano recordings are by Rudolf Serkin.

Music by Tchaikowsky is on both sides of another of the L-P records. The first side is the "Nutcracker Suite" and the other is his "Mozrtiana." Both were recorded by Rodzinski and the New York Philharmonic.

Aram Khachaturian's "Gayne" Ballet Suites No. 1 and No. 2 fill two sides of another record. This includes the well known "Saber Dance" and the recordings are by Efrem Kurtz and the New York Philharmonic.

The famous Shostakovitch Fifth Symphony completely fills, both sides of another of the new records. It was recorded by Rodzinski and the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

Monday nght's concert lists Bizet's "Carmen Suite," conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Philharmonic; Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 1 in F-sharp minor with the composer at the piano; the newly recorded Bethoven "Moonlight" sonata and the L-P recording of "Rhapsody in Blue."

Outstanding Britishers See Benning

Two of Britain's outstanding wartime soldiers, Brigadier E. M. C. Perowne and Col. B. W. Leicester arrived at Fort Benning Monday for a two days visit during which they conferred with top Infantry Center and School officials and viewed several demonsteations of Infantry firepower and tactics.

Holder of a Commander of the British Empire award, Brigadier Perowne is presently the commandant of the School of Combined Operations, a post he held since 1946. Originally an adjutant with the territorial army in 1930, although his original branch of service is the engineers, he held several important commands in various theaters of operations during the war.

He went to Singapore, serving there as an engineer officer from 1934 to 1936, and then a staff member of an anti-aircraft division, a post he held from 1937 to 1939, before going to France with the British Expeditionary Force.

When the Germans broke through and around the Maginot line in May, 1940, he formed a force of engineers, called "Perowne's Rifles," during the fighting on the Somme river. After returning to England, he left on an air defense mission to the Middle East, returning in 1942 to be chief instructor of the British Anti - Aircraft School. Later in 1942 and in 1943 he commanded an anti-aircraft brigade until going to Burma in 1943 where he commanded a brigade under the late famous Gen. Orde Wingate from 1943 to 1945. He then commanded a beach group in Malaya until 1946, before returning to England to assume his present duties.

Brigadier Perowne has been made Knight of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Argentine Gen. Visitor at Benning

Maj. Gen. Oscar Muratorio, chief of staff of the Argentine airforce, arrived at Fort Benning Tuesday morning by plane and was welcomed by Brig. Gen. Joseph S. Bradley, assistant commandant of the Infantry School. He then inspected a guard of honor from the 325th Infantry Regimental combat team.

In the morning General Muratorio viewed an infantry firepower demonstration at Hook range in company with 46 military and air attaches from 32 nations. That afternoon he observed the infantry-artillery-tank team in the attack at Helmet trail, and later was entertained at the Country club.

General Muratorio left by plane from Lawson field early Wednesday morning.

100th Division Vet Named to Head Post Service Unit

Col. Maurice L. Miller, wartime assistant commander of the 100th Infantry division, has been named commanding officer of the 3440th Area Service unit, Infantry Center officials revealed this week.

Colonel Miller, as a brigadier general, served during the war as deputy to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commanding general, who during the war commanded the 100th.

Prior to his assignment here, Colonel Miller was chief of the Organized Reserve division, New York, New Jersey, and Deleware Military district, with headquarters in New York city.

The new 3440th head, as brigadier general, participated in two of the three 100th division campaigns under General Burress before pneumonia forced him out of action in January, 1945. After recuperation, he was assigned assistant commanding general of the Infantry Replacement Training Center at Fort McClellan, Ala., serving there until June, 1945.

After later service as commanding general of the Infantry Advanced Replacement Training

Provisional Course Opens Here Dec. 3

1st Class Limited To 100 Students

The Infantry School's first 12-week provisional officers course for newly commissioned second lieutenants is scheduled to begin Dec. 3, it was announced this week by the office of the coordinator of training.

Classes will start every three weeks thereafter, with enrollment in the first two limited to 100 students. Beginning with the third class, enrollment will be increased to 200.

Orders to set up the new course came directly from the Department of the Army through army field forces. The information disclosed in The Bayonet last week concerning the new course came from Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall through Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull, acting director of organization and training for the army, to the Infantry School.

While enrolled in the provisional officers' course, the newly appointed second lieutenants will be given a comprehensive course covering subjects required of infantry officers. These include:

In the General Subjects section, map and aerial photo reading, company administration, mess management, supply and property; military law; physical training, organized athletics, drill and command, inspections, military courtesy and customs of the service; methods of instruction and training management; leadership; staff procedure and organization; logistics, including marching and bivouacs, and intelligence.

In the tactical section the officers will study tactics and related techniques and combined arms. The Weapons section will include all infantry weapons and technique of fire. The Automovtive section will consist of automotive maintenance and inspections, and the Communications section will comprise signal communication.

It has been emphasized that this new method of obtaining commissions is definitely not limited to men of the first three pay grades. Requirements for the reserve commissions, which the men receive before they enter the school are considered exceptionally easy, and the commissions are open to a men meeting them regardless of their present rank, whether recruit, master sergeant or warrant officer.

According to advance information received from the Department of the Army, men with the following qualifications are specifically eligible for appointment as second lieutenants in the organized Reserve corps if they agree to go on extended active duty for at least two years following their appointment:

1. Military experience: At least one year's active service in any of the armed forces of the United States (army, navy, marine corps, coast guard or air force) during the period from Dec. 7, 1941 to June 30, 1947, who have been separated or are eligible for separation under honorable conditions.

2. Educational requirement: Applicants must have completed two years, one-half of the normal four year course for a baccalaureate degree, at a nationally accredited college or university and not be due to attend a college or university at the time of expected entry on extended active duty. The decoration is the highest U S. medal authorized a foreigner. President Truman's signed citation accompanying the medal read:

"The President of the United States, authorized by Act of Congress July 20, 1942, has awarded the Legion of Merit, Degree of Commander, to General Miguel Sanjuan, Colombian army, for exceptionally meretorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services:

His friendliness and cooperation have further strengthened the traditional bonds of friendship between Colombia and the United States"

Standing behind General Sanjuan as General Burress presented the medal were high ranking officers of the Infantry Center and members of the Colombian army. Representing Fort Benning were Brig. Gen. Joseph S. Bradley, recently named assistant commandant of

The method of application for the reserve commissions has been outlined in the advance information received at Fort Benning. The procedure is as follows:

1. Physical examination. A completed WD AGO Form 63 must accompany each application. All army personnel and installations involved in conducting physical examinations will give any applicant who requests a physical examination, as prescribed above, such an examination, and will forward the completed report of physical examination direct to the individual concerned with the least practicable delay. This examination may likewise be given at a recruiting service installation where exams are accomplished on a fee basis.

2 Application: Interested individuals will be furnished copies of the circular pertaining to this new plan and the required blank forms Prior to forwarding, the applicable requirements listed below will be used as a check list to insure completeness. The following documents constitute the complete application:

(2) Plain sheets of paper, attached to the application, may be used for inclusion of additional information for which there is insufficient room on the application form.

(The information in this article has been taken from a circular, the number of which is as yet unavailable.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding the Infantry Center, has directed that all enlisted men be acquainted with this program, and that qualified individuals be assisted in all manner possible so that applications will be processed expeditiously to this headquarters."

Applicants for reserve commissions who are not on active duty may receive the necessary forms at the U. S. army and U. S. airforce recruiting main station, 10th street and Broadway, Columbus, or by applying to the commanding officer of the nearest army or airforce recruiting district headquarters.

In the orders received at the Infantry School, from which this information was procured, the Secretary of the Army announced the following planning dates for the opening courses at branch schools:

1. To commence on or about Dec. 1, 1948 (The provisional officers course at Fort Benning is scheduled to start Dec. 3.)

2. Student officers arrive at the school on or about Nov. 28.

3. Volunteers complete screening procedures not later than Nov. 20.

In his indorsement of these orders, Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, r., Third army commander, ordered "action to be taken by all concerned at the proper time to acquaint qualified applicants with the provisions of this program."

Having met the requirements, filled out the forms and been accepted as a second lieutenant in the reserve, the new officer immediately starts his active duty by enrolling in his branch school for 12 weeks. He is advised, however, not to purchase any uniforms until he passes his final type physical at the school, for it is then that he will receive his $250 clothing allowance. It has been suggested that the student officer take only such toilet articles and personal clothing as he deserves.

While on active duty, which includes the time he is in school ing as he desires.

the student receives the pay and allowance of a second lieutenant in the regular army. Base pay of a second lieutenant with no dependents is $180 a month, plus $21 subsistence allowance. In addition to his $180 base pay, a second lieutenant with dependents is paid $50 for rental allowance and $42 for subsistence allowance monthly. If the new lieutenant had prior service in the armed forces he also receives five percent of his base pay for each period of three years of service the Infantry School; Col. John C. Blizzard, Jr., chief of staff of the Infantry Center, and Col. Walter Johnson, G-3 of the Infantry Center..

Representing the Colombian army were General Francisco C. Tomayo, Colombian military attache in Washington, Lt Col. Guillermo R. Otalora and Maj Ivan Berrio Jaramillo. The latter two Columbian officers accompanied General Sanjuan on his visit to various army installations and other points of interest in this country.

A few minutes before receiving his decoration, General Sanjuan inspected a guard of honor composed of men of the 325th Infantry regimental combat team. Commanded by Lt. Col. Erwin O. Gibson, commander of the Second Battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment, and consisted of two companies of the Second battalion, Battery A of the 319th Field Artillery battalion, a platoon of tanks of the 756th Tank battalion and the 72nd Army band. The artillery had fired a 19-gun salute to the four-starred Colombian general as he descended from his plane.

Thursday morning General Sanjuan conferred with General Burress, Brig. Gen Whittield P. Shepard, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and Col. Lloyd D. Brown, coordinator of training, after which he toured the Airborne section.

In the afternoon he observed a firing demonstration of an infantry battalion in the attack of a fortified position. Thursday night he was guest of honor at a formal dinner given by General Burress at the Officers' club.

Friday morning General Sanjuan was at Hook range to view an infantry firepower demonstration presented by the Academic department. He saw an infantry battalion in a defensive problem in the afternoon.

General Sanjuan and his party left Saturday morning by plane for New Orleans, La., and after a short visit there left for Brookley airforce base, Mobile, Ala., prior to returning to Colombia.

The group of Colombians had arrived in Washington, D. C. Oct. 15, and after a conference with Chief of Staff Gen. Omar N. Bradley, General Sanjuan left for Detroit, Mich., to visit the Detroit Tank arsenal and Ford Motor company. Other stops on his itinerary included the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., New York City and the U. S. Military academy at West Point, N. Y. The Colombians had also observed part of Operation Combine before coming to Fort Benning.

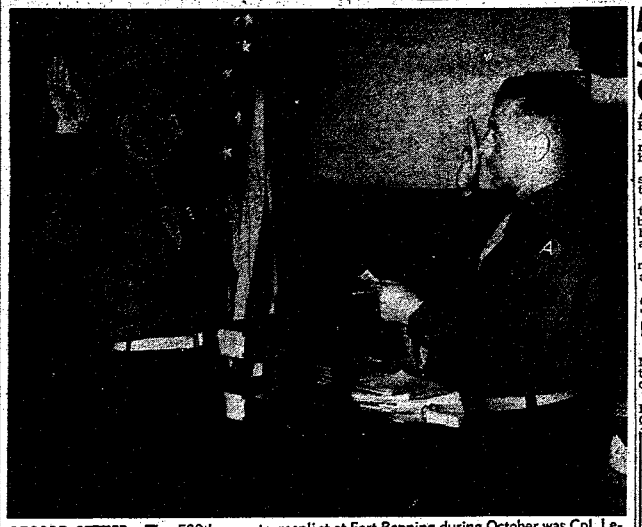
Army Transport To Be Named For Gen. Patch



Cerenomies for naming the U. S. army transport General Alexander M. Patch, with Mrs. Patch and high army officials in attendance, were held at Pier 4, New York port of embarkation, at 2 p m., Friday, Oct. 29.

The General Alexander M. Patch is one of six Transportation corps ships renamed in honor of distinguished general officers who died during World War II. It was formerly the navy troopship Admiral R. E. Coontz which for an appreciable period during World War II transported army personnel on army schedules.

General Patch commanded the American division at Guadalcanal in 1942 in the first offensive action by U. S. troops against the Japanese in the Pacific. In 1944 he was commanding general of the Seventh army which landed Aug. 15 in southern France. The Seventh army later joined with troops pushing east from Normandy, and raced on across France and Germany. At the time of his death in 1945, General Patch was commanding general of the Fourth army at San Antonio, Tex.

The USAT General Alexander M. Patch is one of the largest army transports. It is a P-2 type vessel with an overall length of 608 feet, gross tonnage of 17,000 tons and will carry approximately 450 passengers in the cabin class and 1,150 in the troop class.

The ship has been undergoing reconversion for peacetime use at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company yards. After her trial runs the vessel will be placed in service between the New York port of embarkation and Bremmerhaven.

Hospital Says Stork Working Overtime Here

A new kind of record was set at Fort Benning during October.

Station hospital officials have revealed that a grand total of 107 babies were delivered last month.

The previous record had been set in January, 1947, with a total to 103 births recorded.

A near record was set in September when 101 babies were born. The two-month total were births, which is also a new record according to hospital officials.

Indications are that November may see the record shattered once again, hospital attaches said.

Sgt. Warney A. Johnson Promoted on October 21

Sgt. Warney A. Johnson, 30th Medical group, was promoted to the grade of sergeant first class on Oct. 21, it has been announced.

Also promoted Oct. 21 were Pfcs. Billy C. Cash and Louis J. Cohen, to the grade of corporal.

First Cavalry Plans Reunion

More than 1,000 veterans of the First Cavalry division are expected to attend the first reunion of the division to be held Nov. 8-9 at El Paso, Tex., following the three-day Fort Bliss Centennial, it has been announced.

The history of the division, now on occupation duty in Japan dates back to its organization on Aug. 31, 1921 at Fort Bliss, Tex., under the command of Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze. For the next 20 years it was stationed along the Mexican border, and in 1940 participated in two maneuvers, east Texas and western Louisiana. In September, 1941, it took part in Third army maneuvers in Louisiana.

After further Louisiana maneuvers in 1942, the First Cavalry was organized under an infantry division table of organization although it retained its identity as a cavalry unit. It left this country for the Pacific in June, 1943, and participated in the campaigns of New Guinea and Bismark Archipelago and aided in the liberation of the southern Philippines and Luzon.

The division holds the distinguished record of being one of the first American units of division size to enter Manila in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's liberation campaign and to enter Tokyo following the capitulation of Japan in August, 1945.

Strictly Editorializing

Fort Benning, in our opinion, is one of the most beautiful army installations anywhere, but it didn't "just get that way." On the contrary, it took a lot of hard work and a careful planning on the part of those responsible for its beauty. And it won't stay that way without a great deal of effort on the part of those who live on the post.

Officers and enlisted men, who have quarters on the reservation, should feel as much pride in seeing to it that their lawns and gardens are well-kept and neat as they would if the quarters actually belonged to them. For the most part, this is done. However, there are cases of neglect. All the implements for improving the looks of the grounds surrounding quarters are available free so we can see no excuse for not mowing grass or policing yards.

* * * *

We would like to throw a bouquet to the office of the coordinator of training for its wholehearted cooperation during the past few weeks with the public information office, particularly in the case of the officer procurement plan. The Bayonet, because of this cooperation, was able to "scoop" all other publications, including Army Times, which has representatives in Washington, by two days. For this we are deeply indebted to Lt. Col. Kenneth A. Ward.

On the front page of this issue is a followup story on the procurement plan, with as complete and as official information as can be found anywhere at Fort Benning at this time. We are sure that the enlisted men interested in this new program will join us in saying, Thank you, Colonel Ward!

'Buddy' Assignments

Critics of the army can no longer truthfully say there is no humaneness among the policy makers! We have proof otherwise.

According to a letter from Secretary Kenneth C. Royall to all army commanders and service school commandants, a "buddy" assignment system will be inaugurated to insure, insofar as possible, that men with "similar interests who indicate a strong desire to serve in the same area or installation" will be allowed to do so. This, we believe, will do much to improve the morale of the enlisted man. For it will prevent the breaking up of fast friendships which are so easily formed among men in uniform. This, we also believe, will shatter any argument advanced by army opponents that the army is without "heart" in that it cares nothing for the feelings of an individual.

This term "buddy," which is used by army men in place of friend, came into widespread use on a semi-official basis during the war years when some combat unit commanders used a plan which, in some ways, was similar to the one now being advocated by the army. Under the wartime system, two men would be assigned to a so-called buddy team, with the idea that they were to look after the welfare of each other. In some respects, this was an excellent plan; in others it was ineffectual. Oftentimes, the two men had personality makeups so opposed to each other, that under no circumstances could they feel any bond of friendship. This new plan, however, provided it is used by all echelons, should prove vastly beneficial to the army establishment.

The individual replacement system, which has been used heretofore, often results in the formation of needles antipathy toward the army. This is especially true in the case of the younger men now coming into the army, many of whom innocently think they will be able to remain with men from their own community throughout their enlistment. This resentment and disappointment can be avoided, according to Mr. Royall, with a little consideration on the part of processing personnel and unit commanders. And we agree with Mr. Royall one hundred percent.

We realize, of course, that it is often impossible, in view of the shortage of specialists, to make this an inflexible policy. There are bound to be many cases when friends will be separated even though their commanders would like to keep them together. Nevertheless, there will be many more times when a limited implementation of the buddy system will be not only be possible but wise.

We are not advocating a policy of pampering the soldier. Soldiers are men, not babies, and, for the most part, do not expect to be pampered. They do, nevertheless, expect to be shown consideration, and the buddy system is, to our way of thinking, concrete evidence that the army intends to do just that.

When the soldier is happy, he does a better job. And it's natural that when he and his "buddy" are in the same outfit, or at the same installation, he will be a better soldier. It stands to reason that the better the soldier, the better the army. And that should be the desire of every career soldier, be he officer or enlisted man.

Chaplain's Corner..

"WHAT SHALL I DO WITH MY LIFE?"

BY CHAPLAIN R. O. KIRSH

By Chaplain R. O. Kirsh

There are many things in our lives which are given, determined, unchosen, unwilled. We inherit through bodily nature much that makes us what we are: the color of our eyes and hair, our brains, even what we call our temperament. Whether we are bright or dull, comely or homely, quick or slow, is not a matter of our choosing. And there is much else given besides this bodily inheritance. We did not choose where we were born or reared, nor did we decide the time in which we would live, nor the limitations and opportunities and demands which these times bring with them. All these were simply given to us.

But that is never the truth about us. Our mysterious freedom remains, our power to stand apart and look at ourselves and our situation and to decide what we shall do with our lives. Therefore, there is always pressing in upon us the question, "What shall I do with what has been given me? What shall I do with it today or tomorrow, or in the years ahead?" And this question follows us as long as we live. Always all our little human plans are conditioned by what is given: the time, the abilities, the opportunities, the relationships, the claims on us.

Of course, there are many possible answers we can give to this inescapable question. We can refuse to take responsibility and seek to evade decisions. We can drift and dream. There is that in most of us which would try to avoid decision, for decision is always hazardous. And the possibility is that we shall try to shape our lives according to one of the crude patterns which the life around us presents. "I'll watch the openings and when they come I'll push myself ahead. I'll use my power and I'll use other people to get to the top. People who give this answer make history and it is often called success. But the history they make is ugly, and few of us admire it.

The Christian faith certainly includes and makes much of the basic insight into our human nature and situation. They are set before us in that ancient story of Creation in the Book of Genesis. Man is a creature, fashioned out of the stuff of nature. But he is also one into whom a free spirit is breathed by God. He is made in the divine image. This world is God's world. It issued, it issues constantly from the purpose of God. It did not simply come from God once upon a time. It is given and sustained by Him day after day, year after year, century after century.

DEAR BABY

"Dear Baby" is William Saroyan at his most Saroyanish. That, in our opinion, is bad—or at least, not too good. Perhaps we're just not capable of appreciating the Saroyan genius, but we never could work up any lather of enthusiasm for any of his work. The critics raved about "The Time of Your Life", but as far as we were concerned it was simply a series of vaudeville skits held loosely together by an unbelievable character. It was a play without a beginning or an end.

The same thing might be said about the short stories—we use the term quite loosely—that make up the collection "Dear Baby". These twenty sketches are certainly not "stories" in the Saturday Evening Post sense of the word. They have no beginning, no ending, and very little middle. The answer to that, of course, is that they were never intended for the Saturday Evening Post. They were written for and published in such magazines as "The Little Man", "The Yale Review", "Vogue", "Harper's Bazar," "Transition," "The Atlantic Monthly, and—this we find hard to believe—"Collier's". Most of these magazines — we don't understand about "Collier's" — go in for pictures from life, and seem to care very little whether anything happens or not. Nothing happens in the Saroyan stories. At least, we don't think anything does, though we'd hate to have to swear to it. There is possibly some very subtle change which we should be able to see, if we'd just get our minds fixed right. After reading these stories we're sure that someone's mind is "fixed" all right—the author's, or ours, or possibly both.

The title story in the collection "Dear Baby", is a rather poignant study of a prizefighter who has lost his wife and is haunted by a phonograph record. This seems to us the most sensible of the stories, and is possibly the one that "Collier's" used.

"The Hummingbird that Lived Through the Winter" is, we think, about a hummingbird that lived through the winter. We're trying to decide whether hummingbirds could possibly symbolize Russia, or the atom bomb, or the high cost of living, or something like that. There must be some reason for the story.

"The Stolen Bicycle" is so simple that we know we must have missed its meaning entirely.

"Knife-like, Flower-like, Like Nothing at All in the World" concerns a middle aged woman, with grown children, who is preparing to marry a sixteen-year-old boy. We haven't the faintest idea what the title means.

"The Dream" is a character study of a frustrated woman, and we think would be more appropriately called "The Night-mare".

Your Red Cross

BY MURRAY E. HILL

Once, perhaps a long time ago, an individual came up with bright saying, "Do right and fear no man, don't write and fear no woman."

I am sure that individual would quickly change his mind if he sat behind the Red Cross field director's desk for one month.

I was prompted in writing this column today by three letters in the morning mail and two wires received. One of these letters was from a soldier's sister, asking that we contact her brother and urge him to write her mother. She said, "He has not written my mother for a long, long time, and she is quite sick and very worried about him."

The other two letters were from mothers along the same lines. One said, "I am very much worried about my son for he used to write so regularly; yet in spite of all the letters I have written him, I have not heard from him in two months."

The other mother was distressed because she had not heard from her son since his transfer here from Brookley field. Her letters to him had been returned because she was compelled to write him just as Fort Benning, not having any real address.

The wires were just as urgent. They were from our Red Cross chapters, of course. Families had contacted them wanting health and welfare reports and some word from the soldiers.

This office had approximately 1,200 cases last month. Out of the 1,200, nearly 175 were requests concerning health and welfare reports. This is on the increase, a very definite indication that peace time soldiers are not as constant letter writers as soldiers during the war. Nevertheless, the interest of the family in the soldier is just as keen.

This office urges commanding officers to remind their men from time to time to write home. We certainly urge that you consider writing home with a certain degree of frequency, not every day perhaps, but each week, or a couple of times a month. It takes little time and keeps the folks back home posted as to how you are getting along and where you are.

This last is indeed important for a considerable number of our 350 emergency messages each month entail difficulty in locating the soldier, when death or serious illness occurs at home, because of his failure to keep the folks back home posted on his transfer from one camp to another or from one outfit to another.

How about making this a letter writing week and getting that letter off to-night that we have been promising for some time?

Italy Presents Statue to Army Signal Corps

The Italian government has presented the Signal corps with a bronze statuette for a medical film judged best in its class at the recent Cinematographic Art Exhibit at Venice.

Produced by the Signal corps for the surgeon general, the motion picture is largely a microscopic study of, and is entitled, "Schistosomiasis," primarily a tropical disease caused by blood flukes, or flat worms. The film is available for showing to members of the medical profession.

The trophy was presented by Lt. Col. Umberto de Martino, military attache of the Italian embassy and was accepted by Maj. Gen. Spencer B. Akin, chief signal officer of the army.

In accepting the award, General Akin said he welcomed recognition given this particular film because "it helps to demonstrate how the military establishment can contribute to the peaceful progress of mankind. The film is one of many we are making on medical subjects for the surgeon general, who in turn is sponsoring their use by the medical profession."

General Akin also noted that "this film demonstrates the value of cooperation," pointing out that it was made with the assistance of the surgeon general, the Corps of Engineers, the Navy department, private medical laboratories, and with extracts of Japanese film.

Centaurs Outplay Doughboy Eleven

Jackson Comes To Post Sunday

Displaying a reversal of defensive might, the luckless Fort Benning Doughboys held a power-driven Fort Riley grid machine to a 13-6 score on the quaggy field of the Kansas army post last Friday night.

A gathering of 5,000 fans sat through a driving rain and high wind to watch their Centaurs avenge losses to the Doughboys in 1946 and 1947.

The fourth - period touchdown drive, sparked by backs Don Sult, Lawrence Brennan and Bob Hollingsworth, kept the Benning eleven from being blanked for the fourth time this season, but wasn't enough to overcome the margin posted by Fort Riley on first and third - quarter scores.

JINX LICKED

By penetrating the Centaur end zone in the waning moments of the game, the Doughs licked a scored-on complex which has jinxed them in all of their setbacks this season. Only in their 20-6 triumph over the Eglin field, Fla., Eagles were the Doughboys able to put a dent in the scoring column.

The Centaur offensive game was punctuated by the performance of Stephen Reid, sensational triple threat halfback, who broke a scoreless deadlock with a 14-yard dash to pay dirt in the first period.

After each squad had taken a fling on the offensive, the Centaurs took possession of the ball on their own 15 - yard stripe, and, in sustained drive, marched it down to the Dough 14-yard marker from where Reid went over for the score. A bad pass from center forced Reid, who was slated to hold for the extra-point kick, to reel off another 14-yard run for the conversion tally.

The remainder of the first half was a see-saw affair with the Doughs and the Centaurs splitting possession of the leather.

Although a steady drizzle throughout the first half had made the ball slippery, the pigskin became more elusive than ever after a torrential downpour moved in on the Kansas army post during the halftime intermission. After the skies opened up, a dry ball was put into play following each scrimmage, and numerous fumbles were committed by each team.

When play was resumed in the third period, the Doughs began to move, but after picking up 11 yards on three plays, the Benningites yielded the ball to Riley on a backfield bobble which eventually cost them six points. Taking over on the Doughboy 41 - yard stripe, the Centaurs needed only four plays to send Bud Lewis, a reserve halfback, crashing into the end zone from the seven-yard marker. The attempt for the point after touchdown was blocked.

DOUGHS RALLY

After battling the Centaurs on even terms throughout the remainder of the third quarter and most of the final period, the Doughboys started their touchdown march after a 45-yard kick by the Kansans had given the local lads possession of the pigskin on the 17-yard line in Benning territory.

With four minutes left to play, Sult and Brennan shared ground-gaining chores, and, on two successive first downs, moved the ball to the Centaur 34-yard line. It remained, however, for pile-driving Hollingsworth to slither over right tackle for the touchdown. Although hit hard on the Riley three-yard line by the Centaur safety man, Hollingsworth made a headlong dive toward pay dirt which carried him over the Kansans' goal line.

With the march of time gradually sandtinging out their chances of pulling the game out of the fire, the Doughs took the ball again on their own 27-yard line, and appeared to be on their way to another touchdown. However, two long gains which would have put the Benningites in the shadow of the Riley goal post were nullified by penalties.

GROUND GAINS EVEN

Yardage picked up along the ground by the two clubs was fairly evenly divided with the Centaurs breaking through for a total of 132 yards while the Doughs reeled off 130 yards. In first downs, however, the Doughboys outnumbered eight to four.

Due to the slippery surface of the ball, only four passing efforts were made by each squad. The Doughs failed to connect on any of their aerial efforts, but the Centaurs completed two pitches for a total gain of 37 yards.

JACKSON NEXT

The Doughs' next opportunity to do something about the way things are going will come next Sunday afternoon when an army eleven from Fort Jackson, S. C., moves into Doughboy stadium. Game time is 2 p. m.

According to scouting reports, the tussle with the Jacksonites will be rated a toss-up. In last year's Benning - Jackson foray, the Doughboys swamped the South Carolinians 68-0.

Head Coach Joe Shepherd started putting his Doughboy charges through their pre-game preps early this week in an effort to have his squad in top shape for the tiff Sunday. A light workout was held on Monday, and heavy scrimmaging done on Tuesday and Wednesday. Although practice sessions were slated to continue through Saturday, the Doughmentor will start decreasing the intensity of his drills this afternoon.

A sell-out crowd was expected for Sunday's contest, which is being played for the benefit of the community chest fund.

At present Coach Shepherd has several players on the partially disabled list with infected burns, similar to these sustained during the Doughboy-Parris Island game at the South Carolina marine base. However, he expects to have most of the victims doctored up enough to perform full assignments against the Jacksonites. Although the cause of the burns could not be definitely determined, Shepherd believes that they can be traced to the fine substance used in marking off the gridirons at Fort Riley and Parris Island.

Sunday's tilt will be a one-week stand for the Doughs who will pack their grips for a trip to Jacksonville and a fracas with the air gobs the following week.

Illini Court Practice

Illinois' basketball team, bolstered by nine lettermen from the squad which finished third in the Big Nine court circuit last year, has started practice for a 22-game schedule with the opener at Butler university on Dec. 2.

MIGHTY MITE . . . Although he is by far the smallest player along the Bullet forward wall, center Odell Kennedy proved in a recent game with the Atlanta, Ga., Panthers that diminutiveness is no barrier. Not content with playing a bang-up defensive game, Kennedy added color to his performance in the third period of the game by gathering in an enemy pass and reeling off a runback of 11 yards. Kennedy, in the midst of his second year as a member of the Bullet squad, plans to enter Allen university in his home town of Columbia, S. C., after separation from the service.

WYNN REMAINS ON FEET IN FIGHT WITH JOE LOUIS

Versatile Merritt Wynn of the 999th Field Artillery battalion this week can boast that he is one of few fighters ever to enter the squared circle with world's heavyweight champ Joe Louis and stay on his feet until the finish.

Wynn, coach of the intra-mural boxing delegation from the Sand hill area, chalked up his feat at Heraldon Memorial stadium in Atlanta, Ga., last Sunday night in a three-round, pitty-pat affair with the heavyweight titlist.

Aside from losing his mouthpiece as the result of several stiff Louis blows during the first round of the three-period battle, Wynn suffered no ill effects from his scrap with the champ. However, Bob Garner, a young heavyweight hopeful from Louisville, Ky., wasn't quite as lucky as Wynn. In another feature bout of the program, Garner did some fancy side-stepping, bobbing and weaving, but collected a slight cut over his upper lip as a souvenir of his go with Louis.

Some 8,000 fans saw the heavyweight title holder enter the ring twice bearing a well-fed and portly appearance around the midriff. But his obesity didn't keep the fans from giving Louis a roaring ovation when he entered the ring.

In addition to the bouts featuring the champ, decision contests were fought by members of the 99th-25th boxing team. Scrappers taking part on the program were Walter Mason, Al Ellis, Jake Williams, Lester Holt, Clifford Wilburn, Wilbert Wilson, Hank Crowell, Ernest Brown, Jimmie Brown, Jules Chatman, Bill Clark and John Cunningham.

Artillerymen Start Basketball Classic

Starting Tuesday afternoon at the Simstown recreation building, units of the 999th Field Artillery battalion will engage in a round-robin basketball series.

Playing under national intercollegiate association rules, the respective limiters will be allowed two losses before being eliminated.

Selected for action are Headquarters, A, B, C, and Service batteries. An award will be made to the winning team.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

Last wekend's collegiate gridiron battles tentatively settled some important matters, and, barring any disastrous upsets, should paint a fairly accurate picture of the final outcome of the 1948 campaign.

Probably the most significant happening in last week's turf warfare was the 21-7 Northwestern triumph over Ohio State. The victory over the Buckeyes made the distance between Evanston, Ill., and Pasadena, Calif., much shorter for Bobby Voigts' Wildcats, and we won't hesitate to predict now that they'll be making a trip out to the coast about New Year's day.

Every indication points to California's Golden Bears as the likely host for the Rose Bowl classic this year, but Oregon's Ducks, still unbeaten in conference play, aren't out of the picture yet. Too bad the West Coast schedule doesn't map a Duck-Bear meeting this season.

Aside from the bearing last weeknd's skirmishes had on Rose bowl possibilities, they saw the major unbeaten teams of the nation keep their slates unblemished. Michigan, Georgia Tech and a few others had some difficulty in turning back their underdog opponents, but, for the most part, the monarchs of the playing turf lived up to expectations.

It's about time now for us to make our predictions for this week's tilts. But, first let us say that our season's percentage for winner picking received a shot in the arm last week when we faltered on only two of our 29 guesses. This neat bit of prognosticating (if we do say so ourselves) gave us an average of .930 for the week, and boosted our seasonal mean to .794.

And now here are our thoughts on grid battles this weekend:

THE EAST

Army over Stanford: Marathon fashion.

Cornell over Colgate: The Big Red looks like a good bet for the remainder of the season.

Dartmouth over Columbia: Very close. An extra point may may turn the trick.

Harvard over Princeton: In another one earmarked for closeness.

Rutgers over Lafayette: By about three touchdowns. ....

Michigan over Navy: Any questions?

Penn State over Penn: But anything can happen in a battle where a high pitch of rivalry is involved.

Ohio State over Pitt: The Panthers might be surprisingly strong, but we'll say the Buckeyes by a pair of six-pointers.

Kentucky over Villanova: To the tune of about 20 points.

THE MIDWEST

Illinois over Iowa: But not too handily.

Iowa State over Drake: Easily.

Nebraska over Kansas State: In a battle for the cellar spot in the Big Seven conference.

Michigan State over Marquette: The Hilltoppers proved to Purdue's Boilermakers last week that they can't be regarded too lightly, but the Spartans are unexpectedly powerful this year.

Minnesota over Purdue: The Gophers in a close one.

Missouri over Oklahoma: Frankly, we would rather leave this one to somebody else. One thing is reasonably certain; that the winner will wear 1948 Big Seven diadem.

Northwestern over Wisconsin: Here's where Bobby Voigts' Wildcats make their Rose bowl prospects even brighter.

Oklahoma A & M over Tulsa: By a couple of touchdowns.

THE SOUTH

Mississippi State over Auburn: The cellar-bound Tigers to sink even lower.

Clemson over Furman: The Tigers to hold their spot among the unbeaten elevens of the nation.

Wake Forest over Duke: This forecast might surprise some people.

Georgia over Florida: Unless something drastic happens.

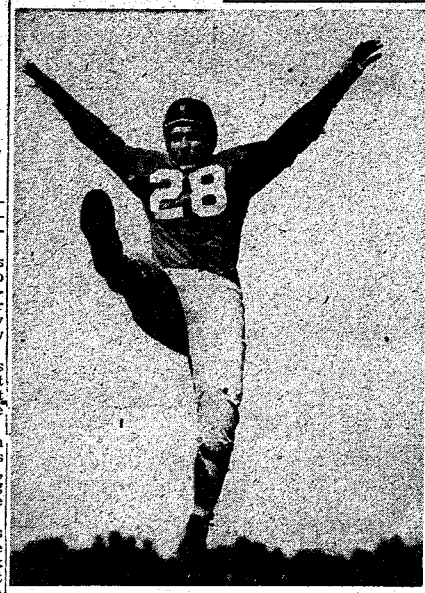
Vanderbilt over LSU: Without too much difficulty.

Mississippi over Chattanooga: With plenty to spare.

North Carolina over William and Mary: The Tar Heels to take this one handily.



North Carolina State over Virginia: Easily.

THE SOUTHWEST

Arkansas over Rice: We had to go eeny-meeny-miny-mpe on this one.

Texas over Baylor: Could be an upset.

SMU over Texas A & M: The prognosticators who picked the Mustangs to finish no better than halfway up the Southwestern conference ladder this year are about to change their tunes.

DON SULT ..... Doughboy of the Week

Halfback Sult Selected As Doughboy of Week

This week's nomination for "Doughboy of the Week" goes to the lad who comes closer to filling a triple-threat bill than anything Head Coach Joe Shepherd can put his hands on—namely Don Sult, versatile Benning left-halfback.

Although Sult's offensive and defensive efforts during last Friday night's fray at Fort Riley, Kans., were the big factors in his selection, his achievements in earlier Doughboy games this year can't be totally disregarded.

When the Memphis naval Hellcats came to Doughboy stadium to trounce the already once-beaten Doughs 27-0 on Oct. 10, it was Sult's passing and Francis Williams' aerial snagging that kept the tilt from being a complete washout. Although the Sult - to - Williams combination hasn't been so effective since the tussle with the Hellcats, master Don has chipped in with some consistent kicking which has pulled the Doughmen out of several perilous holes.

But the versatile halfback's most sparkling feats have been in the running department. Probably the gem of these was a 25 - yard touchdown sprint straight through center while the Doughs were polishing off the Eglin field, Fla., Eagles 20 - 6 in a Doughboy stadium game on Oct. 17.

One of the few Doughboy holdovers from last season, Sult also was an important part of the powerful Benning grid mechanism which ran up a string of 17 triumphs during 1945, 1946 and 1947.

Sult, who packs only 158 pounds on a six-foot frame, hails from Cushing, Okla., where he played high school ball before entering the service.

Wyatt Captures Singles Diadem In Table Tennis

John Wyatt, whose sports repertoire also includes football, baseball and softball, took over a reign as table tennis champ of Fort Benning Monday night when he defeated Calvin Gray in a five-game series.

Paddle weilders of Company H, the Airborne battalion, made the tourney finals a one-unit affair. Both Wyatt and Gray as well as their doubles colleagues, John Booge and Paul Markland, represented Company H.

In notching his finals victory, Wyatt had to carry this opponent the fullefive games to chalk up three decisions in his favor. Wyatt dropped the first two games of the series on 17-21 and 19-21 counts, but came back to even the score with verdicts of 21-15 and 21-17 in the next two contests. The new champ then took the decisive tilt by a 28-26 tally.

Teamed with Booge for the doubles classic, Wyatt and his colleague dropped the initial contest to Gray and Mackland 16-21, but captured the next three games on readings of 21-18, 21-14 and 21-10.

All four of the local tourney finalists, plus H. D. Parker of Army Field Forces board No. 3, will represent the post in the Third army table tennis classics to be held here on Nov. 16, 17 and 18. Markland has been named to manage the Benning delegation.

Sand Hill Crew To Play Tigers

By BOB PHILLIPS

Idle last weekend because of cancellation of a scheduled game with the Atlanta Panthers at Memorial stadium, the post Bullet gridsters have turned to hotly-contested daily scrimmages to ready themselves for Saturday's gridiron encounter with the semi-pro Atlanta Tigers in the capitol city.

In the daily practice battles, some long-hidden talent among Coach Stacey Hoffman's quartet of pony backs has been revealed. The foursome includes quarterback Ernest Sims, pint-sized Ed Monroe, fast-stepping Vern Boswell and line-plunging Gene Bush.

The showings of the quartet of frisky seatbacks, none of whom could raise the scales to more than 145 pounds or lift the measuring bar higher than five feet, five inches, have highlighted the offensive drive of the team's intra-squad tussles. Not only have the lads come through with some sensational breakaway running, but have been passing and kicking with spectacular accuracy.

Bill (Flash) Wilson, Bullet kicking specialist, received special praise from the coaching staff for his long-distance punting, and his consistency in toeing the oval straight through the uprights on extra-point efforts.

Ends Ben Ashford, Roy Whitehurst, Jimmie Pembrook, Gene Thomas and Leon Smith have been working flawlessly on the flanks while the line-pluggers, reinforced by the return of big Bob Willis, have been tackling and charging savagely. From all appearances, the line will be tough for the Tigers to crack Saturday.

With the exception of guard Matt Batie, who has been nursing a banged-up ankle for the past two weeks, the squad is in top physical condition for this week's engagement. Despite the roughness of the daily scrimmages, no injuries have been sustained, and the Bullets, currently in the red on a three-lost, one-won record, count this a major factor for trying to better their season's tally at the expense of the Atlantans.

IT'S GOOD . . . Robert Jordanhazy, extreme left, of the base S-3 sinks a free throw in the fourth game of the Lawson field intra-mural basketball league. In a fast game, the S-3 team triumphed over the S-4 quintet by a 31-24 score. Eleven more games are scheduled for the league with trophies to be awarded to the first and second place teams. Outstanding players from teams entered in the league also will be chosen to represent the airforce base in the forthcoming post intra-mural circuit.

Match Contests Start For Club Turkey Classic

Seven flights of 15 men each have been made up, and match play in the Fort Benning Golf and Country Club's annual turkey tournament got under way on the local course this week.

The 105 golfers who qualified for the meet have until Sunday night to play their first round matches. Pairings may be obtained by calling pro Frank Goss at the country club.

Nine chickens and seven Thanksgiving turkeys are at stake in the tourney. The winner of each of the seven flights will receive a turkey, and chickens will go to the runner-up in each bracket and to the low gross and net medalists.

A round of 76 gave John Henion claim to the low gross medalist honors, but the long-knocking linksman was awarded only a two-stroke handicap. Two golfers, W. G. Springer and F. A. Blake, were deadlocked for low net honors with a tally of 68. Springer was given the benefit of a 15-stroke handicap, and Blake was permitted to deduct 14 strokes from his gross score of 82.

Handicaps also will be used in playing the matches with each contestant to be allowed three-fourths of his total handicap strokes.

Following completion of the first-round matches, the winning contestants will be paired for the second round of play which is to be finished prior to Nov. 14. The semi-finals will be played during the week Nov. 15 - Nov. 20, and the finals matches may be played either on Nov. 20 or Nov. 21.

Soldier Rates Reduced For Stock Car Finale

Reduction in admission prices to the season's stock car racing finale next Sunday for Fort Benning military personnel has been announced by Harold Hill, sponsor of the races to be held on the Columbus speedway, eight miles north of the city on the Warm Springs road.

The tickets, which are being offered at one-third of the gate price of three dollars, may be obtained at Headquarters, First battalion, 325th Infantry regiment. The battalion also is furnishing transportation to and from the speedway for post military personnel.

Prison Clan Nips 328th Eleven 18-0

In their third outing of the 1948 season, gridders of the 328th Ordnance battalion journeyed to Speigner, Ala., Sunday afternoon to take an 18-0 trouncing by the pigskin representatives of Draper prison.

The meeting was the second of the season between the local ordnance and the prison crew. In the other tilt, the season's opener for the 328th, the local lads battled the Alabamans to a 6-6 deadlock.

Draper's first score in Sunday's contest came during the first quarter on a long pass.

Another pass play during the second period gave the Alabama prisoners another six tallies, and the final half-dozen counters were chalked up on a plunge into the end zone from the ordnance one-yard line.

Labeled outstanding for the ordnance team both on offensive and defense during the tussle with the Draper eleven was Ed Gravely. In addition to making some sensational ground gains against the prisoners, Gravely also turned in some brilliant tackles.

Fullback Leonard Zanowicz was credited with the top blocking performance of the game for the ordnancemen, and diminutive William Kantak displayed unusual endurance by holding down his assignment throughout the game. Kantak is the smallest player on the 328th squad.

A severe blow was struck in the third period of the contest when Jack Shackelford, first string center for the ordnance eleven, was injured making a tackle. Following the mishap, Shackelford was taken to the Maxwell field, Ala., base hospital where his ailment was diagnosed as a neck injury. Full details on his condition were not disclosed.

HE'S THE TANK! MURPHY . . . Bullet Grid Hero

Bullet Gridiron Laurels Shared By Rugged Pair

Linemen Bob (The Tank) Murphy and Odell Kennedy were unanimously chosen "Bullet Gridiron Heroes of the Week" by the coaching staff of the Sand hill eleven following their top-flight performances against the Atlanta, Ga., Panthers in a recent tussle.

Although the game resulted in a 60 decision for the Atlantans, the gallant defensive play of the two rugged linemen was a big factor in checking the Panther ground-gaining at 137 yards while the Bullets were rolling up a total of 185 yards along the suface. The soldier eleven also outdid the Panthers in the first-down department, chalking up 14 while the Atlantans amassed only six.

Rugged, 216- pound Murphy, who acquired his nickname through his oversized frame, hails form Steelton, Pa., and is putting in his second year as a member of the Bullet crew.

More than once during the Bullet-Panther tussle, Murphy who employs an effective method of hurling his huge frame through the air to haul down opposing ball-carriers, created havoc in the Atlanta backfield.

Kennedy, who also is playing his second year with the Bullets, is by far the smallest player on the Sand hill front wall. But he has shown this year that he is as much of a defensive powerhouse as his larger teammates.

The scrappy little pivoter added more color to his already outstanding performance against the Panthers when, in the third period, he gathered in an enemy-pass, and gave the backs a lesson in running by swivel-hipping 11 yards.

Murphy, a gurad, is a member of Company H of the 25th Infantry regiment, and Kennedy is assigned to the 204th Transportation Truck battalion.

Initial Pigskin Clash Yielded By Midgets

Encounter Planned Saturday With City School Delegation

Battling against weight and experience odds, Fort Benning's midget Doughboys were overpowered 52-33 by the Columbus junior highschool eleven in their first grid outing of the season on the city's Lake Bottom field last Saturday.

Despite Saturday's trouncing, Coach Don Britt and his charges refused to let their spirits be dampened. The Dough midget mentor expressed satisfaction at the showing made by his lads against the city gridders, who were somewhat older than the scrappy post youngsters.

Another count favoring the Columbus eleven wat the fact that they had seven contests behind them before taking the field Saturday.

Early in the game, the Columbus backs detected a marked defensive weakness on the Dough midget flanks, and cashed in on it. All eight of the city squad's touchdowns were posted on end runs which caught the local outpost sentinels off guard.

The scrappy aggregation of Doughboy midgets, however, did their share of brilliant running and blocking in the contest.

The longest gain of the morning for either team was reeled off by right halfback Richard Bauguss, the midgets kicking and passing expert, who returned a Columbus kickoff 85 yards.

In additions to the touchdowns made by Ruff and Bauguss, six-pointers were racked up by Doucet, Bill Luther and Joe Koebeck. Extra points were made by Doucet, Ruff and Koebeck.

Doucet probably was the outstanding offensive midget player of the game while defensive laurels were shared by tackles Hal Wilson and Bob Maurer, guards Ronnie Torrence and Robert Blandford, and center Mack Hardin.

With Saturday's game under their belts, the Dough midgets will be out to put a depression in the win column next Saturday morning when they meet the 16th Street school youngsters on Lake Bottom field at 10 a.m.

Although Coach Britt rates this week's contest as a loss-up, he has a lot of respect for the tutoring abilities of Coach Hinton Mixson, a former all-state halfback from Columbus.

Workouts for the Dough youngsters were resumed on Monday in preparation for Saturday's fray with the city school eleven, and Coach Britt has made two switches in his lineup in an effort to bolster the end positions. Shifted to the outposts were tackles Hal Wilson and Nick Wallace. The changeover will leave the tackle assignments to Philip Shaughnessey, Maurer and Charles Moore.

Blandford and Ruff have been named by Britt as co-captains for Saturdays game.

Bullet Courtmen Begin Workouts

Under the capable tutelage of Jafus P. Cavil, the post Bullet courtmen got down to serious training last Monday in preparation for the forthcoming intramural hoop season.

Approximately 20 young hopefuls have turned out for the opening practice sessions, and have shown a lot of hustle, class tricky ball-handling and sharp-shooting. Indications are that the Sand hill quintet will be making a strong bid for the post goat.

With the exceptions of Tommye Watford, brilliant forward, and rangy center Roland Russell, members of last year's squad, this season will see an entirely new team take to the hardwood courts. Although Bill (Pee Wee) Humphreys, a stellar holdover forward from the 1947-48 five, is present working out with the team, he has been alerted for an overseas assignment, and is expected to leave soon. Another sharpshooting forward on last season's hoop crew, Gordon Burke, is eligible for discharge this month, and is not expected to be around for the campaign opener.

Newcomers to the team include towering Leon Webb, Andy Hardy, long-reaching pivoter who starred for the Bullet five during the final stages of the 1946-47 season; Edgar Echols; Charles Boyd; Howard Williams, Charles Patrick, and Emile Domer.

Hospital Cagemen View Successful Intra-Post Season

For the first time since the war years, the Station hospital will have a basketball team to field in the forthcoming intramural cage contests. Selected to coach the medic cagemen have been Theodore Hines and Bob Mears.

Although the team has had few pratice sessions thus far, the coaches are impressed with the appearance of their timber, and believe their charges are capable of causing a lot of trouble for some of the league favorites.

More than a dozen candidates already have turned out for the team and indications are that more will be suiting up soon. The roster at present includes centers, Harold E. Dent and Soloman Oliver; guards Samuel B. Paine, Gordon T. Merrill, Theodore M. Graham, William R. Lewis and Nicholas J. Kissos; and forwards Lafayette Jennings, Charles W. Satchel, James W. Oeffler, Demosthenes Holland and Eldon A. Morrett.

ISD, Medics Pace Benning Intra-Post Bowling

By taking four points on a forfeit from Company H of the 25th Infantry regiment last Wednesday night, bowlers of the Station hospital moved into second place in the post intramural league standings behind the pace-setting pins scatterers of Company A of the Infantry School detachment.

The loop leaders retained their berth atop the 17-team heap by being inactive last week. They have taken all 12 of the points at stake in their matches while the medics have dropped only one out of a possible 12 countries.

As the third week of league activity closed, the No. 3 spot in the standings was held by the team representing Army Field Forces board No.3, which had garnered 14 of a possible 16 points.

In the individual scoring department, the average of Norbert Szymarek of the 3440th Area Service unit, who headed the "Big" Team" roster last week, slumped to 182.3, and the top spot on the roster was taken over by Robert Weaver of Company A, who has posted a game average of 184.8.

Laurels for the high game and high three-game set of the third week, however, were taken by Ewald Knuth of AFF board No. 3, who chalked up a single game of 233, and smacked over 583 pins in a trio of contests. Runner-up to Knuth was Kepler of the Airborne battalion, who posted a one-game score of 217 and a three-game tally of 579.

In last week's opener on Monday night, the Food Service school keglers, who had dropped eight consecutive points, broke into winning side of the Ledger with a four-point win over the 121st Evacuation hospital. The total pinfall for the school crew was 2,227 as compared to 2,046 for the medics.

Bowlers from AFF board No. 3 chalked up three points in another Monday match by downing Headquarters company of the 325th Infantry regiment 2,240 to 2,174. In the Monday finale, the First battalion of the 325th Infantry totaled 2,039 pins to snatch three counters from keglers of the 30th Medical group, who registered only 1,912.

All three of the matches slated for Wednesday night were forfeitures with Company, the 25th Infantry regiment, the Station hospital medics and the 756th Heavy Tank Battalion gathering four points each. The squads which failed to appear for the matches were the 999th Field Artillery battalion, Company H of the 25th Infantry and the 204th Transportation Truck battalion.

On Thursday night, the alleys delegation from AFF board No. 3 took the edge in three close games with Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th ASU, and notched four straight for their win column. The score was 2,184 to 2,121.

The Airborne battalion then took a four-point decison from the 121st Evacuation hospital by knocking over a total of 2,408 pins to 1,949 for the medics.

Winding up the week's activity, Company B of the ISD scored a three-point triumph over the Student Training regiment. The pin tally for the Company B Kegiers was 2,537 and the STR

Andres, who is to be presented a trophy for winning the tourney, took his finals match on counts of 16-21, 21-18 and 21-8 from Louis J. Cohen of the 121st Evacuation hospital.

Before the singles finals, however, Andres and his 375th Collecting company teammates, Welham Ford, were beaten in a doubles classic by Frank Armstrong and Ralph McIntosh of the group's headquarters detachment.

Other participants in the meet were Melvin Mahannah of headquarters detachment, Arnold Franklin and Walter Thomas of the 121st Evacuation hospital and Leway Cary and Henry Motley of the 375th Medical Collecting company.

Red Cross Council Established Here

Following the introduction of military guests and representatives from the Red Cross area office in Atlanta, Lt. Col. Hal Hardenbergh, on behalf of General Burres, welcomed the visitors. Colonel Hardenburgh pointed out that such a council was welcome here, stating also the importance of the Red Cross functions within the army.

Murray E. Hill, local field director, in explaining the purpose of the meeting, placed particular stress on the fact that both the Red Cross and the military at Fort Benning wanted all surrounding counties to feel that the part they play in aiding the Red Cross here is as important as that of the chapter in the immediate adjacent county.

Mrs. George Stelljes of Macon, Ga., Red Cross area chapter consultant, pointed out that communities were failing to have the opportunity of enjoying the privilege of certain Red Cross activities because of unfamiliaware of the needs of both the military and the Red Cross on a military post.

She also declared that the organization of such a council being planned not only made available Red Cross resources in the county to the field director at the post, but the council was a channeling agency for clubs, churches and associations, who were interested in helping with Red Cross work at Fort Benning.

Miss Mary E. Fortune, head recreation worker of the Red Cross at the Station hospital also gave a short talk on the proposed requests from the Red Cross at the hospital. Mrs. Ruth Bruce, executive secretary of the Muscogee county chapter, also delivered a short address.

Following Miss Fortune's report, an election of officers was held with Enoch Jacobs of Talbotton, Ga., elected chairman, Joseph Smith of Phenix City, Ala., was chosen first vice president and Ellis Ragan of Eufaula, Ala., was elected second vice chairman. Miss O'Leila Emberry of Lagrange, Ga., was given the post of executive secretary.

The group is scheduled to meet next on Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. in the Red Cross chapter building in Columbus.

Chapters sending representatives to the meeting included Stewart county, Richland, Ga.; Talbotton county, Talbotton, Ga.; Quitman county, Georgetown, Ga.; Harris county, Hamilton, Ga.; Meriwether county, Manchester, Ga.; Chattahoochee Valley, Riverview, Ala., Marion county, Buena Vista, Ga., Troup county, LaGrange, Ga.; Webster county Preston, Ga.; Chambers county LaFayette, Ga.; Barbour county, Eufaula, Ala. and Russell county, Phenix City, Ala.

Members of ORC To Get 'Drill Pay'

The Department of the Army has announced that regulations have been released to army commanders setting forth the procedures for the inactive duty training payment for officers and enlisted men of the Organized Reserve corps. As of Oct. 1 'drill pay' became a reality for the first time in army reserve history.

Based upon the funds available and the missions being assigned to units and personnel of the organized reserve, priorities for inactive duty training payment have been established as follows:

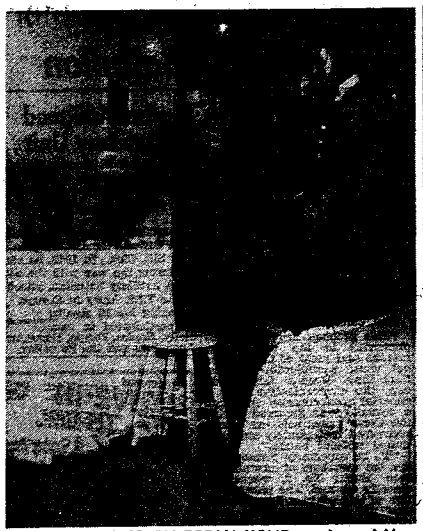
First, all organized reserve personnel within supporting units of the 18 division army will receive payment for the number of drill periods authorized by training categories.

Second, individuals having certain mobilization assignments as fillers to bring the regular army and the national guard divisions to war strength.

Third, personnel of the Organized reserve divisions in Class B status, which are those units having a full complement of officers and key enlisted personnel only on the rolls. These reserve divisions, though not now a part of the 18 division army, will pay a prominent role in the mobilization plan for the national security.

Fourth, remaining available funds will be used to provide drill pay, within training categories, to units and personnel not a part of the 18 division army striking force.

First priority for inactive duty training pay is given to those reserve units designated as part of the "force-in-being" immediately essential to the maintenance of the national security. While restricted funds permit only token payments in the lower priorities, the procedure does acknowledge reservist participation in the training program, it was pointed out.



Inactive duty training compensation will be paid on a quarterly basis at the rate of one day's regular army base pay plus longevity of the individual rank or grade for each two-hour minimum drill period. Personnel eligible to receive payment for authorized drills during the current three-month period — Oct. 1 to Dec. 31 — will be due for payment on Dec. 31, the end of the second quarter of the fiscal year.

Chest Fund Total Reaches $5,200

Proceeds from two football games, amounting to aproximately $5,200 has helped swell the Fort Benning Community Chest fund drive which opened here Oct. 11 and extends through November.

With some $4,000 derived from the sale of tickets to last Sunday's Fort Benning-Fort Jackson football game, plus $1,200 collected from the Quantico Marine - Fort Benning fracas earlier, the drive is well on its way toward its goal of $13,500.

One other game still remains for which admission will be charged with proceeds going to benefit the drive. That is the Fort Benning - Fort Bragg, N.C. contest slated for Nov. 28 with reserved tickets selling for 50 cents and general admission tickets for 25 cents.

The only charity campaign conducted on the post, with the exception of the annual Red Cross drive, the Community Chest drive will benefit 10 organizations.

Receiving funds from the joint Benning - Lawson campaign are the Community Chest of America, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Emergency Army - Navy Relief and Air Force Aid societies, Fort Benning Children's schools, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, teen - age children at Fort Benning, the proposed Fort Benning trailer camp, the Fort Benning children's Christmas party and the contemplated social welfare worker for Fort Benning.

These activities directly, or indirectly, affect Fort Benning personnel, while money turned over to the national Community Chest will be used to operate service clubs and the USO, which is slated for reactivation.

Fort Benning Community Chest fund representatives met with Columbus chest workers in the annual "Kickoff Breafast" Tuesday morning at the Ralston hotel during which time plans were laid for the drive in Columbus and vicinity.

The flag will be displayed at half-mast from reveille until noon, in "memory of those who gave their lives in the service of their country during World War I." The flag will be hoisted to full staff at the conclusion of the cermonies.

Some 600 troops from the 325th Infantry regiment will participate in Armistice Day ceremonies at Birmingham, Ala. Lt. Col. Erwin O. Gibson, commanding officer of the Second battalion, heads the group which will include one medical company, one company of the 325th Provisional Training battalion and the Second battalion.

At Pensacola, Fla., 120 enlisted men and four officers of the 328th Ordnance battalion will take part in the holiday ceremony and parade. This group includes men from the 516th Ordnance Medium Automotive Maintenance company and the 378th Ordnance Heavy Maintenance company.

In Columbus, Fort Benning troops and equipment will be included in the huge parade planned today. Representing the post will be members of Military Police detachment, Section No. 1 and five medium M-26 tanks.

66 Percent of EM Discharged, 'Reup' Here

The "Gee, Ma, I don't want any more of the army" boys were in a melancholy minority around Fort Benning last month as the recruiting office's figures for reenlistment, released this week, showed.

Over half the men discharged and eligible to rejoin the fraternity of the brotherhood of arms, walked in and said, "Gimme the papers." Of this group of 637 men, 419, or 66 per cent, reenlisted.

All the major units carried in the report, with only one exception, showed a percentage increased in reenlistments over the September figure. High was the 3440th Area Service Unit which went from 70 to 89 percent, as 101 of 114 men reenlisted.

In second place was the 999th Field Artillery battalion, with 86 per cent reenlisting as compared to 75 percent in September. Twelve of the 14 men discharged by the 999th signed up again. Of 80 men eligible to rejoin in the Student Training regiment, 67 reenlisted for a percentage of 84, compared to September's 76 percent.

The Infantry School detachment discharged 179 men in October, and 130 promptly reenlisted for an 80 per cent figure, an increase from the 52 per cent figure of September. Fifty-two per cent of the men discharged from the 204th Transportation Truck battalion reenlisted to show a percentage of 52 compared to the previous month's 33.

Biggest percentage increase of the month was shown by the 325th Infantry regiment, with the figure going from one percent in September to 42 percent in October, as 81 of 194 men reenlisted. Only unit to fall in the percentage column was Army Field Forces board No. 2, which dropped from 67 to 41 percent as five of 12 men reenlisted.

In addition to the figures already given, 22 other men were discharged and reenlisted under AR 615-365, 24 additional extended their enlistments and 28 civilians enlist for Fort Benning. The recruiting office also revealed that 11 men were retired in October.

To Be Queried About Careers

Questions pertaining to the officer types of careers in the armed services will be fired at a select group of Fort Benning regular army officers Nov. 18 when a representative of the Troop Attitude Research branch of the Army's Information and Education division arrives here as part of the career study being conducted.

The visit here of Capt. Martin Zacher is one of many being made at various installations by the research branch on the reactions of male regular officers of the army, air force and navy to certain kinds of careers in the services.

After his visit here, Captain Zacher will continue his study at the Atlanta General Distribution depot, the South Atlantic division and Georgia Tech's ROTC unit at Atlanta.

In addition to the Benning troops, ordinarily used in this demonstration, two batalions of 105 mm howitzers and one battalion of 155 mm howitzers from the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C., and a squadron of fighter planes employing rockets and bombs will participate. The group will leave Fort Benning Tuesday afternoon for Eglin field, Fla., to witness the airforce's part of the conference.

Interest Shown In Officer Plan

A great deal of interest in the new plan for procurement of second lieutenants, announced two weeks ago, has been shown by both soldiers and civilians, the Benning recruiting office and the U. S. army-U. S. airforce recruiting main station in Columbus revealed this week.

Maj. Llewellyn D. Shaw post recruiting officer said that his installation is now fully equipped to distribute the necessary forms for men interested in obtaining commissions prior to attending the new schools being set up. He added that there have been many Benning soldiers applying at his office for the various forms to be filled.

The procurement plan has been placed in effect at Fort Benning and Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander has instructed all commanders to inform their troops of the opportunities open to all qualified enlisted men regardless of their present rank to obtain commissions unmediately.

Although it is considered extremely easy to get commissions officials of the office of the coordinator of training emphasized this week that the special associate basic infantry officers course scheduled to open here but one aim: to produce qualified infantry officers of the highest caliber.

According to Department of the Army circlar No. 330 dated Oct. 22, 1948, commandants of schools have been given authorization to relieve officer students from active duty and discharge them from their commissions in the Officers' Reserve corps for disciplinary, reasons, academic deficiencies deficiencies in leadership or other appropriate cause.

The circular states, however, that school commandants are also authorized to retain for a succeeding class any student who has failed to complete the required course but whose record is such that he may reasonably be expected to overcome his defeiciency by joining a later class, provided he desires to be retained. Individuals failing the course may be enlisted if qualified.

Warm clothing for cold weather is the chief bargain offered by the Trading Post this week.

Women's overcoats ranging in price from two dollars to $60 are offered for sale, with men's overcoats at $8 to $15. The garments are all in excellent condition and are practically a steal at the prices, sales personnel said.

For the approaching Christmas season the Trading Post has bargains in bicycles which are priced from $12 to $25, and an electric train, with plenty of spare tracks, at $12.50.

A pair of solid mahogany lamps made in the Philippines are offered for sale at $12.50 apiece. According to the manager, the wood alone is a bargain at the price.

For those interested in games, a poker table is offered for sale at eight dollars. The post also has for sale some irons good condition. There are several traveling irons for three dollars and four dollars apiece with heavier irons at five dollars. A meat grinder is priced at only five dollars.

Strictly Editorializing

Two weeks ago we printed a story about two men in the same organization with the same last four letters in their serial numbers. We had figured it out scientifically — just as Roper, Crossley and Gallup did—and said the odds against such a thing happening were one million to one. But by 5 p. m. Thursday, our faces were beginning to get red.

We had telephone calls by that time from two units claiming they, too, had men in this unusual category (at least, we had thought it unusual). The others were Cpl. Robert T. Lewis, serial number 14020042, and Cpl. Carl C. Cassady, serial number 34190042, both of the Station hospital; and Sgt. William Phillips, serial number 20546004, and Pvt. Carl W. Fisher, serial number 17236004, both of the Airborne battalion's Company F. We wonder if there are any more.

The two men who started this whole thing were Pfc. John T. Watson, serial number 13232008, and Pvt. Junior A. Hogg, serial number 16262008, both of the 325th Infantry regiment's Company C. And we are rather sorry we got mixed up in it.

Anyway, we have readjusted our figuring and have decided that the odds against this phenomenon occurring have been somewhat reduced. But we still say, it's mighty strange.

Lest We Forget

The following words are excerpts from a speech by General Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, delivered at funeral services last Memorial Day at Longmeadow, Massachusetts, for Corporal Edward G. Wilkin, a rifleman of the 45th Infantry Division, who was killed April 18, 1945, east of the Siegfried Line. We find these words equally as applicable on Armistice Day.

"Here on the long green meadows of this tranquil New England town, we have come to do honor—not alone to one brave soldier—but to the generations of earnest young men who left their homes to defend them at Concord, Antietam, San Juan, the Argonne—and in the snows of the Ardennes.

"For as long as free men have lived, worked, worshipped, and reared their families under these elms, so long have their sons been summoned to arms against those who would covet or destroy them. In generation after generation they have been forced to quit these quiet homes in this peaceful valley to fight—and sometimes to die—in conflicts visited upon them by issues remote from their everyday lives.

"From the chancelleries of London, Paris, Berlin—Rome, Tokyo, and Moscow, those bitter struggles that have scarred the progress of all mankind eventually spanned the seas to invade the snug parlours and warm kitchens of these colonial homes. And as these world struggles have wasted the youth and resources of nations, they have also left behind them sorrowing women and empty chairs in the houses on this green.

"It is easy for us who are living to honor the sacrifices of those who are dead. For it helps us to assuage the guilt we should feel in their presence.

"In our hatred and renunciation of war, we must not forget that the roots of conflict flourish in the faults and failures of those who seek peace just as surely as they take shape from the diseases and designs of aggressors.

"While the American people have within themselves the moral strength, the power, and wisdom to marshal their forces against aggression in whatever form it affects —we cannot feign innocence through indifference or neglect of struggles that bring on wars.

"We have suffered enough in two world wars to know that non-involvement in peace means certain involvement in war.

"Either we shall employ our strength, power, and conscience boldly and righteously in defense of human dignity and freedom or we shall waste those reserves for peace and default to the forces that breed new wars.

"If the United States ever again stoops to expedients to avoid the difficult decisions that come with leadership, the heavy burdens that come with defense we shall once more run the dangers of all halfway measures and waste our strength and conscience as a weathervane rather than a force.

"If we cringe from the necessity of meeting issues boldly with principle, resolution and strength, then we shall hurdle along from crisis to crisis, improvising with expedients, seeking inoffensive solutions, drugging the nation with an illusion of security which under those conditions cannot exist. If we are to scamper from crisis to crisis, fixing principles and policies to the change of each day we shall place ourselves supinely and helplessly at the mercy of any aggressor who might play on our public opinion and decimate our forces at will.

"To live bravely by convictions from which the free peoples of this world can take heart, the American people must put their faith in stable long range policies—political, economic, and military—programs that will not be heated and cooled with the brightening and waning of tension.

"The United States has matured to world leadership; it is time we steered by the stars, not by the lights of each passing ship."

Chaplain's Corner...

INFORMAL CHATS BY CHAPLAIN T. F. McGUIRK

"Hello, chaplain!"

"Hello, soldier!"

"Chaplain, I'm glad I met up with you. I'd like to ask you something. There was a joker in the barracks last night, and we were talking about religion, and this fellow said you couldn't prove the existence of God. You know, he had me stumped in a way. I've always believed in God, and, you know, I never really thought about proving that God exists. I've always accepted God's existence just as I accept my own."

"Well, soldier, there's nothing wrong with that. Most good people accept the existence of God just as they accept themselves and the air they breathe, for God really exists. But it is good to carry in your head a good rule of thumb proof for the existence of God. You can easily carry it in your head. Certainly it's already there. Look at yourself sometimes in the mirror. You have a pair of eyes and a pair of ears. With your eyes you take pictures, and they are wonderful pictures. They are moving pictures in technicolor, and through your ears they are wired for sound. Your eyes give two different pictures, automatically focused for depth of field. Men need tons of equipment to do the same equipment to do the same thing—sound equipment, cameras, film, ar-tificial lighting, chemical baths of all kinds—and a whole crew of men. Even then they can't get perfect depth of field.

"What we do through our eyes and ears we never think about, but our eyes and ears show us the power and wisdom of God. Our eyes and ears fill only a small space and weigh only a few ounces, yet they do what man can do only with work more efficiently than anything man has produced."

"That sounds good to me, chaplain, but that fellow said that the world wasn't made by God, but just happened."

"Nothing ever just happens! When you have to move around in the barracks in the dark and you trip over something that shouldn't be there, you know that didn't just happen. Somebody was careless, and you get pretty mad at that somebody. So, too, the eye and ear never just happened! The very position of the eyes in the human body, giving a natural elevation to the view of the eye; the ease with which they move in their sockets, giving a wide scope of vision; the fact of two eyes, giving automatically depth of field—all this demands intelligence behind the eyes. The same is true of the ears. Two ears give the hearing on both sides of the body, enabling us to have a wider range of sound and to locate sound easily. Even the lowly eyebrow has its purpose — to protect the eye from sweat. It is impossible that all this perfect coordination just happened!

WESTWARD HA!

S. J. Perelman's little travelogue "Westward Ha!" is quite appropriately subtitled "Around the World in Eighty Cliches," though it might be well to add "per page." What the reader will think of the book will depend a great deal on how well he likes the Perelman brand of humor— and cliches.

Last year — on January 3, 1947, to be exact— the magazine "Holiday" (the Curtiss Publishing company version of the "National Geographic") commissioned Perelman and New York Times artist, Harry Hirschfield, to tour the world and write and illustrate what they saw. "Westward Ha!" is the result of that trip.

Perelman has a reputation as an hilarious humorist, and Hirschfeld is something of a wit, so it would seem that the two of them, given complete freedom in their choice of itinerary and with a practically unlimited expense account (though Perelman did devote two pages to the miserliness of the publishing company,) would turn out a humor classic that would at least compare favorably with "Innocence Abroad". In our opinion they turned out a classic all right— a classic of sheer boredom.

Perelman tries very, very hard to be funny. His efforts are painfully apparent on every page, in almost every word he writes. He simply won't relax, nor will he allow the reader to relax. After all, when he has described in grossly exaggerated superlatives the sultriness and sandflies of Singapore why must he find even more grossly exaggerated superlatives for the heat and sandflies of Suez and Somaliland?

When all other attempts at cleverness fail, the author turns to insults. He describes the editor of "Holiday" as "a furtive personality in a hand-me-down suit and linen of dubious cleanliness" who is trying to reduce the entire Perelman family to beggary. Hirschfeld is a bearded brigand with red-rimmed pig eyes who steals cuff links and who has to be chained at meal times so the other passengers can get an occasional scrap of food. All this may be very amusing on page ten, but it become a little monotonous on page ninety-eight.

Sandwiched in between the cliches are some rather interesting items about Hollywood, Chinwangtao, Shanghai, Singapore, Siam, Ceylon, India, Suez, Cairo, Alexandria, Naples, Pompeii, Nice, Paris and other points which the travelers visited. (After all the book is a travelogue and is made up of articles written for a travel magazine. The descriptions of the pyramids are not too bad, though we still prefer the Mark Twain version.

The illustrations by Hirschfeld are, we think, exceptionally good. If there had been a lot more of them, and a lot less of Perelman's efforts at humor, the book would certainly have been much less boring, and possibly just as instructive. We suppose, however, that when a book is called "Around the World in Eighty Cliches," the reader expects at least eighty cliches.

Your Red Cross

Thanksgiving!

Christmas!

Thanks to the spirit that exists in the army a great many of you will go home for one of those days.

Yes sir, you will get that little piece of paper permitting you to be away from camp three days—10 days—15 days.

Regardless of the number of days you have, however, there is the matter of transportation both ways—bus—train, or the good old thumb, the first two cost money—cash on the barrel head.

Have you thought of that? Have you salted away in your shoe the $10 — $20 — or $50 you will need for this most cherished furlough of all times?

Come Thanksgiving — Come Christmas, a goodly number will show up with furloughs and no money.

Let's lay it on the line. Welfare money cannot be used for regular furloughs, and a Thanksgiving and Christmas furlough are just regular furloughs. It is right there in the printed words for every one to see. As much as we would like to help, we just cannot advance money on regular furloughs.

In emergencies, death sickness, disaster, yes, your Red Cross is there to serve you, but you will have to pay your own way on any regular furlough. And that is the way the army wants it.

Each year the army does everything it can to get as many fellows home. Thanksgiving and Christmas as possible. But there are two things you— and you alone—must furnish —first, you must have accrued furlough time, second, you must have transportation both ways.

So let's start now. If you intend to ask for a holiday furlough, get your money together first, then hold on to it.

In talking about these holidays, I am reminded that many will not get to go home.

To those who do not go home let me urge you to write a good long letter to the folks at home. Send greeting cards to other friends — that buddy now discharged, or still in the Veterans hospital, or to the family of the buddy you left overseas.

You can get some wonderful Christmas cards as low in price as 50 for $1.00, another $1.50 for stamps and 50 friends and relatives have been made happy. But the greatest benefit actually will be the pleasure you receive in sending the greeting cards. Perhaps, on the other hand, the greatest pleasure you will receive will be hearing from some of these friends and relatives who thought you had forgot them.

Remember this—for 25 years your Red Cross has stood ready to help the Fort Benning soldier in any way we can. Come in and talk it over.

"But I only want $300," said the actor.

"Why?" asked the agent.

"It's all a fake," replied the actor bursting into tears. "You see, the parrot doesn't sing at all. The dog's a ventriloquist."

Fashion Editor Addresses Literature and Arts Group

With many practical hints and suggestions on extending one's wardrobe, Miss aLtimer Watson, fashion editor of the Columbus Ledger - Enquirer, delighted a large audience at the November meeting of the Literature and Arts group of the Woman's club Monday afternoon at the Country club.

Other features of the program included a discussion of current events by Mrs. Horace Gibson and selections of light classical music by Mrs. Thomas Borthwick.

Mrs. Gibson discussed the purpose and function of the United Nations and some of its achievements to date. She also commented on the election results and their affect on the President and the new Congress.

Mrs. Borthwick's program, with some compositions especially for the harp and some familiar tunes, included "Gipsy Fire Dance" by Chalmers, "Largo from the New World" by Dvorak, "The Brook" by Hasselmanne, "Etude Number 11" by John Thomas, harpist of His Majesty King Edward VI, "Ring of the Axe" by Hoberg, "Arabesque Number 1" by Debussy, "Autumn" by John Thomas as and "Mazurka" by Schueker.

Miss Watson, who twice yearly attends the New York presentation of various dress, hat, and accessory designers at the New York Dress institute, told of the methods of presentation of the well known dress designers, and gave many interesting sidelights on their background and personalities. In discussing clothes, Miss Watson was particularly considerate of budgets, and suggested many tricks to add a look of luxury to an inexpensive wardrobe. She made several fashion forecasts: 13 and 14-inch dresses instead of 11 and 12 as at present; full skirts as the American woman likes them because they are youthful; and chiffon as the leading spring and summer fabric.

Mrs. Herbert Pitt, chairman of the Literature and Arts group, announced that the deadline for the literary contest is March. The article or short story should be 3,000 to 5,000 words long, and should be typewritten. Any member of the group may submit up to three articles.

Deadline for the art contest, which is open to all members of the family, is April. Beginners are encouraged to enter.

The next meeting of the Literature and Arts group will be in January.

Information will be given later about the formation of a Little Theatre group.

Flower Paintings Featured In Art Exhibit at Library

Seventeen oil paintings, the work of Mrs. David Milotta, will be on display at the Post library from November 1 through the 14th.

In explaining the predominance of flower paintings in the collection, Mrs. Milotta says that she does not share the attitude of those artists who consider flower paintings "pot boilers" to be included in serious exhibits only as a condescension to the public. She feels instead that flower painting is a peculiar form of artistic discipline because it requires instant sympathetic response to the character of the flower and the technical skill to capture this before the flower dies. In water color this is not so difficult, but in oils it is extremely so.

Civilian Guests Eligible to Attend Army Theaters

Patronage eligibility at army and air force motion picture theaters has been broadened by consent of the American motion picture industry to permit the attendance of certain civilian guests, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, chief of special services, Department of the Army, announced today.

As the result of a series of conferences between representatives of the American motion picture industry, including exhibitors and distributors, and representatives of the army and air force, it has been determined that military personnel may take civilian guests to post theaters. Heretofore, the only civilians permitted to attend these theaters were members of households of military personnel residing within the limits of or on active duty and civilians my and air force installations.

Procedures have been established by the army and air force to control guest attendance in order to prevent competition with civilian theaters This control will be exercised by the issuance of a permit to each military individual authorized to take bona fide civilian guests to any given performace.

At the conferences, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, deputy chief of staff, U. S. army, pointed out that the army and air force are today striving with every facility available to increase the attractiveness of the military environment. He said they are endeavoring to duplicate wherever possible conditions existing in civilian communities, thus assisting the enlisted man to make more easily the difficult adjustment between civilian and military life.

General Collins further pointed out that the present film releasing arrangement, sanctioned by the motion picture companies and exhibitors leaders in 1941, making current motion pictures available for showing at army and air force theaters, is a strong contribution toward providing adequate entertainment and recreation during the off - duty hours of military personnel. He said that if military personnel were permitted to take civilian guests to post theaters a great improvement would be made in environmenal conditions at the posts.

999th Boasts Only Two Of Its Original Members

Time takes its toll of any unit, and the usual modifying of organization rosters has left the 999th Field Artillery battalion with just two members of its original World War II outfit which participated in five campaigns with the Third and Seventh armies in Europe.

Sgt. 1st cl. Finis J. Lyles and Sgt. Eddie L. Barnett are the only two original members of the 999th which swept through Normandy, Northern France, Central Europe, Rhineland and the Ardennes.

Sergeant Lyles was a cadreman when the 999th was activated from the Second battalion of the 578th Field Artillery regiment at Fort Bragg, N.C., in February, 1943. He has served as supervising non-commissioned officer of the S-4 section since that time.

Joining the battalion when it was training at Camp Buttner, N.C., in April, 1944, Sergeant Barnett was first cook at the time and later became head steward. During the Battle of the Bulge, Barnett was twice awarded the Bronze Star for serving hot food on an around-the-clock schedule while under enemy fire.

When the 999th was reactivated here in May, 1946, both men had been discharged, but reenlisted in the 999th again.

Army to Unveil General Patton Tank on Nov. 11

A sensational new tank, as versatile and hard-hitting as the soldier whose name it will bear, will be unveiled in Detroit on Armistice Day in honor of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., one of the outstanding apostles of armor in World War II.

General Patton's widow will christen the swift combat vehicle officially designated the M-46, at ceremonies at the Detroit arsenal on Nov. 11. The date of the unveiling, in additoin to being World War I Armistice Day, has dual significance: November 11 is the day of General Patton's birth, and November 11 was the day, in 1942, on which he accepted the armistice offer of the French forces in North Africa.

Though the new General Patton tank is superficially not greatly different from the present standard M-26 medium tank, several improvements have given it greater speed, increased reliability and more maneuverability,a ccording to test reports from Ordnance department tank engineers.

A compact new air-cooled 12-cylinder engine will give the General Patton tank 62 per cent more power than that delivered by the plant of the M-26, but at the same time will not occupy so much space in the vehicle. The increased power—from 500 horsepower in the M-26 to 810 in the M-46—will increase the speed of the new tank 50 per cent over the old one, from 20 to 30 miles an hour.

A new gearing arrangement has eliminated the relatively complicated contols used in older-type tanks and has substituted a single "wobble-stick" control combining the functions of gear-shifting and steering. With this arrangement, ordnance designers say, it is possible for the tank to go directly from high-speed forward to reverse without stopping and without the driver doing more than pulling back the "wobble-stick."

Improved traction through new design of tank treads is an important feature of the M-46, according to reports of tests. A water-proofed electrical system, permanently shields all circuits, and, with special intake and exhaust stacks added, the M-46 tank is capable of fording streams so deep that the entire engine is suberged. With the hull winterized, the M-46 will be able to operate in temperatures as low as 65 degrees below Fahrenheit zero.

A 90-millimeter gun firing high velocity, armor-piercing shells will give the tank its principal wallop.

Maj. Gen. Everett S. Hughes, chief of ordnance, and Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, General Patton's wartime chief of staff, will speak at the Detroit arsenal ceremonies, beginning at 11 a. m. EST.

Henley Returns to Duty With Lawson Field PIO

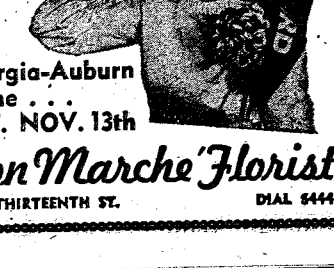
Cpl. James O. Henley of the Lawson air force base public information office has returned after spending the past two months on temporary duty with Ninth air force headquarters at Elgin Field, Fla., during Operation Combine III.

Corporal Henley was assigned to the information control office while working with headquarters, and most of his duties consisted of writing news releases for the operation.

Local Man Victim Of Delayed Action

The story of the man who sews on his stripes a few weeks before orders for promotion are issued can work in reverse too, according to Lt. Howard Long of the Infantry School detachment.

Lieutenant Long reports that he had been officially promoted from second to first lieutenant for six months before he knew anything about it. It happened while he was with the 506th Engineer battalion during the campaigns of New Guniea northern and southern Philippines in 1945. It was not until he arrived at Fort Benning in 1946 that he discovered he had been promoted six months previously.



Presently mess officer of the ISD's consolidated mess, Lieutenant Long estimates that he has helped prepare at least 10,000 meals in his 20 years service.

Now In Fourth Week

Company F of the Airborne battalion entered its fourth week of training Nov. 8, it was reported Monday.

Urge Yule Mailing Prior To Nov 15

In order to assure delivery on time and in good condition, Christmas parcels for overseas personnel must be mailed before Monday, Nov. 15, according to local postal authorities.

Requests for parcels from members of the armed forces are not required, but patrons should endorse each package "Christmas Parcel", they said. The Post Office department will make a special effort to effect delivery of all parcels mailed before Nov. 15 in time for Christmas, it was reported.

Christmas parcels for armed forces overseas must not exceed 70 pounds in weight or 100 inches in length and girth combined. With various services amply provided with food and clothing, the public is urged not to include such matter in gift parcels, but to limit their gifts to articles not readily obtainable by the members of the armed forces, according to the announcement.

Careful packaging is being stressed by the post office. Because of the great distance overseas parcels must be transported and the handling and storage they must undergo, it is necessary that all articles be packed in boxes of metal, wood, solid fiberboard, or strong double-faced corrugated fiberboard, testing at least 200 pounds, they pointed out.

Each box should be securely tied with a strong cord, preferably by four separate pieces. Tape alone should not be used, since it has been pointed out that the tape loosens when it becomes wet or exposed to moist atmospnere.

Valuable articles should be registered, while perishable matter will not be accepted, and the sending of fragile articles is discouraged, post office officials said.

Intoxicants, inflammable materials including matches of all kinds and lighter fluids, and poisons, or compositions which may kill or injure another, or damage the mails, are unmailable. Cigarettes and other tobacco products are prohibited transmission for delivery through A.P.O.'s in Germany, France, Austria, Trieste and Italy, and also navy numbers 913 and 963 in Germany.

The transmission of parcels addressed to overseas A.P.O.'s containing penicillin and streptomycin, except to AP.'s care of Postmaster, New York, N. Y., is prohibited. Cu toms declarations are required on parcels addressed to A.P.O. 58, New York.

Addresses on all overseas parcels must be legible and must include the full complete address with the post office through which the parcels are to be routed.

Jackson Red Imps Nipped By Doughs

Florida Sailors Next On Agenda

Two first half touchdowns provided the necessary push to carry the Fort Benning grid machine to a 13-6 win over the Red Devils of Fort Jackson, S. C., in a Doughboy stadium fumble-fest last Sunday afternoon.

A near-capacity crowd turned out to see the Doughmen notch their second victory of a luckless 1948 campaign in the game played to benefit the Community Chest fund drive.

"Breaks" in the tilt were on an even keel with luck smiling on the Doughs during the first half, and good fortune favoring the Red Devils in the last half. A pair of outstanding plays put the Doughs out in front 13-0 at the intermission, but the majority of the final half was played in Benning territory.

Although five Red Devil bobbles during the first half didn't damage the visitors seriously, it was a Benning miscue during the third period which set up the lone Jackson touchdown.

The stage was set for the initial Doughboy touchdown midway through the first quarter when the Benning line charged in to partially block a Jackson punt. Taking possession of the oval on the mid-field stripe, the Doughs picked up a first down on the Red Devil 40 before big Bob Hollingsworth twisted his way through the entire Red Devil secondary to dash into the imp end zone standing up.

End Bob Cronin then came into the game to kick the point after touchdown and give the Benningites a 7-0 lead going into the second quarter.

Late in the second period, the Doughmen struck pay dirt again—this time taking to the air. Two second-string backs engineered the play which gave the Doughs a 13-0 lead at the half.

After the defensive had seesawed throughout the period, the Doughboys took possession of the leather on the Red Devil 48-yard line, and reserve halfback Bill Carter heaved a long pass to Lawrence Brennan. The second-string fullback gathered in the toss on the 15-yard stripe, and raced across the Red Devil goal line untouched.

The Red Devils got their big "break" of the game in the third period, and cashed in on it to the tune of six points.

With the ball in possession of the Doughboys on their own 16-yard stripe, the snap from center got past fullback Hollingsworth, and the ball rolled back to the Benning four-yard stripe before it was smothered by Bob Stanley of the Imps. The Jacksonites picked up one yard per try until Bill Nichols finally plunged over from three feet out.

A quick change in strategy, however, failed to provide the visitors with the point after touchdown. After getting their signals mixed on a placement kick, the Red Devils were penalized five yards for delaying the game. From the seven-yard line, Louis Sanford tried to hit Stanley in the end zone with a pass, but the toss went amiss.

Massey, Meier Star

Although he didn't figure in prominently on any of the scoring plays, Walton Massey, a second-string back for the Doughs, turned in an outstanding running performance, and shared the offensive limelight with the Doughboy first-stringers.

Defensive laurels went to tackles Carl Meier of the Doughs and Don Dye of the Red Devils. Meier was credited with crashing through the Jackson line to drop Red Imp ball-carriers for several sizeable losses, and Dye, in addition to figuring in most of the spectacular defensive plays of the afternoon, recovered two timely Doughboy fumbles.

Jackson's Red Devils, playing a somewhat lighter schedule than the Doughs this year, now have won three and lost four. Other defeats have been handed them by the Parris Island, S. C., marines, the 82nd Airborne division's All-Americans of Fort Bragg, N. C., and the Clemson college, S. C., freshmen. Their victories are been over Shaw field S. C., Fort McPherson, Ga., and the Greenville, S. C., air force base.

The next outing for the Benning eleven will come on Saturday on a jaunt to Florida for tiff with the Jacksonville Naval Air station. The game, scheduled for 8 p.m., is to be played in the Gator Bowl.

In the fray, frequently billed the Army-Navy tussle of the South, the Doughs will be rated as underdogs to the powerful sailor crew which has turned back some of the top service elevens of the nation this year. Last year, the Doughs and sailors battled to a 14-14 tie in a Doughboy stadium tilt.

Coach Joe Shepherd started putting his Dough charges through their preps for the Jacksonville game early this week, and the squad was expected to begin its trek to Florida on Friday. The heaviest workouts of the week were slated for Tuesday, Wednesday and today.

SLANTS on SPORTS

By Lewis Mc Afee
Bayonet Sports Editor

An upset-filled weekend of collegiate grid warfare twisted the big bowl game picture into a mass of confusion, and narrowed the field of major unbeaten and untied teams in the nation to five. Only the phenomenal elevens of Michigan, Notre Dame, Army, California and Clemson have tasted victory sweets in every outing of the 1948 campaign.

Four of the squads with unmarred slates are favored to continue their winning streak this week, but, to our way of thinking, Clemson will drop out of the ranks following this week's encounter with a surprisingly strong crew from Wake Forest. However, we wouldn't class it too much of a upset if Bobby Voigts' Northwestern Wildcats pinned down the Irish of Notre Dame, or Penn's Quakers squeezed by the Cadets of Army. California, however, is rated a top-heavy favorite over Washington State, and Michigan's Wolverines should have little trouble in turning back the Hoosiers of Indiana.

Looking at the picture for the New Year's day bowl classics, we would say that only two teams have clinched themselves a chance to play in one of the post-season tussles. These are SMU and California. Unless something drastic happens, we expect to find the Golden Bears of California entertaining in the Rose Bowl, and the SMU Mustangs being host for the Cotton Bowl game.

Northwestern, in all probability, will make the New Year's trek to Pasadena unless Rose Bowl officials can talk Big Nine powers into changing the regulation prohibiting one of the conference elevens from playing in two successive Rose Bowl tilts. If they can do the persuading, however, the nod undoubtedly will go to Michigan's Wolverines again.

Since the dope bucket is getting kicked around mercilessly this season, we would hesitate to go any farther on bowl predictions, but we will pass along our thoughts on the clashes for this weekend.

THE EAST

Army over Penn: But, it might be a surprise.

Brown over Harvard: With some to spare.

Cornell over Dartmouth: The Big Red to keep rolling in one of its most successful campaigns of recent years.

Holy Cross over Fordham: By no less than three touchdowns.

Penn State over Temple: An easy romp for the power-laden Nittany Lions.

Princeton over Yale: But, anything might happen in this one.

THE MIDWEST

Ohio State over Illinois: In a battle where a point after touchdown might be the deciding factor.

Michigan State over Iowa State: In a Spartan-staged marathon.

Minnesota over Iowa: However, we won't count too heavily on this one.

Missouri over Colorado: The Tigers to bounce back after last week's humiliation by Oklahoma's Sooners.

Oklahoma over Nebraska: The Sooners wrote their Big Seven championship ticket with last week's triumph over Missouri, but they should punctuate it with an easy win over the Cornhuskers.

Notre Dame over Northwestern: It might be an upset, but we'll ride with the unbeaten Irish.

Purdue over Pitt: In one that could easily be rated a toss-up.

THE SOUTH

Georgia Tech over Alabama: We'll disregard the Tech upset last week in making this prediction.

Georgia over Auburn: In an easy romp.

Kentucky over Florida: This one might not be as easy as it looks.

Mississippi State over LSU: In a close conference skirmish.

Tennessee over Mississippi: The Vols seem to be gathering momentum as the season ages.

Tulane over Baylor: Very close.

Wake Forest over Clemson: Should be fairly close.

Duke over George Washington: Handily.

North Carolina State over Duquesne: By about three touchdowns.

North Carolina over Maryland: But keep your eyes on Jim Tatum's Maryland lads.

South Carolina over Tulsa: The Golden Hurricane is slipping lower each week.

THE SOUTHWEST

Rice over Texas A & M: In a close conference tussle.

Texas over TCU: However, this may be another conference disappointment for the Longhorns.

328th Gridders Suffer Third Loss

Gridders of the 328th Ordance battalion were handed their third successive setback last Sunday afternoon when they journeyed to Turner airforce base at Albany, Ga. ,and came out on the short end of a 50-0 count.

Playing an air-tight defensive game in the first period, the post ordancemen held the Albany crew scoreless; but the airforce ball - handlers broke loose in the second quarter for three touchdowns.

Turner sneaked its hard-running backs through for two more six-pointers in the third period, and added its final dashes to pay dirt in the final stanza. Only two of the airforce eleven's efforts for the point after touchdown were successful.

Highlighting the offensive playing of the ordnance crew was William Kantak, scrappy little reserve back, who took an Albany punt and returned it 40 yards in a brilliant display of broken - field running. Kantak shared backfield honors, however, with Dick Weymouth and Ed Gravely.

The Turner ball-carriers found guard the most formidable spot along the 328th forward wall. Holding down the guard assignments for the ordnancemen were Francis Steranko and Bob Longtime.

Returning to Fort Benning late Monday, the 328th crew started making plans to meet the grid delegates of the Florida State prison in Raiford next Sunday. Coach Robert Agrelius said that daily practices would be held throughout the week with emphasis being placed on working laterals from standard plays, and building up a stronger defensive machine.

The ordnance mentor expects several new team candidates out for this week's sessions, and believes that his new charges will give the squad some much-needed depth. Another boost will be given the aggregation when center Jack Shackelford, who was out of last Sunday's game with a neck injury, rejions the ordnancemen within the next few days.

A serious blow was struck during the tilt with the Turner Flyers, however, when tackle Frank Stout was injured, and had to leave the game. Stout, whose ailment has been tentatively diagnosed as a broken rib, may be out of the lineup for the game with the Florida prisoners as well as for a fray the following week with the Atlanta General depot in Georgia's capital city.

Collegiate Players To Present 3-Act Comedy on Sunday

A three-act light comedy, "The Imaginary Invalid," will be presented by the Auburn Players from Auburn college, Ala., Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at the Main theater. Admission will be free.

The dramatic group is the same that created such a riot here last year with its presentation of "Banned In Boston."

The three-act comedy by Moliere takes place during the time of King Louis XIV and is a satire on the medical profession.

Heading the cast will be Joe Mitchel and Hazel Riley, supported by Margery Shore, Rowena Kidd, Worth Lanier, Thomas Malone, James R. Wynn, Leonard Hart, Bette Jones, Robert Eberle and Robert Laney.

Plans Westward Trek

Harvard university will make its first trip to the Pacific coast since defeating Oregon in the 1920 Rose Bowl classic when they meet Stanford university in their 1949 grid opener next Sept. 24.

Dick Bartell, 1948 manager of the Kansas City Blues of the American association, will not have his contract for 1949 renewed, it has been announced by Lee MacPhail, general manager of the club.

Bullet - Panther Pact Cancelled

Sand Hill Aggregation Faced With Possible Long Inactivity

BY BOB PHILLIPS

Late arrival of the Atlanta semi-pro Panthers for a scheduled game with the Sand hill Bullets in Columbus' Memorial stadium two weeks ago has resulted in the termination of the 1948 grid contract between the two elevens, it was announced by Sand hill athletic officials.

According to the terms of the contract, four games were to be played between the two teams this year.

The Panthers were host to the soldier eleven for the first tiff of the series on Oct. 23, and emerged with a close 6-0 triumph. On the following Sunday, the Panthers were to be guests of the Bullets in Memorial stadium, but the late arrival of the Atlanta squad brought about a cancellation of the game, and the subsequent eradication of the remaining tilts called for in the pact. The other games originally were slated to be played in Atlanta on Nov. 7, and here on Nov. 13.

With the announcement of the contract termination came word that efforts are being made to fill a gap this weekend by scheduling the semi-pro Buffaloes of Columbus. If the efforts fail, however, the Bullets' next scheduled clash will be a game with Fort Knox, Ky., here on Nov. 25.

Despite three weeks of inactivity, Coach Stacey Hoffman and Team Captain Matt Batie have kept their Sand hill charges primed for any development. Practice sessions have been daily during the past week, but have consisted largely of limbering-up exercises, signal-calling, light blocking and pass defense.

In all departments, the Bullet gridders have been showing steady improvement, and should prove an unstoppable crew when they take the field against their next opponent. All injuries are well healed, and, for the first time this season, the players appear near the peak of physical fitness.

The return of Henry (Hank) Sanderson and Al Blannon last week inserted more power in the Bullet forward wall. Neither of the two linemen saw service in the Panther game in Atlanta, but both would have been on hand to perform against the capital city aggregation last weekend.

Suggs Assigned Here

Sgt. 1st cl. William S. Suggs, formerly with the Seventh Engineers Combat battalion, Fort Jackson, S. C., has been transferred to Fort Benning and assigned to Company C of the Infantry School detachment for duty with the property office, it was announced Nov. 5 by Lt. Col. O. O. Wilson, detachment commander.

Seven Benning Athletes On Reenlistment Charts

Not all army athletes are "sweating out" the expiration of their term of enlistment.

This fact is borne out by the number of top - flight post athletes included on recept reenlistment rosters released by the Infantry Center recruiting office.

Rosters for the last week in October carried the names of seven athletes representing baseball, bowling, golf and volleyball.

Diamondmen on the list were Collis (Lefty) Lehner, who established an enviable record as a pitcher on the post champion Infantry School detachment and Fort Benning Doughboy nines last season; Johnnie Reynolds, who was a catcher and coach for the 3440th Area Service unit equad, and James Hardmon, fleet - footed outfielder of the 999th Field Artillery battalion. All three were initially assigned to their previous organizations.

Keglers who recently re-upped are Ewald Knuth of Army Field Forces board No. 3 and Norbert Szymarek of the 3440th Area Service unit. Knuth and Szymarek currently are tied for second place in the individual standings for the past Infra-mural bowling circuit with average pinfalls of 179.

Links representatives who signed up again are Claude English, runner - up for the post enlisted golfing championship last summer, and Floyd T. Canady, first - flight winner of the 1948 enlisted links tourney. English was initially assigned to the Food Service School, and Canady resumed his previous duties with the 999th Feild Artillery battalion.

Lehner, one of the oldest and most versatile sportsmen on the post, also is a top - notch volleyball player. He is a member of the ISD net sextet which recently captured the post championship, and was selected to pilot the Benning netmen in the Third army tourney this year.

Weaver Increases Lead In Bowling

Robert Weaver, who has paced bowlers of Company A of the Infantry School detachment in their climb to the top spot in the post intra-mural kegling circuit, tightened his grasp on the No. 1 berth in individual standings last week by chalking up the high single and three-game sets of the week.

In the only series bowled by the ISD aggregation last week, Weaver posted a three - game score of 604, and tallied 232 for one game of the set. His efforts in the Wednesday night triumph over the 121st Evacuation hospital, boosted his season's average to 186.5, representing a total pinfall of 2,238 for 12 games.

Seven and one - half points behind Weaver in the standings were Norbert Szymarek of the 3440th Area Service unit and Ewald Knuth of Army Field Forces board No. 3, both with averages of 179 for 12 games.

Knuth was runner - up for single game and match honors last week. His high game was 203, and his three - game total was 540.

In addition to the 2,439-2,006, four - point triumph chalked up by Company A over the 121st Evacuation hospital, the second and third - place teams in the standings, Army Field Forces board No. 3 and the Station hospital medics, posted victories during the week.

The board win was a four-point verdict over the Student Training regiment on Thursday night, and the Station hospital, took three of four counters from the First battalion of the 325th Infantry regiment in the week's opener on Monday night.

In other Monday night contests, the Food Service School took a four - point decision, from the 30th Medical group and Headquarters company of the 325th Infantry racked up a quartet of counters when the 204th Transportation Truck battalion forfeited.

Two forfeitures went on record during Wednesday night's program. Company G of the 25th Infantry regiment enriched its total by four points when Company H of the same regiment failed to show up for the initial contest, and the 756 th Heavy Tank battalion annexed four points when the 999th Field Artillery battalion forfeited.

In addition to the 2,271-2,145 board No. 3 triumph over the STR, two teams of the circuit racked up easy four-point victories. Bowlers of Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th ASU, accepted a forfeit from the 204th Truckers, and the 30th Medical group failed to appear for a match with the Airborne battalion.

Cage Circuit Starts Here Next Monday

Eight Unit Squads Enter Race For Post Laurels

Cage activities at Fort Benning will get off to an early start this year as eight quintets take to the hardwood court in quest of intra-mural laurels with the opening of the post campaign at the Main gymnasium Monday night.

Games throughout the campaign will be played at a two-per-night clip each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Each squad will meet each other quintet at least once during each phase of the program.

The Airborne battalion, defending champions of the post, will pool its resources with those of the Student Training regiment and Army Field Forces board No. 3 in making its bid for intra-mural laurels this year.

Four post units, the 325th Infantry regiment, the Infantry School detachment, the 3440th Area Service unit and Lawson airforce base, will take all of their team members from their own organization while three of the teams will include players from two or more units. Squads representing a combination of units will be the 25th Infantry regiment-999th Field Artillery battalion, the 756th Heavy Tank battalion-319th Field Artillery battalion-Company G of the 504th Parachute Infantry organization and the STR-AFF board No. 3 quintets. The 3440th ASU will be the only organization with two team entries. They will represent the unit's medics and the 204th Transportation battalion.

Following completion of the intra-mural league, outstanding players will be selected to represent Fort Benning as the Doughboys in the annual Third army tourney. Last year, the Doughs were runners-up to Fort Bragg, N. C., for the army area title.

Play in the circuit will be divided into two halves, with the first phase slated for completion of the second half. In ease of a tie for the top spot for either on Dec. 17, and the final-half contests to be played between half of the campaign, a single Jan. 3 and Feb. 19. The two- game will decide the winner.

week lapse between halves has been scheduled because of the Christmas and New Year's holidas.

Another suspension in activity, it was pointed out, may be brought on by the Third army tournament. Should the army area hoop classic be scheduled prior to completion of the league, intra-mural activity will be discontinued long enough to permit Fort Benning cagemen to participate in the meet.

In determining the Infantry Center championship, a playoff series of three games will be contested between the two phase winners following the completion contests to be played between half of the campaign, a single

Post Midgets Trounced By City School Huskies

Blandford Stars Defensively As Youthful Doughs Succumb

Again outmatched in age, weight and experience, the scrappy grid machine of the Fort Benning Midgets journeyed to Columbus last Saturday morning, and was flattened 38-6 by the 16th Street school eleven. The tiff was played on the city's Lake Bottom field.

The light but plucky forward wall of the Midgets had trouble in stopping the husky backs of the city school aggregation, and was unable to keep the Columbusites from scoring in every period except the third.

Left halfback Dickie Coyle was the big gun in a 20 - point first quarter for the 16th Street school. The hard - running back carried the oval for two of the three touchdowns scored, and accounted for one of the two points after touchdown.

The other first - period score was chalked up by right halfback Delane Farr, and the conversion was accredited to Williams.

In the second stanza, the city school clan penetrated the Midgets' end zone again when Holloway, a reserve back for the Columbusites, took the leather on a sprint over the double stripe to give the citians a 26-0 halftime lead.

The Midget defenses tightened during the second half, and held the 16th street crew scoreless for the third quarter. However, Holloway came into the scoring picture again in the final stanza, and the concluding six-pointer was chalked up on a run into scoring territory by fullback Jerry Fretwell.

Coach Hinton Mixson's Columbus charges managed to annex only two extra points on their six touchdowns.

Doughboy Midgets failed to dent the scoring column, his lineup was not devoid of star performers. Probably the outstanding Midget player of the clash was right guard Robert Blandford, who was a big factor in keeping Columbus gains through the center of the line at a minimum.

In the backfield, Don Torgerson was the standout with a broken-field gain of eight yards in the third quarter.

Despite two disappointments in as many outings this year, the youn Doughmen will be making another try to break into the winning side of the roster when they tangle with a Young Men's Christian association eleven from Columbus next weekend. Although the tilt will more than likely be played on Saturday, the time and place of the meeting has not been definitely set.
